To build a nation of a particular kind, the people within it must build themselves according to those ideals. Five potent institutions, or influences, have most, though not all, to do in giving character to the people—the home; the general atmosphere of the producing community in its play, its social and business ideals; the school and its recreation grounds; the influences of community derivation, or, as we commonly say, "the street," newspapers, magazines, movies and radio; and, finally, at the very top, religion trying to give character to all of them.

In a control by moral idealism is a nation's safety. To accomplish this there must be the promoting force of a church that is free and a pulpit that is intellectually competent and morally courageous. It is for such a purpose that the church exists and Councils like this are held. If the church fails in the hour of men's need, it fails altogether. What else she may do for God is unimportant. Remoteness when men are in adversity will mean a like state after adversity is past. In these anxious times the church cannot function by merely saying things, nor can it, if inactive, survive in the affections of men. It dare not permit its activities again to center upon marginal aspects of theological opinions, or ecclesiastical practice. Its emphasis must be upon man and a Christian order of society. The value of the whole Christian system lies in what it does for, in, and through man. Institutions, including the church, justify their existence only by serving worthy human ends.

The spiritual health of our nation is not exuberant. However well intended, our panaceas for depression are unbrotherly when we destroy crops so that one class may receive more income from another class less able to pay. That genius of the variety which makes two blades of grass grow where but one grew before has lost his standing, and his slothful competitor who makes one blade grow where two grew before is now wearing the crown of glory.

A united church is necessary to stand the strain of present conditions. One school of thought now says that it is the business of the church to enter all fields—industrial, business, educational, moral etc., to effect reform. Another urges that we "stick to the gospel," concentrating our attention upon the regeneration of individuals as the method of changing the social mass. There are always extremists and indifferents, each equaling the other as obstructionists. Righteousness must find a way to progress somewhere between that pet expression of "Old Time Religion" and a ruthless iconoclasm which has no respect for the age of anything. We may well leave out the question whether our task is to be by a generalized mass system or by individual regeneration, and conclude that it is by both. Our response should be to a creative faith that seeks the best and is willing to pay its price, instead of to a desperation which would plunge us into a programless future. Sincere devotees of the old and the new have often fought each other instead of a common enemy. All may work together at the point where their ideals and purposes meet instead of where their doctrines and histories differ. The gospel in our day is hindered less by the wickedness of men than by their littleness.

The present achieved righteousness of the church is far from adequate to produce the required moral exaltation of a nation. Our first line of approach is unto ourselves. We cannot here solve the problems of the world. If this Council helps us to establish an individual relation to them, it will be glory enough for one session.

It will be tragic if the church majors its efforts upon building an institution instead of fulfilling a mission—if it tries to build itself instead of a better order of society. For long, we have emphasized our doctrines, systems, and methods, the value of which has never been in anything except what came out of them. We have dealt more severely with the creeds of our constituency than with their greeds. The church has been under a madness to count and has suffered from statistical stultification. The fever of numerics can reduce spiritual vitality. The real test of the life of a church is to be found in the sacrifice with which it is willing to testify to its devotion, its sensitiveness to the real needs of all life and its intelligence and service in meeting them.

The Kingdom will not come without methods, nor will it come by these alone. Conventional Christianity can never be a substitute for fresh impulses born out of a constant relationship with the Divine. For men to work for righteousness with confidence and enthusiasm, it is necessary to believe that the living God is really present in human affairs, and that under his power a thing even so large as a world can be changed. A detached religion will be powerless to effect changes in living. To be adjustable to changing times, our Christianity must have an inner vitality, but this can grow only out of certainties of faith. Every cause to which the church is committed requires a power which is not indigenous in man.

New Life Through Vision.

There can be no mechanical perpetuation of our Christianity. Every program in its interest must be backed by an inner heartiness of soul and a sacrificial service. Only new visions, divinely given, can lead us on progressively.

In the hush of this hour voices speak to us out of the past. They repeat the urgencies of a worthy history. But new and stronger ones come out of the future and they are entitled to more attention. Many great men and movements have glorified our past. Yet the history which others made is a negligible item of credit to us, retaining but the one value of inspiration. There is very little in religion that is inheritable. We may appropriately share the concern of that father who "was not half as worried about his ancestors as about their descendants." The consecration with which we work is our sole title to credit. Our test is on functions, not antecedents. May God save us from dropping into a round of trivialities in the midst of questions of surpassing magnitude!

We reinterpret for our own age what Christianity is and does. The liberty, elasticity, and adaptability of the churches represented in this Council increase their responsibility for the righteousness of the nation. No one needs to remind us of the dangers of non-cohesion which a liberal democratic church government invites. Such threats can be avoided only by a superior loyalty of the heart. We may feel comfortable in our idealism of theories and congratulate ourselves upon our liberality, but these are not comparable in value with our practical contribution of service toward a better world. The distinctive worth of denominations as they themselves measure is usually something which the world outside scarcely observes.

Though the light from our Arcturus of Pilgrim days may reach to this time, we may claim it only as we glorify it by multiplying its illumination with the greatly increased resources of our day. The glory of those early fathers was that they broke with the past, and under the direction of God, unselfishly and courageously launched out into the new before its exact nature could be known or its obligations measured.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

DEFIANCE SUMMER SCHOOL.

Last week there were about eighty young people from Ohio in a Leadership Training School at Defiance. Leaders of this school would compare favorably with teachers in any college. The daily schedule called for a private devotional period of fifteen minutes and a half hour's chapel service immediately following breakfast. The remainder of the morning was given to class work and study with just a little break in the middle for recreation. In the afternoon there was time for rest and study, committee meetings of various types, and recreation. In the evening there was a forum, a vesper service, and some additional feature, usually of an entertaining type.

It was my privilege to conduct the chapel services and to lead one of the forum groups. The chapel talks centered on the general theme of "Some Things I Believe." The forum was on the topic now being discussed by young people of most denominations; namely, "Christian Youth Building a New World." They were thinking in terms of a new person, home, church, community, nation, world. My group discussed the church. They recognized the many difficulties with the church of today and believed a change can be made for the better, and pointed out many ways in which this can be done.

Looking back upon the busy and happy week at Defiance a visitor from afar is inclined to say only kind things about this training school. Rev. W. G. (Dad) Kirshner, Mrs. M. T. Morrill, Miss Lucy Eldredge, Mrs. Clark Dennison, and the others who were responsible for the school are to be congratulated on their ability to direct things by putting other people in front of the procession. It was a fine type of young person who came from the various churches in search of knowledge that would aid in leadership. The days and nights were filled with a proper mixture of serious study and good clean fun. The writer shall treasure for years to come the memory of this high experience among the young people at Defiance Christian College.

YOUNG PEOPLE AT OBERLIN.

Something should be said about the meeting of young people on Sunday during the General Council meeting in Oberlin, Ohio. Miss Lucy Eldredge was largely responsible for this meeting, although she did not appear on the program at any time.

It was an inspiring sight to behold six hundred young people sitting in that beautiful Finney auditorium listening to Dr. Albert Coe and Miss Margaret Slattery. Dr. Coe, a former North Carolina boy, now of Oak Park, Illinois, declared that people are "born to victory." He says that it is possible for young people to succeed in a world like this.

Miss Slattery spoke interestingly on the theme, "He Stopped There." She says that everyone has a limit beyond which he will not go. In climbing a mountain some stop before beginning, others go only a short distance, some lose their strength when near the top, and only a few press on to the heights. She spoke directly to the hearts of the young people present. Among the statements that I recall is this: "It is alcohol that makes you drunk. The way not to get drunk is to leave it alone."

The young people had a picnic supper on the campus of Oberlin and were led in a vesper service with Dr. Allan K. Chambers of New York City as the principle speaker. Several of the young people themselves appeared on the programs of the day.

Christian and Congregational young people of Ohio and nearby states are moving forward in Christian activity. If Southern young people are to keep step with them, we must be up and doing.

A CORRECTION.

The printer made a rather serious mistake in announcing the topics which Dr. Charles Eldred Shelton will use at Elon Summer School July 23-29, for the ministers discussion groups. The topics are as follows:

1. "The Preacher in the Pulpit."
2. "The Preacher's Nerves—and Muscles."
3. "The Sensational Preacher."
4. "The Danger of the Degeneration of the Ministerial Mind."
5. "The Preaching Values of Literature."

Elective Alternatives: "Visual Worship," "Doctrinal Preaching," "Sermonic Humor."

It will be too bad if any of our ministers miss hearing Dr. Shelton. Incidentally the young people have a real treat in store, for he will give a course daily on life work and will speak one or more times to the entire group.

ELON AGAIN.

Please don't forget that the Elon Summer School of Leadership Training will open Monday afternoon July 23, 1934, and will be in session until Sunday noon, following.

The cost is $7.50 for the week. It will be necessary to buy one book in addition to this, the cost of which will probably be about $1.00.

Courses and teachers are as follows:

The New Testament, Rev. W. T. Scott; A Study of Childhood, Miss Clara Gill; A Study of Adolescence, Dean A. L. Hook; Worship and the Devotional Life, Rev. H. S. Hardcastle; Story Telling, Miss Priscilla Chase.

There will be some non-credit courses for personal help and a great deal of directed play and good times.

There will be special features for the ministers, as noted above and to be announced.

Young people, leaders of young people, Sunday School superintendents and teachers, pastors, and all those who are interested in developing their better selves are urged to be present at Elon for this training school.

COMRADE CAMPERS MEET.

Three weeks ago about thirty young people and leaders from Tennessee, Kentucky, and Alabama, came together. They climbed into the mountains of East Tennessee to the well-known "camp" at Grandview. From the top of this mountain the Tennessee valley spreads itself with all its grandeur and beauty. Then the Alleghenies and the Great Smokies loom large on the Eastern sky line. Words fail us when we attempt to describe the handiwork of the Heavenly Father in this area. The reader may loose the reins of his imagination and picture the scene as the "campers" beheld it for themselves.

These young people not only sought a vision on a mountain top but they played, worked, sang and studied. They were truly seekers after greater things. Indeed, they studied to show themselves approved. Each and everyone lived up to the name which they have chosen for themselves—"Christian Comrades." A spirit of cooperation was manifested on every hand. Everyone had the spirit of the camp at heart and proved it by his or her action. The four-fold life was displayed by capable personages. There was no let-down in the work. In fact, some fought for a longer session for next year.

The thing that impressed the writer who lived these happy moments one by one with these enthusiastic youths was their earnestness and eagerness to work; or better, serve, not only in the camp but in their locality back home. Certainly the experiences they had in the mountain-top will become light unto the paths of their Christian brothers in the valley. In all the worship services, discussions, and classes each one seemed to be seeking reality or the heart of present-day problems. They shot straight to the mark. They were thinking for themselves. They were endeavoring to meet the challenge as all young people should during these days of uncertainty. These young people found security in God. Would that nations of the world would take cognizance of this fact!

After sharing the experiences of youth no one should dare doubt the ability of youth to carry on in this modern age. The writer would plead for the youth of the country an opportunity to do and to serve. May each church group, conference member, and any other person who chances to read these lines take courage. There is "power" unbounded pent up in the mind and soul of youth. Look for it in your summer conferences and camps and give it a chance for expression. See how quickly this "something" that makes youth want to serve others blossoms as "the flowers in May."

CARL R. KEY.

THE BEST BOOK I HAVE READ THIS YEAR.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR JULY 22, 1934.
II COR. 3:1-6.

Program.

Theme: "Worthwhile Reading."

Prelude: "Joyful, joyful, we adore Thee." (Instrumental.)

Opening Hymn: "Lamp of Our Feet Whereby We Trace." (Copyright by Church Hymnary Trust.)

Scripture Lesson: II Cor. 3:1-6.

Prayer.

Hymn: "Abide With Me."

Speaker: "Best Books—how shall I select them?"

Hymn: "Thy Word is Like a Garden, Lord." Other suggested Hymns: "Blessed Book, Precious Book"; "Thy Word is Like a Garden, Lord"; "Lamp of Our Feet, Whereby We Trace"; "A Glory Gilds the Sacred Page."

Daily Readings:

Monday, July 16—The Bible. Ps. 119:73-80.

Tuesday, July 17—Religious Books. Eph. 3:1-7.

Wednesday, July 18—Good Stories. Matt. 13:1-9.

Thursday, July 19—Biography. Ruth 1:18.

Friday, July 20—True Science. I Tim. 6:20-21.

Saturday, July 21—Travel. Ps. 107:1-8, 23-24.

Sunday, July 22—The Best Book I Have Read This Year. Eccles. 12:12; Acts 19:19.

If this meeting is to be helpful much advance preparation must be made. The following are some suggestions of what may be done before and during the meeting:

1. The leader must be prepared to introduce the meeting with an interesting report of something fine which he has read.

2. Several others must be prepared (having been asked in advance) to do the same thing.

3. The leader may consult the public librarian
(Continued on page 15.)

Sunday School Lesson
By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

GOD CARES FOR ELIJAH.

LESSON III, JULY 15, 1934.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things."—Mat. 6:32.

LESSON TEXT: I Kings 17:1-24; 19:1-8.

"Elijah, the Tishbite"—thus comes upon the scene of biblical history and world events, a unique personality and a dynamic power. We know little about his previous life. We know only that he was "of the inhabitants of Gilead"—probably a man from the hills and mountains whose character took on some of the ruggedness of his surroundings. He had an experience of God and a sense of mission from God. Because of this fact he was bold to speak the truth, and courageous to undertake the difficult. He was stern, uncompromising, a prophet of fire. The greatest compliment to him is the fact that John the Baptist was likened unto him. He had a deep loyalty to Jehovah and an intense hatred of everything that threatened Jehovah's sovereignty. One might question his methods, but no one could question his sincerity or his spirit. He was among the first of that long line of prophets who consistently inveighed against both the worship of "strange gods", and insincere worship of the "true God." Out of the solitude and the silence of a rugged country comes this rugged prophet to strike terror into the hearts of wicked leaders in high places, and to bring encouragement to humble followers of Jehovah in obscure walks of life.

"Unto Ahab."

Ahab was a king, a king of no mean ability, a king over a goodly nation. Elijah was an unknown prophet, an eccentric kind of fellow, a man who believed in "old-fashioned religion." But the prophet was made of stern stuff. God had spoken to him. And because he feared God, he did not fear what man could do unto him. He told Ahab that God was going to send a drought as punishment upon the nation for its sins, that that drought would last a long time, that he, a nameless prophet would be the one to say when it was to end. (He was Jehovah's spokesman in the matter.) It took courage to do that. It takes courage to rebuke sin in high places. Ministers and Sunday School teachers should not "trim their messages" to suit their hearers. Our modern world needs ministers who are not afraid to preach the truth.

"According Unto the Word of the Lord."

It looked like a foolish thing to do—to leave a land of apparent plenty and to go off into the wilderness, there to depend upon the seemingly impossible method of being fed by "ravens." But the word of the Lord had come to Elijah, and Elijah did according to the word of the Lord. Obedience—what demands it makes upon us in our religious life! But obedience always justifies itself. Those who do according unto the word of the Lord know that God keeps His word.

"And the Brook Dried Up."

"We never miss the water until the well runs dry." That dry brook spoke volumes to Elijah of God's care and providence. How often we accept even the common-place gifts of God without any thought of what they mean to our lives. Alas that we cannot appreciate so many of our blessings until it is too late!

"The Word of the Lord Came Unto Him."

The steps of a good man are ordered of the Lord. God guides the man who is committed to do His will. This does not mean that there will always be a miraculous vision, or "signs and wonders". God guides by common-sense and judgment and sound advice, as well as by inner insights and spiritual impressions. But the man who follows God will not be led up a blind alley.

"The Widow of Zarepath."

Elijah was sent to Zarepath unto a woman that was a widow. She had been reduced to such dire straits that even as he reached her city she had gone out to gather a few sticks to cook what little meal she had so that she and her son might eat what to all intents was their last meal, before they starved to death. And yet in obedience to the prophet's command, and by a venture of faith she divided with Elijah such as she and her son had. And she found that she had more than enough for all. Indeed, Elijah and her household "did eat many days, and the barrel of meal wasted not, neither did the cruse of oil fail, according to the word of the Lord, which he spake by Elijah."

Of course it is all a parable of life. There are those who think that they do not have enough for themselves, and yet they have enough for both themselves and others. As we share we have. It is a fundamental principle of life. The tragedy of the present situation in our country when so many people are in want, and when, especially during the winter there is hunger and even starvation, is not that there is not enough and to spare; it is that there is not enough Christian sharing. There are a great many people who are living for themselves, who would find that they would actually have more if they shared with others. There are many who say that it takes all they make to take care of themselves and hence they cannot give to the church or to charitable causes, when as a matter of fact they waste more than enough to give substantial gifts to the church, and to the needy of their community. Men and women, many men and women who are members of the church spend more for tobacco and drinks and gasoline for pleasure and movies and many kinds of luxuries than they give to the church. Here after all is an acid test. One reason why so many people do not have more is because they are not good stewards of what they do have. He who is willing to share with others will have enough for himself. The best guarantee for taking care of what we have is to share with others. That may sound like poor business but it is sound spiritual mathematics.

It is to be remembered that Jesus referred to this incident during His early ministry. It was to a foreigner, a hated "out-sider" that Elijah was sent and not a widow in Israel. He is no respecter of persons. The so-called heathen are within his care. His heart is pained by the hunger in every land as well as in our land.

CONVENTION NOTICE.

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Eastern Virginia Conference will be held at the First Christian Church, Richmond, Va., on Tuesday, July 17, 1934. It is earnestly hoped that the attendance will be large, and that each School, and Christian Endeavor Society will not only get their report in, but their Convention dues as well, and that each organization will have delegates there.

The program is a good one. Among the speakers are Revs. H. S. Hardcastle, F. C. Lester and Dr. Sidney B. Hall. The Church at Richmond has a big welcome for us, and a visit to the Capitol of Virginia is a rare privilege.

J. F. MORGAN, Pres.

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.

Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.

These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies, in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. It combines with the Concordance, Subject-Index, Scripture Proper Names, etc. The 12 Maps have been carefully revised and are beautifully colored. In making orders, give the number and price.

135—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold. $3.00

India Paper Edition, Only 16-16 of an inch thick.

. 133X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold, $4.00

SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS' BIBLE.

Especially made up for gift or reward Bibles for Sunday School scholars, containing a special series of very practical and useful helps and Bible Questions and Answers, etc. Printed on fine white Bible paper; ruby type; pocket size, 3 3/4 x 5 3/8 inches, and 1 inch thick, with 31 full-page illustrations in sepia. All bindings are black. Ruby Type, Size 3 3/4 x 5 3/8 Inches, and 1 Inch Thick.

65—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold; 6 colored maps .....$2.50

AUTHORIZED VERSION.

RED LETTER TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Brevier Type (8 vo.), Self-Pronouncing, Size 5 3/8 x 8 3/4 Inches and 1 3/8 Inches Thick.

Containing the Bible, with full references. The words of Christ in the New Testament are printed in red; other parts of the book are printed in black. With Concise Bible Dictionary, combined Concordance, and 12 indexed maps.

7852—Genuine Leather, Lavant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold .....$4.75

RED-LETTER EDITION.

With All the Words of Christ in the New Testament Printed in Red.

1282—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit round corners, red under gold edges, register and headbands; title stamped on side and back in pure gold .....$3.25

60—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, Sunday School Scholars' Bible, stamped in pure gold on cover, no illustrations; special book for Sunday Schools .....95c

Any of the above Bibles sent postpaid. Address
THE CHRISTIAN SUN
1536 East Broad Street Richmond, Virginia

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy

MONDAY.

"THE PREVAILING SPIRIT OF A CHRISTIAN."

"By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another."—Jno. 13:35.

It turns darkness into light, sadness into joy, despair into hope, holds the mind to a central purpose, lifts love above self-interest, and under its influence is patient and kind, not easily provoked, endures all things, abides when all else fails, loves and is patient in the fire of scorn and misunderstanding, lives above strife and wrath, welds out pride and cruelty, takes its place by entreaty and not contention, it believes and hopes even when the skies are dark, and goes all the way to win and save.

This is the life that Christ was, the life that He taught, and the life that He prescribed for us, and set forth as the true evidences of a christian.

The true christian ceases from sin; halts no longer between opinions. He has decided to be a citizen of the kingdom of God, and live in the light whose foundation and builder is God.

Prayer—Our Father, we are aware that such perfection does not often come to any of us, but we do believe that Thou wilt consummate it in all who find Thee and know Thy love. So we open our hearts to Thee and pray that Thou wouldst fill us with all the good Thou wouldst have us be. In Christ's name, we ask it.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"GOD'S EXPRESSION."

"Then said Jesus unto them, 'When ye have lifted up the son of man, then shall ye know that I am He.'"—Jno. 8:28.

God is found where the higher ideals conquer the lower ones, where right supercedes wrong, where harmony takes the place of discord, where peace takes the place of strife, where light drives away darkness, where human life rises highest, where there is unselfish goodness, where love pours itself out; there God is.

In all these things God creates His new world of truth, and beauty, and expresses Himself through them. Where everything is best God is most nearly incarnate, and is most nearly to be found.

Prayer—Our Father, we pray Thou to give unto us the capacity to discover Thee, to know Thee and love Thee. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY

"SERVING THE LORD."

"Serve the Lord with all your heart."—I Sam. 12:20.

Serving the Lord is the supreme motive of the christian life. St. Paul says serving the Lord is the greatest boon to life. Read Romans 12:11, and then think this way: "When my work is hard and I am tired; when I am discouraged and about to give up; when everything seems to fail and I am doomed to nothing; think, —well! I am serving the Lord." Does that not freshen you? Does that not give you new strength for the task? New courage for the race, new hope for reward? Would that we could hear the "ayes" of all God's servants!

Right christians are "stick-to-it" christians, and the closer they keep to God, the more joyful is their way, because they recognize God's way in it. If true, we ought to enjoy our religion twenty-four hours a day. In life, he who will not work deserves no pay. The same is true of the kingdom. He who will not serve cannot expect the reward.

Prayer—Our Father in heaven, we do not pray to escape work, pain or suffering, we only ask for strength and courage to work for the excellent, we ask for vision to recognize Thee all the way, for we feel of Thy hand in ours, for the gift of love to serve our fellowman, and grant this and we will render Thee all the praise, world attributes.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"THE UNFAILING BOOK."

"Seek ye out the Book of the Lord, and read: no one of these shall fail."—Isa. 34:16.

"The scriptures of God is a store house—abounding with inestimable treasures of wisdom and knowledge"—Hooker.

What are some of the values of this store-house?

It is a communication between God and His children.

It is God's power, intelligence and will in expression.

It is a revelation of God's character. We can not read it without feeling His infinite piety, tenderness, and holiness.

It is the authority and permanence of the christian religion, which supplies our greatest need.

It is the lamp to our feet, the light to our pathway, and sure guidance to the rewards for service.

Prayer—

"In Thee, Jesus, godhead-stored,
All things we inherit,
For Thou art the very word
And the very spirit!"

—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"DIVINE PRESERVATION."

"The Lord shall preserve thee from all evil."—Amen.

Your writer believes this, because of the evidence in his own life's pathway. It is more apparent as he goes along. It is a pleasure to give this testimony.

Each day begins and ends, and there are many dangers along the way. We are often at close grips with the world and are menaced, if not by temptations, by errors, misjudgments, confused reckonings, and "blind flying." But there is genuine joy when one looks back over the way and realizes that a Divine Providence has had his hand on the wheel and not one of his steps have slipped. We rejoice to say, "The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want."

Prayer—Dear Father, we lift up our eyes unto Thee from whence cometh our help, and we will trust and follow Thee forever.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"WOBBLE METERS."

"Beware lest . . . ye fall from your own steadfastness."—II Peter 3:14-18.

An inventor has perfected a little platform, delicately balanced, on which a man is to stand, and the contrivance will register the degree of his steadiness or wavering, thereby determining how tired he is. The idea is to test the powers of endurance of different workmen at different tasks under varying conditions.

How firmly can we stand while we are about our life-work? There are many who turn out their work regularly, but grow tired in the doing of it. There are others that labor steadily all day, and are nearly as fresh at the close of the day as in the morning.

And however it may be with our bodies, our spirits may and should come to the eventide of life more vigorous and steadier than they were when they started out. That is one thing that Christianity should mean.

Prayer—Be our firmness, our Saviour, we pray Thee. May we never falter on the way, as Thou dost never falter. May we feel ever beneath us the everlasting arms.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

SUNDAY.

"UNIMAGINED WONDERS."

"As he passed by, he saw a man blind from his birth."—John 9:1-7.

A Philadelphia surgeon, by an operation of marvelous skill, has given sight to a young man of twenty-two who was born blind, his eyes being without pupils. The newspapers feelingly describe the young man's wonder at the lovely world so suddenly presented to him, especially the flowers and the faces of human beings.

As we read of this almost miraculous accomplishment, we think of the soul-blindness affecting so many men and women, who have never seen the truth in all its living beauty, who have never known the love of God in Christ, who have never looked ahead and glimpsed the splendors of the life to come.

Doubtless every one of us is blind in some respects. Doubtless the Great Physician has many a vision for our opened eyes if we will submit them to His skill.

Prayer—Our Saviour, we see and yet we do not see. We grope toward Thee, and beg for vision. Thou art the light.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

PUERTO RICO'S PROBLEM.

The situation in Puerto Rico is made up of a variety of critical problems, such as poverty, overpopulation, disaster and disease following the hurricanes, and a political crisis where all factions are at each others' throats. Protestant Christianity also faces a crisis. There seems no way of protecting the island from a whirlpool of contradictory creeds. New sects continue to arrive on every boat, each teaching that all the rest are doomed. Black and white magic have taken possession of some of the churches. One of the missionaries reports that in a church he visited Voodooism had cast a black cloud over a group of women. In another church an elderly woman teacher of a Bible class among the Jebaros uses a Bible by rubbing it over her body when she is sick. The result of such conditions is that the intellectual class is not in the church, although many are disciples of Jesus Christ.—Christian Advocate.

The mystery of the universe, and the meaning of God's world, are shrouded in hopeless obscurity until we remember that all laws suppose a law-giver, and all working involves a divine energy.—Maclaren.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, Pastor.

THE OBERLIN COUNCIL.

JOHN G. TRUITT.

"And when they had come, and gathered the church together, they rehearsed all that God had done with them, and how He had opened the door of faith unto the Gentile."
—Acts 14:27.

May I speak to you tonight a word about the Oberlin Council? I think I should not call this exactly a sermon, although I have offered you one of the finest texts in the New Testament. How easily this text tells the story of that great council in Oberlin, and how easily it divides itself into the proverbial firstly, secondly and thirdly. We who had the privilege of attending that great church meeting felt many moments of encouragement and edification, and we wish you could catch something of the import of it.

1. "And when they had come, and gathered the church together." They came from every State in the Union. They came from many foreign countries. They came representing 6,373 Congregational churches, with 1,040,119 members; and 1,100 Christian churches, with 104,000 members. And when they were gathered together it was revealed that there were in round numbers 700 regular delegates, and 700 associate delegates, making a total of something more than 1,400 delegates besides many visitors. It was an inspiring group.

But more still they came from across the seas, and from under many flags. Missionaries were there representing India, China, Japan, Africa, Turkey, Greece, Syria, Prillipines, South America, Central America, and many other countries and places. Missionaries, too, from our home land, representing underprivileged in many cities, and mountains, and neglected places of our own country. It was an assemblage, indeed! The rich and poor, the clergyman and layman, the black and white, the young and old, and all withal in the name of the same Christ of Galilee, and for the same cause of Christian brotherhood.

Besides missionaries, home and foreign, many other church interests and enterprises were fully represented: The church press, with its editors, contributors, publishers, and managers were there. Our CHRISTIAN SUN was well represented with a full corps of editors and publishers. Church schools from all across the continent had their representations there: Amherst, Dartmouth, Yale, Wellesley, Smith, Mt. Holyoke, Oberlin, Defiance, Elon, and Rollins, not to mention thirty-three other colleges and to say nothing of several seminaries that were represented there. These all packed the large Finney Chapel to its doors, and spacious galleries, and formed a company inspiring to see. Over thousands of miles of roads, and at thousands of dollars of expense they came, and with a consciousness that they were there to tackle great problems and to undertake great things.

One was not only impressed with the "from" of their coming; but also with the "to" of that gathering. They had come to Oberlin. Oberlin, with one hundred years of history; with its forty, or more buildings lost among the stately, arching elms; with its long tradition of religious freedom and tolerance, having opened its doors from the beginning "to all comers irrespective of race, creed, color, or sex"; and with its Memorial Arch commemorating the martyrdom of missionaries who had gone out from its doors. I wish you could have seen that big, central campus, cleared as it was of buildings, matted with growing grass, and marshaled with towering elms, lighted with more than 5,000 Japanese lanterns! It was a very pretty sight, and made one feel it was great to have the privilege of living in a land that loves the Lord, and sees His will to do.

II. "They rehearsed all that God had done with them." Under this head I wish I were able to tell you something of the great speeches, sermons, reports, and addresses that were made there. Two moderators presided interchangeably over this Council. Christian church folks felt a bit of pride in that the opening tap of the gavel calling this great convention to order was that of our own Dr. Frank G. Coffin, of Columbus, Ohio. Moderator Carl S. Patton made the opening address, hastily reviewing the present political status of our country, issuing a challenge to the church of Jesus Christ to get in where the work is most difficult, and heroically do its part to bring a reign of righteousness throughout the land. It was a bird's-eye view of the country's need of the Gospel engagingly given.

In the evening following that afternoon Dr. Coffin spoke after the great Oberlin A Capella Choir, led by Olaf Christiansen, had rendered a most beautiful program of song. Choosing as his subject, "Righteousness for a Nation," Dr. Coffin delivered an address which was referred to many times afterward in the convention, and which was a stirring challenge to the church to move forward with its program of righteousness in a day like this.

The fourteen hundred delegates were divided into ten seminars on each of the five week-day mornings, making an average of one hundred and forty delegates for each of the seminars. These began each morning at 8:30, and closed at 10:00 o'clock. Your former pastor, Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, led the seminar which I was privileged to attend, and he did it most acceptably, indeed. These seminars took up every phase of the church's life and activity, and after five mornings of study made reports on the closing day of the Council, with recommendations. Thus no part of the church's work was overlooked, or crowded out, each item had ample consideration and study.

There was a business session every morning, except Sunday, and one or two afternoons; there was a series of lectures given by Dr. Douglas C. MacIntosh, of Yale Divinity School on "God and the Realistic Mind"; and each day the Council had the privilege of an hour of worship in the beautiful auditorium of the First Church, with Dr. Boynton Merrill speaking. Dr. Merrill was well chosen for this high task, and in manner, spirit, attitude and address he measured up to the requirements of the occasion. These moments were high spots in each day and came just before noon. His subjects were: "In the Beginning—God," "The Boundlessness of God," "Your Life Is Hid In God," "God Flings His Purple," "Our Wings and God's Winds," and "Declaring the Glory of God."

Reports made at that convention of all phases and departments of the church covering the last three years are a "rehearings of all that God had done with them," indeed! They will fill a large volume, and will be a page of triumph for the church of Jesus Christ as it has marched at home and abroad with uplifted head and humble heart, seeking to be the world's servant in three of the most needy years of history.

III. "And how he had opened the door of faith unto the nations." For Paul it was not "doors" of faith, but "door,"—one only,—of faith. And for Paul it was not "faiths," but "faith,"—one only,—that was offered. Coming from that convention one feels encouraged to take up again the cudgel of the Christian gospel with renewed vigor. The door of Christ Jesus is the world's greatest need; the Christian faith is its greatest hope. It will have to be expressed in many ways, and applied in many places, but it will be no more nor less than the Gospel of Jesus Christ if it avails.

(Continued on page 15.)

COMMUNION WARE.

Individual Service.

Made in best Silver Plate or Aluminum. Prices low; first-class workmanship and finish.

ALUMINUM.

Aluminum is light in weight, durable, and does not tarnish.

Style No. 50-A.

- Tray No. 2—Interlocking, with 40 plain glasses $7.00
- Tray No. 6—Interlocking, with 35 plain glasses 6.75
- Tray No. 10—Interlocking, with 30 plain glasses 6.50
- Base No. 50-A—Fits Trays 2, 6, or 10..... 2.25
- Cover No. 50-A—Fits Trays 2, 6, or 10..... 2.25
- Bread Plate No. 1—Narrow rim..... 1.60

SILVER-PLATED.

The Silver-plated Ware is of the very highest grade and best finish; heavily plated on nickel base.

- Tray No. 85—Interlocking only, with 36 glasses $22.00
- Base No. 1—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 85.. 11.00
- Cover No. 5—Silver-plated; fits Tray No. 85... 16.00

(For Silver Bread Plates, see under No. 90.)

- Tray No. 90—Interlocking, with 36 plain glasses (this style has broad rim, which is sometimes preferred, due to increased ease of handling) $22.00
- Base No. 2—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 90.. 16.00
- Cover No. 4—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 90. 14.00

- Bread Plate No. 3—Narrow Rim..... $ 9.00
- Bread Plate No. 4—Broad Rim..... 9.00
- Filler—Silver Lined..... 6.00

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad St

Richmond, Virginia

Christian Orphanage

Dear friends:

Some years ago I was visiting one of the caverns in the Valley of Virginia and a friend said to me, "If you will let your imagination loose in here you can see many things in the formations in this cavern. I found it to be true. The formation was beautiful to behold. We saw many beautiful things—even saw "Old Santa" surrounded by little children, a beautiful sight. Many of our friends who contribute to help support the Christian Orphanage have never seen it and probably never will, but to get joy out of the giving you will have to let your imagination bring you to the orphanage and in your imagination you will see three nice brick buildings filled with little children. Children who have been bereft of parents and home. No friends who could or cared to take them and give them a home and care and training. You can see these little fellows in a good home here with Christian women in each building to care for them. They see to it that they have wholesome food to eat and a comfortable bed to sleep on and clothes to wear. In your imagination you can see them in their room when sick where kindly hands administer to them. At this writing you can see a little girl in the hospital where she, a few days ago, underwent an operation for appendicitis. Kind nurses, in all tenderness, see to it that she has every attention that she needs. She has no loving mother to visit her and give her a glass of cool water. She has no father to whom she can look for help. It is, at least, not convenient for you to visit her in her affliction, but do you realize when you mail your check to the Christian Orphanage you are having a part in ministering to these children. "I was sick and ye visited me." "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these. . . Ye have done it unto me," said the Lord.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

The following has been sent in since our last report:

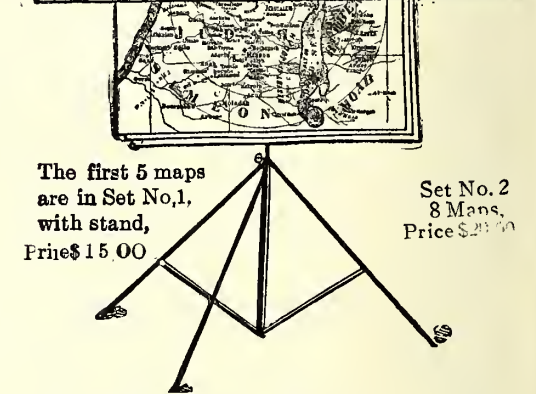

- Ladies Aid Society, Holland Christian Church, Holland, Va.—1 box of clothing.
- Mrs. E. L. Moffit, Jr., Elon College, N. C.—1 box clothing
- Mrs. D. A. Cornelison, Seagrove Christian Church, Seagrove, N. C.—3 little boy's suits, 1 dress.
- Rev. C. W. Geringer, Wakefield, Va.—6 jars fruit.
- Circle No. 5 First Christian Church, Burlington, N. C.—clothing for Lillie Mae Hunter.
- Mrs. M. R. Rives, Graham, N. C.—4 hats, 4 dresses, 1 jacket.
- Mrs. W. K. Holt, Burlington, N. C.—4 dresses.
- Mrs. T. L. Chandler, Route 2, Durham, N. C.—2 dresses, 1 slip, 1 blouse.
- Miss Kathleen Glenn, 213 W Trinity Ave., Durham, N. C.—4 dresses.

REPORT FOR JULY 12, 1934.

Brought Forward	$ 6,819.23
Sunday School Monthly Offerings.
North Carolina and Virginia Conference:
Greensboro, First	$ 10.96
Union, N. C.	2.00
Third Ave., Danville	5.05
Lebanon	85
Happy Home	4.10
Durham	21.23
	<hr/> 44.19
Eastern North Carolina Conference:
Oak Level	$ 1.00
Youngsville	2.00

Wake Chapel	6.21
Sanford	1.00
		10.21
Western North Carolina Conference:
Pleasant Cross	$ 2.00
Shiloh	1.00
Mt. Pleasant	2.25
Pleasant Hill	3.00
Zion	1.82
		10.07
Eastern Virginia Conference:
First Portsmouth	$ 6.68
Holland	5.00
Rosemont	11.55
Suffolk	25.00
Liberty Spring S. S. & Classes	7.00
Berea Norfolk	11.15
		66.38
Valley Va. Central Conference:
Dry Run	$ 2.04
		2.04
Alabama Conference:
Roanoke	$ 1.00
New Hope	2.60
		3.60
Special Offerings.
T. B. Roberts, support of children	$ 10.00
Mrs. Park Hayes, support of child	12.00
A friend, support of Thelma Long	20.00
Interest on Note	90.00
W. P. Perry, support of Billy Perry	10.00
J. Spencer Love, support of a child	60.00
		202.00
Total for the week	$ 338.49
Grand total	$ 7,157.72

Eifers Sunday School Maps

The first 5 maps are in Set No. 1, with stand, Price $15.00

Set No. 2 8 Maps, Price $25.00

Fine large Maps, in 6 Colors 36x57, on linen finished Cloth. Mounted on a folding steel stand, which can be regulated, so that Maps may be seen to the best advantage. This set contains data for thorough Bible Study. Its large print and cheerful Colors makes this set very instructive and attractive. Contains the five thoroughly up to date Maps necessary for the study of Bible History. New Testament Palestine, — Old Testament Palestine, — Roman empire and Bible Lands, showing Pauls Travels by Colored lines. — Lands of the Old Testament, from the Great Sea, to the Persian Gulf.—The Exodus, Egypt, showing by Colored lines the wanderings of the Israelites

THE CHRISTIAN SUN
1536 East Broad Street Richmond, Virginia

HOLMAN SUPERIOR TEACHERS' BIBLES

Authorized Version—Self-Pronouncing The Best Editions of the World's Best Book
For Adults, Teachers, Preachers, Students, and All Who Would Study the Word of God Intelligently
BOLD BLACK TYPE—COMPACT SIZE 4 1/2 x 6 3/4 INCHES—WILL FIT THE COAT POCKET

Part page specimen of Holman Boldblack Type Bible
ST. MATTHEW, 5. Christ's sermon on the mount.

13 And leaving Naz'a-rëth, he came and dwelt in Ca-per'na-um, which is upon the sea coast, in the borders of Zab'u-lon and Neph'ta-lim:	A. D. 31.	934 CHAPTER 5.
14 That it might be fulfilled	CHAP. 4.	3 Who are blessed. 13 The disciples called the salt of the earth, and light of the world; Christ urged on them a good example, etc.
	Isa. 9. 1, 2.	A ND seeing the multitudes, he went up into a moun-

THIS NEW HOLMAN TEACHERS' BIBLE, Pronouncing Text, Bold Black Type is a PRONOUNCED SUCCESS. The latest Bible with NEW HELPS that are quite comprehensive and consist of an Illustrated Bible Dictionary, Concordance and additional aids all under ONE ALPHABETICAL INDEX. Also Fine Maps on Coated Paper, and a specially prepared BIBLE READING COURSE, intended to stimulate and maintain interest in the Bible. Imported Bible paper is used to improve opacity and keep down bulk. By this means you get the benefit of full Biblical information without the physical discomfort of handling a heavy volume.

STYLES AND PRICES—BIBLE PAPER EDITION

4612. French Morocco Leather, divinity circuit, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges.....	$4.00
4630. Same as 4612, with extra leather lined covers.....	4.75
THIN INDIA PAPER EDITION
With Helps as described above. Size 4 1/2 x 6 3/4 inches. One inch in thickness
630X. Egyptian Morocco, divinity circuit, leather linings, red under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker.....	7.00
633X. Algerian Morocco, divinity circuit, leather lining to edge, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, extra quality binding.....	8.00

EXTRA LARGE PRINT TEACHERS' BIBLES

Large 8 Vo. Size—8x5 1/2 inches—1600 Pages, including 400 pages of Bible Study Helps

Part Page Specimen of Print
ST. MATTHEW, 5. Christ's sermon on the mount.

15 <sup>k</sup> The land of Zab'u-lon, and the land of Neph'ta-lim, by the way of the sea, beyond Jor'dan, Gal'i-lee of the Gen'tiles;	A. D. 31.	2 And he opened his mouth, and taught them, saying,
	Is. 9. 1, 2.	3 <sup>b</sup> Blessed are the poor in spirit:
	Luke 2. 32.	for their's is the kingdom of heaven.
	Mark 1. 14.

CONTAINING COMPLETE HELPS TO BIBLE STUDY, INCLUDING ALL OF THE FOLLOWING FEATURES
A New Practical Course in Bible Reading, A Treasury of Biblical Information. The most carefully compiled, thorough and attractive form in which valuable Biblical information has ever been prepared. Illustrated Self-Pronouncing Bible Dictionary Containing 150 illustrations, concise definitions and textual references on nearly 50,000 subjects. A Practical Comparative Concordance, with nearly 50,000 references. Four Thousand Questions and Answers on the Old and New Testaments. A valuable Help to all Bible Readers.

STYLES AND PRICES

4712. Divinity Circuit (overlapping covers), French Seal Leather, red under gold edges, silk head bands, and silk marker..	$5.00
812RL. Red Letter Teachers' Bible. The Words of Christ in the New Testament, Old Testament Passages alluded to by Christ, various prophecies relating to Christ in the Old Testament, etc., all PRINTED IN RED. Binding same as described above on 4712 and same large Self-Pronouncing type.....	6.00
733X. Holman India Paper, Genuine Morocco, leather lined, silk sewed, divinity circuit, round corners carmine under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker, same type and helps as above.....	10.65

All styles sent Postpaid at above prices—Thumb Index 50 cents extra

A Story for the Children

JOYFUL NEWS!

Louise is a new girl in town and on Saturday she had two callers who tried to help her get acquainted.

Cathie came first. She began to discuss the girls in her class. "Betty's awful poor and she can never have us at her house. Dorothy has the worst temper if she can't have her own way. Patsy's the prettiest girl in our crowd, but she's just as selfish as she can be. Beth's just about the most popular girl in school, but I never could see why."

Louise listened in a puzzled way. What kind of a place had she come to if no one deserved real honest praise? This was what she thought as she bid Cathie a half-hearted good-bye, feeling almost homesick, and at least surprised and discouraged over what she thought must be the questionable friends.

Then there was another rap on the door and Beth came breezing in, as smiling and sweet as a sunshine fairy.

"I just met Cathie down the street," Beth began; "she said she had been to see you. Wasn't her new pink dress pretty? And we're all just in love with Cathie's yellow curls. Cathie's a good singer. She leads our class chorus."

Louise tried not to show the jolt she had received in this second caller. "I did think Cathie's dress was pretty and her ringlets almost surrounded her face," Louise commented truthfully.

Then there's Patsy. She's the artist in our class, and she paints the most cunning place-cards for our parties. Our club president is Dorothy. She's one of our hardest workers, and has done a lot for our little organization since we started six months ago. Betty is the chairman of our membership committee and you never saw anyone so faithful! She'll be over to call on you, but she works on Saturdays, taking care of children in the neighborhood. Just to talk to Betty five minutes will make you ambitious."

"Oh, I'm so excited and interested," Louise exclaimed, "and I certainly hope that Betty will put me down as a new member. I believe I'm going to have a wonderful time since I've heard all your joyful news!"

Here are two instances of tale-bearing and it is not hard to choose which is the better way. One was an unpleasant tale-bearer, the other the teller of joyful news. Talking about the faults of others was Cathie's habit, and yet Beth found the kind word to say for Cathie after all.

Cathie said she couldn't see why Beth was the most popular girl in her class. But Louise had no trouble in understanding Beth's popularity after her very first visit.—Edith L. Reid in Free Will Baptist.

YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

(Continued from page 10.)

regarding some of the finest newer books. The idea would be to whet the appetites of the members so that they would plan to read the books during the next few weeks.

4. Some of the young people may be interested in telling of some books "we want to read." What leads people to want to read books? Is it advertisements, hearing other people discuss a volume, or what?

5. Let someone tell "how to keep up on books." This may be a librarian, an adult who reads a great deal, or some young person who likes to browse.

6. Let the pastor tell of some books which have interested him most during the last few months.

7. What about the Bible? Is it the "best" book which anyone has read? How much use do you make of it?

The following suggestions may be used after the group has made its own answers to the general questions:

1. Always reading something.
2. Read only worth-while books.
3. Read a variety of kinds of literature.
4. Have a special time for reading.
5. Make use of odd moments.

E. R.

SERMON.

(Continued from page 13.)

Coming for that convention one is encouraged, too, because of the determination that prevailed throughout the entire group to give wholeheartedly of self in service in the coming days, weeks, and months. There seemed a bouancy, and vigor that at times seemed almost to run ahead, but for the sobering influence of the Christian religion itself. It surely can be said that this convention showed no signs of cowardice, or lack of courage to move up, and forward for Christ.

What a company that was that gathered one afternoon about the beautiful memorial arch that commemorates the lives of eighteen martyrs, mostly from Oberlin, who laid down their lives in China during the Boer Rebellion! And one could feel that the same spirit of courage, and sacrifice moving the hundreds of young people that gathered on Sunday afternoon in the Finney Chapel as a youth from their number led that multitude in prayer. The amens of that moment gave assurance that the "door of faith" opens, and must still open to the nations!

ELON COLLEGE

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

South Entrance to the Campus

ELON COLLEGE, founded by the Christian Church in 1889, has fully justified the faith and hope of its founders during its 42 years of operation. Its graduates from the four-year course leading to a bachelor's degree, number 980, now living, 122 of whom are in the Christian Ministry and full-time Christian service. The majority of these are members of our own denomination. In addition, 449 are in educational work and are an active influence in the lay leadership of the Christian Church.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION BUILDING, and the definite religious atmosphere of the College, provide the very best facilities available for training for religious leadership, and offer the Church its finest opportunity to train the young people of the denomination to assume active leadership both in the ministry and laity of the local churches.

Address—

C. M. CANNON, Registrar

Elon College, - - - - North Carolina

Home Atmosphere—Reasonable Rates—Clean Athletics—Christian Spirit

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom, as represented by the Congregational Christian Church.

BOARD OF EDITORS.

J. O. ATKINSON, D. D. . . . . Editor
E. C. GILLETTE, D. D. . . . . Associate
I. W. JOHNSON, D. D. . . . . Contributing
ELISHA A. KING, D. D. . . . . Contributing
J. T. KERNODLE. . . . . Managing Editor

DEPARTMENTAL EDITORS.

H. S. HARDCASTLE. . . . . Sunday School
J. G. TRUITT, D. D. . . . . Sermon
F. C. LESTER. . . . . Young People
H. E. ROUNTREE. . . . . Altar

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year . . . . . $2.00
Six Months . . . . . 1.00

Trial Subscriptions: Five or more new subscriptions sent in at one time by pastor or president of any church organization, three months for 40c each.

Published Every Thursday at Richmond, Virginia, by the Central Publishing Company, Inc.

Entered as second-class matter at the Postoffice at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Change of Address: Be sure to give both old and new address when asking that your address be changed.

All news matter and items to be published in "The Sun" should be addressed to J. O. Atkinson, Editor, Elon College, N. C., and should reach him not later than Friday preceding date of publication. If more convenient, news from Congregational Churches may be sent to E. C. Gillette, Associate Editor, 117 W. Forsyth Street, Jacksonville, Fla. Emergency notices will be received at the Richmond Office up until Tuesday of week of publication.

All remittances for subscriptions, renewals, advertising, etc., books for review, and other matters of business should be addressed to J. T. Kernodle, Managing Editor, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond, Va.

Notices: Obituary and marriage notices, limited to 125 words, published free. All over 125 words, 1c a word, cash with notice. No notices should exceed 250 words.

Receipts: The change of label is your receipt for money paid. The label shows date of expiration, and change on label will appear the first or second issue of the month following renewal, provided it was received before the 25th. No other receipt will be sent unless requested. Please notify the Richmond Office if label is not changed as above.

OBITUARIES

KITE.

Miss Mary Jane Kite was born October 25, 1878, and died June 12, 1934, aged 55 years, 7 months, and 17 days. She lived a few miles from Newport in Page County, Va. She is survived by one brother and one sister. Funeral services were held at the home, June 15, 1934, and the body laid to rest in the family burying ground near by.

A. W. ANDES.

BOWMAN.

Mrs. Cora A. Bowman, widow of Joseph Bowman, was born October 11, 1872, and departed this life June 3, 1934. Her age was 61 years, 7 months, and 22 days. She was a member of the Palmyra Christian Church. Surviving are two brothers, four sisters, one son, and two daughters. Funeral services were held at Palmyra, June 6, 1934.

A. W. ANDES.

NESTER.

John Robert Nester was born November 1, 1863. Died June 8, 1934, aged 70 years, 7 months, and 7 days. He was a member of the Disciple Church, but attended our church at Palmyra when able. He is survived by one son. Funeral services were held at his late home, near Palmyra, June 9, 1934, and the remains laid to rest in the cemetery at Woodstock, Va.

A. W. ANDES.

BAILEY.

Jefferson Davis Bailey was born Dec. 16, 1871, and died June 24, 1934 at the age of 62 years, 6 mos., and 8 days. He was converted and joined the church when a young man and was a member of Beulah Christian Church when he died. He married Miss Elizabeth Ponder in 1883. There were no children born to them. She preceded her husband in death several years ago. A good man has gone and will be missed. He was a friend to man and his church. A host of friends and relatives mourn his going. The funeral by the writer was at Vanceville Church and interment in Lawrence Cemetery.

W. C. CARPENTER.

Wedding or Gift Bible

FOR THE HOME

Holman Self-Pronouncing Home Study Edition

A BEAUTIFUL PRESENTATION PAGE Marriage Certificate and Family Record makes this special edition a most desirable Bible for a wedding gift.

Full Bound size, 8 1/2 x 6 inches, nearly 1800 pages. Authorized Version with Marginal References.

Large Print—Easy to Read

The Helps are the latest and most practical published—prepared by the most reliable and well-known authorities, and consist of a TEACHERS' NEW READY REFERENCE HAND BOOK, which gives the salient and essential information needed in Bible study.

Illustrated Self-Pronouncing Bible Dictionary—Containing 150 illustrations.

Oriental Light on the Bible (Containing over 100 illustrations). A new kind of illuminating Bible help.

Treasury of Biblical Information.

A New Series of Maps. A selection of the most used, with Special Maps, the results of the most recent explorations.

A New Practical Comparative Concordance, with nearly 50,000 references, Four Thousand Questions and Answers on the Bible.

ABSOLUTELY DURABLE BINDINGS that will not break in the back.

Specimen of the Print. Full size of the page is 5 1/2 x 8 inches.

Specimen of Type.

17 ¶ From that time Jēsus began to preach, and to say, "Repeat: for the kingdom of heaven is at

A BEAUTIFUL PRESENTATION PAGE Marriage Certificate and Family Record makes this special edition a most desirable Bible for a wedding gift.

No. 4914. French Morocco, leather hmp, gold titles, round corners, red under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker. . . . . $5.50

Postage Paid

PINNIX.

Mrs. Sarah Francis Pinnix of Kernersville, N. C., passed from this life June 4th, age 75. She was the widow of the late Rev. J. W. Pinnix. Prior to her marriage she was Miss Huffines of Guilford College.

Surviving are two step sons, six step daughters, two sisters and three brothers. She accepted Christ early in life and united with the Pleasant Ridge Church. For a long time a Sunday School teacher, a student of the Bible, a good woman and a patient, loving mother.

Funeral services at Pleasant Ridge Church June 5th conducted by the pastor assisted by Rev. E. P. Billups, pastor of Kernersville M. E. Church.

May the Lord comfort the bereaved.
D. M. SPENCE, Pastor.

PIEDMONT COLLEGE

Located in

"The Blue Ridge Highlands"

An accredited college with an enviable reputation for superior classroom instruction, and wholesome student life.

Fully recognized and accredited in its home State, and in such neighboring States as North Carolina, South Carolina, Alabama, Tennessee and others. Standard courses leading to the A. B. and B. S. degrees.

The Summer Term, continuing for six and nine weeks, affords opportunity for college and professional study and invigorating recreation.

From six to twelve hours of credit may be earned. Special courses in Elementary, Intermediate, High School and Rural Education. Public School Music and Art; School and Playground Games; Athletic Coaching.

For Fall Term or Summer Bulletin, write

PIEDMONT COLLEGE,
DEMOREST, GEORGIA.

Southern Seminary Foundation

(Successor to Atlanta Theological Seminary.)

AFFILIATED WITH

Vanderbilt University

The Foundation and the other Foundations that are affiliated with Vanderbilt University School of Religion comprise the only Interdenominational Theological School in the South. Through this affiliation the students enjoy the rights and privileges of Vanderbilt University.

DEGREES.

Candidates for degrees are required to have completed their college courses.

The degree of Bachelor of Divinity is offered to qualified students who complete the required courses.

Vanderbilt University also offers the degrees of Master of Arts and Doctor of Philosophy, in accordance with the regulations established in its several departments.

MORE THAN A SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY.

Because of our affiliation with Vanderbilt, our relations with other nearby colleges where our students can take courses without tuition, and the cooperation of the American Red Cross and other social agencies in the city, we prepare students for many types of Christian service.

For information write

WILLIAM JAMES CAMPBELL, President,
330 BUTTRICK HALL, VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY,
NASHVILLE, TENN.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

Representing the Southeast Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches.

IN ESSENTIALS, UNITY.

IN NON-ESSENTIALS, LIBERTY.

IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY.

VOLUME LXXXVI.

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, THURSDAY, JULY 19, 1934.

NUMBER 29.

•• THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY ••

Major Strikes.—

Including the present walk out in San Francisco, there have been only four major strikes since the World War. One of these was at Seattle, Washington, one in Canada and the other in England. Each of these strikes caused food shortages, paralyzed business and interfered seriously with normal living. The English strike was decidedly the most serious, though of shortest duration. Two and a half million workers walked out, but swift action by the government and adverse public opinion had broken the strike in eight days. No lives were lost, but the cost mounted to $1½-billions and incidentally, the trade unions of England were bankrupt.

Government Acquires Helium Reservoir.—

The United States Government recently acquired the helium-bearing gas reservoirs near Amarillo Texas, thus becoming the owner of the world's largest known deposit of helium. Covering 50,000 acres, these natural gas deposits contain gas with a 1.75 per cent helium content. At the rate with which the army and navy have been using helium during the past five years, this field promises a 250-year supply. More than 3,250,000,000 feet of natural gas have been withdrawn in the past five years, from which have been extracted 57,487,000 feet of helium—approximately one-half of the helium ever recovered. Helium of a 98 per cent purity—the purest ever obtained—is now being recovered at an average of about one-fourth of the former cost of $34 per thousand cubic feet. This increase in purity over the helium formerly obtained gives a ship of the size of the Macon an additional lifting power of about six tons. While helium is not as efficient as hydrogen as a lifting agent, it has decidedly great advantages of being non-explosive.

The Catholics and Fascism.—

A recent issue of the Catholic Record, London, Can., warns against a development of "a disposition to play with the various Fascist elements" as "a dangerous and unprofitable game" for the Catholic Church. "For," says it, "paradoxically, the Catholic Church thrives and grows on liberalism, not on the reactionary spirit that breeds Fascism." And it continues: "The Church was never so feeble spiritually as when it was most narrow temporally. It was never so great spiritually as when it stuck to its spiritual functions. . . During the burning of the Inquisition, the Church was at its lowest moral ebb. The floodtide of its greatness came when its Popes withdrew into the Vatican and held themselves aloof from earthly bickering. If the Church had had any economic qualifications to govern temporal affairs, it might have ruled the world. But its manifold and manifest failures along that line in the middle ages defined its perpetual function quite clearly." The article calls for a progressive and a tolerant Catholic Church. There is a long ways to go, but the time will eventually come when they all shall be one and the banner of Christ will be carried forward to victory by a united Church.

A Study of Marital Relations.—

From the Methodist Protestant Recorder comes the following: "Early education for marriage as a means of curtailing divorces and insuring marital happiness and better family social relations, was urged at a conference arranged by Teachers College, Columbia, the American Social Hygiene Association and the American Home Economics Association, at Teachers College. Definite results of such education and the steps taken by several States to improve marital relations were noted by Dr. Paul Popenoe, director of the Institute of Family Relations of Los Angeles. Census figures, he said showed fewer divorces among young couples as the result of instruction in marital relations. Up to 1930, Dr. Popenoe said, the greatest number of divorces occurred during the second and third years after marriage, while now the situation is reversed, with the greatest number of separations occurring among couples who have been married ten years or more. He attributed the decrease of divorces among young couples to the wider reading of recognized books on sex and marriage; to the fact that twelve States require physical examinations of men before marriage, and twenty-four States require announcements of intention to marry, which tends to stop "freak, runaway and drunken marriages." Much confusion could be eliminated and much good done in the marriage and divorce situation by the adoption of uniform laws by the various States. What governor will start the ball rolling by asking the conference of governors to take up this matter?"

Church Attendance.—

The Commission on Church Attendance of the General Council of the Congregational and Christian Churches, has been during the past four years been accumulating statistics in regard to this important subject. At the recent session of the Council, Mr. Roger Babson, financial statistician, who is the chairman of this commission, reported that 1,000 churches had been put under actual observation and the results tabulated. He says: "These churches have an average membership of 322. They have an average seating of 370. The average Sunday morning attendance during the last four years has been: 1930, 114.4; 1931, 117.1; 1932, 119.1; 1933, 117. These figures indicate that on the average 70 per cent of the seats in our churches are not being used and that perhaps at least 75 per cent of those shown as members of our churches are not supporting their churches with their personal attendance and active encouragement." These figures raise a vital question, showing conditions are far from what they should be. However, in the Council Seminar to which they were reported, which was under the leadership of Rev. H. S. Hardcastle of Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., the question was raised as to the conclusions that might be drawn. In case of their being small children in the home, for instance, the parent's absence could not be taken as an indication of lack of interest. It was also pointed out that the modern program of religious education provided graded services which might in themselves reduce attendance at the regular church services. Yet with these explanations, the fact still remains that there are too many empty pews and too little active work among our laity.

The "Alcohol" Exhibit at the Fair.—

On the first floor of the Social Science Hall at the Century of Progress Fair, in Chicago, is a unique exhibit. The Women's Christian Temperance Union is the sponsor of this booth, and instead of a display bristling with propaganda, one finds an exhibit which reveals not only the evil effects of beverage intoxicants, but presents with scientific dispassionateness the important and available uses of alcohol in the arts, in industry, and in daily life. Attracting the attention of the visitor is a more than lifesize portrait of a man. One half of this figure is clothed in the latest styles, the other half displays the circulatory system of the man's body. Opposite the dressed side of the figure are shown many articles in the manufacture of which alcohol plays an important part, with the statement that "alcohol is a boon to mankind when used in connection with 'inanimate substances' from baby's rattle to embalmer's fluid." Among the items exhibited are soap, perfumes, hair tonic; clothing, including hats, shirts, ties, underwear and shoes; polish, lacquers, and varnishes for automobiles, and furniture; thermometers, ink and printed matter, and cleaning fluids, films, fuel, etc. On the other side are listed the bad effects of alcohol on living tissue. There are also exhibited no less than a dozen striking comparisons, showing the contrasting action and water on animal and vegetable life. One of these exhibits is of two geranium plants, originally as near alike as it was possible to purchase. One of these had been refreshed regularly with water in the usual way, the other being fed water mixed with 2.75 per cent of alcohol. It only required 48 hours to show the blighting effect of the alcohol. A second exhibit shows the same thing tried with goldfish. In the bowl containing the water, the finney tribe disported itself contentedly, but in the bowl to which 2.75 per cent of alcohol had been added, the fish lay colorless and shriveled at its bottom.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Several notes of interest from Dr. Gillette's office in Jacksonville will be found in this column this week.

The Summer School of Leadership training at Elon College is held next week—July 23rd-29th. Our young people should take advantage of this fine opportunity for intellectual, moral and spiritual enrichment.

Mrs. T. J. Green of Elon College, who went to Duke Hospital some weeks ago for treatment, is at her home at Elon College, and while she is not fully recovered, there are signs of gradual improvement, and her many friends indulge the hope that she will soon be fully recovered.

Rev. T. J. Green, pastor, closed a revival at Shallow Ford Church, Friday night, July 13th, after several days of well-attended and very interesting meetings. The pastor was assisted in the service by Rev. J. Everett Neese of Elon College, who rendered fine service and whose preaching stirred the people and was much appreciated. The church was much revived, and there were nine additions to the membership at the close of the meeting.

The Eastern Virginia Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention, held in Richmond on Tuesday of this week, proved a most happy and inspiring meeting. A good representation was present, many staying over for the concert given by the First Church Orchestra and the address by Dr. Sidney B. Hall that evening. An account of the meeting will doubtless appear in next week's issue.

A party consisting of Mrs. Ben T. Holden and children, and Mrs. Annie Staley Calhoun returning from California suffered the misfortune of having one of their party, Ben T., Jr., hit by a passing truck while he was patching a tire. He suffered a fractured leg and slight fracture of the skull. The accident occurred on June 30th, and he is reported rapidly improving but still in the hospital in Elko, Nevada.

The church at Jupiter, Florida, under the leadership of the pastor, Rev. Frederick Held, assisted by his wife and daughter, has had a most successful Vacation Church School, the largest in attendance and the most interesting of the five which have been held during the present pastorate. Mr. Held also took the Boy Scouts for a week of camping. He is now attending summer school at Chicago Theological Seminary.

Rev. A. R. Van Cleave, who has served so faithfully and efficiently as pastor of our Winchester and Timber Ridge, Va., Churches the past year, declines the call to serve the pastorate the coming year, since he has position as dean of Southern Union College, Wadley, Ala., and is to return there at the beginning of the Fall term. Our Winchester pastorate deserves, and should have, the best that a strong, active, consecrated pastor can give, and here is devoutly hoping that it will be divinely guided to this end.

Rev. J. Howard Smith, who, while a student at Elon College, served some of our rural churches successfully and, since graduating from Elon, has taken a post graduate course in Yale Divinity School, has accepted the pastorate of the Second Congregational Church, Hartford, Vermont, and begins his work August first. While congratulations are extended to our Hartford Church and to Brother Smith, we can but express regret that one of our pastorates here in the South did not avail itself of the privilege of having this well-equipped and consecrated young man as its spiritual leader.

Rev. R. L. Williamson, R-4, Charlottesville, Va., who resigned the work at Winchester, Va., a year ago, had hoped and expected to secure a field of service soon thereafter. Nearly a year has passed and Brother Williamson is ready and anxious to re-enter the active pastorate, to which he feels divinely called. Brother Williamson is a faithful, capable, sincere preacher of the Word, and has served some of our good churches—Raleigh, Sanford, Winchester—and, in doing so, made friends who hold him in highest esteem. Any church desiring his service, should communicate with him at an early date.

Our profoundest sympathy goes out to Rev. R. E. Brittle, Cypress Chapel, Va. A precious child had come as a blessing to parents on June 30th, and the good wife was progressing nicely and was planning soon to leave the hospital in Suffolk, when death came suddenly on Monday, July 9th. The funeral was conducted by Drs. Jay and Johnson. In his sorrow and grief over the loss of his lovely and devoted young wife, this young father and husband can and will find consolation in the rich resources of that religion whose blessings and benefits he seeks so earnestly to share with others as pastor and minister.

Rev. Joe French, writing of our Ocean View, Va., Church says: "Our Sunday School attendance increased from an average of sixty in the first quarter to eighty during the second quarter. Our Daily Vacation Bible School begins July 30th. Our plan is to hold the session at Ocean View in the morning and at Berea in the afternoon. So far we have received sixteen into church membership this year and have christened seventeen babies. We are hoping and working to make the Ocean View membership one hundred or more before the Conference. Our Cradle Roll superintendent has forty-one members (babies) enrolled, having started her work in April."

Key West, Florida, has been much in the public eye of late because the city government has asked the F. E. R. A. to take over the affairs of the city and county government. This city has suffered a series of misfortunes culminating in the removal of the Government Navy Yard and the Army Post and the closing of factories. We are happy to report, however, that in spite of the difficulties, our church has made progress under the leadership of Rev. and Mrs. E. Richard Evans. During the past quarter twenty-five new members have been received into the church. Mr. and Mrs. Evans and children are enjoying a well deserved vacation at their old home in Illinois.

Here is a suggestion that other Sunday schools may profit by. Superintendent R. C. Osborne, of our Liberty (Vance) Sunday School, Henderson, N. C., some months ago arranged that the Mission Secretary of his Sunday school make her brief talk on "Missions" soon after the school assemblies and before the classes were called to their separate places. The results have been an increased interest in missions on the part of the whole school, as is evidenced by an increased offering of more than $1.00 per Sunday since this plan was adopted. Many schools wait till after the classes have re-assembled to have their missionary information after the offering has been made.

Rev. O. T. Anderson, pastor of the church at Fort Meyers, Florida, reports an interesting experiment with a reading circle begun about three months ago, which has proven very successful. For years the pastor has reviewed books for the local papers, and among others many by the Missionary Education Movement and the Friendship Press. It occurred to him last spring to suggest that members of the congregation, after the pastor had read them, take these books, one at the time for a week, and read them and return them so another could do the same. The plan consisted in having each person who read a book to write his name in it. Result! Many have read five or six books already. Nearly every family has read one or more, in some cases all members of the family reading the book out for that week. The plan has two values: It supplies many with wholesome reading matter who otherwise would not have it. Since the books are all religious and educational, they have an inspirational and educational value.

Mrs. Sue Jones died at the home of her daughter Ruth (Mrs. R. J. Kernodle) in Durham, N. C., early Friday A. M., July 13th. She was 87 years old and was widely known and loved by a host in Virginia and in North Carolina. Her husband, the late, lamented W. H. Jones, Sr., a well-known and honorable man of Nansemond County, Va., died some 39 years ago, a large family, besides the widow and young daughter, Ruth, by the last wife, surviving him. For the past several years Mrs. Jones had lived with her daughter in Durham, and there had made a host of friends by her quiet, serene, Christian life. In the brief funeral services, held in the home, her pastor, Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, D. O., quoted this Scripture, which had been so strikingly verified in her life: "Let the beauty of the Lord our God be upon us." The preacher felt, as her friends and loved ones did, that the invocation of the Psalmist had been realized in her life. Dr. Harrell was assisted in the services by President L. E. Smith, Elon College. The interment was made in the Elon College cemetery, where the Kernodles have a burial plot and where a child of the family, deceased some years ago is buried.

The Eastern N. C. Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention met in annual session at Catawba Springs, July 10 and 11. The theme of the Convention was "For Christ and the Church," and this theme was kept uppermost in the minds of those who addressed the Convention. Rev. S. E. Madren, Henderson, N. C., presided during the session and Mrs. M. B. Newman, Henderson, N. C., was the recording secretary and Brother C. H. Stephenson, Raleigh, the treasurer. These officers served so well, they were elected for the coming year. The Sunday Schools and Societies were well represented, and the reports from the various departments were interesting and helpful. The outstanding addresses of the Convention were those by the president on "Our Purpose," by Dr. J. Edward Kirby, "Young People"; President L. E. Smith of Elon College, "Christian Church and Its Educational Program"; Rev. F. C. Lester, "Our Young People's Work"; and Prof. E. W. Boshart, "The Intellectual and Spiritual Preparation of the Sunday School Teacher." Superintendent Johnston, of the Christian Orphanage, carried a class from the Orphanage, who sang to the delight of the Convention. With all, it was a very helpful and pleasant session. Catawba Springs and community entertained the Convention abundantly.

A Story for the Children

THE SATURDAY SUNBEAM.

"Tick-tick-tick-tick, tick-tick-tick-tick," said the clock loudly. It always ticked the same way, but usually Eddie and Sister did not listen to it. Now they listened, and looked at each other, and pretended to read, and looked at each other again. There was not a sound in the room except for the ticking of that clock; the children hardly dared turn over a page lest it should crackle and disturb grandmother.

For on this sunshiny morning—this bright beautiful Saturday morning that seemed to be calling all the boys and girls to come out and play—grandmother was not feeling well. She thought that she felt better when it was dark and still; so that was the reason that Eddie and Sister were sitting in a quiet room with all the shades down, pretending to read. They could not see, and they knew the stories by heart anyway, but they just could not think of anything else to do. Mother had gone on an important errand, and of course grandmother could not be left alone when she was not well. Eddie and Sister looked at each other again, and sighed.

If they had known just what was happening then, perhaps they would not have felt so bad. Out on the window ledge, beyond the drawn shades, a merry little sunbeam was trying to get in. He was a very jolly sunbeam, who loved to poke into corners and see what people were about. But try as he would he could not find a single crack through which he could slip into the dark silent room where Eddie and Sister sat pretending to read, and where grandmother lay with her hands folded and her eyes closed, as if she were asleep. So the sunbeam lay upon the window ledge, and waited. Sunbeams are not very easily discouraged.

Just at that moment, along came a frisky breeze. As soon as he saw what the sunbeam was trying to do, he was eager to help. So he crept close to the window, and he blew, and he blew; and puff! The curtain blew away from the sill, and the merry little sunbeam went dancing in.

Eddie and Sister saw it at once, and felt a little happier right away. They watched it drawing nearer to grandmother, as the little breeze blew the curtain farther and farther away from the window. In just a moment the sunbeam would be touching grandmother's hand. There it was, shining on the ring that grandfather had given her and making it sparkle brightly.

Grandmother always wore that ring; she loved it more than anything else she had. As she lay very still, thinking that perhaps she might go to sleep, she felt something warm touch her hand. Grandmother opened her eyes; she saw the little sunbeam lying on her finger; she saw the ring that grandfather had given her sparkling brightly. Thinking of grandfather, and the happy days they had lived together, always made grandmother glad. Eddie and Sister, watching from their corner, saw that she was smiling now.

The little breeze had been working very hard, and he had to stop to rest. The curtain fell back against the window—and where was the merry little sunbeam? He could not stay with grandmother any longer; more quickly than you can think, he was on the window sill outside, waiting for a chance to get back in.

Grandmother closed her eyes again. Then suddenly she opened them once more. The ring that grandfather had given her did not sparkle now. It was much prettier when the sunbeam was shining on it. "Eddie!" said grandmother.

"I think I'd like to have the curtain up a little way," said grandmother, "so that the sunshine can come in."

Eddie ran to put up the curtain. "Thank you," said grandmother. She lay looking at the ring that grandfather had given her. It was sparkling brightly, for now the merry little sunbeam had danced back in—and brought his friends with him. Eddie and Sister still sat in the corner, but they felt much happier.

All at once grandmother sat up. "I think I'll get my dress on, and sit by the window. It's a nice day; you children ought to be outdoors."

Eddie ran to fix grandmother's chair. Sister went over to the bed and looked at grandmother. "Will you be all right alone, grandma?"

Grandmother patted her head and smiled at her. "Of course I will, now that I'm feeling better." She looked at her shining ring again. "Besides, I don't feel alone when I have the sunshine."

So the merry little sunbeam and his merry little friends kept grandmother company; and Eddie and Sister played in the yard; and when mother came home she found them all very gay, just as they should be on a bright, beautiful Saturday morning.—Verna M. Hills in Zion's Herald.

PROGRAM.

EIGHTY-SIXTH SESSION

VIRGINIA VALLEY CENTRAL CONGREGATIONAL-CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE.

MAYLAND CHRISTIAN CHURCH,

AUGUST 8, 9, 1934.

Rev. B. J. Earp, Pastor, Harrisonburg, Va.

Wednesday—Morning Session.

- 10:00—Call to Order.
Devotional Service—Rev. A. R. Van Cleave.
- 10:25—Enrollment.
- 10:35—Welcome Address—Mrs. Fannie May Layman.
- 10:45—Response—Alfred Dofflemyre.
- 10:50—Report of Program Committee.
- 11:00—Report of Executive Committee.
- 11:05—Miscellaneous Business—Appointment of Special Committees.
- 11:15—Report of Stewardship Secretary—Mrs. A. R. Van Cleave.
- 11:35—Annual Address—Rev. A. R. Van Cleave.
- 12:15—Adjournment for Dinner.

Wednesday—Afternoon Session.

- 1:45—Devotional Service—Rev. W. B. Fuller.
- 2:00—Report of Committee on Religious Literature—N. L. Morris, Chairman.
- 2:10—Address on "Our Publications"—Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Editor of The Christian Sun.
- 2:40—Report of Conference Mission Secretary—R. O. Rothgeb.
- 3:00—Address, "Our Orphanage"—C. D. Johnston, Superintendent.
- 3:30—Report of Committee on Woman's Board—Mrs. A. W. Andes, Chairman.
- 3:45—Report of Committee on Evangelism—Alfred Dofflemyre, Chairman.
- 4:00—Adjournment.

Wednesday—Night Session.

- 8:00—Report of Director of Religious Education—K. B. Hook.
Report of Committee on Sunday Schools and Christian Endeavor—R. O. Rothgeb, Chairman.
Address—Dr. L. E. Smith.

Thursday—Morning Session.

- 9:30—Devotional Service—Dr. M. L. Weekley.
- 9:50—Roll Call and Reading of Minutes.

- 10:00—Report of Committee on Education—Rev. A. W. Andes, Chairman.
- 10:15—Address on Education—Dr. L. E. Smith, President of Elon College.
- 10:45—Conference Missionary Association.
- 11:05—Address—Dr. S. C. Harrell, President of Southern Christian Convention.
- 11:40—Report of Committee on Foreign Missions—Miss Verdie Showalter, Chairman.
- 11:50—Address on Missions—Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Mission Secretary.
- 12:25—Report of Treasurer—Samuel Earman.
- 12:30—Adjournment for Dinner.

Thursday—Afternoon Session.

- 1:45—Devotional Service—Wm. J. Andes.
- 2:00—Report of Committee on Social Service—J. C. Bradford, Chairman.
- 2:10—Report of Committee on Home Missions—W. C. Wampler, Chairman.
- 2:25—Address—Dr. S. C. Harrell.
- 2:55—Report of Committee on Christian Union—R. L. Ettel, Chairman.
- 3:05—Report of Committee on Apportionments—R. Roy Hosaflook, Chairman.
- 3:15—Miscellaneous Business.
- 4:00—Adjournment.

LEAVING WINCHESTER FOR WADLEY.

The readers of THE SUN may be a little surprised to learn that we are making a move after only a year with the Winchester and Timber Ridge churches. Well, we are a little surprised ourselves. We have to confess that like Paul we have been "in a strait betwixt two." We have had no desire to leave the happy fellowship round in this lovely parish in the Valley. We have fallen in love with its people and its duties. We have felt that after taking much of this year to get acquainted, we owed it to the people here to work with them longer.

On the other hand, there has been a persistent appeal coming from Southern Union College and Wadley that we return there. We have had occasion to recall the pleasure of our former associations there. We have been informed of the enthusiasm and the spirit of sacrifice there on behalf of the college. We had already known something of the opportunities for service in that field. Men, too, the new president of the institution has consented to go only on condition that we be enlisted to serve with him. According to his own statement, he "puts us on the spot."

The decision has not been an easy one. Both fields appeal to us immensely, and we love the people of both regions. In view, however, of the training and experience we have had, it has seemed that our service might be greater at Wadley, so we have decided to move there. We have been invited to serve both as pastor of the Wadley Church and as Dean of Southern Union. We leave this field at Winchester and Timber Ridge with regret. We hope that someone will be found who can minister in this delightful, yet challenging, parish even more efficiently than we have been able to.

Very sincerely,
THE VAN CLEAVES.

Winchester, Va.,
July 10, 1934.

"If my people, which are called by name, shall humble themselves and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then I will hear from heaven, and will forgive their sins, and will heal their land." (2 Chron. 7:14). Read the whole chapter. See how different God's plan is from the ways of man.

E-D-I-T-O-R-I-A-L

EDITOR

J. O. ATKINSON, ELON COLLEGE, N. C.

ASSOCIATE EDITOR

E. C. GILLETTE

117 W. Forsyth Street, Jacksonville, Fla.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS

I. W. JOHNSON      ELISHA A. KING

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE OLD PATHS WHEREIN IS THE GOOD WAY.

Progress in religion, as in all else, comes through change, and yet change by no means signifies progress. To change, does not necessarily mean to grow. There are things that do not change and cannot be changed except for the worse. The Prophet Jeremiah evidently had this in mind when he wrote: "Thus saith the Lord, Stand ye in the ways and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls." By the use of hard-surface roads and skillful engineering, we have made our highways, but we have not abandoned them. If we are going places, we still have to use paths, highways. True, we do not go on the old cart of buggy wheels; we still go on wheels improved with rubber, as tires, but we have not abandoned or abolished going on wheels. We have simply, through change and experiment, improved the wheels. We have not destroyed transportation, and East is still East and West is still West. If we would go, we must still employ implements of our making just as our fathers did a thousand years ago to convey us.

A long, long time ago men discovered the way to God and, through the ages, God has been revealing Himself in an ever-increasing love, light and power to his children. He is the same God that walked in the Garden of Eden and talked with Adam and Eve there. In Adam's day God found a way to his presence and Adam found a way to the presence of God. God has been finding His way to the mind and presence of man ever since, and men and women have been finding their way to the presence and fellowship of God ever since. We have not abolished the way and, through the teaching and revelation of His Son, our Lord, we have found that there is just one way to the mind and love of Jehovah. His Son, Jesus the Christ, was and is that way, "I am the Way." Because the thinking, the mind and attitude of men and women change through the years and centuries, we must change our methods and modes and improve our privileges and opportunities of finding the way and going the way, but we cannot destroy the way. It is still, after nineteen centuries, "the good way," and we are commanded to walk therein, and, in doing so, we shall find rest for our souls.

We have changed our machinery and methods of going to church and arriving at church, we have changed many of the manners and methods of worship, of reverence and devotion, but we have not destroyed worship, and we must not and cannot destroy that if we would live and not die. Our God is the same today that he was yesterday, and will be forever. On the other hand, He is so infinite in love, power and personality that it behooves us, while finding Him through "the way," to find also new depths to His love, new manifestations of His power, new methods of approach and new channels of serving Him and our fellowman. So, out of the past comes a voice that we may still heed with profit and security: "Ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls," but many are saying, as they said in Jeremiah's day, "we will not walk therein."—Jeremiah 6:16.

J. O. A.

INDECENCY STRIKES BOTTOM.

It was hardly expected that Hollywood and the moving picture industry could keep on going from bad to worse without defeating their own purposes. In addition to the indecent pictures thrown on the screen for all the world to look upon, the shocking immorality at Hollywood, on the part of actors and actresses, as revealed almost daily in public print, seemed to have no bounds. No wonder the American people are revolting, for as the proverb has it: "Even Satan given enough rope will hang himself." The Creator of the universe decreed that immorality and indecency could only go so far. Suicide, if nothing else, comes to relieve an otherwise unbearable situation.

And so the churches—Catholic, Protestant and Jew—are waging a warfare of protest, and even salacious Hollywood is beginning to sit up and take notice. It was stated in a press dispatch recently that, because of the protest of the churches and a consequent falling off in receipts to movies, the picture producers had decided to discard or revise pictures at a cost, or a loss, of $10,000,000 to the industry. This may mean much or little, but it, at any rate, indicates that the movement for decency goes steadily on. The "Legion of Decency," organized by the Catholics and now practically adopted by Protestants and Jews, is gaining in membership by hundreds of thousands, and millions, and more than one chain of theatres have declared that shrinking receipts have compelled them to close up their business.

It is noted that the Congregational and Christian Sunday School Quarterly Conference, of Greater Norfolk, in session with our Ocean View Christian Church, Friday, June 13, went on record, unanimously pledging cooperation in the movement now being carried on by the Catholic, protestant and Jewish churches as protesting against the present display of indecent pictures and as emphatically demanding a reform in the moving picture industry. Argument, reason, or preachment could not avail as long as receipts increased. Now that hundreds of theatres are about to go bankrupt, or have done so, Hollywood is waking up, begs for a new lease of life and promises to produce only that which is decent. We shall see.

J. O. A.

A WORTHY FIRST.

Among the first ventures for righteousness made by our Christian churches, besides that of publishing the first religious newspaper in the world, and opening the first college to receive men and women on equal footing, and other firsts of commendable zeal—a first not so well known or often repeated—is that stated by our historian, W. E. MacClenny, Suffolk, Va., in his "Greetings to Our Methodist Friends" at the celebration of their sesqui-centennial recently. Our historian said "The Christian Church, on August 29, 1859, in the City of Raleigh, N. C., ordained Rev. Isaac Scott, a colored minister of good talents, for work in Africa. Then when the war of 1861-65 was over, so far as known, the first church body composed entirely of the colored people in the United States was organized in Raleigh, N. C., in 1886, by the colored Christians of that State, assisted by the white ministers of the Southern Christian Convention." THE SUN's editor recalls having heard the late, lamented Rev. J. W. Wellons and others tell of their presence at and their deep interest in the organization of that first church for colored Christians in 1866. This church has since grown into that great body of Christian churches, especially numerous in North Carolina, Virginia, and adjacent States, culminating in the present Afro-Christian Convention which recently met in biennial session at Suffolk, Va. Our Christian churches in the South have sought, through all the years, to do in practice and perform in actual service that which our Congregational constituency in New England and other sections of the country have taught and preached so vigorously and tried in practice and in theory to accomplish.

THE SUN's editor, who is the present Mission Secretary of the Southern Convention, enjoyed to great profit, a "seminar" at Oberlin, Ohio recently, whose session one day was given to race relations, a discussion of the relationship of the white and negro races here in the South. Those who lived at a distance and were, in a measure, detached and could give the benefit of their counsel and advice, gave to those of us who were here and involved from a practical point of view, much information as well as inspiration in going forward with the task of helping, as best we can in the great and needful task of finding a proper relationship between the two races. It was of peculiar interest when one of the secretaries of the American Board in the seminar at Oberlin gave a brief sketch of the development of Negro education and the relationship of the educational interest of the Negro to the White schools in New Orleans, La., and to be told by the speaker that in New Orleans there had been founded Dillard University for Negroes. Immediately this writer recalled that this man Dillard, for whom the University is named, is secretary of the Jean Foundation for Education, born and reared in Nansemond County, Va., and now resides in Charlottesville, Va., and occasionally Dr. Dillard contributes articles to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. He is one of our white men of the South, who, like many others of us, are seeking with all the light we can get to apply theories to our thinking, and principles to our practices, in all our dealings and relationships with the Negro race, which race here in America has a destiny to be worked out that is inescapably connected with the destiny of the other races of America.

J. O. A.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED BY THE GENERAL COUNCIL OF THE CONGREGATIONAL AND CHRISTIAN CHURCHES.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 27, 1934.

Resolutions originating in the Peace Seminar.

- Resolved that we request the Resolutions Committee of the Council to present an action authorizing and committing to the Council of Social Action the taking of a plebiscite of our denomination to determine the mind of our people along the general line of the following four positions or others:
  - I will engage in any war declared by my government.
  - I will engage in war only if convinced the government has done everything possible to prevent war, in strict obedience to the Pact of Paris.
  - Reserving the right of national defense by such means as seem to me most effective and in accordance with my conscience, I further pledge not to cross the boundary of my country to invade any other person's homeland to kill and destroy.
  - I am determined not to support any kind of war, international or civil.

We also ask that the Council invite other denominations and the Churches of other lands through the Federal Council and the World Alliance for International Friendship Through the Churches to consider taking similar plebiscites to reveal and record the mind of the Church regarding war.

- The cleavage between the way of Jesus and the system of war is clear.

We are convinced that we must now make this declaration: "The Church is through with war! We call upon the people of our churches to renounce war and all its ways and works and to refuse support, sanction or bless it." The mind of our Church (in so far as this vote reveals it), has moved to this solemn conviction. Vote: 271 - 10.

- In the face of the system of compulsory military training maintained in our high schools, land-grant schools, colleges and universities, we affirm our conviction in the right of all students to be conscientious objectors on religious or ethical grounds. We pledge to our Congregational and Christian young people our support in their endeavor to live by the dictates of the religious and ethical conscience.

Resolutions originating in the Seminar on Church Attendance and Stewardship.

- Resolved: that the syllabus on Christian Stewardship prepared by the Commission on Stewardship be recommended to the General Council for use by the local churches.
- Resolved: that we regret the inability of the Church Extension Boards to carry through the action of the General Council relative to broadcasting and recommend that means to be secured at least to try the Saturday evening church attendance stimulation program as proposed by the Commission on Broadcasting.
- Recognizing the vital need of those ministers who are to broadcast to be carefully trained for this new enlarged opportunity for ministry in order that religious broadcasting may be effective and of high standing, and realizing that usual methods of speaking are not sufficient, but a new technique is needed, we recommend that the theological seminaries offer special training in this line.

Resolutions originating in the Seminar on the Ministry.

- We commend the practice in many of our conferences, either by the conference or as a whole or by individual associations, of the holding of annual convocations, seminars or retreats, either independently or in connection with seminaries, colleges or universities. We urge the extension of this practice as far as conferences find it possible. We would also commend the practice of many of our conferences in assisting pastors financially in their attendance upon such conventions.
- We recommend that the Commission on Ministry be authorized to promote a campaign of education in this field, especially by furnishing necessary literature and by encouraging the consideration of the subject by state conferences and associations.

Resolutions originating in the Seminar on Christian Higher Education.

- Resolved: that the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches accept as a part of its task an active interest in the support of the work of the colleges of Congregational and Christian background.
- Resolved: that the Congregational and Christian Churches request the Education Society to consider projecting an educational survey of all colleges of Congregational and Christian background which are willing to cooperate in the task, the primary objective of such survey being an appraisal of and agreement upon spiritual aspects of higher education; this objective to be accomplished with inquiry into the educational worth of the methods and programs of the schools to be surveyed.
- The following resolution was referred to the Executive Committee of the General Council: Resolved: that appreciating the unusual privileges and contacts afforded members of the General Council meeting in such a session as we have enjoyed in 1934, and of acquainting ourselves with the colleges themselves, we recommend that future councils be held on college campuses.

Resolution originating in the Missioners Seminar.

- The General Council warmly commends the resolution passed by the Prudential Committee of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, April 10, 1934, accepting in substance the ten recommendations of the Laymen's Report, and urges the American Board to move forward as rapidly as possible in the wise and resourceful application of its principles.

Resolutions originating with the Seminar on Rural Life and Farm Problems.

- We earnestly recommend to the new Council for Social Action that it early consider the problem of Rural and Urban Relations. We feel this is one of the hottest spots in our American situation today. We think it needs just the research, education and action this new council is prepared to give it. Such action will include the integration of the present Town and Country Department of the Extension Boards with the new council and the establishment of the same as a department of the Council for Social Action.
- Whereas a large percent of the membership of our Churches comes from the small towns and rural areas of our country; and whereas the agricultural problem is one of the most serious in our land today; and whereas we search our program in vain to find any direct treatment of this question in the Council—we recommend that in planning the programs for future sessions of the Council these matters be given the time and attention their importance and seriousness deserve.

- The following resolution was referred to the Council for Social Action:

Whereas, the selfish profit-seeking system of economics has resulted in human misery and want in the midst of abundance,—Resolved, that the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches endorse and use all available resources of affecting the public opinion and social action to help usher in a new social order characterized by co-operative effort for the common good and motivated by the desire to serve.

Resolutions originating with the Interracial Seminar.

- That we recognize Race Prejudice as contrary to the life and teachings of our Lord and Master, Jesus Christ; that we as individuals search our hearts to determine whether we sincerely and truly believe that "God hath made of one blood all nations" to live together in peace and brotherhood; and that we devote ourselves to the principle that it is the God-given right of every individual to have the opportunity to develop the highest life.
- That the Council go on record as recognizing that racial prejudice and discrimination are in part rooted in a competitive economic order and that the idea of Nordic superiority is a rationalization growing out of the desire to keep other races in subjection or to make them the victims of exclusion and persecution.
- That we believe in the civil, social and religious rights of all minority groups as guaranteed by the Bill of Rights in the Constitution of the United States. We protest especially against Negroes in the Congressional restaurant.
- That we go on record as opposing all forced segregation upon any group which denies those people their constitutional rights of liberty and which acts in a manner that is injurious to the future well-being of the group.
- That we urge the new Council for Social Action to perform as one of its first duties the informing of all of the Congregational and Christian Churches of situations where the rights of minorities are being denied, and of ways in which we as churches through education, social, and political persuasion and pressure may remedy the situation.
- That we pledge ourselves to use all of our powers and influence to condemn and oppose the iniquitous and inexcusable crime of lynching until this disgraceful, inhuman and barbarous practice disappears from our land. And, further, that being firmly convinced of the frequent failures of our local and state authorities to protect the life and limb of persons accused of crime from the unlawful vengeance of inflamed mobs, we see the high necessity of Federal legislation to prevent and abolish the horrible crime of lynching.
- That we urge that the Negro be accorded the right of trial by jury of his peers, from which there shall be no exclusion on account of color.
- We appeal in confidence to the Christian spirit of the people of Alabama to see that the Scottsboro boys receive a fair and unprejudiced trial in their courts of justice.

(To be continued.)

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The announcement of the death of Mrs. Mary Sue Brittle, beloved wife of Rev. Richie Edwin Brittle, shocked the many friends of the family in the Eastern Virginia Conference. She was a daughter of the late John Parker and Mrs. Bettie Parker of Holland, Virginia, and was born July 2, 1904. She was received into Holland Christian Church and baptized by Rev. B. F. Black at the age of 13 years. After graduating at Holland High School she attended the State Teacher's Colleges at Harrisonburg and Farmville, and was elected a teacher in Cypress Chapel High School where she taught with great acceptance for six years.

On June 7th, 1932 she and Rev. R. E. Brittle were united in marriage in Cypress Chapel Christian Church, the ceremony being performed by Drs. W. D. Harward and W. M. Jay. Unto this union a son, Richie Parker Brittle, was born in Virginia Hospital, Suffolk, June 30, 1934. For several days the mother was seriously ill, but on July 10th she was much improved and the physicians and nurses thought she would be able to return home in a few days. Her husband had been constantly by her side, and she insisted that her great improvement should make it possible for him to attend the Youth Fellowship Conference held at Holland on that date. Upon this insistence he left about 9:30 A. M. to attend this Conference. She was taken suddenly ill about 11 o'clock. A phone message was sent to him at Holland, but she passed away within a few minutes after being stricken with a severe heart attack.

She is survived by her husband, an infant son, two brothers, J. Frank Parker of Washington, and C. T. Parker of Nansemond County; two sisters, Mrs. Harvey Darden of Holland and Miss Addie Lee Parker of Nansemond County.

The funeral service was held at Cypress Chapel Church and was conducted by Drs. W. M. Jay, N. G. Newman and I. W. Johnson. The following ministers were pall bearers: Rev. J. G. Truitt, H. J. Godwin, E. C. Dean, E. A. Potts, C. B. Craig, S. K. Emurian, C. E. Geringer and W. H. Corbitt. Sixteen ministers were in attendance, and the deacons of the churches of which Rev. R. E. Brittle is pastor served as honorary pallbearers. The combined choirs sang: "Does Jesus Care?", "When the Roll is Called up Yonder," "Sometime We'll Understand", and "God Be With You Till We Meet Again." There were sixty-two floral offerings banked in the church and placed about the grave.

An immense throng of several hundred sympathetic friends assembled to pay tribute to the departed. Mrs. Brittle endeared herself to the community as a teacher. After assuming the larger place as the wife of the beloved and faithful pastor, her friends and influence were multiplied many fold. She was a young woman of unusual charm and grace. She was sweet spirited and gentle, dignified and unassuming; deeply spiritual in her nature, tactful and friendly in her approach to rich and poor; and she quietly assumed a place of leadership among young and old who respected and loved her. Her life was beautiful and her memory will linger among her large circle of friends as a sweet heritage. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of His saints."

Love is not dead. All the people are not money and pleasure mad. There is a responsive element in human nature which appreciates real character.

The great company who gathered to pay their respect to the life of this good woman is an evidence of sincere appreciation. They did not come because she was rich or famous. They came because she and her good husband had exemplified a spirit of unselfish service and sincere devotion to the cause of Christ. She was a real friend. She manifested the spirit of the Master. And if the millions of church members in America will, in their places, likewise follow the Master of the Church will regain its place in the councils of the nation.

I. W. JOHNSON.

WHAT NEXT FOR THE COLLEGE GRADUATE?

A college graduate occupies an enviable position. By much of discipline, close application, and continuous endeavor for four years, he has earned for himself an honorable entrance into the society of educated people. He has added to his possessions and affections a great institution. He is vitally a part of his Alma Mater; and, for four years, his Alma Mater has been projecting herself into his mental life, assisting effectively the formation of character and the development of personality. His is a fellowship and a heritage decidedly different to four years previous.

Fresh from the achievements of high school, he entered college. His course, associations, and type of endeavor for the next four years are largely determined for him. He thinks of high school as the first step in an educational process from which he proposes to emerge better trained and better equipped for the responsibilities of life. When his college course is completed, he is decidedly enriched but perhaps more confused and uncertain as to the next step to be taken.

Many college graduates today will go into business with a certain amount of confidence and optimism. They are better prepared for their professional line, and their chances for success are increased. Others, encouraged by their successes in the classroom and research work, will continue their courses of study that they, themselves, may be prepared for high positions in the professional or educational world; and others will go from the college into the classrooms of graded and high schools to prepare boys and girls for the privileges of college life, which they, themselves, have enjoyed. Whatever course they may pursue, and wherever circumstances or desire may land them, all college graduates are indebted to the institution of which they have been a part for four years.

Most college graduates realize their obligations and are anxious to do what they can for their Alma Mater. Naturally, I am interested in the graduates of Elon College. I am anxious for their success, that they may have influence in their respective communities and in many ways reflect credit upon their college. I am also anxious that they continue their interest in Elon College and keep up their contact with the school. This can be done in different ways.

First, by forming Alumni Associations. The alumni of Eastern Virginia have had such an association for a number of years. This Association meets annually in Suffolk for a banquet and an inspirational program. Dr. I. W. Johnson, of Suffolk, is the president. The attendance at the banquet last February was more than one hundred and fifty. This Association means a great deal to the college and to the alumni themselves. There are a great many other sections and cities in which associations should be organized; in fact, where there are as many as five graduates or former students of the college in a given locality, that locality should have an association. This is a challenge to those interested in the Virginia Association to do a bit of missionary work and assist in the organization of other clubs throughout the constituency of the college. I think that it is true that, more and more, the college graduate is interested in his particular school. He wants that it shall increase in efficiency and influence that he may be able to speak and refer to it with pride. The college and the officials hold themselves in readiness to answer any call and offer any assistance in the organization of Alumni Clubs, or to give assistance to any graduate in any way that we can.

On the campus of Elon College, there are local fraternities and sororities. These organizations have their representatives among the alumni. They are pretty well scattered throughout the country. The alumnus is in a position to help his or her fraternity or sorority on the campus by organizing his or her fellow members who have gone out from Elon. Every local fraternity or sorority whose alumni have organized themselves for the purpose of feeding the home organization on the campus is in a much stronger position as it faces the future. It is the hope of the college that the alumni of the fraternities and sororities of Elon College will not lose their interest in the organization on the campus, but that they will continue this interest by forming organizations for the benefit of the fraternity or sorority on the campus.

Second, the graduates and former students of Elon College can be of service to their college by making certain constructive suggestions and recommendations to the faculty and to the Board of Trustees. Such suggestions and recommendations should not be made by individuals, but should be made through individuals representing groups or units of students in different sections. One way to render such service would be through an advisory committee, selected by the Alumni Association of the college for the purpose of advising with the faculty and with the Board of Trustees. As president of the college, I would welcome such a committee, provided it be duly authorized and carefully appointed.

They may assist the college, in the third place, by keeping the college informed as to the activities of individual alumni and any advancement or significant honor that they may enjoy. Also, by interesting high school graduates in coming to Elon for their college course and forwarding such names to the registrar's office at the college.

Elon graduates may assist the college along financial lines. This is one of our greatest needs. Our alumni may not be rich in material values, but they are rich in love and devotion; and because of such love and devotion, they will divide their earnings, whether they be large or small, that the financial needs of the college may be adequately met. A little more than two years ago, Mr. M. L. Patrick, now president of the Alumni Association, suggested a plan by which the average alumnus can make his contribution to the college. He suggested, and the Association formed, the Dollar-A-Month Club, a very simple plan by which every alumnus could give $1.00 a month and have a part in the continued progress and increased efficiency of the institution of which he is a vital part. A number of the alumni have responded to this plan and are members of the club. This is a very simple arrangement and is not too exacting of any one individual, but if all would cooperate it would be a tremendous advantage to Elon College.

We have now more than one thousand graduates of the college. In addition to these, who have completed their course, there are approximately nine thousand, making a total of more than ten thousand individuals who have received at least a part of their training at Elon. This is a great and a goodly company and if sufficiently interested could accomplish whatever they might desire. There are a number who are interested, and this is an appeal to you to make it your business to interest others, to use your influence to organize alumni clubs and otherwise render assistance to Alma Mater.

L. E. SMITH.

SUMMER CONFERENCES.

(EDITORIAL.)

Several of the Summer Conferences have already been held, concerning some of which we have information. The Conference at Blue Ridge closed on July 11th, and was a very successful and happy conference. The attendance this year was almost the same as last year, in spite of the fact that there were less Student Summer Service workers present. Dr. W. A. Harper served as Dean and was re-elected Dean for the coming year. Other members of the faculty were Dr. Fred Field Goodsell of the American Board; Dr. Elisha A. King of Miami Beach; Rev. William T. Scott of Winston Salem, N. C.; Rev. D. W. Shepherd of Phenix City, Ala.; Rev. Alfred W. Hurst of Chattanooga; Miss Priscilla Chase, Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, Miss Davison, Dr. F. P. Ensminger and Rev. Milo J. Sweet. Rev. E. C. Gillette was Conference Chairman. Dr. Ralph Harlow of Smith College, who was on the faculty of the Y. M. C. A. Graduate School, spoke before the Conference twice, conducting an open forum on current religious and social problems, adding greatly to the interest and inspiration of the Conference.

A week-end Conference for the young people in the Kentucky churches was held at Corbin. Concerning this Miss Marguerite Davison writes as follows: "The churches are scattered but the young people came in trucks, driving forty and eighty miles over poor roads to attend the conference. They took for their conference theme "Our Responsibility" and considered it from all angles. There were quite lively discussions at some stages and some real thinking was done by the young people. Each group led one worship service during the conference and contributed to the fun with dramatic presentation, stunt, or recreational program. Each year the young people show remarkable improvement in executive ability."

A week conference was held at Grandview under the auspices of the Tennessee Comrades. Concerning this conference Miss Davison writes: "The young folks came from our two Chattanooga churches, from Daisy, Soddy, Crossville, Robbins, and Stearns, Kentucky. One girl came up from Alabama, and the leaders came from various sections. Every pastor was with his or her delegates, an excellent record, indicative of the attitude of our Tennessee and Kentucky ministers. The young people came in trucks, in private cars and in service cars and brought provisions of all kinds to pay for their keep. Some brought money instead of provisions, so we fared sumptuously and at the end we discovered that our meals had cost nine cents each. You may not believe it, but several of the young folks commented on the wonderful food we were having, so much better than camps usually afforded. The campers did all the work about the camp, prepared meals by turns, and lived together in true cooperative style. We had classes all morning, craft work and recreation in the afternoon and various programs at night. One afternoon and evening we visited the Homesteads near Crossville and held a Vesper Service for the people at work there. That was a real education for the young people and a service too. At two of our camp Vesper Services leaders of the Homesteads spoke and Mr. Nightingale, our teacher of Missions, devoted one of his classes to that great development. He is one of the Homesteads Committee, so could give necessary information. The Tennessee and Kentucky young people have real interest in the social problems of our country and learned much through these contacts and through discussions led by our devoted and forward looking pastors. Saturday night and Sunday were our Tennessee Comrades Conference days. We used the mas demonstration opportunities so that others could know what we had been doing in our week at camp. Local people showed much interest and we were rightfully proud of our first camp school."

The St. Simons Island Conference, conducted by Rev. and Mrs. Alan Jones for the young people of their parishes, was held and there was reported an attendance of fifty-three. We hope to have further information later concerning this interesting and vital young people's conference.

The Florida Young People's Conference was held again at DeLeon Springs. Miss Pattie Lee Coghill had general direction of the Conference and Rev. Lawrence A. Gedcke of St. Petersburg was Dean. There was a good attendance and the Conference was reported as having been one of the very best conferences held, both as to the quality of the young people attending and as to the work accomplished.

E. C. G.

MY LIFE AND BELIEFS.

(Continued from page 9.)

would see the reality as it is, and love his own doom." If we would hate and curse our fate, we should desperately resign ourselves to drinking, to infamous deeds and then the result should be a pitiful suicide. I think our life is glorious if we love the reality and our fate. All my effort is directed to keep this manner through my life. But we cannot know ourselves of tomorrow. I may have a serious blunder, or suffer from unbearable agony, but I will keep myself upright, reminding my mother's great love, to meet our God's will.

KAMETARO NAKAYAMA.

Shibuyaka, Tokio, Japan.

OXFORD BIBLES for EVERY NEED

"The Oxford Bible is the Bible par excellence of the world"

THE HOME BIBLE

A Family Bible in Handy Size

An extra large type Oxford Text Bible, containing also, a family register and 12 beautifully colored maps. Size 9 x 5 1/2 inches.

Specimen of Type

16 The LORD is King for ever and ever: the heathen are perished out

- Nos. 01600 Superior Cloth, round corners and red edges $2.75
- 01603 French Morocco, limp, round corners, red under gold edges, head-band, book-mark $4.75

The JUNIOR'S Bible

Self-Pronouncing

With 4,000 Questions and Answers, carefully selected "Aids to Bible Study," 16 beautifully colored and 15 black full-page illustrations, 6 colored maps and a presentation page. Children may readily pronounce correctly difficult Scripture names, as this Bible is self-pronouncing. Size 7 x 4 1/4 x 1 1/4 inches.

Type in Junior's Bible
2 Take the sum of all the of the children of 1s/ra-el, years old and upward, thro

- No. 1815 French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges, headbands and book-mark. Make some child happy with one of these fine Bibles $2.95

Child's ILLUSTRATED Bible

The beautifully colored illustrations in this new Bible are a delight to the children. It has clear, readable type and yet it measures only 5 1/2 x 3 1/2 inches.

Specimen of Type

2 My soul longeth, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the LORD: my heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God.
10 Mercy and truth gather; righteousness kissed each other.
11 Truth shall sprin

- No. 02112. French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, gold edges $2.50

Pocket REFERENCE Bible

Has over 50,000 center column references. Measures only 6 1/4 x 4 1/2 inches. (A splendid gift for a young lady.)

Specimen of Type

9 Behold, O God our shield, and look upon the face of thine anointed.
10 For a day in thy courts is better
11 Gen. 15.1
12 Ps. 55.1
13 57.1.
14 2 cor. 4:11

- No. 07523x French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges $3.25

Concordance Edition

Type and size as No. 07523x, but with a Concordance, subject index and dictionary of Scripture names. An excellent edition for students and Christian workers No. 03272x $5.00

OUR LEADER
Oxford Concordance Bible

Self-Pronouncing

This beautiful Oxford India paper edition is indeed the ideal Bible for the student, preacher and evangelist. Each proper name and difficult word is divided into syllables and accented, and though printed with large clear type, the volume measures only 8 1/2 x 5 1/2 x 1 5/16 inches.

Specimen of Type

8 9 Jō-hōi'-ā-chin was 6 years old when he began t

- No. 03671x. Fine Grain Morocco leather, overlapping cover, leather lined to edge, silk round corners, red under edges, silk

hear

A UNIQUE GIFT BIBLE

With Basket Weave Binding

The Antique brown calf leather binding has a basket-weave grain, and button clasp. Has overlapping cover, art silk lined, with red under gold edges. With references. Printed on Oxford India paper. Type as Pocket Reference Bible. $5.50

No. 03255x

- As No. 03255x, with concordance. No. 03276x $6.50

Oxford TEACHER'S Bibles

Have over 50,000 center column references, and 300 double-column pages of up-to-date helps, conveniently arranged in alphabetical order. Also 32 full-page illustrations, and an indexed atlas of the Bible with 15 beautifully colored maps of Bible lands.

Easy-to-Read-Edition

Size 7 1/4 x 5 x 1 1/2 inches

Specimen of Type

14 Like sheep they are laid in grave; death shall feed on th

- Nos. 04453. French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, round corners and red under gold edges. A durable and hand-some Bible $4.35

Oxford India Paper Edition

Only one inch thick.

- 0773x. French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges, headbands and book-mark. A beautiful gift edition $7.00

RED LETTER Edition

Same size and type as style No. 04453, with same references and helps, but with all the words of Jesus Christ printed in red. White paper edition No. 05453. French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges $5.00

MISSIONS

 REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary

MAJORING IN JAPAN.

Our American Board, made up of Congregational and Christian Churches throughout the United States, is majoring this year in Japan. The Board is seeking to lay before our constituency the strategic power and place of Japan in the Orient, and in the world, and to acquaint the people of America with actual conditions in Japan, educational, social and religious. One simply cannot know the world of today without taking into account Japan as a nation and a people. The rapidity with which this small nation of people—small in stature—has come to be a world power within the last twenty-five years is amazing. Many elements and factors have entered into this making, and if we wish to know that which goes into nation building and empire construction, we shall certainly have to know something of Japan. Moreover, Christianity has been doing a marvelous work in Japan in the last quarter of a century, which work has had an influence more far-reaching than the number of converts to Christianity would indicate.

Our advice to our Missionary Societies, our Sunday Schools, and CHRISTIAN SUN readers in general, is to read and learn something about Japan. Thrilling books are rolling from the press, telling about this "Sunrise Kingdom" and of her people in their struggle and achievement, as they arose from insignificance and impotency to great prestige and power within less than a half century. I have just received from the Friendship Press, 150 Fifth Avenue, New York, four books, any one of which, and in fact all of which, can be read with great profit and interest by those who wish to be informed on one of the most vital topics and one of the most progressive peoples and nations of the earth. "Typhoon Days in Japan," by Robert Steward Spencer, is a book by the son of missionaries in Japan, and, in fact, springs up from the third generation of missionaries. He knows Japan, having been born there and learned Japanese as a child, and received his early education among the people of Japan. After taking his college and university and theological degrees in this country and serving in a pastorate here for two years, he was returned to Japan as a missionary and certainly produced a book of absorbing interest, reaching the climax in his two final chapters—"Christ Amidst the Storms" and "The East Calls to the West."

Then just from the press are "Japan and Her People," by Ethel M. Hughes, a book first published in London in 1928. Its author, Miss Ethel M. Hughes, being for many years a missionary in Japan was sent out by the London Society for the Propagation of the Gospel. This book, originally published in London, has been brought up-to-date, the author being assisted in this by our own Miss Ruth Isabel Seabury of the American Board and Miss Pawley of the Baptist Foreign Mission Society. If one wishes to know first-hand about Japan and her people, read this book and get a thrill from every one of its 145 pages.

Now comes "Japanese Here and There," by Margaret E. Forsyth and Ursul R. Moran. Both of the authors have lived in Japan for a season, the former as a student from Columbia University and the latter as a resident in Japan. Their book of 145 pages gives a sketch of Japanese life, wherever that life is being lived, both in Japan and the United States, or elsewhere, and seeks to acquaint the reader with the Japanese as individuals, whether in schools, at manual labor, in the home or in his religious attitude.

And then Katherine Smith Adams, after the experience as a director of religious education for the Episcopal Church in the diocese of Atlanta, became director later of religious education in Greenwich, Conn., and at present is located at Berkeley, California, doing work in a school for Christian service. Her book is entitled, "Oriental Friends in the United States," and is confined to our Japanese neighbors as we meet and find and know them in our country and under the conditions that obtain among orientals here in the Occident.

Each of these books may be obtained in board cover at $1.00, or paper at 75c from the Friendship Press, New York, and they are certainly worth the price and will afford many hours of very wholesome and helpful reading to those who wish to know of the struggles, the achievements, as well as the needs and the defects, of a great and growing people.

J. O. A.

MISSIONARY OFFERINGS.
WEEK ENDING JULY 14, 1934.

Sunday Schools.

Previously acknowledged .....	$ 2,741.37
Parks Cross Roads, Ramseur, N. C. ....	10.00
Hank's Chapel, Pittsboro, N. C. ....	1.29
Ocean View, Va. ....	2.10
Union (South), Franklin, Va. ....	4.00
Mayland, Broadway, Va. ....	1.00
Big Oak, Biscoe, N. C. ....	.50
Mt. Carmel, Carrsville, Va. ....	1.10
New Hope, Harrisonburg, Va. ....	3.46
Howard's Chapel, Wentworth, N. C. ....	1.00
Linville, Va. ....	3.85
Winchester, Va. ....	2.56
Total .....	$ 2,772.23

Individuals and Churches.

Previously acknowledged .....	$ 2,650.56
Cypress Chapel, Va. ....	1.60
Brown's Chapel, Spies, N. C. ....	1.20
Ebenezer, Morrisville, N. C. ....	2.25
Elm Avenue, Portsmouth, Va. ....	2.15
Berea, Driver, Va. ....	8.35
Howard's Chapel, Wentworth, N. C. ....	2.50
Total .....	$ 2,668.61

Specials.

Previously acknowledged .....	$ 917.45
Turner's Chapel S. S., Adult Bible Class, Sanford, N. C. ....	3.50
Turner's Chapel S. S., Class No. 3, Sanford, N. C. ....	1.00
Shallow Ford S. S., Class No. 7, Elon College, N. C. ....	2.00
Total .....	$ 923.95

Coin Card Offering.

Previously acknowledged .....	$ 67.00
Shallow Ford S. S. Classes, Elon College, N. C. ....	3.00
Pleasant Ridge S. S., Guilford College, N. C. ....	7.01
Misses Sarah and Fannie Ellison, Asheboro, N. C. ....	2.00
Pleasant Cross S. S. Classes, Asheboro, N. C. ....	3.00
Bethlehem S. S. Classes, Elon College, N. C. ....	3.00
Miss Margaret Alston, Henderson, N. C. ....	1.00
Dr. J. Edward Kirby, Raleigh, N. C. ....	1.00

Catawba Springs S. S. Classes, Apex, N. C. ....	3.00
Rev. S. E. Madren, Henderson, N. C. ....	1.00

Total .....$ 91.01

Summary.

Previously acknowledged .....	$14,449.39
Sunday Schools, regular, July 14, 1934. ..	30.86
Individuals and Churches, July 14, 1934. ..	18.05
Specials, July 14, 1934. ....	6.50
Coin Card Offering, July 14, 1934. ....	24.01

Total to date .....$14,528.81

J. O. ATKINSON, Secy.

DOCTORING IN DONDI.

(Sketch of one of our own missionaries by Miss D. P. Cushing, News Editor.)

Family physician to over 142,000 persons is the outstanding job that faces Dr. H. Veazie Markham in Dondi, West Central Africa, where he works among the Ovimbundu people and receives patients from an area 300 miles by 150 miles, treats annually 40,000 persons and superintends the health of 1,100 boys and girls in the mission schools. In this latter line of medical service, Dr. Markham sees a great improvement in the physical well-being of his young charges. Certain diseases, due to disregard of ordinary hygiene, seems to have disappeared almost entirely.

Dr. Markham, who is a graduate of Washburn College and Washington University Medical School, was born in Massachusetts. During the war he served in the A. E. F. His year of internship was spent at the Henry Ford Hospital in Detroit Mich. Dr. Markham first went to Dondi in 1928 although he left America in 1927. The intervening year was spent in Portugal acquiring the necessary Portuguese medical license permitting him to practice in West Central Africa. He uses not only the native tongue, but the official tongue of that area, Portuguese.

Since his arrival in Dondi a new hospital has been built and is meeting a great need. This work began in a little dark adobe hut about 10 by 12 feet. Although Dr. Markham laughingly reports that one of the wildest animals he had seen was a rabbit, the jungle is practically at his back door. A few hours by auto and then a brief trek on foot through the bush brings him into the heart of raw Africa.

To those who ridicule the missionary for advocating more clothes on the "healthy" native folk, it will come as a surprise to know that it is the lack of clothing and proper covering at night that are the major causes of most of the sickness. Children have perennial colds. Indeed a child without a cold is an object of curiosity to Dr. Markham.

"More sickness and death comes from pneumonia and diseases of the chest than any other illness here except malaria" declares Dr. Markham. "We have an absolutely wet half year and an absolutely dry half year. When the seasonal changes come, these chest diseases develop. Tuberculosis is quite prevalent.

"The native people who are not Christians and therefore do not know how to build proper houses, live in flimsy huts with dirt floors, unheated except for the small smoky open fire in the center which is disastrous to the eyes. Sometimes the temperature changes 50 degrees between night and morning.

"The Christians are cleaner, healthier, better clothed and housed. They have gardens. They are ambitious and most of all there is expectancy and hope in their faces which the non-Christian for the most part lacks because of their belief in witchcraft and superstitions keeps them forever under a constant shadow of fear."

MY LIFE AND BELIEF.

EDITORIAL NOTE:—In last week's SUN, page 8, we printed a personal letter from a lad in Japan to Rev. A. D. Woodforth, who for forty years was one of our missionaries to Japan and who is now living at Merm, Ind. As stated in the note last week, the remarkable thing about the letter was the fact that the Japanese lad had the misfortune at six years of age of having both arms and one leg cut off by a train, since which time, thus handicapped and in poverty, he had worked his way through high school and university and did his writing by holding the staff of his pen in his mouth. This lad has thus written a brief autobiography which we think will interest and should inspire many youths of our CHRISTIAN SUN family—J. O. A.

My father died when I was five years old. He was working in a mine, and some day, he met a disastrous explosion of methane gas. My father entered a pitch to save his workmen but after successful succor of two mens' life, he went down into the mine to save more lives, and met another explosion, which suffocated him to death.

My mother experienced the unexpected departure of her husband, but I heard she had forborn tear or sorrow and never appeared panic-stricken. She was stout-hearted. Taking her children, she went to Kyushu, and there she opened a shop with the funds which was furnished by the company as an allowance for condolence. The shop was prosperous, and my family had been very happy till I had grown up six years of age.

One day, my grandmother bid me to fetch the grass, mugwort, with which rice-cake is made in Japan, and I went along a railway picking up the grass with my nurse and sister. I wore a pair of new clogs, and my care for his new clogs tempted me to the irretrievable disaster.

I was picking the grass when a train came imminent, and I jumped to fly away from the railway, but my clog was tightly caught by the rail. Then I tried to pluck up the clog and stretched my both hands. At this moment, my hands and left foot were torn off.

As the injury was not so simple as that was made by a knife or such a sharp edge, but was very intricate being crushed beneath an iron wheel, the surgical operation must have been performed on upper parts of arms and leg. Both arms were cut from the elbows, and the leg was from the knee. I had been conscious till the moment of being run over, but after that I could know nothing.

I found myself lying in bed of a hospital. Hearing my mishap, my mother run up to the hospital, and looking on me who showed no sign of such tragical wound on face and head as being run over by a train, felt easy, and she removed the coverlet. She found my pitiful body, with both hands and left leg mercilessly cut off. In the presence of this miserable matter, she fell faint on the place and lost consciousness for a long time. Several days were necessary for her to recover from desperate grief.

After three months treatment in the hospital, I could recover health, and had to leave it. Then, my home was thrown into the utmost poverty, even the shop itself was changed of its owner. There was no way left for my family except only to rely upon my aunt who was living about three hundred miles away.

Grandmother and sister went first with traveling fees, but I and my mother must walk on foot the way of three hundred miles.

As I was a child of only one leg, mother bore me on her back, putting me in a basket, and walked for thirty days, crossing over mountains and rivers under the burning sun of July and August. My entering in the hospital was February and leaving was May. I and mother arrived at my Aunt's house in August. I cannot recollect this travel without an aching heart. I was brought up to my age of seven in this house. As I must go to school, my family returned to the native place.

My native place is in Okayama Prefecture, near to Konko-cho, the Mecca for the devotees of Konko-kyo, named Nakasho, and is a neighboring town of a copper mine, in which my mother got a job.

She made much effort for my entering school, but I was refused. In those days, she began to have faith in Konko-kyo, and in her every day prayer, the matter of my school education was her anxious supplication.

Then fortunately the school-master was changed after a year and Mr. Yeguchi, the new principal, admitted me to enter school, when I was ten years old.

As the Japanese compulsory education begins from the age of seven, I was behind in studies over two years, but the school master admitted me into the 2nd year class. Thus, the first step of my education till I graduated a university had started through his special kind offices.

In the elementary school, I had been always made fun of by my class-mates being called as a scarecrow. Though my appearance at present is said, not so queer, because of Japanese gown-like kimono, it was quite natural that schoolboys called me a scarecrow, for I was in those days always jumping with right leg, wearing small-cut kimono, and without using artificial leg like now. In fact, my appearance at present seems almost normal, because, for instance, I often heard a conductor of tram-cars would blame "You lazybone!" as I handed my ticket over him by inserting it in my armpit: sometime I was scolded by a conductor when I get in a car, "Stretch your hands!" as I had to jump upon the step.

I could successfully completed the elementary school course, and then I and my mother removed to Konko-cho. I entered the middle school of that place.

While we were in the native place, my mother engaged in a very hard work of the copper mine. She earned only 42 Sen a day by cutting in piece the big mineral stones of over 10 thousand pounds. She worked from early morning till late at night, and when some itinerant players visited the country, she would sell ruggs and braziers in the temporary theatre. When the European War ended, the financial depression extended its influence over our out-of-the-way country, and my mother was much distressed.

But after we came to Konko-cho, she worked in a macaroni factory, till my graduation from the middle school. For five years of school, I past very happy and completed the course. Then for some time, I was an editor's assistance of the religious periodical, which is published in Konko-cho.

I had a hope of going to Tokyo. But my mother was advanced in age, and I had not been able to find any suitable job for me. But some day, a plasterer of the religious town told Mr. Sato, the principal of Konko Middle School, that the interpretation of motion picture titles might be a proper occupation for me. Mr. Sato was delighted by this suggestion, and he made much effort for my going to Tokyo. This, I think was God's will to show me the way of my living through the plasterer's mouth.

Through the efforts of many faithful persons, I could go to Tokyo. My job had been prepared, and I could soon work in the Shintomiza, a movie hall. Last year, I was transferred to Teikoku.

In 1928, taking advantage of the spare time from my business, I went to the Tokyo University, from which I graduated in 1931. In the following year, the license for the teacher of the middle school was given by the special favour of the authority, as it is absolutely necessary the constitution, the personality and the scholarship to be all right for the qualification of the school teacher, and I am quite incompetent as to the constitution.

Above is a rough sketch of my life. In reminiscence of my past, I learn many good lessons.

When we should meet some misfortune or should fall into some unhappy circumstance, we are apt to resign ourselves to the inevitable, depressed and curse the destiny, thinking there are no means left for us. But from another view of life, the destiny is not said to have been given by the other, but it is begotten in our individual life, or we make the destiny by ourselves and are swallowed in it.

I am consoled by many people as one of the poorest being in the world, but I do not feel myself miserable at any rate, but think myself very happy, despite of my incomplete body.

The reason of my happiness is, first, that I am in very good health. I do not know any serious disease, or severe fatigue though I should be pressed by work and journey without a moment spared for over two weeks. This fact, that I can endure very hard work and do not suffer from fatigue, makes me very happy.

The second reason is that I feel no inconvenience with myself. I can do everything that is necessary for me. In the Tokyo University I wrote note-book with my mouth, hearing a professor's lecture. From the noon, my business in the movie-hall begins. I returned home at 11 o'clock at night, and then I made a fair copy of the note-book I had roughly written in the school. The time of my going to bed was always 1 or 2 o'clock in the morning, and after a sleep for about 5 hours, I get up and repeated the work and study.

That I could graduate the university must be ascribed to my good health and to the fact that I have nothing inconvenient with me.

I do not feel and encumbrance in writing. I hold a pen between the toes of the right leg or hold it in the mouth. I can write small or large letters as everybody writes. I can ride on a bicycle. During my school-days in Konko-cho, I must go five or six miles away from the town to buy a book. For this purpose it was only waste of time to walk the long way, and so, I learned the bicycle riding. I have never tumbled in that practice.

Thus being free from inconvenience, which should have made me sad and depressed on account of incomplete constitution, I have no complaint at all, like some peoples who love physical deficiency or financial anguish, and are liable to be pregnant of a dark and wretched prejudice. I have no such prejudice or suspicious mind. During my school-days, I was treated badly by class-mates, but my mind is not succumbed to such a melancholy mistrust and jealousy. This is, I think, owing to my mother's warm heart and God's love.

I was to die when I was run over by a train in childhood, because I had a dreadful hemorrhage, and the attended doctor said it was wonderful that I could survive. This is also the kind intention of God. I think God had wished my life as He thought it of some use, and I who should have been dead, am alive now. I want to fulfil this God's wish and to live the life to be delighted by others.

Many religionists and devotees say that man should deem it with gratitude even to grieve or to suffer. Since the death itself also God's will, we, who die as He dictates, must be happy. Thinking this, I should be happy in everything.

I have loved my fate. Romain Rolland said, "The most brave in the world is the man who

(Continued on page 7.)

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

EASTERN VIRGINIA YOUTH FELLOWSHIP MEETING.

On Tuesday, July 10th, the Eastern Virginia Youth Fellowship met in Holland Christian Church with one hundred and thirty-one young people, and sixteen pastors present. This was more than just another meeting.

The theme was, "Christian Youth Building a New World." Rev. H. S. Hardcastle of Norfolk opened the discussion by showing the necessity of building a new world. Young people followed with ten-minute talks on the new person, home, church, community, nation and world giving a definition of what we need. This was followed by an open discussion led by the writer.

During the afternoon young people discussed the things that can be done in building a new person, home, church, community, nation and world. Dr. Charles Eldred Shelton of Portsmouth led the discussion on this topic. If one can judge by the clearness of thought, seeming sincerity of purpose, and eagerness to share, it was manifest on the part of the young people at Holland. One can feel assured that something is going to be done by the young people of today toward building a new world. They seem to be sure that something needs to be done and that something can be done to improve modern conditions.

A banner was presented to the church having the largest percentage of young people present, and was awarded to the Congregational Church, of Portsmouth.

Officers for the coming year were elected as follows:

President, Robert Speight, Suffolk; Vice-president, Mrs. Ernest Baker, Suffolk; Secretary, Edna Fulcher, Norfolk; Assistant-Secretary, Mary Rawles Jones, Holland; Treasurer, June Joy Hyatt, Newport News; Superintendent of Devotional Life, Dora Martin, South Norfolk; Superintendent of Service, Louise Pittman, Wakefield; Superintendent of Leadership Training, Lottie May Cross, Suffolk; Superintendent of Moral Standards, Miss Lillye Holland, Holland; Reporter and Superintendent of Publications, Evelyn Richardson, Waverly; Pastor-Counselor, Rev. F. C. Lester, Norfolk; Pastor-Counselor, Dr. J. G. Truitt, Suffolk; Lay Counselor, Miss Irene Cotten, Dendron.

The young people in Eastern Virginia seem to be eager to carry forward the work of the Fellowship of Youth composed of some one hundred eighty thousand members of Congregational and Christian Churches in America. This modern group in our denomination is to be known as the "Pilgrim Fellowship." The young people of the Southeast can feel proud of the fact that they chose the name of Fellowship before the rest of the denomination did. It is hoped that they will continue to lead in the work of the Church.

A FORUM TO BE HELD AT ELON.

In addition to the courses announced on the folder advertising the Elon Summer School there will be each evening an open forum on the general theme of "Christian Youth Building a New World." Various groups will discuss the various phases of the topic, and on the closing day will bring together their reports and have a united discussion on the general theme.

All who are going to Elon should bear this in mind and begin to think of what the new world should be like and ways in which we can help to bring it about. Youth leaders are eager to have the thoughts which the young people themselves, working together, shall agree upon as a basis for future programs and activities. The time has come for youth to cast in its lot and do what it can for the reconstruction of modern society. They now have an opportunity to join hands with multitudes who are interested and doubtless will take advantage of this opportunity.

LAST CALL FOR ELON SUMMER SCHOOL.

Next Monday is the day for pastors, superintendents, teachers, youth leaders, and young people to meet at Elon College to begin a week of worship, study and recreation, with the hope of getting new ideas and becoming new persons in order that they may return to their churches inspired to undertake greater things for God. All should be at Elon by three o'clock in the afternoon so they may be registered and meet for class assignments and be all ready for the fellowship supper which comes at 6 o'clock.

Indications are that a goodly number will be present. One little church in Eastern Virginia expects to have eight or ten representatives at Elon for the week. May other churches be well represented.

I am making this final appeal to those who read this page to do your very best in helping to make the attendance as large as possible.

WHAT DO YOUR BOOKS COST YOU?

A few months ago in the Massachusetts Penitentiary there died a man who was probably the most famous life prisoner in America, Jesse Pomeroy. He entered prison when he was fourteen years of age and had been in prison fifty-six years, being a little over seventy when he died. All his life spent behind bars.

He had murdered little children in a very revolting way. Soon after he entered the prison, a publisher visited him for an interview. In the course of that talk the boy told him that his favorite reading consisted of the "blood-and-thunder" type of story. He said that he had read more than sixty dime novels, all of which dealt with scalping and other bloody performances. He said there was no doubt that the reading of those books put into his mind the ideas which led to his murderous acts.

When Jesse Pomeroy bought those books, he probably thought he was getting a library pretty cheap. Ten cents a book is not much. But those books cost him more than that. They cost him his liberty, and the right to be a good citizen for the rest of his life. Rather expensive library, that.

A friend once visited Robert G. Ingersoll, the famous infidel. Mr. Ingersoll possessed one of the most complete libraries of infidel books in existence. The friend spoke of the size of it.

"Yes," Mr. Ingersoll replied, "not only is it a large library, but it is an expensive one. That library cost me the Presidency of the United States."

Mr. Ingersoll was referring to a time when he was considered as a candidate for the highest office in the gift of the country. Had it not been for his religious views, he would probably have been nominated. That was a costly library, but not as costly as Pomeroy's.

Every one of you would do well to consider how much you are paying for your reading matter. A magazine that costs you a nickel may contain a suggestion that will influence your whole life, and cost you many times that nickel in warped ideals and false views of life that will bring you sorrow.

Think well before you invest in reading matter, and consider whether you can afford to buy the book. And don't reckon the cost of it in the money you invest.

A writer has said that the best books are those which lift us to a higher plane where we breathe a purer atmosphere. If the book you contemplate reading is one that will stir you up and inspire you to do something and be something worth doing and being, then you can afford to get it, and will be making a good investment. If the piece of literature does not do this, no matter if you pay but a cent for it, your liberty will cost you more than you can afford.—Alebrt A. Rand in The Challenge.

GREAT MISSIONARY HYMNS.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR JULY 29, 1934.
Isa. 42:1-4.

Program.

Theme: "Our Changing Attitude Toward Missions, in Theory and in Song."

Prelude: "O Zion Haste, Thy Mission High Fulfilling." (Instrumental.)

Opening Hymn: "Jesus Shall Reign Wher'er the Sun."

Prayer.

Scripture: Isa. 42:1-10.

Hymn: "Fling Out the Banner."

Offering: While the offering is being taken, let a soloist sing three verses of "Christ for the World We Sing."

Speaker: "Missionary Hymns, Yesterday and Today."

Closing Hymn: "We've a Story to Tell to the Nations."

Daily Readings:

Monday, July 23.—Hymns of the King. Ps. 2:1-12.
Tuesday, July 24.—The World of Christ. Ps. 22:25-31.

Wednesday, July 25.—Light of the World. Isa. 9:2.
Thursday, July 26.—Shepherd of Love. Isa. 40:9-11
Friday, July 27.—The Missionary Call. Isa. 55:1-5.
Saturday, July 28.—The Missionary Vision. Rev. 7:9-17.

Make this an informal meeting. Gather about the piano and spend part of the time singing and part of the time talking about hymns. Sing a few hymns and talk about them. (1). "O Beautiful for Spacious Skies" by Katherine Lee Bates is a hymn of home missions. (2). "At Length There Dawns the Glorious Day" by Ozora S. Davis. (3). "In Christ There is no East or West" by John Oxenham. Many regard this as their favorite missionary hymn. Why?

What makes a hymn "missionary"? Does it need to include a reference to those in non-Christian lands? It should be remembered that American churches do as much missionary work in the United States as they do in foreign nations. It is wrong to think of "missions" as the program of the Church in Asia and Africa and other foreign lands. Moreover, missions is not thought of today as simply getting people to join the church; it includes the service that we render for others, entirely apart from the fact that we may win them to the way of Jesus. In the light of these considerations, find an answer to the question, "What (Continued on page 11.)"

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. H. ARDCASTLE.

ELIJAH HEARS GOD'S VOICE.

LESSON IV—July 22, 1934.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Speak, Lord; for Thy servant heareth."—I Sam. 3:9.

LESSON TEXT: I Kings 19:9-21.

The old prophet was discouraged. Things had not been going so well. His cherished plans had fallen through. Worst of all, a scheming, determined, unscrupulous woman of power and influence was after his scalp. Elijah had the blues. It is in this frame of mind that he comes to Horeb, "the mount of God."

The Mount of God.

Horeb, better known as Sinai, was "the mount of God." It was here that God had revealed himself to the children of Israel, and it was here that Moses had received the law. Thus it was that Elijah was on "sacred ground." There was everything here to suggest Jehovah's presence and His power. It is not strange that while he was here "the word of the Lord came to him." It is all well enough to talk about worshipping God in the out-of-doors. And certainly God does not confine His revelations of himself to one place, not even a church. But men and women will do well to frequent those places which are hallowed with sacred associations, in which God can the more readily speak to them. Men and women need to turn aside from the places and the activities that claim them during the week, and to turn to the church, where amid suggestive surroundings, and among fellow-worshippers they get a new sense of the eternal, and hear again "the word of the Lord." Of course this puts a responsibility upon the minister. Those who do come to the place of worship should find there that which meets their deep needs. Our modern world, far from outgrowing the need for services of worship, needs even more desperately that for which the church stands.

"What Doest Thou Here?"

God has a way of asking some disconcerting questions. This is one of them. As a matter of fact Elijah was running away from his duty. Life had larger responsibilities for him than hiding away in a cave. We will do well, if occasionally we ask ourselves the question, "What do I here?"—"what use am I making of life, what am I putting into life, what am I doing with the time and the talents that I have?"

"I, Even I Only, Am Left."

The prophet tried to excuse himself for running away from duty. He began to talk about how zealous he had been, and how badly others had acted. He began to have an exaggerated opinion of himself. He began to feel that he was the only one left in Israel who was loyal to Jehovah. He felt that the Lord's work depended absolutely on him. Of course it is well for a man to feel a deep sense of personal responsibility. But let no man think more highly of himself than he ought to think. And let no man think that he is the only one who is loyal to God or zealous in His service.

Wind, Earthquake, Fire—and the Lord Was Not in Them.

In obedience to the voice of Jehovah, Elijah went forth and stood at the entrance of the cave, where he was a spectator of evidences of the power of Jehovah as manifested in nature. A strong wind which rent the mountains, and earthquake which brake in pieces the rocks, a fire laying waste the landscape, all of them impressive, but natural forces and impersonal. God is not always in the noisy and the spectacular things that are often associated with His name or His church. He is, of course, in the mighty activities of Nature, but they are not His final word in speaking to His children.

The Still Small Voice.

After all the more spectacular things, there came a still small voice, "a sound of gentle stillness," as one translation gives it. And it was in this still small voice that God spoke in clearest terms and tones to Elijah. "The still small voice"—it is still God's way of speaking to His children "Be still and know that I am God." We do not give enough time to being quiet. In both our public and our private worship there ought to be a time of silence. What God cannot do in the sound of great anthems and the thunder of booming sermons, He can do in the still small voice of silence, and in solitude. Our modern world needs to "take time to be holy."

"Elisha to be Phophet in Thy Room."

What a test of Christian character for a man to step aside for another, indeed to have to get out when he feels that he is still the "big shot." It must have come as a cruel shock to this man of God to be told that he was to pass out of the picture and that a young man would take his place. But Elijah was made of stern stuff. He passed his mantle on to Elisha the young prophet. He did more—he shared with him the wisdom and the experience of his years and thus prepared him for larger service for Jehovah. Happy is that man who as he comes to the end of his active life, feels that he has helped to train up some one to "carry on", and who has someone prepared to do even a greater work, though in a different way, than he did.

God's Seven Thousand."

"Yet I have left me seven thousand in Israel, all the knees which have not bowed unto Baal, and every mouth which has not kissed him." Elijah thought that he was the only one who was loyal to Jehovah. God told him in a kindly, but very pointed way that he had seven thousand—not literally—but a host—of men and women who were loyal to him. In humble homes, in quiet villages, in the open country, yea even in the cities there are always those who quietly, courageously, lovingly follow their Lord and remain faithful to him. The world is not going to the dogs. God has not left himself without witness. Everybody is not an apostate. Throughout our country and throughout the world there are multitudes of men and women, young men and maidens who love their Lord and serve His cause. Let us thank God and take courage.

YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

(Continued from page 10.)

makes a hymn missionary?" Here also are a few points as tests of a good missionary hymn:

1. It ought to be good from the standpoint of music and poetry.
2. The thought ought to be one that reveals a high value placed on every personality, without regard to class or race, or condition.
3. To be a great hymn it must be free from any spirit of self-righteousness.
4. The desire to share with others the best values that our religion has brought to us, not as things for which we deserve credit but as possessions which we hold in trust.
5. It will show a longing for brotherhood and unrestricted good will.
6. To be great a missionary hymn will express or imply consecration to the cause of human welfare and the more abundant life for everyone.

E. R.

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.
Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.

These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies, in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. It combines with the Concordance, Subject-Index, Scripture Proper Names, etc. The 12 Maps have been carefully revised and are beautifully colored. In making orders, give the number and price.

135—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold. $3.00

India Paper Edition, Only 16-16 of an inch thick.

. 133X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold, $4.00

SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS' BIBLE.

Especially made up for gift or reward Bibles for Sunday School scholars, containing a special series of very practical and useful helps and Bible Questions and Answers, etc. Printed on fine white Bible paper; ruby type; pocket size, 3 3/4 x 5 3/8 inches, and 1 inch thick, with 31 full-page illustrations in sepia. All bindings are black. Ruby Type, Size 3 3/4 x 5 3/8 Inches, and 1 Inch Thick.

65—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold; 6 colored maps .....$2.50

AUTHORIZED VERSION.

RED LETTER TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Brevier Type (8 vo.), Self-Pronouncing, Size 5 3/8 x 8 1/2 Inches and 1 3/8 Inches Thick.

Containing the Bible, with full references. The words of Christ in the New Testament are printed in red; other parts of the book are printed in black. With Concise Bible Dictionary, combined Concordance, and 12 indexed maps.

7852—Genuine Leather, Lavanant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold .....$4.75

RED-LETTER EDITION.

With All the Words of Christ in the New Testament Printed in Red.

1282—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit round corners, red under gold edges, register and headbands; title stamped on side and back in pure gold .....$3.25

60—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, Sunday School Scholars' Bible, stamped in pure gold on cover, no illustrations; special book for Sunday Schools .....95c

Any of the above Bibles sent postpaid. Address
THE CHRISTIAN SUN
1536 East Broad Street Richmond, Virginia

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy

MONDAY.

"THE SWEET SPIRIT OF CURSING."

"If ever I practice the sweet spirit of cursing."
—Job 31:30.

This subject and discussion is taken from Luccock's new book "Preaching Values of the Old Testament." It is so meaningful and far reaching in its significance that the writer takes the liberty of quoting Dr. Luccock for the benefit of all readers of this page. We quote in abridged form.

He says that "Sweet" is a strange adjective to link with so sour a thing as cursing. Cursing in the commonly accepted term—in the sense of profanity—has become the ordinary everyday language of a great many people and it is used as an expletive "to bring emotional and physical relief."

Such cursing is bad enough, but there is a worse form of cursing which he says is as vicious as murder. It is that cursing referred to by Jesus when He said, "Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer." This is the cursing Job is speaking of.

This cursing may apply to any one and possibly to all of us. "We speak of moral indignation as a noble faculty. It is. But into it there often goes a fervor which derives some of its zest and momentum from the 'sweet sin of cursing.'" That is, condemning another with the spirit of bringing a curse upon him. "Every reformer, every preacher, every ardent christian worker may engage in a sincere self-examination when he feels the fine frenzy of denunciation. In this self-examination the question to be decided is, "How much is the flame of the Holy Spirit and how much is the 'sweet spirit of cursing?'" There denunciations and invectives are ill-advised. "Many a man has ascribed to the inspirations of the Spirit of God an ill-tempered 'lambasting' of evil doers, which come largely from low sources."

"The kingdom of God," he says, "has never been advanced appreciably by cursings, in any form."

Prayer—O Lord, from the sin of profanity and cursing do Thou deliver us. So permeate us with Thy Holy Spirit that the cursings we may feel may be suppressed in the name of heaven and, the sweet spirit of love may abound.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"THE SWEET SPIRIT OF LOVE."

"Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."
—Lev. 19:18.

"By this shall all men know that ye are My disciples."
—Jno. 13:35.

"If a man say, 'I love God, and hateth his brother,' he is a liar. . . . He who loveth God loveth his brother also."
—I Jno. 4:20-21.

"The fruit of the spirit is love."
—Eph. 5:9.

The christian's "sweet spirit of love" is brotherliness to everyone. That is very comprehensive. Make it a brother's case.

Love is Christianity's chief characteristic, for it is the one test by which others recognize one as being a christian. It is the end of religion. John Wesley said, "It is the heaven of heavens.

There is nothing higher and better, there is, in fact, nothing else."

If these things be true, then our love must include our enemies. We have only to reflect the crimes that have been committed in the names of christianity during the history of the church to see that often their hatred exceeded the fury of savage beasts against mankind. It was then that christianity lost its power, and it is then that a christian loses his power, when he hates rather than loves.

Whatever love may be, and there is a world of things it may be, we believe that the greatest thing that may be said of it is that it is the soul of goodness. "Christian goodness is the sanctification of the heart and its affections renewed and governed by the love of God in Christ" lifts the soul beyond the limits of our personal friends. Goodness is love embodied, but we have to love God in order to see that far and embody such love in us. Goodness comes from faith in God and faith in humanity, and that makes good men. This is what has made the best men the world has ever known, the best that is now, and, we are sure, the best that will ever be.

Prayer—O Lord, God, the God of love, grant unto us Thy spirit and vision to see far into Thy kingdom of love and do Thou radiate our souls with it to its fill. We ask it in the name of Christ.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"LUCK."

"The lot is cast into the lap; but the whole disposing thereof is of the Lord."
—Prov. 16:33.

"I have planted," says Paul, "Apollos watered; but God gave the increase."
—I Cor. 3:6.

We take the following comment from the "Men in the Making," by Shepherd, who gives us an example that is often found among us. Speaking of a leading commercial man in a city, he says:

A man asked, "What is there in him or about him to explain his success?" And he answered his own question with the round assertion, "It was luck." The author comments: I happened to have reliable information about this man. Thirty years before that he was a working man, working from ten to twelve hours each day. At night he had a program of studies, which, in the range and character of subjects, would have shamed a good student at the university.

Eventually this man went into business and as such, won not only the confidence and trust of business associates, but also the admiration and esteem of his employees, and ultimately a leading place in his community. And they called it luck.

There is a great element of chance in life's relations; but this element of chance is reduced to a minimum by men who know and can "follow through" with the force of his knowledge. There is an element of chance in the fall of a leaf, owing to its irregular shape, uncertain impacts and gusts of wind that may carry it anywhere, but there is not much chance with a projectile fired from a good cannon by the hand of an experienced gunner. It is going to land somewhere about the spot where aimed—do you see the point?

Prayer—O Lord, our God, we would not wait for the stroke of fortune. With Thee is purpose and achievement. In Thy spirit lie the higher incentives. Make clear to us life's objectives and endow us with the aspiration, inspiration, courage and fortitude to press on daily to the mark of the prize of the high calling. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"PROVING GOD."

"I will fetch my knowledge from afar, and will ascribe righteousness to my maker."
—Job 36:3.

The Moffate version says, "I will justify my Creator from a wide survey of the truth." Elihu proposes to be honest enough to make a wide investigation of the truth about God. However, his spirit seems rather boastful in that he sets himself forward as knowing a lot and lightly heartedly makes affirmations that will catch the universe, and at the same time would outlaw religion if he is given two minutes to do it.

How like a great many people whom we have listened to; people who have pinned their faith to a disbelief in God and who will denounce the Bible as a mass of fabricated lies, and abrogate to the church the medium of witch-craft, a sort of expression for lunatics, when they have not given a day to the honest study of the truth about God and the church.

Everyone owes it to himself to "survey" all knowledge of truth on the subject, available to him, before he says he does not believe.

And such a survey is not enough. "Canst ye by searching find God?" says the scripture. If it is a matter of intellectual searching only, the answer is "no". Mere intellectual searching believes in only concrete findings. Beyond the visible the intellect does not know and it will not carry one further. "God is a spirit," and He is manifested only in spiritual things. Therefore finding God must come through spiritual expression. That experience is faith in the realities beyond the material things—repentance of sins, and a dedication of the life to God.

Prayer—Our Father, who art in Heaven, we pray for our souls. Grant Thou that we may go beyond the material in all things and know Thee in Thy kingdom. In Christ's name, we ask it.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"ALIVE TO GOD."

"Even so reckon ye yourselves to be dead unto sin, but alive unto God."
—Rom. 6:11.

Many people are nominal christians, but they never realize God's presence; to them He is only a name, just a principle which they never investigate, just a laudable invention, just a concept which has little to do with life, just a theory by which some undertake to account for the universe; He means nothing particularly vital to them. They are not "born again."

He is alive to God who habitually realizes God's presence in his life as an awakening power to all of his faculties, and finds every place a temple, every act an homage, every sin a pollution, every talent and every possession God's, every thought a Holy incentive, and every act a revelation of His spirit.

Prayer—Dear Father, "In Thy presence is fullness of joy." In Thee we follow the bent of our true natures. Teach us how to fear all contradictions but to drink daily of the eternal waters that Christ gives from which we shall never thirst.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"CHICAGO'S FIRE IN OHIO."

"What time I am afraid, I will put my trust in Thee."
—Psalm 56:1-8.

At the time of the great Chicago fire there was a small boy in Ohio, more than three hundred
(Continued on page 14.)

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, Pastor.

IN A DAY OF REBUILDING.

By REV. WARREN WHEELER PICKETT,
*Pastor of the First Congregational Church,
Detroit, Michigan.*

[Preached Sunday evening, June 24, 1934, in Finney Chapel, Oberlin College, Oberlin, Ohio, at the meeting of the General Council of the Congregational and Christian Churches of the United States.]

Some wit has recently remarked that modern society bears a most striking resemblance to the great Christopher Columbus. For when that illustrious explorer set out, he did not know where he was going. When he arrived he did not know where he was, and when he had returned again home he did not know where he had been. Nor is the generation to which you and I belong in any better plight. For certainly dazed bewilderment is one of the most obvious characteristics of the contemporary mind. We have been driven out of the old orderly, manageable world which existed before the War into a strange land of uncertainty and confusion where we find ourselves in the grip of forces which seem to defy both control and prediction; and those of us who are old enough to remember the quiet serenity of the first decade of this century have our moods when we are wretchedly homesick for those calm and placid days.

But although to the eye of memory those bygone years may seem safe and sane, we can well remember that they were by no means complacent. On the contrary it was a time of hope and idealism, of high visions and great crusades. We may have looked at our world and called it very good, but we were under no illusion that it was already made perfect. We were quite aware that it was still stained by wrongs and injustices which it was our task to remove. But we were confident that we knew just how all the needed improvements could be made and were glad to enlist for the making of them. In politics it was the golden age of liberalism and in religion the hey-day of the social gospel; and it was not always easy to tell which was which. Probably there was never a more accurate and dramatic expression of the spirit of that period than was the Bull Moose campaign of 1912. I remember hearing Hiram Johnson, who was its candidate for vice-president, describe that party as a movement, half religious and half patriotic, which was to break every yoke and let the oppressed go free. That fall, the Progressives sang "Onward Christian Soldiers" in their political rallies and in at least one state nominated a Congregational minister for governor. It chanced that Mr. Wilson rather than Mr. Roosevelt was elected to the presidency but he also belonged to very much the same school of thought and rode into office on the same tidal wave of reforming idealism, while Mr. Taft, who was popularly supposed to be too intimately associated with malefactors of great wealth, carried only the state of Vermont and Utah. Therefore, it was perfectly natural that we should enter the European conflict as a great crusade to make the world safe for democracy, a war to end war and establish eternal peace. It was an age when we believed that life was very good and that after we had passed a few more necessary laws and made a few minor social adjustments that perfect society desired by God would be firmly established on this solid earth.

But with the close of the war our flimsy little content and our glad confidence that the golden city lay just beyond the brow of the next hill came crashing down about our ears. Four and one-half years of brutal slaughter had revealed how thin is the veneer with which civilization and religion have overlaid the savage and how close to the surface in us all the primitive, selfish, hot-blooded, fighting animal. In the light of that new understanding of human nature we began to experience an uneasy fear that the Kingdom of Heaven could not be built easily and rapidly out of such unreliable material. I need not take your time tonight to describe the ever deepening disillusionment which has come upon us since those days nor shall I pour salt into unhealed wounds by dwelling upon the incalculable suffering which this generation has endured and is enduring. We need no labored argument to prove that all about us lies the wreckage of an economic order which has defaulted in its promises. We are a people baffled and bewildered, tormented by shapeless fears and distrusted hopes and palsied by a great uncertainty. For upon us has been laid the inescapable task of rebuilding a broken world, but we lack adequate blue-prints for the new edifice nor are we sure what materials we should employ, nor with what tools we should shape them.

In such a world the old social gospel no longer seems a clarion call to a well-defined advance. Nor is it now the unquestioned guarantee of the better days which must inevitably be. It comes to us rather as a tantalizing vision which we know not how to translate into reality, as a haunting duty which we lack the wit to perform. We are still summoned by the glorious dream of a human society in which God's will shall be done on earth as it is in heaven, but we cannot agree on the method by which this perfect Kingdom is to be established. There is no lack of voices which shout "This is the way! Walk ye in it." But each would-be-leader is challenged by a dozen equally vociferous rivals and none can command the full confidence of the Church.

Now, whenever man is beset by such a baffling situation he is always tempted to seek for some alternative which will enable him both to silence his conscience and forget his duty; and in the modern religious world, there are at least two movements which offer us such an easy way of escape. The first of these is almost fantastically devoted to the hope of a better society, but laughs scornfully at those who believe that the social order can be greatly improved by love and persuasion. They tell us that human nature is far too wicked to be moved by such soft and gentle methods. In their judgment the possessors of unjust power and unmerited privileges will defend their favored lot even by physical violence, if necessary, and neither eloquent sermons nor ingenious legislation will prevail upon them to surrender their advantages. Therefore if the oppressed are ever to have justice they must fight for it. In that class war religion should openly ally itself with the down-trodden and enlist as an active combatant in their battles. It is to be hoped that there will be only such bloodshed as is absolutely unavoidable but doubtless some gore must be spilled before ancient wrongs can be righted and the Church must not be too squeamish to employ the only weapons which can bring the victory. Everybody will be exceedingly sorry if a few capitalists are killed, but in this tough old world it is difficult to make progress gently and it will be better to have a few holy massacres for the glory of God than to fail to establish his Kingdom. At least some of our Christian leaders are suggesting that we escape from the tormenting dream of a social gospel by throwing ourselves into a social revolution.

Sometimes when our indignation has been aroused by the obvious cruelties of our present system and our hearts have been made sick by the exceeding slowness of our progress that proposal seems very inviting. At least it offers to our pent-up emotions the release of strenuous activity, promises the accomplishment of some immediate and visible results, and permits us to unleash our natural pugnacity while enjoying the comforting assurance that we are blessed of God. But in our saner moments we realize that this appealing invitation to come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty is only an escape mechanism and like all escape mechanisms it can only lead us into more serious difficulties than those from which we flee. No doubt we could all have a glorious good time smashing things as they are, but the aftermath of other proletarian revolts does not encourage us to hope that the society of the free and aspiring children of God is to be brought

(Continued on page 15.)

COMMUNION WARE.

Individual Service.

Made in best Silver Plate or Aluminum. Prices low; first-class workmanship and finish.

ALUMINUM.

Aluminum is light in weight, durable, and does not tarnish.

Style No. 50-A.

- Tray No. 2—Interlocking, with 40 plain glasses $7.00
- Tray No. 6—Interlocking, with 35 plain glasses 6.75
- Tray No. 10—Interlocking, with 30 plain glasses 6.50
- Base No. 50-A—Fits Trays 2, 6, or 10..... 2.25
- Cover No. 50-A—Fits Trays 2, 6, or 10..... 2.25
- Bread Plate No. 1—Narrow rim..... 1.60

SILVER-PLATED.

The Silver-plated Ware is of the very highest grade and best finish; heavily plated on nickel base.

- Tray No. 85—Interlocking only, with 36 glasses $22.00
- Base No. 1—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 85.. 11.00
- Cover No. 5—Silver-plated; fits Tray No. 85... 16.00

(For Silver Bread Plates, see under No. 90.)

- Tray No. 90—Interlocking, with 36 plain glasses (this style has broad rim, which is sometimes preferred, due to increased ease of handling) $22.00
- Base No. 2—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 90.. 16.00
- Cover No. 4—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 90. 14.00

- Bread Plate No. 3—Narrow Rim..... $ 9.00
- Bread Plate No. 4—Broad Rim..... 9.00
- Filler—Silver Lined..... 6.00

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street

Richmond, Virginia

Christian Orphanage

Dear friends:

We had a short, but a very pleasant visit last week from our good friend, Mr. J. M. Darden and two of his friends (Mr. Hill from Suffolk and Mr. Mayo from Norfolk).

We are always glad to have good friends come to see us. We gave them all a glass of cool refreshing Jersey milk right out of our chilling box that the good women made possible for us to buy by sending us Octagon soap wrappers.

After looking over our dairy barn and milk house and our white hogs, they then visited the several buildings and saw the children and met the good women who have charge of them. The singing class was practicing on their program and we had the children sing for them. To show the children their appreciation they set them all up to ice cream which made them all happy.

Mr. Darden holds a warm place in the hearts of our children and they all love him. He has been such a father to them that when he comes all of the children try to see which one can get to him first and hug his neck.

Saturday, July 14th was a very warm day. The thermometer was standing at 90 in the shade. Mr. Wagoner, my assistant, and the farm boys had been waiting a whole week to finish threshing wheat. It had been too wet. Saturday was a good day and the wheat was dry. They got an early start and went after it with a determination to finish before the sun went down. Three of our "old" boys came back to give us a day's work and to take the writer's place. Our boys who have gone out like to come back to the "old home." If we do have a hard job to do. It is the only home many of them remember. It makes us happy to know that they enjoy coming home. A warm welcome always awaits them.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

REPORT FOR JULY 19, 1934.

Brought forward .....$ 7,157.72

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

North Carolina and Virginia Conference.
 Mt. Zion .....$ 1.00
 Howards Chapel ..... 1.00
 Salem Chapel ..... 1.27
 Bethlehem ..... 5.61
 Ingram ..... 6.00
 Pleasant Ridge ..... 1.10
 Greensboro, Palm St. .... 5.52

21.50

Eastern North Carolina Conference.

Wentworth .....$ 6.63

6.63

Western North Carolina Conference.

Ramseur .....$ 4.00
 Pleasant Cross ..... 1.10
 Pleasant Grove ..... 1:60
 Pleasant Ridge ..... 2.59
 Ether ..... .31
 Flint Hill ..... .66
 Burlington ..... 23.48
 Parks Cross Roads ..... 10.00
 Glendon ..... 8.00
 Hanks Chapel ..... 2.20

53.94

Eastern Virginia Conference.

Berea Nansemond .....$ 5.00
 Wakefield ..... 1.80
 Union Southampton, six months ... 4.00
 Cypress Chapel ..... 4.14

Mt. Carmel .....	11.62
Barretts .....	.62
Waverly .....	3.45
First Richmond .....	5.11
	35.74
Valley Va. Central Conference.
New Hope .....	$ 4.22
Timber Ridge .....	6.53
	10.75
Alabama Conference.
Bethany .....	$ 1.00
Special Offerings.
Daily Vacation Bible School, Albemarle, N. C. ....	$ 2.60
Alamance County .....	45.00
M. B. Smith, Jr., Gdn. for Whitten
Children .....	50.00
	97.60
Total for the week.....	$ 227.16
Grand Total .....	$ 7,384.88

FAMILY ALTAR.

(Continued from page 12.)

miles from Chicago, who was made very anxious by the terrible news. Having no idea of the distance of Chicago, he kept looking fearfully westward, ever expecting to see the dreaded columns of smoke and flame steadily marching to devour his own home town.

That small boy was no more irrational than he still is, very often, now that he has become a man. He still has no adequate conception of the wall of protection which God has placed between him and every ill.

When we get to heaven, and come to know more perfectly the greatness and goodness of our God, we are going to be very much amused at our childish fears of earth, and not a little ashamed of them.

Prayer—Forgive our fears, dear Father in heaven, dear Father on earth. May we put our trust ever in Thee.—Amen.

—AMOS R. WELLS.

SUNDAY.

"SHEATHE YOUR SWORD."

"Jesus therefore said unto Peter, put up thy sword into the sheath."—John 18:1-11.

One of the most significant of New Testament incidents is Peter's boast that though all the others might forsake Jesus, he never would, and the way that headstrong disciple sought to make good his boast by flourishing his sword and cutting off Malchus's right ear.

When Christ bids us draw our swords and use them, let them leap from the scabbards—swords of argument, swords of invective, swords of ridicule and scorn. But until he gives the word, our weapons must bide in their sheaths. For the weapons of Christ's warfare are seldom carnal and His kingdom is the domain of the Spirit.

Prayer—Remove far from us, our Saviour, all self-conceit. Who are we, that we should be Thy body guard? Uncounted legions of angels are ever at Thy beck, and Thou dost not use them. What need hast Thou of our puny swords?—Amen.

—AMOS R. WELLS.

When you touch Christ and Christ touches you, you will know of the transaction, first of all. No one will have to tell you. The presence of Christ and the witness of the Holy Spirit will give you the full evidence.—J. C. Griffin.

HOLMAN SUPERIOR TEACHERS' BIBLES

Authorized Version—Self-Pronouncing      The Best Editions of the World's Best Book

For Adults, Teachers, Preachers, Students, and All Who Would Study the Word of God Intelligently

BOLD BLACK TYPE—COMPACT SIZE 4 1/2 x 6 3/4 INCHES—WILL FIT THE COAT POCKET

Part page specimen of Holman Boldblack Type Bible

ST. MATTHEW, 5.
Christ's sermon on the mount.

13 And leaving Naz'a-réth, he came and dwelt in Ca-pér'na-úm, which is upon the sea coast, in the borders of Záb'u-lon and Nèph'tha-lím: 14 That it might be fulfilled	A.D. 31.  CHAP. 4. <small>Isa. 9, 1, 2.</small>	934 CHAPTER 5. 3 Who are blessed. 13 The disciples called the salt of the earth, and light of the world; Christ urgeth on them a good example, etc. AND seeing the multitudes; A<sup>a</sup> he went up into a moun-
---	--	--

THIS NEW HOLMAN TEACHERS' BIBLE, Pronouncing Text, Bold Black Type is a PRONOUNCED SUCCESS. The latest Bible with NEW HELPS that are quite comprehensive and consist of an Illustrated Bible Dictionary, Concordance and additional aids all under ONE ALPHABETICAL INDEX. Also Fine Maps on Coated Paper, and a specially prepared BIBLE READING COURSE, intended to stimulate and maintain interest in the Bible. Imported Bible paper is used to improve opacity and keep down bulk. By this means you get the benefit of full Biblical information without the physical discomfort of handling a heavy volume.

STYLES AND PRICES—BIBLE PAPER EDITION

4612. French Morocco Leather, divinity circuit, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges.....	$4.00
4630. Same as 4612, with extra leather lined covers.....	4.75

THIN INDIA PAPER EDITION

With Helps as described above. Size 4 1/2 x 6 3/4 inches. One inch in thickness

630X. Egyptian Morocco, divinity circuit, leather linings, red under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker.....	7.00
633X. Algerian Morocco, divinity circuit, leather lining to edge, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, extra quality binding.....	8.00

---

EXTRA LARGE PRINT TEACHERS' BIBLES

Large 8 Vo. Size—8x5 1/2 inches—1600 Pages, including 400 pages of Bible Study Helps

Part Page Specimen of Print

Extra spacing between words and lines makes this Bible very easy to read.

ST. MATTHEW, 5.
Christ's sermon on the mount.

15 <sup>k</sup> The land of Záb'u-lon, and the land of Nèph'tha-lím, by the way of the sea, beyond Jór'dan, Gál'i-lee of the Gën'tiles;	A. D. 31.  <small>Is. 9, 1, 2. Is. 42, 7. Luke 2, 32. Mark 1, 14.</small>	2 And he opened his mouth, and taught them, saying, 3 <sup>b</sup> Blessed are the poor in spirit: for their's is the kingdom of heaven.
---	---	---

CONTAINING COMPLETE HELPS TO BIBLE STUDY, INCLUDING ALL OF THE FOLLOWING FEATURES
 A New Practical Course in Bible Reading, A Treasury of Biblical Information. The most carefully compiled, thorough and attractive form in which valuable Biblical information has ever been prepared. Illustrated Self-Pronouncing Bible Dictionary Containing 150 illustrations, concise definitions and textual references on nearly 50,000 subjects. A Practical Comparative Concordance, with nearly 50,000 references. Four Thousand Questions and Answers on the Old and New Testaments. A valuable Help to all Bible Readers.

STYLES AND PRICES

4712. Divinity Circuit (overlapping covers), French Seal Leather, red under gold edges, silk head bands, and silk marker..	$5.00
812RL. Red Letter Teachers' Bible. The Words of Christ in the New Testament. Old Testament Passages alluded to by Christ, various prophecies relating to Christ in the Old Testament, etc., all PRINTED IN RED. Binding same as described above on 4712 and same large Self-Pronouncing type.....	6.00
733X. Holman India Paper, Genuine Morocco, leather lined, silk sewed, divinity circuit, round corners carmine under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker, same type and helps as above.....	10.65

All styles sent Postpaid at above prices—Thumb Index 50 cents extra

IN A DAY OF REBUILDING.

(Continued from page 13.)

in by that method. Quite probably the old masters could be dethroned and "liquidated" to use the charming Russian euphemism for murder, but there is no guarantee that the new masters would be any more filled with the milk of human kindness or exercise their authority with any more concern for the eternal values than did their predecessors. On the contrary, the very process by which they came to power would inevitably harden and brutalize them. From the Aladdin's lamp of revolution we can expect nothing save new evils for old. Brotherly love cannot be increased by fomenting class hatred, nor will the Kingdom of the Prince of Peace be advanced by machine guns and rapine. The Master himself warned us against those impetuous men who would take the Kingdom of Heaven by violence and those impatient zealots are as dangerous and as futile in the Twentieth Century as they were in the First. For the establishing of His Kingdom, the Master confided utterly in the method of persuasion and love, and in that confidence he voluntarily laid down his life. Either we must maintain an unflinching loyalty to that method, or else confess that we have parted company with him and enlisted with those who smugly declared that it was "expedient that one man should die for the nation."

But a Marxian revolution is not the only way of escape which is now being offered. There is another group which counsels a return to the outworn conception that religion has nothing to do with righting the evils of human society. Probably its most extreme exponent is the Swiss theologian, Karl Barth. I am not quite sure that I entirely comprehend his message for, as St. Peter once remarked concerning St. Paul, there are some things in the writings of our brother which are hard to understand. But I think he has made it perfectly clear that in his judgment all our attempts to redeem human society are sheer futility, if they are not impious presumption, and our sole reliance must be upon the supernatural and unpredictable power of God. In one of his books he writes, "God helps—this announcement shuts off all our discussions, makes all our movements superfluous, breaks up all our commissions and assemblies. This commands silence, ends all all our attempts to help ourselves. This means that no thought of our brain, no counsel born of wisdom, on the whole no device, no act, no theory, no practice can help." Shortly afterward he goes on to say that humanly speaking this is meaningless and in that latter statement I am inclined to agree with him. But if it means anything at all it must mean that all our efforts to build the Kingdom of Heaven here on earth are a waste of energy, if they are not active rebellion against God. Religion is the supernatural and mystical visitation of the human soul by the spirit of the Almighty designed to prepare mortal man for the glories of immortality. All else, no matter how worthy its motives nor how laudable its ends, is pure worldliness, completely divorced from true religion, leading only to failure here and damnation hereafter.

Professor Barth is probably the most extreme contemporary exponent of that attitude but he is by no means the only one. There is a host of other leaders and a still greater host of followers, who share in his general attitude. For them the hope that the spirit of Christ can be made regnant in human society is an exploded dream. Human nature is not such stuff as Utopias are made of and we shall be wise to recognize that fact. To the end of time there will be injustice and oppression, wars and rumors of wars. To believe otherwise, is only to delude ourselves. Therefore, the sole task of religion is to lead the individual to God that he may live uprightly and spiritually here and be prepared for the ineffable bliss of the hereafter.

There are times when we have grown discouraged by our failures and wearied by so much seemingly fruitless endeavor, when that proposal appears particularly inviting. It would set us free from worrying about evils which we seem both too ignorant and too impotent to cure and permit us to luxuriate in the comfort and hope of our faith without bothering over much about its duties. But in our heroic moments we recognize that this also is an escape mechanism. For even if the social gospel has not yet accomplished as much as we might desire, it has at least destroyed our complacency. In spite of all the disillusionment which has risen like a miasmatic fog during the last twenty years we are still held fast by the conviction that human society can never be safe until the spirit of Jesus is regnant in every aspect of life. Nor can we avoid the conclusion that the church has a mandate from God to take no rest and give the world no rest until our Master is the acknowledged Master of every human activity. We know that the Church must lift up its voice against violence, greed and oppression wherever and whenever they raise their ugly heads, and that we are recreant to our Master unless we work and pray unceasingly for the day when the spirit of Jesus shall be as dominant in the relations between classes, nations and races as it is now in the relations between the members of a normal Christian home. Certainly we cannot remain Christians if we attempt to heal the hurt of the people lightly, chanting, "Peace, peace!" when there is no peace.

(To be concluded next week.)

ELON COLLEGE

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

South Entrance to the Campus

ELON COLLEGE, founded by the Christian Church in 1889, has fully justified the faith and hope of its founders during its 42 years of operation. Its graduates from the four-year course leading to a bachelor's degree, number 980, now living, 122 of whom are in the Christian Ministry and full-time Christian service. The majority of these are members of our own denomination. In addition, 449 are in educational work and are an active influence in the lay leadership of the Christian Church.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION BUILDING, and the definite religious atmosphere of the College, provide the very best facilities available for training for religious leadership, and offer the Church its finest opportunity to train the young people of the denomination to assume active leadership both in the ministry and laity of the local churches.

Address—

C. M. CANNON, Registrar

Elon College, - - - North Carolina

Home Atmosphere—Reasonable Rates—Clean Athletics—Christian Spirit

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom, as represented by the Congregational Christian Church.

BOARD OF EDITORS.

J. O. ATKINSON, D. D. . . . . Editor
E. C. GILLETTE, D. D. . . . . Associate
I. W. JOHNSON, D. D. . . . . Contributing
ELISHA A. KING, D. D. . . . . Contributing
J. T. KERNODLE. . . . . Managing Editor

DEPARTMENTAL EDITORS.

H. S. HARDCASTLE. . . . . Sunday School
J. G. TRUITT, D. D. . . . . Sermon
F. C. LESTER. . . . . Young People
H. E. ROUNTREE. . . . . Altar

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year . . . . . $2.00
Six Months . . . . . 1.00

Trial Subscriptions: Five or more new subscriptions sent in at one time by pastor or president of any church organization, three months for 40c each.

 Published Every Thursday at Richmond, Virginia, by the Central Publishing Company, Inc.

Entered as second-class matter at the Postoffice at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Change of Address: Be sure to give both old and new address when asking that your address be changed.

All news matter and items to be published in "The Sun" should be addressed to J. O. Atkinson, Editor, Elon College, N. C., and should reach him not later than Friday preceding date of publication. If more convenient, news from Congregational Churches may be sent to E. C. Gillette, Associate Editor, 117 W. Forsyth Street, Jacksonville, Fla. Emergency notices will be received at the Richmond Office up until Tuesday of week of publication.

All remittances for subscriptions, renewals, advertising, etc., books for review, and other matters of business should be addressed to J. T. Kernodle, Managing Editor, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond, Va.

Notices: Obituary and marriage notices, limited to 125 words, published free. All over 125 words, 1c a word, cash with notice. No notices should exceed 250 words.

Receipts: The change of label is your receipt for money paid. The label shows date of expiration, and change on label will appear the first or second issue of the month following renewal, provided it was received before the 25th. No other receipt will be sent unless requested. Please notify the Richmond Office if label is not changed as above.

MARRIAGES

BUZHART—WRIGHT.

Of interest to their many friends was the marriage of Miss Rebecca Holcomb Wright and Mr. Claude Thomas Buzhart Sunday July 8th, at the Christian church, Sanford, N. C., the ceremony being performed at sunrise. Rev. Thomas Fred Wright, of Waverly, Virginia, father of the bride, and a former pastor of the church, officiated, using the ring ceremony. Only relatives and close friends of the bride were present.

The church presented a beautiful appearance with its decorations of white and green. Large baskets of Queen Anne's lace, daisies and fern were used at the altar, with ivy around the choir railing.

Miss Mary Addie White played the Wedding March from Lohengrin as the bride and groom entered together, unattended, and took their places at the altar. During the taking of the vows, Miss White played "To A Wild Rose". Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" was used for the recessional.

After a brief wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Buzhart will be at home in Harri- man, Tenn.

Mrs. Buzhart is a daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Thomas Fred Wright of Waverly, Va. She was graduated from Sanford High School in the class of 1930, and has since been employed with one of the local business firms.

Mr. Buzhart is the son of Mrs. Epsie Buzhart and the late Mr. Olin Buzhart of Newberry, S. C. He has just recently been transferred from Durham to Harri- man, Tenn., where he will be manager of a chain store.

M. A. W.

OBITUARIES

ELDER.

Mrs. Benie Elder, aged 75 years, wife of the late W. W. Elder, departed this life on July 11, 1934. We buried her body by the side of her husband at New Hope Church July 12th. In the pres- ence of a large concourse of sorrowing relatives and friends, she leaves of her immediate family to mourn her going, six daughters and 13 grandchildren.

Sister Elder was a fine Christian wo- man, always thoughtful and kind, faith- ful to every trust and devoted to her family and friends. She loved her home and gave her life for the comfort of those who were dependent upon her.

Her husband, Brother W. W. Elder, was one of the finest characters it has been my pleasure to know. They were congenial and kind to each other and their children "Rise up to call them blessed." Rev. J. J. Dollar assisted in the funeral. Her mortal remains were gently laid away to await the resurrection morning.

I mourn her going, for she was one of my best friends. When I was just a boy preparing for the ministry I spent a month in her home and shared her motherly hospitality. God bless the weeping ones and may these six noble daughters ever seek to emulate their mother in faith, and hope, and love.

G. D. HUNT.

BROWN.

Brother J. F. Brown departed this life at his home in Roanoke, Ala., June 24, 1934. He was nearly 62 years of age and had been a member of the Christian Church since boyhood. He was a charter member of First Christian Church, Roanoke.

Brother Brown was twice married, and leaves to mourn his departure two sons by his first marriage, his second wife and stepson, and a host of other relatives and friends.

"Jim" Brown was a most likeable fel- low, genial and energetic, full of life and devoted to his home, his friends and to his church. He was ever ready to sacrifice for its success. His wife and also the stepson, Trent, were very de- voted to him.

It was not my privilege to visit him during his affliction, but I understand that he was conscious of his condition and died in the triumphs of a living faith. "Jim" will be missed among his friends and the citizens of his town and especially so by his home and church.

"Dearest Father, Thou hast left us,
Here Thy loss we deeply feel,
But 'tis God who has bereft us
He can all our sorrows heal."

G. D. HUNT.

PIEDMONT COLLEGE

Located in

"The Blue Ridge Highlands"

An accredited college with an enviable reputation for supe- rior classroom instruction, and wholesome student life.

Fully recognized and accredited in its home State, and in such neighboring States as North Carolina, South Carolina, Alabama, Tennessee and others. Standard courses leading to the A. B. and B. S. degrees.

The Summer Term, continuing for six and nine weeks, affords opportunity for college and professional study and in- vigorating recreation.

From six to twelve hours of credit may be earned. Special courses in Elementary, Intermediate, High School and Rural Education. Public School Music and Art; School and Play- ground Games; Athletic Coaching.

For Fall Term or Summer Bulletin, write

PIEDMONT COLLEGE,
DEMOREST, GEORGIA.

Southern Seminary Foundation

(Successor to Atlanta Theological Seminary.)

AFFILIATED WITH

Vanderbilt University

The Foundation and the other Foundations that are affiliated with Vanderbilt University School of Religion comprise the only Interdenominational Theological School in the South. Through this affiliation the students enjoy the rights and privileges of Vanderbilt University.

DEGREES.

Candidates for degrees are required to have completed their college courses.

The degree of Bachelor of Divinity is offered to qualified stu- dents who complete the required courses.

Vanderbilt University also offers the degrees of Master of Arts and Doctor of Philosophy, in accordance with the regulations established in its several departments.

MORE THAN A SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY.

Because of our affiliation with Vanderbilt, our relations with other nearby colleges where our students can take courses with- out tuition, and the cooperation of the American Red Cross and other social agencies in the city, we prepare students for many types of Christian service.

For information write

WILLIAM JAMES CAMPBELL, President,
330 BUTTRICK HALL, VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY,
NASHVILLE, TENN.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

Representing the Southeast Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches.

IN ESSENTIALS, UNITY.

IN NON-ESSENTIALS, LIBERTY.

IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY.

VOLUME LXXXVI.

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, THURSDAY, JULY 26, 1934.

NUMBER 30.

.. THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY ..

Cunard—White Star Merger.—

The recent merger of the Cunard and White Star Lines brings under one management more than 600,000 tons of shipping, making this the largest of the trans-Atlantic shipping companies. The combined fleet numbers 25 vessels, including the Majestic and the Berengaria, the two largest steamers afloat.

Just a Dog, But—

His name was "Snow Ball," we are told and he was only a dog, but when he died several years ago, his master, Geo. H. Slappey, of Macon, Ga., gave him a $5,000 funeral. Mr. Slappey was killed in a quarrel several days ago, and in his will provision was made for the building of the Snow Ball Dog Hospital. Several thousand dollars were left for this purpose, after bequests amounting to nearly a quarter of a million dollars were left to forty-eight persons.

Postal Savings Deposits Not Wanted.—

Once much sought after by banks, postal savings are now being dumped back upon the government's hands. The larger banks, with their heavy excess reserves are responsible for this condition, as they cannot afford to pay the 2½% which the government demands on these deposits. The amount of money returned during the four months ending June 30th, was nearly $232 millions. Postal savings deposits have fallen off very little since insurance became effective on bank deposits.

The Literary Digest's Poll of "New Deal."—

Slightly more than three out of five of those voting in the Literary Digest's nation-wide poll on President Roosevelt's acts and policies, registered a favorable return. Only one of the forty-eight states, Vermont, registered disapproval, which it did by a majority of 53.62 per cent. The total number of votes cast, covering every section of the nation, were 1,772,163, of these 1,083,752 voted in favor of the "New Deal," while 688,411 voted against it, making a final poll 61.15 per cent in its favor. While this was quite a substantial majority, it was much smaller than was probably expected. In the six special polls conducted among bankers, clergymen, business men, educators, lawyers and physicians, all groups, with the exception of the bankers, voted favorably. Of the 24,859 votes received from the ministers, 13,513 supported the administration, while 11,346 registered their disapproval.

The World's Smallest Book.—

The smallest book of which we have seen any record was recently completed in Worcester, Massachusetts. It is approximately half the size of a postage stamp, and weighs less than the diamond in your wife's engagement ring. It is bound in leather, contains twenty-six pages, and requires a most powerful glass to read it. It contains forty-six verses of the "Rubaiyat" of Omar. The time required for its completion was seven years. The New York Times thinks that "It is likely old Omar could have thought of a pleasanter way to spend seven years. One can imagine how astonished the poet would have been if in response to his famous prescription for happiness underneath the bough, he had been handed a book of verses three-eighths of an inch by three-sixteenths, a medicine dropper full of wine, a crumb of bread and two golden hairs from the head of Thou!"

Recovery and the Securities Act.—

In signing the Securities Act of 1933, the president made the statement that it would "correct some of the evils which have been so glaringly revealed in the private exploitation of the public's Money." "The Act did all of that and more," says Business Week, which has been one of Mr. Roosevelt's staunchest supporters. "For all intents and purposes it prevented any large established concern from obtaining capital through the ordinary channels, either for refunding its maturing indebtedness or for the extension or modernization of its plant and equipment." Under the law, it tells us issuing securities for from $3 to $5 millions, would involve a cost of around $300,000 for preparing a complete registration of these securities, thus blocking whatever normal flow there might have been of investment funds. The Congress which met this year somewhat liberalized the law, but the response has not been all that could have been desired to the present.

The Presbyterians and Union.—

The vote in the Presbyterian General Assembly favoring organic union with the United Presbyterian Church of North America was over nine hundred to twenty; but the latter church rejected the proposal when the matter came up at the U. P. Assembly at Oxford, Ohio, on June 22nd. The vote was at first announced as, yeas, 113; nays, 113; but an error in addition was corrected, making the vote, yeas, 113; nays, 123. It was later voted that the formal report of the Committee on Union be placed on file with the clerk. It seems regrettable that the first approval by a General Assembly of any proposal to unite any two of the sixteen branches of Presbyterianism in the United States should have failed, but the close vote in the U. P. Assembly is interpreted as indicating progress toward union in what is described as "the most conservative assembly in a period of five years." The Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., has a membership of 1,96,000 in 10,000 congregations, and the United Presbyterians number 243,000 in 1,121 congregations. Of these, 177,265 in 874 congregations are in the United States.—Advance.

Food for Thought.—

Twenty-five cents is the average weekly contribution of a Protestant church member toward the upkeep of his church, according to the statistics of the United Stewardship Council for 1933, which includes records of more than half the entire Protestant membership. The report shows that the per capita contribution of the Protestant church member for congregational expenses is $12.70 a year, and for missions and general benevolences, five cents a week or $2.60 a year. The churches reporting had a total membership of 24,928,319. Figures for these churches are as follows: Total raised, $348,715,381; congregational expenses, $284,070,331; missions and benevolences, $43,695,107; per capita gifts for all purposes, $16.11 a year; per capita contributions to local church expenses, $12.70 a year; per capita contributions to missions and general benevolences, $2.60 a year. This should provide our statistician and orators with ammunition for some time to come.—Meth- odist Protestant-Recorder.

Laws That Have Become Obsolete.—

There are many laws that have become obsolete. They may have been passed in all seriousness, but, though still on the statute books, they now only provoke a smile. Among many others are these. In Connecticut it is unlawful to set out a tub hoping to "entice swarms of bees" from their rightful owners. A man living in Michigan is guilty of a felony if he "incites an Indian tribe to go on the warpath." He ought to be. In Kansas it is unlawful to eat, in public, any "snakes, lizards, scorpions, centipedes or tarantulas." In Pennsylvania it is against the law to use a cannon for the purpose of "serenading" at "any wedding," though one may still use a plow tongue at a "belling" down in the Old North State, if one is not afraid of a shotgun. An old law on the statute books of Delaware, might save some lives if it were still enforced. There it is unlawful for a pedestrian to walk along a public highway after dark unless one carries a lantern or other light or has "tied upon an arm or other portion of the body, a white cloth." Besides these laws there were laws prohibiting a husband from kissing his wife on Sunday, one prohibiting the use of bathtubs, and others as ludicrous to us. Laws remain on the statute books for many years after they become obsolete. However, New Jersey recently repealed 1,200 such laws, and Congress accounted for another thousand. Other States might well follow the example set them.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Dr. Elisha A. King of Miami Beach, Florida, with Mrs. King and Miss Leach, her sister, have gone to Fairview, N. C., for a few week's vacation.

Rev. Trevor Mordecai, D. D., of New Smyrna, Florida, is spending two month in England. While there he will attend an Oxford Group meeting at Oxford, and will visit relatives and friends.

Miss Pattie Lee Coghill is enjoying a vacation trip with Miss Jean Tuttle of St. Petersburg. After the Blue Ridge Convention they drove to Chicago for a few day's visit to the Fair, and then to Detroit, later planning to visit in New York State and New England, following which Miss Coghill will spend the balance of her vacation at her home in Henderson, N. C.

Rev. Fred Atkinson, pastor of the church at West Palm Beach, Florida, and Rev. Wm. B. O'Neill of Utica, New York have arranged a summer vacation exchange for the months of July and August. Mr. O'Neill was at one time pastor-at-large in Florida. Mr. and Mrs. Atkinson attended the General Council at Oberlin and Mr. Atkinson was a delegate to the Rotary Convention in Detroit, after which they went to Utica for the balance of the summer.

Rev. C. Arthur Lincoln, D. D., pastor of the church at Daytona Beach, Florida, has gone to New England with his family for the summer. After visiting a daughter in Torrington, Conn., they go to East Northfield, Mass., where they have taken a cottage for August. Dr. Lincoln is to supply the following churches during the summer: Immanuel Church, Hartford; South Church, Hartford; Tabernacle Church, Salem, Mass.; First Church, New Milford, Conn., for two Sundays; Boylston Church, Jamaica Plain, Mass., and Mt. Vernon Heights Church, Mt. Vernon, N. Y.

Rev. W. T. Scott, pastor of our Winston-Salem church, has received three new members during the quarter, making a total of fourteen received since January first. The pastor has quite a large prospective membership list and expects to add a number of these to the church roll. Brother Scott reports further:—"We feel hopeful and confident in the work here. New interest is being manifested throughout the work of the church. No small part in the activities is the Woman's Association. They are leading the church in an understanding of Missions and practical service in the local church. The Woman's Association took complete control of an evening church service during the quarter, at which event a home mission study book was discussed."

Apple's Chapel, Guilford County, N. C., on Sunday, July 22nd, dedicated the third building of its more than a century of activity as an organized Christian Church. President L. E. Smith, Elon College, preached the dedicatory sermon, and the dedicatory formula was read by THE SUN's editor, J. O. Atkinson, the prayer being offered by Rev. J. L. Foster. Appropriate words of greetings and congratulations were presented by a former pastor, Rev. J. T. Green. It was a great day for Apple's, and a great host of members and friends were present to enjoy the inspiration of the good occasion. Mrs. R. E. Apple, the efficient secretary, read the history of the church, excerpts from which are given to THE CHRISTIAN SUN for publication.

The following from the Virginian-Pilot, Norfolk, is of interest to many CHRISTIAN SUN readers, and especially to Elon students of the past year who were in school with Ben, all of whom, we are sure, wish for him a speedy recovery: "Suffolk, Va., July 18th.—Friends of Mrs. Annie Staley Calhoun and Mrs. Ben T. Holden will be glad to know that the condition of young Ben Holden, who was seriously injured in an automobile accident in Elko, Nevada, and who is now under treatment at the Elko hospital, is improving. Mrs. Holden, Mrs. Calhoun and other members of the party which was touring the West, will leave in a few days for Louisburg, N. C., Mrs. Holden's home, and Suffolk, Mrs. Calhoun's home. Mrs. Holden expects to return by train to Nevada to bring Ben Holden home as soon as he can travel."

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Eastern Virginia Conference was held in the First Christian Church, Richmond, Tuesday, July 17th. The Convention was largely attended, a great majority of the schools of the Conference being represented. Rev. J. F. Morgan was president of the session and delivered a practical message to the Convention that was timely and appropriate. The departmental superintendents had reported in time and their reports were presented in mimeograph form and each delegate was supplied with copies. In the afternoon of the session, Revs. H. S. Hardcastle and F. C. Lester gave addresses on "Building a New World." At the evening hour, Dr. Sidney B. Hall delivered an inspirational address, and there was a musical program by the entertaining church. A bountiful luncheon was served in the spacious dining-room of the building and the fellowship of the hour and of the day was delightful and wholesome. Rev. J. E. McCauley, pastor, and his assistants, in Sunday School and church, certainly did everything necessary to make the occasion delightful to all who were fortunate enough to attend the session. Brother McCauley was elected president of the next session, which is to be held a year hence in Newport News, Va.

Our deepest sympathy is extended to our neighbor and friend, Mrs. L. I. Cox, Elon College, N. C., in the loss by death early Saturday morning or her son-in-law, Mr. J. C. Washburn, Greensboro, N. C. The sad death was from heart trouble and came unexpectedly at 4:00 A. M., Saturday, July 21. His death came on his 37th birthday anniversary. He leaves a wife, (who was Miss Alta Cox) and two children. The wife had been quite ill for some weeks and had gone through major operations and had returned home and was recovering. Her illness and the extra strain of anxiety and devotion, no doubt, hastened the death of her beloved husband. It was a most happy household, one in which the spirit of love ruled. Both the deceased and his wife were faithful members of our First Church, Greensboro, from which church the funeral was conducted by the pastor, Rev. C. H. Rowland, D. D., assisted by President L. E. Smith, of Elon College, at 4:00 P. M., Sunday, July 22, the interment being in the Elon College cemetery. A large company attended the obsequies, and the floral offering was profuse and expressive. Mr. Washburn held a responsible position with the Public Utilities Corporation of Greensboro and, as a citizen as well as a Christian gentleman, was held in highest esteem by a large circle of friends who lament his death.

SANFORD.

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., Editor, Elon College, N. C.

I am enclosing a clipping which indicates something of the physical progress of the church here. The spiritual development is equally gratifying. The clipping from The Sanford Express reads:

"The appearance of the Christian church has been greatly improved during the past few weeks. New brick steps have been built at the front and the church has been painted both in and outside and the yard beautified by putting out grass. Everything about the church has undergone a marked improvement. The church is blessed with an able progressive preacher who has done much to bring about these things."

Plans are being perfected for an evangelistic meeting this fall. Emphasis will be placed on personal evangelism. A part of the preparatory work will be a School of Personal Evangelism.

A Union Daily Vacation Bible School was conducted here from May 28th to June 8th. There were enrolled 414 pupils. The pastor of the Sanford Christian Church was Director of the school.

The members of the Sanford Christian Church are entering into a covenant to tithe their income for a period of three months, beginning July 1, 1934. The agreement may be renewed at the expiration of this period. The following is being heartily entered into by our people.

TITHER'S LEAGUE.

Realizing that the tithe is the Lord's, and depending upon God for His blessing, I desire to be enrolled as a member of the Tither's League of the Sanford Christian Church, and I agree to join with my fellow Christians in a covenant to give one tenth of my income to the Church for a period of three months, beginning July 1, 1934. The renewal of this agreement is optional with the signer.

Signed.....

Date.....

I shall give THE SUN readers the results of this agreement in a few months. Already we are realizing good results. If the Lord's people would tithe their income every great cause of the church would be amply supplied with money.

My churches, Sanford and Shallow Well, have very graciously voted me a month vacation which I shall enjoy in August. I hope to conduct a few evangelistic meetings during the summer and fall.

