We are all so glad you are improving, and that you are soon to be back in the work again. I have been thinking that it would do your heart good to know of the wonderful meeting the women here had on the "Day of Prayer" for missions. It was during the time of our union evangelistic service, and our committee thought it would be fine to ask the women of the other two Churches uniting in that campaign to join us in the "Day of Prayer" service. They heartily accepted, and so at 11 o'clock on that day the women of the Asheboro Street Friends' Church led us in a beautiful worship service centered around the thought of "the Church and missions." In the afternoon, the women of the First Reformed Church had charge, using "Breaking Down Barriers" as a program. At the close of this, a number testified of how, in personal contact with other races, they had learned to appreciate them for the Christian ideals and principles in their lives.

Rev. O. D. Poythress brought a message in song at each of these services. At the noon hour the women from our Church—the First Christian—served lunch to all, and the fellowship and social intercourse at this hour were not the least of the wonderful privileges of the day. There were at least fifty women with the pastors who gathered, and just before we adjourned for lunch all joined in a special prayer for you and your work. It was a high-water mark experience to thus come together and unite our prayers, voice and to think together of the work of evangelizing the world and to find that we are all striving for the same purpose.

Rufus M. Jones, the great Quaker preacher, tells this incident, and I wonder if it does not portray us as a Church: There was a ship that had gone to pieces on the rocks near the shore. It seemed foolhardy for any one to go out and yet there were men doomed to death unless some one went to their rescue. One man said he must go, and he fastened a rope about himself, asked those on the shore to hold it until he gave the signal for them to pull him in, and plunged into the mad waves. He battled bravely and successfully; he picked up a victim of the wreck and signalled to be drawn in, when, lo and behold! those on the shore had allowed their end of the rope to be snatched away from them and lost in the waves.

This mission period will reveal how strongly or how feebly we are holding the ropes for those who have gone out for us. May the warm, genial sunshine put strength and energy into your body, and may your soul feed on God's bountiful supply.

Lovingly,

COUSIN BERTA.

Greensboro, N. C.

All this and more, too, will the cross do for us, because we have the added teaching and sacrifice of the years. It was Christ who changed the common shame of the cross into perpetual glory.

Lesson III—April 15, 1928.

TRANSFIGURATION AND SERVICE.

GOLDEN TEXT: "He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same beareth much fruit: for apart from me ye can do nothing."—John 15:5.

DEVOTIONAL READING: John 15:1-8.

"And after six days Jesus taketh with Him Peter and James and John, and bringeth them up into a high mountain apart by themselves." It was a "mountain-top" experience. There is something about being up on a mountain itself that is exhilarating. The higher altitude, the wider view, the purer and rarer air, the solitude are factors that powerfully predispose one to higher spiritual moods and richer meditations. To be under such conditions with the Master Himself was an experience that did not take a crowd with Him. He did not take even all the twelve with Him. He took the inner circle—those who by temperament and previous responsiveness to spiritual things, had prepared themselves for a richer experience. Then, as now, there are many to whom being on a mountain with Jesus would mean nothing.

How we need to have our mountain-top experiences! We should get away from the ordinary levels of our every-day living, from the atmosphere of mere things, from the restricted vision, of our own petty interests, from the air of prejudice and gossip and materialism, from things earthly, and we should seek those moments of fellowship with the Master that would broaden our horizons, quicken our sympathies, quicken our spirits, cleanse and renew our lives. There is nothing that we need more in America than a little time with the Master apart by ourselves.

"He was transfigured before them." Luke says that as he prayed, "the fashion of his countenance was altered." Real prayer does that very thing. A man may be homely of countenance and even hard in features, but if he really prays, if he puts himself in contact with the refining atmosphere of fellowship with God, if he responds to the finer impulses which are begotten in prayer, gradually even his countenance will be changed. The Spirit of the Christ changes not only the inner life of a man; He changes the outward features. The writer has seen on the faces of men and women a light that was not of this world, a light that came from within.

"And there appeared unto them Moses and Elijah." Moses, the man of moral insight, the one who gave the great moral principles on which the moral foundations of civilization itself are laid. Elijah, the man of moral energy, the one who stood in the breach at a critical period in Israel's history and asserted Jehovah's sovereignty. These men appeared and talked with Jesus, the Man of moral remedy, who would do what the law could not do. It is significant that these two men appeared, not only because they represented the law and the prophets, but because they were the two outstanding men of Israel, who had left the world in mysterious fashion. That the disciples saw them was an evidence of the identity of personal spirits and the nearness of the unseen world. Luke says that they talked with Jesus about His decease, or better, about His "exodus." Death is not an end of things. It is a going out into a larger, freer life, of infinite possibilities and potentialities.

"And Peter said, It is good for us to be here. Let us make three tabernacles: one for Thee, one for Moses, and one for Elias." It is all so human. Peter wanted to make the thing last as long as possible. For the moment, he forgot that there passive and ecstatic enjoyment of great emotional was something else to religion besides sitting in experiences.

"And suddenly looking around, they saw no one any more, save Jesus only with themselves." As they saw things more clearly, as they had a better insight into the experience, Moses and Elijah not only became less impressive; they gradually faded out of the picture altogether. As one sees things straight and sees them whole, more and more Jesus Christ stands alone in the beauty and the power of His moral character.

The experience on the Mount of Transfiguration had a very practical value for Jesus. As the shadow of the cross fell across His path and its burden came into His life, He had the assurance that the path He had chosen had the Father's approval, and that He Himself had the Father's presence. The experience also had a practical value for the disciples, for it gave them a new insight into the real mission of Jesus and served to prepare them at least in a small way for the things that were to come.

Transfiguration and service. This is no chance linking of terms. At the foot of every mountain of exalted experience there is a challenge to humble service. Now, as always, there is always a challenge to use the spiritual resources which we have received in the more exalted experiences of life.

"This kind can come out by nothing, save by prayer." There are some faults in some lives, some depraved appetites, some corrupted instincts that can be rooted out only by earnest and persistent prayer. Moral reformation is good as far as it goes, but it does not go far enough. There are some lives that can be redeemed only by the moral transformation that comes through the presence and the power of the Spirit of the Living Christ. The Ethiopian cannot change the color of his skin, and the leopard cannot change his spots, but Christ can work so effectively in human hearts that men become new creatures in Him.

TOPIC: "The Dangers of Slang and Cheap Talk."—Matt. 12:33-37.

Some Bible Hints.

Our language is a revelation of ourselves, as fruit reveals the tree (v. 33).

Speech is the overflow of the heart. The serious thing is not so much what we say as what we are (v. 34).

Our nature is our treasure, and we add to it by the thoughts we think. What are we stocking our minds with? (v. 35.)

Wit and laughter are good, but our character suffers if we make light of divine things. This reveals a heart gone wrong (v. 37).

Suggestive Thoughts.

Slang almost always tends to coarseness. It has a downward pull, no matter how clever it seems.

The kind of things we speak about indicate what we are. When parents encourage their children to tell all they know about people they have visited, they are making nasty gossips; a real danger.

In "Farmer John" Hugh Walpole sketches, a woman who imagines she is full of good will to everybody, but while praising people she always manages to say nasty and bitter things about them. Cheap and dangerous talk!

There is a very thin line between slang and vulgarity. If we want to be vulgar, let us use slang.

A Few Illustrations.

Pythagoras said that he would rather that his disciples threw stones at random than utter idle words.

The use of words similar in sound to swear words cheapens young people. Gosh for God, and "gee" for Jesus are vulgar and disrespectful.

In a house I visit, I notice the six-year-old son watches everything his father does at table and imitates him. It is so with speech, too. The boy uses "darn" quite freely. Our language influences others.

Language is like seed. If we sow it in our own hearts it grows an abundant crop. Low-down talk cannot elevate us. Lev. 24:10-23 shows how seriously blasphemy was regarded in days of old. Get a definition of blasphemy from the dictionary.

To Think About.

What do you think of a boy or girl that uses slang?

Are people judged by their language? Why? Why do people use slang?

OPEN WINDOWS.

We build our homes and office buildings and other places of residence with windows. Experience teaches that these windows should frequently be opened in order to admit pure air and insure sanitary conditions.

The soul also has windows, many of them. They, too, must be opened frequently to admit the spiritual atmosphere that presses from without for entrance and that insures the spiritual health of the soul.

One of these windows should be opened toward God's people. It should bring us into appreciation and sympathy and fellowship with our brother-men of every race and nation and condition and station in life.

A third window we will open on God's world. We will regard this world, as it rushes in to sweeten and radiate its beauty in our soul-room, not as hostile to our life and its high purposes, but as a challenge to us to enjoy and to improve and utilize it for the spiritual development and satisfaction of life.

The fourth window we will designate as that which opens up to us God's way; but what is His way? It is the way of sacrifice, the way of service, the way of the cross. It has numerous by-paths entering into it. One of them is missions, another Christian education, a third care for the aged and infirm, a fourth provision for the restoration of health, a fifth social welfare work, a sixth ministry to orphan children, and many others. Can we please God and serve His people and enjoy His world without giving ourselves wholeheartedly to traveling in His way?

Let us keep the windows of our soul open in these four directions at least. Failure to do so will stifle us and undermine our spiritual life.

Let every reader pause for a moment and utter this simple prayer to God: "Heavenly Father, keep Thou the windows open in my soul, that Thy glory and the glory of Thy universe of men and of things may beautify it."

DANVILLE.

Some few weeks ago I asked my members to write me a paper on "The Duty of the Pastor to the Community" and one on "The Duty of the Community to the Pastor." I received several papers, and I have one that I feel would be helpful to other Churches and pastors. So I am taking the liberty of sending this paper to THE CHRISTIAN SUN:

"The Duty of the Pastor to the Community."

1. The pastor should be a consecrated, Christian man.
2. The pastor should be qualified to lead the Church in worship.
3. The pastor must teach the Scriptures.
4. He must help the people to grow in Christian life.
5. He must be a good pastor, a shepherd to the flock and Church.
6. He should visit the sick.
7. The pastor should visit the bereaved and troubled.
8. He should give advice to those tempted and perplexed.
9. He should keep the Church informed of every phase of the work of Christ's kingdom in all the world, and lead the Church to have a place in their program for world-wide missions.
10. He should conduct funeral services for members of the Church's deceased.
11. He should be a member of all committees of the Church, and chairman at the business meetings of the Church.

"The Duty of the Community to the Pastor."

1. Regular attendance at the hour of worship.
2. Prayerful participation in the service of worship.
3. A real interest in every part of the Church work and program.
4. Co-operation from his congregation.
5. Should keep him informed of all sickness in the community.
6. Keep his salary paid up regularly.
7. Suggest helpful themes for sermons.
8. Appreciation and response to his ministry.
9. A Church that shall grow in knowledge of the Scriptures, in Christian service and benevolence.
10. A Church that shall have a heart interest in the spread of the kingdom of Christ to all the world.

M. T. SORRELL.

CROSS ROADS IN MISSIONS.

same procedure will follow for Porto Rico. And I must be frank enough to say that I shall feel compelled to recommend to the board that these cuts be made permanent from now on. I shall feel that the Christian Church has been sufficiently informed of the needs and has had ample opportunity to respond so that we shall have to come to the conclusion that the amounts we have been receiving from year to year are about all we can expect the Christian Church to give. And this is said in the face of the fact that our Church is now rated as one of the lowest in a list of twenty-five denominations in its per capita giving to foreign missions. We are indeed at the cross roads in our foreign mission work.

The budget of our Church for the year 1928 is $66,837.51, of which $10,589.59 is to care for the deficit as of October 1st last year. The deficit has grown considerably since that date, but this was to be expected during the lean period of the year, so far as foreign mission receipts are concerned. But the time has come now for us to handle this whole matter, and it cannot be put off longer. Unless every one of our Churches does its utmost in giving to this work now, we shall be forced to the expediency mentioned above. That would be tragic. We have built up a commendable work. We have a trained force of workers, both national and missionary, on the field. How can we reduce the number in view of the need for more? A fine group of young people is looking to the Christian Church for appointment to the mission field. They are from our own Christian homes. Shall we tell them we will not send them? Who among you will take the message to them? Who among you will decide which missionaries shall be brought home? which stations closed? which national workers dropped? which pressing needs and opportunities go unchallenged? Somebody will have to do that very thing unless we give as we have never given before. But woe to the Christian Church if she permits such things to come to pass after God has blessed us with such abundance in health and homes, and lands and Churches and the fellowship of Christian communities! Think of these things and then share with those less fortunate overseas.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
One of Our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"Call upon me, and I will answer thee, and shew thee great and mighty things, which thou knowest not."—Jeremiah 33:3.

EASTER WEEK.

SUNDAY.

THE EASTER ANGEL.

"And entering into the sepulchre, they saw a young man sitting on the right side, clothed in a long white garment; and they were affrighted. And he saith unto them, Be not affrighted; ye seek Jesus of Nazareth, which was crucified. He is risen; He is not here: behold the place where they laid Him."—Mark 16:5-6.

The shadow of death hath fallen darkly upon many a home. There a night of sorrow hath lingered, with the weeping of hearts sorely hurt. The experiences of earth can give us no grief like unto the sadness of separation from those we have learned to love dearer than life. If that night of mourning were never to know the dawning of hope, this world would be little better than a Sheol of dark despair. But, sooner or later, the night of sorrow surrenders to the spirit's awakening in the morning of glad assurance, when hearts beat high with exultant and understanding joy. It is not time that heals the bleeding heart, but God, who marvelously makes "all things work together for good," so that the morning rapture after the night of weeping is as natural in the Father's world as dawn after dark.

Spring is God's angel, who cometh, after winter's night, to awake the world. Easter Day is the springtime of man's hope. Life's angel sits again beside man's tomb and tells the immortal story of God's love. Even today, when Easter-time breaks in encouraging brightness upon a world sick with sorrow, God's messenger of light bringeth unto us the message as of old: "Be not afraid! Seek not your loved one within a tomb! He hath risen. He hath put on the beauty of the angels of light. Henceforth, seek him not among the dead, but among those who truly live."

The matchless blessing which Jesus gave unto the world of men was this: He made men sure that the grim-barred gate of death did not lead unto a den of darkness, but unto the glory of a spiritual world, beyond the mind's imagining, above the heart's desire. His triumph gave men a glimpse of God's promised land, where souls victorious are bathed in peace.—Rev. V. O. Burns.

WHAT IS YOUR LIFE?

"Go to now, ye that say, Today or tomorrow we will go into such a city, and continue there a year, and buy and sell, and get gain; whereas ye know not what shall be on the morrow. For what is your life?"—James 4:13-17.

This life of curs is a matter of eternal import, and yet, in the main, men drift along regardless of the significance of living. But sometimes we stop long enough to take a kind of spiritual stock-taking.

The life that most men and women live is a life bounded by the "here" and "now." Interests are limited and values perverted. The pace of life is unnatural and fevered. We forget that life is really lived in the soul, and that the outward things and sense have too tyrannical a hold upon us. We say we will do this and that, and buy and get gain, and we know not what shall be on the morrow. We tragically forget so often that our Master said "A man's life does not consist in the abundance of the things that he possesseth." Things ride us to our undoing.

The spiritual man does not talk in the strain we have indicated above. He says, "If the Lord will, we shall live and do this or that." He takes God into constant account. He believes "man's chief end is to glorify God and enjoy Him forever." He has a purpose and motive living. "For me to live is Christ."

What, then, is our life? Are we spiritual men, or of the world, worldly? Let us think at this time of the end of life and make it subject to God.—Rev. H. D. Ranns.

Prayer.—By one of the parents, asking that our lives may be consecrated to the winning of soul and the advancement of the kingdom. Ask in Jesus' name.

TUESDAY.

NATURE'S RESURRECTION SCENE.

"The flowers appear on the earth."—Psa. 2:11-13.

Jonathan Brierley, the English essayist, tells us that the Aryan race never outgrew their wonder at the invention of language. I have felt something of this sense of never-dying wonder as I watch the coming of the flowers upon the earth with each recurring year. How they sweeten life with their delicate perfume and their poignant beauty! Jesus was a lover of the flowers. He loved their beauty and gloried in their fragrance. The pomp and glory of a Solomon were not to be compared unto them. And have you recalled the words of Wordsworth?

"To me, the meanest flower that blows can give Thoughts that so often lie too deep for tears."

What a wonderful ministry is that of the flowers! Revelatory of God, they also bring laughter to children's faces, and cheer to the sick and the sorrowing. They spill beauty over the earth released from the bonds of winter. And we fold away the memories of the years with the flowers. Somewhere in a book we have lain them, the rose of the wedding day and the lily of the funeral. They are the treasure-trove of the heart.

But let us have in mind for the moment only the certain future at the close of this life's little day. The future soon turns into the past. Napoleon said in the afternoon of a great battle: "The sun is still shining. There is time to win a victory." However little time may be ours, there is time to begin to cultivate excellences and practice virtue.

When we reach the journey's end, he who can say as he lays the burden down that he has done his share in the world's work, and done it honestly; he who can say, "I never laid an obstacle in another man's path; I never knowingly tripped up a fellow-pilgrim"; he who can say that he has built his life into the walls of the kingdom of God, he shall know what the promise means: "At evening time it shall be light."—Rev. C. C. Albertson.

Prayer.—By one of the parents, asking that we, and all whom we can help to live the life of faith and devoted service, may realize the precious promise He gives to those who trust Him and render loving service.

WEDNESDAY.

THE RECORD OF THE RESURRECTION.

"He is not here, but is risen; remember how He spake unto you when He was yet in Galilee."—Luke 24:4-9.

Had Jesus never issued out of Joseph's rocky tomb, that tomb would not simply have been the grave of Jesus, but it would also have been the grave of His religion. Such was the view of the scholarly Alexander Maclaren, and it is shared by millions who follow the Christ. Said Dr. W. L. Watkinson: "The resurrection of the Christ is the pledge of the resurrection of all who believe in Him."

The record of the resurrection brings a glowing assurance into the heart of the Christian. It carries the conviction that Christ lives, and that His words are true that His followers shall be with Him. "Christ has made of death a narrow, starlit strip between the companionship of yesterday and the reunion of tomorrow"—this single sentence is worthy of a place in every memory, and is full of comfort for those who have loved and lost.

Heartbroken over the death of a beloved mother, a young daughter was counseled not to attend the funeral services. Yet at the service, to the surprise of all, she appeared perfectly calm. Her face was shining, and there was a light in her eyes that even tears could not dim. Later, she told her friends that as she stood near the body of her mother, she seemed to see her, not cold and lifeless, but glorious and radiant, as one in whose heart there was full assurance. "I could grieve no more when I looked upon my mother's face," she said, "and I felt certain that I should see her again."—Rev. Wm. J. Hart.

Prayer.—By one of the parents, asking that our faith in Jesus Christ and in His finished work, sacrifice and resurrection, may give us the strongest of all comfort and assurance; also that we may be the means of leading many souls to forgiveness.

THURSDAY.

THE SPEAKING BLOOD.

"The blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better things than that of Abel."—Heb. 9:22, 12:18-29.

There is an old saying: "Actions speak louder than words." Emerson is credited with the remark: "What you do speaks so loud that I cannot hear what you say." There are many ways in which God speaks to us—in the Bible, hymns, through others, and by the still, small voice; He speaks also by what He did through Jesus Christ, and especially by the cross.

What voice through the centuries has spoken more impressively, more touchingly, than that of the cross? What other message has brought such conviction, consolation, and joy? In the cross of our Saviour we find the revelation of God's love, forgiveness, peace, and power. Christ on the cross for us has been an unspeakable blessing to sinful men, and is today. Here is found the "good news" welcomed by the outcast and the heart-broken, as it should be by us all. The apostle's statement of fact is followed by the appeal: "See that ye refuse not Him that speaketh." The blood of sprinkling is Christ speaking to us. To refuse Him and what He did is the great sin against love. How we long to have every one accept Him, appropriate what He did, and live in love to Him.—Rev. C. DeW. Brower.

Prayer.—Lord's Prayer, all the circle joining.

FRIDAY.

THE CROSS OF CHRIST.

"But God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ."—Gal. 6:10.

Here Paul is thinking of the cross and of all it means in the Saviour's wonderful spiritual mystery and ministry. It is the incomparable glory of the cross that has captured the apostle. There is nothing beside it worthy of comparison. It is in the divine energy of the cross that the world still hopes and longs for its redemption. The

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

I sometimes think the reason our good women are so much better than us men is because they were the last of God's creation, and He saved the best for the last. Anyway, the good women cannot be excelled in their good works; they are so thoughtful and are always on the alert to grasp an opportunity to do kind acts and noble deeds. Unselfish, sacrificing and willing to help others, they have been so kind to us in this work of love that it would be hard to make progress without their help. They are following in the footsteps of our Master. He spent a busy life on earth doing kind deeds to help those who needed His assistance, restoring the sight of the blind, healing the sick, making the lame walk, and raising the dead to life, and seeking and saving the lost. Our good women, through their missionary societies, are sending in pretty Easter dresses to help make our little girls happy on Easter morning. It has been our custom for a number of years to dress all our little girls in a new dress on Easter Sunday, and our good women have always gotten a great deal of pleasure out of furnishing the little dresses. I have often thought if they could only be present on Easter Sunday morning and see the children as they march off to Sunday School and see their little faces beaming with happy smiles, they would feel well repaid for any sacrifice made.

The following dresses have already been received for Easter: Women's Missionary Society, Wakarusa, Ind., 5 suits, 22 dresses, bloomers, etc.; Miss Birdie Wilson, Virgilina, Va., 4 dresses; Women's Missionary Society, North Manchester, Ind., 18 dresses; Women's Missionary Society, Goshen, Ind., 20 dresses, 7 suits, 1 pair slippers; Mrs. C. V. Dunn, Paces, Va., 1 coat; J. P. and Mack Brannon, Sanford, N. C., 1 quilt.

This is fine. My matron tells me we are short on sheets and pillow-cases. They would be fine for Easter, too.

order of our emancipation is always the same: first, the cross, then the glory. The old adage still obtains: "No cross, no crown!"

The glory of the cross is not only seen in the divine energy which emanates from it, but in the inspiration and hope it gives to the world. The glory of the outer world had little attraction for Paul. He counted all things loss that he might win Christ.

The cross thenceforth was the source of the apostle's enlargement of his visions. Calvary predominated over everything. From that majestic point of view, he caught the glory of a redeemed world, and his own life was enriched with spiritual power.

SATURDAY.

THE CONQUERED GRAVESTONE.

"The angel of the Lord descended from heaven, and came and rolled back the stone from the door, and sat upon it."—Matt. 28:2-8.

This is one of the most graphic details of the glorious Easter story. How inspiring it is to see this mighty angel descend and touch the great stone placed by Roman soldiers before the tomb of Jesus, touch it until its seal was broken and it rolled away! Jesus had left the tomb before the angel touched the gravestone. The resurrection was not the release of a prisoner by taking away the stone; it was the manifestation of an immortal Christ, without moving the stone or even the grave-clothes. O wonder of wonders!

With calm and unobtrusive presence the angel, after rolling away the stone, sat upon it. He made the object that caused worry and a problem to the women a place of rest and ease. He turned the thing the enemy had used into a point of conquest. It was a conquest all the legions of imperial Caesar could not have changed. What a striking figure that solitary angel makes, sitting thus upon the stone, testifying to a Risen Lord!

Tennyson says, men may "rise upon the stepping-stones of their dead selves to higher things." To the eye of faith there is an angel sitting on every gravestone and the beloved one is not there, but is risen!—Rev. A. E. Gregory.

Prayer.—By one of the parents, asking that faith in Christ and His voluntary sacrifice for a lost world may spread mightily, until every nation and people may come under the banner of the cross and accept Jesus as their Saviour.

Kiddies' Korner

MADGE MOFFITT WHITESELL, Editor.

Dear Kiddies All:

Here's a great big Easter egg letter! I am wondering if all the bunnies are frisking around now as much as all these dear Kiddies in our nice Korner? Wake up, Easter Bunnies! Wake up, bright butter-cup! Our Kiddies are going to share this happy time with you every one.

Oh, dear me! We nearly forgot the surprise! It's a secret, and each of you are to guess it.

One beautiful Sunday morning long ago, two women were walking along a lonely road. They were going to a tomb to see a very dear friend, and to put spices near his beloved body. As they walked along the lonely road, a butter-cup nodded her yellow head and seemed to say, oh, so softly: "We know a be-au-tiful secret." And after a while as they neared the place where the friend lay, Robin Red Breast said to them: "I know a be-au-ti-ful secret."

Oh, oh, how the women did wonder! Then, as they reached the lovely garden a lovely person came to them and said: "I know a be-au-ti-ful secret." And it was Easter Sunday morning, and I am wondering if all our Kiddies might guess quickly what the beautiful secret was. Love to each one.

MADGE M. WHITESELL.

WHAT DOROTHY FOUND IN THE ATTIC.

By Frances Fitzpatrick Wright.

Dorothy was up in the attic one rainy afternoon. She stayed a long time, but finally she came running down to where mother sat sewing in the living-room. She had a picture in her hand. "Mother," she said, "whose picture is this?"

"Bring it here and let me see it," said mother.

She took the picture and looked at it. "Why, darling," she said, "where did you find this?"

"In the bottom of that box of pictures in the attic. Who is it, mother?" asked Dorothy again.

"Why, that is a picture of me, darling! I was just about your age when it was taken. Seven years old, that very day."

Mother was smiling at the little girl in the picture. And the little girl smiled back. She was a very sweet-looking little girl, with dark curls showing beneath a dear little poke-bonnet. She wore a quaint little dress sprigged with roses. The picture was tinted, and Dorothy could see that the dress was cream-colored and the little roses pink. There were pink roses on the poke-bonnet, too.

Dorothy looked first at the picture, then at her mother. "It doesn't seem like this little girl was ever you, does it, mother?"

"It does to me, darling. And it doesn't seem long, either, since I was seven years old. Shall I tell you about the day this picture was taken?"

"O, please do," begged Dorothy. "But wait a minute." She drew up a little footstool, sat down at her mother's feet, and looked up eagerly into her mother's smiling face. "Now I am ready," she said.

"Well," began mother, "as I said, it was taken the day I was seven years old. I had not had my picture taken since I was a baby. O dear, how excited I was! Mother wanted it taken on my birthday. And she worked very hard to get that little dress finished in time. I have it yet. Your Great Aunt Editha, who traveled a good deal, brought the material from Paris, and the little poke-bonnet, too."

"Have you still got the poke-bonnet, mother?"

"Yes, I still have it, too," said mother. "Well, on the morning of my birthday, as soon as breakfast was over, father had the horse's hitched to the carriage. Then mother dressed in her nicest clothes and father dressed in his. Then she dressed me.

"I was so proud of the new dress that I was afraid to sit down for fear of wrinkling it! And when she put on the hat, I could do nothing but look at myself in the mirror. Father laughed at me and teased me for being so vain."

"You did look very pretty, mother," said Dorothy.

"Well, finally we got off. We drove all the way to town, seven miles. I was quite stiff when we got out at the photographer's. I had been sitting so still to keep from mussing the dress.

"Then we went in. Mr. Appletree was the photographer's name. I stood just as he placed me. Then father said, 'She looks too stiff,' and he sat down and told me a very funny story. Such a funny story that I forgot all about having my picture taken until I heard the camera click. And this is the picture he got."

"It is such a darling picture," said Dorothy. Suddenly she jumped up, her eyes shining. "Mother," she cried, "please let me have my picture taken with that little hat and dress on!"

Mother clapped her hands softly. "That is a lovely plan," she said. "You will be seven next week, and we will do it on your birthday."

And sure enough they did. The photographer tinted the picture of Dorothy to look like the one of mother. Her hair was combed the same way, and the little dress and bonnet just fitted. Dorothy's father said they looked like twins, except that Dorothy's curls were yellow and mother's brown.

LANETT, ALA.

The Woman's Missionary Societies of the Georgia and Alabama Christian Conference are asked to send delegates to the Christian Endeavor and Sunday School Convention, which meets at the Beulah Christian Church, Girard, Ala., on the fifth Sunday, and the Saturday before, in April.

Our good women are anxious to do something for our dear Church, and they need to get together and organize themselves into a conference of their own. We have several local societies in this Conference, but we need to get together and effect a Conference organization, so as to enable us to understand each other and co-operate with our Convention authorities and really do some worthwhile things. The women of the society at Lanett are anxious to get in touch with the women of other Churches of this Conference on the fifth Sunday in April to discuss their part in the greatest cause under the sun, and that means more to the success of our dear Church than anything else for Jesus. The Church whose mission and program is not world-wide has not fully believed on Jesus. Now we are anxious that our good women have a chance to do some work for their Church, so we hope to see some women from every Church in this Conference at the convention at Beulah.

We also want to see every pastor in the Conference present at that meeting, for we hope to have a pastor's conference some time while we are there. So let us do our best to make our Convention a success, and if every one will do his part it will be a success and something of which we will all feel proud.

NOTICE.

The Women's Missionary Rally of the Halifax District will meet at Hebron Christian Church on Wednesday, April 11th. Any delegates who wish to come by rail and be met at Nelson, Va., or who desire entertainment for the night, please write me.

AN EVANGELISTIC CRUSADE.

Word. Suitable follow-up work on the part of our Church members has been inaugurated, and in the homes where its members are attending no Church, or make confession of Christ and preference for our Church expressed, thereupon a visitation committee, composed of men, women and young people, are to enter such a home, urging Church attendance and affiliation. A campaign which is staged in every avenue of life, in homes of poverty and affluence, on the highways and in the hedges, and in "no-man's land," that vast domain ruled by the devil, where sin dares to lift its hydra-headed character, wearing no cloak of hypocrisy.

Space will not permit further description now. Oh, what a stupendous task! A city of sixty thousand people, such a physically impossible task. But our campaign is pitched on the ground of God's promises, particularly Jer. 33:3 and Isa. 55:11, and we know God cannot fail (Heb. 13:5-6).

In closing, what is the secret of the failure at Ephesus? Read Rev. 2:1-7, then read the 4th verse, "Nevertheless I have somewhat against thee, because thou hast left thy first love." The Church no longer exercised that love which is always evidenced in winning souls; and her name today is but a memory, and the city of her habitation a harbor of pestilence, instead of peace and power.

We believe the hour has arrived when the supreme task of the Church is confronting us with that challenge which must arouse us to immediate action; too long has the Christian Church sat still by the side of God's highway, or "passed by on the other side," evidencing a lack of love which is destined to react as is the recorded history of Ephesus. But, by God's grace, history shall not so record a like tragedy at Portsmouth. Our people, stirred by love for God, have determined to go through with Jesus Christ in this program, despite its persecution and its heavy financial obligations—obligations in which you may share, my friends, if so directed by the Lord. You may make your contribution payable to "Christian Church Evangelization Fund," forwarding same to C. J. Heath, treasurer, 916 Dinwiddie Street, Portsmouth, Va., with the assurance that such sum of money shall be used for furtherance of God's glory, "A treasure in the heavens that faileth not, where no thief approacheth, neither moth corrupteth, for where your treasure is, there will your heart be also" (Luke 12:33-34).

And in this program we are assured that we travel a trail as old as that trod by Jesus in Judea, Paul in Philippi, and the militant, mighty Church of Christ Jesus.

Each day, except Sunday and Monday, of the week, we meet for prayer from 9 to 10 A. M., having predicated this great program upon Jer. 33:3, and thus begin the battle of the day upon our knees, continuing "instant in prayer."

Brethren, pray with us, pray for us. Rom. 15:30).

DIXON.

The death angel visited the home of Bro. and Sister Ben Dixon on March 24th at 11:55 A. M., and took from them their father and her companion. Bro. Dixon was the son of Sidney Dixon, and was born in Penn County, near Braswell, Va., March 5, 1880. He married Miss Lillian McDaniels March 10, 1918. There were added to their happy union three boys—Posie, Raymond and Clay. Bro. Dixon made profession of faith the first Sunday in September, 1927, and one month later united with the Third Avenue Christian Church. The writer had the happy privilege of showing him the way to Christ and receiving him into the Church. While Bro. Dixon did not have the pleasure of ever seeing the Church from the time he made profession of faith, yet he lived true to his profession and died with a sure hope of heaven.

The funeral services were conducted by the writer at his home about thirteen miles from Danville, on March 25th. The many friends that were present at the funeral were a token of their sympathy for Sister Dixon and the children and their high respect and love for him. May the Lord comfort the bereaved and prepare a place for them in heaven.

M. T. SORRELL.

MORRIS.

Little Jnanita Morris went to be with Christ early Sunday morning, March 18. While she had only been privileged to live in this world for about two years, yet her life had become dear to her many friends. While it has been hard for her parents and friends to give her up, yet it is sweet to know she has gone to be in a place so much better than we had for her. May the Lord bless the bereaved and help them some day to meet again.

The funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. R. E. Brittle, of Elon College. After a short service at Palm Street Christian Church her remains were laid to rest at the old home Church of the parents, Pleasant Grove, Randolph County. She leaves to mourn her loss a father and mother, besides many near relatives.

BETHLEHEM COLLEGE

WADLEY, ALABAMA

A JUNIOR COLLEGE AND HIGH SCHOOL.

Where Opportunity Awaits the Student of Very Limited Means.

GIRL'S DORMITORY.

Bethlehem College, Wadley, Ala., will open September 5, 1927. This institution is a Junior College and High School, which is co-educational, where scholarship ranks high and expense is low. It is thoroughly Christian, absolutely non-sectarian, and vitally American. A school where opportunity awaits the student of very limited means—$68.00 pays all college expenses, except books, board and room. Board, $15.00 per month, and room $3.00; total expenses for a term of nine months, $250.00.

Bethlehem College is training some of the best stock of America for Christian leadership, to be used by the nation and the world. Here is a great challenge and asset for students who wish to prepare themselves to serve in a worth-while way. The work on the new Administration Building is progressing nicely, and we will be able to begin our college work in this building when school opens this fall.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

By REV. S. M. LYNAM.

Long Life.—

The story comes from Eastland, Texas, that when the courthouse there was torn down recently, the corner-stone box was opened, which had been sealed for thirty-one years. Those who opened the box found a horned toad which was placed in the box thirty-one years before still alive after thirty-one years of sleep. In the frog family, Rip Van Winkle would be very easily a fact of not too unbelievable proportions.

Radio Stocks.—

Heavy advances in radio stocks on the New York Stock Exchange has stirred the financial world recently. There is a fear that an effort is being made to corner radio production. This would mean great advances in prices of radios, and many would be denied the pleasure of listening in. It is little wonder, however, when it is recalled that the number of homes having radios have increased within a very few years from a few thousand to as many millions. The supplies for the machines already in use means an expenditure of many millions every year. The whole radio development has been so rapid that no grasp of it has been possible, and consequently no control system has yet been definitely devised.

That the way of the trespasser on railroad property leads to the grave is again shown by figures compiled by the safety department of the Southern Railway System, 140 persons having been killed and 133 injured while trespassing on the Southern's property in 1927, as against 135 killed and 154 injured in 1926. Trespassing on the tracks of the Southern accounted for 109 deaths and 66 injuries, while 31 persons were killed and 67 were injured while trespassing on trains. The deadly certainty of death or injury as the result of trespassing is shown by the constancy of the figures recording these casualties—in 1922, 129 killed and 171 injured; 1923, 154 killed and 178 injured; 1924, 130 killed and 174 injured; 1925, 128 killed and 151 injured.

Airplanes.—

It is reported that Henry Ford declares his factory will soon be turning out airplanes in such quantities that they can be sold for the present price of his Ford car. Airplanes are constantly finding new uses. They are using them now over arctic seas to look for seals, that more sealskin coats may be available, and they are replacing the dog-teams of romance for carrying the mails in Canada during the winter months. They have for some time been used for mapping impassable regions. There have been numerous occasions during this past winter where they have been used for rescue and relief work under most trying circumstances. The airplane is fast making a very practical place for itself in the life of the world.

It is amazing to reflect that, according to reliable estimates, the United States is taxed thirteen billion dollars for the support of the criminal element of the country. There is a continuous warfare between an army of two million criminals and an army of half a million police, judicial and enforcement officers. Every year there are 12,500 fatalities in the warfare. For every murderer hanged in Chicago, six policemen are shot. The country continually maintains two hundred thousand criminals in captivity. A man has thirty-six to one chances of being held up in New York over London, England, and one hundred to one in Chicago. The burglar in New York has thirteen to one chances in his favor, and the same proportion against him in London, England. It would appear that we may have made America safe for democracy, but we have certainly not made it safe for the peaceful, law-abiding citizen.

The Unwanted Child.—

There is a growing concern for the thousands of babies born each year which are unwanted children. It is becoming a problem. At a recent meeting of the American Medical Association, held in New Orleans, Dr. Agramonte, of Habana, Cuba, dealt with this problem. He told of a famous foundling home in Habana which was equipped with a revolving basket, where unwanted babies might be placed without any identification of the mother or any further investigation. Then he told of the municipal hospital of Habana equipped for caring for expectant mothers. The hospital has been taken out of politics and thoroughly furnished with the most up-to-date equipment. No embarrassing questions are asked the patients, no effort is made to pry into their past lives, no name is required. There is but one requirement, and that is rigidly adhered to. The mother must remain at the hospital and nurse her child for two weeks after its birth. So great has been this beneficent influence that the number of babies deposited in the revolving basket at the foundling home has dropped off from fifteen to two a month. Dr. Agramonte believes that this is due to the fact that the mother-love instinct is so aroused during the two weeks which she must nurse her child that she will not part with it under any circumstances. Dr. Agramonte was one of those fearless doctors who fought and exterminated yellow fever in the island of Cuba, and the medical association paid him due honor at its recent meeting.

Beginning Fifth Year.—

It may be of interest to some to know that with this issue the Observatory editor is beginning his fifth year as editor of the first page of THE SUN. It is interesting to know that between sixty and sixty thousand words, or the amount of a full novel, are printed on the front page of THE SUN alone each year. The news which appears in the Observatory is gleaned from many sources, and many debts would have to be acknowledged, but all of it is rewritten and adapted with THE CHRISTIAN SUN readers in mind. The editor has had some reaction to his work during the four years in which he has been the "observer," some of it favorable and some of it unfavorable. He has always tried to keep personal matters in the background, and has striven to present all questions without prejudice. He has had few purposes to serve other than that the kingdom of God might grow and move steadily toward that day when His kingdom shall come and His will be done on earth as it is in heaven.

The editor has always kept in mind that those for whom the Observatory was written have many opinions, and he has tried to offend none of them. There are in the constituency of THE CHRISTIAN SUN modernists and fundamentalists, friends of one issue and foes of that same issue, those with race prejudice and those without it; and there are those with a national mind and those whose sympathies are as broad as the world, and whether the Observer has written his page in North Carolina within a stone's throw of THE SUN office, or down in Alabama between the many calls of a professor's life, or up in Canada, in the midst of the multitude of duties of a pastor, he has striven always to observe impartially and as truthfully as the reading he could do and the sources at his command would permit him.

Always it has been the purpose of the "observer" to mark the progress of the world in Christianity, but far more in every phase of human endeavor, because he believes that the dear Lord Jesus would have us recognize that growth is the plan of God, progress His watchword, and every phase of life needing the touch of Him out of whom went the virtue that makes for renewed vigor. Life, whether racial, international or strictly religious, must be made Christian before we can say with any degree of certainty that any of it has been made thoroughly after the pattern of our Lord. And so as the "observer" begins this fifth year he asks your tolerance, your sympathy, and your effort to understand as he takes up the task of seeking out those things he believes we all ought to know. It is a larger task than some think, and requires much in its doing; much that the "observer" knows he does not have. It is together, not apart, that we can make THE CHRISTIAN SUN a paper worthy of its splendid traditions.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Mrs. L. C. Whitaker, Garner, N. C., in renewing for her paper, says: "I enjoy my Church paper weekly."

Bro. J. G. Johnson, of Zuni, Va., in renewing his subscription, says: "We certainly appreciate THE CHRISTIAN SUN."

Rev. A. W. Andes has sent in thirteen renewals for THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Bro. Andes is an ardent friend of the paper.

Dr. L. E. Smith, President of the Southern Christian Convention, was in the city on business the past week and paid THE SUN office a brief visit.

Dr. S. L. Beougher, president of Bethlehem College, Wadley, Ala., was a visitor in Richmond during the past week and made THE SUN office a pleasant call.

The pastor of Friedens Evangelical Lutheran Church, Gibsonville, speaks a fine word for the ministerial students of Elon College in a program recently given in that Church.

Miss Essie Mae Cotten, director of religious education in the Burlington Church, has secured four new subscribers to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Miss Cotten is doing a fine work in the Burlington Church.

President Beougher, of Bethlehem College, is in the North Carolina and Virginia section of our Church at this time seeking funds for the support of that institution. He was a pleasant visitor to Elon College last week.

Elon College has been quite successful in its public debates this year. It was successful in winning over Wofford College, Spartanburg, S. C., in a single debate and in winning both decisions with Guilford in a dual debate.

Mr. Samuel Earman, of Harrisonburg, Va., and treasurer of the Virginia Valley Central Conference, with members of his family, worshiped at First Christian Church, Richmond, on Easter Sunday. We bid them to come again.

Mrs. T. A. Moffitt, mother of the editor of the "Kiddies Kerner," who has been doing such fine work in assisting her daughter in editing this department, missed a week recently because of illness. Mrs. Moffitt's many friends will be delighted to know that she is improving.

Mrs. W. K. Saunders, Zuni, Va., is deeply interested in the offering for missions, and has made request for mission literature as listed in THE CHRISTIAN SUN of March 29th. We shall be very glad to furnish copies of this literature to any who are interested. Only a simple request is needed to bring it.

Dr. A. D. Woodworth, our veteran missionary in Japan, whose splendid article we publish in this issue, in speaking of his many duties, says: "The school authorities where I teach are planning to put me on for twenty-two hours in the school-room, not considering that I have to preach three or four times a week." Surely those who think that missionaries have an easy time would do well to consider what Dr. Woodworth says of his activities. His good wife is equally busy.

Correspondents are reminded that badly prepared "copy" is expensive to the printer, not to mention the errors that may appear to the embarrassment of the writer. If a typewriter is not available, please be sure that you write distinctly, using white paper and black ink and only one side of the paper.

Rev. H. W. Elder writes that he is now at Richland, Ga. He says: "I am improving slowly, though I am still under rigid treatment. I am glad to be back home after spending four months in the hospital." It will be good news for the Church that this faithful servant of our Master is able to return to his home.

We continue to have good word from Dr. Atkinson. He hopes shortly to be able to return to his post of service. Here is hoping that he will not hasten himself unduly, and though his service is greatly missed, it will be much better for every interest of the Church if, when he does return, he is thoroughly restored to health and strength.

The Virginia Sunday School Convention is to meet in Staunton June 6th to 8th. The Virginia Association is the first one of the Southern States to reorganize under the new form of government proposed by the former International Sunday School Association. We have two official members on the board—Dr. L. E. Smith and Mr. Jesse F. West, Jr.

CHRISTIAN SUN readers will be saddened to hear of the death of Mrs. Myrtie Daughtrey Denton, wife of Prof. S. E. Denton, which occurred March 17th, at her home in McRae, Ga. Mrs. Denton will be remembered as an honor graduate of Elon College some twenty years ago and was held in high esteem by teachers and students of that institution.

Deacon M. W. Hall, of the Berea (Norfolk) Christian Church, gave an examination on the Sunday School lessons for six months recently and offered a prize for the best examination paper. The prize was to be a year's subscription to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Miss Eva McKenney won the prize. Such a prize appears to be very appropriate.

One of the women leaders of our Church objects to our referring to the women as "our" and "dear." She says: "I have been all but nauseated by such usage as between men and women, and were the situation reversed I think it fairly would sicken and shame the men of the Church to be continually referred to in such silly and morbid verbosity. Women are red-blooded, and appreciate dignity where dignity is to be expected."

Capt. W. H. Turrentine, Burlington, writes that he was three years old when THE CHRISTIAN SUN was founded in 1844; that his father was one of the original subscribers, and that it has been continuously in his family ever since. From the first day that he was able to read, Capt. Turrentine has been a constant reader of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and he adds: "I will continue until the end of the chapter."

Rev. O. D. Poythress, South Norfolk, and Rev. F. C. Lester, Waverly, Va., each sent beautiful Easter messages to all the members of their Churches. THE CHRISTIAN SUN would have been glad to have printed these messages in full if they had reached the acting editor's office prior to the issue preceding Easter Sunday. It certainly must have been an inspiration to them to read these beautiful messages from their pastors.

Rev. E. B. White made THE SUN office a call and reports that "the Dendron Church choir rendered beautiful music for Easter, the decorations were fine, and the house was filled to capacity at the services. Services were also held at Union (Surry) and at New Lebanon. Special services are to be held at Damascus at the next regular appointment, and all are working for a hundred per cent attendance at Sunday School and Church. Dendron charge and Damascus Church show a fine spirit of co-operation."

A private letter from Rev. E. C. Fry, missionary in Japan, states: "The Girls' School which Mrs. Fry supported for so many years at Utsunomiya remains still as a memorial to her. She left its ownership and management to her adopted son, Maki. Mrs. Fry gave her kindergarten school to Mrs. Kimura, wife of the Utsunomiya pastor." Bro. Fry's furlough is due this year. He is planning to leave Japan for America about the first of June. The entire Church sympathizes deeply with him in the death of Mrs. Fry.

Dr. S. L. Beougher is busy working out the details of a thorough co-operation between the Congregationalists and the Christians as respects Piedmont College, Demorest, Ga., Thorsby, Ala., and Bethlehem College, Wadley, Ala. The board of trustees of Bethlehem College, according to President Beougher, has voted unanimously for the merger of the interests involved in these three institutions into a single system. He hopes to have something very definite to report to the Southern Christian Convention.

Dr. G. O. Lankford, pastor of our Burlington Church, began his eighth year of service on the first Sunday in April. During his seven years as pastor in Burlington, our Church has enjoyed a prosperous spiritual development. The pastor himself has been blessed with unusual health. He stated in his sermon on the anniversary occasion that he had missed only one prayer-meeting because of illness in seven years, and not a single Sunday's preaching service. Dr. Lankford is greatly beloved not only by our own people, but by the whole city of Burlington.

Interest in the mission offering continues to grow. The Churches are responding liberally to the appeals made by the Acting Mission Secretary, J. M. Darden, to raise one-sixth of the pastor's salary as a special offering. The Mission Board has done a great work in our Church, and there should certainly be a liberal response at this time, not only because the board has done a good work and because Bro. Darden as a capable and consecrated man requests it, but also as an expression of appreciation for the Mission Secretary, Dr. J. O. Atkinson. Let the Churches be liberal in their response to the mission cause.

President Keller and Dean Zimmerman, of the Atlanta Theological Seminary, were visitors to Elon College on Tuesday of last week. A tentative basis for the union of the seminary with the college was discussed. This matter will be presented to the board of trustees of the two institutions and to the denominational agencies for further consideration. The Atlanta Seminary finds its field very much limited in these latter years in Atlanta, because, since it began its work in that city, Emory University has developed a strong divinity school. Oglethorpe University has done likewise. In addition to this, the Presbyterians have moved their seminary from Columbia, S. C., to Atlanta. The trustees, therefore, feel that they can best serve the interests of the kingdom by moving the institution to some college.

The Congregational Church known as Providence Chapel, and the Christian Church known as Brown's Chapel, both of which are near Spies, N. C., both congregations being practically the same, since these Churches have their preaching services on different Sundays, are endeavoring to find a basis of co-operation with each other. It is understood that the members in both Churches favor such a co-operative effort, and that the pastors, Rev. W. C. Martin, of the Christian Church, and Rev. Parke Fisher, of the Congregational Church, are open-minded on the subject. A recent meeting was held in Providence Chapel looking toward the consummation of this effort.

The Christian Church at Biscoe, known as the Wellons Memorial Church, bids fair to be a worthy representative of the Christian denomination in that section of Montgomery County. There are only seventeen members of our Church there, but they have the spirit of sacrifice and are loyal to their leader, Rev. W. C. Martin. The Church now needs about $600 for completion. When completed it will represent an investment of about $4,500. It would be a splendid idea if those who are interested in seeing this work go forward would send a contribution to the pastor, Rev. W. C. Martin, Candor, N. C.

The commencement of the Country Life Academy, Star, N. C., Rev. Edw. F. Green, president, was held on Friday of last week. Prof. Boshart, of the United Church, Raleigh, gave the commencement address. Dr. E. L. Moffitt was present as a member of the board of trustees and presided over the session of the trustees. The institution is filling a useful place in reaching unprivileged boys and girls from the farms and opening up to them opportunities for education. The emphasis in the curriculum has been on agriculture and home economics, but Bible instruction is not neglected. This year there were several conversions in the student body. The trustees voted to co-operate with Elon College by sending graduates who are interested in public school teaching and in the ministry and religious work to Elon, and with the State College at Raleigh by sending those interested in agriculture to that institution.

FISHING.

BY MRS. G. M. SPAIN.

As this is the time set aside for our special mission work, and as I have a great desire to help save the lost at home as well as abroad, I am writing this little lesson, hoping and praying it will help some.

In John 21:3, Peter said, "I go a-fishing." Christ told Peter to follow Him and He would make him a fisher of men. So if we would fish for souls of men, we too must follow Jesus. When a fisherman makes up his mind to fish he will get his pole, line, on which is a cork and hook and a sinker. Then he will fill his bait cup with bait, and off to some pond of water he will go, using a hoe to dig the bait.

Now, we will let Christ represent the fisherman. You and I the pole. Notice the pole has to be cut separate and apart from where it once grew. It must be dead to mother earth; just so, we must be dead to the world, consecrated in the hands of Jesus if we want Him to use us in saving souls. The line is the Holy Spirit, given to you and me, through which we can commune with God, bringing us comfort and joy to our own souls and also giving us a message to carry to others. The cork represents our conscience, and it will tell us if we are right or wrong. As the sinker on the line is to sink the hook in the water, so we must sink out of self into Christ and be dead to the world but alive to God. The hook is our tongue, useful to give out the bait that has been placed in the bait cup, which is the heart. For out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh.

What kind of bait are we placing on our tongues to catch souls? Are we using the bread of life? Jesus told us to give! Are we giving a bait that will cause souls to sicken and die? We are told to go into all the world and preach the gospel. This can be done in three ways—go, give, pray. Go ourselves and carry the message Jesus puts into our hearts; or we must give our money, which is our stored power, that some one else may go; or we must pray that God will send laborers into the harvest field. Prayer is the hoe we dig our bait with. So if we earnestly pray, we will find. For Jesus says they that seek me early shall find me.

Praying for spiritual food is like digging a well. If you will dig long enough, after a while you will find water. So if you will seek earnestly, believing you will soon burst through to the life-giving fountain that will never run dry, you can satisfy your own thirst and have living water to give some one else.

The pond in which the fisherman fishes represents the different nations of the world, including every island of the sea that does not know of Jesus the Saviour of the world; and the fish are the people that live in them. They are waiting to be caught for Christ. We must give them the gospel through love. "For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have everlasting life." Jesus came to earth and suffered death to save us. Should we not suffer some way, that others through us may be saved?

Why should we tarry, my brother, so long?

See, he is sinking! Oh, haste thee away,

And throw out the life-line; away then, away."

RICHMOND CHURCH.

To the Brotherhood of the Southern Christian Convention:

The First Christian Church of Richmond, Va., has invited the Convention to hold its next session with us May 1st to 3rd. We are glad the invitation has been accepted by the Executive Committee, and we are now arranging for your entertainment and comfort.

The plan as arranged is that we furnish lodging and breakfast free, and the sum of 40 cents per meal be charged for dinner and supper. All the meals will be served at the Church, but the breakfast is free. Our Church membership is scattered over the city, and the lodging of the Convention will not be any easy one. Visitors will be cared for as far as possible. If you are a delegate to the Convention or the Women's Auxiliary and expect to come and desire entertainment, won't you please write to the pastor by April 20th, that we may know as near as possible how many we will need to provide for. If you are coming and have friends in Richmond with whom you expect to stay, please write and tell the pastor. If you care to stay at a hotel, you will find many good ones in the city.

We are glad you are coming, and we will do our best. And when you get here we will be glad to say, "They who have turned the world upside-down have come hither also." Please write me if you are coming.

SANE ASSURANCE.

Assuming, as we believe is the case, that the editorials in the Broadway Tabernacle Tidings are by Dr. Charles E. Jefferson's own hand, the following comment on prohibition has added interest:

"Do not be misled by the endless chatter against prohibition in a certain section of the public press. The liquor advocates have always been a voluble crowd, and they deceive many persons by the loudness of the noise which they make. In spite of all they say, prohibition is advancing. It is being better enforced each succeeding year. It is making new friends and supporters every month from among those who are willing to face facts. Journalists and politicians seldom lead great moral reforms. Idealism never receives a hearty response from high society. A certain per cent of the population is ready to break any law, no matter what it is. Let no one be fearful. Prohibition is here, and it is here to stay."

THE BRIDGE.

An old man, traveling a lone highway,
Came at the evening, cold and gray,
To a chasm dark and deep and wide.
The old man crossed in the twilight dim,
The sullen stream had no fear for him.
But he paused, when safe on the other side,
And builded a bridge to span the tide.
"Old man," said a fellow-pilgrim near,
You are wasting your strength with building here.
Your journey will end with the ending day,
You never again will pass this way.
You have crossed the chasm, dark and wide;
Why build this bridge at eventide?"
The builder lifted his old gray head:
"Good friend, in the way I have come," he said,
"There followeth after me today
A youth whose feet must pass this way.
He, too, must cross in the twilight dim;
Good friend, I am building this bridge for him."

MANY WAYS TO HELP MISSIONS.

1. Join a missionary society. If there is none in your Church, have one organized.
2. Attend every meeting when possible.
3. When impossible to attend, send a written explanation for your absence, and a verse of Scripture which shall bespeak your interest in the meeting.
4. Be prompt in paying dues.
5. Invite a neighboring society to meet with you and to supply the program.
6. Have a family mite-box at home to collect stray pennies, nickels, and dimes.
7. Place this mite-box on the breakfast table on Sundays, family birthdays, and all holidays.

HOW TO HELP.

Said Peter Paul Augustus,
"When I am grown a man
I'll help my dearest mother
The very best I can.
I'll wait upon her kindly;
She'll lean upon my arm;
I'll lead her very gently
And keep her safe from harm.
But when I come to think of it,
The time will be so long,"
Said Peter Paul Augustus,
"Before I'm tall and strong,
I think it would be wiser
To be her pride and joy
By helping her my very best
While I am a little boy."

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

FLORIDA—WITH OBSERVATIONS.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

One of the most striking features about Florida now is the absence of "what was." That sentence is not very elegant, and hasn't the rhetorical finish it deserves, but it carries the idea. Evidently the people who were in Florida during the boom period expected everybody else in the United States, and many also from Europe and the Orient, to move in here and build at a very early date. Accordingly, the whole State of Florida—orange groves, pine forests, tropical jungles, swamp marshes and all—was laid off in small building lots, and we presume sold to somebody at high cost. If that statement seems an exaggeration, then it applies to sections this scribe has not seen. One can travel along the highway or on rail for miles and miles, out from cities, towns or villages, and as far as the eye can see there are the numbered real estate stobs, marking off fifty feet or less on an imaginary street for a building lot. Somebody suggested there were no longer any rabbits in Florida. They had all killed themselves running against real estate stobs. Evidently the stop-striker and the surveyor did a thriving business in the State of Florida during the days of the land boom. Then, there not being enough land in the State to satiate the greed of the dirt dealers and the folks outside who wanted lots here, the dealers got busy and spent millions and millions of dollars pumping and dredging sand and mud out of lakes, rivers, bays and gulfs to make more land, facing the water, you know, and making lots beautiful for residence. Why, if this writer had one-tenth of the money spent in land-making projects which were never completed, and so today are worthless, or even the cost of one-tenth of the machinery on these projects now abandoned and going to waste with weather and rust, he would have no financial troubles to worry about for the rest of his life, save that of paying his income tax if the millions thus accruing were put at legal interest. All of which leads to the conclusion that mankind thinks and acts in groups, and when the group goes wild, good-bye to individual judgment and sane decisions. During the boom days, Florida went wild, even the folks who had been sane previously and who are sane now, the days of their insanity and mad revelry of profits and losses having happily passed. When the imagination is fired and everybody about you is crazed with gain and the dream of fabulous achievement, it is difficult for the individual to think straight.

But Florida has learned her lesson, and is now developing her real resources. Real, permanent values are here all right—the value of a summer climate in the winter-time, for instance, and fresh vegetables when other soils not far away are frosted or frozen. This town of Orlando, the papers tell us, has had 10,000 tourists this season; and other Florida resorts have been equally blessed. And for the most part, these tourists go home happy and determined to return next season "if they live and keep their health."

In my last letter I spoke of the Seventh-Day Adventists and their ability to make and manage sanitariums. This is not the only capacity in which Adventists arise and shine. They believe in observing Saturday as a day of rest and worship instead of Sunday. Well, "believe me!" they put their profession into practice. Why, on "Sabbath" morning here you can tell before you leave your room that a solemn, sacred, holy day of rest has come. It is in the very atmosphere you breathe here, and the whole day is one of rest, worship, Bible study, prayer, preaching, and "real Sabbath observance." One really does not know what a sweet and blessed thing Sabbath observance is until one has fallen into an Adventist community or taken refuge in an Adventist sanitarium. I spoke to an Adventist about this, and the reply was: "You Sunday observers can't make of the day what Adventists make of Saturday, because you haven't the Bible on your side and the direct command to do so of the Lord God." Well, of one thing I am persuaded: if the rest of us could and would observe one day in seven as the Adventists do their Sabbath, this would be a different and a better, happier, healthier world to live in.

By the way, I went to Sabbath school this Saturday A. M. The secretary's report was the most marvelous I have ever heard. It was for the past quarter (three months). The offering every Sunday goes to missions—foreign missions. The past quarter they were sending it to Africa. Their goal for the past quarter was $700. They raised $760. The average attendance was about 130 pupils—not a wealthy person in the number; all wage-earners, many of them nurses and students in training, working to pay their way as they go. Look at this. Their conference asked them to set their goal the coming quarter at $500. They voluntarily voted to make it $600 for the quarter. This is just the offering contributed in their class collections, and has nothing to do with their tithe, which goes in another direction, nor the expense of running their school. This is their Sunday School offering for foreign missions. Is it any wonder that 120,000 of them last year—a number not as large as our own—contributed over $3,000,000 to foreign missions, while we Christians were contributing less than $75,000 from an income I know to be many-fold what theirs is. Again we say Seventh Day Adventists are certainly showing the rest of the Christian world how to keep one day in seven holy unto the Lord, and then how by paying a tenth into the Lord's treasury, they are ready and willing to give unto the Lord of their substance, as no other people of the earth are, that the gospel of our Lord may be carried to the peoples that wait in darkness till the light cometh.

The writer is ready, willing, anxious to go home and go to work. What abundant blessings have come to him these weeks! But this good physician says that I should have reserve strength and robust health, and so, at his suggestion, I tarry yet a few days in these pleasant quarters.

SPIRITUAL AND INTELLECTUAL RELIGION.

Religion changes in its experiences and in its activities. In the earliest times, it was evangelistic. In the latest times it means to be clear-minded and practical. At first it was a matter of faith; at present it is a matter of service. Like most great movements, it manifests itself in extremes. It is very emotional or very intellectual. The balance is the working of these together. Feeling and thinking both have their place in the kingdom of God upon earth; but one age boils over in shouts and the other in accurate sentences. To keep the two at their best, and neither gain the ascendancy, is a problem that needs solution. Christianity has suffered by these extremes and the relations they sustain to each other. A proper adjustment of the extremes of emotionalism and intellectualism is one of the problems for solution. These two elements in religious progress work in the pulpit and the pew. There has been no decision as to which of these is the more responsible for defects in the working of the gospel. No doubt, the matter has grown steadily in the change in preaching and in the expression of religion in the members of the Church.

Seventy-five years ago, ministers were not as well educated as they are today. They were possessed with a deep conviction as to their divine call to preach the gospel, and with limited college training and few books, they read the Bible carefully, spent much time in prayer, and presented the Word of God in simplicity and earnestness. There was more of the spiritual and the emotional in their sermons. There was nothing to shake their implicit faith in the Bible, and no attempt to answer criticisms of the Word of God. They preached "the Word" the best they could, and they believed what they preached. There was really more heart than head in the sermon, and it reached the heart of those who heard it. God was real to them. Jesus Christ was real to them. The Holy Spirit was real to them. Sin was real to them. Salvation was real to them. Religion was a real experience to them. Heaven and hell were real to them. Life was real and the Church was the house of God. The appeal was personal and loud, tears flowed freely from the eyes of the minister as he described the torments of the lost and the joy of the saved. Homiletics dealt with realities, both as to matter and people. The sermon was the chief thing in the Church. The preacher was respected by the people as no other man. He represented Jesus Christ and His ministry and was accepted as from God. He felt that he had failed if the congregation was not moved to crying and to tears. A pulpit ministry of that type was unique and spiritual in its results.

The other side of that period was the pew. People felt more deeply than they thought. Repentance followed conviction for sin. Regeneration was the word that was expressed in conversion. Shouts and confessions followed this heart experience. The singing was loud and full of feeling. When sinners professed to have found Jesus as their Saviour, members of the Church rejoiced, clapped their hands and shouted. The Church was full of emotional joy. Preaching has changed, singing has changed, the people have changed. The word then was regeneration. The word now is decision. Regeneration was a work of the Spirit. Decision is an act of the mind. There was more heart in religion then; more head in religion now. There was more Scripture in the sermon then; more learning in the sermon now. Religion then consisted more in what men felt then; now religion consists more in what they do. This is a progressive age, a business age, an active age.

What this age needs is more feeling and education that does not question the Bible, nor raise questions that even science cannot answer. Preachers read too many books and the Bible too little. They study too hard and pray too little. The people depend too much on what they give and what they do, and not enough on Jesus Christ. In many respects, present-day religion is better than the past; but the danger is that it will be too scholastic and too practical, and not enough of the spiritual and emotional. "The letter killeth, but the Spirit giveth life" (2 Cor. 3:6).

TWO OBJECTIVES.

There are two objectives utmost in the minds and hearts of missionary leaders at this time. The first is personal, and the second is social.

Personally, and as between persons, the missionary objective is summarized as sharing our experience of God through Jesus Christ with others. Our missionaries on the foreign field are willing to go further than this. They recognize that men and women who are adherents of non-Christian faiths have had an experience of God. They are anxious to share their experience of God with representatives of the non-Christian religions and to have them share their experience of Him with them. Always, however, the missionary feels that his experience of God through Jesus Christ is so much more satisfying than the experience of representatives of the non-Christian faiths that the sharing of experiences will lead non-Christians to accept the Christ-like view of God.

There is something fine and uplifting in this willingness to share the experience of God and in the missionaries' expectation that out of such co-operative effort to understand the mind and will and purpose of God, the Christian religion will come to occupy the place of primacy which we Christians have always felt Christianity is entitled to.

Socially speaking, the missionary objective aims at the Christianization of the community life, using the word "community" to embrace all the questions and issues involved in industry, in race, in internationalism, in education and in domestic relations. If there be any other realm in which the life of man functions or through which the life of man is influenced, then the missionary aim is to enter that realm also with its message of uplift and salvation.

These are great objectives. It takes a broad-gauged, great-souled Christian to comprehend them in their fullness. We may measure the spiritual achievement of the individual Christian as well as of the Christian institutions and organizations by the thrill and urgency which they experience in the presence of these two great objectives—the sharing of the experience of God as between man and man and the Christianization of the world's life.

NATIONAL DANGERS.

By REV. E. B. WHITE.

These days in which we live are days of special appeal and awful import. The air is all aquiver with intensity and issues of immeasurable concern. These perilous days call for the best there is in man in every way, and is satisfied with nothing but the best. Yes, this age demands the best thinking, the best acting, the cleanest speak-

Col. West Sees Dangers Ahead.

I had hoped to make some constructive suggestions for consideration at the Southern Christian Convention, but some of the suggestions already made, if adopted, would be so detrimental to the interest of the Convention that I am compelled to state briefly some things to which I am opposed.

I oppose merging of THE CHRISTIAN SUN with either the Herald of Gospel Liberty or with some Congregational paper.

With all our ups and downs, the Christian Church, South, is stronger today than at any time in its history, and is going forward slowly but surely. This applies to numerical strength, financial strength, ministry, laity, Church buildings and equipment, Sunday Schools and Young People's work, Orphanage, Christian education and colleges, support of aged ministers and mis-ing, the best character. This being true, it will be well for us to stop for serious thought on birth of this glorious republic—"the land of the free and the home of the brave"—the magnificent purposes that brought it into existence—the duty of American citizenship.

It will be well to remember that we stand, as a people, in the presence of a commanding history. Our past is a halo of glory, a veritable blessing to all mankind, but the true greatness of our republic, however, belongs not to yesterday, but to tomorrow. I am convinced that if our own glorious country, in its vastness, is to have a bond which shall so unite it that no North, and no South, no East and no West shall be known, that sacred bond must be a blazing enthusiasm for its glorious past, a profound belief in its future. And this enthusiasm must be born in the home, and fostered in schools and in every institution in our nation. I am confident that we will all agree that the strongest and most earnest patriots are those whose lives from the very beginning are steeped in, and sanctified by, the love of their country. Therefore, we must lay the foundations of vital religion and true patriotism deep in the hearts of our children, because the growing greatness of America depends upon the loyalty and virtue of our people. My friends, that has been our rock of safety in the past; it must be the corner-stone of our security in the future. Patriotism and piety are closely united.

My judgment is that our national prosperity and greatness (the development and progress of the American people have far surpassed anything in the history of the human race) came from the reverence paid the Holy Bible, the sacred observance of the Lord's Day, family religion, respect for law and order, co-operation and friendship. No honest, intelligent man will dispute this.

In this reckless, materialist age, these fundamental principles are being discarded nearly every where. America, possibly in all its history, never struck so perilous an hour as the present. Never was there a moment more full of deadly peril. We need to awaken to the perils that threaten our cities and our civilization in the widespread disregard for the old-time principles of integrity, virtue, and manhood. Today many seem willing to stifle conscience, lower ideals, and even forget them altogether, in order to satisfy some appetite or ambition. The trouble with men and women of this modern generation is they want to "see life" and "to know" life and get all there is out of life; but they fail to realize that they have sions. THE CHRISTIAN SUN is more responsible for the present condition than any other one thing. Let us cherish it, support and defend it. To stop its publication would be suicidal.

I oppose individual Church union with individual Congregational Churches.

I oppose union of the Southern Christian Convention with the Congregational or any other denomination. I favor union on a proper basis through the General Convention. I tire of this loose talk about union on most any basis. It makes us ridiculous in the eyes of other denominations, destroys the loyalty of our members to our own denomination, and makes them wonder if our Church leaders have any real convictions as to the need of our denomination and strong faith in its principles.

missed the highway which leads to worth-while living. What glorious experiences we poor mortals miss simply because we are not ready and willing to put God first. We are living so fast, so reckless, that many men and women in America are mentally, morally and spiritually out of breath. We are in peril of mere materialism.

Our civilization is in danger from devotion to wealth, fame, sensuality, excitement, unwholesome pleasure and ostentation, from its want of reverence and its want of sobriety. I am confident that this deplorable state of things is the product of our boasted modern civilization. Had our progenitors been men without heroic virtues; had they worshiped gold instead of God; had they banished the Bible and family religion and desecrated the Lord's Day—we had not endured as a nation. America was settled by men whose ideals and standards were Christian. We should rejoice in the Christian zeal and patriotic fidelity of those from whose hands we received this precious legacy. Let us emulate their valor and love of country. Christian citizenship is our greatest need.

In these days of outward show, and inward corruption, we seem to forget that Israel lost her glory and her greatness by forsaking the old-fashioned things of the Lord. Let us remember that the God of the Hebrews is the same Lord over all, and His word declares: "As for them whose heart walketh after the heart of their detestable things and their abominations, I will recompense their way upon their own heads" (Ezek. 11:21). God has not changed, and His methods of dealing with sinful nations have not changed. The mills of the gods grind slowly, but they keep grinding, and they grind very fine. God demands our love, our appreciation and our loyalty. No wonder He is grieved when we fail to respond. History teaches us that Christless civilizations crumble and collapse.

We are confronted today with gigantic and rapidly augmenting evils—economic, social, political and moral. Vice and crime and lawlessness run riot, and corruption and all manner of wickedness put on huge proportions, and endanger the peace and welfare of the people at large, and ultimately the permanence of our free institutions. Why all this? Simply because many people are hospitable to evil, open-handed to selfishness and greed, generous toward the lawbreaker and close-fisted with the law. It is reverence for purity, for law, for marriage, for family religion that needs constant emphasis. It is a world-wide need to—

SUFFOLK LETTER.

On Saturday, March 24, 1928, in company with J. M. Darden, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Davis and wife, we went to Hopewell, Va., to cut dirt for the new Christian Church. At 3 o'clock in the afternoon we met in their temporary place of worship for a special service, before going to the lot where the Church is to be erected. The house was well filled. Mr. and Mrs. Davis conducted a song service in which the congregation united heartily. Rev. D. D. Nash, their pastor; Rev. T. N. Lowe, pastor of Elm Avenue Christian Church, Portsmouth, Va.; Rev. O. D. Poythress, pastor of South Norfolk Christian Church, and this scribe were there. The occasion was also honored by the presence of Rev. W. S. Leak, pastor of the Baptist Church of Hopewell; Rev. James E. Cook, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Hopewell, and Rev. W. J. Baldwin, a Methodist evangelist. Rev. T. N. Lowe offered prayer, and Mr. J. M. Darden explained the purpose of the meeting and extended a cordial invitation to all present to attend the dirt-cutting at the lot where the new Church is to be erected. All three of the visiting ministers made friendly and helpful remarks, in which they made it plain that they welcomed the Christian Church into this growing city. They said that there were thirteen thousand people in Hopewell and only three thousand members of Churches in that city. There is room for this new Church and work enough to keep all the Churches busy. A word of greeting, such as these ministers brought, showed two things: first, that unity is in the Churches of that city; and, second, that no opposition will meet this young Church in Hopewell.

After this service ended, the crowd moved quietly to the sacred spot where the lines indicated where the house was to be built. The plans had been adopted, the contractor chosen, and the architect and builder were both there. The people assembled quietly; Sam Davis, the blind pianist, was led to the corner of the lot by Mr. Darden, and Davis, with his foot on the spade, his hand on the handle, and the eyes of the crowd on him, lifted the dirt as the first real step toward erecting this Church for the worship of God. The location seems to be well chosen, as fifty new homes are being erected in that vicinity. The city is growing in population and industries. One textile plant there now has thirty-eight hundred operatives; and the great nitrate plant will cost many millions and work many men. The new bridge over the Appomattox River, connecting Hopewell with Richmond, will put the city in close touch with the capital of the State. It will be an industrial city on a permanent scale and touching the historic James River.

The Church now has over a hundred members, the Sunday School equals the Church, and they have good singing. There is every reason to believe that, with proper care of the situation and continued faithful work on the part of the members of the Church, the Church may grow into a strong and useful organization. The temporary pastor, Rev. D. D. Nash, is rendering good service, and Bro. J. M. Darden is helping them in many ways.

W. W. STALEY.

ELON LETTER.

I write this in the midst of the Easter season. The Christian cannot think of Easter without thinking of the suffering Messiah; without thinking of the sacrificing Christ—and this brings to mind the place of suffering in human life and experience as well as in the divine economy.

One hesitates long to write on a theme with such involvements in life, and yet it is impossible for us to appreciate Christ and the blessings He has brought the world without in a measure understanding the place of suffering.

The original notion of suffering perhaps was punitive. According to this view, suffering is the consequence of wrong action, of sin. Every experience is the resultant of an antecedent cause, men are accustomed to think, and so it was inevitable that men should think of suffering as the reward of their misdeeds.

A second notion of suffering is that it should serve the purpose of warning; that we are in the wrong path; that we are trespassing against our own best interests; and that we should, therefore, about-face and avoid suffering. When the fire burns my finger, it is a warning to me to withdraw it to a place of safety. When I suffer from indigestion, it is a warning to me that I am eating the wrong kind of food or too much of it. I should regulate or change my diet in response to the pangs of suffering.

The third conception of suffering is that it should be reformatory. This is the modern purpose of imprisonment. The very word "penitentiary" means a place of penitence, and the purpose of imprisonment, in the view of modern penologists, should be to return prisoners to the society of their fellows fully restored to a proper social attitude and with an earnest purpose to live according to the requirements of the highest social living.

Still another view of punishment is that it is a challenge to improve the conditions under which it arises, and ultimately to abolish it entirely. Jesus had this in mind when He said, "Blessed are they who mourn, for they shall be comforted"—comforted by the removal of the causes of their suffering.

In response to this conception of suffering, men have sought remedies for the ills of the body and have constructed programs of social welfare for the alleviation and curing of the social order, and they hopefully look forward to the day when, with the causes of suffering removed, those who mourn will be comforted and suffering be done away.

Is there not, however, a real place for suffering in human experience? And is suffering always something that we should escape from? Is it a necessary evil or may it be a spiritual blessing?

We find the answer to our query in the type of suffering which our Master endured and in the purpose that animated Him in its endurance. He suffered for others. We sometimes speak of service as the highest expression of the Christian life, but do we not err in this? Is not the highest expression of the Christian life found in suffering? Is sacrifice not its chiefest and choicest expression, suffering and sacrifice for others, what we call vicarious suffering? We may cherish the thought that in some dim, far-distant day, suffering as punishment, suffering as mourning, suffering as reformation, and suffering as a challenge to remove the causes of suffering may disappear from the experience of men; but it will be a sad day for the spiritual life of man if vicarious suffering, or at least the willingness and disposition to suffer vicariously, should ever cease to be an animating purpose in the mind and heart and life of Christ's followers.

W. A. HARPER.

STUDENT VOLUNTEERS.

By DR. W. S. ALEXANDER.

Successful presentation of any difficult task is dependent upon many factors which must be coordinated and made to be co-operative. How to enthrone Christ in the heart life of mankind is the problem before the Church at all times. That element of the Church which has been most sensitive to the responsibility of carrying the gospel of Christ to those who have it not, met in conference at Detroit for the purpose of learning how that great needed work could be best promoted.

In the conference were those who had served long in the mission field. They brought valuable conclusions, based on first-hand knowledge of the field. Their experience enabled them the better to interpret actual situations, to sense the changes taking place, and to meet the demand of changing conditions. Outstanding representatives of Church boards who have been wrestling with the mission problems for many years were there to contribute their mature judgment. A new leadership in training was there to study the problem thoroughly and with its best wisdom to guide the movement. Young lives prompted by an inner urge to invest their best and their all in the mission service of the kingdom were there to gain a better knowledge of the work, share the enthusiasm of those similarly prompted, and co-operate as fully as they could in plans and programs resulting from the best information obtainable from all available sources.

The fruit of missionary effort was well represented. Nationals who had been converted to Christianity through missionary effort were there. Many of these were outstanding characters who were very appreciative of what missionary effort had accomplished. They were giving their lives as wisely as they knew how to further the cause. Their constructive criticism of missionary procedure was very helpful.

The one thing lamented above all else was the mistake quite universally made of interpreting Christ to foreigners through the medium of Western civilization. Missionaries have been slow to grasp the truth that the cause of Christ will best be served by disentangling Him from practices peculiar to the life of the West and implanting Him into the prevailing life and customs of those to whom they go. They are learning to live with the people and not for them. Fellowship with the people is emphasized, rather than a service handed down by a superior to an inferior.

Another great hindrance recognized by all nationals was the spirit of denominationalism. Mankind wants Christ, the whole Christ, and not some divisive interpretation of Christ. They plead for the impact of a united Church against the evils that prevail among them. They want Church unity in action and in effort. There is no dissatisfaction with Christ. The dissatisfaction that exists is that which arises from the superiority attitude and the denominational spirit. Christ-likeness will result from mutuality of effort, and is not to be looked upon as a commodity for export.

The half-hearted way in which Christians live their lives came in for severe criticism. Critical loyalty to the teaching and practice of the Christ was all that could satisfy the soul-hungry world. Nothing but absolute germineness could accomplish needed results. God-likeness must be possessed. Christianity is not to be looked upon as seasoning for life, but as the real bread and meat of life.

The Christ as He lived among men is the Christ the world is longing for. The sympathetic, forgiving, patient, suffering Christ who mingled with man for the purpose of uplifting Him. The East is not wanting the Christ shrouded in the garb of Western theology.

It is extremely difficult for the un-Christian world to understand how the professed followers of the Prince of Peace, who taught the brotherhood of man, can be sincere in their life-efforts when they war among themselves and assume the roll of superiority over other peoples.

The central characteristic of the teaching of Christ was humility. The highest opportunity is that of service. Too much have we assumed the roll of master. America must do her best to correct her wrongs and construct that which is good. Light and darkness do not mix; neither does righteousness mix with sin. God made it that way. We are either in sin or out of it.

Let us notice how God manifests the division that exists between the saint and the sinner. The children of Israel, though in Egyptian bondage, were permitted to live to themselves in what was known as the land of Goshen. When God plagued Egypt with a swarm of flies, no place in Egypt was free from them but Goshen, where God's people of God was manifested, that He might destroy the works of the devil. Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin, for his seed remaineth in him and he cannot sin because he is born of God. Notice the difference, "In this the children of God are manifested and the children of the devil." In Goshen were no flies, in Egypt were swarms of flies; in God's people are no sins, in the world many sins. Again God's people are to be separate in conversation or their manner of living. God said to Israel, through Moses, "Ye shall keep my statutes and judgments, and do them." No other people had a standard of morals equal to theirs. They were to carefully avoid the customs of the ungodly. God said unto them, "Ye shall not walk in the manner of the nations." Conformity to the world was forbidden. However approved of or desirable, or seemingly harmless, the sins of the ungodly were to be shunned. They were to be cautious in their selection of social enjoyments and indulgences. God said, "Ye shall put a difference between the clean and unclean."

God's people were not to satisfy their palates or tastes with any and everything that came along. Their tables were not to be spread with promiscuous viands or meats. God's wishes and words were to govern them in every enjoyment. In 1 Peter 1:14-16, we have the same teaching: "As obedient children, not fashioning yourselves according to the former lusts in your ignorance: but as He which hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation; because it is written, Be ye holy, for I am holy." The people of Israel were to be separate from the world, in that they were to be dedicated to God and His service alone.

In Num. 6:8, we have this language concerning the Nazarite: "All the days of His separation He is holy unto the Lord." The Nazarite dedirect her wrongs and construct that which is good.

Those missionaries in preparation who were privileged to attend the convention at Detroit were given such an insight into actual conditions and attitudes in the countries to which they hope to go that they cannot but be greatly aided in the work of preparation for their task. Missionaries are greatly needed and earnestly desired in all these lands, but the attitude of brotherly fellowship is demanded as it was never demanded before. The existing virtues of native peoples demand recognition from all who come to serve them.

SEPARATION.

BY REV. J. W. BARRETT.

The moment one becomes a Christian he separates himself from the world of sin and sinners. In the beginning, God divided the light from the darkness. He divided the waters from the waters. He divided the day from the night. As God dealt with light and darkness, the waters, and with day and night, so He deals in these days, spiritually speaking, with the Christian and the world. Moses gives us several illustrations in his writings. Let us consider some of them and their corresponding truths from the New Testament.

Let us call attention first to the separation God made in the beginning. "And God said, Let there be light," and there was light. And God saw the light that it was good. And God divided the light from the darkness, and God called the light day, and darkness he called night.

In the New Testament (2 Cor. 4:6), we have this Scripture: "For God who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ." Again (2 Cor. 6:15) Paul says: "For what communion hath light with darkness?"

God calls righteousness light and sin darkness.

were no flies. The difference was very manifest.

In the New Testament experience of salvation, the difference between salvation and sin is very manifest. God said to Pharaoh, I will put a difference between my people and thy people. The difference between Goshen and Egypt at this time was no flies in Goshen but flies in Egypt. In our day, God put a difference between His people and the people of the world. His people are saved, moment by moment, from sin, and the people of the world are in sin and sinful.

In 1 John 3:8-10, John says, "He that committeth sin is of the devil, for the devil sinneth from the beginning." For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that He might destroy the works of the devil. This was symbolized in His case by the uncut hair which is spoken of in verse 7 as the diadem of God on His head. In the Nazarite the uncut hair proclaimed the fact that He had dedicated Himself wholly, with all His powers, to the service of God. So our consecration to God must be unreserved to be acceptable. Divided service God rejects. He claims us entirely. The throne of our hearts must be given entirely to Him, or our consecration will not be acceptable to Him.

Paul says, "Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary.

THE AVERAGE MISSIONARY.

BY DR. A. D. WOODWORTH.

To a great many people the missionary is high and lifted up with a halo around his head. But when a man comes to the mission field he brings all his faults as well as all his virtues with him. Also all the faults and virtues of his wife. It may sound cruel to say it, but we have known of four missionaries, some of them considered the brightest and best, to fail morally and to be sent home. The fact that the average tenure of missionary life is only about seven years, shows that the men and women who make a life-work of missions are few. Sometimes the return is due to the consideration of the education of the children. Sometimes a child is sick and cannot recover in the Japanese climate. We have known several cases of incipient consumption that caused the return. We have known a case of persistent headache, due to the climate, which caused a return. We have known of a man who ruined his mind in the effort to swallow the language too quickly; but instead of swallowing the language, the language swallowed him. We knew a man who came out to teach Hebrew and Sanscrit, but found his boys so backward that they did not know English, and, of course, could not understand him. He stayed all of two years. We knew a man who was a famous baseball player—better at baseball than at religion. That kind does not wear. It seems that they forget what they came for.

In a number of cases, the missionaries could not get on with one another or with the Japanese, and some have put others out. The cause in some cases has been a fair-trigger temper, but in several cases the difficulty has been in doctrine. There have been other cases where overwork has produced insanity. We know of one mission which had two cases of this kind. But there were other cases where the misfit was so great that I have told my wife that such men and women ought to have been kept at home in the asylum. We have known of a case where the mother in the homeland felt that she had been robbed of her daughter which a mission board had sent out, and her insistent letters brought the daughter home. We know a mission which, because of several of the reasons given above, has a record of four years as an average for its missionaries.

Are these facts enough to discourage mission work? Not at all. One of the remarkable things which we have seen again and again is that of a missionary who, in spite of his imperfections and ignorance of the language, has gathered Japanese about him to form a live Church and an inspiring Sunday School. Some have come and gone, and others have taken their places. All the work which has been done had its beginning in that way. Those who have been familiar with what has been done in Japan are amazed at the changes which the gospel has wrought. The fact that a preacher fails in Japan or in America is nothing against the gospel. But during the time we have been in Japan and witnessed the gradual change in certain customs, largely because of Christian influence, the changes have been amazing. Years ago we could not go out on the street without hearing the children shouting in derision, "The father of the foreigner is a cat!" Perhaps, if they had said a monkey, that might have been satisfactory to the evolutionists. But we hear no such shouts now. The hatred of foreigners has died out, and also the hatred of the Christian religion. When we pass through the streets near our home on Sunday evening, it is common to see street-preaching bands from four different Churches out on the street and each preaching to a large and attentive street audience. Two Japanese of our vicinity have been going to a certain park for the last ten years to preach to the crowds that gather there, and sometimes they have three hundred in their audiences. Several of our Japanese preachers have failed and brought disgrace on themselves and their work, but the Japanese have been quick to see that such men are not true representatives of the teachings and the practices of Jesus and of His true disciples.

BUILDING NATIONAL CHRISTIAN LEADERSHIP.

PROGRESS IN FOREIGN MISSIONS.

One of the outstanding aims of our foreign mission effort is to build Christian character in the lives of our converts so that eventually these nationals may themselves carry the gospel to their fellow-countrymen. This is done through organizing Churches and encouraging them to support their own pastors on an increasing scale every year until they are able eventually to become entirely self-supporting. This picture represents still another advance step in training Christian nationals to assume responsibility in the conduct of Christian work in their own country. These men compose the National Christian Council of Japan, which has the general oversight of all Christian work being done in the Sunrise Kingdom. There are some missionaries on this council, but there are far more Japanese representatives, and each year more and more of the responsibility of the work is turned to them. Our own Christian Church co-operates in this work and has representatives on the council.

In spite of such defeats, the work goes on and gathers momentum as it goes.

It was quite a common thing when I was in America to say that, with all the experience I have had during the past thirty-five years, if I were a young man again I would make the best preparation possible and then ask to be sent to the neediest place in the world, if any one knows where that place is. But in every land there is a tremendous need of men and women of right heart to be the living epistles of Jesus Christ—men and women to let their light shine in the dark places of the earth. The need is that of men and women who are so infatuated with the glories of Jesus Christ as not to be daunted by any hardship or suffering, but who are glad to put their lives on the altar of the Lord, a living sacrifice. That is the life of unspeakable joy and, in the sight of God, the life that is truly worth while.

As was announced last week in the Notes and Personals, a group of our Christian people met with a group of leaders of the Atlanta Seminary—the Congregational seminary for the South, in Atlanta—to discuss the matter of that institution's removal to Elon College. The day was spent in fellowship and discussion, and the following motion was passed: "That the representatives of the Congregational and of the Christian Churches, with reference to the union of Elon College and the Atlanta Theological Seminary, regard the proposition with favor, and authorize the presidents of these two institutions to work out and to submit to their respective boards of trustees a definite scheme for the proposed union." This is not the first time that theological seminaries have found it feasible to unite with institutions of learning offering Christian training in the field of higher education. It is now for the trustees of these two institutions to act, and then for their general Church bodies to take such action as in their judgment is wise.

day. It must begin in our hearts. It is indeed important that we "exercise ourselves unto godliness." There is but one standard of right living, and that is found in the Sermon on the Mount.

Our blessed Lord says that on us the duty is laid of manifesting our Heavenly Father's glory. "Let your light so shine that men may see your good works and glorify your Father who is in heaven." We who strive and struggle for the things that perish, we who set our minds and hearts on the things temporal instead of the things eternal, our danger is in furnishing an inadequate impression to the world of Jesus Christ. Fame and honor have held the attention of many. People strive to get their names before the public, and yet some who have been most noted in their lives have been most unsatisfied, and their lives have been barren and unfruitful. What, then, is the greatest thing in life? Jesus said: "The greatest thing in life is the kingdom of God, which is righteousness and peace and joy." This is greater than riches, greater than fame and honor. Here is something that is permanent, something that is durable.

The man or woman who counts most is he or she who tries to live up to some high ideal, who treasures up holy truths, and lays up heavenly treasures, and whose hand is most charitable.

The world needs the leadership of those who live the strong, clean, pure, courageous Christian life. We who love God, our country, our flag, and civic righteousness, should never give our support to these who make money and seek popularity by sneering at goodness and scoffing at moral ideals and standards. My ballot is myself. What it supports, I, therefore, endorse, and for the evils which it supports I make myself responsible. We must not commit moral suicide for political victory. We must put loyalty to civic righteousness above party loyalty. We must dethrone the corrupt politician and enthrone men of dependable character, those who represent the highest ideals of Americanism.

If civic righteousness prevails, if graft in high places is overthrown, if the tidal wave of vice, corruption, intemperance and dissipation that threatens our young manhood and womanhood of our land and imperils our destiny as a nation; if these evil forces are going to be defeated, it will be done by and through the religion of Jesus Christ. Yes, there is only one remedy for the confusion, ruin and unrest of the world, and that remedy is provided, and can be found in the gospel of Christ, which is the power of God unto salvation. It is the only permanent remedy. The nations and the peoples must turn to God or hasten to ruin.

We should believe, walk and dwell in Him. For He is the foundation of all that is noblest and best in our lives. The only safety in these perilous times upon us is sincere faith in our Redeemer. Look to Jesus only. He alone can save and bless us.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

Lesson IV—April 22, 1928.

JESUS AND THE HOME.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Eph. 6:1-9.

Teaching as to Divorce.

Pharisees came to Jesus and, in an effort not to obtain instruction but to entangle Him, put to Him this much-disputed question: "Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife?" As later in their question about the tribute money, so here they thought that whichever way He answered they would have a case against Him. If He said "yes," He would offend the Jews who believed in the teaching of Rabbi Jochanan, who said, "The putting away of a wife is odious"; if He said "no," he would be opposing the teaching of many rabbis (see Light from Oriental Life) and would offend Herodias (for Herod had put away his own wife and married Herodias), the wife of his brother, while the latter was still living, and her fury might cause him to share the fate of John the Baptist.

As was his frequent custom, Jesus referred them to their law: "What did Moses command you?" he questioned. "Moses suffered to write a bill of divorcement, and to put her away," they replied.

Passing by the permission of the human law-giver, Jesus announced that God had ordained one wife for one husband, and what He had joined together man should not put asunder. "What God hath joined together"—granting that, there would be little hesitance in agreeing with the rest of the sentence. Indeed, we should readily go further and say that "those whom God hath joined together" not only ought not to be 'put asunder,' but cannot be 'put asunder.' Jesus, however, was not speaking of the ideal marriage, such, for example in modern times, as Charles Kingsley's and Robert Browning's. An Intimate of many lives and Guest in many homes, Jesus knew that the average marriage was far from ideal. In this connection, one recalls His talk with the Samaritan woman at the well. Would He, then, compel husband and wife to live together as such after one of them had violated what is almost universally regarded as the essence of the marriage contract?

Blessing Children.

Very familiar are the pictures representing Jesus surrounded by little children. On one occasion parents brought their children to Jesus as they were wont to bring them to the rabbis in the synagogues, to have Him take them in His arms and bless them.

The disciples rebuked the parents. "We are not to understand that the disciples used dignified and polite language. What the Greek word means is that they chided, scolded them, rating them for their forwardness and presumption in intruding themselves upon their Master's notice" (Samuel Cox). Since no devout Jew would have objected to a child's approach to a rabbi, this action on the part of the disciples seems strange. Perhaps Luke's words that they were 'bringing unto Him "even their babes," explains the disciples' attitude; they thought their Master already too thronged by men, women and children without the addition of the babes.

Jesus rebuked the disciples. "Suffer the little children to come unto me," He said; "forbid them not: for to such belongeth the kingdom of God." The kingdom of heaven, the reign of God over men, belongs to the child-like believers, those who possess many qualities characteristic of childhood.

"We wander wide in doubtful ways,
Our eyes of faith are dim;
The child is freshest from God's hand,
And nearest unto Him."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Sunday, April 22, 1928.

TOPIC: "Why and How Should Christians Support the Eighteenth Amendment?"—Exod. 21:28, 29; Prov. 23:29-32.

Some Bible Hints.

There is no "accidental death" from alcohol. It has destroyed people from time immemorial (Exod. 21:28).

Here is the principle that condemns the liquor traffic. It is dangerous to human life and has no compensations (Exod. 21:29).

The liquor traffic has brought more woes to men than all the wars that have ever been fought; nothing but woes (Prov. 23:29).

It is good advice not to look at the wine; it is better to remove the wine so that it cannot be looked at. Get at the cause (v. 31).

Suggestive Thoughts.

Support the amendment because it is a moral, not a political issue. Support it in the name of decency, clean and sane living.

Support the amendment because it is the law of the land. Those who violate it show that they have no respect for law. They are the real anarchists, dangerous citizens.

Support the amendment because it protects our young people. Millions of young people, because of it, have never seen a saloon. It is a slander to claim that they are drinkers.

Support the amendment because it is succeeding. The better it succeeds, the louder the wets cry for its abatement. It has reduced liquor drinking by 95 per cent, authorities say.

A Few Illustrations.

The wets are fighting the battle of the devil. That is good reason for fighting them. They are lawbreakers, and they must be broken.

Support the amendment by reporting liquor sales in drug-stores and speakeasies if you know of them. But be sure of having the proof. The booze-seller deserves no mercy.

We must give our personal support. There are many who would like to drink occasionally who, nevertheless, refuse to do so because they want to obey the law. Are they right?

Irving Fisher's book "Prohibition at Its Worst," shows that the good things that prohibition has done for America cannot be counted; they are so many and so great. In every sphere.

To Think About.

How is the prohibition law kept or broken in our community?

How is keeping the prohibition law a test of good citizenship?

Should we report violations of the law? Why?

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION FIELD NOTES.

Some of the Churches in the Southern Christian Convention have used the leaflet "Rally Day to Easter" with their young people and found the suggestions helpful. The Young People's Department of our Church has just issued another leaflet called "Easter to Rally Day," which gives suggestions for worship, study, play and service for young people's groups from April through September. Copies may be had free of charge.

Many young people's groups—Christian Endeavor Societies, Missionary Societies, and organized classes—will be interested in the new leaflet of "World Friendship Programs" which has been prepared by the Department of Christian Education and Missions. It has eleven programs, with splendid suggestions for each. Price 10 cents. Order from the writer.

The Elon and Bethlehem Summer School programs are now ready for publication. Both programs have been planned to include instruction, recreation, worship and fellowship. Notice THE CHRISTIAN SUN for programs and further notice.

MOTHER-DAUGHTER WEEK.

"Mother and Daughter Week" begins with Mothers' Day and continues through the following Sunday, which has been used in a number of places as "Daughters' Day." This year, "Mother and Daughter Week" will come May 12th to 20th. Suggestions for mother and daughter banquets, special meetings for the week, songs, and so forth, may be ordered from the Board of Religious Education. It is hoped that a much larger number of Churches will observe "Mother and Daughter Week" than ever before.

The purpose of the week has been stated by the International Council of Religious Education as follows:

"1. To give the mother a better understanding and appreciation of her daughter, and to give the daughter a better understanding and appreciation of her mother, so that, in spite of the differences in thought and experience between the two generations, they may genuinely share life with each other.

"2. To help both mothers and daughters to find in the Church and Church school a channel for the expression of their finest selves, thus securing, in the work and support of the Church, their co-operation.

"3. To bring to a focal point the community-wide interest in mother and daughter relationships."

Some Women's Bible Classes or an organized Young People's Class might promote interest in the observance.

Henderson, N. C. Field Secretary.

Christianity is not worth the snap of your finger, brotherhood is a fiction, sonship with the Eternal is a myth, unless it makes men love men. To put the matter more concretely, unless you and I love men and do by them as we would that they should do by us, we are not the sons of God.—Alexander Lewis.

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.

Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
One of Our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"Call upon me, and I will answer thee, and shew thee great and mighty things, which thou knowest not."—Jeremiah 33:3.

"WHAT WILT THOU HAVE ME TO DO?"

"If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me."—Matt. 16:24.

Does it follow that if we do not deny ourselves we cannot be followers of Him?

Peter had just confessed that Jesus was the Son of the living God and vowed his loyalty to Him. Jesus had blessed him with the power of the keys of heaven. Jesus then, in a sentence, instructed him in heaven's fundamental philosophy, viz: if you are unwilling to sacrifice to achieve the goal, you are not of me; you are a hindrance to me, and that is devilish.

One day a man said, "I do not intend to deny my wife and children anything for the support of the Church. They come first." What would Jesus say? Repeat the text.

My friends, we are not our own. We are bought with a price. We are saved by His blood. God has the right of our souls. The man who makes a watch has the right to demand of it the time of day. To live for God this way means sacrifice daily. We must crucify ourselves on many a cross for the sake of others. To be self-centered and unsacrificial means to speak as we please, to do what seems best for us means to take liberties and pleasures that gratify us. That is Satanic, wholly unlike Christ. Our daily attitude should be: "Lord, what wilt Thou have me do?" and know that he who would secure great results must go through great self-denial.

Prayer.—Our Father, teach us how to make first things first. Reveal to us Thy will today and enable us to be humble and do that. Forbid that we shall neglect the Church for feelings or weather, or dislikes of any kind. And as we bow in prayer may we love the Spirit and worship Thee in spirit and truth. Amen.

SAYING GOOD-BY TO SELF.

"And when he came to himself."—Luke 15:17.

We are ourselves only when obeying our higher and nobler impulses, and we think less of ourselves when we see ourselves as others see us. Our most valuable experience is when we come to ourselves so that we may see ourselves as we are. It is then, and then only, that we arise to achieve.

That the prodigal came to himself was the most fortunate arrival of this misguided youth, for it enabled him to see himself and inspired him to restoration to a father's heart, replacing him in home comforts, domestic joys, and real living, where he sustained the proper relation of his father.

The prodigal had early training which gave him a well-wrought foundation and which gave him a pre-established harmony with his father, so that when he decided to give up pursuit of pleasure, when he decided to stop ministering to his flesh, when he sought no more to gratify himself, when he decided to give leadership to the father's will, he found the greatest pleasures he had ever known. At home he found soul-culture. He now sees wherein he was mad, and he wonders that it was possible. There is only one answer; that is, he had not been himself. He had deserted all that would bring him success and happiness. That is a parable of our way to God. Any prodigal may come. But why should one come from the depths? Can't we, from childhood, grow in grace and forestall a bad past? I think we can.

Prayer.—Our Father, help us to keep our hearts open to Thy presence. May we cultivate the listening habit. May we never forsake Thy house nor Thy way. May we study to know the higher and nobler calls of life and forbid that we shall ever turn our backs upon our better selves. Amen.

Lesson: Acts 14:1-28.

1. Paul drew the attention of the people not by his learning, but by his vision of God.
2. Salvation is the one message of the gospel.
3. The gospel does two things: It stirs up the bad and it also stirs up the good.
4. Kind looks and deeds constitute the best defense any time.

5. Conversion and growth in grace are two things. The one is the gate to the kingdom, and the other growing in strength of character by trial, persecution, etc.
6. Success crowns faithful labors. Bad men may hinder, but they cannot destroy.

Prayer.—Dear Father, Thou hast promised to be with us unto the end of the world. We need Thee. We need a vision of Thyself. Oh, keep us in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on Thee. Amen.

THURSDAY.

A PROPHET IN THE WINE-PRESS.

"Moab . . . hath not been emptied from vessel to vessel, therefore his taste has remained in him."

The way of extracting juice from the grape and perfecting good wine was to empty from one vessel into another until by the fermenting and pouring-off process the best refined wine was obtained.

This is God's figure for refining the soul. At home, Elijah was in the grill-press, where he went through much bitterness, hard times and much suffering, but where, out of the same, he grew zealous for the Lord. God said that Moab had not had the wine-press.

Out of this experience, Elijah was able to stand before the king and point out his sins; he was able to command Divine provision in starvation, fight for the victory at Carmel, and endure to the end all because he stood daily before the Lord ("before whom I stand"); because he "acknowledged God in all his way"; because at all times he was obedient to God's voice; because he sought to be what the Lord wanted him to be; because of his appalling faith—and in so being, his life was filled with a passion for the glory of God and forsook anything that was necessary to keeping him steadfast in all these. Can we?

Prayer.—Our Father, we desire to live in Thy presence. We desire the consciousness of it as our overmastering thought. May we dwell in Thy absorbing vision. We open our souls to Thee. Fill our every capacity. Show us the way wherein we should walk. Amen.

FRIDAY.

GOD EVERYWHERE.

"Their God is a god of the hills."—1 Kings 20:22-23; Acts 17:27 (R. V.).

Benhadad and his soldiers could not understand their defeat. Picked men of the Syrian army had been sent scurrying by an inferior force of Jewish warriors. After much study of the situation, Benhadad and his counselors gave this dictum: "The God of these Jews is a god of the hills; therefore, we erred when we fought them in the highlands. Next time we will battle in the plains."

So the next struggle was forced in the low country. Again Benhadad was routed. Now, through humiliating experience, it was learned that the God of the Jews was as powerful in the plains as He had been in the hills. Benhadad was nonplussed. Like all the pagans of that far-off day, he believed there were many gods, each deity with power in only one locality. Reflect a moment, however. Do we not all, at some time in our experience, fall into a similar blunder? Recently a Christian girl who had lived on an extensive plantation in the South, turned to the metropolis for study. "My grasp on God is being tested," she wrote to the mistress of the parsonage. "At home, God seemed near and personal; but here, in the tumult of the city, how can even God keep in mind so many hurrying millions? I seem so small; the universe so large!"

This young woman came to appreciate the attitude of ancient Benhadad. She has learned since, however, that even the sparrows are known to Him; so she is happy again. It is truly a great and complex world; but our God and our Saviour are more than equal to the task.—Rev. John Harrison Allen.

Prayer.—By one of the parents, asking for an increase of faith, and that we may have the happy assurance of the Father's closeness to each one of us.

SATURDAY.

WHEN FAITH LEADS THE WAY.

"If ye will not believe, surely ye shall not be established."—Isa. 7:7-14.

About 270 years before the birth of our Saviour, seventy learned men, in a great city in Egypt, gave to believers in their own tongue a Greek translation of the Holy Scriptures, known and loved as the Septuagint, and it is the Old Testament portion of the Bible in use by the Greek Church today. Turning to our motto-verse as given in this translation, we read: "Unless ye believe, ye shall not understand." In the margin of our dependable King James' Version we have this: "Do ye not believe? It is because ye are not stable."

These different ways of putting the thought of the Hebrew prophet are only varied facets cut on the same diamond of truth by divinely used workmen who sought to bring out the beauty and the meaning of the inspired Word. The teaching which the verse has for us is clear. It tells us that if we would enter the broad and ever-ripening fields of knowledge, faith—the daughter of reason—must first let us in through her gate. For the discoveries of truth are apt to be along the avenues where faith leads the way. She, with torch in hand, conducts the sons of truth to truth's true source in God.

What music for the heart is in these words of Jesus: "I have not found so great faith; no, not in Israel." "Only believe!" "All things are possible to him that believeth." The demand of Thomas, "Except I shall see in His hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and thrust my hand into His side, I will not believe," is met by the challenge of Jesus, "Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands; and reach thy hand, and thrust it into my side," but there is the caution, "and be not faithless, but believing."—Rev. J. Thos. Foster.

Prayer.—By one of the parents, asking that our faith may be strengthened, and that with its

Dear Friends:

Our good women are very kind to us indeed, and to make Easter a happy occasion for our children they have sent to us the following: The Ladies' Missionary Society, Wadley, Ala., 4 dresses, 3 suits, 47 towels, pants, socks, aprons; Miss Dora Ballentine, 1 dress; Mrs. C. V. Dunn, 2 dresses; Women's Missionary Society, Wadley, Ala., 4 yds. dress goods, 1 dress, socks, second-hand clothing, etc.; Women's Missionary Society, Ingram Church, Va., 6 new dresses; Women's Missionary Society, Burlington Church, 600 candy eggs for Easter; ladies of the Christian Church, North Manchester, Ind., 1 box clothing; Golden Rule Class, Raleigh, 1 box clothing for Velna Dorsett; Ladies' Missionary Society, Bethel Church, Mansfield, Ill., 15 second-hand dresses, 12 new dresses; Women's Missionary Society of Leaksville Church, Valley Va. Cent. Conf., 30 doz. hen eggs for Easter.

Easter has been a happy occasion for a number of years for our children, and our good women make it possible by their thoughtfulness. They have received many pretty little dresses and 600 candy eggs and thirty dozen hen eggs, and the superintendent has promised them ice cream, and the matrons have killed enough hens to supply all the tables for Easter Sunday dinner. We have a fine crowd of children now, and to get them from all sections as we do, I believe they will compare well with any school in our county. We have one little girl that is leading the whole school in making "excellent" in all her studies.

We have one in the graduating class this year. And many others are making splendid grades. who is standing right at the head of his class. We are proud of our boys and girls.

SUNDAY.

FAITH SURMOUNTS AFFLICTION.

"The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away."—Job 1:20-22.

That is a pathetically sad picture, as the imagination paints it, of the man of Uz in the radiance of a day of Arabian summer, receiving the messengers as they arrive one after the other. For a moment, the old patriarch is stunned and well-nigh overwhelmed. He had thatched his house of life in the calm days, and now that the tempest had come, he was prepared to meet it. "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away"—that was his doctrine. He still held fast to his faith in the divine wisdom and justice.

All adversity is not God's heavy hand. We ourselves are responsible for many of our tears. A great sufferer, in trying to account for her days and nights of pain and weariness, wailed, "Oh, the sins of my youth! The sins of my youth!" "Whosoever soweth to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption," said Paul, and no law ever worked with more terrible accuracy.

But often adversity is the heavy hand of God. It paints dark backgrounds and deep shadows. "The Lord hath taken away!" That has grown into the consciousness of the Christian world. Even when His children make their own tears, God seems to assume a kind of responsibility, and His hand of love transmutes them into living pearls of light.—Rev. A. J. Reynolds.

Prayer.—By one of the parents, asking that in the days of trial and suffering we may look with assurance to Him who is both all-wise and all-just, and who, if we ask Him in faith, will come to our aid and help us to bear our burden.

WHAT THE CHURCH HAS TO OFFER.

BY REV. CHARLES STELZLE.

The Church brings an authentic message concerning God which leads to the secret of all worthwhile living. It recognizes the universal hunger for God, and the possibility of communion with Him. It reveals God as a living, personal force. It offers a partnership with God in the completion of the task of perfecting the world.

The Church offers acquaintanceship with the great men of the past. In the lives of prophets and heroes and in the life of Jesus Christ, the Church holds up the ideals by which character and achievement must be measured. In the call to help build the kingdom of God on earth, the Church presents the purpose which gives deeper meaning to everything men do. It releases, through human lives, the transformed power of God. It gives men a long view of life—from the great civilization of the past to the great eternities.

The Church offers a fellowship with the great host of believers throughout the world. It gives an opportunity to work with other men for the cultivation of the spiritual life and for increasing the stock of goodness in the world. It offers membership in an organization which thinks in terms of world relations. It is the oldest and most honorable organization in existence. There is no government or business or society or alliance of interests that touches so many people in so many ways as organized religion. In spite of its acknowledged weaknesses, the Church is the best institution that has ever been founded upon this earth. No other organization of any character whatsoever can compete with it in earnest and inspiring loyalty on the part of its members.

The Church offers a comradeship of worshipers. While it urges private devotion, it brings men together so that they may receive the inspiration which comes from united worship; and to this end it provides a vast storehouse of aids so that men may "practice the presence of God." This comradeship is the greatest brotherhood in existence. It includes all humanity, regardless of its rank, or creed, or color, or economic condition. It embraces all classes of men, from the humblest penitent to the most gifted saint.

The Church offers to men the most inspiring task in the world. It gives them a view of life which lifts them out of themselves and relates them to vast purposes. It has a world-wide program of social adjustment, sanctioned and empowered by religion. It offers modern men a fighting chance in the great struggle to improve the conditions of life here on earth. It asks men to devote their best talents, their keenest wisdom, and their highest genius in making this world what it ought to be.

The Church offers the greatest moral adventure in human experience. It gives a program for personal living; a social passion that will build a new social order; a vital contact with the great elements of culture; a faith that destroys all fear; a source of power unparalleled; a place of leadership for every man who possesses real ability; an assurance of ultimate victory.

The Church offers comradeship with Jesus in all the affairs of life. It gives men a clearer understanding of the mind of Christ. It is through Christ that they come to know God. The steady discipline of intimate friendship with Jesus results in men becoming like Him.

The Church offers to men a solution of the problem of sin. It offers comfort and strength when trials come and sorrows weigh upon the heart; an enlargement of life's meaning; guidance in life's endeavors, and an assurance of life's outcome. It offers a message of courage and hope; the gift of wisdom in time of perplexity; the assurance of perfect peace; emancipation from ignorance through the truth which makes all men free, and the power of eternal life.

I am very happy to report to THE SUN some of the things that the people are doing over here. We were very glad to have Bro. J. M. Darden and Mr. and Mrs. Sam Leonard Davis with us at both Antioch and Isle of Wight Christian Churches on last Sunday, April 1st. Mrs. Davis gave a very impressive talk on "The Bible and Missions." Mr. Davis presided at the piano. The music was beautiful; the song service good.

We are rejoicing over the fact that our people are beginning to see the need of missions. They went over the top and raised their mission quota, the amount equal to one-sixth of the pastor's salary. May the Lord continue to bless us and help us to see that the fields are white already unto harvest.

Bro. Darden spoke at Isle of Wight in the afternoon. His message, as usual, was good and to the point—"Why I Believe in Missions." He gave us some of the facts that have been wrought out of missionary work done in our own denomination, and others also. Bro. Davis played the piano while Mrs. Davis conducted the song service. We are glad to report that the quota was raised here also. I believe there is a great future for any Church that believes in missions strong enough to support missions in a substantial way. May God bless and give us greater missionary zeal, that the gospel message of Jesus may be carried into lands where they know not the Saviour.

After a delay of several weeks, work is to be resumed on the Bethel Church and pushed to completion. Excavation has been done and the funds are in hand for the installation of a furnace at the Mt. Olivet Church, Greene County. Through the efforts of the Ladies' Aid Society, the windows toward the adjoining school grounds have been equipped with strong screens.

The Whistler's Chapel Church has received a gift of a beautiful walnut pulpit. The donation stirred the members to make other improvements. A platform has been built, the Church painted inside, the pews stained and the grounds improved.

A committee has been appointed at High Point, where I am supplying, to select a place for a new Church to take the place of the one recently burned.

The writer assisted in organizing Sunday Schools at St. Peters and East Liberty on March 25th. The following officers were selected: East Liberty—C. L. Kite, superintendent, and Miss Gertrude Monroe, secretary; St. Peters—E. W. Daniel, superintendent; C. W. McCoy, assistant superintendent; Miss Leona Rion, secretary. Sandy Bottom organized their Sunday School March 25th, with June Conner as superintendent; John Haney, assistant, and George W. Shiflett, secretary.

A meeting was held at Whistler's Chapel March 11th, in which six of my nine regular Churches were represented by committees or letters. The meeting was to arrange for the paying of the rent of a parsonage. All of my Churches except one have taken steps to co-operate in the movement. The writer deeply appreciates this spirit of co-operation and loyalty on the part of his congregations.

The central committee elected to have the management of the fund consists of R. L. Ettel, who is largely responsible for the movement; Mrs. Mahlon Clem, and J. A. Kagey.

SEPARATION.

touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you." Again Paul says, "And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly. And I pray God your whole soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." God's people are an isolated people. God says in speaking of His people, "Lo, the people shall dwell alone and shall not be reckoned among the nations."

Once they were in bondage, groaning under oppression, but now in the service of God, and heirs of the world to come. The Red Sea is crossed and rolls between them and their persecutors as an iron wall. They were forgiven and redeemed with their backs on Egypt. A people saved by the Lord were they. So with the people of God today, their ransom has been paid with the precious blood of Jesus Christ. They have been plucked from death and the grave because another has died and risen for them. To that other One they belong, not to themselves or the world. Separated unto Him and His service are they. The separation we are writing about means entire consecration. God said to His people, through Moses, "Thou shalt not wear of divers sorts, as of woolen and linen together. A Christian is to wear only the robe of righteousness. Some one has said, "Whoever forbids my robe (righteousness) forbids my presence. We are not to dress in imitation of the world. These laws in the writings of Moses were made to set forth how God abhors all mixture in religion. Sin and salvation will not mix. Paul says, "Put off the old man, with his deeds, and put on the new man, the Lord Jesus Christ."

Now, let us notice briefly the separation which comes into our lives through sanctification. God said to the children of Israel, "Thou shalt not plow with an ox and an ass together. The ox being stronger than the ass, their pulling would be unequal. The stronger drags aside the weaker, and the weaker impedes the progress of the stronger." It is said, "Unequal yokes make bad plowing and crooked furrows." Amos asks a striking question in this connection: "Can two walk together except they be agreed?" Again Paul says, "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers." Carnality and spirituality will not agree. They cannot live together agreeably in business, in the home, nor in the heart. "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." They are so entirely different that to serve the one you must separate entirely from the other.

The religious activities organization of our college has decided to have a group of students give evangelistic messages to their fellow-students, one each week for the next four weeks. This is a capital idea, and we feel sure that great good will result from the heart-to-heart talks of these earnest Christian young people to their fellow-students. We note with pleasure the growing Christian interest and concern manifest on the Elon campus.

MORGAN.

Mrs. Eugenia C. Morgau died at her home, Suffolk, Va., March 31, 1927, aged 68 years. The funeral services were conducted at Holy Neck Church on the 2nd of April by the writer, assisted by Drs. W. W. Staley and H. S. Hardecastle. The music was furnished by a quartet from the Suffolk Christian Church. Mrs. Morgan leaves the following children: William Lebbens, Rocky Mount, N. C.; Mrs. J. J. Harlette, Suffolk, Va.; Spurgeon Hurley, Chicago; Aubrey Foy, Suffolk, Va.; Virgil Rochelle, Philadelphia; Joseph Carleton, Philadelphia, Pa.; Lucius Pierre, Elizabeth City, N. C.; Omar Hilhard, Philadelphia; Jephtha Seth, Suffolk, Va.; Vivian Clarence, Salisbury, N. C.; Mrs. G. C. Gatling, Gates, N. C., and Miss Annie Eugenia, Suffolk, Va. She also leaves fifteen grandchildren.

The deceased was the widow of the late L. H. Morgan, and daughter of Dempsey B. and Annie Rawles Jones, of Nansemond County, Va. She became a member of Holy Neck Church in early life and remained faithful and devoted until her death. For many years she had been sorely afflicted and endured intense sufferings which she bore with a Christian fortitude rarely seen. Love and devotion to her Lord was the supreme passion of her life and was manifest in every phase of her life. Tender and self-sacrificing in the home, kind and generous to her neighbors, compassionate and helpful to the unfortunate, with love and loyalty to her Church and with an unflinching faith in God she lived a life glorious in victory over the world and in the "fruit of the Spirit."

N. G. NEWMAN.

HORTON.

Elizabeth Horton departed this life on March 23, 1928, aged 84 years and 19 days. She had been a member of the Christian Church at New Hope, in Franklin County, N. C., for near forty years. During her last illness I was told that she would shout and praise God for nearly an hour at a time. She was a ripe shock and ready to be garnered. She leaves to mourn their loss two daughters and one son. God bless the bereaved. Funeral and burial services conducted by the writer.

BETHLEHEM COLLEGE

WADLEY, ALABAMA

A JUNIOR COLLEGE AND HIGH SCHOOL.

Where Opportunity Awaits the Student of Very Limited Means.

GIRL'S DORMITORY.

Bethlehem College, Wadley, Ala., will open September 5, 1927. This institution is a Junior College and High School, which is co-educational, where scholarship ranks high and expense is low. It is thoroughly Christian, absolutely non-sectarian, and vitally American. A school where opportunity awaits the student of very limited means—$68.00 pays all college expenses, except books, board and room. Board, $15.00 per month, and room $3.00; total expenses for a term of nine months, $250.00.

Bethlehem College is training some of the best stock of America for Christian leadership, to be used by the nation and the world. Here is a great challenge and asset for students who wish to prepare themselves to serve in a worth-while way. The work on the new Administration Building is progressing nicely, and we will be able to begin our college work in this building when school opens this fall.

CHURCH UNION COMMISSION REPORTS

The undersigned representatives, appointed from the Commission on Interchurch Relations of the Congregational Churches and the Commission on Christian Unity of the Christian Church, believe that the hour has come when, in the interest of the kingdom of God and of the larger usefulness of their respective denominations, these two communions should immediately take steps toward an organic union.

We, therefore, recommend to our respective commissions and, through them, to the National Council of Congregational Churches and to the General Convention of the Christian Church:

1. That each of them, at the earliest possible date, take action endorsing an organic union between the Congregational and Christian Churches.

2. That the basis of this new relation shall be the recognition by each group that the other group is constituted of the followers of Jesus Christ. Each individual Church and each group of Churches shall be free to retain and develop its own form of expression. Finding in the Bible the supreme rule of faith and life, but recognizing that there is room for wide differences of opinion among equally good Christians, this union shall be conditioned upon the acceptance of Christianity as primarily a way of life, and not upon uniformity of theological opinion or any uniform practice of ordinances.

3. That the autonomy of each local congregation and the right of each individual member to follow Christ according to his own conscience shall remain undisturbed.

4. That the United Church shall, for the time being, be called "Congregational-Christian," allowing each local Church to continue the use of its present name if it so desires.

5. That as soon as this proposal shall have been ratified by the official bodies of the two organizations, a committee of equal number from each communion, adequately representative of each denomination, shall be appointed to study the whole situation carefully and to recommend a plan for the complete unification and management of their enterprises and program of work. In the meantime, every possible step should be taken by the two commissions to promote mutual acquaintance among the two constituencies and to canvass the practical questions involved in a merger.

6. That as soon as possible after the joint committee provided in the preceding paragraph is ready to report, a general convention, including the two bodies, shall be arranged, at which the report of the committee shall be acted upon. For this joint convention the executive committees of the two denominations shall make all arrangements.

7. The commissions recognize that numerous practical details will be involved. They are confident, however, that, being united in purpose, no insuperable obstacles will appear, and therefore propose that the two bodies go forward in mutual confidence.

FRANK K. SANDERS,
CHARLES E. BURTON,

For Commission of Interchurch Relations.

These recommendations have now been approved by the Commission on Christian Unity of the Christian Church. The members of this commission are Dr. F. G. Coffin, Iowa City, Iowa; Dr. L. E. Smith, Norfolk, Va.; Dr. R. C. Helfenstein, Dover, Dela.; Dr. W. H. Denison, Dayton, Ohio; Dr. F. H. Peters, Defiance, Ohio; Dr. Alva M. Kerr, Dayton, Ohio; Dr. W. A. Harper, Elon College, N. C.

AN EXPLANATION AND PLEA.

BY REV. F. G. COFFIN, A. M., D. D.,
Chairman of Commission on Christian Unity.

In this issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN may be found the recommendations relating to organic union between the Christian and Congregational Churches, as adopted by the commissions representing the two communions. The commissions have compiled the recommendations in the spirit of Christian co-operation. There has been but one dominating motive in the whole effort, viz: a greater efficiency for the kingdom of God. There has been no play for advantage on the part of either, but each has sought to recognize and embody the viewpoint of the other as fully as possible, and certainly in no way to violate the position or restrict the freedom of the other. Perhaps each group would have changed the phraseology somewhat had it been dealing solely with its own constituency. There are forms of expression growing out of the life of an organization which become fixed in its nomenclature. In order to state a position which will accommodate both bodies, each must be as generous in its verbiage as it is in the spirit which craves closer affiliation.

Our readers are urged to seriously study the recommendations of the joint commissions and to approach this new experience in our organic life in the spirit expressed in the last item of the report. May a few of the things to be remembered be pointed out here?

First, the report does not aim at finality. It expresses an attitude and suggests only the initial steps. It does not outline a fixed plan to which each must subscribe or stay out. Instead, it anticipates that the two bodies will come together in Christian love and liberty, and together find the most congenial and efficient way of expressing their constructive programs. As stated, it is mostly a recognition of the recognition of each other, the rights and privileges which belong to each and the great community of interest which binds us together. The commissions anticipate that the two communions will begin with mutual love and confidence and work out their plans and programs together just as we do in the founding of our homes.

Second: The initial document leaves undisturbed the rights of each individual member and each local congregation. There is not a member or a congregation in the Christian Church whose liberties will be infringed in the least. In fact, the amalgamated organization will stand exactly upon the foundation which the Christian Church has always occupied. Though the six principles of our Church are not categorically stated as we are accustomed to seeing them, they are in other phraseology the basis of the whole arrangement.

Third: The designation of the two united Churches ("Congregational-Christian") is not altogether satisfactory to any of the commissioners, but seems to be the most appropriate title under the circumstances. It is regarded as tentative. It is the hope that ere long other communions may join the movement; efforts to that end are in process. Such an outcome will give warrant for some universal name, such as the United American Church or the United American Christian Church. To have adopted such a pretentious title for but two smaller denominations seemed presumptuous and might prove prejudicial to the more inclusive movement on which our hearts are set. When organizations go into a movement they prefer to help build the movement into which they go.

Fourth: Entrance into the union through the plan outlined closes no doors before us. It leaves us free to follow the wisdom made possible by later developments and together to find the way which will most efficiently carry out the desire of the Lord among men.

The commission asks your prayers and counsel in this proposed venture, and earnestly solicits your suggestions. Correspondence may be addressed to the chairman of the commission.

"Lives are like money, in that their chief function is to be spent. The great matter is not whether we live or die, but what we accomplish by living or by dying. Three hundred dollars represents a vast expenditure of human labor. So regarded, it is in a way a consecrated object. One might call it a vast expenditure of human life. It would be well if we thought more of money in terms of human life and not so much of human life in terms of money."

NOTES-PERSONALS

The Conference of the Carolinas of the Congregational Church is to meet in Asheville May 9th to 11th. It is expected that Drs. C. H. Rowland and G. O. Lankford will attend this Conference.

Quite a number of our Churches have held a series of evangelistic services leading up to Easter. Here is hoping that they will report promptly the good news as an inspiration to the entire Church!

Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Carlton are to sail for Europe, to be gone two months, on the 18th. THE CHRISTIAN SUN readers will wish for them every happiness and success on their voyage. They will return about the middle of June.

Rev. M. F. Allen has been conducting evangelistic services at several places since his recent announcement that he would enter this field and give up his pastorate at Newport News. However, Bro. Allen's Church has prevailed on him to reconsider his resignation and to remain with them throughout the Conference year.

The Acting Missionary Secretary, J. M. Darden, is greatly encouraged by the response that he is receiving in his appeals to our pastors and Churches to raise one-sixth of the pastors' salary for missions. He says that he finds the people everywhere devoted to Dr. Atkinson and the mission cause.

A united Sunday School of Christians and Congregationalists, with other denominations co-operating, has been organized at Star, N. C., with Prof. W. H. Freeman, of the Christian Church, as superintendent. This Sunday School also expects to maintain preaching services, and the Christian Church group there has been asked to supply a pastor once a month.

We have secured articles for publication in THE CHRISTIAN SUN from the following missionaries of our Church in foreign service: Rev. Wm. Q. McKnight, Miss Martha R. Stacy, Miss Angie Crew, Dr. A. D. Woodworth, and Miss Victoria Adams. The acting editor believes that the reading of these articles by our people will add greatly to our intelligent interest in and support of the mission cause.

Dr. Atkinson writes that he continues to improve, but that his physician has persuaded him to remain until the first of May. Mrs. R. T. Bradford, Dr. Atkinson's daughter, is with him at this time. It is a source of real satisfaction to the acting editor that Dr. Atkinson has found it feasible to send in "editorial correspondence," and that he will likely continue this now without interruption.

There is considerable interest in the district missionary rallies held by the women of the Church in the various Conferences and districts at this time. It is hoped that those that are yet to be held will be largely attended. These conferences meet for one day only. They are wonderfully productive of missionary interest and zeal.

President Lewis H. Keller, of the Atlanta Theological Seminary, has been in several of the large centers of Congregational influence the past few weeks. He finds the sentiment ripe throughout the Congregational Church for union with the Christian denomination, and he also finds the educational leaders of his Church in hearty sympathy with the removal of the Atlanta Seminary to Flon College and a close affiliation between these two institutions. President Keller is to appear on the program of the Southern Christian Convention, in Richmond, and will speak on "Christian Education."

Again let us say if there are Churches in the Christian denomination in the South that lack pastors, we shall be glad to bring such Churches into co-operation with pastors, and if there are Churches that do not feel that they are able to employ a pastor but would like supply preaching from time to time, if they will make their wishes known to THE CHRISTIAN SUN office efforts will be made to supply them.

Please do not fail to read the official communication in this issue entitled "Church Union Commission Reports," as issued by our commissioners, and the article by Dr. Coffin entitled "An Explanation and Plea." Dr. Coffin is President of the General Convention of the Christian Church. He and Dr. L. E. Smith, President of the Southern Christian Convention, were the sub-commissioners representing the Christian Church in this discussion of Christian union with the Congregationalists.

Elcn College professors are beginning to make their annual visits to high schools on commencement occasions, giving literary addresses and preaching baccalaureate sermons. Upwards of fifty such invitations have already been accepted for this season. The professors, too, are active in giving addresses in our Churches on memorial day occasions and for other special events. The college is fortunate in having on its staff men and women who are capable of rendering such service, and it is always glad to have them go whenever it is possible.

The Chicago and Illinois elections at this time are cause for congratulation throughout the nation. Chicago has been the most lawless center of the United States for the past two years. The good government forces won not only in the city, but throughout the State. The Christian Century, perhaps the leading interdenominational religious periodical in the country, was active in the campaign against the forces of lawlessness. It is a tribute, therefore, to religion and to religious leadership that this political clean-up has been recently achieved.

Rev. W. T. Scott, who is now doing graduate work in the Union Theological Seminary, New York City, and who has recently graduated from Yale Divinity School with the B. D. degree, was a happy visitor to the college on last Thursday. He conducted the chapel services and gave an uplifting message to the students. Bro. Scott is ready for an active pastorate in the Christian denomination. He is exceedingly anxious to serve his own Church, and he is likewise exceedingly well qualified by training and by consecration of personal life and purpose to render great service as pastor.

The National Council of the Congregational Churches has just issued a statement to the effect that during each year 500,000 accessions—the majority of them upon their first profession of faith—are being annually received by the Protestant Churches of America at Easter time and that a considerable more than a million members are being received by these Churches each year. This represents an increase of about 3 per cent, which is 13 per cent greater than the rate of increase in population. The statement attributes the favorable condition of the Churches in this respect to their programs of educational evangelism which are particularly effective in the Church schools.

RICHMOND CHURCH.

We are awaiting with patience (little bit) the publication of the program for the Convention. We have full confidence in the committee that it will be a great program, given by great men and women, and that great results will be the fruitage. You will find a great people here, limited, to be sure, in their resources to serve, but they will do their best. If you are coming as a delegate, won't you please drop us a card and tell us?

We are praying our Heavenly Father that this meeting may be a "mountain-top" experience, and that we may not only see the Christ who leads, but that we may see the duty and service to which He calls us.

If you come by automobile, you will find our Church on the corner of Grove Avenue and Shepard Street, just two squares west of the Boulevard. If you come by train, get on a Belmont car and get off at Grove Avenue and go east one square. The Belmont car passes both stations. All the meals will be served at the Church, beginning with noontime lunch on Tuesday, May 1st.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD.

BY REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, Preacher.

"I am the Light of the world."—John 8:12.

They were stirring days in the great old city of Jerusalem. Jesus was coming straight to the heart of His message to the world as He taught in the temple. The priests and Pharisees had asked the officers who were commissioned to lay hold of Jesus why they had not taken Him, and "the officers answered, Never man spake like this Man." There is something very touching about the record of the close of that day's teaching in the temple, for we read: "Every man went into his own house. Jesus went unto the Mount of Olives." It makes my heart stir within me out of sympathy for my Saviour, who, when others repaired to their homes, went unto the Mount of Olives; but it also makes my heart leap up with love for a Lord like that. While He had no place to lay His head, He had place aplenty to press His knees upon the mount in prayer for the success of the love-mission of manifesting God to mortal men!

No wonder He came to the temple next day prepared to make the boldest announcement ever made to men, for out there on the Mount of Olives He had been, in the still hours of the night, in communion with God His Father. He had been recommissioned, as it were, and His heart was vibrating afresh with the love He had for the whole wide, wide world. "And early in the morning—no time to lose in a matter so magnificent and far-reaching in its breadth and length—He came again into the temple, and all the people came unto Him." He came from His knees; they came from their beds of rest and sleep; He came from the hills, they came from their homes; He came from God, they came to Jesus. "And He sat down and taught them." Now, is not that wonderful? Ah! to have been in that company who sat at His feet in that magnificent temple that day would have been a very great joy, indeed. The things He said, and the way in which He said them cannot all be told, but officers had said the day before, "Never man spake like Him." And today there was the glory of God upon His face, and the challenge of heaven and earth in His soul. No wonder one who sat there wrote later: "Which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled, of the Word of life."

His teachings were being brought to a fitting and dramatic climax. The common people had come, looking for the Christ; their hopes had not been blasted. The Pharisees and priests had found sufficient indeed to demand their every attention. Gentile officers had made a testimony which the whole world, through many centuries, has not been able to gainsay. Devout men and women of God from the world over were hanging on His words and surrendering their lives to Him. A by-product of the great annual Feast of the Tabernacles was becoming its central feature, and Jesus of Nazareth was standing in the heart of the world's hope. The best of the religious world had hung its faith upon the law of Moses. A lull in the teachings, and maybe a movement for lunch on the part of the devout, must have given a moment for reflection upon the part of the Lord. Just at that moment, the Jews did their finest engineering, and a poor sinner woman was dragged before Him in order to make a test case of the Mosaic law at the hands of Jesus. Jesus won! The sinner woman found pardon and peace. The law had led sin-cursed humanity to the world's Saviour; enemies had been routed; and once again the crowds throng Him. "Then spake Jesus again unto them, saying, I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life."

Oh, Jesus help us to hear Thee uttering those words of life! Let us come near and hear the tenderness of that speech, and catch its bigness and challenge. God's priest needed that message, the world's officers needed that message; the common, brave ones needed that message; and the poor, trembling sinner needed that message. There He stood in the finest setting under heaven, sending it calmly and unrefutedly forth: "I am the Light of the world."

The world needs a guide. How often it has lost its path! How often it has wandered in darkness, not knowing of the Sun of Righteousness. And where can the world get to without light? It is the first thing God Himself created after He created the world. "The earth was without form, and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep. And the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters. And God said, Let there be light: and there was light." Before there ever was made a firmament, before there were made dry land, and the gathering places for waters, God said let there be light. Before the grass and the trees came forth, and before the waters moved alive with fishes, God created light. Before cattle and creeping things were ever made, God created light; and before He made man in His image to rule upon the earth He created light in order that He might not try to rule in darkness over a kingdom darker than death. God is a God of light as He is a God of love. God is Light, and in Him is no darkness at all. And now there stood in the temple in Jerusalem the world's mystery, the world's marvel, the world's miracle: yea, better by far, the world's Saviour and Light, and Lord.

Not one single little flower in the crannied wall can find its path to maturity without light, not one rose can bring forth its gorgeous tints of color and perfume without light, not one blossom in God's garden can grow into lucid fruit without light. Where can a man, or nation, or the world get to without light? Just recently ten millions of the fairest of the nations' young men went down into the darkness of death trying to help the earth's wise ones answer that question without God.

It is a right bad thing to be in the darkness and know not which way to turn. Who of us has not had the experience of starting home in a darkness that would not yield us the path? Reaching out our hands against this object, or that, we seek the way; but we are lost. Around and around in a circle we are said to move. Only the light of a neighbor's lantern, or the dawn of God's new day can set our feet aright. And how sweet when it comes! And who of us does not know that physical darkness is not a circumstance to moral, or spiritual darkness? What high school girl or boy cannot understand what it is not to know the way to solve, not only the problems of the class-room, but the baffling problems of life which daily confront them? And how much more as we grow older do we realize that physical darkness is but a poor illustration of the darkness that often beclouds our way as we walk the lanes of life? And our darkness should become intensified if we realize that there is a way out which

The truth of Jesus' declaration: "I am the Light of the world," must dawn more and more upon, and deeper and deeper into the minds of all men. For just as long as we seek to find the way without Jesus, or read the meaning of our tears, or live abundantly our lives without Him, we are lost; for has He not said: "I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life." Without Him we go around in a circle, not knowing that if we lift our eyes we shall see the cross, and that the way of the cross leads home.

Briefly, the situation is this: Without Jesus, the spiritual world is in darkness, "without form, and void," and one, only one immortal soul is an unfathomable "deep"; and without Jesus "darkness is upon the face of it." It is God's desire to command light upon every life in the whole world. To that purpose has the Son been sent. "In Him was life, and the life was the light of men." "That was the true Light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world." And having Him, we may surely say: "The Lord is my Light and my salvation: whom shall I fear?" "Thy Word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path." "The Word was made flesh and dwelt among us, and we beheld His glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth."

So then, let us go back to the temple in Jerusalem and sit at His feet. Let us hear Him say again unto us: "I am the light of the world." Let us feel anew the glory of that light and leadership pouring into our souls. Let us trust Him to lighten our pathway, and illumine our lives. And then let us remember that if we make Him our Saviour at all, we shall of necessity have to do so in the light of His whole gospel. Then, and not till then, we shall as individuals and as a Church, read anew His words: "Ye are the light of the world."

We shall then be no more content to give a pittance of all our earnings to the preaching of this gospel, and more than nineteen-twentieths of that pittance to the preaching of that Word to ourselves! If Jesus can save one individual sinner, He can save many. If He cannot save many, He cannot have the power of salvation at all. If He can save an American, He can save a Japanese. So true is that that the very suggestion seems obvious and trite; but is not that suggestion appropriate in the light of the facts? Just so long as we light our candle and hide it under the bushel of selfishness, just so long do we fail to lift up the Light of the world on the lampstand of the rugged cross! I love this Church with the self-same kind of love I give my Saviour, for this Church is a part of the bride of Christ, and He is pleased at every ounce of our love and devotion to Him; but how can we be content to raise nineteen times more for ourselves than for the sending of the gospel to those to whom He has commanded us to go?

We are to reflect, not to refract the light of Jesus, and therefore my heart's desire and prayer to God for this Church is that we change those figures. That under the banner of Jesus' challenge to our best selves we become missionary in our Church to the very last individual member. "Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on a high hill cannot be hid. Neither do men light a candle and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick, and it giveth light unto all that are in the house. (The house for the light of God's love in our hearts is the world.)" A light cannot talk; it shines! A lampstand does not move; it lifts up. We are not asked to tell about our works, but we are asked to "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

FLORIDA—WITH OBSERVATIONS.

Curing for a season in a great sanitarium and hanging around a busy hospital impress one with the fact that mankind is divided into two classes—the sufferers and the servers. Possibly our Creator marked in His own mind, and predestined, that His children should be so divided—the sufferers and the servers. For one likes to believe—one is compelled to believe—that suffering has its place in the Divine scheme of things, as well as service. And who of us can say which class contributes most to world betterment and to human uplift, the "sufferer" or the "server"? This I well know, that some of the finest characters, some of the purest, bravest, noblest souls one meets and knows in this world are the sufferers—either those who suffer bodily or mental ailment now, or those who have done so. The good Book tells us that even our Lord's Christ must needs be made perfect through suffering. And since the inspired writer penned those lines in a remote past, thousands, yea millions of other characters have been purified, made stronger, more beautiful, more nearly perfect through suffering. To this writer, at any rate, some of the most refined, noble, courageous souls he has ever known have been classed at one time or another, or may now be classed, not among the servers, but among the sufferers. The white-heat of suffering, of disappointment because of bodily ailments, of pain or endurance, has literally burned up the dross and the dregs of their nature, and has left them, or is leaving them, as pure as refined gold or polished diamond. No, dear reader, you will not find all the brave souls, all the courageous hearts out on the firing-line or in the heat of the world's battles; you will find some of them in hospitals, in sanitariums, in sick-rooms, or even helpless so far as bearing the world's burden of work and service is concerned.

Moreover, many of the world's sufferers are not only enriched in character themselves, but they enrich other lives and souls about them. After all, one wonders whether the world's sufferers do not make as large contribution to those who serve as the servers do to those who suffer. How often, in a thoughtless moment, do we think that the sufferer in the family—the one who must have our attention and care—is a burden, when suddenly we discover (or maybe we remain thoughtless and do not discover it) that our supposed burden is our greatest blessing. Ever visit a family in which one had suffered through months or years? Did you discover unwonted patience, tenderness, gentleness, subdued and refined loving-kindness in the minds and hearts of other members of the family than that of the invalid or the sufferer? Well, who put those goodly traits and noble virtues into the lives of those who served? That was the sufferer's contribution to the server. Patience, fortitude, gentleness, tenderness, loving consideration for others—these are some of the virtues that sufferers beget in the minds and hearts of servers; these are real contributions to this world's betterment and uplift. Let no server ever decide or think that a sufferer is a burden. It may be the sufferer is an angel of God for the time being, sent to bless, to enrich, to enlarge, to purify and refine the lives and souls of the servers. Many readers will not get at what I am saying unless they are about a hospital some, or have experience with some of the brave, bold, fearless, cheerful sufferers.

The writer cannot cease to wonder at the marvelous work this Florida Sanitarium is doing and the beautiful spirit with which physicians, nurses and helpers go about their task. They exhaust the resources of nature and of art to aid them. Beautiful flowers, grown in great abundance in their own gardens and by their own skilled gardeners greet the eye and gladden the heart from every desk and table, fresh and fragrant every day; birds sing from branch and bough of palm and pine on the wide-spreading, grass-carpeted lawn; a glorious lake of peaceful, placid waters stretches lazily for a mile just off the lawn; orange groves on either side of lake and lawn bring the golden color of hanging fruit and the fragrance of tender blossom; and God, as well as men and women, speaks to the soul and brings strength and vigor back to sick bodies.

I have tarried here, I feel, longer than there was actual need, for I feel so well and strong again. But friends insisted, and the physician advised, and even now I shall go (if as planned) on April 23rd with a certain reluctance, but with joy and gratitude for the friends I have met here, the treatment received, and unspeakable gladness over results of work others have done for me on THE CHRISTIAN SUN and in the mission field.

THE IDEAL MINISTER.

No minister can reach the ideal, for that is the standard toward which the minister should aspire. Somewhere, between the lowest and the highest, most ministers may live and work. Some of the elements that make up the minister may be named as the goal toward which he may honestly strive. The first and most essential element is spirituality. He should be a genuine Christian. Many ministers in the early centuries of the Christian era, and even in this country, in the past century, did great work with little but natural gifts and deep spiritual experience. There never was a time when that element was more needed than this present age. Other things have increased in power over men to such a degree that real contact with Jesus Christ, real spirituality, is needed in great measure to impress the people with its value and reality.

A second element of great value in the minister's work is personality. That is more or less inborn, but, like all other qualities, it can be acquired by patient and diligent effort. Personal appearance in dress, manner, conversation, may help to make up an attractive and winning personality. Personality can be cultivated as well as spirituality. No matter how good a minister may be, if he has no winning ways, no sympathy for others in all conditions, no art of expression in personal touch as well as congregational touch, his success is hindered. His study for personal touch and influence should be as earnest as his study for the pulpit, and that study includes prayer. His influence through the week may count as well as his words on Sunday. His life is a ministry that includes all his gifts.

A third element is education. In this age of almost universal education in schools of all grades and a mass of printed matter in all forms, the common people are more informed than they were, even in the past generation, and the minister should be abreast of the times in scholarship. His diploma should be the "A" in the alphabet of his learning. Hard study through his active ministry should win for him the respect of all classes of people. No man should be too high for his safe contact, and no person should be so low as to keep him back from real touch and interest. He should not display his scholarship, but he should possess it. He should be the best scholar possible, but his education should never take the place of his spirituality. His religion, his personality, and his education should harmonize like the parts of music.

The minister should be a typical financier in his private and public life. That, like all other essentials, requires study and self-control. Nothing lessens the influence of a minister more than innocent indebtedness. It requires a fine sense of expediture on the part of a minister with small salary to keep out of debt; but he had better live hard than to go in debt beyond his capacity to pay. "The love of money is the root of all evil" is not only true, but the public mind judges a minister by the way he handles his little money. This matter of money is a great study, not only for the banker but for the minister. His obligation is not only to act wisely in his own money affairs, but his example should help others and his judgment should be of value in the expenditures of his congregation. Few people occupy a position of so much importance as a minister. Insiders and outsiders watch him, estimate him, and measure religion by what they think he is. "Jesus went about doing good," and His ministers should go about doing good and being good. Being good is more difficult than doing good. The ideal minister is an ideal man, an ideal Christian, an ideal example, and an ideal teacher.

GIVE THANKS AND TAKE COURAGE.

James O'Kelly was no schismatic nor sectarian. He believed in liberty in Christian fellowship. He believed in Christian union and Christian freedom. When in 1794 it became apparent to those Methodist preachers who two years before had withdrawn from the Baltimore conference, that it would be impossible to return to the Methodist fold without surrender of freedom, James O'Kelly and his associates joined the Christian Church on those five immortal cardinal Principles so dear to our hearts, and then they announced it to be their purpose to bring about the conversion of all men and the union of Christ's followers.

One hundred and thirty-four years have passed and commissioners of the Christian Church and of the Congregational Church have come to a basis of agreement (printed in full in this issue) which they are willing to recommend to their two Churches for adoption. If adopted, these two denominations will become one—a beginning of the realization of the purpose James O'Kelly set before himself in 1794. It is an occasion for thanksgiving and for renewed hope and courage that we have been permitted to live to see this event. Our descendants will look back to this achievement and hold it in veneration, even as we today look with veneration on that group of spiritual prophets who met in Old Lebanon Church, in Surry County, Va., in 1794. No greater event has come to our American Protestantism than this since the day Martin Luther led the revolt against Rome. Luther gave us a divided Protestantism. This agreement prophesies a united Protestantism in the United States.

We should look upon this emerging union of the Christian and Congregational Churches as but the beginning of a campaign whose objective will be the reunion of all the varieties of Protestantism and ultimately of all Christendom. The Pope's recent encyclical gives small hope of a reunion of Protestantism and Catholicism at this time. But we must not lose hope. What our Master prayed for, His Spirit, working in the hearts of men and in the Church, will achieve. Christendom will one day be united, and this approaching union of Congregational and Christian Churches is a presage of it. As such, let us give thanks and take courage.

Let no one decline to support this union because it relates only to two bodies when there are more than one hundred and fifty other Protestant Churches not affected. Remember how insignificant in numbers the apostles were, and yet they accept their Master's commission to go into all the world and preach His gospel. Nor let us quail before the magnitude of the task that challenges and all but appalls. Transformations take place in organized bodies as well as in individual experience.

Consider the Congregational Church itself. The Christian denomination has always stood exactly where it does today. But not so with the other party to this hoped-for union. When the Christian Church began in New England (for it began there, too, under Abner Jones, just as it arose in the South under James O'Kelly), the Congregational Church was strong there, but Jones and his associates could not join that Church. Why? Because it was extremely Calvinistic and illiberal. But during the century and more since, the Congregational Church has undergone a transformation within, and while there are many Calvinists in its ranks today, as in our own, that great Church, too, like our own, has become tolerant of those of Arminian tendencies and beliefs, and is today as liberal as our own in its attitudes and practices. The only thing that divides us is the name, and that barrier our commissioners have happily resolved by suggesting for the united Church a name that includes both present names.

Let every reader give earnest consideration to the report of our commission in this issue and to the supporting article by Dr. F. G. Coffin, President of our General Convention. This matter should and will receive the careful and prayerful consideration of our Southern Christian Convention. Its approaching session will no doubt voice its approval of the plan of union and memorialize our General Board and the 1930 session of our General Convention to that effect, but should not itself vote for a separate union between itself and the Congregational Church at this time. Our entire Church should enter this union.

We should certainly thank God and take courage. We live in a great day—a day of the Lord.

WOMEN AND MISSIONS.

The women of the Christian Church have specialized on missions, and they have achieved splendid success. They have organized themselves into a society; they have organized young people; they have organized the children and the babies, and through every one of these organizations they have secured a constant flow of money for the support of the mission enterprise of our Church. Only praise should be bestowed upon the women for their heroic and consistent devotion to the cause of missions.

For foreign missions during the past three years the women of the Southern Church have given as follows: 1925, $6,284.32; 1926, $3,635.30; 1927, $5,435.39. If these amounts are doubled we can get the total amount that the women of our Southern Churches have given for missions, because they give equally to home and foreign missions. These figures are taken from a private letter from Dr. W. P. Minton, our Foreign Mission Secretary.

Please note that there has been a decrease in the foreign mission gifts of the women in the past three years. This is no doubt due to the general depression in the country and to the fact that three years ago there was a special campaign on for foreign missions. There was a healthy growth during the year 1927 over the contribution in 1926, exactly 50 per cent increase in 1927 over 1926. It is hoped there will be a corresponding increase during the year 1928, and if so the women of the Southern Church will give $8,100 during this current year for foreign missions and a similar amount for home missions. It appears that the day is not far distant when the women of the South will be giving $25,000 a year for missions, one-half for home and one-half for foreign.

There is no man in the Christian Church that does not appreciate the devotion of the women of the Church for missions and that does not rejoice in their success. Mrs. J. A. Williams and her associates are rendering a splendid service to the Church and kingdom in their heroic efforts for the missionary enterprise. May God continue to bless their efforts and may He grant increase to the cause that is near and dear to their hearts.

OUR CONVENTION FORUM

Dr. T. C. Amick says:

First. The first need of the Church is a spiritual uplifting which will enable the Church to get on high ground, to become more nearly a unit in purpose and effort for the advancement of the kingdom of God in the earth, and for a deeper spiritual experience in the hearts and lives of Church members.

Second. This should go far enough to touch the pocket-books of the members of the Church, so that the money which they have in store which rightly belongs to God may be turned into the channels of the Church, where it will do great good.

Third. Every institution of the Church could be financed in such a way and to such an extent that those institutions should not be beggars. The college should have an ample endowment and should be well supported. The Orphanage, the missionary enterprises of the Church should be amply financed, and the Church should get behind these matters and see to it that the necessities of these institutions are all amply met. The college has four hundred of the very cream of the young people of the Church in training for manhood and womanhood, for duty and for life. It is the business of the Church to get behind the college and provide amply in every way for the needs of these young persons, for they are the hope of the coming generation.

These, to my mind, are some of the things needed, and I trust that the Southern Christian Convention will not allow any of these to go unprovided for.

THOMAS C. AMICK.

Elon College, N. C.

Mrs. J. J. Lincoln says:

Wholeheartedly, with faith, upon a sound basis such as our Convention leaders fully are capable of determining, clinch, as far as can be done, merging with the Congregational Church—publications, schools, and all. And not only let, but make, the movement proceed as speedily as possible. Apparently, the liberality and magnanimity of Congregationalists are all any people could ask. What is the Southern Christian Convention going to do with the opportunity in its hands thus to strengthen and unify Christian effort?

There are other matters wholly as vital among which, primarily for the sake of individual spiritual commitment and growth, the enlistment of every member in the participation of Church administration and financial support of kingdom advancement is paramount.

But to be brief, to sum up all that should be done, using Dr. Kerr's thought, is to seek to turn "the whole modern emphasis" in the right direction, for surely if "the supreme function and mission of Jesus Christ is to put the God-element" into His Church, some turning is necessary, ourselves not exempted.

MRS. J. J. LINCOLN.

Lawrenceville, N. J.

Rev. G. D. Hunt says:

Would it not be a fine thing for our Church if our Convention could adopt some plan for financing our work that would be substantial or that would not require so many changes? Our people are not as responsive to our appeals as we believe they would be if we were not continually changing our plans. Who has a better plan than the biblical plan? What plan can be more simple? What plan is more reasonable? What plan is more applicable? Since we profess to have the Bible as our guide in matters of faith and doctrine, why not in finance?

ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual memorial and home-coming service at Mt. Zion Church will be held on Saturday before the first Sunday in May. We cordially invite all former pastors and other ministers to be with us on that day; also every one who has been or is now a member of the Church at Mt. Zion to be with us in the great service we are expecting to hold that day. And, listen friends, we owe about $100 on our material that we must pay, and we hope to pay that debt and get ready to paint the Church before our revival in the summer. We want a hundred men to bring a dollar and a hundred women to bring fifty cents each. We want every one, young and old, to help us get Mt. Zion Church on the map for the glory of God.

G. D. HUNT, Pastor.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

"The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath." It was made for man to use, not abuse. "Remember the Sabbath Day to keep it holy." To keep it holy is the duty of man. It should not be used for gain or pleasure. It should be used for religious purposes. It is a necessity for the human race. France, at one time in her history, decided to make the legal rest-day one in ten instead of one in seven. They found that men and beasts could not stand the strain of nine days instead of six days for work, and the law was changed. The welfare of mankind depends upon the conformity of the people to the established laws of God. Even in bodily health, to follow nature is the safest rule. Most of the bodily ills of man result from the violation of natural law and the use of artificial ways of living.

It may be assumed that God made no mistake in the creation of man and in the laws made to control his life. One of these laws is the Fourth Commandment. Ex. 20:8-11—read these four verses and see again the sense they contain and the blessing to the world by obedience to them. Six days for work, for your work. The seventh day is the Lord's day, and in it thou shalt not do any work. In six days the Lord made heaven and earth and rested the seventh day. God practiced what He preached. Man should do the same way. That applies to parents, teachers, preachers, doctors, politicians, and writers. Leaders need to learn this fundamental truth. People talk and write so much about the violation of law and the lack of enforcement, and especially as these refer to prohibition and the eighteenth amendment, and overlook the fact that Sabbath laws are violated more flagrantly and more in the open. This may be said of more decent people than the violators of prohibition laws. The violation of the Sabbath is so common that people fail to realize how far Christians are departing from God's commandment. The observance of the Sabbath is the bulwark of Christian civilization. Without it, the Church could not maintain its worship and its claims upon society. The silent whistles, the closed stores, the closed post-office, the open doors to Sunday School and Church all point to the obligation of society to keep this day holy. Any legal or religious departure from its observance forfeits to that extent the favor of God. Law has no favors, takes no excuses, and exacts obedience. Crime is crime, no matter who commits it. The old theological view of what may be allowed on Sunday, "acts of mercy and necessity," is not far from the truth.

The lesson for this age and this nation is to return to strict observance of the Sabbath. There are two things most helpful in its observance—rest and worship—and there is no better way to rest than to worship. Real study of the Bible and praise through song in the Sunday School, and attendance, attention, and worship through prayer and song in the house of God, give real rest to tired laborers more than sitting or lying at home during Sunday. Workers who go everywhere else except to Church on Sunday not only fail to obey God's command, but fail to get the rest which God has provided for them.

W. W. STALEY.

ELON LETTER.

