Mrs. O. M. Cockes, of Elberon, Va., was superintendent and leader of the Waverly district. This meeting, held on Friday, the 5th, at Barrett's Church, evidenced intensive effort on the part of all who were to participate in the program, to make the exercises profitable and worthwhile. One exceedingly interesting feature of this rally was the competition for the prize for the one who presented the best poster, displaying various parts of our missionary work in the home and foreign field. Every one of these half-dozen posters, formed by the skilled hand and a keen knowledge of the work, deserved the prize, and were certainly beautiful and striking to look upon. These posters were worth the whole day's exercises, showing as they did capable and conscientious effort to construct them. Mrs. Matthews, of Spring Hill Church won the prize for the most artistic poster. The Church was full of interested hearers and observers, and it was, indeed, a great day at "old Barrett's," with 150 to 200 people present. The offering was $27.50.

It will be understood that these offerings form no part of the quota of any society and are given as a free-will contribution for some object named during the day. Many of the societies in the various groups reported more than half of their apportionment for the year already raised and sent in, and some nearly the whole of their quota.

The Waverly rally was attended by all, save one, of the pastors in the district, and this one was engaged in duties elsewhere that detained him, but he sent his apologies, congratulations and best wishes. Dr. C. C. Ryan, of Richmond, delighted the women of his district by bringing a good delegation from his Church to the rally of the Waverly district. The pastors in Eastern Virginia are certainly interested, as they should be, in the work their women are doing for the cause of missions.

These four missionary rallies were attended by approximately 600 people, and, in our judgment, there is no more fruitful and profitable work done anywhere than at these annual meetings. Several of the rallies were attended by visits from the others. Mrs. J. A. Williams president of the Southern Convention Woman's Board; Mrs. M. L. Bryant, president of the Eastern Virginia Woman's Board; Mrs. W. V. Leathers, treasurer, and Mrs. W. H. Andrews, superintendent of spiritual life work, and possibly some others, attended two or more of the rallies, taking a part on the program of each.

Bro. J. M. Darden, Assistant Mission Secretary, was an interested visitor at all of the rallies, and took a part on the program of each, and both edified and delighted the good women with his soulful and enthusiastic talks and with his deep interest in the great and good work they are doing. Each of these rallies deserve extensive account, for no praise is too much for the scores of faithful and interested workers who gave their best to make the rallies this year the most successful thus far for all the years. The weather was perfect, the spirit of co-operation was beautiful, the fellowship delightful, the hospitality boundless, and the service rendered and the work done were edifying and inspiring beyond words.

EVANGELISM.

By the decision of the Southern Convention, at Richmond, in 1928, April was fixed in the Church year as the month in which we should stress evangelism. And there is no more important theme that will engage our attention, and that should claim our energy and activity than evangelism.

Pastors, with whom this writer has talked in recent months, admit an increasing difficulty in evangelistic work, according to well-established and heretofore highly successful methods. The difficulty spoken of is that of attendance at the annual revival, or evangelistic meetings. The pastors are saying on all sides that adults, who have known of the Church and the gospel through the years and have incidentally, or otherwise, heard the gospel periodically, and who have not yielded to the persuasion thereof before reaching maturity, are now brought with increasing difficulty, and with decreasing numbers, to attend an evangelistic meeting or revival. Here and there one will find exceptions, but pastors, generally, seem to agree that the adult non-Church members round about and within the reach of the Churches will seldom attend a revival, as there are many other attractions of the day that interest them more and lure them from the Church. The verdict seems to be that the great body of those reached in an evangelistic meeting is made up of that number who have already been reached through the Sunday School, or the Christian Endeavor, or some auxiliary of the Church. On this account, great emphasis is being laid on building up in every Church and community a live, active Sunday School, or a Christian training school for the young, not to take the place of evangelism, but as the most influential and resourceful agency and instrumentality of evangelism.

If, then, the pronounced evangelistic efforts and energies cannot be brought into evidence during the month of April, surely there is no better time for a vigorous campaign and program on the part of all Sunday Schools, Bible schools, Endeavor Societies, to enlarge their numbers and list new members, secure additional pupils, and increase the number of workers, realizing as they do so that they are preparing the soil and sowing the seeds of real and effectual evangelism. The weather is open and better now, springtime with all of its renewed life and energy and beautiful Sundays, with all their invitation to remember and to glorify the Lord of creation and recreation, have come and are with us. Churches everywhere, and pastors and Sunday School superintendents and teachers will do well to redouble their efforts during the month of April to increase the membership and enlarge the activities of Sunday School, Christian Endeavor and all the other auxiliaries and agencies that help to reach and influence the life of the youth, thus preparing, in the very best way known at present, for the effectual fervent work of evangelism. In April, stress evangelism by increasing the number in your Sunday School and Endeavor Society.

A CONSTRAINING LOVE.

The reason why the love of our Lord is so compelling is because it is a love made perfect through suffering. No love has ever reached its sublimest height, or attained its supreme satisfaction, until it has been seasoned with suffering. One cannot love much without suffering much, and the one who loves most has suffered most, or must suffer most. The inspired writer was true to human experience when he said: "Love suffereth long and is kind; vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up." Truly, "it vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up," because it is seasoned and weighted with suffering. Love and suffering, though so different in expression and in fruitage, the one carrying to the height of ecstasy, the other to the depths of sorrow, are yet inseparable. God made them so.

This is the meaning of the cross. In the crucifixion there was revealed to the eye of man for a few brief moments that which goes on forever in the heart and life of our suffering Lord and Redeemer. Love suffereth long. Because our Lord Jesus loved most, He suffered most, in order that that love might be made perfect and compelling.

In this way, He is carrying on the work of redemption and salvation in the world. He is just compelling us, constraining us, forcing men and women by the powers of an infinite love, made perfect through suffering, to carry on in the world the work which He began while here on earth. His life on earth, as Luke says, was a "beginning," and His followers are constrained by His love to finish up His unfinished task, and to complete His incomplete work. He is depending on us to do it, and constraining us by His love to deny ourselves with Him, and even to suffer with Him, that we, through this suffering, this denial, this agony and anxiety, may carry on to completion that which He in His infinite wisdom began, and began so well. He who does the Lord's work for a price, or glory, or honor that the world can give, does it poorly and to little purpose; He who does it in love and self-denial and suffering, does it to good purposes and to successful ends because constrained to it by the love of Christ. CHURCH MEMBERSHIP AND HUMAN VALUE.

There are many fields in which human values are tested; but many of them are limited to the field in which they operate. A man may be a good business man, but that does not mean that he will be of value in other fields. He may be a good politician and a poor husband. He may be a good farmer and an indifferent neighbor. He may be a good scholar and almost useless as a citizen. A woman may be a star in society, and her home may be topsy-turvy. A woman may be a great singer and be lacking in common sense for practical purposes. In other words, there may be people for all human positions that have little value outside of the particular sphere in which they operate.

Church membership differs from other positions in this respect, that one cannot be a good Church member without being good in other things. A person cannot be a good Church member and not good for anything else. It is a more inclusive position than membership in other things. This position includes the whole man and all of his relations. A good Church member will be a good son, daughter, husband, wife, father, mother, neighbor, citizen, debtor, creditor; in fact, good in every relation of life. One cannot be a good Church member without being good in all other human relations.

There is no other organization that tests all human values as Church membership does. It is the only organization in which human values are all put to the severest test, and that is the reason why Church members are watched and criticised so much by outsiders. They unconsciously recognize the importance of Church members being good members.

There are three relations in which a good Church member must be loyal—to God, to self, and to others. This loyalty is inward rather than outward. The relation between man and God is absolutely between them alone. Here is no chance for deception and no reason for hypocrisy. The relation between a man and himself is just as secret and sacred. Loyalty in both cases means honesty. Relation to others is a great field for temptation to deceive, to use for self, to keep back the real self. Here is the great battlefield in which to win the victory by a loyalty that is unselfish, generous, sincere, and victorious. A good Church member in this field is one of God's chosen vessels and will one day receive a crown of righteousness. W. W. S.

CHURCH UNION IN PORTO RICO.

It is an interesting fact of Church life and history that the strongest advocates of Church union are found in mission fields and among missionaries. Possibly, they see the necessity of Church union more clearly and keenly than those of us who have become accustomed to the various denominational activities and agencies around about us. Although the denominations have, for the most part, divided up their fields of labor into separate divisions of territory, in order to prevent the expense of overlapping or competition, they have not found this sufficient and are not satisfied, since each one realizes the need of all on the foreign field. Our own Porto Rican forces have felt all along that certainly three of the denominations should be united in the work of evangelizing Porto Rico—Christians, Congregationalists, and the United Brethren. On this line, we are delighted to find in the Congregationalist, Boston, Mass., the following editorial expression which will prove of striking personal interest to CHRISTIAN SUN readers:

"The evangelicals of Porto Rico have caught the spirit of Church union which is so strong in all foreign mission lands and which is there less inhibited by the vested interests of the denominations than in continental United States. Last December, representatives of the Christian, Congregational and United Brethren Churches met in Ponce, Porto Rico, and formulated a basis of union to be submitted to the separate Church organizations and to the supporting missionary boards. They are avoiding any problems of name by proposing to call the new union the Evangelical Church of Porto Rico. There will be a general assembly, but it will be a democratically elected body, in which every local Church shall have representation. Pastors, educational and other missionaries will have membership ex officio, but will have no special status or authority. For the present, while the Churches are still dependent on mission subsidies, the administration of the general Church program will be in the hands of a local administrative committee and a special administrative committee of the mission boards. When the Churches in the union raise 75 per cent of their own expenses, they shall elect all the members of the local administrative committee through their general assembly. Until that time, a certain proportion will be named by the boards. These tentative proposals for union are now being considered by the boards concerned and by the representatives of other Churches working in Porto Rico. In view of the proposals for organic union between the Christians and Congregationalists, it is interesting to consider that the Porto Rican Churches of both denominations may attain this union ahead of those in continental United States." AFTER EASTER—WHAT?

Of course there were many of our Churches that did not have service on Easter Day, and so did not take the offering for missions on that day, as provided by the Southern Christian Convention. Two suggestions, we think, are timely:

First: Many of the Churches taking the offering, of course, did not reach their quota, nor as much as the pastor and those deeply interested desired. In such instances, efforts will be put forth to increase the offering. However, this increase may be made and the proper credit given when the same is sent in. Whatever was collected on Easter should be sent in and not delayed, for the additions will be made and proper credits given for all future contributions. We trust the Churches will not hold their offering, awaiting other additions, but will expedite the work by sending in the amounts collected. Suffolk and Richmond are among the number of those that reached their full quota, and some others have taken the offering and sent in the same, as our reports for the past two or three weeks show.

Second: We feel that every Church in every Conference of the Convention will take the offering as voted by the Convention, and the several conferences, since this is an opportunity that every one has of making a direct contribution to missions. Heretofore, a Church might neglect the matter and still give to missions, but it is different now, and it seems incumbent upon every Church to do its best and to make a contribution to share with others at home and abroad the blessings of the gospel which keep the Church alive. It does seem that with proper effort every Church and every member of every Church would be willing to give, with gladness, one-third as much as they pay to have the gospel preached to themselves. This done, the Church will reach the quota and there will be gladness throughout the length and border of the Convention, and our mission work at home and abroad will receive new impetus, and the workers new inspiration and enthusiasm. Certainly every Church will take the offering and every Sunday School will do its best to help us reach the goal that the Convention has set for us, since it is a modest and reasonable goal, and since every dollar asked is so much needed and will accomplish so much good in the name and for the sake of our Lord.

OUR JUBILEE YEAR.

Jubilee News.

The Metropolitan Christian Convention leads off with the first news we consider most worthy to place on the jubilee year page.

It is from the Everett, Pa., Earlston Christian Church, and is of a real advance step by that Church along the lines of training and Christian unity which has begun and which is to be a permanent part of their Church work for the full jubilee year, and not to stop with the year, we trust.

The pastor of the Earlston Christian Church, Rev. A. R. Webb, is president of the Ministerial Association, composed of the ministers of Everett and the surrounding country. An active worker of the Earlston Church, Mrs. Albert Calhoun, is secretary of the district Sunday School Association which covers much the same territory.

Mrs. Calhoun started the movement for an interdenominational training school of a high grade, with the standards of the International Council of Religious Education and backed by Bro. Webb and the ministers and leaders whom she enlisted as teachers. Students were secured from every Church in Everett and some from the surrounding country. These were organized with a dean and a faculty and the ministerial associations provided funds for a reference library and a year's training program for workers was outlined. Over sixty Methodist, Brethren, Lutheran, Reformed and Christian Church workers made up the school, and in the first term fifty-nine students were awarded denominational and interdenominational (Continued on Page 9.)

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Mrs. Sarah C. Nurney, relict of the late Deacon John Thomas Nurney, of the Suffolk Christian Church, was born in Nansemond County, Va., July 22, 1846, and died at the home of her son-in-law and daughter, in Richmond, Va., on January 6, 1929. Before her marriage, she was the only daughter of Hardy and Sarah Balance Norfleet.

She was married to John T. Nurney on May 3, 1862, during the Civil War. They had one daughter, Lula, who became the wife of Prof. P. J. Kernodle September 1, 1885. Professor Kernodle was at that time principal of the Suffolk Collegiate Institute. They had one son, John T. Kernodle, who graduated from Elon College, married Miss Virgie Beale, and is now the main man with his father in the Central Publishing Company, Richmond, Va. Dr. P. J. Kernodle is also managing editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, one of the best Church papers in this country.

Mrs. Nurney united with the Suffolk Christian Church in 1865, and her husband, from Cypress Chapel, February 2, 1867. They resided in Suffolk till the death of Mr. Nurney, August 9, 1897. Her last years were spent in the home of the Kernodles, in Richmond, Va. They were useful members of the Church, and Deacon Nurney was always active and progressive in Church work. When the present splendid Church was erected, he was chairman of the building committee.

During the Civil War, Mrs. Nurney did many acts of kindness for the soldiers. At one time, when the Federal army was entering Suffolk, she waved a flag that turned the Southern army back, and they surrounded a section of the Federal army. She nursed many Southern soldiers, and she received a letter from an old soldier just a short time before her death, saying that she saved his life and he wanted to see her once more before he died.

The Nurney home was a real preachers' home for ministers who visited Suffolk. Hospitality seemed to be a part of their very life. I spent my first night in Suffolk in November, 1882, and they sent me out to Bethlehem, where the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference met that year. Mrs. Nurney was a real home woman, and Mr. Nurney was a real Church-worker, and Lula was, too. As companions and partners, home and Church were both cared for in a way that blessed both.

In addition to caring for their only daughter, they cared for perhaps fifteen other children than their own, housing, feeding, clothing, educating, and leading them to the Church. Many of them have done well and love the Christian Church.

Mrs. Nurney was a direct descendant of Governor Wyatt. Mrs. Kernodle has a little trunk given her great-great-grandmother Wyatt by Mrs. Mary Custis Washington, and this is a source of real satisfaction as she looks into it and sees its antique contents.

Mrs. Nurney is survived by one half-sister, Mrs. Fannie Riddick, Durham, N. C.; and Mr. Nurney by one brother, James Nurney, and one sister, Mrs. C. B. Duke, Suffolk, Va.

The life of Mr. and Mrs. Nurney in Suffolk meant much more than history records. Improvements in the city, the Church and the community can be traced to his vision and work. Mrs. Nurney spent her last years in the home of Dr. and Mrs. P. J. Kernodle, and there passed on to meet her companion in that house not made with hands.

ELON LETTER.

The union program of the Congregational and Christian Churches received a real stimulus in the conference of the Congregational Churches of the Carolinas, held at Southern Pines, April 2-4, 1929. The North Carolina Friends, too, participated in the Conference.

The program was beautifully thought out and excellently executed. Three speakers, one from each Church, gave fifteen-minute addresses on "The Position of My Church on Christian Union." Dr. W. C. Wicker represented the Christians in the discussion of this theme.

At another session there were three fifteen-minute addresses on "The Teaching of My Church." Dr. C. H. Rowland spoke for our Church in this triune group.

At a third session, there were three addresses in the form of appreciations, each for the other's Church. Rev. Stanley C. Harrell represented us in this group and spoke our appreciation of the Society of Friends. Dr. Ensminger expressed his appreciation of our Church as the representative of the Congregationalists. Rev. Joseph H. Peele represented the Friends and expressed appreciation for the Congregationalists.

The conference also provided ten-minute presentations of the several institutions of the three Churches. President Binford presented Guilford College; Dr. E. F. Green, the Country Life Academy; Prof. Ross Ensminger and Rev. R. A. Whitten, Elon College, and President L. H. Keller, the Atlanta Theological Seminary.

On the closing night, the undersigned presented the national union program of the Congregational and Christian Churches. Dr. J. Edward Kirby presented the Carolina program, and Dr. W. Knighton Bloom concluded with a stirring address on "Carrying It Out."

Dr. W. S. Alexander, Dr. G. O. Lankford, and Rev. J. Lee Johnson, also of our Church, appeared on the program.

The moderator of the conference was Dr. J. Edward Kirby. That means the sessions were conducted with dispatch and in the spirit of good-fellowship and brotherly love.

LYNCHBURG, VA.

We have been thinking for some time we would give a report through THE SUN of our work here in Lynchburg. The work is young yet, as all of us know, but none the less interesting. While the Church is at present carrying an indebtedness of $2,000, we are straining every point possible to cancel that indebtedness. At our last quarterly conference, the Church decided to pay it off when the note comes due in this month. The congregation is comparatively small, the membership being around the hundred mark, and many of this number are children and young people, who are not able to do anything from a financial standpoint, thus leaving the actual contributing members at about 40 per cent of the membership. Never the less, we have twelve hundred dollars already pledged toward the amount. But the question that confronts us at present is, where is the remainder of the debt coming from? Eight hundred dollars yet to come! I am wondering if there are not one hundred members in the Southern Christian Convention that will give us five dollars each and help us pay our Church debt.

This debt is holding many out who would otherwise become members of the Church, and who will join when the obligation is canceled. The Church is in a beautiful location of the city and in a growing section. New houses are beginning to be erected on every side of the Church, which bespeaks the fact that some day we will be surrounded with good homes and a source of material to draw from. The future of the Church is very promising. Will not a number of the good people of the Christian Church help our good folks here to get on their feet by canceling this indebtedness?

The congregation is to be commended for their faith in undertaking to build a Church as they have here in this growing city. If there is any one who will help us, please send your donation to the writer and the same will be turned over to the Church treasurer. We would like for you to send your gifts so they will reach us by the 24th of this month.

We began a series of revival services in our Church March 17th and continued through Easter Sunday. The writer did the preaching, but was ably assisted in song by Bro. Mc. D. Madren. The congregations were good from the start to the end of the meeting, the interest was high, the members of the Church did much visiting and personal work. As a direct result, we are expecting to receive more than twenty-five new members. Many of that number have already been received.

On Tuesday night, following the meeting, April 2nd, the membership gathered around the home of the pastor, and the first thing he or his family knew, folks were coming in the house, and you can imagine the rest. Pounded—one of the greatest sort—with just the things that make any preacher and family rejoice. We tried to express our feelings for their gratitude and remembrance, but words were lacking. Bro. Madren and wife were with the company, and after words of greeting and a full explanation had been made, the company sang some good old gospel hymns and Bro. Johnie Everas gave a beautiful prayer, and the people went home, leaving the pastor and family to rejoice over the results. May God bless these good folks and help us to help them in a substantial way.

DOVER, DEL.

Easter was a great day in People's Christian Church, Dover, Del. Great audiences attended the morning service of worship in the Church auditorium, and the evening service in the community hall, at which time the pageant, "From Darkness to Dawn," was rendered by members of the young people's division. As a result of a program of visitation evangelism conducted by the pastor, Dr. R. C. Helfenstein, during Holy Week, twenty-two new members were received into the Church at the morning service. Six children were also christened and two young ladies baptized at this service.

The Jubilee Year program has been launched in People's Church by the pastor.

Another class of new members will be received into the Church on Mother's Day.

Delaware is beautiful now. The peach and pear trees being in full bloom and the apple trees beginning to bloom, the orchards present a gorgeous and continuous bouquet for those driving along the highways.

The annual community father-and-son banquet, sponsored by the Rotary Club, is to be held in People's Church, April 14th.

HELEN L. JONES,
Church Secretary.

A missionary Church is a growing Church, a glowing Church and a going Church.

GENERAL CONVENTION BUDGET.

The Christian Church necessarily has many lines of work, covering its entire field. The Convention itself is a great executive and administrative agency, and out of it grows all its denomination-wide departments and activities. Without it, as the central agency, no one of our departments would long continue. Indeed, they would never have come into existence. For years, an offering was taken in January for administration purposes.

The whole Church is a part of the Federal Council of Churches, and as a part of it we must furnish our share of the cost of its great co-operative work. Our Commission on Christian Unity has a great work of promoting such unity, as has no other agency, perhaps. To carry on these two lines of work, we have taken an offering in February each year.

Our Church carries on a foreign mission work in Japan and Porto Rico. It is vital and must be supported by the whole Church. Thus an offering has been taken each year in March for its support.

In the same way, evangelism is a denomination-wide movement, and an offering to sustain it has been taken in April.

We have a home mission work for Church extension, establishing new Churches and helping do the things in the homeland to help make it Christian. June is the month for taking that offering.

In like manner, an offering has been taken in October for the great work of our Christian Education Department.

It is evident that no body could be called a worthy Church or denomination and do less than promote a home and foreign mission work, and evangelism and Christian education work, a Christian unity program and maintain its own headquarters administration and share in the movements which it cannot promote alone.

These departments have reached a stage where they cannot longer be carried on by promiscuous offerings that are subject to so many varying conditions, such as the weather on a given day, the condition of the roads and season of the year, or on the interest or lack of interest of a pastor. If a Church were temporarily without a pastor, the work for the whole year suffered. Then there was no balance to the work. A more popular phase of the work, or the more able presentation of a work by some speaker, made all the other phases of the Church work suffer. No Church knew what it should give; many Churches gave nothing. There was no system for adequate, ample, or balanced provision for a denomination-wide work. Business men held aloof from such an inadequate system. Many pastors longed for a better way. Especially was this true as the work reached the place where fluctuations could no longer be adjusted. It was evident to administrators, strong laymen, forward-looking pastors that some better plan was a necessity. This is one reason why a Church should have a budget.

NOTICE.

The Halifax District Missionary Rally will be held in Virgilina, April 16th, beginning at 10 o'clock A. M. We are especially anxious that every pastor in the district be present and every Church be represented. Any one coming by rail, please notify the undersigned when they will arrive.

KREISLER ON STEWARDSHIP.

Said Fritz Kreisler, the violinist, on Christian stewardship: "I was born with music in my system. I knew musical scores instinctively before I knew my A B C's. It was a gift of Providence. I did not acquire it. So I do not even deserve thanks for the music. Music is too sacred to be sold. And the outrageous prices the musical celebrities charge today truly is a crime against society. I never look upon the money I earn as my own. It is public money. It is only a fund entrusted to my care for proper disbursement.

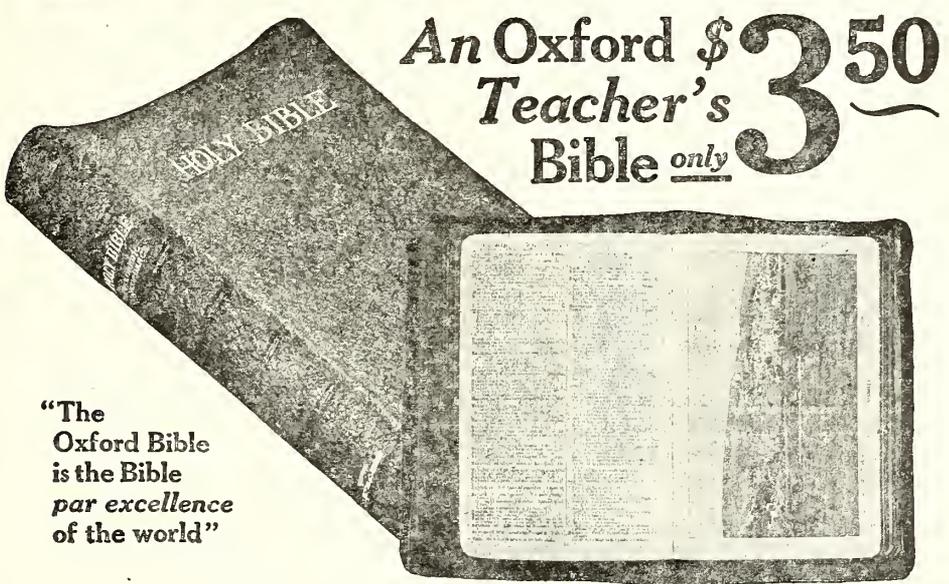

I am constantly endeavoring to reduce my needs to the minimum. I feel morally guilty in ordering a costly meal, for it deprives some one else of a slice of bread—some child, perhaps, of a bottle of milk. My beloved wife feels exactly the same way about these things as I do. You know what I eat; you know what I wear. In all these years of my so-called success in music, we have not built a home for ourselves. Between it and us stand all the homeless in the world!—Ex.

DO PROTESTANT PREACHERS PRAY?

Christ, who is our Exemplar as well as Saviour and Lord. He used to spend whole nights in secret communion with His Father, and always came forth to the multitude with new wisdom and power. If He needed to pray without ceasing, how does any professed disciple of His dare to neglect the secret place of prayer? And this same Master and Exemplar bade His disciples: "When thou prayest, enter into thine inner chamber, and having shut thy door, pray to thy Father in secret; and thy Father who seeth in secret shall recompense thee" (Matt. 6:6). A large part of that "recompense" is sure to be peace and joy of soul, and increased success is spreading the knowledge of Him and His salvation. If it is indeed true that in America there is "a non-praying ministry," alas for the Church and the world until there is a radical reform! Let each of us, both ministry and laity, take this message to heart.—J. T. Whitley, in Virginian-Pilot.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

PASTOR KIMURA TELLS HIS STORY.

(One of our Native Christian Pastors.)

My mother became a Christian when I was only five or six years old, so I went constantly to Sunday School and learned the teachings of Christ. Since this was about forty years ago, there was quite a lot of persecution, and most of the Sunday School pupils came secretly. The Russo-Japanese War came while I was a fourth or fifth-year student in Middle School. Since my ancestors were soldiers, I wanted to be a soldier, too. It would have been easy for me to become a soldier, and I knew soldiers were wise and had fame and honor, and were never financially in difficulties. But my thoughts and ambitions were turned aside, and I became a Christian worker instead. The reason for the change was because I knew an earnest and devoted missionary who was working actively for Japan's salvation. Tears gathered in my eyes as I watched that person, and I felt unworthy but very thankful for such loving help. I decided that I, too, would give my life to making Christ known in this country.

I thought that if we Christians worked with all our might to make Christ known that Japan would become a Christian country in sixty or seventy years. And I was not alone in this thought, for I have heard it from others and read the same statement in books. But as I met the real problems of the work of evangelization I began to realize how difficult it is. I wondered why, and thought much about it. Then I read a book, Nevius' "Methods of Mission Work," and I began to understand. He was a missionary in China, and his opinion stated in the book was that it would probably take 700 or 800 years to convert China. If it would take that long for China, I thought that however much we might work; however devoted to the cause of Christ we might be, without a special providence of God it would take at least 300 or 400 years for Japan.

From ages past, we have had the Shinto and Buddhist religions here, and other religions also, and because of that fact our hearts are hardened and unready to receive the truths of the Christian religion, or to receive Christ Himself. And then lately, too, Marxian philosophy has taken a strong hold on our student class, and they receive it gladly. Japan is like a great department store with the different religions and philosophies of life it offers its people. Many of the other mission countries seem empty and ready to be filled by Christ, but Japan was already full and must be emptied of much of its ancient teaching before Christ can be welcomed here. It seems to me necessary to suffer like the ancient martyrs before Christ can really be made known here.

LIFE AND MEMORIAL MEMBERSHIP.

(Read by Mrs. W. H. Andrews, Suffolk, Va., before the One-Day School of Missions at Suffolk, April 3rd, and at Isle of Wight Courthouse, April 4th, explaining the plan and purpose of the subject the paper bears.)

The topic assigned me is "Life and Memorial membership Certificates." We have just heard our leader read from Cor. 5:14, "For the love of Christ constraineth us." Constraineth us to what?

Linking this Scripture with my topic, I would say, the love of Christ constraineth us to give "life and memorial memberships" in our Women's Missionary Societies. For example, suppose your society wishes to honor its president, or its pastor's wife; or suppose your society wishes to memorialize a beloved member who has passed on to the great beyond. There is no better way than—perhaps none quite so good—to pay into the treasury the membership fee of $10. Along with the fee goes the name of the person to be so honored and so memorialized. The name is entered on the roll of the Woman's Board of the S. C. C., either as a life member, or as a memorial member of the board, as the case may be.

If it is a life member, she receives a certificate of membership issued and signed by the president and secretary of the board. If it is a memorial member, the family, or nearest relative, receives the certificate.

As regards actual memberships given throughout the Convention in the past, I only know the record of the Suffolk Woman's Society. Perhaps a short sketch will be of interest. The first life membership was given in September, 1916, to our organizer and first president, Mrs. W. H. Dick. Eight presidents, and our two pastors' wives, have been so honored.

Some member of our society had a vision that it would be a fine way to memorialize our deceased members. Two such memberships were given in September, 1917. (I think these were the first memorials given in the convention.) The memory of seventeen deceased members has been so honored—two of these were sent in December of this Conference year. There are two remaining names on our waiting list. We hope to send those in and make the number four for this year.

The total number of memberships given to date is twenty-seven. The total amount of fees thus accruing is $270.

It was my happy privilege to distribute the twenty-seven certificates and to hear, oh! so many expressions of sincere and heartfelt appreciation. This part of the work of our society is perhaps unsurpassed by any other in real heart-appeal.

The department of life and memorial memberships has another feature which is exceedingly appealing. The money contributed for this purpose is to be held in reserve in the treasury, and is to be used when needed, to take care of our retired, aged, or disabled missionaries. Those courageous ones who in young manhood and womanhood having heard the call of the Master, "Go ye," left home, loved ones and everything which seems to us so dear in our beloved country, choosing to take up their cross and follow Him to distant lands where they are spending their lives in sacrificial service—Christ's ambassadors—doing their work and ours. What a debt of gratitude we owe them!

Realizing that, as a rule, missionaries are too self-sacrificing to lay up much (if any) of this world's goods in store, for old age, it behooves us as members of the various missionary societies throughout the bounds of the Convention to avail ourselves of this splendid opportunity for real service.

My plea is that, beginning with this year, each woman's society in the Eastern Virginia Conference shall send in one or two memberships. Think what the result would be! At the rate of one membership each, twenty-nine societies would send in to the treasurer $290. Suffolk Society sends in at least two, which would make a total of $300 each year from one Conference for this most worthy purpose. Then suppose the seven Conferences of the Convention should do the same thing; it would not be long before we would have a fund in readiness sufficient for our day of need, which is sure to come when our missionaries have to return home and are most likely to need some assistance in their declining years.

My friends, should we not seriously consider this matter? And then act accordingly? Let us remember that in so doing we will be co-workers with Christ—we will be prepared to care for our missionaries. We will honor our life members. We will memorialize our deceased members and we will have the comforting assurance that "In our work shall we live on."

NEWS ITEMS.

BY MRS. W. M. JAY.

Rallies! rallies! rallies!

We are just now in the midst of our spring rallies, and oh! what a fine time we are all having, meeting old acquaintances and making new friends, singing our songs, praying our prayers, listening to great speeches, having a good social time and filling our minds and hearts with new interest in the missionary work. At the last Southern Convention meeting, it was decided to give a banner to the Conference making the highest score on the following five points:

1. Greatest number of Churches on the honor roll (all four societies and apportionments paid).
2. Greatest number of new societies.
3. Greatest number of new members.
4. Apportionments paid.
5. The highest amount paid per capita.

Each of these points will count twenty, and they are to be worked out on the percentage basis. This is when the societies need to work hard to help win the banner for her district and conference. Let's all push forward and let this be a real contest.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Hope-well Christian Church (Va.) observed the world's day of prayer for missions in a union service. Four denominations, the Salvation Army, and W. C. T. U. were represented. They report a most interesting meeting and a good crowd. "In union there is strength."

RURAL LIFE SUNDAY.

"Rural Life Sunday" will be observed in all parts of the world on May 5, 1929. The Home Missions Council, representing twenty-eight denominations in the United States and Canada, is promoting this day for the purpose of uniting the thought and interest of the Church in the following:

- (a) Prayer for God's blessing on fields and pastures.
- (b) The spiritual, social and economic welfare of the husbandman and his family.
- (c) The importance of the country Church and its place in the life of the people.

Worship suggestions for observing the day:

(a) Sermon themes for Rural Life Sunday.—The importance of rural life and work; God giveth the increase; co-workers with God; go, work in my vineyard today; preparing the soil; as ye sow, so shall ye reap; the ministry of beauty; the call of the country; the Christian farm-home.

(b) Scripture passages for sermons.—Matt. 6:25-34, 13:1-9, 18-23, 24-30; Psa. 8, 65, 103, 104, 144; Isa. 40; Deut. 8.

(c) Themes for addresses to young people.—Jesus the Good Shepherd; The Sower and the Seed; Consider the Lilies.

(d) Hymns.—"America, the Beautiful"; "For the Beauty of the Earth"; "The Lord Is My Shepherd"; "The King of Love My Shepherd Is"; "Faith of our Fathers"; "The Church in the Wildwood"; "Hark! the Voice of Jesus Calling"; "We Plow the Field"; "Jesus, Tender Shepherd"; "A Hymn for the Country Church."

OUR JUBILEE YEAR.

credit for standard work done. Out of the fourteen teachers in the Earlston Christian Church Sunday School, eight took courses and received standard credit, both from the Christian Church and the International Council of Religious Education.

Courses were given in Old Testament and New Testament, religious education in the family, teaching task of the Church and the beginnings of a special course on junior work.

At the close of the first term, it was decided to hold the school four terms per year, each term two weeks' long. The next term of the school will open the last week in April and extend into May.

Two things in this school not only show real forward-looking work, but fit into our jubilee year in a very real way. First, such a plan is training the disciples which was the heart of the last year of Jesus' ministry; and second, such a plan with all the denominations working together promotes Christian unity in a very practical way in which differences are not magnified but unity is promoted on a practical working basis instead of on a creedal agreement. For such a Christian unity spirit, Christ prayed on His last night on earth.

Is it any wonder that following such a Church and community service that the Earlston Christian Church experienced a gracious revival preceding Easter? As we go to press, we only have word of its progress, but not of its final result. Easter Sunday was set for the close of the meetings and the opening of the doors of the Church to new members. Surely the Lord will bless such consecrated work. Who will be the next?

What next worth-while, forward-looking program can we record from our Churches for this jubilee year? Some have already sent in, telling of record attendances and offerings which are fine and well worth recording, but this jubilee page must be reserved for news of forward steps which are not to stop with one deed well done but which will start a program which is to continue through the jubilee year and on to the enrichment of the Church and the extension of the kingdom. The Everett Church has started something which will continue to enrich the life of the Church and extend the kingdom, and for that reason it is here recorded. We trust that other Churches will catch the inspiration even if that which they do is not at all like the splendid program here recorded. Let us build into the Church this jubilee year something which will remain to the glory of our master and worthy of celebrating His ministry on earth.

Following the Master.

Following the Master in the last year of His earthly ministry. In His steps for the coming week:

Sunday, April 14th—"Darkness and Storm" (John 6:17, 18).

Monday, April 15th—"Toiling in Rowing" (Mark 6:48).

Tuesday, April 16th—"Be of Good Cheer" (Matt. 14:27).

Wednesday, April 17th—"Faith in Jesus" (Matt. 14:28, 29).

Thursday, April 18th—"Fear of the Waves" (Matt. 14:30).

Friday, April 19th—"Master of Wind and Wave" (Matt. 14:31, 32).

Saturday, April 20th—"Thou art the Son of God" (Matt. 14:35).

An April night of A. D. 29.

It is dark and a storm is brewing.

The little band of disciples huddle together in the boat. It has been a strange day. That morning they had crossed the sea with Jesus and had been followed by the multitudes whom He so miraculously fed. Then came the popular uprising of the people to force Him to be king. Somehow, in the confusion, He had disappeared after urging them to depart in the ship for the other side. Now it was night and the threatening wind and storm was before them. A storm on Galilee in daylight was to be avoided, but when darkness was added, the danger was doubled. For hours, they had fought the angry sea. They were "toiling in rowing" and ready to give up completely.

They had lost their sense of direction in the dark and with the contrary winds. The journey of only five or six miles could have been covered by these skillful oarsmen in an hour or two by daylight and a favorable sea, but now it is the "fourth watch"—3 o'clock in the morning and still no land in sight and the storm wilder and more fierce than ever.

Where is Jesus?—Coming!

They had been tossed that day from the very heights of triumph and pride in their Master down to the very gates of death. The sea and the storm seemed determined to engulf them. Where was the Master now? Why did He leave them in such a strait and—but what is that out on the waters? A Spirit! "And they cried out with fear." What else could it be that could out-ride that terrific storm and use the angry waves for stepping-stones? But a sweet, gentle, familiar voice comes to them over the troubled sea, which says: "Be of good cheer; it is I; be not afraid."

Peter first loses his fears and recovered his faith when he heard that voice which he loved and trusted. He shouts to him and asks to share the danger of the sea with his Master. Jesus' one word of "Come" was enough to start him on his way.

This is just another lesson in their last year of school with Him as their most intimate Teacher. Just another lesson that no matter how dark the night nor how seeming strong the wind and wave that Jesus still lives and He is Master of all.

We forget so easily and so soon. The way He led us and fed us a little time back is forgotten in the present threatening hour. Martin Luther's wife asks of him in one of his days of deep depression: "Is God dead?" If he lives and loves us, let us trust Him. May we later disciples of His join those earlier ones in learning this lesson of trust.

RECOMMENDED PLANS AND PROGRAM

February, March—Foreign Mission Months

THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION, in its Richmond Session last year, made February and March "Foreign Mission Months" for educational and informational purposes, culminating in an offering from all the Churches for Missions at, or on the nearest possible Sunday to, Easter—March 31, 1929. The goal set for the offering—Home and Foreign Missions—from Sunday Schools, and Churches, and individuals is $33,000; Woman's Societies, $12,000—total, $45,000. Inasmuch as the entire amount thus asked must be raised by voluntary offerings, the Conferences, in their recent sessions, in which the matter was discussed, adopted and recommended to the Sunday Schools and Churches the following method to be pursued in reaching their quota of one-third as much for Missions as for pastor's salary:

FIRST: When a Church uses the Budget Plan, write into that budget one-third the amount of pastor's salary to go to Missions, and send this in monthly or quarterly.

SECOND: If the budget is not used, canvass the individuals of the Church and Sunday School to find out how much each will give to Missions and when, entering the same on a card prepared for the purpose and which may be had of the Mission Secretary, Elon College, N. C.

THIRD: Where neither of these plans is adopted, then endeavor to increase the offering from the Sunday School, and at or about Easter have a Missionary Rally and try to raise the entire amount of the quota at that one service, in conjunction with the monthly offerings from the Sunday School for the year.

Each Church and Sunday School should use one or the other of these plans.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

BY REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

Lesson III—April 21, 1929.

COMFORT FOR GOD'S PEOPLE.

GOLDEN TEXT: "As one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort you."—Isa. 66:13.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psa. 30:1-5.

What is comfort? Some think of it in terms of physical ease and convenience. To take off one's shoes and to put on one's "comfies" or "comfort slippers," to ease back into a big, soft arm-chair, or to lie down on a couch, to turn on an electric fan in summer, or to sit before the fireplace in winter—these are typical examples of what some folks call comfort. Our homes, our places of work, our automobiles, our theaters, are designed to afford comfort in terms of physical ease. Or one may think of comfort in terms of financial independence. We often hear some one say that a man is in comfortable circumstances, meaning that he is well fixed financially. But there are other senses in which we use the word comfort. We sometimes think of it in terms of something soft and merely sentimental. Much of what passes for comfort is not real comfort at all. It is a superficial, sentimental, softening thing. Comfort in its highest sense means primarily "to bring strength" or "to bring courage." The root idea of comfort is not so much to soothe or to pacify, but rather to help one to endure manfully, to impart strength to bear up under whatever one faces or must endure. Comfort of this sort does not, of course, lack the qualities that soothe and satisfy, but it does far more than simply soothe. Perhaps it can be said that comfort is not an anaesthetic but rather a stimulant. The person who brings real comfort is not the person who comes in and says soft words, but the person who comes in and inspires a strong heart.

Whence is comfort? Comfort usually comes, of course, through people. But ultimately, comfort comes from God. One of His qualities is comfort. He is referred to as "the God of all comfort." And he who has the fine art of comfort has a quality that is distinctly God-like. Comfort comes, too, from God's Word. Whatever things were written were written among other things for our comfort, says the inspired writer.

But why comfort? The inspired writer also tells us that. God comforts us, that in turn we might comfort others. "The God of all comfort, who comforteth us in all our afflictions, that we may be able to comfort them that are in any affliction, through the comfort wherewith we ourselves are comforted of God." Like any other gift of God, comfort is given us, that we may give to others.

One does not have to look far to find some opportunity to serve as a comforter. All around us there are heavy hearts and broken lives. And he who can go to all such and manifest the spirit of genuine interest and sympathy, who can inspire within all such a new spirit of hope and of resolution, who can cause people to thank God and take new courage—such a one is indeed a minister of the Host High.

"Ask God to give thee skill in comfort's art,
That thou mayest consecrated be and set apart,
Unto a life of sympathy!

For heavy is the weight of ill in every heart:

And comforters are needed much, of Christ-like touch."
—Lucy Larcom.

One of the sources of comfort which the prophet used in helping the exiles was the sure foundation of the Word of God. "The grass withereth and the flower fadeth, but the word of God endureth forever. Let all those who are cast down remember that the eternal God is our Refuge and that the Word of God standeth sure.

Another thing which the prophet emphasized was that we are road-builders for the King. We are to build His highways and we are to make His roads straight. He who is faithful to his Church is thereby helping to prepare the way for the coming of the King.

There is to be no half-heartedness about the matter, either. We are to get up on a high mountain—a place of vantage and of vision, and a place from which we can proclaim the good news. When we have the good tidings, it is a sin to keep silence.

Our hope is in the fact that He who is the Good Shepherd goes before us to lead us in green pastures and beside still waters. He is the door by which we enter into a larger, fuller, richer life. And He will see to it that those who are weak and those who are less mature shall have that constant personal oversight which will lead them unto the fold at last.

TOPIC: "The Wonder of the Bible."—Isa. 55: 8-13; Matt. 5:17-19; 2 Pet. 1:19-21.

Some Bible Hints.

The Bible contains the thoughts of God and the purposes of God so that we may know them and ally ourselves with them (v. 8).

What God says goes, because it is in line with the forces of the universe. That is why the word accomplishes its purpose (v. 11).

The word of God is a progressive revelation. Abraham knew less about God than did Paul. Every age should step beyond the previous age (v. 17).

Inspiration is a miracle—the mind of the other world flowing into this world. This alone makes the Bible a wonderful book (vs. 19-21).

Suggestive Thoughts.

Take the wonder of God speaking to man at all. Without His voice to direct us, we should be in fearful darkness.

The wonder of the Bible preservation. It is probably the oldest book in existence and the most carefully preserved. This is one service the Jews did for us.

The wonder of its message, the love of God. For that is the central theme. Without it, who would have dared to say, "God is love." That declaration is revolutionary.

The wonder of its effects on man. The man who reads the word humbly and sincerely is transformed. Contact with heaven produces heavenly character.

A Few Illustrations.

When dying, Sir Walter Scott asked his son-in-law to read something out of the Book. "What book?" he was asked. He replied, "There is only one Book—the Bible."

The Bible is a library of sixty-six books, written in different centuries over a period of centuries, yet it makes one Book and contains one message. This is a literary miracle. There is nothing else like it in the world.

Take the wonder of its age. It is alive, vital, up-to-date today, the world's "best seller." Books written only a few years ago are forgotten. Why is this one remembered? It is divine.

Take the wonder of its interest. It interests all ages from childhood to old age. Children love its stories; age relies on its comfort and promises.

BACK TO GOD'S PROGRAM.

"Back to God's Program" was the call of Dr. J. Powell Tucker, pastor First Baptist Church, Raleigh, to more than a thousand women gathered in High Point, N. C., from every section of North Carolina, in their annual convention, which is meeting in the Green Street Baptist Church.

Despite the rains and blustery weather, delegates and visitors from near and far poured into High Point for the convention. The feature of the first morning's session will be the address by President F. P. Gaines, of Wake Forest. The feature of the first night session was the annual convention sermon by Dr. Tucker, who thrilled the great audience of ladies, with a sprinkling of men in it, by calling attention to the grave danger of utterly misplacing the emphasis in the program of the denomination on something else than missions, which is the supreme thing in God's program.

Dr. Tucker charged that the Churches are merely playing at evangelism and missions, while they are turning their attention to building fine Churches and in doing social service work. "We would not do any less," he said, "for our orphanages, hospitals and schools, but these objects in our program are not the ancestry of Christianity. They are its posterity, and we commit denominational suicide when we starve and impoverish the mother force which gave birth and which alone can nourish them all.

"The one hope of the denomination is to conform to the plan that will bring Christ Himself to the rescue of the multitudes on which he had compassion. Men will deny themselves and sacrifice under the spell of His presence, and His presence is conditioned solely on their faithful discharge of the great commission."—Greensboro Daily News.

ONE PASTOR MADE HAPPY.

The members of the Suffolk Christian Church made their pastor very happy on Easter Sunday when they "went over the top" in their special Easter offering for home and foreign missions. It had been agreed that our Church would raise the suggested quota—one-third of the pastor's salary—over and above the regular monthly Sunday School offering for missions ($25 a month), which could have been counted on the quota. The treasurer of the Church had already sent in two hundred and thirty-three dollars, so six hundred dollars remained to be raised through the special offering on Easter Sunday. The members of the Church responded in such a splendid way that this goal was not only reached, but surpassed.

One of the most encouraging features about the offering was the large number who had a part in it. Even the children of the beginners' department in the Sunday School were represented by attractive, special envelopes containing their gifts for the work in the Master's name. When the financial secretary called me early in the afternoon and reported the good news, I thanked God and took new courage. If there are Churches which have not yet taken the offering, let it be said that there is no surer way of making glad the hearts of their pastors than to respond generously and fully to this special call.

UNION IN INDIA.

Dr. McConaughy, stewardship secretary of the Presbyterian Church and a representative of the United Stewardship Council of America, is on a stewardship mission to the Far East.

"In Church union, progress is most marked. Sitting in, as I have been allowed to sit, at the meetings of one council after another, I have thanked God and taken courage in view of what I have seen and heard.

I am passing this on to our readers at the opening of our jubilee year to help us all to rejoice in the fact that our Lord's prayer is beginning to be answered.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE,
One of Our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MONDAY.

THAT GREAT WORD, "DUTY."

"As the duty of every day required."—2 Chron. 8:12-16.

This phrase is used twice in the account of Solomon's temple services, and Solomon was indeed a wise man. Solomon knew that the hardest duty is the daily duty. Splendid duties, exceptional tasks, are thrilling and rewarding, but it is the daily duties, humdrum as they are, that develop character.

"Certain words," says Dr. Charles E. Jefferson, "ought to be kept bright in the mind and vital on the lips, and one of them is 'duty.' It ought not to be supplanted by the softer word, privilege. The note of binding or obligation is muffled in the word, privilege, and it is just this note which our generation peculiarly needs to hear." And he is right.

Ease and pleasure are to be found in the train of duty, and nowhere else. There is a false ease, a false pleasure, which run from duty; but that ease proves irksome and that pleasure becomes a pain. Let us honor duty, and be sure that then duty will honor us.

Prayer.—Teach us, O Lord, to love the path of duty as Thou wouldst have us do, and even at the sacrifice of passing worldly pleasure. Amen.

TUESDAY.

RICH MEN'S RAIMENT.

"He may prepare it, but the just shall put it on."—Job 27:13-23.

Woodrow Wilson used to enjoy telling the story of a very rich man, who remarked pompously that he had four servants whose sole duty was to look after his sea bathing. "The first," he said, "has charge of my bathing-suits; the second takes care of the bath-houses, and the third acts as a kind of life-guard to me." "But the fourth—what does he do?" asked a listener. "Oh, he takes my bath; sea-bathing always has a depressing effect on my heart."

That story is like our passage in Job, which pictures a wicked rich man as having much rare raiment made for himself, but just men put it on and he goes naked. Let us ask ourselves how thoroughly we are using and appreciating the good things which God gives us. We may be spending our lives in envy of others while we shut our eyes to our own splendid possessions. It is safe to say that all of us, if we should once set ourselves to enjoying what is ours to enjoy, would find our lives overflowing with unimagined happiness.

Prayer.—Teach us, Heavenly Father, not only to appreciate Thy boundless generosity ourselves, but to teach others the wonderful ways of God's love and kindness to all who serve Him faithfully. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

WHAT DOES GOD LOOK LIKE?

"God is love."—1 John 4:8.

If God is a person, He must have some sort of personal appearance. I pictured God as a sternlooking person, on the lookout for some sin on my part and ready to punish me if I didn't look out. I believe that my picture of God is the picture that millions of human beings have carried with them all their lives. It is the picture of a policeman more than the picture of a Heavenly Father.

I don't believe God looks like an old person. I have come to think of Him as young and smiling. Have you ever seen any artist pictures of God smiling? I never have. They are all pictures of stern majesty. I am going to believe that if God is love, He looks like it. And He is eternally young.—C. M. S.

Prayer.—Dear Father, make us to see Thee in every-day life, and know Thy love in its fullness. Amen.

THURSDAY.

WHAT WE ARE.

"Grow in grace and in knowledge of the Lord and in the beauty of holiness."—2 Pet. 3:18.

"Better living" is not a matter of automobiles and radios. We have not yet achieved the voluptuousness of Calgula's Rome. Babylon was relatively as rich as modern America. Better living is of the head, rather than of the stomach. It is not what we did, but what we are.

Prayer.—Dear Lord, our God and our Father, as the days come, and as what they bring us come, and as conveniences and pleasures come; yea, as inconveniences and misfortunes come, hold us fast, make us humble. Amen.

FRIDAY.

QUIETNESS AND CONFIDENCE.

"In quietness and confidence shall be your strength."—Isa. 30:15-21.

The strong man is never a blustering man. Thoughtless persons confuse noise with power, but the really powerful forces, like electricity, heat, chemical action, gravity, and life, are all silent.

Dr. John Hall once wrote: "The maelstrom attracts more notice than the quiet fountain; a comet draws more attention than the steady star; but it is better to be the fountain than the maelstrom, and star than comet." That is the same as Isaiah's fine saying, "In quietness and in confidence shall be your strength."

Confidence is the basis of quietness. It is impossible to be serene if one is not sure of one's self and one's foundation. And the only lasting confidence in God. Only the life that is established on God is based on the eternal rock, the Rock of Ages.

Prayer.—Heavenly Father, we want to be strong. We want to be at peace. We want to be firm and sure. And so we turn to Thee. Place beneath us Thy everlasting arms. Forbid that we should have any other reliance. Grant that we find in Thee our unshaken stronghold. For Christ's sake. Amen.

SATURDAY.

RIGHT RELATIONSHIP.

"He that hath begun a good work in you will perform it unto the day of Christ."—Phil. 1:6.

One may fall, "but they that trust in the Lord shall renew their strength and shall not faint" (Isa. 48:31). For "God is faithful and will not suffer you to be tempted above that which ye are able." Thus, one is good only as he stands in right relation to Jesus Christ, and bad only as he closes his heart to Christ. Believing that God has begun a work in each of us and that He is able to carry it to a finish if we trust Him, we find that life at its best is a league with Him. There is not a single phase that does not challenge our manhood. We live in love or hate, desire or apathy, imagination or facts, and he is blind who does not see in these his opportunity to honor God and materially assist in making wrong things right. The keenest regret any one has is when looking back over life sees his blunders and sins and that he turned away from his golden chances and realizes that now he can't.

"Of all sad words of tongue or pen,

The saddest are these:

It might have been."

Prayer.—Dear Father, spread Thy hands of love and benediction over us. Forgive us and bless us. Give us alertness to best things, inspiration for achieving them, and crown our lives with Thy success. Amen.

SUNDAY.

IMPELLING BELIEF.

"This is His commandment, That we should believe in the name of His Son, Jesus Christ, and love one another as He commanded us."—1 John 3:33.

Believing is our highest privilege. Disbelieving is not only a personal loss, but disobedience. There is no neutral ground in settling the questions which Christianity introduces. "He that is not with me is against me." This is hard for some to realize. There are so many pleasant things in life which one often feels he has to give up if he is to commit his way unto the Lord. But the fact is we have to give up nothing; that is, we are saved the trouble and pain of giving up things by just walking in the heavenward way and the wrong things give us up. Such a decision puts new desires in the heart. Old things pass away and new things are our delight. Sam Jones was once asked to demonstrate this. "I can't," he said; "get on and try, and the demonstration will be your experience." To give the Lord a fair trial out of our hearts is our best understanding and richest experience. If the righteous are scarcely saved, with all their zeal, where shall the hesitating man appear?

Prayer.—O Lord, satisfy us with Thy mercy, so that we who have merited everlasting and voiceless sorrow can sing and be glad all our days. Establish thy beauty in our lives and the work of Thy hands. In the name of Jesus, we ask it. Amen.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

It is a busy time at the Christian Orphanage. The weather has been clear and warm for some days, and making garden has been claiming our attention for a week. Keeping something planted so we will have vegetables all the time after the first come in is a job that takes real planning. But if we have good seasons we generally keep something to eat all through the year fresh from the garden. We are trying to beat the bean beetle this year and get an early crop of beans before he appears. We are trying a new idea this season in a small way to see if it is a success. We are trying mulch paper for early cabbage and tomatoes, and if we find it will grow vegetables quickly it will be great for the Orphanage.

Our good women certainly were good to us in sending little dresses for Easter. The following have been received since our last report: Ladies' Aid Society, Mrs. J. C. Johnson, Springfield, Ohio, 15 dresses, 1 scarf, 2 hats; ladies of Beulah Church, Wadley, Ala., 4 dresses, 1 shirt; Ladies' Aid Society, Antioch Church, Fairfield, Iowa, 15 dresses; Mrs. L. E. Carlton, dresses and clothing for little girl.

NOTICE.

The Vance-Franklin and Warren District Missionary Rally will be held at the Liberty (Vance) Church, Thursday, April 25th, beginning at 10 o'clock A. M.

I want every pastor in the district to begin making plans, so that he will be able to attend the rally; and also every Church to begin making plans to send delegates, whether they have a missionary society or not. I am so anxious that every pastor in the district attend the rally and every Church be represented. Let us heed the theme for our rally this year, "The Call of the Master," and get busy in the mission work and attend the rally, thus making it the best that we have ever held in our district.

Don't forget the time and place—Liberty (Vance) Church, Thursday, April 25, 1929.

MARGARET ALSTON,

Henderson, N. C., R. 1. District Leader.

THE FIELD IS THE WORLD.

The first missionary boat that ever sailed from the love and light of home to a foreign port bore the Lord Jesus Christ.

The instructions are definite, "Go ye into all the world." A Sufficient Saviour for all the world is not an insufficient Saviour for any part of the world.

The peril of the Church has ever been shortsightedness, selfishness. "If any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his."

We enlisted on God's terms. His Son, on that day, became the Captain of our salvation. His command is, "Go!"

Jesse Wilson, of the Student Volunteer Movement, says, "That religion which is best for any people is the one best for all."

"How shall they believe in Him whom they have not heard?" The Jerusalem Council, assembled on the Mount of Olives this last year, answered that question as follows:

Each Christian pastor has a definite responsibility for presenting and interpreting this call to every Church of Christ and each and every Christian in each Church throughout the whole world.

A BLIND MAN WHO SAW CLEARLY.

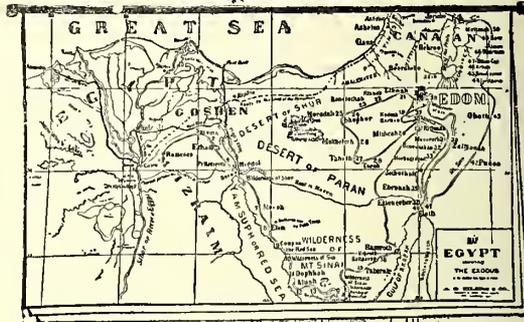

On one of the prominent corners of the city of Indianapolis a blind man sold newspapers for a number of years. On Sundays he and his wife, whose sight was also defective, were unailing in their attendance at the Central Christian Church and Sunday School, of which they were members for the last seven years.

In one of the Church's annual every-member canvass the wealthiest member of the congregation and another man had on their list the name, W. S. Nelson. The address took them to a tenement building of an indifferent sort and to an upper floor of the building.

After Mr. Nelson's death, his Church envelopes were found filled out and ready for the remaining Sundays of the month. Some one suggested to Mrs. Nelson that she would need this to apply on the funeral expenses, but she insisted that it had already been consecrated and could not be taken back.

A death that has caused a great deal of sorow was that of Miss Annie Mary Pittman, oldest daughter of the late Ernest W. and Mrs. Mable Pittman, who was born Mareh 2, 1913, and went to her reward Mareh 15, 1929, age 16 years and 13 days. Miss Pittman had been ill for three weeks, and suffered a great deal, yet she bore her sickness with grace and fortitude, and was conscios until near the end. Early in life she uited with Millfield Baptist Chureh, and was active in the services thereof and loved it dearly. She was a member of the seventh grade of the Ivor School, and was loved so much, which was expressed by the large erowd of school and elassmates that attended her funeral.

The funeral was in charge of the writer, pastor of Ivor Christian Chureh, due to the illness of her pastor, Rev. W. T. Hall, and was conducted from her home, near Ivor, Sunday, Mareh 17th, at 3 P. M., in the presenee of a large number of relatives and friends who were deeply grieved by her going. The body was plaeced in the family cemetery under a profusion of flowers that spoke of the respect in which she was held. She is survived by her mother, three brothers, six sisters, and a host of relatives and friends who feel keenly their loss by her going from among them.

MATTHEWS.

Mrs. Annie Marshall Matthews was born May 14, 1873, and died February

14, 1929, age 55 years and 9 months. She was married to Mr. L. K. Matthews July, 1904. To this union were born the following children: Marshall, Franklin, Sallie, Reuben aud Annie. Her children survive her; also four brothers and two sisters. Her husband preceeded her in death September 13, 1927. For years she had been frail and suffered much, and a number of times her condition required hospital treatment. With all her weakness and suffering physieally, it failed to eonquer her mentally and spiritualy. She was full of zeal and determination. She was reared near Saleu Chapel Christian Church when about twelve years old, and remained a loyal and faithful member till death. She was a liberal supporter of the Church. Her Church loyalty was not an incident in her life, but a continuous living experience. She inherited a great faith from her father and mother, and, like that found in Lois and Eunice and lived in Timothy, so Christian faith was lived by her. She was loyal and faithful to the Church of her choice because she loved Christ who founded the Church. She lived a daily testimony of her love for Him. She was a loving wife, a good mother, and kind friend.

Her life was of the simple, old-time

WILKINS.

Early Sunday morning, February 24, 1929, the death angel knocked at the home of Bro. J. T. Baines, of Cypress Chapel, Va., and Almedia Baker Wilkins, widow of the late Frank Wilkins, born January 18, 1846, fell asleep in Jesus. She was spared to the ripe old age of eighty-three years, one month and six days. For several years before her going, her health was poor, and she was a constant sufferer. Yet she bore it all patiently and her faith in God was never shaken. Those who knew her best, loved her most, and "she walked with God."

Sister Wilkins leaves to mourn her going, one daughter, Mrs. J. T. Baines; five grandchildren and five great-grandchildren. Funeral services were conducted by the writer at Cypress Chapel Christian Church, where she was a member, on Monday, February 25, 1929, and interment was made in the family burying-ground. During the services the Church choir rendered special music. Mrs. C. W. Rountree and Miss Mary Sue Parker sang, "Beautiful Isles of Somewhere." May the Great Healer heal and comfort the broken-hearted.

R. E. BRITTLE.

WELLS.

Mrs. Annie L. Wells, daughter of James and Emeline McSherry, was born August 7, 1855, and died March 5, 1929, age 73 years, 6 months and 28 days. When young she professed Christ and joined Lebanon Christian Church, where her membership remained till death. On April 15, 1872, she was married to James M. Wells, and to them were born ten children, as follows: Ollie, Mrs. Lizzie Hudson, Rev. W. L. Wells, C. P. Wells, Mrs. Lula Hudson, Mrs. Bernie Muler, Mrs. Ivy Scott, Ellis M. Wells, Mrs. Reubie Brannan, and Mrs. Alma Green. All the children are living except Ollie, who died in 1911. There are forty grandchildren and ten great-grandchildren. The total number of direct living descendants is sixty-four. The deceased is also survived by six sisters and two brothers, as follows: Mrs. Vernon, Mrs. Jim Solomon, Mrs. Jim Puliam, Mrs. Jack Muler, Mrs. Etta Yarboro, Mrs. Allen Hudson, Luther and Ed McSherry.

Sister Wells life was spent in loving, sacrificial service for her family, Church and neighbors. Her children can ever cherish the memory of her noble, exemplary life. Her body was brought from the home of her daughter, Mrs. Alma Green, Danville, Va., to Senora, N. C., near the old Wells home, on the afternoon of March 6th, and the funeral conducted in Lebanon Church by the writer, J. A. Winn and R. A. Whitten, and the burial was in the Church cemetery.

Seldom has it been my sad duty to witness deeper expressions of sorrow on the part of strong sons and daughters at the passing away of a parent. Yet their grief is for their earthly loss, mingled with an inward joy at the assurance of deceased's heavenly gain.

REV. STANLEY C. HARRELL.

DISHWASHING AND Ph. Ds.—

The University of Chicago has recently announced that a thesis on the proper process of cleaning table utensils has won the degree of doctor of philosophy. We have no idea as to what the writer of the thesis had to say, but if a distinct contribution has been made toward cleanliness and sanitation, then the world becomes the debtor of this new doctor. If no more has been done than to help the world realize what we owe to those who contribute their part by doing the despised and lowly tasks of life, more has been accomplished in this thesis than in a score of books which we have read. Perhaps the United States has gone further than any other nation in recognizing the dignity and worth of honest toil. But there are many lessons that we still need to learn. If our modern universities continue the way they have started, they will eventually make higher education worth while. That sounds as if it might have been intended as a joke. But education that contributes toward the larger, fuller, happier life, no matter what may be the subject-matter with which it deals, is, after all, the education that is worth most.

POLITICAL INDIA.—

Those who have had their interest awakened in the religious conditions of India must also be interested in the political situation, which appears to be drifting toward a crisis. For a number of years, India has been under the rule of the British empire. British rule has brought many blessings and advantages to India. Perhaps England has ruled India as well as, or better than, any other nation could have ruled a people so entirely different in all their attitudes and traditions. But for a long time India has been restive under the touch of British power. The years following the war have served to accentuate the dissatisfaction with foreign domination. There can be little doubt that there would have been untoward events of far-reaching significance before this time had it not been for the influence exerted by Mahatma Gandhi. Mr. Gandhi is actuated by the teachings of Jesus, but has never declared his personal allegiance to Jesus Christ, as Christians accept that term. Mr. Gandhi has preached and practiced a doctrine of passive resistance. So great has been his influence that he has been able, in the main, to prevent any resort to violence on an extensive scale. Those who share the confidence of the leaders of the Indian Nationalistic movement say that the younger members are becoming dissatisfied with the policy of non-resistance and are clamoring for resort to force. This is but another of the many world instances where national relationships need to be guided by the Christian principles of reconciliation.

COMPULSORY CHAPEL.—

Those most vitally interested in the policies of college life have been much stirred up in recent years by discussions as to whether our institutions of higher learning should or should not have compulsory chapel attendance. Many, and some of them weighty, have been the arguments on both sides. Some institutions have held out for compulsory attendance, and many others have given it up. Now a correspondent from Cleveland, Ohio, writes that the student council representing the women's college of Western Reserve University has requested that the chapel attendance be made once more compulsory. For a year and a half it has been left to the decision of the individual student whether chapel should be attended or not. Now the young people come to the authorities with the request to go back to the old ways, and they submit what would seem good and sufficient reasons for so doing.

One cannot refrain from wondering about such a novel proceeding. Does it prove what some of our outstanding leaders have been contending for year—ever since, in fact, we have been conscious of the revolt of youth, viz: that the heart of youth is fundamentally sound. Such ones hold that if the young people be given some liberty to think and act for themselves; that if they be wisely guided and counseled by their elders, they will come out all right. There can be no doubt but that the training of youth is one of the most delicate and, at the same time, one of the most important obligations in the world. It requires wisdom, humility, patience, consecration, plus the help of divine power and guidance to qualify for the task.

A NOTABLE LEADER PASSES.—

The Christian world has sustained a distinct loss in the death of Bishop Charles Henry Brent. He was an outstanding leader in his Church—Protestant Episcopal. But he was of that wider vision and of that larger loyalty which caused one to lose sight of his denominational connections because of the scope of the work which engaged his attention. Nor was he the poorer exponent of the cause with which he was officially connected because of this larger interest. No leader is worthy of his denomination whose interests and sympathy do not transcend his denomination's bounds. He served as bishop of the Philippine Islands from 1901 to 1918. While serving in this capacity he won the attention of the world in his fight against the opium traffic. During the World War he served as chief of chaplains in the American expeditionary forces. Here he was called upon to exercise all his ingenuity to bring the work of army chaplains up to demands that had never before been required. His work was of such a nature that it was acceptable both to those who were as his superiors in command and to those who worked with and under him. During the latter years of his life he devoted his attention to securing permanent peace. To this end he was an earnest advocate of the League of Nations and the World Court. He was also intensely interested in the union of all Christian denominations. His work in connection with the World Conference on Faith and Order can be measured only in the light of future years. Bishop Brent presided over the Lausanne conference. He died on March 27th, aged 67. He was at Lausanne at the time of his death, preparing for an extensive visit to the Near East. English and Scotch Presbyterians, and the Greek Church joined with the Swiss ecclesiastical authorities in a memorial service for the dead leader, which was held at Lausanne.

DR. JONES DEPARTS FOR INDIA.—

Dr. E. Stanley Jones is on his way back to India. He is going by way of England, where he is scheduled for a week of addresses, and then he plans to go back to his work in India. He has been detained in this country far beyond the time allotted in his original plans, because of the influence of his work from pulpit and lecture platform. The mission board felt that he could do a larger work by remaining in this country and stirring Church leaders to greater interest and activity for the mission cause. There are perhaps few evangelical congregations in this country that have not been touched either directly or indirectly by the speeches and writings of this man of God. Everywhere he has gone he has been greeted by large congregations, whose size was generally limited to the capacity of the auditoriums in which he spoke. And the unanimous testimony of those who heard him was that they had been spiritually quickened by the influence of his message. Many went for the first time out of curiosity to hear a man who had attracted such wide attention. But they continued to go because of what they received.

According to the statements made by Dr. Jones just before he was to leave, his chief misgivings for the future of the mission cause in India are concerning the "home base." He said, "Something has been slipping in the Church, and that something is its vision of the need of the world—Christ." He intimated that if the Churches of this country would give to the missionaries their whole-hearted support he would have little misgiving as to the future. The astounding thing about Dr. Jones is the sublime faith which he has in the power of the cross of Jesus Christ. His message is not a new message, but it has the same emphasis upon the cross which we find in the writings of the great apostle to the Gentiles.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Rev. J. F. Morgan, Norfolk, is assisting Rev. W. B. Fuller in a revival at Mt. Olivet Church, Rockingham County, Va.

We sympathize with our brother, Rev. M. F. Allen, Newport News, Va., in the painful and inconvenient injury which he sustained Thursday, April 4th. While cranking a car, he broke his right arm in four places, as a result of which he will have to carry his arm in a sling for many weeks.

Mrs. B. F. Frank, secretary, Harrisonburg, Va., writes, under date of April 11th, that the date of the missionary rally at Timber Ridge, Va., is changed from June 9th, because of a conflict, to Sunday, May 26th. All Churches of the district and those interested should take note of the change of date.

Few Churches have the distinction, honor and glory of our good Antioch, Isle of Wight County, Va. It is the mother of three Churches, has sent out six pastors, one of whom is on the foreign field. Little do some of our Churches realize, as they plod away at their tasks faithfully, what the fruits of their labors in time and eternity will be.

Dr. W. D. Samuel, North Manchester, Ind., died Saturday, March 30th, being seventy-seven years of age. From 1906-1914, he was president of the American Christian Convention and was for a time president also of the Christian Publishing Association Board and business manager of the Christian Publishing Association. He was a good man and widely known and much beloved.

From the Herald of Gospel Liberty, April 11th: "A Bible-reading contest was a unique feature of a two weeks' pre-Easter revival held at the Everett, Penn., Christian Church. The revival was conducted by Rev. W. T. Walters, assisted by Rev. R. C. Updyke as musical director. Over twenty-five people read the book of John in full, and, in all, 3,250 chapters of the Bible were read during the two weeks."

Rev. C. E. Geringer, who has been attending the rural Church school two weeks at Vanderbilt University, writes that there were 360 pastors in the school from twenty-six denominations and twenty-two States. Vanderbilt now has the only non-denominational school in the South, and in addition to conducting a rural Church school, the school of religion conducts, through much of the year, a series of short courses in rural problems. In addition to Bro. Geringer, there were five other ministers present from our denomination.

Rev. J. H. Dollar, pastor of our Reidsville Church, writes of a Sunday School record that is inspiring: "Our Sunday School is growing. The average for January was 210, February 238, and March 286, and we hope to keep it going. We are to have our Church put in new condition during April and are looking forward to Mothers' Day with great pleasure and expectation. Rev. O. D. Poythress is to come to us that day or on Monday following, and we are to have our revival covering the two weeks thereafter."

Beginning next Sunday, April 21st, the First Christian Church, of Richmond, will engage in a ten-day meeting. The pastor has secured Rev. Archibald Thomson and his daughter, Margaret, who will have charge of the musical and devotional part of the service. The Thomsons are real Scotch people and are very effective in their ministry of song. The pastor will do the preaching. Six adult members have been received since Easter Sunday, and there is a splendid outlook for a further increase in membership. Missions and evangelism must go hand in hand in the building of His kingdom.—C. C. Ryan.

Windsor Christian Church, Rev. G. A. Pearce, pastor, and Bro. S. T. Holland, treasurer, inspires other Churches and expresses its own loyalty and devotion to the kingdom by raising and sending in more than its mission quota: "I am glad to inclose herewith check for the Windsor Christian Church, $121.05, for missions, which is $6.47 over our quota, on the basis of one-third as much for missions as we pay our pastor." Such efforts on the part of the faithful are the hope of kingdom growth through the Christian Church and show what can be done when even a small and faithful number will pull together and sacrifice together in the name of their Lord.

"Dear Bro. Atkinson,—It gives me pleasure to write you in regard to our mission offering at Pleasant Union. We had a good entertainment by the children which was greatly enjoyed by every one. I am mailing you a check, hoping to do our very best for the cause. We are planning to take an offering at Spoon's Chapel on the third Sunday. Glad to say that the interest is better than it has been. So we ask that THE SUN readers pray for us that we may go forward in the cause of Christ and help spread the gospel to those who know it not. Yours fraternally (signed) B. H. Lowdermilk." Such letters are encouraging. Pleasant Union, under Bro. Lowdermilk's loyal leadership, will do its part.

Two of our Southern pastors, now serving pastorates in Ohio, gave a good account of themselves and of their stewardship on Easter. Dr. James H. Lightbourne, Troy, Ohio, says the Herald of Gospel Liberty, reports an Easter missionary offering of $526, and Sunday School attendance on that day of 746. Rev. John G. Truitt, First Church, Dayton, reports, by the same authority, an Easter foreign mission offering of $250, which is regarded as especially liberal, in view of the fact that the Church is now bending all its efforts to a new building campaign. We are sure these good pastors will keep up their faithful work, for we Southerners still have our eye upon them and shall do our best to induce them to return to the South in due course.

In the death of Bro. J. W. Winfrey, Virgilina, Va., the Christian Church loses one of its most faithful and loyal laymen. Bro. Winfrey told the editor of THE SUN at the last session of the N. C. & Va. Conference, at Ingram, Va., that he had attended thirty-nine annual sessions of this Conference (if our memory serves us correctly), but that he did not feel he would ever be able to attend another. He has certainly joined that faithful conference above in that house not made with hands, for he was a good man, loyal, faithful and true to his Church, his country, and his God. Hallowed be his memory and sacred his name. A faithful servant of his Lord has gone to his reward, and we shall miss him in our Christian conferences and councils.

Mrs. W. A. Harper, of Elon College, who has been president of the North Carolina Federation of Music Clubs for the past four years, and during that time has seen a number of clubs in the State increase from fifty-eight to one hundred and fifty-two, was honored, as she retired from the presidency at the annual meeting in Asheville last week, by being presented a life membership in the national federation. In responding to the honor, Mrs. Harper declared that no gift from the North Carolina Federation could have given her more pleasure. In her closing address as president of the federation, she made a plea for increased interest in choirs and choruses, massed singing and piano playing. Mrs. Harper has rendered distinct service to the music lovers of the State and has been highly honored by the constituency whom she has served so efficiently and satisfactorily.

Rev. E. B. White, of Dendron, Va., writes: "Beloved, when you think about the matchless, boundless, infinite love of the King of glory, and let it fill your heart, it will express through you as kind, loving deeds. It will encourage you to support the enterprises of our Church. The trouble is that so many people fail to put God first. What does it profit to gain the things that are temporal at the expense of a right life, peace with God, and the hope of glory? Jesus only can satisfy the soul. Wisdom, wealth, power, fame cannot do it. Jesus Christ, the Lord God, only can bestow the love, sympathy, strength, peace, wisdom and salvation we crave and need. The Redeemer says, 'come unto me.' This is a personal, blessed, royal and Divine invitation made by the mighty God; mighty to save, and ready to save. Beloved, have you accepted it? It is the incarnate Christ, the divine Christ, the crucified and ascended Christ who invites you to come to Him for salvation. Remember, that salvation to any one who rejects Jesus Christ—God's appointed sacrifice for sin—is absolutely impossible. I plead with you to renounce sin; embrace Christ upon gospel terms. Give God your hearts and walk in His ways."

WHAT THE BIBLE CAN DO FOR US.

During the darkest days of the great war, a Swiss professor sat in his lecture-room at Zurich, trying in vain to concentrate his attention upon his lectures. Across the border he could hear the guns booming, and he realized that every shot was mowing down young men like his own pupils. All that he said about God and Christ, about salvation and brotherly love, seemed to him a mockery, and for a time he felt as if he had lost God out of the world.

In his dilemma, he turned to the pages of Israel's prophets. There he read of men who had been through experiences like his own. They had seen their country devastated, their homes destroyed, their countrymen carried into captivity, the temple in which they worshiped leveled with the ground. Yet they had been able, in and through it all, to discern the working of a divine purpose, and to retain their faith that love could triumph over man's ignorance and sin. Through the prophets, Professor Ragatz found his way back to a living God, Master of the fate of present-day Europe, exactly as in the days of Isaiah and Jeremiah He was Master of the fate of Israel.

What the Bible did for the Swiss professor, it has done for men in every age. By acquainting men with those who have found God before them, it has helped them to find God for themselves; and it has done this at all points at which human need is greatest. Through the Bible, God has been teaching men what to think, what to do, how to feel, and He is teaching them in all these ways today.—Beliefs that Matter, by William Adams Brown.

THE SUPREME FACT.

Christians for nearly two thousand years have been declaring their belief in the resurrection, and still boldly proclaim it throughout the vast and enlarging extent of the holy catholic Church. It has been denied by some from the beginning, and modern oppositions, neither surprising nor original, should not unduly alarm the army of believers.

It is, nevertheless, wise to examine from time to time the foundation of our faith, and even give attention to the arguments that are advanced against it, for there can be no surcease from age to age in the good fight of faith against its permanent and protean foes. Belief cannot be handed down from generation to generation as though it were a material treasure; rather must it be achieved by the dwellers in each era in the exercise of their own intellectual and spiritual energies.

This, of course, does not mean there is independence of the past, but that its potential spiritual treasures cannot become actual in the experience of any generation by any processes of tacit traditionalism. The past offers the present both good and evil, and the power of the mortmain sometimes impoverishes the children because of the superstitious subservience of forbears. The ships that sail from the shore of yesterday into the harbors of today bear cargoes of wheat not without chaff, and in their treasure chests are coin of real truth and counterfeit minted in the darksome monasteries of mythology and superstition.

The belief in the resurrection stands all the reasonable tests by which it may be judged. Materialistic modern scientists reject it, but other scientists of equal standing still accept it. These look through microscopes and telescopes; they work in laboratories and observatories, and yet remain in the rejoicing fellowship of the believing. They realize that there cannot be any conflict between real science and true religion, and so they receive the characteristic values of each.

Faith in the resurrection is founded upon the fact, attested by historical witnesses, that Christ arose from the dead and appeared to His disciples and to other believers to whom He showed the undeniable evidence that it was His body that had come forth from the tomb. This demonstration revived their hopes and rekindled their zeal, and they proceeded to the upper room, as He directed them, and there prayed for the descent of the Holy Spirit, who energized them for the direct witnessing and the dynamic working which inaugurated the Christian Church among men. The very heart of apostolic preaching, both Petrine and Pauline, was the fact of the resurrection of Christ.

This to the apostles was a great regulative truth. They did not consider Christianity primarily a moral code, and secondly a supernatural religion. On the other hand, they deemed it to consist of certain supernatural facts with which were conjoined moral commandments above the capacity for obedience of the natural man.

Those who insist that the chief element in Christianity is ethical are apt to eliminate from its behests those commands to holiness which Christ uttered with such challenging clearness. Both His person and His precepts are transcendent, both His code and His cross are supernatural, and both the regeneration which He enjoins and the resurrection which He attains are produced by a power of God other than that which is observed in the ordinary on-go of nature. That such is the case, history demonstrates.

History and natural science, correctly conceived, are parallel and cannot collide. The airplane is made for the air and the submarine for the sea, and as long as each stays in its element they cannot seek to occupy the same space at the same time.

Science cannot deny that Jesus rose. It has nothing to say about historical matters. It cannot tell by studying hydrostatics in the Rubicon whether Caesar crossed it or not; it cannot tell by a mineralogical study of the pyramids whether the Israelites built them or not, and it cannot tell by discovering the specific gravity of the Atlantic Ocean whether Columbus crossed it or not.

The historical element in religion cannot be discredited by modern natural science. The modern materialistic scientist cannot deny the significance of the dating of all events since then from the birth of Christ; nor can he answer the argument for the resurrection presented by tracing the origin of the Christian Church to the empty tomb of Christ. The early believers were convinced that the body of Jesus came from the grave.

That there is a scientific presumption against this may be admitted, but it is not decisive. It can be removed by human testimony, and the testimony exists; it can be set aside by the necessity for explaining so imposing a historical fact as the origin and growth of as vast an institution as the Christian Church, and no phenomenon in natural science is more palpable than the existence of the Church. The marble in St. Peter's is as real as that which the geologist studies; the words of men are as real as the chatterings of apes; spiritual power produces effects as evident as those created by electrical currents; libraries are as important as laboratories, and poets and prophets minister to men as well as physicists and philosophers.

It is true that the resurrection of Jesus is a fact in the realm of the supernatural, but modern science is not equal to the task of proving that the supernatural has never occurred or that it is impossible. It is competent only to affirm that it has never seen any such facts during the brief period of its observations. It cannot reasonably dogmatize as to what took place before it began, and such dogmatism is extremely inconsistent in the case of those modern scientists whose fundamental philosophy has as its strongest tenet the truth that the world is changeable. It is admitted by all that no dead bodies are now arising, and the strongest Christian believers do not look for their dead to come from their graves.

At the same time, they believe that Christ arose, because down through the centuries has come the message of the first Easter morn. They believe that the body which Mary pressed to her motherly bosom, that toiled in Joseph's shop at Nazareth, that pillowed the head of the loving John, that bowed under the olive trees in Gethsemane, that fell beneath its burden on the road to Golgotha, that suffered upon the cross and was pierced by the thorns and the spear, that was laid lovingly away in the Arimathean tomb, and that this body on the third day rose from the dead.

This faith is of exceeding comfort to the heart that cherishes it. Upon it is based the hope of all the Christians who did not see their Lord when He first came among men, that they, too, shall see Him and rejoice in the blessings of His actual presence, as did the first believers. In the resurrection, His incarnation is perpetuated in the power of an endless life. They also find in their faith in His resurrection the assurance of the resurrection of themselves and their loved ones and their fellow-men, for they know that He was but the first fruits of those who are fallen asleep, and that His victory over death was vicarious triumph in which life and immortality are brought to light.—Rembert G. Smith, D. D., in Nashville Christian Advocate.

PATRIOTISM AND GOD.

While the bloody footprints of Washington's barefoot soldiers were showing red against Valley Forge snows, the Continental Congress still remembered God. Despite its galling poverty, it "Resolved, . . . to import 20,000 Bibles from Holland, or Scotland."

Bits of patriotic and spiritual history like the above fill the pages of Gino Speranza's "Race or Nation." To secure its publication was a task in the face of intense opposition, for this author of Italian parentage told some things about early American Protestantism about which it has become fashionable in certain circles to sneer. Being written by one sprung from Italian forbears, its statements of some almost forgotten facts seem permissible, whereas they would call forth a storm of criticism were they made by any one of Puritan ancestry.

Monument to Rev. J. W. Wellons, D. D.

The above cut represents the proposed monument to be placed at the grave of Rev. James Willis Wellons, D. D. Besides this, the plot is to be inclosed with a granite curbing and posts. The combination presents a most attractive design. Elaborate lettering is to be placed on the monument. Already the fund has been started. The cost, completed, is to be $865. Will you send your contribution to Mrs. L. E. Carlton, treasurer, 414 North Lombardy Street, Richmond, Va.?

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

CHURCH CONTRIBUTIONS IN 1928.

The United Stewardship Council has published statistics from the various denominations, showing what each gave for benevolences the past year, not including incomes on permanent funds, legacies, etc. It is interesting to note that the Moravians (North) head the list, with $72.53 per capita for all purposes; for congregational purposes, they gave $48.77 per capita; for benevolences, missions mostly, they gave $12.88 per capita. Coming next is the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., $39.11 per capita, of which amount $25.25 was for congregational purposes, $6.21 per capita for benevolences, outside of congregational expenditures. Third in the list is the Protestant Episcopal Church, which gave to all purposes $38.69 per capita, of which amount $34.11 per capita was for congregational purposes, $5.66 benevolences outside the congregation. Fourth in the list is the Reformed Church of America: $38.52 for all purposes, of which $26.34 per capita was for congregational purposes, $8.58 per capita for benevolences outside the congregation.

Next to the Moravians in gifts to benevolences, outside the congregation, missions mostly, is the Presbyterian (South), whose per capita giving for all purposes is $35.88, of which amount congregational per capita $23.18; benevolences, outside the congregation, missions mostly, $12.40 per capita. The Christians gave for all purposes $16.11 per capita, of which amount $12.39 was for congregational purposes, and $3.78 per capita benevolences, outside the congregation; in this particular, ranking fifteenth in a list of twenty denominations. While this showing does not in itself give grounds for pardonable pride, there is satisfaction in knowing that we have climbed in the last few years from the lowest per capita in giving to the fifth place from the bottom. We are growing in the right direction, and our giving in the last few years has steadily improved and shows marks of wholesome and healthy progress.

CHURCH CHIMES AND CALL TO WORSHIP.

A most welcome announcement comes from Chicago that one of her citizens, a Mr. J. C. Deagan, has recently made such improvement in tower chimes that the demand for them is likely to be largely increased, since their melody and charm are to be so much improved. Mr. Deagan has succeeded in tuning, with scientific accuracy, tower chimes to the exact pitch of pipe-organs, and their construction is to be such that they will not change their pitch or tone, and are played by an electric keyboard from perforated rolls somewhat like the "self-playing" piano. The chimes are to be started by a push-button or a master-clock, and will produce a single selection or a number of selections, with programs varying from day to day. Some of the perforated rolls contain as many as fifty pieces, and include music for various occasions—weddings, funerals, national holidays and worship on the Sabbath. This is, indeed, gratifying, for if there is anything that sounds as sweet and impressive as Church chimes pealing out a sacred hymn on the Sabbath morning, calling upon people for miles around to come to worship, we have never heard it. Church chimes, properly played, constitute one of the great blessings of mankind, and on a Sabbath morning, wherever they are heard, they cause hundreds and thousands to take notice of things sacred and divine, as they give their melodious, toneful challenge to the people to come to the house of God and worship.

We never know how sweet and sacred some of our hymns are, and how solemn and holy is the invitation to come to the house of God until the still air, on a bright Sunday morning, is filled with the melody of rich tones from a Church tower. This writer has often thought if he had money in sufficient bulk to indulge the desire, he would certainly have chimes put in the tower of a Church in the community in which he lived, so that at least on one day of the week the air, vibrating with inharmonious noises and sounds six days in the week might at least be a thrill and vibrant once a week with the melody of holy music and heavenly anthems. Let us hope that Mr. Deagan's wonderful scientific invention will make Church chimes and tower music more abundant in the world as it is to be made more perfect and more melodious.

THE DESIRE OF ALL NATIONS.

Dr. Egbert W. Smith, executive secretary for foreign missions of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, has written and caused to be published a most readable and engaging volume bearing the above title. The publishers are Doubleday, Doran & Co., Inc., and although the book bears a recent date of publication, its sale, we are advised, is mounting upward at a rapid pace. We are not surprised. There are two classes of people who ought to read this volume.

First: All who are interested in missions, including all missionary societies and members thereof, all missionary workers and advocates in Church and Sunday School, and all individuals everywhere who care for more missionary information and inspiration.

Second: All those not interested in missions should, by all means, read the book. If it will not cause them to be interested, then we doubt if any treatise on missions or on the Bible and on the liveliest and most engaging topic of the day could interest them. If I had a friend who did not believe in missions, I should certainly want him to read "The Desire of All Nations."

Dr. Smith has been on the foreign field and has been a worker in the missionary cause for years, was a wide-awake missionary pastor, and writes not only with a full mind and a facile pen, but with a burdened, anxious heart as well, and really pours out and lays bare the passion of his soul for a great cause, the preaching of the gospel among the nations of the world. We presume, though he does not say so, that Dr. Smith chose the title of his book from words found in Haggai 2:7, "And I will shake all nations, and the desire of all nations shall come." Surely "the desire of all nations" is coming. He visited the earth in person once and began a work. The third gospel, Luke, tells us of all that He began to do and to teach. And then the Acts of the Apostles tells us of what He did and is still doing through those who took up the work where He laid it down. These will be busy till "the desire of all nations" shall come back again to gather up from the earth and to reign with Him whom He hath found faithful in carrying out His commission and making Him known to the world.

As Rev. E. Stanley Jones said in a great missionary address, "Jesus, our Lord, is the only one who is seriously bidding for the hearts and souls of all men and women everywhere. There is no other in the field. He has no rival and no competitor." Surely, our Lord is as Haggai calls Him, "The desire of all nations," and Dr. Smith has written a volume that reveals what "the desire of all nations" is doing in the world, and what He will do if given a fair chance in the hearts of men and in the program of Churches.

The book contains 193 pages, and the student's edition, in paper, can be secured for 50 cents. We advise missionary societies everywhere to adopt it, as many are doing, as their mission-study book. No better volume for this purpose has come from the press in recent years. J. O. A.

HOMES, HAPPINESS AND LEISURE.

Some one has designated ours as the electric age. We are making electricity bear a large part of our burdens and do a great deal of our drudgery. This is brought vividly to mind by a report of the Department of Commerce, which says that homes in our country have been supplied with eight million vacuum cleaners, five million washing machines, one and a half million electric refrigerators and thirteen million radios. One item, however, in that report is noticeable, and that is that the instruments of pleasure and enjoyment (radios) far exceed the number of the electric laborers and burden-bearers, such as vacuum cleaners and washing machines. (When it comes in for pleasure, luxury, comfort, one can count on our country heading the list.)

That which particularly interests the writer in this report is the thought that the American home is not disintegrating as rapidly as one might suppose. It is being made more comfortable and convenient, and the labor in the home by the individual is becoming less irksome and is requiring less time, since electricity does its work with greater ease and rapidity than human strength and hands. This report shows that the American is caring for his home and is spending well at least some of his money, for that money is well spent which, to a degree, alleviates the burden and lightens the task of the toiler. These conveniences, however, rapidly becoming necessities, are producing more and more leisure.

Homekeepers do not have in our day to toil through all the hours of the day and into the deep hours of the night as our grandmothers had to do, and with improved methods and means of housecleaning and housekeeping, a most welcome leisure is being increased to the faithful housewife. As to how this increased leisure shall be used, whether it shall be employed in wasteful idleness or in intellectual, moral and spiritual improvement, the future will reveal. One of the greatest blessings, if properly used, is leisure, but it may be easily employed so as to be a curse and not a blessing. The character of a people in a nation, or in a home, is revealed by the way in which individuals therein employ their leisure—meaning thereby the way their minds, hearts and hands are engaged while not given to gainful occupation and duties.

At any rate, the report of the Department of Commerce gives an insight into our care for homes and the possibilities of using our time and talents for self-improvement and for progress in the right direction.

MISSIONARY RALLIES.

Two rallies of the North Carolina Woman's Conference were held last week—one at Graham, Tuesday, the 9th, and one at Greensboro, Thursday, the 11th. Mrs. W. P. Lawrence was superintendent and presiding officer of the former; Mrs. L. P. Wicker, superintendent and presiding officer of the latter. The societies in these districts were represented by delegates, but it was discovered that there were several Churches in each that did not have societies. Two pastors attended each of these rallies.

When one realizes that the real power and merit of a Woman's Missionary Society is its spirituality and spiritual zeal, one wonders why every pastor does not keep on trying until he has a Woman's Missionary Society in every Church he serves. The pastor is naturally preaching, teaching and working for the spiritual uplift of his congregation, and it can be truly said that the greatest contribution that a Woman's Missionary Society makes to any Church is its spiritual contribution—the development and the strengthening of the spiritual life. Women's Missionary Societies, in every particular, are working along the very lines that the faithful, loyal pastor is. And it can be truly said that a strong missionary society is the strong arm of the pastor; is the most faithful and helpful aid and agency in the enlargement of the kingdom.

The reports from the societies at the rallies, both at Graham and Greensboro, were very encouraging and showed that some societies had more than reached half their goal the first six months, while a few had practically reached the goal set for the year. Sketches of our missionaries in Porto Rico and Japan were presented in both rallies, and very valuable information about our mission work was given in papers and addresses during the day. An offering was taken at each for reconstruction work in Porto Rico, where we are now under the necessity of tearing down and building anew one of our important Churches (Salinas), which was so damaged by the hurricane last summer that its walls, as they now stand, are unsafe and must be torn down.

Mrs. Lawrence and Mrs. Wicker have been faithful in their official capacities, and with their efficient co-workers and invited helpers, an excellent program was rendered.

These rallies are a real one-day school of missions. They are worth attending, and the women of every Church, whether they have a missionary society or not, would be wonderfully helped and their Churches blessed by being represented in these rallies.

The rally of the Alamance district meets next year at Elon College, and Mrs. J. W. Patton was elected superintendent. The place of the meeting in the Guilford-Rockingham district was left open and Mrs. L. P. Wicker was re-elected superintendent.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN was established by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr, in Orange County, N. C., in 1844—only eighty-five years ago. There are members of the Christian Church now living who are older than THE CHRISTIAN SUN. It is now the official organ of the Southern Christian Convention. It was a remarkable coincidence that the first editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN and the lamented editor of the Herald of Gospel Liberty, which was begun in 1808 (forty-six years before THE SUN), had the same name—Daniel W. Kerr and Alva M. Kerr—two great men who represented great papers. The Herald of Gospel Liberty, the oldest religious paper in the world, and THE SUN, the oldest in the Southern Convention. THE SUN, in the judgment of many competent critics, is one of the best Church papers published in this country. It deals more directly with the membership of the Church and interests of the Church, and seems to touch the common mind more than more pretentious publications. It deals with the every-day questions of the Church, sets up no boss control of pastors or members, and seeks to cultivate a brotherly and co-operative spirit among all sections and classes.

The value of THE SUN could be better estimated by imagining its publication closed. If there were no CHRISTIAN SUN, what would we know about missions, orphanage, college, preachers, women's work, or any of the important interests of the kingdom represented by the Southern Christian Convention? It is the lifeblood of the Convention. It circulates throughout the entire Church. It is a light that shines in every congregation, and should shine in every home. There is no place and no work in which $2.00 mean so much to the Church as to a subscription to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Besides the value it is to the cause of Christ, it is worth it, and more, to the subscriber himself. A regular reader of THE SUN is sure to be interested in the enterprises of the Church, the preachers and members of the Church, and the winning of lost souls to Jesus Christ. No member can be his best, as a member, who does not keep in touch with THE SUN.

If the natural sun did not shine, it would be useless for the farmer to try to raise a crop, or the gardener to raise flowers. The sunshine is essential to make the flowers beautiful and the wheatfields produce grain for bread. THE CHRISTIAN SUN is necessary for the cultivation of Sunday Schools, regular services in Churches, the missionary cause, the education of the young, and the care of orphans. Send $2.00 to Chas. D. Johnston, circulation manager, Elon College, N. C., before you forget it.

DR. H. S. SMITH GOES TO COLUMBIA.

Dr. H. Shelton Smith, who for the past five years has been director of the department of leadership training of the International Council of Religious Education, has just become professor of religious education in Teachers' College, Columbia University. Dr. Smith is a native of North Carolina. He graduated at Elon College in 1917 and was valedictorian of his class. He entered Yale that fall, but withdrew from the university early in 1918 to enter the World War. He served as lieutenant and chaplain until August, 1919. He spent a year in Europe with the 39th Division, and after the war spent six months in Montpelier University, located in southern France. In the fall of 1919 he re-entered Yale, from which he was graduated in 1923 with the degree of Ph.D.

He was called at once to the directorship of leadership training of the Board of Christian Education of the Christian Church. He had served in that capacity but a short time when he was called to the position of director of leadership training in the International Council. He has made the ideal director in this task. His office has been the agency that brought together the work of leadership training of more than thirty denominations.

Dr. Smith has never sought to be a boss, but has held himself to be the servant of the denominations clearing their work through the International. Denominational leaders have been happy to work under his direction, and he has felt that schools set up by the denominations were his schools and the denominational leaders have been happy to have it so.

Dr. Smith has proven that he knows how to make his educational theories work. During the five years in Chicago he has been the director of religious education in the Rogers Park Church. The Church school has been entirely reorganized and has been placed upon an educational basis. He has developed the plan of paying the Church-school teachers, and the Church puts $1,700 annually into the Church budget for this purpose. The teachers are practically 100 per cent punctual and do their work with spirit and with zest, although the amount paid is for the most part very small. Dr. Smith's experiment seems to indicate that our Church schools might be greatly benefited if the teachers were paid.

The calling of Dr. Smith by Teachers' College is a significant event in the field of religious education, and the large number of workers in this field who are acquainted with him are sure that no better man could have been found for the job. He begins his work auspiciously.—The Congregationalist.

I FEAR THE CATHEDRAL.

In an issue of the Herald of Gospel Liberty a few months ago, the front-page cover consisted of several average-sized Churches in the foreground and a dimly seen cathedral-like building in the rear. The obvious lesson of the illustration is that these smaller Church buildings are now to be replaced by magnificent and finely appointed sanctuaries. Whoever was responsible for this illustration, no doubt intended it as a plea for Church union. If that were the purpose, it is most unfortunate.

The purpose of Church union ought to be to multiply fellowship, and therefore increase efficiency and working possibilities—a work for everybody and every worker busy. Large, cathedral-like Churches do not promote personal touch. On the contrary, they foster formality and prevent intimate comradeship among those assembled for worship. Cathedrals are the privilege of the millionaire, who rarely desires or expects any Christian or social contacts with his fellow-pew-holders.

In the middle ages, the cathedral failed tragically, and will surely fail again if we trust it with the destiny of our Christian faith. If those who regard union as the answer to our present Church perplexities have no more convincing assurance to give us than this relic of the middle ages, it is already time for a new Protestantism.

The friendly Church, with its chapel and community-house and facilities for as many social activities as possible, ought to be our goal. Let us have as many and as intimate contacts as possible, for without these, far from bearing each other's burdens, we will never think of them and care not at all. The Church must take its friendliness into our city suburbs and our almost forsaken downtown districts. And if this friendliness be begotten of the Holy Spirit, it will fellowship intimately and helpfully members of every Church alignment, and unity will follow. But the cathedral neither can nor does it wish to do this kind of work.—J. N. D., in Christian Vanguard.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The real and the artificial, both have their place in human society; but the artificial never surpasses the real. God produces the real and man produces the artificial. The rose is real; a picture of the rose is artificial. In every field of art, man proves that he was not only made in the image of God, but that he imitates God in his work. The city waterworks produce flowing streams, as copies of the springs and the flowing streams. In the city lights, he copies the light of the sun and the stars. In clocks and watches, he copies the motions of the earth and its relation to the sun. In the vast machinery world, the forces that control the universe are put into use by artificial means.

The "National Geographic" is an artificial world; but the artificial world brings more to the individual man than the natural world. The average man would have no real vision of Africa or Russia, did he not see it in pictures. The real is always better than the artificial, but the individual is limited in his view of nature. The moving pictures of the right kind are wonderful in their relations to those who look and listen. Most of the manners of men are copies from others. We live in an artificial world as well as a real world. Character is largely artificial, as Jesus said: "Follow me." He is the real in character. "He was tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin." There is no other real character. "All have sinned." Human Christian character is a copy of the character of Jesus. He is our Example. We cannot build Christian character without Him: for "there is none other name under heaven among men whereby we must be saved." Character is artificial, but the more like Jesus Christ it is, the nearer it approaches the real. A clock keeping time with the sun would be a perfect clock; but there is no such clock. But the clock that keeps close to the time of the sun is a good clock; and the man who lives close to the life of Jesus Christ is a good man. All the timepieces of the world, whether town clocks or wrist-watches, derive their standard from the sun—all the true character in the millions of human society derive their models and inspiration from Jesus Christ. He is the Light of the world. In Him was light. All Christian effort is to be like Him. "Ye are the light of the world." "Let your light shine among men."

This Christian character produced by the work of Jesus Christ in man becomes real character, so far as the man is concerned. He cannot produce Christian character of himself. "Ye must be born again." All character built on human opinion and human ideas only, is not only artificial but false. There can be no Christian character built on any other than Jesus Christ Himself. He is the Author and Finisher of our faith. While our character may be artificial, compared with His, it is real compared with all character outside of Him. The artificial world is a great world, but it is based on a real world—and the same is true of Christian character.

ELON LETTER.

I have just received a scorching letter from a minister. "You have humiliated me," he writes, "before my people." My offense was that I had gone to his field and raised money for the college without his knowledge. He wanted to have part in it. As the leader of his flock, he was entitled to know all about it. I wrote as humble an apology as I could, and promised to be good for the future. I am now myself humiliated, but I brought it on myself.

It is refreshing, however, to find a minister who takes the total work of the Church and its enterprises so greatly to heart. I wish that every minister felt the same way. Too often I get letters from ministers declaring that it is the business of the people to promote the general enterprises of the Church. Most often, I say it to my sorrow, our pastors write nothing at all.

But my correspondent is right. The pastor has the right to know all about the plans of the general enterprises of the Church, and I wish more of them would resent the coming of the general officers to their fields without their knowledge. I have, however, for eighteen years tried to serve the Christian Church as a general officer, and this is the first time a brother has so vigorously delivered himself to me.

He said he felt humiliated, and he meant it, too! That I had conferred with two leading laymen of the Church in my plan made no difference to him. He had been neglected. His leadership had been disrespected. He was humiliated. He had a right to be humiliated, and I have sincerely apologized for my offense.

I am sad at heart to offend a brother, and deeply grieved to have humiliated one, but I must confess that I hope the experience will come to me again, because it means the dawning of a new day for our Church and its enterprises. Will not some other pastor write and express his humiliation because money has been raised for our college in his parish without consulting him as to plans and programs?

We need more ministers who really care and who plan their local work to support every enterprise of the Church. I have apologized, and I am glad that I have had it to do. I want to do it oftener.

SANCTIFICATION.

"Wherefore, Jesus also, that He might sanctify the people with His own blood, suffered without the gate."—Heb. 13:12.

The moment a poor, guilty sinner believes on the Lord Jesus Christ, he is sanctified through the blood of Jesus. It is not a question of attainment, but attainment through faith. Christ is at once made, to the weakest babe, wisdom, righteousness, sanctification and redemption (1st Cor. 1:30). Some people are puzzled over the fact that our sanctification is not complete in this life. They wonder how any one holding this view can ever be admitted through the pearly gates.

We are no more sanctified than justified through any inherent goodness of our own. Yet there are not a few who will labor to get a sinner saved and then tell him that unless he is sanctified he cannot get to heaven. By sanctification, they, of course, mean the eradication of the flesh, which is unbiblical and impossible. The Word plainly states that "Whom He justifies them, He also glorifies," and except one be born anew he cannot see the kingdom of God. I conclude, then, that all justified persons will be glorified, and all those born again will be admitted to the manifested kingdom.

Through perfect and perpetual cleansing by the blood of Jesus, every believer has a perfect standing in Him. In Christ, the believer is as sanctified as though he had been ten thousand years in heaven. What Christ has done is perfect, finished, unchanging, eternal. His sanctification by the blood is a great outstanding fact simply to be believed. But while our standing is perfect, our state at its best is very imperfect. God first gives us a perfect standing, and then begins the processes whereby our state is made one with our standing. There are three stages in sanctification. It is accomplished, progressive, and completed. We are sanctified positionally, experimentally, and completely. In one sense, the believer has been sanctified; in another, he is being sanctified; and in still another, he shall be sanctified. The one experience is related to Christ's work on calvary; the second, to His high priestly ministry, and the third to His coming again. The first is perfect, the second progressive, and the third will be complete. The sanctification in the past delivers us from the guilt of sin, the present delivers us from the power of sin, and the third will remove us from the presence of sin itself.

When we speak of complete sanctification, we have reference to our full redemption of spirit, soul and body. This does not take place at the new birth, nor at death, but at the second coming of Christ. The future phase of the believer's sanctification will be better understood when we stop to consider what entire sanctification involves. Paul describes it as being "wholly sanctified." Now, "wholly" means complete, through and through, inside and out, and clear on to the end. It includes the body which is subject to weakness, infirmity, disease and death, a condition which makes a present perfect sanctification impossible.

While the Holy Spirit, indwelling the believer, is the seal and earnest of coming redemption, his final act will be the transforming of the body into the likeness of our glorified Lord. Every believer is sanctified by God the Father (John 1); sanctified by the Lord Jesus (Heb. 2:11); sanctified through the Holy Spirit (1st Pet. 1:2); sanctified by the faith of Christ (Acts 26:18); sanctified and perfected forever through the one offering of Christ on Calvary (Heb. 10:14). All this is true of every believer, and nothing less than this will qualify any one to stand in the presence of a Holy God.

INTERESTED IN INTERVIEWS.

"Considerable interest seems to have been aroused in Christian unity, by the large number of interviews appearing in Monday's Age-Herald," said Dr. Charles W. Gordon (Ralph Connor). "A short statement from me was used in which I said, among other things, that a divided Church is a non-conquering Church and that God does not recognize His children as members of particular denominations. I might say that it appears to me that the divisions in the Christian Church came solely from incorrect thinking, from lack of perspective, from inability to distinguish essentials from non-essentials. All Protestant Christians agree upon essential Christian doctrines. Everything that is essential and true tends to unite. Everything that divides Christians from Christians is either non-essential or untrue. Division thus arises from erroneous thinking, a misapprehension of essential truth, and when persisted in from personal or denominational prejudice or pride, is sin, and like any sin, should be forsaken.

"Always the first result of an inflowing tide of spiritual life is a drawing together of Christ's followers. Christ's conquering power is withheld from them who are in wrong attitude toward Him and His work. When the Christian Church is filled with Christ's passion to save humanity, its ranks will automatically close up—its divisions disappear. The divided Church is a Church still in the parade—busy with evolutions, interested in drill and uniform chiefly. The Church of the front rank trench forgets all but one thing—how to win; all other things rank with the non-essentials. A shell of conflict causes us to have quarreling battalions—brothers in arms quarreling under the whining shells of the enemy. Denominationalism substituted for religion is wholly of the devil.

“About four years ago, union was consummated between the Congregational, Methodist and Presbyterian bodies of Canada. Many of us had doubts and fears as to the outcome of the movement. The differences of opinion between Calvinists and Armenians were fundamental, and therefore supposed to be insurmountable. We have made the astonishing discovery that these credal differences are still there and will always continue to exist, but that Calvinists and Armenians can live, work and worship as Christians in one Church in perfect fellowship and brotherly harmony. In four years, never once in Church court, in field work, in committee consultation—never once have I seen the old lines of cleavage appear. They have absolutely vanished; hence, to me, with my experience of Church union between religious bodies wide apart in their denomination bases, as were Methodists and Presbyterians, the continued persistence of denominationalism is folly, and wicked folly.”—Dr. Gordon, in Birmingham (Ala.) Age-Herald.

RADIOING vs. CHURCHGOING.

The invention of the radio, with the state of perfection which it has now reached, is one of the outstanding accomplishments of the century. It is rendering a commercial service almost beyond one's conception. Its quality of intertainment is almost without equal. The science of it is marvelous. When one sits in one's home and hears every word of a program, such as was carried out in Washington on March 4th, he has food for thought. One remembers that the elements which are present in the operation have been here since the world was spoken into existence, but have been waiting for man to rise to the heights of its possibilities and harness them for use and service to mankind. One even looks forward with wonder at what may yet come with the effort that is now being put forth by the keenest minds to improve and make more serviceable the radio.

With every invention in which there are great possibilities for good, there is always an equal opportunity for abuse. The creation of the radio is no exception. In no measure is there greater abuse of the intended service than is perhaps experienced by the thousands who try to turn their receiving sets into Churches on the Sabbath. There is a service to be rendered by the substitute, but the service is only intended for those who are sick—the invalid, who cannot attend divine worship at the appointed place. When one who is blessed with health and an opportunity to attend upon the services of the Church substitutes the radio for the spirit of the Church, the fellowship with the brethren, the atmosphere of worship which attends the sacred service; yea, when a soul decides to be fed on such spiritual food as can be realized from the science of radio and a receiving set, that soul is doomed. It will shrivel; it will surely die. There is one excuse to be made by the person who does it. He is too lazy to go to Church. He is a parasite. The soul of such a person is too weak to call out the body to the deepest need of human experience.

When one who has the interest of the kingdom of God at heart and hears a poor soul try to tell why it seeks worship from a far-off shrine, it creates within that interested one a sense of pity. It reminds one of the accusation that we are “starving to death on our plenty.”

No wonder if, when the truth is known, we shall not find that one who says he worships God over radio does so in order to dodge the offering at the Church. The evidence is against the denial of it. He is cheating. He is unfair. He is trying to get something for nothing. He realized that his spirit cannot long survive unless it worships its giver, but lack of physical energy causes one to lapse into a most dangerous substitution.

Radio was never intended to take the place of Divine worship in the house of God. It is impossible. Where is the sacredness of God's house to be found outside it? Where, the urge to worship, the call to prayer, to reconsecration? How many souls have been born through radio worship? How often have you been called from your bed of laziness on Sunday morning to bended knees of thanksgiving and praise because it was your privilege to hear Rev. X Y Z preach over radio? How much support have you given the Church whose services you “tune in on” in some distant city? How long could that, or any other Church, continue to send out the messages you receive if everybody followed your policy?

There are many good and enjoyable features of radioing. All of us delight at its approach; we like it. Let it serve its purpose. It is a blessing, but it is neither divine nor is it intended to take the place of the divine. The hope of the world, the safety of our home, salvation of the lost; these are attributes of the Church of the Living God. For them there is no substitute.

If we believe in the Church, let us prove our faith by our works. Let us attend the services of the Church, and thereby give it our social support. Let us pay our divine dues, and therefore give it our material support. Let us pray for the Church, and therefore give it our spiritual support. Let us go to Church.—Rev. J. H. Dollar, in Reidsville Review.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

MONEY TALKS.

(The Missionary Intelligencer has drawn up, in parallel columns, a clever distinction between the imaginary meditation of the disappointed dollar, and the happy, joyous dollar. While we cannot reproduce pictures of the various dollars as the Intelligencer did, with the label on each as to where they were going, we give the meditation which should also cause some of us to meditate upon how we spend our dollar.)

The Disappointed Dollar.

I wanted to go to China, but a little girl spent me for ice cream and candy.

I wanted to help preach the gospel in Africa, but a young man spent me on the movies.

I wanted to go to Moslem lands to tell of Christ, but a little boy spent me for popcorn and chewing-gum.

I was planning to help the ignorant women in India, but a lady spent me to go to the theater.

A little girl gave me for missions, but the Church board borrowed me for current expenses—and didn't pay me back.

I wanted to help build a chapel in the Philippines, but a deacon spent me for cigars.

An elder had me, and I wanted to go to Japan, but the elder said, "A quarter is enough," and put me in his stuffy old pocketbook.

We are so disappointed! We wanted to do some good in the world. We are heart-broken because we can't go. Won't you people who love the Lord and love those for whom Christ died be sure next time to put us in the offering, so we can help tell of Jesus all over the world?

The Happy, Joyous Dollar.

I'm going to buy twenty New Testaments for China.

I'm going across the ocean to support a student in a mission school one week in India.

I'm going to the Philippines to help print Christian literature.

I'm on my way to Japan to help run a Christian kindergarten.

I will supply Christian books for ten pupils in a day school in India.

I will support a native evangelist for a week in Africa.

I will pay the rent of a chapel for two weeks in South America.

I will give the Mohammedans two thousand one-leaf tracts in Moslem lands.

I will support a boy in an orphanage for twenty-four days in India.

We are all so happy! We don't know what to do! The boys and girls who had us gave us so gladly that it warmed our hearts. They said, "Good-by, God bless you." Some of the people prayed about giving us to missions, and after he prayed, one man gave one hundred dollars instead of one.

CHRISTIAN MISSIONS IN JAPAN.

Christianity has been allowed to exist in Japan since 1873 without official interference, with the result that it now holds an important place in the thinking of that country.

There are about 668 missionaries in Japan. The foreign missionary boards are contributing about 693,437 yen annually, while the Japanese Churches are giving three times as much to the annual budgets. There are about 20,032 students in Christian schools in Japan; and in the cities where the missions schools are well equipped the influence of Christianity is felt strongly.

The first missionary of the Christian Church, Rev. D. F. Jones, reached Japan in 1887. From that time until 1901, the missionaries assumed full responsibility for the conduct of affairs, deciding as to location and organization of Churches, ordination of pastors, etc. In 1901, the Japan Christian Conference was organized, and to it was given full control of the destiny of the young Church except in matters which had to do with finance coming from the Mission Board in America. It appears that this plan was not very satisfactory to all concerned. However, not until 1923 was the next step in co-operation taken, which is the stage in which we now find ourselves. A co-operative board, with equal number of missionaries and Japanese, one-half of whom must be laymen, was established "for the purpose of unifying and making efficient the work of the Japan mission of the Christian Church, and that of the Japanese Christian Conference." Of course, this stage is not final, but it is indicative of what may come later. At present, but one of our Churches pays full pastoral support without foreign aid.

We have many loyal, consecrated workers in Japan who have done and are doing very fine work. Among the most influential we find the names of Rev. and Mrs. C. P. Garman. These Spirit-filled and Spirit-led ambassadors of our Lord Jesus Christ spent the first period of their work in Japan mainly in language study and touring the fields. After shifting around over the field, they finally settled in Tokyo, where they are now living. Mr. Garman has a thorough knowledge of all our work in Japan, and has taken a very prominent part in the religious life of that country. He is a member of the official board of the Tokyo Union Church, member of the executive committee of the trustees of the American School, and a member of the executive committee of the Federated Missions of Japan. Mrs. Garman is a member of the executive council of the W. C. T. U., and on the managing committee of the Social Settlement (Door of Hope) in one of the poorer districts of Tokyo. She is also counselor for the local troop of American Girl Scouts and for the Union Church Sunday School. Mr. Garman's largest service, however, is in establishing the work in one of Tokyo's suburbs, Naka Shibuya, where we are now erecting a plant, consisting of a Church, kindergarten, and night school. With this plant, Mr. Garman will have the equipment which he deserves and has waited for so long. Besides the Garmans, we have eight other missionaries in Japan equally faithful, and half a dozen native pastors.

"Blessed are those who go forth to preach and teach the gospel, for they have the presence of Christ" (Matt. 28:19, 20). "Blessed are they that sow the good seed of the Word, for they shall reap in joy" (Psa. 126:6). "Blessed are they who win men and women for God and righteousness, for they cover a multitude of sins" (Jas. 5:20). "Blessed are those who give themselves wholly to the King, for they shall not lose their reward" (Matt. 25:34). "Blessed are those who give themselves to earnest prayer for their fellowmen, for God, the Father, will hear them" (John 14:13, 14). "Blessed are they who give generously of money, as the Lord has prospered them, to carry on His work, for they shall receive in like measure" (Luke 6:38).

The true value of money is never learned until we begin to distribute, to make others happy with it. The more we do for others, the more we ourselves are blessed. Be liberal, because you thus glorify your Benefactor. What a glorious privilege it is to be a co-worker with God in the evangelization of the children of men!

The "special" donation for foreign missions by Mrs. J. W. Roberts, to the Windsor, Va., Church, and a "special" by Miss Celeste Penny of $25, previously acknowledged, from Catawba Springs, Wake County, N. C., help to bring both of these Churches to their full quota. Every dollar counts now and is appreciated. Where there are loyal souls and true, and a heart to do the work and make the sacrifice, the work goes well and the reports are inspiring. We sincerely trust every pastor will give, if he has not done so, every member of his congregation a pressing opportunity to contribute something to missions now.

STANDARDS OF EXCELLENCE.

Every chapter or club of a national organization has certain requirements to meet before it can be recognized by the national organization. Our colleges, as members of their respective associations, must maintain certain standards to retain their membership. And we often wonder if our Woman's Missionary Society is doing the work that it should do—whether its work is deserving of the name missionary society! And we often wonder by just what standards we should be judged to determine whether or not our work comes up to the mark. We have been given ten standards of excellence that we should endeavor to live up to. These ten standards are:

1. The observance of a day of prayer for missions. This standard is not hard to meet, but it is very important. The Christian's creed is to do things by prayer; and certainly our own Church enterprises should be sanctioned by prayer! It is, therefore, asked that a special day be designated for our united prayers for the success of our efforts in mission fields.

2. The prayer Cycle should be in the hands of every member. This will help to secure individual co-operation in our prayer campaign. We should not depend on somebody else to do our praying for us; we should unite in asking God's blessing on our work. And we can be surer of this if each member has a copy of the Prayer Cycle.

3. The next standard has to do with membership and attendance—two essentials to the life of any society. It is asked that each society show an increase in membership for each year. This is not difficult for a live, wide-awake society to accomplish. The standard for average attendance at meetings is set at one-half the membership. If these two standards are met, there is little doubt but that the society will be successful in its work.

4. Another thing that each missionary society is asked and expected to do is to sponsor missions among its juniors and young people. The juniors can co-operate in all efforts, and will receive aid and inspiration that will be valuable to them in future years.

5. Missionary societies can increase the kingdom work done by maintaining a missionary cradle roll and an associate membership. These standards are set, not simply to have a large society, but to accomplish the greatest possible amount of work for missionary interests. It is for this reason that the young people are trained and associate membership is urged.

6. To keep well informed on present conditions in mission fields, societies are asked to use the "Mission Study" or other books recommended by the Woman's Mission Board. It is also suggested that at least one-fifth of the members read two or more missionary books during the year outside of the regular study books. A well-informed society can render the best, intelligent service.

7. With this same idea in mind, another standard asks that subscriptions to the Christian Missionary made by the society equal one-half of the families represented in the society. This is printed now, as a part of the Herald of Gospel Liberty, monthly, to meet our special needs, and we should take advantage of it.

8. The first financial standard set is that each member contribute something, or rather pay their dues, and that those dues be sent at least quarterly to the treasurer of the Conference woman's missionary board. Full co-operation is desired in financial matters as well as in attendance, and co-operation means keeping dues paid to date.

9. To support the special objectives of the mission board, an annual average contribution of 10 cents per member is asked for the Ellen G. Gustin Promoting Fund, as well as an annual offering to the literature department of the Woman's Mission Board. This annual offering should be made in July, if possible. These special funds are dependent upon the local societies, and we should do our share to support them.

10. The last standard set is that a thankoffering service be held, the offering to be used for the purpose designated by the Woman's Mission Board. If this and the other standards are met, the society will go a long way toward accomplishing the purpose that it was intended for.

INSPIRING REPORTS.

Reports from many Churches of pre-Easter meetings and Easter services in the Churches are gratifying and thrilling. Numbers of our Churches put on their evangelistic campaigns just prior to Easter, culminating in the Easter service, at which time the doors of the Church were opened for the reception of members. Large additions resulted in many Churches, and the Church membership was increased at the Easter service. Quite a few of the Churches put on an Easter program and took an Easter offering for missions. A few Churches reached their full missionary quota and will add to the quota through the year, while others took a long step forward in this direction and raised a goodly part, which they will supplement with future offerings and efforts.

Surely there is no time of greater rejoicing and gladness than the Easter event, and none that means more to Church and spiritual life and growth. A good work began at Easter should be carried on with renewed energy and zeal, just as the first Easter morning, the resurrection of our Lord, was the beginning of new activities and new conquests in His power and in His name.

A NATIVE TONGA TEACHER'S SPEECH.

(Supplied by a senior Methodist minister in the Missionary Review, Australia.)

It is said that men have made efforts to change all kinds of material into gold, but have not accomplished it. The Christian religion is chemistry, and the men who are employed in this service are the missionaries. It has the power to change all things into gold. Previous to the introduction of this religion into Tonga, we could not accomplish anything; but ever since the missionaries commenced their work, Tonga has been able to convert all things into gold. The land is a golden land; the pigs, yams and nuts all are changed into gold. We have got riches through religion, both temporal and spiritual. Religion enriches one's soul, it changes one's nature, fools are made wise, the dead are brought to life, we have peace with God, and it is certain that we shall gain eternal life.

Let us work, therefore, that it may reach other lands yet in darkness. Money is necessary to pay for the vessel, clothes, and food of the missionaries.

Let us give our money, for the temple is not yet erected in all lands.

YOUTH FOR CHRIST.

Two brothers, ages twelve and fourteen, faced the same gospel invitation some years ago. The twelve-year-old boy stepped out for Christ and became a Christian. Later he became a missionary and his Church sent him to India. Through many years of service, he was a most honored missionary in India, achieving wonderful results. One day in his station there were 2,222, and on another day 1,800.

The fourteen-year-old boy lived to be an old man. At the age of eighty-four, he accepted Christ. They took him to the Church in a wheelchair for his immersion. His constant regret during the time he lived after his baptism was that he did not come when his brother did.

How seriously will the Church seek to win youth while it is youth? The Bible school gives the Church a glorious opportunity in soul-winning. Save a boy or girl and you save a whole life. Will we?—Christian Vanguard.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By Rev. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

Lesson IV—April 28, 1929.

THE SUFFERING SERVANT OF JEHOVAH.

GOLDEN TEXT: "With His stripes we are healed."—Isa. 53:5.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Rev. 5:9-14.

The lesson for today is one of the greatest passages in the Old Testament. Few chapters in the Bible have given rise to as much discussion as the one which we have for today's lesson. The "servant of Jehovah" has had many interpretations, but regardless of these many interpretations, men and women of the centuries since Christ lived and died, have associated these words with the life and character of Jesus Christ. Whether or not we rightly understand just what was the first intention or application of these words in the prophet's own mind, we now feel sure that his picture of God's unique servant portrays in advance God's Son and our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ.

For instance there is the humble origin of the suffering Servant reflected in the words: "He shall grow up before him as a tender plant, and as a root out of dry ground." One has only to apply this principle to Jesus to see how true it is. Born of a hated and despised race, of humble parents, in a small and comparatively insignificant country, reared in an humble home and trained to do the humble tasks of life, living nine-tenths of His life in obscurity so far as our records show, Jesus fulfilled in His life the prophecy of the one we call the "Second Isaiah" in a very literal way.

Or again take the words, "He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief . . . He was despised, and we esteemed Him not." If one has no preconceived theories in regard to the matter, and if one found these words either in the gospels or in a modern history of Christianity they would take it for granted that they refer to Jesus Himself. "Despised," "rejected," "a Man of sorrows," "acquainted with grief"—how naturally they fit in with our thought of Jesus! John says, "He came unto His own and His own received Him not." When the Ethiopian asks Philip, of whom these words were written, Philip begins there to preach unto him Christ.

Once more, consider the verse, "He was wounded for our transgressions, He was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon Him: and with His stripes are we healed." There are many theories in regard to just what Jesus Christ did for us on the cross, but somehow or other Christian thought has not been able to get away from the idea that something vital happened there. The power of vicarious suffering and sacrifice is nowhere better shown and nowhere made more effective than here. "He is brought as a lamb to the slaughter"—"behold the Lamb of God," said John, "which taketh away the sin of the world."

"Because He had done no violence, neither was deceit in His mouth." I find no fault in this Man, said Pilate, and that has been the testimony of the centuries, and yet this Man who went about doing good was put to death on a cross, the symbol of shame and disgrace.

Another illustration: "He shall see the travail of His soul and be satisfied." Christ did not begrudge anything that it cost Him to do what He did. Out of the pangs of the experiences through which He passed He saw with joy the effect in the lives of men and upon the world into which His gospel should be preached. "By His knowledge shall my righteous servant justify many, for He shall bear their iniquities." What men cannot do through works, no matter how good or how many, through faith in Christ they are justified, they are brought into right relationships with God.

And surely the words of the last verse find their fulfillment in the Christ. "Therefore, will I divide him a portion with the great, and he shall divide the spoil with the strong." When Paul tells of the humiliation of Christ, he ends up with the words, "Wherefore, God hath highly exalted Him, and given Him a name that is above every other name; that at the name of Christ every knee should bend, of things in the heaven and things in the earth and things under the earth, and every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord to the glory of God." By that strange paradox which Jesus Himself proclaimed, he who had been the servant and minister of all became the greatest of all.

"He hath poured out His soul unto death—He gave His life as an offering, not to placate an angry God, but to show men of all time the height and depth and length and breadth, as well as the warmth of God's love. He bore the sin of many. On His own heart He carried the sin of a sinful world. Here as always the innocent suffered with the guilty, but out of this suffering, voluntary and vicarious in spirit, there came the redemption which is, after all, the heart of the gospel message.

The logical outcome of it all is summed up by Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, as follows: "With necessary self-abnegation and complete abasement and shame, I am constrained to say, 'Was it worth while?' That is, was man worth it? Am I, then, worth it? The answer is in these words: He shall be satisfied. Then I have but one thing to say, and it is:

"Love so amazing, so divine, Demands my life, my soul, my all."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Sunday, April 28, 1929.

TOPIC: "The Triumphs of the Bible on Mission Fields."—Rom. 1:16, 17; 1 Cor. 1:17-21.

Some Bible Hints.

Paul had tested the power of the word. His message, like the word of Christ, was spirit and life. So is the Book today (v. 16).

To be effective the word must be believed. The medicine must be taken. Instruction must be followed (v. 16).

The Bible triumphs depend upon the preaching of the cross. Merely to preach the Ten Commandments or a system of ethics would never transform men (1 Cor. 1:17).

The Bible brings good news to mission fields. To darkened minds, the story of the love of God and the death of Christ comes with refreshing power. It is wonderful (v. 17).

Suggestive Thoughts.

To get the benefit of the gospel, one must become as a little child. The wise and learned often shut themselves out, while the simple-minded enter.

A colporteur in Japan read Matt. 6:25, 26 to a woman. "This is good teaching," she said. "I cannot read, but I will buy the book for my sons."

Look to the Fiji Islands, and you will see the triumph of the Bible. But for the Bible, the natives would still be cannibals, as they were for centuries before the Bible reached them.

A Bible washed to the shores of Japan led Neesima to learn more of its doctrine, and indirectly led to the evangelization of Japan.

A Few Illustrations.

It was the Bible that opened up Africa. But for the Bible, Livingstone never would have thought of traveling through that country. It was the Bible that sustained as well as inspired him.

India is reading the Bible. It is true that many find a great difference between the teaching of Jesus and the practice of His followers, but they are reading the Book.

In 1919, one store in Beirut, Syria, sold 2,240 Bibles, or portions of Bibles, in twenty-six languages. What may not these books do in the families that get them? Often silent transformations are more important than dramatic ones.

The field is still the world. The best missionary is the Bible, because it is always ready to speak of Christ. When we send out the Bible, we send light and power.

To Think About.

How does the Bible help to change our lives?
How may we help send the Scriptures abroad?
How is the Bible helping China?

NEWS NOTES.

The work of the Board of Christian Education has been delayed because of illness of the chairman, but he is now back at work and will probably be able to continue.

Summer Schools.

The Piedmont Junior School will be held July 7th to 12th. There will be an opening fellowship service on Sunday, and five days of class work during the week. The officials of this school are already planing advertisements and boosting the attendance. Last year's session was considered to be very successful, and it is expected that this year will be equally as good, if not better.

The Elon Summer School will be conducted, beginning on Saturday, July 27th, with registration and fellowship, and closing Friday night, August 2nd, with a commencement service. Plans are under way for an excellent program, with outstanding leaders of both the Christian and the Congregational Churches as teachers and lecturers. Our Congregational friends present last year said they hoped to have a hundred present this year.

Eastern Va. S. S. and C. E. Convention.

The Eastern Virginia Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention adjourned to meet with the Newport News Church, but because the new building at Newport News will not be ready to use by the time of the convention, this Church asked to be relieved for this year. The convention has accepted an invitation to meet at Liberty Spring Christian Church, near Suffolk, Va., and will meet there July 23rd and 24th.

Report Blanks.

Report blanks for the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Conventions have been mailed to the secretary of each convention. If by any chance yours did not arrive, please notify me and I will send some more.

BIG BUSINESS IN MISFIT CLOTHES.

The "penny and misfit clothes" system of supplying the foreign missions of American Churches has now been changed into "big business," according to statements of various organizations, outlining the work now being done abroad.

Within the past few years, by the introduction of genuine business methods into the process of civilizing the heathen and helping unfortunate races, the combined American missionary fund has increased from $9,000,000 a year to $50,000,000 annually, and the number of missionaries from less than 6,000 to more than 16,000. Modern efficiency methods have become necessary to meet the increased demand, it was found through a survey of the situation the results of which appear in the April number of Woman's Home Companion.

In the old days, declares the article, the potato barrels of the community were carefully saved, and on "mission Saturdays" zealous Church women cleared their attics and confiscated their husbands' wearing apparel—even the toys of the children—and packed them in barrels to be sent to foreign lands. "Usually the chifton underwear went to the cold climates, and the sleds and skates to tropical countries," says the article. The missionaries were forced to clothe themselves, their families and natives from the misfit garments that went abroad.

"Then," the writer continues, "men of affairs got together and decided to do a little missionary work on their own account. They came home after dealing with enterprises involving hundreds of thousands of dollars to find their wives and daughters trying to raise some missionary money of a tablespoonful of ice cream and strawberries for fifteen cents. But once they were aroused, they did a mighty good job.

"Now a modern warehouse for supplying foreign missions has all the aspects of a big exporting house. The Rev. Smithson, in some far-away jungle, used to live a life of uncertainty. One year he would get eight derby hats, six woolen mufflers and as many boiled shirts as a bride gets saltcellars. Under the new system, he asks for what he needs and gets it.

"One sample modern requisition asked for winy peddling on a lawn three oysters and a quarter nowing machines, pumps, windmills, maps, globes, kindergarten material, medicines, plows, seeds, motorcycles, plumbing materials, a seismograph, a gravestone and a glass eye. Thus, all the romance has not gone out of missionary work. The gravestone made that plain, as did the glass eye. Both told the story of life and death in the foreign field as effectively as the orators of the old days of 'packing-bees' told it.

"One thing is certain: if we are going to have missionaries, we should feed and clothe them properly. These Smithsons and Mrs. Smithsons stand not only for the Christian religion, but for Christian America in the eyes of hundreds of thousands of people who have no other standards by which to judge us. And, human nature being what it is, even in darkest Africa, they are all too apt to judge God's work and God's own country by the fit of Smithson's hat.

"The mission barrel is being packed today by organizations composed of well-educated, sincerely devoted, high-grade men and women, and their efforts are already reaping surprising and un-hoped-for results. Under the old happy-go-lucky penny-and-underwear system, we had succeeded in the course of nearly two thousand years in working up a force of about five thousand underfed, overdressed and heavily handicapped foreign missionaries. Under the new system, in less than two decades, we have tripled their numbers and quintupled their efficiency."

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE,
One of Our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MONDAY.

HELPED BY HELPING.

"Lord, I have heard from many of this man, how much evil he did."—Acts 9:10-18.

Once an English coal-miner sat gloomily in his cabin, recovering slowly from a big debauch. As he sat there, two fellow-miners came to him with a strange proposal, nothing less than that he should help them found a Sunday School for the children of the place. They knew something of his ability and overlooked his condition; but he sadly realized his besetting sin and refused vehemently. However, they persisted, and he finally yielded. Then began a long struggle to keep away from strong drink for the sake of the boys of his school. He succeeded, became an earnest Christian, then a minister of the gospel, and was a successful Christian leader for nearly fifty years before he died. All of that came about because he was persuaded to try to help others.

Ananias despaired of Saul, knowing what awful wickedness he had been committing; but the Lord did not despair of him. "Go, bid him become a teacher and helper of others," the Lord bade Ananias. Saul took up the commission and became the most influential Christian that ever lived.

The best way any one can learn is by teaching others. The best way any one can grow strong is by strengthening others. The best way any one can draw close to Jesus Christ is by leading others to their Saviour.

Prayer.—Dear Lord, as Thou dost not give us up, may we never give ourselves up. Though unfit, may we enter Thy service. Though weak, may we continue in Thy work. Fitness and power will come, we know, in Thy good time. Amen.

TUESDAY.

"I AM READY."

"I am ready not to be bound only, but also to die at Jerusalem for the name of the Lord Jesus."—Acts 21:7-14.

Paul's dauntless spirit, that counted not his life dear if he could save any to eternal life, was derived directly from his divine Lord, the Crucified. It has come down into countless lives of heroic Christians. One of these was Mrs. Mary Ann Rogers, who was stewardess of a ship which was wrecked. When the vessel struck on the rocks, Mrs. Rogers helped all the women in her charge to fasten on the life-belts. When she found a young girl without a life-belt, Mrs. Rogers took off her own and put it on her. As the ship was sinking and the last life-boat was leaving, the sailors shouted to Mrs. Rogers to jump in; but she refused, because she thought that she would overcrowd the boat, and so she went down with the ship.

Let us ask ourselves: Can we say, with Paul, "I am ready?" It is not easy to live for Christ, but it is harder to die for Him. Cross-bearing, however, is for death, and not only for life. We are not likely to be called upon to die for Christ—that is, for Christ's brothers and sisters on the earth—but we are called upon to be ready to die.

It is this readiness that counts. If we are willing to give up our lives for love, then when the call comes we shall be ready; and if it does not come, the nobility will be ours all along the way.

Prayer.—Our blessed Redeemer, help us to be Thy heroes. Give us the spirit of the martyrs. Show us how small a thing is life and how great a thing is sacrifice. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

PERFECTED IN WEAKNESS.

"My power is made perfect in weakness."—2 Cor. 12:1-10.

President Macmillan, of Wells College, declares that teachers should never give pupils a grade of 100 per cent, or write examination questions that can be answered so as to get 100 per cent. His idea is that the student is not to be allowed to become self-satisfied, never to feel that he has attained, always to be reaching after more knowledge.

We can appreciate that educational ideal, and yet at the same time refuse to discourage the student by never giving him 100 per cent. Such a mark does not mean that he has perfect and complete knowledge of the subject, and he knows it does not; it only means that he has given correct and satisfactory answers to the question asked; and if he has, he should receive a perfect credit.

Our Lord was not afraid of the 100 per cent, for He said to His disciples, "Be ye perfect." Paul was not afraid of it, for he said, "My power is made perfect." Then he added, "in weakness," showing that he recognized his limitations and his danger of slipping backward.

The true Christian, conscious of his sinfulness and of the fierce onset of temptation, needs less to be reminded of his tendency to err than to be inspired by the Master's approval. "Well done, thou good and faithful servant!" the Master will say at the judgment; and He will not qualify His praise by reminder of the many times when the servant has not done well.

Prayer.—Great Teacher, we are happy in realizing Thy kindness. Thou knowest how hard are the lessons of life, and Thou art not overstrict to mark our shortcomings. We take Thy examinations with confidence—not in our attainments, but in Thy love. Amen.

THURSDAY.

LIFE'S GOVERNING POWER.

"My heart is fixed, O God, my heart is fixed."—Psa. 57:6-11.

Interesting is the comment on President Coolidge's fishnig made by his Indian guide, John Larock: "Fine, the President is fine when he catches fish. Doesn't get excited—not a bit. Good fisherman, President Coolidge."

The President's calmness is one of his marked characteristics, and one of his chief sources of strength. The world trusts the serene man and fails to trust the nervous and boisterous man. Mr. Coolidge's conduct, when he catches a fish, is in marked contrast to that of a friend with whom the writer was once fishing up in Maine. My friend was standing up in the rowboat, and when he felt his first fish pulling at the line, he was so excited that he ran the full length of the boat, and only the prompt exertions of the rest of us kept the boat from capsizing. Such untoward emotionalism is a weakness in any life.

There is no inner calmness unless Christ gives it.

Prayer.—Let one of the parents offer a prayer, asking that all in the room may possess this calmness and this reliance, and be at peace. Close with the Lord's Prayer in concert.

FRIDAY.

ARE WE OBED-EDOMS?

"Jehovah hath blessed the house of Obed-edom and all that pertaineth unto him, because of the ark of God."—2 Sam. 6:6-12.

We are not told anything about this Obed-edom the Gittite, except that he took the ark of the covenant into his house when, on account of its dread powers, other people seemed afraid to receive it. Obed-edom evidently revered the sacred chest; and though he realized that irreverence would mean death, he felt himself incapable of irreverence toward it. It was holy and he was holy. The Spirit of the living God dwelt in the mystic symbol, and Obed-edom would receive the divine Spirit; so he dared to receive the symbol.

Because of what Obed-edom was, rather than because of what he did, the God of the ark blessed him and all his. The blessing was so noticeable that the ark came to be desired as much as it had been feared. The entire event is a picture of what Christ does in any life that receives Him, and the story has been repeated over and over down to this present time.

As Margaret E. Sangster has put it:

"The line of Obed-edom
Is on the earth today;
In the house of Obed-edom
Still he may safely stay
Who, dearer than all treasure
For which men toil and plod,
Shall prize the covenant-blessing,
The hallowed ark of God."

Prayer.—Divine Guest, make Thine abode with us, we pray Thee, and never depart from our home. We ask it in the name of Thy Son, our elder Brother. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE UNSEEN HELPER.

"The Spirit also helpeth our infirmity."—Rom. 8:18-26.

Dr. Theodore L. Cuyler once saw a man working one end of a cross-cut saw. He could not see the other man, but from the way the first man worked, he was sure a partner was working with him. "So," said Dr. Cuyler, "does the invisible Spirit work with the man who enjoys the communion of the Holy Ghost."

If we watch the people around us, and see how they carry on their lives, we can soon tell whether they are living and laboring alone, or have this unseen Partner. If they have the invisible Helper, they accomplish things that seem quite impossible for them to do. When sorrows come, they are unaccountably upheld. They overcome adversity with a might that is altogether beyond their own. It is because of the unseen Power that is working with them.

Prayer.—Holy Spirit, Thou Aid of all humble and seeking souls, be with us, we pray Thee, in all we do. Without Thee we are indeed helpless; but with Thee, we can do all things. Our Father, who art in heaven—(and the family circle will repeat the Lord's Prayer).

SUNDAY.

THE PLANTED CHRISTIAN.

"Blessed is the man that trusteth in Jehovah, and whose trust Jehovah is. For he shall be as a tree planted by the waters."—Jer. 17:5-11.

George H. C. Macgregor once wrote: "The man who gives God the management of his life does not plant himself. He does not say, 'I want to live in England,' or 'I want to live in Africa.' He does not say, 'I want to follow this profession,' or 'I want to follow that profession.' He says, (Continued on Page 13.)

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

If nothing prevents, the Christian Orphanage will have one girl to graduate at Elon College at the close of this session. This little girl will be the first girl we have had to graduate at Elon College. When she reached the age limit we gave her charge of the dairy department in the institution, and she has looked after the milk and butter, and in this way worked her way through college. She came to us when a little tot and has been in the care of this institution for more than seventeen years. She came to us at such a tender age she has known no home except the Christian Orphanage. The Orphanage feels proud of this little girl and we are grateful that the Church has made it possible for her to have this opportunity to get a college education.

We had a boy to graduate at Elon College several years ago, and he has made a splendid record and we feel proud of him, too.

If nothing happens, we will have a girl to graduate at King's Business College, Raleigh, N. C., this spring. Friends have made it possible for her to get this opportunity to get this special business course.

The Orphanage also has a boy just completing his first year at the State College, N. C. This opportunity has been made possible by a friend who gets lots of pleasure out of helping others. He has a very warm place in his heart for orphan children, and uses every opportunity to help us in this work.

The Christian Orphanage is doing a fine piece of work in behalf of worthy children, and deserves the loyal support of all our people.

'Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do? Father, deal with Thy child just as Thou wilt.' And then the Lord takes him up and plants him.'

And we may be sure that the Lord will make no mistake in His planting. The waters by which He plants us will not run dry. Our leaves will not grow sere. Our blossoms will not fail. Our fruit will ripen abundantly. Happy indeed is the life that is planted by the Divine Gardener.

But when we try to plant ourselves we make all manner of mistakes. We do not know when to plant, or where. We do not plant deeply enough. We do not know how to enrich the ground. We do not protect the plant from the elements. We can not command the rain and the sun. We are entirely out of our sphere.

A self-made man, in this sense, is as sure a failure as would be a self-planted tree.

Prayed.—Lord's Prayer, all the circle joining.

TRIUMPHANT FAILURE.

Christianity is the greatest force in the world. It is the dynamo of civilization. It is the power that builds hospitals, asylums, schools, colleges, orphanages, and all the institutions of enlightenment and uplift; that actuates our greatest statesmen; that sustains our doctors on their missions of mercy and healing all over the land; that steadies the hand of the surgeon as he cleaves life and death; fortifies the missionary as he carries the gospel to the remotest corner; that inspires the underpaid preacher; that cheers the bed of suffering; that dignifies the labor of the ditch-digger and the meanest man; that exalts labor; that ennobles sacrifice; that makes life worth living and the earth a fit place to dwell; that makes old men dream dreams and young men see visions.

Whence comes Christianity? From the life and lips of the greatest Teacher that ever trod this old earth. Misunderstood and condemned in His own day, 2,000 years have elapsed and He is not yet understood. Persecuted, crucified then—the world is just now beginning to grasp the force of His greatest truths. In three short years He had succeeded in arousing the hatred and envy of people and rulers; He had made a miserable failure! Misjudged, condemned, by those whom He sought to save. Misunderstood, unappreciated—that was the grief that crushed His heart when He cried, "Let this cup pass from me." Death had no terrors for Him.

O soul! Can you suffer eclipse? Can you be condemned and be brave? If your Master could be a miserable failure for you, can you be less for Him? Failure, condemnation, unpopularity, is the reward of all the great teachers and reformers—Isaiah, Jeremiah, John the Baptist, Garrison, Lincoln. They killed or sought to kill them all. 'Tis ever thus. "To know how to say what other people think is what makes men poets and sages, but to dare to do what other people only dare to think is what makes men martyrs or reformers or both."

And yet! The day they crucified Him we call Good Friday, and the day He arose we call Glad Easter, and the whole world makes it a day of rejoicing. And today He lives as never before in the lives and hearts of men the world over. Weak, miserable failures that we are, we confess His divinity by our efforts to reach the unattainable heights of the impossible perfect ideal of His teachings and life.—Christian Vanguard.

MENDING THE MASTER'S RENT ROBE.

The Churches and people of all communions are tired of contention, and feeling that the evidence is all in through the New Testament, in Church history, through tracts, modern books of interpretation, newspapers, and the utterances of Church councils, conferences and conventions, they have decided to talk to each other in peace-making tones. Many close students thing Protestant Christian unity has been accomplished, even though union lags behind. The task now is to grow unity into union. It has come to pass—or let us say it has been brought to pass by the spirit of God and the prayers and thoughts of his people that several groups most nearly alike doctrinally and ecclesiastically are drawing together. When it is all worked out, it will make a most interesting and promising number of families in the great Protestant family. The Methodists and Presbyterians are preparing for union; the Congregationalist and the Christian Churches expect to come together; committees from the Reformed Church in the United States, the United Brethren in Christ, and the Evangelical Synod of North America are holding conversations on the union of these three bodies; and the matter is also getting real consideration between the Northern Baptists and the Disciples of Christ.

Edgar DeWitt Jones made a speech before the Northern Baptist Convention, held in Detroit last June, in which he instanced the fact that while there was a movement on foot for the reunion of Methodists, Presbyterians, Congregationalists, Christians, etc., the two greatest immersionist bodies in the world were making no move toward closer relations. He suggested that there be a joint commission between Baptists and Disciples looking to more friendly relations. His ten-minute speech was received with immense applause. He was interrupted with cheers many times. Best of all, the commission was officially appointed.

In Pittsburgh, early in February, the joint commission of Baptists and Disciples had a memorable meeting. Mr. H. C. Armstrong, secretary of the Association for the Promotion of Christian Unity, handled the side of the Disciples in the way of a temporary committee, and good history was made. The resolutions passed at this meeting are to be presented at the next national convention of the two bodies.

An interesting episode was the appointment of Dr. de Blois to prepare an address on the Disciples, and our Dr. Edgar DeWitt Jones to prepare one on the Baptists. The same addresses are to be published in pamphlets and circulated at the time of our conventions.

A most pleasing coincidence of the meeting was the fact that while this committee of Baptists and Disciples were sitting in their first session they discovered that the Methodists and Presbyterians were meeting at the same time, in the same hotel, and on the same floor, for the same purpose. The two committees exchanged formal greetings, and got together in an informal way before the sessions were over.

The report of this committee, together with the reports to which reference is made, will be one of the most vital items for the agenda of our international convention in Seattle next August. It will be all the more meaningful because definite and tangible. We pray that history may repeat itself in recording the union of these two great immersionist New Testament people again; we pray likewise that history may never repeat itself in seeing them again separate. It looks to us as if the Disciples living today have a chance to do something as great as their pioneers did; or perhaps, rather carry forward the work of the pioneers in their relation to the Baptists. The thread of unity between the two bodies was never really broken. Some important stitches were dropped; but now, let us hope, they are about to be taken up again. Let us speedily mend the rent robe of the Master.—Christian Evangelist (Disciples).

NOTICE.

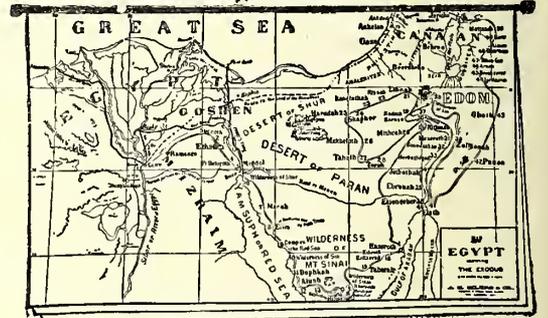

The Vance-Franklin and Warren District Missionary Rally will be held at the Liberty (Vance) Church, Thursday, April 25th, beginning at 10 o'clock A. M.

I want every pastor in the district to begin making plans, so that he will be able to attend the rally; and also every Church to begin making plans to send delegates, whether they have a missionary society or not. I am so anxious that every pastor in the district attend the rally and every Church be represented. Let us heed the theme for our rally this year, "The Call of the Master," and get busy in the mission work and attend the rally, thus making it the best that we have ever held in our district.

OBITUARIES.

LOY.

Daniel W. Loy, of Elon College, N. C., Route 1, departed this life March 10, 1929, aged 69 years and 19 days. Burial was at Shallow Ford, where he had been a faithful and loyal member. He leaves to lament his going his wife, his mother, one sister, Mrs. J. H. Terrell, of Burlington, N. C.; two brothers, Henry Loy, of Burlington, and A. M. Loy, of Greensboro, and many other relatives.

God bless and comfort his loved ones. Burial service by the writer, assisted by Dr. G. O. Lankford and Rev. J. W. Patton. T. J. GREEN.

SOUTHARD.

Mrs. Maggie Southard departed this life on March 9th, at the age of forty-four years. She had been afflicted for years in hearing and sight, but bore her affliction in the beauty of Christian faith. She was left several years ago with two children to care for. A boy is now nineteen and a girl thirteen. She made her home with her sister, Miss Julia Griffith, until her death.

She was a faithful member of the First Christian Church, and when her health would permit she was at its services. Funeral services were conducted from the home, and interment made in the City Cemetery. The writer was assisted in the service by Rev. R. A. Whitten, her former pastor. May the Father comfort the bereaved. J. H. DOLLAR.

RIGNEY.

Benjamin Jerome Rigney was born on May 26, 1906, and departed this life March 3, 1929, age 22 years, 9 months and 7 days. Bro. Rigney was a member of Rocky Ford Christian Church and was the superintendent of the Sunday School. He leaves to mourn his going a father, Mr. H. T. Rigney; a stepmother, Mrs. Ruby Edwards Rigney; four sisters—Lettie, Celestie, Viney and Bessie; one brother, Gifford; a grandmother, Mrs. Lula Rigney; a grandfather, William G. Edwards; and a host of other relatives and friends.

Bro. Rigney was mysteriously murdered while in Mt. Airy, N. C., the town in which he worked. We feel that a life has been taken that will be greatly missed in his community, and especially among those who loved him so dearly. May the Lord comfort the hearts of those who mourn.

The funeral service was conducted by the writer, and the body laid to rest to await the resurrection call.

S. E. MADREN.

GREEN.

Bro. John Robert Green was called to his reward March 20th. Being in bad health, he was taken to the Navy Hospital, in Norfolk, Va., where the end came very unexpectedly to all. He served in the Spanish-American War in the earlier part of his manhood.

Gatesville, N. C., and the surrounding territory have lost one of their best and most loyal citizens. Bro. Green has been a faithful member of the Eure Christian Church for several years. He was a neighbor and a friend to all. Interment was made in Harrell's Church Cemetery (Methodist).

Funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by the Revs. Mr. Eason (Episcopal), Mr. Hohner (Baptist), and Mr. Benson (Methodist). The deceased was 56 years old, and leaves to mourn their loss a wife, five children and two stepdaughters. May the Lord give that mother strength and wisdom in the task of rearing those dear children, is our prayer.

GEO. A. PEARCE.

CHAMBERS.

Lee Roy Chambers was born August 16, 1896; died March 27, 1929; age 33 years, 7 months, 11 days. Married Carrie Mason Wrenn twelve years ago. To their union were born two sons—Billy, nine years old, and Carl, five years old.

For six months Bro. Chambers suffered severely. A malady prayed upon his body which science has never learned to master. In all his afflictions he was patient and hopeful. He was a good man, a faithful husband, and a true friend. He was a member of the First Christian Church, and often spoke of his desire to attend the services of his Church while he lay sick.

He leaves a wife, two children, a mother, one sister and one brother, with many relatives and friends who are sad at his going but who are willing to see him go, that he may be at peace and rest in the arms of his Saviour.

Funeral services were conducted from the Church on Thursday, March 28th, and interment was made in the City Cemetery. The writer was assisted in the services by Rev. R. A. Whitten. May the spirit of the Father guide and comfort the sad.

DEATH RATE INCREASES RAPIDLY AMONG CIVIL WAR VETERANS.

The ranks of the veterans of the Civil War are being rapidly depleted, according to statistics issued by the Department of the Interior. The pension roll had fallen to 68,788 at the end of 1928. This is more than 6,000 lower than the same roll was six months earlier, thus indicating that these venerable former soldiers are dying at the rate of more than 1,000 a month. The present figure is strongly in contrast to that of thirty years ago when Civil War pensions reached their high tide of 745,000.

The latest figures show also that the number of widows of Civil War soldiers who draw pensions is on the decrease, though still nearly three times as great as the number of soldiers. There are now 191,000 such widows on the rolls, a decrease of 5,000 in the past six months.

REV. STANLEY C. HARRELL.