Very sincerely yours,

R. F. BROWN, Pastor.

THE FIFTH SUNDAY OFFERING.

The Special Finance Committee, reporting to the Southern Christian Convention, in session at Suffolk, Virginia, recommended that the Sunday Schools of the Convention join in the support of Elon College through the Fifth Sunday Offerings. That is, the Convention voted that the Sunday Schools receive an offering for the college every fifth Sunday. Sunday, July 29th, is the first fifth Sunday since the Convention's action.

This is an appeal to pastors, superintendents, and Sunday School workers to see that every class and every pupil in his school receives some information about Elon College, about its needs, and be given an opportunity to make a contribution for the college. Let's see if we cannot make this offering one hundred percent so far as the schools are concerned!

Brother Pastor and Brother Superintendent, will you see that your school is given the opportunity to make a voluntary offering for the support of the college?

Acknowledgements of these offerings will be made through THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

L. E. SMITH.

BORN FOR VICTORY.

By DR. ALBERT BUCKNER COE, Minister,
First Congregational Church, Oak Park, Illinois.

[An address delivered in Finney Chapel, Oberlin, Ohio, Sunday, June 24, 1934, at the meeting of the General Council of the Congregational and Christian Churches of the United States.]

Two types of people are conspicuous in the world today. One is the sanguine, eternally optimistic type who can readily belong to any sunshine society. He sings lustily on all occasions, "Be not dismayed whate'er betide, God will take of you." He buys stock with great confidence, believing firmly that "we must have faith in the country." He prides himself upon belonging to a church where the minister preaches a comfort sermon regularly each Sunday for "us tired business men." The other type has a dark outlook. He looks with wrinkled brow upon the world. Before every problem he raises his hands high in the air, and emitting a despairing sigh, cries, "What's the use?" To him life is defeat. He has the point of view of the man in the Eastern fable who, pursued by a wild beast, took refuge in a waterless well. He planted his heels upon a stone projecting from the side of the well and grasped a twig growing out of the side of the wall opposite him. He glanced at the bottom of the well and there beheld, shining, burning eyes, the eyes of an open-jawed dragon. A sick feeling came over him. He looked above. There over the edge of the well was the head of the panting beast that had pursued him. As he held bravely to the twig, he noticed that two rats—one black and one white—were gnawing at the base of the twig. His heart sank. He entered at once the field of modern pessimism. Here they are—two general types. The despairing looks sternly at the sanguine and cries heartily, "Too much thyroid." The sanguine looks steadily at the despairing and says: "Behold the Carlylsan dyspeptic."

Let us discuss this dyspeptic, this despairing, this defeated type because he is all about today. Whence came he? What is his background? Many writers of his type may be suggested, but let us mention two of them as being influences in this defeatist mood. Bertrand Russell is one—master of the English language and brilliant manipulator of ideas. Hear his own words:

"Brief and powerless is Man's life; on him and all his race the slow, sure doom falls pitiless and dark. Blind to good and evil, reckless of destruction, omnipotent matter rolls on its relentless way; for Man, condemned today to lose his dearest, tomorrow himself to pass through the gates of darkness, it remains only to cherish, ere yet the blow falls, the lofty thoughts that ennoble his little day."

The language is beautiful. It also suggests an out-of-date funeral service of one of our secret orders.

Hear, too, Oswald Spengler. Born in Germany about three score years ago he has written much, but his most talked of work is "The Decline of the West," in which he states that western civilization is on the threshold of an inevitable and all embracing decline. He, too, is a master of language. The beauty of his expression has been carried over by the translator:

"Regard the flowers at even tide, as, one after the other, they close in the setting sun. Strange the feeling that then presses in upon you—a feeling of enigmatic fear in the presence of this blind, dreamlike, earth bound existence. The dumb forest, the silent meadows, this bush, that twig, do not stir themselves; it is the wind that plays with them."

This is beautiful—but it is also defeatism of the most pernicious and insidious kind. And these men are only two of hundreds who write and speak in this defeatist mood.

What now are the manifestations of this mood about us? The rank and file merely drift along. They see no hope. They say, "What's the use in trying, you can never see the man at the top." Or, "Why talk about peace—we will always have wars." Another manifestation is found in our civil life. Men look at public problems in all their complications and are floored by what may be called the tyranny of immensity. They are utterly baffled by size. Defeatism is manifested also in our church life. On all sides there are would-be prophetic souls who shake their heads and cry, "Where will the church be twenty-five years from now?" They are sure there will be no church—death will have come from abandonment. The most curious and perverted manifestation of defeat is illustrated by the frantic clinging to "what has been" in institution and thought. I am of the opinion that most reactionaries belong to this defeatist class.

But this defeatist spirit is not Christianity. Let that fact be shouted from the housetops. Jesus was never defeated. When his eyes closed upon the cross he was not defeated. Never by word or deed did he express defeat. At the very darkest moment of his life he called, "I will come again." There is no defeat there. In his most thoughtful mood he taught, "Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth. Blessed are they that mourn for they shall be comforted." There is no defeat there. Paul, the great advocate of Jesus, carried none of this defeatist spirit. He said, "This one thing I do, forgetting that which is behind I press on to the mark of the high calling which is in Christ Jesus, our Lord." His benedictions used in our churches regularly send men and women out, not to defeat, but to victory. That is the word—victory. Christianity demands victory—let us not forget it for a moment.

In one of the recent biographies of Emerson, we find a beautiful phrase. Emerson had lost his church. His young and beautiful wife had died. His two favorite brothers had come down with tuberculosis. "A doom seemed to hover over his family. Yet under the surface of his life, dark as it was at the moment, a purpose was taking form in his mind. He knew he was born for victory."

That is the word for Christians. We have no right to be defeatists if we are Christians. We are born for victory, not in the theological sense of predestination—no. We are born for victory and challenged to bring victory. In making this assertion I am not blind to the defeat about us. That man who attempted suicide recently after a fall in the market was a defeated man. The officer of the law who broke up with tear gas, a meeting addressed by Norman Thomas was experiencing a perverted form of defeat and if we allow many more such episodes, we shall have a country as defeated as Germany. No, I am aware of the defeat about me. Still I say we are born for victory.

How do we move towards victory?

First, we must strengthen our characters. Too many are satisfied with an elementary approach to character. The Boy Scout ideal of doing one good deed every day is praiseworthy as a beginning. The Rotarian ideal of service is praiseworthy as a beginning. The sad part is that so many people never get beyond this elementary stage and therefore deserve to be ridiculed and even reviled because in establishing a partial ideal they satisfy many thoughtless minds and hold up progress towards a more valid ideal. James Truslow Adams wrote an article not many months ago on the subject, "The Crisis in Character." He deplored evidence of faithlessness in our government as far as meeting our obligations is concerned; faithlessness in the press; false patriotism among those whom he designated "Bonus Grabbers"; and the duplicity of many in the banking world. I leave it to you. Was he right? Have we had a "will" to character?

Our educational institutions should help us come back to the emphasis upon character. We can wisely imitate the ideal of Cambridge University in England. There the aim is not to prepare character. Our universities should seek character first of all.

Out of that character we shall hope to find the twin brothers, courage and fortitude. Courage is needed by all of us who are facing aggressively the vexing problems that call for solution. Fortitude is needed for withstanding the jibes of the critic and the unfair charge of the intellectually stagnant. In a recent article in the Atlantic Monthly, there is the story of an eagle sitting upon the limb of a tree, its breast badly torn and bleeding, its eyes upon the distant mountain, and flying about its head a number of birds pecked at him and tantalized him unceasingly. There sat the eagle resting after its courageous fight, and showing fortitude in the midst of the pestering lesser birds. Courage and fortitude—possible for that king of birds because it had its eyes upon the high mountain, possible for us if we keep our eyes fixed on the high ideal for man. And that brings us to the second requirement for victory.

We Must have a goal. There are any number of goals which we may choose. There is the establishment of economic justice, there is the doing away with race prejudice, there is the bringing of peace to the world. Let me take the last named as the subject for amplification.

We must have peace because war is wrong. We must have peace because war costs too much. It costs too much in human lives. According to the records of the League of Nations, 16,000,000 lost their lives. It costs too much in dollars and cents. We have the statement of Ex-President Coolidge that the total cost of the war for America alone will eventually approach $100,000,000. It costs too much in personal financial embarrassment. The depression was traceable to the war. It costs too much intaxes. It costs too much in moral let down. It costs too much in unborn children. It costs too much in the insults we give to God, who has nothing to do with war, though all of us on both sides dumbly invoke his aid.

We behold the cost. Behold also the ideal—money spent for education, for art, for beautifying the landscape. Money making it possible for every man, woman and child to enjoy the sunshine without the devastating presence of fear.

What shall we do? We can stand by the League of Nations. We can vote for the World Court. We can endorse the Paris Pact. We can keep ever fresh before ourselves and those younger, the horrors of war. Lest we forget. And we can do more. We, as a General Council can give some death blows to the whole war system by saying: "We shall never again recognize the office of chaplain in the army. If we must help men it will not be under the army dictation. We shall never again as a denomination bless war. And many of us will say with high and holy resolution that we are ready to go to prison before we shall by word or deed participate in a future war.

I call upon all who are within the sound of my voice—let us drive out the spirit of defeat. Let us say to Bertrand Russell and Spengler and their kind that they have failed to recognize the moral and social forces at work in this world. We can aid these forces if we will develop daring characters and have definite goals. We are born for victory!

E-D-I-T-O-R-I-A-L

EDITOR

J. O. ATKINSON, ELON COLLEGE, N. C.

ASSOCIATE EDITOR

E. C. GILLETTE

117 W. Forsyth Street, Jacksonville, Fla.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS

I. W. JOHNSON    ELISHA A. KING

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE SOCIAL GOSPEL.

"Alexander, the coppersmith, did me much evil: the Lord reward him according to his works." So the followers of Christ may say of him who invented the altogether overworked term, "The Social Gospel." When Josiah Strong, Rausenbusch and other enthusiasts of a decade ago were seeking with a passionate pen to awaken Christians to their actual duty as members of a corrupt society, they little dreamed that their fervor and zeal would actually come into competition with the gospel of the Christ, whose life they wished all members of society to exalt and exemplify.

It is a matter of approach, or beginning. The personal gospel of Jesus the Christ begins with man as a member of society. It is foundational. It is constructive. It grows upward and works from within outward. On the other hand, "the Social Gospel" does not build, it digs. Some one has well likened the preacher of the Social Gospel to a well-digger. He starts at the top and digs downward. He does not build or construct. He digs, if haply he may find beneath that which will supply a need, as water from a vein far under the surface. He works from without inward. The individual who is a Christian will have a care in helping to make a Christian community. It is not enough that his life reflect the fact and reveal the truth that he is a Christian. As a Christian, he will want a decent, law-abiding, orderly Christian community in which his children are to be reared and his family are to live.

The gospel of individual salvation would make a man sober and keep him so. If he have within him this saving sense and power of sobriety, he will naturally want a community of sober people, and this deep desire may lead him to vote for prohibition. In that light, as a prohibitionist, he is practicing the Social Gospel; as a saved, sober, regenerated individual, he is an exponent of the power of the gospel through Jesus Christ to redeem the individual.

The trouble with those who emphasize the Social Gospel has been, and is, to emphasize a clean, wholesome, orderly society and then to emphasize the fact that the only hope of creating such a society is that of redeeming, regenerating, through the power of the gospel of the Son of God, the individual in society.

Any one attending the General Council at Oberlin must have been impressed with the fact that speakers of national note and influence emphasized again and again that society and the world could not and would not be saved in the aggregate, socially; that the only hope and only meaning of a Social Gospel was in the power and the meaning of a gospel that applied to and redeemed the individual.

Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, eloquently voicing the feeling of the Council in his moving and marvelous address, said:

"The annals of Christian consciousness eloquently sustain the plea that whatever else aids the soul in its approach to its Maker, in its most intimate transactions with Him that soul must act for itself, and act alone. Hence religion in its deepest sense is what a man is in solitude. No externals can substitute for internalities. We proceed Godward from within, not from without. But we would not alone be saved, alone conquer and come to our goal. To the truly regenerate man sacrificial service is as inescapable as breathing."

In such manner, his audience knew that Dr. Cadman was drawing the distinction between the so-called Social Gospel and personal salvation, and that in no sort of way could the Social Gospel take the place of or be substituted for the gospel of individual regeneration. "We agree," declared the preacher further, "that Christ's religion is a life and not a metaphysical system, and that its fortress is the believing heart of man."

The hope, then, and one foundation of a gospel truly social, or a true Social Gospel, is a gospel to which the individual responds, and by which, when responding, he is saved for the best that is in him and for society as well. For this reason Christian Education, as such, can never take the place of preaching the gospel of the Son of God. Continuing, Cadman declared:

"Christian teachers can no more insure a vitalizing experience of the New Testament Faith by Biblical instruction than they can obtain culture by sleeping in a library. The imperative matter is that the inward shall respond to the outward, and unless religious education secures that response, we cannot recruit our ranks with stalwart, twice-born souls. Primarily we have to introduce Christ to those of whom we have personal charge. But for what purpose; simply as their friend, companion and model, or as their Living Lord?"

J. O. A.

LIQUOR ADVERTISING.

Editor Rowland, of The Richmond Christian Advocate, has raised questions that he is not likely to get answered. These answers would, indeed, be illuminating, but they might be humiliating, and so we are doubting. For instance, Editor Rowland says that he was told a few days ago that one of the evening papers of his city, Richmond, that consistently and quite glaringly advertises liquor, which paper, before repeal, advocated taking out the element of gain, is now carrying hundreds of inches of hard liquor ads that would bring to its cash drawers "something like seventy-five thousand dollars a year." If this is not correct, the Advocate Editor would be glad for his neighbor to correct it and tell just what "their liquor income is." Now, Brother Rowland should not be worldly or meddlesome. If the answer should be given, along with it he will receive such a lambasting of invective and vituperation that he would wish he had never asked the question. But Brother Rowland does not stop here. He goes further and declares: "This man also said that the newspaper advertising for liquor in Virginia this year would be over a million dollars. And these are the papers that told us we needed to educate the people in true temperance and the evils of alcohol. Are they doing it? While this fortune has been set aside to make drinkers out of our boys and girls where are the dollars that are being spent to educate them as to the woes of drink and the damage it will do their souls and bodies?" But even these questions do not satisfy the curiosity of the Advocate Editor. He tries to get that curiosity and his anxiety satisfied by asking the Liquor Control Board of his beloved State of Virginia a few questions. For instance:

"We were promised Control of the liquor business. Is there any effort to control it? The A. B. C. Board is working for what?—to decrease the consumption of liquor and show our people the evils of it, or to increase the sales and make more customers? If there was an honest effort to control it would they be advertising it at a cost of billions of dollars? Do we advertise what we want to destroy and control? The magazine published by the State Chamber of Commerce runs a full page ad for fine brands of liquors and advises us to go to the liquor stores and buy it.

Does any one now with normal intelligence think the politicians want to control it? Do the brewers want to control it and diminish the sales?"

We are sympathizing with Editor Rowland and could wish that he could get answers to his questions, but we wonder if the figures released from Richmond last week and published in the daily papers of his State and other States did not, in a measure, answer his questions thus: "Statistics released today show that the number of drunken drivers has increased fifty per cent, during the two months of liquor control in Virginia over the corresponding two months under prohibition." And, in a measure, was Dr. Rowland's questions answered when our Government at Washington recently released the declaration that more bootleg liquor was being sold in the country than legal liquor, and that drunken drivers in the District of Columbia had increased forty-one percent, during the months of open sale of liquor over the corresponding months under prohibition." In this connection it is noted that some of our North Carolina papers are either eating from the same spoon that our wet contemporaries in Virginia are eating from or rather drinking from the same bowl. It seems to have enraged some of our daily press. The Burlington Daily Times, for example, seems to be outraged that the sober element in North Carolina outnumbered the wet element, and voted overwhelmingly to retain prohibition. Despite the fact that neighboring States voted against it and have legalized the sale of liquor, these papers print editorials to the effect that bootleg liquor is being sold in North Carolina as if it were the only State in which it is sold, and as if legalized liquor in other States had taken the place of bootleg. All this in face of the declaration from the Department of Justice in Washington that more bootleg liquor is now being sold than legal liquor. Moreover, the wet papers in North Carolina, subsidized no doubt, by liquor breweries and with editorial space bought up by the liquor interests, declare in behalf of liquor that bootlegging goes on, and "the only way to stop bootlegging is to open the saloon again." It never seemed to occur to these papers that opening the saloon in Virginia, New York, Washington and Boston have not put the bootleggers out of business, and have increased drunkenness and drunken drivers from forty-one to seventy-five per cent even during the few months of legal sale. No such increase, at any rate, has been reported by the State of North Carolina, though we have no doubt an increase of drunkenness and drunken drivers to the State, because just over the State line they can buy liquor openly and bring it in from places of legal sale. Dr. Rowland of the Advocate will not get answers to his questions, because folks, whose eyes are blinded and consciences are seared with greed for money at any price, even at the price of a debauched and drunken community, will not answer the questions directly. Their business is to evade and deceive, especially when they are paid thousands, even millions of dollars to evade and to deceive.

J. O. A.

REPEAL BEGINS ITS TRAGIC STORY.

No argument about repealing the 18th Amendment, and doing away with the Prohibition Law in many States, can equal the sad and tragic facts as the daily press and statistics are revealing them. The following from the press of July 11 tells its story and needs no comment:

"Washington, July 10.—A 57 per cent increase in traffic accidents in which liquor has played a part a 42 per cent increase in arrests for driving while drunk and nearly 50 per cent increase in arrests for intoxication—that's one side of Washington's repeal story as told today in statistics of the police and traffic departments.

The figures are based on a comparison of the first three months of legalized sale and consumption of liquor in the District with the same period of 1933.

The national story differs but little. The Travelers' Insurance Company of Hartford, Conn., the first to assemble figures for the six months' period ending July 1, reveals a 20 per cent increase in highway fatalities, a climb of 42 per cent in drunken driving and a 60 per cent rise in the number of pedestrians hit by automobiles."

So much for the facts. The responsibility of this 42 per cent increase in drunkenness and 60 per cent of those killed by drunken drivers must be laid at the doors of somebody.

May the stubborn facts soon teach us and the good, sober sense of the American people soon come to the fore and, in doing so, bring with it a degree of wisdom, prudence and power that were lacking in the years and days of our former experience. Under the open sale of liquor in every village and city, what may we expect but increasing accidents and slaughter on every hand?

J. O. A.

BOTH ARE GOD AND MAN.

He who is the Bread of Life began His ministry hungering. He who is the Water of Life ended His ministry thirsting. Christ hungered as man, and fed the hungry as God. He was weary, and yet He is our rest. He paid tribute and yet He is the King. He was called a devil and cast out devils. He prayed, and yet He hears our prayers. He wept, and He dries our tears. He is sold for thirty pieces of silver and redeems the world. He is led as a lamb to the slaughter, and is the Good Shepherd. He dies, and gives His life, and by dying destroys death.—The Christian.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED BY THE GENERAL COUNCIL OF THE CONGREGATIONAL AND CHRISTIAN CHURCHES.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 27, 1934.

(Concluded from last week.)

Resolutions originating with the Seminar on Religious Education and Evangelism.

1. The present conditions of unrest, uncertainty and disquietude in every realm of human thought and relationship, afford a special opportunity and bring an imperative mandate to the Christian church to renew its emphasis on evangelism. The message needed in this day of social rebuilding is the message of "Man's need of God and God's need of man,"—namely, the message of the Gospel of Christ interpreted in terms of everyday life. We urge the pastors and churches to recognize and sincerely accept their evangelistic responsibility toward the large numbers of people in every community who have either lost their church contacts or have never been related to the church. Those who do not attend the services of the Church can be reached only by personal contact of its pastor and qualified members. We recommend that every pastor, in addition to the evangelistic emphasis given in his messages during the Lenten Season, should thoughtfully and prayerfully promote a program of personal evangelism in his parish among those who at present have no contact with the church.

If those outside the church are to be impressed with the importance of its message and program, greater content must be given to the meaning and responsibility of church membership. As the Christian church made its appeal to the non-believers in the first centuries, when it made its most rapid growth, by "outliving, outloving and out-serving" its contemporaries, so only can the Christian church hope to secure a response from those outside its fellowship in our day.

2. Evangelism and religious education belong together, (their aims are one); bringing the Gospel to bear on the person, leading out the resources and experiences of the person to respond to that Gospel. We urge therefore that leaders in religious education undertake to share in the growing experiences of children and youth and seek certain definite progressive commitments—to God, in filial relationship, to Christ's way of life, and to the full responsibility of Christian fellowship through membership in the Christian church and that these be recognized as primary aims of religious education.

3. We heartily commend the public schools for the increasing emphasis which they are placing upon character building in both their curricular and extra-curricular activities. We urge the people of our churches to give this movement their cooperation and support. We emphasize the special responsibility of the church to provide the religious motivation, high standards for both social and individual conduct, and the Christian philosophy of life, which are essentials in an adequate character-building program.

4. Christian Education is a vital factor in the spiritual life of the church and in its growth and power as an agency for the establishment of the cause of Christ. Be it resolved, therefore, that we urge our churches to make the best possible provision for the leadership, housing, and equipment of their educational work and that in times of forced reduction of budgets due consideration be given to the relative value of this part of their service.

5. We recognize the great power of adult influence in the creation of ideals and in the development of moral attitudes on the part of children and youth. The hope of progress toward a more Christian social order is closely related to the willingness of men and women to face life and its problems with open minds, honest purpose and courageous action. We therefore urge our churches to give serious attention to the Christian education of adults, not only by the study of Christian truth but through active participation in the life and service of the church. We particularly emphasize the importance of parent training and of helping parents to maintain genuinely Christian home influence under the stress of modern social conditions.

6. It is with deep concern that we see through first-hand acquaintance that the motion picture art is being used so often to portray phases of life that are abnormal and unhealthful in the interest of enlarged door-receipts. Over-stimulation of the nerves by artificial spectacle, pandering to abnormal sex interest, accenting the reckless gangster type out of all proportion—this whole distortion of life gives us grave concern for it has through its persuasive presentation such immense power for suggestion and education.

We also heartily commend the Roman Catholic clergy in establishing the League of Decency and join with them in their campaign to bring support to such motion pictures as minister to human values, and to destroy those that do not by the power of public condemnation. We invite all artists and producers to unite with us in this venture. We express the desire that the Council for Social Action prepare and circulate to our churches a form of pledge to be presented to our entire membership that will carry this resolution into real effect.

We condemn block-booking and blind-selling in the motion picture industry and request the Council for Social Action to use all possible influence to eliminate these evils.

7. The following resolution was adopted and referred to the Council for Social Action; Age-long experience has taught that the traffic in alcoholic beverages is inimical to human life, under whatever conditions, however controlled. Therefore we recommend that our action in this realm be first the teaching of our own children and youth the nature of alcohol and its effects on the body, the personality and all social relations, on the basis of scientific findings. Second that we undertake to muster public opinion against liquor and to arouse hostility to its advertising campaign especially as it invades our homes through the radio. Third, that we bring together groups hostile to alcohol who may have various ideas in the practical realm to seek some common way of political advance.

8. We commend the helpful service of the Commission on Evangelism and of the Congregational Education and Publishing Societies and note with satisfaction the development of closer working relations between these agencies.

We particularly note the vital program for Young People's work in the Pilgrim Fellowship, the steady progress in Missionary Education, Social Relations and Leadership Training and recommend to our churches that they cooperate with these agencies by

(Continued on page 14.)

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Within the Southern Convention the interests of the church and the farmer are closely related. The majority of our churches are rural, or, located in small towns. For several years our farmers have faced very difficult financial situations. These financial difficulties have affected the work of the rural churches. Pastors in the rural churches have been unable to collect their salaries regularly. In many cases the Pastor's salary has not been paid in full for three or four months. All the benevolent causes of the churches suffer in the same way and to a greater degree.

The farmer deserves the respect and appreciation of all people. Other people in every walk of life, depend upon him for their daily bread. People who devoutly pray to God, "Give us this day our daily bread," sometimes forget that God answers this prayer through the toil and perseverance of the farmer. He arises early and works late to achieve his purpose by sowing, cultivating and reaping the harvest for others. This is not an easy task. Thousands of insects, secreted in safe hiding places during the winter, creep and crawl and fly into his fields bent on destruction for their own self preservation. Wind and flood, drought and blight add their powers to call forth the best judgment of the hero of the field to win the conflict. Winter's chilling blasts and summer's scorching sun cannot discourage the effort to feed the hungry and provide for the needy.

The summer is ended and the harvest is gathered into barns. This man goes to a market where prices are fixed by others. He has no control of the prices to be paid for his wares. The manufacturer and the merchant set their own prices for their products. The buyer names his own prices when the farmer sends his produce to the market. No other large group of people in this country face this condition in the markets of the world. The farmer does not appeal for government aid and price fixing by some central agency. He needs, and should have, the opportunity to fix his own price for what he has produced by his labor and sacrifice. He should, at least, be on a level with industrial producers in having the privilege of naming his price in the open market. The present system of marketing has been a great handicap to our farmers. It must be changed before real prosperity can come to the country. When the farmer is prosperous there is an opportunity for other people to share in the material blessings of the nation.

The capitalist who induces the farmer to borrow large sums of money to plant larger crops is a hindrance to the prosperity of the farmer. This causes over-production of money crops. Depressed markets follow over-production. The capitalist may get his money back. The farmer usually loses his profits, and, sometimes, his farm goes into the hands of the friendly capitalist. It is usually dangerous for a farmer to borrow large sums of money to produce his crops. It will be a great day for the farmers when they agree not to borrow money, but to run their farms on a cash basis. Farmers should own their land and limit their crops to such as they can pay for as they go. This would be a hardship on many for a few years, but finally it would put farming on a safe basis and remove this industry from the interference of politicians, profiteers and other classes who have sought, in the past, to take advantage of the people who till the soil. A farmer should sell more than he buys and should be able to determine his own future by financial independence.

The church cannot solve the problems of the farmer. But the financial independence of the farmer will help the church in the future.

I. W. JOHNSON.

WHAT NEXT FOR THE CHURCH COLLEGE?

In the beginning of this country, the church felt the need of a trained leadership, a trained leadership for pulpit and pew. The state apparently was not much concerned for the training of her citizenry. In those early days, she did but little or nothing about it. The church was most active in this particular. She organized schools and founded colleges for the purpose of training her youth. Many of the more influential colleges and universities in existence today, such as Harvard, Yale, Brown, and Dartmouth, were founded by the church for the specific purpose of training talented young men for professional services. Many institutions that were founded by the church and nurtured through the critical period of their existence by the church, as they became more wealthy, more influential, broke from the church and disavowed any allegiance or obligation to the church. They became independent institutions and as such are rendering high service to state and nation. There are today, however, a number of colleges that are still loyal to the church and that exist for the purpose of training young men and women in the name of the church for the responsible positions of church and state.

The curriculum of the church school is not narrow; it is inclusive. Its standards are high, and its requirements are strictly on the college level. In addition to what non-church schools offer, the church college endeavors to add the significant thing that we call christian spirit. The church school proposes, not simply to enlighten the mind, but to inspire the soul. It endeavors to bring to the campus the regenerative power of the Spirit, Himself. Its curriculum, classroom work, and public services are so planned as to bring the individual to a decision on the real issues of life that he may find himself spiritually rather than lose himself in the mystic mass of conflicting forces. There is more to education today than mere subject matter. Facts are necessary, but these facts, however cold and heartless, should be spiritualized that they may be living as well as vital.

It seems to be the consensus of opinion today that in the field of education there is an evident need for the church college. Will the membership of the church and the citizens of the community see that this need is met? The resources of the state, through political influences, are being turned toward state, or non-church, institutions, largely. Appropriations of funds for various purposes are being made to state institutions. The government has allocated funds for the part-time employment of young men and young women enrolled in our colleges today without prejudice. That is, students enrolled in church institutions receive this benefit. It is made clear, however, and rightly so, that these appropriations for student employment are not for the benefit of the college but for the benefit of the student himself. Elon College shares in this appropriation. We are very grateful. This, however, by no means guarantees the support or the permanency of the church college. Because of state aid, students are enticed to state institutions. The drastic losses in income from invested funds and the failure of the college constituency to contribute to the expenses of the school have jeopardized the church college. Unless the church, itself, comes to the rescue of her own institutions, they will find it difficult to keep going. The church that does not support her college, in reality abandons it. Just as truly as in the beginning of this country, the church college and her products are needed for state and church. The need is sufficient and should receive the support of the church itself.

Elon College was founded by the Christian Church forty-five years ago. Through these years, the church has remained loyal to the college and has supported it, even though that support has been inadequate. The needs of Elon College today are greater than ever. The church is more able than ever to meet these needs. The Convention has called upon the churches to give their support to the college through Fifth Sunday Offerings, Dollar-a-month Club memberships, individual gifts, and Conference apportionments. This is an appeal to pastors, superintendents, and lay workers through the church to use their influence in behalf of the college that its support from the church and her agencies may be adequate.

The prospects for a student body for 1934-35 are most encouraging. Should the reader know of a high school graduate who is planning to enter college and has not decided where to go, will he please forward the name to the writer, at Elon College?

L. E. SMITH.

DIVINE GENEALOGY.

For years a member of the family has worked to link the present generation with an old genealogical record. At last cards were sent out announcing that the missing records had been supplied and the genealogy had been printed in book form which could be obtained at a low price. Charts were given which showed that kingly lines could be traced; that members of the family were eligible to membership in exclusive organizations. The so-called blue-blooded aristocracy was a pre-eminent feature throughout, that aristocracy that moves in an exclusive circle all its own. How often people would pay fabulous sums that they might be connected with some family of noble lineage, and how soon life's race is run and then the aristocracy of earth is of no avail. In God's sight there is no difference in a person's lineage; the person of low degree is accepted by Him as quickly as the one of high degree when they come in faith believing and accept His salvation which was purchased, not with the gold of earth, but with the precious blood of Jesus Christ on Calvary's tree. God has made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation. There is only one passport to heaven and all must meet the same conditions; there is only one Name that will secure the necessary qualifications. Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is no other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved. All through the Bible runs the scarlet thread showing the lineage and the atoning work of the Son of God Who became the Lamb for sinners slain. He is also the Lion of the tribe of Judah and is to be crowned the King of kings and Lord of lords when He has put His last enemy under His feet. As we seek Him with all our hearts He will be found of us and as we accept Him as Lord of our hearts and lives cleansed and made holy, we will become children of God, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ; if so be we that we suffer with Him, we may be also glorified together. Then we will be joined with the aristocracy of heaven, the redeemed of all ages, the blood washed throng who will encircle the throne of the King at whose Name every knee shall bow and every tongue shall confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God, the Father. The honors of earth pale as we think of such splendor. May we ever let the Holy Spirit so lead us on that we may be counted worthy to obtain that world and the inheritance that is reserved in heaven for us who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation in the last time.

"Your gold will waste and wear away,
Your honors perish in a day;
My portion never can decay,
Christ for me." "W."

MINUTES OF THE COOPERATIVE COUNCIL.

(Technically the "Administrative Committee.")
JUNE 26, 1934, OBERLIN, OHIO.

The meeting was called to order at 2 p. m. Present:—Secretaries Burton, Goodsell, Reed, Minton, Cady, Cross, Lobingier, Outerbridge, Adams, Scotford and Rugg, Miss Seabury, Mrs. White, Mrs. Brown, Superintendents Rollins, Lloyd and Frazier.

Prayer was offered by J. L. Cross. The Minutes of the previous meeting were approved.

The church officer visitations were discussed. It was voted to ask Mr. Adams to give his time to New England until after the Every Member Canvass and to plan for a trip to Florida during the winter. It was voted to add Mr. Cross to the committee (Goodsell and Mrs. White) having charge of the allocation of personnel for such meetings and to continue the committee with power. The matter of the "special groups" was referred to them.

The Suggestions for Visitors and Fact Book were discussed. Rollins suggested that loose-leaf folders be used for such material. It was voted to refer the Fact Book to Mrs. Brown and Miss Seabury for revision.

J. L. Cross reported progress on the general leaflet which he and Goodsell are preparing for use in connection with church officer visitations. It was stressed that Social Action should be included in it.

Goodsell presented a report blank for church officer and other visitations which was approved.

Outerbridge reported progress with the Cent-a-Meal boxes. It was thought that the superintendents should recommend a definite time for opening, and that the new literature should give the experience of the churches with them.

J. R. Scotland reported for the Guest Book Committee giving the response of the superintendents and the general inadvisability of charging for the book. It was voted to rescind all former action concerning the Guest Book. It was voted that the Guest Book as such be dropped for the year. It was then voted that 50,000 copies of the October Missionary Herald be circulated in its stead. The Guest Book Committee was discharged.

Mr. Scotford then raised the question of the Every Member Canvass material. A committee consisting of Scotford, Mrs. White, Adams, Outerbridge and Reed were named to advise concerning this, and also any matters which might arise in connection with the use of the October Herald in place of the Guest Boo.

JOHN R. SCOTFORD,
Recording Secretary.

THE GLORY OF REPENTANCE.

We have written of the greatness of faith, and one of its highest qualities is that it gives such a vision of the reality of the infinite power and goodness of God that man seeing himself, in the light of that glory, is smitten with sorrow—godly sorrow—that he changes his mind about his life, and changes his life in reference to God. Faith is the prophetic power which man may achieve; repentance is the glorious battle by which he lays the foundations of character.

Faith looks at God—so does repentance; but repentance also looks at self and determines to answer its own prayer.

Oh, that a man may arise in me
That the man I am may cease to be.

Faith is mystical and repentance is pragmatic—therefore even more mystical than faith.

The depth of repentance is seen in efforts of men to find a way and not be able. The pictured efforts of heathens to shake off weight, show us the liberty that comes through repentance.

When a man has repented he determines to draw his life away from every evil, everything unreal and false, and adjust it to truth, righteousness and God. The moon agitates the ocean and makes the tides—the voice of Christ agitates the conscience and causes the sweeping rush of repentance.

That is the beginning of a struggle that is often tragic, never without effort, and sometimes a conflict in which the soul is in dire danger. It is Laocoon struggling with the deadly serpents that swim in from the sea of life and have enfolded him in poison coils, but unlike the fated name of Greek mythology slaying the serpent instead of being slain, and walking forth a free, clean man, with his children also free.

The great motive of repentance and its glory is that man can do better. "Repent," said the Master, "for the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand." Therefore, repentance is the effort to walk in the upper way. It is to devote life to the highest instead of the lowest. Repentance is accepting the challenge of Jesus Christ to be and to do better. It is not the thorn of fear, but the rose of hope.

To every man there openeth
A Way, and Ways, and the Way.
And the High Soul climbs the High Way,
And the Low Soul gropes the Low,
And in between, on the misty flats,
The rest drift to and fro.
But to every man there openeth
A High Way, and a Low.
And every man decideth
The Way his soul shall go.

—Christian Evangelist.

OXFORD BIBLES for EVERY NEED

"The Oxford Bible is the Bible par excellence of the world"

THE HOME BIBLE

A Family Bible in Handy Size

An extra large type Oxford Text Bible, containing also, a family register and 12 beautifully colored maps. Size 9 x 5 1/2 inches.

Specimen of Type

16 The LORD is King for ever and ever: the heathen are perished out

- Nos. 01600 Superior Cloth, round corners and red edges $2.75
- 01603 French Morocco, limp, round corners, red under gold edges, head-band, book-mark $4.75

The JUNIOR'S Bible

Self-Pronouncing

With 4,000 Questions and Answers, carefully selected "Aids to Bible Study," 16 beautifully colored and 15 black full-page illustrations, 6 colored maps and a presentation page. Children may readily pronounce correctly difficult Scripture names, as this Bible is self-pronouncing. Size 7 x 4 3/8 x 1 1/4 inches.

Type in Junior's Bible
2 Take the sum of all the of the children of 1s'ra-el, years old and upward, thro

- No. 1815 French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges, headbands and book-mark. Make some child happy with one of these fine Bibles $2.95

Child's ILLUSTRATED Bible

The beautifully colored illustrations in this new Bible are a delight to the children. It has clear, readable type and yet it measures only 5 3/8 x 3 3/8 inches.

Specimen of Type

2 My soul length, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the LORD: my heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God.

- No. 02112 French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, gold edges $2.50

Pocket REFERENCE Bible

Has over 50,000 center column references. Measures only 6 1/4 x 4 3/8 inches. (A splendid gift for a young lady.)

Specimen of Type

9 Behold, O God our shield, and look upon the face of thine anointed.

- No. 07523x French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges $3.25

Concordance Edition

Type and size as No. 07523x, but with a Concordance, subject index and dictionary of Scripture names. An excellent edition for students and Christian workers No. 03272x $5.00

OUR LEADER Oxford Concordance Bible

Self-Pronouncing

This beautiful Oxford India paper edition is indeed the ideal Bible for the student, preacher and evangelist. Each proper name and difficult word is divided into syllables and accented, and though printed with large clear type, the volume measures only 8 1/2 x 5 1/2 x 1 5/16 inches.

Specimen of Type

8 ¶ 21 Jē-hōi'-ā-chin was 6 years old when he began t

- No. 03671x. Fine Grain Morocco leather, overlapping cover, leather lined to edge, silk round corners, red under edges, silk

A UNIQUE GIFT BIBLE

With Basket Weave Binding

The Antique brown calf leather binding has a basket-weave grain, and button clasp. Has overlapping cover, art silk lined, with red under gold edges. With references. Printed on Oxford India paper. Type as Pocket Reference Bible $5.50

- No. 03255x
- As No. 03255x, with concordance. No. 03276x $6.50

Oxford TEACH Bibles

Have over 50,000 center column references, and 300 double-column pages of up-to-date helps, conveniently arranged in alphabetical order. Also 32 full-page illustrations, and an indexed atlas of the Bible with 15 beautifully colored maps of Bible lands.

Easy-to-Read-Edition

Size 7 1/4 x 5 x 1 3/8 inches

Specimen of Type

14 Like sheep they are laid in grave: death shall feed on th

- Nos. 04453. French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, round corners and red under gold edges. A durable and handsome Bible $4.35

Oxford India Paper Edition

- 0773x. French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges, headbands and book-mark. A beautiful gift edition $7.00

RED LETTER Edition

Same size and type as style No. 04453, with same references and helps, but with all the words of Jesus Christ printed in red. White paper edition No. 05453. French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges $5.00

The Oxford imprint in a Bible guarantees satisfaction

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary

THE JANE ADDAMS OF JAPAN.

(Sketch of one of our missionaries in Japan by Miss D. P. Cushing, News Editor.)

Miss Alice Pettee Adams of Okayama, Japan, has without doubt received from that country more honors than any other American woman. Known as the "Mother of Social Service in Japan," she has for more than 40 years carried on through the famous Hakuaiikai Social Settlement, definitely known as Christian, and visited by hundreds annually from all over the empire.

On her blouse Miss Adams wears the Imperial Decoration of the Blue Ribbon bestowed by the Emperor for distinguished service to the people of Japan. Six times has the Imperial Government, as well as the municipality and county recognized this modest little woman with beautiful gifts, scrolls or other forms of appreciation. Only 11 persons, prior to herself, have received the Blue Ribbon decoration, which fittingly enough bears the figure of an angel under whose wings are sheltered two adult figures with a little child between them. Miss Adams was one of 2,000 invited to a banquet in Okayama, tendered in the Emperor's honor, and was the only foreigner in a party of 150 to whom his Imperial Majesty gave an audience.

Perhaps the most strikingly original honor recently bestowed upon Miss Adams was the creating of a bust of herself by a new method called "sculptographing" invented by the Japanese photographer, Mr. Morioka. This makes the tedious posing of years past, unnecessary. The art of the photographer and the technic of the laboratory are blended with the result that "having a bust made" is no longer an ordeal. These busts have been on display this year (1934) in department stores and other public places all over Japan. They were of such dignitaries as Prince Tokugawa, Ambassador Grew of the United States, Premier Saito, Col. Lindbergh and Miss Alice Pettee Adams. In a picture of Artist Morioka at work, shown in newspaper rotogravure throughout the United States the unfinished bust stands in the background.

When Miss Adams went back to Japan after furlough in 1932, she entered the customs at Kobe loaded with packages and trunks made necessary because of presents from friends in America. She fully expected to have to take them all out and then repack. An inspector came up to her, looked at the name on the tag and then said: "Oh, you are Miss Adams. I have read about your social work and seen your picture in the paper. We are glad you're back. No, I don't take your things out at all. A woman like you we can trust. We know you need these things to make you comfortable." So he put his mark on Miss Adams' luggage and in five minutes she was through the customs, duty free.

American social workers may think they have strange problems to solve, but Miss Adams can match them. Among the people with whom she works, for example, the father and mother of a child may sometimes have been married by a peculiar ceremony not recognized by the Government as legal. The baby is not registered and therefore in the eyes of the Government does not exist. Sometimes it bears the father's name, sometimes the mother's name. To Miss Adams came one father in great distress. "My two girls are not registered," he mourned, "if they should die I could not bury them because in the eyes of law they do not exist." The long story of adjustment which Miss Adams conducted to set the man right required great patience and tact. During it she had an opportunity to emphasize the Christian principle of honesty.

Alice Adams, who was born in East Jaffrey, N. H., in the shadow of Mt. Monadock, was educated at Bridgewater Normal School. Upon graduation she said, "I will give 10 years of my life to Japan." She went in 1891—and she is still there. The story of how she began the work, which is now a thoroughly equipped social center, is a fascinating one.

She had at first but a small group of street children, as wild as little animals who came each week to hear stories and music from the tiny organ. Slowly she won their confidence and exerted a quieting influence upon them. They became the nucleus of the now famous Hakuaiikai which in English means "Loving-All House," with its classes, kindergartens, playground and clinic where Japanese doctors, including many specialists, give their service. Had Alice Adams listened to the warnings of her missionary and Japanese associates at the very beginning she would never have attempted what seemed to them an impossible task. But she went ahead with thorough New England determination and now there stands as a monument to her faith, the Hakuaiikai, and she herself bears the rightful title, "The Jane Addams of Japan."

MISSIONARY OFFERINGS.

WEEK ENDING JULY 21, 1934.

Sunday Schools.

Previously acknowledged .....	$ 2,772.23
Union Grove, Seagrove, N. C. ....	.70
Durham, N. C. ....	7.90
Rosemont, Norfolk, Va. ....	9.36
Leaksville, Luray, Va. ....	2.19
Liberty (Vance), Henderson, N. C. ....	3.57
Happy Home, Ruffin, N. C. ....	5.00
Berea (Naus.), Driver, Va. ....	4.11
Flint Hill, Star, N. C. ....	.12
Berea (Norfolk), Great Bridge, Va. ....	9.45
Total .....	$ 2,814.63

Individuals and Churches.

Previously acknowledged .....	$ 2,668.61
Johnson's Grove, Sedley, Va. ....	1.50
Haw River, N. C. ....	9.05
Mt. Olivet (R.), Harrisonburg, Va. ....	1.65
Barrett's, Wakefield, Va. ....	.95
Mt. Carmel, Franklinton, N. C. ....	2.59
Total .....	$ 2,684.35

Woman's Board, S. C. C.

Previously acknowledged .....	$ 7,873.01
Received of Mrs. H. S. Hardeastle, Treas. .	1,514.00
Total .....	$ 9,387.01

Specials.

Previously acknowledged .....	$ 923.95
Lawrence Memorial Bible Class, Elon College, S. S., Elon College, N. C. ....	.65
Rosemont S. S. Class 3, Norfolk, Va. ....	3.00
Total .....	$ 927.60

Coin Card Offering.

Previously acknowledged .....	$ 91.01
Union S. S., Burlington, N. C. ....	4.00
Rosemont S. S. Classes, Norfolk, Va. ....	3.00
Total .....	$ 98.01

Summary.

Previously acknowledged .....	$14,528.81
Total offerings, week ending July 21, 1934. .	1,582.79
Total to date .....	$16,111.60

J. O. ATKINSON,
Mission Secretary.

WOMAN'S BOARD REPORT.

The following is a report of receipts and disbursements of funds of the Woman's Board of Missions, Southern Christian Convention for Quarter ending June 30, 1934:

Receipts.

Valley of Va. Central Conference:
Women's Societies .....	$ 164.63
Young People's Societies .....	12.00
Cradle Roll Societies .....	7.35
			183.98
Alabama Conference:
Women's Societies .....	$ 57.61
Young People's Societies .....	4.20
Willing Workers Societies .....	1.43
			63.24
North Carolina Conference:
Women's Societies .....	$ 562.02
Young People's Societies .....	24.08
Willing Worker's Societies .....	26.80
Cradle Roll Societies .....	34.88
			647.78
Eastern Virginia Conference:
Women's Societies .....	$ 430.00
Young People's Societies .....	140.00
Willing Workers' Societies .....	50.00
Cradle Roll Societies .....	10.00
Total .....	$1,525.00

Disbursements.

Home Missions:
Ocean View Church .....	$ 200.00
Mountain Work .....	200.00
South Norfolk Church .....	91.00
Raleigh Church .....	175.00
Porto Rico, General Work .....	130.00
Porto Rico, Kindergarten .....	52.00
			848.00
Foreign Missions:
General Work of the American Board .....	$ 666.00
Total .....	$1,514.00

Respectfully submitted,
MRS. H. S. HARDCASTLE,
Treasurer.

TREASURER'S REPORT.

Report of the N. C. C. Woman's Missionary Conference for the third Quarter, July, 1934:

Women's Societies.

1. Biscoe .....	$ 3.75
2. Catawba Springs .....	4.00
3. Danville .....	18.00
4. Durham .....	48.01
5. Elon College .....	94.00
6. Graham .....	10.00
7. Greensboro .....	64.75
8. Hawk's Chapel .....	5.10
9. Ingram .....	7.40
10. Lebanon .....	6.25
11. Long's Chapel .....	10.00
12. Monticello .....	6.00
13. New Lebanon .....	4.00
14. New Hope .....	2.20
15. Palm St., Greensboro .....	5.00
16. Park's Cross Roads .....	3.40

17. Pleasant Grove .....	6.25
18. Pleasant Hill .....	6.70
19. Pleasant Ridge .....	5.00
20. Pleasant Union .....	1.80
21. Piney Plains .....	10.00
22. Providence Memorial .....	10.00
23. Reidsville .....	125.00
24. Sanford .....	22.00
25. Shallow Well .....	22.00
26. Turner's Chapel .....	10.00
27. Virgilina (Union) .....	32.45
28. Winston-Salem .....	5.00

Total ..... $548.06

Young People's Societies.

1. Durham .....	$ 8.64
2. Elon College .....	3.44
3. Greensboro .....	5.00
4. Sanford .....	2.00
5. Shallow Well .....	5.00
<hr/>
	24.08

Willing Workers.

1. Durham .....	12.78
2. Durham, Jr. ....	4.02
3. Greensboro .....	10.00
<hr/>
	26.80

Cradle Rolls.

1. Burlington .....	25.00
2. Durham .....	4.38
3. Greensboro .....	4.00
4. Sanford .....	1.50
<hr/>
	34.88

District Meetings.

Randolph District .....	3.67
Lee, Chatham District .....	2.50
Halifax District .....	7.79
<hr/>
	13.96

Grand Total ..... $647.78

MRS. W. R. SELLARS, Treas.

NEWS ITEMS.

The Holy Neck Young People's Missionary Society has had a most successful year under the leadership of Miss Lillye Holland, Superintendent, and Miss Mary Rawles Jones, president. They have met all the requirements and have increased in membership and interest. On fourth Sunday in April the Holland Young People's Society met with this society in a joint service.

The afternoon program was given to a lovely devotional and the teaching of three chapters of the mission study book, "Builders of a New World." Various members of both societies did the teaching in a most acceptable way.

After the adjournment of the group, they were invited to the community hall close by where the tables were spread and a delicious supper was enjoyed by all, each person having brought one dish.

After this joyful social hour the group once more assembled in the church where the remaining chapters were taught and an excellent and impressive closing service was rendered.

It was indeed a happy and helpful day and they were all agreed that it was the best plan yet tried for the mission study.

Mrs. Edna Marr is the wide awake Superintendent of the Junior Missionary Society of Christian Temple Church, Norfolk, Va. They have sixty members on roll and have an average attendance of seventy five per cent all contributing. They devote one Sunday each month to a missionary program using as a basis the mission study book.

At Christmas time this society and the Junior C. E. Society presented the pageant "The Birthday of the King" at a regular evening service.

A Story for the Children

MARY ELLEN'S WAY.

Ruth Stern had just gotten her report card, and her average was the highest in school; yet she was not happy about it.

"It's only that the other girls do not love me, mother," she replied when her mother had asked her what was the matter. "I make the highest grades every month and study hard, yet none of the children seem glad. When my name was read out, nobody clapped; but when Mary Ellen's name was read out, and it's the first time she was

All members of the S. S. and church were asked to bring gifts for the poor and it resulted in a most inspiring service and abundant gifts. The relief committee then distributed these to needy families of the community. These young people believe in giving and their apportionment is all met through the contributions of its members. This is indeed the Jesus way of giving and may these young people always keep this plan in operation.

The Young People's Missionary Society of Liberty Spring Christian Church is having a fine year under the leadership of Mrs. E. F. O'Berry. The cooperation and loyalty of the members has been good and the interest and enthusiasm has grown. Miss Bessie Lee Byrd is the president of this group of young people who are striving for their Master in such an earnest manner.

They hold their regular monthly meetings each third Sunday night with a public program at each meeting. The mission study book was taught in a six weeks course by Mrs. I. W. Johnson during the month of March. Each session was well attended and each member is now reading an extra mission book. Several new members have been enrolled during the year.

The Women's Missionary Society of Mt. Carmel Church, under the leadership of their faithful and loving president, Mrs. Elisha Bradshaw, rendered a very interesting and effective program on Mother's Day.

The devotions were led by the president, and songs suitable for the occasion were rendered by the Willing Workers and the Church choir. Papers and short talks by the young people were given.

An address "My Mother" was given by Prof. C. G. Johnson, of Capron, Virginia. Mr. Johnson was reared in this church and community.

The members of this society do most sincerely feel that "Co-operation calls for variation," even in the work of their Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. Christ did not give to all the same talent, but to all he gave a talent, and as the senior missionary group of their church they should endeavor to find out and study the talents of their young people; and, thus, give them a chance.

They know that without co-operation they make a failure, and to get this they vary as much as possible, by using the talents from others than those who are members of their Woman's Society, they find, that in using all that they can fit into their programs, that it will lead to cooperation from the Church membership, as well as the other Societies.

They have a wide awake Young People's Society, Willing Workers and Cradle Roll in their church.

Mrs. E. W. Beale and Mrs. F. H. Johnson send us the above splendid information and it surely shows a live group at work for the Master.

ever on the honor roll, why they clapped so loud the old school house rang."

"Perhaps it was because of its being the first time for Mary Ellen," suggested her mother.

"No, ma'am, I don't think it was that. At recess she is always followed by all the girls, and the trouble is I don't see why it is. I've watched her, and I can't find out her secret.

"Then watch her some more," suggested her mother. "There must be a reason."

So Ruth determined to find the reason, and she could think of no better way than walking with Mary Ellen to school and talking to her.

"Hello," she said as Mary Ellen came running toward her with sparkling eyes. "Let's walk together this morning. I want to ask you a question. I'm trying to find out why everybody loves you so. I'd give anything if they would love me that way."

Mary Ellen looked at Ruth in astonishment. "But I didn't know they did," she declared. "I never thought of it before—I mean I never thought about the children loving me, but I know I think a lot of all of them."

"I don't," said Ruth, "I am too busy."

"I've noticed you are always busy," answered Mary Ellen. "You never even take time to play at recess much, do you?"

Just then Elsie Torrence came around the corner. "I've been wishing I could meet up with someone before school who could explain that last problem to me," she said, looking at both girls in turn. "I have worried so over it and don't know what to do."

"It's too late to open our books here; we'll be late for school," began Ruth, but Mary Ellen was already busy unstrapping hers as she walked.

"I had a time with that problem myself," Mary Ellen said, "and I'm awful glad to pass it on. Here, Elsie, just glance at it—here, all worked out—maybe you can understand as I tell you how I did it."

The two girls were soon deep in the problem and had entirely forgotten Ruth, who walked silently along by their sides. Here was an opportunity she had avoided, while Mary Ellen had grasped it at once. But what a trouble to put oneself to! Then when Elsie thanked Mary Ellen, there was a light of happiness in Mary Ellen's eyes which would be there all day.

That night when Ruth reached home she said to her mother: "I have found out the secret Mary Ellen has. She doesn't know what it is herself, because she never thinks of herself; but I know now, and I will never forget it."

"I think I know already what it is," answered her mother, "but I would like for you to tell me."

"Well, I think it is because Mary Ellen always helps everybody she possibly can. I never thought of it before, but I know that is the secret of her popularity, isn't it?"

"Yes, it is, Ruth, and you must follow her example."

"And will all the children love me as they do Mary Ellen?"

"You must not think of that part. Give with your whole heart. Ask nothing in return. That will be taken care of."—Free Will Baptist.

What is it to be an American? It is to be faithful to the fine principles of truth and honor laid down for us by the great leaders of our land, by such splendid Americans as Washington, Franklin, Lincoln, Lee, and a host of others whose names have adorned the pages of our history, and who have left to us the priceless heritage of noble example. It is to remember that men are more than nations, and that a nation is not greater or better than the individual men of which it is composed.—Woodrow Wilson.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

LET US BUILD HERE.

There was a difference of opinion as to where the United States Treasury Building should be located. Returning from a walk one morning before breakfast, President Jackson stopped and stuck up a stick saying, "By the eternal we build it here." The treasury building stands there today.

One summer day Jesus took three of his intimate disciples on a mountain climb. While they sat resting in the rare air, and viewing the beautiful scenery around about, they saw the Master's countenance light up with inspiration and heard Him talk with Moses and Elijah. They said they were afraid, and talked at random, but their statement was worthy of being remembered throughout the centuries: "It is good to be here, let us build three tabernacles."

It is a fine thing to know where to build, as well as what to build. Foundations should be on rock and not sand. Dwelling places ought to be where the air is pure and the vision beautiful.

Our colored friends have stated very accurately an important truth concerning Christian experience in the statement "Sometimes I's up, sometimes I's down." The highway of religious experience may take us through narrow gorges and low lying plains but should on occasion lead to the mountain top where there is a radiant Christ interpreting both the law and the prophets. It is on this mountain top of religious experience that we should build our castles.

People who attend summer conferences will likely reach a higher point in religious experience than they have ever attained before. I am suggesting that you build on this high experience. It may be a help some day to look back up the hillside and see that your tent is still there. One need not live on the lowest plains of life, because there is plenty of room in the high lands. When we build with beauty, love, truth, loyalty, devotion, and all the fine qualities which Christian experience reveals to us, we are building on a mountain where Jesus makes known himself with a beauty that is beyond human words to describe. Let us build here.

BUILDERS.

We are building every day
In a good or evil way,
And the structure, as it grows,
Will our inmost self disclose.
Do you ask what building this
That can show both pain and bliss,
That can be both dark and fair?
Lo, its name is character!
Build it well, whate'er you do;
Build it straight and strong and true;
Build it clean and high and broad;
Build it for the eyes of God.

—Selected.

THINK CLEARLY.

These days call for clear thinking—much more of it than we seem to be getting. Most of the difficulties through which the world is passing have been caused by wrong thinking.

Herr Hitler disgraces his country with a "bloody Saturday" because of his thinking. The workmen in San Francisco walk out on their jobs and cause the loss of millions of dollars as well as much human suffering because of their thinking. There are strikes and labor disturbances scattered all over the country because of the thinking of certain radical groups of people.

The maladjustment of economic and social relations demands serious and sane thought. There appeared to be a surplus of food production which the government sought to destroy, but the dry and scorching atmosphere of the west has taken away the food supply of a great area of our country. This condition calls for clear thinking. I was told recently that one of our preachers in the west was advising his people to move away and start life all over again.

The international unrest and fear makes it seem wise to leaders of nations to spend additional millions of dollars in preparation for war when we have not paid for the last one, and can't. It does not seem sensible for the government of a hungry people to spend millions of dollars for more ammunitions, battleships, and airplanes until the people are fed.

It is easy to get red in the face and rave at length as to what should be done; it is easy to say this is the great thing while everything else is bad; but the more difficult way of serious and sane thinking is a much safer way. The young people of our country can spend many lengthy hours profitably in trying to figure out what is the proper thing to do under specific conditions. Is it Christian to destroy the milk supply of a great city making children go under-nourished in order that the price may be increased? Is it Christian for all of the workmen in a great industry in a city to go on a strike in order to settle a dispute between a small group of laborers and their employer? Is it Christian for nations to build warships and prepare for war in a time of great human suffering? If we can think through our problems in a quiet and sane way, the chances are that our country will come through safely. But unless we do this thinking there is no guessing as to the outcome.

A story was told me recently of two young men who tried to settle their personal differences not by sane thinking but by way of their fists. They both came out of the fight bloody and battered but without the dispute being settled. If they had taken the time to discuss the matter thoughtfully he chances are they both would have been much happier than they can ever be. This principle of sane thinking runs through all the experiences of life.

SUNDAY SCHOOL AND CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR CONFERENCE.

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of Eastern Virginia Conference, which was held in the First Christian Church, Richmond, July 17th, was especially well attended considering the distance most of the delegates had to travel. The reports were very good, and the addresses were excellent. Rev. H. S. Hardcastle spoke on the "Need for a New World," and this was followed with an address on "How to Get This New World," by Rev. F. C. Lester.

The offering sent up from the Sunday Schools was larger than last year, which was most encouraging. The officers were all re-elected, I think, except the President, and Rev. J. E. McCauley was made the new president, which assures a good convention next year and also good work done between now and the meeting of the next Convention.

The musical program given at the evening session by the First Christian Church Orchestra was wonderful, and everyone enjoyed it very much. The closing address of the Convention was given by Dr. Sidney B. Hall, and it was a masterpiece, one of the finest addresses I have ever heard. The only regret I had was that the large number of delegates present during the day could not stay for the message of Dr. Hall.

The vesper service at 7:00 P. M. conducted on the church lawn by Mrs. W. B. Williams was most impressive and helpful.

The only criticism I heard of the convention was that it was too short, that we had to rush through too rapidly. This I think is a good criticism. It might be well if we could spend more time, and perhaps make the convention a sort of School of Methods, and stress training, rather than securing credit.

The Richmond Church took good care of the convention, and all felt most welcome indeed.

J. F. MORGAN.

"THIS IS MY FATHER'S WORLD."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR AUGUST 5, 1934
Psalm 19:1-6.

Daily Readings:

Monday, July 30.—God, the Creator. Gen. 1:1; John 1:1-3.
Tuesday, July 31.—God, the Sustainer. Job 34:13-15.
Wednesday, August 1.—God, the Provider. Matt. 6:25-34.
Thursday, August 2.—God, the Director. Rom. 8:28.
Friday, August 3.—God, the Infinitely Good. Matt. 19:16-22.
Saturday, August 4.—God, the All-powerful. Isa. 40:12-31.
Sunday, August 5.—My Father's World. Ps. 19:1-6.

Program.

Theme: "Worshipping the Father in His World."

Violin Music.

Call to Worship:

"Unto Thee do I lift up mine eyes,
O Thou that dwellest in the heavens."

Hymn: "Day is Dying in the West."

Prayer: (Closing with period of silent meditation; ended by singing together softly the refrain of the hymn, "Day is Dying in the West.")

Hymn: "This is My Father's World (sung in unison or as a special number if it is unfamiliar to the group.)

Psalm 148, read responsively.

Hymn: "Fairest, Lord Jesus."

Special feature: This may be a vesper talk, a story, the reading of nature poems, special music by members of the group.

Meditation and prayer:

Solo (sung prayerfully): "For the Beauty of the Earth."

Leader's Prayer:

Hymn: "America the Beautiful."

Benediction (unison):

"The Lord make His face to shine upon us and bless us,
The Lord lift up His countenance upon us and grant us peace."

Other Hymns:

"There's a Wideness in God's Mercy."

"Lead Kindly Light."

"Jesus, Lover of My Soul."

This is an outdoor praise meeting and the place where it is to be held should be carefully selected. If there is no better place available, the meeting may be held on the church lawn. But it is better to get away from the crowded streets if possible. Choose a hill top, not far from town if one is

(Continued on page 11.)

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

MICAHIAH SPEAKS THE TRUTH.

LESSON V—JULY 29, 1934.

* GOLDEN TEXT: "What the Lord saith unto me, that will I speak."—I Kings, Chapter 22.

LESSON TEXT: I Kings, Chapter 22.

Ahab was the king of Israel, Jehosaphat was the king of Judah. Ever since the kingdom had been divided Israel and Judah had been on unfriendly, and even war-like terms. But it was a part of Ahab's long-sighted policy to make friends with his inherited enemies, and he made friendly overtures to Judah, through Jehosaphat. He visited Jehosaphat and suggested that they join in a campaign together to recover Ramoth-Gilead, which was held by the Syrians, their mutual and hated enemy. Jehosaphat agreed, but there were misgivings in his heart as to the wisdom or the righteousness of his action, and he suggested to Ahab that they inquire of the Lord as to what they should do. Happy is the man that condemneth not himself in the thing which he alloweth. When in doubt, don't. A man is on dangerous ground when he compromises his ideals and principles. Unhappy is the man who takes favors from the cause which he ought to be rebuking. "The first step a good man takes from the position, which as a friend of God, and the unflinching enemy of ungodliness, he has occupied, compromises his authority, impairs his influence, and forfeits his rights to protest against evil." Favors received from the forces of evil often involve embarrassing entanglements.

Ahab was perfectly willing to "inquire of the Lord", with reservations. He promptly called his prophets together, four hundred of them, and asked them whether he should go up against Ramoth-Gilead. The answer was unanimous—"Yes go, the Lord is with you." Of course they would say that. Ahab kept those prophets. They got their bread and butter from him. "They knew their onions." They were not going to displease the king. Like many modern prophets they said only the things that those who held the purse-strings wanted to hear. It is all right to preach the simple gospel, but the preacher had better not preach about Christian principles in industry, personal purity, Christian attitudes toward other races or classes, against the liquor traffic, against war and armaments, against anything that concerns the personal and selfish interests of those who help to pay the bills. That is the tragedy of so many modern preachers—they are so involved that they cannot preach the truth, or they are so afraid that they will not preach it. And of course the principle applies to newspaper editors. Let any editor of a wet newspaper begin to write editorials against liquor and see what will happen to him. What usually happens, as a matter of fact, is that newspaper owners employ those who will write only what they want written, or if the editors do not agree with the owners, they dare not print what they think. This impassioned plea of newspaper men recently in connection with the N. R. A. set-up, for the freedom of the press is a lot of "hokey". The press is not free. And those who own and edit the press knows this. This principle runs all through life. Indeed all of us are very careful what we say—we usually tell folks what they want to hear rather than what they ought to know. The prophets of Baal in Ahab's time had a long line of descendants.

The statement has been made that the prophets of Ahab were unanimous. Indeed they were too unanimous; they aroused Jehosaphat's suspicion and he suggested that he would like to hear the other side of the matter. Ahab remarked that there was a certain Micaiah of whom they might inquire, a prophet of the Lord, but he added that he did not like to hear this fellow Micaiah because he was always prophesying, not good but evil, concerning Ahab. Jehosaphat was insistent, however, and finally Micaiah was summoned. It was a tough spot for him. He was one against four hundred, and he stood before the king who had the power of life and death over him. But he was in the line of that long line of prophets culminating in Jesus who came to bear witness to the truth. He told Ahab frankly that he was going to say what the Lord has told him to say, and he proceeded to tell him that their enterprise would end disastrously. He also boldly charged the prophets with a lying spirit. As one gets the full import of what was involved in Micaiah's message he thinks of Jesus the day He went back to Nazareth where He had been brought up, and preached the unwelcome truth in such a plain way that they actually rose up to throw him off the precipice. One can preach the truth in love, but one sometimes gets the feeling that a great deal of modern preaching is missing the mark. One thing is certain—woe is the man who preaches what the people want or what he thinks the people want, instead of what in his inner soul he knows is the word of God. Ministers and Sunday School teachers are to bear witness to the truth, the truth as they see it. He that doeth the truth shall come to the light.

And Micaiah's words came true. Ahab's forces were defeated, and his own life was taken. Eventually truth will vindicate itself. A man does not have to be concerned about but one thing when he speaks—am I proclaiming the truth? Let a man preach the truth and the truth will take care of itself. "Ye shall know the truth," said Jesus, "and the truth shall make you free."

YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

(Continued from page 10.)

available, and hold your meeting about an hour before sunset. Plan to begin the meeting so that it will close just as the sun is setting. If there are no hills in your vicinity, try to find a peaceful spot under the trees, or at least away from town. The soul needs quietness to listen to God.

Plan your meeting carefully beforehand. Copy or cut out all readings that are to be given by the different members, and give them to the readers in time so that they may be familiar with them and not stumble in their reading. Have your speakers stand so that the audience faces the setting sun, obliquely not directly, and so may drink in the quiet of the closing day.

"These are the things I prize
And hold of dearest worth:
Light of the sapphire skies,
Peace of the silent hills;
Shelter of forest, comfort of the grass—
Music of birds, murmur of little rills—
Shadows of clouds that swiftly pass,
And after showers,
The smell of flowers,
And of the good brown earth."

Van Dyke.

Youth must carry the burden of coping with the problems of the new frontier. Adults can never do it. Youth must furnish the initiative, individualism, energy, and novelty of thought required. I believe in youth. I have lived with them in the class room for many years. I know them through and through, and on the basis of this knowledge, I am willing to trust the future in their hands.—E. E. Snoddy.

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.
Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.

These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies, in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. It combines with the Concordance, Subject-Index, Scripture Proper Names, etc. The 12 Maps have been carefully revised and are beautifully colored. In making orders, give the number and price.

135—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold. $3.00

India Paper Edition, Only 16-16 of an inch thick.

. 133X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold, $4.00

SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS' BIBLE.

Especially made up for gift or reward Bibles for Sunday School scholars, containing a special series of very practical and useful helps and Bible Questions and Answers, etc. Printed on fine white Bible paper; ruby type; pocket size, 3 3/4 x 5 3/4 inches, and 1 inch thick, with 31 full-page illustrations in sepia. All bindings are black. Ruby Type, Size 3 3/4 x 5 3/4 Inches, and 1 Inch Thick.

65—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold; 6 colored maps .....$2.50

AUTHORIZED VERSION.

RED LETTER TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Brevier Type (8 vo.), Self-Pronouncing, Size 5 3/8 x 8 1/2 Inches and 1 3/8 Inches Thick.

Containing the Bible, with full references. The words of Christ in the New Testament are printed in red; other parts of the book are printed in black. With Concise Bible Dictionary, combined Concordance, and 12 indexed maps.

7852—Genuine Leather, Lavant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold .....$4.75

RED-LETTER EDITION.

With All the Words of Christ in the New Testament Printed in Red.

1282—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit round corners, red under gold edges, register and headbands; title stamped on side and back in pure gold .....$3.25

60—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, Sunday School Scholars' Bible, stamped in pure gold on cover, no illustrations; special book for Sunday Schools .....95c

Any of the above Bibles sent postpaid. Address
THE CHRISTIAN SUN
1536 East Broad Street Richmond, Virginia

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy

MONDAY.

"AMUSEMENTS."

"Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread? And your labor for that which satisfieth not?"

The Bible tells us that those who love pleasures more than they love God are like the wheat of the field that has been choked out by weeds and thorns. Such ones cannot be alive to God. Such have not crucified the flesh that they may be alive to God.

The Bible also tells us of the pleasures that are "at his right hand forevermore," described to be like a river from which we may drink and be happy.

It is not to be understood that God expects us to be apostles of gloom, and too holy to be natural or to have a fine sense of humor. It does not mean that we should not play or attend shows, sports, frolics, etc. Such amusements satisfy God-given cravings and serve as outlets and recreations to pent-up energies and weary souls. But experience teaches us just what our text says, "that it is not the repair to hope nor the refreshing to the soul that pleasure-seekers hope for."

So many people think that in pleasure is their highest good, they must be constantly amused. They rush from place to place, and from entertainment to entertainment, but as their experiences are repeated, the simpler and more innocent amusements pall upon their taste and no longer yield them joys; new pleasures are sought to satisfy their restless appetite until their moral senses are slackened, spiritual values diminish, they throw aside restraint and give reign to their baser inclinations. The wheat of true joys is being choked out by worldly pleasures.

The test is, first: that pleasures shall at least be clean and wholesome, for only in these are qualifications that satisfy. Second, pleasures are intended to fill the place of recreation—mere pastimes—and are never to be the main objective in life.

Thus the urge of our Lord, "Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread? And your labor for that which satisfieth not?"

"Harken to Me," saith He, "look for that which is good. It is found at the hands of the Lord without money and without price."

Prayer—Our Father, give us a hungering and thirsting for righteousness, and the joys of Thy Kingdom, and take from us the thirst for worldliness. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"APPLAUSE."

"Thou shalt not be as the hypocrites are; for they stand in the synagogues and in the corners in the streets that they may be seen of men. . . . They think that they shall be heard for their much speaking."—Matt. 6:5-7.

Does everybody love applause? We have seen a few people who were so obsessed with the Lord Jesus Christ and so engrossed in their mission of love and salvation that it seemed that the egotism in them had been wholly crucified and applause of the people did not matter. But with most people applause is sweet to the taste—they love it.

In fact, the sense of appreciation is God-given and important. Should we never receive a word of praise and encouragement for a work at least well attempted, we would soon be overcome and give up, I fear.

But the "playing to the galleries," and exciting the applause of the masses, and feeling great thereby, is not Christlike. It is gentleness, and deep-rooted humanity, nobility of purpose, and purity of motive that is great; and no man who is always thinking of himself can have these qualities.

Once a man is born of God and obsessed with a mission in life, thoughts of himself are banished, and instead of egotism there comes a desire to please and glorify Him.

Such an one is so far removed from himself that to rejoice in the applause of his own doings is impossible. He is compelled, of course, to realize that he possesses unusual powers, but, giving God the glory that conviction is no occasion for undue elation.

We know a man whose every engagement fills the house, and thousands are turned away. Once asked what his thoughts were when he stood waiting for the prolonged applause to cease, he is quoted as saying, "I almost heard the words, it is a very small thing that I should be judged of you, or of men. He that judgeth me is the Lord."

Prayer—Our dear Father in heaven, grant us to walk the common walk of life in humility, and to bear life's cares patiently in love and wisdom, and thus live nearer Thee.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"UP GRADE."

"Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed."—II Tim. 2:15.

"You can't hold a strong position without opposition."

"You can't seem right to any if you don't seem wrong to many."

"The greater you are the greater the penalty of your progress."

"You can't avoid or evade your allotted destiny. You can only hold down your share of trouble by holding back."

"You'll have hostility to face in every place and at every pace."

"Be sure you're right and then go ahead."

"So long as your conscience isn't ashamed to own you as a friend, don't give a rap for your enemies."

"You can't dodge."

Prayer—Our Lord and our God, examine Thou us to see if there be any good in us, and whatever is amiss cast out, we pray Thee.

Teach us how to examine ourselves for faults, that we may offer ourselves for cleansing and without fault to Thee, washed in the heart and without spot in the day of judgment. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"TRIUMPH OVER CIRCUMSTANCES."

"He received from God the Father honor and glory, when there came such a voice to him from the excellent glory, this is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased."—II Peter 1:17-18.

Christ's law is our everyday law, and it is obedience to that law that gives character to our souls, courage and fortitude in trials, struggles, and temptation; and victory in defeats. If we can carry with us a sense that all things are His and that our work is His; if we can have a consciousness of the presence that helps us; if we can realize that we are partners with Him in the making of the world of good; then His work to redeem us from the curses of life is coming to fruition. To realize this is an antedote to all gloom. We will not hear a voice from the heavens, but we will hear assurances in the soul that we too are sons of God, "and it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know we shall be like Him." This spirit triumphs over all.

Prayer—Our Father, we pray for simplicity of faith, earnestness in labor, honesty of purpose, the glory of Thy spirit, and the daily assurance of Thy victory. In His Name, we ask it.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"THE TYRANNY OF CIRCUMSTANCES."

"He hath set eternity in their (thy) heart."—Eccl. 3:2.

We live in a world of fleeting changes and we are often tossed about from one thing to another; often (more often than we like to admit) circumstance comes between us and the thing we would do and we must submit to alterations in adjusting ourselves to those circumstances. Paul said, "when I would do good, evil is present with me."

The tyranny of it all is that these interfering circumstances not only break up our plans and thwart our purposes, but they impound on our subconscious self somewhat of a character akin to the thing that is disturbing us, and, unless we are fixed, we may be led away from that purpose.

What have you got to work upon? What have you to love and hold on to, to trust, and to anchor the life to?

A crowd of things, to be sure. We have cravings for that which is good, and, though these cravings are never fully satisfied, we are better off for having them. Without them we would sink. We have the hope of the success of all good and an endless life.

Thus despite everything around us that interrupts and disturbs us, despite all that decays and passes away, there is a power in us that rises above it. It is eternity in the heart.

To make this eternity a reality, we must join ourselves to Jesus Christ and then there will be no aching void, no unsatisfied longings, and no consuming thirst.

"He that believeth in the Son hath eternal life."

Prayer—Our Father, grant unto us to do our duty well, and with such single heartedness and simplicity, that we may be accepted in Thy sight, and not miss the way.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"JACKETS."

"Eat and drink, saith He to thee; but His heart is not with thee."—Prov. 23:1-7.

The "jacket" of the book is the paper cover which the publisher puts on it to keep it clean in the bookstore. At first these covers were of plain paper, but during recent years more and more attention has been paid to them. Brilliant colored designs are printed on them, and the most glaring arrangement of type, so that the book may, if possible, out-stare its competitors on the counter. Remove the elaborate jacket, and the real cover of the book will be found to be modest, perhaps even displeasing in its careless plainness.

As a wise publisher, however, will make paper jacket and cloth cover harmonize and fit them both to the character of the book itself, so a wise man will look to the jacket of his life. He will not allow himself to present an exterior he can not live up to, but he will seek to be, to the eyes of men, no more brilliant, no wiser and no better than he is in his mind and soul.

Prayer—Keep us true to ourselves, our Master, and so we shall be true to Thee. Keep us true to ourselves and Thee, and true to all men.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

(Continued on page 15.)

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, Pastor.

IN A DAY OF REBUILDING.

By REV. WARREN WHEELER PICKETT,
*Pastor of the First Congregational Church,
Detroit, Michigan.*

[Preached Sunday evening, June 24, 1934, in Finney Chapel, Oberlin College, Oberlin, Ohio, at the meeting of the General Council of the Congregational and Christian Churches of the United States.]

(Concluded from last week.)

Therefore, if we are to continue to be followers of the Lord Jesus Christ, we cannot escape from the bewilderment of these times by embracing either of these ways of escape. We cannot throw ourselves into a bloody revolution, for the loving spirit of Our Master forbids such a solution of our problems. Nor can we risk ourselves in a placid mysticism which ignores all the manifest evils which afflict God's children. Our Master's consuming passion for righteousness and justice will not permit that course either. In spite of our bafflement and discouragement, if we are to be true to him, we must remain loyal to his dream that some day the will of God shall be done on earth as it is in heaven and loyal also to his method of hastening that day by love and persuasion. If we follow any other path, no matter how lofty may be our ideals nor how holy our hopes, we shall find in the end that we have hindered rather than helped in the accomplishment of his purpose.

But there is another road which opens before us, a road which at first glance may seem less inviting and less promising than either revolution or quietism, but a road which has the advantage of being, not an escape mechanism, but a realistic and effective approach to our problem. That path runs by way of a more adequate understanding than we have yet attained that the evils of society can be cured only by correcting the evils in individuals. For in my humble judgment, the greatest weakness of the social gospel has been the totally baseless expectation that some clever device could be discovered by which we could speedily usher in the perfect society without troubling to make any significant alteration in the motives and desires of men. In its essence that quest for some bit of magic which will reform the world swiftly is a revival of the old apocalyptic hope which was prevalent during our Master's earthly ministry. In his day also men were finding conditions intolerable and many of his contemporaries were hoping for a heaven-sent miracle which in the twinkling of an eye would set up the Kingdom of God upon earth in spite of the fact that no fundamental change had yet been effected in their own inner lives. In our time at least some champions of righteousness have hoped to work an analogous miracle by a reorganization of our practices, customs and laws. But our present day apocalypticists are even less logical than their predecessors of nineteen hundred years ago. The ancient Jews at least recognized that the supernatural power of God would be required to transform the world. But we have expected to work that miraculous transformation ourselves by adopting the fiery resolutions and lobbying for acts of Congress.

But history has demonstrated that all apocalyptic hopes, whether ancient or modern, are quite futile. For there is no way under heaven by which we can redeem society until we have purified the motives and desires of the men and women who compose it. There is no malign fate from without which imposes on us a social order which compels us to be callous, grasping and cruel. We have just exactly the kind of society which our passions and ambitions make inevitable, nor can we have anything fundamentally different until individual characters have been purified. For after all the greed of the world is only your greed and mine written large. Its cruelty is our cruelty. Its prejudice is our prejudice. All those monstrous iniquities which we call our social sins are nothing save the iniquities of the common man, magnified and clothed with diabolical power by the mass action of the group. So long as individual men are greedy, callous and cruel, we shall have that kind of a society and no miracle can make it otherwise.

Nor are the vices which mar our common life merely the peculiar sins of those who now chance to be in places of singular privilege. Those against whom our most vitriolic denunciations are directed have not set before them strange and unnatural ambitions. They have merely grasped at the rewards which our day believes to be most desirable. They have been seeking exactly the same prizes which the great rank and file also seek and they have sought them by the means which our modern world almost universally recognizes as legitimate. They have won their place and power not by striving for goals which the majority have renounced nor by following methods which public opinion condemns. They have gained their present eminence merely by seeking more successfully than the average what most men seek and by employing more adroitly than the average the means which most men employ.

Therefore, the task of creating the better society is not so simple a matter as persuading, or compelling, a few possessors of special privileges to relinquish their undue advantages. It is the much more difficult objective of convincing the great mass of men and women that they have been following false ideals, pursuing unworthy goals, and wooing success by evil means. For just so long as the great rank and file believe that a man's life consisteth of the abundance of the things which he possesseth and that the selfish pursuit of one's own personal aggrandizement is the surest way to success, we shall continue to have very much the same kind of society which we have now, no matter what may be the form of its political organization. Therefore, our only hope for a triumphant social gospel is to recapture the ancient power of religion to release individuals from unworthy desires, evil practices and the worship of false gods and convert them to the attitude and spirit of him who is Our Master. For so long as we leave the individual heart unredeemed there can be no reasonable expectation of a redeemed society.

Therefore, in this day of rebuilding our most immediate duty is to apply the ancient redemptive power of religion to the casting out of social sins and the implanting of social virtues. For nineteen centuries we have known that there was in the Christian experience of God and his saving grace a dynamic which could conquer man's personal vices and make saints and heroes out of the basest sort of material. You are all familiar with the long roll call of those who were lifted from life's filthiest gutters to become gifted leaders of the faithful and consecrated martyrs to the holy cause. Vachel Lindsay was only translating into poetry the familiar history of the Christian Church when he wrote "General William Booth Enters Heaven." Do you remember his description of the kind of folk that Booth led after him?

"Walking lepers followed rank on rank,
Lurching bravoes from the ditches dank,
Drabs from the alley ways and drug fiends pale,
Minds still passion-ridden, soul-powers frail,
Vermin-eaten saints with mouldy breath,
Unwashed legions from the ways of death."

Then comes the transformation wrought by the eternal grace:

"Jesus came from out the courthouse door.
Stretched his hands above the passing poor."

Then in an instant all that bleak review
Marched on spotless, clad in raiment new.
The lame were straightened, withered limbs uncurled
And blind eyes opened on a new, sweet world!
Drabs and vixens in a flash made whole!
Gone was the weasel head, the snout, the jowl!
Sages and sybils now and athletes clean,
Rulers of empires and of forests green!
Oh, shout salvation! It was good to see
Kings and princes by the Lamb set free."

There in the flaming imagery of the poet is describing that redemption which has been the crowning glory of the Gospel of Christ.

But the Christianity of the past limited the transforming power to a too narrow field. The Church of our fathers was wondrously effective in saving the drab and the drunkard, the vixen and the drug fiend pale. But it did not attempt to exercise those subtle transgressions of the mind and spirit which are so devastating to the social order. Indeed it is only recently that we have come to understand that a man may be meticulously respectable and mystically pious and yet be a menace to his fellows. It was only yesterday that we recognize as sins those attitudes and practices which produce poverty, injustice and economic oppression. Consequently our predecessors never sought the help of the divine spirit for the redemption of men's social habits and desires. It is our duty to appropriate that grace which they neglected.

For there is no reason to believe that the Lord's arm is so shortened that he cannot save us from our social as well as our individual sins. There is no reason to believe that greed and hatred, pride and arrogance, callous selfishness and brutal materialism are any more impervious to the spirit of God than are lust, theft, drunkenness and murder. Certainly in the ministry of Jesus the same power which saved the women who had walked in the path of shame was equally effective for the redemption of Zaccheus whom avarice had made an unscrupulous grafter. But we have not yet sought that power for the casting out of social sins and the implanting of social virtues. Instead we have been experimenting with what we thought were swifter ways. We have not realized that the Gospel, yes, even the social gospel, must be the power of God unto salvation, or it is no Gospel at all, but only another impotent dream. Our only hope for a triumphant social gospel is to make it a dynamic message which will so relate the individual soul to the eternal redemptive grace that men will turn from the cult of Mammon to the worship of the one true God, will renounce the pursuit of wealth for the cultivation of the imperishable riches of the soul. For a redeemed society can be created only by redeemed individuals.

I hope I have already made it clear that I am no champion of that kind of personal religion which does nothing save make its devotees happy, respectable and pious. I am quite aware that there is much in our present economic system which thwarts our most Christianlike aspirations and condemns even the most sincere and earnest of us to a life-long compromise between our

(Continued on page 15.)

Christian Orphanage

Dear friends:

We are always grateful for all the offerings we receive but some give us more peculiar joy than others. A little child will sometime send us an offering from the love it has in its little heart for other little children less fortunate than it.

Sometimes we receive an offering from an elderly person whose hair is silvered over for the grave and whose step is feeble and tottering and life's work is almost done.

We received in the mail as I write this letter, a letter from a good friend in Alabama enclosing a check for $10.00 from Mrs. Georgia Hamlin, better known as "Granny Hamlin" from our Antioch church in Alabama. "Granny Hamlin" is one of the sainted members of Antioch church and is an inspiration to those who come in touch with her. She is climbing up in her eighties but is not too old to think of little children who are fatherless. She was left an orphan and knows how to sympathize with a little child bereft of its loving parents with no home. May the Good and Kind Master richly bless "Granny Hamlin" and give her years yet to be a blessing to humanity.

We have many in our church who could follow her beautiful example and make it possible for more little children to have a home here.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

REPORT FOR JULY 26, 1934.

Brought forward .....	$7,384.88
Sunday School Monthly Offerings.
North Carolina and Virginia Conference:
Mt. Zion .....	$ 1.25
Lawrence Memorial Bible Class....	1.50
	2.75
Eastern North Carolina Conference:
Liberty Vance .....	4.71
Mt. Carmel .....	1.79
	6.50
Western North Carolina Conference:
Zion .....	6.50
	6.50
Eastern Virginia Conference:
Perea, Norfolk .....	9.45
	9.45
Valley Va. Central Conference:
Newport .....	2.04
Leaksville .....	2.12
Winchester .....	3.38
	7.54
Special Offerings.
Special Offering Eastern N. C. S. S. and C. E. Convention .....	8.74
Burlington Christian Church, balance on Thanksgiving offering .....	15.40
Mrs. Roberts, support of children..	10.00
Cash item .....	15.00
Mrs. Dalton, support of children ..	12.50
	61.64
Endowments.
Lawrence S. Holt Endowment Fund .....	150.00
Total for the week .....	$ 244.38
Grand total .....	$7,629.26

COUNCIL SEMINAR RESOLUTIONS. (Continued from page 5.)

using the materials and plans which they furnish and by hearty support of their work.

9. We would urge upon our churches the vital importance of cooperative work as illustrated in the activities of state councils and the International Council of Religious Education and particularly in the pooling of resources of leadership and equipment in local communities as a means to more effective educational work.

Resolutions originating with the Seminar on the Social Gospel and Economic Problems.

1. Whereas, we commit ourselves with hearty avowal of the faith of our fathers to walk in all God's ways made known or to be made known to use, and with sincere passion, which we believe derives from our Master, to make abundant life available to all men everywhere.

Whereas, our present competitive profit-seeking economy shows itself to be increasingly self-destructive and,

Whereas, it depends for its existence upon exploitation of one group by another, creates industrial and civic strife and international war, precipitates periods of unemployment, perpetuates insecurity and all its attendant miseries, and progressively curtails the cultural and educational opportunities of our people, thus destroying human values, moral and spiritual. And,

Whereas, these flagrant social evils exist side by side with potential natural abundance, which the present economy is unable to utilize and distribute, however much good it may have done in the past and however honest and idealistic, individuals dependent upon the system may be,

Be it Resolved that:

We set ourselves to work toward:

The abolition of the system responsible for these destructive elements in our common life, by eliminating the system's habits, the legal forms which sustain it, and the moral ideals which justify it.

The inauguration of a genuinely cooperative social economy democratically planned to adjust production to consumption requirements, to modify or eliminate private ownership of the means of production or distribution wherever such ownership interferes with the social good.

And be it further resolved that,

We encourage the study in our local churches of these and related economic problems for their social and moral implications. Vote: 130 - 17.

2. Whereas, we observe the use of beverage alcohol still to be material and spiritual curse to the personalities and societies of men.

Be it Resolved that:

(1) We inaugurate throughout our churches such educational programs as will encourage the virtue of total abstinence.

(2) We cooperate with other groups interested in the legal control of the liquor business.

(3) We seek the elimination of the stimulus of private profit from the industry.

(4) We envisage no less a goal than the ultimate extermination of the traffic in intoxicants.

3. Be it resolved that the Council for Social Action on behalf of the General Council urge the Congress of the United States to pass at its next session a bill providing for the placing of Asiatic citizens upon the same quota basis as those of other nations; and urge our churches and their members to use all proper pressure on their representatives and senators to secure the passage of this bill.

HOLMAN SUPERIOR TEACHERS' BIBLES

Authorized Version—Self-Pronouncing      The Best Editions of the World's Best Book

For Adults, Teachers, Preachers, Students, and All Who Would Study the Word of God Intelligently

BDLO BLACK TYPE—COMPACT SIZE 4½x6¾ INCHES—WILL FIT THE COAT POCKET

Part page specimen of Holman Boldblack Type Bible

ST. MATTHEW, 5.      Christ's sermon on the mount.

13 And leaving Náz a-rèth, he came and dwelt in Cà-pèr'ng-ùrn, which is upon the sea coast, in the borders of Záb'u-lon and Nèph'tha-lim: 14 That it might be fulfilled	A. D. 31. CHAP. 4. Is. 9. 1, 2.	934 CHAPTER 5. 3 Who are blessed. 13 The disciples called the salt of the earth, and light of the world; Christ urgeth on them a good example, etc. AND seeing the multitudes, he went up into a moun-
---	--	--

THIS NEW HOLMAN TEACHERS' BIBLE, Pronouncing Text, Bold Black Type is a PRONOUNCED SUCCESS. The latest Bible with NEW HELPS that are quite comprehensive and consist of an Illustrated Bible Dictionary, Concordance and additional aids all under ONE ALPHABETICAL INDEX. Also Fine Maps on Coated Paper, and a specially prepared BIBLE READING COURSE, intended to stimulate and maintain interest in the Bible. Imported Bible paper is used to improve opacity and keep down bulk. By this means you get the benefit of full Biblical information without the physical discomfort of handling a heavy volume.

4612. French Morocco Leather, divinity circuit, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges.....	$4.00
4630. Same as 4612, with extra leather lined covers.....	4.75
THIN INDIA PAPER EDITION
With Helps as described above. Size 4½x6¾ inches. One inch in thickness
630X. Egyptian Morocco, divinity circuit, leather linings, red under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker.....	7.00
633X. Algerian Morocco, divinity circuit, leather lining to edge, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, extra quality binding.....	8.00

---

EXTRA LARGE PRINT TEACHERS' BIBLES

Large 8 Vo. Size—8x5½ inches—1600 Pages, including 400 pages of Bible Study Helps

Part Page Specimen of Print

Extra spacing between words and lines makes this Bible very easy to read.

ST. MATTHEW, 5.      Christ's sermon on the mount.

15 <sup>k</sup>The land of Záb'u-lon, and the land of Nèph'tha-lim, by the way of the sea, beyond Jòr'dan, Gál'i-lee of the Gén'tileş;	A. D. 31. Is. 9. 1, 2. Luke 2. 32. Mark 1. 14.	2 And he opened his mouth, and taught them, saying, 3 <sup>b</sup>Blessed are the poor in spirit: for their's is the kingdom of heaven.
---	--	---

CONTAINING COMPLETE HELPS TO BIBLE STUDY, INCLUDING ALL OF THE FOLLOWING FEATURES

A New Practical Course in Bible Reading, A Treasury of Biblical Information. The most carefully compiled, thorough and attractive form in which valuable Biblical information has ever been prepared. Illustrated Self-Pronouncing Bible Dictionary Containing 159 illustrations, concise definitions and textual references on nearly 50,000 subjects. A Practical Comparative Concordance, with nearly 50,000 references. Four Thousand Questions and Answers on the Old and New Testaments. A valuable Help to all Bible Readers.

4712. Divinity Circuit (overlapping covers), French Seal Leather, red under gold edges, silk head bands, and silk marker..	$5.00
812RL. Red Letter Teachers' Bible. The Words of Christ in the New Testament, Old Testament Passages alluded to by Christ, various prophecies relating to Christ in the Old Testament, etc., all PRINTED IN RED. Binding same as described above on 4712 and same large Self-Pronouncing type.....	6.00
733X. Holman India Paper, Genuine Morocco, leather lined, silk sewed, divinity circuit, round corners carmine under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker, same type and helps as above .....	10.65

All styles sent Postpaid at above prices—Thumb Index 50 cents extra ideals and our necessities. Nor am I ignorant that we can ever escape from our complicity in the sins of society until the social order is as much an exemplification of the mind of Christ as is the individual character of the holiest saint. To the building of that Christlike society, we must continue to devote our most disciplined intelligence, our loftiest idealism and our most sacrificial consecration.

IN A DAY OF REBUILDING.

(Continued from page 13.)

But I fear that in the past we have been builders who have performed only a part of our task. We have seen clearly the defects in the sturture which now houses the human race and have warned our fellows that if it is not remodeled it will inevitably fall and crush them. We have drawn blue-prints for the new edifice and cursed those who would not follow them. But we have not provided the materials from which alone the new habitation can be constructed. For the only material from which you can erect a Christlike society is Christlike men and women. If that material is lacking, all our blue-prints will be only tantalizing visions. But if that material is available in sufficient quantities, the building will inevitably go forward.

Nor do I know any means by which we can produce Christlike men and women save that redemptive communion with God which we call the Christian experience. Therefore, if our social gospel is ever to be anything save a frustrated hope, we must have a revival of that religion which leads men so to know God that they will love the things which he loves and hate the things which he hates. For the Gospel for our day cannot be content with a message which saves men only from their personal vices. Nor can it be content with a message which points to the Golden City without conferring upon needy souls the power to journey thither. The Gospel for this day of rebuilding must learn to combine social passion and spiritual dynamic as Christ combined them in his own life and ministry. When we have that kind of religion we shall be delivered from our palsyng bewilderment and march steadfastly toward that holy society which is the heart's desire of God.

For I wonder if our problem differs greatly in its essence from that which Jesus faced in his day. He also lived in a world which was drenched in blood, blackened by injustice and made crass and sodden by materialism. He also dreamed of that Kingdom wherein God's will should be done on earth as it is in heaven. In His day a bewildered and discouraged generation looked longingly at the same escape mechanisms which tempt us now.

There were Pharisees who found refuge in the culture of their personal piety and were unmoved by the sorrows of the less fortunate. But the Master could not go with them. Instead he spoke out against cruelty and injustice until vested interests silenced him by death. In that day also there were the zealots who would bring in the Kingdom by fire and sword. But the Master could not go with them for he knew the utter futility which lay at the end of that path. He went his own way, teaching men to know God until they loved the things which God loves and hated the things which he hates. Today the Pharisees and the Sealots are only names in history, but the Church of Christ still goes forward forever haunted by his dream, forever drinking of the springs whence came his strength. The Master's way of love and persuasion and spiritual regeneration may not offer the soft and easy peace of quietism nor stir our primitive fighting blood as does the call to revolution. But it is the only path which leads to the Kingdom of God. "It is the way the Master went. Shall not his servants tread it still?"

FAMILY ALTAR.

(Continued from page 12.)

SUNDAY.

"THE BIOGRAPHICAL CRAZE."

"Time will fail me if I tell of Gideon, Barak, Samson, Jephthah; of David and Samuel and the prophets."—Hebrews 11:32-40.

In these days of many unworthy and silly fads, it is good to have one most excellent craze, the very unexpected and profound interest in biography, a welcome relief from our previous absorption in fiction.

It would be a most happy event if this biographical craze could be turned toward the world's greatest biographies, those contained in the Bible. What lives nobler than those of Abraham, Joseph, Moses, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Amos, John the Baptist, John the Apostle, Peter, Paul, and the Life of Lives, that of our glorious Redeemer?

Let us not become so engrossed in secular biography as to neglect the crown of biographical writings.

Prayer—And as we read Thy Book, our Father, may we incorporate in our own living the heroism of these great men and women of old; and especially may we learn from the four biographies of Thy Son what Thy love is, and how to live worthily of it.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

ELON COLLEGE

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

South Entrance to the Campus

ELON COLLEGE, founded by the Christian Church in 1889, has fully justified the faith and hope of its founders during its 42 years of operation. Its graduates from the four-year course leading to a bachelor's degree, number 980, now living, 122 of whom are in the Christian Ministry and full-time Christian service. The majority of these are members of our own denomination. In addition, 449 are in educational work and are an active influence in the lay leadership of the Christian Church.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION BUILDING, and the definite religious atmosphere of the College, provide the very best facilities available for training for religious leadership, and offer the Church its finest opportunity to train the young people of the denomination to assume active leadership both in the ministry and laity of the local churches.

Address—

C. M. CANNON, Registrar

Elon College, - - - North Carolina

Home Atmosphere—Reasonable Rates—Clean Athletics—Christian Spirit

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom, as represented by the Congregational Christian Church.

BOARD OF EDITORS.

J. O. ATKINSON, D. D..... Editor
E. C. GILLETTE, D. D..... Associate
I. W. JOHNSON, D. D.... Contributing
ELISHA A. KING, D. D.... Contributing
J. T. KERNODLE.... Managing Editor

DEPARTMENTAL EDITORS.

H. S. HARDCASTLE... Sunday School
J. G. TRUITT, D. D..... Sermon
F. C. LESTER..... Young People
H. E. ROUNTREE..... Altar

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year .....$2.00
Six Months ..... 1.00

Trial Subscriptions: Five or more new subscriptions sent in at one time by pastor or president of any church organization, three months for 40c each.

Published Every Thursday at Richmond, Virginia, by the Central Publishing Company, Inc.

Entered as second-class matter at the Postoffice at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Change of Address: Be sure to give both old and new address when asking that your address be changed.

All news matter and items to be published in "The Sun" should be addressed to J. O. Atkinson, Editor, Elon College, N. C., and should reach him not later than Friday preceding date of publication. If more convenient, news from Congregational Churches may be sent to E. C. Gillette, Associate Editor, 117 W. Forsyth Street, Jacksonville, Fla. Emergency notices will be received at the Richmond Office up until Tuesday of week of publication.

All remittances for subscriptions, renewals, advertising, etc., books for review, and other matters of business should be addressed to J. T. Kernodle, Managing Editor, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond, Va.

Notices: Obituary and marriage notices, limited to 125 words, published free. All over 125 words, 1c a word, cash with notice. No notices should exceed 250 words.

Receipts: The change of label is your receipt for money paid. The label shows date of expiration, and change on label will appear the first or second issue of the month following renewal, provided it was received before the 25th. No other receipt will be sent unless requested. Please notify the Richmond Office if label is not changed as above.

OBITUARIES

HOLT.

Brother Eddie H. Holt died at his home near New Hill, N. C., on May 9, 1934, at the age of 60 years and 6 mos. Funeral and burial services were held at New Elam Church on the day following his death.

Surviving members of the immediate family are his wife, two daughters, Misses Blanche and Ruth, four sons, Bernest, Edgar, Clarence and Roy; one brother and two sisters.

In health he was a tireless contributor to the cause of the better life of those about him. Through the sufferings of a long siege of health impairment his patience, maintained sweetness of spirit, and undimmed hopefulness testified to that strange and sustaining power that comes to one in a long and loving walk with the Master.

We love his memory and pray for the bereaved.

BRITTON J. HOWARD.

ROUTH.

Hal C. Routh, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Routh, was born July 17, 1905 in Randolph County. Departed this life July 9, 1934, being aged 28 years, 11 months and 22 days.

He was a faithful member of Bennett Christian Church. He was much loved by a host of friends both in Randolph and Chatham Counties.

He came to his death very suddenly and unexpectedly, being shot by escaped prisoners. He is survived by his parents, one sister, Mrs. Ted Jones, and his wife who was before marriage Miss Nonnie Moffitt, and three small children.

Burial services were held at Pleasant Grove Christian Church, by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. C. Kenype, of Siler City, Rev. J. C. Kidd and Rev. Roy Phillips of Beaumont, N. C. An unusually large congregation sympathized with the grief stricken family and an abundance of beautiful flowers were placed about his grave.

May the Heavenly Father richly bless and comfort the bereaved.

T. J. GREEN.

BRITTLE.

Mary Sue Brittle the young and beloved wife of Rev. R. E. Brittle departed this life July 10 at Suffolk, Va., after a very brief illness. She is survived by her husband and infant son, Richie Parker Brittle, born June 30th, also two sisters and two brothers. She was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Parker of Nansemond, Va. She was educated in the Holland Public Schools and attended the State Teachers Colleges at Harrisonburg and Farmville, where she was prepared to teach in the public schools of the state. She taught seven successful terms in Nansemond County, six of them at Cypress Chapel where she met her future husband. On June 1, 1932 she was married to the Rev. R. E. Brittle, who was then pastor of the Cypress Chapel Christian Church, the ceremony being performed by Dr. W. D. Harward and Dr. W. M. Jay. She united with the Holland Christian Church at the age of 13 where she remained a member till 1933 when she transferred her membership to Cypress Chapel. It was a sad event for the writer, her former pastor, to conduct the funeral of this young and efficient pastor's wife at the very same altar, profuse with flowers, where he had assisted in joining her in holy wedlock just two years, one month and five days before.

Mrs. Brittle was not only a faithful and loving companion, but an ardent church worker with her husband, and particularly a successful and devoted worker with the young people who loved her dearly. The churches of Cypress Chapel, Bethlehem and Union (Southampton) will greatly miss her efficient services in their midst. May God bless Brother the active pallbearers The deacons of Brittle in his great loss and sustain him the pastorate and ladies of the Mission- ary Societies of the three Churches bore beloved than Brother Brittle in his field the gorgeous array of flowers to the grave.

The body was laid to rest in the Cypress Chapel cemetery. Funeral services were conducted by the writer assisted by Dr. N. G. Newman and Dr. I. W. Johnson. The ministers of the county were
W. M. JAY.
Let us work on! Work through all barrenness, nor count the lost. No toil is lost.—W. J. Linton.

PIEDMONT COLLEGE

Located in

"The Blue Ridge Highlands"

An accredited college with an enviable reputation for superior classroom instruction, and wholesome student life.

Fully recognized and accredited in its home State, and in such neighboring States as North Carolina, South Carolina, Alabama, Tennessee and others. Standard courses leading to the A. B. and B. S. degrees.

The Summer Term, continuing for six and nine weeks, affords opportunity for college and professional study and invigorating recreation.

From six to twelve hours of credit may be earned. Special courses in Elementary, Intermediate, High School and Rural Education. Public School Music and Art; School and Playground Games; Athletic Coaching.

For Fall Term or Summer Bulletin, write

PIEDMONT COLLEGE,
DEMOREST, GEORGIA.

Southern Seminary Foundation

(Successor to Atlanta Theological Seminary.)

AFFILIATED WITH

Vanderbilt University

The Foundation and the other Foundations that are affiliated with Vanderbilt University School of Religion comprise the only Interdenominational Theological School in the South. Through this affiliation the students enjoy the rights and privileges of Vanderbilt University.

DEGREES.

Candidates for degrees are required to have completed their college courses.

The degree of Bachelor of Divinity is offered to qualified students who complete the required courses.

Vanderbilt University also offers the degrees of Master of Arts and Doctor of Philosophy, in accordance with the regulations established in its several departments.

MORE THAN A SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY.

Because of our affiliation with Vanderbilt, our relations with other nearby colleges where our students can take courses without tuition, and the cooperation of the American Red Cross and other social agencies in the city, we prepare students for many types of Christian service.

For information write

WILLIAM JAMES CAMPBELL, President,
330 BUTTRICK HALL, VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY,
NASHVILLE, TENN.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

Representing the Southeast Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches.

IN ESSENTIALS, UNITY.

IN NON-ESSENTIALS, LIBERTY.

IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY.

VOLUME LXXXVI.

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, AUGUST 2, 1934.

NUMBER 31.

Government Lottery Established.—

The first government lottery to be established under the United States flag for many years, has recently been authorized in Puerto Rico. Certainly, it seems, this government could have given the Island vital assistance in combating tuberculosis without resorting to economic evils that will exploit their victims and further debase them.

"Liquor Buyers May Use Alias."—

So runs the head in a Virginia paper. In a court of justice to perjure oneself is criminal, but in buying liquor—it's different! "The board really isn't concerned" as to whether fictitious names are given. After all, it makes little difference where liquor is sold—it degrades buyer and seller alike. Lying isn't the greatest or the least of the evils it promotes. How long will the people of Virginia countenance this partnership in the liquor traffic?

Now It's Turn About.—

Anyone in business is familiar with the blanks that are from time to time sent out directly by banks or rating agencies, to their clients. Now comes a reversal of this process, and bank customers are sending questionnaires to banks. This is being done, we are told, so that the depositor "may, at any time, make its own analysis of the status of the depository bank." Of course, it is only the larger businesses that have attempted such a thing, among them being General Motors, the Texas Corporation, American Telephone & Telegraph, as well as others. The questionnaire has been sympathetically received and "many banks have voluntarily written long letters (in response of the request from General Motors, the latest to adopt the procedure), giving considerably more data than the form requires."

The Blue Eagle's Birthday.—

Yesterday, August 1st, was the Blue Eagle's first birthday. During the past year, many industries have been brought under its wings, and, now, practically 90 per cent of the business being done in the United States is being carried on under its "protective" shadow. The word protective is quoted advisedly, there being those who question its protection as well as those who loudly praise it. Heads of the NRA, in reviewing the accomplishments of their organization, point out that much has been accomplished toward bringing the country back to normal. Outside of Washington, NRA is in many places facing open rebellion. It seems likely from present indications that the President will call an extra session of Congress this fall to deal with questions that are continually arising in this connection, rather than wait till after election, when he may have a more difficult legislative branch of government to deal with.

Stratosphere Expedition Fails.—

The half-million dollars invested in "The Explorer," "went up in smoke" when this ill-fated stratosphere balloon, the world's largest, was wrecked without reaching a new altitude record during its 300-mile drift. The flight was sponsored by the National Geographic Society in connection with the United States Army Air Corps, and it had been hoped through it to reach new heights and to bring back valuable stratospheric data for the use of science. There were no fatalities in connection with the disaster, as the three passengers made safe landings with parachutes as its gondola plunged earthward. All of the precious instruments were destroyed with the exception of a valuable spectrograph, which floated to earth on a parachute. Many of the instruments lost were unique and can be reproduced only with difficulty. There was partial covery by insurance.

Can Farmers Learn the Lesson?—

Dirt farmers, according to statistics for 1933, paid themselves an average of a little over $200 in wages for that year, but earned nothing on an investment of approximately $28 billions. Yet financial institutions which had invested large sums in farm mortgages and had found themselves the unwilling owners of widely scattered farm properties had a much better story to tell. Strangely enough these farms showed a profit. $12 millions of Equitable Life Insurance farms, in the State of Iowa, after paying for the management of these farms, showed an average income of 3.35 per cent on the investment, or something better than the average yield of government securities. A few scattered farms in neighboring States showed a yield of 4.46 per cent, without benefit of AAA. Business Week, which is the authority for the above, thinks this "should give the Department of Agriculture something to think about."

The Poisoner, Too, Is Guilty.—

The trouble with the movies, deeply, fundamentally, has been that they have been operating on a wrong philosophy and attitude. Mr. DeMille, a producer, gave the case away in a recent statement when he defended filth and slush on the plea that the public had shown that that was what it wanted and would pay for. Mr. DeMille's practice may have been better than his creed, but that is the sort of cowardly whine and grovelling materialism against which Puritanism at its best, and Catholicism at its best, and Judaism at its best, are the courageous and proper protest. Is a man justified in handing out poison because somebody asks him for it and will pay for it? Incidentally the appeal has been the other way. By advertising, previews, and general ballyhoo, the movies have exploited sex and crime with all the allurements that could be held out to masses, who are as capable of being appealed to for evil as for good, and in whom response to these allurements has represented the down grade of life.—Advance.

She Plays in Her Last Picture.—

On Saturday of last week Marie Dressler passed on to the great beyond, after lying in a state of coma at Santa Barbara for the past three weeks. Old and young alike mourned the passing of this great actress who was known as "everybody's friend." Cancer cut short the career that led from poverty to the very pinnacle of screen success. Stricken with the dread disease over three years ago, she stuck to her work even at the cost of great pain, and many a smile on the face of the movie fan, has been paid for by her suffering. She starred in many screen successes, but possibly her characterization of "Tugboat Annie" was one of her best. Funeral services for the 62-year-old actress were held in the Kirk o' the Heather, and were said to be of the simplest kind. She was buried in Forest Lawn Memorial Park, Beverly Hills, Calif. At her request, her favorite hymn, "Abide With Me" was sung by Jeannette MacDonald, soprano. Just before she lost consciousness, Miss Dressler, was heard to ask: "I did put up a good fight, didn't I?" And she did.

Strikes and the A. F. L.—

The American Federation of Labor has been looked upon by many outsiders as the one conservative union organization of the United States. This seems, however, to be rapidly becoming a condition of the past as young radicals are pushing aside the more conservative labor leaders. The most glaring example of this is the San Francisco general strike, which was precipitated by these younger and inexperienced men "without any idea of what it would lead to or of its predestined failure." The conditions which are arising on every turn, and which many believe have been brought about by the policies of the present government, are said to be causing Washington much worry. And well they should, for "the sure sign of emergence from a depression" is not at this time helping to turn the indices of prosperity upward." During the first six months of the present year not less than 15 million work days were lost because of strikes, and during the month of June alone $5,000,000 was the lost pay toll to this "industrial weapon." July, with San Francisco, Minneapolis, and of dozen other disturbances, will probably show a strike-cost equivalent to the entire first six months of the year combined. Much could be done to eliminate strikes, if both labor and capital could be impressed sufficiently with the fact that no one has ever won a strike—no matter who received the decision.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

To hold fast upon God with one hand and to open wide the other to your neighbor—that is religion.—George MacDonald.

Every Sunday School and Endeavor Society in our Convention should have been with the 80 young people, including a dozen pastors, who met at Elon College last week for study, fellowship and recreation.

Dr. W. M. Jay, of our Holland Church, occupied the pulpit at First Church, Greensboro, Sunday, July 29th, the pastor, Dr. C. H. Rowland, having gone to dedicate the new church building, Christian Light, Harnett County, North Carolina, Rev. J. Lee Johnson, pastor.

From the very outset Christianity came forward with a spirit of universalism, by dint of which it laid hold of the entire life of man in all its functions, throughout its heights and depths, in all its feelings, thoughts, and actions. This guaranteed its triumph.—Adolph Harnack.

The crown of patience cannot be received when there has been no suffering. If thou refuseth to suffer, thou refuseth to be crowned; but if thou wishest to be crowned, thou must fight manfully and suffer patiently. Without labor, none can obtain rest; and without contending, there can be no conquest.—Thomas a Kempis.

The following sad news comes from Rev. C. E. Gerringer: The mother of Rev. Fred T. Wright died at his home in Waverly, Va., Saturday night after a long illness. The remains were carried to Rustberg, Va., her former home, where the funeral was held Monday. Mrs Wright was a most lovely woman, 77 years old, survived by several children, two sons in the ministry.

If self-denial be a condition of salvation, all that would be saved must make it a part of their ordinary life. If poverty of spirit be necessary, it must be the spirit and temper of every day of our lives. If we are to be in Christ new creatures we must show that we are to be so by having new ways of living in the world. If we are to follow Christ, it must be in our common way of spending every day.—Lillian Law.

There were a dozen ministers gathered at Elon College last week to hear Dr. Shelton of Portsmouth in his stimulating discussions of "The Minister," and to join in considering their common pastoral problems. It was good to be there. How exceedingly helpful and profitable it would be if all ministers of the Carolinas and Virginia could come together for a week each year for mutual exchange of ideas and problems.

The following from daily papers July 26th is of interest:

"Elon College, July 25.—The largest freshman class in five years has been registered at Elon College for the 46th fall term, according to announcement by C. M. Cannon, registrar.

"The student body, which will number approximately 350 students will be composed of young men and women from a large portion of eastern United States. More than 130 of this number will compose the freshman class. School opens for the freshmen September 4, while upperclassmen begin work September 6."

TREASURER OF ELON ALUMNI REPORTS.

A number of members of the Elon Alumni Association have been interested in seeing in the SUN a report of the treasurer, giving the information as to whether the Association has been successful in securing the $100 with which to award the two scholarships of $50 each voted by the Association. The books have been audited today by Rev. F. C. Lester, chairman of the Finance Committee, so I am giving this report herewith:

Receipts.

From former treasurer .....	$112.21
Dues collected .....	104.50
Banquet tickets sold .....	46.00
Payments from 1st Nat. Bank ..	12.58
	<hr/>
	$275.29

Disbursements.

Exp. for mailing 2 Alumni letters	19.73
Banquet plates, including complimentary .....	47.00
Scholarship .....	100.00
Alumni speakers' exp., one way..	15.00
Miscellaneous, banquet decorations and peanuts, telephone..	8.58
	<hr/>
	$190.31

Balance on hand .....$ 84.98

It will be noted that $100 was paid for scholarships, but please bear in mind that this came from the money collected the previous year and turned over to me by the former treasurer. You will therefore see that the balance of $84.98 which we have on hand is not sufficient to pay $100 for scholarships this year. If only a few of you who have not paid your dues of $1.00 would pay them now, you will know that this is contributing to the education of some fine boy or girl. All bills are paid, so the balance on hand will be devoted to the scholarship.

I am sure you would be interested in a comparison of the numbers and amounts of dues paid the last three years:

In 1932 53 members paid dues amounting to $105.00.

In 1933 60 members paid dues amounting to $120.00.

In 1934 102 members paid dues amounting to $105.50.

In 1932 and 1933 the dues were $2.00 a member. In 1934 the dues were reduced to $1.00. So, while the amount collected dropped, the number paying dues has almost doubled in two years, which is, I believe, an evidence of an increased interest in the Association. This is largely due to the knowledge that the dues are being used for a worthwhile purpose. The attendance at the banquet has also increased from 75 in 1932, and 76 in 1933, to 95 in 1934.

MRS. C. M. CANNON, Secretary-Treasurer.
Elon Alumni Association.

SLIGHTLY MIXED.

A bishop had gone to an outlying village to hold a confirmation service. As there was no means of getting back home the same day he had to stay at the parsonage for the night. Next morning, as the great man was late, the minister's wife called her one maid.

"Bridget," she said, "go up and knock quietly at the bishop's door; when he answers, say: 'My Lord, breakfast waits!'"

Then she listened to Bridget's clump, clump upstairs, and thump, thump at the bishop's door, and then, "My God, come to breakfast, it's waiting."—Birmingham (England) Weekly Post.

BELIEFS IN A STATE COLLEGE.

The following data and comment are from an editorial in the July Missionary Review of the World and are commended for serious consideration.

A professor in a state college recently sent us the results of a questionnaire answered by the same group of students at the close of each of the four years of their course. This questionnaire reveals some things about the influence of that college on the minds and characters of the students. The following are some of the revelations shown by the contrast at the end of the first and the fourth years of their course.

	Freshmen Per Cent	Seniors Per Cent
Belief in a personal God.....	84	60
Belief in evolution.....	15	72
Belief in Bible inspiration.....	75	35
Belief in Bible miracles.....	88	46
Belief in answers to prayer.....	85	65
Use tobacco .....	40	80
Approve of women smoking.....	17	54
Disapprove of gambling.....	62	26
Consider "petting" an evil.....	73	70
Think all Christians must be church members .....	83	35
Attend church regularly.....	70	27
Consider dancing harmful.....	50	8
Against Sunday movies, etc.....	60	77
Belief in pacifism .....	11	58

While these answers may not be typical of all colleges and universities, they show the general trend of modern education. Is it strange that only a small portion of graduates seem to put God first and are ready to offer their lives for sacrificial Christian service? Much of college life is taken up with sports, with humanistic philosophy and materialistic views of the universe. While many students have ideals of service for humanity, a large proportion seem to have as their chief ambition money getting. Comparatively few have learned to look for God's plan in their lives or listen to hear His call to Christlike living and service either at home or abroad. A very large proportion of the students for the ministry and the missionary volunteers come from the smaller denominational colleges.

But there are many of these Christian colleges and there are thousands of students who learn in them to see God at work in the universe and to seek His plan for their lives. Christian parents will do well to enroll their sons and daughters in the school of Christ which will prepare them for life.

CHRIST'S LAST BEATITUDE.

Jesus accepted the divine title and the attitude of worship implied and applied to him, and said to Thomas: "Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands; and reach hither thy hand, and thrust it into my side: and be not faithless, but believing. And Thomas answered and said unto him, My Lord and my God. Jesus saith unto him, Thomas, because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed: blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed." (John 20:27-29.) This is the last beatitude recorded by the gospel writers in the Gospels, and it corresponds very closely in spirit and substance, at least, with the first beatitude recorded in the Gospels: "And blessed is she that believed." (Luke 1:45.) This last beatitude repeats the first one, and sums up in itself all the other beatitudes—all of those found at the beginning of the Sermon on the Mount. We, those who are Christians, are not of those who have seen; hence, walk by faith, live by faith, and die by faith; therefore, happy recipients of this beatitude, if so be that we believe.—P. D. Wilmeth.

DID GOD SEND THE DEPRESSION?

By HERMON ELDREDGE.

Return unto me and I will return unto you, saith the Lord of hosts. But ye said, Wherein shall we return? Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say wherein have ye robbed Thee? In tithes and offerings. Ye are cursed with a curse; for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation. Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me not herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it.—Malachi 4:7-10.

Give and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom. For with the same measure that ye mete withal it shall be measured to you again.—Jesus to his disciples.—Luke 6:38.

The Bible is the history of a nation. One has called it "His Story of Israel" and it is God's story of that people. It is the story of how God dealt with one nation. It starts, after its introduction of eleven chapters in Genesis, with Abram and the beginnings of the Hebrew nation and carries through that family and its families to the tribes and the clans and the commonwealth and the kingdom and the Christ and the church and closes when that nation ceases to be a settled nation by the loss of its land and the fall of its capital, Jerusalem. Some have asked why the Bible stops there and the answer is that as God dealt with one nation so God will deal with any nation. The story of such a rise and fall of nations has been repeated too often in history to doubt it. Go to Egypt and Babylonia and Assyria and Greece and Rome and come down through the ages to the twentieth century and see nations begin in simple serving and sacrificing families and grow into numbers and wealth and power until they begin to say: "See great Babylon which I have built" or tell of that "set day" when King Herod "arrayed himself in royal apparel and sat on his throne and made an oration" and the people shouted "the voice of a god, and not of a man." Or that day when befuddled Germany cried: "Heil Hitler!" when hands were stained with blood and the church stood impotent because it had forgotten its God-promised power.

It is said that in the dark ages one of the popes showed a visitor the stored treasures of the church and said jocularly to him: "No longer can the church say with Peter, Silver and gold have I none." To which the visitor replied: "Nor can she say, 'Rise and walk.'" When we miserly hold or miserably spend God's good gifts for ourselves alone we have "robbed God" and can expect the consequences.

Despite all our antiquated theories the world is no longer a world of independent nations. That which Ghandi does in India, or Stalin in Russia or Dick Byrd at the South Pole can be known to us the day it happens and influences us for good or ill. In spite of all the misery and wretchedness and ignorance in the world today the Twentieth Century has been more blessed of God than any other century of history—except those years in which we have "robbed God" of our allegiance in awful war, or of our substance in the unprecedented prosperity of peace.

Let us take an illustration from our performances in peace in America. War has taken its toll and now peace and abused prosperity is taking its historic and prophetic way.

For the sake of making figures vivid and vital we take those which are nearest to us and which we can partly visualize although they are really beyond human comprehension. Millions and bil-ions are spoken of lightly these days but no one knows what they mean.

These figures were gathered by The American Consumer Market for 1929—the high tide of our prosperity when a president of the United States was prophesying still greater heights of prosperity which would bring new cars to the garage and more chicken to the tables of America.

For actual necessary living expenses the American people spent only one fourth of its annual income (24½%) while the other three-fourths were spent on:

1. Things absolutely harmful such as intoxicants, narcotics and tobacco.

2. Luxuries which might be given up without any great sacrifice, such as jewelry, cosmetics, candy, chewing gum, pleasure cars, soda water and soft drinks etc.

3. Expenditures "just for fun" which were at least semi-luxuries such as theatres, moving pictures, sports, etc.

For these luxuries and semi-luxuries and harmful things the American people spent in 1929 over twelve thousand million dollars while they gave to the church and all its works less than one twelfth of that amount. In other words, the Lord gave us over and above actual living expenses twelve thousand million dollars and spent eleven parts of that margin on things harmful or useless or "just for fun" to every one we spent for God's kingdom on earth. Was this fair? Was it honest—to say nothing about its being Christian? Let us not make rash statements about God and the depression but let us say that if we had a child and we gave him his living expenses and over and above that we gave him twelve dollars a week to do just as he wanted to do with and in time we found out that that child was spending eleven of the twelve dollars on harmful and useless and just-for-fun things and one dollar for good and God—how long would we continue to supply him with that twelve dollars a week?

Can we believe that God grew weary of our eleven thousand million useless, harmful, just-for-fun orgy and called a halt until we come to our senses.

In other words can we believe that the lines at the head of this article (Malachi 4:7-10 and Luke 6:38) are as true as when the prophet and the Master said them. This is not an attempt by the writer to answer but to ask whether or not we have "robbed God" and are suffering the consequences.

The following figures are from the report of The American Consumer Market for 1929—the height of our prosperity.

Drinks and narcotics . . . . .	$ 2,734,000,000
Smoking . . . . .	1,980,000,000
Jewelry and gadgets . . . . .	911,000,000
Cosmetics and personal adornment . . . . .	1,337,000,000
Confectionery and chewing gum . . . . .	666,000,000
Theaters and other amusements . . . . .	1,810,000,000
Private sports . . . . .	886,000,000
Foreign travel . . . . .	885,000,000
Phonographs . . . . .	109,000,000
Instruments and music . . . . .	90,000,000
Commercial sports . . . . .	221,000,000
Motor boats and yachts . . . . .	56,000,000
Radio . . . . .	889,000,000

Total . . . . . $12,573,000,000

Worry is evidence of an ill-controlled brain; it is merely a stupid waste of time in unpleasantness. If men and women practiced mental calisthenics as they do physical calisthenics, they would purge their brains of this foolishness.—Arnold Bennett.

PROGRAM.

EIGHTY-SIXTH SESSION
VIRGINIA VALLEY CENTRAL CONGREGATIONAL-CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE.

MAYLAND CHRISTIAN CHURCH,
AUGUST 8, 9, 1934.

Rev. B. J. Earp, Pastor, Harrisonburg, Va.

Wednesday—Morning Session.

- 10:00—Call to Order.
- Devotional Service—Rev. A. R. Van Cleave.
- 10:25—Enrollment.
- 10:35—Welcome Address—Mrs. Fannie May Layman.
- 10:45—Response—Alfred Dofflemyre.
- 10:50—Report of Program Committee.
- 11:00—Report of Executive Committee.
- 11:05—Miscellaneous Business—Appointment of Special Committees.
- 11:15—Report of Stewardship Secretary—Mrs. A. R. Van Cleave.
- 11:35—Annual Address—Rev. A. R. Van Cleave.
- 12:15—Adjournment for Dinner.

Wednesday—Afternoon Session.

- 1:45—Devotional Service—Rev. W. B. Fuller.
- 2:00—Report of Committee on Religious Literature—N. L. Morris, Chairman.
- 2:10—Address on "Our Publications"—Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Editor of The Christian Sun.
- 2:40—Report of Conference Mission Secretary—R. O. Rothgeb
- 3:00—Address, "Our Orphanage"—C. D. Johnston, Superintendent.
- 3:30—Report of Committee on Woman's Board—Mrs. A. W. Andes, Chairman.
- 3:45—Report of Committee on Evangelism—Alfred Dofflemyre, Chairman.
- 4:00—Adjournment.

Wednesday—Night Session.

- 8:00—Report of Director of Religious Education—K. B. Hook.
- Report of Committee on Sunday Schools and Christian Endeavor—R. O. Rothgeb, Chairman.
- Address—Dr. L. E. Smith.

Thursday—Morning Session.

- 9:30—Devotional Service—Dr M. L. Weekley.
- 9:50—Roll Call and Reading of Minutes.
- 10:00—Report of Committee on Education—Rev. A. W. Andes, Chairman.
- 10:15—Address on Education—Dr. L. E. Smith, President of Elon College.
- 10:45—Conference Missionary Association.
- 11:05—Address—Dr. S. C. Harrell, President of Southern Christian Convention.
- 11:40—Report of Committee on Foreign Missions—Miss Verdie Showalter, Chairman.
- 11:50—Address on Missions—Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Mission Secretary.
- 12:25—Report of Treasurer—Samuel Earman.
- 12:30—Adjournment for Dinner.

Thursday—Afternoon Session.

- 1:45—Devotional Service—Wm. J. Andes.
- 2:00—Report of Committee on Social Service—J. C. Bradford, Chairman.
- 2:10—Report of Committee on Home Missions—W. C. Wampler, Chairman.
- 2:25—Address—Dr. S. C. Harrell
- 2:55—Report of Committee on Christian Union—R. L. Ettl, Chairman.
- 3:05—Report of Committee on Apportionments—R. Roy Hosaflook, Chairman.
- 3:15—Miscellaneous Business.
- 4:00—Adjournment.

E-D-I-T-O-R-I-A-L

EDITOR

J. O. ATKINSON, ELON COLLEGE, N. C.

ASSOCIATE EDITOR

E. C. GILLETTE

117 W. Forsyth Street, Jacksonville, Fla.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS

I. W. JOHNSON      ELISHA A. KING

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

MISSIONS—A PASSION.

There are many pastors, as well as people, who regard Missions as a mere benevolence. Do not these pastors and people ignore their dictionary, misinterpret their Bible and, in doing so, fail to comprehend both the motive and meaning of Missions? Any good dictionary would reveal the fundamental meaning of Missions as "the act of sending, or the state of being sent with authority as minister or agent for some special duty or negotiation," which in the case of an organized church usually means, "the sending of one called a missionary to carry the gospel." There is no implication of benevolence in an act like that.

And as to our high Commission, are we to understand that our Lord was simply requesting us to be benevolent, kindly disposed, humanly interested, when He said: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel; and, lo, I am with you unto the end?" Are we to understand that it was a Command or a Commission to be benevolent merely when our risen Lord, assembled together with his disciples, said: "But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you; and ye shall be witnesses unto me, both in Jerusalem and in all Judea and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth?" In that act was our Lord requesting merely a benevolent attitude? If so, why did He not use language to indicate as much and tell His disciples to go out everywhere and be kind and considerate and gracious and generous, and thus establish His kingdom on the earth?

Are we to understand that Jonah, of the Old Testament, and Paul, of the New, two of the leading missionary lights of the world, went out, or were sent out, under the impulse of benevolence, a kindly feeling for other folks, an indulgent attitude that would simply hold out a helpful hand to those whom they met? Would such an attitude have carried these men into the deep, compelled them, even against their stubborn and rebellious wills, to yield and to hazard their very lives—just for the sake of being kind and benevolent and helpful to some individuals around about them?

Both Jonah and Paul, William Carey, David Livingstone and the rest of the long line of missionary heroes had within them a passion, a zeal that swept them into full fire and caused them to risk all, to dare all and to do all, that they might share with others, not their feeling of benevolence, but the love of their Lord which was able to save to the uttermost. Missions are a passion, a motive, a desire, whose power and depths and meaning no sort of benevolence can account for. Benevolences will flow as a living stream out of such a passion, such a desire and such a zeal, but to confuse benevolence with Missions is to declare that the stream is the fountain.

Our Lord instituted Missions that He might create in the world a right attitude on the part of men and women everywhere—first of all, to their God, and then to their fellowman. It is out of our love to God that we give Him the allegiance of our whole heart, and then out of that abundance of divine love as we share it with others we come to love our neighbors as ourselves. We will never and can never learn to love our neighbors as ourselves until, first of all, we have learned to love God with all our heart, soul and strength.

J. O. A.

DWELL DEEP.

The Phophet Jeremiah used these words and the chaplain of our Oberlin Convention re-emphasized them to all who heard him. The words are more easily read or heard than realized. We are having a hard time now trying to "dwell deep." Our heads are in a whirl. We can neither think straight nor clearly. Our brains are befogged. Ten minutes with the front page of the morning paper these days will suffice to upset the mental poise and the moral equilibrium of the whole day. Federal officers shot to death a notorious outlaw, and he died writhing in his own blood as he caused scores of others to die, defiant of law and order, a heartless and lawless monster to the last. The morning papers have held him up in all the hideous details of his death till the heart is sick and the mind is cloudy.

The drought in the far West, with its unbearable heat, is overcoming hundreds of individuals and sending many of them to an untimely death, while vegetation is burned up and cattle in thousands perish for food and drink.

Austria, with an assassin's hand, murders its ruler. Civil war breaks out. Hundreds are killed.

The dictator of Italy calls out thousands of troops, and the borders of Austria are bristling with the weapons of war and the instruments of death, while Germany threatens and arms and prepares.

Strikes are multiplied and thousands of laborers walk out of factories and leave labor and employment behind.

How can we think in such a time? How may we keep sane and maintain poise?

Our only hope is in the words of Jeremiah, "Dwell Deep." There are foundations that are not shaken. There is a secure place where one may abide and not fear. Above the excitement, the turmoil and the strife come the words of the Psalmist:—"Commit thy way unto the Lord, trust also in Him; and He shall bring it to pass. Rest in the Lord and wait patiently for Him." "Dwell Deep."

J. O. A.

TWO FUNDAMENTALS.

There are some things that cannot be swept away. They are foundational. Paul was writing of this to the Church at Corinth when he said:—"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." Man may do the building and his building may be destroyed, but God has laid certain foundations, and these cannot be destroyed. This writer wonders if our missionaries, who are out in the heat of the battle where the conflict is furious and constant, will not have to recover our faith in the fundamentals, and, in doing so, reconcile fundamentalists and liberalists. Some one has remarked that the avowed fundamentalists dig deep but do not dig widely; liberalists spread out so widely that they dig to little depths, if any at all. There are certain fundamental tasks, and the Christian Church wherever planted in the world should face and confide in these tasks. Julius Richter, in his recent volume, "World Dominion," points out these tasks in a very vigorous manner which true Christians everywhere, preachers and laymen, should hear and heed:

"It is important that we bear in mind the two fundamental tasks of missionary work: the delivery of the Gospel message to the non-Christian world and the founding of churches. . . . The Church, it must be remembered, is not only the bearer of the Gospel message, she is also the form in which the sovereignty of God operates organically in this age. She is, on this account, a peculiar spiritual body, permeated and governed by the Spirit of God and of Christ."

Many preachers, occupying pulpits, often overlook, no doubt, the vital fact that the Church is "the form in which the sovereignty of God operates in this age." On this account, the Church is "a peculiar spiritual body, permeated and governed by the Spirit of God and her Christ." On the one hand, there are those who feel that if the Church is governed by and cultivates a certain spirit of piety, long-facedness and "holier than thou" attitude, it has served its purpose. On the other hand, there are those who feel that if the Church is a benevolent society, or a friendly group, or a charitable club, it is fulfilling its destiny. The Apostle Paul did not agree with either attitude, when he declared to the Colossians that the Christ "is the head of the body, the church: who is the beginning, the firstborn from the dead; that in all things he might have the preeminence." That the church is fulfilling its function when it delivers the gospel message, the power of God, to the salvation of souls, and, in addition to bearing this message, recognizes and exemplifies the fact that it is "a peculiar spiritual body, permeated and governed by the Spirit of God and of Christ." Our Lord gave the very heart, soul and power of His gospel, His life and His resurrection to His disciples (the future church) when He said: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." If the church had been busy in carrying out this command of her Lord, it would long since have discovered that His promise was verified: "Lo, I am with you, even unto the end." His personal presence and power are promised in the church and through the church when and as it remembers and obeys its Sovereign Lord and His saving gospel.

J. O. A.

We see farther than Augustine saw. We see that the church was not meant by her founder to remain outside, and hostile to society, but to permeate it, and, it may even be, in the end to absorb it.—William Holden Hutton.

A SAINT IN THE SLUMS OF JAPAN.

By W. P. NAIRNE.

(Toyohiko Kagawa has written a book, CHRIST AND JAPAN (N. Y., Friendship Press, $1) to interpret Japan to the youth of America. It is considered one of Kagawa's best books and the Editors are sure that many young people will wish to read it after they have read Mr. Nairne's story.)

Twenty-odd years ago, just the dusk was falling one spring evening over Kobe in Japan, and the street lamps cast their glow in the ash-colored roadway, a small youth, with delicate features, might have been standing at the lighted windows of a large office, watching the employees come and go. He was the nephew and heir of the owner, and his name was Toyohiko Kagawa.

Suddenly a ragged little boy hobbled past him as fast as sandals several sizes too large would allow. Close on his heels followed an older lad. As the two ran, Toyohiko noticed that the older boy gave the younger one a push and sent him sprawling on the roadway. He set up a loud howl when he discovered that the rice he was carrying was scattered all over the place, while his tormentor made off and disappeared in the darkness. In a few seconds Toyohiko was bending beside the boy striving to gather the grains of rice from the muddy road.

"Won't my father be mad with me when I get home," wailed the child.

"And where is your home?" asked Kagawa.

"Over there," sobbed the boy as he nodded in the direction of Shinkawa, the slum district of Kobe.

"Then I shall come with you and tell your father it was not your fault."

The strangely assorted pair kept pace along the lighted streets. On they went till they entered a dark winding alley, where the houses were so low and small that they seemed no bigger than the entrance to an ordinary dwelling. Rough, fierce-looking men eyed them suspiciously, and untidy women in ragged kimonos watched them from the doorways. Toyohiko had never been in such a dismal place before; he started involuntarily as the sound of quarreling came from one side of the street, and a shrieking woman fled across the roadway, closely followed by a man with uplifted knife. On and on his childish guide led, through a maze of filth and squalor that ever seemed to deepen, until he brought him to a single room, overcrowded with the men and women already there. Toyohiko judged that the man who lay in a corner beneath a tattered quilt was the boy's father, and a wave of pity swept over him when he learned that he was a helpless cripple through an accident sustained while at his work on the railway. The mother toiled from morning till night, winding spools for the weaving factory, and out of her scanty earnings kept the home going.

Toyohiko told how the child's accident had happened. He would gladly have paid for a fresh supply of rice but he had not a single sen on him.

Sad at heart he came away. He was very young and tenderhearted, and greatly astonished that people should be living such hard lives within a mile or so of his own luxurious home. "I will be a Christian pastor," he repeated his secret resolution to himself. "I will go down to the Shinkawa slums and help the people there."

But how Kagawa was to realize that ambition he knew not. The first step, however, was clear; he must tell his uncle what he intended to be, that uncle who was a stern old Buddhist.

An hour later he came into his uncle's presence. He bowed politely: "I hope I have your favor, Uncle."

"You do little to merit my favor, Toyohiko," he said severely. "You are late again."

Toyohiko hung his head. "I would have been here earlier but I waited to help a little boy who was very badly treated by an older one. He was so frightened that I went with him to his home at Shinkawa."

"At Shinkawa!" exclaimed the uncle angrily. "You, a Kagawa, have been to the Shinkawa slums! Never go there again. It is no place for such as you. The people there are not your people. Remember you are a gentleman and will one day, I trust, be head of a great business."

"But I don't want to be head of a great business, Uncle," replied Toyohiko, summoning up his courage.

"Then, pray, what do you want to be?"

"I want to become a Christian pastor."

If the charcoal brazier had overturned at that moment Toyohiko's uncle could not have been more surprised. He threw the book aside and rose to his feet.

"What insolence is this?" he demanded. "Do you realize the dishonor that such a thing would bring upon your family?"

"It is an honorable calling, Uncle."

"Are you mad, boy? I say it is dishonorable, and if that is your plan, you are no longer a nephew of mine, nor shall I keep under my roof so ungrateful a child. Begone, and never let your shadow darken my door again."

Toyohiko was trembling and conflicting emotions tugged at his heart-strings. He looked into his uncle's eyes, blazing with anger, and read in them unrelenting determination. There was nothing more to be said. The die was cast now, and all that remained for Toyohiko was to gather together his few personal belongings and fare forth on his unknown way.

Beneath the single lamp of the alley a small crowd stood listening to a pale-faced young man, whose eager tones and flashing eyes reflected the earnestness with which he pleaded for the acceptance of his message. It was Toyohiko Kagawa, now in his twenty-second year, and about to be ordained as a Christian minister. In recent months he had often come to Shinkawa and had preached at the street corners, but the result had been disappointing. A few had made friendly advances towards him, but the bulk of his hearers listened for a time out of curiosity, and then walked away.

He felt that if he were to be of any assistance to the hopeless and the downtrodden of the Shinkawa slums, he must get to know their temptations, and learn the hardships of their everyday life. And to accomplish that, there was only one satisfactory way: he must himself live among the people he sought to help.

He had finished his address and had just announced the final hymn when he caught sight of Ueki, a friend of his waiting impatiently on the outskirts of the little crowd. Presently Ueki came forward and pulled at the loose sleeve of Toyohiko's kimono.

"Teacher," he said in a whisper, "I have got a house for you."

Kagawa's eyes danced with joy.

"Really!" he cried, "where is it?"

"In Kitahon-machi. You remember my telling you about some one who was murdered there last year? It was in that house and no one will live there because they say that the dead man's ghost haunts it."

Such a tale had no terrors for Toyohiko. The house was one of a long row and consisted of two small rooms, both inconceivably dirty, and in a state of disrepair. It was not an inviting abode, but Toyohiko was only too glad to get any place where he might begin his work.

Toyohiko, my son, this plan of yours does more credit to your heart than your head." It was a missionary friend who spoke. Kagawa had just told him of his determination to take up his abode in the slums.

"I don't want to rub it in," continued the missionary, "but you know you are anything but a strong man and the doctors have told you that your lungs are affected. Humanly speaking, it looks as if you were signing your death warrant by going to live in a disease-infested slum."

"Ah," said Kagawa with a smile, "humanly speaking perhaps you are right. But to me this is a call from my Master. I have no fear for myself; my only fear is that I may not do all I wish."

"Promise me, you will take care of yourself. Don't give everything away as is your wont, or some fine morning you will find yourself without a quilt to cover you, and not a sen left to buy a meal."

And thus it happened that one afternoon a few days later Toyohiko packed all his belongings in a handcart and set out for his new home in the Shinkawa slums. Ueki had preceded him and had the house cleaned and swept.

The news of Toyohiko's arrival soon spread and visitors began to arrive. Toyohiko made them welcome, but he was rather dismayed to find they all wished to take up their abode with him. A gambler, a thief, and a beggar, almost blind, were among those that desired to be his companions. "Isn't Christianity a religion for helping people," they urged. That night he shared his coverlet with the dirty beggar, and planned for a fairer Shinkawa.

A pile of letters lay on the desk. Toyohiko Kagawa read them through and then sat down in thought. They came from many cities and even lands beyond the sea. He was no longer unknown and despised, for fame had come knocking at his door; through his books the world had learned of the wonderful things he had done in Shinkawa. There were the schools he had opened, the clean, healthy lodging-houses he had established, the factory he had erected, and the labor unions he had founded. Above all there was his brave unselfish life and his fearless preaching of Christ's gospel. Everywhere men were anxious to hear of these things and urged him to leave his work in Shinkawa to others and go where he might have wider opportunities. These many letters were full of tempting offers, and Kagawa sat perplexed as to where his duty lay.

Outside there was the noise of excited voices. It was a time of great unrest in Shinkawa. Men were talking of strikes and violent action. Kagawa saw signs of the coming storm, when his voice would be needed to still angry passions. He pushed the letters aside and bent his head in prayer. Quietly he rose and paced the length of his tiny room. His choice was made. "With God's help," he said firmly, "I shall live and die in Shinkawa."

Man has no right to live unless he glorifies God. To this end he was given being, and his failure forfeits his right. Many seem to feel that they are privileged characters, and are at liberty to seek their own pleasure. They feel resentful if their Maker doesn't keep them supplied with all their wants, the which they use contrary to his honor and in opposition to his works and workers. There is every reason why men should live for God, and not one to justify a life lived for self.—G. F. Gibbs,

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

An old menace in a new form has been located in Suffolk. It is located in a beautiful building owned by the city. Two state highways meet at its doors. It is in the principal business center where people from the city and country districts may easily and conveniently support its program and purchase its wares. Reference is made to the state owned liquor store—formerly called a dispensary.

Attention is called to this business, not for the purpose of advertising the goods to be sold, but to warn against the physical and moral danger of supporting this institution. The national government and the State of Virginia, under the leadership of the Democratic party, have made it possible for this dangerous business to be legally located in our midst. Other cities and communities in Virginia, as well as in other parts of the country, are facing the same danger.

There are two elements, in the present method of handling the sale of liquor, which should be clearly brought to the attention of the christian people of our country. The first is the fact that the sale and use of liquor as a beverage has been legal. Many people do not discriminate between the laws of God and the laws of legislatures and Congress. For example a state legislature can legalize murder, or stealing, or robbery, or adultery or any other crime which might be mentioned. But the voice of the people is not the voice of God. There are certain moral questions involved in the sale and use of alcoholic liquors, as a beverage, which cannot be repealed or submerged. The Bible is the source of authority for christian people, on moral questions. It is against the use of liquor as a beverage. State legislatures cannot repeal the mandates of this Book, or rightly legalize the things which the Bible condemns concerning this business. It is as unsafe to disregard these fundamental principles in morals as to disregard the dangers of natural laws by plunging into the surging waters of Niagara.

The effort to reform the business constitutes the second danger. Liquor stores are to be located in the best part of the city. The managers require finely appointed fixtures. The place must appear clean and inviting. The prevailing idea is to lift the business to the high level of respectability. The scheme involves putting the sale of liquor on a par with the sale of dry goods and groceries, and the drinking of liquor on the same basis as lemonade.

The young people will be influenced by these elements in the present liquor movement. Is a thing right because it is legal? Is an act right because some political leaders and newspapers claim it is respectable?

This writer does not believe that the church, as an organization, has any authority to assume or suggest control of state and national government. Church and state are separate in this country. They should not be one. It is the function of the church to teach and declare truth. Truth will make men free. In the present moral, political and spiritual upheaval the church should maintain its poise and be true to its fundamental mission. Teaching the truth is more powerful, in the end, than abuse and political trickery. The effort to abolish the sale and use of liquor as a beverage is not futile. Fairminded teaching and preaching will win its victory. Fifteen years of legalized liquor drinking, under the blighting delusion of respectability, will draw a red line of human blood across the land of the brave and the home of the free. The youth who are deceived and deluded by the present pernicious propaganda of the liquor interests, will then cry: "Who shall deliver us from the body of this death?" The church will come to the rescue, as it always comes. Begin that rescue today. I. W. JOHNSON.

ELON COLLEGE ACTIVITIES.

Elon College is a church school, owned and operated by the Congregational-Christian Church in the South. Its primary function is christian education. It seeks to give the student the best in intellectual training under moral and religious influences. We endeavor to train young people for success in all lines of endeavor. Our courses are so arranged that we give special advantages to all students preparing for the ministry and active christian service in any branch of the church. However, the larger percentage of our graduates enter other professions; that is, they practice law, business, etc. But even so, they have had the advantage of religious instruction and a wholesome atmosphere to be found on our campus. These they find to be most valuable as they launch out into life.

Our regular college year closed June 1st. Following commencement, we had a very successful summer school. During the summer school period, the Presbytery of Alamance County conducted a training school at Elon for christian workers. This had an unusually large attendance and a very fine program.

The Leadership Training School of the Congregational-Christian Church is now in session. We have a very fine group of young people here. The faculty for the summer school is unusually good. We are glad to welcome to our campus for the first time Dr. Charles Eldred Shelton, pastor of the Congregational Church, Portsmouth, Va. Dr. Shelton was, for a number of years, president of Simpson College in Iowa. He is well informed and entirely capable of rendering any service which he may consent to do. We are always glad to have these young people come to Elon. We want them to feel that they have a hearty welcome and that the college and all here are at their disposal. We also want the church at large to feel that the college belongs to them, that they have a right to come for any and all meetings that they may desire. Rev. F. C. Lester, a member of the Board of Christian Education of the Southern Convention, is Dean of the school. We are always glad to have Lester here. He is greatly interested in the college and in the entire church program.

This year, in connection with the Leadership Training School, we have had a pastor's conference. Among the pastors attending are W. T. Scott, H. S. Hardcastle, J. E. McCauley, W. M. Jay, R. L. House, Charles Eldred Shelton, F. C. Lester, J. Everette Neese, F. Erwin Hyde, and others. This part of the program will be enlarged and receive greater emphasis in next year's school.

We are glad to have had ministers, young people, and friends visit the college. We hope they will come again. The school closes with the services Sunday morning.

Already the business office has a force busy, keeping the campus in order and cleaning and repairing all buildings, furniture and fixtures. Our house will be in good order for the opening of the fall term September 4th. We have a beautiful plant at Elon College, and it should not be idle at any time during the year except to make necessary repairs and to clean the buildings and to set them in order for the aggressive work that we are constantly doing.

My dear reader, will you please be reminded that school opens September 4th, and, further, that we need your cooperation to influence other young men and young women that they may share in the unusual and wholesome advantages at Elon College? Your influence will count much in helping to increase our enrollment. Won't you write the office and send the names of some young people in whom you are interested and whom you would like to have attend Elon College?

L. E. SMITH.

FROM JERUSALEM.

My dear Dr. Atkinson:

In compliance with your request, and of my own desire to let readers of THE SUN who might be interested, know something of my experiences, I am giving a few events and experiences so far.

We sailed from New York at 12:00 M. on Sat., June 23rd, by S. S. Rex, of the Italian lines. We averaged more than 600 miles a day over smooth sea, landing at Naples, Italy on Sat., July 30th, at 10:30 A. M. We then went to the Continental Hotel for lunch and rushed to the train for a trip to the ancient city of Pompeii, in ruins since 79 A. D.—said to be the most wicked city of its day. We spent the evening viewing the ruins and traversing the volcanic area of Vesuvius, which while we were there was belching forth its smoke and its stream of lava, though small, could be seen by night gliding down the crest.

Naples is a city of a million people and one seems to meet the entire population every time one goes into the business sections—for the streets are narrow in many places and traffic is always heavy. We were impressed by the numerous horse-drawn carriages, donkey carts with what seemed to be truck loads of all sorts of materials—yet being drawn by one donkey—and the automobiles, truck and street cars—all going to a fire with horns of all tones and sorts blowing frantically for everyone else to get out of the way. It was a great experience, but hard on one's nerves.

We left Naples on Sunday for Alexandria, Egypt. It was a clear, calm day and we enjoyed the sea shore cities of Southern Italy and Sicily, which, with the coming of night, were a continuous stream of lights marking the shore line. We were on board the S. S. Esperia, not so large a vessel as the Rex, but it moved quietly thru the waters of the Mediterranean Sea. We landed in Alexandria on July 3rd, about 5:30 P. M., and boarded a train immediately for Cairo, arriving there a few hours later.

In Cairo we saw, and were conducted thru, the famous Museum, about which space will not permit writing. We went later in the day to the Pyramids, to ancient Memphis and into the tombs of the kings. We then went by camel about three miles further into the desert where we enjoyed a dinner of well prepared food and camped for the night. In early morning we came by camel down the Desert Mountain and back to Cairo.

We left Cairo by train on the evening of July 5th for an over night trip to Jerusalem, changing trains at El Cantara, where we crossed the Suez Canal into Palestine.

We arrived in Jerusalem on the morning of July 6th. Interests here are too great to write of now. It is the realization of a life dream, from which I hope to greatly enrich my ministry.

I am well and happy in the effort.

J. H. DOLLAR.

AN ADDRESS.

By CRUMP J. STRICKLAND.

[Given over Radio Station WTAR, July 14th, in his, "Your Friendly Adviser" program.—J. G. T.]

Here is a part of a long letter received from a lady who writes, "The belief that we can have, do or be anything we want, if we desire it sincerely enough and work toward that end is being stressed so widely now-a-days. I have that faith, but we also know that God grants only what is best for us, in an earnest desire for recognition of a talent, better breaks in a business way, funds to insure the comforts of loved dependents.

"How are we to know if the solution we have definitely in our thoughts—the thing we are really desiring—will be the best thing according to God's plan for us? I am perhaps not making myself clear, but when one desires and desires, with faith and prayer, and the desire is not granted, is there a time to give up, with the understanding that it must not be God's will to grant the prayer?"

Answer.—

My friend, first you say that you have the faith, and you also say that you know that God grants only that which is best for you. Then may I ask you a few questions, which I want you to answer honestly, not to me, but to yourself. Do you sincerely believe that it is best for you to always get just what you want? Do you really think that the things for which you ask will do you and the world the most good? Is there a selfish motive in your desires? I am going to let you answer these question for yourself, for deep down in your own heart you know the answers.

I am not saying that you should not have the things for which you ask, but I am wondering if you are desiring those things for your own selfish enjoyments and are expecting the Creator to give them to you for that purpose? Or do you want them for the good of all mankind?

Frankly, I say that I believe most people can get whatever they want, providing they are willing to pay the price for it, and I know of no reason why you should not have a recognized talent but it is up to you to fertilize whatever talent you do have and make it grow into whatever direction you desire. Let me suppose that you have a good voice. Then are you willing to use for the good of mankind and the glory of God? Or do you want to keep it for the people who will pay you the highest price?

Next, regarding funds with which to insure comforts of loved ones. I do not believe there is a statement in the whole Bible truer than that found in Mal. 3:8-10 regarding the subject of material things. Let me read it. "Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me, but ye say, wherein have we robbed Thee? And the answer comes back, In tithes and offerings. Ye are cursed with a curse, for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation. Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me herewith, saith the Lord of Host, if I will not open the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

Now, may I say unto you truthfully that I have many friends who practice tithing, and I do not know a single one, no not one, who has suffered in the least for the necessities of life during these so-called hard times, and I know many of them have more material things today than they ever had before.

I have enquired over a dozen different states for the man who has given a tenth of his income to the work of the Lord and has suffered for the necessities of life after having done so, but I have found none, and if there is such a person listening to me today, I would be very glad to know of it. I am not speaking of the person who donates a nickle here and a dime there and claims to be returning a tenth of his income unto the Lord, but I am speaking of the person who not only gives the full tenth but who also gives his love and his service along with it. And now may I ask,—Are you doing that with whatever amount you now receive?

But passing along to another part of your letter, I believe most of the things mentioned can be obtained by just plainly working for them, and yet, I have faith enough in the Creator to believe that He is not only able but is willing to help each of us obtain that which we need. In fact, He promises to supply our every need, but He does not promise to supply our every want. If He did supply our wants, I fear this would be a terrible world in which to live.

Now as to your thought on knowing when our desires fit in with God's plan: may I say this; I have found the teachings of the Bible to be much more practical than most of us are willing to believe, and I am speaking from personal experiences as well as from personal observation. Few of us though, are willing to accept the principles of the Bible just as they are. We like to pick out a verse here and another one there and say we believe them, but because some other statement "steps on our toes" we refuse to believe it.

But getting back to your question of knowing when our plans fit in with the plan of God, may I say that if we carefully study His word, we are following the best route in learning what He would have us do, and I believe that if we sincerely study it, and try to live according to its complete teaching without regard for selfish desires or wants, we will be able to find the answer within our own hearts.

And now to the last part of your letter; may I say that I do not believe in giving up any job that seems worthwhile: "Give to the world the best that you have, and the best will come back to you." On the other hand, we shouldn't spend a lifetime trying to get something, or to do something that we really do not feel is for the best. Neither should we depend upon our Creator to give us that for which we are not willing to work.

And may I say, in conclusion, "Waiting upon God" does not mean sitting with our hands folded expecting Him to fill our every desire. Praying with the spirit of "Oh Lord, take care of me and my house, and let the devil take care of the rest," is a foolish way in which to pray.

OXFORD BIBLES for EVERY NEED

"The Oxford Bible is the Bible par excellence of the world"

THE HOME BIBLE

A Family Bible in Handy Size

An extra large type Oxford Text Bible, containing also, a family register and 12 beautifully colored maps. Size 9 x 5 1/2 inches.

Specimen of Type

16 The LORD is King for ever and ever: the heathen are perished out

- Nos. 01600 Superior Cloth, round corners and red edges $2.75; 01603 French Morocco, limp, round corners, red under gold edges, head-band, book-mark $4.75

The JUNIOR'S Bible

Self-Pronouncing

With 4,000 Questions and Answers, carefully selected "Aids to Bible Study," 16 beautifully colored and 15 black full-page illustrations, 6 colored maps and a presentation page. Children may readily pronounce correctly difficult Scripture names, as this Bible is self-pronouncing. Size 7 x 4 3/4 x 1 1/4 inches.

Type in Junior's Bible: 2 Take the sum of all the of the children of Is'ra-el, years old and upward, thro

- No. 1815 French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges, headbands and book-mark. Make some child happy with one of these fine Bibles $2.95

Child's ILLUSTRATED Bible

The beautifully colored illustrations in this new Bible are a delight to the children. It has clear, readable type and yet it measures only 5 1/2 x 3 3/4 inches.

Specimen of Type

My soul length, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the LORD: my heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God. Mercy and truth gathered together; righteousness kissed each other. Truth shall spring

- No. 02112 French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, gold edges $2.50

Pocket REFERENCE Bible

Has over 50,000 center column references. Measures only 6 1/4 x 4 5/8 inches. (A splendid gift for a young lady.)

Specimen of Type

Behold, O God our shield, and look upon the face of thine anointed. For a day in thy courts is better than a year in any other place.

- No. 07528x French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges $3.25

Concordance Edition

Same size and type as No. 07528x, but with a Concordance, subject index and dictionary of Scripture names. An excellent edition for students and Christian workers No. 03272x $5.00

OUR LEADER

Oxford Concordance Bible

Self-Pronouncing

This beautiful Oxford India paper edition is indeed the ideal Bible for the student, preacher and evangelist. Each proper name and difficult word is divided into syllables and accented, and though printed with large clear type, the volume measures only 8 1/2 x 5 1/2 x 1 5/16 inches.

Specimen of Type: 89 Jê-hôy'-â-chîn was 6 years old when he began t

No. 03671x. Fine Grain Morocco leather, overlapping cover, leather lined to edge, silk round corners, red under gold edges, silk

hear

A UNIQUE GIFT BIBLE

With Basket Weave Binding

The Antique brown calf leather binding has a basket-weave grain, and button clasp. Has overlapping cover, art silk lined, with red under gold edges. With references. Printed on Oxford India paper. Type as Pocket Reference Bible. $5.50

No. 03255x $5.50; No. 03276x $6.50

Oxford TEACHER'S Bibles

Have over 50,000 center column references, and 300 double-column pages of up-to-date helps, conveniently arranged in alphabetical order. Also 32 full-page illustrations, and an indexed atlas of the Bible with 15 beautifully colored maps of Bible lands.

Easy-to-Read-Edition

Size 7 1/4 x 5 x 1 3/8 inches

Specimen of Type

14 Like sheep they are laid in grave; death shall feed on th

Nos. 04453. French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, round corners and red under gold edges. A durable and hand-some Bible $4.35

Oxford India Paper Edition

Only one inch thick.

0773x. French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges, headbands and book-mark. A beautiful gift edition $7.00

RED LETTER Edition

Same size and type as style No. 04453, with same references and helps, but with all the words of Jesus Christ printed in red. White paper edition No. 05453. French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges $5.00

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary

A PEASANT WOMAN IN TURKEY

Relates for SUN readers her experience.

Salaam! I am Fatima, a Turkish "bride" from the village of Ho'crloo on the Harpot plain, among the Anti Taurus mountains. I do not see why you should be interested in our villages, but since you ask me, I will tell you of our life. Turkish peasant women do not travel about, so I know only my own affairs.

The head of our village has a big house, with five rooms and two of the windows have glass in them. My father-in-law is poor and we live in a house with only room. At one end we keep the two buffaloes, the donkey, the goat and the chickens. We like to have them there for it makes the house warmer in winter. The level of one part of the room is higher and there is a railing to keep the animals out. We cover the hard dirt floor with mats which we women weave when we have time in winter. Besides the mats there is little in the room. It is enough to have our quilts to spread upon the floor at night, a chest for our clothing and a stool and tray to bring out when we eat bread each day. Our wheat and rice, our mutton-fat and our water we keep in earthen jars, and the dried vegetables we hang from the rafters.

The flat roof is for us like a second room. In summer we love to sit there in the cool of the day to do our knitting and prepare the food, and at night we all spread our beds there. The air is always dry, and I like to see the stars better than the smoky walls and the buffaloes. As for our windows, we have two, with no glass in them, but we put oiled paper over them in winter. We have poorer neighbors who have no windows at all—only a hole in the roof for the smoke, so we are lucky.

There is a fireplace where we burn brush or cakes of dried manure. We make these ourselves, plastering them against the outside walls of our mud house to dry in the sunshine. We women have to go long distances to get the brushwood for it is scarce, and we bring it home on our backs. Sometimes I think it unjust that my husband should ride on the donkey while I walk behind carrying the load of wood. But I am only a woman, and to work and bear children is Allah's will for women.

In our country a woman is a bride as long as her mother-in-law is alive. In our home there are two sons, so we are two brides, Nazifeh and I, Fatima, in subjection to our mother-in-law. She is old now and her eyes are weak and her back bent from much work. She sits and pulls the ropes of my baby's hammock in the corner, but she is not too old to scold and beat Nazifeh and me if we stop to talk at the fountain, or if we burn the rice pilaf in the iron pot.

Some mothers-in-law are kind and sweet, but it is our fate to have one who will hardly let us speak aloud. I have two little girls now. Three children died, one after the other. All my children have worn the blue beads to keep off the evil eye, but it was my lot to have them die. When they were small, I swaddled them so carefully and nursed them whenever they cried; when they were older they had plenty of curdled milk and cheese and boiled wheat and in the summer all the green plums and melons and cucumbers and grapes they wanted. Yet, though they had plenty to eat and drink, they all died, one after another before they were three years old, by the will of Allah.

You say you want to know about our work? We rise when the sun rises and lie down when it sets. In the season of plowing I help my husband in the fields. I scratch the ground with the wooden plow, drawn by our buffola and donkey together; when it is our turn to have the village irrigate our fields I help with the watering; I pick the mulberry leaves for the silk-worms and care for the cocoons; I milk the buffaloes and goats and make the white butter and salt cheese which our children love; I weed; I reap with the sickle until I think I can never stand upright again; I drive the buffalo that threshes out the wheat and take my turn tossing the grain to winnow it; I grind it and make the sweet brown meal and then my mother-in-law, Nazifeh and I bake the flat cakes of bread in one big earthen oven, which is just a hole in the floor heated by brush. Once in a long time I wash clothes in the stream and we women have a good time taking a bath in the same place.

When I was a tiny girl I learned to spin the thread from the wool of my father's sheep and to weave cloth on the handloom; from my mother and grandmother I learned the rug-song which describes the patterns of our beautiful rugs. In the winter months Nazifeh and I have been making a rug on our loom, and I love to see the pattern appear as we tie the thousands of knots, one by one.

In the summer I am always tired, but sometimes I do sit under the walnut trees to rest and talk with the neighbors while I feed my baby. The people of our village are kind and neighborly.

We are all like one family, they weep with us when fate brings death to our house and rejoice with us when a son is born. We of one village all make merry together at a wedding or at the time of the great feast of Bariam or when we flock to the vineyards for the harvesting of the grapes.

Now that our country has become a republic, new things come to our ears. We women are ordered to give up the veil. I am glad to do so, but my mother-in-law says "it is shame for me to have my face open." We are told that now a man can have only one wife. We hear that there will be a school in our village soon. I want to learn to read, but Nazifeh says it is a disgrace for a woman to read a book. Perhaps when my baby is big enough, she will learn.

Some Americans came to our village last month; they are queer people who wear ugly clothing and talk Turkish very poorly. But they have such kind smiling faces that we all liked them. One man told the men of a new way of doing the planting and promised to bring a new big sort of plow for them to try.

The other man was a doctor who gave medicine to any sick people who wanted it. He told us to get rid of flies and fleas and not to let the sewage or the blood of animals flow through the streets, lest it make us ill, and not to drink the river water. It makes me laugh that he should not know that it is Allah who sends the sickness or the blindness. I do not go to the mosque for I am only a woman and I do not understand the reading of the Koran, but I do know that we cannot change what Allah has decreed, though charms and amulets help to keep us and our animals from harm.

The Americans showed some moving pictures on the outside wall of our mosque. The whole village came to see. The men forgot their gambling and the women their talking of nothing and laughed to see the strange and wonderful pictures. They begged the Americans to come again, and the American woman with the funny clothes and the kind, smiling face, said she would come next time to my house and show me how to keep my baby from being sick. I wonder whether she really knows. I can hardly wait for her to come again.

(Editors Note:—Next week we will give the experience of A Peasant Woman in India, and the week following The Chinese Peasant Woman. J. O. A.)

MISSIONARY OFFERINGS.

WEEK ENDING JULY 28, 1934.

Sunday Schools.

Previously acknowledged .....	$ 2,814.63
Holy Neck, Holland, Va. ....	3.40
Lebanon, Semora, N. C. ....	.83
Ramseur, N. C. ....	3.50
Ether, N. C. ....	1.00
High Point, N. C. ....	4.70
Palm St., Greensboro, N. C. ....	5.00
Wentworth, Raleigh, N. C. ....	1.12
Pleasant Ridge, Ramseur, N. C. ....	3.87
Hopedale, Burlington, N. C. ....	.50
Total .....	$ 2,838.65

Individuals and Churches.

Previously acknowledged .....	$ 2,684.35
B. F. Branch, Raleigh, N. C. ....	1.00
Christian Chapel, Corinth, N. C. ....	1.00
Needham's Grove, Hemp, N. C. ....	1.28
New Hope Penn Laird, Va. ....	1.00
Total .....	$ 2,689.63

Specials.

Previously acknowledged .....	$ 927.60
Burlington S. S., Burlington, N. C. ....	18.88
Total .....	$ 946.48

Coin Card Offering.

Previously acknowledged .....	$ 98.01
Henderson S. S., Henderson, N. C. ....	3.00
Total .....	$ 101.01

Loan.

From Woman's Board, S. C. C., Mrs. H. S. Harceastle, Treasurer .....	$ 800.00
--	-----------

Summary.

Previously acknowledged .....	$16,111.60
Total Offerings, week ending July 28, 1934.	851.18

Total to date .....

$16,962.78

J. O. ATKINSON, Sec'y.

IN TOTTORI THE TOTTERY.

(By Miss D. P. Cushing, Mission News Editor.)

Flitting noiselessly about in their gaily colored kimonos the children of Japan, as Miss Katherine F. Fanning saw them in the kindergarten of Kobe, reminded her of so many little human butterflies. From that time on, 1914, she has loved and worked for the women and children of Japan, first in Kobe as a teacher in the Kindergarten Training School, then at Kyoto, later at Maebashi and now at Tottori.

Because Tottori is subject to earthquakes, fortunately not severe ones, it has been nicknamed "Tottori the Tottery."

Aside from the supervision of the kindergartens Miss Fanning developed work among the mothers and children, calling in the homes and holding meetings. It was because financial conditions necessitated turning over to local care the kindergartens, with which Miss Fanning was associated.

in Kyoto, that she was transferred to Tottori, a seven hour train ride from Kyoto. She lives in that ancient center with its picturesque gnarled pines, "in the shadow of the mountains," where once a feudal castle kept watch above the people. In the house called "Coe House," named after Miss Estella Coe, who was forced to give up her splendid work because of illness, Miss Fanning dwells with two Japanese girls, one a teacher in the Nansokan and the other the house manager.

At Tottori Miss Fanning is doing social service work. Not long ago she attended an interesting meeting at which were Buddhist priests and city officials, Christians and other private citizens, all interested in bettering the social service work at Tottori. "Our Nansokan work is educational and recreational, not organically but in spirit, linked with the church life," declares Miss Fanning.

Miss Fanning's eagerness to serve others, especially women and children in distant lands, began during her Wellesley College days from which institution she was graduated in 1913. She received an appointment to Japan under the American Board in 1914. The intervening year she spent at home, studying meanwhile at the School of Civics and Philanthropy in Chicago. Her love of music has been of great help to her in both kindergarten and social service work. After her first term in Japan she took a course, during furlough, at the Lucy Wheelock Kindergarten Training School.

TREASURER'S REPORT.

Report of Woman's Mission Board, Va. Valley Conference, for the fourth quarter ending July 10, 1934.

Amount in treasury .....$ 5.48

Women's Societies.

Bethel .....	7.77
Concord .....	5.00
Dry Run .....	4.00
Leaksville .....	21.35
Linville .....	70.61
New Hope .....	12.50
New Port .....	7.60
Winchester .....	31.37

Young People.

Antioch .....	14.48
---------------	-------

Rally Offerings.

Rockingham .....	2.83
Page .....	5.00
Northern .....	2.60

Total .....$ 190.95

DISBURSEMENTS.

July 14:—
To Mrs. Hardeastle .....	$183.98
To Mrs. A. W. Andes .....
Postage and expense .....	2.78
To Verdie Showalter .....
Postage .....	2.43

Total .....$ 189.19
Amount in treasury July 11, 1934 .....$ 1.76

Following is the Annual Report of the Woman's Mission Board, year ending July 10, 1934.

Amount in treasury July 20, 1933. ....$ 1.41
Conference Offering ..... 5.97

Woman's Societies.

Bethel .....	17.08
Concord .....	5.00
Dry Run .....	13.50
Leaksville .....	45.64
Linville .....	83.91
New Hope .....	19.80

New Port .....	13.20
Winchester .....	67.39
Woods Chapel .....	4.00

Total .....$ 269.52

Young People.

Antioch .....	28.06
Mayland .....	3.10
Timber Ridge .....	10.96
Whistlers Chapel .....	1.00

Total .....$ 43.12

Cradle Roll

Antioch .....	2.35
Leaksville .....	.80
Linville .....	5.00

Total .....$ 8.15

Rally.

Rockingham District .....	2.83
Page District .....	5.00
Northern District .....	2.60

Total .....$ 10.43

Grand Total .....$ 338.60

DISBURSEMENTS

1933—
July 20.—To Rev. Horace Lequear..	$ 2.00
Oct. 18.—To Mrs. H. S. Hardeastle..	30.94
1934—
Jan. 15.—To Mrs. H. S. Hardeastle.	73.97
Apr. 11.—To Mrs. H. S. Hardeastle..	40.74
July 14.—To Mrs. H. S. Hardeastle.	183.98
July 14.—To Verdie Showalter, post- age .....	2.43
July 14.—To Mrs. A. W. Andes, Post- age and expense .....	2.78
Total .....	$ 336.84

Amount in treasury July 19, 1934. ....$ 1.76

VERDIE SHOWALTER, Treas.
W. M. B. Va. Valley Conf.

NARROW NATIONALISM.

"Without venturing to pass judgment on the wisdom or unwisdom of specific economic or political proposals which have been advanced in international circles, it is impossible to avoid the feeling that the ideal itself of internationalism and world brotherhood has undergone a serious setback from which it may take years to recover. That the prevailing atmosphere is unfavorable to foreign missions also goes without saying. But the really important question lies quite in another direction. It is whether the foreign missionary enterprise will respond to the challenge of the present situation and stand forth as an apostle of world brotherhood in Christ, preaching the Gospel of a world-wide love and service, refusing to yield to selfishness even though advocated by nationalism. No corrective to the present spirit of international ill-will would be so profound and effective as a forward movement in foreign missions. Here is one field at least in which international proposals are not dangerous or doubtful. In the face of so-called international disillusionment, the Church moves forward and outward in the service of Christ."—Charles R. Watson, "Missions and Internationalism," Missionary Review of the World.

ROCKY FORD.

Our revival meetings this year have been very gratifying. There seems to be a general spiritual awakening in our entire communities. Each of the services, during the ten days at Elk Spur, and twelve days at Rocky Ford were attended by large crowds.

There were only four added to the churches, but we feel that the seed sown will be reaching the harvest in the days to come. We can see a fine result already, in the form of church attendance. There seems to be a spiritual atmosphere in each service that can't be explained. You can just feel it, and know God is there.

We ask your continued prayers, that we may do our Master's will in the great field of service here.

REV. AND MRS. R. T. GRISSOM.

Fancy Gap, Va.

CHRISTIANIZING THE WORLD ORDER.

(From an address at the General Council.)

Christ came to save the world. It never needed saving so much as at the present moment. Christ understood that man's need is deep as well as wide. He worked in both dimensions. He looked into man's heart and found sin. He knew that sin would ruin man. Christ knew that man is a social creature. If he is to be saved, he must be saved in relation to his fellowman as well as in relation to his God.

The idea of separating what we call social relations from what we call Missions never occurred to Jesus. That is a man-made distinction. To build a program for a church on the assumption that Missions—what we think of as the extension of the gospel—is essentially different from "research education and social action"—words we are coming to use in describing the intelligent application of the gospel to social relations—is folly because it is unreal. Men and Women who have a passion for helping to draw peoples of all nations into fellowship with God through Christ must have a passion for helping to draw the people of their own and of every nation into righteous fellowship with one another through Christ.

Moreover, we are rapidly learning that the nations of the world are "inescapably interlocked," as Basil Matthews says. Even Heywood Brown has learned that a slum is a source of annoyance even if you do not live in it. Just so, we are learning that an unwholesome and unjust state of affairs in any nation is a threat to the welfare of every nation. Sir Austin Chamberlain has just reminded Europe that "no one of us can find security in isolation" and he might have added that the only real security is to be found in Christianizing the world order.

It is considerations like these that lead me to welcome in the warm enthusiasm the new emphasis of our Congregational and Christian fellowship on Christian social action. Of course, such thought and effort as we can wisely put forth along this line should be most intimately associated with the organized efforts we have been making for decades to christianize the world order, including the United States. In essence, it is not new. In reality, it is very imperative. It means letting the gospel of Christ get a new hold on us. It means our clearer understanding of what he meant by the Kingdom of God. And we shall expect that as the gospel grips our hearts with greater force and as we get a clearer idea of what loyalty to the Kingdom of God involves, we shall unitedly seek the best means of doing our part as Christian men and women to christianize the world order.

FRED FIELD GOODSSELL.

The Church of Christ is no completed thing, but a perpetual protest against evil never vanquished, and a promise toward a kingdom never reached.—Julia Ward Howe.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

ELON SUMMER SCHOOL.

The Elon Summer School of Leadership Training closed a very successful session on last Sunday. Eighty-four people were enrolled, and sixty-one credits were given for successful work in Standard Leadership Training Classes. Eleven ministers were present, and had daily sessions of their own in addition to sharing the young people's programs.

The daily schedule was plenty full to keep everyone busy from early morning until late at night. Class work filled the morning after the chapel service conducted by the dean, who is this writer. Afternoons were filled with rest, study and recreation. Evenings were filled with vesper services, forums on "Christian Youth Building a New World," and a variety of other interesting programs.

Of course there was time for the making of friendships. Nearly half of the group had never been to Elon before. Everyone met new people, and out of this fellowship will grow, let us hope, life-long friendships that will bring much happiness.

The high point of the school was reached on Sunday morning when Dr. Charles Eldred Shelton of Portsmouth, Virginia, preached on "Men Wanted" and communion service was administered by the dean. From this consecration service the young people and their leaders returned home with the high hope of being a blessing to those who had not attended Elon this year.

A STORY WORTH TELLING.

Those of us who lose sleep and weight in order to carry through the summer school program sometimes wonder whether it is worth the effort. It costs money and much human energy to conduct such a school. For months someone must plan a program, secure teachers, counsellors and other workers, advertise far and wide, furnish scholarships to those who cannot pay, and then the workers give a week of hard labor without financial reward in order that those who want to learn may have their chance.

But stories that come to me make me believe that the effort is not in vain. Here is an actual experience.

Last year one of the girls went home and began saving money so she could come to Elon this summer. When the time arrived she had the money, but circumstances were such that she could not attend. She gave her money to another who did come this year.

If the summer school can create that kind of spirit, and it did, there are those who will count it a joy to work for the school.

A LOVING CUP PRESENTED.

Another girl who has attended the summer school for several years but who could not go this time offered a silver loving-cup to the church that would send the largest delegation in proportion to membership. It is not possible to tell whether this aided in attendance or not, but there were thirty-four more present this year than last.

The cup was presented Sunday at noon to three representatives of the only church in Western North Carolina that had young people at Elon this year. The Ether young people, and the genfleman who came to take them home, seemed to be very proud and appreciative of this recognition, and here's hoping they will be successful in bringing still more from their church next year, as they hope to do.

Other churches that had a good percentage were Winston-Salem, Chapel Hill, and First Church, Norfolk. The latter church had eight young people and pastor present.

NOW FOR A VACATION.

On at least one occasion Jesus said to his disciples, "Come ye yourselves apart, and rest a while." He knew the value of a vacation. He knew that the regular grind of the daily tasks would soon wear the human machinery so that it would not function properly. He knew that constant thought on the same things would make the mind less than it ought to be. He knew that the spirit of man needs the refreshment of change. He knew that those who give of themselves must themselves be refreshed.

My church believes that Jesus was right. They believe that he was right concerning a vacation. The church gives me the month of August as a vacation. They expect me to rest and find renewal. They hope that when September comes I will be ready for another year of hard labor and eager leadership. They want me to be physically, mentally, and spiritually fit for the services that should be rendered to this community, as well as a servant to the larger group whom I try to serve. They want me to be at my best at all times. Therefore, they say for me to take a vacation in August.

My church is wise in this decision. I shall obey their will and take some rest. Dozens of things need to be done, but most of them must wait. Perhaps I can do them better after a rest. Please do not be disappointed if you receive no answer to letters during August. I may not even receive them for I am going to some place that I do not now know, where work will not follow. I shall furnish material for this page, but shall carry no other responsibilities with me.

It is important for people to live at peace in a world of noisy conflicts. We sometimes have to worship in the midst of a tumult, or not worship at all. It takes real manhood to keep one's head when all about seem to have lost theirs. Far too many people are frightened by an unexpected noise, are constantly on edge by what they call nerves, and are tortured by the swift currents of life that whirl about them. That is not the way a Christian should be. A vacation should help to calm one's nerves, steady one's thoughts, and strengthen one's spirit. That's what I'm hoping to get during the month of August. And that's what I am praying for you when you have your vacation.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE BOARD OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

The annual meeting of the Board of Christian Education of the Southern Convention met at Elon College on the afternoon of July 26th. Those present were Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, Rev. R. L. House, Mr. W. H. Baker, Mr. C. H. Stephenson, Mrs. C. H. Rowland, Miss Priscilla Chase, and F. C. Lester. Absent members were Revs. George C. Edwards, John Chapman, and J. F. Morgan.

Officers elected for the next biennium were: Chairman, F. C. Lester; Vice-chairman, Rev. H. S. Hardcastle; Secretary, Miss Priscilla Chase; and Treasurer, Mr. C. H. Stephenson.

Reports showed that 210 copies of the New Testament and Psalms had been distributed, Sunday School Conventions aided, young people's work promoted, leadership training schools conducted in several places, the summer school held, and an average of 100 letters per month sent from the office in Norfolk, Virginia. The work has been handicapped for lack of funds, but a real service has been rendered to the churches.

Plans were made to do even a more constructive work the coming year. We stand ready to hold leadership training schools wherever they are desired, to aid Sunday School conventions with plans for work and annual programs, to join hands with Youth Fellowships in whatever they want to undertake for the betterment of young people, and to do any other type of work that our churches need. It is proposed to promote Vacation Schools next summer in a bigger way than ever. At least three training schools for leaders of Vacation Schools are to be held in Eastern Virginia so that local leaders can come together to plan what is the best way to conduct their schools.

If the Board is to do the things that should be done, it will be necessary for us to have larger support financially. The Sunday School conventions have given the Board their available funds this year, but the total amount is well under a thousand dollars. It will take more than twice this amount to do the things that cry for attention. Members of the Board were of the opinion that the Sunday Schools will be willing to give an offering on Rally Day, the first Sunday in October, to aid in doing this educational work. A call will be made for such an offering. If you who read this will begin to think and plan for this offering, it will be possible for us to receive enough funds to aid greatly in the accomplishment of the things that need to be done. All the Board can promise is that every penny coming to us will be invested to the best of our judgment for the benefit of our churches. We are eager to work. And we appreciate your help.

NATURE AS SEEN BY THE PSALMIST AND SCIENTIST.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR AUG. 12, 1934.

Daily readings:

- Monday, Aug. 6—The Beauty of Nature. Isa. 35: 1-19.
- Tuesday, Aug. 7—The Laws of Nature. Gal. 6:7-8.
- Wednesday, Aug. 8—Mysteries of Nature. Psalm 139:11-17.
- Thursday, Aug. 9—God in Nature. Ps. 107:32-43.
- Friday, Aug. 10—Mystery of Growth. Matt. 13:31-32.
- Saturday, Aug. 11—The Nature of Mind. John 3: 1-13.
- Sunday, Aug. 12—Scientist and Poet. Ps. 8:3-6.

Program.

Theme: "Flower Meeting."

Instrumental Prelude: "O Beautiful for Spacious Skies."

Opening Hymn: "The Spacious Firmament on High."

Scripture: Psalm 8:3-9.

Prayer:

Hymn: "God of the Earth, the Sky, the Sea."

Speaker and Assistant: Theme—"Nature As Seen by the Psalmist and Scientist, by the Poet and Man of Science."

Processional Hymn: (As the members lay
(Continued on page 15.)

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

ELISHA HELPS THE NEEDY.

LESSON VI—AUGUST 5, 1934.

GOLDEN TEXT: Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of these my brethren, even these least, ye did it unto me.—Matt. 25:40.

LESSON TEXT: 2 Kings 4:1-44.

Elijah—Elisha.

The mantle of Elijah fell upon Elisha. In God's plan there is a place for all. How different the men were in temperament, in spirit, in method! And yet God richly blessed the ministry of each. Every man is to be himself. Every man is to do his work in his own way. One of the glories of life is its individuality. God has honored every one of us in that he has made us with an individuality and a personality of our own. Let every man be sincere, let him be natural, let him do his work according to God's purpose for his individual life. It takes men of all kinds and all types to do God's work. Let us stand, every one of us in his or her place.

"The Preacher's Home."

As the writer read the story of how the Shunammite woman prepared a room for Elisha and how he was invited to make "himself at home" whenever he was passing that way, he thought of the homes with the open door which were always open to him when he was a student pastor. As he went out on Saturdays for his Sunday appointments there was always the problem of his entertainment, that is, of a place to stay. Sometimes he had an invitation, sometimes he did not. But always there were generous-hearted people whose homes were always open to him. "If no one else invites you, or if you do not have a place to stay, come to my house and make yourself at home" they would say. How little they realized what it meant to the young preacher under the circumstances. There rises before him as he writes these notes a number of faces of those who thus took him into their homes and thus caused him to thank God and take courage. For them he gives thanks unto this day. And there are a number of preachers who have blessed memories and thankful hearts for just such "preachers' homes."

A Two-Sided Proposition.

It was not a one-sided proposition. The Shunammite woman did a great deal for Elisha. But Elisha also did a great deal for the Shunammite woman and for her home. His presence was helpful, his ministry of service was generous. The true man of God who enters a home, whether on a pastoral call, or as a guest, will leave a blessing and a benediction in that home. Many a boy or girl has got the first impulse to the ministry or to Christian service because a wholesome, sincere man of God has been in the home. And many a home has become Christian in a more vital sense because the influence and the suggestions of a man of God, who may have been only a passing caller. Whatever else the minister may be forced to give up, he ought not to give up the personal touch with the home and the family. After all it is people that count.

"Send for the Preacher."

The boy which had come into the Shunammite home, the only son, and he of their old age, took sick and died. Instinctively they turned to the man of God. In our modern life, of course, they would have sent for a doctor. That is as it should be. It is no evidence of lack of faith that we call in a physician when our loved ones are ill. But in our modern life, we also "let the preacher know." We may not have been very regular in our church attendance, or very prompt in the payment of our dues, indeed we may not have had much use for the church or the minister when things were going well, but somehow or other it helps to have a man of God around when loved ones are ill, and especially when a child, an only child has been taken. And the man of God who goes into a home where there is sickness or trouble or death, has a great responsibility and a great privilege and opportunity. It might be added that the true man of God will go when he knows of trouble. As a matter of fact the minister wants his people to let him know when they need him.

"And Elisha . . . Prayed."

When Elisha came to the home he found that the boy was dead. He went up into the lad's room, shut the door, and in secret he prayed unto the Father who seeth in secret. There was nothing that he could do until he prayed. In our hours of extremity and dire need it is a good thing to pray, to tell the Father about it, to ask Him for help, to renew our strength by waiting upon him. Send for the doctor to be sure. But do more than that. Submit your case to the Great Physician.

.. "And Elisha . . . Lay Upon the Child."

Elisha prayed. But he also did more than pray. He helped to answer his prayer. He was true to the heavenly vision. It may seem a little strange to read about Elisha lying upon the child, mouth to mouth, eye to eye, hand to hand, but there is a great spiritual truth in this simple account. We can create spiritual life in others as we give them the personal touch of our own warm spiritual life. There is no substitute for the personal touch, that is the living personal touch. What happened in a physical sense when Elisha touched that boy, happens in a spiritual sense when warm, vital spiritual personalities touch the lives of others. What a challenge to keep our lives at a high level!

"And She Took Up Her Son, and Went Out."

The prayer of faith, the human touch, and the power of the living God restored the boy to life again, and he was given again to the overjoyed mother. It is a happy climax to an interesting story. But alas it is not always thus in our actual, twentieth century life. Father, mother, husband, wife, son, daughter, neighbor, friend fall on sleep from which we cannot awaken them. Even the most earnest and insistent prayer cannot bring them back again. God does not, so far as we know, give back the dead as in the case in point in today's lesson. But he does give grace. He does not leave us comfortless. He is able to keep that which we have committed unto him against that day, and in His own good time, we shall have each other again. Wherefore my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, for as much as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord.

SOME GAY, ADVENTUROUS THING.

"The day will bring some lovely thing,
I say it over each new dawn;
'Some gay adventurous thing to hold
Against my heart when it is gone.'
And so I rise and go to meet
The day with wings upon my feet.

"I came upon it unaware—
Some sudden beauty without name;
A snatch of song, a breath of pine,
A poem lit with golden flame;
High tangled bird notes, keenly thinned,
Like flying color on the wing.

"No day has ever failed me quite—
Before the greatest day is done;
I am upon some misty bloom
Or a late line of crimson sun;
Each night I pause, remembering,
Some gay, adventurous, lovely thing."

Grace Noll Crowell.

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.
Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.

These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. It combines with the Concordance, Subject-Index, Scripture Proper Names, etc. The 12 Maps have been carefully revised and are beautifully colored. In making orders, give the number and price.

135—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold. $3.00

India Paper Edition, Only 16-16 of an inch thick.

133X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold, $4.00

SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS' BIBLE.

Especially made up for gift or reward Bibles for Sunday School scholars, containing a special series of very practical and useful helps and Bible Questions and Answers, etc. Printed on fine white Bible paper; ruby type; pocket size, 3 3/4 x 5 3/8 inches, and 1 inch thick, with 31 full-page illustrations in sepia. All bindings are black. Ruby Type, Size 3 3/4 x 5 3/8 Inches, and 1 Inch Thick.

65—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold; 6 colored maps . . . . . $2.50

AUTHORIZED VERSION. RED LETTER TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Brevier Type (8 vo.), Self-Pronouncing, Size 5 3/8 x 8 1/4 Inches and 1 3/8 Inches Thick.

Containing the Bible, with full references. The words of Christ in the New Testament are printed in red; other parts of the book are printed in black. With Concise Bible Dictionary, combined Concordance, and 12 indexed maps.

7852—Genuine Leather, Lavant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold . . . . . $4.75

RED-LETTER EDITION.

With All the Words of Christ in the New Testament Printed in Red.

1282—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit round corners, red under gold edges, register and headbands; title stamped on side and back in pure gold . . . . . $3.25

60—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, Sunday School Scholars' Bible, stamped in pure gold on cover, no illustrations; special book for Sunday Schools . . . . . 95c

Any of the above Bibles sent postpaid. Address

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street

Richmond, Virginia

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy

MONDAY.

"A MAN."

Readings: Acts 17:26; Gen. 1:27; Ps. 8:5-6.

"What is man that thou art mindful of him?"

—Ps. 8:4.

Everywhere we go, and in the company of all our associates, we find men whose life suggests the spontaneous assertion, "There is a man."

What do we mean "man"? Just this:

A man well poised and apparently master of any situation relating to him.

A man who is what he seems.

A man who is considerate of others in whatever walk of life; who makes them glad, and whose influence makes them better.

A man who knows that he knows, but knows also that others too may know, and that he can learn from them.

A man not too quick to anger, but positive and helpful where cross sections irritate.

A man who controls his appetites and passions and improves by reason of faults, an example of virtue, wisdom and courage.

A man who, said Festus, "Thinks himself an act of act of God—and that his life a breath of God."

A man who believes in God, believes Jesus a perfect example to follow, and is happy in his belief.

A man whose disposition is such that it reflects the spontaneous opinion in others, "There goes a man."

Do you know anyone embracing all these traits? Yes, and then some. Mr. Beecher said, "God never made anything more beautiful."

Prayer—Pray as you desire, and close with the Lord's prayer.

TUESDAY.

"REMOVING MOUNTAINS."

"Verily I say unto you, if ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, remove hence to yonder place; and it shall remove; and nothing shall be impossible to you."—Matt. 17:20.

Can this be true? Can I remove a mountain? Let Bruce Barton answer. He says, "a man, a sales manager, flopped down in his office one day, heaving with despair and in broken sentences, told him a story of his lucrative business blowing up, and he left almost penniless. The prospect filled him with terror. He was ready to do anything, even commit suicide."

Barton said, "Your situation is very serious on one condition."

"On what condition?" he replied.

"On the condition that you have been making your living all these years under false pretenses. That you really can't write a sales letter."

"But I can write a sales letter," was the quick retort.

"That's the stuff," Barton answered.