The Churches of the United States are waking up to the necessity of enlisting the men in the enterprises of the kingdom. I have recently had occasion to examine the programs in this direction by the Protestant Episcopal Church, the Northern Baptist Church, the Northern Presbyterian Church, the Southern Presbyterian Church, the Disciples of Christ, the Brethren Church, the Congregational Church, the Northern Methodist Church, the Southern Methodist Church and the Southern Baptist Church. Not all of these denominations are provided with facilities of equal merit for enlisting their men, but the fact that all of them are deeply concerned to put the manhood of their membership behind the enterprises of the kingdom is certainly encouraging.

I have just been reading a book on "Religious Education," by one of the outstanding men of America in this field, and I have been disappointed throughout, not in that I have not agreed with the things that he has said for the most part, but because he presumes that religious education is a matter for children and young people and has not sensed the necessity for adult education in religion.

Even in the world of so-called secular education there is a tremendous emphasis at this time on the necessity to keep the adult mind always making progress in education. Colleges have come to the conclusion in many cases that their alumni need continuous education, and they are providing facilities for it. One college president suggests that a degree should be conferred upon the graduate for a period of five years. At the end of that time he should be required to take another examination to show that he has made progress in some chosen line of intellectual interest and pursuit, and this five-year examination program should continue so long as the graduate lives.

The Carnegie Corporation, one of the rich foundations for educational development of America, is spending millions in programs of adult education, and is projecting correspondence courses of high grade as well as local training schools in large centers for this purpose.

The Church, too, as I have said, is moving in the direction of educating its adults. The women of the Christian Church have been studying missions for many years, and they have done well in their support of this enterprise of the Church.

The Executive Committee of the Southern Christian Convention has appointed a committee of men, with Rev. John G. Truitt as chairman, to recommend to the Southern Christian Convention, soon to meet, a method by which the men of the Christian Church, which means both ministers and laymen, may be educated in the needs, programs and purposes of the Church and enlisted in their support. This committee has held two sessions and has faced its duty prayerfully, and in the light of what others have done in this same direction will make a report to the Southern Convention second to none in importance.

A new dya of usefulness and service, of intelligent usefulness and service, evidently awaits the Christian Church through the enlistment of its manhood in the support, the intelligent support, of all its enterprises.

W. A. HARPER.

CHRISTIAN UNION.

Would it be out of place for me to say a few things through the paper. First, in regard to Christian union. Has there ever been a time in the history of the Christian Church when it was not willing to co-operate with all other orthodox denominations? Was there ever any reason why the Christian Church should exist? If so, has that reason ceased to be? Is it not true that our dear old Church has for one hundred and thirty-five years filled a very conspicuous place in the Church world? And is it not still doing the same thing? If our Church had always been united with itself, my opinion is we would today have been comparatively as strong as other larger bodies. If our schools and colleges, our educational interests generally, could have been united as one great interest, we today might have been in a position to have served the world to better acceptance along educational lines. If all of our missionary interests could have been under one great head, I think we would have been a greater, stronger body of believers in Christ. In fact, I hope to see the day when this Christian Church will assume her rightful place among the people of God. Let us have all of the interests so merged that we shall know no north or south, but be one in Jesus' name and for His glory.

Second. Who among us is able to deliver our Church over to any other Church? Who is able to commit any other Church to our way of thinking and doing?? This thing of delivering one Church over to another is no child's play. In fact, in principle and in practice, the Christian Church has always stood for unity, and is still doing the same. Under the Principles and Government of our dear fellowship, I conscientiously believe that there is as great a demand now for the Christian Church as there has ever been. I love the other Churches of God, and whenever and wherever opportunity presents itself, I always worship with them freely and fully and pray that God may use them as well as ourselves to carry out His great plan of redemption among men. And I fully believe He is doing that very thing. I fully believe that the Church world of today would still be at variance as in times past if it had not been for the great spirit of Christian unity expressed and maintained by the Christian Church. I believe that James O'Kelly, Barton W. Stone and Abner Jones were just as much inspired to bring about this Church of the Christians as were John and Charles Wesley inspired to set in motion the great Methodist Church. But we have not been aggressive. We have waited for things to happen. We have, after 135 years, some 120,000 communicants actually lined up; but if all of our followers or friends of other Churches who believe our Principles and doctrine were lined up with us our number would be greatly enlarged. I pray that the Great Head of our Church will lead us into a closer walk with Himself and into a larger, sweeter fellowship with ourselves.

WINCHESTER, VA.

Beginning April 1st, Rev. C. C. Ryan, of Richmond, Va., assisted the pastor of the First Christian Church of Winchester, Va., in a revival. Dr. Ryan did some very plain, practical preaching, which will be sure to bear fruit. Each message delivered was inspiring, and was such as would make one desire to live and lead a better life. He preaches the gospel with fervency and power. It was a great joy to be associated with Dr. Ryan and have him preach for us through Passion Week, for our brother-in-Christ readily convinces people that he has been with Jesus.

At 6 A. M. Easter, as has been the custom with our Church, a dawn-service was observed, which resulted in a large number being present and quite an impressive service.

Ten members were received into fellowship with the Church at the conclusion of the revival. We are trusting God's blessings will continue to attend the preaching of Bro. Ryan, and that wherever he may preach the riches of grace, Christians may be revived and sinners led to Jesus.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary.

MISSION FIELD CO-OPERATION.

BY REV. WM. Q. MCKNIGHT.

One does not escape sectarianism by coming to the mission field. Our predecessors planted it in one form or another, and the harvest is coming on. Here the theological differences are not so great, though we have with us the Church of England and the Episcopalians claiming the whole of Japan as their exclusive territory in certain lines of evangelism, and the people of the holiness type who promote various peculiarities sacred to their faith. Probably group differences, arising from the fact that missionaries coming out under different Churches imposed upon Churches in Japan the form of Church government with which they were familiar are more in evidence among the Churches than other differences.

In the midst of this it is encouraging to note occasional attempts at co-operative evangelism. In Sendai, where Christianity is, on the whole, in a more advanced stage than many other parts of Japan, the leading Churches, excluding the groups mentioned above and the Catholic sects, of which there are two in this city, are united in so far as a ministerial association goes. With this as a ground of exchange of common hopes, the leaders of Christianity in the city get together for Christmas celebrations, union prayer-meetings, Sunday School and Christian Endeavor conventions, and city evangelistic campaigns.

In November of last year a series of meetings was held in a tent in a prominent part of the city. The Churches co-operating took charge of the meetings in turn, each Church furnishing music and speakers for its evening. In this way the gospel in tract and in personal witness was brought to thousands who wandered the streets of Sendai on the evenings of the period of evangelistic meetings. Those close up to the campaign pronounced the results satisfactory.

During the months of April, May and June, Sendai plans to hold a grand fair. Guests from the country are expected to number half a million. During one month of this period the various Churches of Sendai expect to conduct meetings and headquarters for Christians. As arranged for the meetings just described, each Church will have its period in which it will have charge of meetings. Some of the Churches in neighboring cities are also expecting to accept a part of the responsibility for these meetings. Again the multitudes will have an opportunity to taste Christian teaching.

The National Christian Council of Japan affords another organization in which denominational lines are reduced to a common denominator. Sectarianism has threatened its very existence, and continues to be its biggest peril, but the council seems to have come to stay. Some thirty denominations have entered this body, and its leaders are the best representatives of the Christian faith to be found among its respective constituencies.

Here, as elsewhere, it is frequently said that a united front on the part of Christians would speed the day when Japan would take her place in the world as an out-and-out Christian nation. Pastors of the Christian denomination here are true to traditions in fostering Church union.

Sendai, Japan.

No Christian should lose heart. To lose heart is to lose hope. To lose hope is to lose faith. To lose faith is a sin.

PROGRESS IN FOREIGN MISSIONS.

It is exceedingly important that young men be trained for the Christian ministry in Japan and Porto Rico. These young men understand their own people better than missionaries can ever hope to understand them, and, when properly trained, become splendid Christian pastors.

The Christian Church has recognized this need and is co-operating in the Aoyama Gakuin Theological Seminary, in Tokyo, Japan, where four or five denominations have united in one training-school for all their young men. Dr. A. D. Woodworth, our senior missionary to Japan, is a member of the faculty and is doing a great piece of work in directing the training of these men. This picture is of the theological students at the Union Theological Seminary, in Porto Rico, in which the Christian Church is one of seven co-operating denominations. The young man in the dark suit, in the center of the first row, is Rev. Juan Romero, one of our own boys, who has since graduated from the seminary and is pastor of the Church at Salinas, where he is doing excellent work.

QUOTAS BEING RAISED.

I am happy to report that I have received the quota for missions from Wentworth Christian Church, Rev. J. Lee Johnson, pastor; from St. Luke's Christian Church, Dover, Del., Rev. R. S. Stephens, pastor, and Hayes Chapel, and a portion of the quota from Auburn Christian Church, Rev. J. A. Denton, pastor.

It is a great pleasure to quote a letter from Bro. J. Lee Johnson, of Fuqua Springs, N. C.:

"Yesterday at Wentworth Christian Church we took the offering for missions, without any notice having been given to the Church, and secured $36.20, which is several dollars over one-sixth of the pastor's salary. This is a small Church of about seventy members, and of course not many of them are there at one time, since they are all scattered around. We usually take the offering on the second Sunday morning for the Orphanage, so when we had secured the $36.20 for missions, one of the deacons said, 'Let's not omit the Orphanage'; so we passed the plate again and received over $14 for the Orphanage."

It is certainly gratifying to me to get such letters and reports, and I do hope to have many more sent in before May 1st. I have a letter from Dr. Atkinson advising that he will be present at the Convention—and let's all have a good report for him and for the Convention.

Yours in the work,

J. M. DARDEN,
Acting Secretary.

PORTO RICO LETTER.

Sunday, April 1st, was the first opportunity that I had to spend all day and part of the evening with our good people at Salinas, where I had the chance to study the conditions of our Sunday School departments. I am happy to say that our Salinas Church is progressing nicely under the leadership of our faithful pastor and his earnest wife, Mr. and Mrs. Juan Ramero. Indeed, it was one of the happiest days in my life in Porto Rico to be with these splendid people and to see the result of their work.

I had the privilege to visit all the classes in our Sunday School department, and found a splendid spirit of co-operation in every department. There were 135 members present that morning, including the little people, and I was given a few minutes to make a short speech. Of course, as I cannot speak the language fluently, I had to talk very slow, which took more than a few minutes. Yes, I am happy that I am able to speak and understand their language.

After the Sunday School meeting I enjoyed a splendid dinner with Mr. and Mrs. Romero. After dinner it was necessary for us to start walking to his country work, where we found a group of thirty-six men, women and children waiting anxiously to start the service. Of course, a stranger is always the center of attraction. You cannot imagine how it feels to be gazed upon without ceasing. I am so very conscious of myself under such circumstances that I feel probably I have my hat on the wrong way or there is something wrong with my makeup in other ways; but I am trying hard to get use to it. After the service we visited many homes. It is doubtful if there is a more kind and generous person to be found anywhere than the Porto Ricans. In spite of their abject poverty, they are willing to give their last to their neighbor, visitor or friend. I was told by some of them that they walked almost two miles in the hot sun to attend the service. If you could only work with these people for a while you would find yourself in a different spirit toward foreign missions; you would give your last cent to help them. I also found a good many of our Church members are not able to attend the Church because they do not have sufficient clothing. So anything that you good people send to us is greatly appreciated and is also used for the best advantage.

When we returned from the country I was asked to go to the home of Don Pedro, one of our best and most faithful country workers, for supper. At the 7:30 service there were over 150 people present, and thirteen new members were baptized. The upper-room meditation impressed me the most of all the services. Just before the preaching service, I went to one of the Sunday School rooms and found a large group of men, women and young people on their knees praying for the evening service and for the new members. They call this room where they hold this meditation hour "the upper room." We must rejoice with thanksgiving to find that our Church in Salinas is based on prayer and faith. It is, therefore, progressing nicely.

Let us not forget that it is not a very easy task to work on this island, which has been a strong center of the Roman Catholic Church. Here the Roman Church is supported by the State, and the Church controls and directs the educational policies of the State. I think if the Catholic Church ever had an opportunity to prove its saving power it was in this island. Probably we remember through reading history that from 1493 to 1898 the Catholic Church here had no competition, with the single exception of a small Episcopal Church for the English colony in the city of Ponce. No other religious body but the Roman Catholic Church was permitted to work among this island people for more than 400 years. So you can see the work that has been accomplished by the evangelical workers is remarkable, and I believe the time is at hand that the future generation of Porto Rico shall lead toward a better and brighter path of religion. Let us pray for the time to come soon to save these people from their ignorant ideas of religion.

VICTORIA ADAMS.

SIDELIGHTS ON STUDENTS.

By MISS ANGIE CREW.

Students! students everywhere, and I wonder what they think! Probably there are no more here than in other countries, but they are more noticeable here than in America. No matter where we go—on the streets, in the cars or trains, in the stores, at Church, anywhere and everywhere—we find the young men in their student uniforms, and the girls sometimes in uniform and sometimes in kimona. These young people of Japan are so eager for an education that the schools cannot begin to hold them, and in order to eliminate the surplus, the schools have very difficult entrance examinations. By this plan, some schools get rid of three-fourths or two-thirds of the applicants.

My work in Sendai has been almost entirely with these students. Because they are so eager to learn English, they are willing to enter English Bible classes. Up until this past year the students who attended my Bible classes were young men of colleges and universities, but since September many of the girls from the school where I have been teaching English conversation have enrolled in my Bible classes, so that now my classes are made up of about an equal number of young men and young women. Allowing both men and women to attend my classes has been rather an experiment, but from all appearances the try-out has been successful. Of course, there is not the freedom between the two sexes such as might be found in such gatherings in America. The girls invariably group themselves in one corner of the room and the young men hunt another corner. At the end of the Bible-study period they join their voices in singing hymns and old, familiar songs.

Now, just what are these students thinking about? You may judge for yourself from some of the questions they ask.

One night after we had studied the lesson about the rich young man who came to Jesus, asking what he must do to inherit eternal life, one young man came to me privately with a problem that had been bothering him. He said he wanted to become a Christian, but Jesus said, "Honor thy father and thy mother." Now, his father was a strong Buddhist and a kind father, but how could his son be honoring his father if he turned away from the religion of his father? Sending a prayer to God from my heart, I answered him the best I knew, and he left me, determined to become a Christian. Not long after this he came to me as happy as could be to tell me that his father was not displeased at all, but was really glad to have his son under Christian influence.

Most of these students are very much interested in America, and especially in social conditions there. Are there other religions in America? Do students in American colleges strike? Do men and women in America use intoxicating liquors? Why isn't it proper for a gentleman to smoke in the presence of a woman? Does an American gentleman ever smoke in the presence of a lady? Don't wives have to obey their husbands in America? These are a few of the questions I get. Then, too, they like to get my opinions on things Japanese. What do you think of Japanese women? Didn't you hate to leave your America to come to live here where there are not so many advantages? Aren't people in America better educated than the Japanese people?

Many students are especially interested in the study of science, and are always "brimful and running over" with such questions as "Can we believe in evolution and the Bible?" "How can we make the account of creation as told in Genesis agree with what science teaches?" "How can we explain miracles?" You see, the Japanese young people have never been taught to reverence many things which we consider sacred, and so they do not hesitate to ask about these things that trouble them.

Some students who have dipped into Socialism and come in contact with Bolshevism have no use at all for religion. They say that religion is an opiate that only degrades and deadens our faculties. I think I am quite safe in saying that such students are very scarce. I have never had any such students attend my classes. I do not think that they would be open-minded enough to study religion first-hand in order to find out whether their statements are true or not. They are willing to accept their ideas ready made from the Bolsheviks.

The same old questions that have bothered men since the beginning of the race often come up in Bible class. "Is God the Creator of all things?" "Is He a just God?" "Did He create sin and sorrow?" And then, very often comes this question: "Do you believe in immortality? and why?"

I might go on with a much longer list of questions, but I think you can see from the foregoing questions that the Japanese students are thinking about the same things that American students are thinking. I thank God that they are thinking, and I wish we could get more of them thinking about God and Christianity. There are multitudes of them who really would like to know more about Christian teachings, but they do not know just how to find out. I feel that the missionary can do a big thing in getting in touch with such students and helping them to answer some of the questions that bother them. The students of today will be the leaders of tomorrow. Let us pray that the students of today may learn to know Jesus Christ.

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

Lesson V—April 29, 1928.

THE COST OF DISCIPLESHIP.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Where thy treasure is, there will thy heart be also."—Matt. 6:21.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Isa. 55:1-5.

Here is a situation that gives promise of good and great things. Here is a young man, full of promise and possibilities, rich, probably well educated and cultured, of high social standing and of good character, morally clean, but hungering for the deeper things of the Spirit, and dissatisfied with his present achievements, seeking the answer to his problem as to how he should inherit eternal life. And there is Jesus, Himself a young Man, with a sympathetic nature, with a matchless character and personality, and with a mystic power to touch and transform life. These two, what a picture they present!

This young man wanted to know what he had to do in order to inherit eternal life? He was wise in that he came to the one who had the words of eternal life, but he was foolish in that he thought that he could inherit eternal life by doing something. Eternal life is the gift of God. It cannot be bought, it cannot be worked for, it can only be received through Jesus Christ.

It appears that the young man was a splendid moral fellow, so far as keeping the law as touching human relationships were concerned. Beginning with the commandment in regard to honoring father and mother and going on down through the other commandments touching human relationships, he could apparently truthfully say, "Not guilty. I have kept these commandments; but there is something even yet which I lack. What is it?"

Jesus soon put His finger on the weakness in the young man's character. His goodness was a negative goodness. It was exhausted in "thou shalt nots." But there was no positive outgoing love toward God which found expression in love to his fellow-man. He loved gold more than he loved God, and he refused to serve God by serving Him with his gold. Face to face with the supreme opportunity of a life-time, he could not rise to the issue, and he went away sorrowful. The picture which gave such promise turned out so tragically.

It is to be noted that Jesus did not condemn the young man at all. The young man condemned himself when, facing not so much the evil and the good, but the good and the best, he chose the good rather than the best. That is the nub of the matter. As a matter of fact, it is the heart of our own problem. Those who read this article are on the whole good people. The greatest difficulty we have is to rise to the highest and the best as it is revealed in Christ. And even though it is quite unlikely that any of us, certainly not many of us, have huge sums of money or large possessions, it is quite probable that even in our lives the supreme issue is that we love gold more than we love God. At any rate, there is something in our lives which bids for our allegiance and our highest devotion. No matter how innocent, or even how good a thing is, it must be sacrificed if it stands in the way of a higher and the highest good. The amazing and startling thing about Jesus is that we can never exhaust the application of His principles to life. A man very often begins the Christian life under the impression that it is a matter of giving up things, of rooting the evil out of his life. And of course it is. But as he goes on in the Christian life, as he grows in grace, he finds that it is not only a matter of rooting out the evil, but of planting and developing the good. Furthermore, he must not, he cannot be satisfied with growing in grace a "teeny-weeny" bit; the more he grows in grace, the more he feels he needs to grow in grace and the more he hungers for growth in grace. What an amazing figure this Lord Jesus is! How He challenges the best that is in us by stirring us to attempt the impossible!

Just a word further about Jesus and riches. Jesus did not condemn wealth. As a matter of fact, He emphasized the fact that the kingdom itself must have material things for its furtherance. But He did warn against the dangers involved in riches, and He bade His disciples to labor for true riches. One of His disciples said, "The love of money is the root of all evil." There are many things worse than to be poor.

The story of the widow and her two mites is famous, but it is usually misinterpreted. A big, strong, more or less well-to-do man will drop in a mere pittance and say, "Well, I'll give the widow's mite." It is well enough to remember that the widow gave all that she had. Liberality is to be measured not in the amount that we give, but in the amount that we have left.

Sunday, April 29, 1928.

TOPIC: "Right Attitude toward the Religion of Others."—Rom. 14:1-13 (Missionary meeting).

Some Bible Hints.

It is a Christian principle never to despise weakness or ignorance. It is an opportunity to help (v. 1).

All of us have unessential beliefs, some harmful, some harmless, and we should therefore be considerate of non-Christian friends (v. 2).

All men of all races belong to God and live to Him, whether they know it or not. They are our brothers and should be so treated (v. 8).

As Cain had to give account of himself in relation to his brother, so must we. How are we treating non-Christians? (v. 12.)

Suggestive Thoughts.

Religion should always be respected. It may be erroneous, but it is the best that the individual has, and it helps him.

We must exercise toleration. Our religious ideas cannot be forced into people. If we live aright, Christianity will prove infectious and people will want it. Intolerance is a confession of failure.

Look on the religion of others with sympathy. There is good in the lowest. In all heathen religions you will find God, and that is very much.

The wise man builds on the good that the non-Christian already has in his religion. To begin by tearing down is the sure way to failure.

A Few Illustrations.

Dan Crawford tells the story of a group of black men that traveled many miles to tell of a dream that had revealed to them that man is nothing and God is all. Crawford did not laugh at the dream, but built upon it.

Paul starts his great talk in Athens (Acts 17) with compliments. He does not rage at their idols. He shows them something better.

When a blind man blunders on the way, you do not get angry with him. You know he cannot help what he does; he is blind. Why mock the religion of others? They may be blind.

There is a danger that it is the intolerant soul who is blind. The Pharisees thought they had spiritual vision, but it was Jesus who had vision and the Pharisees were blind. There are plenty of Pharisees today.

To Think About.

What good things are there in Buddhism?

What good is there in Confucianism?

How may we best show that our religion is true?

WARREN COUNTY NEWS.

On Easter Sunday we had the privilege as well as great pleasure of visiting Antioch and Bethlehem, Warren County. We reached Antioch in time for the 11 o'clock service. Miss Pattie Coghill was there and made a splendid talk, followed by a good sermon by the pastor, all in keeping with the happy day that commemorated the resurrection of Christ our Lord. It was indeed a real joy to see these dear people so interested. At no time or place have we ever found a more reverent, more appreciative, or more kind and hospitable people than we found here. We rejoice to say that the Antioch Church is growing in members, and under the consecrated leadership of Rev. J. E. Franks, they are growing in grace and the knowledge of Christ.

At Bethlehem we found the few interested, but chances are poor for them to grow in numbers, owing to the location. We felt like letting our people know that all we have done in aiding this work has been money well spent. May we continue to give our aid and support them with our prayers until one day they will be strong enough to help others.

Antioch has sent out one minister, and others may go. Let us pray to that end.

MRS. R. J. NEWTON.

ROSEMONT CHURCH.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of Rosemont Christian Church, at their last meeting, entertained themselves at a delicious luncheon. Each member contributed something to make this luncheon more delightful, and Mrs. O. F. Smith invited us to spread our feast in her lovely home. There were thirty-nine members present. We enjoyed each other's fellowship as well as our luncheon.

After a short social hour, our regular monthly missionary meeting was called to order by our president, Mrs. O. F. Mills. Truly, any missionary society is fortunate in having such a consecrated and spiritual leader as Mrs. Mills.

After our regular business routine, a talk was made by the writer on "The Christian Home." Then our quarterly mite-box offering was taken, the entire offering and dues amounting to $45.00. The great aim of this society is to instruct and inspire its members and to deepen the love of God in their hearts, so they will appreciate the privilege of giving to those less blessed. Thus, to raise our apportionment, we do not have a show or a supper, but open our pocket-books and give as God prospers us. It is an act of worship as we drop in our dollars; and how happy we are as the treasurer announces we have reached our goal!

Besides our three other missionary organizations, two of our Sunday School classes, taught by Mrs. Gibson and Mrs. Hedley, give $50.00 and $60.00, respectively, a year to some missionary enterprise of our Church. May God lead us at Rosemont onward and upward to greater fields of service.

At the close of the meeting, the ladies expressed their appreciation to Mrs. Smith for her hospitality by a rising vote of thanks.

Mrs. J. F. MORGAN.

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.

Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.

These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies, in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. It combines with the Concordance, Subject-Index, Scripture Proper Names, etc. The 12 Maps have been carefully revised and are beautifully colored. In making orders, give the number and price.

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
One of Our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MONDAY.

LIFE'S FURROW.

"No man having put his hand to the plow and looking back is fit for the kingdom of God."—Luke 9:62.

The commonest definition Jesus gives of religion is, "Follow me." But the most of us are like Peter, saying: "Lord, I will follow Thee," but when we are taken out into life's mandates and told what it means, we are like the young man who had much riches, or the one who had to attend a funeral, or like those bidden to the marriage feast, or like Peter himself, deny ever knowing the Lord, or at most follow Him afar off.

Jesus is not laying down a law, but teaching a principle that backward or wayward glances detract and spoil. To go straight and keep on the job is the way to succeed in anything, and as naturally so in religion as in anything else.

Prayer.—Our Father, forbid that we shall be desultory. Forbid that we shall waste our time in day-dreams or in looking backwards before we reach the end of our task. But keep us close to the kingdom service by a close walk with Thee, unswerving in the path of duty and endeavoring to bring the kingdom everywhere. Amen.

A RIGHTEOUS MAN STUMBLING.

"Though a good man fall, he shall not utterly be cast down."—Psa. 37:23-28.

That a good man errs is not strange. Because we err in our weaknesses, God forgives and forgets. But we are told that our text today refers to grievous sins of the free-will such as Moses committed when he lost his head and smote the rock; such as David did when he fell in love with another man's wife; such as Peter did when he let his impulse forget his loyalty and his honor. If these divines fell, how much more shall we? It is to them and to us alike God speaks and assures us that in repentance we shall be lifted up and plant our feet on a rock again.

How loving friendly and long-suffering is God! What a blessed feeling it is that whatever mistake we make we are still wanted and we can come back and live life anew! How charitable we should be toward the faults of our brethren!

Prayer.—Our Father, we are so glad that Thou dost uphold our hands. Guide us in the affairs of our life today. Strengthen us against temptations, and if we fall may it be unwitting, and forgive us into the fullness of all righteousness. Amen.

BYSTANDERS.

"Because of the people standing by, I said it."—Jno. 11:41-45.

How does the presence of other folks effect what we say. A young lieutenant was unable to reach the keeper of the corale. He finally went in person. There were with him two young ladies. In order to impress them with a conception as to who he was, and with what authority he gave orders, he swore at the keeper and threatened him with a general courtmartial if he could not answer the phone hereafter. Had he been alone his conversation would have been quite different.

We love for other folks to have conceptions of us that places us in the halls of the great.

Jesus was interested in those who stood by, but it was with sympathy for them, and He spoke to do them good, to sweeten their thoughts, and to give them an example of love and kindness, not to show himself off in what He was, much less in what He was not. Are we satisfied with what we are doing for others? Is God satisfied with us? Our speech and our conduct should be that which will help others.

Prayer.—Our Father, as folks believe in Jesus when they heard Him, so direct our lives that they shall believe in us too because we believe in Thee. May all we do and say enlighten the multitudes wherever we go. Amen.

THURSDAY.

OUR INSPIRING SERVANT.

"He laid aside His garments, and took a towel . . . and began to wash the disciples' feet."—John 13:4-5.

Servants are called to do the lowly tasks. In the Orient, slaves do it. The disciples, true to the form of nature's bent, were arguing as to who should have the exalted seat with the Lord. The customary duty of washing the feet had been overlooked, and Jesus seeing their need, arose and became servant, giving them an example of the true spirit of life. This is the grandeur of Christ's character and of true Christianity.

Peter resented this. But Jesus reminded him that he was claiming Him as Lord and Master and Leader, and that this is what He expects His followers to do. How deliberately He does the work of a slave. "If the Lord stoop to such lowly service, should not His servants stoop also?"

Prayer.—Our Father, in heaven, show us what is the matter with our Christianity that we are ashamed of lowly tasks. Forbid that we shall ever shrink from any human need. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE MESSAGE OF THE BELLS.

"In that day shall there be upon the bells of the horses, Holiness unto the Lord."—Zach. 14:16.

The Jewish high priest wore upon occasion the ephod, and on the robe were golden bells and pomegranates. Now Zachariah foresees the time when the same sacredness and the same joy will come to the lowliest—"bells on the horses," as well as those on the priests.

From time immemorial, bells have been rung to express joy. Our historic "Liberty Bell" reposes in Independence Hall, Philadelphia. Cathedral bells brighten history. Chimes of Church bells have flung out upon the air to many millions a music that thrills the heart and points the soul upward. Now the carillons are coming with their wonderful melodies, joyous and worshipful. The significant thing is that it is religion that has fostered the music of the bells; and it is the Churches of today that are ringing the joy-bells of earth and making the joy-bells ring in our hearts.

Our lives day by day should be "joy-bells," sending out into the lives of others something of the music Christ awakens in our souls.

Prayer.—By one of the parents, asking that we, too, both young and old, may be uplifted by the music of the bells, and may welcome their invitation to unite with God's people throughout our land in worshipping Him in His holy temple.

SATURDAY.

BEING A CHRISTIAN.

"Put on the new man."—Eph. 4:21-24.

Being a Christian is not joining the Church or the mere matter of repeating a creed; neither is it being 100 per cent righteous in one's own estimation. But it is letting the principles of Christ dominate in the workings of the heart-life. It is not so much where we are nor what we are doing, whether in a place of sin or sitting in the Church with a prayer book in hand; but it is the direction in which our faces are turned, the direction in which the spirit leads us.

Prayer.—Our Father of Love, renew us in Thy Spirit, and may Thy infinite goodness and love and the lessons of Jesus be the supreme sacrifice ever before us. Amen.

SUNDAY.

GLORYING IN THE CROSS.

"God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ."—Gal. 6:14.

The long centuries have vindicated Paul, the great dreamer, in his estimate of the cross of Jesus Christ. Paul gloried in the cross because he saw in it the standardization of God's infinite mercy. It is said the grandeur of the sunset is due to the particles of dust that the clouds contain. The dust-clouds hang near the horizon, and after the sun sinks to its rest, its rays strike these clouds at a certain angle, and the rays, being unable to penetrate the clouds, are thrown back, reflecting the most brilliant hues. When the light of God's love fell upon the cross, the cloud of blackness was so impenetrable that the light seemed to break and fall upon the darkness of a lost world in a resplendence infinitely more wonderful than the glory of an exquisitely beautiful sunset. Here, at the cross, Paul had seen "divine compassion" beaming from the face of Jesus. Here, like Moses in the tent of meeting, he had seen God face to face, because "God was in Christ reconciling the world unto Himself."

No one can afford to ignore the cross, much less to scorn it. Here is the place of forgiveness, the place of sanctification, the place of vision. It is only at the cross and through the cross that we find heaven.—Rev. Alfred J. Reynolds.

Prayer.—By one of the parents, asking that our faith in Christ may be mightily strengthened, and that our entire lives may be devoted to winning others to share in the blessing of His redemptive work.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Georgia and Alabama Conferences will be held on the second Sunday in June. The place has not been decided upon, but will be provided for at an early date. The program will also appear in due time. We hope to have a great convention of our young people, and trust that every Sunday School and Endeavor Society may have a full representation present and that every Church where there is no society or Sunday School will send a delegation of young people. We are expecting our young people to have full charge of the program, and they are expecting a good time.

We are also anxious to get our summer school of Christian education upon the hearts of our young people. We must plan and pray that it be a success. We want every Sunday School teacher in the Alabama and Georgia and Alabama Conference to plan to attend this meeting. It will be inspiring to see all our teachers and superintendents gathered there. This meeting will be held at Bethlehem Junior College, about the 1st of July. I hope our young people will give this matter due attention in their approaching conventions, in both Conferences. And is it not possible for our pastors to keep this matter before their Churches, and also to arrange and pray and plan to attend themselves? Our people are entitled to the best the pastor can give them, so let us avail ourselves of all information possible for the benefit of the kingdom. I am burdened for the future welfare of our Church.

G. D. HUNT.

Dear Friends:

It is real interesting to know how people appreciate giving to help us in our work of love and charity. This spring I wrote to a number of guano manufacturers and asked for a contribution in fertilizer. The following manufacturers donated: Pamlico Chemical Co., 5 bags; Foster Royster Guano Co., 10 bags; Baugh & Sons Co., 5 bags; Farmers Cotton Oil Co., 10 bags; Smith Douglas Co., Inc., 10 bags; Swift & Co., 5 bags; Robertson Chemical Corp., 20 bags.

All of the people were happy to give, and one company said it afforded them a very great pleasure to have this opportunity to help us.

The following has been sent in since our last report: Women's Missionary Society of Beulah Church, Ala., 1 box containing towels, dresses, dress goods and one dress; Women's Missionary Society of Mt. Auburn Church, N. C., 8 dress patterns for little girls, 3 pr. second-hand shoes, socks, 1 dress and 1 suit, etc.; Mrs. Cary Welch, New Hill, N. C., 1 box containing 8 pieces goods for blouses and dress patterns for little girls.

It always makes us happy to be so kindly remembered in our work of love. We received a beautiful Easter letter from one of our former pastors some days ago, and while he is yet a young man, he was my pastor some years ago; but it did us lots of good to just be remembered. And most people appreciate just being remembered. A Christmas card, an Easter card, a letter, a bunch of flowers if we are sick—ah! it just brings a joy to one's heart to be remembered.

We received three checks this week from individuals who made us glad by remembering us at this Easter season. Sent them because they wanted to help make our little children happy.

FLOWERS IN GEORGIA.

Now, since Prof. Flowers has given us six months of his service here in South Georgia and North Florida, it seems more needful that he should have remained longer and carried on the work that he has been doing. There is nothing that goes so far toward securing good results in any kind of religious or educational work as the spirit of the person who is doing the work. Prof. Flowers has a smooth, friendly manner in going about his work that makes us feel that he is one of us. He has a great influence for inspiring us to the decision of doing things for ourselves. His self-sacrificing disposition is a convincing proof of his interest in us as individuals and as a group of Endeavor workers in the service of Christ's kingdom, and I am sure that many encouraging letters have gone to Bro. Flowers at his home in North Carolina from different young people in the South Georgia Association. His stay in our home and in our community has been the cause for much constructive thinking among the people at large. Parents were led to more fully understand their responsibility as leaders of their children in the work of character-building. It is earnestly hoped that Bro. Flowers will return to the work in the early fall.

MADGE MOFFITT WHITESELL, Editor.

Dears:

Tell me some nice days! Yes, Christmas, and Easter—of course, that is a very special day to us. Easter is a wake-up day for little children and pretty flowers. The long, long winter is the flowers' time for sleep; and at Easter time all the flowers and butterflies and trees wake up. So that is their morning. The winter is their night.

Now, dears, who was it that sent the sun to wake up the flowers at Easter time? Why, yes, it was our Heavenly Father. He doesn't wish anything to sleep always. Dear Heavenly Father, we are glad for the Easter time when everything wakes up.

MADGE MOFFITT WHITESELL.

P. S.: Kiddies, your substitute editor, Mrs. Moffitt, sends her love, though she has been quite sick.

TIMMY'S I-LIKE-YOU FAIRY.

By Margaret Warde.

"In September I remember! In September I remember! I remember in September!" Timmy sang it and sang it and sang it, sitting by Aunt Lu's kitchen table, whittling a little stick.

"Well, what do you remember?" asked Aunt Lu at last, when she was tired of hearing that droning rhyme.

Timmy smiled at her. He hadn't realized that he was saying anything. "O nuffin'," he explained. "I was just saying a sing-song. But I do remember something, Aunt Lu. When it's September, school begins, and I don't want to go."

"O Timmy!" sighed Aunt Lu, remembering the dislike he had taken to school last spring. "You do, too, want to. All the other boys—"

"I don't care about the others," declared Timmy. "I don't want to go; and besides the new teacher is cross."

"How do you know that? You can't possibly know yet," said Aunt Lu.

"O yes, I can," insisted Timmy. "She has come to stay at Jack's house, and he says she is cross, and she looks cress, and besides I do not like to go to school."

"See here, Timmy," began Aunt Lu. "Listen now—listen hard. The things you like to do are fun, aren't they? Now you go to school nearly every day. If you liked it, it would be fun."

"But I don't," interrupted Timmy.

"You just wait a minute," cut in Aunt Lu. "I said if you liked it, it would be fun. All right! Try to like it! Try to make it into fun!"

Timmy considered. "But I don't. I hate spelling and arithmetic the most, and the new teacher is—"

"Let's pretend," said Aunt Lu, "that she's awfully nice—the kind that knows splendid stories about Robin Hood and the strong man, Hercules, and new games to play at recess, and the answers to all the questions that I can't tell you about. "Remember the I-Like-You Fairy that I told you about?" Well, you know she is a very magic fairy. She can turn horrid things into beautiful ones—yes, she can! You try her, and see what happens."

So Timmy went to school with the I-Like-You Fairy tucked right into his smile.

"She does know stories! She certainly does!" cried Timmy joyously, home from school that first noon. "And when she is telling them she looks pleasant, but she scowls when I miss in spelling."

"You try that I-Like-You Fairy on spelling," said Aunt Lu. "Can't you make up a game for spelling when you're studying the words?"

"May be I can," said Timmy. And he did.

"Why do you double up your fist and shake it every time you spell a word, Timmy?" asked the new teacher.

"'Cause," said Timmy, "I'm knocking down giants. I can study harder if I knock down a giant every time I spell him right."

"That's a good game," said the new teacher. "How'd you like to spell each other down? We'll do that tomorrow—choose sides and have a spelling-match?"

After that they had a spelling-match every week, and before he knew it, Timmy found that he was a good speller.

The I-Like-You Fairy had to work very hard on arithmetic.

"What is there to like about arithmetic?" Timmy asked the new teacher, walking home from school with her one day.

After that the examples were about things that interested Timmy, like puppy dog's legs and slices of bacon and Robin Hood's arrows; it was quite exciting to get the answers. And then they had a store right in school. Timmy was the first store-keeper, and he had to learn to count money, or else how could he sell things?

One day Timmy told Aunt Lu, "I like school, and I don't need the I-Like-You Fairy any more."

works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven." Jesus has said, "I am the Light of the world," and we are to show our faith in Him, and His declaration, by the way we shine for Him; yea, by the manner in which we hold that Light aloft. "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me." "Arise, shine, for thy light is come upon thee . . . And the Gentiles shall come to thy Light, and kings to the brightness of Thy rising?"

DOES IT PAY?

BY DR. A. D. WOODWORTH.

The first doctor who came to Japan as a missionary, Dr. Hepburn, gave up a practice of $13,000 a year to receive a salary of $1,000 in Japan. One of the missionaries with whom we have had conversations has a remarkable mind for law. A good many people have had the idea that if he had given his mind to law, he might be making $100,000 a year instead of, as he has himself said, running into debt to support his family as a missionary.

But if the monetary consideration is the thing by which the scales are turned for being a missionary, one had better keep out. I think it is true that no mission boards aim to give more than a living salary. Some missionaries we have known came to Japan with college debts, and it took them a long time to get them worked off.

The missionaries went to Hawaii in 1820 and gradually the natives became Christians, and among them the kings. It is said that an Englishman went into the presence of one of the Kamehaha kings, and in a sneering tone said to him: "And what good has your religion done you?" The old king's answer was: "If it were not for my religion, just now you would be in the pot boiling for my dinner."

We were much interested in the Fiji Islands when we were there. A story told of the islands is that before the missionaries went there a whaling ship was wrecked on the islands and the crew were captured and some of them were eaten and some escaped. Many years later, one of the men who escaped, by a strange coincidence, was wrecked again on one of the islands. Remembering the former experience, he and others of the crew who got to the shore unobserved by the natives, hid themselves in the bushes, but wanting water and food, they crawled to the top of a hill from which they could look down into a valley. But when they looked, suddenly all their fears disappeared, and they walked down to a village which they saw as boldly as if they owned the earth. What did they see? A Church! Sailors are not noted, as a rule, for their religion. When they come to the wicked city of Yekchama they usually go to the worst dives in it. These sailors were not Christians, but they knew the meaning of a Church. They knew that a Church stands for kindness, friendliness, brotherliness, love to God and love to one's fellow-men. The fact is, that you can take all the fine words out of the English language and apply them to the Church and you cannot exaggerate the greatness of the Church of Jesus Christ. So these men expected to be received kindly, to be fed and cared for, protected, and again sent back to their own land; and all this came to pass. Probably these sailors would say that, so far as they were concerned, missions were a profitable investment.

In ye olden times before missionaries went to these islands, the natives were always in fear. The women could not go far away from their homes, and the men, when they went, went armed with a spear and a warclub, not knowing when they might have to fight for their lives. One time one of the converted women said that the great boon which the Christian religion brought to her was that since the natives became Christians she was delivered from the sense of fear. At present, the 80,000 natives are said to be all members of Churches, but the 60,000 Hindoos who live in the islands are a much harder class to reach. However, one of the leading foreigners in Suva, the capital, told me that human life is at present safer nowhere than it is in these islands.

Has it paid that these people have become Christian? How much is a soul worth? How much is your Christian religion worth to you? From the Jesus standpoint, it is worth more than the whole world of matter.

But so far as the missionary is concerned, the promise to those who have left all to preach the gospel, the reward is a hundred-fold now in this present life, and in the world to come life everlasting. From my own experience, I would say that the promise is literally true. But Jesus might just as well have said a thousand times. Does it pay? It does.

*Tokyo, Japan.DR. RYAN AT WINCHESTER.

It was my privilege to spend a week (April 1st to 7th) at Winchester, Va., in a pre-Easter meeting with Rev. B. J. Earp and his people. There were many meetings of the same kind held there at the same time. I found Bro. Earp and his wife to be real Christians—just such Christians as the world needs; Christians who are interested in every branch of our Father's work, and interested enough to make sacrifice for His kingdom. There were many kindnesses shown me while there, but I am under special obligation to Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Richards, in whose home I was so well cared for.

As I see the work now, I am satisfied that there is no reason why we should not have a strong, active Church in that splendid city of the Valley. I am asking our Heavenly Father that our feeble efforts while there may bring forth a fruitage that will glorify Him. May God's richest blessings rest on this Church and its pastor and his family.

WATTS.

William Watts, of Auburn, N. C., after an illness of several weeks, ceased his suffering on Wednesday, March 7, 1928, when heaven's call came to claim its own. Bro. Watts was born in Plymouth, England, February 29, 1848; came to America at the age of 28; married Miss Emma Poole in the year 1879; professed faith in Christ the same year, and joined Mt. Moriah Baptist Church. After holding his membership there for some years, he became interested in the community in the vicinity of Auburn and organized a Sunday School in an old shop-house where he worked faithfully for some time. His work resulted in the organization of Auburn Christian Church, to which he gave the land to build upon, and also $500 for the building, and at about this time he moved his membership from the Baptist to the Christian Church at Auburn, of which he was a faithful and loyal member as long as he lived.

Those left to mourn their loss are the wife and two brothers, Samuel Watts, of Auburn, N. C., and another living in England. The funeral was held in Auburn Christian Church, conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. Hall, pastor of Mt. Moriah Baptist Church.

J. A. DENTON.

MASSEY.

Adolphus Massey, after an illness of a little more than two days, departed this life for a greater one with the Lord, we feel sure, because of the faith he had in Christ as his personal Saviour, and the consistent life he lived among us. He was afflicted almost from his birth, so that he was not permitted to enjoy earthly life as some, which we trust will make heaven the sweeter for him. He was a faithful member of Auburn Christian Church for many years.

He leaves no relatives nearer than an uncle, his father having gone to his reward three years ago, and his mother many years before the father. The funeral was held in the Auburn Church on Sunday, March 4th, by the writer.

J. A. DENTON.

SMITH.

Joseph C. Smith died at his home on March 30, 1928; was born March 31, 1851; age, 76 years, 11 months and 30 days; he was married to Miss Julia Lineberry, and to this union was born five children; was married the second time to Miss Nannie Taylor. He was laid to rest in Coal Springs Cemetery. Services by the writer. May the Heavenly Father comfort the bereaved ones.

BETHLEHEM COLLEGE

WADLEY, ALABAMA

A JUNIOR COLLEGE AND HIGH SCHOOL.

Where Opportunity Awaits the Student of Very Limited Means.

GIRL'S DORMITORY.

Bethlehem College, Wadley, Ala., will open September 5, 1927. This institution is a Junior College and High School, which is co-educational, where scholarship ranks high and expense is low. It is thoroughly Christian, absolutely non-sectarian, and vitally American. A school where opportunity awaits the student of very limited means—$68.00 pays all college expenses, except books, board and room. Board, $15.00 per month, and room $3.00; total expenses for a term of nine months, $250.00.

Bethlehem College is training some of the best stock of America for Christian leadership, to be used by the nation and the world. Here is a great challenge and asset for students who wish to prepare themselves to serve in a worth-while way. The work on the new Administration Building is progressing nicely, and we will be able to begin our college work in this building when school opens this fall.

REOPENING OF SUFFOLK CHURCH.

Appropriate Services were Held to Celebrate the Event—Remodeled Church and Sunday School Adapted to Modern Usage.

The Suffolk Christian Church took another forward step in kingdom enterprise when it opened its new Sunday School building and reopened its Church on Sunday, April 22, 1928. Appropriate services were held in honor of this important event both in the Sunday School and in the Church. Advance preparations had been carefully made and the programs were carried out in an impressive way. The Sunday School met in the departments of the new building, which had been attractively decorated with flowers both in assembly-rooms and class-rooms, and also in the corridors. About six hundred and fifty were present. Everybody was delighted with the beautiful departments and the splendid equipment. Appropriate services of praise and thanksgiving were held in the respective departments under the leadership of the department superintendents. Under the new organization, the Sunday School is divided into seven departments, with separate assembly-rooms for each department, and with separate class-rooms for each class in the junior, intermediate, young people's and adult departments.

The officers of the school are as follows: general superintendent, Mr. W. S. Beamon; superintendent of cradle roll, Mrs. J. M. Butler; superintendent of beginners' department, Miss Lottie Mae Cross; superintendent of primary department, Mrs. J. M. Butler; superintendent of junior department, Mrs. W. V. Leathers; superintendent of intermediate department, Mrs. B. D. Crocker; superintendent of young people's department, Mr. J. D. MacClenny. Colonel J. E. West is teacher of the Philathea class, and Colonel E. E. Holland is teacher of the Baracca class. Mr. O. S. Smith, Sr., is treasurer, and O. S. Smith, Jr., is secretary. In addition to the departments and class-rooms already mentioned, the new building has the following rooms: a Church office, studies for the pastors, a Church parlor, a fellowship hall, a large kitchen, a Boy Scout room, a storage room, spacious cloak rooms, furnace room, toilets and ample storage space for coal.

The fellowship hall is a spacious and attractive room, located in the rear of the new building and adjoining the kitchen. It has a stage, with dressing-rooms and shower baths at one end, and is designed for banquets, socials, dramatics, illustrated lectures and movies, recreation and indoor athletics. A large gallery at the other end provides accommodations for spectators. It is planned to make this fellowship hall a very vital factor in the social and recreational life of the Church.

The services in honor of the reopening of the main Church auditorium were held at 11 o'clock, and at 8 o'clock the choir furnished special and inspiring music for the occasion. One of the features of the program was a service led by Mr. J. M. Darden, chairman of the finance committee, assisted by Mr. J. D. MacClenny, vice-chairman. After appropriate remarks, Mr. Darden and Mr. MacClenny, assisted by the pastors, burned a note representing all the outstanding debts of the Church, excepting the bond issue. Mr. MacClenny led in prayer, and the congregation rose and sang the "Doxology." The sermon was delivered by Dr. W. W. Staley. He chose as his theme, "The Glory of the Latter House," and brought, in a plain and practical and inspiring way, a message appropriate to the occasion. The evening service was featured by special music by the choir. Rev. H. S. Hardcastle preached on the theme, "The House of Prayer." Large congregations were present at both services, especially the morning service. It was a great day!

The front of the Church has been greatly changed. The accompanying photograph shows the completed effect. An attractive foyer, or vestibule, has been provided, and entrance can be made either from the north or the south entrance. The interior of the Church has been somewhat remodeled and redecorated. The choir-loft has been enlarged and paneled and the seating arrangement changed. The walls have been finished in "Craftex" and the woodwork repainted. The pews have been refinished to harmonize with the general color scheme. New lights have been installed and a new carpet furnished. New hymnals have also been provided. Organ pipes have been installed in the open space to the east of the rostrum, and this greatly improves the general appearance of the front of the auditorium. The memorial Bible has been replaced with a new one, and memorial pulpit furniture is to be presented a little later. New art-glass windows have been installed, giving tone and dignity to the Church, both from within and without. The general effect of the auditorium lends itself to an atmosphere of worship. Pastors and people hope that this bigger and better Church building will make it possible for them to do larger service in the kingdom of God.

Mr. H. L. Cain, of Richmond, Va., was the architect for the work, and Mr. Ernest Islip was the supervising architect. The building committee was as follows: Dr. W. W. Staley (chairman), Dr. J. E. Rawles, Jack W. Nurney, Hersey Woodward, Jr., and H. H. Holland. The committee to furnish equipment was as follows: Mr. A. T. Holland (chairman), Messrs. E. E. Holland, J. E. Rawles, O. S. Smith, Jr., W. S. Beamon. This committee was rather unique in its work, in that it made no outside appeal for its funds. Mr. A. T. Holland and Mr. J. M. Darden jointly furnished the equipment for the junior department, and largely through the inspiration and generosity of Mr. A. T. Holland the committee underwrote the full expense for all equipment in the intermediate and young people's departments, including pianos, and also a piano for the beginners' department. The Philathea class furnished equipment for its fine class-room.

"I AM THE WAY."

Christ said He was the way to God. The love of nature, science and art because of God—giving beauty, elevating our thoughts and ideals—but they are only "trails" after all, and not highways. Try reaching after God by these trails in the stormy weather of financial trouble, sickness and accidents. Then we learn that the highway, the one Christ made, is the safest and surest. The superiority of the highway made by the Son of God is best seen in life's bad weather. What we need is a perfectly improved through road right into the Divine presence—and Christ is that, and much more.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Several members of the Christian Church have been attending the Rural Church School Conference at Vanderbilt University. Rev. E. M. Carter gives an account of the meeting in this issue.

The First Christian Church of Eaton, Ohio, Rev. E. T. Cotten, pastor, has a junior robed choir. The Church is growing in popularity locally, and on last Sunday there were only a few vacant seats in the Church.

Rev. C. P. Garman, our veteran missionary to Japan, has sent us an account of the Japan Conference and some additional contributions from native workers. These will be read with interest as they appear from time to time in THE SUN.

Rev. E. W. Butler, of Thorsby, Ala., treasurer of the Alabama Congregational Conference, in renewing his subscription to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, has this word to say: "I enjoy the light and the warmth of THE CHRISTIAN SUN."

Judge O. W. Whitelock, Secretary of Publications of the General Convention, is planning to attend the Southern Christian Convention. It is the first time that Judge Whitelock has honored the Convention with his presence, and it will be a pleasure to have him.

Colonel and Mrs. E. E. Holland, of Suffolk, Va., were pleasant visitors to the college on Wednesday. Colonel Holland has been a trustee since Elon began. He is faithful and highly influential in all matters of Church policy and program. His work for Elon has been signally constructive.

Dean A. L. Hook and Dr. T. C. Amick, of Elon College, attended the semi-centennial commemoration of the North Carolina agricultural experiment station at State College, in Raleigh, on the 19th. The experiment station has done a real constructive work in North Carolina, and this celebration was fitting.

The board of trustees of Franklinton Christian College is going to meet during the commencement of that school, on May 15th, at 4 P. M. It is expected that the members of the board of control will all be present at that time. The school has enjoyed a great success this year. Rev. J. A. Henderson and his co-laborers, deserve high praise for their splendid service.

Miss Lucy M. Eldredge, of the Department of Christian Education of the General Convention of the Christian Church, is spending some time in the South in co-operation with Miss Pattie Coghill in field work. Miss Eldredge will attend the Southern Christian Convention at Richmond, where she will be an inspiration to the young people.

Hon. George F. Whitley and Mrs. Whitley were visitors to the college recently. They were on their way to Winston-Salem, where they attended the Easter services there. Mr. Whitley is a son of the late L. H. Whitley, in whose memory the auditorium has been erected here. He is also a graduate of Elon and of the University of Virginia and is an Elon trustee.

Members of the Christian Church are becoming very much involved in politics in North Carolina and Virginia these days. Lieutenant Governor

J. E. West is a candidate for the governorship of Virginia. Colonel Junius H. Harden, of Burlington, is a candidate for Congress from the Fifth North Carolina District, and Joe W. Stout, of Sanford, N. C., is a candidate for the State Senate from Lee County.

The following telegram from Miss Pattie Coghill was received just before going to press: "Children's Division Institute, in Henderson, May 5th to 6th, instead of date under Coming Events. Miss Helen Stearns and Dr. W. M. Jay, of Elon College, and Miss Priscilla Chase, Boston, will be on program."

We have word that Dr. Atkinson has improved sufficiently to return to his office prior to the opening of the Southern Christian Convention and that he expects to attend the session of that body. This will be cause for thanksgiving and rejoicing on the part of the entire Church. The acting editor wishes to thank the brotherhood for the ready and cordial assistance given him in his efforts to edit the paper. He is particularly grateful to the managing editor.

Dr. W. P. Minton, Foreign Mission Secretary, is to attend the Southern Christian Convention and to appear on the program. Dr. McD. Howsare is also to attend. Dr. Howsare is Secretary of Evangelism. He will also appear on the program. The General Secretary of the General Convention, Dr. Warren H. Denison, is a member of the Southern Christian Convention, and will be present.

Rev. J. Fuller Johnson, Fuquay Springs, N. C., pastor of a group of Churches in the Eastern and Western North Carolina Conferences, is quite ill at his home of double pneumonia. Bro. Johnson is one of the most active and energetic pastors that we have, and his serious illness is a real impairment of our work in these Conferences. Earnest prayer is being offered for his recovery.

Dr. J. Edward Kirby, pastor of the United Church of Raleigh, N. C., known as "The Christian-Congregational-Friends Church," has had a remarkable success in raising some $62,000 of floating indebtedness since he accepted the pastorate there in September. When this money has been paid in, the only obligation the Church will then have will be a mortgage indebtedness of $50,000. Dr. Kirby is a real leader in Christian statesmanship. He is certainly to be congratulated upon his achievement.

Rev. F. P. Ensminger, D. D., Demorest, Ga., writes that he will attend the Southern Christian Convention and that he will expect representatives of the Christian Church to attend the Carolina Conference of the Congregational Church, which meets in Asheville May 9th to 12th. The tentative program carries the names of Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Dr. G. O. Lankford, Dr. C. H. Rowland and Dr. W. A. Harper. Others of the Christian Church will be welcomed by the Congregational brotherhood.

The new Church plant of our congregation in Suffolk, Va., was opened on Sunday, April 22nd. The Church approach has been remodeled and a splendid educational plant constructed. The Suffolk Church has not said much about what it has been doing during these days of rebuilding, but it will be difficult in any place to find a more modern and up-to-date plant than this one is. Dr. W. W. Staley has served as chairman of the building committee. He and the pastor, Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, have certainly wrought well. The Suffolk Church is in position now, so far as its physical equipment is concerned and in all other respects, to render an outstanding service to the kingdom of Jesus Christ.

Dr. S. L. Beougher, in telegram, requests THE CHRISTIAN SUN to state that "Dr. Frank E. Jenkins, president of Piedmont College and chairman of Congregational education committee for Southeast, will speak on 'The Merger of Piedmont and Bethlehem Colleges' in connection with the report on colleges which will be made to the Southern Christian Convention."

Telegram to THE CHRISTIAN SUN: "Happy to report Suffolk Christian Church has raised its quota of one-sixth of pastors' salary—the largest quota of any Church in the Christian denomination. Check has been forwarded to the office of the Mission Secretary. Hope to hear from other Churches before the Convention meets. (Signed) J. M. Darden, Acting Secretary."

The Christian Temple of Norfolk is interested in organizing a "Tithers' League." The pastor, Dr. L. E. Smith, introduced a resolution at the Pastors' Conference here in January, urging the ministers of the Southern Convention to undertake to induce their members to become tithers. Dr. Smith is a man who believes in practicing what he preaches. There is no question that tithing on the part of Church members will solve all the financial problems of the kingdom.

The Department of Commerce of the United States government has issued a statement showing that in 1917 the per capita indebtedness in North Carolina was $3.85. In 1926 this indebtedness had increased to $42.03. It is now $51.44. The total indebtedness of the State to date is $153,419,200. Of this enormous amount, $94,999,600 was expended for highways, and much of the remainder on public school buildings. North Carolina is making a great showing in the world for progress, and while her debts are enormous, she has something to show for it.

Rev. A. R. Flowers will spend the last week in May lecturing, evenings only, at the Pine Grove Church, in Nash County, N. C. This Church is located in one of the most progressive sections of the county and is surrounded by a goodly number of young people who are expected to become some of the State's leading citizens in a few years. Bro. Flowers believes in the rural district boy and the rural district girl, and spends much of his time in helping them to see the possibilities of country life and to take the advantage of their opportunities. The invitation comes to Brother Flowers, jointly, from four denominations, and is the third engagement of this kind that he has filled in this community within the last four years.

Sometimes we have a way of getting discouraged and of thinking we are not doing what we should in the Southern Christian Convention; but Rev. P. S. Sailer, D. D., of Brooklyn, N. Y., has this to say: "We need thawing out a bit up here. We have quite a goodly number of the larger Churches in our denomination up here, but the first six leaders in benevolent offerings, my 1928 'Annual' tells me, are to be found in the South. In fact, twenty out of a total of thirty-five Churches giving $1,000 or more to benevolences are numbered in the Southern Christian Convention." The Christian Church in the South appreciates this word from Dr. Sailer, but even then we feel that we are unprofitable servants of the Lord. We should do far more than we are doing for His kingdom.

JESUS, A TRIBAL GOD.

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, Preacher.

"The next day John seeth Jesus coming unto him, and he saith, Behold, the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world."—John 1:29.

Here is a remarkable man, with a remarkable message, about a remarkable Saviour. He was prepared by birth, training and commitment of his own life to see Jesus, to see Him coming unto him, and to understand who He was and the breadth and nature of His mission. This in itself would make him a remarkable man, for there are those standing near Jesus who are not at all prepared to see Him, and much less to see Him coming to them with His call and command to life service, nor do they understand who He is, nor the measure of His mission. With that background, John was remarkable for what he had the faith to say. Two thousands years has not added enough evidence nor brought enough persuasion to bear upon some of us who profess to have seen Jesus coming to us, and who profess to have caught something of the spirit of His desire, to cause us to truthfully say and to substantiate by our actions that we believe Him to be a world Sin-bearer. If He be a god at all, in many of our minds, He is a tribal god.

Are We Unlike the Jews of Jesus' Day?

According to the Scriptures, there has never been a time when the best Jews have not thought of God as being the Supreme God of the whole universe. Their prophets so prophesied, their patriarchs so prayed, and their poets so sung; but many of the Jews in their common practice thought of God as a tribal god. And Jews in Jesus' day wanted Him to be, and expected Him to be, the deliverer of the Jews. Even Peter found the path to the high peaks of universal Saviourhood of Jesus hard to climb. It was the old, selfish spirit of thinking oneself superior because of some good thing one had which others did not enjoy. How differs much of the rank and file of Christendom today from that? We curse the Jew and adopt his attitude. We mock him for his meanness in thinking Christ was only a Jew, and we wonder if we have bettered a pagan country when we give Christ to them! And well we may wonder when we consider the kind of a Christ we would sometimes offer. In Christian Germany, the land of Luther, the great reformer, the land of leadership in Protestantism for a great number of years, the land where the evangelical power of the Christian message broke forth in all its fullness, we hear the slogan: "Me und Gott." England feels it has a special corner of the Church, and Scotland a special place in the heart of Christ, and France its own peculiar interpretation of Christianity, and Rome knows it is right, and America cries, "America for Americans and Christ for its citizens."

John Saw a Saviour of the World.

John the Baptist saw Jesus coming unto him, and he recognized in Him the world's Saviour. He did not say, "Behold, the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sins of the Jews"; but he allowed his imagination to leap to the ends of the earth, and he saw that Holy One of God coming into the hopes of all peoples. How we have brought our Christ to shame and made Him the subject of the jers and jests of His enemies! for while we have fought to the very death among ourselves, both politically and ecclesiastically, twenty nations between Morocco and Madagascar have been without Christ and His redemption. As Christian countries and Christian Churches, we say, "Lord, Lord," and the sins of the Congo and the Cameroun still have their cancerous careers in the hearts of Africa.

Scenes from Calvary are being Re-enacted.

"And they crucified Him and parted His garments," we are told in the Scriptures. Under the very shadow of the cross they sat down and divided His clothes among themselves. And today in so many ways we are dividing the garments of His love and righteousness. We have not shown by our actions that we believe the robes of His righteousness expansive enough to cover the sins of the whole world, nor to bind up its wounds. We have divided His garments so that it has become thoroughly conventional to think of Christ and the Church, but not Christ and commerce; we think of Christ and Sunday, but not as much as we should of Christ and Monday; we have not yet become willing to see the power of Christ placed alongside and above the power of electricity, nor can we find a place for the world's Great Citizen in the politics of even Christian countries. The inns of commerce, labor, capital, leisure, pleasure and politics are stilled barred against the Christ of Bethlehem.

We Stay Home Until Our Blood is Aenemic.

Our spiritual blood needs the tonic of a larger place and a purer atmosphere. We have stayed at home until we are aenemic. We have not had the exercise necessary in going unto all the world. We have thought that if we could only provide a place for ourselves we should do well, and we have forgotten that provision for one's self fails of provision for a place for the Christ within, and that providing for others opens the door of one's soul to the Saviour. I heard a minister of one of our biggest Churches say the other day that he was going to the bank and borrow money with which to pay a pledge to missions in this present campaign. And he is a minister who is giving more than a tenth of all he earns to the Church. But as he goes about his work in his own pastorate he will have the consciousness that he is working together with God out yonder where He is most needed. His spiritual blood is made strong and clean by the atmosphere of a larger service which he breathes. We cannot all go to benighted lands afar, but we can all help send those who can go, and who are better fitted and prepared for the work than we would be.

On every side we see signs of faithfulness. Along with that consecrated young pastors who will go to the bank for funds at a sacrifice to give unto the carrying of the gospel into other lands, there will go hundreds and hundreds of others into real sacrificial giving in order that the whole world may have the benefits of Christianity which we so richly enjoy. There are many in this congregation today who feel the real thrill of being partners with God. They go to their task tomorrow feeling that they earn money for their families' happiness, and for the success of the kingdom of Christ on earth. They think, therefore, charitable, beautiful thoughts toward all peoples and they find a happiness and a peace within which was far more than their expectations. With that attitude, littleness, meanness and sin find no place to thrive in their personalities, and in each of them the Christ has a true representative in the community. And thus is builded the kingdom of God. The faithful more and more lift their faces toward the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world, and John's voice in the wilderness is not in vain. If there be one in this midst who is not thus laying his labor, his life, and his personality into the hands of the Christ and upon His altar of service, let him turn into the fullness of that joy today and find the abundant life which the Christ gladly, anxiously gives.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S RALLIES.

The young people of more than forty Christian Churches in Eastern Virginia Christian Conference are being called to gather at a series of three rallies to be held immediately following the Southern Christian Convention in Richmond. Misses Lucy Eldredge and Pattie Coghill will be the main speakers at each of these rallies. They will come to Waverly Christian Church on Friday night, May 4th, at 8 o'clock, at which time it is hoped that all the young people from the Christian Churches in the Waverly district will be present. On Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, the second rally will be held in the Bethlehem Christian Church, near Suffolk, and all the young people in the Suffolk district are wanted at that meeting. And on Monday night at 8 o'clock, in the First Christian Church, Norfolk, the final rally will be held and all the young people of the Norfolk district are urged to be present.

It is intended that these meetings shall be one hour and a half in length; that Miss Eldredge and Miss Coghill shall have ample opportunity to present to the young people and leaders of young people the attractiveness of the Church and Christian service; that such enterprises as leadership training, Elon Summer School for young people, and active assistance in putting on the whole local Church program may be presented in brief to the young people who gather at these rallies. It is hoped that every place where young people may enter into the program of the Church may be helped by these rallies, and that young people in Eastern Virginia may feel that the finest thing on earth for them to do is to find Christ Jesus an attractive Friend in their daily living.

All pastors are urged to be at their respective rallies; leaders in all local Churches are urged to be present, and all who will are welcomed to the meetings. Let's make these rallies of young people greatly worth while in Eastern Virginia.

RICHMOND CHURCH.

We are awaiting with patience (little bit) the publication of the program for the Convention. We have full confidence in the committee that it will be a great program, given by great men and women, and that great results will be the fruitage. You will find a great people here, limited, to be sure, in their resources to serve, but they will do their best. If you are coming as a delegate, won't you please drop us a card and tell us?

We are praying our Heavenly Father that this meeting may be a "mountain-top" experience, and that we may not only see the Christ who leads, but that we may see the duty and service to which He calls us.

If you come by automobile, you will find our Church on the corner of Grove Avenue and Shepard Street, just two squares west of the Boulevard. If you come by train, get on a Belmont car and get off at Grove Avenue and go east one square. The Belmont car passes both stations. All the meals will be served at the Church, beginning with noontime lunch on Tuesday, May 1st.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

FLORIDA—WITH OBSERVATIONS.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

Along with its other attachments and appurtenances for the healing of mind and body, this Florida Sanitarium has a "social hostess." Her business seems to be that of making everybody in general happy by seeing to it that no guests or patients are strangers, and then to keep fresh flowers of every conceivable variety in season in parlors, lobbies, dining-room, living-room, everywhere. If I were an artist I would write an editorial some time on the ministry of flowers. In which event I would come to this sanitarium to get my text and material. I never saw flowers about a sanitarium before. Of course, one sees a basket or a vase here and there about the average sanitarium, and if a patient has friends, flowers are sent in. But this institution has employed constantly a landscape; a gardener who sees to it that the scenery about the place, with its marvelous variety of plants and shrubbery, shall cheer the soul and gladden the eye; and a gardener with his helpers who grows flowers of richest hue, fragrance and coloring by unnumbered basketsful daily, till the whole place is vibrant with color and joyful to the heart of any and all who love the beautiful and care for the fragrant. Another appurtenance and belonging of the institution is a chaplain. His business seems to be to help keep our consciences clear, to visit the sick in their rooms if they wish, to cultivate good fellowship among patients and guests, to ask the blessing (say grace) at meals, and at 7 P. M. to conduct for half an hour only a delightful vesper service in the spacious parlor, which, with its cushioned chairs and easy lounges, forms a notable and conspicuous part of the first floor of the building. Bible reading, wholesome, helpful comment thereon, familiar hymns by all, constitute the service; and, believe me, the guests and patients come to hear and stay to enjoy the vespers. Victrola, high-powered radio, piano all add in season their contribution of music and entertainment, and not infrequently artists are brought in evenings to sing in concert or play in orchestra to cheer the sick and heal the invalid. Gentle reader, if you happen to be either gentle or a reader, take it from me, there are many helps to the healing of these bodies of ours besides drenching them with drugs, prying into them with knives and forceps, or keeping them confined to cheerless sick-rooms. There are natural and divine restoratives, and those skilled in the healing art resort to these secrets of nature and call on these divine agencies to help them out.

But I have no disposition today to keep my readers—if there be such—inside the walls or grounds of a hospital. The day is too lovely and the sun too balmy for that. So the aforementioned social hostess invited the also aforementioned chaplain and wife, and this writer also, not aforementioned, to join her for a day's outing and picnic seventy-five miles away, at Daytona Beach. The day was a joy forever; not a cloud, a breeze strong enough to be comfortable, and a sun shining with a glow and a friendliness that dispelled all gloom. The roads were perfect, and the chauffeur considerate in her comfortable Nash sedan at forty-five miles the hour. The first stop was at Sanford, county seat of Seminole County, which has the distinction of growing and shipping each year more celery than is grown in the whole State of California. Sanford's "zoo" attracted us, with its abounding collection of alligators, serpents, foxes, bears, wild cats and other native species of uncomfortable odor and variety. But Seminole County abounds in other products, and varieties. Corn is now shoulder high and "laid by"; Irish potatoes are in the digging; cabbages are going out in car lots, beans in crates, squash vines aglow with their great yellow blossoms, cucumber and melon vines trailing out across the fallow rows, and boundless acres of celery everywhere—some in the shipping, some in the seeding, some in the setting; celery in all stages from "the cradle to the grave," for they have no closed season on celery-growing in that county.

Our next stop was at Deland. This is principally noted as the seat of Stetson University and the home of Mrs. J. W. Page, formerly of Burlington, and whose father, now of sacred and blessed memory, Bro. Virginus S. Kilby, of Suffolk, Va., was regular lecturer for many years in our Suffolk Christian Sunday School. Mrs. Page has a lovely home in Deland, where she abides in quest of health and thinks Florida about the only State in the Union. And Stetson University is a beautiful institution. I told my traveling companions I took a pardonable pride in its glory and achievements, for I had been wearing Stetson hats ever since I could remember, and so had made my contribution to the purse and income of the man who gave his millions to make the institution that bears his name. And his university, like his hats, has the quality all right, if appearances count for anything. And then to Daytona Beach. This is the most marvelous beach in all the world. In fact, it is one of nature's freaks and wonders. Three hundred and more feet wide when the tide is low, thirty miles long, straight as an arrow, and immediately that the tide recedes from it, it is as smooth, as firm, and almost as hard as a waxed floor or polished marble. We drove right along behind a tide that was receding, and the hostess said her car weighed 3,000 pounds, and yet the wheels left no imprint to trace their going. No wonder cars are brought here from all over the world to try their speed and match their efficiency. Daytona Beach is one of the great God's masterpieces of perfect road and highway construction. We had our picnic luncheon on the beach—a luncheon so beautifully and abundantly prepared and provided by our chaplain's good wife, an adept in the culinary art. A drive beside the murmuring, restless waves of the broad Atlantic over the only perfect automobile highway ever yet constructed on this earth; and then a twenty-mile drive along the banks of Indian River, a stop and brief stay in beautiful, palm-planted, pine-growing, moss-hanging New Smyrna.

Well, it was a glorious and a happy day—one to sweeten life and to make one in the evening say, "Loving Heavenly Father, Thou art the Creator of this wonderful world, and we adore Thee for Thy lovingkindness to mankind and to us in giving us life and a day." This good physician here at the sanitarium insists that he knows more about my health and physical needs than I know. He says he wants me to be able to outclimb and outrun a mountain goat when I go, so he constrains me to tarry for two or three weeks yet. (I don't quite see why he classed me with the goats unless it be he thinks, and has intimated, that I am so hard-headed.) I bow to superior wisdom, especially when it has done so much for me, and will do my best to grow stronger yet. J. O. A.

THE VALUE OF AFFLICTION.

Nothing is more universal than affliction. It touches all people and all interests. The rich and the poor suffer alike; the educated are no more exempt than the illiterate. In fact, the higher in the scale of being, the keener the suffering. There are all grades of affliction, as there are all grades of human conditions. Reverses hurt the rich worse than the poor; mistakes hurt the educated more than the uneducated. Sin hurts the Christian more than the sinner. The greatest sufferer on account of sin was the sinless Jesus who "was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin." Suffering is a part of human existence and human experience. "Man that is born of a woman is of few days and full of trouble." Age does not exempt human beings from affliction. Babies suffer as well as the oldest men and women. Affliction touches body, mind, and spirit. Pain afflicts the body, anguish the mind, and conscience the spirit. All suffer at times, and sometimes all suffer together—body, mind, and spirit.

Affliction does several things for man. It tempers the individual himself; blunders human pride; failures reduce self-importance; and guilt makes one ashamed of himself. Individual success in any department of human endeavor may set one above his fellows in attitudes, ordinary relations, and such contacts as make up human society. Nothing brings man to himself more than affliction. It brings him to a sense of dependence upon God and other men, takes out of him pride and self-sufficiency. If you want to find man as his best self, go to him on a bed of affliction, in bereavement, when his store has been closed, or his credit is gone and his supposed friends have forsaken him. Then you will find the real man, stripped of all pretense or show. Affliction brings man to himself, his neighbors, and his God.

Affliction stirs within man the spirit of sympathy for others in like condition. Even ordinary disease begets within human beings sympathy for those who are afflicted with the same disease. A rheumatic sympathizes with a rheumatic. There is a common fellowship between two men who have lost their arms, their position, their wives, or their health. There is no bond of sympathy like the bond that is woven in the loom of affliction. Every thread in the web of common suffering is a strong cord to bind human beings together. This would be a heartless world were there no affliction. It is the travail of human society that brings forth real sympathy. Without this sympathy this world would be cold and human life would be solitary in its experience. It comes to pass, therefore, that affliction is a blessing to mankind. "Before I was afflicted I went astray; but now have I kept Thy word." The captain of their salvation was made "perfect through sufferings."

Affliction has created and maintained the eleemosynary institutions of Christian civilization, such as orphanages, old folks' homes, institutions for the blind, the feeble-minded, the insane, the wayward, and all provision for the helpless, the unfortunate, and even the criminal class. Hospitals belong to this same class of provision for the afflicted made by the sympathy of mankind. Sympathy expresses itself in all provisions made for man. None of these institutions would exist if there were no affliction; and if there were no affliction, sympathy would die. It is the only thing that holds mankind together. Families never get together till some member fails in business, is afflicted, or dies. The value of affliction is manifest in numberless ways.

THE CHRISTIAN CIRCLE.

We often hear it said that certain lines of conduct form a vicious circle. There is a Christian circle, too. It is beautifully illustrated in the Transfiguration scene.

In this Transfiguration scene, Peter, James and John, with Jesus, on the mount, enjoyed ecstatic visions. The law, the prophets, and the good news of the gospel are all present in that exalted scene. It was natural for the three disciples to wish to continue in such a delightful situation, but it could not be so.

We cannot live on the mountain-tops. Moments of spiritual exaltation are always to be coveted. They are the inspiration for the dull, steady pull of Christian service. Just as the crest of the wave always suggests a trough before and after it, just so the mountain-top experiences of spiritual living with their ecstatic joys and beatific visions suggest valleys of duty both before and after.

It was inevitable, therefore, that following the Transfiguration scene Jesus should lead His three disciples down the mountain-side to where their nine companions were with a multitude. It was inevitable too that there should be a demon-possessed lad that needed healing. Service should always follow spiritual exaltation.

We are so prone to be exactly as Peter was on the Mount of Transfiguration, and following some rare moment of spiritual happiness in a revival season or in a prayer service or in a worship experience we determine that we will continue to live out our days in such delightful surroundings. And when we so conclude, we invite disappointment for ourselves and have missed the inner meaning of the spiritual joy we have been privileged to experience. Spiritual exaltation is not an end in itself, but is a means to an end—a means to fit us for service; a larger and better service for our fellow-men. Pity we cannot learn this!

But following the scene in the valley, where the lad was healed, our Master taught His disciples that fasting and prayer which led to spiritual exaltation must likewise follow duty well performed, and so the Christian circle becomes complete.

Prayer, service prayer—in endless succession, this is the Christian circle. There are those of us who so thoroughly enjoy our moments of spiritual exaltation that we cherish them as the ultimate purpose of the Christian life. There are those of us who become so enamored in serving our fellow-men that we forget to pray. The Christian circle teaches that both prayer and service are necessary; that prayer prepares for service, and service requires prayer. Happy is that Christian who has

Rev. Jesse H. Dollar says:

I have read every suggestion that has been made with great interest. I should like to see the "Forum" continued in THE SUN. I believe it could be a great addition to our already great paper.

Many good suggestions have been made in regard to the problems which face the May Convention, and as to ways of solving them. The need of Elon and Bethlehem, unity with the Congregational Church, consolidation of THE SUN with the Herald of Gospel Liberty and others of like importance have been mentioned. They are certainly every one deserving. There is one other opportunity which I have been thinking upon for several months which I should like very much to see our Church lead out on. We evidently like to talk about Christian unity. Our papers are filled with it. I hope our hearts are filled in like proportion. It seems to me that a good way to promote a consolidated literature for our children. Some may not want to wait for the fruits, but I believe that is the surest and safest plan to promote. When we set our children to thinking alike in religious matters, we can grow Christian unity in the Sunday Schools. It may come sooner, but I doubt it. I am aware that there is some effort being put forth in this direction at the present, but the issue needs to be extended. It needs to be taken in hand and carried to a finish. I should like to see some move made toward the consolidation of all our Sunday School literature publishing houses.

Rev. John G. Truitt says:

Some of the things we dare not side-track in our coming Convention are: the Spirit of Christ, evangelism, men, young people, boys, missions, education. Why pick that list? Why not mention several others also? "Those that are whole need not a physician." Many other important things will surely find their place in the considerations. I fully appreciate the fact that two days and two learned the prime excellency of the Christian circle in its endless succession of prayer, service, prayer. Let us pray for missions, for example; then let us give or go; then let us pray again. This is the true Christian circle. W. A. H.

OUR MOUNTAIN WORK.

BY REV. S. E. MADREN, Pastor.

As to whether we shall continue our mountain work is a matter left with those who are so enthusiastic over the cause of missions to say, "We have a determination to do so." If I might be permitted to answer this question in the way which I think the sentiment of the people should sanction, I would answer it in the affirmative by emphatically saying, "Yes!" There is no doubt in my mind but that we shall. Now, let me give you a few reasons why I think so.

Miss Iola Hedgepeth (now Meredith), spending a few weeks of voluntary work in Franklin and Patric Counties during the summer of 1919, made this statement in an article entitled "The Mountains as a Mission Field," and published in THE CHRISTIAN SUN February 18, 1920: "In setting forth the needs of missions in both home and foreign fields, little or no emphasis has been laid upon the needs of the mountain people, many of whom are living in sin and darkness almost half-days are short when we come to think of the important things claiming our attention; but I am positively certain that we shall not do well to overlook a spirit of prayer, a spirit of anxiety to have Christ's mind on every point, and we shall greatly need to pray. Why not pray in the off-minutes in homes, rooms, and places of rest rather than spending so much time talking about the weaknesses and foibles of our colleagues? It is not necessary to have a lot of program time allotted to formal prayer to cause our Convention to feel the weight of prayer. Jesus found time and place to pray, which time and place was not always on the program.

Like a noise from the stables of King Saul comes the announcement by the Christian Herald that our Church has lost members rather than gained them during the past year. Is it a mistake? Well, perhaps; but even so, the gain has not been sufficient to fill the world with wonder at our spirit of evangelism. We need to sound that note. It is great to unite, and I am for union, but it is greater to save the unsaved and create a bigger faith by our faithful application of ourselves to the first and foremost task of the Church.

Ten thousand men in our Convention should be led into concerted action for Christ, young people should be made to feel our desire to see them enter fully into the work of the Church, and the boys cannot be overlooked—for we have a problem there. Women are finding their place in the forefront, and the children they bring with them; but boys of the upper 'teens are not being challenged in such way as will make for the biggest fidelity and loyalty in future years. And the two causes of missions and education are tugging at the very vitals of our Church as never before. I hope and pray and believe that our folks are coming to this Convention for Christ and His kingdom on earth as we have never done, and that we are going to seek the wisdom of God as consecrated Christian men and women.

equal to that of heathen lands." Now, we know that where there is so much sin it is due to ignorance—not only of intellectual knowledge, but also of a spiritual knowledge of Jesus Christ and His teachings.

Another quotation from Miss Hedgepeth's article, as referred to above, reads as follows: "In the recesses of the Appalachian Highland of Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee, and Kentucky, there are 300,000 neglected people on the byways of civilization. The things that mean advancement to us seem to have passed them by—such as railroads, telegraphs, automobiles and facilities in general which might connect them with the outside world. . . . Not only is the knowledge of the mountaineer limited as to the outside world, but many of them, especially the women, know little or nothing of the world adjoining them. Many of their lives are limited entirely to the one little mountain in which they were born, reared, married, and are now bringing up in the same way children whose opportunities for development are no better than those of their parents and grandparents of many years ago."

While it is true that the people of the mountain sections have not had the best of advantages toward development, yet conditions as they are today are somewhat better than they were a few years ago. Especially is this true in the Fancy (Continued on Page 6.)

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Mistakes are good teachers. What one learns through a mistake is not forgotten; and it is the things that abide that count in education. Mistakes are of many kinds, but they are innocent. To miss spelling a word, or answering a question, or solving an example, when an honest effort has been made to answer correctly, cannot be counted in blame against a student; but the correction and explanation of it may embarrass one who is anxious to be correct in the work. But those questions missed and explained are remembered. To the sensitive soul, all mistakes are embarrassing. If one takes the wrong road and is put in the right road by the kindness of another, that road is remembered. People learn by their mistakes more than by their successes. "A burnt child dreads the fire," illustrates this lesson.

A mistake at a fashionable dinner makes a lasting impression upon the offender. The best lessons in business are learned through mistakes, and the best lessons in the kitchen are learned in the same way. Conscious mistakes stir up those who make them to try to correct them. Human beings never repent until they realize that they have sinned against God; and all human apologies grow out of conscious misconduct or mistreatment of others. People who never realize that they have made mistakes make little improvement. A false investment makes the investor cautious. When the farmer plants something that will not grow on his farm he learns a lesson. When he uses fertilizer that does not suit his crop, he becomes wiser. When the merchant puts into his store goods that customers will not buy, he does not buy again of that drummer. I made this mistake once walking with an educated woman when I was just out of college: I said to her, "Do you see those beautiful dan-de-lions?" She said, "They are den-de-LIONS." I was humiliated. I went to the dictionary and found that this April yellow flower was called den-de-lion because the leaf is shaped like a lion's tooth. It means the tooth of a lion. That mistake led me to know what I would never have known if I had not been embarrassed by the mistake. We learn our best lessons through our mistakes. People who think they know, and do not admit mistakes, have little opportunity to learn. Life is a school, and ignorance is the best scholar. People who make no mistakes make no progress. All great inventors made mistakes and then improved their inventions. Columbus made a mistake in his plans to sail to the Orient; but he discovered America. He not only learned by his mistake, but the whole world learned by his mistake. Theologians have made mistakes; but their efforts led the world to a fuller knowledge and appreciation of Jesus Christ. Wise men make more mistakes than fools. Fools make no mistakes because they do not try to correct any. The teacher who makes a mistake and discovers it is all the better teacher, and all subsequent classes get the benefit of it. The lawyer who makes a mistake in a trial will rarely ever make that mistake again. The marksman who misses the mark tries harder the next shot. Real progress is made through mistakes, and real character is attained by repeated efforts after failure. Musicians learn by missing notes.

ELON LETTER.

Every two years Elon College is called upon to render an account of its stewardship to the Southern Christian Convention; and this is as it should be. Elon College is the child of the Southern Christian Convention, is legally controlled by it through trustees of its own nomination. But for the loyal support of the Convention in its efforts to secure funds and students, the college would be helpless. The college does not report directly to the Convention through the trustees, but through a committee, some of whom are trustees and some of whom are not, but they get the facts of their report from the college and are able to furnish an independent judgment on the college and its plans. This is even better than if the trustees themselves should report.

At the approaching session of the Convention, the Board of Education and the Board of Christian Education will both report on the afternoon of Thursday. Following these reports, there will be a general discussion.

I also understand that there will be a banquet between the afternoon and evening sessions on that day when young people's work will be given a special boost under the leadership of Miss Pattie Coghill, secretary of the Board of Christian Education, and Dr. C. H. Rowland, president of that board.

The evening session on Thursday will be featured by two addresses by outstanding visitors to the Convention. President Lewis H. Keller, of the Atlanta Theological Seminary, Atlanta, Ga., is to give an address outlining his interest in Christian education, with special reference to the affiliation of the seminary with Elon College. Following Dr. Keller's address, Dr. Robert L. Kelly, executive secretary of the Council of Church Boards of Education and of the Association of American Colleges, will speak. Dr. Kelly knows more about theological education and American colleges than any other living man. He has published a monumental work entitled "Theological Education in America," and two outstanding books on colleges. His first college book was entitled "Present Tendencies in American Colleges." His second book is just off the press and is entitled "The Effective College." Three chapters in this latest book of Dr. Kelly's are given to the discussion of the place of religion in the American college that is to be effective. The Southern Christian Convention may look forward with pleasure to the utterances of these two distinguished educators.

Following the report of the Board of Education in the afternoon, there will no doubt be a thorough consideration of the needs of the college. The report will likely recommend an affiliation between the Atlanta Theological Seminary and Elon College, the granting to the Elon Alumni of the right to nominate certain trustees, and permission within three years for the college to undertake an endowment campaign to discharge its indebtedness, thus relieving the Convention of the bonds that are issued and making the net endowment of the college a million dollars.

Every question that comes before the Southern Christian Convention is important. It is hardly proper to say that any particular issue is of major importance or is more important than another. It is safe, however, to say that no report of the Board of Education in recent years has carried with it such far-reaching recommendations as the one that will be presented to the Southern Christian Convention May 3rd. It is hoped that the consideration of the report will be thorough and complete.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

Every day we are reading or hearing of either new or remodeled Sunday School buildings and plans all mapped out for the up-to-date organized departmental Sunday School. North America is almost completely organized by State, province and territory for the betterment of the cause. Every department is studied and superintendents selected to take charge of each. This is all very fine, for the Sunday School is a great institution, and without it no Church can really be alive and go forward; but how about the hundreds of people shut in, who, on account of home duties, affliction, or other causes, are unable to attend Sunday School?

Right here we see the great need for the home department, "and it is one of the recognized departments. Not the individual, but the family is the unit of society, and the home department of today, true to its name, aims to unite in common interest all the members of the family in the study of God's Word, His teachings, His love, and His care."

There must be those in every Church who are willing to walk and talk, to find members for the home department, find one interested person to lead in the work, and it will succeed.

Now, I wish it were possible to interest the pastors and Sunday School superintendents of every Church in the Southern Christian Convention in home department work. Then I feel sure a superintendent would be appointed from each Sunday School to take charge of the home department work. The motto is, "All the Church in the Sunday School, all the Sunday School in the Church, all for Christ."

OUR MOUNTAIN WORK.

Gap territory, where our work is now located. Mrs. Iola Hedgepeth Meredith, former worker at this place, recently made this statement: "I can see a great deal of difference since I came here. One can hardly realize the change that has been made."

The people of this section are meeting improved conditions. The National Highway No. 121, which has recently been constructed across the mountain section of Fancy Gap is affording a great opportunity as an outlet to many of the people who have been accustomed to the rugged, winding way leading across the Blue Ridge Mountain. Much improvement is also being made in other highways and public roads. And as we all know, good roads add a lot to the development of any community.

Another thing that is adding to the development of these communities is the schools, and especially the two which the mission board has in charge. There are parents—fathers and mothers of three, five or more children—who are unable to write their names. Should this condition exist twenty-five years from now, it will be because they fail to take advantage of the opportunities which are placed before them.

Although the improved road conditions furnish pleasant ways by which the farm produce may be hauled to market, and the schools serve as social centers for the children; yet there is a little dissatisfaction among some. This is shown by the fact that a number of the younger people are seeking employment in the cities. Some serve as cooks, others as employees in hosiery mills, while others are engaged in different jobs.

Coming to our topic, "Shall we continue our mountain work, and why?" I will state that one of the greatest reasons "why" is that they need the gospel message of Christ. They need it in the practice of their every-day life. "Moonshin-ing" exists in many places, and is generally the cause of so much of the disorder that is carried on. Respect for the home is not so great where such conditions occur and where the women uphold the process practically equal to the men. How can circumstances under such conditions be anything but immoral? While things have made some change, yet there is much of the illegal act practiced in the backwood sections.

No doubt you are wondering within your minds just what type of people these mountaineers are. I have never dealt with a much more clever people. They are appreciative of the efforts put forth to help them, both morally and spiritually. As some one has said: "If they like you, they are your friends; but if they dislike you, they are vice versa." They are good-natured, but many of them have the old clannish ways. This, of course, is a barrier that must be overcome through persistent efforts of teaching. While older minds are set and their ways are hard to change, nevertheless, the younger generations can be trained from a different point of view. We need not think that all the people are of this type just because some of them are; but think of them as creatures whom God loves and sent His Son, Jesus Christ, to die for them that they might believe on Him the same as you and me. I find some of the people to be as earnest, conscientious Christians as any one would expect to find. On one hand, there are those who are possessed with superstitions and "hardshellism" which has its own doctrine, and on the other hand there are those who know Christ's love and have profited by their religious experiences.

Shall we continue the work? It is our duty to do so, and help those people in any way possible. As conditions have been worse than they are at the present time, and much improvement has been made since we opened our work there in 1920, and since they need our help to guide them along the obscure paths of life—do you not think that Christ expects us to lend a helping hand? If we sow the good seed, we may expect it to bring forth fruit in due season. "My word shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it" (Isa. 55:11).

With the two Church buildings which furnish plenty room for Sunday School and the week-day school, and the neat little parsonage which affords living-room for the pastor and other workers, I think it would be foolish not to continue the work. There is no field of service which extends an invitation that is more needy and more promising for the missionary enterprise than some of those in the rural mountain sections where the people have been kept from close contact with civilization. The challenge is before us. What shall we do?

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary.

MISSIONARY RALLY.

The day was fine! The spring sunshine was making birds sing and flowers burst into bloom on the morning of April 3rd, when men and women, young men and maidens, met in the modern and delightful Richmond Christian Church for a "Day of Missions." There was a fine spirit of fellowship and optimism, and surely there could be nothing else on a beautiful spring day in Old Virginia.

The Richmond Church is so inviting and comfortable, and the mission workers know it so well, though some had never seen it before, that words of welcome were scarcely necessary in order for the people to feel at home; but in the absence of the pastor, Mrs. C. C. Ryan said the welcoming words with such eloquence and sincerity that there could be no doubt but that all were welcome. The response by Mrs. E. O. Cockes was also unusually fine, both in construction and delivery.

The roll-call showed that all societies were represented, and that some visitors from Churches with no societies were present. Delegations were smaller than usual, perhaps because the distance was greater, but nothing was lacking in interest and enthusiasm. Reports showed that the local societies are hard at work and indicate that fine things will be reported to the annual missionary conference.

On account of sickness in her home, Mrs. O. M. Cockes, the president, could not be present, but her splendid address was read by Mrs. W. S. Barrett, who also presided with dignity and decorum.

The presence of Rev. and Mrs. D. P. Barrett, our missionaries to Porto Rico, added much to the delight of the workers who for so long have tried to help them by sending funds. Their addresses, which told in intimate fashion of just what they have been doing and want to do in that "Rich Port," were the outstanding features of the program for the day. All were interested and were glad to hear even of the "pressing needs" which call for funds at once. The offering, which amounted to $15.00, was given to them to be used for the thing they want most.

Our work in story form was read and explained in an interesting way by Rev. C. E. Gerringer, who also conducted the afternoon devotional in a very impressive and helpful manner.

The writer had the pleasure of presenting the chart which showed the goals for each society, and of talking concerning the necessity of all being evangelists.

There was just a bit of sadness manifest because of the absence of the much-beloved Mission Secretary, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, but all were delighted that he is soon to be back among us. A night-letter was sent to him bearing greetings and good wishes, which he reports to have received and greatly enjoyed.

The open discussion in the afternoon concerning missionary problems was entered into so heartily that the time for adjournment came all too quickly. After a busy and very happy day, the missionary enthusiasts returned home from the capital of the State with a determination to work even better for the spread of the gospel to the ends of the earth until that time when all shall meet in the city above and dwell in the "house not made with hands."

PROGRESS IN FOREIGN MISSIONS.

This group at one of our outposts, Descalabrado, Porto Rico, is just one of the many opportunities we have to teach the children in our field of the riches of Christ. The chapel in the background is the one built and furnished complete at a cost of a thousand dollars by the Warren, Ind., Church two years ago. We are in tremendous need for at least two more of these chapels, and some congregation ought to volunteer as Warren did to furnish the money to build them. What greater investment in Christian work overseas could you desire than that of reaching a group like this with Christian education?

In Porto Rico our Church is responsible for seventy thousand people. If we fail to reach them they will not be reached.

INTEREST IN MISSIONS.

BY MRS. W. M. JAY, Reporter.

The Willing Workers of Waverly are doing some real instructive work by teaching the children more about our missionaries. They make most of their goal by the use of a birthday globe in which they deposit their pennies for each year of their age on their birthdays. They also have an egg hunt on Easter Monday, when each child pays five cents.

The Newport News Willing Workers' Society has twenty members and holds very interesting meetings each third Sunday. They are working on the pageant, "Children of Many Lands," which they will give soon.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Suffolk has just completed its study of "The Straight Way Toward Tomorrow." They have had two study classes, meeting at the same time in the homes for six consecutive weeks, using a different teacher each time. They report a very helpful and interesting course and had an average attendance of forty-five each week.

"I have been pleased to note that the work of our women in the cause of missions was to have some publicity through a page in our Church paper—THE CHRISTIAN SUN. As I was teaching a class in history some days ago, we were discussing the Olympic games and the marathon of those days long ago in far-away Greece, my mind turned to the marathon of the present day and our interest in the various features of the race now going on from California to New York City.

"And then comes to me the thought of the great marathon in which each individual is having a part. I asked myself the question, 'Where do I stand in this race? Am I doing my very best to be victorious?' What are the women of the Southern Christian Convention doing? Are we in the race to obey the command of Christ when He said,

'Go ye, therefore, and make disciples of all the nations?' Oh, that we might enter this race with renewed energy and 'run and not be weary,' and then at the last be able to say with Paul, 'I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith.'" (Signed) Mrs. J. W. Patton.

SAM DAVIS IN DEMAND.

To our Pastors:

I am very glad to say that I have booked Mr. and Mrs. Sam Davis for revival services up to June 1st. If any pastor would like to have them in their revival services after June 1st I would be very glad to hear from them.

I quote below some letters that I have received from the pastors of the Churches where they have held services.

I hope to hear from you.

J. M. DARDEN.

Dear Bro. Darden:

I wish to express my appreciation of the wonderful service rendered at Liberty (Vance) Sunday, March 25, 1928, at 3 P. M., by Mr. and Mrs. Sam Leonard Davis. I am sure that in expressing my appreciation I am also expressing the sentiment of all those present.

It was a service that was impressive and uplifting to the people here. We shall long remember that sacred hour.

I find praise on every side of the excellent music by Mr. Davis and the singing and gospel message delivered by Mrs. Davis.

Sincerely,

H. E. CRUTCHFIELD.

Henderson, N. C.

Dear Bro. Darden:

It is with pleasure that I write you concerning Mr. Sam Leonard Davis and his good wife. They were with me last night in my Church service and rendered a splendid service. Mr. Davis is the best pianist I have ever heard. Mrs. Davis sings well and also speaks well from the pulpit. I think they make an excellent evangelistic team, and thoroughly efficient and capable of taking charge of a revival meeting for any Church. My people heard them gladly and with much profit.

Yours sincerely,

E. B. LOVING.

Portsmouth, Va.

Dear Bro. Darden:

It was a real pleasure to have you bring to us Mr. and Mrs. Davis for last Sunday evening's service. Our people here graciously enjoyed the service. Rarely does one ever have the opportunity of receiving such splendid messages and so impressive through both the music and the sermon. Many of the people here had heard Mr. Davis previous to this service, consequently were expecting good things from him, and I am glad to say none were disappointed. But many were surprised when they learned that Mrs. Davis was to sing and preach. Her message was certainly an appealing one, and found its way to the hearts of the hearers.

It is our prayer that God may continually use Mr. and Mrs. Davis in this great work, and may the Spirit of the Master continue to find right of way through their services.

Yours in His service,

Henderson, N. C.

D. M. SPENCE.

Dear Bro. Darden:

Having visited in the Catawba Springs section since you were here, I find that the people were very much pleased with the service by Bro. Davis and his wife. Many have spoken of them in high terms.

Here, around Fuquay Springs, there has also been much said in a commendatory way. They were simply charmed at the music rendered by Bro. Davis, and the gospel message which was brought by Mrs. Davis. Many said it was the sweetest service they were ever in. I think it was enjoyed by all. We wish for Bro. Davis and his wife great success.

Yours in Christ,

J. LEE JOHNSON.

Fuquay Springs, N. C.

Dear Mr. Darden:

At a recent prayer-meeting it was our privilege to have at Trinity Mr. and Mrs. Samuel L. Davis, of Norfolk. They appeared before a very large congregation—one of the largest week-night congregations that I have ever seen at Trinity. The Church was filled almost to its capacity. I do not hesitate to say that some of the best musical talent and many of the most cultured people of the city were present. In every sense of the word, Mr. and Mrs. Davis were a wonderful success.

Mr. Davis is truly a great pianist. There is not only the skill of a great musician in his playing, but the soul of one who knows the music of heaven. He is truly the best I have ever heard.

Mrs. Davis led the singing in a most excellent way. She made a soul-stirring address. The invitation was given in an appealing manner.

I consider that any preacher will be most fortunate in securing their services for a revival. They impressed me as being co-operative and with that unusual power to adapt their methods to reach the particular congregation before them.

I hope that I may have the pleasure of having them again.

Very truly yours,

Petersburg, Va.

C. C. BELL, Pastor.

CHIBA LEADS MEETING.

By Miss Martha R. Stacy.

The pastor was away, arranging for the funeral of a near relative. The Church treasurer was working nights at the ice factory, where he is employed. The young deacon, next in line to lead, is a forester, and was out on business in the hills. The pastor's wife, the missionary, and the Bible woman were all present, and any one of them could lead prayer-meeting, but perhaps there was a better way. Of the others present at the time for service to begin, there were only five. Mr. Chiba, a young man, employed in a ship office from 6:30 A. M. till 6 P. M. or after, seven days in the week and fifty-two weeks in the year, but who has lately become an earnest and active Christian, won through attending the English night school at the Church; his seventeen-year-old sister whom he is now trying to win for Christ; a high school boy who was baptized at the same time as Mr. Chiba; and two young apprentices who were first attracted by our pastor's street preaching, and have joined his temperance society but are not yet Christians. They like to attend evening services, and one of them has taken upon himself the duty of keeping the stove stoked with coal till he nearly roasts us all out, and the pastor's wife has to gently suggest that we are quite warm enough.

We had been enjoying the usual social chat before meeting, but the talk had died down and we were quietly waiting when the Bible woman said, "Mr. Chiba, won't you lead tonight?" He looked at me for encouragement, which he promptly got, and then without a word began his preparations. We were waiting for some others to come in—three men from a country village about three miles away, who usually walk in to evening service; but even when they came, and among them was a Christian much older both in years and experience than himself, Mr. Chiba did not falter. He had attended only one prayer-meeting himself before, and was not quite sure of the usual procedure, but that did not matter, for he knew where to get help.

Choosing hymns that he had already learned himself in night school, he set us a good example by singing himself as if every word came from his own heart. Then a short but earnest prayer expressing real needs, first joining in the prayers at present rising from all earnest hearts in the nation, Christian or Buddhist—for the recovery of the littlest child of the young emperor and empress, who is very sick with fever; then giving thanks for his own salvation and for what the help of Christ is meaning in his life, and for the privilege of leading prayer-meeting; then praying individually for some whom he is trying to win for Christ; and lastly for our little band of Christians in our efforts to build a Church to act as a light-house for the needy ones in this town.

The Bible lesson he chose was 1 John 5:1-13. This caused a little confusion, because every one here finds the place in the Bible and reads silently with the leader; and they all found the gospel of John instead of his letter at first. But he waited till all had found the right place, and then read those wonderful words that mean so much to all of us Christians, but especially here where faith that will overcome the difficult non-Christian world around us seems so difficult to win. Then when he called on others to pray, every one seemed to be inspired by his own courage, and even those who don't often pray found a voice to express their real heart needs. Eight of the eleven present took part in prayer, some even praying twice; and truly it seemed like a group of brothers and sisters holding an affectionate but respectful conversation with our Father in heaven. Even after the last hymn was sung and the meeting closed, no one seemed to want to leave; and indeed two more young apprentices came in after meeting was closed and lingered while we all chatted together for half an hour. These boys, in age from fifteen to seventeen or eighteen, seem to have found in the Church a place to enjoy themselves in good company, even though their busy and long work hours keep them from the play and exercise the more fortunate boys of their age who are still in school are enjoying. We are looking forward to the time when we can build the new Church here, hoping to have a recreation room that shall always be open to such lads.

After prayer-meeting the talk drifted to training for Christian service, and the high school boy asked questions that showed he was thinking of studying for the ministry. Then we discovered that all three of the young men baptized at the same time have that in their minds. One is hoping to enter the Salvation Army Training School, as he has not enough foundation schooling for training for the regular ministry. Mr. Chiba himself was quiet, but listening, and the expression of his face spoke for him to me, who have watched him for a year and a half in night school. He is a graduate of the business high school instead of the regular middle school, so it may be difficult for him to enter school for theological training. He has taken advantage of every educational privilege he has had. I wonder how many young men you know would attend night school two nights a week till nine, going direct from work and waiting till after nine for supper. Remember he has breakfast at 6, and a slight cold lunch at noon, with perhaps fifteen minutes to eat it. And he must spend at least two hours in preparation for each lesson, for he always has a perfect lesson, even to his composition of English sentences, except when the lessons contain idioms that are not in the dictionary. But in spite of the rigors of such a life (I wonder sometimes if it is because of them), he seems in perfect health. And his pleasant, earnest, happy, boyish face makes friends for him, which his helpful, kindly disposition keeps. He is proving a good lay-worker, whether he ever realizes his ambition to enter the ministry or not.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

Lesson VI—May 6, 1928.

GREATNESS THROUGH SERVICE.

GOLDEN TEXT: "The Son of man also came not to be ministered unto, but to minister and to give His life a ransom for many."—Mark 10:45.

LESSON: Mark 9:33-50, 10:35-45.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Isa. 42:1-7.

"Teacher, we would that thou shouldst do for us whatsoever we shall ask of Thee." Thus spoke James and John to Jesus. When He asked them what they would have him do for them they replied, "Grant that we may sit, one on Thy right hand, and one on Thy left hand, in Thy glory." Their request reveals the fact that they had completely missed the meaning of worthy living and the spirit of their Master. In the first place, they thought that the most important thing in life was for the Master to give them what they wanted. Like so many of us today, they were concerned primarily in what they could get from God. They overlooked the fact that the most important thing in life is not what the Master can give to men, but what He wants us to have and what we are willing to have Him do with us. Prayer is not half so much a matter of getting things from God as it is getting us to receive the things God wants to give us, and preparing us to do the things God wants to do through and in us. Many professing Christians are pagan, in that they think of prayer in terms of bringing God to do our will rather than in terms of bringing us to do the will of God.

In the second place, these men thought that the places of distinction come for the asking. They wanted to sit at the right hand and at the left hand of the Master in His glory. It seemed so simple to them. They would beat the other disciples to it, and get the "soft" places. They had overlooked the simple and fundamental fact that ultimately such places of preferment are not gifts, but achievements. They wanted to be great without being willing to pay the price of greatness. They had not counted the cost of the thing they wanted. They were just like so many, many people today. The world is full of people who, like James and John, seek after high places, but who, like them, have no adequate conception of the price involved and who have never learned the lesson that there is no royal road to success. Jesus went to the heart of the matter when He asked them, "Are ye able to drink the cup that I drink?" It is not a question of whether one shall have places of distinction and power, but rather whether one is willing to pay the price of faithfulness to duty and of efficiency which inevitably lead to better things. This applies to things religious as well as to business or any other realm of life. Many a young man is wishing for success and hoping for success, while at the same time he is dreading away his time and dissipating his energies. One can usually have what he wants if he is willing to pay the price. There are many Christians who long for inward peace and power, who are not willing to pay the price of self-discipline which insure these things.

"Who is greatest?" That was the question in the apostles' mind and on their lips. It is the question in our minds, and often on our lips. And we give many answers. Also for all too long we have glorified the warrior. In our present age we too often put as greatest he who has the largest bank account, or the one who is the social leader. The world has many false standards as to who is greatest among us. We need to get back again to Jesus' standard of greatness. He said that greatness came through service. The one who would become truly great must be the minister or servant of all. He gave point to His remarks by reminding them that He Himself had come, not to be ministered unto, but to minister and to give His life a ransom for many. Not in the assertion of power, not in lording it over others, not in being ministered unto, but in serving others in sincerity and humility—therein lies true greatness.

What a new meaning this puts into life! What possibilities for greatness it puts in the hands of even the humblest! For no matter where a man is or what he is doing, he has the open door to abiding greatness if he is willing to put into the thing he is doing the spirit of service. In the "Who's Who" book of life, there are enrolled many humble folks simply because they have caught the spirit of service from the Master and who have become great through a ministry of service.

It is in the light of this principle that we are to interpret Jesus' remarks about plucking out the eye that offends, or cutting off the hand or the foot that offends. Nothing, no matter how good in itself, or how dear, must come into any life if it impairs his usefulness in service. We are to live at our best for the sake of others.

TOPIC: "How to Choose a Life-Work."—Eccl. 9:10; 1 Thess. 4:9-12. (Consecration meeting.)

Some Bible Hints.

One good way to find a life-work is to work hard at the job we've got. Often better things open up (Eccl. 9:10).

Our whole attitude toward life and others is important. Our first job is to be kind, courteous, generous (v. 9).

In ancient times there was little choice of life-work. One was usually born to one's tasks, following the family trade. Choice makes greater responsibility (v. 11).

What is our aim in choosing a life-work? Mere gain? To become rich and powerful? Or to make a decent living and a beautiful character? (vs. 11, 12.)

Suggestive Thoughts.

Look ahead. Many jobs are blind alleys, leading nowhere. Do not be tempted by big wages today that may mean low wages all the years.

Study yourself and find what work you are fitted for, what work you like and would be happy in. Try not to be a square peg in a round hole.

Our choice of work should be governed by a deep-rooted life aim. Is our aim to be useful in the world, to serve our fellows, or is it pleasure, or gain, or power?

No matter what our future work may be, a thorough education is a help. We need to be in no hurry deciding what we shall do. Lay broad foundations.

A Few Illustrations.

In one way, life is a game, and to win the game we must apply the rules that win all games—preparation, equipment, study, hard work, training.

A plant growing in a cellar will stretch itself toward the sunlight. So should we seek the best, strive to attain it, not be content with a mere job, but seek a vocation, work we enjoy for its own sake.

If you grasp a hot iron, you drop it at once. If you find yourself in a work you dislike, look for something you do like. But do not change from one thing to another interminably. Use your head.

Just as we cannot see our own face without some outside help, so do we often fail rightly to judge our qualifications. Seek advice of parents, friends, and vocational leaders in choosing a life-work.

To Think About.

What is a misfit in life-work?

How may we know the will of God regarding our life-work?

What books might help us in finding our life-work?

WEEK-DAY SCHOOL.

The Board of Religious Education is eager to promote daily vacation Bible School work among the Churches of the Southern Convention. To this end, a number of fine young people have volunteered to help put their schools on, and any Church desiring a helper may secure the services of one of these young people by writing the field secretary. It will cost the Church nothing more than a free-will offering toward expenses.

The article on the daily vacation Bible school in this issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN was written by a young lady who has assisted in putting on such a school in Franklin, Va., for the past three years.

PATTIE L. COGHILL,
Field Secretary.

DAILY VACATION BIBLE SCHOOLS.

We can well say a daily vacation Bible school is an excellent foundation for religious education and increases greater interest in Sunday School. For three years we have been holding successful daily vacation Bible schools in our Church. We have found that the best length of time for these schools is two weeks. Usually the school is divided into three departments—primary, junior and intermediate, as well as a special class for those under the primary age.

The true purpose of the vacation school is to teach the sacredness of worship, to apply selected portions of Scripture to the every-day life of the children, to give children the privilege of worship and help them live as Christians in the activities of life.

Details have to be worked out and arranged definitely and carefully before hand. And does everything work smoothly? With programs well planned, the best teachers selected, leaders with enthusiasm and energy in place, the children catch the spirit of the school, and it will move without a hitch from the first day, and at the end of the two weeks the children have to be persuaded to go home.

As for the Sunday School, it feels that the thirty hours of religious training is well worth the cost of money and effort, and we could not afford not to have a daily vacation Bible school each summer. One cannot realize the real value of these schools until one sees the real happiness the children get and how much of Jesus Christ they put in their lives through worship, story and song.

The same happy results can be had in any Sunday School, regardless of how small it is if there is a group who is willing to undertake the work. If you want to get genuine pleasure, start now and plan a daily vacation Bible school for your Sunday School this summer.

MARY LEE WILLIAMS.

Rev. E. B. White writes: "Myself and family enjoyed our visit with the good people of Damascus Church. Our quarterly conference was a great success, and we had a good day Sunday. Everything is moving along nicely. I attended the Preachers' Conference at Norfolk, and it was the most inspiring that we have had. It is a pleasure to meet with the brethren, for they are a loyal, consecrated body of men. I am glad that I am a member of the Christian denomination which has for its leaders some of the finest men to be found in any denomination. We should all work together for the glory of God. The good people on the Dendron charge are still giving me their loyal support, and I am enjoying my work. May the Lord bless our brotherhood and our great denomination."

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
One of Our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MONDAY.

WRONG OR RIGHT.

"Whether we live, we live unto the Lord, and whether we die, we die unto the Lord; whether we live, therefore, or die, we are the Lord's."—Rom. 14:8.

A very practical trouble had broken out in the apostolic Church. The members who were newborn apostles and converted from Judaism were confronted with new relationships and problems. The question was how much of the old life could they take with them into the new?

As touching the meat offered for idols, and subsequently sold in the market for their tables, some said it was wrong. Others said it was right. Thus the Church was split and Paul was called upon to settle the question, and the text settled it.

This is something on the same plane as questions which we have today. What is right and what is wrong? So many things which some say are wrong are things which have their place in this life's values and per se have no wrong in them. Paul would tell us, not by saying what is wrong and what is not wrong, but would say the words of the text; that is, "like unto the Lord," as if to say: learn the meaning life and do that which gives man life, Jesus came that we might have life and might have it more abundantly, and in the words of Jehovah to the early people: "If thou doest not well, sin lieth at the door."

For instance, when a man asked Jesus to speak to his brother that he divide his inheritance with him, the Lord asked: "Who made me a judge between you and your brother?" as if to say, "Your well-being must emanate from your heart. Do what is right."

Sin is a free act of man, and so is righteousness and God will reward every one accordingly. Therefore, in all that man does he is to seek the glory and honor and the clean and the good and the incorruptible and eternal life of others, and if by such a spirit they put to death the deeds of the flesh (carnal desire) they shall live. It is in this way that all our movements are toward God and anything that hinders that movement is sin.

Prayer.—Our dear Heavenly Father, we thank Thee this morning for these thoughts. They will guide our minds today, we already feel the blessing of them, and when night falls may we feel that the work of today has been according to Thy will for us. Amen.

LIVING A PRINCIPLE, NOT A RULE.

"Whether we live or die, we are the Lord's."

Every act in life tends to create a certain trend. It carries with it the expenditure of a certain amount of force, and that force reacts upon our wills and determines what we will do shaping our own destiny.

It is like suspending an iron beam from the ceiling and plucking paper balls against it at repeated intervals. At first there is no perceptible motion, but as the process is continued there appears a vibration, then a decided motion, then a swing of the beam. Such is the impact of so small a thing as a paper ball pounded against it.

So the smallest thought, the finest wish empties its quota in our wills. There is no such thing as an idle thought or wish. Everything, however trifling, has a meaning all its own. It is a small thing for you to go to Church today or to stay away, or to do this or that, but the doing of it sets up a vibration in the direction of whatever is done, and the repetition of it sets up a habit, and then love for that thing, and then destiny.

Therefore, if every act creates a drift, the question for us to settle in every act is, whither the drift? If I do this, or if I don't do this? And having done this conscientiously it will not be hard to settle what we will do. Anything that makes God more real to us, life more glorious, folks happier, and whatever does not becloud our vision of these things is right. If what we do clarifies our vision, keeps the conscience clear, dispels earth-born troubles, Paul says this is right.

Prayer.—Our Father and our God, Holy is Thy name. Thou art all around us to hear not only our desires, but the very pulse of our hearts. We beseech Thee to give us wisdom to choose well our thoughts and our deeds. Give unto us the desire for the true life, the desire for Thy companionship, the desire to live right, moment by moment. Be Thou our desire forever. Amen.

THE SOUL'S GREATEST NEED.

"Sir, we would see Jesus."—Jno. 12:21.

The present pressing paramount need of man is that he shall desire to see Jesus and live for inculcating His teachings in human life. There is a universal cry, "O wretched man that I am!" With thirty pieces of silver in his hand, Judas cried, "I have betrayed innocent blood!" A whole volume could not express more vividly the spiritual condition of this man than the words, "It was right." Man is a wretched failure until he is brought into harmony with the will and purpose of God in the world.

Prayer.—Our Father, as we see the need of rain and sunshine for our crops, the need of culture and cultivation and hard work for its development, or as we see the need of money for our living, and friends for our happiness, may we see the need of Christ for our souls, and come to Him for that vision. Amen.

PAYING TO SEE JESUS.

And when Zacharias saw Jesus he "stood and said, Lord, the half of my goods I give to the poor; and if I have taken anything from any man by false accusation, I restore him seven-fold."

"When he (the maniac) saw Him, straightway the Spirit tear him."—Mark 9:26.

Moses had to put off his shoes and become leader of the children of Israel from Egyptian bondage.

Joseph became the hate of his brethren, a slave of Egypt, and a prisoner under false charges.

Elijah had to separate himself from his country and live a hermit life.

The apostles had to live a much despised and persecuted people.

Paul had not where to lay his head except in jail.

John was banished to the Isle of Patmos.

But the latter end of all these faithful ones was most glorious and has given us today what we have of our religion through Jesus Christ, seeing Him and being transformed before Him.

Salvation is a free and gracious gift, "without money and without price." But there is a price, if not like our forefathers, a price as severe.

The price of the well-being of our country and of true patriotism is in the shedding of the blood of thousands of our young manhood in defense of it.

To follow Jesus is at the point of conflict up—Satan fights. It takes musket and sword, and helmet and shield, and strength and blood, and wounds and death to ourselves to blind us to this world's thornes.

But all our sacrifices are like substituting sand for diamonds, bubbles for jewels, lamps for the bright morning sun. The ear that is trained to music will not listen to rag-time. "He knoweth the way that I take; when he hath tried me I shall come forth as gold."

When the heart sees Christ, the world is empty; and one's greatest pleasure is to honor God, even if it cuts to do so.

Prayer.—Our Father in heaven, who doth not count the cost when He builds a house, we have within us Thy temple. Our character is to be Thy life in the world. Make Thyself ever real to us, and may we build for Thee and eternal life at whatever cost. Amen.

FRIDAY.

ABUNDANCE NOTWITHSTANDING.

"Prove me now, herewith saith the Lord of Hosts, if I will not open the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it."—Mal. 3:10.

God's way is that things should get brighter and brighter to us as we go along, not necessarily in possessions, personal comfort and happiness, but in the things that are enriching which induces a happiness that supercedes the roughness of life. The secret of the greatest happiness known to the experience of man is that he is in the hands of God and that He will do all things well for Him.

If we live in past blessing and nothing grows brighter for us on the way, we are living a defeated life. Paul said, "Forgetting the things that are behind, reaching forth to the things that are before, the mark of the prize, etc." As we live we ought to be able to see the divine purpose reaching out to fulfillment. We ought to be able to see the reign of righteousness coming nearer and nearer.

Prayer.—Our Father, we are sinners. Jesus, save us, we pray; teach us how to consecrate our lives to better living in Christ. Amen.

THE SENSITIVE SOUL.

"Remember them that are in bonds, as bound with them."—Heb. 13:1-3.

It was said of the early Christians: "Behold how they love one another!" The writer of the Hebrews, even in that early day, saw a cooling of that love and felt called upon to admonish that there be that sympathetic understanding the one of the other, which must lie basic in helpful love. How needed is His admonition today!

Kindliness may not be all this sad world needs, but it does sorely need kindliness. There is more in Christianity than the art of being kind; but there is the art of being kind as well. We cannot claim yet to have attained unless there be in our lives that humble, homely, human virtue of kindliness.

There are two fine words in our language, springing from like roots, the one from the Greek, the other from the Latin, and carrying the same meaning. Those words are "compassion" and "sympathy." They both mean "to suffer with." It is just this that the sacred writer is counseling when he urges us to remember them that are in bonds as bound with them. Thank God for souls sensitive to the sufferings of their fellows! And let us follow in the footsteps of Him, of whom

Dear Friends:

Our financial report this week carries us across the first five thousand dollar mark since January 1st. This is encouraging to us. It seems that the first five thousand is always hard to reach, and we are always glad when we reach that point in our income. Our Churches, Sunday Schools and friends are good to us, and we are grateful. It is a cold-hearted person who does not love a little child, and especially one that has lost father and mother and is left lonely and lonesome. Did you ever imagine in your mind a little child sitting in its chair in its home on its return from the funeral of its father or mother, and with a broken heart saying something like this to itself: "I ain't got no ma! I ain't got no pa! I'm awful lonesome. Our best friends have left us, and we have no one to love and care for us now."

Then would it not make your heart rejoice to hear it say, "We will not suffer; thirty thousand Christians will send us to the Christian Orphanage, where we will be loved and cared for, and we will have a real home."

ORANGEPORT, N. Y.

Easter Sunday was a very stormy day in our section. After several days of almost summer weather, Easter Sunday morning brought us snow squalls and high winds. At times driving was difficult on account of the thickly falling snow driven by a high wind. Notwithstanding the stormy weather, however, we had a good congregation at our morning service, and eight young girls were received into Church membership. In the evening we again had a good congregation and held our Easter service of song and recitation. At the end of our services we felt that the day had been pleasantly and profitably spent.

It is claimed by the writer of the history of Niagara County that the Orangeport Church was the first Church of any denomination organized in New York State west of the Genesee River. The work was first started by a woman, Mrs. Wilder, in 1813, and the Church was formally organized September 20, 1817. The first building, a frame edifice, was built in 1818. The first preacher was Oliver Castle. The present building was erected in 1885. Some additions to the building have been made since. We hope that the good record made by this Church in the past will be kept up for many years yet to come.

it was so often written, that "He had compassion."—Rev. John A. McAfee.

Prayer.—By one of the parents, asking that the spirit of Christian love and helpfulness may be cultivated in our homes, and that it may spread and find welcome as far as our influence may reach.

SUNDAY.

CHRISTIAN COURAGE.

"Be strong and of a good courage; be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed: for the Lord thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest."—Joshua 1:5-9.

Let us understand clearly what real courage is, for men are sometimes considered courageous who are merely rash and reckless. "Courage," says one, "is the undaunted audacity of a sanctified heart in adventuring upon difficulties and undergoing hardships for a good cause upon the call of God."

Very significant are those words "upon the call of God." They bring to our minds the call of Moses, of Joshua, of Gideon and Barak, of Isaiah, of Jeremiah and Ezekiel, of the twelve disciples and the seventy, and the apostle Paul. They recall such encouraging words as these: "Fear not," "Be strong and of good courage," "Be not afraid of their faces," and "Lo, I am with you always, even to the end of the world." Courage is responding to the call of God, well though we know the danger.

The root of the word "courage" is the Latin word for "heart," and that seems right, too, for the heart acts strangely when we lack courage. We, if we have Christ in our hearts, may partake of the very courage with which He endured the cross. "Be of good courage, and He shall strengthen your heart."—Rev. D. Raymond Taggart.

Prayer.—By one of the parents, asking that we, too, may unhesitatingly appropriate the promise of victory when we are fighting on the Lord's side.

Dear Children:

After quite a tussle with neuritis and finally a tonsil operation, I'm back on the job again. Am still in High Point, so as to be in touch with my doctor, and have kept everybody busy, especially Mrs. Whitesell. I have had a lovely time, in spite of all the discomforts of such an ordeal, and though I'm rather shaky yet, I'm thankful to have made such a wonderful recovery. Sending you a little story and heaps of love and good wishes.

Sincerely,

MRS. T. A. MOFFITT.

RUNNING AWAY FROM NANCY.

By Irene S. Woodcock.

"Hurry, Jean! There's Nancy, and I don't want her to come," cried Betty to her friend.

"Why not? I like Nancy," replied Jean.

"I don't want her to come today. We haven't enough lunch to share with any one else, and she'll want to stay and have some when she knows what we're doing."

Betty was so out of breath by now that she could only pant the words. The two girls had started with their lunch to have a picnic under the big elm tree in the south pasture. They had not gone very far when Betty, chancing to look back, saw Nancy following them.

"Well, I think it's mean," said Jean finally. "There! she's calling. Didn't you hear her?"

"Yes, but don't look back," warned Betty. "If we don't, she'll think we didn't hear her."

Jean picked herself up from where she had fallen while trying to climb through a barb-wire fence, and rescuing her box of lunch, managed to catch up to Betty.

"I wish you wouldn't hurry so," she complained. "She's gone now, I'm sure. Can't we stop here?"

"No, it's much nicer under the elm by the brook," answered her friend. Then she gave a little exclamation. "Jean, have you seen my pocketbook? It isn't here."

Jean shook her head. "No, I haven't," she said. "Are you sure you brought it?"

"Of course," nodded Betty. "It had the money in it for our ice cream. If it hadn't been for Nancy we wouldn't have had to hurry so, and I wouldn't have dropped it."

"Maybe if we had been nice and waited for her you wouldn't have lost it," replied Jean, as she started toward the last fence they had to climb to reach the south pasture. But just as she placed her foot on the lowest wire, a voice called: "Jean! Don't go in there!"

Both girls turned in surprise to see Nancy, who had now caught up to them.

"I won't stay," she added quickly, "because I know you don't want me. But you mustn't go into the south pasture because Mr. Grady's ugly horse is pastured there today. I ran all the way to tell you. And here's your pocketbook," she said, handing it to Betty. "You dropped it just inside your fence."

Nancy started to turn away, but before she could, Betty had jumped up and placed her arms about her.

"Don't go, Nancy," she pleaded. "I was mean to run away from you. Jean didn't want to. We'll share our lunch, and you must go to the village with us and have some ice cream, too."

Nancy turned a happy face toward her. "Do you really want me?" she asked. "But you needn't share your lunch. I have mine, too. I stopped at your house to see if you and Jean couldn't take a lunch and have a picnic with me. Then, when I heard you were coming to the south pasture, I remembered about the ugly horse. I tried to call, but you didn't hear me."

"We did hear you," admitted Betty again; "but I was mean and selfish. I'll never be so again, Nancy."

"And the next time I think it's wrong to do a thing, I'm not going to do it to please any one else, either," added Jean.

RAILROAD SAFETY SHOWN.

tality among passengers as the result of a train accident.

To handle this volume of travel, Southern passenger locomotives ran 21,080,488 miles, while the total mileage traveled by the passengers who used the Southern's trains reached the almost incomprehensible figure of 1,083,110,041 miles—more than eleven times the distance from the earth to the sun.

"Careful driving by Southern engineers under the direction of a highly trained dispatching force, over a roadway maintained to the highest standards and protected by the most modern safety devices yet perfected by American electrical and mechanical genius, as well as the human protection of trains by an alert body of trainmen, trackmen, signalmen and repairmen, and close inspection of equipment by experienced shopmen, all contributed to this accomplishment," says a statement issued by the Southern.

Oxford Bibles

An Oxford $3.50
Teacher's Bible only

"The Oxford Bible is the Bible par excellence of the world"

The best recommendation of the OXFORD TEACHER'S BIBLES is the fact that over 3,000,000 copies have been sold. The wonderful helps they contain save your time because they are alphabetically arranged, making reference easy. They take the place of many books about the Bible, and can be depended upon, being written by eminent scholars. The Helps contain 32 graphic illustrations, besides 15 beautifully colored maps. The text is the Authorized or King James version, with over 50,000 centre column references.

RURAL CONFERENCE.

BY REV. E. M. CARTER.

In the rural Church school of Vanderbilt University there are three hundred and seventy-five ministers, representing nineteen denominations and seventeen States. There are four members of the Christian Church—R. Burnell, Pres. W. Christian Convention; H. E. Crutchfield, Buford Jennings and I.

At the registration table we were assigned to our classes, given a card on which is checked the attendance at class and lecture periods. We received also a book of meal tickets, by which we are served meals at cafeteria. Rooms are provided either in buildings on the campus or at hotels down-town. We have such men as Dr. Henry W. Edmonds, Dr. Arlo A. Brown, Dr. W. Knighton Bloom, Dr. Charles L. Goodell, Dr. George Stoves and Dr. Egbert W. Smith, and many others whom I will not mention as leaders and lecturers. One idea found in all the messages is that the one vital and dominant need is "power."

The slogan of the school is "Christianity in America will win or lose with the rural preacher." The significance of this is that 85 per cent of the leaders in all constructive lines come from rural districts. Thus, the rural preacher is in a position to share, in a large measure, in bringing about the very best for the people.

There are held denominational group meetings—in most cases two or more groups meeting together. Our group meets with the Congregational. Our meetings have been very pleasant. At first, however, we had to overcome the confusion and show that we were not members of the Disciples of Christ. The Congregationals, under the direction of Rev. F. P. Ensminger, had supper at the Central Y. M. C. A. last Saturday evening, looking to the establishing of an independent Church near Vanderbilt University. I was invited to this meeting.

I count myself very fortunate to have been awarded a scholarship, for it is a great opportunity. The fellowship in the school is most cordial and uplifting.

Youngsville, N. C.

BIRMINGHAM LETTER.

For several weeks we have been silent, but not idle in the work leading up to what we hope to be a Church organization. The work of necessity moves slowly, but it is moving. We have been having services twice a month since about the middle of January. The attendance has ranged from twenty-seven to forty-eight. But it should be added that the members of the Congregational Church have been meeting with us, or rather we have been meeting with them. We have had some fine services.

For a few services we met in the auditorium of a business house down-town. We are now meeting in the auditorium of the Y. M. C. A. building. We have an instrument to aid in the music, and the rent is gratis. We are certainly grateful for these conveniences. Rev. Neil McQuarrie, of the Congregational Church, whose headquarters are in Atlanta, comes over when we have services. He is a dear soul in the work, and is altogether loveable. We have a good time together. He preaches at one service and the writer usually preaches at the next. We had a fine message two weeks ago from Dr. Fisk, of Cleveland, Ohio. We hope he comes again. I hope also to get some of our stronger preachers over to help us out. We are not doing any competitive preaching, but we should like to give these good people the best we have.

The prospects look bright for a strong Church. We have said nothing about unity, and little about organization as yet. We have good reasons for that. We will work at that as soon as the Southern Christian Convention meets and votes for unity with the Congregational Church.

We have been able to get some of our people out to the services, but a number of our members have not reported for duty. We have summoned them several times. I know something that is far worse than that. We have not received a single name of a member of the Christian Church since Christmas! Is it possible that forty members represents the total Christians in Birmingham? We can't believe it! Some have been stumbled upon since we have been meeting for services. How badly we need all the names possible, and anything short of that is shameful! Talking is easily done, but it takes almost two minutes to write a name and address and get it ready for the mail. Is time more valuable than souls? Let us take time to send in the names of any we might have who live in Birmingham and would be interested in starting a Christian Church here. Please do it.

A GREAT HYMN.

For many years the study of hymns has been a favorite spiritual exercise with us. It has come to be one of our chief delights. When the "wheels of being" have been slow, when the heart has seemed cold, and preaching seemed to become mechanical, an hour spent with the hymn book has quickened us into a fresh zest for the things of the spirit.

We happen to recall just now that Dr. Lyman Abbott advised young ministers to study the hymnal as one of the best of homiletical helps.

This has been a life habit with us, and a quest for new and beautiful, as well as for old and rich hymns and hymnals has led us in many strange nooks and corners, but we have been rewarded with finds as precious as the pearl of great price.

We felt this when the other day we discovered a hymn evidently intended originally for children. It appeared in the "Sarum Primer" in 1558. But it is today the first piece in "The Oxford Hymn Book," which was prepared by four of England's greatest scholars and Churchmen. It is as follows:

God be in my head
And in my understanding;
God be in mine eyes
And in my looking;
God be in my mouth
And in my speaking;
God be in my heart
And in my thinking;
God be at my end
And at my departing.

We can scarcely see how a hymn could go deeper or reach higher. Its greatness is in the prayer for God to be in everything we feel and think and do; its beauty is in its simplicity. There is no ornament to divert the mind from God, or to create false feeling; there is no labored effort at high-sounding thoughts to create in one's heart intellectual pride. —Exchange.

Do not look forward to the changes and chances of this life in fear; rather look to them with full hope that, as they arise, God, whose you are, will deliver you out of them. He has kept you hitherto. Do you but hold fast to His dear hand, and He will lead you safely through all trials; and, when you cannot stand, He will bear you in His arms. Do not look forward to what may happen tomorrow. Our Father will either shield you from suffering or He will give you strength to bear it.

WADLEY, ALABAMA

A JUNIOR COLLEGE AND HIGH SCHOOL.

Where Opportunity Awaits the Student of Very Limited Means.

GIRL'S DORMITORY.

Bethlehem College, Wadley, Ala., will open September 5, 1927. This institution is a Junior College and High School, which is co-educational, where scholarship ranks high and expense is low. It is thoroughly Christian, absolutely non-sectarian, and vitally American. A school where opportunity awaits the student of very limited means—$68.00 pays all college expenses, except books, board and room. Board, $15.00 per month, and room $3.00; total expenses for a term of nine months, $250.00.

Bethlehem College is training some of the best stock of America for Christian leadership, to be used by the nation and the world. Here is a great challenge and asset for students who wish to prepare themselves to serve in a worth-while way. The work on the new Administration Building is progressing nicely, and we will be able to begin our college work in this building when school opens this fall.

A Fascinating Companion.—

"Roads to the Revolution," by Sarah Comstock ($5.00), would be a fascinating companion on little journeys to these familiar landmarks of American history, whose very names spell the romance, the valor, and the achievement of yesterday.

Miss Comstock has greatly enriched her story by the inclusion of numerous original pictures, the result of her industrial camera, which she has personally photographed.

Timber Supply.—

Representative John J. McSwain, of South Carolina, introduced a bill in Congress to insure adequate supplies of timber and other forest products for the people of the United States, to promote the full use for timber growing and other purposes of forest lands in the United States, including farm wood lots and those abandoned areas not suitable for agricultural production, and to secure the correlation and the most economical conduct of forest research in the Department of Agriculture, through research in reforestation, timber growing, protection, utilization, forest economics and related subjects.

Temple is Found in Irak.—

Mesopotamia has given up further evidence of its ancient civilization at the hands of archaeologists. The joint expedition of the American School of Oriental Research at Bagdad and Harvard University has unearthed at Yargon Tepa, near Kirkuk, Irak, an enormous temple believed by Dr. Edward Chiera, head of the expedition, to have been buried for 3,500 years. Eighty-four large rooms of the temple have thus far been excavated, yielding more than 1,200 tablets, a wealth of pottery, and what is believed to be the oldest coat of armor ever found in Irak.

Reporting his discoveries to Dr. George A. Baron, of this city, director of the Bagdad school, Dr. Chiera said one of the most remarkable discoveries in the temple was fragments of a mural painting on the plaster of a corridor, the colors of which were preserved and the design clear.

Nation's Greatest Need.—

A department of education, with a secretary in the President's Cabinet, is one of the government's needs, stated Miss Mary McSkimmon, former president of National Education Association and now principal of the Pierce School in Brookline, in an address before 300 members of the Teachers' Economic Association at Springfield, Mass.

"The Department of Commerce can furnish us with information regarding hog cholera or crop blight, but there is no department that can tell us anything when a child goes wrong or is going wrong," she added. She told of yellow spots that had developed on small pine trees which she set out on her summer place in Maine and how three different opinions were given by the government as to the cause. "Isn't a child worth as much as little pine trees?" she asked.

There is need, Miss McSkimmon said, of a secretary of education whose utterances would be headlined as are those of Secretary Hoover. Then education would be brought more forcibly to the attention of the public.

Educational Problems Increasing.—

"Within fifty years America has changed from a simple rural to a complex urban civilization. This transformation has produced many profound political, social and economic problems and consequently many profound educational problems, since our educational problems are determined very largely by the society in which we live," writes W. S. Deffenbaugh, in the United States Daily.

"The aim of education today is much the same as it has always been—to meet the needs of the society of the times. But the demands of the twentieth century, with its complex urban civilization, are so much greater that more conscious attention has to be given to education. Although the aim of education remains the same, the means have changed. Schools have become more and more necessary under these changed conditions, not only for teaching the three R's, but for providing for the use of the children's leisure time and for providing for work with the hand," the article stated further.

"There is not only the problem of educating the child of school age," Mr. Deffenbaugh said, "but also the problem of adult education. Thousands of men and women whose early education was neglected and thousands of others who want to keep abreast of the times are demanding that they be given an opportunity to attend evening schools. In many cities more than one-fourth of the population is foreign-born, and it is necessary for the school to teach not only many children English, but also their parents, so that they may better understand American customs and ideals, and thus prevent a division in home life which often develops after children have learned to speak English and the father and mother have not."

The present religious crisis in England seems at first glance very remote from the kind of religious controversy with which we are familiar in this country. Yet the outcome of this tense situation may be more important to churchmen and women in America than we now realize, for a great religious revival or decline in England could hardly fail to have its echoes here.

Since the Prayer-Book of the Church of England (known as the Episcopalian Church in the United States) was first published after the death of Henry VIII, in the sixteenth century, it always has represented an eloquent attempt to state the doctrines on which most Englishmen could agree and to shroud in vague language those points of theology in ceremonial which might arouse disastrous controversy. "It hath been the wisdom of the Church of England to keep the mean between the two extremes"—so states the prayer-book, the extremes being a close approach to Roman Catholicism on the one hand and to Calvinistic Protestantism on the other.

Henry VIII continued to enforce Catholic doctrines long after he had repudiated the authority of the pope, and since his day there has been a group within the Church known as the "High Church" or "Anglo-Catholic" party which has clung to many Catholic tenets even while England as a nation was priding herself on her Protestantism. During the last century this Anglo-Catholic party has grown rapidly.

The revised prayer-book recently presented to the House of Lords was drawn up in order that the wise and traditional policy of compromise might be extended to meet both the liberal spirit of our times and the doctrinal tendencies of the Anglo-Catholic party, without committing the Church to the extreme position of either group. Thus greater latitude was given those ministers who desired to draw nearer to the Catholic forms in the communion service while permitting others to continue using the present forms if they preferred.

The militant Protestants, however, felt that this extension of tolerance would permit far too close an approach to Catholic practices on the part of many high churchmen. It was the strong Protestant sentiment in Parliament which rejected the proposed revision.

The defeat comes as a terrible blow to a large part of the Church of England. But to an American, the most extraordinary aspect of the whole affair was that any prayer-book prepared by the leading members of the Anglican Church and ratified by a majority of the clergy should have to be submitted to an assembly where Scottish Presbyterians, Irish Roman Catholics, Methodists, and Baptists, and even one parsee from India took part in the discussion and the final vote. The ultimate result may be the separation of Church and State in England, and to an outsider it seems that this might be the happiest solution possible. Americans cannot but feel that the day of the State Church is over; that Christianity is too much a world force not to suffer when it is left to the mercy of national governments and politicians, and that a decision for or against tolerance should be the act of the Church members and not the act of a legislature.—Helen Taft Manning, in McCall's Magazine.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Rev. H. W. Elder continues ill at his home in Richland, Ga. Bro. Elder will be greatly missed at the Southern Christian Convention, where he has been an outstanding and devoted leader for many years.

Bro. Samuel Earman and family were pleasant visitors to the college last week. Bro. Earman has been a patron of the college for many years. This is his first visit here, however. It was a pleasure to have him.

Governor Angus W. McLean is to give the literary address at the Elon commencement on May 29th. He will be heard gladly and profitably by our people. We congratulate the college and the Church on his choice for this great annual event in our college calendar.

The board of trustees of the Christian Orphanage held their annual meeting on April 24th. The Orphanage is in splendid condition, which is a tribute to the wise executive management of the trustees and of the most capable superintendent, Bro. Chas. D. Johnston.

Rev. A. M. Hainer, a member of the Northwestern Indiana Conference, whose address is Argos, Ind., is at this time in North Carolina, at Robersonville. Bro. Hainer is one of our very capable ministers, and some Church in the Southern Convention in need of a very capable pastor would do well to communicate with him. Either address him at Argos, Ind., or at Robersonville.

Bro. J. M. Darden, Acting Missionary Secretary, is a dynamo of energy these days on behalf of missions. He carries his great business obligations lightly in comparison with the zeal and energy he devotes to the cause of missions, and he is receiving encouraging response from our ministers and Churches generally. He will make full report at the Southern Christian Convention.

Bro. C. J. Strickland, who writes for THE SUN and who has been away from his Church for five years, living in Charlotte, N. C., is deeply interested in the circulation of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. He thinks that one practical plan is for ministers to send to THE SUN office the names and addresses of all new members as they are taken into the Church. This is a splendid idea.

Rev. R. L. House is to graduate from Duke University with the A. B. degree in the class of 1928. Bro. House was licensed as a minister of the Christian Church by the Eastern North Carolina Conference last fall. He is open to Church work this summer and will be glad to assist in evangelistic campaigns or in any other way. Bro. House plans to return to Duke University next fall and enter the divinity school and remain for his B. D. degree. He will be glad to serve any Churches in reach of Duke. Any who are interested would do well to write him at once.

The Acting Mission Secretary, Bro. J. M. Darden, is greatly encouraged by the response he is receiving for the mission offering. He will make a report to the Convention at Richmond that will be full of inspiration and uplift for the Church. You may always count upon the Christian Church to respond to its enterprises in an emergency. Of all the Churches that the writer knows, none is more ready to give to a great situation than our own. Let us take heart and press forward.

The executive board of the Alumni Association of Elon College met at the college on last Friday night and laid plans for the enlargement of the association's work and for the approaching commencement. Dr. W. H. Boone, the president, is very enthusiastic over the work of the alumni association.

Rev. P. T. Klapp, who has been a life-long friend of missions in the Christian denomination and whose recent article in THE CHRISTIAN SUN giving the history of missions in our Church, South, was very much appreciated by our people, though he is superannuated, has sent $10.00 as a personal offering for missions. This is certainly a challenge to others to give to this cause.

The account of the dedication of the new Church building in Virgilina on Easter Sunday will be read with appreciation. It is safe to say that no town in this section the size of Virgilina has a finer house of worship than our people there. Rev. C. E. Newman, the pastor, and the local membership certainly deserve praise for their achievement. Please be sure to read Rev. L. L. Lassiter's account of the services in this week's issue.

During the recent session of the Rural Church Group, in Nashville, Tenn., Congregationalists, Friends and Christians united in worship at the Peabody demonstration school auditorium. This makes us think of the United Church of Raleigh, where these three denominations worship together each Sunday, having formed an organic union among themselves. Dr. Chas. L. Fisk, of Cleveland, Ohio, preached at this union service. He used as his topic "Triumph Over Failure."

The week-day school of religion conducted in the department of Christian education of the college, with Prof. S. A. Bennett as general director, held its commencement on last Wednesday. The exercises were of high order. The children acquitted themselves well. Their parents attended in large numbers. The week-day school of religion is doing a fine work in the Elon community—a work that is unexcelled by any college in the United States.

If you're easily tired, losing weight, have indigestion, a cough that hangs on, don't hesitate, but go to a good physician at once. When you have gone to him, insist upon a thorough physical examination, including your chest. If the doctor tells you that you have tuberculosis, obey whatever instructions for the cure of your disease that he gives you. In that way you will cheat the tuberculosis death rate of one more victim and save your own life.

Long's Chapel Christian Church, which has recently improved its building by the addition of Sunday School rooms, painting, etc., is to be dedicated on the first Sunday in May at 11 o'clock. Dr. W. W. Staley is to preach the dedicatory sermon. The pastor is Dr. P. H. Fleming. The Church will welcome as its guests that day a large concourse of people, and those who go may rest assured that they will have a feast of good things, both spiritual and physical.

A meeting of the Executive Board of the Southern Christian Convention and of the department heads was held in Suffolk, Va., on Monday, April 23rd. Every board was represented except the Board of Publications. Prof. Vaughan was not able to be there because of the illness of his wife. There is no doubt that President Smith was wise in calling together this group to consider the Convention problems unitedly. It is so easy for a particular board to take a provincial view of its own work. The plan that Dr. Smith has worked out, however, brings all the boards together and a united program can thus be presented. Dr. Smith has served the Church to great acceptance during his three terms as President, and there is a general insistence that he should continue as President of the Convention. While the work is hard, it is believed that no one can do it more acceptably than Dr. Smith.

The executive committee of the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference, consisting of W. B. Truitt (chairman), G. H. Roberson, Miss Margaret N. Morris and Miss Ruth York, met in the office of the Southern Christian Convention at Elon College on last Friday and took the initial steps preparatory to a great convention of Christian workers to be held in Durham, June 21st and 22nd, just prior to the beginning of the Summer School at Elon College, on the 23rd. Bro. W. B. Truitt, who is president of the convention, says that this session must be notable in standpoint of attendance and likewise from the splendid addresses and reports that will be presented. Here is hoping that every Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Society in the Conference will elect delegates and have representatives present in Durham.

NEWPORT NEWS, VA.

The congregation of the Newport News Church, by a unanimous vote, asked the pastor to reconsider his resignation and to remain with them. They also agreed to release him for an occasional evangelistic effort whereby he might satisfy his evangelistic zeal. He will remain with them.

A number of adults have recently united with our Church here, and all departments of the work seem to be wide awake. We had 216 present at Sunday School last Sunday. The pastor enjoyed a two weeks' visit with Bro. J. F. Morgan, where he assisted in a series of revival services, closing Easter Sunday. Bro. Morgan is doing a great work in his field, and his spiritual-minded congregation speaks of the good seeds he is sowing in their hearts.

The writer also enjoyed the visit of the Rev. and Mrs. Fix, of Franklin, on a recent Monday. It was a real privilege to have them. During the day we visited the shipyards and "inspected" one of Great Britain's ships which was here for repairs. We went also to Langley flying field and to Jamestown.

In a sense, Newport News is isolated in regard to the Christian Church, but we hope that other ministers who have not visited our points of interest will cross the dividing stream, pay us a visit, and be convinced that this is really a part of the United States.

M. F. ALLEN, Pastor.

Miss Clara Leffingwell, a missionary to China, gave the following account of deliverance from death by the Boxers: "There was a lady missionary whom the Boxers told to kneel down and have her head cut off. The lady knelt as told, but as she did so she looked up into the man's face and actually smiled. As she looked at him a moment, thus smiling, it seemed as if his face began to change and to reflect the smile. He stepped back a little and then continued to withdraw, together with his companions, until after a little they all fled, leaving the missionary ladies alone. As the Boxers were rapidly going away, the leader turned and said to the lady: 'You cannot die; you are immortal.' If her face had shown fear, they would have killed her without hesitation. She afterward said: 'I did not know that I smiled.'"

THE FUTURE OF CHRISTIANITY.

BY DR. L. E. SMITH,

President Southern Christian Convention.
My Friends:

These months through which we are passing have been designated by our Convention as mission months. Meaning by that, that during these months we are expected to read about missions and give for missions. That is, make special offerings for missions in an effort to make it possible for our Mission Board to carry on the great work that it is doing. So I am going to speak to you this morning about "The Future of Christianity." You will find the text in Matt. 16:18, where Christ said in speaking with reference to His Church, "The gates of hell shall not prevail against it." Every so often you hear somebody say or we pick up a paper and read that the Church has failed, or that Christianity is doomed, that it will be blotted out by materialism or that it will be replaced by paganism or some other "ism," and we get all excited and start out to defend the Christian religion. The Christian religion needs not defense; it is its own defense. Its records, its accomplishments, its achievements are sufficient to justify its existence and to guarantee its permanency.

Now, Christ had been preaching in Galilee. He had about come to the close of the Galilean ministry. His disciples had been with Him all the while, listening and witnessing as opportunity might afford. He had taken them apart for prayer and private instruction. He turned to them and said, "Whom do men say that I am?" and they answered in terms of current topics. But said He, "Whom do ye say that I am?" and Peter said, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God"; and He said, "Blessed art thou, Simon Barjona, for flesh and blood hath not revealed this unto you, but my Father which is in heaven, and I say unto thee that thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my Church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

And He did build His Church—not out of wood or stone, but out of Christian character; not on the hills of time, but in human hearts and lives; and it stands today far beyond the reaches of sin or of the forces of evil. The powers of the world, the gates of hell will not prevail against it. In the first place, then, let us notice the plain statement:

1. The gates of hell. The gates figured largely in early Hebrew life. Every city had its walls, and every wall had its gates. Through the gates the people went in and came out. Revenue was levied and collected, disputes were settled, criminals were brought to account and judgments pronounced at the gates. Through the gates the armies went out to do battle; to the gates they came back to celebrate victory. The poor sat at the gates to ask alms, the afflicted lay and begged mercy of those who passed in and out. The gates in the long ago were the prevailing places for poor and the rich, the weak and the mighty. And Christ drawing on these sources and appealing to the imagination of the people, declares that "I will build my Church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." The forces of evil, the combined forces of evil belching out of the gates of the underworld, however insidious or determined, shall not prevail against my Church, saith the Christ.

ness, the gates of hell and the gates of the Church. He foresaw the years when the battle should wage the hottest and the tide would seem to turn against His Church. He saw His disciples brought before councils and condemned by the courts. He saw His martyred saints whose burning bodies sent their shining lights down through the centuries illuminating the pathway of pilgrims' feet, who would witness for Him to all peoples in all lands. He saw the subtle powers of darkness seeking to undermine the faith of the saints. He saw the cannon of skepticism blasting at the rock of ages. He saw spiritual wickedness in high places. He saw the gates of hell standing wide open and sending its armies of destruction; but what did He say: "They shall not prevail." In the next place we turn from the statement to the promise.

2. The promise. "The gates of hell shall not prevail against my Church." Will the facts of history justify the promise? Have the gates of hell prevailed or have they not? Standing yonder in Galilee in the long ago, Jesus, born of an untutored virgin, cradled in a manger, picked up a single stone as it were, and with Himself as the foundation, began to build a building which said He will withstand the determined onslaughts of the combined forces of wrong, the powers of evil and the gates of hell.

Time has wrought almost unthinkable changes in this old world from that day to this. While systems of religion and philosophy have passed away, kingdoms have dissolved, empires have fallen, famous cities have crumbled to the dust, races of men have come and gone, and civilizations have been buried; yea, the very shores of the sea have begun to shift their places and the everlasting hills have bowed their heads since Jesus spake to Peter—but "the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." It has not only withstood the onslaughts of evil, but from a single stone it has grown into a mighty building, reaching into every land and language. With its gracious invitations and its precious promises, "Come unto me, all ye that labor, and I will give you rest."

It was about the middle of the last century when the tides seemed to turn against the Church. Many of the literary and philosophical people of the world were saying that its last days had come. When bishops like Butler were apologizing for Christianity and historians like David Hume were predicting that by the end of the century that Christianity would be among the dead religions. Just at this time it was that the great evangelical revival of Wesley and Whitfield commenced and swept into every corner of the world, carrying new life and new light and new power. And at the close of the last century when the French Encyclopedist led by Voltaire were saying that the name of the Nazarene had at last been blotted out and that Christian temples would be changed into halls of science, it was then that William Cary went to India, and the great foreign mission movement was definitely launched which has carried the sign of the cross and the light of the gospel into the darkest part of the world.

And today they tell us that the Church has failed, that it has fallen from the high peaks of human respectability and that its once glorious banner is now trailing in the dust. That its power with God and man is gone; that it no longer holds the place and the prestige that it once held. But I'll tell you when I look out into the civilizations of the earth today and observe the fruits of Christianity in abundance, the spirit of honesty, of integrity, the will to understand, the evidences of love and of mercy, a passion for peace and a plea for justice, things that could never have been without the Church—I'll tell you that the Church of God is still here and it looms high on the horizon of the world and it cries out to the nations of the earth, "Whosoever will, let him come"; "Come, we will sing you a song, pray you a prayer and preach you a sermon, give you a gospel that can save and a Christ who can keep." I know God will arise, incarnate Himself afresh in a great evangelical prophet, calling men to repentance and His Church to prayer. And if God be for us, who can be against us? We are standing today in the limelight of another great spiritual upheaval. We are standing on the threshold of another great religious revival that will sweep the continents for the kingdom. And in the next place, I think we should think about the fulfilling of the promise.

3. The fulfilling of the promise. Christ said that "I will build my Church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. The power to beat back the forces of evil and to make the cause of righteousness triumphant in the earth lies with man. And this fact has ever been true. God is dependent upon human agency for the manifestation of Himself and the accomplishing of His purpose in the earth. His gospel is for human kind and His Church is for the world, but when He wanted His gospel preached to every creature and His Church planted in all lands, He stood before a company of twelve men and said to them, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." He was dependent on human agency now. He comes today and stands in our midst and says, "Go ye into the mountains of Virginia and preach my gospel to the men, women and children whom you find there" And have gone, gone in the person of Miss Baldwin; we pay her salary, pray for her and bid her god-speed in telling others of the Christ whom we love and know. He comes to us today and says, "Go ye into Porto Rico and tell the hundreds and thousands that are there without me and my gospel and tell them of my love, my grace and my power to save"; and we answer we have gone Lord, gone in the person of Miss Adams, who stands there in the home, on the streets, in the Church and chapel, and tells of the Christ who saved her and who is able to save. He comes and says, "Go ye into Japan"—and here we stumble a bit. We wait, we hesitate, for we haven't a personal representative there, we never have had, and then in our thinking we see the other nations, into which we have not gone, and His voice is still ringing in our ears, "Go ye, go ye into all the world and as you go, go preaching my gospel"; and it seems as with double force, for the gates of hell are open today as never before. In the long ago they were opened by ignorance, savagery and superstition. Today they are opened by selfishness, skepticism, materialism and agnosticism, more like spiritual wickedness in high places. And it is against these forces that we are to go. How?