REMARKABLE LIBERALITY.—

It is surprising what can be done by a people who really set their minds and hearts upon their work. The record for missionary giving made by the Seventh-Day Adventists of the United States and Canada for the year 1928 is something that should make all Christians pause and consider what they, too, might do. For missions alone, the members of this body gave the amazing sum of $2,820,114.11. Their numerical strength is only 110,422, which gives them an average of 49.1 cents per member per week for the support of missions. This means that there was an average of $25.53 per member given for missions during the course of the year. Some one has said that comparisons are never in good taste; but one cannot think of such a record without at least making a comparison as to what one's own Church is doing. We of the Christian Church have a mission budget for the Southern Christian Convention for this current year of $45,000. And some of us are wondering what we are going to do about it. But with our more than 30,000 members, it only averages $1.50 per year per member. If we raise the entire amount, the Adventists will have surpassed our record by the sum of $24 per year per member. But if we could make a comparison as to the average amount of material wealth held by the membership of the two bodies, they would be found to be but little if any richer than are we.

THE INFLUENCE OF SECTS.—

The Christian world is much interested just now in the question as to the influence of sectarian divisions among Christians. The question is being studied from every angle. Attention has been frequently called to the fact that more progress is being made toward union on the mission fields than is being made in the home fields. The statement has frequently been made that the missionaries have found that it is impossible for non-Christians to understand our denominational differences. In discussing this statement, a man who has devoted his life to the study of missions and the history of religions denied that the non-Christian world does not understand our denominational differences and our sects. He pointed out that the non-Christian religions all have their sects, their divisions, and their quarrels. And according to this man, the trouble is that the non-Christian world understands all too well the issue of sects. They can see that sects are the weakness of their own religions. When Christianity is presented to them, with all its sectarian divisions, they find in that particular it is very like their own religion. What they cannot understand is how Christianity can thus be separated and divided, and maintain its claim to superiority over their religion. It appears that Jesus anticipated the issues which we should face in our day, when He prayed "That they all may be one; as Thou, Father, art in me, and I in Thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that Thou hast sent me."

FARM RELIEF.—

The United States Senate is meeting in special session, with one of the principal questions to consider being that of farm relief. For eight years this has been the biggest economic question confronting the United States government. Since 1920 the farmers of the country have been facing a most serious financial situation. The prices obtainable for many important crops have not been sufficient to cover the cost of production. With many of the leading nations of the world at war, food became one of the foremost considerations. The United States was one of the few nations that was prepared to expand its agricultural production sufficiently to feed the hungry mouths of the millions engaged in war, and the many more millions of non-combatants left at home. The United States government made an appeal to the farmers to manifest their patriotism by producing more, and still more, food. To the patriotic appeal was added the stimulus of ever-increasing prices. American farmers produced the food. To do this they invested millions of dollars in additional machinery. When the war was over, the farmer had learned the methods of increased production, but there was no market for his products, and many farmers had borrowed capital invested in the farming industry. Mr. Hoover, who served as food administrator and whose efforts were so successful in stimulating increased production of agricultural products, now, as chief executive of the United States, is confronted with solving the problem of how to help the farmer who is suffering from overproduction. For the farm problem is essentially a problem of overproduction. But it is more than an economic problem. It is a social problem of tremendous implications. The biggest problem that civilization faces is the problem of the city. And the farm situation is driving thousands every year away from the farm and into the already too crowded cities.

Mr. Hoover was elected as the representative of a party that has always made the protection of American industries one of its foremost principles. But the issue is more than a test of the ability of the party to justify its principles. The question is one which vitally concerns every American citizen. It is earnestly to be hoped that the present Congress will at least find a way to materially relieve the situation.

CONGREGATIONAL WORSHIP.—

Dr. Henry Sloane Coffin, in a recent address, ventured the prediction that the next theme to engage the attention of the Protestant world would be the matter of congregational worship. And perhaps no subject could have a more far-reaching influence in every phase of Christian living. There are some few Churches that are drawing large congregations for their services of worship, but they are the exception rather than the rule. We read about Churches where lines of waiting worshippers form in front of the Church, but we seldom see them. The exact figures are not available, but it is doubtful that the average Church has half as many people in attendance at worship services as are carried on the Church roster. I believe it would not be difficult to find Churches where less than one-fourth of the Church membership are regular attendants at Sunday worship.

Where Churches do have congregations that crowd their auditoriums to capacity, they are usually drawn by a dynamic personality in the pulpit. Such personalities are rare. There are not enough of them to go around, and there are not enough of them to minister to the spiritual needs of the people. Nor is it possible for the average minister, no matter how hard he may try to do the sort of pulpit work that will attract the masses. Is it possible to devise a worship program in which the sermon will not be the principal item of interest? There seems to be a current feeling among many Protestant Church attendants that if the sermon fails to carry over, that the entire service has been in vain. Is there any occasion for the conviction that there must always be a sermon, an address, or at least a talk as a part of every worship program? There is no objection to sermons, and addresses, and talks, if they are interesting, instructive or inspiring. This is but to raise the question whether or not it be possible to worship without them.

Just what would the people like to have in their services of worship? Surely not all the people who do not attend Church are entirely devoid of spiritual appreciations and spiritual interests. Is there not some way to find out what there is in the Church service which fails to interest them, and what might be included in that program which would interest them. There is no law in most of our Protestant connections which fixes the order and content of our worship program. A little experimenting along this line might not be amiss. President Binford, of Guilford College, tells of a recent experiment made there. Most of our readers know that Guilford is an institution of the Friends Church. But a large number of their students are not Friends. A worship service according to the practices of the Friends was offered the students. After they had participated in such a service, with its periods of silence, the students expressed a wish for the continuance of such services. In approaching the problem of worship, our one purpose should be to find that which will minister to the spiritual needs of the people.

NOTES-PERSONALS

We learn with regret that Rev. Vietor Lightbourne, once a minister and evangelist in the Southern Convention, is critically ill in a New York hospital.

Rev. E. Stanley Jones, the great missionary to India, says: "Let Christ have full play in your soul and you will be missionary or stop being a Christian."

If one wishes to do a person or a family a real favor, get some one in that family to subscribe for THE CHRISTIAN SUN. This will help the family and also the Church.

"The Elon Summer School of Religion," writes its president, Rev. F. C. Lester, Waverly, Va., "will be held this year July 27th to August 2nd. An excellent program, with capable teachers and speakers is being prepared."

No better reading will you find than in THE CHRISTIAN SUN. No better time to subscribe than right now. Salesmen say nothing about price when they offer you a good thing; but remember to inclose $2.00 to the circulation manager, C. D. Johnston, Elon College, N. C., and he will enter your name.

The board of trustees of the Christian Orphanage were in annual session at the institution on Tuesday, April 16th, having changed the date of their annual meeting to April from the last of May. The superintendent, Bro. C. D. Johnston, will, we are sure, tell SUN readers of matters of interest from the meeting.

In 1928, six hundred and seventy-five lives were snuffed out on the North Carolina highways. We are, indeed, paying a tremendous toll of life and limb for the pleasures and privileges of good roads. A daily war goes on, and the killed and wounded in the course of a year are more numerous and more tragical than in many a pitched battle.

Rev. Roy C. Helfenstein, D. D., Dover, Del., is assisting Rev. Jos. W. Fix in a series of evangelistic meetings at Franklin, Va., beginning April 22nd and concluding May 2nd. Our Franklin people are devoutly hoping and praying for great and good results from this meeting. We are sure Franklin will be blessed and benefitted by the preaching and services by Dr. Helfenstein.

We have heard of one pastor who let Easter and his services nearest Easter pass without mentioning from his pulpit the missionary offering, or even the subject of missions. We wonder if a pastor like that thinks he is fair to the other pastors and Churches who are trying to do their best in this time of need, and is he fair to his Churches in not asking them to make some contribution to missions?

It will be a source of regret to many SUN readers, who know and esteem him so highly, to learn that Bro. W. E. MacClenny, of Suffolk, has been critically ill in a local hospital and has been far from well for some time. We learn with pleasure that he is able to return to his home, but is still quite weak and it will be some time before he is well again. Bro. MacClenny is one of the good deacons in our Suffolk Church, the historian of our Convention and treasurer of the Eastern Virginia Conference, and his wide acquaintance will wish for his speedy and full restoration to health.

Ever and always count on Christian Temple, Norfolk, Dr. L. E. Smith, pastor. Carrying a heavy indebtedness, with much interest to pay; at the same time carrying a heavy current expense for an inclusive Church program, this Church never fails to do more than its part in missions and all other benevolences. Already it has raised and sent in its quota for missions this year, and is still going on. No wonder blessings attend the efforts of the people of Christian Temple, for they have learned how to sacrifice and practice self-denial for their Lord. That Church is an inspiration to the whole denomination.

The faithful members of our United Church, Lynchburg, Va., are making a strenuous effort to clear their Church of indebtedness and are greatly encouraged by the effort so far. This is a most worthy effort, as the Church has been greatly handicapped by its indebtedness. Any CHRISTIAN SUN reader who can find it within his or her reach to help to any amount will kindly address communication with donation to Rev. G. C. Crutchfield, pastor, 5338 Fort Avenue, Lynchburg, Va. Such a donation, we are sure, will be greatly appreciated and will encourage very much those who are making such a sacrifice in order to pay off the Church's indebtedness.

Today, April 19th, a letter is opened which reads: "Dear Bro. Atkinson,—As I cannot attend Sunday School and Church with my own folks, I thought it would not be out of place for me to send a little missionary contribution. I herewith inclose check for $5.00 for missions. I haven't quit attending Church and worship here, but we have no Church of our own here. I have failed to attend Sunday School once in four years only; was sick then." That brother has the cause of his Church and the love of his Lord at heart. And how we wish that hundreds of others who are not making contributions through their Church because they are not worshipping with their own people would do as this good brother did.

Five cents per Sunday! Well, no wonder the Church tugs laboriously at her task. This from the Herald of Gospel Liberty: "The Federal Council of Churches comes forward with the statement that last year in the United States the average contribution of the Church-goer per Sunday was five cents. New Jersey is the most liberal State, according to the same authority. The Church-goers there gave twelve and two-tenths cents a Sunday. In the Carolinas, Virginia, Washington, and eleven other States the Church-goers averaged less than five cents per Sunday. Is it any wonder that the ministers' salaries are low, that the activities of the benevolent bodies of the Church are being forced to retrench? We should remember that these figures are not based on population, but on Church attendance and a careful check on contributions. The probing question for every one of us is, How much did we average per Sunday? Do we belong to the nickel class or are we more liberal?"

In the death of Deacon John Tobias Kernodle, Alamance County loses one of its most substantial and highly esteemed citizens, and Berea Christian Church one of its loyal and consecrated members. Our obituary columns carry an account of his life and passing, but no words can adequately describe the worth and benefit to the world and mankind of such a life of kindness, generosity and Christian graces and achievements. His children rise up to call him blessed, and they are themselves sources of life and light in the communities and Churches to which they have gone, reflecting in their attitude and activities the character and the spirit of the consecrated father who gave them, even in the absence of their mother, who passed to the spirit world many years ago, the impress and the influence of gentle, yet strong and stalwart, Christian influence and rearing. Such a life is immortal on earth, as it is eternal in heaven. He lived to a ripe age and fulfilled the promise of the Lord given through Job: "Thou shalt come to their grave in a full age, like as a shock of corn cometh in his season."

THE SUN's editor is grieved to learn of the sudden and unexpected death of Bro. Elisha Everett, Driver, Nansemond County, Va., which sad event occurred on Thursday, April 11th. He seemed perfectly well when he left home for a trip on the morning of that fatal day and was in his usual bright and cheerful frame of mind. He was driving along the highway in his car when a colored man saw the car drive to the side of the road and stop. This man, in approaching the car to find out the trouble, found that Bro. Everett had fallen over on the seat and was dead. He was buried at Suffolk Saturday P. M., April 13th, after the funeral in Berea Church, of which Church he was secretary for many years. He was brother-in-law to the late, lamented Dr. J. P. Barrett, who married his sister, and was also brother-in-law to Dr. P. H. Fleming, whose wives were sisters. Bro. Everett was a man of optimistic temperament, cheerfulness of mind and heart, and had a wide circle of friends who held him in high esteem. He was a loyal and faithful member of Berea Church and reared a family of splendid Christian girls who reflect in their loyalty and devotion to their Church and their God the character and the teachings of a goodly father and a saintly mother.

It is with sad heart, indeed, that we chronicle the deplorable tragedy that occurred with Bro. Walter Burgess and family from our Parks Cross Roads Church, Randolph County, last Sunday as they were on their way to visit the mother of Sister Burgess at Reidsville, N. C. The tragedy occurred on the Greensboro-Reidsville highway, near Monticello, and resulted from a collision and the overturning of the car in which they were riding in the instantaneous death of Bro. Burgess and wife and their daughter, Mary (16), and Mrs. Mollie E. Hudson, a neighbor, who was taking the trip with them. The other two children of the Burgess family—Virginia, age 11, and George, age 10—were quite painfully and seriously injured, but it is believed that they will recover. Bro. Burgess and family were faithful members in our Parks Cross Roads Christian Church, in whose cemetery father, mother and daughter were buried together. Those on our crowded highways, especially on Sundays, can certainly join in the words of David to Jonathan, "As the Lord liveth, and as thy soul liveth, there is but a step between me and death" (1 Sam. 20:3). Our sympathies go out to the two fatherless and motherless children, now being cared for in a hospital, and for the other beloved relatives of Bro. and Sister Burgess. Bro. Burgess had a nice family, whom he was trying to rear in the Sunday School and Church in which he took an active part; and Miss Mary had already set her heart on Elon College and taking her place here as soon as she finished high school. A happy family of five last Sunday morning; today only two left, and they, the youngest children, spared through the awful wreck, though injured. Who can tell what a day will bring forth?

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

THE GOSPEL FROM GOD'S GREAT GARDEN.

BY REV. J. W. FIX.

"And the Lord took the man and put him into the garden."—Gen. 2:15.

After creating man and saying that all things were good, God took him and put him into the Garden of Eden to dress and keep it. He was surrounded by beautiful flowers, delicious fruit trees and gorgeous birds. Everything bowed to him who was the highest of His creation. The fruit of only one tree was forbidden, and when the man ate from that one, sin became universal and has hitherto handicapped all mankind. The first man was driven from the garden, and flowers, fruits and animals became wild. About all man has obtained from the garden has come by hard work and toilsome cultivation. Indeed, there are many wonderful lessons to be learned from God's great garden. It is full of gospel, for anything that reveals God's message to mankind is good news and is termed a gospel.

The advent of Christianity brought to the world a great Teacher on all things of nature. Ever since He walked the earth, He has been trying to open our ears to some of the great lessons from this garden. Moses saw God in a burning bush. David saw Him in the hills and in the stars. Christ saw Him in the small seed, the flowers, the grass, the trees and the birds. Let us go into God's great garden with Him and see for ourselves. It is especially fitting that we take this trip at this time of the year, when the very breath of life is radiant. It is the spring, and signs of newness of life are everywhere manifest.

Our Teacher is good to us. Very considerate is He, for He knows how a contact must be made. He points toward an object, tells us of its beauty, then draws from it some very striking lessons of truth. Listen to Him:

1. "Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin, yet Solomon in all of his glory was not arrayed like one of these." And thus we learn a lesson on growth from the lilies of the garden of God. They grow by an unseen power. Their roots extend deep into the solid earth. They look ever upward, and God sends down upon them His blessing. Just as the lilies of the field cannot become beautiful without God, so our lives become unworthy apart from Him.

"Your voiceless lips, O lilies, are living preachers, Each eup a pulpit, each leaf a book."

Consider the lilies! More beautiful are they than King Solomon in all of his royal glory and pomp. Beautiful in harmony, delicacy and fragrance. They are the handiwork of God. Not only beautiful, but most useful. A funeral without them would be most unbearable. A wedding without them would be unimpressive. A sick-room without them, uncheerful. So it has become popular to "Say it with flowers," whatever one's message may be.

"Little flowers in the crannied walls,
I pluck thee out of the crannies and hold thee
In my hand, root and all, in all and all.
Little flowers, if I could understand what you are,
Root and all, in all and all,
I would know what God and man is."

2. "If God so clothe the grass of the field, which today is and tomorrow is cast into the oven, how much more will He care for you, O ye of little faith." As one walks with Him through the garden, considering the lilies as they grow, behold He walks upon a green velvet carpet, more beautiful than the most valuable Oriental rug! It is made of grass, and every tiny blade is carefully interwoven into its particular place. Upon such a beautiful carpet we walk. Seldom do we think of the manifold lessons to be learned from the grass. I can best illustrate its lesson on faith and trust by relating a recent experience of my brother as he approached the operation table at John Hopkins Hospital. Prior to leaving his bed, he asked himself, "If I should die under the ether, what will become of me?" "As I go under the influence of the anesthetic, what shall be my last thought?" To the Bible he turned, casually opened it, and looked for a word of comfort. Whereupon, his eyes became focused upon the Master's lesson from the great garden as revealed by the grass: "If God so clothe the grass, if He so cares for each blade, how much more will He watch over me, a man, made in His image?" And with a sublime faith in Him, he went forward without a fear, yielded himself to the surgeon, and has since recovered.

3. "Behold the fig tree and all the trees" (Luke 21:29). Looking up from the carpet of grass, let us, with the disciples, "Behold the trees." As we look, we learn lessons from them, for too often we think of these great creatures of God as being primarily designed to furnish shelter and lumber. He who saw "sermons in stones, books in running brooks," also saw tongues in the trees. The tree is God's handiwork. It is beautiful for ornamental purposes, and is a sure place of abode for the birds. It shelters man, furnishes wood from which he builds his house, his ships and his furniture. Let us learn to love them, and say with the poet:

"I think I shall never see
A poem as lovely as a tree;
A tree whose hungry mouth is pressed
Against the earth's sweet flowing breast.

"A tree that looks to God all day
And lifts her leafy arms to pray;

A tree that, in the summer, may wear
A nest of robins in her hair.

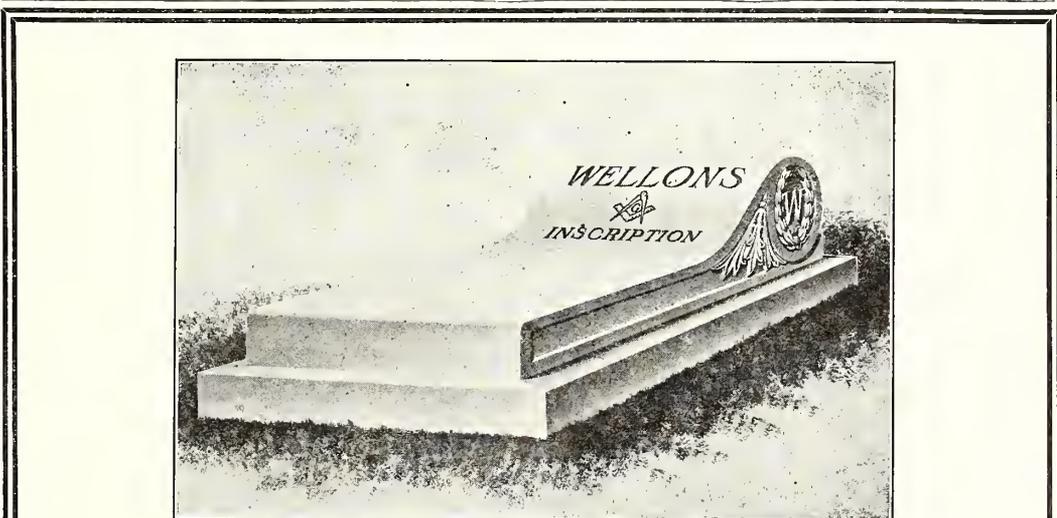

"Upon whose bosom snow has lain,
Who intimately lives with rain.
Poems are made by fools like me,
But only God can make a tree."

A Hindoo father once said to his son, "Get me a fruit from yon tree." The fruit was fetched, and the father commanded the son open it wide and tell him what he saw. The young lad replied that he saw nothing but seeds. "Then, open a seed and tell me what you behold," requested the wise old sage. "Nothing," said the boy. Then the father said, "Where you see 'nothing,' God sees a mighty tree." Let us behold the trees, and acknowledge the beauty of her leaves, her stateliness and true value, as a product of the great God who made her.

4. "Behold the birds of the air; they sow not, neither do they reap or gather into barns, yet your Heavenly Father feedeth them. Are ye not much better than they?" As we study from the Master's garden, He points to His little feathered creatures and asks man to consider the manner in which they must depend upon their Creator for food and shelter. Martin Luther once saw a tiny bird lodge one evening on a tree near his home. Said the reformer: "That little bird covers its head beneath its wings, and there sleeps fearlessly and safe from danger. Over it is the infinite heaven, to one side is the roaring sea, on the other the mighty mountains. Yet, God is with it, and safely will it abide."

Birds of the air do not worry. They know that He will protect them. Men and women are prone to fear, lest there be not enough; they lack vision with which to behold the great storehouse of the Lord.

As we conclude our trip through the garden, let me say that when our professor of botany, biology and zoology used to take us on nature-study tours. We were always advised to stay close to him, for he would show us something new. We were advised to remain close to him, for he was our teacher. As we go out in the great open garden of the universe, there is a gospel awaiting us, and if we would hear it let us stick close to Jesus the Master-teacher.

Monument to Rev. J. W. Wellons, D. D.

The above cut represents the proposed monument to be placed at the grave of Rev. James Willis Wellons, D. D. Besides this, the plot is to be inclosed with a granite curbing and posts. The combination presents a most attractive design. Elaborate lettering is to be placed on the monument. Already the fund has been started. The cost, completed, is to be $865. Will you send your contribution to Mrs. L. E. Carlton, treasurer, 414 North Lombardy Street, Richmond, Va.?

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

ARE WE DOING OUR BEST?

As will be seen from the report of the Mission Secretary in another column, many Churches are taking, or have taken, the special offering for missions. Will individual SUN readers turn to that report and inquire if each is doing his or her best? If ever there was a time when we were put to the test as a people, it does seem that that time has come. The Convention in Richmond precipitated the issue and put our Churches and people to the test in the matter of missions. It is now to be seen, as never before, whether or not we Christians are really a missionary people and really care for sharing with others the gospel that has made us what we are. That Convention, with one vote and voice, swept away all possibilities of doubt and uncertainty, and simply put it up to the people in the Churches and Sunday Schools for each and every individual to say whether they would make a contribution to missions or not.

The reports from some of the Churches thus far are pitiable in the extreme, in that they show such indifference and unconcern about the most vital matter of the kingdom of our Lord. Evidently, some Churches are just taking the offering without emphasizing the matter and are giving with an indifference that is heart-rending. We do not wish to be pessimistic or be called an alarmist, but many of the reports from Churches are disappointing and grievous indeed, and cause us to wonder, after all, if we care for our Lord as we profess and are really willing to sacrifice in order to enlarge His kingdom on the earth.

The Mission Board is in debt for objects, Churches, and work of the most commendable and unquestionable type and character. It is struggling with all the economy and effort that it knows how to put forth to get out of debt and again move forward in great things for the Master. By raising this year $45,000 asked for by the Convention, our indebtedness can be wiped out and we can again go forward in Church building and support at home, and in further support of our missionary work and workers abroad.

We wonder if the people will disappoint such a desire and such a worthy aim? Oh! if our pastors and people could only know and only realize, not only the needs and the opportunities, but the test of our faith to which we are now put and the challenge of our sacrificial undertaking, we know that every pastor and every Church would not only take an offering but would urge with all the passion of their soul that the offering be made liberal.

Some of the Churches are making splendid reports. All are, where prayerful and persistent plans have been made and worked. It is to be devoutly hoped that every pastor and every Church will feel it incumbent upon themselves to share the burden and help do this goodly work in the name and for the sake of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. The whole Church will rejoice at the accomplishment of this good deed. Recently a mother, with sick ones to care for and with needs pressing and exacting, sent us $10, and her daughter sent us $20 as individual gifts to help carry their Church to and beyond the quota. If there were such loyalty and devotion to the Church and to our Lord throughout the Convention, every report would be encouraging and the prospect for reaching our goal would be bright and promising, indeed. We should make now our special offering for missions a matter of prayer and of sacrifice. Truly, the test is upon us. Will we be found lacking, or shall our works prove our faith? J. O. A.

MISSION RALLIES.

It was a day of cloud and rain and mud, but quite a few of the faithful women, and some men, of the Halifax, Va., district met at Union Church, Virgilina, Va., in the woman's annual missionary rally. Mrs. Alfred Hayes was the faithful leader and superintendent, and had worked very zealously for a largely attended and an interesting meeting. Only the continuous rain and very disagreeable weather of the day, we know, prevented many from attending who had planned to be present. We have in no district more faithful souls than are to be found in this district, but they seem to have the weather against them, as three rallies now in as many years have been held on days that were exceedingly rainy and disagreeable. The program was beautifully carried out, and the speakers, who were to take part, were present, as were about fifty delegates and visitors. The pastor, Rev. C. E. Newman, and his good wife were present and took deep interest and active parts in the program and added much to the service of the occasion. The Baptist pastor of the town was also present, as was his wife, throughout the exercises. Rev. S. E. Madren, pastor of our mountain work, was present, to the delight of all, and gave an interesting account at first-hand of the work we are trying to do in Carroll County. A beautiful luncheon was served, and, despite the inclement weather without, it was all agreeable, helpful and inspiring within the secure and sacred walls of our beautiful and ample Church at Virgilina.

The rally at Turner's Chapel, of the Lee-Chat-ham district, was held on Thursday, the 18th. Mrs. Doyle MacFarland was chairman and superintendent. This district is unusual, in that it has the largest field of any of the districts for missionary work in its own borders. Only four out of the fourteen Churches of the district have missionary societies, and three of these were represented at Turner's Chapel. The discussion took a practical turn, the pastors present and others suggesting plans as to how the ten Churches of the district, without missionary societies, might be reached and organized for missionary work.

Rev. T. E. White, a former beloved pastor, now of Elon College, urged the women to take immediate and practical steps to interest the women in other Churches of the district who are not interested in missions, because they were missing so much. He pitied and sympathized with the large number of women and Churches in the district who were missing so very much by not having societies. He felt that these women had missed much by not being present this day and hearing the reports, essays and addresses, and participating in the program of the occasion.

Rev. J. A. Denton, pastor of the Church, was present and offered suggestions and also his services, to be used in any way that the women might suggest to help reach other Churches of the district with missionary societies. Rev. B. J. Howard, pastor of one of the Churches of the district that has a good society, felt that the women would have to carry their message in person to the women of the Churches that had no society, because these women did not know the worth and merit of a missionary society, and so would be uninterested even to the extent of not replying to letters and communications by mail. One must experience missionary activity and missionary deeds before one can become sufficiently interested to write letters or to respond in person to appeals. First, the missionary zeal and fervor must be kindled in the minds and hearts of the women before they would organize or take an active part in missions.

Dr. W. S. Alexander, of Elon College, added much to the counsels and suggestions, besides making an address on our Japanese workers, with many of whom he was personally acquainted.

The day was beautiful, and the program was well carried out, the meeting was enthusiastic, the dinner was bountiful, and the spirit of the occasion was glorious. Truly, the women in missionary rallies serve the Lord with cheerfulness and gladness and carry the spirit of sacrifice and of sunshine into their work for their Lord.

BURDEN OR BLESSING—WHICH?

That which is looked at from without as a burden comes to be a blessing, if done in the name and for the sake of our Lord. Giving to Church and to charity is looked upon by some as a burden. That is because they will not get beneath that burden and share it with their Lord. We know some pastors in the Christian Church who will not help bear the missionary burden, or the burden of any other enterprise, in the Church, either by their own sacrificial giving, which comes first, or by seeking to get their people to do so. Supporting Church enterprises and giving to the glory of our Lord is a blessing, indeed, to those who have got beneath the burden and have accustomed themselves to such giving. It is hard, indeed, to get folks to give who are not in the habit of giving. It is easy, indeed, to get folks to give who are in the habit of it. A good sister and faithful servant of God told this writer recently that she prayed all night some years ago when a kingdom enterprise was going to be presented in her Church, that her husband might yield and make a contribution thereto. She had heard him say he would not; that he already had sufficient expenses and calls for his money. She was happy beyond her expectation next day when her husband was among the first to contribute liberally to that enterprise—Men and Millions Movement. Since then, she said, he has been among the first to contribute to the Church when the enterprises made their calls, presented their claims, and had to be supported. She felt that if he could make the start he would keep it up, and he has; and now that which at first seemed such a hardship and such a task, has come to be a real joy and a blessing.

The reason why some Churches contribute so little to the denomination and kingdom enlargement is because they look upon the same as a burden to be borne, and not a blessing to be shared. And the reason why some pastors will not try to lead their people into this blessing is because they shrink from it and think of it as a burden for themselves and their people. They forget the fact, seemingly, that their Lord and Redeemer is suffering beneath a burden too heavy for Him, and that He confers a blessing and benefit upon all who go with Him and get beneath His burden and help to share His cross. It is through burden-bearing that blessing-sharing comes, and our blessings are light and few because we shrink from the burdens and fear to get beneath them and make them blessings.

GREETINGS WITH GAPING GUNS.

One wonders why "city fathers" feel it necessary to mount big guns in conspicuous places in our towns, cities and on courthouse greens. This writer, going into a very friendly city recently, was often greeted by billboards and advertising that would indicate that the people of that city were very peaceable, kindly disposed and hospitable; and yet, on entering the city, on a beautiful lawn and street, he was greeted by a great, gaping gun, as if that gun and the whole town back of it would like to snuff out his life and blow things all around into shivers and atoms. We wonder what blessing, or benefit, or suggestion Burlington's gaping big gun can confer upon that peaceable, law-abiding and happy people!

We drove up recently to the courthouse green, in the fair, fine city of Greensboro, and the county, of which this city is the capital, has certainly erected a courthouse and a public building that should be the pardonable pride, and no doubt is, of every citizen in that good county; but one wonders why every visitor to that beautiful courthouse has to face a cannon and have it suggested to him that his life could be snuffed out in the twinkling of an eye, or "if he doesn't watch out, the hobgoblins will get him." What is the use of these great, gaping guns, anyway? What purpose do they serve? For what object and to what end and aim are they directed? Have they not outlived their usefulness, and have they not served their day, as have the offensive whipping-post and the old-time gallows, and the other emblems and symbols and signs of threat and terror and destruction in public places?

Symbols and tokens, one says, of power and force and authority? But is our citizenship yet on the rampage, and are we yet to be reminded of suppression by force? A while ago, this writer was in a Church built back in the very early Colonial days. The entrance to that Church was a sort of foyer that could be closed at a moment's warning and turned into a fort with port-holes in it. The early settlers, coming to worship, brought their guns and stacked them in this entrance, because they knew not, during their worship, when they might be attacked by furious, barbarous red men.

We would hardly build Churches like that at the present time, since the day of such attacks has past, we presume, forever. Do the builders of our courthouses and many of our parks and cities still feel the need of threatened resistance and suppression and destruction, that they must mount these symbols of ancient days of uprising and bloodshed to warn and intimidate the multitudes? Are not our big guns in public places all out of date, and have not they outlived, even as symbols and suggestions, the day and generation of their service and usefulness, if they ever had any? Why welcome people to your cities, and yet when they come greet them on the outskirts with a great, yawning, gaping emblem and symbol of death and destruction? It very much reminds one of the photographer who stepped from behind his camera with a drawn pistol in each hand and cried out, pointing them to the one posing for a picture, "Now, look pleasant."

Ours is a day of peace and the pursuits of peace, and a time when we are preaching, "Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God." Isn't it time, therefore, that we take down and put out of sight as many as possible of these signs of war and waste and blood? Again we enquire, why these gaping, yawning monsters of death to welcome people to our cities and to our courthouses, the temples of justice?

PLENTY AND POVERTY.

It is exceedingly difficult for us, in a land of such plenty, to realize the suffering, the famine, the pestilence and the poverty now obtaining in certain parts of the world, particularly in China. Here is a vast empire of people, patient, persistent, humble, energetic, capable. And yet authentic reports tell us that in large areas of China today unbelievable conditions obtain. "Mothers have drowned their babies," says Dr. Parkes Cadman, ex-president of the Federal Council of Churches; "fathers have sold their wives and children. Hitherto honest peasants have turned to banditry to secure food, often torturing those they believe to be concealing edibles of the poorest sort. Even cannibalism has occurred. Millions are starving. As many as 4,000,000 require immediate relief," being on the verge of starvation. Four millicen dollars is required with which to purchase food and actual necessities in order to prevent starvation of the most hideous and deplorable sort.

Our country is producing more than it can find sale for at even a living price to the producer. Here our fields and farms yield in such abundance that, in many instances, crops cannot be moved and are left to decay in the field because of sufficient price to cut, to crate and to ship. In China the margin of production is so small that the least disturbance of social, political or weather conditions, of unusual nature, bring famine, distress and death. China is well able, with her friendly soil and climate, to feed and clothe her millions, but she will never do so until the economy and the economical methods that follow in the wake and the teachings of the religion of the Carpenter of Nazareth shall be established in that land. Our God is a God of plenty, and He loves and cares for the humblest Chinaman as He does the most exalted American, but when superstition, idolatry and ignorance of the laws of grace and economy obtain, His will is thwarted and His beneficent plans are hindered. The remedy for the economic and social, as well as the moral and religious, ills of this world is to be found in the life, the teachings, the love of our Lord and His Christ. How long will we, who enjoy the glory and the light of this life refuse to share it and its saving power among the nations of the earth so that the whole world shall know Him, whose life is power and plenty and preservation.

MISSIONARY ATMOSPHERE.

Great municipalities are all the time working to create a better sanitary atmosphere, in order to improve the health and prosperity of the people. Physicians assist in this great work while they continue to combat disease in private homes and public hospitals. It is one of the strange conditions of advanced civilization that physicians and hospitals increase in number and usefulness with all the improvements in sanitary progress. This does not prove that better sanitary conditions increase diseases; but they do prove the demand for better health. What Christian communities need is a quickened sense of obligation to the unconverted and non-spiritual members of the Church.

There are moral conditions that poison the moral atmosphere and make it impossible for the Church to save the people; and such conditions might be improved. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. Sanitation prevents disease; and clean, moral atmosphere is missionary in every breath and saving in every influence over men. Such spiritual atmosphere can be increased ad infinitum just as physical atmosphere can be improved. The Panama Canal Zone has been made as healthful as the United States, and the island of Madagascar has been spiritually improved in like manner.

The world is coming to the United States by immigration, but we do not furnish the Christian conditions to meet the needs of such comers. We welcome them as laborers and producers of material wealth, but neglect to furnish the spiritual atmosphere for their soul-health. The civic welcome is large, but the religious greeting is small. We organize societies to reform the wayward, but do not furnish spiritual conditions that insinuate spiritual health into these aimless and shiftless comers. The fountain of mission work is an increase of spiritual life in the Church. Its life must be sympathetic; its social conduct must be pure; its commercial intercourse must be honest; its zeal according to knowledge.

The question is not how to win pagan and heathen nations to Christ, by foreign missions, but how to prevent pagan and heathen nations from overcoring us on account of lack of the home mission spirit and real spiritual power. We are told that great diseases, like the black plague, are carried by rats, immigrating from diseased regions to those that are not; so immigrants bring the moral taint of all nations to our shores, and nothing but the love of Jesus and the power of the gospel can stay this tide. The largest missionary opportunity is at the gate of the nation's metropolis, where millions enter to dwell among us. Healthy bodies can resist disease, and Christian communities should be able to resist the evils which immigrants bring in. Home missions should begin at home and create an atmosphere so spiritual that all who enter in may breathe it.

The channel for such help to immigrants is our mother tongue—American English. The division of the human race was caused by the confusion of tongues. It stopped the work on the Tower of Babel and scattered the workers; and the human race has been divided ever since. It is impossible to unify and harmonize people who differ in speech. Europe is divided more by language than by geography. What this country needs is one language, and immigrants should be required to learn our language before they become citizens. Schools, newspapers, pulpits should not speak in foreign tongues. This would lay the foundation for unity in thought, patriotism, social life, and religion. There are sixty-six languages spoken in New York, and forty-nine newspapers published in foreign tongues. We need unity of language to create an atmosphere that is Christian and American.

W. W. S.

"A clear principle of the New Testament is that the Christian is not to rule but to serve. Among pagans, the greatest rule; among Christians, the greatest serve. In God's kingdom men prove their fitness to rule by serving; their right to dominate by permeating."—Dr. W. N. Johnson.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Recognition, appreciation, return, are words that suggest food for thought and action. To recognize God as Father and Giver of every good and perfect gift awakens within the heart appreciation of life and all of life's blessings; and then, it follows that some return is made for what has been received. There is no greater proof of selfishness than the reception of good from others and no desire to make some return for such kindness. Thanksgiving, which is thought-giving, springs up in the heart of men and women who recognize the source of all their blessings. Life, health, home, friends, food and raiment are common blessings, it is true; but they all come from our Heavenly Father and should arouse within us emotions of gratitude and a desire to make some return for what we enjoy. There is no more despicable person than an ingrate; and yet, many receive, enjoy, and seem not to recognize or appreciate what they receive from God.

The Church is the main institution through which men enjoy the blessings of safety and prosperity. The Church has created the Christian State. Through the Christian State men enjoy life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Many organizations of a benevolent type derive their spirit and ideas from the Church, and then seem to fail to recognize, appreciate and make any return to the Church for what they have received. Even within the Church this lack is seen. The Sunday School, one of the greatest institutions in the world, is the child of the Church and would have no existence and no home without the Church; yet many adults, as well as children, go to Sunday School and then go home, while the Church needs their presence and their support. It is pathetic to see parents who have striven for years to build a home and to accumulate means to support a family, and then to see that family use the earnings of their parents and neglect them or fail to make some return for what they have received. Adult classes especially should recognize, appreciate and make the simple return of remaining at the Church service after the Sunday School classes; for, without the Church service, the Sunday School would die. That multitude of young people in school is there because parents are toiling to support them and the school. It is beautiful when young people become loyal members of the Church and loyal citizens of the State. They would be ignorant and poor but for the home and the Church.

Business should recognize that its prosperity has its roots in the Church, and should appreciate this fact and make return by closing all forms of business, for gain, on Sunday and help to make the Church a greater institution than it is. The Sunday newspaper is a menace to religion and a stumbling-block in the way of Church attendance. When I was in London, the largest city in the world, there was no Sunday paper, and stores closed at 6 o'clock on Saturday night.

"Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work; but the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God; in it thou shalt not do any work." The strict observance of Sunday would correct many evils of the world.

ELON LETTER.

I have received another letter—from a minister also! I am humiliated by its fine, brotherly spirit—gratefully humiliated!

I had been to his field. He was in town, but I did not look him up. I went hard to work on the quota of his Church for our college, and hoped to raise every penny of it and then tell him about it. But toward the end of the day it became evident that I would not succeed. I tried then several times to connect with him, but failed.

Upon reaching my office that night, I wrote him the following letter: "I am very happy to tell you that I was successful in raising the quota of your Church today, with the exception of $50.00. I had to leave by fifteen minutes of five in order to meet some engagements at home. I tried to get in touch with you toward the end of the day, but failed."

By return mail came this fine note: "I am glad you had the degree of success that you did in reaching the quota. If you will let me have the names of those whom you saw, I will try to raise the remainder. I trust you will meet with splendid success in your canvass."

Since my visit to his field, $5.00 has come in, so that $45.00 is now lacking to complete the quota. I am sure this good brother will complete it for the college.

Our leaders, both in the pulpit and the pew, are becoming more and more convinced that a Church must have a standard college in order to serve the kingdom's interests properly. That is why this brother wrote me this fine letter.

I am deeply appreciative of any service any friend may render in this cause, which means so much to our Church and, as I believe, to the kingdom itself.

FRANKLIN LETTER.

Dr. Roy C. Helfenstein, of the People's Christian Church, of Dover, Del., is conducting our spring revival. This man of God is full of enthusiasm and is most interesting in the presentation of God's word. His tours throughout Europe last year have added greatly to his experience. There are times when all of our Churches need to hear some great preacher stand forth and proclaim the gospel. Such messages are God's sacred power to save mankind and kindle anew the membership of the Church with a zeal for righteousness. Such revivals are not primarily to add new members to the Church, but rather to elevate the present constituency and uphold the glory of God before their eyes. Such meetings make for greater Christian integrity, spiritual interest and cleaner living.

On Sunday, April 14th, the members of the Knights of Pythias of the local lodge attended our Church service in a body. These men make it a practice of attending Church worship in groups ever so often. The Christian Church was chosen this year, and it was a delight to have them with us.

About eight of our teachers in the Sunday School have taken examinations recently toward obtaining the gold seal diploma issued by the International Council of Religious Education. Mrs. Fix has been busy teaching the class each week and gave the examination which was sent by Mr. Eldridge from Dayton.

Recently the members of the Sunday School were presented a sheet of paper on which was printed twenty questions. These questions formed an intelligence test on the Bible. The answers were to be given in one to three words. Such a test as this one, which was compiled by the Virginia Sunday School Association, reveals many interesting facts about what Sunday School people do not know about the Bible. Below you will find the questions. Ten minutes was given for the answers to be stated. Try it in your school and let me know how well your school answers these simple facts about the Scripture.

Test: Who was the father of the Hebrew race? To whom did God deliver the Ten Commandments? Who was the first king of the Hebrew nation? Who built the first temple at Jerusalem? Name three prophets of the Old Testament. Name the boy of the Old Testament who was sold into slavery by his brothers. Name the young woman of the Old Testament who said, "Entreat me not to leave thee or to return from following after thee." How many books make up our Bible? In what village or city was Jesus born? In what village or city did Jesus pass his youth? How old was Jesus when he said, "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business"? Who baptized Jesus? What was Jesus' first miracle? Name the man living at Bethany whom Jesus raised from the dead. Name any three of the disciples of Jesus. Name the disciple who denied Jesus three times the night before His crucifixion. Who was the first Christian martyr? Name the four gospels. How many people were converted when Peter preached on the Day of Pentecost? Who said, "And now abideth faith, hope, charity, but the greatest of these is charity"?

HISTORY OF DANVILLE CHURCH.

On the second Sunday afternoon in May, 1913, the first Sunday School was organized by Bros. Ed Harris and N. D. Jarrett, with an enrollment of 100 members. It was held in a two-room schoolhouse, then on Third Avenue, but since torn down. The fourth Sunday in May, Rev. S. B. Klapp came to visit Mr. Jarrett and was invited to preach in the old schoolhouse. A good crowd attended, and he immediately saw the need of a Church in the community. He continued to come and preach every fourth Sunday, and in October invited Rev. J. F. Morgan to come and conduct a revival. The schoolhouse was crowded each night, with many standing on the outside listening to this man of God. Many were converted, and at the close of the meeting the Church was organized, consisting of twenty-seven members; only four men, two of them still active members.

By this time many were really interested and went to work raising money to build the Church. A Ladies' Aid Society was organized, and they gave various kinds of parties, did canvassing, and worked and sacrificed in many ways to raise money. Dr. Kuhn, then one of our leading physicians, gave the first $10 on the lots, and they were purchased. My father, Mr. A. J. Allen, then not a Christian, although he became one after the building of the Church; Mr. Joe White, member of a Methodist Church; Mr. Matthew Liles, and Mr. Ed Harris, members, mortgaged their homes through the building loan to get the money to build the Church, and it was begun in September, 1914, by my father, he being the lowest bidder for the job. Mrs. Ed Harris laid the first brick.

Our first services were held in the Church the last Sunday in December, 1914. Rev. S. B. Klapp, whom we all loved, and whose picture now hangs in our Church and whose memory we cherish, continued to be our pastor as long as he was able.

Mrs. J. T. Whitworth, one of our best workers and still a member, named our Church, as her suggested name received most votes. The building and pews cost about $3,900, and there was never a payment missed or overdue, and on May 30, 1920, our Church was dedicated, Dr. Atkinson conducting the dedicatory services.

We continued holding Sunday School in the afternoon for a few years after the Church was built, but our membership grew rapidly and we began having Sunday School in the morning in 1922.

Our membership has grown from twenty-seven to 231. In 1928, a young people's department was added, and was dedicated on April 7, 1929, service being held by Dr. Atkinson.

We now need a primary department, and hope soon to be able to build it, as we hope our Church and Sunday School will continue to grow.

Through faith, we have accomplished.

THE SUN LETTER.

I want to call the attention of the readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN to Dr. Staley's article, "The Christian Sun," published in THE SUN of April 18th, on page five. If you have not read it, please look up your paper for that issue and read it. It is to the point, and it will do you good. I feel sure after reading it you will have a greater love for your Church paper and the institutions of your denomination which it represents.

We now have on the mailing-list of THE SUN 2,754 names. We are very anxious to increase the list to three thousand by the first of June. In order to do this, we are going to make this special offer up to May 31st: A club of five new subscribers for $7.50. The list of five new names and $7.50 sent in at one time. We just lack 246 subscribers being to the three thousand mark. Let every Church and Sunday School get busy and send us clubs of five new subscribers and help us reach our goal by June 1st. This applies to new subscribers only. If some individual in each Church will see that at least one club is sent in, you will be doing a good deed.

ISLE OF WIGHT RALLY.

The missionary rally of the Franklin district was held in Isle of Wight Church, Mrs. W. D. Harwood, leader, in the chair. Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Mission Secretary, and his assistant, Mr. J. M. Darden, Mrs. W. V. Leathers and Mrs. W. H. Andrews, from the Nansemond district, were present, and each added to the excellent program. Other speakers were Mrs. J. A. Williams, who discussed "Standards of Excellence"; Mrs. E. L. Beale, whose subject was "Japan," and Mrs. J. M. Raby had for her theme, "Our Mountain work."

Mrs. Homer Whitley and Mrs. Horace Pierce were pleasing in solo numbers. An offering of $12.50 was received. The next rally of the Franklin district will be held at Mt. Carmel, Isle of Wight County.

MRS. R. A. RHODES,

Sec'y Pro Tem.

"S O S."

Every March this cry can be heard, sent out by the Church committees on home and foreign missions. There come to our desk copies of the papers of various denominations, and with but only a few exceptions they are all in deep need. When the need is uniform among the various Churches, it is evident that there must be the same cause at work among them all.

It is evidently a case of illness around which many doctors have gathered and many opinions expressed as to the remedy needed. Some think that the Church treasurers are to be blamed; that they do not send to the head officials the funds contributed, with the result that money has to be borrowed and interest paid, which makes the amount contributed that much less.

No doubt, that may explain a small part of the decrease; but when that decrease runs up into thousands, the explanation fails to explain.

Another reason given is that the people are spending more upon themselves than in years past, the luxury of one age becoming the necessity of the next. No one will question the charge that this is an age of luxury and that our people are living in a degree of luxury never dreamed of by their ancestors.

Those who have studied the downfall of great nations of the past, view with real alarm the rapid rate at which we are living. No doubt, the falling off in giving is largely due to the increasing scale of luxury in which this present age is living.

The explanation only suggests another question: why are we living at this rapid rate, when our confession of Christ, according to the terms laid down by Him, calls for self-denial and cross-bearing? Can we claim to be His followers when we have failed to accept the terms of discipleship laid down by Him?

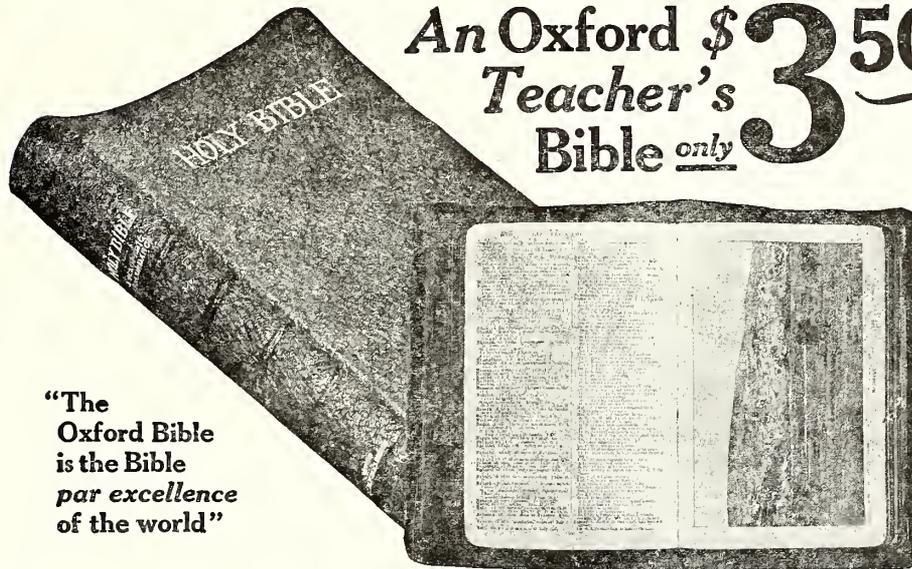

If we seek the real cause of the falling off, we must go back to our own hearts. We once loved the Lord above all else, and in his service we found our highest pleasure.

Now, our chief pleasure is the indulgence of self, with the result that His work suffers.

We need a new heart, a revival of love for Him. Until the Church is revived and set on fire with love for Him, our causes will languish and some die. Nothing can take the place of the Spirit appeal. The religious press and the appeals of the secretaries will, no doubt, prepare the way for His work.—Presbyterian Standard.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

THE CHURCH SEEKS THE WHOLE WORLD.

Just three hundred years after Columbus opened a whole world to the adventurous spirit of Europe, there met in a humble parlor in Kettering, England, twelve practically unknown men who were to propose an even more daring enterprise. Stirred by the insistent appeals of one of their number, William Carey, a former cobbler, they had taken the burden of the non-Christian world to their hearts; they were met to form a "Baptist society for propagating the gospel among the heathen." What a wildly fantastic thing to do!

There was not in all the Anglo-Saxon world a foreign missionary society. Four years later, when a proposal to send the gospel to non-Christian lands came up in the assembly of the Scotch Church, it was met by a resolution that "to spread abroad the knowledge of the gospel among barbarous and heathen nations seems to be highly preposterous, in so far as philosophy and learning must, in the nature of things, take the precedence, and that while there remains at home a single individual every year without the means of religious knowledge, to propagate it abroad would be improper and absurd."

The most powerful commercial organization in the British empire, the East India Company, was actively opposed to the entrance of missionaries into its princely domains. It was reported after the little meeting at Kettering that "good Dr. Stennett advised the London ministers to stand aloof, and not commit themselves." The twelve preachers from rural or small-town Churches who met together that November day were without money and without apparent influence. "There was no precedent for them to follow; no missionary association whose methods they might imitate; no favorable opening was known to them in any heathen country; no other body of Protestant Christians in England contemplated or even favored such action."

One cannot refrain from comparing these twelve humble men with the disciples who met in the upper room after their Lord had gone away, and, poor and unknown and unlettered as they were, dared to undertake the carrying of His good news to the hostile world that had slain their Master. To the mind of the average man of "common sense," both groups were just stark-mad.

Yet, at the meeting in Mrs. Wallis' parlor, these twelve men, with the quiet dignity of those who are following the Spirit of God, drew up twelve resolutions binding themselves "to act in society together" in "making an effort for the propagation of the gospel among the heathen," and opening a subscription for the purpose. The men who signed the resolution subscribed thirteen pounds, two shillings and sixpence, or about sixty-three dollars. In three months they appointed two missionaries, and in five more months the missionaries and their families set sail on a Danish vessel, the East India Company having denied them passage on any of its ships.

In less than one hundred and fifty years from the time this little company of pioneers set forth on what was generally regarded as a foolhardy undertaking, doomed to certain failure, the good news of Christ has been carried into almost every land on earth. Imagine the astonishment of the men in Kettering if they had been told on the day of their apparently insignificant meeting that within a few generations the missionary enterprise would be practically world-wide in its scope!—"Story of Missions," by Edwin E. White.

FROM DIMES TO MILLIONS!

Annual income of the first woman's missionary organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1878, $4,014; income for 1928, $1,272,643.

Between these two dates and these two sets of figures, according to Mrs. Ina Davis Fulton, treasurer of the Woman's Missionary Council, who will leave Sunday for the annual meeting of the council at Washington, D. C., March 13-18, lies a colorful story, beginning with a tiny group of timid women who, with dime dues and pennies saved in self-denial, have built up a great corporate body composed of 300,000 women and girls all over Southern Methodist territory, doing business in five continents. Headquarters of the council are at Nashville.

But $4,000 for missionary work in its first year, Mrs. Fulton thinks, was a remarkable record, and set the pace for the missionary achievements which have placed the missionary cause in the millionaire class today. Back in those days, she says, women generally were not interested; they were afraid of public work or going outside of their own house and families. But the few who were interested worked hard and to good purpose.

How They Raised It.

How did they raise all this money?

By piecing quilts, giving oyster suppers, saving egg money and various homely ways. It was quite the fashion to save the eggs the hens laid on Sunday and sell the butter made from Sunday milk. This money was carefully deposited in the little mitebox that sat on the what-not in the place of honor by the family album. "In my own day," said Mrs. Fulton, "it was customary to give the children a missionary hen, whose output was dedicated to the particular mission field whose name the hen bore.

"There was great rejoicing when the Buff Cochon named China brought in more money than some other child's Plymouth Rock named Korea."

During the fifty-one years Southern Methodist women have been working for missions, they have raised $21,889,000. Each year sees an increase and the year just closed represents an advance of $58,000 over the previous year. As a usual thing, the W. M. C. women seek to increase its missionary budget five per cent every year. During last year they made a special "jubilee" thankoffering in commemoration of fifty years' missionary work. The thankoffering amounted to $104,000.

The way in which the council decided the amount of the year's appropriation is said to be one of the big moments of the annual meeting. The meeting at which this is done is called the pledge service. The treasurer presides, and after the devotional period, one by one the delegates from the various conferences rise and state the amounts which they will pledge on behalf of the conference constituency. Last year the pledge was $1,082,000, and when the remittances came in it was found the women had overpaid their pledge and turned in $1,119,000. Special gifts, in addition to their overpledge, brought the total up to $1,272,643.

"Figures are more fascinating than cross-word puzzles," says Mrs. Fulton. "They are never hard, dry or uninteresting, particularly if attached to a nice check or money order for missionary work."

"But," she adds, "it isn't the figures that are so interesting, but the fact they represent in concrete form the loving sacrifice of women in many homes of many kinds, reaching out in this way to other women in distant lands and through them touching the citizenship of the world.

"I like to think of my office," Mrs. Fulton said, "as the receiving station and the broadcasting center for the thousands of missionary societies, little and big, who meet and send their reports and money to their local treasurers, and they in turn send them to me; and through my office they go to the great group of deaconesses and missionaries who are touching hundreds of thousands of persons who otherwise would be deprived of the blessings of the Christian religion and all the privileges that accompany it as by-products. This office is the connecting-link between the givers in the local missionary society and the objects of their generosity all over the world."

Give Their Jewels.

Do the women still give their jewels and other keepsakes as they did in the beginning? Mrs. Fulton was asked.

"Indeed they do," was the reply; "nearly every year sees bracelets, pins, beads and rings turned into money for missions. Recently a diamond ring valued at $500 was sent to the treasurer's office.

"And not only that, but the women have learned the only way in which they can use their money after they are dead. And so each year we receive a number of bequests and annuities. The bequests during the past year amounted to $11,619, and annuities $3,600. Many of our annuitants turn their interest money back into their local missionary societies."—Nashville Tennessean.

NOW THE TIME—HERE THE PLACE!

Your Church is making an effort to reach its goal for Missions this year, namely: one-third the amount of pastor's salary. If your Church, and all the other Churches, reach this goal, we will reach the total goal of $45,000 for the year ending September 30th, the amount asked of us by the Southern Christian Convention.

Will you, by an individual gift, help your Church to achieve this desired end? Now is the time! Here is the place! By a pull together, every Church can reach the goal. Help now.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

Lesson V—May 5, 1929.

WHAT HILKIAH FOUND IN THE TEMPLE.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path."—Psa. 119:105.

LESSON: 2 Chron. 34:1-33.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psa. 19:7.

Josiah fell heir to an undesirable situation. Manasseh was a profligate, irreligious and self-willed king, and under his reign things went from bad to worse in Judah, especially from the religious standpoint. Amen, his successor, was not any better; in fact, he "trespassed more and more" and finally his own servants rose up and slew him. The times were out of joint, very much out of joint.

It is well to keep in mind, too, that Josiah was only eight years old when he began to reign. At first, he ruled through a kind of "advisory council," but he soon showed native ability and he developed into one of Judah's best kings. One of his outstanding characteristics was his loyalty to the Lord. "He did that which was right in the sight of the Lord, and walked in the ways of David, his father, and declined not to the right hand or the left." Fortunate indeed is that boy or girl who has a wholesome religious background, not only of precept but of example.

Josiah as king took his religion seriously. He set himself uncompromisingly against the evils of the foreign and debasing religious practices and beliefs that had fastened themselves upon his nation's life. "He began to purge Judah and Jerusalem from the high places, and the groves, and the carved images, and the molten images—all of them the instruments of a religion that was a denial of the religion of Jehovah his God. He may have been a little stern in his measures, but the times demanded sternness. One feels that the average Christian is too complacent in the face of the many evils that stalk abroad in our land and are a denial of Christianity. Christianity should be militant.

Josiah was concerned that religion should have a place in the life of his people. He accordingly ordered repairs to be made to the temple which had fallen into dispair. Money had been solicited for some time, and enough was on hand to do the work. As so often the case, when a man sets himself to do the will of the Lord, other unexpected things happen. For when Hilkiah the priest went to get the money, he found a book, or a roll of law. Even a cursory examination showed that it was something unusual and far-reaching in significance. He, therefore, sent it along by Shaphan, who in turn took it to the king. And thereby hangs a tale.

Who wrote the "book of the law" and how it came to be in the temple is not quite clear. It makes no difference. The important thing is that the finding of that law and its application to the situation did make a difference. When the king read it, he saw at once that tremendous issues were involved. He was so disturbed that he sent at once to the prophetess Huldah to learn whether the things were indeed binding and applicable to him and his nation. He received the answer that the predicted penalties set forth in the law were indeed applicable to his nation, in that it had broken the law. Because of his own integrity, however, the doom would not come in his own lifetime.

It might be remarked, in passing, that this roll, or this law, is, by common consent of scholars, generally recognized to be what is now our book of Deuteronomy, although it was not in its completed form when it was found. It is interesting to learn, too, that, from this time on, Judah and the Jewish people became more and more a people of the law. Here was set down in definite form practically all of the duties of a man both to the Lord and to his fellow-men. A reading of Deuteronomy will show that it is of a lofty tone and of a broader spirit than the later priestly or legalistic legislation. As was natural, it was ascribed to Moses, although Moses certainly did not produce it in its present completed form, and perhaps not in the form in which it was found. But the principles are undoubtedly Mosaic in their fundamental nature.

There are several teaching points that emerge from this lesson. As one reads the effect that the reading of the law had upon the king, one can readily see just how important it is that people habitually read the Bible. Josiah, as good a man as he was, might have gone on in blissful ignorance of the larger aspects of religion had he not read in this book of how far he and his people had fallen short, both of their duty and their privilege. So it is with every man and woman who neglects Bible reading, devotional practices, attendance at worship. We should read and study our Bibles not only for the comfort we get, but for the revelation of our own needs and the warning against our ways which this Book gives.

We see, too, the normal effect of Bible reading. It issued in changed conduct on the part of Josiah and his people. They changed their manner of life and their practices insofar as they were in violation of this word of God. In like manner, Bible reading never accomplishes its highest mission until it issues in changed ideals and conduct on the part of those who read it.

It is interesting to notice that Josiah's religion had its positive as well as its negative aspect. He was not content merely with destroying the evidences of heathen practices; he reinstated the Passover and established positive religious practices. It is not enough simply to be good; we ought to be good for something. The tragedy of so many lives is the fact that their ideals never go beyond the realm of mere negative goodness. We are not to be overcome of evil, but we are to overcome evil with good.

Here again we see the beneficent influence of a wholesome leader. Those in positions of high office determine, to an extent that they little dream of, the ideals and the attitudes of the people. And this is true in the humbler walks of life. There is no substitute for the personal example of a godly life.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Sunday, May 5, 1929.

TOPIC: "Service a Way to Leadership."—Matt. 20:20-28. (Consecration meeting.)

Some Bible Hints.

There are those who seek leadership because of the honor connected with it. No wonder they fail (v. 21).

Capacity for suffering and disappointment is essential to be a true leader, for these are often met with (v. 22).

Christian leadership is the direct opposite of worldly leadership. It is not something given, but something earned by service (vs. 25, 26).

The life of Jesus shows the way to leadership; it is prayer, communion, helpfulness (v. 28).

Suggestive Thoughts.

Service develops the soul. It lifts us out of ourselves and helps us to see the needs and the problems of others.

Leadership must be unselfish, or it is useless. The real leader thinks not of himself, but of those he wants to help.

Leadership must have a goal. We must see clearly whither we are leading—what we are aiming at.

Christian Endeavor service offers opportunities for leading. If there is anything in us, Christian Endeavor gives us a chance to try out our ideas without having cold water thrown on them.

A Few Illustrations.

Every gang of boys has a leader, and he is usually the fellow with ideas, who suggests things to be done, and takes a hand in doing them. This attitude can be learned.

As a locomotive needs steam, so a leader needs driving force not only to get a move on himself, but to haul others after him. The person who loves selfish ease, or who is indolent, never can be a leader.

Baby salmon trout, thousands of them, will follow the leader. That is part of nature's planning. So is it with men. Leaders are few; followers many. Which do you wish to be?

A leader must be "chief." That is, he must excel. You cannot dream yourself into great leadership or power.

To Think About.

What should be our aim as leaders?

What committee work best develops leaders?

How can we tell whether we can be leaders or not?

AMERICA'S FIRST RAILROAD IN SOUTH.

In his search for facts relating to the industrial development of the Southern States, Arthur Coleman, associate editor of Holland's, the magazine of the South, learned that the first railroad in the United States chartered for general use was in the South. Beginning with a brief mention of the historic "Tom Thumb" locomotive, followed by the "Best Friend," which exploded after six months of successful operation on the South Carolina Railroad, Mr. Coleman brings his readers down to modern Southern good roads and airways, and shows what the South's transportation system means toward developing Southern business.

In the current issue of Holland's, he states that over 34 per cent of the total railroad mileage in the country is in the Southern States, and that since 1860 the South has shown an increase in railroad mileage of 845 per cent, as against 465 per cent for all remaining States. The first steamship to cross the Atlantic, according to Mr. Coleman, was owned by Savannah capital and sailed from Savannah, Ga. He says that last year Southern export values more than doubled those of the Pacific coast, while import values through Southern ports, in the past quarter-century, increased more than 840 per cent as against approximately 350 per cent for all remaining ports in the nation. Southern ports handle 42 per cent of the country's total water-borne tonnage. Export values from Galveston and Houston alone exceed the combined ports of the Pacific coast. Navigable rivers of the South handle over 17,250,000 tons of commerce annually. Texas bus lines carry 4,500,000 passengers annually, and operate over 21,000 miles of highway. In 1928 there were, in the Southern States, a total of over 2,900 miles of air-mail routes and more than 300 air ports and landing fields.

"As these various phases of the commercial world are expanding, so is expanding this entire region—industrially, socially, economically—raising head and shoulders above every other section of the nation until its pre-eminence, so swiftly and so soundly attained, is the wonder of the United States today. But as its people prosper in the world of business and trade, they are giving thought, too, to those things in life which make for cultured and happy minds; for beauty and charm and grace of living. They are giving their attention more and more to the planning and esthetic improvement of their cities and their towns and even their rural sections. Their forethought is repaying them richly in dividends immeasurable in terms of financial gains; and, as is always true when men do worth-while things without thought of money, they are being repaid in money also. Money which, in turn, is put back into further service for an appreciative people."

IN MEMORY.

Bro. John Tobias Kernodle, who left us recently for his home in the spirit world, was a man who loved the Christian Church and was a member of it all his life and was the strong financial arm of the Christian Church at Berea. When this Church got into financial trouble, he was the one who usually brought them out. Bro. Kernodle, I believe, was a Christian man of deep convictions, and lived up to his convictions.

Bro. Kernodle and the writer were lifelong friends. We grew up together, and we are happy to say there was never a cross word between us. We lived in sweet fellowship all our days. We were his pastor three different times. The writer is sorry to say that he didn't have an opportunity to carry out a request that Bro. Kernodle had made of him. Bro. Kernodle was a charter member of the Berea Christian Church, which the writer organized over twenty years ago. Blessed be the memory of our departed friend. We expect to meet him in glory in the sweet by and by.

Dearest brother, thou hast left us;
Here thy loss we deeply feel.
But 'tis God who hath bereft us;
He can all our sorrows heal.

P. T. KLAPP.

ATTENTION.

Editor THE CHRISTIAN SUN:

As a member of the Christian Church and a worker for Oak Grove Christian Church, I am appealing for help in this hour of need. Remember in St. John 14:14, the Scripture says, "If ye shall ask anything in my name, I will do it."

We, as a small group of members, are badly in need of a Church building for worship. The building is so dilapidated that something must be done. Our members have responded beautifully, but we still need more funds in order to complete our house of worship.

Will greatly appreciate your kindness in inserting this in THE CHRISTIAN SUN for all members of other Churches who are interested in the Lord's work for a contribution to help us with our building fund.

May the Lord bless our work and give us an abundant harvest. Again I thank you for this favor. All pledges and donations should be sent to Waverly Parker, secretary-treasurer, Oak Grove Christian Church, Sunbury, N. C.

Very sincerely,

MRS. W. K. PARKER.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE,
One of Our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MONDAY.

THE GIFT OF THE LOAD.

"Cast thy burden . . . upon Jehovah, and He will sustain thee."—Psa. 55:16-23.

Few marginal readings are more illuminating than this. The thought is that God has given us our burden, and so of course He will help us bear it.

Prayer.—And so, our Father in heaven, we take our burdens to Thee. Whatever they are, Thou wilt help us with them, making them no burdens at all. Amen.

TUESDAY.

GOOD MEDICINE.

"A cheerful heart is a good medicine."—Prov. 17:14-22.

The world is overrun with medicines. Men are so eager to be cured that they grasp at palpable straws. And in this deluge of nostrums most of us are forgetting one of the most efficacious medicines of all—a cheerful heart.

This medicine is easy to obtain. It costs nothing but belief in Jesus Christ, prayer, and the reading of God's Word. Unselfishness is the bottle that holds the medicine. And the longer it is taken, the more good it does.

Prayer.—And so, dear Jesus, we ask for Thy joy. Thou didst come to this earth, as Thou hast said, to give it to us. We reach out after it with believing hearts. We will not keep it to ourselves, but will use it to bless others also. May Thy joy become the joy of the whole earth. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

SNAKES IN THE MOUTH.

"The tongue can no man tame: it is a restless evil; it is full of deadly poison."—James 3:1-8.

James was thinking of the tongue of an evil man as being a serpent's forked tongue, darting restlessly here and there, eager to press into a wound. That is a perfect picture of an untamed tongue.

What a blessing is loving speech, thoughtful, inspiring, comforting, gracious, commending, enheartening!

But the tongue may be tamed, though not by man. God alone, Christ's Spirit in the heart alone, can tame this poisonous reptile and remove its sting. And a tamed tongue, full of the love of God, is as powerful for good as an untamed tongue is efficient for mischief.

Prayer.—Our Father in heaven, Thou who hast made man's mouth, teach us, Thy children, how to use divinely the divine faculty of speech. For Thy Son's sake. Amen.

THURSDAY.

BEST THINGS.

"Covet earnestly the best gifts, and yet show I unto you a more excellent way."—1 Cor. 12:31.

The best law—The Golden Rule.
The best education—Self-knowledge.

The best philosophy—A contented mind.
The best war—To war against one's weakness.
The best theology—A pure and beneficent life.
The best medicine—Cheerfulness and temperance.
The best music—The laughter of an innocent child.
The best science—Extracting sunshine from a cloudy sky.
The best art—Painting a smile upon the brow of childhood.
The best journalism—Painting the true and beautiful on memory's tablet.
The best telegraphing—Flashing a ray of sunshine into a gloomy heart.—Church Life, Tulsa.

FRIDAY.

THE CONTAGION OF CHEERFULNESS.

"God hath made me to laugh, so all that hear will laugh with me."—Gen. 21:6.

There is nothing more contagious than cheerfulness. Never was there a truer adage, "Laugh and the world laughs back at you." Thomas Carlyle said, "A soul is beautiful because it is bright." Massinger said, "Good cheer makes any dish a feast." Hamilton said that cheerfulness "dispels fear and difficulties." Montaigne said that cheerfulness "is the most manifest sign of wisdom." Archbishop Usher said, "If good people would make their goodness agreeable, and smile instead of frowning in their virtue, how many would they win to the good cause!" Fuller said, "an ounce of cheerfulness is worth a pound of sadness to serve God with."

The long-faced, sour-hearted kind will never catch fire. It ought not to. Religion that people want is one of grace, cheer, joyful in adversity, and not one that hangs crepe on everything.

Hayden, the great musician, when asked how it was that his music was so animated and of the festal quality, replied: "I can't help it. I write as I feel; when I think upon God my heart is full of joy, and joy-notes draw from my pen."

Our message for today is: Be cheerful, and let Christianity shine.

Prayer.—Father, Son and Holy Ghost, shine upon our lives today and fulfill Thy laws of righteousness and cheerfulness in us. Amen.

SATURDAY.

"CONSISTENCY A JEWEL."

"All these things have I kept from my youth; what lack I yet?"—Mark 10:20.

When Jesus saw that this young man answered discreetly—that is, wisely, thoughtfully, intelligently, "He said unto him, Thou art not far from the kingdom of God." A man who thinks deeply thinks religiously. It is possible to be a Christian without knowing it. But one of the greatest faults of believers is in consistency in what they profess.

A Chinese official one day said: "If only the people who profess Christianity were to live in accordance with its precepts, it would spread all over the world."

That Christianity does not spread more rapidly is due to the hypocrisy in Christian hearts. For example, recall the hypocrisy you know about. How many are the people who believe in prohibition and vote that way, but who love alcoholics themselves and keep it? How many such make it? How many we know and read about who are engaged in law enforcement only to cover up their bootlegging?

Church-going, Church membership, and good preaching and literature—yea, the Bible itself—none of it will ever save. What does? It is you.

Folks look at folks and are saved, if saved at all, by the Christ seen in their souls.

One may die and all that he has ever said may be buried with him, but what he was is never forgotten. The world needs just one touch to turn it to Christianity.

Prayer.—O Father, let not Thy wrath fall upon us, nor upon the world for its hypocrisy, but send true souls out to live and love and save. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE BEAUTY OF CONFESSING FAULTS.

"Who so confesseth his sins and forsaketh them shall obtain mercy."—Prov. 28:13.

Even though it is possible for one to be a Christian and not know it, it is not likely. If one did live that way, who would be influenced by such a life? Christ said, "Ye are my witnesses." What the world needs, above all things, is heartiness in Christian faith, folks who justify their holy impulses by living it and not hiding it by what they call prudence, or false fear, or shame pretenses, for the sake of personal advantages. God is waiting for just that kind to be His witnesses in all ages—they who dare to be holy and who don't mind being singular, if necessary, to be so. These are folks who know Christ inwardly, and therefore stand for Him outwardly. These are souls who stand before God accepted.

An eminent jurist dropped into a prayer-meeting on business one evening. He listened to the testimony of various ones. He knew their lives. He said to himself, "If these witnesses were in a case of mine, I would win. If I would believe them in court, why can't I take their word concerning spiritual things?" That man confessed Christ that night.

Prayer.—Our Father, come into our lives like sunshine to the flower, and make us to shine as true to the faith as does the flower to life. Amen.

WHAT INFINITE GRACE MEANS.

Infinity cannot be impoverished. Old John Bunyan, groaning under his sense of sin, struggling for holiness, finally discovered grace. And Bunyan exclaimed with joy: "Christ is not one jot poorer for all the forgiveness which He has given away to great sinners. There is the same virtue in His merits to save now as there was at the very beginning. Oh, the riches of the grace of Christ!" Which means that today, nineteen hundred years after God's fountain of grace was opened for lost sinners through the piercing of the body of the Son and the shedding of His blood, and six thousand years after God promised this to the lost sinners in the Garden of Eden, and after this saving grace of God has been drawn upon by all of the countless millions who have thus been saved, from Adam to that rejoicing soul who was saved a moment ago in slum or in theological seminary, the amount of God's grace is not one jot or one tittle less than it was at the beginning. It has not been reduced by an ounce, a molecule, an atom, an electron! It is irreducible because it is infinite. There is just as much of it for you and me, in our present moment of need, whether that need is for salvation or for restoration or for safe-keeping and victory in a moment of awful temptation, as if we were the only souls to whom God had ever offered and provided His grace. That is why He tells us, not that we are conquerors, but "Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through Him that loved us."—S. S. Times.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

The entire Orphanage family looked forward with a great deal of delight to the annual meeting of the board of trustees of the Christian Orphanage. Our annual meeting was held at the Orphanage on April 16th. The meeting this year was of unusual interest, as we had five new members to come on our board at this meeting, viz: L. E. Carlton, of Richmond; L. R. Jones, of Franklin; A. L. Jolly, of Holland, and John A. Hall, of Burlington, and W. B. Truitt, of Greensboro, N. C. The board now has twelve members, and all members were present except two—Dr. G. S. Watson, of Elon College, N. C., and L. E. Carlton, of Richmond, Va.—both being detained on account of illness. The meeting was presided over by J. M. Darden, who was elected president to succeed himself. The usual annual reports of the superintendent and secretary-treasurer were presented and read to the board, and same were accepted and approved.

The usual matters of routine business claimed the attention of the board. The meeting was very pleasant during the entire session. All matters were discussed and passed upon in a sweet-spirited manner. Inspiring talks were made to the children by J. M. Darden, W. B. Truitt, L. R. Jones, Mrs. Sam Davis, and others.

The superintendent's report showed that the Orphanage plant has a property value of $160,000. It now has three splendid brick buildings, with 204 acres in the Orphanage farm, well supplied with machinery and mules; also a fine herd of Holstein cows to furnish milk for the children. It has in its care at this time 118 little children. The days of care given children last year were 41,055; children cared for during the year, 127. It had in its care children between the ages of three and five years of age, 3; between six and twelve years, 58; between twelve and eighteen years, 66. Of this number of children, 29 were full orphans, 24 mother dead, 66 father dead, and 8 both parents living. Of this number, 66 boys and 61 girls. The general average per day was 112. The report showed during the year the Orphanage had two epidemics of sickness. In the early spring of 1928 it had an epidemic of measles and whooping cough, and in the fall pneumonia and flu, but no death during the year. The report also showed that the Orphanage has had but one death in twelve years, which occurred in 1918.

JESUS AND MONEY.

In a very illuminating book called "The Bible and Social Problems," by Walter L. Linge, D. D., LL.D., president Presbyterian Assembly's Training School, there are some very fine discussions on social problems of the world. In one of them he discusses "Jesus and Money." He tells of meeting Dr. Josiah Strong once and hearing him say that if he were a young man, taking charge of a Church, he would preach every Sunday morning and every Sunday evening for three months on the subject of money, and then he would expect the greatest revival his Church had ever known. And then he added, "You know Jesus had more to say about money, directly or indirectly, than He had to say on any other single subject." The author was surprised, as no doubt our readers will be, at such a statement. He did not see how a young minister could find enough texts to preach for three months, Sunday morning and evening, on money, but he studied the gospels with the idea of finding out whether Dr. Strong's statement was true, and he was convinced that he was entirely right—that Jesus had more to say, directly and indirectly, about money than He had to say on any other single subject.

The idea expressed by the author is certainly contrary to the general thought of the people to whom we preach. They are saying to their preachers, "Preach the gospel, and don't preach about money." And they think they are saying a very sensible thing. But money is at the basis of Christian character. In our country, in the last fifty years, the increase of wealth has been so vast as to be literally overwhelming. It has become a menace to the moral life of the nation. It has produced an idle rich class, which is a problem in itself, but more than this "the accumulation of wealth in the hands of a few enables the few to control, to a large extent, the money markets, prices, wages, labor, politics, and the very souls of men. It creates a wide social unrest."—Methodist Protestant.

THE GOD OF MOSES.

The present-day believer is not interested very much in the God of Moses. He may be more interested in the God of the Old Testament. Nevertheless, in the writings of that ancient sage appeared the first glimpse of the Supreme Spirit—"In the beginning God." From that first register, doubtless made by the hand of Moses, Jehovah of the Old Testament marches into the scene of action known as human history. All believers in Christ look back to him as the one out of whom came first the promise, then the fulfillment, in which the Messiah appeared as the Saviour and Redeemer of mankind. The God of the Old Testament is the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. We should be interested in Him. He was the God of Moses. Moses proclaimed Him, walked with Him, communed with Him, took his commission from Him, spoke His will, and obeyed His orders. The God of the Exodus was the God of Moses.

Now there are three things which ought to be considered as characteristic of the God of the Old Testament.

First: He is accessible. By this is meant that man can approach Him. Perhaps it may be contended that He is more aggressive toward man than He is approachable from the human side. However, it is the contention that one of the three chief characteristics of the Old Testament is Jehovah for His accessibility. One may go to Him. One may approach His dwelling-place. One may find Him willing to listen. God as a spirit makes contacts in various ways. The most prominent in confirming our faith in Him is that they who seek Him find Him. He is to be found. He cannot be characterized as inaccessible. He does not hold Himself aloof. He does not throw around Himself impenetrable walls.

He does not discourage approach to His dwelling-place. While He maintains His pavilions of uncreated excellence, they are not so remote but that man can find them. He is accessible. In other words, man knows when he finds the God of the Old Testament. He does not approach some generality, some principle of speculation, some remote mist, shadowed, or incomprehensible form. The God of the Old Testament is one who, being accessible, is able to give a man a conscious welcome in His presence.

Second: The God of the Old Testament is covenant-making. By this we designate one of His most outstanding characteristics. Jehovah made a covenant with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. A covenant is a very remarkable understanding in whatever form. "I will make out of thee a nation in which all the peoples of the earth will be blessed." This became the covenant that bound Jehovah to the patriarchs. That was a very serious relation for Him to take. He assumed large responsibility in the covenant. He declared, "I will make out of you." The party to the covenant is Jehovah Himself. He becomes the active factor. He bound Himself to Abraham and to Isaac and to Jacob. His will would be operative in accomplishing certain definite results through them.

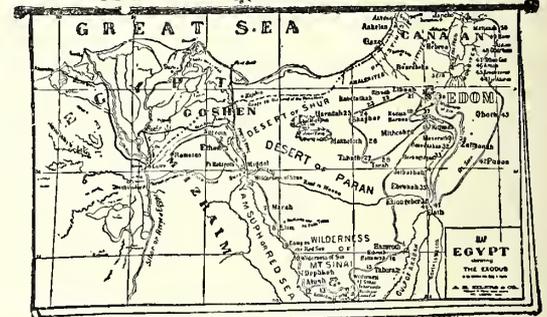

This is a very remarkable truth for any man to face when he thinks of God as a covenant-making Spirit, who, as the supreme object of our faith, becomes altogether responsible for the operation of a covenant with us. Can we trust Him to keep the covenant? Can we depend upon Him to be active when we are at our wits' end and cannot understand? Every believer in Christ enters into a covenant with our Heavenly Father at the altars of the Church. We take our vows; we acknowledge Him to be a party to our spiritual oaths which we, in the name of heaven, take, trusting God to be a party thereto. Into that covenant we draw our children; around our home we extend this covenant, expecting that God will keep His part and not fail us in the hour of extreme distress. "All things work together for good to those who love the Lord" forms the expression of the faith of those who believe in the God of the Old Testament.

Third: Jehovah is a co-operative God. He has power to co-operate with man in his efforts to keep the covenant. He can work with men. He can influence the human heart. He can stiffen the human will. He can make the blinded eyes to see. He can release for action the human spirit. He visited the tent of Abraham. His angels came to the threshold of Lot in the days of Sodom.

Too many followers of our Lord fail to grasp the deep significance of these three characteristics of the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. They have not studied how to understand the principles by which He co-operates with the human spirit. They have not trusted the heavenly covenant in an hour of darkness and of distress. Why, then, should we not think of the God of the Old Testament as the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who, being accessible for our spirits when in distress, does not hesitate to covenant with us to do those co-operative things which make for our own soul's redemption?—Western Christian Advocate.

INDIA PAPER ONLY—Size 2 1/2 x 4 1/4 inches x 3/8 inch

The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.

The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller.

It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength.

One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.

The size, 2 1/2 x 4 1/4 inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

The GEM TESTAMENT has been steadily growing in popular favor ever since its first appearance.

In size, 3 3/4 x 4 1/2 inches, it is not much larger than the Vest Pocket. It is also the only Testament of its size with large bold type and pronouncing text.

The edition on India paper is ideal, and we know of no better gift at the price than one in the finer bindings.

OBITUARIES.

BROWN.

Mrs. Mary Minerva Brown, wife of the late Eli W. Brown, passed to her reward March 29, 1929, being 86 years and 9 days old. She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Callie O. McKinney, and four sons, J. H., E. T., W. R., and C. O. Brown; 27 grandchildren, and 10 great-grandchildren. She had been a faithful member of Apples' Chapel since her girlhood, at which place burial services were held by the pastor, assisted by Revs. R. A. Whitten and J. H. Dollar, and her remains were laid to rest beside those of her husband in the Church cemetery. A large congregation was present and beautiful flowers covered the grave. The Lord comfort her loved ones.

T. J. GREEN.

FLEMING.

In memoriam to the memory of our beloved sister, companion and friend, Mrs. Ella Sipe Fleming, whom God, in His infinite wisdom, has called unto her rest, because of her ceaseless love of the Church of God, and her tireless efforts to further its work; her ever-present comfort in times of trial and sorrow; her faithful efforts and thoughtful deeds, we praise and honor her memory.

We give highest tribute to her Christian character, whose every trait is emblazoned in our hearts through many years of companionship in the work together; and we witness her loyal and whole-hearted devotion to her beloved Master.

She was a capable leader for us, guiding with a strong hand through the hard places and ever ready to lend a helping arm should the way prove hard, and always patient, trusting, ready for the path that lay ahead.

By the living of her Christian life, our sister has left a vacant place that we cannot hope to fill, and we mourn with her loved ones left behind, and join them with our sympathy; but, though mourning, we rejoice—rejoice that our companion is now secure in Him who was her all, with comfort for her soul and a laurel for her life, as:

“ . . . Sustained and soothed
By an unflinching trust, . . .
Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch
About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams.”

KERNODLE.

John Tobias Kernodle, of Ossipee, Alamance County, N. C., only son of the late George and Mary Kernodle, a prominent landowner and esteemed citizen of his community, passed away Thursday, April 11, 1929, at his home. He was 79 years of age on the 28th of last October. He was a refined gentleman, of gentle disposition and wise counsel, the senior deacon of the Berea Christian Church, from which the funeral was held at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon, April 13th, with interment in Bethlehem Christian Churchyard, by the side of his wife, Georgia Ann, who preceded him to the grave thirty years ago.

The funeral service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. G. E. Crutchfield, assisted by Dr. Daniel Albright Long, of Florence, S. C.; Dr. J. C. Atkinson, of Elon College, and Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, of Durham. The choir sang "Thy Grace is Sufficient," and Mrs. W. N. Huff, of Raleigh, with Mrs. John Barnwell, of Burlington, playing, sang "Face to Face" and "Faith, only Faith."

The children who survive are F. A. and Lynn D. Kernodle, of Elon College; J. E. Kernodle, of Greensboro; R. Junius Kernodle, of Durham; G. A. Kernodle, Mrs. W. L. Burke, and Mrs. H. C. Pollard, of Burlington. Truly a good man and a faithful servant of his Lord has gone to his reward.

X.

Yesterday thou wert good, and beautiful and true, but what of today? The judgment day is not yesterday, nor tomorrow, but now. The glory of life is neither in a golden yesterday, nor a glowing tomorrow. Thou mayest blast the glory of yesterday, and fill with gloom tomorrow by the black deed of today.

To deny one's self is more than a momentary spasm of self-denial. A woman did without a servant for a week to give the wages to foreign missions. It was good for missions, but it was hard on the servant. To deny one's self means self-renunciation. It means laying one's self on the altar in a perfect consecration.

Old heads do not grow on young shoulders. Saints are not made in a day. Character is a slow growth.

Being the baby of the home, he will be much missed, but may his loved ones find comfort in the words of Him who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

WINFREY.

James William Winfrey, son of Charles and Betty Winfrey, was born December 26, 1851, and died April 1, 1929, age 77 years, 3 months and 5 days. In 1864, when but twelve years of age, he professed religion and joined Union Christian Church, where his membership was at the time of his death. As a member, he had worshiped in four different Church buildings of the Union congregation. He was always very punctual in Church attendance and shrank from no official duty his Church called him to. He was a leader of song till declining health impaired his voice. For a number of years he represented his Church at the annual Conference and was known to all the ministers and many laymen of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference.

With the exception of three years, Bro. Winfrey lived his seventy-seven years at the old home in which he was born, a short distance from the town limits of Virgilina. He is survived by one sister, Miss Angie Winfrey, with whom he had lived at the old home since his mother's death in 1904. His brother, Scott, died in 1910. One nephew, Freddie Winfrey, and one niece, Mrs. Ray Frazier, one great-nephew and two great-nieces also survive.

Union Church, in the death of Bro. Winfrey, loses one of its most consecrated members. He was especially interested in the Orphanage and foreign missions and was a liberal supporter. For several weeks before his departure, he suffered intensely, but was always ready to testify that it was well with his soul. A large crowd attended his funeral at his Church. The burial was in Union Cemetery. C. E. NEWMAN.

CHANGES IN TURKEY.—

The world looks on with considerable interest at the changes which are so rapidly taking place in Turkey. For years the Christian world associated such adjectives as "terrible" and "unspeakable" whenever the name of the Turk was mentioned. Under Mustafa Kemal Pasha, radical changes have been introduced in outward customs, and Rev. Charles T. Riggs, of Constantinople, writing for the Missionary Review of the World, indicates that the spirit of change is touching the subtler and deeper things of Turkish life. He says:

"The new session of the Grand National Assembly began November 1st, and we are assured that at an early date the proposition to change the weekly day of compulsory rest from Friday to Saturday will be introduced in the form of a bill. Furthermore, we have the assurance that this measure has already in advance the approval of the Cabinet. It is being pushed by the Constantinople deputies, not for any religious motive whatever, but because of the difficulties banks have in trying to do business with the European banking system, when Europe's banks are closed on Sunday and open on Friday. The compulsory Friday holiday, introduced since 1923, is not really a religious measure at all; for Islam knows no day of rest, such as is indicated in the Judean-Christian system, but merely a cessation of other occupations at the noon hour on a Friday so as to facilitate faithful attendance at the mosque devotions on the 'day of assembly'—which is the meaning of the Moslem name for that day—Jum'a. So we may shortly have the seeming anomaly of a Mohammedan government compelling Christian and Moslem alike to close up their shops all day Sunday.

"Which way does the wind blow in Turkey today? There are other and subtler signs of a great, deep, pervading spiritual dissatisfaction and a looking around for something better. For the Turkish heart is profoundly religious by nature, and will not be content with merely throwing away what is outgrown; it must have satisfaction.

"And many of their thinkers are now studying the various religious systems of the world, and especially of Europe, to see what they can recommend to their countrymen. We must hope that they will not be satisfied with any cut-and-dried system, but will work out for themselves what will best suit their own genius, providing its center and core is the only Saviour of the world."

INSPIRATIONAL CONTACTS.—

"Now, Moses kept the flock of Jethro, his father-in-law, the priest of Midian: and he led the flock to the backside of the desert, and came to the mountain of God, even to Horeb. And the angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush: and he looked, and, behold, the bush burned with fire, and the bush was not consumed. And Moses said, I will now turn aside, and see this great sight, why the bush is not burnt. And when the Lord saw that he turned aside to see, God called unto him out of the midst of the bush, and said, Moses, Moses. And he said, Here am I. And He said, Draw not nigh hither: put off thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground. Moreover, He said, I am the God of thy father, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. And Moses hid his face; for he was afraid to look upon God.

"And the Lord said, I have surely seen the affliction of my people which are in Egypt, and have heard their cry by reason of their taskmasters; for I know their sorrows; and I am come down to deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians and to bring them up out of that land unto a good land and a large, unto a land flowing with milk and honey; unto the place of the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites. Now, therefore, behold, the cry of the children of Israel is come unto me: and I have also seen the oppression wherewith the Egyptians oppress them. Come now, therefore, and I will send thee unto Pharaoh, that thou mayest bring forth my people, the children of Israel, out of Egypt."

There is a freshness and power about the Old Testament stories which make them a source of perennial interest. They are also undergirded with a wealth of spiritual truth which makes them a veritable gold mine to those who are interested in the work of the kingdom. They set forth the eternal principles to which we must ever return. In this ancient story of the call of Moses is to be found a prime requisite, without which no great kingdom enterprise may hope to become a permanent success. It was about the most ambitious attempt of all Old Testament history. What was it which enabled Moses to carry it through with so remarkable a degree of success?

It could not have been a realization of the cruelty and injustice which the Hebrews were suffering at the hands of the Egyptians. That was enough to make the blood of any compassionate man boil with indignation. In fact, it had made the blood of Moses boil on an occasion forty years before, and had made him resort to momentary desperate measures. Moses had doubtless carried with him throughout the years the memory of the suffering and the crying need of his fellow-countrymen; but his realization of their need had not caused him to take any steps toward their ultimate relief. It was only when he stood in the presence of God, and when he himself was divinely appointed for the task, that he began to take steps for the deliverance of his brethren. His inspiration was born out of his communion with God; and from it was derived the strength which carried him through forty trying years.

One can hardly fail to see an analogy between the task to which Moses gave himself and the missionary task which confronts the Church in this present day. The future success of God's chosen people was entirely dependent upon their deliverance from Egypt. Their condition might be bettered slightly by a more kindly disposed ruler, or their bitterness might have been made a little more intolerable; but there could be no permanent relief until they were delivered from their bondage. The same is true of the non-Christian world. There can be no lasting improvement in a sin-bound world save through the deliverance which is offered in Jesus Christ. Nor can the Christ's ideal for the kingdom of heaven ever be realized save by the accomplishment of the missionary program of Jesus.

The realization of the need of the world is not a sufficient motive to inspire Christendom to the serious undertaking of the task. Emphasis upon the pitiable condition of those who are without Christ can induce us to sporadic efforts for their deliverance; but such a motive is not sufficient to keep us everlastingly working at the task. Sympathy, beautiful as it is, is not an unfailing dynamic. After so long a time the human heart becomes somewhat insensitive to the cry of suffering and the appeal of need. The only appeal to which the human heart never grows impervious is the appeal of love.

It is not even enough for one to feel that a certain enterprise is according to the will of God. Not many Christians and not many Churches but are convinced that the missionary work is the will of God. Moses had doubtless realized for years that God was not satisfied with the condition of His people, and had believed that God wanted conditions changed. The work of deliverance could begin only when Moses realized that not only did God desire that it should be done, but that God had appointed him, Moses, to do it. We must realize that God not only wants the gospel carried to all the world, but that it is His divine will that we should carry it.

Such a conviction can come only through communion with God. Most of us are aware of what God wants to be done, but we refuse to turn aside to see, lest we hear the voice of God appointing us to the task. Too many of us take the attitude of a certain lieutenant whose motto was, 'Never go near regimental headquarters unless you are sent for; if the colonel sees you, he will be certain to have something for you to do.' Jonah was by no means the last or only man to run away in the face of the missionary challenge. And he found, when he had fled the missionary call, that he had lost the blessedness of his communion with God.

NOTES-PERSONALS

The pastor, Rev. R. Lee House, Duke University, Durham, N. C., writes: "I am very much pleased over the improvement that has been made on Martha's Chapel. The Church has been newly underpinned; also painted, both on the inside and out; and the pews quite fittingly stained. Other improvements on the building and equipment are contemplated."

Should any of our Churches desire an assistant to the pastor to carry on the work of the Sunday School, Christian Endeavor and other enterprises of Christian education, and will address a request to the Editor of THE SUN, he will be glad to furnish the names of two very consecrated and well-prepared young women who have been trained and have had practical experience in Christian education and in work with young people.

It is learned with great pleasure that Miss Angie Crew, missionary to Japan, now home on furlough, is to be one of the teachers at the Elon School of Methods this summer. Also of considerable interest is the announcement that Dr. Edwin E. White, of New York, author of "The Story of Missions," and secretary of the board of missions of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A., is to be present as one of the teachers. It will be worth coming to the summer school to hear Dr. White and Angie Crew.

Rev. J. W. Barrett, pastor of Hopewell Church, writes encouragingly of the work at Hopewell: "Our Sunday School numbers about one hundred and thirty. We average about ninety-five. Our Church attendance is from fifty to one hundred. Our prayer meetings will average about thirty. We have a good Christian Endeavor organization numbering about thirty. They are very active, and certainly have good meetings. We also have a Woman's Missionary Society and a Ladies' Aid Society. These are all doing not a large but a good work." Hopewell Church, one of our youngest, is showing signs of strength, power, growth, progress.

Writing under date of April 25th, Rev. G. C. Crutchfield, United Church, Lynchburg, says: "We have made wonderful progress in raising the money to pay off the Church debt. We only have a little more than $300 to raise now, and I see no reason why we should not get this amount. We are continuing our campaign and hope and expect within a few days to raise the full amount. Then we plan to dedicate our Church later." This is gratifying, indeed, since our Lynchburg Church has been handicapped with heavy indebtedness, and the faithful ones there certainly deserve credit for their loyalty and devotion to the Church and their Lord.

A devoted member of the Christian Church, and one who cannot stay in touch with the denomination except through his Church paper, under date of April 20th sent Circulation Manager C. D. Johnston $100 to aid THE CHRISTIAN SUN by giving it a year to fifty homes that are unable to subscribe for it. This, indeed, is gratifying, and is a gift that means something to the whole Church and every enterprise of it, because when people get and read THE CHRISTIAN SUN they become more interested in and more helpful to every interest and enterprise of the Church. May our dear brother live long and may his kind and generosity increase in the world.

Dr. James H. Lightbourne, Troy, Ohio, kindly correcting us in a statement in THE SUN of April 18th as to the missionary offering in his Church, says that the $526 which we reported as a total offering for missions from his Church was really an offering from his Sunday School, and it was not for "missions," but for "foreign missions" only, and the total offering for foreign missions from Sunday School and Church, etc., was $637. The home mission offering in his Church comes in June. At any rate, we congratulate Dr. Lightbourne and his good people for their missionary zeal. There is no wonder that his Church goes forward in its great and good influence under such progressive, zealous leadership.

We extend our heartiest congratulations to our good friend, Miss Nellie Rae Sledge, one of the active members of our Christian Endeavor Society in the Roanoke, Ala., Christian Church, and add our hope that she wins out in the State contest. From the Roanoke Leader: "Randolph County's champion high school speaker, Miss Nellie Rae Sledge, triumphed in the district meet in Ashland last Friday night over seven competitors—three young women and four young men. This makes her the representative of the Fifth Congressional District in the State-wide contest to be held in Birmingham the evening of April 26th. This is high honor for this popular Roanoke girl, and we all hope she wins in the State meet. Miss Sledge is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Sledge."

Rev. E. B. White, of Dendron, Va., writes: "Beloved, if you would climb the highest places, carry off the richest prizes, get the most enjoyment out of life, and have the sublimest old age, the entire development of your life and character must be under the governing principle of love. Love is the greatest thing in the world. It enlarges the heart, it expels evil, and it demands expression and action. Yes, love expels the love of sin, the love of the world, and the hatred of man. Let us try to be like our Blessed Redeemer and determine to see, as far as we possibly can, the best and not the worst in our fellows. Nothing is eternal but that which is done for God and others. As our kind, loving, sympathetic Heavenly Father thinks of us in our weakness and destitution, so we should think of the weak, the tired and the burdened, and render sympathy and help. Our Lord organized His Church for this definite aim. Therefore, let us serve in the spirit of the Master who 'went about doing good.'"

It was a joy to add Bethlehem Sunday School, Alamance County, N. C., to the growing number of schools giving a once-a-month offering to missions. Also the mission offering has come in from this Church and the promise of continued effort and co-operation in behalf of the mission work. Under the fine, promising leadership of Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Patton, this Church is giving evidence of progress and development along the lines of Church growth and kingdom enlargement. When the missionary spirit is awakened in any Church, that Church begins a renewed life of activity and zeal for the cause of our Lord. One of Bethlehem's sons is now our missionary worker in our mountain Churches and expects to dedicate his life to missionary work. With this great gift to the Church and the kingdom, and under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, we look for a new day of power, prestige and progress in dear old Bethlehem. Few of our rural Churches have greater prospects and possibilities and a wider field of usefulness and service than this Church.

We felicitate our good people of the Liberty (Vance) Church in their achievement in building a parsonage right near their Church, that they may have their preacher close by. Not many of our rural Churches are blessed with parsonages, and many of them could, if they would, have this valuable addition to their plant and community. The Liberty people, when they got at it, did the job beautifully, and an ample house with spacious halls and porches and pastor's study, reception hall, and all that goes to make a pastor's home convenient and complete, they have put in their building. Their parsonage would do credit to any Church, and equals many of our best city parsonages. Congratulations to Liberty Church and its progressive people! When THE SUN's editor went to that community some years ago to dedicate the present house of worship, the late lamented Dr. W. T. Herndon being the pastor, he was told that "Uncle" Wellons, of sacred memory, began preaching in a little log-cabin in a community that was destitute of Churches and Church membership, and later was instrumental in building the Church across the road from the log-cabin. The present house, which has had additions since it was dedicated, is therefore the third in succession since "Uncle" Wellons began preaching there, and is now one of our strongest and best rural Churches. Rev. H. E. Crutchfield is the beloved and highly esteemed pastor, and we congratulate him on having such a nice preacher's home into which he is to move at an early date, since the work of building the parsonage is just now completed.

EDUCATION BILL.

Although not a member of the Committee on Education of the House of Representatives, Congressman William C. Hammer, of North Carolina, asked to file this statement in the hearings on H. R. 7, held April 25-28 and May 2, 1928:

"I am sincerely interested in seeing this measure enacted, for it would help the plain folks very much. I am a Southerner, and as such I look out for safeguarding of the principle of States' rights, but I cannot see where this measure, which would give the States the help of the Federal government and leave the actual administration of education strictly to the States, would interfere with State autonomy any more than the good roads act or the Volstead act, and I am for both of them. Let's be consistent!

"Most of all, I am for this bill because I want the people of the rural communities to have the same advantages as those in the big cities. Most of the experimental schools now are conducted either in connection with big city school systems or else in high-priced private schools. I want some of the results of all this extensive research to be made available for the poorer people in the rural districts, too. That is why I am for this measure."

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

THE UNIVERSAL NEED OF JESUS.

BY E. STANLEY JONES.

"And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me."—John 12:32.
 "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature."—Mark 16:15.

While all giving for religious purposes in America has been going up during recent years, the giving for the missionary end of religion has been gradually slipping. On the foreign mission fields many schools and hospitals and Churches have been closed and missionaries have been dismissed. We are in the backwash of a lack of interest in the world. After the World War we became disillusioned, and withdrew to ourselves, and became interested in things rather than in people.

At the center of it all is the fact that we are not quite certain that Christ is necessary to human life. If we were certain, I would not have to plead the cause of Christian missions—for the very essence of the gospel is the giving of ourselves for others.

Idolatry is simply a yearning for God to be near. The old Hindus first worshiped three gods, then thirty-three, then 330 gods, then 33,000 gods, then 33,000,000 gods. They added god to god, hoping to find a satisfactory one. The only reason we do not also add god to god is because Christ showed us what God is like. God is Christ-like. The answer to the mystery of the universe is God; the answer to the mystery of God is Christ.

The only reason we do not have the thousands of superstitions of India and the rest of Asia is because a man once came and brushed aside superstition. That man was Christ.

I have looked into the soul of the East, and I have found it is empty of all but yearning.

Men in Christ find satisfaction for their yearning; men without Christ do not find it. The whole world is a great area of human need. No one in East or in West is getting along well without Christ.

The human heart is made for God, as the eye is made for light, as the ear is made for hearing, as the esthetic nature is made for beauty.

The Eastern nations have resented the constant portrayal of their worst side. They do not like the lower parts of their life to be flaunted; America would not like the lower parts of her life flaunted across the world. I have learned to love and respect India, and yet I know that her needs are still there. I wish I could tell you that the caste system was broken, but 60,000,000 outcasts are still there. I wish it were otherwise, but superstition and ignorance and disease are still in India.

We missionaries see as deep a need as ever, but we try to keep her from being degraded in the eyes of the world. But we see that the very fiber of men's thinking is being changed by the gospel in India and elsewhere in the East.

We see the "Christ of the Beginnings" everywhere. We find Buddhists and Hindus who have been led by the Christian example and spirit to found orphanages. We find individuals who try to live according to Christ's way, though they do not profess His name; we find the spirit of Christ influencing legislation, making more happy the place of women and children.

Everywhere we see the beginnings of Christ's influence and an interest in His teachings. We are not satisfied with beginnings only, but we rejoice in them.

Is Christ to be also the "Christ of the Final Word?"

Is the gospel concerning Christ a religion, or the religion, or religion itself? We believe that it is religion itself. We believe that the Orient which has now the beginning will accept Christ also as "religion," as the "final word."

A learned professor of philosophy recently said to me, "You know we in Europe are looking for a new religion." I asked him what essential he thought this new religion would have, and he replied, "The scientific attitude—the love of truth; a humanism—a love of humans."

But, as I told the professor, those are essentials of Christianity, Christ had the scientific attitude, He sought the truth and condemned the superstitions and untruths everywhere about Him. And was there ever a man more in love with humans than was Christ?

Christ not only loved "humanity," He loved people, personally and individually. The terms "the least," "the last," and "the lost," were constantly on His lips.

No, Christianity is not afraid of science. All we ask, that it be sufficiently scientific. All we say is to go the limit and seek the facts. When we get all the facts we will come out at Christ. The more scientific the attitude to life grows, the more masterful Christ becomes in the world.

The gospel comes out of life, it speaks to life; it comes out of reality, it speaks to reality.

We believe that Christ shows us God and can bring us to God. We believe that He is the "final word." Since the center of the gospel is "to give," we must share our knowledge of Christ with needy people everywhere—and we must share everything we have.

Let Christ have full play in your soul and you will be a missionary or stop being a Christian.

I found people in South America in my three months' tour deeply interested in Christianity if the gospel were presented not in dogmatism and traditionalism, but as a vital way of life. Many thousands of the educated peoples have broken away from their traditional faith and are following various new cults or are classified as agnostics and atheists.

These men and women flocked to our meetings, and we found in them the same yearning for something that would satisfy their souls as we had found in the Orient. The need for Christ is the one universal need.—Boston Transcript.

MINISTRY OF THE PRINTED PAGE.

In every land, missionaries find that one of the most effective, economical and, in some instances, the only way of reaching the multitude, is by the seed-sowing of the literature pioneer. Last year the total world sales of gospel literature by the people that this journal represents amounted to $4,861,000.

Mexico: During the past four years, over 1,700 followers of Christ were won largely through the ministry of the printed page circulated by faithful colporteurs in Mexico.

Brazil: In South Brazil, 200 people last year found Christ through evangelistic colporteur work.

China: The sale of the Chinese Signs of the Times amounted last year to 1,220,000 copies. Fifty-eight tons of paper were used.

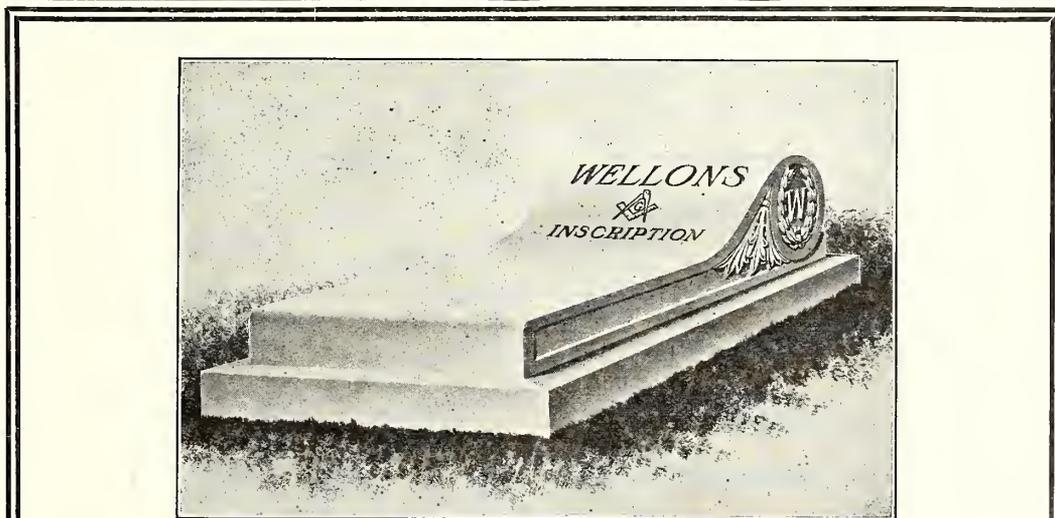

Siam: In Siam, we published a 10,000 edition of the Siamese Anti-Narcotic Magazine. In ten days these were all sold and 5,000 more ordered.

Battakland: In Battakland, nineteen colporteurs in a short time sold 1,700 Battak and 600 Malay books.

Japan: This has been the best summer Japan has ever had in gospel colporteur work. Five students earned their full scholarships. One colporteur obtained an order for 95 copies of a large religious book, one to be placed in each of the prison libraries in Japan.

Philippines: Our annual literature sales in the Philippines now amount to more than $75,000.

Through the efforts of the Mission Publishing Extension Fund to establish printing centers in each of the great language areas of the world, fifty-seven such centers have been well equipped. One mission superintendent writes: "I cannot tell you how much we appreciate the help that has been given us. It is wonderful what united effort will accomplish."—The Watchman.

Monument to Rev. J. W. Wellons, D. D.

The above cut represents the proposed monument to be placed at the grave of Rev. James Willis Wellons, D. D. Besides this, the plot is to be inclosed with a granite curbing and posts. The combination presents a most attractive design. Elaborate lettering is to be placed on the monument. Already the fund has been started. The cost, completed, is to be $865. Will you send your contribution to Mrs. L. E. Carlton, treasurer, 414 North Lombardy Street, Richmond, Va.?

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE CHURCH A GOING CONCERN.

Whenever we "join" and "belong," and wherever, we just naturally like to be a part of a "going concern." This applies as much to a Church as it does to a business, a corporation, or a fraternal order. Human nature is such that we take pride and delight in being a member, and a part, of a going concern; a part with those who do things.

This thought was made emphatic recently when a member of a rural Church said to the writer: "With our new pastor, we are looking up, going forward and beginning to do things. This makes us very happy, and we feel better. Under the leadership or administration of a former pastor or two, we were told that we were doing well enough and getting along all right. We were not stirred, nor urged to any progressive methods or activities. Things are different now, and we feel like we belong to a Church that does things." One of the strangest phenomena that this writer is acquainted with is the seeming unwillingness on the part of many pastors to do anything for any enterprise of their Church if it means urging their people to make sacrifices for their Lord, to practice self-denial, and to give of their time and their means for kingdom service. We know pastors who are delighted if somebody will get some of their members to subscribe for THE CHRISTIAN SUN, but those same pastors do not feel it their duty or their privilege to urge their members, in private and in public, to subscribe for and read THE CHRISTIAN SUN. We know pastors who are delighted if a missionary society is in their Church and is doing things for missions. It is the joy of their heart to see such societies moving forward, paying their dues, raising their mission money and going forward; and yet, those same pastors will have in their charge other Churches that do not have societies, and they will go along for months and years and do nothing to organize the women and to lead them in the missionary work. And so of every enterprise of kingdom service and enlargement. They love to see their people do these things, if their people will just go ahead and do them, but they do not consider it a part of their ministry or pastoral responsibility to lead their people to activity and to giving for Church enterprise.

Recently a pastor was in the editor's office talking about his work. He was radiant, joyous and happy. He said his people were going forward, were united, and were doing things. They were talking missions and doing something for missions. They were talking Church enterprises and doing something for the Church enterprises of charity and benevolence. They were improving their Church plant and equipment and were giving liberally to pay for the same. He was happy and they were happy. They were all members of a "going concern," of a Church that was alive with activity and zeal, and were being urged by their pastor to the practice of self-denial and real contribution from their daily earnings, for the kingdom of their Lord.

Another pastor was talking with the editor recently. He had been instrumental in leading his Church on by constant urging to largely reduce the Church debt, to give a once-a-month offering in the Sunday School to missions, to make an Easter offering for missions, to make donations to the college, to increase the Thanksgiving offering for the Orphanage. He was happy, and they were happy. They were members of a going concern. This experience can be repeated over and over again. Pastors are mistaken in thinking that they lose out, cripple their influence and usefulness, by urging their people to give in the name of their Lord, to practice self-denial in the name of Him who said, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, take up his cross daily and follow me."

This writer has not found a Church yet that complained of the pastor for leading the Church on to loyalty and devotion for the enterprises of the Church, or for urging them to give for kingdom service. The very opposite, however, is true, and the complaint invariably comes, when there is complaint, that we want a pastor to lead us who will stir us up and urge us to do in the name and for the sake of our Lord. While we are alive and have red blood circulating through our system, we just naturally like to be members of a going concern, and the happiest Church members and people we meet are those who belong to Churches that are really doing things, and whose pastors, alert, zealous, energetic and active, are persistent and insistent, day in and day out, in trying to lead their people on to new activities and larger undertakings, bigger and better programs for the Church and for the kingdom. J. O. A.

THE KINGDOMS OF GOD AND OF MAN.

In a book by T. H. P. Sailer, this paragraph occurs: "Man exists for the kingdom of God. His life has no meaning apart from it. The development of character is not an end, but a means for the spread of the kingdom."

Certainly is it true that man reaches his highest glory, and self-realization only when and as he relates himself to and finds his proper place in the kingdom of God. It is eminently true that man's life has no meaning apart from this larger kingdom for which he exists. This writer recently heard the secretary of a Y. M. C. A. in a large city say that in his dealings with hundreds and thousands of young men he could not settle any of their problems apart from God. If one came to him with a problem that was burdensome and difficult, and that one did not believe in God or would not submit to a solution of His problem in the light of God's love and teaching, he, the secretary, was always unable to help such a one. Our human problems and difficulties find their solution only as human beings with such problems relate themselves to the kingdom for which they exist. We need not talk of character for character's sake, and humanity for humanity's sake, and the individual for the individual's sake. Such talk is mere twaddle, and meaningless. Back of character and above it, for which character itself exists and towards which it must open, and on which it must be founded, if it is to count, is the God who created all, in whom we live and for whom we must live, if our living is to have meaning.

There are men in plenty who put their business before their God, and think of their business and the kingdom of their business more than they think of God, making in their own minds the kingdom of their business a larger affair than the kingdom of their God. Such an attitude is fatal. The Book of books, which means more to the world than any book ever written, significantly opens with the avowal: "In the beginning, God"; and then that Book proceeds, not only to keep God in the beginning, but keep God first and foremost in all of its pages and pursuits.

So have those characters done which have meant most to themselves and to the world. Apart from God, Moses and David, and Peter and Paul have no meaning for us, for the kingdom that they sought to build up, and the kingdom which all have sought to build up, whose life and labor were filled with joy and crowned with success, was not a kingdom of their own but the kingdom of God. The individual, the Church, the Sunday School, the business, corporation, may well ask itself to what extent is the kingdom we are building, co-terminous with and a contributor to the kingdom of God?

Again we say, neither the individual life, nor community life, nor any other life has meaning and weight and worth apart from the kingdom of God. J. O. A.

MISSIONARY RALLIES.

The groups of women in the North Carolina Woman's Conference finished their spring rallies, or one-day school of missions, at Liberty (Vance) Church, April 25th. The last three in order were the Randolph group, held at Ramseur Saturday, the 20th, Mrs. I. H. Foust, leader; the Chatham-Wake group, at Chapel Hill, Tuesday, the 23rd, Mrs. G. H. Leonard, leader; and the Vance-Warren group, at Liberty, Thursday, the 25th, Miss Margaret Alston, leader.

The attendance at the Ramseur meeting was not large, and the number of Churches represented was disappointing to the leader, but there was the most intense interest in the program which was splendidly carried out, and the entertaining society certainly was an inspiration to all who came to the sessions. Rev. J. C. Cummings, pastor of the Church, was present and conducted an inspiring devotional service, using as his topic, "The Constraining Love of Christ." The sketches of the missionaries presented during the day, the music rendered during the services, and the elaborate luncheon served by the Hostess Society were all helpful and thoroughly enjoyed. Two new societies were reported and represented in this rally, and the faithful work of Mrs. Foust, the leader, is telling in results, and we yet look for this to be one of the larger groups in their annual meetings in the years to come. It was a good day and a meeting worth while.

The meeting at Chapel Hill was full of interest and enthusiasm through both sessions. Six societies were represented and many visitors were present, and each one who was assigned a part on the program was present and contributed materially to the blessings and benefits of the day. Rev. B. J. Howard, the pastor of the Chapel Hill Church; Rev. J. A. Denton, with a delegation from another Church, and Dr. W. S. Alexander, of Elon College, were the ministers present who contributed, with their presence and counsel, much to the interest and helpfulness of the day. Mrs. Leonard had certainly worked faithfully to make the rally a success, and all present enjoyed a full, active and helpful program. A beautiful and an abundant luncheon was served.

The rally at Liberty, being the last, was by no means the least, but the largest in attendance of any of the entire Conference. Miss Alston, the leader, had been very zealous in working up the meeting and inviting attendants from Churches without societies, and her labors were rewarded. The pastor, Rev. H. E. Crutchfield, was present, with a broad smile on his face, to welcome to his Church such a gathering. Rev. D. M. Spence, pastor of Henderson Church, was present and delivered a most illuminating address on our Japan work and workers; and Rev. R. Lee House, of Duke University, Durham, N. C., pastor of a group of Churches, was present and conducted a devotional service. The other speakers appointed to their parts, save one, were present. An abundant luncheon was graciously served and every moment of the day from 10:30 till 4 P. M. was employed and enjoyed in the interest of missions and the kingdom of our Lord.

In the Virginia Conference four rallies were held, and in the North Carolina Conference seven, all of which the writer attended and enjoyed immensely. If all the work of the Christian Church were going forward with that peace and harmony, and progress and success that are attending and are characteristic of our woman's work, the whole Church would have occasion to take new courage and press forward with larger hope. We estimate that at least a thousand people attended these eleven missionary rallies held at the different Churches in April, and the great majority of them had a real day of instruction, education and edification in our missionary needs and problems. Surely, the rallies accomplished this year untold good in kingdom contribution and enlargement.

MISSIONARY ATMOSPHERE.

If immigrants used our language, home missionaries could reach their hearts. If they come to our land, they should come to our language, our customs, our Bible, and our Christ. It is a travesty on Christianity to go to foreign lands to Christianize the pagan and heathen world, while we permit them to come and set up their own customs and break down the faith of our fathers. Our weakness is here—not there. We need a religion at home virile in ethics, angelic in spirit, divine in doctrine, and mighty in operation. Church members who indulge in drink, gambling, licentiousness, graft and dishonesty poison the atmosphere and defile the sanctuary of God. Profession will not compensate for life, and money is bad that does not represent character. City councils spend thousands on sanitation and take no part in removing moral evils. Religion is left too much to individual life. Religion should take on a community spirit of great proportion and force. War becomes a public sentiment, a national thought, a common concern, a gigantic movement, an all-embracing atmosphere that compels individuals to recognize its might. The mission spirit ought to be that kind of a power, creating an atmosphere all its own, and wielding an influence as subtle and as potent as the atmosphere men breathe. The atmosphere, by its density or rareness, its low or high temperature, its humidity or dryness, its motion or stillness, influences men and things most wonderfully. The spirit of any public sentiment or movement may affect men without their volition. The spirit of missions might be so great, so intense, so spiritual as to affect a whole community. Revival meetings do; Pentecost did; and Pentecostal waves have touched the Church at intervals since then. It struck New England in Jonathan Edwards' day; rose again with Moody and Sanky; and again through Gipsy Smith and Billy Sunday.

The early Church was wholly missionary. They went everywhere preaching the word. The gospel then was nothing unless it was going out to others; it is nothing now unless it meets the foreigner or goes to the foreigner. Pentecost was the home mission effort; the people were there from seventeen countries—it was doing foreign mission work through home mission effort. A home mission revival always means foreign mission service. The Antioch movement was the foreign mission movement, and that did not wane till Paul preached in Europe. Western civilization is the fruit of missions. "Like a mighty army moves the Church of God," conquering the world for Jesus Christ. Gratitude should inspire the Church with missionary zeal, liberal contributions and volunteers; but foreign missions will never prosper till the home mission spirit is set on fire by the Holy Ghost.

What made Pentecost? The promise of Jesus and the Church in prayer till that promise was fulfilled. Sound and flame and the Holy Ghost made the whole Church speak with other tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance. Preachers have tried to talk missions into the Church. What the Church needs is prayer—protracted prayer, waiting in prayer, no-denial prayer, promise-claiming prayer, business-stopping prayer, agonizing prayer. We begin at the wrong end of missions in the Church. We try to raise money and fail to raise men and women; we tug at their purse instead of their heart.

THE MISSIONARY OFFERING.

It was the Southern Convention, and not the Mission Secretary or the Mission Board, that sent the appeal for missions direct to Churches, Sunday Schools and individuals, and at this time of the year. In many quarters we are hearing it that if the mission appeal could be made in the fall, or at some other time than now, there would be a more liberal response, for the people would have more with which to give. But when could the Convention put the appeal before the Churches and people if not now? In the early fall, the Churches will be busy raising and sending in their Conference apportionment, no part of which will or can under the present arrangement go to missions. Then in November and December, the appeal is made for the Orphanage. In July, August, September and October, for education.

It was the plan, as laid down by the Convention, to have seasons of instruction, information, and inspiration and giving for each enterprise of the Church, so that all the Churches might know the needs and the opportunities of each.

Many Churches are doing their best, and we believe all will do something. Now is the time to emphasize missions and give to missions if we are to reach the $45,000 called for by the Convention and set as our goal this year. Thus far we have reached $27,651.07 and yet have $17,348.96 to raise.

Some Churches we know have just taken an offering indifferently and with little concern or effort. Oh, if they only knew and felt! Where all the people are urged and given the opportunity, the offerings are gratifying. But now, while time is pressing and needs are crying, every Church and every individual in every Church should give something.

AN URGENT APPEAL.

A few thousand people have built and supported Piedmont Junior College mostly by small gifts given annually, and some more often; but the tests of financing a growing college gets bigger, especially a college whose alumni are still small in number, the oldest of them only in middle life, and most of them in professions that offer greater opportunities for leadership than accumulations of worldly goods.

In a recent week, newspapers announced gifts of ten millions of dollars to educational institutions, but all went to colleges and universities old in years and rich in invested funds and in wealthy alumni and friends. For six years it has been a struggle to cope with the mounting costs and limited donations toward our building program, while at the same time meeting the necessary annual expenses of the growing institution doing vital work. Of course, there were frantic appeals. Had you felt the responsibility of Piedmont Junior College life upon you; had you known the vital need, as did the president and local board of trustees, you would have heeded these appeals.

Last July the board of trustees launched a plan for retiring the debt—a plan that is being carried out as fast as the details can be arranged, together with the necessity for funds for payment of current items and for putting the college on a definite cash basis. Part of the fund has come. Many of you helped as never before, some of you multiplying your usual gifts by twos, by threes, even by tens. But there is still lacking over half the amount that should have been subscribed and paid. This half we must secure. We must take this opportunity to go on a cash basis, supply bills must be paid regularly. Teachers must be paid promptly. We cannot fall short of an objective which is so vital to the continuation of the institution.

I most earnestly appeal again to you to help Piedmont Junior College out of its financial strain. Will not each one of you help as generously as you may before May 10th? I wonder if you can realize what joy there will be at Piedmont Junior if every salary is paid and every promise met in full by May 10th. Piedmont Junior has not even funds for a widespread campaign for greater funds. I wish that I might come in your home and tell you of Piedmont, but that we cannot afford. I am making this appeal through THE CHRISTIAN SUN and sending out letters to all friends of the institution because of limited means to do the work in a larger way. This sort of an appeal should be heeded by all friends of the institution. Our budget for our school was fifteen thousand dollars. We have still five thousand to be provided for—$3,432.50 will be needed in order to pay the salaries of our teachers for this year, and a deficit of two thousand dollars has been carried over from last year on teachers' salaries, and this is still due them as individuals.

Will you not help us in a generous way to raise this five thousand dollars by May 10th? By sending any amount you can, from one dollar up, on our current expenses for this year, so we can start in next year with a clean slate, so far as our teachers are concerned? Send your contributions at once to the President of Piedmont Junior College, Wadley, Ala.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The majority of the human race is concerned about making a living more than anything else. The millions who till the soil think of making a living as they plant, cultivate and gather in the harvest. The millions who work in mills, shops and stores perform their daily tasks as a means of making a living. Other millions in official or professional positions strive to make a living. It is the thought of the world, the motive of service, the energy that moves the wheels of productive energy and keeps mankind busy through the years and the centuries. "I have to work to make a living," is in the mind of men as they go to their daily toil. Sometimes they seem to envy those who can live without work; yet work is the normal condition of mankind. Jesus said, "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work" (John 5:17).

All nature works. The sun shines, the earth revolves, the streams flow, the flowers bloom, the trees grow, the animal world is busy all the time, and man is, too. It would be a dull world if work were to stop. There is nothing so hard as doing nothing; and there is nothing so satisfactory as honest work. It may seem hard, but it is far better than leisure, which becomes a curse if not rightly employed. Unused leisure is the poorest asset man ever has. Idleness is what they used to call the devil's workshop. It is the field where many evils grow. Christian civilization, in its progress, suggests a change of emphasis in the mind of mankind. The increased methods and means of production have made it easier to make a living than it was in more primitive stages of society.

This suggests that the emphasis should be lessened on "making a living," and increased on "making a life." Life, after all, is the more important, because it will last forever, while making a living may last less than a hundred years. The more important obligation is the making of a life rather than making a living. The time should be divided between "making a living" and "making a life." Games to fill up leisure hours are in the line of waste of opportunity for cultivating those finer talents that enter into best life. The cultivation of social life in its best aspects—visits to the sick, the helpless, the aged, the poor, the outcast; many social fields are inviting for those who are willing to give their thought, their sympathy, their means, their very heart to others. The world hungers for human sympathy and leisure hours can improve life by devoting time to others. Jesus went about doing good, and we can find no better way to improve life. As it gets easier to make a living, it gives more time for making a life; and that should be done instead of spending the extra time and means in increasing luxuries and games. There is almost as much spent on luxuries in this day as on living, and many of these luxuries do not improve life. Shorter hours for labor give more hours for educational, social, and religious improvement; but observation shows that the concern for making a living still is greater than concern for making a life. Making a good life is more important than making a good living.

ELON LETTER.

I have another letter—from one of the devout, consecrated, saintly women of our Church. "I enclose you my mite for the college, and regret it cannot be more. I wish I was able to make a special donation many times larger than I am sending you."

Then she asks this pertinent question: "I am interested in all our Church enterprises; but why have three separate calls from different sources for these causes?"

I wrote her that the Southern Christian Convention had voted it that way, but that perhaps it was a half-way measure they had adopted, and that eventually one call would be made from one source for all our enterprises.

Our sister has asked a hard question, and one that must be faced continually by our people till they have solved it intelligently and on sound business principles.

There can perhaps be small doubt that all our enterprises are mostly adjuncts, and that they are necessary for the advancement of the king, and that therefore they should be supported in proportion to their needs as determined by the leaders of the denomination. When these needs have been determined, why should not one call be made to support the entire program? That is the question our sister raises, and she is right in raising it.

As it is, we have adopted a competitive system of operating our enterprises, plus the expense of personal solicitation. It is demoralizing our entire Church and weakening its appeal. It is a situation requiring mature and prayerful consideration. It may be we have allotted our enterprises too much, or that we have too many enterprises, but something ought to be done to relieve the competition of one enterprise with another and to avoid the heavy overhead involved in our present method.

That is what my correspondent has in mind. She is loyal, but she is perplexed—and she is not alone.

W. A. HARPER.

FRANKLIN, VA.

The pendulum of time has swung toward a new type of evangelism. Christian leaders are realizing that the methods of a few years ago are not sufficient to win others for Christ. High pressure put upon one to make a decision does not long help the individual to be a great spiritual pressure for God. We must not think of eliminating the preaching from an evangelistic campaign, but we must consider how futile is the preaching of the Word without the doing of the Word.

"Be ye not hearers only, but doers of the Word." To that end, we are in the midst of a great evangelistic campaign that stresses both phases of evangelism. In the evening, Dr. Roy C. Helfenstein is preaching sermons that are instructive and powerful; these are followed with sessions on personal work, and men and women are sent forth to win others for the Master. Thus they become both hearers and doers of God's Word. Indeed, the kingdom-enlistment method is superior to revivals that stress only the preaching of the Word. Men must follow the Master to be like Him—and that carries us to the intense personal work of His life, when on every opportune occasion He sought to win men and women to God.

The present campaign in the Franklin community is laying its major emphasis upon re-enlistment rather than "enlistment"; seeking to get men and women who have become inactive in religious work to reconsecrate their lives to Christ and the Church. The situation in Franklin is different from that of most communities, in that it is estimated that at least 90 per cent of the people are affiliated with some Church. This situation makes it necessary to stress this new phase of evangelism, having for its objective re-enlistment of delinquent Church members, as there are hundreds of men and women in the community who, though members of the Churches, very seldom attend worship or contribute to the support of the Church.

Following is one of the re-enlistment cards: "Reconsecration pledge: In appreciation of the privilege of living in God's world and enjoying the blessings of God's providence, I hereby reconsecrate my life to my Saviour and to my Church. From this time forward, it is my definite purpose to live a sincere Christian life as an active member of my Church."

THE SUN LETTER.

How many will help us reach the three thousand subscribers to THE CHRISTIAN SUN by June 1st? Last week we had 2,754 names. We added this week fifteen new subscribers. We dropped two. Our list now stands at 2,767. We feel encouraged when we can climb. Two hundred and thirty-three new names will push us up to the three thousand mark by June 1st. Let everybody get busy and send us clubs of five new subscribers for $7.50. Every Church ought to send us one or more clubs.

One kind friend has made it possible for us to send THE SUN to fifty persons who are not able to pay for it. We can send it to thirty more on that list. If you know of some one who is afflicted and shut in but would enjoy reading THE SUN and not able to pay for it; or some person who is old and feeble and not able to pay for it, won't you send their names to me? We will be glad to put their names on this list until I take up the thirty left on the list. If you will do this you will be doing two kind deeds—you will help the managing editor and you will be doing a kind deed to the one who gets THE SUN. You certainly know of some one in your Church who would be worthy to be entered in this list. We will appreciate your help.

THE MAN AS PASTOR.

Often we think of the man who fills the pulpit as one bearing many names, or titles, such as Dr., Rev., Evangelist, Minister, Shepherd, Parson, Pastor. These are a partial list of the titles he may bear, but there is no title or name so dear and sacred as pastor; and remember all are not pastors. "And he gave some apostles," and some "prophets," and some "evangelists," and some "pastors," and "teachers," for the perfecting of the saints for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ" (Eph. 4:11-12).

"So we being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another, having their gifts differing according to the grace that is given us" (Rom. 12:5-6). So we see that all are not called to be pastors, but we know that the ability of the pastor is a direct gift from God. There are great preachers and evangelists who are not gifted for a pastor. It takes all to work for the perfecting of the ministry. When Israel had backslidden and gone off into sin, God spoke to the prophet Jeremiah, saying, "Go, proclaim these words, Return, thou backslidden Israel, saith the Lord, and I will not cause mine anger to fall upon you, for I am merciful, and I will give you pastors, according to mine heart, which shall feed you with knowledge and understanding" (Jer. 3:12, 15).

Surely, then, the pastor is a man after God's own heart. Today there are many men and women who are trying to fill their places in the home, in the Church, and in business, who are overburdened with the pressing demands of the day. They would do their duty by their homes, their Churches and their business, but the demands are so many and so exacting that they know not whither to turn. Courage fails, faith wavers, and they are tempted to give up in despair. Blessed are they who at such times know that in quietness and confidence they may turn to their pastor, who shall feed them with knowledge and understanding. There is no greater inspiration, nothing that can lift man higher than the realization that he is a partner with God in shaping the world, in creating it anew for Christ Jesus. Then we are persuaded to believe that the pastor is the five-talented man, having the greatest opportunity of service, and with it the responsibility of faithfully discharging his duty.

We think of Paul as perhaps the greatest of all characters, save our Lord and Saviour; and while we know him as an apostle, chosen to fill the place vacated by Judas, we see in him a real pastor. Paul gave his best in sacrificial service, and we hear him as he goes back to the Church at Ephesus, in humility and tears, when he says, "I have kept back nothing that was profitable unto you, but have showed you, and taught you publicly, and from house to house.

We all enjoy good gospel sermons, preached under the power of the Holy Spirit and from the sacred desk, but some of the most powerful and effective sermons are preached in the home or by the wayside. The man sent from God can go into the homes with a deeper message than he can into the pulpit. When Jesus wanted to teach His disciples, He took them away from the crowd, and there, alone, taught them face to face, realizing that the world could not understand or appreciate His teaching. Just so, we truly believe that the pastor can go into the homes, and there with heart-to-heart talks, the sweet hour of prayer, and Christian fellowship, teach in a more effective way a higher standard of Christian living. It is in the home that he may help erect family altars. He may teach the right mode of living. He may give advice in their troubles, and sympathy in their sorrows. The pastoral visits are to the home what sunshine is to the rose. Happy is the man who has been called as pastor of a people who can look to him as their spiritual adviser at all times and under all circumstances. When he is able to lead them and feed them with knowledge and understanding he has attained to the highest mark of his calling.

The "ideal pastor" is one who has heard and obeyed the Divine call; one who has been given a passion for the evangelization of the world; one who has no dependence upon self, but holds Christ the dynamic of all power; one who is a man of prayer and stands before God as an intercessor for his people; one with the spirit of the Good Shepherd and has a loving watch care of his flock. In the mad rush of the world today we are more and more overwhelmed with the realization that our greatest need is a mighty revival of old-time religion—more preaching of repentance and faith in our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, more preachers anointed by the Holy Spirit and filled with His power—and, as the pastor goes about the affairs of his high calling, operating both as a pastor and a Christian gentleman, the world will take knowledge of him and know he has been with Jesus. "And I will give you pastors according to mine heart which shall feed you with knowledge and understanding, saith the Lord."

NEWS NOTES.

Last night while the pastor of the Waverly Christian Church, who is also the writer of these notes, lay at home in bed enjoying (?) his third case of "flu" within the last six months, the Young People's Missionary Society conducted the evening service by leading a devotional service and showing pictures of our missionary work being done in Porto Rico and Japan. The pastor of the M. E. Church furnished and operated the picture machine. Miss Ruth Knoeller, one of the young people, read the address explaining the pictures and telling of the work, and several other people took a part in the program. The pictures were furnished by the Foreign Mission Board, Dayton, Ohio, and gave very valuable information for missionary education.

Summer Schools.

Where and when: Piedmont Junior, Wadley, Ala., July 7 to 12, 1929; Elon, Elon College, N. C., July 27 to August 2, 1929.

Who should attend: 1. All pastors. Every pastor in the Christian Churches should attend the summer school nearest him, not because the school is intended primarily for preachers, but because the preachers are the leaders of their people. The people should be led to the summer schools just the same as they are led to Sunday School, preaching services, prayer meetings, revival meetings and picnics. There will be courses, however, especially for preachers at each school.

2. All Sunday School superintendents. Many superintendents of the Sunday Schools hold office continuously for more years than the pastor remains in one Church. These superintendents, and the others who hold office for shorter periods, are leaders in the local community, and on them rests the responsibility of seeing that the community receives the proper religious instruction. One week each year of serious study is none too much time for them to invest in this important work.

3. Sunday School teachers, Christian Endeavor officers and missionary leaders. These people are the ones who do the major portion of the actual teaching of religion in local Church. They must continuously gather new ideas and inspiration or else they become like a river whose tributaries have dried up.

4. Young people. These are the ones who must conduct our Church schools, and do our missionary work of tomorrow, as well as tone up the schools of today and lead in Christian activities through Christian Endeavor Societies and like organizations. Of course, they will attend.

Courses are to be offered which will be helpful to all of these groups, and it is expected that many regular attendants and a large number who are not so regular will be at Piedmont Junior College from July 7th to 12th, and at Elon College from July 27th to August 2, 1929.

A WONDERING WORLD.

Long ago the prophet of Patmos told of a power that would arise and set the world wondering; a power that would enshrine itself in gold, scarlet, purple, and many gems, with odors, incense, and marvelous display. (See Rev. 13:3, 18:12, 16.)

Surely that time has come, and that power has appeared! Part of the world has been recently wondering and worshipping at its shrine just as the prophet pictured centuries ago.

Sydney, Australia, the capital of the Southern world, has been chosen as the place of display, and the drama has been staged in a magnificence that has demanded the attention and dazzled the eyes of all who dwell under the Southern Cross. The press has been unstinting both in space and praise, and the Protestant world has watched in silence or admiration the hand with the "golden cup." Here is an extract from the press, which will tell something of the extent to which this admiration has grown:

Pomp and Ceremony.

"Eight thousand people within St. Mary's Cathedral yesterday witnessed the solemn opening of the twenty-ninth Roman Catholic Eucharistic Congress.

"But wireless enabled all Australia to listen to the proceedings of the greatest religious event in the history of the Commonwealth. . . .

"The opening was majestic, a scene of dazzling brilliance.

"There was solemnity worthy of the spiritual significance of the Eucharist, as it appeals to Catholics the world over. . . .

"In that huge congregation of worshipers were many studies—in hearts, faces, and emotions.

"Men knelt and prayed.

"Women 'said' their rosaries, and quite audibly offered up their prayers.

"And non-Catholics, spellbound by the mightiness and magnificence of the ceremony, bowed their heads as if in submission to some irresistible power. . . .

"In hushed silence, the solemn procession entered the cathedral from the southern door.

"Archbishops in gorgeous robes; bishops, counts, princes, and notables from practically every country in the world.

"Papal knights in their brilliant uniforms.

"And then the central figure in all the congress celebrations—the papal legate, Cardinal Cerretti, in his rich robes of scarlet, attended by acolytes and distinguished representatives of the Vatican."

The cathedral was opened with a golden key, and scenes of unrivaled pomp and splendor found frequent repetition during the time devoted to the congress.

But what is the Protestant world doing? Thousands of its people, forgetting the reasons of history, and forgetting their own faith, hasten with the admiring crowds who "wonder" after this power.

Surely, thoughtful minds must read the lesson—the startling lesson—that fulfilled prophetic pictures would teach! The world wondering after a power, magnificently adorned, asserting its own greatness, yet pretending to honor the Nazarene, who had not where to lay His head!

But the world wondering after this power is one of God's latter-day scenes, and both are with us now.—Robert Hare, Wahroonga, N. S. W., Australia, in Signs of the Times.

ATTENTION.

Editor THE CHRISTIAN SUN:

As a member of the Christian Church and a worker for Oak Grove Christian Church, I am appealing for help in this hour of need. Remember in St. John 14:14, the Scripture says, "If ye shall ask anything in my name, I will do it."

We, as a small group of members, are badly in need of a Church building for worship. The building is so dilapidated that something must be done. Our members have responded beautifully, but we still need more funds in order to complete our house of worship.

Will greatly appreciate your kindness in inserting this in THE CHRISTIAN SUN for all members of other Churches who are interested in the Lord's work for a contribution to help us with our building fund.

May the Lord bless our work and give us an abundant harvest. Again I thank you for this favor. All pledges and donations should be sent to Waverly Parker, secretary-treasurer, Oak Grove Christian Church, Sunbury, N. C.

Very sincerely,

MRS. W. K. PARKER.

A CAKE AND A CRUSE OF OIL.

Elijah said to the widow of Zarephath: "Bring me, I pray thee, a morsel of bread in thine hand. And she said, As the Lord thy God liveth, I have not a cake, but an handful of meal in a barrel, and a little oil in a cruse: and, behold, I am gathering two sticks, that I may go in and dress it for me and my son, that we may eat it and die. And Elijah said unto her, Fear not; go and do as thou hast said: but make me thereof a little cake first, and bring it unto me, and after make for thee and for thy son. For thus saith the Lord God of Israel, The barrel of meal shall not waste, neither shall the cruse of oil fail, until the day that the Lord sendeth rain upon the earth. And she went and did according to the saying of Elijah: and she, and he, and her house, did eat many days. And the barrel of meal wasted not, neither did the cruse of oil fail, according to the word of the Lord, which he spake unto Elijah."

Our God is the same God "yesterday, and today, and forever." Many Sunday schools say: "We cannot give anything to missions; it is all we can do to keep ourselves alive; if we'd give away the little we have, we'd surely die." Is this not breaking a spiritual law, that must result in death? The law of the spiritual life is clearly set forth in the story of Elijah and the widow of Zarephath, and expressed by our Lord when He said, "For whosoever will save his life shall lose it; but whosoever will lose his life, for my sake, the same shall save it." It is only by giving unselfishly and at the point of heroic sacrifice that we can hope to live. This truth has been marvelously demonstrated by the Churches and Sunday Schools that are giving largely to missions—their barrel of meal is never empty, and their cruse of oil never fails.—From "How to Interest Your Sunday School in Missions," by Miss Sue R. Staley.

GOOD AND BAD PLANS IN GIVING.

Young people need to be trained to give. Habit is a strong factor in the life of every one. Good or bad habits, for weal or woe, are usually fixed in early life. Sunday School scholars may form the habit of spending their money self-indulgently and fasten upon themselves the habit of selfishness for life, finding later that a chain has wrapped itself about them which is hard to break; or they may form the habit while children of thinking of others, and learn that there is far more joy in giving than in spending on one's self.

It is a bad plan for the father or mother to give a penny or a nickel to children for Sunday School. Nearly all young people have some money of their own during the week or month, and they should be taught that part of this money should be laid aside for God. If the parent sees that the child will not have any money of his own, by all means find a way in the home for the child to earn the penny or nickel which he is to give, instead of giving it to him on Sunday morning. The joy of earning the money for God will never be forgotten by the child, and the joy and consciousness that he is doing something for the father, who has done so much for him, will flood his little heart with an unspeakable joy. Never force a child to do anything for God that will kill the spirit of love, and stunt the spiritual growth. It would be far better to let the child go to Sunday School without any money than to force him to earn it for God.

If we hope for the highest results in the spiritual training of children, we must begin to teach them to give of their own little substance when only three or four years old. This will give the old self-life a stab in its very incipency, and begin to give the higher life, the life of unselfishness, a chance to unfold, ere Satan has robbed the soul of its choicest treasures.—From "How to Interest Your Sunday School in Missions," by Miss Sue R. Staley.

MISSIONARY MEETING.

Although it was a cold rain and a blustery wind, quite a number of the women and men of the Vance, Franklin, Warsaw District met at Liberty (Vance), April 25th, in the annual woman's missionary rally. The faithful leader, Miss Margaret Alston, had worked very hard for a large attendance and helpful program.

Six Churches were represented, with five pastors present. We feel that if the pastors of each Church become interested in these meetings the people, through them, will get a clearer vision of missions.

Our Mission Secretary, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, was the principal speaker of the morning session. His subject, "A Constraining Love," was treated in a very forceful manner. He emphasized the fact that we must not give, just for the giving, but give because we love Jesus Christ and want to do His will.

At the noon hour it had held up raining, so the bountiful dinner was served picnic style on the long table at the back of the Church. Mrs. Tollie Ayscue, in her pleasing manner, spoke on "Our Work in Porto Rico—the Barretts and Miss Adams." She told of the condition in Porto Rico without Christ, and their immediate needs.

Rev. D. M. Spence, of the Henderson Christian Church, told of our work in Japan. Rev. H. E. Crutchfield, the pastor, spoke of our missions in general, and showed the pictures of each.

We were indeed fortunate to have with us Rev. S. E. Madren, pastor of our mountain work. Mrs. Hubert Harward, of the Henderson Church, favored us with a beautiful solo. An offering of $7 was taken for the reconstruction of Salinas Church, in Porto Rico. Thus ended an enjoyable day.

Grand total

If individuals and Churches will now do their best and help, it will be appreciated. So many Churches are yet very far from reaching their quotas, but some have reached theirs, and for this we thank God and take courage. Every dollar given to missions now counts mightily for the work of the kingdom. Thank you, good friends.

A BEST SELLER.

"Today we call the seventies dull. You won't think them dull if you read 'Jubilee Jim,'" says Harry Hansen, in The World.

"Jubilee Jim: The Life of Colonel James Fisk, Jr.," is described by the Christian Century as "an important and exciting contribution to the social history of America."

It has also been called one of the most uproariously funny and at the same time one of the most pathetic biographies ever written.

"Jubilee Jim" has just been announced as one of the six best sellers (among non-fiction books) at Brentano's New York stores.

MEMBERS' FINANCIAL OBLIGATIONS.

At the close of the reading for the last Sabbath of the week of prayer, two questions were asked which seem to be very pertinent. They were as follows: "Is it not high-time that every believer reconsider his financial relations to this movement, and plan for an increase now and in the coming year? Shall the lack of money impede the progress of the message, when by every providence God is calling us to 'advance, and enter new territory'?"

Is it not well for every member of the Church to take new stock of the work and his relation to it? Just how far does our obligation extend? The apostle Paul answers the question: "I am debtor both to the Greeks and to the Barbarians; both to the wise, and to the unwise." The term "debtor" implies obligation, and the classes mentioned by the apostle include the whole world. Every Christian is included in the debtor class. But is the "debt" of a financial character, or is it wholly moral? Doubtless, the moral element enters in a very definite way, but we are utterly unable to discharge our moral obligation in this matter without entering into very definite financial relations to the work. "How shall they hear without a preacher? and how shall they preach, except they be sent?" And we might very properly add, How shall they be sent and properly maintained in their field of labor unless adequate financial arrangements are made?

The whole world-mission program fails unless it is considered from the viewpoint of financial obligation. It cannot depend upon caprice or convenience. There is a definite financial obligation resting upon every man. "All the tithe . . . is the Lord's," whether we wish to admit it or not. And it makes no difference with the obligation whether a man is a Christian.

Why should it be considered an obligation instead of a matter of generosity? Because every man is a beneficiary of the grace of God. "Christ died for the ungodly." Just as every citizen of a country enjoys the benefits that accrue from orderly government, and is therefore under financial obligation to support the government by payment of his taxes, so is every man under financial obligation to support the government of God upon the earth. The government seizes and sells the property of the man who fails to pay his taxes, because that is his obligation. If a man joins a club or lodge, he, by that act, assumes certain financial obligations which he must meet. If he refuses or fails to meet them, he is first posted and then expelled from the club or lodge.

But the question may be asked, "Is there, then, no chance for the exercise of choice in the matter of financial obligation to the Church?" To which it may be replied, What choice does one have in the matter of his taxes? What would happen if you chose to pay your tax on real estate, but not on your automobile? Would you be able to get your license to operate in such a case? Of course not; such an idea is preposterous. And yet there are those who seem to think it all right to go on without paying to God that which He says is His in tithes, and almost nothing in offerings; or else they may be liberal in the matter of offerings, but very miserly in the matter of tithes, and yet they want to hold their "good and regular standing" in the Church.

That which we owe is an obligation resting upon us, and we cannot be counted as honest in the non-payment of an obligation unless we are really unable to pay it. One who shuns his responsibility in the payment of his debts is not considered an honest man by the world. But there are people who shun their responsibility to the Church, and yet they desire to be considered true and loyal to God and to His Church.

Money which we contribute to the various activities of the Church is not to be considered as charity, or generosity, or liberality, but simply as payments on our obligation to God and to our fellow-men. To fail to meet our obligations in this respect is to fail to pay an honest debt. That is why God says, "Ye are cursed with a curse: for ye have robbed me." Yes, it is time for every believer to reconsider his financial relations to this movement, and to plan for larger giving and larger tithe-paying for the coming year.—Review and Herald.

GIPSY SMITH IN BOSTON.

The following is from the Congregationalist:
The Gipsy Smith revival meetings in Boston began on Sunday, March 3rd, with two great services in the new Boston Garden, which is the city's largest auditorium, and extends its vast spaces over the new Boston and Maine Railroad station. Several facts are worth recording about the afternoon meeting. In this same auditorium, the night before, a great crowd enjoyed with keen delight the dash and thrills of a hockey game; and two nights before, a prize fight regaled a capacity crowd with its mad modern mixture of brutality and skill. The main business of the Boston Garden is prize fighting and hockey, with occasional wrestling matches, track-meets, and the hope of future great conventions. But here was something quite different. Here was a religious service with every seat taken, and so many standing that the managers said there were 20,000 persons in it, while 8,000, they said, were turned away. Gipsy Smith declared that here was the largest assembly of the human race that ever met for religious purposes under a single roof. The people came eagerly, earnestly, quietly. They joined in the singing of familiar hymns and in prayer in a way to indicate that they were Church-going people, as nearly all of them probably were.

Gipsy Smith is sixty-nine years of age. He seems much younger. He has been in evangelistic work for fifty-two years. He has a vigorous, pleasing personality, a strong, musical voice, and he sings remarkably well. As a preacher, he is simple and frank, intimate and persuasive. His appeal is to reason, conscience and the heart. He does not get harsh or hysterical, nor does he develop hysteria in his audience. One is impressed by the quiet vigor, the simplicity and the deep sincerity of the man and his message. His theology is as broad and inclusive as the essentials of Christian faith, as definite as the vital fundamentals of belief in God, Christ, the Holy Spirit and salvation.

We trust that Gipsy Smith's meetings will do far-reaching good. The last ones will be on Sunday, March 24th. The week days between, noon meetings will be held in Tremont Temple, and evenings there also, except Tuesday evenings, when the meetings will be in Park Street Church.

THE VATICAN STATE.

The Roman Catholic world is celebrating the recent achievement of the present Pope of Rome in gaining political independence for the Vatican as a State. The Protestant world looks upon this achievement with considerable concern, far more than the average Roman Catholic knows. Humanity has had to deal ere this with the ambitions of that potentate in the direction of world authority. Roman Catholic States have never been characterized by great vision and unusual intellectuality. Indeed, they have ultimately gone down. At the close of the World War the historic Roman Catholic States or nations were shattered.

Out of that ruin now comes a new phenomenon in the form of a Vatican State, which seeks to give earthly contact for a great spiritual world empire. All the dreamers of world sovereignty among the leading members of hierarchy are beginning to dream. One of them recently declared that it was his opinion that the pope hopes to be the arbiter of the world. This is what we expected. He has behind him almost limitless financial resources. Mussolini, for some reason which we do not know and which we fear we could not understand, made this arrangement by which the pope is at the head of a small principality, independent, international, amenable to no one but God. No wonder the Protestant nations and the Protestant people are looking upon this change and this appearance as something to be judged with great concern. We have nothing to say against the great masses of the people who honestly and sincerely believe in Jesus Christ and worship Him as the ritual and sacred rites of that communion prescribe.

The reason we are against Romanism is because we know the intriguing of the hierarchy which controls the destiny of that world-wide Church. We know it is heartless, it is merciless in dealing with its opponents. We are familiar with its persecutions and with its long-headed and far-seeing policies which work out too well, even though centuries are required to do so. We would have a different story to tell if this great institution was kind of heart and sought to deal tenderly with those who disagreed with its policies and have gone out to set up independent forms of Christianity. No Protestant ever looks for kindness and sympathetic, tolerant treatment on the part of the hierarchy of the Roman Catholic Church.—Western Christian Advocate.

NOW THE TIME—HERE THE PLACE!

Your Church is making an effort to reach its goal for Missions this year, namely: one-third the amount of pastor's salary. If your Church, and all the other Churches, reach this goal, we will reach the total goal of $45,000 for the year ending September 30th, the amount asked of us by the Southern Christian Convention.

Will you, by an individual gift, help your Church to achieve this desired end? Now is the time! Here is the place! By a pull together, every Church can reach the goal. Help now.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

BY REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

Lesson VI—May 12, 1929.

THE EARLY MINISTRY OF JEREMIAH.

GOLDEN TEXT: "We must obey God rather than men."—Acts 5:29.

LESSON: Jeremiah 1:1-10, 6:10-11, 8:18, 9:2, 26:1-24.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psa. 26:1-7.

Jeremiah is one of the towering figures of history. He ranks high, not only as a Hebrew prophet but as a religious statesman and as a history-maker. He is a biblical character who needs to be known in a more intimate way, for there is both instruction and inspiration to be found in a knowledge of his life and works.

Jeremiah's Call.

As Jeremiah looked back over his life, and as he committed the record of his ministry and his work to writing, one thing became a conviction with him: He knew that he had been called in person by God to his lifework. As he looked back, it seemed to him that, even before he had been born, he had been called by God. He came into the world with his career already beckoning to him, and it was a career that would make a notable contribution to humanity. But as is so often the case, it did not look as attractive in prospect as it did in retrospect. In fact, Jeremiah tells in a frank way of how unwilling he was to enter upon that career. "To be a prophet unto the nations"—any sane man would feel a sense of inadequacy and have a sense of hesitancy as he stood before the open door of a career like that. But when God wants a man, He makes known in no uncertain way that He wants him. Jeremiah might be a child in his own thinking, but in the thinking of God he was a man of large potential moral insight and spiritual stature. No man is a child when he is sent by God and when the Spirit of God goes with him.

Let every Sunday School teacher and those who read these notes who deal with youth see to it that they try to prepare the heart of young people to hear and to interpret the voice of God when it speaks.

Jeremiah's Commission.