To make a long story short, Barton took the friend to his window, showed him hundreds of offices all representing people selling something.

"Get yourself some letter-head paper, use your residence as an office. Write those people a letter that will sell them the idea that you can make them money. Use me for reference."

He did it and at the end of the first six months his earnings, were $2500.00 a year. The mountain was removed because he had faith in what he could do.

All of us have problems. Even instances like the above break down in this world-wide "depression," nevertheless, can it not be ventured that all of us have moved many a mountain of the impossible by faith in something, and faith in ourselves.

Prayer—O Lord, our God, in Thee is all power. We pray for the shining glory of Thy light to dawn more and more in our lives to lead us on to triumph over difficulties till our life's successes shall be made of the stuff that overcomes such failures. We ask for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"SPIRITUAL ARCHITECTURE."

"In whom ye are baptized together for a habitation of God in the spirit."—Eph. 2:22.

Paul is writing to the men and women who constituted the church at Ephesus. These people were familiar with construction. They knew the structure of temples and the temple of Diana no doubt was in their minds. Hence, when Paul points to it as an apt illustration of the church and of cooperative fellowship of the redeemed in Christ, it gripped them.

The apostle referred to a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God,—God Himself is the architect and the builder. This city is the church of the living God made up of living men. God laid upon Jesus the erection of a structure out of fallen humanity, and this structure has been in process of construction ever since; its advancement has never been interrupted; it is still rising and one day it will be completed, notwithstanding the critics who say that the church is dead.

But this structure can go forward no faster than men will let it. If you and I are the material, its advancement depends upon just how much we will be used, and just how much we all will do our parts. Just how much we may hinder the progress of God in His kingdom by failing in our part, cannot be estimated. There is no doubt that the kingdom is hindered as much by such failures as by sin.

Prayer—O Lord, we feel that we need to rededicate our lives to Thee that we may fill our place in Thy church. So be it now, and from the transparent walls of Thy spiritual temple may we behold life so high, so pure, and so serene that we may be said to live at Thy threshold. This we ask in Jesus' name.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"FINDING THE COURSE."

"What man is he that feareth the Lord? Him shall he teach in the way that he shall choose."—Ps. 25:12.

Moffatt, for the last half of this text, says, "Learn what is the right course to take."

Every person is sagacious enough to desire to know the right course in his pursuits. Nothing is more important to the mariner at sea. In order to find this course, the chart of the seas, which represents the composite knowledge of all seafaring and surveys for the ages past; the stars of the heavens in their courses, are consulted; and all the intelligence of man in computing and reckoning, are brought to bear in order to find the right way over the trackless sea and to arrive "safe at last, the danger past," at their port.

To reverence the Lord, and walk in obedience to Him, may seem an intangible sort of thing in the practical business of finding the right thing to do in a given situation, but the fact is that it has about as much to do with it as the magnetic pole, the chart, the skies, and intelligent navigation has to do with steering the ship in the right channels. In the latter it is obedience to natural laws (which are laws of God) and in the former it is reverence for God in the soul. When that reverence drops out of the life, wisdom is reduced to maxims and distilled prudence.

Prayer—Our Father, we thank Thee that Thou hast not failed; that from the experience of Thy children we can believe Thou wilt show us what is good, Thou wilt show us the way; and we pray for it this day, in the name of Christ.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"THE POWER OF SECRET SINS."

"Who can understand his errors? Cleanse Thou me from secret faults."—Ps. 19:12.

Secret faults are two-fold; subjective and objective. There may be sins within us; both those which we are ashamed to be known, and those that creep unconsciously into our habits; and, there are sins without which are hidden from our view, into which we may fall unawares.

One may like to yield to his impulses and passions, yet, like the termite that eats away the foundations of a structure till the building falls, inner secrets or unconscious sins undermine the foundation of character, and it falls with a crash sometime. Jesus likened it to building a house on sand.

One may be too righteous to steal or commit murder, but that is not a test of his character. The test is, does he feel the same guilt when he takes profit which involve injustice and exploitation and when he is extortionate with widows and orphans?

A Christian must see with the eyes of Jesus and detect both inwardly and outwardly the quality and the consequences of acts and attitudes whose evil results do not appear on the surface. We must have downright honesty in the heart, and lay self on the altar of God as an acceptable sacrifice, which Paul said is "our reasonable service, and be not transformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind." "Let this mind be in you," said He, "which was in Christ Jesus."

Prayer—O Lord, our God, spare us from the consequences of what we have done amiss, forgive our sins and inspire our lives in all body, mind and spirit. This we ask for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"TALKING POINTS."

"And the devil said unto him, 'To thee will I give all this authority, and the glory of them'."—Luke 4:1-13.

The devil is fertile in devising effective talking points, as he showed himself when he tempted Christ in the wilderness, and we must always be on our guard against his resourcefulness. "You need a little fun now and then," "People will laugh at you, if you don't," "Everybody else is doing it"—these are some of his glib talking points.

We also must have our talking points, as Christ had in the temptation; and none are better than His, namely, apt Bible quotations. The Bible can out-talk Satan at any time, for it is an armory of divine wisdom. Happy is he who can put his hands on its weapons readily.

Prayer—Our Saviour, save us from temptation, deliver us from evil. May we not be wise in our own wisdom, but in Thine.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

(Continued on page 14.)

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, Pastor.

HEARING THE VOICE OF GOD.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"The people therefore that stood by, and heard it, said that it thundered: others said, An angel spake to him."—John 12:29.

The crowd can hear the voice of God. It may not, and from our text it seems it does not always have the right interpretation of it. But it is something to know that the crowd can hear God's voice. The crowd that gathered about Jesus in the Gentile court of the Jerusalem temple on the last day of his public ministry heard the voice of God. They said it thundered.

Jesus had just come to the conclusion of the prayer, about which I spake in my most recent message to you. He had reached that sublime climax in which he said: "Father, glorify Thy name" "Then there came a voice from heaven saying, I have both glorified it, and will glorify it again. The people therefore that stood by and heard said it thundered: others said, An angel spake to him. Jesus answered and said, This voice came not because of me, but for your sakes." The crowd heard the voice.

It is not the first time we have an account in the Scriptures of the crowd hearing the voice of God. In the days of the wilderness wanderings the children of Israel heard the voice of God from Sinai, "And they said unto Moses, Speak thou with us, and we will hear: but let not God speak with us, lest we die."

The infinite, powerful voice of God has been reduced to proper proportions to fit our finite ears. So reduced has it been that we may speak of it as the "still, small voice." Thousands of volts of electricity are carried on our high-power electric lines, but it is greatly reduced before it is turned in to light homes, and streets. In natural ways God brings his voice to us that we may hear it, and know his will for our lives. "The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth his handiwork." The starry vault of midnight blue. There is no sound, no language, save the language of beauty and immensity, and no voice is heard; but nevertheless God is declared. And they that have ears to hear may hear what the heavens declare.

God's voice is made understandable—reduced to fit our ears. I heard it in the sweet songs of my mother as she sang: "Blessed assurance, Jesus is mine; oh! what a foretaste of glory divine." I heard it in the sweet teachings of my Sunday School in the little white church by the road. And I have heard it in a thousand places, and in a thousand ways since then. It has never sounded like thunder to me. It has sounded far mightier, and far sweeter—that precious, "still, small voice" of God.

The voice which the crowd heard on the day that the nations first came to Jesus was miraculous. It was awe-awakening. It was too much for their understanding. It came for their sakes, and without Jesus they would have missed its import.

It is not miracles the people need; not miracles, but the Master! Thoughtless ones have clamored for miracles. Why does not God do a miracle, and show the people a thing or two? No, that is not His way. People can make as great failure on miracles as on anything else. The chosen people of God marching from Egypt to Canaan followed a miracle of cloud by day and fire by night and made the "failure-march" of all history! They ate miraculous food, and drank miracle-supplied water; and bleached their bones in Sinai's sands! God spake miraculously to their leader Moses, and promised them all success; and they fled before the heathen like grasshoppers before the plowshare! No, miracles are not what the world needs today. Not miracles, but Jesus—the supreme miracle of all time and eternity. Jesus as much as said do not beg for miracles. You do not know what to do with them when you have them. Why if the people will hear the simple preaching of the Gospel by humble Christians, they would not believe though one came from the dead to preach to them.

God gave them a miracle, and they said it thundered. The other day in our town a girl-mother laid down her life in bringing her first-born son. She was good. Everybody knew she was full of Christian character. They loved her, they wept over her, and they praised her for her Christian goodness. Hundreds, some say near two thousand of people thronged to her funeral. Why did they come? There were two answers. One man said: People still prize Christian goodness; and others said: Curiosity! Some said "It thundered;" others said, "An angel spake." A still, small voice seemed to whisper to me: This thronging multitude, with their faces wet with tears, is a witness to the goodness of God in the mothers of men!

Yes, I still put my stake on sheer goodness of character in Christ Jesus. It holds. It attracts. It stands all tests, and takes the heart of humanity. It is not miraculous. It is natural for Christ. Notice I say, "in Christ"; for the life that still trusts Christ, thinks of him, accepts him, walks with him, listens to him will find Christian character a natural consequence. The world is not waiting for miracles; it is waiting for that.

There are three reports of the noise heard that day in the Jerusalem temple area. "The people said it thundred." Too many people are accepting the voice of the crowd today. It was wrong that time. And it was wrong next day, when it cried, "Crucify him, crucify him." It will ever be wrong if it does not distinguish the voice of God from the material voices round about. There are people who cannot see the spiritual. To them the man who loves his church and attends the hour of worship is seeking to cover up his daily conduct; and the man who decides for Christ and turns away from his old habits, according to the "thunder-thinkers" will not hold out. Having ears to hear, and hearing not; eyes, and seeing not.

A second report was that an angel had spoken to Jesus. This is indicative of spiritual insight. It was something out of the ordinary. It could not be explained away, they said. Perhaps this was the verdict of Peter, who always could make some reply, and some explanation. And it was certainly an improvement over the first report. It was headed in the right direction. When more understanding was given it would improve. But it, too, as it stood was wrong. They were both wrong in their report. Jesus had spoken to the Father, and the Father had answered.

And so Jesus makes the correct report. He gives them the simple truth. The Father had spoken for their sakes, just as his whole life on earth was for their sakes, and as his death on the cross would be for their sakes. In other words they all heard the voice of God, and even the best of them were still in the dark without Jesus.

In the light of Jesus the voice of God becomes the voice of a loving Father, and given for the good of his children. Without Jesus we shall miss the meaning of God. Without Jesus we shall miss the meaning of life, and of living with others.

They heard the voice of God, but it was the voice of Jesus they needed (I say this reverently, and advisedly; for God gave his voice only three times thus audibly in the New Testament, and with it he says: "My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased: Hear Him".) The voice of God was to be brought through Jesus—the rectifier of love—so that it might be accessible to our understanding.

May we, then, hear the voice of Jesus, who has sent the Holy Spirit to teach us all things, and to bring all things to our remembrance, whatsoever he has said unto us. The still, small voice, knocking at the temple door of our eternal souls, may we hear him, and open to him; for he will enter and sup with us and we with him! And all the world besides is not to be compared with him. Amen.

COMMUNION WARE.

Individual Service.

Made in best Silver Plate or Aluminum. Prices low; first-class workmanship and finish.

ALUMINUM.

Aluminum is light in weight, durable, and does not tarnish.

Style No. 50-A.

- Tray No. 2—Interlocking, with 40 plain glasses $7.00
- Tray No. 6—Interlocking, with 35 plain glasses 6.75
- Tray No. 10—Interlocking, with 30 plain glasses 6.50
- Base No. 50-A—Fits Trays 2, 6, or 10..... 2.25
- Cover No. 50-A—Fits Trays 2, 6, or 10..... 2.25
- Bread Plate No. 1—Narrow rim..... 1.60

SILVER-PLATED.

The Silver-plated Ware is of the very highest grade and best finish; heavily plated on nickel base.

- Tray No. 85—Interlocking only, with 36 glasses $22.00
- Base No. 1—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 85.. 11.00
- Cover No. 5—Silver-plated; fits Tray No. 85... 16.00

- (For Silver Bread Plates, see under No. 90.)
- Tray No. 90—Interlocking, with 36 plain glasses (this style has broad rim, which is sometimes preferred, due to increased ease of handling) $22.00
- Base No. 2—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 90.. 16.00
- Cover No. 4—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 90. 14.00

- Bread Plate No. 3—Narrow Rim.....$ 9.00
- Bread Plate No. 4—Broad Rim..... 9.00
- Filler—Silver Lined..... 6.00

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street

Richmond, Virginia

A Story for the Children

BETTY JO—A REAL STORY OF A REAL GIRL.

By LYDIA LION ROBERTS.

Betty Jo started to school when she was only three years old, but before that she knew how to make all the letters of the alphabet on her hands. Her father had taught her while she played in the one room of the little log cabin home. In this room Betty Jo and her father and mother ate and slept, worked and played, and visited with their friends. The room held a big chair and a small one, a table, a trunk, a stove and a wash-table.

This one-room home did not seem strange to Betty Jo, for it was the usual home of the people living in that part of the Kentucky mountains. The cabin stood at the head of the creek, which was the only road through the big hills around the little settlement. In summer the creek was dry and any one could walk or ride a mule along the road, but in winter when heavy rains came and the snows melted and rushed down the mountains the creek was deep and dangerous. Sometimes it was several days before any one could get through the swirling waters to his neighbors or to the world outside.

The schoolhouse, which had only one bare dark room, stood right in front of Betty Jo's home, and the teacher was her own father. Betty Jo was never kept away from school, though some of the mountain children had to work in the cornfields or in the vegetable patch. Sometimes they had to stay at home to take care of a baby brother or sister while their mother hoed in the fields. Because Betty Jo liked to read and go to school and draw better than to romp and play, she was called a "quare youngen."

"That gal would cry all day if her pappy kept her from school," said a neighbor.

"They do say that she takes to her books like a squirrel to nuts," said another mountaineer.

As Betty grew older her home grew bigger. Two front rooms were added to the cabin and the back porch was made into a kitchen. It seemed a large house to the mountaineers, and people from up and down the creek came to look at the cabin that had four rooms.

One day a team of oxen came plodding into the hills, over a rough road ten miles long right up through the creek. They stopped at Betty Jo's house. On the big sled behind the oxen was an organ. It was the finest organ ever seen in that region, and the whole settlement was excited over it. Betty Jo's father taught her all the pieces he knew, and soon she was able to play all the songs she heard. The neighbors came from miles around to see the organ and hear it played.

The oxen had also brought a new post-office. Betty Jo's father put it behind the chimney in one of the rooms, for he was going to be post-master as well as teacher and organist. The new postoffice was very important to the people around the creek, for the only other one was a long trip away and in stormy weather no one could get any mail. Now a mule would bring in the mail and take it out as often as three times a week.

When Betty Jo was a little older two more rooms were added to the cabin.

"Her pappy is crazy," said one of the neighbors when he heard the news. "What does he want with so many rooms?"

"He'll be blowed up with that new gas in his kitchen if he don't watch out," said another neighbor.

"A fire in the fireplace gives good enough heat and light," said the first man. "No use fussing with dangerous things like gas."

When the new rooms were finished, the house was painted. This caused some more talk, for the mountaineers seldom painted anything. Then the gas was turned on and its bright and cheerful light amazed the neighbors.

"Betty Jo's house sure be purty and mighty handy," they all agreed.

"There be running water coming right into her kitchen," one friend told another some time later. "It's piped down from the spring above the house and Betty Jo she don't have to bring in pails of water because the water is right there."

When Betty Jo finished high school she went to college. The neighbors shook their heads at such foolishness. The "quare youngen" and her father were still doing queer things. He had planted real grass and rose-bushes around the house. There was a pretty path from the front door down to the gate. The house had new porches on both front and back. The mountain people looked at their own uncomfortable and crowded cabins, at their bare, dirty yards, and began to think. Then they began to do some of the things that made Betty Jo's house so pretty and convenient. Some of them went so far as to have gas put into their houses, and no one was "blowed up."

One day Betty Jo came home from college. Then the school house began to grow. It grew a whole new row of windows and another room. It had better desks and good bookcases and real books to put on the shelves. Betty Jo and her father kept thinking of things to make the schoolhouse brighter and more attractive for the boys and girls who came walking down the creek road or running down the hills every day to school.

Betty Jo became a school teacher. She taught 50 boys and girls in one room and her father taught 60 boys and girls in the other room. As Betty Jo looked at all the wiggling, eager little boys and girls in her big room she thought back to the time when she had gone to this same school. Sometimes she had been the only pupil there when the weather was bad or the other children had to work in the fields. And now there were more than a hundred children in the little schoolhouse, and there were books in the rooms, green grass and bushes in the yard, and flowers in the gardens. Betty Jo knew she had found her work in the world. She was going to help other boys and girls of the mountains to have pretty, comfortable homes sunny, clean schoolhouses, and a better chance for an education.—Zion's Herald.

FAMILY ALTAR. (Continued from page 12.) SUNDAY.

"NEIGHBORHOOD LEAVES."

"Devise not evil against thy neighbor, seeing he dwelleth securely by thee."—Prov. 3:27-35.

In any thickly settled neighborhood, when the time comes for the raking up of dry leaves and the cleaning of yards, it is quite common to find at least one lot-owner who puts off this operation till long after all the surrounding yards are cleaned. Then the leaves blow from his lot over all the other lots, making it necessary for his neighbors to do much of their work over again.

These leaves typify the countless annoyances, griefs, and trials that spread from heedless lives over all the lives about them. Far more than most of us realize, we are our brother's keepers. We are the keepers of their peace of mind, often of their success, sometimes of their character. Life is one big neighborhood, and worthy living consists largely in being a good neighbor to all those whose lives we touch in any way.

Prayer—May we keep our own yards in order. May we cooperate. May we be helpful neighbors and not hindering ones.—Amen.

HOLMAN SUPERIOR TEACHERS' BIBLES

Authorized Version—Self-Pronouncing The Best Editions of the World's Best Book

For Adults, Teachers, Preachers, Students, and All Who Would Study the Word of God Intelligently

BOLD BLACK TYPE—COMPACT SIZE 4 1/2 x 6 3/4 INCHES—WILL FIT THE COAT POCKET

Part page specimen of Holman Boldblack Type Bible ST. MATTHEW, 5. Christ's sermon on the mount.

13 And leaving Naz'a-réth, he came and dwelt in Cà-pér'na-lím, which is upon the sea coast, in the borders of Záb'u-lon and Nèph'tha-lím:	A. D. 31.	934 CHAPTER 5.
14 That it might be fulfilled	CHAP. 4.	3 Who are blessed. 13 The disciples called the salt of the earth, and light of the world; Christ urgeth on them a good example, etc.
	n Isa. 9. 1, 2.	AND seeing the multitudes; A he went up into a moun-

THIS NEW HOLMAN TEACHERS' BIBLE, Pronouncing Text, Bold Black Type is a PRONOUNCED SUCCESS. The latest Bible with NEW HELPS that are quite comprehensive and consist of an Illustrated Bible Dictionary, Concordance and additional aids all under ONE ALPHABETICAL INDEX. Also Fine Maps on Coated Paper, and a specially prepared BIBLE READING COURSE, intended to stimulate and maintain interest in the Bible. Imported Bible paper is used to improve opacity and keep down bulk. By this means you get the benefit of full Biblical information without the physical discomfort of handling a heavy volume.

- STYLES AND PRICES—BIBLE PAPER EDITION
- 4612. French Morocco Leather, divinity circuit, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges..... $4.00
  - 4630. Same as 4612, with extra leather lined covers..... 4.75
- THIN INDIA PAPER EDITION
- 630X. Egyptian Morocco, divinity circuit, leather linings, red under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker..... 7.00
  - 633X. Algerian Morocco, divinity circuit, leather lining to edge, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, extra quality binding..... 8.00

EXTRA LARGE PRINT TEACHERS' BIBLES

Large 8 Vo. Size—8x5 1/2 inches—1600 Pages, including 400 pages of Bible Study Helps

Part Page Specimen of Print ST. MATTHEW, 5. Christ's sermon on the mount.

15 <sup>k</sup> The land of Záb'u-lon, and the land of Nèph'tha-lím, by the way of the sea, beyond Jòr'dan, Gà'Y-lee of the Gèn'tiles;	A. D. 31.	2 And he opened his mouth, and taught them, saying,
	z Isa. 9. 1, 2. l Isa. 42. 7. Luke 2. 32. m Mark 1. 14.	3 <sup>b</sup> Blessed are the poor in spirit: for their's is the kingdom of heaven.

CONTAINING COMPLETE HELPS TO BIBLE STUDY, INCLUDING ALL OF THE FOLLOWING FEATURES

A New Practical Course in Bible Reading, A Treasury of Biblical Information. The most carefully compiled, thorough and attractive form in which valuable Biblical information has ever been prepared. Illustrated Self-Pronouncing Bible Dictionary containing 150 illustrations, concise definitions and textual references on nearly 50,000 subjects. A Practical Comparative Concordance, with nearly 50,000 references. Four Thousand Questions and Answers on the Old and New Testaments. A valuable Help to all Bible Readers.

- STYLES AND PRICES
- 4712. Divinity Circuit (overlapping covers), French Seal Leather, red under gold edges, silk head bands, and silk marker... $5.00
  - 812RL. Red Letter Teachers' Bible. The Words of Christ in the New Testament. Old Testament Passages alluded to by Christ, various prophecies relating to Christ in the Old Testament, etc., all PRINTED IN RED. Binding same as described above on 4712 and same large Self-Pronouncing type..... 6.00
  - 733X. Holman India Paper, Genuine Morocco, leather lined, silk sewed, divinity circuit, round corners carmine under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker, same type and helps as above..... 10.65

All styles sent Postpaid at above prices—Thumb Index 50 cents extra

Christian Orphanage

Dear friends:

We were delighted to have the students and teachers of the Summer School which was in session here last week to visit the Orphanage in a body on Wednesday evening, July 25th. Our good friends, Revs. H. S. Hardcastle and F. C. Lester were in charge.

They sang for our little folks and our good brother, Dr. Charles M. Shelton led in prayer. Brother Hardcastle told the children a story "The Golden Saxon." Miss Chase told the story about the "Grasshopper on the weather vane instead of the rooster." Both were enjoyed.

They visited the "Baby Home" and the old building and inspected them and then came back to the Johnston Hall where our children rendered a program in song. Then Brother Hardcastle and other young boys like Brother McCauley and Bro. House put on some stunts for the amusement of all present. The children were delighted.

We were delighted to have these good people visit us and see the orphanage. Many of them had never been here before. The Christian Orphanage is one of the three major institutions of the Southern Convention and deserves the hearty support of the Convention. It has room for twenty more children if it had funds to support them.

The following has been sent in since our last report:

First and second grades Daily Vacation Bible School, Albemarle, N. C., by Miss Priscilla Chase; 6 cakes soap, 12 scrap books.

Berg's Bakery, Burlington, N. C., 60 dozen rolls.

Miss Violet Holt, Burlington, N. C., 1 cake soap, 1 box washing powder.

Circle No. 4, Burlington Christian Church, Burlington, N. C., 2 cakes soap, soap wrapeprs.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

REPORT FOR AUGUST 2, 1934.

Brought forward .....	$7,629.26
Sunday School Monthly Offerings.
Eastern North Carolina Conference:
Lebanon .....	$ 3.49
Henderson .....	4.10
		7.59
Western North Carolina Conference:
Smithwood .....	1.16
		1.16
Eastern Virginia Conference:
Holy Neck .....	4.83
First Portsmouth .....	6.00
		10.83
Valley Va. Central Conference:
Mayland .....	1.00
		1.00
Alabama Conference:
New Hope .....	2.46
		2.46
Special Offerings.
T. B. Roberts, support of children..	20.00
Mrs. George Hamlin, Antioch Church, Roanoke, Alabama .....	10.00
First and Second grades Daily Vac- ation Bible School, Albemarle, N. C.	1.60
Refund on gasoline by State .....	41.10
Collection Hanks Chapel for singing class .....	15.09
		87.79
Total for the week .....	$ 110.83
Grand Total .....	$7,740.09

YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

(Continued from page 10.)

their flowers on the altar) "For the Beauty of the Earth."

This will be a Flower Meeting—a meeting when every member will bring at least one blossom to put on the altar for someone else. Announce the meeting a week ahead so that everyone will bring a flower, and plan to have the flowers given after the meeting to a shut-in in your neighborhood. Have a table covered with a white cloth in the front of the assembly room where you have your meeting, which you may use as an altar for the flower gifts.

Begin by telling some of the things that you have learned about nature in school, in biology, chemistry, physics, etc. What are the most important facts that these studies have revealed to you? The person who wrote the Eighth Psalm knew very few of these facts. (Read it aloud.) Was he an ignorant person? Has science detracted anything from the truth which is contained in this Psalm?

Note that science and poetry are two ways of looking at life. We need them both. The scientist tries to see how the forces of nature work; he thinks he has discovered that the neutron is one ten-trillionth of an inch in diameter—this "cove" of the atom is supposed to contain the energy which is found in all of the universe. The poet instead of experimenting with complex instruments watches the sunsets, the tides, and the growth of flowers and uses poetic language to describe his wonder. We need both: the scientist to try to find out how the universe functions; the poet to express his wonder and appreciations of it.

ELON COLLEGE

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

South Entrance to the Campus

ELON COLLEGE, founded by the Christian Church in 1889, has fully justified the faith and hope of its founders during its 42 years of operation. Its graduates from the four-year course leading to a bachelor's degree, number 980, now living, 122 of whom are in the Christian Ministry and full-time Christian service. The majority of these are members of our own denomination. In addition, 449 are in educational work and are an active influence in the lay leadership of the Christian Church.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION BUILDING, and the definite religious atmosphere of the College, provide the very best facilities available for training for religious leadership, and offer the Church its finest opportunity to train the young people of the denomination to assume active leadership both in the ministry and laity of the local churches.

Address—

C. M. CANNON, Registrar

Elon College, - - - North Carolina

Home Atmosphere—Reasonable Rates—Clean Athletics—Christian Spirit

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom, as represented by the Congregational Christian Church.

BOARD OF EDITORS.

J. O. ATKINSON, D. D. . . . . Editor
 E. C. GILLETTE, D. D. . . . . Associate
 I. W. JOHNSON, D. D. . . . . Contributing
 ELISHA A. KING, D. D. . . . . Contributing
 J. T. KERNODLE . . . . . Managing Editor

DEPARTMENTAL EDITORS.

H. S. HARDCASTLE . . . . . Sunday School
 J. G. TRUITT, D. D. . . . . Sermon
 F. C. LESTER . . . . . Young People
 H. E. ROUNTREE . . . . . Altar

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year . . . . . $2.00
 Six Months . . . . . 1.00

Trials Subscriptions: Five or more new subscriptions sent in at one time by pastor or president of any church organization, three months for 40c each.

Published Every Thursday at Richmond, Virginia, by the Central Publishing Company, Inc.

Entered as second-class matter at the Postoffice at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Change of Address: Be sure to give both old and new address when asking that your address be changed.

All news matter and items to be published in "The Sun" should be addressed to J. O. Atkinson, Editor, Elon College, N. C., and should reach him not later than Friday preceding date of publication. If more convenient, news from Congregational Churches may be sent to E. C. Gillette, Associate Editor, 117 W. Forsyth Street, Jacksonville, Fla. Emergency notices will be received at the Richmond Office up until Tuesday of week of publication.

All remittances for subscriptions, renewals, advertising, etc., books for review, and other matters of business should be addressed to J. T. Kernodle, Managing Editor, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond, Va.

Notices: Obituary and marriage notices, limited to 125 words, published free. All over 125 words, 1c a word, cash with notice. No notices should exceed 250 words.

Receipts: The change of label is your receipt for money paid. The label shows date of expiration, and change on label will appear the first or second issue of the month following renewal, provided it was received before the 25th. No other receipt will be sent unless requested. Please notify the Richmond Office if label is not changed as above.

OBITUARIES

HASLETTE.

Robert Everett Haslette, son of the late James A. and Virginia Rawles Haslette, died at his home, Suffolk, Va., July 22, 1934, aged 50 years. The funeral was conducted at Holy Neck Church by the writer, assisted by Dr. J. G. Truitt. The burial was in Holy Neck Cemetery. Mr. Haslette had been a member of Holy Neck Church since childhood. He leaves a widow, Mrs. Huldah Parker Haslette, three children, Robert Everett, Jr., Ella Virginia and Edward Parker Haslette, and two brothers, W. W. Haslette, Whaleyville, Va., and J. O. Haslette, Franklin, Va.

May our heavenly Father bless and comfort these dear ones.

N. G. NEWMAN, Pastor.

TROXLER.

John Jackson Troxler passed from this life June 30, 1934 at the age of 71 years 6 months and 13 days.

He was married to Miss Dora Friddle December 5, 1895, who still survives with the following children: Mrs. Robert Barham, Mrs. John Ellison and W. H. Troxler all of Stokesdale, N. C., eleven grandchildren; also surviving are three brothers, S. H., W. A. and J. M. Troxler.

He was a loving husband and father, always kind and considerate of all with whom he came in contact.

Burial services were at Flat Rock M. E. Church, after which his body was laid to rest in the church cemetery. The services were largely attended. God bless the bereaved.
 T. J. GREEN.

BROWN.

Whereas, God, Our heavenly father, in his infinite wisdom and love, has removed from our midst our co-worker and brother, James F. Brown, who was a loyal member of the First Christian Church of Roanoke, Alabama, and a consecrated worker in our Sunday School. Brother Brown was a charter member of The First Christian Church of Roanoke. He was at all times interested in the Church and its works and it was his earnest desire to be of help to his fellow-man in the upbuilding of the kingdom.

Therefore, We, The First Christian Church of Roanoke, Ala., do hereby offer the following resolutions:

1st. That God in his all wise providence doeth all things well, and while we mourn the loss of our Brother, we realize our loss is heaven's gain, and we bow in humble submission to the will of him who is ever mindful of us.

2nd. That we have been blessed by having him with us, and his Christian life shall be one of our sweetest memories.

3rd. That we extend our sincere sympathy to the bereaved family and commend them to the all wise father for comfort and consolation.

4th. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the records of our church, a copy be sent the family, and a copy sent the Christian Sun for publication.

J. H. CHRISLER,

J. S. SLEDGE,

H. P. BEAIRD,

Committee.

REV. FRANK R. SHIPMAN, D. D.

Rev. Frank R. Shipman, D. D., former President of Atlanta Theological Seminary, and for a period acting President of Piedmont College, passed away at North Andover, Massachusetts on July 21st. Dr. Shipman spent many years of very fine service through our educational institutions in Georgia. A large number of former students, as well as a host of friends and associates will be grieved to know of his passing. He was very greatly beloved by all his students, he understood and sympathized with them in their problems and was most generous in his help, enabling many students to secure the desired education. He was a man of scholarship, graduate from Yale College in the year 1885, from the Yale Divinity School in 1889. He was pastor from that time until 1912 at Andover, Massachusetts. He was a man of sound judgment, broad culture, deep human sympathy and sincere Christian character. He came from an old and important family in Hartford, Connecticut, his father having been an honored judge in the Connecticut courts. Both Atlanta Seminary which is now the Southern Seminary Foundation, at Nashville, and Piedmont College owe him a large debt of gratitude. He was not only acting President of Piedmont College, but for years was President of the Board of Trustees of the college and in that capacity rendered a large service. Dr. Shipman was serving twenty-four years old.

PIEDMONT COLLEGE

Located in

"The Blue Ridge Highlands"

An accredited college with an enviable reputation for superior classroom instruction, and wholesome student life.

Fully recognized and accredited in its home State, and in such neighboring States as North Carolina, South Carolina, Alabama, Tennessee and others. Standard courses leading to the A. B. and B. S. degrees.

The Summer Term, continuing for six and nine weeks, affords opportunity for college and professional study and invigorating recreation.

From six to twelve hours of credit may be earned. Special courses in Elementary, Intermediate, High School and Rural Education. Public School Music and Art; School and Playground Games; Athletic Coaching.

For Fall Term or Summer Bulletin, write

PIEDMONT COLLEGE,
 DEMOREST, GEORGIA.

Southern Seminary Foundation

(Successor to Atlanta Theological Seminary.)

AFFILIATED WITH

Vanderbilt University

The Foundation and the other Foundations that are affiliated with Vanderbilt University School of Religion comprise the only Interdenominational Theological School in the South. Through this affiliation the students enjoy the rights and privileges of Vanderbilt University.

DEGREES.

Candidates for degrees are required to have completed their college courses.

The degree of Bachelor of Divinity is offered to qualified students who complete the required courses.

Vanderbilt University also offers the degrees of Master of Arts and Doctor of Philosophy, in accordance with the regulations established in its several departments.

MORE THAN A SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY.

Because of our affiliation with Vanderbilt, our relations with other nearby colleges where our students can take courses without tuition, and the cooperation of the American Red Cross and other social agencies in the city, we prepare students for many types of Christian service.

For information write

WILLIAM JAMES CAMPBELL, President,
 330 BUTTRICK HALL, VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY,
 NASHVILLE, TENN.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

Representing the Southeast Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches.

IN ESSENTIALS, UNITY.

IN NON-ESSENTIALS, LIBERTY.

IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY.

VOLUME LXXXVI.

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, AUGUST 9, 1934.

NUMBER 32.

.. THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY ..

Virgin Islands Due Rum Boom.—

When the United States purchased the Virgin Islands a death blow was dealt the major industry of these islands—rum-running, which was prohibited by our national prohibition law. Now this industry is to flower again on Uncle Sam's money and with his blessing, for Mr. Ickes' PWA has just authorized the advancing of $1,000,000 to assist in its re-establishment. Our authority for the above adds: "President Roosevelt, one of whose ancestors had a hand in rum too, is in harmony with the plan," which makes it all right.

Bachelors and Maids Taking Heart.—

The Metropolitan Insurance Company's recently issued bulletin indicates that the marriage rate is going up. The rate increased is 4.3% last year compared with an average annual drop of 7.5% from 1929 to 1932. A still further increase was indicated for the first half of 1934. The bulletin says: "It would appear that the trend has definitely reversed and that a sizable proportion of the two million young men and women who postponed marriage during the difficult days of the depression are plucking up courage and getting married as young people should."

A Beam Which May End War.—

Dr. Nikola Tesla, distinguished Italian scientist, on his seventy-eighth birthday announced what he believes to be the most important of his seven hundred inventions. It is an apparatus and a method of sending through the free air beams so powerful that they simply annihilate armies and airplanes within a radius of two hundred and fifty miles of the sending plant. Dr. Tesla declares that because of its deadly defensive power the beam will put an end to war, since no country could attack another without suffering annihilation of its forces. The inventor thinks that the apparatus will be used first to render cities impregnable; each will be surrounded and covered by an impenetrable wall. Dr. Tesla plans to submit his invention to the Disarmament Conference at Geneva. Should his expectations be realized, the inventor will become one of the greatest benefactors of mankind.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

Another Unanswered Question.—

Dr. Harry Earl Woolever, editor of the National Methodist Press says: "Crime bootlegging, and drunkenness have been increasing in the national capital since the destruction of the laws which made liquor selling a crime. Not far from the Capitol, and even closer to the White House, a palatial gambling establishment was raided recently by the police. On Pennsylvania Avenue, two blocks from the White House, a once decent and well-known restaurant has been turned into a 'liquor-house,' with the young women who used to serve nothing but wholesome food now compelled to serve narcotics in the form of all kinds of hard liquors. The Treasury and this great drinking restaurant are separated by only one building. One seeing this condition in Washington may well ask the question, 'Which is worth more in the estimation of Americans, the cold, hard metal brought into the Treasury from the liquor licenses, or these hundreds of youths who are being ensnared into the coils of the alcoholic appetite?'"

Is it the Government or the Governed?—

The Government, which not long ago was plowing under cotton, burning up wheat, slaughtering hogs and enforcing the curtailing of crops, is now suffering the righteous vengeance of outraged Nature in the ruining of crops in the West by prolonged heat and drought. The worst drought in the history of the Midwest and Southwest has already caused a crop loss of hundreds of millions of dollars, and the end is not yet. Officials reporting the wide-spread damages say that each additional day of the withering heat will add thousands of dollars to the tremendous toll already exacted, and express the fear that the blazing, rainless period may continue indefinitely. In Nebraska alone, the crop damage is estimated at $156,000,000. In Missouri, the corn crop lost 100,000,000 bushels in July; the oat yield was only 10 per cent of the normal crop, and pastures were only 15 to 20 per cent of normal and decreasing rapidly. The same story is repeated in Minnesota, Iowa, Kansas, Arkansas, North Dakota, Texas, Oklahoma and other States.—Methodist-Protestant Recorder.

Now for Action!—

Organizations, like resolutions, may turn out to be futile and impotent; but, also, like resolutions, there is no reason why they should. The Congregationalists and Christians in the Oberlin Council passed resolutions and formed organizations which if those who voted for them really mean business, are fraught with immense significance and hope. The resolutions and organizations are in some instances closely related. There would have been little value in appointing a Council for Social Action if the churches had no social vision and if there were no spirit of determination in the championing of Christian ideals in the presence of evils, abuses, and maladjusted conditions of society. The resolution concerning the social order sets as the goal of a socialized order nothing that is in any sense more radical or extreme than is demanded by the Christian spirit in individual life and in social efficiency. It ought to be manifested to every thinking person that selfishness and the commonweal cannot go hand in hand, and it ought to be equally manifest that so-called enlightened self-interest has led society into the morass where private profit constitutes a barrier to the solution of the acute, immediate problem of adapting human resources to human needs. This does not mean that everyone caught in the system of private profit is necessarily selfish or unchristian, but it does mean that we must find a way to surmount these barriers that set the special interest of individual, group, or class against the proper distribution and use of all that God has given humanity through nature or human labor and skill. With tolerant, constructive, loving spirit we must face these tasks, and we may well hope for a Council for Social Action that will give us wise guidance and point the way.—Advance.

Strikes, and More Strikes!—

Strife between employers and employees seems to be on the increase instead of decreasing, notwithstanding the so called settlements on the western coast. One of the latest is that of workers on the new tunnel connecting New York with New Jersey. The hours of labor are acknowledged short enough and the wages as good. There have been no demands for the shortening of the one or the increase of the other. Indeed, the strike is said by union leaders to be a "protest against the employment of non-union laborers on the job." Thus the issue becomes one of compulsory unionization, backed by threats of general strikes. In this connection, we are told by Business Weeks "Two facts emerge prominently. One is that the extensive new rights granted to labor by the Recovery Act do not include the right to compulsory unionization or the right to deprive non-union men of work. The second is that the course of the NRA officials . . . has been such as to mislead labor into believing that it was given that right. A third fact ought to be noted with these: namely that in many of the recent strikes the majority of workers desired to stay at work but were either tricked or intimidated by the minority." The situation which has resulted is the most critical and powerful factor in retarding recovery, and "at present the Johnsons, the Wagners, and the Perkinses, are making the labor confusion more confounded every day. Nor does the American Federation of Labor," so thinks our informant, "promise to be any help. Its officers have shown neither the understanding nor the will to work for industrial peace; . . . (but) have remained most often supine and helpless, when they did not aggravate the conflict." These present labor difficulties must end, and they can only be ended by a determination on the part of the sound majority of labor, working with the large majority of employers who have been and are now willing to play the game fairly. The Golden Rule should be their yardstick.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Rev. A. R. Flowers is soon to close a three week's stay in Rocky Mount. Besides his work in the city, he has visited several rural district churches where large groups of young people meet in Sunday school, Christian Endeavor, Epworth League and B. Y. P. U. activities. His addresses have been a real inspiration. His years of experience as a leader of young people in education and religion have made him a well qualified leader in this field of Christian service.

G. H. Veazey of Wadley, writes as follows: "We are in the midst of our Leadership training school at Wadley this week. We have a fine attendance, not what it should be, but great good is being done. The teachers seem to be at their best. Quite a few of our pastors are engaged in revivals at this time, and of course cannot be with us. I will begin my first revival next Sunday at Cragford. Rev. G. D. Hunt will be with us to do the preaching. From there I will go to Rock Springs. Rev. C. W. Hanson will do the preaching. Then to New Harmony. Millard (Red) Stevens will be with us conducting a Daily Vacation Bible school and will assist in the revival also."

"Among the many encouraging things at present that we feel will guarantee success to Southern Union College in the midst of the present crisis, is the outstanding young man we have for President. Ross Ensminger was born June 13, 1904, at Winter Park, Fla. He had college work at Piedmont, Demorest, Ga., and Carleton, Northfield, Minn. Seminary work at Yale, and Union. Graduate work two years at University of Chicago. He had experience as a Student Summer Service worker in Colorado, South Dakota, Montana, and Pennsylvania. Was associate professor of Religious Education with Prof. S. A. Bennett at Elon College, N. C., for two years. Has held two pastorates; one at La Moille, Illinois, while at the University of Chicago, and the other at Mantorville, Minn., which he left to come to Southern Union College, that he might be of more service to the youth of today by helping to extend the kingdom of God among men. Married Margaret Godhue, Denison, Minn. Two girls have come to bless the union. Mrs. Ensminger is a graduate of Carleton college, Northfield, Minn. The entire community of Wadley, gladly welcomes this accomplished family into our midst, realizing their ability as community workers as well as college workers. We realize also that they have undertaken a great task at this time, but we, the community, pledge to them our loyal support in this great work."

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Home Coming—Come to the all-day service at Damascus Christian Church the third Sunday, August 19th.

The three main speakers will be Revs. Joseph McCauley of Richmond, Va., O. D. Poythress of So. Norfolk, Va., and Dr. J. O. Atkinson of Elon College, N. C. There will be special music and the song service will be familiar hymns that we all know.

We cordially invite all former Pastors and members and friends to come to this "Home Coming."

LOUISE CRABTREE, Secy. and Treas.

PAYMENTS RECEIVED ON SUBSCRIPTIONS DURING JULY.

Below are given the names and addresses of those who remitted for their Christian Sun subscriptions during July. Will you not please look at the label on your paper and, if you are in arrears, also send in your remittance. If you are unable to send in the entire amount, any portion of it will be appreciated. During the summer months, your church paper needs the money which comes from its subscribers in order to meet current bills. Doing your bit will help just lots.

Sincerely,

J. T. KERNODLE, Mg. Ed.

R. E. Apple, Brown Summit, N. C.
E. W. Ballard, Walters, Va.
R. H. Barrett, Zuni, Va.
R. F. Braswell, Cary, N. C.
Mrs. W. H. Black, Co. J. W. Holt, Graham, N. C.
Miss Nonnie Fitch, R. 2, Burlington, N. C.
Miss Etta Fleming, R. 1, Middleburg, N. C.
Rev. Joe French, 901 Hillside Ave., Ocean View, Va.
K. S. Gammon, R. 3, Hickory, Va.
Miss Aylmer Goodwin, 305 10th St., Columbus, Ga.
Mrs. Jane Huffines, R. 1, Elon College, N. C.
Mrs. F. N. Hall, Hickory, Va.
Dr. W. A. Harper, 2321 W. End Ave., Nashville, Tenn.
J. A. Kimball, Manson, N. C.
W. E. MacClenny, Suffolk, Va.
Rev. J. E. McCauley, 3206 Grove Ave., Richmond, Va.
Mrs. Sallie S. McCauley, R. 3, Chapel Hill, N. C.
Miss Zula Matthews, R. 1, Varina, N. C.
W. C. Pierce, Sunbury, N. C.
Mrs. J. W. Price, 18 Albemarle Ave., Richmond, Va.
Mrs. E. Ramsey, 152 S. Saratoga St., Suffolk, Va.
J. A. G. Shepherd, R. 1, Altamahaw, N. C.
Mrs. Ida M. Spain, Waverly, Va.
Mrs. J. C. Tate, R. 2, Altamahaw, N. C. (New.)
Miss Mary I. Thomas, R. 4, Burlington, N. C.
J. R. Truitt, 1244 Randolph Ave., Greensboro, N. C.

MATTHEW 11:28.

Of all the many times that Jesus used the word "Come" no other time is it so expressive as in the verse, "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." How they must have thrilled the hearts of His hearers and how they do thrill our hearts as we read them. No one has ever spoken such words before with such a blessed promise linked therewith. Surely these very words proclaim His deity! Sin is the cause of all the heavy loads which burden souls and bodies today even as it was when Jesus the Christ spoke these words to the multitudes which followed Him to all He speaks with longing entreaty, "Come—and—rest." Soul rest brings bodily rest, for the body does not get so weary when the soul is resting in the everlasting Arms. There is a double weariness when neither soul nor body is at rest.

"Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls." The second rest as in the Epistle to the Hebrews: "There remaineth therefore a rest to the people of God." We become God's people when we come the first time and confess our weariness of carrying the burden of sin and accept the rest which He so freely gives, the rest which Jesus purchased for us when He shed His blood upon Calvary's cross. But we find the second rest as we follow on to know the Lord; as we take His yoke upon ourselves and become submissive to His will concerning us and say with the Apostle Paul: "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave Himself for me. "Then we are ready to learn of Him the lessons that were portrayed in His own life which is our perfect example. Lessons of humility as in the Gospel of John 13:12-16; lessons of sacrifice as in Philippians 2:4-8; lessons of patience as in I Peter 2:20-24; lessons of abiding in the will of God as in the Gospel of John 5:30. It is the penalty of sin which burdens us, but Jesus paid the price that we might be free and gave us rest; it is the power of sin that keeps us restless but "He breaks the power of cancelled sin and sets the prisoner free." When the power of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ takes control there is a deep settled peace ever abiding in our souls no matter what emergency may arise. "When He gives rest, none can cause trouble and those who uprightly seek Him shall find peace and comfort." In the prophecy of Jeremiah the words of the Lord spoke to the people saying: "Ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls." "Let us therefore fear, lest, a promise being left us of entering into His rest, any of you should seem to come short of it."

"To the Lord bring all your burden,
Put the promise to the test;
Hear Him say, your Burden-Bearer,
'Come unto Me, and rest!'

"Trust Him for all thy future,
He will give thee what is best;
Why then fear when He is saying,
'Come unto me, and rest!'"

W.

NOTHING BUT LEAVES.

By REV. G. H. VEAZEY.

"Nothing but leaves," the Master exclaimed
When He came to the fig tree that was bare;
"You've had the great blessings of sunshine and rain,
Yet, fruit you're unwilling to share."

"Nothing but leaves" I hear Jesus say
When He speaks to the man who's at ease;
'Get busy today; there's no time to play,
If the Father you would try to please.'

"Nothing but leaves," comes ringing to men
Whose lives bear no fruit at all;
Give Jesus your heart, from Him ne'er depart,
Then fruit will be found at His call.

"Nothing but leaves." 'Tis only your fault,
Your time has been wasted in vain;
You could have borne fruit, but now it's too late,
The harvest will not come again.

"Nothing but leaves." What else can Christ say?
Disappointed, He comes for His own;
Rebellious you've been while living in sin,
You cannot find room at His throne.

"Nothing but leaves." How sad it will be
When Jesus shall gather His own;
Your time has been lost, 'tis too late to pray,
You must reap the things you have sown.

28 ELON COLLEGE STUDENTS TO RECEIVE AID FROM FERA.

Elon College, Aug. 1.—Twenty-eight Elon college students will make part of their school expenses this year through funds made available by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration.

Approximately 100 applications were made for FERA jobs at the college. Twenty-six of the 28 to be helped have been selected and will be assigned clerical, social and library work. Fourteen of the 28 will be old students and the other 14 will be new students.

Fifteen dollars monthly will be given each of the 28 students, who will work less than 66 hours each month.

WITH NORFOLK CLERGYMEN.

By SANDUSKY CURTIS.

THE REV. JOE M. FRENCH

(This is the ninth of a series of articles dealing with the lives of Norfolk ministers.)

With $7.35 in his pocket and faith in his heart the Rev. Joe M. French, now pastor of the Ocean View Congregational-Christian church entered Elon College in 1924 to prepare for the ministry. His story, told in this interview, goes far in sustaining the feeling that truth has even more astonishing ramifications than fiction, for in "working his way through" Elon he conquered handicaps in his desire realized in graduation from Vanderbilt just a year ago.

In a reminiscent mood, Mr. French spoke of his start to college as follows:

"I did not know how I was going to get the money to go to school but I kept digging away until I got it. I left home to go to college with $7.35 in my pocket. I went to school seven years on that money.

"How did I do it? I had to thumb my way back and forth between college and home, for there was no money for transportation. I had to wash dishes, wait on the tables, sweep floors, sell food and soft drinks in order to keep myself in school. And it goes without saying that I had to study to obtain my education.

When asked as to his most unusual manner of raising funds to continue his fight toward his ministerial objective he answered.

"My most unusual experience in making money was by gathering cats out in the country and selling them to a laboratory. I had quite a time rounding up the cats for the sales but got my money and it all went toward the "sinking fund, which remained near collapse most of the time."

One could not hear of such a battle to secure the equipment necessary without asking Mr. French as to why he entered the ministry. He said:

Feels Call to Preach.

"From my boyhood I expected to be a preacher. I was born in a log cabin at Wedowee, East Alabama, on April 30, 1902, and I felt the call to be very definite. I have many first cousins and other kin but not one of them ever thought of preaching. So I determined to be a minister of the gospel."

Speaking of his early days, he explained, "when a boy I attended a Methodist Sunday School quite regularly. When I was 13 my teacher left the community without warning and one can imagine my surprise when I was offered the class by the superintendent. I agreed to do the best I could and taught it for ten years.

"Although I joined the Christian church I continued to go to the Methodist church and the presiding elder appointed me chairman of the board of stewards before I completed high school. I graduated from high school in 1924 and took my A. B. from Elon in 1928.

"I was sent to Rockingham county that same year as pastor of six churches. I was enabled to handle so many churches because of the fact that some had services only one or two Sundays in the month while others had nothing but a morning, evening or afternoon service. I continued this work for 20 months. It was while doing this work I had a certain very definite conviction.

"And that conviction was that I needed more education. It is true that high school and college had been a great help but I was not satisfied with my equipment. I went to Vanderbilt University for one of its short term courses for ministers. I liked the University and upon receiving scholarships it was made possible for me to do my graduate work. I was happy in the completion of this work and it was then that I was called by the Mission Board of the church to come to Norfolk and take charge of the work at Ocean View."

While most of his life since 1924 has been one class after another, Mr. French found time to travel 3,000 miles on a trip in the United States in the summer of 1931. He left Nashville, Tennessee and through the aid of automobilists got to Fort Worth, Texas, where he spent a week and visited friends in nearby cities. He traveled to East Alabama and to hearths well known to him and on to Nashville when school opened.

Mr. French took up his work at Ocean View on a temporary basis in the summer of last year but was called by the congregation in November. He was made pastor also of the Berea Christian church, the pulpit of which had long been filled by the Rev. J. F. Morgan, who remains as pastor of the Rosemont Christian church.

Alternate services are conducted at the seashore and rural charges held by Mr. French. The Ocean View church is located on Chesapeake Avenue, Cottage Line, and the Berea church is at Great Bridge, being one of the oldest churches in this section.

Steady strides are being made in the work at Ocean View and Berea, it is reported. Mr. French is taking an active interest in the Tidewater Ministerial Union as well as in the affairs of his own denomination.

Plans for Fall Work.

Plans for the Fall are being made at the View with the work among the Sunday school classes, Missionary Society, Christian Endeavor Society, the men of the church and the women of the church, showing every sign of being in a position to reach new heights of efficiency as time passes. Mr. French is not a stranger to young people's work, having been a councilor for the group in Shenandoah while pastor in Rockingham County.

Since coming to Norfolk Mr. French has been honored by his own denomination. He is financial secretary of the Eastern Virginia Missionary Association. He is treasurer of the Eastern Virginia Ministerial Association in which the ministers of the churches hold membership.

During this year he was chosen as the president of the Greater Norfolk Council of Sunday Schools of the Congregational Christian churches. His duties as president bring him in close touch with the youth forces of the schools and their leaders as well. He was host pastor at a recent meeting of the council at which an uplifting program on evangelism was enjoyed.

While he is one of the younger ministers of the city, Mr. French is a seasoned veteran in conflict with the world and he seldom fails to put into his work that energy and determination which enabled him to secure an education with $7.35 as capital.—Ledger-Dispatch.

ARE WE TRYING TO APPROACH THE SUBJECT OF PEACE THROUGH THE WRONG DOOR?

By TIMOTHY THOMAS.

The subject of peace is as old as the subject of war. It is a debatable question if efforts toward peace have ever prevented war. The subject of peace is popular and with few exceptions seems to meet with universal approval. The real effectiveness of peace talks may be somewhat lessened for the reason that those who make speeches on peace during peace times usually proclaim patriotism in their addresses in times of war. It may yet be discovered that we place a one-sided construction on the word patriotism.

If the goal toward peace is right—and it must be—then we have either approached the subject from the wrong angle or it is a process of peculiar education, the rudiments of which we have not fully discovered. If we are to measure our progress toward peace in the light of our peace achievements during the last hundred years, then the process and the progress toward the elimination of war is only begun.

During the tranquil period from 1900 to 1914, the majority of the foremost advocates of peace openly predicted that we would never have another war. Following the close of the World War, would-be prophets declared that the world had learned its lesson, especially the European countries. Today all Europe is saturated with the spirit of war, ready to burst into a catastrophe of human destruction at any moment. Germany has the man-power to stage another sizable war, the only drawback being her economic resources and her present inability to borrow. Austria defies aggression. England's fighting equipment is above its normal standard. France has lost no time and withheld no expenditures toward preparations for war. Russia is the very symbol of conflict.

In this country, while we are talking peace we are planning war, or at least planning for war. We have spent millions of dollars on peace negotiations, but more than once we have found that these negotiations appear to be a little less than a scrap of paper. We agree to reduce our armaments, but in the final analysis this reduction has meant only the scrapping of antiquated war machinery, war weapons, and paving the way for building of more adequate man destroying implements. Even now while we are officially talking peace, advocating peace, millions preaching and praying for peace, our Washington navy yard is employing thousands of men working in three eight-hour shifts building only destructives. A program nearly equal to this is being carried on in all of the navy yards of our Government. One battleship was recently completed at a cost of fifteen million dollars. There is now under construction in our Norfolk navy yard a sea-going plane carrier that is to cost in excess of seventeen million dollars.

Ask the man on the street, in the shop, in the office, if he wants war, and his answer is always negative. Take a poll on the question in small or large groups and the answer is always overwhelmingly negative. Then why do we have war? Who causes it? Who declares it? Who carries it on?

It is not the masses we need to educate against war, but to convert and convince about a hundred financiers in this and other countries. War lords are not those who seek to enrich themselves on the profits of war. War profiteth nothing except to a few, and it must be our rightful approach to that few that will hasten the day of peace. The money changers in the temples of greed who finance propaganda for war, and then profit by war, are galvanized to penetration of public opinion. The approach to them cannot be on a basis of human interest. They are not reached through our adopted channels of education for peace.

It may appear to be a cruel thing to say, but if we are to commit murder in the name of war, then it would be better to destroy physically the money powers who finance wars than it would be to slay ten thousand times their number. The wrong man has too often faced the firing squad.

Were I so tall to reach the pole,
Or grasp the ocean with my span,
I must be measured by my soul:
The mind's the standard of the man.

—Watts.

E-D-I-T-O-R-I-A-L

EDITOR

J. O. ATKINSON, ELON COLLEGE, N. C.

ASSOCIATE EDITOR

E. C. GILLETTE

117 W. Forsyth Street, Jacksonville, Fla.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS

I. W. JOHNSON      ELISHA A. KING

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

CONSIDER THE LILIES.

The trouble is we will not consider. We are so nervous, fidgety, restless, that we take no time to consider. We have read now of the American who employed four black natives to carry him into the interior of Africa. After being prodded to hurry along for three days the Africans refused on the morning of the fourth day to go further. Demanding an explanation for their obstinate conduct, the American was informed, "We have travelled so fast these three days that we have got to wait now for our souls to catch up." We Americans do outrun our souls. They need to catch up. Our good heavenly Father set aside and sanctified one day in seven so that we might give our bodies rest and let our souls catch up. But we now desecrate that day and instead of giving ourselves time to consider we go on auto trips for the day, have our picnics and seek other excitement for our bodies. Jesus said "consider the lilies." Here indeed is an instance showing the inestimable benefit of this. Dr. Kagawa of Japan, noted now as one of the greatest preachers of the world tells what happened to him. "An urge to study English led me to join a missionary's Bible class. In this study I came upon Luke 12:27, 'Consider the lilies, how they grow: they toil not, neither do they spin; but I say unto you, even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these.' Through this verse of scripture I made the momentous discovery that the love of God enfolds the universe. I was beside myself with joy. I awoke to the tremendous truth that, instead of becoming a little god after death (as my religion had taught me) I was here and now a son of God, the Creator and ruler of this vast universe. I fairly leaped with joy. I was completely captured by the Christ who gave His life that He might reveal the love of this Father God to all mankind." But which of us stop, as this pagan Japanese did, to "consider?"

J. O. A.

PAY DAY COMES.

It never fails to come. And more often than not, it comes at a most inconvenient season.

Ask the churches. Many of them built when money was plentiful and easy to borrow. Now pay day has come, and heavy debts make the churches groan.

At a meeting of the bishops of the Methodist Episcopal church in Cleveland, O., recently, it was revealed that on 7,000 Methodist church properties there was an indebtedness of $68,000,000, and that only one in seven of these churches could meet interest and amortization charges on their mortgages. Our Methodist brethren are not alone in their groanings beneath church debts they cannot pay. There are thousands also from Congregational-Christian churches that cannot pay their debts because they built in the flush days beyond their means. And there are others. What sage, if not Ben Franklin, wisely advised, "Pay as you go. If you can't pay, don't go!" That proverb heeded would save many heartaches and some suicides.

J. O. A.

THEY WHO TAKE THE SWORD.

Stands yet the words of Jesus "Put up thy sword into its place: for all they that take the sword shall perish with the sword." Germany's Hitler, dictator and tyrant, is putting the sword to his political foes, over seventy of them being slain in a coup surreptitiously, on a recent evil day. Hitler's word has become law with 65,000,000 Germans who know full well the power, and the ruthlessness of their ruler. Openly they tolerate, many of them approve and praise, while secretly they scorn and many despise, this man of blood and death whom Fate has foisted upon them. Germany's woes multiply, her sorrow increases with the death of her beloved President, Von Hindenburg, and darkness gathers. Hitler has taken up the sword. He must face the consequences. The sword cuts in many directions.

J. O. A.

IN APPRECIATION.

While at the Blue Ridge Conference (N. C.), I learned of the comparatively recent death of Dr. Frank E. Jenkins and a few days ago while here at Fairview, N. C., I have been saddened at the news of the death of another friend, Dr. Frank Shipman.

I shall always think of these two men as great men in their respective lines and I feel inclined to pay their memories a tribute of praise insofar as any word of mine may be of value in this connection.

My first acquaintance with Dr. Jenkins began through correspondence. When I lived on the Pacific Coast some of the members of our parish were regular contributors to Piedmont College. They showed me copies of letters sent to them by Dr. Jenkins. Later I received some of these myself. He was a great letter-writer, a keen Strategist for the college. I did not realize then that I would ever meet him, but when I came to the South to live he came to see me at Miami Beach. Then I went to see him and finally became a member of his board of college trustees. The relationship grew to be intimate.

One evening at Demorest, around commencement time, I sat with him in front of a comfortable grate fire and got him to talk about himself. I marveled at his story then and I still do. Coming as he did to Atlanta years ago when Congregationalism was little known in the South he accomplished a great work. Not only did he build a fine church, but he gathered about himself a group of substantial laymen who stood by him with the greatest loyalty and generosity. He told me of his first visit to Demorest and the purchase of the Academy, the old hotel building, the store buildings out of which he expected to create a college. And he did most of this without ready money. He had great courage, unflinching faith and the spirit of adventure. He took great chances, or what seemed chances to people of less confidence and he raised all the money he needed in the South and the North to put over his Educational propositions.

What he did at Demorest is a matter of history. I am not so much concerned about that as I am about the character of the man. He had personal religion. He believed in a prayer-answering God, but he was not one to sit down and wait. He believed what the old proverb implies "The Gods help those who help themselves." He thought out his financial campaigns and put his whole life into securing the money. He built up a great subscription system, aided by his good wife, and it is doubtful if there was anything quite like it in the country. He was in touch with thousands of contributors in every state in the Union, and the income from these subscriptions was very large. He was recognized as one of the most successful financial directors in the country before money raising agencies sprung up in our great cities.

He was interested in a great many endeavors. He was instrumental in creating Atlanta Theological Seminary and in financing it. And it is here, in connection with the Seminary that I came to know Dr. Frank Shipman who was at one time president of the institution. My chief relation with Dr. Shipman, however, was in connection with Piedmont College. He was President of the Board of Trustees of which I was a member, and there, under stress of very difficult circumstances I have known him as a diplomat and a man of unusual keenness in business matters. He was a splendid correspondent and deeply interested in the welfare of the college.

These two men will both be greatly missed for they were men of wide influence. We need more men like them in the ministry today. They both gave their lives in the interest of religion and education. Their standards of personal living were high and they counted themselves as servants of God engaged in enterprises entirely worth while. They were men of education, of high character and their lives were spent in seeking to make the world a better place in which to live.

E. A. K.

The following list of qualities are needed by a preacher: Strength of an ox, tenacity of a bulldog, daring of a lion, patience of a donkey, industry of a beaver, meekness of a lamb, hide of a rhinoceros, disposition of an angel, loyalty of an apostle, faithfulness of a prophet, fervency of an evangelist.—James Baird, Primitive Gospel Herald.

It is time to remember that the Service of Man is first of all a great service for God. This faith alone can keep us from the wilfulness, the crochets and the insubordination, which spoil so many well-intentioned for their kind, and so woefully break up the ranks of progress.—George Adam Smith.

THE RISING TIDE OF NATIONALISM.

By REV. THEODORE A. GREENE.

[An address delivered in the First Church in Oberlin, Ohio, to the Seminar on Peace Problems of the General Council of the Congregational and Christian Churches.]

I want to talk with you at the outset of our discussion on this fourth morning of our Seminar on Peace Problems about a subject in which every Christian and Patriot should be interested.

All about us in the world today, we see abundant evidence of what the Journalists call—"The Rising Tide of Nationalism." So powerful and sweeping is this tide in its effect, that we cannot neglect it, nor deny it, even if we would. Like King Canute of Britain in the ancient tale, we are in danger of being overwhelmed by its advancing waves. It threatens to engulf not only the Churches but the whole program of world accord today. It is, therefore, important that we should face it, analyze it, and find some way to stem its rapid advance in America and overseas.

Ever since the World War, this tidal wave of nationalism has been rolling up along the shore of all the seas. There was a time some ten to fifteen years ago, when men of hope and vision round the world were dreaming dreams and thinking thoughts and laying plans for the establishment of the Universal Brotherhood of Men. In fact, not more than seven years ago, they were shaping covenants and signing peace pacts and designing multilateral treaties intended to bind the whole world together in one great family of nations beneath the high canopy of heaven. In gratitude to God for His great gift of Peace and in the universal joy that followed on that first, sweet, solemn silence of the guns after the signing of the Armistice, men prayed to God and dared to hope with the Prophet Isaiah that "Of the increase of his, i. e. God's Government and of peace, there shall be no end."

But now, how is it in the world of man?

For the last ten years, it seems that all too rapidly the peoples of the world have been slipping backward into nationalism. In the Far East, China has been girding up her loins in an attempt to make a nation out of a vast disjointed population. Japan has been struggling unscrupulously and in direct disobedience to her solemn word, in certain instances, to make and keep a place for herself in the land of the Rising Sun. India, too, has been the scene of a great movement toward self-government. Russia has thrown off the yoke of one tyranny and taken on in its place the overlordship of the proletariat.

Nor is this "Rising Tide of Nationalism" confined to Asia and the East. In the western world of Europe, France has been behaving like the unspanked child of the continental family. Italy, the land of the Popes, has given itself over to a Fascist Movement that is rooted and grounded in almost undiluted nationalism. Germany has come at last, after long years of divided counsel, under the dictatorship of a national-socialist party headed by an orator and a little company of men untrained in statecraft. The avowed aims of this Nazi Government today surpass even the fondest hopes of His Imperial Majesty, the former Kaiser Wilhelm. Even Great Britain and America, the last great strongholds of Democracy, have lost much of their previous fervor for the salvation of the world and settled down long since in disillusionment to the business of "Buying British" and pursuing the policy of "America, First, Last and Always."

We need not be surprised, however, at the turn of events which has taken place in the last ten years. For we have only to look back into the history of other wars to see the same thing taking place. Even before the days of the Old Testament, there has always been a resurgence to na-tionism after every great war in all the countries that were involved. If our time permitted, I could cite you here chapter after chapter in human history to prove this contention. This present psychopathic form of so-called patriotism sweeping round the world today is almost as old as the ages. The only difference between the world war and other great conflicts in history is a difference of extent! Yes, and the only difference between the present Rising Tide of Nationalistic feeling, and other similar reactions in the past is the difference of degree.

I invite you to think with me this morning, therefore, as a means to priming the pump of our Peace Problems Seminar about certain dangers and difficulties, which confront us as Christians in the present situation. And let me add, that much of that which I shall bring you here has been gleaned from Edward Shillito's book "Nationalism, Man's Other Religion," and from that recent novel of Sir Philip Gibbs, "The Cross of Peace," both recommended as advance reading for this particular session of our Seminar.

II.

Though many of us may not have recognized the fact, it is a mistake to assume that a man can have only one religion! He may be Hindu, Buddhist or Christian, and at the same time have another religion! He may profess any one of the eight living religions of this present world, and still make his nation the object of his supreme devotion. As we walk thru the modern world, we can find many altars dedicated not to God but to Patria! And what is more, we must recognize that among the modern worshippers of Patria, or Fatherland, are men of every race and creed. The worship of the nation goes back in human history, three thousand years and more. It has always had an attraction for mankind. And no one who would think seriously upon the present status of the world can afford to ignore it. It isn't enough, therefore, to discuss nationalism merely as a political theory. To many it is another religion! to some, alas, it seems to be the only religion.

And now for a word of definition! By religion here, I mean not what is commonly meant. I mean rather that reference of all things human to one master-interest! That master-interest has been found by most religious people in the mind and will of God! But, friends, it is also true that there can be objects of worship and devotion other than a personal God! And it is with one of these other objects, i. e. the nation, viewed as an end of worship and devotion that we would deal today.

Believe me, friends, there is no escape from religion whichever way we turn. It matters not whether we set out to discuss science, art or economics, in the end we always find ourselves thinking about God. We may start with pondering upon the main problems which concern the relation of man to man, but we can solve nothing finally, till we have decided what we are thinking about man's relation to God, or to that which we put on the throne of God.

For example, there are alternatives today before the peoples of the world in their political life. Russia at this very moment presents a dark enigma. In China and India, the slow movements of centuries are crowded into a day. In Asia right now we may truly say, "One day is as a thousand years." No one can understand the communist party in Russia, however, until he studies it as a Godless Church but filled nevertheless with a religious passion for the state. And no one can understand the nationalism of the East, and the followers of Sun Yat Sen in China and Gandhi in India, until he detects in these respective movements the marks of religion. In one sense, the alternative choice which men are making now is this—

(1) Either they are choosing to stand today for those wider claims of the Kingdom of God in the whole earth,

(2) Or else they are resting back upon the belief, which is and must be fallacious to every true Christian, the belief that the nation is for every man a sacred society, which has the right to claim his unbounded loyalty, and that only in the nation can the individual life be fulfilled.

And just because, in the present hour, man is in danger of losing his traditional religion, whatever it may be, Christianity in Germany, for example, or Hinduism in India, the danger is that he will make nationalism a substitute for the real article! Nationalism in this sense takes on the character of a religion, and needs to be understood, therefore, by those who would make it in America an alternative to Christianity! Whether a nation shall be democratic or republican, socialist or oligarchical, is not necessarily a question upon which the Christian religion can lay down the law! That I grant you! But whether the nation is to be regarded as a society above which there is no greater power, and whether the nation has the right to claim in all things our absolute obedience that I claim cannot be a matter of indifference to Christian people! In the early days of the Christian era, the worship of the state epitomized in the statue or the symbol of the Emperor was the very first conflict in which the blood of Christian martyrs was shed. And who shall say but that sometime soon in this modern world, we Christians shall have to make the same sort of choice! *

I don't know what you may think about this business of nationalism, friends, but as I am speaking about it here, I see it as another form of religion offering itself today to the hungry, disappointed souls of men! In the face of this "Rising Tide of Nationalism," therefore, I believe that the Church of God is called repentance. And we, who belong to that Church, must stop right now and think things out before we are led into the worship of false Gods! We must consider fearlessly those new facts and new demands which are being made upon us as Christians. We must adjust our minds to those new conditions in which the unchanging word of God thru Christ may be fulfilled. That is exactly what I mean by repentance here, the readjustment of our ideas about religion and patriotism without which neither the individual man, nor the Church, nor the nation, can live. Jesus called for exactly this adjustment to enlarged ideas of Church and State in His day.

"Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish," He warned them. But His nation did not repent, and so far as its national order and unity is concerned, it has perished.

Yet Jesus is not the only leader in human history calling men to awake to the demands of moral realism! In the world of science, Copernicus, Pasteur, Einstein have made the same appeal. And always men have had to revise their estimates of truth in the light of new facts! What is more, the reward of following them has been admission into the company of the living. Yes! And the penalty of not following them has been to be cast out into the company of dead things. It is not to be supposed, therefore, that the Christian people of the present age will need less courage and singleness of mind in resisting the claims of nationalism and sticking to the wider claim of real religion than their fathers did.

Hindsight knowledge is so much easier than foresight knowledge, however, that all of us need

(Continued on page 9.)

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Many of the churches in the Southern Convention will be in the midst of revival services next two months. The late Rev. H. H. Butler, who had great gifts for this work, said: "Revival services are more successful in warm weather. People are not easily awakened, spiritually in cold weather." If his interpretation is correct, this summer should be a step forward in our church revivals, for the weather is featuring some high temperatures—in other words, it is hot!

A revival should have spiritual warmth. In recent years there has been a revolt against spiritual fervor and emotional expression in religious meetings. So many people say: "I do not like excitement." Yet these people become greatly excited over a game of bridge, ball, tennis or an emotional movie. Feeling is not the objective in a revival service, but it is, usually, manifested in every group movement of intense prayer and consecration. One cannot make great spiritual decisions without spiritual feeling. People who object to having their feelings moved are opposed to making great spiritual progress. The will of this type of people resists outside interference. Repentance, faith, confession and prayer will produce emotional experiences in cold and indifferent hearts. People dislike the challenge to confess and forsake their sins and dedicate their life to God. When they can be persuaded to consecrate themselves to high christian living the objections to deep feeling disappear. Christian experience is a joy to people who are prepared to obey its mandates and follow its leadership.

The church needs a heart searching spiritual revival. The type of revival needed is not measured by its form of expression. It may come in a quiet way, or, it may be borne on tongues of fire and a mighty whirlwind of emotion. We are not concerned about the method but the power and the work accomplished. "Revive us again" should be the daily prayer of thousands of anxious hearts at a throne of grace. It will not come until many people have bended their knees, broken their wills and humbled their hearts before God. This is a selfish, self-willed age. And we are a material minded people. Civilization can never advance beyond the fundamental principles of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. The Gospel is always in the advance of any civilization. It precedes and supercedes all other systems and forms offered for the uplift of the fallen and the comfort of the troubled. The Gospel is the need of this day and generation. It is not exhausted. Its final interpretation is yet undiscovered. It has many new truths and new applications for old truths.

This revival will have its roots in the Bible as the source of spiritual truth. All moral and spiritual laws are based upon the teachings of the Bible. False and superficial interpretations of the Book are in evidence, but the fundamental truth is as unchangeable as the law of gravitation. The prophets and teachers of the church should know the Bible. And they should know the spiritual destitution and moral depravity of the human race. Many of the daily papers, the magazines and current books are steeped in false and misleading interpretations of moral and spiritual processes. Think of the absurdity of promoting temperance by providing intoxicating liquor for the young people. The current civic plan is to make people sober by giving them drink; promote temperance by intoxication; cultivate good morals by indulging in indecency. Over against these fallacious ideas stands the word of God, pointing to the way of righteousness, as the way of life.

May it be possible to call the church to much prayer, clear understanding, high and holy living in such an hour as this? All things are possible with God. The situation is not hopeless. The present conditions challenge us to new conquest and consecrated effort. The Gospel is adequate. God is eternal. Jesus Christ will not fail.

I. W. JOHNSON.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL AND THE COLLEGE.

The Christian Church has an educational program. This program is inclusive. It begins with the Sunday School, which is entirely on a voluntary basis. The pupils come without cost and the teachers give their services. We invite and urge all who are not in Sunday School to attend. We are rejoiced when the enrollment increases. The Sunday School is a part of the church, and all who are enlisted in Sunday School work are under the influence of the church. The Sunday School is a most important unit in our church organization. From it comes the support of the church in many lines, but particularly for the numerical growth of the organization. A child's religious education is largely provided by the Sunday School in the average church.

The college stands at the other end of the church's educational program for her youth. It is of equal importance. The purpose of the church college is primarily to train leaders for the church. As important as preaching is, it is necessary that the successful pastor have his college training. As important as missionary work is, all mission boards require high standards of training on the part of those who are to carry on the program of education and of evangelism. As important as teaching is in the local Sunday School, it can be done much better if the teacher has had the advantage of a college training.

If the church is to go forward in this day, as we hope and pray it may, it is highly important that her leadership be adequately trained. The leaders of our church saw the necessity of a trained leadership, both for pulpit and pew, and, following that vision, they laid the foundation and built Elon College that the Christian Church's educational program might be completed. We would not think of discontinuing our Sunday Schools and the important work that is done therein; nor would we think of discontinuing our college and of thus depriving our young people of the privilege of receiving their advanced training under the leadership and guidance of their own church.

The Convention had the entire educational program in mind when it passed resolutions calling on our constituency to give its support to the college. You will be reminded that one act of the Convention was to request the Sunday Schools to give their Fifth Sunday offerings to the college. I know that these are, in most cases, small amounts. An objective has been raised to the plan on this account. However, small offerings in a day like this help even when the demand is great. There is a value in the Fifth Sunday offerings, however, beyond dollars and cents.

First, someone has to ask for the offering and, in doing so, it is necessary that he mention the college; and he should have some intelligent information about the college which, in itself, is effective education. Elon College has suffered greatly because the church at large had insufficient information regarding its purpose and program.

Second, the young men and young women in the local Sunday School who are planning to attend college are precisely the ones we want at Elon. Recently, I have interviewed young people who were graduates of high schools and who were members of the Christian Church, who seemed to know nothing about Elon College. They did not know where it was located. They did not even know that it was the Christian Church school. With the important facts of Elon College presented to every Sunday School in the Southern Convention four times a year, it will be impossible for the members of those Schools not to know the important facts about the college.

Third, the Sunday School is ours. The college is ours. They both must be supported by us if they are to continue to be ours. If we do not support our own church institutions, certainly we could hardly expect others to do so.

Fourth, there is a financial side to the Fifth Sunday offerings, certainly. We need those offerings and the School needs them. I hope that Schools will not be content to send small offerings, but that each fifth Sunday they may strive to exceed the offerings of the previous Sunday. A number of the churches have already sent their offerings in, as follows:

Eastern Virginia:

Barretts' Christian S. S. ....	$ .78
Holland Christian S. S. ....	6.00
Holy Neck S. S. ....	4.54
Newport News, First Congregational-Christian Sunday School .....	8.37
Rosemont S. S. ....	10.00
Suffolk Christian S. S. ....	15.59
Wakefield Christian S. S. ....	1.46
Waverly Christian S. S. ....	3.67
	<hr/>
	50.41

North Carolina and Virginia:

Happy Home S. S. ....	$ 3.32
Ingram Christian S. S. ....	5.00
Lebanon S. S. ....	1.00
Mt. Bethel S. S. ....	1.01
Union (N. C.) S. S. ....	2.00
	<hr/>
	$12.33

Virginia Valley:

Leaksville S. S. ....	$ 2.60
Mayland S. S. ....	1.00
Winchester Congregational-Christian S. S. ....	.86
	<hr/>
	$ 4.46

Eastern North Carolina:

Liberty-Vance S. S. ....	$ 3.84
Morrisville S. S. ....	.50
Mt. Auburn S. S. ....	5.00
Sanford Christian S. S. ....	1.00
Wake Chapel S. S. ....	3.23
	<hr/>
	$13.57

Western North Carolina:

Pleasant Hill S. S. ....	$ 1.15
--------------------------	---------

Brother Pastor and Mr. Sunday School Worker, will you please look over the list and if your Sunday School has not sent in its offering, won't you see your treasurer and have this attended to at once? Our summer expenses are pretty heavy. We are not borrowing any money to tide over the summer months. We are depending on the friends of the college and the Sunday Schools of the Convention to come to our rescue. Won't you do what you can to help at this time?

L. E. SMITH.

An old Scotch woman who had never been known to say an ill word about anybody, was one day taken to task by her husband.

"Janet," he said impatiently, "I do believe ye'd say a guid word for the de'il himself."

"Ah, weel," was the reply, "he mayna be sae guid as he might be, but he's a very industrious body."

HISTORICAL SKETCH—APPLE'S CHAPEL.
(Guilford County, N. C.)

Presented by MRS. RUSSELL E. APPLE, Sec'y.,
July 22, 1934.

The exact date of the organization of Apple's Chapel is not recorded. However, Mr. W. E. MacClenny, in his "Life of Rev. James O'Kelly," says that O'Kelly preached at Apple's Chapel in 1809. In Kernodle's "Lives of Christian Ministers," it is stated that a general meeting was held at Apple's Chapel in 1810.

The first minutes of the church, now in hand, are those recorded December 6, 1834:—"A collection was taken amounting to $2.00, this being the first collection and first quarterly meeting held at Apple's meeting house. L. Lambeth and Abner Apple are chosen men to send to our next general meeting." On March 6, 1835, this record is made:—"The church met and when organized, etc." Whether this has reference to the church being organized or the quarterly meeting for transaction of business is not known. On June 6, 1835, "$7.25 appropriation was made for the use of Brother Daniel W. Kerr." Again on September 19, 1835, "$2.75 to Brother Daniel W. Kerr." It will be recalled that Daniel W. Kerr had a school near Hillsboro, also a printing press which did some printing for the Christians and in 1844 began to print THE CHRISTIAN SUN. On June 11, 1835, "the church voted to appropriate to Brother Shubal Evans $5.45." The purpose is not stated for these disbursements, but they are supposed to be made for ministerial services. In 1836, "$5.50 was paid to Shubal Evans by John Apple, Treasurer." December 17, 1836, "$1.00 was appropriated to Adam Apple, Sr., to keep the meeting and school-house in decent order for one year." June 3, 1837, "$5.00 appropriated to Brother Alfred Apple and Brother Alfred Isley for ministerial services." December 2, 1837, "By consent of the church the treasurer, John Apple, is credited with sixty cents for the recording of a deed belonging to the church." At this meeting the treasurer was authorized to purchase a Bible and a hymn-book to remain at the church for the good of the Society. Amount paid for same, $3.25. June 1, 1851, "Peter Clapp and Milton C. Apple appointed trustees of the church and John W. Taylor elected deacon." August 21, 1852, "John W. Taylor and George Christman were ordained as deacons." In 1851 the church roll was revised, the old list showing 224 members, the revised list 178 members. In the membership of 1851, one colored person by the name of Jeston is enrolled, and the church had seven deacons. In 1869, the church had a membership of 144 and a committee was appointed to contract for a preacher, which committee employed Rev. Alfred Isley in the year 1870. In 1870, $1.45 was raised as Conference fund. In 1871, "This church agrees to be governed by the five cardinal principles of the Christian denomination." One hundred and twenty-three members of the church entered into this agreement. From this time on the church has had regular quarterly meetings, the text and comment on the text being given of each service conducted by the pastor or visiting minister. In 1871, the church paid its pastor, $35.55. In 1872, the membership of the church had dropped to 103. On April 28, 1872, the church favored a move to organize a Sunday school, which Sunday school was organized April 22, 1875, John Michael being chosen as superintendent. At this time Rev. W. S. Long was pastor of the church. It was agreed that one-fourth of the male members and as many females as may be present at the meeting constitute a quorum for the transaction of business. Rev. W. S. Long was chosen for 1874, also for 1875, at a salary of $100.00 a year. April 22, 1875, a building committee was chosen to plan a new church house. Rev. A. G. Andrews was elected pastor in 1875 and served until March, 1886, at which time Rev. J. L. Foster was elected. During this period the church was in the process of erecting a new building. No reference in the minutes is given as to when the work on the new building was completed. The record shows that in 1886, $15.00 was raised by the church for Home Missions, this being the first reference to such fund. A year later the Home Mission collection amounting to $33.41; the Foreign Mission collection amounted to $2.48, this being the first Foreign Mission collection mentioned in the records. Rev. A. F. Isley was elected pastor in 1888 and served until 1894; Rev. J. W. Holt was elected pastor 1894 and served two years; Rev. J. W. Pinnix elected pastor in 1896 and served two years; Rev. A. F. Isley elected again in 1898 and served until 1904, at which time Rev. J. W. Holt was again elected and served until 1908. In 1908, Rev. L. I. Cox was elected pastor and served the church until his death in 1919. It was through the friends of Pastor Cox and his associates in the church that brought about the present commodious brick structure. In 1917 a building committee was appointed, plans were drawn and accepted and the bricks for the new building were made and burned on land adjoining and belonging to the church. It was here that Rev. L. I. Cox preached his last sermon on August 24, 1919, his text being John 6:27:—"Labor not for the meat which perisheth, but for the meat which endureth unto everlasting life." Brother Cox died suddenly September 5, 1919, and the church, out of loving devotion to their fallen pastor, sent a design of flowers costing $50.00 as a token of appreciation and devotion to him who had done so much in awakening the church to a new sense of its privileges and power. Brother Cox was succeeded in 1919 by Rev. J. F. Apple as pastor, and he served the church till July, 1921, when he resigned and was succeeded by Rev. Carr E. Geringer. It was while Rev. J. F. Apple was pastor that the work of erecting a building was actually begun, which building was completed during the pastorate of Rev. C. E. Geringer. The first services in the new building were held on Saturday, November 26, 1921, Dr. G. O. Lankford, Burlington, N. C., preaching the first sermon in (Continued on page 14.)

OXFORD BIBLES for EVERY NEED

"The Oxford Bible is the Bible par excellence of the world"

THE HOME BIBLE

A Family Bible in Handy Size

An extra large type Oxford Text Bible, containing also, a family register and 12 beautifully colored maps. Size 9 x 5 1/2 inches.

Specimen of Type

16 The LORD is King for ever and ever: the heathen are perished out

- Nos. 01600 Superior Cloth, round corners and red edges $2.75
- 01603 French Morocco, limp, round corners, red under gold edges, head-band, book-mark $4.75

The JUNIOR'S Bible

Self-Pronouncing

With 4,000 Questions and Answers, carefully selected "Aids to Bible Study," 16 beautifully colored and 15 black full-page illustrations, 6 colored maps and a presentation page. Children may readily pronounce correctly difficult Scripture names, as this Bible is self-pronouncing. Size 7 x 4 1/4 x 1 1/4 inches.

Type in Junior's Bible

2 Take the sum of all the of the children of Is-ra-el, years old and upward, thro

- No. 1815 French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges, headbands and book-mark. Make some child happy with one of these fine Bibles $2.95

Child's ILLUSTRATED Bible

The beautifully colored illustrations in this new Bible are a delight to the children. It has clear, readable type and yet it measures only 5 1/2 x 3 1/2 inches.

Specimen of Type

a My soul longeth, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the LORD: my heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God.

- No. 02112. French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, gold edges $2.50

Pocket REFERENCE Bible

Has over 50,000 center column references. Measures only 6 1/4 x 4 1/2 inches. (A splendid gift for a young lady.)

Specimen of Type

9 Behold, *O God our shield, and look upon the face of thine anointed.

- No. 07523x French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges $3.25

Concordance Edition

Type and size as No. 07523x, but with a Concordance, subject index and dictionary of Scripture names. An excellent edition for students and Christian workers No. 03272x $5.00

OUR LEADER

Oxford Concordance Bible

Self-Pronouncing

This beautiful Oxford India paper edition is indeed the ideal Bible for the student, preacher and evangelist. Each proper name and difficult word is divided into syllables and accented, and though printed with large clear type, the volume measures only 8 1/2 x 5 1/2 x 1 15/16 inches.

Specimen of Type

8 7 23 Jē-hōi'-ā-chin was 6 years old when he began t

- No. 03671x. Fine Grain Morocco leather, overlapping cover, leather lined to edge, silk round corners, red under edges, silk

hear

A UNIQUE GIFT BIBLE

With Basket Weave Binding

The Antique brown calf leather binding has a basket-weave grain, and button clasp. Has overlapping cover, art silk lined, with red under gold edges. With references. Printed on Oxford India paper. Type as Pocket Reference Bible. $5.50

No. 03255x

As No. 03255x, with concordance.

No. 03276x $6.50

Oxford TEACHER'S BIBLES

Have over 50,000 center column references, and 300 double-column pages of up-to-date maps, conveniently arranged in alphabetical order. Also 32 full-page illustrations, and an indexed atlas of the Bible with 15 beautifully colored maps of Bible lands.

Easy-to-Read-Edition

Size 7 1/4 x 5 x 1 1/2 inches

Specimen of Type

14 Like sheep they are laid in grave; death shall feed on th

- Nos. 04453. French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, round corners and red under gold edges. A durable and hand-some Bible $4.35

Oxford India Paper Edition

Only one inch thick.

- 0773x. French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges, headbands and book-mark. A beautiful gift edition $7.00

RED LETTER Edition

Same size and type as style No. 04453, with same references and helps, but with all the words of Jesus Christ printed in red. White paper edition No. 05453. French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges $5.00

The Oxford imprint in a Bible guarantees satisfaction

MISSIONS
 REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary

A PEASANT WOMAN IN INDIA.

My name is Saluchinabi. I am a Hindu woman. The vermilion mark on my forehead indicates that I am a married woman. If I were a widow I would wear a white mark lower down on my forehead, near my nose.

My home is in the village of Vadala, which has a population of 500 and is situated twenty miles from a railroad center in the heart of India. My country is pre-eminently a village country. Seventy-five per cent of my people live in villages of less than 2,000 people. Ask almost any one you meet where his real home is—even though he may have lived in the city all his life—and he will give you for his home the name of a village from which his ancestors came, or where he owns a small tract of land.

I was married when I was twelve years old, and I am the mother of six children—four boys and two girls. Somehow, in spite of my best care and my prayers before the Hindu Gods; four of my children died.

My husband is a farmer. I was happy to have sons. This pleased my husband.

In India marriages are arranged when children are mere infants, between those of same caste and same sect. Hindu take it for granted all men and women must marry. Polygamy exists and is a true Hindu institution.

I live in a small house. Animals live on one side. The family on the other. My house is in the form of a square with an interior court opening up to the sky in the center. There are no windows opening on the street, and if there were, they would be placed so high in the wall that no passerby could look in. My kitchen is my sacred room and no one of a lower caste may enter. At ev'en time droves of cattle come home from the pasture. As they go along every here and there one or more of the cows or buffaloes will turn aside and go up the steps of the houses, passing through the doors left open. The animal proceeds to the accustomed place in the yard or compound.

I have no electricity in my house. I have just a little clay stove. Oh, how it smokes! I have no tables, chairs, silverware, or dishes—just metal or earthenware pots. My dinner plate is the leaf of a lotus or a plantain.

Nature is good to the Hindus.

A rug or two may be spread on my floor and a few cushions to lean against. My light is from a small lamp, a wick lying in a saucer of oil.

I have no bathtub. I bathe by pouring water over me from a brass mug-shaped vessel and do this in my back yard. I wouldn't think of getting into a bath tub.

There is no "going to bed" in the sense understood by you people of America. The climate is the reason. The men lie down anywhere on the verandah, or any place fancy dictates. The long sheet-like cloth is unwound from the body and the person is covered. The way of sleeping causes illness and rheumatism.

Perhaps you would like to know what we eat, and at first sight it may seem that my table is lacking in variety. No steaming roasts, very little animal food—largely a vegetable diet. We drink water, milk and buttermilk if we can get it.

I do my washing at the village well.

I love personal ornaments, believing there must be a speck of gold on my person in order to insure personal ceremonial. Any little gain and saving, I spend for jewels. When a rainy day comes the money lender will always give a loan on jewels for security. When I meet other women at the village well for a chat, we talk about our jewels as you women talk about your clothes. We often quarrel over jewels if one member of the family has more than another.

I wear my jewels on my hands, my arms, in my nose, on my ears, around my neck or on my ankles. My jewels are all handmade and the settings are of fine gold or silver. My sister has no jewels because she is a widow. If I could not afford jewels I would have glass bangles, in varying colors. Even babies who have no clothing on, play about with bracelets, necklets or anklets of value on their brown bodies.

Have you any superstitions? I have. I believe in omens. I believe in placing chains or ornaments on my babies to prevent them from the evil eye. Odd numbers are lucky, even numbers are unlucky. There are 43 different things listed as good and 34 as evil if any should happen, as one sets out on a journey. I believe in snake and lizard omens. The ways of the crow are highly ominous—also of the dog, the cat, and the jackal. Sneezing is regarded as an omen. To sneeze many times denotes accomplishment of one's desires. We have many bird omens. When a person yawns life may leave the body. These are some of the omens. I believe in them.

My Hindu people are devoted to keeping up our numerous and varied festivals. One hundred and twenty-five festivals are observed in the year. I like them. They break the dull ploddings of my life by rest and enjoyment. They are observed by fasting, by pilgrimages.

My people are faithful to their shrines and to their gods.

My boy goes to the Mission School in Vadala. It is a single room with a table, a chair and a blackboard. The pupils sit cross-legged on the floor. Sometimes there is a garden outside where seeds are planted and grow. He is learning new ideas of agriculture and cleanliness. I like to have my boy taught these things.

My girl is in the Mission School and learns from the teacher how to keep well—new methods of hygiene, cleanliness and how to take care of babies. I love to have her know how to tend them and keep them well and living.

My children in the mission school are hearing about the Jesus way of life where there are no castes, but universal brotherhood, service and love.

I am devoted to my Hindu Gods, and I am faithful in the pilgrimages to my Hindu Shrines and in my observance of Festival days, but I am interested, and I am listening to hear if there is something better and to find out what it is.

The spirit of hope is being kindled within my heart.

MISSIONARY OFFERINGS.

WEEK ENDING AUGUST 4, 1934.

Sunday Schools.

Previously acknowledged	$ 2,838.65
First Christian, Greensboro, N. C.	11.92
Biscoe, N. C.	131
Sanford, N. C.	1.00
Pleasant Hill, Liberty, N. C.	1.45
Wakefield, Va.	.87
Waverly, Va.	3.51
Newport News, Va.	7.97
Timber Ridge, High View, W. Va.	1.62
Youngsville, N. C.	2.00

Holland, Va.	5.00
Windsor, Va.	6.55
Total	$ 2,881.85

Individuals and Churches.

Previously acknowledged	$ 2,689.63
Chapel Hill, N. C.	1.00
Youngsville, N. C.	4.00
Henderson, N. C.	5.25
Total	$ 2,699.88

Specials.

Previously acknowledged	$ 946.48
Pleasant Hill C. E. Society, Liberty, N. C.	1.00
Total	$ 947.48

Coin Card Offering.

Previously acknowledged	$ 101.01
Miss Georgia Bradley, Mebane, N. C., (Mt. Zion Ch.)	1.00
Total	$ 102.01

Summary.

Previously acknowledged	$16,962.78
Total offerings, week ending Aug. 4, 1934.	55.45
Total to date	$17,018.23

QUARTERLY REPORT.

The Woman's Mission Board, E. Va. Christian Conference, third quarter:

Women's Societies.

1. Berea Norfolk	$ 20.25
2. Berea Nausemoud	12.06
3. Bethlehem	10.00
4. Christian Temple	44.00
5. Cypress Chapel	27.00
6. Damascus	9.00
7. Dendron	15.00
8. Elm Ave.	10.00
9. First Norfolk	17.23
10. First Portsmouth	10.50
11. First Richmond	14.00
12. Franklin	36.00
13. Holland	44.00
14. Holy Neck	38.00
15. Hopewell	2.85
16. Liberty Spring	5.10
17. Mt. Carmel	18.80
18. Newport News	20.00
19. Oakland	5.20
20. Rosemont	27.70
21. Suffolk	55.00
22. Wakefield	6.00
23. Waverly	12.50
24. Windsor	6.00
Total	$ 466.19

Young People's Societies.

1. Bethlehem	18.00
2. Burton's Grove	6.20
3. Christian Temple	11.00
4. Cypress Chapel	15.00
5. Dendron	4.01
6. First Norfolk	1.00
7. First Portsmouth	10.00
8. Franklin	10.00
9. Holland	5.50
10. Holy Neck	20.00
11. Liberty Spring	16.20
12. Mt. Carmel	7.00
13. Newport News	3.00
14. Rosemont	3.35
15. Suffolk	15.05
16. Spring Hill	5.00
17. Waverly	2.32
18. Windsor	10.00
Total	$ 162.63

Juniors.

1. Berea Nansemond .....	3.00
2. Bethlehem .....	2.00
3. Christian Temple .....	10.00
4. Cypress Chapel .....	2.00
5. First Norfolk .....	2.75
6. First Portsmouth .....	3.00
7. Franklin .....	15.00
8. Holland .....	7.04
9. Holy Neck .....	10.00
10. Liberty Spring .....	6.10
11. Mt. Carmel .....	2.50
12. Newport News .....	3.00
13. Oakland .....	1.83
14. Rosemont .....	3.54
15. Suffolk .....	14.00
16. Windsor .....	2.72

Total .....$ 88.48

Cradle Roll.

1. Bethlehem .....	4.18
2. Cypress Chapel .....	.50
3. Franklin .....	6.00

Total .....$ 10.68

Grand Total .....$ 727.98

Respectfully submitted,
MRS. W. V. LEATHERS, Treas.

THE RISING TIDE OF NATIONALISM.

(Continued from page 5.)

to be doubly careful here. We read in the Old Testament how the ancient Israelites with the Assyrians and Babylonians knocking at the very gates of Jerusalem went on eating and drinking and marrying until the day of doom broke upon them. And we ask ourselves from the vantage point of history, why did they not repent in time? But Israel's downfall is not the only object lesson that we moderns have to read about! Men were killed also, in 410 A. D. when Allerie Tae Ostrogoth was hammering at the very gates of Rome. The French Nobles in the Palace at Versailles were living their life of wit and elegance and indifference to the real needs of France up to the very day the Revolution broke upon them and they were led off to the guillotine! And less than twenty years ago, the Russian aristocracy had not the perspicacity to see that in an hour they knew not, they would be driven into exile by men whom they despised.

By the great multitude it is always taken for granted that everything will be in the coming days as it is today. Those who prophecy disaster if something is not done are called Cassandras and Jeremiahs by their countrymen, and prove about as popular, (to use a homely phrase), as skunks at picnics. But Cassandras was right! Troy did fall! And Jeremiah was right! Jerusalem was captured and its kings and princes were led away into exile! The moral of history is all too plain. If other men in other ages were blind to the signs of their times, we also may be blind! The call to repentance, therefore, comes with peculiar urgency to the Church in America and to the church around the world today to choose rightly between the religion of Jesus Christ and man's other religion—nationalism. You and I have to live in a real world! And in that real world today there is an altar set up in the minds of men bearing this inscription—"To the Fatherland." Therefore, I say, we need to watch this rising tide of nationalism closely and to check its progress here at home if and when it comes to threaten us in America.

What is more, it seems to me that two alternative policies present themselves to us today. Either we may take our way out of the real issues of the present world, back to the catacombs as did the early Christians, and live there a hidden and buried life all our own, or else we may listen to the voices of this present age in order to catch in them some call from God and the Living Christ at work in the world.

And yet, I think we need to point out that if the Church people of today do retreat into the catacombs, it will not be of necessity, but of their own choice! And if the Church of today is silent on this great issue and says nothing positive on this matter of choosing now between the Kingdom of God and nationalism, Man's other religion, then it is because either the Church has no word to say or else because it is afraid to speak! The world is listening for any voice that can speak with authority. The Christian people, who make up the Church, can speak! And, if they do speak, I tell you, they will have a hearing! And if we, who constitute the membership of the Congregational and Christian Churches do not think thru and speak out our best thoughts concerning the social, economic, political and international affairs of mankind, then these affairs will be left outside the realm of Christ's influence, so far as our corner in the Kingdom is concerned.

If we were living in Germany today instead of America, we could not avoid this issue and this necessity of choosing, even if we would. But, I warn you fairly here that the same necessity of choice may be coming to us also!

For example: No one can think about war for five minutes without being compelled to weigh the claims of Christ and nationalism upon us. War is unavoidable in a world that is organized into states which do not acknowledge anything above the ends of the state. If every state everywhere is to remain the sole arbiter of its own course, what other recourse can there be, but to the strong arm and the glittering sword?

I recognize, of course, that there are plenty of people today who say that nationalism is not a religion at all, that it has to do with outward and temporal affairs. And in some sense, I agree! Real religion, they say, on the contrary, is inward and spiritual! And again, I am inclined to agree. But the place where lovers and students of the Christian faith must differ from their friends and copatriots, who call themselves nationalists today lies here. We believe that while religion in inward and spiritual, it is also and at the same time interested in the things that are outward and temporal, for the Kingdom of God throughout its history has been and still remains both a Divine and a human society. It fulfills an eternal purpose, but it does so in the midst of time. It has its treasures in the earthen vessels of this world, here and now! And it can only make and keep that eternal treasure of the Gospel its own thru courage in dealing with temporal occasions and temporal things.

III.

Let us, therefore, face this issue squarely. Let us recognize the importance of making the right choice now. Memorial Day and Armistice day in America are good times for honoring the real patriots of by-gone days. And we would honor them sincerely on these days in our Churches back home. But these days are also to us times for weighing and measuring the real issues facing the living patriots of today. Nationalism in Russia, Italy and Germany has become, temporarily, at least, almost a religion. God forbid that such a thing should happen in America. For I say to you in all earnestness that nationalism and true patriotism are contrary to each other. If nationalism becomes a religion, it is a false religion. If, however, nationalism like true patriotism remains a passion in the spiritual order, if you and I love our country well because we love the spiritual order of God's world-wide Kingdom more, then ours is a true patriotism that will never fail. Then it has a place no less enduring in human life than the love of kindred. Those who set their nation first in the past invariably lost their nation. But to them, who seek the Kingdom of God first, this much is added, i. e. the true love of fatherland!

The history of New England and the history of Foreign Missions combine to teach this age-old lesson.

Our spiritual forbears, the pilgrims of the Mayflower, never loved their native land so well as when, for the sake of their love to that other country in which their treasure was they left its shores. Yes! And they revealed their love in the names which they gave to their new cities in America, Boston and Cambridge and Plymouth and Portsmouth. In these names we discern today in New England the passionate longing of those Pilgrim Fathers for the best things they brought with them out of Old England, the land of their birth.

And, just so, William Carey planted in the soil of India the seeds of English violets, which he had brought with him from the midlands, Wm. Carey, in voluntary exile as a missionary in India, would never have tasted such an ecstasy of joy, touched as it was with pain, if he had never crossed the barriers of his own country and found himself in a new province of the Kingdom of God. Those violets meant for him a symbol of the home he left behind him in the midst of a strange land, but not the loss of his own country. Instead, William Carey, like the Pilgrim Fathers, lost his Fatherland to find it!

It is not to condemn but rather to save alive the spirit of true patriotism that we speak as we do here today. Nationalism unshaped and undirected, will make an end of any nation that puts allegiance to the state over and above allegiance to God and Christ. We may well view with concern, then, this Rising Tide of Nationalism in our world! But we need not fear it for ourselves unless we, too, in America like the men of yesterday in Asia Minor and the men of today in Europe, choose the wrong religion, and try to put the state upon the throne, where God alone should be!

FOUR WISHES.

Four things I want to have and hold
When, counting time by years, I'm old;
When youthful looks and ways are gone
And life, for me, be nearly done.

I want to have a youthful heart
In which my years shall have no part
And, hearing children at their play,
Within my soul be young as they.

I want to feel that some there'll be
Who still will care a bit for me;
Within whose hearts a place I'll own
That will be mine, and mine alone.

I hope that I shall always keep
A sense of humor, broad and deep;
And with these three, a heart that sings,
And sees the cheerful side of things.

If these four things I have and hold,
I never will be really old,
Tho I a hundred live to be,
Years will not count inside of me.

—Winifred Mott in
"Sunday School Herald."

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

CLOSING MOMENTS OF ELON SUMMER SCHOOL.

Together we sat last Sunday morning in the reception hall—the young people and their leaders who had so faithfully led them during the week. Most everyone grew thoughtful as the dean called the name of each person who had satisfactorily completed some course during the week. As each person stood and received his card, a thrill of happiness seemed to flood our souls. Here were young people who had come from their homes in the Carolinas and Virginia seeking knowledge that would aid them in being better teachers and leaders in their Sunday Schools, churches, and young people's societies. But these young people had found the knowledge from books only a part of the training school program. Friendships that will last forever were formed, and to us had been brought a sense of the presence of God in all things. Because we had talked alone with God in the early morning, we had worshipped together in chapel and vesper services, and had spent time discussing "How Christian Youth Can Build A New World," Christ had become to us a truer friend.

On to the college church we went where the regular morning worship service was held. After a week of fellowship, worship and study, we were to spend our closing moments in close communion with God. Dr. Charles Eldred Shelton, pastor of First Congregational Church, Portsmouth, Virginia, old in years but young in spirit, was the chosen speaker. As he spoke, my mind seemed to wander back and review the beautiful thoughts he had left with us during the week.

He had talked with us about young people and life work. We had found that success was happiness, in the sense that God would use that word, and in order to gain that success we must have a purpose, a progressive plan, determination, and a willingness to sacrifice. An interesting point was reached when we discussed sacrifice. No more sacrifices but rather wise investments are being made today.

This slogan impressed us:

"I will do all things well.
I will do some things better.
I will do one thing best."

The need for an education was an interesting point for discussion. In twenty-five years it was demonstrated that the high school graduate earned $1.00 per day more than the ones who attended only grammar school. Out of 8,000 persons in "Who's Who in America" only thirty-one were practically uneducated, and one thousand, two hundred, forty-five had only a high school education. The largest percentage of those eight thousand children were children of ministers, and a large percentage were children of country doctors.

Some folks fail to turn their education into a living. A true story is told by Dr. Shelton of a man whom he had known in a small country town. The man was earning only one dollar per day. Dr. Shelton visited in this man's home where he found cultured, refined, well-educated people. There were two beautiful daughters who represented the finest, highest type of womanhood. This man had been well educated, but he had not turned his education into a living. Yet his fine Christian character, his ability and tact in dealing with people, his refinement and culture had made him a light in that community.

A college decision should be based first, on the curriculum, second, activity, and third, the social life of the college.

What are you going to do if you can't go to college? This might help. Something in which I can best serve is going to be my ambition.

In the Sunday morning sermon on "Men Wanted," Dr. Shelton emphasized the opportunities that lie about us and the great need of men who will consecrate themselves to His service.

Four young people, who were chosen by the student body to act as deacons, gathered with two pastors around the communion table. After thanks were given, the bread and wine passed, we sat for a few minutes with bowed heads while God spoke to us. He promised strength and courage for the tasks that needed to be done back home.

We have come back to our church with brighter visions and determination to make this world in which we live a better one. We see changes that ought to be made. We know they can't be made in a day, a week, or even a year, but we are going to be persistent, patient, and unselfish enough to see that they are made. But we need you—our Christian parents, leaders, and friends—to guide us, and in order to guide us we want to see in you the qualities of the Man of Galilee. You have loved and guided us in the paths of right, but we want you to be even better Christian leaders. With your help we are going to make better Christian leaders for the next generation. Christ is a living reality in our lives, and we want to serve Him. As we sing together the next hymn, "O Master, Let Me Walk With Thee," will you join us in re-consecrating your lives to his service?

EDNA FULCHER.

YOUTH REPORTS.

In hundreds of our churches young people have returned from summer schools and are reporting on what they learned. Their new vision and joy are to be shared with the larger group who did not climb the mountain to find God. Their new ideas may bring new light and life into the churches of which they are a part. One group of representatives, eight in number, reported to First Christian Church, Norfolk, Virginia, on last Sunday. The entire service was planned by the group. The organist who played for the summer school presided at the organ. A girl who had studied worship and devotional life was in charge of the program. Other representatives told in interesting fashion of the various phases of the summer school. These young people led the congregation in a very helpful worship program and brought information that was interesting. The article preceding is a paper presented by one of the young people.

Resolved, to live with all my might while I do live. Resolved, never to lose one moment of time, but improve it in the most profitable way I possibly can. Resolved, never to do anything which I should despise or think meanly of in another. Resolved, never to do anything out of revenge. Resolved, never to do anything which I should be afraid to do if it were the last hour of my life.—Jonathan Edwards.

WHAT HAVE I TO SHARE?

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR AUG. 19, 1934.

Acts 3:6-7.

Daily readings:

Monday, Aug. 13.—Sharing Christ. Acts 4:11-12.
Tuesday, Aug. 14.—Reluctant to Share. Acts 10:9-18.

Wednesday, Aug. 15.—Sharing Money. 2 Cor. 8:1-9.
Thursday, Aug. 16.—Sharing Privileges. Acts 20:35.
Friday, Aug. 17.—Sharing Knowledge. Gen. 4:25-43.

Saturday, Aug. 18.—Sharing Skill. Ex. 35:30-35.
Sunday, Aug. 19.—What Have I To Share? Acts 3:6-7.

Program.

Instrumental Prelude: "O Love That Will Not Let Me Go."

Opening Hymn: "Where Cross the Crowded Ways of Life."

Prayer.

Hymn: "God of the Strong, God of the Weak."

Scripture: Acts 3:1-10.

Hymn: "Lord, Speak to Me That I May Speak."

Speaker: Theme—"Sharing ourselves and Jesus Christ."

Closing Consecration Hymn.

Make this a very informal summer "sharing" meeting. Perhaps it can be held on the church lawn, or on someone's porch, or in the woods. Begin with a Sunday evening song. During the musical program arrange for someone to play the violin or to sing a special number, thus sharing their musical talent to make your meeting interesting and helpful.

The purpose of this meeting may be two-fold. First, it may provide a most pleasant hour through the contributions which different members have to give to all during the meeting. Second, it may convince many of us that we should develop certain abilities and interests, and thus make our own lives more rich and more useful to others.

"What Have I to Share?" In order to share anything, we must have something ourselves. Maybe we found God sometime ago, but do we rediscover Him everyday? Have we a rich experience worth dividing with others? Do we listen for His voice in daily prayer and meditation? Do we search the Bible for His word? Let us ask ourselves prayerfully, "Have we anything to share?"

How many of the following possessions do you have, and how many are worth sharing?

1. A strong, healthy body.
2. A keen, alert, trained mind.
3. Capacity for friendship.
4. The "stuff life is made of."
5. Money.
6. Talent.
7. Your youth.
8. Religion.
9. A view of life.

Closing thought:

"May every soul that touches mine—be it the slightest contact—get therefrom some good, some little grace, one kindly thought, one aspiration yet unfelt, one bit of courage for the darkening sky, one gleam of faith to have the thickening ills of life, one glimpse of brighter skies beyond the gathering mist, to make this life worthwhile, and heaven a surer heritage."—Writer unknown.

E. R.

You cannot believe in honor until you have achieved it. Better keep yourself clean and bright—you are the window through which you must see the world.—G. B. Shaw.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

AMOS PLEADS FOR JUSTICE.

LESSON VII—AUGUST 12, 1934.

GOLDEN TEXT: Love worketh no ill to his neighbors; love therefore is the fulfillment of the law.—Romans 13:10.

LESSON TEXT: Amos: Chapter 5.

Amos was a striking personality. He was neither a prophet nor the son of a prophet, that is, he did not belong to the professional class which frequented the so-called school of the prophets. In other words he was not what we would call an ordained minister. But as is so often the case God had spoken to him and the spirit of the Lord was upon him. He had knowledge that could not be gotten from books, first-hand knowledge of the character and will of God. This was the first and primary preparation which he had for his work. This is always first and primary.

Other factors entered into his preparation. Amos knew the history of the people, and their traditions. He had traveled widely and had observed closely. He had lived simply and had thought deeply. He had spent much time in solitude and somewhat in seclusion. All of these factors entered into the making of the man and in the shaping of his message.

Amos had a difficult task. First of all he was an unknown, untutored—in the technical sense of the word—plain man of the soil, who was commissioned to go to a city to prophecy. He was a southerner, going to a northern kingdom to speak. He was to utter a message of judgment and even to prophecy destruction. And all of this in spite of the fact that the nation was prosperous, and outwardly very, very religious. It was almost as if an unknown and untrained man from the South should go to some northern city when times were good and when religion was flourishing and pronounce judgment and predict doom. One stands in awe of Amos when one realizes who he was and the circumstances under which he prophesied.

Amos saw beneath the surface of things, and interpreted conditions as they were in the light of eternal principles. It was true that the nation seemed prosperous. Men had heaped up unto themselves great fortunes, they had built great houses, they had laid out great plantations, they had projected great business enterprises. But alas things were not what they seemed. Injustice was rampant, bribery was common, judgment was a farce, exploitation of the poor was common, and unrighteousness was eating at the heart of the nation.

Conditions were just as bad religiously. To be sure, formal religion was quite prevalent and quite elaborate. Indeed much attention was given to rites and ceremonies. The letter of the law was punctiliously observed. But there was no heart in it all. There was no vitality there. At heart the nation was rotten morally and dead spiritually. Religion had a form of goodness but it lacked the power thereof. At the heart of the trouble lay the fact that the nation and individuals had forsaken God. They had turned to false gods and their conduct had suffered accordingly. This was no coincidence. When men truly worship the living God, it helps their conduct. When they compromise their religious ideals they open the way for a let-down in ideals of conduct. Amos saw all this. And he knew that there could be but one outcome. The nation was riding for a fall. Sooner or later, and sooner than Israel realized, there was going to come a collapse. The hidden, inner sores were going to fester and break, the whole nation was going to be brought to judgment. On the strength of Amos' knowledge of the character of God and the inexorable workings of his laws, and his knowledge of conditions in the country, he confidently predicted that "the day of the Lord" was coming. And when it did come, woe unto the nation!

There was still hope. It was not altogether too late. If Israel should "seek the Lord," it should live. There was no hope in the worship of material things, in dependence upon material force, in formal religion. But if the people would "seek good, and not evil" they would live. If they would again "establish judgment, or justice," it might be that the "Lord God of hosts might be gracious unto the remnant of Joseph. But, alas, Israel did not repent. She did not change her ways. She did not turn unto the Lord. And the words of Amos found terrible fulfilment when Israel was carried away into captivity later.

There is a modern note in the book of Amos. One feels that Amos' words "for it is an evil time" fit this very day. The people of America have forsaken in large measure the Lord of hosts. We have become enamored of material things, we have become somewhat self-satisfied, we have kept up the forms of religion but we have lost much of its living power, we have perverted judgment, we have allowed corruption to come into government, unrestricted competition to come into business, compromise to come in moral ideas. And we are riding for a fall. Of course there is a lot of soundness at the heart of American life. But there is enough unsoundness to cause concern, and to cause trouble. Let it be understood that the New Deal is not going to solve our problems. The basic need of America now is not a new economic system but a quickened religious life.

Perhaps it is not amiss to state that Amos attributed the droughts, pestilences, and other ills of his time to the judgment of Jehovah. One does not have to believe that God arbitrarily sends these things upon his people in the spirit of revenge. But one wonders if there might not be some connection between conditions in our country today and the breakdown of morals and spiritual compromise. One wonders. One thing is sure—the strength of a nation lies in its moral and spiritual integrity and not in material or external forces.

VACATION WORK.

A ten day's Daily Vacation Bible School at Mt. Olivet (G) Christian Church (V. Va. C. C. C. Conference) closed Friday night, July 20th with a very interesting and helpful program which was largely attended by visitors and people of the community. This program showed the parents some of the things their children had learned while in this school.

For the past three years a school of this kind has been put on by volunteer workers of the community and the teachers declare this the most successful one. It was largely and regularly attended. More than half of the children enrolled came every day and unusual interest was shown.

There were six volunteer workers besides Dr. Weekley, the pastor, and Prof. Long who had charge of the devotionals and music respectively.

Children enjoy the Bible School. They look forward to it with pleasure. They are greatly benefitted. Therefore, we strongly recommend that every Sunday school sponsor one during the summer months.

T. M.

Make yourself an honest man, and then you may be sure that there is one less rascal in the world.—Carlyle.

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.

Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.

These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. It combines with the Concordance, Subject-Index, Scripture Proper Names, etc. The 12 Maps have been carefully revised and are beautifully colored. In making orders, give the number and price.

135—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold. $3.00

India Paper Edition, Only 16-16 of an inch thick.

. 133X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold. $4.00

SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS' BIBLE.

Especially made up for gift or reward Bibles for Sunday School scholars, containing a special series of very practical and useful helps and Bible Questions and Answers, etc. Printed on fine white Bible paper; ruby type; pocket size, 3 3/4 x 5 3/8 inches, and 1 inch thick, with 31 full-page illustrations in sepia. All bindings are black.

Ruby Type, Size 3 3/4 x 5 3/8 Inches, and 1 Inch Thick.

65—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold; 6 colored maps .....$2.50

AUTHORIZED VERSION.

RED LETTER TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Brevier Type (8 vo.), Self-Pronouncing, Size 5 3/8 x 8 1/4 Inches and 1 3/8 Inches Thick.

Containing the Bible, with full references. The words of Christ in the New Testament are printed in red; other parts of the book are printed in black. With Concise Bible Dictionary, combined Concordance, and 12 indexed maps.

7852—Genuine Leather, Lavant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold .....$4.75

RED-LETTER EDITION.

With All the Words of Christ in the New Testament Printed in Red.

1282—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit round corners, red under gold edges, register and headbands; title stamped on side and back in pure gold .....$3.25

60—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, Sunday School Scholars' Bible, stamped in pure gold on cover, no illustrations; special book for Sunday Schools .....95c

Any of the above Bibles sent postpaid. Address
THE CHRISTIAN SUN
1536 East Broad Street Richmond, Virginia

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy

MONDAY.

"SUNDAY CLOTHES."

"Worship the Lord in the beauty of Holiness."
Psalms 29:2.

The American Revised version renders this text: "Worship the Lord in holy array." Moffatt says, it means festal attire." We like our text the better, for the beauty of holiness supercedes everything else.

However, the question has been put: "Can we worship God in Sunday clothes better than we can in everyday clothes?" Some say "yes," others say "no." But there is an argument in favor of best clothes.

Plato is quoted as saying, "Beauty and rhythm find their way into the secret places of the soul." All of us know that clothes in harmony with circumstances enable us to be more at home and enjoy ourselves the best. Costumes are worn by players not only to make a show, but to make the players feel their part and act their best. So necessary is this that radio actors, though alone in the transmitting room, play in costume. It is the relation of clothes on the soul of the part being played.

Such also is the case in wearing our best clothes at worship. It gives an outward symbol, inadequate to be sure, of an inward reverence. "Thus," says Dr. Luccock, "only can worship find an unblocked way into the secret places of the soul."

Can a man worship God in overalls? Indeed he can. "They that worship God worship Him in spirit," said Jesus, and we assume that a heart is as worshipful under overalls as it is under silks and satins. But as Dr. Luccock suggests, he who goes to church in his overalls carries his mind in working clothes. There are no fresh feelings, no fresh inspirations, no external harmony with the eternal.

We can always do better work when we dress up for what we are going to do. The laborer can work better in overalls because of the harmony of the clothes with the job.

Prayer—Say the Lord's prayer.

TUESDAY.

"CLEARED FROM PERPLEXITIES."

"Thy word is a lamp unto my feet and a light to my pathway."—Psa. 119:105.

"Even Thy night shall be light about me."—Psa. 139.

"If I stoop

Into a dark tremendous sea of cloud,
It is but for a time; I press God's lamp
Close to my breast; its splendor, soon or late,
Will pierce the gloom; I shall emerge one day."
—Paracelus.

Prayer—O Lord, our God, we thank Thee that darkness and light are the same to Thee, and that, Thou hast promised that the path of the just shall be full of light. In all our perplexities shine Thou for us; may we trust Thee so that Thou mayest shine for us. Be Thou our light day and night, and out of all our troubles may we emerge with joy.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"LAW OR MUSIC."

"Without tone—nothing."—I Cor. 13.

"Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly; in all wisdom teaching and admonishing and another with psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts unto God."—Col. 3:16.

When laws are a criminal code to be obeyed on pain of penalty, they are heartless and ultimately break down. Treat them as an instrument of good obeying them as right and more to be desired than gold, and as Dr. Luccock says, they are like music, becoming "a richer melody of life."

To obey law because it is law is slavery. To obey law because obedience thereto strikes harmony of soul and makes enduring pleasures of life, is like singing the "Hallelujah Chimes" of Handel's Messiah.

The thirteenth Chapter of First Corinthians brings this harmony of life strikingly to our hearts. We may have all the other good traits, but if we are void of love, life is naught. But to love settles all things right.

Dr. Luccock says in his recent book, that this is just what the New Testament has done to the Ten Commandments—it made music of them through Jesus Christ.

Prayer—Our Father, we want to love our neighbors more, humanity more, we want to be known of men as thine, because of the melody in our hearts. As love is of Thee, and Thou art the Giver, grant us a full measure of Thy love. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"SUCCESSFUL MARRIAGE."

"They twain shall be one flesh."—Matt. 19:5.

This text is our Saviour's statement to all who enter upon the sacred obligation of marriage—husband and wife. How many fail these days! It is tragic!

In marriage we promise to have and hold; love, honor and obey; for better or for worse; for riches; for power; in sickness and in health, to love and to cherish, till death us do part, according to God's holy ordinance.

There is only on thing that one (two) can do with that obligation, and that is each take up the "harp of life" everyday, tune every string to harmony with the other, and smite those strings with the hand of love, supported by a heart that loves nothing less than harmony and music all the way. And both parties must live that way, and marriage is a success.

Prayer—O Lord, Thou hast made man and woman for one another, and we believe it was after the fashion of Thine own heart and perfect designs. We pray for that godliness in our home and our lives, that the beauty and glory of our living may increase unto that perfect day. Make us a crown to one another, in every act, yea—in every thought. We ask it for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"SETTING THE CLOCK."

"If we walk in the light, as He is in the light, —the blood of Jesus, His Son cleanseth us from all sins."—I Jno. 1:7.

"Having therefore these promises,—let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God."—II Cor. 7:1.

The main thing about a time-piece is that it shall give the right time. A watch may be made of the best gold, and the wheels pivoted in diamonds, and every one going around in the right direction, but if it does not give the right time it is worthless as a time-piece.

The best time-pieces get wrong sometimes, and have to be repaired. They not only have to be kept in good repair, but they have to be kept clean and regulated, and after all that occasionally set to the right time.

What is right time? Right time is exact time by the sun and it is always right. It never varies.

Think of yourself in the same terms. The main thing in life is to be right. The best of us get wrong sometimes and cleaning up and regulating is needed, so that they who see us, may see what time it is—in terms of right—yea in terms of Christian living.

What is right? Right is God. The Master watch-maker keeps time-pieces right. Yes, and Jesus is the Master Soul Regulator. Submit thyself to Him for cleaning and get set right. Jesus spent much time in prayer to the Father to keep His soul right with God. Thou dost much more need it.

Prayer—Our Father, help us to submit ourselves to Thee. Undergird us with the true spirit and grace, to live right and holy. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"ATTAINMENT OF RIGHT BEYOND OUR BEST EFFORTS."

"Ye will not come unto me that ye may have life."—Jno. 5:40.

One of our greatest faults is fancying that we can work out our own righteousness for ourselves. The Pharisees and the Jews imagined that ceremonial observances were sufficient. It is common to believe that good works, virtues, philanthropy, are sufficient to salvation. So did the young rich ruler. But all these can exist, yea, even one can be a casual church-goer without personal holiness. Such an one may say that "since holiness is perfection, who can attain it, therefore I go my way and live right without it."

But it has been found that self-righteousness has never yet satisfied one's best aspirations. "The stream cannot rise above its source," you know. "We cannot lift ourselves up by our boot-straps." What we all want (or need) is to be lifted above ourselves. Life has its lower nature and bad habits, and, until freed from it, the soul is held by the vagaries of the flesh. We must have the life of God to lift us up to those delights beyond ourselves.

Prayer—Our dear Father, we pray to Thee for that power that works the greater glory for Thee. We pray to live today in a way Thou art not ashamed of us. Give us the life beyond our mere selves, a life incorruptible and that fadeth not away.—Amen.

SUNDAY.

"A TRUE SOLDIER."

"Let us cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armour of light."—Rom. 13:12.

"If life is always a warfare

Between the right and the wrong,
And good is fighting with evil
For ages and eons long.

Fighting with eager cohorts,
With banners pierced and torn,
Shining with sudden splendor,
Wet with the dew of morn.

If all the forces of heaven
And all the forces of sin,
Are met in the infinite struggle,
The souls of the world to win.

If God's in the awful battle;
Where the darkened legions ride,
Hasten to sword and the saddle,
Lord, let me fight on Thy side."

Amen.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

CHRIST AT THE CROSS ROADS OF HISTORY.

By REV. J. G. TRUITT.

I.

"And there were certain Greeks among them that came up to worship at the feasts the same came therefore to Phillip, which was of Bethsaida of Galilee, and desired him, saying, Sir, we would see Jesus."—John 12:20-21.

Here on the edge of the Gentile court of the Jerusalem temple was about to be enacted a more important event in the history of the nations than the fall of Thermopylae, or the battle of Waterloo, or the victory at Yorktown. There was no sounding of drums, nor marshalling of cannonry, nor cantonments of armed soldiers. The Christ stood at the cross roads of history, and did his part!

Instead of drum-beat of martial thousands, there was the heart-beat of a few "outsiders" representing the hope and hunger of untold millions. It was made audible in a simple, earnest request—not a prayer to the gods of the Pantheon, nor even a petition to the God of Jerusalem—a simple, earnest request to a fellowman: "Sir, we would see Jesus!"

My friends, that simple request is more important than the time-changing, history-making movements of the earth. "Sir, we would see Jesus." How it expresses the heart-hunger of oppressed peoples in unadvertised places today! If we could but look in on millions of farmer-folk all across the broad expanse of Germany, see them surrounded by their humble farms, their milk-cows, and their orchards and vineyards, their little children and their growing young people, their parents and grandparents, with their centuries of protestant, Lutheran piety, we would hear a common prayer: "Sir, we would see Jesus."

And we could multiply that hunger, and that request, by France, Spain, Italy, England, and on and on, throughout our modern Europe: "Sir, we would see Jesus." They have tried music, and painting, and sculpture—beautiful and important as these are—and they have tried schools and colleges, and the philosophies of men—important as all these are; and they have tried war, war, war,—but how the heart of the common man, and the common family, with his little place and his humble home cries out: "Sir, we would see Jesus."

And likewise cry the Near East and the Far East. They have their Ghandis, and their Kagawas; they have the story of the humble Galilean from thousands of missionaries, and now millions of natives—and they too, have learned to hope and hunger for the Christ of God.

And our own America! Are we not hungering for Jesus? Who, or what can do more for our vast stretches of fertile farmlands, our towering, hurrying cities, or our people—young and old—than Jesus? Away from Him, away from the path of progress; away from Him into greed, and lust, and crime; away from Him, away from God, and all that is holy, and fine in the world!

II.

Those "certain Greeks" saw Jesus. The petition was granted, their prayer was answered. It was then, and it is today, for all who truly hunger and thirst after righteousness shall be filled. Let us pause to notice that this request was made of Philip, a follower of Jesus. And that that follower joining with Andrew, another follower, came to Jesus with the request. The world is asking the followers of Jesus for Him today! It is requesting Him of the individual. There is where the Christian religion stands or falls.

The man in the street does not know how to get to God. He comes to you. He comes to me. If we fail God—but we must not fail Him. The man in the street looks on your life and mine. Our conduct, our characters, our faith, and loyalty, and love are his Bible, and his creed. May he read us and find Christ. If our Christian stock is "watered" until it is just as weak as his morality—until it acts as he acts, and lives as he lives—then what hope has he in ever finding a Christ that truly satisfies the secret longing of the soul?

The man in the street expects, too, to see co-operation on the part of the followers of Christ. "Philip cometh, and telleth Andrew; and Andrew and Philip in turn tell Jesus." Exactly so. A simple picture of a serving church. Perfect harmony, and perfect accord; the two of them come up to Jesus and tell their story. How the world waits now for a church, united, active, obedient, who will bring its inquiring, hungry-hearted to Christ!

Hitherto Jesus had sought to confine his work to the house of Israel. Nevertheless there had been breakings-through: the woman of Sychar, the Gentile centurion, the Syro-Phoenecian woman, and others had been finding their way to Jesus. But now, on the last day of his public ministry their come representatives of the Gentile nations to see Jesus. It is a powerful moment. Wise Men from the East had come in the beginning of His earthly life, and now wise men from the West come at its close—symbolic of Jesus standing at the cross roads of history, and of the nations. The East comes to his cradle; the West to his cross, but neither of them go away empty-handed or broken-hearted. They saw the Christ, and to see him was to see the Father, and be satisfied.

III.

The last days of his public ministry was the first day of the nations turning to Jesus. In other words Jesus was standing at the cross roads of the history of the nations. And what he had said, and was still saying to individuals he was saying to nations: "Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die it bringeth forth much fruit." "Human nature is not changed by poetry and art, but it arrives at the truly beautiful by the baptism of suffering." Jesus had founded the church on the principle of sacrificial service, telling Peter and the other disciples that he must go up to Jerusalem and suffer and die, and rebuking Peter's worldly wisdom which, by the way, has tried ever since to get into the church; and now to the representatives of the Gentiles he was reiterating that self-same doctrine.

For nations, then, as for individual is the answer. Jesus is the answer to its problems. Easy to say, and axiomatically true; but how will it ever be realized unless we are willing to pay the price of obedience. As a church we, you and I, must not forget prayer and close association with Jesus; we must not forget worship, and the reading and study of his Holy Word; we must not forget clean and righteous living, ever praising him for the blessings of life, and showing the same loyalty to him in adversity.

I do not wish to hurt anyone's feelings. There is nothing personal in my words, but as one of God's humble preachers I must cry aloud for a God-fearing, Sabbath-keeping, worship-attending, Christ-living people. Your hearts are as hungry as mine for the sort of day that will come with a return of the church to God. Are we willing to pray for it? Are we willing to work for it? Are we willing to live for it? I challenge you to say yes with action. To say yes and mean it. For now, as ever, the peoples are coming up to the church of Jesus Christ, oppressed, and beaten, and humbled, begging to see Jesus. We have a responsibility we cannot shirk, and so glorious and challenging is it, we would not shirk it if we could. Every sacrifice you make for the Christ is rewarded a thousandfold, therefore, let us help answer the world's cry: "Sir, we would see Jesus." Tonight I shall speak on: "Jesus Leads the Way to God," from a text found in this same chapter: "Now is my soul troubled, and what shall I say? Shall I say Father save me from this hour? But for this cause came I unto this hour. Father, glorify Thy name." And thus Jesus leaves the cross-roads for the cross itself!

COMMUNION WARE.

Individual Service.

Made in best Silver Plate or Aluminum. Prices low; first-class workmanship and finish.

ALUMINUM.

Aluminum is light in weight, durable, and does not tarnish.

Style No. 50-A.

- Tray No. 2—Interlocking, with 40 plain glasses $7.00
- Tray No. 6—Interlocking, with 35 plain glasses 6.75
- Tray No. 10—Interlocking, with 30 plain glasses 6.50
- Base No. 50-A—Fits Trays 2, 6, or 10..... 2.25
- Cover No. 50-A—Fits Trays 2, 6, or 10..... 2.25
- Bread Plate No. 1—Narrow rim..... 1.60

SILVER-PLATED.

The Silver-plated Ware is of the very highest grade and best finish; heavily plated on nickel base.

- Tray No. 85—Interlocking only, with 36 glasses $22.00
- Base No. 1—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 85.. 11.00
- Cover No. 5—Silver-plated; fits Tray No. 85... 16.00

- (For Silver Bread Plates, see under No. 90.)
- Tray No. 90—Interlocking, with 36 plain glasses (this style has broad rim, which is sometimes preferred, due to increased ease of handling) $22.00
  - Base No. 2—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 90.. 16.00
  - Cover No. 4—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 90. 14.00

- Bread Plate No. 3—Narrow Rim..... $ 9.00
- Bread Plate No. 4—Broad Rim..... 9.00
- Filler—Silver Lined..... 6.00

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street

Richmond, Virginia

Christian Orphanage

Dear friends:

The little tots in the "Baby Home" had a picnic. Miss Eva Noe and Miss Virginia Young, who have charge of the "Baby Home" and the little tots, planned a picnic for them last week. If is anything that little tots enjoy, it is a picnic. Quite a lot of excitement as the time draws near. They can see in their imagination the wood fire out in the open under the canopy of the blue sky and the "hot dogs" frying on the end of a forked stick with good cool chocolate milk right out of the ice box with fried potatoes and sandwiches galore. They had selected a beautiful open space on the back side of the farm where the cows had kept the grass picked down to a green carpet of smooth grass surrounded by a beautiful green forest—a beautiful setting for a picnic for the little ones. Miss Noe and Miss Young know just how to make a bunch of little tots happy. They had selected the picnic ground far enough from the Orphanage so the little tots had to ride in the wagon with the bed filled with straw. The writer was present when they were loaded on the wagon. Our faithful wagon boy, J. P. Brown, who is never happier than when working with a team of mules, safely carried them to the picnic and back.

Every little fellow's face wreathed in smiles, forgetting everything but the ride to the picnic grounds. The V-8 Ford would not have been noticed at all. The joy of the ride in the wagon was uppermost in their mind. It is one of the joys of childhood. They had good wood to make the fire and they had a great time out in the open eating "hot dogs" and sandwiches, etc. As the fire died down and the picnic supper had gradually disappeared and the shades of evening began to throw its mantle of darkness about them, they climbed into the wagon and wended their way back home to lie down to pleasant dreams. They had a great time.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

REPORT FOR AUGUST 9, 1934.

Brought forward .....	$7,740.09
Sunday School Monthly Offerings
North Carolina & Virginia Conference:
Haw River .....	$ 15.75
Concord .....	1.03
Greensboro, First .....	8.96
Berea .....	8.00
	33.74
Eastern North Carolina Conference:
Damascus .....	2.00
Wake Chapel .....	5.00
Sanford .....	1.00
	8.00
Western North Carolina Conference:
Pleasant Hill .....	2.00
Biscoe .....	1.57
Big Oak .....	.45
Eastern Virginia Conference:
Mt. Zion .....	2.00
Holland .....	5.00
Windsor .....	12.33
	19.33
Valley Va. Central Conference:
Mt. Olivet R. ....	1.00
	1.00
Georgia and Alabama Conference:
Vanceville .....	1.00
	1.00
Special Offerings.
Payment from Closed Banks .....	81.85

F. C. Owen, gdn. for Jas. Brown.....	12.50
Mrs. Park Hayes, support of son....	24.00
		118.35
Total for the week .....		$ 185.44
Grand total .....		$7,925.53

APPLE'S CHAPEL. (Continued from page 7.)

the church, this service being followed by the laying of the corner stone. The total cost of the building was $14,000.00. August 24, 1924, Rev. T. J. Green was elected pastor to succeed Rev. Carr E. Geringer, who resigned, and Brother Green served from 1924 until 1929. June, 1929, Rev. R. A. Witten was elected pastor and served until 1931. October 25, 1931, Rev. H. E. Crutchfield was elected pastor, and it is under his pastorate that the church debt is finally paid off and we are brought to this happy day of dedication. During the hundred years of its organization as a church, the records show 14 pastors have served the church, with a total of 27 deacons and 5 secretaries. The records of quarterly meetings have been preserved with great care and accuracy and constitute a century of service to the community and to the world, during which time hundreds have been brought in to the membership of the church and under the influence of the gospel here. The church has always been loyal and faithful to Missions, to our College, to our Orphanage and all the enterprises that go to make a church strong and a denomination great. Our present church membership is 357, and our Sunday school enrollment is 229. Rev. H. E. Crutchfield is our beloved and progressive pastor and Brother J. A. Cook, for many years, has been our faithful and devoted Sunday school superintendent.

Eilers Sunday School Maps

The first 5 maps are in Set No. 1, with stand, Price $15 00

Set No. 2 8 Maps. Price $10 00

Fine large Maps, in 6 Colors 30x57, on linen finished Cloth. Mounted on a folding steel stand, which can be regulated, so that Maps may be seen to the best advantage. This set contains data for thorough Bible Study. Its large print and Cheerful Colors makes this set very instructive and attractive. Contains the five thoroughly up to date Maps necessary for the study of Bible History. New Testament Palestine, — Old Testament Palestine, — Roman empire and Bible Lands, showing Pauls Travels by Colored lines. — Lands of the Old Testament, from the Great Sea, to the Persian Gulf. — The Exodus, Egypt, shown by Colored lines the wanderings of the Israelites.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN
1536 East Broad Street Richmond, Virginia

HOLMAN SUPERIOR TEACHERS' BIBLES

Authorized Version—Self-Pronouncing The Best Editions of the World's Best Book
For Adults, Teachers, Preachers, Students, and All Who Would Study the Word of God Intelligently

BOLD BLACK TYPE—COMPACT SIZE 4 1/2 x 6 3/4 INCHES—WILL FIT THE COAT POCKET

Part page specimen of Holman Boldblack Type Bible
ST. MATTHEW, 5. Christ's sermon on the mount.

13 And leaving Náz a-rèth, he came and dwelt in Cápèr'na-ùm, which is upon the sea coast, in the borders of Záb'u-lon and Nèph'tha-lim: 14 That it might be fulfilled	A. D. 31. 934 CHAPTER 5. 3 Who are blessed. 13 The disciples called the salt of the earth, and light of the world; Christ urgeth on them a good example, etc. CHAP. 4. AND seeing the multitudes, he went up into a moun-
--	---

THIS NEW HOLMAN TEACHERS' BIBLE, Pronouncing Text, Bold Black Type is a PRONOUNCED SUCCESS. The latest Bible with NEW HELPS that are quite comprehensive and consist of an Illustrated Bible Dictionary, Concordance and additional aids all under ONE ALPHABETICAL INDEX. Also Fine Maps on Coated Paper, and a specially prepared BIBLE READING COURSE, intended to stimulate and maintain interest in the Bible. Imported Bible paper is used to improve opacity and keep down bulk. By this means you get the benefit of full Biblical information without the physical discomfort of handling a heavy volume.

4612. French Morocco Leather, divinity circuit, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges.....	$4.00
4630. Same as 4612, with extra leather lined covers.....	4.75
THIN INDIA PAPER EDITION
With Helps as described above. Size 4 1/2 x 6 3/4 inches. One inch in thickness
630X. Egyptian Morocco, divinity circuit, leather linings, red under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker.....	7.00
633X. Algerian Morocco, divinity circuit, leather lining to edge, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, extra quality binding.....	8.00

EXTRA LARGE PRINT TEACHERS' BIBLES

Large 8 Vo. Size—8x5 1/2 inches—1600 Pages, including 400 pages of Bible Study Helps

Part Page Specimen of Print
ST. MATTHEW, 5. Christ's sermon on the mount.

15 <sup>k</sup> The land of Záb'u-lon, and the land of Nèph'tha-lim, by the way of the sea, beyond Jòr'dan, Gál'i-lee of the Gén'tiles;	A. D. 31. k Is. 9. 1, 2. l Is. 43. 7. m Luke 2. 32. n Mark 1. 14.	2 And he opened his mouth, and taught them, saying, 3 <sup>b</sup> Blessed are the poor in spirit: for their's is the kingdom of heaven.
---	---	---

CONTAINING COMPLETE HELPS TO BIBLE STUDY, INCLUDING ALL OF THE FOLLOWING FEATURES
A New Practical Course in Bible Reading, A Treasury of Biblical Information. The most carefully compiled, thorough and attractive form in which valuable Biblical information has ever been prepared. Illustrated Self-Pronouncing Bible Dictionary Containing 150 illustrations, concise definitions and textual references on nearly 50,000 subjects. A Practical Comparative Concordance, with nearly 50,000 references. Four Thousand Questions and Answers on the Old and New Testaments. A valuable Help to all Bible Readers.

4712. Divinity Circuit (overlapping covers), French Seal Leather, red under gold edges, silk head bands, and silk marker..	$5.00
812RL. Red Letter Teachers' Bible. The Words of Christ in the New Testament, Old Testament Passages alluded to by Christ, various prophecies relating to Christ in the Old Testament, etc., all PRINTED IN RED. Binding same as described above on 4712 and same large Self-Pronouncing type.....	6.00
733X. Holman India Paper, Genuine Morocco, leather lined, silk sewed, divinity circuit, round corners carmine under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker, same type and helps as above .....	10.65

All styles sent Postpaid at above prices—Thumb Index 50 cents extra

A Story for the Children

NATURE SCATTERS HER SEEDS.

By JOHN HARVEY FURBAY in Advance

Most of the plants on the earth produce flowers. These are often called blossoms; and some of them, like the cones of pine trees, are not recognized by most people as flowers. The real purpose of all flowers is to produce seeds.

Seeds contain a tiny plant already partly developed, along with a large supply of nourishment to start the young plant growing. This is all enclosed by an outer coat, which protects it until it is ready to grow up into a new plant. Some seeds are surrounded by juicy material. These are called fruits. The apple is a good example, with the seeds in the "core." Some fruits, like the tomato and the cucumber, are usually called "vegetables." Other seeds, like nuts, are enclosed in a very hard shell. Still other seeds, as the wheat and corn, are called grains.

Whether we call them fruits, vegetables, grains, or nuts, they all contain or produce seeds. These seeds, when planted in the right kind of soil, and with plenty of sunshine and rain, will develop into plants like the ones which produced them.

It is not enough for these seeds just to fall to the ground beneath the mother plant, because this would put too many seeds in one place, and they would choke one another till only a few, or none, would live. So Nature developed the best plans possible for scattering these seeds long distances from the mother plant. Nature had already put water, wind and animals in the world, so she made little structures on the seeds to float in water or on the wind, and to catch hold of animals as they passed by the plant. These three agents are Nature's greatest helpers in scattering seeds.

Wind is by far the most useful of these agents. It carries seeds for many miles with little effort. However, it cannot carry all seeds. It can carry only those which Nature has made very light, or with little wings. The seeds of maple trees have two wings spread out to sail in the wind; and the many seeds of the dandelion have little plumes like parachutes for being blown about. This is one reason why dandelions are found almost everywhere.

Other seeds which have been built to be carried by the wind are those of the thistles, cat-tails, milkweed, and elm trees.

Special devices for being carried by the wind are shown by the "tumble weeds." I have often seen great bundles of them being carried across miles of country, often piling up quite high when they reach fences. A good example of tumble weeds is the well-known Russian thistle. It grows in the shape of a large ball, and when the seeds are ripe, the main stem breaks off at the ground. The whole plant starts rolling before the wind, and as it is carried mile after mile, bumping along on the ground, it scatters its seeds. This is one reason why it is one of the worst weeds in some parts of the country. A similar example is the "tickle grass," a common garden weed, which blows from garden to garden in a similar way.

The second great agent of Nature for scattering seeds is animals. In order to be carried by this agent, seeds must be either good to eat, or must be provided with little hooks for catching hold of the animals. Many seeds which are eaten are cast off uninjured, along with other waste material usually some distance from where they were eaten.

Nature has wonderfully protected these seeds from being eaten too soon by making them sour or bitter before they are ripe. Birds are probably the greatest agents for carrying seeds which they have eaten. The fruit around the seeds is often eaten, and the seeds discarded by the animal. This is what happens when you eat an apple, and throw away the apple-core.

Then, we see the marvelous way that Nature has made other seeds able to stick to the legs, hair, fur and wool of animals—as well as to the clothing of man—and be carried in this way. You have all found burs, Spanish needles, or beggar's-ticks on your clothes after taking a walk in the country in the fall of the year. You were carrying home the seeds of these plants. Such seeds are provided with little hooks for catching into your clothing, or into the hairs of passing animals. Some other seeds, like those of plantain, secrete a sticky substance which fastens them to passing objects.

Finally, we mention water as the third agent of Nature for scattering seeds. The cocoanut is often carried hundreds of miles by floating in rivers or oceans. Many other common seeds are washed away during heavy rains, and if light enough to float, may be carried great distances by the water.

There is one more very interesting means of scattering seeds which I have not mentioned. Some plants develop their seeds in little cases called pods. Examples of this are the wild cucumber, phlox, jewelweed, witch-hazel, and the common violet. When these pods are ripe and dry, they curl up; and by stretching the pods in this way, they suddenly burst open with a snap, and the seeds fly out in all directions.

It is evident that Nature has planned her great garden well, and that her three gardeners, the wind, animals, and water, do their work well in keeping her flowers planted in various places year after year.

ELON COLLEGE

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

South Entrance to the Campus

ELON COLLEGE, founded by the Christian Church in 1889, has fully justified the faith and hope of its founders during its 42 years of operation. Its graduates from the four-year course leading to a bachelor's degree, number 980, now living, 122 of whom are in the Christian Ministry and full-time Christian service. The majority of these are members of our own denomination. In addition, 449 are in educational work and are an active influence in the lay leadership of the Christian Church.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION BUILDING, and the definite religious atmosphere of the College, provide the very best facilities available for training for religious leadership, and offer the Church its finest opportunity to train the young people of the denomination to assume active leadership both in the ministry and laity of the local churches.

Address—

C. M. CANNON, Registrar

Elon College, - - - - - North Carolina

Home Atmosphere—Reasonable Rates—Clean Athletics—Christian Spirit

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom, as represented by the Congregational Christian Church.

BOARD OF EDITORS.

J. O. ATKINSON, D. D. . . . . Editor
E. C. GILLETTE, D. D. . . . . Associate
I. W. JOHNSON, D. D. . . . . Contributing
ELISHA A. KING, D. D. . . . . Contributing
J. T. KERNODLE. . . . . Managing Editor

DEPARTMENTAL EDITORS.

H. S. HARCADCASTLE. . . . . Sunday School
J. G. TRUITT, D. D. . . . . Sermon
F. C. LESTER. . . . . Young People
H. E. ROUNTREE. . . . . Altar

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year . . . . . $2.00
Six Months . . . . . 1.00

Trial Subscriptions: Five or more new subscriptions sent in at one time by pastor or president of any church organization, three months for 40c each.

Published Every Thursday at Richmond, Virginia, by the Central Publishing Company, Inc.

Entered as second-class matter at the Postoffice at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Change of Address: Be sure to give both old and new address when asking that your address be changed.

All news matter and items to be published in "The Sun" should be addressed to J. O. Atkinson, Editor, Elon College, N. C., and should reach him not later than Friday preceding date of publication. If more convenient, news from Congregational Churches may be sent to E. C. Gillette, Associate Editor, 117 W. Forsyth Street, Jacksonville, Fla. Emergency notices will be received at the Richmond Office up until Tuesday of week of publication.

All remittances for subscriptions, renewals, advertising, etc., books for review, and other matters of business should be addressed to J. T. Kernodle, Managing Editor, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond, Va.

Notices: Obituary and marriage notices, limited to 125 words, published free. All over 125 words, 1c a word, cash with notice. No notices should exceed 250 words.

Receipts: The change of label is your receipt for money paid. The label shows date of expiration, and change on label will appear the first or second issue of the month following renewal, provided it was received before the 25th. No other receipt will be sent unless requested. Please notify the Richmond Office if label is not changed as above.

OBITUARIES

REV. PAUL C. BURHANS.

Rev. Paul C. Burhaus, a retired Congregational minister living at Iona, Florida, died at his home June 22nd. Mr. Burhaus had served several churches, his last one being at Sanford, Florida. He retired from the pastorate there on account of the condition of his health, but since retiring he had had charge of a community church at Iona. He was a member of the Congregational church at Fort Myers, a man of sincere devotion, deep piety and an earnest Christian pastor, and was known and loved by many parishoners and friends. Mrs. Burhaus survives.

MORGAN.

Mark Albert Morgan, of Randolph County, was born July 30, 1855, and died July 24, 1934, thus being 78 years, 11 months and 24 days old. He is survived by his wife, three daughters, four sons, several grand-children and great-grand-children. The funeral was conducted by the writer from Brown's Chapel Church, with a great company of relatives and friends present to pay their tribute of love and respect. The interment was in the church cemetery, July 25th. Our sympathy to the bereaved.

REV. W. N. HAYES.

DISCOURAGEMENT.

The inclination to discouragement is to be resisted like any other temptation. The moral features of faint-heartedness and despair are not so palpable as in most other temptations but they are none the less real. The distrust that leads to discouragement and hopelessness is the opposite and denial of faith. Say to yourself: I have a duty in this matter. I cannot yield to this hopelessness without moral fault and harm. I have no business to give up. I have a clear call to overcome these unfavorable circumstances. Many a man and woman simply need the tonic cheer of this thought to change entirely their perspective. The physicians often say: "As long as there's life there's hope," and there is hope. We never know when the tide is going to turn or when our seeming failures are to become our successes. —The Watchman-Examiner

Wedding or Gift Bible

FOR THE HOME

Holman Self-Pronouncing Home Study Edition

A BEAUTIFUL PRESENTATION PAGE Marriage Certificate and Family Record makes this special edition a most desirable Bible for a wedding gift.

Full Bound size, 8 1/2 x 6 inches, nearly 1800 pages. Authorized Version with Marginal References.

Large Print—Easy to Read

The Helps are the latest and most practical published—prepared by the most reliable and well-known authorities, and consist of a TEACHERS' NEW READY REFERENCE HAND BOOK, which gives the salient and essential information needed in Bible study.

Illustrated Self-Pronouncing Bible Dictionary—Containing 150 illustrations.

Oriental Light on the Bible (Containing over 100 illustrations). A new kind of illuminating Bible help.

Treasury of Biblical Information.
A New Series of Maps. A selection of the most used, with Special Maps, the results of the most recent explorations.

A New Practical Comparative Concordance, with nearly 50,000 references.

Four Thousand Questions and Answers on the Bible.

ABSOLUTELY DURABLE BINDINGS that will not break in the back.

Specimen of the Print. Full size of the page is 5 1/2 x 8 inches.

17 ¶ From that time Jē'sus began to preach, and to say, "Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand."

A BEAUTIFUL PRESENTATION PAGE Marriage Certificate and Family Record makes this special edition a most desirable Bible for a wedding gift.

No. 4914. French Morocco, flexible limp, gold titles, round corners, red under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker. . . . . $5.50

Postage Paid

WORSHIP.

Man cannot live without worship. worship thus is one key to life at any time. It is a fundamental approach to ship is a basic necessity of life. To walk in the midst of the universe with appreciative wonder, to touch life reverently, to feel the universe not so much as a host to a parasitic plant as a friendly home open with a rare and joyous beauty to claiming one's best creative activities, to appreciate living and moving and having being in the life of the fatherly God—to time. It is a fundamental approach to ship is a basic necessity of life. To walk in the midst of the universe with appreciative wonder, to touch life reverently, to feel the universe not so much as a host to a parasitic plant as a friendly home open with a rare and joyous beauty to claiming one's best creative activities, to appreciate living and moving and having

PIEDMONT COLLEGE

Located in

"The Blue Ridge Highlands"

An accredited college with an enviable reputation for superior classroom instruction, and wholesome student life.

Standard courses leading to the A. B. and B. S. degrees. Careful, scholarly instructors.

A refined Christian atmosphere. All of the cultural elements essential to a liberal education.

A minimum of expense. Tuition and board for the entire academic year only $273.50.

For information, write

GEORGE C. BELLINGRATH, Dean,
PIEDMONT COLLEGE,
DEMOREST, GEORGIA.

Southern Seminary Foundation

(Successor to Atlanta Theological Seminary.)

AFFILIATED WITH

Vanderbilt University

The Foundation and the other Foundations that are affiliated with Vanderbilt University School of Religion comprise the only Interdenominational Theological School in the South. Through this affiliation the students enjoy the rights and privileges of Vanderbilt University.

DEGREES.

Candidates for degrees are required to have completed their college courses.

The degree of Bachelor of Divinity is offered to qualified students who complete the required courses.

Vanderbilt University also offers the degrees of Master of Arts and Doctor of Philosophy, in accordance with the regulations established in its several departments.

MORE THAN A SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY.

Because of our affiliation with Vanderbilt, our relations with other nearby colleges where our students can take courses without tuition, and the cooperation of the American Red Cross and other social agencies in the city, we prepare students for many types of Christian service.

For information write

WILLIAM JAMES CAMPBELL, President,
330 BUTTRICK HALL, VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY,
NASHVILLE, TENN.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

Representing the Southeast Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches.

IN ESSENTIALS, UNITY.

IN NON-ESSENTIALS, LIBERTY.

IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY.

VOLUME LXXXVI.

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, AUGUST 16, 1934.

NUMBER 33.

•• THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY ••

Shenandoah National Park at Last a Reality.—

On August 10th, approximately 175,000 acres of land in the Blue Ridge section of Virginia was formally deeded to the United States, thus becoming the Shenandoah National Park. The cost of the land was around $2,000,000, it having been donated in about equal amounts by personal contributions and the public treasury. This park is probably the largest in the East and will be easily accessible to a larger percentage of our population than any of the other National Parks.

A Short Cotton Crop.—

Government estimates given out August 8th, place the cotton yield for the present year at 9,195,000 bales, the shortest crop in thirteen years. It is almost certain that the amount of cotton marketed will be below that contemplated by the Bankhead act, which was passed to reduce acreage and raise prices. The government is under contract to pay farmers around $130,000,000 in rentals for land that was retired from the planting of cotton, and this with the shortage caused by nature will reduce the cotton carry-over to around 5,000,000 bales. Overproduction of cotton in the South has for the time being ceased to be a prob-

Receding Waters Reveal Ancient City.—

A Chinese legend tells of a city called San-yang, once an important commercial center, which was inundated by a great flood. The sunken ground on which it stood became a deep lake, the waters of which completely covered the city at its bottom. A recent press dispatch from the Celestial Land tells us that this ancient city has recently been discovered beneath the waters of Lake Tai, on the border of Kiangsu and Chekiang Provinces. A severe drought has gripped this area, as it has many others, and the waters of the lake have reached a new low level, so that the submerged city became visible. The fishermen who first reported the find stated that the walls of the city remain intact with streets and houses inside.

President Hitler and the Protestant Church.—

Not satisfied with political power, it seems that Hitler must also head the church. Reichsbishop Mueller, sword-rattling, ex-chaplain and protege of the new president, who heads the Protestant churches of Germany, convened the general synod on the 9th of August, had it confirm his powers, and then called on all Protestant ministers to swear fealty to Hitler. Dr. Mueller's game is to establish the "unity" of the church by giving dissenters no alternative but that of being branded as traitors for refusing to take the oath. More than 800 ministers have already been suspended from their ecclesiastical work for refusal to comply with the demands of the reichsbishop. Many others have protested against the demand that they take the oath. Will it eventually be a revolt in the church that will break the power of Hitler, or will it bow in meek submission to his will?

The AAA Reverses Itself.—

Nature has forced the AAA drastically to revise its program for "control" of the 1935 crop. Government "experts" are planning to permit replanting of some 10,000,000 acres retired this year. Obviously the AAA, in seeking to aid the farmer, has, with the assistance of the drought, succeeded chiefly in producing another problem for the administration to meet. That problem is the curbing of food profiteers. Washington officials frankly admit that "attempted food profiteering is inevitable." The government is now rallying its forces to protect the consumer from unreasonably high prices. This it must do, if it hopes to receive continued political support from the public, for the army of consumers is considerably larger than the army of farmers. One suspects that AAA "higher command" is frankly frightened. Once more a "Brain Trust" theory has looked better on paper than in practice. It is highly probable that 1935 will be marked by less radical "tinkering" by the government's staff of theoretical farmers.—Editorial in Richmond News Leader.

The Dangers Of "Stateism."—

Dr. Robert A Millikan, president of California Institute of Technology, in a recent radio address, called the so-called "Brain Trust" to task, declaring that the nation's worst enemies are the "political philosophers and sociologists, some of them in high places, "who are promoting what he termed "Stateism." Said he: "Some of them call it communism, some socialism, some everything else, but I will use the broader term Stateism to include the whole tendency towards the government's ownership and operation of everything. . . This whole movement weakens self-reliance, discourages private initiative, diminishes opportunity, stimulates bonus marches, veterans' rackets, even teachers' Federal lobbies (I admit it with shame) . . . I regard the man who urges the extension of the powers of the State into the operative fields, which private initiative can and will handle equally as well or better, as the enemy of free government—the most pernicious influence in American life today." Strong language this, but language which gives food for thought, especially in the conservative Southland.

How Is Business?—

Recent reports from the business world give, to say the least, a blurred picture, leaving it for the coming months to show how far recovery has gone and how much it has been retarded by disturbing governmental activities. Car loadings, one of the most accurate indexes of commerce, show a drop for the past week of 6,000 cars. The number is about 35,000 below the corresponding week of 1933. To offset this we find Dunn & Bradstreet reporting an increase of five per cent or more in retail sales; and wholesalers also report an increase, bringing the sales nearly up to the peak of the year. The steel industry reports that operations have increased, and that employment during June reached the highest level in four years, and car production for the year has been much more than in 1933. The oil industry reported the first six months of this year as the most profitable of any first half year period since 1930, and world cotton consumption was the largest since 1929. Strikes, though, throwing thousands out of employment—have decreased purchasing power, and future commitments, so necessary to recovery, have slowed down quite a bit. The drought will also have its bearing upon things by considerably reducing the farmer's purchasing power.

300 Per Cent in a Year.—

The Chicago Tribune admits that the toll of dead and injured resulting from drunken drivers has risen 300 per cent in a year. It also admits that the sharp increase in such casualties, as recorded by the police bureau of criminal statistics, coincides exactly with the repeal of national Prohibition. The police have admitted that there is a good deal more drinking on the part of drivers than before repeal. The record shows that 391 persons were killed in automobile accidents in Cook County during the first four months of 1934. This toll of deaths is 101 larger than was recorded during the same period in 1933, and the toll was larger during every month of the present year than in the corresponding month of last year. The number of deaths in Cook County since January 1st at this writing is 686. Repeal has brought about many problems in dealing with liquor which the wets assured us before repeal would not happen. We are told in glaring headlines when we had Prohibition that it had not only corrupted the youth, but that it had also corrupted the women—that members of the female sex, especially the younger members, were going the limit in drinking intoxicants. Wet newspapers now indicate that casual drinking has increased, and brand-new problems, which the wets did not suspect, have appeared as the result of the licensing of liquor. . . . Evidently the golden age didn't arrive with the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. What will the wets promise next?—R. W. G. in Advance.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

"Systems exercise the mind, but faith enlightens and guides it."—Voltaire.

Rev. J. E. McCauley, pastor of the Richmond Church, has been assisting Rev. C. E. Gerringer in revival services this week.

Mr. C. D. Harton of Henderson, N. C., who has been in Richmond on a visit to his son, Wm. R. Harton, was a visitor for a short while in THE SUN's office of publication. Come again, Brother Harton.

Man grows inevitably. If he is becoming Christ-like, he bears the image of Christ, he will share his glory. If he grows into the world's image, what choice remains but he must at last share the world's fate?—Isaac Edwardson.

Rev. O. D. Poythress reports that Mrs. Jennie Fuighum, formerly of Windsor, Va., but lately of Norfolk, has been in a Richmond hospital for the past two weeks. At this writing her condition shows improvement we are told.

Revival services will begin at Berea, Norfolk County, on September 3rd, and will continue for two weeks. Brother French states that Rev. W. H. Curry of the Ocean View Methodist Church will do the preaching.

Several of the Eastern Virginia Christian preachers are at Massanetta Springs attending the Bible Conference which is in session this and next week. Among those whom we know to be present are Rev. Joe French, Rev. O. D. Poythress, Rev. R. A. Whitten, Rev. E. B. White and Dr. I. W. Johnson, who is accompanied by Mrs. Johnson. Doubtless there will be others. Of course the Virginia Valley ministers will attend.

We learn from Rev. Jno. G. Truitt that the Suffolk Christian Church recently, in regular quarterly conference, elected from its number three new deacons, as follows: Col. Junius E. West, John C. Ramsey, and Floyd A. Turner. Dr. Truitt says: "The office of deacon is of divine institution, a high honor, and a grave responsibility. The church honors itself by elevating these three brethren to that rank, and they will honor the church and themselves by the continuation of the loyal and faithful service which they render, and by being ever worthy of the trust which their church places in them. May God bless them, and their families, and their church for Christ's sake. Amen."

The Churches at Ocean View, Virginia, and Berea, Norfolk, have recently closed most successful Daily Vacation Bible Schools. Ocean View enrolled 68, while 64 were in the school at Berea. In each school there were four groups. Miss Evelyn Richardson of Waverly, Va., had charge of the beginners; Miss Mary Rawls Jones of Holland, had the primary work; Miss Dorothy Geest of Ocean View Presbyterian Church, led the junior members, while the older boys and girls were led by the pastor, Rev. Joe French, in the study of "What it Means to be a Christian." Neither of these churches had ever held a similar school before, and the students thoroughly enjoyed it. Parents and teachers were also well pleased and want another school next year.

SOUTHERN UNION COLLEGE GOES FORWARD.

The final steps in the thorough reorganization of Southern Union College at Wadley, Ala., are being taken and the institution will open in September with a new president, dean, faculty, board of trustees, educational plan, and with high hopes for the future.

One of the most important features of the reorganization is the adoption of a new educational plan. Upon the counsel of leading Alabama educators the system developed at the University of Chicago was adopted, and adapted to local conditions. A number of colleges and universities are introducing this system in full or in part. Among the last institutions are the state schools of Ga.

At the Annual Meeting on June 29th the Reorganizing Committee made its report and its recommendations were accepted and adopted. A new board of trustees were elected. They are Mrs. V. L. Carter, Wadley, D. O. Robinson, Birmingham, Dr. F. P. Ensminger, Birmingham, Miss Evelyn Hardy, Wadley, W. J. Boothby, Birmingham, Paul Beaird, Roanoke, G. D. Hunt, Lanett, W. C. Edge, Wadley, J. T. Clack, Abanda, J. H. Dollar, La Grange, Ga., and Mrs. Mary D. White, New York City. One other is to be selected.

Rev. Ross Ensminger, former teacher at Elon College, and son of Supt. F. P. Ensminger, was called to be the new President. After refusing during two weeks of negotiation to undertake the responsibility he reconsidered and finally accepted the call, realizing both the bigness of the task and the greatness of the opportunity to serve.

Rev. A. R. Van Cleave was the man first considered to lead the institution but felt that his abilities lay more in the teaching field than in administration. He becomes the new Dean, leaving his promising field in Winchester, Va. He has taught in four of our Christian colleges, Palmer, Union Christian, Elon and Southern Union, and has made for himself a host of friends wherever he has been.

The college feels that it has a special mission in serving the young people in this farming section. Accordingly, the fees are very low. The school offers the only hope for Christian education to multitudes of young people, poor in possessions of this world but rich in undeveloped possibilities. In past years at the conclusion of its two year course, Southern Union has sent a number of students to Elon and Piedmont as well as to other colleges, and hopes to send even more in the future. Our people of Alabama and Georgia need Southern Union and here is wishing for the college vigorous life and great usefulness.

F. P. ENSMINGER.

MERGING MORE AND MORE.

The uniting of two denominations such as the Congregational and Christian is a first matter of awakening in the hearts of the brethren a desire to walk together along a common path, and then the patient re-arrangement of ecclesiastical fences so that this may be done without tripping. And the good humor and mutual consideration with which the latter process is carried out is the acid test of the sincerity of spiritual grace behind the original merger. The biennial meeting of the Southern Christian Convention in Suffolk, Va., marked a long step toward "a more perfect union" in the southeast. The Christian churches of Alabama and Georgia asked to be dismissed from the Southern Convention that they might unite with the Congregational churches of their respective states in the usual type of conference organization. On the other hand it was recommended that the Congregational churches of Carolina and Virginia unite with the Southern Christian Convention, which in turn petitioned the General Council "to recognize this Convention on the same basis as a state conference, for representation in and as an integral part of the General Council." It was further recommended that an unincorporated body, the Southeastern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches, "be recognized as the expression of our common fellowship, and that it be further developed for the promotion of inspiration and the coordination of all our common interests and for the promotion of loyalty to our institutions, both missionary and educational." Too much praise cannot be given the leaders of the Christian churches in Virginia and North Carolina for their willingness to modify ties rendered sacred by many years and multitudes of associations in order to participate more fully in the life of the united denomination.

—Missionary Herald.

CONCORD.

The revival meeting which has been in progress here closed on the night of July 22, 1934. On Sunday at 11:00 A. M., Rev. Cecil Jones, Yanceyville, N. C., brought a very timely message on "The Choice of Solomon." The afternoon service was in charge of Rev. I. T. Underwood, who presented an appropriate discourse on "Forget."

Rev. M. A. Pollard, Liberty, N. C., arrived Monday evening and took charge of the preaching for the remainder of the meeting. His messages were highly scriptural and saturated with zeal for the progress of the Lord's kingdom. He was heard with much interest and profit. He endeared himself to the congregation by his courteous conduct and friendly attitude. Brother Pollard was with us last year. His coming this year was greatly appreciated.

The attendance was very good from start to close of the meeting. A new program of service was launched at this time, namely, holding worship at the hours of 5:00 P. M. and 8:00 P. M. This change worked very pleasantly and satisfactorily generally as far as was known.

The church was greatly encouraged to press on in the upward way and benefited spiritually by the meeting. May the Lord be praised for all blessings received.

L. L. WYRICK.

WHAT ALCOHOL WILL DO.

The Prohibition Defender quotes an exchange, "Alcohol will remove stains from the summer clothes." It is correct. It will also remove, says The Defender,

The summer clothes.

The winter clothes.

The spring clothes, and

The fall clothes, not only from the back of the man who drinks it but from his wife and children as well.

Alcohol will remove:

Furniture from the floor.

Rugs from the floors.

Food from the cupboard.

Lining from the Stomach.

Kidneys from the back.

Liver from the side.

Hair from the head, and Sight from the eyes.

A good reputation.

A man's business.

A man's friends.

A happy look from children's faces.

A prosperous man to a pauper's grave.

A man from the highway to heaven to the road to hell.

—Sunday School Herald.

THE ONENESS OF HUMANITY.

As we widen our conception, we find that, for better or for worse, the whole world is bound together and interrelated. It is supreme folly to talk of the United States retaining a splendid isolation. A League of Nations in some effective form must be worked out, or civilization will go down in the carnage and chaos of war. We have a number of politicians who were born out of due season, about five hundred years too late, and they have not yet found out that the world is a unit and that no member of this world organism can suffer without all the members suffering.

A business man in New York could not collect a bill from a concern in California because that house could make no collection from a customer in the Malay States, who was embarrassed because he could not compete with the products of Bolivia.

Not long ago some textile mills in New England were closed. The usual orders from a section of Korea failed to arrive. Why? Because the hair net industry in that part of Korea had suddenly closed. Why? Because American women had bobbed their hair. The world is so small that falling hairpins in America bounce off to strike Korea, and then ricochet to strike New England. At the same time 40,000 Chinese women were thrown out of employment.

Since we have discarded silk-lined overcoats, we have reduced the chance for work for multitudes in the silk industry of Japan. When Russia could not drink tea because of poverty, India, which produced tea, became too poor to buy textiles from England and the mills of Manchester experienced the greatest slump since the Civil War. As a consequence, the farmers of the South received a low price for cotton, since the Russians were not able to buy tea.

In A Primer for Tomorrow Dr. Christian Gauss, the author, writes concerning the interdependence and interconnection of nations:

"The mineral wealth of the world is so distributed and is so necessary to technological development that this alone involves any number of problems which will promptly become much more acute the moment we attempt the policy of the closed door. Of these minerals highly necessary in the advancement of technology, there are a number not available to us in our own country. We find in a list of those minerals in which we are totally or almost totally deficient, items as important as maganese, nickel, tungsten, and tin. That is only one part of the picture. There are other natural resources of which we have virtual monopoly. Sulphur, for instance, is highly necessary to almost every modern nation. In 1929 we produced eighty-five per cent of the world's supply.

It is plain that we always have lived in America on international trade, and any attempt to alter this, at a time when the needs even of our domestic industries are so much more varied, might very well give us pause, even in these days of the NRA and the codes. This government pressure would have to be exerted not only on industry, but on agriculture as well. If we are merely going to raise enough wheat for our own consumption and be self-contained in that field, according to Secretary Wallace, we must be prepared to order the farmers on between forty and sixty million acres of wheat land to stop growing wheat and to grow something else, though we cannot tell them what."

Dr. Albert E. Day, in Religion in Life, writes to the same effect:

"While the present order has about completed the demonstration of its futility, the new order is not yet visible. Humanity is wandering between two worlds, one dead, the other powerless to be born. Our captains of industry roam in a twilight zone between socialism and individualism, craving government in business when it will save them from bankruptcy, wanting none of it when it appears to be about to try to save the people. Many of our statesmen look cross-eyed at the whole question of international relations, so that the observer does not know whether they are gazing hopefully at some form of cooperation or have the attention riveted upon isolation. Probably they themselves do not know. They do not want war and are afraid to take risks for peace. They desire a world tribunal for other nations, but are afraid to commit America's cause to its keeping."

Carlyle wrote: "There is not a red Indian hunting by Lake Winnipeg can quarrel with his squaw but all the world will smart for it. Will not the price of beaver rise?" The world is so woven together by a variety of connecting ties that both ideas and diseases are highly contagious. Spanish influenza rapidly crossed national boundary lines, and the theories of Russian Communism are accepted by many American laborers. There are belated politicians who do not know the age in which we are living, who cannot "discern the sign of the times."

We have had quite enough chauvinism and jingoism. There must be developed the international mind. The blackest blotch on American history is the policy of selfish isolation to which our country has been committed.

America could have possibly prevented the imminent perils that threaten the very perpetuity of more than one European nation. The United States forgot that she was a debtor to other nations. She followed the leadership of demagogues rather than duty. Our nation fell from the pinnacle of idealism into the slough of materialism. The very material motives which influenced our blind guides are proving to be against our material prosperity. The world is so knit together and interrelated that no people can remain independent of what happens in the remotest part of the world. The appeal of commerce will at last penetrate thick-skinned sensibilities where the appeal of conscience failed. In the meantime the work of rebuilding a wrecked world is arrested.

—Editorial from Nashville Christian Advocate.

A BLESSED HOPE.

It was late on a Saturday night when a messenger boy brought a message that I was to go to the nearest telephone for a long distance call. Such a message winged my feet and filled my mind with apprehension, but soon I had the connection and the message; a glad message for some dear relatives would be with me on the morrow! Some that I had not seen for many years and some that I had never seen. It was a joyful message to me even though it was too late to make any extra preparation, satisfied that all would be right. As I lay awake thinking of the coming happy reunion the thought came to me, "How like the coming of our Lord this is."

All down through the ages the second coming of our Lord Jesus Christ has been sounded forth with no uncertain sound. Much more has been prophesied about His second coming than was prophesied about His first coming. Jesus came in obscurity and humiliation the first time, but He will come again in great power and glory. During His earthly life a few were willing to accept Him as their Messiah and to listen to His teaching. Among His last teachings were the beautiful words of the fourteenth chapter of the Gospel of John; words of blessed comfort that

He whom they loved would come back to earth some day. But the disciples could not seem to grasp the meaning and it was repeated to them after His ascension into heaven by two men in white apparel: "This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen Him go into heaven." The disciples went forth to preach the glorious gospel of the Son of God, of the blood that was shed for the remission of sin, of the power of His resurrection and that some day He will come in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. Many who have believed the preached Word, died in the faith which was once delivered unto the saints and they, with us are awaiting the great day of our Lord's return to earth. Jesus told His disciples to watch and pray; for ye know not when the time is. The admonition has resounded down through the ages and to us: "Watch therefore: for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come." And now in this Saturday evening of time the message so long foretold is resounding in our ears: "For yet a little while, and He that shall come will come, and will not tarry." We are waiting for the message: "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh; go ye forth to meet Him." Every one who has heard and believed this message is prepared to meet Him for the Word of God says: "And every man that hath hope in Him purifieth himself, even as He (Jesus) is pure." There will be no time for preparation for "in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." The dark night of sin has settled down over this old earth as Jesus said it would but we can look up, and lift our heads, for our redemption draweth nigh. We may comfort each other with these words: "The Lord Himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord." Many would rob us of this hope and say as Peter wrote: "Where is the promise of His coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation." But Enoch also, the seventh from Adam, prophesied of these, saying, "Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousand of His saints." We believe the Bible and we are looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ; who gave Himself for us, that He might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto Himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works. Oh, we need have no fear nor apprehension if we let Him keep us clean and pure. It is a joyful thought that He is coming to take us out of this sin-cursed world. And how blessed the thought of meeting those whom we have not seen for many years; and the many whom we have never seen but our hearts have longed to meet. What a gathering that will be, what a home coming! "The God of all grace, who hath called us unto His eternal glory by Christ Jesus, after that ye have suffered awhile, make you perfect, stablish, strengthen, settle you. To Him be glory and dominion for ever and ever. Amen."

W.

Men may fail to give us due credit for our worth and soon forget us after our departure, but that will matter little if our heavenly Father gives us his approval at the judgment. His "well done" will fully compensate for life's suffering and man's injustice.—Selected.

E-D-I-T-O-R-I-A-L

EDITOR

J. O. ATKINSON, ELON COLLEGE, N. C.

ASSOCIATE EDITOR

E. C. GILLETTE

117 W. Forsyth Street, Jacksonville, Fla.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS

I. W. JOHNSON      ELISHA A. KING

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE VIRGINIA VALLEY CONFERENCE.

The eighty sixth annual session was at Mayland Church, Rockingham County August 8th-9th. It was indeed good to be there. The reason is found in Psalms 50:14: "We took sweet counsel together as we walked in the house of God with the throng." The throng was there, to the filling and overflow of the meeting house, and the counsel was sweet because it was of things holy and divine. The church is symbolized by a man's hand. Just as it takes five fingers to make a complete hand, the church has developed five enterprises. And these are named and developed as God has unfolded them in sequence and time.

First. The local church—the thumb. Second. The Missionary enterprise—the fore finger. Third. The educational institutions, Sunday schools and colleges—the middle finger. Fourth. Church and religious literature—the fourth finger. Fifth. Organized and institutional benevolence and charity—the little finger.

Historically, these enterprises and institutions have been discovered and developed in the order named, and every church of growth and vigor, has and maintains these five interests. Since the hand is the most perfect symbol of power and might, is not the hand of God displayed to us through these five enterprises that constitute the church. So every annual church conference takes counsel together about these five enterprises. Comes first the report from every local church, as to what it has done in evangelism, in receiving and cultivating its members, etc. Then the report on missions, as to what the church has done in obeying the command of our Lord "Go"! Then the report on education, as to what the church has done in its Sunday school, Christian Endeavor and for its college. Then the report on religious literature, that used in Sunday school, the church paper and the missionary publications. And the report on benevolence—what the church has done for its orphanage and for its superannuates. These are the five interests that every Conference has to consider, for they are the hand of our God in reaching out into the world to make this a better world, and through His church, build here in the earth the kingdom of heaven. There may be one-sided Christians—those who are interested in the local church only—thumb Christians. Then there may be benevolent Christians, thumb and little finger Christians, who, like members of a lodge or a fraternity, care for the benevolences of the church only—and so on. But the well rounded Christian, the one who seeks to develop the best in himself, his family and his church, is that Christian who believes in and supports that which his own church, and every healthy and growing church, is doing.

In the mind and heart of the thinking there is no confusion about these interests and enterprises of his church. He gives heed to each and all and loves the five, since the five make up the complete hand.

In the Mayland Conference there were those present who presented with intelligence and enthusiasm each and all of these five enterprises. And so our counsel together was sweet in the house of God.

Rev. B. J. Earp, vice-president, presided in the absence of President R. Lee Williamson, who was detained because of illness; Rev. A. W. Andes was recording secretary, Bro. Samuel Earman was treasurer. One eventful and unusual incident of the Conference was that of the licensure of his own son by the beloved secretary of the Conference, Rev. A. W. Andes. This service logically belonged to the president, Brother Earp, who very graciously and in the name of the Conference, turned the sacred service over to the father, who for many years has been the faithful and painstaking secretary of the body.

Mayland entertained the Conference in royal fashion and with most generous hospitality. It was indeed good to be there.

J. O. A.

DR. RAYMOND CALLED TO SOUTHERN PINES.

Dr. C. Rexford Raymond has received a unanimous call to become the pastor of the Church of Wide Fellowship at Southern Pines, North Carolina, and has accepted the call and will begin his pastorate on the second Sunday in September. He will succeed Dr. Elmer Willis Serl, who recently resigned after a notable pastorate of several years at Southern Pines. During his pastorate a beautiful new church edifice was built.

Dr. Raymond has been Executive Vice-President of Southern Seminary Foundation and Professor of Church Administration. This office he resigns, though he has great faith in the institution and is devoted to its interests. Circumstances make it impossible for him to be absent from his home so much in financial campaigns and at heart Dr. Raymond is a pastor and preacher.

Dr. Raymond is a graduate of Oberlin and has held notable pastorates. Among them have been the South Church, Brooklyn; Colorado Springs, and Chattanooga, Tennessee; and he was at one time Vice-President of Berea College. He has been a leader in Congregational Christian work in the southeast. He is President of the Congregational Advisory Board of the Southeast and was

Vice-President of the Southeast Convention of Congregational and Christian churches. His addresses at the General Council, Southern Convention and other denominational meetings have always been heard with great interest. He enjoys the warm friendship of all who know him; and he has the confidence and best wishes of all for a happy and successful pastorate at Southern Pines.

E. C. G.

A MEMORIAL TO DR. BLOOM.

Few men have had a more sincere or deeper interest in the colored churches and their leaders than did Dr. W. Knighton Bloom. As an expression of their appreciation of this interest the State Young People's Conference grounds at Morbihan, La., was named "Kamp Knighton" in his honor. During the twelfth annual session of the Conference a monument to his honor was dedicated. This was built out of the small donations made by many members of these churches. The program of dedication was most significant. The principal speakers were:

"On Behalf of the Student Summer Service," Miss Georgia Keller, New Orleans.

"On Behalf of the American Missionary Association," Rev. W. L. Cash, Dallas, Texas.

"On Behalf of the Church Extension Boards," Mrs. F. P. Eusminger, Birmingham, Ala.

"On Behalf of the Community," Hon. Emile Verrett, President of the Iberia Parish School Board.

"On Behalf of Kamp Knighton and the Louisiana Conference," Rev. N. A. Holmes, Central Church, New Orleans.

Rev. E. H. Phillips, Extension Worker, was Master of Ceremonies, and it is to his leadership and energy that the monument is due, as is also the achievement of the fine Conference grounds and buildings.

E. C. G.

THE BEST MINISTRY.

(The following editorial appeared in the Raleigh News and Observer of July 21st. It is finely complimentary with regard to the broad, Christian service rendered the community by Dr. Edward Kirbye of the United Church of that city.)

If the task of the preacher is to bring, as Jesus came to bring, the more abundant life to the people, then Dr. J. Edward Kirbye has made an excellent ministry in Raleigh. Due to his efforts, and almost his efforts alone, 50 families of Raleigh will have opportunity for a richer life on homesteads in a new garden community to be established here with a $100,000 government fund.

For 50 families in Raleigh with earning power of from $40 to $100 a month, the garden community will mean an almost miraculous opportunity for better living, for garden supplement to income and for ultimate home-ownership in attractive surroundings. As a part of their contracts these homestead families must agree to raise enough vegetables, livestock and poultry on their one and two acre tracts to raise materially their own living standards and by example those of the community.

Experimental such homestead projects as this one may be. But it is experiment in the effort to lift the standard of human life. In providing the opportunity for such an experiment in the more abundant life in Raleigh, Dr. Kirbye has not only served his community but also in the highest sense his ministry to men and women. Preaching patience to the poor is a poor priesthood beside the Christian leadership which seeks a better, richer life for all men in God's world.

SHOW US YOUR MAN.

By REV. VAUGHAN DABNEY, D. D., *dean Andover
Newton Theological School, Newton Centre, Massachusetts.*

[An address delivered on Monday night, June 25, 1934, at the meeting of the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches of the United States in Finney Chapel, Oberlin College, Oberlin, Ohio.]

When Phillips Brookes closed his memorable sermon in Westminster Abbey, on Sunday, July 4, 1880, he added a few brave and beautiful words singularly appropriate to the day and the occasion. He asked his English fellow Christians to pray for America. The basis of this earnest plea was rooted in the great preacher's lofty conception of the spiritual function of the state.

"In our modern thought," said Phillips Brookes, "the nation is the making place of men. To beget and educate human character, to contribute to the complete humanity, the 'perfect man' that is to be,—by this alone each nation must be judged today. The nations are the candlesticks of the Lord. No candlestick can be so rich or venerable that men shall honor it if it holds no candle. 'Show us your man,' land cries to land."

What a text for our troubled times! Though spoken fifty-four years ago this prophetic pronouncement concerning the spiritual function of the state bears directly upon the most critical and baffling problem of our day,—the awful threat of a militarized, mechanized, materialistic nationalism.

What country has escaped this scourge? Japan doing her war dance to Mars vaunts herself before the Western world. India seethes with nationalistic ambitions. Old European dynasties have crumbled before our very eyes, and on the ruins of old states Communists and Hitlerites and Fascists are busy rearing their strange structures of government. Here at home we ask searching questions. Is America to be the next country to have a totalitarian state? Can democracy escape dictatorship? Can Christianity conquer Caesarism? What is the duty of the church in a regimented social order?

That our General Council is aware of the situation is indicated by the searching watchword, "Righteousness exalteth a nation." We have been summoned here to Oberlin as Christian citizens at a fateful hour of the world's history. We would inquire of the Lord with open minds and humble hearts what His will is concerning us, that we may return to declare the whole counsel of God without fear or favor. We ask for not specific answers to questions we must solve for ourselves. Nor do we expect a blue print plan for church action in an era of planned economy. We would seek guidance from the eternal principles of our Christian faith. What truths are contained in the text, "Show us your man!"

As we ponder the words we remember first of all that Phillips Brookes believed in nationalism. He did not condemn the British government, nor did he apologize for the Fourth of July. Neither England nor America was to be absorbed by the other. Each had its own peculiar riches to bring to the store house of the common humanity. Brookes began with men as they were and where they were, as citizens of different countries. He sought not the extinction, but the exaltation of nationalism. He was a son of fact.

Why not frankly and gladly recognize the imperial claims of nationalism upon the hearts of men? Too often we make the mistake of jumping in one swift leap to the very top step of a world society. Generally somebody slips on the stairs, rolls to the bottom of an excessive nationalism and there remains, afraid to make the climb. It was Irvin Cobb, the humorist, who voiced the difficulty of the average man when he quaintly remarked, "Teach me how to sing 'My Country 'tis of Thee,' before you make me sing, 'My Country 'tis of Those.'" It is not easy to teach men to sing "my country 'tis of those" as any one will confess who carries back to the local men's Bible class the pacifist peace resolutions adopted so enthusiastically in some convention.

In his book, "Nationalism, Man's Other Religion," Edward Shillito, like Brooks, a son of fact, recognized the basic claims of nationalism. Said he, "But when the love of Dante for Florence, or of Lincoln for America, grows unintelligible, and schoolboys need a commentary and a vocabulary to know what Wordsworth meant when he likened his love for his country to that of a lover or a child, then something will have been allowed to perish, without which the spirit of man will be poorer." We begin by facing the fact of nationalism. Here it is. What shall we do about it?

Let us take another step. "The nation," said Phillips Brookes, "exists to make men. To beget and educate human character, by this alone, each nation must be judged today. Show us your man!" Nationalism must be humanized. Not by Naval power, but by moral power will each nation be judged.

O nations, show us your men and women and children. Show us your farmers and miners and mill operatives. Tell us about your courts and your slums and prisons and houses of correction. Show us, O America, your negroes in the south, your Chinests on the Pacific coast, your foreign born in the manufacturing cities of the eastern seaboard. Show us your men, ye peoples of the earth.

When we apply this test to our world we see how far we have failed. The old order now passing cannot lightly be dismissed. It produced riches of individual life which must be cherished. It discovered values that must be preserved. But taken by and large the world over, the old nationalistic states failed lamentably to produce men. The present world wide revolt against old forms of government is rooted in this distrust of a selfish nationalism. A rugged individualism produced ragged individuals. Unbridled competition in armaments precipitated war and turned men into cannon fodder. Niebuhr put it thus, "As modern civilization disintegrates and involves itself in national and civil wars, man is called upon to become a unit in a great mechanical slaughtering enterprise. So modern civilization creates and destroys the individual."

When we apply the test to our own country we are filled with shame. Corruption seems to have eaten into the heart of a people. Gone is the stern sense of individual responsibility of former days. What of the government in many of our large cities? Some years ago, Lord Bryce said that our American cities are the worst governed on earth. Who would affirm that such is not the case today? The recent revelations of civic mismanagement in all parts of the country are shocking. Kidnappers, racketeers and crooked politicians are ignoring the rights of the people. Even the staccato shots of the sub-machine guns do not seem to arouse citizens from their sleep of indifference and timidity. Can we Christianize the modern city? Those on the firing line in the thick of the fray know only too well the terrific battle that is being fought for righteousness. It seems that the gallant little band of reformers is almost overwhelmed by the armed might of organized greed and corruption. Would that we might have a great revival of individual indignation which would sweep away in its might the forces that kill and steal and destroy. We must produce men!

Even states have suffered from the neglect and indifference of citizens who have blindly turned over to unworthy men the reins of office. Imagine a governor of the sovereign state of California, a man who promised to uphold the law, actually congratulating an avenging mob at San Jose by saying, "That was a fine lesson to the whole nation. I am checking San Quentin and Folsom prisons to find out what kidnappers they have. I am thinking of paroling them to those fine patriotic citizens of San Jose, who know how to handle such situations."

Lest others from different states pride themselves on the purity of their own corporate life, let me remind you of the dark picture painted by Mitchell Dawson in the May "Atlantic," in an article entitled, "Who's Wrong With the Law?" Not what's wrong with the law. We have laws enough and to spare. The author is writing on the subject, "Who's wrong with the law?" With merciless logic Dawson traces our national shame to the people themselves who have sold their civic birthright for a mess of political pottage. In a penetrating paraphrase of The House that Jack Built the author flings our failures before us.

"This is the law the people built.

This is the cop who enforces the law the people built."

Step by step the argument goes on to its convincing conclusion.

"These are the people

Who stand for the boss

Who name the judge

Who instructs the jury

Who favor the lawyer

Who fights the prosecutor

Who flays the culprit

Who is caught by the cop

Who enforces the law the people built."

We need men who will stand up and cry shame! We need resolute individuals to shape public opinion that will end that shame. Who knows but that our own churches may rediscover their initial Puritan courage and exalt the nation by their individual righteousness. Only the righteousness of individual men can exalt a nation! Show us your man!

This same acid test must be applied to the new types of government which are emerging from the wreckage of old dynasties in Europe. Communism is no more sacred than Czarism, unless man is upbuilt. Hitlerism stands or falls as did Kaiserism, by the same test. Fascism also must produce men. Man was a pawn under the old regimes. Is there a danger that he may become a parasite under the new order? Food and shelter may be provided for more abundantly in the newer states but the same question arises, what about your man? Is he a growing character? Or does he tend to become an automaton, a kind of mechanized unit in a vast process operated by indirect control from some distant place by a single dictator?