(1) Ourselves. Nothing more wonderful and more powerful than for a person to give himself to God, that God can take him and use him on the mission field.

(2) If we can't go ourselves, have some one to go for you. We have a young man member of our Church well prepared and ready to go, but the funds aren't available.

(3) Go in our money. It's a privilege to give our money for the sending of the gospel. If we withhold our money, God will withhold His blessings from us. We may seem to be growing financially. When we lie down at night we congratulate ourselves that we are getting better in the world. And we are honest, it seems so, but it

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE CONVENTION AND AFTER.

May 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 4th will be history-making days in the twenty-eighth regular session of the Southern Christian Convention, in the First Christian Church, Richmond, Va. Grave questions will come before the Convention for discussion, and hard problems will demand solution. No more serious consideration has ever engaged the thought and judgment of the Convention, and no greater need for divine wisdom has ever been felt by those who will sit on committees and in the Convention. Preparatory to this important session, heads of departments and those deeply concerned for the welfare of the Church and the success of its institutions have conferred with President L. E. Smith, have prayed, and have co-operated in an earnest and sincere desire to make the Richmond session the greatest since 1856, when the Convention was organized at Union Ridge Christian Church, Alamance County, N. C. These seventy-two years, and twenty-eight sessions, have been years of trial and progress, and this session must deal with the future. The life of Jesus Christ is one of history and prophecy—of past and future; and His Church shares in His experience, and He promises to be with us to the end. One good thing may be said in good faith that delegates to Conventions discuss questions in a finer Christian spirit, and greater regard for the feelings of others, than in former years. This indicates improvement in personal religion and the elimination of feelings from discussions. The Christ-like spirit is to express opinions and convictions frankly and reach conclusions without divisions. A Convention is an opportunity to manifest the spirit of Jesus Christ in sharpest debates and to settle questions so that all can say, "Amen."

After the Convention is just as important as during the Convention. The work of the Convention should go to the Conferences for approval and execution. This obligation rests upon the ministers and lay delegates who attend the Convention. Conferences, at their next sessions, should give careful attention to the acts of the Convention, and take steps to carry this information, with the approval of Conference, to the local Churches. Here is the opportunity for the Convention delegates and a duty for the pastors and delegates to Conference. The Convention is the vine, the Conferences and local Churches are the branches in the organization. The branches cannot live and bear fruit unless they draw their information and inspiration from the vine. The Church, which is the body of Christ, is not one member, but many; and all the members, Churches, are so related to the Convention that they cannot be their best nor do their best unless they co-operate in carrying out the plans of the Convention. It takes two years to carry out the work of four days of Convention actions. In this period of two years, pastors have opportunity and obligation. They are not serving their congregations unless they are serving their Conferences and the Convention. One of the questions that bothers most pastors is the money question; yet it is a part of their duty, as well as prayer and sermon. Heart and pocketbook are very close together, and if you get one fully, you get the other. Real love is liberal. Real love will give of its money. Men cannot withhold from those they love. Do not be afraid to mention money, because that is the road to the heart. The best rule for a pastor is to say nothing about money for himself, but to say all he knows about money for the Church, her enterprises, and her institutions. These are parts of the kingdom, and the gospel of money obligation is as truly gospel as the fourth or fifth commandments. The matter of finance, of money, of liberal giving, has been neglected too long by pastors and members. The next two years should be a revival of giving the heart, the time, the service, and the money to the cause of Christ, and the pastors should strive to make these years the most spiritual, the most active, and the most liberal in our history.

GOVERNOR AL. SMITH.

The politicians, some of them, are carrying on over Governor Al. Smith, of New York. They would have us believe, if we were credulous enough, that Smith is just going to win out in his candidacy, and that if we are to have once again a Democrat in the White House, we must vote for Al. Smith.

For our part, we refuse to take seriously this high political propaganda—propaganda the most insistent and insidious that our politicians have tried to put over in many a long day. Have these politicians so far forgotten themselves and their countrymen as to be willing to pay any price just so they may again eat at the pie-counter? It seems unthinkable! First, the outstanding contribution that Al. Smith has made to public life is that he is politically wet. That is the first thing one thinks of when Smith's name is mentioned. And there is a reason! Consistently and insistently, in season and out of season, Al. Smith has been, and is, politically wet. From the beginning of his public career till now, he has allied himself with the wet element in his State and party; and to such an extent has he done this that his State of New York today is known everywhere as one of the wettest States of this Union—a State in which liquor is abundant and may be had in open violation of the laws of the land. We do not say this is Governor Smith's only contribution to public life—we do insist that outside of his State, at any rate, this is the chief mark of his public character and career. We have not yet seen from him a single utterance on our national policies that entitles him to the suffrage of a great people who have overwhelmingly decided that this is, in intent at least, a dry country.

The second outstanding fact which these hungry politicians would have us ignore is that Al. Smith is not only politically wet, but that he is personally wet. This writer has it, on what he regards the most reliable authority, that Smith's closest friends "deplore his excesses," and have often to dissuade him from too free and frequent use of strong drink. We are reliably informed that he is at least consistent, and the habits of drink that he indulges himself, he would make possible for others by helping to nullify the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act. We wonder if the politicians really think that the good people of the United States are willing to condone or forget these things in order to give them office for a season. It would seem so.

The papers report that Col. Frank P. Hopgood, at a public Al. Smith demonstration in Greensboro, recently said: "Catholicism and the stand of Al. Smith on the prohibition law are secondary matters." May heaven help us! Secondary to what? Must honest, sincere people who labored decades for a good law, make that achievement secondary and practically undo what they have done, in order to let politicians who are out of office get into office? And then at the same meeting the Hon. Josiah Williams Bailey, who, after acknowledging that he was "out" and wanted to be "in," is quoted by the same paper as saying, quite oratorically: "It is not a part of the minister's duties to have anything to do with a party's selection of its candidates." Of course not! It would be our duty if we had no conscience and no sense of decency with us, and favored Al. Smith. But since he is being offered to the country and sponsored by the most immoral and notorious political organization in this land, namely: Tammany Hall; and since the wets are backing Smith with unlimited resources and money—then we ministers have no duty in the matter! If that be the Hon. Josiah's ideas of ministers' duties, we have an idea very few ministers of the gospel of the Son of God will seek Mr. Bailey to get him to define for them their duties.

True, prohibition has not done its work yet. However, there is no amendment to our Constitution and no law on our statute books for which our republic ever stood so valiantly and ever enacted with more heart, soul and unanimity. If designing politicians think they can nullify this act even with as popular a champion of strong drink, politically and personally, as Al. Smith, let them beware and prepare themselves for hopeless and deserved defeat at the ballot box.

No, THE CHRISTIAN SUN is not in politics, and never has been; but its editor is at least conscientious and has some sense of morality, sobriety, equality, and good government. And the politicians will please bear in mind this time that they are trying to offer a man for our suffrage whose career, personal and political, offends our sense of morality, equity, sobriety, and good government. And if it is not a time for men and women with souls to speak and act now, when will such a time ever come? If this is carrying politics into religion, then let the politicians make the most of it!

J. O. A.

TWO YEARS OF PROGRESS.

Every two years the Southern Christian Convention takes inventory. Two years ago the Convention met in Durham and projected certain measures that were forward-looking and comprehensive. Two years have now passed and the Convention assembles in the city of Richmond, where another inventory will be made and plans laid for larger programs in the future.

The outstanding decision of the Durham Convention was in the realm of Church finances. For the first time in the history of the Southern Church at Durham, the Convention asserted its right to control the expenditures of its various boards and to say to a board that before it could expect support of the Church in its work it must inform the Church as to its plans and secure its approval. This was a great forward step, and we have lived under that arrangement for two years.

We come up to Richmond, therefore, with the finances of the Convention showing a decided improvement. The Orphanage is entirely out of a doctrine dear to the heart of the Christian Church and central in its program and purpose for 134 years. A definite program looking toward the union of the Congregational and Christian Churches will be submitted and will be thoroughly considered. Definite proposals, too, for the co-operation of the Congregational and Christian Churches in the field of higher education will be presented. It is earnestly hoped that this question of Christian union will be approached in the spirit of humility and of prayer, with the desire only to know and to do the will and the mind of Christ.

worship, discussion of religious matters, and the transaction of business have been cared for regularly.

The young preachers felt that they needed, in preparation for their chosen work, more contact with veteran workers in the Churches and practical experience in Church work. Also they wished to begin to speak messages for the Master. A number of sermons were preached by individual students, and fifteen programs were given off the campus. As the number of students appearing on these programs averaged at least five, it will be seen that the young ministers had fine opportunity debt. The Mission Board has reduced its indebtedness. THE CHRISTIAN SUN has been adequately financed, and the indebtedness of our colleges has also been reduced. No new obligations have been incurred involving the Convention or looking for Convention support.

It was a great step forward, as we have said, when the Convention asserted its right and also declared it to be its determination to control the institutions of the Church as to their expenditures. In accordance with this plan, the President of the Convention has requested each board of the Church to submit its financial program in advance to the Executive Committee and to the heads of other boards and departments for consideration and approval. This gives unity and coherence and a sense of solidarity to the work of the Church, and is certainly a commendable method.

In addition to improvements in finance since the Durham Convention, there has been growth in membership in the Convention and an increasing spirit of optimism throughout the Church. The representatives of the denomination who assemble in Richmond in 1928 will foregather in the enjoyment of this optimistic atmosphere, and it will tend to color their decisions and to inspire them in formulating their plans for the next biennial.

Perhaps the great issue that will claim the attention of the 1928 session will be Christian union,

ELON'S MINISTERIAL GROUP.

In a meeting of the Elon College Ministerial Association, April 13, 1928, Ray N. Moses was elected president; D. C. Boone, vice-president; A. A. Dofflemyer, secretary, and Howard Smith, treasurer. These officers are to serve during the coming college year. The meeting was characterized by a spirit of good will and prayer. Defeated candidates and others expressed a cheerful loyalty to the association and a determination to carry on the work.

Fine and well-deserved tributes were paid to some of the outstanding workers of the association during the past year. President Clyde Foushee was given merited praise for the tact and ability as a leader by which he has been able to keep the members of the association co-operating in the tasks appropriate to the organization. Secretary G. H. Veazey was justly lauded for his untiring work in arranging for association programs and seeing that they were properly carried out. These two men were given a standing vote of appreciation. An alumnus of the college, who in former years was a member of the association, expressed the common belief that this has been the most active and interesting year in the history of the ministerial association.

Through printed articles and personal contacts, the association has endeavored to give out a spiritualizing influence on the campus. Meetings for for development through self-expression. A number of students did their first speaking from the pulpit.

Among the Churches in which programs were given are Pleasant Hill, Apple's Chapel, the Lutheran and Methodist Churches of Gipsonville, the First Christian Churches of Burlington, Reidsville, and Greensboro, and the Palm Street Christian Church of Greensboro. A fine type of Christian courtesy was shown the students who appeared on these programs, and many splendid words of appreciation were spoken of their work. A part of these programs were sponsored by professors in the college, who carried the ministerial group to the Church and introduced the association to the congregation. The fellowship enjoyed on these trips the new friendships formed and the opportunity to worship with the people of the different Churches make these experiences one of the brightest memories of those who shared in this type of work.

No one has questioned the sincerity and fine intentions of those who have given these programs. The year has, we believe, been a real success. The outgoing officers are worthy of the highest honors. The incoming officers feel that the work which has been done this year presents to them a challenge to hold up the standard and to carry the work of the association forward toward a still higher level of achievement.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The reopening services in the main auditorium of the Suffolk Christian Church, after several months of worship in the fellowship hall on account of redecorating the main Church, was a happy day and a bright day for the large congregations that were glad to return to a real place of worship.

The departmental Sunday School addition for one thousand and seventy members has been finished, furnished, and is now in use. It is one of the best in design, finish and equipment in this country, and the way is open now for larger attendance and better work. About seven hundred were present in the Sunday School yesterday (April 22, 1928), and the spirit of gratitude and consecration created an atmosphere that indicated progress in study and worship. It was, indeed, a happy day for old and young. Improvements to the Church, at a cost of $125,000, have made heavy drafts upon the members, but those who have contributed to the work rejoice in what has been done. The greatest joy that comes to Christian men and women grows out of what they do and give for the cause of Jesus Christ.

April 22, 1928, marks a new historic period in the Suffolk Church. The program consisted of anthems, solos, quartets by the splendid choir, hymns by choir and congregation, and large audiences were at both services. The morning services were brightened by anthems, "Great Is the Lord," by A. J. Boex, with solo by Mrs. J. S. Morgan; and "Spirit Immortal," from Attila, by G. Verdi, with solos by Mrs. Randolph Chapman, Mrs. Telza Miller, and Mr. Oma Parker, and a solo by Miss Evelyn White, of New York.

A very beautiful and impressive service was conducted by Mr. J. M. Darden, in which he made a stirring address and then called Revs. H. S. Hardcastle and W. W. Staley, and Mr. Jesse D. MacClenny together in the pulpit, and handed Pastor Hardcastle a note, Jesse D. MacClenny a silver tray, W. W. Staley a box of matches, with instruction to light a match and burn the note. Hardcastle held the note till its ashes fell on the silver plate. That note represented all outstanding debts of the Church except bonds on the building. That little fire cleared the Church of all financial or current expenses and odds and ends of building program. The vast audience looked on in silence. Then Mr. Darden asked Mr. MacClenny to offer prayer, which was brief and touching. Then Darden requested the congregation to rise and sing "Praise God, from Whom All Blessings Flow," and they sang it "with the spirit and the understanding also."

This interesting service was followed by a sermon on "The Glory of the Latter House," by Rev. W. W. Staley. The hymns, "The Church's One Foundation" and "Onward, Christian Soldiers," were used at this service.

At the night service Rev. H. S. Hardcastle preached on "The House of Prayer"; and the anthems, "Great and Marvelous are Thy Works," the Holy City, by R. A. Gaul, and "My Faith Looks Up to Thee," by P. A. Schaecker, were used with Mrs. Telza Miller, Mrs. Ray Saunders, and Mr. Hersey Woodward, Jr., as soloists. Also the quartet, "Light at Evening Time," by S. T. Neiff, was rendered by Mrs. Telza Miller, Mrs. Randolph Chapman, Mr. Robert Speight, and Mr. Hersey Woodward, Jr. The preludes and postludes were rendered by Mr. C. R. Wallace, who presided at the organ at all services.

A handsome new Bible rested on the pulpit, beautiful flowers shed their beauty and fragrance over the congregation, and the great day had inspired true worship not only in the congregation so happy in getting back into the Church auditorium, but the visitors from other Churches in the city and friends who came from other places to worship with us. No appeal was made for money. The appeal was made for real consecration, spiritual worship, regular attendance and faithful living before the world. The desire is to make this house more glorious spiritually, to make it a real house of prayer.

ELON LETTER.

The thirty-eighth annual commencement of Elon College begins May 26th at night and closes on the 29th at noon. The literary address is to be made this year by Governor McLean, of North Carolina. Governor McLean has made a great record as a business executive during his term of office, finding the State with overdrafts of an embarrassing size when he became Governor and having now during the three and a half years of his administration placed the State on a solid financial basis, with a very creditable cash balance in the bank; but his greatest achievement has been as a Christian statesman. He is a moral, ethical and spiritual asset in North Carolina. He will be heard at Elon with great pleasure.

The baccalaureate sermon this year is to be preached by Rev. Jason Noble Pierce, D. D., of Washington, D. C. Dr. Pierce is pastor of the Congregational Church in which President Coolidge worships. He is easily one of the outstanding preachers of America, and in view of the hoped-for union of the Christian and Congregational Churches, Dr. Pierce will be heard with peculiar interest in his sermon.

The alumni address this year is to be given by Mrs. Eunice Rich Powell, of Spray, N. C. Mrs. Powell is a member of the class of '18. She was especially talented in expression as a student and was professor of expression in High Point College until her marriage.

The junior class this year will present essays and orations on Monday of commencement in place of the former society representatives, but the juniors who participate will represent their societies, too, and there will be eight of them.

It is quite interesting these days to see the type of topics that the college student thinks is suitable for a commencement oration or essay—often times very practical and, as some would think, prosaic; and often times quite radical and, as some would think, Bolshevistic. In order that friends of the college may see just exactly how the mind of the junior class would express itself in regard to the great issues of life and of the social order, I have decided in this letter to list the subjects of these various essays and orations, though without giving the authors. They are as follows: "The Human Bridge," "The Schools of Yesterday and Today," "The Dominant Power of Purpose," "The Game of Life," "Popularity," "Happiness," "The Sun-Glass," "Leadership," "The Greatest of All," "A Woman's Love," "Perseverance," "The Profession of Home-Making," "Looking Forward," "Religious Education, Our Greatest Need," "The Girl of Today," "Bright Lights Still Shining," "Show Me Your Associates and I'll Tell You What You Are," "Why Every Child Should Have a Musical Education," "Science and God," "The Romance of Commerce," "The Production of Steel," "The Spirit of Youth," "The Big Secret of Success," "Songs in Life," "Friendship," "Sportsmanship," "Little Things," "Quo Vadis," "Specialization," "Patriotism, Old and New," "Lives of Great Men," "Wake Up, America," "Silent Influences," "Modern Methods of Apple Preservation," "The Romance of Vitamines," "The Call to the Fence Man," "The Want of the Ages," "Appreciation of the College Life," "Modern America," "Successful Failure," "The Silent Umpire," "Athletics as a Builder of Character," "The Road from Appomattox to Lexington," "Modern Youth," "Life is Just as You Make It," "Men and Ships," "The Home Fireside," "Meaning of Success," "The Universal Language," "The Call of the Bell," "Woman's New Freedom," "Our Silent Ambassador," "Friendship," "Athletics," "The New South," "The Highways of Life," "Woman's Work and Wages," "College Men in the Big Leagues," "Youth," "The Meaning of Liberty," "Association," "Athletics."

Out of this number, the eight which were chosen are as follows:

Clios—G. D. Underhill, "Religious Education Our Greatest Need"; H. G. Robertson, "Wake Up, America."

Philologists—D. W. Shepherd, "The Want of the Ages"; Phalti Lawrence, "Science and God."

Psykalions—Alma Rountree, "The Silent Umpire"; Elizabeth Green, "Woman's New Freedom."

Psiphelians—Christine Hornaday, "Bright Lights Still Shining"; Jewell Truitt, "Little Things."

THE SPIRIT OF THE INNER LIFE.

BY MRS. B. D. JONES.

We think of the heart as the seat of the inner life. Let us consider the heart as the spirit of the inner life. As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he. The young people are beginning habits of thought and speech; we should help them to grasp the importance of the right kind of heart life. The tongue is not to be blamed so much for its words. The tongue is only an instrument which throws out the thoughts already manufactured in the heart. The hands are not to blame for the ugly deeds they may perform. They are merely carrying out the ideas already completed down in the heart. Listen, then: let us seek to have a pure heart, out of which may come pure thoughts. "Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life."

Quoting from Prov. 15:13, "A merry heart maketh a cheerful countenance." Again we have from Prov. 15:15, "He that is merry of heart hath a continual feast." From Psa. 66:18 we read, "If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me." The Lord does not ask primarily for either wealth, talent, time or patronage, but He says, "My son, give me thine heart." "He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty, and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city." "Man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart."

The spirit of the heart is the real thing in one's personality. It is what a man is. It is that which causes you to like or dislike one; that makes one agreeable or disagreeable. All spirit is good or bad, holy or unholy. It is the greatest thing about one. What one possesses or what he knows, or what he does is not the chief thing about him. It is the spirit of one that imparts quality and gives these things the power to bless or curse.

Then, how does the "inner life" manifest itself? It manifests itself in fruits. Now, there is a difference between fruit and works. Works are the things you do; fruit of your life is what you are. If the inner life—the spirit—is pure, it brings forth the fruit of the spirit. The fruit of the spirit is love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness and temperance. These are qualities possessed rather than things done. These are the qualities that determine and give value to human conduct. Such qualities radiating from the inner life cannot fail of a beneficent influence on life they touch. These are the human graces that make the home sustain the home in its trials and make a spiritual impress on the home circle. The same is true of the Church. Given a sufficient nucleus of men and women in a Church whose "hearts have been kept with all diligence," and therefore pure, there would be developed in that Church a spirit that would bring peace and joy within and an inspiration to see that the same peace and joy was given to others.

The right "inner life" is the crucial problem in missions. The one trouble with the Church at large today is it is undertaking to carry out the program of Jesus, "Go ye," without the spirit of Jesus. The ultimate victory can never come until His spirit enters, fills and controls the heart of the Church.

How can this right inner life be acquired? This is of vital importance. It can be acquired in one, and only one, way—by going to the Fountain-head, the source of all that is clean and pure and holy. Jesus' mission was to bring His spirit to men and to leave it with them. It is the mission of the Church to transmit that same spirit. They can transmit only what they possess. It is the gift of God through Christ. But gifts have to be received, and men have to prepare for their reception. Here is our great work. We must want His spirit, be willing to accept whatever duties and responsibilities its reception will lay upon us, and by study, meditation and prayer keep our hearts at all times open to hear the Divine voice and receive the spiritual impress. There is a story of an old sculptor who had in his workshop the model of a cathedral. It was covered with the dust of years and seemed little worthy of its place until the old attendant put a light inside the model and brought out the beauty of the stained-glass windows. The change was marvelous, and all stopped to admire. We need Christ within. We need the light of His presence and power, and then even our fragmentary and stained lives will be given beauty and meaning.

Our homes demand our best personal living. The home is the heart of the Christian social order. As go the homes, so must go the Church, and so also the nation. There are no real homes in the world except the homes where He has entered, and there never will or can be real home-life without His spiritual presence.

The poet says, "It takes a heap o' livin' in a house to make a home." If we are to put our lives into our homes we must keep our hearts pure.

"My good blade carves the casque of men,
My tough lance thrusteth sure;
My strength is as the strength of ten,
Because my heart is pure."

—Tennyson.

We cannot be bad at home and good abroad. We are to be real "heavy" Christians at home in order to send forth our influence abroad. Children reflect the heart-life of their parents. If we desire great young people, we must be great Christians in our hearts at home. The Church is poor for lack of inner devotion to Christ and His teachings to one another and to the Church.

I would that every man and woman of us today would take a survey of our relation to Christ. Are we following Him at a distance—following Him afar off? Each one knows for himself where he stands. Would that we would each one resolve in our hearts this day: "Master, I am coming closer, closer to Thee in love for God, love for His Church, love for this world; closer to Jesus in love, devotion and service." Then let our slogan be "Forward Together"; our weapon be prayer; our motto be "Remember Jesus Christ"; our purpose be, crown Him Lord of all!

AN ACTIVE CHURCH.

BY H. C. TAYLOR.

People's Christian Church, Dover, Del., had a great day on Easter Sunday. Sixteen new members were received into the fellowship of the Church, fourteen by confession of faith, and two by letter in response to a week of visitation evangelism conducted by the pastor and the membership committee. This makes thirty new members received into the fellowship of People's Christian Church since January 1, 1928, and five hundred and sixty-one new members received into the Church since October 1, 1920, when Dr. R. C. Helfenstein became pastor.

The series of weekly Church-night programs as held during the months of January, February and March each year for the past six years was the best this year of any so far. These Church-night programs are held each Wednesday night from 6 until 10 o'clock. The program is called the "Program of Food, Faith and Fellowship." The ladies of the Church are organized into eight circles of service, with twenty-four women on a circle, each circle serving a supper in turn at cost. The charge made for the supper is 40 cents, a splendid three-course menu being provided each time. The gospel songs are sung between the courses.

The faith feature of the program consisted of a brief meditation on missions each night, followed by a Scripture lesson and an address on some religious, educational or social theme given by the pastor or some outside speaker. Six outside speakers were secured by the pastor this year, each bringing a great address. One of the speakers was a Y. M. C. A. secretary in Baltimore; one a prominent Baptist; one a Methodist; one an Episcopalian, and a leader in the Reformed Church; one a Roman Catholic layman, who spoke on the "Challenge of Citizenship." The addresses were each of Chautauqua or lyceum character.

The fellowship feature of each Church-night program followed the faith feature. The fellowship hour was enjoyed by the people as they engaged in bowling, playing on the shuffle-board or playing ping-pong and other games in the club room, or in exercises in the gymnasium. Several men have been won to Christ and the Church through the recreational program of People's Church.

The recreational program is in no way a substitute for the worship program of the Church, but it serves as a most helpful supplement to the worship program. The many features of People's Church program are the gymnasium, bowling-alleys, club room and religious programs, all dedicated to the proposition of "winning souls" for Christ and the Church, it being the pastor's conviction that the religion of Jesus Christ should minister to every worthy interest of life and that no life is complete without the pledge of personal allegiance to Jesus Christ.

Worship always receives the major emphasis in People's Church, both in the Church program and in the Sunday School. The week-day activities in the parish houses are carried on as a supplement to the worship program during the fall, winter and spring months. The Defiance College Glee Club recently gave a very worthy program in the community hall of People's Church. A splendid lyceum course of four numbers was given during the winter by the brotherhood of the Church.

The Church has a busy program of activities in the parish house throughout the year, but especially is this true during the fall, winter and spring. The membership has a mind to work and a disposition to follow their leader, and because of this fact People's Church is enjoying a wonderful growth and development and is rendering a most worthy service to the community.

That People's Church of Dover, Del., is the largest and foremost Church of Delaware's capital city was very truly vouched for recently in a letter from one of the oldest and most reverend ministers of another denomination not a resident of Dover, but a frequent visitor to a relative in Dover, when referring to the pastor of People's Christian Church, said, "He is pastor of the largest Church in Dover."

CHURCHES AND ECONOMIC PRESSURE.

BY REV. THOS. F. OPIE, D. D.

Before and since Lausanne, much has been said and written about Christian unity. This is a subject about which we are going to hear more and more. The unity sentiment is cumulative. There were good and sufficient historic reasons for separation in the past, but these historic reasons no longer obtain in any vital or significant sense. There is a real propulsion to unity.

Economic pressure, sound business judgment and executive sense are bringing about consolidation in many business fields. Railroads are consolidating. Newspapers are combining. Great motion-picture concerns are amalgamating. Corporations that at one time were at knife's end with each other in merciless competition are seeing the insanity of the old methods, the heavy overhead, over-production, etc., and are now embracing each other and becoming wedded and consolidated.

There are hundreds of communities which now have community Churches in place of struggling Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian, Episcopal sects. It is estimated that there are at least a thousand of such community Churches in the United States. In a certain community which has supported (or failed to support) as many as five really competitive (non)-Christian denominations, one of the Churches burns down and another is without a pastor, while the others are struggling along pathetically. Business-minded men put their heads together and ask, "Why rebuild the burned Church?" "Why seek another denominational minister?" "Why continue this uneconomic manner of overchurching the community?" "Why may we not all come together if we are really and truly Christians and not mere Presbyterians, Methodists, Baptists, etc., and form a community Church?"

Thus, hundreds of denominational Churches have literally been forced into unity. But why await a tragic situation? Why wait until exigencies force us together? Why not, in love of the brethren, simply join forces and fight the world, the flesh and the devil with a united front? Why, indeed?

In a given city of sixteen thousand people, we count sixteen so-called Christian Churches. We have $500,000 tied up in buildings and properties. Many of these plants are not really functioning. In fact, many of them are actually locked and barred nearly nine-tenths of the time (as though competing bodies of "Christians" could not even trust one another with unlocked and freely opened Church buildings). This is a desperately poor piece of business. It is no business at all! It is not even sane—not to say Christian. Why not amalgamate these Churches and have one or two real community Churches—Churches with a social and welfare program?

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary.

BOYS WILL BE BOYS!

By MISS MARTHA R. STACY.

Last Monday morning I attended graduation exercises at our Ishinomaki Middle School, where I teach once a week throughout the year. The last time I had been in the big assembly hall at school was for the farewell given to the beloved head teacher who had been with the school since it started five years ago, but who left last month to take an important position elsewhere. On that occasion it took all the impressiveness the principal could command in reminding them they were young men who should be too manly to shed tears, to help them control their emotion in bidding good-by; and even so, the leader of the fifth-year stuck in their mouths and the clouds of smoke that filled the corridors. We felt so sorry for them, yet wondered whether their teachers had seemed to them dictators who said, "Do as we tell you, not as we do ourselves," rather than friends who had guided them wisely and whose influence would linger through the years. Though we did not see it ourselves, it seemed plain to other senses that the boys were breaking also the rules of the nation, which forbid intoxicating liquor to minors. It was nearly twelve, and then after repeated requests from the hotel management, before the last ones could be got home. Our hearts ached for them, that they had learned no higher ideals than submission to school restraint till it could no longer be held over them.

boys, who responded to their teacher's farewell talk to the boys, had to stop half-way through and give up and sit down. But this time it was a season of rejoicing, for sixty-seven fine young men were being sent out into the world—the first graduating class from this school—and sixty-two of them are entering higher schools. There were several speakers, but the one who stood out for the earnestness of his speech was a man from the prefectural office, who pleaded with the boys to keep their bodies pure from liquor and tobacco, saying he spoke to them from sixty years of life without having used either—a most unusual record for any man in public life here in Japan. The boys had invited all the teachers to a special meeting in the afternoon, and I wanted so much to stay; but it was the time of our quarterly conference, and already I must be a session late for staying to graduation. So I excused myself and hurried to the train.

In the town to which I went to attend conference, it was also graduation day for the middle school, and as we went from the station to the hotel we found the halls filled with boys, for their class banquet was to be held there that night. Thinking of the boys I had left in the morning, I anticipated a jolly and free but boyish celebration. We ate a hurried supper and left for the Church, not returning to the hotel till after ten. But before we reached the hotel corner, the noise of carousing struck our ears, and as we entered the vestibule was crowded with boys exhibiting their freedom from school rules by the cigarettes

Yesterday I went to teach in a middle school in still another town the last lesson with the boys of my classes there, as they go one year higher and I get new boys when next I go after vacation. As I looked into the bright, boyish faces of my second-year boys, I was thinking of the other groups, and hoping when the time came for them to graduate they would have learned that self-restraint for the sake of noble living is better than simple submission to authority to avoid punishment. Coming home on a late train at nine last night, one of the Ishinomaki graduates joined me at Wakuya, and we rode together to the next station, talking of school, Church, teachers and future prospects. He said that after the meeting which I could not attend at the school, their class had taken two of the most popular teachers and gone to one of the hotels here in Ishinomaki for a banquet. Immediately I said, "Oh, I hope none of you boys did what I saw in the hotel where I stopped"; and then I told him what I had seen and some of the ideals I had for our own boys here who are going out to higher schools. In a shocked voice, he answered, "Of course, we didn't either smoke or drink. Why, Mr. Kasai and Mr. Gunji were with us." Then, in a different voice, he went on, "But we are more fortunate than boys in some other schools, for we have such good teachers, and then they are our friends and comrades as well as our teachers." And as we parted I was wondering which is the best a teacher can do for pupils, to fill them with knowledge minus ideals and good, personal example, or to so live before them that they may in after life think first of the ideals, second of the knowledge, being grateful for the discipline that helped establish good habits.

MEDITATION.

By MRS. W. H. CARROLL.

"Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on Thee."

How many of us in the rush and confusion of the present day can say our minds are "stayed on Thee"? Only through prayer and intercession is it possible for us to attain the peace and consolation of a mind fixed on God. As Clinton Scollard has so beautifully expressed it:

"Let us put by some hour of each day for holy things!

Whether it be when dawn peers through the window-pane or whether noon
Flames, like a burnished topaz, in the vault,
Or when the thrush pours in the ear of eve
Its plaintive monody; some little hour
Where in to hold rapt converse with the soul
From sordidness and self a sanctuary,
Swept by the winnowing of unseen wings,
And touched by the White Light Ineffable."

As the time draws near for the Woman's Convention Board to meet in Richmond, may we be much in prayer for the deliberations of the meeting, that the officers be guided by the Holy Spirit in formulating their plans and purposes for another biennium.

Numerous paths of service open up before us—wonderful opportunities—and our sincere wish is that life may become more abundant to all of us as we grow in grace and in the knowledge as it is in Christ our Lord.

May our daily prayer be this:

"O Master, let me walk with Thee in lowly paths of service free;
Tell me Thy secret, help me bear the strain of toil, the fret of care.
Help me the slow of heart to move by some clear, winning word of love;
Teach me the wayward feet to stay, and guide them in the homeward way.
Teach me Thy patience, still with Thee in closer, dearer company;
In work that keeps faith sweet and strong, in trust that triumphs over wrong.
In hope that sends a shining ray far down the future's broadening way;
In peace that only Thou canst give, with Thee,
O Master, let me live."

NEW CHURCH AT VIRGINIA.

Easter Sunday will be long remembered by the people of Virgilina and community as a fitting climax and celebration of a great achievement on the part of the members and friends of Union Christian Church. The occasion was the opening service in their new, commodious and convenient brick-veneer building. This building was erected on a new site at a cost of about fourteen thousand dollars, and constitutes a fitting and an enduring monument to the labors, the contributions and the sacrifices of the pastor, the members and friends of this splendid organization.

I wish I could give the history of this Church, but I have not the data at hand and it would delay this letter too long were I to wait until I could obtain the necessary information. However, it is worthy of note to mention the fact that one of the members, Bro. J. W. Winfree, now living, enjoys the distinction of having been present at the opening service of four Church buildings of this organization, each one better than the former one and each, except one, on a different site. The beloved pastor, Rev. C. E. Newman, also was present at three of these and preached the opening sermon at each. He has been pastor of this Church twenty-three or four years, not continuously but in two periods. He is a good pastor, as well as a good preacher, and is highly esteemed and greatly beloved by all who know him. The work has prospered under his leadership, the membership having increased from a small number to about four hundred, and the Church property having developed from an ordinary log building to a $14,000 brick-veneer one—from one room to a beautiful, spacious, well-furnished auditorium, five Sunday School rooms, two front entrances and two towers. Besides these, they have a much larger lot, giving ample room for any subsequent needs and situated in a much more desirable location.

In view of these facts, the pastor selected as his text for the first service Acts 2:37, "What Shall We Do?" He made a strong appeal to his congregation to put forth greater effort in these new environments and to co-operate with him in a larger and more progressive program of service. The day was auspicious, the large auditorium was well filled, the music was both appropriate and inspiring, the preacher was at his best, and I think every one enjoyed the service.

A beautiful and impressive feature of the program was the presentation or delivery of the keys of the Church by Bro. Will Slagel, representing the building committee, with fitting remarks; and the receiving of the same on behalf of the Church by Deacon Alfred Hayes, with appropriate response.

The program was as follows: Doxology; invocation; hymn, "He Lives"; Scripture, selection from Acts 2; anthem, "Christ Victorious"; prayer by the writer; hymn, "Low in the Grave He Lay"; delivery of keys; announcements; offertory; anthem, "Christ the Lord is Risen Today"; sermon, text Acts 2:37; Communion; hymn, "Blest Be the Tie that Binds"; benediction. This closed a beautiful and impressive service.

In the evening the three congregations in Virgilina joined in a union Easter service—Methodists, Baptists and Christians. The combined choirs rendered special Easter music. Rev. C. L. Morgan, pastor of the M. E. Church, preached a special Easter sermon. The music and the preaching were both reported to me as being exceedingly fine, and the writer is sorry that he was not privileged to be present. Thus closed a great day in the Virgilina Churches and community.

MISSIONARY MEETING.

A one-day school of missions was held in First Christian Church, Richmond, Va., April 3, 1928. The meeting was called to order at 10:30 A. M. In the absence of the district superintendent, Mrs. O. M. Cockes, Mrs. W. S. Barrett presided. Hymn, "More Love, O Christ to Thee"; devotional, Mrs. B. E. White, reading 30th Psalm; prayer by Rev. F. C. Lester; welcome address by Mrs. C. C. Ryan; response by Mrs. E. O. Cockes; message of superintendent, "The Effect of the Personal Inner Life on the Home and Church"; minutes of last meeting read and approved; prayer by Rev. D. P. Barrett for Dr. Atkinson; moved and carried we send telegram of sympathy to Dr. Atkinson; solo by Mrs. Marvin Stockdon; address by Mrs. D. P. Barrett, "Our Duty to Porto Rico"; roll called for societies, and all Churches in the district were represented; "Our Work Told by Story," Rev. C. E. Gerringer; appointment of committees; offering, $15.34; adjourned for lunch.

Afternoon session: Hymn, "Rescue the Perishing"; devotional, Rev. C. E. Gerringer, reading 15th chapter of John; prayer by Rev. C. E. Gerringer; hymn, "Saviour, Like a Shepherd, Lead Us"; "Evangelism the Duty of All," Rev. F. C. Lester (a very great message, showing us our duty and privilege in winning souls for the kingdom); solo, "We've a Story to Tell to the Nations"; address by Rev. D. P. Barrett, "The Greatest Need of Porto Rico"; round-table conducted by superintendent, "Ways and Means of Raising Funds"; many points of interest discussed with Rev. D. P. Barrett in regards to his Porto Rico work; report of committee on resolutions read and adopted; report of nominating committee read and adopted; report of committee on place (Barrett's Church was accepted); adjourned with prayer by Rev. D. P. Barrett.

LET GOD BE JUDGE.

How fortunate it is that God has not committed the destiny of mankind to the decision of their fellows! How partial would be our judgment, how superficial our reasoning, how personal our standard! We would judge our fellows by our own course of conduct. We could not consistently do otherwise. We would save our friends, and destroy our enemies. Personal prejudice and sentiment would largely bear sway.

True, there will come a time when the saints will have a part in the work of judgment, but that will be after their vision has been clarified from sin, their characters purified by God's grace, and their judgment quickened and enlightened by His Holy Spirit. Then they will be able to sit down, with the Lord Jesus Christ and the holy angels as guides, to take part in this solemn work. Until that hour, judgment on our part should be reserved. There, we shall see things clearly; here, we view things dimly as through a veil. There, we shall be able to discern the motives and purposes which have possessed men's lives. We shall be able to look beneath the surface, and estimate matters at their intrinsic value; here, we must judge from the superficial, and take into account the outward acts as they appear to our clouded vision.

It behooves us now, therefore, to be generous in the estimate of our fellows. Christianity itself is broad, liberal, and generous. It does not condone sin, but it exercises great love for, and long patience with, the sinful. We are inclined sometimes, in our narrow conceptions, to pass judgment upon our fellows over the smallest details in their experience. Polite society may judge of a man's social standing by the cut of his coat or the style of his hat, and there is danger that we may even bring such minor matters as this into our estimate of Christianity.

God has called this people to a high standard of Christian living. He has called us also to peace; and peace in our homes and in the Church of God is a thousand times more desirable than a spirit of contention and irritation caused by our continually harping over little details whose importance we think we see, but which our brethren do not appreciate. Let us not feel that God has laid upon us the burden of converting our fellows, or even our own families, to our conception of all the details of Christian living.

Let us teach principles. Let us exemplify those principles in our own lives, applying them just as closely to the details of our own experience as possible. Then let us live sweetly with those around us; let us think charitably; let us be kind and loving and generous. This course will make more for God and for truth and for righteousness than any spirit which unduly exalts our own conception of duty, and discounts the motives and purposes of our fellow-men. We have quite enough to do if we can correctly determine our duty before God in all the details of life, leaving our brethren and sisters, by the aid of the Spirit of God, to determine their duty for themselves. Let God be Judge.—F. M. W., in Review and Herald.

Lesson VII—May 13, 1928.

JESUS ENTERS JERUSALEM.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Behold, thy King cometh unto thee; He is just, and having salvation."—Zach. 9:9.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psal. 24:7-10.

1. Christ's Kingship openly proclaimed. On the day which we call Palm Sunday, the last Sunday of His life, Jesus made His triumphant entry of Jerusalem. On approaching Bethphage and Bethany, not far from the city, Jesus bade two of His disciples go into the village opposite, where on entering they would find a colt tied which no man had ever ridden; this animal they were to loose and bring to Him. If questioned as to their action, they were to say, "The Lord hath need of him and will return him to you after he has been ridden." The disciples found the colt in a public street fastened to a door, and as they unloosed him were questioned, but upon answering as Jesus had directed they were permitted to take him away. The owner was evidently a friend of Jesus.

They brought the colt and put their loose, outer robes upon him for their Master to sit upon. Others spread their garments on the road, and yet others secured branches of palm trees (Jno. 12:13) and cast them down for Him to ride over. And the crown that went before as well as the crowd that followed cried, "Hosanna (Save now—compare the acclamation, God save the king); blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord: Blessed is the kingdom that cometh, the kingdom of our father David; Hosanna in the highest."

"There is no clearer illustration of the ineffectiveness of mere admiration for Jesus. There must be conviction, and conviction that is ready to be translated into unswerving loyalty. Admiration evaporates under the breath of criticism. The obedient art adamant. His spirit passes into them and His spirit is unconquerable."

2. The return to Bethany and the cursing of the fig tree on the morrow. Before He went with the twelve to Bethany for the night, Jesus entered the temple and looked around. The place was very familiar to Him; He had known it from boyhood. Now, however, He was in the house of God as Judge. "We must not think of the cleansing of the temple as if it were on a swift impulse. If Mark is to be followed, the Saviour had seen on the evening before that day the temple with all its marks of defilement. He took time to reflect upon it; He slept upon it."

3. Christ defies the temple authorities. On the following day, Jesus entered the court of the Gentiles of the temple, cast out buyers and sellers, and overthrew the tables of the money-changers and the seats of those who sold doves.

"These words show us Christ's estimate of profiteering. A profiteer is a thief, whether he asks an unfair price for goods, for the use of capital, or for the labor of his hands. In the eyes of Jesus, the great profanation of the temple by the market was that men, placed there to interpret God to the people and to help them to worship Him, deliberately turned the place and their office into instruments of unjust gain for themselves. We can easily see from this what Christ would think of many of the methods of modern business."

"How great the contrast between the meek and lowly King riding into Jerusalem and the righteously indignant Judge and Reformer in the temple! There were fire and force as well as warmth and gentleness, regal masterfulness as well as long-suffering patience, in our King."

4. The futile challenge of priests and scribes. The chief priests and scribes challenged His authority. At once, Jesus put them on the defensive by a question which showed they had no right to debate His authority. What had been their attitude in a previous case? John had saluted Jesus as Messiah. The baptism of John—was it from heaven, or of men? If they answered, "From God," must not Jesus be the promised Messiah, and would Jesus not say to them, "Why, then, did ye not believe John?" If they said, "From men," the people who believed John to have been a prophet would turn against them. They dared not answer. "We know not," was all they would say. And Jesus returned, "Neither tell I you by what authority I do these things."

"Men who will not take sides for fear lest their own fortunes should suffer are ruled out of any discussion upon religious authority."

Sunday, May 13, 1928.

TOPIC: "Home Life, a Test of My Christianity." Tit. 2:1-14.

Some Bible Hints.

Since Christianity is love, one test of it will be the way we treat older persons (vs. 2, 3).

Notice the mental conditions referred to—temperate, grave, sober-minded, faithful, loving, chaste, and so on. Christ makes new persons of us (vs. 3, 4).

We have advanced indeed when people have no evil thing to say of us. Pray for grace to live thus (v. 8).

People do not judge of Christianity by its doctrine, but by the lives of professing Christians. We attract or we repel (v. 10).

Suggestive Thoughts.

It has been said that men will write, fight, and even die for their religion, but it is the minority that "live" it and live for it.

We can create the atmosphere of the home. One happy person brings sunshine; a sour face brings gloom. If Christianity makes us gloomy, no one will want it.

We cannot deceive our friends at home. They see through us. And they are quick to recognize honest efforts to live on a higher level. If we succeed, they will want to know our secret.

Our Christianity should change selfishness into unselfishness. No more shirking of work! No more demands, but happy service rendered in a spirit of helpfulness.

A Few Illustrations.

When some one uses sharp, cutting, blighting words that send the blood to the head, is the Christ-spirit in us able to keep us silent, as Jesus was when reviled? There is a real test.

We may not be able to bring our relatives to Christ by argument or preaching; but we can do it by our lives. Tell what you know about Jesus, but above all live like Him.

We are business partners in the home. That means that we give it our best, that we love it, support it, and make it cheerful.

A drunkard, in one of his sober hours, said to his daughter, "Why do you stay with me? Why don't you give me up?" And she said simply, "Because I love you." That won the father to Christ.

To Think About.

What hard situations must we face at home? How may we show, at home, our consecration to Christ?

How may we lighten one another's burdens at home?

MISSIONARY ACTIVITY.

The missionary rallies of the North Carolina Conference, held at Mt. Zion, Shiloh, Monticello, Grace's Chapel, Wake Chapel, and Oak Level Churches from April 11th to 21st, were well attended and showed fine interest. The Churches having societies were pretty well represented, but it was regretted that more Churches not having societies were not represented. There were not many young people or men present at most of the rallies, and it was decided to emphasize the fact that the meetings are for all the people of the Churches next year. It was impossible to hold the rally at Hebron because of the rain, but the Hebron and Union (Virgilina) Churches were represented and it was decided to hold the rally next year at Union.

At the Lee, Moore, Montgomery rally, held at Grace's Chapel, a woman's society was organized, with ten charter members and Mrs. R. B. Coggins, president. The meetings were all fine and a splendid spirit was manifested on the part of the Churches entertaining and the delegates present. Rev. D. P. Barrett attended all of the rallies except Monticello, and Mrs. Barrett attended this one. Their addresses on Porto Rico were most interesting and inspiring and well received at each meeting. The round-table discussions were entered into seriously at each place, and much literature on the mission work distributed and a large number of the new "World Friendship Programs" for young people sold.

WE SHALL MISS THEM.

We shall miss two of our stalwart leaders, and we shall miss them greatly when the Southern Christian Convention assembles in Richmond.

We shall greatly miss the beloved editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN and Mission Secretary of the Southern Christian Convention, Dr. J. O. Atkinson. Not since the Convention met in Burlington, ten years ago, has Dr. Atkinson missed a session of the Southern Christian Convention. Around his versatile and consecrated personality gather many of the primary interests of the Church; but while we shall greatly miss him and his counsel, we shall rejoice that he is greatly improved after his four months of rest. Dr. Atkinson thinks himself that he is able to attend the Convention and participate in it, but his physician and his friends are anxious that his progress toward health should not be jeopardized by the nervous and emotional strain of attendance on the Convention. At their earnest insistence, therefore, he has decided to remain away, but means to return to his work by the middle of May. We give thanks to God for this encouraging report.

We shall also greatly miss the Rev. H. W. Elder, the outstanding Church-builder in the Christian denomination, a man who has burnt out his life literally in the service of the Christian Church and who finds himself today, less than sixty years of age, afflicted and likely never to be able to speak another word for his Master. Bro. Elder has served on the Mission Board of the Southern Church since its incorporation, and he has never missed a session prior to his affliction. In his desire to save the board money in coming to the meetings of the Mission Board, which have usually been held in Suffolk, Va., he has sat up all night rather than take a Pullman, and has lived at lunch counters on the way, going and returning, in order to cut expenses. In order to build Churches in the far South, several times he placed mortgages on his own home to secure funds. If ever a man has literally given his life for the Christian Church, that man is the Rev. H. W. Elder. His life is an inspiration and his memory will be a benediction in the Christian denomination for generations to come. Bro. Elder is at this time at his home in Richland, Ga., able to eat and to write, but unable to walk or to talk. We shall greatly miss this great-hearted pioneer of the kingdom at the Richmond Convention.

While we shall greatly miss these two beloved leaders, we know that they will be with the Convention in spirit and that they will be praying earnestly for Divine guidance in every resolution that shall be considered and in every decision that shall be arrived at.

may be that we are becoming poor—poor with a poverty that we will not know until it is too late to earn our riches. The mills of the God's grind slowly but surely. He has commanded us to go. To go where hearts sicken and tire, where spirits are lowly and souls are stained, where faith has failed and hope is gone, to go and tell them of the Christ, of Him who forgives, who heals, who binds up, who blots out, who saves and who makes alive. And we go with our gifts—our gifts of heart, of soul, and of purse.

The great world's heart is aching fiercely in the night,
And God alone can heal it, and God alone give light:
And the men to bear that message and to speak the living word
Are you and I, my brothers, and the millions that have heard.

Can we close our eyes to duty? Can we fold our hands at ease

While the gates of night stand open to the pathways of the seas?

Can we shut up our compassions? Can we leave one prayer unsaid

Till the lands which hell has blasted have been quickened from the dead?

We grovel among trifles and our spirits fret and toss,

While above us burns the vision of the Christ upon the cross;

And the blood of God is streaming from His broken hands and side,

And the lips of God are saying, "Tell my brothers I have died."

O voice of God, we hear Thee above the shocks of time;

Thine echoes roll 'round us, and the message is sublime.

No power of man shall thwart us, no stronghold shall dismay

When God commands obedience and love has led the way."

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.

Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
One of Our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MONDAY.

A CHRISTIAN WATERLOO.

"When he saw that, he arose and fled for his life."—1 Kings 19:3.

This is a time when Elijah should have stood his ground and said, like Chrisostom, "Tell her I fear nothing but sin." But he saw Jezebel and ran for his life until he was far away, when he sat down under a juniper tree and prayed to God to kill him. He never recovered from that false step.

Elijah had waked away from God and felt the danger of his circumstances. Others have failed this way. Peter, walking on the water, saw the wind and waves, and sank. Moses saw starvation coming, and smote the rock.

In moments of danger, or even of self-desire, we forget God and regard self; we take steps which shatter our influence forever.

Prayer.—Dear Father, Thou art all-seeing and all-knowing, and we are so limited in our vision and know so little what we most need for our highest good; we pray for the gift and the power to rise above the circumstances of this life as most trivial, and to today, tomorrow and always as seeing Him who is invisible. Amen.

TUESDAY.

GOD'S MERCY TOWARDS A SINNER.

"They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run and not be weary; they shall walk and not faint."

An angel appeared to Elijah under the juniper tree and said, "Arise and eat, because the journey is too great for thee." God followed him, even though he was running from Him, and reminded him that he was making his own choices. His feelings were the result of depending on himself and the strain was more than he could endure. That his heaven's love had not failed. What mercy!

The prodigal son had taken his own resources and had his fling until he no longer had any strength left. When he looked back home and saw what the father had for him, then the father made a feast and received him back into the family. What mercy!

God clings to His children—follows them, watches every waking hour, awake every sleeping hour, faileth not, is never weary, never faileth, hears all things and endures all things. Patient with waywardness, picking us up when we fall, helping us higher, and inspiring us to live worthily. To follow Him, we, too, gain something of His strength to withstand assault, to endure fatigue, and to abide perpetually in His presence.

Prayer.—Our Father in heaven, we pray for the deepening of a consciousness of Thy presence, that we live unto Thee and communion may be complete. Amen.

REDEEMING STROKES IN LIFE.

"Go, return."—1 Kings 19:15.

When Elijah got back with God, God told him to return to the job he was doing, and he went and entered upon these duties more courageously than ever before.

God was bringing Israel to salvation through Elijah, and King Ahab and Queen Jezebel had to be gotten out of the way. Elijah had to risk his own head to reprove the royalty. He did so and saved Israel.

Faithful in duty, it is beautiful to see the workings of faith, and to see His fallen saints restored raising them from the grave and setting them upon the stars on the right hand of God, to be used eternally in heavenly service.

Prayer.—Our Father and our God, we feel like Paul of old, that when we would do good, evil is present with us, and often we fall and stray from Thee. But we thank Thee for Thy mercy in never leaving us and lifting us up and bringing us back. Deepen our consciousness of Thee this day and strengthen our hands to be loyal to duty now and forever. Amen.

HEAVEN'S QUESTION TO ME.

"What doest thou here?"

We are never so far from God but what He finds us, and wants to know what we are doing.

God had never spoken to Elijah like that before. Elijah thought that there was no one right but himself, and had sought recourse again in the solitude of his own counsel. He was like a rudderless ship awash in the waves. God jacked him up and told him to go before the storm and learn another lesson of Him. He heard the still small voice, knew God again, and learned that there were good men of Israel who had not bowed to Baal.

Our question: In any place, what doest thou there—God's will, or have we forsaken Him?

Prayer.—Our Father, when Thou dost make up Thy jewels we want to hear our names before heaven's assembly of saints. We want to be claimed by Thee. Help us to do Thy will daily, humbly and contentedly, and reach the goal of Thy glory. Amen.

FRIDAY.

AN EVENING SONG.

"And it came to pass as they still went on and talked, that, behold there appeared a chariot of fire which parted them asunder; and Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven."—2 Kings 2:11.

This was Elijah's last earthly experience. There is always something beautiful in the declining years of one who, in early life, has dared nobly and wrought successfully.

Elijah's last days bear the reward of forgotten effort and reflect the glory of a well-done service. He had established a school of prophets numbering 7,000 to carry on his work of anointing kings, upbraiding sinners, defending the kingdom, and guarding the religious flame.

There was no extra preparation for his death. He was translated doing duty. What would you do if you were going to die within three days? Anything different? Our text is the sublimest scene of the Old Testament.

Suppose God had taken Elijah when he asked Him to. What a memory! But now life is rounded up worth while. Death is a bridge of smiles, and going from darkness to light mortality is swallowed up in victory.

Prayer.—Our Father and our God, help us to come to Thee not for what we can get out of Thee, but for what we can bring Thee—clean living, clean hands, clean heart, whole consecration and untiring service—and may our every day be consistent with instantaneous death. Give us an insatiable hunger for the best gifts. Give us a fresh baptism of power and a new unction of the Holy Spirit. Amen.

SATURDAY.

"If thou doest not well, sin lieth at the door."—Gen. 4:7.

Our lives are a capacity for God, and we are to be used now; that is, every minute in what we are doing. To do well, includes our relations in everything and everybody.

Rev. R. A. Haste, in Harper's Weekly, gives us an account of a little incident in his life. He had a proposition to put before the public for which $20,000 was to be paid to the right man. A man was recommended. He called upon this man, and after due process of red-tape, was allowed to see him. He paused before the door, saw that he was busy, and said, "I see you are busy. I have a proposition to go over with you. I will call again."

You can imagine his surprise when he heard the gentleman rattle off, amidst dictation, "I don't want you to call again. I am always busy. Put your proposition in writing and mail it."

"Thank you," said Haste; "I don't care to put my proposition in writing." He replied, "Very well; I was only giving you some sound advice."

"Very well," said Haste, "I will put it in writing." The next day the man received the following:

"Dear Sir,—You have been recommended to me to take charge of a $20,000 campaign; but, finding that you are too busy to take the matter up, I have been compelled, to my regret, to place the business elsewhere."

It pays to take time to be courteous. If we would do well, we must be sure we are right and that we love our neighbor as we would ourselves.

Prayer.—Dear Father, as we spend our days, may we turn our souls daily toward Thee. May we join ourselves to Thy people and seek to do Thy will in all things. Amen.

SUNDAY.

HATE AND ITS ANTIDOTE.

"Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that disrespectfully use you and persecute you."—Matt. 5:44.

We are enjoined to hate iniquity and false ways, but to hate instruction, knowledge, our brother, our friends, any one, is to destroy in us the deeper meanings of life.

Go on doing right. Forbear and forgive trespasses; seek no redress in imperious and vindictive terms; avenge not yourselves; walk in the footsteps of the Master; build thy character in the teachings of Jesus; only the Spirit of Christ in living vindicates us in the judgment, and they that wait upon the Lord shall inherit the earth.

Prayer.—All say the Lord's Prayer together.

Acting upon the advice of his physician and upon the insistence of friends who felt that attendance on the Convention might undo the improvement which he has enjoyed during the past four months of rest, Dr. Atkinson has reluctantly agreed to remain in Florida till the 15th of May. It will be a real disappointment to the people not to see Dr. Atkinson at the Convention, but at the same time this loss will be compensated for by the thought that the best thing is being done for him. The Church is called upon to pray earnestly for his complete recovery and his speedy return to his work.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

The continued rains this spring have prevented us from getting much farm work done. They have also prevented us from our usual plantings in the garden; but, with a few days of clear weather, we will catch up and have our usual crops.

Our board of trustees held its annual meeting on Tuesday, the 24th, and had a very pleasant meeting. The superintendent's report showed that the Christian Orphanage is out of debt and had some money in the bank to its credit. The wise policy the board adopted eleven years ago to steer clear of debt has proven wise from the fact in this length of time two splendid brick buildings for children have been added, besides land, barn, granary, corn crib, potatoe house and other necessary, buildings adding more than one hundred thousand dollars to its plant's value, paying off an indebtedness on it at that time and taking care of a yearly average of eighty-one children, and today out of debt and some money to its credit in the bank. The Christian Orphanage today has a plant that our Church may well feel proud of. And other people are beginning to take notice that the Christian Church has an Orphanage.

The Orphanage has 116 children in its care at this time—a fine crowd of little boys and girls. We have one girl to graduate as a nurse in May. We have one girl finishing her third year in college. We have another finishing her first year in college. We have one boy and girl graduating from high school this year. Quite a number graduate from the grammar grades and go up to high school.

When you invest your charity money in the Christian Orphanage it is wisely invested and will be wisely handled and you reach the right spot with it.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

SAVE-A-LIFE PERIOD.

Whereas, experience has demonstrated that a considerable portion of the accidents involving motor vehicles is directly chargeable to defective mechanism or equipment; and

Whereas, these accidents leave in their wake untold suffering and loss of human life and limb, entirely aside from wanton waste of damage to property; and

Whereas, it is believed that careful and frequent inspection of this mechanism and equipment will eliminate most, if not all, accidents chargeable to such defects; and

Whereas, the Hon. James M. Hayes, Jr., Commissioner of Motor Vehicles of the State of Virginia, in conjunction with and ably aided by the automobile industry and all garages and service stations, has arranged for such inspection free of charge, to include examination of brakes, horns, lights, steering mechanism and mirrors during the period of May 7th to June 2nd;

Now, therefore, I, Harry F. Byrd, Governor of the State of Virginia, do proclaim the period beginning May 7th and ending June 2nd as a "Save-a-Life" period.

And I earnestly urge that all owners of motor vehicles avail themselves of this opportunity of free inspection of such vehicles and the elimination of all defects.

I respectfully recommend to the mayor of each city, town and village that they make similar proclamation to their townspeople; that presidents of Chambers of Commerce, luncheon and motor clubs and civic organizations stress the significance of this safety movement; and I further recommend the subject of public safety as an appropriate theme for clergymen and public speakers during the public safety period, to the end that greater success will attend the effort to reduce car accident hazard.

Given under my hand and under the lesser seal of the Commonwealth, at Richmond, this 1 day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twenty-eight, and in the one hundred and fifty-second year of the Commonwealth.

HARRY F. BYRD,
Governor of Virginia.

Secretary of the Commonwealth.

MADGE MOFFITT WHITESELL, Editor.

Dears:

Here are some "curiosity corner" stories today. All of you Kiddies try to guess these riddles before you read the answers—what fun! Now, wouldn't it be more fun than ever for you Kiddies to send your editor some of your very own riddles that you have heard or that you make yourself? That would be so interesting, dears. And something else, too: just as soon as possible we are going to have another picture and story contest, with every one of you Kiddies. So be telling your Sunday School teacher that you want to learn a beautiful story from the Bible, and be able to draw a picture of some one in the story—all your very own work—and then we will take the very best six stories we get and publish the story you wrote and the picture you drew right in our own Korner—for that will be more fun!

Merry sunshine! The Kiddies are coming out to play. Hurry up, sunbeams, make a fairy ring for all our Kiddies to dance in. The red birds and the blue birds are so happy and gay. It's springtime, Kiddies! Jack Frost has gone to his winter-time home.

Now, what's this about riddles? Who can guess them every one? Why, our Kiddies, of course.

RIDDLES.

and know so little what we most need for our highest good; we pray for the gift and the power to rise above the circumstances of this life as most trivial, and to today, tomorrow and always as seeing Him who is invisible. Amen.

TUESDAY.

GOD'S MERCY TOWARDS A SINNER.

"They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run and not be weary; they shall walk and not faint."

An angel appeared to Elijah under the juniper tree and said, "Arise and eat because thou art weary."

HERE WE GO 'ROUND THE SLEEPYMAN.

Do you ever play "Here we go around the mulberry bush?" Well, this game is sung to the same tune as "Here we go around the mulberry bush." I'm sure that all boys and girls know how to sing that.

All the children join hands and make a circle. The one who is "it" stoops down in the middle of the circle and shuts his eyes. All the other children skip around in the circle and sing:

All around the Sleepyman,
Sleepyman, Sleepyman;
All around the Sleepyman,
So early in the morning.

He'll wake up and catch us now,
Catch us now, catch us now;
He'll wake up and catch us now,
So early in the morning.

When you sing "morning" the last time, the Sleepyman jumps up and runs after the other children. All the children turn loose hands and run to a place you have marked off for "home" before he catches you.

You may have a fence for "home" or a walk or anything you want to choose.

If the Sleepyman touches you before you get "home," then you have to be a Sleepyman and sit in the center with him. Now skip around again and sing "All around the Sleepyman." As you say "so early in the morning," all the sleepy men jump up and try to catch the rest of you before you get "home." Every one touched that time has to get in the middle. Each time there will be more sleepy men to catch the others; so it will be harder to get "home." Keep on until every one is caught. And then you can start all over again and play until you are tired.

BENNETT RESTS IN ARLINGTON.

A navy firing squad saluted Floyd Bennett with three volleys across his grave when he was laid to rest on April 27th. Amid all military honors, Floyd Bennett took his place among the nation's heroes. Funeral services for the aviator, who ranked high in the regard of his comrades in contrast to his official rating as naval machinist, was held immediately after the body reached the capital from New York.

Rear Admiral Moffett, chief of the navy bureau of aeronautics, and Assistant Secretary of War Davison was among the officials who met the funeral party upon its arrival from New York.

Both Commander Byrd and Mrs. Bennett accompanied the group bringing the body from Quebec.

At Arlington, on a flag-draped army caisson, and followed by a navy escort, the body of the man who flew to the pole was carried through the cemetery to the grave. The funeral procession was formed at Arlington gates, and included three squads of bluejackets from the President's yacht, the Mayflower, a navy firing squad, and a bugler to sound taps.

Memorial Services at Christian Temple.

Memorial services for Floyd Bennett were held Sunday morning in Christian Temple, in Norfolk. Bennett was a member of the temple congregation, having united with that Church while living in Norfolk in 1923. Mayor S. Heth Tyler was invited to speak on behalf of the city, Lieutenant Governor J. E. West on behalf of the State, and Chaplain R. B. Patrick, U. S. Navy, on behalf of the nation. The pastor, Rev. L. E. Smith, D. D., at the request of Mrs. Bennett, was invited by bureau of navigation officials to officiate at the funeral service, but returned in time to conduct the memorial exercises.

CHURCHES AND ECONOMIC PRESSURE.

This would release from $300,000 to $400,000 for work in unchurched sections and in the world-wide mission field. Why not do it? There can be but one answer. Here it is (whether you like it or not): we are not first, last and always Christian men and women, but mere narrowed sectarians and selfish denominationalists.

But this is not the whole story. These sixteen denominational bodies (some denominations having three different Churches in the same community) must also have sixteen different pastors. God, help us! A pastor for every few hundred members, while in mission fields we have not a pastor for a hundred thousand—not one for thousands of thousands in some parts of the world! Why not release some of these men for other fields? Why pay salaries amounting to $75,000 a year? Why not release $50,000 of this budget and apply it to other fields less favored? Why? Because we are not interested so much in Christ and humanity as we are in denominational pride and sectarian supersedence. It is not a pleasant statement; but is it not a fact?

These sixteen properties cost thousands annually for heat, light, upkeep and repair. Why not reduce this cost by two-thirds and release other thousands for Christian and humanitarian enterprise in the world's religious deserts? Why? Because we are denominationalists and because we want to worship as we want to worship! Are we really Christian in this matter?

In the past few days, notices of two communities closing certain Churches for business reasons have come to this desk. "Overburdened with debt, weakened by loss of patronage, its working territory narrowed by strong competition," a certain Church asks for "receivership" and will go out of business! That would be a scandal in good business circles. Is it less so in Church circles?

For five years I have been saying that unless our so-called leaders give us some real semblance of Christian unity within the next generation, the wise and calculating business men of given communities are going to rise up and demand community Churches on the mere basis of economic pressure. That is rather a low basis on which brothers should consider unity, but the sign of the times would seem to justify the prophecy. Christian love and Christian fellowship and Christian altruism, not to mention Christian statesmanship and good business, are crying aloud for Christian consolidation, Christian co-operation and Christian unification. Shall we hear and heed the cry?

Burlington, N. C.

The value of prayer is not commensurate with its ease and fluency. As a cold climate produces a strong race, so coldness in prayer often preserves the soul from enervating self-deception and forces it to strike deep roots into the eternal Rock. The loneliness and emptiness of the soul that we often experience in the very act of prayer may be the hand of God, dilating the heart by hope deferred and unfulfilled desire until it receive the Presence it longs for. For most souls, prayer, if taken seriously, is a business demanding high courage.—Selected.

WEAVER.

Auburn Christian Church is once more in mourning because of the death of Bro. J. C. Weaver, who died in Raleigh, N. C., March 27th, after an illness of about four weeks. Bro. Weaver was forty-one years, three months and four days old. He has been a very active member of the Church for several years. We shall miss Bro. Weaver very much in his home, the Church, the Sunday School and community because of his friendliness to everybody. We loved him because of his lovable disposition. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Margaret Weaver; his father and mother, five brothers and three sisters.

The funeral was conducted in Auburn Christian Church by the writer Wednesday, March 28th at 11 A. M., after which the body was taken to a family burying ground twelve miles north of Durham, where he was laid to rest beneath a mound of beautiful flowers. May the blessings of heaven rest upon the relatives and many friends who mourn their loss.

McNALLY.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian Church drafted the following resolutions:

Inasmuch as the soul of our friend and member, Mrs. Maggie Spencer McNally, was ushered into the great beyond after a few days' suffering; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to God's will, knowing that He doeth all things well and for our good.

2. That we imitate her good example by always giving our best to His cause.

3. That we offer our heartfelt sympathy to her family, pointing them to Christ the Saviour of the world.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, a copy to The Christian Sun for publication, and a copy to spread on the minutes of our society records.

Respectfully submitted,

MRS. J. D. LUKE.

MRS. E. T. BLAKLEY.

MRS. C. E. SMITH.

BETHLEHEM COLLEGE

WADLEY, ALABAMA

A JUNIOR COLLEGE AND HIGH SCHOOL.

Where Opportunity Awaits the Student of Very Limited Means.

GIRL'S DORMITORY.

Bethlehem College, Wadley, Ala., will open September 5, 1927. This institution is a Junior College and High School, which is co-educational, where scholarship ranks high and expense is low. It is thoroughly Christian, absolutely non-sectarian, and vitally American. A school where opportunity awaits the student of very limited means—$68.00 pays all college expenses, except books, board and room. Board, $15.00 per month, and room $3.00; total expenses for a term of nine months, $250.00.

Bethlehem College is training some of the best stock of America for Christian leadership, to be used by the nation and the world. Here is a great challenge and asset for students who wish to prepare themselves to serve in a worth-while way. The work on the new Administration Building is progressing nicely, and we will be able to begin our college work in this building when school opens this fall.

"WHEN BLINDED EYES ARE OPENED."

By DR. L. E. SMITH, President.

My Friends:

Have you ever had a passage of Scripture to haunt you? To lay hold of you and refuse to let you go? Jesus said to the Pharisees on one occasion, those who would not believe, "Having eyes ye see not." They had come to Him for a sign. He had given them a sign. "Many signs I have given you, both signs and eyes, but ye have not seen at all."

The past summer on the streets of the Eternal City of Rome, I saw a blind man moving around a fountain on the public streets, feeling for a cup. The cup was there, the water was there, but he couldn't find either. He had eyes, but could not see. And I said, "There are many of us today—oh! so many of us in the Church—who are asking for this and for that, God, in His providence and out of His goodness, has placed it all about, but we are like the blind man groping about in the dark feeling for the cup—we have eyes but see not."

But, oh yes, we do see in a very definite sense!

1. We see our needs—our needs as a Church and as a Convention. They loom large; they stand out before us like mountain peaks; they weigh down upon us like tons and tons of lead. To meet these needs seems a long, long grind, if not impossible task. Turn whichever way you may, look in this direction or that, and our needs are staring us in the face. And I fear that the most of us have reached the place where we see only the needs. When it comes to promises and blessings and resources, we see them not. We have eyes but we see not. And what are these needs that loom so large in our denominational work? Let's list them, get them before us and see what they are:

(1) Our need of organization. And we do need a better organization. No single body can function without an organization. We need an organization that will be explicit and efficient; one that the average man among us can see and comprehend; one that will enlist the very largest possible number of our constituency in the enterprises of the Church and the Church as a whole. An organization that will function and that will produce results when it functions. And then next we will list as our need—

(2) Co-operation. What's the use to organize unless we can have co-operation in the back of the organization? The lack of co-operation has sent hundreds and thousands of organizations to the junk-heap, and their constituents to wreck and to ruin. But, on the other hand, the spirit and fact of co-operation has wrought wonders among men and piled up achievements for good and for righteousness in the earth. What I mean by co-operation is a willingness to sacrifice our personal preferences for the common good. A determination to put our heads and hearts together to discover our needs, whatever and wherever they are, and then to unite our efforts and our resources to meet these needs, regardless of the cost. Together and unselfishly we can succeed; separately and selfishly, we shall fail. And then next we will list as our need—

(3) Material Power. They tell us that we need material power; that practically every Church in the brotherhood and every department in the Convention needs money—and money they must have if they are to function. The Church and the Church's institutions have financial obligations, and these obligations must be met, if the Church is to hold its position and maintain its respectability in society. On last Monday, at a meeting of the heads of the departments of the Convention, the executive committee and others, our needs were discussed. Each department was asked to state, not its desires, but its actual needs in terms of dollars and cents. The Orphanage said $30,000, the Board of Education said $47,000, the Board of Superannuation said $3,000, making a total of $125,000. And they tell us that they cannot operate for any less. That these are our needs, and that we must have this amount of money if we are to operate with a degree of efficiency and respectability. And then I will list next as our need—

(4) Spiritual power. Some one says we may need organization, co-operation and material wealth, but these will all avail but naught unless we have spiritual power, and that if we have spiritual power that all other needs will be met, for they said, "The Lord thy God supplieth all thy needs."

The one great trouble with us, they say, is that our Conferences and Conventions have degenerated into mere human organizations for the purpose of promulgating financial schemes by which money may be filched from the pockets of our constituents for the realization of the high aims of certain individuals and not for the glory of God and the coming of His kingdom. And that so long as these conditions prevail, just so long will our treasuries be empty and our Church impotent in the presence of her great world task. Our one great and supreme need, they say, is spiritual power—the power of God with us and in us. And unquestionably they are right.

Now we have our needs before us, and we see them. We see them with our own eyes. They are talked about in committees; they are discussed in councils; they are published from the house-tops—but not one time have we turned to consider our resources in the light that we should. Always we are saying we can't—we are not sufficiently strong; we haven't the resources. When it comes to our needs, we have our eyes wide open and they see as if with an eagle's vision. But when it comes to our resources, our vision seems to be blurred. We have eyes, but see not.

Let's see, then, if we can't open these blinded eyes of ours as to our resources. In the next place, then, let us consider—

2. Our resources. We saw among our needs, organization—an organization that would function and produce results. Is it possible for us to have such an organization? Do we have the material out of which to form an effective organization for the Church and the coming of the kingdom? We have material for effective organization in every other line of industry. Organizations for production, for manufacturing, for transportation, for education, for political machinery, and for statecraft. And if we can organize for industry and State and politics, why can't we organize for religion? We have the material out of which to form the organization, if we will. Men and women of affairs, of ability, of prestige and of power. If we would only take the material that we have, the genius for organization that's ours, and forge this material into an organization that's compact and efficient, we could startle the religious world with achievements.

Coming into Richmond, I saw a pile of old scrap-iron. I got off the train and came along the side of a giant locomotive, a thing of beauty and of power. Do you know the difference between that pile of scrap-iron and that locomotive? One is organized and the other is not. Unorganized, we are helpless, powerless; organized, we are irresistible. Next we saw among our needs—

(2) Co-operation. Is it possible for us to co-operate in the great work of the kingdom, for the good of our Church, for the good of every department of our Church? Somebody said to me the other day, "The trouble with our Church is, everybody is for himself, every fellow thinks that his particular department is the only department, that he has anything to do with, said that his department must live and succeed if every other department fails and goes to the devil and to the dogs. Said he, our greatest need is co-operation."

If our people would only co-operate. If the departments of our Convention would only co-operate as they should, we could go and we could accomplish something. Another man said that the only going concern that we have in the Convention is the Orphanage, and let's don't discourage that—let's let it go! Now, did he think that the Orphanage could go without the other depart-

NOTES-PERSONALS

Rev. D. A. Long was unable to attend the Convention. Dr. Long was greatly missed.

It is hoped that every reader of THE CHRISTIAN SUN will read in detail President Smith's message to the Convention as printed in full in this issue.

Rev. H. W. Elder was greatly missed during the Convention. He has been a leader in the Christian Church for so long that his absence was a great loss.

There will be great rejoicing that Rev. J. Fuller Johnson gives every assurance of complete recovery from his recent serious illness. He was greatly missed at the Convention.

Wanted—Good second-hand Church pews. Any Church being remodeled or having pews they wish to dispose of, please advise D. D. Nash, acting pastor Hopewell Christian Church, Hopewell, Va.

Rev. D. D. Nash, acting pastor, visited THE SUN office and reported that the baby Church at Hopewell is about half completed and that the building would be finished in thirty days, and all who can help in this great work to please do so, as they need the help of our brethren.

Rev. H. Russell Clem, Fall River, Mass., recently invited Rev. George H. Reed, of the Congregational Church, to preach in his pulpit. Bro. Clem thinks that the local congregations of the Christian Church should be given opportunity to vote on the matter of union with the Congregationalists.

Rev. R. F. Brown, who is now a member of the Presbyterian Church and pastor in Richmond, Va., is a member of the graduating class of the Union Theological Seminary of that city. We congratulate Bro. Brown upon his attainments. He is a graduate of Elon College and also of the University of North Carolina.

Bro. C. J. Strickland, of Charlotte, N. C., to whom we have made reference in these columns from time to time, in a recent issue of the Charlotte Observer, is announced as shortly to enter the evangelistic field. The Observer speaks of Bro. Strickland in highest terms. His photograph is carried with the announcement.

Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, who was to have given the Convention sermon, was prevented from attendance by the serious illness of Mrs. Harrell. She is now improved and expected to recover fully. Dr. C. H. Rowland gave the sermon in Bro. Harrell's place. He proved himself to be a real "pinch hitter," with a real message.

There will be two services at Union Christian Church on the second Sunday in May, at 11 A. M. and 2 P. M. At the morning hour Rev. J. W. Patton, of Elon College, will preach, and Rev. Thos. F. Opie, D. D., rector of the Episcopal Church, Burlington, will preach at the afternoon hour. Dinner will be served on the grounds.

Rev. Ferry Lee Gibbs, A. B. & M. A. graduate of Elon College, is this week being graduated from the Westminster Theological Seminary, Westminster, Md. Bro. Gibbs is a minister of the Methodist Protestant Church. The subject of his thesis for graduation at the seminary is "An Integrated Program on Religious Education."

The Southern Christian Convention took decided action in a program to enlist "The Men of the Church" in all the enterprises of the Church. The committee in charge of this new work in our brotherhood consists of Rev. John G. Truitt (chairman), J. M. Darden, Dr. Waldo H. Boone, J. F. West, Jr., and W. A. Harper. This committee is charged with a great responsibility.

All the officers of the Southern Christian Convention were unanimously re-elected. They are as follows: President, Dr. L. E. Smith; Vice-President, Dr. N. G. Newman; Secretary, Dr. I. W. Johnson; Assistant Secretary, Mrs. Mary Andrews Rollings; Treasurer, Dr. W. C. Wicker. With these standard-bearers, we may hopefully look forward to two years of continued success in our general work.

The Convention voted unanimously for the affiliation of the Atlanta Theological Seminary of Atlanta, Ga., and Elon College, and gave its approval to co-operation in principle between Bethlehem College and Piedmont College, the details in both instances to be worked out by the board of trustees of Elon and Bethlehem Colleges, with the approval of the Southern Christian Convention's Executive Committee.

Aside from the great messages of our own people, the Southern Christian Convention was honored with addresses by Dr. Jason Noble Pierce, of Washington, D. C.; Dr. Lewis H. Keller, Atlanta, Ga.; Dr. Frank E. Jenkins, Demorest, Ga.; Rev. F. P. Enslinger, Demorest, Ga., and Dr. Robert L. Kelley, of New York City. The reports and addresses by our own people were of high order and set a new standard for the Southern Christian Convention.

The twenty-eighth regular session of the Southern Christian Convention is now history. The First Christian Church of Richmond, Va., Dr. C. C. Ryan, pastor, and his entire membership entertained the Convention royally. It was the unanimous opinion of those who were able to attend the Convention that it was the finest Convention ever held in our Southern Church. The spirit of Christ pervaded every question that was discussed and controlled every decision that was arrived at.

The Hanks Chapel Christian Church, as we have already announced in THE CHRISTIAN SUN columns, deserves every consideration. This is one of the faithful and deserving Churches of the Christian denomination in the South. It has furnished great leaders for our pulpits and pews. With great sacrifice they have recently improved their building, and they need help. Any remittance sent to Bro. H. C. Farrell, chairman of the finance committee, at Pittsboro, N. C., will be gratefully received.

Rev. J. E. Franks was unable to be present at the Convention because he had begun an important evangelistic campaign in Greensboro, N. C., assisting Rev. M. T. Sorrell, and did not feel that he could close the meeting. Bro. Franks is especially successful as an evangelist-pastor. Bro. Franks expected to visit Elon College on last Tuesday, and there was disappointment that he did not come. It is always a pleasure for the college to welcome ministers to the chapel services, and they are heard with great appreciation.

The Congregational and Disciple Churches are to have a joint meeting in Syracuse, N. Y., May 15th to 17th. They will discuss the whole question of Christian union at this meeting. Veritably, the demand for Christian union is all but unanimous in America at this time. The day will come when all Christians will answer the prayer of their Lord and all Churches will be united.

Rev. F. D. Ballard, one of our young ministers studying in Vanderbilt, writes interestingly in this issue of the rural Church school of religion just recently concluded at the university. He was glad that several ministers of the Christian Church were there and that there was such a fine spirit of co-operation between the Congregationalists and Christians.

The Southern Christian Convention heard reports from its various boards during the Convention and made ample provision for all its enterprises in its decisions. The minutes of the Convention will be printed in pamphlet form at once, so that the Church may be informed as to these decisions. Later they will be included in "The Christian Annual" for the next year. From time to time, THE CHRISTIAN SUN will make comment on the decisions that were arrived at in the Convention.

The Southern Christian Convention was honored to have in attendance on its sessions and as participants in its program the following general officers of our denomination: Judge O. W. Whitelock, managing editor, of the Christian Publishing Association; Dr. W. P. Minton, Foreign Mission Secretary; Mrs. Athella Howsaree, president of the Woman's Missionary Board; Miss Lucy M. Eldredge, Secretary of Christian Education, Young People's Department; Dr. Warren H. Denison, General Secretary of the General Convention.

It is a beautiful thing for the Southern Christian Convention to send telegrams of greeting to Dr. J. O. Atkinson and Rev. H. W. Elder, absent because of illness, and to Bro. P. J. Carlton, absent in Europe on business. Bro. Carlton has been most liberal in his support of the enterprises of the Christian Church and in his support, likewise, of the Richmond congregation since its organization. It was a real sorrow not to have had these three brethren present during the Convention.

The story of the Convention, as printed in this issue, written by Bro. C. M. Cannon, is heartily appreciated. Few people understand what is required of a newspaper correspondent who undertakes to "cover" such a Convention as the one that was held in Richmond the past week. The Convention stood as a body to express its appreciation to its faithful reporter, and we express our grateful thanks at this time for the privilege we have of printing his story of the Convention in this week's issue. It is hoped that every SUN reader will give it careful attention.

Rev. R. F. Brown, who has just completed his seminary work at Union Theological Seminary, is open for evangelistic work in North Carolina and Virginia this spring and summer. Mr. Brown's ability as a preacher and evangelist is well known to the Churches throughout the entire Church, and any Church or pastor desiring his service should communicate with him at 1008 Porter Street, Richmond, Va. Mr. Brown has been supplying a Presbyterian pulpit in Richmond during his seminary course in that city, but he is now ready to devote his time to evangelistic work, in which field he has enjoyed a large success.

RESOURCES FOR HOME MISSIONS.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, Preacher.

"Lift up your eyes and look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest."—John 4:35.

Missions, both home and foreign, are so essentially one it seems interesting to turn to a portion of what may be called the foreign missionary activity of Jesus to find a home missionary text. Jesus had been witnessing concerning the worship of the Father as He sought water at a well-curb, and He found right at Him a thirsty city awaiting the water of life. When it had been supplied He took occasion to remind His followers that right about them were ripe fields ready for the hand of the harvester, and He added the assurance that "he that reapeth receiveth wages and gathereth fruit unto eternal life."

In the enterprise of home missions we stand today in the midst of ripe fields. In the Southern Christian Convention we have 236 stations of home mission activity, for each of our 236 Churches must be nothing less than so many supply bases of activity and work of harvesting. Edmund Burke, that great Englishman with an understanding soul, once said, "He trespasses against his duty who sleeps on his watch, as well as he that goes over to the enemy." Our 133 ministers, our 1,000 deacons, and our 2,000 teachers of the gospel message, to say nothing of the more than 30,000 followers of the lowly Nazarene, must rally ourselves to the realization that we are "day hands" for lifetime service in the harvest fields about us, and that if we sleep at our posts of duty we lend power to the hand of our Lord's enemy.

Into what section or city of the seven great States represented in this Convention can we look and say the work of winning valuable territory for Christ and the Christian Church is finished? As long as we know that more than half of the people in these seven States make no pretense of giving allegiance to our Lord we should hear His voice coming to us with all of its passion and power, and program: "I say unto you, Lift up your eyes and look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest." As long as we have printed a few months ago in our "Christian Annual" figures which show that our more than 30,000 followers of Christ, led by nearly 150 ministers, and five times as many deacons, and ten times as many teachers have won only 674 additions to our 236 Churches, we should hear the words of Burke: "He trespasses against his duty who sleeps on his watch, as well as he that goes over to the enemy." It took nearly $3,000,000 of equipment and maintained at an annual expenditure of more than $419,000 to win 674 new members to our Church, according to our printed records. But some of that money went to missions; yes, to both home and foreign missions went the paltry sum of $15,521.41, while the remaining $404,000 went to make our own sleep sweeter and more profound.

But the field is not fully measured by the fact that millions and millions of men, women, and children in these seven States make no pretense of following or knowing as a Saviour Jesus Christ, for there are great areas of territory within the bounds of Church membership in these States which have not at all yielded obedience to our Lord. A survey of Norfolk in 1926 revealed the fact that in that city more than 60,000 people were not members of any Church within the city; but that does not measure the Norfolk field for sin, misery, suffering, and want run rampant in many areas among the 30,000 who are members of Churches within the city. Areas of love, mercy, industry, commerce and commercial advertising, professions, leisure, and amusements. In each of these areas, and still others, the fields are already white unto harvest.

But there is another fact that should whiten our fields. Have we a faith in our Church which amounts to a genuine conviction that we have a real mission in the world? Do we love our Church and desire greatly—so greatly that it is a consuming passion—that it should be known, loved, and respected as a conquering army for Christ Jesus? What scars of battle can we show for years of warfare for Christ? What are the signs of real cross-like sacrifice can this generation of ministers, deacons, teachers, and members show for their faith? Or have we been away seeking material blessings for ourselves while our Christ has ministered living water to thirsting millions in our own country through other communions? It is true we have done some fine pieces of work in several cities recently, but are we conscious of the great leakages in Washington, Winston-Salem, Atlanta, Charleston, Birmingham, and dozens of lesser places? Is our home missionary activity a true picture-book of our belief in our mission among men? The taste of triumph in the places where we have placed some funds should give us greater determination to enter into whitening fields, knowing that "he that reapeth receiveth wages and gathereth fruit unto eternal life."

Not only are the fields ripe, but also the folks are ready. We have reviewed very hastily the need, now we are to turn our attention to the meeting of the need. You are assembled here this week the standard-bearers of more than 30,000 followers of Christ. Sometime ago I heard the remark that we are tired of so much talk about leadership; what we want is followship—what we need is not more leaders, but more followers. I am not so sure about that. I think we are all followers, and we are all leaders; and that this is as it should be. But the crux of the matter is: What are we following, and who; and what are we leading, and where? Are our leaders leading? Are we following the Great Leader, Jesus Christ? And are we making a program for our people, workable in its local application and challenging in its objectives? For instance, a few leaders among the women of Eastern Virginia have placed a program in the hands of their people which demonstrates the fact that the folks are ready, even as the fields are white. Nearly 500 of the women of Eastern Virginia assembled last fall in their annual woman's conference, in spite of the fact that it was a rainy morning. Permit me to quote from their president's report of that conference: "Every department of our work was splendidly presented. Never before have our young people shown such interest. Twenty-eight Churches were represented at our annual Conference. We have on roll 969 women, 288 young people, 252 Willing Workers, 252 cradle roll members, making a total of 1,509. During the past year, in all departments, we gained about 400 new members. We have twenty-seven women's societies, 22 young people's societies, 16 Willing Workers' societies, and 17 cradle roll societies. The amount raised during the year was $6,739." Because their leaders were leading, and because they offered the folks a program at once workable in the local Church and challenging in its objectives, they won two-thirds as many members to themselves in Eastern Virginia as the whole Southern Christian Convention won to the Church; and raised from their women and children and babies one-half as much money for missions as did the whole Southern Christian Convention. The women of the six other Conferences are rallying their forces after somewhat the same faithful fashion.

Oftentimes a criticism of the "Men and Millions Movement" comes to the fore, but let it be remembered that it was our greatest period of growth and expansion, and that the secret of it was its program. It might not have been the very best program, but it was a program. It may not have worked everywhere perfectly, but it did work everywhere some. It perhaps did not appeal to every member of our Church, but it had very member in its conception and scope. It was a comprehensive program, and it did great things. Our folks are as ready for a real program today as they were then, and more so. If we fail to offer our folks a stable, comprehensive program both workable in the local Church and challenging in its objectives, we shall continue to lose ground and lose members, and eventually lose faith. "He trespasses against his duty, who sleeps on his watch, as well as he that goes over to the enemy."

Permit me to insert this work: Not only are our own folks ready for and needful of such a program, but the whole of Protestant Christendom is ready for and anxious to have the Christian idealism of our Church. Witness the Federal Council of Churches in America, the Lausanne conference, and the movements for union growing in so many quarters. And witness the changing emphasis ecclesiastically in all foreign mission fields. Christian faith is gathering about the platform fashioned under God by our forefathers nearly a century and a half ago. "Lift up your eyes and look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest."

Our resources for home missions have not been tapped. The ripening fields in themselves are resources; the ready folks are resources; and the revenue accruing out of a program commensurate with our needs are our resources. I do not believe this Convention should launch any program of expenditures beyond its program and resources. I do not believe we have any right to spend what we do not have the ability and wisdom as well as the plan to get. We wish to put our feet solidly on the ground, carefully plan our work so that we shall not come up to any more Conventions with the greater burden of our thought centered about the machinery of our Church. We wish to follow the lead of the women of our Church as the disciples followed the loving care of those who were first to find the empty tomb and the risen Lord, and I am not unmindful of the wisdom and loyalty of the men who helped them launch their program, and the wisdom and loyalty of the men who are helping them carry it through. We wish to organize the men, women, young people, and children of every local Church co-operatively with those same groups in every other Church, so that we may all together "undertake great things for God, and expect great things of God."

There was genuine sorrow and disappointment that Dr. Atkinson could not be present during the Convention, but at the same time there was real satisfaction in the thought that his absence would mean in all likelihood that the physical gain he has registered during the past four months will become permanent. It was feared that the exacting strain of attendance on the Convention might prove too much for his nervous system. There is great satisfaction on the part of the Church in the thought that Dr. Atkinson is soon to return to his responsibilities in the Church restored in body.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

FLORIDA—WITH OBSERVATIONS.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

A friend "back home" who has honored me by reading these "Florida Observations" writes to know if I am about to turn Seventh Day Adventist. My reply was, "Not yet. I am not good enough." My correspondent may have thought me rudely, if not to say brutally, frank. But I mean it. I am not good enough, and honestly fear I never will be. I was talking to a guest here from New York, one who comes periodically to Florida and to this sanitarium, and his comment was, "I believe these Adventists are the only people I have ever met who really live up to the religion they profess." No, I haven't exactly joined them yet, but I have attended some of their services in these last weeks that I have been strong enough to be out, and have learned a few things about them, corporately and individually, and believe me, I have no word of criticism for them. They are certainly showing the rest of the Christian world a few things worth learning.

First, they know how to sacrifice in giving. They begin by strictly paying the tithe—all of them. If you are not a tither and will not tithe strictly, you cannot be an Adventist. They say the Bible enjoins tithing, and if you can't obey the Bible, then there is no place for you in the Church. Then, after they have paid their tithe—this is a debt they owe to God—they begin to give. Why Adventists give over and above the tithe more than other Christians give, tithe and all. Why, in comparison with Adventists, we of the Christian Church have not even learned the first lesson in giving; know nothing whatever about real self-denial in giving. The average rural Sunday School in North Carolina or Virginia has as much wealth in it and as many members as this chapel here on the outskirts of Orlando, and if our average school gets $5 to $10 in the class offerings Sunday A. M. we are satisfied. This Adventist Sunday School, in just the ordinary Sabbath offering, gives $45 to $55. And, mind you, this has nothing to do with the tithe—it is an offering outside of and apart from the tithe. Or take the congregation of that chapel—just an ordinary wooden, frame building, with one room only, a partition now put in for a children's room—that congregation, a few over 100 hard-working people, contributed last year $14,500, of which amount $4,500 was for foreign missions. No other Protestant communion comes within ten miles of giving as Adventists do. For this, I take off my hat to them.

Second. They know how to observe and keep sacred one day in seven. God forbid that I shall offer one word of censure or criticism of them for keeping the seventh, while the rest of us pretend only to keep the first day of the week. I will not be fit and worthy to criticise them, even if I had a desire to do so, for observing the day of their choice and conviction until I learn to observe more reverently and sacredly the day of my choice and conviction. Keeping the fourth commandment is as much a matter of conviction with Adventists as keeping the sixth or seventh or ninth or tenth is with the rest of the Christian world. They are doing, actually and practically, that which many of us preachers have been exhorting our congregations to do in these latter days, namely: "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy."

Third. They are the only people I know who are taking seriously the supreme command of our Lord, "Go ye into all the world and make disciples of all the nations." That which the rest of us preach to our folks should be done, Seventh day Adventists are doing. There is no Protestant or Catholic denomination that can approach them, or hold them a light even, when it comes to carrying and sending the gospel of the Son of God to all the nations. Think of a denomination of 120,000 members only, sending out more missionaries a year than any other denomination, even with their millions! Why, the Adventists keep a foreign mission reserve fund of a million dollars to be used if need be in emergency or slump, or unforeseen depression or upheaval at home or abroad. These Adventists give more for foreign missions per week—every week of the fifty-two in the year—than most other denominations give in a year. I take of my hat to a people who so much appreciate what God, through Christ Jesus, has done for them that they really sacrifice to tell the other nations about Him. Adventists don't have any foreign mission debts and deficits. They give millions each year to send out and support their missionaries, and instead of going in debt and borrowing they keep a fat balance of at least a million. They take missions seriously and really work at the job.

Fourth. They have a respect and a reverence for the house of God, the Book of God, and the worship of God that one would wish the whole Christian world had. It is marvelous.

Fifth. And they actually believe that this body of ours is what the Bible teaches us it is, namely: the temple of the living God—which temple is holy. Therefore, they refuse to defile it, or to fellowship in their Church those who do defile it by eating flesh—hog flesh in particular, the most filthy and unclean of all flesh—by using tobacco or strong drink. What preachers in other communions often hold up as an ideal for their people, Adventists, as I have learned them, are already doing. Till I learn differently, I shall at any rate refrain from criticizing, and give them my profoundest respect and esteem for the contribution they are making to this world's betterment. They believe with all their heart that the second coming of our Lord draweth nigh, and they are striving to be found ready, watching and faithful when He does come.

No, I am not a Seventh Day Adventist and have no reason to believe I ever shall be—for one thing, I will never be good enough. But it has been a joy to learn them and to fellowship with them; and the rest of the Christian world may learn, to good purpose, much that they have to teach and are teaching.

Florida is still beautiful, and the rest, balmy sunshine, and fresh air I am getting here are making life sweet and bringing back a strength of body, mind and soul I so earnestly want.

THE PASTOR'S GREATEST DIFFICULTY.

Preaching, which is usually considered a preacher's greatest task, is really the easiest thing he has to do. It is true, it comes often, taxes his mind and heart to their limit, makes demand upon his heart for prayer and his mind for decision, yet it opens up a field of interest and self-development that is most satisfying. His faith is taxed in four directions—in God, the Bible, self, and others. If the preacher had nothing harder than preparing and delivering sermons, his life would be easy all the way. This does not mean that it is easy to prepare and deliver sermons; it is easy only by comparing that with the responsibility of his position as pastor, and the many things more difficult to do.

To name a few obligations that rest upon the preacher: To get to the people the actions of the Convention and the Conference; the calls for money to carry on the work of missions, education, Orphanage, publications, and other benevolences; he feels the responsibility of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. If all the families of the Church would subscribe and pay for THE CHRISTIAN SUN ($2.00 per year), that would solve the financial problem of the Church paper. To accomplish that task, through the help of members, is a responsibility that weighs heavily upon a true pastor's very life. It is the things pastors can't do that weigh most heavily upon them. Anything we can really do is easy compared with the thing we cannot do. In Convention or Conference, where interested preachers and laymen discuss the financial needs of THE SUN and the good THE SUN does where it is read, the spirit of loyalty rises high; but back at home in the Church on Sunday, and the non-subscribers absent, the enthusiasm and the willingness to subscribe are not felt and the preacher is burdened. The truth is that every family in the Church ought to take THE SUN, and if any family is not able to pay $2.00 a year for the paper, some member ought to pay for it, and that would be easy. If any family would say, "We want THE SUN but we are not able to pay for it," some good person would pay for it gladly. THE SUN needs 1,500 new subscribers to keep it out of debt. The solution of this question would solve almost all other questions of support for missions, education, Orphanage, current expenses, care for the poor, and put the Church in a position to increase its work without strain.

The sick, the poor, the indifferent members, the absentees from Sunday School, prayer-meeting, and Church services are all burdens on the preacher's soul. If these were lifted, sermons would be richer, worship more spiritual, and pastoral visiting a joy to preacher and people.

The solution of these problems is the pastor's greatest difficulty. Perhaps indifference on the part of members is the pastor's greatest difficulty. He can sympathize with the sick, the poor, the aged, the overworked, and sympathy is a relief to both parties; but what is there to relieve the pastor of anxiety for the indifferent? Indifference is a menace to progress, an incurable anxiety to the pastor, a painless death to Christian experience, a burden that outweighs the average pastor's strength, and leaves him helpless. The only remedy for all these Church ills is a revival of Christian activity in all the members to help the pastor in his arduous labors.

UNANIMOUS FOR UNION.

It was a dramatic moment and one never to be forgotten when on Thursday, May 3rd, at 12:45 P. M., the Southern Christian Convention voted unanimously by a rising vote to approve the organic union of the Christian and Congregational Churches as set forth in the recommendations as touching this matter recently submitted by the joint commissions of the two denominations. These recommendations, together with the report of our special committee embodying them, for the recent session of the Southern Christian Convention, are printed elsewhere in full in this issue.

The Christian Church has advocated Christian union for 134 years. Some of our people had become impatient with our long advocacy with seeming fruitlessness. The unanimous action of the Southern Christian Convention approving the union of our Church with the Congregationalists compensates for these long and tedious years of preparation for this auspicious event. Our people have hoped and prayed and worked for Christian union, but it was hardly to be hoped that our accredited representatives would vote unanimously on the first proposition of this character ever submitted to them embodying a definite and clean-cut proposal for union. It shows that undoubtedly the Christian Church is willing to practice the purpose it has expressed for these long, anxious years, to consummate the union of all Christ followers. It is the first real opportunity that the denomination has enjoyed to express itself positively, and it has done so in the spirit that deserves praise and which will no doubt receive it.

Of course, the action of the Southern Christian Convention, while it expressed the conviction of our people in the South, was properly phrased in such a way as to express our desire in the form of a memorial to the General Board and the Executive Board of the General Convention. The Southern Church does not wish to split the Christian denomination over this matter of union. Dr. Staley gave it as his opinion that it is easier now to unite the Christians and the Congregationalists than it was following the Civil War to unite the Northern and Southern Christians. He served on the joint commission that brought the two sections of our Church together and is urgent in his advocacy of the union of the Christians and the Congregationalists at this time.

The Southern Christian Convention, by unanimous vote, therefore, memorializes the Christian Church at large in America with reference to its desire that immediate steps be taken to unite the Christian and Congregational Churches organically. This decision does honor to the prophetic insight and zeal of James O'Kelly and those good men associated with him, who in 1794, at the very beginning of our movement, announced as their ultimate purpose to effect the union of all Christ's followers.

Let us give thanks to God that after more than a century of teaching and preaching and working, the Christian Church in the South is able to give a unanimous affirmative vote in favor of Christian union with the Congregationalists.

ments of our Church? Or does any one fancy that the other departments can go while a single department fails?

Now, let's liken our Convention to a gospel wagon. The twentieth century limited, carrying the good news of the gospel throughout this and other lands. This wagon has four wheels—the Orphanage, education, missions and publication. All right, we will take off all the wheels but the Orphanage step on the gas—she won't move. Well, then, we put on the wheels of education and missions. Now try—she won't move. All right, we will put on all four wheels and step on the gas. She goes, but she goes wild—what's the trouble? something is wrong; take your foot off the gas, if you don't you'll wreck her! Oh, yes, I see you it won't help him much in a great budget like he has at Elon and at Bethlehem. But suppose 30,000 others join with me in sending $2.00! See what would happen? Or suppose I am interested in Missions—and I am. And I sit down and send Dr. Atkinson $3.00 for missions. He will be glad for it, but it won't help very much; but suppose that 30,000 others join with me in the offering. But some one says that sounds all right, but you are working on an impossibility. You can't get everybody to co-operate in giving like that; that if our institutions are financed as they must be, a few big-hearted and generous souls will have to do it—and we haven't got these generous souls who are able; we can't do it; we can't see it. All right, let's see. A man who owns an automobile ought to be able to support the enterprises of his Church.

FIRST CHRISTIAN CHURCH, RICHMOND—CONVENTION CHURCH.

need a steering wheel, and superannuation is the steering wheel. You can't get anywhere without your ministry. And it's to our eternal shame as a Church that we make no provision for the care and comfort of our ministry when no longer they are able to sound the gospel call to a sinful world. Now, step on the gas and watch her go. But can we co-operate? Of course, we can. We co-operate in everything else—in home life, in city life, in State life, and in national life. And why not in religious life? And next we saw as our needs—

(3) Material power—money for the affairs of the Church. They tell us that those who have had charge of the various departments of the Church have been visionary and extravagant. They have planned in accordance with their desires but without due appreciation of the financial ability of the Church or the material resources of our Convention. They say that it is impossible for us to meet the high standards that have been held up before us. That is out of the question for us to raise this much for Orphanage, for missions, for education, etc. They see our needs all right, but they never have had a glimpse of our resources. They have eyes, but they see not.

Now let's see: Suppose that I have an interest in the Orphanage—and I do. And I sit down and send Bro. Johnston $1.00. He will be glad for it, but it won't help much; but suppose 30,000 others join with me in sending a dollar! Or suppose I am interested in our colleges—and I am. And I sit down and send Dr. Harper or the Board of Education $2.00. He will be glad for it, but

Now, on a fair estimate, there are seven thousand automobiles in the Southern Convention. Now, let's see: suppose that all these automobiles' tanks are empty—and they will be, never mind. Now, to fill these tanks, it will cost an average of one dollar and a half—a total of $10,500; and if you fill them only once a month, that's $120,000 for gas alone. Then suppose that one tire goes bad on every car during the year—and it will go bad, don't worry! Now, to retire that one wheel on each car would cost an average of $15.00, or a total of $105,000, and we will pay it—pay it without a murmur. Or suppose that you have to have an automobile license—and you do before you can run—on an average cost of these license will be $20.00 per car, totaling $140,000, making a total of what we pay to operate our cars, including only gas, one tire each, and the license, of $365,000, to say nothing of the oil, repairs, upkeep, etc., and most of this is for pleasure. It isn't a question of willingness; it isn't a question of being able—it is a question of interest and of desire. It isn't a question of resources—it is a question of religion, of real religion. If we could only see our resources and see what it means to withhold them from God, from His Church and what it means to us and the Church. I get tired of you who could give your thousands only giving your hundreds. Some of you give a thousand, five thousand and feel that is your share. And at the same time you can continue to pay two, three, four, five or seven thousand dollars for automobiles. Squander your money here and

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Southern Christian Convention, in session this week (May 1-4, 1928) in the First Christian Church, Richmond, Va., Rev. Dr. C. C. Ryan, pastor, has been a very busy meeting. The seven Conferences composing the Convention include four States, 232 Churches, and more than a hundred ministers. The attendance has been good on the part of preachers and a fair representation of lay-delegates. The Woman's Missionary meeting, on the first day, was well attended, and their reports showed fine work and much progress. It is generally conceded that if the men took a like interest in missions, it would add materially and spiritually to the cause of missions in the Christian Church. If the entire membership of the Churches had missions at heart as the women who are organized, it would produce such interest and such liberality that all the departments would flourish and the financial support would be equal to their needs. The absence of such a spirit is the cause for the perplexing problems which burden the Convention and tax the business wisdom for their solution. The Convention is striving to solve the financial questions, to increase the spirituality of the leaders, the loyalty and liberality of the constituency, and the consecration of the people and their possessions to the support of the cause of Christianity as represented by the Convention. There seems to be a growing desire to be better, to do more, and to co-operate more devotedly in the cause of missions, education, publications, the Orphanage and all the benevolences that appeal for help.

The entertainment has been splendid. Meals were all served in a hall in the Church that will seat some two hundred—breakfast free; dinner and supper, 40 cents each. This is in charge of a caterer, and the good housewives simply entertain the delegates as sleeping guests. This is an ideal way of entertaining a meeting of this kind and leaves the women free to attend Church. The entertainment was cordial, liberal, and the dining-hall was enriched by the fine orchestra of the Church. The splendid choir added inspiring music to the sessions in the Church, and Pastor Ryan knows how to make guests feel at home.

Among the many interesting things that stirred the Convention was the subject of unity that looks toward union with the Congregational Church. The principle of union was endorsed and the matter was passed on to the General Convention of the Christian Church. It looks now as if the Christians and the Congregationalists would be united at no distant day. That denomination was represented in this Convention by Rev. Dr. Jason Noble Pierce, pastor of the First Congregational Church, Washington, D. C.; Rev. Lewis H. Keller, D. D., president of Atlanta Seminary, Atlanta, Ga.; Rev. Robert L. Kelley, D. D., executive secretary of the Council of the Church Board of Education, New York City; and Rev. Dr. Kirby, pastor of the United Church, Raleigh, N. C.; F. E. Jenkins, president Piedmont College, Ga.; Dr. F. P. Ensminger, secretary of missions for the Congregational Church. These six Congregational ministers were so brotherly and gracious in their addresses that we all felt that we were one in Christ.

The Convention has not come to the end of this epoch-making session, but it has been a session sweet in spirit, earnest in work, hopeful for the future, determined in purpose, and loyal to convictions. No previous session has been more spiritual in message and faith.

THE CONVENTION STORY.

By C. M. CANNON.

FIRST DAY.

"Spiritual power," declared President L. E. Smith in the keynote address before the Southern Christian Convention, assembled in four-day session in Richmond, Va., May 1st to 4th, inclusive, "is the crux of the whole situation in regard to the progress of the Church and the Convention. We may need organization, co-operation and material wealth, but these will all avail but naught unless we have the spiritual power to see our needs in their true sense and our resources in their relation to the kingdom of God."

The Convention opened its twenty-eighth biennial session this afternoon with the enrolling of delegates, the appointing of committees, and routine matters. Dr. C. C. Ryan, pastor of the First Christian Church, Richmond, Va., in which the Convention is holding its sessions, opened the services with worship and spoke a message of greeting to the members of the Convention on behalf of the Church and the people of Richmond.

Dr. L. E. Smith, who is pastor of the Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., and presiding officer of the Convention, chose as his subject for his Convention address, "When Blinded Eyes are Opened." He spoke of the need of organization, the need of co-operation, the need of material power, and the need of spiritual power. "It is said the one great trouble with Church Conferences and Conventions," quoted Dr. Smith, "is that they have degenerated into mere human organizations for the purpose of promulgating financial schemes by which money may be filched from the pockets of the constituency for the realization of the aims of certain individuals and not for the glory of God and the coming of His kingdom, and that so long as these conditions prevail, our treasuries will be empty and our Church impotent in the presence of her great task. The one great and supreme need is spiritual power—the power of God with us and in us."

"We have seen our needs in the way of organization and co-operation," Dr. Smith continued; "but not once have we turned to consider our resources in the light we should. When it comes to considering our resources, our vision seems to be blurred. We have eyes but we see not."

"Tarry ye, tarry ye at Richmond until ye are endued with power from on high," concluded Dr. Smith; "and when He, the Spirit of truth, is come, and of power, when He is come upon us, He will go with us into all truth, He will enlighten us, our blinded eyes will be opened and we shall see our resources, and we will bring our tithes and our offerings into the storehouse of the Lord and God will pour us out a blessing such as our hearts shall not be able to contain."

The Woman's Missionary Convention, meeting in connection with and as an auxiliary body of the Southern Christian Convention, held a one-day session today, opening their meeting in the morning with the address of Mrs. J. A. Williams, president of the Woman's Board. Mrs. Williams stressed the need of missionary work, both on the home and foreign fields, and entered a plea before the Convention for additional missionaries to be sent to the field and for funds with which to support those already in foreign countries. Dr. W. P. Minton, Secretary of Foreign Missions for the Christian Church, spoke on "Adventuring With Christ," speaking of missions in the phases of a physical adventure for the missionary in going to a foreign land as a stranger, as an adventure in leadership training, and adventure in Christian literature, in translating our Christian literature into the Spanish, Japanese, and Chinese languages, and as an adventure in world friendship.

Reports were heard from all the committees, and then Mrs. McD. Howsare spoke on "Practical Points for the Promotion of Missionary Interest." Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Mission Secretary for the Southern Convention, who was prevented from attending the Convention in person because of illness, sent his message to the members and had it read. He took as his subject "Experimenting With Missions," and stated "The Lord made missions the chief business and of foremost importance in the work of His earthly kingdom." He spoke of the work being accomplished for missions and listed the immediate needs, ending with the plea, "Has the time not come when we can take the biggest business God ever gave man out of the experimental stage and make it our big business also?"

It was voted to send the president of the Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference and the president of the North Carolina Conference for an extended visit to Porto Rico in the interest of the missionary work there. This action was taken at the request of Mrs. D. P. Barrett, Christian missionary in Porto Rico, who is now in this country on furlough. The Convention raised its goal from $20,000 to $25,000 for missions for this Convention.

Mrs. J. A. Williams, Franklin, Va., was re-elected to serve as president of the Convention for the next two years, and the other officers to support her were elected as follows: vice-president, Mrs. C. H. Rowland, Greensboro, N. C.; secretary, Miss Margaret Alston, Henderson, N. C.; treasurer, Mrs. H. S. Hardcastle, Suffolk, Va.; corresponding secretary, Mrs. E. L. Beale, Franklin, Va.; superintendent of spiritual work, Mrs. W. H. Carroll, Burlington, N. C.; superintendent of young people's work, Mrs. R. T. Bradford, Suffolk, Va.; superintendent of cradle roll, Mrs. I. W. Johnson, Suffolk, Va.; superintendent of literature, Mrs. H. C. Caviness, Portsmouth, Va.; Convention editor, Mrs. W. M. Jay, Elon College, N. C.

SECOND DAY.

Missions was the theme of both the afternoon and night sessions of the Southern Christian Convention today, with Drs. G. O. Lankford, Burlington, N. C.; Dr. W. H. Denison, Dayton, Ohio, Superintendent of Stewardship, and Mrs. McD. Howsare, bringing missionary messages to the Convention in connection with a formal report of Mrs. J. A. Williams, president, for the Woman's Missionary work of the Convention.

Dr. Lankford used as his subject, "The Place of Prayer in Christian Missions," and urged the congregation to remember "that the Christian's God is not local or provincial in His interest in men and His outlook upon the world, but that His Fatherly care and loving concern reach out and on to the uttermost parts of the earth."

Dr. Denison, in his message, declared that the stewardship message is a necessity for one's own spiritual life and that it is just as necessary for the spiritual life and development of the Churches as are gas and oil for our industrial era. Records show that the spiritual life of the Church declines in time of great prosperity, and as this nation is now the richest of any nation in the world's history, there is special need of this message. Last year shows more Churches than ever receiving no members on confession of faith.

While stewardship covers the whole realm of life and possession, the latter needs greater emphasis since the claims of God upon one's affection and life are measured by the consecration of his material accumulations. No one Church in fifty is ever asked for as much money as it could or should give for its own good. If one-fourth of the membership would take a real step into stewardship, the scale and power in every respect would be revolutionized, declared Dr. Denison.

For the afternoon session, Lieutenant Governor J. E. West, of Virginia, presented the report of the Mission Board of the Southern Convention. Earlier in the day, J. M. Darden, Suffolk, Va., acting Secretary of the Mission Board in the absence of Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Mission Secretary, spoke to the Convention regarding the work of the Mission Board and brought before the members a plea not to let the work drag during Dr. Atkinson's enforced retirement for a period because of ill health. Mr. Darden's address was brief but was to the point and carried with it a real conviction and interest in the work. Lieutenant Governor West later characterized Mr. Darden as one of the trail-blazers for missions in the Christian Church.

Dr. C. H. Rowland, pastor of the First Christian Church of Greensboro, N. C., preached the Convention sermon in the morning at 11:30, which was followed by a Communion service by Dr. N. G. Newman, Holland, Va., assisted by Dr. W. W. Staley, Suffolk, and Rev. P. T. Klapp, Elon College, N. C., and others.

Following the opening service of the morning session, led by Rev. J. F. Morgan and Rev. O. D. Poythress, Dr. W. C. Wicker made the Treasurer's report of the biennium, and Dr. I. W. Johnson read the report of the Committee on Finance and their recommendations. The report of the Board of Superannuation was heard, which asked for an increase in the allotment for the aged ministers and reported the death of several beneficiaries under this fund during the past year.

An item of interest was an address by the Convention Historian, W. E. MacClenny, of Suffolk, Va., in which he described a recent memorial Congregationalists submitted a report on Christian union to the Convention this morning, embodying the initial steps necessary to perfect a permanent organic union between these two bodies, which passed by a unanimous vote. A rising vote of the official delegates was first taken without a dissenting vote being recorded, and then a similar vote was taken including all persons present. Again the report was carried unanimously.

The gist of this action is that immediate steps be taken to bring about a merger in an organic way, to ask the General Board of the General Convention of the Christian Church to proceed with the details of the union, and as soon as the matter can be taken up by the general bodies of both Churches to have a committee of equal number from each communion appointed, representing the major interests of each denomination, to study the whole matter carefully and propose a plan for the complete unification. As soon as this committee is ready to propose a plan that a general convention, including the two bodies, shall be

Rev. J. G. Truitt, Norfolk, Va., followed with an address on the "Resources for Home Missions." He used the thought in John 4:35, "Lift up your eyes and look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest," for his message, stating that he did not believe the resources for home missions had even begun to be tapped to any great extent. He compared the showing made as to money raised for home missions and new members for the Churches of the Convention, and rated it very small compared with the total resources, and asked, "Have we a faith in our Church which amounts to a genuine conviction that we have a real mission in the world?"

In addition to the missionary features of the day's program, evangelism and the Christian Orphanage had an important place. Rev. H. C. Caviness, Portsmouth, Va., chairman of the committee on evangelism, gave the report for that committee, and W. K. Holt, Burlington, N. C., chairman of the trustees of the Christian Orphanage, at Elon College, N. C., made the report for the Orphanage. This showed the Orphanage in good shape financially and made formal announcement of the recent completion of a large new brick building for the Orphanage, which was greatly needed in order to accommodate the children there. Charles D. Johnston, superintendent of the Orphanage, spoke next and gave many interesting erected to the memory of Rev. James O'Kelly, founder of the Christian Church, at the New Lebanon Church in Surry County, Va., and a proposed memorial to the memory of O'Kelly on the campus of Elon College.

With the clearing of the program of the major part of board reports and routine items of business today, the session will get down to business in earnest tomorrow, with the election of officers, the consideration of education institutions, the consolidation of the Congregational Seminary, at Atlanta, with Elon College, and the general subject of union with the Congregational Church slated for disposition. The outstanding speakers for tomorrow's program are Dr. Jason Noble Pierce, pastor of the First Congregational Church, Washington, D. C., who will speak at 11:30 in the morning, and the addresses of Dr. Robert L. Kelly, executive secretary of the Council of Church Boards of Education, New York, and Dr. Lewis H. Keller, president of Atlanta Seminary, to be heard at the night session.

THIRD DAY.

"The Congregational-Christian Church" was the new name proposed for the united Church of the Congregational and Christian denominations as voted here today by the Southern Christian Convention. A joint committee of Christians and arranged, at which the report of the joint committee shall be acted upon.

Some of the more important details already settled by this action as carried in the report of the committee today are: "That the united Church, for the time being, shall be called 'Congregational-Christian,' allowing each local Church to continue the use of its present name if it so desires. That the basis of this new relation shall be the recognition by each group that the other group is constituted of the followers of Jesus Christ. Each individual Church and each group of Churches shall be free to retain and develop its own form of expression." It was explained that some time would be necessary before a joint organization could be formed to begin the merger details, and that it would take years before all the interests of the two Churches could be combined as one organic unit.

Great interest is being shown in this move on the part of the people of the Christian Church, as union with the Congregationalists has been the hope of a large number of the Christians for many years, and the leaders of the Churches have been working on the problem for the past two years or more.

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary.

OUR JAPAN CONFERENCE.

BY REV. C. P. GARMAN, Missionary.

The twenty-eighth annual Conference of the Japan Christian Church met with the Azabu (Tokyo) Church, March 26th to 28th. The roll was made up of sixteen pastors, three women workers, twenty-seven lay delegates, and five missionaries. Visitors were present from the Tokyo Christian Churches also, Rev. and Mrs. L. C. Fletcher and fraternal delegates from the National Christian Council, National Sunday School Association and the Society for the Promotion of Union among the Denominations attended a part of the sessions.

The topics to which the most time was given were (a) denominational union, (b) ordinations, and (c) celebration of forty years' mission work in Japan. While it is not the first time that denominational union has been mentioned in our Conference programs, it was ever before given so much consideration. Previous discussions of the topics at various times in the past had at last culminated in the organization within the year of the Society for Promotion of Union among the denominations. Our Rev. K. Matsuno is one of the leaders in this new organization, though well-known laymen have taken the responsibility for keeping the topic before the Churches. In response to an appeal from the representative of this organization, the Conference named two representatives to co-operate with the society.

Several Japanese pastors read the H. G. L., and, therefore, are acquainted with the movement looking toward affiliation of our Canadian Conference with the Church of Canada and with the pourparlers between the Congregationals and the Christians. Mr. Fletcher spoke of this before the Conference, and asked for some co-operation in finding the attitude of Conference members to the proposition.

Another reason for the minds of our people to turn toward union at this time is the recent decrease in the amount which the Christian Church in America is sending for its Japan work. There is a fear that willy-nilly, sooner or later affiliation with some other body may be their only means of existence. Of course, union in America and union in Japan are distinct problems, and may possibly not be solved in the same way.

Minimum ordination requirements were fixed at one year's actual experience in the ministry after completion of the course of study at the Aoyama Theological School. Since only students who can carry the work in the regular course of the theological school will be accepted hereafter, this means an elevation in the educational requirements of candidates for ordination. Heretofore, our standards have been considerably below those of most denominations, and are not yet up to that of many. The closing session of the Conference was a beautiful ordination service, at which three young men, all previous graduates of the special course (lower than the regular course) of Aoyama Theological School, were consecrated to the Christian ministry. They are Messrs. U. Tanaka, S. Hiraga and Kedzuka. K. Ando, recently graduated at Aoyama; Miss K. Endo, recently graduated from the Bible women's course at Sendai; Mr. Nakamura, resident worker at Iwagasaki, and Mrs. Sasao, Bible woman at Azabu Church, were made members of Conference. Mr. Ando goes to serve the Church at Narugo, while Miss Endo assists at Utsunomiya from next month. Mrs. Ando has been a teacher in the Oji

To celebrate our forty years' work in Japan, a stereopticon and sets of slides of biblican scenes are to be purchased and special co-operative meetings are to be held at each Church. The Churches are to raise 200 yen for this purpose, the mission contributes an equal amount, and a third 200 yen will be transferred from another account. In reality, this is the forty-first year of our Japan work, but the saying, "Better late than never" applies here as it does on other occasions. At an interior point, where our "newspaper evangelism" has some inquirers, the most active member was absent in December. When he returned he led in the celebration of a Christmas service in February. I am of the opinion that this was really something new under the sun, yet no one questions but that the spirit is of much more consequence than the time.

An excellent spirit pervaded throughout the Conference sessions. The zeal and breadth of view manifested by this group of Christian workers is such that one feels proud to be counted a member of it.

SOME OBSERVATIONS.

BY REV. F. D. BALLARD.

Last year, for the first time, the rural Church school was held at Vanderbilt University, which is the first effort of its kind to bring together a group of rural ministers from all over the South for the express purpose of a more efficient ministry.

A second such school was recently held, beginning the 9th of April and continuing until the 20th. Last year there were enrolled in the school 168, coming from fourteen States and representing sixteen different denominations. As compared to the attendance last year is the following, which is strong evidence in favor of such a plan: number of students in attendance, 375; States represented, 17; denominations represented, 20; women enrolled, 5; men enrolled, 370; lecture periods, 331; instructors and lecturers, 58; average age of students is 36 years.

Number of students representing the following denominations are: Methodist Episcopal, South, 156; Lutheran, 2; Disciples of Christ, 21; Cumb. Presbyterian, 23; Presbyterian U. S. A., 27; Christian, 6; Evangelical, 1; Reformed Church in America, 1; United Presbyterian, 2; Methodist Episcopal, 40; Church of Christ, 2; Presbyterian, U. S., 10; Free Will Baptist, 3; Southern Baptist, 26; Episcopal, 30; United Brethren, 9; Moravian, 1; Congregational, 10; United Baptist, 1.

In addition to the above-given facts, the following is of interest to the readers of THE SUN, and particularly to the members of the Christian Church:

1. The school brought together the most unusual faculty ever assembled in behalf of rural preachers. The faculty was composed of 58 leaders, many of whom are nationally and internationally known. This faculty was made up irrespective of denominational affiliations, the selection being on the basis of ability and merit of leadership already given to some phase of the rural Church problem.

2. The school brought together 375 students from 20 different denominations and 17 States. This is by far the largest school of rural ministers ever held in America.

3. Notwithstanding the large enrollment of the school, each student enrolled was provided with a scholarship which paid railroad fare and all expenses connected with the two weeks' study. This is the only school of its kind in America.

4. This school makes it possible for the preachers of 20 different denominations to study as one group the problems they have in common and still provides for denominational group meetings for the consideration of problems incidental to each individual communion. Its interdenominational atmosphere and fine spirit promises to pave the way for larger rural co-operation, which will make more effective the program of the rural Church.

Last year there were in attendance of the rural school four representatives of the Christian Church. They were as follows: Rev. A. W. Andes, Valley of Virginia; Rev. C. G. Nelson, Red Cloud, Neb.; Rev. E. M. Carter, Franklinton, N. C., and myself, who at that time was pastor of the Henderson Church.

This year there were present, as our records show, six, coming from the following places: Rev. E. M. Carter, Youngsville, N. C.; Rev. H. E. Crutchfield, Henderson, N. C.; Rev. R. Burnell, president of the Western Christian Convention, and three others whose names I do not have at my command.

In addition to the regular class lectures and group meetings to discuss the problems in common to all, was held each afternoon the denominational group meetings. They met in session daily and discussed many problems that were facing the rural pastor and the Church.

A very fine spirit was demonstrated by the Congregationalists and the Christians, in that they held their meetings jointly. Rev. F. P. Ensminger, a Congregational minister, who is superintendent of the conferences of the Congregational Churches of North Carolina, Tennessee and Kentucky, presided, and Rev. H. E. Crutchfield, now pastor of the Liberty (Vance) Christian Church, Henderson, N. C., acted as secretary. As our records show, there were ten of the Congregational ministers who met with the group. A fine spirit of fellowship was enjoyed by all who attended the school.

Growing out of the needs of the community and the session of the rural school has come a demand for such a service as the Christian and Congregational Churches are giving. Last Sunday, for the first time, a service was held here in the university community under the auspices of the Congregational, Christian and the Friends Churches. Dr. Malcom Dana, of New York, who was serving on the faculty of the rural Church school, a Congregationalist minister, preached. There were present at that service about thirty people.

On Sunday, April 22nd, the second service was held, with approximately 100 present. Dr. Chas. L. Fisk, regional secretary of the Congregational Church of Cleveland, Ohio, preached. The program as planned at present is only a tentative one, but should the demand be great enough to warrant such action, a permanent organization may be created.

Services have been planned to continue through the remaining weeks of the school year, which will terminate the 1st of June. Each Sunday there will be preaching and a general worship service, such as are conducted by the Christian and Congregational Churches. The public is invited to worship with us.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

Lesson VIII—May 20, 1928.

JESUS TEACHING IN THE TEMPLE.

GOLDEN TEXT: "He taught them as one having authority."—Matt. 7:29.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psa. 119:1-8.

"Is it lawful to give tribute unto Caesar, or not?" It was a question packed with dynamite, and the Pharisees and the Herodians knew it. In fact, they asked Him the question because they wanted to get Jesus into trouble. Thinking, as they did, that it was a case of "either" or "or," they thought they had the Master just where they wanted Him. For, reasoned they, if He says it is lawful, He will arouse the bitter antagonism of the Jews, who resented the idea of paying tribute or "poll tax" to the hated foreign power (Rome), and who would have refused to pay it, altogether if they had not feared the dire consequences of such an act of rebellion. On the other hand, thought they, if He says it is unlawful, we can accuse Him of treason and of sowing the seeds of insurrection and rebellion, and thus have the heavy hand of Rome upon Him. "We have Him either way," they thought.

But Jesus was not so easily caught. He saw what the Pharisees and the Herodians did not see—that it was not a case of either or but of both and. Calling for a coin, He asked whose superscription appeared thereon. When they said, "Caesar's," He replied, "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and unto God the things that are God's." In other words, it is not a case of rendering only to Caesar or only unto God; it is a case of rendering unto Caesar and unto God. This answer contains a profound truth that needs repeated emphasis in every age and in every nation. Men live really as citizens of two kingdoms. They are members of an earthly kingdom and members of a heavenly kingdom. As members of the former, they have certain rights and privileges, and they correspondingly have certain responsibilities and obligations. They are under obligation to the government or the political power from which they receive their blessings. The man who enjoys the benefits which government confers and refuses to assume his responsibilities, who does not discharge his duty is an ingrate and a traitor. One of the laws of membership in the heavenly kingdom is fidelity to the laws of the earthly kingdom. On the other hand, as a member of a heavenly kingdom a man is under obligation to discharge certain duties to that kingdom. The one does not conflict with the other. A man is not the best citizen of the earthly kingdom until he is a member of the heavenly kingdom.

"What commandment is the first of all?" Jesus says that first and foremost of all the commandments, human and divine, is this: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength." The supreme object of men's devotion, of his worship, or his loyalty should be God. God should be first in every life. And yet Jesus would be the first to say that God does not demand this because, like a glorified monarch, He wants men to bow down before Him and do obeisance to Him. He demands this for man's own good. It is only as men give themselves to that which is highest and best, only as their strength and their minds and their emotions and their souls go out to the highest and best in life that they can come into the fullness and the richness of life. Sin often does not consist in doing the bad, but rather in doing the good instead of doing the best.

"What is the second commandment?" The second is this, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." It is to be noted that Jesus did not say that a man should not love himself. No man ever had a higher respect for himself than Jesus had. He saw the dignity of life and He always lived in such a way that He could keep His self-respect. It was because of this fact that self-love has a worthy meaning. But Jesus says that a man must love his neighbor as himself. He is to have a respect for the dignity of life in others as well as in himself. He must seek to give to others the same opportunity for self-development which he would have for himself. He must manifest his love for God by demonstrating his love for his fellowmen. He must always have that indomitable spirit of good will toward all men that is the heart of love in the sense in which Jesus used it. In fact, it is impossible to love God if one does not love his fellow-men, for, as John says, "He that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, cannot love God whom he hath not seen."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

TOPIC: "How to Train for Larger Leadership."
—Num. 27:15-23.

Some Bible Hints.

There has always been and always will be a need for wise leaders. The supply is never up to the demand (vs. 16, 17).

The leader whom God will choose is ever the one who, like Joshua, has the Spirit, who is seeking God's will and trying to do it (v. 18).

Leadership is a responsibility rather than an honor. To be charged with the care of souls is a serious matter (v. 19).

People follow their leaders, right or wrong; hence the need of care that we lead aright. We can either build or destroy (v. 21).

Suggestive Thoughts.

I should still be a clerk in a store, said one, instead of a director of religious education, if I had not attended Christian Endeavor leadership-training classes. They gave me vision.

To train for leadership we must do the tasks we have in hand as well as we possibly can. Good leaders are made out of good followers.

Never say no to a job. Tackle everything that comes your way and give time, thought, and energy to it. The fellow who says "I can't" will never be a leader.

Decide upon the direction of your leadership. This is the age of the specialist. Athletic leaders are needed; Sunday School workers, evangelists, and so on. Then study your work thoroughly.

A Few Illustrations.

One leader found that the young people enjoyed the study of flowers on a hike. He started to master this subject. Leaders must have contact with young people's interests.

Flame is drawn to flame. The leader should have a burning passion to be of use and to help young people. This attracts.

When a bigger job has to be done, the person is chosen to do it who has shown that he can handle a smaller job well. In Christian Endeavor there is a sort of natural promotion. A good worker becomes a committee chairman. Then he is drafted for union work, and so on.

Marshall Hudson, who organized the Baraca Bible class, trained in Christian Endeavor Society and union and fitted himself for his larger work. Thousands have done the same thing.

To Think About.

Why do we desire to be leaders?

What qualifications for leadership have we?

What sort of leaders does the Church require?

VALUE OF CHURCH TO COMMUNITY.

The real estate dealers know that the Church insures a better class of residents in a community. In many of our new land sites the real estate companies give a lot to the Church to be located there because the presence of a Church makes all other property valuable. There are six points which will help us to understand the real value of a Church to a community.

1. Its fellowship center. Did you ever stop to think that the Church is the only place in a community where all are invited and welcome? The schools invite the children, the Y. M. C. A. invites the boys, the Y. W. C. A. the girls, the Ladies' Aid Society may invite the men, but the Church is the only place in a community that invites all. The Church has a place for father and mother, young people, babies and grandmothers. It is, or should be, the real fellowship center of a community.

2. Organized for good. It is organized to do good to the community, by the community, and for the community, and all have a part in its work; all the places are not of equal importance, but all are necessary. The preacher who preaches the sermon, the teacher who teaches the class, the boy or girl who keeps the records, and all others have a helpful place in helping the world on to Christ.

3. Its moral atmosphere. There is a purer air to breathe where there is a good Church. It is easier to do right and harder to do wrong where you live in a community which upholds the Church. The Church is a sort of a moral stimulant and vital breath to those who go through its portals. One cannot remember all he hears of the sermon, but he is purer and better for being there. Like the little woman who went to Church but couldn't remember the sermon, and the minister wanted to know what good it did her to go to Church if she didn't remember any of the sermon. For answer, she showed him a pile of clean clothes which she had just ironed; she said they had been washed with soap and water, but now they were clean and dry they were better for having had the soap out of them; therefore she was better for having been to Church, although she couldn't remember the sermon.

Too often our neighborhood and our common life are too close to our work and we need a bigger and broader vision. The Church gives us this. One day at least in the week we can think of higher and bigger things. We can remember, through the Church, that we are a part of this big world and God is back of it all. We may be workers together with him. That outlook makes life more worth living.

5. It shapes lives. The Church helps us to train the children and inspire the youth with a vision of life impossible without the Church. In its Sunday Schools and Young People's Societies and all its work, it helps form character in lives of young people which is more precious than gold. There is no greater product of any place than Christian character, and the Church is the greatest force in such production.

6. A place to work. But, then, it is not just what we get out of a thing that counts. It's what we put into it; and the Church gives us a place to do things and to develop our lives in Christian service. We need to do, as well as learn, and many a worker has gone out into the world to be of world-wide service who had his first opportunity for work and training in a little Church somewhere. Our missionaries go out from communities where there is a Church that has inspired their lives for greater and nobler things of life. The Church gives us a vision and a task which makes life worth while.

CONVENTION ADDRESS.

there while the kingdom of God is compelled to limp along at a poor, dying rate. You remind me of a little fellow who got his hand hung in a costly vase. The father came in and saw him; he knew the value of the vase. He tried to get the little fellow's hand out. The mother tried, but of no avail. It seemed that he would have to break the vase. And trying one more time, the father said, "Now, sonny, straighten your fingers out; straight like this, and then see if you can't get your hand out." "No, I can't, said the son, I loose my pennies." Of course, he didn't know the value of the vase; he had rather let it break than let go his pennies. And could it be said that we would let the Church and the Church's institutions go to wreck, break, be no more, just because we will not open our hands and let our pennies, our dollars, our hundreds and thousands go? And next we see our need for—

(4) Spiritual power. And here is the crux of the whole situation. We will never see ourselves as we are; we will never see the needs of our Church in their true sense; and we will never see our resources in their relation to the kingdom and kingdom enterprise as we should until our hearts are stirred, our souls are fired, and our vision is widened by the Spirit of Almighty God. And God is saying to us tonight as we assemble here in the beginning of our Convention, "Tarry ye, tarry ye at Richmond until ye are endued with power from on high." And when He, the Spirit of truth and of power, is come; when He is come upon us, He will guide us into all truth, He will enlighten us, our blinded eyes will be opened and we shall see our resources and we will bring our tithes and our offerings into the storehouse of the Lord, and God will pour us out a blessing such as our hearts shall not be able to contain.

MONDAY.

ARBITRARY PARENTS.

He was about four, I should judge, and had come down-town with his mother on the street car. As they got off, he spied one of those machines that holds balls of gum wrapped in black, red and yellow.

You deposit a cent, push a rod and—lo and behold—as if by magic a ball of gum drops out into your hand. Can't you see how fascinating it might be to a child?

The little chap had rushed toward it, crying, "Mamma, please give me a penny; I want some gum."

"No!" returned Mother, walking right along briskly.

Perforce her son had to follow, but tearfully he persisted, "Mamma, can't I have just one?"

To which his mother replied brusquely, "I said, 'No!'" and started across the street, with the boy walking lustily beside her.

Well, maybe Mother didn't have a penny, or possibly she didn't approve of the gum habit for small boys, or she might have been in a great hurry to accomplish her shopping and get back again. But just think back to the days when you were a child—what would such a short, brusque denial as "I said no!" have done to your emotions? Wouldn't you have felt injured and rebellious? Even now, with an adult consciousness, how do you react when some one makes a short, dogmatic statement, without proof, in refutation of your opinion? It doesn't "set well," does it?

My mother invariably when I pressed her as to an adequate reason for her insistence on my doing something I did not want to do, said, "Because I tell you to." For her, that ended the matter, and many a scolding I received because I sulked afterwards. But to my childish mind it did not seem a sufficient reason for having to do something that I disliked. Now, I would apply the word "arbitrary" to such a statement, and though my vocabulary did not then contain that word, my thought was the same.

I noticed another arbitrary mother on a street car the other day. She ordered her little daughter to come sit by her. The child was sitting quietly right across the aisle, looking out of the window, and the car had few people in it. The child evidently enjoyed being alone—perhaps playing that she was going shopping by herself. Her brow clouded, and she asked, "Why, Mother?" I, too, wondered, and then I heard, "Because I tell you to."

It seemed to me, privately, the only reason the mother could give—she was merely showing her authority in public. The little girl obeyed reluctantly, all her pleasure gone. Tears filled her brown eyes, and she cried softly until her mother threatened to punish her when they got home if she didn't "straighten up."

My sympathy was entirely with the child. None of us like to be ordered peremptorily to do things, and the stronger our personalities, the less we can endure it. Why not, then, be reasonable with the children? Don't deprive them of innocent pleasures for no real reason, and if you have a reason that the child has not appreciated, why not try to explain so that he will understand?

Children are becoming increasingly restive under any restraint, and the more rebellion they store up in their souls while they are little, the sooner they will break away from discipline in adolescent days. But even the tiny ones are surprisingly logical, and while they resent unfairness and arbitrariness, they appreciate justice and fairness quite as much.—Ethel Peterson.

TUESDAY.

MY BAPTISM—WHAT?

Text: Ezk. 36:22-27; Acts 10:34-38.

Baptism is not water. The water ceremony is a symbol. It is ritualistic. When did I join the Church? Not when I stepped up to the altar and took my vows of faith; but the Holy Spirit joined me to the Church when Christ came into my heart. When was I baptized? Not when I met the minister at the water and received water on my body at his hands, but when Christ flooded my soul with desire to be His.

It makes no difference whether I am baptized with the morning dews, or sprinkled by the hands of a prelate, or plunged in the river or in the middle of the ocean, it is all nothing unless I am baptized by the blood; unless I have seized the inner meaning of Christian reality and my soul cries to God for His spirit day by day.

Prayer.—Dear Lord of heaven and earth and all mankind, make us new creatures in Thee. And we pray for such a realization of this that we may know and not have to only hope about it. If we cannot say we know, give us courage to trust. It took us a long time to grow up and realize our earthly existence. Give us desire for God and good, draw us to Thy people, give us hate for evil, make us kind, may we consider the good of others, and then we may realize that we are born of Thy spirit. Amen.

ONE WITH CHRIST.

"Buried with Christ in baptism."

Judas was a baptized soul, but he had not been baptized in his heart. It appears that there was nothing in his character that was of the same mind of the Lord. "He went and it was night." And it was the night of his soul that made it so dark to him. He had nothing in heart like that which Jesus spoke of when He said, "I have a baptism to be baptized with which ye know not of," and then straightway began to speak and say that His mission was that of salvation of the world, to rid the world of sin, and affirmed that He and the Father were one and that we should be one with Him and co-laborers with Him. It is only when our spirits cry aloud for Him that we say, "They will be done in us."

So my baptism is a divine act that abhors sin; that craves divine grace.

Prayer.—Our Heavenly Father, as we pray, make our hearts new. Make us new creatures, give us Thy spirit. Give us keen hearing to heavenly words and obedient hearts to Thy calls and Thy fellowship and service. Amen.

THURSDAY.

FOR RIGHTEOUSNESS' SAKE.

"Suffer it to be so now, for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness."

This is the argument that converted John and induced him to baptize the Master.

When Adam was told not to partake of the forbidden fruit, he was told it was for the sake of righteousness. Noah didn't want the job of saving the human race, but he was told it was for the sake of righteousness. When Jonah was cast into the whale's belly he was told it was for the sake of righteousness. When Abraham was chosen to lead God's people to Canaan, it was for the sake of righteousness. When God called Moses to lead His people out of Egyptian bondage, he was told that it was for the sake of righteousness. In all these instances, each at first shirked his duty; and now in the climax of instances, when Jesus steps on the scene, John, like all the rest, says: "Please excuse me. Get somebody else." Perhaps it was modesty and unworthiness, but modesty must not shirk. God's work was to be accomplished, so Jesus says, "Suffer it to be so for righteousness' sake."

Are we shirkers? Often we are called to do something—to teach, to pray, to give, to lead a campaign, or something for the Lord—and we say, "I can't; get some one else." Christ says, "Suffer it to be so. It takes all of us to fulfill all righteousness."

One lesson we all need is: to do because Jesus says so, even though there should be but little personal joy in it. The supremest joy in life is the fulfillment of righteousness. In life we suffer a lot of things for the sake of a desired end. There are school teachers, physicians, drug clerks, grocers, bookkeepers, lawyers, milliners, etc., perhaps all doing things they do not like, but there is a widowed mother to support, or a sister to educate, or a career to make, or a destiny to shape. In time, these have acquitted themselves proudly. The clerk has become a physician, and the milliner a novelist, or sister has graduated, etc. Everybody is happy. The dove descends. We boys get together and rehearse what a hard time we had and laugh about it, counting all denials and suffering as joy. We suffered it for righteousness' sake.

Prayer.—Our Father, shed the radiance of Thy approval in our way. Give us the spirit and the will to endure hardness as a good soldier for glory sake. Instill in our souls Thy word, give unto us common sense, and turn our consciences to the nicest sensitiveness. Seal our vows to Thee. Give us ears to heavenly wills and enable us all to say we will do anything possible to us for righteousness' sake. Amen.

MY SIGNATURE.

"Lo! here is my signature."—Job 31:55.

To put our signature to anything carries the entire weight of our character with it. It either forces us or binds us with chains.

Our signature to Christianity binds us to a few things. In the home it is kindness. In business it is honesty. In society it is courtesy. In play it is fairness. Toward the fortunate it is congratulations; toward the unfortunate it is pity; toward wickedness it is resistance; toward the weak it is help; toward the strong it is trust; toward the penitent it is forgiveness; toward God it is reverence. In living, it is service that requires the sacrifice of forsaking all that may be necessary to achieve.

The life that pays is the life that lives the spirit of self-sacrifice, and the call of our life is Jesus. "I give my life for Thee. What hast thou given for me?"

A minister once fainted in his pulpit. He was taken to the anti-room. When he recovered, he said: "Take me back and let me finish." They said, "If you do you will die." He replied, "If I don't I will die." What a vision of duty!

On his last trip, D. L. Moody was taken sick at Philadelphia. He was advised not to continue. It might mean his end. He said, "I know I am not well, but I must go to Kansas City, sick or well. I want to see another city moved for God before I go." He went and died at the meeting.

We are on our Master's business, and His business is to find the lost sheep and bring them home.

It is a great thing to lead one soul from darkness of sin into glorious light of the gospel. I believe if an angel were to wing his way from earth up to heaven, and were to say that there was one poor, ragged boy, without father or mother, with no one to care for him and teach him the way of life; and if God were to ask who among them were willing to come down to earth and live here for fifty years and lead that one to Jesus Christ, every angel in heaven would volunteer to go. Even Gabriel, who stands in the presence of the Almighty, would say, "Let me leave my high and lofty position, and let me have the luxury of leading one soul to Jesus Christ." There is no greater honor than to be the instrument in God's hands of leading one person out of the kingdom of Satan into the glorious light of heaven.—D. L. Moody.

SATURDAY.

CONSULTING WITH CHRIST.

"And they told Him all things, whatsoever they had done, and whatsoever they had taught."—Mark 6:30-34.

We may and we should talk over everything with Christ. This is possible for all of us through the loving ministration of His Spirit.

Mary consulted Him (John 2:3), and so also did the centurion at Capernaum (Matt. 8:5).

Mary and Martha sent word to Jesus (John 11:3). The disciples referred a delicate matter to Him (Mark 9:38). Hezekiah spread the letter from Assyria before Jehovah (2 Kings 19:14). After John the Baptist's death, "the apostles gathered themselves together unto Jesus."

Many pray in form only. But we need to have heart-to-heart talks with Christ. The Pharisees said their prayers; but John, whom Jesus loved, consulted Christ, lived in constant fellowship with Him, with the Spirit of Christ abiding in his heart.

If unwittingly we stumble, we can "talk it over" with Christ, and He at once says: "I forgive you." If we are perplexed, He answers: "I will instruct thee." If we have doubts, the Spirit assures us: "O taste, and see that God is good." Our experience with Christ dissolves all doubts, and makes His presence an abiding reality, ever deepening, until we see Him "face to face."—Rev. A. W. Lewis.

Prayer.—By one of the parents, asking that we may learn to value more and more the spiritual companionship of Him who is both Counselor and Comforter.

SUNDAY.

THE SOUL'S HUNGER FOR GOD.

"Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled."—Matt. 5:1-12.

We are not in the world long before we discover that we have many hungers. Almost the first words a little child learns to speak are "I want." As by intuition, our needs are associated with our first knowledge of things.

In the normal life, there are three predominating "hungers." Physical hunger establishes our relation and kinship with the animal creation; then there is hunger of the mind, which sets us apart from animal life; but up and beyond all this, there are hungers of the soul, and here our relation is not established with creation alone, but with the Creator.

Today we should ask ourselves the question: "On what plane are we living?" That surely is a narrow life which thinks only in terms of the things of earth. It is to be feared, however, that many are content in asking, "What shall we eat? What shall we wear?" Were it not better for us to consider the Master's question: "Is not the life more than meat, and the body than raiment?" Today one may cultivate a fine physique, but that never takes the place of reading God's Word; one may cultivate the mind, but that does not take the place of prayer. "A purely intellectual life," said some one, "may be as cold as ice and as ugly as sin." What we really are is not determined by our physique, or intellect, but by our soul's relation to God.—Rev. Lewis Keast.

Harper, and W. H. Denison, representing the Christian Church, and Drs. Frank K. Sanders, Charles E. Burton and Fritz W. Baldwin, representing the Congregationalists.

Just before the vote was taken on the matter of Christian union, Dr. Jason Noble Pierce, pastor of the First Congregational Church, Washington, D. C., addressed the Convention on "Christian Union." He followed very closely the matters proposed in the report, and his whole-hearted support of the plan no doubt had great influence and weight in the final vote. Several other members of the Congregational Church were present for this discussion and vote, and they all expressed themselves as highly gratified over the result.

Officers Elected.

Dr. Leon E. Smith, Norfolk, Va., pastor of the Christian Temple, was re-elected as President and presiding officer of the Convention; Dr. N. G. Newman, Holland, Va., was re-elected Vice-President; and Dr. I. W. Johnson, Secretary, Suffolk, Va.; Dr. W. C. Wicker, Elon College, N. C., Treasurer, and Mrs. Mary A. Rollins, Suffolk, Va., Assistant Secretary, were all re-elected to their former positions.

Twenty names were proposed for the trustees of Elon College, eight for Bethlehem, three for the Christian Orphanage, seven for the Board of Religious Education, and ten for the Mission Board, from which number the respective board will fill the vacancies occurring on their board at the end of their board year. Dr. J. O. Atkinson was re-elected as Mission Secretary and editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Dr. P. J. Kernodle, Richmond, Va., was elected as managing editor for this publication.

Dr. G. O. Lankferd, Burlington, N. C., submitted the report of the Temperance Committee, which declared "Crime in its various forms is an obvious illustration of the economic and moral waste and destructiveness of sin," and called upon the "public press, our courts, our officers, upon Churches, schools and colleges, upon all good citizens, and especially the members of this Convention to exercise a more vigorous effort to further remove the temptation from those who are given to the indulgence of strong drink, and that everything possible be done to safeguard and protect the youth of our land from the curse of this and all other evils."

Merger of Educational Institutions.

Following the disposition of the general plan for union with the Congregational Church, the report of the Board of Education, of which Dr. W. A. Harper, president of Elon College, is the chairman, carried a further merger proposition in regard to the educational institutions of the two bodies. It was proposed that Atlanta Theological Seminary, a Congregational institution, be moved to the Elon College campus. This recommendation was passed by the Convention after an address by Dr. Lewis H. Keller, president of the Atlanta Seminary, setting forth the advantages expected to accrue from the plan. The Convention gave its approval to the combination of the two institutions and referred the details to the board of trustees of Elon College and the board of control of Atlanta Seminary to be worked out jointly.

The present plan is for the seminary to move to Elon College and use the Christian Education Building for its class-rooms. The property now owned in Atlanta by the seminary would be converted into endowment funds, and later on the seminary would acquire suitable buildings for its work by purchase of present buildings now owned by Elon or the erection of new buildings, as found best. Dr. Keller predicted that under these favorable circumstances that in a few years this arrangement would build two great institutions at Elon and carry a large and important influence for the united Church. Dr. Keller was the first speaker in the afternoon to refer to the Convention then assembled by its new name—"The Congregational-Christian Church."

Further important features covered in the report of the Board of Education were the proposed campaigns to begin in the near future to pay off the indebtedness of Elon and Bethlehem Colleges and to give Elon College an endowment of one million dollars and Bethlehem College an endowment of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, and a plan to give the alumni of Elon College participation in the administration of the college by representation on the board of trustees.

FOURTH DAY.

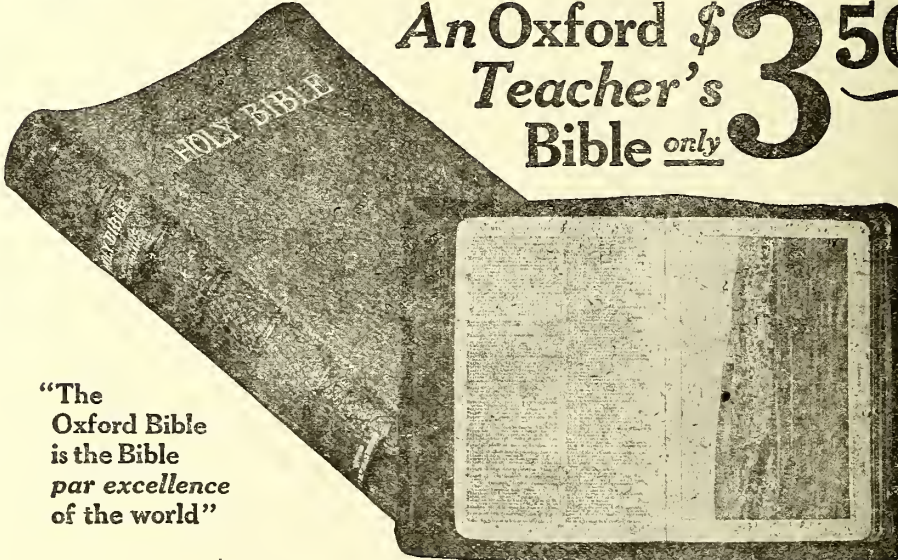

The Southern Christian Convention closed its four-day session here at noon today, after one of the finest programs of its history and a record of great accomplishments. Plans for union with the Congregational Church, the combining of Atlanta Theological Seminary with Elon College, and many other important matters of vital interest to the whole constituency of the Church were legislated during the session.

The evening session last night was given over to a series of addresses, a sort of fellowship meeting celebrating the progress made so far in regard to Christian union, which culminated in an address by Dr. Robert L. Kelly, New York City, executive secretary of the Council of Church Boards of Education. He spoke on the present-day tendencies in education in America and compared them with the projects set forth in the present sessions of the Convention, and found them directly in line with the best thought in educational work of the times. He spoke of the Christian union program passed by the Convention as one of the most remarkable things that had happened in a long time. He complimented the educational systems of the Congregational Church and the Christian Church as training men and women so as to make this thing possible in this day of narrow sectarianism. He spoke highly of the junior college idea in education which the present session of the Convention was strengthening within its bounds, and mentioned the fact that the Christian Church had given to America the founder of the public school system, Horace Mann, a product of Antioch College, a Christian institution. Dr. Kelly concluded his address by saying that he was expecting great things from the union of the Christians and Congregationalists, and that the whole world would watch this step with keen interest in its development and progress.

Dr. Kelly was preceded on the program by three other speakers. Prof. S. A. Bennett, director of the school of religious education at Elon College, who spoke on "Christian College Preparing Leadership." His address centered around the atmosphere, curriculum, and training facilities needed at the Christian colleges to accomplish this purpose. He declared that a Christian college should be a laboratory of Christian living, that every man and woman on the faculty should be an active Christian as an example of Christian living to the students, that the school should maintain a department of Christian education in which the students are offered courses in Bible and religious education, that fundamental courses in Bible should be given all students, and that a major in the field of religious education offered for those who desire it.

Dr. Lewis H. Keller, president of the Atlanta Theological Seminary, was the next speaker. He first expressed his gratification that the Convention had passed the matter combining the institution which he represented with the Christian institution at Elon College. He declared that while Christ was interested in the multitude, He knew that to establish the Christian religion in the world He must implant His idea firmly in the minds of a few men, and so chose His twelve disciples. Dr. Keller declared that twenty-five earnest young men studying for the ministry would do more good in the world than any four hundred students in any of the colleges or universities in the land not studying for the ministry. "It is the choice groups such as these," he said, "that will control our civilization of tomorrow and save the world."