"Behold, I have put words in thy mouth. See I have this day set thee over nations and over kingdoms, to root out, and to pull down, and to destroy, and to throw down, to build, and to plant." It was a large order. This humble man was to be an active force in the political and religious life of the nations. By his moral insight and spiritual power, he was to wield an influence beyond that of kings. History attests the fact that he was the outstanding figure in the era in which he lived, and his influence is still felt upon the life of mankind, while the kings with whom he dealt have fallen into the dead past.

Jeremiah's Consecration.

This man was not disobedient to the heavenly vision. Once he became convinced that God had really called him, he gave himself with unstinted devotion to his task. The story of Jeremiah is the story of a man who was faithful to that which had been committed unto him. It is not given to all of us to do a work like Jeremiah's, but it is expected of all of us that we shall be faithful. The man or woman, the boy or girl who gives himself faithfully to that which he knows is the will of God will make his life count and count heavily in God's scale of things.

Jeremiah's Courage.

Jeremiah is sometimes referred to as "the weeping prophet," and he is often characterized as a tender-hearted, rather soft and sentimental fellow. Jeremiah, as a matter of fact, did weep. But Jeremiah's tears were the tears of a strong man who, with the spirit of true patriotism, was weeping over the doom of his beloved nation. The task to which he had been called was an unpleasant one. It was, in fact, a dangerous one, as his later experiences proved. But, in spite of the fact that by nature he was a retiring, sensitive man, he stood forth in all the courage of a great soul and proclaimed, "without diminishing it," the message Jehovah had given him. When the list of the world's true heroes is called, Jeremiah is going to answer to his name high on the list.

When one thinks of Jeremiah's fearless proclamation of unpleasant truth, and of his searching criticism of the national policy, and then thinks of what would be ludicrous if it were not so pathetic policy of an organization which black-listed many prominent and patriotic men because they dared to criticize our national policy, one sees how far the ideal of patriotism can degenerate. Because Jeremiah loved his country, because he was a true patriot, he lifted his voice against the evils that were threatening her life. We need the spirit of Jeremiah today in the face of the lawlessness abroad in our nation. We need to raise our voices in protest against the jingoists. We need the courage, born of conviction, to raise our voices in protest against all that threatens both our social well-being and our national life. We ought to obey God rather than men in all these things.

One does not have to look far to find the source of Jeremiah's courage. He trusted God, and therefore he was not afraid of man. When they threatened to put him to death for proclaiming his unpleasant truth, he calmly told them to go ahead. For, said he, "of a truth the Lord hath sent me unto you to speak all these words in your ears." It is hard to silence and impossible to down a man who has a conviction like that in his heart.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Sunday, May 12, 1929.

TOPIC: "Appreciating Our Parents as Leaders."
—Eph. 6:1-9; Luke 2:41-52.

Some Bible Hints.

Obedience is largely a lost virtue, yet essential to happiness. As a rule, parents know best what is best (v. 1).

"Honor!" Our parents may not have so much book learning as we have, but they have experience and longer observation, which mean far more (v. 2).

There comes a time when young people must act for themselves and take the responsibility for their actions. This is what Jesus did (v. 43).

Jesus' action was indisputably good. If young people ran to Church, there would be no trouble about their independence (v. 40).

Suggestive Thoughts.

Parents are responsible for giving their children a right upbringing. That makes them leaders, and they cannot escape the duty.

Leaders can only guide where they themselves have traveled. Young people do well to recognize the wisdom their parents have gathered, and use it.

Parents need infinite patience. Wesley said to his wife, "I marvel at your patience. You have said that twenty times to the boy." "Yes," she replied; "it was the twentieth time that got him."

Recognize parental love. Parents may be mistaken, but their mistakes are those of love. They are zealous for our welfare.

A Few Illustrations.

The gardener bends the branch and trains it. All need training. To grow wild is to be a human weed.

Even a small lever in a complex machine is necessary. Parents may not lead multitudes; it is enough that they lead one or two boys or girls into a noble life.

Parents are examples of leadership by example—probably the most effective method of all.

Puppies need a leash at first until they learn obedience. Children need restraint for the same reason. By and by, that will be unnecessary.

To Think About.

What have our parents done for us?

How can we show appreciation of parental leadership?

Should children ever disobey parents? When?

IS THIS AMERICA'S YOUTH MOVEMENT?

BY BERT H. DAVIS.

Granville Hicks, in the Christian Century several months ago, wrote briefly and sanely on the topic, "No Youth Movement for America." He emphasized that many of the significant youth movements in Europe in 1926 were not linked with a program of social reform, but favored creative living as opposed to a mechanized civilization. Here was a struggle not for the saving of democracy or any other social or political system, but for the preserving of the individual for his own sake.

In some such cause we should expect to find the Protestant Christians of America. Their peculiarity has ever been their insistence on individual worth and freedom, and the progressive reforms urged by Protestant leadership have sought to release the individual from pressure that might restrict his religious and moral improvement. This is fruitful ground for liberalism. Walter Lippman has well said that "the liberal assumes almost invariably that man is naturally good and that he becomes morally perverted and deformed by being compelled to conform to artificial and tyrannical rule."

Where so fully as in Christian teaching is there the hope for a youth movement for creative and friendly and responsible living?

Whence comes a youth movement? It must come, first, from youth. It cannot be passed down from the hoary heads. A mature, adult program would lack incautious heroism, confidence in youth's abilities, possibility for future growth and action. Youth would create a simple program that would grow with its own momentum; hence not soon exhausted nor conquered.

The leadership must ultimately be youth or youth-minded leadership. Mistakes of judgment will be excused if they come not from undervaluation nor timidity. Young people echo the spirit of Paul as he wrote to Timothy, "Let no man despise thy youth, but be thou an example." Youth leadership has a time-sense. It supplies the vital spark at the proper instant.

The American youth movement, if such there be, is that powerful and vital program that emerged from the International Christian Endeavor Convention of 1927 in Cleveland. The plan was prepared for the program of a single organization, albeit one of world-wide extent and four millions of members. But within a few months the crusade with Christ has spread far beyond organization borders and was seeking out the hearts of young people everywhere, outrunning its own promotion. No religious or social challenge of the western hemisphere has had so immediate a development. Every factor of speedy communication, rapid transportation, closely knit religious organizations, and co-operative leadership favored this twentieth century crusade.

The crusade is as yet in its infancy. It owns no formal organization, possesses a meagre budget, proclaims no new gospel. It uses the organization forces that existed, but into them it has breathed new life. The crusade belongs to all the denominations, all the young people's societies, all the Churches. It is one more effective means for a uniting of Christian works, while coincidentally loyalty to the individual's own faith is increased.

What are the objectives of the crusade? As stated by Dr. Daniel A. Poling, president of the International Society of Christian Endeavor, they are three. Crusade with Christ for evangelism—the fundamental and timeless challenge for personal rightness first, above and before all else. A call to personal devotion in this objective in a socialized age! Then, crusade with Christ for Christian citizenship—a goal that would include emphasis on intelligent patriotism, on Christian education, on every aim for a better and holier social order, on the right use of the ballot, and other powers of the citizens. Finally, crusade with Christ for world peace—the broadest extension of brotherhood, comprising not alone the outlawry of war, but the banishing of the causes of wars and the creating of a ministry of international and interracial helpfulness.

Myself, my country, my world! Such was Fred W. Ramsey's summary of the philosophy and method of the crusade. The centering of the crusade in the individual is startling and distinctive. We approach again the spirit of the Christ, who labored among small groups and committed His gospel to a handful of apostles.

The strength of this rapidly forming youth movement is in its appeal to the spirit of adventure, its simple and strong conception of the specific mission of Christians to their own day, the recognition of the essential character of youth's loyalty. To the crusade, the Christian Endeavor movement brings modestly its experience in the commanding of young lives for definite service. Its democratic, youth-led societies and unions are crusade centers. The confidence of ministers, thousands of whom are Christian Endeavor graduates, is the more quickly won to a movement that emanated from such a source.

The projects shared by Christian Endeavorers through the years—good citizenship, stewardship of time, money and ability, leadership training, right recreation, social service, prison work, devotional and evangelistic enterprises, youth discussion meetings, world peace projects—are now committed to other crusaders. More than thirty denominations have endorsed the crusade, accepting it in one form or another for their young people's program. Monthly objectives and emphases have been set. Trained workers, both full-time and volunteer, are everywhere assisting. New literature appears. Pageantry and song aid the crusade. Countless requests for information and counsel pour in upon the leaders of the movement.

Is this America's long-awaited youth movement?

If it is, it is unlike any other known to the world. Its successes reveal the real character of a cruelly slandered generation. Refuting dire predictions, America's youth movement is Christian in form and purpose; it is centered in the Churches; it is idealistic. In a land where prosperity, the usual enemy of religion, is unprecedented, a growing army of youth goes forward in a crusade of the Spirit to offer their lives more abundantly to the leadership of Jesus.

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE,
One of Our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MOTHERS' DAY WEEK.

MONDAY.

REVERANCE FOR PARENTS.

"Honor thy father and thy mother, as the Lord hath commanded thee, that thy days may be prolonged and that it may go well with thee."—Deut. 5:16.

Who brought me into being,
Kindly cared for me while young,
Caressed, fed and clothed me
To keep me well and strong?
My Mother,

Who taught my infant tongue to lisp
Her name, in childish glee,
And help, while clinging to her dress,
To place me on her knee?
My Mother,

Who taught me how to push the chair
And "stand up all alone";
To walk, and talk, and comb her hair,
As children all have done?
My Mother,

Who taught me how to pray,
And keep the Golden Rule;
To learn my lessons every day
When I attended school?
My Mother,

God bless my sainted mother,
And all the mothers, too!
Their lives are spent for others,
Through all the world, we know.

Their loving hands shall lead us,
Their God shall be our Guide,
Their blessings rest upon us,
Whatever may betide.

—Praetorian Guard.

Prayer.—God of our fathers, be with us yet, lest we forget. Perpetuate in us all the good of our parents who gave unto us all the good we know. Thou, God of their lives, guide us to all good forever in Thee. Amen.

TUESDAY.

MY GUARDIAN ANGEL.

"There stood by the cross of Jesus His mother."
—John 19:25.

Is this any different from all true motherhood? We have many crosses. Have we not always found Mother standing by?

In the Civil War, a woman in Maine received a letter saying, "Willie is sick; he is dying." She said to her husband, "Father, I must go." "No, you can't go," he replied; "it is impossible. There is a line of bullets and bayonets between you and Willie."

She did what every true mother does—went! She got to Washington and saw President Lincoln. With a tear in his eye, he gave her a piece of paper, and said, "Madam, that will take you to the enemy's line, but what will become of you after that I cannot tell." At the line, they refused her passage; but she broke through, and said, "Shoot!" They did not. She reached his bedside, knelt by his unconscious form, and said, "Oh, Lord! spare my boy." He raised his hands, turned his head, and said, "Mother, I knew you would come."

The sound of her voice had gone clear down the valley of the shadow of death, where the soul was going out into the silent beyond, and brought him back a short while.

What did Paul mean by saying, "Love beareth all things, believeth all things, endureth all things"?

Prayer.—"Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet, lest we forget, lest we forget." Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

NEVER LOST.

"When thou goest, it shall lead thee; and when thou awakest it shall talk with thee."—Prov. 6:22.

This is said of the ever-present mother-spirit in the obedience of a child. Ben Hur is made to say, "God could not be everywhere, so he made Mother."

The voice of the home may close, the voice of the world may pass away, the voice of friends may be meaningless, but the voice of mother never does. It keeps on ringing; she keeps on praying; she keeps on preaching; and, when everything else fails, Mother's voice brings the prodigal back home.

If I were hanged in the highest hill,
Mother o' mine,

I know whose prayers would follow me still,
Mother o' mine.

If I were drowned in the deepest sea,
Mother o' mine;

If I were damned of body and soul,
I know whose prayers would make me whole:
Mother o' mine, Mother o' mine.

—Kipling.

Prayer.—"Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet, lest we forget, lest we forget." Amen.

THURSDAY.

A SCARED MOTHER.

" . . . I am reminded of your sincere faith, which dwelt first in your grandmother, Lois, and your mother, Eunice, as it dwells (I am sure) in yourself."—2 Tim. 1:5.

Paul Righter has said, "To the man who has had a mother, all women are sacred for her sake." Lincoln expressed somewhat the same sentiment when he said, "All that I am or hope to be, I owe to my angel mother."

As we grow older, her memory is more visible. We see that it was she (and her companion, perhaps—father) who has stamped the coin of character on us. Divine significance of her life would be too worthy a recompense for her.

When we laud one statesman, we only give him what has been the everlasting care of his mother. It would be difficult to mention any accomplishment of men without necessarily involving the attitude of somebody's mother.

Prayer.—We thank Thee, our Father, that in Thy wisdom and appointments of things, honor to Mother has not been forgotten, and that thou hast been pleased to hold in thy keeping and safety the motherhood of our country. In what she gave us, may we not forget and live in terms of her service and goodness. Amen.

FRIDAY.

HOW MAY I SPEND MOTHERS' DAY?

"Behold my mother."—Matt. 12:49.

1. Not in sentiment only, but in thoughtfulness and deeds of unselfishness.

2. Call my mother and all true mothers "Blessed."

3. Love her, and carry that love to her. If I can't go, I'll write her and tell her. She will not be with me always; I will fill her life with my inspirations the best I can while I may. This may give her a new lease on life.

4. If I am so unfortunate as to have my mother in the other world, I will honor her with some noble thought or some kind deed, and let some mother know how I appreciate mine.

5. Knowing that right and wrong cannot be rubbed together and make them cohere, I will honor her by resolving afresh to take Jesus, my mother's Saviour, and God, my mother's God.

Prayer.—Dear Father, inspire in us a profound preparation of heart and mind for a proper observance of next Sunday always, now and forever. Amen.

SATURDAY.

A PRAYER.

"Things in life that are worthy

Were born in my mother's breast
And breathed into mine by the magic
Of the love her life expressed.

The years that have brought me to manhood
Have taken her far from me;
But memory keeps me from straying
Too far from my mother's knee.

"God, make me the man of her vision,
And purge me of selfishness;
God, keep me true to her standards,
And help me to live and to bless.
God, hallow the holy impress
Of the days that used to be,
And keep me a pilgrim forever
To the shrine at my mother's knee." Amen.

SUNDAY.

MOTHER.

Day by day, and week by week,
Month by month and year by year,
All she seemed to seek
Was our health and comfort here.
Every thought and every deed
Were for things which we might need.

Cookies on the pantry shelves,
Cakes and pies, and all things sweet
Kept where we could help ourselves:
Thus she braved the kitchen's heat.
Toil seemed nothing unto her
If it made us happier.

Constant watch and constant care,
These she gave when we were small.
Keeping garments in repair
Left her little rest at all.
But she braved it through, that we Might be fit for folks to see.

Oh, how often she was tasked!
Oh, how tired those hands became!
But no more than this she asked:
That our eyes with joy should flame.
Just for this she labored long—
We must prosper and be strong.

Others give and, in return,
Hope favors later on;
But, in time, all children learn,
Friend Unselfish there's but one!
Mother smiled at many an ache—
Suffering for her children's sake.

—Edgar Guest.

Prayer.—We thank Thee, our Father, for a day's opportunity for thinking of the noble and better side of ourselves. We are glad that this day recalls the just, the honest, and the beautiful things of life. Enable us to pay honorable tribute to our parents. We pray for the power to love them more and appreciate them better, and live a life we are not ashamed of. Amen.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

One of the happy surprises at our recent board meeting was sprung by our loyal friend and chairman of our board, J. M. Darden, when he presented to the Orphanage in a beautiful and happy speech the enlarged likeness of himself. The much-appreciated gift which will add dignity and grace to the reception hall of the Johnston Hall was accepted on behalf of the board of trustees and the Orphanage family by Chas. D. Johnston, superintendent, with much appreciation and thanks. Mr. Darden has had a warm place in his heart for a number of years for the children in the Christian Orphanage, and the children look upon him as a kind and generous father. They are always glad to hear him talk, and they always give him the best of attention. The entire Orphanage family appreciates the gift and the sweet and kindly spirit in which it was presented.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

REVIVAL MEETING.

It was our pleasure to be with Rev. W. B. Fuller and his good people of Mt. Olivet Christian Church, Rockingham County, Va., from April 8th to 18th, in a splendid series of evangelistic meetings. The meetings were good and the attendance fine, except for about four nights when the weather was very rough.

Bro. Fuller has a great field of opportunity here at this Church, and is doing a most excellent work. The people are all, or nearly all, prosperous farmers and the owners of some of the most beautiful farms I have ever seen. To live in that wonderful section is enough within itself to make one want to honor the Maker of such a country with a beautiful Christian life.

As a result of the meeting, there were some twelve or more additions to the Church and a large number of reconsecrations. I enjoyed my stay with these fine people so much, and I left them with a warm spot in my heart for them all. May God bless them.

On our way home we stopped for some two hours at Winchester, Va. The great Apple-Blossom Festival was on, and the city was crowded with people. We saw Rev. R. L. Williamson, the pastor of the Winchester Church, and his good wife, and a number of our people there, and was glad to learn that the work there was going nicely.

Rev. Joe French, pastor of Bethlehem and several other Churches, stopped at the Mt. Olivet Church on Sunday morning during the meeting for a few moments. We were glad to greet him and to learn that his work was progressing nicely. The other ministers in the Valley were busy in their revivals, and I did not get to see them.

I got home on Saturday, April 20th, and on Sunday was permitted to greet my own people at all my Sunday services. It is always a joy to get back home, especially when one has such fine people to serve as are found in the Rosemont and Berea Churches, of which I have been pastor now for almost four years.

Our revival at Rosemont begins on May 12th, with the Rev. G. O. Lankford, D. D., Burlington, N. C., a former pastor and one still much loved by the Rosemont people, as our assistant.

Annual memorial services of the Berea Christian Church will be held in the Church cemetery on the afternoon of the last Sunday in May. The revival services in the Berea Church will begin the first Sunday in September, with Rev. O. D. Poythress, of South Norfolk, Va., as evangelist.

UNEXPLORED ALASKA.

Those who would travel upon ground that man's foot has seldom touched, who would seek adventure in the exploration of unknown territory, will find the opportunity awaiting them in Alaska. Although sixty years have passed since that northern territory was purchased from Russia, there are still large areas of it about which little more is known today than before the transfer to the American flag. The task of mapping this great wilderness, consisting of 586,400 square miles—nearly one-fifth as large as the United States—has been in progress since 1898 by the Geological Survey, and although it is still far from completed, each year shows progress in the inventory that Uncle Sam is making of his northern possession.

The task is necessarily a difficult one, because in a new, unexplored country, where streams are too swift for boating and the only trails are those of wild animals, the surveyor must still use the primitive methods of transport—the slow but sure pack-horse and the boat dragged by hand through water too swift for even a modern power boat. Both of these methods were used by the Geological Survey expedition that in 1926 undertook to extend topographic and geologic surveys into the upper portion of the basin of the Skwentna River.

As a result of this expedition, about 700 square miles of hitherto unexplored territory were mapped geologically and topographically, and 350 square miles, previously mapped in an exploratory way, were remapped and corrected. This work gave clue to the position and courses of the rivers that drain many thousand square miles of one of America's great mountain ranges, and to routes of approach to other unexplored areas.

A CHURCH CHOIR IN THE WHITE HOUSE.

The Westminster choir, of Dayton, Ohio, has been called one of the best Church choirs in America and has sung by invitation in every State of the Union east of the Mississippi except Florida.

This year it has sung in a number of the larger cities of the East, between Washington and Baltimore on the south and Boston and Portland, Maine, on the north, and following this tour it sailed on March 20th for a tour of the capitals of Europe. The choir will spend three months on its European tour.

The following letter is written by a young woman, a member of the choir, and a member of our Riverdale Christian Church, Dayton. She is one of the original members of the Westminster choir and her description of the choir's appearance at the White House is so fine and so intimate that we print it as she wrote it—not thinking that it would be program.

Their entire program of nine numbers consisted of Church music rendered without instrumental accompaniment. Not only was the choir honored in Washington by being received by President and Mrs. Hoover, but the Vice-President and Chief Justice Taft and the British ambassador and their ladies were among the patrons and patronesses of the public concert in Washington Auditorium, where they sang to a great audience of over five thousand people and were repeatedly encored. It was a great tribute to great Church music.

The following is Miss Darner's intimate account of what happened in Washington. We hope that she may send us something of what happened in the European centers at a later day:

"Dear Mother and Dad, and all the Club Girls, too,—I will make this one letter do for all. This has been a full day as many others have been, especially lately, for we have been giving two concerts a day in most towns.

"Well, this morning we left Baltimore at 10 o'clock and arrived here about 11. Came directly to the hotel and went to our rooms for only a few minutes, and then went uptown with some of the girls (one whose people are here and have a Chrysler) to shop. We had lunch at a lovely tea room, and it was 1:30 when we came back to the hotel, and it was high time to begin dolling up for the party and concert at the White House. We were to meet in the lobby at 3, and found out after rushing like mad downstairs that we did not need to meet until 4 o'clock. So here was an hour in which we were 'all dressed up and no place to go.'

"Well, F— and her car were handy, and she suggested that we take a ride. We went out the parkway, along the river to the Washington Monument and the Lincoln Memorial, and then back over Pennsylvania Avenue to the Capitol, and then back to our hotel to meet again. Here we took taxis to the White House, arriving in time for the moving picture which Mrs. Talbott is carrying with us.

"Upon entering the White House at the east entrance, we were shown to cloak rooms and we donned our gowns. Here we waited until the crucial moment when we were shown to the East Room and filed in as the guests were assembling.

"The sight was most beautiful with red roses, palms, ferns, and a wonderful huge crystal chandelier. There were two gold-tinted chairs (special ones for President and Mrs. Hoover).

"We had all the new cabinet members seated in the first two rows with the two special chairs for President and Mrs. Hoover left vacant. The other guests were some old cabinet members, and others were in the remaining rows. These guests also included Mrs. Williamson and Mrs. Talbott, who were seated in the third row.

"After all were seated and quite a few seconds of silence and expectancy, two military aides appeared and escorted President and Mrs. Hoover to their special chairs. Mrs. Hoover was dressed in purple velvet.

"When they entered the room, everybody arose in respect to the first people of the land. Immediately after they were all seated again, we began to sing, and were wonderfully received. Everybody clapped, even the President and his lady.

"After we sang the two groups, as per the enclosed program (beginning with "Jesus, Friend of Sinners" and closing with "Going Home"), Mrs. Hoover asked us to wait, for she wanted just one more number, as it was so beautiful. This we sang, and it brought tears to their eyes. Mr. Nicholas Longworth (the Speaker of the House of Representatives) took a white handkerchief the size of a sheet and wiped tears from his eyes as we sang.

"After this, and before we left (now, mind you, we stood through nine numbers), the President and Mrs. Hoover were escorted (by the aides again) to the room adjoining. On her way out, Mrs. Hoover looked over to us and said, "We will see you again." And, much to our surprise, we were shown into that adjoining room and were received by President and Mrs. Hoover, who shook heartily the hand of each one of us, with the casual remark that they were more than pleased with our singing. Then, just following this, we were invited into the main dining-room and were served tea and sandwiches and cake and candy and ice cream. Some people told us that this is an honor seldom experienced by guests at the White House, as they have been to functions and no one was served except a few of the celebrities.

"After all this, we went back to our gorgeous hotel with a thrill under our bonnets to get ready for the second concert of today at the Washington Auditorium.

"Tonight in the auditorium we had in our audience (for the second time today) Vice-President Curtis and his sister, as well as several other notables whose names we did not learn. Every group tonight was followed by two encores—and right here I am telling you that I could go to sleep on anybody's shoulder if I just had one to use.

"But I must go to bed before I am reported, as we are supposed to be in bed at 11 P. M. We leave here in the morning for Ithaca, N. Y., arriving in the late afternoon. WHITE-COLLAR JOBS.

More and more, as the days go by, there is being brought to the attention of the people of the United States the great mistake we are making in over-educating and under-training our young people, in fitting them for the duties of life. It seems to the writer that all of us, as parents, are too anxious to find easy jobs for our sons and daughters where they may be able to wear good clothes and not soil their hands. We are too prone to look upon a pair of overalls and a worker's soiled appearance as a badge of inferiority or disgrace.

We have in our endowed and State-supported colleges and universities today more than a million students fitting themselves for a college degree—under the mistaken idea that when they finally graduate they will not have to do any real manual work—the world will be waiting for them, and the future one easy road to success and competence. Yet, if they would pause for a moment and analyze the situation, it would readily be seen that the world cannot absorb more than 10 per cent of these graduates. "Oh! the years they waste, and the tears they waste," and yet only 10 out of a hundred can even hope to arrive; to finding even an opening in the professions whereby they may serve and be served. Four years in grammar school, four years in high school, and four years in college—twelve years of study: and then what?

In the meanwhile, the great industries of the country are crying for young blood in the skilled trades. New industries are springing up, calling for special training for those whom they must employ. But to serve in these industries, one must have technical training—yet most students who attend technical schools are unwilling to spend one-fourth the time or money that is necessary to "go through college." They are impatient, and many of them seem to consider they are doing some one a favor if they do attend a vocational school and master the rudiments of some trade.

We must turn on the light. We must talk not only of the dignity of honest labor, but its use as an end to real achievement. The press of the country is awakening to these stubborn facts, for they are all true. In a recent editorial in the Spartanburg, S. C., Sunday Herald, we found the following editorial, which we are reproducing in full. The caption was, "They Want White-Collar Jobs."

"Dr. Edward L. Thorndyke, of Teachers' College, New York, speaking before the department of vocational guidance of the National Council of Jewish Women recently, said, 'We find in our research work that young people are opposed to factory work. They all want white-collar jobs.' He was discussing the value of frankly telling young men and women just what their abilities and equipment fit them for in the way of occupation. The difficulty arises so often that they are unwilling to devote themselves to jobs they can do well, because they want 'nice jobs' that 'pay more.'

"This may be Dr. Thorndyke's conclusion after much research, as he says, but it is in reality an old story. It surely required no recondite learning and laborious research to find out that too many young men and women are impatiently desirous of good pay 'right now' without waiting to learn skill and acquire efficiency, or again to slip comfortably into nice respectable 'positions,' where hands are not soiled and one may be properly dressed.

"Meanwhile, this is nothing new, nothing peculiar to the young people of our day. One reason why bricklayers, mechanics and furnace-firers get better wages than whole classes of white-collar workers is because too many seek the latter sort of jobs rather than the former. Youth has lots to learn, and one hard lesson is that success is not won by soft and easy ways."—Weekly Bulletin.

His death occurred at the home of his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Rush, near Palmyra. Funeral services were held March 24, 1929, at the home where his death occurred, and the remains laid to rest by the side of his wife in a cemetery not far away.

RAGAN.

Mary Ella Ragan was born June 22, 1858, and died March 20, 1929. Her age was 70 years, 8 months, and 28 days. Sister Ragan used to live at Linville when I was pastor there some years ago, and attended Church faithfully. In recent years she had made her home with some of her children near Washington, D. C.

She was a faithful member of the Methodist Church and a good Christian woman. She is survived by one son and two daughters, her husband having died several years ago. Funeral services were conducted at the Linville Christian Church March 23, 1929, and interment in the nearby cemetery.

NEWBANKS.

Ward Newbanks died March 12, 1929, at the age of 79 years. Bro. Newbanks was one of the oldest members of the Timber Mountain Christian Church, and, in the days of his strength, was an active member there. He and his wife lived alone near the Church, but for several years their age and infirmities have not permitted them to attend often. Bro. Newbanks was a man of strong conviction, and stood firmly for what he believed to be right. Funeral services were held March 13, 1929, at Gainesboro, Va.

MAKING PLAIN PATHS.—

The Bible has many references about making plain and straight paths. It may be that we, as Christian leaders and teachers, have not heeded this injunction as we ought, if we are to accept a recent statement made by a group of students to Dr. Bell, Warden of St. Stephen's College, at its face value. The students said: "Most preachers assume that we know the fundamentals of the Christian religion—which we don't—or else they tell us everlastingly about doubts and how to deal with them." It is so easy to make the mistake of assuming that those to whom we speak understand the fundamentals. It is not often that those who are addressed are frank enough to admit that they do not know what they are supposed to know. Preachers frequently admit that they are hard pressed to find new material for their sermons. It may be that the students are correct, and that instead of seeking for something new, we should be seeking a clearer and more adequate presentation of the fundamentals.

FINDING REST.—

"Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." These were the words spoken by Jesus. They were addressed to men and women of all future generations; but they were addressed primarily to those of His own time. Now, if His hearers, who lived in that day of extreme simplicity of living as compared with our own times, needed rest, how about the people of our day and time. And what was the meaning of Christ's words? Did He mean that when the long day's toil was over that He would give those who came to Him rest? Or did He mean to introduce new methods of living and new attitudes toward the problems of life that would relieve the tired and harassed souls from some of the strain that they were called upon to bear?

It must have been the latter which Christ had in mind, because He goes on in the following verses to talk about "my yoke" and about being "meek and lowly in heart." It may have been that Jesus was thinking about the exactions of a cumbersome legalistic religion, which loaded down the lives of men with worthless minutiae of detail. He accused the Pharisees of thus perverting religion, and making of it a hindrance rather than a help to the freedom of spirit, which is the very essence of spiritual religion. But there are other sayings of Jesus which show that He was deeply concerned about the anxiety and the hardships which had to do with the problems of physical existence. When Jesus spoke that beautiful lesson about the Heavenly Father clothing the lilies of the field and feeding the fowls of the air, He was surely concerned as to the cares that center around the problems of physical life.

Modern life, as it is lived in America, has become steadily easier when one considers only the amount of physical toil that must be performed. But when one considers the toll which modern life is exacting upon the nerves of men and women, it appears that life is steadily becoming more difficult. There are those who contend that civilization is setting the pace that kills. Not long ago, wide publicity was given to the number of students in our graded and high schools who are suffering nervous breakdowns. Such breakdowns were generally among the most ambitious and conscientious students. Modern business, industrial and social life are consuming the vital forces of men and leaving them stripped and broken. Mr. C. F. Andrews, a recent visitor to America, expressed his impression of American life in these words: "You are not driving the machine of civilization; you are being driven."

If Jesus should walk today the highways of our land, as He walked the ancient roads of Judea and Galilee; if He should watch our frantic rushings here and there—would He not say, with renewed emphasis: "Take my yoke upon you and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart." It is going to take more than an abiding faith that the Heavenly Father will take care of us, to relieve the fearful strain upon those who are bearing the burden of modern life. There must be a complete reevaluation of the things for which we are striving. The entire scheme of things as they are will have to be reorganized. If we would find the rest about which Jesus spoke, this modern age is going to have to dethrone the material and enthrone the spiritual ideals of life.

THE PRESIDENT'S APPEAL.—

President Hoover, speaking at a luncheon of the Associated Press in New York on April 22nd, dealt with the disregard of law, and the prevalence of crime in the United States, with a frankness that was direct and unsparing. Never before has an address delivered before an organization which is representative of the American press given the news agencies of our land so much to think and write about. "We are not suffering from an ephemeral crime wave, but from a subsidence of our foundations," was the words the President used to diagnose the situation which now confronts us. "What we are facing is something far larger and more fundamental—the possibility that respect for all law as law is fading from the sensibilities of our people."

"More than 9,000 human beings are lawlessly killed in the United States each year. - Little more than half as many arrests follow. Less than one-sixth of these slayers are convicted, and but a scandalously small percentage are adequately punished. Twenty times as many people in proportion to population are lawlessly killed in the United States as in Great Britain. In many of our great cities, murder can apparently be committed with impunity. At least fifty times as many robberies in proportion to population are committed in the United States as in the United Kingdom, and three times as many burglaries.

"No part of the country, rural or urban, is immune. Life and property are relatively more unsafe than in any other civilized country in the world."

The President squarely faces the situation which confronts the American people; and just as squarely placed the responsibility for dealing with it. There have been persistent efforts made by representatives of the wet sentiment of the country to attribute the alarming increase in crime to prohibition. Mr. Hoover said: "While violations of law have been increased by inclusion of crimes under the eighteenth amendment and by the vast sums that are poured into the hands of the criminal classes by the patronage of illicit liquor by otherwise responsible citizens, yet this is only one segment of our problem." He showed that less than 8 per cent of the convictions for felonies were due to the eighteenth amendment.

The President definitely accepted the responsibility of the administration for meeting the situation. He defined the task as "instilling respect and fear into the minds of those who have not the intelligence and moral instinct to obey the law as a matter of course." He set forth the duty of the government as follows:

"First, to investigate our existing agencies of enforcement; and, second, to reorganize our system of enforcement in such a manner as to eliminate its weaknesses. It is the purpose of the Federal administration systematically to strengthen its law-enforcement agencies week by week, month by month, year by year, not by dramatic displays and violent attacks in order to make headlines, not by violating the law itself through misuse of the law in its enforcement, but by steady pressure, steady weeding out of all incapable and negligent officials no matter what their status; by encouragement, promotion, and recognition for those who do their duty, and by the most rigid scrutiny of the records and attitudes of all persons suggested for appointment to official posts in our entire law-enforcement machinery."

By no means the least significant statement of the President, was his insistence upon the fact that responsibility for conditions such as he outlined them was shared by each and every individual citizen. He stated this fact thus: "The problem of law enforcement is not alone a function or business of government. If law can be upheld only by enforcement officers, then our scheme of government is at an end. Every citizen has a personal duty in it—the duty to order his own actions, to so weigh the effect of his example, that his conduct shall be a positive force in his community with respect to the law."

NOTES-PERSONALS

In Suffolk, for a few hours last week, it was learned that 114 names had been handed in as applicants for membership on Sunday, May 5th, in our Suffolk Christian Church, Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, pastor. Bro. Hardcastle and co-workers recently have been in an active and vigorous campaign of visitation evangelism, with most satisfactory results.

Rev. O. D. Poythress, of our South Norfolk Church, has recently closed a very successful evangelistic series of meetings, during and at the close of which fifty-five members were added to his Church. The Church was much built up spiritually, and there was wide interest in the meetings, and the pastor feels that much and lasting good was accomplished.

An exchange holds out hope for this young man: "Mr. Robert Maynard Hutchins, who was an acting secretary at Yale at twenty-four, and dean of Yale Law School at twenty-eight, has now been named president of the University of Chicago at thirty. By the time he reaches the ripe old age of thirty-five, he may be running a chain of major universities." Who knows?

Rev. P. T. Klapp, who resides on the highway between Elon College and Gibsonville, was the victim of a very painful accident on the morning of April 30th. Bro. Klapp, who was on horseback, had a heavy fall from his horse on the concrete road, his horse having stumbled and fell. He was unconscious for a while, but after being removed to his home nearby, regained consciousness and is getting along nicely. It was a narrow escape from an accident which came near to being serious.

President Roy A. Larrick, of the Valley Virginia Sunday School Convention, calls attention to the fact that the convention will meet in regular annual session this year with the Newport Church, near Luray, Va., at 10 o'clock on Thursday, June 13th, and adjourn Friday afternoon, June 14th. Bro. Larrick is exceedingly anxious that all the schools of the Conference be represented and be present with large delegations and visitors at this Convention. A splendid program is being arranged. Bro. Larrick is deeply interested in Sunday School and Christian Endeavor work, and since he has been president of the Convention has always prepared and presented a good program. We are sure the fourthcoming Convention will be no exception.

In the provisional program of the National Council of Congregational Churches, to be held at Detroit, Mich., May 28th to June 4th, it is scheduled that at the first session of the National Council at 2 P. M. there is to be presented the report of Commission on Interchurch Relations, with proposals for union with the General Convention of the Christian Churches. Then, on Monday, June 3rd, next to the last day of the council's meetings is scheduled the report back from the committee, "proposals for merger with the Christian Convention." From the important place given to this item in the program of the council, it is seen at once the Congregationalists will give most serious consideration in their national meeting to the question of union of Congregationalists and Christians.

The next quadrennial session of the General Convention of the Christian denomination is to be held at Piqua, Ohio, beginning Tuesday, October 22nd, and is to remain in session for ten days. Speaking of the Church in which the Convention is to be held, the Herald of Gospel Liberty says: "Piqua is centrally located for the whole Church, and has just dedicated its beautiful, remodeled Church auditorium and its new Christian education building, and is well prepared, with its membership of five hundred, to entertain the Convention." The Convention is meeting a year earlier than was anticipated at the last session of the quadrennial to consider especially the proposed union between the Congregationalists and Christians. The general council of the Congregational Church is to meet and consider the same question at Detroit, Mich., beginning May 28th and continuing in session several days. Overtures at the Detroit meeting will be worked out by the Congregationalists in conjunction with delegations from the Christian Church, and on the basis of decisions and findings by the Commission on Christian Union. Should the overtures adopted at the Detroit meeting of the Congregationalists meet with the approval of the Convention in October of the Christians at Piqua, it is understood a joint session of the two Conventions will be held very soon after or immediately following the Convention at Piqua.

No wonder that marvelous missionary book by Dr. Egbert W. Smith, secretary for foreign missions, Presbyterian Church, U. S., about which he wrote in our CHRISTIAN SUN, April 18th, is receiving such popular favor and is being so widely read and adopted in missionary study groups. A part of the secret of the success of that book entitled "The Desire of All Nations" is found, we think, in a paragraph (never intended for publication) from a letter by the author of the book to the editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN: "As a matter of fact, that little book is the child of prayer, every page, every paragraph, and almost every individual sentence having been prayed over as it was written." As we stated in our editorial review of the book, we advised missionary societies everywhere to adopt it, as many are doing, as their mission study book. No better volume for this purpose has come from the press in recent years. If I had a friend who did not believe in missions, I would certainly want him to read "The Desire of All Nations." Among the larger societies already adopted and using it is our Burlington society, and they are finding it a most inspiring and helpful volume. We are hoping that every Woman's and Young People's Missionary Society in the Christian Church will find the time and the place to read and discuss this book—a book conceived in devotion for the fundamental theme of Christianity, born out of wide experience and observation, and now, as we learn, consecrated and made sacred through the prayer and intercession of its author, a great and good man of God.

Rev. B. J. Earp, Harrisonburg, Va., writes pertinently: "I have presented the cause of missions and preached on missions at each of my 'preaching places.' (They are not all Churches; some have no organization, some use school-houses.) I have worked hard and done my dead, level best. The offerings are small and in proportion to the way they pay their pastor. While in larger fields, we sent in liberal mission offerings. While the offerings from my present field are not large, I have worked harder this spring than ever to get the amounts that I have secured. I have been through rain and snow, up mountains and down mountains. I have ridden in car, on horseback and walked to reach my appointments, and have met every appointment save one since Conference. My heart is in missions. I stand for missions, as my people know, with my whole soul. God bless our mission cause and help us to spread His truth to the ends of the world. Amen." If all our pastors had worked as faithfully as Bro. Earp has to create missionary zeal and interest and to secure missionary offerings, we would have no fears whatever as to the outcome. These faithful pastors and many faithful laymen inspire and encourage the rest of us to take new courage and go forward in trying to make the good news of our Lord known and to establish His kingdom at home and in fields afar. The Church of the Living God exists for one purpose, and one purpose only, and that is to build up His kingdom on this earth by preaching His gospel, teaching His precepts, winning souls to Him and developing loyalty and devotion to Him and to His work in the earth.

Lieutenant-Governor J. E. West, Suffolk, Va., one of the principal speakers before the annual convention of the Virginia Federation of Women's Clubs, according to the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot, issued: "A warning that in Virginia there was a present-day tendency to drift from democracy toward autocracy was voiced by the Lieutenant-Governor in his address. 'The greatest enemy to the future Virginia is the political boss,' he declared. 'Let us drive him out of power in the State and spread the good news throughout the nation that in Virginia the people rule.' Colonel West said many leaders in the State no longer believed in popular election of the major county officers, and warned against what he termed the danger of too great centralization of government. He said he stood for the upbuilding of rural life, for child welfare, broader health precautions and improvement in rural education." The Lieutenant-Governor was striking at a fundamental weakness in human society and in every highly developed civilization. Human beings just have an insatiate and an inherent weakness for wanting to lord it over and boss their fellow-men. The trend is from democracy to autocracy, and against this trend the democratic religion of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ has ever had to contend. Our Lord Himself believed in the fundamental rights, privileges and high prerogatives of the individual, and sought, as did no other who ever came to this universe, to make the individual realize his own worth and weight in the world. This is not to say that He sought to build up an individualistic government or regime, but to build up a social order and a kingdom in which the rights and privileges of every well-directed, orderly individual will be honored and respected.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

Bro. J. M. Darden, of Suffolk, has the honor and pleasure of being the first one to take advantage of our club rate of five new subscribers for THE CHRISTIAN SUN for $7.50. Bro. Darden sent us his check the first of May. Bro. Darden has the art of making things go. We feel sure he will send other clubs before the time expires, June 1st. How many more will do this for THE SUN during the month of May?

We have many members in the Christian Church who could donate a club and send the paper to those who would like to read it, but not financially able to pay for it. I feel sure you would get lots of pleasure out of the investment. Try it and see?

Every Church ought to send us at least one club during the month of May. Let some one in each Church get busy and get up a club of five new subscribers and send the names, with correct post-office address, with check for $7.50, to—

THE ANTECEDENT OF POWER.

BY REV. ROY C. HELFENSTEIN.

"You shall receive power after the Holy Spirit has come upon you."—Acts 1:8.

An antecedent is that which goes before in time or that which precedes in casual relationship. The story of life is the story of antecedents and results; antecedents and consequences. Every failure in life has an antecedent experience or relationship which explains the failure. Every success in life has its antecedent experience or relationship which explains the success. Every emotion in life has a corresponding antecedent. In fact, every experience in our lives has its antecedent—that which produced the experience.

Thus, we find that in our lives every phase of human experience is based upon the law of cause and effect, or the law of antecedent and consequences. Happiness and success, satisfaction and achievement, as well as their opposites are not subject to caprice; but are the natural results of antecedent experiences. The antecedent of knowledge is study; the antecedent of success is conscientious effort; the antecedent of joy is service to others; the antecedent to hope is faith; the antecedent to love is interest; the antecedent to all life is God. And the antecedent to power in our lives is the presence of the Holy Spirit upon us, "You shall receive power after the Holy Spirit has come upon you."

It is folly to try to define the Holy Spirit, for when we do so we limit the Holy Spirit to our own definition. But though we cannot explain it, we can experience it. In our daily lives we are continually using aids which we cannot explain. We drive our automobiles, even though we do not understand the intricate mechanism of the car, and even though we could not explain its different parts. We use electricity to light our homes and to furnish power in various ways in the service of the home, but we do not understand electricity. We cannot even tell what it is. No one can, but all may enjoy its benefits. We eat the various kinds of food upon our table, though most of us are unable to give an analysis of their food values. We eat our food, even though we cannot explain or understand the mystery of the process of digestion and assimilation. We cannot understand how the food properties are transmitted through the blood stream to build up the tissues of the body—certain elements adding strength to the bones, certain elements adding strength to the muscles, certain elements furnishing heat for the body, and certain elements building up the brain cells for thought power. But, though we cannot understand the mystery of it all, we are able to have the benefit of the food. So in our moral and religious life there are aids we cannot explain, but which we may experience.

"You shall receive power after the Holy Spirit has come upon you." The antecedent of personal power, of moral power, and of spiritual power is the presence of the Holy Spirit in our lives. Power of personality makes a person interesting. This interest is not based merely upon personal charms or native talents. It is based upon character which is produced by contact with the great personality of God. The power that makes strong one's personality, that makes one morally secure, and that makes one spiritually useful is ours for the asking. "If you, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your Heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask Him?"

It is for us to open our hearts to the ever-present spirit of God—the Holy Spirit—if we want power to resist temptation, power to overcome evil, power to create the good, power to promote the good, and power to serve God and His world.

"Like the tides on the crescent sea beach

When the moon is new and thin,

Into our hearts high yearnings

Come welling and surging in;

Come from that mystic ocean

Whose rim no foot has trod—

Some call it longing;

But others call it God."

To respond to those higher impulses of life, to encourage the higher yearnings of the soul, to ask God sincerely day by day for the gift of His Holy Spirit—the Spirit of Jesus—is to make way for a power in our lives that shall not only make us equal to every emergency, but shall equip us for a worthy service to God and to His world. The presence of the Holy Spirit—the Spirit of Jesus—in our lives gives power to individuals and to Churches. Without the Holy Spirit—the Spirit of Jesus—any individual, any Church is powerless and useless in the work of God.

The presence of the Holy Spirit witnesses in the power it gives. And the life upon whom the Holy Spirit has come has power to resist temptation, power to witness for Christ in daily life by consistent service. Men cannot prove their faith by argument, but by the power of God in their lives. People who have the spirit of God, people upon whom the Holy Spirit has come, act on principle and not upon impulse. When faced with temptation, no matter how appealing may be its call, they answer as did one of old, "How can I do this great wickedness and sin against God." People upon whom the Holy Spirit has come, people who have the Spirit of Jesus practice love in all life's relationships. God is love, and love in our lives is evidence of the presence of God—evidence that the Holy Spirit has come upon us.

Love for God, love for His Church, love for His word, love for His day, love for His world, love for the kingdom, love for the people of God evidence the presence of the Spirit of God in our lives. No life can have much power that does not have love. Love as a motive in life insures success in one's undertakings. Love as a motive in life makes one's wishes well-nigh irresistible. People who have the Spirit of God—those upon whom the Holy Spirit has come—always practice tolerance. Their breadth of fellowship is the breadth of God's invitation: "whosoever will," or whosoever has a sincere purpose to serve God is welcomed into the fellowship of those who have the Spirit of God. The fellowship of men and women upon whom the Holy Spirit has come is extended to "whosoever will," to whosoever desires the fellowship of God's people. The invitation is not to "whosoever" thinks thus and so, but to "whosoever will." The value of the intellect cannot be discounted in its importance in religious experience and thought, but the doors of heaven swing open not to the call of the intellect, but to the call of the will. So also do people who have the spirit of God open their hearts to the fellowship of all who want to do God's will: No person with clannish or narrow religious views; no intolerant bigot can hope to have much power in the world of today because their very attitude discloses the absence of the Spirit of God, the spirit of tolerance and charity in their lives.

The person who has the Spirit of God is always anxious to be useful. The power of God seeks to express itself through human mediums in human service. People who have the Spirit of God express that fact in their sincere determination to play their part in the home life, to assume their share of responsibility in the Church life, to use their influence in constructive service in the community life, and to concern themselves with problems of State, of nation, and of the world.

The person who has the Spirit of God is always a blessing to the world. Jesus, we are told, went about doing good. We cannot conceive of Him doing anything but good. People upon whom the Holy Spirit has come are people who have the Spirit of Jesus, and, like their Master, they go about doing good, and nothing but good. They are a help and not a hindrance in every enterprise that tells for human happiness and human advancement. They are a lift and not a load. They are assets to society and to every group relationship that their lives touch. They are never liabilities. People who have the Spirit of God are an inspiration and not a discouragement to others.

It is well for us to take an inventory of our lives from time to time, to check up on our ambitions, our interests, our purposes. Are we creators or destroyers of life, peace and happiness in the lives of others? How long has it been since we tried to lead another soul to God? How long has it been since we felt that we would give anything in our power if a certain person would embrace the Christian faith and become identified with the Church? How long since our greatest joy was in doing something for others? How long since our supreme desire to please God and to do His will? If those days have passed from any of our lives, they have passed at the price of power. Jesus declared, "You shall receive power after the Holy Spirit has come upon you." And life declares that we lose power the moment we begin to lose interest in God, His Church, His kingdom, and our fellow-men.

CATHOLIC TEMPORAL POWER.

We are in receipt of a letter from Bro. George P. Long, of Hopkinsville, Ky., enclosing a clipping from the Louisville Courier-Journal of recent date, entitled "A Catholic on the Concordat." The communication was addressed to the editor and was signed "A Puzzled Catholic." It is too lengthy to reproduce on this page. One quotation must suffice:

"The Italian situation must leave the American Catholic dumb and speechless on the question of Roman politics when our fellows now inquire about the political aims of the pope. The news is as startling to every Catholic with whom I have spoken as it is for the agnostic, the Protestant or the atheist. It would seem from now on the road of the Catholic seeking the most insignificant office will be a road of thorns; suspicion and attack will follow, and we shall be hard pressed for an explanation. Whatever Catholic leadership there is in this country will be in peril. The concordat wins in Rome and loses elsewhere, it would seem."

We suspect that the revival of temporal power will not prove an unmixed blessing to Catholicism. In America especially the idea of the pope as a temporal sovereign is distasteful and unappealing. The whole conception harks back to the middle ages and is foreign to the democratic ideals of our modern times. It is possible to carry the spirit of reaction to the point where it constitutes a boomerang, and we are inclined to think that the re-assumption of temporal sovereignty by the occupant of St. Peter's chair is of this character. —Ex.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

MAKING FOREIGN MISSIONS PARAMOUNT.

Our Baptist friends of the South, according to one of their leading papers, are taking much courage and renewed hope from the fact that during the period January 1, 1928, to April 1, 1929, fifteen months, their foreign mission debt was reduced from $1,145,729.74 to $876,779.12, a net decrease of $268,950.62. In order to effect this saving, it is announced, some retrenchments on the foreign field had to be made; but this alone would not account for this large decrease in its missionary debt. There has been an increase in income for foreign missions. The Biblical Recorder, in commenting upon this "ray of hope," very truly says: "There is less of selfishness in giving to foreign missions than to any other department of Church work," and it "comes nearer representing the sacrificial spirit than any other." This significant conclusion is drawn by the Recorder's editor:

"Let Southern Baptists make foreign missions paramount, and the bright spot will burst into a blaze of glory." The wide world knows that one of the main reasons why our Baptist friends have been able to carry on at such tremendous rate and make progress in all home missionary enterprises is because they have ever and always put emphasis on foreign missions, even to the extent of being known and called in some sections of the country "Missionary Baptists."

The big reason why many people will not give to foreign missions is a pitiable ignorance of the fact that such giving is the most Christ-like and unselfish giving that mortals ever make in this world. When we give to missions, to carry the gospel to folks we will never see and know, we are not giving for praise of man or any reward that man can give; we are giving just for the sake of our Lord who commanded His followers to carry the gospel in His strength and in His name; and we just do it for His sake. He loves the foreigners and the homefolks, and all the rest, and if we can have a love for Him that is deep enough and strong enough to cause us to give of our means, purely and simply, for His sake, without any earthly reward or returns or praise, or even approval of men, that love develops and releases a spiritual energy for all that pertains to the kingdom of God. The Biblical Recorder, speaking for the great Baptist host, declares that the Church and the people who make foreign missions paramount—their one supreme goal and effort—will, indeed, come into the light of a glory that will shine on all the interests and enterprises carried on around about us in the name and for the sake of humanity. If we put our Lord and our love of Him first, we need have no fears about doing our part for human beings around us whom we know and for whom, in rendering service and giving gifts, we get human satisfaction. ANYTHING TO SHARE?

"In the hearts of real Christians down through the years, the real missionary motive has grown out of a deep and vital experience of Christ in their own lives and the consuming desire to share that experience with others," so declares Ina Corinne Brown, a distinguished student and writer on missionary motives and movements. One reason why many of us professing Christians care so little about missions, or sharing with others the Christ of our own experience, is because we have so little of Christ in our experience to share. If we really love our Lord and Redeemer, who has given Himself for us, and if He means anything worth while to us, then out of sheer gratitude to Him we should seek to share Him with others. This is missions. If Christ has touched our own hearts and thereby awakened in us a love and a passion for Him, we will certainly want to share that love and that passion with others.

And another vital consideration comes in: That love and passion in our own lives increases, deepens and enlarges only as we seek to share it with others. One reason why many Christians are so nearly dead, spiritually, and are so cold and indifferent in their own inner Christian experiences is because they do so little to share the love of their Lord with others. The divine arithmetic and economy are different from the human, in that they increase, and multiply, by dividing and sharing. The Bible teaches this throughout. The widow's cruse of oil and the meal in the barrel wasted not, but constantly increased as that widow shared with the servant of the Lord, and divided her living, to help give the gospel of truth and of life to others. The apostles of our Lord grew to a richer and deeper experience, except Judas Iscariot. Just after a woman had come with a very costly box of ointment and poured it out on her Lord, out of sheer love for Him, Judas Iscariot, desiring to have and to hold more money, joined in rebuking the woman for what he and the others termed "waste," and he went out immediately to negotiate a price for the sale of his Lord. He could not stand such a deep and loyal love for Jesus of Nazareth. He had nothing to share with that woman, nor about the Man, nor from Him, and because the woman shared with Him and expressed for Him such a costly offering, Judas Iscariot was indignant and called it "waste."

The world of sin, even that part of the world that is in the Church, and has little, or no real love for Christ, still calls it sheer "waste" when those who love their Lord well enough to make a real sacrifice for Him, pour out their unselfish gifts on His altar. They cry out, "Why this waste?" simply because they have so little of Christ in their own hearts and lives that they are unwilling to share Him with others—they have but little to share. Where there is little love and devotion, there is indeed meagre desire to share and to divide. A passionate and loyal devotion to our Lord would soon carry the missionary message to the ends of the earth, just as He commissioned His followers to do, and the only reason why we are doing so little to send it there or to carry it there is because, having so little of Him in our own lives, we do little to make Him known. LUXURIES COST MORE THAN SCHOOLS.

The Associated Press carried the following news item and an interesting comparison under a Washington, D. C., date:

"The nation's bill for life insurance in 1926 was $2,624,000,000. This figure may be compared with $2,255,251,327, expenditures for public schools of all type—elementary, secondary and collegiate. Out of every $100 which we spend, we pay $2.68 for schools, $3.12 for life insurance.

"In 1927 there were 20,230,429 passenger automobiles in operation in the United States. We own seventy-eight per cent of all the automobiles of the world, and in 1927 spent for their purchase, operation and upkeep $11,955,907,433. Our school bill requires $2.68 out of each $100 of income; the passenger automobile bill requires $14.21 out of each $100 of income. For every dollar spent for schools, $2.77 is spent for candy, chewing gum, tobacco, the theatre and other luxuries. Do these facts indicate that we overvalue education?"

A recent English critic, observing the ways of the people of the United States and their debacle of luxury, amusements and wealth, said that "the United States was no longer a country; it was a picnic." When a country spends far more for any luxury or indulgence than it does for education or religion, or for its education and religion combined, then that country seems headed toward the rocks. No civilization yet ever went to pieces because of poverty; they all—Babylon, Greece, Rome—became corrupt and began to decline when they grew rich and neglected their religions, their morals, and indulged their passions, lusts and appetites. CIGARETTE SMOKING INCREASES.

Statistics issued on May 1st from Washington show a tremendous increase in the consumption of cigarettes in the United States during the nine months of the fiscal year just ending. Taxes paid to the Federal government over this period amounted to $247,160,930, which was an increase over the same period of last year of $23,632,682. The use of all other forms of tobacco decreased, according to the tax figures, though the taxes on tobacco during the period amounted to $215,936,361, which was an increase of $21,202,102 over the same period of the previous year.

North Carolina, which led all other States in paying taxes on tobacco products, turned into the national government $152,941,303 on cigarettes, an increase of eighteen and one-half million dollars over the previous year. Virginia, also a large manufacturer of cigarettes, paid in taxes to the national government on its output $44,543,321, an increase of $1,288,000 over the same period of the previous year.

The increase in the consumption of cigarettes is accounted for, in some measure, by the nationwide propaganda on the part of cigarette manufacturers to induce girls and women to smoke. A most insidious and defiant campaign of advertising is now going on to largely increase the use of cigarettes among women. A few months ago the advertising billboards carried only pictures of men in connection with their cigarette advertising; then a suggestion from the men that a woman have a cigarette; then came the picture of the man and the woman offering cigarettes; and now the advertisers have reached the full length in showing the women only on the billboards, telling their experience and satisfaction with certain brands of cigarettes. It is a psychological process that the advertisers have played up in great fashion. They did not dare go the full length at first, but little by little insinuated the growing demand on the part of women for cigarette smoking. Then finally made it appear as if the habit was a widespread, if not universal, custom, and the only question was the brand of the cigarette to be used. "Verily, the children of this world are in their generation wiser than the children of light" (Luke 16:8).

We are hearing and experiencing the fact on all sides that "times are hard," money is scarce, and people simply cannot give to the Church and the interest of the kingdom. Still we go on multiplying by thousands and millions our expenditures for any and everything that we want. The sales of luxuries of every description mounts up and up; candies, cold drinks, cigarettes, fancy dress, automobiles, and all the rest, in the category of luxury and pleasure-seeking. If we are being measured in these days by the standard of self-denial, we are evidently falling far short of the life and the love, and even of the joy of Him who said: "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross daily and follow me." J. O. A.

FINANCIAL POLICY.

One of the most difficult problems of the Christian Church is the working out of a financial policy that will meet the needs of all departments and find a liberal response on the part of the Conferences and Churches. The plan adopted by the last session of the Southern Convention does not seem to meet the approval of the people, nor to get the money without unexpressed friction. Yet it is the only plan now in operation, has not been fully tested, and will have to operate till the next session of the Convention. All pastors and members should co-operate heartily during this period of testing and waiting, as all the departments are sorely in need of the sums for which they are working to raise to meet some emergencies and normal needs.

The main question, after all, is to raise the money required to carry on the work and to keep out of debt; and the requirement is the same no matter what plan is used to meet our obligations. The most important thing in the whole question is to cultivate a liberal and willing attitude toward Church finances. In personal and family finances, the main question is, What are the necessities? Then the raising of money to meet those obligations is the second step. That is the method employed by the State. The lawmakers estimate that the requirements for the conduct of the government, schools, roads, benevolent institutions will require so much money. Having determined the amount of money required, then they begin to figure how to place taxes so as to get the money. After all is thought and decided, the people have to pay the money. When the State says what citizens shall pay, they have to pay it. It is not so in the Church. That difference throws a greater responsibility on the members of the Church than rests upon citizens. Members of the Church can neglect or refuse to pay what the Convention or the Conference asks of them; but, if they do, they are not loyal members. Pastors are responsible for the teaching of what the requirement is, and encourage them to meet their obligation. This good year 1928-1929 is a hard year in business; and the people in the Church should practice self-denial and come to the altar with liberal contributions and save the Church the embarrassment of failing to meet her obligations. It can be done, and all will be better and feel happier when the work is accomplished.

The two pressing claims at the present time are Elon College and Missions. In both cases it is a matter of debt. The Bible says, "Owe no man anything, but to love one another" (Rom. 13:8). There is nothing more satisfactory than to get out of debt. Jesus paid all for us and we should pay all we owe for Him. The next Convention may solve this problem. W. W. S.

JOHN WESLEY AMONG SCIENTISTS.

BY DR. ERNEST H. CHERRINGTON.

John Wesley is presented in a new light by Dr. Frank W. Collier, in his "John Wesley Among the Scientists," an Abingdon Press publication. Dr. Collier has set before us a Wesley who not only kept pace with the scientific thought of his day, but even, apparently, anticipated some of the conclusions to which scientists later attained. This man who, like the Roman here, "found nothing human alien to himself" ranged with as much freedom among the most advanced scientific thought as he did in the realms of theology or practical Church administration. The difficulty which Wesley faced, very frankly and without self-deception, where it concerned the dissemination of scientific truth among the mass of people, has been faced equally by those who are striving to impress upon men and upon society those scientific conclusions about the alcohol beverage liquor traffic which are most conclusive and significant, Dr. Collier writes:

"Wesley's reference to popular prejudice had a healthy influence upon the more intelligent of his followers. The American edition of the Survey, by B. Mayo, has the following paragraph, which is remarkably like Wesley both in substance and style:

"In process of time, many important discoveries have been made which have been gradually assented to as prejudice could give place; for, allowing that it takes a century to make a discovery, it requires another century to remove the prejudice. Such is the force of attachment and the power of habit that when once the mind is established in wrong it will hardly be restored to right; the mightiest efforts of reason are too feeble to shake the foundations of error in those minds wherein ignorance and indolence have conspired against truth; such a conspiracy is too common and too formidable to permit a hope of speedy reformation from popular wrong. The uncultivated mind is more prone to judge than to investigate, to censure than to commend; and, indeed, in general there is not a more certain criterion of ignorance than hasty and inconsiderate judgment."

Those who are fighting for an alcohol-free world and who realize that the social alternative is reversion to a lower and a slower form of civilization will understand something of the urge which made Wesley assert, with typical vehemence that "true religion is social and not solitary." Of this phase of Wesley's mind, Dr. Collier writes:

"Wesley did not understand that love for men was exhausted in saving their souls in any narrow religious sense. It meant to save the entire man, spiritually, mentally and physically. One of the great historians of England, J. R. Green, concludes his treatment of this religious movement, after declaring that 'the Methodists were the least result of the Methodist revival,' with the following statement of its influence upon social life:

"A yet nobler result of the religious revival was the steady attempt, which has never ceased from that day to this, to remedy the guilt, the ignorance, the physical suffering, the social degradation of the profligate and the poor. It was not until the Wesleyan impulse had done its work that this philanthropic impulse began."

Few men have ever made a deeper imprint upon not alone their own age, but upon the trends and tendencies of succeeding ages than did the founder of Methodism. The many recent biographies and studies of Wesley which have been pouring from the presses evidence the interest which students of society as well as of religion are finding in this man who, as one of England's leaders asserted, "saved England from a French revolution." To this body of Wesleyan literature, Dr. Collier's "John Wesley Among the Scientists" comes as one of the most valuable additions. Readable, delightfully written and with a very warm appreciation of its theme, the book deserves wide circulation.

MATRIMONIAL SHRINE.

The Congregational Church at Bradford, Ia., made famous in song and story as the "Little Brown Church in the Vale," has attained growing fame as a shrine, before whose sacred altar brides and grooms make their vows for the great matrimonial venture. The year 1928 broke all previous records, for 1,184 lovers took their mates for "better or for worse" at this sequestered sanctuary hidden among the outspreading evergreens in the open country of Chichasaw County. These persons hail from all parts of the country, and even from Saskatchewan and Newfoundland.

Careful preparation is made for every wedding ceremony, so that the service may be conducted with fitting dignity and impressiveness. The Church register shows that in 1928 more than 30,000 registered guests visited the Church. During the tourist season, hundreds of visitors are on the grounds every Sunday, and the Church service, which is now held the year 'round, is crowded beyond the capacity of the small auditorium. Rev. J. L. McCorison, Jr., is pastor of the Nashua-Bradford field, and is leading the important work of these Churches with splendid success.—Congregationalist.

THE VICTORY.

Now is Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept. "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? The sting of death is sin; and the strength of sin is the law. But thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."—1 Cor. 15:20, 55:57.

She had come from Indianapolis and was a student at the Moody Bible Institute. It was Christmas night in a Chicago hospital. Several times during the day she had said that she knew she was going, and that she would be glad to go.

"I have been studying to know the Word," she said; "and now I am going to see the Word."

She was never delirious, but conscious to the last. Just before death came, her face brightened, and she said, "Why, there's Mother!" In a moment, she added, "And Grandmother, and Minnie!" (Her sisters say that she had never seen either of them in life.)

She named one after another who had passed away, and these she seemed to see, and others whom she could not name, adding, "I wonder who those boys are? I don't know them." And she was gone.

What is it that can explain a beautiful death-bed experience like the above? There is nothing of which we know, other than the glorious truth resting on that historic fact revealed to us in that Holy Scripture quoted from Paul's First Epistle to the Corinthians. Thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory!—Moody Bible Institute Monthly.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Seven years ago, the Tidewater Virginia women inaugurated the annual celebration of the landing of the cavaliers at Cape Henry, Va., on the 26th day of April, 1607—322 years ago. This seventh annual celebration was a great occasion, on a great day, and in honor of the first step and the first prayer in the birth of this nation. The cavaliers took the first step, and the women of Tidewater Virginia took a step seven years ago that will keep alive that historic event in the mind and heart of this nation while the Stars and Stripes wave over a free people. Woman comes into her own as Christian civilization advances. At the Hague, in Norfolk, on Friday, April 26, 1929, Governor Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia, and Governor O. Max Gardner, of North Carolina, were welcomed by Norfolk's mayor, city and navy officials and Boy Scouts. Fort Story band furnished music for the day.

Receptions and luncheon at Woman's Club. After this the vast throng motored by way of Virginia Beach to Cape Henry, where a still greater throng witnessed the interesting ceremonies which lasted two hours. A platform had been erected for the speakers, chairs placed in front as reserved seats, and a cross of native pine erected on the sand hill near the old lighthouse. The majority sat in comfort in the clean sand on that beautiful day. Mrs. Lillian Webb Naylor, president, presided and introduced the speakers. The religious services were in charge of Episcopal clergymen, as English clergy had offered the first prayer on that historic spot when the cavaliers landed on April 26, 1607.

The services opened by the vast crowd singing "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name." Rev. William A. Brown, of Portsmouth, read from fifty-second of Isaiah, and Rev. H. D. Peacock, of Norfolk, offered prayer. The crowd then sang, "Stand Up for Jesus," and Bishop B. D. Tucker, of Norfolk, introduced Bishop James E. Freeman, of Washington, D. C., who delivered a sermon from "Look unto the rock whence ye are hewn" (Isa. 51:1). He said that all the great men of this nation had been believers in God. "The Star-Spangled Banner" was played by the band; C. W. Grandy, chairman of Cape Henry Memorial Association, made announcements; Mrs. Naylor introduced Governor Byrd, who spoke on "Virginia, the First Permanent English Settlement in America." This was followed by Frederick H. Gillett, U. S. Senator from Massachusetts, on "Massachusetts' Part in the Creation of America." The band played "Dixie," and the closing address was delivered by Governor O. Max Gardner, of North Carolina, on "The Present State of North Carolina, the Earliest Virginia." All of the addresses were of a high order, the vast crowd gave close attention, and the behavior throughout the whole time was as beautiful as a Church service. After the benediction, tea was served at the Cavalier Hotel.

The Woman's Club, under the great work of their president, Mrs. Lillian W. Naylor, has made a great contribution to America by reviving and perpetuating the landing of the cavaliers at Cape Henry three hundred and twenty-two years ago.

The impression made on my mind by Bishop Freeman's sermon, the great addresses, the reverent attention and behavior of the throng was fourfold—religious, historic, civic and social. These four elements, earnestly cultivated, will keep America great.

W. W. STALEY.

DENDRON, VA.

The Church for this irreligious, materialistic age must be more than ever in the past an evangelistic, a missionary Church. Jesus Christ, the Elder Brother of humanity, organized His Church for this definite aim. He set the Church in the world, that it might convey His thoughts—His message—to men. The spirit of the early Christian Church was "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ."

Our Blessed Lord was a great burden-bearer. What a wonderful privilege for us as His true followers! The spirit of missions is the spirit of the master, and the more of that spirit we have, the brighter and fuller burn our own altar fires. As our Lord was sent to plant Christianity among men, so we are sent to put Christianity into man's life. Therefore, to be indifferent to missions is to be indifferent to the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. The Church needs men and women who are willing to sacrifice time, energy and money to carry out successfully the work of the anointed one. The man who would help others, even at the cost of himself, who thinks and lives in terms of helpful service, he will see the beauty and power of the cross. He will see the beauty and feel the power of the death of Christ.

The most inconsistent Church member is he who makes long prayers and short and infrequent offerings of silver and gold and clutches his pocket-book just as if the salvation of his soul depended on its contents. But when the power of the Holy Spirit is a burning passion of the soul, means will be devised for the spread of the gospel, for the reaching out after the unconverted, the care of the poor, and the erection of temples. Beloved, prove to the world that your pocket-book is converted to Christ, and it will believe in your religion. Remember that the happiest people are those who sacrifice most for the sake of others.

HOPEWELL, VA.

"The hoary head is a crown of glory, if it be found in the way of righteousness."—Prov. 16:31.

Such has been the spoken and unspoken thought of many of the people of Hopewell in regard to the pastor of the Hopewell Christian Church, Rev. J. W. Barrett. Rev. Barrett has already endeared himself in the hearts of his congregation, and also in the hearts of many of other denominations. His sermons are so full of the power of God that hearts are blessed and inspired to a greater work for the Lord.

Sunday, May 5th, was a happy day for Rev. Barrett, as he celebrated the anniversary of his birth, his children and grandchildren coming to gladden the day for him. The Sunday School went well over the hundred mark and a fine audience listened to one of Rev. Barrett's good sermons and partook of the Communion of the Lord's Supper. Sunday evening was the beginning of our revival services, and the building was well filled. These meetings will continue for two weeks. Rev. T. N. Lowe, of Portsmouth, will assist in these services, and Rev. D. D. Nash will be song leader. All are looking forward to a blessed time. The prayers of THE SUN family are requested at this time, that God's will may be done in the building up of believers and the salvation of many souls.

Revival meetings seem to be the order of the day, as all denominations have either just finished or are about to begin special meetings. We pray that the people of Hopewell may be stirred by these revival fires as never before. Revival in the Church means salvation to those out of the Church, for as the Church receives new life it reaches out to those in sin to draw them into fellowship with God through the shed blood of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

Hopewell needs Jesus Christ, and again we say, "Pray for us." R. H. W.

SPRING HILL MEMORIAL.

Spring Hill Christian Church, near Waverly, Va., is planning a home-coming day for May 12th. At the morning service there will be a Mothers' Day program, the ordination of E. B. Richardson, J. N. Cooper and Chapman White to the office of deacon, and the Communion. A basket dinner will be served. The afternoon will be given to a memorial service, with Rev. H. S. Hardeastle as speaker.

This is one of the older Churches of this section. Records show that services were being held here as early as 1820. Rev. Joseph Thomas, the "White Pilgrim," preached here. The Church has been served by many of our best preachers. Dr. J. U. Newman, of Elon College, N. C., began his ministry here fifty years ago, when Spring Hill was known as the seminary for training young ministers.

A cordial invitation is extended to former pastors, members and friends to worship here next Sunday.

RURAL SCHOOLS.

Rural junior high schools, according to a report of the Department of the Interior, are growing in favor in all parts of the United States, but serious limitations are imposed on them because of failure to provide essential building space and material equipment through which the desirable special activities as media of instruction are made possible.

This report was based upon a study made of 131 of these schools. It was pointed out that of these, only 11 are housed in separate buildings; 14 in buildings with elementary schools; 46 in buildings with senior high schools; 58 in general buildings for all schools of the district, and 2 not specified. Only 10 of the 11 separate buildings were erected with special reference to junior high school work, and the first one of these was erected in 1916. It was stated in conclusion that not more than one in three of these schools could be regarded as having adequate housing provisions.

"THOMAS DAY" AT SHALLOW WELL.

"Thomas Day" was observed in the Sunday School at Shallow Well Christian Church, Jonesboro, N. C., Sunday, April 28th. No, brothers and sisters, it was not a "doubting" Thomas day at all. The following facts and figures taken from the record will show that there was no doubt about it, or doubters in our Thomas day:

Two hundred and forty-nine people present; 21 Thomas families represented; every post of leadership, from superintendent to janitor, was surrendered to and efficiently filled by a Thomas; one class with a count of 70 Thomases; several selections by the widely known Thomas quartet; special address by Mr. Raeford Thomas, of High Point, N. C.; a five-minute talk by Prof. Judd, principal of the Broadway High School. The last-named item was the only, and but a slight digression of the Thomas program, as Prof. Judd's main business at present is that of educating the youth of Thomas families.

How the "Thomas Day" idea came about is interesting. Superintendent Frank Watson can, and does, find more things to do and more ways of getting them done than any lazy man can to save his life. A little census-taking a few weeks ago gave him figures that led him and his splendid corps of co-workers into the field with a message to the uninterested. The workers were agreed. That's their way. Enrollment and attendance in their school was soon more than doubled. But, with them, one thing brings on another. More counting was done. This time it was family names. The name Thomas led the list. Bro. Watson and his helpers said "three cheers" were due the winners. How? "Thomas Day" was the answer. It was a great idea with great results. We wish you could have been there. The offering was for missions.

IMPORTANT BIBLICAL FACTS.

By W. R. CHAPMAN, PH.D. D. D.

It is supposed that Genesis was written about 1550 B. C., and Revelation 95 A. D., covering 1,645 years in all. Others say Genesis was written about 1200 B. C., and 2 Peter about 150 A. D., making 1,350 years. Others say Genesis was written about 1300 B. C., and 2 Peter about 150 A. D., making 1,450 years.

The Old Testament has thirty-nine books; the New Testament twenty-seven, making sixty-six books.

The Pentateuch is composed of the first five books of the Bible, and are ascribed to Moses as author.

The word apocalypse comes from the Greek, and means "to disclose." The word is applied to the book of the Revelation. The word apocrypha comes from the Greek, and means "the hidden." The word is applied to the fourteen books not considered canonical, and hence not in the King James Version of the Bible of 1611.

There are 1,189 chapters in the Bible. There are 31,990 verses in the Bible. There are 766,054 words in the Bible.

In the Old Testament there are 929 chapters, 24,043 verses, and 585,503 words.

In the New Testament there are 260 chapters, 7,947 verses, and 180,551 words.

The longest book is Psalms, containing 150 chapters, 2,461 verses, and 43,743 words.

The longest book written by one man is Jeremiah, which contains 52 chapters, 1,364 verses, and 42,659 words.

The longest verse in the Bible is Esther 8:8; it contains 90 words and 426 letters. The shortest verse in the Bible is John 11:35; it contains two words and nine letters.

The word "and" occurs in the Bible 46,277 times. The word "Lord" occurs in the Bible 1,856 times. The word "reverend" occurs only once (Psalm 111:9). The middle verse of the Bible is Psalm 118:8.

Ezra 7:21 contains all the letters of the alphabet except the letter "j." The Psalms were collected about the time of Ezra.

The translation of the Hebrew Old Testament into Greek, known as the Septuagint, was made in 200 B. C. Division of the Bible into chapters was made about 1228 A. D. The division of the Bible into verses, 1555 A. D.

The King James Version, or the Authorized Version, 1607-1611 A. D. The English Version, known as the Revised Version, New Testament, 1881 A. D.; Revised Version, Old Testament, 1885 A. D. The American Standard Revised Version, 1901 A. D.

The language of the Bible: All the Old Testament was written in Hebrew, except these sections: Ezra 4:8, 6:18, 7:12-26; Daniel 2:4, 7:28; also the interpolated verses Jeremiah 10:11.

The brothers of Jesus were James, Joses, Simon, and Judas (Matt. 13:55). He had sisters (Matt. 13:56).

The term Christian applied to the followers of Christ originated in Antioch (Acts 11:26).

How many Marys are mentioned in the Bible? Five. They are Mary the mother of Jesus; Mary the sister of Jesus' mother; Mary the mother of John, surnamed Mark; Mary the sister of Lazarus and Martha; and Mary Magdalene.

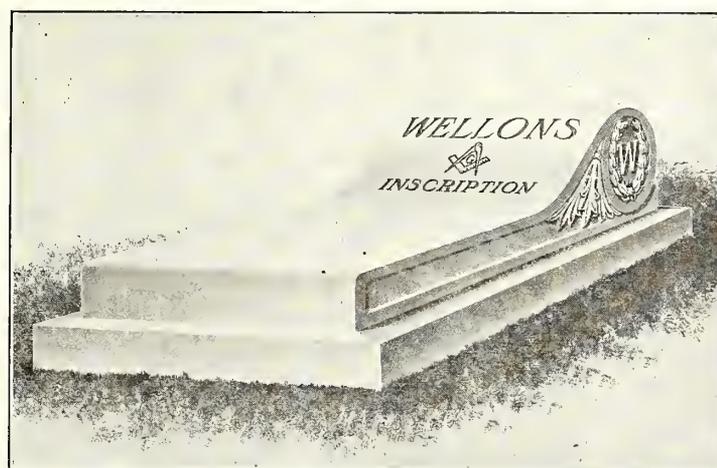

The apostles and disciples died thus: Matthew suffered martyrdom by being stabbed with a sword while preaching in a city of Ethiopia (uncertain); Mark was dragged to death in the streets of Alexandria, Egypt (uncertain); Luke suffered martyrdom by being hanged upon an olive tree in Greece (uncertain); John died at Ephesus, maybe on the Isle of Patmos (uncertain); James, the brother of John, was beheaded at Jerusalem; James, the son of Alphaeus, may have been thrown from a high point of the temple at Jerusalem, then beaten to death (uncertain); James, the brother of Jesus, put to death in Jerusalem; Philip, the apostle, was hung at Hieropolis, Asia (uncertain); Philip, the evangelist, suffered martyrdom (uncertain); Bartholomew, an apostle, probably known as Nathaniel, suffered martyrdom either in India or Armenia; Andrew was both an apostle and a disciple. He was crucified in Greece upon a cross shaped like the letter X. Thomas, believed to have been run through the body with a lance while preaching in India (uncertain). Jude, shot to death with arrows in Persia, while preaching there, according to the best traditions on the matter. Simon, son of Cleophas, may have been the apostle Simon Zelotes, crucified in Palestine. Matthias certainly suffered martyrdom, although where is not positively known. It is said he was stoned by the Jews in Palestine or crucified in Ethiopia (unknown). Paul was undoubtedly killed at Rome by being beheaded about 66 or 68 A. D. Peter, supposed to have suffered martyrdom at Rome by crucifixion (time unknown).

The men who wrote the books of the Bible, so far as human research can discover, were Genesis, supposed to have been written partly by Moses; Exodus, Moses; Leviticus, Moses; Numbers, Moses; Deuteronomy, Moses (but the last chapters describing the death of Moses were added by his successor, Joshua); Joshua, Joshua; Judges, several unknown writers; Ruth, unknown, possibly Samuel; 1 and 2 Samuel compiled by Jeremiah; 1 and 2 Kings compiled by Jeremiah; 1 and 2 Chronicles, compiled by Daniel and Ezra; Ezra: Daniel, Nehemiah, Haggai and Ezra, who did the most of the work; Nehemiah, Nehemiah; Esther, unknown; Job, unknown; Psalms, some written by David, and the whole compiled by Ezra or Simon; Proverbs, some written by Solomon, who compiled the book; Ecclesiastes, unknown, little warrant for the belief that Solomon was the author; Song of Solomon, supposedly Solomon, but may have been Hezekiah; Isaiah, Isaiah, so far as the first 27 chapters, balance supposedly by some person unknown; Jeremiah, Jeremiah; Lamentations, Jeremiah; Ezekiel, Daniel, Hosea, Joel, Amos, Obadiah, Jonah, Micah, Nahum, Habakkuk, Zephaniah, Haggai, Zechariah, Malachi, by the ones whose name they bear.

New Testament: Matthew, Matthew, somewhere in Palestine; Mark, Mark, at Rome, under the direction of Peter; Luke, Luke, at Caesarea, when Paul was there, and doubtless under his direction; John, John, at Ephesus; Acts, Luke, place not positively known; Romans, Paul, at Corinth; 1 and 2 Corinthians, Paul, at Ephesus and Philippi, respectively Galatians, Paul, at Ephesus; Ephesians, Paul, at Rome; Philippians, Paul, at Rome; Colossians, Paul, at Rome; 1 and 2 Thessalonians, Paul, at Corinth; 1 and 2 Timothy, Paul, from Macedonia; Titus, Paul, from Ephesus; Philemon, Paul, from Rome; Hebrews, Paul, from Corinth; James, James, brother of Jesus; 1 and 2 Peter, Peter, probably from Babylon; 1 and 2 and 3 John, John, probably from

The above cut represents the proposed monument to be placed at the grave of Rev. James Willis Wellons, D. D. Besides this, the plot is to be inclosed with a granite curbing and posts. The combination presents a most attractive design. Elaborate lettering is to be placed on the monument. Already the fund has been started. The cost, completed, is to be $865. MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

IS THE MISSIONARY TASK AT AN END?

"One looks out over the generation of which we are a part," writes Dr. Robert E. Speer, "and there are probably more people in the world today who do not know of Christ than there were when the modern missionary enterprise began. There are great areas of the earth as untouched and uninfluenced today as when William Carey first went down into that mine in India . . . great populated regions, hundreds and hundreds of square miles, where no Christian messenger has ever gone, with thousands of villages where the Christian message has never been spoken."

In the interior of South America, there is a vast region, equaling four-fifths of the area of the continent and totaling about six million square miles, in which there are wide ranges untouched vitally, if at all, by Christian agencies. In individual Latin-American countries, our foreign missionary task is still scarcely begun. In Columbia, perhaps the most backward of the South American countries, there is an average of one ordained Protestant minister to every million of her population. Down in Peru is a stretch of country larger than our thirteen original colonies in which there is not one Protestant evangelical worker of any kind. In all Bolivia there are not two hundred Protestant evangelical Church members today. We are only beginning to work among the fifteen million Indians of the Latin-American countries. There are more ordained Protestant clergymen in the State of Iowa than in all South America, Central America and Mexico combined.

The Moslem areas are practically untouched. Dr. Speer tells of traveling through Persia, where for six hundred miles there was not a missionary or preacher, native or foreign, in the whole region. Some of the mission stations in China have a population to evangelize equal to the population of California, Indiana, and Michigan. In India there are single missionaries who have districts of three-quarters of a million people and five hundred villages. There are in India, according to Bishop Azariah, one hundred million people who are not even within the sound of the gospel. The China Survey reveals the fact that there are three hundred and thirty-three countries in China with a population of over thirty-eight million people without a single evangelistic center or a single Christian. Dr. C. Y. Cheng, secretary of the National Christian Council in China, said several years ago that, in his judgment, there were more than one hundred million Chinese who had never even heard the name of Christ, and almost three times that number who are still without intelligent and adequate knowledge of Him.

The rural section of Japan has been scarcely touched. It is estimated that there are forty million people in the country in Japan who are practically unreached by the gospel.

Africa still constitutes a vast unoccupied field. "Scattered over a territory of immense area, without counting the desert stretches of the Sahara, there are to be found some fifty million people—almost one-third of the continent—not only unreached but without any existing agency having their evangelization in contemplation, as far as actual projected plans and hopes are concerned." Many regions are from three to five hundred miles from any foreign missionary. One might even find a location as far as a thousand miles from the nearest station.

One doctor who has gone out to Africa writes of the vast stretches of unoccupied territory, and he says, "I hope to open a hospital here—a small one—in which case I will be the only doctor for a stretch of 1,100 miles in any direction.

"In India today, three villages out of every four are without a school-house, and there are about thirty million children growing up without any instruction. The untouchable constitute one-sixth of the whole population, or about sixty million people. The rate of illiteracy is from eighty to eighty-five per cent."

There is no escaping the fact that there are still millions of people in the world who have no adequate knowledge of the gospel of Jesus Christ; millions who have no chance whatever for health, for education, for sufficient food, or for these things which go to make up a free, full life. It is no time to talk of the missionary's task at an end.—From "Training for World Friendship," by Brown.

WHY WE STOPPED THINKING OF HEAVEN AND HELL.

Perhaps more truly than it is comfortable to think of, the missionary emphasis of recent years has been representative of our general religious life. We have stopped thinking much about heaven and hell, and therefore the future state of the "heathen" has lost interest for us. We have now had the comforts and conveniences of sanitation and health and easy conditions of life to the point of luxury so long that we have forgotten the meaning of bitter poverty and hardships and low standards of living. Our Church life is comfortable, conventional, and respectable. We have fine Churches; we pay our pastors comfortable salaries, for the most part; we employ paid workers, or wish we could; we complain about the frightful cost of living, yet continue to buy radios and automobiles and theater tickets; we make no real sacrifices. We continue to give to missions more or less perfunctorily as a matter of denominational pride, and in order to ease our consciences, feeling that we "ought to do something for missions." As a result, we are spending more than ever before on magnificent Church buildings, paid workers, pastors' salaries, and equipment, while in every denomination the missionary giving has dropped and dropped again till retrenchments are everywhere the order of the day.

We might as well face the facts. Most of us have lost our missionary passion because we have nothing worth sharing. We are too comfortable, too ambitious, too enamored of worldly success, of comfort, of pleasure. Our lives are soft and easy on one side; rushed, harried, hurried on the other. There is nothing we care enough about to die for, or which challenges us to live heroically.—From "Training for World Friendship," by Brown.

NOTICE THE REPORTS AND THE TOTALS.

We are trusting that every pastor and the interested ones in every church, are noticing the reports for Missions as presented in THE SUN each week. As the Mission Secretary wrote in these columns recently, it was not he, nor the Mission Board, but the Southern Convention, that put the offering for missions in the "hard-time" of the year. Missions have always had hard times in the Christian Church. We presume Missions will continue to have difficulties, trials, hard-times. Our Lord had difficulties, trials, hard-times, but He put His disciples and all who would follow Him to the test when He said, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross daily and follow me."

Many pastors, we regret to say, have not so far reported any offering taken from their church, and many churches have not yet reported anything done for Missions. This is deplorable, indeed, when it is remembered that the only hope now of a church, or an individual, giving anything to Missions, or doing anything for Missions, must be given and done directly, and not through percentages or Conferences, or calls of any kind other than those issued directly to the church and to the Sunday School and the individual. Although it is seemingly an inopportune time for many churches and people to make donations to Missions, our Convention has so arranged and decreed, and the test is upon us. It is a real test of our loyalty, of our devotion, and of our willingness to make sacrifices in the name of and for the sake of our Lord. We are challenged to raise $45,000.00 for Missions this year, on or before September 30th. So far we have raised and sent in, as the report for this week shows, $28,313.44, which leaves us $16,686.56 to raise if we reach the goal. We wish every church and pastor who has not taken a part in this offering would realize what it means and would come in and join the rest in making a self-denial offering, even in a hard and trying time, for the sake of their Lord and for the sake of a cause that is fundamental in church life and growth. It is a test and a challenge, indeed, to every church member and every Sunday School pupil.

Mission Secretary.

A STANZA FOR MATERIALISTIC TIME.

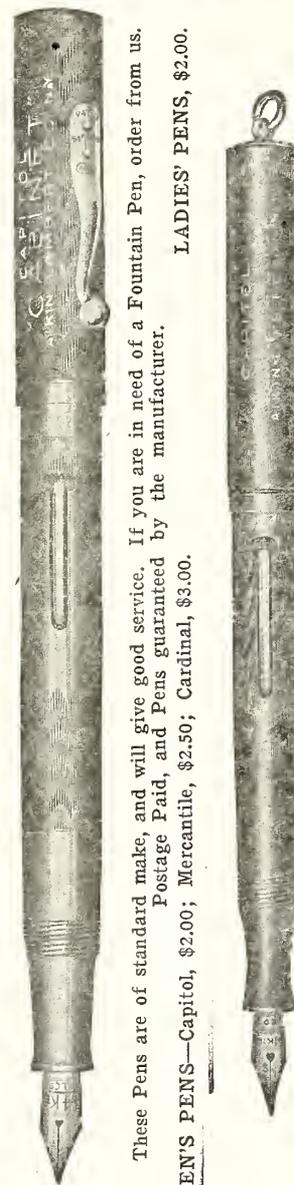

Rebecca McCann, in "The Cheerful Cherub," has this penetrating stanza:

"Persons who seek their happiness
By buying clothes and cars and rings,
Don't seem to know that empty lives
Are just as empty, filled with things."

One great trouble with many of us is that we are trying to fill up our lives with "things." It's the same condition that our Lord confronted on earth when He said: "For a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth (Luke 12:15). Things, however rich, beautiful and abundant, cannot satisfy life, because life isn't a thing—it is a life. If we would enrich that life, we must do so by freely partaking of and following the life of Him who said: "I came that they might have life, and have it more abundantly." J. O. A.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

BY REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

LESSON VII—May 19, 1929.

JEREMIAH CALLS TO OBEDIENCE.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Hearken unto my voice, and I will be your God, and ye shall be my people."
—Jer. 7:29.

LESSON: Jer. 7:1-26.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psa. 96:7-13.

The times called for stern measures. The people of Judah had the mistaken idea that ceremony, and not conduct and character, was the most important thing in religion. They thought that just as long as they came to the temple to worship, and just as long as they went through the proper ceremonies in the proper way, everything would be all right. In fact, they felt that the temple itself would guarantee them protection from the evils that had befallen the Northern kingdom. Whenever any one dared voice the prediction that the time of reckoning would come, they would sound their pious slogan, "The temple of the Lord, the temple of the Lord, the temple of the Lord," as much as if to say, "Why, man, you do not know what you are talking about. The idea of anything happening to us or to our sacred city! Why, we have the temple of the Lord itself in our midst." They would do as they pleased, and then come unto the temple and say, "We are delivered to do all these abominations." True religion was indeed at a low ebb when such a condition prevailed. The times needed a man of moral and spiritual insight and of conviction and courage.

Jeremiah was come into the kingdom for such a time as this. The word of the Lord came to him in regard to the matter, and with his characteristic zeal he set himself to his task. Taking his stand at the door of the temple itself—he struck at the heart of the matter—he spoke words that, even today after centuries, burn with the fire of his prophetic insight and his moral and spiritual power. He proclaimed truths that need re-emphasis today. He laid hold of principles that are eternal.

In this particular chapter he announces several abiding principles of true religion. He establishes the fact which the people of his own day had overlooked, as the people of our day are prone to overlook, namely that religion is vitally related to character and conduct. Morality cannot be divorced from religion in the highest sense. It is not enough that a man shall perform all the religious rites and ceremonies or perform them in exactly the proper way. Religion is not primarily a matter of that at all. Religion is primarily a matter of right personal relationships between a man and his God and a man and his fellow-men. In other words, the people of Jeremiah's day needed to know that it is not enough that a man be religious on Sunday and do as he please through the week. True religion will find place and expression in all of life throughout the week. The prophet therefore called upon the people to "amend" their ways. Safety for them, as for us, lies not in outward forms but in right inner spirit.

Jeremiah also announces another great principle of religion when he summons the people to "obey." Here is the heart of the matter, not only in religion, but in everything else. Self-preservation may be the first law of nature, but obedience is perhaps the first law of God. Disobedience is sin, and sin is disobedience. Here again Jeremiah is getting at the heart of the matter. Not conformity to outward ceremonies, but obedience from within is the supreme fact of religion. And yet God does not want forced obedience. He wants the glad obedience of a son prompted by love and gratitude. "If ye love me ye will keep my commandments," said Jesus. This matter of obedience, of course, causes the rub. It is difficult to obey. In so many cases we do not want to obey. We would rather sacrifice than to obey. But still stands the ancient and eternal pronouncement of God. "To obey is better than to sacrifice." Again Jesus said, "Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I command you?"

It might be remarked in passing that one of the fundamental virtues to be inculcated and developed in children is obedience. A disobedient child is more than a nuisance; it is a tragedy. All of life is based on obedience. And the most strategic place to teach obedience is in the home. Where children have been taught respect for and obedience to rightful authority in the home—not by mere force, but by sound reason and by the appeal to love—there will not be so much difficulty in getting them to obey God's laws as well as the laws of the State. America needs a legion of Jeremiahs to proclaim insistently and persistently the message of obedience.

Jeremiah puts his finger on another great truth when he says, "Do they provoke me to anger? saith the Lord; do they not provoke themselves to the confusion of their own faces?" Alas, that we should be so blind as not to see the truth of that statement put in interrogatory form. God is grieved by the sins of His children, and the sins of His children affect others, but the sinner works havoc in his own life above all else. Jeremiah, therefore, enjoins his countrymen to turn from their evil ways, that they might live, for the favor of Jehovah is with those who set their hearts to do His will.

There emerges in Jeremiah's preaching the increasing sense of personal responsibility. Jeremiah, in a sense, discovered the individual in religion. He was among the first to see what Paul later declared, "So, then, every one of us must give an account of himself to God." Let every man take heed, therefore, unto himself. And let every man so order his inner life that his conduct shall be in keeping with the Spirit of Jesus.

TOPIC: "Why Is Jesus the World's Greatest Leader?"—John 15:9-16, 12:23-27.

Some Bible Hints.

Jesus is the world's greatest leader because He is the greatest lover. No man ever showed the love of God in action as He did (v. 9).

Jesus leads the world in utter obedience to God. What God willed, Jesus also willed, absolutely. There was nothing of self in Him (v. 10).

Jesus leads because He takes His followers into His confidence, keeping no secret from them. He shows them the way to the heights (v. 15).

Jesus is the world's greatest Leader because He is the world's greatest sacrifice. All His life long He poured Himself out in sacrificial service (vs. 23-27).

Suggestive Thoughts.

Jesus was the world's greatest Servant. Without His life and His message, the world would have been poor indeed. Think of what He has meant for mankind!

The greatness of Jesus' leadership lies in its moral quality. He lifted men. All who knew Him sincerely were transformed by that contact. Consider Peter.

It is not only the cross that makes Jesus a great Leader. Many others have died for their convictions. It is what the cross stands for—the love of God, sacrifice for sin, and the world's redemption.

It is personality that makes the great leader, and in this respect Jesus stands supreme. Even unbelievers admit the strange charm of His character.

Jesus knew whither He was leading. He came to bring men back to God. He knew God, and His work was to reveal Him.

The world will follow the man who knows. One who vacillates can never be a leader. The leader must see his goal and make straight for it.

There were people whom Jesus did not trust (John 2:24), but He really trusted the common people. He was the first great democrat. His leadership is based on confidence and love.

Jesus' leadership depended and depends more on what He is than on what He does. It is character that counts. His followers become true leaders only as they develop noble characters.

To Think About.

How may we imitate Jesus' leadership?

What modern movements do you think Jesus would lead today?

What has Jesus meant to the world?

THE CHURCH AND THE RURAL PEOPLE.

The Situation.

In the illuminating little volume, "Empty Churches," by Dr. C. J. Galpin, are given us the following interesting facts: There are at present 73,230 communities which are within town and country area. There are 33,808 communities, or 42 per cent of them, which have no resident pastor, and 30,000 communities that have no pastor at all. These facts are indeed appalling, but sadder still is the fact that there are others constantly being added. What is the significance of this, and what can we do to help the situation?

It is not an uncommon occurrence to find in Churches which have a democratic form of government, such as the Baptist, Presbyterian, Disciples, Congregationalist, and our own, the Christian, a minister who lives forty, fifty, sixty or a hundred miles from the Church which he serves as pastor. There may come also into this same community or an adjoining one another who has traveled a distance equally as far to serve a Church of the same denomination. In his travels last summer, the writer visited a community where a similar situation existed. In this community there were four Churches which had the year before been served by a resident pastor, but who had transferred to another field. At the time of my visit it was being served by two men, one coming from a distance of approximately fifty miles, and the other coming from a distance of approximately seventy-five miles.

Remedies.

These are but a few facts one could give depicting the situation that exists in many of the rural areas. These may be eliminated in part by the following means:

1. Better co-operation among the individual Churches.
2. A more efficient ministerial leadership.
3. A ministry consecrated to the task of acquainting itself more thoroughly with the life of the country people and willing to give itself in loving sacrificial service to the rural ministry.
4. Fewer and better Churches.

5. A growing consciousness that the rural Church will rise or fall with the rural minister.

What is Being Done?

Under the auspices of the School of Religion at Vanderbilt University, the Rural Church School a few days ago closed its third session. It is a plan which brought together three hundred and sixty pastors from twenty-six denominations and twenty-two States. For twelve days they were engaged in attending lecture forums and class periods, studying together the problems as they relate themselves to the rural minister. In addition to the regular class-room discussions and lectures, denominational groups met for fellowship and to discuss problems relative to their various fields of service.

The following denominations were represented by pastors attending the school: Baptist (Missionary), 15; Brethren, 1; Brethren (United), 5; Christian, 7; Disciples, 22; Church of the Brethren, 11; Episcopal (Protestant), 23; Evangelical, 1; Evangelical Synod of America, 2; Friends, 3; Church of Nazarene, 1; Church of Christ, 3; Church of God, 1; Congregationalist, 11; Lutheran, 5; Lutheran (United L. Ch. of America), 1; Lutheran (United Evangelical), 1; Moravian, 3; Methodist Episcopal, 28; Methodist Episcopal, South, 138; Presbyterian (Cumberland), 9; Presbyterian (U. S.), 22; Presbyterian (United), 2; Presbyterian (U. S. A.), 21; Reformed Church in the U. S., 4; Universalist, 4; Churches not given, 18.

Opinions on the Plan.

Dr. Paul L. Vogt, of the University of Oklahoma, writes as follows: "It is the most constructive program for rural leadership training now being done in the United States. It not only provides an adequate faculty, but it also makes it possible for rural pastors to attend.

"It renders a service that cannot be duplicated within denominational or State boundaries. It creates a consciousness of needs common to the entire South. It dignifies rural service. It makes the present and future leaders of all denominations in rural work acquainted with one another. They will rally to the call for a larger, more effective program for caring for the neglected and for overcoming wasteful competitive duplication."

Dr. H. W. McLaughlin, director of the country Church department of the Presbyterian Church, U. S., Richmond, Va., says: "The popularity of the school is evidence of at least two facts: first, that a real worth-while program is being provided, and, second, that there is a widespread conscious need on the part of rural ministers for a curriculum of training that is practical and will, in a definite way, help them to meet their difficulties and solve their problems."

Other Features.

For each person who attends the school, the university pays all the expense. This includes transportation both ways, board and room. Vanderbilt University has the only non-denominational school of religion in the South. In addition to conducting the special short course given in the spring each year, the school of religion conducts through much of the year a series of short courses in rural problems, the students being men already highly trained in religious work, graduates of colleges and seminaries. The school is at present engaged in a campaign to perpetuate this movement of service by raising a total endowment of $2,500,000.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE,
One of Our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MONDAY.

KEEP RIGHT ON.

"Be not afraid of them that kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul."—Matt. 10:24-33.

On May 19, 1780, a horror of great darkness fell over New England. The Connecticut legislature was in session, and some one moved to adjourn, as it was evidently the day of judgment; but Abraham Davenport earnestly opposed the motion, saying that they could not better meet the Lord than engaged in their ordinary duty. With all reverence he would say, "Let God do His work, we will see to ours. Bring in the candles." And this was done.

There is no stouter urge to courage than the simple doing of duty. Let us keep right on about our appointed tasks, let the world and the elements rage as they will. The Lord will bless and keep His faithful servants.

Prayer.—Steadily at Thy work, Lord Jesus, we would serve Thy children and do Thy will. Nothing shall affright us, if Thou art with us. Thy will be done. Amen.

TUESDAY.

ONLY BE FAITHFUL.

"Well done, good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will set thee over many things; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."—Matt. 25:14-23.

The best way to simplify life is to set it to the key of faithfulness. Ask yourself: "What is my duty?" and you will not need to ask or answer any other question. Faithfulness to duty is the road through the labyrinth; it is the path to the heights; it is the sure way to the goal of life.

But, it may well be asked, how can we attain fidelity? The spirit may be entirely willing, but the flesh is so weak. Who can be faithful to God's requirements for a single day? Our faults and sins are ever with us, and pull our fidelity down from perfectness into the dust.

Happily, we need not rely on our fidelity, for we have Christ's perfect faithfulness to depend upon. He will save us from our unfaithfulness. When we are weak, He will add strength. All our flaws He will amend with His perfectness.

Prayer.—O Christ, we cannot in ourselves be faithful over even a few things, but Thou wilt make us faithful over many things. May we enter into Thy fidelity, that we may enter into Thy joy. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

GOD'S RUSH OF FORGIVENESS.

"If we confess our sins, He is faithful and righteous to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness."—1 John 1:5-10.

God not only forgives, but He cleanses, and His cleansing is not partial but complete. All unrighteousness goes before the rush of the purifying flood. The Almighty Absolver is thorough in all His ways, perfect in all His works.

Phillips Brooks said: "Oh, the freedom with which the gates of the divine forgiveness are thrown open!" Why should not the eagerness of this offer be matched by the eagerness of our seeking and acceptance? Should the only sluggishness in this great matter be on our human side?

Prayer.—Blessed Giver, pardon the coldness of our response to Thee. Warm our hearts with Thy love. Fire our souls with Thy passion. Fuse our desires with Thine, that together we may seek the things that Thou dost see to be the only good. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

THURSDAY.

CHRIST'S SLAVE.

"He that was called in the Lord, being a bond-servant, is the Lord's freedman; likewise, he that was called being free, is Christ's bondservant."—1 Cor. 7:17-24.

Prof. England's little daughter was very wild, willful, and disobedient—the bane of his life. Punishment could not curb her temper. He took her with him to his camp on the great, active volcano of Mauna Loa, in Hawaii, and to reach it they had to pass through a very deep valley. The darkness fell, lit only by the lurid fires of the volcano. The little girl had been rushing from the path from side to side into the perilous forest, but as they came to the black valley, where only her father's lantern showed the way, she came close to him and put her hand in his. She shuddered as she looked down a fearful chasm. At last she heard the terrific rush of waters and begged to be taken into his arms. She was a heavy weight for his slight strength, but he gladly carried her. She clung to his neck, hugging him, her tears wetting his cheek. The experience changed her whole nature. She wanted only to be with him, would not leave him without permission, and then but briefly. When absent, she wrote to him daily. She lost her old-time independence, but for the first time found the true freedom of love and trust.

Prayer.—That, O our Saviour, is the freedom we would have from Thee. We would be Thy slave, that we may become Thy freedman. We would know Thy service, that we may know Thy friendship. We would lose our will altogether, that we may find it in Thy victorious will. Amen.

FRIDAY.

OUT OF ONE'S SELF.

"He loved Him as he loved his own soul."—1 Sam. 20:17-23.

The love of David and Jonathan for each other was unique only in that it was uniquely chronicled. Others, many, many others, both men and women, have loved each other as their own souls, but their stories have not been told in the beautiful Bible language. Yet, whether known to fame or unknown, the essence of their friendship is expressed in these Bible words; they have found in each other another soul.

Thomas Hughes once stated this quality of friendship in two worthy sentences: "Blessed is the man," he said, "who has the gift of making friends, for it is one of God's best gifts. It involves many things; but above all, the power of going out of one's self and seeing and appreciating what is noble and loving in another." This is a very valuable gift. It enriches the one who has it, because it adds other lives—the best of other lives—to his own. It enriches all his friends with his understanding of them, his praise and encouragement. Unselfishness is the prime virtue, and friendship is unselfishness in action and feeling.

Prayer.—Take us out of ourselves, O Thou Friend of friends! Emancipate us from the narrow circle of our little interests and free us into the breadth and outreach of the heavenly interests. Help us to be friends of all, and especially of Thee, that in Thy companionship we may know what true friendship is. Amen.

SATURDAY.

WHILE THEY ARE OURS.

"Thou foolish one, this night is thy soul required of Thee; and the things which thou hast prepared, whose shall they be?"—Luke 12:15-21.

Once when a minister called on a noble Christian merchant seeking a subscription for a good object, he was told that the merchant had just heard of a failure which meant a loss to him of half a million dollars. Excusing himself for presenting such a request at such a time, the minister was going, when the merchant said, "My wealth is not mine, but the Lord's. Perhaps He is intending to put it into other hands, so I must make good use of it while I have control of it." Thereupon he gave twice as much as he had planned to give.

This story is told in so many ways of so many men, that it seems to represent a rather common experience. The loss of money will make some men penurious, but others will be spurred by it to a new sense of responsibility. They see in their loss a warning from the Giver of all good: "Use your possessions while you have them. They will be another's tomorrow. You are only a temporary steward; make good use of your stewardship. Today has its chances that will never come again."

Prayer.—God of the day, we hail our blessed opportunity! God of the day, help us to be faithful to its hours! This is Thy day, wherein to employ Thy provision for the day. While our blessings are ours, oh, may we make them Thine! Amen.

SUNDAY.

A HAPPY MEETING.

"Mercy and truth are met together."—Psa. 85:7-13.

Mercy and truth are partners, sharers in the same enterprise, which is the doing of justice and the establishment of Christ's kingdom on earth. Mercy is to temper truth, and truth is to guide mercy. Beware of losing sight of either of them.

For it is very easy to lose sight of them. Dr. Alexander Maclaren once wrote wisely: "We look at our neighbor's errors with a microscope, and at our own through the wrong end of the telescope."

So we are unmerciful toward others because we do not recognize the truth about ourselves, and we are untrue to ourselves because we are not merciful toward others. Let us provide, in our lives every day, a meeting-place where mercy and truth can sit down together and view the realities of life in the spirit of love.

Prayer.—Make us merciful, O Lord, and seekers of truth. Amen.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

We have quite a number of Sunday Schools that go into winter quarters during the winter months and open up again after the cold weather. During these months, only a few of them make monthly offerings to help support the Orphanage. The sad part is that the children in the Orphanage eat food and wear clothes all these months, as usual.

Then another sad part is, it takes so long to get some of them back on the list again. In looking over our list of Conferences, we find the following facts: N. C. & Va. Conference, 37 Sunday Schools, eight not making a monthly offering; Eastern N. C. Conference, 41 Sunday Schools, 10 not making a monthly offering; Western N. C. Conference, 34 Sunday Schools, 10 not giving; Eastern Virginia, 46 Sunday Schools, 13 not giving; Valley Virginia Central Conference, 22 Sunday Schools, 9 not giving; Alabama Conference, 28 Sunday Schools, 21 not giving; Georgia and Alabama Conference, 13 Sunday Schools, 8 not giving.

What if every Sunday School in all these Conferences would make a monthly offering—what a help it would be to the Orphanage in carrying on its work! The Christian Orphanage is an avenue of service to helpless humanity. Through it, you give bread to the hungry; you give clothes to the naked; you minister to the sick; you give a home to the homeless; you visit the widow and the fatherless in their affliction and minister unto them. It is a modern way of doing charity work. Let every Sunday School make a monthly offering to help the Orphanage.

PIEDMONT JUNIOR BOARD TO MEET.

To the Board of Trustees of Piedmont Junior College:

My dear Fellow-Workers:

This is to officially notify you of the annual meeting of the board of trustees of Piedmont Junior College, May 13, 1929, at 9:30 A. M., to be held in the new administration building, Wadley, Ala.

Your presence is earnestly solicited, since we shall have some momentous problems pertaining to the future of the college that demand our immediate attention—a challenge involving opportunity as well as responsibility.

Will you accept the challenge of the hour? Your presence at this meeting will be affirmative answer.

Very sincerely yours,
CHAIRMAN, BOARD OF TRUSTEES.

LOVING JESUS.

“Jesus said to Simon Peter: Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me more than these?” “Feed my lambs”—John 21:15.

Jesus was shortly to go away from the earth, and He was anxious that Peter should realize that in loving Jesus he must show that love by ministering to his fellow-men. Peter had just eaten of the fish and bread that Jesus had waiting for the disciples after a night of fruitless labor at Peter's old task of fishing. And now that Peter had satisfied his hunger, Jesus was plumbing the depths of Peter's love for Himself. So many times Peter had professed his love and loyalty, but now Jesus gave him the triple test of love. It was not the human love of man for man; not the love of fleshly appetite, but the divine love of God for all mankind, the least as well as the greatest. The love that seeks the unlovely; the love that demands no return; the love that administers to the cripple at the gate beautiful, as well as to Cornelius, of Caesarea.

To love is to obey, and as time passes we see Peter obeying Jesus' command to feed the sheep and lambs. Peter was the most human of the disciples, and we are all so very much like him. And as Jesus speaks to Peter, so He speaks to us and asks us, “Lovest thou me more than these?” We say we love Him, yet so many times our very actions belie our words, even as Peter's did. Jesus said, “If ye love me, keep my commandments.” And only as we obey His commands do we show to the world that we truly love Him. We, like Peter, have sat at His table and feasted upon the living Word as it fell from His lips; and we hear Him say to us, “Feed my sheep,” but we cannot obey His command unless we love Him more than the fleeting things of the world. If we do love Him more than these, we want others to know Him, too, and to enjoy the same sweet fellowship which we enjoy.

Our ministry to our fellow-men depends upon our love for Jesus. “We love Him because He first loved us.” His love begets our love, and we only keep it as we share it with those whom we come in contact with. Oh, may we love Him so that every one we meet may know that we do love Him best of all. May we get a spiritual vision of Jesus with His outstretched arms of love, pleading with us as Christians, “Lovest thou me?” And may we go forth in His strength to feed His sheep and to bring the lost into His kingdom. May our daily prayer be the words of Elizabeth Prentiss:

“More love to Thee, O Christ! More love to Thee! Hear Thou the prayer I make on bended knee— This is my earnest plea: more love, O Christ, to Thee;
More love to Thee, more love to Thee!” W.

IMPORTANT BIBLICAL FACTS.

Ephesus; Jude, Judas; Revelation, John, on the Isle of Patmos. It is supposed that forty men wrote the Bible.

There are 54 miracles in the Old Testament; there are 51 miracles in the New Testament.

Esther is the book about which it has been said that the name of God does not occur in it. When this book was written, God's people were in such a godless condition that God would not allow His name to be publicly associated with them, even in one of the books inspired by His Spirit. It is not correct to say the name of God is not to be found in the book of Esther. Dr. Bullinger, in his book, "The Name of Jehovah in the Book of Esther," shows that it is there four times. It is not easily discerned, because it is in acrostic form.

The Hebrew word Jehovah originally consisted of the four consonants, J H V H; that is, no vowels were used at all in Hebrew; and it is this name, "Je Ho Va H," which lies hidden in Esther.

First, in the initial letters of four Hebrew words in Esther 1:20 reads forwards (Hebrew is read from right to left); that is, from right to left, thus, H-V-H-J.

Second, in the initial letters of four Hebrew words in Esther 5:4 reads backwards; that is, from left to right, thus, J-H-V-H.

Third, in the final letters of four Hebrew words in Esther 5:13 reads forwards; that is, from right to left, thus, H-V-H-J.

Fourth, in the final letters of the four Hebrew words in Esther 7:7 read backwards; that is, from left to right, thus, J-H-V-J.

In each of these cases we have the consonants J H V H, which is the original Hebrew word Jehovah.

Isaiah prophesied a little over 700 B. C., and therefore stands nearly midway between Moses, who gave the law about 1500 B. C., and Christ, who kept and fulfilled the law for us.

The writing of the Bible spread over a period of 1600 years.

In 1250, Cardinal Hugo was the first to divide the Bible into chapters; this he did for the purpose of aiding him in making a Latin concordance.

In 1551, Sir Robert Stephens was the first to divide any part of the Bible into verses; this he did in a Greek New Testament which he brought out at this time.

There are in the New Testament 263 direct quotations from the Old Testament; 370 allusions to passages in the Old Testament.

About 457 B. C., Ezra arranged all the books of the Old Testament in order, except Nehemiah and Malachi, which had not been written.

In 397 A. D., the Council of Carthage first published a list of the New Testament books as they are now.

In the four gospels there are 35 parables and 35 miracles.

WHAT IS AHEAD OF US?

Students of the Bible, as well as students of the times, see many signs of the culmination of the struggle of good with evil. The Bible points more than once to "perilous times" in the last days, when men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, etc., having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof. This is a dark picture, yet it well describes much that we find in the world and in the Church of God.

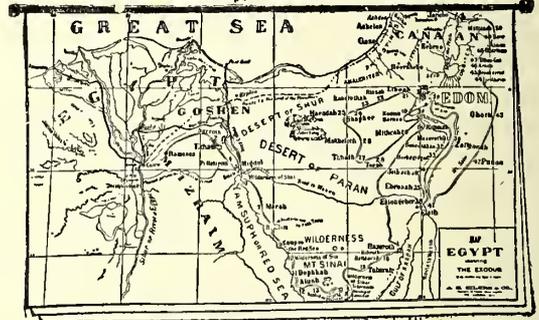

These are not the gloomy forebodings of some depressed Christian, but they find an echo in the views of some of our ablest and sanest leaders. In 1891, in a memorial address for Dr. Casper Hodge, Dr. Francis Patton makes this prophecy: "I may be wrong; but it seems to me that American Christianity is about to pass through a severe ordeal. It may be a ten years' conflict; it may be a thirty years' war—but it is a conflict in which all Christian Churches are concerned.

"The war will come. The Presbyterian Church must take part in it; and Princeton, unless her glory is departed, must lead the van in the great fight for fundamental Christianity. It is not amendment, it is not revision, it is not restraint, it is a revolution that we shall have to face. The issue will be joined by and by on the essential truth of a miraculous and God-given revelation, and then we must be ready to fight and, if need be, to die in defense of the blood-bought truths of common salvation."

These words deserve serious consideration. They are not the raving of a fanatic, but the serious warnings of a conservative man in his old age, when he had retired from active work, and had given himself to thought and study.

The sad feature of the present period in the history of man is the general apathy and blindness, not to say indifference, of the ministry and Christian leaders. Wherever we look, in every

Holman Jewel Testament
INDIA PAPER ONLY—Size 2 1/2 x 4 1/2 inches x 3/4 inch

The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.

The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller.

It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength.

One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.

The size, 2 1/2 x 4 1/2 inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

Church there is the spirit of indifference, the willingness to let things go, if the defenders of that view will let them alone. Like a plague, this spirit is spreading. It is seen in the preaching of the day, in the life of the Church, and in the literature that is coming from the press.

The spirit of the Laodicean Church possesses us, and therefore we may look for the judgment of that Church to be pronounced upon us.

Dr. Patton was never an alarmist. With the prophetic eye of old age, he saw into the future, and he called upon the Church to prepare for battle. The battle is coming, and the question for every man is, "Where shall I stand?"—Presbyterian Standard.

PERSONAL EVANGELISM.

A pastor of a large Methodist Church in the North, who is a very successful evangelistic pastor, gave this report of a revival campaign a few years ago:

"Among the 213 received into the Church was a man seventy-nine years old. He was won by my walking into his house of his seventy-ninth birthday and telling him God had sent me for his soul. All a-tremble, he called out, 'Mother, Mother, the preacher says he has come for my soul. Mother, you know our house has always been the home of Methodist preachers, but this is the first one that ever came for my soul.' God got it that day. A few weeks ago the phone announced this man was dying, and urged me to come quick. Standing by his bed, he pulled me down and whispered with his failing breath, 'I could not die without thanking you again for coming for my soul that day.' Many are waiting for us to come after their souls this year. We can have them if we will go after them. 'Where there's a will, there's a way.'"

But we must remember that personal evangelism is something that concerns laymen as well as preachers. The early Christians were all evangelists in practice. After hearing Billy Sunday preach, a prominent banker said to a friend, with deep emotion:

"Last night I went to hear Billy Sunday. He said there were some people who considered themselves Christians, but if they should get to heaven they would have a lonesome time of it. They would not find a friend or other person there to welcome them for whose salvation they had been responsible. I am one of that class. If I should go to heaven today I could not find a person there whom I had asked to become a Christian. But if God will permit me to live another week, I promise you there will be those whom I have asked to accept Christ and to meet me in heaven."

A rich banker, but a spiritual pauper! Alas! how many there are like him! But he was true to his pledge, became an enthusiastic personal worker, and many heard the call to a Christian life. "He that winneth souls is wise."—By H. H. Smith.

WHY MISSIONS?

The terrific responsibility of America implies the necessity of sharing if she is to save herself from sordid materialism. Possessing some $400,000,000,000, or one-third of all the wealth of the world, and nearly half of its gold supply, having passed through the war from a debtor to a creditor nation, with the world owing us some twenty-five billion dollars in foreign debts and investments, so that they must pay us a million dollars a day on our debts and a billion dollars a year on our investments, the responsibility of a land that once held "the moral leadership of the world" is as great as our wealth and power.

Are we to become like, Babylon or Rome, sordid with materialism, or to save ourselves and others as we share with the world? Meanwhile, we defeat legislation designed to abolish child labor or rebuild our slums at home, and say, "We do not believe in foreign missions" abroad. Are we to become the Dives among the nations, the Shylock who demands his full pound of flesh from others, or the Good Samaritan of a needy world? Whatever may be the want of the world, do we not need missions to save our own souls!

The present need of the world can only be met by the sharing of knowledge and privilege implied in missions. We are here speaking not of imposing a doctrine, which no man has a right to do, but of sharing a life.

The need of Africa today stands stark before us. Witness the brilliant Albert Schweitzer, the young philosopher, theologian, and musician of Germany, a versatile Leonardo of our modern renaissance and one of the outstanding men of this generation, mastering modern medicine, to go out to share his life in the heart of darkest Africa. Writing, "On the Edge of the Primeval Forest," sent by "the fellowship of those who hear the mark of pain," he says, "physical misery is great everywhere out here—millions and millions live without help or hope; doctors should go forth to carry out among the miserable in far-off lands all that ought to be done in the name of civilization, human and humane. Sooner or later this idea (of missions) will conquer the world, for with inexorable logic it carries with it the intellect as well as the heart."—Missionary Monthly.

BURDENS MAY BECOME BRIDGES.—

An ant was carrying home a bit of straw, and came to a crack in the rock it was crossing. The little ant tried in different ways to get its burden across and finally decided on a plan. It put one end of the straw down at the edge of the crack and then pushed it till it reached the other side, then walked across on his burden, making it a bridge. All the burdens that we bear may in time become bridges which will carry us over to the other side if we bear them faithfully.—Sel.

THE MARVEL OF RADIO.—

William Eveleigh, writing for the Christian Herald from Cape Town, Africa, cites the following quotation, which he states was taken from a leading South African newspaper: "The Sunday afternoon concerts from KDKA (Pittsburgh) and WXAD (New York) which are heard here on Sunday evenings at 11 o'clock, seem to be coming over very well at present. The organ recital from KDKA is always delightful, and Dr. Cadman's address from W2XAD is well worth listening to." Mr. Everleigh adds this comment: "Is Dr. Cadman aware, I wonder, that members of his congregation live in South Africa? Of him it may be truly said, 'His line is gone out through all the earth and his words to the end of the world.'"

MEXICO FOR SOCIAL BETTERMENT.—

Though the Federal government of Mexico has been fighting for its life during recent months, the question of social improvement has not been lost from the national program. The success that has attended the Federal forces has virtually crushed the revolution. And now comes President Portes Gill with the announcement of a move to suppress the indulgence in alcoholic liquors.

The plans as outlined are along educational lines. Alcohol is one of the deeply entrenched evils which Mexico has to face. The government is planning to acquaint the nation with the evils which liquor brings, not only upon the drinker but upon the entire social organization. It looks toward the creation of a strong public sentiment against the organized liquor industry. The only direct effort against the saloon is the restriction against opening additional places where liquor is to be sold, and the restriction of saloons near public gathering places. The program also provides for efforts to provide wholesome entertainment and sports, especially for youth who might be attracted to drink, in the absence of suitable recreational facilities.

BOOKS AT A LOWER PRICE.—

Time, the weekly newsmagazine, recently carried this news item: "Albert and Charles Boni, shrewd Manhattan publishers, announced last week the formation of a 'Paper Book Club.' Object, to sell twelve new paper-bound books per annum for $5." We are not acquainted with the Boni publishing firm, nor do we know the type of books which they plan to publish. But we have been hoping for some time that some one would do for the publishing world what Henry Ford did for the automobile world, viz: place the price of books within the reach of the average family income. We are not acquainted with the conditions that maintain in the work of publishing books, and we are not attempting any suggestions as to how the cost of books may be reduced; but we are convinced that the average book lover is not blessed with an unlimited income, and that in recent years the steadily mounting cost of books has been rather appalling to many readers, who find a keen joy in the possession of the books that they find most worth while.

If it is possible to reduce the cost of books, we believe that it will not only make it possible for the confirmed reader to buy more books, but that it will serve to materially and constantly increase the number of book readers.

WITNESSING POWER.—

Toyohiko Kagawa, Japan's flaming Christian evangelist and social worker, bears the following testimony: "I am a captive of a missionary. I was converted through contact with the Christian personalities of Dr. Meyers and Dr. Logan. Before I had read the Bible fully, my living in their homes had convinced me of the value of the Christian life. We need more missionaries."

Kagawa might well have added that everywhere there is an urgent need for just such Christian lives as was responsible for his conversion. The real power of Christianity is the Spirit of Jesus Christ manifested in the lives of those who profess to be His followers. The greatest apologetic for Christianity has always been the lives of those who are living close to the Christ. This fact has been forced anew upon our consciousness by the testimony of missionaries, who declare their work is meeting its most severe obstacle in the contact of the people whom they are endeavoring to reach with those who are supposed to be Christians, but whose lives do not manifest the Spirit of the Christ. Here in a land that is nominally Christian, we are subject to so many cross-currents of influence that we cannot so clearly discern the hindrances. But wherever there are individuals or Churches whose influence is telling mightily for the kingdom, it will be found that back of that influence is an exemplification of the Spirit of Jesus.

STRAINING AT A GNAT.—

A Federal court in Brooklyn, N. Y., recently completed the trial of a most unusual case. Mrs. Mary Ware Dennett was on trial under the charge of sending obscene literature through the United States mails. Mrs. Dennett is fifty-three years of age, a mother and a grandmother. The literature which the jury declared by verdict to be obscene was a pamphlet which Mrs. Dennett had written fourteen years ago. The pamphlet bore the title "The Sex Side of Life." It was written to instruct her two sons, then thirteen and nine years of age, in the facts pertaining to sex. The article in question was first printed in the Medical Review of Reviews. The editors of the medical journal suggested that it be printed in pamphlet form. It had been approved by a large number of social and religious leaders, and for ten years had been widely circulated by the Y. M. C. A. and other religious organizations. Some time ago Mrs. Dennett mailed a copy of the pamphlet to a Virginia woman. It was the mailing of this copy which led to her arrest, trial, and conviction. It appears that the court decided the question at issue by having the pamphlet read to the jury and having the jury decide as to its obscenity, the court refusing to hear the testimony of those who had approved the distribution of the pamphlet. The jury brought in a verdict of guilty, and the judge imposed a fine of $300. Mrs. Dennett declared that she would go to jail rather than pay the fine.

VALUE OF AN EDUCATION.—

Dr. C. G. Glenn, compiling statistics gathered by the Alpha Kappa Psi Fraternity, has fixed the value of education as it determines the earning capacity of the individual. The figures represent the findings gathered in 7,369 reports in which every State in the Union was included. Dr. Glenn, who is superintendent of the Birmingham, Ala., schools, states the findings in the following manner:

"The untrained man, with only an elementary education, goes to work at fourteen. He reaches a maximum income at forty-five, earning on the average less than $1,700 a year. His total earnings from fourteen to sixty are about $64,000.

"The high school graduate goes to work at eighteen, four years later, and passes the maximum of the elementary-trained man in ten years. He rises steadily to his own maximum at $2,800 at fifty, and then falls off to about his forty-year average. His earnings from eighteen to sixty total about $88,000—just $24,000 more than that earned by the elementary-trained boy. This indicates that each of the four years of a high school boy's life is worth $6,000 to him.

"The college graduate goes to work at twenty-two. By the time he is thirty-one, his income equals that of the high school graduate at forty, and continues steadily to rise. Total earnings from twenty-two to sixty is approximately $144,000. The $56,000 above the high school graduate figure represents the cash value of a college education, making $14,000 for each of his four-year term."

NOTES-PERSONALS

Rev. G. D. Underhill, of Elon College, N. C., preached at the First Christian Church for the pastor last Sunday morning. His theme was "Faith," as presented in the general epistle of James. His audience seemed well pleased and spoke well of the sermon.

Has your Church taken the missionary offering yet? If so, did it reach its full quota, and did each one do his or her best to help reach it? Some have done their best and reached the quota. Out of fairness to these, and to this great and fundamental enterprise of the Church, every Church should do its best.

THE SUN's editor was recently with the pastor, Rev. J. Fuller Johnson, in a service at Hank's Chapel, Chatham County, N. C. This, one of our oldest Churches, has recently completed a beautiful and ample new Church, and the expectation is to dedicate the building at an early date, as nearly all indebtedness is paid.

Remember that God is building His kingdom on earth through the self-denial of those who are to live in that kingdom. Unless we practice self-denial for His sake, we are not following Him into His kingdom. "If any man will come after me"—after Him, where? Why, into the kingdom He is building. We can't follow Him into His kingdom unless we practice what He practiced and commanded us to practice—self-denial.

We had a very sweet and attractive Mothers' Day service at our local Church. The decorations were beautiful, and the music was just splendid. A capacity crowd heard our pastor, who preached an inspiring sermon, using as his subject "The Glory of Consecrated Motherhood." We appreciate our pastor and enjoy his excellent sermons. Our young people are deeply interested in their society, and are doing a fine work.—E. M. R., Dendron, Va.

Dr. W. T. Walters, Everett, Pa., writes: "The Mt. Union Christian Church, near Everett, Pa., will be rededicated May 19th. The Church has recently added new Sunday School rooms, a kitchen, steam-heating plant, circular pews, cathedral windows, a new floor, and other improvements. All this was made possible by a gift of $6,000 from Mrs. S. W. Kegg, who is one of the faithful and loyal members of the Church. At the request of the congregation, the pastor will preach the dedicatory sermon and formally dedicate the Church."

President Hoover, addressing the Associated Press, New York City, April 22nd, said that "crime is the paramount problem of our nation and the dominant issue before the American people. We are not suffering merely from an ephemeral crime wave, but from the subsidence of our very foundations." It would be difficult, indeed, to get stronger words with which to characterize conditions as they obtain in the United States, especially when one takes note of the crime that flaunts itself in the very face of the law and the government.

Rev. H. C. Caviness, beloved and consecrated pastor of First Church, Portsmouth, Va., writes May 8th: "We are in the midst of a great effort here. Last week the men and women of my Church won 81 decisions for Christ and the Church, and are continuing the work in the homes of the city this week. We began a series of meetings here Sunday, with A. R. Brothers, Raleigh, N. C., preaching, and Harry Clarke, of Chicago, a great soloist and director, leading the music. We expect to continue two weeks. The blessings of God are being poured out upon us and a great spiritual awakening has come."

Rev. F. C. Lester, chairman of the Board of Christian Education, Southern Christian Convention, Waverly, Va., writes: "Last week's CHRISTIAN SUN states that Miss Angie Crew is to be at Elon Summer School. This was our hope, but Dr. W. P. Minton, our Foreign Mission Secretary, writes that it is so near the sailing date of Miss Crew for her return to Japan that it will be impossible for her to attend the summer school. Dr. Edwin E. White, who is to be present, is a man of unusual and delightful personality, is a member of the Congregational Church, and, though at present in a pastorate in Tennessee, he was secretary of the board of missions." He is an author of note and will be heard with great profit by those who attend the summer school at Elon.

Rev. C. E. Gerringer, Wakefield, Va., feels much encouraged in the work of his field. On April 28th, he was able to report that all notes on the parsonage, which the Churches he has charge had built at Wakefield, has been paid. "The people have sacrificed in order to pay these notes at a discount. Wednesday night, our prayer meeting was in charge of Mrs. J. R. Revell, who put on a sunshine program, with 'Service' as the subject. There were a number of solos, duets, and choruses, and the program was enjoyed by a large audience, who pronounced it one of the best given lately. Burton's Grove Church is to add a new roof to its building, and Barrett's new roof and two Sunday School rooms to its plant." We felicitate Bro. Gerringer and his good people in these evidences of improvement and progress.

We regret to report that Rev. H. W. Elder, Richland, Ga., who, because of a paralytic stroke, was incapacitated for ministerial duties nearly two years ago, is no better and is now staying with his daughter in south Georgia. Out from Richland, Bro. Elder, in his active days, was interested in a small rural Church, Red Hill. Rev. G. H. Veazey, the present pastor, writes of this Church: "They have recently repaired their building and have put in a good organ and plenty of song books. The Sunday School is just organized, with about fifty pupils. The outlook at this Church now is quite promising. They have extended me an unanimous call to serve for the rest of the year. The people are very enthusiastic about the work, and I feel that Red Hill will be a live, active Church again in the near future." There is no better comment to be made, or compliment to be paid, to a previous worker than a successful revival and prosecution of the work which he carried on. When we develop the work begun by a predecessor, we help to complete his own life, carry joy to his heart, and add new stars to his crown. Bro. Veazey is also serving and is much encouraged with the work at Rock Springs, a rural Church out from Roanoke. This was the old home Church of the late lamented and beloved Rev. C. M. Dollar. In this Church Bro. Veazey sees signs of renewed life and activity, and feels encouraged, and "of course, the work at Roanoke, Ala., continues to move along nicely. We have just organized our men and boys of the Church, and enthusiasm is running high. We have adopted a set of by-laws, meet twice a month on Wednesday night after the first and third Sundays. Our loyal and wide-awake layman, Bro. V. E. Kitchens, is president of this Men of the Church organization, and Corbin Waldrop, a high school boy, is secretary. Our dues are 50 cents a month." While it is not a men's or boys' missionary society, it is organized for the purpose of interesting men and boys in all the work of the Church.

MOTHERS' DAY PROGRAM.

The rostrum of the Sunday School auditorium was decorated with beautiful flowers and potted plants of many varieties. The classes reassembled. "When Love Shines In" was sung, accompanied by the orchestra.

The class of young women, Mrs. Virden, teacher, was seated on the rostrum. This class had been requested to furnish the program for Mothers' Day at First Christian Church, Richmond, Va., May 12th. Rev. G. D. Underhill was first introduced to the school, and spoke on "Christian Education." His remarks were appropriate and well received. The program follows:

Reading—By Mrs. Virden.
Instrumental Solo—"Home, Sweet Home," by Miss Burgess.
Readings—By Mrs. Fleming.
Solo—By Mrs. Wilkins.
Reading—By Mrs. Woodward.
Song—"Mother's Treasured Memories," Class.
Talk—By Dr. Ryan.
Song—"Can We Forget," Class.
Reading—By Mrs. Liggett.
Song—"The Home Light," Class.
Reading—By Miss Shelton.
Instrumental Solo—"In the Sweet Bye and Bye," by Miss Burgess.

The program was well rendered, and the thanks of the school were tendered. Dismissal by pastor.

FATE OF NEW IDEAS.

Gathered from various sources is the following collection of paragraphs telling of the origin and reception of some of the things which we now accept as very common-place:

The first bananas shipped to England could not find a buyer and had to be thrown into the sea.

When Coryate brought from Italy the first fork seen in London, people who were still using their fingers at the table received him with inextinguishable laughter.

When spectacles were first introduced, under the auspices of the Royal Society, they were called "immoral" because they made things appear in an unusual or false light.

When printed books came in, they were regarded as a barbarous Teuton innovation and had to be sold as manuscripts because of the prejudice against printing.

Bathtubs provoked the majority into denunciation of them as "extravagant and undemocratic," and special taxes were even imposed to discourage their use.

Lebon, the discoverer of illuminating gas, died in ridicule, because he believed in a lamp without a wick.

Galvani was jeered at as "the frog's dancing-master," and they put Daguerre into an asylum for saying that he could transfer the likeness of human beings to a tin-plate.

Jouffroy, an inventor of steamboats, passed away in poverty after spending all his money in "vain attempts to change the habits and thoughts of people."

When railroads first began to function, Stephenson was branded as an ignorant quack.

And it is within the memory of some that our newspapers carried the headline, "Langley's Folly Flies," in describing an airplane experiment.

MOTHERS' DAY SERMON.

"When Jesus saw His mother . . . He saith, Woman, behold thy Son."—John 19: 26.

While flowers, red and white, are worn on Mothers' Day, let it not be forgotten that the cross is a more emblematic symbol of motherhood than the flower. It is evident that the story of the cross is enacted in every good mother's life every time she walks into the dark valley of the shadows to give life unto her child. Just as Jesus of Nazareth lay down His life for His friends, so Mother lays down her life for her children. And for all of these sacrifices, her children often forget to rise up and call her blessed. They overlook her wonderful love and close their ears to her ever-living gospel, which daily she preaches by words and good deeds.

John graphically pictures the mother of Jesus standing by the cross on which her blessed Son suffered. When He saw her, he said, "Woman, behold thy Son." The text suggests two impressive thoughts for our meditation on this Mothers' Day. It reveals motherhood from the standpoint of the cross, and it portrays the cross from the eye of motherhood.

"When Jesus, therefore, saw His mother" standing by the cross He saw more than a mere heart-broken mother. More than a woman of sorrows, more than His best friend and companion, He saw in her an imperishable type of Divine love. He realized the ancient saying of the rabbis, that "God could not be everywhere, so he made mothers." And at the foot of the cross Jesus saw in His own mother the everlasting love of God. While through His tears he regretted to know that she was looking upon the most horrible tragedy the world ever beheld, He rejoiced that she had not forsaken Him. Her very presence made His suffering easier, for He knew that she, standing near the cross, was sharing with Him the burden of the sin of the world.

Unfortunately there have always been some mothers like Jezebel of old, whose lives did not ring true, but they are few; however, the world has always been blessed with untold numbers of godly women like the mother of Jesus who stood near the cross. Mothers like the loyal Hannah, who gave her son Samuel to the Lord, are a benediction to the world. One can never estimate the worth of such a mother. Think for a moment of what Methodism would have missed had it not been for the faithful mother of John and Charles Wesley. Indeed, one sees in the Christian mother the foundational stone of love such as rules the world. A love and loyalty which takes her even to the foot of the cross for the sake of her child.

While the mothers of today are women of achievement and are interested in the welfare of human society, politics, industry and education, let it not be forgotten that no single achievement in any field of civilization is greater than that of the simple ministry of motherhood. Yet, how strange we are in overlooking the virtuous deeds of our mothers! Seldom do we place her picture on the front page of the newspaper; instead, we bow to her sons whose achievements we admire. The world sees the successful business man; God sees back of his career the love of a mother. It is most natural that Lincoln would see in the background of his life the sweet face of his mother, even at the height of his success as a great President. He was thinking of her love and loyalty when he exclaimed, "All that I am or ever expect to be, I owe to my angel mother." Edison declared, "My mother was the making of me; she was so true, so sure of me, that I felt I had some one to live for—some one I must not disappoint." And the great American evangelist, D. L. Moody unhesitatingly said, "All that I have ever accomplished in life I owe to my mother." Benjamin West said, "A kiss from my mother made me a painter."

A recent copy of a British magazine stated that three members of Parliament declared they owed more to their mothers than any other person. One of these men happened to be Mr. Lloyd George. When at Princeton Seminary, a professor asked the young ministerial students, "How many of you have praying mothers?" it is reported that one hundred and fifty men leaped proudly to their feet.

When we remember how human nature often runs to extremities, it is not at all strange that so large a part of Christendom should worship the Virgin Mary, for she was indeed the queen of mothers! Even though the gospel narratives give little of her life and works, we know that she stood by the cross on which her Son was crucified. As He looked upon her, "the cross saw in motherhood" a love that passeth all understanding. He saw a devoted mother that had pondered all the things of the angel of the annunciation in her heart, a woman who had cared for Him, and when on one occasion He tarried behind and talked with learned men in the temple, she had returned in search of Him—so true had she been to Him that He could well say with the angel, "Blessed art thou among women." He saw in her a strength and power that had upheld Him in time of trial. So may we this Mothers' Day see in her more than a mere woman, but rather a kinship to God. Remember how she stood by the cross of Jesus—think how your own mother stood by your side.

The story is told that a little boy who had just learned to walk, but who was not very steady on his little feet, was tied to his mother's apron strings and advised that when he stumbled or attempted to fall, he could pull himself up by her apron string. And the child did as he was told, and all went well, and the mother sang as she went about her work. Day by day the child grew taller, and one day he desired to go out into the great woods to play and see things for himself, but his good mother said, "Not yet, my little man, you are not strong enough yet; just yesterday you stumbled and would have fallen had it not been for this string about your waist. Wait until you are stronger; then you may go. And the mother sang as she went about her work. But one day the door stood open and the little fellow saw the appeal of the trees and flowers, the mountains and rivers, and he ran toward the door, the apron string snapped, and he was gone. As he ran on and on, farther and farther from his home and his mother, and as the end of the apron string dangled behind, he exclaimed, "I never knew my mother's apron string was so weak." And the mother ceased to sing as she went about her work.

One day while the little man was climbing a dangerous mountain cliff, he stumbled and, because of a misstep, fell over a precipice, and as he was falling into the fathomless abyss, behold, something caught upon the edge of a rock and he was held dangling over a deep gorge. He put his hand out and found it was his mother's apron string, and he cried out, "Ho, ho, I never realized how strong my mother's apron string was until now." And he pulled himself upon a solid rock and went onward toward the purple mountains which in the distance were piled high against the sky.

Just as the cross saw these wonderful characteristics of motherhood, so through tear-stained eyes motherhood viewed the cross, in answer to the exclamation, "Woman, behold thy Son!" As she looked upward, she saw more than tragedy, more than the flesh and blood of her Son. She saw in His suffering what every true mother would like to see in her children. She saw purity of life.

Jesus had remained unspotted from the world. He was sinless. He was pure. Now that death was near, she feared not, for she hears Him say, "Thy will, not mine, be done," and "Father, into Thy hands do I commend my Spirit." The Man of Galilee had been faithful and true in all of His undertakings. He had left nothing undone, and had busied himself going around doing good. All these things He was enabled to do, because He was pure in heart and was in constant touch with God.

Two theological students passed along an old-clothes street in London one day. One of them saw a suit of clothes swaying in the breeze just outside a second-hand store. He exclaimed, "There is a splendid text for a sermon to young men." Look at the sign on the suit—"slightly soiled and greatly reduced in price." And so it is that young people become slightly soiled by seeing an unclean show, attending an unclean dance, reading a coarse book, and allowing themselves to indulge in dishonest and lustful thoughts—they become just slightly soiled, but when it comes to being appraised by Him, they are greatly reduced in value and price. Life has lost its charm and strength; they become a party to the great mass of shop-worn stock of the universe.

There is a great loss in being slightly soiled; but there is power in purity. Think of the words of that gallant old knight, Sir Galahad, "My strength is as the strength of ten because my heart is pure." The man who has a pure heart has the strength of ten average men. One might reverse the statement and say, "My weakness is as the weakness of ten because my heart is impure." It was Shakespeare who said, "A heart unspotted is not easily daunted." The apostle Paul said, "Whatsoever things are pure, think on these things." And to his young friend Timothy he wrote, "Keep thyself pure."

It is the desire of every mother to see her children live pure lives. Let us resolve on this Mothers' Day that we will ever honor her by a life of purity, that will not only bring honor to her name but add happiness to our own lives.

THE SUN LETTER.

The Young People's Missionary Society of the Waverly Christian Church sent us a nice list of renewals for THE SUN this week and one new subscriber. We appreciate this and wonder why more of our Young People's Societies or Women's Missionary Societies do not take advantage of this opportunity to help us increase the list of SUN subscribers, and at the same time help themselves.

We are looking for quite a number of clubs of five new subscribers for $7.50 during the month of June. The 1st of May we lacked 233 new subscribers being to the three thousand mark. We have added nine new ones and dropped four. So we have gained five, which pushes us up to within 228 new subscribers to reach the goal by June 1st. "Help us!" is the cry.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

TRAINING FOR WORLD FRIENDSHIP.

John Wesley said "The world is my parish." In the day of John Wesley, the popular mind did not grasp the meaning and significance of Wesley's words. Even in our day we are reluctant to comprehend, much less practice, the wisdom of that sage in this regard. Many of us still think only in terms of serving, or helping, those around about us. We have hardly yet learned that we are world citizens and that we can cultivate even a friendship and a favor for those located remotely from us. More and more are we trying to grasp the idea, we laymen and preachers, that what happens in one part of the world affects the other part, and that there is but one kind of man, viz: mankind; and one race of men, viz: the human race, and that all are made in the image and likeness of God our Father. Those books that treat of the world as one and of humanity as being world-wide, are becoming more and more frequent and, at the same time, more understandable. Authors and publishers are thinking in world terms and are giving us lessons to learn in world friendship. It was such spirits as John Wesley who pioneered in the thought that the world is our parish. Whether we be preachers, teachers, farmers or manufacturers, we are a part of the world, and the world as a whole enters into our thinking and into the make-up of our profit and loss, our weal and woe.

Ina Corinne Brown has written a matchless volume, and the Cokesbury Press, Nashville, Tenn., has published it in splendid form for $1, in which the idea is set forth and tremendously expounded that if we are not in training for world friendship, we should be, and, since we should be, the author of this volume undertakes to show how we may be and may have this training in world friendship.

CHRISTIAN SUN readers, who would love their own Church better and serve their own community to better purpose, should read this exceedingly illuminating volume, for the author sweeps out from Church and community into the wide, wide world and points out specifically and most definitely how we, through our community and through our social groups and Churches, may take the whole world for our parish and really make a contribution of helpful service to that parish, and so become in our thinking, in our attitudes and activities, citizens of a world. Miss Brown opens her book with a quotation from Victor Hugo: "There is one thing more powerful than any army with banners, and that is an idea whose time has come." She then shows historically that just three hundred years after Columbus had sailed to find a new world, twelve humble men sat in a village parlor in England and bound themselves together in a society with what was then the preposterous purpose of propagating the gospel in heathen lands. Five months later two missionaries, with their families, set sail on the perilous journey to India. The idea of the modern missionary movement had been born, and this idea was more powerful than any army with banners because its time had come. Quoting James Russell Lowell's stanza:

"New occasions teach new duties;
Time makes ancient good uncouth,
They must upward still, and onward,
Who would keep abreast of Truth."

The author shows new occasions have thrust new duties upon us, and that the only way we of our day can perform our tasks and meet the obligations that our duties force upon us is to be upward and onward since the whole world has begun. The following paragraph in the opening chapter of this engaging book will reveal the foundation on which the whole frame-work of this remarkable volume is constructed:

"There is the story of the little boy who was sent to call his grandmother to breakfast. Although all the rest of the household were stirring, he found her still asleep. He pulled on the bed-covers and shouted excitedly, 'Wake up, Grandma; the world's begun!' Today the world has begun and is moving with dizzying speed. There was a time when changes were apt to come slowly and gradually. We had time to get adjusted to new ideas. Time still renders ancient good uncouth, but it no longer takes years to do it. It happens almost overnight. Great changes in world conditions have been happening rapidly since the war. Recently they have changed with such rapidity that a few weeks suffice for a complete change of policy.

For the most part, the local Church seems to be unaware of the effect of these changes. Many leaders are continuing their efforts on the assumption that the missionary situation is not radically different from what it was ten years ago. They are proceeding with the same policies, following the same methods, putting on the same appeals. Apparently there are still too many Church members who have not realized that the world has begun."

THE WAY OF FAITH.

"Consider the lilies how they grow: they toil not, they spin not; and yet I say unto you, Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these.

"If, then, God so clothed the grass, which is today in the field and tomorrow is cut down, how much more would He clothe you, O ye of little faith? Seek not ye what ye shall eat or what ye shall drink; neither be ye of doubtful mind. But rather seek ye the kingdom of God, and all these things shall be added unto you. Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom."

And this is the way of faith. It leads by way of self-denial straight to the kingdom of God. Faith had a long way to go when our Lord was talking of it so vigorously. It has come a long way since then, and yet has far to go; but it has accomplished so much in the world that it should grow stronger with passing generations. Christ had a very small flock. He could gather them about Him, and they could all come within the reach of His voice and then not make a large congregation. Even then, He warned them "fear not, little flock." That congregation has grown into multitudes and millions, and its representatives are going to all parts of the earth. And they are attacking all the problems and difficulties of sin and unrighteousness in the world. Verily, they had that faith even as a grain of mustard seed, and are removing mountains. And yet there are mountains still to be moved. The way of faith is a long way and a narrow way and a hard way. The fact is, it is too long and hard and narrow for many, very many, to walk therein.

Despite the fact that the little flock has multiplied and has done more monumental things since Christ gathered them about Him than any other group that ever gathered on this earth, strange as it may seem, there are yet thousands who are faithless and will not believe. Some doubt the wisdom and the propriety of missions, of carrying the gospel, or trying to carry it, to fields afar, and to the millions who have not had it. To justify their faithlessness, they will heap all manner of abuse and falsehood and slander upon the project and the program. They forget the words of our Lord, "Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." The children of faith are walking the narrow way of faith, a hard way and a straight way, into the kingdom of their God.

There are those who call themselves Christians who want to see and know just the individuals, the human beings, whom their money is to reach and help. They are willing to contribute something to help individuals and enterprises with which they are familiar and whom they may see and know, and from whom they may get some thanks and praise or gratitude; but so far as carrying out their Lord's commission is concerned, which was His supreme challenge to faith, they prove faithless here and go against the belief and the command of their Lord. They interpose their unbelief and seek to justify their faithlessness by declaring that they do not believe in missions. It seems not to occur to these faithless ones that they are putting up their belief against the belief of their Lord, and they are putting their faithlessness against His faith and His promise.

Is it any wonder that our Lord Himself said: "Nevertheless, when the Son of man cometh, shall He find faith on the earth?" It is by faith that we are saved, and it is not of ourselves but by the grace of God. It is against the faithless ones that the anathemas of Scripture are pronounced, and it is for the faithful ones that the reward is promised and through whom salvation is to come to the world. "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." And the Spirit spake, through John, saying, "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life" (Rev. 2:10). The one great reason why many do not believe in and contribute to missions is because they are faithless and unbelieving.

"CANNED" SERMONS.

The Woman's Home Companion, of good repute and wide circulation among the good women of the land, recently sent what it pleased to call a "sermon expert" throughout the land, who was to sample the sermons that he heard North, South, East and West, and report his conclusions with recommendations. This "expert" takes himself rather seriously, and with what appears to be a straight face, and candid conviction, he recommends in all seriousness the following five suggestions:

1. That the average minister be relieved of the necessity of sermon-writing.
2. That the task be assigned to men and women who are conspicuously able to perform it.
3. That each denomination solicit and pay for an annual supply of the finest sermons that can possibly be written.
4. That the number selected be sufficiently large to permit a wide choice of subjects by the local pastor.
5. That each minister select the kind of sermon that best suits the needs of his particular congregation, and deliver it on Sunday, either by reading it or by committing it to memory.

This reminds one of John Ruskin's recommendation to colleges and schools in giving exercises to their pupils. Ruskin said that the most economic and efficient method of giving students complete exercise was to lay them on a table, get a huge rolling pin and flatten them out by the rolling process, as a baker rolls out dough for the pie-crust. He said this would not take so long, and it would be a wonderful saving from employing "coaches" and training men in gymnasiums. Moreover, it would guarantee that every nerve and muscle in a person thus flattened out and well rolled on a table would get its proper exercise and treatment.

Then, commenting on his own recommendation, Ruskin said the only difficulty he could see in his theory was that students and others who were to take exercise were osseous—had bones in them that might not yield readily to this treatment—but why raise one objection when there were so many arguments for the sake of economy and efficiency in behalf of this theory? Why should one single objection overthrow a theory that had so many points in its favor? Still, students and others who must take exercise go on having bones and keep on employing such methods as experience, study, actual facts, justify and demand.

The "sermo nexpert" for the Woman's Home Companion has left out a fact or two in his reckoning. The world is still made up of persons and personality that still count. Unless one is to have the personality—and the message from the heart and soul of the minister, then his preaching is vain and our worship is but a mockery. Moreover, from of old, God has spoken through the mouth and with the tongue of His servants. "Thus saith the Lord," is the biblical method of conveying the message of life to the hearer. Peter preached on the Day of Pentecost and the Spirit descended upon his hearers. God spoke through the individual presence and personality of Peter on that day. There is no record from that day, nor before that day, till this good hour where God has spoken through "canned sermons." The Spirit of God uses a person who is conveying the Word of God to do His work of redemption and salvation, and there is no substitute.

The sermon over the radio may comfort and cheer and prove a blessing to the one who cannot go to Church; reading the sermon or hearing the sermon read of another is likewise a blessing and a benefit to all who will read and give heed; but neither these nor any other device of man can take the place of or substitute for the message of the man of God in the house of God on God's holy day. The trouble with this "sermon expert" for the Woman's Home Companion is that he leaves out of reckoning the power of personality and the power of the Holy Spirit speaking through the person to persons. And here is the one fatal objection to all of his beautiful theories which will count for naught, because all go to pieces, as beautiful theories often do, when they come in contact with the hard, stubborn facts of experience. The theories of man always fail, and should fail, when brought in contact with the eternal truths of God. J. O. A.

CHRISTIANITY AND EDUCATION.

Christianity is the only religion that ever undertook to educate along other lines than in its own cult. Buddhism, for example, undertakes to perpetuate and to teach only the religion of Buddha; Mohammedanism, only the religion of Mohammed, or the Koran. Outside of their own religious books and propaganda, no other religion ever undertook the work of enlightening the mind, instructing and building up the whole person and developing a system of education. On the other hand, Christianity has, through the centuries, especially since the rise of Protestantism, founded and fostered schools, colleges and universities. The greatest universities in our own, as in other Christian lands were founded by Christian men and groups, in order to give the most liberal education under the guidance of Christian teaching and precept. Harvard, our oldest university of first rank, was founded by ministers of the gospel, and is named for a minister, Rev. John Harvard. Yale University was founded by preachers of the gospel, and her first trustees were preachers, the object being, first of all, to give Christian instruction and leadership and guidance.

Christianity has always felt the need of Christian education, of teaching and instruction in all that pertain to truth, and the promotion of truth, under the leadership of Christian men and women. The majority of college students in America today are in those institutions founded and fostered by the Church. True to the Founder of our faith, Jesus was Himself the great Teacher, and those about Him called Him Teacher and realized in Him knowledge and truth, learning and life.

Education of the right sort, and truth, when discovered or revealed, do not lead us from Christ but to Him, and instead of making atheists and agnostics should make and will make true, loyal and devout Christians. "Come," said Jesus, "and learn of me." And in another place, He says, "I am the way, the truth and the life."

The more learning we get and the more knowledge we have, if of the true kind, we are brought closer to Him and become more like Him. The world has nothing to fear from Christian education, but all to hope and to desire; it is Christless and godless education that the world has to fear, and is a threat and a hindrance to progress, to life and to salvation. WHAT WAS THE WORLD WAR ABOUT?