There are dangers which must be guarded against in states today and especially in Fascism. Excessive militarism is one. Then there is a highly regimented nationalistic culture. Civil liberties are often curtailed if not cancelled. There is a "compulsory class collaboration in the name of the totalitarian state." Add to this the high pressure development of race prejudice, and we have a new type of individual that may be no better than the stolid peasant of the old days.

(To be continued.)

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Liberty Spring Sunday School had a fish fry and picnic at Conan Beach, Tuesday, August 8th. Two hundred members of the Sunday school including several invited guests were present. Two hundred and fifty pounds of Ocean View spots were furnished by Sheriff E. B. Rawles. The menu included spots, corn bread, iced tea, hot-dogs, rolls, country bacon and pickles. The Baraca class were hosts to the entire school. Mr. Charlie Atkinson prepared the meal and members of the class assisted in serving at 6 o'clock.

The fish fry was greatly enjoyed. For several years members of the Sunday school have had a fish-fry during the summer season. Heretofore a number of persons have spent the early part of the day in catching the fish, and others gathered with them later for the fry. But this year it was decided to omit the fishing and have a supper for the school. There are several members of the school who have a good appetite for fish. No score was kept, but it was unofficially reported that one man ate twelve spots, two hot-dogs and drank several glasses of iced tea. Three others were close seconds during the supper. They are living, in good health, and are anxious for another fish fry at an early date. Believe it or not this is a true story.

No recreation excels fishing. And a well-prepared fish fry is an ideal method for a real picnic in the country. The quiet bosom of the lake, the dipping of the oars in the water, the roar of the motor, the green foliage of trees on the shore line, the great out-of-doors above and the quest of luring the fish from the deep—all these give opportunity for relaxation and rest for tired bodies and weary minds. How thrilling to get out of bed these mornings about four o'clock, prepare your breakfast while your wife sleeps, get off to the lake while the dew is still on the roses and find the bream and speckles waiting to take your bait. If you are lucky enough to find them, you soon catch the limit and return in time for another breakfast, refreshed and ready for a good day's work.

And a fish fry for a Sunday School is unsurpassed in its appeal to appetites and fellowship. Knives and forks, (in our school) are discarded and banned, for the time being. Of course one's hands will need a bath afterwards, but the freedom and absence of formality compensate for this little trouble. One is out in the woods, close to nature, in fellowship with others, in touch with God and in sight of the handiwork of the Creator, far from the din and confusion of social distinctions and distractions. And as one stands by the shore of the lake, on such an occasion, one remembers the early morning when Jesus stood on the shore and watched the disciples coming in their boat. And when they reached the shore, they found the Master standing by, ready for an early breakfast. After the blessing they ate the fish and bread. And Jesus had a little talk with Peter. The fire was dying on the beach. But a strange warmth was glowing in Peter's heart as Jesus said, "Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me more than these?" And that little love talk grew out of the informality of that occasion. A fish fry may give an opportunity for debauchery, or, it may open the way for a richer fellowship with others, and a renewal of faith and devotion to the work of the Master who pleads, "Feed my lambs." All depends upon the motive and spirit of the people.

I. W. JOHNSON.

THE VIRGINIA VALLEY CONFERENCE.

The Southern Convention is made up of several conferences. Conferences are constituted by a group of churches in contiguous territories. These conferences constitute the larger units of our church organization in the South. Representatives of these conferences come together in bi-annual session, which session is known as the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches. The Convention is not a legislative body; but, in council and in conference with various interests of the church, it does set goals, submit plans, and make requests of constituent conferences. Usually, the conferences regard the requests of the Convention and pass the same on to the local church with the request and expectation that the church shall be governed by the actions of the Convention. The recent session of the Convention set very high financial goals and made certain specific requests of every conference constituting the Convention, and, through the conferences, to every local church constituting these conferences. These goals set, though high, are not beyond our reach. We are able to meet these goals; and if everyone would do his duty to the full measure, they would be met without difficulty and the various interests and departments of the church would be enabled, not only to meet present demands, but to enter new fields. It is the devout hope of the Convention that everyone will cooperate to the fullest extent of his ability.

The Valley Conference is a part of the Southern Convention. The officials of this Conference are loyal and cooperative. The Valley Conference has two annual meetings—the mid-year meeting, held, usually, in early spring, and the annual session of the Conference, which is always held the second week in August. The Conference, this year, met August 8th and closed on the 9th—a two-day session. Rev. R. L. Williamson is the President. Rev. B. J. Earp is the Vice-President. Mr. Williamson was not able to be present. Mr. Earp presided over the Conference, to the delight of many. Rev. A. W. Andes is the efficient and faithful secretary of the Conference. He has served in this capacity for a number of years. The accuracy with which he records the findings of the Conference will continue to furnish valuable information to those who are interested in the important actions of the church. The Conference was held with Mayland Christian Church. The members of this church were most hospitable and indeed gracious in their entertainment for the delegates and visitors who came. Everything necessary was done for the comfort and convenience of all.

The Conference opened at 10:00 with devotion by Miss Margaret Earp. Rev. A. W. Andes delivered the annual address. The various departments of the church were represented by those in authority. Mr. C. D. Johnston, Superintendent of the Christian Orphanage, was present and spoke interestingly and effectively, as he always does, for the great cause that is near his heart and near the heart of the whole church. Mr. Jno. T. Kernodle, Managing Editor of the CHRISTIAN SUN was present in the interest of the department of publications. Dr. J. O. Atkinson delivered a most telling and inspiring address. Dr. Atkinson feels keenly the place of the church paper in our brotherhood. He, together with Mr. Kernodle, called upon the ones present and all interested in the progress of the church to give the church paper their support to the end that its circulation may be greatly increased. This was, and is, a timely appeal. If the church paper went into every home in the church, other enterprises would be much more easily supported. In addition to the report of the publications, Dr. Atkinson also spoke most effectively in the interest of missions. For a long, long time he has given his life to this interest of the church. He has gone throughout the brotherhood, delivering great messages, appealing, with surpassing passion for the support of the missionary enterprises of the church and for the sending of the gospel to the ends of the earth.

The college was represented by the writer, and appeal was made to the Conference for the support of the entire educational program of the church. The Sunday schools stand at the beginning of the program; the college stands at the completion of the period of preparation, so far as we, as a church, have provided. The Sunday School is important for the growth and progress of the church; the college is essential for the intelligent leadership and comprehensive growth of the church itself. We would not think of abandoning our Sunday schools; we cannot think of failing to support the college.

The Convention provided that the college should receive its financial support through conference apportionments. The amount allotted to the college from this source equals 40 per cent of the entire askings of the Convention. It is the hope of all that the entire apportionment may be raised. Further, the Convention provided for the support of the college through the Sunday schools, requesting that each school take a special offering for the college on fifth Sundays and send the amounts given to the college. It also provided for the continuance of the Dollar-a-month Club. This Club has quite a membership. Some keep their dues up. Others have fallen behind. Recently, cards were sent out from the office, informing the individual members of the status of their dues. As a result, quite a number have paid, for which we are grateful. Individual gifts for the support of the college will be solicited from time to time, at the sanction and request of the Convention. At the close of this article, you will find a list of the Sunday schools and amounts given reporting since last week's letter. We are grateful for these contributions; and Brother Pastor and Mr. Superintendent, if your Sunday school has not sent in its offering, won't you please see that it is sent as early as possible. These offerings help us greatly in the midst of summer. We want to keep our canvassers in the field. If you will help in this particular, we shall be able.

It was a real pleasure and inspiration to attend the recent sessions of the Valley Conference. The people came in large numbers. They came with expectancy and hope, trusting that they, as a church and as a people, might be informed and might be blessed in things spiritual. I like the Valley. The scenery is beautiful almost beyond compare. Substantially appearing homes line the highways. An honest and a steady people constitute the membership of our churches there. Their one great need is a larger number of efficient and consecrated leaders. May this need be supplied! I attended the Conference with great pleasure and profit. May the Lord bless the faithful servants of our churches in that section!

FIFTH SUNDAY OFFERINGS.

Received August 7th—August 12th.

Virginia Valley:

Linville .....	$ 4.78
Wood's Chapel .....	1.49
Timber Ridge .....	1.85
Total .....	8.12

North Carolina and Virginia:
Apple's Chapel .....	2.75
Elon College .....	1.25
Durham .....	8.99
Total .....	12.99
Western North Carolina:
Big Oak .....	.38
Seagrove .....	1.50
Total .....	1.88
Eastern North Carolina:
Catawba Springs .....	3.37
Total offerings reported this week .....	26.36
Total offerings reported last week .....	$ 81.92
Grand Total .....	$108.28

L. E. SMITH.

ALABAMA LETTER.

Perhaps it will not be out of place to report some of my activities since I last wrote THE SUN. I have been on the job here regularly and in addition have kept a regular appointment at Mt. Pisgah Congregational Church since last February. I have also been assisting Rev. J. J. Barker at Tallassee, Ala., and Rev. A. C. Nelson at Clanton, and also Rev. John Taylor at Spring Hill, Clay Co., Ala., besides two weeks of revival work in my own field. I have yet three other meetings to hold during the revival season.

My work here has been fairly successful considering the depression under which we have had to labor, and other things that have to be taken into consideration. Our church debt has been reduced again and we are now on the home stretch hoping to reach the goal by and by. When I came on the field two years ago the debt was thirteen hundred and sixty seven dollars and seventy-seven cents. Our last payment has reduced the amount to $471.21. This has all been paid by local support.

We are now planning our Annual Home-coming Service for the second Sunday in September, at which time we hope to raise one dollar per member to be applied on our church debt. If we can do this, it will relieve the situation. We have some repairs which are very much needed but we have decided to pay off the indebtedness before we contract any additional responsibility.

Now if there is any member of the SUN family who would like to share the Home Coming Service with us, who cannot possibly attend, just ask the Lord to let you share by sending us a dollar to help clean up the indebtedness of the church here in Lanett. Our people here are all laborers, but some loyal hearts are here. I am sure you cannot render a better service than to think of us at our Home Coming.

Rev. Millard Stevens and Chandler Adams were teachers in our Bible School assisted by Miss Lucile Slaughter and Mrs. James Hunt. We had a fine meeting during the progress of the school. Rev. Stevens conducted the worship at night and the pastor preached the morning services.

Pray for us at Lanett. Our meeting at Tallassee was good, but not largely attended. Rev. Barker has a wonderful opportunity here and there is room for great good to be accomplished.

Our meeting at Mountain Springs near Clanton, Ala., was with Rev. Nelson as pastor. This was a great meeting. It seemed like "old time religion." When these old faithful soldiers of the cross came together and told of their experiences in Christian service, it made one's heart glad.

My home in Clanton was with Bro. and Sister Leek and their daughter, Ruth. It was indeed a fine home and I shall never forget their kindness. Rev. E. W. Butler of Thorsby, Ala., was with us at one service and greatly enjoyed the meeting and so we did rejoice to have him with us.

The last week I spent with our little church at Spring Hill. This is one of our weak churches, numerically and financially, but from all appearances they are strong in faith and abound in good works. They had a wonderful meeting. Rev. John Taylor is the beloved pastor and he is doing a good work with the church.

When I saw the faces of these old pilgrims, I took courage, and when I said "good bye," it was a sad parting for there are some saints of God there, that, no doubt, I shall not see again on this side of the river. I hope to meet them on the other side under the shade of the trees.

My next meeting will be with Rev. Veazey at Cragford, week following first Sunday.

I had planned to be at the School of Leadership training at Wadley this week, but so far I have been unable to attend as my wife has suffered a very severe and painful accident in getting her right leg and foot scalded. I shall try to attend tomorrow if it is at all possible.

Pray for us and thus share our burdens. The church at Mt. Pisgah has done the remarkable thing this year. They have repaired their church and now have a nice Sunday school. The work is moving along nicely.

They are planning revival third Sunday in August. You would be astonished to see what they have done this year. Mrs. Morris and Mrs. Dodgens are the untiring workers responsible for the financing to carry the work. I am expecting a great meeting here. May we have your prayers and sympathy in our efforts.

I am trusting the Lord to lead.

G. D. HUNT.

REMEMBERED.

On Friday night, July 27, 1934, the closing night of the meeting sometime after supper was over on the ground, the local congregation loaded our car with things for a pastor's empty pantry. Such items as follows were found: flour, meat, meal, preserves, canned fruit, sugar, salt, Irish potatoes, molasses, soap, jelly, etc.

This is a very considerate and appreciative people to serve at Concord. Thanks to all who had a part, and may the Lord increase the labors of your hands. As an appreciation we want to render more prompt and efficient service.

L. L. WYRICK.

OXFORD BIBLES for EVERY NEED

"The Oxford Bible is the Bible par excellence of the world"

THE HOME BIBLE

A Family Bible in Handy Size

An extra large type Oxford Text Bible, containing also, a family register and 12 beautifully colored maps. Size 9 x 5 1/2 inches.

Specimen of Type

16 The LORD is King for ever and ever: the heathen are perished out

- No. 01600 Superior Cloth, round corners and red edges ..... $2.75
- 01605 French Morocco, limp, round corners, red under gold edges, head-band, book-mark ..... $4.75

The JUNIOR'S Bible

Self-Pronouncing

With 4,000 Questions and Answers, carefully selected "Aids to Bible Study," 16 beautifully colored and 15 black full-page illustrations, 6 colored maps and a presentation page. Children may readily pronounce correctly difficult Scripture names, as this Bible is self-pronouncing. Size 7 x 4 1/4 x 1 1/4 inches.

Type in Junior's Bible

2 Take the sum of all the of the children of Isra-el. years old and upward, thro

- No. 1815 French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges, headbands and book-mark. Make some child happy with one of these fine Bibles ..... $2.95

Child's ILLUSTRATED Bible

The beautifully colored illustrations in this new Bible are a delight to the children. It has clear, readable type and yet it measures only 5 1/2 x 3 1/2 inches.

Specimen of Type

a My soul longeth, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the LORD: my heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God.

- No. 02112. French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, gold edges ..... $2.50

Pocket REFERENCE Bible

Has over 50,000 center column references. Measures only 6 1/4 x 4 1/2 inches. (A splendid gift for a young lady.)

Specimen of Type

9 Behold, O God our shield, and look upon the face of thine anointed.

- No. 07528x French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges ..... $3.25

Concordance Edition

Type and size as No. 07528x, but with a Concordance, subject index and dictionary of Scripture names. An excellent edition for students and Christian workers No. 03272x ..... $5.00

OUR LEADER

Oxford Concordance Bible

Self-Pronouncing

This beautiful Oxford India paper edition is indeed the ideal Bible for the student, preacher and evangelist. Each proper name and difficult word is divided into syllables and accented, and though printed with large clear type, the volume measures only 8 1/2 x 5 1/2 x 1 1/2 inches.

Specimen of Type

8 ¶ Jē-hōy'-ā-chīm was 6 years old when he began t

- No. 03671x. Fine Grain Morocco leather, overlapping cover, leather lined to edge, silk round corners, red under edges, silk ..... $6.50

A UNIQUE GIFT BIBLE

With Basket Weave Binding

The Antique brown calf leather binding has a basket-weave grain, and button clasp. Has overlapping cover, art silk lined, with red under gold edges. With references. Printed on Oxford India paper. Type as Pocket Reference Bible. $5.50

- No. 03255x ..... $5.50
- As No. 03255x, with concordance. No. 03276x ..... $6.50

Oxford TEACH

Have over 50,000 center column references, 300 double-column pages of up-to-date helps, conveniently arranged in alphabetical order. Also 32 full-page illustrations, and an indexed atlas of the Bible with 15 beautifully colored maps of Bible lands.

Easy-to-Read-Edition

Size 7 1/4 x 5 x 1 1/4 inches

Specimen of Type

14 Like sheep they are laid in grave; death shall feed on th

- No. 04453. French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, round corners and red under gold edges. A durable and handy some Bible ..... $4.35
- Oxford India Paper Edition Only one inch thick.
- 0773x. French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges, headbands and book-mark. A beautiful gift edition ..... $7.00

RED LETTER Edition

Same size and type as style No. 04453, with same references and helps, but with all the words of Jesus Christ printed in red. White paper edition No. 05453. French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges ..... $5.00

The Oxford imprint in a Bible guarantees satisfaction

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary

THE LONG ACCEPTED STRATEGY.

"It is important that we bear in mind the two fundamental tasks of missionary work: the delivery of the Gospel message to the non-Christian world and the founding of churches. . . . The Church, it must be remembered, is not only the bearer of the Gospel message, she is also the form in which the sovereignty of God operates organically in this age. She is, on this account, a peculiar spiritual body, permeated and governed by the Spirit of God and of Christ.

"The mission has only these two fundamental tasks mentioned above, and she must continually submit to criticism when other tasks or other considerations than these claim her attention. She must always be on her guard whenever presenting her message and founding churches, whether in familiar native forms or in forms strange to the manners and customs of the people. It is always a snare for the mission when a government supports her medical or educational work with heavy subsidies; she must watch lest these golden chains limit her freedom; she must recognize that she is entitled to carry on this service in school and hospital only in so far as it contributes naturally to the double tasks already indicated. Hers is not the task, nor dare she so organize her work, as if her aim were the christianization of the non-Christian world. When one considers the personnel and financial resources at her command, one is bound to ask oneself the question whether she has not cast her net too widely over the whole non-Christian and Roman Catholic world. It is to be regretted that many small missions and unattached missionaries keep on searching the map of the world to find unoccupied areas in order that they may begin there an independent mission, often with no proper knowledge or experience and with no power to preserve when faced with opposition and disappointment. But it is of equally doubtful value when certain large and costly missionary enterprises seek merely to superimpose the 'mission' upon the culture of great countries and peoples like India and China. . . .

"All departments of mission work must be tested as to whether they are indispensable to the two fundamental tasks."—Julius Richter, "Missions and the Modern World," World Dominion.

HOW CAN WE DO IT?

One of the secrets of the success of the Woman's Missionary Society is the fact that the programs are well planned and timely. Splendid literature is provided and everything should be prepared in detail—the devotional, the music, the educational text, and the business. If the meeting is to begin at three o'clock, it begins then; and close on time. Let there be no exhausting business session; let reports be limited to three or five minutes.

Furthermore, there is no reading of leaflets or chapters. Preserve us from that awful deadener. Such a meeting is ossified before it gets under way. Have no apologies. If a woman is on the program she does what is expected of her and does it the very best she can, for thus she grows. She doesn't remark that she hasn't had very long to prepare, or that company came and she is afraid she can't do very well.

So many women take church activities as a side line, a filler. Clubs, parties, etc., rank first. Let us make our program so beautifully spiritual, so challenging in thought, and instructive and original that women find clubs of secondary importance. Church work must stand first. It takes energy, enthusiasm and work, but it is worth it.

Have a telephone committee that calls every member the day before the meetings. Remember the sick and shut-ins with personal notes. See that a democratic spirit prevails; everyone gets to know everyone else and enjoys real fellowship. Everyone has something to do during the year. Have two women to serve as a reception committee and greet—really greet—folks who come. That's the kind of welcome that makes them want to come back.

We believe in decorations; also in favors on special occasions, but let them be favors that stand for something very definite in the program.

When you ask a woman to do something for a meeting never approach her with, "I don't suppose you would want to do this, Mrs. James," or, "I wonder if you could do this?" Such a question blocks a satisfactory answer. You have already put the "No" into her mouth. Always approach and ask with the idea of getting what you want.

We talk Women's Missionary Society. And I mean, talk it! Women talk about good flour, they comment on breakfast cereals, they exchange patterns and cake receipts, they recommend certain books—why, in the name of high heaven, can't we W. M. S.-ers talk more of our great society? Every business firm says that it pays to advertise; we say so too. It does. Let more of us do it.

Again we say that it takes energy, enthusiasm and work, but it is worth it.

If this is on your program—keep right on.

If not—try it.—Richmond Christian Advocate.

MISSIONARY OFFERINGS.
WEEK ENDING AUGUST 11, 1934.

Sunday Schools.

Previously acknowledged . . . . .	$ 2,881.85
Suffolk, Va. . . . .	25.00
Mt. Bethel, Stokesdale, N. C. . . . .	1.17
Antioch, Windsor, Va. . . . .	1.00
Dry Run, Seven Fountains, Va. . . . .	1.53
Third Avenue, Danville, Va. . . . .	6.17
Berea, Altamahaw, N. C. . . . .	8.00
Apple's Chapel, Brown Summit, N. C. . . . .	4.60
Bethlehem, (Nans.), Suffolk, Va. . . . .	2.10
Hank's Chapel, Pittsboro, N. C. . . . .	1.74
Damascus Corapeake, N. C. . . . .	1.65
Spring Hill, Waverly, Va. . . . .	1.94
Newport, Stanley, Va. . . . .	1.90
Linville Va. . . . .	4.33
Elm Avenue, Suffolk, Va. . . . .	2.10
Winchester, Va. . . . .	3.09
Wood's Chapel, New Market, Va. . . . .	1.30
Total . . . . .	$ 2,949.47

Individuals and Churches.

Previously Acknowledged . . . . .	$ 2,699.88
Waverly, Va. . . . .	66.91
Franklin, Va. . . . .	15.50
Total . . . . .	$ 2,782.29

Specials.

Previously acknowledged . . . . .	$ 947.48
Catawba Springs S. S., Apex, N. C. . . . .	2.10
Total . . . . .	$ 950.58

Coin Card Offering.

Previously acknowledged . . . . .	$ 102.01
Miss Beulah Bailey, Biscoe, N. C. (Big Oak Church) . . . . .	1.00
Mt. Olivet (R.) S. S., Elkton, Va. . . . .	1.00
Miss Anna Lou Showalter, Harrisonburg, Va. . . . .	1.00
Total . . . . .	$ 105.01

Summary.

Previously acknowledged . . . . .	17,018.23
Total offerings, week ending Aug. 11, 1934. . . . .	156.13
Total to date . . . . .	$17,174.36

VIRGINIA VALLEY CENTRAL WOMEN'S MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

Bethel Church, near Elkton, royally entertained the Annual Session of the above conference on July 19th. The churches were well represented, better than usual. It seemed to be an unfortunate week for the pastors, however, as two were away on duty and two were unavoidably detained and only one was able to attend. There were two addresses by Mrs. I. S. Long, Bridgewater, a returned missionary from India. Mrs. Long and her husband had spent twenty-five years in India for the Church of the Brethren. Her addresses were very interesting. Miss Margaret Earp gave a short address, telling of the Missionary Convention at Suffolk. Mrs. A. R. Van Cleave gave an interesting address on missions. The District Rallies were reported by Miss Ora Scott, Mrs. Boyd R. Richards and Mrs. Lena Rothgeb. Some of the Departmental Superintendents had full reports and some only partial reports, which gives the secretary a little something to do (as she sails on her flowery beds of case).

The treasurer, Miss Verdie Showalter, reported a total amount collected this year of $338.60.

Resolution were unanimously adopted by the conference denouncing immoral moving pictures and the liquor traffic.

The morning devotional service was led by Mrs. Walter Voorheese of North Carolina, using as her theme the 84th Psalm. The afternoon devotional service was conducted by Rev. A. R. Van Cleave from the 34th Psalm. Both services were well planned and beautiful lessons were brought to the hearers.

The Winchester Society gave a playlet, entitled "Two Business Adventures in Japan."

Special music was given by the Bethel Junior Choir and a Quartet from Leaksville.

The conference was presided over by Mrs. A. W. Andes, who has served as president the past three years but declined re-election.

The following officers were elected for the coming year:

President, Mrs. B. J. Earp, Harrisonburg; Vice President, Miss Helen Showalter, Harrisonburg, R. 4; Secretary, Mrs. B. F. Frank, Harrisonburg, R. 4; Asst.-Secretary, Miss Charlotte Hilliard, Broadway; Treasurer, Miss Verdie Showalter, Harrisonburg, R. 4; Supt. Spiritual Life, Mrs. K. H. Sale, Winchester; Supt. Cradle Roll, Mrs. E. Lena Rothgeb, Luray; Supt. Literature, Miss Minnie Dofflemeyer, Elkton; Supt. Young Peoples Societies, Mrs. O. L. Hoover, Winchester; Supt. Women's Societies, Miss Ora Scott, Harrisonburg, R. 3.

MRS. B. F. FRANK, Secy.

How wonderful a tribute to the individual worth of men that Christ should ask admittance where he rightfully belongs as Master and as Friend.—Isaac Edwardson.

THE CHINESE PEASANT WOMAN.

(Enters timidly with bowed head, arms folded, hands tucked in sleeves. Speaks in soft voice, but slowly and distinctly. Bows deeply before she speaks.)

Honorable ladies, it gives my humble self great pleasure to meet you today. I am Cheng Sui-ling. My home is in Pagoda Village, a small country town. You hear much about China which is different from what I shall tell you, for our country is a large one and there are many differences between its various parts. You know that although the language looks the same, it sounds quite differently in the north and in the south. Most of the people who tell you about China come from cities or large towns. Life in the country is quite different, as you will see.

I was born into a poor family, which, however, was very religious. We were much afraid of evil spirits and of death. All our extra money and some that which we could ill afford, we spent for incense and gifts for the idols on the god-shelf of our humble home or those at the Temple. I often went to the Temple alone, for my busy mother could not leave her numberless tasks.

Mother was noted as the woman who could make a pair of shoes from the—what do you say?—oh, yes, the floor, no, the ground up!—more quickly than any other woman in the village. I used to love to go with her to the river where the worn stones served as natural washboards and watch the speed with which she worked. Sometimes it was so cold that we had to break the ice in order to do our washing. Not one of those wonderful machines which you American women take for granted had any place in our humble home. Nor do I have them today. Mother not only spun and wove the cloth and made everything which we wore, cooked our food—mostly plain and frugal—and tended to the affairs of the household, but also looked after the pigs and chickens, and helped Father in the rice fields whenever he needed her. When you remember that every garment means 3 - 10 yards of hand-sewn seams, you will realize what making our clothes alone means. I myself even today do many of these same tasks in the same way. Our missionary friends tell us that we do many things as did our ancestors of Abraham's day.

When I was seventeen, I was married to a neighbor's son. Of course, he was not my choice, but my father's. You have heard many times about these "forced marriages" in China. For the most part in our town they are very happy. I went to live with my husband's people. For a few years I was as happy as could be with my husband and little boy. Then an awful sickness came, a month before my baby girl was born, a dreadful sickness which is sometimes called the Black Death or the Bubonic Plague. It took my husband and son. My husband's family waited only long enough to see that my child was not another boy, and then sent me back to my parents. Do not misunderstand. My husband's family were within their rights. They have always been kind to me.

My little girl was sickly from the time she was born. I did not know how to feed or to bathe her as you do your rosy, healthy babies. My mother's neighbors were very free with their advice. They thought the child had some evil spirit's ill-will and wanted to help me to get rid of her sickness with charms and incense. I have heard that country neighbors in America are also free with their advice. I hope that it does more good than my neighbor's did my little girl. They meant well, however, and it was one of them who finally told me that in a town only seven miles away, there was a clinic for sick mothers and babies.

You mothers can imagine that, sick and weak as I was myself, I somehow managed to walk those seven miles for the sake of my baby.

When we reached the clinic we were both almost exhausted, for the road was only a path over the mountain. We were given much more than medicine, however—rest, refreshment, kindness, friendship, and the Jesus story. You who have always known the God about whom he tells, cannot realize what it meant to know that God really loves and cares for his children. I had come to distrust the gods of the god-shelf and Temple, for they had not saved my husband and son, nor told me what to do for them, though I had spent strength and money I could ill afford in their worship.

I had never been to school. There was none in our village, and if there had been I had no time to go. The missionary and Chinese co-workers in charge of the clinic organized some of us into classes and taught us the Thousand Character system of writing and of reading. A whole new world was open to me. You who take school so much for granted must try hard to imagine how wonderful it was. I could read the Jesus Story not only to myself but to others. The kind friends at the clinic taught us some ways to make our homes better—new receipts, new ways of feeding and caring for our babies, and so on.

Later, after my baby and I were both well, we were sent through the help of these same kind friends to a Mothercraft School. Have you heard about these schools? There with many other women who also had their children with them, we lived in a home where we actually worked out what we were taught about care for the bodies and the minds and even the spirits of our children. We studied also Chinese, Bible geography, and I think you would call it home economics—caring for our homes. We learned about the women in other countries like us, too. In our social service course we were taught about our responsibility for making conditions better in our country and in our towns, through improving both our homes and ourselves.

When I went back to my mother's home, I did not find it always easy to care for my baby or for my home in the ways which I had learned. Chinese are taught great respect for our parents, you know, and it is hard for us to go against their wishes. Mother wanted me to do the household tasks as she and our ancestors had done. She thought giving the baby boiled water was offering her poison. You see, water is often poison in China; that is why we drink tea. Of course Mother did not understand that tea is bad for babies and boiled water is good. I have heard that even in America grandmothers often want their grandchildren brought up according to old ideas instead of new. You younger women will understand my difficulty.

When other mothers in the neighborhood saw that my little girl was well and strong, although she had been a sickly baby, they were interested to learn how to take care of their children in the way that I had learned at the Mothercraft School. Soon I found that other homes than mine were more like the one which the school taught us would help remake China. Now I have a little class of mothers whom I am trying to teach what I learned in the school.

We have a long way to go to church, but since I have read and told some of my neighbors the Jesus Story, we are making the journey of seven miles each Sunday to worship. We have started a Sunday school for the children in the village, that they may know a happier faith than that in the god-shelf.

My little girl is growing up. I am working very hard making shoes like these (points to her own, which should be embroidered) hoping to send her to a mission school and later perhaps even to college. We Chinese women who have found the Jesus Way are expecting much of the coming generation. They have a bigger opportunity than we.

There are many of us farm women in China. If you add together all the people in the United States, Great Britain and Germany, you will have about the number of farm people in our country. Eight out of ten people in China are from rural districts, have an income of $17—$50, not a week or a month, but a year, and own a small farm of a little over four acres.

We need much that you have to give, we farm women. We are glad to have you teach us new methods of farming and housekeeping. I wish I had time to tell you of some of the big crops which have been grown in our town because one of the boys learned new methods of planting and cultivating the seeds which he got at a mission school. I have told you some of the good things you have given the home keepers. We are glad for your labor-saving machines which have not yet reached the country folk, but which are gradually being introduced into larger places and will finally reach us, we hope. These things we need. We thank you, honorable ladies, for them. We need more, however, especially we women—your friendship, your sympathy, your love. You know the Jesus Story; help make it true for us.

And now, oh honorable ladies, I thank you for your kind attention to my humble self, and to my few words. And may you have happiness and health, oh, gracious ones, for a thousand years.

(Bows.)

FRIEND OF YOUNG MEN.

By MISS D. P. CUSHING, News Editor.

Darley Downs of Tokyo, Japan is declared by his associates to be "a live wire." He is now home on furlough. He docked in San Francisco on July 15 and will spend the summer visiting family and friends in Los Angeles, Emporia, Kansas, and Chicago, Illinois. More recently he has been Mission Secretary and Director of the Language School at Tokyo, Japan.

For eight years Mr. Downs was a teacher in the Doshisha, one of the greatest Christian universities in the Orient and there showed himself a power for good among the young men. He threw himself wholeheartedly into the life of the young people in Kyoto. He organized a Boys' Glee Club which met in his home and the latch string was always out to the students and youth of the community, making the Downs home a haven of hospitality. In Japan there is still little opportunity for the young people of the two sexes to meet together in a wholesome way. With the new outlook on life the young men and women welcome such an opportunity as is offered by a Christian home.

During his period of service in Kyoto Mr. Downs acted as associate pastor in one of the Kumiai churches. He introduced among Japanese students a series of courses in English teaching for the use of middle schools, and he conducted a highly successful weekly bible class.

Mr. Downs was born in Colorado and is a graduate of the University of Denver. During the great war he entered the army and for a time was Field Director of the Red Cross Service at Fort Sill Hospital. In addition to his other contacts Mr. Downs has been particularly interested in newspaper evangelism and the power of the printed word as a channel for service and education.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

NOW IS THE TIME TO PLAN.

Now is the time for all good superintendents and pastors to come to the aid of their Sunday schools and churches by making plans that will run through the next year.

No organization succeeds in doing worthwhile things unless somebody plans for such accomplishment. Back of every successful army is some master mind that has planned definitely what action should be taken. In every successful Sunday school or church there is at least one person who plans and prays for the accomplishment of Christian things. It is expected that those who have been elected to leadership will lead in this way.

Vacations will soon be over, public schools will be open, business will be increasing, and everything will seem to take on new life after the summer slump—unless it is the church. Those of us who are interested in our churches are eager that the church will keep step with the progress of the community about us. Religious education is certainly as important as the training which is given in the public schools. If we are to make the children realize this we will have to plan our work as carefully as do the public schools.

One young superintendent whom I know has recently called together his teachers and officers and made rather definite plans for a pep meeting in September, promotion day the last Sunday in September, rally day the first Sunday in October and for many other activities in his school. I am hoping that this young man is not alone in the undertaking, but that in all our churches definite plans will be made for the fall and winter work.

AN OFFERING FOR THE BOARD OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

The Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches authorizes its Board of Christian Education to call for an offering annually from the Sunday Schools and Christian Endeavor societies. The Board has refrained from making this call for the past few years but feels that it will have to do so this year. We have tried to serve without being a burden.

Copies of the New Testament and Psalms are sent free to all ten-year-old children in our Sunday schools. Books on any phase of religious education are loaned to those who request them. Educational problems are discussed with any who seek guidance. Vacation schools are promoted wherever there is a desire to have them. A summer school at Elon is held annually for young people and their leaders. Leadership training schools are conducted in all communities that desire them. Youth Fellowships are aided with counsel and finance. Sunday school and Christian Endeavor conventions have only to call for service in order to get it. In every possible way the Board of Christian Education seeks to aid our churches through Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor societies to do their educational work.

If this work is to be continued effectively, it is very necessary that Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor societies make an offering for the support of the Board. We have some funds which have come from Sunday school and Christian Endeavor conventions this summer, but we do not have sufficient funds to carry on the work through the coming year the way we believe that it needs to be done.

Will you please see that this matter is presented to your Sunday school and Christian Endeavor society? We are suggesting that the offering be made on Rally Day, the first Sunday in October. If it is more convenient for your school or society to make it at some other time, follow your own wisdom. We are not hard to please, but we do want you to cooperate with us this year by sending a liberal offering for the support of the Board of Christian Education.

REPORTS OF YOUTH FORUMS.

It has been the privilege of this writer to share in forums on "Christian Youth Building a New World" at Defiance College Summer School, Eastern Virginia Youth Fellowship, and Elon College Summer School. Some very fine things were said in these discussion groups which ought to be shared with those who were unable to attend. For this reason you will find on this page during the next few weeks copies of some of the reports and speeches at these forums. I hope you will like them as well as I did when listening to the discussions. You may not always agree with the things that are said, but you may be assured that these are the opinions of some of the young people of our churches. The reports were usually unanimous, though the speeches, of course, were personal opinions.

Perhaps the most sure sign that the world has a new day dawning is that young people are beginning to think of how they can make the world Christian. If a large group of young people will seriously give themselves to the task of making the world Christian, some of us will live to see a new day, indeed—a day for which many have longed but few have seen other than as a dream.

THE NEW PERSON.

- I. The demand for a new person.
  1. We believe in the new deal for our day which requires a new type of leadership. The old order has failed.
  2. It would not be desirable for the new leader for the new deal to come from the Capitalist group. We need a type of leadership today in every phase of life whose first interest is in the welfare of the whole group. This type must think of God first, others second and self third. The leader would in that way be true to his better self.
- II. Characteristics of the new individual.
  1. Religious standing.
    - (a). The new person will recognize the place of the church in the new world, and the individual's place in the church.
    - (b). He will develop a true sense of loyalty, service and support.
    - (c). He will believe in the sanctity of the Christian Sabbath; he will condemn the unnecessary commercialization of the Sabbath Day.

For the new person in the church, community, and world, there will be ample time for social opportunities that will not need to interfere with the Sabbath.

  - (d). Religious tolerance is desirable.

We stand for the breaking down of all denominational barriers. "That they might be one, even as He is one."
2. Social standing.
  - (a). The pleasures of the new person will naturally be those that will not be objectionable, because he will have put first things first, and will be guided by a Christian conscience.

- (b). Social justice—we shall be just to the people of all nations. There shall be an elimination of race hatred and prejudice.
- (c). The liquor traffic will be condemned by the new person.
- (d). He will recognize the value of clean and wholesome movies and pledge himself not to support such pictures as would undermine the character of youth.

3. Economic standing.

The new person will not tolerate the modern abuses of the profit system, but will seek a more equitable distribution of wealth. The right of employment to every man shall be accorded, and to share equitably in the profits of his labors. We have passed too far from the old order ever to return again.

III. How to obtain the new person.

1. It shall be done by the slow but sure method of education—the chief emphasis to be laid on the education of youth. The adults of today must set a more worthy example for those who are to come after them.
2. Legislation must be in the interest of society and not of the special few.
3. Politics shall have the purifying power as set forth in the teachings of the Man of Galilee.

Adopted by Elon forum.

WHAT ARE THE QUALITIES OF A TRUE GENTLEMAN OR LADY?

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR AUG. 26, 1934.
Col. 3:12-17.

Daily readings:

- Mon., Aug. 20.—Self-control. Num. 12:1-13.
Tues., Aug. 21.—Soft speech. Jas. 1:26.
Wed., Aug. 22.—Gentleness. Jas. 3:17.
Thurs., Aug. 23.—Courtesy. I Peter 3:8.
Fri., Aug. 24.—Fair play. Matt. 7:12.
Sat., Aug. 25.—Compassion. Matt. 14:13, 14.
Sun., Aug. 26.—Ladies and Gentlemen. Col. 3:12-17.

Program.

Instrumental Prelude: "Minuet"—Beethoven.
Hymn: "Hark, Hark, My Soul."
Prayer.

Hymn: "Jesus, the Very Thought of Thee."
Scripture: Col. 3:16-17.

Speaker: "Ladies and Gentlemen." "The King's Daughter is all Glorious Within." (C. E. Quarterly, page 48.)

Hymn: "I Need Thee Every Hour."

The group may discuss first some of the pictures of "ladies" and "gentlemen" which come to us from history and literature. For example, there is the "lady" of English society, and the "gentleman" of the southern plantation or of early New England times. What is your opinion of them? How do they impress you? Do they represent the kind of people we honor and want to recommend to the present generation of Americans?

How have our ideas of what the words "lady" and "gentleman" stand for changed today? There is some question as to whether young people today use the words very much or care for them as representing standards of conduct. Do you use them much? A New York minister has said that many young men, especially college students, do not want to be talked to about goodness or morality or a code of honor. But, he insisted, they all want to be regarded as gentlemen. The word "gentleman" to them has to stand for what is best in manners and morals. Do you think this is true? (Continued on page 11.)

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARCADALE.

AMOS DENOUNCES SELF-INDULGENCE. (TEMPERANCE LESSON.)

LESSON VIII—AUGUST 19, 1934.

GOLDEN TEXT: Seek good, and not evil, that ye may live.—Amos 5:14.

LESSON TEXT: Amos 6:1-7, 11-14.

As was stated in the Notes last week, there is a timeliness in the message of Amos, for there is much in it that fits the times in which we live. If one should make allowance for the characteristic Oriental way of expressing things, and if one had never heard of Amos, he might think that today's lesson was written by some modern preacher.

At Ease in Zion.

Woe unto them that are at ease in Zion! Amos was distressed at the lack of compassion of the people of his day, and at the false sense of security that characterized them. In this double sense he condemns our modern temper. For instance think of how the movies have been pouring a stream of filth into our social life during the past few years, and of how we were "at ease" in spite of it. It has only been until recently that anything has been done about it, and one wonders how permanent will be the reaction against indecent movies. Or think of how much "at ease" the better class of American people were during the period when "the wets" were undermining the Eighteenth Amendment. Or think of how much "at ease" the average member of the church is in regard to the unsaved people in the community or even in his own social group, sometimes even in his own family. Or think of how much "at ease" the members of the church are in the face of the unevangelized areas of the world, how little concerned they are whether missions go on or not. Indeed one must ask himself some disturbing questions at this point. And one feels that after all, this concern comes very near to the heart of the real religion. Just how much real religion do we have if we are at ease in the light of these conditions, and many others which might be listed.

Trusting in the Mountain of Samaria.

As a means of making themselves feel a little better, the Israelites would look at "the mountain of Samaria," that is they would look at their fortifications and then feel just a little more secure in their position. Why worry? They had armies and fortifications. Let their enemies do their worst. They thought they had made their defenses so strong that no nation would dare to attack them. How modern it all sounds. Something like this was said during the last Congress when vast sums were appropriated for a "bigger navy," for heavier armaments, for more aircraft, for the machinery of war. "Let us have the biggest navy and the biggest army in the world and we will be all right" say the jingoists and the militarists. But alas it does not work out that way. No nation ever becomes so strong that there is not another nation that will dare to attack her. Indeed history would seem to establish the fact that armaments and preparations for war stimulate war. The strength of a nation, and the security of a nation do not lie in material things.

Putting Off the Evil Day.

The Israelites were putting far away the day of evil. They felt that even if judgment did come, it would not come any time soon. They either denied it altogether, or put it far away. It is a human weakness. We all do it. We think that by some hook or crook, we shall dodge the consequences of our wrong-doing. It is as true in regard to paying our debts, as in paying for our sins. As Ecclesiastes says, "Because sentence against an evil work is not executed speedily, therefore the heart of the sons of men is fully set to do evil. (8-11.) Be not deceived; God is not mocked; whatsoever a man sows, that shall he also reap. Be sure your sins will find you out. There is always a day of accounting. The evil day may be postponed; it cannot be escaped.

Beds of Ivory.

It was a time of luxurious, even voluptuous living. Great wealth had weakened self-discipline and had stimulated self-indulgence. At one end of the social scale there were the poor, slaves in a very real sense to these higher-ups. Dazzling display, pressing poverty.

There is, of course, a tremendous amount of simple living in America today, but much of it is born of necessity. As a rule we Americans love ease and comfort and luxury. "Curb service" is an interesting sidelight on America's love of ease and comfort. There is too much style and too much prodigal living in America even yet. There is a great need for simplicity of dress and frugality in eating. Too many people try to keep up with the Joneses. It is a rather interesting fact that not wealth and ease, but poverty and hard work, have produced the great men of the world.

They Drink Wine in Bowls.

One usually drinks wine from a glass or a cup. These folks were drinking it from bowls. Running true to form away back there. It usually works that way. There are evidences that it is beginning to work that way here and now in America. There are rather disquieting items in regard to the increase in arrests for drunkenness, and in the increase of accidents caused by drunken drivers, in the papers here of late. There are some ugly rumors about the practices and the ethics of the liquor folks. There are some disturbing statistics about the increasing amount of business that the state liquor stores are doing. Indeed some of us are wondering just where we are coming out. Somehow or other the rosy dreams of the wets as to temperance, and the intriguing promises as to the benefits of repeal, are not working out just right. Perhaps it is too soon to tell. But as one knows the history of the business one has misgivings none-the-less.

A Nation—Another Nation.

Surely the Lord did not mean that. Surely he did not mean that any nation would afflict His chosen people. To the average Israelite that would be unthinkable. But it was true. Let history teach America to give heed unto herself.

YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

(Continued from page 10.)

Let the group spend as much time as possible in suggesting the qualities for which the two words stand. Do you agree that both the boys and girls need to develop a gentleness of life? How would you describe it, or illustrate it? This quality is closely allied to courtesy. Courtesy is really supposed to be an outward expression of thoughtfulness. Jesus, in all his teachings, emphasized the fact that what goes on in one's mind is of first importance because it determines what we do. A gentleman—at home, on the street, at a party,—is genuinely thoughtful of other people.

A gentleman is not a "put on", as many of the "born gentlemen" of other days were. He is "solid gold," and he is thoroughly sincere. In fact, we might define a gentleman in terms of his absolute loyalty, which shows itself not only in doing things which common courage requires but which also manifest itself in many unexpected acts of thoughtfulness and kindness.

E. R.

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.

Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.

These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. It combines with the Concordance, Subject-Index, Scripture Proper Names, etc. The 12 Maps have been carefully revised and are beautifully colored. In making orders, give the number and price.

135—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold. $3.00

India Paper Edition, Only 16-16 of an inch thick.

133X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold, $4.00

SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS' BIBLE.

Especially made up for gift or reward Bibles for Sunday School scholars, containing a special series of very practical and useful helps and Bible Questions and Answers, etc. Printed on fine white Bible paper; ruby type; pocket size, 3 3/4 x 5 3/4 inches, and 1 inch thick, with 31 full-page illustrations in sepia. All bindings are black. Ruby Type, Size 3 3/4 x 5 3/4 Inches, and 1 Inch Thick.

65—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold; 6 colored maps .....$2.50

AUTHORIZED VERSION.

RED LETTER TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Brevier Type (8 vo.), Self-Pronouncing, Size 5 3/8 x 8 3/4 Inches and 1 3/8 Inches Thick.

Containing the Bible, with full references. The words of Christ in the New Testament are printed in red; other parts of the book are printed in black. With Concise Bible Dictionary, combined Concordance, and 12 indexed maps.

7852—Genuine Leather, Lavant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold .....$4.75

RED-LETTER EDITION.

With All the Words of Christ in the New Testament Printed in Red.

1282—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit round corners, red under gold edges, register and headbands; title stamped on side and back in pure gold .....$3.25

60—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, Sunday School Scholars' Bible, stamped in pure gold on cover, no illustrations; special book for Sunday Schools .....95c

Any of the above Bibles sent postpaid. Address THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street Richmond, Virginia

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy

MONDAY.

"THE MELODY OF LIFE."

"Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord, Jesus Christ, which according to His abundant mercy hath begotten us again into a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead.

To an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you."

Everything is passing away, but, as the song says, "The melody lingers on."

If life's dreams can be dreams of pleasure, if life's deeds can be deeds of caring, and if life's days can be days of achievement, life itself will be a melody which passing time cannot wipe away.

What are you doing to make life this way? Maybe the most of your life is pleasant and good; if so, the question would be better asked, what are you doing to export the unpleasant things?

Prayer—O Lord, forgive us of our sins, inspire us with Thy spirit, and lead us to hearken to Thy word that life may be rich in sowing and blessed in Thy reaping. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"SHINING THROUGH."

"Rejoice in hope; patient in tribulation, continuing steadfast in prayer."—Rom. 12:2.

"Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good."

"Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life."—Rev. 2:10.

There is a song we love to sing called "Painting the Clouds With Sunshine." It is one of the finest pieces of optimism we know. A soul midst cloudiness and darkness, submerged in sorrow and despair, calls it only a cloud. He believes the cloud will pass and the sun will shine at last, so he smiles, paints the clouds with the sunshine of hope, keeps his head up, keeps right, and at last everything comes out right. That is the gospel of Jesus for us all.

Prayer—O Lord, our Father, in the name of Jesus, Thy son, our saviour, we pray for diligence in the life we live and in the work Thou hast given us to do, looking for the appearing of Thy glory now and evermore.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"THE OPEN SEA."

"They shall behold the land that is very far off."—Isa. 33:17.

The revised version says, "a land that reaches afar," giving the idea of distances like an open sea, as compared with the narrow streets of the city, which were, in those days, walled in.

Isaiah is speaking of the hope of the people of the city who were shut in while being besieged by enemies and after the siege is over and peace reigns, they may go in and out at will and find happiness in the open country.

He says that the spiritual land—the hope of the soul—is like that. It is not a land remote in the heavens like a fixed star. It is round about us. We are in it. It is everyday life, and it is a land of distances.

The writer is out in the ocean looking far out into the distances where the restless sea meets the sky in the horizon. The far outlook is a symbol of the far and wide outlook of spiritual things. All that is necessary to enjoy this realism is to be freed from the enemies of life. Sin attacks one's every spiritual tower, shuts in the soul and shuts out spiritual vision, and gradually holds life and soul in its bondage. Then things that are eternal are in eclipse by the shadow of ourselves.

Take Jesus in; make Him the Captain of thy soul; renounce the world, the flesh and the devil and He delivers from bondage and makes you heavenly-minded.

Prayer—Our Father, we wish to see beyond the narrow confines of life and the things that hem us in. We would see beyond our own natures, weaknesses and circumstances. We would live in the big things. We pray Thee to suffer no sins or follies to enclose us and confine us in a prison of our own making. O Spirit of Christ set us free from the laws of sin and death, and give us the divine faculty to see through to God, when we see the eternal. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"LONG SIGHT."

"We beheld His glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father."—Jno. 1:14.

Long sight is what the most of us lack and yet it is what the most of us need. It is essential to the healthiness of our spirits to see things before they are at our doors. We need to kill temptation while it is young—before it becomes a monster, or be prepared for it before it reaches you. We need a sanctified imagination, to see oncoming events and their significance that we may rise to them. We need to see what sort of inheritance our children will get from us—seeing beyond what they are to what they ought to be.

There is inspiration in prospects, for they lead us to something better. Looking ahead reacts upon the immediate and we pattern our lives accordingly. The artist gazed upon the sunset's glory and paints what he sees (the best he can) on canvas. "The far away always lends its influence to the near," said the late Dr. Jowett, "and the glory of the goal shines upon the beginnings."

Prayer—Our Father, far and near, we would see Jesus the Author and Finisher of our faith. Shine Thou through Him into our souls, and find in us the reflection of His image and His glory. In His name we ask it.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"NOT FAR WRONG."

"And a highway shall be there, and a way, and it shall be called 'A Way of Holiness'; the unclean shall not pass over it; but it shall be for those: the wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein."—Isa. 35:8.

Some of us face, every day, a lot of opposition to God, Jesus Christ and the church. Consider all the manifestations of the spirit; all the wonders of love; all the self-evident harmonies of His works; whatever errors there may be found in the mechanical set-up, we are impelled to believe that the prophets, the psalmists and the seers knew what they spoke and spoke what they beheld.

To say the least of it, it is a pardonable fault to be godly and a harmless error to go astray believing and trying to live the Christian life. One cannot be dangerously out of the way loving, living, and letting live. The thought itself is blessed.

Prayer—Our Father, it is a common room we live in, and a day that is but an every day, in which we meet with Thee. The sun rises, we go hither and thither, eat our meals, evening falls and we turn on the lights. We are in the midst of a common human life. But Thou, Lord, canst glorify every incident with a consciousness of Thyself. Do Thou grant this and help us, Lord, to make Christ the center of all our experiences. O Jesus, bend Thou over our circle and fill us with the bread of Thy body, the wine of Thy blood and the love of Thy soul. We ask it in the name of Christ.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"THE LORD'S PREPARATIONS."

"God prepared a sultry east wind; and the sun beat upon the head of Jonah that he fainted and requested for himself that he might die."—Jonah 4:1-11.

God's preparations for His people are manifold. Now we hear our Lord telling His disciples that He is going ahead to prepare a place for them, a place of joy where He will dwell with them forever. And now we read of God's preparing a deadly sirocco for Jonah, so hot that the prophet was ready to die. Before that, the Lord had prepared a great fish to swallow him up and carry him safely to land.

God's people live amid God's preparations. They dwell in the midst of prepared fortunes. They look forward hopefully to prepared delights. Ours is a preparing God, a predestinating God.

Prayer—Choose Thou our changes, O All-wise! Guide Thou our course, Thou who seest the end from the beginning.

AMOS R. WELLS.

SUNDAY.

"THE PROSPEROUS HATED."

"Esau hated Jacob because of the blessing wherewith his father blessed him."—Gen. 27:41-45.

Rear Admiral Sims, speaking before the Naval Academy Graduates Association, declared that not only do all countries hate and distrust all other countries, but that our own nation is the most hated of all because of its prosperity.

If that is so—and there is more than a glimmer of truth in the remark—it reflects a most lamentable and perilous condition of the world. To realize its truth, however, we need not look beyond our own land, or indeed, beyond our own community. Now and then a rich man is greatly beloved, but he is much more likely to be bitterly hated.

How hard it is for a rich man to enter the kingdom of Heaven which is the kingdom of love! The way thither is the path of self-sacrifice. The man or nation that used wealth with pure unselfishness would be loved; but how hard it is to do that! How much bitterness springs up in the path of most philanthropies.

Prayer—Thou who didst go about doing good, teach us and our nation to do the same. And if we are hated of men for Thy name's sake, we shall have Thee for our blessed Comrade.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

There is nothing so small but we honor God by asking his guidance of it, or insult him by taking it into our own hands.—John Ruskin.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

STRENGTH OF SOUL FOR SOCIAL ACTION.

A Sermon Preached in First Church, Oberlin. By ARTHUR H. BRADFORD.

"Neither went I up to Jerusalem to them which were apostles before me; but I went into Arabia."—Galatians 1:17.

Many of us would probably have gone to Jerusalem instead. Paul might have been expected to go there too. He was a man of action. Jerusalem was a center of activity. He was an agitator. If one wanted to start a revolution or to join one already started Jerusalem would seem to be the place to go. Arabia meant quietude, meditation, brooding over his own experience and the experiences of his own people and humanity. It meant retirement and reflection. It meant rethinking everything in the light of the newly discovered truth. This man of action chose to go into Arabia. He stayed there a long time—long enough for a course in a theological seminary in these days. He tells us nothing of what he did there. If he developed a special technique of spiritual exercise he apparently never mentioned it. He came out of Arabia, however, with strength of soul equal to his task. It was then that he went to Antioch to withstand Peter face to face because he believed Peter was blocking the progress of the Christian Faith. That was a brave and timely act. Not what we would call social action, to be sure; yet its social consequences have been tremendous. To that act we owe, in large part, the spread of Christianity beyond its first narrow racial boundaries. It was the act of a man who had the power of mind and heart and spirit to make his action effective.

Many of us, I say, would probably have gone to Jerusalem rather than Africa. The common mood is tense with desire for action. If we have found Truth, as Paul found Truth on the Road to Damascus, our impulse is to head straight for—if not Jerusalem and Antioch—Washington or New York or Oberlin. This is our strength and also our weakness. For while it is good to go to Jerusalem and Antioch, bent on action, it is foolish to act anywhere without sufficient strength of soul to make the action both wise and powerful.

Some ten years ago a minister in the Church of England wrote a little book entitled. The Impatience of a Parson. Not a few of us blessed Rev. H. R. L. Shepard for saying in that book the things which we were feeling. We rejoiced in his avowal of an impatience which we shared with enthusiasm. Here are some splendid sentences from that little book:

"Christianity badly needs rash men who will not flinch from the crispness of religion, nor fear the result of stirring up wasps' nests. There are times in history when decisive and courageous action is the only safe course to pursue; when it is high time that what is said to be desirable should be done, and done without delay.—Why need we be patient if we believe that the Holy Spirit presses on the hearts of men?"

The Englishman who wrote these words is impatient still, and still says so. He boldly criticizes leaders, especially Church leaders who talk and argue and delay. "The leaders in Christendom," he wrote the other day, "have a positive genius for doing nothing that is anything and yet sounding as if they had done quite a lot." Recently a friend took him to task by saying: "It is easy enough to criticize Church leaders for their timidity and lack of reforming zeal. We are all brave in opposition, but what would you actually do were the Church sufficiently wise or foolish to call you in as Dictator?"

What an interesting challenge! Perhaps it ought to be made to all of us who are so impatient to see things done. If we want the President or the Pope or our own parson to show more reforming zeal, it is fair to ask us—What would you actually do if you were President or Pope or parson?

This English parson gladly met the challenge. He presented a list of things he would do within the Church and, if possible, by means of it, which must have made all lovers of the status quo give thanks that he was not actually the Dictator of their destinies.

My concern for the moment, however, is not so much with his program as with these two sentences which he wrote about it: "Before setting out my program of action I must ask readers to remember that it is not just the result of peevish impatience. It springs from many long years spent in thought and experience, and days innumerable passed in the wilderness, where often enough great issues are simplified."

What a blessing it would be if every outspoken advocate of social action in our day could honestly make such statements as these about himself and his program! We are in desperate need of radical reforms in Church and State and, indeed, in most, if not all, of our institutions and customs. The demand for social action to put an end to ancient injustices and equally ancient inefficiencies is more than justified. Impatience is the virtue needed; but it must have its roots sufficiently deep in the soil of thought and experience.

Phillips Brooks, in his Lectures on Preaching, tells how, after being trained in a college "where men studied hard and said nothing about faith," he went to a seminary where he found young men whose "souls seemed exalted and their natures were on fire," as they prayed and exhorted one another. (Doubtless these young men today would be equally engrossed in things more active than prayer and exhortation.) But the next day, when he met some of these same men in a recitation, they showed "that they had not got hold of the first principles of hard, faithful, conscientious study!" "The boiler," he said, "had no connection with the engine. The devotion did not touch the work which then and there was the work, and the only work for them to do." Phillips Brooks, remembering these things from his own seminary days, said to the young men to whom he was giving his lecture: "Oh, my fellow-students, the special study of theology and all that appertains to it, that is what the preacher must be doing always; but he never can do it afterwards as he can in the blessed days in Arabia, after Christ has called him, and before the Apostles lay their hands upon him. In many respects an ignorant clergy, however pious it may be (and, let us add, however much given to agitation and reform,) is worse than none at all. The more the empty head glows and burns, the more hollow and thin and dry it grows."

Our times call for action, drastic social action—for evolution so swift that it may well be called revolution; therefore the need is great for men and women, who, like the "Impatient Parson," have spent "long years in thought and experience, and days innumerable in the wilderness, where often enough great issues are simplified."

Mr. Walter Lippmann has recently reminded us that the kind of "planning" needed in our country just now is, as President Roosevelt himself has said, not so much an "official plan" for social action, as "the old-fashioned sense of foresight and orderly procedure in dealing with various problems." And Mr. Lippmann adds this significant comment: "The best men in every Administration are overworked. They have so much to do that they have no time to think and advise: that is to say, to 'plan.'"

This is lamentably the case with many of our leaders—not only in nation, state, and city, but especially in our churches. They have so much to do that little or no time is left for thought and study, for reflection, brooding, prayer. It might (Continued on page 14.)

COMMUNION WARE.

Individual Service.

Made in best Silver Plate or Aluminum. Prices low; first-class workmanship and finish.

ALUMINUM.

Aluminum is light in weight, durable, and does not tarnish.

Style No. 50-A.

- Tray No. 2—Interlocking, with 40 plain glasses $7.00
Tray No. 6—Interlocking, with 35 plain glasses 6.75
Tray No. 10—Interlocking, with 30 plain glasses 6.50
Base No. 50-A—Fits Trays 2, 6, or 10..... 2.25
Cover No. 50-A—Fits Trays 2, 6, or 10..... 2.25
Bread Plate No. 1—Narrow rim..... 1.60

SILVER-PLATED.

The Silver-plated Ware is of the very highest grade and best finish; heavily plated on nickel base.

- Tray No. 85—Interlocking only, with 36 glasses $22.00
Base No. 1—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 85.. 11.00
Cover No. 5—Silver-plated; fits Tray No. 85.. 16.00

(For Silver Bread Plates, see under No. 90.)

- Tray No. 90—Interlocking, with 36 plain glasses (this style has broad rim, which is sometimes preferred, due to increased ease of handling) $22.00
Base No. 2—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 90.. 16.00
Cover No. 4—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 90. 14.00

- Bread Plate No. 3—Narrow Rim..... $ 9.00
Bread Plate No. 4—Broad Rim..... 9.00
Filler—Silver Lined..... 6.00

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street

Richmond, Virginia

Christian Orphanage

Dear friends:

We are very happy to reach and pass the eighth rung in our financial ladder for the year. It pushes us up a little nearer our goal of twenty thousand dollars. That leaves us twelve thousand dollars to raise by January first. We want to appeal to every Sunday school and every individual to come to our rescue in this undertaking and help us reach our goal. We reached it last year—help us reach it this year.

We have an appeal on our desk from a mother left with six little children, one a little babe in her arms. She and her beloved husband were faithful members of the Christian church in her community. Her husband died sometime ago. She was left with a small farm covered with a mortgage that will be hard for her to meet if at all. Then, to add to her affliction, she lost her horse and cow. A mother with six little children under such circumstances is to be pitied. She appeals to the Christian church through its orphanage to come to her rescue. We have room if we had the funds. Will you make your offerings a little larger that we may come to her rescue?

The Master said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, Ye have done it unto me."

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

REPORT FOR AUGUST 16, 1934.

Brought forward .....$7,925.53

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

North Carolina and Virginia Conference:
Apple's Chapel .....	$ 7.16
Mt. Bethel .....	2.87
Happy Home .....	3.60
Third Ave., Danville .....	6.17
Durham .....	13.76
	<hr/>
	33.56

Eastern North Carolina Conference:

Catawba Springs .....	7.05
Oak Level .....	1.00
Good Hope .....	1.00
Plymouth .....	2.75
Cary .....	2.42
	<hr/>
	14.22

Western North Carolina Conference:

Raunseur .....	2.60
High Point .....	3.00
Hanks Chapel .....	2.35
	<hr/>
	7.95

Eastern Virginia Conference:

Spring Hill .....	1.08
Barretts .....	.51
Liberty Spring S. S. and Classes....	7.00
Suffolk .....	25.00
Rosemont .....	13.65
Bethlehem .....	2.00
	<hr/>
	49.24

Valley Va. Central Conference:

Woods Chapel .....	1.55
Linville .....	4.69
Dry Run .....	3.15
Timber Ridge .....	1.76
	<hr/>
	11.15

$ 116.12

Special Offerings.

Mrs. Dalton, support of children....	12.50
W. P. Perry, support of Billy Perry	10.00
Sarah and Fannie Ellison, Asheboro,
N. C. ....	2.00

Circular Congregational S. S. Charleston, S. C. ....	5.00
	<hr/>
	29.50
Total for the week .....	145.62
Grand total .....	$8,071.15

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

(Continued from page 13.)

be a good thing to send our overworked secretaries and preachers—and some who are not overworked at all—away to some well-chosen "Arabia" for a while. Certainly the future leaders of church and nation, who are now boys and girls in school and college, ought to use the golden present for study in the deepest and truest sense. The world may need them, even now, as social agitators. But if it does, it needs to have them equipped with disciplined minds and wills.

A poetess of Vermont, Mrs. Julia C. R. Door, wrote some lines a generation ago that sound a note needed today:

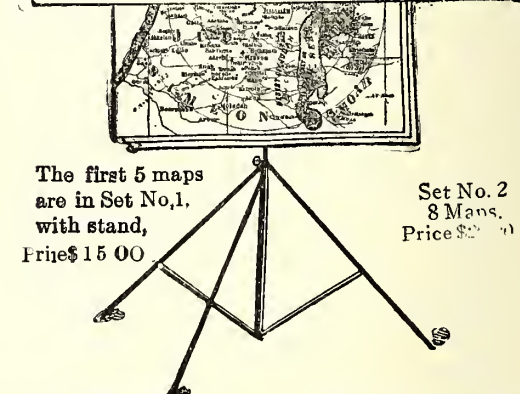

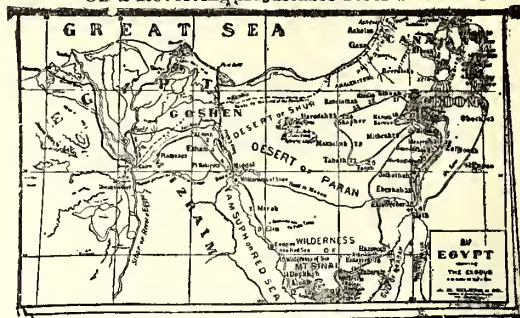

O strong young runner, in the face of life
Rush not too madly toward the shining goal!
Command thou first the forces of thy soul,
Then gird thy loins for the utmost strife.

Let it never be forgotten that while "Arabia," in the sense in which we are using that word here, is a great place in which to sojourn for a while, no follower of Jesus Christ has any business to stay there permanently. Doubtless you remember the Dervish, described by Robert Browning, who, upon seeing some helpless birdlings fed by an eagle, believed this was a sign from heaven for him. He decided forthwith to spend his days in prayer and meditation, trusting in Providence to meet his needs. So he rejoiced in his soul's salva-

(Concluded on page 15.)

Eilers Sunday School Maps

On a Revolving Adjustable Steel Stand

The first 5 maps are in Set No. 1, with stand, Price $15 00

Set No. 2 8 Maps. Price $20 00

Fine large Maps, in 6 Colors 36x57, on linen finished Cloth. Mounted on a folding steel stand, which can be regulated, so that Maps may be seen to the best advantage. This set contains data for thorough Bible Study. Its large print and Cheerful Colors makes this set very instructive and attractive. Contains the five thoroughly up to date Maps necessary to the study of Bible History.

New Testament Palestine, — Old Testament Palestine, — Roman empire and Bible Lands, showing Pauls Travels by Colored lines. — Lands of the Old Testament, from the Great Sea, to the Persian Gulf.—The Exodus, Egypt, showing by Colored lines the wanderings of the Israelites

THE CHRISTIAN SUN
1536 East Broad Street Richmond, Virginia

HOLMAN SUPERIOR TEACHERS' BIBLES

Authorized Version—Self-Pronouncing The Best Editions of the World's Best Book

For Adults, Teachers, Preachers, Students, and All Who Would Study the Word of God Intelligently

BOLD BLACK TYPE—COMPACT SIZE 4½x6¾ INCHES—WILL FIT THE COAT POCKET

Part page specimen of Holman Boldblack Type Bible

ST. MATTHEW, 5. Christ's sermon on the mount.

13 And leaving Náz'a-réth, he came and dwelt in Cá-pér'na-úm, which is upon the sea coast, in the borders of Záb'u-lon and Néph'tha-lim:	A. D. 31. 934 CHAPTER 5.
14 That it might be fulfilled	3 Who are blessed. 13 The disciples called the salt of the earth, and light of the world; Christ urged on them a good example, etc.
	AND seeing the multitudes; he went up into a moun-

THIS NEW HOLMAN TEACHERS' BIBLE, Pronouncing Text, Bold Black Type is a PRONOUNCED SUCCESS. The latest Bible with NEW HELPS that are quite comprehensive and consist of an Illustrated Bible Dictionary, Concordance and additional aids all under ONE ALPHABETICAL INDEX. Also Fine Maps on Coated Paper, and a specially prepared BIBLE READING COURSE, intended to stimulate and maintain interest in the Bible. Imported Bible paper is used to improve opacity and keep down bulk. By this means you get the benefit of full Biblical information without the physical discomfort of handling a heavy volume.

STYLES AND PRICES—BIBLE PAPER EDITION

4612. French Morocco Leather, divinity circuit, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges....	$4.00
4630. Same as 4612, with extra leather lined covers.....	4.75

THIN INDIA PAPER EDITION

With Helps as described above. Size 4½x6¾ inches. One inch in thickness

630X. Egyptian Morocco, divinity circuit, leather linings, red under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker.....	7.00
633X. Algerian Morocco, divinity circuit, leather lining to edge, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, extra quality binding.....	8.00

---

EXTRA LARGE PRINT TEACHERS' BIBLES

Large 8 Vo. Size—8x5½ inches—1600 Pages, including 400 pages of Bible Study Helps

Part Page Specimen of Print

ST. MATTHEW, 5. Christ's sermon on the mount.

15 The land of Záb'u-lon, and the land of Néph'tha-lim, by the way of the sea, beyond Jór'dan, Gál'i-lee of the Gën'tiles;	A. D. 31. 2 And he opened his mouth, and taught them, saying,
	3 Blessed are the poor in spirit: for their's is the kingdom of heaven.

CONTAINING COMPLETE HELPS TO BIBLE STUDY, INCLUDING ALL OF THE FOLLOWING FEATURES

A New Practical Course in Bible Reading, A Treasury of Biblical Information. The most carefully compiled, thorough and attractive form in which valuable Biblical information has ever been prepared. Illustrated Self-Pronouncing Bible Dictionary Containing 150 illustrations, concise definitions and textual references on nearly 50,000 subjects. A Practical Comparative Concordance, with nearly 50,000 references. Four Thousand Questions and Answers on the Old and New Testaments. A valuable Help to all Bible Readers.

STYLES AND PRICES

4712. Divinity Circuit (overlapping covers), French Seal Leather, red under gold edges, silk head bands, and silk marker..	$5.00
812RL. Red Letter Teachers' Bible. The Words of Christ in the New Testament, Old Testament Passages alluded to by Christ, various prophecies relating to Christ in the Old Testament, etc., all PRINTED IN RED. Binding same as described above on 4712 and same large Self-Pronouncing type.....	6.00
733X. Holman India Paper, Genuine Morocco, leather lined, silk sewed, divinity circuit, round corners carmine under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker, same type and helps as above .....	10.65

All styles sent Postpaid at above prices—Thumb Index 50 cents extra

A Story for the Children

JUDY'S CARE.

A TRUE STORY OF THE WEST.

By L. M. Thurston.

Molly May opened her eyes wide. Before her stood a little Indian girl, just about as tall as she herself was and just about as plump. But Molly May had not heard a sound in the woods, she had been busy looking at Judy doll. "Grandmother sent you all the way from Boston, you'll take care of Molly May," she had crooned, though her heart was thumping a little. She had slipped out of the stockade gate behind the women going to the river for water, then she had trotted off along the path leading into the woods. Molly May had always had someone with her when she went through the trees, but today everyone was running around inside the stockade and talking about Indians. "But aren't the Indians our friends?" Molly May had asked and Daddy had groaned, "if they only were!"

Molly May was glad of the quiet woods. "Judy will take care of me," she kept repeating and when she got tired she sat down on a big root. She was straightening the ribbon in Judy's yellow hair when she looked up straight into the little Indian's eyes. Black they were, shiny black and Judy's were sky blue. The little Indian reached out a finger and touched them. Molly May did not know what she said, but she did know what the little Indian's begging arms meant. She wanted to hold Judy doll. She wanted Judy.

"No, no," Molly May hugged Judy tighter. She shook her head, shook it again. The little Indian girl turned away. She ran. She stumbled. She fell. Molly May started running too, but she ran for the Indian girl. Her face buried in the pine needles the little girl would not get up. Molly May tugged, she laid Judy down on the pine needles beside the little Indian and tugged harder. The little Indian girl twisted her head, she saw the doll beside her. Eyes ablaze with joy she looked up at Molly May. She seized Judy doll and sprang away.

Suddenly Indian men seemed to spring up all between the trees ahead of Molly May, she heard steps behind her too, she felt Daddy's hand on her head. "Still, keep still," she heard him whisper. Molly May stood all frozen inside. But the little Indian girl had run up to the Indian men and was holding up the doll to the fiercest looking one of them all, the one with the biggest war bonnet upon his head and down around his shoulders. Molly May could not understand a word of the gay voice, but she did understand when the little Indian girl turned with a face bright with joy and held up Judy doll and hugged her. The Indian with whom the little girl talked, strode forward with upflung hand, with open palm. "Peace, friends," Molly May felt him quiver with a long breath and she heard the thump of guns slipped from the arms of the men behind Daddy.

"But Judy doll," she cried against Daddy's shoulder when he had picked her up after talking with the Indian and turned back for the stockade. "Judy was to take care of me, now she's gone."

"Care?" Daddy's laugh was short. "She saved you, she saved the fort. She took care of you all right."

"But she's gone. I didn't—didn't want to give her away."

"But the little Indian girl thought you did. And sometimes one has to give things up to make friends. Sometimes, too, making friends is the most worthwhile thing in the world."

—The Methodist-Protestant Recorder.

(Concluded from page 14.)

tion until hunger laid him low. Whereupon there came this word to him from God:

"Hast thou marked my deed?
Which part assigned by Providence dost judge
Was meant for man's example? Should he play
The helpless weakling, or the helpful strength
That captures prey and saves the perishing?
Sluggard, arise: work, eat, then feed who lack!

[And he] Waking [said], "I have arisen, work
I will,
Eat, and so following. Which lacks food the more.
Body or soul in me? I starve in soul:
So may mankind: and since men congregate
In towns, not woods,—to Ispahan forthwith!"

Even so may it be with us! If we have found the truth of Christ for ourselves and our world we must act accordingly—where the crowds gather! But when we act—may it be with strength of soul akin to that of him who knew what it was to be alone with the Eternal God in the wilderness, on the mountain tops, in the Garden of Gethsemane and, finally, on the Cross of Calvary!

We believe in Brotherhood. Therefore, we cannot help being impatient in the face of the unbrotherly conditions which confront us today. We ought to be impatient. We ought to demand that our leaders everywhere act to break down the barriers which block the advance of the brotherly spirit. The strength of our demand, however, will never be in accordance with the heat or the noise of our utterance. It will be in accordance with the genuine depth of our feeling and the clarity of our thought. For if the Eternal God of Truth is to speak through us he must find us fit instruments for the expression of his message and his will.

ELON COLLEGE

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

South Entrance to the Campus

ELON COLLEGE, founded by the Christian Church in 1889, has fully justified the faith and hope of its founders during its 42 years of operation. Its graduates from the four-year course leading to a bachelor's degree, number 980, now living, 122 of whom are in the Christian Ministry and full-time Christian service. The majority of these are members of our own denomination. In addition, 449 are in educational work and are an active influence in the lay leadership of the Christian Church.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION BUILDING, and the definite religious atmosphere of the College, provide the very best facilities available for training for religious leadership, and offer the Church its finest opportunity to train the young people of the denomination to assume active leadership both in the ministry and laity of the local churches.

Address—

C. M. CANNON, Registrar

Elon College, - - - North Carolina

Home Atmosphere—Reasonable Rates—Clean Athletics—Christian Spirit

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom, as represented by the Congregational Christian Church.

BOARD OF EDITORS.

J. O. ATKINSON, D. D..... Editor
E. C. GILLETTE, D. D..... Associate
I. W. JOHNSON, D. D.... Contributing
ELISHA A. KING, D. D... Contributing
J. T. KERNODLE.... Managing Editor

DEPARTMENTAL EDITORS.

H. S. HARDCASTLE... Sunday School
J. G. TRUITT, D. D..... Sermon
F. C. LESTER..... Young People
H. E. ROUNTREE..... Altar

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year .....$2.00
Six Months ..... 1.00

Trial Subscriptions: Five or more new subscriptions sent in at one time by pastor or president of any church organization, three months for 40c each.

Published Every Thursday at Richmond, Virginia, by the Central Publishing Company, Inc.

Entered as second-class matter at the Postoffice at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Change of Address: Be sure to give both old and new address when asking that your address be changed.

All news matter and items to be published in "The Sun" should be addressed to J. O. Atkinson, Editor, Elon College, N. C., and should reach him not later than Friday preceding date of publication. If more convenient, news from Congregational Churches may be sent to E. C. Gillette, Associate Editor, 117 W. Forsyth Street, Jacksonville, Fla. Emergency notices will be received at the Richmond Office up until Tuesday of week of publication.

All remittances for subscriptions, renewals, advertising, etc., books for review, and other matters of business should be addressed to J. T. Kernodle, Managing Editor, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond, Va.

Notices: Obituary and marriage notices, limited to 125 words, published free. All over 125 words, 1c a word, cash with notice. No notices should exceed 250 words.

Receipts: The change of label is your receipt for money paid. The label shows date of expiration, and change on label will appear the first or second issue of the month following renewal, provided it was received before the 25th. No other receipt will be sent unless requested. Please notify the Richmond Office if label is not changed as above.

OBITUARIES

WILLIAM E. WILLS.

Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom has seen fit to remove from our midst our brother and co-worker, William E. Wills, whose death occurred August 4, 1934.

Therefore be it Resolved,

First. That in his death, Isle of Wight Church has lost a constant and faithful member and the board of deacons a member whose death they will deplore.

Second. That while we believe our loss is his gain, we can but commend his family and loved ones to the All Wise and All Gracious heavenly Father who "doeth all things well."

Third. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, one sent to The Christian Sun for publication and one recorded upon the minutes of the church record.

M. TURPIN WHITLEY,
JOHN M. ROBERTS,
JOHN H. TURNER,
W. JACK DARDEN.

MRS. ELLA R. ROGERS.

Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom has seen fit to remove from our midst a most beloved member, Mrs. Ella Rogers, who departed this life March 17, 1934,

We, the members of the Ladie's Aid Society of Cypress Chapel Christian Church offer the following resolutions as a token of our esteem and appreciation of her beautiful life, now therefore be it

Resolved, first, That the home-going of our beloved co-worker has taken from our society and fellowship a most loyal, faithful and useful member, one whose life was a rich benediction to all who knew her, to her church and community, and for which we desire to express our gratitude.

Second: That we cherish with affectionate regard her loyal friendship, her wise counsel, and while our sorrow is great because of her passing, we sorrow not as those without hope, feeling that our loss is her eternal gain, and we bow in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well, looking for-

Wedding or Gift Bible

FOR THE HOME

Holman Self-Pronouncing Home Study Edition

A BEAUTIFUL PRESENTATION PAGE Marriage Certificate and Family Record makes this special edition a most desirable Bible for a wedding gift.

Full Bound size, 8 1/2 x 6 inches, nearly 1800 pages. Authorized Version with Marginal References.

Large Print—Easy to Read

The Helps are the latest and most practical published—prepared by the most reliable and well-known authorities, and consist of a TEACHERS' NEW READY REFERENCE HAND BOOK, which gives the salient and essential information needed in Bible study.

Illustrated Self-Pronouncing Bible Dictionary—Containing 150 illustrations.

Oriental Light on the Bible (Containing over 100 illustrations). A new kind of illuminating Bible help.

Treasury of Biblical Information. A New Series of Maps. A selection of the most used, with Special Maps, the results of the most recent explorations.

A New Practical Comparative Concordance, with nearly 50,000 references. Four Thousand Questions and Answers on the Bible.

ABSOLUTELY DURABLE BINDINGS that will not break in the back.

Specimen of the Print. Full size of the page is 5 1/2 x 8 inches.

Specimen of Type.

17 ¶ From that time Jē'sus began to preach, and to say, "Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at

A BEAUTIFUL PRESENTATION PAGE Marriage Certificate and Family Record makes this special edition a most desirable Bible for a wedding gift.

No. 4914. French Morocco, flexible limp, gold titles, round corners, red under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker. . . . $5.50 ward to that great day when we shall be united in Him.

Postage Paid

Third: That we deeply sympathize with her devoted husband in his sore bereavement, and commend him to the great Comforter who is ever able to sustain us in every sorrow.

Fourth: That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved husband, and a copy be placed on records of our society.

publication, and a copy be placed on records of our society.

Respectfully submitted,
MRS. C. W. ROUNTREE,
MRS. G. C. MANN,
MRS. R. M. JONES,
REV. R. E. BRITTLE.

All who have pleasure in God seek out His works.—Drury.

PIEDMONT COLLEGE

Located in

"The Blue Ridge Highlands"

An accredited college with an enviable reputation for superior classroom instruction, and wholesome student life.

Standard courses leading to the A. B. and B. S. degrees. Careful, scholarly instructors.

A refined Christian atmosphere. All of the cultural elements essential to a liberal education.

A minimum of expense. Tuition and board for the entire academic year only $273.50.

For information, write

GEORGE C. BELLINGRATH, Dean,
PIEDMONT COLLEGE,
DEMOREST, GEORGIA.

Southern Seminary Foundation

(Successor to Atlanta Theological Seminary.)

AFFILIATED WITH

Vanderbilt University

The Foundation and the other Foundations that are affiliated with Vanderbilt University School of Religion comprise the only Interdenominational Theological School in the South. Through this affiliation the students enjoy the rights and privileges of Vanderbilt University.

DEGREES.

Candidates for degrees are required to have completed their college courses.

The degree of Bachelor of Divinity is offered to qualified students who complete the required courses.

Vanderbilt University also offers the degrees of Master of Arts and Doctor of Philosophy, in accordance with the regulations established in its several departments.

MORE THAN A SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY.

Because of our affiliation with Vanderbilt, our relations with other nearby colleges where our students can take courses without tuition, and the cooperation of the American Red Cross and other social agencies in the city, we prepare students for many types of Christian service.

For information write

WILLIAM JAMES CAMPBELL, President,
330 BUTTRICK HALL, VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY,
NASHVILLE, TENN.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

Representing the Southeast Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches.

IN ESSENTIALS, UNITY.

IN NON-ESSENTIALS, LIBERTY.

IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY.

VOLUME LXXXVI.

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, AUGUST 23, 1934.

NUMBER 34.

.. THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY ..

Jobs for College Students in 1935.—

The FERA has announced that it plans to continue the program of assistance to college students unable to remain in school unless they receive financial assistances. The Government will spend $13,500,000 to help needy youth remain at college. Approximately 75,000 were aided during the past academic year. The present appropriation will provide for 100,000, or twelve per cent of the total enrollment of the colleges and universities. Students desiring help are asked to apply directly to the school they wish to attend.

Goodyear Rubber in Java.—

Java, an island of the Dutch East Indies, will soon become the site of a branch factory of the Goodyear Rubber Company. Construction is to commence immediately and the plant is to be ready for operation by May, 1935. The new plant is to have a daily capacity of 300 tires and 300 tubes. This plant will be near the island of Sumatra, which now supplies about 5% of Goodyear's total crude rubber, and which can easily be increased in the near future to 20%. Labor is plentiful and "cheap," and the plant will be worked with a relatively small amount of machinery. P. W. Litchfield, the president of the company says that "the market for Java-made tires will not be limited to the Dutch East Indies. If possible, shipments will be made to the British Indies, Holland, and perhaps Japan." This is one of the very few branch plants to be set up by American firms in the Orient in recent years.

Cotton In Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.—

Cotton-growers of our Southland will read with approval the following comment from a contemporary exchange: "The British have given of much time, sweat, and money in an effort to make the blistering sands of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan produce cotton in quantity. But in no year has the crop exceeded 10 per cent of early estimates of potential production. This has greatly disappointed English spinners who were hopeful of reducing their dependence on American cotton supplies. The Sudan government has done everything in its power to boost the industry, but problems of climate, cultivation, and irrigation stubbornly resist solution. And in the rain-grown districts, the primitive natives remain unswayed by British efforts to prod them to greater industry, and are content to grow enough cotton to pay their taxes, little more. Production in the entire Sudan has never topped 206,000 bales a year, a small factor in total world supply."

More Freak Telephone Troubles.—

Not long ago we gave a few of the freak telephone troubles that linesmen have to contend with. Here are two others that we believe worth relating: One runs into trouble when it is least expected. In looking for "trouble" on the line, a trouble shooter opened the connection box at the top of a pole on "Main Street" in a certain New York City. Out poured a swarm of bees, and in fighting them off he nearly fell to the pavement below. However, there is a sweet side to the adventure from his standpoint at least. He returned to the attack, gassed the bees with a chemical fire extinguisher, and carried home ten pounds of honey. The second story is this: A woman called the phone company and complained that her telephone bell would not ring. There was another peculiarity about the situation, when friends tried to get her on the phone, her dog in the back yard would set up a howl. Investigation proved that the dog had been chained to the lead in wires in the back yard. Every time one attempted to call the number, a short circuit prevented the phone from ringing and gave the dog a shock.

A Tennis Champion's Religion.—

A Methodist contemporary claims as "a loyal and active Methodist" Dorothy Round, the new international woman tennis champion, who defeated Helen Jacobs, American player, on the courts at Wimbledon, in the presence of the King and Queen of England and 16,000 spectators. Miss Round is 25 years of age, and has been playing international tennis since 1929. In the recent tournament, in which 26 nations participated, she defeated five opponents, including the Swiss and French champions, before meeting Helen Jacobs. Miss Round is described as a young woman of "serene impeturbability," but she is also evidently a young woman of firm character and convictions. The statement that she will not play on Sunday recalls an interesting story that was going the rounds some time ago. It is, we believe, true to facts, places and personalities, though we refrain from identifications. The son of a nationally known American minister was to play a tennis match on Sunday afternoon. The father, a liberal Sabbatarian, was about to go and witness the event when the son came to tell him that the game was off because the other boy's father would not let him play. The point of the story is that the other boy's father was the editor of Hot Stuff—only that isn't the actual name of the paper, a magazine prominent among the purveyors of pruriency and nastiness. The inference of all this is that there may be something in morals and ideals more important than the question of Sunday tennis, though there cannot be anything more important than that a young woman—or any man or woman—should have the will and courage to stand by whatever convictions mind and conscience approve.—Advantage.

"It Can Happen Anywhere."—

"If it could happen at Kohler, it can happen anywhere." So say industrialists throughout Wisconsin. This garden village has been for years the symbol of happy employer-employee relationships. It is because of this that the bloody strike there has stirred that region as has no other labor struggle in years. Perhaps because of its conspicuousness as a center of good will, Kohler became the target of organized unionism. "Could they win a victory here, it would add enormously to union prestige, make victories elsewhere easier. More sinister would be the inevitable inference that violence wins." But there is another lesson that does not please union leaders so well. It is the absolute peace that has reigned since 250 national guardsmen were moved in after the outburst of July 27th. Kohler is a model village, with 1,700 people living in their own homes. Today the gardens still bloom and the picturesque houses nestle in the shade—the idle workers resting beneath. In front of the immense plumbing fixture plant, rising five stories in height and including 25 acres of buildings, three shifts of pickets stand guard. Only approximately one-tenth of the 4,000 men once employed in this plant live in the village, the others living in nearby towns. The village itself was the dream of an idealist. It, "with its halls and parks and recreation centers, its self-government, was not intended as a sop thrown to labor, but is the sincerely conceived, beautifully executed dream of an idealist. . . . Of course unions call it enforced paternalism, and say Kohler village is an Austrian feudal estate. But company officials point out the anxiety of the men to own homes there." We are told that during the first part of the depression the full force was kept at work, but after the company had borrowed money up to the impairment of their credit, some had to be laid off, but the effort was still made by spreading work to keep as many on as possible. That policy, the company now admits, was probably a mistake, for it left no one contented, but it was well meant. The time was ripe for the entrance of the American Federation of Labor—yet one wonders if the cause of labor has not suffered by what followed. The strike culminated in an attack on the plant. Reports differ as to who fired the first shot, but the battle was on. It did not last long, but 43 men fell, two were killed, and the front of the office building was riddled, its windows smashed. Then came the national guardsmen—and quietness. But underneath that quietness is a tenseness that may yet break through. An open wound is festering and bleeding, and will take long to heal. "It can happen anywhere."—Adapted from Business Week.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

The only effective denials of God are not men's words, but their deeds.—John Knox.

There is nothing that makes men rich and strong but that which they carry inside of them. Wealth is of the heart, not of the hand.—Milton.

We understand that Saturday, August 25th, is Christian Church Day at the Massanetta Springs Bible Conference, which is held annually at Massanetta Springs, about four miles east of Harrisonburg, Va. Those of our constituency who are able to attend will not regret doing so.

Rev. J. H. Lightbourne, pastor of the First Christian Church, Burlington, was with pastor P. H. Fleming in a meeting at Long's Chapel on the third Sunday in July and the week following, and also at Union on the fourth Sunday in July and the week following. Interesting and helpful meetings were the result.

The Managing Editor overheard the linotype operator wishing that the various contributors to the pages of THE SUN would soon be home from summer vacations. Upon questioning we found that it was just the handwriting—but who ever knew a great writer who could write so that one could read it?

Rev. J. E. McCauley, with his wife and three children, will leave Richmond this week to attend the reunion of his family at Chapel Hill, N. C. We know that this will be a happy occasion for all, but especially for his mother and our good friend, Mrs. Sallie S. McCauley. May she live long to enjoy these reunions, which we understand are annual events.

It is not necessary to make long prayers, but it is essential to be much alone with God, waiting on His will, hearkening to His voice, lingering in the garden of Scripture for the coming of the Lord God in the dawn or the call of the day. No number of meetings, no fellowship with Christian friends, no amount of Christian activity, can compensate for the neglect of the still hour.—F. B. Meyer.

From Brother W. L. Cooper of Norfolk, Va., comes the following: "I have enjoyed reading THE SUN for many years, especially the Suffolk Letter by Dr. Johnson, also the letter from Dr. Smith in the interest of our college and the Family Altar by Chaplain Rountree. These three are always read first with much interest." Brother Cooper also sends his wishes for the continued success of THE SUN. We thank him.

From a Norfolk daily paper we learn that: "The Rev. S. W. Phillips, pastor of Elm Christian Church, Portsmouth, Va., has returned to Portsmouth from Pikes Peak Bible Seminary at Manitou, Colo., where he attended the summer session this year, being graduated. Mr. Phillips completed his studies at the Seminary with an average of work at 95 per cent, and earned with praise his Baccalaureate in Theology. At a meeting of the Alumni Association in connection with the summer school, Mr. Phillips was named first Vice-President of the Alumni Association and by reason of this will be named President at the meeting next year."

ABOLISHING WAR.

By DR. J. H. DILLARD.

The article by Timothy Thomas in your issue of August 9, and the notice of Tesla's new destructive invention, suggest mention of the leading article in the August number of Harper's Magazine. This article seems to me most worth reading of the many that have been written on the problem of Abolishing War. The article is only partly devoted to the question of war, but in a way it hangs together. It ought to be especially interesting to educators. The writer seems to have a strong conviction that our wide-spread education, in its excursions along easy roads to learning, is not teaching us to think. He urges that, for our economic system as well as for international dealings the great need is for people who can see through specious propositions that sound well, but end in sound.

"War," the writer says, "can be eradicated, but only if these who devote themselves to the task recognize its dimensions and measure up to them. They must be relentlessly clear-sighted, tough-minded, hard-bitten, worldly wise, incredulous, jaundiced in their skepticism of words unsupported by deed, and deaf to mellifluous rhetoric and the glib grandiloquence of easy idealism."

Looking at the world today all of us can see that the results of the League Covenant, the Kellogg Pact, World Court regulations, and other would-be instruments of peace, are practically nil. We are building ships and war-planes as never before. There is no hope for immunity from wars, by courts or commissions or conferences or congresses, so long as nations fight each other with tariffs and other unjust discriminations. Hope lies in gradually bringing leaders and rulers to the wisdom of substituting, in actual practice, for the fruits of greed the fruits of common sense and cooperation.
Charlottesville, Va.

ENQUIRER ASKS SOME QUESTIONS.

One of the ways to learn is by asking questions. So I ask a question or two.

I hear lots of things said these days about the good and the bad of the present times and people. I read a great deal where different communities are presenting programs dealing with the subject of "Building or Making a New World."

Then I think of that Institution that has done and will continue to do, so much in the shaping of characters and fixing the destinies, namely the Sunday School.

1. Do you have a Sunday School in your community?
2. Do the officers (especially superintendent and teachers) attend and take part in the modern dance?
3. Do the officers of your Sunday School drink beer and wine?
4. Does your superintendent lead in prayer in Sunday School?
5. If your officers engage in the above, is your school growing?

I ask these questions for definite reasons and will you be kind enough to answer for your school through the columns of THE SUN?

Thanks,

AN ENQUIRER.

There is only one right attitude for the human will, and that is an attitude of absolute surrender to God. The whole aim of life should not be to please self, but God, in all things, both great and small.—R. A. Torrey.

IN ALAMANCE.

Perhaps SUN readers will not be so interested in what we have to say in this note, but we want at least to give an account of ourselves for the past few months.

Our revival began at Berea Wednesday night before the 1st Sunday in July, but previous to this a week of cottage prayer meetings was observed. Rev. J. E. McCauley of Richmond, Va., came to us on the first Sunday night in July, and did the preaching throughout the week. Bro. McCauley is a fine fellow to work with and a good preacher. His sermons were scriptural, filled with the "work of Christ." Quite a number reconsecrated their lives to Christ, but otherwise no visible results, save the church was greatly revived and strengthened.

Some will unite with the church by way of transfer from other places. We feel that much good was done and to God be the praise. At the close of the meeting the church, true to form, and which they never have failed to do, gave us a nice and bountiful pounding, everything that can be used for the pantry. Then to follow this up, for within a few days after the close of the meeting, we had a birthday and you should see what happened. We received a call to come to Sellars and Son, Burlington, and there they had secured a nice suit of clothing with a card bearing the lines, "Dress Up."

On August 3rd, the two congregations gathered at our house late in the P. M. to help us celebrate our 16th Wedding Anniversary. Berea presented Mrs. Crutchfield with a 53-piece Dinner Set, our good folk from Bethlehem brought many nice and useful things. These gathered here about 5:30 o'clock and shortly after six they had a fine supper spread out and from then until you can guess how long, we had a fine time eating together. Following the supper, Mr. Willie Madren entertained the company with fine music. He has a string band within his immediate family that is second to none in this part of the county. Mrs. Crutchfield and I deeply appreciate the fine spirit shown us by these good friends. May God richly bless them all.

We began our meeting at Bethlehem the third Sunday in July with three largely attended services and twice daily throughout the week. Rev. H. E. Crutchfield, Paces, Va., did the preaching throughout the week. His work was of a high order, very deeply appreciated by the large congregations that heard him daily. As results of our efforts, hundreds pledged anew their lives to Christ, the church being greatly revived and stirred. We have received twenty-six new members from the meeting and several previous to the meeting. With others yet to join who are awaiting letters of transfer from other places. It was a great and glorious meeting for us as we gathered from service to service we could just feel the presence of the Spirit. To God be the praise for all that was accomplished.

We have been kept busy going from one thing to another, attending many family reunions, for they are quite numerous in these parts adding to the social as well as religious life of this and other counties. I name a few that I attended and spoke for: Ireland, Isely, Simpson family, Jones and Guinn. My good friend Uncle Buck Geringer. Mr. Martin Story who celebrated his 95th birthday and is still going strong and today I am scheduled to be at another Geringer reunion and speak. It is a busy life among a great people, for indeed no minister is blessed with finer folks to serve than these down here in Alamance. May God bless them all.

G. C. CRUTCHFIELD.

VA. VALLEY CONFERENCE DAY BY DAY.

[Last week THE SUN's Editor gave impressions about items in the Conference. This week he is glad to give Conference items as reported in local press.—Ed.]

The annual session of the Virginia Valley Central Congregational Christian Conference opened August 8th, at 10 A. M., at the Mayland Christian Church, with the Vice-President, Rev. B. J. Earp, of Harrisonburg presiding. Devotional services were led by Miss Margaret Earp. The welcome address was given by Mrs. Fannie May Layman. Alfred Dofflemeyer, of the Bethel Church, responded. A large part of the morning session was devoted to reports and various business of the Conference.

The annual address was delivered by Rev. A. W. Andes, of Harrisonburg, who used as his theme "Ethiopian Hosts" in which he made clear the existence of many great problems in the life of today and showed clearly the way in which these problems should be faced by all Christian people the world over. The remainder of the morning session was taken up with routine business.

The afternoon session opened with the Rev. W. B. Fuller in charge of the devotional service.

Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, Elon College, spoke on "Our Publications." Some of the things he said were:

"After we are dead, we shall not be known by the money we make but by our character. God gave us the power to build character and we should praise Him for it. The Church of the Living God attempts to pour into the people the things which build character.

"You need your church literature more than ever before.

"Devout souls, keen intellects, trained minds, skilled hands have developed our church literature. There is no better literature than this Church literature to develop character. If you only read the daily press and the secular magazines you know only the worst that is going on. If you take the church literature you will know the good that is going on in this world. Our church literature builds character."

C. D. Johnston, Superintendent of the Christian Orphanage at Elon College spoke on "Our Orphanage." He told of the history and growth of the orphanage. He made it plain that the present administration and all those who have been associated with the orphanage since its founding have always been more concerned with the character development of the children than with their training to simply get a living. He appealed to all present to do their share in the support of this important institution. Routine business consumed the balance of the afternoon session.

Conference was called to order at 7:45 P. M. by the Rev. B. J. Earp. The evening was given over to the program of the Youth Fellowship. K. B. Hook, of Winchester, President of Youth Fellowship, presided at this service. Roy A. Larrick, of Winchester, led the devotional service. Dr. L. E. Smith, president of Elon College, was introduced as the main speaker of the evening. He took as his theme "Youth and the Challenge of Life." Briefly outlined his address as follows:

"Life is a mysterious thing at its beginning and at its end. Life is an influential thing, influencing the civilization of today. Life is a sacred thing.

"Youth is the most attractive stage of life. An individual doesn't become a thief or a drunkard over night but there is the gradual process that makes the thief or the drunkard. Today the youth is in the midst of a world that needs to be rebuilt. Do the youth realize what part they are to play in rebuilding this torn world?

"The challenge to the youth is to right the wrongs of this world. Youth ought to right such wrongs as war, drunkenness, increased crime wave and low morals."

After the wonderful and stirring address of Dr. Smith an installation service was held. New officers seated were:

Charlotte Hilliard, President; K. B. Hook, Vice-President; Margaret Earp, Secretary-Treasurer; Thelma Morris, Assistant Secretary-Treasurer; Billy Andes, Superintendent of Devotional Life; Irene Hensley, Superintendent of Leadership Training; Kathleen Oates, Superintendent of Publications and Reporter.

The evening session closed with a social get-together on the lawn of E. A. Hilliard. Songs were sung, stunts were put on and a general good time was had by all.

Second Day.

Resolutions calling the church to action against the present economic order which permits some to accumulate great wealth at the expense of starving brothers, denouncing war and armaments and pledging renewed efforts against the liquor business were passed at the closing session of the annual meeting of the Virginia Valley Central Congregational and Christian Conference at Mayland.

The Rev. B. J. Earp, of Harrisonburg, was elected president, with the Rev. R. L. Williamson, vice-president; the Rev. A. W. Andes, secretary and Samuel Earman, treasurer.

The conference will meet next year at Leaksville.

The conference was called to order by Rev. B. J. Earp and Dr. M. L. Weekley led the devotional service. The Committee on Education gave their report in which Rev. A. R. VanCleave, of Winchester applied for a transfer to the Alabama Association and Wm. J. Andes applied for license to preach.

Dr. L. E. Smith, President of Elon College, spoke on Education. He gave the history and the development of the College. Furthermore he spoke as follows:

"It is the duty of every church member in this conference to recognize that Elon College is a child of the Christian Church. We must declare our love to it as each person or adult would to their children.

"It is the duty of every church member to see that their sons and daughters go to their own college.

"Every member should give of their material means. It is our responsibility, privilege and opportunity to give to our college. Elon College belongs to the Christian Church and the Church should support the College in order that the College may instruct and prepare men and women to meet life's problems and to spread the Gospel of Jesus Christ over the entire world."

After the report of the Committee on Foreign Missions by Miss Verdie Showalter, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, mission secretary of the Southern Christian Convention spoke on "Missions." Part of his address is as follows:

"We only grow as we discover God's plan of growth and we only build as we discover God's plan of building. The most powerful thing on God's earth is the Human Hand. By it the world moves. God unfolded to us His perfect hand of five fingers which are as follows: 1st finger—the thumb—the local church; 2nd finger—missionary movement; 3rd finger—educational institutions; 4th finger—religious literature; 5th finger—orphans.

"God is trying to reach each person with his whole hand, not just a few fingers.

"Missions is the work of our Lord Jesus Christ in creating among men a right ideal of God and a better understanding of our fellowmen. Christ gave us the second commandment which was like unto the first because you cannot know or love your fellowman until you know and love God. A knowledge of the Holy One is understanding. Missions is also a passion for God. May God help us to get the passions of missions."

Devotional services in the afternoon were led by Wm. J. Andes. After the devotional services, Wm. J. Andes, son of Rev. A. W. Andes, was licensed to preach in the Valley Conference. The remainder of the afternoon session was spent in a business session of the conference. Many reports were read and adopted.

Resolutions.

The report of the Resolutions Committee was as follows:

"We, your Committee on Resolutions, submit the following:

"First—That we express our appreciation of the whole-hearted hospitality and efficient service rendered by the Mayland Church.

"Second—That we appreciate the inspiring and informing addresses of the Conference's official visitors and pledge our cooperation in their respective interests.

"Third—That we recognize the utter incompatibility of the Liquor Business with a well ordered and happy human society and gird ourselves anew for an intelligent, constructive and united assault upon this malignant sore in our national life.

"Fourth—That we challenge the present social and economic order that makes possible the accumulation of vast fortunes and the control of the sources and distribution of wealth alongside increasing wealth and devastating poverty of the rapidly growing millions of human beings. That the church has as yet only a division and faltering sense of responsibility for the tragic waste of the highest human values created by such an anti-Christian order of life.

"Fifth—That we divorce ourselves completely from the futility and cruelties and appalling destruction of war. That the church must stop blessing war and disentangle itself forever from complicity in this unchristian, devilish agency of unmeasured destruction of life and wealth and culture and happiness. That we are opposed to the utter waste of material wealth for the increase of armaments and cooperative with all peace agencies in creating a warless world and a creative human brotherhood."

WROUGHT INTO GOLD.

"I saw a smile—to a poor man 'twas given,
And he was old.
The sun broke forth; I saw that smile in heaven
Wrought into gold—
Gold of such lustre never was vouchsafed to us.
It made the light of day more luminous.

"I saw a toiling woman sinking down
Footsore and cold.
A soft hand covered her—the humble gown,
Wrought into gold,
Grew straight imperishable, and will be shown
To smiling angels round the judgment throne.

"Wrought into gold: We that pass down life's hours
So carelessly,
Might make the dusky way a path of flowers
If we would try.
Then every gentle deed we've done, or kind word given,
Wrought into gold, would make us wondrous rich in heaven."

—Author unknown.

E-D-I-T-O-R-I-A-L

EDITOR

J. O. ATKINSON, ELON COLLEGE, N. C.

ASSOCIATE EDITOR

E. C. GILLETTE

117 W. Forsyth Street, Jacksonville, Fla.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS

I. W. JOHNSON      ELISHA A. KING

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE SCIENTISTS AND GOD.

Some very encouraging figures are given in Harper's Magazine for August under title of "Religious Beliefs of American Scientists." These figures show that leading scientists are not much on belief in God and Immortality. The study, which seems quite thorough and convincing, is by James H. Leuba, Professor of Psychology in Bryn Mawr College. A cross section of the 23,000 scientists listed in American Men of Science furnished the field of investigation with these two questions put to them: (A) Do you believe in a God to whom one may pray in expectation of receiving an answer? (B) Do you believe in the continuation of the person after death in another world?

It was not strange that the percentage of those believing in (A) were those who also believed in (B). But the figures are rather appalling, especially for those who take their beliefs from scientists.

And percentages vary with the kind of scientists consulted. For example, the largest number of scientists who believe in God, and in immortality, are the physicists—those whose studies are solely with the mental.

They range as follows: Of physicists who believe in God, 38 per cent; disbelievers 47 per cent, doubters 15 per cent. Biologists, believers 27 per cent, disbelievers 60 per cent, doubters 13 per cent. Sociologists, believers 24 per cent, disbelievers 67 per cent, doubters 9 per cent. Psychologists, believers 10 per cent, disbelievers 79 per cent, doubters 11 per cent.

Prof. Leuba gives figures showing that in the field of science and "the intellect," believers are on the decrease, disbelievers on the increase, and also that college students who believe as freshmen diminish to a very small percentage by the time they are seniors, with a corresponding increase of disbelievers as knowledge and "investigation" increase. The conclusions of the whole matter being: "In order to be again a vitalizing and controlling power in society, the religious will have to organize themselves about ultimate conceptions that are not in contradiction with the best insight of the time." While the study is quite illuminating, and the figures reveal a condition quite deplorable, this distinguished Professor, like most of the intelligentsia, makes the fatal blunder in his conclusions by assuming that "the best insight of the time" is with the scientists and the seniors. This is not true today and it never has been true. Men of science are dealing with the purely "natural," while there are other students no less broad, deep and wise in their day and generation who give heed to the supernatural also, and religion has to do first of all with the supernatural which the scientists leave out of their study, investigation and experience. Scientists within their field are to be listened to: outside of their field many of them are as ignorant, and as silly as laborers. Only the life can tell us of God who believes God and by experiences know that He is and is a Rewarder of them that diligently seek Him.

J. O. A.

DIVORCE.

Man cannot with immunity continually flaunt God. Patient, forbearing, long-suffering though He be, He cannot be provoked forever lest His wrath be kindled in righteous indignation. That Society and the State might have a secure foundation to stand upon, God, and not man, created the family. "From the beginning of creation," said our Lord Christ, "male and female made He them. For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and shall cleave to his wife; and the two shall become as one: so that they are no more two, but one flesh. What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder." (Mark 10:6-9). But, in absolute defiance of Almighty God, man is putting them asunder. August 4, the Associated Press carried this: "Twenty-five divorces were granted within an hour and a half today by Judge H. M. Edwards of Ely, Nevada, sitting here, making an average of one divorce for each three and three-fifths minutes." This was just one "Court" with thousands of others throughout land busily engaged in putting asunder that which Jehovah of hosts had said should not be put asunder. Nor were those engaged in this unholy practice the ignorant, the "low down" or the outcast. A wife of a United States Senator, herself a daughter of a former President, a son and a daughter of the present President, a score of wives of millionaires and sportsmen of national note—these are among the names of those who from caprice, prejudice, or pretense, for the sake of their own whims, defy the laws of Almighty God, and bid those of lesser name and fame to follow in their footsteps.

Destroy the foundation and the whole building is insecure. If our civilization cannot secure the home, and make the family tie sacred, as Almighty God has decreed it then our civilization is doomed, and all other government will become a hiss and a by-word. Man cannot with impunity defy his God forever.

J. O. A.

WHERE THE "SOCIAL GOSPEL" FAILS.

By SAMUEL McCREA CALVERT.

Those of us who are accustomed to emphasize the social significance of Christianity do well to remind ourselves that all our great social problems might conceivably be solved without our finding the Kingdom of God on earth. To realize this is necessary to save us from a dangerous superficiality.

Suppose, for example, that the present unjust inequalities in wealth and income were to disappear (as they have largely disappeared in Russia) because men at last discover that it is "good business" to have purchasing power widely distributed among all the people. Suppose poverty were thus to vanish, all men were to have good houses in which to live, all were to have economic plenty.

Suppose, too, that all our racial frictions were come in South America) as a result of following the line of least resistance and adopt a custom of to be overcome (as they have been largely overcome by inter-marriage, so that prejudice and discriminations on the ground of color were relics of the past.

Suppose, further, that strife between states was surmounted (as it was surmounted among the American commonwealths that now form our federal union) through the process of finding that tariff walls and policies of isolation and violent conflicts were short sighted and ruinous. Suppose that, as a matter of prudent self-interest, the world were organized for peace and war came to be recognized by all peoples to be as senseless as duelling.

Would this mean that we would then have a society comparable to what Jesus meant by the Kingdom of God?

Not at all! For consider what the quality of our life might still be.

Men might still be living without any vision of the meaning of existence, without any faith in a spiritual order in the universe, without any faith moral purpose, without any sense of supreme values worth striving for, without any motive of love for either God or man.

Men might still be living on the mere surface of things, still having only a jazz view of life, still interested only in sensual pleasures, still insensitive to beauty, still deaf to the call of duty, still bereft of any high enthusiasms, still self-seeking, haughty, and heartless, still beset by fear and guilt, still cynical, blase and disillusioned.

Such reflections should make us realize that our primary concern as Christians is always with the inner life,—always with the faith and motives and attitudes of individual men. If the churches fail here, they fail everywhere; they become "empty cisterns" from which thirsty men draw no living water.

—Editorial in Federal Council Bulletin.

"Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God." If there is anything in the world that is destructive, it is dissension and strife. It is at the bottom of all troubles between individuals, communities, nations, and often brings trouble among the children of God. We can never expect to reach the pearly gates with malice and hatred in our hearts. Peace is spoken of nearly two hundred times in the Bible. It was ever Paul's benediction that the peace of God that understanding might abound among those that he loved in the churches. What a virtue it is when it passeth understanding!—Phillips.

SHOW US YOUR MAN.

By REV. VAUGHAN DABNEY, D. D.

[An address delivered on Monday night, June 25, 1934, at the meeting of the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches of the United States in Finney Chapel, Oberlin College, Oberlin, Ohio.]

(Concluded from last week.)

In our own country we are in the midst of a great new experiment which has for its goal the creation of a more abundant life. In its idealistic conception and bold action and vast outreach it fills one with admiration. Men are being sent back to work, concentration camps are established, great public works are carried on, a half billion dollars is appropriated to care for stricken farmers in the drought area, child labor is attacked. To cite but a single specific example, there is the Tennessee Valley Authority which has for its object, not merely the production of cheap electric power and fertilizer but also the lifting of life to higher levels. But here again we raise the question, what about the man? Will he lose his individuality? Will the well springs of initiative and independence dry up? Will the Federal government arrogate unto itself the very rights of man, and wax strong through a kind of planned cannibalism? As some of the Puritan champions of democracy we ask, "What about your man?" The forgotten man may, indeed, become the fortunate man. Will he then degenerate into a flabby, fatalistic mannikin?

One more touch of the brush and the picture of an ideal nation is finished. In his word painting Phillips Brooks used the beautiful figure of the candle stick. "The nations," said he, "are the candle sticks of the Lord. No candle stick can be so rich or venerable that men shall honor it if it holds no candle." Now "The spirit of man is the candle of the Lord." Humanity, therefore, is dedicated to God through nationalism. Above the nations is the Judge of all the earth who counts the isles of the sea, as fine dust in the balance.

In seeking to establish the relation between religion and patriotism we have help here. It is not merely a matter of precedence of cross or flag in an ecclesiastical procession. Nor is it a delicate balancing of things rendered to Caesar and to God. Nor again do we seek to re-establish the old Puritan conception of a Theocratic state with laws drawn from the Bible. It is more. We must re-think nationalism in spiritual terms. As the Old Testament prophets thought of Israel as a nation raised up of God for a special purpose. So are we to think of all nations. All countries are chosen people. Above the nation is the Kingdom of God, unto which are to be gathered the riches of every kindred and every tribe. We seek to build not a Kingdom of man, but a Kingdom of God. The eternal values of the Kingdom of Heaven are to be realized here in time and space.

This means that we must enlarge our conception of the mission of Christianity. The gospel of Christ must spiritualize nationalism. The church must not surrender to the totalitarianism state.

A modern expression of this figure of the candle stick and the candle is found in a stirring editorial in the Christian Century of February 14th, last. Herein is given a fresh emphasis to the greatness of the Gospel. In discussing the mistake made by German Protestantism in its inadequate opposition to Nazi totalitarianism by insisting merely on the inner Kingdom of the individual, the writer says: "For Christians the only tolerable totalitarianism is Christianity itself. And the State cannot pretend to exercise totalitarian authority in any department of culture without coming into conflict with this essential ideal. The German pastors do not see this because German Protestantism has never taken the social gospel to heart, but has accepted a dualism of sovereignty between state and church based upon the tacit understanding that each would support the other and that neither would invade the realm of the other." Then follows a stern challenge to the Christian Church rigorously to apply its social gospel which is our Christian totalitarianism.

In view of these facts the mission of the church becomes increasingly clear. It can think of its work in no less inclusive terms than the gospel itself. If Christian totalitarianism seeks the redemption of the entire social order and the salvation of the nations, then the church must proclaim that gospel at home and abroad. We need to recover the courage and convictions of apostolic Christianity. Conflict with organized society may not become so acute as to drive us to the catacombs. But there is a growing tension which must not be avoided.

Particularly is this manifested in the matter of preparedness for war with its militarization of certain state universities and its refusal to allow the rights of conscientious objectors. The church is opposed to war because of what it does to man. The true nation is a candle stick to hold a candle. It is not a scabbard to hold a blade of conquest. There can be no compromise here. It is no longer a question of war and the church. It is a question of war or the church. The Christian Church refuses to surrender its conscience at the behest of a majority vote in the Congress of the United States. The sad story of what war did to man is too recent to be forgotten. The Church says, "No more war!" Men of good will are called upon to cooperate in every way possible to bring peace to the earth. Some may work along the lines suggested by President Palmer in his bold plea for a pledge not to cross the boundary of any nation to wage war. Others will labor for America's entry into the League of Nations. Still others will follow the path of absolute pacifism. The Church should lead the way in a unification of these various methods, all seeking the same goal, peace on earth.

Moreover, the church will not only re-think missions, but recover its original missionary zeal. Are we not ready for another phase of the missionary movement? May it not be that the spirit of Jesus will be the unifying agency in a new world order? The vision of Christianity concerning that City of God let down from the heavens into which all tribes and tongues shall enter is too precious to perish. What else is offered? Christ glorifies and exalts the varying cultures of the different nations. He becomes the Christ not only of the Indian road, but of the open highway of the world's life. Missionary leadership faces squarely the fact of nationalism. Our workers in the various fields have long since outgrown the old conception of missions as an imposition of western culture on Eastern peoples in the name of Christianity. India and China and Africa are candle sticks to hold men, men who have been uplifted and transformed by the spirit of Christ.

On the several fronts where tension is found, there the church will take her stand, boldly proclaiming the ideal of a spiritualized nationalism, and crying out, "Righteousness exalteth a nation." "Show us your man!"

However admirable this general program may be, one thing must be done. The church must produce the new individual who will make this dream come true. It is easy to deal in generalities. It is hard to create new individuals. We may discuss principles and programs. We must produce persons to match these programs. Jesus ever had his eye on the individual. He started there and worked out to the Kingdom in society. He saw men and women with the eye of an idealist for He knew what was in man! A good Samaritan, a woman at the well, a blind beggar, a lost boy, a disloyal disciple, a dying thief,—he saw them as individuals who might become children of God, citizens of a heavenly kingdom.

If we are to have peace on earth, then from our church schools must come the boys and girls who have been trained to think in world terms. If we are to build an enduring international order based on justice and good will we here in our own nation must produce individuals who will labor for that lofty ideal. If an Arthur Holt contends, "a true socialization alone can save the individual," then that process must begin with a few here and there who have become so socially minded that they find life by losing it. Whatever we may think of the technique and program of the New Deal we cannot deny the idealism that lies behind it. That was a noble word spoken by President Roosevelt in Washington last December at the Twenty-fifth Anniversary of the founding of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ. "If I were asked," said the President, "to state the great objective which church and state are both demanding for the sake of every man, woman and child in this country I would say that that great objective is a more abundant life."

The church must not only produce multitudes of humble individual Christians who are socially minded and who think of nationalism in spiritual terms and who labor and pray for a family of nations under God, the Church is called upon to furnish moral leadership—consider such a man as Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture. His own life is a candle in the candle stick of this nation. Who can read his book without experiencing a great surge of hope and courage? Even the jacket of the book is prophetic. On the front cover page in the upper left hand corner is a picture of the Capitol at Washington. Underneath is the word "statesmanship." In the lower right-hand corner is the picture of a church over which is the word, "religion." Here in picture form is the modern interpretation of the figure of the candle stick and the candle. The comparison is completed by a glance at the back page of the paper jacket. There we see the face of the man himself with stern jaw and deep set eyes. Here is a man! Let him speak. Taking as his major assumption the fact that "enduring social transformation is impossible of realization without changed hearts," he calls for a "heart trust" as well as a "brain trust" to help solve the problems of the hour. "True statesmanship and true religion have much in common." In speaking of nationalism he says, "It is my faith that the origin and destiny of this country have more in common with this ultimate catholicity of world religious purpose than most of us have yet been willing to admit. This is the only safe kind of nationalism I know for the United States." And again, "With the facts as I see them today, the American people should prepare to step forward boldly and confidently."

"Show us your man!" Here we have the ideal picture of a spiritualized nationalism whose main purpose is to produce personality. "Show us your man." This challenge finds the world unprepared to meet it. We are not producing personality. "Show us your man." Here we find the duty of the church to rear a generation of socially minded individuals who will bring in the new order. "Show us your man." Here we have a clear call for great Christian leadership to point the way.

With humility and shame we confess that we
(Continued on page 9.)

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The following ministers of the Christian church have been attending the Bible Conference of the Virginia Synod of the Presbyterian church at Massanetta Springs, Va., during the past week: Revs. C. H. Rowland, O. D. Poythress, R. A. Whitten, Jr., Joe French, A. W. Andes, B. J. Earp, and I. W. Johnson, Mrs. I. W. Johnson, Mrs. A. W. Andes and several others living near Harrisonburg have also been attending this Conference.

This Conference is primarily for Bible Study and other workers for Christian work. This year the program provides for several addresses and discussions of various phases of moral and social problems. Dr. Kirby Page has delivered some striking addresses on these problems. He is a strong speaker, clear thinker, and carries his audience with him in a convincing manner.

Dr. J. L. Joekel of Austin, Texas, has given a series of helpful lectures on Galatians and James.

Dr. James Buock of Scotland, is another outstanding preacher of the Conference.

This school will continue next week, closing Sunday, August 26th. Each day and evening has a full, helpful program.

For seven years it has been the pleasure of the writer and his wife to attend this Bible School. We have spent nearly fourteen weeks here during this time. There is no doubt that these weeks have been equal in value to a like amount of time spent in any college or university. The lectures and addresses are of a high order, the fellowship is cordial and delightful, and the spiritual tone inspiring and uplifting. Those who are here wish that every minister in the Southern Convention could have the privileges and blessings offered to all denominations here. Baptists, Methodists, United Brethren, Episcopalians and others as well as Presbyterians mingle together in one delightful fellowship.

The Church is not a static institution—it has not reached its final development in doctrine and manner of life. In such a school new ideas are advanced and old interpretations are challenged. This is as it should be. Men should not be afraid of new interpretations of Truth. Church doctrine cannot be formulated in fixed forms of speech to be transmitted unchallenged to succeeding generations. Truth is unchangeable, but forms and interpretations of truth may change as students make new discoveries and sound new depths in spiritual life. There are vast realms of spiritual truth yet to be discovered in the spiritual world.

The Christian Church has the open mind for forms and interpretations of faith. It is not committed to any system of theology, but rests its faith upon the Bible as a sufficient rule of faith and practice. Calvinism and Armenianism are the two great systems of faith and theology. Both systems have led thousands of people to accept Jesus Christ as Saviour. In these respective interpretations people find spiritual life through Christ. Both are right, in part, as a means to an end, or as methods of faith. Both are inadequate as the end of faith.

These days of rest, study and fellowship should prepare us for more consecrated service in our field of labor and fellowship.

I. W. JOHNSON.

ELON 1934-35.

On September 4th, the forty-fifth regular session of Elon College will open. This promises to be one of the most auspicious openings that the college has yet had. For the past three years, the enrollment has been comparatively small, though through this year, we have had additional enrollments that have brought the total near the three hundred mark. The indications now are that enrollment for 1934-35 will exceed either of the three previous years. A checking of the number of paid fees during the period above referred to reveals the following facts: On August 15, 1932, there were fifty-six paid fees. On August 15, 1933, there were eighty-four. On August 15, 1934, there were one hundred eighty-one; one hundred sixty-five of this number are new students and about one hundred fifty are freshmen. Since August 15th, we have had about ten more acceptance fees, all from new students. This, by no means, tells the whole story. We have a long list of good prospects, many of whom we confidently expect to enroll when the fall semester opens in September. It looks now that we will have the largest number of new students on the hill than we have had in many years. The enrollment of former students has not been as good in comparison with the new students but larger than either of the two previous years.

Heretofore, the matter of securing the room desired has not been a serious problem for the former students. This year, it will be entirely different. To date, we have paid fees for practically every available space in both East and North Dormitories. There perhaps may be some changes, so that those who are not enrolled need not fear. In addition to this possibility, we are now conditioning rooms on the second floor of the publishing house to take care of the overflow of boys. These rooms will be put in good condition, and all modern conveniences, including baths, will be installed. This building will be in charge of competent leadership, and it will be slightly cheaper for the students to room there. They will get their meals either in the College Dining Room or in the Club Dining Room. They will not be neglected in the least. Every precaution will be taken to safeguard their interest. There is room for fourteen girls in West Dormitory. In case we have an overflow of girls, we are reserving what was formerly the Young Ladies Hall to take care of this emergency. Dr. Newman and family are now living in this building, but in a few days they will move to their new home on the site where their home was destroyed by fire last January.

The college buildings are all being cleaned and put in first-class repairs. For one time, North Dormitory is clean, and all other buildings will be in good condition. The College Dining Room has been redecorated. The Ladies Aid Society of the College Church is making creton covers for the backs of the dining room chairs. These and other artistic touches will give an inviting appearance to our dining halls. The reception room in West Dormitory is being completely redone. The old plastering has been torn away, and new plastering is being put back in its place. It will be new in interior finishing. The campus is being cared for in every particular. It presents a most attractive appearance. The lawns are green, and the shrubbery is in good condition.

The faculty for 1934-35 has been about completed. The new Dean of Women is Dr. French Haynes, of Clyde, N. C. Dr. Haynes took her under-graduate work at Meredith College, North Carolina. Her work for the master's degree was done at Cornell University, New York. Also, she received her Ph. D. degree from Cornell. She is a woman thirty-three years of age, having served as Dean of Howard College, Birmingham, Alabama for twelve years: She is one of the youngest women in the state to hold her doctor's degree. Her entire teaching experience and experience as Dean of Women has been with Howard College. Howard College is an A-grade school, with a student enrollment of approximately sixteen hundred. Dr. Haynes' work with Elon College will be similar to the position that she has held with Howard College for the past years. There will be other new members of the faculty, but definite announcements will be made regarding them at a future writing.

A little more than two weeks and school will be open. We have the names of many young people who are members of the Christian Church, who intend to go to college, who have not enrolled at Elon College. We covet and solicit the cooperation of every minister and layman in the church to the end that these may finally come to Elon. If we do not patronize our own school, it is hardly reasonable to expect others to do so. Elon is a part of our church, and every loyal member of the church should be glad to give his support. If the church will cooperate, the college can, and will, be put in the position that we all covet for it.

L. E. SMITH.

VIRGILINA LETTER.

Our meeting closed here Sunday, August 12th. Dr. J. G. Truitt was with us and delighted our people. The attendance was fine. The church revived by a great number of rededications. There were many professions and fifteen accessions to the church. Dr. Truitt will always be held in high esteem by the people of this community.

Mrs. Truitt and children joined him here Saturday the 11th and this week they are with the latter's father near Summerfield, N. C.

Rev. H. E. Crutchfield assisted us at both Liberty and Hebron. The meeting at Liberty was protracted from the 1st Sunday in August. Brother Crutchfield has developed into one of our strong preachers. The attendance was good. The church was revived by a number of professions and reconsecrations. Five united with the church.

This was the fourth time in the past ten years that Bro. Crutchfield has been with me in a meeting at Hebron. On his first visit here when a school boy he won the confidence and love of the people and this seems to have increased. The attendance was excellent, interest fine and a real revival the results. There were some fifteen professions and ten united with the church.

On the third Sunday in July, Rev. A. W. Andes of Harrisonburg, Va., joined me at Lebanon for a series of meetings. From the first the man and conditions were a fit. It has never been my privilege to listen for six days to sermons from a preacher more practical and soul-stirring to the church. This church has few available people for membership, but some of the real salt of the earth are among her members. The people had a great opportunity in hearing Bro. Andes and appreciated the same. There were a few professions, many rededications and four accessions.

C. E. NEWMAN.

Can anything be sadder than work left unfinished? Yes; work never begun.—Rosetti.

THE ETERNAL GOD AND THE PRESENT HOUR.

By ALBERT W. PALMER, President Chicago Theological Seminary.

Godlessness is the greatest peril of the present hour. I mean by Godless just what the word means in its barest outline: to be Godless is to have God subtracted from you. To be without God is to have a world-view in which there is no unifying power and no central intelligence; it is to have no moral code beyond the passing whim or temporary expediency; to live a life within which there glows no larger hope and beneath which is no underlying purpose.

We today face tasks which, while of a different order, nevertheless require the same high courage and steadfast sense of duty that the Puritan drew from his sense of responsibility to God. How shall we build the better social order suited to a modern industrial age? We have a greater commonwealth to build than even the Puritans conceived, for we must build the parliament of man, the federation of the world, and labor to the end that the tragic violence of war may not engulf the world again. How can we do these greater tasks, unless we have a correspondingly greater conception and consciousness of God?

Fortunately that greater conception of God is already growing up about us. A new and nobler theism is on the way, and we shall not be left without God in the world. And the beauty of it is that this new sense of God comes in terms of the living present and speaks with an authority which cannot be flouted or ignored.

This, then, is the great bugle call of courage and good cheers which religion brings to men in this present hour. There is a God! And he is here—a living, inescapable, contemporary reality! He stands revealed not only in the vast cosmic order but is also manifest in economic laws, in social processes, in international relationships. When we discover that successful industry depends upon increasing purchasing power of the masses and that, without a prosperous agricultural population, manufacturing must lose half its market; when we find that production depends upon morale, and morale on a sense of fair treatment by labor and a sharing in the processes and results of production; when we awaken to the fact that the waste of war is inevitably greater than any gain and that violence always raises far more problems than it solves; when we learn how superficial are racial differences and how deeplying are the common human likenesses and universal problems; when we do these things we are discovering God!—Christian Advocate (N. Y.).

HOW FAR GOVERNMENT SUBSIDY?

Years ago the News and Observer of Raleigh, used reams of paper and pounds of printer's ink in its crusade against the ship subsidy advocated by some in an effort to develop our merchant marine. The editor of the Raleigh daily contended that this was vicious in principle and dangerous in practice. The government should not furnish money to the big shipping corporations by which they would make profits by the use of government money.

We recall that Senator F. M. Simmons as a young senator spoke in favor of subsidizing a mail line to South America by use of the profits made on the well developed and profitable mail lines to Europe. The senator contended then that this would be a wise expenditure of money that would make for the development of trade with the countries south of us. At that time some objected most strenuously to such a proposition as this, and they held that Simmons had gone over to the crowd that would profit by the use of government money. How times have changed! Behold this hour!

Now the government expends millions for subsidies of all kinds. We give them other names but the facts remain the same. The vast expenditures, though done in the name of the people and for human welfare, lead the thoughtful to fear the ultimate consequences. To kill pigs, to reduce the acres of wheat, and to limit the production of cotton at government expense may profit certain groups, but what about the eager cry of a needy and hungry world? Why not allow the farmers and the stock growers to produce all possible and then the government provide them a market by using our raw material to supply the needs of suffering humanity? If the government is going to feed the hungry and clothe the naked, let it be Christian enough and unselfish enough to feed the hungry and clothe the naked wherever found. Jesus multiplied and distributed bread, rather than limited its production. Why should not this great Christian nation do the same rather than spend millions to limit the production of bread and meat for the profit of certain groups?

This present reckless use of subsidies in a paternalistic government, breaking down private enterprise and individual initiative must inevitably result in the government taking over railroads, power companies, and the vast manufacturing interests. Some insist that the government will soon own the land and with this will go our freedom in this land of the Pilgrim's pride.

Along with this new order will come a vast increase in the number of individuals living off the government, many of whom are not worth what they cost. This disposition to have the federal government provide for us by direct gifts or by some sort of needless job should fill all citizens with alarm.

Not strange is it that the most thoughtful are anxious and many are convinced that much of the present subsidizing must be stopped. In the words of Senator Thomas P. Gore, "If I were called upon to identify the forgotten man, I should point out the taxpayer. I sometimes feel, I sometimes fear, that he is the forgotten man, bleeding at every pore."—North Carolina Christian Advocate.

OXFORD BIBLES for EVERY NEED

"The Oxford Bible is the Bible par excellence of the world"

THE HOME BIBLE

A Family Bible in Handy Size

An extra large type Oxford Text Bible, containing also, a family register and 12 beautifully colored maps. Size 9 x 3 1/2 inches.

Specimen of Type

16 The LORD is King for ever and ever: the heathen are perished out

- Nos. 01600 Superior Cloth, round corners and red edges $2.75
- 01603 French Morocco, limp, round corners, red under gold edges, head-band, book-mark $4.75

The JUNIOR'S Bible

Self-Pronouncing

With 4,000 Questions and Answers, carefully selected "Aids to Bible Study," 16 beautifully colored and 15 black full-page illustrations, 6 colored maps and a presentation page. Children may readily pronounce correctly difficult Scripture names, as this Bible is self-pronouncing. Size 7 x 4 3/4 x 1 1/4 inches.

Type in Junior's Bible
2 Take the sum of all the of the children of Israel, years old and upward, thro

- No. 1815 French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges, headbands and book-mark. Make some child happy with one of these fine Bibles $2.95

Child's ILLUSTRATED Bible

The beautifully colored illustrations in this new Bible are a delight to the children. It has clear, readable type and yet it measures only 5 1/4 x 3 3/4 inches.

Specimen of Type

a My soul length, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the LORD: my heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God.      zo Mercy and truth gathered; righteousness kissed each other.      zz Truth shall spring

- No. 02112. French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, gold edges $2.50

Pocket REFERENCE Bible

Has over 50,000 center column references. Measures only 6 1/4 x 4 1/2 inches. (A splendid gift for a young lady.)

Specimen of Type

9 Behold, O God our shield, and look upon the face of thine anointed.      10 For a day in thy courts is better

- No. 07583x French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges $3.25

Concordance Edition

Type and size as No. 07583x, but with a Concordance, subject index and dictionary of Scripture names. An excellent edition for students and Christian workers No. 03272x $5.00

OUR LEADER

Oxford Concordance Bible

Self-Pronouncing

This beautiful Oxford India paper edition is indeed the ideal Bible for the student, preacher and evangelist. Each proper name and difficult word is divided into syllables and accented, and though printed with large clear type, the volume measures only 8 1/2 x 5 1/2 x 1 1/4 inches.

Specimen of Type

8 9 10 Jō-hōi-ā-chin was 6 years old when he began t

- No. 03671x. Fine Grain Morocco leather, overlapping cover, leather lined to edge, silk round corners, red under edges, silk

A UNIQUE GIFT BIBLE

With Basket Weave Binding

The Antique brown calf leather binding has a basket-weave grain, and button clasp. Has overlapping cover, art silk lined, with red under gold edges. With references. Printed on Oxford India paper. Type as Pocket Reference Bible. $5.50

- No. 03255x
- As No. 03255x, with concordance. No. 03276x $6.50

Oxford TEACH

Have over 50,000 center column, 300 double-column pages of up-to-date helps, conveniently arranged in alphabetical order. Also 32 full-page illustrations, and an indexed atlas of the Bible with 15 beautifully colored maps of Bible lands.

Easy-to-Read-Edition

Size 7 1/4 x 5 x 1 1/2 inches

Specimen of Type

14 Like sheep they are laid in grave; death shall feed on th

- Nos. 04453. French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, round corners and red under gold edges. A durable and handsome Bible $4.35

Oxford India Paper Edition

Only one inch thick.

- 0773x. French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges, headbands and book-mark. A beautiful gift edition $7.00

RED LETTER Edition

Same size and type as style No. 04453, with same references and helps, but with all the words of Jesus Christ printed in red. White paper edition No. 05453. French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges $5.00

The Oxford imprint in a Bible guarantees satisfaction

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary

WANDERINGS AND WONDERINGS.

The little pocket dictionary on my desk defines "mission" as "errand." According to this missionaries might be described as errand boys. Many would admit the allegation—errand boys for the church. One of the glorious things about the church is that it is always sending people somewhere, and then telling them to achieve the impossible when they get there. Just now it looks as though the church were about to send its emissaries in a new and most interesting direction. No longer do we think of the Christianization of America as a matter of spreading out over the plains or pursuing the last settler into the mountains. The present problem is that of bringing the intelligence and the conscience of the church to bear upon the social and economic life of the nation. If ever there was a missionary task, this is one. When the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches set up the Council for Social Action at its recent meeting at Oberlin they were revealing the same spirit which led their forefathers to send out the first foreign missionaries from America in 1812. We need never despair of the church so long as it keeps on sending out people to do the impossible.

Like most public speakers, the writer sometimes says things on the spur of the moment which were not in his mind when he began to open his mouth. While the United States fleet was anchored in the Hudson River he had occasion to preach in a rather prominent Brooklyn church and happened to remark that the resources of our country could be put to better use than in the creation of "the sort of junk which is now clogging up the North River." A nice old lady congratulated him upon the remark; a pert young man objected to it. Since then he has been meditating upon how applicable the word "junk" is to a collection of battleships. He knows the navy well enough to realize that there is nothing rusty or ill kept about the machinery which it maintains. But the connection between junk and rust is only incidental. Junk is really anything which can no longer be used effectively for the purpose for which it was intended. How we answer the question, "What is a battleship good for?" depends upon many things. But the writer has a strong suspicion that coming generations will regard them as among the most extravagant and useless anachronisms in which supposedly intelligent nations ever indulged. Their one redeeming feature is that most of them land on the actual physical junk pile before they have a chance of serving for the purpose for which they were built—wholesale murder.

—By Editor Missionary Herald.

MISSIONARY OFFERINGS.

WEEK ENDING AUGUST 18, 1934.

Sunday Schools.

Previously acknowledged .....	$ 2,949.47
Wake Chapel, Fuquay Springs, N. C. ....	3.78
Mt. Zion, Mebane, N. C. ....	1.00
Zion, Sanford, N. C. ....	1.26
Union Grove, Seagrove, N. C. ....	.73
Elk Spur, Fancy Gap, Va. ....	1.25
Rocky Ford, Fancy Gap, Va. ....	1.75
Pleasant Grove, News Ferry, Va. ....	7.14
Big Oak, Biscoe, N. C. ....	.43
Leaksville, Luray, Va. ....	2.35
Henderson, N. C. ....	3.41
Turner's Chapel, Sanford, N. C. ....	1.18

First Christian, Portsmouth, Va. ....	8.23
Shiloh, Kemps Mill, N. C. ....	1.00
Union (Surry), Dendron, Va. ....	7.15
Mt. Auburn, Manson, N. C. ....	2.70
Ocean View, Va. ....	3.20
Ingram, Va. ....	5.00
Bethlehem, Broadway, Va. ....	6.01

Total .....$ 3,007.04

Individuals and Churches.

Previously acknowledged .....	$ 2,782.29
Mt. Zion, Mebane, N. C. ....	.60
Raleigh, N. C. ....	6.00
Liberty Springs, Holland, Va. ....	18.00
Ocean View, Va. ....	10.70

Total .....$ 2,817.59

Coin Card Offering.

Previously acknowledged .....	$ 105.01
C. E. Society, Mt. Zion Church, Mebane, N. C. ....	1.00

Total .....$ 106.01

Summary.

Previously acknowledged .....	$17,174.36
Total offerings, week ending Aug. 18, 1934	93.87

Total to date .....$17,268.23

J. O. ATKINSON, Sec'y.

MISSION STUDY BOOKS.

The theme for foreign mission study for the year 1934-35 is: "Japan." Below are given the books that are recommended for use in our Women's Societies for this year. Next week the books for home mission study will appear on this page.

Each Society should secure and study at least one book on foreign missions and one on home missions. That is certainly very little for our women to do if we are really interested in missions or ever wish to be. I hope that each society will encourage much more reading than this during the year. Books can be secured from various sources about which I will tell later. It would be a fine thing if each woman in each of our societies would set as her personal goal the reading of at least five mission books per year. Will you do it? Life will be enriched by that much.

Women's Books.

"SUZUKI LOOKS AT JAPAN." By Willis C. Lamott, missionary to Japan.

Suzuki is a typical well-educated, devoted Japanese Christian. Through his eyes we see the complex life of contemporary Japan. A book of altogether unusual literary charm, it is at the same time a vigorous interpretation of the many-sided work of church and mission in Japan today. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 60 cents.

"A COURSE FOR LEADERS OF ADULT GROUPS STUDYING JAPAN." By T. P. H. Sailer. Paper, 25 cents.

"JAPANESE WOMEN SPEAK." By Michi Kawai and Ochimi Kubushiro.

This book emphasizes the work which has been accomplished for the Christian women of Japan and shows how they are carrying on in winning Japan for Christ. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

"CHRIST AND JAPAN." By Toyohiko Kagawa. Kagawa is universally accepted as one of the outstanding Christian social leaders of our time. In this striking new book he discusses intimately the problems of his people. He throws a strong light on Japanese character, its strength and weakness, and speaks boldly on Japan's international problems. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

For Young People and Seniors.

"WORLD TIDES IN THE FAR EAST." By Basil Mathews.

A stimulating book for more mature-minded groups of young people and adults desiring a study of the whole Far Eastern situation from a Christian point of view. Invaluable for background use in all age groups. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 60 cents.

"TYPHOON DAYS IN JAPAN." By Robert S. and Evelyn M. Spencer, missionaries in Japan.

A book planned especially for youth of senior high school age. The authors reveal with sympathetic insight the ordeal through which Japan is passing. A book that will deepen understanding between the youth of Japan and the youth of America. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 60 cents.

"A COURSE ON JAPAN."

Study, discussion and activities for young people and seniors. Based on several new books. Paper 25 cents.

For Junior High School Students.

"JAPAN AND HER PEOPLE." By Ethel M. Hughes. Stories of a Japanese family and picturesque descriptions of everyday life and of Christian missions in their country. A reading book. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 60 cents.

"A COURSE ON JAPAN." By Nona M. Diehl. Teacher's book. Paper, 25 cents.

For Juniors.

"JAPANESE HERE AND THERE." By Margaret E. Forsyth and Ursul Moran.

A teacher's book which includes suggested activities. Board, $1.00; paper, 75 cents.

"FRIENDS IN NIPPON." By Dorothy F. McConnell.

A book of stories for Junior reading. Cloth, 75 cents; paper, 50 cents.

All the above book may be ordered at the prices listed from the Congregational Education Society, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Massachusetts.

JEWELL TRUITT VANCLEAVE.

MOULDING AFRICAN WOMANHOOD.

By MISS D. P. CUSHING, News Editor.

"Like a stone falling down from above and crushing us" is the way the Zulu church fathers felt when they heard that Inanda Seminary, South Africa, might have to be closed on account of the reduction in income. "This school," they declared, "is the great symbol of the American Board in South Africa for the enlightenment of the Bantu women." Miss Margaret E. Walbridge, head of Inanda Seminary, was described by Professor Mabel Carney of Columbia University, who visited Inanda, as a "born educator." She received her training as a specialist in Home Economics at the Kansas State Agricultural College. Five years of teaching and a course at the Kennedy School of Missions fitted her for her work in Africa to which she went in 1921.

Back in 1869 Inanda Seminary was founded by the late Mrs. Mary (Mother) Kelly Edwards. It now trains more Zulu girls than any other school in South Africa, and its influence is steady.

ily widening. It gives practical training in household duties, sewing, industrial arts, and agriculture. District nursing, health lectures and now annual agricultural fairs are sponsored by the school. It by no means neglects the religious side and the girls go out to carry on Sunday School work throughout the entire community.

"To the Zulus, religion seems such a natural thing that they do not understand why anyone should hesitate to mention it," says Miss Walbridge. Among Inanda's pupils are a chief's daughters. This chief brought his daughters stating that he "wished them to be taught everything, especially the word of God."

Inanda Seminary has received much commendation from the press of South Africa. In speaking of Miss Walbridge the Natal Daily Advertiser said, "All mission work is social work in the sense that it is laying the foundation for a new social structure, and it is impossible to speak too highly in regard to the work being so quietly carried on at Inanda by this devoted American woman." Much space and favorable write-ups are given each year to the agricultural show planned and put on by Inanda.

Those who were privileged to hear and meet Miss Violet Sibusisiwe Makanya when she was in this country a few years ago, will recall that she is a graduate of Inanda Seminary, as was her mother before her.

Many of the girls from Inanda go on to higher educational institutions or out to teach small Bush schools. Concerning one such girl a government Inspector of Schools with the reputation of being one of the most critical of the younger officials, wrote Miss Walbridge commending the work of this former student. "It is a pleasure to come across such a promising teacher, faithfully and humbly at work in a remote and rather difficult area," he said.

OUR HILLY GRISSOMS.

When our Grissoms first came over this winding mountain trail, little did I know how well the title I gave them fit. Their brave smiles as they faced a new life at Elk Spur, gave me faith in them and I have felt they were strong like hills. But as I have watched their efforts I have found them to be more than I had expected.

We take up lots of time and space advertising things that are worth little or nothing to humanity, so why can I not say a few things about the life and works of a good man and woman? Murderers are given the front page of our papers. Why not a preacher?

I have seen beneath the surface, I have seen by the lives of our Grissoms that there is a soul beneath that is not small. No amount of education, or money, or position can make great the man whose soul is small. Nor can the lack of such things spoil or make narrow a man with a heart or soul like that of our Grissoms. On a field like this among the rough and rugged hills and more or less rough and rugged peoples, one meets mostly failures as one strives to put forward the work here. I have looked on for all these years and tried to find a preacher who could meet defeat with a smile. But I am not going to tell you now that I have found one. Oh, no. I have found more—a man whose heart is burdened and face saddened for our folks here. Even Christ groaned in the spirit at times. So do His followers. And since I have looked deep into the hearts of our Grissoms, seen them grieved because of the failures of their people here, I realize that their sad faces mean more to me than a smile, and I also realize that here are two souls that are not small.

Our Grissoms look at all things honestly and sincerely to help all who need them. They are certainly not preaching for money for they do not get it. There are men who can yell louder from the pulpit, there may be those who are more widely known, and there are certainly those who are getting more money; but I do not believe there is a man preaching anywhere who is more sincere, or has a deeper, stronger love for his fellow-man than our Grissoms. He believes in his folks here and their failures are his failures. He strives to find work for the man who staggers down a mountain trail, full of liquor. He tries to make men out of the wrecks he meets. Many times he tries and fails—no, it is not Grissom who fails, but others. Many do not know to appreciate what he tries to do for them. But even these failures hold a place in the heart of our preacher. He has grown to love the man who goes the downward road, and realizes a soul is sinking. He even says he will not leave here for he is at home among the hills. He will stay and love the lost ever. I know now that here is a soul that is not small. Many there are who like to fill the big places, do the big job, and make big money, but to turn from these and take a place like this field, that takes a man. Our Grissoms have calls from other places but they stay here. That fact alone proves to me that here is one man and woman who take their calling seriously. They soon go back to school now but they will hold this field. May God bless them.

The "Skyline Drive," this great new road that is to cross the county, is to come this way. It will follow the crest of our mountains near the Elk Spur Church. The making of this road should mean a lot to Carroll County, but I don't think it will. All work and government relief work here is in the hands of politicians and the most the government has done here is feed these officers. It looks as if the day is here when that—"government of the people, and by the people" is merely a joke.

However, the Lord has blessed us here this season. All farms near here have lovely crops. We have had plenty of rain and no storms so far. Hills and velleys are covered with grass and grain. The Lord will provide. Plenty of cattle and buckwheat almost everywhere here. That means we can have pancakes and butter. Cattle will not sell at all any more but no depression can keep us from getting a good lot of nourishment from our butter and milk among the hills.

Soon now our hills will be turned inside out. The coming of the new road means the rugged beauty of the mountains must give way to man-made beauty. It may be foolish but I feel a little sad when I think of the day when the rugged winding trails must have their beauty marred and the romantic views wrecked by the hand of unappreciative man. Only one sweet thought comes to me. The coming of the new road means the opening up of our hills, beautiful hills, to a tired and sin-cursed world. Many a weary soul will come to find peace and rest among the hills. And surely there will be some who will get a broader vision from these mountains—a greater vision of the lost souls of men and a greater desire to save them. So I want to live to see these strangers come. Yes, I want to see them behold the serene beauty of our hills, breathe the pure air, and drink of the crystal waters of a mountain spring. Oh, surely, all this can calm the ruffled spirit, can cool an aching brow, can give a higher vision, can speak peace to the souls of all. It would be selfish to want to shut them out. Our hills seem to say "Come weary souls." Among these laurel-clad peaks of old Virginia there is room for you.

VICTORIA OF THE HILLS.

OUR SUMMER SCHOOL AND MISSIONS.

Merom, Ind., Aug. 5th.

Dear J. O.:

This is just to tell you that we had a delightful summer school with an enrollment of sixty-three. I had the mission study class which was supposed to be conducted according to the rules of the game. It happened that the text-book I chose was not among the accredited books. But generally, we used it to find a point of departure and departed. The rest of it was largely Woodworth, who usually found plenty to laugh at among his mission experiences. But the members of the class expressed themselves as greatly delighted and helped by the study. I suppose it is a rare case when a brother or sister sees that the great objective of the church is to make Jesus known to all men in all lands. I think some of us used to imagine that if we paid the preacher and had a revival meeting once a year to gain new converts, our whole duty was done. And I reckon there are some who think so still.

Don't you think some people ought to have Gen. 1:27 changed? Then it would read "And God made man in the image of a monkey. In the image of monkeys made He them: male and female cheated He them."

I one time listened to a political speech by Senator Hale, of Maine, who was trying to show up the folly of the party he did not belong to, and this was the way he did it. "Take the craziest man that ever lived and put him in the darkest dungeon that was ever made and let him dream the wildest dream that was ever dreamed and he could not dream anything more foolish."

Huxley said the difference between a man and a monkey is practically infinite. How we have grown!

A. O. WOODWORTH.

SHOW US YOUR MAN.

(Continued from page 5.)

have failed. We have not shown the courage we should.

"A nation's but a castle in the air,
A sham solidity that soon or late
Dissolves thru' some defect that's everywhere:
Walls, columns, dome and spire disintegrate
The weaknesses of Private character
Support each other but bring down the state:
And ours will fall through some specific vice.
What if that vice were moral cowardice?"

Where is our source of strength? Here is your man, the man, Christ Jesus. A weary world cries, "Show us your man." Let the church exalt Her Master and reply, "Here is your man!" Here is your hope! Here is your dynamic. Here is the end and aim of the cosmic process, "the complete humanity, the perfect man that is to be." His life is the center of reference for the new social integration of a divided world. His teachings furnish the charter for a re-built world. His setting in a small nation was His opportunity to spiritualize the false ambitions of a petty Jewish state, and tell his people to remember that the field was the world. His cross depicts the tension men must experience if they would pay the price for their dreams. It is a fresh experience of the living Christ that we need. We have seen the picture of a spiritualized society. We have formulated our program to realize the ideal. We have confessed we need persons. Now we pray for power to produce the persons to work the plans.

Whatever else may come from our great Council, may there issue from it a renewed devotion on the part of our individual members, a deeper experience of the life of "Man's best man," that new power may come to an expectant church. Then when our age calls, "Show us your man!" we may answer with true devotion and high courage, "Here am I."

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

YOUTH FELLOWSHIP IN THE VALLEY.

At a recent Youth Fellowship meeting in the Valley the message, "The Challenge Life Offers Youth," by Dr. L. E. Smith, president of Elon College, greatly inspired the young people. This group of youth went from the meeting with a sincere determination to accept these challenges.

Dr. Smith installed the new officers who are as follows:

President, Charlotte Hillyard; Vice-President, K. B. Hook; Secretary-Treasurer, Margaret Earp; Assistant Secretary-Treasurer, Thelma Morris; Superintendent of Devotional Life, Billy Andes; Superintendent of Leadership Training, Irene Hensley; Superintendent of Publications, Kathleen Oates; Pastor Counselors, Rev. A. W. Andes and Rev. B. J. Earp.

Recreation found a place on the program to which the young people heartily responded.

During the conference Billy Andes was licensed to preach, the service being conducted by his father, Rev. A. W. Andes. The young people became deeply impressed and began to realize that they were the future workers who must carry on.

The following resolutions were adopted:

The condition of the world at large today challenges the youth of our land as never before to stand firm for higher ideals, cleaner lives, and a more consecrated service to God. The turmoil, the strife, the unrest, and yea, the bloodshed are indications that people have in a manner forgotten God. Therefore, it behooves the youth to put their trust fully in God, who alone can say to the troubling waters "Peace be still," and pray earnestly that somehow He will speak that word before it is too late.

The tragedy of the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment can be seen on every hand. Statistics show that highway fatalities have increased twenty per cent, drunken driving forty two per cent, and a rise of sixty per cent in the number of pedestrians hit by automobiles. Someone is responsible for this.

We urge the young people to share, if not lead, in a movement to rid us of this curse; first, by abstaining from its use, since its effects on the body, personality, and social relations are so inevitable; second, by arousing public sentiment against liquor and its conspicuous advertising.

We commend the action that is being taken by the League of Decency to destroy those motion pictures which have an evil influence in human lives.

We urge that young people become "doers"—not just "hearers" and "thinkers" in the service of God.

We urge that each young Christian try to win at least one other young person to Christ during the coming year.

We urge the young people to rally to the support of Elon in every possible way.

MARGARET J. EARP.

WHAT DO WE MEAN BY A NEW HOME?

How often today we hear young people say, "Oh, at last I am free—free from all the old home shackles." When questioned about this conduct they reply, "Don't you know why? At home we get no encouragement, just nagging, and we must be where there is art and culture." A recent writer stated, "Our children are born in hospitals, go to public schools, find amusement in public places, and finally come to have their funerals from a funeral home. It is only at brief moments that they stop by home—the place where their hat hangs." Is this what we want? No! Too often we are being shocked by the divorce of some of our friends and the agonized prayers of mothers and fathers who are wondering about their children. Our government after much study and many sittings have blamed crime waves on lack of training in the home.

In later days we have heard so much of New Deals of all kinds. Our government's plan was tried for a year and called the NRA. Its theme was "We do our part." There must be found some conscientious young men and women ready to take home as their career and do their part. Their code would have Christ as the backbone. In this home there would be:

Care—careful of the way we treat our home, our parents, our brothers and sisters, careful of the way we treat our minds and bodies, and careful to be discreet and Christian always.

Happiness—The family gathering will bring happiness by being frank and sharing problems. Since the days of depression we have not had as much spending money for recreation. This is the Home's golden opportunity. We all have heard that world peace and racial relations must be taught at home. Here is the chance: Father and son may work in their shop making toys for foreign children, while mother and daughter sew for them; brother and sister may have debates on pressing national and international affairs; an orchestra composed of the family members may be organized and other nationalities studied by the lives of different foreign composers. This will not only teach something worthwhile, but will bring fellowship to the family.

An old American custom is gradually dying out—that of family worship. The father, mother, or other members of the family may read the Bible and pray, all may sing a hymn while another plays the piano, or varied programs of worship may be held. This not only enriches the spiritual fellowship, but tends to a better understanding of each other's soul.

Respect—Each person will take as his or her solemn duty to respect the rights of the others, respect older persons and visitors in the home, respect parent's desires, have self-respect, and reverent respect for Christ.

Interest—Interest should manifest itself, first, in the home itself more beautiful, second, in all its members and activities, even if listening to baby brother learn to play the saxophone gives you the "jitters," and third, in the community of which the home is a part, the church and Christ and His teachings.

Sympathy—The members must sympathize with one another, with the home activities, and with the members own ideas and ideals. Sympathy of this kind leads to a better understanding of home, church and community.

Trust—"Because the members love one another, respect one another, are interested in one another, and because all strive to be honorable they will trust one another." The parents will not fear to let the children go into the world, for they know they can trust them. The children need not fear, for they know their parents will make the right decision. The family will trust their God and increase their faith. They will believe in their home!

By adding its own individual notes and exalting Christ the New Home will have gone far in the making.

JUNE JOY HYATTE.

HONESTY.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR SEPT. 2, 1934.
Luke 19:8.

Daily readings for this week:

Mon., Aug. 27.—Honesty in business. Prov. 11:1-5.
Tue., Aug. 28.—Honesty in getting things. Rom. 12:17.

Wed., Aug. 29.—Mental honesty. Phil. 4:8.
Thurs., Aug. 30.—Honest politics. I Sam. 12:1-4.
Fri., Aug. 31.—Honest in office. Dan. 6:4.
Sat., Sept. 1.—Honesty rewarded. Luke 19:12-17.
Sun., Sept. 2.—Honesty. Luke 19:8.

Program.

Prelude: "Open Mine Eyes That I May See."
Hymn: "Truehearted, Wholehearted, Faithful and Loyal."

Prayer.

Scripture: Luke 19:1-10.

Hymn: "I Would be True."

Speaker: "Can we be Honest in Business and in Social Life?"

Discussion.

Hymn: "In the Hour of Trial."

Benediction:

"Peace be within these walls.
Peace to young and old who enter here.
Hasten the time, O Lord God, when not alone the holy places
Where thine honor dwelleth,
But the whole earth shall be full of Thy glory. Amen."

This is the first of a series of four meetings centering around the thought of "Basic Virtues." Those arranging the topics have assumed that a discussion of four virtues naturally follow the topic, "What Are the Qualities of a True Gentleman or Lady?" They are honesty, courage, courtesy and good will.

It is not always easy to be honest, but it is always right. The people who stood about Zaccheus when he offered to do the honorable thing despised him as a hated publican—a detested tax gatherer. But he looked into the face of Jesus and in spite of the scowling crowd he said: "I'll give half of my fortune to the poor. If any man among these can prove that I have wronged him or taken anything from him that was not right and just I will give him four times as much back again." And Jesus, himself, was struck with the outright generosity and honesty of this man and said, "Today has salvation come to this house."

It is refreshing to study the life of Jesus and see how he clear-eyed and honestly faced every person and every issue he met. His honesty did not waver a hair when he faced enemies who had the power of life and death over Him. Like His great follower, Luther, many centuries later, honesty and courage were not things put on but were parts of His very being and he could say, "Here I stand, so help me God, I can do no other." It was so much a part of him that he had to do the right and honest thing.

We all remember the ancient saying that "An honest man is the noblest work of God." Down deep in our hearts we all honor and respect one who is absolutely honest even when we do not dare to be. Did you ever know anyone who would tell you with admiration about the character of "Honest Abe" Lincoln but when it came to being as honest himself the record is not so clear? Here is the creed of honesty that Lincoln adopted and by which he squared his life:

"I am not bound to win, but I am bound to be true.
I am not bound to succeed, but I am bound to live up to the light I have.
I must stand with anybody that stands right;
Stand with him while he is right,
And part with him when he goes wrong."

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

HOSEA PREACHES GOD'S LOVE.

LESSON IX—AUGUST 26, 1934.

GOLDEN TEXT: For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life.—John 3:16.

LESSON: Hosea, Chapters 6, 11, 14.

Hosea was one of the most passionate preachers of the Old Testament. Out of a great experience of God and with his own experience as a background for his message, he preached with a passion and a yearning that grips the heart and appeals to the conscience. The book makes good reading and has a very practical application to our day and time.

Hosea's message came in large measure out of his own experience. He married a woman whom he loved dearly, but who proved false to him and left him for other lovers. She went from bad to worse, until finally she was about to be sold as a slave. Hosea still loved her and bought her and took her back to his home. His love for her, in spite of her waywardness and wantonness, was akin even to something divine.

Now as Hosea thought over his own experience, he saw in it a parallel to God's experience with Israel. In beautiful language he recounts how God led Israel like as a father leads a child, how he had been patient with Israel, how He had lavished his love upon Israel. And yet Israel had rejected God, had made alliances with other nations, had turned to the worship of other gods. And, thought Hosea, if I with my human limitations love my prostitute wife in spite of her ingratitude and her sin, how much more must God love Israel, and how He must yearn for Israel to turn back to Him to receive His gracious pardon and His forgiveness. This in brief is the message of Hosea. There is a passion throbbing in the book that stirs the heart.

Hosea dealt very frankly and fearlessly with the sins of Israel. Drunkenness, among the high and the low, was rampant in the land; injustice ground down the lower classes; the rich lived in luxury; worship had become formal; even the priests had compromised their ideals and were living unspiritual and even immoral lives. Israel had turned from loyalty to the God of Israel to foreign alliances, the one group seeking an alliance with Egypt, the other an alliance with Assyria. The times were out of joint, and Hosea said so.

But the central message of Hosea was not denunciation. Hosea preached God's love. He passionately asserted that although Israel had sinned against God, and although they had forsaken him, God still loved them, loved them with a tender, constant love. And Hosea asserted that if Israel would forsake his sins, if he would return again to God that He would heal his backsliding. All this is put in a striking way in the fourteenth chapter of Hosea in the form of a dialogue between God and Israel.

"O Israel, return unto the Lord, thy God; for thou hast fallen by thine iniquity. Take with you words, and turn to the Lord: say unto Him, Take away all iniquity, and receive us graciously; so will we render the calves of our lips." At the heart of Israel's national trouble lay sin. If Israel turned from his sin, if he brought to Jehovah, not slain animals, but true confession, then Jehovah would graciously receive them. It was an early discovery of the great truth, if we confess our sins he is faithful and righteous to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.

"Asshur shall not save us; we will not ride upon horses"—our hope and our strength does not lie in foreign alliances with Assyria and with Egypt, but in integrity of character and in righteousness of conduct.

"I will heal their backsliding"—sin is a disease. There is healing with the Lord. "I will love them freely"—in spite of their sins, yea even because of their sins, I love them freely, says Jehovah.

"His branches shall be spread, his beauty shall be as the olive tree, and his smell as Lebanon"—figurative language to describe the beauty and the fruitage of the individual or the nation who has the spirit of the Lord in his heart.

"For the ways of the Lord are right, and the just shall walk in them." We do not always think so. Like children who do not understand their parents dealings with them, the ways of the Lord seem both strange and hard. But the ways of the Lord are right. He makes all things to work together for good to them that love him, and in the long run his ways are paths of pleasantness and peace.

ONE TEST OF CONSECRATION.

When Richard Cecil wished to teach his little daughter the meaning of consecration and faith, he took her on his knee in his library one day and asked her if she loved him well enough to give up a little necklace of glass beads which she greatly prized. She looked up with tears in her face, and sobbed, "Yes, Papa." "Well," said he, "you take them off and throw them into the grate." With heaving bosom and hesitating steps, she made the great renunciation and then flew back to his arms and sobbed herself to rest, while he patted the little golden head and gently said, "Now Papa knows you love him."

Nothing more was said for several days, but on her birthday her father called her to him, and opening a little casket, handed to her a chain of real pearls and asked her to put them on her neck as the gift of his love to her. She looked him full in the face and then a great light broke upon her countenance, and again throwing herself on his bosom, she cried, "Oh, Papa, forgive me; I did not understand, but I do now."

That is the consecration which God loves and loves to recompense. Our sacrifices are real investments that will bring us infinite returns in that day when He shall give us diadems for tears, cities for pounds, and ten thousand per cent compound interest on all we have laid down for His sake.—Covenant Companion.

IF CHRIST SHOULD COME.

If Christ should wander down our street
What kind of welcome would He meet?
He comes, in truth, each day, each hour,
And hopes to find a friend to greet.

If Christ should pause to be our guest
Should we know joy and peace and rest?
He passes by with deep regret
Because we always seem so pressed.

If He our words should apprehend
Would they our inmost selves commend
For fellowship and gratitude?
Good Lord, to each Thy mercy lend.

Anne Reiley Nesom in Friends Intelligencer.

One may live as a conqueror, a king, or a magistrate; but he must die as a man.—Daniel Webster.

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.

Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.

These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. It combines with the Concordance, Subject-Index, Scripture Proper Names, etc. The 12 Maps have been carefully revised and are beautifully colored. In making orders, give the number and price.

135—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold. $3.00

India Paper Edition, Only 16-16 of an inch thick.

. 133X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold, $4.00

SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS' BIBLE.

Especially made up for gift or reward Bibles for Sunday School scholars, containing a special series of very practical and useful helps and Bible Questions and Answers, etc. Printed on fine white Bible paper; ruby type; pocket size, 3 3/4 x 5 3/8 inches, and 1 inch thick, with 31 full-page illustrations in sepia. All bindings are black. Ruby Type, Size 3 3/4 x 5 3/8 Inches, and 1 Inch Thick.

65—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold; 6 colored maps .....$2.50

AUTHORIZED VERSION.

RED LETTER TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Brevier Type (8 vo.), Self-Pronouncing, Size 5 3/4 x 8 1/2 Inches and 1 3/8 Inches Thick.

Containing the Bible, with full references. The words of Christ in the New Testament are printed in red; other parts of the book are printed in black. With Concise Bible Dictionary, combined Concordance, and 12 indexed maps.

7852—Genuine Leather, Lavant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold .....$4.75

RED-LETTER EDITION.

With All the Words of Christ in the New Testament Printed in Red.

1282—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit round corners, red under gold edges, register and headbands; title stamped on side and back in pure gold .....$3.25

60—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, Sunday School Scholars' Bible, stamped in pure gold on cover, no illustrations; special book for Sunday Schools .....95c

Any of the above Bibles sent postpaid. Address
THE CHRISTIAN SUN
1536 East Broad Street Richmond, Virginia

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy

MONDAY.

"INTERIOR DECORATING."

"Cleanse first what is within the cup and platter, that the outside of them may be clean also."—Matt. 23:26.

"Pure religion and undefiled before God is to visit the fatherless and widows in their distresses and to keep thyself unspotted from the world."—Jas. 1:27.

"Homes need renovating and doing over inside and so does many a soul." This is one of several suggestions gathered from a motion picture we saw.

"And so does many a soul."—No one escapes. No house escapes deterioration due to use and contact with life. So true is this that upkeep is a big item to its owner. In addition to upkeep everyone is aesthetic enough, more or less, to make the interior of his house cozy, comfortable and pretty, at least to the extent of his taste and ability. This is the soul of the home and it all comes from the inside.

The aesthetic, love, joy, peace, and happiness are all inner power of us; but they are not perpetual. They are perpetuated only by certain upkeep by the Master of souls. This is an upkeep job. It is a daily task. The rub with the outside world leaves spots on the outside of us and a thousand eventualities inside of us smudge or fade our inner man. We need daily cleansing and decorating. It is one of the designs of daily worship, that we bring to Jesus our souls, "that spite the menace of years." we may be washed of spot and kept beyond the place of sin and tears.

Prayer—Dear Father, we cast our lot with Thee for the day. Be Thou our aid and keep us from sin. In Jesus' name we ask it.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"THE MOST IMPORTANT THING."

"It doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that, when He shall appear, we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is."—15 No. 3:2.

"The nature of a thing lies in its end. What a thing is when it is developed is what it is, whether we speak of a horse or a man."—Aristotle.

So, man's real self lies in what he is to be; therefore the most important thing to him is to have some notion of his destiny and of Him who controls it.

Prayer—Dear Father, as the flowers follow the sun, and silently hold up their petals to be tinted by its shining rays, so must we, if we would know Thee. So would we this day, and forever have Thy likeness.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"A FIVE DOLLAR MURDERER."

"Then Saul said to his armorbearer, 'Draw thy sword and thrust me through therewith' . . . but his armorbearer would not."—1 Sam. 31:1-6.

A merchant in Hungary wished to die so that his family might collect his life insurance, and hired an eighteen-year-old boy to shoot him, paying the boy five dollars plus his gold watch. The merchant was able to make a confession before his death, and the boy was arrested.

How cheaply some men hold life! And our children are taking their cue from them. At the movies they broadcast it, and these children witness it and come to think that way. There never was a time when there was a greater need for faith in God, faithfulness in teaching His life, and knowing His commandment, "Thou shalt not kill."

This command relates not only to killing one another, but it means that we should hold our own lives sacred as well. If we undermine our health we are killing ourselves. Immorality is a desecration of life. Dishonesty is destructive to righteousness and happiness. Unkindness is death to friendships; hatred is death to love; malice is death to brotherliness, and so on.

Prayer—Lord of life! It is a great gift we have received at Thy hands. May we cherish it as Thine and not ours. And when the time comes to die, may we surrender it again to Thee with a conscience void of offense.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"GROWING STRONG."

"Grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ."—II Peter 3:18.

We are told that Heaven's record is written in characters of love; that we are to be recognized in heaven by how much we love. That that character is achieved by rendering service to humanity in the humblest surroundings. Jesus won this way. It was in silence, in obscure and unnoticed service, in uneventful years, in unrecorded duties, that Jesus, the Son of God, grew and waxed strong.

Prayer—Our Father, we pray that we may live the true life like Christ died, for we know that none else is true. Give unto us that vision of our Lord and Saviour that we may live today and each day, the Christ life. In His name we ask it.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"THINGS THAT CANNOT BE SHAKEN."

"It doth not yet appear what we shall be but we know that when He shall appear we shall be like Him."—I Jno. 3:2.

It has been said that our existence is "a vestibule of the grand court of life," an introduction to what is to follow, to that immeasurable glory of the true life beyond. Destined for immortality, as we are, we find that all that is not eternal is too short, and all that is not infinite is too small. Thus, he who would reach the Father's goal must avoid tying to the transient things and the things that can be shaken and carried away, and seek to tie to the things that abide forever,—the eternal things.

Prayer—Our Father, teach us the way of goodness, love, wisdom and power, the things of Thy kingdom that are the eternal foundations and can be trusted forever.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"TOO MUCH TURNING OFF."

"I believe; help Thou mine unbelief."—Mark 9:14-27.

The gardener opened the valve down cellar which let water into the pipe leading to the garden; but the valve leaked so badly that he had to turn it off again. Soon it was discovered that water had ceased to flow in the kitchen and the bathrooms. We concluded that the city had turned it off, but a telephone inquiry told us that that was not the case. Then we got a plumber to come and he discovered that the gardener, in turning off the valve of the garden pipe, had made a thorough job of it by turning also the valve next to it which controlled the water pipes indoors.

The incident reminded us of our experience in seeking to conquer some vice or avoid some fault. We are quite likely at the same time to turn away from the corresponding virtue. For example, we have come to despise superstition, and in conquering that evil we destroy our faith also.

Prayer—Guide us in our reforms, O Master Ruler of the world! May our hatred of evil not lead us to hate Thy good. As we turn from Satan may we turn to Thee.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

SUNDAY.

"LIVING DOWN CELLAR."

"Over the cellars of oil was Joash."—I Chron. 27:25-31.

Until very recent times we have found no use for cellars except for the storage of coal, ashes, the furnace, and a disheartening array of rubbish. Now that dustless furnaces, using oil or gas, are coming into use, we are learning that cellars can become very delightful living rooms—gymnasiums, play-rooms, workshops, even comfortable sitting rooms and quiet waiting rooms.

We have been wasting, all these ages, an entire floor of every house. And in similar fashion we have been wasting what amounts to an entire floor of every average life. We advise people to live in the upper stories of their lives nearer the sky. We might also advise them to live in the lower stories, at the foundation of things, next to the fundamentals of faith.

The essential thing is to occupy all our house of life, to leave no waste room, no space for rubbish to heap up and for the air to grow foul.

Prayer—Our Master, help us to clear the rubbish out of our lives. May we throw all parts of them open to the day. May we utilize all our powers. May we use for Thee all that Thou hast given us. In Thy name.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

We are told in Proverbs that "a soft answer turneth away wrath, but grievous words stir up anger." There is no weakness to which the average person is more prone than that of "touchiness." How quick we are to take offense; how quick we are to give a hot answer to those who dare criticize us. How un-Christlike such conduct is! It brings shame on our profession, and neutralizes many of our most earnest efforts to advance the Kingdom. Others remember the words that we speak on such occasions long after we have forgotten them. Let us cultivate the grace of giving a "soft answer" when men intentionally or unintentionally try our patience. It will work wonders. It will unhorse many a warrior. It will put to shame many a boorish and ill-mannered foe. It will give us a new self-respect. It will give us a new influence as servants of Christ. Nothing should humiliate the child of God more quickly than the possession of a peppery disposition. Let us be heartily ashamed of our quick and flashing tempers. Let us strive to be like our Master, who when He was reviled, reviled not again. Let us remember what the Bible says of the word fitly spoken.—Clipped.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

THE PRAISE OF MEN.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT.

"For they loved the praise of men, more than the praise of God."—John 12:43.

We have been following Jesus through John's great twelfth chapter. We noticed first the "much people" of the twelfth verse; then the "Greeks" of the twentieth verse; then the prayer of the twenty-seventh verse; then the "voice" of the twenty-eighth verse; and now the "praise" of the forty-third verse. The final one of these messages brings us to the concluding message on Jesus' last day of public ministry. He cries aloud—Jesus could talk above a whisper when he wanted to—he cried aloud and said, "He that believeth on me, believeth not on me, but on Him that sent me. And he that seeth me, seeth Him that sent me. I am come a light unto the world."

No more need the multitudes guess at Jesus' person or mission. "He that believeth on me, believeth on Him that sent me." "I am come a light unto the world." What more majestic claims could he make for himself? And he did not whisper it. Standing amidst the multitudes of "much people" that thronged Jerusalem at this season he cried aloud: "I am the light of the world." Not a light but the light; not of Palestine only, but of the wide reaches of all continents as well; not for his day, but for our day also, and every day, unto the end of the ages. What a claim! What a cry! What a Christ! And he concludes this climax with: "And I know that His (the Father's) commandment is everlasting life." In a day of much moralizing, and more philosophizing, the "I know" of Jesus Christ is quite comforting to those who have lain their lives in his hands, and who seek His will to do.

"Nevertheless among the chief rulers also many believed on Him; but because of the Pharisees they did not confess Him, lest they should be put out of the synagogue: for they loved the praise of men, more than the praise of God."

Who were these people who loved the praise of men more than the praise of God? They were not "the sinners" of that day. And what is more to our shame they would not probably pass for sinners in our day. They were of the class that "belonged." Not those who were unacquainted with the program of God; the laws of Moses; and the words of the prophets. They belonged in an organized religion of that day. They were the "church folks" of their time.

And not only were they of the synagogue of their day, but very jealous of their place in that synagogue. Whatever else happened they did not want to be turned out. It was the most popular movement of their country and time. They kept its laws; and paid its expenses; and sought to save their souls with its sanctities. They were the "good," and "respectable" people of their day.

They were more than that. They were rulers of their people. High places of trust and honor had come to them. And not only were they rulers, but they were chief rulers; and should have had the courage of their convictions. They were not, underlings, nor weaklings—or should not have been—they were the chief rulers of their people, and the chief devotees of their synagogues.

And much more still: They believed on Jesus! They could not look on all the things Jesus was being, and doing, openly and everywhere, without knowing that he was what he was. His life was a plain, open, and convincing book. They saw his labors, they witnessed his love, and they knew that it was the Christ. It was too late to doubt that. He had manifested it so completely, and so often—and never failing in a single instance to make good that manifestation. Yes, they were convinced. They were believers on Jesus Christ.

Now is not that a catalogue? Members of the synagogue; men of wealth and influence, rulers of the people, believers on Jesus; and yet they missed the joy and happiness of giving their lives to the greatest movement ever instituted in the earth!

Why did not they confess their faith in Christ? "They loved the praise of men, more than the praise of God." I could wish that it had not been necessary to add the last half of that sentence. For now it stands to their immortal shame that they "loved the praise of God," but they "loved the praise of men more." Why will anyone place above the praise and approval of almighty God the praise of men? But let us not talk too piously! Who of us is not guilty? Do not we bow, and bend, and turn, and spend to keep the praise of men? Be it to our shame, we too often do.

One of my best friends in the ministry, and one who has now gone on to glory, for he was indeed a faithful and devout soldier of the cross; was so guiltless (?) of seeking the praise of men, rather than the praise of God that he used to boast how men praised him for his courage of his convictions. And so heated and tenacious was his courage of his conviction until there were those who suspected that even he delighted in the praise of men! When we hear a man begin to boast of his guiltlessness of seeking the praise of men, and to lean a bit backward, we may feel afraid that he "takes a pride" in the position that he holds in the minds of his brethren. This desiring "the praise of men" has been styled, "the last infirmity of noble souls."

And so these chief rulers who believed on Jesus missed him not because of their lack of opportunity, nor their lack of position and influence, nor because of their lack of understanding, nor because of their lack of self-denial in the matter of outward obedience and conformity to the rules and regulations; nor even because of their lack of belief in Jesus; but because of moral cowardice!

You have heard of workers who watched the clock; these were believers who watched the crowd! What is the crowd doing? What is the crowd planning? I started to say—what is the crowd thinking but I guess I shall not use that word! And so they follow the crowd. They fear the jeers of the crowd, more than they want the joys of Jesus! Oh, the blighting, killing, damning powers of jeers! But the world has been led on toward God and goodness, and every advancement, by those who did not watch for the mind of the crowd before they could make up their own.

How I like the courage expressed by that young statesman who stood up among the most influential leaders of his day and said: "I know not what course others may take,"—I do not know what the crowd will do, or think, or say—"but as for me, give me liberty or give me death." Upon such conviction, honestly expressed, a nation could be born; and a people could be freed. God be gracious unto all young people in our mass-moving, crowd-watching, time-serving day who have the courage to hold fast to the up-urge in their better selves—a courage to be true to their honest convictions.

But not yet have I told you why these chief rulers missed Jesus—that is, I have not told you the most fundamental reason of all. There were some in that crowd who did not miss him. They were sometimes filled with fear; perhaps they even watch the mind of the crowd with a bit of misapprehension; but, thanks to God, they couldn't turn back! They could stand up in the presence of Jesus himself and truthfully say: "We have left all to follow Thee." They did not miss Jesus: nor did they miss the glory which God gave unto them for their allegiance to Jesus. Why did not they miss Jesus? Because they loved him so! And not only because they loved him so—let me hasten to say, but because he loved them so! "Having loved his own, he loved them unto the end." "The love of Christ constraineth us."

The chief rulers believed, but they did not love. May you and I add to our belief, our love; and then, "Who can separate us from the love of Christ?" Shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? . . . Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us. For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

COMMUNION WARE.

Individual Service.

Made in best Silver Plate or Aluminum. Prices low; first-class workmanship and finish.

ALUMINUM.

Aluminum is light in weight, durable, and does not tarnish.

Style No. 50-A.

- Tray No. 2—Interlocking, with 40 plain glasses $7.00
- Tray No. 6—Interlocking, with 35 plain glasses 6.75
- Tray No. 10—Interlocking, with 30 plain glasses 6.50
- Base No. 50-A—Fits Trays 2, 6, or 10..... 2.25
- Cover No. 50-A—Fits Trays 2, 6, or 10..... 2.25
- Bread Plate No. 1—Narrow rim..... 1.60

SILVER-PLATED.

The Silver-plated Ware is of the very highest grade and best finish; heavily plated on nickel base.

- Tray No. 85—Interlocking only, with 36 glasses $22.00
- Base No. 1—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 85.. 11.00
- Cover No. 5—Silver-plated; fits Tray No. 85... 16.00

(For Silver Bread Plates, see under No. 90.)

- Tray No. 90—Interlocking, with 36 plain glasses (this style has broad rim, which is sometimes preferred, due to increased ease of handling) $22.00
- Base No. 2—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 90.. 16.00
- Cover No. 4—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 90. 14.00

- Bread Plate No. 3—Narrow Rim..... $ 9.00
- Bread Plate No. 4—Broad Rim..... 9.00
- Filler—Silver Lined..... 6.00

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street

Richmond, Virginia

A Story for the Children

A WHITE 'PENSATION.

By LILLIAN LORING TROTT.

Madge wanted one of the brown and white puppies from the Wayland kennels, and mamma told her they couldn't keep another dog as long as Rollo lived.

Mamma said they couldn't afford to feed and pay taxes on two dogs, even though Madge offered the pennies in her new bank and proposed to share her dinners with a newcomer.

There seemed to be no help for it, and Madge sat on the back doorstep, bravely trying to make the best of it and get over her vexation.

"What are 'pensions?" asked Madge, looking around the yard for them.

"Second choice, far as I can find out," snarled the big boy, "same's the chance to go to school and learn to be a professor when you want to go up in a balloon and be an aviator."

"Oh-h," answered Madge, not in the least understanding Carl's sarcasm, but feeling the ache in his tone and sympathizing with the trouble she knew he was brooding over.

"It's one of the laws that run the universe, the wise ones say," a little more humanly, Carl explained, "that for every loss we receive a gain—something to make up to us what we do without.

"It might be worth watchin' for," brightly Madge caught at the idea. "Let's count to see how many times it comes true."

The long-legged boy looked down upon her with sudden interest. The scowl turned to a half laugh. "What a sport you are," he mumbled. "Well, to be quite candid with you, my young friend, you'd have to look pretty sharp to find the glistening lining to my shadowy cloud.

"There's lots of 'pensions on a farm," aloud Madge meditated. Although her home yard adjoined Carl's father's farm, it skirted the village where her father worked in the mill.

"You're alive, all right," he chuckled, glancing down at her again with quizzical interest. "Wonder you don't apply a kindred psychology to your own case."

"I like lively things." She wondered if his applause held a covert jeer. "Rollo isn't very lively. He sleeps most of the time."

"Utter waste of time," condemned the boy. "Well, so long, my logical neighbor," dropping off on the other side of his perch. "Make a note of the fact that while Rollo is sleeping his life away, he is also letting you have some peace.

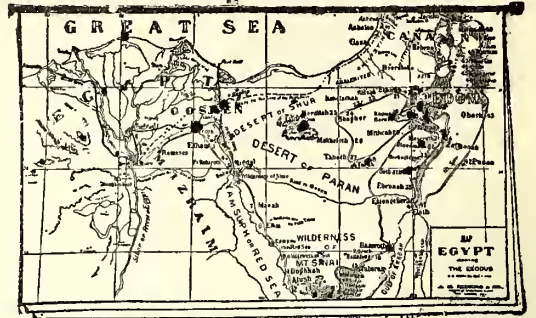

"Better come over to see my Angora kitten—choice strain, biggest ever, silky white with black dots over her eyes, and jet-black toes. I've been teaching her more tricks than Wayland's dogs ever dreamed of—walk a slack string, jump thru a hoop, lift the doorknob to let herself in—oh, and a lot more. Better come on over."

Madge felt a trifle too sore just now to admire other people's pets, but promised to come tomorrow. However, she felt that one of her compensations might be discovered in the feline field. There were plenty of common cats in town, and doubtless mamma would let her beg a kitten from somebody.

"What a neat daughter I have," exclaimed mamma, a few minutes later, entering the orderly yard. Then, noting the smiling face, "And what a womanly, sweet-tempered one, too, not crying over things that can't be helped."

"What do you say to housing my Angora for me?" called Carl from the fence; and, looking up, Madge beheld the fleecy white kitten on his shoulder. (Continued on page 15.)

Eifers Sunday School Maps. On a Revolving Adjustable Steel Stand.

The first 5 maps are in Set No. 1, with stand, Price $15.00. Set No. 2 8 Maps, Price $20.00.

Fine large Maps, in 6 Colors 36x57, on linen finished Cloth. Mounted on a folding steel stand, which can be regulated, so that Maps may be seen to the best advantage. This set contains data for thorough Bible Study. Its large print and Cheerful Colors makes this set very instructive and attractive. Contains the five thoroughly up to date Maps necessary for the study of Bible History.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN 1536 East Broad Street Richmond, Virginia

HOLMAN SUPERIOR TEACHERS' BIBLES

Authorized Version—Self-Pronouncing The Best Editions of the World's Best Book For Adults, Teachers, Preachers, Students, and All Who Would Study the Word of God Intelligently

Part page specimen of Holman Boldblack Type Bible ST. MATTHEW, 5. Christ's sermon on the mount. 13 And leaving Naz'a-réth, he came and dwelt in Ca'pér-na-úm, which is upon the sea coast, in the borders of Záb'u-lon and Neph'tha-lim: 14 That it might be fulfilled...

THIS NEW HOLMAN TEACHERS' BIBLE, Pronouncing Text, Bold Black Type is a PRONOUNCED SUCCESS. The latest Bible with NEW HELPS that are quite comprehensive and consist of an Illustrated Bible Dictionary, Concordance and additional aids all under ONE ALPHABETICAL INDEX.

- 4612. French Morocco Leather, divinity circuit, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges..... $4.00
4630. Same as 4612, with extra leather lined covers..... 4.75
630X. Egyptian Morocco, divinity circuit, leather linings, red under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker..... 7.00
633X. Algerian Morocco, divinity circuit, leather lining to edge, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, extra quality binding..... 8.00

EXTRA LARGE PRINT TEACHERS' BIBLES

Large 8 Vo. Size—8x5 1/2 inches—1600 Pages, including 400 pages of Bible Study Helps

Extra spacing between words and lines makes this Bible very easy to read.

Part Page Specimen of Print ST. MATTHEW, 5. Christ's sermon on the mount. 15 The land of Záb'u-lon, and the land of Neph'tha-lim, by the way of the sea, beyond Jór'dan, Gá'Y-lee of the Gén'tiles; 2 And he opened his mouth, and taught them, saying, 3 Blessed are the poor in spirit: for their's is the kingdom of heaven.

- CONTAINING COMPLETE HELPS TO BIBLE STUDY, INCLUDING ALL OF THE FOLLOWING FEATURES
A New Practical Course in Bible Reading, A Treasury of Biblical Information. The most carefully compiled, thorough and attractive form in which valuable Biblical information has ever been prepared. Illustrated Self-Pronouncing Bible Dictionary Containing 150 illustrations, concise definitions and textual references on nearly 50,000 subjects. A Practical Comparative Concordance, with nearly 50,000 references. Four Thousand Questions and Answers on the Old and New Testaments. A valuable Help to all Bible Readers.
4712. Divinity Circuit (overlapping covers), French Seal Leather, red under gold edges, silk head bands, and silk marker.. $5.00
812RL. Red Letter Teachers' Bible. The Words of Christ in the New Testament. Old Testament Passages alluded to by Christ, various prophecies relating to Christ in the Old Testament, etc., all PRINTED IN RED. Binding same as described above on 4712 and same large Self-Pronouncing type..... 6.00
733X. Holman India Paper, Genuine Morocco, leather lined, silk sewed, divinity circuit, round corners carmine under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker, same type and helps as above..... 10.65

All styles sent Postpaid at above prices—Thumb Index 50 cents extra

Christian Orphanage
 CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear friends:

The Christian Orphanage singing class is having some enjoyable visits to the different churches and has been very cordially received wherever they have gone. Any church wishing them to put on their musical program and will write to us we will be glad to comply with their request, if possible, unless we are already dated up.

We want to call the attention of our Sunday Schools to the fact that the prices of everything we have to buy have greatly advanced and it will be necessary to make your offerings as large as possible to help us meet this increase in prices. We have so many pressing appeals and could take more children if funds were available. Remember us in your prayers. Remember your Orphanage with your contributions.

The splendid seasons we are having now makes our corn and beans grow rapidly. Our crop situation is very encouraging at the present time. We made 869 bushels of wheat and 395 bushels of oats. If we could have had favorable seasons we would have made twice as many oats. The zero weather last winter ruined our oat crop, but we have no control over the weather.

We speak of the beauties of highways bordered with the beautiful trees, shrubs and flowers, the beautiful dew drops as they sparkle like diamonds in the sunlight, the beauty of the stars as they twinkle in the far away blue sky, the rose as it opens in all its beauty, the sunset sky as the sun's rays fade away as the evening shadows gather and shut them from our view; but we wonder if God's masterpiece was not that of a little child in its purity with its smile.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

REPORT FOR AUGUST 23, 1934.

Brought forward .....	$8,071.15
Sunday School Monthly Offerings.
North Carolina and Virginia Conference:
Pleasant Grove .....	$ 7.14
Howards Chapel .....	1.00
Mt. Zion .....	1.23
Reidsville .....	8.29
Reidsville Church (special) .....	9.67
New Lebanon .....	4.95
Ingram .....	6.00
Palm Street, Greensboro .....	4.27
		42.55
Eastern North Carolina Conference:
Mt. Auburn .....	2.75
Wentworth .....	9.19
Lebanon .....	1.08
Turners Chapel .....	1.01
Piney Plains .....	5.00
		19.03
Western North Carolina Conference:
Shiloh .....	1.00
Pleasant Ridge .....	2.65
Ether .....	1.09
Biscoe .....	1.43
Pleasant Hill .....	3.91
		10.08
Eastern Virginia Conference:
First Christian S. S., Portsmouth ...	5.50
Cypress Chapel .....	4.13
Wakefield .....	1.00
		10.63
Valley Virginia Conference:
Bethlehem .....	5.41
Leaksville .....	2.27
		7.68

Special Offerings.

Mrs. Dalton, support of children....	12.50
Mrs. Dottie E. Armentrout, Harrison-
burg, Va. ....	5.00
T. B. Roberts, support of children .	15.00
	32.50
Total for the week .....	122.47
Grand Total .....	$8,193.62

A WHITE 'PENSATION.

(Continued from page 14.)

der. "When I got home I found that old Tabby had come back and given this sissy a whaling. Tabby is grandpa's. He thinks a lot of her because she was grandma's. After grandma died, grandpa went to live with Aunt Luella and took Tab along, too. Then we got this Angora kitten; but Tabby says she won't live anywhere but at home, and we'll have to keep her, but we can't let her kill this bunch of down. This kitten's so young she'll adapt herself to a new home, and I'll be glad to know she has a good one."