President W. A. Harper, of Elon College, speaking on "Christian Colleges and Christian Union," said: "In our institutions of higher learning it seems to me that we have three particular avenues of approach. The first method of approach which offers itself to us hopefully is found in courses of study appreciative of the whole idea of Christian union. A second avenue of approach is offered in the form of addresses, open forums and group discussions, but our most hopeful method will be found in definite projects embodying the principles, the teaching and the practices of Christian union. The hope of Christian union is in Christian education, and the hope of Christian education is very largely involved in the Christian colleges. As they shall initiate their students into practical experiences in the field of Christian union, so shall the cause of Christian union take on new life and flourish like the Green Bay tree planted by the rivers of water."

The final session of the Convention this morning was opened by a song service conducted by Rev. J. F. Morgan, and a worship program by Rev. W. C. Hook, Holland, Va. Prof. L. L. Vaughan, Raleigh, N. C., presented the report of the Publications Committee. A suggestion to combine THE CHRISTIAN SUN, official Southern organ, with the Herald of Gospel Liberty, official Northern organ, was not approved, as the committee was of the opinion this merger would not benefit either periodical. Following the Publications Committee's report, Dr. P. J. Kernodle, Richmond, Va., made report as managing editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN and proposed plans for an increased circulation for this paper among the homes of the constituency. John G. Truitt, Norfolk, Va., presented the report of the special committee appointed on men's work in the Convention, and provision was made for a men's organization in the Churches, the purpose of which is to interest the Christian Church men more vitally in their own local Churches, in their sister Churches, and in the general advancement along all lines of service.

The Convention voted unanimously to approve the "Recommendations Relating to the Organic Union of the Christian and Congregational Churches." It was the first time, we suspect, in the history of any denominational group where unanimous action was taken in a matter involving such tremendous consequences. We rejoice that the aspirations for which the Christians have stood for one hundred and thirty-four years appear now to have taken definite form in suitable action. Of course, the approval was made in the form of a memorial to be addressed to the General Board and the Executive Board of the General Convention. It is hoped that there will be a General Convention called within a year to pass finally upon this matter.

HORTON.

Mrs. Rufus Horton, a faithful and beloved member of Piney Plains Church, died on the 9th day of April, 1928, at about the age of 66 years. Sister Horton was for a number of years somewhat frail and though she often felt weak and worn she felt it her duty to be in her place at Church almost regularly. She was, I believe, a good woman and we shall miss her at the Church.

She leaves to miss her a husband, one daughter and one son, and other relatives and friends. The body was laid to rest in the Church cemetery to await the resurrection morn, while the soul has gone to be with God who gave it. May the rich blessing of our Lord be with and upon the lonely.

J. LEE JOHNSON.

WYATTE.

Whereas, it has pleased our Heavenly Father to call from an earthly to a heavenly home our beloved friend and member of Loug's Chapel Christian Sunday School, Mr. John A. Wyatt; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to His will, knowing that He doeth all things well and for our good.
2. That we follow his good example by always giving our best to His cause.
3. That we offer our heartfelt sympathy to his wife, pointing her to Christ, the Saviour of the world.
4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to his bereaved wife, a copy to The Christian Sun for publication, and a copy spread on the minutes of Long's Chapel Sunday School.

MRS. J. W. JOHNSTON.

GAMMON.

William Andrew Gammon passed into the life beyond on April 4, 1928, at the age of 80 years, 5 months and 22 days. He was a member of Berea Christian Church, at Great Bridge, Norfolk County, Va., for fifty-six years, and died in the triumphs of a living faith. The body was laid to rest in the family lot near the old home on Friday, April 6th, and the service was conducted by his pastor, assisted by Rev. M. F. Allen, of Newport News. He leaves to mourn their loss his widow, one daughter, one stepson, nine grandchildren, two step-grandchildren and sixteen great-grandchildren. May God bless the ones left behind.

BETHLEHEM COLLEGE

WADLEY, ALABAMA

A JUNIOR COLLEGE AND HIGH SCHOOL.

Where Opportunity Awaits the Student of Very Limited Means.

GIRL'S DORMITORY.

Bethlehem College, Wadley, Ala., will open September 5, 1927. This institution is a Junior College and High School, which is co-educational, where scholarship ranks high and expense is low. It is thoroughly Christian, absolutely non-sectarian, and vitally American. A school where opportunity awaits the student of very limited means—$68.00 pays all college expenses, except books, board and room. Board, $15.00 per month, and room $3.00; total expenses for a term of nine months, $250.00.

Bethlehem College is training some of the best stock of America for Christian leadership, to be used by the nation and the world. Here is a great challenge and asset for students who wish to prepare themselves to serve in a worth-while way. The work on the new Administration Building is progressing nicely, and we will be able to begin our college work in this building when school opens this fall.

CHRISTIAN UNION.

We record with hearty approval the fine spirit of co-operation and brotherliness evinced by the Congregational Church in its approach to the whole question of union with our denomination. We are honored by the presence in our Convention of a fine group of their trusted and distinguished leaders, whom we hope to hear at this session set aside to consider the matter of Christian union.

Particularly do we rejoice that the Commission on Interchurch Relations of the National Council of the Congregational Church and the Commission on Christian Unity of the General Convention of the Christian Church have adopted the "Recommendations Relating to the Organic Union of the Christian and Congregational Churches" recently published in the periodicals of both denominations.

We recommend that this Convention approve these recommendations and memorialize the General and Executive Board of the General Convention of the Christians to proceed on this basis to consummate the union of our two Churches as set forth in the recommendations which we herewith submit as part of this report:

RECOMMENDATIONS RELATING TO THE ORGANIC UNION OF THE CHRISTIAN AND CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES.

The undersigned representatives, appointed from the Commission on Interchurch Relations of the Congregational Churches and the Commission on Christian Unity of the Christian Church, believe that the hour has come when, in the interest of the kingdom of God and of the larger usefulness of their respective denominations, these two communions should immediately take steps toward an organic union.

We, therefore, recommend to our respective commissions and, through them, to the National Council of Congregational Churches and to the General Convention of the Christian Church:

1. That each of them, at the earliest possible date, take action endorsing an organic union between the Congregational and Christian Churches.

2. That the basis of this new relation shall be the recognition by each group that the other group is constituted of the followers of Jesus Christ. Each individual Church and each group of Churches shall be free to retain and develop its own form of expression. Finding in the Bible the supreme rule of faith and life, but recognizing that there is room for wide differences of opinion among equally good Christians, this union shall be conditioned upon the acceptance of Christianity as primarily a way of life, and not upon uniformity of theological opinion or any uniform practice of ordinances.

3. That the autonomy of each local congregation and the right of each individual member to follow Christ according to his own conscience shall remain undisturbed.

4. That the United Church shall, for the time being, be called "Congregational-Christian," allowing each local Church to continue the use of its present name if it so desires.

5. That as soon as this proposal shall have been ratified by the official bodies of the two organizations, a committee of equal number from each communion, adequately representative of the major interests and territory of each denomination, shall be appointed to study the whole situation carefully and to recommend a plan for the complete unification and management of their enterprises and program of work. In the meantime, every possible step should be taken by the two commissions to promote mutual acquaintance among the two constituencies and to canvass the practical questions involved in a merger.

6. That as soon as possible after the joint committee provided in the preceding paragraph is ready to report, a general convention, including the two bodies, shall be arranged, at which the report of the committee shall be acted upon. For this joint convention, the executive committees of the two denominations shall make all arrangements.

7. The commissions recognized that numerous practical details will be involved. They are confident, however, that being united in purpose, no insuperable obstacles will appear, and therefore propose that the two bodies go forward in mutual confidence.

BOARD OF POLITY AND FINANCE REPORT.

Following is the report of the Board of Polity and Finance to the Southern Christian Convention, Richmond, Va., May 1, 1928, including recommendations by heads of departments and Executive Board:

1. There shall be appointed by the President of the Convention at each session thereof a "Board of Finance," consisting of not less than three or more than five members.

2. Said board shall elect its own officers and shall hold meetings whenever called by its chairman.

3. Said board shall prepare and submit to the Convention at each session thereof, statements of all estimated receipts and expenditures for the succeeding year, shall make assessments for, and all payments to the different enterprises of the Church, submit the same to the President of the Convention for his approval and also to the Convention for its approval and perform such other duties as may be prescribed by the Convention. The presidents of Elon and Bethlehem Colleges, the superintendent of the Orphanage, and the chairmen of the several boards, commissions and committees of the Convention shall submit to said Board of Finance each year a full and complete statement of its financial needs for the ensuing year.

4. Said board shall have authority to select some suitable person, at a salary to be agreed upon, whose duty it shall be to visit the several Conferences represented in the Convention, present the needs of the Church and make collections to meet the same.

5. That the apportionments for 1928-30, annually, be $25,000, to be distributed as follows:

Superannuation	$ 3,000
Convention	2,000
Publications	4,000
Convention obligations	12,750
Undistributed	3,250

Total $25,000

That the benevolence offering shall be $113,500 annually, to be distributed as follows:

Missions	$ 45,000
Orphanage	30,000
Colleges	34,000
Christian Convention	4,500

Total $113,500

That the Mission Board and Orphanage have annual offerings Easter and Thanksgiving, respectively; access to the Sunday Schools for monthly offerings, and to individuals at any time.

That the colleges have quarterly Sunday School offerings and access to individuals at any time.

That the Board of Christian Education have access to Sunday Schools and Christian Endeavor Societies and to the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Conventions.

That the Church year for instructional purposes be divided as follows:

January—Interdenomination co-operation.
February and March—Foreign missions.
April—Evangelism.
November and December—Orphanage.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Bro. G. D. Hunt announces in this week's SUN that the memorial service for New Hope Christian Church, Alabama Conference, will be held on the fourth Sunday in May instead of the fourth Saturday, as formerly. All interested please note the change.

Bro. George Brannon and family and Misses Hart and Stout, of our Sanford Church, were visitors to the college on Sunday. They came especially to hear the pipe-organ played, but, sad to say, the current was off that day. It is hoped that they will come again.

Trustee Joe W. Stout and family were visitors to the college last week. Bro. Stout will be remembered as the builder of Elon College. He is a general contractor of wide reputation and has just closed a large contract for more than $1,000,000 of school buildings in the city of Atlanta.

Dr. W. W. Staley was a visitor to the college on Tuesday, on his way to the Congregational conference of the Carolinas, which met in Asheville on Wednesday of last week. Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, Dr. C. H. Rowland and Miss Pattie Coghill also attended the Congregational conference.

The Organ Guild of North Carolina Professional Organists met in annual session at Elon College on Monday, the 7th. That evening Mrs. Lockwood, of New York City, gave a concert on the Skinner organ. The reputation of this organ continues to grow. People come from far and near to hear it played.

We begin a new department in THE CHRISTIAN SUN this week. It is entitled "Christian Church Men," with Rev. John G. Truitt, chairman of the Committee on Men's Work of the Southern Christian Convention, as editor. It is hoped and believed that this will become one of the strong departments of THE SUN.

Dr. C. W. McPherson, Burlington, has just been elected president of the Medical Society, County Divisions, of North Carolina. This is a great honor, but one richly deserved. Dr. McPherson is a prominent layman in the Burlington Christian Church and interested in all the work of our denomination.

The proofreader last week put the acting editor of THE SUN in an embarrassing position when he made him refer to the action respecting the union of Congregational and Christian Churches as "suspicious" rather than "auspicious." Let us repeat that we consider the unanimous vote of the Southern Christian Convention for union with the Congregationalists an auspicious matter.

Rev. Joseph E. McCauley, 124 Thirtieth Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn., who graduated at the head of his class in the divinity school of Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn., last year and who has been doing post-graduate work there this year, has decided that he will return to the pastorate of the Christian Church for next year. Brother McCauley is a consecrated, earnest man and is thoroughly prepared to render splendid service in the ministry. Any Church that may be in need of a pastor would do well to get in touch with him.

Rev. J. H. Dollar, a graduate of Elon and of Vanderbilt University and who has been teaching in the Birmingham-Southern College, Birmingham, Ala., the past year, has decided to take up work in the active pastorate of our denomination. Bro. Dollar comes of a family of preachers who have made history for the Christian Church in the far South. Any Church would be fortunate to secure his services.

Miss Helen Stearns, who for several years has been professor of religious education in Elon College, has been chosen as general superintendent of the week-day religious work of the city of Dayton, Ohio. This is one of the most important positions in week-day religious work in the United States. This is an honor to Prof. Stearns to be called to this position, and it is an honor to Elon that one of its professors should be sought for this important post.

Dr. Atkinson is expected to return to his office around the 18th of May. He is leaving Florida on Monday, the 14th, and will visit friends in Wake County, N. C., and then go on to Eastern Virginia, where he will confer with Bro. Darden, acting Mission Secretary, and reach his office at Elon the latter part of next week. He will certainly be welcomed in his office, and all of us will rejoice that he is back at his post of duty and service again.

Bro. C. J. Strickland writes that he is resigning his position with the Ford Motor Company this week to take up evangelistic work. He is a son of Deacon A. P. Strickland, of Mt. Gilead Christian Church, in Franklin County. Bro. Strickland is the author of a book entitled "The Storage Battery," a book that is having a wide sale among those who are engaged in the automobile business. THE CHRISTIAN SUN wishes for him every good success in his evangelistic efforts.

President Lewis H. Keller and Dean G. Floyd Zimmermann, of the Atlanta Theological Seminary, and Dr. J. Edward Kirby, of the United Church of Raleigh, were visitors to the college on Monday. Dr. Kirby was on his way to Asheville to attend the Congregational Conference of the Carolinas. President Keller and Dean Zimmermann were here working out with the faculty of religion in Elon College a curriculum for the Atlanta Theological Seminary and the college for next year.

The Atlanta Theological Seminary will offer a fine opportunity to ministers who are actively engaged in pastoral work and who live within automobile distance of Elon College. Such pastors will be given free tuition and $100 a year, and they will be privileged to carry on their pastoral work and work for the divinity degree at the same time. It is expected that a great many active pastors, not only of the Christian and Congregational denominations, but of other denominations as well, will avail themselves of this rare privilege. Will those who are interested write President Lewis H. Keller, 1032 Stewart Avenue, N. W., Atlanta, Ga.

FIELD NOTES.

We had very beautiful Mothers' Day services Sunday. The music was exceptionally good. We are to have a called meeting at Damascus Church Saturday, at which time we are to discuss the advisability of building a new Church. These people are wide awake and giving me splendid support.

BIRMINGHAM LETTER.

Members of the Christian and Congregational Churches living in Birmingham enjoyed a delightful evening together at the Y. M. C. A. cafeteria Friday, April 20th. The cafeteria was reserved for the occasion, and in spite of the downpour of rain, about thirty enthusiastic people were present. Bro. Jesse A. Dollar was in charge of the program, which included a delicious meal, music, games, and short talks.

Up to this time two Sunday afternoon services were being held each month in which both Congregationalists and Christians participated. These meetings were held for a while in the auditorium of one of the office buildings in the city, but the Y. M. C. A. has gladly consented to the use of their auditorium.

At this Friday evening affair the discussion of services every Sunday arose and we are now having preaching services every Sunday morning. A splendid spirit has prevailed all along and the work is progressing slowly, but surely. Bro. Dollar preaches occasionally; Rev. McQuarrie, of Atlanta, of the Congregational Church, is present two Sundays each month, and others have been with us. Dr. Fisk, of Ohio, was here a short time ago. As the work moves along we are looking forward to the organization of young people's work soon.

PRESSLEY INGRAM.

RURAL PREACHER.

I have just read the letter by Rev. E. M. Carter in April 26th issue of THE SUN and was very much impressed with the slogan which he quoted, "Christianity in America will win or lose with the rural preacher." Bro. Carter also said that 85 per cent of the leaders in all constructive lines come from rural districts. Supposing that these statements are true—and we believe they are—what is the Church going to do? The responsibility is 100 per cent on the country preacher.

The Christians, for about seventy-five years of their early history, seemed to believe this slogan, and actually practiced it by concentrating their efforts in the rural districts. Then our Churches were pastored by ministers who made each Church a strong community center.

Later, we became interested in building in the city, and in our enthusiasm to build in these financial centers we have neglected the country Church. I believe, Bro. Editor, that we must renew our interest in the country Church, around which the political, social and Christian leadership of this nation is reared.

HIGH POINT NEWS.

On Sunday, May 6th, a community singing was held at the First Christian Church, High Point, N. C. Several Churches were represented and the Church building was crowded with listeners. We enjoyed it immensely and feel that the Churches are all benefited by such gatherings. The singing was held in the afternoon, our regular Church service being held in the morning. Our pastor, Rev. J. M. Allred, preached a splendid sermon from the life of Joseph, taking for his subject, "Bringing in Souls," which seemed very fitting at this time, since it is planned to begin a series of meetings which, to use our pastor's words, "we hope to have a revival."

If any of you find it possible to attend any of these services or any of our regular services on the first and third Sundays of each month, do so, and if not, pray for the Church that it may have a revival such as it has never had but so sorely needs, and that it may be a fair representative of Christ and our denomination here in High Point. This Church is located on the corner of West Green and Tryon Streets.

MRS. M. D. WOODELL.

REPORT OF MEN'S WORK COMMITTEE.

The demand for a men's organization in our Church has been steadily growing for many years. Several local Churches have developed men's organizations, some of which are having careers, others have failed to function for any length of time. But the need for a real, live men's organization in every local Church steadily increases, and along with this need is the greater need of combining strength of the entire manhood of our Church. Your committee came to its task with humility because it saw the seriousness and bigness of the attempt to formulate some organization which would begin to lead Christian Church men into a united fellowship and service commensurate with the demands of the Church and the commands of Christ.

From the very first meeting of the committee we found ourselves confronted with a long line of questions, and many of them important: "What shall be the name of a men's organization that will appeal to all, be easy to announce in Church, understandable, and expressive of just what is meant?" "Can an organization be simple enough for all types of Churches to find it workable, and yet complexed enough to hold its place in the larger Churches?" "What shall be the purpose of a men's organization?" "How shall it accomplish that purpose?" "And will it be but another organization thrust upon an already overorganized Church?" "Will it be all-inclusive in the type of work it undertakes, or specifically set itself to some one task?" "Are there not dangers of driving the Church into some one direction to the detriment of some other field of service?" "What are other Churches doing?" "What are the women doing?" "And how are they doing it?" These are but a few of the questions which confronted the committee, but they are enough to show that the committee had a tremendous task before it.

Your committee met and implored divine guidance in the matters at hand, set itself to the task of finding out how the other denominations of the country were solving the problem, and of observing if possible the strength and weakness of their organizations and programs. Organizations within our Church were studied, both men's organizations and women's organizations. Their strength and weaknesses were sought out as far as possible, and then the committee began to draft results of their study. Counsel was sought from all sources among our leaders, both of men and women. Your committee has drafted its final work, and while it does not begin to claim any perfection for its propositions, it does believe that it has for your consideration a working and workable basis upon which this Convention may seek to set the whole manhood of the Church behind its every enterprise.

1. Name—Christian Church Men.
2. Purpose—Interest.
 - (1) Interest the Christian Church Men more vitally in their own local Churches.
 - (2) Interest the Christian Church Men more vitally in their sister Christian Churches.
 - (3) Interest the Christian Church Men more vitally in general advancement along all lines of kingdom service in the Christian Church.
 - (4) To the end that the entire manhood of the Christian Church may be placed more definitely back of every enterprise of the Christian Church.
3. Methods—(a) Organization.

(1) The organization of a local unit of Christian Church Men in each Christian Church to meet monthly.

(2) The organization of a district of Christian Church Men to meet quarterly.

(3) The organization of a conference of Christian Church Men to meet annually, preferably in April.

(4) The organization of the Christian Church men of the Southern Christian Convention to meet biennially, preferably in June.

(5) The organizing of boys' work as a component part of the Christian Church Men.

(6) The election of a leader in each organization of Christian Church Men as a leader of said organization and an agent through which any other organization or agency may work in a given organization; as a leader of a local unit, a district, a conference, and a convention.

(7) The appointing by the president of the convention of a committee of five to further the work of Christian Church men, the chairman of which committee to be the convention leader of Christian Church Men.

1. Instruction in the local unit emphasizing worship, fellowship, stewardship, evangelism and missions.

(2) Informational and inspirational addresses.

(3) The developing of a literature, the use of the press, and a page in THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

(c) Co-operation.

(1) Working together in developing a strong local Church.

(2) Planning for larger co-operative work in quarterly sessions.

(3) Co-operation in widest kingdom reaches.

4. Field—The World.

(1) Missions—home and foreign.

(2) Education—secular and religious.

(3) Welfare—children and aged.

(4) General—convention and publication.

We recommend that each Church organize its men under the above name, purpose and plan, fitting the particular needs and requirements of the local situation into their organization; we would suggest the following general outlines of organization:

1. Name—Christian Church Men.
2. Purpose—Same as that written above.
3. Officers—Leader, assistant leader, secretary, treasurer.
4. Meetings—Monthly.
5. Members—Christian Church Men as the organization itself may elect.
6. Study courses—Prescribed by the committee of five.
7. Dues—Such as may be determined upon, a certain portion of which going to the committee of five for expenses.
8. Boys—Organized under the auspices of the Christian Church Men.

Respectfully submitted,

BETHLEHEM'S SUPPORT.

At the recent session of the Southern Christian Convention, held at Richmond, Va., during the discussion of the report of the Committee on Education, there was considerable discussion on one section of the report, viz: the section referring to Bethlehem College.

Having been born, and lived for many years, in the vicinity of Bethlehem College, and for years having been a member of the Alabama Conference, I believe that I am somewhat familiar with the situation as it exists regarding Bethlehem College and its relation to the Southern Christian Convention. I think that most of the delegation at the Convention are readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN; hence all who were there and heard the discussion of the committee report are entirely familiar with the matter which I am about to discuss, and I feel that probably I can make it sufficiently clear to be understood by those who were not present.

For several years there was a feeling amongst the leaders of the work in the Alabama and Georgia and Alabama Conferences that there existed a need for a junior college, located somewhere in the bounds of those Conferences. The matter was presented to the Convention for discussion, consideration, and if deemed wise, permission for its establishment and the Convention's approval of same. After a discussion, the idea was approved by the Convention and a committee appointed to work out plans for the financing of same.

While the idea originated in those Conferences, it was naturally understood that if approved by the Convention that it would receive the necessary encouragement and financial support to make it a success. It seemed from the discussion on the floor of the Convention that there was some difference of opinion as to whether the enterprise had received the encouragement and support due it and to which it was justly entitled; some thinking it had, others taking the view that it had not. A fact which is very evident to all who are at all familiar with the circumstances as they exist at the present time, Bethlehem College and its future is facing a very serious crisis. In my opinion, there are several facts which have contributed to the present condition of things. The first fact to which I would allude, and to which I refer simply as a factor having a bearing on the present situation in a financial way only, is, to me, a serious mistake was made in locating the college where it is. There are some who were very strongly of the opinion at the time that the selection of the location that was made was a mistake, and events following that selection seemed to confirm that opinion. If it had been located at or near some larger town or city, citizens surrounding the location, outside of our own denomination, would have been interested in its success as a civic proposition, as well as an educational institution, and would have contributed much more liberally, I believe, to the support of the institution than has been or will be the case in its present location. It is true that, from an educational standpoint, the institution probably is as capable of doing good work located where it is as it would have been at such place as I have suggested; but it is also unmistakably true that no institution, located wherever it may be, can do its most successful work educationally without being adequately supported financially.

In the discussion on the floor of the Convention the point was raised that the Convention had not stood by the college financially. Of course, we all know, when we stop to fully consider the matter, that the Convention, as such, cannot support the college or any other enterprise of the Church in a financial way, but can only suggest and lay plans, (Continued on Page 7.)

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

FLORIDA—WITH OBSERVATIONS.

By the time this writing greets the reader through THE SUN, the writer anticipates being at home again with the joy of health and service tingling through his body. Summing the situation up, he attributes his return to full health and strength to two factors especially, namely: diet and sunshine. Dr. J. E. Rawls, of Lakeview Hospital, Suffolk, Va., told the writer once that the medical world was coming more and more to a vegetable diet; that people ate too much meat and too few vegetables, and, furthermore, declared Dr. Rawls, "If patients who get sick and go to hospitals would learn that the things they eat to help them get well are also the very best things to eat to help they stay well, they would be better off. Now we never prescribe meats and heavy diets for sick folks; and if well ones would take the same prescription they would not get sick so often and so much."

Now, what Dr. Rawls was preaching at Lakeview, these people at Florida Sanitarium are practicing to the limit. I arrived here bent over a stick with acute rheumatism, blood pressure down to 104, and other general debilities too numerous and insignificant to mention, February 3rd. Well, they have not allowed me a mouthful of fish, flesh or fowl since, and never one drop of "glorious" (or inglorious) coffee. (I tried in vain to bribe a nurse with a dollar to get me one cup of coffee when I first came—nothing doing.) Well, I lost that cane long ago, and only carry one now as a mark of pride, and my blood pressure is pronounced normal, and some days I walk around four or five of these Florida lakes. If I stay here much longer I believe I could walk around a hundred or so of them in a day. One county near here has 1,400 lakes, they tell me. Fact is, you have to be careful how you walk or ride down here, or you will plunge into a lake before you know it.

Well, this diet—vegetables, and then some more vegetables, cereals, nuts, raisins, figs, eggs, milk, grapefruit and orange juice. Back out way, when you are served orange juice they bring you about three spoonfuls in a small glass. Here they bring you a gobletful at a time, any and every meal, and all between meals if you call for it. I see from a medical analysis, by the way, that a glass of orange juice contains three-fourths as much food value as the same quantity of milk, and is much better for some systems and stomachs than milk. And the same medical analysis shows that spinach is about the most wholesome and best body-building and blood-purifying vegetable that grows. Everybody ought to eat spinach. It is delicious when cooked right and served with butter, and is most easily digested. A friend who was here this spring writes me today: "Come to see us when in New York; we will give you spinach and a regular Florida Sanitarium diet." Now, that is business, and I accept here and now. That is exactly what my good Dr. Rawls, of Lakeview, was talking about—"Eat when you get well the things you ate to help you get well." And cereals! They have "57" varieties of cereals here, more or less, and they are all good and wholesome—except some! This morning's breakfast menu card is before me. It runs true to form and custom, and is like this: "Bananas, grapefruit, baked apples, steamed figs, prunes, rolled oats, cream of wheat, grapenuts, puffed rice, poached eggs on toast, baked potato, hot or cold milk, Postum, butter-milk, malted milk, graham crackers, cornmeal pones, nut butter, creamery butter, honey"—and so on, a few more of the same sort. Well now, folks do get well on that sort of diet. This is a Seventh Day Adventist sanitarium, and it is against their religious faith to eat meat themselves or to aid or abet others in eating it. What other doctors are advising us to eat when we get sick, these doctors make you eat it—or go elsewhere. They practice what others are preaching. No wonder they are the most successful sanitarium builders and managers in this country. They believe religiously in a vegetable diet, and prove the value and virtue of their religion by practicing what they believe and preach.

Another thing they believe in is sunshine. There is value and there is virtue in sunshine. That is why the good God made it so abundantly. We Southern people especially seek to avoid the sunshine. Why, they have it "canned" down here, and if you are too feeble or too indolent to go out in the great open and get it free of charge they sell it to you at so much per. I bought it three times a week for some weeks after I first came here at one dollar per can, and I would consume the whole can in ten minutes. The technical name when thus served is "quartz rays" and "diathumal," but it is just canned sunshine. So they bathe you in real sunshine if you are well enough to get out in it, and if you are not they take you into a room and dip you into a can of it. The moral is "get sunshine." Sunshine has healing qualities that many and much of the best medicines haven't. So the world needs to move out into the sunshine and get baked and burned in good old farmer fashion. Well, believe me, the Adventists have gone to nature, and to nature's God and gifts to get the secret and the practice of the healing art. And so their sanitariums increase in number and are filled to capacity.

Florida is one of God's richest gifts to this great nation. Here "summer spends the winter" and the great open lures one back to health and happiness. The writer used to know a man who loved his "dram" so well that he was want to say, "It does seem to me that everybody would get drunk occasionally." I did not agree with him, but his logic and language come across the years to me now. "It does seem to me that everybody would come to Florida occasionally." And if they are tired, sick, worn and need repairs, I would advise them to come to the Florida Sanitarium and be happy while nature's methods and the art of healing here brings them back to full strength and health.

UNITY AND UNION.

Unity is the state of being one; union is the act making one. Jesus prayed for unity. He knew that if His people were one they would unite. Unity must come before union. Unity is a heart condition; union is organic. When Protestantism is one in spirit it will become one in fact. Some of the matters connected with Church union may be studied in a simple way.

It is a necessity for the salvation of the world. Jesus prayed "that they all may be one; as Thou, Father, art in me, and I in Thee, that they also may be one in us; that the world may believe that Thou hast sent me" (John 17:21). The world will not believe till the Church is one. Some will believe as the Church now exists, but the world will not believe till the Church is a unit in its spirit. Unity is a necessity for union, and union is a necessity for the salvation of the world; and Jesus came to save the world because "God so loved the world."

The motive must be the same motive that was in God to give His Son, and was in His Son to make that prayer for the unity of His people. The motive must not be to make a larger Church, a richer Church, a power that can control the world's governments, education and social life—it must be the inner desire to save men. Churches must come to the point that they lose themselves in the cause of Christ. Competition must cease. Co-operation must be sincere. One denomination must want to see the other denominations prosper as well as its own. The motive must be spiritual, not educational, social, commercial or political. Our Church must fade into the kingdom. It takes religion to reach that point.

The difficulty to reach unity is great. History, prestige, numbers, wealth, theology, all loom large when the question of unity is raised; still greater when the question of union is named. Leaders might lose their position, educational institutions might go out of existence, literature would change, writers lose their place in the world of print, difficulties multiply in the study of the question. To remove the crooked roads and make the path to union straight is a huge problem. Achievements of centuries, pride, love for present organizations, work already begun, stand in the way of coming together as one in Christ.

The purpose of union is the removal of all differences, all hindrances, all mistakes, and the united work of the whole Church in the proclamation of the gospel in the spirit of Jesus Christ. "Preach the word," point sinners to the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world. It is not our Church; it is Christ's Church. The purpose of unity is union, and union can come in no other way.

The victory will come when all Churches lose themselves in the kingdom. It will come. "Every knee shall bow and every tongue will confess." The steps already taken toward ultimate union of the Congregational and Christian denominations, and the recent approval of Church unity taken by the Methodists at Kansas City, May 11th, indicate a growing desire for union. Dr. Marsh hailed the move as "one of the most significant things done by any religious body in a long time." The division of territory and the co-operation of mission boards in foreign fields point in the same direction. When the necessity is more keenly felt, and the motive is more in accord with the prayer of Jesus, and the difficulties are more fully removed, and the purpose becomes a consuming passion in the Churches, the victory will be won. It will never be won by the head—it must be done by the heart.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH MEN.

A forward step, fraught with splendid promise for future progress for the Christian Church, was taken by the Southern Christian Convention at its recent session when, acting upon the report of its Committee on Men's Work, it unanimously passed the report which is printed in full in this issue. It is hoped that every man in whose hands this issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN happens to come will read the report of that special committee and ponder it carefully.

The women of the Christian Church since 1912 have been making splendid progress in supporting the cause of missions. They have wrought a splendid work and are entitled to all honor and praise.

The men of our Churches are in the same attitude of disorganization now that the women of our Church were in sixteen years ago. The Southern Christian Convention has realized this for some time and has provided, in adopting the report of its special committee, a way out and also a way up and onward.

The purpose of the organization, to be known as "Christian Church Men," is to interest the men of our Churches more vitally in their local Churches and sister Churches of the Christian denomination, and in the general enterprises of the Christian Church to the end that the entire manhood of our denomination may be placed definitely back of every enterprise of our Church.

The organization that has been prescribed is very simple. It is straightforward and business-like and will appeal to men who look at a problem with business-like directness.

Sixteen years from now let us hope that the men of the Christian Church will have done a work for the kingdom of God in our midst comparable to the achievements of the women of our Church for the cause of missions. There is no reason why this should not be the case.

The Christian Church men, from now on, are to have a special page in THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and Rev. John G. Truitt, chairman, is to be the editor of that page. In this issue of THE SUN we begin that department, and under it print as the first item the report of the committee, of which Bro. Truitt was the chairman, as submitted to and adopted by the Convention. Hail, Christian Church men; hail, and God prosper you in all your ways.

WILL WE UNITE?

By REV. ROY C. HELFENSTEIN, D. D.,

Pastor People's Christian Church, Dover, Del.

The question has been asked of Christian Church pastors hundreds of times the past week, "Will the Christian Church and the Congregational Church unite?"

The answer is: "It all depends upon how Christian the Christian Church is—how Christian are the pastors? how Christian are the denominational officers? how Christian are the men and women of the local Churches?"

If we are Christian enough to do our part in answering the prayer of Christ, "that they might be one," we will unite. If we are Christian enough to act as we ourselves have all so often prayed, we will unite. If we are Christian enough to be willing to give up some of our secretarial positions, we will unite. If we are Christian enough to recognize that Congregational Church Christians and that the teachings and principles of the Congregational Church are just as Christian as our own principles and teachings, we will unite.

The Congregational Church is ready to unite. Is the Christian Church ready? My hope, my prayer and my conviction is that the Christian Church is ready. There is no longer excuse for our being two separate denominations when the years of separateness have brought us so close together in spirit, in idealism, in teachings, in polity, in Christian liberty and Christian service. God forbid that any pastor of the Christian Church shall be guilty of grieving the Master's heart by opposing this proposed union between the Congregational and Christian denominations. It has been often declared that "if the ministers would get out of the way, the laymen of the Churches would speedily effect union between the denominations of kindred ideals and faith." If that be true, then in the name of God, ministers, let's refuse to say a word against union. But, better than that, let us pray for it, talk it, and promote it. Personally, I believe that ninety laymen out of every hundred in the Christian ing your Churches in this movement, and getting them to line up for union and for God.

"Who knows but that you have come to the kingdom for such a time as this?"

Will we unite? Again I repeat: "It all depends upon how Christian the Christian Church is." The Congregational Church is ready. God grant that we may be, too.

In connection with the preparation that is being made for the forthcoming quadrennial meeting, making the twentieth anniversary of the Federal Council of Churches, information is being assembled as to the extent of Church co-operation conducted through interdenominational ministers' organizations. Every minister who reads this paragraph, who is a member of an interdenominational ministers' organization, is requested to send to Secretary John Milton Moore, 105 East Twenty-second Street, New York City, the names and addresses of the president and secretary of the organization with a brief statement of the inter-church activities in which it engages.

CONVENTION OFFICERS AND VISITORS.

Church would vote for union right now. And the only pastors who would not vote for it are those who do not know what a fine Christian body the Congregational Church is, or those who have not mingled with the ministers of other denominations and learned the joy of interdenominational fellowship, or those who are afraid that such a union might interfere with their ministerial preferment. But I do not believe we have many such ministers in the Christian Church.

The ministers of the Christian Church are broad-minded, Christian-hearted men of God, and I believe that ninety-nine out of every hundred ministers in the Christian Church will vote for union with the Congregational denomination. Read again that challenging statement from the Commission on Union with the Congregational Church appearing in last week's CHRISTIAN SUN. Read again what Dr. Coffin has said. The challenge comes to every minister and every man and woman of the Christian Church to pray now, to talk now, and to work now in the interest of this great cause. Let us not wait until the General Convention meets before we begin to act. Let every Church in the Christian denomination that believes in uniting with the Congregational Church on such a splendid basis as announced in our papers last week, let every such Church take action on this matter and send in a memorial to the President of the General Convention, to the effect that such and such a Church has voted unanimously in favor of the union. Think what an effect it would have upon the General Convention if a large number of our Churches would thus express themselves now! Pastors of the Christian Church, the privilege is yours of lead-

July, August, Sept. and Oct.—Education.

6. Individual collections may be made by the president of the colleges, superintendent of the Orphanage and the chairman of any board, commission or committee at any time, but all such collections so made shall be reported to said board and considered by it when making its apportionments.

7. Collections may be taken by the Sunday Schools of the Churches for the Orphanage, for missions, for any other agency of said Church; but the amount of such collections shall be reported to said Finance Board by the agency receiving the same, and shall be considered by said board when making its apportionments.

8. The Convention Treasurer shall submit, whenever required by chairman of said board, full and complete financial statements and shall also submit to the Convention full and complete annual statements. Said statements shall show amounts collected from actual amounts unpaid by each Conference.

9. All payments made to the several agencies of the Convention shall be by draft on the Treasurer signed by the President of the Convention and countersigned by the Secretary of the Convention.

10. No debts shall be contracted beyond allotment by any board, commission or committee of the Convention without the approval of said board of finance.

11. All rules or regulations of the Convention in conflict herewith are hereby repealed.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

After the Richmond Convention I went with Dr. C. H. Rowland, in place of Dr. G. O. Lankford, who was detained by another meeting, to the nineteenth annual meeting of the Congregational Church, which met in Asheville, N. C., May 9th to 11th. Miss Pattie Coghill also attended that conference. It was a meeting of the representatives of the Congregational Churches in the Carolinas, and was of interest to the Christian Church, as these two denominations are moving toward a closer unity and it may be union. Dr. Rowland, Miss Pattie Coghill and I represented the Southern Christian Convention at this conference.

Dr. C. H. Rowland and I, in his car, left Greensboro, N. C., at 9 o'clock Wednesday morning, May 9th, and reached Asheville, N. C., at 7 o'clock that evening. We attended the meeting that night, heard a sermon by Dr. John Brittan Clark, of Tryon, N. C., and Communion service followed. After this, a pleasant social hour.

Thursday forenoon was devoted to business, organization, and reports from "The Parish Along the Highway"; "Those Country Boys"; "The Churches in the Wildwood"; "The Hamlet on the Highway"; "Hard by the Mill"; "The Downtown Church"; "The Tourist Town"; "The Resort City"; "The Church of Wide Fellowship"; "The Capital City," and these and other subjects were discussed.

The afternoon session was in charge of the Woman's League of the Carolinas, with addresses by Mrs. D. Foster Updike, executive secretary of the commission on missions, and Mrs. Theodora Crosby Bliss, former missionary to Micronesia. These addresses were both informational and inspirational, dealing with facts, conditions and necessities. This was followed by a scene dramatized showing a young woman who desired to be a missionary, and finally obtaining the consent of her mother. It was interesting and instructive.

The evening service on Thursday was given over to the representatives of the Christian Church—Dr. C. H. Rowland, pastor of the First Christian Church, Greensboro, N. C.; Miss Pattie Coghill, Secretary of Christian Education for the Southern Christian Convention, and Rev. W. W. Staley. Rev. F. P. Ensminger, conference superintendent, after a brief service by Rev. John M. Peyton, president of the conference, introduced me to the conference. I gave a brief history of the Christian Church, and then, after a song, introduced Miss Pattie Coghill, who surpassed her usual good self in an address. The audience was very much pleased with her address. I then introduced Dr. Rowland, who spoke on the unique subject, "Dissatisfying the Satisfied." His subject caught the audience, and his great address held them spellbound to the close. He has made many good addresses, but he never delivered one that more deeply impressed his audience. He showed that it is the satisfied people in the Church who retard the growth of the kingdom, and that it is the satisfied divided Protestantism that prevents unity. Our visit seemed to be "a stitch in time" in the matter of unity between the Congregational and Christian Churches.

We were entertained at night and for breakfast in private homes—he with Mr. and Mrs. Dodd, and I, for lodging, with Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Laeffler, and for breakfast with Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Jennison. We could not remain for the final day's session, but Miss Pattie had charge of the "young people's hour" for Friday afternoon. Dr. Rowland and I left that morning.

ELON LETTER.

The topic of engaging conversation on the campus these days is the affiliation of the Atlanta Theological Seminary with the Department of Christian Education in Elon College.

Elon College has a national reputation for unique accomplishment in the field of religious education. The Mooney Christian Education Building, the first of its kind on any college campus, has fastened the eyes of American higher education on the twenty-five-acre campus on which this college is situated. The students of the college are naturally proud of the distinction their institution has won in this field, and they are particularly anxious that no affiliation with any outside institution or organization may in any way weaken or mitigate the good work that Elon is doing.

It has been quite interesting, therefore, to answer the questions of students and to garner their expressions with reference to the coming of the seminary to our campus.

The consensus of student opinion is that the seminary will enable the college to realize its ambition to develop on the campus a genuine school of religion—one that offers the very highest grade of instruction with practical laboratory facilities. The students believe that the coming of the professors in the seminary to offer courses in Bible and religious education to be credited to college students will strengthen the instructional offerings of the college in the various departments in which it has made its greatest reputation.

It is needless to say that the college administration and faculty feel likewise in respect to this matter. It is believed that the coming of the seminary will strengthen the work of the department of religious education, make it more thorough, and give it a larger teaching force, for which it has felt the need for the past several years.

On the other hand, both faculty and students are convinced that the Atlanta Theological Seminary will gain positively by the affiliation with the college. The tendency has been, during the past quarter-century, for theological seminaries to move to college and university campuses, so as to bring their students into vital relationship with academic life in general, cultural terms. This will be the contribution that the college will make to the seminary.

It is believed, therefore, that both institutions will be strengthened in their essential work by this arrangement, and so both faculty and students welcome this situation.

SISTER MINAKO.

By MISS MARTHA R. STACY.

She wanted to leave her home in this provincial city and go to Tokyo for an education when she had the best this town could afford; but the older sisters were married, the older brother was sent to study in America, and who would provide filial help for the aged grandparents and parents and watch over the business that supplied funds for them all, and help the little sister if Minako should go away? So she stifled her own longings, wrote cheerful letters to the adored big brother, and visited the grandparents daily to cheer them and help them to bear the absence of the favorite grandson as they neared the end of their life.

She wanted to join the big brother and his charming wife when they came from America and settled in Tokyo, but her father was sick with a lingering illness, and her mother suffering from a nervous illness which unfitted her for nursing duties. So the younger sister was sent instead, and once again Minako San crowded down her own desires for the sake of family love and the duties it brought her. But the little country sister proved unable to stand the strain of the busy, bustling life of the capital city with the social obligations her brother and sister wished her to share, and her nervous system gave way. It even seemed as if she would have to be put away in an asylum, but Minako said, "No," and left her dying father's bed to take the trip to Tokyo and bring back the sad, nervous wreck that had been the dear younger sister. Then, with father upstairs over the store, mother behind the store where she could answer business questions too serious for the young clerks without troubling Minako, and with sister in an isolated room out in the yard, Minako held grimly on with her responsibilities. Father must not know of little sister's trouble, and could not understand why Minako should leave him in his illness and need of her. And sister had no interest in living and would not touch food for days in spite of all Mina's coaxing. She was gradually slipping away, and Mina must find some way to bring her back—back to herself if possible, but anyway to prevent her slipping out of life altogether. And at last her efforts were rewarded and little sister began to eat, but only if Minako San fed her. It was a long, hard struggle, and in the midst of it the father at last reached the end of his earthly life, and Minako San must become the responsible head of the family and business at home.

She wanted a career like Cousin Kimura, who was a school teacher; or like the growing-up nieces in Tokyo, with their college educations and their responsible positions. But mother was still a nervous invalid and sister would not yet meet any one outside the family even in her own home, though her melancholia had been cured to the extent that last year she had once been heard to laugh out freely of her own accord over something that tickled her fancy. There were hopes that some time she would be like other girls again. But in the meantime no one but Mina San would have patience to cheer her when bad times came. So Mina San made up her mind to stay at home, and when things got too difficult and monotonous she would go off on long tramps through the woods and hills till the rebellions that would rise in her heart were either crowded out altogether or sweetened by the true love for others that made self-sacrifice possible. Perhaps without going outside the home she could do something to help others. Perhaps she could even work for Christ without leaving home to do it, but with so much prejudice it hardly seemed possible.

Friends her own age and class-mates at school were all married and settled in life by now, some of them with grown-up children already in high school. These friends and some of her uncles and aunts were much concerned about Mina's long continued state of single blessedness. Surely the time had now come when she could be spared from the family; and some of them began trying to arrange matches for her, as is the custom of "go-betweens" in Japan. But no one but widowers with children to bring up wanted a bride over thirty, as Mina San was now, and such husbands had responsibilities enough without taking a bride with as heavy home responsibilities as she had. This did not trouble Mina San as much as it seemed to trouble others, for she had no thought of leaving her own home for another—only sometimes the thought would rise in her mind of the time when mother might not be there and she would have to carry on alone. She could help other children even if she had none of her own; and little Cousin Ritsu, whose father, with his ill-temper and selfishness, made home so uncomfortable for her, found refuge and such help with her studies as Mina San could give in her big cousin's room over the store.

Then all at once life seemed to hold more compensations. Cousin Kimura, who had always been opposed to Christianity, began to take an interest, and she and Mina found more common interests. The fruitman at whose store she always traded asked her one day to tell him about Christ, saying he had watched her Christian living for years and had decided there was something better in life than making a comfortable living. Her dentist's wife, a near-neighbor, became a real friend and learner of one whose life proved the nobility of self-sacrifice; and instead of pity because she had not married gave real admiration and respect to her. Gradually the circle widened until she found herself in a place of real leadership in a group who were learning of Christian living through watching her life. Even the woman who was known as the richest in the city, looked up to with awe by others, in a time of great grief at the death of her husband, found comfort and spiritual help in Mina San's quiet suggestions as to where true help could best be found.

Though others looking on marvel at her spiritual strength and influence, Mina San herself still thinks she is living too easy and sheltered a home life, and wishes she might do something worth while for the Lord she loves. But the time is not yet, so she thinks. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of these, my brethren, even these least, ye have done it unto me."

FRANKLINTON.

This letter is written as we approach the commencement season, with important information concerning our organization. The alumni association, in its annual session last year, among other things, pledged $1,240 in support of the physical education program at the school—$472 of this amount was payable on or by September, 1927, and the balance of $768 payable on or by September 1, 1930. Of the total amount pledged, less than $50 has been collected, which indicates that for some reason the interest and enthusiasm that characterized the last meeting failed to function after adjournment.

In a meeting of a special alumni committee, which met in the home of your humble president at Newport News, Va., Monday evening, April 30, 1928, Prof. Collins, treasurer of the alumni association, reported conditions as they effect the proposed program of physical education for the school as being more chronic than last year, in view of the fact that certain claims were not liquidated as proposed by the association through a committee that was appointed last year. This report shows a total deficit covering four years of $955.65. What we need at once is $1,000 to relieve such an important program from its present serious handicaps, so that it might properly function, touching the life of the students in all forms of physical exercise.

Your annual fee of $2.00 for this year, which is due commencement, will not be sufficient. If the pledges made last year were redeemed, immediate relief would be given. What will you do to assist in this matter? This project offers a real opportunity for the association to render inestimable service to our dear old alma mater. It was further pointed out in the report that if the present situation effecting the program of physical education is not looked after by commencement, that certain very important phases of the program, such as football, baseball and basket-ball for boys, will have to be canceled for the next school term. At least until such indebtedness can be removed.

Just think what a handicap this will be to the school. Would it be fair to the school and to the boys to remove such an important part of their development? Can you not see the real challenge that is presented through this plea? We certainly must not, as an association, suffer such a condition to be true. Then as an alumni association, let us resolve to rally to the cause of our school, realizing that its banner, if kept afloat, must be largely supported by the men and women sent out from it. It is absolutely necessary that this matter receive your immediate attention and that we arrange under possible circumstances for $1,000 to be accessible on or by May 17th—commencement day. Unredeemed pledges will not do it. We must, if possible, have cash, with a loan as a final resort. Please give this matter your immediate and serious attention and let us act now.

Send your fee of $2.00 to Miss Luella Holland, 548 Twenty-fifth Street, Newport News, Va., or direct to the treasurer, W. R. Collins, Franklinton, N. C. In either case, a receipt will be forwarded immediately for the amount received. At the same time, make your contribution toward the $1,000 that we must, by some means, raise. You cannot afford to miss the meeting of the alumni association this year on Wednesday afternoon, May 16th. Banquet follows the meeting. Many important problems will of necessity be discussed, chiefly the matter of publicity for the school. On to Franklinton for May 16th. Will you meet me there? I am, Your willing servant, and give its approval for the working out of these enterprises. It seems to me that the difference existing in the minds of individuals interested in this, has arisen, because of the fact that the committee, in its plans for raising funds for the benefit of the colleges, provided that all general Conference collections for this purpose should be given on a basis of 80 per cent for Elon College and 20 per cent for Bethlehem College; that is, all funds sent up for this purpose that were given without designating where they should be applied, but that there was also the privilege given to all making contributions for this cause, if they so desired, to designate to which institution their contribution should go, and it is my opinion that it is just here that the main trouble has arisen. It seems that the larger part of the contributions that have been made for this cause have been designated by the donors, as being specifically intended for Elon College. That has evidently been done because of one of two, or possibly both, reasons. First, there has been an extra pressure brought to bear by those interested in soliciting contributions for this purpose, emphasizing the needs of Elon College and failing to include the needs of Bethlehem College, or because of the general state of dissatisfaction as to the location of Bethlehem College or in its general management; hence, no contributions worth while have been designated for that work.

Personally, I do not feel that the Conference, as such, has fallen down at all in its duty or in its obligation to Bethlehem College. It provided the ways and means by which it could be done with the trustees and management of Bethlehem College, working out plans for the raising of funds, as the only way of securing funds for the institution, except by direct and free-will offerings. It occurs to me that the cause for the present financial situation in which the college finds itself is due to the fact that the individual constituency of the Southern Christian Convention, and not the Convention itself as a body, has failed to take into proper consideration the possibilities for good which might be accomplished through Bethlehem College in the development of educated Christian and ministerial leaders, and in that way developing the work by reason of such leadership and the encouragement that this would be to the denomination generally in the far South.

Our good brother—that hard-working and untiring Church builder—Rev. H. W. Elder, after he had almost broken himself down in building Churches and developing the cause which was so dear to his heart, accepted the position of financial agent for Bethlehem College at a time when it seemed it was about to fail financially, and he threw himself into the work in such a way that he broke under the strain of it all, and today he lies on a bed of affliction, broken in body and with a broken heart, because of the slowing up and the lack of help and encouragement in carrying through to a successful conclusion this enterprise which lay so near his heart.

I believe that I am sufficiently familiar with the field in the Alabama and the Georgia and Alabama Conferences, and with the financial situation amongst our brotherhood in that field, that I can afford to say this to our brotherhood in the other Conferences in the Southern Christian Convention: that if the work of Bethlehem College is carried to a successful conclusion it must have the co-operation and the financial assistance of those who are able to help. If it could be laid on the hearts of our people in a way that they might see the actual need existing, to the effect that if two or three people might be induced to give from $5,000 to $10,000 apiece for the work, and ten or twelve people $1,000 each, and that a number give $500 each, and then quite a number give $100 each, or less, it would take care of the situation and save that institution which, if gotten on a permanent foundation, would mean so much to our cause in the far South.

I do not agree with the thought expressed on the floor of the Convention that if this is not done there will be no problem to work out from the far South by the Convention, because there will be nothing to be a problem; but I do believe that if this project is allowed to fail now it will be a discouragement to the work and to the workers, and would be a great drawback to the progress of the Christian Church in Georgia and Alabama, from which it will take many years to in any wise recover.

I submit this summing up of the situation to the careful consideration of all the friends of the Christian Church who have money to invest for the kingdom's interest, and appeal to such individuals to investigate the situation, and if they can believe that it is worthwhile, to assist to the very limit of their financial ability.

Norfolk, Va.

J. W. MANNING.

One of Dr. Kirby's friends wonders why it was that THE CHRISTIAN SUN did not mention him as being present at the Southern Christian Convention as a visitor. The acting editor pleads guilty, not of oversight but of lack of ability to decide where to place Dr. Kirby. Dr. Kirby was born in the Christian Church and is pastor now of a Church that represents the Christian, Congregational and Friends' denominations in union work. He is also a member of the Eastern North Carolina Christian Conference. Perhaps it would be right to call him our "hyphenated brother." However you call him, we were delighted to have him at Richmond.

The Southern Christian Convention gave particular attention to problems of finance. We are publishing in this issue the conclusions arrived at respecting this important matter.

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary.

QUOTAS BEING RAISED.

I am happy to advise through the columns of THE SUN that our Secretary and Treasurer, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, will arrive some time next week much improved in health and ready to take up his duties as Secretary and Treasurer of Missions. I hoped to give him a better report as to my work during his absence, and I shall withhold same until Monday, May 21, 1928, in order that the pastors may give me further reports of their offerings during the week beginning May 14th.

It was a great pleasure to meet and shake the hands of our good pastors at the Convention, and many of them told me they would report some time in the near future. I urged them to take the offering and make their report to me as soon as possible.

It has been a great pleasure to do what I could in the cause of missions in the absence of our Secretary, and I do want to thank the pastors and the people for their hearty co-operation. Remember the time is getting short for the mission period, and I do hope the pastors will make it 100 per cent in their reports.

Below I give you a report of the Churches and pastors that have sent in their offering, and those who have reported by letter that they would make a special effort to raise the full quota of their Churches:

First, Portsmouth, H. C. Caviness, pastor, full quota; Antioch, G. A. Pearce, pastor, full quota; Isle of Wight, G. A. Pearce, full quota; Bethlehem, G. A. Pearce, part quota; Windsor, G. A. Pearce, full quota; St. Luke's, Dover, Del., R. S. Stephens, pastor, full quota; People's, Dover, Del., R. C. Helfenstein, pastor, $35; Elm Avenue, Portsmouth, T. N. Lowe, pastor, part quota; Waverly, F. C. Lester, pastor, part quota; Centerville, F. C. Lester, full quota; Suffolk, H. S. Hardcastle and W. W. Staley, pastors, full quota; New Lebanon, part quota; Hayes Chapel, J. A. Denton, pastor, full quota; Auburn, J. A. Denton, part quota; Beulah, J. A. Denton, part quota; Wentworth, J. Lee Johnson, pastor, over quota; Catawba Springs, J. Lee Johnson, full quota; Plymouth, J. Lee Johnson, part quota; Pleasant Cross, H. V. Cox, pastor, full quota; Memorial Temple, Norfolk, L. E. Smith, pastor, over quota, $1,650.67; personal offering, P. T. Klapp, $10.

Those who have promised to raise quota in whole or in part by letter: N. G. Newman, J. G. Truitt, C. E. Gerringer, W. H. Garman, W. D. Harward, I. W. Johnson, O. D. Poythress, A. W. Andes, J. F. Johnson, J. F. Apple, S. C. Harrell, C. E. Newman, W. C. Hook, J. M. Roberts, E. M. Carter, J. E. Franks, H. E. Crutchfield, J. Fuller Johnson, W. C. Wicker, G. O. Lankford, T. Fred Wright, G. C. Crutchfield, P. H. Fleming and D. M. Spence.

Thanking you again for your support and co-operation and hoping to hear further from you, I am,

Sincerely yours,

J. M. DARDEN,
Acting Secretary.

MORTONS LEAVE PORTO RICO.

BY DR. WILSON P. MINTON.

The whole brotherhood will regret to learn that because of the continued ill health of Bro. B. W. Morton, he and Mrs. Morton will be compelled to give up the work in Porto Rico. They plan to sail for home the last of May. It will be recalled that when they were home on furlough a year ago

Bro. Morton had to undergo a serious operation. For a while he improved nicely, and when they returned last September to their work on the island he thought he was sufficiently recovered to be able to stand the trying Porto Rico climate. But the old trouble came back, and though there were times when he felt that he would be able to continue, he was finally compelled to decide, after advice from his physician, that he could not hope to continue the work.

There was nothing else for the Mission Board to do but grant his request that he be permitted to retire from the field about the first of June. His salary will continue until the first of September, in order to give him opportunity to readjust himself in his homeland, Canada.

Since they first went to Porto Rico, in September, 1923, Bro. and Sister Morton have given themselves without stint to the work. They first located at Salinas with Miss Williams until they could become accustomed to the new conditions and learn something of the Spanish language. During the furlough of the Barretts in 1924 they moved to Ponce in order to help carry their work. Later they located at Santa Isabel, and then upon their return from furlough last September they once again located in Ponce while the Barretts have been on their regular furlough.

One of the outstanding traits of these faithful workers has been their willingness to go wherever the need seemed to be greatest. Mr. Morton has acted as treasurer of the mission for most of the time that he has been on the island, and his reports have always been carefully kept and very promptly made. He has also been especially efficient in the matter of keeping our various properties in good condition. At the death of Miss Williams, Bro. and Sister Morton took over the supervision of the industrial work and gave much time and effort to it. In all of these activities they have shown an earnestness and devotion that has merited the appreciation of a large host of friends both in Canada and the United States who have learned to know them either through personal touch or by correspondence which they carried on extensively.

The enforced retirement of the Mortons increases our difficulties in manning the Porto Rican field, but we are trusting the Lord to lead us out in His own way. The unfavorable climate prevailing in our field has taken its toll in faithful and efficient workers. The best wishes and prayers of a host of friends will be with the Mortons as they re-establish themselves in Canada, and we shall hope to keep in touch with them.

Dayton, Ohio.

A GREAT CONVENTION.

BY C. M. CANNON.

The Southern Christian Convention closed its four-day session at Richmond, Va., at noon on May 4th, after one of the finest programs of its history and a record of great accomplishments. Plans for union with the Congregational Church, the combining of Atlanta Theological Seminary with Elon College, arrangements to increase the endowment of all educational institutions of the Convention, and provide endowment for many of the departments which are not now endowed, and many other important matters of vital interest to the whole constituency of the Church were legislated during the session.

The final session of the Convention was opened by a song service conducted by Rev. J. F. Morgan, and a worship program by Rev. W. C.

Hook, Holland, Va. Prof. L. L. Vaughan, Raleigh, N. C., presented the report of the Publications Committee. A suggestion to combine THE CHRISTIAN SUN, official organ of the Southern Convention, with the Herald of Gospel Liberty, official organ of the Northern Convention, was not approved, as the committee was of the opinion this merger would not benefit either periodical. Following the Publication Committee's report, Dr. P. J. Kernodle, Richmond, Va., made a report as managing editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN and proposed plans for an increased circulation for this paper among the homes of the constituency. Rev. John G. Truitt, Norfolk, Va., presented the report of the special committee appointed on men's work in the Convention, and provision was made for a men's organization in the local Churches, the purpose of which is to interest the Christian Church men more vitally in their own local Churches, in their sister Churches, and in the general advancement along all lines of kingdom service.

The Committee on Resolutions set as a goal for the Convention a 10 per cent increase of membership for the next biennium. A rising vote of thanks was given the Richmond Church, its genial pastor, excellent choir, and other people of the community for their generous hospitality, unselfish service and splendid music in making the session of the Christian Convention one of the most enjoyable and successful in its history. The committee expressed its thanks to the press for the generous service rendered in giving publicity to the sessions of the Convention.

The committee recorded its high appreciation for the presence and fine fellowship of the several distinguished speakers and visitors present in the Convention who contributed so largely to the program, naming Rev. W. Knighton Bloom, D. D., regional home mission secretary, Washington, D. C.; Rev. Jason Noble Pierce, D. D., pastor First Congregational Church, Washington, D. C.; Rev. Frank E. Jenkins, D. D., president of Piedmont College, Demorest, Ga.; Rev. Lewis W. Keller, D. D., president Atlanta Theological Seminary, Atlanta, Ga.; Rev. Robert L. Kelly, D. D., executive secretary of Interchurch Boards of Education, and Mrs. R. L. Kelly, New York City; Rev. F. P. Ensminger, D. D., district home mission secretary, Demorest, Ga.; Rev. J. Edward Kirbye, D. D., pastor United Church, Raleigh, N. C., all members of the Congregational Church, now united with the Christians.

The President of the Convention, Dr. L. E. Smith, just before the close of the Conference appointed the following committees to serve for the next biennium: Board of Finance—L. E. Smith, E. E. Holland, I. W. Johnson, K. B. Johnson and J. A. Williams; Committee on Evangelism—H. C. Caviness, J. F. Morgan, O. D. Poythress, A. W. Andes and J. W. Barrett; Committee on Education—W. A. Harper, W. W. Staley, E. L. Mofitt, J. G. Truitt and S. L. Beougher; Committee on Social Service—H. S. Hardcastle, F. C. Lester, B. J. Earp and R. L. Williamson; Committee on Temperance—G. O. Lankford, E. M. Carter, J. W. Foster, W. B. Fuller, J. A. Kimball; Committee on Men's Work—J. G. Truitt, W. H. Boone, W. A. Harper, J. M. Darden and J. F. West, Jr. The Convention ended by a special closing service conducted by Rev. F. C. Lester, pastor of the Waverly Christian Church.

Following the close of the Convention, President L. E. Smith declared that at this session some of the hardest problems were faced and solutions effected in the most amicable manner. For the Convention to vote to change its plans and customs that had been in operation for a hundred years to conform with Christian unity without a dissenting vote was little short of marvelous, and that the present session was the most successful and far-reaching in its actions of any session within his memory of its history. He seemed indeed highly pleased and well satisfied with the results.

MISSIONARY RALLY.

A committee from the Woman's Mission Board of the Virginia Valley Central Conference arranged the schedule and program for district rallies as follows:

Group No. 4 meets at Mt. Olivet (G) Friday night, June 1st. This group includes Mt. Olivet (G), Christian Chapel, High Point and Island Ford.

NEWS ITEMS.

BY MRS. W. M. JAY.

The twelfth anniversary of the organization of the Woman's Missionary Society of Holy Neck Church was observed at the social hall on January 31st. Twelve tables, representing the months of the year, were decorated to represent its particular month, and the guests and members were seated according to their birth month. Lovely refreshments were served and each person contributed as many pennies as years old, totaling $30.64.

The president, Mrs. E. T. Holland, read a history of the society from the beginning, showing its growth and the work it had done.

The annual "World Day of Prayer" for missions was observed jointly with the societies of the Holland Christian Church at Holland, Va. A splendid service and one of inspiration to all who attended. The Holy Neck president presided over this meeting.

The annual hen party was held at the social hall on January 30th, with the president in charge. The main feature of the program was an extended questionnaire in the form of a Bible contest between the men and women, the latter winning of course. Refreshments were served to all, and the proceeds amounted to $69.44.

The young people's society is an interesting group of twenty-nine members, all active. The attendance at each meeting is fine, and they have raised more than half of their goal so far with individual gifts. Recently they held a beautiful St. Valentine program, at which they realized $9.50.

The Willing Workers have a membership of twenty-seven and are a live bunch, always meeting their goal.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

Lesson IX—May 27, 1928.

THE WICKED HUSBANDMAN.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Jehovah knoweth the way of the righteous; but the way of the wicked shall perish."—Psa. 1:6.

LESSON: Mark 12:1-12, 13:1-37.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psa. 1.

"And he began to speak unto them in parables"—that is, He illustrated spiritual truth in a concrete way by word-pictures or stories. He told the story of a man who carefully and at some expense prepared a vineyard and then let it out to a husbandman—not a married man, as one pupil once said, but a farmer—and went away into another country. At the appointed time he sent one of his servants to collect his "rent." The husbandman promptly "beat him up" and sent him away. Thereupon, the owner sent another servant, and they treated him even worse. They went even so far as to kill some servants. The climax came, however, when the husbandman killed the son of the owner, and threw him out of the vineyard. There could be but one outcome of such a fiendish policy. The owner came and exacted vengeance, destroying the wicked husbandmen and entrusting the vineyard to others. The story may not mean much to us, but it meant much to the Jews to whom Jesus spake it. "They sought to lay hold on him . . . for they perceived that he spoke the parable against them." It was a scathing denunciation against the Jewish nation and the religious leaders. Its specific application was clear, so clear that he might have suffered bodily injury if the scribes and Pharisees had not feared the people. What did it all mean anyway?

God had bestowed, as it were, particular pains upon the Jewish nation. He had called them from obscurity; He had delivered them from bondage; He had guided them through the wilderness; He had given them for their inheritance a goodly land; He had sent them law-givers and prophets and teachers; He had carefully tended and cultivated what He was pleased to call his "vineyard." He had a right to expect fruitage. But alas, in spite of all His care and attention, the nation had not and was not bearing fruitage in the things that are of the spirit. Instead of humility and sympathy and the spirit of service to other nations, there was pride and bigotry and unresponsiveness, and narrowness, and selfishness. Furthermore, the last indignity was the fact that the nation should reject and even kill the Son, the Father's personal representative. There could be only one outcome. God would, God must bring judgment upon the nation. The words were more than a story to entertain—they were a prophecy that found terrible fulfillment within a few years.

There is, of course, an application of this specific truth. For instance, there is a parable of life here. We are vineyards, differing as vineyards do, in potentialities, but all of us with capacity for fruitfulness. God expects us—He has a right to expect us—to be fruitful; and sooner or later, the rebellious mind and heart, or the unfruitful life must face a day of reckoning. It is required of a steward that he be found faithful. Let every man see to it that he responds to the touch of the Divine Gardener so that flowers that beautify and fruitage that glorifies spring forth from his life.

Then there is the lesson of the progressive destructive power of sin. The love of money is the root of all evil. The thing started with the desire for unlawful gain and the purpose to get that which did not belong to the husbandman. Violence and finally murder resulted. Here is a composite picture of the progressive destructiveness of sin. The trouble with this grim monster is that he will not "stay put." A man cannot lock one sin up in a compartment of his life, nor can he lock sin up in his own life. The thing grows, not only in his life, but it communicates itself to other lives. No man liveth to himself, and no man sinneth to himself.

"The stone which the builders rejected, the same was made the head of the corner." The Jews rejected the Master. They had no place in their scheme of things; that is, no vital place. They would not have Him as their Messiah. They discarded Him even as builders would cast aside a piece of apparently unusable stone. But this same Jesus who was rejected by the chief priests and the elders, the scribes and the Pharisees, the Jews, God hath exalted so that today He is coming into the pre-eminence in all things. One stands amazed at the way in which this humble Galilean has taken the first place among all the personalities in history, and one begins to see the warrant for the statement that at the name of Jesus every knee shall bow and every tongue confess that Jesus Christ is Lord to the glory of God, and that the kingdoms of this world are to become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ.

"And they perceived that He spake this parable against them." It is good preaching when the truth is put into such simple and compelling language that, even though no names are mentioned, men and women realize that that truth has a personal and practical application in their lives. Here, as elsewhere, we call Him Master and Teacher, and do well, for such He is.

Sunday, May 27, 1928.

TOPIC: "What Does it Mean to Me that 'All Men are Brothers'?"—Rom. 15:1-6. (Missionary meeting.)

Some Bible Hints.

There are weak and backward races that we will help to lift if we feel the duty of brotherhood (v. 1).

Brotherhood calls for self-sacrifice. "Not to please ourselves." The weak are to be helped, not exploited as many exploit them (v. 1).

"Unto edifying" means "building up." Every missionary is a builder of character, of ideals, of better living conditions (v. 2).

If we stand for brotherhood and kindness and service, we shall know "reproaches" of those that prefer exploitation, narrowness, and profit (v. 3).

Suggestive Thoughts.

Color of skin has nothing to do with brotherhood. If we cannot see deeper than the skin, we are blind indeed.

What am I doing to help the foreigner? It is up to us to make approaches of friendliness; not to patronize him, but to be human and kind.

I cannot leave my homeplace, but what do I give to support those that are carrying my message of brotherhood to the ends of the earth? Am I showing brotherhood even to them? or forgetting them?

If we live in a State where negroes are numerous, how are we helping them to help themselves? What sort of schools are we giving them? What sort of teachers? What sort of trade training?

A Few Illustrations.

A Boston man, bitterly prejudiced against the Germans, passing through Germany, fell ill and was nursed with great kindness in a German family. That changed his view. Prejudice is misunderstanding.

What will my neighbor think of me if I despise (and show it) his child who is crippled or maybe only ugly? What will the Eternal Father think of me if I despise one of His weakest ones?

As Jesus on the cross said to John, "Behold thy mother," and gave him a sacred charge, so, looking upon suffering, failing men, He says to us, "Behold thy brothers!"

The waves of the sea are many and varied, but underneath them all is the same ocean. Men are but waves on the ocean of life, and they are brothers, united by the one life of God that is in them all.

To Think About.

How may we show brotherhood in our community?

What more can we do for missions than we do now?

How do foreigners in our community spend their time?

PROGRESS IN FOREIGN MISSIONS.

A Successful Adventure in World Friendship.

Miss Martha Stacy and two Japanese friends. She has learned to know the meaning of true Christian friendship which is not hindered by race or color. These young women and many more like them have learned to come to Miss Stacy as a real friend with all their problems and their joys.

Miss Stacy has been supported to the full extent of her salary by the Burlington Christian Sunday School from the beginning of her missionary service seven years ago, and this school rejoices in this great privilege of having so efficient and faithful a representative on the foreign field. Miss Stacy is now living with a Japanese widow and family in a Japanese house at Ishinomaki, in the northern field. With her is Miss Shun Takamashi, a Bible woman. Each has her own work, and is doing it well. If you were to follow Miss Stacy for a single day you would soon discover that to be a real missionary of the kind she has proven herself to be, one needs a strong body and strong mind and a strong spirit. Burlington Sunday School is to be congratulated.

OFFICIAL NOTICE.

All who expect to attend the Virginia Valley Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention, to be held at Mt. Olivet (G), May 31st and June 1st, whether as delegates or visitors, please let me know before Convention time, so that arrangements can be made.

SCOUTING AND THE CHURCH.

BY O. B. GORMAN

Scout Executive of Cherokee District.

The world interest in the Boy Scout movement challenges the intelligent understanding of every one, and yet many people still ask "What is scouting?" "What do Boy Scouts do?"

The Boy Scout idea is a movement rather than an organization. It aims to supplement existing organizations, such as the home, Church and the school, by engaging the boys' leisure energies in outdoor games of activities of cultural and practical value.

The aim of the scout movement is to inculcate character, which, though essential to success in life, is often not taught in the home or school and is too generally left to chance, with deplorable results. The scout movement endeavors to supply the required environment and ambitions through games and outdoor activities, which lead the boy to become a better man, a good citizen.

What Scouting Is.

Scouting is the process of making real men out of real boys by a real program that works. Observing the movement, one finds that the outdoor program develops health, strength, happiness and practical education. By combining wholesome, attractive, outdoor activities with the influence of the scout oath and law, the movement develops character, initiative, resourcefulness and insures good citizenship.

The boy, on becoming a scout, binds himself by the oath:

On my honor, I'll do my best—

1. To do my duty to God and my country and obey the scout laws.
2. To help other people at all times.
3. To keep myself physically strong, mentally awake, and morally straight.

The twelve articles in these scout laws are not prohibitions, but obligations—affirmative rules of conduct. Members must promise to be trustworthy, loyal, helpful, friendly, courteous, kind, obedient, cheerful, thrifty, brave, clean and reverent. What a formula for developing moral and spiritual character! It would be a perfect world if every one exemplified these virtues in daily life.

It is logical for the question to arise, "Do the scouts keep their oath?" A report for the scoutmasters of our various troops show that a large per cent of the scouts keep it in full. It has been the experience of these men that boys are more adherent to their oath and obligations than men. Should the fathers of these boys keep their obligations in full, it is evident that like results would be found in the lives of the boys.

Slogan, "Do a Good Turn Daily."

This wonderful slogan of service has captured the minds and activities of the millions of boys who are or have been members of the Boy Scouts of America. What a great force for good, if every man awoke in the morning looking forward to doing a good turn for some one during the day. One may enter a troop meeting-room, when the good turn reports are being given, and he realizes that scouts are rendering a real unselfish service to others.

The good turn rendered by one of our troops located in Mebane, N. C., will ever live in my memory. The scouts returning home from a meeting noticed a lady and two children in the railway station. She and her children had been put off the train because of insufficient funds to go farther. The scouts arranged for her board and room, working afternoons to pay the expenses. Flowers and books were carried to her and the children each day by the scouts. The boys had joyfully rendered this service for three days, at the end of which time relatives came for the little family. How this lady thanked and loved the

Scouts in the Church.

The boy's first step in scouting has him pledge, by taking the oath, his duty to God. "On my honor, I'll do my best to do my duty to God—." Recognizing that his first duty is to his Creator and Master, scouting is endeavoring to develop the religious nature. Its aim to develop the boy physically, mentally and morally is being realized very widely.

The movement has been developed on such broad lines as to embrace all classes and creeds, and at the same time to allow the greatest possible independence to individual organizations, officers and boys adopting the program.

Scouting has found no better home than the Church, no better leadership than that furnished by the Church. Under Church supervision, the mortality of troops is very small. The Church gives to the Boy Scout program a wholesome environment in which to work, increasing the influence of both. My records show that many boys without Church or Sunday School connections are

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
One of Our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MONDAY.

REAPING BLESSINGS FROM THINGS THAT GO WRONG.

"We know all things work together for good to them that love God."—Rom. 8:28.

Notwithstanding the fact that every phase of life has a meaning, and granting that it is the duty of every one to know that meaning, and in spite of the fact that often when we have done our best, there are many things that go all wrong. These wrongs may have their meaning too. For instance, a machinist once was replacing some machinery; a crane held the engine block over his head. Something said to him, "Get away from here."

He, without knowing why, stepped away, and at the same instant the cables snapped and the whole ton of a steel block fell where he was standing.

A pearl fisher once had the misfortune to drop overboard a most valuable pearl. He went to great expense to go down and hunt for the lost treasure. In so doing, he discovered a bed of pearls.

Often the meaning of misfortune and things that go wrong is that a door of opportunity is opened for a blessing for us; and did the misfortune not come, the blessing would never be revealed.

Prayer.—Our Father, teach us today and every day the meaning of life as it is. Whether in fortunes or misfortunes, enable us to discover the values of life even in its worries. When the clouds hang low over us, show us the blessings of shadows; and if we can live close to Jesus, nothing will be wrong. So we offer ourselves to Thee. Amen.

EXTRACTING BLESSINGS.

"Study to show thyself approved of God a workman that needeth not to be ashamed."—2 Tim. 2:15.

In things wrong, study to discover errors which need not to be made again. Study to discern carelessness where one may be more diligent and painstaking. Study to find your own weaknesses where you may enter into larger possibilities. In fact, all development comes by such a study and an improvement over the past. Things which come lightly are esteemed lightly. But things which come through sacrifice and pain bring most cherished values and keenest joys. This must have been what our Lord meant when He said that the "kingdom of heaven is like a treasure hid in a field."

Therefore, spurn not the sober, humdrum, cloudy, painful, sickening, terrorizing, grievous ways—they may yield life's greatest values.

Prayer.—Our Father, in the midst of life we are in death. Of whom shall we seek for succor but of Thee, and in Thee is our hope and the source of our blessings. Praise be the Lord. May the hard roads of our life turn gold into the fiber of our character. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

LIFE'S FIRST DUTY.

"Seek ye first the kingdom of God and the righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you."—Matt. 6:33.

This is the first law of God, and its purposes is to show how God blesses those who obey Him, that religion is the foundation of life. To follow this law truly protects us, for in so doing He has promised to be a wall of fire around us (Zech. 2:5), and that no evil shall befall us (Psa. 91:10-12), and that for so doing He will give us eternal life and we shall never perish (Jno. 10:27-29).

To obey this law gives us certain and safe guidance, for in so doing He has promised to give us the spirit of truth which will guide us in all truth, and for so acknowledging Him He will direct our paths.

Prayer.—Our Father and our Lord, forbid that we shall be too busy or be tempted to ill temper, or allow anything to keep us from seeking Thee first in the morning and living for righteousness' sake. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE IMPORTANCE OF GODLINESS.

"Thy righteousness has made me wiser . . . Thy word giveth light and understanding to the simple."—Psa. 89:161, 143:11, 119:105.

Thus, every one owes it to himself and to his God to lay the foundation of God in his life.

What costly mistakes we make in life! We can dispose of our lives but once. Dare we to lay our hands upon it and do as we please? When we do, it is like a child running a locomotive—just as wise and just as foolish. The result of this course is disappointments, baffled plans, misinterpretations of life, clouded presence of God, moral breakdowns, spiritual darkness, failure in the highest purpose of life, woe and at last handing over to God the remnant of a misspent life. On the contrary, it is blessed to hunger and thirst after righteousness. It is happiness to go along believing that God is in us and we are His, and that He manifests Himself to us along the way, and there is great satisfaction in knowing His will.

Prayer.—Our Father, though there be days and periods of no vision, no voice, and no burning bush to guide us, may we realize all along the way that Thou art in us the greatest reality of life, and keep us ever following Thee. Amen.

JOSEPH'S FAITH IN GOD.

"Ye thought evil against me; but God meant it unto good."—Gen. 50:15-24.

Only when we read these words against the long and troubled experience of Joseph, do we fully realize their meaning. Betrayed into exile by the jealousy of his brethren; imprisoned by the foul slander of a woman; forgotten in prison by those he had befriended—here was sorrow enough to break the spirit of a man! But he won through to victory. Men may have wondered how he stood it all. He knew. Through all those trying years his heart and hope were kept strong by an unflinching faith in Jehovah. He walked in the confidence of ultimate victory. So long as we follow where the divine will leads, friends may misunderstand, foes may hate, yet this one thing is sure: "No harm from Him can come to me on ocean or on shore."

He who is our Guide is also our Guardian. Having this for our assurance, we know that, though a host should encamp against us, yet we need not fear. A faith like this is not easily achieved. We may well need to pray: "Lord, give me such a faith as this." Then shall we be able to stand, not in the strength of pride (God forbid), but in the strength of the power of Him who is able to make all things work together for good to them that love Him.—Rev. Fred Smith.

Prayer.—By one of the parents, asking that we may emulate the faith of Joseph, and his strong trust in God's goodness and mercy to those who repent and confess their wrongdoing.

SATURDAY.

A CHRISTIAN IN HIS LORD'S EMPLOY.

"He shall be like a tree . . . that bringeth forth his fruit in his season."—Psa. 1:1-6.

Can we not regard these words as descriptive of the Christian busily engaged in his Lord's employ? The tree grows silently, patiently, majestically. It asks no questions. It registers no complaints. It endures the cold of winter and the heat of summer with equanimity. When autumn comes, what does it do? Without the blare of trumpets, without any flourish or claim for glory, it drops its bushels of fruit into your lap, and all without one request of your gratitude, and without one word of complaint if you happen to be unappreciative of the favor bestowed.

The Christian engaged in service is like the tree, bringing forth his fruit in his season. He is silent, patient, thorough in all that he does. His duty is before him, the work of his Lord, and he asks few questions and registers few complaints as he goes about it. Storms of criticism sweep down upon him like wintry gales. Fervent opposition distresses him like the burning rays of the summer sun. He bears it all in silence and in patience.

Finally, when the time is ripe and the opportunity at hand—what does he do? He gives the world, his fellow-men, even his enemy, the best that he has in deeds of kindness, charity, forgiveness, and love—without one request for thanks—without one complaint if men refuse him gratitude and honor.

Beautiful beyond words is the activity of a true Christian in his Lord's employ. But when, oh when, will you and I ever attain to it?—Rev. Gerhard E. Lenski.

Prayer.—By one of the parents, asking that our lives may be so dedicated and directed as to accord with the teachings of Jesus.

SUNDAY.

WAITING UPON GOD.

"Truly my soul waiteth upon God."—Psa. 62:1-5.

A recent writer has these words of confidence: "We believe that, as the ship of earth goes sailing on its way through space, our Father is on the bridge. He guides the vessel and controls the storm." The psalmist, too, had a similar spirit of reliance on the Eternal Father, and hence he exclaimed: "My soul, wait thou only upon God, for my expectation is from Him!"

Can we, as our soul waits upon God, leave everything quietly with Him? Have we that perfect assurance which casts out fear? Are we able to wait and work with patience, while God is developing His far-reaching purposes? Can we meet disappointment without complaint? Is there a sanctuary in our souls? It can be done only through service to our fellow-men through mercy. Whittier was right—

"O brother-man, fold to thyself thy brother;
Where pity dwells, the peace of God is there.
To worship rightly is to love each other;
Each smile a hymn, each kindly deed a prayer."

Prayer.—By one of the parents, asking that we may learn from the Master's example the great lesson of mercy, and give it expression throughout our own lives in deeds of kindness and forgiveness. Ask in His name who gave Himself for us.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

The writer was in Richmond last week attending the Convention, hence no letter. We have never enjoyed a Southern Christian Convention more. The spirit was fine throughout all its sessions. According to a resolution passed during the Convention, from now on the Christian Orphanage will have three sources from which to get its income. First, Sunday School monthly offerings; second, a special Thanksgiving offering; third, individual donations.

All these three offerings will come direct to the Christian Orphanage and will be used by the Orphanage, and does not go to any other board. So when a Church, Sunday School or individual makes an offering for the Orphanage they may rest assured that it will reach the little children it was intended for.

We truly hope that every Sunday School will make a monthly offering for the Orphanage, as we need your loyal support this year. We have more children than we have ever had at any one time, and it takes food and clothes for them. We have never had so many calls to take children as we have had since Christmas, and it seemed that circumstances made it necessary for us to take nineteen of them.

I often think if all our Church people could just come in touch with the many pitiful appeals that are made to me, all the Sunday Schools would double their monthly offerings and we could help more children than we do.

Let every Sunday School in our Convention, every Church, and every individual come to our rescue and help us do a larger work for the Master.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

Kiddies' Korner

MADGE MOFFITT WHITESELL, Editor.

A little prayer for each Kiddie to say to our Heavenly Father:

"May I be a little helper,
Lord, I pray,
Doing little deeds for others
Every day."

Who are our helpers every day, dears? The postman, the ice man, the milk man, and mother and father, and the grocer and baker—what a great many helpers we all do have! But wait a minute—who is the helper who blows a whistle and helps us across the street as we go along to school? You may guess who he is, dears. We must count up all our helpers and say, "Thank you" to the Heavenly Father for them every one. And of course every day that we can, let's tell the helper "Thank you," too.

To every helper I will say, "Thank you very much" today.

Your May-time editor,
MADGE MOFFITT WHITESELL.

SMALL THINGS.

The handclasp that is warm and true,
That says, "I share each joy with you";
The look that says, "I love you well,"
Conveying more than words can tell;
The flower picked by loving hand,
That whispers, "Dear, I understand"—
Small things, perhaps, but O the power
To cheer and bless the darkest hour!

The smile so loving, kind, and true,
That says, "I still have faith in you";
The eyes with tears that overflow
Because my heart is filled with woe;
The simple, honest, heartfelt plea
Of prayer that's offered up for me—
Small things—ah, no! for these alone
Have power to lead me near God's throne.

—Cora M. V. Preble, in Christian Advocate.

SAID ABOUT THE CONVENTION.

Rev. T. E. White:

In my opinion, the recent sessions of the Southern Christian Convention were the best that I have ever attended. The weather was ideal, the hospitality warm, the representation good, the spirit fine, and the plans discussed and adopted wise and far-reaching. The music by the Church choir and the devotional services were of a very high order and greatly helped to keep the Convention in a perfect spirit of harmony.

The merging of Atlanta Theological Seminary with Elon College, Bethlehem College with Piedmont, the unanimous vote to unite with the Congregational Church, plans for larger endowments for our colleges, better support for aged ministers and their widows, and plans to organize the laymen in the local Churches were outstanding features of the Convention.

T. E. WHITE.

Elon College, N. C.

Bro. L. E. Carlton:

Your letter of May 8th received in regard to the Southern Christian Convention. This is to say I enjoyed the Convention very much indeed, and I thought everything passed off nicely, in spirit and unity.

L. E. CARLTON.

Richmond, Va.

Col. J. E. West:

We had a splendid Convention at Richmond. We are making steady progress.

Suffolk, Va.

J. E. WEST.

Chas. D. Johnston:

I think the Southern Christian Convention, held in Richmond last week, was one of the best we have ever had. The Christ-like spirit which prevailed during all its sessions was certainly commendable. I think the program was very constructive and much good will be done.

Elon College, N. C. CHAS. D. JOHNSTON.

Rev. B. J. Earp:

I have been attending the Southern Christian Convention for the past ten sessions, and the one that closed May 4th was by far the best and busiest session that I have attended. Progress and Christian union were certainly in the atmosphere. The Richmond Church, under the excellent leadership of Dr. Ryan, played the part of host, and did it well. The music by the Richmond choir was wonderful. The brethren from the Congregational Church were so much like our people of the Christian Church that it seemed they were a part of the Convention—and they were, and a very vital part, too! Their splendid messages impressed me, and they sounded the note of optimism.

Now, then, let each of our Conferences do their part to carry out the plans and suggestions of our Convention. But in all our planning and zeal for the kingdom of Christ, let us not be unmindful that Jesus spent much time in prayer. The psalmist says: "Wait on the Lord: be of good courage, and He shall strengthen thine heart; wait, I say, on the Lord" (Psa. 27:14).

coming into scout troops affiliated with the Church and that these same boys soon become members of both the Sunday School and Church. It will be a real joy to the leaders of the scout movement when the Church in every community embraces the Boy Scouts in their program of activities, giving to each scout troop a religious leader of sterling character, a model for boyhood.

On December 31, 1925, 11,526 of our 23,121 troops, or 49.8 per cent, were in the Protestant Churches. In the territory which I cover, it has been my desire to see every troop sponsored by a Church. Our records show that 60.7 per cent are meeting in Churches and that our scout-masters are all members of some Church. The executive board and members of the council have been delighted with the results.

Many of our Churches have adopted scouting as a week-day program for their boys, with results that have been pleasing to the pastors and the members of their respective congregations. All the Protestant Churches have recommended the movement as a character-building, citizenship-training and leadership-training agency.

The Northern Baptist Convention, held at Milwaukee, Wis., June 2, 1924, passed the following resolution: "We recognize in the youth of today the future leaders of our Church and the coming citizens of our country, and view with deep concern the alarming increase in juvenile delinquency. We, therefore, urge our Churches to study the needs of the youth of their communities, and we again affirm that in the Boy Scout movement we recognize an agency, non-military in character, which is designed to develop higher life interest, and we commend to the consideration of our denomination agencies the active prosecution of this work."

Scouting needs and solicits the support of the Churches, and may we find the Churches ever ready to help us to preserve our boyhood for a greater manhood, both working together to conserve the moral, intellectual and physical future of the coming generation.

A PRAYER.

BY REV. W. W. STALEY, D. D.

Almighty God, we adore Thee, we praise Thee, we worship Thee as "God over all and blessed forever." The world is not only the source of all supplies for man, but a great school in which generations continue to learn. Here science finds all of its material for human convenience and progress, and beyond the earth "the heavens declare the glory of God and the firmament showeth His handiwork." Colleges are created and operated to aid the young in finding the path that leads to God. They are the depositories of thought, prayer, purpose and money. They are built on the rock of ages, and should honor Him in their pursuit of knowledge. We acknowledge Jesus Christ as the Founder of Christian colleges, as they do not exist where He is unknown.

Our prayer is for all colleges, and especially the colleges of the Christian Church, and most earnestly for Elon and Bethlehem, that they may continue to grow in their buildings, their facilities, their endowments, their students, and their service for the Church and the kingdom. To this end we pray that Thou mayest inspire men and women of means to give liberally, that financial strain may be lifted, that the Church may reap a harvest of men and women who will honor Christ and extend His kingdom in the world. Give those in authority wisdom to direct, to teach, and to inspire holy aspirations in the minds of the young. Remove all hindrances to Christian character, all organized frivolities of a worldly nature, all show and pride. May the spirit of consecrated effort, the courage of honest work, the loyalty of honest hearts, and the "faith that works by love" make diligent study after truth. Help our colleges to find the truth by finding Jesus Christ "who is the way, the truth, and the life."

BAILEY—SPIVEY.

On Saturday, March 17, 1928, George Bernard Bailey, of Wakefield, Va., and Miss Julia Spivey, of Richmond, Va., were united in marriage by the writer at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Cosco Spivey, of Richmond. The ring ceremony of the Christian Church was used and witnessed by only a few close friends of the contracting party.

The bride was dressed in blue flat crepe and with accessories to match. They left immediately for the home of the bridegroom's mother, where a very fine wedding supper was served.

They will make their home in Wakefield, where Mr. Bailey is employed. These young people carry with them the best wishes of their many friends for a happy life. C. E. GERRINGER.

LAWRENCE.

Thomas W. Lawrence, son of Rev. John S. and Annie Covington Lawrence, died April 15, 1928, being 70 years, 5 months and 23 days old. He was married December 24, 1879, to Alice Yow, to which union there are eight surviving children, with nineteen grandchildren. He is survived also by two brothers and three sisters. His wife preceded him in death about six years, having died May 7, 1922.

Later he was married to Mrs. Sarah Leach McNeal, who survives with seven stepchildren. He was a deacon of New Center Christian Church, where he had been a loyal and faithful member since early childhood. A very large congregation attended the burial, and his grave was covered with beautiful flowers. Burial services by the writer and former pastor, assisted by Revs. Cummings and Moffitt. May the Heavenly Father richly bless and comfort the bereaved.

BROWN.

Eli W. Brown died April 23, 1928, aged 82 years, 9 months and 19 days. He was married about fifty-nine years ago to Mary Minerva Flack, and to this union were born eight children, five of whom, with the mother, survive. He was a member of Apple's Chapel for many years, and was faithful to his Church and Lord to death. The burial service was at his Church, conducted by the pastor, assisted by Rev. R. A. Whitten, of Reidsville Christian Church, and was largely attended. A good man has been called to his reward. May the Lord comfort the bereaved.

WADLEY, ALABAMA

A JUNIOR COLLEGE AND HIGH SCHOOL.

Where Opportunity Awaits the Student of Very Limited Means.

GIRL'S DORMITORY.

Bethlehem College, Wadley, Ala., will open September 5, 1927. This institution is a Junior College and High School, which is co-educational, where scholarship ranks high and expense is low. It is thoroughly Christian, absolutely non-sectarian, and vitally American. A school where opportunity awaits the student of very limited means—$68.00 pays all college expenses, except books, board and room. Board, $15.00 per month, and room $3.00; total expenses for a term of nine months, $250.00.

Bethlehem College is training some of the best stock of America for Christian leadership, to be used by the nation and the world. Here is a great challenge and asset for students who wish to prepare themselves to serve in a worth-while way. The work on the new Administration Building is progressing nicely, and we will be able to begin our college work in this building when school opens this fall.

By DR. L. E. SMITH,

President of the Southern Christian Convention.

My Friends:

I am very glad, I assure you, for the privilege of being with you and to have the opportunity of speaking to you on so vital a theme as "Christian Union." For the past months I have been so constantly thrown with Congregationalists that I am beginning to feel quite at home with them. They seem to me to be about as other folks, and the wonder to me is that we have stayed apart all these years. The more we are thrown together, the more vague are our differences and the more evident are our likenesses. Some years ago I had the privilege of uniting a young man and a young woman in the holy bonds of matrimony. A few months later I met the wife and inquired, "How are you getting along?" "Fine," she said; "only, you know, Dick said to me the other day that he was ashamed that he had married me." I said, "What did he mean?" "Oh," she said, "he said that he was ashamed that he didn't propose sooner; that since we were married, he didn't see how he had lived so long without me."

By staying apart all these years, our two Churches have suffered. We have been the losers, and the kingdom has been the loser. In these latter days, it is our high privilege in Christ to lay aside any petty difference that may characterize us and unite our hearts and our resources in an effort to answer the prayer of our Lord, that His own may be one in the earth.

In the first place, then, may we think about—

1. Our mutual needs (our need of each other). The Christian Church needs the Congregational Church, needs its prestige, its strength, its power, its influence. It is a Church with a commendable history, high intellectual standing and great spiritual achievements; a Church with wealth and vision and an honor to any Church, denomination or organization.

And on the other hand, may I say it apologetically and with all humility, the Congregational Church needs the Christian Church. The Christian Church is a Church with broad principles, liberal teaching, fascinating history and record of initiative, surpassed by few if any other Church or denomination. The Christian Church was the first to champion definitely the cause of religious liberty, the first to publish and give to the world an exclusively religious newspaper. It was the first to ordain a woman to the gospel ministry, the first to give to woman the privilege of higher education on an equal basis and with equal advantages with men. It gave to the world our present public school system, through the great intellect and wide vision of one of our sons, Horace Mann. It was the first and only denomination, until recent years, to formulate and give to the world a declaration of Christian Principles upon which the whole Christian world might unite; the first force in the field of education to erect on a college campus a Christian education building dedicated to the sole purpose of instructing young men and young women in the higher things of Christian education.

Yes, the Congregational Church needs the Christian Church; it needs its "religiousness." Whatever else the Christian Church may or may not have, it does have a passion for Christ and for souls—a passion for the winning of men and women to Christ as their own personal Saviour.

The constituency of the Congregational Church is largely in the East and North. It is more of the stern, steady, intellectual type. The constituency of the Christian Church is largely in the South and the Middle West. The Christian Church possesses the qualities of stability and firmness. It is also characterized by its passion and emotion. It has all the characteristics of what may be called a "moving religion," a religion of power.

Very rarely, if ever, will you find in the Christian Church those who question the authority of the Scriptures, the virgin birth or the Deity of Christ. There are some who have drifted in from other denominations who have these tendencies, but on the whole you will find the Christian Church true to the simple teaching of the humble Christ.

On the other hand, there are those in the Congregational Church who are distinctly modernistic in their tendencies and decidedly progressive in their theological thinking. Therefore, I am convinced that the union of the two Churches would be safe and wholesome, each supplying the needs of the other and putting ourselves in a position to be used of God in the presentation of a solid front against the would-be destructive forces that threaten the whole structure of our Christian faith.

I presume that there are none among us but that will agree that the two denominations, working together, can accomplish infinitely more than they could ever accomplish as separate entities. But those of us who agree that union is advisable and would be productive of great good, allow ourselves to be hindered by the age-long question, "Can it be done?" "Is it practicable?" In the next place, then, shall we think of—

was when natural barriers stood between us and kept us far apart, but in these latter days, through the progress of science and good will, the most of these barriers have been swept away and society has been brought together as a whole. The country has been brought to town and the town has been taken to the country. The time was when space separated us as individuals, but inventions have practically annihilated space. With automobiles that travel at the rate of 200 miles an hour; with airplanes that travel at the rate of 300 miles per hour, with radios that make audible the human voice at the ends of the earth; with the television so perfected that when you take down the receiver the person at the other end of the line, whether he be in Washington, New York, Philadelphia, Atlanta, St. Louis, San Francisco, London, Paris or Berlin—he stands right there reflected to you. Distance used to separate us, but it really doesn't any more.

What shall separate us? What shall separate us in our community life? Shall business or profession? Because a man is a lawyer by preference, or a carpenter by trade—does that mean that he is separated from his fellow-man? That he liveth to himself? Or does it mean that he is dependent entirely and absolutely upon his fellow-citizens for his clientele?

What shall separate us? What shall separate us in our social life? Shall intellectual achievements or material possessions constitute a line of cleavage today in human society, breaking up society into classes, cliques or sections? Is not the man of intellectual achievement dependent upon the muscle, the brain and the brawn of the untrained and untutored for his sustenance in life? And is the man of wealth and position independent of the class and the type that is compelled to earn its daily bread by the sweat of its brow?

What shall separate us? What shall separate us nationally? Shall political legislation, national segregation, or racial prejudices break up the larger aspects of human society and stand as effective barriers to the common good of all the peoples who live on the face of the earth? In this advanced age of human interest and common brotherhood, when every man must consider in a certain sense that he is his brother's keeper, when all of our interests—political, social and material—are so interlocked and so interdependent, how can nations or peoples contend that they stand alone?

What shall separate us? What shall separate us in religion? What shall break up the Church into sects, communions or fellowships? Shall denominational bigotry, the feeling that we have included in our program of religious practices, or that we have listed in our category of Christian

After this issue, the acting editor turns the paper back to the real editor, for which, too, there will be real rejoicing.

Bro. Lafayette E. Duck, Sedley, Va., in renewing for THE CHRISTIAN SUN, says that he and his entire family enjoy the paper thoroughly.

Mrs. J. B. Long, Lillington, N. C., who is in her ninety-second year, in renewing for THE SUN, says: "I have read THE SUN almost all my life, and I continue to pray for its success."

Rev. J. W. Fix, Franklin, Va., and Rev. John G. Truitt, Norfolk, Va., are moving in the direction of organizing the men of their Churches according to the plan adopted by the Southern Christian Convention.

The Congregational Conference of the Carolinas, which was held at Asheville, N. C., a week ago, was addressed by Dr. W. W. Staley, Dr. C. H. Rowland and Miss Pattie Coghill, of the Christian Church.

The Congregational Conference of the Carolinas, which met at Asheville recently, voted unanimously for union with the Christian Church, standing as one man when the vote was taken. Truly the spirit of union is in the air.

Rev. A. W. Andes continues to do effective work for THE CHRISTIAN SUN. He has recently sent out fifty personal letters to members of his Church urging them to subscribe for the paper. Will other pastors take due notice thereof and govern themselves accordingly?

Rev. J. Clyde Auman, who is spending his furlough at Enfield, N. C., is planning to attend Elon College commencement. Bro. Auman is a missionary of the Methodist Protestant Church to Japan and is president of a college in Japan numbering more than 1,200 students.

Dr. J. Edward Kirbye, who is a member of the executive committee of the board of trustees of the Atlanta Theological Seminary, telegraphs that on May 15th the trustees of the seminary voted favorably to an affiliation with Elon College and gave their executive committee authority to act.

Dr. J. O. Atkinson returned to North Carolina on last Saturday, and, after visiting friends in Wake County, went to Virginia. He is scheduled to reach the college and his office on the 19th. Dr. Atkinson is reported to be completely restored to his health, for which we rejoice.

The Riverdale Christian Church, Rev. Edward B. Flory, pastor, celebrated "Children's Week" from May 13th to 20th. The program was a most attractive one, and no doubt wrought wonders in acquainting the people with their own children. Bro. Flory is certainly a forward-looking pastor.

President Harper announces that the quota of $36,750 for the year just closing, provided for Elon College in the benevolence program of the Southern Christian Convention, has been raised in full. Truly does the Christian Church believe in our college. Let us all rejoice and let us give thanks to God for the generous men and women who made this achievement possible.—Managing Editor.

The Elon College commencement begins on Saturday night, the 26th of May, with a musical program. It concludes on Tuesday, May 29th, at noon, with the address by Governor McLean. The baccalaureate sermon is to be preached on Sunday morning at 11 o'clock by Dr. Jason Noble Pierce, pastor of President Coolidge's Church, Washington, D. C.

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Valley of Virginia Conference will meet May 31st and June 1st, at Olivet (G) instead of at the time formerly announced. The president, Roy A. Larrick, writes: "Rev. J. G. Truitt, of Norfolk, Va., will be with us during our convention and give us an address on Thursday afternoon, May 31st, and Thursday night, and one on Friday afternoon, June 1st." Please note the dates and send a full delegation.

The board of trustees of Bethlehem College met on May 18th. Every member of the board was earnestly urged to be present by the chairman, Bro. J. W. Payne, when he issued the call, "since we shall have some momentous problems facing the college pertaining to its future that demand our immediate attention, a challenge involving opportunity as well as responsibility." That is well put, and here is hoping that the Bethlehem board of trustees measure up fully to their great responsibilities.

From Sunbury, N. C.: "I am delighted to report that everything is progressing at Damascus Church under the capable leadership of our pastor, Rev. E. B. White, of Dendron, Va., who is supplying for us. Our Young People's Society is growing and we have most interesting programs. Our Sunday School is doing just fine under the leadership of our superintendent, Mr. J. E. Corbitt. A large congregation heard our pastor's beautiful and inspiring message on 'The Influence of Christian Womanhood.'"—A. H.

President L. E. Smith, of the Southern Christian Convention, gave an address at the recent Washington convention of the Congregational Church, known as "The Middle Atlantic States Conference." Dr. Jason Noble Pierce, in writing of Dr. Smith's address on that occasion, says: "He made a masterful speech in behalf of union. He carried his hearers by storm and received a well-deserved ovation at the close of his address. Our formal vote was unanimous and heartfelt in recommendation of union."

The Alamance County Chorus gave its first public performance at Elon College on Thursday night to a capacity audience. It was assisted by Marie Montana, soprano soloist of the Metropolitan Opera Company, New York City. Prof. C. James Velie was the director of the chorus. He has rendered great service to the cause of music in the county by his tireless labors in training this mass chorus of 150 voices. More and more the people of Alamance County are being linked up with the college through the splendid work that Prof. Velie is doing in his music department.

Rev. E. B. White writes: "In this modern age, is not the present tendency of the Church to over-organization resulting in disorganization and dissipation of its spiritual energies? It seems to me that we have put too much dependence on organization, machinery, buildings, campaigns, conferences, etc.; therefore, we are in danger of losing sight of the absolute need of the third person of the Trinity—the blessed Holy Ghost—before we can accomplish anything to the glory of God. One trouble with us is that we talk money too much. My own conviction is, if the Churches will increase the spirituality of their members, the rest will take care of itself. We need more of the power of the Holy Spirit. It is for lack of the anointing of the Holy Spirit that there is so little power in the Churches and so little effect in the preaching of the gospel. It takes more than an honorary degree to make a preacher a power for God."

The board of control of Franklinton Christian College met on the 15th of May and found that institution in excellent condition so far as its current expenses are concerned. The board re-elected the faculty for the new year and added an additional professor to teach Bible and religious education. Last year the school enrolled 156 students and was able to meet its current expenses entirely. The dormitory remains unfinished. Eleven were in the graduating class. Two cottages were ordered erected on the school grounds for professors. Franklinton is doing a fine work for the Christians of the colored race.

HOPEWELL CHURCH GROWING.

It was my privilege to go from the Richmond Convention to Hopewell and spend the first Sunday in May with our people there. This was my first visit to them and was a delightful occasion and, I trust, profitable as well. The pastor, Bro. Nash, preached a very interesting sermon Sunday morning, using as his text the golden text of the Sunday School lesson, Mark 10:25; topic, "Service." The writer talked to the combined adult Bible classes and preached for them at the night service; subject, "Preparation." We had a very good attendance, and much interest was manifested in all the services.

They are using a good hall while their new house of worship is in process of erection. They have a splendid organization of about seventy members, and they are real live folks, full of energy, enthusiasm and zeal for the Master's service, and they are making things go. The pastor is wide awake, full of zeal and consecration and is a gifted speaker. He teaches a Bible class, preaches both morning and night on Sundays, conducts the midweek prayer-meeting, exercises general oversight of all the enterprises of the Church, including the building program, visits the sick and does other pastoral and community work.

They have a nice new building in process of erection, in a splendid location, the work being well under way and progressing nicely. The structure is up and shut in, and it is indeed a strong and well-built house. They will have a splendid auditorium, pastor's study, choir section, belfry and tower and three or four other Sunday School rooms, well arranged and having folding doors as partitions, so that all of them may be thrown open to the auditorium when needed.

At this time they have eight classes in Sunday School, and an attendance of more than one hundred members. I was delightfully entertained in the home of Bro. W. T. Newman, a brother of our trio of Newman preachers, and he and I took dinner with the pastor on Sunday. Bro. Nash, the pastor, is a young man and has a very interesting family. His daughter is pianist for the Sunday School and Church services. I also had the pleasure of meeting Bro. Newman's daughter, Miss Ruth Newman, who is a woman of charming personality and is doing a great work as supervisor and nurse in the Hopewell hospital. I hope these people will soon have their Church completed and that the work will go forward in the Master's way.

MOTHER OF ZEBEDEE'S CHILDREN.

BY REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, Preacher.

"Then came to Him the mother of Zebedee's children, with her sons, worshiping Him and desiring a certain thing of Him."—Matt. 20:20.

Mothers by the hardihood of their service in the world have made this day one with a deeper meaning than mere sentiment, and more powerful than poetry. Mothers are the soul of sentiment and the subject of poetry, and we are tempted to divulge in that lighter and prettier side of our thinking today. But the women themselves will not stand for it. It is a day when mothers are measuring their lives by the service they may render their children and the world. Therefore, we shall elect to leave the poetry and tears for another time and see instead what the Scriptures have to say about one of the most noble mothers that ever lived.

A little sober, second thought will not make us feel so comfortable if we have been in that group who like to chide Salome for asking high places for her sons in Jesus' kingdom. It is never such an easy thing to defame the heart and purpose of a true mother, even though she may go too far in her efforts for the advancement of her children. Salome's record is a good one. (1) She gave Jesus her two sons (Mark 1:20); (2) she gave Him of her wealth (Mark 15:41); (3) she herself followed Him from Galilee, through Perea, into Judea, and to the very cross and tomb (Matt. 27:55, 56); (4) she ministered unto Him (Mark 15:41); (5) she was His aunt (John 19:25); (6) she worshiped Him (Matt. 20:20); (7) she placed her confidence in Him for the supreme needs of her family (Matt. 20:20). In fine, she served Him greatly in His daily work, followed Him completely to His death, and ministered most beautifully to His memory. She was just as faithful to Him when her requests were not granted as ever she was before. Nothing daunted; if she could not lead her sons to His right and left hands, she would lead them to His very bosom. If she could not place John upon His throne by His side, she would place his head upon His breast. And wherever the Saviour went, in His inner circle of three, He always chose to carry James and John. The world stands today in plenty need of mothers like unto Salome. How did she do it?

1. "Then came to Him the mother . . . with her sons." I like to refresh myself and my memory with those words. More beautiful words can scarcely be found in Holy Writ. "Then came to Him the mother . . . with her sons." I delight to read that it was true two thousand years ago, and to know that for thousands of mothers today it is eternally true. A larger percentage of the world's best mothers have followed Jesus down across all these centuries; but with all their growth in grace, and ripe experience in Christian conduct, there is nothing more beautiful that they can do than to come to Jesus with their sons. God has blessed the whole world with devout mothers bringing their sons to Jesus. What would the world be worth today if many mothers had not followed the example of Salome, the mother of Zebedee's children. Pardon me when I say my own mother brought a James and a John into the world, and brought them both to Jesus. Your mothers have brought you to Him. Two of the supreme things a mother can do for her child is to bring him into the world and to bring him to God.

2. "Worshiping Him" is a participial phrase which easily portrays the secret of the whole business. To the north of her homeland in Mesopotamia and Assyria they were bowing down to their idols; to the east, in Babylon, they were worshiping their sensuous gods; to the south, in Egypt and Arabia, they gave their devotions to pagan deities; and in her own country they were rendering a lip-service to Jehovah of hosts; but Salome had found in the Saviour of men that which drew forth her complete devotion and worship. And when this Christ, so human, so near, so helpful, established such a kingdom as she felt and knew that He would establish, she wanted her sons to have a place in its privations, heartaches, and triumphs. She wanted her sons to be in very deed and truth "co-workers together with God." She worshiped so that while she knew He was the poorest of the earth's poor, and often despised and shunned, she wanted her sons to engage with Him in the business of making the world a good place in which to live.

Yes, the mother of Zebedee's children worshiped Jesus. Who or what does the mother of your children worship? James and John could henceforth say in every hour of spiritual depression and doubt, "My mother worshiped Jesus." Whom will your child infer from your life and daily living you worship? Have you, mother, come to Jesus with your fine sons on your right and left, and asked Jesus to transfer them to His right and left? Because Salome knew and loved Jesus in a worshipful sort of way she was anxious to have an unbreakable relationship formed between her sons and Him. Has your knowledge and love for Him brought you to that same divine desire?

If we worship gold, or gain, or pleasure, or parties, our children will bring us down in sorrow to our graves; but there is a greater evil still, for they will wreck and ruin their own lives. Our gospels teach an inward joy and outer pleasure. Both are right and necessary to a well-rounded life. Social pleasures certainly have their place, and friendly parties the sanction of the Saviour; but sometimes I am forced to wonder if some young mothers aren't waiting for their pulpit to call their attention to the fact that they are taking pleasure too seriously and the training of their children too lightly. It is true that Jesus went to the marriage feast. But, O mothers of your precious little babies, He did not stay there! He went farther by far. He went to the sick-room, the sin-ridden hearthside, the paths and lanes of daily toil, and to the mart and market. He made the world a class-room for serious instruction in the matters of service and sacrifice, and daily He practiced the principles of His teachings. He entered into pleasure upon occasion, but His business was saving the world. Mothers, you will hold a corner of the world on your lap tonight as your little darling looks up into your face. Betray it not. Worship Jesus, as Salome did, and let that little one see that you do.

3. "And desiring a certain thing of Him" is the remainder of our text. Salome desired the best for her sons that Jesus Christ had to offer. For the life of me, I can see nothing wrong in that. Her goal was sufficiently great. Her idealism for her sons were like unto it. Thank God for mothers with the highest idealism for their sons and with the practicable impulse to help them secure it. It was not gold she sought for her fine young sons; it was God. It was not satiety which she sought for her sons; it was service. It was not something she sought for herself, but like a true mother she sought something for those whom God had given her to love and succor until her dying day.

Maybe you think she asked a vainglorious thing! Maybe you think she overstepped reason in her request! Maybe you think her sons were abetting her in a bargain that was bad! But when you see how gently the Saviour answered her: "What wilt thou?" and when you follow up the picture that ensued you may change your opinion. "Grant that these my two sons may sit the one on Thy right hand and the other on Thy left in Thy kingdom." "Are ye able to drink of the cup that I shall drink of, and to be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with?" How I love to contemplate the pause and pallor that followed this searching question. Jesus knew and loved these two fellows who had followed Him from the very first, unheralded day of His earthly ministry. He knew the sons and the mother. "Are ye able?" And I see the courage of a little woman leaping up in her sons; I see a quick, steady look of love fall upon her, and the eyes of the Saviour brought back the heroic answer: "We are able."

Did they answer too much? Maybe the Saviour thought they meant it. Not one single time when the roll of the disciples is made do we find them absent. Sometimes we find eleven, sometimes ten, sometimes seven, and sometimes three; but never, never do we find James and John missing. Call the roll in the death chamber, on the Mount of transfiguration, or at Gethsamene, and behold they are there. Did they answer too much? John and James were indispensable at the Lord's Supper, at the midnight hour, and on the Mount of Calvary. If not to sit at His right hand on His throne, what more glory than that of being His right-hand man in the hour of His death! Love found its way, and when John was needed he was near. Did they ask too much? Turn to the twelfth chapter of the Acts of the Apostles. We will find that the first disciple to lay down his life for Jesus' sake was James. "Are ye able?" "We are able." Thank God they must have meant it. Jesus honored their mother, and Jesus honored them—"James, show the twelve how to die," and James did it; "John, show the world how to live," and John did it. Salome's love and devotion went not unrewarded, and Salome's prayer went not unheard.

Mothers, stand by—stand by with your love; stand by with your courage; stand by with your true worship of Jesus Christ. And if you do not lead us to the right and left of the Saviour's side you will at least lead us to His bosom and His cross! What more can we desire? What more would you have? The world is waiting for mothers who will fulfill our text in their own lives, and sons and daughters who will have the courage of James and John, sons of Zebedee and servants of Jesus Christ.

A great many of our ministers and layworkers are interested in titling. Bro. C. J. Strickland, P. O. Box 27, Elizabeth Station, Charlotte, N. C., has printed a very attractive tithe's pledge card. Any one who is interested in receiving one of these pledge cards gratis should apply to Bro. Strickland at the above address. It is a beautiful card, and costs 5 cents to mail it. In sending in the request for the card, be sure to send 5 cents for mailing. If any of our workers should wish to have one of these handsome cards framed, Bro. Strickland has arranged for the same to be beautifully framed at a cost of seventy-five cents each, including wrapping and postage up to the fifth zone. Bro. Strickland also is greatly interested in evangelistic singing, and any one of our pastors who wishes assistance would do well to write him for engagements.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

GRATEFUL.

THE SUN's editor is grateful beyond words—first of all, to a loving Heavenly Father, through whose goodness and guidance he has been brought back to health and full strength and returned to his desk and his tasks, full of delightful anticipation of working with a new strength.

And then, secondly, he is grateful to President W. A. Harper, who, even with his multitude of duties, most cheerfully did the work of editing THE SUN and the many other duties pertaining to the office of editor and Mission Secretary. His strong hand lifted with ease many burdens from the editor's shoulders and helped to make life and the rest in Florida light and agreeable. The associate editors have done their part, and so the paper has not suffered but has prospered and improved under the directing hand and care of these abler men and minds.

Third, we are grateful to our life-long friend and brother, J. M. Darden, Suffolk, Va., who, though engaged in an extensive business in eleven different States and reaching out into many avenues of life, voluntarily turned aside from many of his own personal and business tasks and duties to carry on the work as Mission Secretary. How well he did this work, results show and will show, for he carried into it his fine enthusiasm, his business ability and a real love for our mission work. A real brother in the flesh and the spirit could not have been more considerate and more helpful.

And then, in the fourth place, we are grateful to the many friends who, in the goodness of their heart, wrote letters of kindness and cheered us along the way and assured us of their interest and care for our health and welfare.

And, finally, no resume of our sources of gratitude would be complete without putting in the list the Florida Sanitarium, Orlando; good and skillful Dr. Anderson; spiritual-minded and brotherly Elder Waldorf; considerate and congenial business manager Mr. Hudson, and the aids and assistants who are literally giving their life to making the way of the sick more tolerable and bringing back to health and strength those who need the ministry of healing.

It is good, indeed, to be back strong, healthy and happy, and the heart overflows not only with gratitude to any and all who may be named or unnamed, but grateful for the sheer joy of prospective and promised pursuits, plans and purposes in making whatever contribution may be within our reach to the enlargement and the building up of the kingdom of our Lord. RELATION OF CHURCH DEPARTMENTS.

There are five major departments in the Southern Christian Convention—(1) missions, (2) education, (3) publications, (4) orphanage, (5) superannuation. These departments need to be emphasized by Conferences, taught by pastors, and loyally studied by members of the Church. The above list gives these departments in the order of their importance in their relation to the Christian Church.

Missions stand first in the propagation of the gospel and the salvation of souls. The initial command of Jesus to the apostles was, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature" (Mark 16:15). He sent them forth to this primary task. That command of the Master is in full force till every creature has heard the gospel. That is the biggest task of the Church today and needs the sympathy, the prayers and the financial support of all the members of the Church. God calls missionaries, but they cannot go unless they are sent, and it requires money to send them to distant lands. It is one thing to be regenerated (born again); it is quite another thing to serve God by supporting His cause.

Education follows in the train of missions. Wherever the gospel has been preached there has sprung up in the minds of men a longing for knowledge. Jesus was the great Teacher, and He said: "Learn of me." Educational institutions spring up in Christian lands as naturally as grass in the spring. Schools, colleges, seminaries, public schools follow the gospel, and Sunday Schools study the Bible and play and sing His praise. Hymnology is unknown where the gospel has not been preached.

Publications naturally spring up among educated people. Christianity has opened the eyes of mankind, invented the printing press, sent out the Bible in seven hundred languages, and carried the work of the Church into the Christian home. The Church paper keeps all other departments before the minds of the Church, and they could hardly live without its help. The crops would perish without the sun, and all the departments of the Church would die without THE CHRISTIAN SUN. The Sunday School literature goes into the Churches and homes and into the minds and hearts of all. Every Christian family needs and should subscribe for THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

The Orphanage is a philanthropic institution, cares for fatherless and helpless children, shows what Christianity wants to do for orphans, and develops in men the benevolent spirit through Christian sympathy, and manifests the mind of Jesus, who said: "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of God" (Mark 10:14).

Superannuation undertakes to care for aged and infirm ministers who have worn themselves out in the work of the Church, and dependent widows and children of such ministers who have passed to their reward. The demands upon ministers for help and the meager salaries paid them while active, leave little room for saving enough to support them and their dependents when age or death puts an end to their active service. When they give their lives to the Church, the Church should care for their lives to the end.

These departments are related to the Church and to one another like the members of the body are related to the body and to one another. "The body is not one member, but many. If the foot shall say, because I am not the hand, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body? And if the ear shall say, because I am not the eye, I am not of the body: is it therefore not of the body? . . . Now are they many members, yet but one body" (1 Cor. 12:14-20). The Church is the body of Christ, and all these departments are members of His Church. To support one department and not all of them is to be a one-sided member. No one of them could exist alone, and no one of them could be its best unless they are in harmony and share equally in the support they receive from the Churches. It is so easy to be a ear member, or an eye member instead of being a body member. Keep all the departments before the Church and support all of them with faith in God and loyal liberality.

THE MISSION OFFERING.

We find on our desk a list of the Churches that have already taken the mission offering. While this list is inspiring, there are quite a number of Churches yet that have not taken the offering, but we are sure will take it. The Mission Board is trying to carry on, and has obligations that must be met, and we wish that every pastor knew the need and the opportunity. We are advised from our General Board that the work as planned for this year must be materially cut down unless the Churches take the offering and there are larger returns than have so far come in. We have advice that unless returns come in more rapidly in the next few weeks than in the past, it will be impossible to return Rev. D. P. Barrett and wife to Porto Rico and that the work in Japan will suffer a proportionate tragedy and backset. To us, this is a source of heart-rending regret. Brother Barrett has been long on the field and has proven himself one of our best and most efficient missionaries. Not to return him to the work which he loves and to which he has given twenty-seven years of his life would be a tragedy indeed, both to Brother Barrett and to the work on the field. Other work and obligations suffer likewise, and we only mention this as one. Surely our pastors, one and all, will take the offering before the mission period is out, June 30th. J. O. A.

CHRISTIAN UNION.

doctrine certain necessary essentials not held or taught by others that we must hold or propagate, or the whole kingdom of God will come to naught in the earth?

What shall separate us in our religious life? Shall our denominational holdings? Have we not come to the time when the riches of the kingdom are of far greater import than a few paltry dollars invested in the material effects of the world? Shall denominational positions, offices held by individuals? Is the Church to continue to cleave the kingdom of God for which Christ died? What shall separate us? Shall the misunderstandings and misgivings and malice and hatred and strife and the sins of the past centuries continue to project their poisonous fangs on down into this far-away time and to crucify the Christ anew and put Him to open shame?

What shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation or distress or persecution or famine or nakedness, or peril or sword? "For I am persuaded that neither death nor life, nor angels nor principalities, nor powers nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature shall separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

What shall separate us from the love of God? Has any one the right to corner on the love of God? If we all love God and are in the love of God, are not we one in God and brethren in Christ? And if we are one in God and brethren in Christ, who shall separate us? What shall separate us? Shall documents or declarations or organizations or pronouncements or ecclesiastical utterance or councilmanic actions or imaginery denominational lines? If we have the love of God in our hearts, if we are one in Christ, aren't all other things that would have a tendency to separate us matters of minor importance and of nonconsequential consideration?

The first and foremost thing in religion is to find Christ and make Him to be, not only our Redeemer, but our Lord and our Master; then all things else will more easily come into harmony and cease to divide us. Of course, we will not all agree, and those of us who do agree will not always agree on all things. But should our disagreement on minor things disrupt our fellowship with one another and our common communion with God? The leaves on the trees do not all agree in form and tints, but they remain on the same tree and furnish shelter and protection from sunshine and rain. The strings on the violin or the notes on the piano do not all make the same tone, but when brought in tune with the master-key they make perfect harmony and send out music to the delight of the soul. We all have our opinions, our desires, our hopes, our ambitions, and in detail they differ, but they issue out of our hearts. When our hearts shall have been touched by His spirit and brought into harmony with His heart, the Master-heart, then there shall be harmony in our fellowship and we shall be one in Him in deed and in truth.

As we consider the positions occupied by the two denominations that we represent, there are no evident differences between us, and no rational reasons why we should stand apart and continue to function as two separate bodies. Several months ago I had the privilege of sitting in a mid-western city with two representatives of the Congregational Church and three representatives of the Christian Church, for the purpose of ascertaining the differences and the likenesses of the two denominations. We listed the things for which the Congregational Church stood and undertook to practice. We listed the things for which the Christian Church stands and endeavors to practice. Then we struck a balance, made the comparison and found that we differed in one thing—in one thing only, and that was the name. One was Congregational, the other was the Christian Church. Now the Christians are Congregationalists and the Congregationalists ought to be Christians. I am ready, and I believe that we all are, to hyphenate the two names and make them one. Aren't we big enough and Christian enough to put it in?

What shall separate us? Are we not one in spirit, one in faith, one in ambition, one in hope, one in doctrine, and one in purpose? Why not be one in fact? And when we shall have taken the step that makes us one, that puts us beyond the question of narrow denominationalism and brings us into the clear atmosphere of Christian fellowship, who can tell, who can begin to estimate the far-reaching effect upon the religious world and the kingdom of God in the earth? "Can it be done?" Someone says, "Aren't you afraid of the results?" Did some one question?

"Come, brave souls, men of God, and build me a Church," saith the Christ.

"Build me a Church," the Master said;
"A Church that I'll be proud to head.
Build it with people of every creed,
Build it to serve the world's true need;
And when the corner-stone is laid,
Call it the Church of the unafraid."

Shall we build the Church, as the Master said?
Shall we keep His spirit at the head?

Afraid of none, as free as air,
Attuned to joy, breathing our prayer,
The friend of each soul God has made—
Shall it be America's Church of the unafraid.
—Henry R. Rose.

BUILDINGS OR LIVING MONUMENTS.

By J. O. WIGGS.

As I go from place to place and view the wonderful temples erected to the worship of God and hear the constant cry of more buildings for religious education, I pause to wonder. What does it all mean? Is there a real desire to honor God and lead His children to know Him, "Whom to know aright is life"—or does it represent a desire for display and an outward show in an attempt to represent an inward grace, or does it represent possibly "a zeal for God but not according to knowledge"?

That there is great need for more and better facilities for worship and teaching cannot be denied, but can the facilities take the place of human hearts, earnestly and intelligently leading others into an understanding relationship to God.

Many of the so-called modern religious education plants are provided with every conceivable facility for the purpose intended, except the one which seems to me to be the most important—properly trained and consecrated teachers to guide the youth in ways of righteousness. The machinery is there, but, with no one with knowledge of its efficient operation, it is worse than useless. Usually the Church has shouldered the burden to, or rather beyond, the limit of its financial ability and no additional funds are available to provide the necessary workmen. It is not surprising to find, as I have, that in proportion to its capacity, the modern religious education plant is far behind the small and over-crowded plant in the number reached by its ministrations; plants having enrollments of only a few hundred, whereas many of the small Churches with practically no modern equipment are vastly overcrowded.

Often the modern plants are constructed without a community survey to determine whether such a building is needed in that particular location. More children are found in the newly developing residential sections where money is scarce, but the congregations with stronger finances are found in the older sections, where children are few.

When Robert Raikes saw the needs of the children of Gloucester, he set about to utilize such equipment as was available, but employed teachers, paying them for their services. Out of his efforts developed, not the present-day Sunday School, but the public school system. He used Sunday because it was the only day available to reach the children. He used biblical material because it was the Book, and about the only book from which teaching material could be obtained. His purpose was to utilize the time, which was going to waste, in teaching children those things which would make them better citizens.

In the development, the Raikes' idea and the public school idea have consistently placed the teacher first, then materials and methods and these have created the demand which is only now reaching fruition in the more efficient educational plant.

When David was minded to build a temple to God, Nathan was at first favorably impressed; but after prayer and meditation, God revealed unto him that the time was not propitious—the king and people were not ready for it, and the project was delayed. No doubt, David was hurt by this thwarting of his plan, but a greater temple resulted.

The early Christians worshiped and taught wherever they could find an audience, and, while suitable buildings might have been advantageous, not until the Church became established in the hearts of men were buildings erected for worship. Even to this day, many congregations are worshipping without adequate buildings. Primitive men worshiped long before the tabernacle or tent by simply erecting an altar out in the open or on the hilltop. And it seems that the Master had this in mind when He spoke to the woman at the well, "Neither in this mountain nor at Jerusalem, but in spirit and in truth."

This is not a plea against the modern religious education plant, but rather for putting first things first, that the work of the kingdom may go forward in an orderly way, developing in its proper time, perhaps a far more efficient plant in which to work, after we have consecrated men and women trained to know how to operate it. Just as we pay our preachers to lead us in worship; just as Raikes employed the most efficient teachers available; just as the founders of our public school system employed and developed efficient teachers, I believe it to be our duty, yea our privilege, to employ and compensate the most efficient teachers and leaders for our schools of religion.

History records that the earliest teachers were the priests or religious leaders, not only of religion but secular subjects as well. And it has not been so long since the village pastor was also the schoolmaster, having both the educational and spiritual oversight of the community. I recall in my early youth such instances and its counterpart. My day school teacher for many years, also my Sunday School superintendent, a godly woman whose hair was white and body frail with age, but with an alert mind and such a kindly disposition that the children delighted to be in her presence.

There are in our public and private schools many thoroughly consecrated teachers, whose services could be enlisted in our Church Schools if they were approached in a way which would indicate our sincerity and that we really meant to be about the business of the King. The teachers themselves need the leavening influence of specific religious effort, and it is needless to say that we need them. Neither can we afford to cheapen the gospel message by asking them to give this additional service without compensation. We pay our preachers and singers and our teachers of secular things; why not the teacher of the most vital of all truth?

Many of them are serving without compensation, but if it is right to pay the preacher or choir to preach and sing to us who ought already to know, is it not more than right to pay for teaching our children who know not?

Perhaps they might object to serving under directors or superintendents of a lower standard of intelligence, but the school teachers have faced this problem under the old system of political supervision and this can be overcome. "The laborer is worthy of his hire," and if our gospel is what we claim for it, it is worth paying for.

Instead of spending thousands of dollars in erecting empty monuments of brick and stone, why not turn our money to account by putting it into living monuments who will erect for the next gen-

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Many in these days are complaining of poor business and slack work. Men and women, too, say: "We cannot get work; times are dull." This is not a local condition, but it is a United States condition. Action and reaction are said to be equal. When labor and business mount to abnormal heights there will always follow a drop in both. Again, it is said that presidential campaign years are always dull. If this is true, there must be reason for it. Here are two reasons for such depression: the party that seeks control of government tries to make it appear that everything is running down under the present administration. The effort is to make the people believe that a change of party control of government would revive business; and business is the main subject in all political movements. If the outside party can convince the public that hard times is the result of maladministration, the tide may turn at the polls. The party in power gets timid in the field of investments and larger programs for business, lest the administration might change and upset larger business plans. These two forces in the two parties—one controlled by ambition and the other by fear—unite to make dull times. Big corporations hesitate and wait to see what the result of the election will be before enlarging or extending their plans. The nation is in such a period at the present time. What the nation needs is to become more religious and less political.

There is one field where workers are always needed and where willing workers can always find work for full time and good pay. The vineyard of the Lord has work for all. This kingdom has never been overcrowded, and no worker has ever been turned away. No faithful worker in the Church of Jesus Christ has ever been fired or gone without pay. Jesus said, "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work" (John 5:17). In the parable, it is said, "Son, go work today in my vineyard" (Matt. 21:28). "The heavens declare the glory of God and the firmament showeth His handiwork." Idleness in the Church is self-chosen. There are so many lines of work in the Church that all may find a place to serve. The Sunday School, the prayer-meeting, the regular Church services, the afflicted, the poor, the wayward, those in jail, and the work is increasing all the time. No member of the Church can say, "There is nothing for me to do." If a person who is out of work will stop to think that doing nothing is the hardest and most unsatisfactory experience in life, he will be able to see why so many people in the Church are dissatisfied. Real work in the Church by all the members would correct all the evils in the Church. Jesus kept busy doing simple service. In the world, position counts; in the kingdom, service. In the world a man who rules is great; in the kingdom of grace, the man who serves is great.

The question of pay looms large in the work of the world, and when a worker loses his job he loses his pay. God never fails to pay those who work for Him. "The laborer is worthy of his hire (reward)" (Luke 10:7 & 1 Tim. 5:18). "The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord" (Rom. 6:23). This challenge merits investigation: has any faithful worker in the vineyard of the Lord ever lacked for bread and clothes? Has any faithful child of God at work in His Church ever lacked friends? If such can be found, please report their names and location to THE SUN.

ELON LETTER.

Northwestern University, at Evanston, Ill., has long been known as one of the strongholds of education of the Methodist Episcopal Church. It has produced its quota of great preachers, missionaries, bishops and other general officials for this great denomination. It has grown in wealth, in student attendance, and in educational influence and prestige.

But Northwestern has its problems.

The university is situated in the Middle West, as I have said, and there has been a general influx of foreign people, with ideals likewise foreign to the best American traditions. The people who have come in such great numbers from foreign lands have not looked upon the Sabbath as a day of rest and worship, but rather as a day of jollity, not to say frivolity. They have been accustomed to what is known as the "Continental" Sabbath, and they have been restive as students in institutions like Northwestern that have insisted on what we generally know as a "Puritanic" Sabbath.

Recently there was a meeting of the students of the university in the form of a general assembly open forum to suggest certain progressive measures, as they styled them, to the university authorities. Some of the things that they advocated as essential to their happiness and enjoyment were the following: the allowing of young women students to be out until 1 A. M.; tennis games on Sunday afternoon and dances on Sunday night; "Dutch lunches"—a special arrangement by which a young lady may be permitted to ask a young man to go with her to a hotel, she paying her bill and he paying his, etc.

On the other hand, this student assembly voted to reinstitute daily chapel which two years ago it had requested the faculty to discontinue. It has tried for two years voluntary chapel services and found the plan to be a failure and has requested the faculty to reinstitute compulsory chapel each day. They, however, put the desirability of chapel on the ground that it gives students a chance to get together and talk—a flippant reason and one unworthy of the student body of a great Christian institution.

Now, there will be those who will hold up their hands in horror when they read this catalogue of silly things which these Northwestern students are advocating. We will not, however, get anywhere by criticizing and blaming students for such matters. There is only one remedy, and that is the method of conference between representatives of the student body and representatives of the faculty in which matters of common interest such as these are will be fully and frankly discussed, using the experience of the past as a starting point and keeping constantly in mind the ideals and objectives of each particular institution.

Student bodies are without a sufficient basis of experience to know what is best in matters involving moral, ethical and social customs. They are high-minded and anxious to do the right, but are not as skillful in judgment as they are earnest in purpose. Their radicalism is not due to their badness, but to their inexperience and oftentimes to their ignorance. The method of conference will help solve their problems, and that is the method which Jesus employed in training His twelve. It will not work perfectly, for even He was unable properly to guide and direct the brilliant Judas, but it is the best method we know, and college administrators are not meeting their privileges properly if they allow student bodies to hold open forums without faculty guidance and co-operation.

The faculty of a college and the students of a college are joint workers in a joint enterprise. Their interests are identical just as are their purposes. They are not antithetic to each other in any particular. They should work together and in common counsel find solution for all their problems. This is not only the way of common sense, but it is the Christian way as well.

BETHLEHEM LETTER.

The boards of trustees of Piedmont and Bethlehem Colleges have taken final action on the plan for educational co-operation, and the name of Bethlehem College will be changed to Piedmont Junior College and will operate at Wadley, Ala.

Dr. Frank E. Jenkins, president of Piedmont College, Demorest, Ga., was elected a member of the board of trustees of Piedmont Junior College and was then elected by the board as chairman of the board.

The board voted to begin the campaign at once to raise $50,000 for Bethlehem College, as approved by the Southern Christian Convention, and a committee of five was appointed to work out the plans.

Under the co-operative educational plan, Piedmont Junior College is affiliated as junior college with Piedmont College, Demorest, Ga., and its courses are co-ordinated with those of Piedmont and accredited by this institution. Piedmont College is a charter member of the Association of Georgia Colleges, a member of the Association of American Colleges, and an accredited college of the Southern Association of Colleges. This plan of accreditation should greatly aid in securing students for the institution and we hope to be able to double the student attendance.

AN APPRECIATION.

I wish to express my sincere thanks to those brethren of the Roanoke Christian Church—V. E. Kitchens, J. F. Brown and C. J. Hester—who presented me with a trip to and from the Southern Christian Convention, at Richmond, Va. I shall always be indebted to these brethren for the great pleasure of attending the recent meeting at Richmond. It was also a great joy to me to visit Elon and the Christian Orphanage again. It was an inspiration to these brethren from Alabama to see these institutions and know more fully what they are trying to do. I enjoyed very much the fellowship of our Church workers in the Convention, especially the presence of Rev. P. T. Klapp, Dr. W. W. Staley, and Dr. P. J. Kernodle, and possibly other older men whom I do not now recall. These are great, noble souls. They understand how to sacrifice and suffer for the cause for which they have given their lives and interests. They know more about what it is to suffer for Christ's sake than do many of our younger men. They also know the travail of the Church in the earlier years. They may not know so much about the modern and untried methods of today, but they know the reality of the Christian religion.

I always feel that I am on holy ground when in the presence of the aged ministers of God. I trust it may please our Heavenly Father to spare them many years yet to serve the kingdom; and when they shall be unable to serve, may the kingdom serve them with just such honors as each may deserve.

MAKING RESOLUTIONS EFFECTIVE.

Last week you read the report adopted at our recent Richmond Convention having to do with the organizing of the men of our local Churches and of the Convention. And you also observed that THE CHRISTIAN SUN is willing to give us ample space for the promotion of that work. We wish you to help make that space tell for the kingdom of God; and it will tell if we make our recent resolutions effective. One of the first things we can do to make them effective is to read these columns, and every other column in THE CHRISTIAN SUN. That Church is already far on the road to real achievement whose members read THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Look eagerly forward for each copy of your CHRISTIAN SUN and read it until you like it, and until you catch the spirit of it, and of your Church.

It is to be wondered if there is a single Church in all our Convention that does not have unused man-power in it. And in all probability that Church which has its men best organized will be the first to recognize that much of their manhood is not conserved for the use of the Church. Is there a Church in all our Convention that could not go forward if it was so organized that the men were absolutely bound together in an organization so complete that it moved as one man? It is not to be thought that every man in any given Church could be induced to be actively alive to a men's organization, but are there not many men in every Church alive to the Church, and really willing to be used by the Church, but who are not effectively used because they are poorly bound together?

For instance, in the First Christian Church, of Norfolk, there is a group of young men meeting each Sunday as the Bryant Bible Class, but because there only are about fifteen of them they have not been able to swing any very great program for their Church. They do not undertake all they could do. In the same Church there are about twenty-five men meeting each Sunday in the Men's United Bible Class, and they do have their monthly business meetings and sometimes undertake a thing or two for their Church, but they are, after all, only a segment of the four hundred and fifty members, and do not feel willing to undertake great things as they are now organized. Then there are about fifteen men in the home department (not to mention the women) who are actively alive to their Church, but whose energies are not used largely as they should be. Would it be too much to expect to ask those three already thoroughly interested groups of men to get together in a single unit, making a membership of about sixty men? Those sixty men could move any Church right up to the door of heaven if they were really interested to do it, and tried. Would not the very fact that they are meeting at least once a month in a united program for the welfare of their Church electrify them into undertaking and achieving great things for their community and the kingdom of God? If those men organize they will help to make our Convention resolutions effective.

In these columns this week you will read a fine report of the great men's organization in the First Christian Church, Durham, N. C. Is not that a work which should be inspiration to at least twenty-five of our larger Churches to see such an organization become a live, effective factor in their program. Every Church which has such an organization has something upon which it can rely for putting into effect the things it stands in need of. They have been doing some fronteering of the very finest order, and we will do well to study their program, and measure our own usefulness in the light of what they are doing. Or, take the fine expression from the First Christian Church of Greensboro. They, too, are helping to make our Convention's resolutions effective. What is your Church doing about it? Will the resolutions of Richmond be allowed to die? Shall others mark our failure, or they by our works measure our faith? Who will be the first Church to report a brand-new organization of Christian Church Men? Let us hear from others on making our recent resolutions at Richmond effective.

GRADUAL AWAKENING.

In the First Christian Church, Greensboro, N. C., the men are beginning to "rub their eyes." Some will probably sleep on, but others are going to do something while it is day.

The most hopeful sign is a dissatisfaction within ourselves and an attempt to find out just what's the matter. We know we must have a modern Church plant and we begin to want it. Our pride makes us resent the dinginess of our present building, and the inadequacy of our entire equipment. We haven't quite decided to get busy and leave our outgrown shell, but just a little urging will put it across.

The idea of personal evangelism is growing among the men of our Church. Ability to think more clearly, and a closer study of Jesus' methods shows how we must expect future growth, if there is to be any.

Our Men's Brotherhood is doing some work, though rather limited. Some missionary work is being attempted, principally through an afternoon Sunday School in a small chapel. We are also ready to conduct evangelistic services in out-of-way places if we are really urged to do so. Unfortunately, we haven't quite caught the idea of seeking for opportunity.

We are becoming more liberal with money, but can stand a lot more urging. We made a successful effort recently to get some old debts relegated to the realm of forgetfulness. This showed up our possibilities, and if we don't go to sleep again we could become a leader among Churches for liberality. It is very true that we have no wealthy members, but we're not half as poor as we have imagined ourselves. Most of us are poor by choice. We need vision more than cash.

ENLISTMENT IN CHURCH ACTIVITIES.

The editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN has requested that I outline the activities of the Men of the Church as they have been worked out in the Durham Christian Church. The efforts to enlist the men in a more definite way for the service of the Church have been extended over a period of two and one-half years. With us it has been pioneer work. And of necessity it has been more or less experimental.

The purpose of the movement is "The cultivation and promotion of the spirit of fellowship and brotherhood of the men of the congregation and of the community, and the enlistment of the men in the service of Christ, and for the furtherance of the best interests of the Church in all its departments."

Regular meetings are held once a month on a week-day evening. Time is allotted for a short business session and the rest of the meeting is devoted to an inspirational program, which is generally under the direction of one of the working groups. The program is arranged at least two weeks before the time for the meeting, and is worked out conjointly by the executive committee and the group leader.

All men who are members of the Church are assigned to one of the seven working groups of the Men of the Church. These seven groups are membership, entertainment, prayer meeting, visiting the sick, stewardship, missions and evangelism. Of the four groups first named, the title suggests what is expected of them.

The stewardship group takes over the program for the monthly meetings during the period of the Church year devoted to stewardship. These programs deal with every phase of stewardship and are arranged to the end that every member shall have a part in the discussion. Just prior to the every-member canvass this group places a copy of the budget for the coming year in the hands of every member of the Church, suggesting that this is one way to meet the obligations of one's stewardship.

For a year the mission group took charge of the worship period in the adult department of the Sunday School on mission Sunday, putting on missionary programs that were of a very high type. During this year this group has arranged two programs for the monthly meetings, at which time they had as speakers missionaries who were home on furlough. The Church budget for the current year provides $800 for missions in addition to the Conference apportionments. The Men of the Church are, as an organization of the Church, assuming responsibility for $300 of this amount.

The evangelistic group is undertaking to do the personal or visitation evangelistic work in the Church. This is a new type of work for the average Church member. But on last Easter Sunday twenty-three members were received into the Church without the holding of any special meetings, many of whom the evangelistic group had been instrumental in enlisting. During the past two years about twenty-five members have been received into the Church through the work done by this group.

This will give some idea of the nature of the work we are trying to do. We have not accomplished all that we had hoped for, but the results attained give us grounds to believe that we are working along lines which offer large possibilities.

WALDO W. BOONE,
President, Men of the Church.

DEMANDS FOR HIGHER EDUCATION.

The number of those enrolled in colleges and universities is an ever-increasing one, and today it is six times as large as thirty years ago, according to figures issued by the Bureau of Education, Department of the Interior. Decade by decade the rate of increase has been as follows: Between 1890 and 1900 there were 4,600 more students each year than the year before. Between 1900 and 1910 each year saw an increase of nearly twice as many—9,900 each twelve months. During the next decade the annual increase more than doubled and amounted to 19,600 a year. Finally, during the past few years the increase has amounted to more than 50,000 a year. The totals of attendance in 1890 were 120,000. Now they are some 850,000.

If Sunday does not open a door into higher things, it is apt to be a trap into lower.

MEN OF THE CHURCH.

BURLINGTON CHURCH ORGANIZED.

One of the first Churches of the Christian denomination in the South to organize its men was the First Christian Church of Burlington, N. C., Dr. G. O. Lankford, pastor. Dr. Lankford writes:

"The men of the Church have assumed the responsibility of the every-member canvass in the Burlington Church for the past two or three years, and I presume they will do so again this year. Helpful visitation work has also been done at other times by this organization. Outside speakers have been brought in by them, who gave instructive and inspiring messages on various themes. They have also held a number of fellowship gatherings."

Dr. Lankford is loud in his praise of the men of the Church as an effective way of advancing the kingdom in his congregation. We are glad to quote below the constitution of the organization of The Men of the Church of our Burlington congregation:

Article I—Name.

Section 1. The name of this organization shall be "The Men of the First Christian Church of Burlington, N. C.," and shall be known simply as "The Men of the Church."

Article II—Purpose.

Section 1. The purpose of this organization shall be the cultivation and promotion of the spirit of fellowship and brotherhood of the men of this congregation and of the community and the enlistment of the men in the service of Christ and for the furtherance of the best interests of the Church in all its departments.

Article III—Membership.

Section 1. The membership shall consist of male members of this Church and Sunday School who are eighteen years old and over, it being understood that members of other congregations or any man of good moral standing shall be eligible for membership.

Sec. 2. The membership may also include boys under eighteen where membership is desired.

Article IV—Officers.

Section 1. The officers of the organization shall be a president, a vice-president, a secretary, and assistant secretary and a treasurer. Their duties shall be such as ordinarily pertain to their respective offices. All officers shall be elected annually, but any officer may succeed himself, subject to the will of the organization.

Article V—Executive Committee.

Section 1. The Executive Committee shall consist of the president, the secretary, the treasurer and of two other members elected at large by the organization. It shall be the duty of this committee to appoint all regular committees for the various departments of the work of the organization.

Article VI—Other Committees.

Section 1. The organization shall have a membership committee, whose duties shall be to seek to enlist all men of this congregation and other men of the community as members with us, and to look after the attendance at regular meetings of this body.

Sec. 2. The organization shall have a social and entertainment committee. The duties of the committee shall be to see that a "feed" is provided at each regular meeting or at such times as the organization deems advisable, arrange other social features, and to cultivate the brotherly spirit among the membership.

Sec. 3. An orphanage committee shall be constituted, whose duty shall be to keep our men informed as to the needs of our Orphanage, its progress and growth, that we may render a larger service to the institution of our Church.

Sec. 4. A Church attendance committee shall be appointed, the duty of which shall be to stress regular and faithful attendance upon all the services of the Church and Sunday School. This committee should give special attention to the attendance upon the Sunday night services of the Church.

Sec. 5. The organization shall have a prayer-meeting committee, whose duty shall be to strive to build up a larger attendance upon and deeper interest in the midweek services of the Church. This committee shall become responsible for the midweek services when the pastor finds it necessary to be away.

Sec. 6. A publicity and hotel committee shall be appointed and charged with the responsibility of giving due publicity to the work of the Church in the community and of seeing that guests in our hotels receive an invitation to our services.

Sec. 7. A sick and visiting committee shall be appointed for the purpose of keeping in touch with members who are sick, visiting newcomers to the city, and of promoting the visiting spirit among our people.

Sec. 8. A college committee shall be constituted whose duty shall be to keep our men informed as to the needs of our college, its progress and growth, that we may render a larger service to this institution of our Church.

Article VII—General Council.

Section 1. The general council shall be composed of the executive committee, together with the chairman of the several regular committees.

Sec. 2. It shall be the duties of the council to exercise a general oversight of the work, arrange programs for the stated meetings, and to seek to maintain a lively interest in all departments of work.

Sec. 3. Meetings of the council shall be subject to the call of the president.

Article VIII—Membership Meetings.

Section 1. The members of the organization shall meet on the evening of the second Tuesday in each month. Special meetings may be called at any time by the president, as the need may arise.

Sec. 2. The meeting in October of each year shall be known as the annual meeting, at which reports relating to the work for the past year shall be made. Officers for the ensuing year shall be elected, and such other business transacted as may be appropriate.

Sec. 3. At the last meeting preceding the annual meeting a nominating committee shall be named to bring in at the annual meeting nominations for the officers for the ensuing year.

Sec. 4. Fifteen members present shall constitute a quorum.

Article IX—Departments of Work.

Section 1. The work of the organization shall be devoted to the promotion of the following: (1) spiritual life, (2) evangelism and missions, (3) Christian training, (4) stewardship of possessions, (5) Christian social service, (6) brotherhood and good will, (7) Christian education.

Sec. 2. The council shall have these ideas in mind in building its program from month to month.

Article X—Funds.

Section 1. This organization shall be financed by free-will offerings.

Article XI—By-Laws.

Section 1. The organization may adopt such by-laws, rules and regulations from time to time as necessity may suggest.

Article XII.

Section 1. This constitution may be amended at any regular meeting of the organization by a two-thirds vote of the members present, provided notice has been given at the last previous monthly meeting of the organization.

SAID ABOUT THE CONVENTION.

Dr. W. M. Jay writes:

The twenty-eighth annual session of the Southern Christian Convention is now a matter of history—and memorable history it is! I think we might say truthfully that the dominant spirit of the Convention was that of harmony and co-operation not only within our own Church but with other fellowships of like nature. Actions, definite and co-operative, seemed to hit a new high note in the Convention proceedings.

I was particularly impressed with the Convention's favorable action, without a discordant note nor dissenting vote, to memorialize the General Convention for immediate union with the Congregational Church. This was further evidenced by the hearty endorsement of the merger of Elon College and Atlanta Theological Seminary, which pact bids fair to be consummated before another school year opens. And to further show that we wished to put our own house in order for the coming of this great event of union, it was voted to give permission and sanction to a plan to put our two colleges, Elon and Bethlehem, on an adequate financial basis.

The tasks that now lay heavy upon our hearts is to carry out in the same fine spirit these splendid plans and visions.

Elon College, N. C.

W. M. JAY.

Dr. N. G. Newman says:

I am not unmindful of the many fine things in the recent Southern Christian Convention—the fine addresses of our own men and our visiting brethren, the excellent reports of our boards, the movements toward an endowment for superannuation and the organization of our men for service, etc.—but the one outstanding thing to me was the hearty and unanimous adoption of the report of the Committee on Christian Unity approving the joint commission from the Congregational and Christian denominations and recommending its adoption to the General Convention of the Christian Church. Who knows but that we have "come to the kingdom for such a time as this?" "There is a tide in the affairs of men which, taken at its flood, leads on to fortune." May this be ours.

Holland, Va.

N. G. NEWMAN.

Bro. C. M. Cannon says:

The twenty-eighth biennial session of the Southern Christian Convention, held recently at Richmond, Va., was by far the outstanding session which I have attended. The willing spirit of the delegates to undertake bigger things, and to lay more far-reaching plans for the work of the kingdom than ever before is probably the thing that impressed me most. The co-operation of every delegate with the Convention aims and purposes was fully evidenced, and no one seemed inclined to be disgruntled or arbitrary in any matter affecting the progress of the Convention or Church as a whole, even though their individual opinion may have differed somewhat from that of the majority.

The unanimous vote on Christian union, laying definite plans along this line, was probably the most important single step ever taken by the Christian Church, or any other Church for that matter, and the fact that there was not a dissenting vote either from the delegates or the audience at large is little short of marvelous, and shows the willingness of the members to fall in line with the advancing aims of the Church. The whole-hearted support of educational progress was only another evidence of this willing spirit.

Elon College, N. C. C. M. CANNON.

Dr. J. E. Rawles writes:

The Southern Christian Convention was characterized by non-politics, good-fellowship, genuine co-operation, definite purpose and prophetic vision to hasten "Thy kingdom come." It was a rare pleasure and a real inspiration to be present.

Suffolk, Va. J. E. RAWLS.

From Mrs. Stagg:

To me, the recent session of the Southern Christian Convention was the most satisfactory and inspiring session I ever attended. The spirit throughout was fine, and, as a whole, I feel it marked a forward step in the work of our denomination.

Norfolk, Va. MRS. L. W. STAGG.

Rev. C. E. Newman says:

It was, in my opinion, a great Convention—first, in personnel of the men and women composing the body; second, in personnel of those present from other religious connections; third, it was great because of the spirit and zeal pervading all sessions; fourth, in reports of work done since the previous session; fifth, it was the greatest in work planned for the future and plans to finance same.

Virgilia, Va. C. E. NEWMAN.

Rev. P. T. Klapp writes:

I think the Convention was very good and the spirit fine.

Elon College, N. C. P. T. KLAPP.

Bro. M. W. Hollowell writes:

No better Convention was ever held in our Southern Church.

Portsmouth, Va. M. W. HOLLOWELL.

Bro. MacClenny says:

In regard to my opinion of the Convention, I beg to advise that as I was only in the Convention a short time, a correct opinion could hardly have been formed. From what was heard and seen, those present had the good of the cause at heart and were there to try to upbuild the Christian Church. The fellowship was good and the entertainment good.

Suffolk, Va. W. E. MACCLENNY.

BY REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

Lesson X—June 3, 1928.

JESUS FACING BETRAYAL AND DEATH.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Not what I will, but what Thou wilt."—Mark 14:36.

LESSON: Mark 14:1-42.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalms 22:1-5, 18, 19.

"And when it was evening he cometh with the twelve." They were in a large upper room, above the lower levels on which they usually lived, away from the dust and the hustle and confusion of life, in an atmosphere of quiet and peace. They were with their Master. They had come together to eat the Passover meal, which had such hallowed associations. One would have thought that it would have been a time when they would have been quiet and reverent and thoughtful. And yet they quarreled among themselves as to who should perform the humble task of foot-washing and left it for the Master Himself. Alas, that there is often such a petty and self-seeking spirit in those who are the Master's most intimate associates!

"One of you shall betray me." What a thunderbolt that must have been! The idea of such a thing! If the Master had said that His enemies were going to put Him out of the way, that would have been different. If He had said that the scribes and Pharisees were going to betray Him that would have sounded plausible. But for Him to say that one of the twelve, one of the inner circle, was to betray Him—it was unthinkable! And yet it is true that Christ is often betrayed by His friends. And there are times when His friends betray Him for less than thirty pieces of silver.