We are not so very far yet from the World War, in which millions of human beings lost their lives and billions of treasure were consumed. Even at this close range, however, it is doubtful if one in a thousand of us could tell what that war was about. A recent writer says: "No great book has been written about the World War; and I doubt if there ever will be one. You can't have a drama when you can't find out what it was all about. I came closer to the war than most Americans, having seen both sides at close range. But I do not know what it was about." Possibly not one soldier in ten thousand of those who fought in the war could tell you today what it was about. Isn't the same true of many other wars that have destroyed human life and developed human hatred?

Withdrawn a short distance either in time or space from war, one discovers with difficulty what it was all about. We see from the papers that they are fighting down in Mexico, shooting and being shot at, but we doubt if many Mexicans, much less Americans, could define clearly what it is all about. Napoleon I looms large on the page of the world's warriors, and every student of history runs up with him and his wars time and time again. We are told that during his wars the flower of France was cut down, and her best young men went to untimely graves, but where are those who can tell us now what it was all about? One may wade through Gibbons' "Decline and Fall" of the Roman empire (six monumental volumes, engaged almost solely with war and death and the destruction of property and of State), but it is doubtful if anybody now can tell us what it was all about.

Isn't this a comment on human frailty, on the indulgence of hate and the habit of killing and of murder, under the name and guise of war? The United States, we were recently told by the Secretary of the Treasurer Mellon, is spending enough on war, past, present and prospective, to put a Church and school-house, in a brief period, within easy reach of every man, woman and child on earth. When will we learn that the way of the Prince of Peace is the way of economy as well as of righteousness and of truth? J. O. A.

FEELING AND THINKING.

Feeling and thinking are the two main elements in human experience. Feeling begins before thinking, and no doubt continues after thinking ceases. Primitive peoples are controlled more by feeling; advanced civilization is controlled more by thinking. Religion is controlled more by feeling than by thinking; business is controlled more by thinking than by feeling. Home is controlled more by feeling; the State, more by thinking. Marriage based on thought is usually a failure; when based on feeling, which is love, it is happier and more lasting. The best results follow agreement between the head and the heart. When the heart and the head agree, it is usually safe to many and to accept Jesus Christ as Saviour.

The Bible seems to emphasize the value of feeling in the building of character: "Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are issues of life" (Prov. 4:23). "Man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart" (1 Sam. 16:7). "Whoso keepeth the commandment shall feel no evil thing; and a wise man's heart discerneth both time and judgment" (Eccl. 8:5). The heart recognizes, distinguishes, perceives, as well as the head; and its judgments are as accurate as the brain. Religious feeling is safer than thought. Feeling is in the field of the moral and spiritual; thinking is in the field of the mechanical and artificial. Music comes out of the soul of man; Machines come out of his brain. Religion comes out of the heart; mathematics out of the head. Love is in the heart; thinking is in the brain. The best or the worst in man is his feeling, not his thinking. It takes both to make the normal man. Jesus not only felt, but He thought. He was a teacher as well as a Saviour; but the greatest thing in the life of Jesus was His love for man. "As the Father hath loved me, so have I loved you: continue ye in my love" (John 15:9). It was feeling that controlled Jesus Christ when He wept over Jerusalem and when He prayed on the cross, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do" (Luke 23:34). The best in man is his feeling toward God and man. A consciousness of sin is a feeling; a consciousness of regeneration is feeling; love is a feeling. The greater of these two elements is feeling; but they act and react on each other and make the best of companions in the building of character. Jesus asked the Pharisees, "What think ye of Christ?" (Matt. 22:42.) Jesus said to Simon Peter, "Lovest thou me?" (John 21:16.) Jesus wants to know that we think of Him and love Him, too. W. W. S.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

May 5th and May 8th were red-letter days in the Suffolk Christian Church. A Kernahan visitation evangelistic campaign had been conducted for two weeks in Tidewater Virginia, including Norfolk, Portsmouth, Newport News, Hampton, and Suffolk; and on May 5th, members were received into all the Churches of these cities. A survey was made and that was followed by personal workers from all the Churches, selected by the pastors, and instructed by Dr. Kernahan, of Boston, or his agents. This embraced two major points of contact: to get members holding membership in Churches outside of these cities to transfer their membership to the Church of their choice, or, if not already members, to make a definite decision for Christ and be prepared to unite with the Church of their choice on the Sunday following the close of the campaign. All the Churches co-operated in this work and cards were provided for names and addresses, so that the harvest could be gathered in a Christian way and in the spirit of unity. So far as learned, there was no friction, no jealousies, and no failures. The army of workers that made the survey and then followed that up with earnest and faithful effort to win Church members outside and new members to Christ and the Church, not only had success but a new spiritual experience and joy in working to win souls to Christ and the Church.

The result in the congregation of the Suffolk Christian Church was the addition of 109 members to the roll on Sunday, May 5th—71 by profession of faith in Jesus Christ, and 38 by letter of transfer from other Churches. It is too often the case that members move from one place to another and fail to carry their letter of transfer to the Church where they reside and often attend. They move everything they have except their Church membership, and that is as important as their chairs and beds. It was a great day to see this large number take the vows of the Church, and most of the new converts receive baptism by sprinkling. A few will be immersed. At this day of the reception of such a large number of members at one time, pastor H. S. Hardcastle announced that on Wednesday night there would be an informal reception and welcome of the new members by the members of the Church. This was held on Wednesday night, May 8th, when 300 people assembled in the main Sunday School room and enjoyed a fine program of music by male and female quartets, a solo by Mrs. Telza Miller, and a reading by Mrs. I. W. Johnson. City pastors were present and added a word that sweetened the occasion. After these exercises the people were invited to the Fellowship Hall, where ice cream and cake were enjoyed by all through the personal generosity of J. M. Darden, always so thoughtful and so willing to help others.

FRANKLIN, VA.

The Franklin Christian Church has just closed her first visitation evangelistic campaign, which was conducted in a most effective manner by Dr. R. C. Helfenstein, former Secretary of Evangelism of the Christian Church, and at present pastor of People's Church, Dover, Del. The plan of enlisting for the kingdom was found to be a most joyous experience by all of the campaigners. Men, women and children were instructed to do this work during the first week of the meeting, and during the latter half many of them busied themselves in the great work of "winning one for Christ."

Franklin has an unusual distinction, in that it is estimated that about 95 per cent of her residents are affiliated with some Church. From a list of forty non-Church members, we were enabled to secure twenty-five decisions for Christ and Church membership. This campaign sought decisions for Christ. Some of those who signed decision cards will join other Churches in our town. There were twenty-five reconsecration pledge cards signed by Church members who decided to renew their pledge to Christ and His Church.

Dr. Helfenstein delivered a series of excellent sermons in addition to his fine work in training the personal workers for the campaign. His messages dealt largely with the subject of vital Christianity as related to Church members. He is a man of magnetic personality and wide experience; a traveler and a scholar; but foremost a man of God.

Our Church has been spiritually blessed by his work with the pastor and people. Love and goodwill, co-operation and harmony were so upheld as fundamental principles of the Christian life that all of those who came within the sound of his voice were led to a higher plane of living.

LONG'S CHAPEL.

Last Saturday and Sunday, May 4th and 5th, we held our second quarterly meeting at Long's Chapel. There was good interest in both services. On Sunday, the audience was large and very attentive. There were visitors from High Point, Greensboro, Elon College, Burlington, Graham, Haw River, Mebane, Durham and surrounding community. Rev. R. A. Whitten was with us and preached at the morning hour, and the pastor at the afternoon hour. Bro. Whitten gave us a very thoughtful and helpful sermon. Following the sermon, the Lord's Supper was administered. It was a very impressive service. The Church building, grounds, and cemetery were in fine shape. The Hopedale orchestra and Rev. H. A. Welker and some of his Church singers were present and rendered helpful service. Our Church organist, Mrs. H. A. Jeffries, had charge of the regular Church music, and Bro. B. F. Blanchard led the song service.

The Sunday School, under the superintendency of Bro. J. W. Barrett and his excellent co-workers, is certainly doing good work. The entire school is to be highly commended for its faithfulness and efficiency. The school was reorganized in April, 1925, with an enrollment of sixty. The enrollment is now 110. The average attendance for 1925 was 44; for 1928, the average was 74. The present Church membership is 150. The superintendent of the school exhibited last Sunday a chart showing the growth in enrollment and average attendance since the reorganization in 1925. It was a very gratifying presentation.

FINANCIAL PHILOSOPHY.

To his very young friend, David Copperfield, Mr. Micawber, always in debt and always expecting something to turn up to get him out of debt, gave this advise: "Annual income twenty pounds, annual expenditure nineteen nineteen six, result happiness. Annual income twenty pounds, annual expenditure twenty pounds nought and six, result misery." The trouble with Mr. Micawber was that, like some other philosophers, he never could manage to reduce his philosophy to practice. So he lived in misery. But he still survives in a very large family of descendants of various complexions but all showing the hereditary trait of their progenitor, always spending more than they get, and always working out the inevitable consequence of misery.

It seems a disease in certain people to owe more than they can pay. And yet, unlike diseases, it does not usually make the victim immune. He recovers from the first attack, but instead of being safe thereafter, he is soon down with another attack. Finally he becomes a chronic debtor, and the last state of that man is worse than the first. He doesn't even know he is in debt. He thinks the world owes him—a living.—Methodist Protestant.

RADIO AND CHURCH-GOING.

Dr. Charles R. Brown, former dean of the Yale Divinity School, in opening a series of Lenten noon-day services under the auspices of the Greater Boston Federation of Churches, speaks in his own inimitable way of the relative value of sermons over the radio as compared with Church attendance.

Listen to this great preacher:

"The difference between listening to a radio sermon and going to Church is the same as the difference between calling a girl on the telephone and spending the evening with her.

"Most persons who tune in on radio sermons are religious quitters; doubtless some of them think they are doing God a favor by listening in, but they are of no positive good in the community.

"The Bible does not say that God so loved the world that He telephoned down the good news. He sent His only begotten Son to die.

"Among religious quitters, Dr. Brown cited students whose 'new independence make them forget early training, mature persons the light of whose spirituality has been dimmed by riches and the cares of the world, and those numerous individuals who are too lazy to readjust their religious concepts to changed conditions.'"—North Carolina Christian Advocate.

ATTENTION.

Editor THE CHRISTIAN SUN:

As a member of the Christian Church and a worker for Oak Grove Christian Church, I am appealing for help in this hour of need. Remember in St. John 14:14, the Scripture says, "If ye shall ask anything in my name, I will do it."

We, as a small group of members, are badly in need of a Church building for worship. The building is so dilapidated that something must be done. Our members have responded beautifully, but we still need more funds in order to complete our house of worship.

Will greatly appreciate your kindness in inserting this in THE CHRISTIAN SUN for all members of other Churches who are interested in the Lord's work for a contribution to help us with our building fund.

May the Lord bless our work and give us an abundant harvest. Again I thank you for this favor. All pledges and donations should be sent to Waverly Parker, secretary-treasurer, Oak Grove Christian Church, Sunbury, N. C.

Very sincerely,

MRS. W. K. PARKER.

Take heed, and beware of covetousness, for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth.—Luke 12:15.

OUR JUBILEE YEAR—EASTER TO EASTER.

"IN HIS STEPS."

Sunday, May 19 (Mark 7:31): "Seeking Seclusion."—Jesus' desire to be alone with His disciples and His journey with them through the lonely hill country to the coasts between Tyre and Sidon was broken by the answered prayer of the Syro-Phoenician woman for her daughter's healing. This miracle made Him known again and made quiet and retirement impossible in that country. So Jesus leaves the country with His disciples and goes across the northern foothills to the coasts of Decapolis, which was the land of the "ten cities" extending from the region of ancient Damascus in Syria on the north to Perea on the south, and west of the Sea of Galilee. This was new country to Jesus and his little band of followers, and it was possible that they could find seclusion here that He might teach them the things of the kingdom which they so misunderstood and which they needed to know.

Monday, May 20 (Matt. 15:29): "Up Into a Mountain."—Matthew tells us that He "went up into a mountain," and also that He "sat down there," which is after the manner of a teacher of the times. Up in the mountain and away from the towns and the crowds, He had an ideal setting in the beautiful spring weather of Palestine to intimately give to His disciples that which was on His heart for their preparation for the coming days. It was another setting like the Sermon on the Mount, when Jesus first brought the twelve together to prepare them for discipleship. Now He is to prepare them as apostles to go forth to establish the kingdom of His name.

Tuesday, May 21 (Mark 7:32): "An Intrusion."—But "He could not be hid" in Decapolis, as "He could not be hid" in the coasts of Tyre and Sidon. A deaf and dumb man was brought up into the mountain fastness by his friends, who besought Jesus to heal him. He faced again the same difficulty of publicity and defeat of His plans. If He healed this man it would bring hundreds more to Him and make impossible again His teaching and training plans, which were now uppermost in His mind.

Wednesday, May 22 (Mark 7:33-35): "A Secret Healing."—The record plainly shows that Jesus is determined, if possible, to avoid the publicity that healing will bring to Him. His heart responds to the need, but He sees the difficulty as He takes the afflicted man apart from the curious crowds which were beginning to gather and heals him in secret.

The record of the miracle goes into the detail of the healing and of the feeling of Jesus as "He sighed" and showed not only His deep concern for the man, but his concern for the work which was on His heart and His own weariness, as He made the man both to hear and to see again. He cannot deny His help to one in such need, but He heals him in secret, that multitudes may not again crowd His hours with healing and hinder His teaching ministry.

Thursday, May 23 (Mark 7:36): "His Command Disregarded."—Not only did He heal the man in secret but He commanded him and his friends to "tell no man" of what had happened. He must attend to that for which He had come into this mountain fastness, and not be disturbed and turned aside to curious crowds and healing.

But they utterly disregarded the wish of Him who had befriended them and who had answered their prayer for their friend's healing. They begin to publish it and the "more He charged them, so much the more a great deal they publish it." They were so joyous that they refused to be obedient, and their enthusiasm brought disturbance and defeat to the one who had been their best friend in trouble.

Friday, May 24 (Matt. 15:30, 31): "The Crowds Gather Again."—The disobedient friends of Jesus brought about just what Jesus knew would come of such acclaiming Him as the Healer. The multitudes begin to gather again, bringing with them their lame, blind, dumb, maimed "and many others," and laid them down at His feet and His tender heart could not refuse them, "and He healed them all." Privacy now in Decapolis was impossible, and He gives it up and goes whole-heartedly into healing all who come until the air resounds again with praise and glory to the God of Israel from the wondering multitude.

Saturday, May 25 (Mark 7:37): "Returning Popularity."—Again the "common people" who follow Him and see His miracles are filled with His praises. There was no time in this year that Jesus might not have had the crowds with Him. They persisted in His being their popular hero, even up to the triumphal entry into Jerusalem and in spite of all the discouragements He presented to them. He sought to be alone, but they continually and insistently followed Him whenever they could find Him. It was not until He had gone farther still into the wilds of the country across the Jordan that they did not follow Him and He was able to gain the seclusion which He sought.

Jubilee News.

The spirit of the Jubilee Year is shown in the Holy Neck, Va., Christian Church, Dr. N. G. Newman, pastor. He writes that their generous Easter offering for missions was "the beginning" of what is planned to give for the kingdom this year. Suffolk, Va., began with a thousand dollar offering for Easter, to be supplemented each month by additional gifts for the extension of the kingdom.

These Churches, together with Everett, Pa., and Covington, Ohio, and Albany, N. Y., and others have caught the vision, and realize that this 1900th anniversary is not to be celebrated by some one big "stunt," but should be the beginning of a larger work which should be wrought into the life of the Church for its enrichment and for the extension of the kingdom of God on earth.

Milford, N. J., Christian Church, Rev. E. C. Hall, pastor, gave over a Sunday morning to the consideration of the jubilee year of the Church, and the Illinois Central Conference held three simultaneous sessions at different points on May 12th to introduce the jubilee year to its constituency.

ANCIENT MISSIONARIES.

(Read in a missionary meeting, Roanoke, Ala., by Mrs. G. H. Veazey.)

Many people think the mission cause is of recent development, not more than two or three centuries old. Some people think of the disciples of Christ and Paul as being the most ancient.

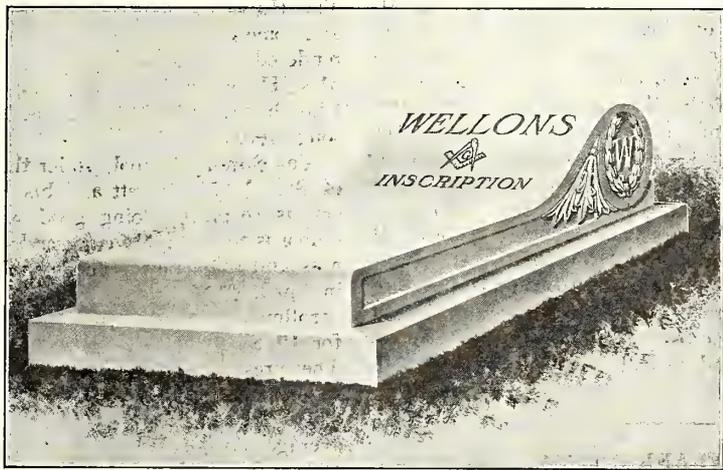

Let us take up the Old Testament and search for the most ancient missionaries that we have any record of. They were not called missionaries in those days, but when we study their lives and their achievements we find that they were only missionaries, because they were carrying the knowledge of God to those who knew Him not. Ever since God has had faithful sons and daughters in the world it has been His will that they should make Him known to those who knew Him not.

When we think of Abraham as he obeyed God when He called him to "Get thee out of thy country, . . . unto a land that I will shew thee: . . . I will bless thee, . . . and thou shalt be a blessing"—we think of an ancient and very great missionary. The people to whom Abraham was going to cast his lot with did not know the God of Abraham, and it was God's plan that they should have a chance. "By faith, Abraham obeyed." There were many men living in Abraham's day, but we know of only a few. We know about this great man because he was a man of God and obeyed.

Missionaries were not trained and sent out by a Church or society then as they are now; neither did all of them know what their mission should be, but God's plans have always succeeded.

Joseph did not know that God's hand was in the shameful act of his brothers when they sold him a slave into Egypt, but he proved to those heathen people what the power of God meant in an individual life. Even the king was made to realize the power of God in Joseph's life after

The above cut represents the proposed monument to be placed at the grave of Rev. James Willis Wellons, D. D. Besides this, the plot is to be inclosed with a granite curbing and posts. MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

CAN THEY AFFORD IT?

It has been nearly a year now—a full, long twelvemonth—since our Southern Convention decided that whatever our Churches and Sunday Schools and people would give to missions must be sent in directly, and not to the Conference treasurers. It was thought then that such a plan would stimulate all Churches and Sunday Schools and individuals in the Church to do more for missions, when they understood just when and what they were doing. And yet there are scores of our Churches and Sunday Schools, and even quite a few of our pastors, who seemingly have done nothing whatsoever for missions, have made no report about missions, and have made no contribution to missions.

We wonder if such pastors, Churches and Sunday Schools can afford it? The main business, the fundamental object, of a Church is to be missionary, to give the gospel to others, to help enlarge the kingdom. When a Church, a Sunday School, or a local congregation spends all of its money on itself it is following a suicidal policy and prevents its own growth and development. This is true, according to the Word of our Lord, who said: "For whosoever will save his life shall lose it, but whosoever will lose his life for my sake, the same shall save it." This applies to the Church and to the group of individuals as well as to any individual in the Church or group. A Church may be selfish, though it may be a refined selfishness, and this it cannot afford to be if it is to live and to grow.

Some of our Churches and pastors took immediate steps to readjust themselves to the decision of the Convention and have been working to that end, and this means growth and power to such Churches and pastors. Many, however, are ignoring the most vital matter that pertains to their Church and to the denomination. We wonder if these pastors and Churches have given this matter due weight and consideration. As this writer said so often before Conferences, and has repeated in these columns, nothing in the present situation and under the ruling of the Convention is so deadly and dangerous as inactivity and unconcernedness. For a pastor or a Church to do nothing means paralysis and death in that congregation, so far as missions and kingdom enlargement are concerned.

We know full well that there are people in every Church who will give something to missions if given a chance. We do not believe that a pastor and officials in a Church have the right, or can be justified, to keep silent in a matter so vital and essential to Church life and growth. Christians in every Church should certainly be given an opportunity, a pressing and an urging opportunity, to do something for missions, to do something to build up the kingdom of their Lord, to do something to give the gospel to others, to do something in the name and for the sake of their Lord.

J. O. A.

GIVING GLORY TO THE LORD.

The psalmist linked giving glory to God with giving offerings in His name and for His sake. "Give unto the Lord the glory due unto His name: bring an offering and come into His courts." When we bring an offering to the Lord of that which costs us something, we deny ourselves and thereby give glory to God. Many would-be worshipers are willing enough to "sing glory to God" and to shout loud enough "glory to God," for all that is easy and costs us nothing but a little physical effort at the time. When we take of our hard-earned money, that which has really cost effort and energy and sacrifice and saving, we are then making an offering pleasing to the Lord and one that gives glory to Him, because it means something to us to thus deny ourselves.

Our Saviour said, "Where your treasure is, there will your heart be." What our dear Lord wishes is our heart and the devotion of our heart, but He fails to get this from many of us, because we are not willing to put our treasure in the Lord's service and give it in the name and for the sake of our Lord. As long as praise costs us only words and pleasing songs and delightful utterances, we do not give much glory to God, and we certainly do not get much joy for ourselves. True, we cannot buy God's favor. He does not ask it, but He does ask for our heart and the devotion thereof. But He knows full well that one of the most subtle sins of the soul is that of covetousness, and love for money, and what money can buy, and the only way He has of bringing us to overcome this spirit of covetousness and anxiety for gain and for getting is to entreat us to come into His courts with an offering, that we may glorify His name by giving our hearts with and through our gifts.

J. O. A.

THE MAIN BUSINESS OF THE CHURCH.

When we talk of saving people from hell or getting them to heaven, our talk falls on deaf ears. When we speak of the terrible need somewhere, our hearers remember that article they read about missionaries not being needed any more. When we talk of the horrors of heathenism, somebody remembers those good things in the non-Christian religions. When we appeal to Church loyalty, the liberal is not interested in propagating denominations, "making Baptists out of Buddhists and Methodists out of Mohammedans," while somebody else objects that he has heard of the breakdown of denominational lines on the mission field and he is not interested if the Churches there cannot be kept true to the faith (meaning as his denomination interprets it).

What is the trouble, and what is the answer? Does it not lie in our having left the missionary task to the mission boards and the missionaries? Is it not true that for the most part we have thought of missions as a side issue rather than the main business of the Church? And has not interest in the missionary enterprise been considered somewhat as an optional affair? At best, we were expected to give our money and let the folks who were paid to do that job settle the questions that arose. Unconsciously, missionary leaders have tended to stress those things which would arouse sympathy or pity and bring in the largest returns of money and interest. There was no intention of keeping the Church in the dark. Rather, it was due to our habit of leaving the problems to the boards and the missionaries. Nobody saw the danger. And so we find a great gulf fixed between the Church at large and the missionary enterprise as it is. If we are to save the situation, we must go to work in earnest to bring these two together for the sake of both. The Church must come to see that her main business and reason for existence is to establish the kingdom of God. She must see that the missionary enterprise is a vital and essential part of this task. And she must see the task as it is—too big, too magnificent, too important, to be treated as a side issue instead of the chief business of every Christian. Then we must help the Church to understand the complex situation which we face today. And in the spirit of Christ, in unlimited love, humility, and self-forgetfulness, we must seek to make this many-sided world of ours the place a Father of love would have it be—a fit habitation for all His children.—From Training for World Friendship, by Ina Corinne Brown.

ARE WE HIS DISCIPLES?

When we go back to Jesus we find that to Him the one supremely precious things in the universe was human personality. "I am come," He said, "that they might have life and have it more abundantly." And his "they" included all men. Trite as it sounds to say it, it is hard for most of us really to believe that all human personality is as important as we ourselves are. Whatever we may admit in theory, we have a hard time really believing that it is as important in the sight of God that a Hindu, an African, a Chinese, or a Turk shall have the abundant life as it is that it shall be our portion. Yet if Jesus made any distinction at all, it was in favor of the poor, the despised, the down-trodden, and the neglected. If there is any doubt in our minds that He counted personality of major importance, we have only to look at the way He spent His time, those to whom He gave His attention. To Him nothing was of any value except as it served the highest ends of personality. Nothing was right that degraded or hindered the highest good of personality. And His goal for all personality was the abundant life, the richest, the fullest life possible for every one. It is this purpose of Jesus', rather than anything He said, that gives us our missionary motive. What constitutes this abundant life in Him? Stanley Jones has summed it up as "an adequate goal for character; a free, full life—God." Can we find any higher good than that? Is it not what we ourselves desire in our highest moments? Then, is it not what we should seek to share with all the world?

How can such a motive be optional? How can it be other than the supreme purpose of the individual Christian and of the Church to make the achievement of Christ-like character, a free, full life, and God, possible to all men everywhere? How can we follow Christ without caring for the things He cared about? How can we be His disciples without sharing his purpose? If human personality was supremely precious to Him, it must be so to His followers. If He wanted the abundant life possible for all men, then we must share His purpose of making it so.—From Training for World Friendship, by Brown.

THINGS MONEY CAN'T BUY.

A friendly visitor, Mr. J. A. Spender, has recorded this as his opinion of us: "The majority of Americans seem to be convinced that if only they stick to business, everything else will cure itself."

This accords with a recent utterance of Chief Justice Taft. He was questioned as to "the most disturbing element in our national life." Replying, he declared it to be "the materialistic philosophy which places wealth and worldly success ahead of every other consideration in life."

Who today cares for the things that money cannot buy? Everybody cares for some of them—sunlight, air, health. But we are thinking of the spiritual commodities in which the Church especially deals. Who cares for them? Faith, hope, love, ideals of brotherhood that reach across seas and racial divisions. Who cares enough about social justice to be willing to suffer for it?

It is the chief business of the Church to care for these and to train a race of men and women who will put them above everything else.

Modern salesmanship knows how to multiply human desires and make people buy things they didn't know they wanted. All the resources of skill and careful training are called into play to teach men how to turn this trick, which, after all, is of very questionable benefit to society.

Everybody can be made to want the things that money can buy, and to work early and late to get the money with which to buy them.

It is not an easy time in which to press the value of the things of the spirit upon men whose hearts are filled with what the Chief Justice calls "the lust for wealth."

We must help to create a sane mind in those who are so deeply immersed in business and worldly pursuits that they will come to care supremely for the things money cannot buy. For only so can the Church come anywhere near fulfilling its mission as the saviour of society from the decay of a material civilization uncontrolled by spiritual ideals.—Western Christian Advocate.

RADIO AND RELIGION.

Now that the air is crowded with programs on every conceivable subject, the question arises as to what extent religious organizations are using this marvelous discovery to reach the listening millions. The annual report of the committee on religious activities to the advisory council of the National Broadcasting Company gives some interesting figures and suggestions on this subject. The report, written by Dr. Charles F. MacFarland, general secretary of the Federal Council of Churches, presents figures and programs to illustrate the number and quality of religious services given during the past year, and now being broadcast by the Church organizations.

The committee itself is composed of a Protestant, a Roman Catholic, and a Jew; the duty of each is to confer with representative groups of his own faith and with officers of the National Broadcasting Company, in order to arrange for religious programs for each faith. The Protestant Churches have two representative bodies—Federal Council of Churches and the National Religious Radio Committee, the latter representing federations in various parts of the country.

The report shows that the religious programs each Sunday are sent out over the National Broadcasting Company stations, together with many special services on other days. During 1928 there was a series of summer services, including a radio Church service and twilight devotionals. At Christmas a joint program was given by Protestants and Catholics.

The recommendations of the committee call for the broadcasting of a series of "great messages on religion," given by representative men of the three religious faiths; for news reviews of religious happenings similar to those now given on politics; and a request that religious programs include nothing of a non-religious character. These recommendations are being considered by the National Broadcasting Company and will probably be included in future programs.

Judging by the number of responses received from the invisible audiences, the religious programs were eagerly welcomed in all parts of the United States and in foreign lands. These responses, especially those from "shut-ins" and hospitals, revealed how the radio services ministered to the spiritual needs of the multitudes who cannot go to Church.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

INDIAN POPULATION.

The Indian population of the United States is roughly estimated by the Department of the Interior at 350,000 persons. Of this number, about 225,000 are in some respects wards of the government. They are located in twenty-four States, and there are something over a hundred jurisdictions. The larger groups of this Indian population are located in the States of Arizona, California, Minnesota, Montana, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Washington, and Wisconsin, with considerable groups in Idaho, Kansas, Michigan, Nebraska, Nevada, Oregon, Utah, and Wyoming. The government has responsibilities also in connection with groups of Indians in North Carolina, Mississippi and a few additional States.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

Lesson VIII—May 26, 1929.

GOD'S LAW IN THE HEART.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Thy word have I laid up in my heart, that I might not sin against Thee." —Psa. 119:11.

LESSON: Jeremiah 31:1-40; John 1:17; Hebrews 8:7-13.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psa. 119:9-16.

Personal Responsibility.

Jeremiah can be said to have discovered the individual. He gave a new emphasis to personal responsibility. He insisted upon every man giving an account of himself to God. He rescued the individual from the mass. And in doing this, he makes a distinct advance in real religion.

Before Jeremiah's time, they had a proverb to the effect that the fathers had eaten sour grapes and the children's teeth were on edge. This idea had its background in the family and the tribal form of society and of government, and it had been carried over into national life. According to this theory, the responsibility for the sins of one generation was placed upon a previous generation. It was, of course, a rather convenient working principle. It would be so much easier on a man's conscience if he could "pass the buck" so far as personal responsibility for sin and punishment were concerned to those of his previous generation. It was just another way of disclaiming the personal responsibility involved in sin. People do it today. Talk with them about their failures and their sins, and they will tell you that heredity, environment, circumstances, companions are responsible for their sins. As a matter of fact, the thing started a long time ago, for when the voice of the Lord God called in the Garden of Eden, Adam said it was the woman who caused the trouble, and the woman said it was the serpent. When Ahab meets Elijah, he asks, "Art thou he that troubleth Israel?" To which Elijah instantly replies that it was Ahab himself who was troubling Israel.

Now, Jeremiah puts the responsibility where it belongs. He said that there is a personal and individual factor in sin. Other factors and forces may, and do, enter in, but every normal man knows that when he commits sin, it is the "I" that did it. It seems that there might be a little more preaching and teaching along these lines today. There is a tendency to lose sight of the individual in the mass. He needs to be extricated and helped to see that he, personally, has access to God and is personally responsible to God.

Inner, Vital Religion.

Jeremiah saw not only the personal factor in religion; he saw also the real nature of religion. At its best, it is not a matter of forced obedience to external laws, but the matter of a right spirit within. Out of the heart—the heart as used in the Bible usually refers to the intellectual, moral and spiritual center of life—are the issues of life. For Jeremiah as for Jesus, the important and the essential thing was to have the right spirit within a man. If a man has the spirit of God in his heart, at the center of his thinking and his feeling and his willing, he does not have to bother much about external laws. Here again Jeremiah makes a distinct advance in and contribution to religion. The important thing is to have the right spirit. That, of course, is the reason why Jesus insists upon the "new birth." Being a Christian is a rather difficult thing under any circumstances, but it is impossible unless one has had created and released within him the spirit of Christ. Let a man keep his heart right through the grace of Jesus Christ and his conduct will take care of itself.

All this, of course, has a practical implication for Sunday School teachers. There are those who think that the main, and in some cases the only, function of the Sunday School is to teach the Bible, to impart a knowledge of the Bible. As a matter of fact, mere knowledge of the Bible does not insure right conduct. A man may know the Bible by heart and be a rogue and a rascal. The primary thing is to create right attitudes and to develop right habits. Knowledge is a means to an end; not an end in itself. The chief passion of our teaching should be to awaken and quicken within our pupils, by the grace of God, a new spirit. Knowledge, of course, helps, and is necessary. But to instill ideals, to develop attitudes, to stimulate right activity is the ultimate goal of teaching and preaching.

Then, too, one can see that this truth has implications for parents as well as for Sunday School teachers. The Sunday School teacher cannot begin to do all the work. The home must co-operate by furnishing a wholesome atmosphere, by presenting in concrete form the proper ideals, by fostering and encouraging the proper attitudes, and by stimulating right conduct. Everything should be done to keep alive and to give expression to the spirit within our children.

It should go without saying that this principle of religion as an inner, vital principle has a direct implication for all of us as Christians. If religion is a matter primarily of spirit, then every effort should be made to keep that spirit alive and functioning. Man cannot live from the standpoint of spirit by bread alone. The man who habitually neglects public services of worship and personal practices of devotion is quenching the spirit. Contact with and obedience to Christ are absolutely essential to a vital spiritual life, which is the heart of religion. Let all those who read these lines check up on themselves as to what they are doing in any vital way toward keeping alive and healthy this essential spiritual quality of life.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

TOPIC: "How Have Missionaries Been Effective Leaders?"—Matt. 4:12-25.

Some Bible Hints.

Personal daily consecrated life among the people is effective leadership (v. 13).

New knowledge makes a man a leader. People look up to the person who tells them new and convincing truths (v. 16).

The missionary's work is to change the people's minds. "Repent!" Do things differently. Get a new attitude to life (v. 17).

Missionaries must get helpers and train them for leadership. Even Christ could not save the world alone (vs. 18, 19).

Suggestive Thoughts.

Missionaries have led in education. China, Japan, India, Africa owe their educational systems to missionaries. Paganism is darkness; Christianity is light.

Missionaries have led in health-knowledge.

Hospitals, clinics, sanitation are part of their work.

Missionaries have taken the lead in industry in some lands. They saw that no people can rise in character and achievement until some sort of economic independence is provided. The gospel calls for work.

Missionaries are responsible for the emancipation of woman in not a few lands. In India and China, what freedom woman enjoys is rooted in ideals implanted by missionaries.

A Few Illustrations.

There are people today who blame missionaries for being the cause of China's revolution, not knowing that this is a great compliment. The work of missionaries is to awaken people.

Livingstone opened up Africa. He was a missionary leader preparing the way for trade and the Church. An open Africa is the result of his statesmanship.

John B. Paton led the cannibals of the South Seas out of paganism into light. Their changed life goes directly back to his work. Without him they would have been cannibals still.

Missionaries have taken the lead in reforming China's written language. Very few could read the difficult sign language. A Christian Endeavor missionary translated the New Testament into a new script which any one may learn.

To Think About.

What have our Church's missionaries accomplished?

How have our missionaries helped the homes of natives?

How can we help our missionaries?

UNFAIR?

Opponents of the national origins clause of the immigration act of 1924 are rallying their forces for a last-minute attack against this legislation before it becomes effective on July 1st, in accordance with the proclamation of President Hoover.

The attempt may be made at the special session of Congress to have the clause repealed or again postponed. When the question is asked as to what possible contention there could be against the system proposed under the national origins clause, the answer is immediately given that it discriminates against some of the countries—the Irish Free State and Germany are usually pointed out—cutting down their quota of immigrants, while it greatly increases that of Great Britain.

What are the grounds for this contention? It is true that under the temporary system of basing the quotas upon 2 per cent of the alien population of the 1890 census, the Irish Free State, with a population of approximately 3,000,000, is allowed 28,567 immigrants into this country annually, while Great Britain, including England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, with a population of nearly 50,000,000, is allowed only 34,007. Under the national origins system, the portions are more in accordance with the respective populations of the two countries: the Irish Free State being allowed 17,853, and Great Britain 65,721. Yet, even with those figures, the former, with about one-sixteenth the population of the latter, is allowed nearly one-third as many immigrants. Is this unfair to the Irish Free State? It would seem, in view of the comparative populations, that there is a discrimination against Great Britain.

Under the national origins provision, Germany's quota is reduced from 51,227 to 25,957. Under the present quota, Germany contributes nearly one-third of the total number of immigrants, whereas it is estimated that only about one-sixth of the population of this country is of German origin. As for Italy, her quota is increased about 2,000 under the origins quota. Even with this increase, Italy, with a population of nearly 40,000,000, is allowed only 5,802 immigrants annually.

Those are some of the main distinctions between the present quotas and the quotas that will become effective under the national origins clause. It is regrettable that there will be a slight decrease in the number of immigrants allowed from the Scandinavian countries and a slight increase from Southeastern Europe, but when it is taken into consideration that the total number will be reduced by approximately 11,000, the change will not make a material distinction.

LETTER TO A YOUNG PREACHER.

By G. STALEY HUNT.

Class of '28.

Respectfully dedicated to the Ministerial Association of Elon College.

A line to you, my preacher friend,
Your patience quite forbearing,
Perhaps may find it in a trend
Of sympathetic sharing;
For in this thing that we call Life
We find so much abusing,
So much of toil and envious strife,
We have no time for musing.

Ofttimes the world may think you wrong
And call you weak and narrow,
But trials only make one strong
And fit for things that harrow.
So patient be with those who sneer,
And kind to those who doubt you,
For doubt gives birth to quaking fear,
And sneers are made to rout you.

Rejoice with those whose hearts are light,
And mourn with those who're weeping;
You're in the warfare for the right,
And time will do the reaping.
But in this fight against the wrong
Think not 'tis single-handed,
For mighty hosts, in deed and song,
With you are interbanded.

To woo success, don't think you needs
Must lower your holy station,
Nor sacrifice the lowly deeds
For greater estimation.
Though fame may come at one lone stroke,
Success may be belated;
And honor always bears the yoke
Of those who've worked and waited.

Though jeering lips may ridicule,
And praising words may flatter,
A limber tongue's the devil's tool
And ill may hide the clatter.
But when the path ahead is clear,
Small hope is there in turning;
So, smiling, meet each task and steer
To where the beacon's burning.

Speak out your words, though bold, not vain,
And not in tones of thunder,
But smoothly as the gentle rain
That melts the clods asunder.
For pow'r to sway the hearts of men
Comes only to the humble—
A sympathetic word may win
More praise than shouts a-tumble.

Condemn vile sin where'er 'tis found,
But be tender with the sinner,
For though the bad may still abound,
The man's always the winner.
And though pathos lies close to mirth,
A laugh may hide the weeping,
So let each sorrow be the birth
Of joy for others' keeping.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE,
One of Our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MONDAY.

THE HOME OF THE SOUL.

"Giving thanks unto the Father, who made us to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light."—Col. 1:9-14.

This inheritance of ours is our eternal home. After the ups and downs of life, the many changes in our earthly homes, it is most restful to think of the place prepared for us by our Saviour, the ever-blessed "home ever there." Death cannot enter that abode, sickness has no room there, there is no pain there, no loss, no fear. It is the ideal home of which we dream through all our life.

Blessed, most blessed is he whose thoughts pass up to God, not because they are driven like a fisherman's craft swept by the fierceness of the storm, not because they are forced by want or fear, not because they are led by the hand of duty, but because God is in his habitation and his home!

Prayer.—Yes, our Father, we are going home to Thee. Open the door to us, Father. We are all unworthy, but receive us. We shall enter in, to go no more and forever. For Thy home is Thyself, we in Thee and Thou in us, ages without end. Amen.

TUESDAY.

GOLDEN APPLES.

"A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in network of silver."—Prov. 25:7-13.

Golden apples in a basket of silver network—what a lovely picture of gracious words! Such words fit the occasion as the golden fruit fits the silver receptacle. They adorn the occasion and are adorned by it, even as the gold and silver set each other off. It is a wonderful gift to be able to speak fitting words.

That gift is born of love. We think of lovers as dumb and silent, but nothing so frees the tongue as affection. To speak well, we must be in love with our subject. To speak helpfully and inspiringly, we must love those to whom we speak. Love breaks up the fountains of the deeps within us. Love draws from us our best and sends it forth in the best way.

Prayer.—Dear Lord, may we have Thy quickness to speak the kind and tactful word. May we fill our days with loving speech. We know that no other gold will so enrich us and our friends. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

BE OF GOOD CHEER.

"And the night following, the Lord stood by him, and said, Be of good cheer; for as thou hast testified concerning me at Jerusalem, so must thou bear witness also at Rome."—Acts 23:1-11.

Paul had just escaped a deadly mob and was in constant danger of assassination, but he was bidden by the Lord, nevertheless, to be full of cheer. He kept up his courage through all the terrible experiences before him, for he knew that his Saviour was with him, and had much work yet for him to do.

All the Christian heroes in the world's history have had this same unconquerable cheerfulness. This should be our spirit, as we, like Paul, follow our divine Commander. There is no danger where He leads. The only danger is in not following Him. Take His road, and be of good cheer.

Prayer.—Lead on, Thou Captain of our salvation! Lead on, where the battle smoke is thickest, the cannons roar the loudest. Lead on, into any peril, through any hardships. For with Thee is our peace. Amen.

THURSDAY.

PROPERLY DRESSED.

"Put on the new man, that, after God, hath been created in righteousness and holiness of truth."—Eph. 4:20-32.

Paul must have been one of the best-dressed men that ever lived! He thought much about dress, wrote much about it. To be sure, the attire that filled so much of his mind was not that with which a dandy was concerned, but was infinitely superior. Here is one of his descriptions of it: "Put on, therefore, holy and beloved, a heart of compassion, kindness, humility, meekness, long suffering," and over it all he would have us put the girdle of love. If that would not make a handsomely dressed man, I never saw one.

But most of us go to our daily work half-dressed or altogether unclothed. Dr. F. B. Meyer puts it this way: "If a Christian, on coming in contact with his daily calling, yields to dishonesty, ambition, avarice, we may remind him that he has left some articles in his wardrobe that he can ill spare."

Paul's sartorial ideal is complete. He would have us put on nothing less than "the new man." He would have us wear a new outfit from top to toe. Shall we not enjoy doing it?

Prayer.—Our Saviour, preserve us from slovenliness. Our Saviour, save us from spiritual tatters. Our Saviour keep us fresh and clean. Amen.

FRIDAY.

FILLED.

"Be filled with the Spirit."—Eph. 5:6-18.

However careless modern Christians may be regarding the blessed Holy Spirit, there was no such heedlessness in the early Church. The wonderful events of Pentecost left no doubt of His reality and power in the minds of the first Christians. They expected Him in their lives, they relied upon Him in their work, they sought Him in their trials. He was their Guide, their Comforter, their ever-present and infinite Friend.

As Dr. A. J. Gordon once wrote: "Whenever there was anything important to be done, it says, for example, 'Paul, being filled with the Spirit,' spake thus; 'Peter, being filled with the Spirit,' did this. It was characteristic of the apostolic Church that they were men full of the Holy Ghost. Is that our privilege? It is not only our privilege; it is our duty."

Where most of us fall short in this matter is in neglecting the word, "filled." We know the Holy Spirit. We have occasional moments of communion with Him. Sometimes, on occasions of especial difficulty we implore His aid and receive it. But few of us are so filled with the Spirit that He guides and controls all our thinking and doing.

Prayer.—When that comes about, O Blessed Spirit, how joyous we are, how fortunate and strong! What is there that we cannot do, with Thee? What is there that we fear, with Thee? What good thing shall we fail to obtain, with Thee? Oh, may we be content with no half-way and meager experience of Thee, but dwell in Thee all the days, forever. Amen.

SATURDAY.

HOME-MAKERS.

"She doeth him good and not evil all the days of her life."—Prov. 31:10-20.

This passage in Proverbs is one of the most beautiful descriptions of a home-maker in all literature. A home is made by some one who, like Jesus, "goes about doing good." Home-makers live to make others happy, and so they are happiest of all themselves, and the homes they make are palaces of happiness.

And the work of a home-maker is within the reach of any one, because a home is built, not out of great deeds that require a great genius, but out of the little deeds of kindness that any one may accomplish if animated by the spirit of love.

If we feel that these concerns are beneath us, they are far above us. If we scorn them, men may well scorn us. For, though little in themselves, they are great in their results. They are like the leaves that make the forest, like the sand grains that rear the mountains, like the minutes that constitute the ages. No one knows so well as the Creator the supreme importance of the little deeds that make the blessed homes of the world.

Prayer.—Thou infinite Being, Maker of all things, help us to make this thing that Thou hast set to make, our own home. Join with us, O Creator, in the creation of it, and as we look upon the result of our labors, may we see that it is good. In the name of Thy Son, the Home-lover. Amen.

SUNDAY.

KNOWING OUR MEDICINE CHEST.

"Thou art good, and doest good; teach me Thy statutes."—Psa. 119:65-72.

Once the clumsy camel driver of a medical missionary caused a lot of tabloid medicines to be thrown from the camel's back and scattered over the sands. They were all mixed up, could not be separated, and so were left lying on the ground. But one of the quack native doctors gathered them up, and some years later the medical missionary called on him and found on a shelf a large bottle labeled, "Assorted Pills." "These," said the native doctor, "are more sought than any of my drugs. I only give them to patients whose cases I do not understand!"

This is a parable of Bible study. Too often we go to our Bibles as that native doctor went to his bottle of "assorted pills." What wonder that the Bible, used in that way, has no healing virtue for our souls!

We need to pray with the psalmist, "Teach me Thy statutes," and then by much reading and eager thinking, we must make it possible for the Author of the Bible to teach us. It is a complete pharmacopœia. It contains the cure for every ill. But it is not to be treated as a book of necromancy.

Prayer.—O Lord, teach us Thy statutes. Amen.

A THOUGHT THAT WAS EFFECTIVE.

A man stopped a preacher in a London street and said, "I once heard you preach in Paris, and something you said was the means of my conversion." "What was it?" "The latch. You said, 'The latch is on our side of the door.' I had always thought God hard, and that we must do something to propitiate Him. It was a new thought that Christ had done it all, and was waiting at the door for me."—The Southern Churchman.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

We very often read in the daily papers about some one having willed the orphanage of his choice a nice sum of money to be used in taking care of the fatherless and helpless children in its care and further the work of love and charity. It must be a great consolation to a person who has money to leave it to such a worthy cause and know after his life's work is done his contribution will be working for him and blessing the fatherless and motherless and the widows in distress. It would take time and eternity to tell the good donations of this kind will do.

I am wondering how many of our people have remembered the Christian Orphanage, Elon College, N. C., in their will! Friends, when you write that document won't you kindly remember your orphanage, whether it be a large or small sum? It will help some worthy child to have a home and training and perhaps cause them to be fine citizens of our great country. If you have already made your will, if you did not remember the Christian Orphanage, won't you add a little clause, making that provision in its behalf? I feel sure your joy in the better world will be greater.

FAMOUS TROWEL TO MAKE JOURNEY.

The small silver trowel which was used by George Washington in laying the cornerstone of the national capitol on September 18, 1793, and which is now the treasure of Alexandria-Washington Lodge, No. 22, Alexandria, Va., will be taken under escort by the officers of that lodge to be used in laying the corner-stone of the Scottish Rite Cathedral which is being erected in Kansas City, Mo. The ceremonies will take place on May 10th. It is expected that this new $1,500,000 structure will be completed in the spring of 1930.

Since President Washington first used the trowel in laying the corner-stone of the Capitol, this tool has been used at these important functions:

The laying of the corner-stone of Washington's Monument.

Ceremonies in the laying of the corner-stone of the Masonic Temple in Washington, 1907, when President Roosevelt officiated.

The ceremonies for the corner-stone laying of the Masonic Temple in Detroit, in 1922, President Harding officiating.

When William Howard Taft laid the corner-stone of the Washington National Masonic Memorial in Alexandria, Va., in 1923.

CRUISERS OR PEACE CONGRESSES?

Figures do not mean much to most people—$240,000 is better understood when it is known as one-seventieth of the cost of a $17,000,000 cruiser; this being the cost of one of the fifteen cruisers the Senate has been voting about. The aim of the fifteen $17,000,000 cruisers is claimed by their promoters to be the peace and order of the world. Is it a fitting and efficient use of money? Would one of the cruisers do more for peace than $17,000,000 worth of International Peace Congresses—seventy of them? Tokyo, Shanghai, Delhi, Constantinople, Budapest, Berlin, Rome, Paris, London, Washington—$17,000,000, one cruiser, would provide for seven congresses in each of those centers, with an average attendance of perhaps 5,000 persons from all nations. Who can fail to recognize the incalculable educational and constructive value of such a series of congresses spread over a period of twenty years? Who is the really practical man—he who sees, or he who fails to see that this is an immeasurably better way than the other of spending $17,000,000 for the purpose proclaimed?—Ex.

ANCIENT MISSIONARIES.

he had been put in prison because of slander of the captain's wife. He acted the part of a true witness of God when he interpreted the dreams of his fellow-prisoners. God was made known through the kingdom of Egypt because of this one missionary.

God has always loved the heathen. He loved the heathen of Nineveh so much that He converted a Jew and sent him over to preach to them. He had quite a hard time getting Jonah to do the job, but he finally chose the task in preference to death. He was not a good missionary because he was not wholly resigned to God's will. He went and preached the message that God commanded, but when the people received it and repented, their missionary was angry because God did not destroy them as he had said in his preaching. It's true God used a selfish man to accomplish a great task, but Jonah got no joy out of his experience because he was too selfish.

Of all the ancient missionaries that I know anything about, I love to study the achievements of Naomi. This woman and her husband did not go to Moab to spread the knowledge of God, but that they might make a living. In the meantime, her two sons married Moabitish women. Their father died. Both the boys died also, leaving three widows. Naomi made her arrangements at once to go back home to Bethlehem, and called her daughters-in-law and told them good-by, advising them to return to their people. Orpah took the advice and returned, but Ruth refused to go. This godly woman had wielded such an influence over Ruth that she said, "Thy people shall be my people, thy God shall be my God, where thou diest there will I die." Ruth was a typical convert to the Hebrew religion. God chose this heathen to become the grandmother of King David, the greatest king Israel ever had, and also through the descendants of this noble character.

Are the heathen worth saving? What can we do to help them learn of Jesus Christ the Saviour of all men?

Jesus our Lord thinks they are worth saving, and commanded His followers to go to the uttermost parts to save them in His name and in His strength and for His sake; for He loves them, whether we do or not.

"I wholly disagree," says the distinguished inventor, Mr. Thomas A. Edison, "with the argument of anti-prohibitionists that the Volstead act is an encroachment on personal liberty. If personal liberty were to run wild, we would have no advancement. Civilization becomes better only as we curb personal liberty in the interest of general welfare."

The studious perusal of the Sacred Volume will make better citizens.—Thomas Jefferson.

LOCATION OF CHRISTIAN CHURCHES.

The proposal to merge the Congregational and the Christian Churches naturally raises questions concerning these Churches. We are summarizing these questions and their answers in brief form for the information of Congregationalists generally.

Where are Christian Churches?

First of all, they are not the Churches of the Disciples of Christ. Many of the Churches of the Disciples are locally called "Christian," and not infrequently they are incorporated under that name. However willing Congregationalists might be, and probably are, to consider favorably merger with the Disciples, that question is not now before us.

The "Christian Churches" with whom Congregationalists are considering merger, are Churches which belong to the General Convention of the Christian Church, whose headquarters are in Dayton, Ohio.

Note 2: The membership of the colored Churches of the Afro-Christian Convention is, substantially, as follows: North Carolina, 20,000; Virginia, 13,200; Baltimore, Md., 2,000; New York and New Jersey, 1,500.

Polity of the Christian Churches.

These Churches are wholly independent, each Church being the ultimate source of authority for its own life. In this they are rather more Congregational, if anything, than are Congregational Churches. By this is meant that they are not so highly organized in their interrelationships.

The Christian Churches, however, are united in fellowship in very much the same way that Congregationalists are. The local Church belongs to the Conference, which corresponds to Congregational associations. The Conferences are associated together in regional conventions, which usually cover several States, as compared with our State Conferences, and these regional Conventions, with their Conferences, are associated together in the General Convention of the Christian Church. This General Convention has caused to be organized various boards for missionary, educational and similar work.

There are secretaries of the General Convention and of the boards, but no State or district superintendents.

Principles and Practices.

Six Principles are maintained by the Christian Churches: (1) Christ is the only Head of the Church; (2) Christian is our name; (3) the Bible is our only creed; (4) Christian character the only test of fellowship; (5) individual interpretation of the Scriptures the privilege of every believer; (6) the union of all the followers of Christ.

In practice, the ordinance of baptism is administered according to the preference of the believer. Immersion is not general, but somewhat more frequent than among Congregational Churches. In the freedom of these Churches a Quaker, for example, or any other who does not believe in water baptism, but rather in the spiritual baptism, is received without baptism. They are, of course, open communionists.

In theological position, like Congregationalists, they range all the way from ultraconservatism to liberal evangelicalism.

Where are These Churches Located?

The accompanying table will tell the story best. A study of this table will show that these Churches are located on the Atlantic seaboard, where their greatest strength is in North Carolina and Virginia, and in the States of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, with a lesser number in the States of Iowa, Missouri, Kansas and Kentucky, and a very few in other States.

The geographical distribution means that the States not mentioned are unaffected locally by the proposal for merger, and the unequal distribution seems to call for recommendation of different plans of association where one or the other denomination is relatively weak in numbers.

The Afro-Christian Convention.

The Christian Churches were anti-slavery before the Civil War. Until 1865, colored and white members were associated together in the same Churches in the South as well as in the North, and even yet in a few instances in the South there are some colored members of some Christian white Churches. The Afro-Christian Convention, however, consists of between thirty and forty thousand members, both North and South. The bulk of this membership lies in North Carolina and Virginia, the former State being the only one in which the Congregational Conferences of colored people and the Afro-Christian Convention overlap. There are no colored Congregational Churches in Virginia, and there are no colored Christian Churches in the rest of the South. The colored Christian Churches are wholly self-supporting and self-administering, but with provision for official delegates in the General Convention.

Missionary Work.

The Christian Churches conduct missionary work in Japan and Porto Rico; the General Convention co-operates with the Afro-Christian Convention in the conduct of one school for colored people in North Carolina; the Board of Missions maintains Church extension work in the United States. There is also a Board of Christian Education, a Board of Publication, a Board of Evangelism and a Woman's Mission Board. The proposals for union provide recommendations for the unifying of all this missionary work with the missionary work of the Congregational Churches.

Additional articles on the proposed merger will appear in succeeding issues of The Congregationalist, including the proposed plan in full, more about the Christian Churches themselves and the answer to questions which naturally arise. Questions may be addressed to the chairman of the Commission on Interchurch Relations, Dr. Frank K. Sanders, Rockport, Mass.—The Congregationalist, Boston, Mass.

OBITUARIES.

HART.

James David Hart, a charter member of Sanford Christian Church, peacefully passed to his reward April 28th. He had been in feeble health since the death of his wife, October 19, 1927. He was born and reared in Chatham County, and from this county he enlisted and served as a soldier in the War Between the States, under the leadership of Lee and Jackson. Of his company that went from Chatham County, only one now is living—H. C. Clegg, of Pittsboro, N. C. Upon his return from the war, he married Miss Alice Martin, and they had eight children. Three died in infancy. Those living are James D., Jr., Norfolk; Mrs. J. S. Mungo, of Columbia, S. C.; Mrs. Edith Poe, of Raleigh, and Misses Emma and Sadie, of Sanford. There are ten grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

Bro. Hart was a good man, a faithful servant and honest in all his relations. He served long and faithfully the Cum- neck Coal Mines, being a gas miner. Several explosions have occurred during the history of the mines, but no explosion ever occurred when he had charge. He was a wise and careful inspector and al- ways remembered his duty when the lives of others were in his hands. As a citizen, he was quiet, peaceable and interested in his county and in his town and county. His neighbors respected him, and his chil- dren loved and trusted him. He and his family were charter members of Sanford Christian Church, and have always been loyal and faithful and liberal.

He was in his eighty-fifth year. His life was filled with many experiences— some sad, many dangerous, and many more joyous. He reached old age with- out losing the powers of his mind or in any way becoming sour. For over a year he had been unable to work at the mines, but he did not complain. In his own home, surrounded by his own children, where everything that human hands could do, he passed away to his God in whom he trusted. He came to his grave "in a full age, like as a shock of corn cometh in his season."

His remains were carried from his home on Charlotte Avenue to his Church, where we sang his favorite hymns, thought about his long life and service, read a comfort- ing Scripture, heard an earnest and con- soling prayer by the Presbyterian min- ister of Sanford, Dr. R. E. Gilmore, and then marched, in company with his Masonic brethren, to the cemetery at Shal- low well, where he was laid by the side of his wife, who had walked with him for sixty years. Many were the flowers, send- ing forth their sweet fragrance and speak- ing their silent but sweet messages. The day was beautiful and when we turned our faces from the last resting-place of our beloved friend and brother, we felt that he, like the beautiful day, had reach- ed the sunset of a long day and without a cloud.

MISSIONS IN CHINA.—

The exact state of Christian missions in the Celestial empire is revealed in a survey especially prepared for the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions by Dr. Courtenay H. Fenn, an American missionary and author, who has been associated with missions in China since 1893, and whose headquarters are in the Laymen's Bible School, Peking.

ANOTHER CHURCH MERGER.—

Publicity material has come to hand regarding a plan of union whereby the Reformed Church in the U. S. A., the United Brethren in Christ, and the Evangelical Synod of North America will form the United Church in America. At least two years will pass before the necessary steps can be completed to make the union effective. More than a million members and some 9,000 congregations are involved. The three denominations will not be much disturbed in their method of worship and organization. Each is expected to announce its affiliation with the United Church, and certain activities like theological training and printing will be united. The door is left open for the rest of the denominations to come into the United Church.—Ex.

"IS RELIGION OPIUM?"

Under this title, T. T. Brumbaugh, correspondent from Japan for the Christian Century, gives the summary of the address delivered last summer by Toyohiko Hagawa, before the Three Religions' Conference, in Tokyo, Japan. The address was anything but an opiate in its effect upon the conference. It was given wide publicity in both the secular and religious press, and was severely criticised by many religious leaders. To a careful thinker, it will be at once apparent that only one side of the picture is presented; but that side needs the careful and prayerful consideration of every Christian who is interested in the future influence of Christianity. We present the summary as Mr. Brumbaugh received it from Mr. Kagawa himself:

"We know that the Bolsheviki have put up in a famous Church in Moscow the statement, 'Religion is opium.' In some sense, we must admit that this is true, for recently the religion of the Russian Orthodox Church has served more to put the people to sleep than to awaken them. The materialistic civilization of today, dominated by capitalism and greed, does stimulate desire for worldly gain. Money is practically almighty. And it is a very sad fact that Buddhism, Christianity and Shintoism are all actually under the power of money. In so far as religion has not developed an adequate criticism of and opposition to the mammonism of modern civilization, there is some opium in it.

Confronting Reality.

"Materialistic, mechanical, mammonistic civilization is swallowing up the quiet forest shrines, the peaceful garden surrounded temples, and even the golden crosses at the pinnacles of the Gothic cathedrals. The time has come for all the priests of all these shrines, temples, and Churches to come out from their peaceful sanctuaries, cast off their somnolence, and confront the actual realities of the roadside.

"There are 8,500,000 laborers in this country, among whom 4,000,000 are in machine industry, 1,500,000 are engaged in transportation, and the rest are fishermen, miners, carpenters, etc. In addition to this number, there are about 5,600,000 farmers, 70 per cent of whom are tenants. And they are practically all very poor. Infant mortality, strife between capitalists and laborers, disputes between landlords and tenants, and other symptoms of an unhealthy social condition are increasing. The unemployed are multiplying. Their stomachs are empty and they have no place to lay their heads. For these who are living a restless life without food or shelter, what is the use of mere preaching? God desires mercy, and not ritualistic sacrifice.

"Read once more your Buddhist scriptures, and find in them the spirit which animated the great Prince Shotoku, the Buddhist pioneer of Japan. If you cannot rediscover and appropriate this spirit, you Buddhists might as well roll up your scrolls and carry them back to India! And you delicate Shinto ritualists—if you cannot grasp the vision of Madame Nakayama, foundress of Tenrikyo (a sect of Shinto)—the vision of saving the weakest and most unhappy—what is the use of all your rituals? And to you Christians, I say, shame on you for building huge and costly Church buildings, while forgetting to follow the Man born in a manger and buried in another's tomb!

"Perhaps some of you will call me a dangerous thinker if I say these things. Even Buddha was not a 'safe' man in his day. He deserted the palace and died on the banks of the Ganges, for the sole purpose of bringing salvation to human suffering. In the story of the good Samaritan, it was priests and religious men who hurried past the beaten traveler, muttering, 'I am too busy to take time to help him!'—too busy carrying on rituals, and burying the dead! But the good Samaritan took care of him and paid all his sick expenses. Have we religionists made no progress in 2,000 years? Are we not yet able to see a great human emergency and to meet it squarely?

"True religion never neglects human need. God, whether interpreted as the Buddhist principle of cosmic reality or as the Father in heaven, finds the miserable facts of the present situation intolerable. When he raised Jairus' daughter from the dead, the first thing Jesus did was to give her something to eat. If all religionists did likewise, Karl Marx and Kropotkin simply would not exist.

"You say we are powerless to reform this present world? Think of the apostle Paul, in weak health, carrying only his bag of tools for tent-making, hiking from city to city of the great empire where Caesar reigned. What power had this poor laborer to conquer the great Roman empire? Yet he did so. If we really love Japan, we can prove our love effective without depending on any materialistic power. In the Buddhist scriptures and in the Christian Bible, we possess all that is necessary; and with these we will press forward until we find the image of God among the proletarians of Japan!

"Neither Marxism and the class struggle, nor the governmental suppression of these movements can ever realize the true society. The true life of the human community springs from love and reconciliation, not from struggles for private advantage. The kingdom of God, or the paradise of Buddha, is not a country controlled by proletarian dictatorship. It is controlled by fellowship, love, and the co-operative spirit.

The True Community.

"The true community protects the individual, and the individual in turn gives himself to the community. In Germany, 90 per cent of the people have health insurance. The true community is always mutual. Here in Japan, if we develop that peculiarly appropriate system of mutual aid known as 'The Co-operatives,' we can avoid the path into which the Russians have wandered. Our work is to reconstruct society on the basis of a love that loves others as well as itself, and leaves no place for either Leninism or fascism.

"Let him who has two coats give one to his brother. That is the spirit of Christianity and also of Buddhism.

"Gentlemen, we are all interested in religion, which is the will of the cosmos, or the art of life. It is not limited by space. He, the Infinite One, is not only in the temple, but also in the slum, and even on our various Main Streets! We Japanese adore the memory of ancient saints and pioneers. They cleansed our morals, and created a new life and civilization according to Buddhist and Confucian ideals. And recently we have welcomed Christianity.

"Now, gentlemen, this fairyland must never be destroyed by materialism or capitalism! So, whosoever has charge of a temple, let him open its doors to the people; and whoever has a Church let him welcome into it even the proletarians; let him who has a shrine throw open its garden to the souls who are creating the new Japan. Our task is not merely a spiritual one. It is to make all of life perfect, to make this land a paradise—the very kingdom of God!"

Rev. W. J. Edwards, High Point, N. C., has recently enjoyed a revival in which there were fourteen conversions. He is anxious to be in revival meetings this summer, and any pastor or Church desiring his assistance will address him at 211 Ward Street, High Point, N. C. "I am praying for a great revival in our Churches this summer," Bro. Edwards writes.

Before another issue of THE SUN, another Elon College commencement will be history. A very large class is to graduate and the usual commencement audiences are expected. The college is closing a happy and successful year. President A. W. Hurst, of Palmer College, Albany, Mo., is to preach the baccalaureate sermon on Sunday, May 26th, and Dr. Wm. E. Barton, former president of the National Congregational Council, and one of the most noted Congregational ministers of America, is to deliver the literary address on commencement day, Tuesday, the 28th. The alumni address will be delivered by Hon. C. C. Howell, of the Jacksonville, Fla., bar, on Monday evening.

At the close of the morning service last Sunday at the First Christian Church, Richmond, Va., a called conference was held. It was the most largely attended and the most harmonious of any in the history of the Church, and as a result a unanimous vote was given to retain Dr. C. C. Ryan as pastor and to give him a three months' leave of absence, that he might spend the summer in the Holy Land and Europe. The trip is being given to Dr. Ryan by his friends, and surely no man can be the recipient of such a gift without a deep sense of obligation and appreciation. Dr. Ryan will sail with the Wicker party from New York City on June 18th, and is due to return September 18th. He is a happy man to have such friends and such a Church and such an opportunity.

By the report this week, we have passed the twenty-nine thousand dollar mark in our collections for missions, which leaves $16,000 to be reached by September. Several of our strong Churches have not yet sent in anything, though many of them have taken a first offering and have out pledges sufficient to cover their quota. It would help the work along if Church treasurers would send in the offerings as rapidly as they are in hand, as this would help to save interest and meet obligations which are pressing. Many pastors have given their heart and hand to the task and have achieved, and they and their people are the beneficiaries. Others seem quite indifferent, and their Churches send in small offerings, if any at all. In every instance where the pastor and people have caught the missionary vision and really care, the offerings are most encouraging and the work goes well.

It is greatly to be desired that friends who care for the history and traditions of the Christian Church shall send in additional contributions for the James O'Kelly Memorial which has been proposed for the campus at Elon College. Judge J. F. West, of Virginia, chairman of the committee, is anxious to see the fund completed, and J. O. Atkinson, treasurer of the committee, will be most happy to receive funds and give credit for the same through THE SUN. We have too long neglected this important matter. There is on hand $955, $600 of which has been paid to the contractors for the memorial, $355 yet remaining in bank, which leaves a balance of $320 to be raised. If some good, liberal soul or souls would contribute this $320, the marble shafts would go up on the campus in a few days, and a deed in which the whole Church should take pardonable pride would be accomplished.

THE SUN's editor was with Pastor C. E. Newman at Union, Virgilina, Va., Sunday A. M., May 12th, and at Hebron at 3 P. M. Our Virgilina people, under the leadership of their faithful and beloved pastor, have certainly built for themselves and the community a beautiful and most creditable house of worship. The seating capacity is ample, and the house, within and without, is agreeable to look upon and to worship in. A large congregation gathered for their annual homecoming and Mothers' Day exercises. It was a joy to be a part of and witness such a congregation in the house of praise on the Holy Sabbath. At Hebron, the faithful ones gather, and the Church life here is active and alert, and gives evidence of wise and consecrated leadership. It was a pleasure to see again the good friends of Hebron Church and community.

Rev. J. Fuller Johnson, because of illness, was unable to meet his appointment at the Memorial services at Christian Chapel, near Merry Oaks, N. C., Saturday and Sunday, May 11th and 12th. The Mission Secretary was present on Saturday, and a large congregation gathered with abundance of flowers with which to honor the memory of their dead. The cemetery is beautifully kept, and their memorial services on Saturday were largely attended. Rev. J. E. Franks, a former pastor, was present, and in the afternoon preached a short and a very searching and powerful sermon to the delight and edification of his many former friends who learned to love him in other days when he was their pastor, and of the entire congregation. There were several addresses by local talent, and the day was a most pleasant one. Bro. Johnson, the pastor, has been quite unwell for some weeks, but we are advised at this writing that he is much improved and able to be up and out some.

DR. HELFENSTEIN CONDUCTS MEETING.

I returned Friday evening from Franklin, Va., where I was engaged in conducting a ten-day religious emphasis campaign in the Franklin Christian Church, of which Church Rev. Joseph Fix is pastor. Seldom is it one's privilege to labor with such a congenial and co-operative group of people as that of the pastor and members of the Franklin Church. It was a real inspiration to be associated with these good people in the ten days of fellowship and service. The co-operation given by the pastors of the other Churches in the town was most commendable. Twenty-three individuals made the Christian decision during the campaign, twenty-two of whom were to unite with the Christian Church the first Sunday in May; and there were twenty-five others who signed the reconsecration pledge, reconsecrating themselves to the service of Christ and the Church.

I never conducted a meeting in a city where such a large percentage of the people are connected with some Church, some estimating that 90 per cent of the people of the city are Church members.

The main emphasis of the campaign was for the deepening of the spiritual life of the membership and the re-enlistment of those once identified with the Church who had become inactive. It is easy to understand the enthusiasm and rejoicing of the Church in the victory experienced.

I was impressed with the fine type of people composing the Franklin Church, and was delighted to see the splendid work being accomplished by the pastor, Rev. Joseph Fix, and his capable wife. I have never seen congregations at such services having such a large percentage of young people as attended the services regularly.

The personal work feature of the campaign is to be continued by the pastor and the group of personal workers who met each night during the meetings for instruction in this line of Christian service.

Editor THE CHRISTIAN SUN:

As a member of the Christian Church and a worker for Oak Grove Christian Church, I am appealing for help in this hour of need. Remember in St. John 14:14, the Scripture says, "If ye shall ask anything in my name, I will do it."

We, as a small group of members, are badly in need of a Church building for worship. The building is so dilapidated that something must be done. Our members have responded beautifully, but we still need more funds in order to complete our house of worship.

Will greatly appreciate your kindness in inserting this in THE CHRISTIAN SUN for all members of other Churches who are interested in the Lord's work for a contribution to help us with our building fund.

May the Lord bless our work and give us an abundant harvest. Again I thank you for this favor. All pledges and donations should be sent to Waverly Parker, secretary-treasurer, Oak Grove Christian Church, Sunbury, N. C.

Very sincerely,

MRS. W. K. PARKER.

"TRUE NEIGHBORLINESS."

"Thou art not far from the kingdom of God."—Mark 12:34.

There is more good in the world and in our fellow-man than we sometimes see. We are surprised oftentimes to learn that the individual who apparently seems an enemy is a man or woman whose heart rings true and who under no conditions would do us harm. Indeed, it is a joyous feeling to discover that he who apparently is indifferent to the things of the kingdom is at heart greatly concerned.

In the Scripture lesson we read of a young man who was evidently unconcerned about Jesus until by chance he heard some Sadducees trying to bait him. Now, all the scribes were not pedants or bigots. Here was one whom every one thought to be an enemy to Jesus, but who deep in his heart loved Him. He appears to be a man with an open mind, for after listening to the discussion between Jesus and the Sadducees, every bar of doubt goes down and we find the man who we thought to be a sinful scribe to be a faithful follower of Christ. For a long time he had been outside the circle of Jesus' true workers, yet he was in harmony with His teachings and only had to be encouraged somewhat to be led into full fellowship. And when Jesus discovered how close he was unto Him and how his beliefs harmonized with the teachings which He had set forth during his ministry, He said, in the words of our text, "Thou art not far from the kingdom of God."

Leading up to this statement, the young man comes to Jesus and asks the question, "Which is the first commandment, or the great commandment?" This he asked to be informed. Yet, outwardly it appears that he sought to trip Jesus in order to bring judgment against Him. However, it seems evident that He was in earnest from the manner in which he listened to Jesus and the frank way in which he accepted his answer.

Jesus answered, "The first of all the commandments is . . . The Lord our God is one Lord." "And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy mind, and with all thy strength: this is the first commandment. And a second is like, namely this, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." There is none other commandment greater than these." And the scribe said unto Jesus, "Well, Master, Thou hast said the truth, for there is one God and there is none other but He, and to love Him with all the heart, and with all the understanding, and with all the strength, and to love his neighbor as himself, is more than all whole burnt offerings and sacrifices. And when Jesus saw that he answered discreetly, He said unto him, Thou art not far from the kingdom of God." By coming to Jesus with his question, the young man found a Saviour who confirmed all of his beliefs; Jesus found in him such an earnest desire to find the truth that he could well say to him, "Thou art not far from the kingdom of God."

The young man in the story was near the kingdom of God because he believed in and loved God with all of his strength of body, mind and soul.

Like other Jews of his day, this young man believed in one God, and when he said with Jesus, "There is one God, and there is none other but He," it was evidenced that he was very faithful, and his loyalty to Him showed that he had fulfilled the first requirement and was therefore not far from the kingdom of God. This young lawyer was well acquainted with Jewish history and law.

He recognized the power and value of faith in God. He knew that by faith in Him Abraham was led to go out into a country which he should receive for an inheritance; that by faith in Him, Moses was enabled to lead the children of Israel out of a land of bondage and wilderness; and that faith in Him gave Sara strength to conceive and bring forth a child, even though she was past age. The young man in the story was indeed glad to hear Jesus say, "The Lord our God is one God." This statement of the Master led him to realize the truth of his declaration that he had come into the world to fulfill and not destroy the laws and the prophets.

It is a wonderful thing to believe in God and to know that He watches over us at all times. He who knows God is enabled to know that He holds us in the hollow of His hand, and that as He feeds the birds of the air, He will care for His own children. He who knows God has the continued assurance that He will comfort and forgive. Indeed, it is natural for man to reach out after a higher being—preferably a personality.

"Some of us call it Consecration,
But others call it God."

The person who believes in God and who does not make unto himself any graven image or any likeness of anything on the earth, or bows down to or serves other Gods than Jehovah of Host is not violator of the commandments, nor is He very far from the kingdom of God. This young man not only believed in God as being in all and above all—but with his whole heart he loved Him. He furthermore declared that He loved Him with all his understanding, and all of his soul, and all of his strength. To love Him after this fashion was to do homage to Him, which was far better than to live in strict obedience to many of the Judaistic laws, such as that of offering sacrifices unto the Lord. He recognized that God, who is Love, was best appeased by the love of His children.

Scientific philosophers tell us that without heat the universe would soon desolve. So the love of God in the moral universe is what heat is to the physical world. It is the one great germinating power or process by which the lower things are brought higher.

The fact that this young man so loved God is evident that Jesus loved him and spake to Him, for "He that loveth not knoweth not God, for God is Love." Man is bound to love something, and the great duty of the Church is to direct his capacity for love toward things of permanent value. "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and all thy soul, with all thy strength and with all thy mind," said Jesus unto him, as he answered the question as to what was the first great commandment. To love God with all of one's powers is to begin to grow like God. To love Him as did this young man is to seek opportunities for serving Him. And he who loves God according to the first great commandment is truly "not far from the kingdom of God."

Jesus declared that the young man was not far from the kingdom of God because he loved his neighbor as himself.

The heart of the Golden Rule of Christian living is that of loving one's neighbor as he loves himself. No wonder Jesus informed him of his nearness to the kingdom when it was learned that he believed in and practiced the social gospel. This young man was unselfish in that his consideration was not only for self, but for others. Being a scribe and an authority on the law, no doubt but what this young man was familiar with a controversy that took place some time prior, in which Jesus pointed out the meaning of true neighborliness. The answer followed a question as to what a man should do to inherit eternal life. The question was asked by an expert in Jewish law, who perhaps hoped that Jesus would recommend certain fasts and sacrifices. But instead, he is led to answer his own question by considering the first commandment. But he asks, who is my neighbor? Whereupon Jesus relates that remarkable parable of the Good Samaritan." It was indeed a clever answer as well as a true one, for the Jews did not regard the Gentile as neighbor, but rather they held contempt for them. To be sure the Samaritans, Publicans and sinners were not to be called their neighbors. What, therefore, would Jesus say? How would He define neighbor? But to their amazement He defined a neighbor in a story which even to this day has laid great constraint upon the conscience of mankind. Jesus lifted the question out of the atmosphere of controversy and set it down on a dangerous road in Palestine. On this road He tells of a certain man, whose name or nationality is not cited, who went down from Jerusalem to Jericho. While passing along the dangerous "Bloody Pass," along the twenty-mile mountain road, the man was assaulted by robbers and thieves. By coincident, a certain priest, a pillar of the temple, passed by and left him in pain. In like manner a Levite, a doorkeeper in the house of God and a member of the hereditary order from which were chosen the singers of the temple choirs, passed by on the other side, but a certain Samaritan, a member of a race which the Jews counted religiously in disrepute and with which they had no dealings, saw him and was moved with compassion.

For priest and Levite to pass by a suffering man seems tragical; but for it to be in the experience of our own lives is to assume a different color. I wonder if any of us are sure we will never play their parts. Perhaps they passed by because they were thinking of other good works—or perhaps they did not want to get mixed up in such a case. Indeed, there were hundreds of good excuses for one's callousness, but on this occasion there was brought before them an opportunity for actual help in time of actual need. The priest and the Levite must have felt very cowardly the first time they passed by such an opportunity to render neighborly service; but now, with total indifference, they walk the pathway until wounds and poverty become an intrusion upon them.

Who is my neighbor? To ask the question is a condemnation. True neighborliness is not curious to know where the boundaries run. It seeks not for limits, but for opportunities. Nearness does not make neighborliness. People may live, divided by a narrow wall, and not be neighbors. Only the eyes of the spirit of the Samaritan make neighborliness.

One does not always know who is his neighbor. But he who goes about in the spirit of helpfulness and love will find plenty of neighbors. One's neighbor is anybody in need. He may be found as one journeys through life. He is found by chance sometimes. He is never a person of this or that religious allegiance, nor is he a sinner or saint; he is a certain man who lies needy at your roadside. Jesus gave us this truth embodied in a tale.

The Good Samaritan was quick to realize the truth of this situation. The young man in the story who asked Jesus the first commandment recognized the meaning of neighborliness. For making known his belief that one should love his neighbor as himself, Jesus was glad to commend him and assure him of his nearness to the kingdom of God.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

ALLEGIANCE TO OUR LORD.

What was the purpose of our Lord Christ in coming to this world? What did He have in mind, what does He have in mind, for this world of ours? What motive prompted Him to come to the world to live, labor, deny Himself, and die a cruel death? Why did He become our sin that, through Him, we might become His righteousness? What was and what is the motive back of it all? He said Himself that "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly" (John 10:10). But how were they, how are we, to have the more abundant life? How was He to give this more abundant life, and what was His motive for giving the more abundant life?

One who asks such questions and considers them seriously can come to but one conclusion, and that is that our Lord had as His purpose for coming into the world that all men everywhere might come to know Him and, knowing Him, might learn to do His will, and thus to love Him. It, therefore, behooves us, as His followers, to seek to fit our purposes and plans of life in with His purposes and plans of life for us. He will be Lord of all our purposes and plans, or He will not be Lord at all in our purposes and plans. Is it not true that we form our purposes and our plans and then ask our Lord to confirm them, or fit in with them, instead of first of all finding out His plans and His purposes, and then make our plans and purposes to fit in with Him? In putting the stamp of His approval on His own purposes and plans for this world, He conquered cruelty and sin on the cross, He conquered death by the resurrection, and He conquered all the powers of the world, the flesh and the devil, and said, "All power is given unto me." And then He proceeds, having thus justified Himself in His plans and purposes to reveal to His followers and to all who should follow Him what His purpose was and what His plans are: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature."

His purpose, therefore, in coming to this world was to reveal and to make secure His plans for having Himself made known to all the world. When Peter, by a revelation, declared that Jesus was the Christ of God, immediately, and for the first time, He speaks of that institution through which He would make that revelation known to the world. He would establish and build His Church on the declaration that Peter had made, for the purpose of making known to the world His purpose in coming among men, viz: "That all men might come to know Him, whom to know aright was life everlasting."

We show our allegiance to our Lord, then, by being faithful to the purpose that brought Him into the world, and to the plan whereby He would make that purpose known. When we seek to give the gospel to others, we are doing the divinest deed we will ever do in this world, because we are doing that not out of allegiance to our fellowman, or out of devotion to human beings, or out of loyalty to any Church enterprise; we are doing it out of allegiance to our Lord, just for His sake, and that His plans and purposes for the world, not ours, may be carried out. How readily do we say in making our gifts that we prefer to make them for institutions and enterprises around about us whose fruits and favors and achievements we can see and comprehend. How difficult, on the other hand, and with what reluctance, do we give to the missionary enterprise, little realizing in this that we are consulting our preferences, and our plans, and our purposes, rather than the preferences, the plans and the purposes of our Lord.

The most divine, the most sacred, the most unselfish, and the most Christ-like offering of time, effort or money that we will ever make in this world will be that to missions, because in this we are showing, first of all, our allegiance to our Lord, to His plans and His purposes, and we are consulting Him and relying upon Him, and expressing our faith in Him, and are making these gifts not primarily for the sake of human beings, but primarily for the sake of our Lord. Human beings and our Lord are both factory to consider in making our donations to Church and to charity, but it makes a great deal of difference as to which we put first and foremost, both in our thought and in our giving. We can easily put the human first, and think only of the human, and give for the sake of human beings and not for one moment lift our thinking or our desire up to our Lord. But we, in all our giving, should put Him first and seek to give in His name and for His sake, that He may carry out His plans and His purposes in the world. And we know that His plans and purposes were that His gospel might be preached throughout the world, and that all men everywhere might have an opportunity of knowing Him.

When we give a dollar to carry the gospel to folks that we will never see and never know, we certainly are not putting the human first, either in our deed or our thinking; we are putting our Lord first, for our deed is done out of love not to them but to Him, and not out of allegiance and loyalty to them, but out of allegiance and loyalty to Him. As a recent correspondent said: "A right conception of God as a divine Father of all mankind and a purposeful spirit of love and allegiance to Him and His purpose for the world lie at the root of all missionary attitudes and services." After all, we reduce the matter to the simple question: are we willing to co-operate with the plans and purposes of God, or do we, because of some prejudice or ignorance, try to induce God to co-operate with our prejudices, our purposes, and our plans?

TRYING TO STOP THE KINGDOM PROGRAM.

It is related of a plain old brother, in a certain corner, that he told his pastor, with emphasis, as he handed over his usual missionary contribution, "It's about time for this thing to stop. I have been giving a quarter every year for more than twenty years, and I am tired of it. The job ought to be finished some time." This reminds one of the frankness, not to say prejudice, of the person who said, "I will not give anything to missions. My father before me did not, and he was a good man, and I believe in him and what he did; why should I depart from his ways?"

The trouble about persons of this type is that their logic and their attitude, if not their deeds and conduct, would stop the wheels of progress and delay, if not prevent, the coming of the kingdom. The kingdom of God does not stop, but is a constant and an ever-increasing power and revelation, just as is civilization and development in the material world. Such persons as those cited above, to be consistent, should say, "I have been spending a dollar a year for luxuries for more than twenty years, and it's time now to quit spending anything on increasing luxuries and conveniences. Moreover, I will not ride in an automobile. My father never did. He rode in a cart, wagon or buggy, and finally arrived. His way of travel was good enough for me. And as for telephones, radios and other devices of advancing civilization, I will have none of them. My father did not have them, and he and his way of doing things were good enough for me."

Persons who reason as to Church life and activity and contribution on the basis of father and grandfather, ought, in order to be consistent, to reason in the same way about attitudes and contribution to the conveniences, comforts and luxuries that civilization gives in the world of material. Very likely, the reason that father did not ride in an automobile, nor enjoy the radio, was because he knew nothing of the delights, blessings and benefits of these modern developments of civilization. And the reason why he got tired of giving to missions a quarter a year, or gave nothing whatever to missions, was because he had never been taught the bounties, and blessings, and benefits coming from this holy practice and most unselfish and Christ-like giving.

Prior to 1860, here in the South, it was difficult, we presume, to think in terms of freedom for the negro and salvation for his soul. Our fathers and grandfathers were just taught that way, and they learned that way, and they lived that way, and they walked in such light and life as the civilization and gospel of their day gave them. The wheels of progress rolled on, and now it would be very difficult for us to think in terms of human slavery and to try to assume the attitude that there was no salvation for a soul because the skin of his body was black. The unfolding revelation of our Heavenly Father has brought us into a new and a different light and life, and for us to assume in such matters the attitude of our ancestors is for us to dispute with God the process and the progress of His unfolding kingdom and revelation.

We think now not in terms of one race, but of all races of mankind, and we think most easily of progress and development not in one little portion of this habitable world, but realize that if one nation suffers, all the nations must suffer with it. The World War forced that upon us. Because our fathers and grandfathers were deprived of the blessing and benefit, since they knew no better, of giving of their means to help carry out, and thus obey, the command of our Lord, that is no reason why we, as their descendants, should be deprived of that blessing, no more than we should be deprived of the benefits and the advantages of the automobile and radio, since we have learned of these things.

Christian men and women, in increasing numbers, are learning, thank God, the joy of thinking in terms of world friendship, and have shared a taste of bearing the burden of their Lord in obeying His great commission and are seeking to share His gospel with those who haven't that joyous privilege. The world moves onward and forward by the grace of God, and ever-increasing blessings and benefits are given to those who seek to know and to do the will of their Heavenly Father.

The ones who are tired and want civilization to stop, and the ones who will not, because father and grandfather did not, deprive themselves, more than any one else, of the joy and satisfaction that come from willing obedience to the commands of their Lord and the practice of that self-denial which He commanded. "Verily, ye are my disciples if ye do that which I have commanded you," and the one command that stands out above all others, because it was the final one, and the one given in the declaration of all power: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." And those who obey that command and share that joy with their Lord get a blessing that is worth more, in enrichment of soul, than any donations of dollars they put into it.

SOMETHING NEW.

A contemporary points out the already obvious fact that there is, in recent years, always something new in education. The curricula and methods change, and educators in all schools are trying to find, and say and do, the newest thing. New theories are rapidly projected, and that which was accepted as fixed in educational formula a decade ago has long since gone to the scrap-heap. One observant editor says: "A graduate of a decade ago would now be a stranger in almost any school-room. Whether or not there is progress in educational methods, or greater substance in instruction, there is, at least, change. This eagerness for some new thing keeps education fresh and tremendously interesting."

What is said of education may be said of every line of activity and industry. In succeeding centuries ours will evidently be called "The Era of Change." We are trying out measures and methods, theories and systems. That which was established in industry a decade ago has gone to the scrap-heap, and the man who manages a store, factory, farm or shop, as he did ten years ago, is either headed for the rocks or is having a hard go of it.

The same is true in Church and Sunday School and religious activities, agencies and management. The pastor who is trying to go along as he went a decade ago is simply not going much, and is only living on the momentum and the current generated and developed by others in a previous time. He is reaping where others have sown, but not sowing much that others may reap.

This is not to say that because a thing is new it is right; nor because a movement is novel and untried, it is the best. It is to say, however, that the bodies of men and the minds of men, and the souls of men are on the go, and they are seeking new and different ways of going. Unless a right way is found, a wrong way is taken.

But let not this change and novelty, and untried methods deceive us. The foundations are not changing and cannot change. There are certain fundamentals of education and of industry, and of religion that never change. Honesty, integrity, virtue, chastity, temperance, patience, piety, righteousness and the very God who made all and governs all are the same today, yesterday and forever. Textbooks for the class-room and research are today, and tomorrow are not; but there is one Book that does not change, because it teaches of foundations that cannot be moved. Books on law change, but the law laid down in the Ten Commandments never changes. The law of love and mercy, and judgment and justice revealed in the Book of books, never changes. Modern preachers may give new interpretations of the Sermon on the Mount, but they can neither change nor improve upon that sermon, for it is the message of heaven and of God to earth and to needy men. Rules and laws of agriculture and industry may change, but the rules and laws of redemption and salvation, through belief and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, never change, for these are the foundations on which the world stands and character is built.

Let us not confuse changes of superstructure with the tearing up of foundations. The architecture of our time is different, and houses built now are quite different from those built a few decades ago, but the foundations are not different in depth, and solidity, and security. If so, the buildings will soon perish. And it is true today, as it ever has been, that "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ" (1 Cor. 3:12). And the succeeding declaration is equally true: "The fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is. If any man's work abide, which he had built thereupon, he shall receive his reward."

We are living in a time of change and of new things; but earnest, eager souls are seeking to serve God and fellow-men with an ever-enlarging, even if with new and untried programs. J. O. A.

DESTRUCTION AND CONSTRUCTION.

Destruction and construction are words that play a large part in the physical world and the spiritual world. The building of houses, whether of wood, clay, or stone, requires the felling of trees, the digging of clay, or the quarrying of rock. Things that exist are destroyed in order to construct what is needed for dwelling for man. The same is true for the building of roads, the erection of monuments, the creation of engines and railroads, steamships, and trains. The idea all the way in the course of progress is to destroy one thing to build something else. The log man in the woods is destroying the forest; the carpenter in the city is building the house. The man is blasting the stone in the quarry; the man on the wall is building the pyramid, the temple or the monument. In the growth of cities, this double work is going on all the time. They are tearing down what was once a fine residence, a happy home, and in its place they are erecting the great store. There can be no progress without change, and there can be no change without destruction and construction.

The same is true in the moral and spiritual progress of mankind. Ideas and laws, rules and practices found to be wrong must give way to new ideas; new laws and practices must yield to progress in the march of civilization and the welfare of society. This great principle is taught in the Word of God. "For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that He might destroy the works of the devil" (1 John 3:8). "The devil sinneth from the beginning," and in order to build up righteousness, the devil's work must be destroyed. That is the work to be wrought out in the lives of individuals. Sin must be destroyed and righteousness built up in the man's life. He must be born again to get rid of original sin, and then it takes a lifetime to get rid of personal sin. "If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness" (1 John 1:9).

This work of destruction and construction is going on all the time in the lives of Christians; and the same is true in the Church and the State. Slavery was legal in these United States up to the Civil War; but back of that war the Church had seen that slavery was wrong and pled with the people to abolish slavery. The response was slow, and it took a war to get what the Church wanted. That evil was destroyed and freedom took its place. The saloon was another wrong, a stumbling-block to progress, and a moral and spiritual enemy to home and country. The Church united her forces in teaching from pulpit and public school, and the nation arose in her voting power and gave the law that abolished the saloon. Now, no citizen can manufacture, sell, buy, or use intoxicating liquors without being a lawbreaker. That new gospel of obedience to law and to the law of God is the gospel of construction that must be preached until the moral conscience of the nation is loyal to the State. W. W. S.

PROFANITY.

One of the oldest and surest signs of man's mental weakness and poverty is profanity. This writer always pities a person whom he hears using profanity. It shows indolence, mental weakness, imbecility, on the part of the one using it. It requires energy, mental activity and effort to choose the right sort of words to convey one's meaning. Profanity requires no mental energy whatsoever. Every profane word that can be uttered has already been uttered millions and millions of times. Profanity, like murder, is as old as the human race, and, like murder, also shows a defect in one's mental as well as moral make-up. If one's language and processes of thought are duly organized and directed, there would never be any profanity. This is the reason why profanity is so nauseating and disgusting, and unpardonable to people of clean speech and proper mental and moral habits. Profanity is a habit that has been worn threadbare and is disgusting, because weighted with the weakness and wear of past ages. Profanity is not only taking the name of God in vain; it is also taking otherwise clean and decent language in vain and is disgusting, because where one is looking for and expecting strength and beauty in word and expression, one hears weakness and imbecility displayed.

A recent writer on science said that what America needed was some new "cuss words." That scientist was mistaken. There are not any new "cuss words." They have all been worn out and bandied around for more than two thousand years, and the world of novelty and decency and strength and energy around about us has a right to expect better things of people who are trying to be up-to-date and who follow the way of decency.

About the most monstrous and hideous desecration of even this ancient and worn-out custom of swearing is to hear some of it used on the lips of young women who, otherwise, seem decent. One would judge from their appearance and dress that they are seeking to be modern and up-to-date, but to hear some of their slang and profanity, one discovers that, in sheer indolence or imbecility, they are holding on to speech and language that has been worn out and should have been thrown on the scrap-heap more than a thousand years ago.

If this writer did not profess any kind of religion or of decent morals, he would not use profanity, because of its inherent revelation of mental weakness, and of employing that which wickedness and weakness have worn threadbare and wasted all substance of many, many centuries ago. There are so many chaste and select and beautiful words with which people may express themselves that one wonders why the nauseating, the disgusting, the impudent and imbecile words, worn out beyond all hope of recovery, should be employed by any one desiring or professing to be decent. SUFFOLK LETTER.

The question of money is double, difficult, and dangerous. The double question is how to get money and how to spend it. It is a simpler matter to earn it than it is to spend it. Selfishness enters more into the spending of money than the earning of it. It is difficult to earn money, and then it is difficult to make the right use of it. "The love of money is the root of all evil" (1 Tim. 6:10). It is not the possession of money that is the root of all evil, but the love of money; and the love of money can be in the heart of the beggar as well as in the heart of the millionaire. Honest money is a great possession; dishonest money is a great curse. A man's pocketbook is close to his heart, and the manner in which he spends his money is a good index to his character. The way a man gets his money and the way he spends his money tell about what the man is. There is as much honesty revealed in the attitude of man toward the money he possesses as in paying his debts. A man may pay his debts and remain dishonest by the way in which he came into possession of his money. Cities, States, business concerns, all seem to be interested in money only. Prosperity is the goal toward which most all organizations strive. Labor and capital seem to think more about the money consideration than the good they could do by co-operation. The Bible makes a good suggestion in this passage: "We are laborers together with God" (1 Cor. 3:9). If religion entered more into the spirit of labor and capital, unrest, loss, strikes, lockouts, jealousies, would disappear.

Apart from the financial world, with all its agencies, its rivalries, its misunderstandings, its losses and its trials, there is a religious use of money that is involved in the conduct of the affairs of the Church. Just what is the best way to raise money to carry on religion, and what is the best method of contributing to the support of all the departments of Church enterprises is one after which one might write a big question mark. Is it the wisest method for the contributors to know to what department he is giving, or to give as unto the Lord? When Christians give to one particular object, do they not narrow down to that one thing and leave the Lord out of the question in large measure? If the department they support is education, do they not make that the sole thought of their giving? If it is missions, is not the same true? If it is Orphanage, is not the same limit set to their giving? When department heads solicit funds for their department, is not the tendency to narrow their thought and their prayers to that one department?

The question may be propounded for the consideration and solution by the Southern Christian Convention as to whether it would not be more scriptural and successful to estimate the necessity for the work, and the ability of the Churches to contribute, and then lay that upon the Conferences, and the Conferences name the sums to be raised by the Churches, and then let the pastors and people raise the money in their own way and send it by Check to the Conferences, and the distribution be made by a wise committee for each department. The membership of the Church might in that way learn to give as unto the Lord, and not to some man or some measure. What the Church needs is to realize the true sense of stewardship and to give with the feeling that gifts are made to God through the Church.

ELON LETTER.

I wish every one of the more than one thousand members of the Christian Church and alumni group who have pushed our financial campaign to a practical success could be here at the thirtieth commencement, May 25th to 28th, inclusive. They would enjoy the exercises, because they have a personal investment here and of recent date. And then I wish all who have ever given to Elon could come. It would be a great host—an army of noble-souled, great-hearted, generous-minded men and women and children. I hope all who possibly can will come.

Here is the roster of events:

On Saturday evening, May 25th, there will be a glee club recital of the Girls' Glee Club. The girls are not only good to hear, but they are good to behold. Their public performances have won universal praise, and they took second place in the State College Glee Club contest at the Asheville convention of the State Music Federation.

Sunday morning, May 26th, President Alfred W. Hurst, of Palmer College, is to preach the Baccalaureate sermon. His theme is "The Centrality of Jesus." Dr. Hurst is one of our ablest men. That afternoon, Prof. Velie will give an organ recital, and that night the undersigned will endeavor in his baccalaureate address to answer the question, "What Is a Christian?"

Monday morning, May 27th, at 10:30, the senior class will give its class-day exercises. At 2:30 o'clock that afternoon, the junior class representatives will speak. That night the alumni banquet, business session, and address will occur. The orator this year is Charles Cook Howell, a distinguished member of the Jacksonville, Fla., bar and a leading churchman of that growing city. Mr. Howell will speak on "The Place of Christian Education," a subject to which he has given great thought and to the presentation of which he will bring a winning style and forceful delivery.

The graduation exercises will occur at 10 A. M. on Tuesday, May 28th, when fifty-six very promising young men and women will receive their A. B. degree. At this service, Dr. William E. Barton, past-moderator of the Congregational National Council, and one of Virginia's ablest men in contemporary life, will give the literary address. Dr. Barton is world famous as "Safed the Sage," as the father of Bruce Barton, and as the foremost authority on the "Life of Abraham Lincoln." He has written more than fifty books. Those who fail to hear this master-mind will have occasion to regret it deeply, I am sure.

I end as I begin, by urging our friends to come and enjoy the commencement with us and to grace and dignify it by their presence.

FRANKLIN, VA.

The four letters that ought to mean most to the children of our Churches and Sunday Schools are D. V. B. S. These four letters indicate instruction and recreation such as every child needs to enjoy. During the past three years the Franklin Church has provided such opportunities for the children of the community. So great has been the interest and fine co-operation with the other Churches that we are planning a union daily vacation Bible school this year. Prospects point toward a most worth-while project. If your school has had D. V. B. S., and if you would like to do greater things for your community, try a U. D. V. B. S. this summer. If you have never had one, make arrangements to do so. Write to the Publishing House at Dayton, Ohio, and Miss Lucy Eldredge will gladly furnish you with suggestions, literature, etc.

A ten-day school, held for three hours per morning, offers thirty hours of definite Bible instruction, through song, Bible memory work, dramatization and worship. This exceeds the time of the average Sunday School by four hours, in that the maximum time offered in a year for Bible study in the Sunday School during fifty-two weeks, of one-half-hour lesson period per week, equals only twenty-six hours per year, if the child has perfect attendance.

It would be a fine thing for every Sunday School superintendent to meet with his teachers and pastor and discuss the possibility of having a school this summer. The expense involved is very small, but the good gained is enormous.

JOSEPH W. FIX.

EVERETT, PA.

About six months ago, the writer assumed the pastorate of district No. 6, comprising Gapsville, Mt. Union, Rock Hill and Union Memorial Churches, the Rays Hill and Southern Pennsylvania Conference. The work has been pleasant and the field progressive and hopeful. Special revival services resulted as follows: Gapsville, 2 converts, no accessions; Mt. Union, 22 additional members; Rock Hill, 16; Union Memorial, 18.

The district pays the parsonage rent and has furnished the fuel, and in addition has stocked our poultry yard with hens and have been exceedingly generous in good things to eat. The pastor is now conducting teacher-training classes in all the Churches, which will be followed by a daily vacation Bible school in each Church.

SPIRITUAL OR ORGANIC UNION—WHICH?

BY REV. A. A. WRIGHT, D. D.,

Pastor First Christian Church, Binghamton, N. Y.

The making of a unity is foreign to the New Testament Scripture. Nowhere in the sacred volume are we told to make a union. What we are told is of a unity already made; and we are urged to become acquainted with, acknowledge, and earnestly strive to keep that unity. We are informed that every Christian is a member of that great unity, which is so perfect that all racial, social, and even sexual distinctions are obliterated. "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, bond nor free, male nor female; for ye are all one in Christ Jesus" (Gal. 3:27, 28). And in Christ all are made complete, finding in Him all needed supply (Col. 2:10). So fully and perfectly did God the Father answer the prayer of Christ for the oneness of His followers that even during the first century it could be written, "There is one body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling; one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all (Eph. 4:3-6). And in this same chapter it is written that the end of all ministry is to bring all to the unity of the faith, to the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ. That we be no longer children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the slight of men and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive; but speaking the truth in love may grow up into him in all things, which is the head, even Christ." The end of all ministry is spiritual union with Christ, making schism impossible.

The divisions that came early in the history of the Church came either from ignorance of, or from ignoring, the spiritual unity of the Church. From the New Testament epistles, especially the epistles to the Philippians and the Collosians, it is very evident that the source of almost all that came to divide, weaken, and destroy the Church was simply the failure to hold and keep in a practical way "Christ as head," and all believers as fellow-members of the body of Christ. The Church, as a living organism, created by God in Christ Jesus, and made complete in Him, was lost sight of, and became displaced in the vision and affection of men by man-made organizations, in which worldly wisdom, fleshly energy, and ritual became substituted for His sustaining grace, life-giving spirit, and lively oracles.

The need in the present hour, as it has ever been, is not organic union but spiritual unity with Christ. An organized Christendom may still be far from that living organism, revealed in scripture as the Church, the body of Christ. It may even become a pain, instead of a panacea. We need but to mention the Church of Rome. Naught but a living organism ever can prevail against the gates of hell. The living Christ with living members, this, and this alone, is the hope of the world. Better by far a divided Christendom with spiritual unity in Christ, than a united Christendom with Christ apart. And it must be evident to all familiar with the Scriptures that a union of Christendom as it now exists on the foundation presented in the New Testament is altogether impossible. A union that would include all faiths, that would scout faith and doctrine, and have no place in it for the "one faith," stands condemned by every New Testament writer. And, the making of such a union would be an open violation of both the letter and the spirit of the New Testament. With such a union, no one taking the Scripture as his or her rule of faith and practice could have either part or lot. They must, perforce, cry, "Unto their assembly mine honor, be not thou united."

Organic union is not only superfluous to one believing in the unity of the Spirit, but it is carnality and blindness. On the one hand, it is an effort to bring the kingdom, "by observation," so that it may be said, "Lo, here; lo, there." On the other, it is an effort to substitute the might and power of an organized Christendom for the Spirit of the Living God. It is an effort to bring up out of the earth that kingdom which can only come down from heaven.

All effort to bring about organic union must arise either from not knowing "the unity of the Spirit" and the divine program connected therewith, or from unbelief in one or the other, or both.

One thing, absolutely certain, no one accepting the New Testament teaching of the unity of the Spirit with its one faith; and the teaching, that the coming of the kingdom is dependent upon the coming of the glorified Christ with His glorified Church, can consistently be an advocate of organic union. For all, holding to the Spirit and letter of the New Testament, must aim to gather out a people from the world, on the basis of the "one faith"; and build them up into Christ the one living Head; and instruct them to maintain their unity with Christ by faith, and with one another by love, patiently waiting in hope till Christ shall come to change and receive them, and then return with them to set up the kingdom. This is the task, according to the New Testament, that Christ gives to His servants, and, unless we have ceased to hold this as our rule of faith and practice, we must believe, that the highest possible service one can render to God or man is to do his or her part in helping to bring all to the unity of the faith, and build them up into Jesus Christ.

SURVEY IN NEAR EAST RELIEF.

Discontinuance of the Near East Relief organization, after its present commitments are taken care of, and the adoption of "a new policy" by American agencies working in the Near East are recommended in the report of a field survey of Near Eastern countries just issued through the Columbia University Press under the title "The Near East and American Philanthropy."

"This new policy," the report states, "if successfully adopted, may exercise a profound influence upon American missionary enterprise throughout the world." Far closer co-operation with native governmental and other agencies than has hitherto been practiced; better co-ordination of existing American agencies; careful avoidance of any attempt to "Americanize" native peoples; "helping to do, rather than doing for," and a program of vocational education carried down to the masses, are the essentials of the policy recommended. "The time for doing things for these Near Eastern peoples is past," the report says.

"Hereafter, it should be the task of American agencies in the Near East to help them to do things for themselves." The report states that since the war, $100,000,000 of American money has been spent by Near East Relief, mainly on emergency measures, and recommends that no further relief of an emergency nature should be undertaken. Henceforth, measures should be "constructive, not palliative."

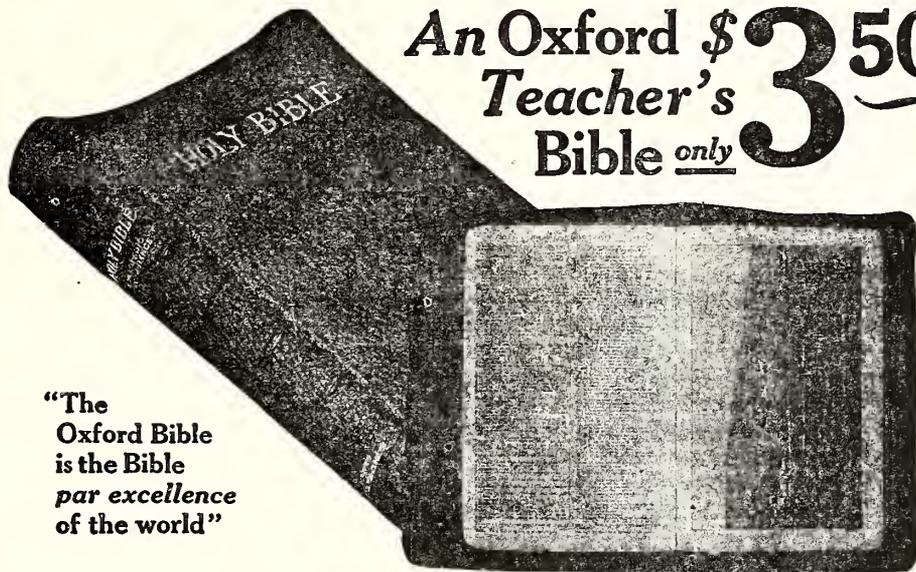

The report finds that in the past "there has been too much tendency to institutionalize and to consider the institution as an outpost of civilization carrying a message to the barbarians."

"Existing American enterprises should be conceived as demonstrations to stimulate indigenous activity and should be closely allied with general movements within the countries themselves. For Americans to assume the responsibility and expense of a comprehensive system of institutions would be the height of folly, and would frustrate

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

THE S. S. & C. E. AS MISSIONARY SOCIETIES.

Wherever possible, all missionary education should be done through existing organizations. It cannot be too strongly emphasized that the creation of separate missionary organizations, particularly among children and young people, tend to set missions apart as something optional, for which only those who choose to do so need feel any responsibility. Then let us expect to do our work through the permeation of the existing organization with the missionary idea rather than by tagging on or superimposing certain missionary ideas or materials.

The two most promising organizations of the local Church are the Sunday School and Young People's Society. In some Churches, these organizations will be united in a Church school which includes all education and activity. But since in by far the largest number of our Churches of the present day, these organizations operate separately, we shall consider the program of each. In other Churches, there will be various clubs which correspond somewhat to the Young People's Society. But, regardless of the type of organization or organizations, the most of the young people will be reached through the types of teaching and activity provided for in the Sunday School, or Church school, and the Young People's Society or its equivalent.

There are two important means of missionary education through existing agencies. One is the permeation of all teaching and activity with the ideas of world friendship and world brotherhood. These do not have to be dragged in. We have only to get a world-vision ourselves and a glimpse of the purpose of God in the world to see the opportunity to present this idea through almost every worship program, Bible lesson, or project.

Then there must be definite time given to teaching world friendship, learning to understand and appreciate other races and nations, finding out how we may do our part in bringing about the kingdom in all parts of the world. The old idea of a missionary day or a missionary program once a month will not serve our purpose. It sets missions apart, it does not give ample time, and it breaks into any progressive study. It is much better if we can give a number of consecutive weeks to a missionary project or study, or give a brief time each week to learning about the rest of the world.

When we consider that the establishing of the kingdom of God on earth is the real mission of the Church, and that the only way we can know or understand the part of the world which does not come under our daily observation is through taking time to study it, this is not too much time. This is not to suggest a "five missionary minutes" every Sunday or a "missionary application of the lesson." These labels do as much to set missions apart as do the once-a-month missionary programs or lessons. Rather, let us look on Bible study as finding out how God worked in the past. Then the missionary enterprise will appear what it really is—a continuation of the Acts of the Apostles in our present world.—From Training for World Friendship, by Brown.

This week carries us to the twenty-nine thousand dollars mark, but yet leaves us sixteen thousand to get to reach our goal. Every dollar is needed now and will be so much appreciated.

OUR JUBILEE YEAR—EASTER TO EASTER.

"In His Steps."

Our modern life, with its insistent demands and its lack of time or privacy with our most intimate friends and families, can sympathize with Jesus and His oft-defeated plans to be alone with his disciples.

Sunday, May 26 (Mark 8:1): The Curious Crowds Return.—It is now well along into the glorious springtide of Palestine. Since the Passover, Jesus had been to Capernaum and up into the coasts of Tyre and Sidon and back to Decapolis. All this long journey with its attendant rests and teaching periods must have lasted at least a month, and it is now far into May and around Pentecost.

The circle of his travels has brought them back to within twenty miles (as the crow flies) from his manhood home at Capernaum. But it was not a day when they traveled in such straight lines and the real division from Capernaum was much further since hills and sea and lack of roads made the distance much greater. This west side of the Jordan was really far from the haunts where He was known. But again "He could not be hid" and the crowds found Him and refused to depart even for necessary food. It may be that they had heard of that other miracle of the feeding of the five thousand, although the disciples acted as though they had forgotten it.

Monday, May 27 (Mark 8:2, 3): A Heart of Compassion.—Weary as He must have been and hungry as He was, yet His heart goes out to the weary and hungry crowd. He does not stop to excuse Himself by analyzing the situation and blaming them for their improvidence or by saying (as we might), "It serves them right. They should have provided for their need before coming to this wilderness." Jesus knew all that better than His disciples or we could know it, but He said: "I have compassion on the multitude," and planned to help them, although they had defeated his plans.

Tuesday, May 28 (Mark 8:4): The Dubious Disciples.—The disciples did not share the compassion nor the optimism of Jesus. To them the case was hopeless. Here they were in a "wilderness," miles from habitation. How could any man feed such a motley multitude in such a place? They figured in all—but Jesus. We often do that now. We too often forget what He has done in the past or what He can do now, and only look at the material things at hand and say: "It just can't be done."

Wednesday, May 29 (Mark 8:3): Making an Inventory.—Jesus' question called attention to the scant material provision they had—barely enough for the twelve for a day. Their answer of "seven" seemed final. What was seven small loaves of bread in feeding four thousand hungry men? It was simply an impossible situation! If there had been seven hundred loaves they might have considered "giving each a little" and piecing out a lunch for them. But seven loaves! That was nothing.

Thursday, May 30 (Mark 8:6, 7): Seven Loaves Plus the Lord.—The disciples had not counted in all their resources. They had failed to take account of Jesus in their inventory.

But He used all they had. He did not despise the little which was brought to Him. But He added Himself to what they had, and the result was that the thing was done. Jesus has a way of doing that. He takes what we have, be it ever so little, and adds Himself to it, and lo! the thing is done. General Booth of the Salvation Army once said that there was not much of him, but God had all there was, and that spelled victory.

Friday, May 31 (Mark 8:8): And They were Fully Fed.—They "were filled" and there was left "seven baskets" of food over and above their needs. Jesus did not stingily give them just enough to dull their appetite, but He "filled" them, and there was more than they cared to eat. He is ever thus. He not only gives life, but He gives it "more abundantly." He not only does what is just needed, but He does "above what we can ask or think." What a great school those disciples went to. What a school is ours with Him today!

Saturday, June 1 (Matt. 8:9, 10): Away from the Crowds Again.—And now that He has satisfied their needs, Jesus withdraws again far from them to a point across the Sea of Galilee called in Matthew "the coasts of Magdala," and in Mark "the parts of Dalmanutha." It was really at neither of these centers, but the "coasts" or "parts" between the two (which were not far apart) and here along the seacoast and countryside he sought again the seclusion which had been denied Him by the crowds.

Prayer for the Week.

Lord, forgive us if our lack of faith defeats Thy purpose and keeps the bread of life from Thy needy people. Forgive us for counting only on the material "things that are seen" and forgetting the eternal "things that are not seen." Grant us renewed faith, that we may be ready to face the impossible and to know that all things are possible to them that believe. Amen.

SESSION OF GENERAL CONVENTION.

Place: The invitation of the Piqua, Ohio, Church to hold the coming session of the General Convention has been accepted by the Executive Committee. The Church has just dedicated its new $60,000 Christian education plant and enlarged and rearranged its auditorium, thus making it splendidly equipped to handle the Convention. Its pastor is Rev. Raymond G. Clark, B. D. The Church has more than 500 members.

Piqua is on the direct Pennsylvania Railroad lines running through Columbus, Ohio, to Chicago and St. Louis; also on the Baltimore and Ohio lines between Detroit and Louisville, Ky. There are traction and bus lines in several directions. It is thirty miles north of Dayton. This will give delegates an opportunity to visit the Headquarters of the Church. It is centrally located for all sections of our brotherhood.

Time: The Convention opens Tuesday, October 22nd, at 2 o'clock, and will continue until the work of the Convention is completed. This will require a full week or more. If the proposed union of the National Council of Congregational Churches and the General Convention of the Christian Church is approved, the session will be sufficiently extended to plan the united work that may be necessary. This would probably take two full days with the Congregational delegation present.

Delegates: The membership of the Convention is as follows:

"The members of the General Board shall be members of the General Convention during their term of office.

"Each local Conference, except those of the Southern Christian Convention, which is itself so entitled, may be represented by its president and by one minister and one layman for each seven hundred members or major fraction thereof; provided that no Conference shall be deprived of representation by one minister and one layman in addition to its president.

"Presidents of State associations or conferences, and of regional conventions, auxiliary to the convention or co-operating with it, shall be members of the Convention.

"The Afro-Christian Convention may be represented by its president, secretary, and three elected delegates."

All Conferences should elect a full delegation to what will likely be an epoch-making Convention.

Program: The Executive Committee is at work on the program, and another meeting of a sub-committee has been planned. This is the Jubilee Year of our Church, and the program will be centered about the theme, "Enrichment and Extension." The committee elected pre-convention committees on the following subjects: Christian education, Christian unity, Church and world problems, evangelism and life service, finance, foreign missions, home missions, organization, publications, social service, stewardship, survey. Six persons were carefully selected for each committee, so the work may proceed without delay. Other members will be added by the Convention itself when it opens. A special committee has been appointed to arrange for daily morning upper-room prayer services. Other committees will probably be added.

Fraternal messengers: The National Council of Congregational Churches meets in Detroit May 28th to June 4th. They have extended the courtesy of entertainment to twenty-five representatives of the Christian Churches on the same basis as their own delegates. The Executive Committee has selected such a list who are being invited to represent the Christians in response to this gracious invitation. The list will be announced as soon as acceptances have been received.

EDDINGTON'S NEW BOOK.

"When I think of an electron, there rises to my mind a hard, red, tiny ball; the proton similarly is neutral gray. Of course, this is absurd, but it is difficult to school ourselves to treat the physical world as purely symbolic. We are always relapsing, and mixing with the symbols incongruous conceptions taken from the world of consciousness. The frank realization that physical science is concerned with a world of shadows in one of the most significant of recent advances. In these pages I propose to discuss some of the results of modern study of the physical world which give most food for philosophic thought. This will include new conceptions in science and also new knowledge. In both respects we are led to think of the material universe in a way very different from that prevailing at the end of the last century. I shall not leave out of sight the problem of relating these purely physical discoveries to the wider aspects and interests of our human nature."

This excerpt is taken from the introduction to Professor Eddington's new book, "The Nature of the Physical World," just published by Macmillan.

MEMORIAL TO CHRISTIAN CHAPEL.

We held our regular memorial at Christian Chapel, Saturday, the 11th, with a goodly number present. The pastor, Rev. J. Fuller Johnson, was absent on account of illness, but he had the good fortune of getting the service of Dr. J. O. Atkinson to fill his appointment. Dr. Atkinson's sermon was profound and most interesting, and very instructive to the whole congregation. He used for his text a part of the 11th and 12th chapters of Hebrews, "Now, faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen; for by it the elders obtained a good report. And these all having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise, God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect."

Dr. Atkinson explained in a way new to most of us, and inspiring to all, the contribution which we make to the dead, also the contribution which the dead make to us. It was a sermon that left an indelible impression on all who heard it.

The afternoon service was a program by some good speakers—Rev. J. E. Franks, Mr. Lacy Patrick, Mr. Will Jeffreys, all of whom made good impressions. Of course, the program was not complete until the Hon. J. D. McIver, a real orator, was called upon. Mr. McIver's address was mostly a plea for closer relationship, fellowship and unity of the human family and the leaving off of sinful and ungodly living. His talk caused many eyes to fill and touched many hearts. It was all a real day of joy.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

BY REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

Lesson IX—June 2, 1929.

LATER EXPERIENCES OF JEREMIAH.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Blessed are ye when men shall reproach you, and persecute you, and say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake."—Matt. 5:11.

LESSON: Jere. 20:1-6, 37:1 to 38:28, 43:1-7.

Explanations and Comments.

Jeremiah was held a prisoner in the guard-house at Jerusalem during its siege by the Babylonians. He could still address those around him, and he prophesied the fall of the city and advised surrender. The effect of his words was to weaken the courage and purpose of the fighting power of the people. The princes denounced him to the king as one whose words weakened the defense of the city. "Let this man be put to death," they urged, for "he seeketh not the welfare of this people, but the hurt."

"He is in your hands," said the weak king, and with this gesture of helplessness acknowledged that he could not withstand them; they could do with Jeremiah as they would. "He was afraid of Jeremiah, afraid of God, afraid of his princes, afraid of his enemies, afraid even to be himself" (Emily Huntley). "Zedekiah miserably vacillated between listening to the prophet's counsels of surrender and the truculent nobles' advice to resist to the last gasp. Like most weak men, he was afraid to do right, and fancied that he was compelled by the force of circumstances to do wrong. So he drifted and drifted, and at last was smashed to fragments on the rocks, as all men are who do not keep a strong hand on the helm and a steady eye on the compass. The winds are good servants but bad masters."

When an Ethiopian eunuch named Ebed-melech heard of Jeremiah's state he sought out the king, who was then holding court in the gate of Benjamin, and told him what had been done to Jeremiah, denounced the deed as evil, and declared that the prophet would die, for the famine was great in the city and no one would give him anything to eat. A "daily loaf" had been allowed him when he was imprisoned before (Jer. 37:21). The king then gave Ebed-melech a guard of thirty men to rescue Jeremiah. He returned with them to the dungeon, and had ropes covered with soft rags and worn-out garments to protect his armpits let down for Jeremiah to put under his arms; by their means he was drawn up out of his prison.

Two striking scenes enlivened this solitude. One was his grateful remembrance of his Ethiopian benefactors, whose safety in the coming troubles he positively predicted. The other was his interview with his cousin Hanameel. He was sitting in the open court which enclosed the prison, with many of the citizens of Jerusalem round him. Suddenly his cousin entered with the offer, startling at that moment of universal confusion, to sell the ancestral plot of ground at their native Anathoth, of which, in the fall of their family, Jeremiah was the last and nearest heir. Had the prophet been less assured of the ultimate return of his people, he might well have hesitated at a proposal which seemed only like the mockery that he had before encountered from his townsmen. But he felt assured that the present cloud would pass away, and, with a noble confidence which has often been compared to that of the Roman senator who bought the ground occupied by the camp of Hannibal, formally purchased the field in the presence of Baruch and the assembled Jews; and then broke out, once again, first in prose and then in poetry, into the expressions of his perfect conviction that, after the misery of siege and captivity, the land of Palestine should be again peaceably bought and sold, and that for all future ages the royal family of David and the Levitical tribe should exercise their functions in a spirit of justice never before known within the walls of Jerusalem.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Sunday, June 2, 1929.

TOPIC: "Character a Growth, not a Gift."—2 Pet. 1:5-8. (Consecration meeting.)

Some Bible Hints.

Faith in Christ is but the starting point of the Christian life, the beginning of the race. The goal lies far ahead (v. 5).

Character grows by addition, as a house grows. We built into it the right kind of material (v. 5).

"Virtue" means resolution, strength. Faith, without resolution or steadfast will, is weak and worthless (v. 5).

"Knowledge" means intelligence. Faith must not be blind, but intelligent. Without intelligence, character cannot ripen (v. 6).

Suggestive Thoughts.

True growth is from within, as a plant grows. Traits of character cannot be added from the outside; they must come from inner desire and effort.

People are born with certain hereditary tendencies, but none of those who are strong as to dominate a person's will. We can overcome them, turn around and walk away from them.

Some things are gifts; that is, we do not do anything to acquire them. A good digestion, for instance. Health makes a person happy, whereas a dyspeptic is sure to be depressed.

If character could not be changed and built up, the work of Jesus would be in vain. He always assumed the possibility of change in man's nature. He called it being born again.

A Few Illustrations.

You do not dig up the seed you plant in order to see if it is growing. Let it alone. Don't worry about character. Do the duty of the day, and character will take care of itself.

Old heads do not grow on young shoulders. Saints are not made in a day. Character is a slow growth.

When you plant an acorn, you do not expect to see an oak in a day or two. The greater the tree, the longer it takes to grow to maturity. Character is being made for eternity; give it time.

Character grows often by opposition, in the stress of life. A single temptation overcome means more for character than a year of easy sailing.

To Think About.

What is character?

Why is character worth striving for?

How build up weak character?

We must never allow the Christian Endeavor meeting to degenerate into a debating club. If we do, we shall lose sight of its main purpose, and its value for young people will decrease. If debates are ever used, let them be seldom used and conducted only in the friendliest spirit.

TITHING.

The bulletin, as prepared by The Layman Company, offers every Church the most effective of tithing education, plus the relief from half of the expense of the ordinary Church bulletin. The bulletin consists of four pages. Pages 1 and 4 are for the use of the local Church. They may be printed, multigraphed or mimeographed at one impression. Pages 2 and 3 carry one of twenty tithing messages. It combines simplicity, effectiveness and economy.

SURVEY IN NEAR EAST RELIEF.

the very end to be sought, namely: encouraging the natives to help themselves."

"Every effort should be made to work not only in co-operation with, but actually through the agencies of the governments and through local native organizations and individuals."

Acknowledgment is made of the services rendered by American institutions of higher education in the Near East, and it is pointed out that their work is needed especially for the development of native leadership of the highest type. The outstanding need, however, the report finds, is for "boys and girls with the kind of practical education that will equip them for leadership in the small villages in which the vast bulk of the population of the Near East lives, not the kind of education that will cause them to turn their backs upon the people from which they came."

"The solution of the problem," the report states, "is mass education of a simple, direct sort, carried to the people in their fields and in their workshops. It must be an education vital to their lives as tillers or craftsmen."

The main recommendations of the report have already been approved at a conference of American agencies in the Near East held at Constantinople, a summary of which is contributed to this report by President Bayard Dodge, of the American University, Beirut, who was chairman of the conference. Cleveland E. Dodge, it is stated, is at the head of a committee which is now working out a program to put into effect the recommendations of the survey.

The field survey was made and the report was written by Frank A. Ross, of Columbia University; C. Luther Fry, of the Institute of Social and Religious Research, New York; and Elbridge Sibley, of Columbia University. The work was supervised by a committee consisting of the following: Dr. Otis W. Caldwell, chairman; Dr. Paul Monroe, vice-chairman; Rev. George Stewart, secretary; Dr. Thomas Jesse Jones, Dr. Stephen P. Duggan, Cleveland E. Dodge, Dr. John H. Finley, Dr. R. R. Reader, Bishop James Cannon, Jr., Dr. John R. Mott, and Dr. James I. Vance. The following also served on the committee as representatives of various American agencies in the Near East: Albert W. Staub, Rev. Ernest W. Riggs, Dr. Robert E. Speer, Dr. James L. Barton, Dr. Dri A. Davis, Miss Katherine Olcott, Charles V. Vickrey.

"This report," writes Dr. John H. Finley, in the introductory, "marks the virtual completion of the tragic chapter of massacre and exile, brightened only by deeds of mercy done on such a vast scale as the world had never known before. But it marks the beginning of a new chapter—one of constructive helpfulness through education to those who sit in the ancestral house of Christendom that new woes may be prevented."

A LETTER FROM FATHER TO DAUGHTER.

Dear Daughter:

It is raining, and I am at home on this Lord's Day, the first day, and am thinking of my children. While reading the Word, I had an impression to pray for each member of my family, and to pray that God would save them from all worldliness, for we cannot serve the prince of this world and the Prince of Peace at the same time (Matt. 6:24). My dear daughter, I want you to prayerfully read John 17:13-16, and notice especially the words, "Keep them from the evil." This was a prayer that Jesus prayed for His Church. Will you let Christ pray this prayer for you in vain? Now, my child, I don't think you are wicked, but at the same time I think you are following an example set by the lowest class of women on God's earth, viz: the women of the "red district," and the lowest class of the women of France and theatrical circles. Just stop and think whom should we follow—the prince of this world, or the Prince of Peace, who said He left us an example that we should follow His steps? If you think your father's counsel is in keeping with the teachings of the Bible, please be teachable. The Prince of Peace said, "Follow not with the multitudes," and He said again, "Go not after the multitudes. If you would be His disciple, follow Him." David says, "Walk not in the counsel of the ungodly." Paul says, "Wherefore come out from among them and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and I will receive you. And will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty" (2 Cor. 6:17, 18).

My daughter, the Lord Jesus doesn't want you to follow this pernicious modern style of dress, and thereby bring on ill influence upon the opposite sex. A bishop has recently said this has been the greatest trial of his life. This pernicious style has led more men to commit an unspeakable sin than any other one thing. Jesus says, "Who-soever looketh on a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery with her already in his heart" (Matt. 5:28). Two judges of North Carolina have said that this modern style of dress has led to more cases of attack upon women and lynching than any one thing, and that our women are responsible for it.

Mother Eve went down first, and then dragged Father Adam down. No nation ever went down until their women lost their modesty and virtue. For example, take Rome and Greece. My child, your precious mother lived in an age when women wore "bangs," bustles, and sewed pillow-case sleeves to their arm holes; but your mother beautifully rejected them all and continued to dress as a woman professing godliness, with good works (2 Tim. 2:10).

I write thus to you because I love you and don't want you to help drag this great nation down, and I don't want you to spend eternity outside of heaven. Obey God and honor mother. Take some more of the word which will stand forever: "For this is the love of God that you keep His commandments. And be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind that ye may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God" (Rom. 12:2).

Now, my child, you had better burn every dress you have of that pernicious style, and obey God; and if need be, beg money and buy you a dress that you can glorify God in the wearing of it, and thereby be a blessing to man and honor God (2 Cor. 10:31).

I have written this letter to you, my dear child, because I believe God wanted me to do it.

By an anxious father,

P. T. K.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE,
One of Our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MONDAY.

IMPATIENCE A FRUITFUL VINE.

It not only contains a wondrous power to perpetuate itself, but rarely fails in the production of a numerous family. It is eminently a begetter of its own image. I call up no other, in the whole realm of evil spirits, which has such power to impart itself to others. A mother comes out in the morning full of fret, and the whole of her happy little flock are set fretting before breakfast. A husband and father enters the room in a snarl, where wife and children are full of sunshine, and not a smile is there which does not disappear in a minute! Every one of them is under the impress of their father's spirit, and probably a half-dozen quarrels will occur with the children before the sun goes down. Then the father, as a Christian man, feels constrained to correct the children for quarreling. It is a wonder that any child reared to manhood or womanhood by fretful and fretting parents escapes damnation!

Prayer.—Dear Father, give us this day our daily portion of grace, and patience to endure all the strains of our duties, and rest in Thee. Amen.

TUESDAY.

REPENTANCE.

The primary meaning of the word "repentance" is a "change of mind." A good illustration of the use of the word is seen in Matt. 21:28-31: "A certain man had two sons; and he came to the first and said, Son go work in my vineyard. He answered and said, I will not; but afterwards he repented and went." (He changed his mind and went.)

In connection with salvation, repentance means a change of mind in regard to God and Christ and in our relations to sin.

How many are commanded to repent? (Acts 17:30) "Now commandeth all men everywhere to repent."

How necessary is repentance to all men? (Luke 13:3, 5) "Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish."

How earnestly does God desire the repentance of all men? (2 Pet. 3:9) "He is not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance."

What should lead men to repentance? (Rom. 2:4) "The goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance."

When there has been a true, godly repentance, what sign will there be? (Acts 26:20) "Repent and turn to God and do works meet for repentance."

May the people of God sometimes need to repent? (Job 1:8) "Hast thou considered my servant Job, that there is none like him in the earth, a perfect and an upright man, one that feareth God and escheweth evil?" "Wherefore, I abhor myself and repent in dust and ashes."

Are even Churches sometimes called upon to repent? (Rev. 3:3) "Remember, therefore, how thou hast received and heard and hold fast, and repent. If, therefore, thou shalt not watch, I will come on thee as a thief, and thou shalt not know what hour I will come upon thee."

Repentance does not save a person, but it is a necessary part of saving faith. God cannot save a person who is not willing to have a change of mind in regard to his lost condition, his sins, and in regard to God and Christ.

WEDNESDAY.

WHAT IS YOUR LIFE?

"Ye are of more value than many sparrows."
—Matt. 10:31.

"He that loseth his life for my sake shall find it."—Matt. 10:38.

Gladstone said, "Be inspired with the belief that life is a noble calling, not a mean, groveling thing, but an elevated and lofty destiny."

One man is quoted as saying that life consists of three things—backbone, backbone, and backbone! And it is realized that there are many circumstances in life that require all three. There are times when we stand alone, maybe, in the dark when all our principles are tempted and challenged. Can we say "No"?

It may be when things are going wrong and we have relaxed from a strain, can we say "No"?

There is a story of a boy who left home and became an apprentice at a trade. He was tempted by his comrades to drink. They swore to make him drunk. He refused. They told him that he had to have it inside or out. He replied by saying, "As you please. I came here this morning with a clean jacket and a clean character. You can spoil my jacket, but shall not spoil my character."

Our living and our lives, yes our characters, may be affected by outside influences. If physical well-being depends upon what we eat, and temperament depends much upon disposition, it may be possible for our characters to be affected by beef and mutton, to say nothing of the insidious drink.

"Watch and pray, lest ye enter into temptation. The spirit is willing, but the flesh is weak."

Prayer.—Lord of our souls, "What fools we mortals be!" What will we not believe in Thee—Thy spirit, Thy might, Thy everlasting mercy, and Thy love and faithfulness? Let Thy mercies come unto us, even Thy salvation. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE ARCH-CRIMINAL.

"Look not, thou, upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth its color in the cup, when it moveth itself right. At last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder."—Prov. 23:31-32.

What do you think of a man who will cheat you? Pese as "friend . . . destroy your confidence . . . promise peace and poise, get you rich, and then stab you in the back?"

Let us say that you are weak—sick, nerves feel great problems of life, brain won't work, things too much for you, and a man comes along and says: "I will care for and comfort you. When your mind is a blank and your outlook hopeless, come to me and I will banish all your worries, clear your bewilderment and depression, and make you happy in every atom of your being." What would you do?

The cold, starry sky seems so far from you. The earth promises but little for you. The depth of the ocean seems puny to your bewilderment—so you take him into your confidence and he betrays you, he sandbags you into unconsciousness and makes a fool of you. What, then, do you think of him?

There is such an enemy. His name is "Alcohol." He goes under other names—"Hootch," "Rum," "Johnnie Walker"—and he has a great many friends in the form of various other drinks. Any of them takes one to the top of a high mountain and promises him the world. He promises increased vitality. He promises to burn out the cobb-webs of the brain and make one feel good. He promises the rosy haze to every outlook and to give one a good time. He promises to let loose one's powers and make a hero of him. He promises to so enter into the blood that he will kill all disease germs, make one immune to contagion, and give health. He promises to send the blood through the veins and warm one. He promises to relieve nerve tension and make life easy. He promises to help one walk in the tipsy dream of warm friendship with folks. He promises to take troubles and drown them and make one happy. Though one may be the most disgusting object, all these things a drinking man thinks he can obtain, and under its influence he feels that he is a towering lord.

Yes, this is true. But "Old Man Rum" and his like are the most consummate liars and swindlers the world has ever known. He is the chiefest of criminals, stealing away from man his best and highest faculties and leaves him helpless and prostrate, and instead of being protected against life's enemies he is an easy prey and victim to them. Drink tries to make one believe that he can do in one draft that which mature thought and self-discipline can do only in a lifetime. And the tragedy of it all is that having led his victim on, he devilishly throws him down, a poisoned, emaculate, driveling, helpless, wrecked slab, and the worst of it is that thousands do not believe it!

Prayer.—Dear Lord, what fools we mortals are! Why will we not believe in Thy everlasting goodness and mercy? O God, we beseech Thee, that we may never forget Thee. May we so live as to be our best body, and like spirit in life, and like Christ in eternity. Amen.

FRIDAY.

REJOICING IN TRIBULATION.

"I am exceedingly joyful in all our tribulations."—2 Cor. 7:4.

It is comparatively easy for us to be patient in tribulations, but to be delighted, rejoicing, or even cheerful in them is a rare commodity. We are living in a high plain of pleasures, delights, and comforts these days, and the slightest inconveniences annoy us sorely. When it comes to enduring tribulations, we are so far from delight in them that such is unknown to us.

For our edification today, it is believed that the following passage of scripture will be a blessing:

John says: "In the world ye shall have tribulations" (16:23).

Paul: "(In tribulation, turn to God and) He will comfort you in all of them" (2 Cor. 1:4).

Luke: "Through much tribulation we enter into the kingdom" (Acts 14:22).

Paul: "Tribulation worketh steadfastness, steadfastness, approvedness, a p p r o v e d n e s s hope" (Rom. 5:3). Hope prevents lapse into shame.

Christ: "Saints of heaven are those that come up out of tribulation" (Rev. 7:14).

Paul: "Therefore, I overflow with joy in all my tribulations" (2 Cor. 7:4).

Prayer.—O Lord, let all that is within us praise and adore Thee. In the trials and troubles of life, let them turn to good—and we will be still praising Thee. Amen.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

Since the weather has cleared up and the ground has dried so we can work, it has been a very busy time at the Christian Orphanage. Every one has been doing his best. Finished planting corn; now sowing beans and getting ready for harvest. Farm life is a happy life, although we have the many problems to meet—weather conditions, insects, and lots of things to worry. But, after all, we have always found a time to plant and a time to gather in. Some years we have better success than others. We do our best to make all we can on the farm to help feed our large family and the children are very fond of all kinds of vegetables.

For fifteen days we have had lots of strawberries, and strawberry shortcake has been on the menu every day. The children enjoy it, and it makes a wholesome food. Feeding 118 children three times per day is a big job, and one that takes lots of thought and planning to have something to suit all their tastes.

SATURDAY.

THE STRENGTH OF QUIET.

"Be still and know that I am God."—Psa. 46:10.

There are two greatest of realities—life and God. It is believed that too most folks life is just a world of enforced habitation where everybody is an end unto himself, with but little conception of any part he has in the world's make-up.

If the way seems hard and full of tribulations, they use it to doubt God's presence and His love. They are like a sick child in the presence of its mother's care. It does not know its mother. It refuses her attentions. It dashes away the medicine. It refuses the water to quench its thirst. At the same time, it calls for mother, who ministers by its side. Were it not for her it would die.

So is the unknowing, panicky world. Our souls cry for something. Often life's frenzy makes us cry for the very thing that is being held out to us, but which we ignorantly dash away.

We need periods of quiet meditation to correct this. We need to get out of the delirium of life's hurry and bustle and face ourselves, face the realities, think over them, and master self. We are not surprised that many people are in the hospital. Some folks have to be laid flat on their backs before they see the stars. The hospital is necessary sometimes to bring souls to quiet and thought and God.

Prayer.—Our Father, who dost desire us to be happy, renew our strength and our faith this day and every day. Draw us into Thy Spirit, so that we shall be quiet a little and think on Thee. Amen.

SUNDAY.

A NEW LIFE.

"If any man is in Christ, he is a new creature; old things are passed away; behold all things are become new."—2 Cor. 5:7.

"What shall I do to be saved?" is a universal question. Turning to Ephesians 2:1-10, we have the finest passage in the Bible on the transformation of a man from a lost to the saved state. One reads into it, fallen man, lost condition, and the work of grace which brings into the life the abounding goodness of God. So real is this experience that it is as pronounced as the graft of the rose whipped into the old root by the nurseryman. Get the picture? Whatever power there may be in self-righteousness, it is as helpless to lift one up to God as the wild rose is helpless to lift itself up to the cultured rose. By grace in Jesus we are saved. Unaided, we cannot rise from the lower to the higher. It can be done only by Divine power. He has promised that whosoever cometh unto Him, He says, "I will put my law in their inner man and write it in their hearts."

"I will take away their wrong hearts."
Prayer.—Dear Father, the refuge of our souls, the lifter-up of our lives, come into our lives and abide with us today and forever and make us all we ought to be. Amen.

CONGREGATIONAL-CHRISTIAN MERGER.

(From the New York Herald-Tribune.)

A "new Congregationalism" is indicated in four proposals which will come before the National Council of the Congregational Churches at its biennial meeting in Detroit May 28th to June 4th. These proposals are:

- 1. Espousal of scientific procedure in worship.
2. Approval of "Religion, Unincorporated," as a basis for organic union with other denominations and for overcoming sectarian divisions in Protestantism.
3. Systematic recruiting of candidates with Grade A ability for the ministry.
4. Integration of laymen into the regular activities of the Churches and the denomination instead of building up a separate national brotherhood organization.

Religious pioneering is typical of the Congregational Churches. Beginning in the sixteenth century as "separatist" groups, in opposition to the Established Church of England, they led the Free Church movement there and furnished Elder William Brewster and the other Mayflower "Pilgrims," who in search of religious liberty became the first settlers of New England.

Founded Harvard in 1639.

They founded the first college in America, Harvard, 1639. Historians say that the first enunciation of the principle that the authority of government is in the free consent of the citizens was made by the Rev. Thomas Hooker, a Congregational minister, in a sermon before the Connecticut Legislature in 1639. Congregationalists launched the foreign mission movement in America, and in 1812 sent the first foreign missionaries from this continent to Asia. They sent out Marcus Whitman, M. D., the first Protestant missionary west of the Rockies, into the Oregon Territory in 1835, where he was later killed in an Indian massacre. A changing and developing Church life harmonizes with the Congregational conception that vital religion resides in the experiences of living men. The potency of religion is held to diminish in proportion to the degree of conformity required to fixed rites and explicit doctrines.

A liturgy based upon the science of psychology and not upon the authority of tradition is to be proposed to the pastors at the Detroit meeting of the National Congregationalist Council. It is intended that the liturgy shall be made available to the Churches for suggested and helpful, but not obligatory, use in worship.

Commission Prepares Liturgy.

Preparation of the liturgical material has proceeded under the auspices of the Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life, of which the Rev. Dr. Lewis T. Reed, of New York, is chairman. Dr. Reed also is general secretary of the ministerial boards and for twenty-one years was pastor of Flatbush Church, in Brooklyn. Dean Luther A. Weigle, Ph. D., of the Yale Divinity School, has had a prominent part in the liturgical preparations. The Rev. Dr. Oscar E. Maurer, for twenty years pastor of the First Church of Christ (Congregational), in New Haven, founded in 1639 and located on the "green," will preside at the pastors' conference in Detroit when liturgical matters are considered.

A letter reporting upon "a study of the psychological principles of public worship" was mailed last week to every pastor by the Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life. The study was made by the Rev. Dr. Douglas Horton, pastor of Leyden Church, Brooklyn, Mass., who will be the chaplain for the daily devotional services at the council meeting.

Sees Psychology in Worship.

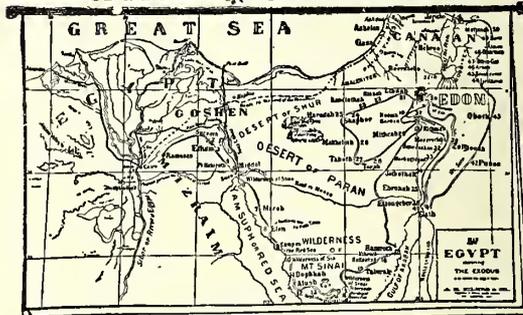

In this study, Dr. Horton states that "worship is an activity of the human mind" and that the most helpful worship will be that in which the psychological laws regarding attention have been heeded.

"Worship," he says, "must assume the form of 'attention,' for it is to attention that the mind works. Whether we think or dream, whether our ideas are clear or confused, whether we are animated by love, hate or any other emotion, we are, obviously, always 'attending' to something."

"It is surprisingly easy in the Sunday-after-Sunday routine of Church services to forget 'what' it is in our worship that we are supposedly attending 'to.' The various parts of the service have an inveterate tendency to become exercises—in which there is nothing left to look for or appreciate but the technique of the performance. But this is worship without content.

"True worship is alive and will have commerce with a living God. God and only God is its content—not words about God, not the 201 names of God, but God. Our consideration of the psychological principles of worship will fail if we forget that the forms are nothing except as they glow with content. The attention in true worship is directed wholly toward God.

"It is only by periodic penetration through the forms to the mysteriously felt presence of the wholly perfect that we become aware in worship that 'something is happening' to us, our personality is coming alive, our destiny is being enlarged."

The word "unincorporated" has been added to the name for the proposed united body of the National Council of the Congregational Churches and the General Convention of the Christian Church. The plan for the merger of the two denominations was first announced last fall. As now revised, the plan provides that the name for the united body shall be the "General Council of the Congregational and Christian Churches, Unincorporated. The legal charters of the Corporation for National Congregational Councils and for the general Christian Convention are to be retained as are likewise all the separate incorporations for mission and other benevolent boards. This policy of continuing all existing corporations has already been followed within several denominations which have recently effected mergers among their mission boards.

In the interdenominational field, this policy, it is anticipated, can solve many difficulties which stand in the way of rapid progress toward mergers. The reality of Church union is considered to be spiritual unity and, without spiritual union, incorporated union is only the shell or delusion of real union.

If the plan of union is ratified by the Congregationalist Council, it will next be presented to the General Convention of the Christian Church in Piqua, Ohio, October 22nd to 31st. The first united meeting is contemplated in 1931. Before that date, it is hoped that other denominations will join as charter members in the merger.

While college students as a whole, average Grade C in their studies, the average grades of those entering theological seminaries is B, it will be reported to the national council at Detroit by the commission on recruiting for the ministry. The chairman of the commission is the Rev. Dr. Herman F. Swartz, president of the Pacific School of Religion in Berkeley, Calif.

The report, however, continues:

"Wide acquaintance with men now in preparation for the ministry convinces your commission that in matters of quality we are getting few men of absolutely first rank. Other vocations mark these men and systematically court and win them. It is well known that a number of great nationally organized industries are systematically discovering and cultivating just these men."

High Standards Favored.

The judgment of the commission is that at least 10 per cent of the candidates who enter the seminaries to prepare for the ministry should be men of the first grade, able to meet the standards required for such appointments as the Rhodes scholarships and the fellowships for religion in higher education.

The objection that may be raised to "selective recruiting" by the denomination on the ground that it is not "God's way" to call men into the ministry, the commission meets by claiming that "the Church is, or should be, the agent of the Holy Spirit."

The recruiting work, the commission recommends, should be organized under the Congregational Education Society.

The commission says that 300 new ministers should be ordained each year. The age of decision for the ministry is found to be generally in the upper year of high school or the lower years of college, with the trend toward the high school age. Between the time of deciding for the ministry and ordination there are heavy losses, "largely accountable to inability to continue preparation for financial or other reasons, to moral breakdown or religious disillusionment, to the attraction of other vocations, notably the teaching profession." To get 300 candidates trained and ready for ordination annually, the number to be recruited each year is placed at 1,000.

Brotherhood Disapproved.

A negative answer to the question whether a national Congregational men's brotherhood should be organized will be recommended to the National Council by its commission on men's work, of which the chairman is Robert E. Lewis, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. of Cleveland.

The view of the commission is that, instead of a new organization, the existing agencies for promoting Bible study, evangelical and devotional life, social service, international good will and peace and world-wide missions should give more attention to interesting and enlisting participation by men.

A greatly increased participation of laymen in the national ecclesiastical and executive affairs of the denomination also is urged. The small number of lay members in the National Council itself is held to be unfortunate and to represent an ignorance on the part of laymen in the importance and magnitude of the council's business, involving the control of $50,000,000 in property and invested funds and the administration of work costing annually more than $5,000,000.

THE LAW OF STEWARDSHIP.—

"I think that it is but fair to recognize that there are spiritual laws as well as natural laws under which the individual must work. There are laws of progress and growth. These laws are as eternal as the very heavens, but they are not fully understood. But, then, what laws have been? Newton is given credit for formulating the law of gravitation, but the law has been established from the beginning of time. The law under which the gasoline engine works has existed throughout the ages of history. Gasoline exploded by a spark under pressure would have made an automobile run in the year 1 as well as today. The law was eternal. But man had not yet grasped the idea to use it. The laws under which the airplane raises itself and conquers the air are old laws. But we are beginning to appreciate them.

"In the same way, there are laws of life. These have also existed from the beginning of time, but have not always been appreciated. The law of stewardship is such a law. In this chapter I want to forget any objective in using Christian stewardship as a way to get money and talk about it as a way to find life. Reduced to its simplest terms, the law is:

"1. God is the Owner of all.

"2. I am the steward of His wealth.

"3. I find the biggest satisfaction in life by using this wealth entrusted to me in the way which will bring happiness to mankind and advance the kingdom of God.

"The law of stewardship thus takes issue with the law of acquisition. It says to man that it isn't what you get, but what you give that counts. It challenges the right of the individual to make his biggest aim in life the acquiring of wealth or fame, and it substitutes for the old law the rule of service for others. It tells man frankly that he gets the most out of law as he gives the most."—Wm. H. Leach, in Church Finance.

KNOWING YOUTH.—

"Critics of youth often make the mistake of judging the whole group by what they see in an individual. They also make the mistake of judging without full information." These words were written by a man who has no occasion for prejudice either for or against the young folks of this present day. He had recently been present at a group meeting of young people. He had found them fine, clean, and wholesome. He, like most of us, had been reading much of the criticism of modern youth. But when he got in touch intimately with a group of young people, he found that they were not so flaming as had been painted. Most of us know quite a number of young people. If we look around closely we will find that some few do manifest wild tendencies. Some of them doubtless do silly things. Many older people have not entirely passed the danger of doing silly things on occasions. In order to place any credence whatever in the idea that youth is dangerously bad, most of us have decided that the young folks of our acquaintance are considerably better than the general run of young folks. As an evidence of how far we may go wrong in judging by what may appear on the surface, we shall give you some facts as presented by Miss Virginia Tuxill, in the Christian Herald, under the title, "A College Girl Looks at Life":

"The conviction that college vices are popularly overrated was brought home to me by a particular incident in my senior year. It was in connection with the question of women's smoking. It had long been a tradition on the campus that the women of the college did not smoke. At that time, however, there was considerable of it going on—how much, no one actually knew, but every one was eager to proffer an estimate. The executive board of the women's governing body formed a special committee to consider the situation and to discover the kind and extent of campus feeling. The committee was composed of all types of girls—those who smoked and those who did not; those whose parents approved, and those who themselves abhorred the practice. You can imagine the diverse speculations in that body. Estimates ranged from 95 per cent as smokers to about 35 per cent. When the flurry blew over and the results were garnered in, it was found that only 18 per cent of college women smoked, and 80 per cent of the entire number registered themselves as desiring to see the tradition upheld—to see smoking outlawed. If those on the campus can be so mistaken about a question of social importance, how much more so are outsiders likely to be misled?"

PROCRASTINATION.—

In reading a recent article concerning the proposed union of the Presbyterian Churches of Scotland, we chanced upon this sentence: "The negro preacher was about right who said, 'Along with foreordination and predestination, procrastination are one of the principal doctrines of the Presbyterian Church.'" Now, we venture to say that the only reason the colored brother could claim the doctrine of procrastination for the Presbyterian Church was because of his intimate acquaintance with that body. It is to be feared that the Presbyterian Church has no monopoly upon procrastination. If actual practice were taken into count, there are not many denominations that would not be able to find a common basis of union in the doctrine of procrastination.

It is a hard doctrine to deal with, for, though so well-nigh universal, it is generally to be found firmly rooted in people who are otherwise kind, considerate, and possessed of the very best intentions. What is the preacher to do when he finds that the majority of his congregation are firm believers in the doctrine of procrastination? No preacher, if he can help it, prefers to adopt the policy made famous by Mussolini. In the first place, it does not harmonize with the nature of the majority of preachers. And in the second place, it does not seem to work with sufficient success to encourage its use. For if the adherents of the doctrine of procrastination once get the idea that some one is trying to hurry them into what they consider undue haste, they are liable to pass on into other doctrines that are even more deleterious than the doctrine of procrastination. No, it does not always work when firm believers in procrastination are dealt with severely. Many a preacher has been forced to move into fields that were certainly newer, even though they may not have been greener, when he got too hard on the procrastinators.

Let us consider how the doctrine of procrastination might possibly effect the working of a Church. Let us suppose that the first Sunday that it is cold enough to have a fire it is found that the furnace is smoking abominably. The official board takes the matter under consideration at its next meeting, and appoints a committee to make an investigation. When the next meeting is held, the matter is brought up, only to find that the secretary of the board failed to notify the committee as to their duty. Again, at the following meeting, attention is called to the fact that the furnace is still smoking. The chairman of the committee had intended to call his fellow-committeemen together, but on the date selected it was discovered that three members of the committee could not be present, so the meeting was deferred. Finally the committee reports that they have carefully considered the matter, but that since fire will be needed only a few more Sundays and the treasury is in need of funds, that it has been decided not to incur any expense in repairing the furnace at the present time. The man who said, "If the Israelites had depended upon a committee to lead them into the Promised Land, they would be in the wilderness yet," must have had experience with Church committees or else all committees are very much alike.

If there is any one who has really found an effective method by which to deal with the doctrine of procrastination, such an one would merit the everlasting gratitude of all his fellow-workers if the effective method of procedure should be published far and wide. The army has an effective means of handling such situations. The colonel sends a memorandum which reads somewhat like this: "Immediately upon receipt of this notice, Lieutenant So and So will report at regi-

NOTES-PERSONALS

Dr. Daniel Albright Long, Florence, S. C., is to be one of the speakers at the Providence-Memorial Association, New Providence Church, Graham, N. C., Sunday, June 2nd. Another speaker for the day is Hon. Chas. H. Ireland, of Greensboro. This occasion usually brings together a very large audience.

Miss Victoria Adams writes from Porto Rico that she has a membership of seventy in her Junior Endeavor, forty-five in the Senior Endeavor, eighteen in her Bible class, and twenty in the girls' club. She is now busily engaged in planning for the daily vacation Bible schools to be held following the close of the regular school work on the island.

Writing under date of May 24th, Rev. M. T. Sorrell, Danville, says: "We have closed a good meeting, with the assistance of Rev. John C. Cowell, Jr. Twenty-two united with the Church, and we have several other applications. Our Sunday School had 324 present last Sunday, and you see it is still growing. We are much in need of additional Sunday School rooms."