He jumped from the fence and placed the Angora on Madge's arms.

"The tricks she can do are nothing compared with those she can learn," assured Carl, and added, half jokingly; "I believe my compensations are on the way, Madge. Father's going to let me raise a colt. I'd rather have a colt than a tame duck."

Rollo awoke to snuff at the white Angora, and Madge, hugging the bunch of fluff delightedly, told him: "You must be good to her, sir. She's my 'pensation."—Selected.

ELON COLLEGE

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

South Entrance to the Campus

ELON COLLEGE, founded by the Christian Church in 1889, has fully justified the faith and hope of its founders during its 42 years of operation. Its graduates from the four-year course leading to a bachelor's degree, number 980, now living, 122 of whom are in the Christian Ministry and full-time Christian service. The majority of these are members of our own denomination. In addition, 449 are in educational work and are an active influence in the lay leadership of the Christian Church.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION BUILDING, and the definite religious atmosphere of the College, provide the very best facilities available for training for religious leadership, and offer the Church its finest opportunity to train the young people of the denomination to assume active leadership both in the ministry and laity of the local churches.

Address—

C. M. CANNON, Registrar

Elon College.

North Carolina

Home Atmosphere—Reasonable Rates—Clean Athletics—Christian Spirit

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom, as represented by the Congregational Christian Church.

BOARD OF EDITORS.

J. O. ATKINSON, D. D..... Editor
E. C. GILLETTE, D. D..... Associate
I. W. JOHNSON, D. D....Contributing
ELISHA A. KING, D. D...Contributing
J. T. KERNODLE.... Managing Editor

DEPARTMENTAL EDITORS.

H. S. HARDCASTLE... Sunday School
J. G. TRUITT, D. D..... Sermon
F. C. LESTER..... Young People
H. E. ROUNTREE..... Altar

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year .....$2.00
Six Months ..... 1.00

Trial Subscriptions: Five or more new subscriptions sent in at one time by pastor or president of any church organization, three months for 40c each.

Published Every Thursday at Richmond, Virginia, by the Central Publishing Company, Inc.

Entered as second-class matter at the Postoffice at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Change of Address: Be sure to give both old and new address when asking that your address be changed.

All news matter and items to be published in "The Sun" should be addressed to J. O. Atkinson, Editor, Elon College, N. C., and should reach him not later than Friday preceding date of publication. If more convenient, news from Congregational Churches may be sent to E. C. Gillette, Associate Editor, 117 W. Forsyth Street, Jacksonville, Fla. Emergency notices will be received at the Richmond Office up until Tuesday of week of publication.

All remittances for subscriptions, renewals, advertising, etc., books for review, and other matters of business should be addressed to J. T. Kernodle, Managing Editor, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond, Va.

Notices: Obituary and marriage notices, limited to 125 words, published free. All over 125 words, 1c a word, cash with notice. No notices should exceed 250 words.

Receipts: The change of label is your receipt for money paid. The label shows date of expiration, and change on label will appear the first or second issue of the month following renewal, provided it was received before the 25th. No other receipt will be sent unless requested. Please notify the Richmond Office if label is not changed as above.

MARRIAGES

MAY—BLOSE.

Mr. Willie May and Miss Ruth Blose came to my home July 28, 1934 and were quietly married in the presence of a few intimate friends and relatives. The bride is a member of our Bethel Church and a daughter of Brother and Sister William Blose, who are also members there.

Best wishes to the happy young couple.
A. W. ANDES.

OBITUARIES

RITENOUR.

Rachel H. Ritenour was born April 23, 1888 and died August 4, 1934, at her home in Clarendon, Va., aged 46 years, 3 mos. and 11 days. Sister Ritenour was a native of Powell's Fort and used to attend our church at Dry Run during the early years of my ministry there. Sister Ritenour was bereft of her husband, Floyd Ritenour, nine months ago. Her remains were brought to the home of her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. R. Coffman, near Woodstock. A brief service was held there by the writer on August 7, 1934, and a service at the Methodist Church in Woodstock, conducted by her pastor from Clarendon, assisted by the writer.

A. W. ANDES.

SATTERFIELDS.

The home of Brother and Sister Walter Satterfield has been in great sorrow occasioned by the death of their twin children, Christine Geneva and Ralph Delano. They were born February 16, 1934. Ralph died June 28, 1934, aged four mos. and twelve days. Christine living nine days after the death of Ralph, was four months and twenty-one days old. The funeral of each was conducted at the home by the writer and Rev. Mr. Sayer of the Baptist church and the burials were at Liberty Christian Church where the family hold their memberships. There are fourteen brothers and sisters surviving. Brother and Sister Satterfield have the sympathy of a host of friends and their faith in the promises of Jesus and his word that their darlings are in heaven and they shall see them again is their comfort.

C. E. NEWMAN.

FOSTER.

Jacob E. Foster was born August 9, 1875 and died August 4, 1934, aged 58 years, 11 months and 25 days. Brother Foster was a faithful member of our Leaksville Church and a deacon of that church. He was also active in the Sunday School work of Page County, holding for a number of years the position of president of the County Sunday School Association. He was a frequent delegate and attendant at our own conferences and Sunday School conventions, and an active worker therein. The announcement of his death brought sorrow to the hearts of his many admiring friends. He will be greatly missed in the church and community.

Surviving are his widow, two sons and four daughters.

Funeral services were held at Leaksville August 6, 1934, in which the writer was assisted by Rev. A. W. Campbell and Rev. E. L. Cave.

A. W. ANDES.

LAWNSBERRY.

Mrs. Mattie Ann Lawnsberry, relict of the late John Henry Lawnsberry, was born December 21, 1861 in Mosco, Tenn., and fell asleep July 24, 1934 at the home of her daughter, Mrs. O. M. Cokes, Elberon, Va., after a lingering illness of several months. Aged 73 years, 7 mos., and 3 days.

On her sixteenth birthday she was married to John Henry Lawnsberry and God blessed this union with 7 children. Early in her life she professed faith in Jesus Christ and united with the Methodist Church and remained faithful until the end.

It has been my privilege and pleasure to be the pastor of her daughter for two years and to know Mrs. Lawnsberry was to love her and to feel the presence of the Master when with her.

She is survived by her daughter and one son, Mr. Craig Lawnsberry of Norfolk, Va., and 4 grandsons and 1 granddaughter.

The funeral was conducted from the home of Mrs. Cokes by the writer and the body was carried to Norfolk for interment where we were assisted by Revs. Watkins of the M. E. Church.

God bless those who mourn her going and wait for His return.

C. E. GERRINGER.

PIEDMONT COLLEGE

Located in

"The Blue Ridge Highlands"

An accredited college with an enviable reputation for superior classroom instruction, and wholesome student life.

Standard courses leading to the A. B. and B. S. degrees. Careful, scholarly instructors.

A refined Christian atmosphere. All of the cultural elements essential to a liberal education.

A minimum of expense. Tuition and board for the entire academic year only $273.50.

For information, write

GEORGE C. BELLINGRATH, Dean,
PIEDMONT COLLEGE,
DEMOREST, GEORGIA.

Southern Seminary Foundation

(Successor to Atlanta Theological Seminary.)

AFFILIATED WITH

Vanderbilt University

The Foundation and the other Foundations that are affiliated with Vanderbilt University School of Religion comprise the only Interdenominational Theological School in the South. Through this affiliation the students enjoy the rights and privileges of Vanderbilt University.

DEGREES.

Candidates for degrees are required to have completed their college courses.

The degree of Bachelor of Divinity is offered to qualified students who complete the required courses.

Vanderbilt University also offers the degrees of Master of Arts and Doctor of Philosophy, in accordance with the regulations established in its several departments.

MORE THAN A SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY.

Because of our affiliation with Vanderbilt, our relations with other nearby colleges where our students can take courses without tuition, and the cooperation of the American Red Cross and other social agencies in the city, we prepare students for many types of Christian service.

For information write

WILLIAM JAMES CAMPBELL, President,
330 BUTTRICK HALL, VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY,
NASHVILLE, TENN.

ELON COLLEGE
ELON COLLEGE. C.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

Representing the Southeast Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches.

IN ESSENTIALS, UNITY.

IN NON-ESSENTIALS, LIBERTY.

IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY.

VOLUME LXXXVI.

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, AUGUST 30, 1934.

NUMBER 35.

.. THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

College Library

Then It's News.—

It really isn't news when a road goes over a bridge, but when a bridge goes over a highway it is an engineering feat of news value. That's what happened recently near Spokane, Wash. A bridge took a highway journey from across a stream at Colfax to a new site six miles distant.

Methodist Church Abandons Assessment.—

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has until recently followed a system of "assessments" whereby the members of local congregations were told what amount was expected of them during the year to come. This plan has now been abandoned by action of the board of lay activities of that church, which is making plans to raise funds for the church in the future by "voluntary contributions." We are told, however, that while the new method of church collections will be voluntary, the local board will issue "suggested quotas" to each member.

The Next Speaker?—

Practically every Democratic member of the House whose length of service and general record entitle him to be classified under the term of "leader" is now engaged in two races: one for reelection to Congress and another for Speaker of the House. Mourning for the beloved, white-haired Speaker Rainey of Illinois is sincere. So is the ambition to succeed him to the Nation's second most powerful position. Nobody can say yet who the chosen will be, but there are a lot of people who would like to know who Vice-President Garner "thinks" will be the next speaker.—

Bells To Ring For Methodism.—

On Wednesday, October 10, 1934, the big bell in the Baltimore, Maryland, City Hall will ring 150 times in commemoration of the sesquicentennial of the organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Other bells of the various denominations will add their jubiliations. The 150 strokes are one for each of the years since 1784, when 62 preachers met in what was known as Lovely Lane Chapel for the event which has long since proved of international significance. From this small beginning has grown the largest and most universally diffused group of Protestant Christians in the United States. From this group, also came the beginnings of what was later to become, under the leadership of James O'Kelley, the Christian Church in the South.

Forest Fires Cost Money.—

It is figured by the American Tree Association that forest fires cost the country an average of $200,000 a day. This is a comparatively small item when compared with the amount being spent daily by the Government on "recovery" projects, yet it mounts up when figured by the year. Then the results of forest fires are hard to measure in money, or actual fire damage. It has taken the drought that has been sweeping the nation to drive home the necessity for preserving the tree-covered areas now existing and the advisability of adding to them by a systematic plan of reforestation. A stronger ban should be placed on the carelessness which is responsible for quite the larger part of these fires, and the guilty party should be held liable wherever possible.

The Ku Klux and the "Kingfish."—

Others have tried in vain to oust "Kingfish" Huey Long from his throne in the political arena of Louisiana. Now his troubles are to be added to by the Ku Klux Klan, which has recently branded him a "menace to organized society" and now promises to bring about his defeat at the polls. Dr. Hiram W. Evans, imperial wizard of the klan, may be called upon to take personal supervision of the campaign. The Senator is quoted as saying that if he does, he will be sent out of the State "with his toes turned up." The "Kingfish" is usually brave enough to jump on his enemy with both feet regardless of that enemy's size, but he is faced this time with the difficulty of fighting a shadow, as the klan, since its re-assembling, has again become an order of absolute secrecy.

A Hog-and-Corn-Tight Alibi.—

Low prices of farm crops had the Administration by its ears a year ago, and threatened high prices are causing nightmares in the same official circles this year. The big problem is how to establish a plausible alibi for the policy of crop and hog destruction followed by the AAA before the drought brought an abrupt end to this deliberate destruction and restriction. Every alibi offered to date has been ripped to shreds by the consuming public by the time it was off the Government press agents' mimeograph machines. First explanation was that by slaughtering farrow hogs, feed was conserved to feed hogs that now will need it. That alibi broke down of its own weight, for most any child knows that last year's feed was not held over for this year's hogs. Other explanations, to date, have been equally silly. The real search is for a hog-and-corn-tight alibi.—Exchange.

The Drought Relief—And Fair Play.—

The question has been raised as to whether the farmer in the drought area can afford to accept relief at the price the government demands. It is true that the farmer does not have to sign, but in many cases the alternative may prove to be starvation. Hoard's Dairyman calls the situation a national tragedy, and says: "Until we saw the contract itself, we refused to believe any American government could exact such a deplorable and inexcusable requirement in return for aid extended those in dire distress. . . . We believe in the integrity and good sense of the dairy farmer. We believe he should be free to act, or we must abandon our heritage of democracy. He has the right and privilege to disagree or agree with a governmental proposal without compulsion from any source. Denial of this right. . . is evidence of the extent to which bureaucratic officials would go to gain their ends." The agreement demanded by the AAA provides that the farmer agree: "To cooperate with further general programs pertaining to the adjustment or reduction of production or for the support and balance of the market for cattle or dairy products which may be offered by the Secretary of Agriculture. . . . To execute the agreements necessary to participate in such programs and necessary to share in the payments that may be paid by the secretary for the performance thereby."

Labor Day.—

Next Monday is Labor Day, and once again the thoughts of the nation are turned specifically toward the men who toil. The Methodist-Protestant Recorder reminds us that "God's world requires workers to change the wilderness into a vineyard." It also calls attention to the fact that these laborers are in two groups. One directs the industry while others dig in the soil. Both alike are useful. Each is indispensable to the other. Without the executive the workman stands idle. Without the laborer the householder's vineyard is choked with weeds." With ten millions without employment today, conditions continue serious. Yet one must not fail to remember that there are many who would pick and choose what work they would do. We agree with our contemporary that the wages of the laborer must not go below the point of subsistence—yet no sane man would refuse a half-a-loaf if he were hungry for bread. It would reduce the expense to which the government is now being put to feed the unemployed if each of these ten millions were earning even $5.00 a week. There is nothing to be said for the employer who takes all that the laborer produces for himself, but one cannot continue to hire labor at a loss, for eventually both lose—the employer his business and the laborer his livelihood. The need of the nation as Labor Day approaches, is a conscientious effort on the part of both labor and capital to arrive at a common point where labor will receive a just compensation, and capital will receive an honest day's work. The amount of the medium of exchange means ultimately less than nothing—what kind of subsistence it will provide is all important.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Rev. R. L. House, Newport News, is this week assisting Dr. I. W. Johnson in a series of meetings at Liberty Springs, Va.

Our deepest sympathy and anxiety are expressed for Mrs. C. D. Johnston, wife of our beloved Orphanage Superintendent. Mrs. Johnston was carried to a nearby hospital for a major operation last Saturday. Our prayers for her recovery.

Elon College gives glad greeting and heartiest welcome to Dr. G. O. Lankford and family now returned after months profitably spent health seeking in Florida. Dr. J. U. Newman and family having moved into their new home, on the site of the former residence that burned in February, Dr. Lankford and family are occupying "Ladies Hall" on the college campus.

Dr. L. E. Smith, President of Elon College, was one of the featured speakers at the Bible Conference, Massanetta Springs, Harrisonburg, Va., Saturday, August 25th and Sunday, the 26th. This Bible Conference is interdenominational and has had on its roster of preachers and lecturers this year some of the most distinguished divines of Scotland and London, as well as of America.

The following announcement is acknowledged in THE SUN office: "Dr. and Mrs. James Oscar Atkinson announce the marriage of their daughter, Mary Adelia to Mr. William Ernest McCandell on Saturday, August 25, 1934 at "Town Point," Suffolk, Va. At home after Sept. 15th at Buckingham Apartments, Norfolk, Va." We are wishing that the happy pair may have long life and a home in which peace, prosperity and love may abide continually.

Christianity is a singing religion. It commenced in the Angel's Song and it has inspired thousands of songs since, and new ones every day. Christianity is a preaching religion. The men and women of its early day went everywhere preaching the gospel. Christianity is a supporting religion. It gives the Star of Hope in a dark world, and promises man in the land of the unsetting sun when night is falling upon the eyes of the aged and dying.—Selected.

Rev. J. L. Neese, Greensboro, has been called to and accepted the pastorate of our Reidsville church. Deacon A. H. Hinshaw of our Palm St. church, Greensboro, writes us: Our pastor, Bro. J. L. Neese is giving up the work at Palm Street church, Greensboro, writes us: Our pastor, Bro. the church at Reidsville. These two churches, now combined into a pastorate make a good field of service for the right man. Pastors who are considering a change for the coming year, and who would like to be considered for this work should write A. H. Hinshaw, 17 Poplar St., Greensboro—N. C. and O. W. Hines, McLeansville, N. C." Rev. Neese has done a great work in building up the congregation and membership at Palm Street and Hines Chapel during the years of his pastorate and he will carry into his Reidsville pastorate that zeal and consecration which can only result in growth and progress there.

The Christian Church representation at the Massanetta Bible Conference this year was perhaps the largest that has ever been recorded there.

Rev. Joe French, passing through Richmond last Monday gave us the list of the ministers present. It included, besides Rev. French, who serves Ocean View and Berea (Norfolk) Churches, the following ministers: Revs. A. W. Andes, Billy Andes, W. B. Fuller and M. L. Weekley, of Harrisonburg; Revs. F. E. Hyde and E. T. Cotten, of Ohio; Rev. R. Lee House, of Newport News; Rev. R. A. Whitten of Portsmouth; Dr. W. M. Jay of Holland; Dr. I. W. Johnson of Suffolk; Rev. J. F. Morgan of Norfolk and O. D. Poythress of South Norfolk, Rev. E. B. White of Windsor; and Dr. C. H. Rowland of Greensboro, N. C., and L. E. Smith of Elon College. We do not have a list of the laymen who were present, but there is usually quite a large representative number who attend from the nearby churches of our denomination.

ALABAMA LETTER.

Lanett, Ala., Aug. 25th.

I have just finished my Revival campaign and arrived home yesterday after a term of seven or eight weeks in active service.

Since I wrote my last note I have been in meetings at Cragford, Ala., with Rev. G. H. Veazey and at Antioch with Rev. J. D. Dollar. At each of these churches we had a fine meeting. While there was no visible increase in membership there was a great strengthening of the forces of the present membership. We had fine attendance and the people seemed to be very much interested in the Gospel preached.

There was much constructive work done at Antioch and great good will come from the meeting there. However, there was much to interfere with the success of the meeting. During the time one of the older members died, and others were sick in the community.

My last meeting was at Pisgah or "State Line" Church. The old church, which after a period of some 12 or 15 years has been repaired and renewed, or reorganized this year. They are now having a Sunday Afternoon Service regularly, which has been the best I could do for them.

This is one of the first Congregational churches that was ever organized in this county. Its history would fill a volume. We began our revival there last Sunday P. M. and continued with good services each day until Friday at 11 A. M. It was a great meeting. Many hearts were rejoiced. Good attendance and good order prevailed. Fourteen new members were added to the roll, three by letter, eleven by profession of faith. The closing service was indeed remarkable. Nine members were received to fellowship at that time. We closed the meeting with a communion service. The ordinance of baptism will be attended next first Sunday afternoon.

In many respects this has been the greatest revival season of my life. My time has practically been spent among our weaker churches and the Master has paid well for the work done.

I turn my mind and heart now to my own field and look forward to the best Conference report yet made.

Don't forget our Home Coming service here at Lanett Christian Church the second Sunday in September. It will surely be a great day for the church. And we will have a great fellowship together. Hon. W. B. Bowling of Lafayette, Ala., circuit Judge of the fifth judicial circuit of Ala., will deliver the address at 11:00 A. M. Rev. Dr. F. P. Ensminger will speak at night. Other speakers for the afternoon will be former pastors of the church. Appropriate music will be rendered, so please come and enjoy the day.

G. D. HUNT.

WHILE WE THINK OF PUBLIC ENEMY NUMBER ONE LET US NOT FORGET OTHER ENEMIES WHO ARE ALSO NUMBERED.

By TIMOTHY THOMAS.

Possibly few people except the President of the United States have their acts and achievements recorded in very press of the land.

It was not many years ago that two boys made a flying machine, and the name of Wright went into possibly every publication in the land.

A boy unknown except to his immediate circle of associates winged his way from New York to Paris and became the most widely known and most popular young man of the nation. Millions of comments and popular acclaim of this boy's achievement went into the world's every publication.

Not long since a boy—possibly an average boy—in one of our western states was not known beyond his immediate community. His mother died, and his father being busily engaged perhaps did not give him the companionship and care which the boy deserved and no doubt longed to share. This boy being natural and normal took his place in high school at the age of seventeen. He became deeply in love with a girl, but the girl on whom he wished to bestow his heart did not reciprocate. That was his first disappointment, and many share with him the keenness of it.

Of his own will this boy chose other companions, and among these a man ten years his senior who was addicted to drinking. One day they went into the community store, a store owned by one Frank Morgan. This boy and his companion were intoxicated. Morgan was overpowered and relieved of a small sum of money. This was the boy's first offence, and being such, his father suggested that he plead guilty—which he did. The judge imposed a sentence of ten to twenty years, while the boy's senior companion stood trial and got off with a light sentence. The difference in sentences again brought disappointment and bitterness toward society.

A few years passed, and Mr. Morgan, a big-hearted member of the Friends Church, circulated a petition for a parole—which was granted. The boy returned home, and on the first Sunday thereafter attended Mr. Morgan's church, the lady minister taking as the subject of her discourse, "The Prodigal Son." The boy wept and after the service expressed his appreciation to the pastor for her message, and gave evidence of penitence.

The boy started in search of a job, but found none. People distrusted him, and though they spoke their words of praise and approval of the pastor's sermon on the prodigal's return, they were unwilling, it would seem, to offer a helping hand to the prodigal at their door. The cold reception embittered the boy, and he turned to a life of crime. The record of his crime has been recorded in possibly every periodical in the land.

The other day Rev. Charles M. Filmore, whose name is a household word throughout the length and breadth of the land because of his song, "Tell Mother I'll Be There," spoke comforting words to a grief-stricken family, and said: "Earth to earth; ashes to ashes; dust to dust," and the boy's body was lowered in the family plot in Crown Hill Cemetery, Indianapolis, Ind.

Thus ended the career of the nation's criminal, rated as society's greatest enemy. The responsibility for his revolting career may not be ended.

Thy eye can make the world dark or bright for thee; as thou look'st on it, it will weep or laugh.—Ruckert.

OUR COLLEGES—THEY ALSO SERVE.

By FRANK W. STEPHENSON.

Our churches, our Sunday Schools, our Endeavor Societies, our Auxiliaries, our pastors, our missionaries—we know they are active agents in Kingdom building. We think of them as positive forces in the effort to win men to Christ and to build them up in Christian faith and character. Some serve one way, some another. Some have one purpose, some another. Some work one way, some another. All, however, are dedicated to the single task of building the Kingdom of God.

Is this true of our colleges? Is an educational enterprise like a church related liberal arts college a real or an imaginary factor in Christian work? When young people are mastering the intricacies of ancient or modern languages, of science, history, philosophy, mathematics, sociology, economics, education, religion, and any other of the more recent branches of learning, are they active agents in Christian work, or are they negative, passive, unfriendly, hostile, indifferent, any or all?

The great strain to which most people have been subjected in recent years has had a tendency to make them super-critical, irritable, hasty, inducing them to a superficial fault-finding and a failure to appreciate important values, whether in organizations, institutions or individuals. On the other hand, these hardships have prompted a re-examination of almost every accepted institution, organized, system of thought, custom and what-not, whether public or private, civic or church, personal or social, with a view to learn their real value and whether or not they are worth preserving. Sometimes this super-critical attitude has resulted in the development of a spirit of resentment leading to a resort to force which has violently overturned governments, wrecked great business institutions, and threatened to injure some of the more fundamental expressions of the finer things of the spirit. In change people have hoped to find liberty and opportunity. They have gone to such extremes that the results seems more like chaos than progress.

In the midst of the prevailing unrest, change and confusion, the church-related schools have gone quietly about their work, ministering to thousands of the choicest of American youth, holding firmly to their ideals and conceptions of duty and truth, endeavoring to exemplify a type of life unique among men because of its unusual Christian quality, and in their own special way rendering a service to God and men that is bound to inspire confidence when understood and appreciated. The Christian college is a positive agency in the task of building the Kingdom of God. It is indispensable, and it cannot be lost without doing grave injury of the prestige and power of the Christian church.

Colleges may or may not be Christian. That the church colleges are Christian, in the great majority of cases at least, we accept without question. There may be a difference in degree or quality, even as between individuals, but that is something in which we are not now interested. A more fundamental question is this: Is the service the church college is rendering a Christian service? If so, in what way?

There is a difference between the church and the non-church school. The former is fostered by the church; administered by Christian men in Christian ways; encourages Christian activities, programs, services and plans; provides special studies for those who desire to equip themselves better for religious work; employs only Christian teachers; 95 per cent of the students are members of some Christian church; they are devoted in most cases to Christian ideals, principles and purposes; they observe Christian customs; and in other ways align themselves unmistakably on the side of Christ. These testify to the positive Christian character of the church-related college and do exert a definite influence to create a trend in that direction in the lives of the students.

To conserve the spiritual life of our young people is a primary responsibility of the Christian college. That spiritual life of the student has been developed during the pre-college years in the home, local church, in daily contacts with Christian people, and through his own personal experience of God in Christ. He is not as Christian as he should be, of that there is little doubt. He is still growing in grace and in knowledge. He has not become, he is becoming. He has not arrived, he is on the road.

If the Christian college exerts an influence to counteract the forces of moral degeneration and destruction; if it makes a definite contribution to continued growth and development in Christian character; if it strengthens noble loyalties, right attitudes, unselfish purposes, high ideals, deep convictions and the spirit of service, then truly it is conserving the finest qualities of the human spirit. It is rendering a praise-worthy service.

The Christian college exalts and magnifies Jesus Christ. It proclaims and tries to practice the teachings of Christ. It provides Christian organizations and tasks for the students. It chooses with care high types of Christian men and women for the faculty. Usually its executive is an outstanding Christian minister, himself trained in the schools of the church and with some years of active service in the pastorate. In fact, the atmosphere in the church college is surcharged with Christian elements. How can a student fail to feel the impact of those forces upon his life? He cannot, unless he deliberately steels his soul against them. A few do, but the majority have a different attitude and are definitely benefitted, edified and blessed. The years in college conserve as well as strengthen their spiritual life.

During the time spent in college the student finds it necessary to make many new adjustments. He is introduced into a wider field of human knowledge. He hears and reads many things both new and strange and which seem frequently to be in conflict with his accustomed way of thinking and believing. Unless wisely guided he will be in real danger of spiritual ruin. Take, for instance, the question of evolution. He has often heard parents, pastors, Sunday school teachers and others criticize evolution as a teaching of Satan and that all who accept it are unorthodox and agents of sin. He now learns that this theory is accepted by the great majority of scientists and that most well informed individuals look upon it with favor. But he learns also that there are two kinds of evolutionists, the theistic and the atheistic, the believer and the unbeliever. Mark you, he is not told what to believe. That is not the teacher's business and he knows it is his task to help the student find the facts by his own study and investigation and then draw his own conclusion, for or against.

The student in the Christian college has this very definite advantage, his teachers are Christian men and women, believers in God, disciples of Christ and interpreting the universe, human history and human experience from that standpoint. If they have any prejudices it is because they accept Christ and believe His Gospel. Is there as much risk in committing our youth to such characters as there is in sending them to non-church schools where the situation is apt to be vastly different? Young people need trustworthy guides for they are passing through a critical period.

The teacher who walks in the light, which is in Christ, is the more trustworthy.

Two things characterize modern life, a materialistic philosophy and a cynical spirit and attitude. Materialism leaves no room for any spiritual entities or forces. Human beings are a slightly higher order of brutes. Life is reduced to little more than co-ordinated chemical reactions. Right is the will of the ruling power, goodness is indeterminate and at best debatable and changing. Love is a transitory sex-impulse, brotherhood an utopian dream, and belief in God a relic of a fearful past, a childish inheritance no longer necessary. In such teachings there is no room for conscience, for personal responsibility, duty, beauty, right, goodness or truth. Personal pleasure is the only almighty force in this world and the strongest arm is the only standard of right. Conduct is a matter of expediency.

We have had our fill of debunkers, those individuals who delight to wallow in the filth of human shortcomings. The heroes of church and state have been subjected to the closest scrutiny, and any mistake, doubtful habit, unsavory rumor, salacious gossip it is possible to discover is laid hold upon greedily and gleefully. It is dragged out into the open, painted in lurid colors, dwelt upon, magnified, distorted, and declared to be the window which permits us to catch a glimpse of the real person. O yes, some of his virtues are incidentally mentioned, sometimes even praised in glowing verbiage, to give the appearance of fairness, and yet with a cynicism calculated to create doubt rather than respect or reverence. It is the work of the conscienceless and destructive cynic.

Such debasing philosophies and attitudes make the Christian heart sick. We would despair were it not for the loyalty of Christian people, Christian pastors, Christian teachers, Christian missionaries and Christian colleges. In the Christian college in particular young people live under holier and more reasonable influences. They become endowed with a quality of life which sends them forth to their chosen vocation in the spirit of the crusader and reformer, believing in the essential spiritual character of men and women, in love with the beautiful, the right, the good and the true. Above all they have found in the Christ of Nazareth not only a revelation of God but of that which man may become through the energy of His Spirit. If the race is to be saved from its own folly and sin that salvation will come through the kind of leaders of the meaning and character of life is the highest and best because it is Christian.

The time spent in college is a period of ripening, maturing. The physical and nervous forces are becoming better organized, better co-ordinated. Training and experience have enriched the mind and heart, the judgment is sounder, interests more normal, and the meaning of life better understood. It is the time when a number of great life decisions are made, such as the vocation, the attitude toward Christ, the choice of a mate, and the dominant motives and purposes.

The environment during the later adolescent period is of the utmost importance for it exerts a considerable influence on these decisions. If that influence is anti-religious or even non-religious, instead of positively and sympathetically Christian we can rest assured the consequences will be disappointing. Attitudes of neglect and indifference are certain to manifest themselves. These might develop under the most favorable circumstances but are less likely to when the environment is more ideal. From many directions today there presses in upon the souls of youth forces of doubt, of unbelief, of positive denial.

(Continued on page 7.)

E-D-I-T-O-R-I-A-L

EDITOR

J. O. ATKINSON, ELON COLLEGE, N. C.

ASSOCIATE EDITOR

E. C. GILLETTE

117 W. Forsyth Street, Jacksonville, Fla.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS

I. W. JOHNSON    ELISHA A. KING

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE CHURCH.

We are uncertain and unsettled about some things, the State for instance, the Nation in fact, civilization itself forsooth. We doubt if these, either of them, is secure, will abide. And there is good ground for our doubt. For states have gone to pieces, nations have crumbled, civilizations have perished. And there is no evidence, or guarantee that either or any of these as they are today will abide.

Of one institution, thank God, we can be certain. The church abides, is secure, and will not perish. The reason for this is given by Stanley High writing in The Christian Herald for August about one church, now 300 years old of which High is pastor:

"The church changes. But it does continue. It moves with the times. But on the fundamentals it stays put. More than any other institution it offers an anchorage and something worth anchoring to. You go back through the 300 years of the history of my church and you will find differences of all sorts. But one thing you will discover. That through those three hundred years this church, like all Christian churches, has hammered away at one job: endeavoring, with God's help, to unroot the evil and nurture the good.

"Thirty years hence or three hundred, if you were to drop in on my church or on yours, you would note the superficial differences. But if you listened you would recognize the ancient emphases. You would hear its voice raised to declare that 'the wages of sin is death'; assert that 'blessed are the merciful for they shall inherit mercy'; to state its conviction that 'the things that are seen are temporal, but the things that are not seen are eternal.'"

In founding the Church our Lord promised its permanency. "The gates of hell shall not prevail against it." The cause of its permanency was that the eternal and living Son of God knew that Truth, though clothing itself in different apparel through the years, was itself eternal, and must have witness constantly in the world. The Church is permanent, and perisheth not, because it bears living testimony to the imperishable truth that Jesus the Christ is the Son of the Living God.
J. O. A.

OUR SCHOOLS.

It will soon be school days again. Thousands of happy children will find their way to public schools; other thousands of boys and girls to college. And with these thousands largely rests the destiny of our nation in years to come.

Here is indeed a source of doubt and gloom. The Christian Herald tells us this:

"Here's a part of the story in statistics. If you think boys and girls are important, just fix these facts in your mind. During this school year 2,280,000 American children of school age were not in school. Last fall 2,000 rural schools in 24 states failed to open; by April 1st, 20,000 rural schools, affecting over 1,000,000 children, had closed. This last school year, there were more than a million more high-school students than in 1930. But there were 50,000 less teachers. One out of every four American cities, this year, shortened its school term. In most American cities, today, the school-year is shorter than it was 100 years ago. More than 200,000 teachers—one fourth of all public-school teachers—received, for this year's work, less than $750.00: some 85,000 of them received less than $450.00. Try to get your house painted or your car repaired at that rate of pay."

It is well enough to have good roads, fine houses, comfortable cars, and all that if we can afford them: but one thing we cannot have, except to our eternal hurt and undoing, and that is neglected schools with children growing up in ignorance.
J. O. A.

"JIN."

"This must be remembered," (it is Kagawa, the great evangelist of Japan who is calling us of America and the world to remember that) "Shinto, Buddhism and Confucianism all teach love to a certain degree. There is a vast difference, however, between the instinctive love of animals, the ethical love of human beings and the redemptive love which God revealed through Christ. Animal love is purely instinctive, and is not subject to the correction and control of reason. Human love, though more instinctive, attempts to become rationalized only within the bounds of human relations. Confucius called this "jin," the way of benevolence. But the jin of Confucius is not rooted in God." And so Confucius called it jin—the way of benevolence. Many of us in a Christian land, and some in Christian churches, call it the way of benevolence, like Confucius did, and leave God out. We accept and make a poor attempt at the second great commandment and ignore the first and greatest commandment. "In Christ alone,"—I am quoting Kagawa again, who says, "In Christ alone, and for the first time, was made known to mankind the love of the Cross which forgives enemies and saves sinners."

The way of benevolence, jin, is not enough. If so, Confucius is sufficient and we do not need Christ.
J. O. A.

JUST A WOMAN.

It was just a woman, and she a woman living in sin and sordidness to whom our Lord first announced His Messiahship. Just a woman—a Samaritan woman at that. It was just a woman who gave to our Lord the first pure and unselfish love offering, pouring out on Him her box of ointment, very precious, despite the protests of the practical (?) disciples who wondered at the waste, and wanted to "relieve the poor." And it was just a woman to whom our Lord paid the highest tribute of praise that He ever paid to anyone on this earth, "Whosoever this gospel shall be preached, this that the woman hath done shall be spoken of as a memorial of her."

Spiritual discernment, in that sphere of achievement, woman reigns supreme and is man's superior. We hear much of the woman's sphere, of her enlarging field of secular pursuits and activities, of her "rights, privileges and powers."

In one field, however, she need have no fear of competing with man, or of crowding man out. In the realm of the spirit she has discernment, prestige, power, insight that man cannot surpass her in or take from her. In the realm of the spirit, woman, just a woman, leads on and is man's superior.
J. O. A.

MAKE JESUS KNOWN.

"I suppose it is a rare case when a brother or sister sees that the great objective of the church is to make Jesus known to all men in all lands." So Rev. A. D. Woodworth, returned missionary from Japan supposes. And the more is the pity. For if we lose sight of the main objective, then the church is a ship at sea without a compass or rudder. Our Lord did not make optional, He made imperative, the main objective of His church. "Ye shall be witnesses unto me."

There was and is good reason for this. In Him only is the power to reach, redeem and save. Human love is not enough. The most passionate minister or missionary that ever lived did not have love enough to lift a soul from sin, or save a man from ruin. Only divine love is strong enough for that. It is not human love, it is the love of God as revealed in His Son that can reach, redeem and save the sin sick soul. That is why our Lord said, "Ye shall be witnesses unto me"—everywhere!
J. O. A.

It is averred in a current periodical that "perhaps no well-informed man can now be found who believes the first three chapters of Genesis." Among the well-informed who could at one time be found who believed them, and also believed that Moses wrote them, may be mentioned, Jesus and Paul. And the religion they taught has not been improved upon as far as I am able to recall. Let some "well-informed man" who "can now be found" who does not "believe the first three chapters of Genesis" write something in religion comparable to the Sermon on the Mount or the Epistle to the Romans.—C. E. Wallace.

The old colored farmer was not a preacher, but he could get at the gospel truth in a very effective way, as the following incident discloses most clearly: A white man asked our farmer friend what church he belonged to and the old man replied: "Bless ye, sah, dah's fo' roads leading from hyah ter town—de long road, de hill road, de sho' road, and de swamp road—but when Ah goes ter town wid er load er grain dey don't say ter me 'Uncle Calhoun, which road did yo' come by?' but, 'Cal, is yo' wheat good?'—Free Will Baptist.

WHEN YELLOW EARTH TURNS TO GOLD.

By ROBERT M. BARTLETT.

Impressions of England and Anglo-American Unity.

There is an ancient Chinese proverb—"When three men are of one mind, yellow earth is turned to gold." These words gained new meaning these past few weeks while living in England. I was conscious many times how the mind of man out-reaches the limits of nationality and how it can transform the boundaries and limitations of our modern nations into the pure gold of friendliness.

England is the one foreign land where Americans feel at home. There is no barrier of language and there is a history which belongs to us as well as to our English cousins. After living with them for a time we realize that we should join in a more united effort to advance the Christian program for world brotherhood and peace.

William D. Howells once said, "Nothing in England seeks you out, except the damp. Your impressions, you have to fight for them. What you see or hear seems of accident." This was not our experience. Living in an English town, we found that friendship was just as warm and genuine as it is over here, and the people just as hospitable and altruistic. We were in many homes for tea, dinner, evening coffee and informal visits. Everywhere we found that we were of one mind on the fundamentals of life.

Of course there are striking contrasts between life today in our two countries. We are apt to see most conspicuously the defect of foreign lands and to enlarge on limitations rather than virtues. Visiting England is like visiting grandmother in the country. We feel the difference of age, we are divided by years of change. We find grandmother following old-fashioned standards. We love her just the same, but we cannot help noting that she is backward in some ways.

One of England's defects is lack of conveniences and improvements. The houses do not have screens and there are plenty of flies. The English wasps are like the locusts of Egypt. They haunt every tea table from London to Land's End, gloating over the jam and fighting for entrance into every marmalade jar. Refrigerators are uncommon. There is no general delivery of ice as here. Our American thirst made us dream of ice cubes and sodas as we toured the island kingdom in the summer sun.

The English plumbing is a fascinating display of pipes that cover kitchen and bathroom walls. They seem to be considered essential features of interior decoration.

Lighting fixtures are works of distinction, always suspended in the wrong part of the room, where they flood your eyes with a glare of light. There is a lack of cellars and central heating.

These inconveniences convince the American that England is conservative. Reluctance to change is everywhere in evidence. In business the shops are not as prompt and efficient as our Yankee models. Clerks are always courteous, but promptness in service is not so essential. With all this conservatism in business, London remains the world's chief of trade. There is no city that is more cosmopolitan and international and as tolerant of black, brown and yellow.

The British tendency is illustrated in the motor trade. Our English friends are not as far along as we are in the production of cheap, efficient cars. They do not expect the speed and perfection that we do. The motorist over there expects most of his roads to be narrow, flanked by hedges and cursed by innumerable curves. He is accustomed to drive with motor bikes and push bikes to his right and left. In talking about the left-hand traffic system, an English friend said, "It is foolish for us to go on driving on the left hand side when practically every other country has the right-hand drive. But we can never change it now that we have gotten started on the left. You could in America, but we can't do those things here."

Established custom rules in things great and small, and for this reason the average man in England looks with surprise and admiration at an American experiment like the NRA. Everyone I met seemed to admire President Roosevelt and be filled with questions about his policies and the situation over here. A London banker said to me, "We never could tackle a problem like that one here. We prefer to plug along and let natural forces take their course. England will just muddle through to better days."

One also finds in England a provincialism quite like our own. People there assume, as we often do, that their nation is the center of the universe. We were asked a good many times such naive questions as, "Do you have many Indians in Massachusetts?" and, "Are there many wild animals like bears around?" The children usually asked how many racketeers I knew, and were disappointed when I replied, "Not a one."

Again and again, while stopping for gasoline at a petrol pump, we would say, "Beautiful country around here." And in some mysterious way the chap would discover that we were Americans, and reply, "Yes; suppose you don't have anything like this in your country." We knew he would not believe us if we told him about the Grand Canyon, Glacier Park and the Berkshire Trail, so we agreed with him and drove on. Every man likes to be told that his country is best of all.

This provincialism is also revealed in England's speech. Returning to the mother country, I discovered that I did not know how to pronounce my own name. Invariably when using the telephone I would repeat, "The name is Bartlett," and hear the reply, "What name did you say?" as if I were a native from the Fiji Islands with an unheard-of name. And after several repetitions with every known inflection and variation that my tongue could make, the voice would answer, "Oh, Bartlett." It was pleasant to be told how to say one's own name.

Our cousins over there believe that we abuse the King's English. Our slang is unpardonable, but they proceed to regale us with their "rather, bully, righto, or I'm all done-up today, or I'll pop in to see you this evening around three-ish or four-ish." They laugh at us for calling Magdeline, Magdeline, and remind us that it should be Maudlin. They take a good word like raspberry and make it into rasburry, and that contraction that heats their bath water is spelled geyser, and they insist on calling it geezer.

The Real England—

These surface differences do not reveal the real England. I am convinced that much is to be learned from English life. One enviable feature is their more leisurely habits. We rebuke them for their slowness, but now that our machine age has put us on a five-day week and given us more leisure than we ever dreamed of having, we envy these people who know how to live more calmly. Tension and speed are less pronounced over there. The blood pressure of England is lower, and consequently people are not so nervous.

Automobiles are more numerous and they seem to go faster than they did when I was over in 1930. The machine age is getting its clutches on England, and it is perhaps only a question of time until speed will rule more dictatorially over there. Advertising is spreading. The sign-board age afflicts them as well as us. The busses carry huge signs: Bovril for fatigue, Drink Guinness, it's good for you. There are yellow newspapers. We took the Daily News evenings and found that it knew how to sensationalize crime and scandal. Movie houses are plentiful and cinema fans loyal. We saw a sign along the road in a village south of London, "Remember your British Birthright: Freedom of choice. Vote for Sunday films."

England is being victimized by the standards of our so-called American civilization, but in spite of it, there is more leisure than here. The banker is apt to talk informally with you when you cash a check; people go to work late and take ample time off for lunch and tea; conductors on trams take afternoon tea, and everyone seems to be interested in cricket, tennis, bowling or hiking.

Pleasures over there are apt to be more simple and cheaper. Martin Briggs, the architect, told of a 100-mile bicycle trip he had taken the day before, looking at old houses in Essex. I noticed on Sunday evening that the young people often met after the church service for a ramble.

There is a philosophic calm about the English. Perhaps it is due to the weather in part. Everyone is ready to have his plans upset by the weather, and there is a certain resignation in the face of uncontrollable circumstance. Folks learn to face hardship in the same way with consistent effort and jovial good-will. Calmness and endurance are encouraged by leisure that offers time for thought and social intercourse.

The Love of Home—

A second noteworthy feature is the Englishman's love of home. Home and garden are the center for most week-ends, except for a few holiday excursions during the year. We were invited to spend evenings with families where young and old joined in tennis or walked among the gardens with their incomparable flowers. Fences and hedges give a certain privacy and sanctity to English homes; they are not open to the gaze of every passerby or disturbed by the traffic of automobiles. Afternoon tea is a ceremony that has helped to unify the home. It is a ritual of the hearthside.

Many English homes still do not have cars and consequently there is more time spent at home. A London lawyer said to me that he was determined not to buy a car. He and his wife loved walking and would not sacrifice their tradition for the sake of speed. They did not want to be deprived of the joy of walking.

A third impression was the place of religion in English life. I am convinced that Gilbert Chesterton's words are true, "Without religion there would never have been any English history." The Christian faith is the center of British stamina.

The people seem more churchly. There is more reverence for church and more regular attendance at its services. Sunday mornings I found that every church had a respectable audience; even in midsummer and Sunday evenings the churches were filled. It may be in part that the English people are more naive, they have fewer cars and less commercialization of the Sabbath; but I also believe that they are more church-minded than we are over here. The church has a richer tradition and a firmer hold.

With so many churches and shrines of beauty the Englishman has been impressed with the need of worship. He thinks of his forefathers bowed before the altar of the gray stone parish church and he goes there to seek the blessing of God. Every cathedral we entered this summer was filled with people, and they were not curious Americans. They were the best stock of England, visiting the old shrines and keeping alive a devotion to God's house.

Churches over there are not without their problems. Maude Royden, the famous minister of (Continued on page 9.)

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

It may be of interest to SUN readers to know that fifteen Christian ministers attended the Massanetta Bible Conference this year as follows: Revs. A. W. Andes, B. J. Earp, W. B. Fuller, Joe French, E. B. White, I. W. Johnson, L. E. Smith, J. F. Morgan, F. E. Hyde, C. H. Rowland, O. D. Poythress, E. T. Cotten, W. M. Jay, Robert L. House and R. A. Whitten. These ministers enjoyed a rare privilege and their lives were greatly enriched by study and Christian fellowship.

In addition to two courses in Bible Study the Conference gave much emphasis to three subjects: Inter-racial Relations, Peace and Christian Socialism. Dr. Kirbye Page, Dr. F. W. Norton and Dr. W. L. Stidger were among the outstanding speakers upon these topics. It was somewhat a surprise to discover that this kind of a program was promoted by a conservative body of Presbyterians. But it is a significant fact that these topics are commanding the careful study of religious groups throughout the world. The addresses at Massanetta provoked much discussion and no little criticism.

The present world situation, in political, social and religious aspects, should be a subject of much study and earnest prayer. It has become quite evident that political parties cannot solve our social and economic problems. Civilization has tried war, and education, and diplomacy, and business sagacity. Wealth has failed to meet the situation. War has left the situation in a worse state. Diplomacy has left bitterness and engendered strife. What next? The church may find a way to give its answer to that question. Shall it be war or peace? Shall it be hatred or love? Shall it be justice or social injustice? Shall it be poverty or wealth? Shall it be success or failure?

These are great questions. They cannot be settled by political parties or legislative bodies. A new system of property distribution and social adjustments will fail to remove all the fears and dangers from humanity. Selfishness, greed and hate are not elements of any particular system of property ownership. Christian Socialism, based on the most advanced dreams and visions of present day propagandists, will be selfish unless individuals are guided by the spirit of love and a desire for the good of all concerned. The spirit and motive of Jesus Christ, planted in the life of the individual, will be the only safeguard of any economic order or system of social relations. The success of a monarchy depends upon the attitude and character of the monarch. The success of democracy depends upon the cooperation and character of the people, and their ability to govern themselves.

These questions cannot be answered by any group of people with entire satisfaction to all concerned. Life on the earth is inseparably associated with questions and problems. Jesus came to give life not to answer questions. He came to save not to solve problems. He came to make the cross central in life, not to remove it from social and economic life. Therefore, the present world problems and conditions become a challenge to the missionary and evangelistic forces of the Church. The world must be evangelized and become willing to accept the way of life given by Jesus Christ before any system of social and economic relations will be acceptable to humanity. The church is not called upon to abandon the spiritual message of the Gospel but to give it increased emphasis in this period of readjustment. Sincerity, justice and righteousness should be the motivating ideals in this day and generation.

I. W. JOHNSON.

THE CHURCH-RELATED COLLEGE.

Since governmental aid has been available for a certain type of school, it has become necessary to re-define certain types of institutions. We have in this country schools supported by taxation and under control and direction of the state itself. We have also schools that are supported from private sources, that is, by gifts in the form of endowments and contributions for current expenses and other obligations. These schools, generally speaking, are under the control and direction of church conferences, church associations, church boards, and the like. Heretofore, the state schools have been referred to as the public schools; that is, they have been regarded as serving the public and drawing their support largely from the public in the form of taxation. The church schools have been referred to as private schools, serving a particular constituency and drawing their support from their constituencies in the form of assessments and of voluntary gifts, the inference being that they did not serve the public and, therefore, were not public institutions. Perhaps there was a day when the church school served only the members of the church and only those who were preparing to serve the church directly, but, if so, that day has past. Church-related colleges, through the years, have developed a very broad and comprehensive curriculum so as to include all courses necessary for a liberal education and, in many instances, for specific and restricted preparation. In a very definite sense, the church-related colleges of the country are public institutions and serve the public just as completely and definitely as do the state schools.

Three years ago, representatives of a large number of the church-related colleges of the South assembled in Asheville, North Carolina in the ball room of the Battery Park Hotel for the purpose of defining ourselves and outlining the course of procedure by which we might improve our own curriculum and render a more definite and a more efficient service to the state and to the nation that are ours, at which time a conference of the church-related colleges of the South was formed.

On August 15th, representatives of the church-related colleges of the South met in Asheville in the George Vanderbilt Hotel for the third annual session of this Conference. The Conference concerned itself with the question of the privately endowed college as related to the state-maintained institutions of our section. It was statistically presented that the privately endowed colleges of the nation save the tax payer a minimum of $250,000,000 annually. That is to say, should the church-related colleges of the country close and the added responsibility of providing educational facilities for those who are now being trained in these schools be thrust upon the nation, that the burden of taxation would automatically be increased $250,000,000 to bear this responsibility. Further statistics were given showing that the church-related colleges of the country have an endowment of $1,000,000,000 and that the endowment of state schools amounts to $100,000,000. There are in the libraries of the church-related colleges of the country 29,000,000 volumes. In the state institutions of the country, there are but 11,000,000.

In addition to the financial question, the library problem, and other advantages, the church school is constantly laying emphasis upon spiritual matters and upon religious instruction. Consequently, there has developed about the average church school a wholesome and a safe-guarding influence that is of inestimable value in this matter of character building. The church school is, not only a saver of dollars and cents, but is definitely a saver of educational qualities and a creator and a disseminator of the finer things of culture and of life.

In conversation with a prominent educator of North Carolina Monday of this week, he very frankly and fearlessly stated that, under all conditions, and by all means, he would send his son to a church-related school, not that the tax supported school did not instruct properly and efficiently, but that there were advantages to be had at a church school which could not be found at a state school.

The Asheville Conference voted that it is the sense of this Conference, representing church-related colleges of the South, that the national government should treat all recognized colleges of the country alike and that there should be no discrimination in the dispensing of federal aid to the colleges of the country. The Conference rejected the idea that church-related schools or privately endowed colleges are private institutions, but stated definitely and emphatically that such schools are public schools in every sense of the word and that, in the truest sense possible, such schools serve the public definitely and efficiently.

I am proud of the fact that Elon College is a church school. I am glad that it is owned and controlled by our United Church; and we are here for the specific purpose of serving the church and the public. Our graduates go out to serve church and state alike. We welcome investigation of the work that we do and are delighted to serve as time and opportunity may afford.

L. E. SMITH.

SCHISMS.

Probably the most commonly accepted meaning for schism is a breach of unity; and regardless of the fact that the Scriptures condemn schisms and schismatic dispositions in the ranks of Christ's followers, there is sufficient evidence that this evil still exists. Though it disturbs the peace and fellowship of Christ's followers, destroys spiritual zeal, chills righteous enthusiasm and hinders the growth of God's kingdom on earth, some men have not grown big enough in their Christian faith to abandon their schismatic inclination and practices. So much do the Scriptures emphasize the unity of the Spirit in bonds of peace that it becomes a supreme question in our thinking as to how zealous we should be in trying to conserve this unity. Regardless of the noticeable decline in the spiritual realm there are many in the church who are schismatically minded. They seem to think that it attests the genuineness of their faith. They have not understood that the brotherhood of Christ is composed of separate eternal entities bound together in an indissoluble unity of Sonship in God. There is a crying need for intelligent Bible teaching and Bible study in our American homes, schools and churches.

Jesus is the way; He is the only way; the way out, the way up and the way on.

A. R. FLOWERS.

Like a tree, spiritual growth is downward, upward, outward.

CONQUEST.

By I. A. BARNES.

Is it not true that each of us live in a world of our own, restricted to our own efforts, and these efforts usually circumscribed by our ambition? Of the three elements that constitute our selfhood, intellect, emotion and will, the dominant power within us is will. Desire and ambition stimulate the will, and the will compels action, so that in personality and possessions, we are and have about that which we will to be and have. (Apply this rule to yourself.) When Moses would encourage the refugees from Egypt to press on and possess the promised land, he said to them, "Every place whereon the soles of your feet shall tread shall be yours." It had been theirs by promise ever since Abraham left Ur of the Chaldees, to adventure into a strange new country. In Egypt they had been circumscribed by the borders of Goshen, but in the promised inheritance the limit was their conquests. So it is with us today, if we live in a small world the limit is our own efforts.

There is practically, no limit to the possibilities of human conquest, but how easily are many of us satisfied. For thousands of years the people of Europe were circumscribed by the oceans until Columbus actuated by the adventurist faith of Abraham made conquest of the Atlantic. From the beginning of time man only knew of the atmosphere around him as a means of sustaining his life by breathing it, never dreamed of its possibilities as a medium for conveying his thoughts and words by electric impulse, thousands of miles in a minute of time. Nor did he dream of its possibilities as a transportation highway, even between continents. But it was here with all of its possibilities, waiting to be conquered, and utilized for the service of man. Ever since the antediluvian thunderbolts shook the rainclouds to give Noah sufficient water to float his ark off the mountain top, electric currents have been circling the earth, but it has been only a few years since man conquered this mighty giant and harnessed it to do his bidding. And still we do not weep like Alexander, because there are no more worlds to conquer. Even heaven is ours for the taking. But the conquest must begin with the desire to possess it, and the will must compel action through faith. "If any man will" is the condition of eternal salvation.

OUR COLLEGES—THEY ALSO SERVE.
(Continued from page 3.)

To counteract them is not easy by any means, even under the best of conditions. But there is too much at stake to take chances. Even as in childhood the growing person needs guidance, discipline and a helpful environment, so does the youth. The elements in that environment must be changed, new methods employed, new ways of approach adopted, but the fundamental purpose, growth in Christian character, remains the controlling objective. No task is more difficult and none more rewarding. It takes seven long years for the orchid to mature and bring forth its matchless flower. Every moment of that period is freighted with possibilities of growth or ruin. But if the florist does not despair he will some day enjoy the fruits of his toil. And the time of maturing is of equal importance to the early years of slow germination. It is the great privilege and the high responsibility of the Christian college to assist with a Christian environment the youth of the church during the critical years of physical and spiritual maturing.

College life is filled with many happy and long cherished experiences. The friendships made are often of life-long duration. Few associations influence us more profoundly, especially those arising from contact with the teachers. Their personalities make lasting impressions. Student friends may be forgotten, but not the teachers. Their counsel, convictions, and characters are indelibly imprinted. As long as we live their personalities will be a definite part of the very air we breathe. Is it not a matter of some importance then the kind of teachers our young people have while attending college or university? All those in our church schools are not ideal men and women possibly but they average well. They are notable not only for their educational equipment, teaching ability and love for young people, but also for their splendid Christian character.

The psychologists inform us that one of the marked characteristics of the middle adolescent period is the spirit of altruism, the longing to make life count in unselfish service to others, and that this is the time when the mind begins to formulate opinions about the life work to be chosen. Consideration is given to the preparations necessary for the chosen vocation. In the later adolescent period this altruistic impulse will either fade or become stronger, depending in no small measure upon the encouragement it receives.

Into what kind of an atmosphere are our young people being thrust between the ages of fifteen to twenty-five? Worldly, materialistic, cynical, skeptical, money-worship, pleasure loving, lustful, frivolous, chauvinistic? Every moment of the training period from birth to twenty-five is of the utmost importance, but none more so when the trend of life, its basic loyalties, its fundamental attitudes, its essential spirit and its ultimate objectives and purposes are being determined. That which has taken place in previous years will not be null and void by any means. They make up much of the foundation of the individual's character, but when the decision-period is reached, during later adolescence, it is important that the surrounding influences be in keeping with those of the earlier years. Young people cast off the cords which have bound them in childhood, do their own thinking and make their own decisions. How much more likely are these decisions to be Christian if made in a sympathetically Christian atmosphere. (Continued on page 15.)

OXFORD BIBLES for EVERY NEED

"The Oxford Bible is the Bible par excellence of the world"

THE HOME BIBLE

A Family Bible in Handy Size

An extra large type Oxford Text Bible, containing also, a family register and 12 beautifully colored maps. Size 9 x 5 1/2 inches.

Specimen of Type

16 The LORD is King for ever and ever: the heathen are perished out

- Nos. 01600 Superior Cloth, round corners and red edges $2.75
- 01605 French Morocco, limp, round corners, red under gold edges, head-band, book-mark $4.75

The JUNIOR'S Bible

Self-Pronouncing

With 4,000 Questions and Answers, carefully selected "Aids to Bible Study," 16 beautifully colored and 15 black full-page illustrations, 6 colored maps and a presentation page. Children may readily pronounce correctly difficult Scripture names, as this Bible is self-pronouncing. Size 7 x 4 3/4 x 1 1/4 inches.

Type in Junior's Bible
2 Take the sum of all the years old and upward, thro

- No. 1815 French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges, headbands and book-mark. Make some child happy with one of these fine $2.95 Bibles

Child's ILLUSTRATED Bible

The beautifully colored illustrations in this new Bible are a delight to the children. It has clear, readable type and yet it measures only 5 1/2 x 3 3/4 inches.

Specimen of Type

2 My soul longeth, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the LORD: my heart and my flesh crieth out for thee, O God.

- No. 02112. French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, gold edges $2.50

Pocket REFERENCE Bible

Has over 50,000 center column references. Measures only 6 3/4 x 4 3/4 inches. (A splendid gift for a young lady.)

Specimen of Type

9 Behold, O God our shield, and look upon the face of thine anointed.

- No. 07533x French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges $3.25

Concordance Edition

Type and size as No. 07523x, but with a Concordance, subject index and dictionary of Scripture names. An excellent edition for students and Christian workers No. 03272x $5.00

OUR LEADER

Oxford Concordance Bible

Self-Pronouncing

This beautiful Oxford India paper edition is indeed the ideal Bible for the student, preacher and evangelist. Each proper name and difficult word is divided into syllables and accented, and though printed with large clear type, the volume measures only 8 1/2 x 5 1/2 x 1 15/16 inches.

Specimen of Type

8 9 Jē-hōi'-ā-chin was 6 years old when he began t

- No. 03671x. Fine Grain Morocco leather, overlapping cover, leather lined to edge, silk round corners, red under edges, silk

A UNIQUE GIFT BIBLE

With Basket Weave Binding

The Antique brown calf leather binding has a basket-weave grain, and button clasp. Has overlapping cover, art silk lined, with red under gold edges. With references. Printed on Oxford India paper. Type as Pocket Reference Bible. $5.50

- No. 03255x
- As No. 03255x, with concordance. No. 03276x $6.50

Oxford TEACH

Have over 50,000 center column, 300 double-column pages of up-to-date helps, conveniently arranged in alphabetical order. Also 32 full-page illustrations, and an indexed atlas of the Bible with 15 beautifully colored maps of Bible lands.

Easy-to-Read-Edition

Size 7 1/4 x 5 x 1 3/4 inches

Specimen of Type

14 Like sheep they are laid in grave; death shall feed on th

- Nos. 04453. French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, round corners and red under gold edges. A durable and handy $4.35 some Bible

Oxford India Paper Edition

Only one inch thick.

- 0773x. French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges, headbands and book-mark. A beautiful gift edition $7.00

RED LETTER Edition

Same size and type as style No. 04453, with same references and helps, but with all the words of Jesus Christ printed in red. White paper edition No. 05453. French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges $5.00

MISSIONS
 REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary

THE FATHER-GOD AND JAPAN.

By TOYOHICO KAGAWA.

Does the love of God stir no responsive chord in the Japanese heart? God forbid! The spirit of reverence of Shinto, the other-worldliness of Buddhism and the golden mean of Confucianism are all milestones for pilgrims out in search of the love of God. I am grateful for Shinto, for Buddhism, and for Confucianism. I owe much to these faiths. The fact that I was born with a spirit of reverence, that I have an insatiable craving for values which transcend this earthly life, and that I strive to walk the way of the golden mean, I owe entirely to the influence of these ethnic faiths.

Yet these three faiths utterly failed to minister to my heart's deepest needs. I was a pilgrim journeying upon a long, long road that had no turning. I was weary. I was footsore. I wandered through a dark and dismal world where tragedies were thick. Tears were my meat day and night. Until I discovered that God, the creator and ruler of the universe and man's maker, is my Father; that he is the God of love who wipes away my tears and saves me from sorrow and from sin hidden in my soul; until I discovered all this, I knew nothing—absolutely nothing—about the joy of life. The fact that Christ revealed this love of God not merely by teaching, but exemplified it in his life, caused me to understand that religion is life—a life completely absorbed in God.

Aside from Christianity, where is the religion that assures the realization of a life of purity and peace, and nourishes a piety that penetrates and motivates man's total life? The peoples of the Occident have lived under the aegis of the Christian faith for nineteen hundred years. Consequently they utterly fail to comprehend their deep indebtedness to Christ.

Blot out Christ for a season! Efface every trace of his presence and power! In the resultant Christless world, no matter how scientific or philosophical or naturalistic it may become, it will soon be discovered to what extent the family life will break down, what a gap will develop between science and morals, the extent that politics will be divorced from the laborer and his needs, and the way that factional, feudalistic conditions will plague both society and the nation.

If men everywhere gave Christ the right of way, toiled as he toiled, loved purity as he loved it, devoted themselves to a service motivated by love and had his passion for peace, would the present problem of unemployment and this economic distress have come upon the world?

The love-divorced reverence of Shinto, the love-divorced other-worldliness of Buddhism and the love-divorced Confucian way of the golden mean doomed me to pass my boyhood in tears. Today the nations of the West are weeping. Why these tears? The cause is clear. Devotion to doctrine stifles love. Scientific civilization crowds love out of life. The economics of capitalism makes love an alien. . . .

This must be remembered: Shinto, Buddhism and Confucianism all teach love to a certain degree. There is a vast difference, however, between the instinctive love of animals, the ethical love of human beings and the redemptive love which God revealed through Christ. Animal love is purely instinctive, and is not subject to the correction and control of reason. Human love, though more than instinctive attempts to become rationalized only within the bounds of human relations. Confucius called this jin, the way of benevolence. But this jin of Confucius is not rooted in God, who embraces the whole universe. In Christ alone, and for the first time, was made known to mankind the love of the Cross which forgives enemies and saves sinners.

Buddhism teaches great compassion. This goes deeper and further than the jin of Confucius. Buddha was a man of virtue. A blacksmith gave him putrid pork to eat, which caused his fatal illness. Yet, on his deathbed Buddha preached the way of forgiveness and love to this man. But since the beginning of time, who has declared, "this is my blood of the covenant, which is poured out for many unto remission of sins?"

Over-individualized twentieth century man knows nothing about the inner consciousness of this redemptive love. It is not merely sacrifice. Only a God-consciousness could give expression to those wonderful words. Christ, the God-conscious Saviour, taught sinners the love of God. Nay, he did not stop with teaching. He shed his blood. He gave his life. He gave it on the Cross. Only a sinner weeping over his sins can comprehend the marvel of this love. . . .

Since the beginning of time, Christ, with his crystal-clear consciousness of a cosmic personal God and his manifestation of a love related to reality in behalf of sinful men, he and he alone has clearly taught the forgiveness of sin. In him only can the foundation stone of the world's redemptive love be laid.

If the West rejects this redeeming love and contents itself with divisive class strife, capitalistic plunder and racial selfishness, we, here in Japan, will preserve this religion of love. The Japanese military clique may trample it under its feet. We once hid this faith, that redeems through love, in the recesses of our island Empire during the persecutions which lasted through three hundred unhurried years. We can do it again.

Unfortunately mankind is still living on the animal plane. We awaken in the morning. We fall asleep at night. In the same way civilization influenced by human change, sleeps and wakes. The present is an age of unbroken sleep. In ancient times when Europe slept, the brothers of Christian love preserved this religion of the Cross in the desert, in mountains, in secluded valleys, in monasteries and through fraternal orders.

When the Holy Spirit moves in the hearts of men, making them conscious of the will of God, this redemptive love will leap forth from the desert, the monastery, the hidden mountain retreats and the secluded valleys, into the streets, the factories, the shops and all the varied haunts of men. This movement will take the form of Christian cooperatives, Red Cross activity, prison reform, movements for befriending sinners and for realizing world peace.

Alas! The Cross is again trampled to the ground! The weeping Christ once more retreats to Gethsemane! Yet, should he there again suffer arrests and be slain, he would know the way of the Resurrection. Redemptive love is itself the Resurrection Way. There can be no life without blood. As long as Japan—as long as Shinto, Buddhism, Confucianism, Mohammedanism and the world are content with a life only half conscious, a life based on the natural instincts, they may be satisfied with the present status of their religious experience. But when they awaken and yearn for a life that is fully conscious, a life under the guidance of the divine spirit, they will make the momentous discovery that this relation of the Cross, the religion of redeeming love, is the unique way of life.

From his Christ in Japan.

MISSIONARY OFFERINGS.

WEEK ENDING AUGUST 25, 1934
 Sunday Schools.

Previously acknowledged	$ 3,007.04
Mayland, Broadway, Va.	1.00
Cary, N. C.	1.50
Berea (Naus.), Driver, Va.	4.67
Rosemont, Norfolk, Va.	14.43
Flint Hill, Star, N. C.	.26
Liberty (Vance), Henderson, N. C.	3.24
Biseoe, N. C.	1.42
Durham, N. C.	7.96
Happy Home, Ruffin, N. C.	3.25

Total . . . . . $ 3,004.77

Individuals and Churches.

Previously acknowledged	$ 2,817.59
Mrs. Ella A. Holt, Graham, N. C. (Providence Memorial)	1.00
Ebenezer, Morrisville, N. C.	2.35

Total . . . . . $ 2,820.94

Specials.

Previously acknowledged	$ 950.58
Ladies' Class, Rosemont Sunday School, Norfolk, Va.	12.50

Total . . . . . $ 963.08

Coin Card Offering.

Previously acknowledged	$ 106.01
Pleasant Union Sunday School, Junior Class Lillington, N. C.	2.00

Total . . . . . $ 108.01

Summary.

Previously acknowledged	$17,268.23
Total offerings, week ending Aug. 25, 1934.	55.58

Total to date . . . . . $17,323.81

J. O. ATKINSON, Sec'y.

ALICE OF OSAKA.

By MISS D. P. CUSHING, News Editor.

"I love Japan. . ." cried Alice Elizabeth Cary of the famous Yodogawa Neighborhood House in Osaka, Japan, and therein lies the secret of her splendid work. It was into her welcoming arms that little An Chan flew, when as one of the 10,000 friendship dolls sent by American children in America to children in Japan, she reached her destination in Osaka. The children have been very near to the heart of Miss Cary, and she has as part of her manifold duties, a kindergarten, a playground, and clubs for men and women, as well as children. Sunday School, Bible study, classes in music, sewing, knitting, English, moving pictures, and many types of social service activities come under Miss Cary's watchful eye.

Miss Cary, daughter of the late beloved Dr. Otis Cary, was interested in foreign missionary service as a life investment after she had substituted a year as a teacher in mission schools in Kobe and Klot. Her close association with the students and the knowledge she gained thereby of their problems, aroused in her a sense of Japan's need. She wished especially to work for girls of the industrial classes, and in 1917 the Woman's Board sent her out. Before she had finished her language study, a call came from the Red Cross in Siberia (1918) to the Japan Mission for the loan of young workers until assistants could be secured from America. Miss Cary was sent as one of these, but returned even more devoted to her own chosen field,—Japan. She began almost at once to lay plans for the far-reaching community work, which is now thriving in the busy commercial city of Osaka, second largest in Japan, and often called "The Chicago of Japan."

The simple building which houses the Yodogawa Neighborhood House is well planned and beautifully equipped. When it was dedicated, Kagawa, well known social worker and labor leader of Japan, told the missionaries that it was the best planned and most attractive social center he had seen in any country. Government inspectors point to it as "The Model Settlement." Sunday School finds a waiting list with an attendance of 200. Miss Cary's Sunday School is the first of its kind in this Buddhist neighborhood. Swarms of people wait to take advantage of its opportunities, including religious services. There is a band of believers in the Yodogawa Neighborhood House which comes over a hundred miles and Miss Cary states that "a more faithful, earnest group of people would be harder to find anywhere."

Miss Cary was born in Osaka, Japan and educated at Wellesley College, class of 1915. She went to Japan directly after graduation.

Yodogawa Neighborhood House is located in the heart of Osaka's factory belt and there are thousands of girls employed in the great factories. Many of them come from the country districts and after the day's work is over there is some leisure time during which these girls need a suitable place in which to enjoy themselves and that's where Yodogawa comes in.

CHRISTIAN TEMPLE, NORFOLK.

The following comes from Mrs. J. E. Cartwright of Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., and tells of the splendid work being done there.

Our work this year has been a real challenge. We merged our Missionary and Ladie's Aid Societies and took the name of Woman's Council. Set a budget with an equal division of funds—Missions and Home work. We divided into groups. The group purpose was to enlist every woman in the church for missions by personal contact and telephone and then give them a miscellaneous program so worth while they would want to come back for more. We meet each month in homes, occasionally an evening group for those who work or teach. Then an altogether meeting, quarterly, for Reports, with a program or some outside speaker on a topic suitable for the occasion.

We had one all day meeting. Mr. Hardcastle taught "Eastern Women Today and Tomorrow," interspersed with prayer, music, luncheon and good fellowship. The group leaders used the Home Book as they thought best.

We have tried to think not only of ourselves and the opportunity, but first of all, those others whom we are privileged to help on The Way!

NEWS ITEM.

The Franklin Woman's Missionary Society reports a splendid year in every respect. The attendance, interest and collections have been up to expectations and they have made the Standard of Excellence in every point.

In November, December and March they presented special public programs and were delighted to have a foreign missionary to be a guest speaker on one occasion.

In February, Dr. E. W. Jones, the pastor presented the study book to the society in three meetings using two chapters at a time.

Five new members have been enrolled during the year and one lost by death. Mrs. W. J. M. Holland is the secretary of this efficient society.

MRS. W. M. JAY.

YELLOW EARTH TURNS TO GOLD.

(Continued from page 5.)

Guildhouse in London, told me of the difficulties they were facing in the sophisticated West Side of the city, with economic exigencies and encroachments of the machine age. She said that this famous religious center might have to be closed. This is true of other churches, but in general, I received the impression that the church was very much alive and serving as the center for hope and guidance. I believe the church has done more to hold England together during the storm of the last twenty years than any force.

A fourth quality of British life is solidarity. Compared with our cosmopolitan, scattered and restless nation, England seemed as solid and loyal as a family. Religion is one reason for it. This deep-seated reverence for the Christian faith impresses us when we go to Canterbury, York or Winchester. We need centers of faith like that in America. The government over there seems to be a bit more fatherly and intimate. The royal family gives a center for sentiment and a religious reverence for the cause of the Empire. The government controls and operates so much that is close to the lives of people.

The radio illustrates the contrast between our two countries. The air over there is controlled by the government. Only a few, selected programs are broadcast at certain hours of the day. They are almost all of them of high type. Children can get a real bedtime hour with Milne's poems and classic stories, instead of Orphan Annie and the mystery yarns with which our youngsters are stimulated.

Respect for tradition operates in politics. People do not laugh at Parliament. The tradition of service to the nation keeps a certain honor about political office. Political corruption as a result is uncommon. The law and the courts are venerated. The police are efficient and justice is prompt. As a result there is no crime wave such as we face. Compared with America, England is smaller, older, more unified, with no vast immigrant group to assimilate. Her problem is not as difficult as ours, but perhaps she shows us the method we should use.

This solidarity has been shown in the way that England has faced ten years of depression. She has worked out a system of unemployment insurance and old-age pensions. She has raised her taxes so that everyone has been forced to share. But loyally they have gone on through the years, bearing their burdens. Today they are winning through. Conditions are better. There is still widespread unemployment in the north, but a change has come. The courage and purpose of the people are admirable.

Emerson wrote in 1856: "I happened to arrive in England at the moment of a commercial crisis. But it was evident that let who will fail, England will not. These people have sat here a thousand years, and here will continue to sit. They will not break up, or arrive at any desperate revolution, like their neighbors; for they have as much energy, as much continence of character, as they ever had."

One of England's religious leaders said to me, "We have suffered these twenty years, but out of it has come a new England, nobler, more unified, and more Christian!"

Co-operation for Peace.

The fundamental question is, Will our mutual sufferings and the crisis of a world that seems to be again headed for war, bring our two nations into cooperation and inspire us to take the lead in keeping peace? This one question is closest to the heart of the English people. I spoke on world peace to a church crowded with men from all walks of life in Southampton. During the question period following a man asked me, "Can England and America ever be of one opinion and one purpose?" I answered, "We may continue to differ on non-essentials, but in essentials we can and must be one." "If we can't get together, there is no hope for world cooperation. We speak the same language, follow the same religion and have a common history. We live and think alike more than any two nations." The spirit of that group of men and of every audience I faced was convincing evidence that we are one in this Christian program. There may be streaks of jealousy and differences that irritate us, but there is no deep-seated suspicion, no distrust, no fear between us. We both say, "Here is one nation we can understand and depend on!"

And this is the message I bring back from the mother country—There must be a new spirit of brotherhood between us in the crusade for a brotherly world!

In Winchester Cathedral is a little chapel called the Chapel of the Guardian Angel. This chapel is named in memory of the Duke of Portland, who many years ago went to America and founded the city of Portland, Ore. After his death he was brought back and buried here in this famous shrine where so many of England's early kings lie at rest. This past summer an American family of English descent who had lived for years in America in Portland, Ore., came back to the homeland for a visit. One of their little sons was killed in a railway accident. His body was placed in this chapel to await going back to America. On the day of the service, the father knelt, and noticed the inscription which told that the chapel was built in honor of the founder of his own home city far across the seas in the new world. The father was comforted by this providential bond of association with the homeland and realized how in God's plan we are all bound together in one fellowship.

This conviction of our common heritage and our common task was impressed on me day by day. A burly London bobby, who passed our house on his beat, liked to talk in his atrocious dialect. He said one day, "My theory is never to use my club on a man. If I can't convince him with my tongue, I'm not going to convert him or do my real duty. I was in the war and saw enough of force. It's your job and mine to keep the peace!"

From the London policeman to the Premier of the Empire that one ideal is dominant today in the thoughts of England. These are the words I am privileged to bring back as a personal message from Premier Ramsey MacDonald, a leader who has staked his life on this program of world unity: "Carry to the friends of peace in America my greetings. We need to be reminded of our common baptism of one free faith at a time like the present when we are trying to unite in the essentially religious task of establishing, if possible on a permanent basis, the peace of Mankind throughout the world!"

As citizens of God's divided world we must become of one mind in order that war-loving factions and blood-stained boundaries may be transformed through the pure gold of friendliness. I would like to picture to you the country homes with hawthorn hedges and flaming gardens, tell you of ruined abbeys, ivy-covered castles and awe-inspiring cathedrals; but most of all I want you to visualize the host of comrades over there whose hearts beat with ours in the determination that hatred and war shall be replaced by brotherhood.

I have noticed that A. N. Ignoramus never finds anything too deep for him to tackle; but he will rarely stick to things within his grasp.—Milton Lee.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

DON'T GIVE UP—THE MIRACLE OF MANIFESTATION.

There is something each of us wants, wants more than anything else on earth—some goal to work for, some ideal to be achieved, some dream to be realized, some desire to be attained.

Do we expect to make a wish, rub Aladdin's lamp and find what we want waiting for us at the turn in the road, just around the corner, or in the next room—or to have it brought to us on a golden platter or to drop from heaven at our very feet?

Would we really and truly appreciate it as much as if we had to plan, work and wait for it with all our dreams and ambitions concentrated so that we grow stronger, braver and finer in the seeking and attaining and more capable of appreciating it when our efforts and patience were finally rewarded?

Would it really be as great a miracle to have it come to us through some unseen, instantaneous way as it is to have our very natures change miraculously for the better in our efforts to master conditions and achieve success—and to realize that God performs many miracles when He answers our prayers and makes our dreams come true in His own way?

If we really and truly want a thing or a condition with all our hearts, we want it enough to work and wait for it so that we may grow greater and grander through the struggle and effort, so that we may try our faith and courage and find them not wanting, so that we may prove beyond the shadow of a doubt that our soul's desires were not in vain, that our faith is justified, that God answers prayers.

SALLY HARBAUGH.

THE NEW CHURCH.

We have been discussing how to make a better world through the church. Our group agreed that the church is justified in the following ways:

- I. By its origin.
- II. By its history.
- III. By our own experience.

We first took a backward glance. We discussed the church of long ago, its ways and actions compared with ours of today. We discussed the history of the church of our forefathers. On all occasions we linked the churches of today with those of long ago.

We were concerned in answering the following questions:

1. Why attend and belong to the church?
2. In what ways can we make our church better?
3. What does the world need most from the church?

In answering the first question it was agreed that we should attend and belong to the church because:

(a.) We need to get in touch with God. We need the worship that the church offers. We go to church to seek the presence of God and gain strength from communion with Him.

(b.) We know there is strength in union. The church should be as one unit, all working toward the same goal. A divided church cannot save the world. There must be unification of the church in order to enlighten the world.

(c.) Attending church brings people closer together and this brings about the point that one should belong to the church for the fellowship it creates. We all love friends, and only through attending church can we form the Christian friendships that are offered there.

(d.) In church and Sunday schools we receive training that goes to make us better men and women. Here we learn the gospel, and through its beautiful messages our lives should be trained so that they might reflect the beauty of Jesus.

(e.) We believe in prevention as well as cure. In this we mean that we should attend church and get in touch with Jesus so that our lives might become so God-like that we will be strong enough to prevent the daily occurrences of sin and temptation. We should attend church for the purpose of preventing our sins rather than trying to make amends for sins already committed.

2. In what ways can we make our church better?

(a.) Certainly our churches of today need more cooperation. We all need to pull together rather than against each other. When our churches cooperate so freely that they shall be as one person then the churches will be an example to set up for others and to help reform this wicked world.

(b.) Our Sunday school departments and our Endeavor societies would be much better if they had more real leaders for their heads. Our churches need older leaders as well as young ones. A Sunday school naturally shows more respect for an elder leader. The churches need men and women who have trained themselves in the leadership field.

(c.) We know that we cannot have a real church unless we have the presence of young people. The church needs to reach out to those young people who are wandering from its folds and it needs to draw them in and make them so interested that they will want to stay in. Young people put joy into any church.

(d.) Also, we need more stability in our churches. We need more stable members who are not continually moving their membership from church to church.

(e.) Our churches would be considerably better if there were more drawing cards. By this we mean ways in which we might draw out the talents of our young people. We need such societies as dramatic classes, music organizations, and other social activities. If we do not utilize the talents of our young people, the schools and other such places will utilize them to their end. Thus we could make our churches better by planning ways and organizations for the purpose of drawing out our young folk's talents and using them in such a way that the church and young people both would be benefited by such actions.

3. What does the world need most from the church?

(a.) The church needs to touch the lives of the young people and so enlighten them that they shall be a shining example for the world. If young people are trained in the church from babyhood up so that they are given a real Christian training then when these are ready to take their places in the world they will carry their Christian teachings and spirit with them. Thus the church needs to fling out the life line and draw the young people into its merciful fold.

(b.) If the world could see the churches through these eyes, we are sure this would be a better world; namely, that the congregation should so illustrate the Christ-like spirit that the sinful world should be put to shame. The world needs to have Christ reflected in the human mass of the church.

(c.) The church needs a stronger bond of understanding between its youngsters and elders. Each should know what wonders the other is doing. Parents should know more about the accomplishments of their children. Children and parents should reach a mutual understanding in their individual actions within their church.

(d.) The world needs better leaders, and we think that this type of production should be provided by the church. The church should train all its members toward the art of leadership. Then, too, the Christian spirit should rest strongly within the members of the church. When men fill governmental, educational, social, and industrial positions, they should be church-going men. They should remember their teachings and carry out their duties according to the standards of their Christian teachings. Only real Christian men should become our leaders of today, for it takes Christian leaders to make a Christian world.

"Let us build our church upon a rock so that when the storm comes it will still stand—safer and stronger than ever."

Adopted by Elon Forum.

GOD HEARS PRAYER.

If radio's slim fingers can pluck a melody
From night—and tress it over a continent or sea;
If the petaled white notes of a violin
Are blown across the mountains or the city's din;
If songs, like crimson roses, are culled from thin,
blue air—
Why should mortals wonder if God hears a
prayer?

ETHEL ROMIG FULLER.

COURAGE.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR SEPT. 9, 1934.

Acts 20:23.

Daily Readings:

Mon., Sept. 3.—David's courage. I Sam. 17:32-37.
Tues., Sept. 4.—Stout-hearted Caleb. Num. 14:6-10.
Wed., Sept. 5.—Otter and John. Acts 4:17-0.
Thurs., Sept. 6.—Defying the King. Dan. 3:13-18.
Fri., Sept. 7.—Courage divine. Eph. 6:10-18.
Sat., Sept. 8.—The source of courage. Phil. 4:13.

Program.

Instrumental Prelude—"Lead On, O King Eternal."

Hymn—"We March, We March to Victory."
Prayer—"For Strength."

"This is my prayer:

Give me strength lightly to bear my joys and sorrows;
Give me strength never to disown the poor or bend my knee before insolent might.

Give me strength to raise my mind high above daily trifles,

And give me the strength to surrender my strength to Thy willing love."—Amen.

(Rabindranath Tagore.)

Scripture—Acts 20:22-27.

Hymn—"Who Is on the Lord's Side?"

Speaker—"Courage."

Hymn—"Fight the Good Fight With All Thy Might."

Life is an adventure. It takes courage of a sort just to live, to get up in the morning and go forth to what the day has for you. "We know not what a day may bring forth." It takes courage to live in a day like this that offers so little to so many in the way of satisfying work or of reward for labor. It takes courage for young

(Continued on page 11.)

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

MICAH CHAMPIONS THE OPPRESSED.

LESSON X—SEPTEMBER 2, 1934.

GOLDEN TEXT: "He hath showed thee O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God."—Micah 6:8.

LESSON TEXT: Micah 6:1—7:6.

Micah lived in the eighth century and prophesied at the same time that Isaiah was exercising his prophetic ministry. Unlike Isaiah, he came from the country, and from the poorer class. Something of the "class spirit" seems to color his message, especially his antipathy to the cities. He predicted that both Jerusalem and Samaria would be destroyed, and these predictions, especially the one in regard to Jerusalem made a profound impression on the people of his time and nation. Micah might be called the "champion of the poor." In impassioned language he denounced the rich who had taken advantage of the poor. He has been called "the democrat" among the prophets.

Conditions were very bad in Micah's time. A reading of the seven chapters that make up the book which bears his name gives some interesting insights into, or sidelights upon these conditions. The people had made graven images and had given themselves to the worship thereof. The rich had waxed richer and richer while the poor had waxed poorer and poorer. Micah makes a reference to those who lie awake at night devising evil on their beds, and when the morning was come, carrying out their evil designs," because it is in the power of their hand." Property was taken by violence. Judges were subject to bribes, the priests taught for hire, the prophets gave their messages for money.

And yet, in spite of the glaring evils of the time, the people were outwardly very religious. As a matter of fact they rather ridiculed Micah's message with its prediction of gloom, for they felt sure that God would not allow anything to happen to Jerusalem, the chosen city of his chosen people. It was this false sense of security that made the situation so dangerous in Micah's view. He confidently predicted that Jerusalem should become as a heap, that Zion should be ploughed as a field, that the "mountain of the house should become as the high places of the forest."

Today's lesson is a dramatic piece of Micah's prophecy. He calls upon the mountains, the hills, to be witnesses as Jehovah pleads his case against the people. Jehovah asks what he has done that his people should thus treat him. He reminds them that he brought them out of Egypt, out of the house of bondage, that he had given them good and great leaders, that he had always dealt righteously with them. He then tells them that no amount of outward religion or formal ceremony can be a substitute for inner righteousness, and tells them that the essentials of religion are to "do justly, love mercy, and to walk humbly with God." Jehovah adds that because his people have forsaken him, he will deliver them up to the sword, and make their land desolate.

The high peak in today's lesson, as it is the high peak of the Old Testament is Micah's definition of religion. In Chapter six, verse eight, he says, "He hath shewed thee O man, what is good; And what doth Jehovah require of thee, but to do justly, to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?" Dr. George Adam Smith, an authoritative Old Testament Scholar says that these are the climax of Old Testament utterances. In sense, these words sum up the essence of Old Testament prophecy as uttered by Amos, Hosea, and Isaiah. To do justly—Amos emphasized justice, to love mercy—Hosea emphasized the love of God—to walk humbly with thy God—Isaiah emphasized faith.

These Old Testament prophecies, with their sometimes strange words and symbols are not so much out of date as one might sometimes think. For instance there are multitudes of people today who would define or interpret religion in terms of forms and ceremonies, instead of in terms of inner spiritual life. There are many who would emphasize correctness of intellectual belief, rather than righteousness of life. There are those who would give diligence to the so-called religious practices while all the time they would be oppressing their fellowmen or living unethically. Today as in Micah's day it is quite possible for a nation as well as an individual to be outwardly religious and inwardly spiritually bankrupt. One feels that the prophets have a message for our day. There is formality in religion, corruption in government, greed in business, hatred in international relationships, to say nothing of injustice and oppression. And the laws of God are as inexorable today as always. As a nation sows, so shall it reap. America's hope is in a revival of inner religion, a religion that finds its life and vitality in inner communion with God, and which expresses itself in ethical conduct in all the relationships of life.

YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

(Continued from page 10.)

people to go out into a world that seems to have no crying need of their services.

Paul's experience seems unique, partly because we read of it in the Bible! It is not unique; it is typical. With that in mind, read it. Begin with Acts 9:1-30; skip to chapter 13 and read through 20:23, the references for this meeting. But you don't have to go so far back into history, nor to the Bible alone, for courageous lives. It is in the human heart to go straight into the face of difficulty and danger, even when they might with honor be evaded. As John Oxenham intimates, "each of us has the power of choosing which way his soul shall go." Which way are you choosing? What about the members of your group? Are there drifters among them? Are there those who are choosing the way that will require courage to travel?

You might get different members to bring out those particular kinds of courage that are found in the lives of living persons like Jane Addams, Albert Schweitzer, Wilfred Grenfell, Richard Byrd, Franklin D. Roosevelt. Get others, also, to tell of some persons who need not be named in public, who are showing courage in the undramatic circumstances of their daily lives—"The courage of the commonplace." Often both more common and courageous than the courage that receives distinguished medals. There are some in your church or in your group.

"Moral Courage," the dictionary says, "is that firmness of principle which prompts and enables a person to do what he deems his duty, although it may subject him to severe censure."

This may well be the main point of your discussion. What circumstances faced by the members of your group require moral courage? What about the social habits of the various groups with whom they mingle between meetings? What about business practices in the places they work? Are they required or expected to do the things that are "against their principles?"

EVELYN RICHARDSON.

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.
Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.

These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. It combines with the Concordance, Subject-Index, Scripture Proper Names, etc. The 12 Maps have been carefully revised and are beautifully colored. In making orders, give the number and price.

135—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold. $3.00

India Paper Edition, Only 16-16 of an inch thick.

133X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold, $4.00

SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS' BIBLE.

Especially made up for gift or reward Bibles for Sunday School scholars, containing a special series of very practical and useful helps and Bible Questions and Answers, etc. Printed on fine white Bible paper; ruby type; pocket size, 3 3/4 x 5 3/8 inches, and 1 inch thick, with 31 full-page illustrations in sepia. All bindings are black. Ruby Type, Size 3 3/4 x 5 3/8 inches, and 1 Inch Thick.

65—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold; 6 colored maps .....$2.50

AUTHORIZED VERSION.

RED LETTER TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Brevier Type (8 vo.), Self-Pronouncing, Size 5 3/8 x 8 1/2 Inches and 1 3/8 Inches Thick.

Containing the Bible, with full references. The words of Christ in the New Testament are printed in red; other parts of the book are printed in black. With Concise Bible Dictionary, combined Concordance, and 12 indexed maps.

7852—Genuine Leather, Lavanant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold .....$4.75

RED-LETTER EDITION.

With All the Words of Christ in the New Testament Printed in Red.

1282—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit round corners, red under gold edges, register and headbands; title stamped on side and back in pure gold .....$3.25

60—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, Sunday School Scholars' Bible, stamped in pure gold on cover, no illustrations; special book for Sunday Schools ..... 95c

Any of the above Bibles sent postpaid. Address
THE CHRISTIAN SUN
1536 East Broad Street Richmond, Virginia

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy

MONDAY.

LIFE'S OVERMASTERING SIGHT.

"Father forgive them for they know not what they do."

There is no sight in the world like that of Jesus Christ hanging on the cross, saying, "Father, forgive them." Forgiveness on his lips, a crown of blessing in His hand, and waiting for them to receive it.

"This is worth laboring for; praying for; living for and dying for."

"When the lights of life are gleaming,
Where its blossoms bud and bloom;
When each brow is bound with roses,
As we bask in their perfume:
Just beyond the smiles and sunshine,
All unseen the Master stands,
Waiting ever, ever waiting,
Holding out His pierced hands.

"When the shades of night are falling,
Where each heart must stand alone
And the world has left us nothing
We can call or claim our own:
Then we turn to meet the Master,
Where a halo lights the past,
Waiting ever, ever waiting,
Till we clasp His hand at last."

—Anonymous.

Prayer—O Lord, if Thou art so beautiful in this world, as we see now, what glory must be Thine when the veil shall be drawn aside and we see Thee face to face! Though we see darkly now, may we see clearly then, O God, this is our hope. Help us to live unto it now and forever.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE CALL OF THE HILLS.

"I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help.

"My help cometh from the Lord, which made heaven and earth."—Psalms 121:1-2.

This expression of the Psalmist is a shepherd term. He is looking unto the Lord as a lost sheep looks up to the mountain side when he hears the call of his master there.

However, the hills that the psalmist was thinking about were not visible ones to the sense, but they were visible to the heart that longed for them. So he is speaking of the eyes of the soul and the hills and the realities of God. "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness"; and looking for spiritual things finds God, his sufficient help.

Prayer—O God, make us Thy children this day. Thou who art above us pour out upon us Thy strength. O Lord, make us Thine forever.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE CHURCH OR JESUS.

"(Jesus) saith unto them come and see."

One of the two which heard Him was Andrew—He findeth his own brother—and brought him to Jesus.—Jno. 1:39-42.

We have no record of Jesus ever inviting anyone to church. He found the church here. He went to church every Sunday, the record would indicating, and there He worshipped, but never is it recorded that He was ever even the center of attraction there. Only once do we read that at the church He sat down and read the prophesy and added, "this day is this prophesy fulfilled in your ears."

The work of Jesus was to bring God, in person to the world; to compel belief in God; to be the way in life; to be the light of the way; the truth of life, yes, life itself; and, to fulfill this mission, He lived every day among the people, going about doing good, healing the sick, and helping the needy, showing that in such service was the true conception of the kingdom of God and only by rendering such service could one inherit the kingdom of God.

Though He never invited anyone to the church, He did invite all to come to Him, to "come and see," to come "and live," to come and learn, to come and love, to come and rest, and they who came found Him and believed in Him.

Have we placed the emphasis of our invitation in the wrong place? When inviting people to church only, we put the emphasis on the church. The disciples invited people "to come." The apostolic church was organized and promoted that way, we think; but their invitation was of this order: "We have found Jesus, the saviour, come and see" and as many as came believed, and as many as believed were baptized and "added to the church."

Our emphasis is "come to church." Should it not be "come and see Jesus?" But that is a serious invitation fraught with ponderous responsibility. Only those who have found the Lord for themselves can really extend that invitation with any meaning, for only they who have the light can let light shine. Only they who have received the Holy Ghost can witness for Him. We may be commissioned to "go and make disciples of all nations," but the making of disciples is by bidding folks to come to Jesus, and not merely by bidding them to come to the church and hear a sermon.

Prayer—Our dear Father, give unto us the personal experience of knowing Thee and telling others of Thee. In all we do and say may we be found true, for Jesus' sake we ask it.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

GO TO CHURCH.

"If we walk in the light as He is in the light, we have fellowship one with another and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin."—I Jno. 1:7.

To go to church keeps us in remembrance that there is more in this world than what is seen and felt; that there are realities beyond our senses which are the most substantial and enduring realities of all.

Life is sad and hopeless if there is nothing beyond the things we can touch. The testimony of those spiritual realities are borne to us at least every Sunday and they are borne to us through the church. So, the least one can expect to find there is the un-seen and the eternal, the story of the cross and its meaning, the touch of Christ, fellowship with the Holy Spirit, christian companionship on life's journey, and a service to a good cause.

Prayer—O Lord, leave us not that our way may be light; leave us not that Thou mayest be to us as eyes; leave us not that we may participate in a great work and share in Thy glorious cause. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

RELIGION AT HOME.

"Be kindly affectioned, one to another."—Rom. 12:10.

"Let husband render unto the wife her due; and likewise also the wife unto her husband."—I Cor. 7:3.

Amid the cares of married life,
In spite of toil and business strife,
If you value your sweet wife,
Tell her so!

When days are dark and deeply blue,
She has her troubles, same as you;
Show her that your love is true—
Tell her so!

Your love for her is no mistake—
You feel it dreaming or awake—
Don't conceal it; for her sake
Tell her so!

Never let her heart grow cold—
Richer beauties will unfold;
She is worth her weight in gold!
Tell her so!

—Anonymous.

G. Campbell Morgan tells us of an incident in his pastoral experience in which one of two worldly sisters was converted and became a christian. One day the other said to the christian sister, "I do not understand your religion, but I will tell you one thing: it has made you far easier to live with." That is it.

Prayer—O Lord, our Lord, Our Lord of love, mercy and blessing, set a watch over the door of our lips to guard unseemly words and to express life's truths and devotions.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE DARK OF TRUTH.

"Sorrow is better than laughter; for by the sadness of the countenance the heart is made glad."—Ecclesiastes 7:1-7.

Whoever plants seeds should know that they germinate faster if entrusted to moist, warm soil, and then are covered over with cloth or porous paper. Germinating seeds do not require the light, but love the darkness. So it is with the seeds of truth in our souls. We often speak of "the light of truth," but in this connection of growth we may well speak of "the dark of truth."

Adversity is a better teacher than prosperity and sorrow is a wiser and more convincing instructor than joy. By the sadness of the countenance the heart is made glad. It is made to rejoice before long in the flowers and the fruit of God's gardens.

Prayer—Thou knowest best, Heavenly Gardener! Keep us in the darkness at Thy will. As long as Thou dost wish, keep us in the dark. For in the end, we are sure, Thy wisdom will prove itself.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

SUNDAY.

A TESTED SHOE.

"Show ye therefore unto them in the face of the churches the proof of your love, and of our glorying on your behalf."—II Cor. 8:16-24

Paul was very eager that the Christian churches which he had founded among the Gentiles should prove their worth to all the world, by their charity, their faith, their patience, their brotherly love. He watched over them, as a father watches his beloved child or a teacher his well-loved pupil.

(Continued on page 14.)

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

IT WORKED!

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT.

"In that hour Jesus rejoiced in spirit, and said, I thank Thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth."

For more than thirty years Jesus had been coming to this hour—the hour when he should try the Gospel on the world. He had been preparing his followers for it for nearly three years, and now he had made the test. Did it work? The answer is found in a rejoicing Lord who thanked God, the God of heaven and earth. Jesus had known from experience that God was the God of heaven, now he knew that he was also God of the earth from actual experience. Perhaps I had better say he has his knowledge here further confirmed by this experience.

In our day we know something of preparing for some great undertaking or event. The other day I walked about the sand hills of Kitty Hawk, North Carolina. I saw where those two sons of a clergyman worked with their great idea of an airship, and where after painstaking preparation they had the thrill of seeing it work. Theirs must have been an inspired dream. I have seen where they lived as boys, and I have seen the old building, which was their bicycle repair shop, and I have heard first hand the stories of their studies and their consecration to their task, and their courage. It is all thrilling. In so short a time the heavens are filled the world around with the flight of their machines. They came to the day of their final testing and it worked!

Just this summer the world has bowed its head in the death of a woman who in her childhood days dreamed her dreams of conquest in the world of chemistry. Her father was a professor in a French university, and she married a professor in still another university. She and her distinguished husband worked day and night on their discovery of radium, until in 1903 they were given jointly the Nobel prize for physics; and after her husband's death Madame Curie continued her research until in 1911 she was given the Nobel prize in chemistry. What an inspiring record has been hers! She has for these many years been doing her tests and seeing them work. And so on we could go with hundreds of inventions and discoveries. They are well known to us all. Now they worked in the realm of science; Jesus worked in the realm of the soul. They achieved, and achieved marvelously for the outer comfort and happiness of man; Jesus achieved beyond all measure for the abiding inner comfort and peace of body, mind, and soul. They followed the laws of earth; Jesus the laws of heaven and earth. They worked with things, matter; Jesus worked with mind and spirit. They touched the tangible; Jesus touched the intangible. Their work is blessed, but temporal; Jesus' is abiding and eternal. Their work was made possible in a world enlightened by the light, and life, and love of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Now let us observe a bit further this test of Jesus'. For some time he had been teaching his disciples the mysteries of the kingdom of God. Others had been listening in. He could not keep his teachings in a corner. More than his original class caught the glory of his course. His lecture room was the seaside, the market center, the dusty road, the well curb, the sick room, the synagogue, and wherever his beautiful life was lived or his glorious words were spoken. Many followed him. Out of that many not twelve, but seventy, were chosen. Giving them his final instruction for the test of whether or not the gospel would have power unto salvation, and as to whether common people who loved him could tell it out so that others would understand and hear it, he bade them go: "Go your ways; behold, I send you forth as lambs among wolves." What could seem more futile? Have you ever seen a hungry pack of wolves? Do you know their cry? Do you know their courage of attack? And have you ever seen lambs? Well, what could be more futile? He had made his prayers, worked his plans, prepared their messages, and given them the command to go. Did it work? It worked!

"The seventy returned with joy." Is not that one hundred per cent? They all came back rejoicing, and victorious,—not part of them, but all of them. And not part of them victorious and rejoicing, but all of them! Moses sent out twelve, and ten of them came back afraid, and whipped; but two of them became the vanguard of this seventy, all of whom came back victorious. Let us thank God for the twos, and let us thank Him for the seventies!

It was not a picnic they had been sent out in—no, not going as lambs before wolves. Every now and then you will hear some fellows who go to church about once in a year, and pays for his religion through his wife's envelope say, "Well I am afraid the church is about licked. Why doesn't it do something about these times in which we are living? I do not see much to the church any more." And you can pin that fellow down until he will finally tell you he does not see much success coming from anything any more. He cannot realize what our world would be like now without the leveling influence of the church of Christ. None of us can, and all of us hope we shall never see a society without the living church of God. Is the church dead? Hear what Jesus' disciples said in that first test: "And the seventy returned with joy, saying, Lord, even the devils are subject unto us through thy name!"

And hearing that Jesus rejoiced! It had worked! They had gone out into a society just as wicked as ours. Their battle was just as hard. They were attacking the first frontiers of the faith. And the devils themselves were powerless before them. What a mighty marching army is the church of the living God. It may be suppressed here a little, or there a little; it may drift into a bit of apostasy on this front, or a bit of cowardice on that; but before you know it the church has risen like her resurrected Lord and things take a turn toward a new day.

What were the tools of the test? Not the mighty, and exalted of that day, but just those average, common folk who loved and followed the Lord. Witnesses, says Jesus. Just folks who could tell a true story about what they had seen, and heard, and felt for themselves. A personal testimony and a childlike faith in God, and industry enough to go as commanded! Now do not mistake my meaning. If a man has talent to earn largely, and influence folks widely, and learn deeply and broadly, he should develop each talent he has, and consecrate it to the Lord. But let us never be discouraged with our own poor selves if we are willing to obey his commands. Jesus used both the high and low, the rich and poor, the learned and the unlearned to promote his kingdom on earth in his day, and he is doing the same thing today.

And now let us come to the most important thing of all this business. It is expressed in the phrase,—“through my name.” “Even the devils are subject unto us through Thy name.” Not us, but Jesus! Not our spirits, nor our wills, nor our minds, nor our might, but Jesus'. Whenever the
(Continued on page 14.)

COMMUNION WARE.

Individual Service.

Made in best Silver Plate or Aluminum. Prices low; first-class workmanship and finish.

ALUMINUM.

Aluminum is light in weight, durable, and does not tarnish.

Style No. 50-A.

- Tray No. 2—Interlocking, with 40 plain glasses $7.00
- Tray No. 6—Interlocking, with 35 plain glasses 6.75
- Tray No. 10—Interlocking, with 30 plain glasses 6.50
- Base No. 50-A—Fits Trays 2, 6, or 10..... 2.25
- Cover No. 50-A—Fits Trays 2, 6, or 10..... 2.25
- Bread Plate No. 1—Narrow rim..... 1.60

SILVER-PLATED.

The Silver-plated Ware is of the very highest grade and best finish; heavily plated on nickel base.

- Tray No. 85—Interlocking only, with 36 glasses $22.00
- Base No. 1—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 85.. 11.00
- Cover No. 5—Silver-plated; fits Tray No. 85... 16.00

- (For Silver Bread Plates, see under No. 90.)
- Tray No. 90—Interlocking, with 36 plain glasses (this style has broad rim, which is sometimes preferred, due to increased ease of handling) $22.00
  - Base No. 2—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 90.. 16.00
  - Cover No. 4—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 90. 14.00

- Bread Plate No. 3—Narrow Rim.....$ 9.00
- Bread Plate No. 4—Broad Rim..... 9.00
- Filler—Silver Lined..... 6.00

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street

Richmond, Virginia

A Story for the Children

ONE LITTLE BAG OF RICE.

B. Edward Eggleston.

The first white people that came to this country hardly knew how to get their living here. They did not know what would grow best in this country. Many of the white people learned to hunt. All the land was covered with trees. In the woods were many animals whose flesh was good to eat.

There were deer, and bears, and great shaggy buffaloes. There were rabbits and squirrels. And there were many kinds of birds. The hunters shot wild ducks, wild turkeys, wild geese, and pigeons. The people also caught many fish out of the rivers. Then there were animals with fur on their backs. The people killed these and sold their skins. In this way many made their living.

Other people spent their time in cutting down the trees. They sawed the trees into timbers and boards. Some of it they split into staves and other sorts of timber to be shipped to other countries to be sold. In South Carolina men made tar and pitch out of the pine trees.

But there was a wise man in South Carolina. He was one of those men that find out better ways of doing things. His name was Thomas Smith.

Thomas Smith had once lived in a large island thousands of miles away from South Carolina. In that island he had seen the people raising rice. He saw that it was planted in wet ground. He said that he would like to try it in South Carolina. But he could not get any seed rice to plant. The rice that people eat is not fit to sow.

One day a ship came to Charleston, where Thomas Smith lived. It had been driven there by storms. The ship came from the large island where Smith had seen rice grow. The captain of this ship was an old friend of Smith. The two old friends met once more. Thomas Smith told the captain that he wanted some rice for seed. The captain called the cook of his ship and asked him if he had any. The cook had one little bag of seed rice. The captain gave this to his friend.

There was some wet ground in the back of Smith's garden. In this wet ground he sowed some of the rice. It grew finely. He gathered a good deal of rice in his garden that year. He gave part of this to his friends. They all sowed it. The next year there was a great deal of rice. After a while the wet land in South Carolina was turned to rice fields. Every year many thousand barrels of rice were sent away to be sold.

All this came from one little bag of rice and one wise man.

—From Stories of Great Americans.

THE FAMILY ALTAR.

(Continued from page 12.)

And to that end he was glad when they were put to the proof.

It was like the testing of a new football cleat put out by a national sporting goods house. The firm hired men in different parts of the country to do nothing but put on football shoes and then walk and run around a field, so that it might be discovered just how long, on the average, a shoe is in use during a football season. Thus their goods were put to the proof.

Is our God less solicitous for the testing of His children, the work of His hands? And shall we be less anxious to make a good showing under the test?

Prayer—Prove us, O Lord. Try us in every way. Test us as long as is necessary. That we may do Thy work, to the glory of Thy name.—Amen.

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

(Continued from page 13.)

church has gone out without his spirit it has been whipped; whenever an individual has gone out for the church in his own power or might, or his own goodness, or wisdom, he has been whipped. And he should be. Only in the spirit of Christ, and the power of God is the kingdom to come. Too often we have forgotten that! Our plans, our programs, our preachments have projected themselves, and the church has suffered. But when we have gone in his name,—in his spirit,—there has been victory. And great have been the victories the church has won, and is still winning today!

They are now numbered by legion who are willing to try as Christ would have them try his kingdom to bring on earth. And the church is not whipped. Seeing that Jesus rejoiced. And he told them that blessed were the eyes that saw what they were seeing. The Gospel worked, and they were seeing what the world had waited to see across the centuries.

You and I have the privilege of being his witnesses. You and I have the privilege of rejoicing the heart of our Lord by being true in our day as they were in theirs. Let us try it, and find that it works!

"When Jesus saw her, He called her to Him and said unto her, 'Woman, thou art loosed from thine infirmity.'" Luke 13:12—It is a great hour when a soul lifts its face toward heaven, when it discovers that Christ is calling, and that He would do for the soul what was done for the bent body of a poor woman that sabbath day long ago!—James I. Vance.

Eilers Sunday School Maps.

On a Revolving Adjustable Steel Stand.

The first 5 maps are in Set No. 1, with stand, Price $15 00

Set No. 2 8 Maps, Price $15 00

Fine large Maps, in 6 Colors 36x57, on linen finished Cloth. Mounted on a folding steel stand, which can be regulated, so that Maps may be seen to the best advantage. This set contains data for thorough Bible Study. Its large print and Cheerful Colors makes this set very instructive and attractive. Contains the five thoroughly up to date Maps necessary to the study of Bible History. New Testament Palestine.—Old Testament Palestine.—Roman empire and Bible Lands, showing Pauls Travels by Colored lines.—Lands of the Old Testament, from the Great Sea, to the Persian Gulf.—The Exodus, Egypt, showing by Colored lines the wanderings of the Israelites.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street

Richmond, Virginia

HOLMAN SUPERIOR TEACHERS' BIBLES

Authorized Version—Self-Pronouncing

The Best Editions of the World's Best Book

For Adults, Teachers, Preachers, Students, and All Who Would Study the Word of God Intelligently

BOLD BLACK TYPE—COMPACT SIZE 4½x6¾ INCHES—WILL FIT THE COAT POCKET

Part page specimen of Holman Boldblack Type Bible

ST. MATTHEW, 5.

Christ's sermon on the mount.

13 And leaving Náz'a-réth, he came and dwelt in Cá-pér'na-úm, which is upon the sea coast, in the borders of Záb'u-lon and Néph'tha-lim:
14 That it might be fulfilled

A. D. 31.

934

CHAPTER 5.

CHAP. 4.

3 Who are blessed. 13 The disciples called the salt of the earth, and light of the world; Christ urgeth on them a good example, etc.

AND seeing the multitudes; he went up into a moun-

THIS NEW HOLMAN TEACHERS' BIBLE. Pronouncing Text, Bold Black Type is a PRONOUNCED SUCCESS. The latest Bible with NEW HELPS that are quite comprehensive and consist of an Illustrated Bible Dictionary, Concordance and additional aids all under ONE ALPHABETICAL INDEX. Also Fine Maps on Coated Paper, and a specially prepared BIBLE READING COURSE, intended to stimulate and maintain interest in the Bible. Imported Bible paper is used to improve opacity and keep down bulk. By this means you get the benefit of full Biblical information without the physical discomfort of handling a heavy volume.

4612. French Morocco Leather, divinity circuit, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges..... $4.00

4620. Same as 4612, with extra leather lined covers..... 4.75

THIN INDIA PAPER EDITION With Helps as described above. Size 4½x6¾ inches. One inch in thickness

630X. Egyptian Morocco, divinity circuit, leather linings, red under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker..... 7.00

633X. Algerian Morocco, divinity circuit, leather lining to edge, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, extra quality binding..... 8.00

EXTRA LARGE PRINT TEACHERS' BIBLES

Large 8 Vo. Size—8x5½ inches—1600 Pages, including 400 pages of Bible Study Helps

Part Page Specimen of Print

ST. MATTHEW, 5.

Christ's sermon on the mount.

15 The land of Záb'u-lon, and the land of Néph'tha-lim, by the way of the sea, beyond Jór'dan, Gál'i-lee of the Gén'tiles;

A. D. 31.

2

And he opened his mouth, and taught them, saying,

3 Blessed are the poor in spirit: for their's is the kingdom of heaven.

Is. 9. 1, 2.

Lu. 4. 2. 7.

Lu. 2. 32.

Mark 1. 14.

CONTAINING COMPLETE HELPS TO BIBLE STUDY, INCLUDING ALL OF THE FOLLOWING FEATURES A New Practical Course in Bible Reading, A Treasury of Biblical Information. The most carefully compiled, thorough and attractive form in which valuable Biblical information has ever been prepared. Illustrated Self-Pronouncing Bible Dictionary Containing 150 illustrations, concise definitions and textual references on nearly 50,000 subparts. A Practical Comparative Concordance, with nearly 50,000 references. Four Thousand Questions and Answers on the Old and New Testaments. A valuable Help to all Bible Readers.

STYLES AND PRICES

4712. Divinity Circuit (overlapping covers), French Seal Leather, red under gold edges, silk head bands, and silk marker.. $5.00

812RL. Red Letter Teachers' Bible. The Words of Christ in the New Testament, Old Testament Passages alluded to by Christ, various prophecies relating to Christ in the Old Testament, etc., all PRINTED IN RED. Binding same as described above on 4712 and same large Self-Pronouncing type..... 6.00

733X. Holman India Paper, Genuine Morocco, leather lined, silk sewed, divinity circuit, round corners carmine under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker, same type and helps as above..... 10.65

All styles sent Postpaid at above prices—Thumb Index 50 cents extra

Extra spacing between words and lines makes this Bible very easy to read.

Christian Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear friends:

Because of the strain through which Mr. Johnston is now passing and the unusual demands on his time, he has felt it necessary to ask an assistant to supply material for this corner this week.

Mrs. Johnston, a patient in Rainey Hospital, is gravely ill and her condition is cause for much real concern in The Orphanage Family. The children, from the oldest to our baby girl, have asked repeatedly, "How is Mrs. Johnston?" The wife of our superintendent has long been interested in the work here. Her gentle manner and her thoughtfulness of others has won for her genuine affection in the hearts of children and workers alike.

That which touches the life of "Uncle Charlie," "Daddy Johnston" to the little tots, is very near the heart of The Orphanage. He is more than a superintendent to these children. To them he is the embodiment of love, sympathy, understanding, and things hoped for. To see the faces of these little ones when he comes in, to hear the older ones sing his praises from day to day is to know that the Church has not misplaced its confidence in him. Whether it be the need of a sick child from midnight to dawn or the call of a group on pleasure bent, they know he will not fail them. Nearly every week men and women who have spent their childhood here come back. Some have traveled to strange and distant lands but they enjoy sitting with "Uncle Charlie" and, in memory, living again the days they spent here with him.

We pray that his lovely wife will be spared to him. Will you not remember them both in your prayers?

Sincerely,
ERIE LAINE.

REPORT FOR AUGUST 30, 1934.

Brought forward .....$8,193.62

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Eastern North Carolina Conference:
Bethel, Wake .....$ 2.12
Liberty, Vance ..... 3.34
..... 5.46

Western North Carolina Conference:
Flint Hill ..... .33
..... .33

Eastern Virginia Conference:
First Richmond ..... 3.43
Windsor ..... 5.18
Berea, Nansemond ..... 5.00
Holy Neck ..... 4.80
..... 18.41

Valley Virginia Central Conference:
Newport ..... 1.51
Winchester ..... 3.09
..... 4.60

Alabama Conference:
Mt. Zion ..... .73
..... .73

Georgia and Alabama Conference:
Bethany ..... 1.00
..... 1.00

Special Offerings.

New Elam S. S., spec. col. for singing
Class ..... 16.09
G. M. Womble 2nd Bible Class, New
Elam Church ..... 2.00
N. B. Smith, Jr., guardian for Whitten children ..... 50.00
Mr. B. Drake, Franklin, Va. .... 5.00

Mrs. B. Drake, Franklin, Va. ....	1.00
Jeff and Betsy Penn Foundation, Reidsville, N. C. ....	5.00	79.09
Total for the week .....	109.62
Grand total .....	$8,303.24

OUR COLLEGES—THEY ALSO SERVE.
(Continued from page 7.)

mosphere? That atmosphere will be found in the Christian college.

It would seem convincing then that the years young people spend in colleges are of such transcendent importance that the kind of college to which they go should concern Christian parents.

If the spiritual life engendered before that time is to be conserved, if they are to make satisfactory adjustments to modern life and knowledge, if they are to enjoy a favoring environment when some of the greatest decisions of life are made, if we wish to preserve the altruistic spirit and to make it permanent, there are few places which can serve better than the church school. These schools deserve well at the hands of those in whose behalf they were founded and which, in spite of fearful handicaps continue to serve faithfully and well. The Christian college is a definite, positive and efficient agency in Kingdom building.

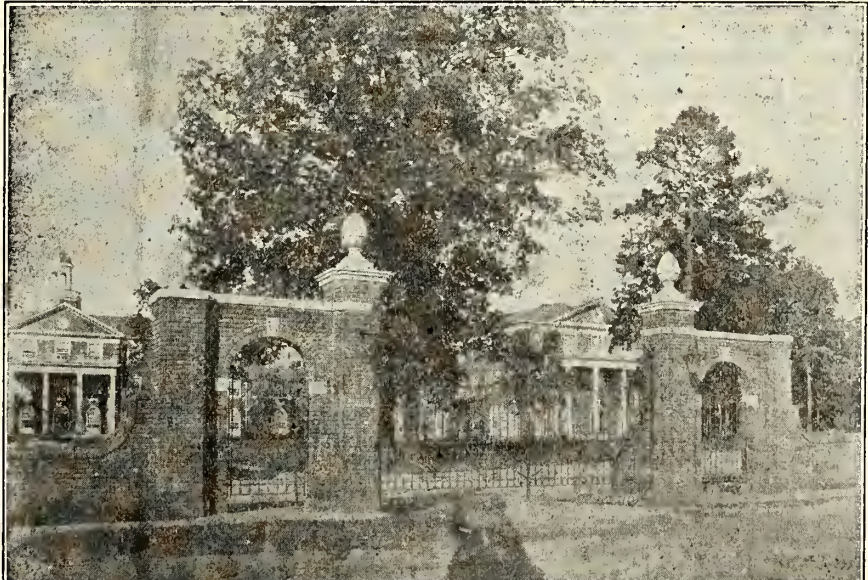

Any nobleness begins at once to refine a man's features; any meanness or sensuality, to imbrute them.—Thoreau.

ELON COLLEGE

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

South Entrance to the Campus

ELON COLLEGE, founded by the Christian Church in 1889, has fully justified the faith and hope of its founders during its 42 years of operation. Its graduates from the four-year course leading to a bachelor's degree, number 980, now living, 122 of whom are in the Christian Ministry and full-time Christian service. The majority of these are members of our own denomination. In addition, 449 are in educational work and are an active influence in the lay leadership of the Christian Church.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION BUILDING, and the definite religious atmosphere of the College, provide the very best facilities available for training for religious leadership, and offer the Church its finest opportunity to train the young people of the denomination to assume active leadership both in the ministry and laity of the local churches.

Address—
C. M. CANNON, Registrar
Elon College, - - - North Carolina
Home Atmosphere—Reasonable Rates—Clean Athletics—Christian Spirit

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr
A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom, as represented by the Congregational Christian Church.

BOARD OF EDITORS.

J. O. ATKINSON, D. D..... Editor
E. C. GILLETTE, D. D..... Associate
I. W. JOHNSON, D. D.... Contributing
ELISHA A. KING, D. D.... Contributing
J. T. KERNODLE.... Managing Editor

DEPARTMENTAL EDITORS.

H. S. HARDCASTLE... Sunday School
J. G. TRUITT, D. D..... Sermon
F. C. LESTER..... Young People
H. E. ROUNTREE..... Altar

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year .....$2.00
Six Months ..... 1.00

Trial Subscriptions: Five or more new subscriptions sent in at one time by pastor or president of any church organization, three months for 40c each.

Published Every Thursday at Richmond, Virginia, by the Central Publishing Company, Inc.

Entered as second-class matter at the Postoffice at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Change of Address: Be sure to give both old and new address when asking that your address be changed.

All news matter and items to be published in "The Sun" should be addressed to J. O. Atkinson, Editor, Elon College, N. C., and should reach him not later than Friday preceding date of publication. If more convenient, news from Congregational Churches may be sent to E. C. Gillette, Associate Editor, 117 W. Forsyth Street, Jacksonville, Fla. Emergency notices will be received at the Richmond Office up until Tuesday of week of publication.

All remittances for subscriptions, renewals, advertising, etc., books for review, and other matters of business should be addressed to J. T. Kernodle, Managing Editor, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond, Va.

Notices: Obituary and marriage notices, limited to 125 words, published free. All over 125 words, 1c a word, cash with notice. No notices should exceed 250 words.

Receipts: The change of label is your receipt for money paid. The label shows date of expiration, and change on label will appear the first or second issue of the month following renewal, provided it was received before the 25th. No other receipt will be sent unless requested. Please notify the Richmond Office if label is not changed as above.

OBITUARIES

SMITH.

Whereas, God our heavenly father, in His infinite wisdom and love, has removed from our midst our co-worker and sister, Mrs. Julia A. Smith, who was a loyal member of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Haw River Christian Church and a consecrated worker in every department of the church.

Sister Smith was a charter member of the Woman's Missionary Society from its organization and was the first member the society ever lost by death.

Therefore, we the members of the woman's missionary society of the Haw River Christian Church do hereby offer the following resolutions:

1st. That God in His all-wise providence doeth all things well, and while we mourn the loss of our sister, we realize our loss is heaven's gain, and we bow in humble submission to the will of Him who is ever mindful of us.

2nd. That we have been blessed by having her with us, and her Christian life shall be one of our sweetest memories.

3rd. That we extend our sincere sympathy to the bereaved family and comment them to the all-wise Father for comfort and consolation.

4th. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the records of our society, a copy be sent the family, and a copy sent the CHRISTIAN SUN for publication.

MISS EMMA THOMAS,
MRS. ARTELIA POOL,
MRS. A. M. THOMAS,
MRS. F. M. BAIN,
MISS VIOLET PEARSON,
Committee.

Suffer me not by any lawless act of mine to befoul any innocent life or add to the difficulty of any erring one that struggles honestly against sin. Grant me a steadfast scorn for pleasure brought by human degradation. Grant that I may look all men in the face with the eyes of a brother.—Rauschenbusch.

Dr. George A. Gordon, who lately journeyed to the Land of Light of which he had so often and so mightily assured a multitude of grateful hearts, once remarked that there were two passages in

Wedding or Gift Bible

FOR THE HOME

Holman Self-Pronouncing Home Study Edition

A BEAUTIFUL PRESENTATION PAGE Marriage Certificate and Family Record makes this special edition a most desirable Bible for a wedding gift.
Full Bound size, 8 1/2 x 6 inches, nearly 1800 pages. Authorized Version with Marginal References.

Large Print—Easy to Read

The Helps are the latest and most practical published—prepared by the most reliable and well-known authorities, and consist of a TEACHERS' NEW READY REFERENCE HAND BOOK, which gives the salient and essential information needed in Bible study.

Illustrated Self-Pronouncing Bible Dictionary—Containing 150 illustrations.

Oriental Light on the Bible (Containing over 100 illustrations). A new kind of illuminating Bible help.

Treasury of Biblical Information.

A New Series of Maps. A selection of the most used, with Special Maps, the results of the most recent explorations.

A New Practical Comparative Concordance, with nearly 50,000 references.

Four Thousand Questions and Answers on the Bible.

ABSOLUTELY DURABLE BINDINGS that will not break in the back.

Specimen of the Print. Full size of the page is 5 1/2 x 8 inches.

Specimen of Type.

17 th From that time Jesus began to preach, and to say, "Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand."

A BEAUTIFUL PRESENTATION PAGE Marriage Certificate and Family Record makes this special edition a most desirable Bible for a wedding gift.

No. 4614. French Morocco, flexible limp, gold titles, round corners, red under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker..... $5.50 literature that had been of great help to him when death came close. One was a word of Carlyle's written to a stricken woman assuring her that the living and the dead are both in the hands of God. The other is this sentence of Jesus: "If it were not so I would have told you." Jesus took the Father's eternal care for granted. This treasuring of personality is a part of God's fatherhood. He cannot destroy the thing which he bids all men cherish and no man harm. This belief in the eternal value of the human spirit crowns man's days with dignity. It enables a man to keep on living hopefully, to believe in the enduring worth of spiritual values, and in the significance of his own life and of other lives. It helps him to come to terms with life.—Exchange.

Postage Paid

PIEDMONT COLLEGE

Located in

"The Blue Ridge Highlands"

An accredited college with an enviable reputation for superior classroom instruction, and wholesome student life.

Standard courses leading to the A. B. and B. S. degrees. Careful, scholarly instructors.

A refined Christian atmosphere. All of the cultural elements essential to a liberal education.

A minimum of expense. Tuition and board for the entire academic year only $273.50.

For information, write

GEORGE C. BELLINGRATH, Dean,
PIEDMONT COLLEGE,
DEMOREST, GEORGIA.

Southern Seminary Foundation

(Successor to Atlanta Theological Seminary.)

AFFILIATED WITH

Vanderbilt University

The Foundation and the other Foundations that are affiliated with Vanderbilt University School of Religion comprise the only Interdenominational Theological School in the South. Through this affiliation the students enjoy the rights and privileges of Vanderbilt University.

DEGREES.

Candidates for degrees are required to have completed their college courses.

The degree of Bachelor of Divinity is offered to qualified students who complete the required courses.

Vanderbilt University also offers the degrees of Master of Arts and Doctor of Philosophy, in accordance with the regulations established in its several departments.

MORE THAN A SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY.

Because of our affiliation with Vanderbilt, our relations with other nearby colleges where our students can take courses without tuition, and the cooperation of the American Red Cross and other social agencies in the city, we prepare students for many types of Christian service.

For information write

WILLIAM JAMES CAMPBELL, President,
330 BUTTRICK HALL, VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY,
NASHVILLE, TENN.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

Representing the Southeast Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches.

IN ESSENTIALS, UNITY.

IN NON-ESSENTIALS, LIBERTY.

IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY.

VOLUME LXXXVI.

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1934.

NUMBER 36.

•• THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY ••

Red Cross Enrollment Increases.—

The membership enrollment in the American National Red Cross for the year ending June 30, 1934, was 3,802,384 for the U. S. and its insular possessions—an increase of 100,518 members over the roll-call for the previous year.

Light on Bible Measurements.—

Sometimes we are puzzled when we read certain Bible measurements. Here is a list, memorize it, and you will understand the Bible better when you read it: A day's journey was about twenty-three and one-fifth miles. A Sabbath day's journey was about a mile. A cubit was nearly twenty-two inches. A hand's breadth is equal to three and five-eighths inches. A finger's breadth is equal to one inch. A shekel of silver was about fifty cents in value. A shekel of gold was worth $8. A talent of silver was worth $538.50. A farthing was worth three cents. A mite was worth less than a quarter of a cent. A gerah was worth a cent. An eph or bath contains seven gallons and five pints. A bin was one gallon and two pints. An omer was six pints.—Selected.

Nationwide Constitution-Day Program.—

"In this period of transition and uncertainty, when the fundamental laws of many nations are undergoing portentous change, it becomes increasingly important that in some signal way the necessity of preserving our constitutional government be voiced and re-affirmed in a unified gathering representing every phase and part of American life." This statement is from a committee on National Constitution Day, composed of representatives of national organizations, and patriotic societies. The central program is to be held in Philadelphia, where the first Continental Congress met, and where the Declaration of Independence was signed and the Constitution of the United States formulated. This program is to be broadcast over the entire country, while it is expected that local programs will be held throughout the nation. The occasion is the 147th anniversary of the signing of the Constitution, and the date is September 17th.

Running in Circles.—

"On top of rising costs of labor and materials," says Business Week, "business—and the public it serves—is asked to shoulder the additional load of increased freight rates." Obviously this increase is necessary, as revenues for 1934, less expenses, will lack $53 millions of covering the railroads' fixed charges. The only alternative to increased rates are reduction in maintenance and operation. They are today $1,500 millions behind on maintenance, and are spending $1 where they should spend $2. This hurts many other businesses. Especially are the steel, lumber and equipment businesses affected; equipment being practically 100 per cent dependent on the roads, while they use normally from 17 to 20 per cent of the lumber and steel. Curtailment of maintenance expenses is not only impossible, but undesirable. Cut wages? They cannot, with living costs steadily rising. Indeed, they have just been forced to restore the 10 per cent wage reduction made some time ago. It is this, together with the increase—because of higher wages and shorter hours—in the cost of materials, that is making the railroads' dilemma even worse than formerly. "All other avenues being closed, then, rate increases seem inevitable," and our contemporary thinks that "any organized business opposition to the rate increase in general would be a mistake." Thus we have another example of running in circles. An increase in freight rates, further increase in living costs, demand for higher wages to cover these costs and shorter hours because of decreased demand for goods, consequent material cost increases, then the need for still more rate increases. Incidentally—and neither big business nor labor leaders seem to be concerned—the little business man is being crushed between the upper nether millstone. There is only one ultimate and permanent remedy: It is an honest day's work, with longer hours and increased production, without increase in wages, on the part of those who are employed. Resulting decreases in prices will increase demand, which will in turn gradually—not immediately—absorb present unemployment and still further increase buying power and demand for commodities. The man who receives a large wage and is compelled to spend all for sustenance is far worse off than one with a smaller income, who is enabled to lay aside a part of it for a rainy day.

"Advance" Waxes Eloquent.—

"When John W. Davis, eminent lawyer and former Democratic candidate for President, speaking a few weeks ago at the University of Virginia, quoted with approval the dictum of 'a prophet of the Old Order,' to the effect that 'the essence of republican government is the right of men to be secure in their persons, their property and in its management,' he was apparently quite oblivious of the problems of life and government that he was leaving out of account. The definition looks plausible, basal and comprehensive until one analyzes it with realism in relation to the existing facts and circumstances as they concern the mass of citizens. Of emphasis upon personal security there cannot be too much, but it involves in an industrial and automobile age inevitable measures of regulation and control that to a former age would have seemed as appalling as unnecessary. But it is in the reference to property that the defi-inition is most inadequate. Surely one of the most vital problems of society—and of government if it be properly related to society—is found in the fact that masses of citizens have virtually no property to manage, and comparatively little chance of acquiring any. An ideal republic, or democracy, depends for its strength and effectiveness upon the responsibility and participation of every citizen. How can every man who will accept his responsibility and do his part be enabled to attain a stake in the nation's wealth and economic order? That is a question that governments, whatever their origin or party allegiance, must increasingly face with honesty, courage and intelligence in the modern world. The sooner the Al Smiths, and Davises, and DuPonts, and Wadsworths discover it, the sooner will such organizations as the new American Liberty League give hope of performing some useful critical and constructive function, instead of encouraging the sort of reaction in which the rights of property, regardless of how it was acquired, or of how it may be used, are elevated above all fundamental concern for economic need or elemental security. Security of person means vastly more than the guarding of bodies against murder or assault. Hunger and want are responsible for more suffering and death than either war or crime." In the same issue, however, we are reminded that "the times and conditions in which we are living call for the open mind and the critical faculty, as well as for the readiness to support measures that seem (our italics) sound in purpose and well directed." The men referred to in the quoted article have given grounds enough for our disapproval, but it seems that at this time they certainly should merit "Advance's" approval so far as their critical mind is concerned, and their criticism seems to be of the same things that we others are criticising. We quote again: "A neighbor, who is in the wholesale provision business, remarked to us . . . that pork had gone up seven cents a pound wholesale. One could not but associate with that two things—first, the number of homes in which breakfast bacon . . . is an almost inaccessible luxury; and second, the fact announced a few days previously that under AAA farmers living within rifle shot of Boston were receiving as much as $10,000 each, and in one case $20,000, for not raising hogs. Instances like this can be multiplied manifold, and they have a direct bearing upon . . . the New Deal." There is another side to the picture—the farmer who is actually getting less for his meat because of the "processing taxes" that are going to pay such bounties as well as paying additional government "officials" for administrative functions. Even our Al Smiths, and Davises, and DuPonts, and Wadsworths, may be right sometimes.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

It is only a little over two months now before your conference will meet, and it is none too soon to begin making preparations. See that delegates are elected that will attend and take an active part in the work. If your conference apportionment is not already provided for it is none too soon to begin raising it. Make it one hundred per cent this year.

From the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot we learn that "Rev. E. B. White, pastor of the Eure Christian Church in Gates County, N. C., reports that the revival held last week was very successful, there being many confessions and reconsecrations. Five new members were received into the church. The baptismal services were conducted Saturday at Tuscorara Beach. At the close of the services the pastor was presented with various kinds of provisions, gifts and a purse."

During the six years in which Rev. J. L. Neese has been pastor of Palm Street Church, Greensboro the membership of the church has grown from 113 to 370 and the church plant has been considerably improved and enlarged. During his four years' pastorate of Hines Chapel the membership has grown to about 256 and valuable additions, in the way of Sunday school rooms, have been made to that church plant. At the close of the present Conference year in November, Bro. Neese goes to the pastorate of our Reidsville church.

We congratulate Rev. J. F. Morgan, and felicitate our aggressive Rosemont (Norfolk) Church on their achievement as told in this note from The Ledger-Dispatch: "On Sunday morning, Rev. J. F. Morgan will begin his tenth year as pastor of Rosemont Christian Church. During the nine years he has been affiliated with the local church, 288 new members have been enrolled and a new church building erected at a cost of $25,000.00. When the church was completed, it was paid for and the congregation held the dedication service when it was opened for worship. An organ presented by Mr. and Mrs. O. F. Smith in memory of Carl Smith has been installed in the church."

The monthly list of "Subscriptions Paid" for August will be printed in next week's issue of THE SUN, and will include all subscriptions received up to and including Monday, September 10th. In other words, if your subscription is mailed in this week it should show in the August list. We thank those who have responded to the Special Offer to delinquent subscribers which has been mailed out recently. We wish, though, that the response might be more general. Why not look at your label—even if you have not yet received a letter from the managing editor, you will be given the advantage of any special offer made that affects you.

The ordination of our fine friend and young brother, Rev. J. Howard Smith, formerly of our Newport News, Va. church and a graduate of Elon College and Yale Divinity School, was made notable and quite eventful by having present for the services August 30th, such an array of distinguished and beloved ministers. The event is told of in another column of his field and work—Hartford, Vermont. Brother Smith writes: "It is a great field here and I am enjoying the work very much. We have a beautiful little New England church, with parish house, Scout Cabin, pipe organ, and a large parsonage. The people have opened their hearts and homes to me and I see no reason why my pastorate here should be anything but successful."

EMPTY PEWS.

We have no Roger Babson to count the empty seats in our churches, for the famous statistician is now a Congregationalist, although it was a sermon by Munhall, the Methodist, that brought him to the mourner's bench in Gloucester. But a Methodist who is familiar with the facts is aware that such a census would yield no material for boasting. The Babson inquiry into the attendance at 1,000 Congregational churches revealed the fact that not over thirty per cent of the membership attended service on the Lord's Day. It is not uncommon among Methodist churches, urban and suburban, for the morning congregation to number less than 300 when there are 900 on the roll. Even on Communion Sunday, when a larger proportion might be expected to attend, there may be fewer still. In some instances where the church school precedes the worship service the entering congregation is smaller than that which it meets on the way out, so generally do the young people and the members of the organized men's Bible classes consider their religious duty fully discharged by attending a single session. America, the Jesuit weekly, commenting on the Babson report, finds no reason for exultation in the Protestant relinquency. It makes this sagacious comment:

"There is nothing in these figures to fill the Catholic observer with elation. If these defections meant conversions to the Catholic Church we could feel happy about them, but they mean nothing of the sort. As a whole, making allowance for transfers to other denominations, the figures indicate that these defections imply loss of all faith in Christianity, or practical indifference to its teachings, and, in some cases, actual hostility to every form and type of religion. Surely, it is preferable that the bulk of our people profess some allegiance to Christianity, even to a form that is defective and, in some of its vital phases, positively at variance with Divine Revelation, than that they have no contacts whatever with religion. Mr. Babson's figures are another series of links added to the long chain of evidence that we are no longer a Christian people, but, in fact, a race of indifferentists and practical atheists."

The remedy for non-attendance at church is not coercion, or pledged punctuality or any external compulsion. The pews will be filled when the preacher has a vital message and delivers it with conviction and passion, and when the church members declare by their daily walk and conversation that the service of worship does a work in them that makes them different from those around them. The Christ who is lifted up by his followers is pretty certain to draw men unto him.—Editorial in Christian Advocate, New York.

THE OTHER FELLOW'S FLOWERS.

Your seeds blow into my garden, friend,
Whenever the wind is right;
They blow on the wind of the breeze by day
They ride on the gales by night.

Not only do the seeds blow from our neighbor's garden but the beauty overflows the fences. We get so much enjoyment from the other fellow's flowers. Our neighbor of the next house has the loveliest hyacinths. Across the street there are tulips of every color. Down the avenue the forsythia have been flaming and now the azaleas glow. We do not own any of them but we glory in them all.

We pass so much beauty every day. We could never buy the flower gardens that we love. If some kind fairy were to give them to us we could neither pay the taxes on the ground nor work the gardens. We can do nothing about them but enjoy them without money and without labor. We get so much delight free. Think of the grace that comes to us from the overflowing of the other fellow's flowers.

Life is like that. In the gardens of the spirit there are flowers blooming for us that we could never grow. Poems and sweet philosophies more divinely fair than our dull mind could ever create are offered to us in a thousand books. That which we cannot originate we can appreciate. From noble minds fair ideas come to us as the flowers we see in our neighbor's yards.

Your words blow into my life, my friend,
Or, whether of good or ill;
Your thoughts fly over, like ships of love,
Or daggers that pierce and kill.

We all are made rich in the overflowing of the goodness of others. A fence cannot confine beauty. Nor are we altogether parasitic in our appreciation of the loveliness that abounds in our neighborhood. We have some fine pansies and a row of wall flowers transplanted from the parsonage of Oxford by the smiling waters. When the neighbors look over the fence and tell us of their beauty we thrill with the pride of possession. It is good to know that we, too, can have pretty flowers. It is also good to feel that our little yard adds to the charm of the community. It takes all the flowers of all the gardens to make a street full of fragrance and color. By adding our planting to the other fellow's flowers each adds to the rest and the glory of the whole enriches each. We receive that which does not belong to us without dishonesty and give to others without a less. With unenvying gratitude we can gain and share as the beauty of our humble back yards blend in neighborliness.

Your life is a garden of love, my friend,
And planted with kindly deeds;
So ever and over the wall will flow
Into my garden, your seeds.

—Exchange.

SHADE.

The kindest thing God ever made,
His hand of very healing laid
Upon a fevered world is—Shade.

His glorious company of trees
Throw out their mantles, and in these
The dust-stained wanderer finds ease.

Green temples closed against the heat
Of noon-time's blinding glare and heat,
Open to any pilgrim's feet.

This is God's hospitality.
And whoso rests beneath a tree
Hath cause to thank Him gratefully.

—Theodosia Garrison.

Do not be discouraged, dearly beloved, because God bears long with you—because he does not seem to answer your prayers. Your prayers are not lost. When the merchant sends his ships to distant shores, he does not expect them to come back richly laden in a single day—he has long patience. "It is good that a man should both hope and quietly wait for the salvation of the Lord." Perhaps your prayers will come back, like the ships of the merchant, all the more heavily laden with blessings because of the delay.—Robert Murray McCheyne.

OUR COLLEGES—ARE THEY CHRISTIAN?

By FRANK W. STEPHENSON.

There are some who give an emphatic, "No!", as the answer. Why? For good and sufficient reasons, they tell us. First, there are not as many candidates for the ministry and missions field in our colleges. That is true, almost! In any given school there are not as many ministerial students as a quarter of a century ago. On the other hand, the drop is hardly one-fourth and there are twice as many in the Seminary. Granting, for the sake of an argument, that we do not have as many candidates as in former years, is that the fault of the colleges? The college takes what the church sends. Not infrequently through the influence of the Christian forces in the colleges, young people choose full-time Christian service as their life vocation. It is quite possible that the college might place more emphasis upon these things but usually the individual who plans to enter the ministry or mission field has made his decision before entering college.

Second, the quality of those now studying for the ministry is not as high grade as in former years. This is a mere assertion, impossible to prove. But an experience covering the last thirty years, including four years in one of our colleges, three years in the seminary, and ten years in the general denominational work, creates an impression and a judgment quite to the contrary. So far as native talent is concerned there is little difference. So far as better preparation is concerned there is a great difference. A few years ago the ministerial student rejoiced in the privilege of his college training and felt he had made a satisfactory preparation for his life work. It is different now. Very few stop there. They are determined not only to have the college training but the Seminary also. And more and more they are seeking the benefits of graduate work, both for their Master's and Doctor's degrees.

Third, the spiritual tone of our schools is lower. Even more than the second contention this criticism is difficult to prove. It is almost equally difficult to disprove, because there is no accepted standard of measurement. The stress on religious matters which was so pronounced in other years does seem lacking. The evangelical fervor of those days has all but vanished. More of it today would do no harm. But is it a fair question: Because the emphasis has changed is that certain proof that the quality of the spiritual life is inferior? By no means. The fact of the matter is, the religious life of our young people is more real, practical, and genuine than ever. It may be a little too fearful of seeming to be extravagant, ardent, fanatical. It may, at times, even seem to be timid. It is well to reflect on this: The young people in our colleges come from the Christian homes and churches of our local communities and are bound to represent the spiritual life out of which they have come. The attitude of the students from these communities mirrors the depth of the spiritual life of the college. If the college is failing, something we are not willing to concede, the students must share the blame. And so must the homes and churches from which they come. * * * *

Behind and beneath the educational enterprises of the church one great fact is found: A Christian purpose. That purpose is four fold. First, to conserve the spiritual life of our young people. Second, to further their development in Christian character. Third, to strengthen the spirit of service in their lives, and fourth, to thoroughly furnish them for a leadership that is Christian, whatever their vocation.

What other institution, outside of the local church, is actuated by as high a motive? Not one. What other organization or enterprise is carried on in an atmosphere like that we find in our colleges and seminaries? Not one!

We should remember this: That students on the average, it is estimated, spend at least two years in this atmosphere. Not one or two weeks, a month, or six months, but most of the time from one to four years. The value of the influences of such an environment, of such an atmosphere, is beyond calculation. Not all respond to it as they should, but most of them do.

In the light of these observations we are justified in speaking of our denominational schools of higher learning as Christian institutions. Not as Christian as they might be, it is true. But as Christian as the average home or church, and in many instances far more so.

If this "sinful and adulterous generation" is to be saved; if the world is to be leavened with the gospel of Christ; if the Kingdom of God is to be established firmly and permanently in the hearts and institutions of mankind, it will be done mainly by the leadership of the men and women who are graduates of our church-related schools. They, above all others, have the spirit, the ideals, the purposes which will make these things possible. The Christian college is the very bulwark of Christian civilization.—Adapted from M. P. Recorder.

SPIRITUAL POISE IN A TROUBLED WORLD.By J. EDGAR PARK in Advance.

When I was at Oxford I had the pleasure of acting as secretary and interpreter for Albert Schweitzer. He said to me one day, "You know, Bach can only be played properly by one who has found in life composure and peace."

Anyone who has ever heard Schweitzer play Bach knows just what he meant. There is no haste, no noisiness, no confusion, no heated declamation, the lines of melody are sure and beautiful and the building they raise for you is simple, lovely, infinitely various, an everlasting home.

I began to envy the organist as I listened to him because he somehow, like Bunyan's pilgrim, had found that "large upper chamber, whose window opened toward the sun-rising: the name of the chamber was Peace."

As I talked with Dr. Schweitzer I found his secret—the secret of spiritual poise in a troubled world.

Dr. Schweitzer had done that great thing which the rest of us in our best moments sometimes dream of doing. As a result there was nothing he feared to lose. He was doing what he loved to do and it was his utmost to help to heal the open sore of this world's misery.

Our unquiet minds are due to our sense of inferiority because we have tried to comfort ourselves with sentimental appreciation of Jesus, but have not dared to follow. We fear to lose our comfort, our ease, our possessions. We do what we love not, and worry conversationally about the injustice and suffering in the world.

When Dr. Schweitzer went to Africa he told me he had definitely given up the thought of being able to continue his music. Then came the slow progress on hollow-log canoes up African streams of a huge, unwieldy packing case, till he saw scores of curly black heads swaying under it as the natives bore it up the hill to the doctor's home at Lambarene, and it proved to be—a grand piano with pedal attachments, a gift to Albert Schweitzer from the Paris Bach Society.

So his music, which he had given up, was given back to him. It indeed has been the main source of the financial support of his medical work, and I had the pleasure of translating for his English hearers the annotated program of his first recital in Westminster Abbey.

As I worked at that program that night, I felt as if I were translating into life for him the words of the Galilean carpenter, "Verily I say unto you, There is no man that hath left house, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my sake, and the gospel's, but he shall receive an hundredfold now in this time, houses, and brethren, and sisters, and mothers, and children, and lands, with persecutions; and in the world to come eternal life."

He had given up everything and had received back at the hands of God now in this time friends who loved him, a land he loved, thousands who owed their life to him, and his music, yet, it is true, "with persecutions," for the indiscriminate hand of war for a time made him, who is a lover of all men, an alien enemy prisoner in an internment camp far from home.

Here is the secret of peace—to burn the boats of this world, and dare to settle, unknown among the unknown, in the land of need and suffering and darkness. And lo! God keeps his ancient promise and sends music even there, and peace.

A recent would-be reformer writes that when one faces the secret powers allied on behalf of war profits and injustice in this world, one feels "like a fly in a reptile cage." But that helpless feeling is due to abstract thinking about the coming of Utopia. An Irish poet is wiser when he advises his disciple, "Only be thou thyself that goal in which the wars of time shall cease." This end is attained when I have settled what small thing I can do to heal the world's misery, and when I have set myself to do the best I can at that task. Thus is one delivered from the sentimental sadness of inferior minds. I am saved from fear when my heart is set upon the things which the world can neither give nor take away. And God always responds to such effort by giving one something to do which one loves to do. In His will is our peace. For, as Justice Holmes says, "High and dangerous action teaches us to believe as right beyond dispute things for which our doubting minds are slow to find words of proof."

We watch the great actors in the world's drama and we fear for them far more than they fear for themselves. "What if they should fail?" we sideline-worriers whisper with bated breath. Poise is a word only really applicable to those in danger.

The world, like any organism, has many cells. Some of these are diseased. See that cell which is your home, your business, your conversation, your job, is in a healthy condition. Health spreads even more surely than disease. Its spread is so normal that we do not notice it, and the whole organism is always on the side of the healthy cell. Once in a very diseased world there was a carpenter's shop which was in a healthy condition, and its health spread, is spreading still. The most poetical, beautiful, and, I think, true, idea ever conceived by man is that the health in the mind and heart of that young carpenter there is the living blood which is intent on saving the organism, the world, as a whole. Peace and Poise come to each cell as that lifeblood courses and throbs in it.

The quality of your thinking is determined by the quality of your living. First live aright and you will learn how to think aright. All living is your next word, your next act. What are you going to say? What are you going to do?

I give you the end of a golden string
Only wind it into a ball—
It will lead you in at Heaven's gate
Built in Jerusalem's wall.

E-D-I-T-O-R-I-A-L

EDITOR

J. O. ATKINSON, ELON COLLEGE, N. C.

ASSOCIATE EDITOR

E. C. GILLETTE

117 W. Forsyth Street, Jacksonville, Fla.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS

I. W. JOHNSON    ELISHA A. KING

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

ATTACKING THE CHRIST.

Hitler, Germany's dictator, having, for the hour at least, overthrown other government and authority than his own in Germany, now attacks, with vehemence and blasphemy, the power and authority of Jesus of Nazareth: Hitler's spokesman in and for the church, Dr. Alfred Rosenberg, author of "The Myth of the Twentieth Century," describes the leading characters in the Old Testament as "pimps and cattle-dealers." Of the religion of Jesus he says: "The religion of Jesus was undoubtedly the preaching of love . . . but the German religious movement, which wishes to develop into a people's church, must declare that it unconditionally subordinates the ideal of neighborly love to the ideal of national honor . . . The churches, handed over to it again, will, little by little, put the feltry spirit of the hero . . . in place of the crucifixion."

And so Hitler's Germany substitutes the love of the State for the love of God, and national honor for love of neighbor. "Faith in God" must be changed to faith in the German State, and directed not by the church, but by politics and economic needs. Speaking to the youth of Germany, Hitler's youth leader declares: "The time has come to take up the fight against Christianity. Germans! Liberate yourselves from the cultures of alien priests! . . . Abandon the Jewish-Christian conception of sin, pity, and loving the enemy; Be hard! Pity and mercy be damned! Praise that which steels. Christianity's totality claim is a thing of the past. Germans shall and must realize their conversion to Christianity was a crime against the race and the people which put them completely at the mercy of powers outside the State."

Dr. Rosenberg declares that the German people were betrayed into Christianity by Charlemagne 1,100 years ago and so now under Hitler the German State substitutes its Nordic Order for Moses, Sigfried for Paul and its 2,000,000 World War heroes for Christianity's company of heroes of the church.

And so Germany joins Russia in defying Jehovah of the Hosts, and in blaspheming all that is holy and sacred in the name of God.

Surely the superlative sin of our day is forgetting God and His benefits. A long time ago it was written and the centuries of history since have proven its truth that "Jehovah will send upon thee cursing, discomfiture, and rebuke, in all that thou puttest thy hand unto to do, until thou be destroyed, and until thou perish: because of the evil of thy doings whereby thou hast forsaken me." (Deut. 28:20). It takes neither a prophet nor the son of a prophet to realize that the day of Germany's sorrow and undoing approaches.

J. O. A.

OUR ELON.

Friends of Elon and the church can but rejoice at the flattering prospects for a fine opening of the College as it begins this week its forty-fourth annual term. While this is written before actual enrollment begins, reservations made and fees paid show a considerable increase over the number of last year, and several years preceding.

Because Elon has suffered financially, along with similar institutions, and more than many, its increasing appeal to parents and youth seeking a wholesome Christian atmosphere for mental, moral and spiritual development, is heartening indeed and should cause, as it no doubt will, increased confidence in the stability and usefulness of the institution. Though our people have contributed time and again even out of their need to the support of the college, they know full well that Elon has given back to us far more than we have put into it.

President Smith and his faithful faculty have wrought nobly and sacrificed heroically the past two years especially, and for this the church can but be grateful. But our gratitude is not enough. We must express that gratitude in a material way, and by our deeds as well as our feelings and words show them that their burden is our burden, their achievement our victory. Again, we say renewed hope, a deeper faith, a profounder gratitude grip us as we rejoice in the increasing usefulness, patronage and power of our own Elon.

J. O. A.

NOT SO STRANGE.

Editor Plyler of The Advocate thinks we live in a strange world. "We are thinking"—Bro Plyler is thinking "just now of the good men and women who are giving their lives in unselfish service for human betterment while few take note of their presence. But let a self-constituted preacher link up with a rattlesnake or a monstrosity tell fanciful tales of having been kidnapped, and the public press will use up barrels of good ink to publish a lot of tomfoolery in which people are interested."

Not so strange, Brother, not so strange when one comes to think of it. The Builder and Maker of this universe laid its foundations in and supplied its fabrics from Truth, Goodness, Beauty. Live, walk, work in the bounds and blessings of Truth, in the daily deeds reflect the spirit of goodness and righteousness, lend to God a helping hand in making the world beautiful, and there will be little or no comment, for this is the normal, natural way. The glow of the rising sun, the glory of the setting sun provoke little comment and less wonder. The overcast sun, the threatening zig-zag lightning, the roaring, deafening thunder startle man and gives him chord and tenor. This is God's good earth.

J. O. A.

THE POTTER'S FIELD

Not long ago a man died in what we call poverty. So far as was known he had no relatives and there was no money with which to bury him. Arrangements were made with the county authorities to bury him in the county plot in the cemetery. But some friends who had known him fairly well could not bear to see him buried in such a cold-blooded way. They made some kind of an arrangement with a local undertaker to provide a better way. A collection was taken up and the man was given a good funeral and the burial was not in the "Potter's Field."

Now the question arises, "Why was the man allowed to die in poverty?" Why did his friends wait until he died before they saved his body from public humiliation? That is a pertinent question.

Not long ago we read of a famous gypsy violinist whose life ran the full gamut of the pleasures which wealth can command dying in a hospital charity ward after being taken from her squalid tenement rooms. There was no place to bury her body but in the "Potter's Field," but friends rallied to prevent it. They saw to it that her body was buried in a grave paid for by her friends.

Every community has this same experience. There seems to be an eagerness to give paupers a so-called decent burial. This desire may seem to be a very worthy act, but analyze it and see if it is not misplaced charity. We allow the living to starve, to feel the cold neglect of friends, the anguish of loneliness in the face of death and then we worry about the disposition of a body out of which all that is vital has passed.

Probably there will be poverty for many long years yet to come, but it were far better to clothe and feed the living who have fallen under life's burdens and buffetings than to concern ourselves about the disposition of a body that is now beyond the reach and care of anyone. The "Potter's Field" is provided by public funds, the "honorable" burial plot is provided by private funds. Both are forms of charity. But the point of all this is not the place of burial of poor people, but the common feeling of disgrace when someone in the community dies in poverty. Will the time ever come when every human being in the community has a fair chance to earn a living? Perhaps there will be old-age pensions, or working men's compensations or something to solve this problem. It is worth thinking about.

E. A. K.

We shall meet our acts and words and influences again. A man will reap as he sows. We go on sowing carelessly, never dreaming that we shall see our seeds again. Then some day we come to an ugly plant growing somewhere, and when we ask, "What is this?" comes the answer, "I am one of your plants. You dropped the seeds which grew into me." We shall have to eat the seed that grows from our sowing.—Rev. J. R. Miller.

THE OXFORD GROUP HOUSEPARTY.

By EDGAR H. S. CHANDLER.

For three weeks this summer, men and women from many nations gathered at Oxford for training in front-line spiritual action. Leaders in the church, the state, education and business, as well as hundreds of students and workers, made up this great army of those in training for world change through life-changing. A great tent was erected on Christ Church College cricket-ground to accommodate the group of unemployed men from the East End of London, and from the north, who were attending the Houseparty. Here they were, leaders of many nations, of all classes, all denominations, meeting in perfect fellowship to think through, under the guidance of God, plans for capturing the world for Christ.

As Dr. Foss Descott, the Archbishop of India, said of it: "The Houseparty is cosmopolitan in character, with over forty nations represented, and the background and professions of the members are as diverse as their nationality, and yet it is characterized by a unity which transcends the ordinary barriers of nation, denomination and viewpoint. It is a unity based on a common experience of Christ, and a common conviction that in the application of the fundamental principles of his teaching, not only to the problems in the private life of individuals, but to those of their social, industrial, national and international organization, lies in the one hope of their solution."

The theme of the Houseparty was "Spiritual Revolution," and thought was centered on what was called the "totalitarian plan," which means a church, a university, a city, an industrial system, a nation, a world, wholly Christian.

In times of a great crisis in the world's history, God has raised up an individual, or a group of individuals, to lead humanity to the serious application of the gospel of Christ, to the solution of major personal and social problems. No observer at Oxford could fail to see that this was a movement of God's spirit. Here were thousands of people who had seriously faced the challenge of absolute honesty, purity, unselfishness and love in their own lives, who were surrendered to God and his guidance, and who, in a great fellowship of faith, were seeking to know God's plan in every sphere of life. They were realizing also, that a serious application of the gospel of Christ would mean sacrifice, the willingness to lose economic security, the acceptance of a cross in order to bring in the new world.

It was a thrilling experience for anyone concerned about the application of the gospel to social and economic life to hear the witness of business men and industrialists, not in pious platitudinous speeches about what ought to be done, but in testimony of what they had already been led to do in their business when they had come to the realization that it must be run under the guidance of God. It was miraculous to hear employers confessing, not the sins of the employees, but their own sins, and sincerely seeking to eliminate greed and selfishness from their lives. Many were coming to feel that this necessitated a changed system and were willing to work under God's guidance for a new order based on honesty and justice. In this connection, some Group leaders who have worked in the East End of London have written some significant words in the Houseparty newspaper: "Political revolutionaries, who have suffered much for their beliefs, flung their challenge at us. Were we really out to challenge the present system, or were we still its unwitting tools? How could a man be a Christian under the intolerable conditions of slum life? How could we hope to move the millions of changing men one at a time? Some time ago we should have been hard put to it to answer these men. Faced with such a challenge it is not enough to say glibly that Christ is the solution. We must produce documentary evidence, and here we had it in the living and actively propagating documents of our team fresh from the camp. They told their own stories of Christ triumphant over circumstances and of their new dominating purpose of world reconstruction.

"It is not enough to change the hearts of the exploited classes and races and to make them content with the status quo. We should be betraying them if we did not at the same time challenge the selfishness of those whose interests are vested in their exploitation. To classes and governments, as well as to individuals, must come conviction and full repentance, followed by drastic restitution. Failure to state and live this challenge unequivocally has brought down on our churches the well-deserved reproach of Marx that 'Religion is the opiate of the people,' but any political theory, as well as religion, is 'dope' if it does not take count of every factor in the world situation."

World change begins with honestly facing oneself and finding within oneself in microcosm the cause of the world's disorder, and having found it, to surrender all known sin to God. It is then that God-guided vision for changed systems may come. Short of this, there is no panacea to save the world. By facing this fact, one man who had suffered for his convictions as a communist agitator, but who had been, as he said, an absolute tyrant in his own home, has found victory in his own life, and his home is already transformed. He is planning constructive revolution in the town in which he lives, and has challenged men of position and influence in all parties by his bold and intelligent witness for Christ.

Bishop Roots of Hankow, formerly Primate of all China, summed up the present situation, after his world tour, as follows: "The two live options as to a philosophy and way of life before mankind today are nothing short of those formulated by the communists on the one hand and the Oxford Group on the other. There is much common ground in the practical application of these two live options to social, national, and international conditions. In many respects they supplement and enrich each other, and they must learn from each other. Merely nominal Christians are deadly traitors to the faith they profess. Nothing can really meet the militant atheism of the communists but such unreserved, intelligent, resourceful, and joyous fellowship in Christ as is actually at work in the Oxford Group."

Those of us who are concerned with international peace cannot overestimate the significance of this Houseparty. Here officials of the League of Nations and representatives of many nations thought through the spiritual basis for world peace. Picture the German and French groups, the first led by a Baron and the head of a famous school, and the second by a former General of the French army, confessing their own national sins and then leading the Houseparty in a time of quiet and prayer to find God's plan for Christian advance in those countries! Imagine the depths of fellowship when the German group led the prayer for France and the French group for Germany! Similarly the Japanese led in prayer for China and the Chinese for Japan.

One of the great meetings of the Houseparty was when Canon Streeter, Provost of Queen's College, Oxford, in the crowded Oxford Town Hall, identified himself with the Group. He said, "I have come to the conclusion that I ought to cease to take an attitude of benevolent neutrality toward what I have come to believe is the most important religious movement of the moment."

Perhaps the high spot of the Houseparty was the Youth Meeting on Sunday morning. A writer for a Canadian newspaper describes the scene:

The packed hall, the lofty platform rising tier on tier—quite empty. As the bells of Christ Church struck the hour a great organ crashed into the martial strain of that old marching hymn, Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord, and the central doors at the back opened to admit in long procession the youth of twenty centuries. A steady tramp to the music of that great hymn thundering from two thousand throats as the young army steadily, and like a rolling tide of indomitable power, filed in its hundreds onto the platform.

The profound impression of unconquerable and conquering strength was indescribable. They wore no uniforms—except the glory in their faces. They bore no arms—except the purpose in their hearts. There was brought to the onlooker a deep realization that this time that Glory would not be wasted nor would that new purpose be frustrated. They were not marching "for God" to the destruction of their brother man, but with God to his salvation.

Dr. A. C. Dieffenbach of the Boston Transcript made a significant summary of the meetings when he wrote: "I think there has not been such a demonstration in modern times of the Apostolic sense of mission among persons of so many races and nations as we find in the Oxford Group Movement, and because this is so, I verily believe that its continuance will change the world. To live one's daily life among those who really live by the Spirit is to know again the radiance of unspoiled religion."

To be at Oxford was to see the Holy Spirit at work and to catch a vision of what the guidance of God may mean for individuals and the world.—Advance.

A CALL TO YOUTH.

By VIVIEN M. OGDEN.

Arise, adventurous youth and lead us out
From all the fear that circles us about;
Take to your heart each lovely, winsome grace
And loveliness of character embrace,
For somehow we have lost these with the years
And now as always we must pay with tears.

O darling youth that will not be denied
The doors of the Father's house are opened wide:
The hidden springs of life for you unseal
His deep eternal secrets to reveal,
If you, soil not yourself in sin's deep mire
And quench within the holy, sacred fire.

Arise, O youth, and stand for God and right
And lead us out from this disastrous night;
Awake, and be quick, responsive keys
On which God's fingers play sweet melodies
That shall flow on and on like songs of gold
And bring forth fruit an hundredfold.

So that in years to come your life may speak
To other youth from some high mountain peak
Of thought. Its towering trees of truth
A place of refuge for tomorrow's youth;
Transcending earth and Satan's power to oppose,
You'll reap a rich reward and find repose.

Some say they can worship God everywhere,
In the fields as well as in the church. You can see the sky everywhere, but in an observatory you get a view of the firmament you get nowhere else, with special instruments under trained men.—W. L. Watkinson.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

A gracious revival was experienced at Cypress Chapel last week. The Pastor, Rev. R. E. Brittle, did the preaching. Thirty-two members were received into the fellowship of the church. For a century this church has been remarkable for great revival meetings. Someone who has access to the records should write a history of these revivals. Hundreds have been blessed by the rich spiritual experiences on such occasions.

The revival meeting at Bethlehem began last Sunday and closed Friday night. Rev. R. E. Brittle, the faithful and beloved pastor did the preaching. There were twenty-nine additions to the membership of the church. Many people said it was, in many respects, the best revival held in that church in many years. Brother Brittle is a faithful minister and is greatly beloved by his congregations. The Lord is honoring his work, and this is encouraging to him and a blessing to the churches.

The church at Liberty Springs also held a revival during the week. The meeting closed Friday night with nine additions to the membership. Rev. Robert Lee House, pastor of the First Christian Church of Newport News, assisted the writer in the services. Brother House is well trained for the ministry and is consecrated and earnest in his work. Our people were well pleased with his ministry. The congregations were large and attentive. It was a joy to be in the midst of such services.

Next week revival services will be held at Mt. Carmel, where Rev. J. F. Morgan will assist the pastor, Rev. Elisha Bradshaw. And Rev. O. D. Poythress will assist the writer at Oakland during the week. This is the harvest time in many of the country churches in the Eastern Virginia Conference. May ministers and laymen be much in prayer that God may honor the preaching of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Surely a great spiritual revival is needed. Church members should be called together for prayer and self-examination. Leaders may not agree upon methods of evangelism. But all will agree that there is room for much improvement in our manner of living. When the early church "continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and prayers,—fear came upon every soul,—and the Lord added to the church daily such as were being saved." (Acts 2:42-47.)

The church will have power to win souls when it walks daily with God, and has the spiritual compassion for the unsaved multitudes. Jesus came to save others. He has commissioned the church to undertake this great task in His name. This is not the exclusive work of the minister. It should be the aim of every church member to be a winner of souls. This is not the only work of the church members, but it is the most important work. When the pulpit and the pew become thoroughly aroused over this opportunity the church will maintain its place among the powers in the world.

Is it not a fact that many ministers would be greatly surprised if there were a number of conversions following their sermon next Sunday? Would not the congregation be also astonished? Would they say, "We never saw it in this fashion before." Conversions should be expected. And growth in grace should follow the preaching of every sermon. Dr. Clovis Chappel tells of a man who was regarded as the village infidel. He never attended church services. One day the church building caught fire from a defective flue. The people rushed to the burning building. This infidel joined the volunteer bucket brigade and threw many buckets of water on the building. A by-stander said, "John, this is the first time I have ever seen you at church." "Yes," he replied, "this is the first time I have ever seen this church on fire." A church on fire for Jesus Christ will attract others.

I. W. JOHNSON.

THE CURRICULUM AT ELON.

A man is but little satisfaction to himself or profit to his day unless he is prepared for the emergencies of life and for the requirements of his age. This is no new fact, nor is it a recent discovery. From the beginning, man has faced problems that were puzzling to him, and from which he naturally shrinks without the confidence that adequate preparation affords. As a result of bitter experiences arising from inadequate preparation, man, in cooperation with his neighbors, has provided various kinds of facilities for the preparation of those who come after him. Schools, colleges, seminaries, and universities have sprung up all over the country and are manned by trained and experienced teachers, all for the purpose of training and directing the children and the youth of our time.

The church was the first unit of society to provide facilities for the instruction of the ambitious among us. The Christian Church was a bit late in sensing this need and providing for its requirement. Forty-five years ago, the leaders of our church, with an ever widening vision for its future, laid the foundation for a first-class college, which college they called Elon; and it bears that name to this day. From the beginning, it was a four-year college with high educational requirements. Through the years, its standards have not been lowered, but, rather, they have been advancing and expanding all the while.

Today, Elon's curriculum is most inclusive. It embraces practically all fields open to our young people. By careful study of the curriculum of Elon College, it will be evident that the ones who come here will have the opportunity to receiving instruction in both usual and unusual lines. In addition to English, History, ancient and modern languages, Education, Philosophy, Mathematics, and the sciences, Elon provides a thorough and complete course in Business Administration, secretarial work, Physical Education, Health and Hygiene, Dramatics, Home Economics, Music, and the field of Religion and special religious activities. Not only is instruction given in these several fields, but it is given by specialists, men and women who have had the very best training possible. One-third of the members of our faculty hold their doctor's degrees.

There are a number of new additions to our teaching staff, Dr. Bookhout, who has just received his Ph. D. degree from Duke University, is to supply for Dr. T. E. Powell. Dr. Powell is away on leave of absence. Mr. Prior, who has completed all of his work for the Ph. D. degree at Harvard University, has been elected professor of History to succeed Prof. L. D. Martin. Dr. French Haynes, who holds her Ph. D. from Cornell University, will succeed Miss Madie Lee Walker as Dean of Women and associate professor of Education. Miss Lila Lee Riddell, a graduate of Columbia University, New York City, who has completed her first year's work for the doctor's degree at Columbia, has been elected dietitian and Home Economics professor to succeed Miss Wilma Potts. The remaining members of last year's faculty will return. A former president of the college stated recently that Elon College now has the very strongest faculty in its entire history, and I agree with the statement.

At this writing, every room for students on the campus, with the exception of rooms in the Young Ladies' Hall, has been definitely assigned; and, in addition, we have conditioned six rooms in the old publishing house, and this, it seems, will not take care of all who wish to come to Elon this fall. The outlook, so far as the student body is concerned, is most encouraging. We are anticipating an inspiring and a most successful year.

The freshman orientation period begins Tuesday at 2:00 P. M. with chapel services conducted by the President. Thursday, the upperclassmen will begin to arrive. Parents, alumni, former students, and friends of the college are cordially invited to the opening exercises of the 1934-35 session.

L. E. SMITH.

HOWARD'S CHAPEL.

On July 8, 1934 the revival meeting began here and closed on the night of July 13th. Each service was well attended with a bright prospect for a good meeting. The spirit of the meeting was much improved over last year.

Rev. J. S. Corden, Durham, N. C., was with us from beginning to the end of the revival. Bro. Corden did some zealous and helpful preaching. His sermons were very instructive in spiritual things and highly scriptural. He is a man consecrated wholly to the preaching of the gospel and winning of souls to the Cause of his Christ. He endeared himself to this congregation very much by his sincere and concise method of presenting the Way of Life Eternal as the Bible revealed it to him under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit. May the Lord let him live many more years of usefulness.

There were three professions of faith in Christ, one consecration, several re-dedications and the church was greatly encouraged to press on in the fight for Christian living. The cooperative spirit of other denominations was beautiful.

For all that was accomplished and the blessings enjoyed we give thanks unto the Lord. Brethren pray for pastor and people that we may be faithful in doing the Lord's will.

L. L. WYRICK.

FIELD NOTES.

We held our meeting at Kallam Grove beginning the fourth Sunday in July. Rev. J. F. Apple of Elon College, came to us on Tuesday and did the preaching from then till Friday night to good acceptance. As a result of the meeting four members were added to the church which was much revived.

At Mt. Bethel Church we began our meeting on the 5th Sunday in July. Rev. O. D. Poythress of the South Norfolk Christian Church came to us at night and did the preaching from thence to Friday night. His services were enjoyed by all who heard them, and as a result of the meeting, eight members have been received into the church besides other splendid results. The church voted him a unanimous invitation to come back and help us next year. We hope he can come. We praise the Lord for results in these meetings. Our Shallow Ford meeting has already been reported.

T. J. GREEN.

PARAGRAPHS TO PONDER.

By TIMOTHY THOMAS.

One of the unseen battles of today is being waged between the spirit of competition and the spirit of cooperation. Competition knows nothing of wages and prices and pays scant attention to working conditions. Cooperation is seeking to better wages, stabilize prices, and improve working conditions. The happiness of millions depends upon the outcome of this battle between an outlived theory and a modern need.

* * *

We are beginning to measure things by a new type of measure. Until the crash of 1929 the main idea, and unfortunately, the main ideal, was an aspiration to be the biggest. The dream of the architect was the tallest building. The goal of every town and city was growth and more growth. Mere numbers meant everything; even colleges and universities took pride in fabulous figures. The farmer's goal was a bigger crop than the year before. We have learned the futility of higness measured by the yardstick of a past era.

* * *

There is a bit of irony in the way we Americans meet a crisis. Let a crisis come in the local church, with the church paper, the church college, or even a state college; let a crisis come in private or public business, and the man who can and will step forward and challenge the opportunity is hailed by all. But too often when the crisis has passed; the victory won, and the ship safe from sinking, the hero of the hour is forgotten, often ridiculed. It will be no surprise if the man who is working so courageously and unselfishly to lead this Nation out of an economic chaos, doing battle for the "forgotten man," may himself go down in history as the forgotten man.

* * *

This chronicler offers the following solution to our European debt problem: European countries pay interest only so long as they do not engage in war, but if so, the principal to be paid within one year, exports and imports to be cut off for a period of five years, and no more loans to be extended over a period of 250 years, and then only on condition that not one dollar of the loan be used for the purpose of murder, otherwise known as war.

* * *

It would appear at the time of this writing that workers who contemplate joining a strike in the textile industry expect the Government to feed them while on strike. With millions out of work it is not believed that public opinion will sanction the administration of relief in the form of food or money at public expense when men deliberately forfeit their positions on account of dispute. Thousands of innocent women and children will be made victims. The public will be sympathetic toward their suffering, but that sympathy should crystalize itself to a form of indignation so as to apply the law requiring a man to work to support his family when he has an opportunity.

* * *

Human sympathy is stronger and more advanced than human laws. Laws are rigid and trail far behind human need. Sympathy is broad in principle, practical for the most part in application. It is for this reason that millions are relieved of their distress and suffering before we provide a way for their escape through the avenue of law. The church has been the greatest agency for kindling and keeping alive the spirit of sympathy, as well as shaping laws to help coordinate the aims and purposes of sympathy.

"A careless man is just an accident that hasn't happened yet."

ORDINATION OF J. HOWARD SMITH

On Thursday afternoon at 4 P. M., the Ordaining Council of the Windsor Association of Congregational Churches in the State of Vermont will convene for the purpose of examining and proceeding to the ordination of Rev. J. Howard Smith, minister of the Second Congregational Church, Hartford, Vermont. At 7:30 P. M. there will be an ordination service at which time Dr. Luther A. Weigle, Dean of the Yale University Divinity School, lecturer, author, scholar, international figure in the field of religion, and clergyman will give the main address. Dr. Weigle is leaving for China in December to make a study of the religious situation in China for the Chinese Christian Association. Dr. Charles E. Burton, clergyman, associate with Washington Gladden at the First Congregational Church, Columbus, Ohio from 1909-1811, and at present Secretary of the National Council of Congregational-Christian Churches with headquarters in New York City, will give the Invocation and Lord's Prayer. Rev. Chauncey A. Adams, D. D., newly appointed Secretary for the State of Vermont Congregational Churches, will give the reading of Scripture, The Prayer of Ordination will be given by Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter, Dean of the Kennedy School of Missions at Hartford Theological Seminary, Hartford, Connecticut, widely known scholar and authority in the field of Missions throughout this country and the world. The Words of Counsel will be given by the Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, D. D., Associate to the Secretary of the National Council of Congregational-Christian Churches, with headquarters in Boston, Mass. Dr. Fagley was formerly pastor of the Plymouth Congregational Church, Cincinnati, Ohio. Mr. Edwin R. Fuller, graduate of the Dartmouth College School of Music, and Choir Leader of the First Congregational Church, Lebanon, New Hampshire, will preside at the organ.

He who looks forward and keeps on going belongs to the happy order who win the prize. "He that endureth to the end shall be saved."

—Selected.

Our actual troubles are generally bearable. It is those that never happen which take the buoyancy out of life.—Dean Inge.

OXFORD BIBLES for EVERY NEED

"The Oxford Bible is the Bible par excellence of the world"

THE HOME BIBLE

A Family Bible in Handy Size

An extra large type Oxford Text Bible, containing also, a family register and 12 beautifully colored maps. Size 9 x 5 1/2 inches.

Specimen of Type

16 The LORD is King for ever and ever: the heathen are perished out

- Nos. 01600 Superior Cloth, round corners and red edges $2.75
- 01608 French Morocco, limp, round corners, red under gold edges, head-band, book-mark $4.75

The JUNIOR'S Bible

Self-Pronouncing

With 4,000 Questions and Answers, carefully selected "Aids to Bible Study," 16 beautifully colored and 15 black full-page illustrations, 6 colored maps and a presentation page. Children may readily pronounce correctly difficult Scripture names, as this Bible is self-pronouncing. Size 7 x 4 1/2 x 1 1/4 inches.

Type in Junior's Bible
2 Take the sum of all the years old and upward, thro

- No. 1815 French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges, headbands and book-mark. Make some child happy with one of these fine Bibles $2.95

Child's ILLUSTRATED Bible

The beautifully colored illustrations in this new Bible are a delight to the children. It has clear, readable type and yet it measures only 5 1/2 x 3 3/4 inches.

Specimen of Type

a My soul longeth, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the LORD: my heart and my flesh crieth out for thee, O LORD.
b Ps. 84, 1.
c Ps. 137, 1.
d Ps. 137, 3.
e Ps. 137, 4.
f Ps. 137, 5.
g Ps. 137, 6.
h Ps. 137, 7.
i Ps. 137, 8.
j Ps. 137, 9.
k Ps. 137, 10.
l Ps. 137, 11.
m Ps. 137, 12.
n Ps. 137, 13.
o Ps. 137, 14.
p Ps. 137, 15.
q Ps. 137, 16.
r Ps. 137, 17.
s Ps. 137, 18.
t Ps. 137, 19.
u Ps. 137, 20.
v Ps. 137, 21.
w Ps. 137, 22.
x Ps. 137, 23.
y Ps. 137, 24.
z Ps. 137, 25.

- No. 02112. French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, gold edges $2.50

Pocket REFERENCE Bible

Has over 50,000 center column references. Measures only 6 1/4 x 4 1/2 inches. (A splendid gift for a young lady.)

Specimen of Type

9 Behold, O God our shield, and look upon the face of thine anointed.
10 For a day in thy courts is better

- No. 07523x French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges $3.25

Concordance Edition

Type and size as No. 07523x, but with a Concordance, subject index and dictionary of Scripture names. An excellent edition for students and Christian workers No. 03272x $5.00

OUR LEADER

Oxford Concordance Bible

Self-Pronouncing

This beautiful Oxford India paper edition is indeed the ideal Bible for the student, preacher and evangelist. Each proper name and difficult word is divided into syllables and accented, and though printed with large clear type, the volume measures only 8 1/2 x 5 1/2 x 1 1/4 inches.

Specimen of Type

8 7 1/2 Je-ho-v-a-chin was 6 years old when he began t

No. 03671x. Fine Grain Morocco leather, overlapping cover, leather lined to edge, silk round corners, red under edges, silk

hear

A UNIQUE GIFT BIBLE

With Basket Weave Binding

The Antique brown calf leather binding has a basket-weave grain, and button clasp. Has overlapping cover, art silk lined, with red under gold edges. With references. Printed on Oxford India paper. Type as Pocket Reference Bible. $5.50

No. 03255x

As No. 03255x, with concordance.

No. 03276x $6.50

Oxford TEACH

Have over 50,000 center column, 300 double-column pages of up-to-date helps, conveniently arranged in alphabetical order. Also 32 full-page illustrations, and an indexed atlas of the Bible with 15 beautifully colored maps of Bible lands.

Easy-to-Read-Edition

Size 7 1/4 x 5 x 1 1/4 inches

Specimen of Type

14 Like sheep they are laid in grave; death shall feed on th

Nos. 04453. French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, round corners and red under gold edges. A durable and hand-some Bible $4.35

Oxford India Paper Edition

Only one inch thick.

0773x. French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges, headbands and book-mark. A beautiful gift edition $7.00

RED LETTER Edition

Same size and type as style No. 04453, with same references and helps, but with all the words of Jesus Christ printed in red. White paper edition No. 05453. French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges $5.00

The Oxford imprint in a Bible guarantees satisfaction

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary

THE MINISTRY OF MUSIC.

By Miss D. P. CUSHING, News Editor.

A missionary of music is the term which might well be applied to Miss Frances B. Clapp of the Doshisha, Kyoto, Japan, who since 1918 has through her skill as a musician been reaching the hearts of the Japanese people. When she was appointed by the American Board Miss Clapp said: "I have a real love for Japan and my Japanese friends. I want to have it known that I am in Japan primarily as a Christian with a message to give, and secondarily as a music teacher."

Born in Logansport, Indiana, daughter of a Congregational minister, who was for 18 years a Home Missionary Superintendent of Oregon, Miss Clapp has from childhood looked at life from the service angle. From the age of 15 on she taught Sunday School and was active in church, Y. W. C. A. and Christian Endeavor. Her education has been most unusual in its scope; a graduate, with a B. A., from Pacific University, a graduate of the Conservatory of Music at Pacific; two years in Germany, both studying and teaching; studying and teaching at Pomona. She also taught music for four years in Newton, Mass.

Then in 1918 Miss Clapp answered the call from overseas and went to Japan for three years as a teacher in the Doshisha, that great Christian university of the Orient. But she stayed five years. Back in California in 1923 she taught in High Schools and made a home for her mother. She also took more work at Columbia University before sailing back to Japan in 1927.

Many and varied are Miss Clapp's musical contacts. She is a teacher of Music still at the Doshisha. She is a pianist, a singer, a cellist. She directs choirs, glee clubs and mixed choruses, sometimes numbering 400 to 500 voices. At the National Convention of Congregational Churches meeting in Kyoto, last autumn (1933) she trained a great choir which gave a number by Tschaikevsky's, "Cerubini Sanctus" and the "Hallelujah, Amen" from Judas Maccabeus. The Doshisha Mixed Chorus under her guidance sang five numbers from the Messiah.

But Miss Clapp's contacts have not been confined to musical matters. She often goes off into the country and lives right with the common folks, eating their food, sleeping on the floor, bathing when and where opportunity offers. At one time she was the only Occidental in the place except for a Spanish Priest. She has a group of girls in Bible Class on Sunday mornings and finds them refreshing and eager. She is active in Y.W.C.A. and with the Doshisha girl students who are playing big sister to Rose Haumai Hop-pin in her work in the Marshall Islands.

MISSIONARY OFFERINGS.

WEEK ENDING SEPTEMBER 1, 1934.

Sunday Schools.

Previously acknowledged	$ 3,044.77
Waverly, Va.	3.37
Palm St., Greensboro, N. C.	5.36
Pleasant Ridge, Ramseur, N. C.	4.26
Patterson's Grove, Franklinville, N. C.	1.75
Suffolk, Va.	25.00
Ramseur, N. C.	2.50
Wakefield, Va.	1.78
Lebanon, Semora, N. C.	1.00
Piney Plain, Raleigh, N. C.	1.00
New Lebanon, Summerfield, N. C.	5.45
Newport News, Va.	8.94

Mt. Carmel, Carrsville, Va.	2.11
Noon Day, Wedowee, Ala.	2.10
High Point, N. C.	3.00
Ether, N. C.	1.00
Hanks Chapel, Pittsboro, N. C.	1.96
Monticello, Brown Summit, N. C.	1.64
Holy Neck, Holland, Va.	4.47
Timber Ridge, High View, W. Va.	1.83
First Christian, Greensboro, N. C.	12.17

Total 3,135.46

Individuals and Churches.

Previously acknowledged	2,820.94
Pleasant Grove, Beunett, N. C.	2.00
First Christian, Richmond, Va.	52.55

Total 2,875.49

Coin Card Offering.

Previously acknowledged	108.01
Biscoe Sunday School, Biscoe, N. C.	11.00

Total 119.01

Summary.

Previously acknowledged	17,323.81
Total offerings, week ending September 1st.	156.24

Total to date $17,480.05

J. O. ATKINSON, Sec'y.

HOME MISSION STUDY BOOKS.

FOR THE YEAR 1934-1935.

Women's Baaks.

"ORIENTALS IN AMERICAN LIFE." By Albert W. Palmer.

Dr. Palmer, out of his long experience among Orientals living in the United States and Hawaii, has shown how the relations between Americans and their neighbors of Oriental origin are bound up with Far Eastern problems of the most critical importance. He describes the work of home missions among the Chinese, Japanese, and Filipinos on this continent and points out its bearing upon the solutions of Great world issues. The book contains a fascinating chapter on Hawaii that is unique in recent missionary literature. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 60 cents.

"A COURSE FOR LEADERS OF ADULT GROUPS STUDYING THE ORIENTALS IN THE UNITED STATES." By Margaret Marstan.

Paper, 25 cents.

"HOME MISSIONS TODAY AND TOMORROW; A REVIEW AND FORECAST." Edited by Hermann N. Marse.

This splendid book of 400 pages is the product of six years of extensive surveys and studies in all phases of home missions carried on by the Home Missions Council. It is a frank and courageous appraisal of policies, programs and methods and a prophetic call for a larger statesmanship. An indispensable book for all church leaders and missionary society workers who would keep abreast of home mission progress. Published by the Home Missions Council. Cloth, $2.00.

Young People's Baaks.

"OUT OF THE FAR EAST." By Allan A. Hunter.

This is a book with a youth approach. Many illustrations are drawn from Mr. Hunter's intimate knowledge of the Far East and of Oriental young people living in America. He asks, "Do economic and social handicaps complicate their gallant struggle to make good in a Christian country?" Such questions make the book stimulating both for individual reading and group discussions. Cloth, $1.00; paper, 60 cents.

"A COURSE ON ORIENTALS IN THE UNITED STATES." Paper, 25 cents.

Junior High School Students.

"GOLD MOUNTAIN." By Phillip F. Payne.

Fascinating stories of Christian helpfulness which shows the warm human sides of life. The romantic history of Orientals in America begins almost with our Forty-niners on the Pacific Coast and ends with American-born Chinese and Japanese who are unable to speak anything but English, or live and work anywhere but in America. Cloth $1.00; paper 60 cents.

Leaders of Junior High Schools Groups.

"STUDY COURSES ON ORIENTALS IN THE UNITED STATES." By Hazel Harker.

Based on "Gold Mountain," and other books. Paper, 25 cents.

Leaders of Junior Groups.

"JAPANESE HERE AND THERE."

Same as Foreign book.

Junior Children's Reading.

"RAINBOW BRIDGE." By Florence Cranwell Means.

A charming reading book that will be sure to please Juniors.

The Miyata children are startled by the announcement of their father that they are going to America to live. From the moment they embark until the story closes there is one exciting adventure after another. Delightfully illustrated. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75 cents.

Leaders of Primary Groups.

"ORIENTAL FRIENDS IN THE UNITED STATES." By Katharine Smith Adams.

A Friendship Press text containing units of work on the Chinese, Japanese, and Filipinos. Teaching suggestions are given, as well as source material and suggestions for worship. Boards, $1.00; paper, 75 cents.

Primary Children's Reading.

"THE WORLD IN A BARN." By Gertrude Chandler Warner.

Probably the most popular children's reading book published by the Missionary Education Movement in recent years. Special price, $1.00.

Order from Congregational Education Society, 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.

JEWELL TRUITT VAN CLEAVE.
Wadley, Ala.

TITHING LITERATURE AT LESS THAN COST.

For Sixty Cents, the Layman Company, 730 Rush Street, Chicago, Illinois, offers to send to any address, postpaid, 53 large page, closely printed pamphlets and tabloids, aggregating over 500 pages by more than 30 authors of various denominations. Without extra charge, they will include enough copies of pamphlet, "Winning Financial Freedom" to supply a copy for each of the church officials, also an instructive circular on a Ten Weeks' Program of Education in Tithing.

Please mention THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Also give your denomination.

CAPITALISM IS NOT DEAD.

By ROGER W. BABSON.

Two Kinds of Social Action.

One of the dangers of the world is authority without responsibility. It was authority without responsibility that brought rugged individualism to grief, put capitalism into disrepute, banished laissez-faire, and exiled the Republican Party. Bankers wanted the authority to unload unlimited issues of foreign bonds on a greedy public; but when those rottenbonds went bad, the bankers wanted to assume no responsibility. The business man hotly demanded his right to capitalize the wildest boom in history; but he ducked his duty to prepare for the inevitable slump.

When Wall Street's houses of cards collapsed, the financial tycoons took their canes and silk hats and just walked out. The whole story of the 1923-1929 cumulative speculative mania and the 1929-1934 depression was a chronicle of authority without responsibility. Before my socially-minded friends become too loud with their Amens, let me say that precisely the same fate may overtake the reformers. Washington today is in grave peril of plunging into an era of authority without responsibility which will outdo Wall Street at its worst.

Washington seized the authority to lash the power companies, without the faintest apparent sense of responsibility for justice to thousands of bona fide investors in utility securities. Washington was authoritative in cutting crops and slaughtering swine, but apparently irresponsible in not reckoning the danger of drought and the forecast of famine. For those and a growing list of other reasons, it is becoming increasingly evident to me that the brain-trusters are playing with dynamite in this old game of authority without responsibility. Some day the reformer will once too often crack down on an economic situation and crack down on their own thumbs. Then look for a Republican landslide! The recent collapse of Big Business may eventually be duplicated by an even more resounding crash of Big Bureaucracy.

Our only way to safeguard from the evils which brought the downfall of individualism and are now undermining collectivism, is to recognize and obey the law of action and reaction. It is not in accord with this great law that we should demand authority for our actions and evade responsibility for the reactions. We must develop a more universal and compelling sense of stewardship; for it is the very essence of stewardship that it does magnificently unite authority and responsibility.

Today our economic, political and social tendencies are in a state of upheaval totally new to this nation. Prospects in detail are unpredictable. Nevertheless, I foresee that two basic principles will prevail for at least another generation. First: Our citizens will continue as stewards entrusted with authoritative possession of private property and incomes. Second: As conscientious stewards they will assume greater responsibilities for public welfare. They will have the vision to see that the way to secure their own standards of living is to elevate the living standards of others. We shall learn that one of the best safeguards of possessions is to increase the number of possessors. Enduring prosperity must be a pyramid of broadening base.