"And they began to be sorrowful and to say unto Him, one by one, Is it I? Here is one of the finest tributes to the general character of the twelve. In that solemn moment when the Master declared that one of them should betray Him, every man's thought turned to himself. There was something so serious about it that they wondered if they were guilty of the great betrayal. How many of us who read these lines would have been prompted to say, "Is it Peter?" or "Is it Simon the Zealot?" or "Is it this one or that one?" We are always so prone to think of others doing things that we would not think of doing. But these men did not sit in condemnation upon others. They did some heart-searching to see if they, as individuals, were the guilty ones. Let us be slow to sit in judgment upon others, and let us be exacting upon ourselves. It may well be that it is we ourselves who shall betray our Master.

"And as they were eating, He took bread . . . and He took a cup." Ordinary, every-day things the Master took and made them minister to the higher values of life. He wanted to be remembered, to be kept in mind, not only for His sake—in fact, it was not for His sake at all—but rather for the sake of His disciples and for the sake of the kingdom. It is absolutely essential to the highest interests of the individual and also to the progress of the kingdom that we keep Jesus Christ in remembrance. What a simple memorial! Plain, unleavened bread and wine. And yet what a more suggestive and permanent memorial! There are millions of people today who regularly partake of the simple meal and are thereby reminded of Jesus Christ, and who feel a sense of unworthiness, who breathe a prayer for forgiveness, who become conscious of a new peace, who aspire to holier living, and who give themselves in deeper consecration, because they partake of the bread and the wine in remembrance of Christ. Long after the great monuments to men have crumbled into dust, Christ will have a memorial in this simple sacrament.

"And they came unto a place which was named Gethsemane." Sooner or later every man comes to Gethsemane. In fact, we are always coming to Gethsemanes. For Gethsemane is more than simply a place in Palestine, just outside Jerusalem—it is that place in human life where a man faces honestly the choice between doing his own will and the will of the God whom he is and whom he should serve. Gethsemane for Jesus was more than a place or an incident; it was a permanent and deciding principle in His life. It was the crux and climax of all His life; but He would never have emerged victorious from Gethsemane when He faced the great issue of life if He had not been emerging victorious when He met the so-called smaller issues of life.

In this incident in Gethsemane we find the real function of prayer. Prayer is not a means of getting something from God, of getting God to do the things we want Him to do. Prayer is the divinely appointed means of getting us into that mood and spirit which makes it possible for God to do, through us, what He wants to do. Jesus Himself intimated that God was more willing to give good gifts to us than we were ready to receive them. Prayer becomes a real battlefield when we understand it in the deepest sense. It is significant that in spite of the fact that Jesus prayed earnestly thrice, He did not get an answer in the sense that we interpret an answer to prayer. But He did get an answer in that He was strengthened to do the will of the Father. "Not what I will, but what Thou wilt." There is the ultimate goal of prayer in its highest form.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Sunday, June 3, 1928.

TOPIC: "My Plans for a Profitable Summer."
—Mark 6:1-6. (Consecration meeting.)

Some Bible Hints.

A visit to the old home town can be made profitable, renewing friendships, helping comrades (v. 1).

There is joy in taking part in Church, Sunday School, and Christian Endeavor Society in our home places or in a strange town. Keep in touch with the Church (v. 2).

To visit a country town and help in the society brings a fresh touch of life, new ideas, new methods. Let us give of our best (v. 2).

We can use our vacation visiting out-of-the-way places and helping workers there who may have got into a rut (v. 6).

Suggestive Thoughts.

Summer plans should include rest and health. A vacation that is a steady rush exhausts us. Too much sightseeing may hurt rather than help us.

Plan a course of reading for summer. Some of us read only light novels. Include biography, travel, science and religion. We should learn to browse among the best books.

Plan for a summer of change. Take up activities the very opposite of your daily tasks. A tired mother wants simply to rest. A cooped-up clerk wants to be in the open air. Plan wisely.

We may have a profitable summer at home. Cut down drudgery. Take up things you really enjoy. We do not need to go away to have a vacation, but we do need to drop as many of the common tasks as possible.

A Few Illustrations.

Plan to make a friend or two. One of my best friends I found on a vacation. Long walks, long talks, exchange of knowledge and experience made that summer a delight.

One of my friends used to spend his vacations in Ireland preaching the gospel. Meetings every night, usually in farmhouses. One summer with him lives in memory. Cannot we do something like this in our own country?

Country societies may invite the children of a down-town Church in the city for a day in the country. The automobile ride, the games, the refreshments are joy-makers for childhood.

Some Endeavorers in summer give volunteer service in fresh-air homes where children are given a two-weeks vacation. Summer should include some form of service for others.

To Think About.

What made your best summer most enjoyable?
How may we have good times at home?

What summer outings may our society arrange?

VISITATIONS HELP.

After spending another year at Elon College, I will be returning to the field of our mountain work some time by the last of May. Although weather conditions made some of my tri-monthly trips a little disagreeable, yet there was much pleasure in trying to carry on the work.

I think I have been exceedingly fortunate in making sixteen trips to the mountains this school term and having only three punctures. Two of these happened one Sunday between Elk Spur and Rocky Ford, and as a result I failed to reach Rocky Ford in time for my appointment. This was the only time that I failed to get to this Church, and it was the only time that we failed to have preaching on the regular appointment.

There were three trips in which snow and mud hindered me from reaching Elk Spur. As you know, some of the roads were tremendously bad; so much so that they would make a Ford "sweat" trying to crawl over them. I was accompanied on each trip with some friend from the college or community. It seemed to have been a pleasure to all of them to have had an opportunity to go. They had a desire to see the kind of work we are doing there. The most of those who went from the college were ministerial students or those thinking of doing missionary work. Some would preach, while others would pray; yet some would teach and others sing and play. It takes all of these elements to carry the gospel of Christ.

On my last trip (May 6th), a group of people from Bethlehem Church, Alamance County, visited our field. Four young ladies of this group—Misses Pauline and Blanch Sutton, Ruth Matkins, and Grace Paschael—sang some of their favorite quartette songs at Elk Spur. The people enjoyed their singing very much. It is hoped that more people will feel obligated to visit the work and help to make it a success.

COLLEGE STATEMENT.

Elon College.

1. Assets:
Value of property$1,202,551.04
Endowment 520,738.60

2. Liabilities:
Indebtedness$ 426,740.00
Distributed as follows:

Debt on old buildings....$114,750.00
Debt on new buildings.... 311,990.00
(Of this $311,990, $117,481.73 is on buildings bearing names of donors, which leaves a balance of $194,509 unprovided for.)

3. Needs: Clear the college of indebtedness and increase endowment to $1,000,000.

4. How? (1) Ask those who donated buildings and which buildings bear their names to take over balances on same, relieving the college of this indebtedness and the Church of interest charged, on the condition that the Church raise the remainder of indebtedness. This will relieve the college and guarantee its membership in the Southern Association of Colleges.

(2) The Church's share to raise, $309,259. Raise $200,000 in large gifts; $109,259 in smaller gifts from the rank and file of the Church.

(3) Endowment amount, $500,000. Raise $200,000 from folks in Church and out in gifts of $1,000 and more; and $300,000 from General Education Board and other organizations, funds and boards.

5. Plan and organization: The Convention to appoint a committee of five, who shall work out details, effect the organization, inform the Church at large, decide on date of beginning and direct the campaign.

Indebtedness.—Have some one to head up the drive for indebtedness. Have a large gifts' committee. Have a small gifts' committee.

Endowment.—Have a committee within the Church. Have a committee to work outside of the Church.

Bethlehem College.

6. That a committee of five be appointed, with power to act, together with the Executive Committee of the Convention and the board of trustees of Bethlehem College, to study the conditions of Bethlehem, consider its present needs, its future demands and act, safeguarding the interest of the Christian Church.

L. E. SMITH, President.

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
One of Our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MONDAY.

RELIGION IN THE HOME.

"Is not the promise to Abraham and his children, and are not we his descendants?"

"For the promise is to you and your children."—Acts 3:29.

The home is both the oldest and most influential of social institutions. Among the ancients of every land it was the primary center of religion and worship. So emphatic was this that folks were clanish and felt that salvation was for no one else.

For instance, it took a light and a voice and a vision to convince Paul that salvation was for everybody. And it took a vision and a voice to convert Peter and break down the barriers between the Jews and the Gentiles.

This was done, but instead of reducing religion of the home it increased it, and the apostle's teachings made family religion all the more important.

The father is the natural head of the home in religion, so placed by providential design and wisdom, and in this he yields to no preacher or religious teacher, no emotional evangelist, to no conscientious Sunday School teacher, to no pastor, however honorable, godly, loved and tried; yea, not even to an archangel of God. He is king in his home and the molding of the religious sentiment and life in his family is his. God will not hold him guiltless who fails. When this is left to others, when some other than the family altar is the chief center of the child's religious education, devotion and worship, there is grave danger of religion being dissociated from the home and from the practical every-day affairs. This is just what is happening in these days of neglected home religion and the consequent lack of spiritual expression and in the millions of unhappy vacillating Christians.

Religion ought to be centered in the home, and to be real in every-day life it must be. Here, first childish impressions are received; here, susceptible childhood is spent; here, ties of love are formed and most abiding; here are the fortunes and the misfortunes, tragedies and joys, life's recurring duties, which from babyhood to the end of life is the way all have to trod. But the associates of the godly home are purest, dearest, happiest, strongest and closest to God.

All that others outside of the home can do is to serve, as it were, a diet of milk. That diet is not good for conquering soldiers. With all its faults, the home is still the most heavenly of earth's institutions.

Prayer.—Our Father, show us the great work Thou hast for us in our home. Make us realize our responsibility in it. Give us Thy transcendent force according to divine need, and forbid that we shall lack anything in doing our best. Amen.

TUESDAY.

HOW SPIRITUALIZE THE HOME?

"Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it."—Prov. 22:6.

The temper and the atmosphere of the home are constantly, unconsciously and unintentionally molding the character of the children to whatever it is. The child is open to impressions from everything it sees or hears. What he sees and hears becomes his daily nurture, food for his soul-life.

The anger and gentleness, patience and importance, appetites and passions, moods and manners all pass in to him as impressions and become the seed of his character. It matters not whether the parent wishes it or not, it must be so. It is the current of the stream of life which no man can change. The greatest effort against it will amount to only a ripple on the waters.

Therefore, the way to make home right, the child right, and generations to come right is to make our own example the best possible; and for this, parents must have every means of grace available. The family Bible and prayer is the most important. Our failures in doing our best at this cannot be final nor fatal if we make the most of it; and we have not given ourselves nor our children a fair chance until we have.

Prayer.—Our Father, without Thee in our homes, in our lives, in the atmosphere of our home we realize we are lost. Come Thou upon us, fill us with Thy spirit. Forgive our neglect and shortcomings. Make us true. Enable us to do our best for home, family and country. Amen.

TELLING THE TRUTH.

"Parents, provoke not your children to wrath."—Eph. 6:4.

"Let not truth forsake Thee."—Prov. 3:3.

Some of the good Christians we know are big liars when dealing with their children. To frighten them into obedience, tell them all sorts of stories of "boogers," "police will put you in jail," etc., is awful and does manhood of the boy great damage.

At best, we will be faulty, but to make the best child we must be truthful to him, confess our faults to him and seek not the cloak of infallibility to deceive him whom we would lead to good manhood. We can more readily win his confidence, his love, his respect for us, and have a greater chance of winning him to God by frank admissions and truth about every-day things than any other way. It is the only way to quicken spiritual piety, and strengthen helpful sympathy and appreciation.

Prayer.—Our Father, Lord God of hosts, be with us yet, lest we forget. Give us heart-to-heart communion with Thee, and with one another, and may we thus be helpful to one another to glory. Give us the courage of truth to our children and make their manhood all it should be. Amen.

THE BIBLE POWER.

"The commandment is a lamp and the law is light."—Prov. 6:23.

The Bible is a perfect guide. It quickens the thoughts and intents of the heart. To reject it and make it void in the life is spiritual disaster. Its secrets belong to our children, that they may do its commands. It is the power that overcomes the evil one with children, and we are exhorted to teach it. It is the word of God, obedience to which completely furnishes man unto every good work.

The habitual use of the Bible aids us to make confessions and to live the truth. It gives us the great themes of life upon which we may ponder things that are true, honest, just, pure, lonely, etc. A patient, persistent, intelligent, honorable use of the Bible as the guide to every-day thought and action bring wondrous results. We go to our daily papers for news, to the magazines for literature and information, to the farm journal for agriculture, to poultry magazines for chicken raising, etc. Why not a daily consistent use of the Bible as a guide in how to live?

This is spirituality in the home, and when exerted faithfully, positively and habitually it means not only the family, but the world for Christ.

Prayer.—Our Father, we pray for the relaxation that comes in prayer. May we not forget that life is more than meat, and that we need treasures in heaven. We pray for Thy presence and that we may recognize it and be filled with grace and spiritual nurture. Amen.

FRIDAY.

HALF-WAY CHRISTIANS.

"In that day that thou stoodest on the other side . . . and cast lots upon Jerusalem, even thou wast as one of them."—Obadiah 1:11-15.

This was a case of the defenders of Jerusalem who could not be distinguished from the enemies. They were neutral in a great hour. These are the kind Jesus talked about when He said, "He that is not with me is against me."

The fight for right against wrong is terrible. Jesus is the champion of the right. Who will be neutral? The call of the Christian life is for a whole-souled allegiance to the Master.

Prayer.—O Lord, make our loyalty and allegiance to Thee complete. Amen.

SATURDAY.

INSPIRATION TO BE CHRISTIANS.

"Seeing that we are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses."—Heb. 12:1.

It was the witnesses, the inspiration and the courage given by the world that conquered the English Channel. Paul talks about the "weights" of the world that beset us and chill our zeal. But these are tests to our souls. "They that be for us are more than they that be against us."

The inspiration of loved ones, friends, goodly favors and graces is triumphant—God.

Prayer.—Our Father in heaven, may we be divinely strengthened with faith, courage and endurance. Give us the inspiration that urges us around, that lifts our fainting spirits, reawakens our enthusiasm, that saves our imperiled souls. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE WATER OF LIFE.

"The water of life that I shall give shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life."—Jno. 4:13-15.

One single unselfish act of kindness may prove our unending benediction.

We all remember Dr. Jowett. It is an interesting fact that his biographer takes the undying influence of Dr. Jowett back to an unusual incident which occurred on the first Sunday when he tried to preach. He had expressed his fear of entering the ministry because he could not pray in public. Let us hear his own words: "Seated in the front row was a white-haired old man, one of the regular worshipers at the Church. In the prayer with which I opened the service I heard a quiet response. It was from the old man. That response gave me confidence. It was like the strengthening breath of the Holy Spirit. Why not say it was the breath of the Holy Spirit? I can feel it now across the years. At a moment of great timidity I entered into the gracious strength of fellowship, and the expressed spiritual sympathy of an unknown brother created an influence in the young preacher which I remember still with thankfulness and joy."

Prayer.—Our Father, give us the blessedness of drinking of the living water, of having it emanate from us like a fountain in influences and deeds of kindness, purifying life forever. Amen.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

It is always a source of joy and gratitude to us for our children in the Orphanage to do well. It is a real joy to give our life in their behalf if they will only in return give their best efforts to make good in life. The Orphanage had its joys last week because we had three children to graduate from high school. Clarence McKinney came to the Orphanage on May 4, 1912, when he was just two and one-half years of age, and had been with us, on the day he graduated from high school, sixteen years and seven months. But Clarence has made good in his school work and was valedictorian of his class. Allie Lee Pierce, who came to us from Suffolk, Va., eleven years ago, graduated close to the head of her class and only lacked one and one-half points being salutatorian of her class. Eugenia Hilliard came to us nearly eleven years ago, and only lacked one point last year graduating from high school and made up the point last summer and entered Elon College last fall in the freshman year and received her diploma from high school last week.

We had one girl in the grammar grades who made an average for the entire school term of 98.2. Mary Thompson came to us in May, 1913, and we sent her to Lakeview Hospital, in Suffolk, Va., in 1925, to take training as a nurse, and she has made good in her work and will graduate May 31st.

The Christian Orphanage, by your help, has been father and mother to these children and given them a chance in life, and they have grasped the opportunity and we feel proud of them. When you invest your money in fatherless and motherless children and help to give them a chance in life you invest your money wisely.

BUILDINGS OR LIVING MONUMENTS.

eration such buildings as an intelligent and sincere study of the problem may indicate proper. Great mistakes have been made in erecting costly buildings which soon proved to be rather a handicap than a help. Thousands have been squandered upon the pet idea of some overzealous leader, only to be placed in the discard as wholly unsuited for the purpose intended. To place a new hymn book of unquestioned value in the hands of the inexperienced and untrained musician is to cheapen it. The graded series of lessons have failed in many schools because of untrained and inexperienced teachers, and the cause of advanced thought in religious training has been set back. The automobile is a vast improvement over the old horse and buggy, but many an old horse has taken his drunken master home safely, while the auto has sent them hurtling into eternity. I wonder if some Church will not try out this plan: say, if you are contemplating a new building, create an endowment equal to the estimated cost and use the interest for a few years in paying teachers for one or two hours per week on Sunday at the rate allowed by the public school, and see if it will not help you to solve the problem and perhaps in a few years develop a plan which will be worth double the amount.

MADGE MOFFITT WHITESELL, Editor.

Kiddies:

We are expecting to hear from each one of you this week, saying you are getting ready to draw a picture-story for me. Just tell the story and draw the picture of some character in the story, and by June you will be seeing your story and picture in print, right in our own Korner. Of course, dears, it's a Bible story we are to tell. Don't forget, and write me a wee note telling me you are at work at this now. When? Right now!

Another thing: in your letters to me, let me know about what you would like to do this summer. It's getting "Pollyanna" time again. I would just like to know how you dear Kiddies feel about playing again.

Away to daily vacation Bible school we go in a very few days. Let's get in the first day and stay every day while it lasts. Such good times, such lovely stories, such a wonderful time for all dear Kiddies. Why, of course, draw your picture and write your story in the Bible school.

Let's hear from you this very week.

Ball games, and play-houses, dilly's new clothes to make, weeds to pull out of the pretty flowers, and all in this beautiful sunshine—what a wonderful time is our summertime! We thank Thee, Father, for all these things, and for our Kiddies in the Korner we thank our Father, too.

Love from your editor.

MADGE M. WHITESELL.

HOPEWELL.

As Nehemiah rebuilt the walls of Jerusalem, so today the Church at Hopewell is helping to build a wall of salvation around the city of Hopewell, where the people may enter and be safe in the "strong tower of the name of the Lord." No doubt, some of the readers of THE SUN are wondering how the Church at Hopewell is progressing. To the casual observer, the structure which is going up in the north end of town is not of much moment when compared with the other building activities in different parts of the city. But to a small proportion of the population it is of intense interest and they are counting the days until it will be finished and ready for occupancy. The work has been progressing steadily since the ground-breaking on March 24th, and now the structure is sheathed, ready for the weather-boarding and the roof boards are in place ready for the roofing. Best of all, the belfry is in place, from which we hope a bell will ring out its invitation to the Sunday services and remind the people of Hopewell that it is the day that God wants to meet His people in His sanctuary.

The Sunday School will rejoice to get into the new building the most of any of the departments of the Church because of the crowded condition in the present building. The Sunday School is said to be the hope of the Church, and this Church is greatly encouraged by the work done by the Sunday School. The Christian Endeavor Society has been putting on some very interesting programs which show the talents of the members. May the talents be dedicated to the service of God.

The Ladies' Missionary Aid Society is progressing in its organization and has organized a junior missionary society under the leadership of Miss Nina Black.

On Sunday, April 29th, the Rev. C. E. Newman, of Virgilina, a brother of one of the charter members, preached to a large audience. Visitors are always welcomed by the Church, and their interest is an inspiration which gives a new incentive to work on. The desire of the little Church body is the salvation of souls both in Hopewell and in "uttermost parts of the earth." An interest is coveted in your prayers, that this Church may be just what our Lord and Master would have it to be.

WINCHESTER, VA.

On May 3rd and 4th was held the fifth annual "Apple Blossom Festival." As usual, a large crowd of people came together from nearby cities and villages, as well as the rural people from many miles away. The apple trees were simply grand, the weather was ideal, and the parade a scene of beauty. I sometimes wonder if the kingdom of Christ wouldn't grow rapidly if we put forth the same amount of energy and spent the same amount of money to promote it that we do for pleasure and luxury! And yet I believe the kingdom of God is the most important thing in all the world. Is not it staggering to our mind when we think of how little that is really done, and then how much might be done that "Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven"?

The Winchester Ministerial Association elected officers for this year on May 7th, as follows: president, Dr. C. A. Freed, of the Luthern Church; vice-president, Dr. Murry D. Mitchel, of the M. E. Church, South; secretary-treasurer, B. J. Earp, of the Christian Church.

The third quarterly conference of the First Christian Church of Winchester was held on May 9th. A vote of thanks was extended to the Ladies' Aid Society for their splendid financial assistance. The pastor was granted two weeks' vacation to assist in revival as he might see fit. We are still trusting in the Christ who said, "Lo, I am with you always." B. J. EARP.

The joys, thrills and dreams of the first pastorate, which come to one entering the ministry and mean so much to him, were, on Sunday, March 11th, at Cypress Chapel Church, experienced by me. On that date we began our work there. No one was ever given a more hearty welcome to a Church and community, and the joy and gladness which such a welcome begets in one were so greatly felt in this case that it cannot be given full expression in words.

One month later we observed Mothers' Day. The Church was about filled to capacity and every one co-operated to help make this a most profitable service. Sunday evening at 8 o'clock the Willing Workers gave a very helpful Mothers' Day program.

God is so wonderful and does bestow so many blessings that it is with grateful hearts we are permitted to pen another message to our paper, telling some of our blessings, with thankfulness. We praise Him for everything, and just now we lift our hearts in praise for the gracious outpouring of His Holy Spirit on our Church during the series of revival meetings which came to a close on Sunday, April 29th. We had fresh showers of grace each service and truly received spiritual food for the soul. Song services were very appropriate, led by our chorister, R. L. Baker.

Our pastor, Bro. T. N. Lowe, did the preaching, and each sermon was a spiritual work inspired by God and delivered in such a forceful manner that any who heard will not easily forget. Seventy-five or more were reclaimed and nine were added to the Church, while several joined other Churches.

We are very thankful and appreciate the attendance of other Church members. We had them from all around, even from Norfolk. We are looking forward to a bright summer. The Church has just had a new dress of paint, and the entire grounds have been remodeled and beautified until it hardly looks like the same corner.

We are endeavoring now to put on a drive during the next three months for building fund. May God, with His all-seeing eyes, guide us and put it in the hearts of His people to give liberally. With Bro. Lowe as our earthly shepherd and God our Heavenly Guide, there is nothing that cannot be accomplished if we ask it in His name. Bro. Lowe has been in Richmond this week attending the Southern Christian Convention.

ALLEN.

Bro. A. J. Allen died at his home on April 17, 3:30 A. M. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Allen. He was born November 6, 1871, being fifty-seven his last birthday. Bro. Allen spent his early childhood in Halifax County. For the past twenty-three years he resided in and about Danville. He married Miss Nannie P. Stephens November 24, 1897, and to their happy union were added four girls and one boy. About eleven years ago Bro. Allen made profession of faith and became a member of Third Avenue Christian Church, where he remained until his death. The Church did not have a more devoted member or one that could have been missed more by the Church.

A JUNIOR COLLEGE AND HIGH SCHOOL.

Where Opportunity Awaits the Student of Very Limited Means.

GIRL'S DORMITORY.

Bethlehem College, Wadley, Ala., will open September 5, 1927. This institution is a Junior College and High School, which is co-educational, where scholarship ranks high and expense is low. It is thoroughly Christian, absolutely non-sectarian, and vitally American. A school where opportunity awaits the student of very limited means—$68.00 pays all college expenses, except books, board and room. Board, $15.00 per month, and room $3.00; total expenses for a term of nine months, $250.00.

Bethlehem College is training some of the best stock of America for Christian leadership, to be used by the nation and the world. Here is a great challenge and asset for students who wish to prepare themselves to serve in a worth-while way. The work on the new Administration Building is progressing nicely, and we will be able to begin our college work in this building when school opens this fall.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

THE MISSIONARY SPIRIT FUNDAMENTAL TO CHURCH LIFE AND GROWTH.

BY REV. STANLEY C. HARRELL.

During this present school year I have been taking a course in the history of Christianity in the first century. As every one knows who has even a casual knowledge of the subject, this history is essentially missionary history. The greatest mission literature that has ever been written is the New Testament. The Book of Acts is simply a history of the early missionary activities of the Church. The epistles were written by missionaries to mission Churches. The gospels were written that the Churches on the mission fields might have the complete record of the life and teachings of Jesus.

Any student of this period also knows that the first great problem that confronted the early Church was concerning the relationship of the mission converts from the Gentile world to the observance of the Mosaic law. Paul contended that a living faith in Jesus Christ was all that was required of these mission converts. The Judaizing party of the Jerusalem Church contended that all mission converts must become full-fledged Jews, observing the ceremonial law. The story of this conflict is too long to be related in detail here. But I have been greatly interested in studying the history of this Judaizing wing of the early Church.

McGiffert, in his book, "The Apostolic Age," concisely summarizes the facts. At first there were two great wings of the Church—the Jewish wing and the Gentile wing. After the destruction of Jerusalem the majority of the Gentile Christians accepted the conclusions that had long before been drawn by Paul and the multitude of Christians outside of Palestine. They became a part of the Christian missionary program to evangelize the world. But there were other Jewish Christians to whom the claims and interests of their ancestral faith were dearer than the salvation of a lost world. In their efforts to read out of the gospel plan the missionary claims, they read out the very spirit of Christ Himself; they became narrow, selfish, bigoted and exclusive. McGiffert says of them: "In the second century these Jewish Christians acquired the name of Ebionites, or 'poor men,' and were regarded as heretics by the Church at large. . . . The future was not with these Ebionite Jewish Christians; they were out of the current of progress, and it was inevitable that they should ultimately pass away. In the fourth century they were numerous in the country lying east of the Jordan, but they finally disappeared altogether."

This brief bit of Church history reveals principles that are fundamental in the very nature of Christianity itself. This particular historical incident has repeated itself time and again in the course of the Church's life down through the centuries. It is repeating itself today. It is manifesting itself in individual Church organizations. There are local congregations, which for various reasons have decided that they will center their thought and effort upon purely local enterprises. They are too exclusive and selfish to think of others. They are too poor to share; and they are slowly falling to pieces of dry rot.

When one attempts to leave out of the gospel the missionary message, so much has been left out that what remains is well-nigh meaningless. There is a mighty irresistible force in the sweep of the ocean's tide that bears the ocean liner upon its bosom; but there is no lifting power in a gallon of sea water shut up in a jug. It is only as the Church is vitally connected with Christ's program for the kingdom that the Spirit works in and through the Church. Leave out missionary activities and the kingdom has no program. Drop the missionary spirit out of the Church and it is impossible to keep the Spirit of the Christ.

We have been thinking of our missionary obligation as a duty to the unevangelized. It is not; it is a duty to the Christ. We have been thinking that it is necessary to be active in missions in order to establish the Church abroad. It is more than that—it is necessary to be active in missions in order to keep the Church at home alive. The missionary spirit not only saves the souls of those whom we call heathen; it saves our own souls. It is possible to understand the nature and genius of the gospel of Jesus Christ only by sharing that gospel with others.

Durham, N. C.

FOREIGN MISSION BOARD RETRENCHES.

A special meeting of the Foreign Mission Board was held in Dayton, on Friday, May 11th, for the purpose of considering steps to cut down the heavy deficit which has been growing because of the falling off of the offering this year. The secretary presented a full statement of the receipts thus far and the possible receipts the balance of the year based on last year's record. To date, a larger number of offerings have been received than for the same period last year, but the amount received is considerably smaller.

After a long and careful study of these figures, and also of the budget appropriated for 1928 and the amount thus far paid on it, the board reluctantly voted to send word to Japan and Porto Rico that the former should cut at once $6,000 from the amount still due on this year's appropriation, and the latter $3,000. This means a cut of one-third from the balance of the appropriation for this year. Even with this tremendous cut, and even though the offerings the balance of this year should equal those for the same period last year, we shall still carry at the end of this year a deficit so large as to be almost prohibitive.

Because of this possibility of a still too large deficit at the end of the year, the board further voted that since the Board had originally asked for a two-year further time instead of the usual six months, be permitted to take the extra year at salary, provided Bro. Barrett cannot be the pastor of some Church for that period. This same plan was followed with Dr. McCord several years ago. This would relieve the board of the amount of their salary for a year, and also of the amount needed to pay their travel expenses to Porto Rico, which amount we do not have in hand. In fact, we are carrying an overdraft at the bank, in addition to the large loans we have secured, right at the time when we should be in the best possible financial condition of the year.

No one can tell what these drastic reductions will mean to the work. Never has the board had to go so far in making cuts as it has had to this time. It will mean the closing of many points where work is badly needed; it will mean stopping altogether some types of work now being handled; it will doubtless mean the loss of some valuable Japanese and Porto Rican workers. This writer is unable to see how it will mean anything else than permanent disaster to much of the work we have been building up in these years of overseas service.

For months we have warned the brotherhood of this danger. Through the papers, in private letters and during the foreign mission period in letters to pastors, Sunday School superintendents and other workers we have clearly shown that unless the offering this year indicated that we would be able to take care of our budget, these cuts would have to come. The offering did not measure up, and the inevitable result has been this drastic reduction of the work. There was nothing else for the board to do under the circumstances. Further delay was impossible. We feel that everything has been done that could be done to avoid this disaster, but to no avail. This statement is made as the official action of the Foreign Mission Board, in special session, May 11, 1928.

WILSON P. MINTON, Sec'y.

It is not essential to make long prayers, but it is essential to be much alone with God, waiting on His will, hearkening for His voice, lingering in the garden of Scripture for the coming of the Lord God in the dawn or cool of the day. No number of meetings, no fellowship with Christian friends, no amount of Christian activity can compensate for the neglect of the still hour.

NOTES-PERSONALS

We wish all our pastors could fully realize the serious situation that confronts us now in our missionary work. If so, we know they would not only take the offering in June, but would work with their people to make it as liberal as possible.

We trust that this issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN will have close and wide reading. We wish our people to know the present needs and opportunities of the missionary work, and we have tried to lay the same before them in this issue of the paper.

We know the women will read with interest the splendid article in this issue by Mrs. C. H. Rowland, who was the first president of our Woman's Convention and who has been thoroughly identified with mission work since the women began.

If any one feels that missions crowd out the Orphanage in gifts, or that the Orphanage crowds out missions, we invite such a one to read with care what Superintendent C. D. Johnston has to say in his current letter, "Missions and Our Orphanage."

The following is gratefully acknowledged and will be of interest to many SUN readers: "Rev. and Mrs. Herbert Russell Clem announce the marriage of their niece, Deloris Holt Morrow, to Mr. John Henry Barnwell, on Thursday, May 17, 1928, Fall River, Mass."

Bro. W. H. Freeman, Ether, N. C., writes under date of May 21st: "Rev. S. M. Penn, of the Congregational Church, preached a splendid sermon at our Church (Christian Church, Ether, N. C.) last night. He has kindly consented to deliver a memorial address at our services the fifth Sunday in June."

Rev. R. L. Williamson, our beloved pastor at Sanford, N. C., advises that his Church raised the college quota in full on one Sunday, and feels that the Church will certainly raise the mission quota in full. He is preaching and working to this end. Our Sanford people may always be counted upon to do their part.

Rev. Edwin E. White, Pleasant Hill, Tenn., author of "The Story of Missions," one of the mission study books and one of the very finest in mission texts, is to teach in the summer school at Bethlehem College in July. This is certainly good news and will prove a rare privilege to those who can sit under Bro. White's instruction.

Many friends and SUN readers have expressed great gratification at the splendid manner in which President W. A. Harper edited THE CHRISTIAN SUN in the absence of the editor. In this gratification, the editor most heartily joins and feels that the paper was edited far better in his absence than in his presence. One wonders how President Harper manages to find time to do well so many and various tasks.

Dr. S. L. Beougher writes that the board of trustees of Bethlehem College have changed the name of that institution to "Piedmont Junior College" (formerly Bethlehem College). President Beougher also announces that an adjourned meeting of the board of trustees is to be held at the college on July 4th. The meeting is to be in the form of a rally day for the newly organized junior college, with a free dinner and good speaking.

President W. B. Truitt of the North Carolina and Virginia Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention is exceedingly anxious that all Sunday Schools and Endeavor societies of the convention elect delegates and have them present at the annual convention in Durham, N. C., June 21-22. A very fine program is in preparation, and Bro. Truitt, who is one of our great Sunday School teachers and workers, proposes to give all who come to the convention a program worth their while.

A young man who wishes his name withheld has offered a prize of $5.00 to the young person writing the best paper on "Why I Should Like to Attend the Elon Summer School"; and $5.00 also to the young person writing a similar paper about the Bethlehem College Summer School. The Elon papers should be in the hands of Miss Pattie Coghill by June 15th, and the Bethlehem papers by June 20th. It is hoped that there will be a lively interest in this competition. Address Miss Coghill at Henderson, N. C.

Rev. Joe French, of Wedowee, Ala., graduating from Elon College this week, will be in Alabama during the summer, ready and willing to preach and do Church work as opportunity may afford and as demands may require. Bro. French has made a fine record at Elon and is a capable minister, and we are hoping that a field of labor equal to his strength and ability will soon engage him. Any Church or Churches desiring a capable and well-equipped young man as pastor for the coming year would do well to correspond with him.

Rev. P. T. Klapp, Elon College, was with Pastor Madren at Elk Spur and Rocky Ford Sunday, May 20th, and held the Communion service at the latter place. This was Bro. Klapp's first visit to our mountain Churches, and he was much gratified at what has been done and is being done there. Bro. Madren is to move into the parsonage June 1st and give all his time to the work during the summer months. He is hopeful of the work. Both Churches have taken the missionary offering and hope to increase it and send it in during the month of June.

Rev. D. P. Barrett, Mrs. Barrett and the Mission Secretary were with Dr. C. H. Rowland, Greensboro, in his mid-week prayer-meeting services Wednesday night, May 23rd. The Barretts delighted the group with their talks about the work, the achievements and the needs in Porto Rico. Bro. Rowland's Church is missionary in spirit and activity. They are working on their missionary offering, several of the circles of their missionary societies having pledged $25 each for the special offering, and Dr. Rowland feels that his people will do their part gladly. It was a joy to be with Pastor Rowland and his good people. Some of our most faithful workers and loyal souls are to be found in First Church, Greensboro.

We trust every CHRISTIAN SUN reader will give careful reading and study to the contribution in this issue by Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, entitled "The Missionary Spirit, Fundamental to Church Life and Growth." Bro. Harrell makes out his case and convinces the reader that missions are not merely a matter or a movement to save the heathen, but first of all to save the Church at home and to do our duty for Christ's sake. This writer has said over and over, and cannot repeat it too often, that God never has allowed a non-missionary Church, whether large or small, to grow and to become powerful, and He never will and never can, in keeping with His Word. Those Churches will suffer most who do least for missions and give least to missions.

Mrs. W. R. Sellers, Burlington, N. C., treasurer of the Woman's Mission Board of the North Carolina Christian Conference, under date of May 21st, writes: "Since learning about the possibility of the Barretts not being able to go back to Porto Rico for another year from lack of funds with which to send them, I have felt that we must give ourselves to prayer more definitely. I am sending you two clippings from the Sunday School Times, one entitled "Does Prayer Alter God's Laws?" and the other "Praying for the Impossible," which have brought blessings and encouragement to me. If our people will give themselves to prayer for missions, there will be more interest and more funds. Since I signed the prayer covenant some years ago for missions I have kept that covenant to pray for missions, and it has been a real blessing." Mrs. Sellers is certainly right in her conclusions. If people will pray more for our mission cause it certainly will change things, and the results will be far greater both in the enrichment of individual lives and in gifts to missions.

We beg every SUN reader to weigh well Rev. D. P. Barrett's contribution in this issue, "Why I Wish to Return." In this a man's heart is speaking. He has given twenty-seven years of faithful and efficient service. It will be a tragedy in his life as well as in our Church life not to return him to Porto Rico, and the only hope of doing so now is in the size of the offerings that shall come in during the month of June. The mission period in the North is closed, and in the light of what was done, the Mission Board, meeting in Dayton last week, decided that they saw nothing else to do than to keep Bro. Barrett at home and to make cuts equally as drastic and cutting in Japan. So we are just hoping and praying that the pastors and people will realize the situation and will now come to the relief. It is a tragedy that we are reduced to such straits to even have to suggest to Bro. Barrett that he remain home; and the only way, as already stated, that we can avert this tragedy both to Bro. Barrett and to the work in Porto Rico and to the Church is to send in contributions large and liberal for missions during the mission period, which closes June 30th.

Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, writing under date of May 22nd, says: "It is unthinkable that Bro. Barrett should not go back to Porto Rico because of lack of funds. A way must be found to meet the emergency." Reports come from everywhere to the same effect, but the General Mission Board has decided, and unless the returns in the South during the month of June are very much larger even than now contemplated, the unthinkable will have to take place and the Barretts will have to remain at home for a year; and a cut in the work in Japan even more drastic than this will have to be made. The mission period in the North is now over, and the returns have been distressingly discouraging, and our only hope is for all the pastors to secure liberal offerings from their Churches in June here in the South and for individuals with liberal hearts to send us in contributions for the work. Remember that funds, unless designated, are divided half to home and half to foreign, for the work in the home field is suffering even as the work in the foreign field. When the people of the Christian Church become awakened to their missionary opportunities and obligations, we will not have to face such distressing and heart-rending emergencies. Up to the present, however, we have made missions secondary or kept missions far in the background, contrary to the Word and the will of Almighty God. The Word of God puts missions first, and no Church can afford to do otherwise if it hopes to prosper and go forward in kingdom construction.

WHY GIVE OUR MONEY TO MISSIONS?

By REV. JNO. G. TRUITT, Preacher.

"Freely ye have received, freely give."
—Matt. 10:8.

My heart leaps up with joy when I think of Jesus as my Friend, my Adviser, and my Saviour. I sometimes reach that joyous place when I feel He has so blessed me as to allow me to share, in a very humble measure, something of the spirit of discipleship. In such moments I like to slip in among the group of disciples that gathered so often around the great Teacher, Friend and Saviour, and hear for myself what He is saying. I find a supreme joy in trying to bring my friends into that same relationship. We all thus gather about Jesus and wait for His words of life and service. There is something divinely helpful about such a practice of the presence of Jesus. In an hour when I am trying to answer some very great question for those who are like me seeking to know the Saviour's will I am especially constrained to slip into the realm of His disciples and hear Him speak for Himself. Today we are seeking an answer to the question, "Why give our money to missions?" Let us, then, with all attention of mind and humbleness of spirit, hear Him bid us come into the fellowship of His leadership and counsel.

We turn to the tenth chapter of Matthew's gospel. Jesus is instructing and sending out the twelve. Two things He is doing there—giving instructions and giving orders. As disciples, we shall be required to hear His words. By the use of a little common sense, we shall avoid a difficulty in the very outset. We hear Jesus saying to that group of men, in that particular time: "Go not into the way of the Gentiles, etc.," but we know that Jesus was directing a local campaign with wisdom, and suiting His language to that particular time and place. No one will say He meant by those words to exclude Gentiles from His salvation, nor that those words make it impossible for us to do missionary work in lands afar. That would be sheer nonsense in the light of the whole gospel. But there are words immediately following which come to us with all possible force. Hear them: "As ye go, preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand. Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils; freely ye have received, freely give." There is the program of Christian missions, and there is also the source of its support. "I should like to have seen His kind look when He said, 'Heal the sick.'" I should like to have seen the glory of the Church's future success resting upon His countenance when He said, "Cast out devils." I should like to have seen the call to life service when He said, "Freely ye have received, freely give." There He stands amidst His dependence for the future success of the Jesus-movement instructing those who are to carry it forward that they are to heal the sick, give life, conquer sin! Is our question beginning to be answered? Why give our money to missions? "Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils: freely ye have received, freely give."

Again let us come into the circle of His disciples. This time we are close up to some of the most sacred scenes in the life of Christ. And back of it all, in the light of a completed gospel, we hear running a double refrain: "As the Father hast loved me . . . as the Father hast sent me." He is establishing the great sacrament. He is doing it in such a way as to show that life is a sacrament, and that ours is given to us in sacred trust. The towel and basin of water, the cup, and broken bread are never-to-be-forgotten symbols of service and sacrifice. He closes the long, midnight vigil with prayer, and in it He says: "As Thou hast sent me into the world, even so have I also sent them into the world. . . . Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word, that they all may be one." It was not enough that they were disciples, "learners," but they were to be apostles, "sent ones." Why give our money to missions? Are we disciples? "Freely ye have received, freely give."

Suffering had ceased, the dead was alive, and the "Prince of this world had been routed; and again, after His resurrection, He met them in an appointed place in Galilee. Let us, if we are disciples, slip into that close up circle. We shall hear Him as they heard Him, and we can do no other! "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen." Is our question being answered: "Freely ye have received, freely give." That command shall not die on our hands.

And once again, let us slip into that society which has become ours not because we have chosen Him, but because He has chosen us (John 15:16), and hear His words: "And ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth. And when He had spoken these words, while they beheld, He was taken up." From all these places, and more, it is perfectly plain that our decision to give to, or hold our money from missions is directly related to our decision to accept Jesus as our Saviour, or not to accept Him. Without some very special divinely imposed reason, it seems that one may doubt entirely his discipleship if one has no willingness to give to missions.

Being asked by one why we should give our money to missions, and if allowed seven answers, I should choose the following:

1. Because we cannot ourselves go. Each one has his own idea as to why he cannot go preach Christ himself. But we either must go or send those who will go for us.

2. Because we live in a money age. The money that a high school girl handles now would have made her grandfather rich. This is an age in which things are all too greatly expressed in terms of money. It is an age when the very poor, the poor, the middle class, the rich, and the very rich have much money. Things are done today with money. One of the things to be done is to Christianize the world.

3. Because we have pledged it to our missionaries. Our Church is a group of Christ's servants, or it certainly should be. We come together, and some say we can go; others say we cannot personally go, but we will help send you. If you will go we will send you. That is the contract. They have gone. Their living expenses are due, but unpaid; some of them are being kept at home. Many have not been sent. We have sent too few, and yet we are not playing square with those whom we have sent. We are failing them, and we are failing Jesus.

4. Because of our needy fields. We know that part of the work of winning the world to Christ is ours. Our churchly and Christian pride demands that we ask the Churches of Christendom for a field. Two fields are allotted us, small fields comparatively speaking, and all of the Churches of Christendom turn their faces to their own fields and leave us to ours. Our fields now desire only about seventy-five cents per year per member from us, and how they need a dollar, or five dollars per member from us! "Freely ye have received, freely give."

5. Because missions advance the spirit of neighborliness among nations. Mothers of little babies will read that reason. And mothers of ten millions of slain young men on recent battlefields could help mightily in interpreting its meaning. They would tell us that the World War was waged not on account of the advancement of the spirit of Jesus, but for the lack of it.

6. Because Christ wants us to. "Freely ye have received, freely give."

7. Because we want to. We may call that last one a woman's reason; but since the women have been putting up so much of the money, we might as well honor them thus. Because we want to give our money. For we shall want to give it when we think it through, when we look into the face of Jesus, when we hear the call of needy ones, when we surrender ourselves to Him, we shall want to. And the more we give, the more we shall want to give. In the light of what Christ has done, through missions, for us, we want to. And we will.

CHURCH GAINS BY MISSIONARY EFFORT.

This is a great question for our denomination to consider at the present time. I think each member of the Christian Church should consider this carefully in this light. Has any man ever accomplished much in this life living for self and self alone?

The biggest men of today are those who have helped others in every vocation of life. One of the happiest men that I ever talked to in my life, in a conversation with me on his death-bed, made this remark: "It is true that I have not accumulated as much of this world's goods as some others, but the happiest thought that I have, as I know that my days are nearly ended, is that I have helped others."

This man has now passed away, but his life still lives now in others and in the memorials erected in his honor.

Now, let's take the corporations of our country. Which of these are doing the biggest things for the development of our country? It is those that are going out into new fields and developing the country to make a greater and bigger one from a commercial viewpoint.

The Christian denomination is also a corporation, and the Lord is calling on each individual of our denomination to do something for the kingdom that we may grow as a denomination and make it a bigger one for the spread of the gospel and the salvation of souls. And I want to say that in order to do this each one of us must have the missionary spirit. The happiest congregations and the greatest Churches are those that carry the missionary ideas into their work and give of their money to help others and to carry the gospel into the dark corners, not only of our country here, but into the foreign fields. When we do that, we will be richer as a denomination and in the kingdom.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

A TRAGIC AND DEPLORABLE CONDITION.

We are printing elsewhere in this edition an official announcement from the Foreign Mission Board of the Christian Convention, Dr. W. P. Fletcher, President; Dr. W. P. Minton, Secretary—"The Foreign Mission Board Retrenches." This statement should certainly go home to the hearts of our people. It seems difficult for us of the Southern Christian Convention to realize the present need and the deplorable situation on our foreign mission fields. Dr. Minton writes that there has been a considerable falling off in gifts in the North, and while our period in the South does not end till June 30th, up to date the returns are exceedingly doubtful and unpromising. Dr. Minton writes that he sees no other way than for us to retain the Barretts at home for a year, advising that Bro. Barrett secure a Church somewhere to relieve the Mission Board of his meagre salary; that there are not enough funds in hand to pay even their transportation back to Porto Rico. This, in face of the fact that the Mortons have come home from Porto Rico and have left the work there entirely unmanned. This is nothing else than a tragedy. Bro. and Sister Barrett have labored most faithfully and effectually for twenty-seven years and have done a great work in Porto Rico and are anxious to return. It will grieve them beyond words if they cannot return; we feel that they must return. We are wondering what our pastors are going to do about it. We are wondering if the pastors are going on and be indifferent to this distressing need, contented to enjoy the gospel and to give it to the few within their reach themselves, while there are thousands and hundreds of thousands waiting for the gospel and who are perishing without it.

Dr. Minton writes that he has cabled to Japan that a cut of $6,000 must be made in the budget the remainder of the year. A return cablegram comes begging not to cut more than $2,000, and that to do this is a tragedy and means abandoning work already begun. Dr. Minton has cabled the second time to Japan that the cut of $6,000 must be made, whatever the results may be; that the people are simply not giving to foreign missions and on all sides there is indifference and the funds have simply not come in. Dr. Minton declares that the cut in Japan is even worse than that in Porto Rico, and that it almost breaks his heart to have to face such a situation, but that he has borrowed from the banks and done his best, laboring, praying and pleading that the people would take the offering and send in their gifts, but thus far in vain.

It is now up to us of the Southern Convention, for our period is not out. Will our pastors, during the month of June, heed this cry for help, this call for real need, this plea for mercy, this opportunity for real service? If we of the Christian Church do not carry out the command of our Lord in giving the gospel to those who haven't it, what are we to expect in results for the Church at home? God's blessings never have attended a non-missionary Church and never will. We are not raising the cry of alarm. We are simply trying to bring home to our pastors and people the necessity of taking the offering and of sending in their mission funds now, that this tragedy may be averted and that the name of our God may be glorified and His cause built up in the world. Dear pastors, give your people a chance; dear people, back up your pastors and let us not trench in a work so important.

J. O. A.

SHALL WE RETURN THEM?

The editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN has not in many months received more distressing information than that which comes from the meeting of the General Mission Board, Dayton, Ohio, last week. The conclusion in that meeting that the Barretts would have to be retained at home for another year from lack of funds with which to return them to their life's work in Porto Rico is tragic and deplorable indeed; and, moreover, that the work in Japan will suffer just as much and the cut is even greater and more drastic than that in Porto Rico is just as bad. This conclusion was reached by the General Board at Dayton because the returns thus far from the mission offering this spring have been so poor. The funds simply do not justify going forward with the work, and "the banks have loaned all they will," writes Dr. Minton, and "our people will not come to the relief of the situation." In spite of this fact, there are scores, not to say hundreds, of our pastors who are going on without taking the offering for missions, or even giving their people a chance. All we ask is that the matter be explained to the people and that an opportunity be given them to make contributions to our mission cause. How can we hope, or expect, God's blessings to abide us in the homeland, and His strength sustain us when we are absolutely indifferent to the great commission—contented ourselves that we have the gospel, but unwilling to share its blessings and benefits with others who haven't it. Dr. Minton writes that he has done his best to bring this distressing situation before our people, but the majority of the pastors go on in indifference and that the Churches will not give heed and that the board has done its best.

We of the South have one more month of the mission period, and can redeem the situation if every pastor in the Convention who has not taken the offering will bring the distressing situation before his people and tell of the needs and also of the opportunities. Some of the pastors have already taken the offering and have found it easy to raise their quota which the Southern Board has set at one-sixth of the pastor's salary. Surely our people are willing to give one-sixth as much to send the gospel to others as they are to pay to have it preached to themselves. This is a very modest request, and the pastors who have tried have found it easy.

Bear in mind that Porto Rico will be unmanned unless the Barretts return, since the Mortons have resigned and have come home; and bear in mind further that Bro. and Sister Barrett have given twenty-seven years of their life to this work, and they are to be considered, for they love Porto Rico and the work there even as their own lives, and are anxious to make the sacrifice and to return to labor among a people and for a people, hundreds of whom they have wonderfully helped, while hundreds and thousands of others are waiting upon their ministry and need the message which they are willing to carry. Let us take the offering, make it liberal and large, and see to it that they return. It certainly will be a calamity, not to say a tragedy, if we fail to return them and if we make the cut in Japan equally as distressing, which now seems imminent. We call upon our pastors everywhere to interest themselves in this serious situation and take the offering in June for missions if it has not already been taken.

J. O. A.

A CALL TO THE PASTORS.

The Mission Board, at the beginning of the mission period, sought to be extremely conservative in their plea with our pastors and people for missions. The Mission Secretary recalls that Mrs. M. L. Bryant, a member of the board, in seconding the motion that the askings from each Church be upon a basis of one-sixth of the pastor's salary, said: "Surely our people will be willing to give enough to have the gospel preached two months on the mission field while they are paying their own pastor to preach the gospel twelve months to themselves." The Mission Secretary feels the same way, and if the pastors lay the matter emphatically before the people we believe the response will be gratifying. We call upon the pastors to give the people a chance and to urge them to make one-sixth of the pastor's salary a minimum and to give beyond this if they will. Mission funds, both for the home and foreign work, were never so needed. If the present offering measures up to the request it will relieve a tense situation. We hope every pastor and all THE CHRISTIAN SUN readers will read carefully the statement on another page from Lieutenant-Governor J. E. West, Suffolk, Va., chairman of our Mission Board. Lieutenant-Governor West makes a brief and pointed plea for co-operation of all our pastors now. Surely the pastors will make it unanimous and take the offering in answer to the plea of Lieutenant-Governor West, our chairman, who is deeply interested and knows the need.

JUST FOR HIS NAME.

Our Lord Christ evidently wanted His followers to do something for His sake. Giving to missions is the most unselfish and the most Christ-like giving known to mankind. We may trace all of our other gifts back to some personal element, or hope of earthly reward, or expectation of earthly results, or to the satisfaction of personal pride. When, however, we give our money to carry the gospel to those who haven't it, we have performed a deed solely for Christ's sake and expect no reward or praise of men this side the gates of glory. Christ said, "do it," and we have gone and done it, and that is all there is to it. We do it for His sake.

In the present missionary campaign we are not asking that contributions be made for the sake of the Porto Ricans, or for the sake of the Japanese, or for the sake of others without the gospel. We are asking for contributions for Christ and for the gospel's sake. He has commanded it. And we do it in obedience to His command. His anxious heart, His bleeding hands, His pierced side, His deep desire are at stake and appeal to us when we give not for our sake or the heathen's sake, but for the sake of Him who gave His life that whosoever should believe on Him should not perish. We are asking all our pastors and all our Churches to take the mission offering. We do it in His name and for His sake. He wants all the world to know His message and to live in the light of His truth and to hear the good news of His saving power. On this account He has bidden us go. And with the agony of the cross in mind, He said: "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, take up His cross and follow me." We are to deny ourselves for His sake that the message of His salvation may be carried to the uttermost parts, not because we want it done, but because He wants it done, and gave His life on the cruel cross that it might be done. Let us deny ourselves of some of our substance purely for the sake of Jesus Christ. That is the heart and the soul of the missionary plea and offering. J. O. A.

EDUCATION AND RELIGION.

These two subjects have engaged the minds and hearts of more people than any other two subjects that have made history. No people have been so primitive that they did not think and worship. In some parts of the world, and among some races, thinking has been crude and worship immature; but education and religion have had place and some expression in all countries. Education found its highest expression among the Greeks, and religion its purest expression among the Jews. Athens and Jerusalem were the centers of learning and religion. When Jesus Christ came He harmonized these two qualities inherent and inseparable in mankind. The desire to know and to be is as universal as life itself; and they can no more be separated in safety than body and spirit can be separated and life continue to exist. Every step in the progress of Christian civilization has demonstrated the necessity for the unity of these two main lines of progress. Education without religion is intellectualism; religion without education is heathenism. Christianity is striving to so unite these two controlling elements in mankind as to balance them in the fashioning of Christian character for individuals and relations.

Education is the normal development of the inherent mental potentialities of man, and the process is life-long. It begins with the child and ends with age. There is no stage free from its importance and none beyond its necessity. Age is learning today as well as the young. There are so many discoveries and inventions that professors are learning as well as children; and they learn from each other. It is the dual contact of mind with mind. The child is never too young to begin, and the man is never old enough to stop. In ordinary education, the mind may develop along many lines as common studies in common schools indicate. Higher education is the development of special gifts or talents, as mathematics, language, music, science, and here is the work of developing the leaders in the world's work. Musical education deals with musical talent; mathematical education deals with mathematical talent, and so for the rest. Education is at its best when it is understood that these talents are God-given and should be developed for His use. The public school, which is the product of Christian civilization, should never lose sight of its obligation to maintain the Christian spirit in its work. The Bible has a natural and a historic right in the public school.

Religion is the normal development of the spiritual potentialities of the spirit of man. As education works through the mind, religion works through the heart. Conscience is the moral sense awakened in man by which he determines what is right and what is wrong. The moral sense is wrought in man by the Spirit of God working with his spirit. Religion in its truest sense is the spirit of man responding to the influence of the Holy Spirit upon his heart. Repentance grows out of man's consciousness that he is a sinner, and regeneration is the gift of a new life in answer to his faith. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." That new spiritual life begets within man a new hunger for knowledge. The religious man is the learning man. The more religious people become, the more open-minded and the clearer in vision and aspirations. Education cannot be kept out of religion. Schools, papers, books, pictures—all multiply among religious people. Society climbs to a greater height, government deals more with moral questions, and education and religion, as twin sisters, unite in songs of praise and victory through Jesus Christ. Two thousand years have brought us where we are; two thousand years more will put the world beyond its present dreams.

EDUCATIONAL ASSET OF MISSIONS.

Education is far more than textbooks and courses of study. It is a broadening of vision and an extension of sympathy and an enlarging of the interests of life.

In view of these considerations, it is evident that the missionary enterprise of the Church should loom up large on the horizon of objectives and purposes as well as in programs and curricula of Christian colleges. If there is any item that will broaden the vision, quicken the sympathies, and enlarge the interests of young people more than acquaintance with the missionary enterprise, it does not occur to the writer at this time.

In order to comprehend properly the missionary enterprise to which the Church of Jesus Christ is committed and to which He commissioned it, it is necessary to know the spiritual history and heritage of the human race. It is not sufficient properly to evaluate the missionary appeal of the Church of Christ to know the spiritual history of the Hebrews and of the Christian Church itself. To a complete understanding of the missionary enterprise there must be knowledge of and acquaintance with the living religions of the world and likewise the dead religions of mankind. It is necessary to know why certain religious systems have survived and why others have passed away. All this has its bearing upon the effectiveness of our Christian missionary appeal and the efficiency with which we will carry on our work.

It is also necessary to know the outcomes of the living and dead religions of mankind in personal character and in social living, because after all the real test of religion is found in the fruit it produces in individual lives and in social organizations. Just as we are to know our contemporaries by the fruits of their life, just so are we to understand other religions, living and dead, by their fruits.

Now, it is admitted that comparative religion has not always been studied from the standpoint of outcome. It has been presented as a factual body of knowledge, worth while to be sure and suggestive, but it has lacked the practical value included in the thought of rendering judgment on the various religions in terms of their outcomes or fruits.

The Christian college that neglects, therefore, to imbue its students in the knowledge and in the spirit of Christian missions will lose a rare opportunity of broadening vision, quickening sympathy and enlarging interests. In other words, the college which fails to give its students the proper orientation with reference to the missionary enterprise and all that is involved in it has deprived itself of a splendid avenue of real education.

But this missionary enterprise of the Christian Church is not to be passed up with mere study if its real educational asset is to be achieved. This is the day of the project in education. The demand is for practical experience on the part of students, an experience that will not only initiate them into the enterprises which they will be expected to champion when they are through with college studies, but that will make them actual participants in those enterprises during their college days. We are reminded again and again that college is not only a preparation for life, but that it is life itself. And so the Christian college owes it to its students not only to instruct them in the realm of missions so that they will understand the greatness and magnitude of the enterprise, so that their visions will be broadened, their sympathies quickened and their interests enlarged in the way of intellectual comprehension and understanding, but professors in such colleges will also find themselves challenged as real educators to inaugurate projects by which their students will become participants in a definite and practical way in the missionary program of the Church.

This latter objective can be achieved through public addresses, through visiting missionaries, through group discussions of a voluntary character, through pageants and plays of missionary import and character, but particularly and most effectively in providing means of giving for the support of missions on the part of students.

The Christian college cannot safely neglect the educational asset that is involved in the missionary enterprise of the Christian Church. It owes it to its students, to its constituency and to its own ultimate purpose to institute through curriculum instruction and through practical projects methods by which the young people who resort to it for the light and motivation may become the vehicle for gathering up and conserving the educational asset of missions.

WHAT MISSIONS HAVE MEANT TO WOMEN.

It was a new day, fresh and promising, when the women of our Church recognized the challenge of missions. Larger fields of helpfulness opened up before them, wider horizons stretched out to their view. They came into closer comradeship with the great leaders of our Church.

Previous to this, there had never been any great unifying action as a group among our women. We were a large number of loosely related parts. Weak and powerless because we had never been organized in the interest of a worth-while objective. Gradually we have found out something of our strength, and in an organized way we even dare to do and bring things to pass. Perhaps one of the most outstanding things missions have done for our women has been the discovery of ourselves.

A few years ago if there could be found in a congregation one woman who could be induced to assume leadership for the group, it was indeed a happy situation. Today we are made to marvel again and again—thanks to the circle place in our work—at the large number of women of the finest executive ability to be found in our Churches. They had been honest; they had not known their capabilities until the challenge of a great task had thrust them forth.

Then, the study of missions has meant so much from many standpoints to women. Through the books especially prepared for them, on subjects

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The easiest thing for man is honest work! Many people look upon work as a hardship, a drudgery; but a careful study of folks and work will uncover a great fact in relation to human conditions divinely provided. Heaven would not be heaven if there were nothing to do. The busiest being in the universe is God. If He had nothing to do but look after the birds, it would be more than an angel's job, for "not even a sparrow falls to the ground without His notice." And Jesus said, "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work." As man was made in the image of God, he was made to work. Work includes not only manual effort, but mental effort as well. The boy works on the farm or in the mill; he also works examples in school. In each case he may use both mind and muscle. There is too much distinction made between manual labor and mental labor. One is as hard as the other. The man who designs a machine works as hard as the man who builds it. The man who runs an engine works as hard as the men who designed and constructed it.

The Fourth Commandment corresponds with creation with reference to work. "Remember the Sabbath Day, to keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work, but the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work . . . for in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day." God provided for man's best condition six days for work and one day for rest. That day of rest is for cessation from labor and worship in the Lord's house. There is nothing so restful as the house of God on the Sabbath. It is the separation of body and mind from the labor and care of the week. If God's order were reversed, by resting six days and working one day, it would be a burden to all. The long rest would relax the muscles and nerves and make one day of work very hard; but one day of rest just puts the man in good shape for work again. Nothing could be more monotonous than to sit on a soft seat all day. The hardest day a working man ever has is when he is looking for a job. The hardest week a man ever has is when he has no work. The busiest times are the best times; the duller times are the hardest times. Nothing is so satisfactory as a steady job or a safe position. A man with nothing to do is the most miserable man in town. Even a river looks unhappy when there has been no rain for a long time and it has almost nothing to do; but when it rains, the river rushes on, looks happy and cheers all who see it.

What is true in the world at large is true in the Church. The idle member is the unhappy member; the busy member is the satisfied member. Jesus told His disciples to "go, work in my vineyard." Some people think because they cannot do great things for the Church it is useless to do small things. They ought to remember that a dollar watch at work is worth more than a hundred-dollar watch not at work. The minute hand of a clock is as important as the hour hand. The small faithful member of the Church is as useful as the big faithful member. The Bible does not say, "Be great," but "Be thou faithful."

ELON LETTER.

The Methodist Protestant Church, a sister of the Christian Church in origin, having sprung from the Methodist Church in 1828, thirty-six years after the Rev. James O'Kelly and his peers withdrew so dramatically from the Baltimore Conference, is now a century old.

The centennial convention of this body, which numbers some 200,000 members in the United States and which maintains foreign mission work in China, Japan and India, as well as in South America, was held in the Hampden Methodist Protestant Church, Baltimore, Md., May 10-14, 1928.

The program was an attractive one and featured particularly the work of young people. Aside from the denominational leaders, leaders in the International Council of Religious Education, and in the Christian Endeavor movement were featured in special addresses and conferences.

The theme of the convention was "Christ Pre-eminent," and the convention text was (Colos. 1:18), "That in all things He might have pre-eminence."

The Methodist Protestant Church withdrew from the Methodist conference in 1828 over the rights of laymen, and has had a sort of compromise government embodying some of the principles of the free congregational government of the Christian Church and the episcopal government of the Methodist Church.

At each annual conference, one minister and one layman are chosen as a stationing committee, and this committee hears the delegates of the various Churches to the annual conference in regard to their wishes for pastors, and then reports these appointments for approval of the conference. In addition to this, a president is elected who cannot serve more than five years. This president is an all-time officer and general superintendent. This has proved to be a very satisfactory method of Church government. For the past five years they have also had an all-time president of their general conference.

The Methodist Protestant people are closely kin to both the Christian Church and the Methodist Church in doctrine and sentiment and in methods of work, though differing in the basis of their government. This goes to show that the spirit, after all, and not the form determines character not only in individuals, but in organizations likewise.

One disappointing thing respecting this centennial convention is that there did not appear on the program a leader of the Methodist Church, from which the Methodist Protestant Church sprang, nor from the Christian Church, a sister Church, as we have said, of the Methodist Protestants.

A second disappointment is the fact that the convention met in a time when Christian union is in the very atmosphere, and there is no suggestion that the builders of this program ever heard of Christian union or that they were in any way influenced by the growing sentiment for it in all denominations. This appears to me a tragedy.

How it is possible for a body of Christian workers to come together for five days with such a theme as the pre-eminence of Christ engaging their thought and attention and with no word or suggestion for Christian union, stumps the writer! Perhaps he is crazy on the subject of Christian union and that real sanity is found in the attitude of the centennial convention of this great Christian body. But when he recalls that our Master prayed for the oneness of His followers in His high priestly prayer just before His arrest and crucifixion, he is inclined to think that his devotion to the cause of Christian union is well founded and that the forces, factors, organizations, institutions or persons which array themselves against what is in a truly vital sense the program of Jesus for His Church.

WHY I WISH TO RETURN.

It has been my privilege to visit and speak in a considerable number of Churches during this vacation period of nine months. On several occasions, when speaking, I have found a few people who showed some surprise when I told of my hopes and plans for the work in the mission field on my return as soon as this school year closed. Some of my friends have expressed themselves as feeling that twenty-seven years in the tropics is a sufficient length of time to remain there. A short while ago a good brother minister wrote to me, asking that if I wanted to return to Porto Rico that I please tell the brotherhood why I wanted to go. I am glad to know that there are some among our Church people who want to know why. In order to state fully my reasons for returning to Porto Rico, I shall have to make some references to personal experiences.

The first reason is the conviction of a personal obligation to God. I have always believed that every vocation should be preceded by a definite call of God. I think the majority of people believe in the divine call to Abraham, to Moses, to the prophets and to Paul. Personally I believe that He calls men and women today as directly and as distinctly as He has ever done, though it may be in a very different way.

On March 4, 1900, in the city of Nashville, Tenn., there came an unmistakable assurance from God that I should be a witness for Him on the mission field. Overwhelmed by such a significant call, my very soul responded, "Where Thou leadest I will follow." I have never had any doubt regarding the genuineness of the call, nor have I ever faltered in my desire to be faithful in carrying out the responsibility He laid upon me at that time.

The second reason is my feeling of a personal duty to the Christian Church. When the call came, I was unable to answer it on my own resources. The Christian Church graciously took the responsibility of sending me. Ever since then the Church has supported me not only financially, but also morally. The prayers and encouraging letters of friends have been indispensable to the success attained in the work. My indebtedness to the Church is great, and I wish always to remain faithful to the charge tendered me.

The Mission Board has recently suggested that I fulfill my duty to the Church by securing a pastorate here for the home country. This would, at the same time, relieve them of further financial responsibility. Within a few months after leaving the seminary at Nashville, Tenn., in 1900, my life's work began on the mission field. For twenty-seven years practically all of my thinking, speaking, studying and every phase of my work has been carried on in a foreign language and with a people of foreign habits and customs. I have never served a pastorate where English was used. Therefore, one can readily understand that difficulties could arise in my serving a home Church. This would not be fair to the home Church which I might serve. Because of this, I believe that I am better prepared to serve my Church in Porto Rico than in any other place.

This brings me to my third reason, namely: my personal responsibility to the work in Porto Rico. The Christian Church took an unoccupied part of the island in 1901, with the purpose of evangelizing it. In this territory, containing 70,000 people, we have built three creditable Church buildings and four chapels, and have purchased three mission homes. We have about $50,000 worth of property in Porto Rico.

We have five native men and one native lady giving all time to the missions, and two girls giving part time. There are two young men who are volunteer workers who hope to enter school for their preparation at an early date. By the time this letter is in print, we will have no missionary on the field except Miss Adams, who has been on the field about eight months, and therefore has not had time to acquaint herself thoroughly with the language or the people. The board's requirement is a cut of $3,000 on the present budget. Every week's mail brings letters from the workers hopeful of our speedy return to the field.

I think any one can imagine my feelings on knowing this situation. It makes me want to go back now, much more so than ordinarily, because the mission work is in a critical condition. It makes me want to stand by, working faithfully to make the best of the situation in that work which has filled my thoughts for more than a quarter of a century. I do not feel that I could be happy and satisfied anywhere else, knowing that hundreds of people are looking to the Churches we have in Porto Rico for knowledge and inspiration and that there is no one adequately prepared to carry on the work.

PROGRESS IN FOREIGN MISSIONS.

A Street Scene in Arus, Porto Rico.

The drastic cut which the Mission Board recently had to make in our foreign mission work, because of lack of funds, will make it practically impossible for this field to receive the help it ought to have. Our Church building can be seen in the background to the right. We have not sufficient funds to maintain a minister at this place, though we have both a Church building and parsonage here.

A Product of Our Newspaper Evangelism in Japan.

Here is a fine group of young men who have been attracted to the Christian religion through reading our advertisements in the newspapers of Japan. They are located in a distant outpost where work was only begun after a group of these young men had, by correspondence, expressed their faith in the Christian religion. The recent cut in the work will practically wipe out all such efforts for several years to come.

Paso Seco, Porto Rico.

In a number of stations like this little village the Christian Church has been carrying on work for several years, and every year or two a group of earnest Christians is organized into a new Church. But the recent cut in the appropriations will mean that most, if not all, of these outposts will have to be dropped and services no longer attempted there.

A Tent Meeting in Central Japan.

Rev. Muraoka, dressed in foreign clothes, seated in the center of the group, has done a fine work in going out to nearby villages from his headquarters, in Yaita, to hold services for those where no regular Christian work has ever before been attempted. He has succeeded in interesting many people by this method. This and many other similar groups will find their access to the gospel message cut off by the recent reduction in the work.

The Sunday School at Jauco, Porto Rico.

This is just one of the groups in Porto Rico outposts which have been ordered closed by the Mission Board because of lack of funds to conduct them. All over our fields in Japan and Porto Rico boys and girls like these will find that their privileges to attend a Christian Sunday School are suddenly cut off.

PORTO RICO LETTER.

Weekly I receive letters from different groups in our Churches who wish to know a little about Porto Rico. Therefore, I shall attempt to write a few paragraphs about this island in general.

For the past six months I have been especially interested to study the natives and their characteristics and their conditions of living. I have found the Porto Rican is the embodiment of hospitality, courtesy and tact. The poorest peon in the country possesses a native social ease that is seldom found among other nations. A stranger can always be sure of an unaffected welcome even to the most humble country hut.

This courtesy is not confined to the social life. It permeates and influences every phase of living. In the business world he does not depend upon the complicated efficiency systems, but he has a way of ingratiating himself into the confidence of his customer and establishing a personal friendship. The courtesy of the Porto Rican often runs to the extremity. We must not take him too literally. With my experience, as I visit the homes and often admire the handwork or other articles which are strange to me, I am always told, "You are welcome to it." I receive many presents which I feel I must accept. Now I have learned not to admire all that I see.

It is doubtful if there is a more kind and generous person to be found anywhere than the Porto Rican, in spite of the abject poverty of a large percentage of the population. If one or both parents die, the children are divided among the neighbors to share the trials and fortunes of another meagre existence. Last week Dona Delfina and I visited our poor sections. In one home there were many children. I asked the mother if they were all her children, and she said, "No, the baby belongs to my neighbor, who died some time ago." Indeed, I call that extreme generosity, because their condition of poverty is beyond description. We also find that there are hundreds of professional beggars that infest the island, principally because it is easier to make an immediate appeal to the Porto Ricans.

The wealth of the island, I am told, is in the hands of 15 per cent of the population. The rest are struggling through poverty and its attendant evils. The country man of Porto Rico comprises such a large proportion of the population. They tell me the following of the daily diet of this unfortunate class: He rises at dawn and takes a coconut dipperful of coffee without sugar. Naturally he never uses milk. With this black coffee he works until about twelve o'clock, when his wife brings him his breakfast, corresponding to our lunch. This is composed of boiled salt codfish, with oil, and has one of the vegetables of the island to furnish the carborate element—banana platano, batatu or yattia.

At three in the afternoon he takes another dipperful of coffee, as he began the day, and when he returns at dusk he takes the same food. So you can imagine what kind of life this class is living. All these conditions bring tuberculosis, malaria, hookworm and many other diseases. The death rate is thirty-two per thousand. Indeed, the medical ministry is needed the most on this island, and it should be extended in order to save these people from their life of physical and moral ignorance.

I am trying to bring the value of hygienic living through our studies of the Bible in my training class and in my Sunday School class. As we know, through youth is the only way we can educate and better the conditions of the island, I am happy to say that the youth is ready to advance in order to uplift his country. Therefore, it is up to us, the Christian leaders, to teach them and lead them to a higher ideal of life.

I shall tell you more about the religious conditions, also the educational system in Porto Rico. I am sure that God will lead us on to lead others to Him. As the words of His Son assure us, "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the age."

SHALL WE RETRENCH IN MISSION GIFTS?

BY REV. L. E. SMITH, D. D.

A great opportunity confronts us—an opportunity to prove our faith by our works; an opportunity to prove our love by our giving; an opportunity to glorify His name in the earth and to speed the coming of His kingdom in this and other lands.

Those whom God has called to be His ministers in other fields, who have responded to His call and whom we of the Christian Church have ordained and sent out to speak for us in foreign lands and in foreign tongues are in need. The work itself, both in Porto Rico and in Japan, is in need. They need our co-operation and our prayers—and they have them. I am sure they have them, but they need our money, and must have it if they are to be permitted to accomplish the will of God in their lives and to carry on the work of His Church, established by our fathers in the years past.

Our missionaries have given their best, their all, and are most happy to do so. They are praying to be permitted to do so. It would break their hearts to be recalled, and I fear bring the curse of God upon us. Our beloved, sacrificing and efficient Mission Secretary, Dr. W. P. Minton, has put himself on the altar for the larger work of the kingdom through our Church. He is happy to do the will of God for us and for the kingdom through the position to which we have called him. He has our appreciation and our prayers. I know he has them, but it takes money to pay interest, to meet obligations and to pay missionary salaries. He must have money, he must have our money, he must have more of our money than we have been accustomed to give him. If not, then our missionaries will have to be recalled; and heaven knows we have too few already! and the work will have to be cut on all lines. It is sinful to think of such a lack of faith to consider it, not on the part of those who represent us or who are our officials, but on the part of us whose duty and privilege it is to make possible the continuance and progress of the work that is ours.

This is the hour of need, of serious and urgent need; the hour to which God has brought us, and He is waiting to see whether or not we will prove true, whether or not we will give back to Him a part of that that He has lent us; whether or not we will give as we have received; whether or not we will bring our tithes and our offerings into His storehouse, that His will may be done and that His kingdom may come.

Shall we retrench in our missionary giving? This is no time for retrenchment—this is the time for progress. This is no time for curtailments—this is the time for increases; the time for liberality; the time for sacrifice; the time to bring our tithes and our offerings, that God may have the opportunity to pour out His blessings upon our Church until there is not sufficient room to receive them.

I appeal to the Church, I appeal to every individual Church, I appeal to every wage-earner in the Church to come now, to come to the help of your Church, to come with your offerings, to give, to give in the same spirit and in the same proportion as ye have received.

If your Church has not taken your missionary offering, if your Church has not reached its quota, won't you please take the offering now? If you have not given in the special offering, won't you make it now and send it through your Church to

Dr. J. O. Atkinson, that our beloved Church may continue in the great work to which God has called it?

We must not, we cannot, we shall not fail.

OUR HOME MISSION TASK.

BY A. W. SPARKS, Secretary.

The Home Mission Board of the Christian Church has for many years carried on an aggressive program of missionary work throughout the home field, comprising the United States and Canada. It has recognized the great need of this kind of work in many sections of the country that America might be more Christian. When we see the millions in America who do not recognize God in their lives and who have little or nothing to do with the Church, we yet feel a great longing in our hearts that they might be reached with the gospel.

To save America is too large a task for the Christian Church alone, but we must do our share in helping to save it or bear the shame of our neglect. It is no disgrace to be a small Church, but it is a disgrace to do small things or to do the things we undertake in a small way.

Through the years past we have labored to do a worth-while task, and we have today a task worthy of our best efforts. To do it well will be an honor to our Church and to the kingdom. To fail will bring disappointment and heartache in thousands of lives as well as to dishonor the kingdom of God.

In order to do its full share of this great task of kingdom-building, home missions is attempting to conserve the present Churches which have a field of service and strengthen them for more adequate service. To build new Churches and let worthy Churches die will not build the Church or the kingdom. To conserve what we have and build new is progress. We are now supporting sixteen Churches in our sustentation work.

To aid our Churches to have the best organization and render the best service as well as to find new locations where Churches or Sunday Schools are needed, the Home Mission Board, in co-operation with the Conferences or Conventions, is supporting field men in various sections of America. These men are rendering a very fine service in conserving and building up Churches in their territory. They assist their Churches to find good pastors, supply vacant pulpits and help in any other way possible. There are four field men under our board and several others employed by Conferences or Conventions.

Another phase of home mission work is to search out the Churches which have the greatest opportunities for advancement, but which are not succeeding, and help them to meet more adequately the needs of the community. Some of our best Churches at present were helped out of their dead-level on to a higher plane of service in this way. Many other fields need this type of service.

The next step in our program is Church extension. There are many unoccupied fields, both in country and city, where thousands of children are growing up without any Christian training and where there is splendid opportunities to build good, strong Churches. We are entering these fields just as fast as our finance will permit. Our Church extension fund is small and our mission funds for this type of work are quite limited. This is one of the most fertile fields for kingdom-building in America today. We should be doing a far larger service in this type of work.

The work the Home Mission Board is doing in helping to Christianize the neglected or unreach-ed groups in the United States is also very important. These groups, like the New Americans, the Negroes, the Indians, the loggers, the mountaineers and the migrants, all call for a larger service than we are at present rendering. The workers we have among these groups are rendering a valiant service. Miss Marguerite Youmans, Miss Rose Kochakian, Rev. and Mrs. Gabriel Guedj are working among the New Americans at Haverhill, Mass.; Franklinton Christian College, with its splendid faculty, is helping the negroes. Rev. S. E. Madren is working among the Southern mountaineers at Fancy Gap, Va.; Elizabeth Howsare alone is representing us among the Indians; Rev. W. R. Caldwell and Miss Edna Ruse are working among the lumbermen of western Washington. Several workers are giving their summers to the migrant groups in various sections of our country. We have just reason to admire the sacrifice and devotion of these workers who represent us in this great work. We should feel humiliated that we do not share with them in larger measure.

Dayton, Ohio.

MISSION SUPPORT ENRICHES CHURCH.

Does eating good, wholesome food make one weaker? Does the right kind of exercise render one less able to do his work or to fill his place in the world? Does drinking pure water or bathing in God's sunshine make one less capable of enjoying life or of meeting life's responsibilities? Does the observance of nature's laws on the part of the individual or society make a poorer and more inefficient individual or a less desirable type of society? There is only one answer—no! Then why should spiritual food and exercise and the observance of another of God's laws make an individual or a Church poorer in any way?

The Scriptures clearly teach that it is more blessed to give than to receive and that God loves the cheerful giver. By the same authority, we are taught that he who sows sparingly shall reap sparingly, and at the same time that the bountiful sower is promised a bountiful harvest. In other words, spiritual fruitage and enrichment come to him who is careful to observe the law of spiritual increase. For the Christian religion, be it remembered, is never impoverished by giving or doing, but rather is it greatly enriched and strengthened as it invests itself in behalf of others. Religion is lost by keeping it; it is kept by giving it away. And the more one gives away, the more he has.

What is true of the individual in the matter of giving or in the matter of lending support to some great missionary enterprise, such as the support of a missionary, will apply to the Church in this regard. A Church, then, is never made poorer in any particular by supporting a missionary. On the other hand, the Church that will undertake the support of a missionary and will faithfully live up to that undertaking will find itself growing richer, stronger, happier all the while.

Supporting a missionary will make the Church that renders this service richer in its interest in the various enterprises of the kingdom, both locally and beyond the local boundaries of its work. An interest of this kind will mean expanding interests along other lines. Assuming the support of a missionary on the foreign field makes it easier to support the work at home.

Then, too, an enterprise of this character sponsored by a local Church brings to that Church the enrichment of a sense of brotherhood with the non-Christian world and with the mightiest forces for righteousness among the Christians of our own and other lands. A definite piece of missionary work thus undertaken definitely links up the local Church with a program that is world-wide in its sympathy and scope.

Again, the local Church should not overlook the fact that so definite a part in the missionary program of the kingdom gives a sense of the nearness of Christ's presence as nothing else can. The Church that goes that far in its interest, loyalty and service brings Christ very near in His interest, blessing and power.

Withal, supporting a missionary will not and cannot render a Church poorer, but must bring it increasing enrichment because God has so promised and He cannot be untrue. And this enrichment will find itself in increasing joy, widening vision, growing power, deepening fellowship, and enlarging sympathy, interest and usefulness in the kingdom.

G. O. LANKFORD.

Burlington, N. C.

WILL OUR CHURCH PROVE MISSIONARY?

All the branches of Christ's Church that have been missionary from the start have been the most prosperous. The Missionary Baptist Church, which is not the oldest denomination by any means, has been greatly prospered, and it is due to the fact that they are a missionary people and God has greatly blessed their sacrifices and labors. The M. E. Church has been wonderfully prospered on account of their missionary spirit, and it stands out today as one of the largest evangelical denominations of this country. Take one other branch of Christ's Church for an illustration: The Seventh Day Baptists, in 1872, numbered less than half the Christian Church, and now they number more than the Christian Church. During the year 1926 they sent out seventy-three missionaries, and we have recently heard that they spend for home missions some thirty thousand dollars annually in one State, and as a denomination they raise for foreign missions annually about one million dollars and we have never heard of one of their missionaries having to leave the foreign field for lack of support. In the face of these facts, will the Christian Church prove herself to be anti-missionary and let some of our missionaries return to their homeland for want of support? This will take place unless we come to their support, and that I fear very soon.

Has the Christian Church all the poor and stingy people in its membership? We think not. They have their splendid homes, farms, bank accounts, stock investments, their automobiles, they dress well, etc. We believe that a saved Church is a missionary Church. Just let the Christian Church remember its responsibility in giving the gospel to the whole world. How can the heathen be saved if they do not have the gospel? "Who-soever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved." How shall they call upon Him in whom they have not believed? And how shall they believe in Him of whom they have not heard? And how shall they hear without a preacher? And how shall they preach except they be sent? (Rom. 10:13-15.)

And now, brethren, will you answer these questions by giving your best support to missions, or will you meet God with this awful responsibility unmet—which?

Yours for missions,

P. T. KLAPP.

PASTORS' HELP IS NEEDED.

The need for mission funds is great. Unless the people respond more liberally to our special offering, foreign missionaries will be withdrawn and home missionary work restricted. We cannot afford to do this; we must not. As a Church, we must do our part in the evangelization of the world. We must meet our obligations to God.

Let us bring our tithe into the treasury of the Lord. As a rule, our taxes are increasing and we are paying more to the government, the lesser obligation. Let us increase our gifts to God, the greater obligation.

We ask for the help and co-operation of pastors. You are the leaders and the teachers. Will you not make a special effort to take an offering in every Church and endeavor to have it at least one-sixth of the pastor's salary? This amount is suggested as a minimum. Make the offering as liberal as you can. Let us prepare for this offering in advance by sermon, prayer and sacrifice. The Christian Church believes in the Bible, the Bible teaches missions, and members of the Christian Church should give to missions.

Chairman of Mission Board.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

Lesson XI—June 10, 1928.

THE ARREST AND TRIAL.

GOLDEN TEXT: "He was despised and rejected of men."—Isa. 53:3.

DEVOTIONAL: Isa. 53:1-6.

When one reads of the arrest and the trial of Jesus, his first impulse is to see the tragedy and the pathos of the situation from the standpoint of Jesus. Here was a man, unique among men, who went about doing good, who taught abiding and transforming truths, who healed the sick, who radiated cheer and comfort to those who were in trouble and in sorrow, who manifested always the spirit of good will, who expressed in a satisfying and moving way the character of God, who gladly spent Himself unstintedly to helping humanity, and who did all this at a tremendous cost and sacrifice—here was this Man on trial for His life, forsaken by His friends and most intimate companions, faced by a powerful and in one sense at least an unscrupulous religious hierarchy, accused by lying witnesses whose testimony did not agree, tried before a profligate, dishonest, scheming Roman official, despised by a contemptible crowd, treated shamefully by hard-hearted soldiers, and finally rejected in favor of a man who was acknowledgedly a leader of insurrection and a murderer, and led away to be crucified—these, in brief, are the facts in the case. It would seem that here was a man to be pitied, a case that should call forth our deepest sympathy. And it should. It would be a very profitable thing if we would read again and again in a thoughtful and prayerful way the story of the arrest and trial of Jesus Christ. It would undoubtedly give us a new conception of the sufferings of Christ, and it would give us a deeper appreciation of the grace which came through Christ.

But, after all is said and done, and as one sees things in the light of eternal principles and truths, it is not Jesus who needs our sympathy. He would be the first to tell us that, as He told the women who wept as He was going up to Jerusalem, that they were the rather to weep for their city. The longer one looks at the picture here presented, the more one feels impressed with the fact that our sympathy should go out to others rather than to Jesus; that the tragedy was not so much in the Master's situation as in the situation of those who were dealing with the Master. What more pathetic thing can there be than the state of mind and heart of the scribes and Pharisees, the elders and the rulers, the high priests and the leaders who "for envy" had delivered Jesus to Pilate? What more pathetic and tragic figure in all history than Pilate, time-serving, man-pleasing, unscrupulous, weak-willed Roman governor, who, facing the great issue of his life, failed so miserably, so ignobly! We think of the scene when Jesus stands before Pilate as Christ before Pilate, but in reality it was Pilate before Christ. And today whenever the Apostle's Creed is repeated, the memory of this pathetic man is kept alive through the phrase, "Suffered under Pontius Pilate." Here indeed is a man to be pitied rather than the Christ. Or again, what more pathetic than the mob clamoring wildly for the release of Barabbas and demanding the crucifixion of Jesus, and calling down upon their heads and the heads of their children the blood of an innocent man! There is to be sure tragedy in the situation of Jesus, but there was no tragedy to be compared with the tragedy in the situation of the rulers and of Pilate and of the crowd and of the soldiers. As one gazes at the picture, more and more his sympathy for Christ becomes transformed into admiration and wonder and reverence as one sees the manhood and the mastery of Jesus. And, more and more, in spite of the contemptibility and the meanness of the elders and the Jews and Pilate, one comes to feel a sense of pity and sorrow for those for whom it would have been better had they never been born.

Teaching Points.

1. Jesus is more than King of the Jews—He is King of kings.
2. The mastery of Jesus is nowhere any better shown than in His behaviour under the taunts and the jibes of the crowd at His trial.
3. In the final analysis, men release into the world either the spirit of Jesus or the spirit of Barabbas.
4. Every man, with Pilate, must dispose of Jesus.
5. A man is responsible for wrong that he could have prevented.
6. A man cannot shift his responsibility for wrong-doing by merely washing his hands.
7. Like Pilate, there are many who allow the Christ to suffer and be crucified rather than jeopardize their positions.
8. One of the most acid tests of character is a man's action when under false and bitter accusation.
9. Self-mastery is the greatest of conquests.
10. Crowds are fickle.
11. What men really do when they think they put Christ on trial is to put themselves on trial.
12. Retribution may be delayed, but it is inevitable.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Sunday, June 10, 1928.

TOPIC: "How are Our Amusements a Measure of Our Christianity?"—Rom. 14:7, 13-19.

Some Bible Hints.

The way we play, just like the way we live, influences others, and we must remember this fact (v. 7).

If we cheat, or play a mean game, and get away with it, we are putting a stumbling-block in the way of others (v. 13).

Play should be "in love," just as our general behaviour. A good deal of it is "in ferocity," and is un-Christian (v. 15).

If we cannot play energetically without injuring others, or using profane language while we play, it is time to call a halt (v. 19).

Suggestive Thoughts.

The spirit of our play measures our Christianity. It can be mean and harmful, coarse and profane.

When the moving-picture show (a good-enough thing in itself) pushes the Church and its work out of our lives, or into the background, our Christianity is weakly.

Card-playing for money, even for small sums, is gambling and quite the opposite of the Christian spirit. Moreover, this may be the entering wedge that destroys us.

What sort of plays attract us? Some are indecent, just as some books are. Some are good, also like books. We may not know it, but people estimate our Christianity from what we do and where we go.

A Few Illustrations.

Here is a wrestling-match or a boxing-match. We may talk all we will about the "noble art"; what happens is that the animal nature of the spectators is roused to a pitch of fury. It is utterly bad for them.

Golf is a pretty good test at times of our Christian spirit. Most of us are bad losers, and bad misers of the ball. Our tongue betrays us.

Many claim that dancing can be quite innocent; and perhaps it can. But it is dangerous at best. Try to speak about Jesus to some one in the dance hall and note the result.

Automobile riding is excellent, but it tests our Christianity at times. Do we hog the road? That shows selfishness. Do we speed? That shows disregard of law.

To Think About.

What are some helpful amusements?

What are some harmful or dangerous amusements?

How do young people in our community spend their leisure time?

EIGHTEENTH AMENDMENT.

By MISS LOWRINE HALSTEAD.

Of the nineteen amendments to our Constitution, there is not one that has been the cause of so much controversy as the eighteenth amendment. The other amendments were passed and became accepted law and are so taken for granted that they are practically forgotten. Then, why has the eighteenth, or prohibition, amendment been the cause of so much opposition? Is it because people in general regret the difficulty of procuring alcoholic beverages because the law deprives them of something for which they really care tremendously, or because the liquor interests will not admit defeat?

Before discussing this question further, let us summarize a few of the historical facts concerning prohibition of the liquor traffic. Thirty-two of the States went dry by State action prior to the passage of the national prohibition act of 1919. This act, known as the eighteenth amendment to our Constitution, became a part of our Constitution January 29, 1919, when it was ratified by the thirty-sixth State—the necessary three-fourths. It became effective January 16, 1920. In fact, this amendment was overwhelmingly ratified by forty-five States in rapid succession. Later, New Jersey ratified it, leaving Connecticut and Rhode Island as the only two States that did not accept it. No other of the nineteen amendments to the Constitution, including those embodying the Bill of Rights, has received the affirmative votes of so many States as did prohibition. Not only this, but the Volstead act, passed for the purpose of interpreting and enforcing the eighteenth amendment, override by a two-thirds' majority President Wilson's veto, becoming effective January 16, 1920. Do these facts prove that the majority of people of the United States thought this an undemocratic and unnecessary law? Certainly not.

Let us pause here just a moment and recall some of the reasons why prohibition was necessary—for, in fact, no law is passed unless it is backed by necessity. In the past years the people awoke to the fact that intemperance was the cause of poverty, of crime, of insanity, of deaths, and even had its influence on heredity. To be more exact, from investigations made chiefly by the "Committee of Fifty" a few years before prohibition was accepted, we find this information. By accepting only the most conservative figures, they were justified in concluding that liquor was the cause of at least one-fifth of the insanity, one-fourth of the poverty, one-half of the crime in the country; that it materially increases the death rate; that it seriously affects the health and vigor of the individual; and that it is a most potent force of race degeneracy. I have not been able to find statistics concerning the present state of such conditions since prohibition, but I daresay the "wets" cannot prove to us that prohibition has increased or raised these figures. Of course, we admit that liquor today is the cause of some crime, deaths, etc.; but why place the blame upon the eighteenth amendment or prohibition when such conditions existed long before this law was even thought of and before it became effective? It is just as reasonable to place the cause of a fire upon the fire engine that goes there to fight it as it is to place such a blame upon prohibition.

Other astonishing facts concerning the liquor problem may be gotten from the statistics concerning the total amount of liquor consumed before and after prohibition. In 1914, the United States reached the enormous amount of twenty-two and one-half gallons for every man, woman and child in this country. If we do not count the women or children, this means an average consumption for every man twenty-one years or older of eight gallons a year. The total amount consumed was approximately 2,252,275,765 gallons. Perhaps these numbers will be more readily comprehended if we consider that this amount would fill to overflowing a ditch four feet wide and four and one-half feet deep extending across the United States from the Atlantic to the Pacific; or it would fill a six-inch pipe extending eleven and one-half times around the earth. The per capita consumption in 1920, one year after prohibition, was three gallons. Naturally, within the past years this amount has varied a great deal, yet we know that it has never reached the maximum of twenty-two and one-half gallons.

The annual drink bill of the United States during the days of the saloon was $1,750,000,000. This enormous amount of money would—

1. Build ten hospitals in each of the forty-eight States at a cost of $100,000 each and endowed with $500,000; making a total of $288,000,000.
2. Build four colleges in each State, each costing $1,000,000 and endowed with $1,000,000; total of $384,000,000.
3. Build a road from New York to San Francisco at a cost of $10,000,000 and give each State $1,000,000 to build tributary roads; total of $58,000,000.
4. Equip 10,000 playgrounds for children at a cost of $2,000 each; total of $20,000,000.
5. Give each State $10,000,000 for industrial education in the public schools; a total of $480,000,000.
6. Place fifty libraries in each State, each costing $100,000, and endowed with $100,000; total of $480,000,000—and leave $40,000,000 for municipal recreation centers in place of the saloon.

Were not these facts which I have just mentioned enough to awaken the citizens of America to the realization that liquor was a destructive force to society and government and that it must be abolished? Seeing the great evils of drink and its effect upon society, they sought to drive out this evil and place society upon a higher level.

Prohibition came not suddenly, but after a long campaign of education and agitation. The amendment was the will of the majority of the citizens of the United States conscious that alcohol was evil and that while virtue in the soul is stronger than law, there are weak brothers who need the law until their souls have been strengthened. When the saloon was abolished, a great temptation was removed from the people.

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
One of Our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MONDAY.

THE MATERIAL AND THE SPIRITUAL.

"What shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"—Mark 8:36.

Material prosperity and social delights are blessings when first things are made first and are allowed to rule all the rest. But what gain is there to any one to starve the mind and soul as he grows richer and more comfortable? Though one gains all the wealth of the world, what gain is it for the waning power of great thoughts, to lose love for truth, to lose enthusiasm for a good cause, to lose the faith and hope which were once the inspiration of life? All possessions are at great cost when purchased by such losses.

It devolves upon heads of families, teachers, ministers and every devout person to see that the hungry and the thirsty shall be fed.

Our age is materialistic. We think that the material and the social are the most pressing needs of the people. We go the limit for these, and only provocation keeps us from spiritual exercise and Church assemblies.

Prayer.—Our Father, give us a new intelligence every day, a new earnestness, a new zeal for souls, and may we not only be true to ourselves but true to the souls of others and helping them to understand themselves and to be true themselves to themselves and others.

Help us to make religion first and last, create in us and in humanity a thirst for righteousness. Amen.

TUESDAY.

FAMILY RELIGION.

"Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it."—Prov. 22:10.

It is chiefly in our homes that souls are uncared for. Only the slightest provision is made for the religious needs of our children. It appears to be unqualifiedly true that the spirit of this age is to let one believe what he wishes and do nothing to bias one toward anything. The result is anarchy, infidelity and empty Churches. We do not hesitate to do everything we can for their physical wants, for their education, and give everything we have for their welfare and worldly success, and yet do nothing that is worth while for their spiritual being and eternal life. We take greatest pains to have them accomplished and yet are indifferent to that highest culture, the soul, and to bring them to the knowledge of their own souls and God and His will.

Friends, to leave children to come up to form their won opinions and sentiments on well-grounded religious matters in after life is carrying the idea of liberty to a foolish extent. We don't allow it in anything else.

Prayer.—Dear Lord and Master, show us our duty in the home. Teach us Thy way and Thy life. Forbid that we neglect anything. In Jesus' name we ask it. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE JOY OF CHRISTIAN WORK.

"The seventy came back with joy."—Luke 10:17.

To do a thing, as a rule, carries with it willingness to do it. There is joy in willingness. There is joy in doing a thing that is right. There is joy in helping somebody. There is joy in dispelling complainings. There is joy in making sweet distresses. There is joy in true religion. All these are realities in Christian work.

Prayer.—Our Father, hold Thou before our eyes daily the joys of Christian service. Tell us what Thou wouldst have us do. Send us out to do Thy work in the world. Forgive us of our neglects and save us from it forevermore. Amen.

THURSDAY.

JOY IN THE CHURCH.

"I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord."—Psa. 122:1.

This kind of zeal for the house of the Lord is hard to find in great numbers. As the minister stands in his pulpit and sees the thousands on the highways, on the golf links, at the clubs, at the resorts, and looks at the handful whom he loves in the sanctuary, he wonders where is the zeal for the house of the Lord that David spoke of.

Not all who belong and go to the Church are God-touched; but the God-touched are there, and there is no joy greater than a realization of " . . . the tie that binds

Our hearts in Christian love;

The fellowships of kindred minds

Is like to that above."

When Saul went to Gibeah he was accompanied by men whose hearts had been touched by God. This is one supreme joy of the Church.

There must be favoritism in human associations, and the selection of these does not involve the development of enmity or distrust toward others. But in Saul's case, his enemies feared him when he was accompanied by men whose hearts had been touched by God. There is rest in heavenly guardianship. The fact is, we are never safe away from the altar.

Prayer.—Our Father, make Thy Church strong. Increase our confidence and trust in others. Give us courage in their experience and fellowship. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THOU HAST DELIVERED.

"Wilt Thou not deliver my feet from falling?"—Psa. 56:13.

David had been in danger, and now, in the cave of Adullam, he is singing the praises of his Deliverer. But there is a fly in the pot of his ointment; he remembers with shame how, in the hour of his mistrust, he has played the fool. The thought comes home to him with bitterness that his conduct has been unworthy of a child of God and of the King of Israel, and he cries out: "Thou hast delivered my life from death; wilt Thou not (also) deliver my feet from falling?" To be merely alive may be only a disgrace; to walk uprightly and fearlessly before men is to fulfill our destiny and bring honor to our God. The heart that is aflame with love to the Divine longs for something more than bare safety; it longs to be glorified and glorious that, in its turn, it may glorify Him. It desires, not only to escape death, but that it may "walk before God in the light of the living," i. e., in the sight of men. Let all such hearts be comforted by the result of David's prayer: "Thou hast delivered my soul from death, mine eyes from tears, and my feet from falling" (Psa. 116:8). Well has a more modern poet added:

"Therefore, to Thee my feet shall run;
Mine eyes on Thy perfections gaze;
My soul shall live for Thee alone,
And all within me speak Thy praise."

—King's Business.

Prayer.—Lord's Prayer, all the circle joining.

SATURDAY.

A WELL OF THE DIVINE.

"The water in the bottle was spent."—Gen. 21:15.

Hagar is in despair because the water in the bottle is spent. There is, as she imagines, nothing but death for her and for her child. Yet all the while, within her reach (had she but eyes to behold it) there is a well of the Divine providing. What a picture of men and women languishing for lack of the departed pleasures of earth while they are blind to the inexhaustible supply of heavenly life and gladness which God has provided for them in Christ.—King's Business.

Prayer.—Father of all, help us to see Thy hand in all our reverses and inspire us to be loyal always. Amen.

SUNDAY.

A VESSEL UNTO HONOR.

"Vessels of gold . . . of wood, and of earth."—3 Tim. 2:20.

"Some to honor and some to dishonor." The golden vessels to honor and the wooden and earthen vessels to dishonor, of course! So men judge; so does not God. The golden vessel and the wooden vessel are alike the workmanship of His hand. And in His great house He has a place and a use for each. Let not the golden utensil despise the vessel of earth, nor the earthen vessel envy the utensil of gold. Nay, more, let not the earthen and the wooden vessels despise themselves, nor imagine that they are despised of Him who made them. For the great essential is not material, but usefulness; not intrinsic value, but suitability. The question of honor or dishonor is one of purity: "If a man purge himself . . . he shall be a vessel unto honor." We may not have the showy talents or the sparkling graces of some of our fellowmen; we may be humble and obscure in the estimation of the world; our place may lie rather in the kitchen than in the banqueting hall—we need be moved nor discouraged by none of these things: God has His purpose for us if we will but be clean, emptied of self and freed from the defilements of sin. Nay, the real usefulness (and usefulness is the highest honor) of the wooden and earthen vessels may be greater and wider than that of the vessels of gold; it is often so.

Prayer.—Lord's Prayer, all the circle joining.

WHY MY CHURCH MUST GIVE.

The imperative need of money for our missionary work is one of the great reasons why I want my Churches to take the offering.

Another reason each Church should take the offering is that the Mission Board has laid it upon the Churches, and unless each minister, each Church and each individual member of the Churches realize the responsibility that rests on them and do their part, the cause will suffer.

The third reason is that in order for a Church to live it must give. It should be considered a privilege to give to so great a cause. The Churches need to have the spirit of the Inspired One when He said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

H. E. CRUTCHFIELD.

MISSIONS AND OUR ORPHANAGE.

The Christian Orphanage has been an asset to the Christian denomination, and not a burden. It has taken its place in our denomination and has been filling a place that no other institution of our Church can.

In its twenty-three years of service it has not only fathered more than three hundred fatherless children, but it has been teaching our people all these years to give. For twenty-three years it has been appealing to the Sunday Schools, the Churches and individuals to give toward its support. We find it has been the case when you can interest a person to give to one cause of the Church you can more than likely interest him in other causes. The Christian Orphanage has been the pioneer in the Sunday School monthly offerings. For twenty-three years it has been training the children to give through the Sunday Schools, and a large per cent of the Sunday Schools, after all these years of education along charity lines, have fallen in line and are on the monthly giving list. The Orphanage has been an asset because it has opened up the way for other causes and made the way easier.

When our Mission Secretary was trying to get our people interested in missions, and went in the field with the slogan, "One offering per month for the Orphanage and one for missions," it was easy to get the Sunday Schools to fall in line, and practically all that were giving to the Orphanage gave one Sunday's offerings to missions. It was easy to get them to undertake for the cause of missions. The Orphanage and missions work beautifully together, and one does not hurt the other. No Sunday School has grown poorer by giving to the Orphanage and missions, but has grown richer, and the reports from the Sunday Schools that have tried it testify to that fact.

The Sunday Schools that do not give a monthly offering to the Orphanage and to missions miss a real joy and a real blessing, for joy comes to those who help others.

Let it be the slogan of every Sunday School: "One Sunday's offering each month for the Orphanage and one for missions." That the fatherless may be helped and the gospel of Christ sent to the foreign fields and new points opened up in the home land.

WHAT MISSIONS HAVE MEANT TO WOMEN.

that appeal strongly to a woman's heart, they have been carried beyond the narrow confines of their homes and out into the great world. The problems of home, child-life and womankind throughout the world have been their problems. Their sympathies and interests have been enlarged until they encircle the globe. The missionary woman is no longer a provincial. She has become a world citizen.

The woman with small financial resources has learned in missionary work that the small gift is not to be despised, and that all are of value in the great work of the kingdom. I am of the opinion that one of the greatest contributions women have made to the missionary cause has been the demonstration of the power of the small gifts regularly contributed.

Then, too, to the women of our Church who have abandoned themselves to the ideal of giving God a chance with others, He has become more real to themselves. Just in proportion to the extent we help to reveal Christ to others is He revealed to us. The deepening of the spiritual life of the women of our Church is not the least among the things which "missions have meant to our women."

EIGHTEENTH AMENDMENT.

Ever since the passage of this amendment, prohibition has been a national question and one which has been of interest to many citizens. Over and over again you have heard this question asked: "Has prohibition been a success or failure?" There are those citizens who claim it has been a great success and blessing to our country, while there are those who think it has failed in its mission. It will be interesting to note here the results of a little survey we had within our own Sunday School. I gave to six classes of our young people and adults two questions to answer, expressing their own opinions concerning prohibition. On the question, "Personally, do you favor the eighteenth amendment?" there were 60 who voted for, and 16 against it. Of the 71 who voted on the question, "Do you think prohibition has been a success or failure?" there were 49 who thought it had been a success and 22 a failure. These are the individual votes of five classes, while the sixth class voted as a whole in the affirmative on both questions. By success, we don't mean whether it has 100 per cent obedience or has accomplished all the desired results, but rather whether the good that has come from it will overbalance the evils as the "wets" proclaim.

On account of the so-called wets, the amendment has not received the proper support that it should. In the case of any other amendment, support is taken for granted. The law-enforcers have the assistance of the public in enforcing these laws, but in enforcing the eighteenth amendment they receive little or no assistance. Local authorities, in many cases, take no interest in the enforcement of this law. Many States take the attitude that a Federal law is to be enforced by Federal authorities. Then the prohibition law cannot be rightfully judged until it is given a fair test under real enforcement. Guilt must be placed upon the enforcement of the law, and not upon the law itself.

Some of the most disgusting things I have ever heard is to hear people who oppose prohibition and break the law themselves laugh and say, "What good is prohibition! I can still get my liquor; the law isn't being kept." Yes, and who is keeping the law from being obeyed? They themselves! Citizens of that type are really not worthy to be called true citizens of our nation. If the entire nation were made up of such citizens, what kind of government would we have? They can't expect any law to be successful if they are not going to give it their support. Since the eighteenth amendment on prohibition is a law, it is our duty to support it in every possible way. Certainly, a man who drinks liquor is just as much of a law-breaker as the bootlegger who makes it. In fact, he is actually encouraging the bootlegger to violate the law, because the bootlegger would soon go out of business if no one bought his products. Persons who do such things as these are not real Christians, because a real Christian cannot break a law unless it is proved beyond dispute that the law is contrary to the principles of the teachings of Jesus.

We who are believers in prohibition must do everything within our power to make it successful. We must fight for its existence because there are those who would blot it out with one stroke. The "wets" are continuously fighting for a modification or repeal of the eighteenth amendment, so it will be possible for them to have light beer and wines. Naturally, if the sale of these were made possible, it would necessitate the return of the saloon. Yet there are anti-prohibitionists who say, "Oh, no! I don't want the saloon back again; all I want is light beer and wine." They either do not know what they are talking about or do not really mean what they say. For, in fact, what was it that banished the saloon? Is it anything but prohibition that keeps the saloon out of business today?

The standpoint of the "drys" on this subject can be summed up very well in a statement made by Evangeline Booth, commander of the Salvation Army: "It is an illogical thing to say that because a law has not worked like magic it is best to cast it aside and return to the original state of vice which, because of its awfulness, prompted the enactment of that law. Such a thing would make civilization move backward. It is rather the duty of the citizens, State and government to find ways and means to cause the law to work out its unquestionable benefits to humanity."

For a short while tonight we are going to discuss a few of the facts presented by both the drys and the wets. Naturally, each base their arguments upon certain things. The greatest opposition of the wets has been on the ground that it interferes with the personal liberty of the people. They maintain that they have an inherent right to drink whiskey or any other beverage if they choose, and that it is nobody's business but their own whether it is injurious to their health. Any one, without stopping to think, would readily agree with them. Yet it is necessary that it should be viewed from all sides. Surely the nation must, for social welfare, dictate whether or not an individual may drink certain beverages when under the influence of that drink he affects society at large. A person under the influence of alcohol is at least temporary a changed being. He lacks self-control, has no inhibitions, and is repulsive or even dangerous to those with whom he comes in contact. Only that individual is free who has himself under control. Freedom must build up and create, not pull down and destroy; freedom is not won at a single bound, but comes by a long series of successive determinations and acts."

"Prohibition of the liquor traffic is just one of these steps. It is not an end in itself. It is a means to an end. That end is the ultimate release of human life into freedom from the ills engendered by alcohol and alcoholic customs. Prohibition is the conscious act of the society that makes it for promoting the common welfare. When youth gets this vision of what prohibition really means, it will better understand the necessarily gradual process to the goal; be more intelligent in seeing where it must put its shoulder to the wheel and push on toward fulfilling the vision of a world emancipated from alcohol, the vision that has already challenged and won the services and sacrifices of five generations of youth."

Norfolk, Va.

FROM ALABAMA.

Sunday, May 20th. was "Memorial Day" at Pleasant Grove Christian Church. Services began at 10 A. M. with a song service, then the regular program was taken up, which consisted of songs, recitations by the children and young people directed by Mrs. J. P. Hill and others of the good women of the Church. Pending the program of service, the graves in the cemetery were decorated by some twenty or thirty children. The march to the cemetery was very impressive. The flowers were abundant and beautiful. The sermon by the writer followed the decoration of the graves.

Then a sumptuous dinner was spread and every one satisfied themselves with the good things that had been so lavishly prepared. In the afternoon the program was resumed, and to say the least, it was profoundly impressive. We were favored with some choice selections by the Lanett (Ala.) quartet. We were also favored with an address by Hon. W. C. Botson, of Lanett, who has been recently nominated for probate judge of Chambers County. Bro. Botson made a fine impression on our people and promised to come again. This was a great day for Pleasant Grove—new friendships formed, old ones renewed, old neighbors met, loved ones met at the silent city of the dead, and many of us renewed our covenant with our Heavenly Father and our friendship with each other.

This Church has a fine future—God grant that it may be developed. Rev. G. H. Veazey is to move to Reanoke, Ala., and become pastor of the First Christian Church of that city. I trust the work shall go forward under his administration. A fine opportunity and a fine field. God bless pastor and Church.

G. D. HUNT.

PROVIDENCE MEMORIAL CHURCH.

On Sunday evening at 7:45 o'clock, May 6th, with Rev. T. J. Green as helper, we began a series of meetings with a goodly number present. Our meeting lasted only one week, with one service each day. During these services Bro. Green preached vital and forceful sermons which revived greatly the souls of the members of the Church and opened the way for seven conversions to Christ. During each service a reasonable number were present, but most of the members had already confessed Christ. I feel like saying the meeting was a success.

The preliminary services were conducted each evening by the pastor, Rev. J. N. Fogleman. On last Sunday, following the preaching service, the doors of the Church were opened and, with Rev. T. E. White officiating, three new members were received into the Church. Others will be taken in some time soon. I feel that the Lord was with us during those services and greatly blessed our efforts. I hope and pray that He may continue to lead and bless all who are active in His services.

J. N. FOGLEMAN.

BEREA (NORFOLK).

Special memorial services are to be held in the Berea Cemetery on Sunday afternoon, June 3rd, at 3 o'clock. The program will consist of music, a brief address, and the placing of flowers on the graves. A large attendance is anticipated.

The new Woman's Missionary Society of this Church, Miss Bettie Whitehurst, president, is doing wood work.

"Home-Coming Day" is to be observed at this Church on the first Sunday in September, and the special features of this program will be addresses by at least two ex-pastors, Chaplain H. E. Ruon-tree and Rev. W. C. Hook. We are expecting a great attendance and a great day of fellowship. All ex-members are especially welcome.

The special evangelistic campaign will follow the home-coming services.

This Church has services each Sunday afternoon except the fifth Sunday, and the attendance is very good. We had a very fine attendance on Mothers' Day and a good service.

PHILHOWER.

Because we mourn an empty chair when we meet, and because we have benefitted in the past by her presence, we are participants in the sorrow that has come to the home of our beloved co-worker, Mrs. J. B. Philhower. She has crossed the bar and passed on to her Father's home eternal and in the heavens.

Mrs. Philhower's life was a model of self-sacrifice, adorned with many Christian virtues and graces. Meek and modest, sincere and faithful, she won the love and confidence of all who knew her. In the home, the social circle and the Church she was exemplary in conversation and conduct. Her motives and Christian character were never questioned. Her loyalty to inner spiritual conviction and to outward Church obligations brought forth much fruit in the vineyard of the Lord.

We recommend that the above expression of our estimate of her Christian character be entered in the record book of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of Suffolk Christian Church; that a copy be sent to The Christian Sun for publication, and that a copy be presented to her family as an humble tribute to one we loved and whose memory we fondly cherish. "In our work shall she live on."

ISELEY.

Lydia M. Iseley died May 12, 1928, age 55 years, 4 months and 18 days. She was married February 20, 1902, to Peter Webb Iseley, and to this union three children were born, two of whom, with their father, survive; also three sisters and one brother. Early in life she professed faith in Christ and joined Bethlehem Christian Church. After her marriage she transferred her membership to Hines Chapel, where she remained faithful to the end and at which place she was buried in the presence of a large congregation of sorrowing friends. She was a splendid Christian woman and will be much missed in her home Church and community. God bless and comfort her loved ones.

BETHLEHEM COLLEGE

WADLEY, ALABAMA

A JUNIOR COLLEGE AND HIGH SCHOOL.

Where Opportunity Awaits the Student of Very Limited Means.

GIRL'S DORMITORY.

Bethlehem College, Wadley, Ala., will open September 5, 1927. This institution is a Junior College and High School, which is co-educational, where scholarship ranks high and expense is low. It is thoroughly Christian, absolutely non-sectarian, and vitally American. A school where opportunity awaits the student of very limited means—$68.00 pays all college expenses, except books, board and room. Board, $15.00 per month, and room $3.00; total expenses for a term of nine months, $250.00.

Bethlehem College is training some of the best stock of America for Christian leadership, to be used by the nation and the world. Here is a great challenge and asset for students who wish to prepare themselves to serve in a worth-while way. The work on the new Administration Building is progressing nicely, and we will be able to begin our college work in this building when school opens this fall.

ELON COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

"Religion emphasizes the truth that success is not to be won at the expense of others, that we are not to rise by crowding others down, but that the only success which deserves the name involves mutual profit, common welfare, and co-operative advancement," declared Dr. Jason Noble Pierce, pastor of the first Congregational Church, Washington, D. C., delivering the baccalaureate sermon on the Elon College commencement program, speaking on the subject of "Co-operative Success."

Dr. Pierce was the morning speaker of the baccalaureate day program of the commencement, with President William A. Harper, of Elon, delivering his final message to the members of the graduating class at the evening service, and Prof. C. James Velie rendering an organ vesper service in the afternoon. The thirty-eighth annual finals which opened with the music concert got into full swing with the baccalaureate program today.

Dr. Pierce selected Heb. 11:40, "God having provided some better thing concerning us, that apart from us they should not be made perfect," as the text for his baccalaureate sermon. "All success is co-operative," he stated. "The lawyer cannot succeed without clients, nor the merchant without patrons. Henry Ford and John D. Rockefeller have plenty of brains, but without workmen and customers they could not have won success. Josephus Daniels is a great editor, but without subscribers and readers, he and his workmen would fail. Because he found teachers, backers and builders, Charles A. Lindbergh and the "Spirit of St. Louis" crossed the sea. The college professor, Woodrow Wilson, required students; as president of Princeton he required trustees and faculty; as Governor of New Jersey and President of the United States he changed positions but not principles—he still was dependent upon the co-operation of others. No man liveth to himself."

"This success, through co-operation with those of our own generation, might be charted with horizontal lines. There is another co-operation which would be indicated with vertical lines—co-operation with those who have lived before us, and with those who will live after us. Indeed, it is in this kind of co-operation that the greatest, most valuable, and most enduring success is to be won. Who are the great men of history? Are they not men who have given their allegiance and their strength to causes larger and longer than their own lives? Cromwell and Washington stood for causes. Walter Reed, who died fighting yellow fever; Burbank, who increased the variety of species; Milliken, who isolated the electron; Grefell, of Labrador—these and a host of others have stood for causes. Every one who discerns the unfolding purpose of God and helps to build the kingdom of Christ thereby identifies his life with a cause whose increasing glory will enlarge the splendor and the success of co-operating lives."

"In the eleventh chapter of Hebrews we find Israel's 'Hall of Fame.' There are recorded the names of their heroes. Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Moses the law-giver, Gideon and Samson, David the king of their golden age, Samuel and the prophets, these all are exalted for their faith. What was their faith? It was a faith that the world would be made better through their race, that God would pour out a blessing upon mankind through the Messiah who should be born of their people. In that faith they lived gloriously, died bravely, and yet having obtained a good report through faith, they received not the promise, God having provided some better thing concerning us, that apart from us they would not be made perfect."

"It is a solemn thought that we hold in our hands the completion of the lives of others, but nevertheless it is an inescapable fact that must be reckoned with. As you are about to leave these years of study and go out into the world, do it with the realization that others will enter into your success or failure. There are the patriots who have made this country what it is in the faith that your generation will make it better still. There are your parents who have sacrificed in your behalf and given you the advantages within their power in order that you might find the highest joy and render the greatest service. They are your teachers who have striven to develop your powers, to make truth your passion, and whose highest aspirations remain to be fulfilled by you. There are the prophets and apostles of the Christian faith, yea even Christ Himself, who have labored to build the eternal kingdom and you enter into their labors. Your success will gladden them all and will fulfill their lives, making perfect even the life of Christ.

"I have confidence that you can and will succeed, for you do not labor alone," concluded Dr. Pierce, speaking directly to the members of the graduating class. "Wherever you go, whatever you undertake, remember that there is one who goes with you as an inseparable companion, your guide, your Providence, your fellow-worker. 'God having provided some better thing concerning us,' says the epistle. With loving friend, this Divine Provider, to guide; with spiritual passion to persevere; with challenge and inspiration of all those lives and success are intertwined with yours, may you go forth worthy of your high calling."

Special music for the morning service was rendered by the college choir, and President Harper presided. Dr. W. S. Alexander, college president, introduced Dr. Harper as an outstanding leader in the Congregational denomination and as a firm believer and an effective worker in the cause of Christian union.

The vesper organ service in the afternoon by Prof. C. James Velie was an especially appropriate feature of the commencement program, and the well-chosen and artistically rendered numbers of this program was a fitting close for the year's work of the music department.

President Harper gave his seventeenth baccalaureate address at 8 o'clock, using this subject: "Altering Attitudes." He told the graduating class that he conceived of college education primarily as a process of altering attitudes. He classified the attitudes that really count in character and life achievement under three general categories—our relationship toward man, our relationships toward God, and our relationships toward the organized institutions of the social order.

"It is the primary business of colleges to alter the attitudes of growing persons. The tens of thousands of graduates who will emerge from the American colleges at this commencement season are not the same persons who four years ago were freshmen in these same institutions. Changes have been wrought in their attitudes, changes with respect to their attitudes toward men, toward God and toward organized institutions of the social order. These graduates will never be able to accept the situations in which they found themselves four years ago as ultimately satisfying. They have become idealists as they have examined the fundamental concepts in terms of which our social relations are organized. They will go forth from these college halls imbued with new concepts and will crusade for the reforms and the changes they are convinced are necessary for the enlargement and the improvement of our life. They will endeavor to translate ideals into realities.

"The creeds upon which men have staked their hopes of eternal salvation are crumbling. The philosophies which have supplied the intellectual background and stabilization for those creeds are being discredited. Men's attitudes on the fundamental issues of life, its origin and foundations are altering. Change is characteristic of the times. In the realm of material things, men welcome this condition as desirable, as wholesome, as evidence of progress. And there likewise be those in the realm of social and spiritual experience who rejoice in this crumbling of creeds, this failing of philosophies, this altering of attitudes. They herald the metamorphoses so characteristic of the age as arising out of the progressive revelation of the will, mind and purpose of God for the world.

NOTES-PERSONALS

For program suggestions for "Children's Day" services and information about daily vacation Bible schools, write Miss Pattie Coghill, Henderson, N. C.

Brother pastor, have you given your people a chance to make a contribution to missions? Your Conference and your Convention have called upon you to do this much, and we feel that you will at least fall in line, take the offering and help to lift the burden that is so heavy at this time.

It is to be hoped that the pastors especially, and all interested in Church progress and growth, read with care the many articles on missions in the last issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and that the great need for the offering will be carried to every pulpit and to every person in the Church.

It was a pleasure to meet and greet so many of our ministers at the Elon commencement coming with greetings and good cheer from their various fields of labor. It is a joy to greet again at Elon these men of God, who, having gone out from the college in years past, return from year to year for fellowship and delightful association.

The Elon College trustees in session last week missed the presence of Dr. G. S. Watson, who, though living on the hill, was too feeble to attend the sessions. Dr. Watson has been on the board from the beginning and has been loyal and devoted to the college through all the years. He is feeble now and his host of friends are solicitous for his health and happiness.

The Board of Christian Education of the Southern Christian Convention offers to furnish a helper to any Church in the Convention which wants to put on a daily vacation Bible school. The helper will cost nothing but entertainment and a free-will offering toward expenses. Write Miss Pattie L. Coghill, Secretary, Henderson, N. C.

In the class roll of graduates from Rollins College, Winter Park, Fla., 1928, we are pleased to find the name of Mrs. May Bullock, whom many SUN readers know as editor of the junior literature in our Sunday School Department. We congratulate Mrs. Bullock on her application to college duties and the winning of her master of arts degree.

The program of the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Alabama Conference, which meets at Antioch Church Sunday, June 10th, is especially fine. A large number of young people are on the program. It is hoped that the Convention will be well attended, with at least two representatives from each Church of the Conference.

If all the pastors will do as Rev. J. Lee Johnson has done, our offering in the Southern Convention will not fail nor fall below that of last year. He has taken the offering at all his Churches and raised the quota asked by the board. We are sure all our pastors can raise the quota if the people are given a chance and the needs are laid before them.

Mrs. F. E. Bullock, children's division secretary of our Church, will attend the Alabama Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention, at Antioch Church, near Roanoke, Sunday, June 10th. She will also be at Roanoke Sunday night; at Wadley, Monday; Lanett, Tuesday, and North Highlands Church, Columbus, Ga., on Wednesday, the 13th. She will make these stops on her way up to Defiance College from Winter Park, Florida.

Rev. G. H. Veasey, who graduates from Elon College this week, goes to Roanoke, Ala., to become pastor of our Church there. Bro. Veasey has made a splendid record at Elon College and has served some nearby Churches while here with great efficiency. Damascus, in Orange County, is among the number, and this Church paid him in full before leaving last week and gave him a present besides which was much appreciated. Dr. W. M. Jay, of the Elon faculty, becomes pastor and will fill out the year at Damascus.

Interesting items are those printed elsewhere in THE SUN this week from Birmingham, Ala., and the Birmingham Daily News. If the Christians and Congregationalists are to get together anywhere it would seem that Birmingham is the place, as both are without Churches and have a great many members there. The News states that there are about twenty-five members of the Christian Church. THE SUN's editor has been reliably advised that possibly there were fifty to one hundred members of the Christian Church in Birmingham without a Church home. At any rate, the two organizations uniting can make an auspicious beginning.

Two honorary degrees were conferred by the trustees at this commencement—that of doctor of divinity on Rev. Nils John Waldorf, pastor, Bible teacher and chaplain of Florida Sanitarium, Orlando, Fla., distinguished as a profound thinker, author and noted minister in the Seventh Day Adventist Church; the degree of doctor of laws was conferred upon Judge Jesse F. West, Sr., a distinguished member of the Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia. Judge West was formerly a member of the board of trustees of the college and has been deeply interested in its growth and prosperity from the beginning. He has arisen to merited note and fame as attorney and jurist. He will wear well the honor thus conferred.

The editor was just reading a letter from a friend he has never seen: "I wish you would remember me in your prayers. I am afflicted. I have faith to believe that it is God's will, but in my affliction THE CHRISTIAN SUN comes and very often brings real comfort and good cheer." Such a testimony as that is enough to make an editor want to print something every week that will be a source of comfort to the weary and the sick; a source of strength to the weak, and a source of inspiration to the strong. And then another letter from one who is afflicted but in whose heart is the song of sunshine and of flowers as well as of joy and gladness: "I am glad the sky is painted blue, and the earth is painted green, and such a lot of nice fresh air all sandwiched in between." I just think that is fine, for there are beauties and there are glories in this world about us, and in our affliction we may discover them, if the eye is keen and the heart is alert and the soul is grateful.

The following news item appeared in the Birmingham News on Thursday, May 24th:

A new religious denomination, the United Christian-Congregational Church, will be organized at 7:30 P. M. Friday at the Y. M. C. A. auditorium, the first time that either denomination has had an organized body in Birmingham.

The new denomination will be a result of the merger of the Christian Church and of the Congregational Church in five Southern States—Alabama, Georgia, North and South Carolina and Virginia—bringing together about 113,000. The Christian Church is a separate denomination from the Disciples of Christ and the Church of Christ, also called Christians, which have Churches already established here.

A constitution will be adopted at the organization meeting Friday night, and the first services will be held at 11 A. M. Sunday at the Y. M. C. A. The Rev. Neal McQuarrie, of Atlanta, superintendent of the Congregational district of Alabama, Georgia and West Florida, will preach.

The Rev. Jesse H. Dollar, a member of the faculty of Birmingham-Southern College, who has worked as a representative of the Christian denomination with the Rev. Mr. McQuarrie, will have part in the organization meeting.

At the Sunday service a reception will be held for the charter members of the new denomination. A survey of the city revealed about 125 Congregationalists and about 25 members of the Christian Church, about 80 per cent of whom are not affiliated with any other Church, the Rev. Neal McQuarrie said.

A pastor will arrive in Birmingham July 1st to take charge of the work of building up the congregation. He is the Rev. Kendrick Grobel and is an efficient young people's worker and a good musician, the Rev. McQuarrie said.

The congregation plans to buy a site for a community house some time in the summer, and hopes to be able to start work on the structure next fall.

"SET TO DO EVIL."

In the editor's home town the people voted a few weeks ago on the question of admitting Sunday movies, and the Sunday-keeping cause lost by a few votes. Arthur Brisbane is said to have written in his column a comment saying that the movie people walked to vote, while the Church people were taken there in automobiles. Well, we will pass over the matter of whether or not the statement is true to say that many people will work their way to hell by a hard process who will not accept a free offer of heaven. The carnal nature of man is slanted that way. People will wear themselves out in long Sunday journeys who will not go next-door to Church. "Because sentence against an evil work is not executed speedily, therefore the heart of the sons of men is fully set in them to do evil." This verse explains many of the mysteries of the zeal for evil, and the purpose of many to see the bitter end of sin's career.—Ex.

NOTICE.

The baby Church at Hopewell, Va., is hoping to hold their first service in the new Church building next Sunday, June 10th. This will be a preliminary service, as the people are desirous to have their acting pastor, Rev. D. D. Nash, preach the first sermon in the new building. On the 16th of June the corner-stone will be placed with special services. Revival services will begin on June 17th, with Mr. and Mrs. Sam Davis in charge. God's blessings are asked upon these services.

If we took as much pains to keep the tender lambs as we do to convert the tough old wolves, the latter would soon die of starvation.

THE GLORIES OF SPRING.

DR. R. C. HELFENSTEIN, M. A., B. D.

Nature is full of miracles and mysteries, but the pageantry of the seasons is one of the most thrilling of them all. The orderly march of spring, summer, fall and winter, year after year, with never a failure of seed-time and harvest, is the secret of the perpetuity of the animal kingdom and of the human family; for a single year without its harvest would find the world's food supply exhausted before the following year was half gone.

Spring is the announcement to the world that the long winter sleep of nature has ended and that the awakening of new life has taken place. What a welcome visitor spring always is! How the past weeks of spring have put new joy and new hope in all our lives! How welcome the balmy warmth of the air! How welcome the rays of sunshine! Think of the cheering effect of spring for people who, through the winter, have been shut in! How pathetic that many who today are rejoicing because of spring will not once thank God for giving us spring! The only explanation to the fact of spring and the beauty and charm of spring is the presence of God in nature.

The explanation given by our school books does not explain the coming of spring. Our physical geography textbooks told us that "the change of seasons is caused by the varying of the inclination of the earth's axis of retardation to the plane of the ecliptic." That answer never explained anything to us—"the varying of the inclination"; "the earth's axis of rotation"; "the plane of the ecliptic." Those phrases tell the cause, but they do not tell the secret of spring. Whatever part the varying of the inclination of the earth's axis, and whatever part the sunbeams may have by striking the earth at a certain angle, God is the Author of that variation, and God is the Determinator of that angle. God is the Author of spring. Once in every twelve months God thinks spring, and spring comes in response to His thought.

From the beginning of winter, we began to look forward to spring. We knew she was on her way—this glorious visitor to all life—but we scarcely dared to hope for the full arrival so quickly. We did not think we would be so fortunate as to be able to let the furnace fires go out so soon. What a sigh of relief came to the men recently when the wife said, "For pity's sake, don't touch the fire." Of course, spring plays its pranks of sudden changes, and May, with her keen sense of humor, order us to rebuild the fires a few times before summer comes, just to remind us of the winter from which we are so anxious to be freed. And then spring may be very kind to us, and say, "No more furnace fires until autumn." Some of us were getting restless to get the garden tools ready for use and to inspect the flower seeds and the vegetable seeds. But we did not think that before another week went by spring would be upon us in full beneficent splendor.

How thankful we ought to be that we live in a land that has spring! When we think of those vast areas of the world that have never felt the kindly breath of spring; the countries where it is continual summer or continual winter—we should devoutly thank God that we live in a country that is blessed with spring every year. No doubt, the manufacturers of wearing apparel and the creators of millinery designs might wish there were even more seasons than we have, so that there would be added demands for ordering a change of styles.

Have you ever thought of the contrast between the fickleness of society in the matter of changing styles, as compared to the permanency of God's plan? The patterns He designed at creation's dawn have never changed. No two patterns of His are exactly alike, and yet every year down through the centuries His pattern for the leaves and flowers have been the same in their respective species. The leaves of the trees, the flowers of the field keep their pattern from year to year. But if you want to note the changeableness of people in regard to styles, just look at some of your photos taken ten or twenty or thirty years ago. Note the change in the style of hats, dresses or suits. These designs seemed the last word in their day; but they had their day and passed away—a long way away. You wonder now that you ever could have been satisfied with such hideous-looking clothes. But what you wear today will seem just as hideous thirty years from now.

And yet God's styles of season apparels never change. The flowers bloom in the same way as they have bloomed from the beginning of time. The color scheme of nature is the same as it has always been. The birds sing in the same way they have always sung. They learn no new songs from year to year, but each succeeding generation of birds is content to sing the same song God taught their ancestors to sing on the morning of creation.

Those beautiful days of spring should remind us that this is God's world. The glory of spring is a message of love from the heart of God. God alone is the Author of life. Man might be able to design a seed of the exact design as those we plant, but men cannot look in the seed the secret of life. That secret belongs alone to God.

The flowers that have already awakened from their long winter's sleep, and those that are now bursting forth in their glorious splendor are symbols of God's promise of eternal life for us.

Spring reminds us of the secret of spiritual life and strength. The flowers and shrubs, the trees and vines and plants of every kind sending their roots down into the soil for life and strength remind us that we must be rooted and grounded in the love of God if we would have life and if we would be strong. How soon the hardest plant withers and dies when it is taken out of the soil! How soon our noble purposes and our ideals fade away when we lose contact with God! Our lives, to be strong in purpose and strong in accomplishment for good, must be rooted and grounded in love for God and love for fellow-men. How soon the hardest faith begins to weaken and to die when moved from the soil of Christian fellowship and Christian service!

Spring is nature's greatest miracle, as by its power life is pushed forth as from the dead. The miracle of life seeks expression through the trunk of the trees, through branch and through the tiniest twig. On every hand we see this wonderful miracle of spring—leaves putting forth true to the pattern of the centuries; buds and flowers with their lavish display of color and beauty of design. The leaves mantling the branches of the trees, and the beautiful draperies of foliage on vine and bush are nature's response to the magic touch of spring.

The artists in their studio with paint-brush and canvas can only reproduce a likeness in miniature of what God paints upon the canvas of nature every spring. Carot's landscape paintings and Turner's sunsets adorn the walls of the art galleries mainly for the satisfaction of the rich; but the originals painted by the hand of God are for the inspection of the poor as well as for the rich, and all who will may look and be inspired.

Spring is a witness of the resurrection. It is easy to believe in the miracle of the resurrection when we stand in the presence of the miracle of spring. The same God who raised up Jesus from the dead; the same God who some day will speak the word and all who are in the grave will come forth—it is that same God who gives us spring, who gives us life; that same God whose we are and whom we ought to serve.

Spring is God's "love thought" for the rich and for the poor, for the high and for the low, for the learned and for the unlearned. And, like His "love thought" for the souls of men, it is for whomsoever will accept it as His gift. The flowers climb the poor man's fence and blossom with the same beauty rare as they do upon the artistically designed trellis in the rich man's lawn. The spring sun shines as brightly in the poor man's garden as upon that of the man of wealth. The glories of spring are for all who can see, and every glory of spring tells us of the love of God for all who will believe and receive.

ROSEMONT.

The recent evangelistic meeting at this Church, during which we were ably assisted by the Rev. M. F. Allen, pastor of the First Christian Church, Newport News, Va., resulted in twenty additions to the Church. The new Church fund is growing a little each week, and we rejoice at the thought that we may have a new Church which will be adequate for our needs within a few years.

Rosemont Church is proud of the following fine young members who are graduating from the Portlock High School this year: Miss Dorothy Reane, Miss Sallie Weston Morrison and Miss Viola Halstead. These are three of our finest young people, and their Church most heartily congratulates them and wishes them well in all their future journey of life.

The Gibson Motor Corporation, of which C. L. Gibson, a member of the Rosemont Church, is president, opened their new place of business on Monday, May 21st, which opening was attended by about 3,000 persons. Rosemont congratulates Mr. Gibson and his associates and wishes them well.

Mrs. O. F. Smith made a most interesting and helpful report of the Woman's Conference, at Richmond, May 1st, before her local Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society at its regular session held last week. Her report was greatly appreciated by the ladies of the home society.

The young people of our Christian Endeavor Societies held most helpful programs in honor of Mothers' Day. These young folks are doing splendid work and their Church is proud of them.

BIRMINGHAM LETTER.

The Christian-Congregational Church of Birmingham, Ala., is now a fact. At a meeting of the congregation Friday evening, May 25th, a constitution was adopted, and at the services the following Sunday morning members were received into the new Church. Officers were elected as follows: D. M. Lewis, R. A. Turner, deacons; Mrs. Thyra Swint, deaconess; D. W. Floyd, J. G. B. Fletcher, Roland J. Haygood, C. U. Slay, A. D. Teal, trustees; Pressley Ingram, clerk; D. W. Floyd, treasurer; A. D. Teal, auditor; Mrs. A. D. Teal, H. L. Swint and C. A. Turner, music committee; Miss Margaret Butler, Miss Ruth Turner, Miss Zora Cox, Mrs. Thyra Swint, Mrs. J. G. B. Fletcher and Harris Turner, social committee.

Rev. Kendrick Grobel will arrive in Birmingham July 1st to take charge of the work. He is highly recommended as an efficient young people's worker and a good musician.

The congregation plans to buy a site for a Church house in the near future and hopes to start work on the building next fall. The services are now being held in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

DR. PIERCE AT ELON.

The baccalaureate preacher for the graduating class at Elon this year was the Rev. Jason Noble Pierce, D. D., Washington, D. C. Dr. Pierce did not bring a message to the class and for the occasion only, but he brought himself as well. If this writer is not mistaken, Dr. Pierce did not write out a formal discourse for this formal occasion, but out of the fullness of his scholarship and experience in the ministry, he spoke from the heart and made an appeal to the heart of his hearers. His main thesis was this: If one has a firm, fixed, unwavering faith in God, and will rely implicitly upon God, one may count on inspiration sufficient to solve the difficult problems of life. Till recently, Dr. Pierce had thought that the eleventh chapter of Hebrews, that wonderful chronicle of the saints, was a treatise on faith, and that what the writer had in mind was to set forth the faith of Abel and Enoch and Abraham and Moses and the rest. He no longer holds to that view and believes that the writer of Hebrews was trying to show that when men had such faith as these men had in God they might be counted upon to be inspired to do their work in the world and to make a real contribution to humanity. The closing verses of the eleventh chapter of Hebrews reveal what the writer of the chapter had in mind, viz: that these men, having obtained a good report because of their faith, made a contribution to humanity, past and present, and are yet making a contribution, not a contribution of faith, but a contribution from the inspiration they received of God because of their firm, fixed faith in God. Dr. Pierce contended that all success in life is "co-operative success" and that apart from our contribution to others and our service to others, there can be no success, and if we would make this contribution we will do so out of an inspiration born of and springing from faith. One cannot not have inspiration for the asking, nor for the seeking. Inspiration does not come in that way. It springs out of faith, and this faith one may have and may cultivate and may develop and may strengthen by the right attitude to Almighty God. Apart from this faith, one may never expect inspiration that really counts and makes its contribution to the world. Men make contribution to causes, and these causes may not, for the time being, be very popular or appealing. It may take time for the world to find out the worth and the weight of these causes. Oliver Cromwell was possibly the greatest Englishman. He was a despised man, hated and hounded, but he was giving his life to a cause, and when that cause finally triumphed, even the cause of representative government, the cause of democracy, then the world enthroned Oliver Cromwell in its heart and gave him his proper evaluation. Woodrow Wilson will likely be more highly esteemed in the future than he was in his day, or in the past, because he gave himself to a great cause, and the world is coming to learn the value of that cause. When any individual co-operates with that cause, institution or enterprise, which is for the uplift of man, for the service of man, for the redemption of man, one is on the road to success, for all true success is co-operative success.

It can be safely said that if the graduates of the class of 1928 of Elon College got Dr. Pierce's message, and will put it into their thinking, and into their activities and attitudes, they will certainly make their contribution to humanity, for they will esteem most highly and cultivate most assiduously and strive most zealously for an ever-living, an ever-increasing and ever-abiding faith in God. And out of that faith in the hour of need will come sufficient inspiration to meet the demands of the hour and of the time.

It was a real gospel message delivered by a real preacher of the Word, and if Dr. Pierce preaches, as one is persuaded that he does, such gospel and such messages as that to his congregation in Washington every Sunday, and to the President of the United States, who is a member of that congregation, we are safe in saying that ours is yet a nation whose God is the Lord, and the chief executive of our land has real soul-food on the Sabbath Day which is bound to bear fruit in his own life as it shapes the destiny of this nation. It was a great occasion for Elon College graduates to hear Dr. Pierce, and to be thrilled with a message that inspires the soul and leaves in the heart that which is holy, heavenly and divine. J. O. A.

SHALL WE MAKE GOOD?

Quite a number of our pastors have not yet reported their missionary offering. In the light and stress of the great need now, we cannot, for the life of us, believe that a one of our pastors will fail to take the offering. Dr. Minton, Secretary of our Foreign Board, Dayton, Ohio, wrote THE SUN's editor that the work certainly would have to be very greatly curtailed, involving the necessity of the Barretts remaining on furlough for a year, unless there came in at least $7,000 during June. He hopes that 3,000 of this will come to his office from Churches in the North and West, although their mission period is over; and the only hope of returning the Barretts and preventing cuts equally as drastic in Japan and elsewhere was for the South to send in $4,000. Solely on faith in God and the loyalty and devotion of our pastors, the Mission Secretary has guaranteed Dr. Minton that the South will send him the $4,000 during June. We cannot believe that the pastors will fail us now and the people will turn a deaf ear to our plea. We are not raising the cry of alarm. We are simply trying to state bare facts. On some account the people seem to have grown indifferent to missions. This indifference is appalling. It may be that financial conditions are not favorable. It may be that business is dull, but people seem to have money for other things and to buy what they wish. Moreover, the full quota for our own Elon College was raised and the full amount asked for by the Orphanage last year was raised, and we believe that our people will do their duty by missions, since missions is fundamental in building up the kingdom of our Lord. We ask that our pastors lay the fact of our needs before their people and give all the people a chance to contribute. We admit that the spring-time is not as favorable to large collections as the late fall, and that it is more difficult to get money at Easter, say, than at Thanksgiving. This should not deter us from doing our best, nor our pastors from proving their loyalty and devotion to their Church and to the first and most fundamental interest of their Church in kingdom enlargement.

Will the pastors give the people a chance and urge them to do their best now? May God help us.

ELON COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

One who attends and is deeply interested in the commencement exercises always feels that the last one is the best. This is as it should be, and each year should show progress over the past. In spite of all this, there are reasons why the recent commencement seemed to surpass in a marked manner all previous commencements. The four outstanding public utterances—that by Dr. Pierce in the baccalaureate sermon on Sunday; that by President Harper in his baccalaureate address to the graduates Sunday evening; that by Mrs. Eunice Rich Powell on behalf of the alumni, and the annual address to the graduates on the graduating day of His Excellency, Governor Angus W. McLean—were, each and all, of the very highest commendation from all who heard them. The class day exercises were delightful, and it was the largest graduating class in the history of the college. From all sides we heard it said that Elon had had her most happy and successful year, and certainly, if the commencement occasion is an index as well as the crowning event of the year, such reports are well founded. The trustee meeting was very largely attended and a most harmonious and successful session was held as the work of the year was reviewed and plans made for the future. It was a general source of rejoicing that the full quota asked of the Convention had been raised and that the college closed the year without a deficit. President Harper and his associates have wrought zealously through the year and have achieved wonderfully. We are giving elsewhere the story of the commencement exercises as told by a reporter, and this editorial comment is added to emphasize the merits and the success of the college and the commencement just closed.

MINISTERIAL COURTESY.

Paul's word to Timothy covers the minister's personal life. (1) Be thou an example to them that believe, in word, in behaviour, in love, in faith, in purity. (2) Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine. Attention to personal life and teaching are the two arms of ministerial power. The mysteries and dangers of personal religious life are fathomless. It is a "life hid with Christ in God," and is wider and deeper than the sea. But it is an open book, "read and known of all men." The power of the minister is in his religious life. As to his doctrine, it makes demands upon his entire being. His educated mind alone can not interpret the word of God. The natural man cannot know the things of the Spirit, because they are spiritually discerned. "Study to show thyself approved unto God. His mind, his heart, his spirit unite in preparation for teaching men the way of the Lord. Prayer is the medium of communication with the divine, and inspiration may enter into the reading of the word as well as the writing of the word; and only when the Spirit touches the heart of its hearer does it take effect in his life. But I am to speak on the relation of ministers to one another, or ministerial courtesy. That is a new field. I invite your consideration to three relations of ministers to other ministers.

1. Personal ministerial courtesy. Courtesy is "politeness originating in kindly feelings and exercised habitually." One does not lose his manhood, nor his personality, when he becomes a minister. He carries into the ministry the passions, propensities and idiosyncrasies of his natural life; but these may all come under the control of his life in Christ. Paul says: "I keep my body under," which means that his lower nature is kept under by his spiritual life. This makes the minister a new man, and his personal consideration of his brother-minister becomes a personal privilege and obligation. Real human relations are not lessened because he enjoys the distinction of being a minister. The personal relation of ministers should be as cordial, human, sincere and brotherly as other men. Manhood will strengthen under good behaviour toward one another, and the personal human tie will not only bind ministers together but increase the fraternal and kindly relation of laymen. The brotherly relation of ministers creates an atmosphere that is breathed by the people in the community.

2. Professional ministerial courtesy. This relation is more liable to neglect or misunderstanding than personal courtesy; but ministers should assume that this courtesy exists, even when it is not made manifest, and that they will receive it from others; and the surest way to receive it is to extend it. Kindly feeling is essential to the exercise of courtesy. Suspicion and imagination often prevent professional courtesy. A safe way is to recognize no slight, to entertain no feeling of neglect, but to maintain in our hearts the kindly feeling that produces courtesy. The way to maintain and manifest professional courtesy is to treat all ministers as you would treat the best. Jesus manifested His courtesy by attention to the worst. The woman at Jacob's well was treated as kindly as Mary in her Bethany home. Professional courtesy should not be professional. It should be as genuine as personal courtesy. The recognition of equality lays the foundation for courtesy in all relations among men. Position, popularity, advantage, have no place in ministerial relations. The least may be filling the most important place, and be doing the greatest work for the Master.

3. Perpetual ministerial courtesy. Nothing has permanent value that dies on the way. Jesus loved His own unto the end. "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." Courtesy on occasion, or when it serves a selfish purpose, is a hollow sham and a cheat. Habitual courtesy is the only Christian ministerial courtesy. It must not die when conditions change, nor be done for the public eye. Marriage fails unless love continues. Friendship dies unless it is perpetuated. There is no genuine courtesy built on etiquette alone. Courtesy is not courtesy, though spelled with the same letters. Courtesy is more than a bow, more than a word; it is the perpetual stream of genuine kindness flowing from a pure heart. Good fellowship and frequent intercourse help to keep alive fire on the altar of courtesy. We should profit by others, and we should profit others. Mutual confidence, frankness, honorable hospitality of feeling, comparison of experiences, unity of principle, are all consistent with courtesy, and aid in its helpful exercise. "It is good and pleasant for brethren to dwell together in unity." "Nothing more seriously discredits the ministry and impairs its moral power than misunderstandings of ministers." Ministerial courtesy should be extended to ministers of other communions as well as to one's own; and such courtesy should be as sincere as that practiced by members of the same Church.

Jealousy of temporal advantage, discord among families of ministers, differences of opinion may prevent professional ministerial courtesy; but professional jealousy needs to be shunned with scrupulous Christian sincerity. Habitual secret prayer for one another is the best-known remedy for all that hinders professional ministerial courtesy; and the lack of it is, in part, the cause of a divided Christendom.

A STATEMENT.

So many nice things are being said in THE CHRISTIAN SUN about Congregationalists that some one of us should acknowledge these kindly references, and even more than these the obligation which we feel for generous hospitality and considerate courtesy at the Southern Christian Convention and other meetings of the Christian Church. The Convention was a true meeting. Men and women, under the direction of the Divine Spirit, attended to the business of the Church. Observers were pleased at the good attitudes taken on all questions, but one could not help but be impressed by the action of the Convention members in the matter of Christian union and our hopeful merger. Religious bodies often, with little consideration, pass resolutions which mark a new application of gospel principles and have a great and virtuous uplift. The vote remains on record. Somehow it does not eventuate into life. I was impressed by the fact that the Convention did not sing the doxology and congratulate itself for doing a worthy action, but rather sang a hymn of fellowship, "Blest Be the Tie that Binds." The Christian Church seemed to regard the action as one to be carefully considered, taken as a religious duty if Providence so directed, and then carried out. God bless such an attitude and such brethren!

A word about Atlanta Theological Seminary. Its trustees, at their annual meeting, without a dissenting voice, expressed themselves as heartily in favor of the removal to Elon College, N. C., where the seminary would maintain its organization in close association with Elon College, and to the mutual advantage of the two institutions. The seminary occupies a beautiful site of nearly ten acres near the center of the city of Atlanta. Founded in 1900 and incorporated in 1901, it is not old enough as an institution to have accumulated an endowment.

Since theological students require additional help for their professional studies after spending years in other education, an unusual amount of help has to be given them. Should the seminary property be forced upon the market at this time of low prices for real estate, there would be an unwarranted sacrifice of funds which should be used for the benefit of ministerial students in our two Churches. In this situation, Dr. Lewis H. Keller, president of the seminary, and Dean Zimmerman are to make a spirited campaign among Congregationalists and other friends of the seminary to secure gifts and pledges for funds which will enable the seminary to go to Elon with assured revenues for paying its professors and with money for the incidental expenses of removal. Will not the readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN not join us in the prayer that the necessary pledges may be secured to make possible the union of these institutions without the loss of any time or enthusiasm.

Yours fraternally,
F. P. ENSMINGER.

THROUGH COLLEGE OR THE COLLEGE THROUGH YOU—WHICH?

At a time when the student emphasizes credits above scholarship, and there is so much said about the inefficiency of the modern college and the weakness of the system under which it is conducted, this question is of very deep concern. One college president has said, "I am not half so much interested to know whether a man has been through college as whether the college has been through him."

A professor in the University of Chicago told the students in his classes that he should consider them educated in the best sense of the word when they could answer yes to the following questions: "Has education given you a sympathy with all good causes and made you espouse them?" "Has it made you public-spirited?" "Has it made you a brother to the weak?" "Have you learned how to make friends and to keep them?" "Do you know what it is to be a friend to yourself?" "Can you look an honest man or a pure woman straight in the eye?" "Do you see anything to love in a little child?" "Will a lonely dog follow you in the street?" "Can you be high-minded and happy in the meaner drudgeries of life?" "Do you think that washing dishes or hoeing corn is as compatible with high thinking as piano-playing or golf?" "Are you good for anything to yourself?" "Can you be happy alone?" "Can you look out over the world and see anything but dollars and cents?" "Can you look into a mud-puddle by the wayside and see the clear sky?"

There is no single investment that is more productive for a Church or nation than expenditures along educational lines. Only one per cent of the American people is college trained, yet from this one per cent comes 97 per cent of the leaders in all the fields of activity. In "Who's Who," 59 per cent are college graduates, 14 per cent are college trained, 27 per cent have no college training. Out of 1,000 pupils who entered the first grade this year, 600 will finish the eighth grade, 300 will enter the high school, 110 will graduate from the high school, 38 will enter college, and 14 will graduate from college. This number will increase in ten years to more than twice 14, and then the college should exert a greater uplift and a far greater influence in public life, and it will if the college gets through the students.

There is nothing that can take the place of the Christianized American college life, if the student will but sense and grasp the opportunity. The college atmosphere is undoubtedly charged with idealism, and though we might ask that this idealism were more intelligently tempered with a practicality adapted to the needs of the world, and with a little less emphasis on the spectacular and the trivially useless, the idealistic spirit is there and the ground-work exists for a large and fine culture which should be the background of every citizen. The student has the opportunity to lift himself out of the commonplace, if he will, as he comes in contact with forces that should give him aspiration and service.

The quickening appeal of our denominational colleges is to think clearly, to judge rightly and discern the truth, and this should breed right-minded, humble and worthy men and women. Our colleges everlastingly declare to our youth that righteousness, decency, honor, justice and worth are more precious than silver and more to be desired than finest gold. The individual may

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Vacation is cessation from regular employment, as students and teachers in schools, ministers of Churches, officials in responsible positions, workers in mills, nurses in hospitals, and tillers of the soil. The object of vacations is recreation and preparation for the resumption of work. One of the problems is to know how to spend vacation to the best advantage. Some spend their time of vacation in excessive indulgence in pleasure. That is dissipation which never adds to character or usefulness. The idea of vacation implies rest from regular occupation; but rest does not mean cessation from work so much as change of work. Sleep is the natural and normal mode of rest. Rest is essential to human health, welfare and usefulness, but one-third of life is provided for rest. The night furnishes ample time for rest if people will use it. God has provided for man's health, rest and service. Eight hours for real work, eight hours for real sleep, and eight hours for eating and looking after smaller interests. But civilization has so increased human activities that vacations are necessary. The question is how to spend vacation.

Change of location is one good way to spend vacation. New scenery, new peoples, new associations, and all studied with the desire to learn more of the world, more of other folks, of other occupations, and of other experiences. Nothing makes home and home community look so good as absence from it for a time. Travel is educational. It enlarges the mind by giving the mind a new sense of its own littleness. They tell us that the world is getting smaller, that it is one neighborhood; but it gets larger as we know more about it. All subjects grow with knowledge of them. History grows, music grows, mathematics grows, mechanics grows, art grows, science grows, and so for all the rest. The more one knows of any subject, the larger that subject appears. Any vacation that enlarges vision, increases aspiration, stimulates effort, and deepens character and purposeful endeavor has been well spent. But any vacation that reduces knowledge, purpose and desire to be better, to know more, and to contribute more to some part of human interest has been failure.