The Elon College commencement began Saturday P. M., May 25th, and closed Tuesday, May 28th. There were fifty-five graduates. On Sunday morning, President Alfred W. Hurst, of Palmer College, Albany, Mo., preached a great sermon, and the choir rendered beautiful music. It was an inspiring occasion, and the services were spiritual and edifying. An account of the commencement exercises will appear next week.

Rev. T. J. Green, Elon College, assisted the pastor, Rev. J. M. Allred, in a successful series of meetings at our Biscoe Church, Biscoe, N. C., which meeting closed the evening of the 19th with twenty accessions to the Church. There were seventeen conversions during the meeting, and the Church was greatly revived. This is one of our newest Churches and is certainly showing the life and vigor of wholesome and happy youth.

Dr. W. C. Wicker, pastor, reports splendid services at Belew Creek Sunday, May 26th. It was the annual Memorial Day. Dr. Wicker preached in the morning, and Rev. J. W. Patton in the afternoon. The house was unable to accommodate the large audiences that gathered, and the spirit of the occasion was wholesome and inspiring. Under the pastorate of Dr. Wicker, Belew Creek goes forward and gives promise of growth and renewed activity.

We could wish that all our pastors had a copy of Dr. Egbert Smith's remarkable book, "The Desire of All Nations." Dr. Smith has packed into this volume more missionary information and inspiration than is usually found in the range and compass of such volumes. Doubleday, Doran & Co., Garden City, N. Y., are the publishers, but if desired the editor of THE SUN can have copies sent—neat paper binding for fifty cents. Moreover, there is no better book, in our opinion, for missionary study groups than Dr. Smith's volume.

Rev. J. W. Patton, the faithful pastor of Bethlehem, Alamance County, N. C., reports a most interesting and inspiring day and services Sunday, May 19th. The congregations filled the spacious building, and many could not gain admittance for the memorial exercises. Bethlehem is one of our old and well-established Churches, which does not decline with age but is showing signs of youth, vigor, and activity. Its Sunday School has also manifested a deepening interest, and there are prospects of progress and growth both in Church and Sunday School.

Mt. Bethel Church, Rockingham County, N. C., the home Church of Lester, the Truitts, and a few others of that good and great ministerial timber, has recently greatly improved the comfort and appearance of the interior of the Church by putting in nice pews, an elevated choir space, and so forth. Rev. J. W. Knight is the beloved and consecrated pastor. Sunday, May 19th, was "Memorial and Missionary Day," and it was good to be there and think and hear about "memorials and missionaries," and mingle with a great throng of happy worshipers and share the bounty of a lavish dinner.

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Western North Carolina Conference is to meet with the Church at Shiloh, Randolph County, Tuesday, June 11, 1929. A very inviting program has been prepared, with a roster of splendid speakers. Bro. Geo. T. Gunter, secretary, Ramseur, N. C., is exceedingly anxious to see a large number of ministers, delegates and visitors present. The officers of the convention are C. A. Walker, Burlington, N. C., president; Dr. G. O. Lankford, Burlington, N. C., vice-president; Geo. T. Gunter, R. 1, Ramseur, N. C., secretary-treasurer; Miss Pauline Brown, R. 1, Ramseur, N. C., assistant secretary-treasurer.

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference is to meet with Happy Home Church, Rockingham County, N. C., June 20th and 21st, beginning at 10 A. M. Bro. W. B. Truitt, president of the convention and chairman of the executive committee, met with his committee in THE CHRISTIAN SUN office, at Elon College, Friday P. M., May 24th, and made out a tentative program. Bro. Truitt has a zeal for the work and is exceedingly anxious to bring together in this Convention two hundred or more of our Sunday School and Christian Endeavor workers, pastors and officials. A good Convention is expected.

Dr. E. Stanley Jones, the world-famous missionary to India, says there are three kinds of Christians—the selfish Christian, the sacrificial Christian, and, between these two, the sentimental Christian. The Selfish Christian is he who wants to do and to give, if at all, only to the upkeep of his local Church. The sentimental Christian is the one to whom Christianity means no cross, but who gives a flower and a tear for "the dear missionary" or "the poor heathen," and proceeds serenely to do nothing more about it. The sacrificial Christian is the one on whose heart and soul the burden of an unsaved world bears heavily, and, with his Lord, he is willing to sacrifice and practice self-denial.

The following is taken from an exchange: "A sensible man, supposedly a preacher, has written: 'Though I have a scientific mind and a university degree in sociology and philosophy, and although I am an expert in social service and an authority on Browning, and although I use the language of the scientific laboratory so as to deceive the very elect into thinking I am a scholar, and have not a message of salvation and the love of Christ—I am a misfit in the pulpit and no preacher of the gospel.'" That man should never have begun to preach, but is now to be congratulated that he has at last discovered himself and makes an honest confession. It is one thing to be intellectually and scientifically prepared for the ministry; it is quite a different thing to be called of God and to feel deep down in the soul like the one who said: "Woe unto me if I preach not the gospel."

The Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions (North) began the year April, 1928, with a deficit of $293,000. This board now rejoices that the slump in contributions to missions in that Church has ceased, and has been overcome by an actual increase from giving the past year of over $150,000 above that of previous years. The Northern Baptist Churches report an increase in their giving to missions. This is, indeed, hopeful, since the major denominations had experienced a great falling off in contributions to missions since the World War until the fiscal year just closing. This is regarded as a hopeful sign, since it expresses and reveals a zeal and a quickening interest in the gospel and the power of the gospel to save to the uttermost.

Rev. G. D. Underhill, of Elon College, who will this year graduate in religious education at Elon College, has been offered a position by the officers of St. Paul's Methodist Church, Goldsboro, N. C., as director of religious work among the young people. Mr. Underhill was in Goldsboro during the week-end and was entertained in the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. G. Thompson. He has asked time to consider the proposition. Later: After some days of consideration, Bro. Underhill has accepted the position offered him in Goldsboro's largest M. E. Church. We regret that the way did not open for this young brother in one of our wide-awake Christian Churches, as he is a Christian minister (licentiate, soon to be ordained now as an elder) of ability and great promise.

The Congregationalists of Boston carried in its issue of May 23rd a cut of the fine face and features of President Frank G. Coffin, of the General Convention of the Christian Church, who, in that issue, contributed a fine article entitled "The Congregational-Christian Union as Seen from the Christian Church." Dr. Coffin traced the history of the Christian Church, told of the process thus far in the matter of the merger of the two denominations, and set forth that which, in his opinion, was the real meaning of the proposed union. We expect to carry the whole article by Dr. Coffin in an early issue of THE SUN. It is a valuable document that should be read and considered deeply and prayerfully, and, we think, also with pardonable pride by readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

Rev. J. H. Dollar, pastor, and Rev. O. D. Poythress, who has been assisting him in a two weeks' revival at Reidsville, were agreeable visitors at the editor's office one day last week. The revival was still in progress, but some over sixty members had been received into the Church and many others were hoped for and expected by the close of the meeting Sunday, the 26th. Under the enthusiastic and zealous leadership of Brother Dollar, the Reidsville Church is making great strides of progress and development. Recently the interior of the Church has been wonderfully improved, and this Church now has by far the largest Sunday School of any Church in the city of Reidsville. The increase in numbers is overflowing the Sunday School capacity, and additional equipment for Sunday School purposes is now apparent and necessary at an early date. A happy member of our Reidsville Church recently said to the editor: "We have a pastor, missionary in spirit and in activity, and one who is doing things and leading us on." Happy pastor, happy people!

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOSEPH W. FIX, Preacher.

THE GREAT ADVENTURE.

"After the fire, a still small voice."—1
Kings 19:12.

There came a time in the life of Elijah when discouragement confronted him in a very real way. Queen Jezebel threatened to execute him, and when he learned of the plans he seeks to escape. "He arose and went for his life. He went a day's journey into the wilderness, and came and sat down by a juniper tree and requested for himself that he might die . . . and an angel of the Lord came and touched him, and he arose and did eat and drink and went in the strength of his meat unto Mount Horeb. And he came unto a cave and lodged there; and behold the word of the Lord came to him and said, 'What doest thou here, Elijah?' And he said, 'All of the prophets of the Lord have been slain, and I only am left, and now they seek my life—and the Lord commissioned him to go stand upon the mount before the Lord. When the Lord passed by, Elijah beheld a great and strong wind, such as he had never seen before, for it rent the trees and brake the rocks to pieces before the Lord, and after the wind an earthquake, and after the earthquake he beheld a fire . . . and after the fire a still, small voice.'" So Elijah was led to know that there were better days ahead, after he heard the still small voice. All of life was not to be filled with sadness and discouragement; all was not to be windstorms and earthquakes. All was not to be great fires; for the still small voice follows the fire even as peace and calm follow the earthquakes and windstorms.

Just as these disastrous events came to Elijah, so death often comes into our homes and brings us to grave discouragement. For the moment, we feel that everything in life is gone. But after death, comes the still small voice. The voice asked Elijah, "What doest thou here—and he wrapped his face in his mantle and went out." So after the death of our loved ones, we, like Elijah, feel that there is nothing to do but wrap our faces in our mantles and weep. Instead of brooding over the death of our loved ones, whose graves we cover with flowers on Memorial Day, let us think of them in terms that lead us to rejoice. And as we search the Holy Book we will find words of life-giving comfort. But perhaps there is no comforting thought in the Bible concerning those in our cemeteries, than the last words of Paul to Timothy. The apostle was in a Roman prison—the day of his execution was near at hand. He realizes that he is soon to be with His Lord and He is ready. He has fought a good fight, kept the faith, and as he thinks of death, he says, "The time of my departure is at hand." Paul was thinking of death as I would have you think of those in yon cemetery. Think of them as having taken the great adventure. By having taken this adventure, we think again of Paul's words, "departure." Its derivation is the same as that of "unloosing." So that we would say, "The time of my unloosing is come." He thought of the figure of ship that he had so often seen unloosed from the shores of earth and then launch out into the great seas. So to him, death was a great adventure. It was a time of being unloosed from the cares and worries of the world. It was an adventure out upon the great seas of eternal life. No doubt but what Tennyson had this thought uppermost in his mind when he wrote the immortal poem:

"Sunset and evening star,
And one clear call for me,
And may there be no moaning at the bar
When I put out to sea.

"For such a tide as moving seems asleep,
Too full for sound and foam,
When that which drew from out the boundless deep Turns again home.

"Twilight and evening bell,
And after that the dark!
And may there be no sadness of farewell
When I embark.

"For though from out the bourne of time and place
The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my pilot face to face
When I have crossed the bar."

For sixty years Paul had been held by the ropes of life to the stakes on the shores of time. He had longed for wider experience. Often his tiny ship of life had tugged hard at the ropes—as it rolled on the restless sea. He had suffered persecution and trial. His earthly ambitions had never been accomplished in full, and his aspirations had been thwarted many times. But now, the time for unloosing had come. He was to take the great adventure. He rejoices. Some one exclaims, "Clear the gang-plank and hoist the sails." No more limitations of the flesh—unloose me and let me sail away upon the limitless expanse of the eternal years. Truly there is no finer interpretation of death than this thought. Those whose graves we cover with flowers on Memorial Day have, with Paul, taken the great adventure—they have been unloosed from the cares and worries of this life and are now upon the happy sea of eternity. Christ is their Pilot. They sing:

"Jesus, Saviour, pilot me . . .
Over life's tempestuous sea.
Unknown waves before me roll,
Hiding rocks and treacherous shoal;
Chart and compass come from Thee.
Jesus, Saviour, pilot me."

In the placing of flowers on their graves—the still small voice speaks, ever reminding us that they have gained a reward which still awaits us. For death is gain. To live is to know Christ imperfectly; to die is to know Him perfectly. To live is to see through a glass darkly; to die is to see Him face to face. To live is to serve Him; to die is to receive the reward of service. To live is to follow in the steps of Christ; to die is to sit at His feet. To live is to read of the many mansions in the Father's home; to die is to occupy a place in that home on high. To live is to bear a cross; to die is to wear a crown. To live is to walk through the valley of the shadow; to die is to awaken in His likeness and to be eternally satisfied.

In honor of our blessed dead, whose gain we cannot know, let us—
Bring sweet flowers, bring lilies and roses;
Bring evergreens, wreathes and forget-me-nots blue;
Bring pansies for thoughts of our dearly loved comrade;
Bring laurels for heroes who ever were true.
We scarcely can see, for our eyes dim with tears;

Sad thoughts and sad memories are crowding each breast:
But we heap high the flowers, beautiful flowers,
Where the silent dead are lying at rest.

The still small voice reminds us that as we place the flowers there we are to pledge anew our lives to the work they so nobly begun. On one occasion, the psalmist David was reviewing his possessions. He was thinking of the goodness of the Lord to him and exclaimed, "I have a goodly heritage." So may we be reminded that we have a goodly heritage. But from whence came our heritage? From whence came our present possessions, our Churches, our educational institutions and our democratic form of government? From the past comes the answer—and to the blessed dead, the still small voice reminds us we owe tribute.

Following the World War, Sir Harry Lauder stood by the grave of his son and exclaimed, "O God, I would that I could have one request: that I might embrace my laddie again and thank him for what he has done for country and humanity." Now, we cannot thank our beloved dead for what they have done, by word of mouth; but by deeds of appreciation, we may carry on the work they so nobly began. We, Americans, have a wonderful heritage. A beautiful country, in which all men are free and with equal opportunities. The still small voice reminds us that to the fathers of our country we ought to do homage by perpetuating the work of a great government. It is said that the Spaniard loves his country, even though it is a land without much prosperity; the Chinese loves his country, though it be a land without inspiration; and the Eskimo loves the barren ice-covered country of his nativity. If these so love their respective lands, how much more ought we, as American citizens, to love our country which is endowed with prosperity, inspiration and natural beauty? For such a land, we ought to honor the soldiers today by pledging allegiance to the work for which they fought. To the soldiers of the Mayflower, who came here and fought against the ravages of a wilderness for homes and Churches; to the soldiers of the Revolutionary War, who fought for our freedom from the English rule; to the beloved soldiers in gray and blue, of the Civil War, who fought that our nation might be undivided; to the Spanish-American soldiers and to the World War men, who sleep beneath the red poppies of Flanders fields. To the latter we owe a debt of gratitude that we can only repay by "carrying on" the great principles of democracy and world brotherhood for which they fought.

The ancient Romans used to place statues or busts of their dead in their homes as a reminder of their lives and as a source of inspiration to the younger generations. But we, as Americans, do not preserve the likeness of our dead in the form of marble or bronze. We do not even make a practice of preserving their memory by enlarged pictures on the walls, as in days gone by. Instead, we look round about and behold the works of their fingers, which will live on and on. The still small voice speaks to us and reminds us that we ought to live up to all expected of us by them, by our country, and its flag; for it is —

"Your flag and my flag, and it holds
Your land and my land in its folds.
Your heart and my heart beat quicker at the sight
Of the sun-tossed and wind-tossed
Red and White and Blue.
The one flag, the great flag, the flag for me and you—
The flag of the Red, White and Blue."

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE CHURCH'S ONE GREAT NEED.

A while ago, some one asked Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, then president of the Federal Council of Churches, what he considered the greatest obstacle to the progress of the Church today. We believe that Dr. Cadman's reply will be agreed to most emphatically by pastors generally and those most deeply interested in Church life and progress. The reply was, in his opinion, neither modernism nor fundamentalism, so-called, "but the lack of a deep religious experience among professing Christians." We wonder if this lack is not very keenly felt by most observers of Church life and activity today. Many feel that our present day, in this regard, fits in quite well with the time that Paul wrote of to Timothy (2 Tim. 3:5): "For men shall be . . . lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof."

Ours is, indeed, a pleasure-loving, money-spending, comfort-seeking age, if there ever was such an age. And in this regard, it is difficult, indeed, to distinguish between Church members and non-Church members. In conversation, and in conduct, by word and by deed, there seems to be the same indifference to spiritual things and to the deeper and truer things of God. Many Church members of our day use profanity, desecrate by trade and commerce and pure pleasure-seeking, the Holy Sabbath, and violate any and all the teachings of Scripture and the Church just as freely and readily as non-Church members. About the only way to distinguish many Church members from non-Church members is to hear the roll of some Church called.

The writer fully understands that there is a difference between governing conduct on the basis of righteousness and love of God, and that of trying to regulate life and conduct by rule, regulation and law. But what rules and regulations of righteousness are we adhering to in seeking to promote righteousness and develop our spiritual lives? We readily give assent to Dr. Cadman's opinion, what the Church needs most of all is a deeper religious experience among its members.

The question arises as to how to come into this experience? How are we cultivating this experience? What are we Christians doing to develop this experience and deepen it?

The writer is of opinion that the Church is drifting too far away from the plain teachings of the Word of God; that we are not studying, preaching and practicing the plain, simple truths taught in the Bible. We turn to the passages of the Bible that suit our convenience and way of thinking and living, but forget the fact that the Bible is the revealed way, will and Word of God to man. The Bible is not the opinion, the teaching, or even the religion, of man or of any group or nation of men and women. If the Bible contains any religion at all, as a recent writer points out, it's the religion of God, not the religion of man; it reveals God's attitude to man, and inspired truths as to where and how man may find and reach God. It shows that God reveals Himself as one who is accessible and one whose life and love can be touched and shared by those who will seek Him and His way. The Church's great need is a deeper religious experience, a truer knowledge of God, a more faithful pursuit of His way, even His way of righteousness for us.

A pastor said recently that if the people would get right with God, they would naturally, easily, gladly, take care of the Church and all of its interest and enterprises and institutions. Agreed. But the great problem before us today is how are we going to influence the people to get right with God? How are we going to get right with God ourselves, so that we shall have the deeper religious experience and that our people shall have the deeper religious experience. We all admit, with Dr. Cadman, the lack and need, and we deplore the grievous, not to say deplorable and tragic, situation in which the Church finds itself today. The deeper question is, How can the Church of the present be led to a deeper and truer religious experience, to a closer walk with God, to a sweeter fellowship in Him and in His service?

The reply of this writer is that we have got to get back closer to the teaching of the truths of the Word of God; of a clearer understanding of God's attitude toward, and His way for, us. We have got to realize the presence and the practice of God and incorporate in our own lives and souls the life and the love of God. This, as we see it, is not only the greatest need, but is the only way to supply that need and meet its demands.

ANOTHER INTELLECTUAL GONE WRONG.

Some of the high-lights of learning may be depended upon to produce a state of nausea now and then on the part of folks who have a heart as well as a head, and soul as well as a body. We see from the papers that the distinguished Dr. Harry E. Barnes, in a recent public address, sought to undermine and to depreciate the Ten Commandments. The reasoning of this intellectual led him to the avowed conclusion that "The development of man's moral nature under social and political circumstances made them (the Ten Commandments) local or national rather than universal in their application. The story of Moses going into the mountain fastnesses and there receiving the Decalogue from the hands of God, is a mere passing of folklore without foundation in reality."

In this way, Dr. Barnes sought to strip the Decalogue of all sanctity and to deny their divine origin. We wonder what this intellectual hopes to gain by giving to the public such conclusions.

For thousands of years, people believed in the Ten Commandments, and in that belief developed character and built divinity into their nature. Moreover, if one were to admit for one moment, which this writer by no means admits, that the story of Moses going into the mountains was a mere passing folklore, why could the hand of Divinity not be perfectly manifest, and His power divine, in lifting this folklore to such noble purpose and truths as are contained in the Ten Commandments? Moreover, the Ten Commandments speak for themselves of their Divine origin. It seems to one who considers the matter in the light of plain facts and not from the high pinnacle of intellectual soaring, that the imperishable truths and the inherent value of the Ten Commandments are sufficient to establish them as of divine origin. To think that Moses or any other man of his day could have, without divine guidance and supernatural aid, written such a document as the Decalogue, and one that would influence the thought of mankind for his own uplift through centuries, is a reflection upon the progress of learning through the ages. That man has never lived since Moses' day of whom the world has record, and that man does not live today of whom there is any knowledge, who, without such divine guidance and supernatural aid, could compose in such brief space a document that, for sheer force and inherent power, would compare with the Decalogue. They have been telling us that scholarship is constantly improving and that the mind of man, through some evolutionary process, is ever developing. How does it happen, then, that, through cycles and centuries, no human being has arrived, even at this late hour in the world's history, who can compose in such brief compass a writing, or a declaration, that would even compare favorably with the Ten Commandments?

Doctor Barnes' rationalism is but another specimen of a great intellectual, without firm, fixed faith in God, gone wrong. The intellectuals never have been able to lead the world to higher spiritual and moral achievements. Only those whose hearts and souls are rooted and grounded in faith, even the faith of Deity and Divinity, have been able to do that for the world. Since man has a heart as well as a head, a soul as well as a mind, it takes more than intellectual achievement to lift mankind to a higher plane of being and of living.

IS ZEAL FOR THE CHURCH DECLINING?

A long time ago the psalmist wrote: "The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up." In later centuries when Jesus found in the temple those that sold oxen and sheep and doves, and exchangers of money, He made a scourge of small cords and drove them out of the temple. Looking upon this scene, the disciples recalled the song of the psalmist and repeated it (John 2:17). "The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up." There is yet in the world a zeal for the Church. Millions believe in the Church with all their hearts, soul and strength, and would lay down their lives for the Church.

Many are doubting, however, as to whether zeal for the house of God is maintained with the same fervor as of yore, or whether the zeal of the Church is declining. The Milwaukee Journal discusses the question editorially, putting to its readers this question: "Is the faith of our fathers losing its own? This is the real question raised when a great denomination in America reports that its Churches are not giving as much as formerly for foreign missions. Similar word has come from other denominations. Their numbers were never so great, their people never were better off. But contributions to carrying the gospel abroad have not kept pace with this growing wealth; they have even declined from what they were." The Journal editor risks the whole question of Church zeal on that of the Church's attitude and contributions to foreign missions. This editor of a secular journal takes the position that the zeal for the Church is proven or disproven by the attitude of the Church to the question of foreign missions. His argument is quite cogent, and whether one agrees or not, there is something of worth and weight in what he says. As to making zeal for the Church and that for foreign missions identical, and the one a proof of the other, the Journal declares editorially:

"This does not mean that the practical working of foreign missions is being questioned. That always has been questioned outside the Church, but not by the Church-givers. In proportion as their religion means something to them, they believe its benefits ought to be extended to all humanity. If mission work can be bettered, well and good; but they know what it has done to relieve human suffering and better the position of women and children justifies the cost. If they are now giving less, it is not a loss of faith in missions, but a decline of interest in their own religion.

"Zeal for spreading Christianity is the thermometer of Church zeal and interest. It always has been. And when the Churches give less for missions, it is even more serious as a sign of Church decline than in the retrenchment it enforces in the foreign field. True, money is being spent on new Churches and finer surroundings and better music. In an age which sees comforts and luxuries added constantly to homes, some of this will be reflected in handsomer Church edifices and better programs. But even for their own comforts, the proportion of their income that Church members give is less than it was.

"Is the faith of our fathers losing its hold in America? That is more serious than most of the questions we hear asked today. It makes a somber tone in the picture of a country at its wealthiest. For it is written that where our treasure is, there will our heart be also." J. O. A.

CRADLE ROLL AND HOME DEPARTMENT.

The ideal of the present day is the whole Church in the Sunday School and the whole Sunday School in the Church, and the cradle and the home departments undertake to encompass that herculean task. The family, and not the individual, is regarded as the unit of society, and both of these departments are in the family. Six departments—beginners, primary, juniors, intermediates, seniors, and adults—are in the school; the cradle roll and the home department are in the home. The greatest and best institution on earth is the Christian home; and the greatest evil on earth is the godless home. The ideal is to make home Christian, and these two departments have that for their goal. A fair estimate shows that Sunday Schools do not enroll more than half as many members as the Church; and a large percentage of every community is outside of both. The field for Christian work is large and inviting. Those two departments furnish a fertile field for work in the home and the promise of great harvest and reward.

All schools can work both of these departments, and they can operate their own plans with success. The main thing is to enroll the babies as soon as they are named, and keep up with them by birthday cards, letters and visits until they are four years old. There should be a cradle roll superintendent in every school, and a woman is best suited to this position. Efforts should be employed to find and enroll new babies, and they should be regarded as members of the school. Parents will gladly co-operate with superintendents when instructed in the meaning and purpose of this department, whether they are members of the Church or not. There are more than a million babies on the cradle roll in this country.

The home department works at the other end of the line to get the "shut-ins," the "shut-outs," the indifferent, and the unwilling interested in Bible reading, the Sunday School, and the Church. There are invalids, mothers with little babies, men who work at night and on Sundays, men and women who do not go to Sunday School, men and women who are unwilling to assume Sunday School attendance, all sorts of people in homes not identified with this great process of training. Sometimes grown-ups can be won by the cradle roll baby in the home. A birthday card, an invitation to a cradle roll meeting, a visit to the home, may awaken in parental hearts a new impulse that will lead to Church membership. "A little child shall lead them." A woman asked to join the Church, said she never had time to be a Christian when she was well, and guessed she would not start when she was sick. She wanted to know if I had religion enough to black her stove; that she was "fair sick" to see a good shine on her stove. Her husband, John, had some religion, but not enough to black stoves. Then she said she would join if I would black her stove three times a week while she was sick. She got both.

Spanning the entrance to the Cathedral in Milan are three arches. Over the first, "All that pleases is but for a moment"; second, "All that troubles is but for a moment"; third, "That only is important which is eternal." There might be three arches over the Sunday School—first, "The cradle roll on the left"; second, "The home department on the right"; third, "The active school in the Church." They are all related and essential to the ideal Sunday School—six departments in the school, two departments in the home, and all leading up to Church membership, without which there would be no Sunday School.

AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY.

In the circulation of the Scriptures during 1928 the American Bible Society, by going beyond the 11,000,000 mark in its issues of Scriptures, surpassed all previous records of distribution. The distribution was made in 182 languages. This achievement, announced in the society's one hundred and thirteenth annual report just made public, marks the fourth year in succession in which the Bible circulation of each preceding year has been exceeded.

In China, just emerging from the throes of a significant revolution, the American Bible Society distributed over 4,500,000 volumes, the largest circulation in the history of the society's work in China. The new Bible House, in Peking, the gift to the American Bible Society from the Maryland Bible Society, was formally dedicated "to the circulation of the Holy Scriptures among the people of China." This finely equipped building will facilitate a more efficient Bible distribution in the area which Peking serves.

The society also reports multiplying opportunities for larger Scripture distribution in the republic of Latin America. In the West Indies agency, demands for Scriptures were largely from those who were not affiliated with the Churches, a definite campaign resulting in the greatest circulation in ten years. Bible coaches are being used increasingly by the society's agency in the Argentine to reach remote places in Uruguay and Paraguay, that the Bible may be made available to those not yet reached by the Bible workers. In Mexico the demand for Bibles is greater than the supply. Many requests received by the society's agency in Mexico City were from the rural districts, in part the result of the government's establishment of an unprecedented number of schools attended day and night by children and grown people.

In the work of publication, the American Bible Society continues to publish Bibles, Testaments and portions. It reports the completion of its so-called "penny portion" series of the books of the New Testament. The entire New Testament may now be secured in eleven small volumes, each having an artistic colored cover and selling at one cent apiece. The society also issues Scriptures in more than thirty languages in the so-called "diglot" form in which the foreign language and the English appear in parallel columns happily bridging for the foreign-born the gap between the language of his fatherland and the language of his adopted country, as well as serving English-speaking persons who seek to master other languages.

In the Arabic Levant agency, with headquarters at Cairo, publication was increased 250 per cent over that of the previous year. So great was the demand for the Scriptures that not a single copy of the gospel could be procured in Cairo for four or five months. The plates of the Turkish Bible owned by the American Bible Society, have recently been rendered obsolete by the Turkish ruling on the alphabet, whereby the Arabic script must be replaced by Latin characters. Not a vestige of the Arabic script is allowed in the grade schools. Drummers have gone through the streets and villages all over the republic of Turkey calling upon every one between the age of sixteen and forty to attend the special classes opened for them. Thus, millions of people will soon be able to read the Scriptures who could not have done so twelve months ago. The American Bible Society plans to replace as promptly as possible the Turkish Scriptures in a new and approved text in the new script.

According to reports received from the society's ten agencies working in the United States, there are still many homes with no knowledge of the Bible. Throughout the northwest, Bible workers found grown children who had never seen a Bible and had never been inside of a Church. In the Middle West, men visited over 22,000 families and found 3,000 Bibleless homes. These were supplied with the Scriptures. In the Southern States, many young people were reached in sections of the country largely destitute as regards religious and educational opportunities. Reading classes have been formed with the chief textbook a large-print Testament supplied by the society. The pupils range in age from twenty to eighty years. During the year, systematic effort was made by the society's agency working in the Southwest to place a Bible in every home and Church where copies had been lost or destroyed by the water and mud of the Mississippi flood.

Publication, for the first time, of the following translations will be made soon by the society: the four gospels in Kuskokwim, a dialect spoken by an Eskimo tribe in southwestern Alaska; the four gospels in Hopi, for use among the Indians of that name in Arizona; and the Psalms in Bolivian Quechua, the tongue of one of the native peoples of Bolivia. Other translations and revisions of the Scriptures are in process.

The American Bible Society began its ministry of providing embossed Scriptures for the blind in 1853. During the subsequent years, approximately 75,000 volumes of the Scriptures in Braille and other systems have been issued to persons deprived of sight. During 1928 the society was able to reduce the selling price of embossed Scriptures by exactly one-half.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

One of the complaints of this year is lack of work. Many men walk the streets of towns and cities and complain that they cannot get a job of work. On the other hand, many of those who have employment strike for higher wages. Between these two extremes are the people who work on farms; and many of them say, "There is no money in farming." These conditions raise questions that require solution, and Congress tries to settle some of these questions. Farm relief is one of the big questions discussed in Congress, and never solved. Most of these discussions reveal the political rather than agricultural interest, and a tendency to pander to the ignorance or prejudice of others. The farmers of the nation are as capable of managing their affairs and conducting their business as any other class of citizens.

There are two primary reasons why so many leave the farms and go to the cities with the hope of earning more money. One is the advertising of corporations that leads the people in the country to move to town in the hope of living easier and having more money. The other is the false impression made upon the mind of country people when they go to town. They see people dressed well on the streets and it looks as if everybody lived well, had an easy time, and plenty of money. The fact is that many of these people are from the country, dressed up for the day. The truth is that people who work in town work harder than people in the country. Women who keep house in the city do not have as much time to visit and spend long hours with their neighbors as women in the country. Men who operate mills or other business in town have to stick to it closer than men on the farm. They work more days in the year and carry more burdens from their business at night. This nation needs to learn two lessons that are simple and historically true.

The first is, that the nations of the past that went to wreck and perished were carried down through great cities. History records no downfall of agricultural nations. Cities condense the wickedness of mankind and ruin follows. Ninevah and Babylon may serve as examples. The second is a method of farming. Wherever farms cultivate chiefly, yea almost exclusively, money crops, as truck, tobacco, cotton, corn, wheat, the farms have a hard time; but where farms make home supplies the first consideration and then produce what they can for market, it preserves a balance that makes a stable market and keeps homes supplied with what homes need. Besides this, when one gets his year's work on a farm in cash, it slips out of his possession. Any man, farmer, mill man, teacher, preacher, merchant, that gets his year's wage at one time would be in debt.

W. W. STALEY.

FRANKLIN, VA.

Shortly after the World War, the Chicago Evening Post related the account of how General Pershing stood at the tomb of the gallant Frenchman who gave his sword to the American colonies, by saying, "Lafayette, here we are."

And so on Memorial Day we go to the graves of our beloved ones and say, in the words of the general, "Here we are." And as we pause, we are conscious that we can do but little; and in a feeble way we place on their graves flowers of choice and beauty. In this way we endeavor to pay tribute to the nation's dead in a way that speaks of their never-ending work. Just as the fragrance of the flowers make happy the lives of those who pass by, so the lives of those who sleep beneath the sod speak words of beauty to us on Memorial Day. The sentiment expressed by Lieutenant Colonel John McCrae in his poem, "In Flanders' Fields," is applicable in a large degree to those who sleep in our own cemeteries. Let us read it this Memorial Day.

"In Flanders' Fields the poppies blow
Between the crosses, row on row,
That mark our place; and in the sky
The larks, still bravely singing, fly
Scarce heard amid the guns below.

"We are the dead! Short days ago
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
Loved and were loved—and now we lie
In Flanders' Fields.

"Take up our quarrel with the foe;
To you from failing hands we throw
The torch; be yours to hold it high.
If ye break faith with us who die,
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow
In Flanders' Fields."

This is a remarkable bit of the spirit of those who died for us. Each and every one of them expect the living to "carry on." If we fail them, they shall not sleep.

Memorial Day services offer the Church a great opportunity to enlist and re-enlist its members in actual consecrated service in honor and devotion to those who gave so much to the living. The writer has been privileged to deliver four Memorial Day addresses this month. Each one brought him face to face with men and women who were willing to go forward anew, for the sake of their beloved dead, whose graves they covered with flowers.

JOSEPH W. FLX.

WHAT IS A CHRISTIAN?

BY DR. W. A. HARPER.

"The disciples were first called Christians at Antioch."—Acts 11:26.

Every age exhibits a new emphasis on some phase or tenet of the Christian religion. Our age is no exception to this general principle. Perhaps we would not be far amiss to characterize the prevailing viewpoint of our time as a recognition of Christianity as a way of life. The Christian and Congregational Churches are approaching organic union with each other on this foundational exception. With reference to the other religions of the world, our present viewpoint is that they all contain God's truth, and that the Christian way of life is their completion. Our age, in other words, thinks in universal terms, not in segmentary categories. No previous generation has entertained either of these characteristic viewpoints of our day as the outstanding elements in the Christian religion. We may rest assured, and should rejoice in the conviction, that succeeding generations will find still further light bursting from God's word.

Yet, in spite of these shifting emphases, there are certain abiding principles that have characterized the Christian in every generation, and which we may predict will continue to differentiate him from the adherents of other religious systems—certain peculiar, distinguishing attitudes, the unmistakable earmarks of the disciple of Christ.

What are these corner-stones in the edifice of a human life, entitling it to be called Christian?

There are four of them, and they arise severally out of the answers Christianity makes to the four great heart-cries of humanity—answers that satisfy these heart-cries as they are satisfying other religious systems; answers which, because they do satisfy the deepest longings of the human heart, justify us in the conclusion that Christianity is that way of life which shall ultimately prevail throughout the world through the willing homage of all men and races and nations and creeds.

These four answers may be briefly summarized by way of introduction in four words derived from the Greek language, in which the gospels were originally written, but with a content far from Greek in every instance. The first of these words is "theocrat."

1. The Christian a Theocrat.

The Christian is a theocrat—a God-ruled man. He owes respect to human government, but the real laws of his being are God-given, and when there is conflict between human law and what he regards in his heart as the law and will of God, he can have no choice. He must obey God. What can be more natural than to think of man as a theocrat—a God-ruled man?

The Jews carried the theocratic relationship of God to His people into the realm of government, and for a period of more than four centuries, from Joshua to Saul, recognized no ruler but Jehovah and the judges whom He called as temporary dictators in special crises. But even with the devout Hebrew, the plan proved to be unworkable. The social virtue of a people we now know must express itself in organized form. We must also remember that Samuel, when the time had come for a change of government, made plain that the people were wrong not in wishing an organized government, but in demanding a "king like the nations" round about them. The kings of those nations were autocrats and despots. But the people preferred even a ruler like that to the fanaticism of religious zealots who might at any time present themselves as the viceroys of God, and without any credentials.

But theocracy, as applied to the individual life, is the normal experience of every Christian. It has been the experience, too, of our brothers of the other religions of the world. Partial though their conceptions of God have been, still their lives have, in a sense, been under the control of their God. The conception we have of God has tremendous influence over our life.

Some religions conceive fear of God to be the prime virtue of their adherents. Others teach that He is indifferent to the life of His creatures. Some Christians even have represented Him as seated on a great throne, administering justice to His sinful children and unwilling to forgive them till His only begotten Son had died for their sins. Other Christians recognize Him to be our loving Heavenly Father, who sent His only begotten Son to die, that He might show forth the love of His own anguished soul for us, anguished because of our sins and of our misunderstanding of His great love for us. The different types of character that would result from these various conceptions of God are evident to all who recognize theocracy as the normal experience of the worshipping soul.

The Christian conception of God as Father, as loving Heavenly Father, interested vitally and continuously in every life and in all of life, present in every experience of the individual soul, dignifies man and glorifies his life. How sweet and precious is the thought that God is present in all our experiences, not as a critic, not as a judge, but as the loving, companionable Father we have found Him to be! "In Him we live and move and have our being."

In view of this splendid conception of the intimate relationship existing between God and man, what becomes of our distinction between sacred and secular? of our notion as to the special sanctity of certain places and times? of the division of our life into separate compartments, such as physical, mental, moral, social, political, economic, industrial, spiritual? Do not all these concepts get their meaning from their relationship to our life, which "in Him" lives, moves and has its being? Is our life many, or one? We will search in vain for our different categories of life in the Bible. They are not there. Jesus never thought of saving men's souls apart from their bodies. He said He came that we might have life and have it more abundantly. Thank God, men have been increasingly entering into that life ever since, but we have not yet seen it in the fullness of its abundance.

What effect will this theocratic relationship in my life have over me? It will cause me to recognize God in every experience. Whether I labor or play, whether I sleep or sing, whether I testify for Him by word or meditate on His loving-kindness to me, everywhere and everywhen I will "do all to the glory of God." To me, as a Christian, theocracy is the holiest relationship of my being. It keeps me consciously in His presence and exercises not only control over my conduct, but also supplies inspiration for every act of life. I am so glad I am a theocrat.

2. The Christian a Democrat.

In the second place, the Christian is a democrat. Democracy is distinctively and essentially a Christian conception. No other religion ever contained such a doctrine. Jesus of Nazareth was the world's original Democrat. The religion He founded asserts as fundamental tenets, "all ye are brethren" and "ye are members one of another." In no other religion will you discover such democratic teaching. Democracy cannot exist apart from the religious motive as Jesus interprets it.

The world has recently gone through the agony of a war unequalled in magnitude and in horror, "to make the world safe for democracy." Some have essayed to say the slogan should have been "to make democracy safe for the world." If it be real democracy, it is safe for anything, for all the relations of man's life and for his heavenly home.

Democracy—what is it? The mutual recognition of the rights of men? Yea, and far more! The brotherhood of man? Yes, provided its basis be the Fatherhood of God. The brotherhood of man and the Fatherhood of God are the obverse and the reverse of the same spiritual coin. The one cannot be without the other.

Christians are democrats in life's relations because of their common parentage. God is their Father, and with Him there is no respect of person. The humblest savage and the highest-raised ruler of men, are equally dear to Him. Wellington knew this when a poor man came to the altar to pray where he was kneeling, and the temple servant rebuked the poor man for presuming to kneel and pray beside the great duke. The poor man, humiliated, would have arisen had not Wellington placed his arm around him and drawn him to his side, saying: "We are equals here. This is God's altar."

It was the democracy of Christ's utterance that in a very real sense brought Him to the cross. The rulers of the Jews were aristocrats. All aristocrats are abominations, but an ecclesiastical aristocrat is an unspeakable monster, because he claims divine sanction for his arrogance over his fellow-men. When the Galilean pronounced blessings upon the poor, pointed out the hypocrisy of the impertinent regulations of conduct through the "interpretations" the aristocrats had put on the law, held them up to ridicule in the parable of the Pharisee and publican, cleansed His Father's house, and styled them "tenfold children of hell," they had but one of two courses open to them—to resign their positions of authority and become democrats themselves, or to get rid of the annoying upstart teacher. The aristocrats had no trouble deciding which course they ought to pursue. Aristocrats never change their ideas. With them, as in Russia till recently, and as it ever will be, it is a case of kill or be killed. They crucified Jesus, thinking to end the dangerous doctrine He had propounded.

Not so. Democracy is indited in the heart of man. It is destined to overthrow aristocracy in religion, government, industry, social life, the home, everywhere. It may take a million years to do it, or ten million, but what is that? Democracy is the cause of Christ. Upon it He staked His all, and before Him every knee shall bow in grateful appreciation, and every tongue confess thanksgiving for the democracy of love and life and mutual service He taught and lived.

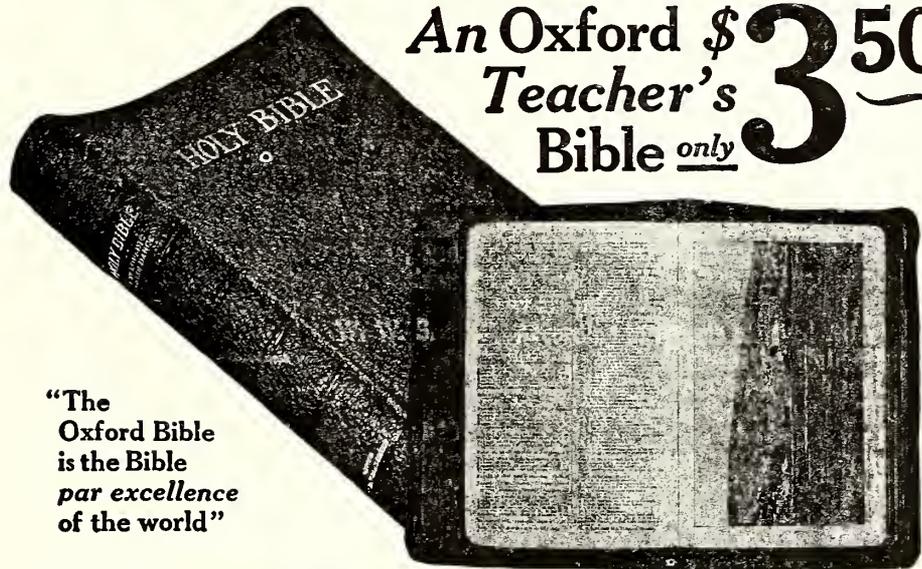

What does democracy require of the Christian? That he should live his brotherhood in all the relations of his life. Nor will it be a mechanical brotherhood to which his life will give expression. Vital concern for his brother, no matter where he may live, of what race he may be a member, of what religion's creed an adherent—vital concern for his brother will cause him as a Christian to share with that brother in every experience of life and he will not be satisfied till every brother of his in the wide, wide world has had equal opportunity with himself to liberty, to life, to the pursuit of life's best, and to the understanding of God's will, and all of his efforts will flow from a heart of love. And when he has ended his service below, he will be ready for citizenship in the democracy of heaven. Aristocrats will have a hard time in the democratic atmosphere of heaven. Democrats may now have a hard time in this life, but heaven will be to them the realization of their hearts' desires, where brotherhood of man and Fatherhood of God find their full and complete fruition in the democracy of the redeemed, and they will esteem it their highest privilege to work for democracy in every relation of this present life. That is what is meant by the coming of Christ's kingdom to the earth.

STANDARDS OF LIVING vs. GIVING.

We need to think of giving, not in terms of obligation or duty, nor yet in terms of something that may be left to undisciplined inclination, but as a privilege of family life. As children of the Father, as followers of Christ who shared completely His Father's purpose, ours is the privilege of partnership. Our Father has placed the material resources of the world in the hands of His children. He has counted on our love and loyalty to use them in keeping with his purpose for the world. And that purpose is handicapped in whatever measure we use these resources for our selfish pleasure without regard to the needs of his other children.

We are the big brothers and sisters of the world—not just of other nations, but of the handicapped everywhere. Most of us were brought up in Christian homes, or at least under the influence of the Church. Most of us have had a chance at a fair education. We have been brought up in surroundings in which decency and honor and right were taken for granted. We have had every opportunity to achieve for ourselves the rich and abundant life that our Father wants every child of His to have.

But there are a multitude of people in the world today who are younger than we are—younger spiritually, morally, socially, economically; people who have never had a fair chance to learn of decency and honor and right; people who have had no real opportunity to know of a Father who wants for his children the best. Handicapped by poverty, by ignorance, by disease, by unwholesome surroundings, these younger brothers and sisters of ours are growing up without a chance. They will get this chance only as those of us who are more privileged share with them in money, love and service.

All these underprivileged people in the world could have a chance if only those of us who call ourselves Christians cared enough. We do anything we want to do in the material realm. We laugh at those who say a thing cannot be done. We build impossible bridges, we dig impossible canals, we put up impossible skyscrapers, and nobody thinks anything of it. What we need is some such daring and consecration in the spiritual realm. The infinite spiritual resources of God are as much at our disposal as are the material resources of the world, if only we cared enough to pay the price of using them. It isn't a lack of means. Every student of the times recognizes that the United States is in peril from excessive wealth. The burden of the world's gold is upon us in the possession of three hundred and thirty billions of the wealth of the world—50 per cent greater than the combined wealth of Great Britain, France, Germany and Italy.

It is from a report of the Secretary of the Treasury that we find it estimated that in 1919 the people of the United States spent twenty-two billion dollars on tobacco, candy, cosmetics, joy-riding, boxing, and other luxuries and non-essentials. The total raised by American Churches of all denominations for that year was less than a half-billion dollars.

This money is not by any means all spent by the wealthy. We are in an era of general prosperity. The trouble is that our standard of living has quite run away with our standard of giving.—From World Friendship, by Brown.

GIVING.

Most of us have the wrong perspective on giving. We look at it from the wrong angle. We consider it a painful or disagreeable duty that must at times be done. We consider it a nuisance, and we do not want too many demands made upon us. The joy of doing without, so a needy soul may be clothed and fed, is a pleasure known to few.

Giving helps no one as much as the giver. The balance is by no means equal. Immediately we feel a sense of upliftment and the kind thoughts of the person helped hover about us as a halo of protection and love.

We should consider giving a privilege, and not a duty. We should be grateful to have the opportunity of rendering service, and not expect to be thanked when we have helped ourselves to a higher understanding of life and its duties. In the final analysis, there is no sacrifice; nothing is ever lost. The bread cast upon the waters does return many fold. When we leave this earth, all we take with us is what we have given away. The question asked will be, not how much money had you, but what did you do with it? So render service constantly. Give not only of your money, but your time, your labor, your knowledge and yourself. It is only through service, and more service, that you will be able to enter the kingdom.

Giving to those you love is a selfish pleasure; giving to those who belong to you is your duty. That is not enough. You must give to those outside the circle, and you will find needy souls not far off. Whether they are worthy or unworthy is not your concern. Passing judgment belongs to a much higher and wiser mind than yours. It is your business to help your brother in need, so that when your hour comes a helping hand will be extended to you.

The value of giving cannot be overestimated. It is priceless, bringing sunshine and happiness into your own and other lives. If you are unhappy and would be happy, give something away. It need not be money; sometimes only a smile, a kind word will help some discouraged brother along the path and sustain him.

Giving is good for the soul. Our souls are developed and fed on service to our fellow-men. It enables and makes us fit to enter the higher life. Do not worry about yourself, fearing that you will not have enough. You will never come to want by sharing. But you certainly are inviting poverty by selfishly hoarding your possessions. Earthly things do not belong to us; they are loaned to us for only a short time. They are loaned to us for a brief earthly sojourn. So let us use them wisely and well. Spiritual growth and character are ours for eternity. So give and give constantly that your spiritual returns will be great.—Selected.

OUR JUBILEE YEAR—EASTER TO EASTER.

"IN HIS STEPS."

TIME: Early summer, A. D. 29.

RECORD: Matt. 16:1-12; Mark 8:11-21; Luke 12:1-3, 54-57.

Jesus and His disciples had left the crowds on the eastern shore of Galilee and had crossed the lake to a point between Magdala and Dalmanutha. In this quiet spot, He is again alone with His disciples until disturbed by his critics, who follow and find Him.

Sunday, June 2 (Matt. 16:1): Fundamentalists and Modernists.—The Pharisees and Sadducees hated each other, and they only agreed in trying to be rid of Jesus, who condemned them both. The Pharisees were the strictest keepers of the law and bent backward in their zeal for its observance and for the following of the "traditions of the elders." The Sadducees, on the other hand, were the modernists of their day, and denied the future life and cared not for either angel or spirit. The Pharisees were extreme legalists. Jesus condemned both with equal fervor, and confused them both when they came asking Him tempting questions to entangle him and to prove their positions before the people. Lord, keep us from Pharasaical legalism and from Sadducean cynicism.

Monday, June 3 (Mark 8:11): Questioning Critics.—We are sure that these hypocritical Pharisees and Sadducees came to Him for no good purpose. They came "tempting Him" with a request by which they hoped to show the people that He was no prophet. They did not want a sign from heaven, but they did want to do anything in their power to discredit Him before the people who followed Him and endangered the false leadership of these hypocrites. Save us, Lord, from self-seeking, blind, unworthy, hypocritical leadership.

Tuesday, June 4 (Mark 8:12): Jesus is Depressed.—What can be more depressing than to give your life out for others and then see and feel their ingratitude and treachery? He had healed their sick, He had made the blind to see, and the deaf to hear, and the lame to walk. He had given them the truth of God and lovingly lived it before them. And now, in trickery and deceit, they ask Him for a "sign from heaven." Such a response to such a glorious gospel of teaching and healing was more than enough to discourage any one, and Jesus, with all His divinity, was human enough to feel the sting and hurt of it. How much has He done for us, and, regardless of it all, do we hurt Him with our insistent seeking for more without thankfulness for what we have known and received of Him?

Wednesday, June 5 (Matt. 16:2-4): Signs of the Times.—Every sunrise and every glorious sunset is a sign from heaven of the greatness and goodness of God. The lightning's flash is a sign of rain, and the thunder's roll is proof that it is nigh.

"We knew it would rain, for all the morn
A spirit on slender ropes of mist
Was lowering his golden buckets down
Into the vapory amethyst
Of marshes and swamps and dismal fens,
Lifting the dew which lay on the flowers,
Scooping the jewels out of the sea
To scatter them over the land in showers."

A thousand "signs of the times" shows that "God's in His heaven and all's right with the world." Jesus mourns for their blindness and ours.

Thursday, June 6 (Mark 8:13): Still Seeking Solitude.—It was no use to cast further "pearls before swine," and Jesus continues His seemingly hopeless quest for a place where He may be alone with those who are willing to believe and understand that He may prepare them for the coming hard days. And so they cross the sea again in their little ship, seeking solitude in the desert places beyond the borders in "Galilee of the Gentiles." May our hearts "tune in" with His in longing for the "secret place" and for fellowship with God and His people.

Friday, June 7 (Mark 8:14-18): A Misunderstood Warning.—Jesus begins to warn them on the way across the sea, regarding the "leaven of the Pharisees," but His disciples, with material-centered minds and hungry bodies, mistake His meaning and think He is chiding them for not bringing sufficient bread with them. He talks to them of the killing leaven of unbelief and sin, but their dull ears and duller hearts are lost in material things and His words reach their hungry bodies but not the hearts at which He aimed. They have eyes but they see not truth, and they have ears but they hear not spirit, and they have memories but they use them to remember their physical hunger. They see not, and hear not, and remember not the highest. How often, Lord, does the almighty dollar or the material desire dim our eyes and deaden our ears to higher things?

Saturday, June 8 (Matt. 16:9-21): The Deadly Leaven.—It was the deadly doctrine of the Pharisees and Sadducees, and not the "leaven of bread," that He was warning them about. It was not hard legalism of the Pharisee and that spiritual cynicism of the Sadducees which killed and buried beyond resurrection the highest things in life and made those who professed much be worse than those who were open enemies of the truth. These pretenders who sought profitable place instead of spiritual power were the greatest real enemies of Jesus and His ministry of love and life. Their profession without possession was the "deadly leaven," and against this He warned His disciples on that day in that little boat in Galilee, and it is of that danger He would warn us today. What an enemy to the gospel of the Son of God is that man or woman who seeks place and power in the Church and kingdom and seeks not God and His righteousness. Such an enemy within the Church is ten times more dangerous than an open enemy outside. Such a Church member hugs to his heart the "deadly leaven" of the enemies of Jesus. Let us pray again the prayer of the Jerusalem missionary conference: "Lord, we pray for the completion of our own conversion."

Meditation.

In our practical application of the Master's life to that of our day, we may well meditate and say: "Search me, O Lord, and know my heart. Try me, and know my thought and see if there is any (such) wicked way in me, and lead me in (Thine own) everlasting way." Are we false, self-seeking leaders in our homes, schools, Churches, and are we teaching or preaching for position and for profit? Is it the service or the salary which calls the loudest? Is there any part or portion of the invective of Jesus which might be directed against us if He were here (as He is) today? Is the "leaven of the Pharisees and Sadducees" working in us?

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

Lesson X—June 9, 1929.

THE STORY OF THE RECHABITES.
(Temperance Lesson.)

GOLDEN TEXT: "We will drink no wine."—Jer. 35:6.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psa. 107:1-9.

LESSON: Jer. 35:1-19.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psa. 107:1-9.

The Rechabites.

The Rechabites were a strange people. They did not live in any settled manner as did their fellow-Palestinians, but went about from place to place like gypsies. They built no houses, sowed no seed, planted no vineyards, but roved about the country, and took care to keep away from the cities. This in itself was enough to set them off from their contemporaries.

But the Rechabites had another very striking characteristic—they never touched wine or any strong drink. They were what we would call "teetotalers," the driest of the dry. They were charter members of a real temperance society.

These two customs or characteristics or customs originated as a protest against the religious and moral situation in Palestine in the days of Jezebel and Ahab. Jonadab, one of the leaders of the Rechabites, loathed the revolting practices connected with Baal worship, and he revolted against the sensualism and the irreligiousness of the cities. He, therefore, put his people under a solemn covenant not to drink wine or to have settled habitations. The Rechabites had adopted these ideals as binding on their lives.

A Practical Object Lesson.

The Rechabites had been driven to Jerusalem by fear of the invading armies of Nebuchadnezzar. Jeremiah, with inspired insight, planned a daring experiment which was to serve as a practical object lesson. He took these tired, worn, frightened people into the temple and bade them drink of wine which he had provided in large quantities. It was a tremendous test and Jeremiah's heart must have been beating wildly when he presented the issue. Needless to say, there was a large crowd around the prophet and this strange-looking group of people. But the Rechabites were men of backbone and grit. Prophet or no prophet, hunger and thirst or no hunger and thirst, live or die, they purposed to stand by their convictions and to be true to their principles. They refused to drink, and gave their reasons therefor. They met the test and gained a sweeping victory.

The thing was too good to be allowed to pass without comment. Jeremiah proceeds, therefore, to apply the moral involved. He suggests that here are men and women who, simply because of a covenant with an ancestor whom they knew only by hearsay, stood firm and fast by the covenant they had made with him, and the principles embodied therein. And yet here was a nation, the chosen people of God, with whom God had made a covenant, and to whom God had repeatedly sent warning through his prophets, going headlong in the way of disobedience and transgression. What irony is summed up in Jeremiah's statement, the sons of Jonadab, the son of Rechab, have performed the commandment of their father, which he commanded them; but this people hath not hearkened unto me. The prophet certainly did not mince words in the matter.

"There was," said Jeremiah, "but one outcome to the matter." Judah must pay the penalty of her transgressions. The character of God would not allow such flagrant and continued disobedience to go unpunished. "I will bring upon Judah and upon all the inhabitants of Jerusalem all the evil that I have pronounced against them." These words were fulfilled in a tragic way, not because God was vindictive, but because God was God.

The Matter of Prohibition.

The point of the whole lesson is, of course, its application to the matter of prohibition. Sunday School teachers and those who read these notes know the arguments for and against prohibition, and it is not necessary to state them here, although the Sunday School teacher who allows this lesson to go by without emphasizing again the economic, hygienic, moral, and spiritual evils involved in alcoholic drinks will not be true to his or her calling. But one thing needs to be noted—the inexorable logic of personal example. The people of Jerusalem might scorn and ridicule these strange people, but there was no answer to the argument which the most powerful of all arguments, the argument of personal example. The prohibition forces have adopted sound strategy in that they have begun a comprehensive campaign of education which is going to change things in another generation. It is high time that we are letting the people, and our boys and girls know some of the facts about the advantages of prohibition, as the wets are spreading in large type the so-called evils of prohibition. Some of the things that the liquor interests do are so childish that they would be real comedy if it were not for the fact that so many people are so gullible that they really take them seriously. When one gets down to the real issue, there is not a single sound argument in favor of intoxicating drinks. The liquor business has had too many opportunities to show that it is sound in principle. It has always been on the wrong side of the moral question.

Some Teaching Points.

1. Sound principles will find application under changing circumstances.
2. Personal example is unanswerable logic.
3. The best way to educate a conscience is to obey it.
4. A resolute purpose is the best asset in time of temptation.
5. Sound education is the ground-work of sound reformation.
6. The liquor question is more than a matter of personal privilege; it is a matter of social responsibility.
7. Total abstinence pays in every way.
8. It takes real courage to live by one's convictions.
9. The matter of prohibition involves too much to be accomplished at once; it is a process that takes time and work and faith.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Sunday, June 9, 1929.

TOPIC: "Thinking Things Through."—Luke 14:28-30; Prov. 16:22-25.

Some Bible Hints.

Without forethought, man would be a helpless animal, and civilization would be impossible (v. 28).

To do things to a finish, we must first think them to a finish; see not only the goal, but the way to reach it (v. 29).

We must learn to think through clearly. Much of our thinking is short-sighted and muddled (v. 22).

Do we think life through? Does the criminal think his act through to an end? All sin is at bottom stupidity (v. 25).

Suggestive Thoughts.

In Christian Endeavor committee work we must make careful plans before trying to work them. Well-planned work is work half done.

The work of an architect is to think through the details of a building. Every enterprise consists of a multitude of details. Little things overlooked make a botched job.

Think through what you are going to do with your life; what trade you are going to follow; how you are going to live. Set a goal and strive to attain it.

Many fall into marriage just as they fall in love, without careful thought. Then they repent at leisure. Think through this matter of a life-partner.

A Few Illustrations.

Think through the matter of your leisure time. Are you spending it aright, or frittering it away? Are you getting lasting benefit from it?

People sometimes pay rent all their lives, because they do not take the trouble to think through the matter of buying a home. Why should this be considered?

Did you ever consider the question of thrift or saving money, and figure out how much you ought to save and what it would yield you in later years? Ask the bank to show you how to do this. Poverty comes frequently from lack of thrift.

The boy who leaves grammar school and grabs a well-paid job fails to think through what he is doing. Education would have fitted him for far better jobs later on.

To Think About.

What special subjects should we think through? What does "look before you leap" mean? Is thoughtlessness a sin? Why?

MISTAKES YOU MAKE.

- To attempt to set up your own standards of right and wrong.
- To try to measure the enjoyment of others by your own.
- To expect uniformity of opinion in this world.
- To fail to make allowance for inexperience.
- To endeavor to mold all dispositions alike.
- Not to yield to unimportant trifles.
- To worry ourselves and others about what cannot be helped.
- Not to help everybody, however, whenever and wherever we can.
- To consider anything impossible that we cannot ourselves perform.
- To believe only what our finite minds can grasp.
- Not to make allowance for the weakness of others.
- To estimate by some outside quality when it is that within that makes the man.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE,
One of Our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MONDAY.

THE CALL OF THE OTHER WORLD.

"To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me on my throne."—Rev. 3:21.

Lots of folks have a call to the heavenward way without realizing it. Moses got his in the call to lead his people out of bondage. Elijah got his in silence, meditation and nature. Paul got his in a supernatural demonstration. We have ours. Every prompting has in it the question, "Is it right?" or "Is it wrong?" "Shall I," or "Shall I not?" All life calls for our manhood. Our ambitions call for power. Our likings call for pleasure. We ought to know how to settle the question of right and wrong as it should be settled. We ought both to have the desire for and the power to conserve our best manhood. We ought to be able to find that there is as much pleasure in contemplations of Christianity as our pleasures; that there is eternal delight in perpetual service rendered our God. All this Jesus promises us, and that if we will "Ye shall also sit upon the twelve thrones" of His glory.

Prayer.—O Jesus, keep us every day this day unto a sensitiveness of life's higher calls. Renew Thy grace unto us from hour to hour. Teach us how to support our souls by the gospel and nourish us by Thy body and blood. Amen.

TUESDAY.

DOES GOD LOVE EVERYBODY.

"God is love."—1 John 4:7.

"For God so loved the world . . ."—Jno. 3:16.

Does God love everybody? It is very hard to believe so when we contemplate the millions of the world and their willful iniquity. To bring ourselves to believe that He loves the immoral, the perpetual drunkard, the widow's enemy, the brutal husband, the murder of women and children, the profaner of His name—is hard for us to conceive. A minister went slumming the other day with an officer in a foreign city. In thirty minutes he saw over three hundred prostitutes, many of them beautiful women. At their doors men were lined up awaiting their call. One of them was so systematic that she entertained forty-five callers in four hours. Can God love men and women like that? It is hard to think so. Yet, the hardest thing is for these sinners to believe that God loves them.

First of all, we must answer, He does! His attitude toward the woman at the well, toward Mary of Magdella, toward the one caught in adultery, are single instances of its proof. His invitation to "all shall be saved" warrants it. And when we are told by those who know these women that they are good women in many respects, gentle, kind, law-abiding, lovers of children, benefactors of the poor and charitable enterprises, we are reminded that these things represent the image of God in them, and He died to save them, and begs to save them now—our hearts go out more in sorrow of such a prostitution of womanhood and manhood, and we make a greater prayer for them and His will to come to them.

God was in Christ reconciling men unto Himself, and we thank God that His love is all satisfying to any who will quit sin and follow Him.

Prayer.—O Lord, through Thy son, who was dead but is now above forevermore, send Thy love into our lives with great power. Send it into the world and save it from its iniquity. Be Thou the first to meet our souls each day and draw us into close communion with Thee all the way. Have mercy upon Thy prodigal children and hasten Thy reign. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

A SQUARE MAN.

"Quit you like men."—1 Cor. 16:13.

"If I have wrongfully exacted ought of any man, I will restore fourfold."—Luke 19:8.

Some men are no more than about what a certain boy defined man to be: "An animal split in the middle and walks on the split end." Shakespeare's Portia says: "Well, God made him so; let aim pass as a man." Pope said, "An honest man is the noblest work of God."

We are men of body, intellect, emotion, capacity for manhood. Solomon said, "God hath made man upright, but he has sought out many inventions."

God said to Isaiah, "I have created him for my glory." The psalmist said that we are but a little lower than the angels.

Let us not prostitute this manhood He gives us to unholy ends, but stand and go forward four-square to the world and God.

Prayer.—Dear Father, everything good we have comes from Thee. We pray for the consecration to cast our every concern on Thee, and we take the name of Jesus with us all the way. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE SIN OF IMPATIENCE.

"In your patience, possess ye your souls."—Luke 21:19.

"Be patient toward all men."—Heb. 6:15.

There were grounds for our ugly feelings and reason for our conduct. But patience is a Christian virtue, and the only opportunity one has to exercise this virtue and make it a real quality of life lies in the reason for impatience. Patience is the only antidote to impatience.

It is easy for us to take sides with ourselves; but if we are to act like the unsaved individual, then what are we saved from and where is the glory? If the holy people are to fret as they did before they became holy, what is the value of being holy? This is the field of Satan. His plans succeed better here than anywhere else.

Prayer.—Dear Lord, in Thy strength shall we live in holiness and patience. Help us, Lord, to believe and trust. We pray for Thy grace in our times of impatience and sin. Keep us from flying the track and harmonize our souls and others. Amen.

FRIDAY.

ATONEMENT.

"At the end of the ages, hath He been manifested to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself."—Heb. 9:26.

By His sacrifice He has become our example; we are justified in love and free from law. He is our Mediator and Priest, our Brother and Saviour. Can we imagine anything more harmonious?

As a ruler, God is a King and does all things well; as a father, He protects us all, His children, in love and mercy. What can we do but acknowledge Him and swear our love and loyalty forever.

Prayer.—Glory be to Thee, O God. Give us Thy Spirit and let us declare Thee in our hearts forever. Amen.

SATURDAY.

CONQUERING THE WORLD.

"He that is born of God overcometh the world."—1 John 5:4.

To conquer the world is a big thing—so big that our minds do not grasp it, and we tend to disbelieve. But should we?

As far as we are concerned, our world is limited to the circle of our life-touch, within a radius comparable to our mental grasp. We can see from every-day life that it is within the power of every one to be victor over all untoward circumstances and bear a triumphant spirit. Is it not also clear that the kingdom of God is righteousness and as to the degree that righteousness predominates through us we are conquerors. This is the promise to the Christian world.

Question: Are we overcoming, or is the world overcoming us? We love the world indeed, but why not love it to glory of the good, and not to add to its abasement?

Prayer.—Dear Lord, our Father, help us to keep steadily in view Thy words and Thy power and Thy promises. O Holy Spirit, teach us to defend the proper meaning and use of the baptism which is the washing unto a complete regeneration. Amen.

SUNDAY.

WILL RELIGION DO WHAT IT CLAIMS TO DO?

"And having been made perfect, He became unto all them that obeyed Him the Author of eternal salvation."—Heb. 5:9.

Yes. There is not a spot on earth of security, peace and safety that religion did not go there first.

We are told of some men who once visited a cannibal island. They came to extremities and were about to starve. One decided that he had as well furnish a square meal to a cannibal as starve to death. He went out on a reconnoitering expedition. From a high eminence in the distance he saw in a cluster of huts a Church tower. He returned to camp and said, "Men, I think we are safe." "Why?" came the question. "Because I saw a Church."

We cannot vouch for the validity of the story, but we can vouch for the truth that everything good has come from God, and that Christianity makes the world safe for us to live in. In this, it has done more for the good of the world than ordinarily is acknowledged.

Prayer.—We thank Thee, our Father, that the world is putting on Christ. O count us as Thy children and heirs to all righteousness and Thy throne. Amen.

mental headquarters and explain to the commanding officer why the duty assigned him has not been fulfilled." It worked in the army, but there was the power of a courtmartial and the possibility of being shot at sunrise, to help shake the faith in the doctrine of procrastination. It is doubtful that it would produce results among members of Church organizations who are firm believers in the doctrine of procrastination. There is, however, always the last resort of the preacher, announcing a series, let us say, of ten sermons dealing with the doctrine of procrastination.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

Several Sunday Schools that have not been contributing have mailed us check for back dues, and their names have been entered on our list of monthly contributors. We want to be able to report to you the first of July, when the year is half out, that all Sunday Schools are making a monthly offering. That would be a fine report, wouldn't it? I wish every Sunday School in the Southern Christian Convention would make a monthly offering to help the Christian Orphanage in its work of love and charity. It would be encouraging indeed. Every Sunday School should assume some of the joy of giving to help the fatherless.

ORPHANAGE HAS BRIGHT PUPILS.

Dear Dr. Atkinson:

As a member of the board of trustees of the Christian Orphanage, at Elon College, it affords me great pleasure to send you the reports of Misses Ethel Boone and Nannie M. Roberts for the session just closed. I have seen many reports in my life, but I have never seen but one that was better than these enclosed.

I am very anxious that the members of the Christian denomination, and also our friends, should see these reports, and if you have the space in THE SUN, I am going to ask that you print them, giving the name of the school, etc., in next week's issue.

The board of trustees met in special session on yesterday, and I had the pleasure of meeting these girls as well as many others.

I feel very proud of these girls, and I want our denomination to know about them.

Very truly,

Suffolk, Va.

J. M. DARDEN.

The reports submitted by Mr. Darden are those of Ethel Boone and Nannie M. Roberts, Orphanage pupils in Alamance County Public School, at Elon, W. B. Ferrell, principal, and Lois W. Earnhardt, grade teacher. They are as follows:

THE JOY OF BEING.

Whither my road is leading me,
Perhaps I do not know;
But, oh, the path is fair to see,
And sweet the winds that blow!
In sun or storm, by day or night,
If skies are lowering or bright,
The highroad holds so much delight,
I run with heart aglow.

The lanes may thorny be, and lead
To steep heart-breaking high;
The forests wild with bush and weed,
My strength may mortify;
Yet, with resolve to do and dare,
I hold within my soul small care
For hazards spread o'er pathways where
The goals worth winning lie.

It is enough to live and plan,
To joy in earth and sea;
To do what things a mortal can
With spirit blithe and free;
To prove one's strength of soul, and will
To meet and overcome the ill,
And in the end to gain the thrill
Of manful mastery!

—John Kendrick Bangs.

A school of missions in each Church would do more to create missionary interest and service than many sermons.

OBITUARIES.

PRESTON.

Deacon Thomas Jefferson Preston was called from labor to reward April 6th, at the ripe age of seventy years, two months and six days. He was born February 12, 1859, and was married to Winona Roberson in 1883. Unto this union were born two daughters, Clarice who preceded him to the grave twenty-three years, and Mrs. J. W. Strader, of Belew Creek. He leaves also seven grandchildren—Thyra, Clara, Ethelene, Doris, Thomas Preston, Marshall, and Julia Maude Strader; three brothers—A. W. Preston and J. E. Preston, of Belew Creek, and R. S. Preston, of Winstou-Salem; one sister, Mrs. Amanda Murray, of Walnut Cove, N. C.

Bro. Preston united with Belew Creek Christian Church in 1894 under the pastoral charge of Rev. J. W. Holt, who organized the Church. He served as treasurer of the Church for thirty years and faithfully discharged every duty assigned to him during this period. "Uuele Tom," as he was fondly called, was regular in his attendance at the Church and Sunday School and loyal to the Church and denomination of which he was a member. He was gentle in disposition, loving in spirit, unassuming in Christian life and faithful in service. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth; Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them."

Life's labor done,
Life's blessings all enjoyed,
Serenely to his final rest he passed,
While the soft memories of his virtues
Yet linger like twilight hues
When the bright sun is set.

Funeral services were conducted by the pastor, assisted by Rev. G. C. Crutchfield, a former pastor, and attended by a large concourse of loving friends from far and near.
W. C. WICKER.

BRAY.

Mrs. Lola Younger Bray, daughter of P. J. and L. E. Younger, was born March 8, 1880, and died May 16, 1929, age 49 years, two months and eight days. At about the age of twelve she made a public profession of faith in Christ and joined McKendrie M. E. Church in Halifax County, Va., and later transferred membership to Liberty Christian Church.

On November 17, 1903, she was married to John H. Bray, and to them were born seven children. Three died in infancy. The surviving ones are Younger A. Bray, Mrs. Fulton Hughes, Mrs. Jas. Loftis, and Miss Ruth Bray. She is survived also by her husband, Deacon John H. Bray, of Liberty Church; six brothers and one sister.

Sister Bray had suffered a good deal for the past few years. She was conscious to the time of her departure and gave a strong testimony to her family of her faith in her Saviour and the assurance she had of entering into rest.

The funeral and burial were at her Church, Liberty, Halifax, on the afternoon of May 17th, by the writer and Rev.

Mr. Berford, of the M. E. Church. The crowd at the funeral was one of the largest ever gathered at this Church, and the floral offerings were numerous and beautiful. Bro. Bray and the surviving members of his family have the deepest sympathy and prayers of the entire community.

C. E. NEWMAN.

EVERETT.

Deacon Elisha Lee Everett, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Elisha Lee Everett, Sr., was born in Nausemond County, Va., near Sleepy Hole. With the exception of a few years spent in Williamsburg, Va., he had spent his entire life in this county. He made a profession of religion and united with Berea Christian Church when a young man, and remained a faithful member until his death, on Thursday, April 11, 1929, at the age of 68 years. He had been for several years an honored deacon of his Church, and he filled this office with credit to himself and to the satisfaction of the Church.

Whereas, we are called upon to sustain this great loss in Berea Christian Church and community; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That this Church hereby wishes to record a sincere appreciation of his life as a Christian. He was cheerful, frank, friendly and faithful. His genial manner, his kind disposition, his generous spirit won him a high place in the regard of his large circle of friends.

2. That this Church extend sincere sympathy to all the members of his family, and pray for the Father's help in this hour of great bereavement.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be entered upon the records of this Church, of which he was for many years secretary; a copy sent to the family of our deceased brother, and a copy sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

Done by order of Berea, Nausemond, Christian Church, on April 18, 1929.

MARRIAGES

JONES—REEKER.

A marriage of unusual interest took place at my home, Virgilina, Va., on Saturday P. M., 3 o'clock, May 4, 1929, when Miss Mary Zelma Reeker became the bride of Mr. Otis Dewey Jones. The ring ceremony was used. Following the marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Jones motored to Danville, Va., to spend the week-end with Mr. Jones' sister, Mrs. M. C. Walton.

Mr. Jones, a former Elon student, for years has been a faithful employee here in the government postal service. Mrs. Jones is the daughter of James D. Reeker, of South Hill, Va., and for three years has been at the head of the primary department of the Virgilina School. She is also one of the teachers in Union Christian Sunday School. They will make their home in Virgilina, where each has a host of friends, all wishing them happiness and prosperity.

CORNELL—SAUNDERS.

On Wednesday, May 1st, at the home of Mr. F. M. Carnell, of Carthage, N. C.,

Miss Saunders is the oldest daughter of H. B. Saunders, of Spies, N. C., and is the organist for three Churches—Christian, Presbyterian, and Congregationalist—and holds membership in Brown's Chapel and is secretary of the Church. She is an accomplished young lady and a public school teacher of Moore County.

A large number of friends and acquaintances gathered to witness the ceremony. We wish for them a long and happy life.

FOR AMERICAN PUBLIC.—

Dr. Joseph Fort Newton has been asked to act as the American correspondent of the Christian World, London, England, and will probably accept. The post will afford a large opportunity to interpret American religious life to the people of Great Britain. Dr. Newton is pastor of the Memorial Church of St. Paul, Overbrook, Philadelphia, Pa. He is well known by his many books, and particularly by his selections of the sermons of the year which he made until recently when he was compelled to relinquish that fine service for the American public.—Ex.

TELEVISION FOR CHINA.—

When television has been developed into a system as the telegraph has been, it will then be possible for the Chinese to have the benefit of transmitting messages rapidly in their own language. We have all doubtless looked at the queer markings on a Chinese laundry ticket and wondered what they might mean. Whatever they may mean, nobody has ever devised a way to translate a message written in such characters into the Morse code. Therefore, it has been impossible to send messages written in Chinese by telegraph. But since television has been made possible, a picture of the Chinese message can be sent by wire and the Chinaman can figure out for himself what it means. Man's ingenuity is gradually conquering all the barriers that stand in the way of man's communication with his fellowmen.

REPARATIONS SETTLEMENT.—

Indications now give grounds for the satisfactory settlement of the reparations' question between German and allied representatives. For months the Young commission has been seeking an agreement as to the amount which Germany must pay to the allied powers and the terms upon which the settlement shall be made. At one time there was so great a discrepancy between the figures stipulated by the allies and those which Germany was willing to accept that any agreement seemed impossible. It now appears that an agreement has been reached upon the main issues involved. The final terms of settlement have not been made public at this time. The amounts involved are so large that they have little meaning to the average individual. But concerning the entire reparations question, one fact ought to be so plainly demonstrated that no one can miss it. That is the idea that any vital question can be settled by war. For four years the war raged, and ten million of lives were sacrificed upon the altar of the god of war. Representatives of the warring nations met at the Paris Peace Conference to determine the price which Germany was to pay for the destruction which had been wrought. But hardly were the signatures to the treaty dry before it was evident to many discerning minds that the terms forced upon Germany were impossible. A few years passed and the issue was again brought before the Dawes Commission, and the best possible solution in the light of the facts then obtainable was agreed upon. Ten years after the signing of the Treaty of Versailles the whole question is again up for settlement. It is becoming increasingly apparent that international questions cannot be settled by might, or according to the wishes of that nation which has demonstrated the superiority of its armed forces. Such questions can be settled in the light of economic facts and the principles of right and justice. Some day nations will learn that war never settles anything save the fate of thousands of those who bear arms.

TEN SOCIAL JUSTICE COMMANDMENTS.—

1. I am the Lord thy God, but thou shalt remember that I am also the God of all the earth. I have no favorite children. The negro and the Hindu, Chinese, Japanese, Russian and Mexican are all my beloved children.
2. Thou shalt not measure a city's greatness by its population or its bank clearings alone, but also by its low infant mortality, its homes, playgrounds, libraries, schools and hospitals, and its low record for bootlegging, prostitution, robbery, and murder.
3. Thou shalt remember that no civilization can rise above the level of its respect for and ideals of womanhood.
4. Thou shalt remember thine own sins and build no prisons for revenge and punishment, but make thy courts clinics for the soul and thy jails hospitals for moral disease.
5. Thou shalt remember that the end-product of industry is not goods or dividends, but the kind of men and women whose lives are molded by that industry.
6. Thou shalt press on from political democracy toward industrial democracy, remembering that no man is good enough or wise enough to govern another man without his consent, and that, in addition to a living wage, every man craves a reasonable share in determining the conditions under which he labors.
7. Thou shalt outlaw war and make no threatening gestures either with great navies or vast military preparations against thy neighbor.
8. Thou shalt honor men for character and service alone, and dishonor none because of race, color or previous condition of servitude.
9. Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor by malicious propaganda or colored news, or by calling him contemptuous names, such as "Dago," "Chink," "Jap," "Wop," "Nigger," or "Sheeny."
10. Thou shalt remember that when thine own ancestors were savages and barbarians, other men brought them the saving and civilizing Christian gospel. Now that thou art rich and prosperous, beware lest thou export to Asia and Africa only thy science and efficiency, thy warships, goods and moving-picture films, and forget the Christian message and the Christ-like spirit also.—Literary Digest.

MOVING TOWARD PEACE.—

Mexico seems to be seeking the ways of peace. The revolution against the government has served the purpose of strengthening the power of the federal government. Even before the differences between the contending factions are all ironed out, President Portes Gill is turning his attention to other matters that pertain to the development and welfare of the nation. A move is now on foot to settle the differences between the Mexican government and the Roman Catholic Church. Mexico is predominantly Roman Catholic in its religion. But for more than two years virtually all of the Roman Catholic Churches of the country have been closed. Mexico's trouble with the Roman Catholic Church seems to be due to two principal causes: ecclesiastical interference in political affairs, and the enormous amount of land and other property held by the Church in Mexico. Under the authority of recent constitutional amendments, the Mexican government has taken over this Church property and now holds it under governmental control. The refusal to recognize the authority of the government caused the banishment of foreign Church officials and the closing of the Churches.

Shortly after President Gill assumed his duties, he issued a decree which made possible the opening of the Cathedral at Mexico City. Such services as were permitted were of a lay character, and under the supervision of a committee of laymen. The President has made known his willingness to enter into overtures with the Holy See, looking toward a satisfactory solution of the present difficulties. Archbishop Ruiz has been appointed as representative of the Roman Catholic Church to confer with President Gill.

No matter what may be one's convictions as to the principles involved in the quarrel, every religiously inclined individual must sympathize with the thousands of devout Catholics who have been deprived of the ministrations of the Church. It would be a heart-breaking catastrophe to Protestants thus to be deprived of all religious ministrations. Because of the sacramental relationship of the Church to its members, it is a far greater deprivation to the Catholic. The individual Catholic member is in no way responsible for the quarrel that exists between his Church and his government; but in the greatest spiritual crises of his life he is deprived of the only source which he knows wherein lies spiritual hope, consolation and blessings. If for no other reason than the purely humanitarian, it is to be earnestly hoped that a solution of the difficulties may be found.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Rev. G. Staley Hunt, Wadley, Ala., who sent to THE CHRISTIAN SUN the program of the Sunday School Convention to be held at Wadley Christian Church, advises that a mistake was made in the date, and that the date of meeting is not June 14th, as he inadvertently gave it and as we printed it, but is Sunday, June 9th. Those interested should take note of this date.

From the Daily News-Record, Harrisonburg, Va.: "The Christian pastorate, being served by Rev. Joe French, late of Alabama, has been officially designated as the Rockingham-Page Christian pastorate and embraces six Churches, three in each county. In Rockingham are Bethlehem, Mayland and Concord; in Page are St. Peter's, Mt. Lebanon and East Liberty, near Shenandoah City. A revival is now in progress at East Liberty."

Writing under date May 29th, Rev. G. D. Hunt says: "I am at La Grange, Ga., with Rev. C. W. Hanson, in a revival which began last Sunday night. The meeting is progressing in a fine way; large congregations and much interest in every service. There were fully one hundred or more who came to the altar last evening seeking some place to lay their burdens. I am expecting a great service. The people are very attentive to the Word, and the spirit is fine."

On Sunday evening, May 12th, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Davis, of Norfolk, Va., conducted a most interesting and inspiring service in the Franklin Christian Church. Mr. and Mrs. Davis came to the Church under the direction of Bro. J. M. Darden, of Suffolk, who is devoting much of his time to helping these Christian workers secure opportunities for preaching the gospel through the medium of Sam's remarkable playing of the old songs and the devotional messages, solos and prayers of Mrs. Davis.

Mr. P. D. Rudd, a graduate of Elon College and a successful teacher of some years, and Mrs. Alice Barrett Rudd, have spent a year in the Medical College of Virginia, at Richmond, in which college Brother Rudd is taking the medical course, preparing to be a physician, and his wife, Alice, as teacher of English in the department of pharmacy. They have had a most agreeable and profitable year in Richmond, and have taken a cottage at Brown Summit, near Bro. Rudd's former home, for the summer.

Dr. L. E. Smith, President of the Southern Christian Convention, Norfolk, Va., and Dr. W. A. Harper, president of Elon College, are our Southern representatives sent to the National Council of Congregational Churches, meeting this week in Detroit, Mich. The vote is to be taken at this Convention on the union of Congregationalists and Christians. Some other delegates and messengers from the South were invited, but so far we have learned these have been the only two of our number attending the council. Should this National Council of Congregational Churches vote in favor of the merger, our own General Convention is to vote on the same at Piqua, Ohio, next October.

The women of the Valley of Virginia Conference are exceedingly anxious to have a large attendance at their missionary rallies—Palmyra Church, Tuesday, June 11th; Bethlehem, Wednesday, June 12th; Mt. Lebanon, Saturday, June 15th; Mt. Olivet (G), Sunday, June 16th. It is greatly to be desired that the pastors also shall be present and lend their aid and counsel to the meetings. The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Conference meets at Newport Church, 10 A. M., Thursday, June 13th, and continues through Friday, June 14th. Brother Larrick expects a largely attended and an interesting Convention. The Mission Secretary, J. O. Atkinson, expects to attend the rallies and the Convention.

TELEGRAM.

Please state in this week's SUN the following: Miss Pattie Coghill will begin work with Board of Christian Education June 10th. Any Church or Churches desiring her help should write her at Waverly, Va., care of Rev. F. C. Lester.

THE SUN LETTER.

When we took charge of THE CHRISTIAN SUN as its circulation manager, we set for our goal $4,000 for the first year. Up to June 1st we have collected $3,256.18. You can readily see we still lack $743.82 being to our goal. Our first year will end July 1st. We have just one month in which to collect enough for THE SUN to make up this amount.

In order to reach this goal we will continue our proposition to give a club of five new subscribers for $7.50. Let every Church get busy and send in a club. If every Church would send in a club, we would run over the goal. If 100 Churches would send in a club, we would reach the goal. If 372 subscribers would send in their renewal, we would reach the goal. How many will now help me during the month of June?

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Elon College, N. C. Circulation Manager.

DR. WHITE GOES AS MISSIONARY.

The following will be of interest to many SUN readers, as Dr. White is the son of Deacon M. J. W. White, Christian Temple, Norfolk, a graduate of Elon College and of the University of Virginia. He goes as a medical missionary under the auspices and pay of the Congregational Board of Missions, a fact for which CHRISTIAN SUN readers and the entire Christian denomination will be grateful, since the funds were not available at the present to send out Dr. White by the Mission Board of the Christian Church. The following facts pertain to his immediate going out:

Dr. White and his good wife will be commissioned in Dr. W. G. Sargent's Church, the Elmwood Christian Church, of Providence, R. I., on Sunday, June 2, 1929, and they, with twenty-four other out-going missionaries, will sail on the U. S. S. Taft from San Francisco Calif., on August 16th.

"Dr. Smith had hoped that this might have taken place in the Christian Temple, but they have to attend a conference in Boston, June 11th to 13th.

"They will be in Norfolk the last half of July before they sail for the Philippines."

WINCHESTER, VA.

It was our privilege to attend the first of the district missionary rallies of this Conference Sunday afternoon, the 26th. It was held with the Timber Ridge Church, under the direction of Mrs. Fred Oates, district leader, who presided. Mrs. Eula Hook Sale, as secretary, recorded the work of the meeting.

A splendid program had been arranged which was well carried out. It consisted of interesting talks by Miss Lillian Johnson, Mrs. Walter Oates and Mrs. Marvin Seldon. The writer spoke of our missionaries and the work in Japan and Porto Rico. Other interesting and enjoyable features were a monologue, "Angelina Goes to College," by Mrs. B. W. Richards; a solo, by Miss Evelyn Seldon; a negro spiritual, by Messrs. J. E. Eaton, Loy Hook and R. L. Williamson, and a duet by Misses Irene and Elsie Mathews.

The splendid musical program of the meeting was under the direction of Bro. J. E. Eaton. Mrs. Roy Larrick, Conference president, spoke of the work in general and of the rallies to be held in particular. She spoke encouragingly of the work. Under her vigorous and efficient leadership with the splendid co-operation of the secretary, Mrs. B. F. Frank, and the treasurer, Miss Verdie Showalter, the cause of missions seems to be gaining ground very rapidly, and we are praying for a mighty awakening among our people.

Interest in our work here seems to be increasing, with larger congregations than when we came. Winchester is growing rapidly, and we earnestly desire the prayers of the brotherhood that our Church here may be able to continue to minister in a spiritual way to the people whom she should serve.

R. L. WILLIAMSON.

DENDRON, VA.

The great Founder of Christianity came from heaven—that magnificent abode; from the throne of the King—to this fallen, sin-cursed world. Why did Christ, the pure, holy Son of God come to earth? The answer is that our Blessed Lord had as His purpose for coming into the world to give us a supreme revelation of the true character of Almighty God, our Heavenly Father, the Creator, the Proprietor, and Governor of the boundless universe—the God of boundless love, the Framers of our bodies, and the Father of our spirits. The God of love, foreseeing the ruined condition of man, devised the plan of redemption, and entered into covenant with His only begotten Son to become the vicarious sacrifice for our sins, that He might become the Reconciler and Redeemer. Therefore, Christ, our High Priest, came to the world to live, labor, deny Himself, and finally to offer Himself, without spot, to God as our sacrifice and payment of eternal justice for our sins.

The one supreme thought of His beautiful life and passion, was the soul—the immortal soul. His greatest purpose, therefore, in coming to this world was "to save sinners," and to teach us how to live pure, clean, helpful, wholesome lives. Our Lord set before us a standard of virtue, purity, sobriety, integrity, patience, compassion, loyalty and love which we should endeavor to attain. The life of Jesus Christ, Lord God, the sympathizing Friend and Counselor of humanity was one sweet benediction of self-forgetfulness, one exquisite example of the holy dignity of service. The greatness of our Redeemer was His heart. It was full of compassion, and therefore His hand was ever ready to relieve human suffering. If His matchless spirit dwells in you, then you are compelled to put yourself in living contact and sympathy with the lost, the suffering, the distressed, and the sorrowful. You will serve in the spirit of the Master who "went about doing good." I plead with you, dear friend, to aspire to fellowship with our Lord in His program to lift this world from sin, degradation and ruin; to righteousness, peace and joy! Yes, all disciples of the Master should copy His life, spirit, and love, and work for the gracious ends for which He lived and died. Remember, the more of self-forgetfulness, the more of blessedness. Be true to Christ.

REV. JOSEPH W. FIX, Preacher.

THE CENTRALITY OF JESUS.

BY REV. ALFRED W. HURST.

(Baccalaureate sermon, delivered at Elon College, Sunday, May 26th, by Rev. Alfred W. Hurst, president of Palmer College, Albany, Mo.)

A great American preacher was speaking to a group of students some time ago on the eternal pre-eminence of Christ. In the course of his address there appeared this highly suggestive sentence: "Jesus is always the center of any picture of which He is a part; you cannot keep Him out of the center of the picture." That sentence was the shock that crystallized for me a great fact: The Centrality of Jesus.

I.

In the first place, we notice that Jesus is at the center of the New Testament picture. Indeed, there would have been no New Testament at all had it not been for Jesus. Therefore, it is not difficult to see why He is central in the New Testament picture of Christianity. He is the important Person in it all. The other figures are there because He is there.

Jesus' family is there because He is there. No other member of the family did anything for which he should be remembered, so far as we know. Mary has been worshiped and she has occupied a prominent place in historic Christianity, but even she is there because she was the mother of this Man Jesus. As a baby, He was in the center of the picture as the shepherds and the wise men gathered around in worship and adoration. As a youth in Jerusalem, He stood in the midst of the doctors and lawyers and caused them to marvel at His understanding. As a man, He continued to hold the center of the picture. Nazareth emerged into the consciousness of the world because that was His home. Of all who came to be baptized of John in the Jordan, Christ, on whom the special sign of God's approval rested, was the central figure. Even the wilderness and the desert took on a new meaning, because in the wilderness He fought great battles with the tempter, and in the desert places He spent much time in retirement alone with God.

The apostles were noble men, but it is not likely they would have been remembered had they not taken up their cross and followed Jesus. The Last Supper with the disciples was instituted by Jesus and is observed today, not in remembrance of the apostles but in remembrance of Jesus. He was the central figure in Gethsemane, and on Calvary He was crucified between two thieves. In life and in death, in the hour of honor and in the hour of shameful mistreatment, He was the central figure. After his triumph over death "He stood in the midst of His disciples"; and on Mt. Olivet He was the central, commanding figure as He said, "Go ye." In the succeeding days and years they looked for Him to come again—He was the center of their hopes for a new kingdom.

Jesus was in the center of the New Testament picture. In spite of the efforts of His enemies, He could not be kept out of the center of the picture.

II.

In the second place, Jesus has always dominated the historical Christian community. This has been true in every century of Christian history. This is evidenced by the place He has held in the creeds of Christendom, in art, in theological treatises, in hymns, in sermons, and in the lives of individual members of the Christian community.

The creeds have not always done Christ and His cause justice, many of us think, but nevertheless he was their inspiration and about Him the great affirmations of the creeds center. He has been the central figure of which He was a part. Think of the great works of De Vinci, Michelangelo, and other master-artists of the Christian era! Jesus is in the center of the picture.

Jesus is both the inspiration and the object of most of the great classic hymns of the Church. Go through them if you will: "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," "Beneath the Cross of Jesus I Feign Would Take My Stand," "In the Cross of Christ I Glory," "Lord Jesus Christ, for Love of Thee," "O Master, Let Me Walk with Thee?" The artists and hymn-writers could not ignore Jesus, because He entered too vitally into the religious experience of men and women. He has been the controlling factor in the lives of countless millions of people. It is inspiring to see St. Francis of Assisi leave his father's home and more pleasant associations to become a little brother to the poor, all because he loved Jesus supremely; or to see Carey and Judson, in more recent times, along with a great host of missionaries, leave home to carry the gospel of Christ to the ends of the earth. Let us not forget that we have some contemporaries who are no less loyal to the Lord Jesus Christ. Can there be anything more inspiring than the decision of Albert Schweitzer to resign his professorship in Strassburg after having attained a place of recognized leadership as a New Testament scholar and professor of theology, to go out to Central Africa to bring the benefits of modern medical science to the natives who were dying by the hundreds of the sleeping sickness? These men are but types of millions who have been captured by the Christ. He stands at the center of the historic Christian community easily as the dominant figure. He stands out as the towering peak in the mountain range.

III.

Jesus was in the center of the New Testament picture and has dominated the Christian community in every century. Will he continue to dominate the picture? If so, in what ways?

It is interesting and encouraging to observe the continued interest in Jesus, which indeed is growing instead of declining or even remaining constant. There are indications, however, that in the future the chief interest in Jesus will not be that of the creeds and art and theology. Less attention will be given to his nature and more attention to other elements which have not been emphasized so much in the past. Let us consider some of the newer elements of interest.

In the first place, greater importance will be given to his teachings. Have you ever noticed that the creeds have not emphasized his teachings at all and very little of his life? In the estimation of those who wrote the creeds, Jesus' birth, death, resurrection, and second coming were important; but, if we are to argue from silence, His life and teachings were of no value. In the great Apostles' Creed there is nothing between the statement that He was "born of the Virgin Mary" and the statement that He "suffered under Pontius Pilate" except a comma! What about those years in between? Surely they were worth more than a comma. It is strange that this should be so, especially in view of the fact that Jesus called Himself a Teacher and referred to His followers as disciples, or students. Certainly He magnified the importance of His teachings. "Heaven and earth shall pass away." "It is the spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing; the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life." "If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." "Who-soever heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them is like unto a wise man." These are only a few of the many statements of Jesus relating to the importance of His teachings. Strange, isn't it, that greater emphasis has not been placed upon His teachings? In the future, He will be remembered as much for His teachings as anything else. He will hold the central place in the picture of twentieth century Christianity as the Master, or Teacher. If any man have ears to hear, let him listen to the matchless teachings of the Great Teacher.

IV.

I do not mean to say that creeds will be done away. Creeds will continue to be written, though I think increasingly they will be written by individuals to meet individual needs and express individual faith rather than ecclesiastical creeds of district brands. Whatever creeds are written will give more attention to Jesus' life and teachings. Religious art and drama will not, cannot, ignore Jesus, but they will partake more of contemporary life. Jesus will dominate the picture because he was human and came into human experience so vitally and helpfully. He projected His own life interest and service into the center of human need. You cannot keep Him out of the center of the picture. You cannot keep Him out of the family, the community, the nation, the economic order, or international affairs because He identified Himself with humanity. He did it superbly in his choices at the time of temptation and in all His ministry which succeeded His great choice. When He became hungry, His thought and sympathy went out to the human beings who were poor and whose material burdens were made heavier because they did not have enough to eat. The needs of the poor were constantly upon His heart. When He was tired, He thought of the weary laborer, homeward bound after a long day of hard but unrewarding toil. He identified Himself with every class and condition of men. His decisions at the time of the temptation were made in the light of a wider human need than simply His own. Indeed, the needs and condition of His fellows reversed His decision many times. Jesus cannot be ignored because He projected His life into the center of human need. He speaks to this age not because definite rules apply to every age and condition of men, but because He spoke to human hearts which are universally and always the same. You cannot keep Him out of the center of the picture.

V.

In the second place, there is to be a renewed, if not a new, emphasis upon Jesus' life as exemplary. We hear much about Jesus' way of living. This is but the forerunner of a greater emphasis upon the fact if not upon the phrase. It appeals because it is a real challenge to everyday living and because it is sensible. Here is an essential of Christianity, and the youthful mind is not slow to discern it. It has caught the imagination of both old and young. In many of the proposals for the union of denominations in recent months, the principle of Christianity as a way of life has been the uniting principle.

As important as Jesus' teachings were, His life was even more important because His life was a perfect embodiment of his teachings. Dr. Chas. W. Gilkey tells of an Indian student, himself not a Christian, who acknowledged the gift of a New Testament with the penetrating words, "I am grateful for the story of a man who practiced what he preached." Just so. And Jesus will continue to hold the center of the picture, because He prac-

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

ELON COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

The thirty-ninth annual commencement of Elon College began Saturday, May 25th, 8 P. M., with the annual concert by the music department, an event always enjoyed as the opening number of a real epoch in the history of our good and great institution. Sunday, May 26th was "Baccalaureate Day," and one filled with mental and spiritual delight and edification. The baccalaureate sermon was by President Alfred W. Hurst, of Palmer College, Albany, Mo., and, differing from many commencement sermons, was a real spiritual feast. Since we are giving the sermon in THE SUN, which no doubt will have wide and close reading, comment is unnecessary further than to say that the splendid spirit and great soul of this youngest of college presidents spoke through his sermon and reached the hearts of his hearers. President Hurst made a profound impression by his personality and the simple, sincere manner in which he presented the truths of his sermon. The graduating class, for whom especially the sermon was prepared and delivered, can never get away from the convincing and powerful truths presented, to the effect that Jesus the Christ is at the center of every picture and event of which He is a part. A large audience heard the sermon; the music was beautiful and appropriate, and the entire service was edifying and uplifting.

In the afternoon, Prof. C. J. Velie, head of the music department, gave an organ recital, which was much appreciated and enjoyed. At 8 P. M. President W. A. Harper gave his baccalaureate address to the senior class, as printed in full in THE CHRISTIAN SUN last week. Since Dr. Harper has been president, he has made it a custom to give a parting word to the graduating class on Sunday evening, and this occasion proved no exception to the high standard which he has set for himself and which the occasion has come to anticipate. We are sure SUN readers, as well as the audience present, were instructed and edified by the clarity of thought and the vividness of the presentation of his theme, "What Is a Christian?" and all will agree that the answer given by President Harper was logical, cogent, comprehensive.

Monday, May 27th, was taken up with various demonstrations and exercises by departments of the college—first, fine arts and domestic arts exhibit; second, class-day exercises; third, junior class representatives; fourth, alumni banquet and business session. In the evening, at 8:30, the alumni address was delivered by Mr. Chas. C. Howell, Jacksonville, Fla., a graduate of the class of 1908. Mr. Howell has made good in the legal profession, and reflects credit upon his alma mater, the great State of Florida, from which he comes, and the profession that he honors. He brought to the large audience of alumni and their friends, after being appropriately introduced by Mr. Jesse F. West, Jr., Waverly, Va., president of the Alumni Association, a message out of his rich experience as an attorney and as an active layman in the Church, and as a close observer of the moral and spiritual trend of the day. The address is so appropriate, both for the occasion on which it was delivered and for reading and studying in the home and family, we have decided to give it in full to SUN readers in next week's issue. His topic was "The Place of Christian Education," and in the treatment of this topic, Mr. Howell's main thesis was that Christian education and Christian institutions were never so necessary as today to emphasize spirituality in education, and to combat the crass and threatening materialism of the time in which we live. The central thought of this exceedingly illuminating address is that contained in the declaration of Woodrow Wilson, "Unless our civilization is redeemed spiritually, it will not endure materially." Materialism is the greatest danger that confronts our civilization. The hope of turning back this destructive tide is the great counteracting and overwhelming current of spirituality whose force and momentum must be supplied by Christian institutions like Elon College. It was a great address, worthy of the man and the occasion.

Tuesday was the day of graduation exercises. The literary address was delivered by Dr. Wm. E. Barton, of Foxboro, Mass., ex-president of the National Council of Congregational Churches and author of many books. Dr. Barton departed from the usual custom on such occasions, and, without formal address, talked with heart and soul to the graduating class on the theme of "What Is Education?" Dr. Barton's rich experience in the field of letters and oratory gave to his utterances weight and worth, and enabled him to instruct the graduating class, and all who heard him, in what might be expected of them as they went forth to grapple with the problems of every-day life. The definition of education is not what it once was, and in fact there is no standard definition, for to be educated today means a wholly different thing from what it meant two decades ago. Time was when a person who held a college diploma was supposed to be educated. That time has past, and the world is coming to realize that education is a process and not a product, a program of life with the intelligence, the ability and the determination to carry out that program. The one who cannot think straight, express one's self intelligently and deal with problems and propositions accurately is not educated, it matters not how many college diplomas one may hold. The spirit and the great life of the speaker appealed to his audience and revealed a fact, that here's a man advanced in life who knows how to think in modern terms and in accurate, practical, spiritual experience and understanding.

There were fifty-five graduates, all of whom received the bachelor of arts degree. In addition, diplomas and certificates in special departments of the college were awarded to seven. There were no honorary degrees conferred. Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, of Durham, on behalf of the college, presented a Bible to each member of the graduating class. The winners of honors and medals were announced as follows: valedictorian of the class, Walter P. Lawrence, Jr., Elon College; salutatorian, Miss Jewell Truitt, Glen Raven, N. C.; winner of the Morrow thesis medal, James B. Brown, Elon College; winner of the Stanford orator's medal, E. F. Knight, Stokesdale, N. C.; winner of the Moffitt essayist medal, Miss Alma Kimball, Mansen, N. C.; Miss Hattie McKinney, of the Christian Orphanage, was given a hundred dollars in gold by Miss Louise Williams, of Greensboro, and Superintendent C. D. Johnston of the Orphanage, for being the first girl from the Orphanage to graduate from Elon College with the A. B. degree.

It was announced from the Alumni Association that Mr. F. F. Myrick, attorney, Greensboro, had been elected president for the coming year; I. O. Hauser, White Plains, vice-president; Miss Lillie Horne, Burlington, secretary; Mrs. C. C. Johnson, Elon College, treasurer.

Thus came to a close the commencement exercises which were largely attended, thoroughly enjoyed and measured up to the usual high standard that Elon maintains on such occasions.

The board of trustees was in session during the day, and besides matters of routine which claimed attention, the following items were given to the press just after the board adjourned:

The board of trustees, in their annual session, following the commencement, were notified that the General Education Board of New York City had made a conditional grant of $150,000 toward the campaign to raise $400,000 for buildings and equipment. They also decided to proceed with the campaign for $600,000 for endowment.

The board of trustees appointed as a special committee to have full charge of the set-up and conduct of the joint campaign, totaling $1,000,000, Mr. P. J. Carlton, Richmond, Va.; Col. E. E. Holland and Col. J. E. West, Suffolk, Va.; J. O. Atkinson and Chas. D. Johnson, Elon College, and Dr. L. E. Smith, president of the Southern Christian Convention, ex-officio, Norfolk, Va.

The trustees also authorized the social club committee of the faculty of institute, the Alpha Chapter of the Social Science Honor Fraternity Pi Gamma Mu here with the beginning of next year. This is the first honor society to come to Elon College campus, and its advent is hailed with the light of approval by alumni, faculty and students.

Three new members have been added to the faculty for next year, as follows: James A. Clarke, A. B., Hampden-Sidney; M. A. University of Virginia; Ph. D., Columbia; professor of Latin and German.

J. Allen Hunter, A. B., Duke; M. A., Columbia; Ph. D., Kansas City University; professor of French.

Mrs. Grace Hall Riheldaffer, graduate of New England Conservatory and special pupil of Oscar Saenger, Cadman and others, herself a concert artist of national reputation, professor of voice and theory.

The center of the higher educational life of the Southern Christian Convention is Elon College, which has been built upon the prayers and sacrifices and loyalty of that good and great constituency within the bounds of the Southern Christian Convention. Her commencements, and all that pertains to her life and progress are of deep significance and fraught with meaning to the thousands whose great desire is to see her go forward in things that pertain to the mental, moral and spiritual life of our day. WHAT AN ARMY!

The Sunday School army of the United States now numbers over fifteen million scholars. Out of this great army, what a force for Christ and the kingdom can be constructed if only those who are training this army took to heart seriously their problem and their opportunity. Suppose every member of this vast army were trained to give, say, 2 cents a week to missions! This would produce a missionary income of fifteen million dollars annually. Those same pupils are spending far more than an average of 2 cents a week on trifles, indulgences and frivolities that will not count for good in the make-up of character, nor in the make-up of the kingdom of our Lord. It is not, therefore, an impossible task, but a very reasonable task, if only those in charge of the army had a care and a concern, both for their army and for its welfare.

And then, suppose that one out of every thousand of this army should be trained by the grace of God to go as a missionary. This would mean fifteen thousand additional missionaries; enough, we are told, with native helpers in the present force, to evangelize the non-Christian world—to make known to a perishing world the life and the love of our Lord. We little realize what the army of Sunday School workers could accomplish, if only those in charge of the army really cared and had their minds and hearts fixed on making known to the world the life, the light and the love of our Lord.

Suppose that the twenty-five thousand pupils in the Sunday Schools of the Southern Christian Convention could be trained to give 2 cents per week for missions, one-half for home and one-half for foreign. Those same twenty-five thousand children spend far more than this on trifles that do not help to build character nor contribute to the world's uplift. This would mean $500 a week for missions from our Sunday Schools, twenty-six thousand dollars a year. And suppose one in a thousand of these youths were to go as a missionary, we would have twenty-five missionaries going out from our Sunday Schools, more missionaries than have gone out from our Southern Convention in all of its history. What possibilities, indeed, are in the hands of those who are in charge of this army that gathers for training and for drilling each Sabbath in our schools! How much, indeed, it would help if those in charge could only realize constantly the power that is in their hands and the possibilities confronting them. Paul said: "A great and an effectual door is open unto me, and there are adversaries." Surely those in charge of this army of Sunday School workers in our midst could repeat with Paul those memorable words, and if they were to do so and realize it as he did, a knowledge of our Lord would soon cover the earth as the waters cover the sea.

THE AUTHORITY OF TRADITION.

It is noticed from the press reports that the General Council of Congregational Churches was to consider, and we presume did consider, the "adoption of a liturgy based on scientific psychology, rather than on the authority of tradition." We are not concerned as to the liturgy, whether adopted or not adopted, as formal liturgies never had any particular appeal to this writer. However, one who is interested may easily be concerned about the frequent use in the press, the religious press especially, of the words: "On the authority of tradition." We are hearing it said, for instance, that Christianity "is a way of life, rather than conformity to the authority of tradition." In brief, without repeating particular instances, we are hearing very, very much about "the authority of tradition." When one examines the real meaning of those who use the term, one finds that in about nine cases out of ten what is meant by "the authority of tradition" is nothing more or less than the authority of the Word of God. Our brethren are evidently getting the authority of tradition and the authority of the Word of God woefully and deplorably mixed. That which is written in the Word of God is not tradition—it is inspiration; it is truth and it is fact. Theologically, tradition means "an unwritten code of law represented to have been given by God to Moses on Sinai." This is what the writer in Mark 7:13 had in mind when he said, "Making the Word of God of none-effect through your tradition, which ye have delivered." It was not what was in the Word of God, but that which was handed down, and not committed to writing, that was troubling the writer of Mark's gospel, his day and time. Or, again tradition is defined as "that body of doctrine and discipline, or any article thereof supposed to have been put forth by Christ or His apostles and not committed to writing."

"The Greek and Roman Catholic Churches put ecclesiastical tradition, as determined by general councils and creeds, on a par with the Bible as a rule of faith and conduct. The Protestant Churches make the Bible the one and sufficient rule of faith, and give to tradition a subordinate place."—Johnson's Univ. Cyc.

We are just wondering if we are not mixing our terms in the religious press, in the pulpit, and in convention, and are really thinking of tradition as that which is written in the Bible. It would be difficult indeed to get any sort of liturgy based on scientific psychology that would be equal to liturgy based on the Bible. That liturgy is scientific, and more than scientific; it is psychology, and more than psychology; it is spiritual; it is divine; it is the Word of God. For instance, the virgin birth of our Lord, as related by Luke, is not tradition, for it is the plain written Word of God, not any unwritten story handed down by the mouth of man. The miracles of our Lord feeding the five thousand, opening the eyes of the blind, raising Lazarus from the dead, are not tradition, and can form no part of tradition. Their authority is vouched for by the inspired Word of God. The crucifixion, the resurrection and the ascension of our Lord form no part of tradition. They are the plain, simple, genuine teachings of the Word of God, and the only authority they need is the Word of God and the fact that being the Word of God they have brought our Lord, and our Lord has brought them, down through the centuries, and we know of these things through Him, and we know of Him through these things, and out of this record, and upon this record, have come the Church, Christianity and those sacred things that make life sweet, faith strong and heaven real. Let us keep clearly and distinctly in mind that clear distinction between "the authority of tradition," which is one thing, and the authority of the Word of God, which is another and altogether a different thing. It will help our thinking to do so, and it will help our moral and spiritual make-up likewise.

THE BIBLE AS HISTORY.

History begins with creation and ends with time. We know nothing, historically, before creation, and nothing after time. "In the beginning, God"; and we would not know that without the Bible. All that is to be after "heaven and earth pass away" is a matter of faith. What the "new heaven and new earth" will be is unknown. History is the record of the known; and that may be sacred or profane—the sacred is inspired by God, the profane by man. As man was created in the image of God, man creates and records out of his own life and experience. Revelation is the sum of sacred history, and human achievement is the sum of profane history. Both deal with the past, both have their records and their claims. But this editorial deals only with the Bible as history, and for this it sets up several superior claims.

1. Bible history is the oldest history. Herodotus, the oldest profane historian, called by Cicero "The Father of History," was born in Asia Minor 484 years before Jesus; began writing forty years thereafter, which makes the most ancient profane history begin 444 years before Christ. The Pentateuch was written by Moses 1500 years before Christ, which makes Bible history more than a thousand years older than profane history. As a man, Moses is as well verified as Herodotus. Both have come down to us through human testimony and claim our confidence. Bible history gives the origin of man; profane history, the achievements of man; both have their place, but Bible history is the oldest history known to man.

2. Bible history is more accurate than profane history. Discovery has done as much to prove the facts in the Bible as to prove the facts recorded in profane history: and the Jew is a living witness to the nation of which Moses was born. No nation has been so well preserved and scattered so far over the earth as the Jews. God called Abram more than 2000 B. C. to go into the land He would show him. Abram obeyed the divine impression, and the Holy Land and the Hebrew nation were the result. Profane history does not record so accurately the origin and location of any other ancient nation as the Bible record of the Jewish nation—better known than any other nation on the globe. It would be necessary to destroy Palestine and the Jewish people before the Bible history could be disproved. The history of Joseph, of Jacob and his family, the life of Moses, the emancipation of the Hebrews from Egyptian bondage, their forty years of wandering in the wilderness, their entrance into the Promised Land, are all as capable of proof as the wars of the Caesars; and the building of Solomon's Temple is better known than the building of the pyramids in Egypt. W. W. S.

MASON AND DIXON LINE.

Nearly two centuries after the trouble began, which caused this survey to be made, Louis F. Hart recently visited the border line between Maryland and Pennsylvania, in a pilgrimage to the original Mason and Dixon line. Mr. Hart not only visited the actual spot where Charles Mason and Jeremiah Dixon started their famous survey, but spent a great deal of time gathering data and illustrations around which to build the story of the famous piece of engineering.

Using Holland's, "The Magazine of the South," as his vehicle, Mr. Hart says: "Time changes all things. Old hatreds die and new loyalties are born, but the demarcation between peoples, especially when it goes back, as this one does, to the Roundheads and Cavaliers of Cromwell's day—cannot be wiped out in an hour. Customs and modes of thinking remain when material landmarks have crumbled and vanished. Thus it is that in setting out to relocate Mason and Dixon's line after so many years, we must take into account not only the bench marks which took from the estate of Charles, Lord Baltimore, three thousand square miles or so, but also those which give double unity to some forty million people living in the South today.

"Opinion may differ as to where the line should run, but no one can deny that it is there. Nor would any one go so far as to say that on one side dwells the practical, and on the other the ideal. Humanity is too imperfect to achieve the absolute in either direction, were that result desired. The fact remains that the home of romance is the South, her threshold guarded with uncompromising loyalty by her sons."

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

A false conception of work reduces the value of work and lowers the moral standard of workers. The most difficult thing is to keep selfishness out of the mind of the worker. Real work, really understood, is a contribution to the use of society. The construction of a public highway may serve as a key to this idea. A highway is for all the people. The poor man who paid no tax has the same right upon the road as the richest man driving the finest car. His cart and horse not only have the same right on the road, but the same protection under the law. The pauper has an equal right on the paved sidewalk with the mayor or the richest merchant in the town or city. The State is an institution that represents all the people, regardless of station. A true citizen is interested in the welfare of all citizens. Whenever capital or labor overlooks this law of human responsibility it means dissatisfaction, trouble, and hard times. Many discoverers and inventors have died poor. Their work, though unconsciously done, was for the people, and not for themselves. The most unselfish thing is honest work. The man who works in the mill clothes the world; the man who works on the building houses the world. When God made man and placed him in the Garden of Eden, He placed him there "to dress it and to keep it" (Gen. 2:15).

The Church is the institution founded by Jesus Christ to save the world. The Church is to its members what the State is to its citizens. The Church exists before the State. There was a Jewish Church before there was a Commonwealth. Abram was called to form both in one, a people in whom all the nations were to be blessed. The Church as known in this day is a spiritual institution supported by worship and work. Work is just as essential in the Church as in the State. Selfishness in Church work is even worse than selfishness in the State. Jesus was a worker. He said, "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work" (John 5:17). "Christ loved the Church, and gave Himself for it" (Eph. 5:25). He worked without pay, and gave Himself to save men. Then He said, "Follow me" (Matt. 4:19). This means two things: that Church members must work and give themselves to its extension and support. No obligation is more binding than Church membership. There is variety in Church work as well as in field, home, store, shop, and mill. There is the Sunday School where all can find work. Go out and bring in some child, some man or woman, who does not attend. Attend regularly yourself. Talk about it with your friends. Pray for it in your private devotions. Contribute money to it, for that money represents your work. Jesus worked in the shop with Joseph for eighteen years; but that set an example for all children in their obedience to their parents. "He was subject unto them, and increased in wisdom and stature and in favor with God and man" (Luke 2:51, 52). Men think too much about wages, salaries, profits on investments, and not enough about their work. "Go work today in my vineyard" (Matt. 21:28). Work for others is the best work in the world.

ELON LETTER.

FINANCIAL CAMPAIGN REPORT.

I am making a separate report of our financial campaign this year.

The business manager's report shows that we have been able this year again, with the kind assistance of a most generous friend, to complete the financial campaign, raising through this method $36,750 in the name of the Southern Christian Convention, and $13,000 from the general public; a total of $49,750, as provided in the budget you adopted a year ago.

I wish to make some observations on this campaign which, I think, are noteworthy at this time.

1. There has developed a spirit of misunderstanding on the part of some of our local Church leaders because of the omission of the Board of Missions from the Conference apportionments. I think it would be well for the board of trustees to issue an official statement, or get the finance board to do so, explaining that it was the purpose of the finance board to collect, through Conference apportionments, for the college a sum sufficient to meet the Convention's interest obligations to the college endowment. It was Convention action, and not college action, nor did the college suggest it.

Last year the Conference apportionment collections were more than 2,000 less than the year before. Less will be raised this year likely than last, unless our people are given fully to understand the situation. Whenever I have explained the matter as it was intended, the friends have seemed satisfied and have given willingly.

The Southern Christian Convention fund shows the following details:

|---|--------------------|
| From Convention Treasurer on $12,750 apportionment | $ 7,265.56 |
| From 68 Sunday Schools | 1,167.53 |
| From 139 Churches, through 1,060 individuals | 28,316.91 |
| Total | $36,750.00 |

2. The generous friend who made it possible for us to succeed this year agreed with me that $5,000 of the money he would give would be conditioned on my securing from the alumni a similar amount. I am happy to report that the alumni have raised their part in full and that they went beyond their part. Five hundred and eighty-three of them contributed $6,679. We have credited the money raised by the alumni to the Southern Christian Convention fund.

Certain observations have become very evident to me in regard to our alumni, as follows:

(a) The alumni of the college are willing to help it.

(b) The alumni are poor, being for the most part school teachers and preachers and cannot make large contributions.

(c) The bearing of this fact upon the "Million-Dollar Campaign" is very evident. It would be disastrous to assign any large sum to the alumni to be raised in this campaign. It will be necessary to approach them each individually, and large contributions need not be expected.

(d) Every graduating class of the college, except one, has had part in the success of the alumni campaign this year, and almost without exception every alumnus that I approached in person has made a contribution to the fund.

(e) The conviction has grown upon me as the money came in from the alumni that they are interested in their alma mater and willing to do anything they can for her. One of them, in making his remittance, expressed the sentiment of the group, I think, when he said, "This gift is a mere fraction of what I owe."

3. The campaign has shown that the college is gaining favor with the general public, and in spite of the financial depression which business has sustained, it has been relatively easy to raise the $13,000 which I was expected to secure from that source. The donation account, as a matter of fact, shows $13,544.78 given by fifty-six persons. However, some public-spirited men of good judgment have expressed to me the opinion that we ought not to appeal annually to our friends, but that we should put on a general campaign, paying our debts and adding to our endowment so that we will be what they call a "going concern." My own judgment agrees with theirs.

Mr. Junius H. Parker, of New York City, in particular, has expressed this view to me twice in succession, though he has been very generous in his gift each year. Mr. Julius W. Cone, Greensboro, is another man who thinks annual appeals from an institution like Elon belittles it in the eyes of its friends.

4. I am giving my first report by Conferences and Churches on the Sunday School quarterly offerings. This has been a new venture, many of the schools having taken only one offering, but its possibilities are great.

THE CENTRALITY OF JESUS.

tioned what He preached and showed by His life that the way of living He taught was practical and workable, though difficult of attainment.

Dr. Lloyd C. Douglas uses a very impressive illustration in this connection. He recalls how He preached and showed by His life that the way of living He taught was practical and workable, though difficult of attainment. He recalls how he learned to write in school. He says, ". . . we learned to write by attempting to imitate a line of faultless script at the top of the page in the copy-book. There were so many as a dozen lines to the page, topped with the ideal which we were asked to emulate. Our first line was not a bad imitation of the pattern. We were close to the model then, with no low-grade work interposed between what we were doing and what our teacher had done. True, it was lamentably imperfect, but the general slant of it was at about the same angle as the teacher's work; and, while we were not proud of it, we secretly reflected that it might be a great deal worse, which was true—as we were about to prove.

"The second line was not so good. We were farther from the pattern now, and our own previous bungle was in the way. Indeed, as we started line three, we wondered whether we were not really copying our own sad mistakes. On line four, we thought to remedy matters by introducing a few ornamental curly cues into the capital letters and feathering the tails of the 'g's' and 'y's,' hoping to distract the teacher's attention from our blunders and gain some credit for an honest effort to make our work less unbeautiful. But by the time we had reached the bottom of the page, we were growing careless; for the monstrous difference between what we were doing and what the teacher had done was so appalling that discouragement set in to make the disaster complete and hideous. We were so far removed from the ideal at the top that we could not even approximate it. Obviously, the only cure for our trouble was to get back, somehow, to the pattern."

Of course, the conclusion of all this is that Jesus is our Pattern, and that somehow we must get back beyond the multitude of imperfect efforts at imitation to the original Pattern. We must notice, however, that it is not so easy to live the way Jesus lived as it is to copy some script at the top of a copy-book page. Indeed, it is not meant that we should copy His life in every particular as a penmanship student imitates every line and curve in the copy. It means, rather, that we shall discover the controlling principle of His life. He was not a Giver of rules, but, as Clarke has so well put it, He was "a revealer, an enlightener, a renewer, an awakener of motives, and a mover of men. . . . He was an inspirer, a creator of ideals, a deliverer from limitations, a vivifier of souls, a breather of power to fulfill the ideals that He created."

If you will think back in your own experience, you will recall some one who inspired you to go to college. In a sense, He was your example, but not in the sense that He was able to give you some helpful hints as a result of His experience in college, He was essentially an inspirer. So it should be with any hero. He should inspire us to real effort but leave us to develop our own individuality.

The controlling principle of Jesus' life was that which He gave to a scribe as being the summation of all the law and the prophets: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind . . . and thy neighbor as thyself." This principle directed Jesus' every act, and to look to Him as our Example means that we shall accept this as the directive principle in all our relations. You see what a profound principle this becomes. It leaves you members of the present generation to help determine what the Christian way of life is as applied to current life. Jesus, as our Example, is essentially the inspirer and mover of men to undertake this tremendous task.

VI.

This leads us very naturally to the next consideration. In the future, Christians will give less attention to metaphysics and more attention to the spirit of Jesus. It is not important that we try to imitate Jesus in every detail of His life. This we cannot do in a modern world, nor in justice to the individuality which is potentially within every person and every age. But it is important that we possess the spirit of Jesus, remembering that "If any man have not the spirit of Christ, He is none of His." I believe with William P. Merrill that "this is what we must emphasize and put in the place of chief importance. If the Church is to meet the religious demands of this day, it must dare to stand without reserve for the statement that the one essential by which the religion of any man or group or Church must be judged is not its orthodox belief, nor its mystic experience, but its possession of the spirit of Christ."

There are a number of things which have become appendages to Christianity in its centuries of development which many people cannot accept: creeds, impossible stories which do not fit in with reality as they know it, interpretations which remove Jesus far away, imperfect lives and an imperfect organization. But one thing we never can take lightly nor escape is the spirit of Jesus—selfish, humble, sacrificial, self-giving.

A story is told of Dr. T. W. Goodspeed, a grand old Baptist preacher, who had much to do with the founding of the University of Chicago. One day a shiftless and seemingly worthless fellow came to Dr. Goodspeed's home and asked for something to eat. It was a cold day and the man did not have an overcoat. Dr. Goodspeed got his own overcoat and gave it to the man to wear. In the days and months that followed, this man's fellows noticed a radical change in his manner of living. One day, one of the old gang asked him for an explanation. His reply was this: "A good man gave me an overcoat to wear, and somehow every time I put that coat on I feel I must live up to the expectations of the coat." Having put on Dr. Goodspeed's coat, he had put on the spirit of the man. Does this not help us to an understanding of what it means to put on Christ? Having put on Christ, as the apostle admonishes, we acquire His spirit also, and become more like Him in an effort to live up to what is expected of those who wear the name Christian.

Yes, it is the spirit of Christ that counts. Do some long to have an actual photograph of Jesus, to have a hammer or a yoke from His carpenter shop, to possess a piece of His cross, or to have an infallible and complete account of His life in every detail? These would satisfy human curiosity, but would be only of incidental value. You recall the story that is told of the boy who knocked at the home of DeVinci after the famous artist's death and asked for his brush, so he, too, could be a great artist. The keeper gave the boy this significant reply: "What you need is not DeVinci's brush, but DeVinci's spirit." Just so. And what we need to become real Christians is the spirit of the one we profess to follow.

VII.

Finally, I would say that Jesus will continue to dominate the picture of Christianity as the revealer of God through his own religious experience. Jesus had spiritual insight and intuition which guided him deeper into the mystery of the world and life and the soul than others have been able to do.

Men have ever been seeking to find out, to know the great Source of all light and life. One has only to read such a book as Browne's "This Believing World," or Albert Schweitzer's "Christianity and the Religions of the World" to discover the instinctive desire of mankind to know. They have been inquiring and theorizing and worshipping the world over. "There burns an undying fire in the hearts of man." But it is interesting to note again that Jesus is in the center of the picture. Certainly no one here would deny that God has revealed Himself in other places and in other persons and in other religions. However, other religions have revealed Him but dimly, and in our day are coming to life and becoming vital again as they touch Jesus, and at those very points where Jesus does touch them. Dr. Fosdick says, "If God be not in Him (Christ), God is not anywhere." Dr. Henry Sloan Coffin expresses his faith as follows: "God is for me the Father who unveils Himself in Jesus. . . . It is this Christ-like Father to whom I pray, on which I depend for re-enforcement and guidance, of whom I think as forgiving my sins and prompting every generous and useful impulse and resolve within me." It was the Apostle Paul who regarded Christ as the supreme revelation of God when he said, "For God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ."

I see an artist who is painting the picture of God for men in which he seeks to portray that which great spiritual seers and prophets and saints have said out of their own experience. I notice, however, that the periphery of that picture is very indistinct and blurred, but in the center is the distinct outline of a person. Who is that person? To any one who has apprehended the personality of Jesus, there is no question but that Jesus is in the center of the picture. We know of a truth, as Paul said, that the light of the knowledge of the glory of God has shined in Christ.

I see another picture—the picture you and I are painting. How can you escape him? You spend your time putting in little touches here and there, but never can that picture be completed until you realize that Jesus is the central figure who will give unity and life and human meaning to the picture: the one who will bring together the various elements and colors and interests into a lovely expression of the inner nature of things and man and God. He takes the center, and not the side of the picture.

In the beginning, I said that the other figures of the New Testament were there because Jesus was there, because He had chosen them and they had given themselves to Him. There were some, however, who were in the New Testament picture because they heard the call of Christ but did not give themselves to him. They are remembered for their refusal and betrayal. All of us have heard the call of Christ through some preacher, teacher, parent, friend, or book, and all of us will be in the picture of twentieth century Christianity. My highest hope for you is that you shall be there because of your deep devotion to His cause and because of your exemplary living of the Christian life. To do that, He must be at the center of your life. This does not mean that you are to abdicate your own individuality and personality, but it means that He will help you to the highest expression of that individuality. If you come to see me at my home, I do not have to come outside to give you room on the inside. There is room for both of us on the inside. So there is room in your life for you and for Christ to dwell in a rich and blessed fellowship. You will have room for other friends and interests also, but if Christ is there at all He will occupy the center of your life. His appeal is irresistible. "He is the center of any picture of which he is a part," and He will be the center of any life of which He is a part. "You cannot keep Him out of the center of the picture."

MISSIONS
 REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

WHICH WAY?

"To every man there openeth
 A way, and ways, and a way.
 And the high soul climbs the high way,
 And the low soul gropes the low,
 And in between on the misty flats
 The rest drift to and fro—
 But to every man there openeth
 A high way and a low,
 And every man decideth
 The way his soul shall go."

THAT CANDY FACTORY.

We cannot cease to approach missionary education as a separate problem because the majority of persons who are responsible for the religious education program of the local Church have not yet recognized missionary education as an integral part of religious education. The reason for this is not difficult to find. The missionary enterprise has never been looked upon as the main business of the Church. It has always been looked upon as an optional matter, a side issue in which one might or might not choose to be interested. The Church has never really caught the vision of her mission in the world. We have too largely missed the essential point that being a Christian implies following Christ—that is, really sharing His purpose. We have made it an individual matter. The Church has been concerned with caring for her own, somehow overlooking the fact that the fullest development of her own demanded that their lives bear fruit, and that they fulfill the purpose of their Lord and Master by seeking to bring about His kingdom of love and righteousness throughout the earth. The Church has too often played the part of the man who built a candy factory in which he employed all his and his wife's relatives. When asked how his factory was doing, he said it was fine—making the best candy possible. When asked how the profits were, he admitted that there had been no profits. It took all the candy to feed the family. There wasn't any left to distribute to others.

Never has the Church been more prone to forget her mission than at the present time. Everywhere we see elaborate buildings going up, new equipment being installed, trained staffs employed. All this is well and good, but to what purpose? If it is simply feeding the family, and that food is not being translated into spiritual energy which goes out to serve the world, of what value is it?—From "Training for World Friendship," by Brown.

MISSIONARY EDUCATION DEFINED.

The aim of real missionary education is nothing more nor less than the aim of producing real Christians—those who have a conscious fellowship with Christ and who actively share His purpose for the world. This is simply carrying religious education to its logical conclusion.

If we recognize the purpose of Christ as that of making possible the abundant life for all persons everywhere, the sharing of that purpose becomes our missionary motive. Then our ideal for every Christian is that he shall not only have a conscious fellowship with Christ but that he may be inspired and trained to effectively share life with others, not only within his own group and community but with his brothers and sisters of other races and other lands. He is not wholly Christian until he is Christian in all his relationships. And all relationships have not become

Christian until he recognizes and actively accepts the fact that—

"In Christ there is no East nor West,
 In Him no South nor North,
 But one great fellowship of love
 Throughout the whole wide earth."

Diffendorfer gives as a definition of missionary education that it is "the Christianization of all our social contacts."

Loveland paraphrases this in the following words: "Missionary education aims to make certain that all relations of man with his brother, whether here or there, direct or indirect, shall be relations of mutual helpfulness and service."

Missionary education, according to Sailer, "helps people to realize their normal Christian development. It begins with the youngest age groups and teaches God's love for us while it trains us in sympathy and service for one another. At every stage of growth, the best human impulses are enlarged by letting flow into them and through them the great good will of Christ.

"Next it tries to make people understand and desire the sort of world God wants this to be: first, a world where natural resources are not only developed, but justly distributed, where each serves according to his ability and receives according to his need; second, a world where social institutions provide nurture for the young, and fellowship and co-operation for all; third, a world where truth and beauty are placed at the disposal of the common good; fourth, a world, where higher spiritual values direct and interpret all of life. . . .

"Finally, missionary education stands for world brotherhood, understanding and fellowship between every nation and race and class. It realizes the weakness of the ordinary imagination and the deadening effect of self-interest on human relations. It, therefore undertakes to begin early to counteract the prejudices which make us provincial and selfish."—From "Training for World Friendship," by Brown.

MT. UNION CHURCH DEDICATED.

Sunday, May 19th, was a great day in the history of Mt. Union Christian Church, at Mench, Bedford County, Pa. The Church, having been remodeled, enlarged and beautified, was rededicated to the service of God. The gift which made this work possible was made by Mrs. Amanda Kegg, a charter member of the Church.

The day's services opened with a very interesting and instructive session of Sunday School, under the direction of the superintendent, Mr. Charlie Williams. This was followed by a sermon by the pastor, Rev. W. T. Walters, D. D., on the subject of "The Five Loaves and Two Fishes," from which he gave a very strong plea for the Church to rise to the enlarged and increased duties and opportunities arising from the improved conditions.

The afternoon was devoted to the dedicatory services, in which Rev. A. R. Garland had charge of devotions.

A brief history of the Church was read by Bro. James H. Williams.

The presentation of the fine Church, as it now stands, was made, in behalf of Sister Kegg, by Hon. George W. Derrick.

Acceptance on behalf of the Church was in charge of the pastor.

Mrs. Kegg, the patroness of the Church, was then presented with a beautiful basket of flowers. H. M. Barton had charge of the offering, after which Mrs. Walters, wife of the pastor, read a paper sponsoring the organization of a missionary society, to be named in honor of our dear Sister Kegg. This paper was signed by many members of the Church.

A responsive service prepared by Dr. J. F. Burnett, late secretary of the General Convention, was used, after which Rev. A. R. Garland offered the dedicatory prayer.

The big feature of the evening was a splendid concert of sacred selections consisting of solos, duets and choruses, rendered by the B. & O. Glee Club, of Cumberland, Md. This club was under the direction of Mr. A. W. McDaniel, a former choir leader of this Church, and the concert given was a great tribute to his leadership. The congregation was delighted, and listened with great interest to every number.

The congregation joined in singing "Blest Be the Tie that Binds," followed with the benediction by the pastor.

Thus ended a day of service and devotion, such as is seldom seen anywhere.

H. M. BARTON.

THE INDIVIDUAL JESUS CHRIST.

Christianity differs from every other known form of religion because it is based on the individuality of its Founder. Christ is the sole foundation on which the Christian Church rests, the principle of its unity; the spiritual power which makes the Christian strong in the discharge of every duty. In a word, Jesus Christ may be said to constitute Christianity.

Several years ago a Japanese officer chanced to pick up a copy of the New Testament. The story of the Individual, Jesus Christ, made such a profound impression upon him, he confessed Christ and identified himself with the Christian Church. Later, in writing to a friend, he said: "I cannot express my feelings when for the first time I read the account of the character and work of Jesus Christ. I was filled with admiration, overwhelmed with emotion, and taken captive."

Such is the vanquishing, illuminating, and regenerating influence exercised by the Individual Jesus Christ.

Of the religions now existing in the world, Buddhism is said to number over five hundred millions, and Mohammedism over two hundred million; yet if we were to strike the individual, Gautama Siddhartha, the founder of Buddhism, and that of Mohammed, the founder of Mohammedism, out of these respective systems, their religions, as systems, would remain in tact. The same is true of Brahmanism, Confucianism, Zoroastrianism, and every other religion of the past and present. It is of Judaism, for the individual, Moses, might be removed from it, but the system would remain in tact.

Not one of these religions erected their system on the individuality of their founders. But Christianity is so completely based on the Individual, Jesus Christ, that if we were to remove Him from it, it would fall. Mistake concerning Him is capital. Hesitancy about Him is fatal to one's Christianity. To Christianity, this must be the critical and deciding question, "Whom say ye that I am?"—Lewis L. Thomas, in Nashville Christian Advocate.

CIGARETTE POSTERS.

Workers for social and moral reforms have their hands full just now in maintaining the fight against the organized effort to defeat prohibition. They do not wish to have to organize to fight against the cigarette campaign now so boldly and vigorously being pushed on the public, and designed to induce young women of the United States to become cigarette users. However, there is a limit to the patience of good people who devote themselves to the public welfare, and that limit has about been reached. If the cigarette manufacturers want a crusade against their business, they are proceeding in the right way to get one started.

Our indignation is particularly aroused against the insidious use of billboards to suggest that our young women use cigarettes. Some time ago the young and beautiful woman appeared on the billboard as an interested spectator; gradually she increased her interest until now she is boldly pictured as enjoying a smoke. The psychology of the poster is evident to all, and if the manufacturers are permitted to continue their suggestive advertising they will doubtless greatly increase their sales. It is time that all States follow the example of Utah and some others in passing laws against the display of posters designed to corrupt the habits of youth. In truth, many young men and women are taking up the cigarette habit without the enticing posters on every street and highway to add their lure.

The manufacturers are making the same mistake the salconkeepers made a generation ago; they are trying to outrun the educational work of the Churches against their business. In the end, the cudgels will be taken up against them and the law will be invoked to control their advances. Already many sections are becoming articulate against the cigarette posters. The condition calls for immediate action on the part of the lawmakers. The States have a duty above that of encouraging the cigarette industry; they must safeguard their boys and girls.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

MORE THAN MILLION GAIN.

Dr. H. K. Carroll's annual statistical analysis of the growth of the Churches in the United States, published in the Christian Herald, is always read with interest. Since 1890, when he was given charge of the religious census in the United States Census, Dr. Carroll has annually performed a valuable service to the Churches by assembling statistical data. This year the figures are more encouraging than they have been since the great war. Indeed, Dr. Carroll calls attention to the fact that following the war Churches were "uncomfortably near the edge of actual defeat," as far as gains were concerned. Last year a gain of more than half a million members caused much rejoicing; the figures for 1928 show a gain of 1,115,000. The largest gains were in the fourteen Baptist groups, who showed an increase of 375,842. The Roman Catholics were second, with 360,153; the official Catholic directory, however, claims 423,709 for the past year. The next large gain in membership is made by the Disciples of Christ (two bodies), who gained 173,093. The sixteen Methodist bodies gained 45,144, which is a sharp decrease from the gains of the preceding year.

Dr. Carroll's tables show that the thirty-two largest denominations, number 46,571,248, gained 1,036,562, or all but 78,425 of the total gains. The tables also show encouraging increases in the number of new ministers and new Church buildings during the past year. These statistics in general are encouraging, and should stimulate the Churches to make greater efforts to reach the unchurched in the country, who yet outnumber the Church members.—Christian Advocate.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

BY REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

Lesson XI—June 16, 1929.

JUDAH TAKEN CAPTIVE.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people."—Prov. 14:34.

LESSON: 2 Kings 25:1-21.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psa. 107:10-16.

Historical Background.

Zedekiah, the weak-kneed, jelly-fish-backed king of Judah, brought matters to a climax. He rebelled against Babylon in spite of the fact that Jeremiah had said again and again that the way to peace and safety lay in recognizing Babylon's authority. Nebuchadnezzar had finally lost patience with this troublesome king, and he sent a large army to lay siege to Jerusalem. After a siege of about a year and a half, Jerusalem, in sheer desperation, gave up the uneven contest and Babylonian soldiers poured through the breaches in the walls and began to work havoc with the sacred city. The royal palaces were burned and all the other pretentious houses of the city. The temple was first ransacked of its valuables and then wrecked. The walls of the great city were broken down and in a literal sense the city was laid waste. The king and the leaders likewise suffered at the hands of the Babylonians. The king's sons were killed before his eyes, and then he was blinded. Many of the leaders, including not only men of war, but priests and scribes were killed, while the remaining leaders were carried away into captivity. The poor of the land were left to be vine-dressers and husbandmen, but they were reduced to what was virtual slavery. Jeremiah likens the people who remain as spoiled and rotten figs, in contrast to those who had been carried away and who represented the best of the nation. Judah had been despoiled in the worst sense of the word. It is well enough to fix in mind the date of this significant event—586 B. C. In this year the Jewish nation, as a nation, really came to an end.

In view of the fact that several of the lessons of recent date have had as their central figure Jeremiah, it is of interest to learn about his fate. He was given his choice of either going to Babylon or of remaining with the rabble in Judah. He chose to remain in Judah, but later he was carried by some of these Judahites into Egypt, where tradition has it that he suffered martyrdom at their hands. Thus perished one of the greatest prophets and one of the greatest and noblest patriots of all time.

The Teaching of the Lesson.

What practical truth can we get from this lesson, which is, after all, a recountal of a historical event, the story of the siege, the fall, and the destruction of Jerusalem?

It is simply a concrete illustration of the eternal principle that the wages of sin is death in its application to a nation as well as in its application to an individual. Judah and Jerusalem went the way of all nations that forgot God. Sin is not only a reproach to any people; it is a deadly curse. In spite of the fact that the Jews were the chosen people of God, and in spite of the fact that Jerusalem was the center of the Jewish political as well as religious life of the nation, continued disregard of the moral and spiritual precepts of God eventually and inevitably brought dire disaster. God is no respecter of nations any more than He is of persons. Still stands the original pronouncement of the man of God—the wicked shall be turned into hell and all the nations that forget God.

There is, of course, a practical application to our own nation. America is a great nation; one of the greatest nations of all time in many respects. But America's greatness is no guarantee of her permanence. The only guarantee of America's security is righteousness in national and international policies and action. If America forsakes the ideals of Christianity, or if she disobeys the moral and spiritual precepts of the God of all the nations, she is doomed to go the way of all the nations that have disobeyed or forgotten God. Materialism always brings a nation as well as an individual to destruction. The wages of sin is death, and these wages are always paid; if there is any delay in settlement, compound interest is added. It is the soul of a nation that counts, and it behooves every man and woman, every boy and girl to live in such a way, both from an individualistic as well as from a social standpoint, that the soul of America shall be sound and wholesome and righteous.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Sunday, June 16, 1929.

TOPIC: "The Prince of Voluntary Christian Service."—Luke 9:57-62.

Some Bible Hints.

Jesus on His way to Jerusalem was marching to His death and knew it. Could this man follow Him in that? (v. 57).

More is needed than a resolution. Self-denial is essential (v. 58).

This man was cautious. Jesus urges that in the conflict of duties the spiritual must be placed first (v. 60).

We cannot give our best service if our hearts are preoccupied with other cares. Jesus calls for our all.

Suggestive Thoughts.

Study is needed. To serve Christ well, we must know Him. Any kind of work will not do.

Time is needed, not the fag ends, when we have nothing else to do, but the time when we are fresh and vigorous. Why not tithe time and give Him the best?

Sacrifice is needed. We must not look for pay, not even for expenses. We must learn to serve for the joy of knowing that we are helping to advance the kingdom.

Prayer is needed. Activity of any kind without prayer before hand is like an electric motor without electricity. To serve well, we must give time to prayer.

A Few Illustrations.

Our Endeavorer has a consecrated auto, which he uses week-ends in visiting outlying societies or places where there is no preacher. Many might follow this example.

Most of the good done in the world is done without pay; that is, it is voluntary service. There is real happiness in doing good of whatever kind.

Most of us wait until somebody asks us to do something for the kingdom. We should rather seek out tasks and do them without being asked, even if it costs ease and comfort.

Blessed are they that see things that ought to be done and do them. Christ saw that the disciples' feet needed to be washed. No one else thought of it or cared. Have we eyes to see?

To Think About.

What voluntary service can we render?
What service does the Church need?
Why pay for any service?

5. In view of the fact that we are planning to undertake a campaign for a million dollars in January, I recommend that the trustees leave it optional with the committee of five, suggested in my report, whether they will encourage us to go forward with a separate campaign for funds from the general public this year or whether we should include the money we expect from the public in the general campaign. It may be necessary to give them some discretion, too, with reference to any balance of the $36,750 that may not have been raised in the Churches when the campaign begins.

LONG PLANS FOR ETERNITY.

If a young man were heir to the throne of England, would he not be foolish if he spent all his time learning how to play tennis? Yet we who are the heirs of all eternity spend our time in interests that are transient. Character is the only thing that we can take into eternity—character and memory. Our plans are adequate for eternity only as they concern character and memory. It is easy to live for the day and forget tomorrow—the endless tomorrow. Earthly pleasures and tasks are engrossing, but it is the height of folly to be engrossed by them. The practical man is he alone who arranges his life so that it will count the most for eternity.—Amos R. Wells.

ROCKY MOUNT.

In the absence of Rev. A. C. Foster, pastor of the First Christian (Disciples) Church, Rocky Mount, N. C., who was called to Georgia to preach the annual commencement sermon to the institution from which he graduated more than twenty years ago, his pulpit was filled Sunday, May 19th, by Rev. A. R. Flowers, both morning and evening. Bro. Flowers has many staunch friends in our city among the different denominations, who show their appreciation for his work by attending his services. B. T. Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

We are still getting responses from the Sunday Schools that have not been giving this year, and the good part of it is that they are paying up for the months which have passed. That is fine. We are hoping and praying that all of our Sunday Schools will come to the rescue of the Orphanage and give us a monthly offering. If all Sunday Schools will do this we would have a much easier task and could reach more little children. Our income this week is $61.92. We have 120 children. That means that each child had 52 cents to care for it one week. We give much serious thought as to how we can stretch 52 cents for enough to feed, clothe, care for and train a child for a whole week. If some of our friends can figure this out, I will be glad if they will so advise me and give me the desired information.

PALM STREET CHURCH.

The work of the Palm Street Church, Greensboro, is moving along in a very satisfactory manner under the leadership of their much-beloved pastor, Rev. J. L. Neese. A ten days' meeting was held in this Church during April. Rev. J. Lee Johnson did the preaching, to the edification of all. The Church received great help and much spiritual strength.

During the past few months, the Church has paid off an indebtedness, and at this time has eight hundred dollars in hand to apply on the new Sunday School rooms, which are to be built at an early date. Both people and pastor appear to be happy and deeply interested in the work of the kingdom and devoted to their task.

Bro. Neese has a vision of a new auditorium, for which he is working and praying. With his faith and consecrated energy, sustained by his loyal congregation, I predict the erection of this much-needed temple of worship within a reasonable length of time.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE,
One of Our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MONDAY.

A GREAT PRIVILEGE.

"Thou art made whole; sin no more."—John 5:14.

The fact that man was first innocent and that sin has entered into his heart from without by deliberate decision of his own, is evidence that man has power of deliberate choice and of settling his own destiny. But it is a very happy experience we have in the consciousness that salvation is provided for all. This offers every one a charming field of adventure in which he has the opportunity to prove himself worthy of faith and love and able to overcome.

No power of fellow-mortal, or Satan, is able to prevent one from being a Christian if he will. All hindrances come within one's self. Those hindrances lurk in lust, or malice, or hate, or a passive attitude, or in other kindred passions of life; the mere lack of faith may "lay the axe to the tree," such souls are unfortified.

But these attributes need not be a field of sinfulness to us. They have been given us for a field of good and power. To do so is the claim of Christianity that we may be led through struggle, by labor to victory and glory.

Prayer.—Glory be to Thee, O God! We understand but little of the depths of Thy grace. Give us Thy spirit and let us declare Thee in our spirit and all our doings. Amen.

TUESDAY.

DOING AS WE PLEASE.

"Ye would not."—Luke 13:34.

We are a people who love to do as we please. If God had not made us with this privilege of deliberate choice, we would be only machines—poor excuses of men—with no chance of development or improvement. If one sins, it is his choice; if he goes right and improves in manhood and usefulness, it is also his choice. "It is up to you," says He.

God can open the eyes of the blind, unstop the ears of the deaf, paint roses, form dewdrops, create the trill of birds, open the gates of the morning without a creak of the hinges, swing atoms in the sunshine, set perfect motion to the constellations, but he cannot direct a man against his will.

But one day, each one will reap the fruit of his choice. Then the whole life will be reflected and the answer will be "Ye would not." "Ye will not come to me that ye may have life."

Prayer.—O Lord, we humble ourselves before Thee and plead for Thy mercy. Forgive us our sins. Cause us to study Thy way and to see the better way; to commit ourselves to it and have Thy guidance. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

A GOOD WAY.

"Lovest thou me?"—John 16:17.

We are told of a man who never intended to be a Christian. The thought was repulsive to him. The inconsistent lives of many Christians embittered him.

But one morning as he was going to work, something kept saying to him, "Simon, son of Jonah, lovest thou me?" Somehow, he wished he could answer as Peter did. Then something said to him, "Well, if you can't as Peter did, you might say something easier." "Yes," he said, "I can at least say, Lord, Thou knowest that I do want to love Thee." At that moment he became conscious of a relief he had not known before, and as he thought of Christ's life, his goodness and love, he found himself. He could be that way, and, after all, he did love that way, and something said, "I love thee." He then realized a forgiveness and a new desire and a new heart.

Prayer.—Dear Lord, praise awaiteth Thee in our hearts today, and unto Thee shall we perform our vows. We pray for growth in grace until we are fully conscious of Thy abiding love and the perfection of soul in His presence. Amen.

THURSDAY.

BEAUTIFUL CONFLAGRATIONS.

"Sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death."—James 1:15.

A party of men were sailing up the Delaware River one night. With admiration they looked upon the distant clouds illuminated by a conflagration raging in the city of Philadelphia. Upon his return to the city, as he stopped on the dock, he was told that his factory had been completely destroyed by fire. Without a feeling of pity he had been smiling at a blaze which made him penitent.

How easy in life's ways to drift along, have a good time, altogether unconscious of the ruin of soul and poverty of eternity the very indulgence of pleasure makes us! "Jesus saves! Jesus saves!"

Prayer.—O dear Jesus, Thou savest us from all sin and prevent soul ruin; we look to Thee for the courage to face life as it is, and overcome all obstacles. Give us full hope of the future and happiness amidst it all. Amen.

FRIDAY.

FOR THE ASKING.

"Stretch forth thy hand."—Mark 3:5.

"Ask and ye shall receive."—John 16:24.

"Seek and ye shall find."—Matt. 7:7.

"Deny (thyself) and follow me."—Mark 8:34.

The world is an exacting taskmaster, and it pays in the same spirit. We are born with natural tendencies, desires, impulses, cravings, and we move out along directions in which they pull or push, yielding to inclinations, the pull of passions, the gratification of self, taking our cue from carnal tendencies. So doing, without restraint and holier direction, we follow nature's unsanctified bent to abasement.

But we need not. Like the graft in a rose makes a new perfect rose, so Christ in the life gives old nature a new bent and qualifies it for the good for which it was intended. This rebukes low ways and invites the upward growth. This is the whole claim of Christianity; and the question is what are we going to do with Christ. The answer settles the whole problem of Christian character and the coming of the kingdom of God. It is certain that goodness can come only as we enthrone the Christ in our hearts and lives.

Prayer.—Our Father, accept our poor offering of praise for all Thy mercy and grace. Come fully into our lives and be our rock and stay. Through life's rugged road be our true and living way. Amen.

SATURDAY.

SPEAKING OF "COMING"—HOW?

"Come, take up the cross and follow me."—Matt. 10:21.

How to come to Christ. The Phillipian jailer came by believing. The soothsaying woman came by quitting her wickedness. Lydia came by just receiving the truth of Christ and acting upon it. Matthew came by taking up Christian service. Zaccheus came by being sorry for all his wrongs upon the people. Paul came by quitting his opposition and getting on the right side. How did you come? How may any one come? By getting rid of that which stands in the way and committing his way unto the Lord. Enlighten thy ignorance, avoid follies, kill malice, conquer greed and passion, correct errors, be self-condemnatory, eliminate our own faults and find God's way. All may come fully by enthroning Christ.

Prayer.—Most merciful God, Thou has given us a Saviour. From this hour, help us to take Him into our lives and to be taken out of the kingdom of Satan and out of death into life. Amen.

SUNDAY.

A REFLECTION.

"The works that I do shall ye do also." "Ye are my witnesses." "Go, thou, and do likewise." "Let the redeemed of the Lord say so."

The past two weeks' lessons have reflected a responsibility upon us as Christians. What is it? Soul saving. Leading in a definite way some definite life to God, and so living ourselves that they who see us may be helped definitely on the heavenward road.

It isn't so easy. The last thing the devil will let one do is to win some one else definitely to Christ. He will let us do most anything, if we will, but that. We may go to Church and prayer-meetings, be friendly to strangers, pray for the unsaved, attend conventions and listen to lectures; yea, build up a name as a Christian, but Satan says, "Don't do any personal work"—and, for a fact, we do find it an awful up-hill business to do personal work. One has to be honest and sincere in Christian living to be able to do it at all with any degree of effectiveness. But that is the claim of Christ on us. That is our responsibility. If we do it, He has promised that our joy shall be full.

Prayer.—Dear Father, if it be possible, fulfill Thy righteousness in us through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Not only take us out of the kingdom of heaven, but set us in the kingdom of the Lord and make us the means of Thy baptism upon Thy people around us. Amen.

J. EDWIN HARRIS.

STEWARDSHIP.

By J. E. O'QUINN.

(In the Baptist "Christian Index.")

Stewardship, as defined in Webster's Unabridged Dictionary, is a person who is entrusted with the goods (or property) of another. If we apply that definition in the realm of Christian stewardship, we find that it defines God as the owner of all our possessions, and we as His tenants at will. Then just as an earthly landlord has the right to require of his tenants a strict accounting, that he may have a just return upon his investment, even so has our Heavenly Landlord a right to demand of us an honest accounting. Many of us have presumed to deny and discountenance our stewardship, and simply because the Lord does not use human methods of collection, such as the sending of a sheriff with an attachment, or other like legal methods, we have dared to filch from His share of the proceeds, much that to Him belongeth, and many times all of His share. If we will give ourselves to an honest minute's thinking along this line, it will force itself upon us that the one and only reason for the depleted financial resources of the kingdom of God is explained by what our Lord says in Malachi 3:10, in which he charges us with having robbed him. What a glorious day it would be if God's hosts of Southern Baptists would come up valiantly and honestly pay God what is due Him! Not another appeal would ever have to be made for money; but on the other hand, the resources of the kingdom would so multiply that no hot-hearted young adventurer would ever have to be told that he could not obey the impulse to go out to the far-flung battle lines to tell the story of redeeming love, because there were no funds.