Hence we have a possible answer to the questions of the hour: What is ahead for this nation? Are we pointing toward communism, socialism, fascism, capitalism? Which of the great world trends will rule America? Let us hope that the Americanism of the future will be essentially a form of stewardship, with its twofold basis of full authority over our own individual actions, but combined with full responsibility for the reactions upon others. No new social system can succeed by depending upon legislation rather than individual initiative.

Reformers, however, should not make the mistake of assuming that national welfare rests solely upon material foundations. It may be an excellent thing, as the Government now proposes, to plant the United States with a hundred-mile-wide belt of trees reaching from the Canadian to the Mexican border. But the greater need is to plant our nation with religious inspirations. What our country most urgently requires is not water power and electrical energy as much as higher powers and spiritual energies. Nations as well as individuals will find their real Balance Sheet is one of spiritual Assets and moral Liabilities!

All over the globe economists and statisticians are knitting their brows over the so-called "paradox of plenty." They wonder: Why should the world have been plunged into the worst depression in history at the very time when material goods were swollen to the greatest abundance on record? Whatever explanation the theorists may finally evolve, one underlying fact has already emerged: No real and permanent wealth—even in a material sense—can be created and maintained amid poverty of character.

Our recent troubles should not be described as the paradox of plenty, but the parable of plenty—a demonstration that progress is possible only when laid upon spiritual foundations. Hence arises the fundamental difference between taxing and tithing. Taxing may dissipate one's income in expenditures that are wasteful, iniquitous, and in the end ruinous. Tithing directs one's income into enduring investments of the utmost value both material and spiritual. Taxes can eventually sink a nation; tithes can save it!

Those who realize these fundamental truths, and give abundantly to religious and spiritual causes, welcome the added satisfaction of entrusting such part of their wealth to good and faithful stewards. I have recently been making an exhaustive study of certain church and other endowment funds. I find that in the main the managements of these great stores of material wealth have fulfilled their trusts with extraordinary efficiency. They have set a record not alone for devotion, but for competence. This is especially true of the Congregational funds under the guidance of our Mr. Boulton, treasurer of the Extension Boards.

Many a private investor now holds in his safe-deposit box not securities, but obscurities. Our Congregational funds, on the contrary, have come through the storm in truly remarkable shape. Their portfolios are almost unscathed. Nowhere is the parable of the talents more splendidly exemplified than in the fidelity and efficiency, the character and ability, with which our church leaders have administered their task.

Big Business has broken down. Ultimately, Big Bureaucracy will break down. But religious leadership is standing like a rock, and will so continued to stand. Herein, beneath shattered and chaotic conditions, we find our chief hope of the future, both for our own country and for the world. May the new Council for Social Action keep this fundamental thought in mind. May they not mistake fads for facts.

In the United States, it is probable that capitalism will be given another chance to show that it can develop a greater degree of social responsibility. We shall abandon the present paternalism, which is fundamentally foreign to American character. In its place we shall get capitalism in a newer and better form—not rugged individualism, but stalwart stewardship.

HOW THE WOMEN SUCCEED.

The women in their missionary work are the pride and inspiration of the church. They have walked away with the missionary leadership of our church and in some sections they are the main stay of the local church. Whenever some hard job is to be done and money is to be secured, some brother, with pious mien—and at times not so pious—who would be counted a great leader, suggests, "I move we call on the women." This they do and then adjourn, sure that they have had a great meeting.

The men could succeed just as well as the women if they would do as the women do. How do the women succeed? First, they have a definite objective; second, they go to work and stick to the job, never despising the day of small things. This means prayer, information and hard work. But in the end it means victory, followed by doxologies of rejoicing.—N. C. Christian Advocate.

May God the Holy Ghost show us sin till we hate it—show us the reality of sin until we feel our need of the cross! May he show us the fullness of the love of Jesus Christ until we know what is meant by Christ's ability to take up our sin, our secret sin—take it up in his pierced, bleeding hands and cast it away forever, and present us unto himself a glorious church!—Joseph Parker.

SUBSCRIBERS TO THE CHRISTIAN SUN

These Pens are of standard make, and will give good service. If you are in need of a Fountain Pen, order from us. Postage paid and Pens guaranteed by the manufacturer.

MEN'S PENS—Capitol, $2.00; Mercantile, $2.50; Cardinal, $3.00.

LADIES' PENS, $2.00.

COMBINATION OFFER—To a new subscriber or for renewal, $2.50, either Gentleman's (Capitol) Pen or Ladies' Pen, with guarantee of manufacturer. And to "Sun" subscribers, not in arrears, any Pen at one-fourth off. Address: THE CHRISTIAN SUN, 1536 EAST BROAD STREET, RICHMOND, VIRGINIA.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

RALLY DAY, AND OFFERING.

October will soon be here, and then comes Rally Day. Vacations are over. The fall offers a real opportunity for educational work along Christian lines. But many of the people will have to be invited back to church. An interesting and helpful program will be necessary in order to get them and to hold them.

Many churches find it profitable to use Rally Day cards as invitations. All denominational publishing houses can supply these cards at a small cost. Goodenough and Woglom Company, 296 Broadway, New York City, has a nice line of cards this year. The same companies can supply program material also. It is very important to have a good program.

The public schools are careful to grade children and to promote them according to certain definite standards. The church school should be just as good as the public schools. There should be definite standards to be met; certain information to be learned; and certain attitudes to be developed before there is promotion with honor. Usually, however, promotions are made the first Sunday in October, that is, the children go to the new classes then, on the basis of their age and public school grade. Unless the Church School works like a school it has no right to be called a school. The higher the standards, in reason, the more the pupils will respect the school.

And please do not forget the offering for the Board of Christian Education. Why not get some envelopes, pass them among the people, and request an offering such as they are able to make? The Board is greatly in need of this offering so the work can be promoted in a larger way. Please Mr. Superintendent, Teacher, Pastor, Young Person, or Whoever You Are, will you kindly see that your Sunday school has a promotion and Rally Day program and that an offering is taken for the Board of Christian Education? Thank you!

WHAT DO WE MEAN BY A NEW COMMUNITY?

For the past year the minds of the youth of this nation have been turned to the thought of the necessity of building a new world. Why is there such a feeling among the youth of this great country? The youth of today finds himself an heir to a world that he has had no part in building. Surely there was never a time when the natural resources were greater, a time when education was stressed more, a time when science had reached a greater age of perfection, a time when the cause and cure of many dread diseases have been discovered and the average span of life considerably lengthened, a time where there was more leisure to enjoy the multitude of amusements to be found on every hand. Yet the youth of our country is not satisfied with this world that he has found himself heir to.

Kirby Page paints a true picture, however, not a very bright picture of the world to which we are coming:

"How would you like to live as the people did during the Thirty Years War in Germany? Every day of those long weary years you would have had about hatred, strife, disorder, destruction, death. Even if you wanted to have no part in it, you would have been unable to shut it out. It would have become a part of your life."

He continues:

"Now, I don't want to startle you with anything sensational, but the young people of today face a prospect like that. My son, who is 18, and my daughter, 16, may live most of their days in a world of turmoil and confusion. With the year 1929 we began a period that may—yes, it seems that I ought to say must—end in a social catastrophe, with the world twisted and torn, shaken and shattered, the reading of the evidence no other conclusion."

Somewhere right at this moment there are between two and three hundred thousand American boys hitchhiking along hundreds of highways, scuttling through railway yards or atop freight cars. If you were to stop one and ask him why he was out in the world like this, he would tell you as I had one to tell me.

"O, I didn't have money to go to college, Dad was only making enough for barest necessities. I couldn't find any work, so I thought I'd pull out from home and try it on my own hook."

Youth today is not satisfied with a community that offers him nothing.

Pick up your daily papers, see what the headlines are. With 40,000,000 papers rolling off the presses of the country every day, very few young people in the United States are entirely free from their influence. Of all the stories that might go on the front page, those that deal with corruption, crime, and scandal get there more frequently than any other. A study of forty-four leading newspapers of the country recently brought out that on the average fifty-nine per cent of the front page space was devoted to sensation, sex, sob stories, scandal, violence, and crime. Do we, the youth, edit these papers?

If young people are out for thrills of a dangerous sort then some blame must be put on the newspapers.

In any community of this great country of ours you can hear of automobile smashups in the early hours of the morning in which boys and girls are killed or injured for life. As you look into these details you'll hear some adult say, "Oh, just another wild party and too much gin." Do the youth make and sell the gin? Did we repeal the 18th amendment and bring the saloon with all its horrors back?

In nearly every community in which we may go, there is a movie house. If you check up on the attendance at these theatres you will find approximately eight times as many people go to the movies than go to church. We might make a survey of the pictures that the young people of our church have seen recently. You'll find without a doubt that these pictures specialize in thrills—other people's thrills. Gangsters, crooks, and racketeers are familiar screen figures. Broken homes are common place screen themes. Violence of one sort or another is featured. And so I'd say the movies are responsible for a considerable amount of the thrill-seeking of our young people today. Again I ask the question, do we, the young people, produce the movies? They are there for us to see, but are we responsible for their contents?

In any community you will find poverty and unemployment. All over our land today there are communities in which there are strikes, women working under improper surroundings, children being worked long hours because they can be employed cheaper than adults. You'll find young men and women trained for life's work but no position for them.

God has given us a beautiful world in which to live. He has filled it with beings made in his own image. He has given His only begotten Son as a pattern and guide for our lives but somehow as we have been building communities that go to make up a world, we have left Christ out of our plans.

Now what do we mean by a new community? We mean a community that has for its key words love and justice, a community that will take away from the youth of the world a desire to go hobnobbing up and down the land, a community in which the printed page will bring to the attention of our youth things that are constructive and not destructive, a community in which strong drink is not to be found on every corner to tempt the youth and corrupt its morals, a community in which moving pictures will bring to the minds of our young people scenes that will uplift rather than tear down, a community in which pride, selfishness, and greed are not the outstanding characteristics of its people but one in which its people are known for their humanity, unselfishness, and generosity.

I said in the beginning that the youth finds himself heir to a world that he had no part in building. I have tried to show that the youth has inherited a world that left God out of its plans. Now the point I want to leave with you is this, we are responsible for the communities of the next generations. The youth is rousing itself to the necessity of building new communities. Let us have strength and courage to stand for the things we know are right. Let us, the youth of this conference, "be workers together with God in building new communities."

ERNEST BEALE,
Franklin, Va.

COURTESY.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR SEPT. 16, 1934.

Luke 7:44-46.

Daily Readings.

Mon., Sept. 10.—Courtesy to women. Ex. 2:16-20.
Tues., Sept. 11.—Courtesy to children. Matt. 19:13-15.
Wed., Sept. 12.—Mary's Courtesy. John 12:1-3.
Thurs., Sept. 13.—Pagan Courtesy. Acts 28:1-2.
Fri., Sept. 14.—Christlike Courtesy. Phil. 2:1-5.
Sat., Sept. 15.—Perfect Courtesy. John 13:1-5.

Worship Service.

Instrumental Prelude: "One Sweetly Solemn Thought."

Hymn: "Peace, Perfect Peace."

Prayer:

"Master and Lord, teach us to love our fellow men
With a love that shall be thy love breaking into the world through us.

Illumine our souls with a knowledge of thy divine beauty and truth

That shall fill us with joy and peace.

Make us messengers of thy grace, ambassadors of God among men.

Make us doorways through which thou thyself
Mayest enter freely into thy world. Amen."

(New Hymnal for American Youth. Century Appleton.)

Solo:

"Into the woods my Master went, clean forspent, for-spent. . . .

But the olives they were not blind to Him. . . .

The little gray leaves were kind to Him. . . ."

(Words by Sidney Lanier, Music by Peter Lukin.)

Scripture: Luke 7:34:37.

Hymn: "Thou Didst Leave Thy Throne."

Speaker: Theme—"Courtesy to all men and all creatures."

Hymn: "Father of Lights in Whom There is No Shadow."

(Continued on page 11.)

Sunday School Lesson
By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

HEZEKIAH LEADS HIS PEOPLE BACK TO GOD.

LESSON XI—SEPTEMBER 9, 1934.

GOLDEN TEXT: "God is gracious and merciful." 2 Chronicles 30:9.

LESSON TEXT: 2 Chronicles 30.

Hezekiah began to rule as a young man. He seems to have been devoted to Jehovah and to his people. Especially did he seem to be interested in the moral and spiritual welfare of the people.

For some reason the temple had been neglected and not only had the doors fallen into disrepair, but a large amount of rubbish had accumulated in the house of the Lord. In the first year of his reign, therefore Hezekiah gave orders to have the house of the Lord repaired, and to have it thoroughly cleaned out. He called to him the priests and Levites, reminded them that it was because of the trespasses of their fathers that the evil had come upon them, and gave orders to clean up the temple. In response to his commands the priests and Levites gave themselves enthusiastically to the work and in eight days they had finished the job in a thorough way.

Hezekiah then called the people together and they had a great religious service. Sacrifices in large number were offered, songs were sung, the sin offering was offered, and the people consecrated themselves to the service of Jehovah. It was a great occasion, and quickened the religious life of the people in a marked way.

For some reason, too, the passover had not been kept for a long time, and Hezekiah made plans to observe that. He sent letters, not only among his own people, but to Israel and to Ephriam and Manasseh, inviting them to join him in observing this sacred and significant feast. In view of the fact that plans could not be completed in time to observe the feast in the first month, plans were made to observe it in the second month. Obedience to the letter of the law is desirable, but obedience to the spirit is better. God demands that we do the best we know. But He also takes into consideration the willing spirit and the contrite heart.

Then as now, the invitation to join in a religious observance met with varying responses. Many of the people "laughed them to scorn, and mocked." It seems foolish to some people to give time and energy to anything connected with organized religion. There are a great many today, who do not give religion, organized or unorganized, any place in their lives. They laugh and scorn those who do give themselves to it.

But there were others "who humbled themselves and came to Jerusalem." And a great feast took place. Religious emotions, long slumbering were wakened again. Loyalties, fast fading, were quickened again. There was great rejoicing, and so wholehearted was the response of the people that the feast was continued for seven extra days. The record says that "since the time of Solomon, the son of David, the king of Israel, there was not the like in Jerusalem."

Say what one will, something fine goes out of a nation's life when the public worship of a God is neglected. To close the churches for a week or two weeks, or for a longer period might not make any noticeable difference in the life of the nation. But let any nation habitually neglect the public worship of God, let the offices of religion fall into decay, and the life of the nation will suffer.

The neglect of religion is the beginning of national decay and destruction.

And it is so with the individual. Man cannot live by bread alone. There is that within him which calls for the living God. Perhaps it should be said that man cannot live at his best by bread alone. He who neglects the worship of God, both in private and in public robs himself of that which helps him to live at his best and which makes him of largest use to his fellowman.

There is a message of encouragement in today's lesson. The people had neglected the worship of Jehovah and had rejected Him. But when they turned to him in sincerity and in penitence, they found forgiveness and acceptance. Let the wicked forsake his way and the unrighteous man his thoughts, and let him return unto the Lord and He will have mercy and unto our God and He will abundantly pardon. If we confess our sins he is faithful and just to forgive our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.

There is the lesson here, too, of the importance of leaders and those in authority who recognize God and who witness for him. One Christian leader can do a tremendous amount of effective good for the kingdom if he bears public witness to his faith in God and in his allegiance to Him.

YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

(Continued from page 10.)

"Courtesy" begins with the same four letters as "courage" but comes from different root, although it also has its root in the heart. It means a politeness of manner born of kindness of heart. It is a matter not only of outward conduct but of inner disposition. Some of the habits suggested by the word survive from earlier days and sprang from historic backgrounds often unsuspected or forgotten.

The word "courtesy" came from the old courts of royalty and had to do with order and good breeding—"courtesy" in the court. The word and its fuller meaning passed into the common life and language, and John Milton, the Puritan poet, wrote of it as follows:

"Shepherd, I take thy word
And trust thine honest-offered courtesy
Which oft is sooner found in lowly sheds
With smoky rafters, than in tapestry halls
And courts of princes, where it first was named,
And yet is most pretended."

Courtesy is the mark of a gentleman or gentlewoman. It is more than form; it carries with it goodwill and kindness. No real gentleman will lord it over a less privileged person, nor will he be a slave to another because of the other's wealth or position or power. Courtesy has to do with courtliness, and is ever against disorder, disrespect and unkindness to others.

Every Christian Endeavor meeting offers an excellent place for the practice of courtesy. In your society is there courteous attention while speaking? If the atmosphere of your meeting as lacking at this point of courtesy, what can you do to remedy the situation?

"To rule myself—
To hold the silver gateway of my lips
Against the slightest word unworthy of me,
To keep the perfect purity of mind
That thinks no evil, hoping all things good.
To love all souls, unlovely though they seem,
To give to each as it may show me need.
To be all that I have dreamed—and more.
This I may have through perfect self control."

You will never enter into the life of rest and victory, you will never know what it is to be one with the Father in Christ through the Spirit, until you have learned the divine law that life is one, that you cannot sever the secular from the spiritual.—Webb-Peplow.

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.

Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.

These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. It combines with the Concordance, Subject-Index, Scripture Proper Names, etc. The 12 Maps have been carefully revised and are beautifully colored. In making orders, give the number and price.

135—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold. $3.00

India Paper Edition, Only 16-16 of an inch thick.

133X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold, $4.00

SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS' BIBLE.

Especially made up for gift or reward Bibles for Sunday School scholars, containing a special series of very practical and useful helps and Bible Questions and Answers, etc. Printed on fine white Bible paper; ruby type; pocket size, 3 3/4 x 5 3/4 inches, and 1 inch thick, with 31 full-page illustrations in sepia. All bindings are black. Ruby Type, Size 3 3/4 x 5 3/4 Inches, and 1 Inch Thick.

65—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold; 6 colored maps ..... $2.50

AUTHORIZED VERSION. RED LETTER TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Brevier Type (8 vo.), Self-Pronouncing, Size 5 3/8 x 8 1/2 Inches and 1 3/8 Inches Thick.

Containing the Bible, with full references. The words of Christ in the New Testament are printed in red; other parts of the book are printed in black. With Concise Bible Dictionary, combined Concordance, and 12 indexed maps.

7852—Genuine Leather, Lavanant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold ..... $4.75

RED-LETTER EDITION.

With All the Words of Christ in the New Testament Printed in Red.

1282—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit round corners, red under gold edges, register and headbands; title stamped on side and back in pure gold ..... $3.25

60—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, Sunday School Scholars' Bible, stamped in pure gold on cover, no illustrations; special book for Sunday Schools ..... 95c

Any of the above Bibles sent postpaid. Address THE CHRISTIAN SUN 1536 East Broad Street Richmond, Virginia

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy

MONDAY.

NATURE'S THRONE.

"What is man, that thou art mindful of him? . . . thou hast made him a little lower than the angels, and hast crowned him with glory and honor."—Ps. 8:4-5.

Man has been credited with an object and a purpose to fulfill; and, when he comprehends this, he will think too much of himself to stoop to any action that is unworthy of that purpose. On the contrary he will keep this objective in mind and do everything he can to climb on and achieve this throne of his nature.

To acknowledge God as the Author and Designer of our lives, and to acknowledge His love for us is the only source of the power of this comprehension and purpose. It is His love and tender care and wise leadership that we must reflect upon constantly if we would rise to this our life's goal.

Prayer—Our Father, make Thou to us every event of life on order of divine goodness. In everything we have a mission to fulfill, and a character to accomplish. Send Thou in every day life a means by which we may endure and failure may be averted. Give us remedies in sickness, love in trouble, comfort in weakness, renewed hopes in disappointments, and sunshine of soul that drives sadness and sorrow away. This we ask for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

TELL IT.

"Whosoever shall be ashamed of me and of my words in this adulterous generation; of him also shall the Son of Man be ashamed."—Mark 8:39.

Jesus requires confession and loyalty. It is the only way the light within may shine. It is the only way we may be as "salt"—saving. It is the only channel for the discharge of duty. If we walk with Jesus, like as when we walk and talk with friends in the flesh, we will also talk of our Lord with them. "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation."

Besides this, our own salvation is dependent upon our confession. Faith alone cannot save us; kept alone it must die. All things require exercise to live. Faith's exercise is in outward manifestation, or it will die. It is true that the manner of living counts most, for lip service falls dead if the life does not back it up; but this is not all the truth. We are to be more than silent Christians. The lips must deliver the spoken words. Christ Himself was not content at living for God, He was always speaking of God.

Prayer—Our Father, help us to follow Christ who spoke the word as well as lived the life; He who prayed that we might be "living epistles known and read of all men,"—help us to make the same a reality in our lives. We ask it for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

SUFFERING—YOUR LOT.

"Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ."—Gal. 6:2.

How great is your suffering? Would you swap your suffering with any one's else? Somebody has suggested that everybody has his cares and none are without burdens and sorrows. Even a healthy and seemingly happy person may have inner sorrows which the world knows nothing of. "If everybody were asked to make a package of their troubles, and throw this package on a common pile, and then asked to go and choose a package which they were willing to bear, all would select their own package again." Your heartaches and sufferings may be great, and your burden may be heavy, but look about you, is there any one with whom you would exchange? Are there not some you would like to relieve and so fulfill the law of Christ?

Prayer—Lord, Jesus, without reserve, without exception, without limitation, may Thy holy will be done in us at all times, and whatever sufferings we are caused to bear may it be a means by which we may come closer to Thee. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

OUR TEST.

"I am the way, the truth and life."—Jno. 14:6.

"Come unto me."—Matt. 11:28.

"Ye will not come to me that ye may have life."—Jno. 5:40.

It is truly said that the test of Christian life lies in deeds and actions and not in words. A true Christian is not a follower of impressions of the flesh nor does he judge by the trend of the day; but he seeks the principles of God's Divine Truth, and adheres to them even though they be against the trend of the times and even though he has to stand alone in his belief; that alone makes a Christian.

The instinct that is given to us to seek happiness, righteousness and peace is a proof that these things are real and within the reach of us all.

Prayer—Our Father, the way of peace, the way of love, the way of trust and confidence, we would walk in. Fill our hearts and enable us to go on the journey of life in these ways, and find Thee all the way. In Christ's name, we ask it.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

ANTIDOTE TO GLOOM.

"Rejoice and be exceedingly glad; for great is your reward in heaven."—Matt. 5:12.

The hope of Christian living, whatever the hardship or sacrifice required, is enough to make us glad. This is what Jesus tries to make the apostles realize.

We often come to our wit's ends. There are "fell clutches of circumstances" in which men sink in the quicksand of despair, or they would sink did they not find God to keep them on their feet. In Christ they find a way out, and a reward that makes one forget the sacrifices. Stick to the Lord and see if it is not true.

There is a reward for faithfulness.—The crown of life. This was the reward that came to the martyrs,—a life in, and a life with God.

It is that of putting heaven into a man, writing the law of God in his heart, directing in ways of pleasantness and peace, conquering, and revealing that happiness is the fruit of righteousness.

It was for this He said, "Be thou faithful unto death," which means, "be faithful tho' it causes death."

Prayer—Dear Father, the Giver of every good gift, give us an intense desire for righteousness, and endow us with the courage to live His righteousness at all cost, looking for the reward of Thy glory at the last day. This we ask for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

CONCEIT.

"Let another more praise thee,—and not thine own lips."—Prov. 7:2.

There is a certain amount of self confidence and respect that is necessary to success in any understanding; but there is a self-estimate which is known as self-conceit, an estimate in which a man seems to himself sufficient for everything, that his strength is in his arm and what he does is good; and, being so, he lauds himself, hoping to establish in others the same estimate of him. That person is doomed. That conceit must die, or the man is a failure. Nothing is more despicable in the eyes of others. Shakespeare says, "They are but beggars, that can count their worth." "It works strongest in weakest bodies."

The Bible says "trust God and lean not upon thine own undertaking." "If you propose to be wise you become as a fool." Even "the wise man will not glory in his wisdom." "Woe to them that are wise in their own eyes." "There is more hope for a fool than for that man."

Whatever one may think of himself, if he is worth anything, others will find it out; and if praise does not come, why expect it; it is better to go on living and serving without it than to praise thyself.

In Christian thought, somehow or other, we must learn that within ourselves we are nothing. When we learn this, then comes humility; and when humility comes, one casts himself upon the strength of Another and expects to do nothing worth while save in His power. He then experiences that new confidence wherein he achieves and says with Paul, "I can do anything through Christ."

Prayer—Our Father, we want to be born again. Give us that new birth and that new life. Make us new creatures in Thee, seeking always to glorify Thee. Give us power to face our everyday problems in the Master's name, and to come out more than conquerors in the end.—Amen.

SUNDAY.

WHO AM I?

"Who am I, O Lord, Jehovah, and what is my house, that Thou hast brought me thus far?"—II Sam. 7:18-29.

David became the greatest of the Hebrew kings because, in part, of his deep sense of humility. I was once present when a splendid company of the most notable authors of America met to do honor to Julia Ward Howe in her glorious old age, and I remember well the humorous verses with which she responded to their tribute. Their substance was in her whimsical refrain, "I'm not much." David, all his life, was so close to God, that he knew his own insignificance.

If we feel that we and our house are worthy of the blessings which the Almighty has bestowed on us, we are not worthy of them. No mortal is, however God has gifted him and whatever glorious things he has done. His abilities are gifts from God and his achievements were rendered possible by God, and if he is wise he will never forget it.

Prayer—We must be so little in Thy sight, Thou Sovereign of the universe! May we willingly see ourselves as we are.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

LEARNING TO BE CONTENT.

By THOMAS MILLER in Christian Evangelist.
 "I can do all things in Him that strengtheneth me."—Phil. 4:13.

The apostle Paul is in prison and considering the days in which he lived. He is treated fairly well, but he has spent two years of his life there. He is chained to a guard and the opportunity to labor at his trade is denied him, and he no longer can make his own living. He knows what it is to be in poverty and to endure as a good soldier of Jesus Christ. With all of these conditions his spirit is not weakened and he writes believing that soon he shall be free.

The members of the church at Phillippi had not forgotten him and they had sent gifts to him and loving greetings by Epaphroditus. Paul writes a beautiful letter filled with appreciation and love in answer to these many kindnesses. It is like a message of advice and instruction from an elder brother to his younger brothers and sisters.

Paul says he is thankful to God that he has known these people at Phillippi, and that he makes supplication for them with joy. He further states that they have greatly assisted him in the spread of the gospel, and that God will continue the good work started in them. He sends his love and prays that they may be filled with the fruits of righteousness to the glory and praise of God. He reminds them that the things which have happened to him have helped the gospel, because the whole praetorian guard and all others about him have learned of his loyalty to Jesus Christ. Not knowing what the future has in store but confident that it will be for the best, he says, "For I have learned in whatsoever state I am, therein to be content. To me to live is Christ and to die is gain: yet to abide in the flesh is more needful for your sake."

Paul asks these brethren to live worthy of the gospel they preach and to work out their own salvation with fear and trembling, saying, "For it is God that worketh in you both to will and to work for his good pleasure." He counts everything that he has lost as nothing that he might gain Christ: "Yea verily, and I count all things to be loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but refuse, that I may gain Christ, and be found in him, not having a righteousness of mine own, even that which is of the law, but that which is through faith in Christ. . . . I press on, if so be that I may lay hold on that for which also I was laid hold on by Christ Jesus. . . . one thing I do, forgetting the things which are behind, and stretching forward to the things which are before, I press on toward the goal unto the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. . . . Our citizenship is in heaven. . . . Stand fast in the Lord, my beloved. . . . Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honorable, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things."

From these words of Paul to the Phillipian church there are a number of practical lessons for our day.

First: The things Paul had counted gain were now counted loss that he might win Christ.

In those days when life was much more simple than it is today, it might have been possible for one to be conversant with all printed material, but even Solomon said in his day, "Of the making of books there is no end and much study is a weariness of the flesh."

However, that may have been, it is true today that one must make his selection from the many things available to him. Our modern life is so complex that it calls for as careful consideration of what not to do as it does to decide what to do. To have the ability to deny oneself the time and strength for certain things that one may give time and strength for the more important is no small thing. For it is true everyone must find the true value of the things of life. There are many things that are all right in themselves but if they stand between us and our God they then become a detriment to our best interests and must be discarded.

Paul gave up everything that he gloried in when he became a Christian. He turned his back on wealth and social standing and his place of leadership among the Jews. The old crowd left him and no one knows but that his own relatives may have turned their backs upon him. All things had changed until he was truly able to say, "Yea verily, I count all things to be but refuse that I may win Christ."

The matter of making a wise choice in life comes sooner or later to everyone. It matters not what our profession or walk in life, or how old or young we may be. Indeed the wisest as well as the ignorant face this great need of decision. If we are sincere in our desire to serve God we must count the cost and relegate some things to the background. Life is so short at its best and one has just so much time and strength given in his threescore years and ten.

To every life that has its Damascus Road vision there will also come the period of consecration to the higher things of life, the things which have to do with the spirit. The great life is the one that comes near to doing what God wanted it to do, and no one knows better than the individual himself. Paul counted his former life and its things loss for Christ and his Kingdom. What do we count loss and gain since first we accepted Christ?

Second: Paul put the past behind him and forgot it and pressed on to the future.

He freed himself entirely from the past life. He buried it and forgot it. We hear a great deal about family skeletons and so forth which people like to bring out periodically for review, so that all the dead past is resurrected for another funeral. What a different attitude Paul took. We believe it was this attitude Jesus wanted his people to take. Forget the past. Forget the mistakes and the sins of yesterday with all their ugliness, and press on to a new life and new thinking and new living. Some never rise to do today's work and to meet today's opportunity because they are weighed down by yesterday's failures and losses.

It was not because Paul didn't have bitter memories and woeful mistakes in his life. He had plenty. But he was a new man in Christ and each day should find God's children new in Him. Our efficiency would be increased immeasurably if we could emulate this example of Paul's.

There are many noble examples of this principle but the world needs more of them and particularly in the church.

Third: Paul continues by saying, "Think on these things."

To keep control of the thought-life is not the easiest thing in the world. Thoughts continually keep cropping out when one least expects them. Thoughts are seeds which seek the sunlight and desire life and they may become very powerful for good or ill. They may grow into kingdoms, communities, homes, love and a blessing, or they

(Continued on page 14.)

COMMUNION WARE.

Individual Service.

Made in best Silver Plate or Aluminum. Prices low; first-class workmanship and finish.

ALUMINUM.

Aluminum is light in weight, durable, and does not tarnish.

Style No. 50-A.

- Tray No. 2—Interlocking, with 40 plain glasses $7.00
- Tray No. 6—Interlocking, with 35 plain glasses 6.75
- Tray No. 10—Interlocking, with 30 plain glasses 6.50
- Base No. 50-A—Fits Trays 2, 6, or 10. . . . . 2.25
- Cover No. 50-A—Fits Trays 2, 6, or 10. . . . . 2.25
- Bread Plate No. 1—Narrow rim. . . . . 1.60

SILVER-PLATED.

The Silver-plated Ware is of the very highest grade and best finish; heavily plated on nickel base.

- Tray No. 85—Interlocking only, with 36 glasses $22.00
- Base No. 1—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 85. . 11.00
- Cover No. 5—Silver-plated; fits Tray No. 85. . . 16.00

(For Silver Bread Plates, see under No. 90.)

- Tray No. 90—Interlocking, with 36 plain glasses (this style has broad rim, which is sometimes preferred, due to increased ease of handling) $22.00
- Base No. 2—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 90. . 16.00
- Cover No. 4—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 90. 14.00

- Bread Plate No. 3—Narrow Rim. . . . . $ 9.00
- Bread Plate No. 4—Broad Rim. . . . . 9.00
- Filler—Silver Lined. . . . . 6.00

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street

Richmond, Virginia

A Story for the Children

THE STORY OF A BONE.

By JOSEPH MEARS.

If she were a Scottie, there might be some explanation for "Flivver's" thriftiness. But being a cocker spaniel of a line of sporting dogs extending way back, Flivver's strange affection for an ordinary soup bone is an amusing topic whenever dog-lover friends of her master, James P. O'Neil, noted Pasadena cocker spaniel breeder, gather at his home for an evening of shop talk on their favorite subject.

Believe it or not, Flivver has hoarded this bone for nine of her eleven years. No amount of enticement can persuade her to part with it. She is tempted only temporarily by juicy ribs, meaty soup bones and other luscious tidbits; she always comes back to her first love, the old, weather-beaten, polished bone she first took a fancy to in 1923.

With the passing of the years, Flivver's bone has become an institution.

"How are Flivver and her bone?" inquire friends of the O'Neils when they call.

Always a kindly dog, Flivver's temper is aroused if any other of the numerous dogs in the O'Neil family approach her precious bone.

Of all the friends of the O'Neils who love old Flivver, only one is able to take any great liberties with her bone. Little Joanne Conklin, two and a half years old, can pick up the bone if she wishes and Flivver only looks at her with a patronizing, benevolent air as much as to say: "Well, seeing it's you, it's all right, Joanne."

No one knows why Flivver took a fancy to this bone out of the thousands in her life. Certainly she has known other bigger and better ones. The most plausible explanation is offered by Mrs. O'Neil.

"Flivver first took a fancy to the bone after she had been awfully sick and had to be operated on. She seemed to realize she would never have any more puppies and started mothering the bone. Maybe dogs have the same sort of mother complexes as human beings."

Not only must Flivver keep her beloved bone within sight all the day; she won't sleep unless it is on the bed beside her. Occasionally her bone has been misplaced. But not for long. Flivver sets up such a howl the entire family drops everything and hunts for it.

Recently, Flivver forgot to take her bone to bed. In the middle of the night she woke and discovered her loss. Barking as if a squad of burglars were in the house, she aroused even Tom, the Japanese butler, who came running, shotgun in hand. When he found what was the trouble he joined in the search and eventually found the bone in a corner, underneath a sofa pillow.

When Flivver at last goes the way of all dogs—and she is quite old and almost deaf now—her master plans to work her old bone into a headstone.

Anything so important to a dog must symbolize something to her mere humans know nothing about, and all her friends feel that would be an ideal memorial and a tribute in payment for all the happiness she has brought into this world.

—Our Dumb Animals.

LEARNING TO BE CONTENT.

(Continued from page 13.)

may become destructive, producing gangsters, murderers and everything of the world of darkness.

Paul exhorts these brethren to examine the thought-life and see whether or not it is worthy.

He says think true things, lovely things, worthy things. One can readily think of illustrations where untrue things and unlovely things and the unworthy things have crept into the thinking of mankind and have made for jealousy, evil speaking, and corrupt action. Probably there is not anything that is as refreshing to life as to meet a person whose thoughts are pure and wholesome, a person who thinks of the lovely and worthy things of life, and nothing more contaminating than a person whose mind is a cesspool that belches forth streams of dirty speech and sensual thought.

Whether we will or not, our thought-life is the core of our being, and determines the goal of every life. We are masters of our thought-life and it is here that God should be enthroned. It may be the center of joy and happiness, and love may reign supreme. From here we may go forth to meet the world's hard tasks and conquer, or we may go forth to certain defeat and a world of outer darkness and despair.

The essential quality of life is control over the thoughts. There is no power over other things until there is power over this realm within the man. "As a man thinketh in his heart so is he," is not a mere statement from the past, but the secret of every great life in the world's history.

Fourth: Paul states that he "can do all things through Christ."

Everywhere we see the impossible being done and it is strange that no one thinks of saying that these are miracles, though they really are. The doors are being opened constantly to many great secrets of life, and each day finds the things of life being conquered on land and sea and in the heavens.

Jesus told his disciples, "Greater things than these shall ye do," but how few stop to think that

(Continued on page 15.)

Eiffers Sunday School Maps.

The first 5 maps are in Set No. 1, with stand, Price $15.00

Set No. 2 8 Maps, Price $10.00

Fine large Maps, in 6 Colors 36x57, on linen finished Cloth. Mounted on a folding steel stand, which can be regulated, so that Maps may be seen to the best advantage. This set contains data for thorough Bible Study. Its large print and Cheerful Colors makes this set very instructive and attractive. Contains the five thoroughly up to date Maps necessary for the study of Bible History. New Testament Palestine, — Old Testament Palestine, — Roman empire and Bible Lands, showing Pauls Travels by Colored lines. — Lands of the Old Testament, from the Great Sea, to the Persian Gulf. — The Exodus, Egypt, showing by Colored lines the wanderings of the Israelites the

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street

Richmond, Virginia

HOLMAN SUPERIOR TEACHERS' BIBLES

Authorized Version—Self-Pronouncing

The Best Editions of the World's Best Book

For Adults, Teachers, Preachers, Students, and All Who Would Study the Word of God Intelligently

BOLD BLACK TYPE—COMPACT SIZE 4 1/2 x 6 3/4 INCHES—WILL FIT THE COAT POCKET

Part page specimen of Holman Boldblack Type Bible

ST. MATTHEW, 5.

Christ's sermon on the mount.

13 And leaving Naz'a-rèth, he came and dwelt in Cà-pèr-na-ùm, which is upon the sea coast, in the borders of Zàb'u-lon and Nèph'tha-lim:
14 That it might be fulfilled

A. D. 31.

934 CHAPTER 5.

CHAP. 4.

3 Who are blessed. 13 The disciples call the salt of the earth, and light of the world; Christ urgeth on them a good example, etc.

Isa. 9. 1, 2.

AND seeing the multitudes; he went up into a moun-

THIS NEW HOLMAN TEACHERS' BIBLE, Pronouncing Text, Bold Black Type is a PRONOUNCED SUCCESS. The latest Bible with NEW HELPS that are quite comprehensive and consist of an Illustrated Bible Dictionary, Concordance and additional aids all under ONE ALPHABETICAL INDEX. Also Fine Maps on Coated Paper, and a specially prepared BIBLE READING COURSE, intended to stimulate and maintain interest in the Bible. Imported Bible paper is used to improve opacity and keep down bulk. By this means you get the benefit of full Biblical information without the physical discomfort of handling a heavy volume.

STYLES AND PRICES—BIBLE PAPER EDITION

4612. French Morocco Leather, divinity circuit, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges..... $4.00

4630. Same as 4612, with extra leather lined covers..... 4.75

THIN INDIA PAPER EDITION

With Helps as described above. Size 4 1/2 x 6 3/4 inches. One inch in thickness

630X. Egyptian Morocco, divinity circuit, leather linings, red under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker..... 7.00

633X. Algerian Morocco, divinity circuit, leather lining to edge, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, extra quality binding..... 8.00

EXTRA LARGE PRINT TEACHERS' BIBLES

Large 8 Vo. Size—8x5 1/2 inches—1600 Pages, including 400 pages of Bible Study Helps

Part Page Specimen of Print

ST. MATTHEW, 5.

Christ's sermon on the mount.

15 The land of Zàb'u-lon, and the land of Nèph'tha-lim, by the way of the sea, beyond Jòr'dan, Gal'i-lee of the Gèn'tiles;

A. D. 31.

2 And he opened his mouth, and

Isa. 9. 1, 2.

taught them, saying,

Luke 2. 22.

3 Blessed are the poor in spirit:

Mark 1. 14.

for their's is the kingdom of heaven.

CONTAINING COMPLETE HELPS TO BIBLE STUDY, INCLUDING ALL OF THE FOLLOWING FEATURES

A New Practical Course in Bible Reading, A Treasury of Biblical Information. The most carefully compiled, thorough and attractive form in which valuable Biblical information has ever been prepared. Illustrated Self-Pronouncing Bible Dictionary containing 150 illustrations, concise definitions and textual references on nearly 50,000 subjects. A Practical Comparative Concordance, with nearly 50,000 references. Four Thousand Questions and Answers on the Old and New Testaments. A valuable help to all Bible Readers.

STYLES AND PRICES

4712. Divinity Circuit (overlapping covers). French Seal Leather, red under gold edges, silk head bands, and silk marker.. $5.00

812RL. Red Letter Teachers' Bible. The Words of Christ in the New Testament. Old Testament Passages alluded to by Christ, various prophecies relating to Christ in the Old Testament, etc., all PRINTED IN RED. Binding same as described above on 4712 and same large Self-Pronouncing type..... 6.00

733X. Holman India Paper, Genuine Morocco, leather lined, silk sewed, divinity circuit, round corners carmine under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker, same type and helps as above..... 10.65

All styles sent Postpaid at above prices—Thumb Index 50 cents extra

Christian Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

The Christian Orphanage had a good day Sunday, September 2nd. It was "Home Coming Day."

This is an annual affair at the Orphanage. This is the day when all of the children who have been reared here and have gone out to take their place in the affairs of life are invited to come back to their old home and spend the day together. We always kill the fatted calf for the occasion and try to give them a good time. Some of the boys like to walk over the farm and talk over the days when they were cutting wheat when the sun was bearing down "pretty hard" as they say. They like to get together and talk of the days of the years gone by.

The service was opened by prayer led by Dr. J. U. Newman. The singing class put on its regular program, then Mr. J. M. Darden, Chairman of the Board of Trustees addressed the audience with an inspiring talk. He was followed by Dr. L. E. Smith, President of Elon College. Dr. Smith and Mr. Darden always say the right things at the right time. Both addresses were highly enjoyed by the entire audience. After the service closed, those present went out to the grove where lunch was served in picnic style. Two hundred visitors were present for the occasion.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

REPORT FOR SEPTEMBER 6, 1934.

Brought forward .....$8,303.24

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

North Carolina and Virginia Conferences:
Greensboro, First .....	$ 9.37
Union Ridge .....	2.00
Concord .....	1.00
Bethlehem .....	6.62
	18.99
Eastern North Carolina Conference:
Christian Light .....	2.15
Youngsville .....	2.00
Henderson .....	3.13
	7.28
Western North Carolina Conference:
Big Oak .....	.28
Smithwood .....	.80
	1.08
Eastern Virginia Conference:
Mt. Carmel .....	10.45
Suffolk .....	25.00
Waverly .....	3.32
	38.77
Valley Virginia Central Conference:
Linville .....	6.80
	6.80
Alabama Conference:
Noon Day .....	2.10
	2.10
Georgia and Alabama Conference:
Vanceville .....	1.00
	1.00
Special Offerings.
Haw River Christian Church, special collection for singing class.....	6.06
F. C. Owen, gdn. for Jas. Brown ..	12.50
	18.56
Total for the week .....	94.58
Grand total .....	$8,397.82

LEARNING TO BE CONTENT.

(Continued from page 14.)

each generation has witnessed greater things than those of Jesus' day.

With the individual who cooperates with God, "All things are possible," and what appears to man as an impossibility can be changed into a glorious victory.

The church of the Living Christ needs to take new courage in these days of world-wide need and believe in its leader. We can give of our money and time and talent and see the desert blossom as the rose. We can break down the walls of opposition to the message of our Christ. But we must remember that it is not in our own strength but through Him that gives us the strength.

Too long have we been building our structure on numbers, wealth of man, and man's worldly knowledge, and we have seen our building fall.

Let us build on him who "is the way, the truth, and the life."

Last: Paul gives a lesson of trust and not of anxious care.

"In nothing be anxious." How easy it is to say these words. How many souls through the years have carried the weight of the world on their shoulders. We are reminded of Jesus' conversation with Martha, and what he said to her about anxiety.

Paul was not lazy; he was a fighter and aggressive in his work for Christ. No one can climb without effort. No one achieves success by the road of don't care. But having said that, there is to be a spirit of trust and dependence upon God that "All things do work together for good." In whatever state we may find ourselves, let us be content, knowing that the ultimate victory is the Lord's.

ELON COLLEGE

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

South Entrance to the Campus

ELON COLLEGE, founded by the Christian Church in 1889, has fully justified the faith and hope of its founders during its 42 years of operation. Its graduates from the four-year course leading to a bachelor's degree, number 980, now living, 122 of whom are in the Christian Ministry and full-time Christian service. The majority of these are members of our own denomination. In addition, 449 are in educational work and are an active influence in the lay leadership of the Christian Church.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION BUILDING, and the definite religious atmosphere of the College, provide the very best facilities available for training for religious leadership, and offer the Church its finest opportunity to train the young people of the denomination to assume active leadership both in the ministry and laity of the local churches.

Address—

C. M. CANNON, Registrar

Elon College, - - - - - North Carolina

Home Atmosphere—Reasonable Rates—Clean Athletics—Christian Spirit

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr
A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom, as represented by the Congregational Christian Church.

BOARD OF EDITORS.

J. O. ATKINSON, D. D. . . . . Editor
E. C. GILLETTE, D. D. . . . . Associate
I. W. JOHNSON, D. D. . . . . Contributing
ELISHA A. KING, D. D. . . . . Contributing
J. T. KERNODLE. . . . . Managing Editor

DEPARTMENTAL EDITORS.

H. S. HARDCASTLE. . . . . Sunday School
J. G. TRUITT, D. D. . . . . Sermon
F. C. LESTER. . . . . Young People
H. E. ROUNTREE. . . . . Altar

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year . . . . . $2.00
Six Months . . . . . 1.00

Trial Subscriptions: Five or more new subscriptions sent in at one time by pastor or president of any church organization, three months for 40c each.

Published Every Thursday at Richmond, Virginia, by the Central Publishing Company, Inc.

Entered as second-class matter at the Postoffice at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Change of Address: Be sure to give both old and new address when asking that your address be changed.

All news matter and items to be published in "The Sun" should be addressed to J. O. Atkinson, Editor, Elon College, N. C., and should reach him not later than Friday preceding date of publication. If more convenient, news from Congregational Churches may be sent to E. C. Gillette, Associate Editor, 117 W. Forsyth Street, Jacksonville, Fla. Emergency notices will be received at the Richmond Office up until Tuesday of week of publication.

All remittances for subscriptions, renewals, advertising, etc., books for review, and other matters of business should be addressed to J. T. Kernodle, Managing Editor, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond, Va.

Notices: Obituary and marriage notices, limited to 125 words, published free. All over 125 words, 1c a word, cash with notice. No notices should exceed 250 words.

Receipts: The change of label is your receipt for money paid. The label shows date of expiration, and change on label will appear the first or second issue of the month following renewal, provided it was received before the 25th. No other receipt will be sent unless requested. Please notify the Richmond Office if label is not changed as above.

OBITUARIES

JONES.

Whereas, our heavenly Father, in His infinite wisdom and love, has taken from us our beloved sister, Mrs. Sue Jones, who was a loyal and devoted member of the Missionary and Ladies' Aid Societies of Durham Christian Church. Her uppermost thought was her church, and her earnest desire to be of help in the upbuilding of the kingdom.

Therefore, we, the members of the Missionary and Ladies' Aid Societies, do hereby offer the following resolutions:

First: That we realize our loss is heaven's gain, and we bow in humble submission to the will of Him who is ever mindful of us.

having her with us, and her christian life shall be one of our sweetest memories.

Third: That we extend our sincere sympathy to the bereaved family and commend them to our heavenly Father for comfort and consolation.

Fourth: That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the records of our Second: That we have been blessed by societies and a copy sent to THE CHRISTIAN SUN for publication.

Signed,

MRS. J. P. AVENT,
MRS. J. L. HARWARD,
MRS. H. L. JOHNSON.

LONG.

On August 22, 1934, Mr. A. M. Long of Pleasant Union Christian Church, near Lillington, N. C., took as he expressed it, "just a step on the other side." The burden of sorrow that would naturally come to his own and to his friends was somewhat lightened by his strong testimony and hope of life hereafter which he gave over and over again.

Mr. Long loved his church and proved it by attending almost all its services of whatever nature, and extending a helping hand in every financial undertaking.

Pleasant Union has lost one of its most substantial members. I think he was the most liberal giver in proportion to financial ability I have ever seen. Not only a tither, but a tither of almost every gross dollar that came into his hand. He will be greatly missed. The grave was literally wrapped in flowers by his many friends. May the blessing of God rest on his loved ones left to miss him.

Wedding or Gift Bible

FOR THE HOME

Holman Self-Pronouncing Home Study Edition

A BEAUTIFUL PRESENTATION PAGE Marriage Certificate and Family Record makes this special edition a most desirable Bible for a wedding gift.

Full Bound size, 8 1/2 x 6 inches, nearly 1800 pages. Authorized Version with Marginal References.

Large Print—Easy to Read

The Helps are the latest and most practical published—prepared by the most reliable and well-known authorities, and consist of a TEACHERS' NEW READY REFERENCE HAND BOOK, which gives the salient and essential information needed in Bible study.

Illustrated Self-Pronouncing Bible Dictionary—Containing 150 illustrations.

Oriental Light on the Bible (Containing over 100 illustrations). A new kind of illuminating Bible help.

Treasury of Biblical Information.
A New Series of Maps. A selection of the most used, with Special Maps, the results of the most recent explorations.

A New Practical Comparative Concordance, with nearly 50,000 references. Four Thousand Questions and Answers on the Bible.

ABSOLUTELY DURABLE BINDINGS that will not break in the back.

Specimen of the Print. Full size of the page is 5 1/2 x 8 inches.

Specimen of Type.
17 ¶ From that time Jē'sus began to preach, and to say, ¶ Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at

A BEAUTIFUL PRESENTATION PAGE Marriage Certificate and Family Record makes this special edition a most desirable Bible for a wedding gift.

No. 4914. French Morocco, flexible limp, gold titles, round corners, red under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker. . . . . $5.50

Postage Paid

His body was laid to rest in the church cemetery, services being conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. C. H. Norris of the Baptist church.

J. LEE JOHNSON.

To think and act, to act and think—this is the sum of all the wisdom that has from the first been acknowledged and practiced, though not understood by every one—i. e. (as added), the one must continually act and react on the other, like exhaling and inhaling, must correspond as question and answer.—Goethe.

Mere intelligence without corresponding energy of the will is a polished sword in its scabbard—contemptible if it is never drawn forth.—Lindner.

PIEDMONT COLLEGE

Located in

"The Blue Ridge Highlands"

An accredited college with an enviable reputation for superior classroom instruction, and wholesome student life.

Standard courses leading to the A. B. and B. S. degrees. Careful, scholarly instructors.

A refined Christian atmosphere. All of the cultural elements essential to a liberal education.

A minimum of expense. Tuition and board for the entire academic year only $273.50.

For information, write

GEORGE C. BELLINGRATH, Dean,
PIEDMONT COLLEGE,
DEMOREST, GEORGIA.

Southern Seminary Foundation

(Successor to Atlanta Theological Seminary.)

AFFILIATED WITH

Vanderbilt University

The Foundation and the other Foundations that are affiliated with Vanderbilt University School of Religion comprise the only Interdenominational Theological School in the South. Through this affiliation the students enjoy the rights and privileges of Vanderbilt University.

DEGREES.

Candidates for degrees are required to have completed their college courses.

The degree of Bachelor of Divinity is offered to qualified students who complete the required courses.

Vanderbilt University also offers the degrees of Master of Arts and Doctor of Philosophy, in accordance with the regulations established in its several departments.

MORE THAN A SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY.

Because of our affiliation with Vanderbilt, our relations with other nearby colleges where our students can take courses without tuition, and the cooperation of the American Red Cross and other social agencies in the city, we prepare students for many types of Christian service.

For information write

WILLIAM JAMES CAMPBELL, President,
330 BUTTRICK HALL, VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY,
NASHVILLE, TENN.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

Representing the Southeast Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches.

IN ESSENTIALS, UNITY.

IN NON-ESSENTIALS, LIBERTY.

IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY.

VOLUME LXXXVI.

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1934.

NUMBER 37.

•• THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY ••

A Name That Rhymed—and Fame!—

Tuesday of this week was "Paul Revere Day" at the Chicago Fair, and thereby hangs a tale. E. H. R. Revere, great grandson of the now famous Paul, was present as a guest of Rufus C. Dawes, president of the fair. The story as told by Revere is that on that memorable night in April, 1775, there were two men who rode through the night and shouted as they galloped, "The British are coming." One of these was Paul Revere and his colleague was William Dawes. Because the poet, Longfellow, found that "Revere" was easy to rhyme and "Dawes" was not, the former passed into history and to fame, while few ever heard of the companion rider.

A New Anti-Pneumonia Drug.—

Using quinine as the base, a new drug has been derived which it is claimed will give marvelous results in the treatment of pneumonia. This new drug is a variant of an older quinine derivative known as optochin. Optochin has been known to physicians for many years as a drug that is highly toxic to pneumonia germs, but because of the fact that it also caused blindness it was of very little use. The new drug not only causes no blindness, but it is said to be more deadly to all of the four known types of pneumonia bacteria. This new drug can be taken by way of the mouth in tablet form, which was not true of some of the other derivatives, and this, from a medical standpoint enhances its value.

Dean Inge Retires.—

On last Sunday Dean Inge, after a notable ministry extending over many years, preached his farewell sermon in St. Paul's Cathedral, London, England. A secular contemporary, remarking on his retirement, said: "There was something unusually sad about the occasion. . . . His farewell sermon marked the passing of a powerful personality from the realm of action. It was as if a great beacon light had flickered out." No man has a greater sphere of action than the powerful and consecrated minister. He not only has his own congregation, but he is quoted by the press, and his messages are carried to a vast unseen audience. Dean Inge became a figure of importance on the world stage, and he will be much missed.

The New Radio Authority.—

The Federal Communications Commission, which by Act of Congress supersedes the Federal Radio Commission, which was organized in 1927 and is now abolished, has been organized, with Judge Eugene O. Sykes of Jackson, Miss., as its chairman. The six other members are: Col. Thad H. Brown, Columbus, Ohio; Paul A. Walker, Oklahoma City, Okla.; Dr. Irvin Stewart, Fort Worth, Texas; George H. Payne, New York, N. Y.; Norman S. Case, Providence, R. I.; and Hampson Gary, Tyler, Texas. All seven members of the Commission are university graduates, and all have either studied or practiced law. The Commission will have three divisions having jurisdiction, respectively, over broadcasting, telegraph, and telephone. In view of the important relationship of broadcasting to the homes and children of the nation, it seems strange that the women, and especially the mothers of the country have no representation on the Commission.—Advance.

Maine Votes Wet.—

While the hosts of drunks continue to increase—if police records are true—in other States, Maine votes to join in the procession. The same election that returned Louis J. Brann, Democratic Governor, to office, carried the State for repeal of its ancient prohibition amendment by a majority of two-to-one. Senator Frederick Hale, Republican, was leading his Democratic opponent, Alfred K. Ames, by a margin too narrow for comfort. This contest was watched by the entire nation, Ames being the New Deal candidate, while it was bitterly assailed by Senator Hale. Governor Brann is said to have remained silent on this subject. Whatever the outcome of the election may be from a political standpoint, it shows that public opinion in this so-called dry territory is not yet crystalizing against the liquor traffic. The scourge of liquor will have to lash more fiercely before there is another rebellion against its curse—the mounting records of disaster and death which it is causing mount still higher before the nation is aroused from its lethargy.

A Million in Your Coin Purse.—

Even if you had it, it would probably be impossible to cash it into smaller change without giving your bank previous notice, but one ounce of a precious metal which has just been isolated, is said to be worth over a million dollars. This new metal has been designated as "proactium," and was first exhibited before the American Chemistry Society in Cleveland, Ohio, on Monday of this week. Dr. A. V. Brosse, of the University of Chicago, exhibited one-tenth of a gram of the metal, which he succeeded in isolating only gram of proactium was extracted from a ton of pitchblend from which the radium had already been extracted, the cost of its extraction was $5,000. Proactium is a hard, silvery substance somewhat similar in appearance to mercury. Its rays are even more penetrating than those of radium and are similar. Its scientific and medical possibilities, if it can be obtained in workable quantities, are even greater than those of that metal. Its "half-life", which means the length of time required to radiate away one-half of its metallic substance, is 32,000 years—making it twenty times as stable as radium.

"Morro Castle" Burns.—

What was probably the greatest marine disaster ever to occur off the eastern coast of the United States, was the destruction of the Morro Castle by fire about eight miles out from the New Jersey shore during the storm which raged last Friday night. It was first reported that this palace of the sea was struck by lightning, but it has been charged by surviving officers of the crew that arsonists fired the ship. The captain of the ill-fated liner had died of acute indigestion the day before, and the ship was in charge of Chief Officer Warms. Acting Captain Warms advanced the theory that incendiarism was responsible for the ship's fate, and he was supported by the second and third officers. The third officer, Irwin Freeman said: "I eliminate lightning striking the gasoline tanks because they are right beside my room and I passed within two feet of them and they were not afire." He did not think it was caused by a "time bomb or fire machine" but that "the fire was set" by some radical. First reports stated that more than half of the 558 persons on board were lost. Later reports account for 238 passengers and 187 members of the crew. These, together with 116 bodies which have been recovered at this writing, leave 17 still unaccounted for.

National Sales Tax Bobs Up Again.—

Officials of the federal government are combing every possible source in an effort to meet the $500,000,000 tax bill which the next session of Congress will be called upon to enact, when it meets in January. Some of these are reported to be looking upon the sales-tax with increasing favor. The present "nuisance taxes" that provide the treasury with nearly a half-billion dollars a year will expire on January 1st, and not only must these be renewed but others must be enacted if the present rate of spending by the government is to be continued. Their only alternative is the general sales-tax. Several of the States already have sales-taxes, and it is probable that the collection of the national tax would be made in the manner they are for these States. Thirty countries have "after centuries of experience in taxation, adopted the sales tax as the fairest, simplest, most reliable plan of collecting revenue," we are told. The plan will doubtless have considerable opposition. Representative Robert L. Doughton, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, led the fight which defeated the sales tax, and said that he would favor it as a means of raising revenue "only as a last resort." It begins to look as if we are now nearing the "last resort" stage.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

The Jacksonville, Florida, office is again busy, as Miss Pattie Lee Coghill has returned from her vacation spent at her home in Henderson, North Carolina, and also visiting several centers of interest in the north. Superintendent Gillette has also returned from a vacation spent at Waynesville, North Carolina.

Most of the students who have been working under the Student Summer Service in southeastern churches have returned to their homes, or to their educational institutions. There were twenty-two such students under appointment in the southeast and the reports of the services rendered have been most gratifying and in fact enthusiastic.

After spending a month's vacation with his family at Fairview, N. C., Rev. Elisha A. King, D. D., contributing editor of THE SUN and pastor of our church at Miami Beach, Fla., returned to his pulpit September 2nd. During June and July Dr. King gave two series of lectures before the Young People's Conferences at DeLeon Springs, Fla., and Blue Ridge, N. C.

Rev. R. T. Grissom writes that he has been successful, through government aid, in putting a new roof on our Elk Spur school and church building and also two coats of paint and new window lights to replace those that were broken or damaged, the building now being in first-class condition, for which the entire community seems deeply grateful, as the work to their building was so much needed.

We understand that Rev. E. B. White has been extended calls for the next year from both Damascus Christian Church, Gates County, N. C., and from Eure Christian Church, in the same state. If these calls are accepted, Brother White will enter upon the eighth at the former and the fifth year at the latter church. We learn that during his pastorate both of these churches have practically doubled their attendance, have active Sunday schools and that the various societies of the church are progressing nicely. Brother White is a hard worker and deserves the support which has been given him.

Enclosed in the copy for the Christian Orphanage page this week was this little note: "Dear John T.—Mrs. Johnston is critically ill and is growing weaker day by day, with no hope for her recovery. I am passing through one of the saddest periods of my life. Remember me in your prayers." We are praying that if it be at all possible, that she who has sustained the much loved superintendent of our orphanage in his arduous task may be restored to him in strength, but that if He wills otherwise, that strength may be given Brother Johnston to bear his grief. We know that there are hundreds of others who will join us in this plea.

Rev. J. F. Apple, pastor, reports a very successful and happy revival at Pleasant Ridge Church (Randolph County) during the fourth week in August. He was ably assisted by Rev. G. C. Crutchfield, who, by his earnest messages, reached the hearts of the people and greatly edified his hearers. Brother Apple has been pastor of this church the past year and has struck a responsive chord in the minds and hearts of the people there. The revival resulted in many reconsecrations and conversions and ten additions to the church. Pleasant Ridge is one of our strong and growing rural churches. The hope of his church is its young people who are following in the footsteps of a loyal and faithful parentage and leaders.

THE SUN welcomes to the ranks of our faithful pastors in North Carolina Rev. C. Rexford Raymond, D. D., who, through our Convention and other assemblies, has become favorably known to many SUN readers. Dr. Raymond now takes up his work as pastor of "The Church of Wide Fellowship" of our denomination at Southern Pines. After giving up the pastorate of Pilgrim Church, Chattanooga, Tenn., Dr. Raymond travelled through the South and East the past year in the interest of the Southern Seminary Foundation, Nashville, Tenn. He has held several pastorates of importance in Congregational churches in the East, as well as in the West, and is a man of strong character, and striking personality. We predict for him great usefulness and service in the church at Southern Pines.

The following interesting item comes by way of Advance, September 6: "Dr. S. Q. Helfenstein, editor emeritus of the Christian Publishing Association of Dayton, Ohio, will address centennial celebrations of the Parma and Greece and the Stanfordville, N. Y., Congregational Christian churches in September. Dr. Helfenstein served as pastor of both of these churches before he gave up pastoral work for college and editorial work. Stanfordville was the location of the Christian Biblical Institute and the training ground of many of the early Christian ministers. It was at this institution that Horace Mann and Austin Craig formed a life friendship and fellowship in Christian education. Both were later connected with Antioch College in Ohio."

The Suffolk Christian Church Bulletin, September 9th, reports that our Suffolk Church has a membership of 1,731, counting both residents and non-residents, and a Sunday school enrollment of 814. The Baraca Class of 214 members and the Young People's Department 154 and Intermediate Department of 114 lead the list in numbers. In this number of the Bulletin, Pastor Truitt calls to worship in these words: "As your pastor I am calling you to worship in your church. The summer is over, the autumn weather is here, the schools are opening, the families are getting back on their regular schedules, and it is time to worship in your church. I wish I could just say the word that would bring every member of our great church under a deep anxiety to fill its pews. I am sure it would be far more inspiring if every pew was filled, even to the last seat in the balcony."

Rev. W. P. Minton, D. D., beloved and well-known throughout the South as our Foreign Mission Secretary for many years and later one of the secretaries of the Commission on Missions of our united fellowship, has accepted the position of superintendent of our Association and churches of Pennsylvania. Dr. Minton began his work on August 15th, and THE SUN's editor joins the editor of the Missionary Herald in declaring that: "It would be difficult to find a man better fitted to handle both the problems and the opportunities which Pennsylvania offer than W. P. Minton. He unites a rigorous conscience with effervescent enthusiasm and persistent imagination. Both in his position as secretary for foreign missions of the Christian church and in that as associate secretary of the Commission on Missions of the combined denominations he has worked early and late on the problems which the merger has created. At the last mid-winter meeting, he insisted that his name be not presented for re-election as a secretary of the Commission on Missions, although he finally consented to serve for a period of six months. His friends will rejoice that his talents are to be applied to the problems of Pennsylvania."

The Men's Bible Class of our Burlington, N. C. church, working in conjunction with those interested of our Mt. Zion Church, is sponsoring a very significant and praiseworthy movement in seeking to honor the memory of Daniel W. Kerr, founder and first editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, in 1844. It is proposed to erect a suitable memorial on the spot where the office of the first editor was and thus memorialize one of the significant movements of our church. A Memorial Association for this purpose is being formed, a committee of five having been appointed to lead in the movement and direct the activities of the Association. Rev. J. F. Apple, Elon College, N. C., pastor of Mt. Zion Church, near which place THE CHRISTIAN SUN originated, is the chairman of the committee, the other four members being Dr. C. W. McPherson, and Mr. John Isley, Burlington, N. C., Messrs. Julius Pace and I. T. McAdams, Mebane, N. C. This committee is planning for a mass meeting with an appropriate program of addresses and memorial exercises on the ground of the editorial office near the home of Brother I. T. McAdams, 2:30 P. M., Sunday, October 14th. The hope is to make this a most interesting meeting. Further announcements will be made through THE SUN.

COUNTERFEIT CHRISTIANITY.

What the world needs today is a Christianity not too dainty for use, but one that can endure the strain of open conflict and the subtly undermining forces of the uregenerate world. In this rough-and-tumble world only the genuine article can endure. We need dead-in-earnest Christians, who radiate helpful and uplifting influences. We need Christians who hold fast their integrity in the keen conflicts of business, who stand for unbending righteousness in civil affairs, and who uphold with self-denying zeal the cause of Christ. Of course, we are not setting the proclamation of the gospel and Christian living over against each other, but we are declaring that the world needs a demonstration of the power of Christianity in transforming and inspiring human lives. It is very unfortunate that much professed Christianity is counterfeit Christianity. Our churches are filled with people who do not manifest in their lives the spirit or the principles of our religion. It is hard for churches thus hampered, to make headway.—The Watchman-Examiner.

AT EVENTIDE—A PRAYER.

Give me courage dearest Lord,
For I have work to do.
'Tis only by thy strengthening hand
That I can carry through.
Answer my prayer, thou comforting one,
Hard is the road, and long;
Deep are the pitfalls, tired my feet,
But I must carry on.
Life comes through labor of love, dear Lord,
Old cares replaced by new.
Renew my faith, lest I forget
And fail to carry through.
Helen Cleveland Roe in M. P. Recorder.

RELIGION IN COLLEGES.

Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Editor,
THE CHRISTIAN SUN,
Elon College, North Carolina.

Dear Sir:

I notice in the August 2nd issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN a quotation about the shifting beliefs of students during their four years at a state college. Of course it makes a difference which state college, for some state schools exert a Christian influence equal to that of denominational colleges. Beyond that, there seem to me to be two considerations that we might think about.

First, what change took place in the beliefs of the contemporaries of those college students during the same four years? My impressions is that young people just out of high school undergo religious readjustment whether in college or not. Those who stay at home may conform more in lip service to the old formulae, but do they live better than their townsmen who have gone off to college? They too acquire the habits of smoking, gambling and "petting"; they do not attend church regularly, nor do they consider dancing harmful. Youth gets new notions in the home town as well as in college; and I should say that compared to the morality of the life and conversation in the home town drug store, pool room, and filling station, the life on a college campus is a Sunday School picnic.

Second, what is the tendency displayed by the data quoted in that August 2nd issue of the SUN? Belief in a personal God and in answered prayer held up remarkably well. In matters of evolution, inspiration, miracles, church attendance, and whether Christians must be church members those students came pretty nearly into line with what I have observed to be the ordinary beliefs of Congregationalists the country over. We cannot complain if State schools are making good Congregationalists. In matters of smoking, gambling, petting, etc., the college student would seem to be more frank but no worse than his father in the days of "sparking" and frequenting red light districts under the dispensation of a double standard. And finally, the percentage of those who believe in pacifism rises from 11 to 58. Here the college students are but keeping step with the churches in their resolutions against war and military training in the schools. Both may yet get into step with the Prince of Peace.

Sincerely,

RAYMOND ADAMS.

Chapel Hill, N. C.

A WORD ABOUT HIGH SCHOOLS.

By DR. J. H. DILLARD.

Ten years ago it fell to my lot to make a brief address at Harvard University. Speaking of educational problems in the South I expressed the conviction that the weakest place in our Public School system was the High Schools. I am sorry to say that I still think so. From what I hear I believe this true not only in the South, but that it is pretty generally true in other parts of the country, and that most of our educational observers hold this opinion.

There are three considerations which seem to support this view. First, one hears from business people employing High School graduates that these graduates are lacking in at least two accomplishments which they ought to have. They are lacking ability to write English correctly, and in ready and accurate use of figures. I have myself recently heard this complaint from three thoughtful business men.

A second complaint comes from colleges. It is a common thing to hear that a majority of students entering from High Schools are not prepared to do college work, because of their poor English, because of lack of habit of close study, and because of lack of foundational preparation in the subjects which they are pursuing. I heard a distinguished teacher of Physics in a leading college say that he much preferred to have students in his classes who had not studied this subject in High School.

A third consideration which has led many to have doubts about the efficiency of High Schools is that the students, when questioned and tested, seem to be hazy in their knowledge. An examiner who visited a large number of High Schools says that it became almost ludicrous, when he would ask a question, how the answer would be, ain't it so and so?

It is my belief that at least one cause for these honest complaints lies in the curriculum. The students have too many subjects and not enough concentration. It seems to me that there is too much changing of subjects during the four years. It would be better, for example, for the students to have one science two years, than to have two sciences, one each year. It would be better for him to have French 3 years than to have French two years and Spanish one year, or vice versa. The point is that whatever the subject be, it should be carried on long enough for the students to get a grip on it. In English courses not enough writing is kept up during the four years and there seems a lack of careful correction and prompt return of papers or compositions that are required.

Now if the complaints about High Schools are fairly well founded, of course we want to seek a way to improvement. In spite of the obvious fact that here are some High Schools doing good work, and that we may well take pride in the increase and development of High Schools, there seems to be justification in the criticisms. In looking for ways of betterment we shall have to keep in mind one sure fact. The fact is this, that however the curriculum may change, education in its essence is a thing which does not change. In the process of time subjects may exchange, as they ought to change. Yet it is still true that the most modern, progressive education finds its highest value in simply doing the job right.—Reprinted from The Prairie View Standard.

Charlottesville, Va.,
Sept. 1, 1934.

FLORIDA MINISTERS' CONVENTION.

The annual Florida Ministers' Convention will be held at DeLeon Springs, beginning on the evening of October 1st, and continuing until the morning of October 4th. The principal speaker this year will be Dr. Enoch Bell, Editorial Secretary of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, whose topic will be "An Editor Looks at Modern Missions." The discussions which will follow will cover important subjects such as "Modern Missions and Social Action," "World Peace, Evangelism," etc. There will be other speakers and a discussion of practical subjects concerning the work of the churches and plans for the fall and winter season. This Ministers' Convocation is always well attended by the Florida ministers, and last year Dr. J. Edward Kirby of Raleigh, N. C., was the principal lecturer. He expressed the wish that pastors from other areas in the southeast could attend. The Florida ministers would gladly welcome any from neighboring states and feel that the Convocation would be of value to any who desire to attend. The hotel rate for board and room is two dollars per day.

RECOGNITION OF S. S. TEACHERS

William T. Ellis' suggestion last October to honor Sunday School teachers has become a nation-wide movement going into effect all over the country on October 6th. It is simply a sincere effort to honor America's more than 2,000,000 Sunday School teachers; incidentally, it is hoped that it will mean a vast increase in Sunday School enrollment and efficiency. Possibly of still greater importance will be the effect upon the general public of this demonstration of Christian solidarity and activity, and the significance of the Sunday School as a major educational influence of our day.

Suggested programs may be secured from the Executive Committee for National Sunday School recognition Day, at 1816 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.—Missionary Review.

WHAT CAN WE DO?

There are so many things we cannot do in the physical realm; so many things we cannot know because of limitations, but in the spiritual realm we can say with the apostle Paul, "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." Paul was a prisoner in Rome when he wrote these words to the Philippian church and he fully knew his limitations physically, but he knew that nothing could bind the power of God and he rested in the comfort of this wonderful thought. Paul did not worry and fret over what he could not do but he kept busy at what he could do: encouraging and exhorting the churches to greater endeavor to spread the gospel of Jesus Christ. He set us an example that we will do well to follow so may we meditate on some of the things we can do.

Through Christ we can know that the blood that was shed on Calvary's cross cleanseth us from all sin; that through Him sin shall not have dominion over us. Through Christ we can fight the good fight of faith; we can lay hold on eternal life; we can profess a good profession before many witnesses. Through Christ we can be more than conquerors; we can be overcomers; we can be victors over the world, the flesh and the evil one. We can be all of these—yea, verily, we are, for this is the victory that He is, and that He is a rewarder of them that diligently seek Him, and though now we see through a glass darkly, yet with the eye of faith we can see the heavenly Jerusalem that John the beloved saw and pictured so beautifully for us in the Revelation. Through Christ we can know that our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory; while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen. We can almost hear the tramp of feet of those who are marching upward to Zion, the beautiful city of God. We can taste and see that the Lord is good and know that "the hill of Zion yields a thousand sacred sweets, before we reach the heavenly fields, or walk the golden streets." W.

Surely it behooves us to exercise some little modesty, and not to think it hard that our religious knowledge should stand upon a par with our physical. God has reserved in his own nature and his works such infinite stores of wisdom and benevolence that we need never cease learning, and finding ever more to admire and to adore.

—James Hinton.

Each man a little of his best
For those whose need is great;
And so love mounting to its crest
Throws wide the unbarred gate.

E-D-I-T-O-R-I-A-L

EDITOR

J. O. ATKINSON, ELON COLLEGE, N. C.

ASSOCIATE EDITOR

E. C. GILLETTE

117 W. Forsyth Street, Jacksonville, Fla.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS

I. W. JOHNSON    ELISHA A. KING

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE FRUIT OF THE GIFT.

In his letter to the saints in Christ Jesus at Phillipi, Paul, exhorting his readers to be liberal in giving, declares that it is not the gift he desires but the fruit of giving "that may abound to your account" (Phil. 4:17). This is a desire of all those who in righteousness exhort the church to liberality. The fruit of giving is the glory of the church, and of the individual. Almost without exception, fruit-bearing Christians are liberal in giving their means to the enterprises of the church.

These things should be borne in mind as our Annual Conferences approach and as our churches face their problems and privileges of giving. The Southern Convention, in session at Suffolk, Va., May 1-4, gave a great challenge in the Report of the Committee on Finance. "For each year of the next biennium," declares the challenge, "the Convention will need $31,500.00." No one will dispute that need. Above all, the sore need is not for the life or sustenance of the enterprises involved, but for the fruit of the gift in the lives of those to whom the challenge goes. It is a question of fruit-bearing in the individual heart and soul. The greatest need of the church today is that it have a fruit-bearing membership. Every dollar or dime given for the church should bring the giver closer to God and, if given in the right spirit, will bring God closer to the giver. The enrichment of life, not the impoverishment of the purse, is the great objective in the church as it seeks liberality on the part of its members.

There is not an enterprise named in the Convention's Report that is not worthy, most deserving and, in being supported, helps to support those who contribute to their life. The challenge to the Conferences is—

Eastern Virginia . . . . .	$12,500.00
Valley Virginia . . . . .	2,000.00
Eastern N. C. . . . .	4,500.00
N. C. and Va. . . . .	8,000.00
Western N. C. . . . .	4,500.00
Total . . . . .	$31,500.00

for Convention purposes, Convention expense, Convention Missions (Home), Foreign Missions, Elon College, Superannuation, Religious Education. As we contemplate these figures they may seem large, being in addition to local and Conference calls and expenses and other voluntary and free-will offerings. The Convention, in the spirit of the Apostle Paul, issues its challenge, not desiring a gift but the fruit of the gift that, throughout the churches and in the homes of those who constitute the church, the fruit of liberality in the Lord may abound "to your account."

J. O. A.

A CALL THAT SHOULD COUNT.

It is doubtful if any call upon the Conferences, voiced by the recent session of our Southern Convention, is more worthy and timely than that coming from the Board of Publications. Hear it: "That the Conferences of this Convention be asked to put on a campaign to increase the subscription list of THE CHRISTIAN SUN to not less than 3,000 (new subscribers)." This request, on the part of the Convention, is reasonable because it is "reachable." There are certainly 3,000 families in our Congregational Christian constituency that can easily be induced to subscribe for THE SUN if properly approached. They need THE CHRISTIAN SUN and THE CHRISTIAN SUN needs them.

It should ever be borne in mind that THE CHRISTIAN SUN is the one enterprise of the church that literally gives itself, all that it gets, has or hopes to be, to the other enterprises and to the individual lives of others in the churches. THE CHRISTIAN SUN exists not for itself. It is not an absorbent. It is not always begging for itself. It does not hold out its hands to receive for itself. It gives itself to the church, to the other enterprises of the church, to the enlargement of the church, to the strength, power and prestige of the church. Again and again it has been shown, and the figures and facts are ever in hand to show, that wherever THE CHRISTIAN SUN goes it carries the light and creates the loyalty necessary to the life and support of all the interests and enterprises of the church.

Each Conference, through its Executive Committee or Special Committee created by the Conference should cheerfully and courageously hear and heed the call to secure new subscriptions in this campaign as follows:

Virginia Valley, 250; Eastern Virginia, 1,000; North Carolina and Virginia, 800; Eastern North Carolina, 475; Western North Carolina, 400; Georgia and Alabama Conferences 150 each.

Wisely the Convention requested that "the Congregational Conferences and Associations of the Southeast cooperate in this effort." THE SUN undertakes to reflect the activities and interests of the churches of the Southeast and, above all, to be a paper—a church paper—worthy of all acceptations in all homes into which it is permitted to go.

It is worthy. It has proven by long years of experience its value to the church and to church life and activities. It is deserving, because, above all, it seeks the welfare of others and the joy of unselfish service in helping to build into the lives of its readers Christian character. J. O. A.

SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS AND SUPERINTENDENTS.

Neither Church nor State has produced a group of men and women who do more for less pay, prestige or honor, than our Sunday school superintendents and teachers. From Sunday to Sunday, without reward or hope of reward, save that of a conscience void of offence toward God and man, and a sense of duty well performed, these faithful servants go to their schools and give the best that is in them to the good of their community and the glory of God. On October 6 it has been urged that in all the Sunday schools of America something be done by way of gratitude and appreciation for the Sunday school superintendents and the teachers in the schools. No collection is to be taken, no propaganda indulged, but a program put on such as each school may decide upon to honor these unpaid and very often unappreciated individuals. It is estimated that every Sunday morning through the year two million superintendents and teachers deny themselves of the relaxation and rest that others enjoy, forego trips, excursions and pleasure resorts in order that they may meet their schools and classes not to promote any purpose or program of their own, but the program of religious instruction that members of the schools may be taught the Word and the Way of God and brought into closer relationship with each other and with their God.

Surely, all of our Sunday schools will gladly welcome this suggestion and make some gesture of appreciation and gratitude to these faithful servants of the church, of God and community and thus inspire them in their soulful and unselfish service.

J. O. A.

SOUND ADVICE.

Judge Robert W. Winston, one of the soundest and sanest of eminent North Carolinians, has requested the editor of the Raleigh News and Observer to give its readers the following admonition:

"Hundreds of millions will be paid North Carolina farmers in 90 days. Write an editorial and warn against fakirs, thieves, robbers, charlatans, bogus stock salesmen, land speculators. Advise the farmers to keep no funds at home. They should pay their taxes and get rebates; pay their notes, and so save interest. They should put their money in the banks where the United States government guarantees their deposits."

It would have been equally as wise for the Judge to have added: And also "lay up for yourself treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt and thieves do not break through nor steal: for where your treasure is, there will your heart be also.

J. O. A.

UPHEAVAL.

The strike of textile workers is an index of the uncertainty and instability of the times through which we are passing. It is reported that at least a million people are, or will be, directly affected by the strike. Far more than that number are indirectly affected.

It will require the utmost patience, tact and wisdom on the part of the government to prevent riots and bloodshed. A strike is a conflict, often war in the field of industry. It is regrettable, deplorable in fact, from every point of view that a strike so wide-spread is precipitated at this time.

There is only one thing that will prevent strikes, and that we have no doubt is far off in practice, namely The Golden Rule, "Do unto others as ye would that others should do unto you." This is the ideal towards which industry must strive if it would be permanent and profitable.

J. O. A.

SUMMER PLANNING FOR FALL SUCCESS.

By FREDERICK L. FAGLEY.

These words are written at this time because many pastors who "take the long look" in the work of the church use a portion of their precious vacation time to plan the work for the year, particularly for the fall months; for the pastor as a wise master-builder plans his work long in advance.

Church planning has developed greatly in the last two decades. The church without a plan of work finds itself seriously handicapped. The suggestions presented herewith have come out of study of the program of many churches and are offered for the consideration of pastors and church workers generally.

The Parish Study.

A purposeful survey of the parish with an up-to-date record is essential. Many a pastor makes the mistake of thinking he keeps the full parish record in his head. Let any pastor who has this habit take a list of his members and go over it, name by name, and he will be amazed how many people, nominal members of his church, are not in his memory. He has lost sight of these people perhaps for months. Let the pastor and his helpers, if he has such, make up a careful list. Here is a suggested form:

Members with correct names and addresses.

Contributors who are not members, but who have an interest in the church.

Absentees, especially those residing within reach of the church, but who for one reason or another, have lost contact with the church.

The Fringe, those families who, while not connected with the church, have asked or received the ministrations of the church at the time of sickness, death, or in special need.

Newcomers. In these days of rapid changes in population, new people are coming into most parishes. An inspection of the rolls of the public school will often give some information.

Parents of Church School Children. These families, when not connected with the church, often afford the pastor a particularly favorable opportunity for spiritual ministry, as he represents the institution working with the parents for the training of their children.

Then there should be compiled a special list of those who are sick, or troubled in mind or estate. In these days of great need the church has a great and increasing responsibility for helping people who have problems and needs beyond their ability.

Such a purposeful survey of the parish will give the pastor many "leads."

The Fall Parish Calling.

The importance of parish calling to the welfare of the church has been emphasized by the careful study of the "Commission on Church Attendance." This Commission reports that the laymen of the fifty churches making the best record of increasing attendance give pastoral calling as one feature of church work that is not neglected.

The pastor who plans and carries through a worth-while program for his church cannot afford to neglect pastoral calling. This is an essential. The early fall is the accepted season. Where the parish is so large that the pastor cannot visit all the homes, let him invite a few tactful members, both men and women, to assist him. The "call" must not be a mere routine affair. When the pastor calls he does so as the representative of a group of friendly, helpful people, who through him extend to this home the Christian interest of the group.

The Fall Rally.

Of equal importance with the pastoral calling on all the people is the Church Rally, which aims to bring all the people to the church. The second Sunday in October will be generally observed as Rally Day, but each church should select the day best suited to its needs.

This may be the central feature of the Fall Campaign. The aim of the campaign is to establish, re-establish and strengthen the church-going habit of the people; therefore let the survey study and the "calling" have as its immediate goal the presence in the House of God of every possible attendant on a given day, and on that day let the importance of church attendance and vital church connection be emphasized with all possible force.

Rally Day originated as a Sunday school institution and practically every Sunday school needs such a re-assembling of its forces at the beginning of the public school year. So also the other organizations, such as the young people's society, the women's and men's clubs, should utilize the Rally Day idea.

Detailed plans should be made, committees formed, and the work carefully organized. In order to make Rally Day mean all that it should to the church, every organization should be represented on the Rally Day Committee, so that eventually the service will mean not merely a rallying to the church services or to the church school, but will be an enthusiastic starting-point for every organization in the church.

Where a real rally is carried through it means practically a one-hundred-per-cent start for the year. The enthusiasm thus created at the beginning of the season furnishes a momentum that does not die. The value of Rally Day depends very largely on the degree of detailed organized effort made during the preliminary days, especially upon the effectiveness of the parish calling and the extent of the personal invitations from the pastor and chief ushers.

Use all the advertising material you can, but remember that the personal invitation is the best advertising any church can use.

Other Features of the Fall Program.

During the fall pastors will make their plans for Armistice Sunday, Thanksgiving and the Every Member Canvass. For each of the items in the program they can expect help from their denominational officers. The Commission on International Relations will be sending pastors early in October material which, it is hoped, they will find helpful.

The Publishing Society will have some new material for Thanksgiving Day services and the Commission on Missions will be sending out most helpful material for the Canvass. But for each of these items every pastor has to make his own plans, using material that comes to him in such ways as he finds serviceable.

The Fall Reception of New Members.

To make the fall work complete, it is necessary to set aside a definite date for the receiving of new members, because, after all, this is the thing we have been working for. Our program will have accomplished very little if it has merely meant the moving of machinery for its own sake. The purpose of all our organizing and all our planning must be the deepening of the spiritual life of our people. But that can never take place as an end in itself. A deepened spiritual life always means active searching after those who are not yet members of the church. The locality in which we work will have to play a large part in deciding the particular method we use, but whether we are going to receive five new members or fifty, it will pay to make the date of their reception a special service, when the new members themselves will feel that their coming into the church does make a difference, not only to themselves, but to the church; and the older members will be stirred to exert themselves and welcome the newcomers in their midst.

There are in every parish those who ought to bring letters from other churches, and those who have been in connection with the church for a long time who may be thought of as natural prospects for an Autumn Reception of new members.

For this a carefully selected Invitation or Membership Committee should be trained and with prayerful thought assigned particular individuals and families to visit. They should seek out these people with a view to securing them for membership in the church.

During the pastoral calling and at the Rally the pastor and his committee will find families who are willing and ready to join the church at the first invitation, either by letter or on confession. There will also be a number who, though willing, were prevented for one reason or another from uniting with the church at the Easter or spring Communion, but who are now ready to become members. A surprisingly large number of people may be brought into the church at the fall Communion.

The pastor should prize such a service very highly, not only because those who unite with the church in the fall gain what amounts to almost a full year of service, but also because such a reception will give tone and direction to the whole year's plan. It will center the thought of the church upon this fact—that the church has a clearly defined program with a definite aim, the enlisting of people in the worship and service of the church. The Fall Reception of New Members should be looked upon not as an end of any sort of campaign, but as the beginning of the year's work of the church.

The Absentee.

Every church has a list of absentees. Many of these people may be saved to the church and to a better life if the pastor will take a special interest in them. This means individual work. Circular letters may help. But the one thing necessary is that the pastor shall find out who these people are, where they are, who of them may be brought back into the church, and who can be persuaded to take letters to some other church, where they may be brought again into active Christian service.

The Commission will send to pastors late in November some helpful material dealing with the subject.

Preparations for the Lenten Program.

When the Pastor's Class begins with the first of the year, the organization of this feature of the year's work must be taken care of in the late fall. But whether this work is done or not, the pastor must look forward to an anticipation of the Lenten Program.

The Commission will send to all pastors, the first week in September, material bearing on the fall program. Any pastor not receiving this a post card request addressed to the office will bring it by return mail.

It is evident that praises are infinitely more excellent than all the creatures because they proceed from men and angels. For as streams do they derive an excellency from their fountains, and are the last tribute which can possibly be paid to the Creator. Praises are the breathings of interior love, the marks and symptoms of a happy life, overflowing gratitude, returning benefits, an oblation of the soul, and the heart ascending upon the wings of divine affection to the Throne of God.—Thomas Traherne.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Protracted meetings were conducted during the past week at Holy Neck, Mt. Carmel and Oakland Churches. At Holy Neck, Dr. N. G. Newman, the faithful pastor did the preaching. There were five professions of faith and four united with the church on Friday. There was a gracious revival at Mt. Carmel where Rev. J. F. Morgan assisted the pastor, Rev. Elisha Bradshaw. The writer is unable to report the number of professions and additions to the church. Rev. O. D. Poythress did faithful preaching at Oakland, and there were a number of reconsecrations and professions. On account of the heavy rains the congregations were very small on the closing day, when two united with the church. Others are expected to unite with the church on the Third Sunday in September.

The Holland Christian Church will be in the midst of evangelistic services beginning Sunday, September 9th. Dr. James H. Lightbourne of Burlington, N. C., will assist Dr. W. M. Jay, the pastor. Dr. Lightbourne greatly endeared himself to the Holland church and community when he served as pastor for several years. His return to his former pastorate will be greatly appreciated by his many friends in the community.

Work on the new Sunday school rooms at Berea, Nansemond, is being pushed rapidly toward completion. Unless some unforeseen delay prohibits the rooms will be plastered during the next ten days or two weeks. A generous friend gave the pastor a check today to cover the purchase price of the doors and windows. The Sunday school classes are anxious to use the new rooms on the first Sunday in October. With favorable weather they should not be disappointed in having an opening day early in October. This good work has been a venture of faith, and the response of the people has been very gratifying. It will be a forward step for this church when these rooms are finished and paid for.

The ministers of the Eastern Virginia Conference will hold their monthly meetings in Suffolk instead of Portsmouth this fall and winter. The Ministers' Association has been a vital factor in the life of the pastors for more than twenty years. The courses of study have broadened the mental vision and stimulated and increased interest in the study of new books. The exchange of ideas and experiences has enriched the fellowship and spiritual life of the ministers. The meetings have unified the purposes and plans for the work of the Conference. No pastor can afford to miss these opportunities for fellowship and study. The time of the meeting is Monday after the Third Sunday in each month, from September to June. The place of the meetings this year is the Pastor's Study in the Suffolk Christian Church.

The Eastern Virginia Conference will be held at Bethlehem Church, near Suffolk, October 31-November 2. This is a reminder that the pastors and churches have less than two months to get their work ready for Conference. These months will be busy for all pastors and churches who seriously undertake to raise Conference Apportionments in full. It is so easy to put off raising Conference Apportionments until the few weeks preceding Conference. Many people will not pay their pledges for current expenses until the close of the year. At this season of the year many churches are four or five months in arrears on current expenses and have paid nothing on Conference Apportionments. This financial system (or lack of system) makes it difficult to secure the necessary funds to pay all the obligations of the church at the end of the year. The pastor is embarrassed, the church is discouraged, and the general interests of the denomination suffer. Let everyone in the Conference rally to pay current expenses and Conference Apportionments in full this year.

I. W. JOHNSON.

ELON COLLEGE ON THE MARCH.

The annual opening of Elon College is under way. Registration for freshmen began September 4th, for upper classmen September 6th. Students have been arriving in most satisfactory numbers ever since. In 1931-32, the enrollment struck the low mark, falling considerably under 300. In 1932-33, the enrollment started up again, with a slight increase over the previous year. The records showed advancement for 1933-34. The present registration shows a decided increase for 1934-35.

To date, we have registered 160 freshmen, as against 84 freshmen of even date one year ago; upperclassmen 129, as against 99 one year ago; special students 7, as against 6 one year ago; making a total of 296 present enrollment. There are a number of students on the hill that have not registered; and many others have paid their fees, whom we are expecting to arrive later. At this writing, it seems pretty certain that the enrollment will approach 350 by the time fall registrations are over, which means that we will run at least 100 ahead of last year. We are now more than 100 ahead, as of even date last year.

The enrollment is distributed by classes as follows:

Freshmen .....	160
Sophomores .....	63
Juniors .....	38
Seniors .....	28
Specials .....	7

We have made no effort to enroll special students yet. This part of our enrollment will be looked after, particularly, for the next two weeks. What we mean by specials are those who take Music, Art, Expression, etc.

The student body is distributed by states as follows:

Alabama .....	2
California .....	1
Connecticut .....	3
Massachusetts .....	1
New Jersey .....	7
New York .....	5
North Carolina .....	231
Ohio .....	4
Pennsylvania .....	3
South Carolina .....	2
Tennessee .....	1
Virginia .....	34
Washington, D. C. ....	2

Every room in all dormitories has been assigned with the exception of Young Ladies Hall. Young Ladies Hall has been closed for two years. We will, in all probability, need this building for girls another year. It is located on the girls' side of the campus, and we will not put boys in this dormitory to room. To take care of the overflow of male students, we have turned the second floor of the old publishing house into a dormitory for boys. There are 12 nice, comfortable rooms in this building, providing accommodations for 24 boys. It looks now that every space in this building will be taken before the week is over. We have an unusually good type of student, the spirit of the campus is of high pitch, and the work of the school is starting off most satisfactorily.

We had losses in the faculty that we regretted. However, their places have been filled with men and women of excellent reputation and high scholarship. Dr. Bookhout takes Dr. Powell's place in Biology. Dr. Bookhout is a graduate of Syracuse University, New York, and has his Ph. D. from Duke. Mr. Prior takes the place of Prof. Martin. Mr. Prior is a graduate of Amherst College, of Brown University, and of Harvard University. He has completed all residence requirements for his Ph. D. degree, and Harvard writes that he is the most brilliant student that they have had in the History Department in five years. Dr. French Haynes takes Miss Madie Lee Walker's place as Dean of Women and assistant professor of Education. Dr. Haynes is a graduate of Meredith College and of Cornell University. She holds her Ph. D. degree from Cornell. Miss Certe Reynolds of McMinnville, Tenn., takes the place of Miss Wilma Potts, of Huntington, Ind. Miss Reynolds is a graduate of the University of Chicago, received her Master's degree at Columbia, and has done one full year's work on her Ph. D. degree at Chicago University. This gives us a very strong faculty, and we are hopeful for an unusually good year.

We solicit most earnestly the continued interest and faithful prayers of the church and of all who are interested in the progress of the college.

L. E. SMITH.

HOLY NECK.

Revival services were held at Holy Neck Christian Church, Nansemond County, Va., September 3-7. The singing was conducted by Mr. W. H. Baker of Newport News, Va., and the preaching done by the writer. The service of Mr. Baker was greatly appreciated and enjoyed. The congregations were good and the interest good. There were six professions and a large number of reconsecrations. Four united with the church.

N. G. NEWMAN.

"ENQUIRER" GETS SOME ANSWERS.

In THE CHRISTIAN SUN, August 23rd, "Enquirer" asks five questions. One of our faithful Sunday school superintendents sends in answers. Questions and answers are as follows:

Q. Do you have a Sunday school in your community?

A. Yes, try to.

Q. Do the officers (especially superintendent and teachers) attend and take part in the modern dance?

A. No.

Q. Do the officers of your Sunday school drink beer and wine?

A. No.

Q. Does your superintendent lead in prayer in Sunday school?

A. Yes.

Q. If your officers engage in the above, is your school growing?

A. Does not grow much.

"I wonder why some folks take their children to the circus, but send them to Sunday School?"

PARAGRAPHS TO PONDER.

By TIMOTHY THOMAS.

It takes so little effort and constructive thought to complain that to many mere complaining becomes a national pastime. Business today is complaining about many things that hardly stand examination. The basis of many of these complaints is ingrained selfishness. Many men cry for "liberty" when in reality it is license for which they are clamoring.

* * *

The cartoonist of the Detroit News sketches "John Barleycorn" coming into court in the possession of a parole officer, from which picture the conclusion is drawn that Mr. J. Barleycorn, despite his blackened and unforgettable record, was released on parole last year, having been highly recommended by his friends that he would be good. According to the cartoon he is charged with more bootlegging than ever.

* * *

People have learned that it is one thing to fight for reform and another to install and inculcate the reformation. It is for this reason that support of any reform measure is based largely upon the caliber of leadership. Mere crying for reform is only a voice in the wilderness, to remain a voice in the wilderness, unless the criers of reform have the courage and character to translate their ideals and efforts.

* * *

It takes only a casual study of history to reveal the fact that there are decisive stages in the development of the nation. We are now passing through one of these decisive periods. One group struggles for power against another. Customs and habits long formed are difficult to change. The majority who oppose changes are honest and conscientious in their beliefs. Historians fifty years hence will point to the period in which we are now living as one of the most decisive change periods of the century.

* * *

When a theme for an article, talk, address or sermon embodies criticism of the common garden variety, otherwise known to the scholar as destructive criticism, there is usually more theme than thought. The user of this type of criticism can always play to the galleries by getting off a lot of hocus-pocus by the use of words, words, and more words. Criticizing and condemning, or becoming the shortcomings of the church is a common habit of a host of religious loafers who have never learned the "longcomings" of the church. And, incidentally, there is an increasing number of people who can distinguish between a sermon and a harangue of criticism about the human frailties of the church members and the "reckless" lives of young people.

* * *

Every age has its changes. When changes come slowly little though is given to them and a minimum amount of protest is made by those who oppose these changes. Present-day changes are no more radical or revolutionary than changes of the past. The present agitation against so many economic and social changes is occasioned only because so many changes appear to be necessary in such a short period of time. It was a radical and revolutionary change when we ceased to confine men in prison cells for non-payment of debt; it was a radical and revolutionary change when the black man of this country was freed from the shackles of slavery; it was a radical and revolutionary change when we decided that every boy and girl in the land richly deserved an education, and in order to make this possible, made school attendance compulsory. Of course that was a great infringement upon human rights, and opposing orators cited the great Constitution as a source of liberty and license. With all the weaknesses of humanity the majority is usually right. The limitation of our own vision makes it impossible for us to see until revealed to us by the passing of time.

FROM MAINE.

Chaplain and Mrs. H. E. Rountree motored the one hundred and fifty miles or more from Newport, R. I., to Kittery Point, Me., for Chaplain Rountree's address Sunday evening, August 19th. When stationed at Portsmouth, N. H. Navy Yard, Chaplain Rountree was pastor of Kittery Point Christian Church and the Rountrees have kept in touch with their former charge through the years. An unusually large proportion of the audience were people under thirty. A Sunday night audience like that in August in New England outside the summer schools, is unusual. Rev. Basil Harris, the pastor, was a former student at Elon College.

The Rountrees were also at Wolfboro Christian Church recently with Rev. Headley.

Most of our churches close July or August or both in New England. Laconia Christian Church has never done this and won some of their most useful members that way. On August 12th, fifteen were baptized in the lake in a 9 A. M. Sunday morning service. Two Sundays before, three people were baptized.

The Associate Editor of Revelation, a religious magazine published in Philadelphia, led the Union Vacation School of the Laconia Baptist Church and our own.

Miss Elizabeth Haven attended York and Cumberland Conference with a dozen of her Daily Vacation Bible School girls who contributed to the gathering by song and enthusiasm.

The Bosc papers found news in our Conference because Mrs. Gladys Hardy Corroll, author of "As The World Turns" spoke at York and Cumberland Christian Conference, South Berwick on July 24th. She was an interested and sympathetic attendant. Her home is a few miles from the church.

One hundred and eighty is no large number for you young people to have at Conference, but it is three times as large as we have had at our more recent New England ones.

OXFORD BIBLES for EVERY NEED

"The Oxford Bible is the Bible par excellence of the world"

THE HOME BIBLE

A Family Bible in Handy Size

An extra large type Oxford Text Bible, containing also, a family register and 12 beautifully colored maps. Size 9 x 5 1/2 inches.

Specimen of Type

16 The LORD is King for ever and ever: the heathen are perished out

- Nos. 01600 Superior Cloth, round corners and red edges $2.75
- 01603 French Morocco, limp, round corners, red under gold edges, head-band, book-mark $4.75

The JUNIOR'S Bible

Self-Pronouncing

With 4,000 Questions and Answers, carefully selected "Aids to Bible Study," 16 beautifully colored and 15 black full-page illustrations, 6 colored maps and a presentation page. Children may readily pronounce correctly difficult Scripture names, as this Bible is self-pronouncing. Size 7 x 4 1/4 x 1 1/4 inches.

Type in Junior's Bible

2 Take the sum of all the years of the children of Israel, years old and upward, three

- No. 1815 French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges, headbands and book-mark. Make some child happy with one of these fine $2.95 Bibles

Child's ILLUSTRATED Bible

The beautifully colored illustrations in this new Bible are a delight to the children. It has clear, readable type and yet it measures only 5 1/2 x 3 3/4 inches.

Specimen of Type

- 2 My soul length, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the LORD: my heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God.
  - 20 Mercy and truth gathered together; righteousness kissed each other.
  - 21 Truth shall spring
- No. 02112. French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, gold edges $2.50

Pocket REFERENCE Bible

Has over 50,000 center column references. Measures only 6 1/4 x 4 1/2 inches. (A splendid gift for a young lady.)

Specimen of Type

- 9 Behold, O God our shield, and look upon the face of thine anointed.
  - 10 For a day in thy courts is better
- No. 07528x French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges $3.25

Concordance Edition

Type and size as No. 07528x, but with a Concordance, subject index and dictionary of Scripture names. An excellent edition for students and Christian workers No. 03272x $5.00

OUR LEADER Oxford Concordance Bible

Self-Pronouncing

This beautiful Oxford India paper edition is indeed the ideal Bible for the student, preacher and evangelist. Each proper name and difficult word is divided into syllables and accented, and though printed with large clear type, the volume measures only 8 1/2 x 5 1/2 x 1 1/8 inches.

Specimen of Type

8 7 Jê-hôv'-â-chin was 6 years old when he began t

- No. 03671x. Fine Grain Morocco leather, overlapping cover, leather lined to edge, silk round corners, red under edges, silk head

A UNIQUE GIFT BIBLE

With Basket Weave Binding

The Antique brown calf leather binding has a basket-weave grain, and button clasp. Has overlapping cover, art silk lined, with red under gold edges. With references. Printed on Oxford India paper. Type as Pocket Reference Bible. $5.50

No. 03255x

- As No. 03255x, with concordance. No. 03276x $6.50

Oxford TEACH

Have over 50,000 center column, 300 double-column pages of up-to-date helps, conveniently arranged in alphabetical order. Also 32 full-page illustrations, and an indexed atlas of the Bible with 15 beautifully colored maps of Bible lands.

Easy-to-Read-Edition

Size 7 1/4 x 5 x 1 1/4 inches

Specimen of Type

14 Like sheep they are laid in grave; death shall feed on th

- Nos. 04453. French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, round corners and red under gold edges. A durable and hand-some Bible $4.35

Oxford India Paper Edition

Only one inch thick.

- 0773x. French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges, headbands and book-mark. A beautiful gift edition $7.00

RED LETTER Edition

Same size and type as style No. 04453, with same references and helps, but with all the words of Jesus Christ printed in red. White paper edition No. 05453. French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges $5.00

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary

McCALL OF NIIGATA.

By Miss D. P. CUSHING, News Editor.

For five miles Rev. Clarence F. McCall of Niigata, Japan, tramped through four feet of snow with an earnest Christian Japanese lawyer who had invited him to his ancestral home in the mountains for some public meetings. These were conducted in the building of the Young Men's Association (a patriotic organization) and in a Buddhist temple at which Mr. McCall gave an illustrated address on the "Life of Christ."

This is but one symbol of the type of work which Mr. McCall has been doing for the past 26 years in Japan. He went out to that country first under the United Church Missionary Society. When in 1930 the Christian and Congregational churches became united, he became a worker under the American Board. He was born in Missouri and educated at Westminster College, B. D. Bible College, and Oberlin Graduate School of Theology.

Mr. McCall has many friends among folks of all classes, including several Buddhist priests with whom he has worked on such social questions as temperance. When one such young priest invited him to give a lecture in his town, Mr. McCall gave him a choice of subjects including illustrated lectures on American farm animals, tuberculosis prevention, scenic slides or a talk on morality and religion. The priest chose the last named and for 30 minutes Mr. McCall spoke on that subject followed by an hour and a half showing of the "Life of Christ."

Often Mr. McCall preaches and lectures in the open parks receiving a respectful hearing. He has kept close to all the reform movements whether on liquor or licensed prostitution against which Japanese women were waging a fierce war.

In 1933 Mr. and Mrs. McCall celebrated their silver wedding anniversary by making a trip to the other stations in their mission, with the result that they had gathered valuable information about the work throughout the area and a complete picture of the personnel and activities. It was on this trip that Mr. McCall saw the beautiful little island not far from Okayama which has a leper settlement. Here 1500 victims of this dread disease live but even so represent only a fraction of the lepers in the Japanese Empire. "The price of one war ship would provide isolation and treatment for all, and the disease would be stamped out in one generation," comments Mr. McCall. "When will we learn that human life is of first importance?"

MISSIONARY OFFERINGS.

WEEK ENDING SEPTEMBER 8, 1934.

Sunday Schools.

Barretts, Sedley, Va. ....	$ .46
Oakland, Suffolk Va. ....	6.00
Mt. Bethel, Stokesdale, N. C. ....	.80
Hines Chapel, McLeansville, N. C. ....	3.00
First Christian, Portsmouth, Va. ....	7.22
Howard's Chapel, Reidsville, N. C. ....	1.00
Newport, Stanley, Va. ....	1.76
Winchester, Va. ....	2.87
Wake Chapel, Fuquay Springs, N. C. ....	2.90
Wentworth, Raleigh, N. C. ....	1.71
Bethlehem, Suffolk, Va. ....	2.00
South Norfolk Va. ....	11.60
Third Avenue, Danville, Va. ....	6.58
Elk Spur, Fancy Gap, Va. ....	1.00

Rocky Ford, Fancy Gap, Va. ....	1.05
Sanford, N. C. ....	1.00
Pleasant Hill, Liberty, N. C. ....	2.15
Elm Avenue, Suffolk, Va. ....	4.06

Total ..... 57.16

Individuals and Churches.

Catawba Springs, Apex, N. C. ....	3.05
Plymouth, Raleigh, N. C. ....	3.37
Miss Mettie Sutton, Burlington, N. C. ....	32.00

Total ..... 38.42

Specials.

Pleasant Hill C. E. Society, Liberty, N. C..	1.00
Ambrose Christian Church Missionary Society, Ambrose, Ga. ....	4.50
Franklinton, N. C. ....	23.00

Total ..... 28.50

Coin Card Offering.

Mt. Auburn S. S. Class No. 2, Manson, N. C.	1.00
Mt. Bethel S. S. Classes, Nos. 3, 4 and 6, Stokesdale, N. C. ....	3.00

Total ..... 4.00

Summary.

Sunday Schools, Regular, week ending September 8. ....	57.16
Individuals and Churches, week ending September 8. ....	38.42
Specials, week ending September 8. ....	28.50
Coin Card Offering, week ending Sept. 8. .	4.00

Total to date .....$ 128.08

J. O. ATKINSON, Sec'y.

NEWS ITEMS OF SOCIETIES.

The Franklin Willing Workers Society has had a most active and helpful year under the leadership of Mrs. E. P. Jones. They have had public programs once a quarter, the outstanding one being their Easter Pageant entitled "Simon the Leper." They have met all the requirements and expect to be on the honor roll when Conference meets. This must be a loyal group of children to be able to accomplish so much and we hope they will start off the new year with a greater determination than ever to make their society the best yet.

The Junior Missionary Society of Holy Neck Christian Church are fortunate to have such a capable and interested superintendent as Miss Allie Lee Norfleet. She has worked hard and faithfully and results show for it. Miss Mary Rawles Jones has rendered a fine piece of work as assistant.

During the year they held a "hen party" at which time each member brought a hen or the equivalent in money. Plenty of entertainment was provided and the prize in a chicken contest was a lovely corsage of chicken feathers.

The Annual Birthday party was another feature of the year and from which a neat sum was realized. The spirit and cooperation of the members and parents has been fine to which the superintendent attributes a great deal of their success.

The Young People's Missionary Society of Bethlehem Christian Church has had a most profitable year under the leadership of their superintendent, Mrs. O. D. King. They have had good attendance at their meetings each month due to a contest they started at the beginning of the year.

Their program leader had a very interesting as well as constructive program at each meeting.

They were very happy to bring back the Attendance Banner from the Young People's Conference which met at Holland last fall and since they have won this banner for three years they now have it to keep. They have met all requirements and look back on their year's work with much satisfaction, planning to do bigger things the coming year. Miss Louise Folk is the secretary of this thriving society.

SHALL WE TURN PAGAN?

By R. M. ANDREWS.

The pagan was great in some things. He was strong on fighting, great in debaucheries and sensual enjoyment. He rose from his feasts to fight and returned from his victories to feasts. He excelled in these things. But he was devoid of a due conception of the worth and dignity of human life. He was a stranger to all forms of benevolences. He was as unmoved by idealism as by the appeals of mercy from his victims. He looked upon others either as victims or victors. As victors he despised them, as victims he cringed before them. The impulses which played upon his mind most were vanity, rivalries, greed, hatred, snobishness, cupidity, lust.

Shall we take him for our model? Shall we allow the impulses that controlled him to become our masters? Shall the finer emotions that moved our forefathers to patriotic endeavor, to personal sacrifice, to self-denial and loyal devotion to the highest they knew fade out of our lives?

When England was at war, Lloyd George said, "We are fighting three foes, Germany, Austria, and drink; but drink is the greatest of them all."

When America entered the war, General Pershing said, "Close every saloon, every brewery, suppress drinking by severe punishment to the drinker, and, if necessary, by death to the seller and maker. Both are traitors."

We wonder what has changed the nature of liquor that it must now be taken into co-partnership and help balance the budget. The foe that was greater than millions of armed soldiers, with machine guns, poison gas, bomb planes, torpedo boats and destructive mines. When did the saloonkeeper, the brewer, the liquor seller cease to be a traitor? It would be well for our rulers at Washington to tell the public when and how this transformation came about.

This liquor business which in 1912 boldly stated in its journal that the line of drinkers must be kept coming to their counters; therefore, give the boys a drink now and then. Soon they will take the places of their elders and thus keep the business going. We repeat the question, Shall we turn pagan? All we need to do is to adopt the pagan's manner of life, allow the motives and impulses which controlled him to control us and the job will be completed.—From the Methodist-Protestant Herald.

The whole teaching of the Gospels is that we have got to find freedom in trusting ourselves implicitly to the care of God. We have got to follow what we think right quite recklessly, and leave the issue to God; and in judging between right and wrong we are only given the rules for our guidance. Everything which shows love for God and love for man is right, and everything which shows personal ambition and anxiety is wrong.—Donald Hankey.

SOME REMINISCENSES.

By DR. SHERWOOD EDDY.

(The following is a portion of the third of a series of articles now appearing in our Missionary Herald from the pen of Sherwood Eddy who has spent the most and best of his great life in preaching the good news to the most degraded of humanity. In this article, which should grip the imagination and the heart of every SUN reader, Dr. Eddy tells the story of devil worshippers, and of how the message of Christ's redeeming love is reaching and saving them. It is a most marvelous story of victory over sin and sordidness by way of the Cross. Read it.—J. O. A., Editor.)

Out in the heart of the Tinnevely district far from any railway and down near the Equator is the village of Megnanapuram, "The Town of True Wisdom." High over the palm trees rises the spire of the great stone church. On this very spot formerly stood the devil temple which was the center of worship for the Shanars, or tree-climbing caste, declared outcastes by the courts. At the entrance of the church is the old altar stone once reeking with the blood of beasts sacrificed to the devils in the former temple. When the last devil worshipper was converted to Christianity, with their own hands they tore down their devil temple and erected in its place this great stone church seating three thousand Christians. The elders now climbed the palm trees not to make toddy on which to get drunk, but to make sugar, and their children were sent to school and college, soon to enter the highest ranks in education and government service from this dynamic, rapidly rising caste.

My Priceless Friendship with Azariah.

Within a hundred miles of this church spire are now over 100,000 Christians belonging to the Church of England alone. One of them was a boy, Azariah, who became my best friend in India and my fellow-worker in Tamil. He is now the Bishop of Dornakal. He was never brilliant but he was fearlessly honest, faithful and hard working. Always with a book, never wasting a moment of time, he grew, first as a student, then as a young secretary of the Y. M. C. A., then as a traveling fellow-worker and evangelist in Tamil and English. I owed much to the priceless friendship and the influence of this man.

One night when we were working together in Jaffna, North Ceylon, as he saw the Jaffna Foreign Missionary which was sending its own Tamil missionaries to India, he went out under the palm trees and shed bitter tears to think of the 60,000 Christians in his own mission who had been uplifted by Christianity but who were doing so little for the evangelization of their own country, while some who were foreigners were giving their lives for this land. When he returned to India he gathered the young men of his churches together and he organized the Indian Missionary Society of Tinnevely, sending their own workers to the Telugu country in the Hyderabad native state. Later I was privileged to meet with Azariah and a score of Indian leaders from each province of India, Burma and Ceylon as they organized the National Missionary Society of India, in the historic library of William Carey at Serampore on December 25, 1905. This society united the Indian Christians of all churches and all provinces for the evangelization of their own country.

The constitution of the society was adopted in the pagoda where Henry Martyn had worked, a century before, a hundred years after the Haystack Meeting at Williamstown, and two hundred years after Ziegenbalg came to India as the first Protestant missionary. This National Missionary Society opened up work in five different parts of India. As the secretary of both these indigenous societies, Azariah went across India preaching this new missionary crusade, with all India for his pulpit, calling on the students to go and the churches to give.

Then Azariah felt called to give up this most useful work in all India and to go out himself as a missionary to the neediest of his own people. He chose the most degraded, drunken, carrion-eating devil worshippers for his field in the Hyderabad Indian State. The old Nizam had five hundred wives and concubines and the bribery and corruption of the government from the ruler down was the most notorious in the land. The poverty of the people struggling to live on three or four cents a day was abysmal. This was a heroic sacrifice for Azariah but the people were so degraded that I did not expect to see any appreciable result in our lifetime. I said goodbye, fearing I should never see him again.

When I next saw him he was being consecrated as the first Indian Anglican bishop, by a group of English bishops who were graduates of Oxford and Cambridge with a thousand years of Christian civilization and culture behind them, while behind him was the abyss of the past. As the Bishop of Dornakal he is probably the strongest and most effective bishop in all India.

I went back to visit him at a recent Christmas season. Here where I had expected to see little fruit in our lifetime I found nearly 200,000 baptized Christians in his diocese uplifted from drunkenness, devil worship, carrion-eating and ignorance. Their children are in schools. They meet in worshipping congregations on Sundays, but, more remarkable, over 100,000 of them gather every night in the week for the study of the New Testament to conform their lives to this way of Christ. So great has been the moral transformation of these people that over five thousand from the higher and middle castes have joined the Church convinced of the moral superiority of this way of life. I am not ashamed of such a way with its "good news" able to transform one life and to lift up whole societies.

JESUS CHRIST.

Augustus Caesar was sitting on the throne of the Roman Empire. Little did he dream of One to come that would be greater than all of the Caesars and the rulers of all time.

The birth of Jesus was foretold by the Prophets. He came in fulfillment of prophecy. Isaiah, the major prophet of the Old Testament looked down through the telescope of time and saw Jesus coming. The angelic message was "Thou shalt save His people from their sins." A child in a manger yet bearing the salvation of the world! His name shall be above every name. He was the center of attraction and the greatest character that ever trod the Earth.

He said: "I must be about my Father's business." He went about doing good. He did all things well. He cured the sick, cleansed the lepers, and made the blind to see. Everywhere He blest the people as He met them. His simplicity and ever active sympathy won the faith of the people. His life was a series of good works and virtues. Watch Him as He stills the tempest. The waters become quiet, and there was a great calm. What manner of man is this that even the waves and the winds obey His voice?

Jesus said: "Our friend Lazarus has fallen asleep I will go and awaken him." The blind man said to Him: "Have pity on me" and Jesus replied: "Have your sight." To the man with the withered hand He commanded: "Stretch out your hand" and it was made as well as the other. Jesus did not perform his miracles to demonstrate His power but because of His mercy and sympathy for the people. See Him as He washes the feet of the disciples teaching them humility and service, teaching them lowliness of mind and unselfishness of spirit.

He spoke of a narrow door. "Few there be that find it." He said to those illiterate fishermen, "Follow Me and be My Disciples." He gave them good advice. Love one another. Go out and bear fruit. Be faithful. Be of good cheer, in other words, don't worry. Let not your heart be troubled. "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." If you do well in small things I will give you great things. Don't be anxious about your life here. Look at the lillies, see how the grow.

The common people heard Jesus gladly. He instructed the disciples, those twelve wonderful preachers, to preach the Gospel to the poor. Note, please, the beautiful parables of Jesus. Great truths in simple language.

He spake as never any man spake. He spake forth the words of truth and soberness. He informs us that; except we become as little children we cannot enter the kingdom. His kingdom comes only to those who are child-like. Easy to be entreated and instructed. The world has many treasures but none so precious as His memory.—C. A. Higby in M. P. Recorder.

"The diseases of the mind are more and more destructive than those of the body."—Cicero.

SUBSCRIBERS TO THE CHRISTIAN SUN

These Pens are of standard make, and will give good service. If you are in need of a Fountain Pen, order from us. Postage paid and Pens guaranteed by the manufacturer.

MEN'S PENS—Capitol, $2.00; Mercantile, $2.50; Cardinal, $3.00.

LADIES' PENS, $2.00.

COMBINATION OFFER—To a new subscriber or for renewal, $2.50, either Gentleman's (Capitol) Pen or Ladies' Pen, with guarantee of manufacturer. And to "Sun" subscribers, not in arrears, any Pen at one-fourth off. Address: THE CHRISTIAN SUN, 1536 EAST BROAD STREET, RICHMOND, VIRGINIA

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

LEST WE FORGET.

The Board of Christian Education has worked for years without asking for an offering from Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor societies. But now the Board is asking to be remembered.

Once each month you have doubtless been giving to the Orphanage and to Missions, and each quarter to Elon College. Surely you are willing to give one offering per year to the Board of Christian Education.

We are eager to promote Leadership Training and Daily Vacation Bible School work in a much larger way. If the Sunday schools respond on Rally Day with a generous offering, we can really do some work. Please plan for it, and get your Sunday school and Christian Endeavor society to make a real offering so the work can go forward.

And be sure to call on us for any needed service. We are glad to serve. Write to the editor of this page whose name and address appears above.

PLEASE REPORT.

If you have had a Vacation Bible School in your church this year, please write to the editor of this page giving information relative to the school. A postal card saying that you have had such a school will be appreciated and will bring a blank for further information. We are eager to know how many schools there were, the number of pupils enrolled, etc. Please do not wait for someone else to make this report, but do it yourself, and thus help the Board of Christian Education in its endeavor to serve the churches.

WHAT DO WE MEAN BY A NEW NATION?

We, who live here in these United States, have in the recent past prided ourselves for being a part of a Christian nation. Suddenly, we have come to the realization that we are not a Christian nation. Even though we have trained and financed missionaries to go to foreign countries, where idol gods are worshipped, to proclaim Christianity—our religion has been questioned by our foreign friends. Inasmuch as our conduct at home represents non-Christian principles, generally speaking, those abroad are beginning to make comparisons between our boasted Christianity and their own religion.

What do we mean by a new nation? This a question that needs to be given much time and deep thinking not only among our youth of today but especially by those who have been placed in governmental positions. When we think of a nation, we immediately think of its government—"The People."

In Biblical history we are told in many instances of the rise and fall of nations. Following the rise and fall of any nation there is always some form of readjustment, or rebuilding a kingdom.

Incidentally, I am reminded of the story of a young man named Hezekiah who was made King of all Israel at the age of twenty-five. At the beginning of his regime the entire kingdom was disorganized. He realized the national troubles that he had inherited. Perhaps he was advised by his predecessors to master the foreign situation first, because at that time there were many boundary disturbances. But instead, as he saw it, the most vital thing to do was to lead his people back to God and restore right living. For a long period of time the people had not been observing the passover at Jerusalem, the custom which had done so much to keep alive the faith of their forefathers. So Hezekiah, immediately after taking oath of office, sent out letters urging the people to attend the passover.

In recent years it seems that our political leaders have been obsessed with the one idea of gaining the wealth of our nation and keeping it in the hands of the few; using the profits as a tool to minimize the value of man. In this busy state of affairs folks forgot and lost sight of God. They have trodden down their fellow man, the rank and file, until it is hard for him to get up again. We read in the fourteenth chapter of Proverbs that "Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people." Too long our motto has been "Ourselves" instead of "Others."

Under the present administration of our government the New Deal was the beginning of building a new nation in that its main objective is to promote the maximum good for the greatest number of people. This takes us back to the ancient Biblical doctrine of the universal Fatherhood of God and brotherhood of man tied in with the teachings of His Son, Jesus Christ.

Jesus said, "I am come that ye might have abundant life." In the last few years many people have had to struggle to maintain life through such meagre livelihood that they have not had a chance to live the well rounded life that man enjoys in normal times, thus instilling in those people fear and skepticism, causing a loss of hope and faith in God and their fellow man. A new nation would give more security to the individual. Here lies the responsibility of our national leaders. It places upon each of us the responsibility that "I am my brother's keeper."

To relieve human misery,

To transform unjust social systems in giving others a square deal,

To cultivate friendship and fellowship.

No faithfulness to forms or things can take the place of fair dealing with our fellows.

Our land is one of many resources. Our President, Mr. Roosevelt, stated recently over the national radio network that with the nation's great resources no persons would be allowed to starve. However, man cannot live by bread alone. Not only does he need physical sustenance, but his spiritual, mental, and moral worth needs to be strengthened. Our leaders have made great strides in completing the organization of nature and science, giving to man so much that there is nothing left for him to do; consequently, a vast army of unemployed. A new nation would organize man—society. Turn aside from the conquest of "things" to the "proper study of mankind" which is man. The permanence, prosperity, and progress of a nation depends upon sound character, stalwart mankind, and the deep religious faith of its people.

As far back as most of us can remember there has existed the race barrier. Because of tradition we have been prone to nurse all feelings of prejudice toward our negro citizens. We are forgetful of the fact that they are human, and are due human rights as well as the rest of us. We lose sight of the fact that they are our neighbors. Yet we accept the second great commandment of our Lord in good faith—"Love thy neighbor as thyself." A new nation would break down all traditional race barriers as well as those barriers of class, sect, or creed.

A new nation would be a peace-making nation—ever mindful of the fact that there is nothing to gain by warring, realizing that the lives that are lost are more valuable than all the spoils that might be captured, that the welfare of women and children is more important than any victories which might be won. Our nation's leaders should make a more desperate effort to promote world peace. Peace in the true sense of its meaning should not be thought of only in relationship to other nations, but we, as individuals, must try to live peaceably among ourselves in our own land. Quoting from the Apostle Paul in his epistle to the Romans, "If it be possible, as much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men."

Youth cannot hope to build a new nation in a day. But by applying themselves as Christian leaders to "Let God and right control our nation's might," it can be done.

"God grant us vision in this coming year
And eyes unsealed that we clear visions see,
Of that new world that He would have us build
To life's emblement and his high ministry
Not of our own might can we hope to rise
Above the ruts and failures of the past,
But with His help who did the first earth build,
With hearts courageous may we finer build this last.

BEATRICE GEORGE.

Youth Fellowship Meeting,
July 10, 1934.

THE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR NOTES.

September 23, 1934.

TOPIC: "Goodwill"—Genesis 13: 8-9.

Daily Readings.

Mon., Sept. 17.—Good will to all. Rom. 12:17-21.
Tues., Sept. 18.—Practical goodwill. Rom. 14:1-13.
Wed., Sept. 19.—Limited goodwill. Prov. 24:29.
Thurs., Sept. 20.—Bighearted goodwill. Matt. 25:31-40.
Fri., Sept. 21.—Perfect goodwill. Matt. 5:43-48.
Sat., Sept. 22.—Goodwill to the last. Luke 23:34.

Program.

Instrumental Prelude—"Awake My Soul, Stretch Every Nerve."

Hymn—"Be of Good Cheer, the Master Said." Prayer.

Hymn—"Watchman, Tell Us of the Night."

Scripture—Genesis 13:1-9.

Solo—

"The ships glide in at the harbor's mouth
The ships sail out to sea,
And the wind that sweeps from the sunny south
Is sweet as sweet can be.
There's a world of toil and a world of pain,
And a world of trouble and care,
But, O! in the world where our Father reigns,
There is gladness everywhere."

(Words by Margaret Sangster. Music, A. B. Ponsonby.)

Speaker—Theme: "Goodwill At Home and Abroad."

Hymn—

"Let there be light, Lord God of Hosts,
Let there be wisdom on the earth;
Let broad humanity have birth
Let there be deeds instead of boasts,
Let woe and waste of warfare cease,
That useful labor yet may build
Its home with love and laughter filled;
God give the wayward Children peace."

(If this hymn is not in your hymn book, read the words as a benediction.)

Anyone can have goodwill toward his friends, toward those who love him. It is the test of the Christian that he has goodwill toward those who do not like him, toward his enemies even. "If thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give

(Continued on page 11.)

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

ISAIAH CONTRASTS FALSE AND TRUE WORSHIP.

LESSON XII—SEPTEMBER 16, 1934.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord? And who shall stand in his holy place? He that hath clean hands, and a pure heart."—Psalm 24:3-4.

LESSON TEXT: Isaiah 1:1-31.

Isaiah's home was in Jerusalem. He was probably of noble birth. He received his call in the year that King Uzziah died, and it came in a vision in the temple where he saw the Lord high and lifted up. The majesty and the sovereignty of Jehovah which then impress itself upon his mind remained with him throughout his ministry, which extended over between forty and fifty years, and which covered one of the most critical periods in Hebrew history. Isaiah played an important part in this history-making epoch. He is regarded as the greatest of the prophets and has been called "the prophet of faith." His messages have been preserved in literary form which are unsurpassed in beauty and power.

Like Micah, Isaiah calls the heavens and the earth to hear as the Lord speaks. The Lord tells how he had nourished Israel and Judah even as a child, how he had tenderly led them, how he had cared for them. And yet in spite of his love and his constant care they "are gone away backward, they have provoked the Holy One of Israel unto anger. In graphic language Isaiah likens the nation to a festering sore, sores which ointment cannot mollify or heal. He describes the desolate country and the woe that shall overtake the nations. He affirms that unless God had been a God of mercy that the nation would have been utterly destroyed. As it is, there will be a "remnant."

In language that bites and stings Isaiah speaks for Jehovah against the formal worship of his day. Jehovah is "sick" of the whole business. He is nauseated by their oblations and their incense, their feasts and their solemn assemblies are more than he can stand, their prayers are a waste of time for their hearts are not in them, and their lives are a denial of them. Jehovah seemingly ruthlessly states that when the people spread forth their hands he will hide his eyes from them, and when they pray, he will not hear them. Their hands are full of blood.

What is the way out? Is there a way out? Yes! "Wash you, make you clean." It is not a suggestion of self-reformation. It is rather a clear-cut call to repentance. They are to put away their evil doings. They are to cease from evil.

But there is a positive side to the matter. They are to "learn to do well." They are to seek justice. They are to give help to those who are in need. They are to espouse the cause of the underprivileged.

In a dramatic passage Isaiah pictures Jehovah as summoning his people to sit down and talk things over. "Come now, let us reason together, saith the Lord." God is not unreasonable. He is not acting arbitrarily in the matter. Indeed it is grieving Him that His people are bent on their evil ways. He stands ready to forgive them, and tells them that if they will come to him, he will forgive them and heal them. No matter how grievously they have sinned against him, he will give them another start.

He gives to them the great alternative. If they be willing and obedient—they shall eat the good of the land. If they refuse and rebel—they shall be devoured with the sword. It is the law of life. The way of the transgressor is hard. The ways of Jehovah are the ways of life. To every man there openeth a way and ways and the way, and every man determines which way his soul shall go.

YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

(Continued from page 10.)

him drink; for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire upon his head." Paul was a wise, old Jew; he was even what the Scotch call "canny"; he knew the best way to disarm your enemy is a surprise attack of kindness.

Customs don't have to be the same to have goodwill toward people of other countries. There is a certain type of American who travels abroad and always complains because things are not like they are at home. If he wants his ham and eggs for breakfast, why doesn't he stay at home? His mind is closed to the ideas and ideals of other people.

We can begin practicing our goodwill right now and here. Have we been tolerant and friendly toward the foreigners who live near us? Have we tried to do our part toward those people who are in trouble, for goodwill is not a passive beaming—it is a positive helpfulness.

"Of all things beautiful and good,
The kingdom is brotherhood;
For it will bring again to earth
Her long lost poesy and mirth;
And till it comes these men are slaves,
And travel downward to the dust of graves,

Clear the way, then clear the way;
Blind kings and creeds have had their day,
Break the dead branches from the path;
Our hope is in the aftermath.
To this event the ages ran:
Make way for brotherhood—make way for man."

—Edwin Markham.

EVELYN B. RICHARDSON.

THE BOY WHO RECOMMENDED HIMSELF.

A gentleman advertised for a boy to assist him in his office, and nearly fifty applicants presented themselves to him. Out of the whole number, he selected one and dismissed the rest.

"I should like to know," said a friend, "on what ground you selected that boy, who had not a single recommendation."

"You are mistaken," said the gentleman, "he had a great many. He wiped his feet when he came in, and closed the door after him, showing that he was careful.

"He gave his seat instantly to that lame, old man, showing that he was kind and thoughtful.

"He took off his cap when he came in, and answered my questions promptly, showing that he was polite and gentlemanly.

"He picked up the book, which I had purposely laid on the floor, and replaced it on the table, showing that he was orderly. All the rest stepped over it. He waited quietly for his turn, instead of pushing and crowding.

"When I talked to him, I noticed that his clothing was tidy, his hair neatly brushed, and his finger nails clean. Do you not call these things recommendations? I do."—Selected.

There is the boy who thought that smoking was manly. So many of the men he knew, including his own father, did that; no wonder he reached that false conclusion. Perhaps nobody ever told him that Henry Ford never smokes. Yet he seems to be manly enough. Nobody accuses Lindbergh of not being manly. He never smokes.—Selected.

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.
Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.

These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies, in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. It combines with the Concordance, Subject-Index, Scripture Proper Names, etc. The 12 Maps have been carefully revised and are beautifully colored. In making orders, give the number and price.

135—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold. $3.00

India Paper Edition, Only 16-16 of an inch thick.

133X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold, $4.00

SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS' BIBLE.

Especially made up for gift or reward Bibles for Sunday School scholars, containing a special series of very practical and useful helps and Bible Questions and Answers, etc. Printed on fine white Bible paper; ruby type; pocket size, 3 3/4 x 5 3/8 inches, and 1 inch thick, with 31 full-page illustrations in sepia. All bindings are black.

Ruby Type, Size 3 3/4 x 5 3/8 Inches, and 1 Inch Thick.

65—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold; 6 colored maps .....$2.50

AUTHORIZED VERSION.

RED LETTER TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Brevier Type (8 vo.), Self-Pronouncing, Size 5 3/8 x 8 1/2 Inches and 1 1/2 Inches Thick.

Containing the Bible, with full references. The words of Christ in the New Testament are printed in red; other parts of the book are printed in black. With Concise Bible Dictionary, combined Concordance, and 12 indexed maps.

7852—Genuine Leather, Lavanant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold .....$4.75

RED-LETTER EDITION.

With All the Words of Christ in the New Testament Printed in Red.

1282—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit round corners, red under gold edges, register and headbands; title stamped on side and back in pure gold .....$3.25

60—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, Sunday School Scholars' Bible, stamped in pure gold on cover, no illustrations; special book for Sunday Schools .....95c

Any of the above Bibles sent postpaid. Address
THE CHRISTIAN SUN
1536 East Broad Street Richmond, Virginia

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy

MONDAY.

BEAUTY.

"Thine eyes shall see the king in his beauty."

—Isa. 33:17.

A conference of artists recently held at Provincetown, Mass., tried to define "beauty." They said much about it but closed without reaching an adequate decision.

John Bunyan lived in the narrow walls of Bedford jail, but his soul lived in palaces beautiful, climbed hills of glory, listened to heavenly choirs, walked through streets of gold and looked through windows lighted with the glory of God. Nancy Byrd Turner's poem "Beauty" speaks wondrously:

"God has made all things beautiful,
In His good time—so many things
I cannot count them all. The clouds,
The feathers in a pigeon's wings,
The clear blue sea, the green-fringed ferns,
The look of sunlight on the hills;
Red roses by the garden wall,
Daisies and daffodils.

"Pink shells and little polished stones,
The silver moon that sails the sky,
The star beyond my window-sill,
The colors of a butterfly,
The dark, black-velvet night, the way
The yellow sun goes down in the west,
The song a happy robin sings
Beside its little nest.

"I could not ever count them all—
The shining of our fireplace,
The shadows leaning on the wall,
The baby's eyes, my mother's face,
The way the wind goes through the leaves,
All light and stepping, like a rhyme—
Such lovely things God made
For us in his good time."

Everyone loves such scenes of beauty. With dim vision man snatches from such loveliness moments of inspiration that make him purer and stronger. He catches glimpses of the countenance of God. He feels the union of his own nature with the Divine, and when he connects it with the Christ, the mystery of religion is cleared.

Prayer—Our Father, Thou who hast created us in Thine own image and given to the world righteousness and true holiness give this to us in our lives that Thy beauty in us may be complete. —Amen.

TUESDAY.

BEAUTY OF CHARACTERS.

"He shall not cry, nor lift up, nor cause his voice to be heard in the street. A bruised reed will he not break, and the smoking flax shall he not quench."—Isa. 42:2, 3.

This is the character of God's servant, "meek and lowly in spirit," a "still small voice," as tender as a babe, as gentle as a dimly burning lamp, looming in all attitudes, restoring in faults and forgiving in sins. One poet speaks those eyes,

"He's not a man that He should judge
by the seeing of His eyes,
He's not the son of man that he should anyone despise.
He's God Himself, and far too kind for that,
and far too wise."

"And if my heart and flesh are weak to bear an untried pain,
The bruised reed will He not break,
But strengthen and sustain."

—Whittier.

Prayer—Our Father we can bring no offering or works to prove our faith. We came empty-handed pleading mercy, forgiveness and blessing.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE BEAUTY OF THE COMMONPLACE.

"Moses wist not that the skin of his face shone by reason of his speaking with Him."—Ex. 34:29.

How things appear to us depend as much upon our eyesight as upon the things themselves. One person sees something that is pretty, another sees the same thing as unlovely. One person sees a beautiful sunset, and another just sees a sunset. The difference is that one soul is emancipated from the earthly. His eye has spiritual insight and he sees things transformed in a purpose, the other sees nothing, we might say.

Two girls work in the kitchen; one sees nothing but dirty dishes and the irksomeness of cleaning them up. The other sees how splendid it is to make others happy by cleaning up and having everything nice for the next meal; she even delights in work.

The difference is the objective. To illustrate: The earth flattens out as the aviator ascends toward the sky. He proves and measures his ascent by the altering appearance of the earth. So, man's upward approach to God is most surely measured by his view of humanity. It is the God-point-of-view that sees the beauty and the glory of things. In all the work of earth there is God and there is one way of looking at it in which there is glory and inspiration. The secret of seeing this glory in the commonplace is daily living with God and speaking with Him.

Prayer—Our Father, Teacher of all, teach us how to recognize the importance of events and everything. We ask it in the name of Jesus.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

REFLECTED BEAUTY.

"Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun."—Matt. 13:43.

The question of the secret of a beautiful life is met with in the Scriptures, and, always when mentioned, it is accounted for in the same way. It is communion with God.

When the Saviour's face shone with a dazzling glory that attracted multitudes, it was just after he had been holding fellowship with his father in prayer. When the mob confronted him in Gethsemane, because of the glory of his face they reeled and fell back. He had just been talking to His Father.

When Stephen was about to be stoned to death, his face looked like an angels. He had been with God.

The secret of all Christian shining is the same. To be with God and to see God in things is to shine. To keep seeing Him is to keep shining. Dying Christians grow luminous till the silent watchers wonder. Yea, how lovely is the sun at night. What? Yes, it is not the moon we see; it is the sun from beneath the rim of the sky shining on the moon.

Hast thou done some good deed? If so, some face smiles through tears, for they see thy face "as though it were the face of God."

Prayer—Dear Father, we pray Thee for that life that shines for Thee. Make this daily devotion real communion with Thee.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

CHRIST'S TASTE FOR THE BEAUTIFUL.

"Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin:

And yet I say unto you that Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these."—Matt. 6:28, 29.

This passage of Scripture, recording Jesus' words about the beauty and grandeur of the fields, is only one of the many instances which record His love of the beautiful in nature.

On another occasion (Jno. 1) He seemed to be pointing at the sun's glory when His utterances drifted into words of truth that blended the glorious light of the rising sun with the light that "lighteth every man that cometh into the world."

It would be interesting to read the Gospels through, looking only for scenes and utterances of our Lord in which His eyes rest with sweet satisfaction on natural glories, waving fields of grain, the smiling lilies of the gardens, the trees and the lakes and scores of affluent and varied sceneries.

In all of them He taught that the sublime and lovely of the earth should rise at last to lead us to the worship of the Father and to perfection of soul in God through Himself.

Prayer—Dear Lord, we pray Thee to give unto us as much of the appreciation of the beautiful as Thou wouldst have us have; and may the beautiful which we see strengthen us in mind, in body and in spirit until our whole being responds to Thy calls. In His name we ask it.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

MOUNTAIN-TOP RIVERS.

"I will open rivers on the bare heights."—Isa. 41:17-20.

It will be long before our country will forget the great drought of 1930, which brought so much distress everywhere, not only to the farmers, but to all that eat, and to all that pay taxes. These words of Isaiah seemed like a mockery to many then, as they must have seemed like a mockery to many in the dry and thirsty Palestine, where they were written.

And yet it is literally true that rivers begin on the bare mountain-tops, as they condense the moisture from the clouds and send it tumbling down the hillside brooks into the valleys. And even so it is spiritually true that rivers of divine blessings are opened on the bare and difficult heights of life, as Moses smote the rock and from it a copious stream burst forth. We should have very little water if we depended on the valleys, and we should have very little of the water of life if our lives were nothing but stretches of ease and softness.

Prayer—We trust in Thee, Thou God of all wisdom. Send us hardships or comforts as Thou seest best, and we will be grateful to Thee for both.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

SUNDAY.

AN INSPIRED CENSUS.

"And my God put into my heart to gather together the nobles, and the rulers, and the people, that they might be reckoned by genealogy."—Nehemiah 7:1-6.

Nehemiah had been divinely directed to do a great work, the rebuilding of the walls of Jerusalem. (Continued on page 14.)

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

SPIRITUAL FOOD.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"My Father giveth you the true bread."—
John 6:32.

We open our Bible today at the "bread-chapter" of the book of John. Have you ever gone to the old cupboard in the corner of your mother's kitchen and looked for a piece of bread at the close of the day of school? The bread is good isn't it? The bread is good because you are hungry, and because it is food.

Hunger is Universal.

At first the bread we found in that old cupboard might have seemed old, or cold, or stale but the chewing of it sweetened it, and it was good. This is a picture understood across the wide world, because hunger is universal. Jesus spoke in the language of humanity at large, and in terms of the needs of the race. We may well pity that boy or girl, or man or woman who has never felt the sensation of hunger. Life has been abnormal for them. They have missed something as fundamental as life itself.

The Hunger for Spiritual Food.

The hunger for spiritual food is just as universal as the hunger for physical food. Without food for the physical body it perishes and wastes away, and death follows. This is just as true with our spiritual natures. How hungry a babe is! How eagerly and naturally it takes its food! The child has, also, a spiritual hunger,—not so noticeable at first, but before more than two, or three years pass, it is right at home in spiritual matters. Its little life is hungry for the spiritual, and responds eagerly and normally to spiritual stimuli, until there is developed a real hunger for the highest, and truest, and best in life.

This "Bread-Chapter" of John's.

Jesus knew hunger, and loved bread. He had fasted in the wilderness until the pangs of hunger had gnawed at his vitals. He would be able to feel the hunger pains of individuals in sympathetic understanding. He taught his disciples to pray for daily bread. The staff of life. In this "bread-chapter" we see five thousand men, and many women and children without their daily food. Away from home and hungry, with night coming on. What a picture that is! Hungry men, hungry women, and worse still, hungry children.

Today's Hunger.

Jesus was coming to the place where he could give them a practical demonstration of the fact that physical hunger could never be satisfied until men were nourished on the true spiritual food. Today's hunger will be obedient to the will of the spiritually fed, and unless there is spiritual feeding there will be hunger unto death. Jesus had eaten constantly and regularly of spiritual food, and on that account he was able to feed the physically hungry. Let the people of our own America feed upon the spiritual food offered at the altars of our un-numbered churches,—let them really feed upon it,—and our country will have milk for its babies, and food for its millions; but let the people of our country forsake the altars of our churches and neither farms, or fields, or codes or contracts can fill our empty pantries.

Mixed Emotions Here.

What a mixture we have in this chapter! Multitudes hanging upon the teachings of Jesus, until the very close of the day; forgetting that they were away from home, with its various demands and duties. Then there are the disciples anxious about the feeding of the multitudes,—since they had been in the business of following Jesus they had had food, and now that this so large multitude were dependent upon Him what on earth would they do about it? Jesus had never turned them away hungry. How would He feed the multitudes? After they were all fed then there was the desire on the part of all to make Him king. Whoever could perform such miracles could take the world. Here is the one we wish. And they tried to force Him to become king. Then followed the emotion of disappointment on the part of the multitudes, and fear on the part of the disciples who had been sent out into a storm on Galilee.

When the Night is Passed.

Next morning the disappointment of the multitudes had diminished, they were still following Him,—for the loaves he said; and the disciples had caught a new vision of the Lord through their doubt and fear, and yet daring faith and obedience, and Jesus asked them to accept him whom God had sent, all, except the disciples, talked roughly back to him and walked quickly away. They were willing to accept His words, and His works, but not Him! They had hung on to his teachings, they had eaten his loaves and fishes, but they were not willing to take him as their very own Saviour!

What Shall We Say for Ourselves?

Can we boast that we have not made the same mistake? Do we not all too readily say the Lord's Prayer, with all its implications; or quote his beautiful Golden Rule; or sing the praises of His Name and then fail to give him ourselves in loving obedience to his every command? Or do we not accept the bounty from his hand, the good of a society impregnated with his principles, the loaves and fishes from his hands, and yet fail to give him our utmost, and sincerest devotions? Perhaps we have not made these mistakes but yet let us as Christians consider our ways lest we do.

He is the True Bread.

We are gathered around his table today. We celebrate the Lord's Supper. We eat bread. Let us examine ourselves and see whether or not we accept his beautiful words—"thou hast the words of eternal life," says this "bread-chapter,"—and partake of his bread and wine, and yet fail to partake of him. He is the true bread. They loved his words, may we love his words; they desired to make him an earthly king, may we desire to make him the spiritual king of our lives; they followed him for his material loaves and fishes, may we follow him for loving service unto others; and they rejected him, and turned away, may we rejoice with him and go forward.

Processing the Grain.

But the true disciples followed him. They followed him even through the establishing of the supper which we today celebrate. They saw the stalk cut down in the field, the grain crushed into flour, kneaded into dough, and fired in the oven for the feeding of their eternal souls. Through the upper room, with its betrayal; the garden, with its suffering; the court, with its denial; the cross, with its pain and death; and the tomb, with its darkness he had gone. Bread, and they had eaten. In the strength and power of his life they had gone likewise to suffer, and to do, and to dare for the happiness of the world, and the joy of the blessed Kingdom of the Christ.

Humbly, Prayerfully Let Us Eat.

Are we worthy to eat after such as they? How unworthy they felt! We too may feel unworthy, but let us confess our unworthiness, and ask God for grace and power to become "bread" in suffering and sacrifice as we strive to offer our service in his name let us, like Paul, rejoice that we are counted worthy to suffer for Christ's sake. We need the spiritual food, which is come down from heaven, the true manna which the Father gives. How it satisfies the highest and best within us! And the world needs that we should go in the strength of the food to give blessing in turn to others. May the Christ be very real to us as we seek to honor him. Amen.

COMMUNION WARE.

Individual Service.

Made in best Silver Plate or Aluminum. Prices low; first-class workmanship and finish.

ALUMINUM.

Aluminum is light in weight, durable, and does not tarnish.

Style No. 50-A.

- Tray No. 2—Interlocking, with 40 plain glasses $7.00
- Tray No. 6—Interlocking, with 35 plain glasses 6.75
- Tray No. 10—Interlocking, with 30 plain glasses 6.50
- Base No. 50-A—Fits Trays 2, 6, or 10..... 2.25
- Cover No. 50-A—Fits Trays 2, 6, or 10..... 2.25
- Bread Plate No. 1—Narrow rim..... 1.60

SILVER-PLATED.

The Silver-plated Ware is of the very highest grade and best finish; heavily plated on nickel base.

- Tray No. 85—Interlocking only, with 36 glasses $22.00
- Base No. 1—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 85.. 11.00
- Cover No. 5—Silver-plated; fits Tray No. 85... 16.00

(For Silver Bread Plates, see under No. 90.)

- Tray No. 90—Interlocking, with 36 plain glasses (this style has broad rim, which is sometimes preferred, due to increased ease of handling) $22.00
- Base No. 2—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 90.. 16.00
- Cover No. 4—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 90. 14.00

- Bread Plate No. 3—Narrow Rim.....$ 9.00
- Bread Plate No. 4—Broad Rim..... 9.00
- Filler—Silver Lined..... 6.00

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street

Richmond, Virginia

Christian Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

If there ever was a time when the Christian Orphanage needed money it is now. We had a car of coal and a car of agricultural lime to come in this week and it will take four hundred dollars to meet this bill; nearly as much as was sent in during the month of August. It is now the fall of the year and you all know what that means—shoes to buy, clothing to buy and many other things that it takes to make the children comfortable for the winter.

I know you have too tender a feeling for the little fatherless children to let them go cold this winter. But you must realize that it takes money to buy these things and we are entirely dependent on you. We are paying a much bigger price for our supplies than we did last year and the income has not increased so you see it makes it hard for us to finance.

Everything the farmer has to sell is bringing a good price and we want to appeal to our country churches, especially, to make your offerings as large as possible from now till after the first of the year. Come to our rescue. We need you now.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

REPORT FOR SEPTEMBER 13, 1934.

Brought forward .....$8,397.82

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

North Carolina and Virginia Conferences:
Hines Chapel .....	$ 6.00
Union, N. C. ....	2.00
Happy Home .....	4.00
Third Avenue, Danville .....	6.58
Mt. Bethel .....	.65
Darham .....	22.61
	41.84

Eastern North Carolina Conference:

Sanford .....	1.00
Oak Level .....	1.00
Wake Chapel .....	5.00
Pleasant Union .....	11.00
	18.00

Western North Carolina Conference:

Pleasant Hill .....	2.50
Graces Chapel (Special) .....	3.00
Ramseur .....	2.50
Biscoe .....	1.36
	9.36

Eastern Virginia Conference:

South Norfolk .....	11.60
Bethlehem .....	2.12
Oakland .....	6.00
Johnsons Grove .....	2.00
	21.72

Valley Virginia Central Conference:

Whistlers Chapel .....	.61
Mayland .....	1.00
Mt. Olivet G .....	3.63
	5.24

Special Offerings.

Sale of meat .....	1.00
Sale of straw .....	6.00
Sarah and Fannie Ellison, Asheboro, N. C. ....	2.00
A friend, support of Thelma Long .	20.00
Mr. Andrew Curling, So. Norfolk, Va.	5.00
Mrs. Dalton, support of children ...	12.50
W. P. Perry, support of Billy Perry.	10.00
	56.50

Total for the week .....$ 152.66

Grand total .....$8,550.48

THE FAMILY ALTAR.

(Continued from page 12.)

salem. But Nehemiah believed that God was directing his life in the small things as well as the large, and his heart was as receptive to the command to make a census as to the command to fortify the Holy City. Nor can we believe that he entered the smaller and less exciting task with less zeal than he showed for the tremendous enterprise.

There is no great and no small when God commands. Who are we to weigh His orders, and to say to ourselves that this command is important while that is of slight account? The least word of Jehovah shall outweigh all worldly interests. The slightest whisper of His desire shall peal through the universe.

Prayer—Thy will be done, our Father, on earth as in heaven, and in what appears to our shortsighted vision to be the least things as in those we conceive to be the greatest.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

IT DEPENDS.

When the other fellow acts that way, he is ugly; when you do, it's nerves.

When the other fellow is set in his ways, he is obstinate; when you do it's firmness.

When the other fellow treats someone especially well, he is toadying; when you do, it's tact.

When the other fellow takes his time, he is dead slow; when you do, you are deliberate.

When the other fellow picks flaws, he is cranky; when you do, you are discriminating.

When the other fellow says what he thinks, he is spiteful; when you do, you are frank.—Glenn Frank.

Eilers Sunday School Maps.

On a Revolving Adjustable Steel Stand.

The first 5 maps are in Set No. 1, with stand, Price $15.00

Set No. 2 8 Maps. Price $20.00

Fine large Maps, in 6 Colors 36x57, on linen finished Cloth. Mounted on a folding steel stand, which can be regulated, so that Maps may be seen to the best advantage. This set contains data for thorough Bible Study. Its large print and cheerful colors makes this set very instructive and attractive. Contains the five thoroughly up to date Maps necessary to the study of Bible History. New Testament Palestine, — Old Testament Palestine, — Roman empire and Bible Lands, showing Pauls Travels by Colored lines. — Lands of the Old Testament, from the Great Sea, to the Persian Gulf. — The Exodus, Egypt, shown by Colored lines the wanderings of the Israelites.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street

Richmond, Virginia

HOLMAN SUPERIOR TEACHERS' BIBLES

Authorized Version—Self-Pronouncing

The Best Editions of the World's Best Book

For Adults, Teachers, Preachers, Students, and All Who Would Study the Word of God Intelligently

BOLD BLACK TYPE—COMPACT SIZE 4 1/2 x 6 3/4 INCHES—WILL FIT THE COAT POCKET

Part page specimen of Holman Boldblack Type Bible

ST. MATTHEW, 5.

Christ's sermon on the mount.

13 And leaving Naz'a-réth, he came and dwelt in Ca-per'na-úm, which is upon the sea coast, in the borders of Zab'u-lon and Neph'ta-lim:
14 That it might be fulfilled

A. D. 31. 934 CHAPTER 5.

3 Who are blessed. 13 The disciples called the salt of the earth, and light of the world; Christ urged on them a good example, etc.

CHAP. 4. AND seeing the multitudes; he went up into a moun-

THIS NEW HOLMAN TEACHERS' BIBLE, Pronouncing Text, Bold Black Type is a PRONOUNCED SUCCESS. The latest Bible with NEW HELPS that are quite comprehensive and consist of an Illustrated Bible Dictionary, Concordance and additional aids all under ONE ALPHABETICAL INDEX. Also Fine Maps on Coated Paper, and a specially prepared EBLE READING COURSE, intended to stimulate and maintain interest in the Bible. Imported Bible paper is used to improve opacity and keep down bulk. By this means you get the benefit of full Biblical information without the physical discomfort of handling a heavy volume.

STYLES AND PRICES—BIBLE PAPER EDITION

4612. French Morocco Leather, divinity circuit, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges..... $4.00

4630. Same as 4612, with extra leather lined covers..... 4.75

THIN INDIA PAPER EDITION

With Helps as described above. Size 4 1/2 x 6 3/4 inches. One inch in thickness

630X. Egyptian Morocco, divinity circuit, leather linings, red under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker..... 7.00

633X. Algerian Morocco, divinity circuit, leather lining to edge, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, extra quality binding..... 8.00

EXTRA LARGE PRINT TEACHERS' BIBLES

Large 8 Vo. Size—8x5 1/2 inches—1600 Pages, including 400 pages of Bible Study Helps

Part Page Specimen of Print

ST. MATTHEW, 5.

Christ's sermon on the mount.

15 <sup>k</sup>The land of Zab'u-lon, and the land of Neph'ta-lim, by the way of the sea, beyond Jor'dan, Gal'i-lee of the Gen'tiles;

A. D. 31.

Ls. 9. 1, 2. Ls. 42. 7. Luke 2. 32. Mark 1. 14.

2 And he opened his mouth, and taught them, saying,
3 <sup>b</sup>Blessed are the poor in spirit: for their's is the kingdom of heaven.

CONTAINING COMPLETE HELPS TO BIBLE STUDY, INCLUDING ALL OF THE FOLLOWING FEATURES

A New Practical Course in Bible Reading, A Treasury of Biblical Information. The most carefully compiled, thorough and attractive form in which valuable Biblical information has ever been prepared. Illustrated Self-Pronouncing Bible Dictionary. Containing 150 illustrations, concise definitions and textual references on nearly 50,000 subjects. A Practical Comparative Concordance, with nearly 50,000 references. Four Thousand Questions and Answers on the Old and New Testaments. A valuable Help to all Bible Readers.

STYLES AND PRICES

4712. Divinity Circuit (overlapping covers), French Seal Leather, red under gold edges, silk head bands, and silk marker.. $5.00

812RL. Red Letter Teachers' Bible, The Words of Christ in the New Testament. Old Testament Passages alluded to by Christ, various prophecies relating to Christ in the Old Testament, etc., all PRINTED IN RED. Binding same as described above on 4712 and same large Self-Pronouncing type..... 6.00

733X. Holman India Paper, Genuine Morocco, leather lined, silk sewed, divinity circuit, round corners carmine under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker, same type and helps as above ..... 10.65

All styles sent Postpaid at above prices—Thumb Index 50 cents extra

Extra spacing between words and lines makes this Bible very easy to read.

A Story for the Children

"ELBOW GREASE—THAT'S THE RUB."

By REV. EDWARD VERNON.

Alfred Henry Augustus Black was in his bath, which was a good thing, for he was very dirty. But he wasn't being cleaned. It wasn't the fault of the bath, for it was a very fine bath, with gleaming taps, and the thing that let the water away was the very latest in letting-the-water-away things. There were two kinds of soap in a clean white dish, a large sponge and a small one, and a thing with a curious handle designed to reach the bits in the middle of your back that you can't get at. Also there was a fresh white towel all ready for Alfred when he should be clean.

But Alfred never thought of putting any of these marvels to their proper use. He was concerned with the soap because he could stuff it up the "Cold" spout, and then turn on the water and see it shoot forth like a bullet from a gun. Alfred did this till the soap was done, then he used the little bullets to block up the holes for the water to go away. Then he floated the nailbrush and threw the sponge at it, and thought he was a pirate chief attacking a merchant-man. He lay on his front and kicked his legs and spread out his arms, and thought he was swimming the Channel. He filled his mouth with water and blew it from him like a spout and thought he was a whale. After that he decided it was time to get out, which was a good thing!

Then the disaster came! The clean white towel became suddenly black, for his face and hands and legs and knees were as dirty as when he got in! He looked at it ruefully, for he knew there would be trouble about it, but he turned the only clean portion of the towel to the outside and hung it upon the rail. He had still to learn that the best bath in all the world, and the best soap, and the best sponges will not make you clean unless you rub.

But there were other people that day who were as stupid as Alfred, and thought that you could get things nice and happy and clean and bright without rubbing. There was Jenny Millicent Beryl Daynty, who thought her fairy-cycle was locking very dull, and that it would look much nicer with some polish. So she got a tin of "Brighto" polish from the cupboard and smeared it all over the shiny parts. She couldn't be bothered doing any more, and she nearly wept when she saw the result. Instead of the lovely polish she wanted, the cycle was streaky and dull and messy.

"You're a stupid girl, Jenny," said her mother. "There's a difference between the polish that's in the tin and the polish that's in your arm. What your bicycle needs is the kind that's in your arm—elbow grease."

"What's that?" asked Jenny, thinking it was some new kind of polish.

"It's not a polish. It's polishing," replied her mother. "You've got to rub."

Then there was little Bertie Bumpuss Tumbill Tripp, who fell off his bicycle. He was covered with bruises, and the doctor gave him ointment to rub on them. But Bertie thought the magic was in the ointment, not in the rubbing; and besides, it hurt his bruises to rub them; so he just spread the ointment on them like butter on bread, and thought it would make them better—which is ridiculous. So the bruises didn't get better, and Bertie was lame and limping for weeks. For the magic of things is not in ointments, or polishes, or baths, but in the rubbing.

Next day Alfred and Jenny and Bertie met to play as usual. And Alfred jeered at Bertie for his bruises and for being frightened to rub them. Bertie jeered at Jenny's attempt at polishing. "I'll never ask you to marry me, 'cause you'd never keep my house clean. You don't know how to rub." And Jenny went into fits of laughter at Alfred's dirty knees and face. "Don't you know how to spell 's-k-r-u-b'?" she mocked.

But that's not the end of the story. Alfred and Jenny and Bertie all said the same prayers at nights. They knew it was the same one, because they had asked each other what they said. One part of the prayer went like this:

"Heal all the things that make me sad,
And make me bright and gay;
And if I have been very bad,
Wash all my sins away."

And when God heard them, He said to Himself, "I wonder if they expect Me to do all their rubbing for them? I'll give them Comfort-ointment, all right enough, to heal the sad and sore things in their hearts, but they must rub it in for themselves. I'll give them the polish-stuff of happy things to make them bright and gay, but they must do the polishing of their spirits for themselves. I'll provide the forgiving bath and the soaps and the sponges of love to wash away their sins, but people like Alfred must scrub their bad habits with them." For even God's bath, God's ointment, God's brightness doesn't work unless we do our share.—The British Weekly.

The sense of the infinite worth of the single soul and the recoverableness of a man at his worst are the gifts of Christ.—Henry Drummond.

ELON COLLEGE

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

South Entrance to the Campus

ELON COLLEGE, founded by the Christian Church in 1889, has fully justified the faith and hope of its founders during its 42 years of operation. Its graduates from the four-year course leading to a bachelor's degree, number 980, now living, 122 of whom are in the Christian Ministry and full-time Christian service. The majority of these are members of our own denomination. In addition, 449 are in educational work and are an active influence in the lay leadership of the Christian Church.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION BUILDING, and the definite religious atmosphere of the College, provide the very best facilities available for training for religious leadership, and offer the Church its finest opportunity to train the young people of the denomination to assume active leadership both in the ministry and laity of the local churches.

Address—

C. M. CANNON, Registrar

Elon College.

North Carolina

Home Atmosphere—Reasonable Rates—Clean Athletics—Christian Spirit

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr
A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom, as represented by the Congregational Christian Church.

BOARD OF EDITORS.

J. O. ATKINSON, D. D..... Editor
E. C. GILLETTE, D. D..... Associate
I. W. JOHNSON, D. D....Contributing
ELISHA A. KING, D. D...Contributing
J. T. KERNODLE....Managing Editor

DEPARTMENTAL EDITORS.

H. S. HARDCASTLE...Sunday School
J. G. TRUITT, D. D. ....Sermon
F. C. LESTER.....Young People
H. E. ROUNTREE.....Altar

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year .....$2.00
Six Months ..... 1.00

Trial Subscriptions: Five or more new subscriptions sent in at one time by pastor or president of any church organization, three months for 40c each.

Published Every Thursday at Richmond, Virginia, by the Central Publishing Company, Inc.

Entered as second-class matter at the Postoffice at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Change of Address: Be sure to give both old and new address when asking that your address be changed.

All news matter and items to be published in "The Sun" should be addressed to J. O. Atkinson, Editor, Elon College, N. C., and should reach him not later than Friday preceding date of publication. If more convenient, news from Congregational Churches may be sent to E. C. Gillette, Associate Editor, 117 W. Forsyth Street, Jacksonville, Fla. Emergency notices will be received at the Richmond Office up until Tuesday of week of publication.

All remittances for subscriptions, renewals, advertising, etc., books for review, and other matters of business should be addressed to J. T. Kernodle, Managing Editor, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond, Va.

Notices: Obituary and marriage notices, limited to 125 words, published free. All over 125 words, 1c a word, each with notice. No notices should exceed 250 words.

Receipts: The change of label is your receipt for money paid. The label shows date of expiration, and change on label will appear the first or second issue of the month following renewal, provided it was received before the 25th. No other receipt will be sent unless requested. Please notify the Richmond Office if label is not changed as above.

OBITUARIES

HORNADAY.

Whereas the Death Angel visited our community and took from our midst a good and honorable member of our Christian Endeavor Society of Pleasant Hill Christian Church, Annie Vera, ten year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Hornaday, August 7, 1934, therefore, be it resolved:

First—That we are grateful to the Master for her happy and useful life, though her prospects seemed so bright for the future, God's finger touched her and she slept. We miss her presence which was ever a joy and inspiration to us.

Second—That we extend to the family our deepest sympathy, realizing the parents have lost a loyal daughter.

Third—That we strive to profit by all that was good and true in her life.

MRS. RUTH DAY,
MR. HENRY J. OVERMAN,
MR. & MRS. R. C. CARTER,
Committee.

Liberty, N. C.

CURTIS.

Daniel Trolinger Curtis, who died Sept. 1, 1934, was born April 28, 1863. Age 71 years, 4 months and 4 days. He was married to Miss Meddie Austin Staley, Sept. 21, 1890. To this union were born three children, one died in infancy. The two sons surviving are Monnie Lee and Samuel G. Curtis. There is one grandchild, Kathleen Curtis and one sister, Mrs. Etta King.

His wife, Mrs. Meddie Curtis preceded him to the grave a few years ago, having died March 6, 1928.

The funeral services were held at Carolina Christian Church at 3:30 Sunday afternoon by the writer, assisted by Rev. W. I. Johnson. Interment in Carolina cemetery. The floral offering was very beautiful.

R. H. COBLE.

BROWN.

Peter Rankin Brown was born July 15, 1853 and departed this life August 19, 1934. Aged 81 years, 1 month and 4 days.

He was first married to Miss Margaret

Wedding or Gift Bible FOR THE HOME

Holman Self-Pronouncing Home Study Edition

A BEAUTIFUL PRESENTATION PAGE Marriage Certificate and Family Record makes this special edition a most desirable Bible for a wedding gift.

Full Bound size, 8 1/2 x 6 inches, nearly 1800 pages. Authorized Version with Marginal References.

Large Print—Easy to Read

The Helps are the latest and most practical published—prepared by the most reliable and well-known authorities, and consist of a TEACHERS' NEW READY REFERENCE HAND BOOK, which gives the salient and essential information needed in Bible study.

Illustrated Self-Pronouncing Bible Dictionary—Containing 150 illustrations.

Oriental Light on the Bible (Containing over 100 illustrations). A new kind of illuminating Bible help.

Treasury of Biblical Information.

A New Series of Maps. A selection of the most used, with Special Maps, the results of the most recent explorations.

A New Practical Comparative Concordance, with nearly 50,000 references. Four Thousand Questions and Answers on the Bible.

ABSOLUTELY DURABLE BINDINGS that will not break in the back.

Specimen of the Print. Full size of the page is 5 1/2 x 8 inches.

Specimen of Type.

17 7<sup>m</sup> From that time Jē'sus began to preach, and to say, "Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand."

A BEAUTIFUL PRESENTATION PAGE Marriage Certificate and Family Record makes this special edition a most desirable Bible for a wedding gift.

No. 4014. French Morocco, flexible limp, gold titles, round corners, red under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker..... $5.50

Postage Paid

Summers, now deceased. To this union were born four children.

Later he married Miss Onnie Chrismon on March 27, 1904. To this union were born five children.

"Uncle Rank," as he was usually called dedicated his life to Christ in early boyhood and joined Apples Chapel Christian Church, later moving to Peoples Church. His wife, six children, sixteen grandchildren and three great grandchildren survive him; also two brothers. Burial was at Apples Chapel and a very large congregation was present. Services by Rev. T. J. Green assisted by Rev. C. A. Brown and Rev. Mr. Shoemaker.

T. J. G.

Happiness is a cloak that is always big enough to cover two. Share it.—Anon.

PIEDMONT COLLEGE

Located in

"The Blue Ridge Highlands"

An accredited college with an enviable reputation for superior classroom instruction, and wholesome student life.

Standard courses leading to the A. B. and B. S. degrees. Careful, scholarly instructors.

A refined Christian atmosphere. All of the cultural elements essential to a liberal education.

A minimum of expense. Tuition and board for the entire academic year only $273.50.

For information, write

GEORGE C. BELLINGRATH, Dean,
PIEDMONT COLLEGE,
DEMOREST, GEORGIA.

Southern Seminary Foundation

(Successor to Atlanta Theological Seminary.)

AFFILIATED WITH

Vanderbilt University

The Foundation and the other Foundations that are affiliated with Vanderbilt University School of Religion comprise the only Interdenominational Theological School in the South. Through this affiliation the students enjoy the rights and privileges of Vanderbilt University.

DEGREES.

Candidates for degrees are required to have completed their college courses.

The degree of Bachelor of Divinity is offered to qualified students who complete the required courses.

Vanderbilt University also offers the degrees of Master of Arts and Doctor of Philosophy, in accordance with the regulations established in its several departments.

MORE THAN A SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY.

Because of our affiliation with Vanderbilt, our relations with other nearby colleges where our students can take courses without tuition, and the cooperation of the American Red Cross and other social agencies in the city, we prepare students for many types of Christian service.

For information write

WILLIAM JAMES CAMPBELL, President,
330 BUTTRICK HALL, VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY,
NASHVILLE, TENN.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

Representing the Southeast Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches.

IN ESSENTIALS, UNITY.

IN NON-ESSENTIALS, LIBERTY.

IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY.

VOLUME LXXXVI.

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 20, 1934.

NUMBER 38.

•• THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY ••

Great Lakes Affected by Drought.—

Now comes the statement that shipowners on the great lakes may lose $10 millions or more this year because of the drought. It is not because of less stuff to be shipped that this loss will come, but because the lower water levels have deprived freighters of 1.5 feet of draft, with a consequent 15 per cent reduction in carrying capacity.

British Yacht Wins Cup.—

For the first time in twenty years, and the third time within the sixty-odd years during which these races have been staged, the British challenger, this time the Endeavour, defeated the American Cup defender. After getting off to a bad start the challenger came up to "win as thrilling contest as nautical enthusiasts could wish to see." The wholesale wind and the turbulent seas made most exciting demands on both the Rainbow and its rival ship.

City of Nome Destroyed by Fire.—

Nome, famed Alaskan mining city, was almost completely destroyed by fire the first of this week, the fire department building included in the debacle. Notwithstanding the free use of dynamite in an effort to stop the flames, only two buildings in the business area were left standing, while there remained a few residences and one hotel in the northern part of the city. Practically the entire food supply of the city was consumed in the flames and mining operations were stopped. The loss is estimated at $1,000,000.

Business Index Rises Slightly.—

The week ending September 8th showed a slight rise in general business activity, but it was more than time. It was the first week to show a gain since July 21st. Not only has the business index been going down since that date, but since last June it has been lower than in 1933, and was headed for the level for the corresponding period of 1932—the lowest of the depression except that immediately following the compulsory closing of the banks. This index was turned upward by a sharp rise in bank debits. Steel activities also showed increase, while retail sales were considerably better than last year at this time. There is another thing which should have its effect in the near future, the gradual depletion of supplies on hand, and the consequent forced buying which may help to make the wheels of industry turn.

Is There Enough Lumber for Building?—

Only recently one read the statement that the general lumber shortage was such that if there should be a revival of building, substitutes would have to be found. The West Coast Lumberman's Association has taken exception to this statement. It claims "that if 680,000 houses were required in the United States during the next twelve months, they could be built, structurally 100 per cent of wood, without any of the present mills or camps being forced to capacity." It claimed that there were stocks on hand last March at the various mills amounting to 14 billion feet of lumber, to say nothing of the wholesale-retail stock being held. It was estimated that the country's entire consumption would be for the year only 15,000,000,000 board feet, probably much less than the entire amount then on hand, without cutting another foot.

Two Items of Interest.—

There are two items which will probably prove of interest to those watching wet and dry trends in Virginia. They appear in adjoining columns of the Richmond Times-Dispatch of September 18th. The first is headed: "Drunk Drivers Set Record in Folkes' Court." It reads in part: "When Justice Eben C. Folkes went on the bench in Police Court yesterday and scanned his docket, a pained expression spread over his erstwhile cheerful countenance. . . . In spite of his recent warnings and the imposition of stiff fines, jail sentences and revocations of drivers' permits, the highest record of such cases for any one day this year confronted him. . . ." The other paragraph reads: "Meanwhile the ABC Board announced that its State liquor stores in Richmond did a $92,000 business during the first two weeks of September, representing a decided increase in volume of sales." What a pity the voters of the State of Maine could not have seen these two items before they went to the polls last week.

When Britain Freed Slaves.—

The New Outlook (Toronto) recalls from the files of its forerunner, The Christian Guardian, of a hundred years ago, the scenes in various parts of the British Empire on the last evening in July, 1834, while slaves waited for midnight—the hour at which the enactment freeing them went into effect. The slaves gathered in churches and chapels. Assembled multitudes of bondmen waited in hushed silence for the fateful hour. At the last stroke of the clock, they leapt up, hugged each other, clapped their hands and shouted their gladness, and burst into singing Glory, Hallelujah! Wilberforce, the apostle of abolition, lay dying at the time, but lived long enough to be assured that the bill for which he had fought would be carried. Seven hundred thousand slaves in British possessions went free. British power was set against the traffic, and during the century that has passed the British Government has secured signatures to nearly 600 separate international instruments for the abolition of the slave trade and emancipation of slaves.—Advance.

Use of Electricity Increases.—

The threat of government competition has caused the electric utility companies of the country to make unusual strides in the development of more "load" during the past year. This has been in two ways: first by reduction in rates, and second by showing the value of electricity as a servant in the modern home. A study by Electrical World of the amount of sales of the 100 companies serving approximately one half of the industry's customers, reveals the fact that the sales of "load building appliances" was "out of all proportions to the improvement in business conditions." Comparative figures for the first half of 1933 and the corresponding period of the present year reveal the following: refrigerators sold during the first half of 1933, 49,702, the same period of 1934, 86,898; electric ranges this year, 27,497, last year 11,503; washers 44,473 against 21,570 and ironers, 7,098 against 2,899. The writer knows of at least one instance where the electric bill was actually reduced by the adding of labor saving equipment with its corresponding decrease in kilowatt hour rate.

"Unionism's Worst."—

Under the above heading, Business Week, a magazine that may primarily be called an employer's magazine, but one which has not hesitated to take up the cudgel for labor when occasion demanded, says: "Unjustified economically or morally, outrageous in its tactics, the textile strike is indefensible on any grounds. It is unionism in its worst and ugliest manifestations. It is alienating from organized labor those who hoped conservative forces in the American Federation of Labor might stem the dangerous trends of recent months. It is furnishing new ammunition to the implacable foes of unions in any form." We are told that not above 25 per cent of the workers in these mills are union members, and that there are numbers who have been forced out of employment by the amazing activities of so-called "flying squadrons," which close the mills by one of three methods: Either "they pull the main mill switch, they threaten workers with bodily harm, or they convince the mill management that only a shutdown can prevent bloodshed." We are told that "in a real sense the United Textile Workers is fighting its own people and is forcing them out of work to serve its own ends." The criticisms offered by our contemporary are severe, but upon the whole they are those of an unbiased onlooker. Our greatest sympathy goes out to these people, numbers of whom are our personal friends, but we know that there must be a better way than this of settling disputes that arise between employer and employee.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Many friends will learn with regret of the death of Deacon Jas. W. Price of the First Christian Church of Richmond. He passed away on last Saturday, after a lingering confinement to his home and to his bed. His family have our sincere sympathy in this time of grief.

Rev. Carr E. Geringer, Wakefield, Va., writing under September date, says: "I go Sunday to assist Rev. J. M. Roberts in a series of meetings at Oak Grove (Gates County, North Carolina). Following this meeting, Rev. G. C. Crutchfield, Burlington, will be in a meeting with me at Burton's Grove, one of the churches of my pastorate here. He was former pastor and will be heard with pleasure, and, I trust, with profit."

The Womans Board of the North Carolina Woman's Conference, Mrs. C. H. Rowland, president, was in session at Elon College, Monday, September 10th, and the Board of the Eastern Va. Conference, Mrs. J. E. Cartwright, president, was in session at Suffolk, Thursday, September 13th, planning for their annual conferences and the work of the coming year. The women of the latter conference will meet at Liberty Spring, Friday, October 5th; the N. C. Conference at Greensboro First Church, Thursday, October 18th.

Rev. Albert Godley, D. D., who has given his life and consecrated energy to purity work, is now at the Home for Aged Ministers, Lakemont, N. Y. Brother Godley writes: "I have good care here, and I hope yet to do some purity work by correspondence. Pray for the work." We sympathize with Brother Godley by death sometime since of his eldest son, A. Perce Godley. "I find congenial friends," writes Brother Godley, and closes his message with "God bless Elon College and the great work it is doing for Christ and the church."

Rev. J. D. Dollar, Roanoke, Ala., requests announcement through the SUN that all delegates and visitors who expect to attend the East Alabama Association of Congregational and Christian Church (which takes the place of the old Alabama Christian Conference) and who may wish entertainment should notify him a few days before the meeting, which meeting is to be held October 17th and 18th with Rock Stand Church, six miles northwest of Roanoke on the highway to Wedowee, Ala. Those interested should address Rev. J. D. Dollar, Pastor, Roanoke, Ala.

Mr. and Mrs. Fix spent their month's vacation travelling and visiting relatives in the far Northwest. Commenting on what he witnessed in the drought stricken section of the Northwest, the local paper reports him as follows: "We saw one farmer in Nebraska who used to average 50 bushels of corn to the acre off his 80 acres who said he will not get a single ear this year. He is selling his crop for 50 cents an acre. Corn stalks are less than a foot high. Champaign county seems to be the most fortunate spot we have seen. It is better off than any section we saw in Wisconsin, Minnesota, Nebraska or the Dakotas."

Dr. Fred Field Goodsell of our Mission office, 14 Beacon St., Boston, writes under recent date personally: "We are indeed grateful that the spirit of real sacrifice leads many to plan carefully so that they may have a larger part in helping the Mission Board maintain its work. I am thinking especially of extraordinary instances of those who care what happens in these difficult days. A few days ago an old friend of the Board sent us her diamond engagement ring and her wedding ring that we might sell them and use the proceeds in the work; and I know of another friend who has given half the sum he planned to use for his vacation."

Rev. C. E. Geringer, Wakefield, Va., writes: "This has been a busy year. It has been our pleasure to have Rev. T. Fred Wright in a revival meeting at Wakefield, Rev. J. E. McCauley at Barretts, Rev. G. C. Crutchfield at Burton's Grove. These brethren did fine work and the churches greatly enjoyed their efforts and were blessed by their ministry. I was with Rev. J. Melvin Kay, pastor of Oak Grove and Salem M. P. churches in revival meetings from August 19-31, and we had a great time. Then I was with Brother Roberts September 2-7, at Oak Grove—six additions to the church and the church greatly revived."

Rev. J. B. Root, pastor of the church at Sanford, Florida, in a report says: "We have been terribly hard hit with the depression; church members there are who will not go to church or help carry on the program because they cannot pay their part of the program. Some will not even send their children. Yet your Sanford pastor is persuaded that since the beginning of time there has never been one step of progress made, never a scientific principle formulated, never a book written to enlighten mankind, never a bit of poetry penned to console the heart, never a discovery made, and never a revelation of God's will that did not come in and thru men and women confronted and perplexed by problems of the same nature and equally discouraging."

Mrs. W. B. Williams, Secretary, Newport News, Va., has prepared and sent out a program of work for the Christian Endeavor Societies of the Eastern Virginia Conference. The preface to the program states: "We are presenting herewith a Program that suggests something definite for the Christian Endeavor Societies of our Conference to do "For Christ and the Church." This Program has been planned so that it correlates with the Virginia State Christian Endeavor Union "Witnessing for Christ" Program. In this Program you will find definite references to various activities of our own Church. Use this Program in connection with the "Witnessing For Christ" Program. If you do not have a copy of the "Witnessing For Christ" Program write your C. E. Secretary for one."

November 18, 1934, has been designated as "Men and Missions Sunday" in protestant churches of America. The program is prepared under the auspices of the Laymen's Missionary Movement and Cooperating Communions. The theme for the day is "The Hope of the Nations." As a preface to the program, Dr. Alexander McLeish, of the World Dominion Movement, London, England, very pertinently comments: "Christ sent His followers to carry the Gospel to the world of their own generation. We present-day Christian men are commanded by Him to proclaim that same Gospel to the men of our generation. It is easier for us than it was for the disciples. We have the same spiritual power as was promised them; we are far more in number; we have greater material resources; we can move easily about the world; but while one-third of the world's population is nominally Christian, yet there are numerically more non-Christians in the world today than there were fifty years ago. When are we Christians to get abreast of our task? * * We of this generation are called to take the Gospel to those who know it not and we can do it if we are prepared to fulfill the conditions which Christ long ago made clear.

PROGRAM.

Thirty-fourth Annual Session of the East Alabama Congregational-Christian Association, (formerly the Alabama Christian Conference) to be held at Rock Stand church, October 17-18, 1934.

Wednesday—Morning Session.

- 10:00 Called to order by President Rev. G. H. Veazey.
- Devotionals . . . . . Rev. C. C. Dollar
- 10:15 Welcome Address . . . . . Rev. J. D. Dollar
- 10:25 Response . . . . . Rev. A. W. Stone
- 10:30 Enrollment of ministers and Delegates
- 11:00 Adoption of Program
- 11:10 Appointment of Special Committees
- 11:20 Report of Executive Committee
- 11:30 Annual Address . . . . . Rev. G. H. Veazey
- 12:00 Adjourn for lunch

Wednesday—Afternoon Session.

- 1:30 Devotionals . . . . . Rev. O. E. Sheppard
- 1:45 Reading Ministerial and Church Reports and their reference to Committees.
- 2:30 Report of Committee on Superannuation Rev. W. T. Meacham
- 2:45 Report of Committee on Religious Literature . . . . . Rev. J. D. Dollar
- Address . . . . . Mr. J. T. Kernodle
- 3:15 Miscellaneous
- 6:00 Picnic lunch and campfire discussions for Young People, led by Miss Margurite Davis.

Evening Session.

- 7:00 Devotionals . . . . . Rev. Howard Meacham
- 7:15 Report of Committee on Moral Reform Rev. G. R. Walker
- Address . . . . . Rev. B. G. Gallagher
- 7:45 Report of Committee on Sunday Schools and Christian Endeavor Rev. W. M. Stevens
- Address . . . . . Mrs. A. R. VanCleave
- 8:15 Our College. Its needs. Round Table discussions led by Rev. G. D. Hunt. Adjourned.

Thursday—Morning Session.

- 9:00 Devotionals . . . . . Rev. C. W. Carter
- 9:15 Reading Minutes of Wednesday's Session
- 9:30 Chart Lecture—Miss Davison or Dr. Ensminger.
- 9:45 Report of Committee on Education Rev. J. H. Hughes
- Address . . . . . Rev. Ross Ensminger
- 10:30 Report of Home Mission Board Rev. G. H. Veazey
- Address, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Alternate Dr. F. P. Ensminger.
- 11:15 Annual Sermon—Speaker to be supplied
- 12:00 Adjourned for lunch.

Thursday—Afternoon Session.

- 1:30 Devotionals . . . . . Rev. A. R. VanCleave
- 1:45 Report of Committee on Nomination. Election of officers.
- 2:00 Report of Treasurer . . . . . Mr. J. W. Payne
- 2:15 Report of Committee on Ministerial Monument Fund, D. W. Sheppard.
- 2:25 Our Orphanage . . . . . "Uncle" Charlie Johnston.
- 2:45 Miscellaneous
- 3:00 Holy Communion . . . . . Revs. J. H. Hughes and J. P. Bean.
- 3:30 Adjourned

GUIDES WHO ARE TEACHERS.

By F. C. Hoggarth.

Early one morning after walking round the walls of Londonderry, we came to the cathedral. As we entered a boy followed. Eagerly he set down his school bag, opened a drawer in the porch, hurriedly glanced at a book there, then overtaking us asked if we would care to be shown around. He pointed out the Bishop's chair in which he (the boy) sometimes sat! There were dull and tattered flags taken long ago from the French. The organ he told us was made from the wood of a wrecked Armada vessel. There were cannon balls—merely stones covered with lead—an ancient method when ammunition ran short. He explained the stained glass window to the memory of the Seven 'Prentice boys of 'Derry, who locked the city gates in face of the King's men.

Macauley has told the story, but the boy's recital had a spontaneity and a glee not found in the historian. He pointed out the locks and keys that had yielded to that heroism, and a bit of wood from the door by which the City Governor had escaped. And every year on the 18th of August the effigy of that governor is burned, much as English children burn Guy Fawkes.

All too soon the little man had to go to school, though not before he made an opening for telling us the date he had looked up on entering. His mother, who was cleaning the place, told us that the boy was better than his father at showing people round. We believed her. And as Lowell said he would always see Selbourne through the eyes of Gilbert White, we shall see 'Derry Cathedral through the eyes of our boy guide.

On another occasion we visited the cathedral at Winchester and the memory that always stands out is the spirit of the verger who showed us the rarities of the place. He was an old man, black-gowned, who, whilst the short morning service was proceeding in the choir, stood afar off in the nave alone, and knelt in prayer. The worship over, he took us round, and there was such quietness, such grace, such reverence in him. Through all the years—and he had spent a lifetime in the service—he had retained the sense of wonder, and for him every stone, and column and tomb seemed radiant. All was transformed by the light of the past, and it may be by rays from that other temple into which he has now entered—man's eternal home, whose portal is the dark and covered way called death. It was a precious hour—this guidance of reverent age in the place that he loved.

In visiting ancient shrines we have sometimes prayed to be delivered from the "official" guide—that we might silently contemplate, communing with the spirit of the place! We would fain have seen the old monks at prayer, or feeding the poor, or crossing at midnight from their cells to the chapel; or we wished to catch a vision of the defenders of some ruined castle and feel something of the romance, the tragedy and comedy of the place. From these ancient shrines and monuments of the past, we have often turned with a sense of disappointment and even of indignation that he who should have shown us the rarities of the place, touching in us the sense of wonder and reverence, had robbed us of our opportunity and we were unbled.

To find a true guide, one who has retained the spirit of wonder is great gain. For so much depends on him. He can make our visit a great occasion. Should he be an enthusiast—no cold reciter of things learned by rote—possessing imagination and patience and love, he may do much for us. A true guide can be the medium of our sight forever.

Bradford, England.

SUBSCRIPTION PAYMENTS FOR AUGUST.

We give below the list of subscribers who have made payments on their accounts during August and up to the 10th of the present month. We have sent out several hundred letters to subscribers, calling their attention to the need of their paper for more active cooperation. If you are one who has received such a letter, we would greatly appreciate it, if you have not already done so, if you will let us hear from you.

It has been necessary to drop some from the roster of subscribers, and it will be impossible to much longer carry those who are so far in arrears. If you have not received a letter from us yet, do not wait for it but send in at least some part of your subscription. We will give you the benefit of the most liberal offer we are making, and it will save us the expense of writing you.

We thank those who have sent in remittances.

Sincerely yours

J. T. KERNODLE.

Managing Editor.

- Mrs. Irene Allison, R. 6, Burlington, N. C.
- Miss Nannie Andrews, Wakefield, Va.
- Mrs. R. R. Auman, Steeds, N. C.
- E. W. Beale, Zuni, Va.
- Mrs. Lizzie Boyd, News Ferry, Va.
- B. A. Barber, Elon College, N. C.
- F. M. Brewer, 867 W. Ocean View Ave., Norfolk, Va.
- Roscoe Burke, 729 Carolina Ave., S. E., Washington, D. C.
- Mrs. Jennie Bush, Broadway, Va.
- C. J. Clark, Pisgah, Ala. (new)
- D. E. Cole, R. 1, Biscoe, N. C.
- W. L. Cooper, 518 W. 28th St., Norfolk, Va.
- Wilton Cotten, Box 163, Dendron, Va.
- Mrs. M. A. Carr, 504 Washington St, Suffolk, Va.
- Willard S. Carson, 204 W. Bradford St., Dover, Del.
- Mrs. W. M. Scott, Semora, N. C.
- Mrs. J. Wm. Driver, Broadway, Va.
- Mrs. J. S. Drewry, Wakefield, Va.
- C. J. Duke, 261 W. Washington St., Suffolk, Va.
- Mrs. J. L. (Docia) Eley, 110 E. 30th St., Norfolk, Va.
- Ethel Friddle, R. 2, Stokesdale, N. C.
- Mrs. Annie Fultz, Luray, Va.
- W. E. Garrison, R. 3, Windsor, Va.
- Mrs. T. S. Graves, 218 E. Bragg St., Greensboro, N. C.
- C. D. Harton, Henderson, N. C.
- J. H. Haizlip, Nederland, Texas.
- Mrs. A. E. Hines, R. 1, Wakefield, Va.
- A. L. Hook, Elon College, N. C.
- Mrs. J. T. Hopper, R. 3, Ruffin, N. C.
- Mrs. J. B. Jones, R. 3, Liberty, N. C.
- J. G. Johnson, R. 1, Zuni, Va.
- J. A. Kagey, R. 1, Edinburg, N. C.
- Mrs. H. O. Keck, Altamahaw, N. C.
- S. B. Lea, 180 Angier Ave., E. Durham, N. C.
- J. M. Lohr, Broadway, Va.
- Mrs. T. D. Matthews, R. 2, Windsor, Va.
- E. S. Morris, March, Va.
- Mrs. J. C. McAdams, Elon College, N. C.
- Geo. M. McCullers, McCullers, N. C.
- W. A. Newman, 928 Nicholas St., Henderson, N. C.
- Mrs. Mary Noblin, LaCrosse, Va.
- Mrs. C. W. Parker, 1530 Barron St., Portsmouth, Va.
- Dennis F. Parsons, 5479 Ellis Ave., Chicago, Ill.
- Mrs. Lydia E. Pickering, R. 1, Broadway, Va.
- Miss Dora Rothgeb, 14 W. Main St., Luray, Va.
- Miss Ida Simpson, Burlington, N. C.
- Miss Florence Smith, 638 Scott Ave., Greensboro, N. C. (new)
- Earnest M. Spitzer, R. 2, Harrisonburg, Va.
- Mrs. H. L. Trotman, Churchland, Va.
- Rev. G. H. Veazey, Wadley, Ala.
- Mrs. M. E. Wilder, R. 1, Lillington, N. C.
- Reps Williamson, R. 3, Box 126, Norfolk, Va.