If the means and opportunity for travel are not within the reach of students, then some honest employment will add new impulse and new energy for successful life. Every stroke in any work will add to efficiency in one's lifework. It is good for a student to work in a store, on a farm, in a shop, in a summer school, anywhere to fill up the time in honest employment. It is as fallacious to waste vacation as it is to waste time in school or any other regular service. Thinking and decision are two important factors in life; and a change of work may put the mind into new channels of thinking that may lead to decisions for life. The choice of a life vocation is one of the most difficult things in life, and certainly one of the most important. It is the same thing in life that a road is in travel. To get in the wrong road leads one away from the place sought. To miss one's calling means failure. If one gets in the vacation where he belongs, success is easy! if he fails in this decision, the whole life may be a failure. God will help those who look to Him for guidance in this decision of choice in life vocation. It is easy to go where you are going if you get in the right road.

ATLANTA SEMINARY.

The board of trustees of Elon College, in their annual May session, welcomed a committee from the Atlanta Theological Seminary, Atlanta, Ga., consisting of Rev. F. P. Ensminger, superintendent of the Southern district of the Congregational Church, and Rev. J. Edward Kirby, D. D., pastor of the United Church, Raleigh, N. C. The matter of the removal of the seminary to Elon College was thoroughly considered in co-operation with this special committee and following visits to Elon College recently by the president and dean of the seminary.

In view of the important matters connected with the transfer of the seminary to Elon College, it was unanimously voted that the two institutions affiliate and that the actual transfer of the academic work of the seminary to Elon College be effected by September, 1929, and that in the meantime the seminary authorities would take steps to dispose of their property in Atlanta and to make every arrangement to move its physical assets to the college at the same time.

The library of the seminary, consisting of some 8,000 volumes, many of them very important works dealing with Church history and the movement and development of Christian thought, will be moved into the college and installed in the Carlton Library. The other physical properties of the seminary will likely be disposed of in Atlanta and new equipment purchased here so far as may be necessary.

There was genuine satisfaction expressed on the part of the board of trustees that the Congregationalists were inclined to transfer their seminary for the South from Atlanta to Elon College, and that the merger would be of mutual benefit to the Christian Church which has no seminary in the South and to the Congregational body. This decision is also in line with the recent action of the Southern Christian Convention and the various Congregational conferences of the South and other parts of the country, all of them voting unanimously for the organic union of these two Christian bodies.

Prof. S. A. Bennett, head of the department of religious education of the college, and Dr. J. U. Newman, head of the biblical department, will begin at once organizing their courses to correlate and integrate with the seminary work. College juniors and seniors will be allowed to pursue courses in the seminary for college credit, and likewise seminary students will be allowed to pursue courses in junior and senior classes of the college for credit toward their B. D. degree, the course in each instance being approved by the proper dean.

The seminary will come to Elon College with a strong faculty of experienced teachers in the field of religious education, Bible, theology, Church history, Christian ethics, psychology, philosophy and social science, including also hymnology and homiletics.

The Christian Church has for many years looked forward to the time when it would have a seminary for the preparation of its Christian leaders for its Southern pulpits. It has had to make use of Vanderbilt, Union Theological Seminary of Virginia, Princeton, Chicago, Union Theological Seminary of New York City, Boston, Yale, and Harvard. There is great satisfaction that, beginning with the fall of 1928, the Church will have its own seminary located at its college in the South.

The board of trustees appointed as a special committee to arrange for and effect the terms of the affiliation between the seminary and the college, D. R. Fonville, Burlington, N. C.; Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, Durham, N. C.; Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Elon College, N. C., with President Harper as chairman.

C. M. CANNON.

DENDRON, VA.

This is a beautiful world and a wonderful age in which we are living, but oh, many people live day by day without realizing that they have a kind, patient, loving Heavenly Father, their Creator, Preserver and Benefactor, in whom they live and move and have their being; who gives them life and breath and all things; who sent His dear Son to satisfy divine justice for them by His sacrificial death; yes, many live without casting a glance heavenward in a spirit of praise and thankfulness for His many blessings. It is inspiring to realize that from the stars shine His glory, from the flowers is exhaled His infinite love and goodness; the brooks and breezes sound His praise, and the regularity and order of all forms of life show forth His praise.

It grieves me to think of such base ingratitude and horrid rebellion against so good a Benefactor. My conviction is, the wave of rampant lawlessness, of crime, of Sabbath desecration, of divorce, of immorality, of irresponsibility that is sweeping like a mighty flood this great nation today is directly the result of fast living and crowding God the Creator and Preserver of all mankind out of our lives. No wonder it is so difficult to raise money for missions, etc. It is a shame the way we rob God of that which rightfully belongs to Him. Some day we have got to render an account of our stewardship. How does our account stand? Think it over. Remember, God is keeping books.

Beloved, I am trying to help you see the secret of the barrenness in your life, the secret of the weakness of your life, the secret of the no-joy in your life. What's the secret? The fact that you fail to put God first and are not beautifully attracted to Christ. You exalt the material above the spiritual. The only thing that can give you the peace, the joy and the power that you need is absolute conformity to the exquisite life of our blessed Redeemer—the Man of Galilee. Seek His footprints, imitate His magnificent example, cultivate His sweet, gentle, sympathetic spirit. Look to Jesus only. Let your thoughts and affections turn towards Him as the sunflower turns sunward throughout the day to drink in His light and warmth.

Isn't it blessed to know that He moves through this world of sorrow and pain saying, "Come unto me and I will give you rest." He is mighty to save, and therefore is the hope of this ruined earth. Hear His sweet voice today. He says, "Repent, accept me as your Saviour. I need you; I want your hands to work for me, your feet to go, as did mine, on errands of love; your intellect to plan for me; your talents to further my work, and your substance to advance my cause."

Members of the Christian Church, what's your answer going to be? If we want the blessings of Almighty God, we must rally to the cause of missions. Our beloved Dr. Atkinson and that faithful, consecrated layman Bro. J. M. Darden have done their best; shall we do less? Let us rally and show to the world that we have heard the Master's call. May the blessings of God the Father, God the Son and God the Holy Ghost abide with you always.

BIBLES PRESENTED GRADUATES.

By J. E. KIRBYE.

Elon College is presenting to the members of this graduating class a literary and religious treasure in the sixty-six little books bound together in this volume. This is not done as a mere formality, for it represents the spirit and genius of your alma mater which has had such an important part in bringing into being your educational and moral equipment which will now be utilized to meet the issues of life in the road stretching toward the distant years.

This college is the child of the Christian Church—a Church which more than a century ago had the courage and faith to abandon the creeds which had come into being in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries and to summon men and women to a trust and a restfulness of religious life in an open Bible. Without giving it a creedal definition, it made possible research and expanding knowledge for the scholar and Christian character for the saint. Life can never mean much to any man or woman who faces it with a docile acceptance of intellectual and traditional formula. It is only when we face it with the creative freedom of a great artist that its unseen treasures are brought to light.

The Bible has become a greater book as the years have passed. It is the world's best seller. It is as impossible to subtract it from our life and literature as it would be to unbraid the sunbeams or to separate yellow and violet rays from the tides of light that fill the solar systems with warmth and cheer.

John Quincy Adams said at one time: "In whatever light we view the Bible, whether with reference to salvation, history or morality, it is a mine of knowledge like which none other has ever been found in any land or any realm." Coleridge once said: "In the Bible there is more that finds me than I have experienced in all other books put together. The fairest flower that ever clomb up a cottage window is not so fair a sight to my eyes as the Bible gleaming through the lower panes." This is said by the writer of the Ancient Mariner.

It is this book of history, poetry, proverb, drama, idyll, song and letter seeking to unfold religious hope and faith and ministering to the deepest longings of the human spirit, that your college would place in your hands and hearts as a testimony of good will on your graduation day.

"On the other hand, there is a group deeply troubled and pained in heart over what they regard as the apostasy of the human heart. They welcome progress in material things, but they resent change in the social and spiritual order. There is nothing certain they assert except change—change for the worse, degeneration in the most sacred principles by which men have lived. The future for them is dark with spiritual calamity.

This difference of interpretation is not peculiarly symptomatic of the twentieth century. It is characteristic of every Christian century. Before the advent of the Christ into the world, progress in material things too was under the ban, and he who was sufficiently self-assertive in any realm of life or experience before the Christian era to undertake to introduce an innovation was branded as a heretic and pilloried by his fellows. With the beginning of the Christian era, the spirit of progress entered into the purview of men's life. The Central Figure in the Christian revelation had declared that the Holy Spirit should lead men into all truth. This was the magna charta of human progress; but, strange to say, so conservative has been the attitude of men in spiritual matters that they have limited the race's progress for the most part to material things. We have reached the point now in the development of the human race, where we welcome discoveries and ventures in the realm of material things where we, all of us, welcome them but it is true of us as of the prophets of Israel, that one generation atones spiritual progressives while their children erect monuments to signalize the lack of vision and appreciation of their fathers. The spiritual prophet in many places is today as in every day anathematized during the days of his earthly pilgrimage, only to be apotheosized by succeeding generations.

"We hear much criticism today of institutions of higher learning on the ground that they teach an unwarranted liberty of conscience in respect to the religious and spiritual life. There is the demand that even the denominational, Christian colleges should be subjected to rigid tests to determine their orthodoxy and to root out from these institutions 'tainted' instructors. Those who advocate this procedure are evidently not sure of the tenets and teachings which they profess to regard as having divine sanction. They do not have confidence in truth to withstand the onslaughts of error. They conceive truth to be something to be protected, whereas the truth is something to be discovered, appropriated and enjoyed forever. They are greatly troubled in heart over the seeming conflict between science and religion and forget that the only real test of truth is the pragmatic one enunciated by the Master Teacher when He said of men and of institutions that by their fruits they should be known. Religion has nothing to fear from science or from any other source. That is, true religion has nothing to fear because true religion, like true science, is founded upon the same ultimate truth in the discovery of which the human race has been engaged under divine guidance from the beginning of its experience.

In concluding his appeal to the graduation class, President Harper lifted the veil of the future with a challenge to the seniors to make their four years in college a success by bringing forth wholesome changes in life's relationships because of their altered attitude. "Determine to make all things new," President Harper urged, "as is suggested in the Revelation, where Christ is represented as saying, 'Behold, I make all things new.' What finer motto could we adopt for the years of activity in the service of men and of God which thus lie out before each of us than this prophetic utterance of the Seer! It is the attitude toward life and its problems that really determine the quality of a man's achievement. This outcome in practical living is the direct consequence of attitudes functioning as motives in the individual's creed or philosophy of life. The altering of life's attitudes through the educational process is the crowning glory of our educational system. Only as these altered attitudes become our motivating ideals in practical experience can we hope to see the locked-for progress of the human race in the realization of its noblest and most cherished aspirations."

THROUGH COLLEGE OR THE COLLEGE THROUGH—WHICH?

not think it important to learn well what the higher institution has to offer in its courses of study, but society does. Those trained in the liberal arts and in religion and are holding degrees from our institutions should be the leaders in maintaining the standards of civilization, or their so-called education is a failure.

If the college does not get through the student, I wonder whether we, as teachers, have ever thought that we may be somewhat to blame, for, as another has expressed it, "we are at best but blunderers in this God-like business of teaching." Our shortcomings shame us, for we are not alone in paying the penalty for them; they have a sorry immortality in the maimed minds of those whom we, in our blunderings, have misled. We may have been content to be merchants of dead yesterdays when we should have been guides into unborn tomorrows, or we may have put conformity to old customs above curiosity about new ideas. We may have been peddlers of petty accuracies when we should have been priests and prophets of abundant living. We have often counted knowledge more precious than wisdom, and have tried to teach our students what to think instead of how to think. We have thought it our business to furnish the minds of our students when we should have been laboring to free their minds; we have failed to see that a student's memory should be a tool as well as a treasure-chest. All facts are dead until they are related to the rest of knowledge and the rest of life, and we should be able to relate the coal scuttle to the universe; for, after all, education is but the adventure of trying to make ourselves at home in the world.

The small college supplies the personal element in education. Personal contact is a potent force on every level of education. In our colleges we are engaged in an effort to prevent our numbers from destroying our effectiveness personally. The officers of admission are seeking to evaluate more finely the students' abilities and proclivities, in order to preserve the identity of each individual student, for unless the institution knows him and he knows us, he may be taking courses, gathering credits, but he assuredly is not securing an ideal education. His mind may be furnished by reading or lecture, but his social nature is warmed and his spiritual being inspired only by intimate contact with a good teacher.

Human nature functions through play, social contact, and work. The human mind, in the course of its evolution, has manifested a three-fold interest in the world in which it dwells, namely: a factual, a functional and an evaluative. The results of this three-fold interest have become systematized as pure science, applied science and philosophy. Life means to be and to continue being. In man, this root principle flowers into self-being and its fruit is self-becoming. Education is for the sake of life, not life for the sake of education. It is rather the fruit of the tree of life and not a gift of the gods bestowed upon man for his enjoyment, without effort upon his part. Knowledge is for the sake of power, but all knowledge does not necessarily result in power. Knowledge is like a tree which begins at a root, grows into a trunk, and is known by the fruit that it bears. The root of knowledge is learning, its trunk is understanding, and its fruit is wisdom. Learning is knowledge of, understanding in knowledge about, and wisdom is knowledge through, or value. Knowledge must become a value before it can serve the ultimate end of life, which is value.

The college gets through the individual when it prepares him for complete living. This will take the student through at least seven phases of life, namely: the physical, the intellectual, the moral, the aesthetic, the social, the vocational and the spiritual. This will enable him to be well and miss disease, to know the truth and avoid error, to will the good and eschew evil, to love the beautiful and reject the ugly, to be a friend of man and oppose all injustice, to be an economic producer and not a social parasite, and so to know, love, and serve God and to oppose as a menace to mankind materialism in all its forms, to see life steadily and see it whole.

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary.

OUR STEWARDSHIP.

WARREN H. DENISON, Sec'y.

The following "Business Men's Stewardship Platform" was adopted by the United Stewardship Council of the Churches of Christ in America at its meeting at Nashville, Tenn., April 27, 1928. This platform was prepared after a very wide consultation with leading Christian business men of the nation. Every business man would do well to make it his platform. Pastors should read it to their congregations, officials, men's classes, brotherhoods and urge its adoption as a rule of life.

A BUSINESS MAN'S STEWARDSHIP PLATFORM.

1. Wealth production, a part of God's plan. I believe that all work which produces true material wealth and serves genuine human need is an essential part of the divine discipline for the spiritual perfection of man and should be deemed a holy task.

2. My business, a spiritual service. I will recognize my own work, as employer or as employee, as a vocation to which I am definitely called of God to serve the highest interests, both of myself and my fellows. I will conscientiously keep under strict scrutiny all my business transactions, both in their product and in the spirit dominating them that, in every particular of operation and management, they may be conducted in complete accord with the principles and ideals of Jesus.

3. My possessions, the tools of my vocation. I will count all my talents and my business privileges and opportunities as God-entrusted equipment with which, as a Christian business man, faithfully and successfully to execute my God-given commission to produce wealth.

4. Not to hoard, but to share. I will devote myself to my business, not only in order to get material possessions, but in order also gladly to render the utmost service to my fellows, both in the getting of wealth and in its disposal. I will, in humility, good will and unselfishness, deal with my employees, my business associates, my competitors and my fellow-men everywhere in the spirit of Christ, who said: "The Son of man came not to be ministered unto but to minister." I will avoid covetousness, foolish pride, unseemly luxury, careless waste and all excessive self-gratification in the use of my money, remembering it is a stewardship.

5. Why I acquire money! I believe that God intends that my business should produce fair and legitimate returns, sufficient: first, to maintain my business on a sound, economic basis; second, to provide myself and those dependent upon me with an adequate living on a Christian level; third, to furnish all my business associates and their families income and leisure sufficient to enable them to realize a full and complete life; and, fourth, to provide the resources needed fully to finance the agencies which promote the Christian program in my Church in my community and in the world.

6. Keeping accounts with my Divine Partner. I will acknowledge this stewardship of mine by carrying on the books of my business or in my personal budget a "separated portion account." Into this account I will regularly set apart a definite proportion of my income, increasing it as my ability grows. This will be a constant reminder of God's sovereign rights in all that I am and have and a witness before my fellows of my desire and purpose to conduct my business as a stewardship, and will assure me an established and adequate reserve for giving. I will, as God's partner, administer this on His behalf with utmost care.

7. Safeguarding my resources for life's full purpose. I will, as one who recognizes that all possessions are a trust from God, carefully plan the use of all my resources—money, time and talent—so as to achieve life's full purpose in Christ. I will teach my family these stewardship ideals, that they may live life as a great partnership with God in building His kingdom on earth.

LAYMEN IN THE CHURCH.

BY W. B. TRUITT.

It would be impossible, within the limits of a brief article, to go very far into the work of a modern layman in the Church. A few suggestions, however, may be made, with the hope that they will justify some of THE SUN's precious space. Should these suggestions elicit any interest or provoke any contrary opinion, the writer will be pleased to elaborate by letter or otherwise.

The layman of today finds himself in the midst of a religious revolution. This revolution, going quietly along, is, nevertheless deep and sure. As is always the case, it was born of dissatisfaction. For, be it known, the average layman of today is very much dissatisfied. This is highly important, for progress can never be made where complacency and self-satisfaction prevail.

The leadership of the Church during the last half century has not kept up with the progress of the times. The effect of education on the thinking of average laymen seems not to have been seriously considered. This same education has wrought wonders in the physical world, and we find ourselves surrounded by undreamed-of progress in industry, commerce, science and invention. But, in the midst of this remarkable progress the Church has, in its human element, tried to remain ultra-conservative, whereas Christ intended for it to lead the world. It is a fact that in the Church we still find tradition, dogma, theories and divisions which retard its progress. No other business could survive the conditions. Fortunately it is founded upon an impregnable rock and cannot fail. But it does ingloriously lag and falter. Has any reader stopped to consider what Jesus would say about religionists of today? For, are we not still honey-combed with traditions, religious "laws," theories and Pharisaism as the ultra-religionists of His time, upon whom Jesus turned in anger and disgust?

Fortunately, though, the influence of this religious revolution, Pharisaism is giving way; theories are being abandoned; divisions are about to be adjusted; we have found that religious "laws" are insufficient; that Christianity is positive rather than negative.

But in these changing conditions the layman has not found himself. Who could expect it? He's much as a slave coming out of bondage. So far as can be recalled at this moment, the layman of the past has never been trained to a Christian vocation. His principal duties seemed "self-salvation," listening, and entertaining the same "beliefs" as those who advanced the theories. He was trained to be a negative personality. Consequently he is not now able to accomplish very much positive Christianity. He wants to do something, but, except in isolated cases, he doesn't know just how to start, and is afraid lest he do something wrong.

In the new regime the layman's influence will be of untold value. What he needs is more training and to forget the traditions by which he has been bound. Already there are good results—though limited. Certainly his contributions of time and substance have been multiplied. He finds he can lead others into a correct relationship with the Father, but he is still timid about it. In the past, all evangelism was supposed to be the work of the preacher, and they did a great work in the days of mass revivals. Now, when such mass movements won't work out very well, and when it has been discovered that the personal touch is necessary, the work is a physical impossibility for all the preachers combined. The layman's opportunity has arrived, but he sorely lacks training for his work.

The men of the Church have often been chided within the past few years by some one who said that women were doing most of the work. Most of this criticism seems to hinge on the "raising" of money. The women deserve highest praise for their efforts. By what means they "raise" the money is a mystery to the average man, and need not be discussed here. A lot of it may be hidden away in the old grocery bill which Mr. Man has to pay, but they do get the money. We may as well decide, however, that the same methods will not work among the male species. He's just a little different in his mental ways. But there's one thing he will do, if he is taught—and there's the sad story—he hasn't been taught. He hasn't learned the real pleasure of paying his debts to God. In fact, he hasn't been taught that he owes God anything. But as the men of the Church learn stewardship, the financial problem will vanish, and constructive work can be done.

The average man in the Church is "fed up" on doctrine, theories, theology, and men's precepts. He will gladly follow the way. He wants more of the practical leadership of Jesus, and less of the theology of Paul. He is dissatisfied, wants to do, but doesn't know how. He can be an evangelist; he loves to realize that he has led some one into a better life. He will never lead others through vague theories, but rather by "thinking through." He will no longer let some one else do his thinking. That day is past, to a large measure.

Give the man in the Church a chance, and he will become a satisfied worker and the Church will awake from lethargy.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

Lesson XII—June 17, 1928.

THE CRUCIFIXION.

GOLDEN TEXT: "God commendeth His own love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us."—Romans 5: 8.

LESSON: Mark 15:16-47.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Isa. 53:7-12.

"And they crucified Him." These words take on new significance when we learn the truth about a crucifixion. "The earliest mode of crucifixion seems to have been by impalation, the transfixion of the body lengthwise and crosswise by sharpened stakes, a mode of death still well known among the Mongol race. The Roman citizen was exempt from this form of death, as it was considered the death of a slave. The cross was despised both by the Jews and by the Romans. It was fixed as the punishment for such crimes as treason, desertion in the face of the enemy, robbery, piracy, assassination, sedition and so forth. It continued in vogue in the Roman empire until the day of Constantine, when it was abolished as an insult to Christianity. Among the Romans, crucifixion was preceded by scourging, undoubtedly to hasten impending death. The victim then bore his own cross, or at least the upright beam, to the place of execution. This in itself proves that the structure was less penderous than is commonly supposed. When he was tied to the cross, nothing further was done and he was left to die from starvation. If he was nailed to the cross, at least in Judea, a stupefying drink was given to deaden the agony. The number of nails used was indeterminate. A tablet on which the feet rested or on which the body was partly supported, seems to have been a part of the cross to keep the wounds from tearing through the transfixed members. The suffering of death by crucifixion was intense, especially in hot climates. Severe local inflammation, coupled with an insignificant bleeding of jagged wounds, produced traumatic fever, which was aggravated by the exposure to the heat of the sun, the strained position of the body, and the insufferable thirst. The wounds swelled about the rough nails and the torn and lacerated tendons and nerves caused excruciating agony. The arteries of the head and stomach were surcharged with blood and a terrific throbbing headache ensued. The mind was confused and filled with anxiety and dread foreboding. The victim of crucifixion literally died a thousand deaths. Tetanus not rarely supervened and the rigors of attending convulsions would tear at the wounds and add to the burden of pain, till at last the bodily forces were exhausted and the victim sank to unconsciousness and death. The length of this agony was wholly determined by the constitution of the victim, but death rarely ensued before thirty-six hours had elapsed. Death was sometimes hastened by breaking the legs of the victims and by a hard blow delivered under the arm-pit before crucifixion." When we consider all this, it puts new meaning into the words, "And they crucified Him." It is all right, of course, to have our carefully carved crosses or crucifixes to wear; it is all right to have our carefully proportioned crosses surmounting our Churches and cathedrals—but we must keep in mind that, after all, the cross was not a smooth, carefully proportioned thing, but a rough, rugged thing, a symbol and instrument of disgrace and suffering and shame and death. One of the real miracles of history is the way in which Jesus Christ touched this thing of shame and made it a thing of glory. Indeed the heart of Christianity is best expressed by the symbol of the cross. For all in one the cross of Christ expressed the awfulness of human sin, the richness and the depth of divine love, the scope of divine forgiveness, the redeeming power of love, the ultimate triumph of spiritual ideals. However men may have interpreted the cross—and there have been interpretations many—men have always felt that the cross stands for something that took place that made a tremendous difference in human history and in individual lives. Learned and ignorant, rich and poor, modernist and fundamentalist, old and young alike feel the power of the cross of Christ. Its eloquent testimony to the place and power of vicarious suffering exerts a tremendous influence in the lives of those who stand in humility and awe before it.

We must keep in mind, too, that they not only crucified Him, but they crucified Him with two malefactors. To add to the shame and the humiliation of it all, they crucified Him with the transgressors. As Phillip Brooks says, if Jesus had hung on the cross alone there would have been in the sight a glory and a wonder that would have caused people who stood by to lose the disgrace in the majesty of the sacrifice.

One wonders how the crowd could have been so careless and indifferent and even actively inhumane during the crucifixion. The soldiers "throwing dice" for His garments, the rulers scoffing and taunting Him, the people who passed by challenging Him to come down from the cross to prove that He was the Christ—it seems almost incredible. And yet there are many today who are not concerned about the crucifixion at all. There are many professing Christians who look at it in an indifferent and careless way. The people in that crowd that day represent so many, many people today who stand in the presence of just this thing and are not moved by higher impulses or stirred to nobler service.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Sunday, June 17, 1928.

TOPIC: "The Church's Responsibility for Recreation."—1 Cor. 9:22-29.

Some Bible Hints.

The feast of harvest, the first-fruits or Thanksgiving feast, was always a time of joy charged with religion (v. 39).

The feast of booths, here described, was a reminder of the time when Israel dwelt in tents in the wilderness. There was always meaning in Israel's holidays (vs. 42, 43).

Body and mind need the rest of change; not more excitement, but quiet joy (v. 31).

The modern Christian Endeavor institute is giving the Church a chance to lead in young people's vacations and make them worth while (v. 32).

Suggestive Thoughts.

Commercialized recreation has made it imperative that the Church provide clean and healthful play for its young people. Young people must have recreation. Let us give them the best.

The aim of the Church should be to make recreation Church-centered. At present it is movie-centered, very largely. Play may be made to serve religion.

The day will come when every Church will have a recreation leader for its young people. Nothing would better tie up young folks to the Church than interest in their interests.

The Church should make use of recreation to obtain friendly contacts between its younger members. Friendship and fellowship are parts of the Church's task.

A Few Illustrations.

One country Church took the lead in providing recreation for the entire community. The members laid out a tennis court and electric lights were installed. This became a community center of tremendous value.

Responsibility should lead to action. We can help rural communities by loading a stereopticon on a Ford car and visiting a rural Church, putting on an evening's social that will be an eye-opener and a delight.

A recreation program should be based not on what older people think young people want, but on what young people themselves want. Begin with them where they are. Build on their interests.

The Church is not for Sunday only, but for all the week. Young people have leisure time. Shall we leave them like rudderless boats to drift?

To Think About.

Why has the Church responsibility for recreation?

What recreational program has our Church?

What are some of the values of play?

BETHLEHEM SCHOOL OF METHODS.

The Bethlehem Summer School of Christian Education will be held this year beginning July 1st and ending July 7th.

1. Programs may be had by writing Dr. S. L. Beougher, Wadley, Ala.; Rev. G. D. Hunt, Wadley, Ala., or Pattie Coghill, Henderson, N. C. We shall be glad to send you a program and send them to any of your friends whom you think may be interested. Do your friends the kindness to see that they get a copy of the program, too.

2. There has been much rejoicing in our ranks since the news came from Rev. Edwin E. White, pleasant Hill, Tenn., that he will teach a course in stewardship at Bethlehem. He is the author of "The Story of Missions," one of the mission study books and a book which many think the finest presentation of missions to be found anywhere. Let us hope that many of our Georgia and Alabama people will avail themselves of this fine opportunity.

3. Dr. W. P. Minton, Foreign Mission Secretary of the General Convention, Dayton, Ohio, will be present and teach two courses. The Georgia and Alabama people have been eager to get Dr. Minton for a long time and are very happy over having him for the summer school this year. Dr. Minton's fine spirit will help a lot.

4. A young man of the Alabama Conference has made this generous offer: a $5.00 prize to the young person writing the best paper on "Why I Should Like to Attend the Bethlehem Summer School." These papers should be in by June 20th. This will pay all of the expenses of the school.

5. Expenses—$1.00 registration and $4.00 for board making a total of $5.00 for the week. This is unusually reasonable. Bethlehem College furnishes rooms in the dormitory, with lights and water free of charge.

6. The summer school date has been changed to a month earlier this time, with the hope that it will be convenient for a larger number of people. The summer school can be made mighty worth while if pastors, Sunday School superintendents, teachers and all who are interested in the Church will co-operate. How much do you think of your Church?

PATTIE L. COGHILL, Sec'y.
Henderson, N. C.

ELON SUMMER SCHOOL NOTES.

1. The three delegates elected from the True Blue Class, the Sunday School, and the Christian Endeavor Society of the Henderson Church are Misses Lula Mae Newman, Josephine Langston and Elizabeth Ellington. Josephine Langston was there last year. We are glad that she is coming back and to welcome the other two into the summer school family.

2. Dr. W. Knighton Bloom, Washington, D. C., will speak at the Sunday morning Church service during the summer school on the subject "Our Unlimited Tomorrows." Dr. Bloom is secretary of missions of the Eastern Division of the Congregational Church and is very much interested in the proposed union of the Congregational and Christian Churches. We shall gladly hear him.

3. V. M. Mulholland, who is one of the counselors and will have charge of the Christian Endeavor meeting on Sunday night, is a member of the Durham Christian Church. He is a graduate of Duke University and this year is teaching in Asheville.

4. Interesting evening meetings are being planned. Tuesday night will be "World Friendship" night, when those present will "visit" our mission fields. This "journey" will end with a camp-fire near the campus.

5. Write for a program. Tell us about your friends who might be interested.

PATTIE L. COGHILL.

The following comes from W. B. Botts, Rocky Mount, N. C.: Prof. A. R. Flowers has given us a week in the lecture work at the Piny Grove Church which has created no little enthusiasm in the people of the community. This is one of the best sections in Nash County, and the different denominations are in full Christian fellowship in the work of Christian development for the young people of the community. Bro. Flowers has an invitation to spend the second week in September with us in the interest of our young people."

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.

Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.

These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies, in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. It combines with the Concordance, Subject-Index, Scripture Proper Names, etc. The 12 Maps have been carefully revised and are beautifully colored. In making orders, give the number and price.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
One of Our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MONDAY.

AS A BOY.

"Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and men."—Luke 2:52.

How did He do it? Through spiritual contact. He sat in the temple with learned folks and talked with them. He did it by cultivating intelligence.

He learned and when He talked with folks He spoke of the things He knew. He did it by having a purpose in life. He knew what He should do. From boyhood to manhood He caused everything to be subordinate and contribute to that one purpose. He felt always that He must attend to

His Father's business. These are great answers, and they are right down here on earth in our every-day life. Can we be like Him in these things? I say we can.

Prayer.—Our Father, why don't we follow Thee better than we do? Bind us to Thee through Jesus Christ our Lord and name us Thine own. Though the world despise us, inspire us to allow no failure until we are secure in Thee. Amen.

WHAT DO YOU MEAN, LIVE FOR OTHERS?

"I bow my knees unto Thee, Father, . . . that Christ may dwell in your hearts through faith."—Eph. 3:14, 17.

Few people stop to listen when admonished to live for others. They do not see the sense of sacrificing for others. But on the other hand, when they understand that the whole of Christianity, in a concrete, simple statement, is that "the kingdom of God is righteousness" and that that is what Christ came into the world to establish, and when righteousness is established God's purpose is accomplished, they are willing to be told that they should so live this way that others may dwell in righteousness. That is what the most of folks demand of others, even crooks. It is thus we are told to live so that what we do and say may be to God's glory. We are told to live peaceably with all men, that they may have peace in their own hearts; to love all men, that they may love. That is the indwelling Christ.

Prayer.—Father, help us to see, know and realize the true God-like life. Help us to be constant and always faithful. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

CAN IT BE?

"I am the light; he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness."—Jno. 8:12.

"I am the light." These words are so extravagant or so sublime that the man who speaks them is guilty of self-conceit unparalleled in human history, or he transcends all conception of man and forces us to say, "My Lord and my God."

Jesus is thinking of the darkness of men's thoughts and lives, a darkness that prevails in spite of all the light in the world to make their way luminous. In all of the light of life, folks are living in the darkness of their own faded virtues, in frightful parity, in the darkness of evil intentions, hatred, covetous desires, and though unreached by law a thousand vagaries that stand out black and are criminal in its effect on sensitive souls.

Think of the darkness of those who have lost courage, ambition or desire, and have ceased to struggle. Think of those whose hollow shows of vanity and folly are reduced to groveling tastes. Think of those who are hard, bold, defiant and spurn the name of religion and God. Think of those who fatten by fostering crime. What darkness in the light!

But the Christian rejoices most in the fact that they who follow Jesus shall have no more of the darkness. In the light, ceremonies and symbols recede; man sees his imperfections and rottenness and spurns them. He sees what he ought to be. He feels the assurance of Divine mercy and power. He comes to God and worships.

Prayer.—Our Father in heaven, our own virtue fades away, our own purity is frightful, and our own goodness is repulsive in the light of Jesus. Have mercy upon us. Oh, give us the life and light of Jesus. Amen.

THURSDAY.

SEEING.

"He that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light."—Jno. 8:12.

He maketh us to see. A light to a hunter is a great thing. It maketh him to see. Light in a dark room is necessary. It maketh to see. In fact, light is such a great thing that we spend untold moneys to have it at all times anywhere at the press of a button.

There is a difference between knowledge of light and use of light. Like "teaching"—a teacher can be content with instructing and with studiousness of the pupil, but as a leader is one who produces action—causing the one being taught to act upon the teaching.

For instance, the light that went before the children of Israel in the wilderness was obeyed by the followers. When it moved, they followed. When it stopped, they encamped. Impatient ones might chafe, the encampment might be in desolation; weary, slow days might pass in compulsory activity, but whether two days or a month, or a year, if the cloud or the fire tarried upon the tabernacle, there they stayed. Then when it lighted up, no matter how short the halt, how footsore, how pleasant to stay, whether at midnight or mid-day, obedience was better than sacrifice, they moved.

This is a type of obedience to our Lord's guidance. Who follows in His train?

Prayer.—Lord's Prayer, all the circle joining.

FRIDAY.

CLEARING THE ROAD.

"He shall not walk in darkness."—Jno. 8:12.

For the past twenty-four hours I have been at sea in a fog. It is a very unhappy feeling. The ship has come to anchor and has to wait. This afternoon the mist cleared and the sea is beautiful. The shore shows two cities on its banks. Tonight we can go ashore and enjoy ourselves. The outline of the mountains in the distance is wonderful.

We are in the mist much in life's puzzles and contradictions. It is hard to discern anything intelligently at times, much less the Lord's will. All we can do is to stand still, wait until the mist is rolled away. Trusting God in the darkness as well as in the light reward's us. It is amazing how many difficulties disappear and how many problems are solved, and how well and beautiful things turn out and appear when we trust and do right.

Prayer.—Our Father, make us partakers of the inheritance of the secrets of light. Deliver us from the power of darkness, and translate us into the kingdom of Thy dear Son. Amen.

SATURDAY.

MISSING THE MASTER.

"Ye cleanse the inside of the cup . . . but within ye are full of extortion and excess; outwardly ye appear beautiful and inwardly ye are full of . . . uncleanness."—Vs. 25, 27.

It has been heard that there were some California gold diggers who felt that the deeper they went, the more likely they would find the rich gold. The result was they went too deep and missed the strata by going under it. How easily we wish the better things by giving attention to less important ones! So often we may be like "Aunt Betty" we have heard of: "A minister had some money placed at his disposal. Knowing Aunt Betty in need, he took her some for her rent. There was no response at the door. He went again the next day. After persistent knocking at the door, it was opened. 'Oh, it is you, Dr. Arnat,' said she; 'I thought it was the Landlord. He came yesterday, but I would not let him in.' 'Aunt Betty,' said the minister, 'that was I who knocked.' 'You!' she replied; 'you?' 'Yes, I,' he said, 'and I have some money for you.' 'God bless you,' she said; 'God sent you and I thought it was the landlord.'"

Truth-seekers often miss the truth because of biased understanding or thinking along the wrong track. God is as near to us as we are ourselves. God is as near as our every-day work, and sometimes it is just that and nothing more.

We often confuse the utterances of Christ with those of men. In fact, many today attach more importance to the opinions of men than they do to the Word of God. Do we ever make that mistake?

Prayer.—Dear Father, help us this day to make Thee our Treasure, to know that Thou art nigh, to open our lives to Thee forever. Amen.

SUNDAY.

SIN AND LOVE.

"Love never faileth."—1 cor. 13:8.

Judas was an enemy to Jesus. Jesus knew it and prayed about it much. His conclusion was: "I will let him alone. At last as tares are separated from wheat and burned, so will he be separated from me." "Love suffereth long." "Love beareth all things."

At last when the disciples are being sifted, Judas goes beyond all limits of decency and takes a friendly sup with Jesus and kisses Him affectionately. The only reprimand He gave Judas was, "Judas, do you betray the Son of man with a kiss?" "What thou doest, do quickly."

Jesus hanged by His hands and feet. Judas, in self-destruction, hanged by the neck. The Saviour was bruised on the heel. The devil was bruised in the head and defeated in his own purpose. This is the defeat that sin comes to and brings with it all those who follow. This also is the triumph of love over sin and the grace and the glory of all who follow Jesus.

Prayer.—Dear Father, forbid that the false, alluring things of this life shall draw us away from faith in Thee. Let nothing take devotions out of our hearts. Amen.

When Rev. Kitano, Jr., was but a youth he was supported in the Theological Training School by a Sunday School class of the Suffolk Christian Church until he graduated and was ready for active work as one of our ministers in Japan. He later married one of the daughters of another pastor, and when his salary was increased to that of a full-fledged pastor the Suffolk Christian Endeavor Society, aided in part by the Missionary Society, assumed the greater part of his support.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

Our financial report this week carries us to nearly the nine-thousand-dollar mark for the year. We are hoping and praying that we will reach the ten-thousand-dollar mark during the month of June.

That will carry us one-third of the way to our goal of thirty thousand dollars for the year. It has always been very encouraging to us if we can get one-third of the way during the first six months of the year. Then it is a task to reach the other two-thirds during the last six months of the year. But our people have always been so kind to us in this work that we have, in most instances, reached our goal. We have more confidence in our Church folks now than we have ever had, and we feel sure that as the months go by that funds will come in to help us reach our goal. We have never had quite so many calls as we have had this year. We have taken in and now have more children than we have ever had at any one time since we have been in the work. But many of the cases were so pitiful that we did not have the heart to turn them away. We often wish that our entire Church could realize the conditions as we see it from day to day and then we would have no more troubles financially.

Let every Sunday School come to our rescue with a liberal monthly offering and you will be blessed and the children will have bread to eat.

Kiddies' Korner

MADGE MOFFITT WHITESELL, Editor.

Dear Children:

Vacation is here and you will have such lovely time to think of the "Korner." How about the drawing contest? Make it snappy now and begin to send in your names for the Pollyanna game. So many were late last year and some failed to get in at all. If Mrs. Whitesell has all the names early she can arrange the couples so much better. I wish every child in the Southern Christian Convention would spend three weeks in daily vacation Bible school. If our Church is to move forward on the feet of little children, we will have to make it possible for the children to lead the way. We "grown-ups" are hopeless, but there is a future for the children if we will lend a hand. Don't forget the pictures and the Pollyanna game.

Sincerely,

MRS. T. A. MOFFETT.

ELON YOUNG PEOPLE'S SCHOOL.

1. The program of Elon Young People's School (formerly called Chautauqua and School of Methods) is now ready for distribution and may be had by writing Dr. C. H. Rowland, 315 North Edgeworth Street, Greensboro, N. C., or Pattie Coghill, Henderson, N. C.

2. Dr. W. P. Minton, Foreign Mission Secretary of the General Convention, Dayton, Ohio, will be at Elon this summer and teach two courses. Dr. Minton has been such splendid help in other Christian Church summer schools, and we are delighted to have him at Elon and Bethlehem this summer. Watch THE SUN for items about the faculty members.

3. A young man in the Southern Christian Convention has offered a $5.00 prize to the young person writing the best paper on "Why I should Like to Attend the Elon Summer School." These papers should be in by June 15th, when they will be judged by a committee of three. This will pay one-half of the expenses for the week.

4. Expenses: The college furnishes room, water and lights free, in the college dormitories, and board will cost $8.00 for the week. There is a registration fee of $2.00, making a total of $10.00 for the week. Positions as waiters are being given to young men from various sections of the Church in North Carolina and Virginia, and this pays board for the entire time.

5. The Henderson (N. C.) Church is using an especially good plan to send representatives to the Elon School, which we think should be passed on to others. The Christian Endeavor Society, Missionary Society, and the Young Ladies' Sunday School Class have each voted to send and pay the expenses of one from each organization and have selected the three. This is a great idea. Want to try it? The Henderson Church says others will go also.

6. How much does your Church think of its young people? The Greensboro Church has voted to send ten people to the summer school and pay their expenses. This will be a mighty fine investment, and one that will bring returns in the lives of boys and girls and the work of the Church. There can be no greater investment than in building Christian character in boys and girls.

7. A letter from one of the active laymen of the Western North Carolina Conference, dated May 15th, says: "There is a young man in our Church whom I am very anxious to get in summer school at Elon. . . . I will be responsible for all his expenses, including transportation."

Isn't this a fine spirit?

The Elon Young People's School will be held at Elon College, N. C., June 23 to 30, 1928.

PATTIE L. COGHILL, Sec'y.

INTEREST IN MISSIONS.

By MRS. W. M. JAY.

The missionary rallies of the Alabama Conference were held during the month of April. Group 1 was held at Spring Hill the first Sunday in April. There was a large attendance, most of the Churches were represented, and much interest was shown by the young people and pastors. A fine program was rendered and much enjoyed.

Group 2 was held at Bethany on the second Sunday in April. Every Church was represented but one, and one of the Churches having no society reported almost all their goal raised. Our district leader is planning to organize several societies in the near future.

Group 4 met at Rock Stand on the fourth Sunday in April. The district leader reports only two Churches represented, since the weather was unfavorable.

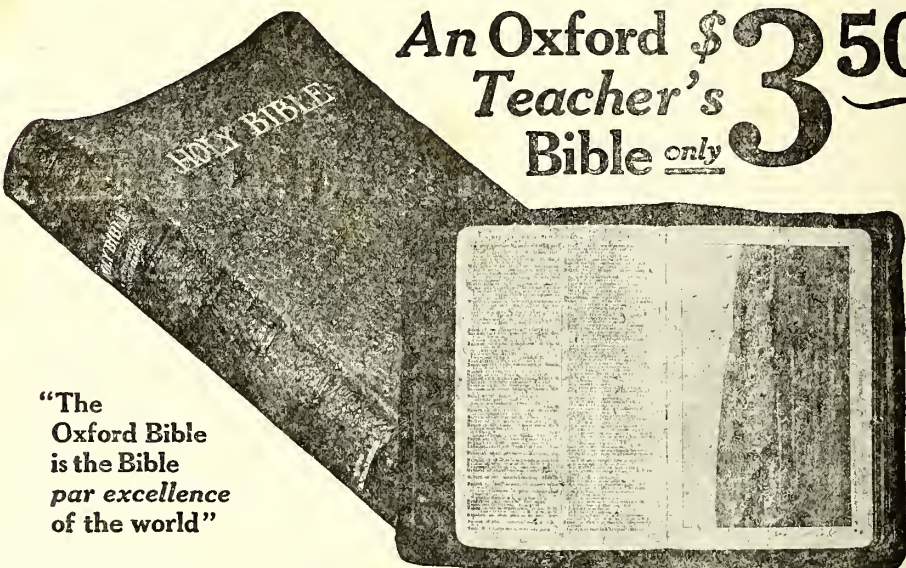

Group 3 was held on the fifth Sunday in April, at Pleasant Grove. All the Churches were represented except one, and some from other districts were there. Had a fine program.

The work is small in the Alabama Conference, and not many societies, but an increase in interest is seen year by year and they are working hard. They feel that the one great work they have before them is to get the few who are interested to push forward and not become discouraged. If they will only carry on this work and as others become interested they will fall in line. "For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them."

OXFORD BIBLES

An Oxford $3.50
Teacher's Bible only

"The Oxford Bible is the Bible par excellence of the world"

The best recommendation of the OXFORD TEACHER'S BIBLES is the fact that over 3,000,000 copies have been sold. The wonderful helps they contain save your time because they are alphabetically arranged, making reference easy. They take the place of many books about the Bible, and can be depended upon, being written by eminent scholars. The Helps contain 32 graphic illustrations, besides 15 beautifully colored maps. The text is the Authorized or King James version, with over 50,000 centre column references.

PORTO RICO LETTER.

I suppose most SUN readers would be interested to know if Mothers' Day is observed among the Protestant Churches on this island. I am happy to say that it is observed with a great deal of respect, not only in the Churches but also in the public schools. On Friday, May 12th, I was invited to attend the Mothers' Day program at the Pince grammar school. So Miss Shaw, the Baptist missionary, and I attended two Mothers' Day services, which were in English and quite interesting.

On Saturday afternoon my class of the Sunbeams gave a very interesting and impressive program for their mothers. We had about ten mothers and two fathers present. After the program a little social was enjoyed in the yard of the Church. The gifts were distributed to the mothers. These gifts were the handwork of the children, made especially for their mothers.

Indeed, it is encouraging to see how this Saturday afternoon class has been growing. I started with a very small number, and now I have thirty. It is very amusing to hear the little folks try to teach me Spanish. I do believe I have learned most of my Spanish from my little Sunbeams and my training class.

Studying a foreign language is a great help, but the best way is to put it to practice. Many afternoons I have spent with some of our little children in our front room cutting pictures from the magazines and carrying interesting conversations or visiting some of our members in order to practice my new lessons in Spanish. I am in hopes, if it is God's will for me to continue my work on this island, I shall master the language within a year or so.

Until last month we have been enjoying a very pleasant climate and splendid, cool evenings; but for the last few weeks we have been suffering from oppressive heat, which brings on a great deal of tropical sickness.

Our Churches are progressing nicely under the great care of our Heavenly Father. Even the hardships come in our paths, but He is always ready to show there is a better road to follow. "If any man serve me, let him follow me, and where I am there shall also my servant be."

THE BIBLE TRUE.

The Bible has been proven to be true as many times as there have been persons who believed it unto salvation. It never has been proven to be false. There were eyewitnesses and earwitnesses to all the great facts upon which the Hebrew and Christian religions were based, while neither profane nor sacred history records a single witness to disprove those facts. As darkness is just the absence of light, so skepticism is just a negation, a denial without offering proof to the contrary—nothing. The greatest enemies of revealed religion begin with a "maybe," proceed with a "perhaps," and end with a "perchance." Both the internal and external evidences of the divine origin of the Bible are all that a rational mind could demand. It is an undisputed fact that the greatest minds have believed in God and that they have accepted the Bible to be the Word of God. It is Christianity that has solved the problems of civilization, that educates and civilizes man, and that improves him physically, intellectually and spiritually. Deists, theists, and atheists of every school are driven to confess that "infidelity will not make a bad man good." This is for them to surrender the whole question, if they only had the eyes to see it. The world needs something that will make bad men good. The Bible does this. Let the tree, then, be judged by its fruits.

Jesus Christ, indeed, planted a wonderful tree. Upon that tree grows equally wonderful fruit.

The upbuilding of mankind grows upon that tree; the very civilization and educational upbuilding of all peoples is its fruit. It makes men better physically and mentally, better morally and spiritually. Christianity makes contented families and happy homes; it eliminates vice and encourages virtue; and its influence is conducive to the prosperity and well-being of its adherents, temporal and eternal. The fruits of skepticism need not be enumerated here. All that is necessary to refute infidelity and establish Christianity among any sensible people is to lay down the fruits of each, side by side. No honest inquirer, sincerely in search of truth and light, can refuse adherence to the Christian religion on beholding the betterment it works for the human race.—Sel.

"The religious laws of Mexico have not interfered with the work of the American Bible Society," says the Rev. Dr. William I. Haven, general secretary, in announcing the appointment of H. T. Marroquin as the society's agency secretary in Mexico City. Mr. Marroquin, a native son, is of the third generation of Protestant Christians and the first national to be appointed in Mexico to this position. In his connection with the agency, both as office assistant and, later, acting secretary, Mr. Marroquin, because of his nationality, has been able to make extended trips through the country preaching and promoting the work of the society. "Bible work has been increasing steadily," says Mr. Marroquin.

GROVE.

Mary Elizabeth Grove was born December 10, 1849, and died May 16, 1928, making her age, therefore, 78 years, 5 months, and 6 days. Sister Grove united with the Leaksville Christian Church about forty years ago and rendered such service and devotion to the Church as it is the privilege and ability of but few to render. For a number of years she served the Church faithfully as deaconess. She could always be depended upon to be at her post of duty until affliction laid hold upon her about twelve years ago.

Since then she has been an invalid and patient sufferer, calmly awaiting the end. She was also quite active in temperance work in Page County. Many friends among the poor as well as the rich mourn her departure. She is survived by three sons, three daughters, three brothers and three sisters. Funeral services at the home and interment in the family cemetery nearby.

JOURNIGAN.

R. J. Journigan was born December 25, 1870, and died April 22, 1928. He was married to Miss Cuna Wells thirty-one years ago, and to this union was born seven children—Mrs. J. S. Marshall, Herman, Annie, Earlie, Newell, Rosetta and Claude. He also leaves three brothers and three sisters—Willie, Hugh and Allie Journigan, and Mrs. Thompson, Mrs. Rob Harris and Mrs. John Pitts.

For many years Bro. Journigan had been a faithful member of Liberty Christian Church. He was in declining health for some months before his death, but he never complained about his lot in life. He went to his reward in triumphant faith. Funeral service was conducted by the writer and interment was made in Liberty Church Cemetery. May the Lord comfort the bereaved.

The home of Bro. and Sister Charley H. Lounderback, near Newport, was made sad April 19, 1928, by the death of their little babe, Phyllis June. The little one was just two weeks and one day old. The funeral services were held at the Newport Christian Church on April 20th.

BETHLEHEM COLLEGE

WADLEY, ALABAMA

A JUNIOR COLLEGE AND HIGH SCHOOL.

Where Opportunity Awaits the Student of Very Limited Means.

GIRL'S DORMITORY.

Bethlehem College, Wadley, Ala., will open September 5, 1927. This institution is a Junior College and High School, which is co-educational, where scholarship ranks high and expense is low. It is thoroughly Christian, absolutely non-sectarian, and vitally American. A school where opportunity awaits the student of very limited means—$68.00 pays all college expenses, except books, board and room. Board, $15.00 per month, and room $3.00; total expenses for a term of nine months, $250.00.

Bethlehem College is training some of the best stock of America for Christian leadership, to be used by the nation and the world. Here is a great challenge and asset for students who wish to prepare themselves to serve in a worth-while way. The work on the new Administration Building is progressing nicely, and we will be able to begin our college work in this building when school opens this fall.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

ALTERING ATTITUDES.

(Baccalaureate address to Elon College graduating class, May 27th, 1928, by President W. A. Harper.)

"It hath been said . . . but I say unto you."
—Matt. 5:31-32.

"Behold, I make all things new."—Rev. 21:5.

The creeds upon which men have staked their hopes of eternal salvation are crumbling. The philosophies which have supplied the intellectual background and stabilization for these creeds are being discredited. Men's attitudes on the fundamental issues of life, its origin and foundations are altering. Change is characteristic of the times. In the realm of material things men welcome this condition as desirable, as wholesome, as evidence of progress. And there, likewise, be those in the realm of social and spiritual experience who rejoice in this crumbling of creeds, this failing of philosophies, this altering of attitudes. They herald the metamorphoses so characteristic of the age as arising out of the progressive revelation of the will, mind and purpose of God for the world.

On the other hand, there is a group deeply troubled and pained in heart over what they regard as the apostasy of the human heart. They welcome progress in material things, but they resent change in the social and spiritual order. There is nothing certain they assert except change—change for the worse, degeneration in the most sacred principles by which men have lived. The future for them is dark with spiritual calamity.

This difference of interpretation is not peculiarly symptomatic of the twentieth century. It is characteristic of every Christian century. Before the advent of Christ into the world, progress in material things, too, was under the ban, and he who was sufficiently self-assertive in any realm of life or experience before the Christian era to undertake to introduce an innovation was branded as a heretic and pilloried by his fellows. With the beginning of the Christian era the spirit of progress entered into the purview of man's life. The Central Figure in the Christian revelation had declared that the Holy Spirit should lead men into all truth. This was the magna charta of human progress; but, strange to say, so conservative has been the attitude of men in spiritual matters that they have limited the race's progress for the most part to material things. We have reached the point now in the development of the human race where we welcome discoveries and ventures in the realm of material things where we, all of us, welcome them; but it is true of us as of the prophets of Israel, that one generation stones spiritual progressives while their children erect monuments to signalize the lack of vision and appreciation of their fathers. The spiritual prophet in many places is today as in every day anathematized during the days of his earthly pilgrimage, only to be apothecized by succeeding generations.

We hear much criticism today of institutions of higher learning on the ground that they teach an unwarranted liberty of conscience in respect to the religious and spiritual life. There is the demand that even the denominational, Christian colleges should be subjected to rigid tests to determine their orthodoxy and to root out from these institutions "tainted" instructors. Those who advocate this procedure are evidently not sure of the tenets and teachings which they profess to regard as having divine sanction. They do not have confidence in truth to withstand the onslaughts of error. They conceive truth to be something to be protected, whereas the truth is something to be discovered, appropriated and enjoyed forever. They are greatly troubled in heart over the seeming conflict between science and religion and forget that the only real test of truth is the pragmatic one enunciated by the Master Teacher when He said of men and of institutions that by their fruits they should be known. Religion has nothing to fear from science or from any other source. That is, true religion has nothing to fear, because true religion, like true science, is founded upon the same ultimate truth in the discovery of which the human race has been engaged under divine guidance from the beginning of its experience.

We should, therefore, rejoice in the crumbling of creeds, the failing of philosophies, the altering of attitudes until the day of the ultimate discovery of truth has arrived in the experiences of men. We should be friendly to new concepts and we should be willing to try all spirits to discover whether they be of God. We should be convinced in our own minds that spiritual victory must ultimately crown the banner of the human race in its age-long endeavor to discover and understand God. We should also be convinced in our minds that the human race is ultimately to be redeemed from its errors and brought to a state of perfection. God is not to be rejected from the hearts of men. He is ultimately to permeate every heart and every institution of life with His presence and His redeeming grace. We must believe this, or we must accept the opposite teaching, that God is not great and good enough to succeed in the spiritual adventure He has set before Himself in relation to the human race. God is not destined to defeat in the world that He has made, and no denunciation of humanity, however eloquent and scathing, can convince the heart that safely trusts in Him that Jesus was a utopian dreamer when He commanded the multitudes upon whom He looked, "Be ye, therefore, perfect as your Father in heaven is perfect." We know now that we are far from perfect, and so we should welcome change in the direction of a growing perfection.

It is the primary business of colleges to alter the attitudes of growing persons. The tens of thousands of graduates who will emerge from the American colleges at this commencement season are not the same persons who four years ago were freshmen in these same institutions. Changes have been wrought in their attitudes, changes with respect to the three fundamental relationships of life, changes as respects their attitudes toward man, toward God and toward organized institutions of the social order. These graduates will never be able to accept the situations in which they found themselves four years ago as ultimately satisfying. They have seen visions and dreamed dreams of progressive development. They have become idealists as they have examined the fundamental concepts in terms of which our social relations are organized. They will go forth from these college halls imbued with new concepts and will crusade for the reforms and changes they are convinced are necessary for the enlargement and the improvement of our life. They will endeavor to translate ideals into realities.

As has already been suggested, our life is made up ultimately and essentially of its relationships. Einstein has announced a theory of relativity for the physical universe, but those who have thought deeply on the problems of human life have always known that relativity summates the interests and the hopes of humanity. There are three major fields of human relationship—our relationships to institutional organizations, our relationships to our fellowmen, and our relationships to God. An examination even cursory will convince the investigator that there have been changes in men's conceptions as respects these relationships, and that these changes have been progressive, desirable, wholesome and satisfyingly good.

I. Institutions.

Men's relationships as respects the institutional organizations of life are briefly comprehended under six categories—the home, the school, industry, government, leisure, and the Church. There is not a single one of these relationships which has not undergone progressive transformation, and this transformation has been particularly pronounced since the beginning of the Christian era which, as we have said, injected into the purview of men's approaches to life and its problems the concept of progress, of change, of growth, of development. In the beginning the home included all the functions that are now operative in the other five institutional relations of life. In the home began education, work, play, government and religion. It briefly epitomized all the relations of life. The head of the family was teacher, labor boss, play supervisor, political sovereign and

NOTES-PERSONALS

Mrs. J. T. Hopper, Ruffin, N. C., in renewing her subscription to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, under date of June 6th, says: "I think it a great paper and I don't want to miss a single copy."

Mrs. Ed Smith, Clayton, N. C., in renewing her subscription to THE SUN, says: "I enjoy THE SUN so very much, and to me the 'Family Altar' is worth the price of the paper." Chaplain Rountree lays before our people each week meditations and comments that are weighty and worth while for every home.

Rev. J. Fuller Johnson, pastor at Oak Level, reports that a liberal offering was taken for missions on the first Sunday in June, and the offering will be increased later. He writes that the people listened to the message attentively and responded very liberally. He is taking the offering at all his Churches in June.

Rev. J. H. Hughes, writing from Pisgah, Ala., under date of June 5th, says: "I planned yesterday to take the mission offering, but the weather was so unfavorable and the congregation was so small that I decided to wait until the first Sunday in July." We are receiving encouraging reports from the pastors in all directions to the effect that if they have not taken the offering they plan to do so on the earliest possible Sunday.

Bro. W. S. Truitt, president of the North Carolina and Virginia Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention, in a recent letter, says: "We are hoping to make this Convention—the one to be held at Durham, N. C., June 21-22—the best ever." All Sunday Schools and Endeavor Societies which have not already done so should elect delegates at once and see that their representatives attend. No Sunday School can afford not to be represented at the Convention.

Rev. Albert Godley, writing under date, Tenally, N. J., June 5th, says: "My heart is heavy as I read in THE CHRISTIAN SUN of the possibility of Bro. and Sister Barrett being prevented from returning to the foreign field for their mission work. There is a remedy. More self-denial on the part of every pastor and his Church. I will gladly join to my full portion and more, by God's help. A word of appeal should be sent to every pastor, and all of us should pray more for our mission cause. 'Except a man deny himself he cannot be my disciple.'"

A good sister in whose home THE SUN's editor used to be a frequent guest, Mrs. Sallie S. McCauley, Chapel Hill, says, in renewing her subscription: "I have been taking the paper for fifty-one years and enjoy it more and more all the time. I look forward to its coming each week as one of the family. I am glad that our editor is improved in health and is back at work again." Several CHRISTIAN SUNS go into the homes that have been planted by the sons and daughters of this Christian woman and her late lamented husband.

We wish all our pastors may be as zealous for the mission offering before the period is out as Rev. J. A. Denton, of Apex, N. C., Route 2, has been throughout the whole mission period. He enclosed a check for $10.79, which was the balance of the quota at Beulah, Eastern North Carolina Conference, and adds: "We are still praying and working to the end we shall raise our full quota at all our Churches." Bro. Denton had already reported from all his Churches and sent the offering in promptly, and now is giving his people a second chance to raise the full quota. The pastors who are making an effort are finding it agreeable to raise the quota.

Mrs. J. I. Joyner, a faithful and devoted member of Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., has been spending several months with her son, at Petersburg, Va., and has gone to spend some time health-seeking at the Washington Sanitarium, Takoma Park, Washington, D. C. Sister Joyner has our best wishes that she may find restored health and strength in the sanitarium. She is deeply interested in all the enterprises of the Church, and, though an invalid, keeps up with the movements of the Church and prays earnestly for the union of the Churches and people of our Lord in answer to His prayer, that "all may be one."

We express our own congratulations and those of hundreds of friends to Mr. and Mrs. Joe W. Stout, of Sanford, N. C. They are celebrating their twenty-fifth marriage anniversary on the evening of Friday, the 22nd of June, 1928, at their beautiful home, 605 Gulf Street, Sanford, N. C. Bro. Stout won his way into the favor and wide acquaintance of our people as the builder of the new Elon College, and is an honored trustee of the institution. We trust that Bro. and Sister Stout may live to celebrate their golden wedding and that the joys and happiness of the next twenty-five years will even surpass those of the past.

Rev. P. T. Klapp, who is so generously helping in our mission work, greatly enjoyed being with the pastor, Rev. J. E. Franks, at Zion and Lebanon on Sunday, June 3rd. Bro. Klapp found the people ready to hear the missionary message, and they responded gladly and willingly, and each Church will meet their quota. Bro. Klapp had been pastor at Zion, and it was a joy to him to meet again the friends and loved ones of other days, and it was a great joy to his heart also to be with the consecrated pastor, Rev. J. E. Franks. Bro. Klapp also spoke at Caraleigh at night and feels that a good work is being done there and that there are signs of real promise and prospect.

Bro. J. M. Darden, of Suffolk, writes, personally: "I was at Hopewell a day recently and made a canvass for people and funds with the pastor, Rev. D. D. Nash. I found some people living in Hopewell who had moved from Isle of Wight County. One boy who was reared in the Sunday School at Isle of Wight where I use to attend. Our efforts, financially, this afternoon brought in about $100 in cash for the building fund and pledges for more than that amount. The new Church building is going right up, and we are preparing to lay the corner-stone on Saturday, June 16th, beginning at 3 P. M. A series of meetings is to begin in the new Church on Sunday following the laying of the corner-stone. Bro. Nash has certainly worked faithfully in building this Church."

Rev. John G. Truitt, pastor of First Christian Church, Norfolk, writes: "We are expecting to raise every cent of our quota for missions. It will be a very great disappointment to me if we fail, and I am going to give my best efforts in order that we shall not fail." Now, that is the way to prevent failure, and we have the faith to believe that Bro. Truitt and his co-workers will go over the top bravely. And then Bro. Truitt closes his encouraging letter with that which hundreds of others are thinking and scores are saying: "It is positively unthinkable that the Barretts should not return to Porto Rico. These circumstances are perhaps the Lord's way of humbling us, so that we shall do even more for Him than ever before. I am personally willing to make some real sacrifices in order that our offering be complete."

THE SUN's editor is under obligation to the Senior Christian Endeavor Society of the First Christian Church of Burlington, N. C., for a copy of their first "Bulletin." The society proposes to issue the bulletin at uncertain intervals, and if its succeeding numbers are as interesting as the first, the effort will certainly be worth while. Evidently this is a wide-awake Christian Endeavor and is doing things. Take this item from the "Bulletin": "From October 11, 1927, to May 14, 1928, the society has raised $128.86. During the same time we spent $114.99, of which amount only $4.22 was spent on ourselves. Last week we bought a portable phonograph to place in homes where there are invalids. The society gave from its treasury $56 to missions during our mission period, but this does not include the individual donations of members." A society like that deserves to live, and does things in its community.

Dr. W. D. Harward, pastor, took the offering for missions at Mt. Carmel, Isle of Wight County, Va., the first Sunday in June, and feels encouraged, but there are others who will give on the third Sunday, when the offering will be repeated, and he hopes to reach his full quota and more. Bro. Harward adds: "I truly hope that our Church, as a whole, will respond to this urgent call, and thus tide us over in this time of crisis in the mission work." Since the missionary edition of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, week before last, letters are coming from many quarters, saying: "The Barretts must go back to Porto Rico." In most instances, these letters bring a check, which talks even louder than the written word. We believe our people will take the offering in June and many individuals will send in donations, all of which will help not only to send the Barretts back but to prevent other retrenchment in Japan and Porto Rico equally as drastic.

Rev. J. Fuller Johnson, in a personal letter to the Mission Secretary, says: "While I am penning these words to you with an aching heart on account of the attitude of our Church toward missions, I am not discouraged, for I believe that this heart-rending condition in the Christian Church, especially in its missionary activities, is nothing more than the birth pangs of a greater and more God-honoring missionary effort. I base this statement on personal feeling and experience, for I have prayed more for missions in the last two weeks than ever before in any year. God is reminding us through the present deplorable condition that we are having to contend with the duty which we have left undone. I am praying that every member of the Christian Church will realize in this hour that the great purpose that brought Jesus Christ to this world can never become real in their lives until they become missionary in their seeing, thinking and, above all, in their acting. 'I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly (aboundingly)' (John 10:10). When each of us realizes the meaning of these blessed words and come into possession of this life that will be so abundant that it cannot be retained by self but will leap over and beyond this selfish obstruction, then, and not until then, will the purpose expressed in these words by our Saviour become real in our own life. And when that day comes—may God hasten it—we will send missionaries and support them in a way that will be God-honoring and soul-strengthening. I will take the offering in all of my Churches."

RIGHTEOUSNESS OR REPROACH.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, Preacher.

"Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people."—Prov. 14:34.

In these summer days there are those who talk loudly about the beauties of nature, and sleep during the first best half of the day and turn to the artificial lights of the night. If a pastor or some other good friends suggests to such persons that they are neglecting the Church, they usually respond that they must have some vacation during the summer; but only a casual checking up is needed to show them that they have neglected their Church during the other three seasons for some equally foolish reason. In the summertime our beautiful America has a call that sounds irrepressibly into every soul. The leaves on millions of trees, and the heights from thousands of mountaintops call. Running streams, flashing lakes and white-capped oceans call. Fields and flowers, and friends call urbane America, saying, "Come with us, and we will do thee good." But beneath every noble call, and above every noble call, and about every noble call is the call of the immaculate Son of God.

Jesus answered the call of the out-of-doors and grew ever spiritually stronger. For Him it was a divine blessing, and not a spiritual lapse or letting-down. From the out-of-doors He gathered His parable of the mustard seed. He saw many little seeds fall into the sod, observed results and looked up into the face of His bountiful Heavenly Father with a new message of cheer for Himself and the whole world. One may fill a little place and grow into greatest possible usefulness. In an hour when Jesus should be counted least of the world's great souls He would be giving shelter and protection to many. Only a divinely blessed life and redeemed personality can measure my meaning when I say "shelter and protection."

From the out-of-doors he gathered the romantic parable of the hidden treasure. And the Robert Louis Stevensons of all time have not been able to set before us a more delightful extravagance, a more complete abandon to the choice of the very best than Jesus learn from following the ways of treasure-hunters where men sought for "pearls of great price." He found in it a challenge to hunt diligently for the best. I should like to have been privileged to study His face as He watched men at work out there, and to have read His thoughts as He turned to His next task. What could take Him off of His high plain of steadfastness to His own highest and holiest hopes when He was so dramatically reminded of the way in which men would risk life and all for the one thing that they most desired. It was a blessing to Jesus to answer the call of the out-of-doors. "Again, the kingdom of heaven is like a man that is a merchantman seeking goodly pearls, and having found one pearl of great price, he went and sold all that he had and bought it." All the beautiful pearls which he had been collecting through the years were as nothing to the one he had now discovered in the hands of some trader from the Persian Gulf. He went home and sold all for it, bought it and was happy!

Standing one day on the shore of His Galilee, He saw the great dragnet cast into the water by fishermen, weighted to the bottom, and pulled along through the water until it came upon the beach laden with all kinds of fish, both good and bad; "and they sat down and gathered the good into vessels, but the bad they cast away." Immediately His thoughts cover the whole world and all time, and He said, "So shall it be in the end of the world." Jesus carried God within His life as He went into the out-of-doors. As He left the shore and began to ascend the plains, He found "the sower went forth to sow; and as he sowed, some seeds fell by the wayside and the birds came and devoured them; and others fell upon the rocky places, where they had not much earth, and when the sun was risen they were scorched, and because they had not root they withered away; and others fell upon the thorns, and the thorns grew up and choked them; and others fell upon the ground and yielded fruit, some a hundred, some sixty, and some thirty." After this He would sow and not be discouraged; after this He would seek, as He had before, to make His own life good soil, 100 per cent fruit-bearing; and after this He would teach that a grain must fall into the ground and die, or else abide alone!

One could go on showing how Jesus profited from His out-of-doors experiences. It was there He saw the "empty house," the "uncompleted tower," "wise and foolish builders," "children at play," "birds of the air," "lilies of the fields," "wheat and tares," "barren fig tree," "rich farmers," "the good Samaritan," "laborers in the vineyard," "the lost sheep," and the "rejected cornerstone." For Jesus, indeed, the out-of-doors was but a great temple of prayer. All night long out there He had prayed; for forty days out there He had fasted; in the Garden of Gethsemane He left all, not for a pearl, but for a cross; and on the barren heights of Calvary He died on that rugged cross for you and me!

It is a shame, not to say blasphemous, for Christians to prattle about nature, and then forget this Christ Jesus; it is a shame for us to claim for His example the privilege of following the highways and byways, and waterways, and airways of earth, and then completely neglect Him; and it is an awful shame to indulge in the sin of some of those ways! As a pastor of a great and good people by the sea, I feel the weight of these coming weeks and months. Already have I assembled the deacons of this Church in counsel and prayer to God to protect our young people and older people during these months from the whirl of the wickedness about us and the insidious sins of Satan. I have asked the members of the official board to help our Church build a fortress of moral sanctity about each individual soul of us during these beautiful yet temptation-laden days. With the increased beauty, always there comes the increasing possibility of ugliness.

If we do not actually, rather than merely professedly follow Jesus' example during these days before the summer is ended, it may wring the cry of David from some of our souls: "And the king was much moved, and went up to the chamber over the gate and wept; and as he went, thus he said, O my son Absalom, my son, my son Absalom! would God I had died for thee, O Absalom, my son, my son." Words expressive of bitter anguish can do no good, save as warning to still others, when it is too late. What was His example? Jesus attended the house of God from childhood until death. No one knew and loved the out-of-doors more than Jesus; but He found His best place to evaluate its meaning in the synagogue and temple. He was oftentimes a traveler, but wherever He was we find Him in the house of prayer on the Sabbath Day. Jesus did not say, "Go to Church"—He went, and it was one of the unshakable, unvarying, silent pleas of His whole life that His folks should not "forsake the assembling of themselves together, as the manner of some is."

A mother says to me: "I cannot make my children go to Church." No. Perhaps not; and that is not what I am pleading for, but I am pleading with all the fervor of my soul that the mother make herself come, and cause her children to love to follow. Jesus could not make the world attend Church, but, O followers of Jesus, He shall not set the example alone! He shall not go alone to His house of prayer—we will go with Him! One of the finest fellows in this Church stood up in the official board meeting Friday night and said, "The Church was a forgotten issue with me. I had no idea of attending it, or even beginning it, but I am here today because my mother never ceased attending Church." And when he took his seat, like an ever-recurring something in his very soul, he repeated: "My mother came, and that is the reason I am here." Go to Ocean View next Saturday night, and you will, at a late hour, find mothers seeking the beauties of nature under the artificial lights on the public dance floor. Yes, and mothers whose names are on the Church rolls of Norfolk. Go to Virginia Beach this afternoon and you will find mothers and fathers there who attended neither Church nor Sunday School this morning, and a majority of them will not attend Church tonight.

I cannot be sure that my little daughter will not grow up to forsake the Church; but this I do know: she has a mother in heaven that never forsook it, she has a grandmother in heaven that never forsook it, she has a grandmother on earth that never forsook it, two grandfathers on earth that never forsook it, and, God being my helper, she shall never say her father forsook it. "Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people." Righteousness does not breed in a city that is wide open on Sunday, nor in a people that forget God. Late hours in unholy conduct on Saturday night will not fill our Sunday Schools and Churches Sunday morning. A grandmother who attends all the services of this Church, including Sunday School at 9:30, said to me: "If I were some of these mothers I could not get to Church often enough, nor defend it too zealously, for it is the hope of our homes and our children."

The Providence Memorial Association held a most interesting annual service at the Providence Church, Graham, N. C., Sunday, June 3rd. Bro. Junius H. Harden is president of the association and made a most fitting talk in opening the program. Mrs. Wm. H. Holt is secretary and Mr. McBride Holt, Graham, N. C., is treasurer. This was the twenty-sixth annual meeting, and a great concourse of people attended the exercises. The song service with the united choirs, under Bro. J. Ben Farrell, director, was a great feature of the occasion. Very interesting and appropriate talks were made by Dr. W. C. Wicker and President W. A. Harper of Elon College. The pastor, Rev. J. U. Fogleman, and THE SUN's editor were also on the program and had some part in the exercises. This annual meeting features an event not only in the history of the local Church but of the county in which the Church and the cemetery are located, this Church being the oldest Church in the county, having a history of more than a century and a quarter, and in its cemetery are buried those who made history in their day and who were the builders of civic and religious enterprises in the county and in the State.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

GOVERNOR AL. SMITH, THE IMPOSSIBLE.

Through all sorts of propaganda, paid advertisements and the use of unlimited funds, political friends of Governor Smith of New York are trying to make the people of North Carolina believe that Smith is a real Democratic leader and will get the nomination for President at the National Democratic Convention and, in such an event, that he will be elected President of the United States. The editor of this paper cannot believe that the good people of North Carolina can be deceived by any such propaganda for three reasons, among others:

1. Governor Smith is the product and the offering of Tammany Hall, of New York. Tammany Hall is known through history as the most notorious, the most corrupt, the most soulless political organization that darkens the pages of political history in the United States. Since 1865 the Democrats of this nation have offered three honorable men for the presidency, who were elected, viz: Tilden, Cleveland and Woodrow Wilson. These were honest men, and, as such, incurred the hostility, the open opposition and bitter enmity of Tammany Hall. The Democratic party outside of New York never has followed the lead of Tammany and won out, nor can it do so and maintain its respectability. If nothing else could be said than the fact that Smith is the offering of this notorious gang of political pillagers, that would be sufficient to condemn him in the minds of honest, sincere, God-fearing people.

2. The only issue on which Smith is known outside of his own State is that he is personally and politically wet. The fact that he is a booze artist of the first magnitude, to such an extent that his personal friends deplore his excess in drink; and the further fact that, before the days of prohibition, he always stood for and championed the open saloon, and since the days of prohibition has done all in his power to nullify the Volstead act and the eighteenth amendment—ought to be sufficient to condemn him in the minds of people who love sobriety, order and good government. We wonder if people who voted to make this nation dry have so far forgotten themselves as to be willing now to help to elevate to the presidency a man whose reputation as a statesman rests upon the fact that he is a friend to liquor and a hostile foe to prohibition.

3. The friends of Al. Smith tell that he has been elected four times as Governor of New York, but they fail to tell us by what methods he was elected, and how. Under his administration, his State, so far as he can make it, has absolutely repudiated the Volstead act, which was a national law enacted by this government and, as such, was to be respected and enforced in every State of the Union. They fail to tell the country anything about Governor Smith's ideas on national issues—those issues which have ever challenged the Democratic party and for which through the years it has stood. Thus far, they have failed to show wherein Al. Smith is even a Democrat, except that he is sponsored by Tammany Hall and is an avowed enemy to prohibition.

Are we called upon to vote for a man simply because he calls himself a Democrat but has never yet proven that fact by any utterance on national issues to show that he is a Democrat? THE CHRISTIAN SUN is not a political paper, but a great moral issue is at stake, and we speak in behalf of morality, sobriety and good government.

SEVENTH DAY ADVENTISTS AND MISSIONS.

Elsewhere in THE SUN this week we print a letter from Rev. Nils J. Waldorf, D. D., Orlando, Fla., a distinguished minister of the Adventist Church. His letter sets forth, in a measure, the manner in which the people of that Church give to missions. These figures are so astounding, so marvelous, so appalling that we could not believe them unless we knew they were authentic. It has been printed in THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and in many other papers of recent months, that there has been a great falling off in giving to missions and that all mission boards are struggling with a deficit and decreasing gifts. We will have to correct our speech in this regard. Please try to think of a denomination of 120,000 people sending out in the twenty-five years, 1902-1927, 2,330 missionaries, exclusive of children, and last year sending out 184 missionaries. And then try to think of this denomination, not as large as our own, appropriating to foreign missions in three years the enormous sum of $12,429,374.78. Think of this denomination raising last year for foreign missions the sum of $4,215,699.01. Let us say again that this is so far ahead of the giving of any other Protestant denomination that we could not believe it possible if it were not an authentic fact. The Adventists have not the numbers or the wealth that our Christian Church has, and yet they give in millions while we give in thousands. They, at least, learned how to deny themselves for the sake of Jesus Christ and His gospel. Dr. Waldorf, in his closing paragraph, gets at the heart of the matter when he declares that "there is no better plan than God's plan to raise money, and that is the paying of tithes and offerings." It will be understood that the Adventists use their tithe money for home work, and the enormous sums they give to foreign missions represent only the offerings they make over and above their tithes.

Let SUN readers read Dr. Waldorf's letter and see if they can grasp the enormous significance thereof. To us it all seems startling and beyond our imagination. Evidently the Adventist Church is making one contribution to mankind that is worthy of the gratitude of Christendom, and that contribution is the practice of self-denial that the gospel of our Lord, as they have received it, shall be given to the world.

WILL THE HEATHEN SAVE THE CHURCH?

In his day, the great Dr. Bushnell was a seer and a prophet. Surely the spirit of prophecy was upon him when, on one occasion, he proclaimed, "The heathens are saving the Church." We Christians, especially when a plea comes for missions, think that it is up to us to save the heathen. God knows it is otherwise. The inspired writer had the proper conception when He said, "Ask of me and I will give thee the heathen for thy inheritance and the uttermost part of the earth for thy possession." The inheritance was to be the fruit, the blessing and the crown of the asking and the effort.

Any one who reads or considers, knows well that something must be done to save America from herself. This whole land of ours—country and Church, individuals and all—are thinking in terms of self and of getting. This industrial age plans and pursues in terms of gross materialism. The only thing that can save us from spiritual paralysis and moral degeneration and ruin is the burden of others, the care and the concern for the saving of the nation and the redemption of others who are not blessed as we are.

We think almost wholly in terms of ourselves and of our own. We think of how great and how rich is our government; we boast with pride that it is the richest as well as the most powerful government on earth; we think of our institutions, our universities, our colleges, our Churches, our homes, our banks, our automobiles, our profits and our pleasures. We are obsessed with "our own." Now the Spirit of the blessed Christ was the opposite of this, for He said: "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross daily and follow me." He taught the spirit of self-denial for others; we practice the spirit of self-getting for ourselves. He taught that we must love our neighbors as ourselves and that he was our neighbor, even though not of our nationality, who was wounded or in distress or in need. We practice self-indulgence and a certain kindly interest in those who are close to us and who can respond in kind, or in thanks, or in laudation, for every kindness that we show. Surely we think in terms of self, and we wish and expect thanks for everything we do for others.

This is one of the reasons why our Lord gave His great commission. He knew for that commission to be carried out, our minds must be diverted from our own and certainly from ourselves. He knew if we carried out the great commission we would have to make our gifts without any thought or expectation of earthly appreciation or thanks from any one this side of glory. He knew that here was one unselfish gift that man could make; He knew it was the most unselfish gift that man could make. A gift that helped to carry His gospel and the message of His life to those who never would repay us, who would never know us that they could repay us, and who would not know us if they were to see us, and certainly would never thank us for what we have done—that is the most unselfish gift we ever made. The heathen are presented to us, not as our burden, but as our blessing; an offering on the part of our Lord God, our Father, that we may be diverted, in some of our efforts and in some of our giving, from all thought of earthly thanks or advantage or reward. If the burden of giving the gospel to the unsaved of this world cannot get on the heart of America and cannot get into the praying and thinking and giving of our Churches, then America is headed for the rocks and the day of her doom approaches. Egypt and Babylon and Greece and Rome went to pieces as a people and as civilizations, because they thought in terms of self-getting and self-glory, and forgot or were deaf and indifferent to the needs of the millions whom their civilizations had not touched. We are told that Jesus Christ is touched by our infirmities. If we cannot be touched by the infirmities, by the needs, by the distress, by the idolatry of the pagan world, then we cannot claim to be Christ-like. We say again that God is offering us the heathen as a help to lift us from ourselves and to put our thinking and our hearts on the salvation of others. Let the words of the great Dr. Bushnell ring out today: "The heathen are saving the Church."

SUNDAY SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

The Church is the inclusive institution. Sunday Schools are the children of the Church. The officers, teachers, literature and places of Sunday School meetings were all produced by the Church. The Church could live without the Sunday School, but the Sunday School could not continue without the Church. Schools and colleges were not founded and are not maintained by young people, but by their parents and mature citizens. The young are the possibilities of the future, but owe all their opportunities to mature lives. There is a growing lack of appreciation of grown people by the student life of this age, and an over-emphasis of the importance of young life on the part of modern leaders who, consciously or unconsciously, court the favor of the young. The political atmosphere is creeping into religious life and its activities. There is a difference between the statesmen and the politician, and there is a difference between the consecrated leader and the place-seeker. It is well for workers "not to think more highly of themselves than they ought to think" and not to get others to make the same mistake concerning them. Humility is a noble Christian grace. The Sunday School is the most important organization of the Church, but not as important as the Church.

The trend of the Sunday School in its operations is toward an independent organization, independent in its official actions, its teaching, and attendance. The Sunday School meets, has its devotionals, teaches its lessons, and retires from the Church in large numbers. The little people are too small to remain, and the grown people feel that they have done their part. Then another group enters the Church for what is known as the regular service. This trend is divisive in its spiritual purpose and personal associations. The Church and the Sunday School ought to feel that they are one and only at their best when all attend both. The Sunday School can never take the place of the preaching service, and the preaching service can never take the place of the Sunday School. The forces of righteousness are strongest and the Church has more influence over the world when Church and Sunday School unite in attendance, study and worship. No place inspires such a true sense of dependence upon God and such a spirit of worship as the house of prayer.

It is estimated that not more than twenty-five per cent of men's classes attend Church services. Nothing would be of more inspiration to pastor and singers than for this attendance of men to be one hundred per cent; and it would double their spiritual life and influence. Family life is enriched by family association. Imagine family prayer and most of the family absent! Imagine a lodge meeting and most of the members absent! Imagine a city council meeting and most of the members absent! Imagine the United States Senate called to order by the Vice-President and a majority absent! There could be no business transacted. Attendance is important. It is all-important! Members of the Church are children of God, and when He meets His children in His house they should all try to be present.

ALTERING ATTITUDES.

religious priest. His will was final. The members of the family enjoyed such rights and privileges as he accorded them. No man was privileged to interfere with the prerogative of the head of the family in exercising his powers, and we have coming down to us from that day a proverb to the effect that a man's home is his castle.

One by one the school, the workshop, play activities, government and religion have won their independence of the home, only themselves to be transformed in the light of the enlarging experiences of the human race as to what is good, wholesome and desirable for the life of man. No man today undertakes to exercise autocratic authority in the home. His wife has ceased to be his personal property. She has become his equal socially and before the law. He cannot discard her according to his fleeting fancy, and he cannot even maintain a rough-house unless his neighbors consent to it. His children, too, have rights which he must respect. He must not put them to labor at too tender an age. He must send them to school and he must treat them kindly and considerately. They are no longer his beasts of burden for economic profit. If he fails in any way to measure up to the ideals of his neighbors in his relation to his children, he will find himself in the toils of the law. We find people lamenting the decay of the home's authority. They forget that many of the things which we cherish most in our relationships today between father and child, between husband and wife, have come out of the so-called decay of the authority of the home. It has been transformed and changed for the better.

An examination of the school, of industry, of our leisure life, of government, and of the Church will reveal a similar and parallel transformation. Education, for example, was for many years looked upon as a discipline to which the mind of growing persons should be subjected. Education was something possessed by the teacher to be passed over through the alchemy of instruction into the mind of the learner. If the mind of the learner resisted the benign impartation of this magic lore, the pedagogue was privileged to quicken it into response through the application of a peach tree limb, but today educators deprecate such a procedure. They assert that learning takes place only when the mind of the pupil is active and that interest should be capitalized as the friend of learning. School teachers may no longer flog learning into their pupils. The lecture system has been discredited. The text-book method is being very much discredited. The problem project method based on life situations, ideal or actual, involving the active participation of the mind of the learner, dignifies the school room today and makes it the seminary, or better still the arena, of real living.

Industry, too, is no longer regarded merely as a means of supplying the physical satisfactions of life, but as an organized method by which men may give expression to their desire to serve their fellow-men. Many capitalists and many labor leaders have not caught this vision of the place of industry in life and so we have warfare between capital and labor. Eventually we shall have peace, because the interests of both capital and labor are the same when industry is properly conceived as an organized effort by which capital and labor may express their desire for the service of humanity. There is nothing selfish in this ultimate view of industry, but, on the other hand, there is everything that is ennobling and inspiring.

The leisure which our modern civilization provides for men is a challenge that too often has not been heard, and if it has been heard has not been met with the best success. The militaristic leaders of pre-war Germany were opposed to shortening the hours of labor. They feared that the unoccupied individual would bring about a dangerous situation. The time should come, however, in the progressive march of invention and the conservation of human energy through temperance when it will be unnecessary for the human race to labor long hours in order to produce the conveniences and the comforts that minister helpfully to human living. If there is one thing that we may be sure of, it is that leisure will increase for men. The use that men shall make of this free time is to be the engrossing problem of the future. It offers the human race its finest opportunity for progress and development, or it will become its greatest menace if improperly used. It is my thought that leisure offers us the opportunity for those personal, social and spiritual ministries which are so necessary to the completest living, and here's hoping that wisdom may be given men in instituting helpful and upbuilding methods of utilizing their leisure time.

Government was originally despotic. It did not think it necessary to secure the consent of the governed for the measures it proposed, but the appreciation for individual men which the great Nazarene taught, through slow culminating processes, made necessary the appearance of democracy as the proper political organization, and Thomas Jefferson as spokesman for the American people in 1776 was able to carry conviction to the hearts of men in the Declaration of Independence when he penned those immortal lines, "All governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed." We have not yet fully comprehended the implications of the Jeffersonian democracy, but we are beginning to do so, and the day is coming not only when war shall cease, but when nations will conceive their highest function to be in the realm of human welfare, when they will become actually the servants of the life of people and not rulers over them.

One hesitates to speak about the Church, but it, too, has undergone a wholesome transformation during the nearly two thousand years of its organized life. We cannot forget the thousand years of darkness which settled down upon the human race when the Church autocratically undertook to control government and business and home life and the thoughts that men should think and to prescribe for them under pain of excommunication, the methods by which they should order their life in even its minutest detail. The Church became the oppressor of the life of men. It tyrannized over their liberties. Freedom became a mockery. Then it was that Martin Luther led the revolt that has given us a divided Christendom. We cannot humanly see how it could have been otherwise, but we now recognize the sin of our divisions and are devoting ourselves earnestly and prayerfully to the effort to answer the prayer of our Lord for the oneness of His followers. We recognize the Church today as the servant of the life of men and not as its overlord. Much as we love the Church, much as we are devoted to it, we cannot but see that it, too, has been transformed and that the transformation has been good for the development and the enlargement of the life of men.

II. Man.

It is a long story to describe the transformation that has taken place as respects man's relationships to man. Every transformation which has touched this fundamental concept of our life's relationships has expressed itself likewise in the

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The most universal occupation is housekeeping. It is the most important occupation. It blesses more individual lives, creates more good laws, develops more genuine regard, and satisfies more necessities and desires than all else known to man. Family history of distinction is spoken of as the house; a big business is called the house, and legislative bodies, both State and national, have the upper and the lower house. But the legislatures of the world do not fashion as many lives, mold as many good characters, cement as many hearts in real affection as the common home. If it is true that the first years of human life are most important years, then it follows as night follows day that housekeeping, which is really home-keeping, determines the character and progress of the world. Martha Washington did not know what she was doing when she nursed infant George and called him her sweet babe. She was dangling the father of his country on her lap. There would be no house of Congress or house of Lords if there were no mothers keeping house.

Housekeeping is the most confining occupation. One cannot leave the house, for there are so many things that require daily attention; and there are some things that others cannot do. The management of a house is a fine art. It is not the big things that confine the housekeeper. It is that multitude of little things that require attention and care; and it is the repetition of them and the recurrence of nameless duties that fill every day. Dusting the rooms, making up the beds, sweeping the floors, looking after the fires, feeding the chickens, entertaining company, answering calls, preparing the meals, and mending the clothes. There is absolutely no end to the work of keeping house.

Housekeeping is the most nerve-taxing responsibility! Planning for meals, looking after the children in the cradle and in school. Keeping tab on expenses, entertaining company, deciding on clothes for the family, caring for the sick, deciding questions of associations, directing the behaviour of the family, responding gracefully to numerous requests from father to child, keeping sweet when health is poor, and doing this through the entire year. It is the constant and unbroken course of service that wears on human nerves. Nothing is more trying than doing the same thing, with numerous interruptions; that wears patience into shreds. Working in an office or a mill for eight hours and then stepping out till the next day, when the whistle blows, is easy compared with housekeeping. In housekeeping there are no regular hours for work. It is all hours.

Housekeeping receives less appreciation for what it means to society than any other service. Whoever heard of resolutions of appreciation or compliment passed by any organization? It is taken for granted that women were born to do this universal drudgery without thanks—and they do; but they deserve more thanks than those who fly high and far in the air. The sweetest and most useful character on earth is a patient Christian housekeeper. Her name may not be mentioned on the front page of the press, but she is heard in the voice of happy children, the strength of manhood, the beauty of girlhood, and the flowers that bloom around the house in which she prays, sings and toils. "Her children rise up and call her blessed."

After all, housekeeping is the most satisfactory service of woman, because a good woman loves a good home and loves to do her best for others.

W. W. STALEY.

ELON LETTER.

The Elon College commencement is now a thing of history. It has been fully reported in THE CHRISTIAN SUN and in the secular press. The sermon by Dr. Jason Noble Pierce, the alumni oration by Mrs. H. P. Powell, and the literary address by Governor McLean were utterances of a high order, and great audiences welcomed each of these speakers. It was significant that the largest attendance so far recorded at any commencement graced and dignified the commencement just closed.

The senior class numbered fifty-five, and represents the various walks of life through the life choices of its members. Thirty will enter the profession of teaching, six the ministry, and the others will be scattered in the professions of medicine, dentistry, law, engineering and business.

Elon, therefore, continues to send the great majority of her graduates into teaching and the ministry, the so-called non-gainful Christian callings. It is a matter of real gratitude on the part of the college that all fifty-five members of the class were active Church members, except one.

Since the commencement, the professors have made their plans for research and study, or else teaching in the summer schools of other institutions and within the next week or ten days most of them will have gone to the places selected for these purposes.

A year ago the board of trustees granted me opportunity to spend six weeks in Columbia University, and this year they have granted me a similar privilege, and I am hoping to spend the time in Chicago.

The privilege that the trustees granted me last year prevented my being present at the Summer School, and again this year I must resign from the faculty of the Summer School in order to accept the gracious opportunity offered by the board of trustees.

The members of the faculty, too, deeply regret that they are unable to be present at and take part in the Summer School. One of the great gains for the college through the Summer School should be the contacts of the members of the faculty with those who come for the Summer School. It is a source of great sorrow to them and to me that we are unable to share in this opportunity of service for the future leadership of our local Churches.

The president's report will be printed in next issue of THE SUN and indicates that the college closed a successful year in view of the raising of the Southern Christian Convention fund. There was no deficit in the current fund account, and the business manager reported that he had been able to pay $13,291.11 on the indebtedness of the college during the past year.

It was voted unanimously by the board of trustees, acting upon a telegram received from President Keller of the Atlanta Theological Seminary while the board was in session, to appoint a committee consisting of Bro. D. R. Fonville, Rev. S. C. Harrell and Dr. J. O. Atkinson, with the president, to work out the details of affiliation with the seminary, so that it may move here in September, 1929, submitting their report for approval to the February session of the board of trustees and the Executive Committee of the Convention.

ELON COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

"World Citizenship" was the subject of the address of Mrs. Eunice Rich Powell, Murphy, N. C., class of '22, alumni speaker on Monday evening of the Elon College commencement program. Following this address the general alumni association held its annual banquet in the college dining-hall to close the activities of the second day of the final exercises, which was given over very largely to the alumni for the day. The general alumni business session was held in the afternoon and a special banquet of the class of '18 was held at 6 o'clock. The commencement will close Tuesday morning with the literary address by Governor Angus W. McLean at 10:30, and the awarding of degrees to the fifty-five members of the senior class.

Speaking of her alma mater, Mrs. Powell said: "For thirty-nine years there have gone from the doors of this institution thousands of men and women who have served to drive back the darkness of ignorance, to administer justice to humanity, to relieve its economic and social distresses, to heal the bodies of its sick and afflicted, and to administer comfort and hope to troubled souls. Time would not permit to call the service roll of this institution, but as one thinks it over there comes a rather comfortable feeling that there is no reason for any of us apologizing for the past of our alma mater. Born in poverty and struggling through youth against great odds, it has, nevertheless, rendered the greatest service to the youth of the State. But we cannot live in the past. Dreaming of by-gone days and past glory can do little more than stimulate us to carry forward the work that has come to our hands."

Mrs. Powell declared that we are not citizens of yesterday, but that the problems of today which are ours have their setting in world situations, and that the demands of the world are far more challenging for the youth of today. She deplored the wretched working conditions of some classes of the laborers, stating that industry, in many cases, is dehumanizing its workers, took a fling at the oil scandals and politics, and dwelt on the increase of the crime wave, the divorce problem and the movies, as well as mentioning several other items she considered as social problems the youth of today had to deal with in their careers.

"In the face of such grave social problems what needs to be done?" she asked. "Where can one take hold? What can an individual or institution do about it? The strange fact is that almost universally people assume that this is a problem for the Church alone. It is a problem for the Church, of course, and a serious one. But it is a problem for every decent man and woman, for every one who hopes to have a home, to be a good citizen of the community. Above all, it is a problem for every educated man and woman whose sacred business it is, in return for the priceless boon of education, to give his best thought and service to the outworking of all that makes for the higher life of humanity.

"For those of us who assume the grave responsibilities confronting us as world-minded citizens, the supreme need is a religion strong enough to empower us to live cheerfully and successfully a godly life amid modern conditions. We are gaining power and knowledge with amazing rapidity. The serious question is whether we have character, grace, soul strength to make us masters of the giant forces that stand ready either to serve or to destroy us. This is the burden I would lay upon your souls, the vision I would set before your eyes. For then we shall not only honor our college and justify our position as educated men and women; we shall also gain the approval of God the Father and win that noblest of all honors, that

The class-day program in the morning consisted of a welcome address by Paul McNeill, president of the class; the class history, by Nannie J. D. Graham; the class poem, by Graham Rowland; the class prophecy, by Frances Turner; the last will and testament, by Hannah Newman; the delivery of trophies, by Frances Sterrett; the delivery of the mantle, by J. P. McNeill, and the acceptance of the senior mantle on behalf of the junior class by R. E. Sims.

In the afternoon the junior class representatives, chosen from the members of the four literary societies of the college, spoke in competition for the Stanford orator's medal, given by Col. S. L. Adams, of South Boston, Va., for the best oration by a young man, and the Moffitt essayist's medal, given by Dr. E. L. Moffitt, of Asheboro, for the best essay by a young woman. Special music was furnished for this program by David Brown Harrell, Miss Mabel Alexander and Miss Ella Keyser.

"I come to you, my young friends, not to speak as one having authority, but, as best I can, to point you to the way of truth as I see it, in the light of my own experience and observation," said Governor Angus W. McLean of North Carolina, speaking to the graduating class of Elon College at the closing exercise of the thirty-eighth annual commencement Wednesday morning.

"If I have any message to leave with you today," he said, "it is to say that the only real panacea for the ills which afflict mankind in his individual, national and international relations is the philosophy of true religion. We have tried utilitarianism and found nothing but failure and vexation of spirit. Now, what is this moral law to which I refer as being the core of all true education? It consists of those concrete precepts of morality which have gleaned from the Bible. We find them running through the Ten Commandments in fundamental form; we find them interpreted by the Master and applied to the every-day life of mankind in the Sermon on the Mount.

We live in a time when many who regard themselves as super-intellectuals decry the very Word of God itself, and when it appears that an organized effort is being made to tear down religion and trample in the dust some of the sacred principles for which it stands and without which this world would be a hopeless place. I say without hesitation that there is no effective substitute for religious training.

"Throughout my life, and especially since becoming Governor, I have been impressed with the futility of human laws to control the ugly passions of mankind. Even though our laws are based upon the Ten Commandments, the great magna charta of humanity, and tempered with the precepts of the Sermon on the Mount, they are impotent without a knowledge of and faith in the Supreme Lawgiver.

"To be a good citizen, one must obey the laws because he does not wish to bring reproach upon his own good name and that of his community, and not simply avoid punishment. If this attitude were universal there would be no need for our jails or other penal institutions which are maintained at great expense to the law-abiding element.

Most of you are North Carolinians. You come from homes located in a State that has made a greater ratio of progress during the past few years than any other Commonwealth in the republic. We all rejoice at North Carolina's achievements. We take pride in its schools, its good roads, its institutions for the care of the unfortunate, its industrial development; but we must not lose sight of the fact that our moral and religious foundation must be sure. If we do, our material advancement will prove a curse instead of a blessing. When we become a self-sufficient people we will have lost our real power, for self-sufficiency breeds arrogance, and arrogance is an undermining rather than a constructive force.

"North Carolina's wealth and natural resources, important though they are, do not constitute our real greatness. That lies in the fact that we have been a God-fearing people and have laid a spiritual foundation upon which our material achievements have been built as a super-structure. Our progress has been slow at times. Discouragements have been numerous. We have passed through crises that all but crushed us; yet, withal, we have kept our vision clear and have looked beyond man-made institutions to the source of power.

"Let us not depart from the Bible and its teaching," concluded Governor McLean; "it is the all-important Book. For its preservation, men have suffered and died. Opponents of the spiritual realm have sought to destroy it, but without success. It has been handed down pure and spotless—and triumphant. Let us reverence it more, study it more, apply its precepts to a greater extent, for by so doing we may not only become better men and women ourselves, but lift the world to higher levels of usefulness and help to usher in an era of universal brotherhood based on principles of truth, mercy and justice."

Following the address of Governor McLean, fifty-three bachelor's degrees and seven diplomas and certificates in the special departmental work of the college were awarded by President W. A. Harper as follows:

in physical education, N. Myrtle Isley, Burlington, N. C.

Dr. J. Edward Kirbye, United Church, Raleigh, then presented a Bible, the gift of the college, to each member of the graduating class, to the president of the class, stating the individual Bible for each member would be handed out at the president's office following the exercises. Dr. W. W. Staley, ex-president of the college, assisted in the morning program, as did also Dr. E. L. Moffitt, a former president. The exercises included announcements of honors as follows:

The honorary degree of doctor of divinity on Rev. Nils John Waldorf, Orlando, Fla., and the doctor of laws degree on Judge J. F. West, of the Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia. All other honors were announced as follows: Mr. Harold L. Barney, Elon College, N. C., was the valedictorian of the class of 1928; Miss Minnie Johnston, Elon College, N. C., salutatorian; Mr. G. H. Robertson, winner of the Stanford's orator's medal, and Miss Alma Rountree, Norfolk, Va., winner of the Moffitt essayist medal.

BETHLEHEM SUMMER CONFERENCE.

Dear Brother Editor:

Please announce through THE CHRISTIAN SUN that we are anxious for all ministers and Sunday School and Christian Endeavor workers of our Church in both Georgia and Alabama, and also a hearty welcome is extended to all Christian workers, regardless of denominational preference, to be with us at our Summer School of Christian Education at Bethlehem College, beginning July 1st and extending to July 7th. We have an able faculty and an ideal place for a great meeting. Brother pastor, make your arrangements to come. Bring more Sunday School and Christian Endeavor workers from all your Churches, who are to be leaders. My heart goes up to God for this session. More depends on the approaching meeting than on any previous one.

I am making a special effort to get our Congregational brethren of both States to represent themselves with us in the summer school. Every preacher and Sunday School teacher, as well as all other Church workers are invited to attend and get the benefit of the school.

Just think what a time we can have if all our pastors and preachers, Sunday School superintendents and teachers, and then a representation of our young people from each Church would come together for one solid week to think and play and pray. The Holy Ghost would fill the place, and in addition thereto a fine representation coming from our Congregational brotherhood would give us just such a boost as we pastors will need for our approaching revival season. Will you come, brethren? Will you ask your congregations to come? For the sake of the good Father do.

G. D. HUNT.

Chief Ahpeahstone, a Kiowa Indian, in a recent appeal to the Secretary of the Interior, in view of the extension of the trust period for the Kiowa, Comanche and Apache tribes, said: "When the present trust period expires, it is my wish that you and the other representatives who look after the welfare of the Indians be extremely careful to see that more extension be granted mainly for the benefit of the younger generation. I believe the time has not come for the government to relinquish its hold on the property of the Indian for his benefit. I know that at the present time numerous persons are awaiting the end of the trust period. They think it is going to be one of the greatest boons. I see it as the beginning of the end for my people. I predict it will take fifty years more before the good government can safely relinquish their hold."—Missions.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary.

ADVENTISTS AND FOREIGN WORK.

We believe as a denomination in active foreign missionary work. A home and foreign missionary Church is a growing Church. We keep our home missionary spirit burning by giving to foreign missions. All the great prophets of Bible times were home and foreign missionaries. Likewise, the apostles in their days of endeavor to save souls.

Coming down to our day we find a host of godly men of different denominations devoting their whole lifetime to foreign missionary work, such as David Livingston in Africa, Carey in India, Morrison in China, Paton in the South Seas, etc. No power on earth can withstand a missionary Church. A handful of earnest Christian men and women laid the pagan Roman empire in the dust after 300 years of opposition and periodical persecutions. Any Church ceasing to do home and foreign missionary work will soon die and cease to exist.

As a denomination, we are humbly carrying out the Master's command to go into all the world and preach the cross of Christ for the salvation of those who know not the way of salvation. Our membership in the United States is about 120,000; in all the world, 275,000. We sent out to foreign fields during the years 1902-1927 2,330 missionaries, exclusive of children. In 1926 we sent out 216; in 1927, 184 missionaries. Our workers preach in over 200 languages and we publish our literature in 131 tongues and dialects.

During the past three years we appropriated for foreign missions the sum of $12,429,374.78, which includes the whole membership. We raised during the year 1927 the sum of $4,215,699.01 for the missions, which of course is part of the twelve millions.

There is no better plan than God's plan to raise money and that is the paying of tithes and offerings. Last year in the United States alone the total income in tithes from institutional earnings and individuals was over $4,000,000. The total foreign offerings for the year, exclusive of home work, was $2,726,000, which was given in one year by 120,000 people.

Sincerely yours,

N. J. WALDORF.

ELON SUMMER SCHOOL NOTES.

Please let us know if you plan to attend the Elon Young People's School, June 23rd to 30th. We are expecting such a large attendance this year that it is almost necessary for us to know ahead how many to expect in order to arrange for rooms in the college dormitories.

Rev. H. S. Hardeastle says in a recent letter: "Our Workers' Council voted to pay half expenses for at least ten representatives to the Young People's Summer School, and I believe we are going to have at least ten present when the school opens."

From Rev. O. D. Poythress, South Norfolk, Va., June 5th: "We are planning now to carry at least ten young people from our Church."

Remember the ten from Greensboro Church? Remember the three organizations of the Henderson Church, each sending a representative? Rev. John G. Truitt says there will be several from First Church, Norfolk. It is not an easy matter to interest a large group of people in a Church to come to such a conference.

Pressley Ingram, Birmingham, Ala., plans to stop by Elon for the Summer School on his way back from Washington, D. C. He writes: "I can hardly wait now for June 23rd to get here. I regret very much that I cannot attend Bethlehem, too, but it is impossible for me to get away from my job at that time of the month."

Prof. C. James Velie, of the college music department, will be organist for the Summer School and will have charge of the music. He will give an organ recital also. It will be a delight to all attending to hear him and we are very fortunate in having him with us.

Mr. Hermon Eldredge, Dayton, Ohio, field secretary of the Department of Christian Education of our Church, will be at Elon and teach two courses—"The Story of the Bible" and "Young People's Division Organization and Administration."

Frank J. Alston, of Pittsburgh, Pa., will have charge of recreation. He is coming all the way from Pittsburgh to be there for the week and will return at the close of the school. He finished at Elon in the class of 1925 and was one of the outstanding athletes while there. Since graduating he has been coaching in high school.

ALTERING ATTITUDES.

institutions and organizations that minister to man's life. Herein is a fruitful field of study, with much profit and understanding of human progress. For our purpose at this time, it is only necessary to say that in the beginning man conceived of his relationship to his brotherman in terms of vengeance. If his brotherman had done him an injury, it was his privilege to do him a greater injury. The times were terrible in those days for humanity, and in that era of beastly struggle the wonder is: that human life was able to survive at all. Later we find the law-giver with his demand for justice in social relationships, and then as the heart of man was touched by human weakness and frailty, there arose the prophet with his plea for mercy as tempering justice. Finally there appeared the Master Teacher, the God-like Christ, who taught love as the fulfillment of the ideals of men's relationships to one another, love grounded in forgiveness and expressing itself in sacrifice. It was not enough for him to forgive a man once or even seven times, but an unlimited number of times. It was not enough for Him to do unto others as he would that they should do unto him, nor to love one's neighbor as one's self. He could be satisfied only through the complete giving and sacrifice of Himself in love for His fellows. That is the hopeful, prophetic transformation in social relationship toward which the human race must ever look with wistful expectation and in the realization of that ideal the kingdom of God will have become real and actual in the world.

III. God.

Men's conception of God has conditioned their concept of man and expressed itself in the institutions and civilizations of life. The most determinative force in individual and in social living is the view that men entertain as to God. When man conceived of Him as bent on vengeance, they themselves practiced vengeance with reference to one another and the institutions of their life were organized in the same terms. When they later conceived of Him as just and impartial, they themselves desired to be just to one another and their institutions reflected that aspiration. When they later conceived of Him as merciful, they themselves became charitable and brotherly in their attitudes toward one another and expressed this brotherliness and fraternal spirit in the organized institutions of their life. In our day when men conceive of God as Christ-like, as loving in His attitudes toward His spiritual offspring, as anxiously concerned for the growth and development and happiness of their life, we find ourselves anxious likewise to express this same affection in our relationships with our brethren and to organize it into the institutions that minister to our life. We cannot conceive that there should be any finer revelation of God than that which we have in Jesus Christ, but we do recognize that the Holy Spirit is able to interpret to us in a larger way from day to day the meaning, the inner meaning of this concept of God, and we believe, too, that the Holy Spirit is leading us constantly into more becoming applications of this concept of life as expressed by God's attitude toward men in our personal and institutional life.

Conclusion.

Our brief survey of the changes in the relationships of human living has, I am sure, convinced you that progress has ensued as the by-product of these changes. Your four years in college will be properly pronounced as successful if in the years that lie ahead, your attitudes that have been altered shall bring forth wholesome changes in the relationships of life, particularly as they relate to the institutions that serve humanity, to man and to God. In Revelation we find Christ represented as saying, "Behold, I make all things new." What finer motto could we adopt for the years of activity in the service of men and of God which I trust lie out before such of us than this prophetic utterance of the Seer! It is the attitude toward life and its problems that really determines the quality of a man's achievement. This outcome in practical living is the direct consequence of attitudes functioning as motives in the individual's creed or philosophy of life. The altering of life's attitudes through the educational process is the crowning glory of our educational system. Only as these altered attitudes become our motivating ideals in practical experience can we hope to see the looked-for progress of the human race in the realization of its noblest and most cherished aspirations.

We have made marvelous progress as a race in life's relationships, but our highest hopes are yet unrealized. They are in the realm of the ideal. Through altered attitudes we are privileged to make new conquests in the actualization of these ideals. One of these days the human race will have in its experience arrived at that ideal situation in which these relationships as expressed in institutions, in human fellowship and in spiritual aspiration will be amply realized in a perfect world, a world which men now call idealistically the kingdom of God.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

Lesson XIII—June 24, 1928.

EDUCATION FOR CHRISTIAN LIFE AND SERVICE.

LESSON: James 3:13-18; 1 Peter 5:5-11.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psa. 119:33-40.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed; rightly dividing the word of truth." 2 Tim. 2:15.

Jesus said, "Ye must be born again." One of the weaknesses in present-day religion is the subtle danger of substituting something for that vital experience of God in the human soul which is indeed being born again. This new birth may be mysterious, and some people may think it is old-fashioned, but it is absolutely just the same. And as Henry Drummond so interestingly demonstrates in his book, "Natural Law in the Spiritual World," it is not such a far-fetched thing after all. Leaders in Christian education must begin at the beginning; that is, they must recognize that the starting point and the goal of Christian education is that men and women, boys and girls, may come to know God in a personal, transforming way, whom to know is life eternal.

It must be kept in mind, however, that the same Jesus who emphasized the necessity of being born again emphasized just as strongly the fact that after one is born again he must grow in grace. The new birth was not the stopping-place at all; it is the starting-place. The full-grown measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ is the goal of the Christian life. Another weakness of the present-day religious forces is the tendency on the part of so many to emphasize the fact that evangelism is the whole of the gospel. They lose sight of the fact that evangelism is only one side of the gospel. We must have evangelism through education, and must have education in evangelism. In other words, as the lesson title suggests, there must be education both for Christian life and for Christian service.

Education for Christian Life.

Christianity is, first of all, a way of life. It is more than that, it is Jesus' way of life. Creeds may have a place in Christianity, but they are means to an end, not ends in themselves. The supreme thing is not what a man thinks, but the kind of man he is. Character is the thing that counts. A Christian is under obligation to keep out of his life everything that weakens or mars character. He is to develop the qualities that are Christ-like. He is to cherish the ideals and attitudes that are Christian. Children and young people must be educated for the Christian life. They must have presented to them in precept and in example what it means to be a Christian; they must be trained in Christian living; they must be challenged by Christian ideals and attitudes. The task of Christian education in our day is surprisingly great and difficult.

Education for Christian Service.

One of the most desirable things in the sphere of Christian ideals and practices is that Christians shall be trained for service and inspired to render service. There are many, many Christians who are good, but they are not particularly good for anything. They have neither seen the relationship between service and a vital Christian life, nor have they felt the impulse to service. In many other cases, those who have felt the call to service have not been trained for service. The unfortunate thing is that so many people think of service in terms of the so-called big things, or in terms of certain positions or places. Now, fundamentally, service is not so much a matter of place or position, but of spirit. One of the immortal incidents of service was the humble act which Jesus performed when He washed the disciples' feet. He who really purposes to be of service can find countless opportunities for service. Our Sunday Schools and other agencies of Christian education must emphasize insistently and persistently the fact that the spirit of service is one of the fundamental qualities of the Christian life. They must interpret life as a stewardship which can be accounted for only as it is given in service. They must not only show that there are certain spheres of life which might be called "life service," but that all of life is really "life service." They must furnish the inspiration and impulse that prompts young people to give themselves in service to others. A bigger day in the things of the kingdom of God will dawn when the Church of Christ has a new baptism of the spirit of service which is the spirit of Christ.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Sunday, June 24, 1928.

TOPIC: "Missionary Possibilities in Recreation at Home and Abroad."—1 Cor. 9:23-27. (Missionary meeting.)

Some Bible Hints.

If playing with people would have helped to win them to Christ, Paul would have played with them for the sake of closer contacts (v. 23).

Recreation has educational value: it teaches us to be good winners or losers, to strive hard and try again (v. 24).

Games enforce the need of self-control and training. If this is needed to win an earthly prize, how much more to win a heavenly? (v. 25.)

If recreation helps to teach people to "master the body," it has taken them a long way toward teaching them to master also the soul (v. 27).

Suggestive Thoughts.

In missionary lands recreation may supply a point of contact. To be interested in the native games and play them wins entrance to hearts and homes.

Games establish friendship. We can do little with people who do not trust us. To win them on a lower level leads to winning them to a higher.

The missionary is interested in health, and when he can show how proper play makes strong bodies, people will attend to him. They gain respect.

There is a lot of religion in recreation. To teach young people to obey the rules and play fair is one way of teaching them the Golden Rule. It opens the door to higher teaching.

A Few Illustrations.

Recreation helps to break down caste. To see young men of different castes playing some American game shocks some people into asking the reason why.

In home missions, sometimes a tennis court opens up the way for a Church. People will play and, playing, lose their prejudice against missions.

The home missionary may take the lead in arranging organized play for children in the community. It is needed in the country as well as in the city. The Endeavorers will help him to supervise the play.

In Japan, baseball is played with the same enthusiasm that we see in America. The missionaries may use it as a means of teaching principles of sportsmanship.

To Think About.

What do we know about the games of other lands?

What possible uses can a missionary make of golf?

Is a missionary's time given to play wasted? Why?

DAILY VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL.

For five successive years our little country Sunday School has had a daily vacation Bible school and we hope to continue having them. We really do not feel that we can afford to let even one summer go by without our school.

Children attending an average country Sunday School every Sunday for one year get only twenty-six hours of religious education that is really suitable for them, because in a one-room Church the half-hour lesson period is all the time that can be devoted to them alone.

Now, if they attend a daily vacation Bible school of two weeks they get from twenty-five to thirty hours (two and one-half to three hours each morning of the ten days) and the time can be used to so much better advantage than in the Sunday School.

Children are active. They want to do things themselves. In the daily vacation Bible school, besides the lesson stories, there are worship periods in which the children sing, pray, recite Scripture and make an offering; there is handwork, written work, supervised play, as well as mission teaching, health and habit stories, etc.

In such a school, the children are taught to make the truths learned a part of their every-day life and are given opportunity to practice them.

For instance, we have each morning a period for lunch and always return thanks before eating. One mother, in whose home this was not practiced, told me that after her children attended our school they insisted upon doing it at home. We are reminded that "A little child shall lead them," and we see what important lessons can be taught those little things.

If you have never had a daily vacation Bible school, get busy and plan one for this summer. The expense is not large, and if you have a few people who are willing to give a little of their time to this work, I am sure you can have a good school.

MRS. R. C. MYERS.

The above article on the daily vacation Bible school, written by Mrs. R. C. Myers, a busy mother, is about the Bethlehem School, in the Valley of Virginia Conference. Mrs. Myers has done such fine work there. Daily vacation Bible schools are fine for rural, town and city Churches. Would you like to have a "helper" in putting in such a school in your Church? Write us and we will arrange for you to have some one come for a week for entertainment and a free-will offering toward expenses; also write us for textbook suggestions.

BETHLEHEM SUMMER SCHOOL.

The School of Christian Education affords the people of Georgia and Alabama especially opportunities of which they have long dreamed but until a few summers ago had never realized. Yet the majority of the Church people act indifferently toward these opportunities.

The young people of today are the leaders of tomorrow. The best leaders are the trained ones, and there is no better place for this training than the Summer School of Christian Education at Bethlehem. The best-trained and experienced leaders will be there to teach the young people in subjects of most importance and interest to them.

Not only the young people should take advantage of these opportunities, but the older people also. The ministers, Christian Endeavor societies and Sunday School leaders may be assured that they will leave Bethlehem's Summer School with many of their problems solved and as better leaders and workers than ever before.

Of course, training requires money, but the people of and near Wadley have carefully studied this problem and have made it possible for all who desire to attend.

It depends upon the people of the Conferences to make this the best summer school we have ever had at Bethlehem.

Wadley, Ala.

TERESA CARTER.

A PERSONAL SACRIFICE.

Dear Bro. Atkinson:

I sent you a card hurriedly penned yesterday. Now this. The Lord bless you and all of our Christian Church people and wake us up to that duty of self-denial that a Christian people should make for the sake of the saving of souls. Out of the little I have, I send you check for $4.00. Only by much sacrifice (wearing second-hand clothing, etc.) can I do my part in helping to publish the much-needed "graded purity booklets," but I am impressed to say I will buy no more clothing of any kind and forego (many times) the luxuries of different kinds until the Lord shows me it is enough on my part toward keeping our foreign missionaries at their work. I have little to give. Each of many can do much more than I can. Bro. Barrett will go back to Porto Rico if our people catch the spirit of self-denial as they should and give two tithes and more if needed. I have given nearly three tithes—strange that many do not give the half of one tithe. All our missionaries and new ones should and could be sustained. The tobacco bill of many is no doubt two to five times or more than they give to help advance the kingdom of God and the saving of souls. What a shame on such! Yet some there are who are letting souls be lost rather than give up that gnawing habit. I believe we should speak out against this awful waste of money and destroyer of body. A noted—very eminent—surgeon has declared that nearly four-fifths of those who die of heart trouble die because of the use of tobacco. It shortens life in other ways also.

Let the Christians be aroused to decide whether their self-denial in different ways is sufficient to show that they love Christ and His Church more than they love themselves. God help us all to search and see. Now I am not writing for my glory. I do not feel to have my name mentioned in this. It's soul-saving that I wish, and also the honor of the best Church organization that we know of. We surely are not, as a whole body, worthy of honor for our giving. Our rule of faith and practice is the Bible. Through it God speaks. He says, "Cry aloud, spare not, show my people their transgressions. Many of them having long been robbing God." Urge that they repent, and for a time pray double. Even thus many can never make amends. By their fruits they are known.

God save the Church, help us to support more missionaries rather than less, and not ask the Congregational Church to take us in until we pay our dues to the Lord much more nearly in accord with what they do per capita. May our Father have mercy upon us and stir us up to duty.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
One of Our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MONDAY.

LOVING MEAN FOLKS.

"Zaccheus, make haste and come down for to-day; I must abide at thy house."—Luke 19:5.

Zaccheus was a tax-collector, a publican, extortioner, a reprobate, a scorner of religion, a social outcast. This is what the world saw in him.

Jesus saw a man who begun life with unselfish dreams, cherished highest ambitions, but whose every good intention had met with disappointment. He had fallen and been cuffed about until he was ashamed of his career. Jesus saw a man who had parted with religion because religion had parted with him, and he was galling under the yoke of his circumstances. He saw a man who longed for some one to take him by the hand and call him "Brother." Jesus saw a man in whom was the Father's image, so he went home with him and gave him the brother's hand.

The love of Jesus is as wide as human need—the greater the need the greater the love. This love extended to the whole man—body, mind and spirit. He lifted burdens, inspired hope and redeemed from sin. How much of His love do we bear in our hearts?

Prayer.—Dear Father, whatever there may be wrong about us, come and take away, as Thou didst Zaccheus. Whatever is good about us, O do see and love. Thou art the fountain of all fullness that never runs dry, and then fill us and make us Thy best. Amen.

TUESDAY.

HAPPY ALL THE TIME.

"For the joy set before Him He endured."—Heb. 12:2.

How to be happy in spite of everything—that is the question. Jesus was. If He was, can we? Why not? Well, it is pretty hard to be happy with a pain in the "tummy" all the time, or a pain anywhere else, for that matter. We have no record of Jesus ever having a pain or ever being sick, but He was as we are and a boy as boys are. He must have eaten some green apples or something—still He showed us how to be happy all the time, and it was this way: First, keep healthy; second, keep sinless; third, know you are right; fourth, cultivate many friends and be enemy to nobody; fifth, live for the common good of all those around you.

Jesus was sinless. He was tempted as we are, yet He refused to do wrong. The reality of sin is the most torment to a Christian's life. Jesus never suffered this. He suffered no anger; He had no jealousies; He had no unholy desires; He was never vexed with envy, never consumed with malice, never puffed up with pride, never shaken with fear, never sullied with a sinful thought, and therefore no remorse came into His life.

Jesus was always right. His meat and His drink was to do the will of His Father. There is nothing that brings more satisfaction than the feeling that after we have done what we could, "it is well with my soul."

Jesus made friends. There were homes He could go into and be treated as a member of the family. There were offices He visited where the man laid down his business to receive Him. There were travelers along the road who loved His conversation. There were comrades who loved the touch of His hand and the counsel of His great heart. Even in His darkest hours, angels talked with Him.

Beyond all wealth, honor, or even health, is the friendship of noble souls. To be one good, generous and true is to make them in the same way, and they make us what we are. Nothing can take away the joy of such a life. Jesus never did pass any one to whom He might render a service or speak a good word.

In following Him we can be like Paul: "Take pleasure in infirmities, reproaches, persecutions, distresses, for Christ's sake."

WEDNESDAY

KNOWING HOW TO DO THINGS.

"If ye know these things, blessed are ye if ye do them."—Jno. 13:17.

A young Bible worker was visiting in a home and called for the Bible. It was brought and handed to him. When he opened it, a pair of spectacles fell out. The lady exclaimed, "Well, well, well! there's my specks. They've been lost three years."

Suppose a lawyer never kept up with his law better than that. Suppose your physician never read medicine more than that. Can a Christian expect to be one without knowing the Christian book?

According to the number of Bibles printed and distributed every year, it must be that the world is seeing that the Bible is not an end in itself, but a way and a means whereby one learns living unto the best ends, and a way and means whereby one may enter into and contribute most to the common good of all. The Bible in the hands of the heathen has meant reducing of poverty, opening of night schools, hospitals, homes for poor, organization of institutes, athletic fields, hygienic righteousness, pacifies labor, rectifies politics, reduces common evils, builds resistance to temptation, and establishes control of life. This is the way it defends itself in our lives. Omit the Bible from life and we undercut our greatest power.

Prayer.—Our Father, we confess our negligence and our habit of putting Thee off till another time. Forgive us and make us true blue. Make Thy word a delight to us and fill us with the pleasures of living richly. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE CROSS AND LOVE.

"God commendeth His love toward us, in that . . . Christ died for us."—Rom. 5:8.

One who ideally embraces the spirit of God and Jesus the Son meets the daily problems, perplexities and miseries with a happy, at most, a cheerful face.

To say that "day unto day entereth speech and night unto night showeth knowledge," that "the firmament showeth His handiwork," that "all is ours" as an evidence of God's love, is not sufficient proof to the ordinary mind. We have such tremendous struggles for existence, or much fighting, so much pain, sorrow and bereavement, so much drought and flood, disaster and pestilence, it is hard to see the love of God and that the cross of Christ means anything.

It takes a lot of seeing things in the realities of every-day life to interpret God's love in adversities. For instance, is there love in the sacrifice of a doctor for a patient? Is there love in the giving of life to save a drowning man? Is there love in a woman who is hurled into a burning caldron because she stopped to help along a cripple when fleeing from the Boxers? Is there love in a father who gives his life-blood to save his child? Is there love in a mother who goes on the battlefield and nurses her wounded boy? Does this hold Thee?

Remember, "everything works together for good." God "doeth all things well." All things must come right, and if lives are lost and a country ruined because of faulty construction of a dam, the error of man, God cannot help it. The lesson He teaches: build the dam right. Disaster has accompanied every invention, but out of it has come the perfection of something. All life survives at the loss of another's blood. Because He loved as no man has known love, it could not be otherwise with Christ.

Prayer.—Our Father, as we contemplate Thy love we realize that but few of us love further than pity. Create within us desire for perfection in all things. Make us anxious to give happiness. Bring us to the depths of Christ's love for one another and for the world. Amen.

FRIDAY.

SIN AND THE LAW.

A man says, "I have sinned, but that's my business; I will quit when I am ready—as if to say, 'I put the sting in my life; I will take it out when I please.' Can you? Death defies you to do it. Death does. 'There is a law which says if you sin you must die. That law must be satisfied. Until every penny's worth of it is paid I demand the law.'"

Sin is not what one does. It is something in his heart. Moses said, "It is a sin to commit adultery." Christ said, "If you look upon a woman to covet her sins." Therefore, because sin is a thing in the heart, it is a power which no man can wipe away with a resolution, a song, or a prayer. The heart must be changed.

"Thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." When Thou art before the throne of justice, Christ steps up and tells death, "You cannot have this man. I am the substitute. I have satisfied the law. I paid the price. Son, thy sins be forgiven thee."

"Jesus paid it all;

All to Him I owe.

Sin has lost its crimson stain;

He washed me white as snow."

Prayer.—God, Almighty Father, give us love and Jesus in our hearts to defy the law and which places our hope in Thee. We thank Thee that Thou hast not cut us down. Before the sun of another day is set, may we settle our souls in Thee and go forth free in His calling. Amen.

SATURDAY.

"The Sting of Death is Sin."—1 Cor. 15:56.

What would there have been if there had been no sin? What would life be if there were no sin? What would death be if there were no sin? If life would come as a picnic and death as a crown to a queen we all could wade it through. But somehow all of life and death has a sting from which we flinch. Do what we may, we can thrust no sword through life's ills and death's victories in a way to end it all. But we can pull the sting out. The sting is not that one has to suffer or that he has to die, but that he has sinned or that the world has sinned.

One has not taken the word as our guide. Another has loved pleasure and is drunk with its delights. Another debauches souls. Another pauperizes the poor and orphaned. Another is faithless in that which is good. Another dances with his own way. Then the pangs of death set in and the fountain of love is sealed up, the stream of forgiveness ceases to flow. Without the restraint of grace, it becomes worse, and thy cloud, once

Dear Friends:

Our children in the new building are very happy now and are daily expressing their joy in song. Three friends sent us a check some time ago with which to buy a piano for the building, and it was delivered this week. A beautiful instrument, with an exceptionally sweet tone. In placing this instrument in this building makes its furnishings complete. Our friends have been real good to us and have responded beautifully to our needs. This splendid contribution will be a great blessing to the children and will in songs of praise lift them on higher ground. We pray for the Lord's richest blessings to rest upon our three friends who made the donation which will be a real blessing to us in our work here.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Sarem Christian Church sent us a beautiful spread for an Easter present. It is one of the most beautiful spreads we have received and showed a great deal of care in its making. It was very kind of the good women to remember us in such a beautiful way. We owe them an apology for not reporting before this date, but in our busy life each day we overlooked it. We beg your pardon and pray for forgiveness this time.

Mrs. Cary Welch, New Hill, N. C., sent us eight pieces of goods for blouses and dresses; Miss Nancy Branch, Garner, N. C., 1 pair black satin slippers; the Philathea Class of New Lebanon Church, dresses for Dahlia Ellis. For all these contributions we are very grateful indeed.

If your Sunday School is not giving a monthly offering toward the support of the Orphanage, won't you see to it that you begin now. Let every Sunday School have a part in this work of love and charity, and help to give the fatherless a chance in life.

as big only as a hand, now covers thy heavens and pours down a storm of retribution.

Pull out the sting! Take Jesus in thy life. "Whosoever believeth on Him shall not perish but have everlasting life."

Prayer.—Father, Thou that dwellest in the heavens, our everlasting King, let not death intrude upon us in one ill-spent season. May every day find us in meditations high and life noble and true to Thy way. When we are called, may we bathe our souls in the dews of heavenly glory and dwell with Jesus forever. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE BLUES.

"Why art thou cast down, O my soul? And why art thou disquieted within me? Hope thou in God, for I shall yet praise Him, who is the health of my countenance and my God.—Psa. 42:11.

Our feelings ebb and flow. Our hearts are sometimes warm and sometimes cold. We are sometimes brave and strong and then feeble and downcast. Streams are full in the rainy season and bare in the drought. We are the same way. Fine as long as there is plenty and joy, but awfully cast down when things go wrong and living is a dry place.

Why shoot ourselves? Turn to God. Hope in Him. He does not faint nor is He weary. He is an unfailing fountain. "Be not dismayed. God will take care of you." He will rise tomorrow as surely as the sun does. Turn to Him and Thy shadows will fall behind thee.

Prayer.—Our Father, we pray for succor to the God of our faith, that we may overcome our human frailties to grow blue and forget Thee. Turn us to the light. Keep our spirits so that we may sing all our days and the brightness of everlasting hope may shine along our parting all the while. Amen.

PALM STREET CHURCH.

The revival meeting at Palm Street Church, Greensboro, N. C., closed May 6th. Rev. J. E. Franks, of Raleigh, N. C., assisted our pastor, Rev. M. T. Scrrell. He brought us the full gospel from beginning to the end. The Church was greatly revived and there were thirty who professed faith in Christ. Some of these were those who once followed the Saviour and because of neglect had gone back into the world. Six united with our Church, others with Grace M. E. Church, and still others we are hoping to see join some Church.

On Sunday night, April 29th, Bro. Franks spoke to our Senior and Junior Christian Endeavor Societies, and his message was greatly appreciated by every one. We are all hoping that he will come back some time soon. His messages were so full of the Spirit that I can't understand how any sinner could go away without accepting Jesus as their personal Saviour. In St. Luke 6:25 we read these words, "Woe unto you that are full." It seems like many lives are so full of the things of the world that they are not willing to give them up and let Jesus come into hearts and lives. As our blessed Saviour is crowded out of their lives, yet He is so loving that He stands outside the door patiently knocking and waiting for an entrance into their hearts. My prayer is that God's Holy Spirit will so strive with the unsaved that they will realize their lost condition and come to Him before it is too late.

The Methodist and Baptist people showed a fine spirit by calling off their meetings and joining in with us. As the Methodist meeting began the day that ours closed, we tried to return the same kindness.

Sunday, May 13th, was a great day in our Church. The children gave a program, after which Bro. Sorrell brought a short but wonderful message. This we can say for him: he believes in the full gospel and is not afraid to tell it out. This is what I like and is what the whole world needs. At 6:30 o'clock Sunday night about fifty-five or sixty juniors came full of enthusiasm and interest to the Christian Endeavor. Bro. W. B. Lumley entertained them by drawing the picture of mother and father and by telling them if they wanted to keep their mothers and fathers looking young they must be obedient to them. After this he had the children sing the chorus of "All the Way to Calvary." As they were singing he drew the picture of three crosses and a road leading to the middle cross, and then printed these words: "Jesus went all the way to Calvary for you; what are you doing for Him?" This brought tears to my eyes as I thought of Jesus' suffering there for me. I thank Him because He was willing to suffer and die on the cross, that I might be free from sin, and I know that all I can do for Him will never repay Him. So I want to keep busy in His service, and I may ever be true to Him is my daily prayer. LETTIE SCOTT.

We advance only in things upon which we bestow energy, attention and time. The least-talented pupil will finally master the study of anything upon which he concentrates energy and thought, but the most brilliant mind will make no progress at all in the accomplishment of anything upon which he bestows no effort or labor. As the muscles of the body that are used are the ones that develop and grow strong, so the faculties of the mind that are employed are the faculties that grow. Those that are not used lie dormant and weak.—Ex.

BRADSHAW.

Bro. Peter C. Bradshaw was born May 11, 1880, and died at his home, Walters, Va., May 2, 1928. He was formerly a member of Antioch Christian Church, where he had served faithfully as deacon for several years, but after moving to their new home, Walters, Va., about eight months ago, he, with his wife, transferred their membership to Mt. Carmel Christian Church, where he still acted as deacon. He was faithful in his Church duties and will be greatly missed. He leaves to mourn their loss, besides his widow, a mother, Mrs. Rhoda Bradshaw; two brothers, Rev. Elisha Bradshaw, Forest, Va., and Mrs. John Bradshaw, Walters, Va.; four sisters: Mrs. Flora Joyner, Mrs. B. W. Daughtrey, Mrs. P. A. Whitley and Miss Effie Bradshaw. The funeral service was held at Antioch, conducted by his pastor, assisted by Rev. J. Sydney Cobb, of the Baptist Church, Windsor, Va. Interment was in the Antioch Church cemetery. The blessings of the Lord rest upon the bereaved.

W. D. HARWARD.

HINES.

Addison Rudy Hines passed from his labors to his reward May 23, 1928, at the age of 81 years, 1 month, and 2 days. He is survived by two sons, Oscar W. and Edgar T. Hines, and three grandchildren, Margaret, Steadman and Wesley Hines, all of McCleansville, N. C.

Of the large and well-known family of which he was a member, only one brother, Rev. H. L. Hines, of Greensboro, N. C., and two sisters, Mrs. Adeline Long, of Burlington, N. C., and Mrs. Mary McKimney, of Spencer, N. C., survive, but there are many nieces and nephews. He was buried at Hines Chapel, where he had been a faithful member and a deacon for more than thirty years. God bless his loved ones.

T. J. GREEN.

HARGRAVE.

On the morning of February 18, 1928, at his home, on West Washington Street, Suffolk, Va., Bro. John Vernon Hargrave, aged 60 years, departed this life. He was a native of Sussex County, Va., but had resided in Suffolk for the past thirty years. He was a faithful member of Bethlehem Christian Church and is greatly missed. He is survived by his widow and one brother, W. E. Hargrave, Portsmouth, Va. Funeral service was held at Bethlehem, conducted by the writer, his former pastor, assisted by Dr. W. W. Staley. Interment was in the Church cemetery. The Lord comfort and bless the bereaved ones.

W. D. HARWARD.

WYRICK.

Miss Mary L. Wyrick died May 27, 1928, aged 73 years, 2 months, and 10 days. She is survived by two brothers, Emerson and William Wyrick, and four sisters—Mrs. Eliza Loman, Mrs. Ebbie Rumley and Misses Rachel and Missouri Wyrick, all of Gibsonville, N. C. She had been a member of Apples Chapel for about fifty years. Burial was at Freidens by her pastor, assisted by the pastor of Freidens, Rev. Mr. McClanahan. May the Heavenly Father comfort the bereaved.

T. J. GREEN.

CLEM.

Joseph H. Clem was born August 24, 1849, and died April 25, 1928, at the age of 78 years, 8 months, and 1 day. Bro. Clem was a faithful member of the Linville Christian Church and was recognized by all who knew him as a good man, quiet, harmless and unassuming. He is survived by his widow, who before marriage was Miss Mary Simmers, of Linville. His death is mourned by many friends and relatives. Funeral services at Linville Christian Church, April 27, 1928, conducted by Rev. W. B. Fuller and the writer.

HORTON.

Whereas, our loving Heavenly Father saw fit, in His wisdom, to call from labor to reward our sister in service, Mrs. W. R. Horton, on April 9, 1928.

And whereas, we miss her presence and help in our society, Church and community; resolved:

1. That we record our deep appreciation for her services and esteem for her co-operation while with us.

2. That while we miss her presence and aid in our meetings, we know that our loss has been her gain and that now she rests from her labor and her works do follow her.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be recorded on our minutes, a copy sent to The Christian Sun, and a copy be given to her husband, Bro. W. R. Horton.

GREEKS INVADING THE U. S.

The presence of Grecians in the United States has never attracted much attention. They are thought of chiefly as restaurant-keepers, but an examination of their work here shows that they have made substantial contribution to the life of this country. And generally speaking, they have never been disturbers of the peace. Now the word is published that they are to have a university.

A Grecian village, containing a Greek university and a cathedral, which will become the headquarters of the Greek Orthodox Church in America, may soon be erected in Wantagh, L. I., according to Jacob Post, of Freeport, L. I., head of a syndicate which recently purchased a tract of land said to contain 400 acres.

ROTHGEB—HOUSDEN.

Mr. Ralph O. Rothgeb and Miss Maggie Housden motored to my home on May 17, 1928, and were joined together in holy wedlock. They are popular young people of the Leaksville community. Bro. Rothgeb is a merchant, a rural mail carrier, and one of the most active members of Leaksville Church. He has won as his bride one who will be a real helpmeet for him in all his various activities. They entered at once upon that delightful experience of housekeeping and are located at Leaksville.

MILLER—HUFFMAN.

The home of the officiating minister was the scene of a quiet wedding May 30, 1928, when Miss Rachael Huffman, one of our Leaksville members, became the bride of Mr. John D. Miller, of Luray. The groom is a motor mechanic and the bride has for several years been a popular teacher at Stanley, Va.

These are splendid young people and worthy of the best wishes of their many friends. They left immediately for a motor trip through the West. They will reside at the home of the bride's parents at Leaksville.

BETHLEHEM COLLEGE

WADLEY, ALABAMA

A JUNIOR COLLEGE AND HIGH SCHOOL.

Where Opportunity Awaits the Student of Very Limited Means.

GIRL'S DORMITORY.

Bethlehem College, Wadley, Ala., will open September 5, 1927. This institution is a Junior College and High School, which is co-educational, where scholarship ranks high and expense is low. It is thoroughly Christian, absolutely non-sectarian, and vitally American. A school where opportunity awaits the student of very limited means—$68.00 pays all college expenses, except books, board and room. Board, $15.00 per month, and room $3.00; total expenses for a term of nine months, $250.00.

Bethlehem College is training some of the best stock of America for Christian leadership, to be used by the nation and the world. Here is a great challenge and asset for students who wish to prepare themselves to serve in a worth-while way. The work on the new Administration Building is progressing nicely, and we will be able to begin our college work in this building when school opens this fall.

EVANGELISM.

By REV. H. C. CAVINESS.

(Address before the Southern Christian Convention, at Richmond, Va., May 1, 1928.)

"Where there is no vision the people perish."
—Prov. 29:18.

These words must ever challenge the thought, the future, and the objective of every Christian, of every Church. The character of the vision determines always the character of the person, for vision constitutes an ideal, a goal, or an objective in life.

Perhaps the chief vision of the most of us is the love of money and the love of display, or vanity—sins most deceitful in their influence and soul destroying in their immediate effect. Neither drunkenness (with all its fearful havoc and tragedy, its history written in words of blood and horror) nor gambling (with its crazed victims who surrender their souls to the lure of lust), nor harlotry (with its hellish orgies) constitute such a disordered vision, we believe, as does the love of money and love of display. While open vice sends its thousands, those fashionable and favored indulgencies send their ten thousands to perdition. "The love of money is a root of all evil: which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith and pierced themselves through with many sorrows. But thou, oh man of God, flee these things and follow after righteousness" (1 Tim. 6:10-11). This favored vision of display, or vanity, and its result, is set forth in Jeremiah 18:15: "Because my people have forgotten me, they have burned incense to vanity." So many of us see only the vision of gold and bow before the shrine of fashion, vanity and display. Such like encrust the conscience and sear the soul with an impenetrable hell of worldliness, debauch the affections from every high and heavenly vision and make men and women worshippers of self. While doing this, the poor victim is allowed, by public opinion, to think himself Christian, while the drunkard, the gambler, the prostitute is not deceived by such a thought for the moment; and our mad march goes on while people perish, for such distortion of the realities of life constitute a lack of vision whose toll is destruction.

The supreme need of the Church today is not more money, is this not our boast? nor more machinery with which to function—surely this need is too well met; nor buildings, for the physical values of Protestantism exceed millions in money; not men of the ministry; not a thousand things some expert may suggest, but to "the law and to the testimony; if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them" (Isa. 8:20). We dare to say the great need, the only need is vision, and that vision is personal evangelism. Jesus said, "Say not ye, there are yet four months, and then cometh harvest? Behold, I say unto you, lift up your eyes, and look on the fields, for they are white already to harvest." "Hell hath enlarged itself" (Isa. 5:14) occasioned by a lack of vision, the result being a perished people. How many might have passed through the portals of paradise who now know the agonies of perdition? Why? No vision of His meaning when He uttered that commission of challenge, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature" (Mark 16:15).

The Greek translation of Proverbs 29:18 is, "Where no vision, the people are naked." Is this not a picture of the past and the present? It was in the third century that Constantine opened for the Church the flood-tides of worldliness, becoming the Herod of that hour, and striking off the head of personal evangelism which had characterized the mighty progress of the Church since the fourth persecution, when "they that were scattered abroad went everywhere, preaching the word" (Acts 8:4). But after the third century religion became a creature of men, instead of a creation of Christ; the stamp of an emperor's approval made fashionable a religion which taxed no thought, impelled no sacrifice, occasioned no suffering nor blood, demanded no regeneration, appealing only to social, not soul, needs, prostrated and prostituted a vision of a perishing people, paralyzing the only power the Church had ever possessed, viz: personal evangelism, which entailed persecution, but always has the Church been powerful when persecuted, for "if we suffer we shall also reign with Him" (2 Tim. 2:12), "for unto you it is given in the behalf of Christ, not only to believe on Him, but also to suffer for His sake" lieve on Him, but also to suffer for His sake"

So often we ask do we "know Him, and the power of His resurrection, and the fellowship of His suffering, being made conformable unto His death" (Phil. 3:10). Do we? How much have you suffered for Jesus? The organized Church having failed in corporate duty which is vision, the appeal of God is directed to individual responsibility, "So thou, O son of man, I have set thee a watchman, therefore thou shalt hear the word at my mouth, and warn them from me. When I say unto the wicked, 'O wicked man, thou shalt surely die,' if thou dost not speak to warn the wicked from his way, that wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thine hand. Nevertheless, if thou warn the wicked of his way to turn from it, if he do not turn from his way, he shall die in his iniquity, but thou hast delivered thy soul" (Ezek. 33:7-9). Again doth God speak, "Let him know that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins" (Jas. 5:20).

Look, thou, upon thine hands—are they stained with the blood of men, of thy friends, thy children? Hast thou failed to warn them? How many hast thou ever led to Christ Jesus? Remember always there was an Andrew before a Peter. "One of the two which heard John speak and followed him was Andrew, Simon Peter's brother; he first findeth his own brother Simon, and saith unto him, 'We have found the Christ,' and he brought him to Jesus" (John 1:40-42). This same Andrew was vitally connected with the feeding of the five thousand; he brought to Christ the boy who possessed the loaf and fish, "Andrew, Simon Peter's brother, saith unto Him, 'There is a lad here which hath five barley loaves and two small fishes,' and Jesus took the loaves, and when He had given thanks He distributed to the disciples, and the disciples to them that were set down; and likewise of the fishes as much as they would, they were filled" (John 6:8-12).

We may envision here in perfect picture God's dependence upon individuality. Before Pentecost there was a Peter, before Peter there was an Andrew, and before Andrew was the Man of Nazareth, who is Christ Jesus, the Son of God. The law of the individual is the law of life; twelve individuals were chosen of Christ to point this world to the Lamb of God which taketh away its sin, one of them betrayed His trust, and although he became a barterer in blood, yet the foundation of the walls of the Eternal City is twelve, "the names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb" (Rev. 21:14). (The one succeeding to bishopric occupying the place of Judas (Acts 1:20).) Ah! What a glorious consummation—a city everlasting and eternal, its walls adorned with glittering game, a city fifteen hundred miles square, with its many mansions, its streets of pure gold, its light being neither sun nor star, but the glory of God: a city of an endless day, its avenues crowded with those who have been washed and redeemed in the blood of the Lamb, who shall always worship Him who was bruised and broken for their iniquities, who bore the chastisement of their place, who carried their sorrows, being oppressed and afflicted, upon whose heart God laid the sin of the world. Why? Because of the vision of John 3:16, the law of individuality possessed by God, and that constraining love of Christ which always finds a way to win men.

During the days when senators were elected by vote of legislatures, that great man, General Gordon, was a candidate for the U. S. Senate in a certain Southern State. Many members of the legislature were his former comrades in arms during the War Between the States, who were whole-

NOTES-PERSONALS

Rev. W. C. Carpenter, Ambrose, Ga., writes under recent date: "I am taking the offering in my Church on this round and I hope it will be creditable." Many of the pastors are doing likewise and we have the faith to believe that all will take the offering before they pass the matter by.

Presbyterian laymen have successfully completed a campaign to raise $15,000,000 as a pension fund for retired ministers of that denomination. And the Dutch Reformed Church, celebrating its tercentenary, has raised one million dollars as a thankoffering, to be used as a permanent endowment for the ministers' pension fund. All denominations are giving attention to this matter.

J. T. Boykin, Sims, N. C., writes: "If Rev. A. R. Flowers is selfish in his religious views, he neither preaches it nor practices it, and evidently the people do not feel that way towards him, for he has four invitations to speak in Missionary Baptist Churches in different sections of Johnston County, N. C. He is a real friend to the ambitious boys and girls of all denominations, and is giving his life encouraging them to make the most of their life possible."

Rev. W. B. Fuller, Linville, Va., under date of June 11th, writes: "We took the mission offering at Antioch yesterday morning and it amounted to $98.00. We hope to make it $125.00. This is a small Church, but they have missions at heart. We are going to take the offering at New Hope and Mt. Olivet next Sunday and at Linville the fourth Sunday. You may count on me to do all I can to help raise the $4,000. The Barretts must return." Bro. Fuller expresses the feeling of our pastors generally from letters being received daily.

Dr. C. H. Rowland, president of the Young People's Summer School to be held at Elon College June 23 to 30, wishes it made known that while the program was arranged with young people specifically in mind, it is adapted to adults and to old people and all are invited. The mature and aged will be welcome and will receive the same consideration and attention that the young people will receive. Dr. Rowland and the program builders are anxious that as many as possible of the older people come and share the benefits of the school. All are welcome.

Dr. L. E. Smith, President of the Southern Christian Convention, on an invitation from the Congregationalists, went, on the night of June 13th, to New York to represent the Christian Church at the banquet given the Twentieth Century Pilgrims at the Hotel Astor on Thursday night, June 14th. There were to be 1,250 English Congregationalists at the banquet who are making the pilgrimage of good will to the Congregationalists of this country under the title of "Good Will Pilgrims." We are sure Dr. Smith represented with credit the great Church in whose behalf he made the visit and spoke.

Rev. M. F. Allen, Newport News, Va., writes: "Our folks in Newport News have the building fever good and high. A deal has been consummated for a building site, and we are hoping to be able to let the contract within two weeks. By building a stronger 'home base,' I am sure this Church will be worth far more to the denomination in the future than it has been in the past. With our present equipment, the Church will do well to hold its own. There is now no room for expansion. The new building will challenge us to greater service." Our Newport News Church has needed a new house for some years, and we are delighted that they have got a good case of Church fever. It's a splendid disease for a Church to be afflicted with. It generally results in making the body so much stronger when the fever is over.

Rev. Fred D. Ballard, who has been in the theological seminary, Vanderbilt University, Nashville, the past year, is to assist the Mission Secretary in soliciting funds for missions during his vacation and will assist pastors in any way he can in helping to raise the mission quota and in increasing the offering by individual solicitations when and where desired. Bro. Ballard needs no introduction to our people, as he is one of us and a successful pastor, a highly esteemed member of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference. At present, Bro. Ballard is working in Eastern Virginia.

The past year, space in THE CHRISTIAN SUN has really been in demand, and much good matter has been delayed and even crowded out. The managing editor is glad that our Church people have been interested in giving the news of their communities and hopes this interest will continue. That all may have the opportunity of expressing themselves, all news items and contributions should be expressed as concisely as possible. The thought is expressed in the following lines:

"If thou wouldst be an author sage,
Think a volume, write a page:
And from every page of thine
Publish but a single line."

At New Market, Va., on June 11th, the Sunday Schools of Alpine and Wood's Chapel united in an all-day "Children's Day" program at the latter Church. A large crowd was in attendance. The morning session was devoted to the Sunday School program, while music and addresses occupied the afternoon. Lunch was served on the chapel grounds at noon. Superintendent J. A. Kagey welcomed the visitors to the chapel. Selections by the Mt. Jackson male quartet and by Miss Lillian Louise Waters featured the music. Among those speaking were Prof. A. R. Richards, of Washington; Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Bryant, D. W. Sisler and Rev. W. T. Walters, of Harrisonburg, and Mr. and Mrs. O. D. Garber, Bridgewater. Mrs. W. T. Walters had charge of the morning program.—Ex.

A letter from a good brother, dated West Highland Avenue, Philadelphia, June 8th, brings this interesting personal item: "Editor THE CHRISTIAN SUN,—I do not know who you are at present. However, find enclosed my check for $2.00 to start me as a subscriber to the paper. I love the Principles of the Christian Church. It is now about twenty-seven years since I severed my relations with the Church when I left the South. In moving around I have been connected with three different denominations, but I have never forgotten the grand old Principles of the Church which has existed from the beginning of time until they were put in practice. It's the only principles I have ever heard of that the Protestant Churches can successfully unite on. I am homesick for some of the things in the Principles of the Church I like." The good brother has certainly not departed from the ways of youth, and we are glad to start THE CHRISTIAN SUN to him.

The Board of Publications of the Southern Christian Convention, Prof. L. L. Vaughan, Raleigh, N. C., chairman, was in session in THE CHRISTIAN SUN office at Elon College Tuesday, June 12th. The matter before the board was that of transferring the subscription list and the business of circulation from J. O. Atkinson, who had been looking after the subscription department in connection with his work as editor, to Superintendent C. D. Johnston of the Christian Orphanage, who was elected by the recent session of the Convention to the position of circulation manager. Bro. Johnston formally takes charge of this department of the work July 1st. The plans were discussed and laid whereby it is hoped Bro. Johnston will be able to increase the subscription list. There are hundreds, not to say thousands, of our people who should be getting THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and the Board of Publications, through the good offices and activities of Bro. Johnston, hopes to put a very large percent of these on its list during the present year. The right man has certainly been selected for this work.

NOTICE.

At the Southern Christian Convention, held in the city of Richmond, May 1-4, 1928, Mr. C. D. Johnston, Elon College, N. C., was elected circulation manager of THE CHRISTIAN SUN for the next regular biennium. It is hoped that our people will heartily co-operate with him in his effort to increase the subscription list. He is obliging, and all will receive genial treatment at his hands. Beginning the 1st of July, all remittances for subscriptions and renewals to THE CHRISTIAN SUN should be sent to C. D. Johnston, circulation manager, Elon College, N. C.

LYNCHBURG CHURCH.

Kingdom enlistment week closed on June 13th at United Christian Church, Lynchburg, with an addition of twenty-three new members to the Church. The campaign started on June 3rd with the arrival of Dr. McD. Howsare, Secretary of the Department of Evangelism and Life Service of the Christian Church. Dr. Howsare preached each night throughout the campaign, with the pastor directing the song services, assisted by an orchestra and choir. Seven responded to the call for volunteer workers, and after the work of tabulating the names of prospects had been completed, these workers went out to give a personal invitation to those "out of Christ" to accept Him and join His Church. Others living in the community were given an invitation to join with the Church and transfer their membership. Twenty-five decision cards were signed, thirteen of which were conversions. A baptismal service was arranged in which thirteen were baptized by Dr. Howsare.