Let us remember that while God does not send the sheriff and hale us into court and levy legally His tax, that He just as surely sends the doctor, the high-mounting cost of living, the pests, the floods, the crime waves, war taxes and many more overburdening calamities that draw God's tax from the pockets of His dishonest stewards. How much better it would be to bring it lovingly, gratefully, cheerfully, obediently, rather than have our hearts bruised and our bodies overtaxed by the horrors that these many agencies of divine Providence is compelled to use to force us to obey Him. I know many cases where people whine that they cannot pay a tithe, and I know personally that they are paying much more than the tithe in hospital and doctor's bills, and very, very many of them are paying it to lawyers to try to shield their wayward sons and daughters from just penalties. Think of the heart-rending experiences they are called to pass through. Oh, how much better it would be to bring that tithe as a matter of loving worship, and service, and God stands at our heart's doors promising that if we will bring it faithfully, He will rebuke these devourers; and that our fields shall bubble over with harvests. Moreover, He tells us that we shall be a delightful-land.

We should know that Southern Baptists have a conservatively estimated annual income of one billion, five hundred million dollars, which if acknowledged as a stewardship responsibility, would bring into God's treasury more than one hundred million dollars every year. Mark you, that is based on what they now have. What would it be if they were faithful, when God promises for such faithfulness that He will open the windows and pour out that flood of blessing that there should not be room enough to take care of it. Oh, my comrades in the fellowship of Christ, how long will we live in beggary, and how long will we hinder the Father in bestowing that flood-tide blessing.

God provides the simplest way of obedience that one can possibly think of. His plan is "give as you get." It is so much easier to give as the income is allowed. All of us know well how difficult it is to catch up when we have allowed our obligations to pile up on us. Bring it on the first day of the week, according as God hath prospered us. Did you ever think how pitiful is the excuse God's stewards make as they try to arrange to pay God in some other way than as He has directed. Who are we that we should presume to improve God's plan? Hear me, dear friends: we had better do it the way our generous Landlord requires, for He threatens us that if we cannot give a satisfactory account, we shall be no longer steward. How it humiliates us to tell our friends that because we have stolen from our employer, he has fired us. How it ought to chagrin us that after all the lavish love a good and graciously generous Landlord, that we have stolen His goods and forced Him to dismiss us from the stewardship. Nor is it simply a dismissal from the stewardship; He faithfully throws on the screen a picture of the final reckoning. In the parable of the talents, He faithfully shows us that not only is the talent taken away, but the servants are commanded to bind the steward (unprofitable servant) hand and foot and cast him into outer darkness where there shall be weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth. I wonder if ever we have weighed these words: "weeping, wailing, gnashing (gritting) of teeth." Who is it that is thus dealt with? Hear me: a steward, an unprofitable servant. A horrible picture, do you say? Why, the very soul in you affirms that it is right. Would God be God, and would heaven be heaven, with robbers and thieves and defaulters all intermixed with faithful stewards? My friends, I don't want to be housed with thieves and robbers, down here, where I am in my carnal state, and heaven knows I do not want to be quartered with the thieves and robbers in that purified state, where the least impurity would rob it of its glory and beauty.

Let's quit arguing and peddling our lies about our responsibility to God. Let's go right to Him and get straight His will concerning us, and then like servants that truly expect to be with Him and share His glory in the afterwhile, let's say: "Speak, Lord, for Thy servant heareth"; and when without any of our revising we have seen His requirements, let us sing with the poet: "Where He leads me I will follow; I'll go with Him all the way."

UNION (ALAMANCE).

On the second Sunday in May and Saturday before, our second quarterly meeting for the year was held at Union, Alamance County. The day was fine, and the Church building, grounds and cemetery were in excellent condition.

The Sunday School, with Bro. Walter Garrison as superintendent, and his efficient co-workers, opened with a good attendance. The school has more than doubled in average attendance over the previous year. At the close of the Sunday School, Bro. M. R. Kirkman made a good Mothers' Day address.

The log hut being erected by the Church and Sunday School to meet the growing needs of the congregation, is progressing nicely. The building is well planned and is a nice structure.

The attendance at both the morning and afternoon service was large. There were quite a number of visitors present. Rev. R. A. Whitten preached at the morning hour to good acceptance; and at the close of the preaching service he administered the Lord's Supper to a large company of communicants. Rev. J. L. Foster was present and offered the opening prayer at the 11 o'clock hour. The pastor preached at the afternoon hour. The outlook for Church and school is encouraging.

WHAT IS A CHRISTIAN?

BY DR. W. A. HARPER. (Concluded from Last Week.)

3. The Christian an Autocrat.

In the third place, the Christian is an autocrat. This word does not sound well to our democratic ears, but the true Christian is a true autocrat.

But autocracy in its proper place is a blessing and a benediction. To see wherein this is true, let me quote the passage I have above referred to: "For I have learned in whatsoever state I am to be autarkes" (Phil. 4:11).

able word "autarkes." There is no passive contentment for the Christian. It would nullify the obligation of his democracy.

I am an autocrat, but not with reference to my brothers. In my relationship with them I am a democrat.

First, in reference to the material world. My autocracy does not consist of superiority over the material world as the pagan philosophers taught, nor in my independence of the material world as the non-Christian religions teach it.

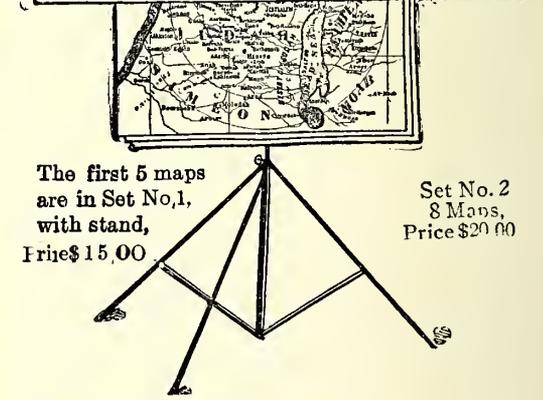

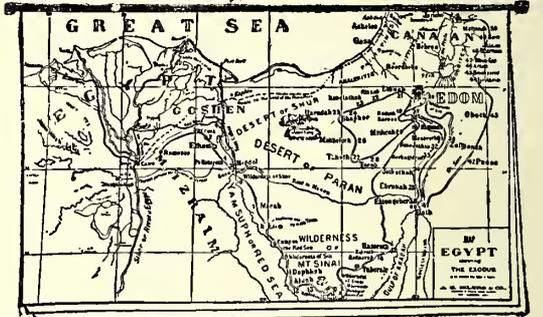

I was once talking with a sophomore in college who was having a hard time to reconcile religion and science. He was troubled deeply in spirit. We had talked for about an hour, and I had endeavored as best I could to reconcile his difficulties.

its lead. I asked him what nations had discovered the truths of science as we now have them. He answered properly, including England, France, Germany, Spain, Italy and America.

We have achieved wonders in the realm of science, and through invention made it the servant of our lives, but the end is not yet. As we advance in our conceptions of the Christian life and of its truth, the material world will serve us in ways undreamed and, at this time, undreamable.

But in the second place we are autocrats with reference to our own spirits. We are, as Christians, privileged to govern ourselves in such ways that we shall be autocrats with reference to the material world. We will never allow wealth, or pleasure, or appetite, or passion, or any other creature to enslave us. As Christian autocrats, we shall rule our own spirits and bodies as becometh children of the Most High, and we shall use circumstances to minister to our souls, never to limit or to conquer them. So shall we be superior to the material surroundings of our life.

4. The Christian a Thanatocrat.

In the fourth place, the Christian is a thanatocrat. I have had to coin my word to connote this characteristic, but its implication is evident. A thanatocrat is superior to death. He survives the grave. He lives an endless life. He has an immortal destiny. This is the completional teaching of the Christian religion, and it is lofty and high-raised above the tenets of the other religious systems.

The destiny that awaits the Christian is more than immortality. It is eternal life, eternal life sharing the divine presence and cooperating in the realization of the divine purpose. The influence of this conception over the life and conduct of the Christian cannot be overestimated. Every moment of time as of eternity for the conscious thanatocrat is dignified with the thought that "I am an ever-living being, I have a soul-kindness to God, and my deeds are of eternal significance."

There can be no trivialities for such a person. Every experience is a harvest field of spiritual substance. Every moment is to be garnered for eternity.

The thanatocrat regards personality as the greatest boon and devotes himself to its development in terms of the revelation of God in Jesus Christ, of his democratic relation to his brotherman, and of his autocratic superiority over the material circumstances of his daily life. Personality is to be developed, in his judgment, because it is the abiding force of the universe, able to survive the grave and destined to eternal growth and improvement.

Christianity and Life's Insistent Queries.

Christianity thus gives satisfying answers to the four insistent queries of the human heart. These four questions are:

1. What is man's relation to God? He is a theocrat, answers our religion, a God-ruled man, a man of love, because God is love.

2. What is man's relation to man? He is a democrat, answers Christianity. He is the spiritual offspring of God, and so a brother to every man, woman and child in the world.

3. What is man's relation to the world? He is an autoerat, says our faith. In whatever situation he finds himself, he is superior, he is able to use it to advance his spiritual interests, he is prepared to derive the highest values from it and to incorporate them into his personal way of life.

4. What is man's destiny? He is a thanatocrat. He shall survive the shock of death. He shall live forever, and he shall never cease to grow and develop. This is his spiritual heritage, because he is the offspring of the Divine.

What Is a Christian?

Let us end with our query set for this hour—What is a Christian?

He is a theocrat—the God of love rules him.

He is a democrat—he is a brother to all men.

He is an autoerat—no circumstance can conquer his soul.

He is a thanatocrat—he shall live forever.

These are the abiding characteristics of the Christian, and they satisfy.

OBITUARIES.

McCOLLUM.

William Monroe McCollum was born February 24, 1872, and died May 2, 1929. His age was 57 years, 2 months, and 7 days. Left to mourn their loss are his wife, thirteen children (nine boys and four girls), three brothers, one sister, and twenty-six grandchildren. The children are Mrs. Buck Comer, Mrs. F. B. Moore, Mrs. R. E. Sharpe, Mrs. J. E. Farrar, William Baynes, Drewary Odell, Frank Vance, Robert Trmman, Kennon Ivy, Monroe Clay, John Clyde, Carl Nesby and Vestal Phalti.

Bro. McCollum was a member of New Lebanon Christian Church at the time of his death, and had been for several years. He was a loyal member, a good citizen and a devoted father, and was highly respected in his community.

His death was almost sudden, for he was sick only one hour before he passed out to meet his Maker, but during this short illness he passed through agony.

Just before he died he told his wife that he would have to go, but all was well.

The funeral was conducted by the writer, in the presence of a large gathering. His body was laid to rest in the New Lebanon Cemetery to await the resurrection. May the Lord comfort the bereaved family.

BY REV. STANLEY C. HARRELL.

A TRIUMPH OF ARBITRATION.—

Gradually the nations of the world are learning the better way of settling their differences. They are turning from the way of the sword to the way of arbitration in the light of reason and justice. The recent triumph of arbitration is the amicable settlement of the dispute between Chile and Peru over the possession of Tacna-Arica. Tacna-Arica is a small territory, lying between Chile and Peru. Both nations laid claim to this territory. According to the way nations have been settling such disputes in the past, these nations would have gone to war. Much of the war would probably have been fought within the bounds of the territory involved in the dispute. The result would have been to lay waste and destroy the land for which they were contending. A tremendous debt for carrying on the war would have been incurred, and the blood of the finest youth of both countries would have been shed. According to the terms of the agreement, Chile gets Arica, and Tacna goes to Peru. The issue has been a bone of contention and a potential source of war for about half a century. The kindly offices of the United States did not result directly in a settlement; but were doubtless responsible in an indirect way for the final agreement which was reached by the two nations dealing directly with each other. If small nations can peaceably settle their difficulties, there is no valid reason why the big nations cannot do the same thing. It is only necessary to follow the same principles of selfishness and justice.

BELIEF AND LOVE.—

The real question that confronts the forces of Christendom today is which shall be the dominant factor in determining the relationships between Christians. Shall it be belief or love? The troubles that have arisen between Christians in the past have not been caused primarily because of their particular and individualistic beliefs. But they have arisen because in the eagerness to defend and propagate individual and denominational beliefs, those who have been engaged in the struggle have lost sight of the fact that love is the all-important factor in Christian relationships. Christians must never lose sight of the words of Paul. "Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not love, I am become as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not love, I am nothing. And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not love, it profiteth me nothing."

The Christian world is not going to scrap its beliefs. It will be a sad day for Christianity if it should ever accept the dangerous error; that it does not matter what a man believes. It is what we believe, and believe implicitly, that makes us Christians. Many of us are less useful Christians than we might be, only because certain vital beliefs have not profoundly entered into the depths of our souls. The periods of great development and progress in the history of the Church have come because great spiritual truths, which had been lost or obscured, have freshly gripped the souls of men. When the future brings to us larger spiritual conquests, it will be through the acquiring of vital Christian beliefs. The Christian world is not laboring to destroy or undermine belief. It is seeking only to enthrone love in the hearts of those who profess to follow the Christ.

PRESBYTERIAN-REFORMED SITUATION.—

The 141st General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A., in its opening sessions, and by unanimous rising vote, expressed its desire to enter into negotiations concerning closer co-operation and, if possible, organic union with the Reformed Church in America and the United Presbyterian Church. The assembly further authorized its department of Church co-operation and union to take up negotiations looking to union with another of the Presbyterian and Reformed bodies which may be willing to enter into such negotiations at this time. The foregoing action, which is typical of the conservative traditions of Presbyterianism when inspired with a spirit of progress, will be seen to proceed along the lines of least resistance. The assembly evidently believes that the most promising and practical form of Church union is that which brings Churches of the same family together.

At the same time and by a rising vote of practical unanimity, the assembly voted to authorize its department of Church co-operation and union to respond to the invitation of the Protestant Episcopal Church, sponsored by the late Bishop Brent, to enter into conferences looking toward the possibility of more vital union.

The proposals for organic union with the Methodist Episcopal Church, while not confirmed by the same specific action as that taken in reference to the union with bodies of the Reformed and Presbyterian family, have been continued with an expression of a resolute purpose to proceed to the consideration of the practicality and method of organic union. While the sessions of the present general assembly are well under way, one may safely say that the direction of the current of the Presbyterian toward an ever-increasing accomplishment of organic union has not changed. The stream is flowing steadily forward, not without eddies and not without temporary retardations of the volume of the current from time to time. The present general assembly promises, in spirit and in temper, to put the seal of approval upon the spirit of this far-reaching enterprise, and to confirm at least some of the practical proposals looking to more immediate accomplishment.—Dr. Wm. Hiram Foulkes, in Christian Herald.

THE POWER OF PERSONALITY.—

The news is just now being circulated throughout the world that a satisfactory agreement has been reached by the commission which has been meeting in Paris to fix the terms of the reparations which Germany must pay to her victorious opponents of the World War. In an article dealing with the reparations settlement, the Literary Digest carries this sentence: "On all sides it is agreed that the success of the Paris reparations conference was largely due to the persuasive powers of Owen D. Young, its chairman." This statement is clearly not an attempt at exaggerated praise. The Literary Digest is not given to making exaggerated statements. And when one considers the number of times when it looked as if the negotiations were deadlocked, and that the attempt was doomed to failure, one must recognize the fact that some extraordinary and unusual factors must have been operating to turn what seemed to be inevitable failure into success. The Digest credits the success to Mr. Young's persuasive powers. This is but another way of expressing the highest sort of tribute to the power of human personality. For manifestly it was more than facile argument and tactful diplomacy that turned the tide. For a man to successfully fill the position occupied by Mr. Young demands that he be possessed of rare qualifications, and that they be present in an unusual degree. There must have been absolute confidence in the integrity and sincerity of such a man. Intellectual vision and a thorough grasp of the fundamental principles involved in the issue were demanded of him. For a man to successfully handle negotiations upon which depends the future welfare of the world for certainly the next hundred years, means that he was possessed of a power which is more than the sum total of all the characteristics which might be enumerated.

The great crises of human history have always depended for their solution upon the power of human personality. We may not be able to agree upon a definition of human personality, but there is a pretty clear-cut conception of what we mean when we use the term. For the handling of difficult problems there must always be an intellectual grasp of the issues involved. For the completion of any great undertaking, there must be sufficient material resources available. But when the issues are clearly understood, and when the resources are available, it still requires the potent factor of human personality to complete the task.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Rev. J. Fuller Johnson, Durham, N. C., is this week assisting the pastor, Rev. J. U. Fogleman, in a series of meetings at Graham-Providence Memorial Church.

Dr. C. C. Ryan, pastor First Christian Church, Richmond, Va., sails this week for a three months' tour of the Holy Land, Egypt and Europe. We wish for him a happy vacation period and a safe return.

Rev. T. J. Green moves his place of residence and postoffice address from Elon College, N. C., where he has resided some years, to R. F. D. No. 1, Ramseur, N. C. Brother Green is one of our very successful and much beloved pastors and serves successfully several of our strong rural churches.

Rev. H. G. Robertson, who recently graduated from Elon College, N. C., and who is now temporarily located at Lynchburg, Va., spent a short while in Richmond last week. He has accepted the place of Educational Director of the First Christian Church and will assume his duties on June 16th.

Dr. W. W. Staley preached the memorial sermon to a large audience at Oak Level Church, Rev. J. Fuller Johnson, pastor, Sunday, June 2nd. After the sermon, by invitation of the pastor, the Mission Secretary made a talk on missions. A true and genuine memorial mission work is to our Lord and Saviour. Dr. Staley was the preacher also at the evening-hour service.

Rev. P. H. Fleming, D. D., Burlington, N. C., was unanimously re-elected superintendent of Public Welfare for Alamance County on Monday, June 3rd. Dr. Fleming has served the county acceptably in this capacity for several terms now, and we congratulate him on so conducting the affairs of this important office as to meet the unanimous approval of the board under whom he serves, and his constituents.

Under date of June 6th, Rev. G. D. Hunt writes from LaGrange, Ga.: "Our meeting is still in progress at First Christian Church here. Fine attendance and much interest manifested. The opportunity for the church here is unlimited, and we are trying to strengthen the spiritual life of the sons and daughters of God here. There is a beautiful spirit of fellowship manifested by both preachers and people in attendance. The meeting will close Sunday night, June 9th."

With the honorable exception of the Times, the New York newspapers received President Hoover's appeal for law observance with contempt and derision, insofar as it relates to respect for the liquor laws. It was a brave thing that he did. Standing before the leading newspaper editors and publishers of the country, speaking to the men who hold it in their power to ruin his administration by creating public opinion adverse to his policies and acts, he protested against the current editorial practice.—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Conventions are now in order, and every Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Society should seek to be represented in their respective bodies. This week the Western North Carolina is meeting at Shiloh Church, near Ramseur; the Valley of Virginia, at Newport Church. Next week the North Carolina and Virginia meets at Happy home Church, in Rockingham County, for a two days' session, June 20th and 21st. The Eastern North Carolina and the Eastern Virginia Conventions meet in July. Their programs, with date and place of meeting, will be given soon.

The Sunday School of Long's Chapel, Dr. P. H. Fleming, pastor, recently decided by vote to join the increasing number of our schools taking the once a month offering for Missions. There are only three or four active schools in the North Carolina and Virginia Conference now that do not take this offering, and it is believed that in the near future every school in the conference will be taking the offering. The fact is that every school in every conference of our Southern Convention could well afford to take a once a month offering for Missions, since they have all to gain and nothing to lose by such a course, as the experience of those who have tried it proves.

"As a fraternal representative from the Christian Church, I was most agreeably impressed with the personnel, organization and work of the National Council of Congregational Churches in the United States. The excellent spirit demonstrated, in which the report on interchurch relations, with proposals for union with the General Convention of the Christian Churches, was considered, and the enthusiasm eminent in the unanimous affirmative decision for union with the Christian denomination, together with the spirit of fraternal fellowship throughout the entire session. It was marked by the omission of irrelevant material and expression, but filled with devotion and compassion, with a common faith for a common task."—S. L. Beougher, Wadley, Ala.

This interesting information is sent by Miss Margaret Alston, secretary of the Woman's Board of the S. C. C.: "Five of us from Liberty, Vance, went to New Hope Church the fourth Sunday afternoon of May and organized a Woman's Missionary Society with fourteen members. They certainly did seem interested, and I think are going to have a good society. They have a good leader for president, and that means a whole lot. The president of the society is Mrs. Virginia Perry, Route 1, Louisburg, N. C." THE SUN'S editor has often said, if he were pastor of a church he would never let up in his efforts until he had in that church a well organized and active Woman's Missionary Society, for the missionary society is the pastor's strong arm.

There are Churches that have taken the special missionary offering but have not sent the same in because there is hope of increasing the offering. There are other Churches that have not, on one account or another, taken the offering, or, if they have done so, have not reported. Surely every Church will this year take an offering for missions, since the only source of missionary income is through free-will gifts of Churches, Sunday Schools and individuals direct to the mission fund. We cannot understand how any Church can hope to exist long that gives nothing to missions. This is that for which the Church was established and for which it exists, and when it fails to carry out the purpose of its founding and its existence, it has little excuse for continuing. The Church proves its right to exist, and finds its growth, only in its effort and undertaking to give the gospel to others and to make known to the world, beyond its own doors, that which was given from heaven to Peter in a revelation: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the Living God." To make known that revelation and to declare that fact to all the world, Christ founded and Christ said He would build His Church, and the gates of hell should not prevail against it. In carrying the missionary message, the revealed fact that Jesus Christ is the Son of the Living God, to the world, the Church has the presence, the commission and the power of our Lord; but without effort to carry that message it has the promise of neither the presence nor the power of our Lord. A non-missionary Church is a powerless sort of a man-commissioned and man-conducted enterprise. Outside of that it is helpless, not to say hopeless.

JUBILEE NEWS.

By a unanimous vote, the National Council of Congregational Churches, in its biannual convention, in Detroit, Mich., endorsed the merger plan of the Christians and Congregationalists under the names of the General Convention of the Christian and Congregational Churches. This action is to be presented to the General Convention of the Christian Church at Piqua, in October, for its action, and if favorable the details of organization and procedure will be worked out between the two Churches. Local Churches will not be affected in name or in policy and a local Church may retain its name of Christian or Congregational or take the two names with a hyphen between. In both the Christian and the Congregational Churches the local Church is supreme, and the principle first effect which will be felt if the merger is finally consummated is the larger fellowship which will be enjoyed by both Churches in its general gatherings and in its enlarged activities in kingdom work.

In Ohio and Indiana, the membership of the two Churches is quite equally divided. In New England and Far West, the Congregational Churches are many times as strong as the Christians, but in the South again the Christian Church is stronger. Altogether, the Congregationalists have a membership of over 900,000, while the Christian Church membership exceeds 100,000, making a total membership of over a million. This is several hundred thousand larger than the total membership of the United Church of Canada, which is the only merger of separate denominations which can be compared with this proposed union. Other divided denominations have reunited, but this is the first union of two distinct denominations into one fellowship if the action of the Congregationalists is ratified at Piqua.

THE SUN LETTER.

It is really encouraging to the circulation manager to receive so many letters from SUN subscribers, telling us of their appreciation of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. I want to quote you a part of one letter we received this week, as follows:

"Dear Christian Sun,—Inclosed you will find two dollars for my renewal to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Many thanks for sending THE SUN after my subscription expired. Long live the dear SUN and its dear editors. I am an old subscriber; will be eighty years old my next birthday. I have been taking THE SUN for nearly forty years."

Think of it! A subscriber for forty years and still a subscriber. We wish every family in our denomination that is not a subscriber would become a subscriber and let THE SUN carry its rays of good thought into their homes.

We want to give club rates of five new subscribers for $7.50 up to July 1st. Send us a club.

THE AVERAGE MAN.

"But he that received one talent went and digged in the earth and hid his lord's money."
—Matt. 25:1.

The three men to whom their master gave talents represent the various types of man in the world today who are given talents, each according to their abilities. In the story, the talent refers to a metallic substance, as money; but, symbolically, it represents in our lives certain gifts or capacities for rendering service. The man who received one talent represents the average man.

The man who received five talents represents the genius. There are few men in this class. His field is somewhat restricted, in that few people receive five talents. It is to be noticed, however, that many who do receive the five talents do not use them, and soon drop into the one-talent classification. The genius is the man who is endowed with unusual power, exceptional knowledge and extreme brilliancy. In the field of literature, we think of the names of the Shakespeares, Brownings, Tennysons and Longfellow. In this particular field, these men seem to possess rare ability in writing, and used to their best ability their native endowment. In religion there are men such as Martin Luther, John Wesley, John Calvin and others who seemed to have an imperishable desire to further the kingdom. These men erected Churches and became the leaders of certain denominational groups and foremost in promoting the name of Jesus Christ. In art, one thinks of such five talented men as Raphael, Michael Angelo, and others, whose ability and gift is beyond comparison. In music, one thinks of Beethoven, Paderewski and Mozart. In discovery and invention, we rejoice in thinking of Thomas Edison, who is responsible for several hundred inventions. He truly was endowed with rare gifts. He came into the world with five talents.

But many who came into the world with extra ability have failed to make use of their gifts. As the poet Gray considered the scenes before his eyes on the eve when he wrote his "Elegy in the Country Churchyard," he must have been thinking of men who had failed to use their five talents. Listen to his words:

"Full many a gem of purest ray serene,
The dark, unfathomed caves of ocean bear.
Full many a flower is born to blush unseen
And waste its fragrance on the desert air."

Full many a man wastes his five talents on the desert air, because opportunity does not readily open unto him. He often fails because, realizing he is born with superability, comes to the point when he ceases to study. He relies too strongly upon native endowment. Many a genius has gone down to a life of degradation simply because he failed to realize the value of his extra capacity for growth. Let us, therefore, not be discouraged if we are not in the classification of the genius. While his work counts for much, he often suffers defeat. We read that Homer finally became a beggar. Sir Francis Bacon ended his life in disgrace. Sir Walter Raleigh was executed in public. Herbert Spencer died in want of the necessities of life. Goldsmith's "Vicar of Wakefield" had to be sold for a petty sum to save the writer from prison.

The man with the two talents is sometimes referred to as the superior citizen. He is not quite a genius, yet is above the average man. In the parable we read that the man with two talents was wise, in that he invested all that was given him, and therefore received twice as much as he had in the beginning. But let us pass to the man with the one talent. The average man; the man of our class.

He that received one talent went and digged on the earth and hid his lord's money. In the parable we notice that Jesus gives a rather unexpected turn toward the men who received more than one talent. Ordinarily we would expect him to say severe things about the rich and gifted of earth who oftentimes squander their talents and possessions. Since he loved the poor so dearly, we would naturally expect Him to take sides with the poor man with only "one talent." But as we have seen, the man with five talents gains five extra talents for making use of the original talents. The man with two gained two more. Indeed, it was to the man with one talent that Jesus spoke most severely. The great lesson to be gleaned from this parable is not for the gifted five-talented people of the earth, but to that much larger audience of average men. Jesus speaks to men and women of average ability who put their limited gifts and abilities to no good use. To those of us who bury our talents. Indeed, the world moves forward on the faithfulness of average men. Let them, therefore, consider the grave dangers to which they are exposed.

A grave danger confronting the one-talent average man is that he might hide his talent in the earth by being led to believe he has no chance in the world, simply because there are other people who have five talents. He feels very sensitive and easily becomes peevish. He grows into a state of jealousy. The person who fails to use his one talent commits just as great a crime as the person who fails to use his five. God does not expect any one to use talents with which he is not supplied. The master in the story gave unto each man according to his ability. Because the average man did not use what he had, the master took from him that which he originally possessed, and ordered him into a state of suffering. "Take from him the talent and give it unto him which hath ten talents. Cast the unprofitable servant into outer darkness; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth."

How foolish for one to fail to use what he has because he does not have as much as some one else. Indeed, it would seem foolish for a man to place his Ford car in the garage and never use it simply because some one else that he knew had a larger car. It is foolish for a Church member to sit idly by and hide his talent for singing simply because he cannot sing as well as the choir director. Instead, let us, as average men, resolve to use the one talent God has so graciously bestowed upon us. There is a place in the world and in the Church for the services of every man, woman and child. I am thinking of a man who failed in health and was not permitted to use his talent for the Lord in preaching. But when he consecrated that one talent to the Lord, he found that it could be used elsewhere, and today he is a great philanthropist. God led him to be a business man and an honor to the kingdom. If he couldn't preach he could make money for God. Sometimes the rich people are unduly criticised for not doing greater things for the Lord and the community in which they live. Such criticism usually comes from the lips of one-talented people who are jealous. They say, I would do more if I had more—when in reality they are not using what they have. If a person is not serving God with what little ability he has, what reason have we to think that he would serve Him if he had more? If we fail to put one talent to work, it is to be concluded that five would be used in the same idle fashion.

FRANKLIN, VA.

Two fine books for preachers came to me last week. These volumes were edited and compiled by Rev. Gordon Hurlbutt, Th. D., and are entitled, "Wings of the Spirit" and "Windows and Wings." They are published by the Standard Press, 220 First Street, Louisville, Ky.

These books contain a wealth of worth-while material, including several hundred illustrations from the lives and experiences of several hundred leading ministers from the leading evangelical Churches of America. Besides illustrations, there are stirring narratives, startling coincidents, striking analogies, notable discoveries, stimulating suggestions and inspiring poems.

The author of these books prefaces them with a statement that they are designed to contribute toward the triumph of the Eternal Christ in universal righteousness. He then sets forth twelve maxims for preachers which, to my mind, are worthwhile. If all of our preachers would practice these maxims in their sermonizing, there would be an increased interest shown in Church life and Church attendance. For, says the author, "preaching is public discourse designed and adapted to instruct men in the way of righteousness, peace and joy." Hence, as preachers:

"1. Put preparation of the messenger before that of the message. Pray earnestly for humility, insight, courage, love.

"2. Grow rather than build the sermon. Every preacher should have a homoleptic garden in which sermons on the greatest themes are constantly growing by addition of material from current reading and from observation and experience.

"3. Have a definite object rather than a subject, and stay close to your hearers, even if it should be necessary to depart from your chosen theme.

"4. Keep your specific object before you in both preparation and delivery, and make everything subservient to it.

"5. Use the conversational rather than the declamatory style of address. Avoid pulpit shouting; for, as a rule, the louder the preacher yells, the less the people hear with the spiritual ear.

"6. Make your words clear to the ear and your thoughts clear to the mind.

"7. Let your message be concrete, rather than abstract; specific, rather than general. Intellectual preaching is not always intelligent preaching.

"8. Make much of selection and use of illustrations. A great illustration taken from life and presented with skill and moral earnestness is a great sermon in itself.

"9. Cultivate the imagination, which is a religious power of prime importance. Read great poetry often. The Bible is largely unrimed poetry, and Jesus was the world's greatest poet.

"10. Yield to the sentiments and tastes of your audience as far as possible while making your audience yield to you in your main object.

"11. Practice the Golden Rule in the pulpit. Nowhere is this needed more. Be fair in opposing ideas and their advocates, and remember that perfect justice always requires sympathy. Be courteous and considerate toward all.

"12. Gauge the length of your sermon by the attention and interest of the audience rather than by the clock. A sermon may be tedious yet short, while a long sermon may be interesting. Some sermons should be forty-five minutes; others, ten minutes."

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

CHRISTIAN UNION.

From the reports of the National Council of the Congregational Church, in session at Detroit last week, one easily gathers the spirit of our Congregational brethren and their zeal for union. Surely no body of men and women, influenced by the spirit of Christ, could have been more fraternal and considerate of those in other Churches, and holding a different denominational name, than the Congregationalists were to us Christians. If the merger of Congregationalists and Christians, in their national bodies, is not effected, it will certainly not be the fault of the Congregationalists, nor with the desire and determination to do their part. Elsewhere in this issue of THE SUN will be found observations and an interpretation of the council by one of our editorial staff, Dr. W. A. Harper, who was present and was a keen observer, as his report indicates, of that which transpired. We are also printing the articles of the union agreed upon by joint commission of the Congregationalists and Christians and now ratified by the Congregationalists. Let SUN readers study these articles and the report of the council and form their own conclusions. It will be seen by all who read, we think, that the union is to begin at, and for some time to come is to affect only, what may be called the head of the two communions. That is to say, that the legislation and decisions reached have to do with the national and the larger governing or advisory councils, conventions and groups. The local Church and the local procedure are to go on as they are in both denominations until the local Churches and local groups shall of themselves decide that the time has come for them to merge or to unite, or in any wise change their polity and procedure. This is as it should be, for two reasons:

1. Both in the Congregational and Christian Churches there is local self-government, a thorough-going democracy, a full and free power invested in the local congregation in matters of government and control. There is no high authority, in either denomination, that can compel conduct and government of the democratic groups against their will. The strength of both Churches, as well as the weakness, consists in the fact that they govern by the consent of the governed. For the sake of maintaining and perpetuating this democratic government in the local congregation, it is well enough that the national bodies leave the matter, as the Congregationalists had agreed to do, and as it is presumed the General Convention will agree to do, to the local Church or group.

2. There is a deeper reason and a better cause than this, however, for leaving the matter of union with the local Church, and that deeper reason is that there can be no real union without and until there is spiritual union. It is neither legislation, nor organization, nor convention, nor councils, that produce or beget union, after all. You can only find union, real union, where those of kindred mind and spirit agree to go the way together under the leadership of Him only whom God gave "to be the Head over all things to the Church" (Eph. 1:22). What the world needs today, and especially the Protestant world, is not organic union, but spiritual union. Organic union is only a means to an end, and should be great means under the leadership of our Lord, to the end that all men everywhere may believe in Him, whom to know aright is life everlasting. It is a most hopeful sign that denominations are talking organic union, because it means, or should mean, that spiritual union is taking place, in fact, in many minds and in many communities and in many groups, and it was this spiritual union for which our Lord prayed in the seventeenth chapter of John when His heart went out to God in these memorable words: "That they all may be one; as Thou, Father, art in me and I in Thee, that they also may be one in us; that the world may believe that Thou hast sent me" (John 17:21). What we are striving for is that larger and better union of soul and spirit about which our Saviour was speaking to the Father, for we know that the union between the Father and the Son was spiritual.

We rejoice at the evidence of organic union only as it paves the way for and attempts to lead us to oneness in Jesus Christ, the world's only Saviour and Redeemer.

A GREAT CHALLENGE TO A GREAT TASK.

During the meeting of the board of trustees of Elon College, May 28th, a telegram from the General Education Board, New York, came, announcing the fact that $150,000 would be given by the General Board of Education to Elon College on condition that the college raise $400,000 to pay off all indebtedness, and $600,000 to add to its endowment, including, of course, this conditional gift of $150,000. Immediately the board accepted the challenge and wired the donors their gratitude for this magnanimous offer. It was decided by the board to project a campaign, at as early a date as possible, to raise $1,000,000 for Elon College, and a committee was named to set up the organization necessary to the campaign and to direct the same. This committee consists of Mr. P. J. Carlton, Richmond, Va.; Hon. E. E. Holland, Suffolk, Va.; Lieutenant Governor J. E. West, Suffolk, Va.; Mr. C. D. Johnston, superintendent of the Christian Orphanage, Elon College, N. C.; J. O. Atkinson, Secretary of Missions, Elon College, N. C., and the President of the Southern Christian Convention, Dr. L. E. Smith, is to be ex-officio member of the committee. It was not decided as to the exact date of beginning the campaign, but it was decided definitely to proceed with the organization work and to begin the actual campaign for funds as soon as, in the judgment of the committee, conditions justify. Such a campaign is necessary and should be welcomed throughout the Convention, under whose ownership and auspices the college is conducted, and by the friends of the institution and Christian education everywhere. The college has, as all CHRISTIAN SUN readers know, an ample and adequate plant than which, for the purpose in view, none in the State or the South is more beautiful and efficient. The great handicap of the institution is its indebtedness and lack of funds to meet adequately the demands of a growing institution and of constantly changing and improving conditions in the field of higher education. Every loyal son and daughter of the Christian denomination and of Elon College should rally to the support of the college and welcome, with gratitude, both the challenging and magnanimous proposition made by the General Education Board and the decision of the board of trustees to put on and to wage with vigor and to a successful conclusion the campaign for $1,000,000 for our own Elon College.

It is certainly a high commendation for our beloved institution, and shows the great esteem in which this institution is held, in the field of A-grade colleges, to be recognized by the General Board of Education and to elicit from this board this generous offer. It must be borne in mind that there are hundreds, not to say thousands, of institutions of higher learning appealing to this General Board for help, and the fact that our institution out of this number is thus recognized will carry joy and gladness to all friends of our college. This of itself should stir our pride and stimulate us to a larger liberality and a greater love for our Elon.

THE BIBLE AS HISTORY.

II.

3. Bible history is more universal than profane history. Most all profane history is local in its records, as Grecian, Roman, French, English and American history; but the Bible deals with the human race in all its locations. The Ten Commandments were not given for one race or one nation, but for all mankind. Roman law applied to Romans; Egyptian laws to Egyptians. The laws of Babylon were for Babylonians. The laws of the Bible are not only for all peoples, but for all time. There have been no additions or revisions to the laws of the Bible. Its history has been as universal as geography and the human race, and so accurate that critics have not been able to destroy its credibility or its influence upon men and nations. Wherever it has gone, it has fastened itself not only upon the minds but the hearts of men. It is printed in more languages, sold in more countries, purchased and read by more people than any other history: yea, than any other book. It is not only more universal in scope, but in its application, than profane history.

4. Bible history is more prophetic than profane history. The history of Jesus Christ is as well established as the War of the Roses or the French Revolution; and His entrance into the world was announced by Isaiah 750 years before His birth in Bethlehem. The prophets in Bible history challenge the faith of mankind. Profane history does not enter this field at all. It deals only with events. The Bible does both. It foretells the birth of Jesus and records the fact of His birth, and the incidents that attended that memorable night with shepherds going to the manger after they had heard the angels singing, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth, peace and good will toward men."

5. Bible history is fairer than profane history. It records the faults as well as the virtues of its heroes. David is described as a "man after God's own heart," and yet his plan for the death of Uriah and his sin with Bathsheba are recorded plainly in the Bible. The sin of Adam and Eve, of Cain, of Jacob, of Peter, and many more good men with bad faults, is recorded, and nothing is covered up to shield the reputation of any of God's children. Profane history lauds its heroes and says nothing of their faults.

6. Bible history more productive of good than profane history. The Hebrew nation had its faults, but it was better than other nations of that day. The Hebrews were better as bondmen than the Egyptians were as freemen, as rulers and taskmasters. The Bible gave the world Christian civilization, and that is the finest civilization known to man. The growth of Bible history culminated in the Christian religion, and that has so increased the intelligence, the enterprise, the discovery and invention of mankind as to regenerate the religious, social, civil and commercial interests of the world. It rides upon the deep, speaks across continents, flies through the air, floods the world with pictures, and the temple of nature with song. It fills the temple with praise, the home with love, the school with knowledge, and the nations with wealth. It changed the naked savages of Britain into civilized men, regenerated Madagascar, and planted prosperity in the islands of the sea. It feeds the hungry, heals the sick, cares for the helpless, maintains order among men, shines through myriads of lights along the streets and far out upon the sea. Profane history is great, but it has nothing but a dead tale to tell.

THE PROHIBITION AWARD.

William Randolph Hearst, yellow journalist, dean of the wet press, grown rich as the proponent of outlawed causes, has just awarded a major prize of $25,000 for the best way to enforce the eighteenth amendment. The wet press, the Catholic Church, the thirsty individuals the nation over have forthwith acclaimed him as the apostle of liberty. Hearst is all smiles. He loves popular praise. It makes him millions.

The Hearst award does not deal with the eighteenth amendment. It assumes that the American people mean to keep that article as fundamental in the supreme law of the land. So it recommends that the Volstead act and the Jones Law be repealed and new laws less stringent be enacted in their stead.

The heart of the recommendation is that there shall be a vast difference legally recognized between distilled liquors and naturally fermented liquors. This is an insidious suggestion. The presumption that since nature, in a free state, produces intoxicating wines and brandies, they thereby being the product of the Divine (Divine means natural law to Hearst and his associates), should be as freely imbibed as the water, also God-given.

The award is blandly ignorant of the vital issues involved in the whole situation, that a man is just as much drunk whether his intoxication comes from wine or from whiskey, and that alcoholic beverages are habit-forming and injurious to man's physical, mental and spiritual estate.

The conscience of the American people has spoken on the prohibition issue. They want the law observed and all good citizens will observe it. All Christians in particular will observe it and co-operate with the government in its enforcement.

Mr. Hearst may rave and grow rich as a consequence, but the American people have moral sense, and that sense has been registered. He is battering his head against a stone wall.

Let the sober-minded Christian citizenry of our land beware of Hearst and his award. He is a Greek bearing gifts. Already it is estimated he has cleared a million out of the $25,000 investment made for the first award.

CONGREGATIONAL-CHRISTIAN UNION.

AS SEEN FROM THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

BY DR. F. G. COFFEN

President of General Convention of the Christian Church and Chairman of Commission on Christian Unity.

The pending union between the Congregational and the Christian Churches is unique in ecclesiastical history, in that it pioneers the way in interdenominational unions, though from present indications it is but the forerunner of many of its kind. Thus far, all conferences have proceeded with such unanimity in the official groups considering the subject that one is impressed that the guidance is divine. Not once has the desirability of the union of the two denominations been questioned by these official groups. The best method of effecting it has been their chief concern. Extended studies in the construction and organization of the two bodies reveal no insurmountable difficulties. It seems possible to administer all moral obligations—specific and implied—and all legal corporate functions without obscuring identities, diverting from original purposes or vitiating functions.

Purpose of the Union.

Dominating the whole movement has been the purpose more effectually to promote the kingdom of God among men. There is no desire on the part of either negotiating body to annex the other, or any of its funds or its institutions in any way to its own advantage. The aim of the union is to realize that unity for which Christ prayed and labored and to effect its actual extension in the world. Through it, it is hoped that a greater efficiency may be realized in the common, universal task of our Christianity. By ultimately concentrating management, thus conserving the expense involved in dual administration, larger fields may be occupied. Joining strength in territories where one or the other denomination is weak will greatly strengthen the morale of both in that territory. Making the stronger features of each complement the other—country and city, east and west, north and south, white and colored—will give mutual inspiration and helpfulness by provoking one another to good works. Great good should result to the mission fields jointly occupied and to other enterprises operating in the same areas. A like advantage should accrue to local and territorial fields in the management of joint interests. More than all this, it seems to be in the way of a right answer to the yearning of our Lord for the oneness of his followers.

Such a union as is here envisioned is not the end. It is but the beginning of a larger interdenominational program which the two commissions already have actually set in motion. It is regarded as a step in the right direction, rather than as a journey completed. For that reason, some features of the plan contemplate a wider inclusion in fellowship at a later time.

Perhaps readers of the Congregationalist will want to have in mind just what the Christian Church is, for there has been not a little confusion in disentangling its identity from the Disciples of Christ. Historically, it is distinctively an American Church. It is a result of the spirit of freedom which stirred the nation of Revolutionary War days. Its beginnings had no intent toward an organization; in fact, organization was the very thing which the movement sought to avoid. Strange to relate these movements, except the first, were not the outcome of stormy friction. They were not contentious or marked by heat and strife. The people who promoted them sought peace, often retiring into obscure corners. The first of three independent and unrelated movements which resulted in its establishment took place in North Carolina in 1793, under the preaching of Rev. James O'Kelly and associates. It was a movement toward democracy in religion, advocating the abolition of one-man power in the Church, the recognition of the right of individual relation to God, and the interpretation of the Scriptures by each one for himself. This movement began under the title of "Republican Methodists," which was later dropped for the designation of "Christians." The name was not selected then as the name for a Church or denomination, but in avoidance of party or divisive titles. Eight years afterwards (1801), a similar movement began in Vermont, under Dr. Abner Jones, a physician-layman. This, too, embodied the tenets of the Bible as the only creed, the name Christian, and the inherent and inalienable right of the individual in religion.

The third movement evolved out of the now famous revival throughout Kentucky in 1804. In it were many advocates who spread throughout the Middle West, preaching a religion of genuineness without interference by men, either as bosses in the administration of religion or as dictators of religious beliefs. These three movements later learned of each other and began holding joint mass-meetings for inspiration and encouragement as early as 1817. In spite of them, their movements automatically became an organization. The early activities were marked by great precaution, lest precedents or interpretations might infringe upon individual rights in religion. This early fear long impaired the organic efficiency of the Church.

The Six Cardinal Principles.

Growing out of these movements the Christian Church has expressed its position in six cardinal principles, phrased to suit the person stating them. They are: (1) Jesus Christ the only Head of the Church; (2) "Christian" a sufficient name for the followers of Christ; (3) the Bible a sufficient guide in faith and conduct; (4) Christian character and practice, not ordinances or theological opinions, the basis of Christian fellowship; (5) liberty of conscience and the right of private judgment in matters of religion to be denied no one; (6) the union of all followers of Jesus Christ.

On this basis, the Church has accepted into its fellowship the Quaker and Baptist, conservative and liberal, and other varying theological beliefs on equal footing. It has been opposed to creedal standards of admission, not because of what is contained in them, but because of the principle established thereby.

The growth and mechanical construction of its Church has already been outlined in these columns.

The Process Thus Far.

The Commission on Christian Unity of the Christian Church, on March 3, 1924, addressed an overture to twenty-four denominations, conveying fraternal greetings and inviting consideration and reply upon certain matters. The communication expressed the opinion: (a) that the spirit of denominationalism is delaying the establishment of the kingdom of God on earth; (b) that the Church must become more closely united before any great movement for world betterment can take place; (c) that the rank and file in our Churches are already more closely united than our divisions indicate; (d) that a stress upon unity, actual and possible, should be a primary objective in the program of the Church; and (e) that the commission believed organic union to be the ultimate goal, but favored any other co-operative relationship productive of close fellowship.

The communication solicited: (a) a frank statement of attitude toward this position; (b) a concert of prayer that together the Lord's will might be found; (c) an interchange of fraternal delegates in the interest of better acquaintance; (d) an official conference looking toward the pur-

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The abolition of slavery, the increase of wealth, the wider distribution of education, the building of railroads and highways, the use of telephones, electric lights and cars, have all reduced the things that divided men and nations. The great people are scarce now as compared with a century ago. All that makes men and women great is more widely distributed than in a generation ago. The differences in dress, in education, in possessions, are more and more passing away. On the train, in the hotel, in the Church, in the great throng, people are more on equality than they used to be. Scholars are not so outstanding as in other days. Where there was one diploma fifty years ago, there are a hundred now. The differences in rural and city people, in country people and town people gradually disappears. Good roads, good schools, good machines, newspapers, and travel have banished the important person from the stage. As the hills are leveled for roads, the people are leveled, too. The mayor is not as large as he once was; the governor is not as important as in other years; the president is not as great as he was a hundred years ago. The people are greater now. Democracy is gaining all the time. The same is true in the Church. The preacher is not as great as he once was, but the congregation is greater.

This increase of importance in society and decrease in the importance of individuals is telling upon the relation of nations and Churches. The Roman Catholic Church does not wield the power it once did; Protestant denominations do not stand out in contrast to other denominations as they did fifty years ago; the human distinctions that once separated nations and Churches gradually disappear. Mountains and oceans do not separate nations as they once did. Education and wealth do not separate men as they once did. The world tends toward unity and peace. Protestantism tends toward unity; it is in the air. Co-operation makes its way into the heart of society and the business of the world. Men see the wisdom of tunneling the mountains of opinion between them as well as the mountains for trains. Bridges now cross the rivers that once separated cities and States. Differences between men, neighbors, cities, States and Churches must build bridges, cut tunnels, and make contact easier and more helpful to society. This tendency of Christian civilization will finally stop war. The most foolish thing in history is war; the most foolish thing in the Church is intolerance; and the most foolish thing among individuals is hard feeling and hate.

ELON LETTER.

I have just returned from the biennial session of the National Council of the Congregational Churches, held in the city of Detroit, May 28th to June 4th. Slightly more than twelve hundred delegates and associate delegates were present. Among the associate delegates are included a group known as honorary delegates. Our Christian Church group of twenty-five elected representatives, and three additional ones as visitors were some given honorary and some associate standing. Three of our delegates were from the South—Dr. L. E. Smith, President of the Southern Christian Convention; Dr. S. L. Beougher, president of Bethlehem (Piedmont Junior) College, and the writer. Dr. J. Edward Kirby was also there as a regular or voting delegate, representing the Congregational Conference of the Carolinas.

The council reminded me very much of a program of the Southern Christian Convention, only longer and larger. There is less discussion from the floor than with us. There is also a business committee, to whom all motions or items of business are immediately referred and which puts most suggestions coming to it to sleep. While any matter introduced from the floor and referred to this business committee and not by them reported for consideration can be called up before the council by the maker, the power and prestige of the committee practically prevent such action. As a matter of fact, most persons having matters of business which they wish to have presented, go directly to the business committee in secret and present matters. That is usually the end of such ideas. It is a way to conserve time and prevent hobby ideas from consuming the all-too-precious hours with relatively unimportant issues.

The council also has large committees, nationally representative, but a part of each committee is designated as "active" and centered around some large city. This is a distinct administrative advantage.

But our people are interested mainly in the question of the union of the Congregational and Christian Churches. Union was in the atmosphere, and on everybody's tongue. It was felt unanimously that a crucial moment in Protestantism had arrived.

On Thursday morning, May 30th, a resolution approving the first five agreements of the joint commission (printed elsewhere in full in this issue) was unanimously passed. This motion made it possible for the nominating committee to leave certain vacancies on the several committees and boards to be filled by our accredited representatives after our October, 1929, meeting, provided we approve the plan. Dr. Warren H. Denison, speaking for our people, assured the council that we would in all likelihood approve.

On Monday morning, June 3rd, the following twelve additional motions were unanimously approved:

Moved: That the concurrence of the General Convention of the Christian Church, in the provisions of these sections, shall be sufficient to consummate the union; and that, when notified of such concurrence, the executive committee of the National Council is instructed to proceed with the responsible representatives of the General Convention of the Christian Church to plan for the next meeting of this council as a constituent of the General Council of the Congregational and Christian Churches.

Moved: That, if the General Convention of the Christian Church proposes any amendments to the plan as approved above, the executive committee of the National Council is hereby authorized to act for the council in their consideration, except that essential details of this action of the National Council shall not be altered without reference to the next National Council.

Moved: That, in case the necessary concurrent action adopting the plan of union be taken by the General Convention of the Christian Church, the Commission on Interchurch Relations is authorized to co-operate with the similar body of the General Convention in drafting proposals for a constitution and by-laws, to be considered by the General Council of the Congregational and Christian Churches at its first meeting.

Moved: To recommend the provisions of sections XXII and XXIII to our Churches, associations, and conferences, urging their prompt and definite plans for such readjustments as may seem desirable.

Moved: To recommend the provisions of sections VI, VII, IX-XIV, XVII-XIX, to the favorable action of the various societies concerned.

Moved: To approve for substance the details involved in I, paragraphs 3-5, IV-VI, VIII, XV, XVI, XX, XXI, XXIV, and XXV and to authorize the executive committee of the council to negotiate with the representatives of the Christian Convention for any necessary modifications.

Moved: That such sections of the plan as shall be approved by the General Convention of the Christian Church and, where their interests are involved, obtains the concurrence of the Congregational National Missionary Organizations and of the various local, State and regional organizations, shall become effective at once, so far as this National Council is concerned.

Moved: To recommend to the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions that it make suitable provision, as early as practicable, in the membership of the prudential committee for representation from the Christian body.

Moved: To recommend to the Home Board that it make suitable provision, as early as practicable in the membership of the board of directors (the executive committee of the A. M. A.) and its administrative committees, for representation from the Christian body.

Moved: To refer to the executive committee of the National Council, with power, any needed adjustments of detail in the plan of union.

Moved: That the Commission on Interchurch Relations be empowered to develop plans looking toward the completion of this merger.

Moved: That the plan of union, as a whole, as presented by the Commission on Interchurch Relations, is hereby approved.

Following the prolonged applause which greeted the passage of the final ratifying motion, Dr. R. H. Potter led in a most heart-searching prayer of dedication to the new program of the Church in fulfillment of our Lord's Prayer for the oneness of His followers.

Our representatives were thereupon called to the platform and introduced to the Council officially. I should also state that on Friday the Congregational national officials entertained our delegation at a complimentary dinner.

On Monday afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock, a general discussion period was held in the First Baptist Church to face immediate questions of adjustment. It was characterized by a beautiful spirit of co-operation and good will. Nothing seemed able to cloud the sky of that glorious new day which had evidently dawned for the kingdom.

It remains now for the Christian Church to ratify the "Proposed Plan of Union of the Congregational and Christian Churches" and to set up the necessary official machinery to make it effective.

On Monday, June 3rd, at 10:43 A. M., the final vote was taken, and I believe, under God, that thereupon a new era began for Christendom.

W. A. HARPER.

PROPOSED PLAN OF UNION OF CONGREGATIONAL AND CHRISTIAN CHURCHES.

(Ratified by National Council of Congregational Churches.)

I. That the National Council of the Congregational Churches and the General Convention of the Christian Church be united under the title of the General Council of the Congregational and Christian Churches (Unincorporated), both national bodies to continue for the time being their organizations to meet legal requirements, while constituting the membership of the general organization.

That the basis of this new relation shall be the recognition by each group that the other group is constituted of the followers of Jesus Christ. Each individual Church and each group of Churches shall be free to retain and develop its own form of expression. Finding in the Bible the supreme rule of faith and life, but recognizing that there is wide room for differences of interpretation among equally good Christians, this union shall be conditioned upon the acceptance of Christianity as primarily a way of life, and not upon uniformity of theological opinion or any uniform practice of ordinances.

The purpose of the General Council shall be to perform on behalf of the united Churches the various functions heretofore performed by the National Council for the Congregational Churches and the General Convention for the Christian Churches, it being understood that where technical legal questions may be involved the action of the separate bodies shall be secured.

That the moderator of the National Council and the President of the General Convention shall be co-ordinate presiding officers, their service to be arranged by mutual agreement; that for the time being the secretary of the National Council and the secretary of the General Convention, while continuing their respective positions, shall be secretaries of the General Council under such division of responsibility as shall be determined by the General Council or its executive committee.

That regular meetings of the General Council be held biennially in the spring or early summer of odd-numbered years, and that these be so arranged as that necessary business meetings of the National Council and of the General Convention may be held for legal action and other necessary business.

II. That, pending possible mergers among themselves, the larger units (i. e., the five regional and the Afro-Christian Conventions, the Congregational "State" Conferences), and after merger the united bodies, shall severally be represented in the General Council by two delegates each, and each such Convention or Conference having Churches whose aggregate membership is more than ten thousand shall be entitled to elect two additional delegates for each additional ten thousand members or major fraction thereof.

III. That, pending merger, local units (i. e., Christian Conferences and Congregational district associations), and after merger the united bodies, be represented in the General Council on the basis of one delegate for every ten Churches or major fraction thereof.

IV. That heads of Church colleges and seminaries recognized by the General Council as affiliated with or co-operating with it, or with either communion, the national general secretaries as defined in the by-laws and editors of national Church periodicals, together with the officers of the general national body, be members ex-officio of the General Council.

V. That in order to conserve legal interests, the charter of the General Convention of the Christian Church and that of the corporation for the National Council of Congregational Churches be continued in force unless and until it becomes possible and seems wise to combine them.

VI. That the voluntary declaration of the representatives of each communion to the effect that they and their work ought not to be a charge on the financial resources of the other be recognized as the general principle to govern in adjustment of financial obligations; that, therefore, for the time being, the miscellaneous expenses of the General Council shall be prorated on the basis of the relative membership of the two denominations, and that the expenses incident to continuing any officer, service or missionary enterprise now carried by either denomination, together with present indebtedness, shall be met from the resources of that fellowship. Here, however, the fact is taken into account that there may be natural shiftings of constituency from one denomination to the other, as also changes in the work to be done which will call for corresponding adjustments. It is recognized, however, that where the arrangement at the start is equitable the combined constituency can be trusted faithfully to care for the combined work without fear of discrimination. It is contemplated that during the period of transition, savings in overhead expense are not to be expected, but that gradually such savings will result. It is hoped, however, that all will think of such economies as making more kingdom building possible rather than as lessening the challenge to the grace of giving.

VII. That the promotion of income for missionary and educational work be committed to a commission on missions of the General Council, consisting of the members of the jointly elected official administrative missions boards (that is, for the Congregational Churches, the prudential committee of the American board and the directors of the home board), nine members-at-large (of whom at least one shall be from the Christian constituency) and the two presiding officers and the two secretaries of the General Council ex-officio.

VIII. That the functions of the General Council comparable to those now performed by the executive committees of the National Council and of the General Convention not otherwise provided for, be committed to an executive committee of the General Council composed of the members of the executive committee of the National Council (14 members), together with the president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer of the General Convention.

IX. That the functions of the Board of Missions of the Christian Convention in the foreign field and those of the prudential committee of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions be discharged by one body composed of identical members until such time as the constituent corporations may be legally merged.

X. That the functions of the Board of Missions in the home field, the Board of Christian Education and the Board of Publications of the General Convention, and those of the group of societies known as the Congregational Home Boards, be discharged by one body composed of identical members until such time as the constituent corporations may be legally merged.

XI. It is conceived that the provisions of IX and X shall be worked out substantially as follows:

1. Until corporate merger can be effected, the prudential committee of the American Board and the Department of Foreign Missions of the General Convention shall consist of the same persons, thirty-nine in number, and not less than four of whom shall be chosen from the Christian constituency.

2. That the Department of Home Missions, the Board of Christian Education and the Board of Publication of the General Convention, and the board of directors of the Congregational Home Boards, shall consist of the same persons, thirty-nine in number, of whom not less than four shall be from the Christian constituency, the board to appoint four administrative committees on the present plan of the Congregational Home Board, on which there shall be a total of at least six from the Christian constituency. There shall also be a foundation for education of fifteen, at least two of whom shall be from the Christian constituency.

3. That missionary secretaries shall be appointed by the General Convention in such number as it may deem needful.

4. That the work of the Board of Missions of the Christian Convention in Porto Rico and at Franklinton College be transferred to the administrative committee serving the American Missionary Association, together with the resources for maintenance of the same.

5. That, agreeably with present practice, responsibility for the work of home and foreign missions and Church extension of the Afro-Christian Convention continue with that convention, its successor or successors, on the principle of self-supporting States among Congregational Churches.

XII. That the Christian Convention request the administrative committee on ministerial relief to further the cause of ministerial relief among the Christian Churches, with a view to bringing its ministry to a basis similar to that of the Congregational Churches and in the hope of ultimate oneness of this work. Further: that whereas the Christian Churches now give a certain amount of ministerial aid through local and regional conferences, and understanding it to be the desire of the Christian Churches to bring about as soon as possible a national organization of ministerial aid, and that the Christian Churches will welcome the leadership of the administrative committee on ministerial relief in perfecting an adequate plan for the aid of their own aged and retired ministers until such time as the merger shall become more nearly complete; and further,

That, inasmuch as the annuity fund for Congregational ministers seems to be legally forbidden to admit as members any except "Congregational" ministers, a movement be put on foot among the Christian Churches to develop plans under which benefits comparable to those available for Congregational ministers shall be provided for ministers of the Christian Churches.

XIII. That of necessity, trust funds and moneys given for specific purposes must be administered strictly in accordance with the terms of trusts and the intention of donors so far as expressed. And further,

That until complete unity can be worked out, all other moneys contributed by either group of Churches shall be administered for the established work of those Churches unless otherwise determined by the donors.

XIV. That the present status of educational institutions with reference to their denominational bodies be preserved, and that where mergers of educational institutions are possible they be encouraged.

XV. That the General Council name a commission on evangelism and devotional life to consist of the members of the commission on evangelism of the National Council, twenty-four in number, plus three persons chosen from the Christian Church constituency. This commission shall promote a program of evangelism and devotional life in all the Churches. With a view to conserving all spiritual values, the commission on evangelism of the National Council shall be wholly free to adapt the general program to the needs of the Congregational Churches and the representatives of the Christian Church shall be equally free to do likewise for the Christian Churches. The work for life service, for which the board of evangelism is now responsible in the Christian Church shall be committed to the student life department of the home board.

XVI. The work of the Board of Finance of the Christian Convention in the field of benevolence being committee to the Commission on Missions, its responsibility for the finances of the General Convention itself and its share of the expenses of the General Council may be retained or committed to the members of the executive committee of the General Council who represents the Christian constituency, as may be determined by the General Convention.

XVII. That the business of publishing be combined as far as possible; that in particular a com-

WHAT GOD IS LIKE.

Our primary need is to learn what God is like. So long as He is to us a white man's God; so long as He is conceived as being more interested in clean folks than dirty ones, in white more than black, in learned more than ignorant—there can be no real sharing of love and life. So long as we think of God in such a way that men see nothing inconsistent in calling themselves Christian and in paying less than living wages, employing child labor, or condoning other forms of industrial oppression, there can be no real missionary spirit acceptable in the sight of God or to those to whom we would go with the Christian message. So long as we can think of God as taking sides in war, as blessing or condoning our imperialistic adventures among weaker peoples, or see nothing wrong with our materialistic standards of success, we are not fit to share life with others. Until we ourselves really know the true nature of God, we cannot share Him with others.

That we "needs must love the highest when we see it is true if by seeing we mean really to comprehend and realize. Most of our failure has its basis in an inadequate and unworthy conception of God. Our fundamental task is to bring young people to a worthy conception of God as a divine Father of impartial love and justice. One group spent three class periods discussing the social implications of "I believe in God, the Father." At first, they could see nothing to discuss. They accepted the creedal statement without question. But as they were brought face to face with its implications a whole new realm opened to them. When it was put on a family basis, one boy said, "Why, if a man in our town approved of his older children while they treated younger ones in the way we treat people who are spiritually and intellectually and economically younger than we, he would be run out of town. We have thought of God as being less just and righteous than we demand that an earthly father shall be." A girl spoke up and said, "I've been saying that creed all my life and it never bothered me. I'll never be able to say it again until I can believe it hard enough to live as if it were so."

There are many beliefs that do not matter. But what we believe about God matters tremendously, and until we really believe God is a Father our missionary teaching and practice has no real foundation.—From "Training for World Friendship," by Brown.

THE ONLY HOPE OF THE WORLD.

Imperfectly as we have understood the religion of Jesus, and faultily as we have practiced it, in spite of all the failure and un-Christian elements in the West that have been pointed out, we must recognize the tremendous contribution of the religion of Jesus Christ to the life of the West and the tremendous influence which contact with a nation that can at best be called only partially Christianized has had in its touch with other lands. When the influence of the Christian religion touches a land, polygamy disappears, women and children take on new value, all of living becomes elevated.

With all the worth in other religions, the civilizations which have grown up along with them show that humanitarianism has never played a large part until Christianity has pressed upon the consciences of the people its exalted estimate of the individual worth of human life.

The only hope of the world today is in the religion of Jesus Christ. If the religion of Jesus Christ cannot solve the problems of the day; if it is not equal to the task of abolishing war, creating racial brotherhood, humanizing industry, purifying home life, and Christianizing international affairs, then the world is without hope. "The question is not whether the world will have Christianity or Buddhism, or Mohammedanism or Judaism. The question is will the world have Christianity? If Christianity cannot meet the demands which the world now makes upon it, there is no thought that one or the other of the existing religions will be tried. In recent years very much sympathetic study has been given to a comparison of religions. . . . The holding of all faiths have been laid upon the table, and their most faithful and capable defenders have been called upon to defend them. In the light of full knowledge and by the aid of the best intelligence the religions of the earth have been estimated. These studies have broadened the conception of the real content of all religions, but they have not lessened the sense of the extraordinary value, superiority, and inclusiveness of Christianity. There is not much expectation that some new religion will appear. The testing now for a religion for the human race is upon Christianity. Beyond that there is only darkness.

Stanley Jones tells of asking an earnest Hindu what he thought of Christ. The Hindu thoughtfully answered, "There is no one else who is seriously bidding for the heart of the world except Jesus Christ. There is no one else on the field."

In another meeting in India, Mr. Jones spoke of the sixty million outcasts, and asked how they were to be lifted. It was a thoughtful Hindu who rose and said: "It will take a Christ to lift them." If this be true, how carefully we should strive to see that Christianity means truly the religion of Jesus Christ. How we should welcome any light on the teachings of Jesus that other groups with fresher eyes may see. How earnestly we should listen to any criticism of the way we have misrepresented it. "There is no one else who is seriously bidding for the heart of the world except Jesus Christ." "It will take a Christ to lift them." Both statements made, not by Christians, but by Hindus. But they are our answer and our hope.—From "Training for World Friendship," by Brown.

GENERAL CONVENTION ITEMS.

This is the home mission period of the Christian Church. Each Church should make the most of it. A thorough course of home mission instruction should be given in each Church and Bible school. One message, or one day, will not stamp America's need upon the heart and mind of young and of adults.

America never needed Christ more than today. This is a time and opportunity of great value to a Christian. The study, information, literature will be of little avail unless there be a sacrificial money-saving expression resulting from the study.

At Congregational Meetings.

While these lines are being written, twenty-five of our representatives and fraternal messengers are assembling with our Congregational brethren in their national council at Detroit. It was a gracious courtesy they extended us to have that number present, and it is a gracious act on the part of the twenty-five to go.

Preconvention Committees.

All the preconvention committees have most important tasks before them, and there should be no delay in beginning their work, as these reports are to be in the Convention Secretary's hand in time to be printed and distributed before the delegates start for the Convention. The Convention meets October 22nd.

The Committee on Convention Program will hold its second meeting June 20th to complete the program for the Piqua Convention. If any have suggestions for the program, the committee will be glad to welcome them and give them full consideration. Piqua will be our best Convention yet, no doubt. Program, attendance, spirit should make it a great event in our jubilee year.

WARREN H. DENISON, Sec'y.

"There are many simple things that we make complex, many easy things that we make hard, by the difficulties we read into them. Is not that why the Master says we must become as little children if we would enter His kingdom? The child does not beg directions by reasoning about them. He obeys to the best of his understanding."

poses expressed in the overture. Officials of ten denominations acknowledged receipt of the request and commended the purpose and spirit of the communication. Several referred it to committees in charge of such matters; others thought the plan impractical at the time. Dr. William E. Barton, former moderator of the National Council of Congregational Churches, was among those who formally acknowledged receipt of the overture, stating that the matter had been directed into the proper channels for attention. On November 8, 1924, specific acknowledgment was made by Dr. Charles E. Burton. This move started sympathetic correspondence between the Commission on Interchurch Relations of the National Council and the Commission on Christian Unity of the Christian Church.

The First Conference.

The first conference between representatives of these two groups was held at Toledo, Ohio, June 17, 1926. Real progress was made in planning for better acquaintance and co-operation between the two Churches. The results of these first gestures were approved by the general bodies represented by each commission, and the commissions instructed to continue negotiations. The first declaration for actual union with a general statement of its basis was made at a conference of representatives of both commissions in New York City, November 1, 1927. This statement, after some adjustments by the full commissions, appeared in both the Congregationalist and the Herald of Gospel Liberty April 19, 1928, accompanied by requests for suggestions and amendments from readers in both fellowships. There seemed to be an almost universal indorsement, many conferences and Churches passing resolutions of approval. Following this, a systematic visitation of fraternal delegates was arranged among the conferences and associations.

It seemed wise to the commission, whose work had proceeded so smoothly up to this point, to bring together the men who were administering the several departments in each denomination in order to come to close grips with the practical question which would arise in adjusting the mechanisms of the two organizations into unity. Such an unofficial meeting was held in Wardman Park Hotel, Washington, September 18-19, 1928. It was attended by seven persons from each Church. These were administrators of the several enterprises maintained by the Churches. From a careful canvass of the whole situation, no unadjustable difficulties were discovered. The group then made suggestions on methods of co-ordination. These suggestions, with succeeding emendations, have now been approved by the official groups of both national bodies.

What the Proposed Union Means.

There is contemplated nothing less than actual union with a single overhead administration. The lines of operation in the two Churches are quite parallel, and in some instances identical. It anticipates such a combination of departmental interests as will be wise, the processes for the accomplishment of this to be mutually determined. The functions of the National Council of Congregational Churches and of the General Convention of the Christian Church are to be combined into a general national body. For legal reasons, or as holding organizations, these two bodies—or any organizations affiliated with them—may be continued as the conditions seem to require. In each body may be found specific trusts or interests which must be administered with restrictions. All funds and assets in each body must be kept sacred to their purposes. Except for these, all interests of the two denominations should be combined at the earliest possible date. Neither body annexes the other, nor is either body to become a pensioner upon the resources of the other. The principle of democracy now prevailing in each Church is to continue in the merged organization and upon the authority of majorities are the policies of joint organic life to be determined.

All details of the United States cannot be settled in the beginning. The best method of handling them will evolve out of consultation and experience. Each group has something to contribute to the life and usefulness of the other, and together they have a larger contribution to make to the kingdom of God. The individual members and the local congregations will be left undisturbed in the exercise of their present rights and privileges. The faith in the background of the whole movement is expressed in the last paragraph of the plan of union:

"If a desire for that unity for which the Master once prayed be the actuating motive of all plans and all acts, the way will become clear, as we proceed, where now it may appear filled with uncertainties, hesitation and hindrance. We may be sure that no legal entanglements will be too difficult, no ecclesiastical customs too deeply fixed, no sentiments seem too precious to yield, no ambitions or personal commitments too intense, if the will to achieve be ours and the Spirit of God lead us. Going forward, thus led, we may ourselves secure, and may make plain to others, the road to joyous fellowship and enlarged usefulness."—Congregationalist.

MEMORIAL SERVICES.

On Sunday, May 19th, we held our regular annual memorial service at Liberty Vance. We were gladly surprised to have with us Rev. J. E. Franks and family. By invitation of our pastor, Bro. Franks preached for us; subject used was "Our Contribution to the Dead; Their Contribution to Us," blended together for the glory of God. This was a message that caused us to think, and inspired us to greater service. The pastor, Rev. H. E. Crutchfield, had charge of the memorial service and made some good remarks just before placing the flowers on the graves of our dead.

On Sunday, May 26th, we had the privilege of attending another memorial service at New Hope. Rev. E. M. Carter, pastor, was present and brought a most wonderful message; subject, "Mother, Home and Heaven." In this Spirit-filled message, Bro. Carter paid the highest tribute to mother as God's first gift to man; to the home as the first divine institution, a place where the Christian mother could rear the children for God; through her devoted love and sacrificial service she would obtain a reward—a home in heaven.

At the close of this service we endeavored to help the good ladies organize a Woman's Missionary Society. They started with a membership of fourteen, and we feel sure will continue to grow.

Will you, by an individual gift, help your Church to achieve this desired end? Now is the time! Here is the place! By a pull together, every Church can reach the goal. Help now.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

Lesson XII—June 23, 1929.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Bless Jehovah, O my soul."—Psa. 103:1.

LESSON: Psa. 103:1-22.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psa. 107:23-31.

A psalm is a song. A psalm of praise is, therefore, a song of praise. The one hundred and third psalm is one of the finest, the most stately, the most inspiring psalms or songs of praise. The soul of the man who wrote it was in tune with the spirit of the living God. It is an evidence of the statement that holy men of God wrote as they were moved by the spirit of God.

"Bless Jehovah, O my soul; and all that is within me, bless His holy name." In other words, praise the Lord. Let the highest nature of man, his soul, his living spirit, praise God. Let a man do it whole-heartedly, with all that is within him. Let him praise the name—the word name as used here means character—of the Lord. There is that in God's character and nature which ought to call forth the adoration and the praise of man at his best with all that is best in him.

"Bless Jehovah, O my soul, and forget not all His benefits." One of the grossest of sins is ingratitude. And ingratitude is often due to forgetfulness. We are ungrateful because we forget all the benefits which we receive from the hand of a generous and a loving Father. As the psalmist says in another place, if we should attempt to count them we could not do it, for they are as the sands of the sea. It is a good thing to observe Thanksgiving Day. But it is not enough to have the spirit of thanksgiving only once a year, or even once a week. The spirit of gratitude or thanksgiving ought to be a permanent quality of life.

"Who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases." If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins. No matter what a man may have done, God will forgive all his iniquities, provided the man turns in sincere penitence. One of man's most deep-seated needs is for forgiveness. Thanks be unto God that He does forgive sins. And it is He who healeth all our diseases. Back of the physician, back of nature and nature's remedies, back of all is the Great Physician.

"Who redeemeth thy life from destruction." The story is told of Sir Isaac Newton to the effect that one day as he saw a poor, drunken wretch stagger by he said: "There but for the grace of God goes Isaac Newton." To as many as receive Him, to them gives He power to become the sons of God. In a very literal sense, God redeems His children from destruction. And in a very literal sense, He crowns our lives with loving-kindness and tender mercies.

"Who satisfieth thy desires with good things." The psalmist might well have stopped with the first two words. "Who satisfieth." In fact, God alone satisfies. Men cannot live by bread alone, but by the things of the spirit which the living God can supply.

"Jehovah executeth righteous acts, and judgments for all that are oppressed." God never deals unfairly. All things will work together for good to those who love Him. There is justice at the heart of the universe. Eventually all wrongs shall be righted and all goodness rewarded.

"He made known His ways unto Moses, His doings unto the children of Israel." He has called us friends, for the secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him. Have there not been times when you were conscious of messages from Him? Have there not been times when He has shown you the way? He that willeth to do His will shall know of the teaching.

"Jehovah is merciful and gracious, slow to anger and abundant in loving-kindness." There is justice in His dealings, but mercy is His dominant quality. He is gracious in that He does not harbor grudges, in that He sends His rain upon the unjust as well as the just, in that He manifests His love to those who often are unworthy of His love. He does not deal with us after our sins or reward us after our iniquities. God is not a magnified bookkeeper. He is a Father. He knows our frame, He remembers our limitations, and in all His judgments He is going to take into consideration all the facts in the case, and then be governed by mercy. But this does not mean that man is to feel free to do as he pleases. Indeed, quite the contrary is the case. Just because God is so gracious and so kind, so willing to forgive and to forget, we ought to be all the more careful in our manner of life and in our measure of service. He is an ingrate indeed who will take advantage of such mercy and love.

If one should take a concordance or a topical index and trace out all the references to praise and thanksgiving in the Bible, he would be amazed at the almost incredible number of times the word or the idea appears. What does it all mean? Are we to believe that God seeks praise because He is a spoiled sovereign, seeking glory for Himself? Hardly that! It means but one thing—praise, the spirit of thanksgiving and worship has a fundamental place in life. The Bible is concerned primarily with character. But there can be no abiding character unless at the foundation there lies that quality which is expressed by the term, the spirit of praise or worship. O that men would praise the Lord! Praise ye the Lord. Let men continually praise the Lord.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

TOPIC: "Jesus Teaching Us Self-Control."—Mic. 6:8; 1 Pet. 2:11-20.

Some Bible Hints.

It takes self-control to live up to Micah's ideal of a righteous life (v. 8).

"Abstain from desire," is a counsel of perfection, a ringing call to rigid self-direction. How can we do it? (v. 11).

"Submit" is often a call to self-denial. Some ordinances of man cut across our wishes, yet we must obey them (v. 13).

To treat crusty people with respect and not give them a bit of our mind calls for a rare quality of self-control and humility (v. 18).

Suggestive Thoughts.

Jesus urges us to control our temper. The tongue is a hard thing to govern. It is the acid test.

Jesus teaches self-control by His example. Observe Him before Pilate. How do we act when we are falsely accused?

In the matter of Lazarus' death, Jesus showed admirable self-control. To sit still and do nothing when every instinct calls for action indicates a wonderful degree of self-government.

When James and John, following Elijah's methods, wanted to call down fire from heaven to punish people who rejected Jesus, the Master again showed the poise of His spirit. Learn to be patient.

A Few Illustrations.

When gossiping tongues spread false reports about us, are we able to keep from hot rage? Can we laugh and treat the malicious with courtesy?

The biggest lesson in life is self-control. Notice the word "self." We are eager to control others and are so busy trying to reform others that we quite forget to control ourselves.

Many of us have tempers like hair-triggers. They go off at the slightest jar. There is no locking device in our minds to keep us from going off.

Youth needs self-control. Passions come in gusts that sweep us away. We need to have with us the Pilot who can bid the wind be still.

To Think About.

What do we most need to control?
How can self-control be learned?
What are the rewards of self-control?

THE 23rd PSALM INTERPOLATED.

BY MRS. J. J. LINCOLN.

"The Lord is my Shepherd." He goes before me, making plain and safe my path.

"I shall not want." He supplies all my material need.

"He maketh me to lie down in green pastures." Provides comfort and rest, even luxuriant rest, for my body.

"He leadeth me beside the still waters." Affords quiet refreshment for my mind and spirit.

"He restoreth my soul." Receives me back when I slip and fall, and gives me peace and assurance.

"He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake." Makes real to me His practical earthly existence and His perfect glorification.

"Yea . . . I will fear no evil." Whatever my situation or condition, His presence ("Lo, I am with you always") dispels, prevents, forbids evil. Without the consciousness of His presence, I am continually beset.

"Thy rod and Thy staff, they comfort me." My sure reliance, my strong and sufficient support by which, leaning hard thereupon, I am both defended and sustained.

"Thou preparest a table . . . Thou anointest my head." Oil does more than soothe and heal. I am both physically and spiritually nourished; yea, I am clothed and kept and upheld in the face of those who would hinder or hurt.

"My cup runneth over." More blessings than I can use! Pressed down, shaken together, is my portion. Thus God bestows upon me the great privilege and honor of being, like Abraham, a blessing to others.

"Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me." Just in proportion as I dispense for others the excess of God's loving favor, do His blessings in overflowing showers continue to fall upon me.

"I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever." As in the days of Israel, the visible ark was the symbol of God's house, so in this, the day of the Spirit's dispensation, the invisible ark of the covenant is my certain and everlasting dwelling-place.

Lawrenceville, N. J.

A GOSPEL OF SONG, "IN SPITE OF."

Referring to the singing of a negro quartet at a recent great missionary convention in Memphis, Tenn., Dr. E. Stanley Jones, the distinguished missionary and author, said in one of his addresses:

"We are beginning to recognize now that it would be a loss if we could Anglo-Saxonize the world; that every nation has its part to contribute to the collective life of our race; that it takes all colors to make a rainbow, and different notes to bring forth a symphony. The Anglo-Saxon will contribute his note, his love of truth and frankness. The Latin will contribute his note of love of beauty and art.

"The negro will contribute his note—and I have been trying to analyze what it is that gets me so deeply in these negro spirituals, and I have come to the conclusion that it is this: that the negro people are teaching us how to sing 'in spite of.' Now the Cross of Jesus is a gospel of 'in spite of'—seldom 'on account of,' and the negroes are teaching the race how to sing 'in spite of' their disabilities and their sorrows. They have turned their pains into paeans. Hence, their songs spring out of spirituality, and deep speaks unto deep. It is worth living for and dying for, to teach the race how to sing 'in spite of.'

"Hence, I can think of them no longer as being on the border-line of civilization, but deeply in it and contributing to it. For the race needs to know how to sing 'in spite of,' and needs to know that 'trouble won't last always.'"

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE,
One of Our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MONDAY.

A SOUL-DESTRUCTIVE SPIRIT.

"Wrath is cruel, and anger is outrageous."—Prov. 27:4.

Impatience is especially hardening on the conscience. In its very nature, if indulged at all, it will soon be repeated with great frequency, and its opportunities are without number. Like profane swearing, its repetition silences the voice of conscience.

Any human being, by giving the right of way to this spirit, will, while under its influence, think and do and say things against others which are wrong. This continued in, by and by makes repentance very difficult and the same wrongs easily repeated until we grow hardened to its injury both on ourselves and others. Be patient.

Prayer.—Our Father, help us to take Christ in all our ways, and may such a spirit embue our lives that those who see us every day may count us as Christians. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE BIGGEST FOOL IN THE WORLD.

"His heart was not perfect with the Lord as was the heart of David, his father."—1 Kings 11:4.

This was Solomon, well born, well brought up, well taught and well trained, in high favor with the Lord; he gained wealth, honor, distinction and political power. His was the power and the glory, and he decided that he would live life for its greatest passing power and pleasure. He hated the instruction and knowledge given him, and turned to companies of fools, and came to an ignominious end, dying for the lack of knowledge.

This is a great danger to our young people these days, renouncing the ways of their fathers and their mothers' instructions and prayers. Pope said, "We think our fathers and mothers fools, so wise we grow; our wiser sons, no doubt will think us so." Metcalf said, "Young men think old men fools, and the old men know the young men to be so." The feeling and the spirit of "wiser than thou" toward our elders has good grounds in many things, and ought to be, if progress and improvement is to obtain from one generation to another, but to repudiate fundamental principles of the ages, which never change, as unnecessary to being good and growing better, is the height of folly.

There is one who combines the wisdom of the world with a perfect heart and a perfect life—Jesus. Learn of Him and be wise. Follow Him and be perfect.

Prayer.—Dear Father of heaven, of life, of perfection and glory, draw us until we embrace the principles of righteousness as our principles and make our baptism more than a livery or a badge, but as actually putting on the Christ-life. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

RELIGIOUS OBSTINACY.

"Ye will come unto me that ye may have life."—John 5:40.

It seems to be the ordinary day crowd that Jesus is talking to. They were folk who demanded that Christ prove His Messiahship when they wanted to harp on religion, and went to the rabble for their information. For their creeds, they preferred to take the opinion of the street caviler. As for going to Church, they feared they might learn something personally they preferred not to believe. Sounds like a modern class, doesn't it? But Jesus hushed them. He says, "I am not a witness-bearer of myself. The works that I do bear witness of me." He says (literally interpreted), "You are willing to listen to the light others can give you, why not turn to the greater light, the source of all light?" Then He calls them hypocrites and points out that they have not God nor the desire for God in their lives. You will go to anything for light except to me. "Ye will not come to me."

Prayer.—Dear Lord, in all Thy light, as in Jesus, fill our souls with the unspeakable light of Thy grace and glory which we have in Jesus, and, though poor sinners, may we become heirs of God and joint heirs with Jesus Christ. Amen.

THURSDAY.

NOT FAR.

"Thou art not far from the kingdom of God."—Mark 12:34.

The lesson to be learned from what Jesus taught the rich young ruler who wanted to know how far off he was from heaven, is as follows:

True religion is spiritual and not external; love is better than ceremonial acts, and of all things most pleasing to God. Admiring a thing is a long way from possessing it, though it be within reach. The prodigal must not only know his father's house, but he must "arise and go."

Many a young man comes close, almost yields, but he sees imaginary difficulties or has a splendid call to business, or he fears the jibes of companions, or he hesitates on the inconsistency of Christians—just anything as an excuse, he hangs on to with some relief that he has an alibi.

It is very soul-satisfying to believe that the work of the Holy Spirit transforms by convincing us of the misery of sin, enlightening us in the realities of Christianity and strengthening us in our wills and determination of action, and we need not be this way.

Prayer.—Father, cast us not away from Thy presence and take not the Holy Spirit from us. Open our eyes that we may see and may know Him who saves us. We turn to Thee as our Father and King; give us an entrance in Thy throne. Amen.

FRIDAY.

GOD'S GREATEST GIFT.

"How much more will your Heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask Him?"—

Holy Spirit, the indwelling urge toward the good, the high and the holy; the essence of all good things. It is beauty and favor of a gentle life. It is beauty and happiness.

The whole purpose of Christ is to bring God's spirit to the possession of His children, to know the Lord all the way through, and to present each without spot, that he may know the reality of these things.

A young woman could not interest herself in a book. She met a young man whose name was the same as the author. She was telling him about it. He modestly confessed that he wrote it. Then she read the book with intense interest. Why? Because she knew the author. Know Christ—His Book, His work, His life will be all one of love.

Prayer.—Dear Father, draw us to Thyself each day and impel us to study Thy life in Jesus carefully, and by Thy Spirit to see our way through until we come to the end of the road, where we pray for everlasting joy and praise God forevermore. Grant us this, O God, of Thy grace, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

SATURDAY.

LIVING BY LOOKING.

"When he looked unto the serpent of brass, he lived."—Num. 21:9.

"To them that look for Him shall He appear."—Heb. 9:28.

This is the only instance of true repentance of the children of Israel in the wilderness, and so typical is it that Christ referred to it as true to life in God.

It is foolish to "sow wild oats." In the way of sin there is death, and "whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." It is rather apologetic to condone it in youth. It is disturbing to excuse it in middle age. "It is too bad; but he has his good points," we say. It is pathetic when ripened in old age, when the bite of sin works its fatal results, and we disparagingly say, "We can only hope."

The symbol in the wilderness was not a sanction of image worship, nor did it affirm healing power in the material. It was the usual symbol of Satan. It was a symbol of a most poisonous reptile rendered harmless. To look at it for life was not to think of it as a medium of healing, but to behold it as an evidence of Him who had triumphed over the serpent.

There are many ways in life deadly when a look will avoid them.

The lightning flash in the thunder-storm at night reveals the way. Look. It is life. The locomotive engineer has many lights ahead. He must look. Obedience to their law is life. A thousand warnings are along our way pointing to the dangers. Look. It is life.

There is but one way from which comes the answering look of God—the way of righteousness. Acknowledgment and obedience to His law.

Prayer.—Lord Jesus, lead us into the sanctuaries of Thy word, Thy ways and Thy life all along our way. Amen.

SUNDAY.

HOW TO FIND CHRIST.

"Oh, that I knew where I might find Him! that I might come to His seat."—Job 23:3.

This is the prayer not only of Job, but of the human race.

We are bewildered in desolations, calamities, inequalities, prolonged sickness, religious questions, chilling doubt, and are crying for an accurate understanding of God.

We are tearing down Pilgrim fences (and we should), but we have removed every plank of principle until none are left. We are busy taking labels of warnings off "deadly poison" things; thus making so much good in everything until labels are scarce. If we deny the disease, we will not get the physician. Euphemisms will never find the Saviour. Cordials will not acquaint us with Christ. If sin is but a trifling matter, Christ will still be unknown to us.

Christ is found by allowing no compromise. He is found by abandoning prejudices and learning of him. He is found by doing good to others. He is found by living righteously. He is found by being honest; and "Whatsoever things are true, honest, just, pure, lovely, of good report: if there be any virtue or any praise, think on these things."

Prayer.—O Lord, fulfill Thy truth in us. Enable us to feel and say always, "The Lord is here." Open our ears to the gospel. With our desire for the Church, give us thirst for religion, to believe in it, trust in it, and rejoice in it forever. Amen.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

I am happy to call your attention to a letter written by one of the girls who has been one of our children for seventeen years and goes out with a college diploma in her hands. Her letter reads as follows:

"My dear Friends of the Christian Church,— Four years of age and practically alone in the world, I was placed in the Orphanage of the Christian Church. For me, as with every child who enters, the training for a future life of usefulness began immediately. I was given a slight task to perform, in the accomplishment of which I could take pride, just as it is in the average American home, for the institution is now on that plan, as nearly as possible. The days were filled with the hours for work, school and play, such as is necessary for rearing of the normal child. As I grew older, my duties were changed to kitchen, sewing-room, house, and dairy, until I became familiar with every phase of household art.

"I graduated from Elon High School in 1925, and through the kindness of a far-seeing board of trustees, I was allowed to remain, working for my board, while I went to college. Now, seventeen years after I came here, I have received my degree from Elon College and am ready to go out into the world. I wish to take this opportunity, which has been offered me, to express my most sincere and heartfelt appreciation to the board of trustees, to the good people of the Christian Church whose generosity has made it possible for me to face life so well prepared, and also to the superintendent and matrons who have come and gone in these seventeen years, and to our beloved Mr. Johnston, the present superintendent, for their help and encouragement.

"May God reward you for the sacrifices you have made in the past and will make in the future to carry on this work. Gratefully yours, (Signed) Hattie McKinney, Elon College, N. C."

Superintendent.

VALLEY LETTER.

On the second Sunday in April I went to Page Valley to begin the revival at Mt. Lebanon. We were there two weeks. Interest and attendance were not so good. All seemed to be looking on to see what the other fellow was going to do. Three girls were received into membership.

We began our revival at East Liberty on the night of April 29th. Interest and attendance increased. We had a good revival there. Twenty-nine were added to the Church membership. I had my first experience of baptizing in the Shenandoah River on the afternoon of May 12th. Rev. W. S. Ran, pastor of the United Brethren organization, at St. Peter's, and I began our revival at that place on May 12th. Services were encouraging from the beginning. The house was crowded throughout the two weeks. Much praying and work were evident. The climax was reached on the night of May 25th, when seventeen presented themselves for Church membership. A total of twenty-two were added to the Christian Church membership. The U. B. Church received six members. It was my privilege to baptize last Sunday afternoon both the candidates for the Christian Church and the U. B. Church.

Rev. J. W. Henderson was with me about half the time at Mt. Lebanon and East Liberty. Bro. Ran was not able to attend much, so I had the St. Peter's revival largely to myself. We had good music at all places.

We went back to East Liberty in the afternoon of May 19th and organized a Sunday School. Mrs. R. S. Lucas, Shenandoah, R. F. D., was elected superintendent, and Mrs. Effie May, Shenandoah, was elected secretary of the Sunday School. Shortly after Mrs. C. W. McCoy's death, Mrs. W. A. Hensley, Elkton, Va., was elected secretary of St. Peter's Church.

The three Churches are doing some repair-work. East Liberty is being reroofed and painted outside, with some inside repairs. Mt. Lebanon roof has been painted, and the Church is now being painted outside. St. Peter's is preparing to do some needed work on the grounds and the Church.

PROPOSED PLAN OF UNION.

mon year book shall be issued in the immediate future on the general tabular scheme of the Congregational year book, and that in this year book for the time being at least, all Churches be published together for a given State or district, with separate subheadings in each schedule for the Christian and Congregational Churches, or with distinguishing marks as may be determined.

In case the home board, as constituted above, should deem it unwise to administer the Christian Publishing Association Building and printing plant in Dayton, Ohio, the General Convention shall be wholly free to make use of or dispose of this plant as it deems wise.

XVIII. That periodicals be merged as soon as the way is clear and to the extent found desirable. The Herald of Gospel Liberty and the Congregationalist may well be merged, possibly under a wholly new name. If, however, it should seem better to either group to continue indefinitely both periodicals, this may be done without breach of spirit of unity, financial responsibility being carried by the respective constituencies.

XIX. That the Woman's Mission Board of the General Convention of the Christian Church shall be entirely free to determine its own course of action. The recommendation is strongly made, however, that its activities be applied to the whole program of the Church in co-operation with the woman's organizations in the Congregational Church.

XX. That the appointment of bureaus and commissions be determined with the view of conserving all the recognized activities of both Churches.

XXI. That a similar policy apply to representation in interdenominational and other bodies.

XXII. That in view of the legal requirements, ministerial ordination and standing be continued separately, but with the endeavor to reach common standards as soon as possible.

XXIII. That regional, State and local organizations of each denomination, being wholly self-determining, be free to continue, as at present, with full fellowship in the General Council, but that conference with these bodies be had with a view to unification on lines comparable with the proposals for national union.

That in States or districts where the Churches of one denomination are very few, these might simply unite with the other body, retaining their name locally if desired; likewise that in districts where the number is greater but still relatively quite few these might be united with the other body as a unit, continuing their own name, as for example, the Christian Association of the Massachusetts Congregational Conference, thus retaining their denominational connection while uniting with the Congregationalists but without requiring the organization of a new State body. Likewise, for example, there could be the Congregational Conference in affiliation with the North Carolina Christian Convention or Conference.

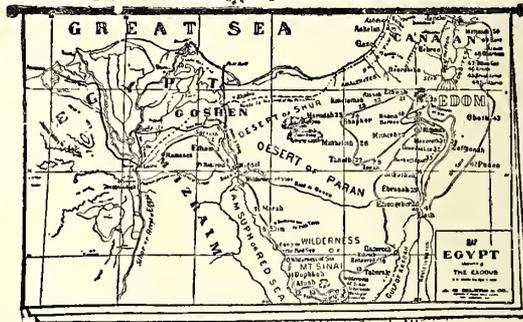

Each local Church may continue wholly unchanged in name and in organization. Any changes which seem wise may be made by the Churches themselves, but it is recommended that the two commissions on union be authorized to appoint an advisory commission, representative of the General Convention and the National Council, to assist conferences, associations, conventions and Churches on all matters involved in the readjustment of their organization, legal affairs and programs in line with this plan of union, this commission to be empowered to appoint local commissions for such adjustments whenever and wherever occasion may cause and such advice be sought.

XXIV. That the General Convention of the Christian Church and the National Council of Congregational Churches be requested to act on the proposals at the earliest possible date; that so soon as these or other plans are approved by the two commissions, constitution and by-laws for the General Council be drawn up, embodying the principles decided upon, these to be offered to the National Council and to the General Convention for consideration.

XXV. In conclusion, these plans and recommendations of necessity deal with legal and technical details, but they have their justification in the spirit of unity which they presuppose and are designed to promote. If a desire for that unity for which the Master once prayed be the actuating motive of all plans and all acts, the way will become clear, as we proceed, where now it may appear filled with uncertainties, hesitation and hindrance. We may be sure that no legal entanglements will be too difficult, no ecclesiastical customs too deeply fixed, no sentiments seem too precious to yield, no ambitions or personal commitments too intense, if the will to achieve be ours and the Spirit of God lead us. Going forward, thus led, we may ourselves secure, and may make plain to others, the road to joyous fellowship and enlarged usefulness.

The GEM TESTAMENT has been steadily growing in popular favor ever since its first appearance. In size, 3 3/8 x 4 1/2 inches, it is not much larger than the Vest Pocket. It is also the only Testament of its size with large bold type and pronouncing text.

The edition on India paper is ideal, and we know of no better gift at the price than one in the finer bindings.

It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength.

OBITUARIES.

RUSH.

Arnold L. Rush, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman L. Rush, was born March 11, 1929, and died May 6, 1929, aged one month and 25 days. The parents now live near Winchester, but the remains were brought to Palmyra, the former home of the parents, where funeral services were held May 8, 1929.

A. W. ANDES.

JOHNSON.

Mrs. Martha Jane Kibler Johnson, wife of I. N. Johnson, at Timber Ridge, was born March 30, 1847, and died April 29, 1929, at the age of 82 years and 29 days. Sister Johnson was a faithful member of the Timber Ridge Christian Church, and a truly noble Christian character.

For the past nineteen years, Bro. Johnson has been a helpless, suffering invalid, and her faithfulness to him and her pleasant demeanor through it all has often been the subject of comment. Funeral services were held at Timber Ridge, May 1, 1929, and the body laid to rest in the cemetery there.

A. W. ANDES.

BRINKLEY.

Javan Brinkley, son of Jason and Elizabeth Brinkley, was born September 17, 1855, and was called from labor to reward on April 13, 1929, at the age of 73 years, 6 months, and 27 days. On February 27, 1884, he was united in marriage to Ida V. Brinkley, and to this union were born five children. He leaves to mourn his going his wife, Mrs. Ida Brinkley; four sons—Albert S., Larry C., Roy, and Lyman Brinkley; one daughter, Mrs. D. C. Figg, and one brother, Mr. Thomas Brinkley.

Those who knew him best, loved him most. Surely a good man and neighbor, husband and father and faithful Church member has been called from us. Funeral services were conducted at Cypress Chapel Christian Church, where he was a member, by the writer, April 15, 1929, assisted by Dr. W. W. Staley, Rev. J. M. Roberts and Dr. Edward Kirbye. Interment was made in the Church cemetery. May the Lord comfort the broken-hearted.

R. E. BRITTLE.

BECKWITH.

On February 16, 1929, Bro. William Henderson Beckwith was freed by the hand of death from the cares and pains of this world, and, we believe, through faith in Jesus Christ, entered the eternal liberty and joy of heaven.

Bro. Beckwith was sixty-eight years old and was a deacon in New Elam Christian Church. His services to his Church and community bespoke the fact that he was a gentleman and Christian of the highest type. He was ever ready and willing in his quiet way to follow the pathway of righteous duty and service. He was ever loyal to Church, family and friends, and his Christian influence will be greatly missed in his community. He is survived by a wife and eight children who mourn their loss.

The funeral was conducted by the writer from New Elam Christian Church, with interment in the Church cemetery. May the bereaved family and friends find consolation in the fact that through faith in Jesus Christ he was a child of God and has gone ever to be with Him.

J. FULLER JOHNSON.

SMITH.

Mr. David Absolom Smith was born February 22, 1849, and departed this life May 7, 1929, making his age 80 years, 2 months, and 15 days. He was making his home with Mr. C. F. Smith, one of his sons. He was married to Miss Emily Gordon, and to this union were born nine children, eight of whom survive, as follows: Messrs. J. D., J. A., C. F. Smith, Mrs. H. L. Farmington, Mrs. L. A. Wyrick, Mrs. D. T. Royle, Mrs. J. L. Andrews and Mrs. W. M. Andrews; fifty-one grandchildren, thirteen great-grandchildren, a number of relatives and a host of friends. He made his home in Guilford County all his life, in Hines Chapel community. He was a farmer by trade. He had been in declining health for several months.

“Uncle Ab,” as he was familiarly known, professed faith in Christ when a young man, and united with Hines Chapel Church. He loved his Church and attended as long as he was able. He rejoiced in seeing people live and do right. Mr. Smith was highly respected by his neighbors and friends. The large crowd that attended his funeral was an evidence of his esteem in the mind of the people. The floral offering was beautiful. Services were held from his home Church by the writer in his memory. May the Lord bless and comfort all the loved ones.

MARRIAGES

FLEMING—STRADER.

Howard C. Fleming, of Walkertown, N. C., and Miss Clara Strader, of Belew Creek, were quietly and solemnly united in marriage at the home of the bride's father, Mr. J. W. Strader, Belew Creek Township, in Forsyth County, N. C., at 10 o'clock A. M., July 4th, in the presence of only a few relatives and friends, by the writer.

The bride is the third attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Strader, a member of the Belew Creek Christian Church, and a faithful worker. She recently passed the North Carolina State Board of Nursing, having received her training at the City Memorial Hospital, Winston-Salem, N. C. The groom is prominent in the business world in Winston-Salem, and a young man of high character.

Previous to the ceremony, Ethelene

Strader rendered a beautiful solo in keeping with the occasion, accompanied at the piano by Thyra Strader, who also played Mendelssohn's "Wedding March." The couple were preceded to the altar by Miss Doris Strader, who served as maid of honor.

This young couple are very popular among the younger class in this community. After the ceremony they left for a short bridal tour, after which they will make their home with Mrs. T. J. Preston, Belew Creek, N. C. Their many friends wish for them much joy and happiness.

BAPTIST MISSIONS IN INDIA.—

There are now more self-supporting Baptist Churches in Burma than in any State in the American Union. They number 954 out of a total of 1,298 Churches on the field of the mission that Adoniram Judson founded. In the very interesting report of the survey committee on this historic mission, the most significant fact is the rapid advance of the Burman Christians toward complete independence. They gave, in the last year covered by the report, $255,033 for Church extension in their own country and Haren preachers, worthy successors to Ko Tha Byu, are today at work in every part of Burma. The Burman Church membership is given as 103,346. Baptists have a complete educational system in Burma, from kindergarten to college, and most of this educational work has now become self-supporting. There are 900 women teachers in the Baptist schools besides many others in government schools who were trained in Baptist institutions.—M. E. McIntosh, in the Christian Herald.

VOICES AGAINST UNION.—

It is only to be expected that the gathering tide of sentiment and enthusiasm for the union of Christ's followers should meet with disfavor and opposition. The surprising fact is not that there is opposition, but that there is so well-nigh universal support and enthusiastic willingness. It is not that the Christian forces of our day are launching a mighty enterprise for creating union. It is that we are in this good day discovering how essentially we are one in Christ. We have long ago individually made the discovery that there are all around us individual Christians who have been separated from us by the divisive influence of denominational lines, but whom we find to be one with ourselves in reverence, loyalty, and love for the Christ. They, like we, have had their hearts overwhelmed by Christ's redeeming love; they, too, have pledged themselves to follow where the Christ is leading; and they, too, are seeking to live their lives in accordance with the Christ spirit. Individually, we have long loved and fellowshiped such Christians. Now we are finding that there are other denominational bodies which are but aggregations of individual Christians such as we have known, admired, and loved. Christendom is not seeking to foster a man-made union. It is seeking to eliminate man-made differences and divisions. There have been those who went so far as to claim that our differences and divisions might serve some useful purposes under the present scheme of things. But we have heard from no one who claims that our present denominational divisions are in accordance with the will, the purpose, and the spirit of the Christ.

RUSSIA CHANGES POLICY.—

The fact that the Soviet government has changed its policy can hardly be regarded as news any longer. Russian Communism has been engaged in a desperate struggle to destroy religion. The two arch-hatreds of those who have been directing government policies in Russia have been against capitalism and religion. Religion has been regarded as inseparably linked with a direct support of the capitalistic system. The Communists realized that the spirit of Christianity was unalterably opposed to the ruthless brutality by which the Soviet established and maintained its authority. The popular cry against Christianity found expression in the slogan, "Religion Is Opium." The government resorted to force to crush every manifestation of organized religion. But, as always has been the case, religion flourished under persecution. The new policy that has been announced recognizes the right of the individual to worship according to the dictates of conscience. It provides for the separation of Church and State. And it seeks to separate religion and all educational enterprises. There has been nothing in the official announcements which indicates any change of heart toward religion. It merely provides for a different form of attack against religion.

THE WORLD AN ECONOMIC UNIT.—

The expansion of business and industry is constantly tending to make of the world an economic unit. The time seems to be speedily approaching when we shall be forced to consider not only what effect certain policies will have upon the welfare of our own nation, but what effect they will have upon the entire world. At the present time, our knowledge of world conditions is vague and inaccurate. We hear a great deal about the difference between the wage scale of America and other countries, and of the varying standards of living conditions that prevail here and abroad. The lack of adequate knowledge was recently brought to the attention of the world when Henry Ford sought accurate information as to relative equality of wages in different countries. Mr. Ford is seeking to pay his employees in foreign countries wages which will place them upon the same economic basis enjoyed by the workers in his American plants. Mr. Ford asked the International Labor Office of the League of Nations to furnish him with the information which he desired. He wanted to know the real wages of England, France, Russia, and Germany, in order that he might pay his employees in the four countries named wages that would have the purchasing equivalent of those paid to his workers in United States plants. The International Labor Office was already making a study of relative wages, but such figures as Mr. Ford wanted were not available. And funds sufficient to make such a study were not at the disposal of the labor office. It was estimated that at least $25,000 would be necessary to finance such a project. Mr. Edward A. Filene, a Massachusetts merchant, realizing the value of such information, guaranteed the sum of $25,000 to make the research possible.

THE CHURCH AND POLITICS.—

There has been recently considerable discussion as to whether the Church should seek to exert a direct influence in politics. The question is whether the organizations of the Church and the clergy should seek to influence legislation by lobbying; and whether the Church should seek directly to influence the selection of party candidates and to determine party platforms. Most of the discussion has centered around the point as to what is the legitimate function of the Church. There seems to be a majority opinion that the Church is entering upon dangerous grounds when it commits itself to partisan political alignments. It is a well-recognized fact that the Church is a potent factor in directing and shaping public opinion and public conscience. But there is a question as to whether or not it will defeat its own purpose when it enters the arena of politics.

There is also the question as to what may be done to the Church should it become a dominant and successful factor in political life. Granting that the Church may be successful in securing legislation that will be socially and morally beneficial to the masses, what effective means has the Church to safeguard its portals against the entrance of selfish and unscrupulous individuals who might seek to align themselves with the Church in order to profit by the political prestige of the Church. The Church owes its present influence and power as a social organization to the fact that in the past it has been actuated only by the desire to promote righteousness, morality, and justice. Men and women, not directly a part of the Church, have listened to the voice of the Church because they believed it to be an unselfish voice. Once the Church has been suspected of the taint of partisan politics, its voice will no longer challenge the respect and attention which has been accorded it in the past. It has happened within the past twelve months that ministers who were actuated solely by the love for righteousness and justice have had their utterances suspiciously watched by those who were seeking for an evidence of political bias and the furtherance of partisan political ambitions. There are those who see a glory in the fact that when Christ was reviled, He reviled not again. Such men and women would like to see the Church maintain its position of refusing to resort to the methods of those who are opposing its ideals and objectives, holding that it were better to suffer a temporary defeat than to relinquish its faith in spiritual powers.

NOTES-PERSONALS

From Reidsville, Rev. J. H. Dollar, the pastor, writes: "We had in our Sunday School an average attendance of 335 for May. Last Sunday we had present 408. We are trying to reach 425 for next Sunday." This is certainly exceedingly encouraging.

The annual Sunday School picnic of the First Christian Church, Richmond, Va., will be held at Buckroe Beach on Friday, June 28th. Other schools are participating, and our orchestra will render a concert during the afternoon. The train leaves from Main Street Station, on Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, at 8:15 A. M.

Rev. M. F. Allen, pastor, Newport News, is very much interested in increasing the circulation of THE CHRISTIAN SUN in his Church. He has the Ladies' Aid Society at work on the matter, and they are canvassing the entire membership. Is this not an excellent plan? The Church in Newport News seems to be going forward and in a satisfactory manner.

It will be learned with appreciation and approval throughout the Church that President Alfred W. Hurst, of Palmer College, has accepted the call of the Elon College Church to become its pastor, succeeding Dr. W. S. Alexander, resigned, September 1st, this year. Bro. Hurst produced a profound impression by his baccalaureate sermon here at commencement. CHRISTIAN SUN readers will recall the note in this column in regard to his great message, and also the editorial account of the commencement, which made special reference to him and the occasion. Bro. Hurst is not only well equipped intellectually, but his experience is rooted and grounded in Christ, whom he makes central in his whole thought and life. This is the primary need of Christian education today. We rejoice that Elon has been able to secure as pastor this devoted preacher and devout scholar.

Mr. C. M. Cannon writes: "The Elon College faculty has begun to scatter for the summer. Many of them are going to universities for graduate and research work, as is their custom. President and Mrs. W. A. Harper and Dean and Mrs. A. L. Hook left today for Chicago, where President Harper and Dean Hook will engage in research work in college administration, religious education, and counseling in the University of Chicago. Mrs. Harper is to carry forward her duties in music in the American Conservatory of Music and will have as her special instructor Carleton Hackett, head of the voice department there. Other members of the faculty studying in Chicago this summer are Prof. S. A. Bennett, Prof. A. R. Van Cleave, Prof. Ross Ensminger, and Dr. Alfred W. Hurst, pastor-elect. At the University of North Carolina, Dr. W. M. Jay and Prof. T. E. White will be engaged in graduate work. At Duke University, Prof. T. E. Powell and Prof. M. W. Hook will study. At the University of Virginia, Prof. J. W. Barney and Lean Louise Savage will study. Dean C. James Velie is to be in Chicago, with the Chicago Musical College or in Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill. Prof. O. W. Johnson will return to Vanderbilt University again this summer to continue his studies there. Visits have recently been paid the college by Dr. J. A. Clarke, professor of Latin and German, and Dr. J. Allen Hunter, professor of French, and they have outlined their work for the positions that they take with the college this fall."

HOPEWELL, VA.

The special revival meetings at the Hopewell Christian Church closed on May 19th, after two weeks of splendid co-operation with the other denominations of the city. Good audiences listened to the Rev. T. N. Lowe, of Portsmouth, Va., as he brought simple gospel messages from God's word. Christians of all denominations reconsecrated their lives to a greater work for the Master. Many knelt at the altar, seeking salvation. Ten new members were added to the Church roll.

On Wednesday night, May 29th, by special invitation, our pastor, the Rev. J. W. Barrett, preached at the First Baptist Church to a good audience of the members of the two Churches. After the service he administered the ordinance of baptism by immersion to seven candidates.

We soon enter upon our second year of worship in our new Church building. God has richly blessed us in the year just closing, and we pray that the coming year may be used to His glory in the salvation of souls and a deeper consecration of the members of the Church. We covet an interest in your prayers to this end. R. H. W.

DENDRON, VA.

We are told that we are living in a "new age." Yes, the age of materialism! It is a time when the tide of change, of insidious and seductive error, of worldliness and spiritual declension is rising high and beating fearfully against the old foundations of vital faith and spirituality and a godly life. Many of the fundamental doctrines of God's blessed Word are being thrown to the winds by so-called "modern thought," and "new thought" and "new theology" brought in. The spirit of modern thought demands mental and moral freedom. The standard for this freedom is scientific. It has no belief in the supernatural. It reduces everything of a miraculous character in the Word of God down to a mere natural basis. It hangs the monkey on the same family tree with man. In short, the spirit of modern thought stands for the exaltation and deification of the natural man. My personal conviction is that there is grave danger in the rapid advancement of that type of religion which rests upon mere intellectualism, without an inspired and authoritative Bible, without a Divine Christ (the Second Person of the triune Godhead from all eternity), without the vicarious atonement. The modern critics forget that Christianity has in its Founder a supernatural and most glorious personality—Jesus Christ. He taught more truth concerning man and God and life and death than all the philosophers of the world have ever taught.

Christ Jesus, the Lord God, is the substance of predictions, promises, and ordinances of the most ancient times. We are expressly told that "Moses wrote of Him." The prophets, priests and kings of old were types of and emblems of our Lord in His mediatorial offices. Their many sacrifices and offerings prefigured the one great sacrifice which He made of Himself on the cross, by which He "put away sin" and "brought in everlasting righteousness." I am confident modern moral impotence and spiritual barrenness is due to an improper perception of the fact, personality and meaning of Jesus Christ, our only hope of eternal life. No greater guilt rests upon us than the guilt of refusing to fully understand the matchless life and supreme purpose of the Man of Galilee.

The Second Person of the Blessed Trinity was sent into the world to interpret God, the Creator and Upholder of the Universe, to the world. Our Blessed Redeemer came to make plain to all men that our Heavenly Father's fathomless love encompasses us like the atmosphere, and that sacrifice was the prevailing method of manifestation of the love of our Heavenly Father to the world. "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son" to His creatures—to sinners—that they might not eternally perish by His justice. How unparalleled! how inexpressible is this love! It is only by one name we are saved, in one fountain our sins are to be cleansed. Christ is that sacred name. His precious blood is the fountain.

The soul of man can never know genuine happiness until it is brought into loving harmony with Christ, the Rock of Ages, the Redeemer, the imparter of pardon, peace and strength. He can soothe thy sorrows, blot out thy transgressions and make straight paths for thy feet. He alone can satisfy the hunger of the soul. He is the solution of all our political problems, the deliverer from all our social wrongs, the Saviour from all our personal sins and sorrows. Jesus Christ is our only hope in life and death; the only escape from sin and darkness and hell. Give our Lord His perfect way and sway in you, and you will find yourself living in a new environment.

We must re-enthroned Jesus Christ. We must restore to Him the halo of His Deity. He is the King of kings and Lord of lords.

A QUEST FOR THE BEST.

"The kingdom of heaven is like unto a man that is a merchantman, seeking goodly pearls, and having found one pearl of great price, he went and sold all that he had and bought it."
Matt. 13:45-46.

Human nature remains the same throughout all ages. So sure am I of this fact that when I learn what God said to men and women during the days of Christ's ministry on the earth, I know what He has to say to this generation. As one reads those ancient passages, the years slip by into nothingness and the persons of long ago become the people of today. The unchangeable message of Christ is, therefore, designed for an unchangeable human race. Just as God spoke in the long ago through the parables of the Master, so He speaks in the same diadactic fashion to you and to me. Our Heavenly Father has and always will be interested in seeing men and women obtain the best in life. He has filled the world with good things, better things and best things. In the parable of the Pearl of great price, He has set forth a way which, if diligently followed, will enable His children to secure the best. After carefully reading this wonderful little story, one truly realizes that he must go "in quest for the best." He must seek the best. He must obtain the best.

1. The kingdom of heaven is like a man seeking goodly pearls.

When Jesus referred to the kingdom of heaven, He was thinking of the best in life that was obtainable. He saw a universe filled with happiness, love and good will, wherein every man loved God and his neighbor as himself. He saw in practice the Golden Rule, which was the center of his entire ministry and the heart of his teachings. The kingdom of heaven was the best. To obtain entrance into the citizenship of that kingdom was for a man, woman or child to go in quest for the best. Jesus illustrated this quest for the best by relating an incident that perhaps had been an actual experience in His boyhood days. He, no doubt, remembered having seen tradesmen come through the little city of Nazareth with costly goods to display to the local constituency. He remembered how eagerly some of the people awaited the coming of these peddlers. Now, there was a certain man in His mind that sought to buy goodly pearls. It is not evident that this man was in search of these pearls for commercial purposes, for he was a local resident, and simply wanted the best in jewels, because he had a passion and love for things beautiful. He always sought the best. Now, to our mind, diamonds are more costly and in greater demand than pearls; but not so in the day of Jesus. It is said that Cleopatra had in her possession two pearls of great value—each one valued at $400,000. These jewels were, no doubt, the admiration of all the people, for they were the best pearls known. And there was a certain man in those days who sought the best. He greatly desired such jewels as then adorned the costly garments of the lovely queen. But for a citizen to seek queenly jewels was impossible; nevertheless, this man never failed to remain in quest for the best. Throughout his search for the best, he remained very patient and continued to seek diligently; and, to his great amazement, he was rewarded one day. Commentators tell us that by chance, a man traveling from Persia to India came through the city in which this man lived and displayed a jewel that far surpassed anything this pearl-seeker had ever beheld. It was the best —the pearl of great price. Indeed, everything worth while comes to those who diligently seek. Jesus said unto them, "Seek and ye shall find." And now the man in the story has found the jewel for which he has long sought. If one continues to seek the best things in life, some day he will find. But he must seek, seek, and seek, for good fortune does not come to those whose fingers are idle.

One of the best quests of life is an education. Its value cannot be estimated in terms of money. And yet the recent statistics compiled by Dr. C. G. Glenn, superintendent of schools of Birmingham, Ala., reveal the money value of an education. From over 7,000 reports he shows that the untrained men, with only an elementary education, goes to work at the age of fourteen. He reaches a maximum income at forty-five, thus earning, on the average, less than $1,700 per year. His total earnings from fourteen to sixty are about $64,000. The high school graduate goes to work at eighteen (four years later), and passes the maximum of $2,800 at fifty years of age. His earnings from eighteen to sixty total $88,000, or just $24,000 more than the amount earned by the elementary-trained man. This indicates that each of the four years spent in high school is worth to him in cash about $6,000. The college graduate goes to work at the age of twenty-two, and by the time he is thirty-one his income equals that of the high school graduate at forty. His income continues to steadily rise. His total earnings from twenty-two to sixty are approximately $144,000. In other words, the $56,000 earned by him above the high school graduate figure represents the cash value of a college education, or $14,000 per year for each year spent in college. And so from a financial point of view, if for no other, it pays to go in quest for the best in education. Go to college.

But there are far more important reasons for the youth of today going to college next fall than that of making money. A well-chosen institution of higher learning imparts the best mental training and develops the character of each individual student, which becomes a most valuable possession. Good character enables him to become an asset to humanity, through the service he learns to render. For no matter what a man's work, he can do it better if he is well informed. Education is the best sort of equipment for efficient service. As a stenographer, one will do better work and have better chances of advancement if familiar with history, literature, the best in art, science and philosophy. As a professional man, either lawyer, doctor, teacher or preacher, your reputation will largely depend upon your general education, rather than your knowledge as a narrow-minded specialist. The best education makes for culture and makes an intellectual background. It means accumulated force behind each stroke. The best in education means that you are capable yourself, but that you know how to absorb and use the capabilities of other persons. You will attain perspective, increased personality and stronger influence because you seek the best in education. Seek the best and you will be kept from settling down to become, as Dr. Frank Crane says, a mere cog in the wheel, a little specialized piece of machinery to do a certain work. You will become somebody, and not just anybody. Many a man has risen high in the business world, only to be humiliated because he failed to seek the best in education, which alone enables men to be on equality with well-informed people.

I know of no man or woman who has neglected to seek the best in education, who does not bitterly regret it later on in life. No living person ever becomes sorry that he or she went in quest for the best in education. There never was a time when it was so true that knowledge means power, and the value of this thought is that every person who reads may have knowledge and power combined. But he must, like the merchantman, seek—seek, seek always the best. The gates of education are unlocked, her doors unlatched, and her road is as free as the State highway. The only things that prevent persons from seeking the best in education are laziness, self-indulgence, weakness and procrastination.

2. "And having found one pearl of great price, he went and sold all that he had and bought it."

It is a great day when one discovers a reward for his efforts. He, like the ancient Archimedes, desires to exclaim, "Eureka! I have found it." He is like the man in the parable who, when he found the pearl of great price, went and sold all that he had and bought it. To him, the opportunity had come. He must not let it pass, for before him lay a chance to obtain the best in jewels. And for it he must pay the price. He sells all he has. Perhaps disposes of his house and lands in order to take advantage of this one great opportunity. Often an opportunity is a gift, as the word implies; but it must be improved, it must be accepted. The fertility of a field is a gift, but the gift must be obtained by the owner's labors. A noble book is a gift. It is an opportunity; but it must be read and studied before the contents become valuable for information and experience. Before we can make the book ours, we must sell other books of less value; and remember that, as Ruskin said, "If I read this book, I cannot read that book." If I give my life to common-place things, I cannot give it to things high. If I seek cheap pearls, I cannot at the same time be in search of goodly pearls. So there comes a time, says Tennyson, in "Guinevere" ("Idylls of the King"), when we should love the highest and best in life.

"It was my duty to have loved the highest;

It surely was my pleasure had I seen;

It would have been my profit had I known—

We needs must love the highest when we see it."

For the best, one must pay the price of sacrifice. He must go and sell all he has and buy it. We remember that the disciples left all and followed eagerly. Paul yielded, without regret, his pride of Pharisaic birth and learning; "But what things were gain to me, said he, these I counted loss for Christ." Augustine parted gladly with his sins, and said, "What I feared to part with became a joy to surrender. Thou didst cast forth my sins, and in their place didst enter in Thyself, sweeter than all pleasure."

A friend of mine told me of a man who was driving alone into a western city during the nighttime. He was a bit uncertain about the road, and, perchance, asked a young man who was walking along the highway, about 3:30 A. M., the direction. He was informed, and told that the distance was about sixty miles to the city limits. Whereupon, the driver and owner of the car asked the young man if he were going that way, and thereupon offered him a ride. The fine-looking young fellow replied that he appreciated the offer to ride, but stated that he was practicing the art of walking all night in order that he be able to stay awake for forty-eight hours. In a few weeks after that incident, Charles Lindberg flew to Paris. He had paid the price by the sacrifice of many sleepless nights as he walked along the highways, stretching his eyelids and fighting all inclinations to sleep. All these men found pearls of great price—disciples, Paul, Augustine, Lindberg. They were willing to obtain them by making great sacrifices.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

VALLEY S. S. & C. E. CONVENTION.

This body met in annual session with Newport Church, Page County, Va., Thursday A. M., June 13th. Roy A. Larrick, Winchester, Va., is president, and this means that a splendid program had been prepared and that the sessions assembled and were called to order promptly and on time. Rev. A. W. Andes conducted the opening devotionals; Bro. T. Z. Alger welcomed the body, and Miss Anna A. Seabright appropriately responded.

A large audience—almost a full house—was present for the opening exercises, and the attendance of delegates and visitors was good throughout. Mrs. R. C. Myers made the report and read a timely paper as the cradle roll secretary of the Convention. Rev. W. B. Fuller, Linville, having been elected for the purpose a year ago, delivered the annual address.

J. O. Atkinson, Mission Secretary, delivered an address just before noon of the first day on "Missions and the Sunday School." What a bountiful lunch was spread on a long, wide table on the lawn, and Virginia hospitality, with its abundance and variety, greeted the eye and gladdened the heart of the happy assembly.

In the afternoon, Rev. B. J. Earp led the devotionals, and Mrs. K. H. Sale presented the report on the organized class. Then followed an appropriate and lovely Christian Endeavor program, many of the young Endeavorers taking part. Christian Endeavor is a live topic and organization in this body, and was well represented. Rev. Joe French led the Convention to think seriously on "Leadership Training" in a well-prepared address on that important topic.

One of the features of the Convention was an address by Rev. F. C. Lester, chairman of the Board of Religious Education, on the great need for Christian education in every Church and community, and how his board was trying to supply that need.

At the night session, Rev. R. L. Williamson, Winchester, Va., preached a helpful and edifying sermon on "The Life More Abundant."

Friday morning, Rev. Joe French opened the Convention with a solemn and reverential devotional service, and Miss Pattie Coghill, secretary of the Board of Religious Education, spoke, to the delight of all, about the growing need for more Bible study on the part of the young people.

Miss Verdie Showalter, secretary of missions for the Convention, presented the report on missions, showing that nineteen out of twenty-six schools of the Convention took the monthly offering for missions, and urged that all schools take the offering and teach missions in the Sunday School.

J. O. Atkinson, Mission Secretary, undertook to explain to the Convention the difference between "Missions in the Sunday School and the Sunday School in Missions," urging superintendents, teachers, pastors and leaders to put their Sunday School in missions.

In the closing session of the Convention, Friday P. M., all committees reported that, on nominations, recommending the same officers as this year be elected for next year; that on place of meeting recommending Linville Church as place of the next annual meeting. Rev. R. A. Whitten, representing Elon College, made the final address of the day and delighted the audience with the timeliness and appropriateness of his remarks.

The officers of the Convention are, besides President Larrick, J. E. Foster, vice-president; R. Roy Hosaflook, secretary; R. C. Deavers, treasurer—all capable, competent, efficient. The Convention voted $100 to the Board of Religious Education, and two offerings for missions, amounting to $19.65.

The Convention was royally entertained, and the hospitality of the Newport people was unbounded.

ENFORCEMENT COMMISSION BEGINS TASK.

The whole country applauds, or should applaud, the President of the United States for naming a commission of eminent, impartial and well-qualified statesmen to make a thorough study of and report on law enforcement, especially that part of the law that pertains to national prohibition. National prohibition is the declared law of the land. This being so, it behooves law-abiding citizens everywhere to co-operate in its enforcement. One of the strange phenomena of our time is that there is a large contingency of newspapers, the city dailies in particular, that lose no opportunity to flaunt the law, to cast aspersions upon the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act, and use their news and editorial columns in behalf of lawless wet propaganda. We are astounded at the attitude many of these dailies and the wet press generally take toward a law which has been enacted and is on the statute books and re-enforced by repeated vote and affirmation of the American people. These papers, many of them, hold up the law to ridicule and seem to seek every opportunity of pointing out with pride and pleasure every breach of the law and every effort on the part of the lawless and the bootlegger to make the law of non-effect. So far as we know, no other law or amendment to our Constitution is held up to such ridicule and to such treatment, and is treated with such injustice and open rebellion as is national prohibition. The amendment to the Constitution and the law are there, and they are there by the most nearly unanimous vote and decision of the American people that was ever given to any amendment or act. Why not give this law an opportunity, and fall in behind it and do everything to give it a fair trial? This we would do but for the wet propagandists who, in defiance of the law, want to profit by the weakness and the appetite of mankind, and thus help to debauch and tear down the moral standards of the people rather than to defend and elevate them.

On May 28th, President Hoover called the National Commission to the White House and delivered a charge as he sent them forth upon the great task before them. The President's brief address in charging the commission was as follows:

"I propose no extensive address in inducting this commission formally into its duties. Its members have large understanding and long service in the field whose problems it is assembled to study and consider. I have already expressed my views publicly upon its purpose and its necessity.

"The American people are deeply concerned over the alarming disobedience of law, the abuses in law enforcement and the growth of organized crime, which has spread in every field of evil-doing and in every part of our country.

"A nation does not fail from its growth of wealth or power. But no nation can for long survive the failure of its citizens to respect and obey the laws which they themselves make. Nor can it survive a decadence of the moral and spiritual concepts that are the basis of respect for law, nor from neglect to organize itself to defeat crime and the corruption that flows from it. Nor is this a problem confined to the enforcement and obedience of one law, or the laws of the Federal or State governments separately. The problem is partly the attitude toward all law.

"It is my hope that the commission shall secure an accurate determination of fact and cause, following them with constructive, courageous conclusions which will bring public understanding and command public support of its solutions. The general public approval of the necessity for the creation of this commission and the extraordinary universality of approval of its membership are in themselves evidences of the responsibility that lies upon you and of the great public concern in your task and of the hope that you may succeed.

"I do pray for the success of your endeavors, for by such success you will have performed one of the greatest services to our generation."

THE COUNTRY CHURCH.

This country was settled mainly by people on farms. To clear a place in the forest, build a log house near a spring, and start a little home was the way this great nation began. To till the few acres thus cleared, to raise a few cows and horses, occupied the thought and energy of men and women who laid the foundation for what we now enjoy. The little Church sprang up in the little country neighborhoods that clung close together for protection and social life. It was simple and hard, but it had faith and was willing to work. The little Church was the center of the community—the meeting-house, as it was called; the place where they worshiped in sincerity and in truth. Formality was absent from the Church as it was from their homes. Simplicity, sincerity, and solemnity marked the house of prayer. The preaching was plain, biblical, heart-searching, and produced results. Religion was more of the heart than of the head. In the home the parlor was unknown, but the home had a welcome that rivaled modern farms. The farms were small, the neighborhood was compact, neighbors were close, and the Church was dear to their hearts.

Modern civilization has changed conditions and raised new questions in rural life. Towns and cities have grown up and attracted people away from the country into these centers of population and new problems. Men and corporations have come in possession of large tracts of land, placed tenants on them, and made the cultivation of the soil a money venture. This has interrupted the natural and normal development of the country. Agriculture and rural life were never intended as a money-making enterprise. Big farms separate farmers; little farms hold them together in small neighborhoods. The tenant system removes those personal contacts that make neighbors and build good country Churches. What this nation needs is small farms, cultivated by the owners, who try to build farms and homes and country Churches. Nothing is sweeter and richer than a neighborhood of small farms, cultivated by the owners, and worshiping God in the country Church on Sunday. The fact is that many of the city Churches get their best members from the country Churches. Such a community can stand the strain of a panic or the danger of worldliness better than the richest and most cultured city.

The old-fashioned country Church was the most spiritual center this country has ever known, and it contains the elements of faith and strength at the present time that nourish the great religious centers. When the richest and most cultured people of the cities want to have the best time, they go to the country. W. W. S.

AN INSPIRING CONFESSION.

For many years I have been an ardent admirer of that brilliant but erratic leader of youth, Stanley High. Recently, in a great men's meeting, my admiration was deepened. And thereby hangs a tale.

Some three years ago, Stanley High began a journey around the world. He planned to visit mission fields in all lands and at first hand know the facts relative to missions and the non-Christian religions.

He had, however, come to a very definite conclusion, and his facts he felt sure would support his conclusion. He was convinced no religion could meet the needs of mankind alone; that what is needed is a synthetic religion, taking the best out of each and compounding religion, universally meeting the needs of the human heart.

So sure was Stanley High of the certainty of his conclusion that he signed a contract with a leading American magazine to write for it upon his return a series of articles on "The Synthetic Religion." The fee was ample to care for all expenses of the trip, and then some.

Upon his return, the contract was broken and the articles not written. The world traveler paid his own bills. Stanley High thereupon became the editor of the Christian Herald, that major bulwark of the Christian faith in the field of religious journalism.

Speaking before the great men's meeting to which I have referred, Editor High made a great confession. He said, "I started around the world to prove my matured conviction that what the world needed was a synthetic religion. I have changed my mind. There is but one hope for mankind, the message of the gospel of Jesus Christ. For it I stand."

His confession was elective, inspiring, prophetic because Stanley High is one of the great minds of our day. W. A. H.

A JUDGE SPEAKS HIS MIND.

A few weeks ago one of Chicago's most noted gangsters and gamblers went to Philadelphia "on business for his brotherhood of thugs, assassins and outlaws." Al. Capone is his name; he who had many crimes to his credit and who had boasted that he never had been punished. He was very prominent in business and social circles in Chicago, and the officers there had never been able to get him convicted. He had not been many hours in Philadelphia, however, before he, with his chief lieutenant and bodyguard in bootlegging, had been arrested on a minor charge of carrying a deadly weapon. Hailed before the court in the Quaker City, the judge, in passing sentence, is reported to have said: "Authorities in some cities, including the District of Columbia, are afraid of you. But Philadelphia is not afraid of you, Mr. Al. Capone, and I am not afraid of you. I do not know your companion, but I take it he is quite in your class. I order you both held in $35,000 bail for court. My only regret is that you are not before me on charges which would justify me ridding the United States of you both forever." They were both then sent to jail for one year—the maximum punishment for the crime of which they were accused.

With Al. Capone spending a year behind the prison bars in Philadelphia, and Mr. Sinclair, the millionaire oil magnate, serving sentence in the District of Columbia prison, the country breathes a little more freely in the thought that neither money nor social prestige and power can defy the law and get by with it continuously. Money is powerful and social prestige has might, but when some of our courts get hold of the offending, the high and the low are treated alike. For which we should take courage and thank God. J. O. SOB BROTHERS.

(Reprinted by special permission from "The Saturday Evening Post"; copyright, 1929, by the Curtis Publishing Company.)

A sure method of dodging any serious problem these days is solemnly to remark that it is very complicated. By shrugging one's shoulders and referring to the many-sidedness of the question, it is easy to pass the buck. A problem may be complicated, but some one must face it for all that. This applies in a peculiar sense to the issue of law enforcement. The overwhelming majority of those who read these words, and of people in general, cannot establish an alibi because the criminologists have failed as yet to dig out all the roots of crime. Complicated as crime is, there is nothing especially intricate or involved in the simple fact that your duty and ours is to uphold the law.

Nor is this any empty generality. We are talking about a very specific thing, namely: the prevailing mushy-headedness and spinelessness, but not necessarily of the female portion of the population. Frankly, the country suffers from too many sob brothers; it has too many softies. A number of weeks have elapsed since President Hoover made his incisive address on law enforcement before the Associated Press, but his ringing words must long remain an inspiration to those who are not too flabby to meet the crisis. For the moment we confine our remarks to one sentence in the President's speech: "The sympathetic mind of the American people in its overconcern about those who are in difficulties has swung too far from the family of the murdered to the family of the murderer."

One way to stop crime is to stop hampering the police in the pursuit of duty. This is not the only step to be taken, but it is the first one. The President spoke of how the pendulum has swung in favor of the prisoner and far away from the protection of society. "Every student of law-enforcement machinery knows full well that its procedure unduly favors the criminal." It is heartening to decent men to have the President say these words. Crime will continue to increase until justice becomes more swift and sure. The first step to make it so is to give the police a real chance to batter down the enemies of society.

In saying this we hold no special brief for the police. No doubt, many brutal and untruthful men find their way into police forces; a little authority puffs up small men and leads them into excess. But, after all, they are the sole protection that lies between society and its foes. You may not like the looks or roughness of the log-cabin wall, but if it is all that lies between you and ravening wolves or hostile Indians, how foolish to break down its timbers! You may not like the complexion of your health officer, but until you find a better do not hamper him in fighting bubonic plague or yellow fever.

The police themselves are shot down in cold blood by criminals time and again, and we hear no loud protests from the sob brothers. When policemen are killed in cold blood by bandits, how many high-priced criminal lawyers express the fervent hope that the district attorney will be able to convict? Criminals daily employ smoke-screens, machine guns and other instruments of warfare without causing any particular comment. But if a policeman in a rare instance shoots, except in cases of actual self-defense where he must shoot it out or die, he is loudly condemned. Bandits and bootleggers refuse to stop when challenged, use smoke-screens, drive at excessive speeds and defy the law at every point. Yet if one is shot in the attempt to apprehend him, a great outcry is heard.

Anything like real vigor or astuteness on the part of the police seems to be regarded as "unfair" by the mushy-headed or selfish elements of the population. There is even objection at times to the use of plainclothes traffic police. This is said to be "unfair." Just what adjective should be applied to a motorist who through recklessness kills another motorist or pedestrian seems to interest no one. But, coming back to the criminal aspects of the subject, there is constant criticism of the use of "under cover" methods by police and enforcement officers, although the most underhanded efforts of authorities to apprehend criminals cannot possibly equal the clandestine and underground methods of the offenders themselves.

The President suggests that officers of the law should be invested with some of the romance and glamour which now go to the criminal. We think those who take a sentimental attitude toward the criminal are themselves close to degeneracy. Perhaps your bank bandit or rum runner did not get enough Grade A milk when he was a baby. Very well, let's try to furnish the present generation of babies with good milk. But as for the criminal, he is nothing but a dose of bubonic plague or yellow fever, and needs to be held at bay just as the health officer seeks to curb the plague.

Every citizen, the President insists, has a personal duty in law enforcement. He does not do enough when he hires a policeman to enforce the law for him. But we think the situation is worse than mere inactivity. The citizen hires a policeman and then complains if the officer shows any energy. No society has the saving cement of self-preservation if its members are milksops. We need some of the iron of our forefathers. If we can produce it again, the foundations of our institutions will be found to be sound. But if we remain chronically afraid of a little firmness we might as well count the days before self-government feebly gives way to some form of absolutism.

Bro. J. T. Cross has discovered at the home of his sister, Mrs. N. C. Rountree, Gates, N. C., a copy of THE CHRISTIAN SUN dated September 5, 1879. It is possible that in the homes of readers of THE SUN there are many old copies of the paper. The Elon College library had a complete file of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, but it was burned in the fire of 1923. If friends who have these copies would be willing to send them to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, or to the Elon College library, they would be preserved. These old papers are priceless history of the Christian Church, and, if possible, they should be preserved.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

I delivered an address before the students of Elon College in 1896 in which I said: "I favor good roads and good schools; and, if I had my choice, I would have good roads before good schools." I had seen the good roads in northern Italy, the finest I have ever seen—a good road for vehicles and a narrow side road for bicycles. That sight so impressed me that I have never forgotten it. The reason I gave for preferring good roads before good schools was that, seeing the world and coming in contact with people is a large part of all education. Good roads open the door of opportunity to all ages and all conditions. Moreover, good roads will produce good schools. The schools in this country have improved more rapidly since the construction of good roads. Schools open the door for improvement to the young; good roads open the door to the old as well as the young. They work together as all good agencies do. Railroads co-operate, manufacturers co-operate, Churches co-operate. The consolidated school is the product of good roads. In countries where there are no roads, the people have almost no contact with one another, little sympathy for each other, practically no business, no increase in wealth, no progress, no real civilization, only the most primitive conditions. Nothing has so developed the United States as the railroads; and the Seaboard Air Line, running from Portsmouth, Va., to Raleigh, N. C., is the oldest railroad in the world that reached a hundred miles in length. It would be impossible to supply the cities on the Atlantic coast with coal without railroad freight trains. The Pullman cars are finer than coal cars, but the coal cars do more for mankind. The big folks in the world shine more, but the working people of the world do more for the world.

Good roads came just at the right time for automobiles that could not serve mankind on bad roads. "The 'straight and narrow way'" may have suggested good roads. It seems providential that good roads and automobiles should have come on together.

Good Churches are more important than good roads and good schools; and Churches have not kept pace with roads and schools. The Church made the civilization that builds the good roads and good schools, and the abuse of these two great agencies for progress may turn the tide backward in time to come if they are not used for the support and progress of the Church. Education that puts what is called learning before the Bible and religion, and good roads that carry people away from the Church instead of to the Church could wreck civilization. All wrong is the abuse of good!

ELON LETTER.

PRESIDENT'S REPORT.

May, 1929.

When this commencement has closed, I will have rounded out twenty-four years of service at Elon—six as professor and eighteen as president. Only one college president in the State has served more years than I have—President Few, of Duke—and his administration has been without financial worries. For eighteen years every session at Elon has been marked by feverish efforts to raise money, and the major task is yet before us. When this major task is performed, all will be quiet and orderly along our financial "Potomac."

In 1911, when I met for the first time with our faculty, as president, in the enthusiasm of youth and the assurance of inexperience, I outlined three objectives for the new administration. They were:

1. An adequate physical plant for the college. We have it.
2. Membership in the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. We have achieved it.
3. An endowment of $1,000,000 and all indebtedness paid. This is the major task, to which reference has already been made. The raising of $1,000,000 in money, which is contemplated, will achieve this objective, too.

During these eighteen years, the college has grown in public esteem as well as in academic prestige. We have now a national reputation for our sensing of the duty of the denominational college to give primary emphasis to religious education, with Christian character as its goal, and for our provision for it in the Christian Education Building, which graces our campus. I think I may truthfully say that the college internally, as an educational institution, has undergone growth and development commensurate with its achievement in the three objectives originally outlined for the present administration.

Financial Campaign.

I recommend that the financial campaign for one million dollars to pay off the bonded indebtedness assumed by the Southern Christian Convention and add $600,000 to the permanent funds of the college be undertaken jointly in January, 1930, and that you appoint a committee of five, with the Convention President as a member ex-officio, to have general oversight of its set-up and conduct. This committee should have full authority to add to its membership and to manage the campaign.

The General Education Board has, since your February session, sent a visiting committee to the college. We have no decision from them as yet, though we are hopeful that they will join us in the endowment feature of our campaign. They have retired, however, from the college endowment field as a policy, and their assistance to us would come as a special concession—a fact which we would all the more appreciate.

The Carnegie Corporation has also been approached with the request that assistance be granted us in our campaign. Whatever it gives, however, will be with special reference to the library.

The Atlanta Theological Seminary.

Shortly after your February meeting, President Keller, of the Atlanta Theological Seminary; Dr. F. P. Ensminger, Dr. Luman H. Royce, and Dr. J. Edward Kirbye came to the college, and we frankly faced all the issues involved in the removal of the seminary to Elon.

After full discussion, I withdrew from the conference, and these Congregational leaders drew up the following basis of agreement, which I promised to submit to you for approval at this session.

Basis of Agreement Between Elon College and Atlanta Theological Seminary:

"The Atlanta Theological Seminary votes to establish itself at Elon College as the Atlanta Theological Seminary Foundation, under the control of its board of trustees and executive committee.

"This foundation shall employ professors (with the approval of the faculty committee and trustees of Elon College), whose work will be integrated with the curriculum of the School of Christian Education of Elon College. Additional professors and courses may be added as funds and endowments are secured, and when courses meet the requirements of a graduate school, Elon College agrees to co-operate toward this end. The ultimate aim is the development of a graduate school by the increase of the theological curriculum and the building of an adequate endowment, and to this aim both institutions are pledged.

"Elon College shall agree to furnish class-rooms and offices in its Christian Education Building to the Atlanta Theological Seminary Foundation professors and officers without cost, and to co-operate in every way in making its work efficient.

"The foundation shall not confer degrees until it has met the academic requirements of a graduate school. All students shall be enrolled according to the standards operative in Elon College and the A. B. degree will be granted to all ministerial students who meet academic requirements."

It became evident, however, just before the Congregational brethren took their departure that President Keller was quite lukewarm on the proposition.

In March, President Keller came to Elon to see me again. Dr. Ensminger was also present. They drew up a document for me to sign, setting forth that it was advantageous for the seminary to locate at Vanderbilt as a foundation, overtures having been made to them for that purpose. I had no authority to sign such a paper, and declined.

The seminary, however, goes to Vanderbilt as a foundation, using the basis originally drawn up by the Congregational leaders, for its location here as a foundation.

I have felt that you should know the full facts of the situation. I am convinced that it would have been a great mistake to allow the Atlanta Theological Seminary to come to Elon as a degree-conferring institution, when as a matter of fact it is only a Christian training school. It should be said also that the overtures to locate here came from the seminary, and not from Elon.

All that has been done has been in fine Christian spirit, and I feel confident we have the respect and good will of the Congregational friends, and that their co-operation with Elon as an undergraduate college will be genuine and sincere.

Special Items.

Our thanks are due Trustee P. J. Carlton for donating to the college the Barney property adjoining the president's home. This property is valued at $6,000. I suggest that it be added to the endowment fund and that the rent from it be credited to the endowment income.

I recommend that the committee on social clubs of the faculty be authorized to proceed to institute a chapter of Pi Gamma Mu here. This is the national social science honor fraternity now in American colleges and universities.

I recommend that a committee be appointed to prepare resolutions on the death of Mrs. P. H. Fleming, who has passed to her reward since your February session.

I request Dr. W. H. Boone to outline his proposed plan of scholarship aid to worthy students. It appeals to me as an excellent plan.

Report of Officers and Departments.

The full reports of the administrative committee, of the librarian, of the secretary of the faculty, of the deans, of the registrar, of the business manager, and of the several departments of the college make it unnecessary that I report to you further.

W. A. HARPER,
President.

May 28th.

Some people spend so much time and energy in condemning evil that they have no time or energy left for the business of overcoming it with good.

THE PLACE OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

BY HON. C. C. HOWELL.

(The alumni address delivered at Elon College, May 27th, by Hon. C. C. Howell, attorney, Jacksonville, Fla.)

You have been told that I come from Florida—that land that lies in the summer sun today as long ago at the beginning of its romantic history it lay at the heart of the hopes and dreams of the Spanish conquistadores. Had some power given me the gift to take something of the golden glow of its sunlit days, of the silver sheen of its moonlit nights, odorous with the dreaming fragrance that sleeps at the hearts of its white magnolias and in the pearly petals of its orange blossoms; could I have caught something of the alluring beauty of its dimple-bosomed lakes, its deep, quiet-rolling rivers, its gushing, laughing, silvery springs, its broad beaches caressed by the eager, dancing waves that renew again and again their wooing of its curving shores, or the stately majesty of its moss-draped oaks and murmuring pines that march solemnly and eternally down from the interior highlands across the dim defiles of its mysterious swamps to the places where the pleasant land halts in awe at the grandeur of the rolling Gulf and the tossing Atlantic; could I have captured and kept something of the beauty and magic and wonder and delight of this land that seems hallowed by a charm from the skies—I would have brewed it in the alembic of a devoted son's adoration for a noble mother, and tonight I would have anointed the feet of alma mater with precious spikenard. But a man's reach has exceeded his grasp again, and in the place of perfumed ointment I bring only rosemary, for remembrance, and pansies for thoughts—remembrance of the debt of gratitude and love that you and I owe to Elon, and thoughts of the beacon rays of truth and light and life and freedom that she today throws across the tossing waters of spiritual unrest and indecision, through the swirling storm of materialism that beats and rages in the stricken night against the Light of the world that is typified by the light that is here set upon this hill.

And so, if it so be that you and I may somewhat tune our thoughts together at this hour, let us think for a while of that idealism—yes, of that "practical" idealism, if you will—that now seems committed wholly to the trust of Elon and the other few institutions of learning like her which still believe and teach and know that man still does not live by the bread of materialism alone.

I have not journeyed here to "view with alarm," nor to prefer any indictment, nor to file charges or accusations. But as a humble but free citizen of the domain of liberty that has been opened to her sons and daughters by the truth that is taught at Elon, as an heir to the patrimony of high ideals and worthy ambitions and laudable aspirations that she has transmitted to us, I do follow, in the best of my own way, that call and leadership of those stable souls of this generation who steadily decline, and, if the necessity arise, stanchly refuse, to be shaken loose from the essentials of life by any of the marvelous, materialistic achievements of these stupendous days in which we are living. It still remains that life is more than raiment, and that the abundance of a man's life consists not in the things which he possesses.

Grateful beyond all expression, and awed beyond the ability of any expression, are all right-thinking men and women at the wonders and marvels of these latter years that have been unfolded before our astonished eyes by the researches and investigations that have been made, and by the results that have been reached in mechanics and science, in medicine and sociology, by the biologist and by the scholars of psychology. But these right-thinking men and women, to whom without pretence of self-importance you and I may, I think, assume that we belong, do not and will not believe with some of these student investigators that they have unlocked all the storehouses of knowledge nor drunk from all the Pierian springs of wisdom. We believe that there are frontiers of fact across which they have not trod; we believe that there are domains of truth and knowledge and power whose language even is wholly unknown to him who stakes his soul as well as his life upon the ultimateness of materialism and behaviorism; and we know that in our inmost being there is an overwhelming need that cannot be even sensed, much less satisfied, by anything yet or hereafter to be offered by any scientist, nor by any biologist, nor by any psychologist, nor yet by any pure philosopher. And so in the midst—yea, at the very heart—of our realization and appreciation of the enormous and unpayable debt that we owe to science in its many branches, and to philosophy with its many schools, we feel the beat of our hearts keeping time, for the once, with the poetic pulse of the pathetic Poe as he mourned the science of his day that had taken "the Naiad from her waterfall, the elfin from the green grass, and from me the summer dream beneath the tamarind tree."

The man or woman that dwells behind the curtain of your personality and mine is a citizen of the invisible kingdom, temporarily become flesh and living among us; and day by day we are returning to the imperial palace whence we came. We are subjects, therefore, of the King of the spirit land, and the fundamental rules that govern and regulate our well-being here are prescribed by His laws—not only those that have been studied and, to a marvelous extent, grasped by the men of biology, geology, psychology, astronomy and philosophy, but also, and more especially and most important, those that regulate and govern the spiritual man, and that govern and regulate him here and now as well as yonder and after a while.

It is only for the sake of convenience and in a finite attempt to understand an infinite being that we speak of the physical man and of the mental man and of the spiritual man. We know all the while that each of these is only a particular manifestation of a being that must be infinite because somehow he is made in the image of an infinite Creator. And by the same token, for the same convenience, and out of the same inescapable necessity, we give to the divine spark within us that sometimes only flickers and again flashes and brilliantly burns, the name of mind, or soul, or spirit, and apply to the something that this concept stands for such attempted analytical characterizations as goodness, truth, beauty, or intellect, feeling, will. In all the realms of all knowledge there is no such thing as a purely intellectual man—a man who is emotional only, or one who is motivated only by his will. What we call an intellectual man or a forceful man is, instead, one of the immortals expressing his being through the intellectual or volitional side of his consciousness; and in like manner does this son of eternity give evidence of his emotional life, or of the beauty, truth, or goodness that may dwell within him.

In striving after a realization of his highest good, struggling to reach his ultimate goal, where shall such a being set the limits of his destiny? Shall he attend exclusively to his intellect? If he does, he is foredoomed to failure and despair and misery; and back down the dim corridors of history he beholds the intellectually giant* Socrates, the master-mind of the ancient intellectual world, and hears him as, condemned to the hemlock cup for corrupting the youth of Athens, he sentences the judges who have sentenced him, with the despairing statement, "You go out to live, and I to die—which is best, only God knows."

Shall a man set up his will as an idol and burn all the incense of his devotion before it? Let him consider the end of the once indomitable Napoleon, sitting bound in the castle of Giant Despair more certainly and irretrievably than he is confined to the bleak boundaries of rock-bound St. Helena by the sentinel who passes and repasses before him with the mournful monotony of the waves that beat upon the stony shore of his prison; or let him think of the youthful Alexander, finding an unparalleled place in the Oriental sun and then sinking at thirty years of age into the abysmal shadows of a mind clouded by disappointment and despair and finally insanity.

Shall this paragon of nature determine that the perfection of his emotional life is the journey's end set before him, and say with old Omar:

"Come, fill the cup, and in the fire of spring
Your winter garment of repentance fling;
The bird of time has but a little way
To flutter—and lo, the bird is on the wing!"

Foolish philosophy, when all along the shores of time, from the dim glimpse we get of it on the first barely legible pages of recorded history to the startling stories appearing on the pages written yesterday of the licentiousness and debauchery of the sensual-worshiping ones in this year 1929, there lie, as thick as the leaves in fabled Vallambrosa, the wasted wrecks of lives whose crafts have gone to destruction and ruin and death on the rocks of selfishness and physical pleasure.

What then? Shall we combine all these possibilities of man's consciousness and seek their joint fruition in the realm of philosophy? If this is to be the hypothesis by which alone the course of life is to be conducted, hear the profoundest pure philosopher of them all, the wise Hebrew king, after he had been endowed with and had experienced every conceivable physical, material, intellectual and emotional blessing; hear him as he proclaims from the Holy City: "I looked on all the words that my hands had wrought and on the labor that I had labored to do, and behold! all was vanity and a striving after wind, and there was no profit under the sun."

None under the sun! No, but what of the spirit land that lies beyond the sun, and the moon and the stars? That land that shall be after the planets have gone to their graves, and the Milky Way is wrapped in the winding sheet of eternity? Is there profit, or peace, or satisfaction there?

In considering this question, we know that it is not to be answered by the intellect, the feeling, nor the will, nor by all of them together; but, if at all, by the spirit. How, then, shall we approach it? Even men whose minds are molded in merely materialistic moods understand that no lawyer undertakes his work with the physician's vocabulary; they know that the words of the longshoremen, or the bricklayer, or the carpenter cannot express the principles of banking; they realize that there is no voice or language to express a mother's love for her children, or a good man's love for the mother of his own children; they, as well as we, can sense the mystery and marvel of the radio that delivers the pregnant atmosphere around us of the living sounds trembling in it, and of television that flashes through space and through night and light alike, the living features of a subject whose physical presence is a thousand miles away. The most familiar phenomena in all the world, known to all men everywhere during all time, are the two common, ordinary ones of time and space. Of their nature, origin, characteristics, and destiny, the veriest fool knows as much as the wisest man—neither of them knows, nor can know, where, nor how, nor when they were born, where they came from, their beginning, nor their end. The only new thought expressed of them in thousands of years is the hypothesis of Einstein that both space and time are relative, that no particular point and no par-

WORSHIP FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

Too much emphasis cannot be placed on the need for real worship. We are apt to get so busy doing things that we quite overlook the motive power back of our activity. If young people's interest in missions is to be real, vital, and lasting, it must root deep. It is easy to get a group absorbed in projects or even in discussion of the principles of Jesus applied in our relationships. It is a more difficult and more subtle process to imbue them with the spirit of Jesus. A right conception of God as a divine Father of all mankind, not as an intellectual concept but as a personal experience, and a purposeful spirit of love and allegiance to Him and His purpose for the world lie at the root of all missionary attitudes and service. The realization of God and the dedication of His purpose come primarily through worship.