FIFTH SUNDAY OFFERING.

The Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches, in session at Suffolk, Virginia, provided for an offering for the college to be received from every Sunday school in the Convention. The Sunday school and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Western North Carolina Conference elected Miss Julia Woodson as Educational Secretary. The Eastern Virginia Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention elected Dr. William Jay as Educational Secretary. The Eastern North Carolina Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention elected Miss Margaret Alston as Educational Secretary. I am asking Rev. Everette Neese to serve as Educational Secretary for the North Carolina and Virginia Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention and Rev. W. J. Andes for the Valley of Virginia Convention. One duty of these Educational Secretaries is to contact the Sunday schools in the interest of this offering for the college. Should you receive an appeal from these secretaries, I hope that the response may be generous.

This is an appeal to all Sunday schools in the Convention to receive the fifth Sunday offering and forward the same to the college immediately. Your School will be receipted by the college.

The following Sunday schools responded in the last fifth Sunday offering. I trust that there may be an increase in the number of schools contributing this month.

Eastern North Carolina:
Catawba Springs .....	$ 3.37
Liberty-Vance .....	3.84
Morrisville .....	.50
Mt. Auburn .....	5.00
Sanford .....	1.00
Turners Chapel .....	1.00
Wake Chapel .....	3.23
Youngsville .....	1.00
Total .....	$ 18.94
Eastern Virginia:
Barrett's .....	.78
Christian Temple, Norfolk .....	46.52
Holland .....	6.00
Holy Neck .....	4.54
Mt. Carmel .....	1.02
Newport News, First .....	8.37
Portsmouth, First .....	5.77
Richmond, First .....	3.93
Rosemont .....	10.00
Suffolk .....	15.59
Wakefield .....	1.46
Waverly .....	3.67
Total .....	107.65
North Carolina and Virginia:
Apple's Chapel .....	2.75
Durham .....	8.99
Elon College .....	1.25
Greensboro, First .....	9.04
Happy Home .....	3.32
Hines' Chapel .....	3.90
Lebanon .....	1.00
Lynchburg, United .....	3.20
Mt. Bethel .....	1.01
Union (N. C.) .....	2.00
Ingram .....	5.00
Total .....	41.46
Virginia Valley:
Bethlehem .....	.56
Leaksville .....	2.60
Linville .....	4.78
Mayland .....	1.00
Timber Ridge .....	1.85
Winchester .....	.86
Wood's Chapel .....	1.49
Total .....	14.86
Western North Carolina:
Antioch (R) .....	.56
Big Oak .....	.38
Burlington .....	12.73
Graham Providence Memorial .....	2.00
Pleasant Hill .....	1.15
Seagrove .....	1.50
Total .....	18.32
Grand Total .....	$201.23

L. E. SMITH.

If we are to carry joy into our mature years and fill our nights and days with the buoyancy and hopefulness of youth—we must guard our thought world and keep its atmosphere lovingly clear.

—Chesapeake Christian.

E-D-I-T-O-R-I-A-L

EDITOR

J. O. ATKINSON, ELON COLLEGE, N. C.

ASSOCIATE EDITOR

E. C. GILLETTE

117 W. Forsyth Street, Jacksonville, Fla.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS

I. W. JOHNSON    ELISHA A. KING

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

IN TIME OF ADVERSITY.

Other pastors and churches, not a few of them, face the same difficulty revealed in the report from our pastor and church at Sanford, Fla., (See "Notes and Personals.") The explanation is difficult to analyze. Why should a church member, who has met adversity, calamity or bereavement, remain away from church services? There are hundreds who do and, of course, they justify themselves. They cannot "pay as they once paid." They cannot dress as they once dressed. They cannot be as cheerful as they once were. On some such account they excuse for staying away from that place, above all places on earth, which offers that which is to be had without money and without price; sounds that note of courage and comfort for all in distress and carries constantly the message of Him who said: "I came that ye might have life and have it more abundantly."

At the very center of the church as at the very center of the life of Christ, is the Cross, the old, rugged Cross, the symbol of Him who suffered all that He might relieve those who suffer, and the sign by which and through which all who are in distress and suffering may conquer every foe of flesh and blood and spirit. Long before He went to the cross, our Lord, with the cross in view, said: "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." He is the source of rest, a retreat for those who are pursued, a refuge for the needy and the distressed. How to overcome adversity, bereavement and sorrow, constitute the message of the church, and are themselves the burden and the blessing of the church. It was a prophet of God who was speaking the message of the church, "I have satisfied the weary soul and I have replenished every sorrowful soul." (Jer. 31:25.)

Because one cannot pay as one once paid, or smile as one once smiled, is poor excuse, indeed, for staying away from the center and source of that abiding peace, that joy unspeakable, that the world neither gives nor can take away.

J. O. A.

THE STRIKE.

All good and sensible people, employers and employees, deplore a strike. The least that can be said of it is that it is war. It expresses antagonism. It develops animosity. It gives vent to prejudice. It provokes passion. Moreover it is a "house divided against itself." One of the fundamental facts of political economy is that capital is congealed and stored-up labor. It represents somebody's savings from the past. Labor, on the other hand, is capital in the making, or it is intended so to be. Capital represents labor, or service, already rendered, and not expended or exploited; labor draws from capital for its support, with the object in view of creating values—another name for capital. When capital exploits labor, or labor destroys capital, both are consuming unnecessarily that which each may and should enjoy.

The present strike is finding vent in violence, and hindering industry in a time of need. The main difficulty is the contention as to "rights." Strikers maintain that they have a right to strike, also to persuade, and, if persuasion fails, to force others to strike. The contention of capital and State, on the other hand, is that those who are willing to work have a right to work. Hence the conflict in the matter of "rights" and privileges.

All the deplorable features of the strike and violated rights are now becoming apparent. In sections violence has resulted in killing some, wounding others, destruction of property, dynamiting of buildings, and the unleashing of the powers of passion and prejudice. A National Board of Arbitration has been appointed by President Roosevelt, but at this writing little headway seems to have been made and few, if any, difficulties in the way of settlement seem to have been removed. There are thousands of employees as well as of employers who deeply desire and are earnestly counselling peace and an early and amicable settlement. One can but hope and pray that these seekers after peace may soon find the way out. "Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God." J. O. A.

ANOTHER TEN COMMANDMENTS.

The Federal Council Bulletin points out to what deplorable depths the national life of Germany under Hitler has gone. We are not to understand that all Germany gives approval to this national leadership and ignominy, for there are thousands of German citizens who remain loyal and faithful to the preachings of Protestantism and the practices of the church that gave them security and stability. Read then what is given as "the ten commandments" of Hitlerism as stated by Henry Smith Lieper:

1. The Church shall be in all essentials one with the State in its purpose.
2. The supreme leader of the Church, as of everything else in the nation, shall be the head of the State—Adolph Hitler.
3. The Church shall not go against the will of this dictator in the choice of its highest officials.
4. The "leadership principle" supreme in the Nazi State, shall apply likewise in the Church, the word of the Bishop of the Reich being the supreme law of the Church.

5. The selection of future pastors of the Church shall be in the hands of the leaders of Hitler youth, who shall say which students are to be admitted to theological training.

6. These future pastors are to come from only one race—the 'Aryan.'

7. They shall likewise come from only one party, the National Socialist.

8. The Church shall no longer be regarded—from a practical point of view—as supra-national and universal, but as a distinctly German institution.

9. The Church shall support the campaign to eliminate from its own life and the life of the nation the race which produced its Lord and the writers of the Bible.

10. The God of the Church shall be officially permitted to be recognized in Germany only if He will salute Adolf Hitler."

J. O. A.

THIS MIND.

"Let this mind be in you which was in Christ Jesus." As Paul uses mind here it means "disposition," "attitude," "inclination." Have in you the "attitude" of Christ Jesus. First, to God. Christ exalted, honored, adored God above all else in heaven or on earth. Second, be humble, for Christ humbled Himself, taking even the form and position of a servant. Third, be obedient. Christ did not seek the easy places, but became obedient even unto the curse and cruelty of death on the cross.

If the world of today could have, or would practice, this disposition, this attitude, we would have a different, a happier, a better world.

J. O. A.

CHURCHES MORE IMPORTANT THAN BANKS.

There is still much difference of opinion as to the value of our modern church. Many people have just quit all association with it. At a time when they need what the church has to give they turn their backs on it. Even though they once had a lot of money in the bank they have lost it now. In such distress the soul needs encouragement and sustaining faith. And of course many thousands of people are finding the help they need in the church.

Dr. J. Dellman Kuykendall, pastor of our important Plymouth Church at Coconut Grove, Fla., preached a sermon recently that deserves wide reading. The title of the sermon is "Mine Integrity." I wish here to reproduce one paragraph as a thoughtful timely message:

"At the risk of being called utterly foolish by practical folk, I cannot but feel that churches are more important, just now, than banks; that schools are more important than factories, that character-forming institutions are more important than race tracks and night clubs. It is important that we should know something about God and good whether we know anything about monetary inflation or not. I feel quite sure that if there had been a little more enthusiasm about religion and education and culture, about the human values even at the cost of a little less enthusiasm for stocks and dividends and labor-saving devices and political and economic theories, we would by this time have made a somewhat closer approach to the kingdom of heaven, and our breadlines would not be so long. There must be something to keep alive the divine flame if man is not to be deflated to the status of the beast."

E. A. K.

THE LIQUOR PROBLEM.

By DEETS PICKETT.

[Excerpts from an address before the Michigan Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church.]

The only definite and certain thing about the present liquor situation is this: It is going to be changed, changed radically, and perhaps changed sooner than many people think. What this change will be I do not attempt to predict, but it will serve the cause of temperance rather than the interest of the liquor trade. No one claims that the status quo has served the cause of temperance. By "status quo" we mean, as the colored preacher said, "The mess we is now in." We mean what is commonly known as "repeal."

The people, or rather the few of them who condescended to vote on the matter at all, voted for repeal because they were promised that it would promote "temperance." It has not done so; it is generally known that it has not done so. Only the interest in the overshadowing "recovery issue" is holding back the wrath of the people whose sons and daughters are being enticed to drunkenness, whose wives and children are menaced in the streets by drinking drivers. As soon as the people in general see the close and vital connection between the liquor issue and the recovery program, as soon as they realize that the capital which is tied up in the manufacture of drink is paying an astonishingly small proportion of its receipts to labor and the producers of raw material, as soon as they know what is spent at the liquor store is definitely a burden upon the dealer in drygoods and groceries, there will be action.

We were promised that if we repealed the prohibition law there would be fewer drunks, no saloons, more respect for law, less delinquency, poverty, crime, less drinking by young people, fewer accidents in industry and on the highways, less racketeering, and a billion dollars in taxes to relieve the burden of the average citizen.

Every one of these premises has failed of fulfillment. We have been cozened and bejaped, not to say gulled and swindled. Returns from 192 American cities show an increase of 31.68% in arrests for drunkenness in the first three months of 1934 over the corresponding months of 1933. There was a substantial increase as soon as beer was legalized. Saloons are open, frequently in defiance of law, in every section of the country. We have the same old corruption of city politics, the same old alliances between the brewers and the distillers and the grafters, and the same old common front with vice and gambling.

The toll of delinquency, poverty and crime, due to this miserable trade, rises weekly. It is a sight to make the gods weep to see poor, tattered men and women enter saloons to spend relief money given them by the taxpayers for food and clothing. It is a sight to make us all weep to see the liquor trade busily appealing to the young people of the country to begin the habit of drinking alcoholic liquors, fighting to break down the sales resistance built up by a decade of prohibition, feeding the children alcohol-filled candy, displaying for sale tiny bottles filled with whiskey, decorating their advertisements with beautiful girls.

As I have gone over this country I have found one phase of this matter outstanding in the thinking of every father. Americans are appalled by the mounting toll of automobile accidents. The average man is wondering how long it will be before his wife and his children will be buried beneath a shattered wreck because some saloon keeper had a license to sell liquor to a man who perhaps was a good citizen until alcohol made him as dangerous to the public as a wild beast from the jungle.

This whole tragic failure is due to the non-recognition of certain fundamental principles. I want to outline them briefly.

First. Alcohol is a habit-forming drug. It is absurd to talk about the temperate use of a drug which is habit-forming. No one ever began the consumption of liquors with the idea of being intemperate in their use, and yet it is estimated that one man out of three who begins to drink will become an alcohol addict. The simple truth is that the temperate use, by the very nature of the commodity, tends to become intemperate use, and that intemperate use tends to become habitual. We can only change that by changing the chemistry of alcohol.

Second. Alcohol has an affinity for the brain. It suspends the higher functions first, in inverse order of their development in the individual and the race. It is therefore an enemy to civilization and a friend of the jungle. It is a counter-evolutionary force. It interferes with the adaptation of man to the modern environment and it will destroy civilization unless civilization destroys it.

Third. Alcohol directly affects the central nervous system. Thus this principle is closely related to the second. It interferes with automatic responses which become ever more important with the increasing complexities of life and the development of the machine age. Two bottles of beer will not make a man drunk, but they will make him an unsafe automobile driver. Ten times as many accidents are caused by drinking as are caused by drunkenness.

The fourth fundamental principle is this: that alcohol is alcohol no matter whether you get it in whiskey, beer, wine or cider. Perhaps the greater dilution in beer slows up absorption to a certain extent, but it will be absolute folly for us to ignore the fact that there is a tremendous amount of beer drunkenness in the country today.

The fifth fundamental principle is that consumption of liquor is always in proportion to the facilities for its display, trade promotion and distribution, and that the consequences of drink are in direct proportion to the amount consumed. Anything which reduces the consumption of drink is a temperance measure; anything which increases it is an anti-social and anti-temperance policy.

Underlying these fundamentals is one outstanding fundamental which lies at the very heart of every consideration. It is this: the interest of the liquor trade and of the nation are incompatible. Whatever is done in cooperation with the liquor trade and to increase its prosperity is a direct blow at the people. When we found our governmental policies upon that fundamental truth we will be getting somewhere and not before.

Now what are we going to do about this? A proper program divides itself naturally into two sections: the first, political; the second, social. The church is told to "educate." But the government is so much mightier than we and its policies so much more significant that we cannot proceed with a social program without consideration of the government's program. There can be no justification for trade promotion of the sale of a habit-forming drug. It is one thing to permit the satisfaction of an existing demand; it is quite another to permit the creation of demand. So the first item in our public program should be "No Liquor Advertising."

The second suggestion we should make the government is this: cut the profit on drink, not the taxes. The profit motive is at the bottom of half of the mischief. Take the profit out of the sale of drink and you will take the fun out of it for the liquor industry.

The third suggestion should be: really protect the dry states. The 21st Amendment promised it. We expect it.

I wish that the United States Government and the various states would use some of the public receipts from the liquor trade to warn the people against alcohol. This is being done in Sweden, in Russia, and in England, and it might well be done here. The truth is that the two systems we now have, license and state control, are not being used up to the limits of their own possibilities for temperance. In England the public houses cannot open until 11 o'clock in the morning and they must close at 11 o'clock at night and there is a compulsory two hour closing in the afternoon. In that country the educational authorities have published notable public documents telling the truth about alcohol. In Sweden temperance lecturers are subsidized by the state. In Russia there are signs over the liquor shops, "Vodka sold here but we advise you not to drink it." That is in sharp contrast to the situation in the United States.

In our educational movement against drink we might proceed along the following lines:

Investigate the results of repeal; study every liquor system in the nation; point out the weaknesses and fallacies in federal and state policies; get all the facts and compare them critically. See that the facts get to the people.

Produce well-rounded educational material adapted to each age group and reach them through our churches, particularly promoting study classes for adults and adolescents in every church.

I want to make a plea here that we unite for remedial action with good citizens who do not believe in prohibition. We have never questioned the honesty of opinion of millions of people who are opposed to that policy. It is not necessary for us to give up our own fundamental convictions in order to go along with them as far as we believe we can go in the interests of temperance. Most of them are dissatisfied with the present situation as we are. Let us then join hands in behalf of every policy on which we can agree and having done so, proceed further in regard to those matters concerning which common agreement is not possible. Despite all of the charges made against us we are not fanatics. We realize the difference between the moral validity of a policy and its political validity. We know that Rome was not built in a day. But we do know that it was built by builders who never stopped building until it was built.

This country is menaced by an attack upon morals all along the line. Gambling is being legalized in many states. It is even proposed that we have public lotteries. Segregated districts for the toleration of vice are being established in some cities. I want to serve a warning now that Protestant Christianity in this country has not lost its conscience, that the men who think it has been hamstrung deceive themselves. The commercialized debauchery of America will meet the Christian church in opposition at very point. We are going to pass down to our children the precious heritage handed to us by our forefathers and pass it down undefiled. In every important American community there is a church at the crossroads. Faithful bands of women in ten thousand towns and cities meet monthly to consider the moral interests of the country. God is still in His Heaven and we follow His leadership in utter confidence of final victory.

Be glad of life, because it gives you the chance to love and to work and to play and to look up at the stars.—Henry Van Dyke.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Dr. W. W. Staley gave some young people this advice: "Eat moderately, sleep regularly and work hard." Coming from a great man of wide observation and rich experience these simple rules are rich in wisdom and spiritual suggestion. Dr. J. E. Rawles, in closing a great address delivered to the Sunday school classes of the Suffolk Christian Church during August, also uttered a splendid thought in these words: "God's greatest gift to man is life; the greatest physical blessing is health; the greatest aid to health is righteousness."

Both of these great men touched a vital need in the life of man to-day. Paul said: "Know ye not that ye are in the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are." (I Cor. 3:16-17.) If a man is the temple, the dwelling place of God in the earth, it is essential that he shall regard his body in the light of that high honor and spiritual privilege. A man should stand under the canopy of the twinkling stars and think of the Creator who holds these measureless heavenly bodies in His hand, and remember that Divinity reposes in human flesh and blood, brawn and brain, mind and spirit.

It is sobering to be reminded that one cannot escape from the Divine presence of infinite love. Every human body should be as sacred as any holy temple dedicated to the worship of God. All church buildings and temples of worship should be neat and clean and in keeping with the holiness of God. And all human bodies should be physically fit for fellowship with the living God. Therefore it behooves man to know and practice the simple rules of living which will be conducive to long life, good health and efficient service.

Food, rest, work, righteousness—these four points are designated as fundamental in human life. Eat moderately and wisely. The development and power of the human body depends upon elements found in food. Science has discovered many valuable lessons and methods concerning eating. In normal people the taste and appetite will serve as a guide in eating. Dr. Staley's suggestion, "eat moderately," is one explanation of his own long life. Dr. Staley was not a robust man. He was cautioned about having tuberculosis in the beginning of his ministry. Yet he lived long and missed only a few preaching appointments in his life. The control of his appetite prolonged his useful life. In this day when so many appeals are being made to young people to become gluttons and addicts to the use of wine, beer and strong drink, the church needs to be aggressive in teaching fundamental lessons about eating and drinking.

Rest, sleep—is as important as eating. The human body is wonderful in endurance and potential power. But it must have rest. Sleep is the normal method of rest for the body and mind. It is nature's sweet restorer. Many of the social activities of the present time rob people of precious hours of sleep. There is an old saying, "Early to bed, and early to rise, makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise." The essential truth in that old saying can be summed up in these words—regular hours of sleep are conducive to health, business and mental development.

But work and righteousness are twin angels which direct man to higher thinking and nobler living. What a privilege it is to work. Above all what a joy to be a partner with God, a fellow-laborer, in working righteousness. To be able to work is the glory of humanity. To be willing to work with God and for God is the highest privilege of life. Be busy. Go into the vineyard and find a place to work. The harvest is plenteous but the laborers are few.

I. W. JOHNSON.

THE LOCAL CHURCH.

The Congregational and Christian churches of this country function as a whole through, what we call, the General Council. Through the General Council, we function as a denomination. We have our headquarters, our national offices, our boards, departments, commissions, committees, etc. Some of these departments are judicial and others are promotional. They, all, have financial requirements and they, all, look eventually and finally to the local church for funds necessary for the execution of their respective programs. The local church has its own program and demands, which should be given due consideration by all denominational agencies in forming their programs and preparing their appeals for funds, which, in the final analysis, comes direct to the local church as a separate unit. All denominational interests, however, are of great concern to the local church that is loyal and wishes to do its part. Boards, commissions, committees, etc., are simply mediums through which the local church expresses itself and carries on the work of the Kingdom in the broader sense.

In these trying days, the local church has tremendous burdens to carry. First of all, the majority of them have programs and financial requirements that tax their ability almost to the limit. So many expanded rapidly during the days of apparent success but to find themselves in the midst of depression with demands that they are unable to meet. With debts that cannot be paid in full and with appeals for money for the larger work of the church constantly coming, there is a tendency for the local church to become discouraged and to feel that the task is impossible. Such an attitude, however, is not a part of Christianity. It does not belong in the category of christian faith. But rather, it is a challenge to believing hearts and courageous souls. We must recall the promises of God and rely upon the same, remembering that it is the Lord God, Himself, that giveth us power to get wealth.

In this particular season of the year, every local church should begin to consider its obligations, locally and otherwise, should carefully consider its constituency, should ascertain as nearly as possible the financial strength of its combined membership, and should see, then, what the local membership could reasonably be expected to contribute. In an article of this kind, I am not unaware of the spiritual needs of the church. That is granted. But I am also aware that the material liberality of a church is a fairly good index to the richness or poverty of its own spiritual experiences. The financial obligations of the local church of necessity rest upon the individual member himself; and, if the church is to contribute to the adequate support of local and denominational interests, every member should have his share in such support. The average church member will not do his full duty unless he faces that duty in counsel with his brethren in the common cause.

Perhaps the most successful movement in enlisting the individual and his resources in the work and requirements of the church is the Every Member Canvass. Several years ago, this method of church financing was inaugurated by the Layman's Missionary movement and has done more to revolutionize the local church and to acquaint it with the larger interests of the Kingdom than any other movement that has yet come to us. The local church is facing salary payments, conference apportionments, money for repairs, and denominational askings. A careful survey of the entire membership and a systematic approach, personally and individually, to every individual member will prove entirely satisfactory in the majority of cases. I want to strongly recommend and urge every church in our Convention to plan and make the Every Member Canvass for the church's own development and for the advancement of the church as a whole. Every member of the church should make his contribution out of gratitude and as an act of worship; and, from the total contributions of the local church, the needs of the church as a whole should be met.

Missions, benevolences, evangelism, christian education, schools, and colleges all need support. Naturally, I am interested in education and definitely in Elon College. I need not emphasize the needs of the college. This has been done over and over again. But I would call your attention to the fact that, according to the Convention's action, every Sunday School in the Southern Convention is requested to make a special offering for the college on the fifth Sunday. If every School in the Convention would comply with this request, it would be of great benefit to the college. I am happy to report that the present college year has started off most satisfactorily. We have a splendid faculty and an excellent student body. To date, we have enrolled 325 students, which is practically 100 in advance of last year's enrollment. With these conditions of the college, all who are interested should be encouraged and should endeavor to give a more wholehearted support to the institution than we have yet done. September 30th happens to be another fifth Sunday. Brother Pastor, and Mr. Superintendent, won't you please give us your cooperation that this offering may be the largest yet received?

L. E. SMITH.

THE LOOK OF FAITH.

When God gave Noah the specifications for the building of the ark He told Noah to make one window and it seems to be a generally accepted fact that the view from the window did not look down upon the devastation of the earth but upward toward heaven. Noah had to look up for there was no other way to look. God never meant for man to look down in dejection but He did mean for man to look up in faith. When Peter walked on the water to go to Jesus he got along well until he looked at the roughness of the waves which caused his faith to waver. We need to get the lesson which these characters learned and apply them to ourselves. God has provided a way to escape in these troublous times and Isaiah gives us the words of God: "Look unto me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth: for I am God, and there is none else." Looking unto Him we can be saved from sin and from the cares of this world. The outlook may be dark but the uplook is bright for God is still on the throne and will not permit the evil to overthrow us if our trust is stayed in Him. "Our Lord's great heart of love was broken by sorrow because those whom He came to save would not trust Him. But those of us who have really trusted the Lord know, as no others can, the meaning of protection, safety, assurance, joy, and we can say with the dear old Scottish saint, Samuel Rutherford: 'We creep in under our Lord's wings in the great shower, and the water cannot come through those wings.' We can look to God's promises to be performed for. He is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think according to the power that worketh within us. Someone has said that every promise is built upon four pillars: God's justice, which will not suffer Him to deceive; His grace, which will not suffer Him to forget; His truth, which will not suffer Him to change; His power, which makes him able to accomplish. Our part is to have our wills in full submission to His will that He may work out His perfect plan in our lives. "What is Christian meekness? Meek endurance and meek obedience. The accepting of God's dealings however they may tear or desolate our hearts, without rebellion or resistance, without murmuring, without sulking, is the deepest conception of the meekness which Christ pronounces blessed. If we have any claim to this benediction, we must earn it by accepting our sorrows; and the accepted sorrow becomes a solemn joy, or almost akin thereto." But not alone for our own good should we look upward in faith for someone is watching each of us who profess to be the children of God whether we thing we are worth noticing or not and our spiritual thermometer either helps or hinders someone else. A recent remark brought this forcibly to mind. It was made by one who was beginning to understand the meaning of victory over the triune enemies of mankind: the world, the flesh, and the evil one. One member of the family who made a profession of salvation, was out of victory and was manifesting it in such a way that this weaker brother felt it and he said, "I do not feel the same as I did," speaking of his spiritual condition. Oh, how we need to fight the good fight of faith and keep looking up to the Author and Finisher of our faith who can ever keep us in His victory where we need never know defeat. Why should we weep and repine? Why should we bear our troubles as though they were ours alone? We distrust Christ when we cling to our troubles and will not let Him bear them for us. We must do our human best and trust God's wisdom; waiting His time of deliverance. Give Him the burdens and take His comfort.

"Mine to follow even blindly
Thine, O Christ, to go before.
Mine to try to scale the barrier
Thine to fling an open door.
Mine to smile in face of failure
Thine to gladden my defeat.
Mine to kneel and drink of Marah
Thine to make its waters sweet.
I will follow Thee, my Saviour,
Thou hast shed Thy blood for me
And though all the world forsake Thee
By Thy grace I'll follow Thee."

W.

FLORIDA MINISTERS' CONVOCATION—1934.

Place—
Ponce DeLeon Hotel at DeLeon Springs, the place which was so much enjoyed last year. It is a delightful place for such a meeting and the fellowship of the Convocation last year surpassed that of any previous meeting. Mr. Porter has offered us the same rates, $2.00 a day for board and room, and we hope that every Congregational minister in Florida will be there, and we would enjoy it if the brethren would bring their wives also.

Dates—
Beginning in the evening of October 1st, and extending through breakfast on Thursday, October 4th. It is hoped that all will remain through, that there may be no loss of fellowship and interest to the end.

Program—

Rev. Enoch F. Bell, D. D., Editorial Secretary of the American Board is to be our guest speaker and leader of the seminar discussion this year. Dr. Bell has been the able editor for the American Board for a number of years and is the oldest secretary in point of service. He has chosen for the subject of his addresses, and for the seminar, the following: "An Editor Looks at Modern Missions," with the following sub-topics: 1. "Modern Missions and Social Action;" 2. "Modern Missions and World Peace;" 3 "Modern Missions and Evangelism;" 4. "Modern Missions and the Printed Page," (or publications, publicity, etc.) 5. "Modern Missions and Administration."

For the secondary series, the committee has asked Dr. Gillette to conduct a series under the general topic "Our Fellowship in Service," in which series there will be the participation of several, treating of very practical and pertinent subjects, such as "The Vital Values of the General Council;" "The Preaching Mission;" "Our Fellowship with the Youth of our Churches," led by Miss Coghill. There will be problems of missionary promotion with plans for the visit of Secretary Donald Adams of the Layman's Committee. Rev. Frederick Hold will give an account of Summer School experiences at Chicago. There will also be a luncheon and meeting of the directors of the State Conference. All of these will indicate an interesting, vital and inspiring Convocation. FRANK ATKINSON.

LOADED.

At the close of our revival at Pleasant Ridge (Randolph) August 31st, the pastor and his family were very generously remembered by the good people of this church and community. Among the many things brought were flour, lard, sugar, canned goods, fruits and many other articles too numerous to mention. Our car was loaded to its capacity, though it seemed glad with us to bring its good load home.

The Pleasant Ridge people are a mighty good people to serve. We hope and pray that the Lord will supply all their needs according to His riches in glory through Jesus Christ our Saviour. J. FRANK APPLE.

OXFORD BIBLES for EVERY NEED

"The Oxford Bible is the Bible par excellence of the world"

THE HOME BIBLE

A Family Bible in Handy Size

An extra large type Oxford Text Bible, containing also, a family register and 12 beautifully colored maps. Size 9 x 5½ inches.

Specimen of Type

16 The LORD is King for ever and ever: the heathen are perished out

- Nos. 01600 Superior Cloth, round corners and red edges $2.75
- 01603 French Morocco, limp, round corners, red under gold edges, head-band, book-mark $4.75

The JUNIOR'S Bible

Self-Pronouncing

With 4,000 Questions and Answers, carefully selected "Aids to Bible Study," 16 beautifully colored and 15 black full-page illustrations, 6 colored maps and a presentation page. Children may readily pronounce correctly difficult Scripture names, as this Bible is self-pronouncing. Size 7 x 4¾ x 1¼ inches.

Type in Junior's Bible

2 Take the sum of all the of the children of Is'ra-el, years old and upward, thro

- No. 1815 French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges, headbands and book-mark. Make some child happy with one of these fine Bibles $2.95

Child's ILLUSTRATED Bible

The beautifully colored illustrations in this new Bible are a delight to the children. It has clear, readable type and yet it measures only 5¾ x 3¾ inches.

Specimen of Type

My soul longeth, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the Lord: my heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God.

- No. 02112. French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, gold edges $2.50

Pocket REFERENCE Bible

Has over 50,000 center column references. Measures only 6¼ x 4½ inches. (A splendid gift for a young lady.)

Specimen of Type

9 Behold, O God our shield, and look upon the face of thine anointed.

- No. 07523x French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges $3.25

Concordance Edition

Type and size as No. 07523x, but with a Concordance, subject index and dictionary of Scripture names. An excellent edition for students and Christian workers No. 03272x $5.00

OUR LEADER Oxford Concordance Bible

Self-Pronouncing

This beautiful Oxford India paper edition is indeed the ideal Bible for the student, preacher and evangelist. Each proper name and difficult word is divided into syllables and accented, and though printed with large clear type, the volume measures only 8½ x 5½ x 1½ inches.

Specimen of Type

8 ¶ 'Jō-hōi'-ā-chin was 6 years old when he began t

- No. 03671x. Fine Grain Morocco leather, overlapping cover, leather lined to edge, silk round corners, red under edges, silk

A UNIQUE GIFT BIBLE

With Basket Weave Binding

The Antique brown calf leather binding has a basket-weave grain, and button clasp. Has overlapping cover, art silk lined, with red under gold edges. With references. Printed on Oxford India paper. Type as Pocket Reference Bible. $5.50

No. 03255x

- As No. 03255x, with concordance. No. 03276x $6.50

Oxford TEACH

Have over 50,000 center column, 300 double-column pages of up-to-date helps, conveniently arranged in alphabetical order. Also 32 full-page illustrations, and an indexed atlas of the Bible with 15 beautifully colored maps of Bible lands.

Easy-to-Read-Edition

Size 7¼ x 5 x 1¼ inches

Specimen of Type

14 Like sheep they are laid in grave; death shall feed on th

- Nos. 04453. French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, round corners and red under gold edges. A durable and hand-some Bible $4.35

Oxford India Paper Edition

Only one inch thick.

- 0773x. French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges, headbands and book-mark. A beautiful gift edition $7.00

RED LETTER Edition

Same size and type as style No. 04453, with same references and helps, but with all the words of Jesus Christ printed in red. White paper edition No. 05453. French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges $5.00

MISSIONS
 REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary

CHRIST AND THE NEW ORDER.

Bishop George Craig Stewart of Chicago has not drawn too keenly the alternatives in the following declaration:

"Christ or Lenin—Christianity or atheistic communism—thus Generalissimo Chiang-Kai-Chek views the critical situation in China. He is not alone. It is the crisis in every nation; either a Christian order of society based upon the infinite worth to God of every individual, and a brotherhood of man realized because the incarnate God Jesus Christ is Son of Man and brother to all; or class warfare based upon a mechanistic conception of life, a deterministic theory of history, an utter degradation of man and a complete denial of God."

Because of this alternative Bishop Stewart calls to our attention the importance and the need of the Laymen's Missionary movement in these words:

"In such an hour the Laymen's Missionary Movement is a rallying cry to Jesus Christ and His good news of God and man to a world which He seeks to win through the faithfulness of His disciples; a world which needs Him and needs Him badly and quickly."

Pastors and laymen can and should bear these facts in mind in their preparation for Men and Missions Sunday, November 18, 1934. Speaking of the program and the service, the chairman of the Movement says:

"These programs for Men and Missions Sunday, and the Community Men's Dinners to be held on Thursday, November 15, or another convenient date, are designated to be educational and inspirational. Every pastor is asked to preach a sermon suited to the purpose of this observance.

Where the order of service permits have a layman make a four-minute address at the morning service and also at the Sunday School assembly and the men's class.

A missionary hymn by a male quartet or chorus is always appropriate. Special advertising and telephoning will be helpful. Use the newspapers."

Is your pastor planning for Men and Missions Sunday? Some of our pastors are, we know.

J. O. A.

MISSIONARY OFFERINGS.

WEEK ENDING SEPTEMBER 15, 1934.

Sunday Schools.

Previously acknowledged since September 1, 1934 .....	$ 57.16
Hopedale, Burlington, N. C. ....	1.00
Linville, Va. ....	4.36
Mayland, Broadway, Va. ....	1.00
Whistler's Chapel, Quicksburg, Va. ....	.50
Mt. Auburn, Manson, N. C. ....	3.00
Holland, Va. ....	5.00
Henderson, N. C. ....	2.80
Zion, Sanford, N. C. ....	1.24
Morrisville, N. C. ....	2.40
Leaksville, Luray, Va. ....	1.67
United Christian, Lynchburg, Va. ....	10.61
Spring Hill, Waverly, Va. ....	.81
Union Grove, Seagrove, N. C. ....	.51
Total .....	92.06

Individuals and Churches.

Previously acknowledged .....	38.42
Morrisville, N. C. ....	.50

Piney Plain, Raleigh, N. C. ....	5.35
Ebenezer, Morrisville, N. C. ....	4.00
Total .....	48.27

Specials.

Previously acknowledged .....	28.50
Mrs. Siddle Boozer, Ohatchee, Ala. ....	1.00
Miss Anna Jim Boozer, Ohatchee, Ala. ....	1.00
Total .....	30.50

Coin Card Offerings.

Previously acknowledged .....	4.00
Mt. Auburn S. S., Class No. 2, Manson, N. C. ....	1.00
Total .....	5.00

Summary.

Previously acknowledged since September 1, 1934 .....	128.08
Total offerings week ending September 15, 1934 .....	47.75
Total to date .....	175.83

J. O. ATKINSON, Sec'y.

A ONE-MAN MISSION.

By MISS D. P. CUSHING, News Editor.

A one-man mission—that's Rev. Frank Cary of Otaru, Japan, who managed to get born in the U. S. A., but aside from that important event and a few collegiate years at Amherst and Oberlin, he has spent his whole life with and for the Japanese. He is another "son of", for his father was Dr. Otis Cary, for forty-two years in Japan. The name of Cary stands high in the missionary annals of the Kingdom of the Rising Sun.

Christianity has planted itself more or less successfully in the great cities of Japan whose names are familiar to us: Yokohama, Tokyo, Osaka and Kyoto, but the smaller cities and the rural districts are still almost virgin fields. In one such smaller city, with an immigrant problem of its own, Frank Cary has been working shoulder to shoulder with his Japanese colleagues. He tours the country, and also aids in superintending the churches, and organizes and fosters student clubs. One such group has been named the "Pilgrim's Club," and last year observed its tenth birthday anniversary with a membership roll of 180. Many fine Christian men have gone out from this club.

The interruptions that come to an "all round" missionary like Frank Cary, are legion. If he tries to pound out a letter home on his typewriter he will probably be interrupted a dozen times, including appeals for work and many other requests for advice and assistance. Unemployment and business depression have struck hard at Japan during the past year or so. Mr. Cary has helped in every way possible to ease the situation in Otaru but, he says, "It is disheartening to feel that any relief we give is only superficial."

"People today in Japan," says Mr. Cary, "are talking rural problems." The pastors of the Christian churches are taking an active interest in work along this line. Late last spring a disastrous fire broke out in Hakodate and destroyed for the third time in 35 years the little Kumiai church. Mr. Cary was one of the first from the outside to reach the stricken city. Later he was active in securing aid for the members of the church who had lost everything except what they could gather in their hands.

OUR MISSIONARY YEAR.

Our Southern Convention missionary year, financially, closes with August 31st, begins with September 1st, each year. It is gratifying to report that while we have not reached the high level of years of plenty, we have, at least, started upgrade again, happily and hopefully. The Mission Secretary reports that while the missionary offerings through its office, from September 1, 1932, to August 31, 1933, were $14,396.50, the offerings from September 1, 1933, to August 31, 1934, were $16,680.05, thus showing an increase for the year over that of the previous year of $2,283.55. Our average for ten years prior to last year was something over $20,000.00 per year, and so while we have started on the upgrade and the hopeful increase, we have not yet reached the average. With conditions improving and with the prospect before us of achievement for Christ and the Church, the increase should double that of the past year, and thus bring us to a ten year average at the close of the year, August 31, 1935. When it is recalled that our work principally has been that of paying debts that were contracted by our mission churches in times of plenty, and keeping mission points going already planted, this is a commendable increase. Debt paying, and the discharge of obligations, are not a very powerful dynamic in the matter of voluntary contributions. When there are new enterprises with prospects and privileges and promises looming before one, it is easy to secure funds.

Let it be said in passing that we have never known a single missionary venture to be made at home or abroad but that there were those somewhere to criticize and to find fault. Members in the churches and those who have church privileges are usually the quickest to criticize. Many feel that any venture, while yet small, is a failure. While the missionary work is a work undertaken for the good it can do, even many church members, some members of Mission Boards, and pastors, are always inquiring what are we getting out of it. This writer has never seen a missionary work started and carried on in a most needy and destitute place, yet, however, much good it is doing for the relief of the needy and the destitute, but that there were those who were declaring that many other places would have been more opportune, and there were greater privileges elsewhere and we could have invested our money somewhere else with so much greater results, etc.

In our home missionary work this year, we have most encouraging reports from Rev. and Mrs. R. T. Grissom, our workers in Carroll County, Va., who have thrown their very lives and all their Christian zeal into the work of helping to lift whole communities by the power of the gospel. There are those, of course, who naturally say "we could do more elsewhere." So be it! Had we started elsewhere, those same individuals would possibly be saying, "they could have accomplished more good at some other place."

Rev. W. T. Scott, our earnest and capable pastor at Winston-Salem, has labored with intelligence and zeal, having put on a most constructive program—having built, completed and dedicated a house of worship the past year and having brought together a most loyal and faithful group of workers and a growing church membership in North Carolina's biggest city. He may not have accomplished much in the eyes of some others where big things are done in a few days and, of course, there are those who feel that the Home Mission Board should go elsewhere and do a better work, but, thank God, there are those who, acting in the best light and leadership before them, are willing to plant, and to water, and to stand by even in the face of doubt, hesitancy and criticism until a work is established for church and for God.

We have never built as large a church, nor as quickly, at Ocean View as we might have built possibly, nor as some others would have built, nor as we ourselves could have built elsewhere, maybe, but somehow at sometime in the past we were led to start a work there. The best report of the years of our work there came in from the efforts of last year. No, the work is not perfect, is not complete, is not spectacular, but it is a work done to help a consecrated group of faithful and loyal self-denying men and women who wish a church established that the gospel may be preached to those who come and go to and from this resort by the sea. Yes, we might have begun a work elsewhere that would have grown faster, that would have paid back more in cash and possibly shown larger returns in membership. And so there are those who are ready to criticize and to hold aloof and to say "we had better spent our money elsewhere." However, having begun, there is no turning back as long as there is an opportunity, an open door and a great privilege. We should bear in mind the words of Paul who said: "A great door and effectual is opened unto me, and there are many adversaries." Paul did not say he would give up because there were adversaries, but would press on through the open door. And so of all mission money that is expended and of all mission efforts that are begun, this writer repeats that he never saw a work begun for God and righteousness but that there were those who were ready to criticize and to declare that "money could better spent elsewhere."

Our mission work the past year has helped in keeping churches opened that in all probability would have closed before the year was gone, and has prevented missionaries from being called home who would have had to come. And so we face the new year regretting that so little was accomplished, but rejoicing that more was accomplished the past year than in some previous years, and that through faith we will enter the open door seeking to give the gospel of the Son of God to those who are in need and to those who perish without it. J. O. A.

"WHY MISSIONS ANYWAY?"

By DR. WILLIAM A. HILL, of New York.

The missionary enterprise was born in the heart of a loving God and became regnant in the life and teachings of Jesus Christ. The Bible is a missionary book. The Old Testament reveals the missionary motive and the New Testament is essentially a missionary document. The birth of Christian Missions is coincident with the birth of Christianity. The emphasis on missions is not a corollary of religious education; it is fundamentally at the heart of religious education. It is not a later acquisition to the New Testament, but an elemental part of it.

In the local church, distinctions are sometimes drawn which seem to make it possible that a man can be a Christian and yet be non-missionary. This is impossible, because the two are mutually exclusive. It is a fundamental error to think of missions as an aspect of religious or social education because it is comprehensive of them. Any definition of missions that is less inclusive is not in accordance with the New Testament emphasis and program. A wise Christian statesman once said, "Our interest in missions measures our Christian character; our knowledge of missions measures our Christian efficiency."

Is it possible to delete missions from the program of the Christian church as something irrelevant or secondary? No, not without deleting the choicest parts of the New Testament itself. Suppose we delete missions from the New Testament. We would take out the Sermon on the Mount; the prayer in Gethsemane; the Lord's Prayer; the Great Commission; such parables as the Prodigal Son, the Good Samaritan, and others. We would take out the Book of Acts, because it is the record of the missionary outreach. We would have to remove the Epistles because they are letters of missionaries to the churches back home. Other choice sections of the New Testament would have to be removed and we would have left not only a warped, but an untrue picture of Jesus' life, his message and his comprehensive love for men, women and children everywhere.

This relationship is set forth admirably in the following paragraph: "Christianity is fundamentally missionary. By this we mean that the missionary ingredient is an original, essential, necessary and indispensable major element in it; that the missionary spirit is no off-shoot or by-product, but belongs to the very central core of our religion; that Christianity is not itself without it; the professing Christian who does not see and feel this, has yet to learn what real Christianity is."

"IN LANDS ACROSS THE SEA."

By DR. WM. W. REID, of New York, N. Y.

To take a little child from an African heathen kraal; to teach him the three r's, and something of the Heavenly Father's love; to teach him to think clean, to live clean; to lead him step by step until he faces the world with Christian courage and strength, until he establishes a Christian home that becomes the ideal of his fellow villagers: That is what I do when I give to Foreign Missions through my Church!

So to love the backward races that we see beneath dirt and sores and ugliness the beauty that God meant to be in their lives; to replace that dirt and ugliness with the smile that comes with a knowledge of God and of His kindly world; to heal and develop that body and soul that they become a fit temple for man and for God: That is what I do when I give to Foreign Missions through my church!

To school the son of a witch doctor so that his hand becomes that of a skilled surgeon; to school the son of a fetish priest so that he becomes an apostle of Christ to his own people; to school the son of a Chinese classical scholar so that he becomes a professor of modern science of philosophy; to school the son of an outcast thief so that he becomes mighty in power for a righteous cause: That is what I do when I give to Foreign Missions through my church!

To send illiterate outcast villagers, to men busy with the gathering of gold in city marts, to scholarly Moslems, Hindus, Buddhists, Confucianists, to myriad thousands unsatisfied of heart; to send them Life in the person of the missionary living and serving in the village; through the missionary to point them to the Great Master Life, Jesus Christ Our Saviour, Their Saviour: That is what I do when I give to Foreign Missions through my church!

To gather little groups of believers into churches; to help support and administer those churches until they grow in strength and self-dependence; to gradually withdraw from their control as they in turn become self-governing, self-supporting, self-propagating; to stand by them as they attempt to build Christian civilization, with friendly counsel, with material aid when required, and with the gift of our choicest sons and daughters: That is what I do when I give to Foreign Missions through my church!

To take the serf and peon, "chattel to be sold with the land," to lift his yoke and keep him on the holy soil as master tiller and owner and lover of the earth under God; to teach him to make waste deserts yield harvests to the glory of the Master Gardener and to the appeasing of the hunger of the world's underfed: That is what I do when I give to Foreign Missions through my church!

NEWS ITEMS.

At 1 o'clock on the afternoon of Wednesday, March 12th, thirty-four members of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the Rosemont Christian Church gathered at the home of Mrs. L. C. Ferebee, and were served with a most attractive and delicious luncheon, which was greatly enjoyed by all present.

At 2 o'clock the president, Mrs. O. S. Mills, called the meeting to order, and the hymn, "Work For the Night is Coming" was sung, followed by a prayer by Mrs. Mills.

After a short session of business, during which mite boxes were opened, furnishing an offering of $26.00, and $5.40 in dues, the meeting was turned over to the Superintendent of Spiritual Life, Mrs. H. E. Roane.

This program consisted of a reading and exposition of a portion of Scripture by Mrs. H. R. Morrison, a solo sung by Mrs. T. M. Rust, accompanied by Mrs. J. F. Morgan, and a series of short prayers in which every member took part.

Mrs. Morgan gave a very interesting and inspiring synopsis of the last chapter of the Study book, "The Challenge of Russia."

This meeting was dismissed by repeating the Lord's Prayer in unison.

They have at later meetings been taking up the study of the book, "The Never Failing Light."

This society takes much pride in being able to raise their apportionment entirely by free-will offerings.

Mrs. H. C. Hedly is the secretary of this group of loyal workers.

The Liberty Spring Woman's Missionary Society has been busy under the leadership of Mrs. R. E. Parker. They have their society divided into circles and each group is doing a fine work. Circle No. 2 gave a lawn party Thursday evening, August 2nd on the lawn of the church, where many good things were offered for sale. At 8 o'clock the crowd gathered in the church for a musical program, followed by an address by Rev. R. A. Whitten of Portsmouth Christian Church. Mr. Whitten gave a very inspiring address, his subject being, "A Handful of Dust."

A nice sum was realized and a fine social time was enjoyed.

The North Carolina Woman's Missionary Conference meets with the First Christian Church, Greensboro, N. C., on Thursday, Oct. 18, 1934.

MRS. C. H. ROWLAND, Pres.,
MRS. W. P. LAWRENCE, Sec.

Greensboro, N. C.
Sept. 17, 1934.

NOTICE.

The Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference will meet with the Liberty Springs Christian Church, Friday, October 5th. Morning session will open at 10:00 o'clock.

A most cordial invitation is extended our ministers, and friends of the conference. Each society is urged to exert every possible effort to make this meeting the best in our history.

MRS. L. W. STAGG,
Secretary.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

HOW CAN YOUTH HELP BUILD A NEW COMMUNITY?

Youth can help build a new community by identifying itself with the manifold activities characteristic of such a community. In the first place, youth should realize that there is a similarity of temperament between itself and the community. Both are in the stage of development where enthusiasm, indefatigable energy, and idealism are the dynamic forces of existence. The community, too, is in the period of youth, and the young people in the community feel that congeniality of spirit, that identity of character which links them to the community. They feel that they are growing up with the community and that the welfare of it will be a factor in their happiness while living in it.

With the foundation of enthusiasm and idealism to start with, the youth of the community can help build it up by supporting the forces of law and order, there will be a greater degree of safety of life and property. The result will be a growing reputation of the community and more law-abiding citizens will want to make their homes in that peaceful place. A disrespect for law will attract disreputable people, and even gangsters, and racketeers, while a respect for law will discourage such denizens in the community. Thus the establishment of law and order is a basic requisite for the growth of a community and by the cooperation of youth great help will be obtained in such activities.

Speaking of cooperation—isn't that the real necessity after all—helping others to carry out their plans? You might say, "There is often a misunderstanding between the older and the younger generation." Yes, youth is apt to be impulsive, impetuous, and headstrong while the older people are apt to be overcautious, and not abreast with the spirit of modern progress. Youth can thereby be of great help by cooperation with the other elements of the community in a spirit of fraternity, in a common purpose, with a desire to advance the public welfare and in a Christ-like way which will in the future make them proud that they had a share in the building up of the community.

Another step and one which is probably the most important of all is building one's character. Character is a matter of growth, a process of slow development. However, it is a permanent possession of each of us—the one and only thing we shall take with us to the other side.

Life was given for the development of a Christ-like character. This alone will withstand the shocks of time, the wrecks of the world, the terrors of death, and will determine for us the weal or woe of Eternity.

Our greatest fault, however, is procrastination. Efforts toward definite achievements are postponed too long. We put off until tomorrow that which can be done today.

So from now on let us comply with the N. R. A. as we might say, stop delaying and do our part, for as we all know two-thirds of promotion is motion. The paths that hold our feet are determined by the wants that control our hearts.

Yesterday is gone—forget it. Tomorrow has not come—don't worry about it. Today is here—use it.

VIRGINIA WILKINS.

INSTITUTE FOR YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORKERS.

The Executive Committee of the Eastern Virginia Youth Fellowship met in Suffolk last Sunday afternoon to plan the work for the coming year. Goals that have been voted by the Fellowship in session last summer were distributed among the various superintendents and workers so that someone would be responsible for the accomplishment of each thing voted.

A fine forward step was made by these young people when they planned for an Institute for Young People's Workers to be held Sunday afternoon, October 21st at Suffolk Christian Church. All presidents of young people's societies, superintendents of departments, teachers, pastors, and other young people's workers will be invited to attend this meeting. A program will be arranged so as to give definite information about things that are to be done and plans for their accomplishment. These young people mean business and are eager to go forward in the work of the Church.

ARE YOU INTERESTED?

Are you interested in the work the Board of Christian Education of the Southern Convention is doing. Do you think it worthwhile to give Bibles to our Sunday school children on their tenth birthday? Should the young people be encouraged in their work of Youth Fellowship, Christian Endeavor and Missions? Do we need more Leadership Training Schools? Would Vacation Bible Schools be of value for boys and girls? Is it important to aid Sunday schools in their religious educational task?

If you are interested in these things and think they are worth the doing, then please do not forget that it is very important to receive an offering on Rally Day or some other time and send it to Mr. C. H. Stephenson, 121 Fayetteville Street, Raleigh, N. C., so the Board of Christian Education can continue to do the type of work mentioned above.

It has been three years since we asked for an offering. We ask for only one offering this year. It does seem that every Sunday school and Christian Endeavor Society could make one rather generous offering for the support of religious education. Here's hoping that no one will fail.

TEA FOR TWO.

By CAROLYN WELLS.

The beetle was blind,
And the bat was blinder;
And they went to take tea
With the Scissors grinder.
The Scissors grinder had gone away
Across the ocean to spend the day,
But he'd tied his bell to the grapevine swing—
The Bat and the Beetle heard it ring,
And neither the Beetle nor Bat could see
Why no one offered them any tea.
So, polite and patient, they're waiting yet
For the cup of tea they expect to get.

—The Howe First Reader.

Every preparation you make for Tomorrow is a preparation for every Tomorrow that follows it.—Milton Lee.

WORTH WHILE AIMS FOR THE YEAR.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR SEPT. 30, 1934

Phil. 3:13, 14.

Planning this Meeting:—The Program Committee should consider the relationship of this topic to the one following. This topic calls for a discussion of the purpose of your program, the following one for commitment to the task. The leader will choose the plan which will mean most in your own group. A possibility is:

It is suggested that each local young people's group work its own "Statement of Christian Conviction," or a "Christian Code" including the important things you believe, and purpose to do as Christians, what you see as your task as a part of the movement "Christian Youth Building a New World." It will take more than one meeting to do this well. Those who are interested may secure from the Board of Christian Education, 505 S. Main Street, Norfolk, Virginia, copy of a Defiance Summer School report which shows what a group of young people discovered when they conducted a similar discussion at Summer School. (For five weeks this page has carried similar reports which were made by young people at Elon Summer School and Eastern Virginia Youth Fellowship. These reports are, also, in the office of the Board of Christian Education.)

Worship Service—The pledge or purpose of your society may be the basis of a well-planned worship service. If you are working out your Statement of Purpose at this meeting, a leader may plan the worship service at the close of the hour, and with hymns and prayers which will turn your thoughts Godward, also interpret the thoughts upon which you agree as expressions of worth-while aims.

TOPIC THOUGHTS.

"Have you a reason for existence?"

Study pages 4-7 "A Program Guide for Young People," Steck. Can a young people's society be successful without a known purpose? What does your group consider the essentials of a worth-while purpose? Discuss the following:

A Worth-while purpose will be one which will link us with young people of other churches. This means, for us, that:

- (a) We should accept a pledge which is worked out and used by many societies.
- (b) We should include in our pledge or purpose those things for which our denomination stands.
- (c) We should include in our statement of purpose something about "Christian Youth Building a New World," the theme accepted by many denominations for a concerted youth movement during the coming years. This means that we must think about what we want to do about building:

A New Person
A New Home
A New Church
A New Community
A New Nation
A New World

What does our aim include which will lead us to share in building a new world?

Checking up on one's purpose is a fruitful procedure. The same is true of a society. You will accomplish little more than you set out purposefully to do. It is well to begin the year, as well as to close it, with a frank inventory of just what it is all about, what your purpose is, and how much you are doing to achieve it.

—Adapted from Sunday School Herald.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

ISAIAH COUNSELS RULERS.

LESSON XIII—SEPTEMBER 23, 1934.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee; because he trusteth in thee."—Isaiah 26:3.

LESSON TEXT: Isaiah, chapters 7, 31, 36, 37. (Verses printed 37:5-11, 14-20.)

Isaiah was a great man. He was educated, cultured, and probably well-to-do. He was patriotic and courageous. He had a profound insight into the will and ways of God, and an intelligent understanding of the men and movements of his time. He was a statesman in the finest sense of the term. He was a counselor to kings, and he exerted a profound and powerful influence in the national life. Insofar as the rulers and the nation followed his counsel, they prospered; whenever they rejected it, they paid the penalty of their disregard of the word of the Lord, as it came to them by the mouth of His chosen servant.

Those who say that a preacher should keep out of politics will do well to consider Isaiah. He was constantly getting into politics. Indeed the kings of Judah frequently invited him to help them out. He was one of the first "Brain-Trusters" who counseled with rulers concerning the national issues in national emergencies. One wishes that those who sit in the councils of the nations in modern times might always be guided by the same spiritual insight, and dominated by the same unselfish interest. Judged by Isaiah's character and conduct, many men in public life today are petty politicians rather than statesmen.

Those who are constantly saying that the security of our nation, or any nation is to be found in the "largest navy" or the "biggest army" or in "secret treaties" will also do well to consider Isaiah's words. That was the temptation in his day. Indeed he had to face that issue again and again. There were those who wanted to make alliances with Egypt, so that they might thereby increase Judah's fighting forces as well as instruments of war, but Isaiah told them bluntly that the security of the nation could not thus be guaranteed. The character of the people and the ideals and policy of the nation were the only permanent security.

Chapter seven of today's lesson tells how, when Syria and Israel in alliance came up to attack Jerusalem, Isaiah boldly proclaimed that there was no occasion for fear, for both nations were already on the way to dissolution, and their alliance was already giving evidences of breaking up. His words were fulfilled literally.

Chapter thirty-one, as has already been suggested, showed the folly of Judah entering into any alliance with Egypt. Isaiah showed that Egypt was depending frankly upon material force and not upon national integrity, and that therefore nothing was to be gained in an alliance. He also predicted that Assyria would be defeated, and defeated by a much smaller nation, which was fulfilled.

Chapters thirty-six and thirty-seven as the remainder of today's lesson show Isaiah's sound judgment and wide-reaching influence. Sennacherib, king of Assyria had marched into Judah and had captured and laid waste her defenced cities. He sent his representative to Jerusalem to king Hezekiah and demanded a large tribute as the price of leaving Jerusalem alone. In a way that was calculated to awaken and quicken a sense of fear in the leaders of Jerusalem he not only reminded them of his power, but he also reminded them that the gods of the people he had already conquered had not been able to save them. He further reminded them that their God would not be able to do anything about it, and therefore he summoned them to yield to his demands, and to pay tribute. It was good psychology but it was blasphemy of the first rank. The same argument is still used today on individuals and on nations. And there is a powerful appeal in it. Somehow or other folks feel that if they are Christians or members of the church they will not suffer or lose money or have hardships. And many people who have passed through hard experiences have lost their faith in the living God, and have either no god, or have gone off into some cult or ism that promises better things.

Hezekiah was in a panic, and turned to Isaiah for counsel and advice. It might be that some of America's ministers might be able to give her leaders some helpful suggestions as concerning national policies and programs and "New Deals". These so-called impractical preachers might be able to make a few suggestions, which, if followed, would lead us out of the morass in which we find ourselves. For men are beginning to feel that fundamentally our problem is not economic but moral and spiritual. As Secretary Wallace recently said, "Enduring social transformation such as the New Deal seeks is impossible of realization without changed human hearts."

Isaiah told Hezekiah that he need have no fear. He said that Sennacherib would have to return to his own land to defend it against the attack of invaders. But when Hezekiah again received messengers from Sennacherib he was again in a panic. He went into the House of the Lord, spread out the letter before the Lord, and in impassioned and sincere language, prayed for deliverance. As is so many times the case the answer to prayer came through a man. In some unknown way, Isaiah knew of Hezekiah's prayer, sent unto him, and told him that insignificant little Judah, or rather Jerusalem, would laugh at the great Assyria, and would see the destruction of her great army. True to his prediction, the Assyrian army was smitten in some way by the Lord, a host was killed, and the remainder returned to Assyria. Sennacherib himself was killed while worshipping, by his own sons.

It is a good thing to pray when in trouble. Prayer helps us to see things straight and to see them whole. Prayer is an antidote to fear. Fear releases inner resources that give us the victory. Prayer wields unseen power in the lives of others. Prayer gives the victory that overcomes the world. Of course prayer does not always avert the disaster. Prayer does not guarantee immunity. But Prayer does supply that which makes us able to bear what must be borne and to do that which must be done.

SOME TEACHING POINTS.

1. Armaments and alliances are no substitute for godliness.
2. Nations need statesmen rather than politicians.
3. As a rule the problems of a nation usually go back to the moral and spiritual factors.
4. So-called impractical idealists may have practical suggestions in national emergencies.
5. God uses nations to work out His purposes.
6. Numbers are not of primary importance in the purpose and plans of God.
7. Sensible men pray in the crises of life.
8. God answers prayer both directly and indirectly through others.
9. The blasphemous life sooner or later brings about its own downfall.

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.
Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.

These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. It combines with the Concordance, Subject-Index, Scripture Proper Names, etc. The 12 Maps have been carefully revised and are beautifully colored. In making orders, give the number and price.

135—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold. $3.00

India Paper Edition, Only 16-16 of an inch thick.

133X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold, $4.00

SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS' BIBLE.

Especially made up for gift or reward Bibles for Sunday School scholars, containing a special series of very practical and useful helps and Bible Questions and Answers, etc. Printed on fine white Bible paper; ruby type; pocket size, 3 3/4 x 5 3/4 inches, and 1 inch thick, with 31 full-page illustrations in sepia. All bindings are black.

Ruby Type, Size 3 3/4 x 5 3/4 Inches, and 1 Inch Thick.

65—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold; 6 colored maps .....$2.50

AUTHORIZED VERSION.

RED LETTER TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Brevier Type (8 vo.), Self-Pronouncing, Size 5 3/4 x 8 3/4 Inches and 1 3/4 Inches Thick.

Containing the Bible, with full references. The words of Christ in the New Testament are printed in red; other parts of the book are printed in black. With Concise Bible Dictionary, combined Concordance, and 12 indexed maps.

7852—Genuine Leather, Lavant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold .....$4.75

RED-LETTER EDITION.

With All the Words of Christ in the New Testament Printed in Red.

1282—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit round corners, red under gold edges, register and headbands; title stamped on side and back in pure gold .....$3.25

60—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, Sunday School Scholars' Bible, stamped in pure gold on cover, no illustrations; special book for Sunday Schools .....96c

Any of the above Bibles sent postpaid. Address
THE CHRISTIAN SUN
1536 East Broad Street Richmond, Virginia

FAMILY ALTAR
 CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy

MONDAY.

MY LORD AND MY GOD.

"Grow in grace and in the knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ."—II Peter 3:18.

"Give unto the Lord glory due unto his name: bring an offering and come before him: worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness."—I Chron. 16:29.

God is all in all; and, if we cannot appreciate and worship him in all things, we only worship a part of Him. One of the main appeals of the Holy Spirit is that we grow in grace and the beauty of holiness, and if we will give thought and study to all things we will love more the beautiful everywhere and will see God more in all things and thereby make our daily praises unto Him.

Prayer—O Lord, make our lives a proof of Thy principles in the world and that life is worth living. This we ask for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

ABOVE GOD.

"Verily I say unto you, till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled."—Matt. 5:18.

Lock slightly upon nothing that thou hast to do, nor regard not thyself too high to help any person, but look rather upon Him who commands our work and hath made all men His, and who, when He pleases, can accomplish his glory and our perfection through the most trifling things.

When a person thinks his duty is beneath him, he places himself above God, for He deals with the same duty.

Prayer—Our Father, teach us our work, and our place, and the regard we are to have for every one else of Thy children, and forbid that we shall ever offend them or Thee. This we ask for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

YOUR ATMOSPHERE.

"Dearly beloved, . . . have your behaviour seemly . . . that they may by your good works, which they shall behold, glorify God in the day of visitation."—I Peter 2:12.

There is an old adage that says, "beware, to whom you speak, of whom you speak, how, when and where."

Thoughts and words travel just as God's life travels. They do not travel like an individual does, but they travel like the atmosphere does.

You breathe your spiritual life as you do your breath, you take it in from anywhere and you breathe it out to anywhere, where others breathe it in. Not only those who are present receive it, but others breathe it in, for it permeates space, and all live in it and receive from it according to their unfoldment. What sort of atmosphere are you giving?

Prayer—Dear Father, in heaven, earth hath a great many joys. Teach us to transplant them in joys of heaven, to enoble them through Thy love and to life them above the earthly mind and earthly things. This we ask for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

DOING WELL.

"And whosoever shall give to drink into one of these little ones a cup of cold water only in the name of a disciple, verily I say unto you, he shall in no wise lose his reward."—Matt. 10:42.

"Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed."—II Timothy 2:15.

God gives us all some work to do, if not great deeds, then small ones, and even so small a thing as a glass of water to a thirsty one has its meaning in goodness and is not without His notice. Yes, less than that, —a word of advice, something lent, a little vexation patiently borne, a fault of the thoughtlessness of another repaired without his knowledge. God recompenses it all a thousand fold.

Prayer—Our Father of love and blessing: We are so imperfect, but help us to strive to do well until the day of Thine own when all shall not only be well but perfect. This we ask for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"The first born of the poor shall feed, and the needy shall lie down in safety."—Isa. 44:30.

"Did not God above them choose that are poor . . . to be rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom, which he promised to them that love Him."—Jos. 2:5.

There are a great many things which God, in His infinite wisdom, gives to the poor by way of compensation in life, which the wealthy never attain or know about. They are heart offerings, they are deeds that win. They are freedom from earthly cares, they are crowns daily given to honest labor, they are glories in righteous thinking, they are joys in service to others, they are pleasures in little deeds of kindness, they are little scepters that rule the world for God, and pave the way for heaven.

Prayer—O Lord, our God, give unto us contentment in whatever state we are. Show us today how to covet the best gifts and to find the excellent way in divine wisdom. This we ask for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

CARRY YOUR COUCH.

"Arise, and take up thy bed, and go unto thy house."—Matt. 9:1-8.

The Capernaum paralytic, who had been carried on his mattress by his four devoted friends, lifted the narrow outer stairway to the roof, and lowered at Christ's feet through a hole made in the roof, was miraculously healed by the Saviour. Thereupon, as a proof of the cure, he who had come borne on his bed was bidden himself to roll up the mattress and trudge manfully off with it to his house.

That is a hint for every converted sinner. We have been sick—oh, how sick—with our wickedness. Now we are to give evidence that we are well again. Now we are to do such things as strong men do, pure men, brave men, upright men, Christian heroes.

The church needs such manifestations of the power of God. The world needs such demonstrations of the worth of religion.

Prayer—Thou hast saved us, blessed Redeemer. Now may we do abundantly the things that Thou hast saved us for.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

SUNDAY.

PUFFED UP.

"Knowledge puffeth up, but love edifieth."—I Cor. 8:1-9.

Knowledge is a good thing, but not knowledge of the puffing-up kind, not knowledge that merely ministers to pride, self-conceit, vanity, obstinacy, and selfishness.

The only kind of knowledge that does not puff up is knowledge mingled with love. For love is humble. Love builds on the true foundation. Love reaches out to all men. Love shares its knowledge. Love realizes that its knowledge came from a God of love.

Puffed-up lives are pricked, some day, with the sword of the Spirit. But built-up lives not only themselves abide, but they build up other lives, and are the strong foundation of society. They are the lives that rest on love.

Prayer—Save us, Thou meek and lowly One, from the folly of pride. And give us enough knowledge to love our brothers and Thee.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

What we think, or what we know, or what we believe, is in the end of little consequence. The only thing of consequence is what we are.—Ruskin.

SUBSCRIBERS TO THE CHRISTIAN SUN

LADIES' PENS, $2.00.

MEN'S PENS—Capitol, $2.50; Mercantile, $2.50; Cardinal, $3.00.

These Pens are of standard make, and will give good service. If you are in need of a Fountain Pen, order from us. Postage paid and Pens guaranteed by the manufacturer.

COMBINATION OFFER—To a new subscriber or for renewal, $2.50, either Gentleman's (Capitol) Pen or Ladies' Pen, with guarantee of manufacturer. And to "Sun" subscribers, not in arrears, any Pen at one-fourth off. Address: THE CHRISTIAN SUN, 1536 EAST BROAD STREET, RICHMOND, VIRGINIA.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

THE VISION SPLENDID.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"In the year that King Uzziah died I saw the Lord sitting upon a throne."—Isa. 6:1.

"When they were fully awake, they saw His glory."—Luke 9:3.

"I was not disobedient to the heavenly vision."—Acts 26:19.

"Where there is no vision the people perish."—Pro. 29:18.

"But he, being full of the Holy Spirit, looked up steadfastly into heaven, and saw the glory of God, and Jesus standing on the right hand of God."—Acts 7:55.

It does not take all these texts to indicate the 'vision splendid'. Either of them will do it. The last of them suffices for our use today. We shall allow the others to be supporting texts as occasion may demand, and truth be emphasized.

They were stoning Stephen to death. The first martyr for Christianity was being made. And Stephen looking up into heaven saw the glory of God, and Jesus standing on His right hand. It was the vision splendid. Without such visions the people perish. Unless pastor, and deacons, and superintendent, and leaders in the church catch something of the vision splendid the church stands still, and fails to serve the spiritual needs of the people as it should. We come here together today, disciples of Jesus and followers of him to catch for ourselves, and our church and community such a vision. And also to prepare ourselves for catching further visions splendid as we go along serving our fellowman, and living the Christian life.

II. The Vision Was Seen Through Pure Eyes. I am hunting for the right word. What I mean is: Stephen, a man full of the Holy Spirit, saw the vision splendid. His eyes were not dimmed by neglect of Christian exercise, nor disobedience to the voice of conscience, nor thoughtlessness toward duty, nor lack of loyalty to his fellow followers of Christ, nor lack of constant prayer and fellowship with God, nor the failure to read and study God's word (for the longest speech on the Scriptures is made here by Stephen), nor for the keeping of bad company, or the failure to be led by the courage of his convictions. People who dim their spiritual eyes by such things never see God! They even make sport of those who with clear and clean eyes do see God. They attend a Christian service and find the singing bunk, and the prayers a babble, and the preaching a farce, and the place itself a prison. They cannot see God!

But on the other hand holy eyes can see God in the handclasp of a neighbor, in an honest effort to praise God in the simplest of singing, and in the poorest of praying, and preaching that is not so wise in worldly wisdom but is a true witness of Christian experience in daily living. I am for an educated ministry, a trained choir, and all the best furnishings of a full rounded worship; but eyes enlightened by the love of God, filled with the Holy Spirit, as our text puts it, is greater than they all.

Spurgeon, one of the world's greatest preachers, preached in a barn of a tabernacle hastily built to provide for the pressing crowds; he had no choir at all; he was never even ordained to the ministry,—he said he was not going to have ecclesiastical superiors lay their empty hands on his empty head; but Spurgeon was filled with the Spirit of God,—so filled with reverence and worship himself that he begat it in the vast congregations that poured in to hear him witness for God. They are still saying about London: You should have heard him read the Psalms, you should have heard him pray, you should have heard the more than six thousand people sing the songs he led them to sing. Spurgeon could see through pure eyes the vision splendid.

May we not covet that in our church? Daily I seek that solitude in prayer which will show me something of the magnitude of God. And I covet for the deacons, superintendents, teachers, and leaders in our church such a vision of God as can come through pure and holy living, and close fellowship with God in prayer and devotion to righteousness. Stephen, a good man, saw the heavens open. There is nothing that takes the place of goodness for seeing God, nor for catching a vision such as God would have his leaders have.

II. The Vision Was Seen Through Open Eyes. It was no idle dream, or passing fancy. He was not asleep, nor was he half asleep. With the seventy judges of his great people condemning him to death; with the whole place filled with students of Jerusalem, and scribes and pharisees of the cloister seeking and using the stones of the temple wall to pound him to death; and with his eyes wide open to the results of the hour, "he looked steadfastly into heaven, and saw the glory of God."

There is nothing anesthetic nor hypnotic about the religion of Jesus Christ. It does not put you to sleep. (A sermon may!) It calls for the best powers one has. It calls for the best brains in a community. It can be well enough understood by the simplest one, and yet all the research of lifelong and painstaking scholarship cannot but touch the hem of its garment. Stephen's eyes were open when he saw the glory of God. He was looking earnestly, eagerly, "steadfastly" into heaven when he saw it. It did not just happen.

I like the sub-text quoted in the outset of this sermon: "When they were fully awake, they saw His glory." You remember the circumstances. Peter, James, and John had been taken up on Mt. Tabor, and Jesus prayed. As he prayed his countenance became glorified, so much so that they fell on a deep sleep. But Jesus awakened them, and when they were fully awake they saw His glory! They were fully-awake-men who saw the vision splendid!

It is ever so. You and I must be fully awake, our eyes must be wide open if we are to see the things for our own lives God wants us to see. Our eyes must be wide open if we are going to see the things for our church he wishes us to see. Our eyes must be fully open if we are going to see the things for the needy world, the trying age, the changing times, which he wishes us to see. The leadership of God is great enough for every age, or any circumstance, and if his people are fully awake they will see his glory and assume the leadership that he offers. He is counting on you.

"Christ has no hands but our hands
To do His work today
He has no feet but our feet
To lead men in His way;

He has no tongue but our tongues
To tell men how He died;
He has no help but our help
To lead men to His side"

III. The Vision Was Seen Through Eager Eyes. There is something about that word 'steadfastly' that shows with what longing Stephen looked for the glory of God. There was a heart-hunger behind the eyes. The deep wells of his soul had been tapped before he saw the glory of God, and Jesus standing on his right hand. It might be summed up in this way: Before the vision splendid was seen there was felt added need; a sacrificial readiness to obey; and earnest, loving, anxious prayer. These three,—and then the glory of God, and Jesus!

One of the prerequisites for seeing the vision splendid is a felt need. Isaiah felt undone, his (Continued on page 14.)

COMMUNION WARE.

Individual Service.

Made in best Silver Plate or Aluminum. Prices low; first-class workmanship and finish.

ALUMINUM.

Aluminum is light in weight, durable, and does not tarnish.

Style No. 50-A.

- Tray No. 2—Interlocking, with 40 plain glasses $7.00
- Tray No. 6—Interlocking, with 35 plain glasses 6.75
- Tray No. 10—Interlocking, with 30 plain glasses 6.50
- Base No. 50-A—Fits Trays 2, 6, or 10..... 2.25
- Cover No. 50-A—Fits Trays 2, 6, or 10..... 2.25
- Bread Plate No. 1—Narrow rim..... 1.60

SILVER-PLATED.

The Silver-plated Ware is of the very highest grade and best finish; heavily plated on nickel base.

- Tray No. 85—Interlocking only, with 36 glasses $22.00
- Base No. 1—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 85.. 11.00
- Cover No. 5—Silver-plated; fits Tray No. 85... 16.00

(For Silver Bread Plates, see under No. 90.)

- Tray No. 90—Interlocking, with 36 plain glasses (this style has broad rim, which is sometimes preferred, due to increased ease of handling) $22.00
- Base No. 2—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 90.. 16.00
- Cover No. 4—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 90. 14.00

- Bread Plate No. 3—Narrow Rim.....$ 9.00
- Bread Plate No. 4—Broad Rim..... 9.00
- Filler—Silver Lined..... 6.00

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street

Richmond, Virginia

Christian Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

School will open here on Sept. 24. Can you imagine the task of fitting up a hundred children to go to school, clothing, shoes, books, tablets, and pencils. Would you like to have our job?

All of our children will be in school except 3 little boys in the "Baby Home."

Our children attend the Consolidated Graded School which is only three blocks from the Orphanage grounds. It is a very happy arrangement and gives our children the same advantage and the same opportunity as any other child in the community. It also gives them an opportunity to mingle with other children and vie with them in their classes as well as on the playground.

When prizes are offered they often come home with the "bacon."

Arrangements have been made for two of our graduates last Spring to enter Elon College this semester.

Remember the little children here with your gifts and your prayers—we need both.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

REPORT FOR SEPTEMBER 20, 1934

Brought forward .....$8,550.48

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

North Carolina and Virginia Conferences:
Greensboro, Palm St. ....	$ 5.77
United Lynchburg .....	9.55
Lebanon .....	.97
Ingram .....	6.00
Howards Chapel .....	1.00
	23.29

Eastern North Carolina Conference:

Mt. Auburn .....	3.00
Damascus .....	1.90
Wentworth .....	9.90
	14.80

Western North Carolina Conference:

Burlington, August .....	18.02
Burlington, September .....	23.25
Ether .....	1.00
Hanks Chapel .....	2.55
Pleasant Ridge .....	2.64
	47.43

Eastern Virginia Conference:

Spring Hill .....	2.10
Franklin .....	9.27
Newport News .....	11.29
Holland .....	5.00
Cypress Chapel .....	5.73
Wakefield .....	1.98
Elm Avenue .....	3.81
Barretts .....	1.47
	40.65

Valley Virginia Central Conference:

Leaksville .....	1.82
Alabama Conference:
Bethany .....	1.00
Georgia and Alabama Conference:
Vanceville .....	1.00

Special Offerings.

Birthday Offering, Porterville Christian Church, Eaton, Ill. ....	1.00
Monticello S. S. Special Collection for singing class .....	3.86
	4.86

Endowments.

L. S. Holt Endowment Fund .....	150.00
Total for the week .....	284.88

Grand total .....$8,835.36

THE VISION SPLENDID.

(Continued from page 13.)

nation undone, God's people undone with the going of his great King Uzziah. Going into the temple with a great heart-hunger he "saw the Lord sitting upon a throne." Isaiah's earthly king had vacated the throne of his nation in death. But for the seeing eyes of Isaiah, in such an hour of extremity he was able to behold an eternal and universal throne occupied by Jehovah Himself.

Our eyes must be eager eyes,—eyes that desire something for God. They must see a program with God, and program for God, a program planned by the Eternal. Stephen saw it. For Jesus he was being stoned to death, for the program of Jesus Christ he was offering his life upon the altar of sacrifice, and with the self-same prayer of Jesus,—"Father lay not this sin to their charge."

Isaiah saw God, and saw the program, and saw himself in the program! May not we?

May not we see a program for our lives? Our Church? Our families? Our neighbors? And our World? Will not we be willing to live in such devotion to God and to righteousness that our eyes may be pure, and open, and eager? Shall we not fill our church to the very doors, and offer a service of such reverence and consecration that men, women, and children, may readily find God and themselves and catch the vision splendid?

It will not just happen. It does not come that way. We shall have to do our part. And when it comes, this vision splendid, may we be able to say with Paul: "I was not disobedient, O King, to the heavenly vision." God is counting on us to catch that vision. We are the responsible parties, and duty is laid upon us, for "Where there is no vision the people perish."

Eilers Sunday School Maps.

On a Revolving Adjustable Steel Stand

The first 5 maps are in Set No. 1, with stand, Price $15.00

Set No. 2 8 Maps, Price $20.00

Fine large Maps, in 6 Colors 36x57, on linen finished Cloth. Mounted on a folding steel stand, which can be regulated, so that Maps may be seen to the best advantage. This set contains data for thorough Bible Study. Its large print and Cheerful Colors makes this set very instructive and attractive. Contains the five thoroughly up to date Maps necessary for the study of Bible History. New Testament Palestine, — Old Testament Palestine, — Roman empire and Bible Lands, showing Pauls Travels by Colored lines. — Lands of the Old Testament, from the Great Sea, to the Persian Gulf.—The Exodus, Egypt, showing by Colored lines the wanderings of the Israelites.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street

Richmond, Virginia

HOLMAN SUPERIOR TEACHERS' BIBLES

Authorized Version—Self-Pronouncing

The Best Editions of the World's Best Book

For Adults, Teachers, Preachers, Students, and All Who Would Study the Word of God Intelligently

BOLD BLACK TYPE—COMPACT SIZE 4½x6¾ INCHES—WILL FIT THE COAT POCKET

Part page specimen of Holman Boldblack Type Bible

ST. MATTHEW, 5.

Christ's sermon on the mount.

13 And leaving Náz'a-rêth, he came and dwelt in Că-pér'na-úm, which is upon the sea coast, in the borders of Zăb'u-lon and Nêph'tha-lim:
14 That it might be fulfilled

A. D. 31.

934 CHAPTER 5.

CHAP. 4.

3 Who are blessed. 13 The disciples called the salt of the earth, and light of the world; Christ urged on them a good example, etc.
AND seeing the multitudes, he went up into a moun-

THIS NEW HOLMAN TEACHERS' BIBLE, Pronouncing Text, Bold Black Type is a PRONOUNCED SUCCESS. The latest Bible with NEW HELPS that are quite comprehensive and consist of an Illustrated Bible Dictionary, Concordance and additional aids all under ONE ALPHABETICAL INDEX. Also Fine Maps on Coated Paper, and a specially prepared BIBLE READING COURSE, intended to stimulate and maintain interest in the Bible. Imported Bible paper is used to improve opacity and keep down bulk. By this means you get the benefit of full Biblical information without the physical discomfort of handling a heavy volume.

STYLES AND PRICES—BIBLE PAPER EDITION

4612. French Morocco Leather, divinity circuit, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges.....	$4.00
4630. Same as 4612, with extra leather lined covers.....	4.75
THIN INDIA PAPER EDITION
With Helps as described above. Size 4½x6¾ inches. One inch in thickness
630X. Egyptian Morocco, divinity circuit, leather linings, red under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker.....	7.00
633X. Algerian Morocco, divinity circuit, leather lining to edge, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, extra quality bindings.....	8.00

EXTRA LARGE PRINT TEACHERS' BIBLES

Large 8 Vo. Size—8x5½ inches—1600 Pages, including 400 pages of Bible Study Helps

Part Page Specimen of Print

ST. MATTHEW, 5.

Christ's sermon on the mount.

15<sup>k</sup> The land of Zăb'u-lon, and the land of Nêph'tha-lim, by the way of the sea, beyond Jôr'dan, Gă'l'i-lee of the Gën'tiles;

A. D. 31.

2 And he opened his mouth, and

Is. 9. 1, 2.

Lk. 4. 2.

Lk. 2. 32.

Mark 1. 14.

3<sup>b</sup> Blessed are the poor in spirit: for their's is the kingdom of heaven.

Extra spacing between words and lines makes this Bible very easy to read.

CONTAINING COMPLETE HELPS TO BIBLE STUDY, INCLUDING ALL OF THE FOLLOWING FEATURES
A New Practical Course in Bible Reading, A Treasury of Biblical Information. The most carefully compiled, thorough and attractive form in which valuable Biblical information has ever been prepared. Illustrated Self-Pronouncing Bible Dictionary Containing 150 illustrations, concise definitions and textual references on nearly 50,000 subjects. A Practical Comparative Concordance, with nearly 50,000 references. Four Thousand Questions and Answers on the Old and New Testaments. A valuable Help to all Bible Readers.

STYLES AND PRICES

4712. Divinity Circuit (overlapping covers), French Seal Leather, red under gold edges, silk head bands, and silk marker..	$5.00
812RL. Red Letter Teachers' Bible. The Words of Christ in the New Testament, Old Testament Passages alluded to by Christ, various prophecies relating to Christ in the Old Testament, etc., all PRINTED IN RED. Binding same as described above on 4712 and same large Self-Pronouncing type.....	6.00
733X. Holman India Paper, Genuine Morocco, leather lined, silk sewed, divinity circuit, round corners carmine under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker, same type and helps as above .....	10.65

All styles sent Postpaid at above prices—Thumb Index 50 cents extra

A Story for the Children

TRY CAMPING.

"Wha—t?" gasped Alfred Washburn, with wide open eyes. "What did you say? Go camping? Just you and I? Real camping? Not just ride there in the car, but go out in the woods where the cars don't run?"

"Yes, Alfred." The father had a twinkle in his eye. He had greatly enjoyed the boy's surprise.

"When do we go, Dad? When do we go?"

"Just as soon as we can get the tent and other things ready. But remember, we shall have to carry our things for miles. We can't back down. We can't get a car to carry us when we're tired."

"Oh, Dad, I won't back down. Didn't I get a prize in the camp?"

"That prize, son, is the reason we are going to camp now." The man spoke slowly and impressively. "Late August is a good time to go camping. We shall come home brown and ready for school."

A happy boy raced from the house. He and his father were going camping. It was something he had never imagined, even in his wildest dreams. He had gone to a boy's camp every summer until this one, with boys of his own age. But to go alone with his father, the man he thought greatest on earth, why—it was beyond words.

To this ten-year-old boy his father was a demigod. He was a good man, a perfect gentleman. The son had never seen him rude or silly. He had always treated the boy as an equal, even when he was a small chap. He had talked with him intelligently, gravely explaining the things he should know. But he had never been a pal.

Mr. Washburn had gone to a lecture a short time before, given by a man who knew boys. There he had learned that a man might be an honorable citizen, a wonderful example with regard to general conduct and culture, and still not be a good father.

Several days later the two set off. They went by train as far as they could go and stayed overnight in a village, laying in what supplies they needed. They now had a small tent, fishing tackle, a few cooking things, and all the food they would need. They started off and tramped about, stopping where the fishing or camping was best.

At the end of two weeks they returned home. When they entered the Washburn gate the cat ran away in fright. Mrs. Washburn pretended she considered it unsafe to open the door. After the tired but happy boy was tucked in bed the father told his story.

"Mother," he said, "we are going camping every summer hereafter—perhaps for a month or longer. I hope you will come for part of the time if you think you will be able to rough it. It has been wonderful. I thought I knew my boy, but I did not. He has taught me many things. I was growing old at thirty-four. Now, I believe that I know as much about everything as any boy does these days. We grown people know the world, but believe me, it is the youngsters who know the human side. They have well defined ideas of right and wrong. Some are quite colorful but all the boys need is guidance."

The next day Alfred told his side.

"I always knew Dad was a wonderful man. I knew he was good. But I never could get right up to him. I was afraid to ask him things. He used to be so solemn and grave. Now, all I have to say is I wish all the boys had a pal of a father like mine."

He told the "gang" about it. They listened. "Say," said one of them at last, "I bet another year you won't be the only one to go camping with his Dad."—Cora M. Silvius in National Kindergarten Association.

NOTICE.

There will be an all-day Rally at Liberty September 30th.

Dr. L. E. Smith, President of Elon College will preach in the morning.

Dinner will be served in the church grove.

Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Secretary of Missions, will deliver an address in the afternoon. Then Mr. C. D. Johnston, Superintendent of the Orphanage, will speak.

All former pastors, members and friends of the church are cordially invited to attend.

This program is sponsored by the J. O. Atkinson Woman's Missionary Society of the church.

MARGARET ALSTON,
President.

Henderson, N. C.

We learn that Rev. C. E. Geringer, who has served the Wakefield Charge for the past eight years has definitely refused to consider the work there during the coming conference year. If there are those who would like to consider the work, they should write Mr. J. H. Harris of Wakefield, Va., who is chairman of the pastoral committee. This charge has four churches and owns a parsonage for the use of their pastor. They are wonderful folks and their service presents an opportunity for some minister. We have not been informed what plans Rev. Mr. Geringer has made, but wish him success in whatever may be his undertaking.

ELON COLLEGE

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

South Entrance to the Campus

ELON COLLEGE, founded by the Christian Church in 1889, has fully justified the faith and hope of its founders during its 42 years of operation. Its graduates from the four-year course leading to a bachelor's degree, number 980, now living, 122 of whom are in the Christian Ministry and full-time Christian service. The majority of these are members of our own denomination. In addition, 449 are in educational work and are an active influence in the lay leadership of the Christian Church.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION BUILDING, and the definite religious atmosphere of the College, provide the very best facilities available for training for religious leadership, and offer the Church its finest opportunity to train the young people of the denomination to assume active leadership both in the ministry and laity of the local churches.

Address—

C. M. CANNON, Registrar

Elon College,

North Carolina

Home Atmosphere—Reasonable Rates—Clean Athletics—Christian Spirit

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr
A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom, as represented by the Congregational Christian Church.

BOARD OF EDITORS.

J. O. ATKINSON, D. D. . . . . Editor
E. C. GILLETTE, D. D. . . . . Associate
I. W. JOHNSON, D. D. . . . . Contributing
ELISHA A. KING, D. D. . . . . Contributing
J. T. KERNODLE . . . . . Managing Editor

DEPARTMENTAL EDITORS.

H. S. HARDCASTLE . . . . . Sunday School
J. G. TRUITT, D. D. . . . . Sermon
F. C. LESTER . . . . . Young People
H. E. ROUNTREE . . . . . Altar

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year . . . . . $2.00
Six Months . . . . . 1.00

Trial Subscriptions: Five or more new subscriptions sent in at one time by pastor or president of any church organization, three months for 40c each.

Published Every Thursday at Richmond, Virginia, by the Central Publishing Company, Inc.

Entered as second-class matter at the Postoffice at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Change of Address: Be sure to give both old and new address when asking that your address be changed.

All news matter and items to be published in "The Sun" should be addressed to J. O. Atkinson, Editor, Elon College, N. C., and should reach him not later than Friday preceding date of publication. If more convenient, news from Congregational Churches may be sent to E. C. Gillette, Associate Editor, 117 W. Forsyth Street, Jacksonville, Fla. Emergency notices will be received at the Richmond Office up until Tuesday of week of publication.

All remittances for subscriptions, renewals, advertising, etc., books for review, and other matters of business should be addressed to J. T. Kernodle, Managing Editor, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond, Va.

Notices: Obituary and marriage notices, limited to 125 words, published free. All over 125 words, 1c a word, cash with notice. No notices should exceed 250 words.

Receipts: The change of label is your receipt for money paid. The label shows date of expiration, and change on label will appear the first or second issue of the month following renewal, provided it was received before the 25th. No other receipt will be sent unless requested. Please notify the Richmond Office if label is not changed as above.

MARRIAGES

CABLE-GERRINGER.

Mr. Wilson Cable and Miss Ethel Geringer were united in marriage by the writer at his home in Elon College, N. C. on the 8th day of September, 1934. They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Giles Longest of Graham, N. C.

Mr. Cable is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Cable, Elon College, N. C., R. 1, and Mrs. Cable is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Geringer, Burlington, N. C., R. 6.

Both are residents of Shallowford community and members of Shallowford Church. Many friends wish them success and happiness in their wedded life.

T. J. GREEN.

OBITUARIES

EDMONSON.

Etta Ferrell was born February 3, 1875, Raudolph County, Ala. She was married to P. L. Nichols September 26, 1897. To this union were born two girls. Mr. Nichols died May 17, 1901. She was married to T. G. Edmonson January 26, 1909. To this union were born three girls. She professed faith in Jesus Christ and united with New Harmony Christian Church at the age of sixteen and remained true and faithful until the Death Angel came for her spirit September 8, 1934, and carried her on wings of love to the place that Jesus has gone "to prepare for all who love His appearing."

She leaves to mourn their loss her devoted husband, five daughters, eleven grandchildren, one brother, one sister, and a great host of friends.

Funeral services were held at New Harmony church, led by her pastor, this writer, assisted by Revs. Martin, and Robertson of the Baptist church and Harris of the Methodist church. Interment was in the church cemetery, where her remains await the resurrection of the just.

G. H. VEAZEY.

WYRICK.

Hannah Pauline Zimmerman Wyrick was born December 7, 1854, deceased September 9, 1934, aged 79 years, 9 months and 21 days.

Wedding or Gift Bible

FOR THE HOME

Holman Self-Pronouncing Home Study Edition

A BEAUTIFUL PRESENTATION PAGE Marriage Certificate and Family Record makes this special edition a most desirable Bible for a wedding gift.

Full Bound size, 5 1/2 x 6 inches, nearly 1800 pages. Authorized Version with Marginal References.

Large Print—Easy to Read

The Helps are the latest and most practical published—prepared by the most reliable and well-known authorities, and consist of a TEACHERS' NEW READY REFERENCE HANDBOOK, which gives the salient and essential information needed in Bible study.

Illustrated Self-Pronouncing Bible Dictionary—Containing 150 illustrations.

Oriental Light on the Bible (Containing over 100 illustrations). A new kind of illuminating Bible help.

Treasury of Biblical Information.

A New Series of Maps. A selection of the most used, with Special Maps, the results of the most recent explorations.

A New Practical Comparative Concordance, with nearly 50,000 references. Four Thousand Questions and Answers on the Bible.

ABSOLUTELY DURABLE BINDINGS that will not break in the back.

Specimen of the Print. Full size of the page is 5 1/2 x 8 inches.

Specimen of Type.

17 <sup>m</sup> From that time Jēsus began to preach, and to say, "Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at

A BEAUTIFUL PRESENTATION PAGE Marriage Certificate and Family Record makes this special edition a most desirable Bible for a wedding gift.

No. 4914. French Morocco, flexible limp, gold titles, round corners, red under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker. . . . . $5.50

Postage Paid

She was married November 26, 1874 to Peter J. Wyrick who preceded her in death about 35 years.

To this union were born two sons, Arthur E. Wyrick, still living, and Rufin A. Wyrick, who died February, 1920. Surviving also are 11 grandchildren and 2 great grandchildren, 2 brothers and 3 sisters, namely Cornelius, Rufus, Mary, Sallie, and Martha Zimmerman.

In early life she professed faith in Christ and joined Apple's Chapel Christian Church. Burial services were held at Friedens church in the presence of many sympathizing friends and her body laid to rest in the church cemetery, where other members of the family had previously been buried.

Services were by the writer.

T. J. GREEN.

PIEDMONT COLLEGE

Located in

"The Blue Ridge Highlands"

An accredited college with an enviable reputation for superior classroom instruction, and wholesome student life.

Standard courses leading to the A. B. and B. S. degrees. Careful, scholarly instructors.

A refined Christian atmosphere. All of the cultural elements essential to a liberal education.

A minimum of expense. Tuition and board for the entire academic year only $273.50.

For information, write

GEORGE C. BELLINGRATH, Dean,
PIEDMONT COLLEGE,
DEMOREST, GEORGIA.

Southern Seminary Foundation

(Successor to Atlanta Theological Seminary.)

AFFILIATED WITH

Vanderbilt University

The Foundation and the other Foundations that are affiliated with Vanderbilt University School of Religion comprise the only Interdenominational Theological School in the South. Through this affiliation the students enjoy the rights and privileges of Vanderbilt University.

DEGREES.

Candidates for degrees are required to have completed their college courses.

The degree of Bachelor of Divinity is offered to qualified students who complete the required courses.

Vanderbilt University also offers the degrees of Master of Arts and Doctor of Philosophy, in accordance with the regulations established in its several departments.

MORE THAN A SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY.

Because of our affiliation with Vanderbilt, our relations with other nearby colleges where our students can take courses without tuition, and the cooperation of the American Red Cross and other social agencies in the city, we prepare students for many types of Christian service.

For information write

WILLIAM JAMES CAMPBELL, President,
330 BUTTRICK HALL, VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY,
NASHVILLE, TENN.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

Representing the Southeast Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches.

IN ESSENTIALS, UNITY.

IN NON-ESSENTIALS, LIBERTY.

IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY.

VOLUME LXXXVI.

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 27, 1934.

NUMBER 39.

•• THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY ••

Still Winning Youth.—

The Presbyterian Advance recently quoted a critic as saying, "When I was a boy we had revivals and we boys were reached. The church doesn't try to win the boys now." "Doesn't it?" replied our contemporary, and under a picture on its cover, showing the men of a Nashville, Tenn., church engaged in building a camp for its Scout Troop of forty boys—and its Camp Fire Girls—said, "Instead of a revival once a year, the boys receive steady moral and spiritual guidance all the year. Isn't that looking after the boys?"—Advance.

The Head of the American Legion Speaks.—

Edward A. Hayes, national commander of the American Legion, thinks that there are to be found in many of the young people's church societies "strange tenets" which will tend to destroy the principles upon which our nation is founded. Says he: "We find in too many instances organizations of young men, even Christian young men, taking oath not to bear arms in a national emergency. Misguided groups continuing to teach pernicious doctrine would soon be able to undermine and destroy our government." There is much difference of opinion among church leaders as to how far the church should go in its opposition to war. Certainly they are agreed that it took a step too far in the direction of its support in the World War, yet there is danger even in the opposite direction if it goes too far. Commander Hayes' statement is given for consideration. After all, Christianity is a militant religion. The Bible does not condemn war, but war that is not righteous. Is there not just a little of the taint of communism about some of the propaganda that is being circulated?

England Still Shows Marks of War.—

From an exchange comes the following: "Several interesting reports have just been made public concerning the population of England. During 1932 the population of England and Wales rose from 39,952,377 to 40,201,000. Marriages declined from 311,847 to 307,184; 3,894 divorces were granted, an increase of 130 over 1931. A larger proportion of males were born than in any of the previous ten years, the ratio being 1,059 to 1,000. Women, however, outnumbered men on the voting lists by 13,999,604 to 12,440,109. Unemployment, as well as war has left its mark on the British people. General Sir Cecil Romer has reported that 52 per cent of the men applying for enlistment in the army were rejected last year, and in the industrial northern districts, where unemployment is most marked, 68 per cent of the applicants failed to pass their physical examinations. The British Medical Association has reported that the dole money allowed for the purchase of food falls far short of buying as much nourishment as the army diet provides." It is only by comparison with other countries that we can gauge accurately conditions in this country. With conditions as bad as they are, we are still possibly the most fortunate people on the globe.

Episcopalian History To Be Depicted.—

The triennial General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States will meet in Atlantic City on October 10th. At this convention there will be shown for the first time a motion picture giving the history of that church in this country. The film, which has just about been completed, will trace, by pictorial presentation of early church documents and historical scenes, the progress of the church from the time of the first service in this country, which was held under the direction of Sir Francis Drake in 1579, on the shore of Drak Bay in California, to the present time as represented by the magnificent cathedrals throughout the entire country. Incidents in the history of the church of dramatic importance will be portrayed, such as the meeting, just after the close of the Revolution, at Grebe House near Woodbury, Mass., at which time Samuel Seabury of New York was named America's first bishop. Another incident portrayed is the return of the Carolina Diocese to the General Convention in 1865, marking the reunion of the Northern and Southern churches after the War between the States. These and other important milestones in Episcopalian history should make the picture one of great interest not only to that church but to the Christian church through the entire nation.

An "Auto-Stop" for Grade Crossings.—

A new warning device combined with a barrier is said to make possible grade crossing protection at a reasonable cost. This device, known as the "Auto-Stop," is built of structural steel. It lies flat with the pavement and offers no obstruction to traffic as long as the crossing is clear. As a train approaches, the Auto-Stop rises to a warning position, displaying the words "Stop" across its length, spelled out in reflector buttons. While in this position, cars can pass slowly over it. After a wait of ten seconds, the barrier rises to its full height, revealing two large "flashers" in each ten-foot section, and presenting an effective block to the on-coming vehicle. We are told that the barrier is spring cushioned and semi-rigid and that "with the added resiliency of automobile tires, there is little likelihood of damage to either a speeding car or the Auto-Stop itself." Our informant adds that "even at full height, it needs only 50 pounds to depress the barrier from the rear, so that cars caught on the tracks can continue safely, passing over the barrier to the far side." There are approximately a quarter-million grade crossings in the United States, about 33,000 of which are protected by watchmen or gates. In spite of this protection about a third of the 4,657 accidents reported for 1931 were at protected crossings. The railroads and the government—State and National—are trying to eliminate these accidents by the elimination of grade crossings, but this is usually a costly job. This automatic barrier device may be the answer to the situation, especially at the less used crossings.

"After NRA—What?"—

We are told by some that—"the Blue Eagle is drifting down the river." While there is much talk of reorganization and "the President's views" on the subject, defection seems to be spreading. Frank R. Kent, writing in the Baltimore Sun, sums up the situation thus: "The truth about NRA is that it is too sick to be cured. But the New Deal high command apparently would rather die than admit this. Ballyhooed to unmanageable proportion, it began to collapse six months ago, and is today in a very bad mess. Failed of its objectives, with its personnel shot to pieces; its more important men anxious to get from under, its policies lost in the shuffle, its prestige gone and its organization in a state of confusion, it appears a wreck." If this be so, and there must be some truth in it, the question arises, "After NRA—What?" Mr. Roosevelt was in earnest when he said that his Administration would engage in experiments, and that if these experiments failed to restore prosperity, he would try something else. The question that business wants to know, we are told, is whether the next thing to be tried is to be further suggestions of "the collegiate left wingers," or whether the views of successful business men will be taken into consideration. The resignation of General Johnson as NRA Chief may have been the result of his outspokenness in the textile strike and the consequent protest from Mr. Green as well as Administration officials. It may have been, on the other hand, that the veteran general has become weary, that he thinks that he has accomplished all that he could under the adverse conditions under which he has had to labor, and that his resignation will save the President from a most complicated situation. No one knows whether it was voluntary or whether it was asked for. Clarence Darrow, who acknowledges that he has never been a "true believer" in NRA, declares that, regardless of the cause of his resignation, "General Johnson is the NRA, and when he goes, it will hasten its vanishment into thin air, a demise for which I believe everyone will be glad."

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

It is learned that our Palm St. (Greensboro) and Hines Chapel churches, as a pastorate, have extended a call to Rev. B. J. Earp, Harrisonburg, Va. Brother Earp, we are advised, has the call under consideration.

We note with regret that Dr. C. H. Rowland, Greensboro First Church, remains unable to occupy his pulpit. A. L. Granger, ministerial student in Elon, is being engaged as supply to Dr. Rowland during his enforced absence.

President Walter L. Lingle, of Davidson College, in a full page article in The Christian Observer, upon National Recognition Day for Sunday School Teachers, suggests as a text for Recognition Day sermons, "They that be teachers (marginal rendering) shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars forever and ever."—Daniel 12:3.

Hercules found the task of cleaning the Augean Stables too great for his own strength. So he diverted the River Alpheus onto the foul mess, and thus the stables were purged and purified. Perhaps the present crime wave and political corruption and widespread carnality can be wiped out only by letting in the waters of a master emotion, such as religion and patriotism.—W. T. Ellis.

Any of our churches or pastorates desiring the services of a capable and consecrated preacher and pastor will do well to write to Rev. R. L. Williamson, R. 3, Charlottesville, Va. Brother Williamson has given his life to preaching and the pastorate through the years since he graduated from Elon College and is held in loving esteem by the churches and people whom he has served so faithfully. He is one of our very faithful, conscientious and consecrated pastors.

Rev. J. L. Neese, pastor of Palm St. and Hines Chapel who was recently extended a call to become pastor of the Reidsville Church, with the close of the present Conference year in November, has moved, with his family, to the parsonage at Reidsville, and his address is now Reidsville, N. C. Rev. Aubrey Todd, ministerial student at Elon College, has been engaged by the church at Reidsville as supply for Sunday services till the pastor takes charge after Conference.

"It's taking a leaf from Hitler's book—and from the shrewd example of Mussolini and the Communists, of the Holy Name Society, and of the fraternal societies," said one man, in commenting upon the spectacular project for a great civic celebration, on October 6th, of National Recognition Day for Sunday School Teachers. The churches have been slow to grasp the educational and inspirational effect of public demonstrations. Yet Jesus made free use of the spectacular. And the public likes parades and mass meetings.

After an illness of weeks Mrs. C. D. Johnston, beloved and faithful wife of our Orphanage Superintendent, Elon College, N. C., passed peacefully to the higher life at 8:25 P. M., Friday, September 21st. She leaves a devoted husband and loving family, with host of friends throughout the church to mourn her going. Her influence in the community, of which she was a part, and at the Orphanage, where she was revered by matrons and children, was always for good and righteousness, and she will be greatly missed.

Evidently Brother Plyler, editor of the North Carolina Christian Advocate, does not have the highest regard for the folks who stand on the highway and hitch-hike their rides and "thumb" their way. Editorially, the Advocate says: "We have been unable to generate much sympathy for the man who picks up a stranger on the public highway and then is attacked and robbed by the villain he has befriended. It looks to us that most people have troubles enough without inviting others by picking up strangers who are at best only deadbeats."

From the Urbana (Ill.) News Gazette comes the very pleasing information that our Urbana Church people gave to Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Fix an infernal reception at the parsonage in honor of the 10th anniversary of the wedding of the minister and his wife. During the reception more than one hundred people passed through the receiving line,—members of the official board of the church and other officials and members of the church. Commenting on the affair the Gazette says: "Since their marriage at the West End Church of Nashville, Tenn., Rev. and Mrs. Fix have served pastorates in York, Neb., and Franklin, Va. They have completed their third year in Urbana, and have endeared themselves into the hearts of their church membership and the community at large."

The funeral services of Mrs. C. D. Johnston were conducted from the Elon Church by the pastor, Dr. L. E. Smith, assisted by Rev. J. L. Foster and THE SUN's editor, at 3:00 P. M., Sunday, September 23rd. Chairman J. M. Darden, of the Board of Trustees of the Orphanage, expressed for his Board gratitude for service rendered the Orphanage by the deceased and sympathy of the Board for the family. The musical numbers by the Elon choir were appropriate and comforting. The attendance at the services was very large and the floral designs spoke volumes of love and devotion for this woman of beautiful spirit. Other ministers attending the services than those mentioned were Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, D. D., Durham; Rev. James H. Lightbourne, D. D.; Dr. P. H. Fleming; Rev. G. C. Crutchfield, Burlington; Rev. T. J. Green, Elon College.

HOPE CHAPEL APPRECIATED ELON STUDENT.

In a rather neglected section of Norfolk, stands the rather small structure of a real Christian Endeavor unit, which proudly bears the name of "Hope Chapel." Its attainments in C. E. are widely known throughout the state, as well as its mission work in its own city.

Hope Chapel feels that it has been especially blessed this summer, for the Lord sent to them again, their student pastor and life work recruit superintendent of the Va. C. E. Union, namely, a very tall and pleasant faced young fellow, by the name of Aubrey Todd.

What a wonderful influence he had with his whole congregation! He speaks with such sincerity and earnestness that often his audience sits spell bound, as he tells the matchless love of the Nazarene, who gave himself for us. All during the hot summer nights he commanded large audiences.

He conducted a most successful Daily Vacation Bible School, that not only he gave a great deal of instruction to his pupils but resulted in a noticeable increase in the Sunday school attendance.

As a crowning feature of his summer's work before returning to Elon, Mr. Todd held a week of evangelistic services, choosing most vital subjects as to one's salvation. The results were most visible. He preached to capacity audiences. Then when he issued the call to surrender wholly to the Master's will, and serve and follow Him, almost his entire congregation came forward giving their hearts to Him who died that they might be saved, or pledging themselves anew to His cause. Twenty-six were received into the membership of the Chapel, sixteen of whom were baptized.

The entire Chapel will keenly feel his absence this winter, and wish that he might stay with us. But wishing for him an even bigger and better future, they relinquish him to the superb training of Elon that he may prepare to give his utmost to the cause of "Christ and the Church."

HELEN SOUSA.

306 Clay Ave.,
Norfolk, Va.

GROWING STRAIGHT.

There are stretches along the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad where the train swings around curves with such a twist that reading is a weariness to the eyes and writing becomes a scribble that even the writer cannot read when it becomes cold. Then one is forced to look out of the window. The necessity is a grace for marvelous scenery flashes by and mountain and stream follow each other in unending glory.

We have been looking at the trees growing on the sides of the hills. We glory in their uprightness. No matter how the hills drop downward the trees grow upward. They do not come from the soil at right angles but whatever the grade of the hill on which they grow they reach straight up toward the sun. The contour of the hills and hollows cannot destroy their perpendicularity. Whether the ground rolls in gentle slope or breaks in rough precipices ever the trees grow straight and up. The shape of the earth does not keep them from scaring toward heaven.

Should not men grow like trees? Whatever the nature of the ground men should grow toward God. The crookedness of the surrounding earth ought not to prevent good men from growing straight. Ethics ought not to be dictated by environment. In a world of dips and curves and hollows and swamps there is a Sun above us Who will draw us upward if we will respond. We are not bound to be twisted like the world in which we live. Hear the word of Jehovah to his people:

After the doings of the land of Egypt, wherein ye dwell, shall ye not do; and after the doings of the land of Canaan, whither I bring you, shall ye not do; neither shall ye walk in the statutes. Mine ordinances shall ye do, and my statutes, and mine ordinances; which if a man do he shall live in them; I am Jehovah.—Lev. 18:3-6.

"When in Rome do as the Romans do" is a cowardly counsel never obeyed by the trees nor should it be the rule of strong men. Go straight no matter how crooked the road and grow upward whatever the slope of the land.—The M. P. Recorder.

PRAYER.

"Help us, O Lord, clearly to perceive that to receive, and to have, imposes the obligation to give and to share. Help us to measure our responsibilities by our privileges. Enable us not only to see and sympathize with human need all about us, but in the strength of a deep consecration to meet and alleviate it. In Jesus' name. Amen.—A. E. Hengen.

THE PILGRIM AND FELLOWSHIP PROGRAM.

The idea of the Pilgrim Fellowship has met with hearty response throughout the nation. Many states, during the summer laid foundations for state and district organizations of the Fellowship. A Council for the National Pilgrim Fellowship is being created, composed of one young person and the official adult leader from those states in which there are Congregational Christian units. A digest of helpful suggestions for counselors and presidents of city, county, associational and state Fellowships has been prepared and is available to these officers from the Young People's Department, 14 Beacon St., Boston. Ask for "Pilgrim Fellowship Flashes."

Numerous inquiries have come regarding the use of the name, "Pilgrim Fellowship," in local societies or clubs. There can be no objection to this. But the original purpose of the Fellowship idea was to use it as a designation for the united company of Christian Endeavor societies, Comrades of the Way, church school classes and departments, independent societies and clubs. That is, it is a name to designate the regional and national unions of Congregational Christian young people. There has, therefore, been no standardized form of local organization prepared. But there is a Pilgrim Program which is being recommended to all local groups which are part of the Pilgrim Fellowship.

This Pilgrim Program has three main divisions. The first is the Ten Point Working Plan—a practical standard for building and carrying on a local program. It is contained in Bulletin 51. The second part of the Program consists of the new materials for the Sunday evening meetings, the new series of Christian Life units. The list of these for the remainder of 1934 is included in Bulletin 51 (five cents from the Young People's Department). The list for the first part of 1935 will be printed in Bulletin 52, which should be issued in December.

The third part of the Program consists of seasonal activities described each month in "The Pilgrim Highroad," in the first page of the section headed, "The Pilgrim Progress for This Month." It is important that all groups planning to cooperate in this Pilgrim Program consult the materials published in the monthly issues of "The Pilgrim Highroad." A sample copy may be had from the Pilgrim Press, 14 Beacon St., Boston, or 19 La Salle St., Chicago.

The Pilgrim Fellowship is in process of being grown. The next two or three years are the formative period. It is expected that at least two hundred local church groups will work, during the next three months, on the question, "For what should this national Pilgrim Fellowship work—on what Platform shall it take its stand?" Multi-graphed helps will be provided those local leaders who will agree to spend approximately a month (or more) on this problem and who will report their findings to the Young People's Department. The conclusions of these Platform Builders will be summarized, referred to the Council, and then re-referred to the summer conferences of 1935 for final study and vote.

DOLLAR-A-MONTH CLUB.

Yes, the Dollar-A-Month Club is still active! And, with many individuals, Churches, Bible classes, and Sunday schools, it is still going strong. A dollar a month seems to be a very small amount, and it is; but if you have a thousand who are contributing that dollar a month, it means a great deal when reckoned as a whole.

The goal for the Dollar-A-Month Club is 5,000 memberships. We have not reached that goal. Won't you help us reach it?

1907 Madison Ave.,
Greensboro, N. C.,
September 14, 1934.

Dollar-a-Month Club,
Elon College, N. C.
Gentlemen:

There is enclosed $5.00 to apply on our Dollar-a-Month Club dues.

When sending receipt for same please advise
On September 14th, I received the following letter from our Greensboro church:
The balance due to finish our year ending—I think—September 1st. My records show the above payment will pay through August. In that case we will be paid up, but I am not sure of this.

Our Class at its last meeting voted to take care of two memberships—$2.00 per month—in the Dollar-a-Month Club, for the coming year, beginning with September.

Yours very truly,
TRUITT PHILATHEA CLASS,
First Christian Church,
Greensboro, N. C.
Effie Lowe, Treasurer.

Now, that is a fine letter! I hope that other Bible classes, societies, and Sunday schools may be inspired to do likewise.

L. E. SMITH.

IF HE WERE HERE TODAY.

If He were here today to walk our roads and visit city marts,

I wonder would the crowd still follow Him,
Or would the tinsel pleasures, and the arts

Devised by cunning man to captivate the whim
And passing fancy, hold their all-absorbing sway
If He were here today.

If He were here today and saw the millions hungry, cold,

The sordid misery, the pain, the sad unrest;
The luxury of some, the powerful lure of wealth,
its subtle hold

On men who own it not, but by it are possessed,
Deaf to the wail of woe; I wonder what to them
He'd say—

If He were here today.

If He were here today and someone brought to Him a little child,

All wasted, thin, its tiny yearning hands stretched up
To meet His loving touch; could WE I wonder, face His mild

Reproachful look, and feel we'd done our best to lift the cup

Of woe and misery that holds such pungent sway,
If He were here today.

Ethelle Phillips.

Dr. Frederick Lynch, in an article in the Presbyterian Advance, claims that one of the outstanding weaknesses of the American Church is its failure to teach the people. He said, "Many sermons are interesting and helpful, but they do not teach the people the fundamentals of the Christian faith. It is a firmly established fact that conduct is the expression of belief. A man's actions are determined by his thought of God, his philosophy of life and his dominant, ruling ideas. I feel very strongly that what the Church needs more than anything else is a teaching pulpit; teaching the great fundamental doctrines, and the proven facts and religious experience of the Christian Church."

PROGRAM.

Thirty-fourth Annual Session of the East Alabama Congregational-Christian Association, (formerly the Alabama Christian Conference) to be held at Rock Stand Church, October 17-18, 1934.

Wednesday—Morning Session.

- 10:00 Called to order by President...Rev. G. H. Veazey
- Devotionals .....Rev. C. C. Dollar
- 10:15 Welcome Address .....Rev. J. D. Dollar
- 10:25 Response .....Rev. A. W. Stone
- 10:30 Enrollment of ministers and delegates
- 11:00 Adoption of Program
- 11:10 Appointment of Special Committees
- 11:20 Report of Executive Committee
- 11:30 Annual Address .....Rev. G. H. Veazey
- 12:00 Adjourn for lunch

Wednesday—Afternoon Session.

- 1:30 Devotionals .....Rev. O. E. Sheppard
- 1:45 Reading Ministerial and Church Reports and reference to Committees.
- 2:30 Report of Committee on Superannuation
Rev. W. T. Meacham
- 2:45 Report of Committee on Religious Literature
Rev. J. D. Dollar
- Address .....Mr. J. T. Kernodle
- 3:15 Miscellaneous
- 6:00 Picnic lunch and campfire discussions for Young People led by Miss Margurite Davis

Wednesday—Evening Session.

- 7:00 Devotionals .....Rev. Howard Meacham
- 7:15 Report of Committee on Moral Reform
Rev. G. R. Walker
- Address .....Rev. B. G. Gallagher
- 7:45 Report of Committee on S. S. and C. E.
Rev. W. M. Stevens
- Address .....Mrs. A. R. VanCleave
- 8:15 Our College. Its needs. Round Table discussions yed by Rev. G. D. Hunt.
- Adjourned

Thursday—Morning Session.

- 9:00 Devotionals .....Rev. C. W. Carter
- 9:15 Reading Minutes of Wednesday's Session
- 9:30 Chart Lecture—Miss Davison or Dr. Ensminger
- 9:45 Report of Committee on Education
Rev. J. H. Hughes
- Address .....Rev. Ross Ensminger
- 10:30 Report of Home Mission Board
Rev. G. H. Veazey
- Address, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Alternate Dr. F. P. Ensminger.
- 11:15 Annual Sermon—Speaker to be supplied
- 12:00 Adjourned for lunch

Thursday—Afternoon Session.

- 1:30 Devotionals .....Rev. A. R. VanCleave
- 1:45 Report of Committee on Nomination, Election of officers.
- 2:00 Report of Treasurer .....Mr. J. W. Payne
- 2:15 Report of Committee on Ministerial Monument Fund, D. W. Sheppard.
- 2:25 Our Orphanage....."Uncle" Charlie Johnston
- 2:45 Miscellaneous
- 3:00 Holy Communion ..Revs. J. H. Hughes and J. P. Bean.
- 3:30 Adjourned

Some murmur when their sky is clear,
And wholly bright in view,
If one small speck of dark appear
In their great heaven of blue;
And some with thankful love are filled
If but one streak of light,
One ray of God's mercy, gild
The darkness of the night.

—R. C. Trench.

E-D-I-T-O-R-I-A-L

EDITOR

J. O. ATKINSON, ELON COLLEGE, N. C.

ASSOCIATE EDITOR

E. C. GILLETTE

117 W. Forsyth Street, Jacksonville, Fla.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS

I. W. JOHNSON      ELISHA A. KING

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

MRS. C. D. JOHNSTON.

Concluding a prayer of Moses in the 90th Psalm, this significant and sublime petition is recorded: "Let the beauty of the Lord be upon us." There is a beauty of the Lord. We see it in the glory of setting suns; in the rich color of budding and blooming flowers, in the far-reach of forests and the graceful peaks of high hills. We also see it in some lives about us, in persons whom we come to know and, in knowing, learn to respect and revere. Evidently, Moses' prayer, as recorded in the 90th Psalm, has been answered in instances through the ages, and is being answered in our time and before our eyes. These instances may be rare, but they are rich and full, and reward us for all the ugliness, frailty and disappointment in others whom we have seen and known. Moses did not pray in vain, nor lift up his voice to a God who would forget.

I am not writing for all CHRISTIAN SUN readers, a great host of whom did not know her, I am writing as friend and neighbor to bear testimony to the fact that, in the life of these twenty years, Mrs. C. D. Johnston lived in our community, her life was a constant revelation that the sublime petition of the Psalmist was answered in her, "Let the beauty of the Lord our God be upon us." First of all, this beauty was expressed in unstinted and adoring love. Mrs. Johnston loved her husband, her children, her home, with a passionate adoration and a genuine unselfishness not known to many. Time and again this writer has been in that home as neighbor and friend, in health and in affliction, in adversity and in prosperity, but in every vicissitude and attitude one power controlled all, and gave assurance and steadfastness to all, and that was the unflinching and abiding love of this wife and mother. In her the beauty of the Lord was upon that household who shared its blessings and its benefits.

Moreover the beauty and the bounty of that love overflowed to her neighbors and to her community. The first and greatest commandment is "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy strength," and because Mrs. Johnston learned well and obeyed implicitly that commandment, she came in the beauty of obedience thereto to love her neighbors as herself. In the joys of her community, she rejoiced; and with the sorrows and sadness of her community, she wept. A part of her community was the Christian Orphanage, the burden and the blessing of her husband's heart, and, therefore, of her own heart. There was no suffering in that institution in which she did not share, and of which she was not a part. There was no gladness in that family of one hundred in which she did not rejoice. There was no disappointment in all that group for which she did not feel a pang of regret, and there was no achievement or victory in which she did not have a vivid and a vital part. "Let the beauty of the Lord our God be upon us." I do not know how often she uttered that prayer nor how anxiously she longed for its power in her own life. Maybe she did not have to utter it at all, maybe she did not have to crave it, since by having given her heart and soul to the love of the Lord and having consecrated to her family the adoration of her great heart, and having come by some blessed and blissful experience to love her neighbor as herself, maybe our God, who never sleeps nor slumbers, just answered of His own volition the prayer of Moses that the Psalmist thought worth recording centuries ago, "Let the beauty of the Lord our God be upon us."

Brother C. D. Johnston, broken-hearted husband, Superintendent of our Christian Orphanage, and his bereaved family have our deepest sympathy in this hour of their bereavement.

There is a beauty of the Lord in rich, rare souls about us. And blessed are they who share with such souls their comradeship and their love.

J. O. A.

SOUTH CAROLINA'S NEW GOVERNOR.

We note with a degree of pardonable family pride that our esteemed North Carolina Christian Advocate concludes that our neighboring State of South Carolina is in the way of having a good Governor at its next inauguration. Olin Johnson, being a nephew by marriage of the CHRISTIAN SUN's editor, and a splendid young man of the highest moral type, in his own name, our judgment naturally marks along with that of the Advocate. Olin D. Johnson is just thirty-four years old, and has served terms successfully as a member of the South Carolina Senate, his wife, our niece, serving as one of the clerks of the same, and here is saying that South Carolina's Capitol during their occupancy will be under wise, capable and safe management. One of the singular things in the case of Johnson is that while South Carolina has been on a trend from "dry" to "wet," in all of his campaign speeches, utterances and writings, this young man stood firmly by his convictions for prohibition, and, though the whole State of South Carolina may be wet, every man and woman in the State can point to their Capitol after Olin and his good wife arrive there, and say that, "They stand for prohibition and a dry State." But let our contemporary, The Christian Advocate, tell of this fine young man, a story which THE SUN's editor can vouch for and could give from personal knowledge but prefers that it be told in the words of a brother editor:

"From a textile loom to the governor's chair of his native state in twenty years is the record of Olin D. Johnson, the next governor of South Carolina. Johnson, not yet forty years old, began life on a small farm, went to school intermittently, working between times in the cotton mills to make a living. When the United States entered the World War he was a student at Wofford College in Spartanburg. He enlisted and spent 18 months overseas, was decorated for bravery, returned and received his degree from Wofford and the years immediately following got his M. A. and law degrees at the University of South Carolina.

"Here is a fresh illustration of the old notion that every American lad with pluck and by plenty of hard work has a chance to reach the top. And this is good doctrine to preach again when so many people have become mendicants who are begging for everything from a free ride as a hitch hiker to a gift from the government of property that some honest, hard working people by thrift and economy have laid by for a rainy day."

It is well for readers of THE SUN to bear in mind in connection with the Advocate's valuation that here is a man who stood by his convictions and let the whole world know, if it cared to know, just where he stood and why, and won out.

Johnson's platform was "Economy on the part of the State Highway Commission; $3.00 license tag for automobiles; seven months' school term for all children of the State." Here is predicting that under his administration that program will come very near being carried out, and our neighboring State will rejoice and prosper under the leadership of this young, virile Christian statesman.

J. O. A.

THE TEXTILE STRIKE ENDED.

Now that the recent, and most widely known strike in our country for several decades, is over, one wonders what it was all about. Thousands, we are told, quit work and walked out who did not want to quit work nor walk out, but who yielded to the mandates of officials higher up and the threats or pleas of few of their comrades, who, on one account or another, did want to quit work and did want to walk out. On the other hand, we are told that, by the system of the "stretch-out" employers were destroying all the beneficial effects that were intended to accrue to the employees from Government codes, NRA, and modern systems of organization. Some fifteen lives were lost during the heat and passion of the strike, many others were wounded and hundreds were imprisoned because of violence and unlawful conduct. After the tide of prejudice and passion had arisen and found expression on printed page and in general upheaval, the strike was ended as quietly and as manifestly as it was begun. After the conflict is over, whistles are blowing and laborers are peacefully and happily returning to their work, both employers and employees claiming victory and the layman is left to wonder as to the why and wherefore of it all. This, however, is the way of war. After any war has been fought, sane and sensible souls wonder why measures could not have been adopted, means employed to prevent all the strife, the bloodshed and the violence. If war and conflict could be made to appear as useless and unnecessary beforehand as they seem afterwards, war would be no more and peace would prevail in this troubled world. A prophet of God prophesied long ago in time to come when war should be no more. That Prophecy will be fulfilled when the wisdom of man beforehand shall square with the experience and verdict of man in the light of calm reason and good judgment.

J. O. A.

PROBLEM OR OPPORTUNITY.

The church has its problems. Church members have their problems. All seem to have problems. The word, "Problem," is quite the thing now, has come quite prominently into our speech and thinking. The more is the pity. The great majority of mankind does not seem to take kindly to mathematics, and "Problem" is a mathematical term, used for something to be solved, or to let go without solving, on the part of the individual who finds and faces it.

The teaching and attitude of the Bible are entirely different. That attitude was most clearly and definitely expressed by our Lord when looking upon the multitude: "He was moved with compassion because they were as sheep having no shepherd." Instead of declaring this a "Problem" most difficult and doubtful as to solution, He said to His disciples: "The harvest is truly plenteous." That which many of us turn from as our unsolved problem, our Lord considered as His hope of a harvest. It is the act of Christian courage and conviction to regard so-called "Problems" as glorious opportunities.

The same was true in the life of Paul, who, instead of shrinking from problems, arose with courage and embraced his opportunities. We have fallen into the habit, both of speech and thought, of calling many things "Problems" which our Lord Himself has placed before us to provoke us to privilege, to invite us to opportunity, to challenge us to courage and to victory in His name and strength.

J. O. A.

REDUCING ILLITERACY.

There is said to be four million illiterates in the United States and an additional eight million "near" illiterates. Viewing this bulk of ignorance, our Government has decided to "lend a hand." The Federal Emergency Relief Administration, acting for the Government, discovers that there are 40,000 teachers, worthy and well qualified, who are in the ranks of the unemployed, and these are to be brought to grips with our problem of illiteracy and see if, at least, two million of that four million who can neither read nor write may be reached and taught, and trained, to various kinds of vocational work and literary activities. "It is to be a campaign," declares the Government, "to reduce the army of unemployed on the one side and the vast horde of illiterates on the other." Whatever may be the outcome the objective is a worthy one. If the 40,000 unemployed teachers, or a large percent of them, can be given sustenance and support by the Government to invade and reduce the ranks of the illiterates something worthwhile will have been accomplished.

J. O. A.

SOCIAL SERVICE FOR MINISTERS.

Very few people realize the continued service rendered by the Boards of Ministerial Relief. On January 1, 1934, these boards had 746 persons on their rolls. These are Congregational Ministers or their widows who are wholly or largely dependent upon the quarterly grants for their support.

As to ages, 384 were past 70 years of age, 140 were beyond 80, and 13 were over 90. Twenty-four ministers past the retirement age were permanently disabled, and 52 were widows with families of children dependent upon them. Altogether there are 128 boys and girls, sons and daughters of Congregational ministers who have died in service dependent upon the Board for partial support.

An interesting item in this record is that 219 of these ministers have served Congregational-Christian churches more than 30 years and 70 have served more than 40 years and 6 have served 50 years or more.

If the Boards of Ministerial Relief should cease to function think how much distress and sorrow would result. Yet we are inclined to take our responsibility toward these organizations very lightly. Already gifts toward this great work of social service have fallen off. It is the custom at Association meetings to take an offering for ministerial relief but the small sum usually gathered is too painful to count! Such an offering should be made thoughtfully, prayerfully and generously.

Aside from the regular amounts paid to these pensioners there are emergency grants. During the year 1933, 810 ministers, widows, or orphan children received regular grants, and 163 families not on the rolls received emergency grants, making a total of 973. Of this number 43 Congregational ministers, still in active service, were facing desperate situations on account of unemployment or illness.

The next time the offering plate is passed for a contribution to Ministerial Relief you will know the need and naturally be generous.

E. A. K.

NOTES FROM CHAUTAUQUA.

Having just returned from Chautauqua Institution at Chautauqua, N. Y., I thought perhaps a few notes might be interesting to readers of the SUN. As this is the eighth consecutive summer that I have spent from one to two weeks at the Institution, one may see what my idea is of the fitness of the place for both a pleasant and profitable vacation. As the gate keepers have informed me that at least 25,000 people had paid entrance fees to the Institution this summer goes to show that I am with the majority in my idea.

Chautauqua Institution is located on beautiful Lake Chautauqua, a sheet of water about 25 miles long and about 2 miles wide at the widest point. It is surrounded on both shores by beautiful scenery of rolling land and valleys. We are told that two hymns, "Day is Dying in the West," and "Break Thou the Bread of Life" were inspired and written on the shores of this lake.

Chautauqua has been called the Summer City. It is built in the original forest. The Institution has existed 60 years. Mr. Miller, the father of the wife of Thomas A. Edison, was one of the founders and the Edison Cottage is in the grounds. Mrs. Edison spoke at the W. C. T. U. Cottage this summer.

This is the original Chautauqua and has given the idea for many similar institutions.

The programs are varied so that no matter what ones trend of thought they may find some part profitable. These last from 8:30 in the morning to about 10 at night.

Several places are provided for holding these programs. First of all the Amphitheater seating about 6,000 to 7,000 people.

Then the Hall of Christ, the Hall of Missions, Smith-Wilkes Hall, Hall of Philosophy, Norton Hall and perhaps others.

The larger gatherings, of course, are held in the amphitheater.

From this platform many of the great men of our countries have spoken and many and numerous questions discussed.

Several hours each day are given to Bible study and religious teaching. Then political questions (not of a partisan nature) current questions of the day, history, travel, popular lectures, musical programs all have a part. There are also summer schools, lessons in different arts.

It has been the rule of the Institution to give one week to Home and one week to Foreign Missions. This year both these were combined into one week. On Monday afternoon of that week a very beautiful service was given to the marriage of Home and Foreign Missions.

Sports also have a place in the Institution. Provisions are made for golf, baseball, tennis, shuffleboard, horse shoe pitching, swimming and boat riding and fishing. A children's playground is also provided.

Perhaps one thing that may be of interest to ministers and their wives is the arrangement whereby ministers and their wives may secure a room for two weeks free of charge or for whatever they see fit to contribute.

Three buildings—The Columbia Hotel, the Columbia Annex and the Pennsylvania Hotel have been purchased by a kind-hearted gentleman and are used to provide rooms for ministers, their wives or widows, missionary workers, Sunday school and religious workers.

Each provides linen for their own room. These buildings can accommodate about 180 people at one time.

For those who desire to do so, gas hot plates are available in the basement of the buildings and tables where they may cook and serve their own meals. Meals can be secured at nearby restaurants by those who prefer.

Several denominations—Methodist, Baptists, Presbyterians, Episcopalians, Disciples and Congregationalists and perhaps others have built their own church houses as headquarters for their own people and where they may hold their own church services during Chautauqua season.

It would seem that there is no more beautiful, profitable or desirable place to spend a vacation than at Chautauqua, New York.

R. H. PEEL.

Gasport, N. Y.

CHURCH MEMBERSHIP.

"Do you think a man could get to heaven without joining the church?" asked three good men of a preacher.

"I think he could."

They laughed, patted him on the back, and called him broad-minded.

"Let me ask you a question, and I want you to answer just as quickly as I answered you," said the preacher. "Why do you want to go to heaven that way?"

They were speechless.

"Why don't you ask me another question?" suggested the preacher. "Why don't you ask me if a man could get to England without going on a boat?"

"Well," they said, "we will ask you that. Now what is the answer?"

"I see no reason why a man could not get to England without going on a ship, provided he was a good swimmer, tied some food between his shoulders to eat on the way, had strength to buffet all the waves—if a shark did not eat him. And suppose you did get to England without a ship, do you think you would get there much ahead of a man who goes by ship?"—Selected.

The best legacy you can leave your boy is plenty of work and the necessity for doing it.—Milton Lee.

The real secret of an unsatisfied life lies too often in an unsundered will.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

In the Congregational-Christian Fellowship the local church has always been regarded as independent and self-governing. In the process of organizing the Southern Convention no special provision was made for the Conference to exercise any governing power over the local church, except through appeal to the Conference. During the past decade several instances have arisen when it should have had the power to act in an advisory capacity. In some of these cases the Executive Committee has been criticized and misunderstood because it failed to assume this authority and power.

Here is a case in point. A local church and the pastor have a disagreement. It may be simply a misunderstanding. Conditions are such that no satisfactory agreement can be reached. The pastor and the church are both suffering. What can be done about it? Why does not the Executive Committee of the Conference intervene and try to settle the dispute and adjust the situation? The Committee has no authority to do anything in such a case unless officially requested to do so. At least there is no provision made in the Church Government for such intervention.

Pastors and churches are expected to be able and willing to settle their difficulties without outside intervention. If the Conferences and the Convention would adopt some plan by which dissatisfied pastors and divided churches might appeal to the Conference for official action, a way would be provided for help when needed. Sometimes such help is needed and should be given speedily. The Conference should know when a pastor is not rendering faithful and acceptable service. And the Conference should be advised when a church is torn asunder by strife or some unfriendly and unchristian attitude. The Conference should be able to exercise proper authority over both the pastor and the church.

In the days of Dr. W. B. Wellons the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference required all local church Secretaries to take their books to Conference, and a Committee was appointed to examine such books to see if the church records were properly kept. A Committee was also appointed each year to ascertain if every church was provided with a suitable pastor, and a report was made during the session of the Conference. These matters are of great importance. This custom was discontinued, of course, as the educational standards of the ministry were raised, and the efficiency of the local church officials was increased.

A church with a congregational form of government has no desire to be placed under the superintendency of a Conference official, or a group of officials. That is not the question under discussion. But some kind of official oversight should be provided, when it is needed. The future interests of the church should always be in the mind of both Pastor and people in the church. It is possible to obscure these kingdom interests when some personal opinions and interests are unduly emphasized and exploited.

These are testing times for pastors and churches. Financial difficulties have been over-emphasized by the pulpit and the pew. During this period of depression too many addresses (they should not be called sermons) have been delivered in the pulpit, outlining a way back to prosperity. Such addresses are a poor substitute for the Word of God. To a certain extent sermons may be preached from the Bible on such a topic. But many of the modern sermons (addresses) on this topic are from a pre-text rather than a text. The church should return to the Bible. Preaching should win people and not drive them from the church. Something is wrong in the pulpit or the church when the people do not come to hear the message. The people heard Jesus gladly.

I. W. JOHNSON.

THE COLLEGE CALENDAR.

The alumni and friends of the college would perhaps like to know something of the activities on the campus. September 4th and 5th was designated as freshman period. As the new members of our student body arrived, they were met by committees and faculty members, received into the college family, and made to feel at home. We have one of the largest freshman classes in the history of the institution. By programs, receptions, and student gatherings, they are thoroughly introduced to the college and made to feel the inspiration of a real college atmosphere. Already the regular program of study and recitation is in full force. With but few exceptions, all seem to be diligently at their tasks.

It seems impossible to divorce athletics from a liberal arts college. In fact, there are very few who would want to eliminate athletics. At this particular season, our forces are centering upon football. Members of the team are training hard, getting ready for their first contest with Davidson today. This will be a battle! Last year, the teams were fairly evenly matched. Davidson won by one touchdown, 6-0. The Christians have a heavier team this year, though not as many experienced men on the squad. However, we are expecting to give Davidson an interesting contest. Members of the squad are not the only ones interested in football. Faculty members, student body, and townsmen are all back of the team, with enthusiasm. We were fortunate to win the championship in football last year, and we are striving for the same achievement this year.

We are also interested in music and musical accomplishments at Elon. The church choir has begun its program of rehearsals and will furnish music for the church service Sunday. We have the largest group of singers in the history of the college. There are about fifty in the chorus. The church choir forms the nucleus for the Elon Singers. Last year was the best year that we have had in our Music Department. This year promises to be even more successful. It is the plan of the Elon Singers to make a number of trips for musical programs in different sections. If churches, towns or cities are interested in having our Singers come for a program, they will please write me or Prof. Dwight Steere for information and engagements. Through this organization, we are glad to extend our Music Department into other communities.

There are certain social and cultural aspects of college life that everyone should be permitted to share. Our college calendar for the fall calls for two major social occasions—the sophomore-freshman dinner on the evening of October 4th and the senior-junior dinner on the evening of December 6th. All members of these classes, including the day students, are expected to attend these functions as guests of the college. They will be formal and informal, with an appropriate program that will be pleasing and helpful.

In addition to sports and musical and social programs, the college lays sufficient emphasis upon the religious life. Chapel services are held Wednesdays and Fridays, with a distinctively religious program consisting of song, scripture, prayer and exhortation. On Sunday, we have Sunday school for the community and college students, followed by the morning worship service at 11:00 o'clock in the college chapel. Vespers, under the auspices of the Religious Activities Committee, are held each Sunday evening. This service is in charge of the students themselves. The Ministerial Association conducts prayer services and other religious programs throughout the week.

It is the plan of the Religious Activities Committee to have religious leaders from different sections of the country visit the campus during the year. Mr. Hermon Eldredge, of Dayton, Ohio, has been invited to spend the week of October 12th at Elon, speaking twice daily. Mr. Eldredge is a Christian statesman and is known throughout the country. He has been a member of the International Sunday School Lessons Committee for a long time and has directed the Leadership Training work of the denomination for a number of years. We are fortunate to have Mr. Eldredge spend this time with us. His messages will be on vital religious themes and calculated to strengthen the faith and enrich the christian lives of students, faculty members, and the citizens of the community.

At Elon, we are interested in physical well-being, in mental and social development; but we are also interested in the spiritual lives of the students. Elon is a church institution, and we endeavor to carry out the mandates of the church in connection with our educational program to the best of our ability.

L. E. SMITH.

A TIME OF JOY.

It was the writer's privilege and pleasure to assist Revs. J. M. Roberts and C. E. Geringer in a revival at Oak Grove Christian Church, Gates County, the week following September 2nd. It was my part to conduct the song service. The homes in which we stopped were homes that we had stopped in several years ago while we served the four Gates County Christian churches. These are dear friends and needless to say we were more than glad to see them after years of absence. At the church we met people whom we knew and people whom we were almost sure that we knew but could not recall the name because they had grown so much. I am thinking what a glorious time that will be in Heaven when we get there and meet with those who have gone on before and that we have not seen for years, there to be together in that land that knows no misery and pain, where there is no such thing as strikes and strifes, and all the rest that we have to encounter here.

Despite the rainy weather and slick roads the attendance was real good and interest ran high. The Messages brought by Bro. Geringer were forceful and spiritually inspiring. The people at Oak Grove are to be commended on what they have accomplished in the remodeling program, under the leadership of Bro. J. M. Roberts. They have a modern little church that they are proud of. The outlook is great there as there are so many young people who seem to be willing to do something for the Master. Many people were inspired to higher and holier living during the meeting, a good number were strengthened, some confessed the Saviour for the first time and six additions were made to the Church. It is hoped that more will unite and join this body of workers in His vineyard later.

G. A. PEARCE.

PARAGRAPHS TO PONDER.

By TIMOTHY THOMAS.

Strange as it may seem, man resists change. He rebels at a new policy; he is skeptical of an uncharted course. He scolds at the untried, and yet the testing of the untried has been the lamp of Aladdin that has guided the footsteps of mankind to its present achievements.

* * *

Whether we like it or not we have come out of the each-man-for-himself period. We are coming face to face with the fact that we are our brother's keeper whether we like it or not. We must realize that unless we keep him he cannot keep us. There is no such thing as going back to the old order and survive. It simply cannot be done. We are too advanced in our thought, have too many machines, inventions, conveniences; we have too many media of communication and forms of transportation to isolate ourselves in a social or business way from our brother man. We must live with him, not from him.

* * *

Millions of fine highways, thousands of handsome cars, riders for the most part well dressed; better homes and cleaner homes—homes with conveniences, radios for enlightenment and entertainment—this is a picture we see in a land where 500,000 face the approaching winter, looking to local and national governments for support. We cannot call it poverty, for the designation will not stand. It is a case of disjointed and inadequate distribution of labor which results in an inadequate distribution of wealth. There is work for all, a living for all, and taxes or no taxes the issues cannot be avoided until all have a chance to earn.

* * *

There is a widespread feeling that millions of our good American citizens wish to content themselves with support from state and national governments in the name of relief. This feeling embraces the thought that the number will become so large that what once was a need will crystalize itself into a demand. Our people take pride in standing on their own feet. Pauperism in this country is abhorred, and unless we lose the spirit and ideal of independence—and this we shall not lose if our American school system shall remain true to its teachings—we have nothing to fear. Pauperism in some lands comes at a premium, but in America it is frowned upon as a stigma. Our profound faith and cooperation with the present unfortunate will enable them to throw off this temporary stigma and again be free and happy and independent.

* * *

There are many things out of joint in our economic and social life. The admission of this cannot be denied even by the most unconcerned observer. However, criticism of the adverse type has a way of gathering momentum, rumor becoming accepted fact, and accepted fact becoming fabrication, to omit a more understandable term. Deficiency is too often rated by the individual viewpoint, and since it is easier to find fault it is not difficult to understand why we hear so much about the shortcomings of this or that undertaking. Happily, confusion is not the goal of the typical American mind. Clear thinking and refusal to become excited are the two characteristics that have always made it possible for our leaders to handle a crisis. On this basis we should pin our faith and hope, cease to criticize when we have nothing better to offer, encourage and cultivate the portion which we regard as good, and help it to outgrow that which we feel is deficient.

* * *

There is much criticism going up and down the land these days about the national government taking such a free hand in so many avenues of business. There is another side to the picture. Ask any congressman, or anyone else in a like position to know, and you will learn that from every state and thousands of smaller units numberless pleas are going to Washington seeking aid in one form or another. Great pressure is brought to bear for national government cooperation in this and that. Little publicity is given to these pleas and petitions, but their volume is becoming effective, and when effective there is another multitude who come in and criticize Uncle Sam for taking a "free hand" when in reality it is a forced or coerced hand. In short, fifty per cent of the people blame the government for doing, and the other fifty per cent blame it for not doing. When our leaders stand between two barrages of criticism their acts should not always be classed as mistakes.

HE COULD NOT STOP.

Some years ago a man bought a car in Pontiac, Michigan, a town north of Detroit, and started out to his home in the latter city. Arriving at a gas station, he drove around the station several times, when the attendant, worried by such queer doings, went out and asked him what was the trouble and what he was doing.

"Well, the fellow who sold me this auto taught me how to start it, but not how to stop it. I want some gas, but don't know how to stop and get it."

The attendant climbed into the car and stopped it for him.

We think it a very foolish thing for a man to be driving a car in crowded traffic, without being able to stop; but many people are in a worse predicament even than that.

"When I was at the party," said Betty, aged just four, "a girl fell off her chair right down upon the floor, and all the other little girls began to laugh but me; I didn't laugh a single bit," said Betty seriously.

"Why not?" her mother asked her, full of delight to find that Betty—bless her little heart—had been so sweetly kind. "Why didn't you laugh, darling; or don't you like to tell?"

"I didn't laugh," said Betty, "'cause 'twas me that fell."—Boston Transcript.

OXFORD BIBLES for EVERY NEED

"The Oxford Bible is the Bible par excellence of the world"

THE HOME BIBLE

A Family Bible in Handy Size

An extra large type Oxford Text Bible, containing also, a family register and 12 beautifully colored maps. Size 9 x 5½ inches.

Specimen of Type

16 The LORD is King for ever and ever: the heathen are perished out

No. 01600 Superior Cloth, round corners and red edges $2.75

No. 01603 French Morocco, limp, round corners, red under gold edges, head-band, book-mark $4.75

The JUNIOR'S Bible

Self-Pronouncing

With 4,000 Questions and Answers, carefully selected "Aids to Bible Study," 16 beautifully colored and 15 black full-page illustrations, 6 colored maps and a presentation page. Children may readily pronounce correctly difficult Scripture names, as this Bible is self-pronouncing. Size 7 x 4¾ x 1¼ inches.

Type in Junior's Bible

2 Take the sum of all the of the children of Is-ra-el, years old and upward, thro

No. 1815 French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges, headbands and book-mark. Make some child happy with one of these fine Bibles $2.95

Child's ILLUSTRATED Bible

The beautifully colored illustrations in this new Bible are a delight to the children. It has clear, readable type and yet it measures only 5¾ x 3¾ inches.

Specimen of Type

a My soul length, yea, even faint- en for the courts of the LORD: my heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God. io Mercy and truth gather; righteousness kissed each other. xi Truth shall sprin

No. 02112. French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, gold edges $2.50

Pocket REFERENCE Bible

Has over 50,000 center column references. Measures only 6¼ x 4¾ inches. (A splendid gift for a young lady.)

Specimen of Type

9 Behold, O God our shield, and look upon the face of thine anointed. 10 For a day in thy courts is better

No. 07533x French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges $3.25

Concordance Edition

Type and size as No. 07523x, but with a Concordance, subject index and dictionary of Scripture names. An excellent edition for students and Christian workers No. 03272x $5.00

OUR LEADER Oxford Concordance Bible

Self-Pronouncing

This beautiful Oxford India paper edition is indeed the ideal Bible for the student, preacher and evangelist. Each proper name and difficult word is divided into syllables and accented, and though printed with large clear type, the volume measures only 8½ x 5½ x 1½ inches.

Specimen of Type

8 ¶ Jē-hōi'-ā-chin was 6 years old when he began t

No. 03671x. Fine Grain Morocco leather, overlapping cover, leather lined to edge, silk round corners, red under edges, silk

hear

A UNIQUE GIFT BIBLE

With Basket Weave Binding

The Antique brown calf leather binding has a basket-weave grain, and button clasp. Has overlapping cover, art silk lined, with red under gold edges. With references. Printed on Oxford India paper. Type as Pocket Reference Bible. $5.50

No. 03255x

As No. 03255x, with concordance. No. 03276x $6.50

Oxford TEACH

Have over 50,000 center column references, 300 double-column pages of up-to-date helps, conveniently arranged in alphabetical order. Also 32 full-page illustrations, and an indexed atlas of the Bible with 15 beautifully colored maps of Bible lands.

Easy-to-Read-Edition

Size 7¼ x 5 x 1¾ inches

Specimen of Type

14 Like sheep they are laid in grave; death shall feed on th

Nos. 04453. French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, round corners and red under gold edges. A durable and hand-some Bible $4.35

Oxford India Paper Edition

Only one inch thick.

0773x. French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges, headbands and book-mark. A beautiful gift edition $7.00

RED LETTER Edition

Same size and type as style No. 04453, with same references and helps, but with all the words of Jesus Christ printed in red. White paper cover, round corners, red under gold edges $5.00

The Oxford imprint in a Bible guarantees satisfaction

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary

FOREIGN MISSIONS—AN IMPERATIVE DUTY.

There can be no difference of opinion among Christians as to Foreign Missions being the ever present and pressing duty of the Christian church. Christ Himself put this duty and program in the heart of His Great Commission and sent His disciples out to proclaim it, and this was the first thing they did as they left Jerusalem and went forth in every direction preaching the Gospel to the Gentile world and founding churches. "Go ye therefore and make disciples of all the nations," was the majestic message and command He let loose on that mountain summit, and from that height it has come thundering down through all the centuries and has lost none of its authority and inspiring vision and promise of victory. To eliminate or tone down this message would tear the heart out of the Gospel and leave it lifeless and dead, only the empty husk of a withered dream like the pagan cults of its day that are long since buried under the dust of oblivion.

This would not only emasculate the Gospel abroad, but would be equally fatal to its vitality and vigor at home. We cannot give up Foreign Missions and keep Home Missions; if the Gospel dies out in the pagan world it will soon find its grave in our own world. But if we keep it alive and fruitful abroad, it will send back streams of faith and power to refresh our home churches.

The call is now upon us to gird up our faith and show what is in us. That Foreign Missions are under fire is no new experience, for it has been through many a fire before. The martyrs are still calling upon us to join their noble band and follow in their train. That some of the critics and opponents of Foreign Missions are they of its own household is further reason for renewed faith and faithfulness on our part. We are come to the Kingdom for just such a time as this, and now we must fulfil the duty of the hour and unflinchingly bear the increased burden that is laid upon us.—Presbyterian Banner.

MISSIONARY OFFERINGS.

WEEK ENDING SEPTEMBER 22, 1934.

Sunday Schools.

Previously acknowledged since September 1, 1934. ....	$ 92.06
Suffolk, Va. ....	25.00
Ocean View, Va. ....	2.45
Berea (Nans.), Driver, Va. ....	3.52
Happy Home, Ruffin, N. C. ....	2.40
Liberty (Vance), Henderson, N. C. ....	3.45
Rosemount, Norfolk, Va. ....	9.19
Biseoe, N. C. ....	1.02
Pleasant Union, Lillington, N. C. ....	1.52
Liberty, N. C. ....	2.08
Waverly, Va. ....	4.10
Newport News, Va. ....	5.79
New Elau, New Hill, N. C. ....	3.91
Total .....	156.49

Coin Card Offerings.

Previously acknowledged since September 1, 1934 .....	5.00
Ladies Bible Class, Cypress Chapel Sunday School, Cypress Chapel, Va. ....	1.00
Total .....	6.00

Specials.

Previously acknowledged since September 1, 1934 .....	30.50
---	-------

Catawba Springs, Raleigh, N. C. ....	10.00
Rosemont Class No. 3, Norfolk, Va. ....	3.00
Total .....	43.50

Summary.

Previously acknowledged since September 1, 1934 .....	175.83
Total offerings, week ending September 22, 1934 .....	78.43
Total to date .....	254.26

J. O. ATKINSON, Sec'y.

NEWS ITEMS OF SOCIETIES.

The Junior and Intermediate Missionary Society of the Portsmouth Christian Church has had a splendid year under the leadership of Mrs. C. J. Heath as superintendent. Ten new members were enrolled, much interest has been manifested at the regular meetings and a keen interest was taken in the mission study book "In the African Bush." One of the high spots of the year was the public program given September 5th, when Rev. Chas. B. Peters, of Norfolk, delivered an address and rendered special music on his trombone. The society members presented the play, "The Calling of the Twelve" which showed much preparation and gave a splendid lesson to all. Mrs. R. F. Edwards is secretary of this group of loyal workers.

The Woman's Missionary Society of First Church, Portsmouth, is busy also as we can readily see by the following. This society on a Wednesday night assumed the leadership of the mid-week service and did it well. The pastor was absent and a missionary program was put on. A miscellaneous type of program consisting of readings, special music, devotionals and then a candle light pageant was presented by twelve ladies and twelve girls. This made an impressive service while the room was in darkness. The Juniors are a great help when they are interested and the women can do well to call on them. Mrs. C. T. Rudd furnishes the above information.

Mrs. Payton N. Gay, secretary of the Burton's Grove Young People's society says that though they are few in number, they have held regular meetings each month, sent in their reports quarterly and have met their apportionment for the year. They held one public program this year at which time the play "Something Big" was presented. Besides their missionary work they have done many deeds of charity.

The Windsor Christian Church has a loyal group of young people that are also at work. They have met regularly, sent in their reports quarterly and have met all requirements on the standard of excellence.

They stressed the program part of this work and each meeting the program committee presented a well prepared program along with the study of the study book "Today's Youth and Tomorrow's World."

One of the important meetings of the year was that of their public meeting when they presented a pageant before a large gathering of people. Mrs. J. M. Raby is the efficient superintendent of this group of young people.

The Holland Young People's Society reports a splendid year under the leadership of Mrs. J. R. Darden, superintendent. They have held regular meetings with a good attendance and with renewed interest. Their public program was an interesting one of a miscellaneous type. A discussion of Dr. Stock's book "So This Is Missions," and a one act playlet "And They Left All" written by Miss Frances Everett were the main features on the program.

This society met with the Holy Neck Young People's Society for this mission study and the afternoon and evening was full of fellowship and study of the book, "Builders of a New World" which was taught by members of the two societies. This society together with the Junior society also sponsored a chicken chow mein supper which was a decided success.

This is an interested group of boys and girls who are doing a good work in the missionary cause.

The Young People's Missionary Society of the Dendron, Virginia Christian Church has had a prosperous year under the leadership of Mrs. Garland Spratley. They have had splendid programs with special emphasis on the worship period. An idea that this society would like to pass on is that of the travel library which can be had for the asking plus postage one way. Each member was given a book to read and after a certain length of time the books were brought in and book reviews were given by different members. These books were especially enjoyed and the reviews were very helpful. Many societies would do well to adopt this plan.

Mrs. C. E. Fulgham, superintendent of the Junior Missionary Society of the Windsor Christian Church reports that this little organization is one of the most enthusiastic of all. They have held regular meetings, completed their study book and sent in their apportionment. For their public program they gave a candle light service which was a splendid service and enjoyed by all.

The Junior Missionary Society of the Newport News Christian Church is doing a splendid piece of work under the leadership of Miss June Joy Hyatte. They have given three public programs during the year namely a Christmas missionary program for the Senior C. E. Society using the playlet "A Tale of Three Boxes." Then on the following Sunday they repeated the program for the adult department of the Sunday school. Later they gave a program for the Ladies' Aid Society. At Christmas time they gave a towel shower for the Orphanage.

The first half of the year was given over to the study of China and the last half was devoted to "Our Mountain Work" since the Junior department of the S. S. was using "School Days in Africa." They have already begun "Japanese Here and There" and are more interested than ever.

On February 16th, they observed the World Day of Prayer in Miss Hyatte's home and though the weather was bad the service was beautiful and every child, twelve in number, offered a prayer.

They raised $5.00 over their apportionment and it was all raised through dues and mite boxes. Every child on the roll has contributed something. Last year they had 28 on roll, they lost five and gained seven so they have 30 members at present.

During the past year the W. W. Staley Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian Church has held ten regular meetings, at which time business of importance was taken up and a program given.

They studied "The Christian Mission in America," by Kerr and found it of great value.

In March they celebrated their twenty-first anniversary with an appropriate program. At that time their regular birthday offering was received.

In June they took charge of a prayer service in the absence of their pastor. They used as their subject "America and Our Mission Work." Papers and talks in various phases of this were given, using the Guest Book as a basis upon which to work.

During the year they have received several new members into their society, have revised their Constitution and tried to advance the cause of missions in every way possible. Miss H. Yates is the president of this society.

DR. BELL COMES SOUTH.

Dr. Enoch Frye Bell of Boston, Mass., Editorial Secretary of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, will speak at DeLeon Springs, Florida, during the Congregational and Christian Ministers' Convocation, October 1st to 3rd; at Atlanta, Ga., before the Regional Committee meeting of the commissions on Missions, October 9th to 10th; at Southern Pines, N. C., before the Carolina Conference of Congregational and Christian Churches, October 11th and 12th; at Albemarle, N. C., Sunday, A. M., October 14th, and at Elon College Chapel Services, October 15th.

Dr. Bell is best known as the editor of the "Missionary Herald," a magazine which represents the Congregational and Christian churches of the United States at home and abroad. His familiarity with overseas work and with missionaries, however, comes from twenty-eight years of experience at headquarters, a period of service as a missionary in Japan and extensive travels in Korea, Japan, Mexico and the Phillipines.

From Yale University, Dr. Bell received his A. B. and Phi Beta Kappa. From Andover Theological Seminary his S. T. B. and from Middlebury College his D. D. For years he has been a member of the Reference and Council Committee of the Foreign Missions Conference which represents all the foreign mission boards of North America, serving as Chairman of the publicity committee for a time.

Dr. Bell's main topic on this speaking tour will be "An Editor Looks at Modern Missions," and will include such subjects as, "Modern Missions and Social Action," "Modern Missions and World Peace," "Modern Missions and Evangelism," "Modern Missions and the Printed Page," and "Modern Missions and Administration."

Boston, Mass.,
September 24, 1934.

NOTICE.

The North Carolina Woman's Missionary Conference meets with the First Christian Church, Greensboro, N. C., on Thursday, Oct. 18, 1934.

MRS. C. H. ROWLAND, Pres.,
MRS. W. P. LAWRENCE, Sec.

Greensboro, N. C.

NOTICE.

The Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference will meet with the Liberty Springs Christian Church, Friday, October 5th. Morning session will open at 10:00 o'clock.

A most cordial invitation is extended our ministers, and friends of the conference. Each society is urged to exert every possible effort to make this meeting the best in our history.

MRS. L. W. STAGG,
Secretary.

TRAINING LEADERS FOR THE INDIAN CHURCH.

By MISS D. P. CUSHING, News Editor.

Dr. John J. Banninga, Principal of the Union Theological Seminary, Pasumalai, India, has gained a place of recognized leadership in India as a scholar and educator, a man of balanced judgment and outstanding devotion. He began his work in 1901 and as head of this school, has been engaged chiefly in training young men for service in the churches of that area, which have nearly 10,000 communicants.

Dr. Banninga has devoted himself to a special study of the life of Christ in preparation for a volume upon the subject written from the standpoint of the Hindu and in a way to present Christ so that the Indian can readily understand. This will be translated into the various languages of India and made widely available by the Indian Christian Literature Society. He was an active force in bringing about the organization of the United Church of South India which has become a powerful non-sectarian body and which he represented as fraternal delegate at the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches in Oberlin this year, 1934.

Dr. Banninga is a Michigan man and a graduate of Hope College and Weston Theological Seminary. He is a member of the Board of Madura College and of Madras University. During his last furlough he was elected an instructor in the School of Missions, Hartford Theological Foundation.

(Dr. Banninga is now on furlough in America, and we are expecting him in many of our churches here in the South in October.—Ed.)

AT WHAT PRICE A BALANCED BUDGET?

Under date of September 17th from Boston, Mass., comes this arresting paragraph:

"The American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions announced today through its Treasurer, Harold B. Belcher, that it was closing its fiscal year with a balanced budget for the first time in six years. Total expenditures for the year were $1,338,661.88 running beyond the budget by one tenth of one per cent. This total represents a reduction of 37 per cent from that of five years ago."

The above, indeed, is encouraging, but the following will indicate at what price a balanced budget was obtained:

"Receipts from Congregational and Christian churches, which the American Board represents overseas, were $495,015.94 or $89,526.38 less than last year. Individual gifts were $103,926.09, a loss of $4,767.63. Receipts from legacies and Matured Conditional Gifts totaled $234,328.27, a reduction of $42,996.51 from last year. Designated Gifts fell off from $143,431.99 to $36,142.15.

"Three factors contributed to this satisfactory outcome," says Mr. Belcher. 'First, the large number of sacrificial personal gifts which came in during the closing weeks of the year. Second, drastic reduction of expenditures. All appropriations were cut, missionaries called home, salaries reduced. Third, the use of proceeds of sales of property and use of reserve accounts that were called on this year to balance the budget.'

The accumulated debt now stands at $136,713.03. It was reduced during the year $150,000 by use of property sales and available reserve accounts and by $25,000 as required by the budget.

"When the Presidential Committee meets in October to adopt the budget for the new fiscal year," points out Mr. Belcher, "it will be necessary to put into effect further reductions agreed upon last spring since it will not be possible to receive as income the amounts from property sales and use of reserves that were available in the year just closed."

One of the methods of reduction has been putting a larger burden of support on the National Christian churches which, coming at a time when all the world is suffering from depression, lays a heavy burden on these younger groups. This has been accepted in a courageous spirit, as in Japan, where the Kumiai Church (Congregational) has undertaken to provide, progressively over a period of ten years, the whole support of the evangelistic work. In some cases this has meant the abandonment of schools and withdrawal from social and medical work in places where no other sums are available.

RECOGNITION DAY FOR TEACHERS.

To honor the honorable is to honor oneself. The Community which is quick to recognize the worth of its own public servants is the one which is endowed with the noblest spirit. In paying tribute to that silent, unremunerated host of helpers of humanity, the Sunday school teachers, by keeping Recognition Day adequately on October 6th, a city is at the same time revealing its own character.

SUBSCRIBERS TO THE CHRISTIAN SUN

These Pens are of standard make, and will give good service. If you are in need of a Fountain Pen, order from us. Postage paid and Pens guaranteed by the manufacturer.

MEN'S PENS—Capitol, $2.00; Mercantile, $3.00.

LADIES' PENS, $2.00.

COMBINATION OFFER—To a new subscriber or for renewal, $2.50, either Gentleman's (Capitol) Pen or Ladies' Pen, with guarantee of manufacturer. And to "Sun" subscribers, not in arrears, any Pen at one-fourth off. Address: THE CHRISTIAN SUN, 1536 EAST BROAD STREET, RICHMOND, VIRGINIA

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

WHAT IS THE CENTER OF YOUR LIFE?

Everything has its center about which it revolves, or lives. The planets swing about the sun as their center. People have some central thought or idea that determines the course of life.

Some center everything about wealth. If they can get rich, they think that they will be supremely happy and nothing else will matter. That makes it seem right to wreck their health, morals, and the other people about them in order to get wealth. But very few ever feel that they have enough wealth. They do not find satisfaction of soul by centering everything about money.

Others think that popularity is most important. I heard recently of a girl who said that to be a good sport means more than anything else in the world. She believed in being a good sport at any price. There are those who will drink, cheat, "pet", lie, and crush the heart of others with gossip just to be popular with a certain crowd. About such Jesus said, "Verily they have their reward." But it does not satisfy the soul.

Certain young people center life in a friend of the opposite sex. Recently I was in a religious service in the open where young people were supposed to be seriously trying to get help so they can be better Christian workers. A car drove up nearby with three boys in it. One of the girls in the service thought she should rush right out of the service, even though it would disturb everyone else, and go to the boy-friend. By persuasion, she remained seated until that speaker had finished but left then to go to the center of her universe. Next week the center may be someone else. If it were a case of real love, he certainly could wait for her and know that she still cared for him. If it was not love, the real thing, it could not matter much. I sometimes wonder if girls—and boys—know that they lose their chances with thinking people when they forget duty, religion, and everything else just to be in the presence of one whom they profess to worship. If they don't, it is pathetic; if they do, it is tragic.

There is a center about which all life can swing and be safe. That center is God. His magnetism can hold us in proper place so that all of life will sing in harmony. A person who makes something else the center of life has just as good a chance to get along in the universe as one of our planets would if it refused to keep its place about the sun. Imagine our earth trying to make the moon its sun, and you will have a fairly good picture of a person who worships another of his fellow-creatures. Only God is worthy of the adoration, worship, of man. Only God should take central place in life.

God is best known to us in Jesus, the Christ. The church is the visible form of Christ and God. To make God central in life will make each of us absolutely loyal to the church. If the church is used only as a convenience and other things come first, then we have lost the center about which life should swing and we need a conversion before there comes a spiritual wreck. If you have lost your church loyalty, if you fail to be present when needed, if you think other things more important than the things that you are supposed to do for your church, it is time for you to check up on the center of your life. It may be that you have lost your balance.

DO YOU PAY YOUR SHARE?

The end of the Church Year is rapidly approaching in Christian churches of the South. Most church treasurers are wondering where they will get enough money with which to pay the bills. Missionary obligations are often neglected. The enterprises of the church suffer want. Conference Apportionments are not paid in full by any of our Conferences and only seventeen per cent of the churches paid in full last year.

I wonder if the young people pay their share of church expenses and for missionary activities? Somebody surely does not do enough. If all did their part, there would not be so much need.

The ancient Jews gave a tithe of their income for their religion. Moses wrote it into the law as a command. (See Lev. 27:30.) The prophets said that to fail to give a tenth to the religious work was to rob God (Malachi 3:8). Paul said that the way to support the church was for each person to lay aside as God had prospered him and give it on the first day of the week. (I Cor. 16:2.) And Jesus said that people "ought" to pay tithes and also to be kind (Matt. 23:23). This is the way the Bible says people should give, or pay to the church.

But most people believe in doing it differently. Our method keeps the church poor and the people unhappy. Don't you think that it would be wise to try the Biblical way? It might work.

A church I know is having financial troubles. And yet more than fifty men are working daily, seven women are at work, ten young people have jobs, five people have retired and have an income, and numbers of other people are members of families that have incomes. Suppose all those people should tithe for a year. It would mean that all bills would be paid, indebtedness paid, needed repairs made, and much larger contributions going to the various enterprises of the denomination. I sometimes wonder if the young people, for whom I work and write, are in the list of the many who do not give their share, or if they are among the faithful who search the Scriptures to find the way to life at its best and then try to do their full share in all the work of the church. I sincerely hope that you who read this cannot be content to let the work of the church fall behind until you have given your full share of labor and money.

A BROTHER OF MAN.

"Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ"—Gal. 6:2.

Did you give him a life? He's a brother of man
And bearing about all the burden he can.

Did you give him a smile? He was downcast and blue,

And the smile would have helped him to battle it through.

Did you give him your hand? He was slipping down hill,

And the world, so I fancied, was using him ill.
Did you give him a word? Did you show him the road?

Or did you just let him go on with his load?
Did you help him along? He is human like you.
But the grasp of your hand may have carried him through.

Did you bid him good cheer? Just a word and a smile

Were what he most needed that last weary mile.
Did you know what he bore in that burden of cares

That is every man's load, and that sympathy cheers?

Did you try to find out what he needed from you,
Or did you just leave him to battle it through?

Do you know what it means to be losing the fight
When a lift just in time might set everything right?

Do you know what it means—just the clasp of a hand

When a man's borne all that a man ought to stand?

"THIS IS MY TASK."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR OCT. 7, 1934.
John 17:19.

A Commitment Service.

Quiet Music: (Piano and Violin.)

Hymn: "The Son of God Goes Forth to War."

Leader:

"In days long gone God spake unto our sides;
'Courage! Launch out! A new world build for me!
Then to the deep they set their ships, and sailed
And came to land, and prayed that there might be
A realm from pride and despotism free,
A place of peace, the home of liberty.

"Lo, in these days, to all good men and true
God speaks again; 'Launch out upon the deep
And win for me a world of righteousness!
Can we, free men, at such an hour still sleep.
A God of Freedom, stirs us in our night
That we set forth, for justice, truth, and right."

Hymn: "Rise Up, O Men (Youth) of God."

Prayer (by three young people).

(a.) Pray for the courage to make our Christian convictions guide our conduct that we may share in building a new world; (b.) Pray for Christian courage to stand unflinchingly against personal wrong, social wrongs, international injustice; (c.) Pray for courage to assume in home and church and community and world our share in the task of making Christ known and accepted as Saviour.

Response:

We will be true to Thee till death.—Amen.
"Faith of our Fathers, holy faith,

Message from God's Word:

It is good to remember the stories of the people long ago, who responded gladly to the call of service, as we think about the voices which are calling to us today to share in the building of a new world where all people shall have the opportunity to achieve the abundant life which Jesus came to offer. May we listen for the voice which may speak to our souls as we listen to these stories of old.

God called Abram. Gen. 12:1-4a.

God speaks to the prophet. Isa. 6:1-9a.

The call of Jesus. Matt. 4:18-20.

The command of Jesus. John 21:15-17.

The example of Jesus. John 17:19.

(American Revised Version.)

Solo: "Living for Jesus. (Entire group sing chorus.)

Leader talk for a few minutes about the theme "Christian Youth Building a New World.")
Let us think about some of the things which are essential if we are to have such a world.

Three-minute talks:

1. New Persons—the kind of people who will be the citizens of a Christian world.

2. New Home—the interpretation of the "new home."

3. New Church—the church at its best. The Church of Jesus Christ will become a New Church

(Continued on page 11.)

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

GOD IN HEBREW HISTORY.

LESSON XIV—SEPTEMBER 30, 1934.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Thy kingdom in an everlasting kingdom."—Psalm 145:13.

We have been studying during the past three months the story of some of the kings and prophets of Israel. It was not a closely-knit, connected story, but it gives us in rough outline at least the history of Israel, and a glimpse at the dominant personalities in that history. Instead of taking up the review lesson by lesson let us make some generalizations concerning the period and the material we have covered. What have been the main emphases in this material?

First of all, one gets the impression that God was working out His purpose in the nation Israel. The isolated events do not make this so clear, but as one views the whole story he sees that there was a divine purpose back of the story and a divine providence in the story. God was preparing His people for the mission which they were to fulfil in human history. It was not all steady progress. There were ups and downs. There were times when progress was not being made, and even when retrogression had set in. But there was continuity and the general course of the nation's life moved onward and upward.

Then, too, there is the lesson that nations as well as individuals are subject to the consequences and penalties of sin and disobedience. The wages of sin is death, for the nation as well as for the individual. The sufferings of the nation were the direct and indirect result of national sins. The way of the transgressor is hard whether the transgressor be a nation or an individual.

One gets the impression, too, that leaders have a great deal to do with the life of the nation. This does not mean that one good man as President, or several good men in positions of authority will automatically make everybody in the nation good. But it does mean that when the leaders of a people are God-fearing, and not self-seeking, when they are men of integrity and devotion to high ideals, their influence is felt on the national life and national policies.

When we come to consider the prophets there are several things that stand out. One gets the impression, for example, that they did speak for God. In every instance they felt that God had revealed His will to them. God had put His message in their hearts and they could not but proclaim it. There was a note of certainty and a note of authority in their message. They usually began it with a "Thus saith the Lord" and their messages were self-authenticating.

The prophets insisted upon the supremacy of the moral and spiritual over the formal and the ceremonial. They did not denounce ceremony as such. They did not demand its abolishment. But they did insist again and again that ceremony apart from morality was not only of no avail; it was indeed blasphemy. The prophets put the emphasis upon the inner life rather than upon external form.

The prophets were interested in social conditions. They had regard for the conditions under which men lived, and the limitations that others put upon them. They were the fore-runners of those who seek better housing conditions, better working conditions, fair play, justice, equal opportunities, etc., for men and women, boys and girls.

The prophets made known in a fuller way the moral character of God and His many attributes. Amos insisted He was a God of justice; Hosea emphasized His love; Micah declared His wrath against those who wronged His children; Isaiah emphasized His holiness. They discovered in a fuller way His personal character, and at the same time broadened His sovereignty. At first Jehovah was the God of Israel, then He was the God of the nations but there were other gods, but eventually the prophets insisted that the gods of the other nations were only idols—there was but one God, Jehovah, who was Lord. This God was sovereign. He used other nations to accomplish His purpose. And although men might delay His purpose they could not permanently thwart it.

The religion of Israel owes an eternal debt to the prophets. It was they who gave the Jews the inner, vital, living interpretation of religion, that is of spiritual religion. And they who found their fullest expression in Jesus of Nazareth who was a prophet mighty in word and in deed.

THE YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

(Continued from page 10.)

as it seeks and discovers new ways to carry out the mission of Jesus in the world today.

4. New Community—making our communities places where justice and fair play rule, and where consideration and love are found.

5. New Nation—description of what a Christian Nation will be like; what problems will be solved; what new phases will be evident.

6. New World—how young people can work with others for world brotherhood.

Hymn: "O Master Workman of the Race" or "Jesus Calls Us."

Leader: We have seen a glimpse of what it really means to live for Jesus. We shall now spend a few minutes thinking about what this may mean for our own lives. As we think about "Christian Youth Building a New World," what do you see which seems so vital and close to you, that you can say "This is My Task"? Is there something which appeals to you so much that you are moved to say as Paul did long ago; "This one thing I do"? As you think of the needs of children, or people in your world, can you say with Jesus "For their sakes, I consecrate myself" and then commit yourself to a way of life which will help you to have a self worth giving for the sake of others?

(If desired, the closing moments may be in a room lighted only by candle light, a tall white taper symbolizing the light which Christ brought into the world, and remind all who would follow Him to let their lights shine.)

A period of quiet meditation may be followed by those who will respond for the groups which they represent, and by a "Litany of Meditation," or you may have your service of installation here.

Adapted from the Sunday School Herald.

There are three kinds of givers: The Flint, the Sponge, and the Honey Comb. To get anything out of a flint you must hammer it, and you get only chips and sparks. To get water out of a sponge you must squeeze it, and the more you squeeze the more you will get. But the honey comb just overflows with its own sweetness. Some people are stingy and hard. They give nothing away if they can help it, others are good natured and yield to pressure and the more they are pressed the more they will give. A few delight in giving without being asked at all, and of these the Bible says, "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver."—From The Bulletin, Kittanning, Pa.

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.

Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.

These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. It combines with the Concordance, Subject-Index, Scripture Proper Names, etc. The 12 Maps have been carefully revised and are beautifully colored. In making orders, give the number and price.

135—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold. $3.00

India Paper Edition, Only 16-16 of an inch thick.

133X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold, $4.00

SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS' BIBLE.

Especially made up for gift or reward Bibles for Sunday School scholars, containing a special series of very practical and useful helps and Bible Questions and Answers, etc. Printed on fine white Bible paper; ruby type; pocket size, 3 3/4 x 5 3/8 inches, and 1 inch thick, with 31 full-page illustrations in sepia. All bindings are black. Ruby Type, Size 3 3/4 x 5 3/8 Inches, and 1 Inch Thick.

65—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold; 6 colored maps .....$2.50

AUTHORIZED VERSION.

RED LETTER TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Brevier Type (8 vo.), Self-Pronouncing, Size 5 3/8 x 8 1/2 Inches and 1 3/8 Inches Thick.

Containing the Bible, with full references. The words of Christ in the New Testament are printed in red; other parts of the book are printed in black. With Concise Bible Dictionary, combined Concordance, and 12 indexed maps.

7852—Genuine Leather, Lavanant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold .....$4.75

RED-LETTER EDITION.

With All the Words of Christ in the New Testament Printed in Red.

1282—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit round corners, red under gold edges, register and headbands; title stamped on side and back in pure gold .....$3.25

60—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, Sunday School Scholars' Bible, stamped in pure gold on cover, no illustrations; special book for Sunday Schools .....95c

Any of the above Bibles sent postpaid. Address
THE CHRISTIAN SUN
1536 East Broad Street Richmond, Virginia

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy

MONDAY.

GET OUT OF MY LIGHT.

"Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these other things shall be added unto you."—Matt. 6:33.

A steamer crossed the bow of our ship. Passengers crowded the rails. Signalmen, who are the eyes of the ship, could not see for interference. "Clear the decks" was the command.

Some were excited, regarding the incident as but a piece of romance. Others were struck with terror because of the danger. Others turned away blasé as though it were but a triviality unworthy of notice. But as the signals crackled from the aerials of the passing ship, men of the ship read the code with intelligence. The messages were life to them. They meant everything in the operation of the ship.

Life is a crackling mass of work, play, enslaving routines and a thousand distractions. To the masses that is all it is and they never have time to consider calmly the essential meaning of it all.

Only he who studies essentials and subordinates and disciplines himself to those essentials like the signalmen of the ship can understand life's meanings rightly and make the most of it. All others may be in the way obscuring the vision.

The rush of things around us we cannot help, but we can avoid them. The bedlam of interest about us we cannot stop, but we can have Jesus and His wisdom and pick out the messages there of true life and cultivate a keen sense in them. The profoundest secret the world has known is "Righteousness first in all things and God adds everything else we need for our good and happiness."

Prayer—Our Father, make us keen to the first need of our life, be Thou master of our souls. We pray for hearts of love supreme that takes triumphant hold on realities."—Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE GRAND POWER PLANT OF WORK.

"He that gathereth by labor shall have increase."—Prov. 13:11.

"Work not for the food which perisheth, but for the food which abideth unto eternal life, which the son of man shall give unto you."—Jno. 6:27.

Back of all life's activities are two essential motive powers necessary to success,—as a recent writer puts it, "something to do and something to love."

No man wins anything in life who is not working to some purpose that fits into the scheme of the divine plan. Work is basic in all living. There are those who feel that nothing matters, but everything matters to those who feel themselves a part of the creative process of things. One of the three sisters in the Russian Drama expresses the sentiment of this truth when she says, "If I can't be a man who works, I would rather be an ox, or a horse, or any working animal."

So well is it said that "Too many think they can catch the bluebird of happiness by burning up gasoline, frolicking all night and running the gamut of worldly delights." Happiness is not found that way.

Prayer—Our Father, help us. Give us vision to see the true and the false and the intelligence to choose wisely what we do and say and be blessed by the true and the good. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE GRAND POWER PLANT OF LOVE.

"Let us love one another: for love is of God: and everyone that loveth is begotten of God, and knoweth God."—Jno. 4:7, 8.

Back of life's success is love. No man gets anywhere without loving someone and someone loving him. It takes that sort of thing to lead one beyond himself.

Love illuminates one's devotion to causes, motivates one's desires, redeems ambitions, inspires to achievement and life's everyday life to translucent effort.

To love someone manifests God and demonstrates living with God; and it is foolish to think that we can make the journey of life without that power. Without it we are like one who undertakes to go up in the stratosphere without his gas tank,—he cannot breathe. Without God we cannot live. "God is love," and without love we cannot live.

Love is the power that inspires one to rise and press on toward what he ought to be. It is this power that makes one master of his own character. It is this power that takes hold of true realities.

Prayer—Father, teach us to love as Christ loved. Give us the love in our hearts that will enable us to live as He would have us live.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

NARROWING.

"What shall a man give in exchange for his soul?"—Matt. 16:26.

There is no narrowing so deadly as the narrowing of a man's horizon of spiritual things. No worse evil can befall one than to be separated from God and lose sight of heaven.

And the best civilization cannot prevent this; the highest achievements cannot compensate for it; all the revelations of science cannot prevent it; all knowledge of truth cannot prevent it; nothing can save a man's soul but a consciousness of God and a life hid in Him. Christ said it, for one and all, "Ye must be born again." That means believing in Him and living in harmony with Him. "Christ in you," said the apostle, "is the hope of glory."

Prayer—O God, Thou divine principle of good, who dwellest in harmony and love, we feel in our souls that Thou art good in us; for we believe that Thou rulest in all things for each one's ultimate good, and we desire to be true children of light and of thine.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE CROSS.

"And now abideth faith, hope and love, these three, but the greatest of these is love."—I Cor. 13:13.

The cross is the symbol of suffering, but suffering is the expression of faith, hope and love. These are the ineffable virtues of the soul which Christ came to teach and to inculcate in all His followers, and He suffered death on the cross in doing it. Therefore the higher meaning of the cross is faith, hope and love, and the cross is the symbol that they shall abide forever. It is not believed that the loftiest places of being in the universe of God's glory shall overshadow this fact.

Prayer—Our Father, we pray that we may this day be inspired with Thy love and that our lives may be an expression of Thyself in all the ways possible to us. This we ask for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE FIRST STEP.

"Inquire first, I pray thee, for the word of Jehovah."—I Kings 22:1-12.

There was a question whether Jehoshaphat, King of Judah, should join Ahab, King of Israel, in war against Syria; and Jehoshaphat wisely required that first God's prophets should be consulted, that their advice might be followed.

That will be the Christian's first step in any enterprise. Is God for it, or against it? The answer to that question will determine the fate of the project.

Is this the first step that is usually taken when a tariff bill is framed by Congress, when candidates are to be nominated by a political party, when business firms are to be merged, when a canal is to be dug or a building erected? Do we inquire first for the word of Jehovah?

Prayer—O God, direct our planning. Thou alone knowest all the future. Thou alone canst lead us to a happy goal!—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

SUNDAY.

OUR GIRDLE.

"Thou hast girded me with strength unto the battle."—Ps. 18:31-39.

A belt is a comfortable thing. It encircles us with a feeling of power. It binds our muscles together. It gives us strength for the combat. No wonder that in the Scripture it is used as a symbol of the upholding of the Lord.

We have a right, if we are true sons of God, true followers of Jesus Christ, to be sure that we are girded with strength for every battle to which we are summoned. We have a right to know that, for that time and purpose, we are sharers in the divine omnipotence. Every foe shall fall before us, for we are girt about with the might of the Almighty. It is our privilege to walk with entire confidence, and face all perils with a smile.

Prayer—For Thou art our strong tower, O God. Thou dost compass us about with songs of deliverance.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

A LIFE INCOME.

During the few months in which I have been connected with the Layman's Advisory Committee I have become much interested in the annuities which are being obtained through our various Congregational Societies. I feel strongly that these annuities constitute a safe and reliable investment with an adequate return.

The history of all our Societies in the handling of their invested funds has been exceptional, and their record over the last three years compares more than favorably with that of financial institutions.

I will be pleased to send more information about these annuities to all persons who desire it and who send me their name and date of birth.

THE LAYMEN'S ADVISORY COMMITTEE.

Donald A. Adams, Chairman.

152 Temple Street,
New Haven, Conn.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

THE CHURCH IN THE HOME.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"The church that is in thy house."—Philemon 2.

Here we have two of Christianity's strongest forts: the home, the church. Any person having a great home, and a great church has a very distinct advantage in achieving life's happiness and joy. A great home is rather to be chosen than great wealth, and so is a great church; they are rather to be chosen than great political influence; or great social prestige.

Here in our text we have a church inside a home. In other words the home is large enough to envelope the church of which Paul is here speaking. I am not prepared to say that the home is bigger than the church; but I am prepared to say that the biggest church beneath the stars is the one in the home! "The church that is in thy house," may it be a great one!

I. Both Founded on Love.

One of the prettiest things in the human-life picture is that of a young man and a young woman truly and completely loving one another, getting married, and making a home. Within the year more than one hundred young people have come to this church to be married by your pastor, and to have the blessings of the church and the benediction of God on the foundation stones of their house-beautiful. I wish it were possible to have everyone of them present tonight to hear this little talk. One of the first things I would say to them would be that unless their house was built upon the love-motive it would eventually topple. Dr. Albert W. Beamon says, "The securing of a satisfactory relationship between two folks in wedlock is about the most difficult and continuous operation that is known." It is not a product of the "words at the altar"; it is not an accident that just happens. It must be consciously cultivated, and happily sought as an urge of affection and love from the mind and heart within.

The success of the home depends upon character on the part of the two contracting parties. A contract anywhere without the bedrock basis of character stands on shifting sand. If the contracting parties are not able to trust one another how will they ever be able to assure themselves that their children will possess sterling character? Each of the contracting parties must know the meaning of the words: honesty, truthfulness, honor, goodness, dependability, and self-control. If such be the unqualified basis of the home, found in both alike of the contracting parties, then there is a possibility of a "church within thy house."

For a church is founded on love. If it has been born of spite, or hate, or ill-will, or jealousy, or vain ambition, or ugly competition it is doomed in the morning. God is love. The church is God's agent on earth, the bride of Christ, and subject to his command to love one another, "even," says he, "as I have loved you." Having considered thus, briefly the basis of the home, let us now turn to "the church that is within thy house."

II. The Church in the Home.

I have seen a church in a home. I had some very good German friends in Halifax County, Virginia, who literally had a church in their home. Each member of the family, upon confirmation, became members of that church. Their pastor came from a nearby town, and held services regularly, and on one occasion a Presbyterian minister and I were present when two of the sons were confirmed, and elected to membership in the church in their house!

I like to think of a church in every Christian home. I saw the church in that house; I attended it upon that occasion; but I thank God for the church in my own childhood home that attended me! I thank God for the unseen, but ever-felt church within the sacred confines of that home that never let up from looking after me. It was as obviously a part of my childhood life as my breath and my bread!

It becomes increasingly easy to pass the responsibility, for it is such a great one, of rearing our children after a Christian manner upon agencies outside the home. We are all more or less prone to do it. I have found myself at times wondering when I might have a chance at the youth of my church seeing that the school held them so within its grasp. I see now I was not wondering wisely. I must build the church in the home, then come what may the youth will have had a good start.

Dr. Beaven says, "The ordinary child has 105,000 waking hours between birth and twenty-one years of age. If he has attended the church school all the time it was open during these years, it would get about 2,100 hours; the secular school would get about 10,000 hours; and the home would have about 92,000 hours." When we see those figures may we not say, Blessings on the church within thy house? Anyone can be good, and kind, and polite, and gracious in the church, in the temple, on Sunday for a brief worship hour, but the great church is the church that is on the job every hour in the day, in the home. A child that is born into that kind of home, and reared in that sort of circumstances has, I repeat, a great advantage from the very beginning. Even the sleeping hours count. There is something that makes a difference whether a child lies down to sleep in a home where there is love and trust, rather than a home in which there is anger, and hate, and quarreling, and confusion. The religion that cannot shine behind the closed doors of the sacred precincts of the home is a make-believe and a mockery; but on the other hand a religion that does shine behind those closed doors will shine abroad into the community and the world.

Let us not be too prone to pass the responsibility of the training of our children on to the church, or to the school, or to the outside influences. The home is God's first school, and God's greatest human agency in society. If the home fails; if the school there closes down; if the fires on its altars go out; if marriage bonds break, and filial devotion and love fail, then God have mercy upon our land and every other institution outside our doors!

III. The Church in the Home is Greater Than The Church in the Temple.

That is only a way of saying that the church goes for its greatest influence into the home. The church is the church, whether it be in the home or in the field; whether it be on the Sabbath, or the days between the Sabbaths; but if the church's altars are not lighted behind the doors of our homes they cannot burn brightly in the temple. God does not honor that sort of lip-service.

They tell us that religion is learned one-tenth by theory, and nine-tenths by practice. In other words our first great, lasting lessons in Christian living and thought is ordinarily learned from the living examples of our parents in the home. And in this we may have hope, for a great many young parents are really finer in the teachings they give their little sons and daughters than their attendance upon a formal church might indicate. Grant that many young parents, members of the church, are not doing their whole Christian duty, and yet I am loathe to think that they do not know and love the Christian principles of kindness, truthfulness, and benevolence and teach them both by precept and example to the little ones. This, too, all the more emphasizes how nobly they should walk before their children; how regularly

(Continued on page 15.)

COMMUNION WARE.

Individual Service.

Made in best Silver Plate or Aluminum. Prices low; first-class workmanship and finish.

ALUMINUM.

Aluminum is light in weight, durable, and does not tarnish.

Style No. 50-A.

- Tray No. 2—Interlocking, with 40 plain glasses $7.00
- Tray No. 6—Interlocking, with 35 plain glasses 6.75
- Tray No. 10—Interlocking, with 30 plain glasses 6.50
- Base No. 50-A—Fits Trays 2, 6, or 10..... 2.25
- Cover No. 50-A—Fits Trays 2, 6, or 10..... 2.25
- Bread Plate No. 1—Narrow rim..... 1.60

SILVER-PLATED.

The Silver-plated Ware is of the very highest grade and best finish; heavily plated on nickel base.

- Tray No. 85—Interlocking only, with 36 glasses $22.00
- Base No. 1—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 85... 11.00
- Cover No. 5—Silver-plated; fits Tray No. 85... 16.00

(For Silver Bread Plates, see under No. 90.)

- Tray No. 90—Interlocking, with 36 plain glasses (this style has broad rim, which is sometimes preferred, due to increased ease of handling) $22.00
- Base No. 2—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 90... 16.00
- Cover No. 4—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 90. 14.00

- Bread Plate No. 3—Narrow Rim.....$ 9.00
- Bread Plate No. 4—Broad Rim..... 9.00
- Filler—Silver Lined..... 6.00

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street

Richmond, Virginia

A Story for the Children

BAKED MUD.