At the closing service, the sermon on "The Unfinished Task" was followed by the reception of the new members, each of whom was given a red carnation after the pastor and deacons had given the right hand of fellowship. It is expected that there will be more additions to the membership later. The Church rejoices with the new accessions to its membership and is encouraged in its work.

The success of the campaign was due to the fine spirit of evangelism which characterizes Dr. Howsare and the co-operation he received. The training in personal work and the effort made to win others to Christ is itself a worthwhile object. Dr. Howsare has made a splendid contribution to the life of this Church, and the pastor feels warranted in commending his services to other Churches of our brotherhood.

THE COMMISSION INVISIBLE.

BY CHAPLAIN H. E. ROUNTREE.

"He endured as seeing him who is invisible."—Heb. 11:27.

(Preached before three hundred men of the crew of U. S. S. Utah, 11 A. M. Sunday, June 10th, 300 miles out on the Atlantic.)

I am thinking of the great host who plan to do well, but the road becomes so long and discouraging, but the road becomes so long and discouraging that they drop out.

an ideal man, but the way was too hard, so he turned away, and he turned away forever. Not so with Moses, who was a man discouraged at nothing. He had the privilege of the kings courts and the education of a prince but chose rather to be a helper of his people than those things. The way he chose was full of thorns, etc., but he endured as seeing him who was invisible.

Paul was in the same position as the rich young ruler, but he saw in Jesus his own better self and he forsook all and endured all in an effort to be what his vision showed him. He cleaned up. It is our concern today: how did he do it? So many of us have ambition, but finding the way hard give up. If we can know the way, we will endure too.

First: By being honest with himself. A man's first invisible commission is honesty with self. Paul was. He acted upon the best information he had. He always followed his best leadership, even when he persecuted the Christians and witnessed their death. He was sincere. When he had this vision his past life passed before him; he saw his own wrongs, he saw a soul black with murder. It grieved him and he would pay any price to set himself right. That was honesty to self.

An honest man, though not always what others think he should be, is loved and respected by all, and he knows no pain in order to set himself in motion in any direction where he may be void of offense and where his own character may speak for itself. The highest compliment paid to any one is as Shakespeare says, "Every man has his fault and honesty is his . . . I could ne'er get him from it." This is, I consider, the richest legacy left any soul. And when that honesty is with one's self it takes its seat with his conscience and it becomes to him like the compass of the ship always telling which way to put the helm; and he who cannot be trusted to be honest with himself cannot be trusted to be honest in any other sphere of life. He is like a ship without a rudder. There is a day of accounting when we all have to answer to the great outside of us, and unless we are true to the great inner self we shall never have strength enough to prevent our soul's disaster nor justice enough to escape the judgment. Man, it is truly said, is "the noblest work of God"; and the voice of that God to him is through his conscience, where his truest self operates. It is here he does the whole will of God. When he feels moved upon to do something good, do it. When a thing seems to be wrong, refrain from it. When called upon for opinion, first sum up all the facts possible. Look at the facts from all angles. See things as they are. These things constitute essential honesty to one's self, and they constitute the voice of God to the soul which, if not obeyed, issues are confused, sins disguised and the soul is lost to its highest good. It is to thee like taking the clapper out of the bell-buoy—the waves may toss it high but it doesn't ring and the ship drives straight on the rocks into the black teeth of death.

We need it every hour,
A conscience clear
That shall be as a tower
Of strength and cheer.
We need it every hour,
A true, pure life
Which failure cannot sour
Or turn to strife.

Second: By obedience to his invisible commission. The invisible things of life are the most powerful ones. The great gates of day are swung wide open each morning without a creak of the hinges. The things that lie deep and are silent and never seen are the real and the important and the powerful things. All great things have come as silent as the snows of the night. The silent influence of greatness have moved within man and urged him on to achievement like the forces of spring which cover forest, hill and dale in verdant green and fruit of the season. And so a good man has his invisible ideals. The worldly man has his in a good time in the lusts of the flesh. An exalted man has his in ambition for honor. The humble man has his desire for real service. The rich man covets his riches and luxury. You your ratings. Some covet a pretty girl at home which he hopes to be his some day. Some, money enough to start a business when going out. In all, obedience and endurance or any price is necessary and the secret of success.

It is quite clear that each of us must have some invisible leader to get anywhere, and if all thy ideals are set in Jesus Christ the Supreme Architect of the universe, nothing can deter thee from victory.

Eg.: The rich man chose vast estates—riches, barns, goods and things material which he could see—but the great unknown voice of the invisible which he had not chosen but which he had now to reckon with, said to him, "Thou fool" . . . The one thing that knocked all his plans into a cocked hat was the unforgotten factor—God.

My great question is, who is my leader? Is he high-born? Is he set with the highest goals of life? Battles are fought, won or lost first in the heart. We must realize that we cannot set our ideals in small things and obtain great ones. We cannot be half-hearted in anything and then achieve a whole success. We must know that the limits of ideals set the limits of achievement. Never was there a more potent example than the two girls. One of them read the licentious court of Louis XIV and became a fallen woman and an outcast; the other read the life of Joan of Arc and became Florence Nightengale, the woman who took the dishonor out of nursing and made it a calling fit for the daughter of a king. We become like that we contemplate! The Bible says, "If thou wouldst be perfect, go and sell all that thou hast and come and follow me."

"Whatever things are true . . . honest . . . just . . . pure . . . lovely . . . If there be any virtue and if there be any praise, think on these things." "Contemplate these things!"

Which means (Rev. Ver.), "Keep in mind whatever is true and practice what you have learned and received from me, what you heard me say and what you saw me do; then the God of peace will be with you." This is the invisible leadership of life. Your blue days call you to follow your ideals just the same and endure as seeing that ideal.

Third: By being willing to pay the price.

("What price glory.") The commission invisible calls for endurance to the end, "Be thou faithful" . . . Endure! There is more value and more character in this word than in any other of the English language. It is a common, accepted fact that when man sets his head to do something there is no price too great to pay in achieving it. That is enduring as seeing the invisible. Enoch walked with God as seeing the Invisible. Abraham pressed on to the promised land as seeing the Invisible. Samson was strong to overcome armies because he lived as seeing the Invisible. David, as a mere stripling of a boy, was able to fight Goliath for his people, single-handed because he could go forward as seeing him who was Invisible. Stephen preached the gospel in the face of prison and death because he could see him who was Invisible. Paul was able to go from strange country to strange country preaching the word and be imprisoned and stoned and suffer all inconveniences because he saw the Invisible. Homer, who wrote the Iliad, died in poverty, but he wrote just the same because he saw the Invisible. Galileo lived and died in poverty but he gave to the world the first telescope.

If life is so—if this is common—then Christianity is the achievement of life there is no price too great to pay. We must strip ourselves of sins encircling folds, run our race of life with our eyes fixed on Jesus who is the Author and the Perfecter of our faith, who Himself endured the cross and thought nothing of its shame that He might sit on the right hand of the Father there to intercede for us, who steadily endured all the taunts of sinful men that we might know how to discipline and endure all things that we might be called the sons of men.

Thus, when I see a man bite his lips to keep from swearing, I know he is enduring as seeing the Invisible. When I see a man willing to say "No" to drink and debauch, or who turns his feet from vice or one depriving himself of money that he may send some home for mother, or one praying in spite of the opinion or the taunts of those around him, I know he is enduring as seeing the Invisible. God will not let such a one go without his reward. There may be a great gulf fixed between one and the man next to him, but if the Invisible leader is his inspiration he will endure it all and then some.

Eg.: There was a soldier in Hyde Park, Eng., to be decorated by the queen for the valor of his services. As she pinned the badge on his coat she said something to him which was never heard. But he was heard to say, "We will do it all again for queen and country, your majesty." What is it that men will not endure for the honor of their country? Personal gain? Then think of Christianity! Who is it that will say that love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, meekness, kindness, etc., are not the supreme things to be coveted in this life? Are not these the invisible essence of God? It is God. If this is true, who is it who will not say, "We will endure it all for God and righteousness?" It is this endurance that is the secret of greatness.

One may be tempted to dishonest gain. He needs the Invisible Leader of honesty to endure without gain. One may be threatened with the power of those in authority. He needs the solid rock of right-living in his heart to endure it all for righteousness' sake.

One may be sorely tried by the taunts of others, or may be lonely; he needs the hope of reward for right doing that he may endure. "He that endureth to the end shall be saved." "Behold, we count them happy which endure." This is the victory which "overcomes the world," saith the Lord.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE MISSION OFFERING.

Again let us call attention to the fact that we are still in the mission period and that every person in every Church should be given the privilege of making a contribution to missions. Many of the Churches have taken the offering and many more are planning to do so before the month is out. It is hardly fair to those Churches that are doing their best for other Churches to be indifferent and unconcerned in a matter so grave and important. We are hoping and praying that it will be unanimous, and before the period closes every Church in the Southern Convention will take the offering and give the people an opportunity.

The Church never was in greater need of funds, both for the home and foreign work. Our home work suffers and our foreign work is in distress. All of this can be relieved and will be if the people are given an opportunity and urged to make their contributions. We cannot see how any pastor can afford to neglect a matter so important and any Church to neglect an opportunity so great. By all means, let every pastor urge from their pulpit the necessity of the offering and plead with the people to make the offering as liberal as possible.

VANGUARD OF THE CHURCH.

In his thrilling volume entitled "Missions in a Changing World," Dr. W. W. Pinson calls home missions "the vanguard of the Church." He makes good his claims in two paragraphs which answer many critics:

"We hear it said that we must save America to save the world. If we mean by that, 'Save America and then save the world,' it is both un-Christian and irrational. Un-Christian because it is the revealed will of Christ that we should go into all the world and not wait till any part of it has been saved; and irrational because no one part of the world can be in reality saved till all of it is saved. If we mean save America as an important part of the world, that it may help and not hinder the saving of the world, it is both Christian and rational. America is a part of the world, and providentially an important part of it, and it must play its part in this great world drama.

"This is why I have called home missions the 'vanguard of the Church.' It is the Church feeling its way, discovering its obstructions, surveying and signaling the line of advance along which it is to follow. Home missions is not a detached and more or less independent enterprise, but an expression of the life and purpose of the Church in its relation to its total task."

THE JOHNSTON BUILDING DEDICATION.

The trustees of our Christian Orphanage have very appropriately named their most recent and most complete and beautiful building for the present beloved superintendent—"The Johnston Building." This building is now all paid for, is thoroughly equipped with every modern convenience for a comfortable and beautiful home, and it has been decided to dedicate the same Sunday afternoon, July 29th. A program has been made and speakers and others who are to take part thereon have been invited. It is proposed to invite all the Sunday Schools and Churches that have so liberally helped to make possible the building and pay for it to have representatives present on the day of dedication. Invitations are to be sent to every Church and Sunday School, to all pastors and many others to attend this auspicious exercise. A full program will appear at an early date and CHRISTIAN SUN readers in all directions are invited to be present on this festive occasion. Our people love the Christian Orphanage and are certainly liberal in their patronage and support, and it is expected that hundreds who have never visited the Orphanage will take advantage of this occasion to visit and inspect an institution so near and dear to their hearts. The trustees expect to make of it an occasion worthwhile, and all who can arrange to come may expect to be well paid for their pains and time in coming.

The whole Church will applaud the trustees for naming the building after our most worthy and most beloved superintendent, C. D. Johnston. He is not only a father to the fatherless and a friend to the orphan child, but he is a friend to our entire constituency and to all who come within the range of his reach, acquaintance and help. Very fittingly, indeed, has our most beautiful and complete building been named "The Johnston Building."

WELLONS AND BARRETT'S CHURCH.

Uncle Wellons was born in the neighborhood of Barrett's Church, in Southampton County, Va., January 1, 1826. He was born spiritually in Barrett's Church when he was eleven years of age, and was active in the service of the Church from the very date of his conversion. I have heard him tell how, on the day when he was converted, he immediately became a soul-winner.

As a layman in the Church and particularly as conductor of prayer-meetings and leader of song, Uncle Wellons became greatly influential. He was elected deacon of the Church and had served many years before he decided he would enter the ministry.

The members of his family, both on his father's side and his mother's side, have been prominent in Barrett's Church since the beginning of the Christian denomination, and so this Church decided to place a bronze tablet in the rotunda of the Alamance building of Elon College in his honor.

Nothing that this Church or any one else can do could add to the respect and love of the people for this man of God, but it certainly does honor to the Church in which he received his spiritual birth and in which for so many years he was a consistent laborer for his Lord, that it has placed this tablet at Elon College, where during his latter years Uncle Wellons gave the great energies of his mind and heart in loving service.

The tablet reads as follows: "Rev. James Willis Wellons, D. D., January 1, 1826-June 10, 1927. Christian minister, Christian statesman, Christian friend. An evangelist instrumental in winning more than 7,000 souls to his Lord. Especially gifted in prayer, he was the inspiration and the comfort of a host. Author of Wellons' Family Prayers, the Wellons Family, Wellons' Family Devotions, and Vital Truths for Hungry Hearts. Familiarly known as 'Uncle Wellons.' He was a benediction and a blessing to all who knew him. He was trustee of Elon from its founding till the day of his death."

We wish to congratulate the Barrett's Church and the pastor, Rev. C. E. Gerringer, on their thoughtfulness in this matter.

INDUSTRIAL OPPORTUNITY.

No door is so wide open as the door to Christian service. The invitation is universal. One of these doors opens into the field of industry. Christianity has created this field and it is growing larger all the time. That means an increase of industry's obligation to support and extend the gospel. The four greatest businesses in this country are steel, railroads, automobiles and moving pictures. There are other great industries as lumber, coal, textiles, glass, furniture. All of these employ millions of men and women who begin and end the day of work on time. They learn obedience to hours for work and carry system into their life-occupation. Regularity becomes an industrial habit, and that habit makes labor easy and useful for employer, employee and the public.

There is a laudable morality in the conduct of most large corporations. In fact, prohibition began in a practical way in the field of industry. Railroads prohibited engineers from using intoxicating liquor while on duty. They go even further now by placing signs on freight stations in simple words: "No Smoking." All this is done as a matter of business, but it is moral in its implications and results. What industry needs is to utilize this control of men in the larger field of the observance of the Sabbath and the teaching of the importance of making the same use of the Lord's Day for honoring God as they make of the six days to carry on the industries of the world. There should spring up in the official department and the working department of industry a co-operative recognition of the Christian obligation of all to the Church which has brought such wonderful progress to mankind. All that is necessary to utilize this gigantic force is to recognize that individuals are stewards of what they receive from God and are under obligation to use what they have for God; and Christian civilization is under the same obligation to use its progress and wealth to honor God and advance the interests of His kingdom. Reaction is sure to follow the failure of industry to make a proper return to God who has given this great blessing through Jesus Christ and His teachings.

The products of industry can go to the ends of the earth and get the confidence of the people better than theology. A railroad constructed and operated on Christian principles in a pagan land, its officials and employees living the Christian life, would be a powerful agency in winning the land to Christ. A real missionary railroad would be more efficient than a denominational Church and school. Industrial heads have been more disposed to exploit opportunities in foreign countries than to employ foreign people in a co-operative enterprise. To discover, get possession of, and control natural resources in other lands and use such resources for self-enrichment destroys the opportunity for helping them, and finally making a larger return of wealth and satisfaction. Capital and labor have the greatest opportunity to demonstrate the unity of these two interests. Friendly co-operation is the salvation of both. The working world is the salvation of the world. The idle world is the doom of the world. "My Father worketh hitherto and I work," said Jesus, and commanded His disciples to "go work." God works, Christ works, man works; but God rested, Christ rested, and man is commanded to rest. Industrial work alone will not save the world; spiritual work alone will not save the world. They must work together. When the industrial world goes to Sunday School and Church as regularly and earnestly as it goes to the office and the mill and helps to unite the material and spiritual forces of mankind, then both will prosper beyond the dream of faith.

A SERVICE OF INSPIRATION.

THE SUN's editor had the privilege of enjoying a delightful service of worship and inspiration in the Methodist Church at Fuquay Springs, N. C., Sunday, June 10th. The people of the community, including two or three local pastors, had invited Bro. Sam Davis, the noted blind pianist, of Norfolk, Va., and his wife, the gifted gospel singer and preacher, to come to the community to arrange for a series of evangelistic meetings at some early date. It was decided to open the meeting at Wake Chapel Christian Church most likely on the second Sunday of September. Bro. J. M. Darden accompanied the party and was deeply interested in arranging the meeting for the community. It is useless to say that the large Church building was more than filled at the hour of worship and that Bro. Sam Davis thrilled the entire audience as he poured out his soul through the melody of gospel music and edified all who heard him. Mrs. Davis sang two gospel melodies that completely captivated and charmed her audience, and then brought a message using as the basis of her thought the Scripture found in Acts 4:31, "And when they had prayed." Her topic was "Prayer," and she developed a theme from the events that took place immediately after "they had prayed." "Prayer changes things; it had greatly changed Peter and John. Time had been when Peter was wavering in faith and cowardly in word and deed, but the time had now come when prayer had its way with him and changed him. When men and women of God pray, things are changed, and great events take place. In the Scripture noted, several things took place after "they had prayed."

1. The place where they were assembled was shaken. That is not the only time that prayer has shaken peoples and places. When John Wesley had dedicated his life to God and poured out his soul in supplication, the place where the people were assembled together was often shaken and the people feared and trembled as the man of God poured out his soul at the throne of grace.

2. "After they had prayed, they were filled with the Holy Ghost, and being filled with the Holy Ghost they spake the Word of God boldly." One reason why people do not speak the Word of God is because they have not the Holy Spirit. What the Church needs today is an indowment of the Holy Spirit. Many Churches are torn with strife and envy, and there are members of the same Church who will not speak to each other and have little to do with one another. God is not using them, and He is not blessing that Church. If there were some in the Church devout souls who would pray, such a Church would be changed and the Holy Ghost would fill the people and there would be a live Church. Too many Churches are divided, and division in the Church brings coldness, indifference and paralysis. The Church today is suffering from spiritual paralysis. (Here the speaker made a plea to Church members to pray more devoutly and earnestly that the Holy Ghost might fill the house of God and do His work with the people of God so that the people might be of one heart and of one soul.)

3. "After they had prayed" they had a sense of stewardship, and neither said any of them that all of the things which he possessed was his own. The Church today is lacking in this sense of stewardship. It is going wild over possessions and the pursuit of pleasure and profit. Ours is a materialistic age, seeking after the things of the world, the flesh and the devil. We are not practicing stewardship. We have lost the sense of stewardship. But if the Church will pray, this will be changed and people will feel differently after their possessions.

"The reason that our age is so cold and unconcerned and indifferent about the things of God is because it is losing in a large part the sense of prayer. The Church is not praying enough, individuals are not praying enough." "When they had prayed," the speaker pointed out that the most glorious consequences came to the Church and to the world, and this was not only true in that day but is true of every day in which people pray.

The great concourse of people who gathered were delighted at the service, and the belief was expressed on very hand that the foundation was laid for a great community meeting when Bro. and Sister Davis return in September. These two talented and consecrated persons are being used of God in a marvelous manner, not only to attract people and to entertain them, but to draw them closer to God and to win souls to Christ. There is no talent of man, nor endowment, nor achievement which God cannot use to benefit and to bless mankind with when that talent is consecrated to Him.

ATLANTA SEMINARY.

Before you read this, the seminary year will have closed. A notable year in the character of the work done, the quality of the student body, the teaching strength of the faculty. Our study of things heavenly has been interrupted by the industry of some pesky little germs blown up here on the hill from a prevalent epidemic in the city. All survive. Good word comes from our matron, Miss Scott, convalescing on the blessed Uplands at Pleasant Hill, Tenn.

Prof. Freeman is loved and missed in his illness in Chattanooga, and Rev. J. C. Pryor, of Demorest, teaches his classes.

A bit of flirtation with Elon College, N. C., hints of the possibility of Atlanta Seminary moving to Elon in September. Elon College is the strongest of the colleges of the Christian denomination. In view of the federation movement now on between Congregationalists and Christians, the invitation has come to the seminary to make the affiliation of seminary and college a part of this plan to unite the two denominations. It would open a large opportunity to the seminary. The results of the flirtation will be reported next month, as will also the happy doings of the commencement week.

Prospects for new students of high grade for the coming year are very good. Pastors and friends of the seminary are requested to send names of young men who are intending to preach and seek the best possible preparation.—Southern Congregationalist.

EVANGELISM.

heartedly committed to his election, but there was one man much opposed to his candidacy, advocating the election of his opponent. The day arrived on which the question must be decided, and when the name of Gordon was announced as one of the candidates, he was asked to stand before the legislators. Rising, he stood superb in his manhood and dignity, but bearing the scars of many battles. When his former companion-in-arms looked upon the scars—scars honorably attained in vindication of a supreme vision, and worn as an emblem of his loyalty to a cause—those scars served to break down his opposition, and, with a great sob, he said, "Mr. Speaker, I cast my vote for General Gordon. I cannot vote against those scars." We believe the most beautiful sight in heaven will be the scars of Christ Jesus—scars that love wears, for surely no Jewish hate nor Roman edict could keep Him upon the cross. 'Twas no nail, just love, that held Jesus there. God grant that the vision of harvest fields so white and laborers so few, with God's actuating, dynamic love, will bring about an individualistic evangelism of personal soul-winning, procuring people who will join Jesus first, the Church next, a revival of the first century—then in mighty militant power shall we witness His conquering grace in the earth, and thus find the solution of every Church problem.

May every Church find at least a few who will function in evangelism—a goal be set for souls, not silver; and through God's Holy Spirit it shall be done—a few who are not ashamed of the "gospel of Christ, which is the power of God unto salvation" (Rom. 1:16), who will seek the regeneration rather than the reformation of men, heeding the words of Jesus, who said to a self-righteous religionist, Nicodemus, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God" (John 3:3), using God's word as a predicate therefor (1 Pet. 1:23) "Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever," for "of His own will begat He us with the word of truth" (Jas. 1:18).

Let those who lack the wisdom evidenced according to God's standard, viz: "The fruit of the righteous is a tree of life, and he that winneth souls is wise" (Prov. 11:30) ask of Him. "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally and upbraideth not, and it shall be given him" (Jas. 1:5). Equip yourself with the sword of the Spirit and the armor of God, as prescribed in Ephesians 8:11-18, knowing then your equipment will occasion that victory David had against Goliath, armed with five stones, only one was required to defeat the Philistine giant. May we enquire what those five stones typify? We believe they represent the first five books of the Bible, the five stones corresponding to the five books. If David, then, through the use of five, using only one, could bring victory to a kingdom, when all things else had failed—even Saul's armor was useless—how much more than conqueror can we be when armed with sixty-six stones, i. e., sixty-six books of the Bible, for "he that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him" (Psa. 126:6), and "they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars forever and ever" (Dan. 12:3). Oh, God, give us a wise Church!

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The question of organizations is one of the problems of modern society and of the Church. An organization is "a number of individuals systematically united for some end." Without organization, very little could be accomplished in any field of endeavor. Government is built on organization; the Church is built upon organization; the human body is an organism—but all the parts work together in perfect harmony. Government agencies co-operate and do what could not be done without organization. One of the greatest organizations is the Post-office Department. That this department can carry a letter from Boston to San Francisco to Los Angeles or from Kansas City to Houston for 2 cents and deliver it is marvelous. So perfect is this organization that a letter rarely ever goes astray. Such simple yet important service could not be rendered without organization. Railroads are another example of successful organization. That a car of oranges can be sent from Florida or California to New York without change shows what united companies can do. All of these organizations perform service at a minimum cost. The same is true of telegraph and telephone companies. The world would move backward if organizations were to die.

The greatest things in all the world are accomplished through organizations. Prohibition could not have come to the United States had it not been for temperance organizations. The first temperance society in the United States was organized in Pleasant Hill Christian Church, Alamance County, N. C. Out of that the kindred local temperance organizations came the great temperance movement that culminated in the eighteenth amendment. The Church is the greatest organization in the world—greatest in its origin, purpose, achievements, and its final results. It originated with Jesus Christ, who spake as never man spake. Its purpose is the salvation of the world; its achievements—civil governments, benevolent institutions of many kinds including homes for all classes of unfortunates, the Bible in more than seven hundred languages, education within the reach of all, hospitals for the insane, homes for the poor, and personal and organized charity in many ways. Jesus not only went about doing good, but His Church has been going about doing good ever since. It is the only institution that opens its doors and extends a hearty welcome to all. It turns away none. None are too ignorant nor too mean to be shut out of the Church, and the welcome is real, not formal. It welcomes all ages, all races and all conditions, and the numbers are increasing all the time.

Now there are many organizations within this greatest of all organizations, and some leaders think there are too many. As long as they co-operate as auxiliaries they are not superfluous. When they drift away from the parent body, the Church, they cease to be useful religious organizations. Many of them seem to be so occupied with the work of their society that they lose interest in the Church, without which they could not exist. To neglect the Church for any sub-organization is to weaken the power of the only organization that is set to the task of saving the world. Outside organizations that derive their support in members and means from the Church and fail to contribute their presence, their money and their service to the Church are that many too many for the best progress of mankind. There are, no doubt, too many organizations that profess to render great service for mankind and go to the Church with an appeal for all the means to carry on their work. The work would be better done if it could all be done inside of the Church and her organizations.

ELON LETTER.

CHURCH AND MUSIC.

Why does the Church insist on a musical program preceding the sermon? Isn't it a matter of custom merely, or is it founded upon a sound psychological basis?

The answer to this question is found not only in the fact that music is the means of spiritual impression and expression, but that it prepares for the sermon. When a musical program has been well planned it has fitted the minds and hearts of the people to receive the message of the hour. This means that there must be the closest co-operation between the minister and the director of music. It also means that the director of music should regard himself as the servant of the minister and use his best endeavor to create the spiritual atmosphere actually conducive to the effectual delivery of the message which the man of God has in mind to bring.

Music, too, serves a further purpose in the Church in that it tends to attract large numbers of people who are not only soothed but deeply stirred and inspired by great music.

The two great objectives in the modern Church program are an adequate method of achieving the results of religious education and the desire for Christian unity. Music is a real ally in both these fields. The motives and ideals which the religious educator has in mind to make effective in the lives of his pupils can be expressed with winning power through song. And the same is true of Christian unity. When people sing together, a sense of social solidarity inevitably results.

Martin Luther was not far wrong when he said that music is the art of the apostles. The Church would be poor indeed but for the application of this divine art in its services of worship and its educational program.

W. A. HARPER.

PRESIDENT HARPER'S REPORT.

Following is the report of President W. A. Harper to the board of trustees of Elon College, May, 1928:

I have the honor to present herewith the reports of the administrative committee, of the business manager, of the dean, of the dean of women, of the registrar, of the librarian, of the graduate manager, of the young ladies' hall, of the men's co-operative boarding department, of the Phippsoli, and of Maroon and Gold.

The scope and thoroughness of the reports which I submit from these officers and servants of the college make it unnecessary that I should make an extended report at this time. There are certain matters, however, in respect to which you will expect me to report.

I. Southern Christian Convention Fund.

The Southern Christian Convention, at its Durham session, two years ago, provided in its benevolence budget for the college annually $36,750 as income on $400,000 in bonds given to offset the indebtedness of the college, on $100,000 of bonds given for endowment, and on the note for $112,- 500 given years ago also for endowment.

The college was to give the Churches opportunity to make a free-will offering during the months of January and February to meet this obligation, and then was to be privileged to enter the field and solicit individuals on pledges and for new gifts to secure the remainder.

I am very happy to tell you that, on the 19th of May, we reached the full amount of the Southern Christian Convention fund for the college year 1927-'28.

In the Virginia Valley Central Conference twelve Churches out of twenty-six sent offerings this year; in the Eastern Virginia Conference, thirty Churches out of forty-seven sent offerings and two Churches reached their quotas in full—Richmond and Berea (Nansemond); in the North Carolina and Virginia Conference, twenty-nine Churches out of thirty-seven sent offerings this year and five Churches reached their quotas—Elon College, First Church of Greensboro, Haw River, Lynchburg and Monticello; in the Western North Carolina Conference, twenty-one Churches out of thirty-three sent offerings and five Churches reached their quotas—Burlington, Graham-Providence, Liberty, Parks Cross Roads and Ramseur; and in the Eastern North Carolina Conference, thirty Churches out of forty-nine sent offerings and three Churches reached their quotas—Catawba Springs, Caroleigh and Sanford. In all, therefore, 122 Churches out of 192 sent offerings this year, and fifteen reached their quotas in full. There is no question in my mind that if the method begun at Durham had been employed over a term of years every Church would eventually have sent an offering and each year an increasing number would have reached their goals.

A very gratifying matter I must mention to you in connection with the completion of the offering this year. I selected a limited number of alumni of the college who do not belong to our Churches or who are so far from their Churches and who have not previously made gifts to the college for current expenses. I addressed them a personal letter and asked them for a free-will offering which I hoped would reach a thousand dollars. I am glad to tell you that they oversubscribed the thousand dollars by $37.50, the gifts ranging from $1.00 to $30.00. This evidence of interest in the college on the part of alumni who have been separated from it unavoidably in the prosecution of their lifework is, I am sure, gratifying to you as it has been to me.

The Convention, at its recent session, has changed the method of financing this obligation of $36,750 annually to the college by providing in the Conference apportionments $12,750 annually, and authorizing the college to raise the remaining $24,000 by approaching individuals at any time during the year and through giving Sunday Schools opportunity to make quarterly offerings for this purpose. I request that you permit me, with the approval of the administrative committee, to employ a field agent to assist me in this work for the next year. I regret that I am not able to make nomination for this position at this time.

I also recommend that the finance board of the Convention and the Executive Committee of the Conferences be asked to co-operate with me in determining goals for the various Conferences and Churches, and that the expense of the financial field agent be charged against the funds raised, the net amount to be raised being the $24,000.

I recommend further that ten scholarships be offered, two in each of the five Conferences, for the Sunday Schools that shall raise, through the quarterly free-will offerings, the largest amount gross for the college and the largest per capita offering. It is possible, of course, that the same Sunday School will win both scholarships in a particular Conference, but it is not likely. It should be understood if there is no student in the Sunday School to come to Elon College, it may have the right to nominate a student from some other Sunday School in the same Conference for the scholarship.

II. Financial Program.

At your February session you went on record as requesting the Southern Christian Convention, in your option, some time during the next three years to permit you to undertake a campaign to raise sufficient money to pay off all indebtedness and increase the endowment of the college to a million dollars net.

The Southern Christian Convention gave its approval to this request of yours. The President of the Convention also made certain specific recommendations to the Convention which will be submitted to you during this session.

In this campaign we should endeavor to secure the co-operation of the General Education Board. Their rule is when they assist at all in endowment campaigns, to give a third, but they first require that all indebtedness must be paid and then they will give a third of that which adds net to the endowment above indebtedness. It is understood that the General Education Board is at this time particularly interested in departments of science in colleges. It is perhaps possible that they would become interested in our department of Christian education. In view of this uncertainty as to where their major interest would lie, I recommend that you appoint a special committee to act with me in taking up the matter in the premises with the officers of the General Education Board. I suggest that you pass a resolution at this time authorizing this committee and empowering it to make an appeal to the General Education Board to assist us in increasing our endowment to a million dollars net after we have raised sufficient money to pay off indebtedness.

III. Co-operation with the Atlanta Seminary.

At your called session recently held in Richmond in connection with the Southern Christian Convention, you expressed approval in principle of co-operation between the Atlanta Theological Seminary and the department of Christian education in Elon College. The Convention likewise voted its approval, referring the details of this co-operation to this board, with the approval of the Executive Committee of the Convention.

Since the adjournment of the Convention, the Atlanta Theological Seminary trustees have held their annual meeting. They found themselves faced with a deficit of $8,000 and with their property not disposed of. They, therefore, felt it would be better to go slow with reference to the matter of moving to Elon, at least so far as public announcement was concerned.

Under date of May 17th, President Keller wrote me: "We are coming to Elon, but more slowly and less decidedly than we hoped. The trustees of Atlanta Seminary are frightened by a debt of $8,000, and as the sale of the seminary property may be delayed, they think it unwise to make the final decision for Elon until the dean and I go out in the field to see what can be done. So we are getting out literature and giving publicity to the proposition of removing to Elon, asking the co-operation of our Congregational people."

On the 20th of May, at the suggestion of Dr. Kirby, of Raleigh, Dean Hook and I went to Raleigh to confer with him. Dr. Kirby has been made a member of the Executive Committee of the Atlanta Theological Seminary. Dr. Kirby reports to us as follows:

1. The executive committee has been authorized to sell all property of the Atlanta Theological Seminary.

2. President Keller and Dean Zimmermann are given until August 1st to see what they can do with the financial budget of the seminary for next year.

3. The executive committee has been given power to handle the whole situation, though all the directors and at least sixty members of the Congregational Church in various parts of the country, over their signatures, favor coming to Elon.

On Monday, following the adjournment of the Southern Christian Convention, President Keller and Dean Zimmermann came to Elon College and, in conference with our faculty in the department of Christian education and the dean, adjusted the courses of study and teaching force of the seminary and the college. According to this arrangement, the seminary would offer courses valued at 126 semester hours in Bible, religious education, homiletics, philosophy, social science, Church history and theology. It was agreed that, in addition to President Keller and Dean Zimmermann and the service that Mrs. Zimmermann would render Prof. Bennett in the week-day school of religion, the seminary would need to employ a professor of Bible, a professor of philosophy and social science and a professor of Church history and theology. It was also agreed that the courses in the seminary, when approved by the dean of the college, would be open to college students without cost to the college for instruction in junior and senior years. It was also agreed that courses in Bible and religious education offered by Dr. Newman, Prof. Bennett and the president for junior and senior college classes would be open on the same terms to students in the seminary. Further than this, all other matters were left open.

I suggest that you appoint a special committee of three to work with a committee from the seminary on the details, the same to be submitted when complete to the board of trustees of the college and the Executive Committee of the Convention for approval.

IV. Trustees.

The term of office of the following trustees expires at this session: Dr. W. W. Staley, Dr. J. E. Rawles, Dr. L. E. Smith, J. A. Williams, Col. E. E. Holland, A. B. Farmer, P. J. Carlton, Dr. W. H. Boone, George F. Whitley and I. W. Pritchard.

The Secretary of the Southern Christian Convention informs me that each of these whose term expires was renamed by the Convention at its recent session in Richmond, and in addition to this, the following persons also are nominees for the trusteeship at this time: Mrs. J. H. Barnwell (Miss Deloris Morrow), Burlington, N. C.; Mrs. John T. Kernodle, Richmond, Va.; Rev. John G. Truitt, Norfolk, Va.; D. E. Sellars, Burlington, N. C.; Jesse F. West, Jr., Waverly, Va.; I. A. Luke, Holland, Va.; Jesse D. MacClenny, Suffolk, Va.; J. A. Kimball, Manson, N. C.; H. A. Carlton, Raleigh, N. C., and W. B. Truitt, of Greensboro, N. C.

W. A. HARPER, Pres.

CLIMBING THE MISSIONARY LADDER.

(Read before the Woman's Missionary Convention, Richmond, Va., by the president, Mrs. J. A. Williams.)

Today we are climbing the missionary ladder, whose top is so high it is hidden in the mist of uncertainty. We cannot hope to ever reach the top, for if we reach the place where it seems to end, we find, with our expanded minds, as we ascend our horizon widens. The more trained the human mind is, the broader view it can take of life, and the higher we climb the missionary ladder the more we can appreciate the people and things we encounter in this world. I am going to attempt to tell you some of the mental attainments we should have to broaden our views, and some of the physical attainments we should have to sustain the mind and to enable us to climb to higher heights and to get the most out of life and our missionary efforts.

When we speak of missionaries, our thoughts naturally revert toward people and countries far away, or to what is commonly known as foreign missions, because that is the mission work usually referred to and emphasized by practically all Christian Churches.

But notwithstanding the great importance and predominance in Church work of foreign missions, we should not neglect the growing importance of the home field. For truly no Christian people can rest satisfied to send the gospel only to heathen lands when there are thousands and even millions in our own country, indeed at our very own doors, who are just as much in need of the gospel as those in foreign lands. There are always thousands of human beings in the slums and outlying districts who need the word of God preached to them and who need the loving, sympathetic service rendered by consecrated missionaries; who need the soul-saving message from the prophet Isaiah: "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters"; "He that hath no money, come ye, buy and eat." There are thousands, indeed millions, of poor and ignorant human souls, who, although they may live within a stone's throw of Churches in large cities, or in remote places, thinly settled and half-civilized sections of every country, have never heard the wonderful message of the Bible. They are too poor, too ignorant, or too indifferent to help themselves, and if they are to be saved, the Church, the Christian Church, must reach them. Those who have never visited and studied carefully the slums of our large cities can scarcely imagine conditions that actually exist at the very doors of our Churches. And even among people of our own racial strata here in our own country there are thousands who are godless and live as do heathens, who spend their money for that which is not bread, who labor for that which satisfieth not, who eat that which is not good. They are right at our Church doors. In fact, they are often in our Churches themselves, but seem absolutely indifferent to the salvation of their souls. These people need missionary work just as badly as those in the slums or the heathens in China and Japan. Many of them are not and cannot be reached by our regular Church forces, or even by such organizations as the Salvation Army, Volunteers, etc., who are really doing a great work among them, which in itself is real missionary work and ample evidence that such work is needed. Many thoughtless Christians are sitting down, shaking their heads, doing nothing, but saying the missionary ladder is too high and too steep. If that is what you are thinking, you are down in the valley. Climb the missionary ladder and see what is really going on in the world; millions who are in darkness seeking light, coming to us, who call ourselves Christians, because they want to know our Lord and our God. Shall we help them find Him? Wherever there are human souls in darkness who need light and help, there is work to do. God grant that the day will speedily come when there will be no need of missionaries in Christian countries, but the need is here now, so many need the word of God preached to them, and wherever we find that need, it is our duty to meet it, no matter where the need exists, whether in Christian or heathen countries. If it is our duty (and who now doubts it?) to carry the gospel to the heathen in strange countries, how much more important and easier to carry the gospel to those who are in darkness, even in our country and among our own people?

When, under the first dispensation, man failed God, in spite of Moses and the prophets, He sent

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

WHEN DO YOU PAY?

BY DR. W. H. DENISON, Sec'y Stewardship.

Do you have regular times when you pay your pastor, janitor, electric light bill, etc.? If you wait until the end of the year to pay your missionaries and other benevolent workers, why should you not wait until the end of the year to pay your minister and music director? Or if you pay the one in an unsystematic way, why not the other? Local expenses and your benevolences should be placed on the same basis. They should be subscribed at the same time and the same way; should be as faithfully presented by the canvassers to the same persons; should receive the same emphasis by pastor and Church officials; should be as regularly paid by subscribers. Subscribers should be as thoroughly informed about the items of the one as about the others. That is the reason that the Convention, the General Board and the Finance Board urge every Church to remit its benevolences regularly each month (in rare cases quarterly), so that we may be as Christian and as prompt to those workers who serve us on mission field, in secretarial responsibility, on our college faculties, as we are to our local workers. We need to bear in mind that we sustain the same relationship and are under the same responsibility to these workers as we are to those who serve us locally. Every Church should consider this fact earnestly and see to it that its benevolences are remitted monthly.

The 1929 Christian Annual.

The editor of "The Christian Annual" would be pleased to have any suggestions that would improve the next issue of the "Annual" without increasing the cost of the same. The Secretary of the General Convention is charged with the important responsibility of editing this and earnestly desires suggestions for improvement.

Dr. A. E. Kemp, pastor, Urbana, Ill., recently purchased a copy of Cushman's late 50-cent book, "Dealing Squarely with God." After reading it, he wrote this bureau, saying, "A transparent message, boiled down, inspiring, gripping and virile." Have you read this book yet?

Seven Reasons.

Dr. A. B. Knedall, Danville, Ill., president of the Central Christian Convention, gives outstanding reasons why every Christian Church should actually use the annual every-member canvass. Think them through.

1. God's plan for financing his work seems to have been, even from ancient time, to have every child of his contributing thereto.
2. The spiritual life of the canvassers enriched and their interest in the work of the Church is strengthened.
3. A giving member is, or becomes, an active member.
4. Establishes an equitable Church finance plan.
5. Provides a means of worship for every member.
6. Trains the children in benevolent giving.
7. Church financial efficiency influences the community favorably.

1929—Stewardship Year.

The Southern Methodist, Southern Presbyterian and the Southern Baptist denominations have all planned to make 1929 stewardship year. Several other denominations are planning the same program. Each will, in its own way, seek to bring its constituency to a fuller obedience to the teaching of God's Word on one of the most important of all Christian duties—that of giving a definite and proper proportion of their substance to the advancement of Christ's kingdom in the world. Let it be fully understood that unless the Christian Church people come to practice the principles of Christian stewardship as a matter of conviction, we may not expect any higher spiritual life in the Churches nor any greater prosperity in the Church. Why not make 1929 a real stewardship year in the Christian Church?

MISSIONARY RALLY.

The mission rallies of the Virginia Valley Central Conference were held at Mt. Olivet (G), Newport, Winchester and Concord June 1st to 5th. The one at Palmyra had to be postponed. The rally at Mt. Olivet (G) organized, with Miss Cecil Collier leader and Mrs. Clyde H. Knight, secretary. This district is to be known as Greene County district, and includes Mt. Olivet (G), Christian Chapel, High Point, and Island Ford.

At Newport, the organization resulted in choosing Mrs. Noah Painter leader, and Miss Gertrude Comer, secretary. This district is to be known as Page Valley district, and includes Newport, East Liberty, Leaksville, Mt. Lebanon, Bethel and St. Peters.

At Winchester the organization resulted as follows: Mrs. Fred Oats leader and Mrs. K. H. Sale, secretary. This district is to be known as northern district, and includes Winchester, Timber Ridge, and Timber Mountain.

At Concord the organization resulted as follows: Mrs. A. S. Turner, leader; Mrs. A. W. Andes, assistant leader, and Mrs. Roy Hosaflook, secretary. This district is to be known as Rockingham district, and includes Antioch, Bethlehem, Beulah, Concord, Linville, New Hope, Mayland and Mt. Olivet (R).

Miss Pattie Coghill, Henderson, N. C., was present at each rally and gave an address; also conducted a round-table discussion and helped out in a number of ways. Rev. J. G. Truitt, of Eastern Virginia Conference, was present at Mt. Olivet (G) and bore greetings from the Eastern Virginia Woman's Conference.

Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Mission Secretary of the Southern Christian Convention, wrote and sent an address, which was read at each rally. The pastors of the Conference present and taking part in one or more of these rallies were Revs. W. B. Fuller, B. J. Earp, W. T. Walters and A. W. Andes.

Mrs. Boyd Richards, president, was leader, and Mrs. B. F. Frank, secretary of the Conference Woman's Board, were both present at each rally. Others taking part on the different programs were Miss Cecil Collier, Mrs. Mollie Fultz, Mr. J. E. Foster, Miss Mabel Higgs, Mrs. Fred Oats, Miss Annie Amelia Seabright, Mrs. Roy Larrick, Mrs. Marvin Selden, Mrs. K. H. Sale, Miss Ella Pickering, Mr. W. C. Wampler, Mr. Vincent Huffman, Miss Ora Scott, and Miss Verdine Showalter.

Inasmuch as this work is only beginning in our Conference, we were encouraged by the attendance. Twelve out of twenty-one Churches were represented, as follows: Mt. Olivet (G), Newport, Mt. Lebanon, Leaksville, Bethel, Winchester, Timber Ridge, Concord, Bethlehem, Mayland, Antioch and Linville.

The Woman's Missionary Conference will be held at Linville in August, the exact date having not yet been set.

MRS. B. F. FRANK, Sec'y.

BETHLEHEM SUMMER SCHOOL.

The training schools at Elon and Bethlehem, sponsored by the Department of Christian Education and backed by the Convention, offer a fine opportunity for busy pastors and lay leaders to take a week of intensive training by our best-trained leaders. It offers a great opportunity for a fellowship and get-together meeting which we need greatly in Georgia and Alabama. . . For pastors to come together and "pool" their problems and secure the combined aid of noted authors, competent teachers and fellow-workers; for Sunday School superintendents, teachers and other officers likewise, it seems to me is a very wise thing to do.

Unless we support the school by our presence, the Convention will be put to needless expense and the faculty to unnecessary trouble. I hope every pastor, licentiate, superintendent, Sunday School teacher, officer, Christian Endeavor officer within the bounds of the Alabama and the Georgia and Alabama Conference will attend the Wadley school the first week in July and bring some one with them for good measure. I hope it may be convenient for our Congregational brethren of this section to attend also, as well as those of other Churches. No individual or Church is true to what we are undertaking who will allow anything but Providence to prevent their attendance. I crave the association, fellowship, inspiration and instruction that we expect to get out of the meeting, and I am coming farther than any of you after it. Please do not disappoint us by being absent. Can we have two hundred present this time? Yes, if you will come.

Ambrose, Ga.

W. C. CARPENTER.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

The Eastern North Carolina Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention will hold its session July 10th and 11th with the Catawba Springs Sunday School. It is the desire of the Convention to have a report from every Sunday School in the Conference, also a report from all Christian Endeavor Societies.

Mr. Harold W. Johnson, Fuquay Springs, N. C., is corresponding secretary and will mail you report blanks. If for any reason you do not receive one by the 25th of June, please write him and ask that one be sent you.

We hope to establish an honor roll, and for a Sunday School to get on the honor roll they must mail in to the corresponding secretary the report from their Sunday School not later than the 8th of July.

Elect your delegates to the Convention and urge your secretary to send in report, so that we may have the best Convention ever.

Teresa Carter, of Wadley, Ala., writes: "We are looking forward to the summer school and believe that this is going to be the best ever." Watch for her article and see what one young person thinks of the school.

Rev. J. D. Hunt, in a letter of June 2nd, says: "I am more interested in the summer school than ever. I have invited all the Congregational ministers and Sunday School workers of the State to be present and share with us in the meeting. The encouraging thing about the Bethlehem School is that several of the leaders there have shown their interest in the school by trying to interest others in attending. It seems now that the school is going to be well attended and the "best ever."

Dr. S. L. Beougher, president of the college and of the Summer School of Christian Education, writes encouraging things about the 1928 session. The Woman's Missionary Society of the Wadley Church will have charge of the entertaining, and different women will have charge of the dining hall each year. Also, we expect to visit the Churches in the interest of the school.

Programs have been sent to all the pastors, Sunday School superintendents, Christian Endeavor presidents, those attending in former years, and to a host of others. If you have been overlooked or your program has not arrived, please write Dr. S. L. Beougher, Wadley, Ala., or the writer for one.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

Lesson I—Sunday, July 1, 1928.

THE EARLY LIFE OF SAUL.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Remember also thy Creator in the days of thy Youth."—Eccl. 12:1.

LESSON: Deut. 6:4-9; Phil. 3:4-6; Acts 22:3.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psa. 119:33-40.

Explanations and Comments.

1. "The religious training of a Jewish boy" (Deut. 6:4-9). Jehovah is the one absolute God: He must be loved with all the heart, soul and strength. The commandments must be laid to heart, must be taught to children, must be a constant subject of thought and conversation everywhere and at all times—at home and when on the way, in the evening on lying down and in the morning on rising. They must be bound upon the hand for a sign, and worn as bands (frontlets) between the eyes. This "sign" was worn upon the arm in much the same way as children tie knots in their handkerchiefs, or change rings on their fingers to remind the wearer of something he should not forget.

2. "Paul's own account of his early life" (Phil. 3:4-6). There were many circumstances in his life of which he might well be proud, Paul asserts in his letter to the Philippians; he had greater cause for pride in his ancestry than had many others who boasted of their descent. He was circumcised when eight days old, he belonged to the stock of Israel and the tribe of Benjamin, a Hebrew of the Hebrews.

"In Paul, as perhaps in no other historic personality, the three main currents of ancient history met. He was a Jew, but his Hebrew faith had a Hellenic (Greek) form and a Roman environment. On the cross of Jesus an inscription was written in Hebrew and Greek and Latin, as though the three types of contemporary civilization met at its feet. What was thus written on the cross of Jesus was written on the life of Paul, and this unprecedented convergence of influences and traditions prepared the way for the expansion, through the work of one man, of a provincial sect into a cosmopolitan religion."

3. "Further facts which Paul gives about himself" (Acts 22:3, 27, 27). (1) He was a Jew, a native of Tarsus in Cilicia, "a citizen of no mean city" (Acts 21:39); educated at Jerusalem at the feet of Gamaliel; well instructed according to the strict law laid down by the Jewish fathers; as zealous for God as were all Jews of that day. He began his studies with Gamaliel; at the age of fourteen or fifteen, for that was the Jewish custom.

Gamaliel was one of the most famous of the Jewish rabbis. He was "had in honor of all the people" (Acts 5:34), and when he died men said, "The glory of the law has ceased." He was a member of the Sanhedrin, and it was he who, when the apostles were imprisoned and escaped, and the authorities "were minded to slay them," stopped them by declaring that "If this counsel or this work be of men, it will be overthrown; but if it is of God, ye will not be able to overthrow them." And they could not.

"Memorizing the text of the Old Testament and of commentaries on that text; reciting the approved interpretations; allegorizing the history so that external events were transmuted into spiritual lessons—all these ingenious devices for disguising history and exalting tradition must have been appropriated by the receptive mind of the growing boy."

(2) Though a Jew, he was a Roman by birth. There were three classes among the people of the Roman empire—citizens, Latins and foreigners. The citizens had full political and other civic rights and immunities; the Latins had partial rights; and the foreigners had none at all. Claudius Lysias, the chief captain at Jerusalem to whom Paul was talking, told Paul that he had paid a large sum for the privilege of Roman citizenship. His Roman citizenship was of great value to Paul on his journeys: it was recognized by politarchs at Philippi, the governor of Achaia at Corinth, the Asiarchs at Ephesus, the governors Felix and Festus in Judea, and the centurion Julius on the Alexandrian ship bound for Rome.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Sunday, July 1, 1928.

TOPIC: "America First—in What?"—Prov. 14:34; Psa. 33:12. (Consecration meeting.)

Some Bible Hints.

America has a long way to go before it is first in righteousness and justice. Law-breaking is too common (v. 34).

If sin is a reproach, we should hide our faces, for what with murder, lynching, bootlegging, graft and injustice in the courts we are badly stained (v. 34).

America is committed to God and religion. The majority still believe in Him (v. 12).

Indeed, it looks as if America, in God's providence hidden for ages, was chosen by the Eternal for a great experiment in liberty. Pray that we may be worthy (v. 12).

Suggestive Thoughts.

In spite of much to be ashamed of, America has high ideals—liberty, equality before the law, and justice.

America is first even now in industry. A nation of workers, and therefore the wealthiest nation on earth. But what are we doing with our wealth?

America is first in benevolences. No great appeal is ever met with deaf ears. Think of our work for starving Russian children, or children of the Near East.

America is first in disarmament. Its voice is for peace. It is ready to beat spears into pruning-hooks and call the nations to do this too.

A Few Illustrations.

In the World War, America was first in mercy. America has stood out in a plea for a world court of international justice, without which war never will be abolished. An American, Elihu Root, helped to set up such a court under the League of Nations.

America has been first in freedom. For many years the oppressed of Europe came to our shores. This is a land of liberty, but not license.

America may not be first, but she is striving to lead in education. We believe in the public school and in the right of the poorest to get the best possible education.

To Think About.

What things make you proudest of America?
What things in America should keep us humble?

How can we help to make America still better?

PIEDMONT JUNIOR COLLEGE.

Piedmont Junior College (Bethlehem) Summer School of Christian Education, Wadley, Ala., July 1-7, 1928.

The Summer School of Christian Education is conducted in the interest of pastors, Christian Endeavor and Sunday School workers, although many features of the work will be interesting and profitable to all who may desire to attend.

The faculty is of high class, chosen because of special fitness to give instruction in their special field. Dr. C. H. Rowland, Dr. W. P. Minton, Dr. F. P. Ensminger, Dr. Frank E. Jenkins, Mrs. Bullock, Miss Pattie Coghill, and others will compose our faculty this year.

The courses will contain, in substance, what follows: the teaching value of the Bible, the investment of life and training for leadership, principles of teaching, primary and junior departments, agencies for religious education for adolescence, adult department of activities, organization of community life, Sunday School administration, missions, modern methods of evangelism, stewardship and promotion, pastors' conference and the rural Church, pageantry and music and recreational activities.

This school will teach you just the things you will want to know, for it will deal with objectives, administration, equipment, educational methods and curricula. The school offers a short course in leadership training. No one can be a leader unless he can sell himself to others, and he can do this only through developing his possibilities. To him, this school presents the supreme message which has yet come to the world. Greece said, "Be moderate; know thyself." Rome said, "Be strong; order thyself." Confucianism says, "Be superior; correct thyself." Buddhism says, "Be disillusioned; annihilate thyself." Hinduism says, "Be separated; merge thyself." Mohammedanism says, "Be submissive; bend thyself." Modern materialism says, "Be industrious; enjoy thyself." Modern dilettantism says, "Be broad; cultivate thyself." Christianity says, "Be Christ-like; give thyself." In this catalogue of principles and duties the last ranks as most important and this school of Christian education has as its one great aim Christian character through self-denial.

A great treat is in store for all who will attend.

Free room and board will be provided for all ministers for the entire week. Bring a delegation from each of your Churches.

The Fourth of July will be rally day for Piedmont Junior College. Good speaking and a free dinner will be provided for all who will attend. Come and enjoy the week with us.

THE COMMISSION INVISIBLE.

by learning the secret of it. That secret is a vision of God. Life is beset with temptations and sooner or later we all have to answer to the great outside of us, for what we do about. How great are our temptations in society, in solitude and at our work!

A man who leaves home and home environments, faces the complex world in the navy where standards are lower and looser than at home, he needs a great vision of right, and honesty, and self-respect; he needs God to maintain his manhood. Learn that secret. Get the vision. It alone is powerful enough to dispel all moral darkness and save from every wrong and downfall and make the path clear to victory.

A man may have his lonely hours—his solitude. While offering many good things as a check-up on self, solitude often belies its promise and brings on sins peculiar to itself. There are evil thoughts, adulteries, fornications, masturbations, thefts, lies, cursings which are born in thy solitude and defile thyself, and maybe they would never have been born had not thou been alone. So said He who Himself was undefiled. How true it is that a man's undoings are not in his circumstances, but in himself. Those who have overcome are those who have never lost a vision of God in their lives. The great commission invisible.

If it is in thy daily duty, the road to promotion is a long and irksome one, endurance as seeing it is necessary. If you can endure it will be a bulwark against any failure. If it is to be a Christian, it is a bulwark to thy life and thy soul against which the gates of hell cannot prevail.

"Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life."

"Thy glorious task work on;
Think not in vain turmoil.
Thy labors shall not be in vain—
'Twill stand when thou art gone."

"Think noble thoughts if you would noble be:
Pure thoughts will make a heart of purity,
Kind thoughts will make you good, and glad thoughts gay—

For, like your thoughts, your life will be alway.

"Whate'er is true and reverent and just,
Think o'er these things and be like them you must:
Of good report, of lovely things and pure;
Think and your mind's such nectar secure.

"Think much of God and you shall like Him be,
In words of faith, and hope, and charity;
Protect His image from all foul abuse
And keep the temple whole for His use."

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
One of Our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MONDAY.

THE GLORY OF THE COMMONPLACE.

"Behold the bush burned with fire."—Ex. 3:2.

Moses looked at an ordinary bush and became aware of God. Wordsworth looked at a primrose and beheld the throne of God. Can a housewife stay in a hot kitchen on a hot, summer day, and over a frying pan and find anything there like God? We are told that she should. Well, how?

First, believe what God told Peter, that there is nothing common about what God has cleansed and given us; second, believe that everything we have and everything we do to live rightly is given us by God and is a part of His great plan to perfect the world. We stand by the little brook in the mountains and know it is a part of the great seas. Can we not stand by our daily toil and also know it is a part of God? Can we not stand by a wretch of a man or a woman and see the image of God?

Whatever our own estate or condition, can we not understand that we are "sons of God," that "we shall be like Him," that "God's blood runs in our veins?"

Whatever our experience may be—groceryman, blacksmith, tailor, bootblack or servant girl, fire or flood or poverty—we should be able to find a divine light along the road. God shines in the workshop as well as in the sanctuary, and will be in the sixth and seventh trouble; yea, will never forsake us. He will sanctify anything brought to Him. Are we walking in the shadow of death? Let it not quench our hopes, but let it bring to us the long-expected reward.

But life is so real we can't always see this way. True indeed, and yet we shall see if we will take His way. His way is "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see." They that have "clean hands shall see." See what? God in every-day life and experiences; the glory of the commonplace. Things that are low degrade, impoverish and impair our seeing. Things that are pure, clear and intensify our vision. "In Christ," is the remedy.

Prayer.—Oh, God, we pray Thee that our lives may never lose the halo. Call us Thy children. Keep us Thy children, pure, clean and loyal. May Thy tender mercies ever be over us. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE STRENGTH OF SOLITUDE.

"He went up into a mountain to pray."—Luke 9:28.

"Little stream of the mountain, why lingerest thou so long in these solitary places? Thy waters mirror the emerald sky and the soft sunbeams, and at night the silent stars. There are massive wheels of industry waiting in the valley below to be moved. A thousand fields are athirst for thee. Men, women and little children need thy waters. Leave thy haunts in the mountain and come dwell altogether in the valley, little stream."

But the little stream makes answer: "I would be a useless, babbling stream without this life in the mountain solitudes. Here I gather many waters into my bosom. Rushing over rocky ledges, leaping yawning chasms, I gather momentum for the great tasks that await me, and with the thunder of many waters, rush down upon the valley eager and ready."

"Oh, Christ, why retire to the mountain to pray? There are throngs of sick, halt, maimed, withered, demon-possessed waiting for Thee in the valley below. Why come here to look into the Father's face when multitudes are waiting to look into Thine?"

And my Lord seems to say: "My child, it is here in the mountain I gather strength for my great tasks in the valley. It is here in the solitude only that I can find peace and composure for the thronged street. Here I drink from invisible fountains, that I may go forth and be a reservoir of power, a sanctuary of refreshment." And my soul seemed to pray: "Lord, help me in these feverish days to learn well the secret of Thy great strength."

Prayer.—Most glorious Saviour, as Thy countenance was changed when Thou didst pray, being to us the inner experience of such a close walk with God that our great hours may illumine our faces with His Spirit. May we ever find assurance that Jesus is ever in contact with His followers to strengthen and direct them. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

FAILURE.

"I will set up my standard to the people."—Isa. 44:22.

So "He shall not fail." Failure is a common word with us. We know lots about it. There is not a one of us who has not failed in something. Israel looked for a Saviour who would fulfill all things, set them free and who could not fail.

Jesus came. The Carpenter of Nazareth took a cross for a banner, tore down the house of death and built a house of life whose windows are the sky and whose doors open into eternity. Then He says to the world, "I have created the heavens, and have given breath to the people and spirit to their souls. Come unto me and I will be with thee and I will strengthen thee, yea I will help thee. I am the Lord, and my glory will I not give to another. To him that comes and overcomes will I groom to sit down with my Father in His throne." Thus God's eternity is turned to the use of time and man. We all are His guests and sharers with Him in His glory. He shall not fail. Let us trust Him.

Prayer.—Our Father, we sincerely desire that Thy kingdom may come and that we may be Thy people. We pray for justice to the poor and needy and that Thou wouldst lift us all up unto Thee. Forgive us of everything we have done wrong and grant us to live and reign with Thee. Exercise us unto an eternal faith which forbids us to stray or fail. Give us humble and believing hearts, so that in all our troubles and strife on earth we may live with Thee and taste Thy precious peace. Amen.

PUT IT BACK!

"Of the best of his own field, and of the best of his own vineyard, shall he make restitution."—Ex. 22:1-6.

This is the chapter of restitutions. Moses, the great law-giver, founded the world's civil law. When any damage had been done, he required that it should be made good. "Put it back as it was before!"

We should be more strict than we are in commanding all mischief to be repaired. Once a small boy was going through a street in Boston, tearing up a piece of paper till he had a handful of little bits, which he then tossed into the street. A policeman stopped him, told him he had broken a city ordinance, and stood by till the boy had hunted up every possible bit of paper that he had scattered.

We cannot always go after every bit of idle harm we do and put the matter back where it was before. Cruel words are swiftly passed from mouth to mouth and never can be quite gathered in. Harsh looks may poison the day for hundreds who see us, and we cannot go after them and put pleasant looks in their place. But as far as we can, we must make restitution.

Prayer.—Thou Judge of all the earth, make our consciences sensitive. May we correct our evil, and plant good seeds in place of the bad ones we have sown. Amen.

FRIDAY.

NERVOUS PROSTRATION.

"I was crushed far more than I could stand; so much so that I despaired even of life."—2 Cor. 1:8.

Paul must have been very bad off. And what made it dangerous was his despondency. To be so low in mind meant that he could not get well in body. But, if you will read on, he soon thought of divine power which is stronger than death, and he cast himself upon that power; then the body functioned and he kept on going.

Sometimes we are cowards. We go along whiling life away, tottering, despairing through the days while the power of God runs by the side of us like a river asking only to be used.

Let us try to do what we know to do and believe we can do, make contact with God. He will keep us until our work is done and then we will be glad.

Prayer.—Our Father, we pray that Thy kingdom may come to us; that Thy love and justice may come to us; and that Thy power may touch us. Acquit us and forgive us of our sins and give us humbler and believing hearts that we may taste thy peace and be exalted forevermore. Amen.

SATURDAY.

LIFE'S GREATEST PLEDGE.

"Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."—Matt. 28:20.

So long as we live and God lives, this pledge stands. But our greatest trouble is realizing—feeling—the presence of God. This fact is our supreme opportunity of showing our faith. It may be a dark, cloudy day. We can't see the sun, but we know it is there.

In the depths of sorrow, misfortune and the tragedies of life, we feel that God has forsaken us. It is not that God has left us that we feel that way, but that we are stunned into spiritual unconsciousness. It is like undergoing a surgical operation; we stretch out our hand to the friend by us and say, "Don't leave me, dear." Then everything fades away. Presently we awake darkly, and by our bed is the friend. When we awake clearly, the friend is still there and we thank them.

So the angel of God stands by us in life. Friends may die. Possessions may fly away. Honors may fade. Strength may fail and we may stand by many an open grave, but in the gathering form of it all there is one mighty sweet voice, saying, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee."

Prayer.—Dear Father, great Thou art and greatly to be praised. Thou art our refuge in darkness as in light, and Thou wilt establish Thy throne forever. Thou art in our midst. Give us a faith that completes our vision in whatever may come. Forgive us fully every day, and in the dark places be our safe guide, and may we be willing to trust Thy word, which is truth. Amen.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

Orphanage superintendents have discouragements as well as other people. One of our discouragements this spring is the Mexican bean beetle. This first made its appearance last year and destroyed our beans completely. We then planted peas instead and had green peas for the children to eat and they enjoyed them very much. We had hoped that we would have no beetles this year and planted our beans as usual, but beetles have come two to one this year over last year. We have tried different kinds of poison, but to no avail. They seem to thrive on poison dust and poison spray. If they would stop on the beans it would not be so bad, but they have gone to our field peas. It looks now that beans are a thing of the past with us and the children will miss them very much. But our wheat is looking fine, and if nothing happens we will have bread to eat. We also have fine Irish potatoes and cabbage, which make good food.

PIEDMONT SUMMER SCHOOL.

The Summer School of Christian Education at Piedmont, Jr., College, Wadley, Ala., is not quite a month in the future. The Wadley Christian Church and the Woman's Missionary Society are making it possible for all ministers and Churches to be represented without cost, except a registration fee of 50 cents. Now, don't that seem wonderful and ought we not to appreciate the arrangement? I do think that every Church in this section of every kind should send at the very least two of their young people to the school. Let every preacher, pastor or minister be there for the whole time. Churches, send your pastor—make it possible for him to attend and then insist on his going. Remember, the school precedes our revival season and it will mean so much to the pastor who attends. No pastor can afford to miss it; no Church can afford for him to do so. I am trying to be ready to attend and I am anxious to go. I need just what it will furnish; I need the inspiration to be obtained by a week of fellowship and study.

If our more mature minds could have been at the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention, they could very easily and readily see how the young minds of our boys and girls are reaching to higher things. All be ready for the School of Religious Education July 1st to 7th, Wadley, Ala. I hope to meet you there.

SUNDAY.

A HOLY DAY AND A HOLY SPIRIT.

"When He the Comforter is come."—John 14:26.

What is the Holy Spirit? It is that Spirit about us which tells us of the truth; tells us when a thing is wrong; purges the conscience, regenerates the soul, develops us better and better each day unto God-likeness. It is that something that shows the way by pointing to the right. It is that some thing that declares judgments and condemns wrong. As light to the mariner's compass, as wind to the soil, as oil to the lamp, as sap to the tree—so is the Holy Spirit to life. It is like the big spinning dynamo ready to be cut on. We are like the great house wired and equipped for the light and the power, but not yet hooked up. We must cut in the power.

Prayer.—Lord's Prayer, all the circle joining.

ELON NOTES.

President Harper left the college this morning for Chicago, where he will spend the summer in study at the university there. He is to continue the research work in religious education at the University of Chicago this summer which he began last summer at Columbia University. In addition to this research work in religious education, he will also carry on study in courses in college administration with a special emphasis on securing the viewpoint of the latest developments in this work in the different sections of the country.

Last summer the emphasis was on the viewpoint of the Eastern section as portrayed by Columbia University, and this year on the Middle Western section through the viewpoint of Chicago University. In future years President Harper plans to get the viewpoint of the other sections of the country by attending some university in California and in Louisiana.

Mrs. Harper accompanied President Harper to Chicago and will spend the summer in study at the American Conservatory of Music as a special student of Prof. Saenger, one of the most noted voice teachers in the country.

Two of the Elon professors are teachers in summer school—Dr. T. O. Amick teaching mathematics at the Asheville Normal, and Prof. O. W. Johnson teaching education at Appalachian Training School at Boone.

Quite a number of the Elon teachers are studying in the summer schools in their particular fields of work. Dr. W. S. Alexander will attend the Union Theological Seminary in New York; Prof. L. D. Martin is carrying on research work at State College and also at the State library at Raleigh; Prof. T. E. Powell and Dewey Mast are at Duke University, and Profs. T. E. White, W. M. Jay, M. W. Hook are at University of North Carolina.

The University of Virginia has two of the Elon teachers—Miss Mattie E. Brown and Miss Louise Savage.

Prof. S. A. Bennett will attend the University of Chicago; Prof. A. B. VanCleave, the University of Indiana, and Prof. R. B. Tower, Syracuse University, and Prof. and Mrs. C. J. Velie the Bush Conservatory of Music, and Mary Ann Benn, Columbia University.

Coach D. C. Walker is playing professional baseball at York, Pa., in the New York-Pennsylvania League. C. M. CANNON.

CLIMBING THE MISSIONARY LADDER.

Christ His only begotten Son, and it was Christ who established the Church as we now know it in its broadest sense, to include all Churches whose foundations are built on Him. It was the parting message, the greatest of all commissions of Christ to Peter and the disciples, and through them to us, at His ascension, "to go into all the world and preach the gospel," with the positive assurance that He would be with us unto the end. Dare we disobey that command, dare we fail to do our part, not reach our goals, and see the missionaries not supported, and to shirk and leave our duties and responsibilities on the shoulders of others! How can we face God in the great and final judgment and hear the awful sentence that "Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these ye did it not to me." The Church that is not a missionary Church is no Church of God; it is nothing more than a cold, self-satisfied, dead human organization, doing little or no good and making no progress. It can't be otherwise. That has been the history and final result of every so-called Church organization that has not been thoroughly possessed with the missionary spirit. The lack of a full realization of this fact was what came near causing the downfall of the Church at Jerusalem soon after Christ departed in body and made it necessary for Christ to call Paul to carry on the great work; and it was through Paul and Peter and Barnabas and others that the Church really started its great missionary work.

Few of us can go ourselves to answer this call—the call of humanity and the call of God—but we can go by sending money that supports those who can and will go. It is time we were realizing fully our duties in this matter, not as individuals but as Churches. It is time, as never before, for us to realize that it is not only the call of the heathen, of whom we know but little, and I am sorry to say for whom some of us seem to care but little; but it is the call of God to us to carry out His great commission. Shall we climb the missionary ladder until every Church in the Southern Christian Convention is a missionary Church, with its missionary organizations, and every minister has caught the real missionary spirit of the great commission? Our missionaries in every field, as well as the missionaries of other Churches, tell us that never before has the world been so eager for the gospel. These godly men and women who gave up all that was near and dear to them to answer the call of the Church and to go to the uttermost parts of the earth to preach the gospel are depending on us to help and support them in their great work to the full extent of our means. Shall we fail those who are crying for help? Shall we fail God? Then let us try to climb to the amazing heights of the missionary ladder and view the world in its need; let us not follow a narrow crevasse that shuts out our view of all but its unsightly stony sides. Let us stand out in the open space so that every step we take our view will broaden until we can see the best there is in nature and man. When our minds become that broad, we will have sympathy for every afflicted one, patience with those who err and a love for all mankind.

PERKINS.

Johnnie Willie Perkins, son of Charles Henry and Carry Lee Perkins, was born March 20, 1888, and died June 5, 1928, age 40 years, 2 months and 16 days. He is survived by his wife, who was Miss Garnett Long, and two children, Kathleen and William. His mother is living, together with five brothers and four sisters.

Bro. Perkins formerly lived in Danville, Va., where health failed him. About two years ago he came to the farm in quest of health and had settled near Liberty Christian Church, Halifax County, Va. Although a member of the M. E. Church, he attended and worked in Liberty. All who knew him bear witness to the sincerity of his life. One of the largest crowds ever assembled at Liberty Church attended the funeral of the deceased on the afternoon of June 6th, conducted by Rev. Berford, of the M. E. Church, and assisted by the writer. Burial was in the Church cemetery, with Masonic honors. The Church and community has lost a useful man. Our sympathy goes out the more to his family, to whom he meant so much. May the Lord give comforting grace.

TAYLOR.

Huldah Alice Taylor, daughter of William H. and Mary E. Taylor, was born March 28, 1878, and died May 15, 1928, age 50 years and 1 month and 17 days. About the age of fourteen she professed faith in Christ and united with Connally M. E. Church, but soon after transferred her membership to Lebanon Christian Church. She was educated in the public school of Semora and at Elon College. One brother, W. L. Taylor, survives the deceased, with whom she lived at the old home.

I have known Miss Huldah since about 1894, when we were in school at Elon. Have been her pastor for more than eleven years, and for the past two years boarded in the Taylor home. She was one of earth's best. Faithful in all the duties of life and loved by all who knew her. For the past two years her sufferings were intense at times, but while she suffered in body, her faith in the Lord strengthened. Her reward in heaven is great. The funeral was conducted at her Church on the afternoon of May 16th by the writer, assisted by the Rev. Claytor, of the Presbyterian Church. A large crowd of relatives and friends were present. The floral gifts were many and beautiful.

BETHLEHEM COLLEGE

WADLEY, ALABAMA

A JUNIOR COLLEGE AND HIGH SCHOOL.

Where Opportunity Awaits the Student of Very Limited Means.

GIRL'S DORMITORY.

Bethlehem College, Wadley, Ala., will open September 5, 1927. This institution is a Junior College and High School, which is co-educational, where scholarship ranks high and expense is low. It is thoroughly Christian, absolutely non-sectarian, and vitally American. A school where opportunity awaits the student of very limited means—$68.00 pays all college expenses, except books, board and room. Board, $15.00 per month, and room $3.00; total expenses for a term of nine months, $250.00.

Bethlehem College is training some of the best stock of America for Christian leadership, to be used by the nation and the world. Here is a great challenge and asset for students who wish to prepare themselves to serve in a worth-while way. The work on the new Administration Building is progressing nicely, and we will be able to begin our college work in this building when school opens this fall.

DR. HELFENSTEIN TO VISIT EUROPE.

By REV. H. C. TAYLOR.

Announcement was made at the services at People's Christian Church, Dover, Del., last Sunday by the pastor, Rev. R. C. Helfenstein, D. D., that He will spend his summer vacation in Europe, preaching in a number of the old historic Churches in Great Britain, filling important appointments made by the Council on Interchange of Preachers and Speakers Between the Churches of Great Britain and America. He is to preach in St. Peter's Church, London, also at Burnley, Lancashire, and at Norwich, England, and either in Glasgow or Edinburgh, Scotland.

Dr. Helfenstein spent the year 1913-14 in a graduate study in the University of Edinburgh, Scotland, and preached in a number of Churches in Scotland at that time. This trip will permit him to renew many old acquaintances among student friends. There are to be from twelve to fifteen other American ministers to preach in the principal Churches of Great Britain this summer under the auspices of the Interchange Council, and a similar number of British ministers are to come to America to speak in the leading American pulpits during the summer.

Three years ago, Dr. Helfenstein was a member of the Federal Council team of six men who toured the Pacific Coast on a four weeks' speaking itinerary in the interest of the Churches. Dr. Helfenstein will endeavor to have one of the British preachers visit Dover next summer and preach in People's Church.

The Council on Interchange has been rendering a great service in the interest of Anglo-American friendships and understanding. The council year-book of 1927 states: "During the past year, the influence of distinguished English speaking visitors in both countries has been most marked. Both countries now realize that the interchange movement, which operated through the medium of the Churches, is helping in a very real way to promote understanding, and hence friendly and cordial relations between two great English speaking nations. The Council on Interchange has introduced to British congregations and audiences such well-known preachers and speakers as Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, Dr. Charles E. Jefferson, Dr. Nehemiah Boynton, Bishop Charles Oldham, Dr. Lynn Harold Hough, Prof. William Adams Brown, Mr. Fred B. Smith, a world-known orator. Equally distinguished British preachers have similarly been introduced to American audiences by the council."

During the vacation month services will be held in People's Church each Sunday morning and evening as usual, it being the custom of this Church to have the regular services of worship and Sunday School each Sunday of the year.

YOUNG PEOPLE IN THE CHURCH.

Are you one of the many people in this good world who think there is little or no need whatsoever of young people in the Church? If that be true, I'm sure that a few of you will agree with me that young people do have a work in the Church and that the young people's work is a very important part of our daily life.

Do you not think that young people have their work in the various activities about the home? That being true, we certainly can use the young people in Church activities. To determine a few of the many ways in which young people may be of use to the Church, first, let us begin with prayer. What boy or girl cannot pray! We have all been taught how and why we should pray in earlier years.

The whole purpose of prayer is to change things that need changing. Prayer does us good. There is a subjective side to prayer, without doubt; tremendous, quite beyond calculation. And prayer has an objective value also, which means simply that it changes things in other lives that would not be changed otherwise.

Now for a bit of homely talk about how to pray, so as to change things that need changing, how to make sure that they will be changed, and changed every time. There need be no bill of exceptions in this court of prayer. I want to give a few homely suggestions about prayer. First, prayer needs time, daily time, quiet time, time when you are not too tired. You say, "When's that?" Well, when you aren't too tired. We must not make rules for others. Every life is its own battlefield, and every man must make his own rules and fight his own fight. But if you can get the morning hour quiet, with the door shut, yourself off alone, so much alone that you are not alone, that is victory. Prayer needs time.

Prayer needs a place. Oh, you can pray anywhere—on the train, nursing a baby, sweeping a floor, using a typewriter, measuring calico, dictating a letter—you can pray anywhere. But you aren't likely to. You are very unlikely to unless you have been off in the quiet place alone with Jesus. Jesus said, "Enter into thy inner chamber." When we are alone, we are not alone. The more alone we are, so far as men are concerned, the less alone we are so far as He is concerned.

There are a good many of us who never think about praying until we get in trouble; then we do not forget it. We should all pray at all times, whether in trouble or out.

Then give the Book its place in prayer. Prayer is not talking to God simply; it is listening—listening first, then talking. The fourth suggestion is this: Let the Teacher teach you. "Lord, teach me"—and He will.

What the world most needs is the spirit of friendliness. It is full of rancor and strife and bitterness. It needs a fountain flowing love. That is what every Christian Church should be. This brings to mind a second way in which young people could, if they only would, be of help in the Church. We can be friendly, lead the erring to Christ, and love all; helping them to come to Sunday School, Christian Endeavor, and Church. Do you not like to be treated in a friendly manner? So, treat others as you would like to be treated. It costs no more for us to treat people in a friendly way than it does to treat them with scorn.

Next, let us consider our righteousness. Who could say that it wasn't important! Our righteousness must be of the following sort: It must express itself in goodness. Righteousness which does not effloresce in goodness is a very bleak and dingy thing. We can certainly show and practice this in the Church.

Then there comes a time in the history of all the Churches when special committees must be appointed—a committee to help raise funds or to look after the pastor's salary. Haven't the young people a place on these committees? If the older people place you on these committees, take it with an "I'll do the best I can."

Where could there be a group of young people that did not yearn for an organization of their own? One that they are capable of taking part in. The Christian Endeavor affords this, and indeed we must have programs. Take your part, do your duty and all the people will be proud of you. Don't say, "I can't." Take it, do the best you can, for is it not your organization and your work as much as any one's?

The Sunday School is one of the best places for young people to take part in. They not only learn of the teachings of Jesus Christ, but also how they may be of service in later life. It brings us into the friendship of those who really know about Christ, and can teach us. We can learn, practice, and probably teach others what we have been taught.

What could afford greater opportunities than the missionary society? You may say that you hear missions preached until you are truly sick of the word. But, listen, think of those who have given their lives for the cause. Do you think you could do as great a service as they? You may not go across the waters to serve the Lord, but certainly you can go in purse and prayer. We can also be missionaries at home. We can certainly do some of the good, true things that are put into our heart to do.

It costs a lot to be loyal to the truth; but it costs a lot not to be. When one faces the hardships of life, he must remember that it costs more to be right than wrong because it is worth more.

"The very life of the Church depends upon her faithfulness in fulfilling the Lord's commission."

"Every man, woman and child in heathen darkness is a challenge to the Church.—S. Earl Taylor.

Rev. E. Carl Brady changes his address from Elon College, N. C., to 701 Roxboro Street, Durham, N. C.

The Young People's Summer School is being held this week at Elon College. A full report is expected for next issue of THE SUN.

Two great dates should be kept in mind—the one the date of the Reformation, the other the date of the Declaration of Independence. The former refers to the Church, the latter to government.

A good brother, sending a personal donation for missions, says very truly: "It seems to me that this is a most worthy cause and one we ought to support more freely." That brother spoke a parable!

"In Matthew we find the authority of the King; in Mark the obedience of the servant; in Luke the sympathy of the man; in John the duty of the son." And so we see Him as King, Servant, Man, God; but to know Him, one must experience His presence and power in the heart.

Think of a denomination smaller in numbers than our own raising on one Sabbath in its Sabbath Schools, $93,000 for foreign missions! If all our Sabbath Schools were to raise one-tenth that amount in a whole year we would rejoice indeed. But we Christians haven't learned to give to missions yet.

Rev. C. E. Gerringer, pastor, writes: "Please announce through THE SUN that a home-coming day will be held at Burton's Grove Christian Church on July 1st, with two services and dinner. This is the forty-sixth anniversary, and all former pastors, members and friends are invited to come and enjoy the day with us."

Bro. W. B. Truitt, of Greensboro, was re-elected president, and Rev. J. F. Apple, Elon College, associate president of the North Carolina and Virginia Christian Endeavor and Sunday School Convention, in session at Durham, N. C., last week. The next session of the convention is to be held at Happy Home, Rockingham County, N. C.

Rev. D. D. Nash and son, D. D. Nash, Jr., of Hopewell, Va., paid THE SUN office a brief but welcome visit the past week. He reports an increase of some thirty members to the Sunday School and additions to the Church since moving into their new building. Mr. and Mrs. Sam Davis are now conducting revival services in the Church and the attendance upon the services is very encouraging to the pastor.

Rev. R. C. Helfenstein, D. D., pastor of Dover, Del., Christian Church, is to spend his summer vacation in Europe. Dr. Helfenstein is to preach while in Europe under appointments made by the Council of Interchange of Preachers and Speakers between the Churches of Great Britain and America." He will preach in St. Peter's Church, London; also Burnley, Lancashire and at Norwich, and either in Glasgow or Edinburgh, Scotland.

The Young People's Summer School is in session at Elon College this week, and this is to be followed by the one at Bethlehem, Wadley, Ala., July 1-7. These are great occasions and should mean much in the life of the young men and young women of the Churches.

Rev. J. F. Morgan, Route 3, Norfolk, Va., has been assisting Rev. M. T. Sorrell the past week in evangelistic meetings at our Danville Church. Results of the meeting have not been reported, but Bro. Morgan is a successful evangelist as well as a beloved pastor, and good results usually follow his efforts.

We note with pleasure that Defiance College, at its recent commencement, conferred upon Rev. H. Shelton Smith, a graduate of Elon College, the degree of doctor of divinity. Dr. Smith now has work with the International Council of Religious Education. We congratulate him on the high honor thus conferred.

Bro. W. R. Brown, secretary and treasurer of Union Grove Church, Western North Carolina, sends $25.64 mission offering from Union Grove. This puts that Church well over the top in its quota, and the offering is much appreciated. Bro. Brown adds that which many others are saying as they take and send in the offering: "May God add His blessings to the offering and to the good work."

Rev. Fred D. Ballard, formerly pastor at Henderson, N. C., and who has spent the past year at Vanderbilt Theological Seminary, Nashville, Tenn., is working in Eastern Virginia in behalf of our mission offering. He is trying to assist where his services are needed and to give individuals a chance of making a contribution who haven't had that opportunity. We know the pastors and the friends in Eastern Virginia will assist him in every possible way.

If any pastor has failed to take the missionary offering on any account, we trust he will give his people the opportunity of making a contribution to this needy and worthy cause at the earliest possible date. June closes the mission period, but some pastors have written that they were forced to delay taking the offering on account of being very late in taking the college offering. We want to make it unanimous and report every Church in THE CHRISTIAN SUN as taking the missionary offering.

Rev. R. A. Whitten has resigned the pastorate of Reidsville Christian Church, to take effect July 1st. Bro. Whitten has made a very faithful and beloved pastor at Reidsville, and the people there give him up with reluctance. He becomes college representative for Elon College and moves, with his family, to the college early in July and will give all of his time to field work for the college. Bro. Whitten is a man of energy and ability and will represent the college well. We wish for him all success in the field to which he has been chosen.

The following will be of interest to many SUN readers: Mr. A. J. Cotten requests the honor of your presence at the marriage of his daughter, Della Lee, to Rev. W. T. Scott, on Friday P. M., June 29, 1928, at 8:30 o'clock, First Christian Church, Greensboro, N. C. At home First Congregational Church, Chikasha, Okla. Miss Cotten and Rev. W. T. Scott are both graduates of Elon College and have many friends who will join us in wishing them long life and much happiness all along the way.

President W. A. Harper, who is spending the summer studying in Chicago University, writes recently, saying: "I am thoroughly enjoying my work under Dean Matthews and Profs. Soares, Bower and Edwards. I hope to get new insight in the problems that face us at Elon." Mrs. Harper is with him and is taking special lessons in voice. Here is hoping for both a happy and profitable summer.

This is the season of Sunday School and Christian Endeavor conventions and the gathering of young people of the Church for study, fellowship and inspiration. The Western North Carolina Sunday School Convention and the North Carolina and Virginia have both been held the past two weeks, and the Eastern Carolina is to hold its annual session at Catawba Springs, Wake County, July 10th and 11th.

Rev. P. T. Klapp, a former pastor, was at Parks Cross Roads Sunday, June 17th, in behalf of our mission work. Bro. Klapp was glad to greet again many friends of former days and to speak on a cause so near and dear to his heart. A good audience was present and seemed to be attentive to the message. An offering was taken for missions and the response was liberal, going over its quota. Bro. Klapp enjoyed the service very much and all felt that a good day was spent in the service of the Church and the Lord. Rev. J. C. Cummings is the beloved pastor and is held in high esteem. Bro. Klapp is very generously assisting the Mission Secretary in these days, and this is appreciated beyond words, especially since our own voice has gone out of commission and we are not allowed to speak in public for the time being. We feel grateful beyond words to Bro. Klapp and to any one who will help now in this time of need for our mission work. Bro. Klapp is certainly rendering faithful service.

The "Church Bulletin," with the Sunday program for June 17th, Rev. John G. Truitt, pastor, carries on its third page the following very interesting comment, it being the day on which the mission offering was taken: "And let us each try to catch the real spirit of service to others just before we plan good pleasures for ourselves. We will be much happier. The Heavenly Father will bless us more, and we will feel like we are helping in making Jesus Christ known to all peoples. A number of people are urged to make real, sacrificial gifts today to the cause of missions. If you have not the ready money, and can get it before July 1st, put your pledge on the envelope and turn it in. Jesus Himself will be in the efforts you make to give His message to others. He has said, 'Go . . . and lo, I am with you.' While we cannot go, we certainly can help others to go. Our denomination does all too little of this. Our Church does fine itself, but that is such a comparatively small part of what the whole denomination should do. Let us each do our part today, and trust God to make our example a great blessing to others. I am proud of my Church and I wish to be prouder of it tonight as I finish this day's work than ever before in my five years here."

There come to the desk of THE SUN's editor many personal letters which make the heart glad because they reflect a spirit of appreciation, gratitude and loyalty that is exceedingly refreshing. One such letter, never intended for print, is before us now and we cannot resist the temptation of letting others share its fine Christian fellowship with us: "Dear Dr. Atkinson,—We are sending you five dollars for missions. Our hearts have been made sad when we had word of the conditions of our missions; and although we were unable to attend our Church on the day of the collection and

Bro. Klapp's visit, we are sending our mite. You can credit Shiloh Church with this. I feel sure God's children will not fail in this crisis—will not fail their Saviour's call. People do not know what need there is. They need some one to tell them. So many do not read THE SUN, and many pastors fail in this one thing. We couldn't do without THE CHRISTIAN SUN now. It's all the Church service we have, and what a comfort it is to us! My husband is an invalid and has not for nearly two years been able to attend Church. I, of course, can't go and leave him, but we have a wonderful sermon each week and so many other good things that come to us from the best paper we ever have read. I can't remember when it didn't come to our home. My father was taking it when I learned to read, and now we are blessed each week by its visits doubly. May the good Lord bless you and give you strength to carry on. Pray for us. Sincerely, S. A. H., Seagrove, N. C."

A faithful superintendent of one of our rural Sunday Schools told the Mission Secretary at the Durham convention last week that when it was proposed to take one offering a month for the Orphanage in his Sunday School, they did not feel like they could spare the money, since it required all four offerings a month to run the school. However, a motion to give the offering carried. Then in a few months the proposition was made to the school to give, in addition, a once-a-month offering to missions. There were many who felt that this was going entirely too far and that they would soon have the school in debt. However, the majority voted, in faith, that the offering should be taken. "From that day till this," declared this faithful superintendent, "the school has never lacked for funds from the two offerings a month which it kept for itself to pay its current expenses, and the school has more money in its treasury today, after trying this experiment for years, than it ever had in the old days when it kept all the offering for itself." Yet, sad to say, there are many of our schools who have not the faith, or the loyalty, to try even to give anything to others, and so keep spending on themselves all the offering that they take. Such schools are not giving anything to the Lord. They are taking the money they get in the collection and spending it upon themselves. With the universal testimony of the schools who have tried, we cannot understand why all of our schools do not willingly and gladly give one offering a month to missions and one offering a month to the Orphanage. It has never yet hurt a school, and it certainly has helped hundreds.

The North Carolina and Virginia Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention was held in our Durham Christian Church Thursday and Friday of last week. Bro. W. B. Truitt, president, Greensboro, N. C., and his capable associates did efficient work in presenting an attractive program and in bringing together a splendid delegation from the various schools and societies. Most of the Churches were represented by delegates who were seeking information and inspiration for their local schools and societies. Bro. Truitt's address as president was very practical and pointed and gave his large audience real food for thought and deed. The State convention was ably represented in the person of Miss Davis, who made a very fine address. Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, pastor of the local Church, made a splendid address on "The Church Serving," in which it was emphasized that unless the Church rendered service beyond its own doors, it did not fulfill the place appointed of the Lord. Bro. Harrell contended that the object of the Church was to train men and women, young and old, for service, and the field of that service should have no bounds or limitations. The Mission Secretary was permitted to present a paper on "Putting Missions in the Sunday School," in which it was contended that the Sunday School needed the challenge of missions and of world-wide evangelization as a proper objective. The Sunday School may become selfish as an individual may, and unless some efforts are made to save the Sunday School from itself and to direct its thought and attention to bigger things than itself, it would become self-centered and accomplish little in the world. The group discussions for workers in the Sunday School, in the children's department and young people's department and the adult division were all exceedingly wholesome and helpful. This Sunday School convention has but recently been reorganized, and under the very capable and consecrated leadership of Bro. Truitt, it is showing vitality and vigor of youth and is growing in influence and power.

NOTICE.

The Eastern North Carolina Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention will hold its session July 10th and 11th with the Catawba Springs Sunday School. It is the desire of the Convention to have a report from every Sunday School in the Conference, also a report from all Christian Endeavor Societies.

Mr. Harold W. Johnson, Fuquay Springs, N. C., is corresponding secretary and will mail you report blanks. If for any reason you do not receive one by the 25th of June, please write him and ask that one be sent you.

We hope to establish an honor roll, and for a Sunday School to get on the honor roll they must mail in to the corresponding secretary the report from their Sunday School not later than the 8th of July.

Elect your delegates to the Convention and urge your secretary to send in report, so that we may have the best Convention ever.

DAMASCUS.

The Lord is blessing us here at Damascus. The Church has taken on new life under the capable leadership of our pastor, Rev. E. B. White, of Dendron, Va. Bro. White is a preacher of power and influence, and everybody likes him. We have a splendid Sunday School, under the able leadership of Bro. J. P. Corbitt. Our young people have a very active Young People's Missionary Society. They always have an inspiring program. The Woman's Missionary Society is progressing splendidly.

Our people want a new Church, and have appointed a building committee, and this committee has gone to work. We hope to have our revival some time in August. A capacity crowd heard Bro. White Sunday night. He delivered a stirring message on "The Duty of Christian Citizenship." It was a patriotic sermon and enjoyed by all.

MRS. A. H.

BEREA.

The first Sunday in June was a great day for the good folks at Berea (Alamance).—home-coming, memorial and children's day were all combined. The morning exercise was given over to the children, who rendered a fine program. This service was under the direction of Mrs. B. M. Bennett and Miss Frona Taylor. The performance of the children clearly proved that much pains and drill had been given them for the occasion. There was present for the morning service an orchestra from Burlington, which furnished great music for the occasion. In spite of the fact that the day was rainy and disagreeable, the house was filled to its capacity. There was also present and added much to the occasion the female quartet from Bethlehem Christian Church. These girls also furnished music for the afternoon service. The showers held up for a while at noon and a delightful dinner was spread underneath the oaks on the grounds, and every one was sufficiently served. A great dinner it was! It was around this that old acquaintance was renewed, old friends clasped hands and old times were discussed.

In the afternoon, Rev. D. P. Barrett and wife were with us and gave us an account of the work in Porto Rico, which was greatly appreciated and received with profit. Bro. Barrett first gave a description of the island, then gave us some of the island's needs from a religious standpoint, and mentioned the responsibility that was upon the Christian Church in giving these people the gospel. The first Sunday in July Rev. C. C. Ryan is to begin a series of revival services with us. We desire the prayers of all the brotherhood, that God will honor the Church with a great revival.

ELON NOTES.

Several changes in the personnel of the faculty of Elon College have been announced. Prof. W. J. Cotten, after many faithful years of service, has resigned from the department of French in the college, and Dr. Cephas Guillet has been chosen as his successor. Dr. Guillet is the author of "An Oral French Grammar," published by the University Press, Alfred, N. Y. He holds the Ph. D. degree from Clark University, and in addition has studied in Columbia and John Hopkins Universities.

Miss Florence Fisher, after many years of faithful service in Elon, resigned as head of the voice department, and Miss Mary Ann Benn has been chosen as her successor. Miss Benn is a graduate of Chicora College, Columbia, S. C., and of Columbia University. She has had special work with Mr. Dudley Buck and Mrs. Catherine Bellamann. Miss Benn has held Church positions and has had a very satisfactory teaching experience in New York City. She is talented not only in voice, but in the teaching of public school music.

Miss Emily Johnston is succeeded in the department of expression and physical education for women by Miss Jeanette Stout. Miss Stout was graduated in expression in Elon College two years ago and went immediately to the King's School of Oratory, Pittsburgh, Pa., for graduate work in her department. She has spent two years there and holds the B. O. degree. Miss Stout has also studied in the University of Pittsburgh during the past two years.

Mr. David Brown Harrell, a very talented pianist and organist, a member of the Elon class of 1928, majoring in music during his college course, has been chosen as assistant to Prof. Velie in the department of music.

C. M. CANNON.

The conference of representatives of the Congregational and Disciples of Christ Churches in New York, held at Syracuse, approved the establishment of a closer relationship between the two denominations and named a committee to study plans for an organized fellowship. Nationally the Congregational Church has plans well under way for a union with the Christian Church. Dr. Chas. Emerson Burton, general secretary of the Congregational National Council, said that the next step in Church union would be the Methodist Episcopal bodies to unite, for the different Presbyterian denominations to join together and for the "congregationally governed" Churches to unite, including Congregationalist, Baptist, Universalist and Christian Churches.—Methodist Protestant.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE LIVING WORD.

If one is looking for a miracle in our day, one need not go far. We have it right here with us on our desk, in our homes, in our pockets. The Bible itself is a miracle. The International Dictionary defines a miracle as "A wonder or a wonderful thing; a marvel. Specifically, an event or effect in the physical world beyond or out of the ordinary course of things, deviating from the known laws of nature, or transcending our knowledge of these laws." We submit that the Bible is a Book which measures up to all the demands and requirements of the definition of a miracle. There is nothing else like it in wonder, neither can any of the laws of mankind account for its mystery, its majesty and its might. Much of it more than 2,000 years old; all of it dating back into the centuries, it gains instead of loses in popularity, prestige and power. There were more Bibles printed and sold last year than ever before; and in all human probability there will be more of them printed and sold this year than in any previous year of its existence. Nor is this all.

The greatest legal lights turn to it for ideals and examples of the highest type of moral and civil law and of jurisprudence.

Statesmen turn to it to find their sublimest expressions of statecraft, examples of statesmen and of heroes whose names do not waste with time. Poets and singers turn to it for the noblest expressions of the poetic and musical art. Philosophers find in it deeper truths and a wider sweep of philosophic information and profound thinking than ever Plato conceived or Aristotle taught. Public speakers in the forum, on the hustings, or in the pulpit reach their sublimest expressions of eloquence and oratory as they unfold or flash before their audiences rich treasures from the marvelous teachings of the Book. It has been pointed out that every truly great oration delivered in the tongue and language of Christendom since the days when Peter preached his famous sermon at Pentecost has been modeled after, but none have ever surpassed that perfect example of logical and persuasive oratory. Patrick Henry, who stirred the lethargic spirit of the colonists into a flame of passion and power with his "Give me liberty or give me death," modeled that great speech after the model of Peter's pentecostal sermon, when 3,000 were converted. We are told that William E. Gladstone, the "grand old man of England," who swayed the mightiest parliament on earth with many of his passionate outbursts of eloquence and power, modeled his speeches after that of Peter's pentecostal sermon. We are told that William Jennings Bryan, in his famous "crown of gold speech" through which he made himself famous for a lifetime, followed without deviation every point and principle used by Peter in preaching on the Day of Pentecost.

But we need not turn to these famous folks and utterances to prove the marvel and the miracle of the Book. Go into the palace of the rich or the hovel of the poor and you will find people there, and in every walk of life, drawing inspiration, drinking deep at the fountain of life as they find it revealed to them in this Book of books.

It was no surprising thing that that Christian statesman the Governor of North Carolina, in delivering his commencement address before the graduates and visitors of Elon College at its recent commencement, used as his topic the theme this Book of books. All of us recall that the late, lamented Governor Bickett of North Carolina used Bible quotations frequently in his great State papers; and in his public utterances showed a familiarity with the teachings of the Book by bringing from its storehouse things new and old for the people of this Commonwealth.

Governor McLean stressed a point in his great address to which it is desired to call especial attention: "While written by means of learning," declared the Governor, "it was not given as a literary masterpiece, but as the soul's guidebook, pointing the way to spiritual truths. It will never become old or obsolete; its lessons are vital to every human being on the face of the earth. It contains a message to every class, to every individual. None becomes so exalted that he does not need it in his daily life; none sinks so low in sin and despair that it cannot lift him up and place his feet on the sure foundation of eternal truth. It is not a textbook on science or geography, but a divine revelation of spiritual things. It has been the mainstay of true civilization since first given to man; and when other writings have been forgotten, its truths will stand out in bold relief against the background of all time."

All other books suffer in comparison with the Bible in this respect. We repeat that if any in our materialistic time are doubting the miracles, or wish to see a miracle, we point them to the Bible. It is a miracle that cannot be accounted for by any natural law; it is God's living Word spoken to the heart and the soul of man.

ATTACKING EIGHTEENTH AMENDMENT.

It is announced in the press that the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, a powerful organization with unlimited funds back of it, has changed its policy. Heretofore it has directed its effort to seeking to modify the Volstead act. Finding that the people stand against such modification, the association now announces that its policy will be to attack the "lion in his den"—that is to say, will devote itself hereafter to securing the repeal of the eighteenth amendment. Possibly, it has been led to this change of front by the supposed prestige and popularity of Governor Al. Smith of New York, whose entire public record, from the time he entered politics as a product of Tammany Hall down to this good hour, has been that of a champion of the saloon and of the liquor interests, against the school, the Church and every form of local option and prohibition. Emboldened by the popularity of a man whose name is identified with the saloon and the liquor interests, the association now turns its batteries against the constitutional amendment for which the moral forces of this country fought valiantly through many years, and which amendment was enacted by a larger majority than any other amendment ever voted upon. This seems almost like blasting at the Rock of Ages. And while the association, with its wet propaganda and unlimited funds, will be able to raise much noise and create much alarm, here is predicting that their attack on the eighteenth amendment will be even more futile than that on the Volstead act. The moral forces of this country have spoken, and they are speaking in no uncertain terms, and while prohibition has, by no means, accomplished what its advocates hoped it would accomplish, it has not been on the statute books and a part of our laws long enough to be tried and tested to its full strength. We take hope and courage in the thought that the wheels of morality in an advancing civilization do not revolve backward. Let the association against prohibition do its worst, for as the noted humorist and philosopher Will Rogers said in an address recently: "Thus far, the Constitution of the United States has shown itself to be fool-proof." Verily, the advocates of liquor and the liquor interests are never idle.

CHRISTIAN CIVILIZATION.

The implications of Christian civilization embrace every phase of human activities in the progress of the world. So many of the interests of mankind have been created by the forces of Christianity and expanded into universal use that it puts a burden on the Church and the State to prevent the abuse of the great educational, industrial, governmental and social institutions that contain the weal or woe of the world. The greatest danger is in the field of the greatest success. Thieves and robbers are increased by the increase of wealth. When there is nothing to steal, there is nothing to tempt one that might become a thief. When Eve saw that the fruit was "good for food and pleasant to the eye and would make one wise," she took and ate and gave to her husband, and he did eat." Sin is the abuse of good in disobedience to God's Word. The temptations have been increased by the great progress which Christian civilization has made. It has increased the attractions and avenues for temptation and multiplied the opportunities for yielding to temptation.

It is more difficult to live a Christian life now, in harmony with the light of this age, than it was in more primitive times. There are more fatal accidents on the highways today than when the roads were bad and the means of travel crude. Every step of progress increases danger, and the increase of wealth increases dependents on society. The contrast seems to create a sense of want. It is the same in all fields. Widespread temperance conditions magnify the cases of drinking and the sale of intoxicants. A good road makes a bad road look worse, and a good man makes a bad man look worse.

One danger to Christianity is putting trust in the products of Christianity rather than in Jesus Christ, the Author and Founder of Christianity. So many trust in education, better sanitary conditions, better housing, recreational agencies, clubs and orders, that Christ is left out of the equation in trying to solve the problems of character and life; just as the children of the rich trust in what their parents have accumulated instead of using the same industry, self-control and judgment that brought these means within their reach. Such a life is a parasite on society, furnishes no good example for others, and adds nothing to his generation. Society is at its best when it is simple, Christ-like, humble in spirit and co-operative in the welfare of all.

There are many reactions in modern civilization that threaten the future progress of mankind. Self-indulgence, self-importance, greed, dress and a lack of reverence in sacred places. Parents turn over the care and training of their children to organized agencies as schools, welfare leaders, Sunday School, instead of making home the real spring of the purest and best in society.

OFFICIAL NOTICE.

The recent session of the Southern Christian Convention, held in Richmond, changed the method of financing Elon College, and this makes necessary this official announcement. The college is permitted to raise $24,000 by quarterly offerings voluntarily taken in Sunday Schools and through approaches to individuals of Churches at any time during the year.

At the May session of the board of trustees, in my report, I recommended that the Finance Board of the Convention and the officials of the several Conferences be requested to co-operate with me in determining goals for Conferences and for the Churches in Conferences. These officials have heartily complied with this request.

The goals for the Conferences are the same as the apportionment of the $25,000 to the Conferences by the Convention for its own purposes. To the individual Church, the goals are, roughly speaking, one-half of what they were for the past two years.

Let this word of caution be spoken: That these goals are in no sense apportionments, but objectives, and that they are to be raised, if at all, through the voluntary offerings of Sunday Schools quarterly and through the gifts of individual members of Churches. Also the local Church may use its own method of attaining these goals. The college, however, will be willing to render any assistance possible in co-operation with pastors and local leaders, and for this purpose the administrative committee of the board of trustees has chosen Rev. R. A. Whitten as official representative to assist me in any service we may be able to render pastors and local Churches in this direction.

I feel sure that our brotherhood understands the absolute necessity of raising this money for our colleges. For the past two years the money necessary to keep the college in the Southern Association of Colleges has been raised, and Elon has been able to close these two years without deficit. It is earnestly hoped and prayed that a genuine response on the part of the brotherhood in terms of the new method of financing will yield equally happy results.

Rev. R. A. Whitten begins his work as representative of the college on July 1st. He may be addressed at Elon College, N. C.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

Any Christian Church looking for a good, consecrated pastor of much more than ordinary ability can find the man in a personal friend of mine who has recently united with the Christian Church. He is a man of forty-seven years of age, has had twenty years of unusually successful experience in pastoral service, having been pastor of Churches with a membership of from four hundred to six hundred members during that time. He has had excellent training for the work of the ministry. He holds the B. A. and the M. A. degrees from one of the strongest colleges in the East and has taken special theological study in one of the leading seminaries. He has an evangelistic temperament, is deeply spiritual, a leader in the work of religious education, progressive-minded, sociable and a tireless worker and has excellent health. He has a family of wife and three splendid children, his wife also being a college graduate and an expert in children's work.

Any Church that secures his services will be most fortunate. If interested, write me and I will put you in touch with this loyal and able servant of God.

Sincerely,

ROY C. HELFENSTEIN.

LOVE AND LIVING.

My brother Church-worker, have we ever stopped to think how far we are living from God? In this fast time in which we are living, I think we Church-workers are living so fast that we have forgotten that there is a God that rules over us. My Christian friends, the time is fast coming when God will remind us of our fast living. We are living so fast that we have forgotten to love our brother in the Church. "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have everlasting life." We wonder sometimes what is the matter with our Church. Today it seems to me that it is powerless. God has never made His Church powerless. I want to tell you what makes our Church powerless. We are taking part with the devil. When the devil steps in, God steps out. The reason why I say we are taking sides with the devil is the fact that we try to do Church work and hold malice in our hearts against our brothers. If we can't love our brothers whom we have seen, how can we love our Father whom we have not seen? My Christian friends, if it were not necessary to love our brother, God would not have said, "Love fulfills the whole law." Love is the greatest thing on earth. Love makes you love your enemy. Love makes you pray for your enemy. Love will conquer your enemy. Love will close the jail-house. Love will stop all killing that is going on over our land. If love has all of this power, why don't we people who claim to be followers of Thee, use this great power in our lives? This is the way God has lined out for us, and if we don't accept it we will be lost.

YOUNG PEOPLE IN THE CHURCH.

Any good thing costs more than any poor thing. Jesus paid the highest price for a true life of any one who ever lived, but Jesus also gained the highest prize of any one that ever lived.

Some of these times when you see fellows who have an "easy come and easy go" sort of a time, you can just remember that they are going to get a cheap life because they are going to get what they pay for. And again, when you see the fellow that digs when he might be going to a show or on a "joy ride," you may know that he is paying a price, but he is going to get something for the price. You will get what you pay for in life, and if you will not pay much, you will get a cheap life.

Charles M. Schwab, the great millionaire manufacturer, surely knows the worth of money, but when he was recently asked what was the greatest reward of life, he replied that it was in having friends and feeling that your life was useful.

As we know, life is made up of choices. We choose to go to Sunday School or we choose not to. We choose to stay to Church or to go home. And tomorrow we will choose to work or go to college, or to do this right or to do that wrong; and after while the life we have will have been made up of the sum of all these choices and their consequences on our lives.

But there are some choices which are greater than others. For instance, if you choose to be a missionary or to be a bookkeeper, of course, you should always have Jesus in your life, no matter what you do. The supreme choice of all life and the choice which influences all other choices is whether your life will be lived after the pattern of the unselfish life of Jesus Christ or whether you will selfishly do what Aaron Burr said when this great decision or choice came to him. He said, "I will run my own life," and you know where it ran to. David Livingstone said that he counted nothing that he had as his own, and his great decision was that Christ should use it all.

There is an old song which says that it is easy enough to be happy when life rolls on like a song, but the man worth while is the man who can smile when everything goes dead wrong. Why can't the young people develop such an attitude that no matter what their life-work may be or even now, that they can be of service even "in a smile."

There is a story of a soldier boy who had been severely wounded in battle and was carried unconscious to the hospital where his arm was amputated. When he became conscious, he asked the nurse what had happened and she tearfully told the fine young man that he had lost his right arm. She was astonished to see the smile that came over his face, and she asked him why he smiled at that. He replied: "I offered my whole body and my whole soul and my whole life to my country, and they only took my arm."

In recent years we have heard much of efficiency in production. "Increase production" has been our slogan in almost every branch of industry as well as every phase of activity. We have felt that economically the situation would be solved if we could sufficiently increase our production. The past fifteen years have taught us that we must look for the highest satisfaction in some other direction.

Boys and girls of today certainly have plenty of amusements to keep them interested and busy, but how could we have too much to neglect our Church work. Let us work faithfully, keeping in mind that "There is work for all, whether great or small."

The most wonderful thing about our religion is that it is a way of life, a power within, a dear and real companionship, a walking with Christ, the possession of a "life with Christ in God." Here is the joy and glory of the Christian faith: that it gives us life, a vital experience, a fellowship with God, a friendship deepening with years, "Christ in us, the hope of glory."

There are a great many people in this world who are too willing to accept the statements made by other people; instead of really seeking the truth for themselves. The Church needs the young people. Let us give our service.

We need more men and women of our laity who will take the time and effort to learn the truth from the proper sources about the world conditions. We need more men and women in our Churches who will lead out in shaping the thought of their fellow-Church members because of their own convictions based on their own careful study. Be a Christian student of world conditions.

And now, young people, may we all keep in mind this creed:

"I would be true, for there are those who trust me;
I would be pure, for there are those who care;
I would be strong, for there is much to suffer;
I would be brave, for there is much to dare.
I would be friend to all—the foe, the friendless;
I would be giving and forget the gift;
I would be humble, for I know my weakness;
I would look up, and laugh, and love, and lift."

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Unity produces strength; the lack of unity produces weakness. The stability and beauty of the universe is in its unity, the coherence of its parts. The invisible force that binds all together is gravity. That force makes every particle of matter tend toward every other particle of matter. It affects not only the least particles of matter, but the greatest masses of matter. The same force that makes the particles of iron or wood cling to each other makes the world hold on to the sun. The universe is held together by the same force that holds the particles of a stone together. If particles are separated from other particles beyond the range of attraction, the mass is destroyed. If it were possible for this world to be separated from the sun beyond the range of this law of gravity, the world would be destroyed and all that is in it. There are other forces beside the force of gravity, and these forces operate under similar laws, which may be called mechanical forces. A wheel is composed of hub, spokes, and felloes, and these are held together by mechanical force; but if one spoke in the wheel is too short and the vehicle continues to run, it will ruin the wheel. The wheel is at its best when all the parts are performing their part of bearing the load and going along the right road. This is a wheel age, as the Bible puts it: "Their appearance and their work was as it were a wheel in the middle of a wheel" (Ezek. 1:16). The world is certainly on wheels today, and one of the great jobs is to keep the wheels in working order. The defect in one spoke, in one part of a wheel, may wreck the car or the train.

The Church is a great organization and the great force in it is not gravitation, but the invisible spirit of Jesus Christ who "giveth life to the world." He controls not only the largest but the least in the kingdom. If one spoke in a wheel can weaken the wheel and finally cause it to fail, then one member of the Church who is too short in service may cripple the work of the whole Church. Here again is not only the work of the invisible Spirit—that great Power that controls all—but the human forces that act under human direction and human wisdom. People must work in harmony with the Spirit as mechanical forces work in harmony with gravity.

A spoke out is even worse than a spoke short. Mechanics look after the absent or the short spoke. That suggests that the Church should look after the members who are short in payment of dues, in attendance, in real interest in the work of the Church. The best members cannot do their best work until the worst members are improved; and there are a lot of loose spokes in the gospel wheels of the Church. There is nothing more beautiful than a machine working when all its parts are in working condition. And there is nothing so sweet as a Church working in harmony for the glory of God and the salvation of men. A small particle of dust in a watch will prevent the keeping of time, and a small bad feeling in a Church will prevent true worship and work.

ELON LETTER.

GREETINGS TO ELON SUMMER SCHOOL.

Again I am not privileged to be present and bring a word of greeting in person to the Chautauqua and Summer School of Christian Methods, but I am glad to be able, through Dean Hook, to speak this word of greeting to each and every one.

I trust that you will enjoy to the full the days that will be spent on the Elon campus. Elon is your college, and as members of the Christian Church and those interested in its development and welfare, on behalf of your college I extend cordial greetings.

If any official of the college can render you any service in any way, it will be their pleasure to be called upon. We hope you will let your wants and wishes be known.

This year, as I understand it, the program committee has made special provision for young people in the summer school. Elon College was founded and exists to serve the life of young people and promote their highest interests. It is, therefore, a peculiar pleasure to your college to have you come in the days of your youth to visit her campus, and it will be a genuine pleasure to your college to welcome you as regular students later during the college term.

Of course, the older ones—fathers and mothers, and pastors, and Sunday School and Church officers—are welcome always. Wherever young people are, we are glad to have these older ones, too. They have made Elon possible by their sacrifice, their devotion, their loyalty. It is a real pleasure to welcome every one.

I would bring earnestly to your attention at this time the strategic importance of this summer school in the future of the Christian Church. It will mean everything to our Church if those of us who are privileged to come to this summer school get a new vision of our duty and a larger preparation for our opportunities of service, and if we will then devote ourselves in full consecration to the work of the kingdom in our local community. I feel sure that every one of you has come with this high purpose as the motive principle of your presence here, and confident as I am of this high purpose of yours, I feel that the future leadership of our Church is to be in safe hands.

Not only is it a matter of regret to me that I am not privileged to be present at our summer school, but it is a matter of deep regret to the members of the faculty here that they are not privileged to share the uplifting and inspiring experiences of the summer school. Coming at the time it does, it is impossible for faculty members to mingle with you and to enjoy the fellowship and the inspiration of this occasion. This is a matter of deep regret to us all.

Again assuring you of our joy to welcome you, and wishing for you, each and every one, a happy session together and one filled with profit and uplift and larger service for the kingdom, I am,

Sincerely yours,

W. A. HARPER,
President Elon College.

PIEDMONT JUNIOR COLLEGE.

The prerequisite to individual and group progress is education. To contribute to any genuine advancement, the education must be of a kind that stimulates to reflective thinking. The faculty of Piedmont is interested in encouraging original thought and in developing the inquiring attitude of mind.

Constructive thinking requires a background upon which to construct. It involves a knowledge of the peoples of the past and of what they have sought to accomplish. Our courses in the history of civilization are a systematic beginning in acquiring this knowledge. Intellectual advancement demands minds which are liberal, minds striving constantly to free themselves from bondage to prejudices and from passionate reassertion of preconceptions. For rational judgments a college must supply a criterion of truth as well as to discipline its students in the business of thinking. Those who organized this institution believed that the forces which cause and explain our thinking and our environment are spiritual influences; also they believed that we can best understand the significance of the arts and sciences if we judge them from the standpoint of their usefulness to the spiritual development of mankind. Piedmont Junior College believes that this point of view toward life and outlook which is fundamentally religious is the fullest guarantee to free and constructive thinking.

The junior college ages are times when many young people are in special need of personal attention from wise teachers. The freshman and sophomore years provide the student's own foundation for his later specialized interests. They in particular are the years when he develops his own ideals for life and his background of general knowledge. Because of the peculiar needs of young people at this phase of their education, the small junior college has the support of the large institutions of learning which realize how often, in the crowded conditions of their own under-classes students cannot get the individual consideration they need for these purposes. The junior college also meets the growing demand for general college work on the part of students who do not wish a full course leading to a degree in some major study.

The effort in Piedmont Junior College is to have education center in the student's life, not in subject-matter taught, and be the means of opening him to fuller life, with nobler and richer satisfactions. We deplore the disposition, so often found in the name of education, to be content with training students in the conventional or professional modes of action and thought. Such schooling tends to make a closed mind, whereas real education is a process of growth which never can be exhausted; it is life, that life which is perpetually more abundant.

The fall semester opens September 12, 1928.

THOUGHTS.

"A peculiar topic for a religious discourse," do you say? Well, somewhat so, but note well the very apt—very necessary—application. May God help us to show by His unchanging Word and His Holy Spirit that gives true discernment, the much needed holy teaching of God. They who really wish to know and to willingly obey God for their highest good and for His glory, will gladly accept it. Success in noblest and best things depends largely upon right thinking.

Many persons, some of them professed Christians, would be greatly ashamed at times to tell openly their thoughts. Neither a penny nor a golden eagle in U. S. money would persuade them to tell what their corrupt hearts were leading them to think about.

Now we wish to get at the only true remedy of this all important matter for soul salvation and for real fitness for most noble, most useful and happy life. None can be really happy whose hearts are impure; and even some professed Christians who secretly lead impure lives fail in their efforts to have abiding power with God and peace in their souls while they teach a class in Sunday School or do any other Christian work, until their hearts are cleansed by Jesus, the only Saviour, of all uncleanness. While outwardly in the minds of other persons they may appear to be doing some good work, sooner or later it will be shown that they do not have a vision of God and a knowledge of genuine Christianity, consequently they do not have Spirit power. They fall short of real success.

Even a late pastor of a church, who had talents and whom the writer thought to be a success, after hearing him review the Sunday School lesson on one occasion, was a few months later found to be a man of impure heart and deeds. In shame he has left the community, and we do not know where he is. He tried to succeed and he won some good friends, but he let his thoughts lead him astray. His heart had not been fully cleansed, and his vision of God was not clear. "As one thinketh in his heart so is he." (Proverbs 23: 7.)

We have known of some churches that are greatly lacking in Spirit power and in winning souls to Christ, because some members do not measure up to the Bible standard of purity and other members are too timid in talking to them of the beautiful principles of genuine purity of life.

There is, indeed, a great lack in Christian education, quite generally, because this part of most important Christian teaching—pure as it is because it is of God—is not so considered by the many prudish, half-hearted Christians. Great spirit power would come and many more souls would be soundly converted to Christ, if the eternal, God given, pure and holy Bible texts relating to purity were faithfully taught. What a sad lack and how awful the result.

We know of two instances where wonderful power came to the churches and many souls were converted and worldly minded Christians made confession of their sins and became workers for Christ, when the evils of impurity were courageously but lovingly denounced.

We urge parents to teach children early the great sacredness of the sex function, and that "every word of God is pure."

A beautiful leaflet, "Light on the Seventh Commandment," very helpful in teaching children, may be had free by addressing The World-Wide Purity Legion, Tenafly, N. J. Lists of other leaflets and booklets may also be obtained. If postage is enclosed, it will help in expenses. The office in Chicago does most of the printing. We expect some greatly important new booklets of the Graded Purity Series soon.

Even Church members should be sure that they have heeded the vitally important teachings of Paul to the Church at Corinth (I Cor. 6: 17, 18; 7: 1) and by Christ's help have cleansed themselves "of all filthiness of the flesh and spirit."

Referring to the evil heart, Christ said: "Out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murder, adultery, fornication." What sad, sad results follow—but "Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God." And yet none can become truly pure in heart so as to discern God and so as to see Christ when He comes (1 John 3:8) without giving the whole heart over to Christ and trusting Him in full faith that He may cleanse from sin and fit the heart for the indwelling of the Holy Spirit. Oh, how much it matters as to what one thinks! Therefore, the great apostle Paul was directed by God to write, "Whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are of good report . . . think on these things." Yet there are some of such unsound mind by habitual wrong thinking that "God is not in all their thoughts." So captivated by Satan, so fascinated by worldly pleasure and things of a mere worldly nature, they drive away the promptings of God's Holy Spirit and the teachings of God's precious Holy Word until the Spirit leaves them, and then they madly rush on towards eternal death, hating the good and spurning away all thoughts of holy things that their best friends try to present to them.

Now, as to safety by purity of heart and life through Christ, children and others should be early taught (or as opportunity offers should be taught) the great sacredness of God's holy Word as to God's wonderful gift to mankind of the male and female endowment that links mankind with God that other lives may come into the home to be nurtured and cared for and taught by father and mother and be told of God, their Heavenly Father, and told of heaven as the most glorious eternal home, with Jesus the only Saviour and the true Helper in life, to become most useful and most happy.

The seventh commandment, "Thou shalt not commit adultery," is pure, holy teaching of God, for "every word of God is pure" (see Prov. 30:5; Psa. 12:6). Only by the "defiled and unbelieving" is God's teaching said to be impure (see Titus 1:15).

"God created man in His own image" (or likeness), with a liking for all that is good and pure and holy. God breathed into man "the breath of life"—God's Spirit—but man disobeyed and fell away from holiness. God denounces sin, but He used pure words in all His teachings: it is the sinful deed that makes man impure. Out of the rib of Adam, God made woman and brought her unto the man (Gen. 2:21-24). God said, "Be fruitful and multiply" (Gen. 1:28). "They shall be one flesh" (Gen. 2:24). How pure and sacred is this teaching! Jesus, in teaching the Pharisees, stated the law: "What God hath joined together, let no man put asunder" (Matt. 19th ch.). In Matt. 5: 27-28, Jesus taught, as translated in the simple language of today, "Whosoever looketh upon a woman with an impure intention (or thought) hath committed adultery already with her in his heart."

"Whatsoever things are pure, think on these things." God help.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

SOME NEEDS OF JAPAN.

Recently one of our old friends who has spent forty years in Japan gave his impressions concerning the opportunities and the needs of Japan. While there will probably be a need of missionary teachers in the theological schools, specialists in kindergarten work and specialists in schools of high grade, there will always be a mighty call to go into the towns of five and ten thousand people of which there are three hundred and fifty where no missionaries have gone. In these places there are middle schools where from four to eight hundred boys are studying and where the fields are white for the harvest. There are eleven hundred girls' schools of which three hundred have never been touched by the missionary. In Ishinomaki, where Miss Stacy is living, there is a middle school, a school for girls and a business school in all of which the missionary finds those who are hungering for an opportunity to come into contact with the foreigner, probably in the first place for the opportunity to learn English, but in the end through English coming into touch with the Lord who saves.

Some of our friends have gone out into the country with their families and have come into touch with raw heathenism about the same as though no missionary had ever come to Japan. These missionaries have not attempted school work, but there are great openings where one may freely preach the gospel to the utmost limit of his strength.

At Otawara is the widow of one of our preachers, Mrs. Tsujimura. She was at one time a cook in our home, one of the best Japanese cooks we ever had, absolutely honest and faithful. She was so fine that we put her into a school where she learned sewing among her other accomplishments. This she has put to good use by teaching sewing to the prospective brides who feel the need of a better preparation for their future homes. In her contact with them, Mrs. Tsujimura has won the confidence of the town and has a great influence for good, not only over the girls who come to her, but also over the homes from which these girls come.

These are only examples of a kind of unostentatious work, not so expensive to carry on, but full of good fruits for the kingdom of God. Who is willing to enter these fields and possibly suffer hardship and loneliness for souls lost but hungering for the great salvation?

EXERCISES AT HOPEWELL.

Evidently a most appropriate service and ceremony were observed at Hopewell, Va., on Saturday, June 16, 1928, beginning at 3 P. M. It was the occasion of laying the corner-stone for the new Christian Church. The Mission Secretary of the Southern Convention was to have been present and presided, but because of a temporary loss of voice, owing possibly to recent delightful(?) contacts with a vigorous dentist, he could not be present. The following program, we are advised, was carried out, the musical program being arranged and carried out by Mr. and Mrs. Sam Leonard Davis, of Norfolk:

Hymn, "The Church's One Foundation"; greeting by officiating minister, Dr. W. W. Staley: Beloved Friends,—It is right and proper, and in accordance with the Holy Scriptures, that in all things we should look to Almighty God, from whom cometh every good and perfect gift, and besech Him to direct us by His Holy Spirit and to prosper the work of our hands. Especially, therefore, since we have now assembled to lay the foundation-stone of a house which is to be set apart to His honor, service and worship, and in which His worship is to be proclaimed to the people by the ministry of Jesus Christ the Lord. To this end, I invite all present to solemn reverence and worship while our program is in progress. Scripture lesson, Rev. D. D. Nash (Eph. 2:19-22; 1 Peter 2:3-10); prayer, Rev. Roy F. Schnucker; piano solo, Sam Leonard Davis; financial statement by treasurer, W. T. Black; offering and subscriptions for the building fund, J. M. Darden; Principles of the Christian Church, Dr. W. W. Staley; the box and contents of same exhibited and explained by J. M. Darden, member of building committee and of Mission Board, Suffolk, Va.; placing stone and ceremony, Dupont Masonic Lodge, 289, A., F. & A. M.; hymn, "Blessed Be the Tie that Binds"; benediction, Rev. James E. Cook.

The following items were placed in the box of the corner-stone: Bible; Principles and Government of Christian Church; Herald of Gospel Liberty, May 3, 1928; CHRISTIAN SUN of April 5, 1928, showing Sam Leonard Davis breaking the ground, standing between Dr. W. W. Staley and Rev. D. D. Nash; CHRISTIAN SUN of April 12, 1928, showing class of boys and girls known as Atkinson and Davis Circles, who raised $200 for the building fund; CHRISTIAN SUN of May 3, 1928, showing members of the Christian Church of Hopewell; card of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Leonard Davis, evangelists; card of E. W. Hartman, who did metal work on Church, and list of helpers; roster of Dupont Lodge, No. 289, A., F. & A. M., Hopewell, Va.; roster of Blandford Lodge, No. 3, A., F. & A. M., Petersburg, Va. (1751); envelope containing contractor's name, Custis Burton, and names of helpers; envelopes containing Church roll, photograph and personal cards of Rev. D. D. Nash and wife, and of J. A. Vaughan, and photograph of Sam Leonard Davis; copy of program for laying of corner-stone; ceremony for laying of corner-stone by Grand Lodge of Masons of Virginia; one-half silver dollar (1907), by W. V. White; financial statement of Hopewell Christian Church, by W. T. Black, treasurer.

A large audience was present, and all seemed to enjoy the occasion immensely. On Sunday morning following, with 120 on the Sunday School roll, there were present 121. Within the past month, nine new members have been added to the Church. The pastor, Rev. D. D. Nash, preached a most interesting and inspiring sermon from Eph. 5:2, and Mr. and Mrs. Sam Davis conducted the song service. Sunday night, Mrs. Davis preached to a large congregation and began the revival which is to continue for two weeks. Our Hopewell Church starts off under favorable auspices and with proper care and leadership should soon take rank among our strong Churches.

EVANGELISTIC HELPERS.

THE SUN's editor has called attention more than once to the splendid work being done in the evangelistic field by Mr. and Mrs. Sam Davis, Norfolk, Va. Bro. Sam Davis plays the gospel, in moving melody from the piano, and Mrs. Davis sings and preaches the gospel. They are a strong pair, and any Church may count itself fortunate to secure their services. It is announced that Rev. J. Lee Johnson is to have them at Wake Chapel to begin a meeting on the second Sunday in September. It is expected the whole community will join in this service. There has just fallen into our hands two letters from Methodist ministers who have recently had Mr. and Mrs. Davis in meetings. Their testimony is as follows:

"Dear Sir,—It gives me pleasure to write to you concerning the work of Brother and Sister Sam Leonard Davis. There are many evidences that the coming of these servants of God to St. Paul M. E. Church, South, of Washington, D. C., did our Church great good. Our congregations are larger and the general spiritual tone of the Church is improved. The prayer services have increased 50 per cent in attendance.

"Mr. Davis is a pianist of unusual ability and is thoroughly consecrated to the Lord's work. Mrs. Davis is a fearless preacher of the Word and a sweet gospel singer. (Signed) W. D. King, Pastor."

"Dear Sir,—Just a short note to let you know in regard to our meeting at Hilton Village. Bro. Davis and his wife came to us for a meeting which continued for two weeks. The music of Bro. Davis just charmed and thrilled us. The sermons of Mrs. Davis were strong and clear. They did not use any tricks or devices to entrap; the meeting was of the old-time type. The truth was proclaimed and the responsibility placed where it belonged. Our Church was greatly blessed; our people were glad that Bro. and Sister Davis came to us and rendered such splendid service. Any one who desires the help of good, consecrated Christian helpers can do no better than secure their services. With all good wishes for you and my best wishes for Bro. Davis and his wife, I am, yours very truly (signed) Jno. D. Hosier, Pastor."

FROM ALABAMA.

On the first Saturday in May we held a very fine memorial and decoration service at Mt. Zion Church. Farmers in that section were so busy that our attendance was not so large, but it was an enjoyable service and quite a nice sum was paid in on the Church debt. On the afternoon a nice program was rendered, directed by Miss Sallie Poor, who is a very consecrated young lady and teacher of the public school at Mt. Zion.

Twenty-eight years ago the first grave was made in the Church yard, and today there rests in that little city ten men and their wives, which is quite unusual for a cemetery so young. Some of our noblest and best citizens lie here—Bro. Frank Gay and wife, Rev. W. R. Knight and wife, Bro. S. N. Sledge, T. S. Keeble, W. L. Word and their wives, and others whom I do not now recall all sleep in this little silent cemetery. God bless their memory.

On the second Saturday in May was decoration day at Antioch Church. This service has been carried on here for twenty-seven years without a missing link, and I am sure that we have not held a sweeter service in my time as pastor, which has been twenty-one years, than the service of last Saturday. A good crowd gathered. Sermon by the pastor; prayer by Rev. G. G. Vickers, of the M. E. Church, South. At noon a great feast was spread. In the afternoon the program was in the hands of Sister Ella Royton, which was enjoyed by all. We then had an address by Rev. Vickers, followed by a very fine talk by Rev. Calvin M. Pinkard, also of the M. E. Church, South. Then came the decoration of the graves by a number of little girls, preceded by Uncle Bowden Brown, our oldest member and a Confederate veteran, who carried with him a number of flags, one of which was placed at the grave of each soldier who sleeps in the quiet city of the dead. Thus closed a great day at Antioch.

Last Sunday I held Mother's Day services at three of my Churches, which seemed to be greatly enjoyed by good congregations at each Church. Next Sunday will be memorial day at Pleasant Grove, and the fourth Sunday at New Hope. I pray that God may give us a great service at each place.

PIEDMONT JUNIOR COLLEGE.

There is a growing interest in the junior college. Many of our leading educational institutions have already created junior colleges as extensions to their work. The president of one of our leading universities recently said he "preferred that all students take their first two years' work in the small schools before they became lost in the crowd in the large universities."

Piedmont Junior College is now an accredited co-educational junior college of Piedmont College, Demorest, Ga., and its courses are co-ordinated with those of Piedmont in the freshman and sophomore years leading to the A. B., Ph. B. and B. S. degrees.

This co-operative educational plan will give encouragement to the whole cause of denominational union.

It will greatly enhance the cause of Christian education and bring about a closer fellowship and a more vital contact with the larger advantages of Piedmont College. This intimate relationship with Piedmont College will most effectively serve our educational interests in the South and promote, as no other relation between them could, the welfare of the coming united Church.

It will put new life in the whole local situation. The movement is looked upon with great favor and welcomed as a new day for the institution.

The interdenominational program of the Southeast of the Congregational and Christian Churches will gain prestige through this educational affiliation. It will create a much larger clientele for our educational work.

We anticipate a worthy increase in student patronage the first year of our school work. It will nearly double our library at Wadley for the junior college.

The junior college will receive the same credit from other accrediting agencies as Piedmont, since it is a part of Piedmont's educational equipment, and it will, through this organization, hold a unique position which will differentiate it from all other institutions of similar name.

The fall semester will begin September 12, 1928. For catalog and other information, address S. L. Beougher, president.

AN ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

On Friday evening, June 8th, at 7:30 o'clock, we were made happy in our new home in Roanoke, Ala., by members of the First Christian Church, who surprised us with a shower of good things to eat and also a purse. Cars began stopping in front of the door and people began filing into the house and every one brought something, and every thing they brought was just exactly what we needed, and there was an immense supply of them. Upon examination of things, we found fresh vegetables, canned vegetables, meat, lard, sugar, coffee, etc.

After a few remarks by our good friend, Bro.

V. E. Kitchens, we tried to express our appreciation for the way and manner in which we were entertained, but we could not command words to express our feelings. We only hope to express our appreciation by humble service. We pray God's richest blessings upon every one who had a part in making this happy surprise for us. We feel that no pastor ever had a warmer reception anywhere than we have here. We feel perfectly at home and happy.

Roanoke, Ala.

NOTICE.

Members of the board of trustees of Piedmont Junior College will please take notice.

This is to notify you that the board of trustees will meet in adjourned session at the college, Wadley, Ala., July 1, 1928, at 1:30 P. M. This is the week of our School of Christian Education, and the Fourth will be rally day for the newly organized institution. We will have good speaking, singing and free basket dinner.

Your attendance at the meeting is earnestly solicited. Dr. Frank E. Jenkins, president of Piedmont College, Demorest, Ga., is president of the board and will preside at the meeting. May we have a full attendance of the board.

Sincerely yours,

S. L. BEOUGHER, President.

BETHLEHEM SUMMER CONFERENCE.

Will the Alabama and the Georgia and Alabama women put forth a special effort to attend the summer school at Bethlehem? It is an opportunity that we should accept and appreciate. The Woman's Missionary Society of Wadley has planned free entertainment to our ministers and two delegates from each Church from the Alabama and the Georgia and Alabama Conferences. We would be glad to have each Church notify us as to their plans, so we can plan accordingly.

Wadley, Ala.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

Lesson II—July 8, 1928.

SAUL AND STEPHEN.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee the crown of life."—Rev. 2:10.

LESSON: Acts 7:54, 8:3, 22:3, 4, 19, 20; 26:4, 5, 9-11; Gal. 1:13, 14.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psa. 116:12-19.

Christianity was soon to have its baptism of blood, and Stephen became immortal in fame and memory because he was the first martyr. The word martyr is significant. It comes from a Greek word which means "a witness." In those days if one became a witness for Christ it often meant that he became a martyr. It often cost a man his life to bear witness for Christ. When one thinks of the way in which so many of those early Christians bore witness to their faith at the expense of their lives, and then thinks of the easy way in which so many people today deny their Master, one wonders if we have not lost something of the early radiance and of the triumphant spirit of Christianity. Let us not forget that Jesus said we are to be His "witnesses" and we are to witness for Him at any cost.

Stephen was a remarkable man. We know nothing of his conversion, but there is a legend that he was one of the original seventy whom Jesus sent out. We do know that he was selected as one of the seven who were to have the oversight of the distribution of charity in the early Church. He was a man of "honest report," a man of undoubted integrity among his fellow-men; a man full of the Holy Spirit—that is, a man who was deeply spiritual; a man of "wisdom"—that is, a man of sound sense and good judgment. These qualities fitted him admirably for his difficult task. But Stephen was more than a man of practical affairs. He was a man of deep piety, of enthusiastic faith, of striking personality, of religious convictions, and a man with superior gifts. He took to preaching and he preached so powerfully and so appealingly that those who took the opposite side were not able to resist him or to refute him. They, therefore, took the course which so many people take, the recourse to force. They impressed false witnesses to bring charges against Stephen, and then they brought him before the elders and the scribes and the people, where they accused him of blasphemy—a very serious thing.

Now, as a matter of fact, it was simply the old, old story of ultra-conservatism venting its wrath against a man who dared to face the truth and to be liberal in his thinking. For Stephen was one of the first to see that Christianity or Jesus' way of life was something more than Judaism, a great deal more than legalism and petty observance of law. With Jesus he saw that worship was primarily a matter of spirit and not of place, and that religion was primarily a matter of great principles, and not of detailed regulations. Stephen was the great forerunner of Paul in the great issue of Christian liberty.

Stephen's speech, or apology, as it should be called, is a masterpiece. An apology, in the sense in which we use the term apology here, does not mean, of course, what it means when we usually use the term. It comes from two Greek words, which mean "to speak in behalf of." In other words, Stephen was "defending" or speaking in behalf of Christianity. So cogently did he reason, and so plainly did he speak that his hearers became enraged, and defying all law they resorted to what corresponds to lynch law. They dragged him out of the city and stoned him to death.

Stephen's death was worthy of the great man that he was, and may well be the type of many that were to follow him in that price for faith. He commended in a quiet and assuring way his spirit unto the Lord Jesus. And, like his Master, he prayed for those who did him to death. One feels a sense of awe as he reads the story as it is recounted in today's lesson. Somehow or other, one feels that he wants to be just a little better and more faithful witness for Christ when he reads it.

"And the witnesses laid down their clothes at a young man's feet, whose name was Saul." This is the first time we meet Saul, and it is in the role of a persecutor of the Church. It is quite likely that Paul had a very responsible part in Stephen's death. And it seems that there was something of the strange providence of God in it all. For Paul never got away from that scene. Here was a young man, slowly dying a thousand deaths, and yet with an expression of peace on his face, a prayer for forgiveness on his lips, a note of victory manifested in his spirit. It was surpassingly strange to Saul, who in spite of his meticulous observance of the law, and his warm zeal in persecuting the Church, did not have that peace, that spirit, that note of victory. Years later, when Paul himself was on trial for his life he was still thinking about it, for he said, "And when the blood of Stephen thy witness was shed, I also was standing by and consenting and keeping the garments of them that slew him." God works in mysterious ways His wonders to perform, and even though we cannot establish the absolute proof, we may feel sure that one of the most potent factors in Paul's conversion was the testimony and the death of Stephen.

As one thinks of Stephen, several characteristics stand out which make him a splendid character-study for young people. His fine spirit, his broad-mindedness, his native ability, his abiding faith, his undoubted integrity, his zeal for service, his deep spirituality, his sacrificial devotion to Christ are qualities of mind and heart that all young people might well covet.

TOPICS "What Can We Do to Help Improve Our Community?"—Neh. 2:12-20.

Some Bible Hints.

Nehemiah made a survey of the situation, the first thing we should do (v. 13).

Two things will we discover, the power that destroys and the apparent hopelessness of ruins. We need to see how hard our task is first of all (v. 14).

Leaders are often content with things as they are. It needs the eye and faith of a Nehemiah to see the lack and stir up things (v. 16).

Sometimes our proposals will be met with scorn. But the man who seeks to build up has the right idea. God is with him (vs. 17-20).

Suggestive Thoughts.

Take the question of recreation. What do our young people do with their leisure time? How can we help them to use it well?

We can find the new families that have come to the district, invite them to Church, and fetch the children to Sunday School. To make better people is to improve the community.

Take the lead in proposing and putting across a clean-up day in the community. Get the mayor interested. Use posters. Offer prizes for the best work done.

Christian Endeavor evangelistic teams, with four or five members each, have done much good by holding meetings in neglected places. To make people Church-goers helps the community.

A Few Illustrations.

In a large city in New York State a group of Endeavorers opened a house with the idea of teaching foreigners English and establishing a Sunday School. This developed into an important community center.

Take an interest in public health. The State board of health will co-operate if you can arrange a public lecture. People should be shown how to prevent disease.

One society bought a wheel-chair for the use of invalids. The chair was loaned free to any that needed it.

A lawn campaign changed the face of one community. Small prizes were offered to the persons that had the best-kept lawns. The Church lawn benefited very much.

To Think About.

What strikes you as being wrong with your community?

How can helpful community campaigns be financed?

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

The Alabama Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention was called to order at 9 A. M., June 10th, by Rev. G. D. Hunt, and the following officers were elected: Rev. Joe French, president; Staley Hunt, secretary-treasurer.

After the election of officers, the following program was rendered: Address, "The Model Sunday School," by Rev. Joe French; "The Young People's Work in the Church," by Miss Nellie Rea Sledge and John T. Birdsong; "The Young People's Attitude to the Missionary Program of the Church," by Mrs. E. C. Wilkins and C. Carl Dollar; "Our Young People and the Summer School of Christian Education, Why Attend?" by G. S. Hunt; convention sermon, by Rev. G. H. Veazey; lunch; music; "How can we get our Sunday schools and C. E. Societies represented in our summer school at Bethlehem?" by some member of each school and society; "Our young people and the Sabbath Day, how should it be observed," by Vines Cox and Miss Orene Carpenter; reports from the schools and societies.

The convention was a great success. It proved that the young people of the Alabama Conference are awake to their responsibility, and, judging from the many people who came to the Convention, it proved that the Church is interested in what they are trying to do.

The committee in charge of the program is to be commended for giving us such a delightful program, and the young people who took part in the program are to be commended for the wonderful way in which they carried out their part. It was truly a great day for the young people of our Church in Alabama and a day that will be remembered for years to come by young and old.

Following is a list of the Sunday Schools and C. E. Societies represented, with the names of the delegates from each:

Antioch—M. L. Hamlin, Mrs. A. L. Landers, Mattie L. Royston.

Beulah—Roy Walker, Emory Wilkins, Erma Birchfield, Mary Gunn, Mrs. E. C. Wilkins, Shirley Vaughan.

Pleasant Grove—Mary Faye Hill, Mary Ethel Cox, Lora Foster, Thelma Harmon, Clyde Edge, Ocie B. Hill, Owen Brooks, W. G. Harmon, Agnes Blanks, Dot Foster, Bobbie Lee Walker, Cenus Foster, Zora Smith.

Forest Home—L. H. Houze.

Noon Day—Miss Annie Huey, Miss Ethel Pool.

First Church, Roanoke—Ernest Tomlin, Rosa Walker, Millard Stevens, Verna Crisler, Margaret Hood, Irene Tomlin.

Rock Stand—Lankford Harmon, Edd Kirby, Vennie Lee Kirby, Mattie Lou Taylor, Jessie Treadwell, Erma Brewer.

Wadley—Eunice Stephens, Eva Mae Smith, Monroe Dollar.

Mt. Zion—J. B. Still, J. B. Swann, J. L. Liles.

New Hope—Mrs. L. H. Liles, Eilean Liles, Lelia Mae Hill.

Total amount of money in treasury, $16.09.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Western North Carolina Christian Conference was held at the Pleasant Ridge Church, near Ramseur, N. C., June 12th. All of the Sunday Schools were not represented and several have not sent in reports, but these handicaps did not keep us from having a good convention. Those taking part in the program were Dr. G. O. Lankford, Rev. T. E. White, Rev. J. M. Allred, Misses Pattie Coghill, Essie Mae Cotten, Julia Woodson, Lillie Horne, Mrs. Teague, E. H. Thompson, M. C. Stafford, and a few others.

This convention urges the pastors, superintendents, secretaries, teachers, and other workers to do their best for the convention. We especially ask the superintendents to send in reports and to have their schools well represented at our next convention, which will be held at Shiloh Christian Church on Tuesday after the second Sunday in June, 1929. The convention voted to pay to the Board of Christian Education $25.00.

The following officers were chosen for the coming year: president, C. A. Walker, Burlington, N. C.; vice-president, Dr. G. O. Lankford, Burlington, N. C.; secretary-treasurer, Geo. T. Gunter, Asheboro, N. C.; assistant secretary-treasurer, Miss Pauline Brown, Ramseur, N. C., Route 1.

Departmental secretaries were chosen as follows: elementary, Mrs. I. H. Foust; young people's division, Mrs. John Whitesell; adult, Junius H. Harden; teacher-training, Dr. E. L. Moffitt; Christian Endeavor, Miss Julia Woodson; missions, Mrs. W. R. Sellars.

GEO. T. GUNTER, Sec'y.

From Greensboro, N. C.: "We are having a great daily vacation Bible School. Larger and better than ever."

From Franklin, Va.: "We are in the midst of a splendid daily vacation Bible school, with over 100 children. Lots of interest and enthusiasm."

From Burlington, N. C.: "We opened up today, with 122."

Suffolk's daily vacation Bible school comes the last week in June and the first week in July this year. Wakefield, Va., will hold a school for a week this year, July 1-8. This is their first school.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
One of Our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MONDAY.

THE OTHER SIDE.

"He passed by on the other side."—Luke 10:31, 32.

All roads have two sides, and many things may be passed over unnoticed on the other side. Life itself is the sum total of our choices.

The other side is the longest side. The priest and Levite would have been bothered to have taken time to help the beggar on the other side. It would cost them some money to help that fellow. To avoid trouble, save time and escape responsibilities, they would attend to their own business.

They did, and they have never been heard from since. What they gained has never been recorded.

To conceive life to be a span for getting money and squeezing everybody possible to fill one's own pockets, or to spend it in social and political standing, and never turning aside to help the needy ones one may pass by. They fancy that they make life a delight for themselves. But the getting of delights carry with them the loss of them. The greatest joy that can come to any one is the good we may do some one. That is something that lives after us, and is eternal.

What a joy Paul had and what a joy he has given the world! He might have had a good time, avoided persecutions, imprisonment and execution, but he loved folks and right and dared to go to the depths to help some one, and in so doing wrote his name in the Lamb's Book of life, and today the world reads it in characters of gold.

Prayer.—Our Father, help us to live in feelings and deeds and not in time pleasures. May we count our time by heart-throbs. Amen.

TUESDAY.

DELIGHTS OF THE UNPLEASANT.

"The other side."—Luke 10:31, 32.

In this case "the other side" is the side opposite the priest where the man lay dying and where he refused to go. How often the other side—the side of life's miseries and unpleasant things—furnish us the greatest delights! Is this a paradox?

The fellow who leaves his side and goes across to where his unfortunate brother suffers and lives closes his eyes to the sins and faults of other folks, and in so doing, in a small way, becomes the bearer of their sins upon his own shoulders. He enters into their sufferings without passing judgment upon how they came to be so; he helps them, he magnifies life's mission, makes folks more comfortable, and makes the world a better place to live in. Such a one is one who is looking for something good to do, some service to render, some suffering to relieve, some disease to cure. The sweetest delights of life come out of such things as this. It is the most costly and sacrificial side, but it points folks heavenward and it is a chariot of glory. It is only through this way that folks learn what Jesus meant when He said, "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these ye did it unto me."

"We live in deeds, not years:
In thoughts, not breath;
In feelings, not figures on the dial.

"We shall count time by heart-throbs;
He most lives who feels the noblest,
Acts the best, and he whose heart
Beats quickest, lives longest.

"'Tis not enough with tears of woe
To weep for all the world's distress,
The drops that from inaction flow
Not us nor other lives will bless.

"'Tis not enough the love we take
That others' hearts on us outpour;
The soul is only kept awake
By giving something from its store."

WEDNESDAY.

THE EASE OF HARD THINGS.

"Take my yoke upon you and learn of me, for I am gentle and humble in heart, and you will find your soul refreshed; for my yoke is easy and my burden is light."—Matt. 11:29, 30.

That "other side" is the easiest. To dress the wounds of the wounded, to bodily lead a man on a horse, to walk miles out of the way, to be delayed a whole day's journey on his own way was hard work for the good Samaritan. The priest no doubt contemplated this and avoided it. But this labor which the Samaritan rendered gladly became a concrete illustration of the teachings of Jesus in what is true living. In honest work, in helping the fellow who needs, makes the good things and the richer experiences. These are they that made the world great. These are they that bring peace. These are they that make folks noble and worthy. These things bring harmony everywhere, and it is peace and worthiness and harmony that makes the world great and fit to live in.

THURSDAY.

THE DOOM OF THE SCORNFUL WAY.

"Then shall we say to them on the left hand (the other side), depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels. I was thirsty, and ye gave me no drink; I was a stranger and ye took me not in: sick and ye visited me not . . . Inasmuch as ye did it unto the least of these ye did it unto me."—Matt. 25:40.

Said the poet:

"When I have time, so many things I'll do
To make life happier and more fair
For those whose lives are crowded now with care;
I'll help to lift them from their low despair—
When I have time!

"Now is the time! As friend, no longer wait
To scatter loving smiles and words of cheer
To those whose lives are now so dear:
They may not need you in the coming year—
Now is the time!"

FRIDAY.

LOVE NOT THE WORLD.

Is this possible? Are there not many things in the world worthy of our love? Did not God give us the world? Did He not put us in it to live and make it fruitful? What is meant here?

Christ is our example. How closely He was in touch with all sorts and conditions of men! He understood folks and rejoiced in their confidence. He took part in all their joy and sorrows. He entered into all their trials and conflicts. He was a part of human nature everywhere. He read all their thoughts, fashioned every wish and ministered to every need. And then He told them to "love not the world." By this He meant: love not the sensuous, destructive and perishing things; love not the things that separate you from God; love not the things that dim your purity or clouds your vision.—but love folks. They are struggling souls; they are enslaved by evil; they are deceived by follies; they are laden with burdens; they need God's love, and His disciples were the medium of receiving that love.

Prayer.—Our Father, Thou art the door by which our souls may go out in wisdom and love and tenderness and care and counsel, and pity and sympathy and friendship. Thy way is open. Help us to walk in it and our steps shall not be deterred, and make us a blessing of Thy ministry to folks. Amen.

SATURDAY.

JESUS' DEFINITION OF RELIGION.

"I have called you friends."—Jno. 15:15.

David said to Jonathan, "I am distressed for thee, my brother." That expresses it.

Human friendship is the highest human relation. Friendship with God is the highest achievement of man. That is religion. To make this known was Christ's mission and greatest task. And when He wanted a name for it He did not consult the dictionary, but He went to a home, and in fatherhood He found His name for God. You who are fathers should feel congratulated that Jesus named God after you, and thus reminding you of the heavenly dignity of your position.

In this, Christ overwhelms us. Between friends and in fatherhood and brotherhood there is equality, there is a common spirit, a common aim; there is the joy of two boys running and playing together. There is the genuine delight of two companions feeling the three satisfactions of life—happiness, pleasure and joy; and the greatest of these is joy—and they all come from our friendship with God.

What a defense is friendship! We all have enemies. We need defenders in friends. Friends bear witness of our virtues and our thought, and encourage us in our ambitions. Many a one could have never accomplished anything and would have been miserable had it not been for our friends. It touches life at its finest. It breaks our undiscovered resources. It makes of us what we are. It is the greatest human power.

Prayer.—Our Father, let us cultivate a capacity for friendship. Let us accept gladly the obligations that friendship brings. Make us to ask, what with our Friend the Christ have we to do? Amen.

SUNDAY.

DON'T BOTHER ME.

Text: 2 Peter 1:5-10.

To an honest, inquiring child, dad says, "Don't bother me." The neighbor says, "I can't be bothered." In business, from the stockholder down, every officer will say, "I can't be bothered." The kid will say, "Let John do it."

Did you ever hear this? What does it mean? It means this: that we refuse to give knowledge or help at a particular moment when it would be most eagerly received and probably do the most good. If you say to your boy, "Don't bother me now," it may bother your child many years to come. "Don't bother me now" is costing the country millions of dollars.

We all have something to do and some responsibilities for the other fellow's efficiency and success, and we should discharge that responsibility faithfully unto the end.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

We had hoped to reach the ten thousand mark by July 1st. We find as we make the final addition for our last report for June that we still lack $46.84 being to our goal for the first six months of the year. That is not far from the goal. We wish we could have reached it. We are certainly grateful to our many friends and Sunday Schools for their loyal support, and the only regret we have is that we still have some Sunday Schools that do not make a monthly offering. I wish I had the persuasive power to persuade every Sunday School to make one offering each month to help us in this work of love. We are called upon every week to take some fatherless child and we now have one hundred and eighteen to care for. We need your help, prayers and sympathy.

OUR STEWARDSHIP.

The drive is sometimes necessary; the tithe is always effective. "The first expenditure of that which comes to us should be that which sanctifies the rest—that which is not for self or flesh or earth or time, but for the Lord, for gratitude, for the training of the soul, for store in heaven."—Dr. McConaughy.