"Worship involves knowledge of the character of God, response to the love of God, and willingness to co-operate with the plans of God. It includes meditation, prayer, music, reading of the Scriptures, observance of the sacraments, and participation in the devotional services of the Church. And yet it is not dependent upon any external observance, outward symbol, or hallowed spot. It is an intimate, personal relation between the individual and God, and is conditional on the human side upon the character and attitude of the worshiper."

Yet worship may be something more than a personal relationship with God. Group worship is valuable because "each one is more when with others than when alone. Social forces are at work. A group is, as a group, seeking larger and richer life. Here, in such processes, is the clew to the ordering of the services of worship. It must be thought out in terms of effect, stimulus, and growth in the lives of the worshipers . . . Worship is an educational process—because it has to do with a social group seeking growth—and its conduct is an educational problem."

The aims of worship have been stated:

To bring the worshiper into conscious fellowship with God, to make him real and present and approachable.

To develop and express social attitudes and aspirations to the end that the individual's will may be conformed to the will of God.

To lead the individual into such a consciousness of his relations with God as will center his ideals and aspirations in the desire to follow the Christ-way of life and invoke a full and free dedication of the entire being to God, which involves making habitual one's Christian purposes in worthy daily purposeful conduct.

To stimulate the Christian growth of the individual by consciously sharing with others (in group worship) the purposes of God.

The value of worship to character is largely conditioned by the concept of God. The incomplete realization of God, an inadequate conception of God, leaves the worshiper with a dedication to something less than the highest. As religious education, to be complete, must be missionary, so worship, to be adequate, must recognize God as the Father of all mankind, must see His purpose as that of abundant life for all His children, and a dedication to His purpose must be a dedication to the cause of His kingdom every where.

Putting the missionary spirit into worship is in no sense the dragging in of a missionary illustration, tagging on a missionary application, or the singing of a missionary hymn. It is only bringing into worship that which will bring the worshipers to an adequate conception of God, His purpose for the world, and the attitudes and obligations which bring us into harmony with that purpose.

These ends may be accomplished through the use of hymns, prayers, and Bible readings which give an adequate conception of God. There is no lack of material. While distinctly missionary hymns are scarce—at least those whose theology is not out of date—there are many which are based on the universal Fatherhood of God that are not thought of as missionary hymns, yet are missionary in spirit. It is equally true of Scripture lessons. We do not need to limit ourselves to the Book of Acts for material. When the leader once gets away from the idea that to be missionary, material must make specific reference to the carrying of the gospel to other parts of the world, a wealth of worship material will be found at hand.

Instead of setting aside one Sunday each month for a missionary worship program, it will be found much more effective if the missionary theme is fitted into a regular series or a whole series of related missionary themes used. When the young people are accustomed to a theme for each month they accept the missionary theme as much as a matter of course as they would the theme of "loyalty" or "gratitude." This helps to make the attitude of friendship and helpful sharing with the rest of the world seem as normal a part of one's Christian life as is the attitude of faith or loyalty.—From "Training for World Service," by Brown.

A CALL TO OUR SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

One thing is apparent to every one acquainted with missions and the spirit of missions in the Church, and that is that we are not going to be missionary in spirit, activity and giving until our children and young people have learned the missionary motive and are taught to be missionary in their spirit and activity. The reason why we Christians give so little to missions, build up our mission work so slowly at home, and send out and support so few missionaries abroad is because we have not taught our children missions in the Sunday School and in the Christian Endeavor Society. We older ones in the Christian Church were not taught missions and have not the missionary vision and spirit, and, as evidenced from the giving to missions during the present year, we will never become missionary. The hope of the Church for growth at home and abroad is in the Sunday School and the Young People's Societies. The once-a-month offering to missions in the Sunday School is doing something to help. However, many schools are just taking the offering without telling the motive back of the offering, of the work to be accomplished by it. And then one of the strangest things, and that which we cannot understand, is that there are yet some of our otherwise active schools, few in number but regrettable even then, who do not take the once-a-month offering, and so never give their children and young people the opportunity of making a contribution to missions. On the 31st of May we crossed the thirty-thousand-dollar mark in trying to raise $45,000 this year for missions. We would never have done this but for the work in our Sunday Schools, and we are not going to reach the $45,000 goal unless our Sunday Schools shall carry the missionary message and the missionary need to the youths and to all who gather from Sabbath to Sabbath to study and discuss and learn of the Word of God and the way of righteousness in the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor.

The records show that those Churches most easily and readily give a worthwhile missionary offering whose Sunday Schools take a liberal monthly offering for missions. Those Churches whose Sunday Schools do not take an offering have sent in very little, indeed, for missions, and it is not safe to say that any of them will reach their quota. The only hope, we repeat, of the Christian Church becoming missionary in spirit, in giving and in activity is in the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor. Here we must teach the missionary motive, that motive being nothing less than the love of our Lord that constrains us, for it is in His name and for His sake, and that only, that we give to missions and do for missions.

In all other enterprises and institutions we may think of and put the human element first; but in missions we put the divine element first, because it is our Lord's life and love and message that we are trying to make known to the world through missions. We do not give to missions out of love for our fellow-men, because our gifts to missions, as a rule, go to help that part of our fellow-men who do not know and so cannot love. But our Lord knows and loves them, and so we give for His sake and in His name, that His love and life may express themselves and reach and redeem those in sin for whom His infinite heart longs and yearns.

HELPING THE WETS.

The wet forces, in view of the commitments of the present administration, are making heroic attempts to discredit every effort at law enforcement. The argument so long offered against the eighteenth amendment that it was not being enforced and that it could not be enforced has suddenly changed to protests against overseverity in the administration of the law. They urge the tyranny of "pint and prison laws," and charge the error or severity of any law enforcement officer against the law itself. Moreover, by direct exaggeration or skillful interpretation, they attempt to create sympathy for violators and prejudice against officers.

The Washington Star makes report of a case in point. On one night an officer, Rinke by name, chased an automobile suspected of conveying liquor. He was fired upon by occupants of the car. He did not return the fire. Being hotly pursued, the car was abandoned in an alley and was found to contain liquor. The following night four different cars evaded six officers of the law by speed and the use of smoke-screens. None of the pursuing officers fired a shot, though they chased the cars until blinded by ammonia fumes used in the smoke screen for that purpose. Another officer faithful in doing his duty was subjected to the same smoke-screen treatment. In order to stop them he tried to shoot the rubber tires of the car of the fleeing criminals. Probably the bullet glanced after hitting the ground and killed the driver. A blast of criticism, promoted by the wets, arose against the officer. Newspapers spread it all over the country. He was immediately suspended without pay, placed under bond, and held to the grand jury. Where is there justice in this, and how can law ever be enforced if officers are to suffer from such public attitude for faithfulness in duty? An automobile of sufficient speed and a smoke-screen will guarantee immunity to criminals.

Led by a notoriously wet Chicago daily, the "atrocious" DeKing slaying at Aurora has been publicized to the limit to weaken prohibition enforcement. Paul Hutchinson has made a complete investigation of this case for the Christian Century, which is fully reported in the issue of May 15th. By it a much different light is thrown on the whole case. The facts are, it seems, that Joseph DeKing, who has an ample court record, had been implicated when a raid had been made at a gas station adjoining his home three months earlier. When an automobile load of liquor was found, he had tried to buy off the deputies. Based upon a known sale of liquor by DeKing, a search warrant was issued on his residence and placed in the hands of three deputies. One of the deputies found liquor in the cellar. DeKing came downstairs with a revolver in each hand, vowing that he would kill them if they attempted to remove the liquor from his premises, at the same time firing into the air to enforce his threat. Desiring to avoid violence, the deputies sent for a brother of DeKing's in an attempt to get him to submit to arrest peaceably. When this method failed, three additional deputies were secured to assist. Realizing how dangerous was the criminal with whom they were to deal, they went well armed. Upon arrival, three of the deputies went to a side door. As they were about to enter, DeKing grabbed two pistols and, leveling them at the deputies, threatened to kill the first one who entered. At this juncture, Smith, another deputy, entered behind DeKing from the front door of the house. Seeing his fellow-deputies in peril and not wishing to shoot DeKing, yet determined to make the arrest, he struck him over the head with his weapon. DeKing fell unconscious, dropping the two pistols. Mrs. DeKing rushed to the side of her prostrate husband and grabbed one of the revolvers. Smith, seeing her murderous intent, attempted to shoot her through the hand which held the weapon, because he could not reach her in time to wrest it from her. His aim was not perfect. She staggered outside and died before she could reach the hospital. Smith, surprised at the woman's unexpected appearance and murderous effort, and not knowing how many other desperate characters might be hidden in the adjoining rooms, was backing toward the door by which he had entered when his foot was caught by a rug and he fell. Immediately the twelve-year-old son of DeKing darted out from some hidden corner, seized one of the revolvers dropped by his father, and shot twice at Smith. One of the bullets shattered the deputy's knee; the other cartridge failed to explode.

The grand jury of the county was asked to indict Smith, but after hearing all of the testimony which wet sympathizers could assemble against him, refused to do so. The Kane County ministers adopted resolutions concerning the misinterpreted incident, an extract from which reads:

"In view of the fact that DeKing had a court record as a bootlegger and has served time; that he resisted the efforts of the officers of the law to serve the search warrant, and threatened the lives of the officers, discharging a gun as a warning, and that Roy Smith, the officer who is said to have shot Mrs. DeKing, acted because he believed his life was threatened; and that newspapers have willfully distorted the facts."

Wet papers all over the country voiced a cry against shooting "defenseless women," "cold-blooded murder" in law enforcement, et cetera. Most editors made editorials out of the incident, distorting the whole thing into influence against prohibition. Some dry folks swallowed the wet story and voiced criticisms—the very thing aimed at in the propaganda.

The unending effort of wet newspapers to create sentiment against law enforcement officers is constantly apparent. The purpose of this is to break down prohibition in any and every way possible. It is regrettable that by this method they are duping some good people into becoming assistants to bootleggers. Let every churchman who joins in these criticisms against law and law enforcement catalog himself truthfully as an assistant bootlegger. "Wisdom is justified of her children."—Herald of Gospel Liberty.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

Lesson XIII—June 30, 1929.

THE CHRISTIAN AND HIS BIBLE.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Thy word have I hid in my heart, that I might not sin against Thee."—Psa. 119:11.

LESSON: John 5:36-47.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psa. 119:33-40.

There is a strange inconsistency and paradox in the matter of a Christian and his Bible. Suggest to the average Christian that the Bible is not an inspired Book, not the Word of God, not all that it is reputed to be, and you will "strike fire" at once. The average Christian will not allow any aspersions against the Bible. He resents even the slightest suggestion that questions its authenticity or its authority. He rushes zealously to its defense when it is attacked. He feels that it is a "life and death" matter when its integrity is challenged. If you want to "strike fire" in the average Christian, attack the Bible.

Or again, if you talk with the average Christian about the superlative qualities of the Bible, about its incomparable style and its beautiful literary form, about its idealism and its lofty tone, about its moral precepts and its spiritual principles, about its revelation of the character and purpose of God, he will readily assent to all that you say, and he will glow with joy and with pride over the excellency and the grandeur of the Book. There is no denying the fact that the average Christian thinks very highly of the Word of God.

But if you ask this same average Christian who is so zealous to defend the Bible and so quick to appreciate the value of the Bible, if he reads the Bible regularly and frequently, he will, if he is honest, say "No." It is more than probable that at least 75 per cent of the average Christians in the average Church do not read the Bible in any regular or definite way. And many of those who read the Bible do not read it in any vital way. It is a paradox of life, and a sad commentary on Christians, but it is a fact nevertheless. Christians do not read the Bible. We would probably be appalled if we knew just how few Christians read their Bibles in any regular and definite and frequent and intelligent way. This is not written in any pessimistic or in any critical sense; it is simply a statement of the facts as the writer sees them.

Another interesting sidelight on the matter of a Christian and his Bible is the excuse that is so often given in accounting for the failure to read the Bible. People say they do not read the Bible because they do not have time. Think of it! Here is a Book that, above all other books, is indispensable to the Christian life. Here is a Book that tells a man all that he needs to know about God, and all that he needs to know about God's dealings with men. Here is a Book that contains, in dignified and beautiful form, the spiritual truths by which men live. Here is a Book that supplies truth for the mind, and life for the spirit. And yet it is so often neglected, and all because other things are allowed to crowd it out of one's life. These things ought not so to be. Bible reading is a duty, but it is more than a duty; it is a means to a richer, fuller life.

In the light of these facts, the writer submits herewith a few suggestions which, if adopted, will bear a rich fruitage in the life of the one who adopts them.

1. Form an indissoluble resolution to read the Bible, frequently and regularly.
2. Have a definite time, if possible, for Bible reading.
3. Have a definite place, if possible a secluded place, for Bible reading.
4. Do not read under pressure; that is, do not feel that you must read so much in such-and-such a time.
5. Read the Bible by books, or by large sections, or as a whole from time to time. It helps from time to time to read an entire book at one sitting, but this is, of course, impossible as a matter of daily reading.
6. Read the Bible itself, rather than books about the Bible; that is, when reading the Bible in a devotional sense.
7. Read the Bible with an open mind.
8. Read the Bible with a prayerful and obedient spirit.
9. Read a while and then meditate a while over what you have read.
10. Read the Bible, primarily not simply to gain a knowledge of the Bible, but to the end that you might be a better man or woman.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Sunday, June 30, 1929.

TOPICS "Heroes for Christ."—Isa. 6:1-8; Matt. 11:7-12; John 18:1-9.

Some Bible Hints.

Christ's heroes have always been men of vision. Only as we see God can we be brave and strong (Isa. 6:1-8).

It takes a great man to stand aside and let Christ have the first place. John the Baptist did that—not an easy thing after his popularity. It is hard even for us to put Christ first (Matt. 11:7-12).

Heroism shows in different ways. It calls for martyrs, but it also calls for humble service. We need heroes of service today (Matt. 11:7-12).

Christ Himself was the supreme hero. His spirit never quailed before any trial. He faced both life and death calmly, trusting God. What an example! (John 18:1-9.)

Suggestive Thoughts.

It is great to be a hero of the air, to open new paths, like Lindbergh, but it is even greater to be a hero of the spirit, to open up new life to man. There is room for all of this field.

There are girls giving their lives heroically for parents, brothers, husbands, who do not deserve their devotion. The day of sacrifice is not past.

The youth who fights the demon of selfishness or passion or avarice in his own soul and conquers is a real hero. The greatest struggles are the internal and unseen.

The hero is the man who has one supreme purpose and bends every energy towards realizing it. The world may never hear of him, but heaven knows and praises him.

A Few Illustrations.

The mission field offers countless examples of heroism, not only heroic dying, but the giving of life-long service under conditions of self-denial we cannot understand. Livingstone, for example.

Barnardo, who picked thousands of waifs and orphans from the slums and gave them an education, was surely a hero, for a hero is a man who does great deeds.

One of Canada's great orators had to overcome a defect of speech in the beginning. People laughed at him, but he would not be discouraged. He won, and used his power for Christ.

Paul will stand forth as the Church's greatest hero. He did more with smaller means at hand than any one else ever did. Read in 2 Cor. 11 the story of his heroism.

To Think About.

Who are the heroes of today?
What makes a person a hero?
What big tasks would Jesus have us do?

CHRISTIAN CHURCH IN ACTION.

The Pre-Convention Committees.

Their work is very important. The time is very short. The reports must needs be in the hands of the Convention Secretary, to be printed and mailed at one time to all delegates, so that they may have time to study them before the Convention opens. Each committee is to select its secretary, who shall read the report. The reader should be one who reads well, so that all may hear. A good report is poor if it cannot be heard distinctly. The chairman of the committee will speak on the report, not to exceed twenty minutes. Then it will be discussed from the floor and voted upon. Excuses for late reports will not need to be offered. These reports should cover their field and be thorough. They will, in the main, be the pronouncement of the Christian Church to the world on the subjects treated. Each committee has an opportunity to render a real service.

Making Your Canvass in June.

If you are seeking your every-member enlistment this month, you can ill afford to do it half-heartedly and with little or no preparation. It is one of the greatest spiritual events in a Church's program. It may be as valuable as a revival meeting. Indeed, a rightly conducted every-member canvass will be a revival in itself. Every makeshift for the every-member canvass is but a makeshift. Prepare for it thoroughly. Train for it. Do not neglect it. This great agency embodies the basic principles of enlistment. Have you read Agar's book, "Enlisting Laymen"? It is worth while and very suggestive.

The Convention Program.

The program committee will meet on June 20th to complete the Convention program. This will, in all probability, be a noteworthy Convention. Each Conference should see to it that its delegation is complete and that its delegates are thoroughly representative. Most important questions will come before the Convention, and the delegates should be persons whose faith, wisdom, information, sacrifices make them capable of considering the important matters in the highest interests of the kingdom. It is no time for personal or selfish interests. All delegates should plan to stay the full eight days, for each day will be crowned with important items.

At the Congregationalist Meeting.

Exactly our full delegation of twenty-five was present. Probably none was there all the time. Our representatives came from twelve States. Many courtesies were extended to our brethren. They were made associate members of the council. The moderator and his co-workers gave a banquet in our delegation's honor. Their Convention seemed very similar to our own in many respects. They have the same problems, and are seeking as earnestly as we are to help build the kingdom of God. It was a great Convention, and they are a great people.

All Officials.

The General Board has asked all its members, all Conference officials, all members of official boards in the local Churches to read at least a few of the latest stewardship books carefully before October. Have you read any? How many and which ones this year of 1929? Your Stewardship Secretary would urge you to read "Jesus' Teaching on the Use of Money," by Brown; C. P. A., cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.

Our Jubilee Year.

Do you want it to mean something really worth while to your own life? Do you really want your life deepened and enriched? Do you actually wish the kingdom to be extended? One of the very best ways is to make a sacrificial subscription to the work. Such a subscription came today, with one-half of the amount inclosed, the balance to be paid in six months. It is used and divided according to the Convention budget percentages. If a thousand of our people would send in sacrificial subscriptions, every phase of our work could be extended and every life would be deepened and enriched. Christ's last year was one of sacrifice. All we are is due to His sacrificial giving for us. Write this office about a gift such as you feel would be one of sacrifice for you.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE,
One of Our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MONDAY.

WHERE WRONGS OF IMPATIENCE FALL.

"Pray for them that despitefully use you."—Matt. 5:44.

"Bless them that persecute you. Bless, and curse not."—Rom. 12:14.

We are naturally shut in with our dear ones more than all others. This close contact furnishes opportunities for the trial of patience not found in outside relationships. The trials of a wife and mother are ordinarily ten to one to all outside trials in her own home. Who has ever been able to compute the real cost of raising even one human child? God alone can fully apprehend it, and He has provided wonderful stores of grace for mothers. Much is said and written of the impatience of mothers, but God sees they are the most patient class of children He has, taking in their exposures as compared with others. But this does not change the truth that the evils of our impatience largely strike those who are dearest to us. Much of this is true in its application to husband and wife. There are husbands who frown more frequently on their wives in a single week than on all the other ladies of the whole country in a year! Hence, there may be wives who say more hateful things to their husbands than to all the other men in the community!

Please keep in mind that the evil harvests to be reaped from your impatient sowing are largely to be gathered by your best friends.

Prayer.—Dear Lord, we confess that we are miserably poor in righteousness and holiness, but we believe that we may be rich in Jesus. O come into our souls and fill us with Thy Spirit. Thou dost understand our frailties; oh, help Thou our faults. We come to Thee in Thy word; O put Thy garments of righteousness on us. Amen.

TUESDAY.

MR. AND MRS. LOT.

"He pitched his tent toward Sodom."—Gen. 13:12.

This happened when Abram and Lot had a falling out and separated. Lot was a good man in many respects. He and his friends often talked of God and often pledged their faith to God. But Lot craved wealth and honor and society. He got it. He got riches, distinction, political standing. His family got in society and cut a swell. His daughters fell in love with two young Sodomites and expected great things. But Mr. and Mrs. Lot had done one thing that spelled ruin—they had separated from God. The fire-side no longer had time for prayer and meditation. Social demands kept them away from Church. Their company were not the Abram kind. Spiritual influences were entirely lacking. On the day he separated from Abram he spelled his doom, not that his choices were bad, but that he sacrificed the higher for the lower and grew from bad to worse until he and his family were ruined.

Loss of good companions, loss of spiritual influences, loss of enduring friendships, loss of the presence of God in his doings—he finally lost all.

Prayer.—O Father, forbid that we shall stray from Thee, but every day to partake of the body and blood of Jesus, that He may abide in us. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE UNPARDONABLE SIN.

"Blasphemy against the Holy Spirit shall not be forgiven."—Matt. 12:31.

"Whosoever shall blaspheme against the Holy Spirit hath never forgiveness."—Mark 3:29.

Interpreters say that blasphemy is to speak evil of God (Rom. 2:24; Titus 2:5); to rise against and deny the work of the Holy Spirit out of malice.

The text is occasioned by the charge that He had an evil spirit—that is, the power that made Him do good was the devil. They felt His power; they knew His works were good, and rather than acknowledge this, they chose to say, "This is the devil," involving a complete upset of all moral values. This is well-nigh unpardonable.

But let us look deeper. "Hath not forgiveness" is said to mean "hath not forgiveness unto the age," or "in this present world," according to Mark. Matthew adds, "Nor in that to come."

But our Saviour prefaced this by a blanket proclamation. "All sins shall be forgiven the sons of men." "The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin." There is no short cut in the bestowal of divine mercy. Not one sin shall be put down as unforgivable. The vilest thief of thieves on the cross may be pardoned. The exception seems to lie in the sin that is beyond the pale of redemption, unpardonable because unreachable. We would say that when a sinner cannot repent, he has gotten beyond the reach and the grace of God and is spiritually dead, and therefore he cannot be forgiven. We can lie upon a bed until we cannot get up. One's heart can be hardened against God until the capacity to feel is lost.

God has warned all against this in the following words:

"Grieve not the Holy Spirit."

"Resist not the Holy Spirit."

"Quench not the Holy Spirit."

We might say, then, that the unpardonable sin is a conscious stubborn unwillingness to believe in God and to fulfill the conditions of pardon. How can one be pardoned in such a state? It is not that God is unwilling, but that the individual petrifies in his unwillingness and is unreachable.

It is pathetic to see a gallant ship wrecked. It is an awful moment when one is so far gone that he can't stop; when he would do his will and his habits mock him.

Prayer.—Dear Father, be Thou near us and speak to our souls every hour the sweet pleadings of Thy love and keep the fires of Thy spirit ever burning in our lives. Amen.

THURSDAY.

NEGLECT AND ESCAPE.

"How shall we escape if we neglect . . . ?"—Heb. 2:2.

This is really a startling question. If a man is on deck of a sinking steamer and neglects the last lifeboat? If a man is in a burning building and neglects the last escape? If a man is drifting in Niagara and neglects the lifeline thrown to him? If a man is dying and neglects the remedy to restore to life?

One doesn't have to be a bad man to be lost. Only neglect—and the consequence is the same. One doesn't have to refuse God—inly neglect, and the consequence is the same. The fact is, we may conjecture that, of all those who have filled Christless graves, the most of them are Christless not because they were bad but because they just drifted along in neglect. Therefore, neglect is damning more people than anything else.

Then, we wonder, how will we escape the torments of our own conscience for our sins—or for our sinful neglect! It is bound to come. The whole matter resolves itself into this: If we go on neglecting, it sums itself up in deliberate rejection. If we despise not the Lord, neglect results in the same. One day we will reap; there is no escape.

Prayer.—Dear Father, by Thy grace we believe, we are healed and we may grow. Give us that grace, that we may have personal Christian power and that we may see the perils of life to avoid them always. Amen.

FRIDAY.

CONSECRATED WEAKNESS.

"Bring them to me."—Matt. 14:18.

This multitude consisted of men and women and children who had been up since early morning and had had nothing to eat, and the long fast had left them faint. Excitement had strained their nerves. Wonder had succeeded wonder, and every recurring moment had brought fresh droughts upon physical reserves.

There were among them those who had been healed, and they were rejoicing to the boisterous overflow. There were some so happy that they scarcely knew whether they were in the flesh or no.

The disciples saw the multitude, knew that they were unable to feed them and provide for their comfort, so they prayed the Lord to send the folks away, that they might have their bite. But Jesus, who always was alert to teach the glory of God, now showed that "man's extremity is God's opportunity." The multitude was called together, prayers were said. The power of God was called down and the five loaves and the two fishes were a plenty for all.

What did the disciples lack on this occasion? Not sympathy—they saw and realized the needs of the people. Not a sense of their own poverty—they knew their lunch was only enough for themselves. The lack was: they did not reckon with the Lord. It is all right to realize our weakness, but it is better to turn to the Lord with it and connect up with Him. After all, weakness, frailty, faults and terrible lackings are about all we have for the Lord, anyway.

He would not have us lie down in helpless complacency. What we need is more consecrated weakness. Whatever our weakness be, He says, "bring them to me." However poor we be, He says, "bring it to me." If we can do that, He will turn into adequate supply both us and the multitude.

Prayer.—Our Father, our days are weakness and nothing. This day we offer to Thee and all. Open our eyes to the bounties of God for us. Dedicate our lives to that bounty and give us grace forever. Amen.

SATURDAY.

MODERN PROPHETS.

"Would that all of the Lord's people were prophets."—Num. 11:29.

Prophets of old were those specially selected, consecrated, and endowed as specially fit to go before God for a message and then to go before the people with that message. So much did true religion become an individual experience that it came to mean, and does today, God's way with a soul; and the call of religion is that every one may so know God that he can go to God and that

Dear Friends:

The Christian Orphanage wants to have a "Home-Coming Day" some time in the month of August. We want every child that has gone out from the Orphanage to come back home on that day, which will be announced a little later. We will have a picnic dinner, with ice cream, lemonade and watermelons to make the occasion one of joy and pleasure.

We want to ask any boy or girl who has had a home in the Christian Orphanage to write us a letter, giving us their correct address, so we can keep you informed as to the date, plans, etc. We are anxious to make this a happy occasion, and every one who has had a home in the Christian Orphanage is cordially invited to come back home for the occasion. "Children," please let us have a letter from you and give us the name and address of any in your community, so we can get in touch with them, too.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Alabama Conference met with Christian Church at Wadley, Ala., June 9th, at 10 A. M. The Conference was called to order and the following officers were elected: President, Rev. G. Staley Hunt; vice-president, Rev. C. Carl Dollar; secretary and treasurer, Addie Belle Sledge. The welcome address was given by J. J. Carter, followed by response by Rev. G. Staley Hunt.

The program consisted mostly of discussions of the young people in the different phases of life and their relations to the Church. An address, "How Can We Make Our Sunday Schools More Interesting to Our Young People?" was rendered by Klein Hood. An essay, "Christian Endeavor as a Means of Expression," was read by Addie Belle Sledge. "The Importance of Christian Leadership" was discussed by W. C. Edge. The three main points brought out in this talk were the home, the Church, and the school, showing the necessity of Christian leadership in each, with special emphasis on the school. Rev. G. Staley Hunt delivered a very impressive discourse, his text being taken from Heb. 11:10, "For he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." We then adjourned for lunch.

A bountiful dinner was served by the ladies of that community, and I think I can speak in behalf of all present that it was certainly enjoyed. After this gracious hospitality, every one was then ready for the afternoon session.

"Missions" was the main subject under discussion, the first address being "Our Young People and Missions from the Standpoint of the Sunday School," by Rev. C. Carl Dollar. W. H. Stevens discussed "Our Young People and Missions from the Standpoint of Christian Endeavor." Others commented on all the subjects.

The next item of importance was the roundtable discussion, led by Prof. W. C. Edge, president of the Summer School of Christian Education, which proved to be most helpful and inspiring. Not only was the summer school discussed, but also the college. Some of the alumni of Piedmont Junior expressed their personal opinions of the college, which were indeed worth while.

The following Churches sending representatives and contributions from Sunday School were Antioch, $1.07; Beulah, $1; Mt. Zion, $1.25; New Hope, $1.35, and Wadley, $2.75. Roanoke sent $1.50 from Sunday School; also $1.50 from Christian Endeavor. Pisgah sent only a report. Two other Churches sent representatives—Cragford and Spring Hill. The total amount of dues collected was $10.42, while $2.44 was paid for programs and postage, with $6.09 brought forward from last year, making a total of $14.07 in treasury at date. A few others promised contributions, but no amount has yet been received.

The place for the meeting of the Convention for next year is to be decided on later. Adjourned.

PLACE OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

tiular amount is absolute, and that, so far as the conception is intellectually conceivable, time and space are each curved; that is to say, without beginning or end, hence infinite. Does not this remind us of the shadowy conception we have of the idea of eternity? At any rate, we glimpse a new significance in the sacred language: "That which hath been is that which shall be; and that which hath been done is that which shall be done; and there is no new thing under the sun."

I submit, therefore, that you and I who have in days now gone been nurtured upon the idealism and spirituality in education that distinguishes Elon from the colleges and universities of mechanism, behaviorism, and atheism can stand squarely and fearlessly on two propositions: first, that an educated spiritual man or woman is not a peculiar specimen of a unique species different from other college men and women, but only a man or woman who, while acquiring as much as may be of the intellectual, scientific food that is served at the banquet board, is still attended by the vision splendid that was born in trailing clouds of glory; and, secondly, that this spiritual side of life, the last and best for which the first was made, is spiritually discerned, and is to be understood and lived, not by any legalistic formulas or rituals that are found in textbooks, but by the principles revealed in the Book of Life and in the lives of men and women who have learned that it is the unseen things that shape and determine our destiny, and most perfectly of all in the life of Him who came that we might have life most abundantly.

Nor, I think, need we despair, nor even feel out of date, or, rather, out of fashion, at the tumultuous clamor to the contrary of those about us who believe, or at any rate appear to believe, that the here and the now furnish the summit of heart's desire. Much learning has, in the opinion of some of us, made some of them mad. Your and my desire is not for the knowledge that proudly knows so much, but for something of the wisdom that humbly realizes that it knows so little. Under various titles and in varying language, we are recently instructed why we behave like human beings; and yet the authors make no attempt to explain such a simple, ordinary, universal thing as sleep, but admit with, for the once, refreshing frankness, that they do not know. The great physician and surgeon Mayo, at his post of mercy on the plains of Minnesota, tells his professional brethren that in all his marvelous ministrations to suffering humanity he has found no place in the human body where an immortal soul might dwell. Neither, he might have said, has he been able to find there, or elsewhere, the abiding place of faith, hope, charity, love, sympathy or pity, or any of the sensibilities of the spirit that make us men and women instead of brutes and beasts.

And here comes one, Dr. Barnes by name, from Smith College as his habitation, who solemnly and apparently seriously—at least, with the evident expectation or hope of being taken seriously— informs an anxious, expectant world that the new "cosmic perspective" (whatever that may mean) requires a new and a scientific conception of God. But he is no apostle of a new thought. His agnostic ancestors are legion, and there lie asleep in the silent dust of utter forgetfulness a great and unremembered atheistic host who have expressed the same thought in much more felicitous language. The new paganism is no different from the old; the sort of men who today worship the laws of chemistry and biology, protoplasmic cells and cosmic ether, are the same sort of men who in the gray, trembling dawn of history bowed down to the sun and moon, or fell flat on their fear-stricken faces before images graven with their own weak hands. The worship of Aphrodite is no new thing; the temples of today dedicated to Venus, and books and pictures produced by her high priests and devotees who are our contemporaries, each had their prototypes thousands of years ago. The suggestive music of the sensuous jazz of this day, with its syncopated variations built upon themes born in the untamed breasts of semi-barbarous, half-naked savages on the coasts of New Guinea and Senegambia, are but echoes sounding in the twentieth century from the wailing pipes of the great god Pan as he played himself and his hearers into frenzy at the bacchannalian feasts six thousand years ago.

Is there in all this anything of what the literal-minded man of the street, who prides himself first of all upon being practical, would call practicality? I remind you that the man who until the 4th of last March was the President of these United States stood one day by the Unknown Soldier's Tomb and reminded all his countrymen that what this great land of ours needs is not more material progress, but more spiritual progress; and then I call two witnesses and leave the verdict to you—the one the warden of Sing Sing Prison, and the other the district attorney of the United States for the Southern District of New York. Warden Lawes deduces from his observation and study of thousands of criminals of all classes that there is no necessary correspondence between education, so-called, and righteousness; that skillful training along literary, or scientific, or professional lines by no means inevitably equips a man or woman for the duties or the privileges of good citizenship; and that as between an illiterate knave and an educated rascal, the hope for reformation is vastly in favor of the former. And the warden's submission to the American people is that along with knowledge of the things that are seen there must go at least some acquaintance with the things that are unseen.

District Attorney Tuttle pleads for the development of a public attitude of mind toward the rules regulating civil conduct that we call law that shall be akin to religious reverence; he asks for a spiritual change in the thoughts and in the habits of thought of this generation; quoting freely from the first and greatest law book of all, he urges a return to its elementary concepts of right and wrong, and assigns five causes as responsible for the defiant disrespect, not only for law, but for all authority, that is prevalent among us now: unruly emotions, self-gratification, evil environment, evil companionship, and, most responsible of all, moral illiteracy. Check these over in your mind and observe that each and all of them stand in a darkness into which penetrates no ray from the dim rush-lights of behavioristic psychology and mechanistic philosophy. Something more is needed, something more ideal if you please, for every action is originally and fundamentally based upon an ideal we have been taught. It is still true that as a man thinketh—not in his mind, but in his heart—so is he. And it must likewise still be true that where there is no vision of the spiritual things of life the people perish, individually as well as collectively, and in all the fine, high, noble, eternal things of our every-day earthly living, as well as in the eternal welfare of the spirit.

To my mind, it is a wise and gracious Providence that has called us from the East and the West and the North and the South, and caused us to sit down here together tonight once again at Elon. As we go back over the paths that brought us here from our homes, my hope for each of us is that we may carry the thought that the sage of Concord has taught us that a farmer is not a different type of man from us, but a gentleman and

The GEM TESTAMENT has been steadily growing in popular favor ever since its first appearance.

In size, 3 3/4 x 4 1/2 inches, it is not much larger than the Vest Pocket. It is also the only Testament of its size with large bold type and pronouncing text.

The edition on India paper is ideal, and we know of no better gift at the price than one in the fine bindings.

The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.

The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller.

It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual strength.

One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.

The size, 2 1/2 x 4 1/4 inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

kind, God has placed his fort for glory, and we all must defend it. Sin in mankind is destructive. Folks, we've got to redeem it. God has called us His light, His salt, His witnesses, His preachers, His messengers, His life, His children. Salt never did any good yet, so long as it is stored in warehouses. Light is useless under a bushel. A dumb witness is a poor sort. We've got to wake up. If we can't throw our weight in in His force, we are a hindrance to the cause. Cowper said:

“Some folks owe all their weight, Like loaded dice, to lead; His wits invite you by His looks to come, But when you knock it never is at home.”

So many who are called to be witnesses for

God. One balky horse can block the traffic. Our relation is not “where we stand,” but “how are we moving.” Inertia in the presence of spiritual realities is sure sign of decay. Grass does not care where the water comes from, so it gets it. What are we doing about it? Remember what Christ said about the unprofitable servant.

Prayer.—O Father, we thank Thee that Thou hast taken us into Thy Church. We pray to be with Jesus all the way and to be known of Him as His true, faithful and shining children. Amen.

OBITUARIES.

ANDREWS.

On Saturday P. M., May 25th, the body of little Marie Andrews was laid to rest in Hanks Chapel Cemetery. She was the sweet little daughter of Bro. and Sister Benton Andrews, who, with another little sister and brother, survive her. Her stay on earth was short, being only five years, but God knew best and "He doeth all things well."

May the comfort and consolation of our Heavenly Father be abundantly given to the bereaved ones, and may they, through faith in Jesus Christ, meet their loved one amid the golden splendor of life's sunset, where death and separation are not known.

J. FULLER JOHNSON.

WILLIAMS.

On the fourth day of May, Sister Mammie Farrell Williams, wife of Bro. O. H. Williams, of Bynum, N. C., was called from the cares of this life to the eternal joy of the life beyond.

Sister Williams was the daughter of Bro. I. W. Farrell, and was married to O. H. Williams on April 4, 1903. To this union were born two children, Ruth and Karr, who, with the husband, survive her. She was a Christian of the highest type, having become a member of Hanks Chapel when she was a little girl, and remained even unto the moment of death a loyal, unselfish Christian. Although fully aware of the nearness of death, she was calm and happy, which expressed that deep peace of her soul that can only be had through an abiding faith in Jesus Christ. She was a loyal Christian, a devoted mother, and a true and loving wife. The funeral services were conducted from the Church by the writer, assisted by Rev. Mr. Gordon, of the Baptist Church, and her body was laid to rest beneath a bank of flowers in the cemetery of the Church she loved so well and where she had worshipped from her childhood.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

By Rev. Stanley C. Harrell.

CONCERNING FUNDAMENTALISTS.—

In a quotation from a sermon by Dr. W. Russell Bowie, pastor of Grace Episcopal Church, New York, we recently discovered what appears to be not only an appropriate criticism of fundamentalists, but of most of those who claim to be modernists. Dr. Bowie's criticism of the fundamentalists was, "not that they are fundamentalists, but that they are not fundamental enough. They have built on the dust and driftings of those unworthy dogmas beneath which men have buried the truth, and have not gone down to the foundation of the living rock—the real Christ as he was known to the disciples when they first rallied round Jesus and found in him the Lord of life."

If there is any occasion for the average Christian to fear for the future of any particular doctrines or tenets of faith which may be held dear, it can be found only in the fact that they are not sufficiently founded upon Christ. How much Christ is there in our preaching, is the final test of the worth of our sermons. There can be no real occasion for fear to the individual who is founded upon the truth as it is in Christ Jesus. It would seem that there have been times, and this may be such, when teachers are so busy refuting false teaching that there is not left sufficient time to adequately impart the teachings of the Christ. The truth is the best refutation the world has ever discovered for a falsehood.

THE PASSING OF GENERAL BOOTH.—

General Bramwell Booth died at his home in Hadley Wood, England, on June 16th. He was in his 74th year of age. For 54 years he had served the world and his God as a member of the Salvation Army. For sixteen of these years he had occupied the position of commander-in-chief of the army. He held this position until early in this present year, when he was removed from office by the vote of the high council, which adjudged him unfit to continue in office on account of his physical condition. General Booth had opposed the action to remove him and had instituted proceedings through the courts to maintain control of army affairs.

It is to be regretted that the last days of the life of so notable a religious leader should have been beclouded by such a controversy. The issue might not have been precipitated but for the fact that General Booth contended that the control of the army should remain in the hands of some member of the Booth family. Those who did not agree with his contention for Booth family control and those who most regretted the resort to legal authority to maintain his position will doubtless be among the first to proclaim their admiration for the life and the service which General Booth rendered for so many years. His was a life of consecration and service. Even though his judgment may have been at fault, it was his love which led him astray. His long and notable services and the accomplishments which he had wrought were not impaired by later developments. The workers pass; but the work goes on.

DEPARTMENTALIZED LIVING.—

There are few more deplorable tendencies in these modern times than that which would split up our living and thinking into departments; and separate society into groups and classes which tend to think of themselves as having corporate existence and individual interests. It is most difficult to tell just where and how this fissiparous movement began and it is certainly impossible to tell where it will end. It is unmistakably leading us into some dangerous situations. It has reached the point where in our eagerness to conserve the interests of special groups, we are losing sight of the common interests which effect the truly corporate entities.

This tendency has long manifested itself in the industrial world, where we have capital and labor organized against each other, and looking with suspicion upon any movement which may be inaugurated by what is regarded as enemy opposition. Within recent years there has been a split within the social ranks that has given us what is called a youth movement; in which we have those who think of themselves as the "young folks" thinking and talking as if they had a separate corporate existence from the rest of the social order. If we should accept what is being said at its face value, we should be forced to the conclusion that many of the young folks think of those who are removed from them by only a few brief years, as being organized against them to maintain opposing and even hostile interests. Recently an outstanding denomination met for its national representative gathering. The proceedings and deliberations were reported by one of the leading religious periodicals of the country, by one who was a member of this great representative gathering. One of the issues that was up for consideration and action was the union with another religious organization. This proposed union was given a unanimous vote of approval. But judging from the account of this particular report, the most notable impression received from this convention was the restlessness and impatience of the younger ministers with the stultified methods of the older heads who were directing affairs.

The world has always been made up of young folks and old folks. There have always been conservatives and liberals as far back as man has left any record of his thinking. Sometimes the conservatives have become reactionary; sometimes the liberals have become radicals. There have been times when the liberals have blazed the way to greater progress. There have been other times when the disregard of conservative opinions has led to almost wholesale destruction and loss. And generally the conservatives and the liberals have been seeking the same ultimate objective. But in the eagerness to justify their individual positions each has come to think of the other as trying to defeat the ultimate aim.

There is at the present time a most commendable movement toward union which is manifesting itself in denominational circles. But we need a union movement that will go much deeper than denominational boundaries and divisions. There must be found some way to stop this narrow, individualistic, and anti-social mode of thinking, teaching and living. It is disrupting family life: separating husband and wife; and antagonizing parents and children. Family life is never going to be secure again until every member of the family is led to see that there are family interests which transcend individual desires. It is pitiable when any member of the family is denied companionship and association with those of similar age and interests outside the family group; but when such associations crowd out the contact with the other members of the family to such an extent that the common ties and interests are no longer binding, then the situation becomes fraught with deadly peril.

The same dangerous tendency is manifesting itself in religious organizations and activities. There are to be found in many churches individuals who are recognizing and working for no other enterprise of the church except the Sunday School. When the Sunday School is over, the church has ceased to function until the next Sunday morning. The time has actually come when some people are thinking that the different enterprises of the church are inimical the one to the other. I heard not long ago of the woman who had her hair cut off because she feared its luxuriant growth was weakening the keenness of her vision. But surely the day has passed when Christians would cut off one arm of the church lest the strength of the other should be impaired.

The perennial appeal of the teachings of the Christ lies in the fact that he could see life in its entirety. He steadily refused to let any appeal or interest turn him away from the main current of life's interests. The day has come when the Christian must read the Gospels to the end that one may lay hold of the message they contain as to the essential unity of life. And the Christian having learned, let him teach men so.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Rev. L. E. Smith, D. D., pastor Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., was a visitor to the city the first of this week. We were pleased to have him call and converse with us for a while. He is a busy workman.

Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Harper are located for the summer at 5817 Blockstone Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Dr. Harper is taking special work in college administration in the summer course of Chicago University, and Mrs. Harper is studying voice with Carleton Hackett, a noted teacher.

Next in order is the Eastern North Carolina Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention at Pleasant Union Church, near Lillington, N. C., July 16-17, Prof. L. L. Vaughan, Raleigh, N. C., president. We presume program announcement will be made in THE SUN next week, and that all schools and Endeavor Societies in the Conference are electing their delegates and planning to be represented.

La Grange Church is active in good works under the leadership of Rev. C. W. Hanson. The Christian and Congregational Churches have united their forces. The interest and congregations are large in both groups. Miss Lorena Primm, a summer student, will assist Mr. Hanson this summer in directing the young people and children of the parish. From La Grange, Miss Primm will go to assist Rev. A. C. Nelson, of Clanton, Ala. Her time will be divided between both Churches.—Congregationalist.

Rev. R. A. Whitten, Elon College, N. C., who for the past year has represented the college in field work, finishes his engagement with the college on July 1st and will do evangelistic work during the summer. Several Churches have already engaged his services, but there are some open dates, and he will be glad to correspond with any pastor desiring assistance of a pastoral evangelist. Bro. Whitten will be available for a field of labor as pastor beginning with the coming Conference year.

The following has been gratefully received and will be of interest to many SUN readers: "Mrs. Walter Phalti Lawrence, Elon College, N. C., announces the marriage of her daughter, Mary Graham, to Mr. Thomas Harold Mackintosh, on Tuesday, June 18, 1929, New York City." Our best wishes to Mrs. Mackintosh, who, as Mary Graham Lawrence, was valedictorian of her class at Elon College, and after a brilliant career in the New England Conservatory, from which she graduated with distinction, she has been a successful teacher of music at Sanford, N. C. Our heartiest congratulations to Mr. Mackintosh, who resides in New York.

Rev. G. D. Underhill, who, immediately after graduating from Elon College at the recent commencement, went with his mother to Albany, N. Y., where he was to receive ordination for the Christian ministry. It is learned with deep regret that his mother was struck by an automobile and seriously injured, on which account his ordination had to be postponed. We are unable to advise as to the condition of the injured one, but at last reports it was quite serious. Brother Underhill was to return after his ordination to take charge of religious education work in the St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of Goldsboro, N. C. Surely, man proposes, but God disposes, and we know neither the day nor the hour when incident or accident will lay our plans low or hold us in abeyance till God wills.

In a recent personal letter to the editor, Rev. E. W. Butler, treasurer of the Alabama Congregational Conference and Thorsby Institute, these words are found: "I rejoice in the prospect that the Christian and the Congregational Churches are to become one. God speed the day! and may we speed it! We Alabama Congregationalists need it sorely." THE SUN's editor was in the Alabama Christian Conference two years ago when the matter of union was discussed by that Conference, and there was unanimous and most hearty approval by our Alabama Christians. Both in our Alabama and Georgia and Alabama Conferences we found the desire for union quite eager and, so far as we heard and learned, unanimous.

One of our good, faithful women, a widow, always seeking to do something for missions and the advancement of the kingdom of her Lord, in a personal letter, says: "It seems that so many members of the Christian Church are not interested in carrying out our Lord's last command. It seems to me that there is need of a great awakening. With the hope and prayer that the goal of $45,000 for missions may be reached this year, yours in service." We are only playing at the matter of missions, since we have not yet arrived at even a $1.50 per member per year in our giving to missions. In some Churches the gift for missions runs as high as ten to twelve dollars per member per year. Like our sister says, while a few are interested, there is really a need of a great awakening, for there are those in the Christian Church who have not caught a vision, either of the opportunity of their Church or of the great commission of our Lord.

His great host of friends and loved ones in the Lord throughout the Church will learn with genuine sorrow of the critical illness of our beloved brother, Rev. P. T. Klapp, Elon College, N. C. A stroke of paralysis a few days since rendered him helpless, and at this writing he is speechless, though his mind seems to be clear and he recognizes friends who visit him. His good wife has been afflicted for some time and confined to her bed. Theirs is a home of affliction at present. We are sure the sympathy of our readers will go out for them and prayers will be offered for their recovery. Bro. Klapp, though advanced in years, has been so active and, up till within the past few weeks, so vigorous and full of energy that none of us regarded him as a man burdened with years. Though his body carries about fourscore years, he was young and vigorous in mind and spirit. His has certainly been a life of service and great zeal and consecration in the kingdom of his Lord, and now a faithful servant of God awaits, with resignation, the will of his Father.

We are not so sure that all our readers will give ready assent to what our fine young friend, C. J. Strickland, writes elsewhere in THE SUN this week under the caption, "It's a Sin to Rob, but What Will Women Do Next"? But it must be borne in mind that Bro. Strickland knows his point of view, since he is a successful young man of business, with headquarters at Charlotte, N. C., who travels from Connecticut to Texas, and some weeks ago, SUN readers may recall, sent $100 to THE CHRISTIAN SUN to be used in giving the paper a year to fifty people of the Church not able to pay for it, the number to be chosen by Bro. C. D. Johnston, manager, with two others. Bro. Strickland is a successful publisher, his articles being accepted in current business magazines. He is a product of one of our rural Churches, and, though of wide experience and of much travel and large business, clings to "the old home Church" and the faith of the fathers, and evidently has the genius of putting on paper plainly, if bluntly, just what he wants to say. His article will be read with interest and, we imagine, with profit, even by those who do not agree with his point of view.

The following is taken from the Reidsville paper: "The two weeks' revival service at First Christian Church, which resulted in a great ingathering of new members—seventy-three in all—giving their names for enrollment in the Church register. Rev. O. D. Poythress did the preaching, and his sermons were delivered in a practical way and they reached the hearts of his hearers, giving renewed zeal and energy not only to members of the Church, but caused those not members to make the start for a higher and better life. The Christian Church has apparently taken a decided step forward. At a recent meeting of the officials, it was recommended that the W. R. Brown property, which joins the Church lot, be purchased, the building moved and a modern structure suitable for Sunday School work be erected on the lot. Rev. J. H. Dollar, the pastor, has called a meeting of the members to be held at the Church at 8 o'clock Monday night, June 10th, for the purpose of considering the recommendation that has been submitted to the Church for its approval. It is requested that a full attendance of members be present. Montgomery Street Church has a substantial membership, and it is a source of pleasure to know they are planning to enlarge their plant and increase the facilities for carrying the Church work."

WHAT IS MY LIFE?

By DR. WILLIAM P. MERRILL. . .

"For me to live is" —(?)—Phil. 1:21.

That is a solemn question. It takes hold of us with peculiar force at this season of the year. This is the time of endings and beginnings. We call it the "commencement" season—a sure proof, that word "commencement," of the incorrigible hopefulness of the human heart. To end something is really to begin something. The boy comes to the close of a year of school work; the youth ends his years of study and social fellowship in high school; the senior leaves college behind him; in many professions and lines of business work slows up, and vacation draws near. Young people instinctively choose June as the best time for moving out of "single blessedness" into the double blessedness of wedded life. It is a time of beginnings and endings—a "commencement season."

It is a good time for taking stock of our moral and spiritual equipment. What does it all mean? What is it all for? What is my life, anyhow? Life is a strange, varied experience. We find ourselves here, living along day after day, until our time is spent. What does it all mean? What is the good of it?

Mark Twain, in his autobiography, tells how his little daughter Susy one day asked her mother, with painful earnestness, "Mother, what is it all for? People are born, and live, and marry, and work, and die. And then more people are born and live and die. What is it all for?" That question kept hounding the great humorist all his life long.

A flippant remark common enough a few years ago has a deep philosophical meaning, as such remarks are apt to have: "We don't know where we're going, but we're on the way." Doesn't that describe life as many people live it? We are on the way; we can't stop. Whither? What is the goal? Have we a goal? Or are we always just "on the way," without knowing "where we're going"?

It is a good thing for each of us to make the question very personal. What is my life? What is it for? Here I am getting up every morning, going to my studies or my work, meeting people, coming home, sleeping, getting up again—

"Forenoon and afternoon and night,
The empty round repeats itself."

What is it all for?

Many years ago a very great man, the greatest man of his time, some of us think the greatest man since the coming of Christ set the world to reckoning its years anew, put the meaning on his life in a small and simple, but tremendously significant phase. He said, "To me to live is Christ." What would you say that life means to you? "To me to live is"—what?

Be sure of this—to live means to you what you make it mean. God leaves you to decide that greatest of all personal questions. Let no one fool you into the idea that your life will be, and you will be, what heredity, or environment, or some force aside from your own soul, decides that you shall be. It is a specious idea, and many there be that preach it, that each of us is just a sort of glorified mechanism, working out a predetermined fate. But it is a false idea. Our whole organized life is built on the conviction that man is responsible for what he is and does. When we find some one who actually follows his impulses blindly, caught helpless in the grip of uncontrolled forces, we put him in jail or in an asylum. The best-known, surest fact in all the world is the fact of our moral responsibility for what we do and are.

Sit down, then, at this commencement season, and make yourself face yourself, and ask, "What is my life? What is it to me to live?"

Suppose you were back in the primitive days when it was easy to see the unseen; and that you saw a great angel standing in the room with you, who should tell you that God had sent him to judge you; and then, quite in modern fashion, he should set before you a slip, as if it were an examination paper, on which were the words, "To me to live is —," the blank to be filled in by you with the correct word. What would you insert?

It is not so fantastic a notion as it might appear. Our sophisticated souls dismiss angels as unreal. But call it angel, call it conscience, call it God, call it what you will, there is that which summons us to judgment, and demands that we fill in the blank, "To me to live is —."

What will you write there, if you are honest?

Some would write "business" or "work." "To me to live is business." That is a good, honest word. There are worse things, very much worse, than so to live that "work" becomes the word to put in that blank.

But is that enough to make life happy and worthy? Does one really "enter into life" (what a great phrase Jesus gives us there!) by making life synonymous with business? Watch the men who live in that way, getting day by day more into the clutches of daily toil, narrowing their interests down more and more to the things that make for success in business. Watch such men when energy slows down, and the machinery wears out, and they must give up their business; what is their life now? They have succeeded, they have made money. But, as has been pungently said, "While they have a fortune to retire on, they have nothing to retire to." What a significant question is the common query, at the end of a man's life, "How much did he leave?" It is a terrible thing to live so that at last one must leave all that has meant life to him.

Some, if they would be honest, would be compelled to fill the blank with the word "pleasure." That is not an unworthy avowal. Set the ideal of pleasure high enough, and it becomes a right good end. The word "recreation" is a noble and beautiful word. I pity any one who has no avocation to which he turns eagerly when work is laid aside, saying to himself, "This is life; this is the real thing." Recently some friends met for an evening of amateur music. When they finished playing a lovely string quartet, one of them said, "What a pity it is that we have to put so much time into business that we haven't time for really important things, like music."

Yet, thanking God and life as we do for play and pleasure, we know in our hearts that it is not enough; that the one who fills that blank with the word "pleasure" is writing down his life a failure. Terrible as it is to define life in terms of drudgery, it is as bad, or worse, to define it in terms of self-indulgence. Pleasure is purest and most satisfying when it comes as a gracious accompaniment to a really worthy and noble end and motive for living.

What is my life? What does it amount to? Am I just slipping through it? Am I making something of it? "To me to live is"—what?

"Upon the hour when I was born
God said, 'another man shall be';
And the Great Maker did not scorn
Out of Himself to fashion me.
He sunned me with His ripening locks,
And heaven's rich instincts in me grew
As effortless as woodland nooks
Send violets up, and paint them blue.

"Yes, I who now, with angry tears,
Am exiled back to brutish clod,
Have born unquenched, for fourscore years,
A spark of the eternal God!
And to what end? How yield I back
The trust for such high uses given?
Heaven's light hath but revealed a track
Whereby to crawl away from heaven."

Nothing brighter or nobler can come to a life than to be able to say with Paul, in utter reality, "To me to live is Christ." It is not easy to say that honestly and unreservedly. But it is the greatest thing any one can say about his life. Christ, the Guide, who shows me where to go, and what to do; Christ the Saviour, who lives in me, enabling me to live as He lived; Christ the Master, whose I am and whom I serve; Christ the Friend, who will not let me go, in life or death—if I have Him, then I know what it really means to live; then I live, as Robert Browning says we should live, "at the top of the wave." And, if I have truly learned to say, "To me to live is Christ," I can go on and say also with Paul, "to die is gain."

Not long ago I was sitting alone with one of the best men in this city—a lawyer of high standing, well on in years. Suddenly he began to tell me about himself, as men sometimes will. He said, "I am giving up one after another the positions I have held, dropping bits of my work as I grow older and have less strength. But," he said with intense feeling, "I am holding on to the last to what I am doing for Christ and the Church. Looking back over my long life," he went on, "I can see a good deal I might just as well, or better, have left out. But the one part of my life I would never leave out is what I have done for and with Christ." When I heard of that man's death, some months later, I was very sure that, for him, to die was gain.

You are interested in business and pleasure and many things. That is well. Thank God for all the good things of life, and for our freedom to use them! But what is your life? You are putting some of your earnings away into good safe investments. That is wise. But are you investing any real and considerable part of your life in the things that last? Are you "laying up a good foundation for life to come"? What are you living for? What are you living in? Every day the grooves are being set and deepened along which this life of yours is to run. What will you say when called to fill in that blank space, "To me to live is —"?

You are safest, surest, happiest, when, with assurance and joy and sincerity, you can write down, "To me to live is Christ." That makes life out of an uncertainty into a glory now and for all time to come.

THE SUN LETTER.

We are expecting a number of clubs of five new subscribers for $7.50 during the month of June—one more week to rush them in. We wish every Church would send at least one club before July 1st. Our first year as circulation manager expires on that date, and we are some distance from our goal set the first of our year. Work fast and send us a club from your Church.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE NORTH CAROLINA AND VIRGINIA S. S. AND C. E. CONVENTION.

By the grace of God, and the effectual, zealous service of its most capable and worthy president, W. B. Truitt, this Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention had a real program and a real session at Happy Home Church, Rockingham County, North Carolina, on Thursday and Friday of last week. This writer has often said, that which he now repeats, that whenever the right person arrives on the scene of action the problem in hand is solved. This far-reaching, philosophic truth has a glorious illustration in the personality and presence of W. B. Truitt.

Here was a whole convention, covering a constituency of thirty-six Sunday Schools, with an enrolled membership of forty-five hundred pupils and teachers, to say nothing of numerous Christian Endeavor Societies, that was simply marking time, and its annual meetings hardly creating a ripple, until the right man arrived, in the person of W. B. Truitt. Within the brief space of two years, this man of zeal and vision has really dynamited the whole sleeping body and shaken it into tremulous and tremendous activity. Miss Pattie Coghill, Field Secretary of the Board of Religious Education, said near the close of the program of the Happy Home meeting, that this was about as near her ideal of a program, and its presentation, as she had been able to discover anywhere. And the rest of us felt the same way about it. The fact is, W. B. Truitt was the program. He decided that a convention in the North Carolina and Virginia Conference of Sunday Schools and Christian Endeavor Societies could be held, and by the grace and favor of God, should be held. And then through the weeks before the convention met, he put his great energy and organic mind behind, or rather in front of, the measure, and it began to move. The results surprised him and everybody else.

Held at about the busiest time of the year, and in a farming community, the ample house of worship, Happy Home Church, was well filled, sometimes to capacity, through the three sessions of the Convention—Thursday during the day, Thursday evening, and Friday through the day. It does not make so much difference as to who spoke, or as to how well they spoke. The work went on. The delegates from the Sunday Schools and Endeavor Societies were there, and they were there to get that which was offered, and the offering was weighty and worth while. If there was a vacant place on the program, by the absence of a speaker, nobody discovered it, for someone was willing, and already appointed, to take the place, and to deliver a real message on the subject assigned. There was not a dull moment of the two days' session, and there was real discussion throughout of those problems that confront the Sunday School superintendent, the officers, teachers and pupils in the Sunday School, and they were discussions that were enlightening, helpful, informing. We do not recall being in a body in which both hearers and speakers seemed more deeply interested in all the vital problems that were brought to the fore for discussion and consideration.

To begin with, Rev. J. H. Dollar, of our Reidsville Church, had his quartette and choir present, and it is needless to say, the convention was time and again lifted out of itself under the inspiration and melody of great and good gospel singing. The pastor of the church, Rev. M. T. Sorrell, made everybody welcome by his cordial words of greeting; and Rev. J. F. Apple, Elon College, N. C., vice-president of the body, told the people in fitting terms how happy we all were to be there. Brother Apple makes a real vice-president, in that he was close to the chair, and that he carried the work on his mind and in hand, and was immediately available to the president for presiding and carrying on the program, if the president had to be out of the chair on any occasion.

On roll-call it was found that nearly every school and society of the convention was represented, and well represented, some having large delegations present.

The president delivered a most fitting message on "Power" and then proceeded to demonstrate throughout the sessions that if a religious body, or a religious person, is to carry on with success and sufficiency, they must have power from an unseen Source, for the source of power is unseen, and the greatest power in this world is spiritual power. The Mission Secretary was permitted to speak on "Training Our Youth for World Friendship," in which was brought out and emphasized the truth that a Sunday School may be selfish, and a Sunday School is selfish, if it centers its thought, its activity, and its giving, on itself and for itself. God in His wisdom and goodness has, through the ages, delivered many messages, and He is delivering many messages to His called and chosen ones; but invariably those messages to the chosen ones are messages about and for others, whom He would choose, and many of whom He does choose, when they get that message from the chosen one to whom it was delivered. While God spoke to Paul on the Damascus road, another intervened, a man of God, by the name of Ananias, before Paul's eyes were opened, and the message to Ananias, already saved, was not for Ananias, nor about Ananias, but it was to Ananias about Paul and for Paul. Then, when Paul got the message, ever after that, the message to him was not about himself, except to tell him what he could do for others, or should do for others, in making known to them the way and the will of his Lord. World friendship, if it ever is an accomplished fact, will be the result of the activity of those to whom God has spoken, who, redeemed by His love, shall take seriously the message from Him and carry it, or send it, to others.

Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, Durham, N. C., on the first day afternoon kept the convention awake. He presented most vividly, "The Sunday School, an Evangelizing Force." Brother Harrell taught the convention that salvation consisted of three steps or movements: 1st—Something done for one; 2nd—Something done in one; 3rd—Something done through one. A man is only partly saved when he receives pardon and forgiveness from God for past sins. Salvation is not an insurance policy guaranteeing security after death. Salvation, if it means anything, is transforming one so that one may be used of God to carry the message of love and of redeeming life to others. Unless we are a channel of communication and power for God in reaching others, there is not much salvation there, and the object of the Sunday School is not to be an end in itself but a means and a school of instruction to reach and to help others. The Sunday School is a recruiting station from which recruits are trained and sent out.

Rev. F. C. Lester, of Waverly, Va., the chairman of the Board of Religious Education, told of the work of his board and of the vision that he has of the task before the board, and the wonderful opportunities that await the board, if there were means available for putting into practice the program of Christian Education in the church,

At the evening session there was a packed house, and under the leadership and training of Miss Graham Rowland, of the First Church of Greensboro and the young people of that church, a most thrilling and telling pageant, "The Color Line," was put on to the delight of the great audience and to the edification of all. This is certainly a splendid missionary play and tells in pageantry a story of real conditions and of real service in trying to reach for Christ the yellow man of China, as well as men and women, boys and girls, of color throughout the world.

Rev. T. Fred Wright, Paces, Va., opened the services of the second day with appropriate devotionals, and immediately followed the busiest and possibly the most practical and powerful session of the convention, that devoted to the departmental reports and discussions.

Mrs. Grace Stewart, First Church, Greensboro, reported for the children's division; Mr. W. T. Dunn, Lynchburg, Va., for adult division; Rev. T. Fred Wright, Paces, Va., for the administrative division; Rev. H. G. Robertson, Richmond, Va., for the Christian Endeavor; Miss Graham Rowland, Greensboro, for the division of missions and Bro. C. D. Johnston, superintendent of the Elon Orphanage for the orphanage division; Rev. W. S. Alexander, D. D., for the college division. These reports were something more than formal presentation of great themes. They were real discussions of practical problems in these various divisions, and no part of the convention was more thoroughly enjoyed, for much helpful information was given bearing on the problems treated.

Rev. G. C. Crutchfield, Lynchburg, Va., delivered an interesting address during the morning session on "The Contribution of the Christian Endeavor to the Church." Brother Crutchfield has through the years been a zealous advocate of Endeavor work, and he carried the spirit of his enthusiasm to the whole convention through his message.

The grand climax of the morning session, if not of the convention, was reached just before the closing hour by a program put on by the children of the Christian Orphanage under the splendid training and leadership of Mrs. Chas. D. Johnston. The program consisted of recitations and songs, and the whole convention discovered, if it did not already know, that we have children in the orphanage who can face an audience and recite and sing in an even steady tone and with composure and do honor to any institution or enterprise. It was a most timely program, and we only wish all the conventions could have this feature.

In the closing session were heard addresses by Rev. C. E. Newman on Missions in the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor," in which the speaker showed that for a Sunday School or a Christian Endeavor to be efficient and worthy, it must be missionary; on "Christian Education in Our Colleges," by Dr. W. S. Alexander, who spoke of the great place that Elon College is filling in the church and how well it was doing it; and by Dr. C. H. Rowland of Greensboro, in a great address bringing the convention to a climax in discussing "Church Auxiliaries as Aids to the Pastor." Dr. Rowland contended that if the auxiliaries did not aid the pastor, it was the pastor's fault. The pastor can get the aid of his auxiliaries if he gives these auxiliaries the proper attention, and if he does not, he is the loser as well as the church.

The next session is to be held at Pleasant Ridge Church, Guilford County, North Carolina, on Thursday after the third Sunday in June, and President Truitt is already at work on the program. He will not let up, if the dear Lord lets him live, till the next session is carried to a great and successful conclusion.

A dozen pastors were present and took part, all the pastors in the conference, we believe, with possibly three exceptions. One of the moving incidents of the convention was when the president asked the preachers to take charge for a brief prayer and devotional service for one of their own number, Rev. P. T. Klapp, now stricken. The pastors were called to the front, and side by side lifted their hearts to God in prayer. They closed their part of the program with a song, "Blest be the Tie That Binds," in which the whole audience joined. An offering was taken for Brother Klapp and the family, amounting to $20.20.

The Happy Home people simply out-did themselves in hospitality, providing every possible necessity and comfort for all who came.

It is safe to say that not a delegate attended the convention that did not have something to carry back to the local school or church, something that was worthwhile and something that will tell for good in the local Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Society. J. O. A.

HARD TIMES.

Material prosperity makes what people call good times; material adversity makes what they call hard times. People forget that "man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God" (Matt. 4:4). Permanent prosperity would mean the ruin of mankind. It is want, in body or goods, that binds the human race together with sympathetic bonds. No sickness, no want, no loss of time or means, would spell independence that forgets others and cultivates selfishness of the worst kind. A sense of dependence upon God leads to prayer, and a sense of dependence upon these leads to a friendly consideration of their interests. Hard times makes people think, humbles them, and causes them to consider the need for co-operation in all lines of life and work. When labor walks the streets of cities without work, and farmers have no market for their goods, stores suffer, and homes live on less. Hard times is largely a state of mind, as people seem to go and spend for luxuries as if times were good. This nation does not know what hard times are. It is reported that fifteen million of people are starving in China. People have never starved in America. Business has been dull—it is now—but it revives again, and when it does men go wild in business, strive to get rich. Corporations want greater profit, labor wants higher wages, producers want more for their goods, men want bigger salaries, and it takes a slump to bring people to their senses and dependence upon one another as well as upon God.

The nation needs a revival of religion more than it needs a revival of business. If religion prospered more, there would be such a Christian spirit of co-operation between capital and labor, between cities and county, between rich and poor, that hard times would be unknown. There is no escape from the ups and downs in human society. Winter does not seem as prosperous as summer, but all summer would ruin the world. Nature pauses and then revives. Business does the same. Even death is a part of the divine plan, and it is the scattered ones to gether in sympathy with the funeral that awakes the family love and brings flowers. Unbroken prosperity, the absence of sickness and death would make a cold world in which to live. Universal prosperity in continuous time would destroy the neighborly feeling and the sweet "good morning" to friends. It takes the cross to save the world, and the tomb to furnish the risen Lord. It would be a heartless world if there were no deaths and no graves. Monuments are built to the dead, not to the living. The monuments of the world tell of hard times—wars and struggles that spill human blood. W. W. S.

DEPENDENCE.

Occasionally one runs across a person who evidences but little or no desire to take an active interest in the hustling world of affairs, but rather is apparently content languidly, and with minimum energy, to go through life in a desultory manner, quite satisfied to let others bear the burdens and take the initiative in the ordinary functions of daily experience.

Dependence upon others is surely not a desirable status with which any man or woman should be satisfied unless, of course, the dependent one is physically handicapped or has reached the age where he or she can conscientiously take their hands from the plow, as it were, and enjoy well-earned rest.

It was no doubt intended by the Creator that every one should work out his or her own salvation in this life; that they should perform certain duties imposed equally upon all people; that by diligence and labor alone could they merit the possession of the luxuries of life.

If a man or woman, being possessed of sound health and endowed with average intelligence, fails to do his or her own work, then it logically follows that this same work will have to be performed by others; these others assuming added burdens thereby. It is only necessary to glance at the pages of history to determine the inevitable result—aggravated conditions superinduced by the idleness and wastefulness of those of great wealth, as opposed to the rightful indignation of the half-starved, overworked masses who owe their pitiable state of lack to the excesses that were crowding the foolish lives of the aristocrats.

It is amusing and instructive to conduct our investigation further, even into the lower forms of life. For instance, let us visit an apiary and learn the lesson taught by the highly energetic little bees. Here we see industry—a combination of scientific skill and manual labor. The provi-dent insects have no use for a drone, the idler being killed with dispatch, as he is considered an impediment to be removed, at the earliest possible moment, for the common good of the workers.

The drone, the man who habitually accepts charity, whining at "misfortunes" that his own idleness has brought about, indeed merits little sympathy. If he were candid, he would say to himself, "I am a liability. The world is progressing despite my inertia. I am content to let others feed and clothe me. However, beneath the fancied happiness of my inactivity there lies a sinister gloom. I am consuming what I have not produced. By sheer laziness, chicanery and perhaps open dishonesty, I glean from the fields where other men have sown."

On the other hand, the active, honest and energetic man can say with equal and more justifiable candor, "I am an asset in this world—a needed and appreciated member of society. By doing my share, I am contributing to the advancing prosperity and general progress of my city, State and nation. I am benefiting humanity. I earn my living honestly and am looked upon by my fellows with confidence and trust." The latter is indeed the happy man. He is so interested in his work, so gratified at the progress he has made, so absorbed in making himself a better citizen, a better husband, a better employee, that his mind is stimulated and his every activity becomes a joy—life proves a great, fascinating experience.—Sel.

ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION.

Friedens Lutheran Church, located two miles north of Gibsonville, N. C., celebrated its 158th anniversary on Sunday, June 2nd, with notable exercises, attended by hundreds of visitors from a wide area. Dr. Jacob L. Morgan, president of the North Carolina Synod, preached the sermon; Dr. W. S. Alexander, of the Elon College Church, spoke on the significance of memorial occasions and their value, and Dr. W. T. Whitsett, of Whitsett, made the historical address.

While this Church was formally organized in 1771, still there were services held on the grounds for many years previous to this time. The original settlers to this community came as early as 1750, and for the following years held their first meetings here. Later the State of North Carolina made a special grant of land to the Church, a building was erected, and from 1771 down to this time regular worship has continued. In 1871, just a century after the organization, the present handsome brick building was dedicated, and within the past two years an addition of eight rooms has been completed to the original building.

In the ancient cemetery, nearly five thousand graves make it one of the largest and most interesting cemeteries in central Carolina. Here rest the founders of many well-known families, among them being the Scherers, the Summers, the Wagners and others. Many of the older graves are marked by stones with inscriptions in the German language, which was used by the congregation in worship down to 1830.

Practically all the original settlers in this section were from the Palatinate region of the Rhine River, and almost without exception they were active in the struggle for freedom during the War of the Revolution. They were engaged at the battle of Alamance, May 16, 1771, and at the Guilford Courthouse battlefield on March 15, 1781, where the power of Lord Cornwallis in the South was broken by the stubborn fight made by General Nathaniel Greene and his followers. It was Guilford Courthouse that made possible the victory at Yorktown, October 15, 1781, when Cornwallis laid down arms and the War of the Revolution came to a close with victory for the colonists.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

On Friday, June 14th, Drs. I. W. Johnson, N. G. Newman, and I were guests of Mr. T. A. Jones, of Bennett's Creek, and his son, Ralph, of Norfolk, on a fishing trip in his complete yacht. We left the wharf at 7:30 A. M., passed down Bennett's Creek to the Nansemond River, out into Hampton Roads, then by Old Point, the Ripraps, and out into the Chesapeake Bay. We stopped at intervals to fish. Fishing was not good that day, but we kept trying in river, roads and bay. Dr. Johnson landed twelve, Dr. Newman five, and I six, making twenty-three in all. Mr. Jones was a hospitable host, Ralph was a fine engineer, and we were enthusiastic in our appreciation of the hospitality that lasted all day. The day was perfect in air, sunshine, and breeze, and no other three preachers ever had a better time.

When the time for lunch arrived, Wilbur Rid-dick, the colored man, was ready with biscuits, butter, fried chicken, pickles, hot coffee and iced tea. Food never tastes as well as it does on a picnic, and especially on the water of the Bay, with sea breezes giving greater comfort than electric fans. The lashing of the waves, the absence of responsibility, the appetizing food, all add to the enjoyment of a good meal. The cook seemed to enjoy waiting upon us as well as we enjoyed the food; and it is always true that what one does for others makes a larger return of satisfaction than what others receive. Service is a part of religion. "Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and Him only shalt thou serve" (Matt. 4:10). The luncheon over, we resumed fishing, Ralph moving the yacht from place to place to find the fish, but only a few could be found.

While anchored in the Bay, Ralph saw a signal that meant a call for help. He lifted the anchor, moved quickly in that direction to find six young men who had ventured too far out and the wind and waves seemed to make it impossible for them to row their boat to shore. Wilbur threw out a rope, which they fastened to their boat, and our yacht towed their boat near to Willoughby Spit. They looked as if they were college young men, out on a vacation for enjoyment on the Bay; but Latin, Greek, history and economics will not take a boat through the waves to land. It requires experience with oars and experienced arms.

Then we moved again out of the Bay, by Old Point, through the Roads, by Hampton, Newport News, through the mouth of the James, and back into the Nansemond. At Hampton, Mr. Jones bought some fresh trout from a vessel which had just come in with a big haul. We had caught only croakers. Again and again we dropped the anchor, but they would not bite. Up the Nansemond, under the Town Point Bridge, opposite the Lee Wharf, anchor was lowered again, and Wilbur began making toast, frying big trout, and preparing hot coffee. In the cool breeze of that afternoon, five men enjoyed a fish supper as much as they had capacity to enjoy it. A great day, a great host, a fine son, and a good cook! If Mr. Jones ever invites you to go on his yacht, don't decline the invitation.

ELON LETTER.

It is exceedingly interesting to attend lectures given by equally competent thinkers and workers in the field of education and to have them express views diametrically opposed to each other. I have had this interesting experience more than once, but today, in particular, I was impressed with the involvements in two attitudes toward the fundamental philosophy of education.

The first lecturer quoted the president-elect of the University of Chicago in his recently enunciated definition of the university. President-elect Hutchins is quoted as saying: "The university is not a group of buildings, nor yet a group of students, but a company of scholars. Buildings contribute to the convenience, and students may come if they like, but the university exists primarily for scholars who have the right to fix the terms upon which students should come and when they come, students must accommodate themselves to the prescribed conditions."

The second doctrine of education was enunciated by a lineal descendant of the great Jonathan Edwards, Dr. Richard H. Edwards, who said: "The basic assumption in higher education today is the primacy of the individual student in the educative process. Buildings, professors, endowments, executives and administrators all exist for the student. They are all under obligation to help him develop in the midst of his own life-situations his own powers on his own highest levels. Education today is focussed not on knowledge, nor on research, nor on institutionalism, nor on general truth, nor on the organization of persons into groups, nor with the intent of winning persons to organizations, nor on recruiting, but on the individual student, the individual student as an end and not as a means. All who have part professionally in the educative process are under obligation to understand all the interests and problems of the individual student, to share in his adventure for self-realization, and when any one of them ceases at any time to function in accordance with this fundamental purpose, he has ceased to have the right to call himself an educator."

I pass these two mutually exclusive views on to the readers of the Elon Letter for their consideration. Evidently we do not know where we are nor in what direction we are headed in higher education.

FRANKLIN LETTER.

On Sunday night, June 6th, Dr. Charles Shelton, pastor of the First Congregational Church of Portsmouth, Va., and Rev. J. W. Fix exchanged pulpits. This interchange was a most delightful experience for both ministers and helped to create a finer spirit of fellowship between the two Church bodies that are contemplating union.

The Churches of Franklin have completed one of the finest D. V. B. S. ever held in the city. This is the first union school; hence, the best teachers and helpers from all the Churches were available. There was a large enrollment of boys and girls and teachers from the Methodist, Baptist, Episcopal, Friends and Christian Churches participated.

Rev. Dale Sanders, a recent graduate of Elon College and student at Yale Divinity School, filled the pulpit of the Franklin Christian Church Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock hour. It was a pleasure for our people to hear this promising young minister. Bro. Sanders has a great and promising future, and after completing his B. D. work will be well equipped to carry on the work of one of our large Churches.

IT'S A SIN TO ROB—BUT WHAT WILL WOMEN DO NEXT?

A few years ago the "street walker" who sold her virtue for a living, bobbed her hair so she might be known. It wasn't long before women in general did the same. Then she started painting herself up, like a clown, so she would be different; and in a short time other women followed her example, and today even our "best women" use so much paint and lip-stick that they look even more like a clown than did the "street walker." No one seems to know the reason why they do it—unless, indeed, it be for lack of good, common sense.

When I was a "kid," my daddy had an old "one-hoss" wagon which he had painted with the same color of paint women use today, and off at a distance it looked like new, but when you got up near it you could tell that it was the same old wagon, just painted up. In this case, though, the paint was a help to the wagon, as it kept the wooden parts from decaying and the metal parts from rusting, but the wagon didn't run any better with paint than it did without it. The woman who paints up is neither preventing wood from decaying nor metal from rusting. She is neither deceiving her friends nor the public. She paints because some other woman paints; and thereby merely shows her sense—or the lack of it.

After the "street walker" was robbed of her distinctive painting habit, she took up smoking; but she did not have this to herself long before she was forced to share it with "popular society girls," who have now passed it along to women in all classes of life. I am wondering what the "street walker" is going to do next, and I am also wondering what she can find that women in general will not rob her of!

Yes, I know that there are still a few left who neither paint nor smoke, but what about the millions of absent-minded, sillified, frivolous women who ruin their looks and injure their health just because some other woman does it?

Recently I sat in a room where one young so-called lady smoked sixteen cigarettes in three hours' time, and made the statement, with whiskey on her breath, that when she got married there would be no drinking, no smoking, and no fussing around her home. No doubt, there are thousands and thousands of others saying the same thing. But I would like to ask, "When does the rehearsing for married life begin?" The woman mentioned above is now about twenty-two years of age, and is already such a nervous wreck that she is unable to work. Does smoking hurt? Does whiskey hurt?

Why does a woman drink? And why does a woman smoke? For the same reason a man does—just for lack of common sense! We may trim a mule up the nicest way possible, rub him until the curry-comb wears out and tie ribbons on his ears, but the first time he takes a notion he opens his mouth and brays, and shows his breed. There is nothing to prevent it. It's natural. He's a mule, and we can make nothing else out of him.

The story is told of a woman who was being "kept up" by a man who had plenty of money. During a trial in which she was a witness, she was being questioned by a lawyer, who asked her how much this man gave her. She answered and told him the amount. He then asked, "What else has he given you?" She told him "lots of clothes." And the lawyer asked, "What else?" She answered, "An automobile." The lawyer asked, "what kind?" She answered, "A Rolls-Royce." And the lawyer came back with the question, "Do you mean to say that he gave you a Rolls-Royce?" and she answered, "Do you expect a fellow to go to hell in a wheelbarrow?" She had the right idea about wanting to ride in the best-riding car made, rather than a wheelbarrow, but I am wondering how many of us men and women are going to hell without even a wheelbarrow!

No, this is not being written by an old bald-headed man because his flapper daughter paints and smokes. It is written by a man still under twenty-five.

THE CHURCH SCHOOL AND MISSIONS.

BY REV. W. B. FULLER.

(Annual address before the Valley of Virginia Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention, at Newport Church, Page County, Va., Thursday, June 13th, by Rev. W. B. Fuller, the same being based on "The Desire of All Nations," by Dr. Egbert Smith.)

Said a Sunday School superintendent: "This school's business is to teach the Bible, not missions." To compress into ten words a denser ignorance of the Bible or a heresy more fatal to the progress of Christ's kingdom would be a difficult feat. That missions form the central current of Scripture, we must admit. The New Testament, the crown and climax of divine revelation—by whom was it written? By missionaries. For whom was it written? For mission converts and mission Churches. It is not primarily a system of doctrine, or a collection of proof-texts, or a miscellany of lessons. It is the history of a campaign, beginning from Jerusalem and aiming at the uttermost parts of the earth.

Its main sections are two. The first four books contain the life of Christ, whose last command was "Go, and lo! I am with you." The rest are the history and results of the going. The first four, "Christ in Palestine"; the other twenty-three, "With Christ on the mission field." The gospels close with the Saviour risen and pointing outward. The next book is "The Acts of the Missionaries," the word apostle being but the Greek spelling of the word missionary. Then follow the epistles, written to strengthen the hearts and guide the life and thinking of the missionary converts and Churches.

If the New Testament were taught in every Sunday School as primarily a missionary book, beginning with the life of the Great Missionary, then the acts of the missionaries, then the letters of the missionaries from this, that, and the other point of the far-flung battle line—the Church of tomorrow would be far nearer what our Lord intended His Church to be, and the kingdom would go forward with a mighty stride.

Why Teaching is a Live Business.

The object of Sunday School teaching; is it simply to impart knowledge? An experienced schoolmaster was asked, "Do you not get weary of going over the same old subjects, with class after class, year after year? How do you live through the sameness and grind?" "You forget one thing," was the reply. "You forget that I am not really teaching that old subject matter at all. I am teaching living boys and girls! The matter I teach may become familiar and lose the thrill of novelty. But the boys and girls are always near; their hearts and minds are always fresh and inviting; their lives are always open to new impressions, and their feet ready to be turned in new directions."

Just so Sunday School superintendents and teachers that know their business are not teaching the Bible, save as a means to an end. Bible knowledge is not the true objective. But they are seeking, through the Bible, to train every member of the school to be a missionary-hearted Christian, because the spirit of missions is the spirit of Christ, expressing itself in loving service in the home, the school, the community, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth.

How far the average Sunday School fails of imparting the missionary passion, we all know. Multitudes carry away from their years of attendance on it no world vision of Christian service, no consciousness of missionary obligation, scarcely a county-wide conception of the kingdom. Passing strange this is when we remember that Christianity is a missionary religion and that the Church's supreme business, for which the Sunday School is the appointed training department, is the establishing of Christ's kingdom throughout all the world.

The Sunday School of Tomorrow.

But the Church is awaking to its duty. Superintendents and teachers are getting a new view of their objective. With the future members of the Church at their most plastic age in their hands, they are realizing afresh how incalculably great is their responsibility and their opportunity. And the day, we believe, is hastening on when the Sunday School will become a veritable training camp for world Christians, whose arrival on the scene of action will mean such an access of world-conquering enthusiasm as the Church has never yet known.

The way to this radiant goal is clear. What is it that God has given to youth, to the spring-time of life, to be its distinctive glory, the source and secret of its boundless promise? He has given it the spirit of adventure, of aspiration, of passion for the heroic, because of the old self-love He has brought, flooding in, a new and thrilling sense of the worth and beauty of self-sacrifice and self-devotion. Out of it all is born the passionate longing for big tasks, big achievements, to do something worth while for the world, no matter what the cost. It is the birth-time of character-forming ideas and ideals, the moment of supreme meaning for the Church and the kingdom. In a word, it is life seeking a noble pattern. Hence its hunger for the daring, the heroic, the truly great in aim and service.

To this God-implanted yearning of youth, God Himself has given the full answer and satisfaction in the missionary program of His Son. The bringing of all human races and relationships under the sway of His kingdom of love and truth is at once the greatest, the purest, the most heroic, the most self-forgetting and yet self-ennobling aim and task ever known on earth. The imparting to all its members of the world vision, and their whole-hearted commitment to this aim and task, must be the supreme aim of the Sunday School, as it was the very heart of what we learned at our mothers' knees: "Our Father, which art in heaven, hallowed be Thy name; Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven."

Few can Go; All can Help.

This supreme aim of the Church, of the Sunday School, and of the individual Christian does not mean that every one should go to the foreign field. Comparatively few are of the right age, and providentially free to go, and able also to meet the exacting requirements for the foreign service. Moreover, the senders are as necessary as the goers, and must be vastly more numerous. But it does mean that every true disciple is, and every boy and girl should be trained to be a missionary at heart, a devoted helper in the work of making Christ known and obeyed the world over.

But how shall we make our pupils missionary-hearted? How shall we, under God, mold their characters to the Christ-like missionary ideal? "A growing personality feeds upon personality." Here lies our clue. Next to nourishing them on the supremely winning and radiant personality of the Master Himself and on His word, comes the feeding of their souls on the marvelous reproductions of the Master's brave and loving spirit in the lives of those who have left home and friends and country to represent Him in the dark places of the earth.

Effect of Biography.

On the extraordinary power of biography to develop unselfishness and expand the heart and mind, educational authorities are agreed. "This is because," says Dr. Charles A. McMurray, recognized expert on elementary education, "it takes the child out of himself and loses him in the life and experience of another. The more biographies of the right sort a child studies appreciatively, the more his own life is expanded to encompass and identify itself with the lives of others."

Sophia Lyon Fahs, an authority on young people's literature, finds that the most successful literature of this type is (1) almost always in narrative form, (2) of sufficient length to make a permanent impression, (3) saturated with concrete and picturesque detail, (4) radiant with the personal element, (5) filled with brave adventure among primitive peoples or where civilization is simple. As meeting all these requirements, she cites John G. Paton's autobiography, as edited for young people.

"It is teeming with thrilling adventures, the most marked courage, and 'love and devotion under trying circumstances.' Little wonder is it that in city public libraries the boys and girls are constantly calling for Mr. Paton's book. What more effective commentary than the story of his life could be found on Jesus' promise, 'Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world'? Or how better could we make real to a boy the meaning of the Christ-like life of self-forgetting service? Who would dare to say that three months consumed by a Sunday School class in studying merely the autobiography of this one man had been misspent if either one of these great Christian truths were made to live for the children? Such examples might be multiplied. Since the very spread of Christianity itself has furnished us with great heroes of faith, why should we grudge the use even of months of Sunday School time in studying their lives? Through such instruction, in very truth, one is teaching the life of Christ."

S. S. Value of Missionary Biography.

R. E. Diffendorfer, another specialist, urges the use of missionary biography in Sunday Schools as a potent means of developing missionary character.

1. "It is the chief source of material from which the pupil may create for himself a personal missionary ideal.

2. "It presents an example of the highest type of Christian living, because the principle on which the true missionary orders his life is that of service.

3. "The missionary's own record of facing and meeting the great problems of human need incites others to help to meet these needs. All Christendom was stirred by David Livingstone's own heart cry in the presence of 'the open sore of the world.'

4. "The missionary's life differs from that of other Christians, in that, as a rule, it is spent among more or less primitive races. This fact gives to missionary biography two very significant educational values.

"First, the effects of the missionary's life and preaching among primitive peoples are in terms of the simpler phases of the Christian life which children and young people can easily understand. The meaning of belief in God, in sin, salvation, and righteousness, and the value of Bible study, prayer, and the sacraments are not clouded in a maze philosophical terminology. They are simple, concrete and practical.

"In the second place, the missionary's life and work among primitive peoples, and the effects of the gospel upon heathen hearts are in sharp contrast with non-Christian religions. This bold belief forms the charm and interest of missionary biography for boys and girls. It also adds to the effectiveness of its use in the development of Christian character. There was no hair-splitting as to what Christianity meant in the New Hebrides when John G. Paton ruled that a Christian home should be recognized when it had regular family worship of the Christian's God. A boy cannot fail to recognize the difference between the Christian's God and that taught by the Arab

THE BIBLE AND MISSIONS.

Bible students, if asked where believers had their first organization, will at once answer, "In the family of Abraham." Its rite of admission was circumcision, and its charter was a grant of blessing to all mankind. To Abraham, God said, "In thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed." To Isaac, the charter was reaffirmed, "In thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." To Jacob, it was repeated again, "In thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." The world-relationship of believers is no after-thought. It was in God's plan from the beginning. At their first organization, God gave His servants a world charter and set before them a world goal.

And this note He rings through all the Bible. To Moses He says, "As truly as I live, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord." The psalms take up the strain, "Ask of me and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession." The major prophets add their voices, "Look unto me and be ye saved all the ends of the earth." The minor prophets join in, "Behold, thy King cometh unto thee, having salvation; lowly, and riding upon an ass; He shall speak peace to the nations, and His dominion shall be unto the ends of the earth." And so the mighty melody comes rolling down from Genesis to Isaiah, from Isaiah to Malachi, until it blends with the angel anthem sung above sleeping Bethlehem:

"And heaven drew nearer earth that night,
Flung wide its pearly portals,
Sent forth from all its realms of light
Its radiant immortals.
They hovered in the golden air,
Their golden censers swinging,
And woke the drowsy shepherds there
With their seraphic singing."

And the angels' announcement of the birth of Christ was keyed to the same note that Abraham heard. "Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people." By the Holy Spirit, aged Simeon welcomes Him as the "light to lighten the nations." Come to years, the Saviour Himself takes up the strain. "The field is the world." "I am the light of the world." "The bread that I shall give is my flesh which I shall give for the life of the world." "My house shall be called a house of prayer for all the nations."

Between His resurrection and ascension, He appeared to the apostles by the space of forty days, speaking the things concerning the kingdom of God. Of these things, only one has been recorded, and that one by all four evangelists. Few things are recorded by all the four. We have not a fourfold record of the birth of Christ, or of His baptism, or of His temptation, or of His transfiguration, or of His institution of the Supper, or of His ascension to glory. We have not a fourfold record of a single one of His discourses or parables or prayers. But all four give us His death, His resurrection, and, in some form, His great commission to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature.

Of the great commission, we have yet a fifth record in the first of Acts: "'Ye shall be my witnesses both in Jerusalem and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth.' And when he had said these things, as they were looking, he was taken up; and a cloud received Him out of their sight." Thus the very last words spoken by our Saviour before returning to His Father—words which being last should ring forever loudest in our ears, and lie forever closest on our hearts—were these, "Unto the uttermost part of the earth."

Ten days later comes the Pentecostal outpouring of the Spirit, whose mission, the Saviour tells us, is to "glorify me." And of His coming, the first effect is obedience to the great commission. Straightway Spirit-filled men and women, speaking foreign languages, witness of Christ to multitudes "from every nation under heaven."

The rest of the Bible is but the continued carrying out of the great commission: first, the record in Acts of ever-widening missionary travels; second, the twenty-one epistles to ever-multiplying missionary Churches and converts; and third, the prophetic picture in the Revelation of the world-wide success of missionary effort, "a great multitude which no man could number of all nations and kindreds and peoples and tongues, standing before the throne and before the Lamb, clothed with white robes and palms in their hands."

Thus the Bible, from start to finish, is inspired with a world vision, is energized with a world purpose, and marches to a world goal.—From Desire of all Nations, by Smith.

THE BIBLE A MISSIONARY BOOK.

Dr. William Adams Brown, in a recent copy of the Missionary Review of the World, says:

1. Every book in the New Testament was written by a foreign missionary.
2. Every letter in the New Testament that was written to an individual was written to a convert of a foreign missionary.
3. Every epistle written to a Church in the New Testament was written to a Church that was established by a foreign missionary.
4. Every book in the New Testament that was written to a community of believers was written to a general group of foreign missionaries.
5. The great book of propheny in the New Testament was written to seven foreign missionary Churches of Asia.
6. The only authoritative history of the early Church is a foreign missionary account.
7. The disciples were called Christians first in a foreign missionary community.
8. The language of the books of the New Testament is in the missionary language.
9. The map of the early Christian world is the tracing of the journeys of the first missionaries.
10. Of the twelve apostles chosen by Jesus, all save one became a foreign missionary.
11. The only man among the twelve apostles who did not become a foreign missionary became a traitor.
12. Only a foreign missionary could write an everlasting gospel, and, according to the apostles, missionary service is the highest expression of Christian life.

HOLD ON!

Take comfort in thinking of what you people in the United States have done about prohibition. You can't say these things so easily yourselves, I suppose. But I would like to say that in the world where I live, millions of good people, the world over, are grateful; that whether you succeed or not, or have succeeded, the idealism of this country and the Christianity of the country were associated, and in spite of the entrenched power of the saloon, in spite of the entrenched power of an old appetite, in spite of everything, that you did rise up and have sacrificed and have done everything in your power and will do it, we believe, to see to it that this great thing shall be conserved to the succeeding generations. And if you will hold on long enough, it will kill the drinking business in Great Britain and in Canada and to the ends of the earth. There isn't any doubt of it.—Dr. James Endicott, of Canada.

THE CHURCH SCHOOL AND MISSIONS.

Mohammedans after reading the appeals of Alexander Mackay before King Mutesa, in Uganda." What a gap in religious education such biography would fill! Who can justify a system that leaves our people totally ignorant of the growth of the kingdom from the end of Bible times to the present day? Having gotten Paul to Rome and John to Patmos, it complacently turns back again to the account of the world's creation. Though Christianity has grown through the centuries to be the strongest moral force and the most uplifting spiritual influence in the world today, yet far too many Sunday Schools know nothing of how it came about. Not a glimpse is given them of the inspiring march of our holy religion from tribe to tribe, from land to land, from nation to nation, during the last nineteen centuries.

Our Forefathers Heathen.

How many of our pupils realize that our forefathers, centuries back, were as completely heathen as any in darkest Africa, often with wives in common, and addicted to cannibalism and human sacrifices? How many of them know that the name of each day of the week is a finger pointing straight back to our heathen origin?

How many have heard of the foreign missionaries Augustine, Paulinus, Patrick, Columba, Boniface, Anegar, who lifted our forefathers out of this pit of heathenism?

What a beautiful incident was that of Paulinus! It was near old York, in England, after which our New York is named. A great company was gathered in a great hall. A stranger came and asked to speak to them. Men said, "Shall he speak?" And an old Thane said, "What is this life we are living? Where did we come from? Where are we going? We do not know. It is as though a little sparrow flew into our banquet hall on a cold winter night out of the dark, circled around, and then flew out again. That is our life. We do not know where we came from. We stay here for a little while, and then out into the dark we go. If this stranger can tell us anything, let him be heard." And then Paulinus told them what he knew, and how life lighted up into meaning and hope and joy in the presence of Jesus. Thus Christianity came to our ancestors. And thus we ourselves are the children of the converts of foreign missionaries.

Such teaching the Scripture itself anticipates and encourages. Luke begins his "Acts of the Missionaries" by reminding his readers that in his "former treatise"—the gospel of Luke—he had told what "Jesus began both to do and to teach until the day He was received up," the clear inference being that in this second book he will tell what Jesus continued to do and teach through His Holy Spirit. Since Jesus is still continuing, the "Acts" are still going on, as fresh chapters are being added by the Holy Ghost for our study and inspiration in Asia, Africa, Latin-America, and the islands of the sea. The whole structure and contents of the book show that, after its 28th chapter and 30th verse, the Holy Ghost intends us to read the words, "to be continued." The Bishop of Ripon had the mind of the spirit when, upon hearing the amazing account of John Williams' gospel triumphs in the South Seas, he exclaimed, "We are listening to the 29th chapter of the Acts of the Apostles."

Such missionary education will visualize religion to our young people, not merely as it was two thousand years ago, but as a living enterprise inviting them to high spiritual adventure here and now. It will help them to see Christ, not as a book figure centuries back, but as a living leader, just ahead, still beckoning, saying, "Follow me."

In a Y. M. C. A. "service of worship for boys," the covenant of loyalty to be memorized and repeated in unison begins, "We believe that the best and happiest life is the one spent, not for self, but for others." What greater service can we render our young people than to prove to them that "the best" is, in very deed and truth, "the happiest"; to make clear to them that the Master's words may be accepted as literal fact, when, after impressing on His disciples the lesson of unselfish service, He said, "If ye know these things, happy are you if ye do them"—to convince them that life's deepest satisfactions are found only in the path of Him who came not to be ministered unto but to minister?

"Hands that open but to receive,
Empty close; they only live Richly who can richly give.

"He that, giving, does not crave,
Liketh is to Him who gave Life itself the life to save."

This supreme lesson that the Christ-like life of self-forgetting service is the richest, the most satisfying, the most blessed in retrospect—when can we find this lesson taught so convincingly, so interestingly, so simply and vividly, as in the lives of the missionaries.

Said James B. Angell, ex-president of the University of Michigan and formerly United States minister to China and Turkey: "I have had the good fortune to be in the homes of princes and the palaces of the rich in many lands, but I am speaking the simple truth when I say that I have never been anywhere in the world in homes which impressed me so with the happiness of the dwellers as the humble homes of our hard-working missionaries on the foreign field. It was not the happiness of pomp, but it was that highest of all earthly happiness, which God grants to every man and every woman who makes the supreme end and desire of life to do the work of the Master, regardless of personal comfort."

"Exposed to robbers by night and invaders by day," wrote Ann Haseltine Judson, in her journal, at Rangoon, Burma, "we both unite in saying that we never were happier."

After nearly fifty years of ceaseless toil and self-sacrifice in India, where for many years, as he himself said, he was tolerated like a toad and then hunted like a beast, William Carey left it as his dying testimony that the work of a missionary "is the most blessed service in which any human being can be employed in this world."

Remarkably Happy.

"You can hardly conceive how I feel," wrote Mary Moffat, "when I sit in the house of God, surrounded by Christian natives. Though my situation may be despicable and mean in the eyes of the world, I feel that an honor has been conferred upon me which all the kings of the earth could not have done me. I am happy, remarkably happy, though my habitation is a single room with a mud wall and a mud floor."

Robert Moffat declared that if he had a thousand Christ to those who had never heard the joyful

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

BY REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

Lesson I—July 7, 1929.

THE STORY OF EZEKIEL.

GOLDEN TEXT: "As I live, saith the Lord Jehovah, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked, but that the wicked turn from his way and live."—Ezek. 33:11.

LESSON: Ezek. 1:1-3, 2:1-3-27, 8:1-4, 11:22-25, 24:15-24, 33:30-33.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psa. 121.

The Background of Ezekiel's Work.

A part of the Jews had been carried away into captivity in Babylon in 597 B. C. They had been located between the Tigris and the Euphrates Rivers, by a river named Chebar. It appears that they had a certain amount of freedom, although they were captives in another sense. Many of them became so well situated and so permanently located that when the opportunity came later to go back to Palestine, they refused to go. Those who have studied the lessons for the past few weeks will recall that conditions in Judah were going from bad to worse at the time of Ezekiel's first work as a prophet. They will also recall that Jerusalem fell and Judah was carried away into captivity in 586 B. C. It is well enough to keep these facts—the situation and the condition of the captives in Babylon, and the conditions in Judea—in mind as a background of Ezekiel's life and work.

The Man Himself.

Ezekiel's name means "God strengthens." Its meaning was certainly fulfilled in the life of the prophet, for it was only through the strength which came from God that he was able to do what he did. Ezekiel was a priest, and hence a member of the "aristocracy" of his people. He was perhaps a comparatively young man when he was carried away into captivity. He was a man of undaunted courage, abiding convictions, keen insight, vision, and high moral and spiritual quality of life. He was unselfish and embodied in his life and expressed in his ministry the pastoral spirit.

Ezekiel's Call.

Ezekiel received a very definite call from God, although it came in what to us is a very strange way. It appears that while he was among the captives by the River Chebar, he had a strange vision. There came out of the north a whirlwind bearing a very strange phenomenon which Ezekiel describes in the first chapter of the book which bears his name. Back of all the symbolism of the thing, one thing stood out clearly for the prophet—it was the glory of the Lord which had appeared unto him, and it was the Lord Himself who spoke to him. The Lord handed unto Ezekiel a little book which he was commanded to eat and thoroughly to digest. Then he was commanded to speak unto the children of Israel, no matter what might be their response to his words. There was, of course, a very vital significance attached to this feature of the vision. The word of God was to come from Ezekiel with authority and with power. As a matter of fact, this is the only way in which a minister or a Sunday School teacher can speak with authority or with power. We must first make the message our own before we can move others.

In connection with Ezekiel's call and commission, there was the assurance of God's help. Here, as always, God gives the strength to do the things He asks us to do.

Ezekiel's Mission and Message.

Ezekiel's mission was in the restricted sense to the captives in Babylon, but as a matter of fact his work was gone throughout and unto the ends of the world. The first part of his book is devoted to condemnation and threats. He was compelled to arraign sin as he saw it, and to denounce it, and to predict its ultimate penalty. The latter part of his book, however, is devoted to comfort and encouragement. Down to the time when Jerusalem fell, Ezekiel declared that the apostasy of the Jews had been too great for God to overlook. When the blow had fallen, Ezekiel gave himself to a ministry of comfort and encouragement and hope, but only on the basis of a change in the heart of the people.

One of the important contributions which Ezekiel made to his time and to his people was the enlarged conception of the presence and the activity of God. The average Jew associated the presence of Jehovah with the temple, and he felt that the fate of the individual was bound up with the nation. But when the Babylonians laid waste the temple and carried the nation into captivity, there had to be a reconstruction in the thinking of the Jews. It was, as a matter of fact, a critical time. In setting forth the enlarged sphere of Jehovah's interest and activity, and in following Jeremiah in emphasizing the place and importance of the individual, Ezekiel made a supreme contribution to his own people and to the religious thought of mankind.

Ezekiel's Work and Influence.

Ezekiel was in a sense the "father of Judaism." In spite of the fact that he was a prophet, he still had the priestly element in him, and it was he, more than any other, who gave the impulse to what is known as Judaism. In his vision of the restored Israel, the temple and its ritual had the commanding place. But as has already been suggested, Ezekiel emphasized the importance of the individual.

For those who would teach this lesson, it might be said that it will be necessary to read carefully the text as outlined by the lesson committee in order to get at the heart of the teaching truths. In this particular instance, the writer of these notes has confined himself with giving the more general view of the life and work of Ezekiel. But there are truths, vital, inspiring and practical truths, in the verses involved in today's lesson. Search these scriptures, and in them you will find these truths.

TOPIC: "What has Made Our Nation what it Is?"—Deut. 8:1-14, 17, 18. (Consecration meeting.)

Some Bible Hints.

The providence of God has made us what we are. Without His guidance we should have been godless and faithless (v. 3).

Suffering and struggle have developed great qualities in America. Poverty and privation have values (v. 3).

Our danger is that we forget not only our history, but God who made it. Prosperity and pride may undo us (v. 17).

The way of safety is to remember God, own Him as the giver of all our good, and cleave to His commands (v. 18).

America got a good start. Compare South America, whose conquerors looked only for gold, while the Pilgrims came seeking freedom and God.

Behind all America's history you will find the Bible. Leaders were imperfect enough, but they believed the Book, and followed what light they had. Civilization is founded on the Bible.

Unlimited natural resources, wealth in hill and valley, waiting to be taken up, are the material foundations of America's prosperity. Had our country been a desert only, it never would have had a history.

Men with high ideals came to the front as leaders of the nation. At the proper moment appeared a Washington and a Lincoln. No nation rises above its leaders.

A Few Illustrations.

Ideals of justice have helped America. It is true that there is much injustice; we fail to live up to our ideals. But the ideals are not quite lost sight of.

Immigration has helped America. Europe has made a remarkable contribution to our life. We have its labor, its art, its learning. America is not original except in the ways in which it uses the gifts of others.

Wherever the pioneer went, the Church followed. Without the Church, America would have degenerated into a savage land. The message of Christ transformed wild communities.

Law has made America great. This is a government of law, and not of men. The supreme thing is law, not the will of the individual. That is a heritage from old England.

To Think About.

Is our nation the best possible? Why?

How can we make our nation better?

What does our nation most need today?

MY IMPRESSIONS OF OUR CONVENTION.

Our North Carolina and Virginia S. S. Convention was remarkably successful. The Happy Home Church proved worthy of its name by the gracious treatment accorded. We would have been happy to have made it our home, did not needy service call us elsewhere.

We will mention other outstanding features which made this a great convention.

First credit belongs to our consecrated and efficient president, Bro. J. B. Truitt. His time and energy have been unsparingly invested. He and his worthy vice-president, Rev. J. F. Apple, presided over the meeting in such a humble, dignified, business-like way that every moment of time was made to yield the most in fruitage for interests served.

Music in song made a wonderful contribution through the inspiring leadership of Rev. J. D. Dollar.

A splendid representation was there, from the cradle roll to some many years young. A most helpful program covering the entire range of Sunday School and Christian Endeavor interests had been arranged. Wisdom had been exercised in widely distributing program responsibility. All participants took their assignments seriously. Vital problems were courageously attacked and much light was thrown upon them. Discussions from the floor were entered into most heartily. Helpful experiences were shared. Consecrated pastors, auxiliary officers, and members, spiritually filled and guided, expressed personal convictions resulting from honest attempts to promote the work through these auxiliaries.

The large number who entered into the discussions so enthusiastically was the most promising feature of the convention. Where the Spirit of the Lord is there is liberty.

Much momentum has been gathered for what we trust will prove to be an ever increasingly helpful convention work. The president has the right idea. Next year's convention program will be centered about reports of departmental accomplishments during the year. May those entrusted with responsibility trade actively with talents possessed that much progress may be made in the work of the Lord.

LIFE'S RAILROAD.

If you want to take a journey, you first decide to go. You make ready, go to the station, buy your ticket in time for the train you are to go on. Do you ask, "Is this train able to make the journey to the next station"? Do you ask if the track is laid all the way, or is it strong enough to carry its heavy burdens as the train goes over such rough and dangerous places on the way? No, you feel sure and safe that both train and track are not to be doubted, for the railroad company has both train and track in its own care and keeps both in good repair. Engineers, firemen, conductors and others are all on duty. As you go on, at each station some will be getting on and some will be getting off. Each station has its name where it can be plainly seen, and passengers are allowed to get on and off at will. If you are left behind it will be your fault. If you wish to make the journey safely, you must stay on the train.

Now, let us see how this will compare with our spiritual life. If we want to walk in the highway of holiness in Christ, we must get on the train at Repentance. We pay the price required, which is repentance and faith. Then you have a right to go and get on the spiritual train. Christ, the Conductor, will take up your ticket and put His stamp upon it and hand it back to you, for God will surely seal His servants in their foreheads.

Now that you are on the train of life, do you begin to doubt if the train is safe or if it is the right train. Do not doubt, for Jesus said, "I am the way, the truth and the life; no man cometh to the Father but by me." Jesus has come and prepared this way. Every rail is of heavenly strength. The engine is of higher power, and everything on this heavenly train is furnished from above.

Some passengers get on at Repentance, but get off at the first station, which is Temptation. It matters not how it may come, for Satan is transformed into an angel of light, and he never fails to be awake and on the job. Some leave the train at Doubt, and others get off at Neglect.

You may leave Christ's train of life at any station of sin, be it called by any name you may, but if you will stay on the train He will carry you safely through to your heavenly home. All our needs are supplied by Christ through the Holy Spirit, for He said, "He will guide you into all truth." Our train is well lighted, as he said, "My word is a lamp unto thy pathway." Water is also supplied, as Christ said, "If any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink."

One dangerous station on this road is Criticism. Many people seem to think they must not pass through this station, and yet Jesus said, "Ye shall have all manner of evil said against you falsely for His name's sake, but to rejoice ye in that day for great is your reward in heaven."

The station of Faithfulness is often overlooked, but listen to Him saying, "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life." Add "he that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much." May we be true and faithful, for we will never pass this way but once.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE,
One of Our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MONDAY.

IMPATIENCE AND MANHOOD.

"With what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to good again."—Luke 6:38.

Impatience lowers the standard of real manhood. Philosophers of the centuries have held themselves in contempt when betrayed into impatient, foolish utterances. The wisest men in the world, if they speak at all when angry, must say something foolish. If they do anything as the result of that impatient condition, it has to be regretted afterward. Millions of people are insane when angry, as a poor drunkard is insane. Impatience is the base of that condition. All sin is debasing; and it is no wonder that an impatient man cannot lift up his face to God!

Prayer.—Dear Father, we confess our sins. When we would do good, sin is present with us. We would not be in the power of the devil; we pray Thee to give us light to see, and the power to withstand, and the glory of the Christian way. Amen.

TUESDAY.

ACTS SPEAK LOUDER THAN WORDS.

"From you sounded out the word of the Lord . . . So that we need not speak anything."—1 Thess. 1:8.

Nothing in the world is unto itself—alone. So is it with humanity. Each one is related to and dependent upon something or some one else. No human being can come into the world with increasing or diminishing the sum total of the world's happiness. One cannot be a Christian and avoid increasing or diminishing the glow of Christianity. The Church is only what its members are. God can be manifested in the Church only as He is in its members a living force. The Bible says that every disciple is "an epistle known and read of all men." The claim of Christianity is to so take God in the life that the quiet trust in Him may breathe, a living spirit and that it may be so genuine that, as the disciple put it, "They who see us may know that we live with Jesus." Paul pays the Thessalonians this compliment when he says that they are living the life so truthful that it was not necessary for him to preach.

Prayer.—Alas, dear Lord, how perverted are our natures. In selfishness, in self-righteousness, in pride, in wealth we think a lot of ourselves, and in the search for gratification we lose our way. Forgive us and make us living witnesses of Thy life. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

WHICH DO YOU LOVE MOST?

"Demas hath forsaken me, having loved this present World."—2 Tim. 4:10.

"Ye cannot serve God and mammon."

This was Paul's explanation of Demas forsaking the mission trip of preaching the gospel. It does not necessarily follow that Demas forsook his faith in God. But we do take it that he had espoused the cause with Paul, that a little experience taught him that the way was not altogether comfortable and glorious, that he might get killed, and that considering the question of sticking, he decided for himself and his own personal comfort, and returned home. Paul went on, with what pain, yet glory, we know. All we know of Demas is that he quit.

The sin of this world lies just in such a choice—self. It expresses lowered and abandoned ideals. Christ said, "He that loveth his life shall lose it." One of the noblest aims ever expressed was when an emperor was informed of a plot to assassinate him, that he had better take precautions, he replied, "I will reign worthily. Though it be but for a half an hour, I will be everywhere an emperor." If we can apply that to our living—what?

Prayer.—Our Father, teach us great faith and trust in Thee. Kindle in us a spiritual awakening all the way, and suffer us never to turn from Thee. Amen.

THURSDAY.

CHRISTIANS IN WRONG PLACES.

"What doest thou here, Elijah?"

Elijah was running from his duty. Jacob went to Egypt instead of the promised land, and there he got in trouble. Peter warmed at the enemies' fires. The disciples disputed among themselves as to which of them was greatest. David, from his roof, watched his neighbor's wife at her bath and became a murderer. Solomon, charmed with his many wives, lost his kingdom. There are hundreds of biblical instances in our life. It is a good question to ask ourselves, "What doest thou here?"

Prayer.—O God, our Father, give us true humility, that we may be upright and humble. Give us consecration, that we may spurn wrong living and wrong places. Amen.

FRIDAY.

DON'T LET IT HAPPEN.

"Lord, if Thou hadst been here, my brother had not died."—Jno. 11:21.

This is a gospel of the "even now"—that is, in the last extremities, and possibly where one has done his worst and turns to the Lord, he may be saved. There is always chance for true repentance, and a time when it may be said, "Even now it may be."

But that is not the highest type of Christian living. It is not even the highest type of salvation. The highest type is that which prevents a fall, and thereby makes a stronger man. There is a grace that saves from sin.

For instance, two men are in a railroad accident. One escapes without hurt. The other escapes with broken bones and bruises and long nursing in a hospital. Which is the best escape?

"If Thou hadst been with us, our brother had not died." There are many experiences which never would have occurred had we had the Lord with us. Take Jesus with you in all things every day. Let Him guide you, and the consequences of sin will never be.

Prayer.—Here we are, O Lord, calling upon Thee. Stand, Thou, in our midst. May Thy Spirit preach to our souls. May the fountain of Thy grace flow in our lives freely and prevent all fetters of sin. Amen.

SATURDAY.

WHAT CHANCE HAS GOD?

"Be still, and know that I am God."—Psa. 46:10.

As he appeared before his class one Sunday morning, a Sunday School teacher said to his boys, "Boys, I want you to do something for yourselves today which will help you more than I can. Go to your rooms and spend the remainder of the hour thinking. Listen to your own heartbeats for a while—I mean your conscience; no matter what you have been, let each one try to say, 'I am going to be just right!' Now go, and God bless you."

The result of that hour's "think" was the consecration of several of that class who had been hitherto heedless.

We must give God a chance at us as much as we must give our families a chance at us; as much as we would give our occupation a chance at our ability and skill; as much as we would give books a chance at us; as much as we would give our friends a chance at us—and that means get away from everything sometimes and think on God. Be quiet and listen for God's voice to the soul.

Prayer.—Dear Lord, give us desire for right and hate for sin, and teach us how to condemn sin to its place. Teach us to give place daily to devotion and prayer and God. Amen.

SUNDAY.

WAYS OF PREVENTION.

"If Thou hadst been here, my brother had not died."—Jno. 11:21.

By cultivating habits of right living, practice the Divine presence always by acknowledging Him in all our ways and to all people. To do this prevents temptations, and also commands respect by definite habits in our religious convictions. Daniel had the habit of praying definitely three times a day, with his face toward an open window which looked out toward God's heaven.

The sweetest side of any fruit is toward the sun. So is the life in relation to God.

Prayer.—Dear Father, take, Thou, away our blindness and our dumbness, that we may see and be wise unto everlasting life. Amen.

PREVENTION OF BLINDNESS.

The last year has seen the most widespread campaign for the prevention of blindness in the history of America, it is announced by Lewis H. Carris, managing director of the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, recently, in making public the society's fourteenth annual report.

The movement for the prevention of blindness now has behind it not only the organizations built up for this particular purpose, but also, the report shows, the medical profession, the field of education, organized labor, the safety movement, the profession of social work, Federal, State and local governmental officers, and many groups of public-spirited private citizens.

Four hundred agencies are co-operating with the Society for the Prevention of Blindness. Among them are the American Medical Association, the American Federation of Labor, the National Education Association, the League of Red Cross Societies, the National Safety Council, the National Organization for Public Health Nursing, the American Social Hygiene Association, the American Association of Industrial Physicians, the American Association of School Physicians, and the State and Provincial Health Authorities of North America.

"Men and women in every walk of life are now participating in the campaign to save the eyes of the nation," Mr. Carris said. "The project which has grown to such proportions in the last score of years began originally as an effort of a New York State committee to cut down the amount of babies' sore eyes at birth; this modest beginning has grown into a national society engaged in combating blindness or impairment of vision of any sort and at every age of life."

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

The following letter is the real heart-felt feelings of the girl who wrote it, and it breathes such a sweet spirit that the superintendent gives his space in THE SUN this week for it to be printed.

CLIAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

Dear Sunday School Workers:

Mr. Johnston has asked that I write you a personal letter in regard to my life and my experiences at our Orphanage, and what it has meant to me. This I consider a great privilege.

My home was in Norlina, N. C. I am one of a family of five children. My mother died when I was only five years old, and we were left with father, who is an invalid and cannot walk a step. For over a year I was carried around to first one place and then another. My three older brothers were forced to stop school and go to work, and my baby brother went to the home of my uncle. By someone's love for me and God's love for little children, I was placed here to be cared for by the faithful Christian workers of our Church, who have made it possible for the little unfortunate children who are left homeless, motherless and fatherless, to be given a home and the opportunities of other boys and girls.

In early childhood I was taught by my loving mother to kneel and offer prayer to God for His mercies and lovingkindness shown us in the past and present, and to look forward to future experiences of His love and care. This I have always carried through life.

I entered school here and made my grade each year. I won several prizes and honors, such as scholarships, essay contests and recitation and declamation contests. I finished high school in three years, at the age of seventeen. Then I was, through the love and interest of friends, given the privilege and opportunity of a college education.

I entered Elon College and have been for two years making my grades each term. Last year I received a certificate in Christian Education, and this year I received a diploma in the same course. I am now nineteen years old and have been here for nearly twelve years.

I have attended Sunday School and Church regularly and have tried to take some part each time. I joined the Christian Church in 1924, along with several of the other boys and girls here. I have also had an active part in the Christian Endeavor and Missionary Societies. On Sunday afternoons we have a family worship here, under the leadership of our dear Superintendent, with all the children of the home and the matrons taking part. This means so much for the expansion of our devotional life. It adds a dimension and infuses a social spirit that the more private and restricted worship of the family circle can hardly impart.

Since I have been here I have been taught all the principles of good housekeeping. I was first taught to work in the dining room, waiting on tables, cleaning and setting the table and serving meals. I stayed in this department for four years and enjoyed the work just fine. Then I was carried through the house cleaning: making beds, sweeping, sewing, dusting and caring for smaller children. Next, I was placed in the kitchen. I have been taught to cook nearly every kind of food. I enjoyed this most of all, and I took a special course at the college this year in Home Economics. I am still in this department, and have been working in it for five years to help pay my school expenses. I have also been in the laundry, washing and ironing. So I feel that I know something of caring for a home.

Mr. Johnston tries to provide all the pleasure and recreation for us that is possible. We have a large swimming pool which we enjoy so much. Most of the children have learned to swim and dive. We also have a park with lots of equipment for the recreation of the children.

Of course we have our problems just as other boys and girls, but as children to a father, we bring to Mr. Johnston our wants and desires, knowing that he will grant them, if he can in keeping with our own best interest and the highest good of our home as a whole.

I want to say that I appreciate every effort that you good people have put forth in giving me a good home and the equal opportunities of other children. And I am sure every child here appreciates the opportunities that have been given them through the love of God and the love and interest of you, our friends, who have made it possible.

In behalf of all our large family here, I want to express our sincere gratitude and appreciation to each and every one of you. We love you, although we have never seen you, and we want each of you to come and visit us some time and see what your Church, and the boys and girls are doing.

A heart full of love and gratitude from each of us to you.

Your sincere friend,
EUGENIA HILLIARD.

THE CHURCH SCHOOL AND MISSIONS.

sand lives they should all be devoted to preaching Christ to those who had never heard the joyful sound. When a little girl gave him her album for his autograph, he wrote in it:

"My album is the savage breast,
Where darkness broods and tempests rest,
Without one ray of light.
To write the name of Jesus there,
To point to worlds all bright and fair,
And see the savage bow in prayer
Is my supreme delight."

Unspeakable Mercy.

Livingston reached Linyanti through flooded country, struggling through swamps and water three and four feet deep. His hands were raw and bloody. His knees were through his trousers. He was weak from repeated attacks of fever. Yet he writes, "What an unspeakable mercy it is to be permitted to engage in this most holy and honorable work! What an infinity of lots in the world are poor, miserable, and degraded compared with mine!"

Alexander Duff declared the joy of the missionary's life to be "as rich as heaven, pure as the God-head, and lasting as eternity." To the offer of the most influential position in the home Church, while the press and the world were congratulating him on his "promotion," he sent a positive refusal. "For the sake of the heathen, the people of India, let me cling all my days to the missionary cause."

Wonderful Charm.

James Chalmers, like Paul, preferred not to build on another man's foundation. "Opening up new places has a strangely wonderful charm for me. I dearly love to be the first to preach Christ in a place." Near the close of his marvelously adventurous and fruitful life, he remarked to a friend, "Do you ever feel old? I don't," and to his supporters he said:

"Recall the twenty-one years—give me back all my experience, give me its shipwrecks, give me its standing in the face of death, give it me surrounded with spears and clubs, give it me back again with spears flying about me, with the club-knocking me to the ground, give it me back—and I will still be your missionary."

Through Faith and Patience.

"And so, Mr. Morrison," was asked of the first Protestant missionary to China, "you really expect to make an impression on the idolatry of the great Chinese empire?" "No," replied Morrison, "but I expect God will." But what faith and patience were often required before results appeared! So immense were the difficulties, so tight-locked the heathen heart, that it was seven years before Morrison saw his first convert, seven years before Judson saw his, seven years before Carey saw his, eleven years before Moffet saw his, twenty years before Gilmour saw his.

Changed Lives.

Inspiring to our young people as are these heroic missionary lives, hardly less so are the proofs of divine power seen in the changed lives of those they labored among. When Mary Moffat was asked by friends at home if she needed anything, with faith undimmed by nine years of seemingly fruitless toil, she replied, "Send us a Communion service; we shall need it some day." Two years later it arrived. It was just in time. The ingathering had at last begun. With broken and contrite hearts, men and women confessed and forsook their sins. They acknowledged Christ as their only Saviour. Dirt and idleness and indecency gave place to cleanliness and industry and propriety. The natives had been sneeringly saying, "Let us see the first Bechuana that will bow the knee to your King Jesus." The time came when not one but hundreds could be pointed to with lives so changed that they had become living epistles known and read and wondered at by all the heathen around.

Nor were the missionaries' converts fair-weather Christians. In one day, in Mackay's field, thirty-two died for their faith in the flames, all of them making so noble an end that the executioner felt compelled to report to King Mwangi that "he had never killed such brave people before; that they died calling upon God." It would do our young people no harm to know how three native Christian lads, a year before, had won the crown of martyrdom. Bound to a scaffolding, with a fire kindled beneath, they were slowly burned to death. But a yet brighter fire of devotion was burning in their hearts, and so, in the flames, and until their tongues shriveled in the heart, they say their favorite hymn in the Uganda dialect, "Daily, daily, sing His praises."

The True Ideal.

Peculiarly necessary is it in this wealth-worshipping age to hold before our young people the true ideal. The world of business and fashion is perpetually accenting money, money, money, as the prime object of pursuit and the true measure of success in life. To break the spell of these unworthy aims and examples, we must introduce our young people to those noble spirits who valued money solely as a means of service and who sought it or turned their backs on it, according as it would increase or diminish their power of doing good. Of such men and women, missionary records are full.

There was that medical missionary in Persia who refused a palace and a princely income as personal physician to the Shah, saying: "I came to Persia to relieve the distresses of the poor in the name of Jesus." There was that educator in China who declined the high-salaried presidency of an imperial university, giving as his reason, "I want to translate the Bible and to preach the gospel and to train up Christian ministers." "Well, John," said a young man to a college-mate whom he had not seen for many years, "are you making lots of money?" "No," replied the other, a social worker in a large city, "I'm not in that line, but I'm making history in my community."

What finer thing could a teacher do toward giving his boys and girls the true ideal of life than by acquainting them with young William Borden, wealthy in this world's goods, but wealthier far in the spirit of Christ-like service at home and abroad; or with John Coleridge Patteson, who left a home of affluence to give his life, with joy, to the uplift of the South Sea islanders and to die a martyr that they might live; or with young Keith Falconer, brilliant in intellect and scholarship, son of a peer, rich, one of Britain's greatest athletes, Cambridge University reader in Arabic, who laid all his gifts at his Master's feet, and after a noble service at home went joyfully forth to be the pioneer missionary to Arabia.

The Missionary Call.

It was Keith Falconer that said, "A call—what is a call? A call is a need, a need made known, and the power to meet that need." It was he also that said, "While vast continents are shrouded in almost utter darkness, and hundreds of millions suffer the horrors of heathenism or of Islam, the burden of proof lies upon you to show that the circumstances in which God has placed you were meant by Him to keep you out of the foreign field." The missionary has the joy of knowing that he is placing his life where the need is the greatest and the workers fewest, not where it will be obscured by the brilliance of countless other lights, but in the dark places of the earth where it will shine out the brightest and count for the most. He also has the joy of a task not only big enough to command all that he is, but all that Christ can make him. Let superintendents and teachers fire their boys and girls with a holy ambition to invest their lives so as to make them count not simply thirty or sixty, but a hundred-fold, for the coming of the kingdom.

Every Sunday School should keep itself in vital touch with the foreign field by having its own missionary, toward whose support it contributes and whose letters from abroad and visits when on furlough would be living links between the school and the field. In a Scotch Sunday School, the superintendent one Sunday read a letter from a missionary in the Fiji Islands describing how the gospel was changing the hearts of the cannibals. Then he said, "I wonder if there is a boy here who will some day become a missionary of the Lord Jesus and give his life to carrying the gospel to cannibals?" In a class of boys just in front of him sat Jimmie Chalmers, twelve years old. Then and there the seed was planted, the resolve was made. Deep down in his heart, "God helping me, I will," said Jimmie, and became, though some careless years intervened, the apostle of the Papuan Gulf, whom Robert Louis Stevenson loved with a passionate admiration, esteeming him one of the two greatest men of modern times and writing to him, "If I had known you when I was a boy, how different my life would have been!" Superintendent, why should not your boys know Chalmers, and your school send out another like him?

What Young People Can Do.

Boundless are the possibilities of youth, and equally great the incentives to fidelity of those who labor in this the most fertile of all fields. The missionary movement in America, represented today by 13,000 foreign missionaries and an annual contribution of $38,000,000—by whom was it started? By bishops? By college presidents? By Church assemblies, or great ecclesiastical leaders? No; by the people. Not to the wise, the learned, or the mighty came the vision of America going forth to the spiritual conquest of the world, but to a few college boys, Samuel J. Mills and his four friends, in that memorable summer of 1806 as they knelt in prayer while the storm raged around their haystack shelter. Offering themselves for the foreign field, and then by faith and zeal stirring the Church to send them, they opened a new and glorious chapter in the history of the kingdom.

Not to the old or the middle-aged, but to the young, is given the divine promise that they "shall see visions." If our young people today are not catching fresh visions, and opening new eras of world conquest for Christ, it is for our Sunday School leaders, on their knees, to inquire, "Search us and our work, O God, and show us the reason why."

MARRIAGES

TURK—VEAZEY.

A wedding of unusual interest took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Veazey, near Tifton, Ga., on the evening of May 24, 1929, at 8:30 o'clock, when their daughter Marie became the bride of Mr. Arthur L. Turk. The ceremony took place in the flower garden, which was lighted with gas lanterns, just as the pale moon was ascending the eastern horizon. The ring ceremony was used. Rev. G. H. Veazey, Roanoke, Ala., the bride's uncle, officiated.

The bride is a graduate of Piedmont Junior College, Wadley, Ala., and has taught successfully in her home school for two years. She is a member of Vanceville Christian Church. The groom is a clerk in the Hotel Myon, in his home town, Tifton, Ga. He is a member of the Methodist Church.

The appreciation of these two young people was manifested by a great host of friends who were present and presented many valuable presents. Their many friends wish for them a long, happy life.

RELIGION AND REST.—

One cannot but wonder at times whether or not our religion is bringing to us the rest which the Master intended for us to enjoy. It is surprising how much the Bible has to say about rest. And there is nothing that the people of this modern age so urgently need. One of the first lessons that we need to learn is that cessation of activity does not always mean rest. Rest has more largely to do with the mental and spiritual than it does with the physical. There are times when rest can be found only in activity. There are multitudes of inactive people who would find relief for their weariness should there be opened up for them a channel of activity that promised to change the conditions that have become so wearying to the soul.

It would be most interesting if we might have testimonials from those who attend the worship services of our Churches, as to whether or not they are receiving spiritual refreshing from the program of worship. It might be of interest to know whether those who are making our worship programs are formulating them with the end in view that they may bring rest to tired souls. The sort of rest which is desired can come only with an increasing faith in the goodness, love and power of God. Worship should serve to bring to the soul a consciousness of God's presence, a realization of His willingness to help, and to inspire in the worshiper that faith which will cause a yielding of the self to God's hands.

All that man has learned of the working of the laws of this natural universe has not removed the consciousness of the responsibility which rests upon his shoulders, nor diminished his sense of the need of help in the bearing of his burdens. It is just such a promise of help which religion offers; and it is the province of worship to bring this help to bear upon the human heart. There are times when it may seem that it is the chief work of the Church to bring to the attention of men the work that needs to be done. But of what use is a realization of the work to be done unless there be also a realization of the power by which it is to be accomplished. Rest does not necessarily mean a laying down of the burden. Tired soldiers, on a long, weary march, frequently stop by the roadside and, without unslinging the pack, rest its weight upon some friendly bank, while strength is being renewed to carry it on. Many are the souls who need to hear the Master say: "Come ye apart, and rest awhile."

MODERNISM'S INDICTMENT.—

In a recent sermon, Dr. Bernard Bell made the following criticism of modernism: "Modernism has served its purpose and is no longer modern. It freed us from fustian, but it left us cold." It was inevitable that there should come such an intellectual movement as we know under the name of modernism. Within the past century there has been brought to light a vast store of information that has a direct bearing upon the interpretation of the Bible. The archeologist has been digging amid the ruins of the ancient world and has discovered many things that have a bearing upon the way we regard the Bible, which was in a sense the product of the age and civilization amid which it was produced. The student of philology has been digging ever deeper into the problems which throw light upon the meaning of the Book. The modern development of scientific knowledge, and the scientific attitude toward the problems of life made it absolutely impossible to ignore their relationship to the religious questions of life. The development of mediums of communication that has brought the isolated community of the past into acute consciousness of its relationship to the rest of the world has made imperative a reevaluation of the questions of ethics. All these things made it impossible to go on in the old way. It was as necessary that there be a restatement of religious convictions in the light of modern thought, as it was for Christ to reinterpret the morality of the Mosaic dispensation.

But as Dr. Bell says, the trouble with it is that it has left us cold. This does not mean that the intellectual attitude was wrong. It means that, in the zeal for things intellectual, these things which kindle the heart with love and fire the soul with moral enthusiasm have been lost sight of. There have been, and are, individuals who manifest the keenest intellectual acumen and profound religious emotion and zeal. Philosophic insight and boundless love are by no means antagonistic. If, however, the development of the mind has run ahead of the development of the heart, then it is in order to give one's self to a more intensive cultivation of the affairs of the heart.

There is already evidence that religious leaders are turning their thought to the things which stir the hearts of men and women and presenting that which will awaken a sense of devotion in the soul. It is not only those who write the books who have been aiming too largely at the heads of those whom they would influence. Much that goes into the average program of worship is directed at the head rather than at the heart. And the same is true many times of the work of the Sunday School. Perhaps the teacher is more tempted than any one else to aim at the head. But it is not simply the head, but the whole man that we are trying to reach and win for the Christ.

LIMITATIONS OF CHURCH UNION.—

The religious atmosphere is becoming electric with enthusiasm for Church union. In the light of present conditions, such a movement offers possibilities of untold development. One cannot but wonder from whence has come this remarkable change in the attitude of the different denominational connections toward each other. The desire for a wider union has been long recognized from the theoretical side; but the present wholesale consideration of the question has doubtless been born through the contact established in the various interdenominational and international conventions and councils that have been held in recent years. As representatives from the various religious bodies have met together, there has come that broad understanding and sympathy, such as comes to the world traveler. If Church union becomes effective on a wide scale there will doubtless arise such an enthusiasm and such a vision of the possibilities of the kingdom as have as yet been vouchsafed to a few rare souls.

But we need to remind ourselves that, as important as union is, it is but means to an end. Should all the denominations be willing to surrender their denominational peculiarities and contentions; should they develop a wide tolerance for the beliefs and convictions of others; and should they unite upon a broad basis of fellowship and co-operation, the big task would still lie ahead. I believe a united Protestantism could achieve such victories as would now seem to us to be beyond our fondest dreams. Should Church union, as it is now contemplated, become an established fact, it is going to demand a faith, a love, and a spirit of self-sacrifice such as has not yet been manifested. To a united Christendom, tremendous tasks will become not only a possibility but an imperative.

When the allies surrendered their distrusts and their jealousies and united the forces under one supreme command, it did not mean that danger, difficulty and sacrifice were at an end. It meant rather that battles were to be launched on a scale that dwarfed former operations, and called for a daring and courage that would stop at no sacrifice, however great. Unless the Christian world is prepared to hold a more sublime faith, to cherish a deeper loyalty, and to manifest a nobler self-sacrifice, it would better renounce forever all thought and talk of union. At the present time we are finding a comfortable refuge behind the smallness of our numbers. We are finding great comfort in the comparison of what our denomination is doing with achievements of some other denomination. But should the Christian world ever become united, there will then be no excuse whatever for our bungling inefficiency nor for the meagerness of our undertakings. We must then either take the world for our Christ or confess our unworthiness of the trust which He has imposed in us. There is need not only that we pray for the union of Christ's followers, but that we pray that when union shall come that we be found worthy of our opportunity.

NOTES-PERSONALS

One often wonders why there is so much suffering and tribulation in the world, and yet the inspired writer of Acts 15:22 said: "We must, through much tribulation, enter into the kingdom of God."

A correspondent writes: "We have had the gospel, but it seems that we have not fully accepted it, or we would do something for those who have it not." Judged by that standard, we wonder if there are not a few of us who have not accepted the gospel in its fullness, since we make little, if any, effort to share its blessings and benefits with others.

Mrs. J. W. Patton and Mrs. W. M. Jay were at Berea Church (Alamance) Sunday, June 23rd, and organized a Woman's Missionary Society. The officers are Mrs. J. T. Shepherd, R. 1, Elon College, president; Mrs. Margaret Pritchette, vice-president; Mrs. Lynn Kernodle, secretary-treasurer. Here is wishing the newly elected organization a long, happy and successful career.

From the Greensboro Daily News, June 27th: "Sanford—Announcement is made that on Sunday, June 30th, home-coming day will be observed at Shallow Well Christian Church, four miles east of Sanford. An all-day service, with an interesting program, has been arranged. At the noon hour a dinner will be served on the grounds. Shallow Well Church is one of the most prominent Churches in the Christian denomination in this section of the State."

Rev. Albert Godley, superintendent of the International Purity Association, calls attention to a very helpful booklet, "When Character is Lost, All is Lost," written by the late Rev. J. F. Burnett, D. D. Bro. Godley has arranged that any pastor or individual so desiring may secure twenty-four of these booklets, postpaid, for $1.00. The booklet is a talk to young men by the late Dr. J. F. Burnett of beloved memory. In our columns elsewhere we are printing the story from Dr. Burnett, which forms the first part and the foundation of his booklet.

Deacon Jesse Langston, well past his fourscore years and ten, passed from labor to reward from his home at Auburn, N. C., Wednesday P. M., June 26th. Funeral services were held, both from his own Church at Auburn and the Church of his young manhood, Catawba Springs, in whose cemetery his body was interred Friday, June 28th, services being conducted by Rev. J. E. Franks and J. O. Atkinson, assisted by Revs. J. A. Denton and D. M. Spence. Large audiences gathered to pay tribute of respect to the going away of this true and faithful soldier of the cross. An appropriate sketch will appear in next week's SUN.

The following item of interest is taken from the Greensboro Daily News, June 27th: "Fall River, Mass.—Rev. H. Russell Clem, pastor of the First Christian Church of this city and formally pastor of the Christian Church at Greensboro, N. C., has resigned his pastorate here, effective October 1st. Rev. Mr. Clem, who came here six years ago from Greensboro, is president of the Rhode Island and Massachusetts Christian Conference, pastor of the North Portsmouth, R. I., Christian Church, hospital chaplain for the Protestant Church here, and a member of the executive board of the conference's summer school at Craigville, Mass. No announcement is made of his future plans."

Rev. W. P. Minton, D. D., writes in the Herald of Gospel Liberty this item of interest for SUN readers: "Dr. Fry plans to sail from Seattle September 4th on the 'Mishima Maru,' and will reach Yokohama September 20th. Miss Crew is to leave San Francisco August 28th on the 'Siberia Maru,' and will reach Yokohama September 13th. Those wishing to send steamer letters to either of these missionaries can do so by addressing them as follows: Rev. E. C. Fry, D. D., care N. Y. K. S. S. 'Mishima Maru,' sailing September 4th, Seattle, Wash.; Miss Angie Crew, care N. Y. K. S. S. 'Siberia Maru,' sailing August 28th, San Francisco, Calif. We are happy that it is possible to return these workers to their fields of service, for they are badly needed. We have not been able to reduce our deficit as much as we should, but we feel that in spite of it we must get these missionaries back to their tasks."

LANETT, ALA.

On the fourth Sunday in May, we had our dedicatory service, and it was a great day with us here at Lanett Church. We had with us on that occasion Rev. G. D. Hunt, who preached the dedicatory sermon and delighted a large congregation of people with a great message. Rev. H. W. Elder, a former pastor and the one who organized the Church many years ago, led the opening prayer. The pastor read the dedicatory formula, and Rev. H. M. Gray, a former pastor, led the dedicatory prayer.

At the evening service, we began our revival meeting, with Bro. Gray doing the preaching and Bro. J. O. Bolt, the chorister of our Church, directing the music. The congregations were large and the interest good to begin with, and they held up all through the two weeks of meetings. Both the preacher and the singer inspired their hearers with their messages in song and service. And many of our people, we feel, were helped to renew their covenant with God and with the Church. We had seven additions to the Church—five by letter or transfer, and two on profession of faith. May the Lord be praised for all the good done. Pray for us.

J. D. DOLLAR,
Pastor.

PERSONAL REMINISCENCES.

Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN:

Dear Brother,—Please send me a copy of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. It has been years since I have read the paper. I had the privilege a few days ago of passing through Elon College. When my eyes beheld the institution, which is the foundation of the Christian Church, my mind went back to bygone days when I was happy in the service of the Lord, preaching the gospel of Jesus Christ to the best of my ability. And I began to ponder in my mind over some of our great men, such as Revs. L. E. Smith, D. D., G. O. Lankford, D. D., E. M. Carter, and Calvin Collie (who died at Elon more than twenty years ago). I am thinking this morning of the pleasant association that I once enjoyed with Dr. Atkinson, the editor of THE SUN at that time, and Bro. Foster, the superintendent of the Christian Orphanage, and Rev. G. D. Hunt, of Alabama, who licensed and ordained me to the ministry, and of other great men of the Christian Church who are too numerous to mention in this short letter.

I would be pleased to receive a letter from any of my brethren of former years in the ministry and to be remembered in their prayers. I hope while on my way back South I may be able to spend a few hours at Elon College.

Marion, Ind.

THE SUN LETTER.

This letter closes my first year as circulation manager of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. I have done my best to increase the circulation of the paper and get it in more homes—the very thing our Church people ought to have and read, in order to keep in closer touch with the different departments of our denomination. While we have been able to place quite a number of new names on our list, we had to drop off quite a few, and we have not been able to accomplish what we had hoped to do in our first year's work.

We want to thank those who have been so kind to us and stood shoulder to shoulder with us during the year. We hope many more will join THE SUN family of readers during the coming year and help us reach more families in our Church. We again thank you.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Elon College, N. C. Circulation Manager.

It is not so difficult a task to plant new truths as to root out old errors, for there is this paradox in men: they run after that which is new, but are prejudiced in favor of that which is old.

THE BEST OFFERING.

"I will not offer burnt offerings unto the Lord my God of that which cost me nothing."

There swept over a certain Southern State, several years ago, a blizzard, such as had never visited that section before. It caused great distress and famine wherever it touched, and in some places completely demolished homes and schools. In one such town, a mass-meeting was called of the citizens to discuss measures for relief to the suffering. While various citizens were busy discussing what ought to be done, one fellow, a merchant, arose and said, "Mr. Chairman, this is not the time to talk; I move that a committee be appointed to receive and distribute provisions to the poor and unfortunate in our town. I will give one hundred bags of flour." And so an organization was started and the city hall was to be used as a central point for the reception and distribution of provisions.

Returning to his store and giving orders to his drayman to take the flour to the stated place, this man, who was a very public-spirited man, continued to do his best in leading others to fall in line and relieve all who were in need.

Going through the grocery department of his store soon afterwards, he noticed one of his draymen loading some inferior flour upon his wagon. "Where are you going to take that flour?" asked the merchant. "To the city hall," replied the drayman, "for since it is going to be given away, I thought any kind would do." "No, you are not," replied the merchant; "take it off and put the best flour in the store on your dray and take it to the city hall. When I give, I give the best I have."

When God gave, He gave the best He had. Men should give no less. Unto David, the author of our text, He gave His best. David was endowed with a goodly heritage, with wealth, and, most of all, the ever-presence of God. To him He was like a Good Shepherd, making him to lie down in green pastures, leading him beside the still waters, restoring his soul, and ever leading him in the paths of righteousness. He ever led him through the dark valley of shadow of death and was to him as a rod and staff to lean upon during times of human weakness. For his physical welfare and comfort, He had prepared a table before him, with cups filled and running over, and David had the blessed assurance that we may have—that the Great Shepherd will lead us all the days of life and finally we shall dwell in His house forever.

So good was God unto David that when he was offered an opportunity, by Araunah, to make an offering unto the Lord of things which were given him and easily obtained, he declared in the words of our text: "I will not offer burnt offerings unto the Lord my God of that which cost me nothing."

David was insulted when this worthy king insisted that he give God the offerings that were easily obtained. And David said, I will not, but I will buy offerings of thee at a price, for I will not offer burnt offerings or anything else unto my God that cost me nothing. "So David bought the threshing flour and the oxen for fifty shekels of silver and built an altar there unto the Lord and offered burnt offerings and peace offerings . . . so that the Lord was entreated and removed the plague forever from the land." The Lord was willing to this and more for the king who openly offered to Him the best. God will do as much for us as He did for David.

My mother use to tell me about the pride my grandfather use to take in giving the governor of the State the best watermelon of the patch. Last year, a Virginia farmer sent the President of the United States the best turkey on the farm for his Christmas dinner. If, then, we give our best oftentimes to great men, how much more ought we to give our best to God. Too often we make offerings unto Him that cost us nothing. We are very far remote from Him because we do not follow His plan of giving the best. The ancient Jew used to give the first fruits to God as his best offering. We give the left-overs.

We give the smallest coins to the Lord and use the largest ones for self. We give a few minutes to Him and use the hours for selfish gain. In brief, we do not offer unto God offerings that cost. I recall a family who came to me, their pastor, and said, "We have an old cook stove and kitchen cabinet in our barn that came out of our house when we bought new ones. If you want these for the Church, send up and get them." Was that an offering unto the Lord that cost? Far from it—it was the left-over, and was good enough for God's house, even though it was not an offering good enough for any of the neighbors.

David was willing to offer unto the Lord the best of his ability and talent. He, therefore, became a great musician. He played for King Saul. He wrote beautiful psalms of praise. These abilities he acquired because he was willing to offer unto God the best of his talents. From Him he withheld nothing. God gave man every talent he possesses. If he does not develop them, it is because he does not offer God a chance to use them. The parable of the talents illustrates this principle very clearly. There are few people in the world who ever consecrate their talents in full to God. To do so would be an offering that would cost sacrifice and effort. Paul said, "Whatever you do, do all to the glory of God."

There are some Christian men who display remarkable ability and excellent judgment in their own business affairs, but in the Church they allow some very foolish transactions to take place. They allow the Church to be run on a very unbusiness-like plan, all because they are not willing to make offerings of time and talent to God that costs them nothing. The unused and second-grade talents of the Church are the glory of the devil and the grief of God. There is something for every one to do in God's great kingdom. Regardless of how limited one's talents may be, there is a place for an offering of the best of them unto the Lord.

I gave my life for thee, my precious blood I shed,
That thou might ransomst be, and quickened from the dead.

I gave, I gave, my life for thee; what hast thou given for me.

I've suffered much for thee—more than thy tongue can tell;

Of bitterest agony, to rescue thee from hell.

I've borne, I've borne it all for thee; what hast thou borne for me?

And I have brought to thee, down from my home above,

Salvation full and free, my pardon and my love.
I bring, I bring rich gifts to thee; what hast thou brought to me?

Each one of us ought to make a self-analysis of our lives and endeavor to discover what we are keeping back from God in the way of an offering that costs. Let us ask, what am I doing that is valueless? What am I doing that does not contribute to the progress of the kingdom? In what do I engage that lessens my power of influence? Do I deprive God of the use of my purse, my talents, my time, or my life? If so, won't you say with David that from this time onward "I will not make an offering unto the Lord my God of that which cost me nothing."

I will offer unto Him an offering of the best of my time; I will not say, I do not have time. There are numerous professing Christians who tell their pastors they do not have time to attend Church conferences, teachers' councils, etc., and then go straight and attend a movie show or bridge party the same night. These haven't given God their best offering of time. They are unable to give more time to Him than they should, because they have not planned a schedule of daily duties. We always find time to do the things we want to do, and we do them. Christians must learn the fine art of spending less time on minor and insignificant matters and more time on things worth while. Time to pray is time well spent. Time spent in communion with God—is an offering that costs. Let us pay the price and give God first place on our schedule. One of the most sincere Christian men Elon ever produced is a man who learned to give God an offering of his best time each day. He arose an hour each morning before the other men in our dormitory, and for sixty minutes communed with God.

Think of us saying as we do by our actions:

"No time to pray.

Yet who is so fraught with earthly care
As not to give an humble prayer
Some part of the day.

"No time to pray

'Mid each day's dangers, what a retreat
More needful than that at the mercy seat?
All of us need to take time to pray.

"No time to pray.

Must care and business urgent call
So press us as to take it all?
Each passing day.

"What thought is more drear

Than that our Lord His face should hide
And say, through all of life's swelling tide,
I had no time to hear?"

Indeed God has a claim on man's time and the wasting of it is one of the most prevalent and deepest of sins. The devil always finds some mischief for idle hands to do. If all the wasted time were placed before us, we would be startled. Let us, therefore, resolve to give God the best of our offerings of time by offering unto Him time that really costs.

"Give of your best to the Master: give Him first place in your heart;
Give Him first place in your service, consecrate every part.

Give, and to you shall be given; God His beloved Son gave.
Gratefully seeking to serve Him, give Him the best that you have.

"Give of your best to the Master: naught else is worthy His love.

He gave Himself for your ransom, gave up His glory above;
Laid down Himself without murmur, you from sin's ruin to save.
Give Him your heart's adoration, give Him the best that you have."

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE CAP FITS OTHERS.

It is a widely known fact that our Presbyterian brethren have been having their "wrangles" between "fundamentalists" and "modernists." The Princeton Theological Seminary has been the hotbed of the controversy, and no little feeling has been developed there between the so-called modernists and fundamentalists. Dr. W. C. Thompson, president-emeritus of Ohio State University, was chairman of a committee to study the matter at Princeton and elsewhere. In presenting his report to the Presbyterian General Assembly, Dr. Thompson told of hearing a wrangle of alumni lasting into the night at Princeton over the seminary controversy, and then declared his parting injunction to the group was "What is needed here at this seminary more than anything else is an old-fashion prayer meeting."

Somehow, one feels that Dr. Thompson was speaking for the Church at large as well as of a need at a specific seminary. The balance wheel of the Church is a good, spiritual prayer meeting. The great difficulty, however, is not in recognizing the need, but in supplying that need and having "a good, old-fashioned prayer meeting." We need the prayer meeting, and we need it very seriously, but with our modern methods of seeking "immediate results and greatest efficiency," we find it growing increasingly difficult to maintain a genuine and real old-fashioned prayer meeting. On this account, we should redouble our efforts to have and maintain it.

Commenting on the trouble pointed out by Dr. Thompson, the Christian-Evangelist gets at the heart of the matter when it says: "One trouble today is that we are trying to run the Church by committees and "business methods." Worldly wisdom of that kind falls short unless it is illumined by the divine light which comes through prayer." Then the same authority ventures to say: "That one genuine prayer meeting in a Church or convention will bring more progress than many sets of resolutions and meetings of committees."

We may think that a good prayer meeting is a slow, powerless, inefficient, worn-out sort of a thing, but nothing could be farther of the mark. The simple truth is that the wrangles, the debates, the discussions going on today in the Church, to the hurt and the humiliation of the Church, could be settled, and settled right, by resorting to prayer—a real, genuine, spiritual prayer meeting. If your Church and the brethren and sisters are divided, and there is unholy and acrimonious debate and controversy, we advise a resort to the good, old-fashioned prayer meeting. Surely the cap that Dr. Thompson offers to the controversialists at Princeton fits many another situation throughout the Church today. Let the Church labor with diligence to maintain a steady, constant, genuine, spiritual prayer meeting. It will save many a heartache and prevent many a silly and senseless wrangle.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY BOARD IN SESSION.

The women of the Mission Board of the Southern Christian Convention met in regular annual session at Franklin, Va., Wednesday, June 26th. The members of the Board are Mrs. J. A. Williams, president, Franklin, Va.; Mrs. C. H. Rowland, vice-president, Greensboro, N. C.; Mrs. H. S. Hardcastle, treasurer, Suffolk, Va.; Miss Margaret Alston, recording secretary, Henderson, N. C.; Mrs. E. L. Beale, corresponding secretary, Franklin, Va.; Mrs. R. T. Bradford, superintendent young people and Willing Workers, Suffolk, Va., R. 5; Mrs. I. W. Johnson, superintendent cradle roll, Suffolk, Va.; Mrs. H. C. Caviness, superintendent of literature, Portsmouth, Va.; Mrs. W. M. Jay, editor, Elon College, N. C.; Mrs. M. J. W. White, superintendent of life memberships and memorials, Norfolk, Va.

All members of the Board were present except Mrs. Rowland and Mrs. Jay. By request of the Board, the following presidents of the woman's conferences were also present: Mrs. M. L. Bryant, of the Eastern Virginia Woman's Conference; Mrs. W. M. Melton, of the Alabama Woman's Conference; Mrs. J. T. Roquemore, of the Georgia and Alabama Woman's Conference; also Dr. L. E. Smith, President of the Southern Christian Convention, and J. O. Atkinson, Mission Secretary.

The reports from the various officers of the Board were practical and provoked discussion as to the duties and work of the various departments. The officers of this Board are finding their way, by study and experience, to the handling and the solution of the problems that confront them in their common task. There are five women's conferences in all, and three of these were represented by their presidents, who not only brought reports from the work of their several conferences but were seeking information to carry back to their conferences. The day, for the most part, was spent in a free, frank and open discussion of the task before them, and the best means and methods of carrying forward the work entrusted to them. The report of the treasurer is given elsewhere, and shows that, including a balance of something over $600 brought over from last June, there had been collected something over $13,000. This shows a healthy and steady growth on the part of the women and manifests an increasing interest in the missionary enterprise.