This is what Dr. G. O. Lankford, our pastor at Burlington, N. C., says about the every-member canvass: "The every-member canvass is a business-like approach to the ever-present problem of Church finance, and has proven itself worthy of a place in the Church program wherever given a fair trial. It enlists workers, develops initiative and leadership, establishes helpful contacts, discovers needed information, lends opportunity for stewardship teaching, opens the way to larger giving and service, and gives tone and confidence to the entire program of the Church as a prophecy of progress and a sure sign of success."

And here is the message of another of our most successful pastors, Rev. Rue Burnell, Orient, Iowa: "I consider the every-member canvass the ideal at which a Church should aim, because it very definitely helps each member to feel himself a part of the Church and to increase his interest in it. It cultivates the sense of responsibility for underwriting the Church's material needs. It leads children into the giving habit, which is vital. It decidedly helps to more adequately finance the kingdom enterprises. It helps to establish the kingdom within Church members."

Each one of us is the head, the superintendent and the supervisor of an organization. That organization is self. Organize your life so as to get the most out of it—the most protection for the future. To combine all of life is the business of the brain. Here are the habits that you form. They make or break you. Are you going to bother?

Know yourself and direct it; know your work and do it. The thing that you will not let bother you now will come back some day and bother you in later life.

Prayer.—O Lord Jesus, King of glory, full of grace and truth, who holds dominion over earth and sea, dominion over our lives, give us sincere, honest and true souls; give us holiness and characters of which it is said, "of such is the kingdom of God." Amen.

BETHLEHEM SUMMER SCHOOL.

July 1-7 is the date for our summer school at Bethlehem College. This affords the young people, officers and teachers of our Sunday Schools, and all interested persons a rare opportunity to study and receive inspiration. Only once each year does such an opportunity come. Special effort should be made on the part of each Church and Sunday School in Georgia and Alabama to have a number of leading members in the school, with all expenses paid.

The faculties for all our summer schools have been strong, but the faculty is certainly no less strong this year, and the opportunity for such splendid study period cannot be overlooked without a distinct loss to every Church and Sunday School in Georgia and Alabama. Begin now to make your preparation and attend every session.

For your own protection—

The peril of the road crossing has become a national problem with the multiplication of automobiles.

The Southern Railway System has eliminated 584 grade crossings, and is eliminating more every year, but 7,000 remain to be separated on this system alone. The total cost to complete the work is a stupendous sum—probably half as much as the cost to build the railroads.

Even if the money were available, and the public willing to pay the increased freight and passenger rates necessary to provide a fair return on it, many years would be required to do the work.

Protection from the peril for the present generation at least must be found in some other way. Trains cannot stop at every crossing if they are to be run at the sustained speed expected by the public and required to carry the commerce of the country. The train crosses a highway about every mile. The motorist encounters a railroad only occasionally.

It is necessary, therefore, for the automobile driver to stop in order to avoid risk. No one who did this was ever killed. In North Carolina, where the law now requires such a stop, the number of road crossing accidents on our lines has been reduced one-half.

Grade crossing accidents can be prevented if you will approach the zone of danger determined to exercise caution For Your Own Protection.

It is better business to save a life than to save a minute.

Personal Responsibility

(Reprinted from the Saturday Evening Post)

Final dependence for a reduction in the number of railroad grade-crossing disasters must be placed upon the individual's sense of responsibility. If when approaching and crossing a railroad at grade the traveler will think of that crossing as a zone of danger to him, and regard himself and those with him as in imminent danger until the crossing is completed, the chances of accidents will be automatically reduced to the minimum.

This grade crossing separation cost $145,000

Kiddies' Korner

MADGE MOFFITT WHITESSELL, Editor.

Dear Children:

It seems that I am again on a slow schedule and am expecting to "get fired" any day. Mrs. Whitesell will finish her D. V. B. school next week and the "Korner" will welcome her back, I'm sure. Am sending a story. This shows real merit and is fine. I will begin putting the names for the Pollyanna game in the Korner next week, so come on with quite a number of them.

With good wishes for you all, I am,

Sincerely yours,

MRS. T. A. MOFFITT.

A STORY OF A BEAUTIFUL GARDEN.

By Rebekah Ellington.

Long, long ago the world was very bare. There were no mountains, valleys, rivers, seas, and no birds, flowers, trees and animals. But a time came when God said, "Let there be light," and the world began to lighten. But God said half of the time must be dark. So it was; and the light He called day, and the dark He called night.

Next, God said, "Let there be water, sun, moon, stars, fish, animals, trees, flowers and birds," and all of these things came into the world, which made it very beautiful indeed.

But there were no people, no cities, no houses, and no children to play under the beautiful trees. But God said, "I will make man to be different from all animals. God took some dust from the ground and made a man, and God breathed into him the breath of life. The man stood upon the earth.

There was a beautiful garden which God gave to this man, whom He named Adam. This garden was called "The Garden of Eden." Adam was very lonesome in this garden. So God took a rib from Adam's side and made a woman called Eve. Adam and Eve loved one another and were very happy together in the Garden of Eden.

There were many fruit trees in this beautiful garden, and God said to Adam and Eve, "You may eat the fruit of all the trees in the garden except one, which is in the middle of this garden. You must not eat this fruit or touch it; if you do you must die."

Among the animals in the garden was a snake, and he told Eve that they would not die if they ate the fruit of the tree in the middle of the garden, but they would become greater than God Himself. Eve listened to the snake and she ate some of the fruit and gave Adam some.

Adam and Eve knew they had done wrong, and they were afraid. God said to them, "Why are you afraid of me," and Eve told Him all that had happened. God said to the snake, "You shall always crawl upon the dirt and shall always hate man and man will always hate you."

God said to Eve: "Because you have listened to the snake, you shall suffer in pain and trouble always." And then God said to Adam: "Because you listened to your wife, you, too, must suffer. You will have to toil hard among the thorns and thistles. You must plant and you must reap." And He said: "You came from the ground, for you were made of dust, and back again into the dust your body must go when you die."

Adam and Eve were driven out of the beautiful Garden of Eden, and no man has ever been into it from that day.

WHAT SHE BROKE.
(For the Boys and Girls.)

Sue came home from school tired and cross. She had a headache. Everything seemed to be going wrong. She sat down in the big chair in the parlor, and leaned her head back to rest.

"Sue, come and give me a hand with this cleaning," called her mother. Sue got up, frowning. She fussed and scolded as she helped her mother do the cupboard, lifting down the china and glass, washing them and putting them back. When Jack came in from school, she snapped at him for touching the old teapot with his grimy hands trying to find the cookie-jar.

Jack went out in a hurry. Sue went on cleaning and snapping. "What is the use of cleaning the china unless you paint the cupboard?" she asked, sourly. "It isn't fit to keep nice things in. The whole house is run down. I hate to bring my friends in here. Why can't we have things like other people? We haven't even a Ford, and every one else on the street has a nice car."

Her mother said nothing, but her face was sad. She went on. "There's Jack with that Rollins boy again. If he brings him into this house, I'm going to walk out." She wiped the tumbler in her hand, and then looked at the boys outside.

"I'd like to throw this tumbler at him through the window!" she cried, her irritation reaching a climax.

"Well, why don't you?" said her mother quietly.

Sue's mouth fell open with amazement. "Why—why—this is one of the best tumblers. I'd break it, and smash the window, too, if I did that."

"You've broken a great deal more than that in the last half-hour," said her mother gravely.

Sue was more and more bewildered. "I haven't broken anything, mother," he remonstrated.

"Yes, you have. You've broken the peace every minute. You've broken every rule of good manners and right speaking. A tumbler is only a tumbler, and a pane of glass is only a pane of glass. But you are breaking things that count far more than that."

"I don't see—"

"Well, I'll tell you. Your father is trying to pay off his brother's debts, and keep the family name honorable. You know that. You ought to honor him for it. Instead of that, you complain that the house is shabby and you have no car. You're breaking something there that you ought not to touch—far worse than poor Jack with the teapot. You're saying all the mean, cross things you can think of —aren't you? You're just trying to smash away at my feelings. Can you see now?" Sue saw. She did not say another word. She went on washing and wiping and putting away. There were tears in her eyes, and her mother saw them. But neither of them said any more.

Sue has not broken anything since.—Mildred Elliott, in Girls' World.

COFFEY.

Mrs. Mary Cole Dalton Coffey was born April 15, 1858, and died March 30, 1928, age 69 years, 11 months and 15 days. She joined Salem Chapel Christian Church when a young woman and remained a loyal member till her death. She was married to John F. Coffey about January, 1877. To this union was born the following children: James F., Isaac D., Monroe, Robert, and Frank Coffey and Mrs. M. W. Morris; also one sister, Mrs. Susan Coffey, with many kindred and friends. She was a good woman, of the quiet and gentle kind, motherly to those about her. It had not been the writer's privilege to have visited her but once during his pastoral service, but he is informed that she loved the Church.

The burial was from the Church on Sunday, April 1st, at 2:30 P. M., in the presence of a large congregation. A beautiful display of flowers silently told of the high esteem in which she was held.

SPENCE.

Mr. C. F. Spence, of Holly Springs, N. C., died in the Rex Hospital on April 12, 1928, at the age of 64 years. He had been in somewhat declining health for several years, but kept up his work as postmaster of Holly Springs. Brother Spence was a member of Wake Chapel Church from boyhood, and for a number of years was a deacon, which office he held at the time of his death. He loved the Christian Church and it seemed a great joy to him to be in a good Church meeting.

He leaves a wife to mourn his going, no children having been born to them. He has, however, a number of near-kin and many friends who will miss him, as well as his Church. The burial services were held in Wake Chapel Church and cemetery. There was a large congregation of friends to pay him this last respect. May our Lord bless and comfort the wife and all who mourn.

A JUNIOR COLLEGE AND HIGH SCHOOL.

Where Opportunity Awaits the Student of Very Limited Means.

GIRL'S DORMITORY.

Bethlehem College, Wadley, Ala., will open September 5, 1927. This institution is a Junior College and High School, which is co-educational, where scholarship ranks high and expense is low. It is thoroughly Christian, absolutely non-sectarian, and vitally American. A school where opportunity awaits the student of very limited means—$68.00 pays all college expenses, except books, board and room. Board, $15.00 per month, and room $3.00; total expenses for a term of nine months, $250.00.

Bethlehem College is training some of the best stock of America for Christian leadership, to be used by the nation and the world. Here is a great challenge and asset for students who wish to prepare themselves to serve in a worth-while way. The work on the new Administration Building is progressing nicely, and we will be able to begin our college work in this building when school opens this fall.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

EDUCATION MUST HAVE A MORAL CORE.

BY GOV. ANGUS W. McLEAN.

(Address of Governor Angus W. McLean, May 29, 1928, at Elon College commencement.)

Members of the Graduating Class:

It is always with a deep sense of responsibility that I address a class of young college graduates. You have completed the prescribed courses and earned your diplomas, and now you stand on the threshold of active service in the battles of life. Heretofore you have depended largely upon your parents and your teachers to give you knowledge and to develop in you a spirit of self-reliance, but now you must face the real issues of life on your own account. You are destined to meet new problems as you go forth from this institution into fields of activity that may seem strange to you. Readjustments will be necessary and you will require more than ordinary education. Culture and academic education alone will not suffice. These great forces, important though they are, will prove futile unless your intellectual attainments have a moral core; they will be ineffectual unless you give them a spiritual interpretation and application.

I come to you, my young friends, not to "speak as one having authority," but, as best I can, to point you to the way of truth as I see it, in the light of my own experience and observation.

If I have any message to leave with you, it is to say that the only panacea for the ills which afflict mankind in his individual, national or international relations is the philosophy of true religion. We have tried utilitarianism and found nothing but failure and vexation of spirit.

Now, what is the moral law, which I say, should be the core of all education? The answer is simple. It consists of those concrete precepts of morality which may be gleaned from the Holy Bible. We find them running through the Ten Commandments in fundamental form; again we find them interpreted and applied to the everyday life of mankind in the Sermon on the Mount.

Moreover, education should have a moral core for reasons that are purely practical. There is nothing inconsistent about this viewpoint, and it cannot be successfully attacked even by those who hold no definite religious views themselves.

The man who does not consider himself bound by the moral law is not even recognized in our governmental scheme. In our own State of North Carolina, no one who does not profess a belief in Almighty God can hold public office. This is safe and logical. The atheist is governed by no moral law; hence, the people are afraid to trust to his administration the affairs of State. The reasonable assumption is that if he does not believe in a God he cannot properly fulfill his duties and obligations to society.

While it is true that Church and State are and ought always to be separate, yet it is equally true that this nation in which we live could not function without the sanctions of the moral law; it would soon fall into a state of decay should the idea of God be left out. The history of civilization proves this.

Students of our history will recall now our colonies, in the beginning of their epoch-making development, preferred to ignore the man-made laws of the mother country and set up in their stead the great moral precepts contained in the Bible. The convention called for the purpose of drafting a Constitution for our government was opened for business by offering a prayer of thanksgiving to Almighty God for His leadership. The first Continental Congress was opened with prayer, upon motion of Samuel Adams.

A distinguished jurist, Eli Ritter, said: "I am not driven to the necessity of basing my claim upon the legal proposition that Christianity is a part of the law of our land, but I do assert that the civilization which obtains in the United States has been, from the beginning of this government, the Christian civilization; and the standards of morality that has obtained in this government from the beginning has ever been, and is now the Christian standard of morality, which is the same as the Mosaic and the Bible standard." That we are a Christian people has been declared by the highest court in the land. In the case of "Holy Trinity Church against the United States" (143 U. S. 457), our own Supreme Court, at Washington, has declared that "No action against religion can be implied to any legislature, State or national, because this is a religious people. This is historically true. From the discovery of this continent until the present hour there is a single voice making the affirmation.

The court then goes on to quote, by way of illustration, the recognition of religion in the commission of Christopher Columbus; in the first grant of land to Sir Walter Raleigh; in the charter of William Penn to the province of Pennsylvania; and in the Declaration of Independence. Continuing, the court says: "There is no dissonance in these declarations. There is a universal language pervading them all, having one meaning; they affirm and reaffirm that this is a religious nation. They are not individual sayings; they speak the voice of the entire nation.

Our courts, from the highest to the lowest, are opened in the name of God. The name of Deity runs through our public documents, legislative, executive and judicial, and cannot be divorced therefrom without endangering their legality. Even time is reckoned on the basis of belief in God; all official documents bear this phrase: "In the Year of our Lord," and money is coined bearing the motto: "In God we Trust." In our own State of North Carolina, we recognize our dependence upon God, in no uncertain terms, in the preamble to our Constitution.

Before the advent of Christ, the Holy Bible, in which you will find the moral law unfolded in all its beauty and significance, was the law. Men lived by it and were judged by it in courts of justice. And even now all laws that affect the well-being of mankind are generally based upon the same moral law. Some of you, no doubt, will take up the practice of law as a chosen profession. In Corpus Juris, the great legal work, which means, literally, "the body of the law," we find this: "The Bible is the inspired Word of God, the Creator of the universe is its Author." Can anything be more sublime, and is it any wonder, then, that men and women in all ages have followed its precepts?

Following the general definition of the Bible thus given, Corpus Juris continues with this remarkable statement: "There is, perhaps, no book so widely used and so highly respected as the Bible; no other that has been translated into as many tongues; no other that has had such marked influence upon the habits and life of the world."

It is to this, the greatest of all textbooks, that we must look if we would make our lives count for most. We must supplement all earthly knowledge with the great truths we find therein, and must incorporate into our lives the teachings it sets forth if we expect to achieve success in the truest form.

This college is devoted not only to education, but to Christian education, which goes beyond the bounds of mere book-learning and takes into account not only our relations to God but our relationship to our fellow-men.

The world has never been more in need of the benign influence of Christian education than it is today. Confronted by complex problems that come to light almost daily, we often grope around for solutions that can be found only in the moral law. We must employ more than mere intellectuality to master these problems. We must view them through the eyes of an undying faith in religion and all that it stands for, and we must apply the principles of the moral law in our daily tasks. Christian education, therefore, is most important in the development of all the enduring qualities of life.

We live in a time when many who regard themselves as super-intellectuals decry the very Word of God itself, and it appears that an organized effort is being made to tear down religion and trample in the dust some of the sacred principles for which it stands and without which this world would be a hopeless place. I say without hesitation

Rev. L. L. Lassiter changes his address from Virgilina, Va., to 15 North Fourteenth Street, Norfolk, Va.

Rev. W. D. Harward, D. D., Windsor, Va., writes: "Our mission quota has been raised at Mt. Carmel. Wish we might have raised more." Let all other Churches do likewise.

Rev. Fred D. Ballard is working among our people and Churches in Eastern Virginia and assisting in increasing the offering to missions. Such a work is very necessary, and we appreciate every assistance rendered to Bro. Ballard.

Rev. C. E. Newman, writing under date of June 25th, says that all of his Churches have taken the special missionary offering. I trust that all our pastors will be able to report the same at the conclusion of the mission period or soon thereafter.

Of all the offerings thus far received from our rural Churches, Antioch, in the Valley of Virginia Conference, takes the lead thus far, with $131.17. Many of our rural Churches are as able financially as this Church is, and if they had the spirit of liberality and missions that Antioch has, our missionary obligations would be met more promptly. We are grateful, indeed, to Antioch for its liberal offering.

Several of the Churches were delayed in taking their missionary offering because they did not take the college offering till late in the spring. Here is hoping that no Church will neglect the matter longer and that all will take the offering, as it is so very much needed. All the Churches that have taken the offering should have the same sent in as soon as possible now, as the money is so much needed. The columns of THE SUN carry the name and the amount of all Churches that have taken and reported the offering thus far.

Mr. J. Frank Nichols, Sims, N. C., writes as follows: "Prof. A. R. Flowers has been asked to speak in the interest of the young people's work in the First Christian (Disciples) Church, Rocky Mount, N. C. Bro. Flowers has many staunch friends in this city, among whom are a number of his old pupils, but the chief reason for the number of friends he has in this section of North Carolina is found in the interest that he has manifested in the people at large. He is a firm believer in the fellowship of all Christians."

Among the ministers we observed and met with at the Elon Chautauqua last week were H. S. Hardcastle, Suffolk, Va.; John G. Truitt, Norfolk, Va.; O. D. Poythress, South Norfolk, Va.; H. E. Crutchfield, Henderson, N. C.; Dr. C. H. Rowland, Greensboro, N. C.; Jesse H. Dollar, Roanoke, Ala.; W. P. Minton and Hermon Eldredge, Dayton, Ohio, and possibly others. It was a pleasure to see these brethren at Elon mingling with young people, teaching them and being taught by them, forming their acquaintances and helping to make the Chautauqua the success it was.

Rev. G. D. Hunt, writing under date June 23d, says: "Mrs. F. E. Bullock, of Dayton, Ohio, was heard with pleasure at the Roanoke, Ala., Christian Church last night. Rev. G. H. Veazey was installed as pastor, a very fine service, indeed. I am praying that the Lord may open the way for Bro. and Sister Barrett to go back to their work in Porto Rico, and he will. We must have men and money, and both belong to God. All we need to do is to yield ourselves and what we have to Him, and all other necessities will be added. I shall take the special mission offering in all of my Churches just as soon as I possibly can do so, though I cannot say how much they will pay, but they shall have the facts in the case as I am able to give them."

Beginning July 1st, Bro. C. D. Johnston, superintendent of the Christian Orphanage, took over THE CHRISTIAN SUN mailing and subscription list. All remittances for the paper and correspondence about subscriptions should be addressed to C. D. Johnston, circulation manager, Elon College, N. C. Bro. Johnston, with all his other work, will undertake to increase the circulation of THE SUN and collect enough money from subscribers to go a long way, if not all the way, in paying the expense of the paper. Like the editor and the associate editors of THE SUN, he does this work gladly and gratis without any expense whatever to the paper. On this account, if on no other, there should be a liberal and ready response to all appeals he may send out in behalf of the paper.

Bro. Sam Davis and Mrs. Davis have evidently had a great meeting at our new Church in Hopewell, Va. The following is taken from the Hopewell correspondence to the Petersburg Progress-Index of June 25th: "The revival meeting at the Christian Church, National Road, began in its second week last night. The Church was packed and Mrs. Pauline Allen Davis, 'the South's own woman evangelist,' spoke on 'Noah and His Ark,' delivering the strongest message it has ever been this writer's privilege to hear. For thirty minutes Mrs. Davis spoke, holding her great audience spellbound and holding them as if by some great unseen power. Mrs. Davis is one of the best-known evangelists of this State and she has had a most remarkable career as an evangelist. She is a fearless preacher and powerful when it comes to knowing the word of God. Sam Leonard Davis, this country's greatest gospel pianist, is masterly in playing the gospel hymns in such a way as no man in Hopewell ever heard before. This great player can play as one who knows the music of heaven. Tonight Mr. Davis has promised to play 'Brighten the Corner,' the piece that made him famous as a great gospel player. Wednesday night there will be a prize given away to the largest family present. That night is one of great importance and it is expected that the Church will be packed. The services begin each evening this week at 7:45."

A STATEMENT.

The Southern Christian Convention, which met in Richmond, in May, elected the writer as circulation manager of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, to take charge July 1st. It is a position we accept with a realization of the work and responsibilities that the work carries with it. No easy job; but a job which will take lots of time and work. It is a known fact that THE CHRISTIAN SUN is not a paying proposition, so far as money is concerned; however, we cannot afford to stop publishing THE SUN because it is not a paying proposition financially. Our Church cannot afford to do without it. It is our Church organ for the entire Southern Convention. Through its columns we keep in touch with our colleges, missions, the Christian Orphanage, and all departments of the Church. In what other way can we keep in weekly touch with these, our institutions, if not through THE CHRISTIAN SUN?

Now, what must we do? We must put it on a better financial basis. What does it cost to publish THE CHRISTIAN SUN? It costs $138.50 per week for 3,000 copies; $2.20 per hundred extra. This is for publishing THE SUN alone. Dr. Atkinson gets no salary for being its editor; Dr. Harper, Rev. Stanley Harrell, Dr. Staley, and Rev. S. M. Lynam, who are associate editors with Dr. Atkinson, get no salary. Your circulation manager, who has charge of keeping up the subscription list and getting new subscribers, collecting the subscriptions to pay the expenses of publishing THE SUN, gets no salary for his work. It is a work of love on the part of us all for the benefit of our denomination. I give THE SUN readers this information so they will know and understand that no one is getting a salary out of the income from the subscriptions paid in; but it all goes to the publisher to pay that weekly expense of $138.50 for printing THE SUN. We always like to take the folks in our confidence, so they will understand where the money goes. Can THE SUN be put on a paying basis? It can. How? By every member of the Christian Church doing his or her duty. See to it that every home in your Church takes THE SUN. Four thousand five hundred subscribers will put THE SUN on a paying basis and pay all the expenses of printing, postage, stationery, etc.

We are accepting this work and will handle it in connection with the Christian Orphanage work for the next two years. We will do our best to see if we can make THE SUN a self-supporting institution for our Church. To help do this work we want to ask the support of all our pastors, all our Sunday School superintendents, teachers and officers, and every individual Church member. If we can have the hearty support of the above-named persons we feel we will succeed. If one fails us we will lose that much and the work will be the harder. We will keep you informed from week to week as to how we succeed.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Elon College, N. C. Circulation Manager.

NOTICE.

The Eastern North Carolina Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention will hold its session July 10th and 11th with the Catawba Springs Sunday School. It is the desire of the Convention to have a report from every Sunday School in the Conference, also a report from all Christian Endeavor Societies.

Mr. Harold W. Johnson, Fuquay Springs, N. C., is corresponding secretary and will mail you report blanks. If for any reason you do not receive one by the 25th of June, please write him and ask that one be sent you.

We hope to establish an honor roll, and for a Sunday School to get on the honor roll they must mail in to the corresponding secretary the report from their Sunday School not later than the 8th of July.

Elect your delegates to the Convention and urge your secretary to send in report, so that we may have the best Convention ever.

ATTENTION.

All money on subscriptions, new or renewals, to THE CHRISTIAN SUN from this date should be sent to C. D. Johnston, circulation manager, Elon College, N. C.; also all items about change of address, dates or labels. All matters for publication in THE SUN should be sent, as heretofore, to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, Elon College, N. C. Bro. Johnston became circulation manager July 1st.

THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

BY ALVA MARTIN KERR.

The Christian Church is unique in that it came into existence neither from the work of some one great leader, as did so many of the other denominations, nor from a single movement. Rather, was it the result of three spontaneous beginnings in widely separated parts of the country—New England, the South, and the Central West. These movements grew out of the spirit of freedom which accompanied the Revolutionary War and carried over into the realm of religion the same doctrine of individual rights and liberty which had had so much to do with the establishment of our political government.

The movement in the South began about 1792 in a controversy in the Methodist Episcopal Church between Bishop Asbury and a small group of ministers, led by a brilliant young man by the name of James O'Kelly, over the right of a Church or minister to appeal from the decision of the bishop. The bishop won out, and the group seceded to form what was at first known as Republican Methodists. The New England movement grew out of a revolt on the part of a couple of Baptist ministers, Abner Jones and Elias Smith, against sectarian creeds and names. They held that every individual Christian should be allowed the right to follow the dictates of his own conscience, and that Christian character, rather than any creedal statement or baptismal mode, should be the only test of fellowship. The movement of the Central West came about because of the great Cane Ridge revivals, which had made thousands of converts from the descendants of all denominations in the frontier districts of Ohio, Kentucky, and Tennessee. The question arose as to what Churches should claim these converts, so conflictingly different in their theological inheritances and training. Facing such necessity, a group of Presbyterian ministers, under the leadership of Barton W. Stone, withdrew from their presbytery and, with Rice Haggard, David Purviance and others, began to organize Churches which should be known simply by the name Christian and which should receive into their membership any sincere follower of Jesus Christ without reference to intellectual belief or ceremonial practice.

Later on, these three movements, which had begun within a few years of each other and which had arrived at almost identical basic principles without knowledge of each other, learned through the press of each other's existence and came together to form the Christian Church. It was the connecting of these movements which led to the designation "Christian Connection," which for long years figured in its history. The spirit and objective of the united movement was crystalized into what has been known as its cardinal Principles:

Jesus Christ the Head of the Church;

Christian, our only name;

The Bible the only rule of faith and practice;

Individual interpretation of the Scriptures the right and duty of all;

Christian character, the test of fellowship;

The union of all of the followers of Christ, to the end that the world may believe.

It will be seen that the two great dominating thoughts which have motivated the Christian Church from the beginning were: First, the liberty of the individual believer, with the right and the duty of each to find God and to express his own religion in the way which would be the most helpful to him himself; and its concomitant, that each must grant to every other believer this same right which he claims for himself. Second, the union of all of the followers of Jesus Christ and an effort to find a basis broad enough and inclusive enough for such union. These convictions and these purposes the Christian Church will carry as its contribution into any union into which it goes. Our people have not always clearly understood the fullest implicates of these Principles; but wherein they have failed, it has been of understanding and not of ideal or purpose. As the years have gone on, they have apprehended more perfectly, until today I believe that I am correct in saying that in every Church in our entire brotherhood the individual Christian will find perfect liberty to follow his own conscience in both belief and practice.

It is highly important just here to sound a word of caution lest the Christian Church of which we are speaking be confused with the Disciples of Christ. This body, whose organization in America came a few years later, but is a much larger group, frequently takes the name "Christian" where we have no Churches—a fact which has led to much confusion and misunderstanding. The two movements have had much in common, but are vastly different in spirit and in basic approach to the question of union, for which both of them plead. The Disciples are legalistic, and hence strictly immersionists; while the Christian Church grants the same liberty in matters of baptism that it does in all other points of belief or practice, and will gladly use immersion, trine immersion, pouring, or sprinkling, or just as gladly receive members of the Friends faith who believe only in spiritual baptism and use no water ceremony whatever. There are ministers among us who are not so broad in their own individual practice of baptism, but in that measure they are not enjoying the true genius of our Church and their number is rapidly decreasing.

The Christian Church has always been of pioneer spirit. It was perhaps the first in Christendom to take the position on baptism spoken of above. It was the first to ordain women to the ministry. It was the first to establish a weekly religious newspaper, its Herald of Gospel Liberty now being in its one hundred and twentieth year. Antioch College, founded at Yellow Springs, Ohio, by the Christian Church, under the eminent Horace Mann as its first president, was the first co-educational institution to graduate men and women as absolute equals—Oberlin College up to that time still making a difference between the sexes at time of graduation. It was the first of the denominations to reunite its divided forces after the Civil War. And this spirit of adventure into the new and untried still exists among us and makes us ready to venture upon any path which looks to the consummation of that union of the Churches for which we long have contended and towards which the whole of Christendom is so manifestly and surely moving. The members of the Christian Church could not think of the proposed union with the Congregationalists as a complete objective, but only as a step towards that larger union which the Congregationalists advocate as much as we.

The Christian Church is permeated with a very deep faith in the reality of the spiritual and in the personality of God. The independence of their thinking has never led its membership far from the great certitudes of faith, as the dogmatists seem to feel is bound to occur where there are no creedal restrictions or "standards." There is a great latitude in belief, as between the most liberal and most conservative in its membership; but it is a belief without vagueness, and the Church will carry into any fellowship into which it goes that warmth of spirit which is born only from deep faith in the communion with a personal Saviour. In former times, the Christian Church was vibrantly evangelistic, and in these later years it has been working back again towards that spirit of evangelism which so marked its beginning. It is predominantly, though not altogether, a Church of the rural sections; and its democratic genius leads it to have a deep understanding of the common people of whom the Lord has made so many, and its greatest strength lies in those country and small-town communities upon which so much emphasis is being placed in present-day Christian effort. This will be one of its largest contributions, both in substance and spirit, to any union of forces which it may enter.

Though the Christian Church, because of earlier weaknesses of organization and lack of dominating leadership, is small in numbers, it believes itself to be large in basic principles. Over a century ago it took the position towards which all Churches are now tending and upon which the Federal Council of Churches, the Christian Endeavor, the Y. M. and Y. W. C. A., and practically all other interdenominational bodies are founded, viz: that of recognizing each individual as Christian on his own profession of faith, attested by Christian character. It is this position which now forms the basis for the proposed union between Congregational and Christian Churches and which seems destined to become the one only foundation upon which the Christian forces of the world can ever unite—Christianity as a way of life, and the right of the individual believer to walk with liberty therein.

The Christian Church is not great in size, but it tries to be as great in spirit and as fine in fellowship as any, and as keen in the understanding of our own times and the movements of God that quicken our own day. Its one predominant purpose has been to help bring about the union of the followers of Christ; and it believes that the time is now ripe for the actual beginning of such a movement among the Churches. And this conviction it must carry with it wherever it goes as its most urgent mission, a mission which will not be fulfilled until the prayer of our Lord and Christ has been answered by the unity of the Church and the belief of the world.—Herald of Gospel Liberty.

AMERICA'S OPPORTUNITY.

"America has a supreme opportunity to show the world that two races radically different can live side by side in peace and friendship and work out their destiny together in mutual helpfulness," said Dr. Robert Moton, principal of Tuskegee Institute, before an interracial commencement audience of fifteen hundred that packed and overran the sisters' chapel of Spelman College. "We have not yet learned fully how to do it," continued Dr. Moton, "but thousands of sincere people of both races are working at it honestly and encouraging progress is being made."

Taking as his text the parable of the good samaritan as illustrating the second of Jesus' great laws, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," Dr. Moton showed how the parable applies perfectly to the interracial situation in America today, and made a powerful plea for an unselfish, Christ-like love of humanity that will make each race kindly, just and helpful in its attitude toward the other. Such an attitude, he insisted, offers the only hope for the solution of the interracial problem. It will work and nothing else will, he said, basing his confidence on many striking incidents from his own observation and experience.

"If I could keep only one of Jesus' two great laws," said Dr. Moton, "I would choose to keep the second; for I very much doubt if there is any way by which a man may really love and serve God except by loving and serving his fellow-men. Whether you can measure up to that standard, even though your neighbor be your enemy, is the test of both your education and your religion, for the primary purpose of each is to prepare people to get along together in friendly helpfulness." Dr. Moton spoke in high terms of the interracial movement of the hundreds of Southern women who have gone on record in condemnation of lynching and in behalf of a fair deal in race relations.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THEY PRESENT GOVERNOR AL. SMITH.

In their convention, at Houston, Texas, last week, the Democrats have offered to the country Governor Al. Smith, of New York, and request the people to vote for him as President. Under such conditions, it is well enough for the people to know something of what Governor Smith advocates and represents. Let it be said that, in all of his public career, he has been a consistent friend and patron of liquor and the saloon, and has always fought and voted against any encroachment upon the saloon. To this end, he has always voted for the saloon, against Churches, schools, and even against local option where protection had been voted by the people against the saloon. We submit herewith a few dates when such votes were cast, and would like for CHRISTIAN SUN readers to ponder over these things to see whether they wish a man like this to be the chief executive of this nation:

"On April 3, 1907, he voted to keep a local option bill strangled in committee. On April 26, 1910, he voted against local option for cities of New York. On May 24, 1911, he again voted against local option for cities. On July 19th of the same year he voted against the Gray local option bill. In 1912 he opposed local option for third-class cities. In 1913 he packed the excise committee with Tammany men to strangle all temperance legislation. On March 19, 1914, he voted against local option for cities, city sub-divisions and counties. On March 31, 1915, he voted against a referendum on State-wide prohibition. In April of the same year he opposed the granting of local option to the university city of Ithaca.

"In 1904 he voted against saloon restrictions. In 1905 he voted against a bill to close assignation houses and houses of ill fame conducted as Raines law hotels, or saloons. In 1908 he opposed regulation and enforcement features of the liquor-tax law. In 1913 he was responsible for defeat of a bill against knowingly delivering liquor in dry territory except to a bona fide consignee. On April 4, 1904, he voted to force hotel bars into 300 dry towns, contrary to popular vote. In 1912 he voted for a bill to make it harder to convict New York saloon-keepers for violation of law. In 1913 he voted to increase the number of saloons in his State. In the same year, he secured passage of a bill to save convicted liquor-law violators from revocation of their licenses. In 1907 he voted to open up prohibited areas for the sale of liquors. In 1911 he voted to increase the hours during which liquor could be sold. In 1913 he did his utmost to help the passage of a bill legalizing the opening of saloons on Sunday in New York City.

"In 1908 he voted to remove zone provisions protecting Churches and schools from saloons. In 1909 he introduced and pushed a bill to permit hotel bars within Church and school zones. In 1911, once again he voted to open up prohibited zones about Churches and schools to the liquor traffic. In 1913 he secured the passage of a bill permitting saloons within 200 feet of private schools.

"Governor Smith has been the consistent friend of the gamblers of the State. He voted against Governor Hughes' anti-race-track gambling bill and on various occasions opposed measures intended to curb gamblers."

If CHRISTIAN SUN readers wish a man as chief executive who is himself a patron of the saloons and indulges to excess, besides openly advocating the saloon even against the rights of schools, Churches and communities, then let them vote for this man. He is the offering of Tammany Hall, the most corrupt political institution this country has ever known. He was brought up in the atmosphere of the saloon and has been its consistent friend and advocate. For our part, it seems a shameful and a sorry spectacle to ask the decent people of this country to vote for a man like that for its chief executive.

The thought of running this man for President on a platform that declares prohibition is too absurd to deceive any one. What would a man, whose sole reputation to date rests on the fact of his advocacy of liquor and the saloon, accomplish on a platform which is contrary to his own nature and his whole public career? Up to this hour, this man has not told the country what he stands for, so far as the great national issues are concerned. A vote for Governor Al. Smith can mean nothing else than a vote to nullify the constitutional amendment and repeal the Volstead act, for in the State over which he has presided as the chief executive he has used his influence to the limit to do this very thing and has made it one of the wettest States in the Union. The politicians, especially the wets, have forced upon us a moral question, and as such it must be dealt with.

ELON YOUNG PEOPLE'S SCHOOL.

The Chautauqua and School of Methods closed its annual session at Elon College Friday P. M., June 29th. It was the consensus of opinion that this was the best of all the sessions of the Chautauqua held thus far. In the first place, the attendance was made up almost solely of young people from the various parts of the Church. There were also quite a few who came from Congregational Churches. There were registered for the classes 113, which did not include the attendance at the evening services and other public programs. It was the writer's privilege to be present daily at some of the classes, and he was surprised to find the seriousness and the determination with which the young people were working and the real effective work that the teachers were doing. He was especially interested in the assignment by the teachers to the classes of work to be done each day, and then by the reports next day on what had been done. One of the outstanding features of the school was the willingness with which the pupils entered into any program or assignment made by the teachers. One of the teachers in the mission department, for instance, called for volunteers to put on a pageant. The volunteers not only offered their services, but took the pageant in hand with almost no assistance further from the teacher, and within forty-eight hours from the time the request was made, one of the most striking and beautiful pageants we have ever witnessed was presented in a most efficient and attractive manner. It shows what can be done when there are those who are willing to try. Possibly, the most enjoyable of all the public services was the vesper worship held by Rev. H. S. Hardcastle and his class on worship at 7:30 P. M. each day on the wide veranda and long steps and spreading lawn in front of the Alamance Hall. Bro. Hardcastle taught a class of young people in worship and the elements that should enter into worship, and each evening at the vesper service the teaching of the day was put into practice. The services were beautiful and impressive. One evening, with the assistance of two other ministers, a Communion service was held during the vespers, the wine and the bread being distributed by six girls dressed in white. The prayers, the songs, the Scripture reading, all in the open at twilight hour, made an impression on the group of a hundred or two gathered there that they cannot soon forget.

The second feature that especially impressed the writer was the character of the teaching and the spirit thereof that the teachers carried into their work. Bro. Hermon Eldredge had a class in "The Story of the Bible," which, after the second day, outgrew the large recitation room and had to be carried to the chapel for accommodation for the succeeding periods of the study. Bro. Eldredge believes that the Bible is the inspired Word of God and that much of the modern teaching about this Word containing contradictions, unbelievable miracles, and impossible characters, is all derived from shallow thinking and from superficial study of the Book. Those who believe that the Bible is a book like other books containing the weaknesses, contradictions and follies of other books, either have not read the Book itself or have arrived at their conclusions by illogical reasoning or by shallow and superficial thinking. The class of young people taking the course got some real information and inspiration that they will not forget. Other courses were equally inspiring, and it is safe to say that the teachers who led the work were men and women who believed in the inspiration of the sacred Scriptures, in the Deity of Christ, and in the real need of salvation through repentance and forgiveness of sins. And yet we have not sat under teachers who were more constructive and progressive. They are progressive as their teachings show, but they progress on the lines laid down in the Book of God and with the thought that God is first and is to be put first, and that in Him is the fullness of life and the power of all progress.

We cannot speak in detail of the various teachers and their great work, but the highest tribute paid to their work, as it impressed the writer, was the enthusiasm of their pupils and the general verdict from their pupils that the school had been worth while, and all regretted when it came to a close and many of them look forward to coming back next year. To gather more than 100 of our young people in such a school and inspire them with high visions and noble purposes is no mean contribution to Church life. Verily, our Chautauqua and School of Methods at Elon has found its place and day, has justified its being, and is an institution whose influence is a real asset to the Church and to the kingdom.

THE CRADLE AND THE KINGDOM.

I.

It has been said that "the mother who rocks the cradle rules the world," and Jesus, in answering the question, "Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven?" said: "Whosoever, therefore, shall humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven." Moreover, He said: "Except ye be converted and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven." Entrance into the kingdom of heaven is through the gate of child-life, and distinction in the kingdom is through child-characteristics. It may be a question whether entering into the kingdom means initiation or comprehension. One may enter into a society without entering into the real spirit and genius of the organization. Only child conditions can enter fully into the true spirit of the kingdom of heaven and enjoy the full benefits of faith and love. The question is, therefore, the child and the kingdom.

What is the kingdom of heaven and what are its marks? It is a kingdom controlled by heavenly laws and may have location anywhere, even in the world we now inhabit. "The kingdom of God is within you," or among you. One may be in the Church and outside the kingdom. One may reside in the United States and not be a citizen. The kingdom is not the visible institution, for it does not come with observation. The kingdom of heaven is a spiritual government, and citizenship in it is, also, spiritual. Here are a few of the elements of this kingdom:

1. Faith—not force nor legal covenants. We are not under law, but under grace—the favor of God. "Therefore, being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ: by whom, also, we have access by faith into this grace wherein we stand, and rejoice in the hope of the glory of God." We do not enter into agreement with God, but trust in God as a little child. It is simple faith in Jesus Christ that constitutes the greatness of the kingdom; that is its supreme glory. Faith is the substance of things, and child-life only can possess this to the fullest degree. We lose faith as we gain knowledge, unless the little child spirit is maintained. No man has as much faith in men as he had when a child.

2. Love—to God and to neighbor. Self is a diminishing quantity in the exercise of this divine affection. The innocence of the child consists in its ignorance of itself and others. It is the obtrusion of self upon the field of affection that prevents love to God and neighbor as the requirement of the kingdom. So far as love rules, the kingdom of heaven prevails even now.

3. Power—not armies and navies, but influences mightier than the sweet influences of Pleiades and brighter than the bands of Orion. The beams of the far-off sun that melt the frozen Niagara in spring-time are not more potent than this unseen power that rules in the kingdom of heaven. The parables that set forth this kingdom show its small beginnings, its steady increase, its great value, and its wide empire. It is a grain of mustard seed that grows into a tree, or a little leaven that leavens the whole lump; it is a pearl of great price or a rich treasure; it fills the whole earth. It does not interfere with any good institution, and it is open to all. Its domain is as wide as the world, and its King is the Prince of Peace.

PREPARED PEOPLE.

Did you ever wonder at the overwhelming response that was made to the preaching of John the Baptist? The Baptist himself seems to have been surprised at the great crowds that came to hear his message and at the way they received his message when they had come. One phrase is responsible for the successful reception of his message. That phrase is "the kingdom of heaven." It was the magic key that unlocked their hearts for the message to enter.

The message, "The kingdom of heaven is at hand," was so potent, because for centuries God had been centering the thoughts, the aspirations and the expectations of the people around that one theme. The prophets had made it the burden of their message. The leaders of the people had used that idea to stimulate the people to seek greater heights in time of prosperity and to arouse the fainting spirits in time of adversity. It was an objective that had challenged the biggest, the noblest and the best in the Jewish nation for centuries. John needed only to say that the kingdom was at hand, and the people were ready to respond.

The challenge of the kingdom had a universal appeal, because it concerned elemental things. In it were involved the most vital problems of the human heart. To arouse and enlist an entire people, there must be an issue that vitally concerns every one; something big enough for every one to live for, and if need be to die for. The weakness of the Protestant world today lies in the fact that it does not clearly recognize such a supreme objective. We do not recognize any one objective, that above all other things in heaven and earth, we desire to accomplish. Nor can one well imagine any issue big enough to draw us all together save the one that John the Baptist announced, that of the kingdom of heaven.

Some one may say that we have just that objective before us now. As an intellectual concept, there are a great many people who do have just that objective. There are comparatively a few who have it as the one supreme desire of their lives. But the rank and file of Protestant Christendom is spending its thought, time and energy on other and lesser things. It is not enough that something has a place in our intellectual life. If it is going to be a factor in molding our destiny it must be bound up with all our associations and emotions. It must be vitally related to every act and thought of our lives. We must measure everything by whether or not it advances or hinders that one supreme purpose.

We are tremendously busy these days, both individually and collectively. We are busy getting ready for a great many things. And many of them are very fine and worthy things. But are we getting ready for a kingdom? We may have millions of things and still not have a kingdom. We may have a score or a hundred states or a thousand states and cities, and still not have a kingdom. We may have a strong federation, and still be a long way short of a kingdom. A kingdom is a realm that is directed by a single personality to the end that it may accomplish a definite purpose. The kingdom of heaven is a realm directed by Jesus Christ to the end that righteousness may reign.

It still remains the most insistent duty of our day to prepare a people for a kingdom.

THE KIND OF POWER NEEDED.

It is power that moves the world. What we need, however, is the right kind of power. President Coolidge is quoted as saying: "We do not need more intellectual power, we need more spiritual power. We do not need more of the things that are seen, we need more of the things that are unseen."

This is a very timely utterance, for all of us well know "there has grown up in recent years an increasing sense of altruism, a desire to help others; and much time, energy and money is spent in education and cultivation of man's physical and intellectual abilities. But a greater emphasis is needed upon spiritual life, without which people perish."

This is true and good enough to come from a great man, whether President Coolidge said it or not. Education and intellectual power and pursuits never have yet saved a people nor carried them forward in the best things of real life. The civilizations of the past were most immoral and most corrupt when enlightenment, learning and education were at their highest and best. What our civilization needs at present is not education only, but the right sort of education—the education that puts God first in the thinking and keeps Him there in the living and in the activities and attitudes of individuals. We have intellectual power enough to move the world to very high heights if it were capable of doing so without itself. But the saving power of civilization, and the needed element in our present civilization, and certainly even in our education, is spiritual power. That power that comes as a gift of God and fellowship with God, a deep and an abiding and unshakable faith in God and in His power to save and save to the uttermost—that is the power the world now needs most.

EDUCATION MUST HAVE A MORAL CORE.

tion that there is no effective substitute for religious training.

Throughout my life, and especially since becoming Governor, I have been impressed with the futility of human laws to control the ugly passions of mankind. Even though our laws are based upon the Ten Commandments—the great Magna Charta of humanity—and tempered with the precepts of the Sermon on the Mount, they are impotent without a knowledge of and faith in the Supreme Lawgiver.

To be a good citizen, one must obey the laws, because he does not wish to bring reproach upon his own good name and that of his community and not simply to avoid punishment. If this attitude were universal there would be no need for our jails or other penal institutions which are maintained at great expense to the law-abiding element.

No one need hesitate about making the moral law and the Bible the core of his education. There is nothing about it of which to be ashamed. The person who needs to hang his head in shame is the one who thinks he owes no obligation to the moral law. Some of the most brilliant minds in this and other countries are found in the ranks of religious adherents, among men and women who have never yielded an inch of ground in their religious convictions. From Christian institutions have gone forth men and women whose devout lives have influenced the destinies of nations, who have promoted the cause of scientific research and who have proved blessings to humanity. True religion has never conflicted with truth and never will, because it is founded on truth. Christian education has never been a drawback to progress, but without it there could be no progress in the truest sense of that word.

Religion, which is based on the great precepts contained in the Bible, has always played a leading role in world affairs. Men and women who have given the world the greatest service have been godly men and women—not necessarily rulers in temporal things—who have been willing to sacrifice for the sake of service to others. I bring you a striking example of this from a pamphlet entitled "Lives that Live."

One day Stanley found Livingston in the interior of Africa. "Come with me; cities like Edinburgh and London want you. The people of America want to see you and hear you lecture. Money will come in like a golden river. You have earned your honors and now rest." "No," answered Livingston; "I'm not ambitious for honors. I am only ambitious to do the will of God."

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Church paper is essential to the perpetuity and growth of the denomination. There is no denomination that has greater reason for subscribing for and reading the Church paper than the Christian Church. The Christian Church issued the first religious paper in the world in the year 1808. It was issued first from Portsmouth, N. H., in September, 1808, and is now issued from Dayton, Ohio, as the official organ of the General Convention of the Christian Church. It is in its 120th year and has gone out on its mission weekly to help people in their personal religion and their religious work. Every family in the Christian Church should take the Herald of Gospel Liberty, at $2.00 a year, for that is its name. Since that paper was first issued, hundreds of religious papers have sprung up to prove the movement worthy, not only of our support, but worthy of adoption by all other denominations. Its editor, Rev. Alva M. Kerr, D. D., is one of the leading editors of Church papers in the United States. His writings are more frequently quoted by great papers, as the Literary Digest, than other Church editors.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN, the organ of the Southern Christian Convention, was first issued in 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr, and is now in its 84th year. It is edited by Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., and three assistants, and is published weekly by the Central Publishing Company, Richmond, Va., with Dr. P. J. Kernodle as managing editor. Every family in the Southern Christian Convention ought to take THE CHRISTIAN SUN for three reasons: First, members of the Church ought to keep in touch with the Convention plans and purposes; second, with the institutions of the Conventions, their plans, work and needs; third, the local Churches, in no other way, can keep in co-operative working touch with one another, and this is essential to the life and growth of the local Church, as well as the Conference to which it belongs. Dr. Atkinson and his co-editors all do their work without pay, and the paper costs only $2.00 a year, and that is only 4 cents a week.

No family need claim poverty as a reason for not taking the paper, for if there is any family in the Church unable to subscribe for it, other members would gladly pay for it. There is no other method of solving local Church finances equal to the Church paper in every home. Nothing would do more to restore Dr. Atkinson's health than THE CHRISTIAN SUN in every home of the Southern Convention. His good editorials would shine with new lustre and ring with new hope for all the enterprises of the Church. Pastors could find no greater help in their work than THE SUN in every home of their congregations. THE SUN in the home is like sunshine in the garden and the field. It is small cost, but big return. The Church paper is next to the Bible in the home, and the home is not complete without both.

ELON LETTER.

There is a strong feeling today that certain persons ought not to go to college, that only certain types and particularly those of alert mind should be accepted by colleges. A glance at the types of men whom Jesus selected as disciples will be illuminating on this point. Given in pairs and in Matthew's order, they are: Peter—quick, impulsive, impetuous, with Andrew—slow, practical, observant; James the elder—advanced in years, sophisticated, calculating, with John—youthful, buoyant, passionate lover; Philip—mentally stupid, perhaps of Gentile origin, with Nathaniel—mentally brilliant, an Israelite without guile; Thomas—doubted, of scientific mind, demanding proof, rationalistic, a modernist, with Matthew—a man of fearless faith, changing his allegiances readily, credulous; James the less—a just man, committed to a program of practical righteousness, with Jude—theologian, a doctrinaire, a fundamentalist; Simon, a zealot, forgetting himself in his cause, a radical, a red, a bolshevist, with Judas—phlegmatic, materialistic, selfish, looking at every cause from the standpoint of its bearing upon his personal interests. Certain conclusions force themselves upon us as we read this immortal roster of the students in the original Christian college: (1) No type should properly be excluded; (2) each type is helped (even Judas was helped; helped to the point where he did not care to live when he had seen himself as he really was) by association with the others; (3) in co-operative effort we can serve best by associating with our opposite as the pairing of these men by Jesus suggests; and (4) there can be no doubt that the various types included in the twelve look toward the practical necessity for the united efforts on the part of all Christians in Christian union, and as a direct consequence of the transforming influence of Christian education.

GRACE.

Grace is the kindness and love that God our Saviour hath towards men, not by reason of their works of righteousness, but according to His mercy. He saves men by the washing of regeneration. Grace is, therefore, constantly set in contrast to the law. Under the law, God demands righteousness from men; under grace He gives righteousness to all, that the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us who walk not after the flesh but after the Spirit. The believer in Christ is now shrouded under grace as complete and blessed righteousness and the law can find neither fault nor diminution therein. This is called the righteousness of God by faith. Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth on Him. Grace is a free gift and begins with the death and resurrection of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith. But follow the righteousness, faith, charity and peace, with them that call on God out of a pure heart. Shall we sin because we are not under the law but under grace? No. Grace is not only dispensationally a method of divine dealing in salvation, but it is a method of God in the believer's life and services. For sin shall not have dominion over us, for we are not under the law but under grace. A righteous life is the result of salvation through Christ. As we are saved, we are not under the law, but under grace. According to the grace that is given to us, we have righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Spirit. Be strong, therefore, in the grace which is in Jesus Christ that you may obtain mercy to help in time of need, whereby you may serve God acceptably with reverence and godly fear. But God giveth grace unto the humble. We have access unto this grace wherein we stand and rejoice in the hope of the glory of God, even our Father, which hath loved us, and hath given us everlasting consolation and good hope through grace.

PIEDMONT JUNIOR COLLEGE.

Piedmont Junior College is an accredited co-educational junior college of Piedmont College, Demorest, Ga., and its courses are co-ordinated with those of Piedmont College.

Piedmont College is a charter member of the Association of Georgia Colleges, a member of the Association of American Colleges, and is an accredited college of the Southern Association of Colleges.

The junior college is an integral part of the senior college at Demorest, Ga. Its faculty and courses offered are under the supervision of Piedmont's committee on educational policy. The members of the instructional force are associate members of the faculty of Piedmont College and the departmental instruction is under the supervision of the head of the department of Piedmont College, Demorest, Ga.

Since Piedmont Junior College is under the educational supervision of Piedmont College, Demorest, Ga., and will be compelled to conform to Piedmont's scholastic standing as to faculty, library, laboratory and building equipment, Piedmont College has cordially entered into a full educational merger with it, as its own junior college, and its credits will be received at Piedmont College at full, face value and accredited by Piedmont College to other educational institutions as its own. Fall semester will open September 12, 1928. Wadley, Ala. S. L. BEOUGHNER.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

A Sunday School teacher in a Christian Church located in the South should certainly read THE CHRISTIAN SUN. But why so, some one will ask? The preachers have been telling us we ought to read it for years past, and we think of doing so as a duty. Now, performance of duty does not always appeal to us; we would prefer to do something that pleases. Will you permit me, therefore, to present the idea of reading THE SUN as a pleasure rather than as a duty.

As I write this in my office, I do not have a copy of THE SUN before me, but in my mind's eye I see it. I know just where to find the last copy when I get home tonight. I can see it now. There it is with the caption on the first page. And just underneath it will usually be found Rev. Lynam's crisp, interesting items of news and comments. That man must read a lot of newspapers. I try to keep up with general news, but he brings out many an item I never read or heard. I get real information from that front page, which makes THE SUN worth while if there were no other pages to it. But when I begin to turn the pages I find on every one interesting news from the Churches and inspiring articles. Our good Christian friend, Dr. Harper, will likely have written a column or two. I like to read them because they have been thought out. There's never any vague, negative statements coming from him. Every statement is positive; no wasted words. Dr. Harper is a thinker. What he writes is the result of much reading and much thought. By following his articles, one may save a world of study. Then, too, we are sure to know more about our college.

Perhaps there will be something from Dr. Atkinson's pen, as there is, I believe, in the current issue. How we have been missing him while he has been regaining his health! There is truly a man of God. How virile, how inspirational, how overflowing with the spirit of God is his every article! One would have difficulty to remain an unbeliever and follow dear Bro. Atkinson. And a believer would necessarily become a doer of the Word.

But let us turn a page. We're sure to appreciate Dr. Staley's lively articles; we'll surely appreciate John W. Truitt's practical sermons; we can't help getting good from Chaplain Rountree's daily talks; the field notes will give us a better idea of the work at large; the special articles will inform us and inspire us. Then, last, but not least, we find Bro. Johnson's report and news of our Orphanage.

All in all, we have to agree that any one in the Southern Convention who fails to read THE SUN and attempts to teach a Sunday School class will be left behind. We can't confine ourselves to a small community and expect to help the kingdom of God very far. We must have vision. There is no better way to get vision than by reading. We can't claim very much interest in that denomination we call our own unless we know what others are doing.

Ever since I have been writing this little article my enthusiasm for THE SUN has grown. I've just been wondering whether I'd care so much about others if I didn't read our Church paper. I'm afraid I'd be very narrow if I didn't know what others are doing and thinking.

Yours for better Sunday Schools,

W. B. TRUITT.

ETERNAL VALUES IN SCRIPTURES.

President Coolidge is quoted as saying, "We do not need more intellectual power; we need more spiritual power. We do not need more of the things that are seen; we need more of the things that are unseen." There has grown up in recent years an increasing sense of altruism, a desire to be helpful to others; and much time, energy and money is spent in education and cultivation of man's physical and intellectual abilities; but a greater emphasis is needed upon spiritual life, without which people perish.

For the purpose of giving the widest possible circulation of the gospel of Christ, this vital, permanent and nourishing written Word of God, the American Scripture Gift Mission has for many years been sending out gospels and Testaments to Christian workers all over the United States, to the West India Islands, and to parts of South and Central America. Teachers in day schools, or Sunday Schools, visitors to hospitals or prisons, workers in lumber or mining camps have sent to Philadelphia for attractive little illustrated gospels and pocket Testaments. Samples are sent on request. (The Book of Acts is also printed uniform with the gospels at only 2 cents each, and is especially useful now with the International Sunday School Lessons.)

A few recorded instances of blessing received through such gift Scriptures should deepen one's appreciation of the value of the Bible and perhaps be suggestive as to how others might become sowers of the seed, "which is the Word of God."

A visitor to a hospital in a Southern city talked to a sick man about his soul's welfare and offered him a gospel of John. After two days he returned and found the man had read it and wanted other passages from the Bible, saying he had been praying. The visitor reported, "The next time I returned to the hospital he was a transformed man, saying that Christ had saved him and that he was reading his Bible and praying continually. The doctors did not think the man was seriously ill, but in just a few days after this testimony the man stood before the great judgment bar. I believe in this case the Word was the power of God unto salvation."

A layman of Pennsylvania writes quite regularly to the Scripture Gift Mission and obtains gospels and Testaments. He reports getting others interested in personal evangelism by using these little illustrated gift Scriptures. They go two by two into the homes of "the folks that never attend Church, read the Word, have prayer and invite them to Christ. One of the workers was at my home today getting tracts and gospels to give out.

He works in a garage and led one of the roughest men in G—— to Christ last week."

A volunteer worker in the mountains of Pennsylvania having started a Sunday School, writes, "Some of these young people, twenty years old, had never heard a religious service or a public prayer. Found eleven homes that did not have or ever had a Bible." This in Pennsylvania!

A distributor in North Carolina writes: "I have a great many who have gone through the little books (gospels) and learned verses by heart. They can't do without them. Untold good is being done."

The zeal to do personal work, the ability to win others to Christ and the definite working of the Holy Spirit to bring about a change in another's heart, seem always to go with the knowledge of and actual use of the Scriptures. D. L. Moody said that every case of conversion of which he knew had been brought about through a portion of the Bible that the Holy Spirit used.

Hundreds of school teachers, especially in the rural districts, have found their children eager to read the gospels, memorize verses and thus "earn" Testaments of their own. One teacher from the foothills of the Blue Ridge Mountains sent in a request for thirty-two Testaments thus earned and wrote: "They were pleased with their little gospels and are anxious for a Testament. I certainly do appreciate it. It is doing good in my school. It helps me to teach children to do right. I have never had so much love among children."

Thousands of Scripture portions are sent out each week, especially to the rural sections of our country not reached by other agencies. The work is dependent upon voluntary contributions.

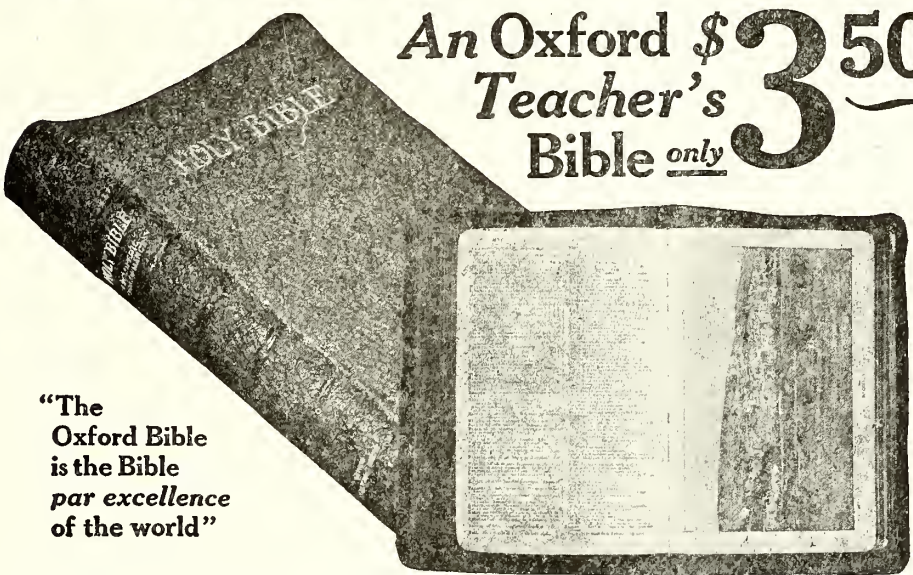

Only eternity can reveal the spiritual results of this sort of ministry; the sowing of this good seed in the soil that is so ready for it. Much fruit is being born to the account of those who make it possible. We appeal to Christians to pray and give as they can, that God's grace may continue upon this blessed work.

STUDY OF CITY CHURCH.

In the last half-dozen years the Institute of Social and Religious Research has made a number of scientific surveys of city Churches and their communities, in the course of which it has devised and applied precise and accurate methods of study.

This pioneer work has, of course, been done by experts in research. But now that methods have been developed and tested, the institute has published a 235-page volume, "How to Study the City Church," of which Dr. H. Paul Douglass is the author, which opens wide the door of scientific study to city ministers, Church officials and others untrained in survey procedure.

"Two classes of men," Dr. Douglass says in his introduction, "are primarily concerned in locally undertaking first-hand studies of the Church, namely: parish ministers (with their associated lay officials), and denominational executives in charge of minor territorial districts, with whom may be grouped secretaries of city extension societies and of Church federations.

"The parish minister may want to make an all-round study of his Church; or to intensify the investigation of some one or more limited aspects of its life and work; or he may feel the need to investigate the religious antecedents and affiliations of the population of a city or particular area to determine his Church's responsibility.

"The first three chapters of the book give directions for making studies growing out of these three typical situations. It is assumed in all three cases that the proposed research is to be carried out by the Church's own leaders with very little expert assistance, if any; that it will be conducted in connection with regular duties and without the setting up of elaborate special machinery. In brief, self-surveys are contemplated.

"The city or district executive, or the federation secretary who may be interested in studying the city Church, naturally wants to investigate the collective institutional life of some group of Churches with which he is concerned. If his object is primarily ecclesiastical, he may be satisfied to deal with strictly institutional phenomena, omitting the larger setting in which the Church group finds itself; or he may wish to explore the relations of Churches to the particular neighborhoods or communities to which they belong.

"The second division of the book tells how to make these studies. Chapter V tells how to make two types of studies of groups of Churches, one historical, the other contemporaneous; while chapter VI shows how to fill in the study of the community background.

"The processes involved in these studies are not too difficult technically to be carried out by such Church executives as are in mind, provided the Church group under investigation is fairly small, the survey schedule simple, and the community not too extensive or complicated.

"When, however, the data are extensive and the Church group has an entire city or metropolitan area for its social background, it is assumed that even the limited survey will be under expert professional direction. Chapter VII outlines the practical conduct of complete community surveys of organized religion definitely requiring extensive organization, large budgets, and a corps of professional research and survey workers."

A REAL FRIEND IS—

One whose grip is a little tighter,
One whose smile is a little brighter,
One whose deeds are a little whiter—
That's what I call a friend.

One who'll lend as quick as he'll borrow,
One who's the same today as tomorrow,
One who will share your joy and sorrow—
That's what I call a friend.

One who's thoughts are a little cleaner,
One who's mind is a little keener,
One who avoids those things that are meaner—
That's what I call a friend.

One when you're gone will miss you sadly,
One who'll welcome you back again gladly,
One who, though angered, will not speak madly—
That's what I call a friend.

One who is always willing to aid you,
One whose advice has always paid you,
One who's defended when others flayed you—
That's what I call a friend.

One who's been fine when life seemed rotten,
One whose ideals you have not forgotten,
One who has given you more than he's gotten—
That's what I call a friend.

RUBY ELSIE ROWLAND.

This splendid young woman fell quietly and peacefully on sleep at Rex Hospital, Raleigh, N. C., June 23, 1928. She was born, the daughter of S. M. and Mrs. Fannie Rowland, Wake County, N. C., October 20, 1903. During more than the twenty-four years of her bright, beautiful life she won her way into the devotion and loving esteem not only of her immediate family, but of hundreds who knew her and whom she influenced for good. Ruby Rowland was a genius. She did not make some mechanical invention or device whereby the forces and factors of nature were broken up and presented in new form; her genius was of a different type. Hers was the genius of uniting and recreating the vital factors of life and of presenting them in the form of spotless and beautiful character. She was one of nature's favored, and a favorite daughter, not only beautiful of feature and form but more beautiful even in attitude and activity. Cut down in the bloom of beautiful womanhood, no one who knew her feels that her work is done or her life is finished. She has simply been translated to carry on more perfectly the kind of a life she was living in an imperfect world. Her pastor, Rev. J. Lee Johnson, in conducting her funeral, paid a most beautiful tribute to her marvelous life when he declared that in all of his ministry he had never been called upon to speak a word in behalf of any one who was more worthy of the best that could be said than Ruby Rowland. She won the affections of her teachers and associates in high school at Campbell Junior College; later going to Elon College, where she spent four years and graduated. She not only won here the esteem and admiration of faculty and pupils, but by her faithful and efficient labors in the religious activities of the institution, made a distinct contribution to the life and character of the college of her day. She had been teaching for three years, and as a teacher she manifested her genius and her character in winning those whom she taught not only to herself but to a better life. She was held in highest esteem by all for whom she worked and by all with whom she worked.

The funeral was held from Wentworth Christian Church, McCullers, N. C., Sunday P. M., June 24th. The Church was not half large enough to admit the great concourse of friends and loved ones who came to pay tribute to this beautiful young lady. The flowers were fragrant and lovely. Seldom have we witnessed such an expression of admiration and respect for any one as this beautiful Christian life had won for itself in so brief a period. Dutiful as a child from early years, devoted and beloved beyond words by her parents, her brothers and sisters, she was faithful to the Church which she joined in early years, and above all was true and devoted to her God whom she served with singleness of purpose and devoutness of heart. She has gone but her works abide, and all who knew her know full well where to find her. A noble, gifted, beautiful soul has gone up higher to shine with the brighter and better ones.

Back to the jungles, the fever swamp, the savages, the poisoned arrows—back to certain death went David Livingston. The world wondered when the black savages carried his body out of Africa, 1,500 miles to the seacoast, and placed their precious burden at the feet of the English consul. Nothing strange about that. With solemn music they brought David Livingston in, and buried him among the kings. No wreaths for the statue of George who bothered us with the stamp act and other injustices; but the tomb of David Livingston is never without its laurel wreath of immortal remembrance. For he is a king by divine right.

David Livingston did not depend upon his own strength, nor upon man-made laws and institutions. His power came from a higher source. He was, of course, a man of intellectual qualities and obeyed the civil laws; he was self-reliant, but not self-sufficient. The moral law was his guide, the final arbiter in his personal conduct. The scoffer may say that he went against what should have been his better judgment and was, consequently, a failure. But I assert that he was no failure. He was "more than conqueror," and his name will live in the earth when others whose lives were far more spectacular, from a worldly standpoint, have been long forgotten.

Most of you are North Carolinians. You come from homes located in a State that has made a greater ratio of progress during the past few years than any other Commonwealth in the republic. We all rejoice at North Carolina's achievements. We take pride in its schools, its good roads, its institutions for the care of the unfortunate and in its industrial development. But we must not lose sight of the fact that our moral and religious foundation must be made sure. If we do not, our material advancement will prove a curse instead of a blessing. When we become a self-sufficient people we will have lost our real power, for self-sufficiency breeds arrogance, and arrogance is an undermining rather than a constructive force.

North Carolina's wealth and natural resources, important thought they are, do not constitute our real greatness. That lies in the fact that we have been God-fearing people and have laid a spiritual foundation upon which our material achievements have been built as a superstructure. Our progress has been slow at times. Discouragements have been numerous. We have passed through crises that all but crushed us; yet, withal, we have kept our vision clear and have looked beyond man-made institutions for the real source of power.

I hope that each of you will bear in mind the fact that there can be no permanent satisfaction in any form of education or other advancement that does not rest upon a moral foundation. It may please and tickle the fancy for a while, but ultimately the futility of it all will show itself, perhaps when it is too late. All human institutions are but experiments. In the past, they have gone down one by one, and given place to something better. Permanency can be found only in the motivation of character found only in true religion, because, as I have endeavored to point out to you, this is a basic force, set into operation by God Himself. It teaches the individual to think not only for himself, but of others. Somewhere at the bottom of all true progress lies truth. It is for us to tear away all that obscures it and bring it to light again. "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." In these words, man's whole duty is stated. We this philosophy followed throughout the universe, there would be no need for legislatures and parliaments; lawyers and politicians, courts and judges, statesmen or soldiery; and war and despair would quickly vanish from the earth. Those words were not written for one race, but for all races; not for one country, but for all countries throughout the world; not for one man, but for men every where—for every man! The moral law teaches all to strive toward ushering in this kingdom of love and understanding—an inspiration not found in any man-made law or institution. Perish the thought that self-sufficiency can bring this about, or that it can be accomplished by placing our trust in ourselves or the things we may be able to accomplish by ourselves alone! In every life there is hidden a source of inspiration which controls outward actions. The life without its inspiration is void and empty and soon forgotten.

It is my earnest hope that you will bear these things in mind and remember that if religion and soul-culture are to remain vital forces you must do your part toward perpetuating them. Upon leaving this institution, you will find that many bids will be made for your services. The scoffer will endeavor to divert your minds from the great lessons of morality and religion you have learned in this institution and use you to promote his cause. Irreligious men everywhere have their eyes on the colleges of this country. They take a special delight in trying to break down your faith; and when they have won for their ranks a recruit from a Christian institution, they feel they have gained a signal victory. You must be on your guard. Even the atheist may seek to interest you. Indifference will certainly extend you an invitation to throw aside your convictions and drift with a pleasure-seeking world toward that haven which never appears in sight.

On the other hand, you will be called upon to stand by the true teaching of Christian education and there will be many to aid and comfort you. Do not think for a moment that you will stand alone if you stand for the right and make the moral law the guide of your lives. On the other hand, you will enjoy abiding companionship with those who will stand ready to help you to the end; and these companions will not desert you, for they will be moved by the same motives that spur you on. You have only to study the lives of the truly great to verify this statement. Greatness that is not linked with consecration is vain. Therefore, make no apologies to any man for standing for the right thing and for asserting your dependence upon God and His word.

Before concluding my remarks today, it is in my heart, therefore, to stress the necessity for a more general study of the Bible, within the pages of which may be found a solace for every human sorrow, a solution for every human problem, if we will but seek them out. It is not only the Book of books, revealing the way of life to men and women; it is an indispensable piece of literature that none of us can afford to be without. While written by men of learning, it was not given as a literary masterpiece, but as the soul's guide-book, pointing the way to spiritual truths. It will never become old or obsolete; its lessons are vital to every human being on the face of the earth. It contains a message to every class, to every individual. None becomes so exalted that he does not need it in his daily life; none sinks so low in sin and despair that it cannot lift him up and place his feet on the sure foundation of eternal earth. It was not written to furnish entertainment, but to edify the soul and inspire faith in the hearts of all people; it is not a text-book on science or geography, but a divine revelation of spiritual things. It has been the mainstay of true civilization since first given to man; and when other writings have been forgotten, its truths will stand out in bold relief against the background of all time. Thus, we have the real foundation of the moral law.

Let us not, therefore, depart from the Bible and its teachings. It is the all-important Book. For its preservation, men have suffered and died. Opponents of the spiritual realm have sought to destroy it, but without success. It has been handed down pure and spotless, and triumphant. Let us reverence it more, study it more, apply its precepts to a greater extent, for by so doing we may not only become better men and women ourselves, but lift the world to higher levels of usefulness and help to usher in the era of peace and universal brotherhood based on principles of truth, mercy and justice.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

Lesson III—July 15, 1928.

THE CONVERSION OF SAUL.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Faithful is the saying, and worth of all acceptance, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners."—1 Tim. 1:15.

LESSON: Acts 9:1-19a, 22:6-16; 1 Cor. 15:8.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psa. 119:41-48.

Jesus said, "Ye must be born again," and He meant what we mean when we say, "to be converted, to be regenerated, to receive grace, to experience religion, to gain assurance." As Prof. James says, "Conversion is the process by which a self hitherto divided, and consciously wrong, inferior, and unhappy, becomes unified and consciously right, superior, and happy in consequence of its firmer hold upon religious realities." Or as Mr. Begbie says in that stirring book, "Twice-Born Men," "Conversion is the only means by which a radically bad person can be changed into a radically good person." Conversion produces more than a mere change. It produces a revolution in character. It does not alter, it creates a new personality. The phrase, "a new birth," is not a rhetorical hyperbole, but a fact of the physical kingdom. Conversion transformed Saul of Tarsus into Paul the apostle.

Today's lesson tells us the story of Saul's conversion. One account is by the writer of Acts; the other is by Paul himself. The two accounts agree in the main points and in the details with few exceptions. They tell us how Saul was on his way to Damascus to persecute the Christians there; how he was struck down on the road to Damascus by an exceedingly great light; how he heard a voice and saw a vision; how he was blind for a season, and how he received his sight at the hands of Ananias. It is a story a little out of the ordinary, but there is no doubt that it is genuine. And in spite of the fact that it is not the standard form of conversion through which every person who becomes a Christian must go; that is, in all its details it has tremendous significance, in that there are abiding elements in it.

What, after all, is the supreme fact, the central fact, in this story of Saul's conversion? Is it not the fact that Saul of Tarsus came into a personal, vital contact with Jesus Christ? The heavenly light, the voice which spoke to him, the blindness which overtook him—these are the visible and audible manifestations of an inner experience. As Paul later said, Christ had appeared unto him. Furthermore, Paul responded to the touch of Christ. And because of that fact, Saul of Tarsus became Paul the apostle. Something so radical, something so far-reaching in consequences had taken place in Saul that old things had passed away, all things had become new. That was the heart of the matter for Paul, and that is the heart of the matter for us. A man is truly converted when, in response to the touch or the appeal of Christ, he lets the spirit of Christ come into his heart. This may be done in a public or a private way, under stress of great emotion or in the light of calm deliberation, or it may have various effects and manifestations, but the one supreme fact is that the spirit of the man has come into contact with the spirit of the Living Christ. When that takes place, a man is converted. Until it takes place, he never can be converted.

If there is the divine factor in conversion there is also quite often, if not always, the human factor. God spoke to Ananias and Ananias spoke to Saul. Like so many of us, Ananias tried to argue with God and to suggest that he knew a few things which perhaps God had overlooked, but God gave him a specific commission. It is too much to say that Christianity would never have had Paul if Ananias had not done his part, but the fact is Christianity has had Paul because Ananias did his part. There are men and women, boys and girls everywhere who are waiting the personal touch from those on whom perchance has definitely committed the responsibility of the word in due season.

The voice said, "It shall be told thee of all things which are appointed for thee to do." Ah, the romance of the thing! Conversion itself is glorious—the sense of forgiveness, the inexpressible peace, the unbounded hope, but conversion is only the beginning of the thing. When one sincerely and fully commits himself to Christ there is opened up undreamed-of possibilities and ever-new and thrilling experiences. And many times—in fact, quite usually—life's greatest experiences come in the most unexpected ways and in the common-place activities of life. How little Paul dreamed of what was in store for him that day when he started for Damascus! As we go through life we need eyes that see, ears that hear, and hearts that feel to the end that we shall be ever alert and responsive to the great issues and crises of life.

Sunday, July 15, 1928.

TOPIC: "Getting a Thrill out of Christian Living."—Phil. 3:1-16.

Some Bible Hints.

Few of us try really to "rejoice in the Lord." We rejoice in almost everything else (v. 1).

There is a thrill in realizing the worthlessness of material things and achievements, and realizing the spiritual verities (v. 7).

There is a thrill in intimate acquaintance with Christ. Not mere historical knowledge, but heart-to-heart dealings (v. 8).

There is a thrill in having and using the power of the living Christ in our lives in imitation of His beautiful life of service (v. 10).

Suggestive Thoughts.

Real Christian living is very different from the ordinary person's way of life. It is Christ-living—living like Christ, with Christ in us.

Let us begin by trying to attain Christian thinking, which would mean cleaning out our own minds. Measure your thoughts by this: "Would Jesus harbor this thought?"

There is always a thrill in service, however simple. We may do good to others, but in doing it we do yet more good to our own souls.

There is a distinct thrill in applying the Golden Rule in all circumstances of life. Dare to do it consciously, persistently, in spite of criticism and sneers.

A Few Illustrations.

A rich man asked his pastor, "Where is heaven?" The pastor replied, "Buy a basket of provisions and take it to Widow Jones and then we shall talk about heaven." The rich man returned and said, "I know where heaven is now. It is doing good." Getting a thrill!

The martyrs suffered tortures. Yes, but they also got a thrill out of their steadfast faith and vision. Think of Stephen (Acts 7:58).

Many rich Christians have found that there is more fun in giving money or help than in making money. There is the thrill of love and satisfaction in it.

There is the thrill of victory over temptation. In the wilderness angels ministered to Jesus. Peace filled His soul. We may experience something like this, too.

To Think About.

What is the greatest joy you have found in Christian living?

How may we determine whether or not our living is Christian?

Which is better, the thrill of battle's destruction or helping folks?

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

The Eastern Virginia Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention is fast approaching, meeting at Cypress Chapel on July 17-18. In large measure, the success of the convention depends upon your promptness in completing your report well in advance. Our convention secretary, Rev. F. C. Lester, Waverly, Va., has mailed you the necessary blanks, with his request that you complete and return same to him before July 10. It is very important that you grant the request. As president of the convention, I ask for your full co-operation. Attend to this matter at once.

A NOTED DIVINE.

The Rev. William I. Haven, D. D., LL.D., for more than twenty-nine years general secretary of the American Bible Society and one of the founders of the Epworth League of the Methodist Episcopal Church, died at his home in Summit, N. J., on June 5th.

Dr. Haven was born in Westfield, Mass., January 30, 1856, the son of Bishop Gilbert Haven, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Mary Ingraham Haven. He was a member of the New England Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church and has been pastor in his early ministry of several Churches in and near Boston, notably St. Marks Church, in Brookline. Since 1899, he has been general secretary of the American Bible Society.

During Dr. Haven's general secretaryship, the annual Scripture distribution has grown from one to more than ten million volumes in more than 250 languages and dialects and eighteen languages and systems for the blind. In this same period ten agencies of the society have been established throughout this country for the purpose of organizing and expanding the society's program of Bible distribution. A number of the twelve foreign agencies of the society were also organized and the work greatly expanded in those already established. Dr. Haven was particularly interested in promoting new translations of the Scriptures, and on May 1st, at his request, was appointed general secretary in charge of versions, thus enabling the society to place increased emphasis on this important part of its work.

Dr. Haven graduated from Wesleyan University and received later the degree of D. D. and LL.D. from this university. He prepared for the ministry at Drew Theological Seminary and Boston University. He became, first, a professor of Latin and Greek at Claflin University, Orangeburg, S. C., and was later ordained to the Methodist ministry in 1881. He was trustee of Boston University, of Wesleyan University and of Drew Theological Seminary, a member of the board of foreign missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church since 1899, and a member of the administrative and other committees of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. Dr. Haven is survived by his wife, Mrs. Minna Spears Haven, and his daughter, Mrs. Gladys Haven North.

RIGHT WHERE WE ARE.

BY REV. J. W. HOLLAND, D. D.

I heard Edwin Markham say, "I am glad to be here now because I am always glad to be anywhere."

While the great gray poet read some of his favorite verses, I found my mind busy with his opening sentiment.

Many people are glad when they are going somewhere, many expect to be glad when they arrive somewhere else, but mighty few of us are glad enough to be right where we are.

Looking at the faces of a large American crowd, an Englishman said, "Where are all the happy Americans?"

God never intended that we should grow unhappy as we get away from the care-free days of childhood.

Mr. Riley wrote, "Right here at home is where glory is." He was right. It does not make much difference where we are, the question is what we are. A brother of mine went to the mission field where he lost his life. Before going away, he said to our mother, "Don't worry about me. It is as close to heaven from South as from North America."

Somewhere in America this very minute there are ten homes that have each a wonderful little boy. I do not know where those homes are, but forty years from now those ten boys will be President and Vice-President of the United States, and members of the President's Cabinet. If I could sneak into those homes, I'll warrant that in most of them I would hear parents complain that they did not have any chances to do great things. Just think of it! Perhaps this very minute some mother is spanking a future President of the country, and wishing for some place where she could make her life count!

Right where we are God needs witnesses to His love and grace. Young people need understanding and guidance, sick people need visiting and hopeful words, sinners need repentance, despairing souls crave sympathy. Look around and you will see them.

Paul had a pretty rough and tough time of it, yet he mastered the unrest devil in him, and said, "I have learned in whatsoever state, I am there-with to be content."

Right where we are, this very instant, God, country and loved ones need us.—Progressive Farmer.

INSTALLATION SERVICE.

A very inspiring service was held at the First Christian Church, Roanoke, Ala., Sunday evening, June 10th, when Rev. G. H. Veazey was installed as pastor for the coming year. Rev. G. D. Hunt made a very interesting and inspiring talk, in which he emphasized the duties of a pastor and the relation of the pastor to the Church, and vice versa.

After this talk, Rev. G. H. Veazey made a very interesting response, stating that he accepted the work, realizing the responsibility, but trusted in the love and power of God to strengthen him. May God's love and blessing be upon both pastor and Church.

Another interesting part of the service was the talk by Mrs. F. E. Bullock, which was made to the children but which contained a great lesson for all. May God bless her in the great work she is doing.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY REV. H. E. ROUNTREE,
One of Our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MONDAY.

WATCH YOUR STEP.

"Look carefully how you walk."—Eph. 5:15.

There are many ways of walking. There is the firm, springy, masculine step of a soldier; there is the ungainly, alluring walk of a sailor; there is the stately walk of a prince. In fact, there is a peculiar walk of every one, and every one may be known by his walk, and that walk is so indicative of character that one may be judged by that walk.

A perpetually righteous man has a manner that betrays him. It is that of friendliness, sunny spirit, vigorous exactness, caution against error.

We often interpret love as an idle dream and doubt God's love for us. It is no small matter to realize that "God loves me." It means a realization of heaven's disposition toward us. It means an incoming and an outgoing friendly, affectionate form. It means living ourselves to make others happy. It means personal contact and sympathy with folks. He who gets in a glass house can never get the force of electric power. We can even shut the sunshine out of our own home. We can shut the light of the world out of our souls. Our lives are made of steps, one by one. Watch your step!

Prayer.—Our Father, we pray for a closer walk with Thee. We shall not stumble over the big things, but we pray that we shall not slip on the small ones. Keep our thoughts, our hearts and our lives from this day on. Amen.

TUESDAY.

WHAT IS HAPPENING TO YOU?

Text: Psa. 121, 128.

Our well-being and our consciousness of God depends upon how we meet and dispose of the common events of life. Can you say, "I saw God this morning?" In decisions, do you say, "I'll refer this to God and give you His answer?" In all we are about to do we should be able to feel that God approves and is solid behind me.

A preacher that has a sermon is a failure. But if he is his sermon he is eloquent. We say, "Our Father above." About what? He is in no sense distant from us, but He is in the field, the streets, at our desks, in our homes, in us, in our every-day life. The things that are above are wisdom, righteousness, goodness, love, education, harmony, purity, holy thoughts, kind deeds, blessed affections. These are the things that are above us and lift the world, and Christ is at our right hand to lift us up to Him. So when He tells us to "seek those things that are above," that is what He means. When laws are good and judgment impartial, when honor is without stain and truth is spoken without consequences, then God may be said to be present with His people and leading them.

Prayer.—Our Father, as the face of Moses shone with the radiance of glory, fill us with the light of spiritual sweetness and the glory of righteousness. Make keen our ears, so that we may hear the voice of righteousness. May we love justice, mercy and truth and know God every day. Amen.

PERFECTION.

"Walk before me and be thou perfect."—Gen. 17:1.

What is perfection? Hezekiah claimed to have walked before God with a "perfect heart." Stephen, stoned to death for his righteousness, saw the glory of God. John lived so close to God that he saw what heaven is to be. Mordecai was so nearly perfect that even his enemies said of him, "If he be of the seed of the Jews, none can prevail against him."

The eyes of the Lord overlook the faults of those who are wrapped up in His righteousness and walk humbly before Him. Of Nathaniel He said, "Behold a Nazarene in whom is no guile." So perfection is an inward condition of the soul that is in harmony with God's great spirit and the good of man.

Prayer.—Our Father, we ask Thee to forgive us of all our sins and unworthiness and fill our souls with harmony and love. Make duty to our fellow-men and God paramount and Thy will to be done, and make our pleasures to conform to that. Amen.

THERE ARE FOUR.

"Man Looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart."—1 Sam. 16:7.

The outer man is the one that others know. This is the man who is in our clothes, changes with the fashion, keeps up with the world. It is the man who stakes bonds with others, but back behind this outer man there is but little they can know. It is the like that is one thing in the home and another in the streets, and still another at business. It is the life that God seeks to so influence that by His dwelling in the inner life the outward may speak the truth always.

The life that we know is the real self. This is the self that feels shame when we have obtruded our outer self into improper society. It is the self in which conscience dwells, judging the right and the wrong. It is the self we face at home and accuses us when we are unkind. It is the self in which regrets appear and forgiveness takes place. It is where desire lives. It is where God seeks to dwell, that all the other selves may be right.

The self which God knows is that self which is the object of the Father's gaze. It is not different from the self that we are, but it is that higher, nobler, truer, better self that holds before us the life that we ought to be. It is the invisible something about us that seems to understand the things of God. It is the holy of holies of our being which we cannot enter without preparation. The quiet thoughtfulness of the soul; but when entered, the soul enjoys the juice of life's vintage. The soul finds repose, grief finds comfort, temptation finds a way of escape, the wail of woe is heard and God comes. There is nothing one can do to be right until God touches this self.

Prayer.—Our Father, we repent of all our sins. Baptize our inner man with Thy Spirit. We pray that the life we show others may be the one we are, and may the one which we are be the one Thou dost live in. Come, Jesus, and make us what we ought to be. Amen.

FRIDAY.

CHRISTIAN PATRIOTISM.

"What doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly before the Lord."—Micah 6:8.

"Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people."—Prov. 14:34.

Patriotism is not an ill feeling for a neighbor country; it is not a respect for one's own country; it is not the lack of respect for self; it is not a superior feeling—but it is unflinching belief in our country having a mission all its own. It is a belief that our country has something to do that no one else can do which is ennobling to the others. And it is a dedication of self to do one's best that that mission shall be accomplished. It is to make good citizens. It is cultivating righteousness deep in our innermost natures. It is the rule of right. This is the rule of Christ.

Prayer.—Our Father, we pray that we may never forget what we should live for. Teach us how to use our strength for the establishment of peace and righteousness. Amen.

SATURDAY.

CRYING AND TRYING.

"But the men said . . . We be not able to go up against the people, for they are stronger than we."—Num. 13:30, 31.

About four-fifths of any group are ready to look at obstacles and say, "it can't be done." The other fifth are willing to trust and take a chance. These are they who amount to most. Even they who would do things are often too conservative. It is absurd to appoint a committee to report on the advisability of a thing which is entirely known to be the thing to do. Yet much of this is done. It is a waste of time and energy and possibly a hindrance to God's will. When we sit on the advisability of things we know we should do, we smother it. The objector gets in his influence.

We are, therefore, for that vigorous minority who can do as the three making a good report, go up and possess it. It is fine that there are times when three can put ten thousand to flight. To which class do you belong?

Prayer.—Dear Father, awaken us to what good we may do. In Jesus the glory of heaven dawns upon us. Jesus is with us in the manger, on the cross, in eternal mercy, justice and life. The days, the hours and the years are flying fast and soon we shall be at an end. O Father, how shall we stand? Make us alert, vigilant, cast off the works of darkness, and put on the armor of His glory. Banish lukewarmness, sloth, cowardliness; give us self-denial, vigilance and faithfulness to the end. Give us alertness, zeal, courage and hopefulness, and Thine be the glory. Amen.

SUNDAY.

OUR BUSINESS.

"Philip findeth Nathaniel."—Jno. 145.

There is one particular thing every Christian should do, God expects him to do, viz: reveal Christianity. The world lives under tremendous prejudices, visions, obscured, understanding beclouded. They can see no beauty in religious organization to be desired.

"Ole Bull," the great violinist, was attacked once by enemies who would criticise him and take away his popularity. The New York Herald offered him its columns for defense. "Ole Bull" replied, "No, Mr. Bennett, I tink better dey talk against me and I play against dem." His music was his best defense. A Christian's Christian living is the greatest advertiser.

Nathaniel did not believe anything good could come of Nazareth, but Philip said, "Come and see." Suppose we all could lay bare our hearts to the world and say, "See all that is there," and defy the world to convict us of wrong.

Prayer.—Our Father, so enable us to live day by day that they may find no guile in us and give us the power and the courage to say, "Thou art the Son of God." Amen.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

It has been a busy time at the Orphanage for the last ten days, and will be for the next ten days. We have been in the harvest field trying to save our wheat crop. We now have it all cut and will thrash it the first of the week. We will have a real old-time wheat-thrashing, with chicken pie for dinner. Thrashing wheat now is not such a hard job as it was when we were a boy. We take the machine in the field now and haul the wheat to it and throw it in, and the machine now will cut the bands, feed itself, thrash and clean the wheat, weigh it in bushels, sack it and haul it to you. Quite an improvement over the old way, isn't it?

We hope to make enough wheat this year to bread us next year. That will be fine, won't it? We try to produce all we can to help make our support and thereby keep our per capita cost as low as possible. When we get our wheat thrashed then we will dig our Irish potato crop. The little boys will have a happy time picking them up. Our crop is fine this year.

You will notice we reached our ten-thousand-dollar mark in this report. We are happy to have reached it. We want to urge all Sunday Schools to make a monthly offering to help us.

Superintendent.

Our Saviour found lost souls wherever He went—by the wayside well, on the seashore, among the tombs, up a tree, and even on the cross. Nineteen times it is recorded that He stopped to talk with a single person, and if we will adopt the habit of watching for opportunities we shall be surprised to see how often they will come. Matthew was converted in a custom-house, Moody in a shoe-shop, and Peter and John while mending their nets.—Dr. Howard W. Pope.

Since science research has shown that alcoholic beverages slow down the human machine, and since the human machine is the most important machine in industry, we should expect the use of alcohol to slow down industry, and prohibition to speed up industry. This is exactly what has happened.—Irving Fisher.

God loves to look at those who carry Jesus in their faces. Of such is the kingdom of heaven.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SYSTEM

For your own protection—

The peril of the road crossing has become a national problem with the multiplication of automobiles.

The Southern Railway System has eliminated 584 grade crossings, and is eliminating more every year, but 7,000 remain to be separated on this system alone. The total cost to complete the work is a stupendous sum—probably half as much as the cost to build the railroads.

Even if the money were available, and the public willing to pay the increased freight and passenger rates necessary to provide a fair return on it, many years would be required to do the work.

Protection from the peril for the present generation at least must be found in some other way. Trains cannot stop at every crossing if they are to be run at the sustained speed expected by the public and required to carry the commerce of the country. The train crosses a highway about every mile. The motorist encounters a railroad only occasionally.

It is necessary, therefore, for the automobile driver to stop in order to avoid risk. No one who did this was ever killed. In North Carolina, where the law now requires such a stop, the number of road crossing accidents on our lines has been reduced one-half.

Grade crossing accidents can be prevented if you will approach the zone of danger determined to exercise caution For Your Own Protection.

It is better business to save a life than to save a minute.

Personal Responsibility

(Reprinted from the Saturday Evening Post)

Final dependence for a reduction in the number of railroad grade-crossing disasters must be placed upon the individual's sense of responsibility. If when approaching and crossing a railroad at grade the traveler will think of that crossing as a zone of danger to him, and regard himself and those with him as in imminent danger until the crossing is completed, the chances of accidents will be automatically reduced to the minimum.

This grade crossing separation cost $145,000

THE HOMELESS SINGER.

On a cold, dark night, when the wind was blowing hard, Conrad, a worthy citizen of a little town in Germany, sat playing his flute, while Ursula, his wife, was preparing supper. They heard a sweet voice singing outside:

"Foxes to their holes have gone,
Every bird into his nest;
But I wander here alone,
And for me there is no rest."

Tears filled the good man's eyes as he said, "What a fine, sweet voice! What a pity it should be spoiled by being tried in such weather."

"I think it is the voice of a child. Let us open the door and see," said his wife, who had lost a little boy not long before, and whose heart was open to take pity on the little wanderer.

Conrad opened the door and saw a ragged child, who said, "Charity, good sir, for Christ's sake."

"Come in, my little one," said he; "you shall rest with me for the night."

The boy said, "Thank God," and entered. The heat of the room made him faint, but Ursula's kind care soon revived him. They gave him some supper, and then he told them he was the son of a poor miner, and that he wandered about, sang, and lived on the money people gave him. His kind friends would not let him talk much, but sent him to bed. When he was asleep they looked upon him and were pleased with his pleasant countenance. In the morning they determined to keep him, if he was willing, and they found that he was only too glad to remain.

They sent him to school, and afterwards he entered a monastery. There he found the Bible, which he read, and from which he learned the way of life. The sweet voice of the little singer learned to preach the good news, "Justified through faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ."

Conrad and Ursula, when they took that little street singer into their house, little thought that they were nourishing the great champion of the Reformation. The poor child was Martin Luther. —Selected.

FIDDLERS THREE.

Three fiddlers once went out of town
To fiddle 'neath a hawthorne tree,
And each one hoped the birds would think
The fiddler who excelled was he.

Now one was dressed in blue and white,
And one was dressed in hunter's green,
And one wore crimson slashed with gold,
No gayer coat was ever seen.

The list'ning birds sat on the tree
The sun shone bright, for it was noon,
And one by one the fiddlers three
Each played his very sweetest tune.

They played and played, but which played best
The list'ning birds could not agree,
And so they made three crowns of leaves,
And crowned the heads of all the three.

WHITE.

Because we are feeling our loss so keenly and because we feel that with the passing of time we will more and more realize how much we miss him, and because we feel we have been benefitted by his having been an honorary member of our Ladies' Aid Society of Spring Hill Church, we pause to drop a tear over the loss of our friend and co-worker, Mr. J. T. White.

Mr. White's life has been a model of self-sacrifice and kindly deeds. He was always loyal and true to our society as he was to Church and Sunday School. He was always interested in our work, ever ready to help us whenever he could, and never so happy as when doing something for his Master. His many loving deeds are written on our memory.

He leaves to his family and many friends that greatest of all treasures, an honored name, the memory of earnest deeds well done. He lived that the world might be a better place for his having passed through.

We offer these expressions as our humble tribute to one whose memory we fondly cherish. "In our work shall he live on."

TRUITT—BANKS.

Miss Winifred Rebecca Banks, daughter of Mrs. George T. Banks and the late Mr. Banks, and William Jennings Bryan Truitt, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Lee Truitt, of Summerfield, N. C., were married in the home of the bride on East Forty-second Street. The Rev. L. E. Smith, pastor of the Christian Temple, performed the ceremony. The house was decorated with palms, ferns, Southern smilax, lilies and cathedral candles. The wedding music was played by Miss Florence Watkins and Just before the ceremony Mr. Howren sang "I Love You Truly" and "O Promise Me." The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Charles T. Banks. She wore a gown of white crepe satin and Georgette trimmed with seed pearls, made bouffant style. Her veil of tulle was arranged from a cap of lace, pearls and rhinestones, and she carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Mary Nash Banks, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and only attendant. She wore a gown of pink and white tulle, made bouffant style, and trimmed with water lilies. Her flowers were a shower bouquet of Madam Butterfly roses and snapdragons. The bridegroom had as his best man his brother, the Rev. J. G. Truitt, and the master of ceremonies was George T. Banks, Jr., brother of the bride. Later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Truitt left for Chicago, where Mr. Truitt will attend the University of Chicago. They will be at home after September 1st at B East Manor Apartments, Brandon Avenue, Norfolk, Va.

BURTON—STEPHENS.

On June 9, 1928, at 8 P. M., Miss Annie Irene Stepheus became the bride of Arthur Goodwin Burton at the home of W. W. Stephens. Miss Stephens is the accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Stephens. Mr. Burton is the son of Mr. J. M. Burton, all natives of Rockingham County.

The room was beautifully decorated with bride roses and ferns. In front of the altar was an arch of candles which furnished the light while the marriage vows were taken. Miss Cornelia Neal rendered the music for the occasion, and only a few intimate friends witnessed the ceremony. Immediately following the ceremony they left for Asheville and other points in western North Carolina on a bridal trip. After about ten days they will be at home, 606 Asheboro Street, Greensboro, N. C. May a long, happy and peaceful life be theirs.

LIVE COALS.

It is said that upon the tableland of Asia Minor the women may be seen at dawn of day going out of doors and looking up at their neighbors' chimneys. They look out for a chimney from which smoke is coming. Thither they go to borrow live coals with which to kindle fire in their own homes.

Do men watch thus our lives? If in our hearts the Holy Spirit has lit a sacred fire, shall they not come to us for warmth and inspiration?—War Cry.

TRY.

You can't fell trees without some chips; You can't achieve without some slips. Unless you try, you wonder why Good Fortune seems to pass you by. Success is not for those who quail; She gives her best to those who fail, And then, with courage twice as great, Take issue once again with fate. 'Tis better far to risk a fall Than not to make attempt at all. —Selected.

WADLEY, ALABAMA

An Accredited Junior College

Where Opportunity Awaits the Student of Very Limited Means

GIRLS' DORMITORY

Piedmont Junior College, Wadley, Ala., will open September 12, 1928. This institution is a Junior College, which is co-educational, where scholarship ranks high and expense is low. It is thoroughly Christian, absolutely non-sectarian, and vitally American. A school where opportunity awaits the student of very limited means—$68.00 pays all college expenses, except books, board and room. Board, $15.00 per month, and room $4.00; total expenses for the term of nine months, $250.00.

Piedmont Junior College is affiliated, as Junior College, with Piedmont College, Demorest, Ga., and its courses are co-ordinated with those of Piedmont and accredited by this institution. Piedmont College is a charter member of the Association of Georgia Colleges, a member of the Association of American Colleges, and an accredited College of the Southern Association of Colleges.

Piedmont Junior College is training some of the best stock of America for Christian leadership, to be used by the nation and the world. Here is a great challenge and asset for students who wish to prepare themselves to serve in a worth-while way. The new Administration Building will be completed by time school opens this fall.

WHY GO TO CHURCH?

BY REV. FELIX H. COLEMAN.

Jesus went to Church. It was His habit to attend the service of the synagogue. We are told that after His return to Galilee following His baptism and temptation, "As His custom was, He entered into the synagogue on the Sabbath Day." This does not mean that our Lord was a slave to custom. It does not mean that He did things merely because it was His custom to do them. It means that He formed the habit of doing things because it was right for Him to do them. He might have offered several excuses which are given today for not attending. There was very little to be gained from the dull discourses of the rabbis. Jesus could have preached a thousand times better sermon than any of them could. He might have gone into the fields, where He could have perfect communion with His Father. He knew the powerlessness of those preachers to whom He had to listen; but in spite of all this the world's greatest Preacher formed the habit of attending the services of the synagogue.

Now, if Jesus is our example in other things, why should He not be in the matter of Church attendance? Those who say that they could read a better sermon at home than they can hear at Church or that they could hear a better sermon over the radio should remember that Jesus could, with better reason, have offered the same sort of excuse, but He did not. If we had no other reason for going to Church, this would be sufficient. Jesus went to Church on the Sabbath Day.

An important reason why we should go to Church is that by doing so we maintain Christian fellowship. There are some professed Christians who say they can live the Christian life alone, but we find very few who do. No fraternal order or organization can live which ignores the coming together in fellowship. Members of an order may meet in a business way, but unless they meet often as its representatives they will soon lose their interest in it and their love for the principles for which the order stands.

Now, if this be true in the case of members of various orders, why is it not equally true of members of the Church? If we love Jesus Christ and the principles for which He stands, we enjoy meeting with others who do. If we do not enjoy it, there is something wrong. Either we are out of sympathy with our Lord and His Cause or there is something wrong with the Church to which we belong. If we maintain our Christian life, Christian fellowship is absolutely necessary.

Another reason why we should go to Church is that we may worship God. We hear people everywhere saying that they can worship God as well in their homes or better than they can at Church. The truth is, very few such people worship God anywhere. It is true that people can worship God in the home, in God's out-of-doors, or in any place where they may be alone with Him, and the true Christian often worships God in the secret place. The psalmist stated a great truth when he said: "He that dwelleth in the secret place of the Most High, shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty." Jesus often communed with His Father alone, but He placed special emphasis upon united worship. How often we quote the promise, "Where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them!"

The real purpose of attending Church is to meet with God. Many churchgoers have in view only the sermon. They go to Church in order to hear preaching. The sermon is, of course, an important and necessary part of the service; but that sermon, however good it may be, ought to contribute to the worship of the hour. There are many who care for nothing but the sermon, and for that reason they prefer to wait until the preliminaries, as they call them, are over. If it is an intellectual treat they are looking for, they may get it if their preacher is the sort of man who spreads an intellectual feast before his hearers; but no late-comer need expect spiritual good from a sermon, however good it may be, if he misses the preliminary service, which is absolutely necessary to put him in tune with the sermon.

If you will read the Bible with reference to public services, you will see what prominence its writers give to the worship of God. In our day we need to give it equal prominence. We can magnify the sermon until we crowd out everything else from our thoughts. I do not mean to underrate the sermon, but what we need to bear in mind is that the main purpose of every Church service is worship. Any sermon which does not draw its hearers nearer to God is not a real sermon, although it may be a good mental discourse. Let the sermon have the best preparation a preacher can make, and it ought to have better preparation; let the main purpose of it be to draw the congregation nearer to God and to lift it to a higher plane of Christian service.

These reasons are sufficient answers to the question, "Why go to Church?" No sermon should have an end in itself. It should be the means to an end. It should never be merely a literary display, but should always have in view the spiritual development of the congregation to which it is delivered. There should be nothing in the service which does not contribute to the spirit of worship. Let us all bear this in mind, and we shall experience the joy that is in it for every whole-hearted worshiper.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

SMITH THE REAL PLATFORM.

The Democratic platform contains a law-enforcement plank very similar to that adopted by the Republicans, but the setting is vastly different. The question of prohibition gave the Democrats the most trouble, even as the matter of farm relief bothered the Republicans. The Democrats, knowing they would nominate a wet for President, could hardly adopt a bone-dry prohibition plank. On the other hand, they dare not adopt a thoroughly wet one. So they declared for law enforcement and pledged strict enforcement of the eighteenth amendment and all supporting laws. But they were careful to explain, in presenting this plank to the convention, that "this plank permits the party's presidential candidate, whoever he may be, to state fully and frankly his own personal views toward prohibition, whether they are wet or dry sentiments." Governor Smith was quick to take advantage of this opening, and in a telegram to the convention, accepting the nomination, emphasized his opposition to the present prohibition laws, and frankly announced his purpose, if elected President, to use the force of his leadership and the power of his office to change them. "It is well known," he said, "that I believe there should be fundamental changes in the present provisions for national prohibition, based . . . on the fearless application to the problem of these principles of Jeffersonian Democracy. While I fully appreciate that these changes can only be made by the people themselves through their elected executive representatives, I feel it to be the duty of the chosen leader of the people to point the way which in his opinion leads to a sane, sensible solution of a condition which I am convinced is entirely unsatisfactory to the great mass of our people." So that's that! The Democratic party has allowed itself to be maneuvered into the position of being the "wet" party in this campaign. For Smith is the real platform.—Methodist Protestant.

Inasmuch as the National Council of Congregational Churches has placed itself on record "as being willing for the sake of promoting the larger unities to surrender its historic name or accept the designation 'Churches of Christ,'" your commission believes that the General Convention of the Christian Church should take a similar action by which it would express its willingness for an adjusted name that will adequately represent the united followers of Jesus Christ, and your commission requests that the members of this general board who are willing personally to favor and promote such a step to stand and that their attitude be made a matter of record by the commission.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Rev. E. B. White, of Dendron, Va., called to see us the past week and reports work in fine condition.

The proceedings of the Southern Christian Convention, held in Richmond, Va., May 1-4, 1928, are off the press and are being mailed out. If you do not receive a copy you can get one for the asking; postage, 2 cents.

Bro. L. J. Riddle writes that work is to be resumed on Hank's Chapel building and pushed to completion. This is to be a very handsome and quite adequate Church house, and we rejoice with the people of this good old Church that they are to have a new and beautiful house of worship.

The following will be of interest to many SUN readers, and we congratulate the contracting parties: "Mr. and Mrs. William Houston Carroll announce the marriage of their daughter, Edith Elizabeth, to the Rev. Cecil Mathews Brown, on Tuesday, the 3rd of July, 1928, at Burlington, N. C."

Rev. D. P. Barrett and family, who have had a year's stay in the homeland, passed through Richmond last Saturday and made a farewell call at THE SUN office. They were on their way to Washington, D. C., where they expected to visit relatives, and from there go to New York, to sail on July 12th to Ponce, Porto Rico.

We have word from Rev. W. C. Martin that the work is to be resumed on our Christian Church at Biscoe, and the building is to be pushed to completion. This is good news, indeed. Bro. Martin and his co-workers have been very zealous for a good Church house at Biscoe, and we rejoice with them in the progress they are making.

Rev. G. O. Lankford, D. D., writing July 2nd, says: "We had a good day in the Burlington Church yesterday with four additions. We have had seventeen additions since the first Sunday in June." Bro. Lankford is one of our pastors who believes in keeping the revival spirit alive in the Church the year round.

Rev. and Mrs. D. P. Barrett left Elon College, where they have been spending a year on furlough, last Monday A. M., for Norfolk, where Mrs. Barrett is visiting friends and relatives. They are to leave Norfolk Monday, the 9th, for New York, and expect to sail on Wednesday for Porto Rico. They have not been idle during their furlough period and have carried the message of Porto Rico's prospect and needs to many of our people.

Bro. Sam Davis and wife have been engaged by Rev. J. M. Allred, Asheboro, N. C., to assist in a meeting at Pleasant Ridge, Randolph County, the fourth Sunday and the week following in August. They are to be at Wake Chapel the second Sunday in September and the two weeks following. If there are other Churches that need these very efficient and capable evangelists, dates should be arranged. Our Churches should keep them busy in their great and good work.

Mrs. M. L. Bryant, of our First Church, Norfolk, Va., attended the Blue Ridge Conference the past ten days. She writes: "For ten days I have been feasting at Blue Ridge. I am wishing that you and a great number of my friends could have enjoyed the same privilege. All in all, the inspiration has been wonderful." With Mrs. Bryant at Blue Ridge and Mrs. Stagg at Chambersburg, the women of the Eastern Virginia Conference are certainly in for some thrilling information and inspiration in their meetings the coming year.

This comes from a good woman in Washington, D. C., who receives and reads THE CHRISTIAN SUN: "I have been reading THE SUN, and learn with regret the present situation in our mission work. Enclosed you will find $50.00 to be used as you see fit in this work. I trust that the Churches have responded as expected and that the work can be carried on as planned." How we wish others who read THE SUN and have the same impulse that this good woman had would follow her example, if not with as large a gift then with a smaller, for every dollar counts and helps now.

That was a most graceful and gracious act on the part of our good women of the Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference in giving to Rev. and Mrs. D. P. Barrett a nice Chevrolet sedan to take with them back to Porto Rico for their work there. That is a missionary car that will do good, indeed, and will carry our missionaries on many a needy and happy journey in their service for God among the Porto Ricans. This timely gift made it possible for the Barretts to do more work than they could have done without it, and greatly encouraged them. It was certainly considerate of the women, who are always thinking of the nice, helpful things to do for others.

Rev. G. H. Veazey, who graduated from Elon College at the recent commencement, is now happily located at Roanoke, Ala., as pastor of the First Christian Church of that city. Bro. Veazey writes: "We are well pleased with our new home and good neighbors. And the Church here is doing the best work of any Church I have ever served. I find a goodly number of people here who belong to the Christian Church that have been waiting for an invitation to unite with this Church. We are expecting quite a few to unite with us next Sunday night. The meeting at Lowell begins the second Sunday in July. Rev. Joe French is to do the preaching and I am to lead the singing."

Rev. P. T. Klapp, who has been helping so faithfully in our mission period, was at Pleasant Hill in the absence of the pastor, on Sunday, July 1st. Bro. Klapp reports a most interesting service. Pleasant Hill is noted as having the first temperance society, so far as the records show, in the United States, and celebrated its eighty-third anniversary of continuous service July 4th. There were present in the Sunday School last Sunday 205, and the enrollment is even beyond this. They have rooms for the various classes, and one of the most active Sunday Schools of any of our rural Churches. Pleasant Hill is very much alive, is interested in its Sunday School, in missions, the Christian Orphanage, and other enterprises of the Church. Bro. Klapp found it a great joy to be with them.

ATTENTION.

All money on subscriptions, new or renewals, to THE CHRISTIAN SUN from this date should be sent to C. D. Johnston, circulation manager, Elon College, N. C.; also all items about change of address, dates or labels. All matters for publication in THE SUN should be sent, as heretofore, to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, Elon College, N. C. Bro. Johnston became circulation manager July 1st.

J. O. ATKINSON, Editor.

A STATEMENT.

The Southern Christian Convention, which met in Richmond, in May, elected the writer as circulation manager of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, to take charge July 1st. It is a position we accept with a realization of the work and responsibilities that the work carries with it. No easy job; but a job which will take lots of time and work. It is a known fact that THE CHRISTIAN SUN is not a paying proposition, so far as money is concerned; however, we cannot afford to stop publishing THE SUN because it is not a paying proposition financially. Our Church cannot afford to do without it. It is our Church organ for the entire Southern Convention. Through its columns we keep in touch with our colleges, missions, the Christian Orphanage, and all departments of the Church. In what other way can we keep in weekly touch with these, our institutions, if not through THE CHRISTIAN SUN?

Now, what must we do? We must put it on a better financial basis. What does it cost to publish THE CHRISTIAN SUN? It costs $138.50 per week for 3,000 copies; $2.20 per hundred extra. This is for publishing THE SUN alone. Dr. Atkinson gets no salary for being its editor; Dr. Harper, Rev. Stanley Harrell, Dr. Staley, and Rev. S. M. Lynam, who are associate editors with Dr. Atkinson, get no salary. Your circulation manager, who has charge of keeping up the subscription list and getting new subscribers, collecting the subscriptions to pay the expenses of publishing THE SUN, gets no salary for his work. It is a work of love on the part of us all for the benefit of our denomination. I give THE SUN readers this information so they will know and understand that no one is getting a salary out of the income from the subscriptions paid in; but it all goes to the publisher to pay that weekly expense of $138.50 for printing THE SUN. We always like to take the folks in our confidence, so they will understand where the money goes. Can THE SUN be put on a paying basis? It can. How? By every member of the Christian Church doing his or her duty. See to it that every home in your Church takes THE SUN. Four thousand five hundred subscribers will put THE SUN on a paying basis and pay all the expenses of printing, postage, stationery, etc.

We are accepting this work and will handle it in connection with the Christian Orphanage work for the next two years. We will do our best to see if we can make THE SUN a self-supporting institution for our Church. To help do this work we want to ask the support of all our pastors, all our Sunday School superintendents, teachers and officers, and every individual Church member. If we can have the hearty support of the above-named persons we feel we will succeed. If one fails us we will lose that much and the work will be the harder. We will keep you informed from week to week as to how we succeed.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Elon College, N. C. Circulation Manager.

NOTICE.

On account of loss of health, we are operating a magazine subscription agency. Youth's Companion, eight months, $1.00; American, with the Woman's Home Companion, $3.00 a year. We handle them all. Write for catalogue.

The Sunday Schools in conventions are now reporting their work for the year. For a better year, we are suggesting some literature for schools in the way of maps, advertised in another column.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

HIGHWAYS OF HAPPINESS.

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, Preacher.

"I am the Way."—John 14:6.

Some of the sayings of Jesus must be uttered in the inner and upper room to be understood. Their meaning must be sought in the light of the occasion upon which they were spoken, and the persons to whom they were addressed. To the humble-hearted disciples who had followed Jesus and found Him precious, the words of our text were a marvelous revelation. To many they meant nothing, or blasphemy, for there were then, as there are now, those who having eyes saw not, and having ears did not hear. The great "I am's" of Jesus are just such sayings. On His lips in some company they would seem but vain boasts, and on any other lips in any company they would be vain boasts.

Here were gathered around Him a group of men who meant to take the highway of eternal, inner happiness. Always, so far as we have any record, they were honest, worthy men, living on the plane of material things in a manner well in keeping with the best of their day. Stirred there in their breasts upon occasion a desire to be holy and righteous. Jesus came into their daily lives, calling them after Him and teaching them day by day, both by precept and example, a conception of God as Father, and men as brothers, far above anything they had hitherto been taught. And both His precepts and example were authoritative, for "He taught as one having authority, and not as the scribes and Pharisees."

Little by little it dawned upon these men that Jesus was greatly in earnest about life; that He meant life itself to be far more worth living; that He Himself meant to make it so; and that He meant to do it by causing an understanding of Himself and the Father—often called reconciliation. "And this is life eternal, that they might know Thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom Thou hast sent." These men were staggered with the breadth of His love and the reach of His faith; but staggered as they were, it was taking hold on them, and they, too, wanted men to know God through Jesus Christ. If they could not follow Jesus always on a journey like that they would be unhappy; if they could not set themselves to that task with Him they would belie the urge of their souls; and if they could not assure others of a faith and a joy within their own personal lives far above anything they found on the Sea of Galilee theirs would be indeed a miserable lot. They hoped in Jesus. They literally followed Him. Shall I not say they loved Him, and loved Him devoutly? To Him they had said, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God."

Alongside the growth of Jesus' plan and purpose in their hearts grew a hatred for Jesus in the hearts of the scribes and Pharisees. Just as they were becoming more and more willing to understand Jesus fully and to follow Him as a Saviour and Lord, the enemies were planning successfully to put Him to death. In their dilemma they were alone with Him. Their suggestions were few and futile. They turned upon His words. What could He say? What would He do? Was He frightened? Was He losing ground, or grip on God? The doors were shut for the last time, and outside already was being prepared the awful cross. The words fell from His lips. Never were they more needed. Never were they more majestically and triumphantly uttered. Which is the way out of this dilemma? Which is the way out of the meshes of mean men? Which is the way out of our own doubt and sinfulness? Standing in the very glory of a beautiful, humble peace, Jesus said: "I am the way."

"The hope of your happiness and joy lies in me." "I am the way." We have the completed history of the whole matter before us, and looking down upon that long-ago scene from this vantage point of experience we say: "Amen, Thou art the way, indeed." The way of His happiness was a Gethsemane-way; it was a Calvary-way; it was a crimson-way; it was a forgiving-way; it was a self-forgetful-way. It was the way of God and glory—the way of the cross that leads home.

It was in the course of this speech that these men said, "Lo, now, Thou speakest plainly, and speakest no proverb." It was at the close of this speech He prayed to the Father, and in the prayer said: "And now I come to Thee; and these things I speak in the world that they might have my joy fulfilled in themselves." That they might find the highway of happiness both for themselves and others, just as Jesus had done.

Looking, then, upon the completed records of what "Jesus began to do and to teach," let us recall some of the things He spake concerning this highway of happiness. And by way of parenthesis, let us notice that we do not hear Jesus saying, "I have so much trouble," "I am discouraged," "I am losing the way," "It was never meant that I should be anything," "I am going to quit," "There is no need for me to try," "I am beset by hard times," "I have the worst luck of anybody in the world." You need not be told again that these are not quotations from Jesus. And I think they are not frequently found upon the lips of His apostles when the task had been turned over to them. They are not the language of the Lord, nor of real life, nor of great love. Such talk cheapens life and wastes love, and is not becoming to those who mean to travel well the highway of happiness.

How shall we find this way? Jesus says: "I am the door." It is the way the disciples began. They began with Jesus. Every time I see a little child kneel at her mother's knee I think of the beginning in Jesus; I hear Him say, "I am Alpha." The right road to happiness begins in Jesus. Many have sought to find it elsewhere. Judas thought it began in the purse, and he tried to pile up enough money to buy happiness rather than feed the poor. It is mighty hard in this day when money has come so completely into its own not to think that without it in goodly measure one cannot be happy. If a road which begins in Jesus leads to money, then to have it is a blessing; but to turn from Jesus to it is the first great curse. Solomon eventually thought the road to happiness lay along the line of worldly power and fame, but at the end of the road he traveled he cried: "All is vanity." Words very different from the last ones of Paul.

Jesus is more than the door. He is the guide along the way. Sometimes for those who really wish to arrive there will be pitfalls and poisonous food along the road, but if they enter by Jesus they will find a true meaning to the words: "I am the Good Shepherd." Over the wilderness and through the desert He will bear them, and they shall lack nothing needful for their journey. "The Lord is my Shepherd; I shall not want." How often have we come suddenly to a place we knew not and could not be sure of the way out? If we just wait a bit upon the Good Shepherd we shall see Him leading out, and a new meaning will come upon His words when He said: "I am the Way." The apostles whom He sent forth found that word everlastingly sure. It mattered not whether they were battered by murderer's stones or barred by prison bars, He was there; it matter not whether they were tossed by tempests or tied to stakes, He was there—yea, from the altars of Jerusalem to the Isle of Patmos He was there.

But Jesus is more than Door and Shepherd—He is Truth and Bread. "I am the Truth . . . I am the Bread." How often on the road of happiness have our hearts yearned for the truth? If we enter a search for truth through Christ and Christian means and methods we shall not search in vain. That is why I stand for Christian colleges; that is why I stand for Christian teachers; that is why I stand for Christian parents; that is why I stand for teaching which is done by those who have entered at the Door and travel the road made plain by the crimson-red path of the Good Shepherd. There is no conflict between Christ and truth; there is no conflict between science and the Christian religion. The man who can discover a new truth or prove a new theory and does not do so violates a duty and fails to answer the call of Jesus. Truth is the bread of life. In Christ Jesus both are found.

But He is more than Door, Shepherd, Truth, and Bread. He is Light and Life. There is a light that fails, but Jesus is not it. "I am the Light of the world," He says, and individuals, nations and centuries have proved His assertion to be true. Whoever has undertaken to find the way to happiness and not come upon dark places, and dark days? There is a darkness more real than the midnights of Egypt, and a death deeper than the grave. Christ has radiated the dungeons of the earth and lightened the darkness of soul within. He struck a torch in Bedford jail, England, which has lightened in turn the whole world, so that we can see the meaning of his two sentences, "I am the Light of the world," "Ye are the light of the world." Whoever finds the way of which I speak will reflect the light of the Lord and become himself a light unto others. And it will be a light which gives life. The world is searching in such light as it has for life, but it will never find life in its fullest and best until it finds it in God.

More than all of these, He is the Resurrection. "I am the Resurrection and the Life." Every one here faces death, but if we walk by the side of the Good Shepherd, with His rod and staff in our hands, we shall fear no evil, for He is the conqueror of death, hell and the grave. "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the ages." "I am Alpha and Omega." Some day I wish to preach a sermon from the text, "I am Beta, Gamma, and Delta," and all the remainder of the letters of the Greek alphabet! We, too, often think of Jesus as Alpha, and then think we can forget Him until we come to the end, Omega; or sometimes we may think He forgets us until we need Him in death. Not so; Jesus is all the way of the highway of happiness. "As ye have received Christ Jesus, so walk in Him."

Mrs. Lilly N. Stagg, Christian Temple, Norfolk, is attending the Mission Conference at Chambersburg, Pa. She writes: "I am enjoying the conference of missions here. The program this year is very strong, made up from delegates from the Jerusalem Conference, returned missionaries and women who head up the interdenominational mission work. It is, indeed, a great privilege to be here." The Chambersburg Conference is one of six such conferences under the auspices of the Missionary Education Movement, and affords a fine opportunity for those who are interested in the subject of missions.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

MORE MORAL THAN POLITICAL.

The so-called Democratic Convention at Houston, Texas, forced upon the Democratic party and our country a moral issue, and every man and woman who cares more for morality and righteousness than for immorality and politics ought to take up the gauntlet and do battle for sobriety and decency. The following is from a recent editorial of the Richmond Times-Dispatch:

"The New York World, which is and has been the principal advocate of Smith, says the premier issue in the campaign this year will be the issue of prohibition. It is of the opinion that the Governor has won smashing primary victories because of the fact that he is wet."

Commenting on this, the esteemed Times-Dispatch declares that "To please him (Al. Smith) on a prohibition platform would be to place him in an incongruous, indefensible position. The Democratic party cannot afford to run with the hounds and lie with the hare. Smith as a militant prohibitionist, or as near a militant prohibitionist as a platform could make him, would be a patent insincerity."

We agree with the Times-Dispatch that it would be and is incongruous, indeed, for Al. Smith to run on a prohibition platform. In his telegram of acceptance, Smith made it perfectly plain that so far as any plank in a dry platform was concerned, he would not be bound by it and would have nothing to do with it, and that he was as thoroughly pledged to the wet cause and to the saloon as he had ever been. Anything else than this would have made him ridiculous in the light of his past record, for from the beginning of his public career to this good hour he has always fought every encroachment upon the sale and consumption, legally or illegally, of liquor. He has consistently lined up with the liquor element from the beginning till now. This whole country knows him simply because he has done this and is an avowed enemy of prohibition in any form, and is now and always has been for the wets. On this account, we maintain that Tammany Hall, which brought him to the front and has always sponsored him, has forced upon the American people a moral issue.

The talk of bolting the party to vote against Smith is also incongruous. Tammany has always bolted when there was an honest, sincere man up in behalf of the Democrats for President. It knifed and it bolted Tilden, Grover Cleveland and Woodrow Wilson, all three of whom it fought with desperation and did all it could to prevent their election. Tammany Hall has lived from its inception till this good hour on corruption in politics, and is known as the most notorious and corrupt political machine ever organized in this country. They tell us that we should not fight Al. Smith because of his religious views. Be it so; but there is a fact that may be borne in mind. Tammany Hall, which is responsible for Smith and has made him Governor of New York four times, is presided over by Mr. Olvaney, who is a Catholic, and by thirty-six district presidents, or lieutenants. Not all of the thirty-six district managers are Catholics. Only thirty-two of them are, and the other four are Jews—not a Protestant on the board of managers. Still, they are telling us that to raise the Church-membership cry is bigotry, and yet if facts and figures show anything it shows what Church is responsible for and is back of Tammany Hall. Tammany Hall, presided over and run by thirty-three Catholics and four Jews; not a Protestant name in the roster!

And they are asking our people of the Churches and of the religious press to keep out of politics now and attend to our own business! Well, we are trying to attend to our business, and that is to lay before the public the facts that confront us which pertain more to morality and righteousness than to politics and statecraft. We repeat the so-called Democratic convention at Houston forced the issue upon us and made it a moral rather than a political issue.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SECRETARIES.

Many secretaries of Sunday Schools feel that they have a very unimportant, insignificant and dreary task in making up and reading to the school their report. We have learned, however, that any official position in Sunday School, or in any other religious organization, can be made interesting and helpful to the organization. The writer had the privilege of attending a Sabbath School recently, and one of the outstanding features of that Sabbath School was the secretary's report. She was a fine young woman who loved her job and believed that it could be made to contribute something to the school. One morning after she had read the usual report, we asked her for a copy and next day she handed us the following:

"Report of Sabbath-School held April 21, 1928. Membership, 197; attendance, 139; offerings, $58.54; visitors, 98; number having daily lesson study, 111.

Our chapel was almost filled at 9:30 A. M. when we opened our Sabbath School by singing 'My Saviour First of All.' Whatever shall draw away the heart from God must be given up. Mammon is the idol of many. The love of money, the desire for wealth, is the golden chain that binds them to Satan. We cannot be half the Lord's and half the world's. We are not God's children unless we are such entirely, so let us have our Saviour first in all things.

"Brother A sent up an earnest petition to God to be with each one of us through the day, and put God first in all our thoughts. The report was next given, followed by a talk from Mrs. S, explaining our device to the Church officers present from the other Churches. Bro. H gave the mission reading. Work, O work, keeping eternity in view! Bear in mind that every power must be sanctified. A great work is to be done. We were next favored by a mixed quartet.

"Elder K reviewed the school on 'David and Goliath.' David came to the camp, sent by his father to see his brethren. David came to encourage and inspire. Can you not imagine how disappointed he was to see their weakness. David was only a shepherd boy, but God was preparing him for greater service. God cannot use men unless they are first willing to humble themselves before Him. David had faith to believe that God would fight that battle for him. Faith is something money cannot buy, intellect cannot procure it, wisdom cannot attain it; you can never hope, by your own effort, to secure it. But God offers it to you as a gift, and David took it.

On account of the large number present, we had a general study of the day's lesson, 'David Becomes a Fugitive,' given by Dr. A. It was envy that made Saul miserable and put the humble subject of his throne in jeopardy. What untold mischief has this evil trait of character worked in our world! The same enmity existed in the heart of Saul that stirred the heart of Cain against his brother Abel. Envy is the offspring of pride, and if it is entertained in the heart it will lead to hatred, and eventually to revenge and murder. Satan displayed his own character in exciting the fury of Saul against him who had never done him harm. We sang to close 'Dare to Do Right' and were dismissed by silent prayer."

That secretary thinks she has a job worthy of the best she can put into it. His report is a great feature of the school.

ORPHANAGE BUILDING DEDICATION.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN is in receipt of the following: "The trustees and superintendent of the Christian Orphanage invite you and your friends to be present at the dedication of the Johnston Hall, Sunday, July 28th, at 2:30 P. M., Christian Orphanage, Elon College, N. C."

The program for the occasion is as follows: W. K. Holt, chairman board of trustees, presiding; musical program, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Davis, Norfolk, Va.; called to order and greetings, the chairman; prayer, led by Rev. C. H. Rowland, D. D., Greensboro, N. C.; music; building and tablet, presented by J. O. Atkinson, Mission Secretary, Southern Convention; building and tablet accepted by C. D. Johnston, superintendent Christian Orphanage; song, by class from the Orphanage; historical sketch, by Trustee J. M. Darden, Suffolk, Va.; address, by Prof. R. L. Flowers, Duke University, Durham, N. C.; dedicatory formula and prayer, by Dr. W. W. Staley; song, "Blest Be the Tie that Binds"; benediction; inspection of building and plant.

The invitation and program are being sent to all our Sunday Schools and to many individual friends of the Orphanage. A great gathering is expected. The Johnston Hall, named for the present beloved superintendent, is a most beautiful and complete building of the Orphanage group. It is modern and up-to-date in every particular and is a real home for the larger boys and girls who, by merit and good behaviour, have won their way into this building. The trustees did a most gracious thing in honoring the superintendent by naming for him this magnificent building. Bro. Johnston richly deserves every honor that a devoted people can confer, for he has already built a most durable memorial and monument in the hearts, not only of the 112 children of the home but of the entire Church here in the South, where he is so well known and so much beloved.

THE CRADLE AND THE KINGDOM.

II.

The child may be considered in some of its elements: (1) Docility—The teachable spirit is what Jesus demands: "learn of me." In this respect, the child has the advantage of the man. The child at twenty knows more than the man at fifty did thirty years ago. Regeneration turns back the tide of years and converts spiritual conditions into child susceptibilities and the heart learns again trust and submission. (2) Growth—The little child is all the time increasing in size, strength, knowledge and usefulness. "Grow in grace and the knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus." The future nation is in the present playground, and the future Church is in the present infant class. Armies are now in cradles; the scholars of the future do not now know the alphabet of their mother tongue. The possibilities locked up in babyhood are the immeasurable quantities in human society. That cradle in your home may contain an angel or a fiend, a President or jail-bird; and the little child there may raise your name to honor or disgrace your name and break your heart. (3) Prevention—"An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." Levees prevent the spread of the river, but no force can drive the head-waters back when they have broken over the embankment. The city of New Orleans is below the Mississippi River, and its destruction is prevented by levees from five to thirty-five feet high, running up the river for one hundred miles. Prevention saves the Crescent City, but even that did not prevent damage and loss last year. Society loses its opportunity when it neglects the children. Here is the field for greatest service and greatest success. This requires the co-operation of the home and the Church. Neither can succeed without the other. Here is the bulwark of the nation, the tabernacle of the world, the field of glory. All saving forces work best in the field of prevention. Two hundred Eastern Virginia hams were piled up in a yard, cut into two parts, women washing and picking them; but it was too late to fully save them. Prevention would have saved them. A lovely building was saved by the fire department, but it was so marred by the flames as to look worse than less pretentious houses near by that had not felt the fire. A wreck may be saved, but it is a wreck still. Salvation for the child is the only real salvation that saves; after that it is only rescue work. Salvation of the child saves the man, the whole life.

There is a spiritual rescue that eases life of its burden of sin, begets a hope that is sweeter than pleasure, so changes purpose and feelings as to fill the soul with peace, turning all the springs of life into fountains of joy; but it is not comparable to the life that has run its whole course in the paths of righteousness, and has never known the pangs of guilt nor the raptures of rescue. It is the child in the kingdom from the cradle, the twig bent to incline the tree, the training of a soul as the vine-dresser trains the tendrils of the vine, the opening of the flower toward sun and shower, the growth of a soul toward God.

W. W. STALEY.

"HE HATH MARKED MY WORD."

The intensity of this age stands out as a conspicuous monument in all the history of our world. Men are intense in their labors, they are intense in their ambitions for achievement, and in it all they are intense in their wickedness. And because of this, we find many anxious people inquiring as to what will be the outcome.

Never was there a moment in the world's history when men should be studying the pages of the old prophets with even a deeper intensity than the world is driving on in its mad whirl. God has given us a book laden with messages, and the great adversary knows that these messages are so applicable and so fitting in this time that he has done everything in his power to belittle and to cover up the words of the living God. Amid all this din of progress saturated with infidelity that is so characteristic of our age, we may hear the voices of these prophets ringing out clear and strong, and carrying into our hearts with convicting power their sublime and awe-inspiring messages. Please read the following from the prophet Jeremiah:

"Who hath stood in the council of Jehovah, that he should perceive and hear His word? Who hath marked my word and heard it? Behold, the tempest of Jehovah, even His wrath, is gone forth, yea, a whirling tempest: it shall burst upon the head of the wicked. The anger of Jehovah shall not return, until He have executed and till He have performed the intents of His heart: in the latter days ye shall understand it perfectly" (Jeremiah 23:18-20).

The prophet calls upon us to stand in "the council of Jehovah." He invites us to "perceive His word," to "mark" and "hear" it. Then he calls our attention to the tempest expressed in the wrath of Jehovah, that has gone forth, "yea, a whirling tempest," and the significant utterance, "it shall burst upon the head of the wicked." And please note that the prophet announced that "the anger of Jehovah shall not return until He have executed, and till He have performed the intents of His heart."

Jeremiah uttered these words primarily for the Israel with which he lived and acted. But to borrow the language of the apostle Paul, these things have been written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the ages are come. And God's dealings with the wickedness of that time are typical of His dealings with wickedness today.

Through the prophets Isaiah, Jeremiah, Micah, etc., God plainly declared that He would utterly destroy the Jewish nation because of their sins. His expressed determination is just as clear concerning the sins of this age. And why will not men seriously reflect upon the awful scourge of war that swept over the world from 1914 to 1918? And why will they not reflect on the wars that are brewing today in greater proportions than ever before? Why will they not hearken to the words of the living God, heed His admonitions, and turn to the shelter that He provides?

Every day we read of earthquake, of famine, of pestilence, of tornado; and all these various disasters are clearly set forth in God's word as the agencies that He will use in dealing with sin. We should listen to the still small voice that speaks in each one of our souls through the words of the living God in this auspicious hour. God, through His omnipotent power and infinite love, has provided a shelter that is ample for us all. And at the same time He has issued a decree of destruction for all wickedness. It is for the individual himself to decide which he will accept.—Sign of the Times.

TEMPERANCE DECLARATION.

A positive declaration of the fight of the temperance forces of the United States against Governor Smith for President is announced in the statement made at Westerville, Ohio, by Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, general secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism, who has just returned from Houston where he attended the Democratic national convention as a special representative of the united temperance organizations (34 in number) of the United States. Dr. Cherrington's statement is as follows:

"Those who have been anxious for a national referendum on prohibition are to be accommodated. The telegram of Governor Smith to the Democratic convention at Houston after his nomination has made such a referendum inevitable. Moreover, the issues are clear. Governor Smith has not only restated his well-known position, but he has served notice in no uncertain terms to the effect that if elected he will unquestionably use the office of President to secure the modification of prohibition. He declares that he would consider it his duty as the chosen leader of the people to point the way to a solution of the problem in harmony with his own opinion, which, as repeatedly expressed, is to let each State be its own judge as to alcoholic content, and for each State to interpret the eighteenth amendment to the national Constitution to suit itself.

"If this does not mean nullification of the Constitution, then Calhoun did not know the meaning of that word and the Supreme Court of the United States will need to revise its own definitions covering that ground.

"Hence, the national referendum in November is to be a referendum not only on prohibition, but also upon the right of a President to use his office to secure practical nullification of the Constitution and the right of a State to interpret a provision of the Constitution to suit itself.

"In other words, the voters of the nation, at a single stroke, are to decide not simply the one but the three questions. Governor Smith in his telegram, moreover, declares that if he takes the oath as President he will execute that oath to the limit of his ability without reservation or evasion. Whatever else may be said of Governor Smith, he is consistent, and by virtue of his consistency and sincerity and in the light of his past record and known views, everybody should know what his interpretation of his oath of office will mean to him in case he should be elected to the presidency.

"When he was elected Governor of New York he took an oath to uphold the Constitution, which was similar to the oath he would take as President. Under his interpretation of the meaning of that oath, he performed the act which repealed the State prohibition enforcement code which had previously been enacted to secure the proper enforcement of the eighteenth amendment in New York, thus leaving that State since that time practically helpless in the matter of adequate prohibition enforcement. Certainly, therefore, if he should take the oath as President he would be entirely consistent in interpreting that oath as permitting him to use his office to secure either the repeal or the practical nullification of national prohibition.

"Assuming, as we do, that Governor Smith is absolutely honest and sincere in his convictions on the liquor question and his conception of his obligations as a chief executive of a State or nation, there can be no doubt as to what his attitude will be and as to what he will do so far as national prohibition is concerned, if he should be elected President.

"It is, therefore, certain that the referendum in November will be the most solemn, the most far-reaching, and the most vitally significant and important to the people of any such referendum for the last sixty-eight years."

"The word of God, which liveth and abideth forever" (1 Peter 1:23). The Bible is the indisputable Book. Therefore, as we value the culture and character of our people, as we value their civil liberty and their material prosperity, as we value their deliverance from the guilt and power and pollution of sin, as we value their consecration to God in righteousness, as we value their peace in death and their blessedness in eternity, let us labor in season and out of season to saturate the minds and hearts of our people with the uplifting and refining and saving Word of God.—W. W. Moore.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Hens and eggs are common things, but they suggest, when understood, the big values in small things. Naaman's servant raised the question with his master: "If the prophet had bid thee do some great thing, wouldst thou not have done it? How much rather then, when he saith to thee, Wash and be clean?" (2 K. 5:13.) The world is full of men and women who would gladly fill some high position, do some great thing, and yet shirk little duties in the Church and the State. Hens are good examples for men. The only pay a hen gets for laying eggs is her daily food and a pole on which to rest for sleep; and her house is usually a rough shed. She scratches for food, and then cackles for joy when she has laid one egg. That looks like a small matter when one egg is laid in one day.

Here is the result of investigation and estimates by comparison that shows the importance of eggs. The money value of eggs in the United States is greater than the money value of any one farm crop. The cotton crop might be estimated at fifteen million bales and twelve cents a pound, or sixty dollars a bale, would be conservative, and that would be nine billion dollars. A similar estimate could be made for corn, wheat, potatoes, hay, fruits, tobacco, truck, and none of them would exceed in money value the value of eggs. It looks small on one farm, in one back-yard, and even in one poultry farm; but hens do not work in belts as these farm crops, they lay eggs all over the country and all the year round. The hen does a lot of sitting as well as laying, and that is the hardest work the hen does is to sit for three weeks before the eggs hatch and the little chicks come forth to gladden her heart. The hen looks her worst when she comes off of that long rest. Rest is the hardest work of a hen's life, and doing nothing is the hardest thing man has to do, as a man or as a Christian. Activity is the easiest thing known to life of beast, bird, or man. But motherhood on the part of the hen keeps up the egg business of the world. Parenthood, in the right way, is a great contribution to the world.

Church members should learn from the hen that real contributions is what counts most in Christian life. If the hen does not lay eggs she will soon go to the knife and the pan. That is no time for cackle, but for croak. Church members who do not contribute presence, money, service, or all of them, if able, soon lose out as members. "It is more blessed to give than to receive," and that is what makes the hen cackle when she lays an egg as a voluntary free-will offering to man. "Little drops of water, little grains of sand make the mighty ocean and the lovely land." It is the little things that count most in this great world and in the Church of Jesus Christ. The army wins the battle and not the general; no, both win by working together. The big members and the little members make up the Church and move on toward the salvation of the world. The hen's reward is in the contribution she makes to the tables, the appetites and the markets of the world. A good hen is worth more than a sorry member.

W. W. STALEY.

IF HE SHOULD COME TODAY.

Our Lord's coming to reign in peace and righteousness, coming to reign with mighty power, coming into His own, coming for His own is the great, grand theme of the Bible yet to be fulfilled. The two men in white apparel assured the disciples as they gazed up into heaven, whence He had gone, that He would come again, "in like manner as ye have seen Him go into heaven." Jesus said repeatedly that He would come again. His last word to us is "Surely I come quickly."

But we are not to stand idly, gazing while we wait for His coming. He gave the people of all nations to us to tell them how He died upon Calvary's cross to free them from the bondage of sin. He has placed upon us the responsibility of spreading the old, old story of His love while He is away. But we have been very slow. Almost two thousand years have passed away and millions are passing into eternity each year without ever having heard the name of Jesus. Not all who hear will accept Him. There never has been a time when all have been converted who have heard the gospel story. But the responsibility is upon us to tell them. If after we have told them, they reject Him, they and not we are responsible.

The saddest thing we see in the world today is the lightness, the lack of responsibility which many Christians seem to feel. A returned missionary of one of the large denominations said the greatest shock he ever received was when he returned to this country and saw the frivolity and the great irreverence existing among the professed followers of our Lord. We have been faithfully warned to watch lest we depart from God, from His word and His ways and enter into sin. Are we watching for danger and diligently doing the work He has given us to do, or are we indifferent to His last command?

Judging from our lives, do we really believe Jesus is coming again? Are we like unto men that wait for their Lord? Are our loins girded about and our lights burning? Are we sure of His "blessed" which awaits those servants whom the Lord when He cometh shall find watching? We are admonished to "watch," for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come. We are warned to be ready, for "in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of man cometh."

We have received fair warning that He will come unannounced and suddenly; that He will come as a thief in the night. Will He find us ready? Do we love His appearing, or would we rather He would tarry? Are we sure of the crown which the righteous Judge shall give at that day to all who love His appearing? Are we abiding in Him, "that when He shall appear we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before Him at His coming?" If He should come today would He find us sober, vigilant, watching unto prayer?

MINNIE LOHR.

Dr. John R. Mott, famous in all Christendom as leader of the Y. M. C. A. forces and president of the national organization, submitted his resignation June 20th and now becomes president of the International Missionary Council. This is the fourth time Dr. Mott has been elected to this position, but he had been so committed to the Y. M. C. A. that he found it impossible to accept the presidency of the council until now. The International Missionary Council gives Dr. Mott a wider field for his great ability and Christian activities, comprising as it does the missionary forces of the Churches of fifty-one countries. Besides being president of the National Council of the American Associations, he was president also of the World's Student Christian Federation. In accepting the new position, Dr. Mott says: "The mandates which came to the International Missionary Council during the wonderful passion-tide on Olivet are of such momentous, exacting and urgent character as to require from its chairman the exercise of all its powers." As for leaving the presidency of the Y. M. C. A., Dr. Mott says: "The brotherhood well knows my oft-expressed conviction that the Young Men's Christian Association, raised up to serve primarily as a youth movement, and happily in North America reverting increasingly to this type, should more and more be led by men of a younger generation than the one I represent. I cannot with a free conscience longer defer acting on this conviction."

Rev. D. D. Nash, pastor of our Hopewell Church, writes the following about the recent meeting held at Hopewell immediately following the corner-stone laying of the Church. He is writing under date of July 2nd: "Just a few lines of appreciation for the great work done in the two weeks' services just closed yesterday by Bro. Sam Leonard Davis and his good wife, of Norfolk, Va., which was held in the Hopewell Christian Church. I wish to say that my labor with them was indeed one of the happiest I have ever experienced. I cannot find words to express the great love they have won into the hearts of our people, not only of our own Church but throughout the city. And the gospel in music, as well as the messages, brought by Sister Davis far exceeds anything I have ever had the pleasure of witnessing, and wherever my field of labor may be next year I want them, for they are a great success for the Master. Our Church has been revived with about fifty reconsecrations and fifteen additions to the Church. May God bless them in the great work they are doing, and I can recommend them to any Church who wants a real revival."

The following, taken from the Sanford Express, will be of interest to many of our readers: "Rev. B. J. Howard, pastor of the Jonesboro group of Christian Churches, has been extended a call from the Chapel Hill Christian Church to return to them September 1st. Rev. Mr. Howard came to Jonesboro last fall after having completed nine years of service with the Chapel Hill Church. If he returns to Chapel Hill it will mark the beginning of his third term there, with less than one year intervening between the terms, which speaks well for Mr. Howard. Since accepting the work here, Mr. and Mrs. Howard have endeared themselves to our people and it is earnestly hoped that they will not consider the call to return to Chapel Hill."

QUIETNESS AND CONFIDENCE.

We live in a world of strife and commotion. Agitation and excitement abound on every side; the very air is charged with intensity; it is an age of violence, an age of change; we do not know what a single day or hour will reveal. Every waking hour we wonder what the morning paper will bring to us, what record of vital changes in the affairs of the world, of great disasters which have come upon the human family. We wonder what the day will unfold in our own personal experience of change and adventure.

All this is inimical to the development of Christian experience. Unless we are on our guard, we shall unconsciously be carried away with this spirit that surrounds us, and be led to forget God, holy things, and the real, solid, substantial questions that pertain to eternity.

We need to cultivate the spirit of quietness and of confidence. "Thus saith the Lord God, the Holy One of Israel: In returning and rest shall ye be saved; in quietness and in confidence shall be your strength." Frequently, several times every day and in the waking hours of the night, the soul needs to shut itself in with God. This quiet, restful attitude on the part of the Christian will be conducive to peace of heart, to confidence in God and in the promises of His word.

The Still Small Voice.

It was in this quiet way that Elijah heard the voice of God speaking to him. The record declares that as Elijah stood upon the mount before the Lord, a great and strong wind rent the mountains and broke in pieces the rocks, but the Lord was not in the wind. Following the wind there came a mighty earthquake; all nature seemed convulsed, the ground trembled and quivered under Elijah's feet, but the Lord was not in the earthquake. In the wake of the earthquake came a fire, fiercely burning with devouring flame, but the Lord was not in the fire. But after these great exhibitions of power, the listening ear of Elijah heard the Lord speaking to him in "a still small voice." It was only as the prophet experienced and cultivated the spirit of rest and quietness and confidence that he heard God thus speaking to his soul. Had his mind been engrossed with the stir and excitement in nature about him, he would not have heard the still small voice.

There is a great lesson in this for us. To the extent that our minds are engrossed with the things around us today, with the stirring things that are taking place in the political and social worlds, shall we fail to hear God speaking to us in the seclusion and quietness of our own soul sanctuary. This quiet, listening attitude on our part will save us from distraction.

The Unsettled State of the World.

Reasoning from the standpoint of the human, we could well-nigh believe that God has forsaken the earth today. Great earthquakes have moved many things out of their place in the world around us. Stable government is giving place to radicalism. Cardinal doctrines long held by the Church are being denied, even by professed ministers of the gospel. The sober standards governing society in the past have been broken down, and a spirit of looseness is taking possession of the minds of the great multitude. The very air is filled with the spirit of jazz.

Gilt and tinsel and show appear in the place where we would expect to find pure gold, and even among the people of God we see much that is wrong. We see the spirit of worldliness in the lives of those of whom we would naturally expect better things. Were we to permit our minds to dwell upon these conditions, how easily could we nourish doubt and believe that God had forsaken the world. It is in such a time as this that the Lord speaks to us through His prophet: "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble. Therefore will not we fear, though the earth be removed, and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea; though the waters thereof roar and be troubled, though the mountains shake with the swelling thereof" (Psa. 46:1-3).

But the great climax of this beautiful song by the sweet singer of Israel is found in verse 10, "Be still, and know that I am God." God is over all; His hand is still upon the helm. His great purpose is being worked out in the history of this world in all of His dealings with the human family.

God's Infinite Patience.

What an inspiring example is afforded by the infinite patience of the Master as He calmly sits upon His throne and keeps watch over His own. The inspired penman does not use such expressions as "the patience of Christ," "the faith of Jesus," in a restricted or meaningless sense. They include, of course, the faith which the saints are to exercise in the saving power of the Lord, but they include as well the exercise of that infinite faith on the part of God in the final triumph of His own purposes.

Patiently has He sat upon His throne for the last 6,000 years. Evil men have done despite to His grace, blasphemed His holy name, scoffed at His proffered love. Satan and all his host have waged relentless warfare against all that is pure and holy as exemplified in the Master of life. In love and patience has He borne it all, not willing, in His great long-suffering, that any should perish but desirous that all should come to a saving knowledge of His grace. In the place of His rejected messengers, He has sent others to take their place. He has given line upon line, precept upon precept.

As He has done all this in patient love, in the conscious faith of the integrity of His own uprightness, and of the ultimate achievement of His righteous objectives, what an object lesson to the universe of patience, of long-suffering, of endurance, of abiding faith! As we contemplate these attributes, how we long to possess them, and our very souls cry out to be made Godlike, to be transformed into the image of the Blessed One.

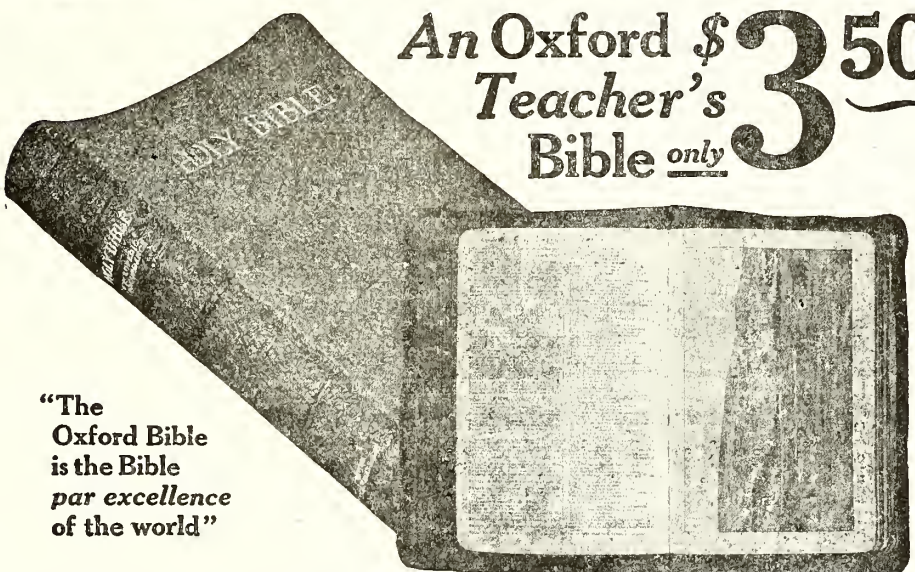

Awaiting God's Time.

And so as we see things going wrong in the world, as we see evils in the Church, let us patiently wait until the day of restitution. We should resist the evil consistently and wisely; we should stand for the right as God gives us to know the right; but having done this, let us not become impatient. Let us not be of the spirit of James and John, to call down fire from heaven upon those who do not meet our standard, but let us wait patiently for the revelations of the last day, the adjudication of every case, the adjustment of every wrong, by the great Judge.

This spirit on our part will make us more earnest in seeking the right way for ourselves; it will make us more considerate in labor for our fellow-men; it will make us more patient with their weaknesses. "Thus saith the Lord God, the Holy One of Israel: In returning and rest shall ye be saved; in quietness and in confidence shall be your strength." "Be still, and know that I am God."—Review and Herald.

RETRENCHMENT.

All this retrenchment in our mission fields at home and abroad, all this suffering in our college needs, all this heartache, all these debts on local Churches would be remedied by us all bringing in the tithe of our net income, the first fruits of all our increase. Many of us ought to give more than the tithe, but all, the least and the greatest, the poorest and richest, are under every Christian obligation to pay into the Lord's treasury at least the tithe. It is not Jewish, nor legalistic, nor anything of the kind, but the Lord's way to finance His Church and bring a spiritual blessing to each such giver. There is no need for retrenchment when our people will do this; and more, there will come to those persons, those families, those homes, those Churches such blessings as will utterly surprise them. There needs be a united effort to make this matter, so important, fully impressed upon our people until they do it.

Taking a Christian Look.

Have you, brother pastor, and your Church faced seriously, as Christians, the ratio of your expenditures as a Church on yourselves as compared with that which you spend for the kingdom outside yourselves? That question is being faced more seriously than ever before. It is very easy to increase local expenses in our own Church, where we can see needs, and where we, our children and our neighbors may be served better, and neglect to make a corresponding increase in our benevolences where the increasing needs are just as great. Churches and pastors are stewards of the whole work and they need to ever keep before them the principle of increasing our benevolences in the same ratio as we increase the things that serve us and ours. Some Churches forget this, so that just as soon as they begin larger expenditures in their local Church for themselves, they even decrease their giving for outside benevolences no matter what suffering it means. There must needs be a facing of this matter on the part of numerous Churches. In your Church does your total benevolent giving keep a proportionate pace upward with your local expenditures?

Impartial, Personal, Practical.