Their money is divided about equally between home work and foreign work, the women themselves saying to what purposes their funds shall go. For the past five years, the major portion of their home mission special went to Richmond, but the period for which this pledge was made now being fulfilled, it was voted by the Board to await investigation and recommendation for the major portion of this special the coming year. It was voted, if certain conditions are fulfilled, to make an annual contribution for the home mission special of $2,500 per year to the United Church, of Raleigh, one condition being that cash and bankable pledges are on hand before this appropriation begins, showing that the entire indebtedness of the United States will be discharged in the period mentioned. The women voted to continue their assistance in the work in Carroll County, Va., and if a new point is found at which to begin work, after proper investigation and recommendation by the General Board, special help will be given such a point. Foreign mission specials and foreign mission contributions are to continue as for the past year.

It was decided to furnish a program for women's societies and young people's societies through THE CHRISTIAN SUN each month, and the president already has the promise that such a program will be presented. A committee was created whose business it will be to try to inform the societies when they are doing missionary work and when they are contributing missionary money, and, on the other hand, when they are doing charity and benevolent work and contributing to local needs and purposes which, while good in themselves, are not missionary.

Plans were discussed and adopted looking to a more inclusive missionary work among the young people. It is difficult to keep young people's missionary societies alive and active because the membership is transient, many members going off to school or to teach school, or absenting themselves for months from their home base. Then, in some Churches, it is impossible to find a leader to take the work who is permanent and will keep up the permanent propaganda. It was, therefore, decided by the Board to try to secure in each Sunday School or Christian Endeavor Society or some group of young people meetings and programs periodically which are missionary both in study and in giving. When there is in a Sunday School a class of young people with no young people's missionary society in their Church, the plan looks to securing the consent of such a class to put on a missionary program at least once a month as a part of the study and work of the class.

It was brought out that all the conferences last year reached their goals except the North Carolina Conference, which lacked only a few dollars. The conference presidents pledged their efforts to do all in their power this year to get all the conferences to reach the full quota and achieve their goals.

To the regret of all, Mrs. J. A. Williams, the president, was too weak from recent illness to preside over the meeting of the body, and at her request, Dr. L. E. Smith presided with that same grace and dignity with which he presides over the Southern Christian Convention, of which he is the worthy and capable President.

It was a great day, and it was felt by all present that, growing out of the discussions and the plans adopted, there will come even a bigger and better program for our women in the marvelous work they are doing.

WHERE THE SPIRIT OF LIBERTY IS.

One might as well call attention to passing events as they pass, and draw lessons of life and learning from current, as well as from ancient issues. In his "My Impressions of Our Convention," Dr. Alexander gives a quotation from 2 Cor. 3:17: "Where the spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty." If we ever witnessed a demonstration of this, it was during the Convention about which Dr. Alexander writes. It was no accident that Bro. Truitt, the president, delivered his annual message on "Power," reaching his climax, after showing the origin and source of physical, mental and spiritual power, in the declaration that "the greatest of these is spiritual power." Bro. Truitt spoke out of his heart and out of the experience of close contact with the power he was telling us about. And certainly it was no accident, following that address, that throughout the Convention every speaker seemed to have wonderful liberty of speech. No man could have given to the speakers the power they demonstrated, nor the liberty that was in evidence in their utterances. "Where the spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty." This is true in the home. Wherever in any home one finds the spirit of the Lord, the children are not cramped and frightened. They have liberty and access and gladness, joy of responsibility, the freedom and the power of expression. Wherever there is a Sunday School in which the spirit of the Lord is in evidence, one will find liberty of activity as well as initiative and zeal on the part of teachers and officers. In any school or group where the spirit of the Lord is, there is always an unseen, a mysterious and a mighty power that expresses itself in liberty. It was said by none other than by Bro. Truitt, of the Convention, that sometimes we organize our institutions, schools and Churches to death, and there was little room for individual initiative. Organization takes the place of liberty and the spirit of the Lord is crowded out.

We should bear in mind that the object of every organized effort, group and institution, is to develop and not to suppress personality, and to give play for individual initiative and personal pursuit and approach. Where the spirit of the Lord is, this end is reached, and there is liberty; but when the spirit of the Lord is absent, however effectual the organization is, and however complete the plans, there is not and cannot be liberty. No individual can do his best thinking and put forth his best effort, and come to his highest usefulness and service without liberty, that liberty which is the gift and the price of the presence of the Lord.

PROHIBITION AND THE STOCK MARKET.

The writer has for many years been an ardent admirer of Bishop James Cannon, Jr. As a native Virginian, my heart rejoiced in his leadership in that State for prohibition. Those who criticised the Bishop for entering into politics at that time were unwise in the writer's judgment, because prohibition was not a partisan issue then. It was championed by able men and women in both parties. It was a moral issue, to be achieved only by political measures. The bishop's efforts were Herculean in that critical moment in the life of the State of Virginia, and we all honor him for it.

The writer could not agree with the bishop last year when he undertook to throw the influence of the Church into a partisan prohibition fight. He certainly cannot agree with him now, when he undertakes to prolong that fight through a political campaign which can only end in bitterness and animosity. He is making an attack upon a political party, an act which is partisan. A moral issue is more than a moral issue when it becomes partisan.

But the writer regrets most of all that Bishop Cannon has gone into the stock market. It is a pity when a prelate of the Church allows the prestige of his great office to be connected with such practices in the financial world; practices which not a few high-minded laymen refuse to have part in. It is true that it is not illegal to play the stock market, but it does seem to be a direct violation of a generally accepted economic principle—that men should be paid according to their services, and not according to their luck. It is a species of gambling, and as such it is a pity that Bishop Cannon has taken part in it.

MINISTERIAL EDUCATION.

Paul did little in Athens; much more in Corinth. The gospel takes root in a commercial city better than a classic city. Skepticism thrives more in universities than in factories. "Pride goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall" (Prov. 16:18). The hope of the world is not in higher learning, but in the faith of the heart. Ministerial education is not only scholastic, but personal obedience to God. Jesus did not say, "go to the great schools," but "learn of me." The whole scheme of Revelation is a personal relation—a personal God, and personal men and women. The New Testament question is not "have you had scholastic training? have you read many books? are you expert in dialectics?" but "have you received the Holy Ghost"? Jesus said in the synagogue in Nazareth: "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because He hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; He hath sent me to heal the broken-hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, to preach the acceptable year of the Lord" (Luke 4:18-19). Spurgeon raises this question: "Has the gospel been spread to any great extent by men of high literary power?" The learned men of Jerusalem could not understand the results of the early preaching as the preachers were unlearned men. Paul says that he did not preach in the wisdom of words, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power.

The same spirit that qualifies men to preach, inclines them to the ministry. This is not intended to undervalue learning, but to place the emphasis of ministerial education where it rightly belongs—upon the Holy Spirit and the Word of God. Consider four points in ministerial education:

1. Spiritual education. Regeneration, divine call, and self-surrender. Paul was first converted, then called, and then sent. The apostles had this same spiritual initiation into the ministry. Personal contact with Jesus Christ, whether by a miraculous change, as Paul, or a simple, follow me, as in the case of Matthew, must bring the man into spiritual fellowship with the Saviour of men. The call is an inward conviction, and full surrender is essential.

2. Personal education. Character, fitness, surrender enter into personal education. Character is like a fortune—it must be built. The minister needs to do constructive work in personal character-building. Fitness embraces capacity to handle the word of God and the people. If such gifts are not inherent, they must be cultivated. Absolute surrender to the work is one of the most difficult lessons to learn.

3. Mental education. Academic education should be erected upon a good spiritual and personal foundation. The mind is easily diverted from God and the gospel. The ministerial relation is like the material relation, without preferences, or prejudices, with bigger heart than head. The least and the greatest, the most ignorant and the wisest, the poorest and the richest, the youngest and the oldest, should share alike in his sympathy and service. He must not expect too much from others. He should be debtor to all men and not to some men.

4. Practical education. Organic, heroic, stay-at-it. There is more to be done than preaching. The congregation should be organized into active groups in such a way that they will do the work themselves. Tactful organization puts the work on a sound and permanent basis. The hero remains in the story all the way through. The minister must not let discouragement rob him of his faith in God, the gospel, and the people.

PIEDMONT JUNIOR SCHOOL OF METHODS.

The School of Christian Education for Piedmont Junior College will begin Sunday evening, July 7th, at 8 o'clock, with a sermon by Dr. Neil McQuarrie, and will continue through the following week. A splendid program has been arranged by Mr. Lester and Miss Coghill which bids fair to be the best yet. At the close of the splendid session last year, one left declaring that they had been wonderfully blessed and had gained much ability and enthusiasm to go back to their Churches to do more and better work. To those of you who were present at the last session, we hope that you have not forgotten the praise you gave the school and your determination to bring some one with you to the next session. We shall be very much disappointed if you fail to come and to help to get others to come, for there is much in store for you in the splendid program that has been arranged, and your presence will be so much missed.

Knowing the great need of such school in our midst, and realizing the benefit that it has been already to us, makes it hard to find expression sufficient to let the board know our appreciation for the sacrifice it is making to give this school to us each year. The instruction is of the highest type and from some of the best people to be found, and we do not need to pass it up as something that does not demand the fullest interest of all the ministers and their Churches in our section. Opportunities of this kind do not come our way often and we are seriously detaining the progress of our Churches when we fail to be represented. When you read this, it will be almost time for the school to begin, and if we have not already done so, let us become vitally concerned about our Master's business and make plans to be present at some of these meetings if it is not possible to be present at all of them.

The committee on entertainment has agreed to ask the Churches to make such contribution as they can and offer two delegates from each Church free board for the week. Board for others has been placed at the small sum of $4.00 for the week, and the registration fee is $1.00, making a total cost of only $5.00. Let me urge that you take $5.00 and go to Piedmont Junior College and get a real profitable, soul-stirring vacation that you will always be glad you have had. We are expecting to meet you there. Please do not disappoint us.

W. C. EDGE,
President.

WADLEY, ALA.

Dear Editor:

Please say to your readers in Georgia and Alabama that we are expecting to see them at Wadley on July 7th in attendance upon the summer school at Piedmont Junior College. We are expecting a representation from every Church and Sunday School in the two Conferences. We mean to make this the best summer school ever held here, and we especially invite our Congregational friends to be with us. We are to have two teachers from that Church. Entertainment will be as last year. Matriculation fee will be $1.00 per scholar, and each Church is asked to send $1.00 to aid in securing labor to assist in cooking and other work, and each Church or community will be called upon to give vegetables and such other foods as they can spare to help in providing food for the group. We are not asking the good women of Wadley to do it all.

Now, we want you to meet us at the summer school. Come, please, and be sure to send your pastor. He needs the inspiration, he needs the information. Just a little effort from all interested parties will carry the program over the top.

We are depending on you.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Much is written in these days about the city and the country, and usually it gives more importance to the city than the country. Both are necessary in the progress of civilization, but they are interdependent and deserve equal rating. If either could exist without the other, it would be the country. The country is more independent than the city. The city could not exist without the country, though the country could exist without the city. The city's three meals a day are produced in the country. The coal that furnishes heat comes from the country. The electricity that lights the city is produced by the water power in the country. Most of the goods in the city stores were shipped in from the country. The bricks, wood, and stone in the buildings came from the country. Most of the wealth of the cities was produced in the country.

What is true of material products is true of men. A large part of city population was born in the country. It is estimated that city population fades out in six generations. The country is the place for babies and the place that produces men. Men are produced in the country and move to the city. The country is the place to bring up men, and the city is the place to market them. The country is the place to produce, and the city is the place to market all products; and that is as true of men as it is of farm products. Many, if not most, of the great men in the cities were born in the country, and most of the rich men of the cities long for a country home. This is seen in the increase of suburban homes. The country is the natural habitation of man; the city is his artificial home. It is unfortunate that city residents and country residents are both responsible for the feeling that country people are lower in grade than city people. It takes both to complete society, and equal respect should bind them together.

The city has more conveniences, more luxuries, more opportunities for evil as well as good; but the country has more reality, more time for thought and more aspiration than the city. There is more future to the country children than to the city-born. Those brought up in the city see everything and have everything from childhood; those brought up in the country have something to look forward to all the way up from the cradle to Congress. It is that hunger for the new, the unattained that keeps the imagination active and the effort on the upgrade. The lesson has the more energy is displayed in striving after the positions that demand men. When great business wants new help they get it from the country. Good roads and schools, automobiles and machinery have removed, in some measure, the differences that once existed between city and country people. These new conditions have robbed the country of the home as it once existed. It might be said the country is being cityfied, but that does not mean that home life has improved. Country people and city people are more on equality than ever before.

W. W. STALEY.

ELON LETTER.

Colleges have undergone development and differentiations of function in keeping with the ideals of democracy. The modern college is a far different institution from the original Harvard of 1636. John Harvard would not recognize the institution which bears his name should he return to the campus at Cambridge at this time.

This is no criticism of the college, but rather the highest praise that can be bestowed upon it. It signifies that the college is responsive to the enlarging demands of life. In the midst of the changes that have come to the American college, I think we may, with confidence, assume that there has also been progress.

This is not the place to enter into any detailed discussion of the characteristics of American democracy. It may be safely said, however, that one element of the American way of doing things is to organize. Whenever any piece of work needs to be accomplished, the American immediately thinks of an organization to give effectiveness and to yield efficiency.

Accordingly, we find Prof. Maverick, of Harvard, saying: "Organization is necessary, as the instructors are to discharge this duty (of counseling) most effectively." And, likewise, we find the personnel department of Northwestern University saying: "Personnel work is organization work."

H. J. Doermann, in "The Orientation of College Freshman," showing the inadequacy and inefficiency of the current methods of personnel work in college, raises this question: Can there be effective guidance without organizing a personnel service? And answers it as follows:

"The answer is that there cannot be. Uncoordinated guidance is neither adequate nor effective. The student's problems are many; they are readily classifiable, but they are not capable of standardized solutions. Each individual problem must be seen, both by the student and by the counselor, in perspective. A thorough knowledge of the student must be taken into account in meeting every situation; if the advisory system is uncoordinated, vital considerations will frequently be overlooked. It must be the business of some one in the college to see that the student is adequately known and understood. This does not mean that teachers and other officers have less responsibility for becoming better acquainted with their students, nor does it mean that they should discontinue giving advice when it is sought; but it does mean that there must be some agency in the college where as nearly a complete picture as it is possible to obtain is available for the purpose of guidance. Moreover, an adequate and truthful mental and emotional photograph at one time may be a caricature at a later date. Sensitiveness and alertness to this ever-changing complexion of the most vital element—the student—in personnel work cannot be left to a system lacking in unity. The orientation of the college student, in spite of its complexity, is a coherent undertaking; it cannot be left to incoherent direction."

In the original American college, with its few students, the three departments which are now generally recognized as necessary for the proper conduct of higher education had not been differentiated. The president of such an institution was not only responsible administratively for finance, instruction, and student welfare, but personally as well. The rapid growth in attendance on American colleges and universities has made it necessary that these functions be differentiated and departmentally organized, though responsible to the president as the chief executive officer, or to one of his staff officers, or to some department.

This, however, must not be taken as meaning that the organization in each of these three departments should be of the same type. Three types of organizations are recognized in the field of personnel administration. Scott and Clothier, in their book entitled "Personnel Management," discuss these types of organization at length. They say: "Personnel administration is not and cannot be a departmentalized function. . . . The personnel department is essentially a line-and-staff department.

"In the straight-line organization, authority flows from the president or head of the concern through his lieutenants, departmentally, to the department heads, group heads, foreman, and lastly to the rank and file workers. . . .

"In the straight-staff organization, on the other hand, authority flows from the president, functionally, to the department heads. . . .

"The third type, the line-and-staff organization, contains the principles of each of these and enjoys certain of the advantages of both. It has as a skeleton the straight-line organization, but expert staff officers exist to give the line executives specialized advice and assistance in the performance of those duties outside their own fields for which they are not especially fitted."

There can be no question that personnel work is to be organized after some fashion in American colleges in the future.

W. A. HARPER.

DANVILLE, VA.

The second quarterly meeting of the membership of the Third Avenue Christian Church was held recently at the Church, with a large attendance. Among the business taken up at the meeting was the annual election of officers of the Sunday School. Ellis Jones was named superintendent; P. H. Ricketts, mission superintendent; Miss Wirtle Herndon, secretary; A. W. Haraway, treasurer; J. W. Dixon, choir leader, and Mrs. Gladys Barker, organist.

The reports of the committees of the Church were read, and showed that the Church is in good financial condition. At the meeting, the Ladies' Aid Society presented a large bulletin-board to the Church, and the brotherhood, the men's organization of the Church, gave to the Church a new set of electric lighting fixtures. A motion was made and adopted to pay the pastor, Rev. M. T. Sorrell, an extra $50 on account of his excellent work with the Church.

The Church has shown a constant growth under the pastorate of Rev. Mr. Sorrell. He came to the Church about two and a half years ago, when the Church had a membership of 125. At present, there are over 250 members in the Church. The Sunday School has also shown constant growth, increasing from about 125 members to over 350 at present. A new Sunday School building of the Church was dedicated on the first Sunday in April, and now the Church has almost outgrown its new quarters, it was reported.

Revival services at the Church will begin at the 11 o'clock service today, with J. C. Cowell, Fayetteville, N. C., evangelist, conducting the meetings. The services will be conducted each afternoon and night for two weeks. Mr. Cowell will make his first appearance at the morning service today, and will also speak at the evening service.

Saith the Pew to the Pulpit: "Speak to me of things eternal. Things temporal I know well enough; but strike thou for me the note of the eternal. Warn me of the temptations which shall assail me, and do not hesitate to pronounce the divine judgments upon sin. Tell me of Him whose death on a cross makes atonement for sin. Open for me the window into heaven and let me behold the land that is very far off. Speak thus to me, and I shall not have listened in vain."—The Presbyterian, of Philadelphia.

The Church is not an end in itself, but a means to an end, and that end is the service of mankind.

UNION PROPOSALS AND BOARD WORK.

By DR. C. E. BURTON.

Naturally there are many ramifications of the proposal for union with the Christians. One of the important aspects is its bearing upon the work in the homeland. Just how are the Christian Churches organized for work in America and what are they doing? The first question can best be answered by giving a list of their organizations.

1. The Board of Missions is responsible for all mission work, home and foreign. Its department of home missions has general management of the home mission and Church extension program.

2. The Board of Christian Education has charge of all interests connected with Christian education, including the direction of a full program of Christian education and training for Christian life and service, reaching from the home through the Churches, communities, schools and colleges, with fraternal co-operation with other denominations. There are certain equities in Christian institutions vested in this board.

3. Board of Publications has general management of the publishing interests of the denomination.

4. The Board of Evangelism and Life Service. With us, this would have been called a commission and corresponds very closely with our commission on evangelism and the devotional life.

5. Board of Finance. This also would be called a commission with us, and has general management of the financial program of the denomination.

6. General Board. This board combines the functions of the commission on missions and the executive committee of the national council.

7. The board of control of Franklinton Christian College. This college or high school for colored people is maintained by the Convention with the co-operation of the Afro-Christian Convention.

8. The regional Conventions and local Conferences conduct some missionary and extension work, including aid on Church buildings and ministerial relief, for which there is no national organization.

9. Woman's Board of Missions. This board confines itself quite largely to promoting income which is administered by the various boards.

The Work.

It will be seen that the range of the work covered is similar to that of the Congregational boards. As to the extent of the work, it is not a little smaller, even in proportion to the size of the two denominations; for example, comparatively few of the pastors receive missionary aid as contrasted with approximately twenty-five per cent of Congregational pastors. There is but one school for the colored people in comparison with the extensive work of the American Missionary Association. There is work in Porto Rico, which is under the foreign department with the Christian Churches, which under merger would be associated with the work of the American Missionary Association. In the field of publishing, the Christian Church owns and operates a printing plant housed in a five-story building belonging to the denomination. There is a weekly periodical, the monthly number of which is a missionary magazine. There are also periodicals for the work of the Church schools and the usual helps are published.

The Proposal.

It is proposed that this work and the Congregational work shall all be administered by the same board of directors; that there be chosen from the Christian constituency one-tenth of the membership of the board; and that similar provision be made on the administrative committees of the boards, this plan to be superseded if and when actual corporate merger is found possible and wise.

It is proposed that the present plan under which the Afro-Christian Convention is responsible for its own missionary and extension work among the colored Churches shall continue.

The plan contains the principle proposed by representatives of both groups that the work of neither constituency should be a charge against the resources of the other. Since the expense would be borne by the Christian constituency, the proposal leaves to the General Convention of the Christian Church the determination of what paid officials should be continued in the joint endeavor, the expectation being that for the present those who are administering the work of the Christian Churches would become a part of the common staff. It is proposed that nothing should be done which would in anywise divert permanent funds from their legitimate service as indicated in the terms of gifts.

With reference to ministerial relief and pensions for ministers, the proposal is that an endeavor be made by the Christian Churches to provide benefits comparable with those now provided by the Congregationalists. This representatives of the Christian Churches think can be done without difficulty.

In the matter of publications, the proposal is that combinations be made where both groups are agreeable and that each group be free to continue in any field in which there seems to be reason for doing so. This would mean that if there seemed to be need of the Congregationalist and the Herald of Gospel Liberty, both should be published, each at the expense of its own constituency. The same would hold with reference to all other publications, but the expectation and hope would be that such advantage would be gained by feasible combinations.

It is provided also that in case the home board as a whole did not think it wise to continue the ownership of the Christian Publishing Association building and the maintenance of the printing plant, the question of its continuance or disposal would be left entirely to the Christian Convention.

What Would Happen?

Exact prophecy under such circumstances is always hazardous. It could be expected that many things would be done and many plans evolved which would be of real advantage to the entire constituency. Probably in the near future, all Church school helps would be identical. It is likely that the two periodicals would become one, under name and terms agreeable to both groups. Some of the practices of Congregationalists would prove helpful to the present Christian group, and vice versa. There has been some fear that additional responsibilities would have to be borne by our home societies. By definite assertion in the proposals, this is declared against, and the control of the question is decisively in the hands of the Congregational constituency, which would supply nine-tenths of the board of directors. If, however, there is any real danger of such assumption of responsibilities, the question for decision revolves around the willingness of the Congregational people to face those possibilities, which seem most remote.

It is not thought that the plans would result in any immediate saving in overhead. It is contemplated, however, that eventually such savings would be realized and that there would also come added impetus in the raising of missionary funds, with consequent double benefits to all concerned.

In this word intended for Congregationalists it may be appropriate to recognize the splendid self-effacing spirit of the officials of the Christian denomination who volunteer to eliminate themselves from the equation as need may appear,

In short, then, the relation of the proposals for merger to the work of the home board is that of actually unifying all the work.—Congregationalist, Boston, Mass.

ROSEMONT CHURCH.

Rosemont is enjoying her first daily vacation Bible school this year. Miss Judith Black has charge of the school, and is ably assisted by Mrs. H. E. Roane, Mrs. W. Loyd Neill, Miss Myra Odel, Miss Sallie Weston Morrison, Miss Elizabeth Johnston, Miss Mattie Downing, Miss Rebecca Guynn, and Mrs. J. F. Morgan. The school has been very well attended, and a splendid interest has been evident.

The Rosemont Church was delighted with the series of evangelistic sermons delivered in May by her former pastor, Dr. G. O. Lankford. The attendance during the meeting was good, and we feel that Dr. Lankford's visit resulted in much good to both the Church and community.

The Men's Bible Class recently elected the following officers to serve the next six months, beginning July 1st: president, W. H. Farrow; vice-president, T. M. Rust; secretary, Albert Morrison; assistant secretary, David Dennis; treasurer, B. J. David; teacher, Cecil F. DeLeBarre; assistant teachers, J. B. Warren and H. L. Bondurant; music leader, H. C. Hedly.

Berea Church is making plans for the annual home-coming on September 1st, and the revival meetings for the two weeks following. Rev. O. D. Poythress will assist in the revival meeting. Dr. Charles Eldredge Shelton, pastor Congregational Church, Portsmouth, Va., will be the afternoon speaker at our home-coming service, and it is expected that one of Berea's home boys, Mr. Guy Hall, will be the morning speaker, but that has not been definitely decided yet, as we have not heard finally from Mr. Hall, but we expect to hear from him soon accepting the position.

J. F. MORGAN.

The Higgins sisters, of Guilford County, members of our Pleasant Ridge Church and Sunday School, and who are known in some of our Churches as delightful singers and pianists, have, indeed, come to high honors in State and nation. The past year, the four of them have been attending Shenandoah College in Virginia, two of the number graduating from Bridgewater last spring. The following is from the daily press, under date of June 21st: "Four sisters—Misses Sallie, Katherine, Allie and May Higgins—whose home is near Pleasant Ridge, in Guilford County, were winners in the National Home Group Music contest held recently in connection with the biennial convention of the American Federation of Music Clubs, at Boston. The Higgins sisters, who were entered as the Shenandoah Valley quartet, won the Virginia State contest at Fredericksburg last April, and were sent to Boston under the auspices of the Federal Music Clubs of Virginia. Competition in the nation contest was confined to winners of state contests, so that it is obvious the girls were competing with extraordinary talent. Their achievement is the more outstanding because they won over both vocal and instrumental contestants.

In recognition of their success, a silver trophy bearing their names will be awarded the girls as National Home Group champions for America in 1929. The four sisters expect to continue their musical education at Shenandoah College next year. Two of them were graduated from Bridgewater College in the spring. Their mother, Mrs. C. B. Higgins, is expecting her daughters this week-end, and they are scheduled to appear at a community singing at Pleasant Ridge next Sunday."

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

WHEN A WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY IS NOT MISSIONARY.

Because the spirit of liberality is cultivated in a Woman's Missionary Society, that spirit is very easily diverted from the real purpose of a missionary society to other purposes that are not missionary. Not infrequently pastors and others interested in a local Church, or need, even with the very best of intentions, decide that it is missionary for the women to do something for the local Church, to help pay the pastor's salary, to help buy a piano, to help put a carpet on the floor, to help fix up the pulpit stand, to put a Bible on the pulpit, to help paint the Church. Now, all of these things are good, and they serve a good purpose, but they are not missionary. They are aids, they are benevolences, maybe they are charity, they are wholesome and sacred, but they are not missionary. They violate the very principle, practice and purpose of a missionary society and even of the word "missions." The word "mission" is taken directly from the Latin and means "a sending," "a sending out," "a sending forth"; to send money and persons forth to others to help carry the gospel or build Churches for others who do not have them. Now, to use that money on our own and for ourselves may be something good, but it is not missions. Or, again, the word "apostle," used so often of "the twelve apostles of our Lord," is taken directly from the Greek "apostolus," and means "one sent forth or to send away," or if one wants to divide the word as it is divided in Greek, one may do so as Greek does—apo, "from or away"; stellein, "to send." There is not much sending, and so we violate the very word and the meaning of "missions" when we take our "mission" money and go and buy something for ourselves and our community, which we can see, it matters not how much we need that something, and how much that something will help. This writer often hears one say: "Our own Church is a mission Church, and so we have to keep all that we raise at home in order to keep going." Such a Church may be a very needy one and have the best of intentions, but it is certainly not a mission Church, for it is not sending out "apostles" to others (according to the Greek), nor money to others to carry the message of hope and love and life to others. The writer has before him now, as he writes, the following in a letter from a very faithful pastor and a good brother:

"Our Woman's Missionary Society has done a great part for the Church by putting rubber runners on all the aisles, new rails and curtains for the choir stand, and also bought three nice chairs for the pulpit."

Now, that was a good work on the part of the good women in that Church, but it was not missionary. The good women of the Missionary Society turned aside to that extent from the plan and purpose of its organization to do a good and benevolent thing for their Church, and we are not censuring them. We praise them for their liberality and their willingness to help the local Church. You may just count on the Woman's Missionary Society to help in every time of need; but neither the pastor nor the Church, nor the society itself should think that it is carrying out the purpose of the society, in so far as the purpose and the spirit of that society is missionary, when it does these good things.

A Woman's Missionary Society is organized for the purpose of sending the message of love, of life and of salvation to others, not to themselves, nor to folks of their own local Church, but to others who do not have the blessings and the benefits of that message, and that love, and that life. This is the real distinction between a Woman's Missionary Society and a Ladies' Aid Society. The Ladies' Aid Society acts by sight, and undertakes to do the things in the Church and for the Church that it sees and knows about, and that will help a local situation. Now and then a Ladies' Aid Society rises to the good heights of sending a missionary contribution to help others than themselves, to aid folks afar off whom they will never see; and when they do this, they are ascending into the realm of missions. Contrariwise, a Woman's Missionary Society may decide to help the local Church, to beautify and to adorn it, and such like, and when it does so, it is not acting by faith but by sight, and is doing the real work of the Ladies' Aid Society, which in itself is good.

It will help, however, if we will keep our thinking straight and make our distinctions clear and lucid, so that the Woman's Society will know and understand when it is fulfilling the functions for which it was organized. A Woman's Missionary Society that confines its activities and giving and work to the local Church is not a Woman's Missionary Society. It is a Ladies' Aid Society, or a society for Church and community betterment. We do not discredit either, nor here undertake to say which is the more important, but there is a distinction between the two, and it will help every enterprise to bear that distinction clearly in mind.

J. O. A.

THE AROUSAL AND THE ROPE-HOLDERS.

It was only after a blank of fourteen months (in which William Carey and his companions seemed to "have disappeared forever") that letters were received in England from the intrepid pioneer missionary. It should never be forgotten that the triumvirate at home—Fuller, Sutcliff and Ryland—as they waited and watched for tidings, stood in a position hardly less responsible, perhaps no less difficult than his own.

The work of organization and maintenance, though less captivating to the imagination than work on the field, is not a whit less essential. The task of these men at home was no light one. In connection with the difficulty of relegating any part of his responsibility to others, Andrew Fuller said:

"Friends talk to me about coadjutors and assistants, but, I know not how it is, I find a difficulty. Our undertaking to India really appeared to me, on its commencement, to be somewhat like a few men deliberating about the importance of penetrating into a deep mine, which had never before been explored. We had no one to guide us, and, while we were thus deliberating, Carey, as it were, said, 'Well, I will go down if you will hold the rope.' But before he went down, he, as it seemed to me, took an oath from each of us at the mouth of the pit to the effect that, while we lived, we should never let go the rope."

An anecdote of interest and significance has come down to us in the quaint phraseology of the eighteenth century.

"On a certain occasion," so the story runs, "Mr. Fuller called on a pious and benevolent nobleman who, though a churchman, was friendly to dissenters and was generous in his charitable contributions. Having laid before him the operations of the mission, his lordship handed him a guinea. Mr. Fuller, observing that it was given with an air of indifference, asked:

"My lord, does this come from the heart?"

"What matter is that?" inquired the nobleman. "Suppose it does not come from the heart; it may answer your purpose as well. If you get the money, why should you care whether it comes from the heart or not?"

"Take it back," said the man of God. "I cannot take it. My Lord and Master requires the heart."

"Well, give it me back," said the nobleman; "it did not come from the heart."

"He took the guinea, then stepped to his desk and drew a check for twenty pounds. Handing this to Mr. Fuller, he said: 'This comes from the heart. I know the principles by which you are governed. I love the Lord Jesus and His cause. I know that no offering is acceptable to Him unless it comes from the heart.'"

These three men—Fuller, Ryland and Sutcliff—who formed the first missionary board in the history of modern missions, were giants in their day, "mighty men of old, men of renown." Of Fuller, untiring in his gratuitous service of continual journeying in Scotland, Ireland, Wales and England, north and south, to arouse interest and collect contributions for "our East Indian mission," it has been said, he "was not only the first of foreign missionary secretaries; he was a model for all." Ryland was the Christian scholar, the profound theologian, spiritual guide rather than executive. Sutcliff's talents have been defined as "more useful than splendid," but his sound judgment and common sense cut many a gordian knot in those early experimental years.

It was on the 29th of July, 1794, that Andrew Fuller, Dr. Ryland, and others were at length rewarded by letters describing Carey's voyage, his first impressions of India and the outlook for his work.

These letters acted upon Christian England like an electric spark. They kindled a fire which, by the grace of God (to use Latimer's words), shall never be put out. Well might Fuller write to Carey as he did not long after.

"The eyes of the religious world are upon you. Your undertaking has provoked many. The spirit of missions has gone forth. I wish it may never stop till the gospel is sent into all the world."—From "Wonders of Missions," Mason.

NEWS ITEMS.

BY MRS. W. M. JAY.

The Young People's Missionary Society of the Franklin Christian Church, Franklin, Va., has continued to show a very fine spirit of interest and enthusiasm in the work which is set before them. Their monthly meetings have consisted of a short business session, followed by a program based upon the study book, "Youth and the New America." During the first of April, the Young People's Society, in conjunction with the Woman's Missionary Society, observed "Mission Study Day." The study groups were planned for the afternoon and evening. Lunch was served at the Church and the occasion proved to be one of inspiration as well as information.

In endeavoring to meet the apportionment, the Young People's Society has had two delightful teas; it has presented one pageant, a Christmas pageant entitled "Christmas with Christ," and arranged a stereopticon picture of the Easter story. Right now the officers of the society are hard at work collecting back dues and also collecting dues three months in advance; yes, we are finding some people who will advance three months' dues in aiding our Church to reach its quota by making our third quarter the big quarter in sending in money.

They are happy as young people in having a small part of not only studying about missions, but also in giving to missions, that the program of Christian may become fulfilled.

A certain amount of opposition is a great help to a man. Kites rise against, and not with, the wind. Even a head-wind is better than none. No man ever worked his passage anywhere in a dead calm. Let no man wax pale, therefore, because of opposition.—Selected.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

BY REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

Lesson II—July 14, 1929.

EZEKIEL TEACHES PERSONAL RESPONSIBILITY.
GOLDEN TEXT: "Each one of us shall give an account of himself to God."—Rom. 14:12.
LESSON: Ezekiel 18:1-32, 33:1-20.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Psa. 125.

A Man's Responsibility for Himself.

"Passing the buck" in the matter of personal responsibility for wrong-doing started a long time ago. Adam blamed his sin on his wife, and she in turn blamed it on the serpent. One is compelled to believe in the theory of inheritance of characteristics when one sees how widespread is this same tendency to pass the buck today. People blame their sins on heredity, environment, companions, the weakness of human nature, and on down a long list of things. Human nature seems to have an aversion to saying what David said: "I have sinned"; or if we admit that we sinned, we try to justify ourselves by placing the blame elsewhere.

It is perhaps too much to say that Ezekiel discovered the principle of personal responsibility. Attention was called in these columns a few weeks ago to the fact that Jeremiah discovered the individual. But even Jeremiah did not originate the principle. He simply discovered and applied it? And Ezekiel made a more exacting application of the principle. He insisted that a man was responsible for his own sins. Other factors might enter in; the sins of the fathers might be visited upon the children, but that meant that the children had to suffer for the sins of the fathers, and not that they had to be responsible for the sins of the fathers. In the final analysis, every one of us must give an account of himself to God. There are many factors that may enter into a man's sin, but the man is responsible or accountable for his sin. I am responsible for what I do. Men and conditions may tempt me, but nothing can make me sin.

There needs to be a new emphasis on this doctrine of the personal responsibility for sin. Society is so complex, there are so many mass-movements, there are so many interesting forces, that people are prone to put the responsibility on impersonal or group factors. We need to be reminded that, in spite of the complexity of life, the individual cannot escape the responsibility for what he does. The "I" cannot transfer its guilt to another.

A Man's Responsibility for Others.

A man is responsible, however, not only for himself, but for others. That may seem like a paradoxical statement in the light of what has just been written in regard to a man's responsibility for himself, but it is a fact nevertheless. It might be put this way: as a part of a man's personal responsibility, there is his responsibility for others. Cain's question, "Am I my brother's keeper?" has an affirmative answer in Ezekiel's figure of the watchman on the tower. Ezekiel was not responsible for the sins of his people, but he was responsible for warning them of their sins and for trying to persuade them to give up their sins. Just so long as he kept silent, he was as guilty as a watchman who saw the enemy approaching, and did not give the alarm. If, on the other hand, Ezekiel warned the people and did all he could to have them change their ways, and still they persisted in their evil ways, then he was not responsible for their guilt.

This principle, of course, finds its fullest interpretation and application in the teachings of Jesus. By direct statement, as well as by implication, Jesus insisted that we had obligations and responsibilities to others. The growing complexity of life and the mutual dependence of men upon each other, but increases and intensifies this personal responsibility for others. There are those who question in their minds as to what will become of the heathen if we do not send the gospel? The same principle applies to those who are not Christians in our own community. We are not responsible for their becoming Christians, but we are responsible for giving them an opportunity and an urgent invitation to become Christians. This does not mean simply a perfunctory invitation as a means of washing our hands of the entire matter. It means consistent and constant effort to win people to the Christian way of life.

God's Concern for All.

Ezekiel sounded a new note when he proclaimed the fact that God did not take pleasure in the death of the wicked. As a matter of fact, God is actually grieved at the pathos and the plight of the sinner. God loves the sinner. It is sin that God hates. God has gone the limit in showing His love for the sinner and in trying to save him from the penalty and the power and the punishment of sin. The cross of Christ has spoken to us once and for all of the suffering of God for sin and of the extent to which His love will go in an effort to save the sinner. The tragic thing about sin is not simply that it hurts the sinner and that it hurts others, even the innocent, but that it hurts God. God wanted the Jews to know that He had no pleasure in the fact that they had been carried away into captivity, and that it was no caprice of a petulant God that they were suffering what they did, but that it was simply the inevitable results of persistence in a course of transgressing the moral and spiritual principles which were fundamental to wholesome life and to the righteousness which His character embodied and His worship demanded. And God wants us to know that He has no pleasure in the death of the wicked, but that He wants us to turn from our evil and live.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Sunday, July 14, 1929.

TOPIC: "The Christian Sunday—What it is For, and Why."—Luke 4:16-22.

Some Bible Hints.

Sunday is for feeding the spiritual life. We neglect the soul in the rush and whirl of business (v. 16).

Sunday is for giving as well as getting. Jesus took part in the service, gave His best thought to others (v. 16).

Sunday is for preaching the gospel. On most other days people are too engrossed in other interests to listen. It is a pity that commercial interests have invaded the Sabbath and taken away part of our leisure (v. 18).

Sunday is for gracious words. If the day is rightly begun, the spirit will be gentle and kindly, and the ministration of good will be easy (v. 22).

Suggestive Thoughts.

The Christian Sunday, like the Jewish Sabbath, is for spiritual rest and refreshment. We can never get away from the need of this.

"Man shall not live by bread alone." Then, what shall he live by? Not by science, but by the word of God. Sunday reminds us of our spiritual nature.

Why is it better to go to Church on Sunday than to "worship," as people say, in the temple of nature? Because the Church, through its sacred associations, makes it easy for us to touch the divine and get into tune with the Infinite.

Works of mercy and visits of cheer fall naturally on Sunday. It is the only day when we have time for them. Sunday in this regard becomes the acid test of our Christianity.

A Few Illustrations.

Suppose you were asked to suggest a symbol for your Sunday occupation, what would it be? A Church, a Bible, an automobile, a baseball bat, a tennis racket? What story would the symbol tell?

Sunday is for making character, and not for making money. It is the only day in the week in which we get away (if we do get away) from money-making. Why rob ourselves of its blessings and uplift?

What would Jesus do in our modern world or in our town on Sunday? Suggest one or two things. How would He spend Sunday if He were in lodgings?

Sunday is a day for thinking as well as a day for worship. A quiet day, when the soul gathers itself together and tries to put values on life and action.

ELON SUMMER SCHOOL NOTES.

To all Friends of the Church.—You are familiar with the fine type of work being done in religious summer schools and camps all over this country. In 1926 more than 500,000 young people attended these camps. Since that time, the number has increased greatly. In our own Church these summer schools extend all the way from Canada to Alabama. These schools are giving our people renewed consecration and zeal to go back to their Churches and serve in a larger way.

The Elon Summer School of Christian Education comes this time July 27th to August 2nd, opening on Saturday, July 27th, and closing with commencement Friday night, August 2nd. One week of Christian fellowship, instruction and recreation. The program for the 1929 session is one of the strongest we have ever had. It includes International Credit courses in missions, Bible, teaching, story-telling, children's work (junior materials and methods), and young people's work; a lecture each day on missions, a course on life investment for young people; a course on "The Preacher and His Work," for pastors, and a discussion group on "The Educational Task of the Church," for superintendents and other Sunday School workers.

To Pastors.—The International Credit courses include subjects which will be especially helpful to pastors. They cover a wide range this year and include missions, Bible and teaching of a general nature, and methods courses in children's and young people's work.

You will be especially interested in the preachers' conference each morning, led by Dr. N. G. Newman, of Holland, Va., former college pastor at Elon and Defiance Colleges. This period will be yours, and your interests and problems will be discussed.

To Superintendents.—The program committee has tried to plan the program with you and your needs in mind. You will find the general courses in Sunday School work (credit courses), especially helpful. No doubt, one of these courses will be just what you have wanted to study.

There will be a conference each day on "The Educational Task of the Church," which will be given over to the work of Sunday School superintendent and his helpers. This is for you!

To Teachers.—At last the summer school program includes just the course you want. There will be a course for you, no matter what group you teach in the Sunday School. Miss Clara E. Gill, who so successfully taught a course in primary work last year, will teach the course in story-telling. Miss Priscilla Chase, of the Congregational Church, field worker and writer of children's stories, will teach the course in junior department materials and methods. There will be a course in young people's work taught by Miss Lucy Eldredge, secretary of young people's work of the Christian Church, which will be helpful to all who are interested in young people. Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, of Durham, N. C., will teach a course in Bible; Rev. Joseph E. McCauley, of Norfolk, Va., will teach a course in teaching, and Rev. Edwin E. White, of Pleasant Hill, Tenn., will teach a course in missions. These courses have been planned with the teacher in mind. Any one of the courses listed above will give one unit toward the diploma given by the International Council of Religious Education.

To Mission Workers.—Mrs. J. A. Williams, president of the Woman's Mission Work in the Southern Christian Convention, is urging the women of the North Carolina and Virginia Conferences to come to Elon this year and avail themselves of the opportunity of mission study in the summer school. Rev. Edwin E. White, author of "The Story of Missions," one of the finest mission books published recently, will be present and teach a course. Mr. White has had wide experience in mission work, having been secretary of missionary education for the Presbyterian Church, and at one time secretary of missions for the Missionary Education Movement. He attended our Bethlehem Summer School last year and did a fine piece of work.

There will be a lecture on missions by Dr. J. O. Atkinson each morning of the conference. These lectures and courses lead us to believe that Elon will be a real mission conference.

To Young People.—We want every one of the 100 young people who attended last year back again. We are expecting many more. Rev. Edwin E. White, who understands and appreciates young people, will conduct a class in life investment each morning of the conference. If you are a young person and interested in the meaning of life and in living the richest life possible, you will not want to miss this hour each day.

All of you will be interested in knowing that Miss Lucy Eldredge will be with us again. Let's meet her there. You will be interested in the courses in missions, Bible, teaching, story-telling, children and young people's work which will be offered for international credit. Many of you have already earned units toward your diploma and will surely want to add another unit from the above list.

Group leaders will include Mrs. C. H. Rowland, Mrs. Ethel Chapman, Mrs. Stanley Harrell, Miss Graham Rowland, Miss Bernice Locher, Rev. O. D. Poythress, Rev. H. S. Hardcastle and others. These groups will have charge of recreation and compete with each other for honors in class attendance, stunts, and so forth.

Expenses.—Rooms in the dormitory, with lights and water, will be furnished free of charge by the college. Elon College, with its beautiful campus and buildings, is a fine meeting-place. Board will cost $8.00, and registration $2.00, making a total of $10.00 for the week. Each person will need to buy one textbook which will cost around $1.00. The classes will be held in Mooney Christian Education Building and the evening program in Whitley Memorial Auditorium. It will help us greatly if you will let us know if you are coming. Write for room reservation today.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE,
One of Our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MONDAY.

IMPATIENCE A SELF-FEEDER.

"Does Thou well to be angry?"—Jonah 4:4.

Any sin committed paves the way for its repetition. It is an old saying, inspired by Satan, "That if anger burns within, you had better ventilate than suppress it." Like all his inspirations, this is full of falsehood. Impatience indulged infallibly paves the way for more impatience. The most patient soul may become the slave of impatience by simply yielding to it when tempted. (See Rom. 6:12-16.) As well tell a lie, with the hope of it making you truthful, as to expect patience to come as the fruit of indulging impatience. An impatient spirit always thrives by exercise.

Prayer.—O precious Lord Jesus, Thy name be praised forevermore. May thy praise never die away. Be in us a spirit of love and patience, and may our lives glorify Thee. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE FRUIT OF INDECISION.

"Night cometh."—John 9:4.

"As thy servant was busy here and there, he was gone."—1 Kings 20:40.

There comes a time to every one of us when we do things the last time, and, like as unto the biblical rich man, at a time when least expected. How much do we put off doing things we really intend to do? And how often have we been reminded that it is too late?

Our texts refer to instances when one was so absorbed in affairs he let life slip. So it often slips and thousands fill Christ-less graves.

The soul is a capacity for God. With Him, it is enlarged to bigness of humanity. Without Him it dries up.

Once an old man said, "Here am I with hair as white as snow, and ice in my soul, waiting for the stroke that will cut me down! Oh, for the sensibilities I had when every sermon seemed a sword thrust, and every appeal rang in my soul like a thunderclap!"

*"Of all sad words of tongue or pen,
The saddest are these:
It might have been."*

We must face God, and it may come very unexpectedly. Let us face Him with our present lives, and then we will have no worries.

Prayer.—O Christ, who didst die for us, impart Thy merit to our every-day life; seal our forgiveness with Thy pardon forever; cleans us by Thy Spirit, and prepare us to meet Thee. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

WHILE LINGERING.

"While he lingered."—Gen. 19:16.

Lot lingered. What for? Apparently to think over a matter about which there was no question. Suppose one is drowning, and a lifeline is thrown him and he hesitates and temporizes about it—foolish! That is the way Lot did things. Lot had ability, he was energetic, he was resourceful, he possessed an unusual amount of moral virtue and piety—he is spoken of as "righteous Lot"—he had courage, but all of these failed him in the habit of indecision. And the result was a lapse into parting from his friends, a tendency toward evil, then dishonor, and finally he became positively identified with evil and lost his soul.

This is an exact picture of many we know. Shall we ourselves travel that road?

Prayer.—O Lord God, cause to be born in our souls the incorruptible seed of Thy Word, and impel us to hear and obey Thy admonitions. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE FIRST DUTY OF LIFE.

"They first gave their own selves."—2 Cor. 8:5.

This seems to have been the gospel of Paul and the first art of early Christians.

We have but one life; dare we lay our own hands on it and abuse it from God's eternal destiny?

There was an hour of crises in a young man's life. He was bright, winsome, gifted, pure, lofty ideals, and he stood at the parting of the ways. He decided for God.

Three short years after that, his friends stood by his coffin and looked upon his palid face rigid in death. As they contemplated this servant of the Lord—his power of prayer, his influence among college men, and the closing climax of his ministry at Northfield, where hundreds of cultured men and women sat with the power of his teachings—they realized what a calamity it would have been had this young life, but the span of three years before, been given to the world instead of God.

Prayer.—Dear Lord, what yet clings to us of the world we beg of Thee to lay it aside and impel us to employ diligence and zeal in Christian service, or we know the true life will die in us. So may Thy spirit save us. Amen.

FRIDAY.

A WONDERFUL BLESSING.

"I will pour out my spirit upon my servants."—Acts 2:17, 18.

Two men were walking by the seashore. One said, "The world had got to see what God can do with one man wholly dedicated to Him." The other said, "Say that again." It was repeated; the other lifted his hands in the twilight and said, "By the grace of God, I will be that man." That man was D. L. Moody.

As the mountains pour out their cooling streams; as the heavens pour out their rains; as the organ pours forth its melody—so God poured out His Spirit upon Moody, and so He promises to pour out upon His servants. Have we missed it?

Prayer.—Dear Lord Jesus, sanctify us with Thy strength.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

IS CHRIST REAL?

"He that keepeth my commandments, I will manifest myself to him."—Jno. 14:21.

Suppose we say a man is seeking a job. He seats himself on the curbing opposite the place of business and there he waits until the day is far spent when he approaches the superintendent and complains that he has not been shown a job. The superintendent answers by saying, "As soon as you offer yourself, your time and your skill, I will show you what to do."

Is not this an open secret of the failure of many of us to realize God the Father and the Christ in our lives? "If any man wills to do, he shall know," saith Christ.

Prayer.—Dear Father, create within our hearts a hungering and thirsting after God, an impelling desire for Thy Word, and for Thyself, and satisfy us early from Thy heart. Amen.

SUNDAY.

DIVINE DIRECTION.

"Go . . . and there it will be shown you."—Acts 9:5.

Paul: "What art Thou?"

Voice: "I am Jesus."

Paul: "What will Thou have me do?"

Voice: "Go, and I will show you."

The carrying of a dinner-pail to his brothers was an insignificant task to Joseph, but it was the first rung in the ladder to his mission as Saviour of His people.

It may be the burdensome tasks of the day that we have to perform, but many of them are necessary to a personal consciousness of God and a leader to a great service to some one.

It may be at the plow handles one is called to teach a Sunday School class. Go and do, and thou shall be blessed.

Half the world is on the wrong path in pursuit of happiness. They think it consists in getting, and being served. It consists in giving and serving others.

Prayer.—Dear Lord, as we seek to grow in grace and in knowledge of Thee and to acquire happiness, may Thy ever-present spirit teach us the way and forbid that we shall miss it. Amen.

POLITICAL PARTIES.

What is the difference between the Republican and the Democratic parties in regard to the national policies for which they stand? Certainly, this question cannot be answered by analyzing the memberships of the two parties. Both have within their ranks prohibitionists and anti-prohibitionists, supporters and opponents of protective tariff, these for and against business monopolies, those who advocate a department of education and these who are opposed to the establishment of such a department, and so on in regard to practically every national question.

The leaders of the two parties, aware of this division of opinion within the ranks, apparently, have learned to steer clear of what are termed controversial matters within the party. In seeking to maintain harmony, they defeat the main purpose of the party—that of an agency through which the people may express their will in government administration—by attempting to ignore national questions that are of vital interest to the public.

A political party has been termed a science of government, but when it no longer sets forth definite issues, is no longer a medium through which the citizens are given a chance to define the policies of their government, then it has outlived its usefulness and becomes only a plaything in the hands of politicians, to a certain group a ticket to the gravy train. Yet, a party that adopts and supports well-defined policies is a necessary element in a representative form of government and is essential to the welfare of that government.

Those who believe in America for Americans, restrictive immigration, public education, and similar policies, or those who take the opposite view, should have the opportunity of electing men to the administrative offices of the government who, they can be assured, will carry out these policies. If parties already in existence do not offer such an opportunity, then they have the recourse of forming a new party. H.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

All the children under the ages of fourteen years—about 65 per cent of them had a real treat last Friday. The Graham Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, invited them to Graham to be entertained from 3 to 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Green & McClure, Mr. Merrett Stewart, and Rich & Thompson furnished trucks to carry them to Graham and return. It was one of the happiest occasions they have had in a long time. The joy of the ride in a truck full of children would have filled their hearts full of joy if nothing else had been in store for them; but that was the first part only. When they reached Graham, they were met by Mrs. W. C. White, Miss Mamie Parker, Mrs. J. J. Henderson, and others, who, with the help of the matrons in charge, looked after them while there.

The D. of C., under direction of their leader, Mrs. W. E. White, served all the children with ice cream; Mr. A. L. Mansfield, owner of the ferris wheel and merry-go-round, gave all the children a free ride on both the ferris wheel and the ponies.

Whoever saw a child that did not like to ride a pony? The little ponies on a merry-go-round are the next best, and the little fellows looked happy and delighted sitting on a pony holding the bridle reins, with their feet in the stirrups—a real thrill to them. And to make it a perfect day, Mr. Cox, the 5 and 10-cent store man, served all the children with cold lemonade and popcorn.

It was a real treat to the children, and they enjoyed every minute of the afternoon and came home singing the praises of the good ladies who invited them to be their guests for the afternoon, and also Mr. Mansfield for his courtesy in giving them free rides, and to Mr. Cox for cold lemonade and popcorn. The superintendent of the Orphanage expresses his appreciation for this kindness of the good people of Graham in giving our little children this outing.

MISSIONARY MEETING.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., held its last regular meeting for the summer on the first Wednesday afternoon in June. Special effort was made to make this the banner quarter of the year. The largest offering for any one quarter in the history of the organization was the result. The meeting was addressed by the president of the Southern Council of Baptist Women on "Individual Responsibility."

The society is sending a delegate to the Blue Ridge Summer School of Missions.

The Willing Workers gave a pageant entitled "The Awakening," on the evening of June 12th, which was a splendid success. This little organization has done well this year, meeting the fourth Sunday morning in each month during the regular Sunday School hour, and having a live mission program.

WHEN CHARACTER IS LOST ALL IS LOST.
A STORY TO YOUNG MEN.

BY REV. J. F. BURNETT, D. D.

Young man, let me tell you a story. I know that young men enjoy a good story, and I flatter myself that the one I wish to tell you is a good one, and, minus the embellishments, has the virtue of being true. It is the story of an old-time country school. There is probably no position more trying than that of a country school teacher, as it was about seventy years ago, and especially so where there were a lot of big boys whose natural bent was to mischief, and whose highest ambition was to "lick" the teacher and turn him outdoors. We do not have such schools in these days, which fact makes my story all the more interesting. In the school to which I refer were a half-dozen or more big boys, who made it a point to see that no teacher remained in the school a full term. Some one of their number would be named to do a mean thing—as we now say, to start something—and get the teacher to whip him, when all the others would jump onto the teacher and throw him outdoors, roll him in the snow, stand him on his head, and pour water down his trouser legs, and do other equally civil things, by which they would convince him that he should resign and go home. After a number of teachers had tried that school and had failed, there came an old man, who said he would try it for a while. He was very gentle in his manners, polite in his habits, and possessed a voice of unusual pathos. He was rough in his appearance, and was clothed in the common blue jeans of the day. It had been good skating for quite a while, and the boys were a little tired of the sport, and as a thaw had set in, they concluded to give the new teacher a week's trial, during which time they would store their minds with useful knowledge. But a time had been set for the breaking up of the school, and as it had again frozen and the skating was good, it was decided that no delay should occur, but that the school should close and the teacher leave the neighborhood as all his predecessors had done. When the school came to order on that particular morning, in the log schoolhouse, they saw a large steamer on which was printed the words—

"When Money is Lost, Nothing is Lost."

That announcement attracted the attention of the boys, and the first conclusion was that the teacher was a fool, for then, as now, there were those who believed that money was the sum-total of all good. In place of the regular lessons of the morning, that subject was discussed, and when the vote was taken, the whole school was on one side, and the teacher on the other, but the riot had been postponed without action. But a few days sufficed to evaporate the good influence of that half day, and another time was set for the dismissal of the teacher and the closing of the school. On the morning set for the happy event, the school again faced a steamer, on which were the words

"When Reputation is Lost, Something is Lost."

When that announcement was read, the big boys knew that their teacher was a fool, and that it was their manly duty to dismiss him, for, in their minds, it did not matter what one thought of them, they knew what they were, and what cared they for the opinion of the community. Again, as on the morning before, the regular program was displaced by a discussion of the subject, which resulted as it had on that other morning—the school on one side and the teacher on the other—but again the riot was postponed without action. But the boys had no intention of giving up. Their reputation was at stake, and, even though they had voted that reputation was nothing at all, they were quite anxious to maintain theirs at all cost, and so another day was set and all things made ready for a final culmination and successful overthrow of the school and the removal of the teacher. The morning came, and the school faced another steamer on which were the words—

"When Character is Lost, All is Lost."

On the above announcement there was no discussion. The truth of the statement was self-evident and convincing. The school did not close.

The one thing I wish to say to you, young man, is that "when character is lost, all is lost." But you cannot lose a character until you have it, and you cannot have it until you build it. Every human being is a builder of character, and from the time the child builds with blocks until the last addition is made to human character, every day adds something to that which has been wrought the day before. The word character literally means to cut, to carve, to engrave, to furrow, so that when we speak of a man's character we mean that which has been cut into human life by every passion, thought, deed, word, association, purpose, desire, influence, ambition, and every other thing with which his life had to do through all the years through which it had come. Young man, you are today the sum-total, the complete aggregate of every thought, feeling, word, book, prayer, song, play, and every other thing with which your life has been touched. You should keep in mind, young man, that you do not inherit character—you build it. It is never bestowed, never given—always built. You may inherit a disposition, you may inherit money, or many another thing, but never character—that you build. Every day, everywhere, by every thing, the silent forces that play upon your life are cutting, carving, shaping, and making permanent that which you call yourself. If these forces be good ones, you will be changed into the likeness and stature of the Man of Galilee, but if they be evil ones, then into the likeness, and the spirit of a demon.

ELON YOUNG PEOPLE'S SCHOOL.

Only those who have been there can know how many happy memories crowd up at the mention of the Elon College Summer School. Attendance there gives one week of pure pleasure.

Perhaps when first thinking of the school we think of the instruction it gives. This instruction covers practically every phase of work in the Church school, and when once a choice of course or courses has been made, one may be sure of getting definite and practical materials and methods.

The next outstanding feature is the recreation. The games bring about a jolly comradeship and reach their climax in the "stunt night," when the groups rival each other in the production of sheer fun. The recreation serves another purpose, too, in that so many of its phases may be taken back home for use in the social gatherings of the various organizations of the Church.

The last, but by no means the least, feature of the summer school is the fellowship. It is impossible to tell just how much benefit is gained from the association with Christian people. Friendships are formed and inspirations are received that are obtainable from no other source.

It is of necessity a happy week, then, with such instruction, recreation, and fellowship.

Waverly, Va. LILLY M. SPAIN.

This quotation is worth passing on: "When the scientists of the world turn their laboratories over to the study of God, there will be more progress in one generation than in the past four." Another quotation from the same source: "Spiritual values have been the greatest power in the development of men and history."

OBITUARIES.

RASCOE.

From the Burlington News, Burlington, N. C., Friday, June 7th:

James Haywood Rascoe, aged 81 years, died yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the home of his son, E. B. Rascoe, Hall Avenue, following illness of heart trouble since last Saturday. He had spent his entire life in this county, coming here a few years ago from Union Ridge to live with his son. He was a loyal member of Union Christian Church for the past 35 years.

The funeral service was held this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Union Christian Church by Dr. G. O. Lankford, assisted by Dr. J. O. Atkinson, and the body was buried in the Church cemetery.

Surviving are a son and daughter, E. B. Rascoe and Mrs. W. J. Stephens, of Burlington, and two brothers, J. H. and W. L. Rascoe, of Reidsville.

HUDSON.

Allen V. Hudson, son of the late Frank and Bell Hudson, was born in Halifax County, Va., September 27, 1868, and died at his home in Danville, Va., Sunday, June 16th, age 61 years, 8 months and 19 days. He is survived by his wife, who was Miss Aurelia McSherry, and six children, as follows: Mrs. G. H. Arms, of Tennessee; Mrs. O. C. Wells, of Washington, D. C.; Mr. A. S. Hudson, of Texas; Misses Frances and Doris, and Ralph Hudson, of Danville. He is also survived by three brothers—J. H. Hudson, W. T. Hudson, and Walker Heuderson (half-brother), and two sisters, Mrs. C. B. Murray and Mrs. Will Hudgins.

Bro. Hudson had been a very successful farmer. Some time ago, when his health began to fail, he retired from active life and settled in Danville, Va. He was known by all his friends as a Christian gentleman, and loved for his honorable, straightforward dealings with his fellow-men. He was a member of Lebanon Christian Church for thirty years.

The funeral was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. T. Marsh, of the M. E. Church, at Lebanon, on the afternoon of June 17th, and the burial was in the Church cemetery. Seldom is there a larger and more sympathetic crowd of people than were present. The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful. The sympathy of pastor and community is with the sorrowing family. They sorrow not as those who have no hope. Husband and father is awaiting his loved ones in the home beyond.

C. E. NEWMAN.

DEAN.

Madison Calvin Dean was born October, 1832, and died May 25, 1929, age 96 years and 7 months (the exact date not given). An unusual fact about the deceased was he died in the home where he was born and where he spent virtually his entire life. He was a highly respected citizen. He was a man of strong character, of a keen mind, and had a strong body till the weakness of age came upon him. Even to the last few days he was interested in the affairs of the day. He was married to Miss Faithy Imes, of Davidson County, June 1, 1858. To this union were born eight children, seven of whom survive, and thirty grandchildren and twenty-seven great-grandchildren. At the age of thirty-three years he joined the Confederate forces and fought gallantly through the Civil War in Company F, Sixth North Carolina Regiment, serving under General Hoke, who was one of the bravest young generals of the Southern army.

He joined the Salem Chapel Christian Church soon after the war and remained a member till death. His family was not connected with Salem Chapel, but he told the writer that many long years ago he fell in love with Salem Chapel Christian Church, and though now old and could go only occasionally, he wanted to remain in the Church till death.

He was the oldest person in the Church. The writer had only visited him once in his home, and met him on another Church occasion in the last few years. He seemed at all times deeply interested in the Church.

An aged citizen has gone, a loyal Church man has passed to his reward, and at Pine Grove M. P. Church, near Kernersville, N. C., surrounded by many relatives and friends, interment was made in the Church graveyard, where the new-made mound was covered with beautiful flowers. The burial services were conducted by Rev. Cranford, pastor of the above-named Church. Here the mortal will rest in peace till the resurrection morning, and kind hands will, from time to time, place flowers in memory of him, and the immortal will be in the reward of the saints of God.

JAS. L. FOSTER,
Pastor Salem Chapel Christian Church.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

BY REV. STANLEY C. HARRELL.

FACE CREAM FOR MEN.—

Now that the cigarette manufacturers are gleefully chuckling over milady's increasing liking for cigarettes, the cosmetic manufacturers are laying careful plans to make men carry powder and face cream.

SINGING CHRISTIANS.—

Among the many things that are needed in modern Christianity is a rebirth of song. Great religious awakenings and revivals have always been accompanied by waves of singing. In a sense, the singing has been the expression of deepening religious emotions. And the singing has in turn served to awaken and quicken more profound religious feeling. Observation of modern congregations leaves one with the feeling that the majority of those present are not getting that sense of joy which congregational worship is intended to impart. Nor is there anything that engenders a sense of joy like the hearty singing together of God's people.

There are many who do not sing because they do not know how to sing. The old-time singing master taught the people how to sing. Such singing might have been lacking in artistic finish, but it gave expression to some fine religious enthusiasm, and intensified religious emotions. The public schools have sensed the need of instruction in singing, and are setting about to teach the rising generation how to sing. In the meantime, there is a generation with us that knows but little about singing. And something needs to be done in the average congregation that will enable the people to take part in the singing. Only by taking part in the singing can the masses of worshippers get all that they should from the public worship.

THE CHURCH AND INDIVIDUALS.—

The Christian is in danger of disappearing. He has a tendency to vanish in the Church. In many Churches the individual has become invisible. We have been asking, "What is the Church doing?" This is a stupid question. You get nowhere by asking a question like that. The important question is: What is Mr. A doing? He is a prominent man in the Church. What; what is he doing? What is Mr. B doing? He holds a high position in the Church, but what is he doing? What is Mr. C doing? He has belonged to the Church for twenty years. What is he doing? That is the kind of question which is all-important and should be answered. It is the conduct of Mr. A and Mr. B and Mr. C which is the key of the Church problem. You hear men talking about the amount of money which the Church has raised. How much did the Church raise last year? It is a bootless question. The question of importance is, How much did Mr. D give? and how much Mr. E? and how much Mr. F? What is the ratio between what these men spend on themselves and what they contribute toward the work of making this a better world? That is the question with which God is concerned, and it is not till that question takes the uppermost place in our mind that we shall have the key of the problem of Church finance.—"Cardinal Ideas of Jeremiah," by Chas. W. Jefferson.

MISLEADING PUBLICITY.—

Some weeks ago, the public press carried a news item to the effect that the officials of the First Baptist Church of Collingswood, N. J., had refused to permit Rev. Norman Thomas, a Socialist, who had been invited by the Young People's Society, to occupy the pulpit on a Sunday evening. The statement was made that the speaker was barred from the Church because of his socialistic views. It was also stated that the refusal had caused the membership of the Church to be split into two factions. The alleged facts were used as an illustration of the fear which many Churches and Church officials entertain toward freedom of discussing modern ideas, and the disastrous consequences of such fears. The wide publicity given to the incident led the pastor, Rev. William F. Meyer, to issue a public statement setting forth the situation as follows:

"1. The Young People's Society in question was not a society of the Church, for the Church, by the Church. It was an independent group made up mostly of outsiders, meeting once a week in a small room of the Church by courtesy of Church officials.

"2. One or two members of this group, without consultation with pastor or deacons, invited Mr. Thomas to occupy the pulpit of the Church on a certain Sunday night next August. Naturally the members of the Church would not be overridden by two or three young people, regretting, however, that its action involved the dignity of so prominent a person.

"3. This same young people's group, on two recent occasions, had a Socialist speak on the subject of 'Socialism.' The Church was not 'afraid' of another night when socialism would be to the fore, but thought it had enough of the subject for the present.

"4. The Church is not torn, split, or even mildly excited over the matter. The papers have once again put one over on the public."

There was evidently no desire on the part of the press to misrepresent the situation. It was a case of working the event for all its news value. Perhaps the reporter was given an account that was unduly colored. It is a most difficult task to get all the facts of any event, and to get them in their proper order and relationship. And yet there can be no just and adequate understanding of any event until such complete knowledge is in hand. There is a tremendous responsibility resting upon both press and public to set forth the facts, all the facts, and nothing but the facts.

MEXICO'S RELIGIOUS DIFFICULTIES.—

Negotiations have been completed for the settlement of the difficulties which have existed between the Mexican government and the Roman Catholic Church. All that is now lacking to make the agreement effective is the official sanction of the Pope. The controversy is one of long standing. Back in 1846, when Mexico was at war with the United States, Church property was seized to serve as security for certain loans which the government wished to make. Since that time, the government has several times levied upon Church properties to obtain funds. In 1873 the principles of the religious laws were embodied in the constitution, and when the constitution was revised in 1917 the provisions which made all Church property the possession of the State were included in the revision. By the same act, it was forbidden to teach religion in the schools.

There has existed all along a feeling of intense dissatisfaction on the part of official Catholicism that the Church should thus be restricted by the government. In 1926 the government passed a regulation that at least one priest from every congregation should be required to register with the government, in order that there might be some one who could be held responsible by the government for the care of the Church property, which was government property. The priests were instructed by their superior officers not to register, and when the government took steps to punish those who refused to register, the priests abandoned the Churches. For almost three years the Churches have been closed to the priests. This has occasioned no little dissatisfaction and unrest among the people, caused much trouble for the government, and has been a constant source of potential trouble.

The present agreement is in the nature of a compromise. The government has not receded from any of the main points of its contention. Church property still remains in the control of the State. Education is still held to be distinctly a function of the State, and the Church is not permitted to teach religion in the schools, but religious instruction in the Churches is not to be interfered with. It is perhaps impossible for those accustomed to conditions and sentiment in the United States to appreciate the situation which confronts the Mexican government. It appears that the government, while anxious to remove all difficulties, it is determined to deal with the situation in such a way as to avoid further complications in the future.

NOTES-PERSONALS

According to the reports and statistics just reaching us from Japan, we now have in Japan 1,864 members and a Sunday School enrollment of 1,629 members. The average attendance at Sunday School the past year was 1,055 pupils, with 98 teachers. The money raised for various purposes in our native Japanese congregations was 8,650.31 yen ($4,325.15).

Rev. W. S. Alexander, the retiring and beloved pastor of Elon College Church, has accepted a call to the Hyde Park Christian Church, Brooklyn, N. Y., and expects to assume his duties there September 1st. While at Elon College, and in the South, the past five years, Dr. Alexander has greatly endeared himself to the hosts of our people with whom he has met and mingled as a faithful yoke-fellow and devoted servant of the Lord. We will miss him and his splendid family from our Elon community and from our many Church gatherings in which he has taken active and helpful part.

On July 10th, the United States government is to issue new paper money, the same being a little different in shape and size from the present paper money. The Methodist Episcopal Church has very wisely and timely suggested that each Church member give the first dollar he or she receives of this new money to missions, and thus help to emphasize stewardship, and also consecrate the same to the service of our Lord in advancing His kingdom in the world. The Federal Council of Churches is sponsoring this movement and is calling upon the pastors in Churches to announce to their congregations on July 7th and 14th the idea of sending in to missions the first new dollar they receive. This, indeed, is a splendid idea and helps to carry out the motto of the United States in stamping our coins, "In God We Trust."

Sunday Schools, missionary societies, Christian Endeavor Societies and Churches included in the list of SUN readers should bear in mind the date of the Elon Summer School of Christian Education—July 27th to August 3rd, inclusive. Rev. F. C. Lester, Waverly, Va., is president of this summer school, and Miss Pattie Coghill, Waverly, Va., is secretary, and they will be glad to send programs, announcements and information to any and every person interested enough to request the same. This should be the greatest session yet held. A great program has been prepared, and those who are fortunate enough to attend may expect great things of the sessions of the school this year. The cost for the entire school, including registration, board and room, will only be $10.00 for each person. One Church last year paid half the expenses of ten pupils, and plans to send ten this year.

Rev. Eugene H. Rainey has resigned his work as pastor at Atwood, Ill., as the Herald of Gospel Liberty says, "after three years of most acceptable service. Brother and Mrs. Rainey have been quite active in the young people's work of the Conference, especially in the promotion of the Merom Summer School, now in session. We hope that their services will be quickly claimed by some needy field." Bro. Rainey is a graduate of Elon College and of Yale Divinity School, and is well remembered in the South, having served temporarily as pastor at Newport News and Ocean View. His wife is from Portsmouth, Va., and is a real helpmeet in efficient service, especially among the young people. Some of our Southern Churches should avail themselves and bring Bro. and Sister Rainey back to their own where their capable and consecrated services are so much needed.

The influence of missions and missionaries cannot be estimated by the number of members in the Churches in the foreign lands. The following rather amazing facts are related: "Of the ten cabinet ministers who head the department of national government (in China), seven are Christians and two of the seven were former Y. M. C. A. secretaries. One of these two is H. H. Kung, a direct descendant of Confucius, now minister of industry, commerce and labor; the other, C. T. Wang, minister of foreign affairs. In addition, 151 Y. M. C. A. secretaries in China have been called into government offices, national, provincial or local. There are only five universities in Japan, and three of these have Christian presidents. The other two presidents have Christian wives. The minister of education in Japan has issued orders, it is reported, that students wishing to study Christianity must not be interfered with. Thus the leaven works and God moves in majesty and in might to reach, to uplift and to redeem peoples of all nations.

Our good friend and brother, Dr. W. Knighton Bloom, secretary of missions for the Eastern Division, with offices at Washington, D. C., sends the Secretary of Missions of the Southern Christian Convention and editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, these two fine and friendly fellowship paragraphs, the spirit of which the editor of THE SUN wishes to share with SUN readers and members of the Christian Church everywhere: "What a time the folks in the editorial, printing and publishing departments of THE CHRISTIAN SUN must have experienced when the copy for the edition of the paper for June 13th was placed in their hands. Editing, typesetting, circulating must have been thrilling. And better still, THE SUN went on shining in its strength and the editor surely felt that he was in a finer climate even than Florida in January. We Congregationalists are all happy over the action taken at Detroit, and we folks in the regions of the territory included in the Southern Christian Convention and the District of the Southeast can demonstrate in this part of the southland what it means for us to face the interests of a united Church program of thinking and doing. As we think and act in harmony with the action taken at Detroit and confidently look forward to Piqua, we can say to each other, 'Yours in friendship and service.'"

What a wonderful work the "Gideons" are doing! We know little about these people, and they seem to keep themselves, as individuals and as an organization, in the background and obscured by the one great single event to which their organization seems to be dedicated. Being unexpectedly in a hotel for a night recently, this writer found on a table in his room a copy of the Holy Bible, "presented by the Gideons." One finds the Bible in hotels throughout this country, north, south, east and west. There must be millions of them, and they have been placed on the tables in the hotels by the Gideons. Encouraged by their success in placing Bibles in the hotels of this country, they decided in 1928 to reach out to other countries and into the Near East. Palestine and Transjordan have twenty-four hotels that cater to tourists and a total of 1,196 rooms. Now Bibles have been placed in each of these rooms, except those used by Jews and Mohammedans only. When the Gideons approached the hotel proprietor in Jerusalem to know if he would allow a copy of the Bible placed in the rooms of his hotel, he remarked that he certainly would, since only the day before two of his guests had inquired for Bibles. We applaud the Gideons for the work they are doing in placing a copy of the Bible at the convenience of millions who have only hotel room for their home at night.

THE BOOK OF UPS AND DOWNS.

"These things have I spoken unto you, that ye may have peace. In the world, ye shall have tribulation; but be of good cheer, for I have overcome the world."—Jno. 16:33.

Some time ago there was a total eclipse of the sun. Years ago, a total eclipse caused great horror, for they thought the end of the world had come. Such a sight is most awesome to those who did not know the cause and did not know that its duration would be very brief. Not long ago a national geographic magazine carried an article which stated that if the total eclipse had lasted for a month, that the darkness would be the means of destroying all of life. Indeed, that is a startling thought—it is all right for a few seconds or minutes, but very dangerous for a space of time. Some people regret that sun eclipse does not last longer than a few minutes at the time; they ought to rejoice that it does not last longer.

Indeed, God has arranged the universe in such a beautiful and wonderful way that after each eclipse the sun shines as never before. After each storm the world seems most peaceful. Indeed, we human beings sometimes get so down in the despondent that we think darkness, trouble, loneliness and tragedy are our lot forever. A lady recently remarked, "I know our family has more trouble than any one else in all the world." But as life moves along we learn that everybody has troubles, and that life is filled with ups and downs, hills and valleys, costs and compensation. Life's contrasts make for variety and happiness.

The Bible is a Book of ups and downs. To some, it is full of the downs. Its pages are permeated with gloom. Jeremiah, the weeping prophet, exposes the immoralities of the day in which he lived, for Jeremiah longed for a quiet place in which to retreat. He complained that he had to behold unwholesome things. At times he cursed the day when he was born and swore that he would quit prophesying. Poor Jeremiah felt that life was so filled with ups and downs that all the ups became downs and none of the downs went up. But there were times when there were ups for him, and many of the most beautiful passages of Bible are in his part of prophesy.

During the past month I have been making a study of the Book of Job, which is the greatest book of gloom in the Bible. This drama is full of an old man's misfortunes, and the book has almost become a synonym for hard luck and suffering, for the whole world seemed to turn against job. He enters a state of terrible despair. His family, friends and all forsake him. His goods were destroyed and he suffers in body, mind and soul. Indeed, there is no more desolate picture in all literature than the Book of Job. But even Job learned that life was not all full of woe—that there were some ups as well as downs in life.

Great lessons can be learned from the experiences of children of Israel in their journey through the wilderness. They started out from their state of bondage, joyfully and full of hope, for they thought they would be led by Moses, their leader, straight and on a triumphant march to a land flowing with milk and honey, but they discovered that the journey was filled with downs as well as ups. The first down came to them when they reached the Red Sea, and there faced difficulties in crossing; but finally the waters opened, and they were not captured by enemies. But a greater down befell them when they came to Marah, for during the three days following the crossing of the Red Sea, they marched under a scorching sun and upon hot sands of the desert without water to drink. And at last they saw water, and they cried out, "Water! water!" and rushed forth to drink, and with parched, dry lips hurriedly reached forward for cups of cold water; but they found the waters of Marah so bitter they could not drink. It was indeed a sore disappointment to them. But the beautiful thing about every disappointment is the blessing. Every down is followed with an up. The harder a ball is knocked, the farther it goes. The greater the downfall of the ball, the higher it rises upward. God knew the children of Israel could not always dwell at Marah, and He led them to Elim, where there were twelve springs and threescore palm trees. Water that was sweet and pure; trees that were shady and balmy.

One needs only to briefly relate the tragic story of Jesus during His last days to portray the fact that His life was filled with downs largely, instead of ups. A Last Supper with the twelve, a traitor in the midst of them; then a dark garden at Gethsemane, human weakness, a bitter cup, drops of bloody sweat falling from His brow; then a cruel capture, an unfriendly kiss, an insult, a mock trial, hooted and hissed, spat upon, maltreated and made to drag his own cross on which he was to be crucified on a hill as a spectacle for men and beasts to behold; to be between two thieves, crying out in distress, "My God, why hast Thou forsaken me!" But after all those things came the dawn and the Resurrection, the sunlight and white flowers, good cheer and holy laughter, song of birds and even the stars sang together as they had never.

When Jesus related the words in the Scripture lesson, He was thinking of the ups and downs of life; and His last words were full of sentiment, for He portrayed what was to happen when He said, "These things have I spoken unto you, that in me ye might have peace."

1. "These things have I spoken unto you, that in me ye might have peace." He told them all about His persecution, betrayal, denial. He related the downs, the darkness and gloom, before saying anything about the ups. He knew that the downs would produce the ups. These things of gloom, these downs in life, I have spoken to you, that in me you might have peace.

Jesus knew His O. T., and it is most likely that He was thinking of that experience of the children of Israel, who were led to taste bitter water before clear, sweet, fresh water. Too easy a time is never good for one. God did not build the world that way. Strength and self-reliance are produced by hardships. The sparkling beauty of a diamond is developed by the roughness of the diamond cutter's tools. The eagle develops his wings by fighting the storms and great winds. He sharpens his voice by competing with the thunders, and a human life is made nobler and greater by the obstacles it overcomes. The dangers it faces and the hardships it endures. There are great advantages in hard places of life. It is dangerous to have too much ease—too many ups, and no downs—it is smooth ice upon which we slip. The world's greatest men are those who have had their downs as well as their ups.

The story of Lincoln, in Dr. Barton's book, reveals that the emancipator reached his highest (up) because he was willing to pay the price and go down for a while. He tells of three days of depression and sadness that came. During that time, the army, Senate, and even his own Cabinet and God, seemed to forsake him. But this was all followed by that supreme hour when he came up. He sent word to the Senate, "I am master."

So it is that these things of gloom were spoken unto the disciples, but they would bring peace. Indeed, the downs came to Moses, Jeremiah, Job, Jesus, Lincoln, Wilson, and all. These things come in pestilence, sickness, doubt, defeat, and even death; but all of life is not in the low places. God gave us more singing than weeping, more laughter than crying, more sunshine than gloom, more winter than hot summer, more hope than despair; and the upward swing of the pendulum of life has never stopped. The human race is on the climb toward high peaks, and today is better than yesterday, tomorrow better than today.

These sorrows and downs have I spoken to you, that you might have peace.

2. "In the world, ye shall have tribulation, but be of good cheer." While men live here on the earth, they are destined to have their ups and their downs. They are going to have lots of tribulation, lots of suffering. Especially is this true of the worldly people, to which Jesus referred when He said, "In the world ye shall have tribulation," or those who are worldly—for, to be sure, every one is worldly, more or less. Let us look at the worldly person who has tribulations beyond comprehension. Let us contrast him with the man whom we call spiritual.

The worldly man, who has tribulations, is he who does not live for others, but self. The spiritually minded man lives for others. These two men enter the same office and transact the same business, but one is worldly and the other is a Christian man. They do the same work, use the same material, receive same salary, but one cherishes the world—he enjoys having a good time, he is not interested in things of beauty, not concerned about the poor and needy, he thinks about self—but the other man strives to serve his Creator, he loves children and people, and has a devotion to the Church. The former man has tribulations which the other man does not have. He does not reveal them; he is ashamed. The other man does not reveal his either; but to God he goes, and from Him receives comfort and blessing.

Two mothers live with their children on the same street. Children dress about alike and attend the same school, ride in same kind of car, and play together. One cannot know the two families of children very long before discovering that the children of one home are worldly and that their mother has her heart set on advancement in the world, social prestige, etc. The mother of the other children has her heart set on making her children to be worth while men and women. The latter woman prays continually that her children may live clean, undisturbed and unpolluted lives.

So it is that we are what we are, because we started life in a worldly way or we started the Christian way. We had the world as an end to attain or God. It is not always easy to choose right from wrong, to know worldly things or godly things; but one thing is sure: if Christ is our companion, He will help us decide, for we read in the concluding words of our text that He overcame the world. Therefore, He bids us to be of good cheer.

On the basis of His conquest, He bids us, His followers, take hold and follow Him. He assures us that the conflict will be easier because He has trod the way before and can thus direct us over the tribulations of life without great trouble. His victory has overcome the worldly. Indeed, we have in Him an example of how a life should be spent—a life that overcame the worldly things,

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

DAILY PRESS AND WET PROPAGANDA.

One of the amazing mysteries of the present time is the continued and persistent effort of a very large per cent of our daily newspapers to break down, and prevent, the enforcement of the eighteenth amendment and our prohibition laws. The Western Christian Advocate (Cincinnati) declares editorially a fact which is patent to every one, that "the daily newspapers of the country could be the leading factor in enforcing prohibition inside of six months if they would all join with the Churches in a campaign to that end." When it is recalled that a very large per cent of the readers, subscribers and supporters of these papers favor prohibition and law enforcement, one is ready to join our Western contemporary in the interrogation: "Why should they not do so? This is a mystery to all public-minded citizens who honor the Constitution and desire to see the enforcement of the same." It is a mystery that the men outside of the news and editorial offices of these dailies cannot fathom.

Of course, these papers justify themselves in their news columns by saying, "We print the news," and since violation of law, instead of observing it is "news," it is natural that the infringements of the law should be published. But one of the two strange phenomena of the situation is that even the news story lends its influence, and oftentimes its justification, to the one who has broken the law. Recently, for instance, a woman was killed in her home in Chicago by prohibition enforcement officers. This was heralded to the country by the daily press as an invasion of the sanctity of the home and the murder of an innocent woman. The facts in the case are that the woman's husband was a notorious bootlegger, had previously been under arrest and sentence for violating the law, and was known to be in open rebellion against the law and a constant violator of the same. The officers went to the house where they knew the bootleg liquor was kept and from whence it was dispensed, and the officer who shot the woman, and the other who witnessed it, testified that the shooting was in self-defense, the woman being the aggressor in defending, not the sanctity of the home, but the house desecrated as the scene of repeated and open violations of the law. One would never have gained these facts from the daily press.

But the second and even deeper mystery about the attitude of the daily press to prohibition enforcement is that the editorial pages, as well as the news columns, literally wreak with wet propaganda. How often must we in our homes who subscribe for and support our daily papers be regaled with editorials belittling prohibition, holding up to ridicule prohibition enforcement officers and prohibition itself? This is all passing strange, since we cannot believe that the wets are using their money effectually with such a large per cent of our daily papers. What a power, indeed, the daily papers would be for law enforcement if they would lend their news columns and their editorial space to upholding and helping to enforce this organic and statute law of the land. If these papers attacked any other constitutional amendment, or any other statute law, as repeatedly and as constantly as they do the prohibition laws, they would be held up to ridicule and scorn. How we wish that they would uphold this as they do other laws and constitutional amendments! It is indeed passing strange they do not. J. O. A.

A CHURCH THAT DRAWS.

Elsewhere in THE SUN this week we print from the pastor, Dr. P. W. Philpot, a sketch of a Church that draws the people and wields a mighty influence—that of the Moody Memorial Church, Chicago. In this sketch of a Church building, with a seating capacity of 4,000 and with an active Church roll numbering 3,750 members, are two outstanding facts that SUN readers would do well to ponder.

First, the pastor says: "Founded on God's Word, the Church, erected as a memorial to D. L. Moody, places the whole emphasis on Bible teaching and preaching and on practical evangelism." Commenting on this fact, the pastor says: "A positive message, the masses crave it. Preachers and laymen alike who believe the Bible as the inspired Word of the living God can speak with divine finality. On the other hand (and reverently), if the Bible is not the Word of God, what authority have we to speak at all?"

This, then, is one feature of this outstanding Church that is worthy of attention: Founded on the Word of God, holding to the Bible as the inspired Book of God, the Church offers a positive message for the salvation of souls through the saving, redeeming power of Jesus Christ. The note of evangelism, positive, definite evangelism, is constantly sounded, the result of which is that every Sunday a member of the great multitude that flock to this Church accept Jesus Christ as their personal Saviour and Redeemer.

The second item that is worth the prayerful consideration of our SUN readers is that it is a missionary Church. Mark these words from the pastor: "With Macedonian urgency, the cry of perishing multitudes has come to eighty-five members of the Moody Church, and in response they have gone gladly to the uttermost parts of the earth with the message. In this group sixty are eligible for support through the Church, and last year the total receipts for missions exceeded $43,000, the full amount necessary in every case (to support these missionaries), besides generous donations to other missionary enterprises."

What a lesson, indeed, to us Christians—one local Church of 3,750 members sending out and supporting far more missionaries than the entire Christian denomination, and the gifts of this Church to missions lacking only $2,000 of being the entire amount called for by missions of the Southern Christian Convention for a Church membership of over 32,000! Verily, we Christians are merely playing at the most serious business that God ever commissioned a Church to undertake or to do, and we have hardly made a beginning of that task which has been assigned us as His professed followers.

When our pulpits everywhere sound out the gospel message in its divine finality from the Book of God, and when we catch the spirit of missions and make missions not secondary but primary in our thinking, giving and activity, a new day will dawn for the people who call themselves Christians and who instead of living up to their call have worn the name lightly, to say the least, or, at best, have done little to enter into that larger fellowship with Him, which is our privilege and our hope.

There are those in the Christian Church who are yet indifferent to missions and will give to any charity, benevolence or enterprise more readily than they will to missions. These excuse themselves on one ground or another, forgetful of the fact that it was none other than the Lord Jesus Christ who instituted missions, who commanded the missionary enterprise, and who is Himself not only the Founder, but the very Spirit of missions. What we give to missions and what we do for missions are solely in His name and for His sake. How readily we lend ourselves to a humanitarian philosophy, a philosophy that forgets God, in thought and consideration for man and the welfare of man, instead of the Christian doctrine of giving His message and making His love and His life known to all the world just for His sake, and for His sake alone. J. O. A.

CONSECRATING THE NEW DOLLAR.

The United States government, beginning with July 10th, will issue a new paper money. One can easily tell the new money, because it is much smaller in size than the old money. A suggestion comes from the Federal Council of Churches of Christ that the first bill of this new money received by any and every Church member be given of God: "Consecrating the first fruits to the service of the Lord." There certainly is no surer nor safer way to consecrate this money than that of giving it to missions, for that which we give to missions is given solely for the sake of our Lord to kingdom enlargement, thus consecrated to the service of God as a missionary offering.

How fine a thing indeed it would be if all members of the Christian Church would send the first new dollar, or new five or ten-dollar bill they get to missions. This, indeed, would help reach our missionary quota of the year and would send a thrill of joy and gladness throughout the Church. Moreover, it would be in keeping with the teaching of the Word of God and the Spirit of the Son to make known His love, His life, and His message to people whom we may never see and may not know and may not love. But He loves them and cares for them, and so in giving to missions we make the most Christ-like and unselfish offering, an offering of faith and devotion, that we will ever make in this world, because it is done solely in His name and for His sake.

Let SUN readers accede to the behest of the Federal Council and send, as an offering to missions, the first new money received, and thus help to baptize, in a sacred stream, this currency that is to flow out from our national Capitol, to be either a bane or a blessing to our country and to the world. J. O. A.

BOOKS AND STUDY.

"Of making many books, there is no end; and much study is a weariness of the flesh" (Eccl. 12:12). This Scripture would apply to this present age, and this shows the Bible is a book that contains truth that covers all time. It is the most up-to-date book, written ages ago. It was not written for one generation, but for all generations; not for one race, but for all races; not for one civilization, but for all civilizations. It is plain enough for the illiterate and deep enough for the most learned. It is the only book that meets all conditions and all needs of mankind. It has been printed in more languages, distributed in larger numbers, and read by more people than any other book. The effort that was made to destroy this Book finally increased its production, its circulation, and its usefulness. It is now printed in more than seven hundred languages and dialects.

But this age is the age of books. The improved printing presses and type machines add to the rapidity of issuing books, and authors multiply as rapidly as the means of printing. It is nothing for one man to write fifty books. Even in schools, students carry so many books, study so many subjects, and read so many other books on the subject of the lesson that the matter is endless as to cost and study. Publishing books is now a commercial business; but most of the books are short-lived, and that makes room for more books. The newest book, the latest book, the lightest book passes over the counter or through the mail with the greatest success. A real book is considered dry and dull.

As civilization advances, great books and great scholars decrease. Almost every subject has been exhausted, the results published, and study is a weariness of the flesh. There is little need for real study—to commit to memory what has been written is the chief work in school and private study. Very little original work is done even in writing books. The author reads other books, paraphrases items from other books, attaches his name to it, and has it printed as his production; and it is. Like all other products of modern times, the chief result is reaching a larger number of people. As railroads, steamships, automobiles, and airplanes increase travel and human contact, and thereby increase knowledge, so the making of many books increases the number of scholars and decreases the importance of learned men. Christian civilization reduces men and women more and more to a common level. Aristocracy and autocracy are doomed. Democracy in thought, in religion, in government, in society, is gaining all the time. Paul's statement, "every one members one of another" (Rom. 12:5), was a great truth that is being realized more and more among Churches and among nations. The Book teaches it, and many books help to realize it.

FIRST CHURCH, PORTSMOUTH, VA.

One of the recent delightful social events of the First Christian Church, Portsmouth, Va., was the surprise reception tendered the pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. H. C. Caviness, on Friday night, June 27th, in honor of the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage. The Addie Holland Circle of the Ladies' Aid Society arranged for the reception, with the members of the other circles and a few additional members as their guests.

Rev. and Mrs. Caviness were invited to the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Brothers, ostensibly to a birthday party for a member of the Church. They were not apprised of the real nature of the occasion until time for the presentation of gifts, when they were asked to take their place in the center of the room. While the opening strains of Lohengrin's "Wedding March" were being played little Miss Mary Floyd presented Mrs. Caviness with a bouquet of gladioli, in the center of which was a note of congratulations, after which the numerous gifts of silver and linen were presented. The silver-decorated wedding cake was cut by Mrs. Caviness, and refreshments of ice cream and cake were served.

Despite a severe storm early in the evening, there were about twenty-five guests present to wish Rev. and Mrs. Caviness many future years of wedded happiness.

One of the outstanding sermons delivered by Rev. H. C. Caviness, pastor of First Christian Church, Portsmouth, Va., was that at the morning service, June 30th. The subject was one which is of vital importance not only to a community, but to the nation. Using as his subject, "The Lord's Day," and taking his text from the words of Jesus, "Lovest Thou Me," Mr. Caviness said, in part: "This (the Sabbath) is a day of hallowed memories, celebrating the most stupendous event in all the history of the eternities of God—the resurrection of Christ from the grave; a day of holiness and worship; a day which God has decreed to be kept without work; a day of rest; and death was His decree for disobedience in its observance (Ex. 35:2). Sabbath observance is a prime requisite in every avenue of life, and he who fails in this must reap the results of its desecration. There are those who mock the observance; some who pollute and profane the holy day of the Lord, seeking to profit in material ways; there are others who are wearied by its usages, saying 'When will the Sabbath be gone, that we may set forth meat, making the ephah small and the shekel great' (Amos 8:5). Yet, we believe that those who prefer market days to Sabbath days are enemies, both of God and humanity; they put aside equity and practice dishonesty, thereby constituting a civic cancer and spiritual liability which, today, seriously threatens the prestige, power and primacy of the United States. The desecration of this day of rest in Israel wrested from this great people their position and place of world-wide leadership, in part, and occasioned national tragedy. There are many who use this day as a time of pleasure, a time of idleness, a time of recreation. An idle Sabbath is the Sabbath of the animal; a sporting Sabbath is one of the golden calf, when the people sat down to feast and rose up to play; and a Sabbath profaned and debauched is the devil's Sabbath. Yet, there are thousands who celebrate the Lord's Day as a time of worship; a day when the Scriptures are read privately and preached publicly; when deeds of mercy and merit are performed, and God is honored, and homes and hearts made happy because of obedience to His divine plan; a day when many find Christ as their Saviour, and His followers enter into that rest which remaineth for the children of God (Heb. 4:9). But, of course, the real and profound significance of the Sabbath of God is that this day speaks of Christ; centers in Him and concerns Him, and, therefore, its desecration is an attack, not of an institution or a day, a State law or a city ordinance, but against Him—Jesus Christ. May God save this city from such a crime, and our country from the epitome of anarchy. 'Lovest thou me?' is the eternal question of Christ, and its answer is found in our obedience to His will, for He said, 'If ye love me, keep my commandments,' and 'If a man love me he will keep my words.' May our love for Christ be evidenced by our obedience to His word, which forbids desecration of the Sabbath."

Mr. Caviness, with the loyal support of the membership, has accomplished a wonderful work in Portsmouth during the three years of his pastorate. The activities of the local Church have attracted attention and occasioned more favorable comment than at any time in the history of the Church. Great progress is to be noticed, not only numerically, but in every branch of the work. The spiritual activities, through the medium of evangelistic campaigns, especially the house-to-house canvassing, have accomplished inexpressible good. Our prayer to God is that the future may have in store for us greater activities in His name and for His glory.

MRS. J. C. ELLIS.

A REUNION.

On Sunday, June 23rd, the family of the deceased Benjamin Eaves held a reunion at the home of Mrs. R. G. Ayscue, better known as "Aunt Stella." There were four families to attend this reunion; that of Mrs. Lucy Eaves Edwards, deceased; Mrs. R. G. Ayscue, Miss Laura Eaves, and R. P. Eaves (the writer's father). The fourth generation was here represented. In fact, four was the outstanding number of the occasion. There were four birthday cakes on the table, one for "Aunt Stella," carrying 71 candles; one for father, with 75 candles; one for "Aunt Laura," with 77, and one for George Edwards (son of Aunt Lucy), with 56. All their birthdays come between June 16th and 26th. B. R. Eaves was born in 1854, married in 1884, and has been married 44 years; has four sons, four daughters living and four children dead. He, with his wife, while in feeble health, still are able to see 44 descendants come back to the old home. In grandfather's family there are four deacons and one real, old-time preacher.

After service at the different Churches, we all went to "Aunt Stella's," and out in the beautiful oak grove we found a long table ready to receive our baskets of food. On this table was placed almost every good thing eatable until the big table seemed overburdened with its heavy load. Our preacher, Rev. Frank Edwards, read a few verses from John 14, with appropriate comments; then our pastor, Rev. H. E. Crutchfield, offered a timely prayer for this large family.

During the afternoon, lemonade was served in abundance, giving refreshment through the warm hours. Our hearts were sad that, for various reasons, many of the family could not attend. However, quite a number stayed on till late afternoon, enjoying a good day together. Then we all left with best wishes to Aunt Stella and Aunt Laura (who is very feeble), trusting that they may be permitted to enjoy many more happy birthdays.

THE LOOMS OF GOD.

The years of man are the looms of God,

Let down from the place of the sun,

On which he is ever weaving,

Till the mystic web is done;

Weaving blindly, but weaving surely,

Each for himself his fate.

He may not see how the pattern looks,

He can only weave and wait;

But looking above for the pattern,

No weaver hath need to fear:

Only let him look clear into heaven—

The perfect pattern is there.

And if he keeps the face of the Saviour

Forever and always in sight,

The work will be sweeter than honey,

The weaving is sure to be right.

And when the work is ended

And the web is turned and shown,

He shall hear the voice of the Master;

It shall say to him, "Well done."

And the white-robed angels of heaven

To bear him hence shall come down,

And God shall give for his hire,

Not golden pence, but a crown.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

This July 4, 1929, is celebrated as the one hundred and fifty-fourth anniversary of the Declaration of Independence of the United States of America, July 4, 1776. No nation in the course of human history has made such progress in such a short period as this nation. Its increase in population, education, wealth, and religion has been marvelous. Less of the war spirit enters into its observance on this day than any day of the past. Peace seems to be in the air and in the mind of the nation. Business closes in honor of the day; banks close and the post-office observes Sunday hours. There is a civic respect for the day and a thankful pride for the principles and achievements of this government within a century and a half. It is the "Glorious Fourth," without which the nation would not exist and could not survive. The reunion of families, the fellowship of friends, the patriotic evidences of loyalty, the enthusiastic enjoyment in a social way, all betoken peace and prosperity of life as well as of material wealth.

The birth of this great nation suggests the birth of Christianity, when Jesus was born in Bethlehem nineteen hundred and twenty-nine years ago. Christmas, among Christians, celebrates that day as faithfully as July the Fourth is celebrated by American citizens; and it is even more important, as nations like our own would not exist but for the birth of Jesus Christ. Added to His birth is His resurrection, kept alive by the celebration of Easter. Christianity is seventeen hundred and seventy-five years older than the United States of America; and it is vastly more important. The Sabbath, what is now called Sunday, is the Christian Sabbath. The observance of the Lord's Day is all-important in the preservation of the Church, as the Fourth of July is in the preservation of the Union. These sacred days are more important, and their observance of more value, than people sometimes imagine. One of the greatest elements in the Church and in the State is the celebration and observance of these days that mark the origin of the Church and the nation.

Without the Fourth of July, history would be forgotten and the nation would perish; without Christmas, A. D., the Church would lose her history, her faith, and her hope of salvation. A. D. has written its importance into the calendar of Christian civilization; and B. C. and A. D. unite in the calendar of time. If the atheistic scholars were consistent, they would not use A. D. in their letters and legal documents. They would not even know when they were born. Christ has written His history into the literature of the world, the business of the world, and the nations of the world. The United States has inscribed upon its coins, "In God We Trust." No man that does not believe in God can do business without this coin, for all paper money is based upon gold. Jesus Christ is all, and in all. "In Him we live and move and have our being, and from Him we receive every good and perfect gift." Blot out the Fourth and Christmas and the tide of human progress would turn backward; keep them alive, and the world will move forward.

ELON LETTER.

The basic assumption underlying all personnel work in modern colleges is the primacy of the individual student. All the resources which the institution may command, whether in the real of finance, equipment, or faculty, must find their highest service in the aid they can render the individual student. President-elect Hutchins of the University of Chicago, previously referred to in an Elon Letter, in his recent convocation address, is quoted as having said, in substance, that a university is a company of scholars. Students are welcomed, he said, to such an institution, provided they are willing to meet the conditions which the scholars lay down for their membership in the institution. Manifestly, this view of education appears to be a direct challenge to the counseling plea, that the individual student is basic and fundamental in the educative process. Elon agrees with the counseling plea. We need more money to carry it out. We can never realize our purpose as a Christian college till we do carry through such a program.

Dean Ryamond Walters, of Swathmore, differentiates two objectives in American education—the democratic and the Greek. The first of these finds its expression in what is known as the activities of the campus. The second he finds in the distinctively intellectual interests of the modern college. He thinks that counseling should harmonize and conserve the essential good and permanent value of both of these objectives.

A seminar conducted in the University of Chicago in 1928 came to the conclusion that there are two practical objectives in counseling. The harmonious adjustment of the individual student to the college environment and the establishment of friendly relations with the individual student of the college.

The tendency in modern colleges is to place the emphasis not on subject matter, but on the individual student. To be more nearly exact, the tendency is that we should construct an experience-centered or experiential curriculum. This curriculum, however, must not only include the personal experience of the individual student, but must orientate the student in reference to the racial experience, yet always in terms of the interests of the individual. The fundamental aim of education is the discovery of meanings for life. No institution has been able as yet to construct such a curriculum, though noteworthy experiments are being conducted in various centers. Notable among these experiments may be cited Antioch College, the Meiklejohn Experimental College, Reed College, Rollins College, the Harvard Tutorial System, the Princeton Preceptorial System, and the International or Constructive Curriculum now being worked out in the department of religious education of the Divinity School of the University of Chicago.

A word of caution should be spoken, or perhaps it would be better to say, a word of response to the criticism that has been brought against personnel work to the effect that guidance is paternalism, and therefore violates the very basic assumption upon which counseling depends, and the individual student should be free to make his choices. Guidance, however, is not paternalistic. It is not a form of external control. It works from within. It is a type of initiative shared both by the teacher and the learner, and secures its ends through understanding, through the sharing of experiences and purposes, and through friendly counseling. It is co-operative control. It is a method of bringing the racial experience to bear upon the particular life-situation. Manifestly, this is something far different from paternalism.

FRANKLIN LETTER.

Every Church, be it great or small, feels the effect of summer and vacation months. As a preventive and suggestion that the members of our Church consider the importance of regular attendance, even during the hot months, the following letter was mailed to a great number of our people. All of us need to check up on our attitude toward God's house and reverently ask ourselves, "Are we putting first things first?" The letter, which follows, was to arouse the interest of many who had seemingly failed to put first things first and had not attended the services with regularity:

"Dear Friend,—At a meeting of the board of deacons of the Franklin Christian Church last night, it was decided that a letter be written to you in behalf of the Church of which you are a member. It was felt that such a message might stimulate your thoughts, renew your interest and help you become more active and regular in your attendance at the services of your Church.

"We want you to know that whenever you are absent from any of the several public services that you are greatly missed. Your pastor and friends wonder where you are and why you are not in your pew. Surely God must feel slighted when any of His children fail to attend His beautiful house of worship.

"Has it not been some time since you attended Church regularly? If so, let's forget the past, think of the future, and plan to be present more often. Remember that there is nothing in all of life so vital and far-reaching as religion. No one knows us so well as God our Father; no one loves us like His beloved Son; no book is so valuable as the Bible; no fellowship so friendly as Christian; and no house so inviting as the Church.

"During the month of July, the evening services are to be graced with beautiful showings of colored lantern-slides. These stereopticon views are sermon messages from the Bible and will not only entertain you but will strengthen and sustain your moral and spiritual life. The morning services are at 11 o'clock. Come, hear a sermon from God's Word and enjoy the young people's choir and worship God in the beauty of His holiness. May we depend on you?"

It was discovered that on the first Sunday after this letter went forth on Thursday that an increase was shown in the Church attendance. A number of people who had not been to services for two or three months responded to the suggestion of the letter.

THE PENTECOSTAL FIRE.

The fire is not a shapeless flame. It is not Abram's lamp, nor the pillar of the desert, nor the coal of Isaiah, nor the infolding flame of Ezekiel. It is a tongue; yea, cloven tongues. On each brow glows a sheet of flame, parted into many tongues. Here was the symbol of the new dispensation. Christianity was to be a tongue of fire. It was a symbol of their "power"; the power whereby the new kingdom was to be built up; the power for which they had so long to tarry, and so eagerly to pray, when all other things were prepared; for which the whole arrangement for the world's conversion was commanded to stand still. The appearance of this one symbol was the signal that former ones had waxed old, and were ready to vanish away. Altar and cherubim, sacrifice and incense, ephod and breastplate, urim and thummim—their work was done. Even of the most sacred emblem of all, that which was the "pattern of things in the heavens," the ark itself, it had been foretold: "They shall say no more, The ark of the covenant of the Lord; neither shall it come to mind; neither shall they remember it; neither shall they visit it; neither shall it be magnified any more." Of the temple itself, the Master has said that not one stone should be left upon another.

All the emblems of the old dispensation were now forever suspended. In their room the Lord has appointed only two; and they chosen with a singular aptness at once to suggest ideas and avoid image representation: the water, wherein the mind could see a symbol of the cleansing Spirit, but the eye no attempted likeness; the bread and wine, wherein the body and the blood are forcibly brought to mind, but no personal similitude set before the eye. These two only were the unartistic emblems which Christ had ordained for His Church. His was to be a religion of the understanding and the heart, wholly resting on the convictions and the principles, building nothing on sense, and permitting nothing to fancy.

In strict keeping with this spiritual stamp of Christianity was the symbol which, once for all, announced to the Church the advent of her conquering power; the power by which she was to stand before kings, to confound synagogues, to silence councils, to still mobs, to confront the learned, to illuminate the senseless, and to inflame the cold; the power by which, beginning at Jerusalem, where the name of Jesus was a byword, she was to proclaim His glory through all Judea, throughout Samaria, and throughout the uttermost parts of the earth. The symbol is a tongue, the only instrument of the grandest war ever waged: a tongue—man's speech to his fellow-man; a message in human words to human faculties, from the understanding to the understanding, from the heart to the heart. A tongue of fire—man's voice, God's truth; man's speech, the Holy Spirit's inspiration; a human organ, a superhuman power. Not one tongue, but cloven tongues. As the speech of men is various, here we see the Creator taking to Himself the language of every man's mother; so that in the very words wherein he heard her say, "I love thee," he might also hear the Father of all say, "I love thee."—The Tongue of Fire.

THE MORNING WATCH.

One morning as I sat at rest after getting my family off to their various occupations for the day, I was listening to a program of sacred songs that my neighbor was playing on her Victrola. No other music or sound of any kind was on the air at the time, and the sacred melodies filled the air with their sweetness. They were inspiring, and just what I needed to start the day. As I listened to the song, "Saviour, Lead Me, Lest I Stray," a woman came walking slowly down the street—a stranger to me, yet in a house-dress. No doubt, she had gotten her family off to their labors for the day also, and possibly came from another block, lured by the sacred melodies. She walked more and more slowly, seemingly listening to the music, and as the song ended she passed out of my view. Almost immediately the noise of traffic and other phonographs tuned in with their jazz, and the harmony of the music was broken and spoiled.

As I took up my Bible to read the morning chapter, I could not help but think how much we need to be "in tune with the Infinite" at the beginning of the day, to have the air free from all that disturbs and breaks the harmony. All too soon the "busy-ness" of the day causes static, yet through it all we may hear the sweet songs of the Spirit which we caught in the early morning hour. All mornings are not so leisurely, and in the rush to get the necessary tasks accomplished we feel that we cannot take time for our morning devotions, yet those mornings are the very time when we need the upward look to keep our bodies under; yes—

"Under the blood, the precious blood,
Under the cleansing, healing flood;
Keep me, Saviour, from day to day,
Under the precious blood."

And even though the day be filled with busy tasks for our hands, yet we may keep the sweet fellowship of the early morning; and the Holy Spirit will teach us and show us the will of the Father and what He would have us to do, opening doors of service where we may do a special work for Him.

Remember that He never asks us to do anything that we cannot do, for "He remembers our frame, He knoweth that we are dust," and He knows just how much we are surrendered to Him and just how much He can use us. The more we do, as He asks, the more completely surrendered our lives will be to Him and to His service. The words of Elizabeth Prestice might well be pondered upon at the beginning of the day:

"Hast Thou, my Master, aught for me to do to honor Thee today?

Hast Thou a word of love to some poor soul that I may say?

For see! this world that Thou hast made so fair, within its heart is sad:

Thousands are lonely, thousands sigh and weep, but few are glad."

Also, written anonymously:

"Comforters are needed much,
Of Christ-like touch." W.

SKETCH OF UNITED CHURCH, LYNCHBURG.

In the spring of 1924, a community missionary effort was undertaken in the neighborhood of Fort Hill, extension, Lynchburg, under the leadership of Rev. M. F. Allen. The first public service was held in the store building which was being reconditioned for Harvey Bros. A large crowd was present. For lack of a better meeting place, the minister and his friends decided to build a bush arbor, and to worship beneath it during the summer of 1924.

A Young People's League was organized and officers elected. A Sunday School was also organized and Mr. Edward Vasburgh was elected as superintendent. With the coming of fall, it was necessary to move from the bush arbor. Mrs. Lawrence offered a place to worship, which was accepted; and from thence to Mrs. C. A. Moore's store building, which she gave free of rent for this cause.

The congregations continued to be large and enthusiastic. The pastor realized that for the good of the future of the organization they should form some connection with an organized Church. The work started under the name of "The Community Mission," but shortly before the death of Mr. E. W. Harvey, Sr., he suggested to the pastor that "Christian" should be a sufficient name for the Church. The congregation voted unanimously to name the congregation "The United Christian Church."

In January, 1925, Rev. J. O. Atkinson came to Lynchburg and assisted in effecting the organization of the Church. Forty-one persons were charter members of the new Church, which was erected at a cost of about $7,000. The following elections were made: pastor, Rev. M. F. Allen; deacons—Messrs. E. W. Harvey, Jr., W. T. Tolley, Sr., W. P. Lawrence, W. T. Dunn and Marshall Dowdy; trustees—Messrs. Edward Vasburgh, O. F. Tolley, W. C. Harvey, F. H. Dunn, Marshall Dowdy; advisers—Messrs. Jos. Lawrence, Sr., J. E. Daniel, and A. S. Dunn; secretary, Mr. F. H. Dunn.

The Christian Endeavor was organized and the Sunday School reorganized with Mr. W. T. Dunn as superintendent. Mr. Dunn has served in the office since this date, and he has been an enthusiastic and efficient leader of the young people. The first service was held in the new Church on Thanksgiving Day, November 27, 1924, but the congregation did not move into the new building until February 8, 1925.

During the pastorate of Rev. M. F. Allen, eighty-seven members were received into the Church. Mr. Allen accepted a call to another Church November, 1926, and Rev. H. G. Robertson was extended a call to the Lynchburg Church. During Mr. Robertson's stay, twenty-three members were added. In November, 1928, Rev. G. C. Crutchfield accepted a call from the Church, and since that time eight members have been received, making a total membership of 107 to date.

LYNCHBURG CHURCH DEDICATED.

Sunday, June 30th, was a great and a good day for the faithful ones, including the pastor, Rev. G. C. Crutchfield, of our United Christian Church, Lynchburg, Va. It was the day of the dedication of the Church, to which they had been looking and for which they had been sacrificing and planning for months. Since arriving on the field last December, the pastor has labored assiduously, and with surprising results, in securing the funds to pay off the Church indebtedness and thus get to work on a firm and sure foundation. The pastor and the people were very happy in not having to solicit or to make a plea for funds to pay off the Church debt on the day of dedication. The Church is suburban, but is located in a growing, flourishing community on the highway entering the city from the South. The building was erected of stucco, has inclined floor and a basement already fitted for service and in use as Sunday School rooms, at a cost of something over $7,000. Elsewhere is presented a historical sketch of the Church, read on the day of dedication by Miss Ettie K. Harvey, who graduated from Elon College at the recent commencement. (Already this congregation has furnished two graduates and other students to Elon College.) The Mission Secretary, J. O. Atkinson, preached the dedicatory sermon, being assisted in the service by Rev. T. Fred Wright, Paces, Va.; the pastor, Rev. G. C. Crutchfield; Dr. C. H. Rowland, Greensboro, N. C. Just before the reading of the dedicatory formula, Bro. W. T. Dunn, on behalf of the Church, presented, in very appropriate terms, the Church for dedication, and the same was accepted by Dr. C. H. Rowland, president of the North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference.

A bountiful luncheon was served in the basement of the Church, and all enjoyed the royal hospitality and sweet fellowship of the hour.

In the afternoon, Dr. C. H. Rowland had charge of the service and preached, to the delight and edification of all, a sermon on "The Principles of the Christian Church," taking for his text, "And the disciples were called Christians first at Antioch." The sermon was very convincing and, we are sure, met the approval, the satisfaction and the high expectation of all present, whether of the Christian or of any other communion.

Bro. W. T. Dunn is superintendent of the Sunday School, and made the day and the occasion quite happy by conducting a model Sunday School before the preaching and dedicatory service began. He is deeply interested in Sunday School and Christian Endeavor work, and, with others, carries the burden and blessing of this good work upon his heart.

Sunday was an epochal day in the history of the United Christian Church at Lynchburg, and we rejoice with all who rejoiced at the achievements and the glory of the day. J. O. A.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

CHARITY BEGINS AT HOME.

We often hear that quotation from those who are opposed to foreign missions. These opponents argue that it is a great mistake to use time and means to try to save the people in foreign lands, while there is so much to be done at our doors. There are many people of prominence and good standing who say these things.

In many cases, this is a bluff on the part of those who use this excuse and the ones who so loudly preach "Charity begins at home" are not doing as much for those at their own doors as the advocates of foreign missions. If we watch, we will see that the ones who are doing the most for those at home are usually the ones who have the missionary passion to save the whole world, including the ones in pagan darkness. It is generally the case that when the pastor wants anything done for the forces at home, he must go to some believer in foreign missions and not to those advocates of "charity begins at home." These are too busy with their own selfish affairs to do much for others, whether they are at home or abroad.

But this quotation, as beautiful as it sounds, is misleading. Charity was and is a foreign missionary movement. It started in heaven, far away from the plains of sin. It began in the heart of God and culminated on Calvary when Jesus died for all men because "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in Him might not perish, but have everlasting life." This charity was the greatest foreign missionary movement ever known, when Jesus came from heaven on His mission to save the world. If this doctrine, "charity begins at home," had prevailed in heaven, Jesus would not have come down here to us, and we would have no provision for salvation.

When charity settles down at home, she dies with starvation and stagnation. The only way charity can live and serve at home is to get out and take exercise by serving others away from home. Thank God, charity did not stay at home when God proposed to save the world.

Charity took another long journey when missionaries came from the Holy Land to preach Jesus to our fathers in Europe. Thank God, charity did not hold to this doctrine of staying home then. If she had, all of us would now be pagans without God and hope in the world. If we discount foreign missions, we are discounting the very force that saved and civilized our race.

Charity took another long, unpromising and dangerous journey when she came across the seas to this American wilderness. There were no Churches and no gospel here until these foreign missionaries came. Every Church in these United States is the result of a foreign missionary movement. Thank God, charity did not stay at home then.

The man who repudiates foreign missions, knocks from under him the very foundation upon which he stands and denounces the very thing that has kept him from being a heathen. Charity never stays at home. She was born in heaven, packed her grip and has never stopped traveling.—Richmond Christian Advocate.

THE STORY OF DANIEL.

The Missionary Review of the World, July, 1927, contains the following story which neatly illustrates the Daniel spirit in modern days.

"The following story has been told by Sadhu

Sundar Singh, to illustrate 'the difference between knowing about Jesus and knowing Him': About three years ago a little girl thirteen years of age was going from her village to another when she was met by a Lama who said to her, 'Your father has become a Christian, and that is, I suppose, why you are a Christian, too.' She replied, 'A Christian Sadhu came to our village to tell of Christ. My family has become Christian. I am a Christian because I know from my own experience that Christ is my Saviour.' The Lama seized her and shut her up in a dark room with the door locked for twenty-four hours, without food or water. At the end of the twenty-four hours, the Lama thought she would ask to be freed. To his great amazement, he found her singing. He shut her up for three days more without food or water. When he opened the door this time, he didn't find her singing, but she was on her knees in a corner of the room talking to some one. He could see her lips moving but her eyes were shut. He began to listen to what she was saying: 'Lord, I thank Thee for the honor of suffering for Thee. Lord, forgive that Lama. Open his eyes that he may see Thy glory.' The Lama burst into tears, and taking off his turban he laid it at her feet and said, 'I am like your grandfather in age today, but you have become my guru (religious mother).'"

A CHURCH THAT DRAWS THE MASSES.

Into the business office of a public stenographer, a consecrated Christian woman, there came from time to time a keen-minded young mechanic. He never went to Church. His interest in "religion" was nil. But tactful conversation was not fruitless. One Monday morning he made this surprising remark, "Well, I went to Church last night."

The young woman was delighted and frankly said so. Quickly he interrupted, with grim determination and bitterness in his voice as he declared, "But I shall never go again!"

Pressed for the reason, he gave this explanation: "For years I have been antagonistic toward the Church. But lately I have wondered if, perhaps, I was not missing something because of my hostile attitude. I talked it over with my wife, and we decided to bury the old resentment, take our child, and go to Church.

"Last night we went with open minds to Dr. Blank's Church (naming one of the most popular in the city). We enjoyed the music. We were prepared to hear an authoritative voice. But what do you suppose that preacher did? He spent his time trying to prove to us that about half the Bible is not true. I tell you, we working people have no appetite for that kind of negative stuff! If a man does not believe his own Book, why should we waste time listening to him?"

A positive message! The masses crave it. Preachers and laymen alike who believe the Bible as the inspired Word of the Living God can speak with Divine finality. On the other hand (and reverently), if the Bible is not the Word of God, what authority have we to speak at all? The only message that will grip individual hearts, that will carry with it evangelizing power for the masses, must find its keynote in "thus saith the Lord."

During more than forty-three years of public work—years spent in large measure in ministry for God among the poor and the degraded—it has been my experience that the gospel, wherever believed in entirety and presented in simplicity, is, as always, "the power of God unto salvation."

Commercially and industrially, Chicago a-throb with life and energy, has arisen to the command of one of the nation's most strategic centers. In this environment and to cope with this opportunity, the Moody Memorial Church has been erected. The masses find the Church easily accessible, located just north of the main business section, near which thousands of wage-earners have rooms. The active roll includes 3,750 members. Founded on God's Word, the Church, erected as a memorial to D. L. Moody, places the whole emphasis on Bible teaching and preaching and on practical evangelism. The primary aim, whether in services of public worship or meetings of separate organizations, is the salvation of souls. No week passes without fruitage in the conversion of those who have been brought to a saving knowledge of the truth in Christ. Does this program attract the masses?

A visitor to any Sunday service would undoubtedly testify that it does. In the main auditorium, 4,040 seats accommodate the people, and rarely is there a Sunday when the building is not well filled. Magnetically drawn by the lure of the city, they come, weary, discouraged, and lonely. Some of them pause falteringly just to drink of the comfort of which the Church motto speaks: "Ever welcome to this house of God are strangers and the poor." They come—as other thousands from Moody's day to ours have come—because they desire sane, sweet, scriptural teaching that exalts the cross of Christ and emphasizes its practical value in every-day life.

While the morning service is usually for the instruction and edification of Christians, not infrequently an appeal is made to the unsaved or the indifferent. The Sunday evening meeting is purely evangelistic, with an hour of music in which the chorus choir of nearly two hundred voices and the congregation are led in the singing of gospel hymns. Visiting ministers are also asked to adjust themselves to the evangelistic program so that there is never a Sunday evening when opportunity is not given to choose Christ as Saviour. Often, without undue urging, as many as twenty respond. In the inquiry room, trained personal workers deal individually with inquirers, and later, brief instruction is given to the group as a whole regarding the importance of prayer, Bible study, etc. A card is signed, giving the name, address, and Church preference of the inquirer, and a gospel of John is given to each. During the week, each inquirer is personally visited, encouraged, and invited to become an active Church member.

The work of the usher band is of inestimable value. Prepared by united, believing prayer, each usher has in his charge a certain section of seats in the auditorium. When the invitation is given to accept Christ, the ushers standing at their assigned posts are able to locate the persons whose hands are raised for prayer and are ready to invite them courteously to the inquiry room, and to accompany them there if they wish.

A number of young people's organizations meet each Sunday afternoon. While an invitation is not given at each one, the entire plan of service points toward the individual acceptance of Christ. Each week at the Young Men's Club and the Business Grills' Council meetings, at which approximately 300 are regularly present, young men and women take Christ as their Saviour. At banquets and social gatherings of the Church and Sunday School, the evangelistic aim predominates. The advantages of an evangelistic ministry are manifold.

In the first place, it amalgamates. It brings unity among believers as nothing else can. No better solvent can there be for differences of race, social standing, and denominational peculiarity than the earnest, persistent effort to bring men and women to a saving knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ. Faced with an open Bible and a seeking soul, no sincere Christian can successfully harbor bitterness or long-engendered strife.

Furthermore, it stimulates. Soul winning, as a common ambition, will exalt to its rightful place in the program of the Church the art of intercession. And prayer will inevitably lead to mutual understanding and sympathy. It will gild with heavenly glory the task of bearing one another's burdens.

Heartbroken parents come to the pastor with this plea: "I have a son, a dear boy. He has left home and I cannot find him. Some day you, or one of your workers, may meet my boy. Tell him, won't you, that his mother believes in him, that she never ceases to pray for him and for his return to God and to his loved ones."

Prayer requests are sent every Sunday morning to the platform, and a congregation of several thousand people engages in united prayer for that specific need. Again, at the Wednesday evening fellowship meeting, devoted entirely to prayer and testimony and attended regularly by 600 to 800 people, it is the staggering sense of obligation for the lost that makes petition fervent and witnessing effective.

How do we raise the money for the maintenance of so great a work? The answer is simple. We do not raise it; we give it. The stimulus for giving is found in the evangelistic aim of the Church. Over $1,000 is needed each week for general expenses. Interest is also required on a bond issue floated to finance the building project. From givers who would be classified by most judges as poor people, these amounts have been regularly forthcoming.

How wholesomely effective is evangelism! It places individual witnessing for Christ on a plane with the most enviable achievements. It enables young people and mature Christians, zealous and warm-hearted, to speak for the Master in homes and business houses where they are employed, and in jails, hospitals and the open air where their unwearying love for the lost makes weekly visits profitable. Through this medium, in connection with this one Church, scores are won for Christ each week.

Echoing through the years with holy solemnity are the words of the Shepherd King: "Other sheep have I . . . them also I must bring." The poignancy of their appeal is sensed most keenly by the individual and the Church whose whole viewpoint is evangelistic. With Macedonian urgency, the cry of perishing multitudes has come to eighty-five members of the Moody Church, and in response they have gone gladly to the uttermost parts of the earth with the message. In this group sixty are eligible and available for support through the Moody Church, and last year, when the total receipts for missions exceeded $43,000, this support in the full amount necessary was supplied in every case, besides generous donations to other missionary enterprises.

Most congregations, afflicted with such ailments as stunted spiritual growth and general weakness, will respond quickly and encouragingly to emphasized evangelism.—Missionary Review of the World.

It will be of interest to our readers to receive the following information concerning the religions of the world. These statistics were recently released from the Stuttgart Statistical Bureau. There are 534,940,000 Christians; Confucianists, 300,000,000; Brahmanists, 214,000,000; Mohammedans, 175,200,000; Buddhists, 121,000,000; Jews, 10,860,000. The followers of Jesus Christ are now in the lead. Their number is growing because they are manifesting, and have been for some time, a great mission urge which seems determined not to spend itself until all the peoples of the earth hear the name of Jesus of Nazareth and come to recognize Him as the Saviour and Lord. Another observation to be made of these figures is that all of these religions came out of the East.—Ex.

At least 1,500 boys and half as many girls begin the use of a cigarette every day in America at the average age of eleven years. Who makes it possible for these boys and girls to begin this health-destroying habit? Do you want to know? Look at the billboards advertising cigarettes.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

Lesson III—July 21, 1929.

EZEKIEL'S VISION OF HOPE.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Of the increase of his government and of peace, there shall be no end."—Isa. 9:7.

LESSON: Ezek. 47:1-12.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psa. 100.

"And he brought me back unto the door of the house; and, behold! waters issued out from under the threshold of the house." We sing, "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow," and in those few words we sum up a profound philosophy of life. In like manner, Ezekiel, in his inspired and prophetic vision, saw that the life-giving waters came from the temple, from under the altar, which was a symbol of Jehovah's very presence. Here, in pictorial imagery, there is a profound truth. There is significance in the fact that Ezekiel used water as a symbol of the truth he wanted to teach. To those of us who have all the water we want for practically all purposes, it may not mean so much, but for the inhabitants of Jerusalem, who had to resort to every expedient to have water even for the necessities of life, and to the inhabitants of Judah, a great part of which was barren and blasted, the figure conveyed a world of meaning and of hope. From the temple, from the house of God, there was to flow out into the new order which Ezekiel firmly believed would come, a life-giving stream of moral and spiritual power. Just as water quickens the physical life, just so would the spirit of God quicken the spiritual life of the nation and of the individual.

"When the man went forth eastward with the line in his hand, he measured a thousand cubits, and he caused me to pass through the waters—waters that were to the ankles . . . waters that were to the knees . . . waters that were to the loins . . . waters to swim in; a river that could not be passed through." What a poetic expression of a great truth which found practical fulfillment in history. At first, the stream of water was not very deep or very great in volume, but as it went it gathered both depth and volume until it was indeed a great river of tremendous power and possibilities. In like manner is the Church. Starting as a mere group of a few disciples, almost as simply another Jewish sect, it gathered both numbers and scope until today it is like unto a mighty river, or a great sea, the influence and the power of which cannot be reckoned. The Church has grown not only in numbers; it has grown in purpose and in scope. Its spirit is pervading all of life, and it claims for its domain every sphere of life that touches the life that now is as well as that which is to come. It would help the average Church member if he would take time occasionally to consider the scope of the Church's activities and its effect upon and contribution to human life.

"And into the sea shall the waters go which were made to issue forth; and the waters shall be healed. And it shall come to pass that every living creature which swarmeth, in every place whither the rivers come, shall live; . . . and the waters of the sea shall be healed, and everything shall live whitherso the river cometh." It is a bold figure. It has reference to the Dead Sea, which lay thirteen hundred feet below the level of the sea, and which was utterly barren of life because of the nature of its water. The region of the Dead Sea is one of the most desolate spots on the face of the earth. And yet to the prophet, with his spirit of hope, there came the picture of the transformation that was to take place in that desolate and forbidding graveyard of nature. Of course, it was not to be taken literally. But back of the figure there was the truth of transforming power of God when applied to even the most unlikely places in life. When the prophet portrayed the transformation of the Dead Sea by the waters of the river, he was simply saying what is said in another place in the Bible, "Wherefore he is able to save unto the uttermost them that come unto God by him." The gospel never fails. The trouble always is that the gospel is not given a fair chance.

"And by the river upon the bank thereof, on this side and on that side, shall grow all trees for meat, whose leaf shall not fade, neither shall the fruit thereof be consumed; it shall bring forth new fruit according to his months because their waters they issued out of the sanctuary; and the fruit thereof shall be for meat, and the leaf thereof for medicine." There will be plenty, and there will be a constant supply. And the trees and the fruit thereof shall be for the food and for the healing of the nations. Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly . . . he shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water. The life rooted and grounded in God shall flower and bring forth fruits that will feed the hungry world and be as medicine for the healing of human woes.

TOPIC: "Every-Day Citizenship."—Rom. 13:3, 7-10; Psa. 15:1-5.

Some Bible Hints.

Good citizenship recognizes "the power." No man can successfully buck society (v. 3).

"Due" and duty go together. If we live in an organized society, it is our duty to support it. Play the game fairly, and obey the laws (v. 7).

When we act on the Christian principle of love, we instantly become good citizens, for we shall want not only to do right, but to be generous in doing it, and give good measure (v. 8).

The gossip and backbiter are not good citizens. They are disruptive, anger-making and not a constructive force (Psa. 15:1-5).

Suggestive Thoughts.

To live a quiet and peaceable life is to be a good citizen. Society life is made up of the numberless helpful acts of all the people. It is the harmful act that makes a bad citizen.

Coral reefs are formed by the bodies of insects that do their work and die. States and nations are formed by individuals in the same way. A good citizen need not be brilliant. It is enough if he is good.

A good citizen keeps the laws. We are disrupters of society when we break them or disregard them. The buyer of bootleg booze is a dangerous citizen.

The good citizen votes. Bad people will vote for officials who will wink at evil. If Church people stay at home on election day, the other will not, and evil men will rule us.

A Few Illustrations.

Good citizens are those that have the spirit of fairness, justice, and good will, who will support what is right as far as they know it. Play the game.

A girl is a good citizen when she cooks a meal and helps her mother. That is solid gold. A girl is very attractive when she has her sleeves rolled up.

Good citizens think of the health of the community. Every town should have its lectures on health and sanitation. State departments of health will tell how to organize such meetings.

A good citizen will not violate the automobile laws. Apply the Golden Rule. Remember you are in a fast-running vehicle, and the foot-passenger does not move as quickly as you do.

To Think About.

How learn the duties of citizenship?

How does the Church help to make good citizens?

Can we be bad citizens and good Christians? Why not?

ELON SUMMER SCHOOL NOTES.

The Summer School of Christian Education at Elon College, N. C., will begin Saturday, July 27th, and continue through Friday night, August 2nd. Programs are being mailed this week to pastors, Sunday School superintendents, and those who were there last year. If others who do not receive programs and who wish them will send a note to this writer he will be glad to forward program to them.

Those who have attended heretofore are enthusiastic about the school. Here is a note from one of them: "The best recommendation I could give the Elon Summer School would be to say that once you have been, you are sorry when it is over and always want to go back. The time is well spent, because you meet new friends and renew old friendships; and in an atmosphere conducive to study you get the best of training for Christian service. The recreational program added to this makes it wholly a delightful ten days of work, study and play." Others have written more at length, and one of the papers is to be found below.

It is expected that this year will be equally as successful as any previous years, and those who do not attend will miss something of great value. Remember the date and get ready to go to Elon July 27, 1929. F. C. LESTER, Chairman.

CALVARY AND PENTECOST.

Calvary and Pentecost are inseparable in the plan of God; these twin powers are indispensable for the achievement of the object of grace. Without Christ as Saviour, the Christian life has not begun. Without the Holy Spirit infilling the believer, the Christian life must fail; and "a powerless Christian is a misnomer." The presence of the Holy Spirit in the life of the redeemed man, as the practical Worker-out of the principles of God, is conditioned by a yieldedness of will. The power, which He alone can impart for character and service, is confirmed in its constancy and effectiveness through obedience to every divine dictate. Through that presence and power alone can the spirit of holiness become manifest, and success in work be assured. "The weakest living creature," wrote Carlyle, "by concentrating his power on a single object, can accomplish something."

Center the power of mind, the gifts of intellect, the desires of the heart, and the opportunities of each hour on Christ, His work and purposes, and there will be no failure. Life glows with splendid possibilities, when the Holy Spirit is in full command of it.

Jesus Christ is winsome and wonderful! He is everything. He has everything. He offers us everything.—Gordon B. Watt, in The Christian, London.

ECHOES FROM ELON SUMMER SCHOOL.

As I think of the 1928 session of the Summer Training School at Elon College, I want to say with the poet, "I would that my tongue could utter the thoughts that arise in me."

So many things stand out in my memory that I feel as if I would like to write at length concerning them, but of course that is quite impossible. I think first of all of my arrival there around 6 o'clock on a Saturday evening in June, after having ridden since eight that morning. Have not yet decided whether it was fatigue or the strangeness of the place that made me want to turn right around and retrace my steps home. Any way, all of the forces of the universe seemed to be pulling me in that direction even before the session began. Sunday wasn't much better, so toward evening, within my room, I tried to find out why I felt thus. Immediately the question arose, Have you entered whole-heartedly? I had not. From that moment on, things took on a different aspect, and I was truly regretful when the time came to return to our homes.

Of the many things which impressed me, probably the most impressing was the sweet spirit of consecrated fellowship. This spirit seemed to permeate every contact which we had with each other. It was as if every one there had met the Master face to face and had caught the same vision from the meeting. This same spirit was especially noticeable in the various contests, stunts and so forth, when a competitive element entered in. Those who lost seemed to realize that "It is good to fail—battles are lost in the same spirit in which they are won."

I am more than sure that the forces of the universe will tug without avail when I reach Elon this summer, for I'm looking forward to the time of convening with vital enthusiasm.

THE SUN LETTER.

We never give up. If we do not at first succeed, we will try again. Our first year as circulation manager of THE CHRISTIAN SUN ended on July 1st. We did not get THE SUN in as many new homes as we had wished to at the first of our year. Neither did we collect as many renewals as we wanted to, and the total amount collected was not as large as we had hoped for, but we are going on our second year with renewed energy and zeal, and pray that we may accomplish more this year. We want everybody to help us. Let us all do our best to put THE SUN in new homes.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Elon College, N. C. Circulation Manager.

THE BOOK OF UPS AND DOWNS.

the temptations of Satan, the hunger for food, etc. This He did by resisting those things, with the power of God in His own life.

The fact that the world is full of tribulation does not seem so bad when we know that Jesus stood them all and came out victorious. He knew that He would, and so before His death on the cross He tells us to be of good cheer. I have overcome the world. His message had been planted, even at the cost of His life.

While there is tribulation in the world, we should be of good cheer, because there are compensations. Back in the Book of Exodus, we read of the children of Israel led to the bitter springs of water, and how, after they could not drink, they were led to Elim, there to drink from sweet and refreshing waters. This truth suggests that God does not permit His children to stay down very long, to suffer hardship, for they did not stay long at the spring of bitter waters.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE,
One of Our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22:25-27.

MONDAY.

IMPATIENCE IS AN INTOLERANT SPIRIT.

"He whose spirit is without restraint is like a city that is broken down."—Prov. 25:28.

Patience and impatience are spirits, as love and hatred are spirits, and when impatience takes the throne it must have its own way. In the breast of a child, its way is the only way, and the whole house must come to its terms. Peace is impossible till its terms are accepted, or its fires are to burn. No matter how wise, or good, or kind, the party against whom its fires are kindled is now all wrong and cannot be tolerated!

Prayer.—Dear Lord Jesus, Grant unto us peace and patience and love, and show forth Thy spirit in all things. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE SURRENDERED LIFE.

"Yield yourselves to God."—Rom. 6:13.

Clay cannot be molded unless it is in a yielding condition. Dough cannot be made into biscuits until it is in a yielding condition.

The whole secret of a believer's life being in tune with God, walking in His light, acting upon His judgment, doing His will, having His power, knowing His peace, possessing His Spirit, and being of service in this world, is a full surrender to Him.

Some folk love ragtime music; but when the ear is trained to a high grade of music it will not listen to ragtime.

Christ says, "Walk in the spirit and ye shall not fulfill the lusts of the flesh."

Prayer.—Dear Father, the Giver of all graces, so give unto us a surrender of our lives to Thee that we may be molded according to Thy will and may be stronger and stronger in the fight against evil. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE GLORY OF TEMPTATION.

"The Lord your God proveth you, to know whether ye love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul."—Deut. 13:3.

Climbing a mountain is healthful. It calls forth increased action of all the organs of the body, its exercise induces sleep and rest, and at its top is success. A thousand temptations come swaggering up to us, but our very best soul-health is in their possession. We cannot get it except by wresting it from them. To overcome these temptations sometimes seems as impossible as the climbing rugged mountains, but to defy them, to resist them, has our spiritual health. Dr. Jowett said, to get it takes, like climbing the mountain, a lot of "hand and knee work." Let us ask ourselves what we would have been today if we had not resisted temptation. Let us also look at those incidents in life wherein we have suffered because we yielded the temptation.

Prayer.—O Lord, we pray to taste and see that the Lord is good. We pray to partake of Thee and that we may have Thy strength, to Him the crown of glory in Christian character. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE FINAL RETROSPECT.

We are told of an old lighthouse-keeper who was passing away. For years it had been his duty to keep the lamps in the high tower burning; now the fires of his own life were burning low as he shipped upon the sea of another world.

He raises up in his bed and asked, "Is the lamp burning in the tower? You know we must not let it go out tonight. Some one will be watching for it."

His wife replied, "Yes, dear, the lamp is all right." He fell back on his bed, and as he breathed his last, said, "Then I can rest."

Have we been faithful?

Prayer.—Dear Lord, bring to us the light of Thy love, that we may be faithful and leave a light behind us by which others may see the way and that we may have eternal peace. Amen.

FRIDAY.

DOES THE LORD NEED ME?

"The Lord hath need of him."—Luke 19:34.

A man was visiting a chapel in Europe once and saw a noted painting. It was one of Jesus on the cross. The crown of thorns pricked His brow and the blood trickled down His face. From the sword-thrust, blood and water was running down His side. At the bottom of the picture was inscribed, "All this I did for thee. What hast thou done for me?"

Has Christ's sufferings invaded our hearts? Has His cause seemed to need us? Trade calls for our toil and skill. Society calls for our talent and beauty. Profession calls for ability and ambition. God calls for our hearts to save the world from its perils and sin. It matters not how humble one may be, God needs us as the vine needs the branch, and we need Him as the branch needs the vine, and He has chosen us to bear His fruit. He might have chosen a chariot instead of the colt, but it is in the humbler things of life we find the confounding of the mighty, and God can do more with consecrated nothing than He can with a self-conceited, self-sufficient, self-dependent proud soul.

Prayer.—Speak to us, dear Lord, and let our souls absorb Thy word and keep it. May we ponder it and take it into our hearts and make it a part of our lives and conversation. Enable us to give our lives to Thee to make the world better. Amen.

SATURDAY.

FILL THE HAND.

"If the Son shall set you free, ye shall be free indeed."—John 8:36.

We are told of an old slave being sold as chattel property. After he had been bought, his master said to him: "Old fellow, I have bought you now." "Yessa, Massa," he replied. "I paid a big price for you," said he. The old slave, with tears trickling down his cheeks, nodded assent. The owner then said, "Well, I have bought you in order to set you free. You can go where you wish. You are a free man." Falling at his master's feet, he cried, "Oh, Massa, I'm your slave forever."

This is a vivid picture of absolute loving submission to a superior love and a type of our submission to God. God is waiting for us, and waiting for the world to fall at His feet like the old servant. The word consecrate meant originally "to fill the hand." As to life: fill the life with Him.

Prayer.—Lord, may there be no lack of consecration in our lives, and no lack of inspiration in His graciousness in the inner man. Amen.

SUNDAY.

A THRESHOLD GOD DOES NOT CROSS.

"How often would I have gathered Thy children together even as a hen gathereth her own brood under her wings, and ye would not."—Luke 13:34.

There is a threshold God does not cross. Like a lover, He woos; like a father, He is proud of the faithful child or He mourns His prodigality. His Spirit pleads and invites, saying, "Come"; or it mourns, and says, "How oft would I—but ye would not." It is ours to bow in loving obedience or to say no and suffer consequences. What fragrance is to the rose, what color is to the sunset, what spotlessness is to the snow—volunteer-ness is to the surrendered life.

Prayer.—O Lord, we acknowledge that Thou art the way, the spirit and the power. Forbid that we shall delay Thy cause in our lives not another day, not another hour. It is now we come, for Thou art near. Amen.

WOULD ASBURY BE AT HOME?

Our greatest missionary was Francis Asbury. If he should revisit the earth would he feel at home? Asbury started out in his episcopal career wearing a gown and bands. The elders followed in his example. The preachers were exceedingly critical. Evidently Jesse Lee, the democrat of democrats in the early Church, disapproved. Doubtless, Lee's merry laugh helped to cure the bishop of his folly. When Asbury was cured he was cured. The bishops brought in the suggestion that in addressing letters to their fellow-ministers that they use, instead of "reverend," the title of either "bishop" or "elder" or "deacon." The preachers did not fancy this. I can hear Jesse's merry laughter again. Lee was Asbury's corrective.

With our anthems and our processions and our songs over scant collections, would Francis feel at home. When he abandoned the gown, he left it behind. There was one thing that he never abandoned, and that was his quest for souls. Those early preachers forced him away from his English ritualistic ideas. Ritualism and evangelism are deadly enemies. Asbury saw it and discarded the millinery. Asbury was not overly stubborn for an Englishman. He was no Bourbon. He could forget some things and learn others.—Richmond Christian Advocate.

CONVINCED BY A PENNY GOSPEL.

A pastor, at the close of his sermon one Sunday morning, was told by a man, "If you can prove to me that what you preach is true, I'll become a Christian." After further conversation, the man added, "If you have a book on Christian evidences that you can let me have, I'll read it carefully, and if it proves its claims, I'll be glad to believe."

That afternoon the pastor took one of his little gospels of John, carefully marked several passages, and wrote a personal letter to this man, saying, "If you read this book carefully, with a heart open to God's Spirit, I believe you will be willing to place your eternal hope on chapter 3, verse 16."

Before the following Sunday, the minister called at this man's home. The man stated that when the gospel of John came, he was much disappointed, for he had expected some profound treatise on the Christian faith. But he read the gospel, read it several times, and at last discovered that his doubts had vanished; he believed, he accepted Christ, and was saved. Nor had he stopped there. He had led his wife to the same step. The next Sunday the entire family openly confessed Christ as their Saviour, and united with the Church.—Bible Society Record.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

Twenty years ago, when the Christian Orphanage had one building and forty children, many of our Sunday Schools contributed from one to two dollars per month toward the support of the Orphanage. I notice from our record some of the same Sunday Schools contribute about the same amount today. I wonder if these same Sunday Schools have not grown any in all these years and are no stronger now than twenty years ago, and are no more able to give now than twenty years ago! Or do they not realize that the Christian Orphanage has grown from a one-building institution, with forty children, to an institution of three beautiful brick buildings with 120 children in its care. It is today doing a service three times as large as twenty years ago. More boys and girls are being reached and helped than ever before. The calls to some is far greater than in the history of our institution. So many needy children who need help and are worthy of help and sympathy. The Christian Orphanage can yet do a larger service for helpless humanity if it had funds with which to bear the expense.

We are wondering if our Sunday Schools would not be willing to increase their monthly offerings to help its Orphanage in its great work of love and charity. We sometimes wonder when we put a nickel in the collection plate for the Orphanage if we have made any sacrifice at all. Have we denied ourselves of anything to give this amount? We wonder if we could not give a quarter or a dollar or more for such a worthy cause, even if we have to deny ourselves of something to make the contribution and then get more real joy out of the giving. "The widow cast in all she had." In our giving, do we ever do this.

LIFE MEMBERSHIPS AND MEMORIALS.

The object of life membership is to give the individual the privilege of a vote in any of the woman's missionary meetings of the Southern Christian Convention.

The object of the memorial, although they have finished their earthly work, there is a fund still working for the great cause of missions in their honor.

The fee of $10 for each membership is for the purpose of raising money for the establishment of an endowment fund to assist in taking care of disabled and retired missionaries. This is a most worthy object and should appeal to every one.

Will you make a plea to every society in your Conference? Urge upon them the great need of a fund of this kind. This is not an entirely new plan, but a branch of our work that has recently been reorganized. If every society in your Conference will make the effort, there should be at least two memberships taken out each year in them.

The society can take out a life membership for their president or any other member they wish to honor. The individual may pay for a membership and so contribute to this fund.

The society or individual that wishes to pay tribute to their dead can express in no finer way than to send to the family of the deceased a missionary memorial certificate, assuring them that though their loved ones have passed on, their memory still lives and is working for the missionaries of the cross who have sacrificed so much for the spread of the gospel.

Have some one in each society in your Conference who will present this particular branch of our work in such a way as to gain memberships. Ask her to report all memberships to you, sending in correct names and addresses, which Church and what society; also which certificates are desired.

Upon receiving these names, the certificates will be mailed direct to the individuals as indicated. These certificates will be signed by the president of the Southern Christian Convention Woman's Board, Mrs. J. A. Williams; also by the superintendent of life and memorial membership, Mrs. M. J. W. White.

The money raised for this purpose should be sent through your local treasurer, with instructions as to what it is for. The life and memorial membership fee is over and above the regular apportionments.

MRS. M. J. W. WHITE.

MISTAKES IN LIFE.

A man is working on an entrance to a cathedral. He dare not make a mistake. This wonderful building, when completed, will be a great edifice where thousands will pass daily. Any mistake made by this workman cannot be changed. It will be there for people to see for a thousand years. Some people think they can make mistakes in their lives and nobody will know about it, and so a mistake will do no harm. Perhaps your life will not be observed by as many people as the entrance to this great cathedral, but it will be seen. We are all bound to make some mistakes, but we must pay for them. Life has a way of collecting for every mistake we make. A mistake in your life is more important than one made in this granite. If we could only understand how permanent our mistakes are, perhaps we would make fewer. It only requires more careful watch of the detail of our lives.—Selected.

APOLO OF THE PIGMIES.

(A Living Miracle.)

Apolo was a boy in Uganda in the days of Alexander Mackay and the early Uganda martyrs. Impressed by the courage of the martyrs, he, too, became a Christian. His adventurous journeys took this African missionary farther and farther west, till at last he crossed the great Ruwenzori Mountain to the vast pigmy forest beyond, where dangers and adventures awaited him.

The storm broke with a vengeance. One poor, deserted woman whom Apolo had protected, had become a Christian. The priests cursed with terrible oaths any other women who should become Christian. The king, a weak and vicious chief, proclaimed that he would give a large present to any one who would burn Apolo's house to the ground with Apolo inside. Very soon, as Apolo knelt in prayer within his hut one night, he heard whispers outside, and then the pungent smell of smoke came drifting through the walls. He quietly prayed on. Suddenly there was a shout, and a body of men broke into the house, now blazing from thatch to floor, and dragged him outside. Spears gleamed in the firelight, yet none laid a finger on him. They led him away to the king. "Why did you not kill him?" he roared. They replied, "We were afraid."

For a time he was unmolested. Then the king, urged on by the witch-doctors, again sent men to forbid him to preach, or he would be killed. Apolo said to them: "Go and tell your master that God's messengers were often killed in days gone by, but it did not stop other messengers from taking their places; tell him that I cannot cease." Then the king, in a rage, sent men with cords to bind him. Apolo quietly asked leave of his captors to tell them about God's love. Spellbound, they listened; then they rose and cut his cords and returned, saying: "Apolo is doing no harm; he is only teaching the people that God loves them; we could not bring him."

Then the king sent his prime minister, with a fresh bodyguard, who led Apolo, manacled, to the king's quarters. There he was stripped naked, and thrashed with twenty lashes from a hippopotamus-hide whip. The lash made its way through the skin and cut cruel wounds in his flesh. Weak, and sick with pain, he was driven to his house, where he lay for days in agony. When he recovered, he summoned the people again to the small Church which he had built. They came, and he taught them and prayed with them fearlessly as before.

The worst was now to come. He was once more captured and bound. This time the king was determined to kill him. Lash after lash fell upon Apolo's naked body, until at last he tottered and fell unconscious. Then the order was given to take up the body and throw it into the long grass of the jungle. "For," said the king, with a sneer, "if life remains, it will not be long before he is carried off by the wild beasts." So the stricken, bleeding body was taken into the jungle, to be a prey for the hyenas and wildcats.

But they had made their reckoning too soon. The Christian woman whom he had befriended stole out secretly into the jungle, to the lonely spot where the body of her teacher and friend lay pale, motionless and bleeding. She knelt and wept beside it. It should at least have decent burial. Suddenly, to her intense joy, there was a flickering movement of the body. "He is alive; he is alive!" she whispered to herself. Quickly she ran to a stream and brought water to bathe his face and wash his wounds. She carried him, with almost superhuman strength, to a deserted hut on the edge of the forest, laid a fire of sticks, and with soft fresh grass made a rough bed for him. Then she went stealthily to her own hut and fetched food and water and fire.

For many a long week in that lonely hut she tended him secretly and carefully like a child, till gradually his dreadful wounds were healed, and his strength slowly returned. When he was quite well again, he told her he must go back and preach to the people once more. She besought him with tears to fly secretly from Mboga. But that was not Apolo's way.

One day he made a dramatic appearance in the village Church, calling the people to worship by beating the Church drum which had so long been silent. There was no mistaking that sound. The whole place was soon in a ferment. "Apolo is risen from the dead," was the cry. The king, trembling with fear, wrapped his cloak around him and set out to the Church to know the truth. He found everything as in the old days. Apolo, book in hand, sat reading the gospel story to the people. When he saw the king, he rose, and, with a cheerful smile, welcomed him to the service.

Then a marvel happened. The king knelt humbly before the Christian whom he had tried to murder, and begged for forgiveness. He asked that he, too, might become a reader, and promised to help the work with all his power. Apolo took the king's hands in his, and lifted up his heart and his voice to God in prayer and thanksgiving. Praise rose from that grass-built sanctuary to heaven, where "the angels of God rejoice over one sinner that repenteth. Before long, there was another feast in Mboga, when "Tabalo," the king, became "Paul," the servant of God.

A new Church was soon built, for the people in scores were becoming Christians; and when Apolo called for volunteers for missionary work among the pigmies of the dark forest, they readily came forward. The pigmies know now of one kinder and better than the cruel, strong "spirit of the forest" who was worshiped with offerings of honey and fruit and meat in the hut-temples of the deep forest fastness.

Canon Apolo Kivebulaya (for he is now a canon of the Church of England) is an old man, and known throughout all the Uganda Church as a leader and a saint, but he is today as humble and unspoiled, cheery and unselfish as in the day when he trudged up the mountain-side of the Everest of Central Africa, with his knapsack on his back, Christ at his side, and the great missionary adventure still ahead of him in the dark pigmy forest.—Missionary Review of the World.

THE BIBLE AS A NATION-BUILDER.

More than four centuries ago, William Tyndale was strangled and his body burned because he translated, printed and circulated copies of the Bible. In death, this martyr prayed, "Lord, open the eyes of the King of England." Within about a year that prayer was answered. A historian informs us: "King Henry broke the shackles of centuries and gave the Bible to the people. The translator himself was translated; and his translation was the event, more than any other, that marked the parting of the ways of civilization."

Spain was then the greatest power among the nations. Her armies commanded both hemispheres, and her fleets swept the seas. England was little more than an appendage of France. But England took the Bible of Tyndale; Spain refused it and set up the Inquisition in its place. Spain went down; England began to rise. Today the influence of the English-speaking peoples dominates the earth.

From the loins of that England sprang these United States. Our first schools, even the common schools, were Church schools. In many cases in the early days the Bible was about the only textbook used. There followed the old-fashioned academies and the colleges in which the Bible was an important part of the course of study. It is here that we are forced to look for the foundation-stones of our republic.

Our world has been signally served by three very tiny countries—Attica, Palestine and Scotland. Palestine and Scotland were nourished in the lore and the spirit of the Bible. Scotland is a rough land and most of its people are poor. It seems to have been concerned with piling up men rather than in piling up fortunes. The Scotchman has become the butt of many a humorous story of parsimony, but it must be said in his defense that he is even more cautious in the use of that inner wealth which coins itself in character. His heart is as warm and generous toward strangers as that of any race. Scotland is a national illustration of the value of plain living and high thinking. Large business firms, useful professions, college and university faculties and prominent pulpits are graced by renowned men whose names reveal Scotch ancestry.