By GRANDPA.

"Here comes grandpa, let's invite him to our party," said Ruth, "and maybe he will tell us a story."

"Ho, here, what is all this I see out here under the maple tree," said grandpa as he came up to the table.

"We are playing keep house, and this is an afternoon tea-party," said Ruth. "Won't you be part of our company, and have a cup of tea with us?"

"I'll be mighty glad to have some tea if you will serve it to me in baked mud," said grandpa.

"Baked mud," they all exclaimed together.

"Yes, baked mud, I like my tea in baked mud."

"We didn't bake any mud pies," said Vanda, "and we don't have any baked mud."

"Well, Ruth you go to the house and ask mama for a cup of baked mud, and if she does not have any, tell her to give you a china cup and saucer, they will do as well, maybe better.

"Grandpa, what do you mean by wanting to drink tea out of a baked mud cup?"

"Well, it tastes better, and then it is much more stylish than your tin dishes."

"But you have some better reason than that," said Ruth. "Now tell us, while we drink our tea, anyway tell us what you mean by baked mud."

"Well, if you will take a little trip with me, this afternoon, I will show you what I mean, and that will be better than to tell you."

"But where will we go?" they asked.

"We will stay right here under the shade of the big maple tree, but we will play that we are taking a trip."

"That will be great fun and we won't need to take any extra clothes," said Mary Marie.

"First we will play that we are on a steamboat going down the Monongahela river. After we pass Morgantown we come to Point Marion, then Brownsville, and then Monongahela City, where Ruth's great grandma was born. Then we will come to Pittsburgh, where Ruth's mamma first went to school and was afraid because there were little colored children in the school."

"You don't mean that the colored children and white children all go to the same school, do you?"

"Yes, the law says that every child has the right to attend the free public schools, but it don't provide for separate schools for the colored people, like we do here in the South. Now let us leave the smoky old city and sail on down the broad, beautiful Ohio river to the city of East Liverpool, Ohio, and there we will stop. How have you enjoyed the trip?"

"O, everything was wonderful and the little towns and the hills along the river were so beautiful, and the locks and dams, with the water pouring over them were like little Niagara's. And the Ohio river is too big and beautiful to talk about."

"Well, here we are at East Liverpool, on the Ohio side of the river. We will go up to the Burford Brothers pottery, and watch them bake mud. They will be glad to show us around the works."

"Ah, grandpa, now we know what you mean by baked mud. You mean dishes and china ware," said Ruth.

"Sure, that is what I mean, for that is exactly what china ware and all sorts of porcelain ware is, just baked mud. But here comes Mr. Burford to show us around. We will start down at the big bins where you see the man unloading a car full of the clay. That clay comes from New Jersey, but they have to send to England and France for some of it. See how white it is."

"It looks like snow," said Vanda.

"Next we will go into the mill-house where they grind the clay until it is as fine as flour. And do you see those big tanks over there with the steel arms moving around in them? These arms have large magnets attached to them, that move around through the clay as it is mixed, and pick up every little particle of iron that may be in the clay. You see, a little piece of iron would spoil the dishes, make a black spot, and maybe cause it to break when it was being cooked, baked I mean. Now we will go over into the rooms where the men and girls are making plates and cups and saucers. Now watch them put a ball of mud on that little round table and pat it down until it fits into all of the little spaces on the table. There, see him put that piece of wood down on the plate and the wheel begins to turn."

"See he's taking it off, and it looks just like a plate," said Eleanor, "but it's just mud."

"Do you see that man making half-pitchers over there, he puts the clay into a mould, and presses it down till it fits every place in the mould, then he makes the other half the same way."

"Now he is spreading some of that stuff that looks like chicken gravy on the edges, and when the two halves are put together they will cement so tight that you would think the pitcher had been made all in one piece."

"Next we will go into the drying room where the things are all dried out and turn white. See the long boards full of them like shelves. When they get dry, so they won't bend or break they will put them in the saggars, or roasters. That is a thing made of rough clay and looks like what your mamma roasts a turkey in, only it is much larger. Then these saggars are put in that big kiln that you saw, with the smoke stack running way up in the air, like a big round chimney. After they are baked long enough they are taken out and the decorators put the flowers and gold bands on them. Let us go in that big room and watch them put the decorations on. See, these girls are putting flowers on plates and that man is putting gold bands on teacups and saucers. After they have been decorated they will be put into another kiln and baked until the coloring of the flowers becomes as hard as the plates, then it won't wash off or rub off without breaking the ware. Now let us go and see all of the finished wares."

"Well, what do you think of making mud dishes?" laughed Mr. Burford.

"O, it is all so wonderful and interesting," said Eleanor. "I knew that East Liverpool was called the 'Pottery City' but I had no idea that pottery meant making dishes out of clay."

"Wouldn't you girls all like to have a nice souvenir to take home with you?" asked Mr. Burford.

"That would be very kind of you," said Mary Marie.

"How about a nice cup and saucer?"

"O, that would be fine," said Ruth, "and then when we tave tea parties we would always think of you and our trip to your pottery."

"Well, how did you like your trip?" asked grandpa. "And how do you all like eating off of mud plates and drinking tea out of mud cups?"

"It was a wonderful trip," said Mary Marie, "and every time I wash dishes hereafter I will think about how they are made, and what a wonderful world this is that such beautiful things can be made out of clay."

"Now give me another cup of tea Ruth, so I can drink it out of baked mud."—Adapted from M.-P. Recorder.

HOLMAN SUPERIOR TEACHERS' BIBLES
 Authorized Version—Self-Pronouncing The Best Editions of the World's Best Book
For Adults, Teachers, Preachers, Students, and All Who Would Study the Word of God Intelligently
 BOLD BLACK TYPE—COMPACT SIZE 4 1/2 x 6 3/4 INCHES—WILL FIT THE COAT POCKET

Part page specimen of Holman Blackletter Type Bible
ST. MATTHEW, 5. Christ's sermon on the mount.

13 And leaving Nāz'a-rēth, he came and dwelt in Cā-pēr-na-ūm, which is upon the sea coast, in the borders of Zāb'u-lon and Nēph'tha-lim:	A. D. 31.	934 CHAPTER 5.
14 That it might be fulfilled	CHAP. 4.	3 Who are blessed. 13 The disciples called the salt of the earth, and light of the world; Christ urgeth on them a good example, etc.
	Is. 9. 1, 2.	AND seeing the multitudes, he went up into a moun-

THIS NEW HOLMAN TEACHERS' BIBLE. Pronouncing Text. Bold Black Type is a PRONOUNCED SUCCESS. The latest Bible with NEW HELPS that are quite comprehensive and consist of an Illustrated Bible Dictionary, Concordance and additional aids all under ONE ALPHABETICAL INDEX. Also Fine Maps on Coated Paper, and a specially prepared BIBLE READING COURSE, intended to stimulate and maintain interest in the Bible. Improved Bible paper is used to improve opacity and keep down bulk. By this means you get the benefit of full Biblical information without the physical discomfort of handling a heavy volume.

STYLES AND PRICES—BIBLE PAPER EDITION

4612. French Morocco Leather, divinity circuit, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges.....	$4.00
4630. Same as 4612, with extra leather lined covers.....	4.75
THIN INDIA PAPER EDITION
With Helps as described above. Size 4 1/2 x 6 3/4 inches. One inch in thickness
630X. Egyptian Morocco, divinity circuit, leather lining, red under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker.....	7.00
633X. Algerian Morocco, divinity circuit, leather lining to edge, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, extra quality binding.....	8.00

EXTRA LARGE PRINT TEACHERS' BIBLES
 Large 8 Vo. Size—8x5 1/2 inches—1600 Pages, including 400 pages of Bible Study Helps

Part Page Specimen of Print
ST. MATTHEW, 5. Christ's sermon on the mount.

15 <sup>k</sup> The land of Zāb'u-lon, and the land of Nēph'tha-lim, by the way of the sea, beyond Jōr'dan, Gāl'i-lee of the Gēn'tiles;	A. D. 31.	2 And he opened his mouth, and taught them, saying,
	Is. 9. 1, 2.	3 <sup>b</sup> Blessed are the poor in spirit: for their's is the kingdom of heaven.
	Is. 42, 7.
	Luke 2. 2.
	Mark 1. 14.

CONTAINING COMPLETE HELPS TO BIBLE STUDY, INCLUDING ALL OF THE FOLLOWING FEATURES

A New Practical Course in Bible Reading, A Treasury of Biblical Information. The most carefully compiled, thorough and attractive form in which valuable Biblical information has ever been prepared. Illustrated Self-Pronouncing Bible Dictionary Containing 150 illustrations, concise definitions and textual references on nearly 50,000 subjects. A Practical Comparative Concordance, with nearly 50,000 references. Four Thousand Questions and Answers on the Old and New Testaments. A valuable Help to all Bible Readers.

STYLES AND PRICES

4712. Divinity Circuit (overlapping covers), French Seal Leather, red under gold edges, silk head bands, and silk marker..	$5.00
812PL. Red Letter Teachers' Bible. The Words of Christ in the New Testament, Old Testament Passages alluded to by Christ, various prophecies relating to Christ in the Old Testament, etc., all PRINTED IN RED. Binding same as described above on 4712 and same large Self-Pronouncing type.....	6.00
733X. Holman India Paper, Genuine Morocco, leather lined, silk sewed, divinity circuit, round corners, carmine under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker, same type and helps as above.....	10.65

All styles sent Postpaid at above prices—Thumb Index 50 cents extra

Christian Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

We have no words to express the sadness that pervades The Orphanage at this time. In the death of Mrs. Johnston, we have lost one who was more than friend. She was one to whom these children looked as an example of the finest qualities in Christian living. It was a happy privilege to have had her associated with the young life of the institution and we cherish her memory. To the family goes our most heartfelt sympathy. That our superintendent may have the strength that his great sorrow demands is our prayer.

The children start to school this week. The boys have new shorts and overalls which were made by the older girls during vacation. The girls have new print dresses. Soon they must have sweaters, coats, and other needs for cold weather.

Very sincerely yours,
ERIE LAINE.

REPORT FOR SEPTEMBER 27, 1934.

Brought forward .....$8,835.36

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

North Carolina & Virginia Conference:
Bethlehem .....	$	3.45
Kallam Grove .....		.85
		4.30
Eastern North Carolina Conference:
New Elam .....		3.50
Mt. Hermon .....		4.00
Liberty Vance .....		3.51
Shallow Well .....		2.00
Auburn .....		2.50
		15.51
Western North Carolina Conference:
Liberty .....		1.87
Eastern Virginia Conference:
Holy Neck .....		3.23
First Portsmouth .....		6.22
Suffolk .....		25.00
Waverly .....		4.70
		39.15
Valley Va. Conference:
Newport .....		.62
Dry Run .....		3.49
Palmyra .....		1.94
Winchester .....		4.68
Alabama Conference:
Pisgah .....		2.48
Shady Grove .....		.50
		2.98
Special Offerings.
Mrs. Thelma Hines, support of children .....		10.00
Mr. M. B. Smith, Jr., gdn. for Whitten children .....		50.00
Jr. Philathea Class, Suffolk Christian Church, support of girl .....		5.00
Mrs. Dalton, support of children ....		12.50
		77.50
Bequests.
Mr. Edward Herring, Elkton, Va. ...	1,000.00	1,000.00
		1,152.04
Total for the week .....		1,152.04
Grand total .....		$9,987.40

Christ is the source of Life in the Spiritual World; and he that hath the Son hath Life, and he that hath not the Son, whatever he may have, hath not Life.—Henry Drummond.

A LITTLE TIME.

Only a little time
Of walking with weary feet,
Patiently over the thorny way
That leads to the golden gate.
Suffer if God shall will—
Work for the Lord while ye may;
From Calvary's cross to Zion's crown
Is only a little way.
A little time for prayer;
For toiling a few short days;
And then the rest—the quiet rest,
And eternity for praise.

—M. P. Crozier, in the Church Herald and Holiness Banner.

“The ugliest insect may feed on the prettiest flower in the garden.”

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

(Continued from page 13.)

they should attend their church; and how carefully they should be always to be sincere and square before their children in the dark as in the light.

God bless the church that is in thy house. May its altars be kept radiant ever! If I should ask you tonight where you got your religion, after some thought you would likely say from your home. It is home-made. It is home-fed. And happy is the congregation which is made up of families that carry the church with them into the uttermost precincts of their homes. The church will fail in its effort to go into the ends of the earth if it does not go into the uttermost parts of God's first field,—the home.

Man's life is a progress, not a station.—Emerson.

ELON COLLEGE

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

South Entrance to the Campus

ELON COLLEGE, founded by the Christian Church in 1889, has fully justified the faith and hope of its founders during its 42 years of operation. Its graduates from the four-year course leading to a bachelor's degree, number 980, now living, 122 of whom are in the Christian Ministry and full-time Christian service. The majority of these are members of our own denomination. In addition, 449 are in educational work and are an active influence in the lay leadership of the Christian Church.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION BUILDING, and the definite religious atmosphere of the College, provide the very best facilities available for training for religious leadership, and offer the Church its finest opportunity to train the young people of the denomination to assume active leadership both in the ministry and laity of the local churches.

Address—

C. M. CANNON, Registrar

Elon College.

North Carolina

Home Atmosphere—Reasonable Rates—Clean Athletics—Christian Spirit

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom, as represented by the Congregational Christian Church.

BOARD OF EDITORS.

J. O. ATKINSON, D. D. . . . . Editor
E. C. GILLETTE, D. D. . . . . Associate
I. W. JOHNSON, D. D. . . . . Contributing
ELISHA A. KING, D. D. . . . . Contributing
J. T. KERNODLE. . . . . Managing Editor

DEPARTMENTAL EDITORS.

H. S. HARDCASTLE. . . . . Sunday School
J. G. TRUITT, D. D. . . . . Sermon
F. C. LESTER. . . . . Young People
H. E. ROUNTREE. . . . . Altar

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year . . . . . $2.00
Six Months . . . . . 1.00

Trial Subscriptions: Five or more new subscriptions sent in at one time by pastor or president of any church organization, three months for 40c each.

 Published Every Thursday at Richmond, Virginia, by the Central Publishing Company, Inc.

Entered as second-class matter at the Postoffice at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Change of Address: Be sure to give both old and new address when asking that your address be changed.

All news matter and items to be published in "The Sun" should be addressed to J. O. Atkinson, Editor, Elon College, N. C., and should reach him not later than Friday preceding date of publication. If more convenient, news from Congregational Churches may be sent to E. C. Gillette, Associate Editor, 117 W. Forsyth Street, Jacksonville, Fla. Emergency notices will be received at the Richmond Office up until Tuesday of week of publication.

All remittances for subscriptions, renewals, advertising, etc., books for review, and other matters of business should be addressed to J. T. Kernodle, Managing Editor, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond, Va.

Notices: Obituary and marriage notices, limited to 125 words, published free. All over 125 words, 1c a word, cash with notice. No notices should exceed 250 words.

Receipts: The change of label is your receipt for money paid. The label shows date of expiration, and change on label will appear the first or second issue of the month following renewal, provided it was received before the 25th. No other receipt will be sent unless requested. Please notify the Richmond Office if label is not changed as above.

OBITUARIES

DUNCAN.

Mrs. Virginia Duncan was born Aug. 10, 1863, and died August 16, 1934, at the age of 71 years and 6 days. Deceased was the wife of William Duncan, and lived near Seven Fountains, Va. She was a faithful member of Dry Run Christian Church and a Christian woman enjoying the highest respect of the people of the community. She is survived by her husband and two daughters. Funeral services were held at Dry Run, August 19, 1934. A. W. ANDES.

CARICOFE.

Mrs. Sallie Virginia Caricofe was born January 27, 1875, and departed this life at her home in Mt. Crawford, Va., Aug. 21, 1934, at the age of 59 years, 6 months and 24 days. She formerly lived near New Hope Christian Church, and early in life united with the Church there. She remained faithful to the church to the end, though in recent years was not able to attend the church. She leaves her husband and several children to mourn her departure. Funeral services were held at Cedar Grove U. B. Church, August 23, 1934. The writer was assisted in the service by Dr. M. L. Weekly. A. W. ANDES.

BRAY.

Mrs. Isabel Ellen Bray, daughter of Peter Francis and Mary Clark was born June 11, 1871, died September 4, 1934, age sixty three years, two months and twenty-four days. Sister Bray joined Lebanon Christian Church when young and was a member until her death.

On December 8, 1892 she was married to R. P. Bray, who died in 1899. To them were born three children, Mrs. Walter Barker, Mrs. L. H. Owen and Miss Shirley Bray. In addition to the three surviving children there are nine grandchildren, one sister, Mrs. Lewis Montgomery and one brother, James Clark.

On December 7, 1912 she married J. M. Bray, brother to her first husband who died in 1915. The deceased was devoted to her home and loved ones. While for several years because of distance to her church and failing health she was not able to attend regularly she was a loyal supporter of the church and its enterprises. The loving esteem in which she was held was evidenced by the large attendance at the funeral and burial services, which were conducted by the writer, her pastor for eighteen years, at the home, Cunningham, N. C. The burial was in the Bray Cemetery, one mile from Cunningham. The grave was covered with beautiful flowers which were so typical of the beauty in her noble virtues and self-sacrificing labors for others. Many hearts are sorrowing and tears are being shed. But there is comfort in the assurance that mother and friend is among the redeemed of heaven, free from the sorrows and sufferings of this earthly life. C. E. NEWMAN.

PIEDMONT COLLEGE

Located in

"The Blue Ridge Highlands"

An accredited college with an enviable reputation for superior classroom instruction, and wholesome student life.

Standard courses leading to the A. B. and B. S. degrees. Careful, scholarly instructors.

A refined Christian atmosphere. All of the cultural elements essential to a liberal education.

A minimum of expense. Tuition and board for the entire academic year only $273.50.

For information, write

GEORGE C. BELLINGRATH, Dean,
PIEDMONT COLLEGE,
DEMOREST, GEORGIA.

Wedding or Gift Bible

FOR THE HOME

Holman Self-Pronouncing Home Study Edition

A BEAUTIFUL PRESENTATION PAGE Marriage Certificate and Family Record makes this special edition a most desirable Bible for a wedding gift.

Full Bound size, 8 1/2 x 6 inches; nearly 1800 pages. Authorized Version with Marginal References.

Large Print—Easy to Read

The Helps are the latest and most practical published—prepared by the most reliable and well-known authorities, and consist of a TEACHERS' NEW READY REFERENCE HAND BOOK, which gives the salient and essential information needed in Bible study.

Illustrated Self-Pronouncing Bible Dictionary—Containing 150 illustrations.

Oriental Light on the Bible (Containing over 100 illustrations). A new kind of illuminating Bible help.

Treasury of Biblical Information.

A New Series of Maps. A selection of the most used, with Special Maps, the results of the most recent explorations.

A New Practical Comparative Concordance, with nearly 50,000 references. Four Thousand Questions and Answers on the Bible.

ABSOLUTELY DURABLE BINDINGS that will not break in the back.

Specimen of the Print. Full size of the page is 5 1/2 x 8 inches.

Specimen of Type.

17 ¶ From that time Jē'sus began to preach, and to say, "Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at

A BEAUTIFUL PRESENTATION PAGE Marriage Certificate and Family Record makes this special edition a most desirable Bible for a wedding gift.

No. 4914. French Morocco, flexible limp, gold titles, round corners, red under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker. . . . . $5.50

Postage Paid

Southern Seminary Foundation

(Successor to Atlanta Theological Seminary.)

AFFILIATED WITH

Vanderbilt University

The Foundation and the other Foundations that are affiliated with Vanderbilt University School of Religion comprise the only Interdenominational Theological School in the South. Through this affiliation the students enjoy the rights and privileges of Vanderbilt University.

DEGREES.

Candidates for degrees are required to have completed their college courses.

The degree of Bachelor of Divinity is offered to qualified students who complete the required courses.

Vanderbilt University also offers the degrees of Master of Arts and Doctor of Philosophy, in accordance with the regulations established in its several departments.

MORE THAN A SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY.

Because of our affiliation with Vanderbilt, our relations with other nearby colleges where our students can take courses without tuition, and the cooperation of the American Red Cross and other social agencies in the city, we prepare students for many types of Christian service.

For information write

WILLIAM JAMES CAMPBELL, President,
330 BUTTRICK HALL, VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY,
NASHVILLE, TENN.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

Representing the Southeast Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches.

IN ESSENTIALS, UNITY.

IN NON-ESSENTIALS, LIBERTY.

IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY.

VOLUME LXXXVI.

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, OCTOBER 4, 1934.

NUMBER 40.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

Rev. F. C. Lester
505 S. Main St.
5-134

Langley Field Base for Air Amada.—

On recommendation of the army general staff and with the approval of a special air corps investigation committee headed by former Secretary of War, Newton D. Baker, Langley Field, in Virginia, is to become headquarters for an air armada consisting of 900 combat planes. This new fighting unit will comprise planes at stations all over the nation. The army is still opposed to the relinquishing of its air force and the unifying of the entire air forces of the country under one head as advocated by the now retired Brigadier-General William Mitchell.

Broken Promises.—

"The wets have broken every promise they made to secure repeal. They promised that the saloon should not come back, but the saloon is back more hideous than before prohibition. They promised that repeal would provide the revenue to restore prosperity, but liquor revenues are insignificant compared to Federal expenditures. They promised to take liquor out of politics, but liquor is more strongly active in politics now than ever before in our history. They said that repeal would protect the young people, but today the influences luring young people to drink are more widespread, more dangerous than ever before. Because of their broken promises and the terrible results of repeal the people who were asleep before will awaken and fight to recover prohibition."—F. Scott McBride.

Ammunition for Pacifists.—

The Literary Digest gives the following ammunition which pacifists might use in their guns effectively: The world forces, including standing armies and trained reserves, were in 1913, 29,095,288, and the expenditures for their support amounted to $1,300,285,334. By 1934, the armed forces of the world had increased to 38,473,994, while expenditures had increased to $3,195,150,370. The total aircraft listed in the latter year numbered 12,275. Only one major nation, Germany, shows a decrease in armed forces, it amounting to 1,100,000. Russia increased her enrollment from 4,400,000 in 1913 to 16,210,000 or nearly two-fifths of the entire enrollment, by 1934. The increase by France was 1,652,213; Great Britain, 338,859; Italy, 3,115,535; United States, 231,216; Japan, 777,000.

Two Records Broken.—

The Virginia State Fair broke all records for twenty-nine years when attendance records for the first day went 20 per cent higher than for the same day last year, going well beyond the 30,000 mark. This record attendance must mean that conditions are improving. There was another record breaker reported at the same time: Richmond police arrested more people for law violation during September than for any month during the year, there having been an ever increasing number since last February. Not only is the record for the year broken, but a new all-time record has been established during the last thirty days. Of the 2,659 arrests, approximately one-fourth—643—were for drunkenness. Richmond might be proud of the first record—but what about the second?

Not Looking for Them!—

From the Watchman-Examiner comes the following: "We often hear criticisms of the salaries of Christian workers in our foreign fields. We often hear it said that these men are getting more than they could otherwise earn. Recently a Christian worker in China was laid off because of the reduced income of the society for which he worked. He loved China and hated to leave. While these matters were revolving in his mind a commercial firm in the Chinese city in which he had been working for years approached him and begged him to enter their employ. That he might be near his Chinese friends, he accepted the proffered position. He now receives just double the amount of salary that he formerly received, and he receives it because he is worth it. We wonder of the representatives of the Layman's Foreign Mission Inquiry met this man on their travels?" The Methodist Protestant-Recorder, which quoted the above in a recent issue, suggests that, "Maybe they were not looking for him."

Is This True of the Rest of the Country?—

Juvenile delinquency has increased 50 per cent in New York City in the past year, a contemporary informs us. The district attorneys of the city's five boroughs report that the increased number of juvenile arrests are startling, and that menace from street gangs is decidedly worse. Many boys between the ages of 14 and 19 are being used as "spotters" and gun carriers for criminals that are older. In this connection, Professor Corrigan, of the department of Sociology at Boston College, says: "We are raising a generation of young pagans with little moral sense and the vaguest ideas of religious responsibility. The result is a harvest of juvenile delinquency, of brazen standards of personal conduct and a religious let-down in the quality of youthful ideals. No religious training of youth is bad enough, but when to this is added the anti-religious training to which young men and women are subjected in many of our secular colleges and universities, the destruction of youthful ideals is complete."

A Strawbridge Returns to Sam's Creek.—

The Maryland tradition is that the Log Meeting House on Sam's Creek, Maryland, is the first Church erected by Methodists in America. Another tradition is that two children of Robert Strawbridge, Betty and Jane, were buried under the pulpit of the Log Meeting House. His pastorate there concluded in 1776, when, war coming, the English preachers retired and a free field was left to the Irish Evangelist. He then occupied a house near Towson, Maryland, from which as a center he served Bush Chapel and the Sam's Creek Church. This was in 1776 and continued to 1781, in which year he died and was buried under a Walnut Tree. For nearly eighty years his dust remained there till transferred to the Bishop's Lot in Mount Olivet Cemetery. Now a great great granddaughter of Robert Strawbridge comes from Ohio, to unveil the memorial to be placed upon the site of the original structure. This unveiling is planned in connection with the Methodist Sesqui-Centennial Celebration at Baltimore, October 10-14th, 1934.

How Is Business?—

Eugene R. Black, former governor of the Federal Reserve Board, recently said that "everything is set for recovery. All that is needed is a renewal of confidence or an exhibition and manifestation of courage." This exhibition or manifestation seems, however to be slow in coming about, and a representative of the National Association of Manufacturers, concedes that Mr. Black is correct, but asks when will the Administration provide this "renewal of confidence" by "abandoning its policy of competing with and dictating to private industry?" It is thought that "Vague and disturbing governmental policies continue to frighten investment capital. Recent addresses delivered by high officials of the Administration, in which they asserted there is no intention of trying to destroy the profit motive in business have failed to offset the actions of other federal bureaucrats who are issuing more and more regulations that confuse, confound and alarm industry and commerce." The New York Times Weekly Business Index showed a sharp decline to a new low the past week; Canada reported a heavy flow of American dollars into that country; exports of American cotton continues to be more than 50 per cent less than a year ago; car-loadings continue slow at a time when seasonal improvement usually gets under way. The brighter side of the picture shows a slight increase in department store sales during the past week; steel operations climbed slightly; building contracts for August show an increase of 13 per cent over the same month last year. Cigarette production continues strong, there having been a 9.2 per cent greater production for the first eight months of the present year than for the first eight months of 1933.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Rev. W. T. Scott, pastor of our United Church, Winston-Salem, is this week conducting the morning devotional services over radio station WSJS, beginning at 8:00 o'clock each day of this week.

The Western North Carolina Conference meets at 10 A. M., Wednesday, November 7th with Union Grove Church, Randolph Co. Rev. T. E. White, Sanford, N. C., is President. Mr. George T. Gunter, Ramseur, N. C., is Secretary.

The Eastern Va. Conference meets at 10 A. M., Wednesday, October 31st with Bethlehem Church, Nansmond County, Va. Dr. N. G. Newman, Holland, Va., is President, Dr. I. W. Johnson, Suffolk, Va., is Secretary.

The Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference is scheduled for Friday, October 5th, to be in annual session at Liberty Spring Christian Church. The theme of the great Conference this year is, "Going Forward In a Time Like This."

Our Haw River Christian Church is to observe Home-Coming Day, with an all-day service, third Sunday in October. All former pastors and members of the church are most cordially invited to be present and enjoy the worship and the fellowship of the day. A good program, including a bountiful dinner, is to be enjoyed.

The Congregational Conference of the Carolinas meets in regular session with the Church of Broad Fellowship, Rev. Rexford Raymond, pastor, Southern Pines, N. C., Thursday and Friday, October 11th and 12th. An inviting program is prepared and a profitable and pleasant session is anticipated.

The State Conference of the North Carolina Women will meet in its annual session with First Christian Church, Greensboro, Wednesday, October 18th. The feature of this Conference will be the presence and the addresses of Rev. J. J. Banninga, D. D., missionary on furlough from Madura Mission, India.

Our heartiest congratulations to Rev. and Mrs. W. T. Scott, of our Winston-Salem Church. The blessing is a beautiful life, Lois Cotten Scott, and going well in the happy household. And also our felicitations to Rev. S. E. Madren, Henderson, N. C., into whose home came, on the morning of September 28th, a rollicking, big boy and the household happy and all doing nicely.

We gratefully acknowledge the following and extend congratulations: "Mr. W. C. Warren requests the honor of your presence at the marriage of his daughter, Nell Kerran, to Mr. Alvin Virgil Wyrick on Saturday evening, October the sixth, nineteen hundred and thirty-four, at eight o'clock, Berea Christian Church, Altamahaw, North Carolina.

The Southeast Regional Committee of our Congregational-Christian Convention of the Southeast is meeting in Atlanta, Ga., October 9th-10th, Dr. E. C. Gillette, 117 West Forsyth St., Jacksonville, Fla., being the chairman. The principal addresses during the meeting will be delivered by Rev. John Scotford, New York, acting secretary of Commission on Missions, and Rev. Enoch Bell, 14 Beacon St., Boston, of the American Board.

It is noted with anxiety and deep concern that Dr. C. H. Rowland, pastor First Christian Church at Greensboro, is being threatened with ill health and has been advised to leave his work temporarily to seek complete rest and recovery. His physician advises that with quiet, proper diet and relaxation there should be recovery within a few weeks. Dr. Rowland left Greensboro, Saturday, the 29th, to seek treatment and recovery in a sanitarium. Many prayers will be offered that this faithful man of God may soon be restored to his full strength and renewed vigor for the great work he has been doing.

Three of our very promising ministerial students in Elon College are rendering valuable assistance these days as is indicated by the following from the Greensboro Daily News, September 29th: "William Andes, of Harrisonburg, Va., president of the student body will preach at the Greensboro First Christian Church, of which Dr. C. H. Rowland is pastor. Lanson Granger, of Norfolk, Va., will preach at the Graham Christian church, of which Dr. W. C. Wicker is pastor and Aubrey Todd, of Norfolk, Va., will speak at the Christian church in Reidsville. All three of the students will preach during the morning hour."

We learn with deep regret and sorrow of the death of Brother S. M. Rowland at his home in Wake County, N. C., Saturday, September 29. The funeral was conducted from Wentworth Church, Sunday P. M., September 30th, by the pastor, Rev. J. Lee Johnson, assisted by Rev. B. J. Howard and others. A large concourse of relatives and friends gathered to pay their tribute of respect to this good man. Brother Rowland had been a deacon in Plymouth Church and active and loyal in its membership for several years. A good man has gone to his reward. Our sympathy is with the good wife and family in their bereavement.

Dr. J. J. Banninga, one of our very esteemed and capable missionaries, going out from Wisconsin in 1901 to our Madura Missions, South India, and now at home on furlough, is to be in several of our pulpits and with groups of interested church people in Virginia and Carolina, October 13th-21st inclusive. Dr. Banninga will make his first appearance at 11:00 A. M., Sunday October 13th, Suffolk Christian Church, Dr. John G. Truitt, pastor, and with two or three services a day will conclude his itinerary with us at First Christian Church, Greensboro, October 21st. They will be fortunate, indeed, who hear him, since he comes to us out of years of rich and ripe experience in the foreign field with messages, according to Secretary Fred Field Godsell, "of inspiration and information."

Our Liberty (Vance) Church held a very interesting and timely all-day service, Sunday, September 30th. The idea was conceived and carried out by the Woman's Missionary Society who sponsored the program to give the church the opportunity of hearing and learning more about the various church enterprises. Through speakers of the day, five institutions of the church were represented, viz:—Missions, the College, Religious Education, The Christian Sun, the Orphanage. The addresses were not long but pointed, practical and certainly carried valuable information about our church enterprises and institutions. Would it not be a fine thing if many of our churches would adopt and use the same idea on fifth Sundays, giving an opportunity for the church and all the people of the church to learn more about the enterprises founded and fostered by the church?

Apples Chapel, Guilford County, North Carolina, is arranging to celebrate the 100th anniversary of its founding on Sunday, October 28th. Apples Chapel is not only noted for its long life and honorable service, but is still vigorous with the strength and activity of youth. Rev. James O'Kelly and others of our early ministers preached at Apples, and from this church have gone many ministers, two of the number being active in the ministry at present, viz: Rev. J. F. Apple, and Rev. L. L. Wyrick, Elon College, N. C. The present pastor of the church is Rev. H. E. Crutchfield. The third (or fourth) successive building now stands on the site of the original house, the present chapel being a modern brick building with Sunday school rooms and equipment. A great and good day is expected the fourth Sunday, October 28th, at the centennial celebration of this splendid church.

Rev. Jesse H. Dollar, LaGrange, Ga., is enthusiastic over his trip to the Holy Land the past summer. The traveler has been at home for a month now, busy with the affairs that had accumulated in his absence and too engaged to tell SUN readers at length as he had hoped to do of his travels in Palestine and impressions there. He does say of his journey:

"My health was good—I never missed a meal for any reason. My faith was increased, my vision enlarged, my consecration deepened. It was certainly a wonderful experience to see and study the "Land of The Book" and walk with the Master and visualize conditions under which he lived and taught and learning again the truths which fell from his lips.

"My work here was well cared for in my absence, thanks to the consecration and intelligent efforts of Rev. Robert M. Barksdale, now in his second year of Vanderbilt school of religion. He is a young man full of energy, highly intelligent and deeply spiritual. The church which secures him to lead them will indeed be fortunate."

Rev. R. A. Whitten, pastor First Church, Portsmouth, has issued an inviting program for Loyalty Week, October 1-7, and has written a personal letter of approach and appeal to every absentee member of his congregation. The exercises of the week, as revealed by the program, are most inviting, and we have no doubt but that the church is being greatly benefitted and greatly awakened by the splendid features of the program. All of his members were earnestly requested to prayerfully consider the following: Believing that the great need of the church of today—of MY church is a more consecrated constituency; and realizing that I, as a part of my church, share that need, I have prayerfully covenanted with my Lord, that: Trusting in Him for strength, I will from this day, endeavor to live a more consecrated Christian life. Any talent He has given is but mine in trust and is hereby re-dedicated as He shall call me into His service. All that I hold of possessions is but a gift from a loving Father's hand; therefore one-tenth of my income shall be returned to be used in His work. I hope, with His help, to be able to put into His treasury, through my church, for the coming year:

GREETINGS SESQUI-CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION AT SOUTH HILL, VA.

Brethren of the M. E. Church, South:

On behalf of Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, President of the Southern Christian Convention, and of Dr. L. E. Smith, President of Elon College, N. C., both of whom are unable to be here on this great occasion, I have been delegated to bring greetings from the Christian Church in the South, and to congratulate you on the great progress that the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South has made during the past 150 years, and to bid you Godspeed for your work in the future.

Your church began in a small way, no doubt, being started in America by the holy zeal of one woman, Barbary Heck. When she sailed in New York harbor on August 10th, 1760, she brought with her the burning coals of Methodism from the Methodist altars of County Limerick in old Ireland, and while for a short time it appeared that the spark or coal was about extinct, suddenly she arose and by her earnestness relighted the torch that has shone all over the United States since that day.

In 1772 Rev. Robert Williams, another emigrant came to Norfolk, Va., and preached his first sermon from the old Court House steps, and there planted the seed of Methodism in the Southeastern part of the state, and in the Northern part of North Carolina. From there he traveled far and wide in the state, and soon the seed of Methodism had been planted in this very section, by him and later by Rev. George Shadford, as has been so well brought out in your special edition of The Richmond Christian Advocate, of last week. In 1773 Rev. Robert Williams was stationed in Petersburg, and rode this section as a part of his circuit. He soon married, located between Suffolk and Norfolk and died September 26, 1775. Rev. Francis Asbury was at that time in the vicinity, preached his funeral and spoke well of him in his "Journal".

Years before this or in the middle 1600's, Nansemond County, Virginia had become an asylum for the Friends of Quakers, and in 1672, Rev. George Fox, the leader visited the state, and planted his churches which were successful in their day.

On June 14, 1715, Rev. Robert Norden, who had been ordained as a Baptist minister in England for work in Virginia had arrived and went to Prince George Court House where he subscribed to the oath required of a dissenting minister, and the same day the house of Matthew Marks, who lived on Ward's Creek was licensed as a public preaching place. (See Prince George Order Book No. 1, page 58.) It might be said in passing that what is now Brunswick, Lunenburg and Mecklenburg counties were then all included in Prince George County.

From these two small beginnings as the world would say, have grown two of the largest bodies of Protestants in the whole United States, there being in 1926, (the latest figures available) in the United States 8,033,957 Methodists, and 8,246,260 Baptists. In Virginia these two bodies have grown rapidly, by the same figures there were in Virginia in 1926, 297,975 Methodists, and 549,110 Baptists, the Methodists being more than one fourth of the church members in the state, while the Baptists were nearly one half of the 1,172,447 church members in the state. It might be said in passing that these two bodies constitute two of the strongest bulwarks of righteousness against the powers of evil which are so rampant in the state and nation today. In every time of trial they have always stood on the side of truth and righteousness, and may they ever continue.

But this section holds especial interest also for the Christian Church of the South. About 1720 there came to America an Irish emigrant whose name, tradition says, was William O'Kelly; and from the best data available he settled in what is now Mecklenburg County, Virginia. There his sons, William D., Thomas D., John, James, and Patrick were born. All except John had Revolutionary records.

James was living on the N. C.-Va. line when he joined the Methodist Society about 1775, and he son became an earnest preacher of Methodism. We know that he had been living in Mecklenburg County as a circuit rider, revivalist, and as a Presiding Elder for some years prior to June 8, 1789, for on that date his friend Tignal Jones and wife gave James O'Kelly and his wife Elizabeth a life interest in a tract of 40 acres of land upon which he was then living, and was known as the O'Kelly place. He was situated in this section for many years and from letters from people of this generation his reputation as a preacher still lives in the county. Therefore it might be said that the seeds of the Christian Church in the South were germinated in the old county of Mecklenburg, while Charlotte County was the center of the Christian Church in its early days according to both church and secular historians. So we look to this same section as being the birthplace of our church.

The first intimate meeting that we have seen of the two great elders, Rev. Francis Asbury and Rev. James O'Kelly, occurred at Cypress Chapel, Nansemond County, Virginia, on July 8, 1780, and Rev. Francis Asbury made a note of the meeting in his "Journal" regarding him as follows: "He (Rev. James O'Kelly) appeared to be a warm hearted and good man, James O'Kelly and myself enjoyed and comforted each other. This dear man of God arose at midnight and prayed very devoutly for me and himself."

On August 23, 1802 we have in Vol. 3, page 76 of the same "Journal" an account of the last meeting on earth of Rev. James O'Kelly and Bishop Francis Asbury. It happened near Winchester, Va., and Mr. O'Kelly was very sick at the time, Bishop Asbury being in the neighborhood at the time, sent two of his brethren, Read and Walls, to ask if Rev. James O'Kelly would like for the Bishop to visit him. The reply was in the affirmative. He went and says as follows: "We met in peace and asked after each other's welfare, talked of persons and things indifferently, prayed and parted in peace. Not a word was said of the troubles of former times. Perhaps this is the last interview we shall have on earth."

Both of our churches have taken part in the greatest missionary undertaking in modern times, that of Christianizing the Southern negro. Bishop Asbury, as his "Journal" shows was alive to the situation, and paid special attention to the spiritual welfare of the negroes in the South. These creatures were brought from their native African wilds, with nothing but the basest fetish and pagan ideas, and the Southern master brought them in touch with civilization and the Christian religion. Being of a religious temperament or nature they accepted it from the white man and by the time Methodism was started in the South, they were ready for the harvest, and the Methodist circuit rider made good use of his opportunity in that field. Before 1860 the slaves attended divine service supervised by white ministers, or consecrated laymen, and the Methodists did their work well in this field.

After 1865 they counselled with the freed slaves in organizing that branch of the church in the

(Continued on page 11.)

PROGRAM.

Thirty-fourth Annual Session of the East Alabama Congregational-Christian Association, (formerly the Alabama Christian Conference) to be held at Rock Stand Church, October 17-18, 1934.

Wednesday—Morning Session.

- 10:00 Called to order by President . . . Rev. G. H. Veazey
- Devotionals . . . . . Rev. C. C. Dollar
- 10:15 Welcome Address . . . . . Rev. J. D. Dollar
- 10:25 Response . . . . . Rev. A. W. Stone
- 10:30 Enrollment of ministers and delegates
- 11:00 Adoption of Program
- 11:10 Appointment of Special Committees
- 11:20 Report of Executive Committee
- 11:30 Annual Address . . . . . Rev. G. H. Veazey
- 12:00 Adjourn for lunch

Wednesday—Afternoon Session.

- 1:30 Devotionals . . . . . Rev. O. E. Sheppard
- 1:45 Reading Ministerial and Church Reports and reference to Committees.
- 2:30 Report of Committee on Superannuation
Rev. W. T. Meacham
- 2:45 Report of Committee on Religious Literature
Rev. J. D. Dollar
- Address . . . . . Mr. J. T. Kernodle
- 3:15 Miscellaneous
- 6:00 Picnic lunch and campfire discussions for Young People led by Miss Margurite Davis

Wednesday—Evening Session.

- 7:00 Devotionals . . . . . Rev. Howard Meacham
- 7:15 Report of Committee on Moral Reform
Rev. G. R. Walker
- Address . . . . . Rev. B. G. Gallagher
- 7:45 Report of Committee on S. S. and C. E.
Rev. M. S. Stevens
- Address . . . . . Mrs. A. R. VanCleave
- 8:15 Our College. Its needs. Round Table discussions yed by Rev. G. D. Hunt.
- Adjourned

Thursday—Morning Session.

- 9:00 Devotionals . . . . . Rev. C. W. Carter
- 9:15 Reading Minutes of Wednesday's Session
- 9:30 Chart Lecture—Miss Davison or Dr. Ensminger
- 9:45 Report of Committee on Education
Rev. J. H. Hughes
- Address . . . . . Rev. Ross Ensminger
- 10:30 Report of Home Mission Board
Rev. G. H. Veazey
- Address, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Alternate Dr. F. P. Ensminger.
- 11:15 Annual Sermon—Speaker to be supplied
- 12:00 Adjourned for lunch

Thursday—Afternoon Session.

- 1:30 Devotionals . . . . . Rev. A. R. VanCleave
- 1:45 Report of Committee on Nomination, Election of officers.
- 2:00 Report of Treasurer . . . . . Mr. J. W. Payne
- 2:15 Report of Committee on Ministerial Monument Fund, D. W. Sheppard.
- 2:25 Our Orphanage . . . . "Uncle" Charlie Johnston
- 2:45 Miscellaneous
- 3:00 Holy Communion . . Revs. J. H. Hughes and J. P. Bean.
- 3:30 Adjourned

Some murmur when their sky is clear,
And wholly bright in view,
If one small speck of dark appear
In their great heaven of blue;
And some with thankful love are filled
If but one streak of light,
One ray of God's mercy, gild
The darkness of the night.

—R. C. Trench.

E-D-I-T-O-R-I-A-L

EDITOR

J. O. ATKINSON, ELON COLLEGE, N. C.

ASSOCIATE EDITOR

E. C. GILLETTE

117 W. Forsyth Street, Jacksonville, Fla.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS

I. W. JOHNSON      ELISHA A. KING

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE MOST VICIOUS RACKET.

If one will get a dictionary and look up the full meaning of the word, "Racket," possibly one will somewhat realize the force of the word when General Smedley D. Butler declares that "war is a racket; possibly the oldest, easily the most profitable, surely the most vicious." General Butler ought to know, for he was the brave and brilliant commander of our Marines during the World War and has seen war in the fighting and studied its after-effects in time of peace.

But why say so much about war now? Why print so much about war in time of peace? Why have peace conferences now? Why read of them, of the horrors of war, when we are engaged in the pursuits of peace?

All these questions are convincingly answered by General Butler in an illuminating article in the September Forum. And some of these "illuminations" are almost blinding in the flood of light they bring. General Butler, who has been in the war game practically all his brilliant career, declares that war is purely an "inside" business, conducted solely "for the benefit of the very few at the expense of the masses. Out of war a few people make huge fortunes." Now war is not a conflict brought about to settle national and international questions but a racket gotten up and carried on by fortune hunters.

These fortune hunters are again on the war-path, busy at their game of propaganda and are preparing to make more huge fortunes. On this account, General Butler declares that the war clouds are gathering again surely, unmistakably, inevitably. He declares that the propagandists and the fortune hunters have already stimulated and are goading the nations in choosing sides. "They are choosing sides now. France and Russia meet and agree to stand side by side. Germany and Italy hurry to make a similar agreement. In the Orient, the maneuvering is more adroit," but under the surface equally as obvious. Powerful forces are at work to make Japan hate America and America spend millions in preparation for war against Japan, possibly in behalf of China or what-not. "Yes, they are getting ready for another war," continues General Butler. "War, like any other racket, pays high dividends to the very few, but what does it profit the masses? Take our nation. Until 1898, we owned no territory outside of the mainland of North America. At that time our national debt was a little more than a billion dollars. We went to war. At the close of the World War, as a direct result, our national debt jumped to over twenty-five billion dollars." But this is only the smaller cost of the war. Not the masses but the soldiers pay the biggest part of the war bill. "If you don't believe it, visit the American cemeteries on the battlefields abroad or visit any of the veteran's hospitals in the United States. On a tour of the country, in which I am engaged at the time of this writing, I have seen eighteen government hospitals for veterans. In them are a total of about 50,000 destroyed men. Seventeen years ago they were the pick of the nation. In the government hospital at Marion, Ohio, eighteen hundred wrecks are in pens. Five hundred are in a barrack, under nurses, with wires all around the buildings and enclosing the porches. All have been mentally destroyed. They don't even look like human beings. A careful study of their expressions is highly recommended as an aid to the understanding of the art of war. There are thousands and thousands of these cases, and more and more are coming in all the time. That is a part of the "bill" of war.

Is there any remedy? General Butler most emphatically declares that there is. He points out that our soldiers in the late war received a salary of $30.00 a month, and out of this had to pay life insurance and send half of the amount home to support their dependents till they had less than $9.00 a month left. Now General Butler declares that the racket of war can be stopped, not by disarmament conferences, nor by peace parleys at Geneva, nor by resolutions of well-meaning groups. "It can be effectually smashed only by taking the profit out of war."

Before conscripting the nation's manhood and sending them out to battle, conscript the nation's capital and give the capitalists thirty days to think it over before getting the boys to the front to kill and be killed. "Let the officers and directors of our armament factories, our gun builders, munitions makers and shipbuilders all be conscripted—to get $30.00 a month while the war lasts, the same wage to be paid to the lads in the trenches. Let all the workers in these plants get the same wage. All workers, all executives, all presidents, all directors, all managers—every one in the nation should be restricted to a total monthly income not to exceed that paid to the soldier in the trenches. Let all these kings and tycoons and masters of industry pay half of their monthly $30.00 wage to their families and pay insurance and buy government bonds just as the soldiers were required to do," and inquires General Butler, "Why shouldn't they? They aren't running the risk of being killed or having their bodies mangled or their minds shattered. The soldiers run that risk."

"Give capital thirty days to think it over," pleads General Butler, "and you will learn by that time that there will be no war. That will stop the racket."

Whether General Butler has pointed out the way to permanent peace or held up the hand that can stay war is to be seen. At any rate, there is logic in his reasoning and force in his conclusions.

It will be too late to stop the next war when the heat of patriotic (?) passion shall be kindled and burning. If war is to be prevented, the only time to prevent it is before it begins.

J. O. A.

NEGRO MOTHERS.

In the city of Miami there is a large settlement of colored people called "Colored Town." In that section there is a young man by the name of Jas. E. Scott. He is a graduate of Tuskegee and has marked qualities of leadership. He has been engaged in welfare work under the direction of our white welfare board and through the directing genius of our General Secretary much has been done for these colored people.

It has been my privilege to address large audiences of the negroes on many occasions but the most interesting experience was on Mother's Day, in May. I had the pleasure of talking to over a thousand mothers from local homes and from the surrounding country. Up to this point in my story everything is very commonplace, but the surprise came when the presiding officer read the "Preamble to the International League of Negro Mothers." I will quote it here:

"For God and man we have banded ourselves together as mothers, to uphold and defend the sacredness of motherhood; to shoulder our responsibilities as mothers and inculcate a sense of individual obligations to our community, city, state and nation; to promote peace and good will in our community; to safeguard and transmit to posterity the principles of freedom, justice and democracy; to discourage and combat crime among the members of our race; to influence and train mothers to the end that they shall become more efficient and desirable work-women; to foster, encourage and promote home ownership and the maintainance of better homes; to sanctify and consecrate our association by our devotion to mutual helpfulness and to help make our country healthier, thriftier and happier for all mothers."

Each member of the League signs this preamble and agrees to carry out the principles enunciated. There are many small groups of mothers in the county working with these things in mind. Occasionally they all assemble for a great program, usually on Mother's Day. James E. Scott founded this league and is the director of its operations. His headquarters is 1230 N. W. Third Avenue, Miami.

This is an encouraging sign of progress in the right direction and the movement deserves to prosper and is worthy of support and sympathy on the part of socially minded Christian white people.

E. A. K.

A FINANCIAL FACT.

In every congregation there are members who never contribute a single penny toward the support of the church. When they attend church they may place a small coin on the plate, but their attendance is irregular and thus their giving is negligible. The church would close its doors tomorrow if it depended upon such members. Yet they believe in the church. They would not want to live in a community without a church. When they call on the minister for a baptism, funeral or other pastoral service he gladly serves them, usually without a fee.

Now if this great body of non-contributing and irregularly attending members could be induced to make a pledge to the church amounting to the price of one movie a week many churches would have a large portion of their budgets raised. Almost anyone can take a package of envelopes and place some gift in an envelope and take it to the church every Sunday. The church needs the money and ought to have it. The member is under obligation to sustain the gospel by some reasonable gift. E. A. K.

SUMMER CONFERENCES IN THE SOUTHEAST.

By EDWIN C. GILLETTE.

The past summer has been notable for the number and quality of our Summer Conferences for young people and for others in our southeast area. Thirteen such conferences were held, and possibly more, with a total attendance of around nine hundred. Our records cover North Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama and Louisiana. This includes two conferences conducted by the colored churches, the first being at Kings Mountain, North Carolina, of which Rev. H. S. Barnwell of Atlanta was in charge and which had the attendance of 150; and the one at Kamp Knighton, New Iberia, Louisiana, of which Rev. E. H. Phillips of New Orleans, was in charge. 102 were registered in this conference. The next conference in the matter of attendance was the Leadership Training Conference at Blue Ridge, North Carolina, with 100 in attendance, of which Dr. Wm. A. Harper was Dean. Next in order came the Conference at Elon College, North Carolina, of which Rev. F. C. Lester was in charge, and the attendance was 84. These conferences were of a more or less general character, having many young people and also many pastors present. Each one of these conferences fill a very important place in our work and fellowship.

Other conferences reported include the Florida Young People's Conference at DeLeon Springs; the Georgia Conference at Piedmont College; the Alabama Leadership Conference at Wadley; also the Southeast Alabama Conference at Midland City. This conference is called "Sealacoon," the name made up from the initials and syllables of the name (S. E. Ala. Con.).

Other conferences were: The Chattanooga Comrades at Grandview, Tennessee, the Conference of the Young People of the Friendship Parish in Georgia at St. Simons Island, Rev. Alan Jones being pastor of these churches; the Conference at Pleasant Hill, Tennessee, and two week-end conferences, one at Corbin, Kentucky and the other in the West Florida Larger Parish. Among these conferences probably the most representative of the southern area was the Conference at Blue Ridge, which is promoted under the auspices of the Southeast Convention and the Vanderbilt School of Religion. It attracts delegates from all states of the area and consequently tends to promote a general southeastern fellowship in a very fine, strong way. There were present, besides the young people, pastors from churches in the area, and the Pastors' Conference was a favorable part of the program. There also is the training school for the Student Summer Service workers in the southeast, 17 of whom were present at the Blue Ridge Conference and added greatly to the interest. Not only were there courses in religious education, missions, Bible, etc., but the Conference was privileged to have lectures also by Dr. Ralph Harlow of Smith College, well known lecturer before college groups on social and international subjects.

In a similar way, also, the Elon Conference ministered to both young people and the pastors, eleven ministers being present, daily discussions being held among them on ministerial and church problems. Probably the most vital aspect of this conference was the forum discussions among young people on the topic, "Christian Youth Building a New World." The findings of this group make interesting reading and show that the youth are facing the vital issues of our day. We quote a paragraph as follows:

"The new person will not tolerate the modern abuses of the profit system, but will seek a more equitable distribution of wealth. The right of employment to every man shall be accorded, and to share equitably in the profits of his labors. We have passed too far from the old order ever to return again."

Other conferences discussed problems of peace, world relations and race problems. The young people eagerly faced the problems of the present day, even discussing the NRA and organized labor, and wages, in some of the conferences. Another interesting report comes from the Wadley Conference and we quote the following:

"One of the interesting events of our Summer Leadership Training School at Wadley, Alabama, was the interracial program. After discussing race relations for two periods, the group decided to invite the choir of the near-by negro church to share an evening with them and to build the program around negro accomplishments. There were as many negroes present as white people and all seemed to enjoy the program. The colored minister who had been invited to speak to the group was away, but he sent two of his brethren to do the honors. This meeting was important because it was planned and executed by the southern young people. The leader of our discussion classes is an Alabama girl, teacher at Thorsby Institute, and a devoted worker for those principles brought out by the Social Relations Findings at the Oberlin meeting which she attended. Another young southerner who shared with her in the planning of the interracial meeting, is the chairman of the race relations committee at Elon College."

Also, at the Sealacoon Conference, the discussion class was under the leadership of Miss Lillian McKee, teacher from Thorsby Institute and a native of Alabama. Miss McKee had attended the General Council at Oberlin and was deeply impressed with the Social Action undertaken there and the group under her leadership tackled definite problems with courage and earnestness.

At the Grandview, Tennessee, Conference there was special emphasis upon the Social Gospel, under the inspiring leadership of Rev. Abram Nightingale and Rev. A. L. DeJarnette, these two pastors who are doing so unusual and effective pieces of social work in the Tennessee mountains, especially connected with the Government program in this area. This was the first year of the conference.

It was also the first year of the Sealacoon Conference at its new camp-ground. Here the accommodations were limited, but the young people were happy in the experience. We quote the following interesting propaganda from Miss Margaret Davison's report:

"We found two cabins built by the boys under the direction of Rev. N. A. Long, pastor of that group. They had built a swimming pool and a trough from the double spring under an overhanging bluff to feed it. It is remarkable to me to see the ability of these rural young folks in constructing something out of nothing, in meeting the practical needs of life in a practical, inexpensive way. The group that came to camp brought their own food with them and had plenty to last far longer than they stayed. Of course, we had to buy a few things, but the expense was very little. Conditions were not ideal, but what could you expect in your first camping expedition in a new place. Hogs ran over us at night, cows and mules tried to drink from our trough, and gnats persecuted us, but we were almost free from mosquitoes and flies. We gave thanks for the blessings we had and tried to forget those we had not. Classes were excellent and well attended. This year they were given for credit and quite a few received A level credit for their work. Since the camp lasts only five days, we thought they did well to get one or two credits. Everyone shared in the work of the camp and that made study time scarce."

The Conference of the Friendship Parish, held at St. Simons Island, is also one where the young people bring all their food from home and do all the cooking and general work of the camp. There were 53 in attendance at this conference from the four churches of this rural Georgia Larger Parish. It is a rich experience for these young people and a novel one also to most of them. Rev. Milo Sweet writes concerning this conference that it is "Making over the whole life of the four churches participating." Here, as elsewhere, many of the young people come from homes and churches where there is little opportunity for the expression of religion in terms of the problems of life. In many of them religion is interpreted in the old revivalistic fashion and does not adequately build itself into the growing life of youth. They discover the real meaning of religion for their own life and the life of the world about them. Religion has something to do with tennis rackets and bathing suits and social life and the work to which youth looks forward, and for many this is a discovery and a very vital one.

The oldest summer conference holding annual sessions is that at Elon College, which began in 1922. The so-called Immokalee Conference in Florida began in 1926. This conference is interesting, not only because of its vivid program, but for the fact that the young people attending come from homes of wide areas, whereas in many of the conferences the young people and their parents, perhaps for generations, have lived in their communities. In Florida, out of the entire enrollment, only eighteen of the young people were born in the state, and twelve of those had parents born in other states. 24 of the 48 states of the Union were represented, with Massachusetts, New York and Ohio leading, and there were three foreign countries represented.

Probably the most effective phase of our modern church work is to be found in these summer conferences, mainly for young people. While this is a movement general over the country, in the southeast credit should be given to the late greatly beloved Dr. W. Knighton Bloom, for his fostering of the movement in this area and his enthusiastic devotion to the work of the conferences both for those of our white conferences and also for the two colored conferences, both of which have been most effective in their influence of the life of their churches. It should be said, also, that the Student Summer Service workers have been a great help in all of these summer conferences.

Jacksonville, Fla.

There is a simple test by which it is said we can tell good people from bad. If a smile improves a man's face he is a good man. If a smile disfigures his face he is a bad man.—William Lyon Phelps.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Do people attend revival meetings as well as in former years? Do the congregations include many people who are not members of the church? Are church members greatly interested in these meetings? Are the ministers generally interested and enthusiastic in this part of their pastoral work?

Without attempting to answer any of these questions,—for no answer would be suitable and final in every locality,—another question is submitted: Does the church need a revival meeting as much as it needs a revival of the Lord's work? Certainly there are two revivals needed: a revival of religion, and a revival of christian work. The first transforms the heart. The revival of christian work calls for the consecration of the whole being to active service in the church.

In a protracted meeting held recently an appeal was made for the church members to re-consecrate themselves to God and the work of the church. Only a few people responded to this appeal. After the service a visitor said to the minister: "I think an appropriate song for this congregation is, 'I Shall Not Be Moved.'" His impression was that the people in that church were not inclined to be moved by any appeals made from the pulpit. Many people resist all moving appeals. They dislike a sermon that stirs their feelings and moves them to make a definite decision. They are stationary. If they could become a steam engine they would not want to be a locomotive. A stationary engine stays where it is put. A locomotive moves with power and carries a load with it. The immovable people chill enthusiasm and hinder the progress of others. Emotionalism and feeling can overlook the weightier matters of the Gospel. Deep spiritual love is inseparably linked with spiritual feeling.

Many people today are hungry. They are out of work. Vainly they go from place to place looking for work and find none. They are discouraged. When a family sits down to a table with a scanty meal and the father has no job, it is difficult to be interested in theology and experimental religion. When a man is at the end of his resources he may seek the rescue mission, and find peace in the Gospel message. But the bread-line has a keener interest for him. The Gospel may restore him to a better way of life, but the bread-line brings him to hear the Gospel.

Work is the great restorer of mankind. It does something more than fill the dinner pail and provide something for the kitchen and dining room. It begets confidence, a spirit of independence and self-reliance. For several years there has been a demand for shorter working hours and more pay. Every movement in that direction has increased the cost of living. There is one field of work where the high cost of living is not increased by longer hours and more faithful service. The church offers work to all who will enlist under the banner of King Emmanuel. The financial pay is not always in evidence. Sometimes one will be called upon to pay one's expenses and work without pay. But the field is inviting. The harvest is plenteous. There is abundant work for every one. No one need be afraid of being unable to find something to do in the church. Certain positions may be over-crowded. But there is work enough for all who will come.

The church, today, needs to go to work in the church—and in the community. How many, in your church, are really at work for the kingdom? For the average church the answer will be less than one-half of the members are at work. What are the others doing? Are they happy christians? Are they models in character for others to follow? What is your answer? Go to work in your church. Indifference will be changed to enthusiasm, responsiveness to hope, and hate will be lost in love.

I. W. JOHNSON.

STUDENT LIFE AT ELON.

The average college in North Carolina has undergone striking changes in the last quarter of a century. Previous to that, higher education was almost completely classical. During this period, the elective system has been incorporated, making the curriculum more elastic and more practical. Twenty-five years ago, the course of study at Elon College was practically fixed. Every student knew what his course would be from beginning to end. It meant, usually, the study of English, History, Mathematics, and languages. We taught a little Chemistry. The Chemistry laboratory consisted of a single room in the administration building. Those interested had the opportunity of studying art and music. But these were the extent of our extra-curricular courses.

Now, we have a science building, erected at the cost of more than $100,000. The entire first floor of the building is given over to Physics and the second floor to Biology, neither of which were taught at Elon twenty-five years ago. The third floor is devoted exclusively to the teaching of Chemistry. This elaborate and adequately equipped department replaces the single room used for this scientific study years ago. Nearly one-half the third floor of Alamanace building is devoted to Domestic Science. In this department, the girls are taught to prepare and serve meals, to cut out, fit, and make garments, and various other things necessary to the proper conduct of the modern home. A large part of the same floor of Alamanace building is devoted to the study and teaching of Business Administration. In this department, adequate and thorough secretarial courses are given to both young men and young women. Also, the science and methods of business are taught, preparing young men and young women adequately for the business side of life. Our curriculum is so planned as to include pre-law and pre-medical courses, giving the student the first three years of his college preparation for these professions. In all probability, we will arrange to give pre-engineering courses beginning 1935-36. In addition to the above important additions to our curriculum, we have added a department of Religious Education, designed to prepare young men and young women for practical religious work. We graduate from this department students who are capable of serving as pastor's assistants, Sunday school workers, church officers, and religious education directors in the local church. One entire building on our campus is dedicated to this new department in our college life. This is an innovation in the accepted curriculum for a liberal arts college. Additional emphasis will be placed on this department of our work beginning 1935.

The student's first duty at Elon College is to do his college work and to do it thoroughly. Of course, there are many other things to be done must be kept clean, meals must be served, library work must be done, the campus must be kept in order, and numerous other jobs are to be done daily. Instead of employing non-college help to do these numerous jobs, Elon College has adopted the plan of employing students who need financial assistance. To date, we have an enrollment of 333 students. 89 of these are employed by the college. In addition to this number, there are 28 of our students who are given government jobs. These jobs, however, according to government requirement, were created for these students. They receive pay from the government which is, in turn, credited on their college expenses. The purpose of the government assistance to Elon College is not to help the college but to make it possible for ambitious students to have college privileges who otherwise could not enter. This, I think, is a most commendable act on the part of our government. Not only is the government providing jobs for these students, but, at the same time, it is preparing them for the higher and better things of life. We are grateful to the present administration for this consideration given to ambitious young men and young women of our country.

In addition to classroom work and work done for the college by assignment, the student must have some time for recreation. He can neither study nor work nor do both continuously. He needs and must have some freedom. Recreation is provided for both young men and young women in their respective gymnasiums. Tennis courts and the athletic field are open to them. The college furnishes directors for both sexes to guide them in their play. Various committees have been appointed by the students themselves to direct their attention along certain social and helpful lines. The social committee is working on a program that will help to care better for Saturday evenings. The committee on world friendship is seeking to direct the attention of the student body to the larger and more important things that confront the world today. The religious activities committee is seeking to guide the students in their devotional lives and to provide helpful programs on Sunday evenings for all who will avail themselves of the opportunity.

It is the purpose of the administration to see that the proper course of study is available for every individual student, of course in keeping with his ambition for life; also, to see that either the avenue for service or for play, or for both, is possible for everyone who enrolls at Elon College. In short, we are doing our best to safeguard the health and the character of every individual student while we provide for him adequate courses of study and direct him in the arts of study and of research; and, by so doing, we hope to lay the foundation for a useful life and to be of assistance in making men and women out of those who come to us for help.

L. E. SMITH.

The longer I live, the more I feel the importance of adhering to the following rules, which I have laid down for myself in relation to such matters:

1. To hear as little as possible what is to the prejudice of others.
2. To believe nothing of the kind until I am absolutely forced to.
3. Never to drink in the spirit of one who circulates an ill report.
4. Always to moderate, so far as I can, the unkindness which is expressed toward others.
5. Always to believe that, if the other side were heard, very different accounts would be given of that matter.—An Old Scotch Writer.

INTEGRATION FOR THE MINISTER.

By RODNEY L. McQUARY.

Our psychologists talk a great deal about the "integration of personality." Without looking it up in the dictionary we may define integration in lay terms as that quality or condition which enables the personality to function as an integer, or "whole number," as a unit, upon its life-situation.

In my opinion the average minister suffers greatly from the lack of this desirable quality, thereby becoming restless and unequal to the demands and opportunities of the pastoral office.

I. Lack of integration on the part of the minister is traceable to a number of causes.

First, the multiplicity and diversity of the duties which are expected of him. He is expected to preach acceptably to a critical age. He must be a shepherd of his people, knowing them as individuals and by families. As an administrator he must contrive somehow to keep his church's program running smoothly and to make it attractive to a sensation-ridden generation. In order to offset constant losses, as well as to satisfy a commendable ambition for growth, he must be the leader in recruiting new members for his church. He is looked to as the religious educator of his congregation. Beyond the boundaries of parish responsibilities, denominational projects and worthy community enterprises rely upon his loyalty and leadership. In addition to these there are a thousand and one unclassified assaults upon his time and good nature. Inclination pulls this way and that. Concentrated attention is seldom given to anything. No matter what he starts out to do he frets himself with the haunting feeling that he should really be about something else. If he is calling he knows he should be in his study. If he takes up a book, especially if it be too interesting, the faces of neglected parishoners hover in midair before the page. To bring his multifarious life into happy unity, into "integration," requires self-control and self-discipline of a high order.

Second, financial worries. At the present moment financial problems are worrying ministers far more than is conducive to effectual spiritual leadership. Churches labor on under growing deficits. Gifts for missions and benevolences dwindle. Then there are the debts with which the "era of prosperity" has doubtfully blessed the churches, when so many building committees went Gothic and buried the future under a heap of stones. These problems keep the administrator awake o' nights and bring in a flood of money-raising schemes which compromise the church. Financial worries of a more personal sort are taking their toll of pastoral morale. Few have escaped drastic cuts in salary and even then payments may be months in arrears. Many a life-insurance policy has been thrown overboard in order to lighten the domestic craft. But there is seldom any disposition on the minister's part to complain of personal hardships when millions are suffering for the lack of the barest necessities of life. But in spite of this most preachers are bravely carrying on, and not a few are attaining to new heights of prophetic utterance and sacrificial living.

Another enemy of ministerial integration is more difficult to define. It is what the French call "la maladie de l'ideal." Amiel puts it: "The ideal poisons for me all imperfect possessions." This malady is not found except in the finest souls. Every minister worth his salt is some kind of an idealist. He is pulled onward by compelling ideals of personal character and social good. "The Kingdom of God" is the phrase which defines the vision. He is a dreamer of kingdom dreams. But most deals are too fragile to make a landing upon the stern coasts of this raw world. They are dashed to pieces upon the rocks of things as they are. At least so it often seems to the idealist. He may succumb to disillusionment which disintegrates his driving power, or he may take flight to day-dreaming, which banishes him at once from the practical affairs of men. While by ridicule, persecution or indifference every generation crucifies many of its choicest seers, the idealist himself may often be at fault in his inability to envision a more practical ideal and to develop a more seasoned faith.

(To be continued in next week's SUN.)

FROM RICHMOND.

On September 15th, the First Christian Church of Richmond sustained a great loss in the death of Bro. J. W. Price. He was the second oldest and the oldest active deacon of his church until April 9th. The fact that he was present at both Sunday School and Church on April 8th, the day before he was stricken with apoplexy shows his loyalty to his church. As long as he was able he was present at the mid-week prayer services. His church dues were paid in full until his death.

Brother Price was a charter member of the First Christian Church. He was a great lover of his family and home. Next to his family ties came his church and its activities. It is useless to try to eulogize him. Those who knew him best loved him most. The following tribute can be paid him. He was a christian gentleman, who lived long, laughed often, loved much, stood for the right, was faithful to duty until the end, endured as seeing Him who is invisible, believed in and preached self discipline.

As his pastor, I shall miss him.

JOSEPH E. McCAULEY.

A truth to an age that has rejected and trampled on it is not a word of peace but a sword—Henry George.

If you must reform someone begin with yourself. When that is done to your satisfaction, and to the satisfaction of other good people, the experience will be helpful when you attempt to reform someone else.—Young People.

OXFORD BIBLES for EVERY NEED

"The Oxford Bible is the Bible par excellence of the world"

THE HOME BIBLE

A Family Bible in Handy Size

An extra large type Oxford Text Bible, containing also, a family register and 12 beautifully colored maps. Size 9 x 5 1/2 inches.

Specimen of Type

16 The LORD is King for ever and ever: the heathen are perished out

- Nos. 01600 Superior Cloth, round corners and red edges $2.75
01603 French Morocco, limp, round corners, red under gold edges, head-band, book-mark $4.75

The JUNIOR'S Bible

Self-Pronouncing

With 4,000 Questions and Answers, carefully selected "Aids to Bible Study," 16 beautifully colored and 15 black full-page illustrations, 6 colored maps and a presentation page. Children may readily pronounce correctly difficult Scripture names, as this Bible is self-pronouncing. Size 7 x 4 1/4 x 1 1/4 inches.

Type in Junior's Bible
2 Take the sum of all the of the children of Israel, years old and upward, thro

- No. 1815 French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges, headbands and book-mark. Make some child happy with one of these fine $2.95 Bibles

Child's ILLUSTRATED Bible

The beautifully colored illustrations in this new Bible are a delight to the children. It has clear, readable type and yet it measures only 5 1/2 x 3 3/4 inches.

Specimen of Type

a My soul longeth, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the LORD: my heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God.
to Mercy and truth together; righteousness I kissed each other.
xx Truth shall spring

- No. 02112. French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, gold edges $2.50

Pocket REFERENCE Bible

Has over 50,000 center column references. Measures only 6 3/4 x 4 3/8 inches. (A splendid gift for a young lady.)

Specimen of Type

9 Behold, O God our shield, and look upon the face of thine anointed.
10 For a day in thy courts is better
a Gen. 15. 1. b Ps. 56. 1.
c 57. 1.
d or, all

- No. 07523x French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges. $3.25

Concordance Edition

Type and size as No. 07523x, but with a Concordance, subject index and dictionary of Scripture names. An excellent edition for students and Christian workers No. 03272x. $5.00

OUR LEADER

Oxford Concordance Bible

Self-Pronouncing

This beautiful Oxford India paper edition is indeed the ideal Bible for the student, preacher and evangelist. Each proper name and difficult word is divided into syllables and accented, and though printed with large clear type, the volume measures only 8 1/2 x 5 1/2 x 1 1/8 inches.

Specimen of Type

8 9 Jē-hōi'-ā-chin was 6 years old when he began t

- No. 03671x. Fine Grain Morocco leather, overlapping cover, leather lined to edge, silk round corners, red under edges, silk

A UNIQUE GIFT BIBLE

With Basket Weave Binding

The Antique brown calf leather binding has a basket-weave grain, and button clasp. Has overlapping cover, art silk lined, with red under gold edges. With references. Printed on Oxford India paper. Type as Pocket Reference Bible. $5.50

No. 03255x

- As No. 03255x, with concordance. No. 03276x $6.50

Oxford TEACH.

Have over 50,000 center column, 300 double-column pages of up-to-date helps, conveniently arranged in alphabetical order. Also 32 full-page illustrations, and an indexed atlas of the Bible with 15 beautifully colored maps of Bible lands.

Easy-to-Read-Edition

Size 7 1/4 x 5 x 1 3/4 inches

Specimen of Type

14 Like sheep they are laid in grave; death shall feed on th

- Nos. 04453. French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, round corners and red under gold edges. A durable and handy $4.35 some Bible

Oxford India Paper Edition

Only one inch thick.

- 0773x. French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges, headbands and book-mark. A beautiful gift edition $7.00

RED LETTER Edition

Same size and type as style No. 04453, with same references and helps, but with all the words of Jesus Christ printed in red. White paper cover. No. 05453. French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges $5.00

The Oxford imprint in a Bible guarantees satisfaction

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary

A MAN OF MANY DUTIES.

By MISS D. P. CUSHING, News Editor.

When Governor-General Farnk Murphy was appointed to the Phillipine Islands he stopped off en route at Kobe College where he was entertained by the American Association of Kobe. Later he wrote a letter of appreciation to the President of this association, which happened to be not the American representative of big business in the Orient, but Harold W. Hackett, Treasurer of the Japan Mission. This association includes Americans from all lines of activity with the Vice-President of a big chemical, a secretary from the American Consulate, and the treasurer from the National City Bank of New York.

"The very fact that a man is not tagged as a preacher often opens up to him contacts and avenues of influence that otherwise might be closed." Hackett speaks from experience and he believes firmly that the business side of a mission treasurer's work does not preclude an emphasis on the Christian message.

As treasurer, Mr. Hackett has multitudinous duties having to do with buying and selling, exchange and accounting, construction and upkeep of the property, correspondence and many other things incident to work in a country where the Board has nine stations and some 40 missionaries.

Mr. Hackett was born in North Freedom, Wisconsin and is a graduate of Berea College where he was an assistant treasurer for five years. He served for 15 months in the army and in 1920 went to Japan.

MISSIONARY OFFERINGS.

WEEK ENDING SEPTEMBER 29, 1934.

Sunday Schools.

Previously acknowledged since September 1, 1934 .....	$	156.49
Burlington, N. C. ....		31.71
Auburn, Raleigh, N. C. ....		2.25
Palmyra, Edinburg, Va. ....		1.04
Pleasant Ridge, Ramseur, N. C. ....		3.71
First Christian, Portsmouth, Va. ....		5.35
Ether, N. C. ....		1.00
Monticello, Brown Summit, N. C. ....		1.47
High Point, N. C. ....		2.00
First Christian, Richmond, Va. ....		3.10
Piney Plains, Raleigh, N. C. ....		1.00
Durham, N. C. ....		8.05
Union, Virgilina, Va. ....		3.95
Palm St., Greensboro, N. C. ....		4.88
Holy Neck, Holland, Va. ....		5.17
Haw River, N. C. ....		13.61
Windsor, Va. ....		1.20
Wentworth, Raleigh, N. C. ....		.72
Noon Day, Wedowee, Ala. ....		1.03
Dry Run, Seven Fountains, Va. ....		1.98
Total .....	$	249.71

Individuals and Churches.

Previously acknowledged since September 1, 1934 .....	$	48.27
B. F. Branch, Raleigh, N. C. ....		2.00
Total .....	$	50.27

Specials.

Previously acknowledged since September 1, 1934 .....	$	43.50
Ladies Aid Society, Circle 1, Eure Christian Church, Gates, N. C. ....		2.00

Mt. Hermon, Garner, N. C. ....	4.28
Total .....	$ 49.78

Coin Card Offering.

Previously acknowledged since September 1, 1934 .....	$	6.00
Adult Class, Union, S. S., Virgilina, Va. ...		1.00
Cypress Chapel S. S., Cypress Chapel, Va. ...		1.00
Total .....	$	8.00

Summary.

Previously acknowledged since September 1, 1934 .....	$	254.26
Total offerings, week ending Sept. 29, 1934		103.50

Total to date .....

J. O. ATKINSON, Sec'y.

NEWS ITEMS OF SOCIETIES.

The woman's missionary society has enjoyed a successful year under the leadership of Mrs. A. P. Beale, president. They observed the World Day of Prayer with an interesting public meeting inviting the societies of other denominations to join with them. They also conducted the mid-week prayer service on several occasions and at one of their meetings they were privileged to have as a guest speaker, Miss Eunice Thomas, missionary on furlough from China. They report a great meeting. They have completed their study book and have added five new members to their roll. Every missionary organization in the church has raised their apportionments. Mrs. Shirley T. Holland is the secretary of this faithful group of workers.

The woman's missionary society of Cypress Chapel Christian Church has met the requirements of the conference including the 2 per cent increase in funds. Mrs. C. Wesley Rountree is the president and she reports that the members are all working with a new zeal and enthusiasm for their Master. Each society in the church has raised its apportionment plus the 2 per cent.

PUTTING OUR POSSESSIONS TO WORK FOR GOD.

By JOHN JETER HURT.

A Japanese student stood before my congregation. For thirty minutes he had been giving a striking testimony to the power of the gospel in his life. A missionary had given it to him some years before. He guessed it had cost about twenty-five cents. He wished he might know now what American had contributed the twenty-five cents that had bought the New Testament, that had been given to him by the missionary, that had led him to Jesus. But listen to his own words:

"When I get to heaven I shall want to see my Saviour first of all, and fall prostrate at his feet in adoration and thanksgiving. Then I shall want to find the missionary who labored so faithfully in our district, and thank him as I have not heretofore. Then I shall go back to Jesus and beg that he tell me what American it was who gave the twenty-five cents that bought the New Testament that led me to salvation—and I shall want to thank this unknown friend with all my heart for making it possible for me to be a Christian."

Wouldn't you like to have been that American?

Wouldn't you like to be such an American many times over? I would. You and I can be. That's the reason why I am writing these lines.

Responsibility for the right use of our Lord's money is inescapable. Jesus was severe in his dealing with the man who sought to evade this responsibility. "Cast ye the unprofitable servant into outer darkness," said he, concerning the one who hoarded instead of investing. Notice that the sin was that the unfaithful servant hadn't stolen, misappropriated, nor borrowed. He had done nothing. His sin was passive rather than active. But sin is failure to do one's best.

I tremble at the danger of our persistence in seeing what we have as things only. Every man who looks at the latest model automobile this year should ask himself the question, "Can God and I turn that automobile into a missionary?" A consecrated man told me that every time he saw a hundred-dollar bill he thought of a native evangelist in China. We talk about the equality of opportunity for every individual which is contemplated by our Declaration of Independence, and rejoice in it. The counterpart of this is the right of every individual dollar to prove what it may become when consecrated to the welfare of mankind, and transmuted by the divine favor into spiritual values. The mission of lumber is to provide life; of cotton to become character; of cereals to become sermons for the healing of the nations.

"Behold this dreamer!" should be the apt characterization of every man who bears in his arms the fruitage of God's favor and brings it to the altar. For every such man must dream of what such fruitage will become when the divine breath is put upon it. "I see an angel," said the sculptor, peering into a block of marble. "I see a new heaven and a new earth," said John on the lonely island. Livingstone could hear the croonings of a million black men redeemed from savagery when others heard in Africa nothing but the jargon of the monkey, the jackal and the tiger.

God changes things into personalities when we give him a chance. The business man may evangelize, and educate, and enlist through his money, if he will. That's what money is for. We miss the value of it if we have not seen this.

Jesus said to the rich young man, "Sell . . . distribute. . . and thou shalt have treasure in heaven." Paul said in substance, "I know my banker, and am persuaded that he is able to keep my deposit against that day." I was away down in Egypt. I had no money. I presented a slip of paper, and got all the money I needed. That was because I had placed my money properly on this side of the Atlantic. I shall need my possessions some day on the other side of the grave. That means I must place them properly on this side of the grave. —From Stewardship Series.

NOTICE.

The Alabama Missionary Conference will be held at Bethany Church, Saturday, October 13th. For several years we have held our Conference on the second Sunday in October, but the pastors could never attend and we are changing the date trusting that all of our pastors will attend.

MRS. G. L. STEVENS.

Spiritual ideas are not grasped and appropriated by intellectual action only. When intellectual activity in the realm of the religious idea is divorced from spiritual intentions there is always noticeable a curious emptiness and futility in the result. It is not by learning or by brilliance of intellect, but by spiritual reinforcement and by welcoming Christ in our hearts that we become "able to comprehend."—G. A. Johnston Ross.

IF I WERE A PREACHER.

(Note: A unique and interesting service was rendered at Glenlake Park Tabernacle, Suffolk, Virginia, R. F. D., September 9, 1934 at 3:30 P. M. Three ministers, Revs. Edgar Allen Potts, Luther Harrison and John G. Truitt, D. D., were invited to speak ten minutes each on the subject, "If I Were a Layman;" Judge James L. McClemore, I. C. Trotman and Dr. J. E. Rawls to speak on the topic, "If I Were a Preacher." The following is what Dr. Rawls had to say.)

Chiticism is easy in a field in which we have had no experience. We often say, "If I had a million dollars what I would do." The chances are that you would do as those who have millions do. We, more or less, speak ideally of a field in which we are practically ignorant. If you wish a child to be reared ideally ask an old bachelor or an old maid how to do it.

"If I Were A Preacher"—I would expect to be poor and the church to be poor financially. Practically all the preachers and churches that I have known for the past fifty years have been poor financially and since this has been a fact I accept it as the way it should be. It seems that financial poverty is and has been a fertile soil for greatness,—it is and has been a great asset in life. It is a blessing in disguise at times, especially if you have mental and spiritual riches. In the way of parenthesis, I would say, that we as individuals and as a nation are not suffering from financial poverty but spiritual poverty. So we will dismiss this phase of the preacher's life for your further meditation.

"If I Were A Preacher"—I would try to sell myself thoroughly to my text and to my sermon that I might be able to put it across to my hearers. It has been stated that "gospel is gospel" and the only thing that is necessary is to present it as such. We could say the same thing about beef steak or on old maid. "Beef steak is beef steak" and an "old maid is an old maid" but it makes a big difference how they are served. A knowledge of the art of cooking will make the steak more tender and palatable and the proper use of facial cosmetics will make the old maid more attractive. Thus the steak and old maid, by a little effort, will have a greater "drawing power." It has been stated that if you wish to warm up a church you must first build the fire behind the pulpit. We hear a good deal about the length of a sermon. If proper interest were created the length of the sermon would be negligible quantity and question.

"If I Were A Preacher"—I would try to preach in simple language and use every day or common illustrations that the child may understand. My children were once discussing enthusiastically the movies and the most recent productions which they desired to see. I asked them why were they so enthusiastic over the movies and did not tire of seeing them, and were not enthusiastic in going to church, and when they did, they were bored, and went to sleep? My twelve-year-old boy immediately and frankly replied—"Daddy, I don't understand what the preacher says." This is a distressing indictment. It is difficult for the average adult hearer to even get in twenty or thirty minutes what it took the preacher to get in a week, and at times it is a question whether or not the preacher is suffering with questionable mental indigestion or confusion.

"If I Were A Preacher"—I would attempt to preach an attractive gospel. A gospel—"My yoke is easy and my burden is light"—Christ's own words. A gospel to help you carry your burdens and to make this old world healthier and happier. Not a gospel of so much hardship and sacrifice. I believe a gospel of so much sacrifice places a premium on sin and drives many a soul from the church and from God. Sacrifice as I understand it is not primarily a material sacrifice but a spiritual sacrifice—a sacrifice of our will for the will of God—"Thy will be done." If we make our will sacrifice for God's, our material blessing and pleasures will be increased,—will be multiplied rather than be lessened or sacrificed. Seek God's will, "and all these things shall be added unto you." We speak of a mother's sacrifice for her child. Does a true mother consider what she does for her child a hardship or a sacrifice,—even though her hands and fingers have corns and blisters from washing, cooking and darning? No! It is a pleasure and gives her everlasting joy and happiness.

"If I Were A Preacher"—I would preach a gospel that "Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven." Place the goal or emphasis of your efforts, as a Christian, here in this world to work and not hereafter in heaven to rest. Our mission is to make this old world better,—more heaven-like. Heaven is ideal, perfect, and fixed and tris does not need our care and comment. I repeat our goal should be to make this world more heaven-like, a better place to live in, and not have as our goal to avoid hell in order to reach heaven when we die. The first goal is unselfish and active while the latter is selfish, inactive and dopey. Such a gospel of making this old world better would especially interest the energetic and ambitious young where interest is needed and vital. The ambitious young is naturally interested in this material world as it is their God-given mission to improve and propagate it. May we with Moore join the young in singing:

"The bee through many a garden roves,
And hums his layer of courtship o'er,
Until he finds the flower he loves,
And he settles there and hums no more."

Any gospel to help them on their mission to improve this old earth should be interesting and attractive. With the old, aged, and worn out it is different. Their material or physical existence has about come to an end, so following the law of perpetuation, they look forward to heaven as their goal and sing "happy meetings over yonder." As a preacher, I would not end my prayer in the usual way by saying "may we so live, that we may get to heaven when we die," but close by saying, "may we so live that it may be said that this old world has been made a better place to live in—more heaven-like, accomplishing 'Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven,' by our lives, when we come to die." I repeat the first is selfish and dopey and the latter is unselfish and alive.

"If I Were A Preacher"—I would preach a gospel of "hell fire and damnation." Yes, a gospel of "hell fire and damnation" here in this world and not especially hereafter. I would preach that moral and spiritual laws were as accurate and as definite in their results as natural laws and if the moral and spiritual laws were broken, the breaker of such a law, would not have to necessarily die to reap his punishment. If you break a physical law of combustion by placing your hand on a hot stove you will receive punishment here. If a house, from its foundation up, is built according to mechanical laws you can predict or prophesy as to its end or destiny. I would preach a prophetic gospel of woe and of hope. The doctor's offices and the hospitals are great confessionals to see, hear and learn of the extreme physical, mental and spiritual torment, disaster, degradation and disease as a result of broken physical, mental, and spiritual laws. Judgment day! Yes, every day,—yes "hell fire and damnation here on earth."

"If I Were A Preacher"—I would try to live a consistent life,—live what I preached. All questionable amusements and habits I would avoid. Many a boy has been ruined through the habit of smoking, and as a preacher, I could not conscientiously advise this boy not to smoke, if I smoked, even though I knew it was ruining the boy's life. After all, the greatest sermon is one's every day life. Just a living epistle or sermon "known and read of all men."

Amos, the prophet, says "seek good and not evil, that ye may live"—live here in this world as an individual and as a nation.

It has been stated that the greatest thing in the world is life and that the greatest thing in life is health and the greatest prescription for health, happiness and long life is righteousness, which prescription I would freely prescribe

"If I Were A Preacher!"

Suffolk, Va.

Christianity can be practiced, in spite of all assertions to the contrary. In his prayer Jesus said it was practiced in heaven. Presumably that is the reason the people there are so happy. Probably the theme of Jesus, during those forty days after the Resurrection that he spent with the Apostles, was just this. Christianity cannot succeed if it is not practiced. It cannot fail where it is practiced. If this world is to be saved in any real sense, our religion must be put into action.—Matthew Kelly, Rosamond, Ill.

SUBSCRIBERS TO THE CHRISTIAN SUN

These Pens are of standard make, and will give good service. If you are in need of a Fountain Pen, order from us. Postage paid and Pens guaranteed by the manufacturer.

MEN'S PENS—Capitol, $2.00; Mercantile, $2.50; Cardinal, $3.00.

LADIES' PENS, $2.00.

COMBINATION OFFER—To a new subscriber or for renewal, $2.50, either Gentleman's (Capitol) Pen or Ladies' Pen, with guarantee of manufacturer. And to "Sun" subscribers, not in arrears, any Pen at one-fourth off. Address: THE CHRISTIAN SUN, 1536 EAST BROAD STREET, RICHMOND, VIRGINIA

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

EASTERN VIRGINIA YOUNG PEOPLE AND MISSIONS.

The Young People's Missionary Conference of Eastern Virginia met in the Suffolk Christian church on Friday night of last week about five hundred strong. There was a well planned and executed program. The speeches of local young people were arranged into what was called a Three-Act Drama entitled, "America Versus Japan." The president, Miss Sarah Norfleet Daughtrey, of Holland, gave the proper setting in the Prologue. Japan was represented by Miss Martha Johnson and Miss Dolly Williams who told of "Youth's Inheritance" and "Youth's Future" respectively. Miss Frances Everette, speaking for America, told of "Youth's Opportunity." The third act, "The Melting Pot," was presented by Miss Virginia Jay who told of "Youth—The Samaritan," while two girls dressed in oriental costumes acted out the story of the Good Samaritan.

Statistics presented indicated that there are twenty-two missionary societies in the forty-six churches of the conference, and that something more than a thousand dollars was given or raised this year by these young people for the missionary enterprise.

As I listened to the reports I wondered why the young people in the other churches have not joined in this good work. Many of them are fine young people who want to work for the Master whom they love. They meet in Sunday school classes and go to church. Some of them attend Christian Endeavor. And yet there is no record that they give anything to the cause of sending Christian workers to non-Christian communities to tell of Christ. It was explained that the Missionary Committee of the Christian Endeavor may very well be the officers of the Missionary Society and have charge of the program of C. E. once each month. Some Sunday school classes pay the dues and give to missions. In this way the work can be carried on without another organization in the church.

But it does seem that someone should be responsible for getting the young people to work. Until all are enlisted in the world-wide mission of the Church, we should not be content. I do not like to add more organizations to our churches for it takes too much energy to keep the wheels going round, but I do think that all young people should find some way to cooperate in the service programs of the Church of Jesus. Why doesn't the Missionary Conference organize Missionary Societies, or Christian Endeavor see that young people give to missions, or the Youth Fellowship step in and see what can be done to line up the young people of this great Conference so they will share in the world fellowship? If the Church of tomorrow is to be missionary, it must be made that way while young people are forming their habits for life.

YOUTH LEADERS IN FLORIDA.

Congratulations to Pattie Lee Coghill and the youth leaders of Florida who met the past Monday in DeLeon Springs for their first annual meeting to discuss Fall plans, new material, and all the problems that face them. This plan surely should be a real help in cooperative work.

It is easy to get discouraged about our church work when we do not meet with others who are working along the same line, or do not continue to prepare ourselves for the task of leadership. When I hear people complain about the progress of the church work, I wonder how long it has been since they read a book, attended a conference of leaders, or in any other way made a serious effort to learn more about the work they are supposed to do.

When we "study to show ourselves approved unto God" there comes some inspiration that makes the impossible seem inevitable. When we consciously work with God and His people there comes an exaltation and joy that makes the days too short for us to do all that we wish to accomplish.

Let's have bigger and better conferences of leaders of all church groups! This is one road that leads to progress.

A HAPPY YOUNG LADY.

A year ago she was a graduate of High School and Business College with no job. She dreamed of college, and, maybe, the mission field. But faith was dim, and hope seemed to have little basis in fact. She was eager to work where work would count, even if it brought but little salary.

Then came a chance to work for the Board of Christian Education in my office. There could be but little pay, for the Board has but little money, but there was plenty of work. Day and night she has worked faithfully for a year. Most of the pay has come from something other than salary.

And there are other rewards for work. This is true of all who have a task that is worth doing.

Last Sunday she attended a Rally Day program at Liberty (Vance) in the Eastern North Carolina Conference and represented the Board of Christian Education on a program with the editor of this paper, a representative of the Orphanage and a representative of the College. It was a great experience for a High School graduate who just a year ago was wondering if all doors of opportunity were closed to young people. Today Miss Edna Fulcher has returned to the daily tasks in the office of the Board of Christian Education happy in heart because life looks larger, people are kindly, and there are ever-increasing opportunities for Christian service.

The offering which your church, Sunday school or Christian Endeavor society may make on Rally Day for the Board of Christian Education will bring joy and opportunities to many young people and Christian workers. Please do your very best, for the cause is worthy, and the calls for service are urgent.

ECONOMIC CONDITIONS TODAY: WHAT IS GOOD AND WHAT IS BAD IN THEM?

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR OCT. 14, 1934.

James 5:1-9.

Worship Program.

Instrumental Prelude: "This Is the Lord's Great Day."

Hymn: "Work for the Night Is Coming."

Prayer:

"Dear God: help me to remember that Thou art the unseen partner in all my dealings in life. May I remember that Your and mine and the interests of my brother are one. May I never stoop to coining gold from the tears and backaches of little children. May I always give good measure, pressed down, and running over. May I be able to say when I step over into my heavenly home 'No man has wept because of me.'—Amen.

Scripture: James 5:1-9.

Hymn: "We Plough the Fields and Scatter."

Speaker: "Economic Conditions Today: What Is Good and Bad In Them?"

Discussion: Have a committee from your own group report at this time on the housing conditions in your town. Are there any slums?

Hymn: "Jesus, Saviour, Pilot Me."

"What is good and bad in our economic conditions today?" A year's study in a university could hardly answer such a question! But most of us who have felt the pinch of the last few years could answer glibly concerning a few of the things that are wrong. For example: 1. Unemployment. 2. Racketeering. 3. Child labor. 4. Lack of adequately organized banking system. 5. Bad housing with its evils of crime and ill health.

To balance the budget on the other side, we have these advantages: 1. Free competition which gives every man a chance to build up his own fortune. 2. Races and creeds given equal recognition. 3. Protection for the property of the individual. 4. Comparatively low taxes. 5. Free education for all. 6. Religious freedom, with separation of church and state.

While some of these advantages may not be strictly economic, they are so closely related to our economic welfare, as to stem off from the same root.

Why do we have unemployment?

What have we learned since 1929? This is the depression primer:

A. We need more planning and less greed in determining our manufacturing program. Too high pressure salesmanship defeats its own end.

B. Paper profits that are just . . . paper.

C. We cannot disregard the rest of the world. We are forced to be our brother's keeper, economically.

D. Honest toil pays the best dividends . . . you can't cheat in the long run.

E. Child labor is not necessary or desirable.

F. Racketeering can be stopped if the average citizen wants it stopped.

G. Bad housing does not pay in dollars and cents to the community.

You can add your own X, Y, Z.

Is child labor desirable?

Bad housing—does it pay?

What makes an economic system bad or good?

The answer is simple . . . the attitude of the citizens of this community or country. So long as individual greed is the basis of business, so long as each man places his own profit above the cries of his suffering brothers, just so long will any system have open sores of poverty, sin and crime.

Discussion Suggestions:

1. Are there any slums in your city or town? Go and visit them and report on conditions at your next meeting. (The topic for the next meeting will be "Christ and Economic Life.") What can you do about conditions?

2. Is there any child labor in your neighborhood? Has the NRA helped this situation? If not, how can pressure be brought to bear upon the employers of children? Is an amendment to our national constitution possible?

3. What is your attitude in business? Are you out for all you can get? Is it good business to "do" the other fellow? Is it Christian?

(Continued on page 11.)

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

FELLOWSHIP WITH CHRIST.

LESSON I—OCTOBER 7, 1934.

Golden Text: Abide in me and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; so neither can ye except ye abide in me.—John 15:1-16.

Lesson Text: John 15:1-16.

The Necessity for Fruit-Bearing.

The first part of the fifteenth chapter of John is beautiful language, but it is disturbing language. For any one who reads it soon feels that Jesus is talking about something that makes deep and exacting demands upon us. The figure which he uses shows that He is talking about something vital, something inner, something spiritual. It is quite evident that Jesus is getting at the heart of things.

For Jesus is saying that Christians are not only to be good; they are to be good for something. They are not only saved; they are saved to serve. And Jesus puts this in a way that was clearly understood by His hearers and that can be understood by us.

The Conditions of Fruit-Bearing.

Jesus says that just as the branch must abide in the vine, that is, just as it is joined in an intimate living relationship with the vine if it is to live and bear fruit, just so must the Christian live in an intimate fellowship with Christ. Christ's life must be his life. It is only as a Christian has the spirit of Christ that he can bear fruit. Apart from Him we can do nothing. Apart from Him our spiritual life becomes withered and dead.

The condition then, of fruit-bearing, is abiding in Christ. The condition of abiding in Christ is obedience to Christ. "If ye keep my commandments ye shall abide in my love." He who obeys Christ has Christ's spirit. He who has Christ's spirit will bear fruit. And Christ pictures the Father as carefully watching every plant which He had planted, tending it, pruning it, nurturing it to the end that is might bear fruit.

Growth in Fruit-Bearing.

Bear fruit, more fruit, much fruit—thus in ascending scale does Christ show not only the life of the spirit but growth in the spirit. The Christian life is not static. The life which is not growing but dying. Life is always an unfinished business. We are to grow in grace and we are to increase in fruitfulness.

The Rewards of Fruit-Bearing.

He who does what God says can depend upon God to do what He says. If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will and it shall be done unto you. These are startling words. They are as if God gave us a blank check. Ask what ye will and it shall be done unto you—thus it seems to many. But Christ said if we abide in Him we can ask what we will and it shall be done unto us. It is difficult to abide in Christ but it pays. Only thus can we have abiding joy.

And as we bear fruit by abiding in Christ just so do we glorify God. Herein is my Father glorified that ye bear much fruit. So shall ye be my disciples. Fruit-bearing is a mark of discipleship. God has ordained us, that is He has sent us out into the world that we should bear fruit, fruit that should remain to his glory and to our joy.

Thus abiding brings also life's supreme privilege, friendship with Christ. Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you. But His commandment can be summed up in the words, "Love God" and "Love one another." He whose life is governed by the spirit of love, who has Christ's spirit in his life, will share an intimacy with Christ that is life's supreme privilege and joy. And he will be fruitful in the things that will glorify His loving Heavenly Father.

YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

(Continued from page 10.)

Daily Readings.

- Mon., Oct. 8.—Selfish trading. Prov. 20:14.
  - Tues., Oct. 9.—Exploiters of the poor. Ps. 10:1-11.
  - Wed., Oct. 10.—Unjust gain. Jer. 17:9-11.
  - Thurs., Oct. 11.—Gives employment. Eph. 4:28.
  - Fri., Oct. 12.—Labor union. Acts 19:24-28.
  - Sat., Oct. 13.—Labor troubles. Mark 12:1-9.
- Adapted from C. E. World Quarterly.

OBSERVE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR WEEK!

JANUARY 7 TO FEBRUARY 3, 1935.

Special programs for societies and unions for the week, and for Christian Endeavor Day, February 3, 1935.

write to

INTERNATIONAL SOCIETY OF CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

41 Mt. Vernon St.

Boston, Mass.

GREETINGS SESQUICENTENNIAL CELEBRATION AT SOUTH HILL, VA.

(Continued from page 3.)

South, and the latest records show how well they have succeeded.

But even before the last date the Virginia Methodist Episcopal Conference on November 1, 1832, sent Rev. Melville Cox as a missionary to Africa, he having sailed on the "Jupiter" from Murray's (now the A. C. L.) wharf in Portsmouth, Va.

The Christian Church followed the example on August 29, 1859, in the city of Raleigh, N. C., ordained Rev. Isaac Scott, a colored minister of good talents for work in Africa. Then when the war of 1861-65 was over, so far as known the first church body composed entirely of colored people in the United States was organized in Raleigh, N. C. in 1866 by the colored Christians of that state assisted by the white ministers of the Southern Christian Convention.

Thus we have grown to what we are today. Your schools are Duke University, Durham, N. C., and Randolph-Macon, Ashland, Va.; ours is Elon College, N. C. All are trying to give the youth education of the highest Christian type, and fit their leaders to be men of truth and their ministers to be men of faith who can point the people to the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world.

In this 150 years the Methodists of America, and especially those of the South have always taken the lead on all great moral issues that have arisen, and may they continue to do the same thing in the future, and the Christian Church of the South again bids you Godspeed in all of your undertakings for the uplift of humanity, and when the final chapter is written may it be said of us all: "Well done thou good and faithful servants, enter into the joy of Thy Lord."

W. E. MACCLENNY, Convention Historian.

A man must seek happiness and inward peace from objects which cannot be taken away from him.—W. von Humboldt.

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.

Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.

These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. It combines with the Concordance, Subject-Index, Scripture Proper Names, etc. The 12 Maps have been carefully revised and are beautifully colored. In making orders, give the number and price.

135—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold. $3.00

India Paper Edition, Only 16-16 of an inch thick.

. 133X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold, $4.00

SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS' BIBLE.

Especially made up for gift or reward Bibles for Sunday School scholars, containing a special series of very practical and useful helps and Bible Questions and Answers, etc. Printed on fine white Bible paper; ruby type; pocket size, 3 3/4 x 5 3/8 inches, and 1 inch thick, with 31 full-page illustrations in sepia. All bindings are black.

Ruby Type, Size 3 3/4 x 5 3/8 Inches, and 1 Inch Thick.

65—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold; 6 colored maps .....$2.50

AUTHORIZED VERSION.

RED LETTER TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Brevier Type (8 vo.), Self-Pronouncing, Size 5 3/8 x 8 1/2 Inches and 1 3/8 Inches Thick.

Containing the Bible, with full references. The words of Christ in the New Testament are printed in red; other parts of the book are printed in black. With Concise Bible Dictionary, combined Concordance, and 12 indexed maps.

7852—Genuine Leather, Lavant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold .....$4.75

RED-LETTER EDITION.

With All the Words of Christ in the New Testament Printed in Red.

1282—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit round corners, red under gold edges, register and headbands; title stamped on side and back in pure gold .....$3.25

60—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, Sunday School Scholars' Bible, stamped in pure gold on cover, no illustrations; special book for Sunday Schools .....95c

Any of the above Bibles sent postpaid. Address THE CHRISTIAN SUN 1536 East Broad Street Richmond, Virginia

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy

MONDAY.

HEARING THE VOICE OF GOD.

"Be still and know that I am God."—Ps. 46:10.

"Commune with your heart and be still."—Ps. 4:4.

"All day with anxious heart and wondering ear,
I listened to the city; heard the ground
Echo with human thunder, and the sound
Go reeling down the streets and disappear.
The headlong hours, in their wild career,
Shouted and sang until the word was drowned
With babel voices, each one more profound.
All day is surged,—but nothing could I hear.
"That night the country never seemed so still;
The trees and grasses spoke without a word
To stars that brushed them with their silver wings
Together with the moon I climbed the hill,
And, in the very heart of Silence, heard
The speech and music of immortal things."
—Louis Untermeyer.

Praayer—Dear Lord, we cannot hold Thee close enough. Thou hast made life, we fear too beautiful for us. May our souls enter into its beauties and where we hear Thy voice and be ever drawn to Thee.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

WINNEPESAUKEE.

"Their eyes shall see the king in his beauty; they shall behold a land that reaches afar."—
Isa. 33:17.

"For he that hath mercy on them shall lead them: even by the springs of water shall he guide them."—Isa. 49:10.

"Their souls shall be as a watered garden."—
Jer. 31:12.

Our title today is the name of a great lake nestled securely among the foot hills of the White Mountains of New Hampshire. The name is the Indian name for this lake and means "The Smile of the Great Spirit." Such it was to the Indians when they gave it its name and such it is to all who live and visit there this day. God gave it and God too must have named it. It is one of the most beautiful lakes in the United States if not in the world. Its glorious vistas of sparkling waters, islands, mountain peaks, and sunsets are unsurpassed anywhere. Mountains, hills, lake and sky unite to portray Nature's superior splendors. It holds the distinction of being the first summer resort in America. Governor John Wentworth in the 17th century started it.

Winnepesaukee attracts the eye and holds the heart of every traveller who visits there. Men and women, famous in the world of letters and art, have sung its praises for generations, and it is still being sung by thousands.

It is easy to think of God here, feel His Spirit toward man and worship. Here, far away from the bustle and noise of the city, beneath a glorious cloud-bedecked sky, midst the quiet of the hills and lapping waters, the charm of the silvered moon that sails the sky, fringes of ferns and roses that adorn the gardens and shores, and listening to the singing of the birds, we are conscious of a great Divine intelligence that has made all things lovely and good for man. Here we grasp, too, somewhat of Christ's meaning when he said, "Neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jerusalem . . . but . . . the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth."

Prayer—O Lord, the earth is Thine and the fullness thereof and all that therein is, and Thou hast founded it and established it for our good and Thy glory. Make us no longer strangers to these things, nor to Thee. It is our birth-right. Make it our home. Make it Thy home to us and we Thy children. We ask it in Jesus' name.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

AWARENESS.

A Prayer by Miriam Jiechner.

"God—let me be aware.
Let me not stumble blindly down the ways,
Just getting somehow safely through the days.
Not even groping for another hand,
Not even wondering why it all was planned,
Eyes to the ground unseeking for the light,
Soul never aching for a wild-winged flight.
Please keep me eager just to do my share.
God—let me be aware.

"God—let me be aware.
Stab my soul fiercely with other's pain,
Let me walk seeing horror and stain,
Let my hands, groping, find other hands
Give me the heart that divines, understands,
Give me courage, wounded, to fight,
Flood me with knowledge, drench me in light
Please—keep me eager just to do my share,
God—let me be aware.

THURSDAY.

A CLEAR PURPOSE.

"Work not for the food which perisheth, but for the food which abideth unto eternal life, which the son of man shall give you."—Jno. 6:27.

I must have a clear purpose;
To seize the thread of life,
Untangle it,

Grasp it firmly between thumb and finger
And with it make a pattern worthy
Of the Master-Weaver.

I must not be discouraged
If it seems a little figure
That I am making;

For if even my small strip should be awry
Or the colors wrong, there would be a blemish
In God's tapestry.

Prayer—Our Father, enable us to live a simple life of consecration. We would leave a trace of the good and the imperishable along our way. For Thy sake. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

RACE POINT.

"Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night showeth knowledge."—Ps. 19:2.

Race Point is a Coast Guard Station on Cape Cod near Provincetown, Mass. It is the only point on the East Coast where one may look due West and watch the sun set in the Atlantic Ocean. It is a famous spot for tourists at Cape Cod. After supper they drive to this point just before sunset and in silence while waiting for the glorious God of day to settle behind the sea, watch the shifting scene of crimson and golden glory bespangling the sky. Every evening offers a different picture and every evening they go again to behold it. Artists have tried to paint these sunsets, but the shifting scenes from glory to glory transpire so rapidly that they find themselves unconsciously just looking. Man in all his greatness cannot paint a sunset.

"The lovely things are quiet things
Soft falling snow,
And feathers dropped from flying wings
Make no sound as they go.
A petal loosened from a rose
Quietly seeks the ground;
And love, if lovely when it goes,
Goes without a sound."

—Anonymous.

Clouds dissolve and float away. The most gorgeous sunset splendors vanish in a few moments. The artist's canvas crumbles and his creation fades. But work done for Christ endures forever.

Prayer—Say the Lord's Prayer.

SATURDAY.

WISDOM'S CRY.

"Doth not wisdom cry and understanding put forth her voice?"—Prov. 8:1-11.

The world is full of advertisers. We are beset with their calls at every turn. They are unwearied, impudent, desperate, and we get heartily sick of them.

But the best advertiser in the world is Wisdom. If we value good advertising, we shall listen eagerly to all she tells us. Her advertising is absolutely unselfish. She summons us to nothing that is not for our highest good. Wisdom calls us through the best books, through sermons, through conversation with the noblest friends, through the Bible, through prayer, through the blessed guidance of the Holy Spirit. Her advertisements are unexcelled.

Prayer—Divine Wisdom, Thou art divine Love as well. We will hear Thee with delight. We will heed Thee with care.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

SUNDAY.

ABIDING.

"God is love; and he that abideth in love abideth in God, and God abideth in him."—John 4: 7-17.

The world is so full of change that it is no wonder that the apostle John, who had seen more than his share of it, should use "abide" as one of his favorite words.

We have almost forgotten the meaning of the good old word, "homestead." People that move every May Day can have no homestead, no home to be steady on.

But, whatever the necessities of modern life may decree, whoever knows the love of God has a homestead, a lasting, abiding place. "I go to prepare a place for you," said the Lord. We can not conceive of any delight that our place does not contain, for the Creator of all delights fashioned it for us.

Prayer—We would begin even now to abide in Thee, O Jesus, Lover of our souls!—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

My soul, for love like this what canst thou say, what canst thou do? Such love asks and demands the strength and fulness of thy love.—C. H. Spurgeon.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

THE ENTHUSIASTIC SAVIOUR.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"They said: He is beside himself."—Mark 3:21.

Our scripture lesson brings us a great picture today. I have named it enthusiasm. Enthusiastic multitudes. Enthusiastic kinsmen. Enthusiastic scribes. There is not an ounce of indifference in the whole field. There is enthusiasm. I am thinking mainly about Jesus,—His enthusiasm,—but when I come to meditate upon this lesson I find they were all enthusiastic.

I. Indifference is Deadening.

The multitudes thronged Jesus and the disciples so much that there was not time to eat. They were enthusiastic. And his friends and relatives seeing the situation rushed in to lay hold upon him. They surely were enthusiastic. And the scribes had come down all the way from Jerusalem to be there, and they took a very active part so we must conclude that they were enthusiastic. Indifference is not in the picture. Indifference is the devil's mightiest weapon at times. Just plain indifference can wreck a career, a life, a home, a church, or a business. Indifference is deadening.

The multitudes said he was miraculous; the kinsmen said he was mad; the scribes said he was mean,—their very language was enthusiastic. And if you get out here and do something worthwhile with your life somebody is likely to call you miraculous, or mad, or mean, or maybe you will be called all three; but you will have the satisfaction of knowing that you are not stagnant, nor indifferent.

The multitudes thronged him, the kinsmen restrained him, the scribes condemned him; but Jesus was not swayed either to the right or to the left by any of them. He kept his face set steadfastly toward his goal. The thronging multitudes may cause one to lose one's head; the kindly advise of cautious friends may cause one to lose one's enthusiasm; and the condemnation of one's enemies may cause one to lose one's course, but it did not so affect Jesus. He had an ageless faith in God, and an undying love for humanity. Day in, and day out he was about His Father's business. Call it miraculous if they will, or madness if they may, or mean if they must, Jesus, with an enthusiasm that was deep and abiding, pressed on into the very heart and hope of the world.

II. Enthusiasm Not Dampened.

"They said: He is beside himself." It is the same thing as saying he has lost his mind, or he is out of his head. But the wise old scribes and Pharisees did not think he was a madman. There was too much real attraction; too genuine authority about his words; too miraculous were his works. They were uneasy, and it was not an uneasiness that comes from the passing foolishness of one that is mad. They put their heads together and set their plan agoing. Here was something that would take their best wits, and their greatest determination. They followed Him, into the synagogue and out; by the seashore and onto the mountainside; they press upon his every step, they watch his every move, and learned to hate him with a bitter hatred. But it did not dampen his enthusiasm.

His own friends said to him, Why you are crazy. Rev. Roland Hill tells us that when he lifted his voice, and strained it in warning a group of people of impending physical danger he was applauded and praised; but when he lifted his voice to warn people of their spiritual danger his friends called him a fanatic and a fool. Why is it that we hesitate to show enthusiasm about the greatest thing in all of life? Why is it that we delight to weep in 'movies,' but dare not shed a tear in church?

I attended a movie in Dayton, Ohio, to see "Sonny Boy." Every showing hour that great theatre was packed. How Al Jolson sang! And how the people wept. You could hear actual sobs all over the house, and in the dark of the house you could see full many a handkerchief lifted to the face. They liked it. They went back for more. But so far as I could see that emotional enthusiasm was hitched to little if anything. It was lost because it was not harnessed on to some great endeavor. It was like firing a great locomotive just to see the escape valve in action. But the enthusiasm of Jesus was like opening the great throttle and seeing the locomotive carry its tremendous load. The enthusiasm of Jesus was not only not dampened, it was daringly hitched to the world's heaviest burdens,—the burdens of sin, sorrow, and want, and suffering!

III. Enthusiasm of His Followers.

There is one group standing in the edge of the picture, just a bit in the background that we have not noticed yet,—namely, the disciples. They had just been chosen. Everybody seemed to be showing enthusiasm of one kind or another but them. They are quiet. Perhaps awed, or overcome. The enthusiasm of Jesus, and the others has left little place for them. But their eyes are being opened, and their ears are being kindled, and their hearts are being lifted in love so that one day they will be willing to be counted fools for Christ's sake!

They were witnesses of the enthusiasm of Jesus in this picture when the crowds followed hard upon his heels, and when his friends and kindred sought to take him aside and calm him down,—but they saw greater enthusiasm yet than that! They saw him when the multitudes had dispersed, and friends had failed, and the enemies were doing their worst, and all the while his enthusiasm deepened. There had never been anything like, nor has there been, except as to whatever degree his own followers down across the centuries have caught his spirit and dared to show the same sort of enthusiasm.

Yes, the disciples were quiet that day, but not always. What a change came upon them in the months and brief years that followed! They caught the enthusiasm eventually of their Lord. And the Simon that was now a disciple only became a mighty preacher, so that with one sermon three thousand souls were converted. And when he began that sermon, there were those present who said he was drunk. Paul delivered a message with such enthusiasm that they said his much learning had driven him mad. Paul was willing to be counted a fool for Christ's sake.

That has been the kind of enthusiasm that has carried the message of the church down across the centuries. Whenever the church has gone forward on a wave of enthusiasm that has swept all with it. A man said the other day, "If you people believe the things you say you do, it seems to me you would be more enthusiastic about getting your message across to others." He was speaking of the church in general. Such mighty issues, according to him, were at stake, if the things were true which we claimed for the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Issues that were paramount. Issues that could not be sidestepped, and yet, your people seem to think it is something of very little concern whether others believe it or not. He was probably too severe in his judgments. But nevertheless, there was something to what he was saying.

We had an enthusiastic Saviour. They said that keep him from heading straight on toward his goal. Our church is coming now into the finest season of the year for the church to put in (Continued to page 14.)

COMMUNION WARE.

Individual Service.

Made in best Silver Plate or Aluminum. Prices low; first-class workmanship and finish.

ALUMINUM.

Aluminum is light in weight, durable, and does not tarnish.

Style No. 50-A.

- Tray No. 2—Interlocking, with 40 plain glasses $7.00
- Tray No. 6—Interlocking, with 35 plain glasses 6.75
- Tray No. 10—Interlocking, with 30 plain glasses 6.50
- Base No. 50-A—Fits Trays 2, 6, or 10..... 2.25
- Cover No. 50-A—Fits Trays 2, 6, or 10..... 2.25
- Bread Plate No. 1—Narrow rim..... 1.60

SILVER-PLATED.

The Silver-plated Ware is of the very highest grade and best finish; heavily plated on nickel base.

- Tray No. 85—Interlocking only, with 36 glasses $22.00
- Base No. 1—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 85.. 11.00
- Cover No. 5—Silver-plated; fits Tray No. 85... 16.00

- (For Silver Bread Plates, see 'under No. 90.)
- Tray No. 90—Interlocking, with 36 plain glasses (this style has broad rim, which is sometimes preferred, due to increased ease of handling) $22.00
  - Base No. 2—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 90.. 16.00
  - Cover No. 4—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 90. 14.00

- Bread Plate No. 3—Narrow Rim..... $ 9.00
- Bread Plate No. 4—Broad Rim..... 9.00
- Filler—Silver Lined..... 6.00

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street

Richmond, Virginia

A Story for the Children

THE THREE QUESTIONS.

Once upon a time there lived a king who believed that if he could be sure of three things, he would never make any more mistakes. These three things were: First, when is it the right time to begin to do a piece of work? Second, who are the people with whom to associate? Third, which particular piece of work is of the greatest value? The king considered the last question the most important. He made it known far and wide throughout his kingdom that he would give a rich reward to any one who would teach him these three things.

Hearing of this, wise men came from all parts of the country to give the king advice. Each one gave him a different answer to his questions. Some said that if he drew up a careful plan of work for every month and every day in the year, and kept strictly to it, he would always know which was the right time to begin each piece of work. Others told him that it was impossible to know beforehand what was the best thing to do at every hour, and that he must simply do whatever needed to be done at that particular time.

The answers to the second of the king's questions were just as varied. Some said that ministers and statesmen were the best people with whom to associate. Others declared that doctors were the most necessary, as it was their business to keep people healthy.

As all these answers were so different, the king was greatly puzzled. He did not know to whom to give the reward, and in the end decided to question an old hermit, who was noted for his wisdom.

The hermit lived in a tiny hut in the center of a forest. He never left this forest and only welcomed simple folk to his abode. So the king disguised himself as a common man in humble clothing. He left his escort at a distance and went alone to the hut of the aged hermit. When he found the hut he saw the hermit digging in his little garden. As the king came nearer, the hermit looked up and greeted him, then went on with his work. Being old and feeble, he was only able to turn up small clods of earth with his spade, and he soon became quite breathless.

The king went up to him and begged him for the answers to his three questions. The hermit listened to what the king had to say, but gave no reply; instead, he took up his spade again and continued to dig.

"You are tired," said the king, "give me the spade and let me help you."

"Thank you," replied the hermit, handing his spade to the king, then seating himself upon the ground to rest.

After the king had dug over two small beds, he stopped working and again put his three questions to the hermit. The holy man, however, made no reply, but merely stood up and held out his hand for the spade saying:

"Now it is your turn to rest a little; let me do the digging." But the king would not give up the spade and started to work again.

In this way an hour passed, then another, and finally the sun sank low behind the trees. The king then dug his spade into the ground and turning to the hermit, said:

"I came to you, wise man, to receive answers to my three questions. If you cannot answer them, please tell me, and I shall return home."

"See, here comes someone running toward us," said the hermit. "Let us see who it is and what he wants."

A bearded man came running out of the woods. His hands were pressed to his side, and blood was trickling between his fingers. He sank to the ground at the king's feet, closed his eyes and lay there moaning with pain. With the hermit's help the king undressed the man and bathed his wounds. After a time the man regained consciousness and complained of thirst, whereupon the king brought him some fresh water to drink. The sun had now set, and the air grew cold. The king and the hermit carried the wounded man carefully into the hut and laid him upon the wooden bed. The man lay still, with his eyes closed, and the king, who was wearied with his hard labor, sat down on the floor near him. Soon he fell into a deep sleep and slept through the short summer night. When he awoke in the early morning he could not at first remember where he was, nor who was the strange bearded man who gazed upon him with such curious bright eyes.

"Forgive me," said the wounded man after a while in a weak voice.

"I do not know you and have nothing to forgive," replied the king.

"You may not know me," said the man, "but I was your enemy, and had sworn to revenge myself. I knew that you had gone into the forest alone to look for the hermit's hut, and I was going to kill you on my way back. But a whole day passed and you did not return, so I left my hiding place to go and look for you. Then I met some of your followers, who recognized me and attacked me. But I managed to escape from them, even though I was wounded. I had meant to kill you, but now instead you have saved my life. From now onwards I will serve you as your most faithful vassal, and my sons shall do likewise. Forgive me, I pray you."

The king rejoiced at having won over an enemy to friendship, and not only forgave him, but promised him back his lands and to send his own physician to care for his wounds.

The king then went out into the garden to look for the hermit, so that he might ask his questions once again. He found the holy man planting corn in his garden. Going up to him, the king said:

"For the last time, O wise man, give me an answer to my questions."

"But you have already had your answer," said the hermit. "Listen! Did you not feel sympathy for me yesterday, poor man that I am, and dig my garden for me? Had you gone away alone and left me, this man would have fallen upon you, and then you would have been sorry that you had not remained here. Therefore, it was for you exactly the right time to dig my garden. Just then, I was the most important man for you, while the most important thing for you to do was to help me."

"Remember, then, that there is always only one important moment that a man need think about, and that moment is always the present. The most important person for us is he who meets us just at that moment. We can never know for certain whether we shall ever meet anyone else. The most important duty of all is to do good for that person. For this purpose alone have we been sent into the world."—Leo Tolstoi from the World Library for Children.

Mother told company that Rose May, aged nine could name all the Presidents in order. One of the guests, a middle-aged man, said he knew all the names of the Presidents when he was six years old. Rose May spoke up, "No wonder you could, there weren't hardly any then!"—Monitor.

HOLMAN SUPERIOR TEACHERS' BIBLES
 Authorized Version—Self-Pronouncing The Best Editions of the World's Best Book
For Adults, Teachers, Preachers, Students, and All Who Would Study the Word of God Intelligently
 BOLD BLACK TYPE—COMPACT SIZE 4 1/2 x 6 3/4 INCHES—WILL FIT THE COAT POCKET

Part page specimen of Holman Boldblack Type Bible
ST. MATTHEW, 5. Christ's sermon on the mount.

13 And leaving Náz'a-réth, he came and dwelt in Cá-pér-na-úm, which is upon the sea coast, in the borders of Záb'u-lon and Néph-tha-lím :	A. D. 31.	934 CHAPTER 5.
14 That it might be fulfilled	CHAP. 4.	3 Who are blessed. 13 The disciples called the salt of the earth, and light of the world; Christ urgeth on them a good example, etc.
	Isa. 9. 1, 2.	AND seeing the multitudes, he went up into a moun-

THIS NEW HOLMAN TEACHERS' BIBLE, Pronouncing Text, Bold Black Type is a PRONOUNCED SUCCESS. The latest Bible with NEW HELPS that are quite comprehensive and consist of an Illustrated Bible Dictionary, Concordance and additional aids all under ONE ALPHABETICAL INDEX. Also Fine Maps on Coated Paper, and a specially prepared BIBLE READING COURSE, intended to stimulate and maintain interest in the Bible. Imported Bible paper is used to improve opacity and keep down bulk. By this means you get the benefit of full Biblical information without the physical discomfort of handling a heavy volume.

STYLES AND PRICES—BIBLE PAPER EDITION

4612. French Morocco Leather, divinity circuit, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges.....	$4.00
4630. Same as 4612, with extra leather lined covers.....	4.75
THIN INDIA PAPER EDITION
With Helps as described above. Size 4 1/2 x 6 3/4 inches. One inch in thickness
630X. Egyptian Morocco, divinity circuit, leather linings, red under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker.....	7.00
633X. Algerian Morocco, divinity circuit, leather lining to edge, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, extra quality binding.....	8.00

EXTRA LARGE PRINT TEACHERS' BIBLES
 Large 8 Vo. Size—8x5 1/2 inches—1600 Pages, including 400 pages of Bible Study Helps

Part Page Specimen of Print
ST. MATTHEW, 5. Christ's sermon on the mount.

15 <sup>k</sup> The land of Záb'u-lon, and the land of Néph-tha-lím, by the way of the sea, beyond Jór-dan, Gál'y-lee of the Gén'tiles;	A. D. 31.	2 And he opened his mouth, and taught them, saying,
	Is. 9. 1, 2. Luke 2. 32. Mark 1. 14.	3 <sup>b</sup> Blessed are the poor in spirit: for their's is the kingdom of heaven.

CONTAINING COMPLETE HELPS TO BIBLE STUDY, INCLUDING ALL OF THE FOLLOWING FEATURES

A New Practical Course in Bible Reading, A Treasury of Biblical Information. The most carefully compiled, thorough and attractive form in which valuable Biblical information has ever been prepared. Illustrated Self-Pronouncing Bible Dictionary Containing 150 illustrations, concise definitions and textual references on nearly 50,000 subjects. A Practical Comparative Concordance, with nearly 50,000 references. Four Thousand Questions and Answers on the Old and New Testaments. A valuable Help to all Bible Readers.

STYLES AND PRICES

4712. Divinity Circuit (overlapping covers); French Seal Leather, red under gold edges, silk head bands, and silk marker..	$5.00
812RL. Red Letter Teachers' Bible. The Words of Christ in the New Testament. Old Testament Passages alluded to by Christ, various prophecies relating to Christ in the Old Testament, etc., all PRINTED IN RED. Binding same as described above on 4712 and same large Self-Pronouncing type.....	6.00
733X. Holman India Paper, Genuine Morocco, leather lined, silk sewed, divinity circuit, round corners carmine under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker, same type and helps as above.....	10.65

All styles sent Postpaid at above prices—Thumb Index 50 cents extra

Christian Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

The months of October, November and December are the three months set apart by the Southern Convention for special activities in behalf of the Christian Orphanage. These three months take in Thanksgiving, the time we try to raise nearly half of our income for the year. Our goal for 1934 is twenty thousand dollars. If you will notice our financial report for this week you will see that we have reached and passed the tenth rung in the ladder. We are just a little more than half way to the goal. We have three months to raise the ten thousand dollars. Can it be done? Yes! Provided each church and Sunday school will do its part. You have never failed in the past when we set a goal. Last year you pushed us up to the goal and three hundred dollars beyond. I know you will not fail me this year.

Won't you begin now to plan for the Thanksgiving offering in your church. Set your goal high enough to make you feel happy if you reach it and then try to reach it and go beyond it. Remember your orphanage has nearly 100 little children. Some things cost us one hundred per cent more this year than last. Lots of the things cost us from 25 to 50 per cent more than last year. So you can readily see that it is necessary to increase your offerings if we meet expenses. I want to appeal to you with all the earnestness of my heart to make some special effort in behalf of your institution that is taking little fatherless children and guiding them in their young and tender years so they will be good citizens when they reach maturity. May the kind Master guide you in your offerings from now till the end of the year.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

REPORT FOR OCTOBER 4, 1934.

Brought forward .....	$ 9,987.40
Sunday School and Monthly Offerings.
North Carolina and Virginia Conference:
Union, Va. ....	$ 3.95
Lebanon .....	1.30
		5.25
Eastern North Carolina Conference:
Wake Chapel .....	5.00
Damasus .....	1.73
Bethel (Wake) .....	1.87
Henderson .....	3.33
		11.93
Western North Carolina Conference:
Smithwood .....	1.10	1.10
Eastern Virginia Conference:
Windsor .....	3.38
Bethlehem .....	4.35
Union, Surry .....	6.00
First Richmond .....	3.70
		17.43
Valley Va. Central Conference:
Mayland .....	1.00
Linville .....	5.58
		6.58
Alabama Conference:
Noon Day .....	1.03
Lowell .....	1.75
		2.78
Special Offerings.
F. C. Owen, gdn. for Jas. Brown..	12.50
W. M. McQueen, support of children	10.00
		22.50
Total for the week .....		67.57
Grand total .....		$10,054.97

MONTICELLO CHURCH CELEBRATION.

Monticello Christian Church celebrated its 25th Anniversary September 30, 1934. The day was a success in every way. At the Sunday School hour the young people presented a pageant "Reckoning" in which was presented the religious educational program. At 11 A. M., Rev. J. V. Knight, of Tarboro, the second pastor of the church, spoke on "The Mission of the Church." In the afternoon at two o'clock, Rev. J. H. Lightbourne of Burlington, gave an address on "Missions for the New Age." The Mt. Carmel M. E. Quartet was present for this service and sang several selections. In the evening the Young People presented a short historical pageant "The Challenge," which was followed by a candle light Communion Service. With the close of these services Monticello launches forth on her second twenty-five years of service. H. E. H.

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

(Continued from page 13.)

He was beside himself. But Jesus did not let its great licks. Please allow me to challenge every man, woman, and child of us to become enthusiastic about our church, about our religion, and about our Christ. We do believe the things we say we do. And believing them let us show to the world by our words and our work that we believe them. Hearts are hungry for a message of life and love delivered straight from the heart by friends to them about the Christian life. They want to know that people still care. And our Christ is counting on us to let them know. If the church is not crowded we are at fault. There are enough of us who are anxious to see it filled to fill it by our enthusiasm if we will. We had an enthusiastic Saviour, let us be enthusiastic Christians.

ELON COLLEGE

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

South Entrance to the Campus

ELON COLLEGE, founded by the Christian Church in 1889, has fully justified the faith and hope of its founders during its 42 years of operation. Its graduates from the four-year course leading to a bachelor's degree, number 980, now living, 122 of whom are in the Christian Ministry and full-time Christian service. The majority of these are members of our own denomination. In addition, 449 are in educational work and are an active influence in the lay leadership of the Christian Church.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION BUILDING, and the definite religious atmosphere of the College, provide the very best facilities available for training for religious leadership, and offer the Church its finest opportunity to train the young people of the denomination to assume active leadership both in the ministry and laity of the local churches.

Address—

C. M. CANNON, Registrar

Elon College. . . . . North Carolina

Home Atmosphere—Reasonable Rates—Clean Athletics—Christian Spirit

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom, as represented by the Congregational Christian Church.

BOARD OF EDITORS.

J. O. ATKINSON, D. D. . . . . Editor
E. C. GILLETTE, D. D. . . . . Associate
I. W. JOHNSON, D. D. . . . . Contributing
ELISHA A. KING, D. D. . . . . Contributing
J. T. KERNODLE. . . . . Managing Editor

DEPARTMENTAL EDITORS.

H. S. HARDCASTLE. . . . . Sunday School
J. G. TRUITT, D. D. . . . . Sermon
F. C. LESTER. . . . . Young People
H. E. ROUNTREE. . . . . Altar

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year . . . . . $2.00
Six Months . . . . . 1.00

Trial Subscriptions: Five or more new subscriptions sent in at one time by pastor or president of any church organization, three months for 40c each.

Published Every Thursday at Richmond, Virginia, by the Central Publishing Company, Inc.

Entered as second-class matter at the Postoffice at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Change of Address: Be sure to give both old and new address when asking that your address be changed.

All news matter and items to be published in "The Sun" should be addressed to J. O. Atkinson, Editor, Elon College, N. C., and should reach him not later than Friday preceding date of publication. If more convenient, news from Congregational Churches may be sent to E. C. Gillette, Associate Editor, 117 W. Forsyth Street, Jacksonville, Fla. Emergency notices will be received at the Richmond Office up until Tuesday of week of publication.

All remittances for subscriptions, renewals, advertising, etc., books for review, and other matters of business should be addressed to J. T. Keruodle, Managing Editor, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond, Va.

Notices: Obituary and marriage notices, limited to 125 words, published free. All over 125 words, 1c a word, cash with notice. No notices should exceed 250 words.

Receipts: The change of label is your receipt for money paid. The label shows date of expiration, and change on label will appear the first or second issue of the month following renewal, provided it was received before the 25th. No other receipt will be sent unless requested. Please notify the Richmond Office if label is not changed as above.

OBITUARIES

MRS. C. D. JOHNSTON.

Mrs. Effie May Johnston, wife of C. D. Johnston, Superintendent of the Christian Orphanage at Elon College, died at the Johnston home Friday evening, September 21st, at 8:21 P. M. She is survived by her husband, Mr. C. D. Johnston, three children, and eight stepchildren.

Mrs. Johnston served a number of years as matron of the Christian Orphanage. On June 21, 1922, she was married to Mr. C. D. Johnston. Mrs. Johnston was a woman of rare gifts and of unusual energy. She possessed the ability to conduct her home so as to make all who came feel perfectly free and at ease. She meant more to the Christian Orphanage than the public will ever know. She loved the institution and lived for its success and for the happiness of her family and home. She was a faithful and devout member of the Elon College Christian Church. It is always a mysterious act of providence to remove from life one so much needed, so truly loved, and so greatly beneficial to all who knew her.

The services were conducted from the college chapel Sunday, September 23rd, at 3:00 P. M. by the writer, who is pastor of the church, assisted by her neighbors, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, and Rev. James L. Foster. Mr. J. M. Darden, of Suffolk, was present and spoke beautifully of the life of the deceased on behalf of the Board of Trustees of the Christian Orphanage. Music was furnished by the college quartet with Prof. Steere at the organ. The flowers were profuse and most beautiful. The auditorium was filled to capacity by members of the family, relatives and friends. The burial was in Magnolia Cemetery at Elon College.

May the promises of God and the presence of the Spirit be both comfort and strength to the bereaved.

L. E. SMITH.

FARRELL.

Mrs. Elizabeth Holt Farrell was born April 2, 1866, died September 5, 1934. Aged 68 years, 5 months and 3 days. The husband died a few years ago leaving her with a large family.

She joined Hank's Chapel Christian Church in early life and remained a faithful member to the end. She was a good woman and a beloved mother.

She leaves to mourn their loss the following children: Mrs. Bertha Riddle, Mrs. Mabel Whitaker, Eugene, Leonard, Ira, John, Wallace, Percy, Roland and Tommie and many relatives and friends.

The funeral was conducted in Hank's Chapel by the writer assisted by Rev. J. S. Carden of Durham and Rev. Mr. Barclay of Pittsboro. The remains were placed in the church cemetery.

May the Lord bless and comfort the bereaved ones.

J. FRANK APPLE.

BRITTLE.

Whereas Our Heavenly Father in His infinite love and wisdom has seen fit to call one of His fairest daughters from her earthly labors to her eternal reward, our friend and co-worker, Mrs. R. E. Brittle, wife of our beloved pastor, Rev. R. E. Brittle and since coming into our midst she had endeared herself to us by her faithfulness, loyalty and co-operative spirit in the work which seemed so dear to her heart.

Therefore, we the members of the Missionary and Ladies Aid Society of Bethlehem Christian Church hereby offer the following resolutions:

1. That we humbly submit to God's will, knowing that "He doeth all things well."

2. That we have been blessed by having her with us, and we will always cherish the memory of her personality and her willingness to serve.

3. That we extend to her husband and loved ones our deepest sympathy and point them to Him, who said, "I will not leave you comfortless."

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to her husband, a copy be placed on the records of our Society and a copy be sent to THE CHRISTIAN SUN for publication.

Respectfully submitted,
MRS. J. W. FOLK,
MRS. HORACE OLIVER,
MRS. O. D. KING.
Committee.

PIEDMONT COLLEGE

Located in

"The Blue Ridge Highlands"

An accredited college with an enviable reputation for superior classroom instruction, and wholesome student life.

Standard courses leading to the A. B. and B. S. degrees. Careful, scholarly instructors.

A refined Christian atmosphere. All of the cultural elements essential to a liberal education.

A minimum of expense. Tuition and board for the entire academic year only $273.50.

For information, write

GEORGE C. BELLINGRATH, Dean,
PIEDMONT COLLEGE,
DEMOREST, GEORGIA.

Southern Seminary Foundation

(Successor to Atlanta Theological Seminary.)

AFFILIATED WITH

Vanderbilt University

The Foundation and the other Foundations that are affiliated with Vanderbilt University School of Religion comprise the only Interdenominational Theological School in the South. Through this affiliation the students enjoy the rights and privileges of Vanderbilt University.

DEGREES.

Candidates for degrees are required to have completed their college courses.

The degree of Bachelor of Divinity is offered to qualified students who complete the required courses.

Vanderbilt University also offers the degrees of Master of Arts and Doctor of Philosophy, in accordance with the regulations established in its several departments.

MORE THAN A SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY.

Because of our affiliation with Vanderbilt, our relations with other nearby colleges where our students can take courses without tuition, and the cooperation of the American Red Cross and other social agencies in the city, we prepare students for many types of Christian service.

For information write

WILLIAM JAMES CAMPBELL, President,
330 BUTTRICK HALL, VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY,
NASHVILLE, TENN.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

Representing the Southeast Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches.

IN ESSENTIALS, UNITY.

IN NON-ESSENTIALS, LIBERTY.

IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY.

VOLUME LXXXVI.

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, OCTOBER 11, 1934.

NUMBER 41.

•• THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY ••

Mission Rooms
c/o J. C. Atkinson

AFOL Demands 30-Hour Week.—

The American Federation of Labor, which is convening in San Francisco this week went on record as favoring a five-day, thirty-hour week for all industry. Labor leaders point out that there are many industries at present in which it is impossible to obtain more than 30 hours a week, but that the proposal should be adopted in industries that are now employing for longer periods as a means of increasing employment in those industries. One cannot but wonder whether the farmer, in turn, will demand a week of four days and 29 hours?

Cotton Crop Falls Below "Quota."—

The crop reporting board estimated early this week that the cotton crop would fall some 1,017,251 bales less than the quota set in the Bankhead compulsory control act. The estimate for the first of October gave a production of 9,443,000 bales over the September 1 estimate, but was still 3,604,000 below last year's figures and was more than five million bales less than the average production for five years from 1928 to 1932. Only one smaller crop has been recorded since the beginning of the century, it being in 1921, when only 7,954,000 bales were produced.

A Modern Caesar.—

The "revival of the spirit of ancient Rome" goes merrily on in Italy. Premier Mussolini has followed up his militaristic speeches by a decree that all males, eight years old and over, are to be mobilized into a peace army. Boys from the time they are eight until they are called to arms at 21 will be prepared "spiritually, physically and militarily" by the civil organization of the Fascist Billila and by the Fascist Youths of Combat. The youth training is divided into two sections: first, 8 to 18; second, 18 to 21. So the war spirit is being fanned into a flame by one who likes to think of himself as a reincarnated Caesar reigning over a revived Roman Empire. But starting with boys of 8 is going just a little bit too strong.—Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

"The World Series."—

Football has practically taken all of the honors in college sports for several years past. Indeed, the other athletic teams are of very minor importance. Yet, in spite of all this, the world series between the two major professional baseball associations reminds us that baseball is still the "great American game." With six games played, the St. Louis Cardinals and the Detroit Tigers, were even all, and it required the seventh game to give the victory to the St. Louis team. The attendance at these games has averaged close to 50,000 people, and radio speakers have served an audience running into the millions. There is much to be said for and against professional athletics, but when all is said, our colleges might with benefit take a few lessons in sportsmanship from the big league baseball teams.

"Poor Fruitage for His Labor!"—

Overlooking the mighty Victoria Falls, in Southern Rhodesia, a statue to David Livingstone, the missionary and explorer, was recently unveiled in the presence of the largest crowd which ever assembled at the Falls. Premier H. U. Moffatt spoke in a broadcast which was relayed to Great Britain and the United States. He said in part: "While Lincoln freed four million slaves with a stroke of the pen, Livingstone struck at the roots of the evil thing by exposing to the world the horrors of trade in human beings." Livingstone was the man who was the only lad to join a little Scottish church during one long year. His pastor looked sadly upon what seemed to be only a poor fruitage for his faithful labors. But Blantyre rejoices today in being the place from which this great man of God went forth to his great service, proclaiming the Gospel of the shed blood of the Lord Jesus and his high abilities."—The Presbyterian.

Are You Afraid of Tuberculosis?—

If you are, you had better secure immediately a position as a college president or at least a professorship. Statistics furnished by the National Tuberculosis Association tell us that only 2.69 in every thousand of those so employed suffer from this dread disease. Among other professional men, lawyers, including judges and justices, show a rate of 7.89 per thousand; ministers run 10.33, and physicians and surgeons top the list with a rate of 10.69. Teachers were found to have a rate of 4.42, while social welfare workers nearly reach the minimum with 2.75. It seems that those working around horses are very susceptible to tuberculosis, as hostlers and stable hands showed a death rate of 36.22 per thousand employed. Operatives in harness and saddle factories followed with 30.55 deaths. The rate for aviators was unexpectedly high, being 28.73 against 17.28 for sailors. Generally speaking, unskilled labor paid the greatest toll to tuberculosis, but heart disease evened up the score by making its demands on the professional man.

Publication Resumed by "Allied Youth."—

Allied Youth, which suspended publication last March, has reappeared in a new garb and with greatly improved typography. It is the temperance organ of the Allied Youth Movement, standing for "the liberation through education of the individual and society from the handicaps of alcohol beverage." The paper is under the management of W. Roy Breg, who is well known to many of the younger leaders in church work. Dr. Daniel A. Poling is among the contributing editors, and in the September issue which has reached our desk he makes an urgent appeal for the support of the Allied Youth Movement: "America needs Allied Youth to keep her young men and young women 'free from handicaps,' as their platform promises. And as greatly as the nation needs this movement, Allied Youth needs your help." When writing this article, Dr. Poling had just returned from a two month's tour, covering 18,000 miles through fifteen countries. He says: "There is nothing like a long absence to give a man fresh vision. . . . with new eyes for seeing progress and new courage for meeting needs." And continues he there is need for this courage because, "Wherever we may have been during these summer months now past, we cannot have gone far enough to have escaped altogether an awareness of the regard alcohol is writing across our country. To the farthest port, the highest fastness, the most isolated community, has come some intimation of the disasters of the past ten months."

Our Poor Dying Churches.—

A favorite theme of journals, religious and secular, and of a good many ministers and laymen, as well as non-church members, is the general worthlessness of the churches. Those of us who visit the churches, large and small, know that they fall short of the ideal, but there is another side. Statements made at the meeting of the National Committee for Religious Welfare Recovery the other day have an optimistic trend. Dr. Weber, editor of the Year Book of American Churches, said: "More than 30,000,000 Americans attend services in Protestant and Catholic churches and Jewish synagogues every week. The churches are gaining members at the rate of 750,000 a year. Church buildings have increased sevenfold in number in the last 75 years. The last census showed 232,154 houses of worship in the country, and church debts amount to only 11 per cent of the value of church property." Dr. Kieffer, president of the Association of Statisticians of American Religious Bodies, asserted that, "Approximately one half of the population of the United States is definitely related to some church. While the population of the country increased 22-fold between 1800 and 1934, the church membership in the same period increased 80-fold." Another leader made this statement: "Religion is not dying. The churches of Protestant, Catholic and Jew are not losing their power to comfort and sustain and guide the people of America. It is not true that the strifes and hatreds and bitter hardships of these recent years have undermined the ancient faith."—Advance.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Dr. L. E. Smith, president of Elon College, preached for Dr. C. H. Rowland, Greensboro First Church, Sunday, October 7th. It is reported that Dr. Rowland is resting well and improving at a mountain sanitarium in Western Carolina, to which he went some two weeks ago seeking rest and health.

Practically all the ministers of our Eastern Virginia Conference attended the Woman's Missionary Conference at Liberty Spring, October 5th, and it is needless to say that the good ministers of the Conference did not lose the day but found in the meeting much food for thought and much meaning in the measures that were discussed and pursued by the women.

Dr. I. W. Johnson and his good people of Berea, (Nansemond) Church are rejoicing in the building of seven Sunday school rooms, a much needed addition to this beautiful church. When these rooms are completed, as they are soon to be, it will mean a very adequate church plant both for preaching and for various church and auxiliary activities. Our congratulations to the worthy pastor and his good people for this timely activity and achievement.

The State Conference of the North Carolina women meets in annual session First Church, Greensboro, Wednesday, October 18th. This includes the women's work in the North Carolina and Virginia, the Western North Carolina, and the Eastern North Carolina Conferences. A full day and a large gathering is anticipated. Mrs. C. H. Rowland of Greensboro, N. C., is president. One of the outstanding features of the day is to be an address by Rev. J. J. Banninga, D. D., missionary on furlough from India.

The Missionary Herald at Home and Abroad issued 50,000 additional copies of the October Number. Our Southern Conventions missionary groups and churches were allowed 950 copies of the additional issue, and the Mission Secretary is seeking to distribute these mostly through the Women's Missionary Societies so that all who care may get acquainted with this vital and essential publication for our church life and activity. We advise every reader of THE SUN to subscribe to the Missionary Herald, the price for individual subscription being $1.25 the year; in clubs of five, $1.00 the year. The address is Harvey L. Meekin, Agent, 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.

Our Dover, Delaware, People's Church celebrated, through a series of services Friday of last week, the 25th anniversary of the founding of that church. The Delmarva Star of Wilmington, Del., gives the interesting items of the program, from which we take the following facts worthy of permanent record in our columns: "People's Church was organized in 1908 as an Independent Church, Dr. A. W. Lightbourne being the founder and first pastor. For several months the congregation held services in the local theatre. Shortly after the organization, the congregation, learning of the Christian Denomination of the United States and Canada, voted unanimously to join the Christian Denomination, becoming identified with the Eastern Virginia Conference twenty-five years ago this month. Within the first year, ground was secured on Bradford Street, between Reed and Division Streets, and a church building was erected. From the founding of the church, the membership has included some of the most outstanding Christian leaders and substantial citizens of the community. Under the leadership of the founder, Dr. A. W. Lightbourne, who was a man of unusual scholarship and pulpit ability, the church grew rapidly and rendered a most worthy service to the community. In the fall of 1920, the present pastor, Dr. Roy C. Helfenstein, was called to the pastorate, he then being pastor of the First Christian Church of Urbana, Ill. . . . During the present pastorate the annual budget has been more than trebled. A beautiful new church and community building was erected and dedicated in 1924 causing the valuation of the church building, grounds and equipment to be increased from a valuation of $20,000.00 to a valuation of $260,000. In 1925 the old parsonage was sold and a new beautiful eleven-room parsonage was erected on a large lot in Highland Park at a cost of over twenty thousand dollars. The church now has one of the most modern church plants in the entire country.

REMITTANCES ON SUN SUBSCRIPTIONS.

We list below those who have made remittances on their subscriptions to THE CHRISTIAN SUN since our report in September. This list includes mail received up to Tuesday, October 9th. Those received after that date will be listed next month, at which time the label on their paper will also be changed.

We thank each and every one who has remitted the past month and hope that with improving conditions many others will remit.

Sincerely,

JOHN T. KERNODLE,
Managing Editor.

B. F. Ayseue, R. 6, Henderson, N. C.
R. H. Ayseue, R. 6, Henderson, N. C.
T. H. Crocker, 836 W. Market St., Greensboro, N. C.
A. I. Curling, 2521 Harrell Ave., Norfolk, Va.
Mrs. Geo. D. Estes, 921 Washington St., Portsmouth, Va.
C. O. Eaves, R. 6, Henderson, N. C.
Hermon Eldredge, 519 C. P. A. Bldg., Dayton, Ohio.
J. C. Ellis, R. 1, Box 248, Portsmouth, Va.
J. R. Foster, Burlington, N. C.
Mrs. W. T. Foushee, Liberty, N. C.
Rev. R. T. Grison, 905 6th St., Durham, N. C.
Dr. M. W. Hook, Elon College, N. C.
W. H. Hudson, Youngsville, N. C.
J. R. Lassiter, R. 1, Henderson, N. C.
Dr. J. H. Lightbourne, 401 Church St., Burlington, N. C.
A. H. Liskey, Bridgewater, Va.
H. M. Loy, Jacksonville, N. C.
Mrs. J. D. Luke, 347 N. Main St., Suffolk, Va.
Mrs. Geo. W. Macon, R. 1, Henderson, N. C.
R. W. Morton, 205 Ruffin St., Burlington, N. C.
H. B. Newman, R. 1, Henderson, N. C.
J. H. Newman, 4423 Outslaw Ave., Richmond, Va.
Mrs. R. E. Parker, R. 1, Box 212, Suffolk, Va.
Mrs. Dora C. Pierce, 2230 Park Ave., Richmond, Va.
Mrs. H. E. Seymour, 1024 Seaboard Ave., So. Norfolk, Va.
Miss N. Alberta Smith, Protestant Hospital, Norfolk, Va.
J. F. Stainbaek, R. 6, Henderson, N. C.
L. L. Stainbaek, R. 6, Henderson, N. C.
Mrs. W. H. Trollinger, Burlington, N. C.
L. F. Troxler, Altamahaw, N. C.
Egbert Truitt, Glen Raven, N. C.
J. J. Williams, R. 1, Elon College, N. C.
R. G. Wyuu, R. 1, Henderson, N. C.

MONTICELLO CHURCH.

Through the years Monticello Church has sought to point the community toward God and to teach Christian principles. Time has passed quickly and today we celebrate our twenty-fifth birthday as a church. In order that our memories might be refreshed and others may learn something of the past history of our church, we give a few items concerning its development. This is not a history but a few memoirs of the church through the twenty-five years as we recall them.

Monticello Church is located in the North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference about twelve miles northeast of Greensboro on Highway No. 170.

It was organized by Rev. L. I. Cox, now deceased, on Sept. 30, 1909. At the time of organization there were 21 charter members. Their names are as follows: J. R. T. Caffey, Mrs. Mary Anne Caffey, R. F. Gordon, Mrs. R. F. Gordon, W. R. McKinney, Mrs. Tora Rudd McKinney, Misses Maude and Russell McKinney, J. H. Rudd, Mrs. Alice Jordan Rudd, Mrs. Lelia Rudd, Miss Myrtle Rudd, Clyde Rudd, W. G. Rudd, Mrs. Lelia McKinney Rudd, H. E. Rudd, A. O. Rudd, Mrs. Mary Sue Caffey Rudd, Edd E. Speegle, Mrs. Fannie Rudd Ware, and Mrs. Clara Rudd Vanhook. Of this number nine have already passed away. They are Mr. and Mrs. J. R. T. Caffey, Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Gordon, W. R. McKinney, Mrs. Alice Rudd, Mrs. Lelia Rudd, Clyde Rudd, and Edd E. Speegle. Each of these remained with the church until the time of his death, and of the remaining twelve only one has been transferred elsewhere.

The first services in the community prior to the organization of the church were held by Rev. C. C. Peele of Elon College. These services were held in what was then a one room school building, but is now the Primitive Baptist Church.

A Sunday school was organized about the same time under the superintendency of J. R. T. Caffey, who did much to arouse the interest and enthusiasm of the community in the work. Sunday school was held regularly each Sunday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock. Some of the teachers of this early school were Mrs. Lillie Gordon, Mrs. D. E. Michael, Mrs. Tora McKinney, J. R. T. Caffey and D. E. Michael.

The plot of ground on which the church is located was a gift to the church by Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Rudd.

The first church building was the result of a few of the charter members desiring a permanent place to worship. The lumber for this building, most of which was used in the rough, was given by Mr. Edd W. Walker, who was then operating a saw mill in the community. Revs. C. C. Peele and J. W. Holt appeared on the floor of Conference and made a plea for help which resulted in the appropriation of $50.00 from that body.

The first building consisted of only one room which has since been made into five Sunday school rooms. Rough slabs placed on wooden blocks were first used as seats. These were soon replaced, however, by those now being used. These were given by members and outsiders donating one or more.

At first the walls were only the rough inner side of the weather-boarding, but after a year or so these were plastered, which added much to the appearance and comfort of the interior.

During the second pastorate of Rev. L. I. Cox an addition was made. A building committee composed of W. R. McKinney, A. D. Gerringer, and J. H. Rudd, was appointed. The cost of this addition was between $1,500 and $2,000. Of this amount A. D. Gerringer gave $500 in cash and the granite columns for the porch, J. H. Rudd gave $200 and the rough lumber was given by W. R. McKinney.

Prior to the dedication of the church the old part of the building was converted into Sunday school rooms and the main auditorium was painted.

Some outstanding events of the church are the laying of the cornerstone by Rev. L. I. Cox in the fall of 1909. A few years later the church entertained the North Carolina and Virginia S. S. Convention. Dr. J. O. Atkinson dedicated the church during the summer of 1929. In October of 1932 the N. C. and Va. Ladies' Missionary Conference was held.

Rev. L. I. Cox was pastor from Sept., 1909 until November, 1912. He later served the church for two years, beginning in the Fall of 1917. His first pastorate was followed by Rev. J. V. Knight, who came to the church in 1912 for three years.

After Mr. Knight, Rev. R. F. Brown was pastor for one year. Mr. Brown is now pastor of the Christian Church of Sanford. Rev. P. V. Harris followed R. F. Brown, but his pastorate lasted only a few months as he was called home by the death of his father, and succeeded his father as pastor of the church at Marion, Indiana. He is now pastor of the Congregational church at Holding, Mass.

Rev. W. C. Hook, who is now pastor of Ingram Memorial Congregational Church, Washington, D. C., came next for the greater part of the year, beginning in the Fall of 1916.

In the Fall of 1919, Mr. R. O. Smith of High Point, was called to become pastor, and he served for two years. He resigned to further his studies at Chapel Hill.

Rev. C. E. Gerringer of Wakefield, Va., came to the church in November of 1921 and remained for three years. It was during his ministry that a very active Christian Endeavor was organized.

In 1924 Rev. Jerry McCauley, who is now pastor of the Richmond Christian church, became pastor for one year. When Mr. McCauley resigned, Rev. R. A. Whitten, who is now serving the Portsmouth church, came for three years.

In 1928, Rev. M. T. Sorrell of Danville, Va., was pastor. Rev. J. L. Neese, who is now serving a group of churches near Greensboro was the next pastor. He served the church from the Fall of 1929 to 1932.

The present pastor, Rev. F. Erwin Hyde, came to the church from Toronto, Canada, in the Fall of 1932, and soon will have completed his second year.

At the present time the enrollment has reached 85. The total enrollment during the past 25 years has been 123.

For a quarter of a century this church has served the community faithfully. In the coming years may she continue to serve in an acceptable way. May she stand for love, service and sacrifice.

HISTORIAN.

AN HISTORICAL EVENT.

Home-Coming Day at Barretts Church, Southampton County, Virginia, on September 30, was an event of unusual significance. The following from our historian, Mr. W. E. MacClenny, Suffolk, Va., is amazingly interesting:

"On September 30, 1934, the people of Old Barretts Church in Southampton County, Va., held a home coming day, when the enclosed program was carried out. Just before the service was over the pastor, Rev. C. E. Gerringer, asked all of the descendants of Rev. Burwell Barrett, the founder of the church, to stand up, and a good part of the congregation was found standing. There were in the audience three descendants of Rev. James O'Kelly, the organizer of the denomination.

"It was there decided to erect a memorial on the church lot which was given by Rev. Burwell Barrett to the memory of the founder and the great leaders that have come from that old church. Revs. Burwell Barrett, his son Mills Barrett, his grandson Rev. Mills B. Barrett and William B. Wellons, James W. Wellons, Robert E. Barrett and William J. Laine. A subscription was taken and a good sum was subscribed for the purpose and some of it was paid in cash. W. E. MacClenny was asked to act as treasurer, and should any one who was not there wish to make a donation the same can be sent to him at Suffolk, who will receipt for same.

"It is supposed that Rev. C. E. Gerringer will give a full report of the eventful day."

SPECIAL NOTICE.

We have received several requests for an extension of the Special Offer mailed to delinquent subscribers during August and expiring September 10th. It has been decided to extend this offer to October 31st, giving those who still wish to take advantage of it the opportunity to do so.

WHY WE MISSED.

For the first time in several years there was no representative from the First Christian Church, Richmond, Va., at the annual women's missionary conference of Eastern Va., which was held at Liberty Springs on October 5th. Plans were made for at least one car full. But on Wednesday, sickness developed in the home of the Vice-President of the society. On Thursday, the president of the local society had to go to bed with a severe cold. The secretary and treasurer has been incapacitated for several weeks. On Friday morning the pastor of the church who was to have been the chauffeur for these ladies woke up with a case of the grippe, at least it made him ache and feverish, so he could not get far from the bed.

We dreaded to miss because there is usually so many old friends to see, so much inspiration to receive and so much information concerning the work of missions in general. Then it is always a real treat to be at Liberty Spring church. The good people of that church know just how to make everyone feel happy and welcome.

We realize that we were the losers by not being able to be there but when nature speaks we have to obey.

JOSEPH E. McCAULEY.

CONFERENCES MEET.

The Eastern Virginia Conference meets with Bethlehem Christian Church, Nansemond County, Va., Wednesday, October 31, 1934. Dr. N. G. Newman, Holland, Va., president; Dr. I. W. Johnson, Suffolk, Va., secretary.

The Western North Carolina Conference meets at Union Grove Christian Church, near Asheboro, N. C., on Wednesday, November 7, 1934. Rev. T. E. White, Elon College, N. C., is president; Mr. Gea. T. Gunter, Asheboro, N. C., secretary.

The North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference meets at Berea Christian Church, Alamance County, N. C., Tuesday, November 13, 1934. Dr. C. H. Rowland, Greensboro, N. C., is president; Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, Durham, N. C., secretary.

The Eastern North Carolina Conference meets with the church at Piney Plain, Tuesday, November 20, 1934, at 10:00 A. M. Dr. W. C. Wicker, Elon College, is president; Rev. E. M. Carter, Youngsville, N. C., secretary.

FIFTH SUNDAY OFFERINGS.

The Sunday schools of the Convention are responding nicely to the needs of the college in their Fifth Sunday Offerings. A good number have already sent in their offerings. There are many more yet to come. We are happy to add a number of schools to our contributing list this time. The following Sunday schools have responded that did not make contributions last fifth Sunday:

N. C. and Va. Conference:
New Lebanon .....	$ 5.00
W. N. C. Conference:
Liberty .....	2.00
E. Va. Conference:
Dendron .....	3.50
Union (Franklin) .....	1.40
Va. Valley Conference:
Mt. Olivet (R) .....	.95
Whistlers Chapel .....	2.50
Newport .....	1.36
E. N. C. Conference:
Moore Union .....	2.00
Total .....
	$18.71

The following have sent in contributions this time that responded last fifth Sunday:

N. C. and Va. Conference:
Lebanon .....	$ .66
Durham .....	11.96
Hines Chapel .....	2.69
Happy Home .....	3.63
Union Ridge .....	2.00
Total .....
	$20.94
W. N. C. Conference:
Pleasant Hill .....	2.54
Burlington .....	10.99
Total .....
	13.53
E. Va. Conference:
Holy Neck .....	5.57
Rosemont .....	12.72
Wakefield .....	1.38
Total .....
	19.67
Va. Valley Conference:
Winchester .....	1.35
Mayland .....	2.00
Timber Ridge .....	1.82
Total .....
	5.17
E. N. C. Conference:
Sanford .....	1.00
Liberty-Vance .....	5.00
Total .....
	6.00
Grand Total .....
	$65.31

Brother Pastor and Mr. Superintendent, will you please look over the above list? If your Sunday school does not appear, will you see that your offering is sent in as early as possible? If every Sunday school would join in this offering it would mean so much to the college and to the school as well.

A complete list will be published in next week's SUN. On behalf of the college, I wish to thank all who have contributed.

L. E. SMITH.

"If the tithing process were in operation it would give the churches of this country an income amounting to about $4,000,000,000 a year. The facts are that the church people of the country are giving less than one per cent of their income to the church and missionary work."—Roger Babson.

E-D-I-T-O-R-I-A-L

EDITOR

J. O. ATKINSON, ELON COLLEGE, N. C.

ASSOCIATE EDITOR

E. C. GILLETTE

117 W. Forsyth Street, Jacksonville, Fla.

CONTRIBUTING EDITORS

I. W. JOHNSON      ELISHA A. KING

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE EASTERN VIRGINIA WOMAN'S CONFERENCE.

It is always a joy, as well as an inspiration, to attend the Woman's Missionary Conference of Eastern Virginia. They have their program so well planned, their business so well in hand, their sessions so well ordered and directed. The 22nd annual session, Friday, October 5th, at Liberty Spring, Nansemond County, Virginia, was no exception. "Going Forward in a Time Like This" was the theme of the day, for the minds of the three hundred and fifty women who gathered to take counsel together, and to get new strength for the new day. The women of the Societies, composing the Conference, had wrought faithfully through the year, and they were together in a love-feast to tell of the pursuits of the past year, but were more emphatically to pledge one another that they were ready to do more under God's help, to go forward in a time like this. The worship services were wholesome and refreshing, the songs appropriate and inspiring. The reports of district superintendents and of the departments were reassuring and full of hope and the spirit of optimism. That Conference is a wheel that rolls onward, gathering volume and momentum year by year, and it cannot be stopped. May it never be stopped while the years come and go. From a small beginning of a few delegates and a very few hundred dollars collected to report to their first annual session twenty-one years ago, they reached a delegation of more than three hundred with nearly $5,000.00 collected as they came to their 22nd annual session. Mrs. J. E. Cartwright, Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., who presided over the meeting and illustrated her moving address, "Missionary Wheels of Progress" with a large wheel turning by virtue of the revolving power of the small or individual wheel. If an organization is to move in great volume and vigor, it will do so by the power of the smaller wheel representing the individual, and for each cog of the wheel there is a virtue that must be maintained and made secure in order to keep the whole steadfast—the virtue of self-denial, of enthusiasm, of loyalty, of prayer. It was a very telling and timely address and one that will not be forgotten. One of the great events of the day was an address, "Believing in Missions in a Time Like This," by Dr. Hugh Bradley, a native of China. Dr. Bradley was born in the home of a medical missionary to China, and for years, before coming to America to be educated and to live, he lived in the home of his father, a missionary, and he knows whereof he speaks and gives first-hand information in talking about Missions. He made his audience realize that the greatest, the supreme task of the church, that for which the church itself was planted, is that of giving the whole gospel to the whole world. He quoted an authority, not a missionary but a business commission, in saying, "The best managed business organization on earth and the best directed, was that of the Foreign Mission Boards, doing a bigger business on less capital than any other organization known to mankind." Dr. Bradley gave incidents from individual observation and experience, which made his audience realize that Jesus Christ can save sinners, even though those sinners be worshippers of false gods and devotees at the shrine of pagan deities. He told them of an incident in which medical science did its best to cure a Chinaman of the opium habit, and when medical science failed the missionary directed the addict to the saving power of Jesus, and the man was saved and is now one of the most outstanding men of influence in business, and of Christian activity in all his town and community. There is power in the Blood of the Lamb to reach and redeem to the uttermost depths of human sin and degradation.

Mrs. D. E. Brown, of the Home Board of New York, was present and emphasized the need of literature in our Societies, especially calling attention to the Missionary Herald and the necessity of subscribing to the Herald that we may have intelligent information about our missionary work and workers.

The day closed with a fitting service of "Memoirs," ten members of various Societies of the Conference having passed into the land of light and love and life the past year. These ten lives were symbolized by ten lighted candles, and the speaker, Mrs. R. T. Bradford, conducting the service, declared that these lights had not gone out, but in sweet and sacred memory they were still lighting up our pathway, and as these, who have gone before, obtained a good report through faith, so we who are left, by obtaining a good report through faith, may help to keep burning, even with more vigor and brilliance, these lights, God having provided this good thing for us that we, following the true light, may make these lights even more brilliant through the years.

Two of the very regrettable features of the day were that Mrs. W. L. Stagg, who has made such an efficient secretary through the years, felt that the time had come when she should not fill that position longer and that another should now take the pen, write the records and help to do the planning and the thinking for the Conference. The other was that Mrs. W. V. Leathers, who has acted with such painstaking accuracy and efficiency in keeping the accounts and passing on the funds as Treasurer, felt that these years had brought so much joy to her own heart and life that she should share that joy with others and thus lay down the work as treasurer for another to take up. Mrs. J. E. Cartwright, Norfolk, Va., was re-elected president; Mrs. Herbert Harrell, Driver, Va., was elected secretary; Mrs. J. M. Raby, Windsor, Va., treasurer.

The day was, indeed, a happy one, full of incidents which this paper cannot recount, but big with means and measures for the coming year in the missionary activity of the women of the Conference. Liberty Spring, of course, did the work of entertaining for the day in a most hospitable manner, though under the disadvantages of a very rainy day. J. O. A.

TITHING FOR A TIME.

If one is unwilling to tithe continuously or incessantly, why not try it for a time? No principle, or practice taught in the Bible as persistently as the tithe, can hurt anyone, since the teachings of the Bible never hurt but always help. As it may seem for a long time to sign or agree to tithe the year round we suggest that pastors present to their congregations a plea for tithers, say for thirteen weeks—one-fourth of a year. This would give the system a test, and put the principle to practice. We note that quite a few pastors are putting on such a campaign. It is worthy of emulation by all pastors. The results in some of the churches, trying the three months' tithing program, have been and are quite marvelous and exceedingly stimulating. Among many others, there are three good reasons and unanswerable arguments for tithing:

First. It was a practice pursued, and a principle taught, by many inspired writers of the Old and New Testaments. From Abraham, who paid tithes, to the Prophet Malachi, who plead with all Israel to tithe, the law is stated over and over again. In the New Testament Jesus Himself emphasizes tithing and carries the thought to fulfillment; and the writer of the Hebrews reiterates and thus gives new emphasis to the history and law of the tithe as laid down in the Old Testament.

Second. It works. Those who practice tithing believe in it and enjoy it. They see and feel its effects and its rewards. They realize the value and the merit of it as a working principle of life, for among other things it helps one as nothing else can help one, to be a cheerful giver.

Third. It brings one into closer fellowship with God. When one fully realizes that one-tenth of his income is to go to the church, and through the church, to the cause of God's Kingdom one is grateful for the privilege of earning and for the joy of dividing, for there is a realization that one is in partnership with God. It thus brings home the sense of stewardship in a most practical and powerful way and makes one realize that he is in co-partnership with God in building the kingdom of heaven on earth.

Try tithing for a time and measure the results.

J. O. A.

EXTERIOR PATRIOTISM.

W. T. Bost, newspaper correspondent, Raleigh, N. C., who writes the Sunday sermons for the editorial page of the Greensboro Daily News, spoke a mouthful, or wrote a penful, to his October 7th congregation. This preacher, of the newspaper audiences, declares that much of our patriotism is mis-directed and is entirely too spectacular, and does too much fighting and too little figuring. A country's bitterest foes, and the ones most to be dreaded, are not from abroad but at home; not from without but within. He is preaching the gospel truths when he asserts that:

"Our patriotism is entirely too exterior. The flag flies from the roof of every schoolhouse, and children taught to love their country and have a sort of superstitious passion for it. But that flag is taught to them as a symbol of something that may be attacked by enemies from abroad. As a matter of fact, the peril to this country from abroad is practically nothing; the only danger is from within, and that danger has its opportunity in the fact that so many Americans delegate their duties to other men. The ring, the boss, the lobbyist, the special interests, all have their origin in the failure of the great body of Americans to take an active interest in the political life of their country. We have at call any time a million, yes, ten million men, to defend their country from outside aggression. These yelling bullies who affect to see war against us on the other side do not seem to know that their country more needs a million men and women to devote themselves day and night to the purification of our local and national politics."

And so the deeper patriotism would stir in the mind and heart of our youth a passion for competency in public service, honest men in high places, capable officials in charge of social and public affairs. There are thousands who, according to the same writer, are teaching that democracy is an impossible dream, another word for extravagance, corruption, rings, machines, and inefficiency. If our Christian citizenship would prove that it is patriotic it would see to it that only men and women of honesty, virtue and integrity are entrusted with positions of power and prestige.

BEAUTIFUL BLUE MEDITERRANEAN.

I had read about the blue Mediterranean but felt a bit skeptical about it for travelers often tell you a lot of things you can hardly believe. I sailed the Mediterranean for nearly nine weeks and saw it with my own eyes. How can I ever describe it! At Gibraltar we anchored on the ocean side, but we could see glimpses of the inner sea even from there. It was not until our good ship sailed quietly along in the sea itself could we appreciate what blueness meant. Of course it is not so blue as the sea of Galilee, but it is wonderfully blue and during our entire cruise it was calm and smooth, just ripply. How many times it looked like glass, the only ruffling was the wake of the ship.

This sea has a charm quite indescribable. However, I must try to tell you what I saw and felt on the heights at Carthage. Carthage, you know, was once a rival to the city of Rome. It was once the seat of the North African Christian Church where Tertullian and Cyprian and Augustine held sway, a sway that influenced the whole of Christendom and still does. It is the city (or the site of the city) where the two lovely Christian women, Perpetua and Felicitas were martyred. The tourist sees the basilica of Cyprian on the shore of the sea and the amphitheatre where the Christians were executed on account of their faith during the persecutions. One sees the great cisterns built for the water supply of the ancient city. It is hard to believe that all of this unoccupied space was once covered by a great city, but it is true. It was here, in the midst of thoughts of ancient things that I really saw the mystic Mediterranean. We had our lunch in the Arab summer resort, Sidi Bou-Said, overlooking the sea. After lunch I stepped out upon a balcony and looked down upon a scene that I shall never forget. There before me was the shore all green with houses and gardens of flowers and stretching out into the great unknown was a blue expanse. The water was so clear that I could see swimmers' bodies beneath the surface, and little ships were sailing about. Off in the distance was our own great ship looking like a chip upon a painted ocean. But what engaged my soul was the mingling of the sky and the sea. One couldn't tell where the sky began so completely merged was the haze and the horizon and the bright warm sunshine poured down upon us flooding everything with a halo of light ineffable. I was lost to the world and all its material things. I floated, as it were, in spirit lifted above all earthly things into the very soul of the Infinite. I had read about being in tune with the Infinite and here it was, way down in Africa, in an Arab summer-house that I felt the mystic union with God.

But this is the kind of a spell the Mediterranean casts over a sensitive soul. I know of no more rewarding experience than a cruise of this ancient sea. We stopped at Algiers and Port Said and went down to Cairo where we saw the Pyramids and the Sphinx, but I don't mind saying that for me the Holy Land was the most interesting place of all. Palestine is full of history, romance and adventure. In addition to being the home of the Hebrews it is the land where Jesus lived, the land of the Christian religion. It is a land sacred to the three great world religions, Jewish, Mohammedan and Christian. It is really wonderful to walk on that earth, to see with your own eyes Bethlehem and Nazareth and Jerusalem. The two sights that thrilled me most, perhaps, was my first sight of the Sea of Galilee and the city of Jerusalem. I had read so much of the Galilean sea and heard it sung about so much as "Blue Galilee" that I wanted to look upon it. The tourist will have conflicting feelings all during his stay in Palestine for he has doubtless visualized how it ought to look. He has for so long thought of it in terms of religious poetry, of emotional description and idealism that he may be quite unprepared to see the barren hills, the rough country and the rocks and stones everywhere. For my own part, familiar as I have been with the literature of the country, I did not realize how hilly and barren the land itself is. In the Spring, I am told, it is more desirable, wild flowers bloom and there is grass, but I saw it in July. However, as we were driving along the roads in Galilee going up hill and down and in between I had a feeling of dread lest when I did behold the sea itself it would be drab and drear like the hills about me. But our car turned the eminence above Tiberius and I looked down! Behold! How wonderful and how beautiful it was. Oh, so blue. I have never seen such blue water. There was the beautiful Galilee where Jesus longed so much to be. Spread out before me a dream come true. And there was Tiberius with its white buildings just as it was in Jesus' day. And I ate a fish from that lake at lunch in the Tiberius hotel. Fishing boats were floating near the shore just as they did when Jesus and His disciples were there. The fishermen sang some of their songs and then they burst out in the song that I have just mentioned, viz: "Galilee, Blue Galilee." Every Christian, especially every young Christian should see this marvelous lake as I saw it and feel the thrill of it all. Two friends of mine who have been everywhere and have seen everything around the world many times saw it and burst into tears! What is it that stirs the emotions so? Well, perhaps it is this: you read about it in the New Testament, you sing about it in religious services, you study about it in connection with Jesus' life and you come to associate the sea with Jesus, and you cannot think of one without the other. Then, finally, you go to Palestine and look upon it as I did and find it there just where it ought to be and all at once in an overpowering fashion as it never has come to you before you are conscious that Jesus is real, a fact, a reality, One who actually lived there where you are. You are treading the same earth He walked on and the same sun shines on you that shone on Him and you become overpowered with the mystic influence of it all. Actually, you are moved as you never were moved before as if you were passing through a distinctive religious experience.

Now this is quite different in Jerusalem. There you will find an ancient city, to be sure, but Jerusalem has been destroyed and rebuilt so many times that what you see with your physical eyes is not ancient in the same way that the Sea of Galilee is ancient and real. When you visit Jerusalem it is not so much sight you need as insight. You see there what you take with you, that is, your background will make Jerusalem mean much or little. However, there is one place in that wonderful city that is absolutely genuine and sure. It is the dome of the rock. Mt. Moriah associated with Abraham and David and Solomon. It is the place where the sacred altar was set up, where Solomon's and Zerubbabel's and Herod's temples were built. Over it now is the Mosque of Omar, one of the most exquisitely beautiful buildings in the world.

But I saw Jerusalem from the Mount of Olives. This is what I longed to do. I wanted to see it as Jesus saw it the first time when He came up from Nazareth at the age of 12. We stepped from our automobile and looked over a wall and there was Jerusalem. Yes, it was there just where it ought to be! I suppose it looked much the same to Jesus only when He saw it Herod's temple was there all white with the golden tower of the holy of holies scintillating the sunshine with a distinctive brilliance. Today, in its place one sees the blue dome of Omar. I looked upon the ancient, sacred city. The Mt. of Olives is a little higher than Jerusalem, but the city of David is 2,500 feet above the Mediterranean sea level. From nearly every point in Palestine (except the mountains of course) one goes up to Jerusalem. The Psalms fit the picture exactly. The land and the book harmonize. Things are there where one has a right to expect them, only, of course, the Holy Land has suffered terribly from the devastations of war, and from neglect. Those familiar with Old Testament history realize how shamefully the trees have been treated, and modern conquerors have done as much to mutilate the landscape. England, with its mandate, has made good roads and planted trees and the Zionists are improving the land also. Some day it may again be a land flowing with milk and honey, but not now.

A visitor to the Holy Land should guard himself against too easy acceptance of what guides say about the "sacred places." Just remember the age of the city and its modern history and you will have no trouble. The greatest value of a visit to this wonderland to me is the fact that it is there, the things I have read about and thought about and dreamed of are not fanciful but real. My faith in the great varieties of the Bible is strengthened. Especially is this true of Jesus and what He did and what He said. During my tour of the sacred land I read anew the New Testament and I found it to be almost a new book. One may read commentaries and look at pictures, but there is nothing like physical eyesight to make the pages of the old book live and speak.

ELISHA A. KING.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference met with Liberty Spring Christian Church, Friday, October 5th. Mrs. John Cartwright presided. About four hundred delegates and visitors attended the session. Mrs. John G. Truitt conducted the worship service. Reports were made by the District Superintendents as follows: Norfolk, Mrs. H. S. Hardcastle; Nansemond, Gates, Isle of Wight and Southampton, Mrs. B. D. Jones; Waverly, Mrs. E. T. Atkinson. Departmental Reports were read as follows: Young People, Mrs. Garland Spratley; Cradle Roll, Mrs. F. M. Nelson; Life Memberships and Memorials, Mrs. H. P. Harrell; Convention Editor, Mrs. W. M. Jay; Spiritual Life, Mrs. O. M. Cokes; Literature, Mrs. W. M. Jay.

The President delivered a very timely address on: "Missionary Wheels of Progress." The Report of the treasurer was read by Mrs. W. V. Leathers, the retiring treasurer. This report showed that during the year the following amounts were raised: Women's Societies, $3,308.95; Young People's Societies, $1,071.07; Juniors, $452.17; Cradle Rolls, $84.79. Grand Total, including Special Offerings, $4,963.46.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Mrs. J. E. Cartwright, President; Mrs. Russell T. Bradford, 1st Vice-President; Mrs. J. G. Truitt, 2nd Vice-President; Mrs. H. P. Harrell, Secretary; Mrs. J. W. Raby, treasurer; Mrs. Garland Spratley, Superintendent of Young People; Mrs. F. M. Nelson, Superintendent of Cradle Roll; Mrs. O. M. Cokes, Superintendent of Spiritual Lift; Mrs. J. A. Williams, Superintendent of Life Memberships and Memorials; Mrs. W. M. Jay, Superintendent of Literature.

Dr. J. O. Atkinson delivered a forceful address on "What Price Progress." The speaker emphasized the thought that all progress is made at a great price. Progress in the commercial and industrial life of a nation is made at a price. The same idea prevails in the social, intellectual and spiritual realm. Spiritual progress always involves self-denial. "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself. . . ." The word sacrifice has no place in this phase of life. Self denial and sacrifice should not be confused in our thinking upon this subject.

Dr. Hugh Bradley, a former missionary of the Presbyterian Church in China, spoke on "Believing in Missions in a Time Like This." He said in part: "I believe in Foreign Missions because I was born in China. I believe in this work because the Bible teaches it; because there is a great need for this work in the whole world; because the church at home needs to do this work to save itself; because this work really produces results."

Mrs. D. E. Brown of New York City also gave a brief address on the general mission work of the women, and appealed to the women to re-study the purpose of the organization and seek to enlarge the field of work at home and abroad. The demands of this day are very great, the work is urgent and the fields are ripe for an abundant harvest.

The women of the Southern Convention organized their mission work twenty-two years ago. At the first the movement was confined to a small area. During this period more than $100,000.00 has been raised by the women for Home and Foreign Missions. In addition to the raising of this money, a new spiritual life has found its way into hundreds of lives. These annual missionary Conferences are largely attended, and the spirit of Jesus Christ is deeply manifested in the meetings.

At the close of the Conference, Mrs. Russell T. Bradford conducted a very impressive memorial service in honor of the ten women who have passed to their reward during the past year. Ten lighted candles on the altar represented the deceased members. The closing prayer was led by Dr. J. O. Atkinson. The next session of the Conference will be held in Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va.

I. W. JOHNSON.

THE BELMONT PLAN.

This is a new plan for the work of the church. I had not heard of it before this summer. In August, when I arrived at Massanetta Springs Bible Conference, people were talking about the Belmont Plan. On inquiry, I found that the reference was to Belmont Presbyterian Church in Roanoke, Virginia and the plan devised by its pastor to meet a crisis that had arisen in his church.

This particular congregation had previously erected a house of worship at the cost of $30,000. They were in debt $15,000. They found that they were not only unable to pay the debt to the satisfaction of the creditors but that they were unable to pay current expenses. The congregation became pessimistic and were ready to acknowledge defeat. The pastor, Rev. G. L. Whitely, was not ready yet to give up. He believed in his church and believed in their ability to meet the obligations that were theirs. He determined to ask them to turn to the scriptures for instruction and follow the teachings of the scriptures in the matter of giving.

The only plan offered by the scriptures was tithing. He was assured in his own mind and heart that, if his membership, though small and limited in resources, would tithe their actual income and give the tithe to the church, all bills could easily be met. They were behind $2,160 and were going behind financially at a rapid rate every week. His church had a total membership of 425. He figured that he had 352 active members. He investigated and found that, of this number, there were 137 who had definite incomes. The average weekly income of this number was $18.00. A further study showed that perhaps he could only depend upon 120 of the membership to join in the plan. He put the proposition up to the officers of the church that, if they would tithe their incomes for fifteen weeks and give the tithe to the church, he would, personally, interview the rest of the membership in an effort to secure their acquiescence and participation in the plan. 25 of the 27 officers of his church accepted his challenge. One of the remaining two was away from the city and the other was out of work. The plan was then taken to the congregation. 118 of the 120 wage earners of his church took the obligation. The church began to give on a Biblical basis. Previous to this undertaking, the average weekly offering was $50.00. The first Sunday that the tithe money came in the offering was $173.00. The next Sunday it jumped to $228.00. The largest offering during the fifteen weeks was $450.00. At the end of the fifteen weeks, the Belmont Church had paid its current bills and wiped out its deficit of $2,160.00.

For this congregation, God had fulfilled His promise that He would pour out a blessing such as there was not room enough to receive it. The pastor testifies that members of his church secured better jobs, some had wages increased, some who had no jobs found jobs, and that all received a great spiritual blessing. At a meeting of the congregation, opportunity was given for expressions on the part of those who had participated. It was a day of rejoicing and of great optimism. Following this experience, they made a canvass for the financial needs for the coming year. The entire budget of this small church was over-subscribed by $2,000.00.

I am writing about this rare and rich experience simply to remind ourselves that God still lives and that, if we, as His people, will give ourselves wholly and completely to Him and allow Him to direct our lives, there will be sufficient material resources to meet the financial demands of the church in all of its departments, and that there will come to those who participate rich spiritual blessings that cannot be valued in dollars and cents. If the churches of our Convention would adopt this or a similar plan, our financial needs for missions, ministerial relief, benevolences, education, and the local church would be met adequately and happily. The pastor of Belmont Church must have been guided by the Spirit. To tithe for the definite period and that not a long period is sufficient to convince the individual giver, himself, that the plan is scriptural, spiritual, safe and wise.

I wonder how many of our churches will be courageous enough to put this plan to a test from now until Christmas. Do you need money for your church? Do you need a spiritual awakening in your congregation? Call your officers together, and put this challenge before them: (1) To give one-tenth of their incomes to the local church for thirteen weeks, at the end of which time they may do as they like about following the plan further; (2) that the entire tithe is to be brought into the church for this period; (3) that the individual member, himself, will attend church, and, personally, present his offering; (4) that the current financial demands of the church will be met out of the total offering and the remainder will be pro-rated to denominational demands, or on local debts, as the financial committee may direct; (5) at the conclusion of the thirteen-week period, individuals will be given an opportunity to express themselves concerning the plan, and that within ten days the individual members will be given an opportunity to express themselves as to the continuance of the plan in the church.

Money is not the only thing that entrance into a church life means, but it is somewhat of an index to a man's faithfulness to his church and his relation to his God. It is impossible for a man who spends his money recklessly and squanders his income on the world to long remain a devout Christian. On the other hand, the individual who divides faithfully and conscientiously his living for the support of his church will be constantly growing in grace and increasing in the knowledge of the truth as it is in Christ Jesus.

"How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the Kingdom of Heaven? How hardly shall he who loves riches, though he be poor in this world's goods, enter into the Kingdom of Heaven? Thou shalt love the Lord, thy God, with all thy heart, with all thy soul, with all thy strength, and with all thy mind, and thy neighbor as thyself."

L. E. SMITH.

OUR PASTOR—AN APPRECIATION.

May I have this small space in THE SUN to say a few words about our beloved pastor, Rev. J. L. Neese, who is leaving us shortly to answer the call of another field?

Sometimes we wait too long to express our appreciation of those who have been a blessing to us. A few scattered flowers along life's highway lightens the load and makes the way seem brighter.

It was indeed a shock to Palm St. and Hines Chapel to learn of the contemplated departure of Brother Neese. They were looking forward to his being with them as their pastor for another year, but he felt that it was the Lord's will for him to answer the call to Reidsville. It is with sorrowful hearts that we give him up, but our loss is their gain.

The two churches have grown immensely under the leadership of Brother Neese. The membership of Palm Street has been more than doubled, and that of Hines Chapel vastly increased. There has been much improvement in the buildings; remodeling, adding Sunday school rooms, and painting; also the planting of shrubbery to beautify the grounds. The churches are stronger both materially and spiritually than they were at the coming of Brother Neese.

We are thankful that one day Jesus reached down, picked up Brother Neese and made a new man of him, and sent him our way. What he has been worth to our communities, churches, and individuals is not to be estimated in dollars and cents. He is no respecter of persons, but loved rich and poor alike. The burdens of his people were his burdens; he knows and loves every one of his flock. It is a blessing to be in his presence, not for any merit of his own, but because of the presence of the Holy Spirit in his heart and life.

Brother Neese always fed us on the bread of life,—he never preached anything but the plain gospel truths. We always looked forward to the preaching services with the expectation of being drawn a little closer to Jesus.

Brother Neese is only a man, but a man who is willing to sacrifice all for the service of the Master, willing to let God have the right of way in his life and willing to walk humbly in the footsteps of Jesus. Would to God we had more men of his type.

May God bless Brother Neese in his new field and prosper the work of his hands. Our prayer will follow him through the days to come.

A MEMBER.

BARRETT'S CHURCH HOME COMING.

The Home Coming at Barrett's Church, September 30th, was of the finest and most enjoyed programs that the church has presented during our ministry here.

From the Call to Worship by the Pastor at the eleven o'clock hour until the benediction was pronounced in the afternoon the program was of high spiritual order.

Probably the outstanding features of the day's program was the morning message by former Pastor, Rev. J. M. Roberts of Windsor, Va., on the subject of "Fruits of Salvation." I John 1:17. Special music by Dendron Female Quartette and Mrs. O. M. Cokes, Elberon, Va. The history of the church and address by Mr. W. E. MacClenny, Suffolk, and the starting of a fund for the erection of a marker to Rev. Burwell Marrett, who organized the church in 1803. A committee will continue to work on this.

Dinner was in abundance, fellowship great, crowd large and everyone seemed to enjoy being present for the day, and we were glad to have every one come.

C. E. GERRINGER.

PROGRAM.

NORTH CAROLINA WOMAN'S MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

— Twenty-Second Annual Session. —

First Christian Church, Greensboro, N. C. Thursday, October 18, 1934.

MRS. C. H. ROWLAND, President

MORNING SESSION—10 A. M.

Theme: "Growing Towards God."

Call to Order.

Roll Call of Districts:

- Halifax—Mrs. C. E. Newman.
- Guilford—Mrs. O. H. Paris.
- Alamance—Mrs. C. C. Fonville.
- Randolph—Mrs. Hugh R. York.
- Lee-Chatham—Mrs. R. L. Ross.
- Durham-Wake—Mrs. J. L. Harward.
- Vance-Warren—Miss Margaret Alston.

Morning Worship: "Gaining the Heights"

Mrs. C. M. Cannon.

Departmental Reports:

- Young People—Mrs. D. O. Sander.
- Cradle Roll—Miss Faye Mulholland.
- Spiritual Life—Mrs. W. H. Carroll.
- Literature—Mrs. W. T. Scott.
- Report of Treasurer—Mrs. W. R. Sellars.
- President's Message—"Steps to the Kingdom."
- Presentation of Visitors.
- Appointment of Committees.
- Message in Song.
- Offering.
- Address—Rev. J. J. Banninga, D. D., Missionary on furlough from Madura, India.
- Adjournment for lunch.

AFTERNOON SESSION—2 P. M.

- Call to Order.
- Song Service.
- Address—"The Needs of the Hour,"—Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Mis. Sec.
- Presentation of Study Books and Programs.
- Oriental in American Life—Mrs. L. E. Smith.
- Foreign Study Books—Miss Priscilla Chase.
- Reports of Committees.
- Miscellaneous Business.
- Adjournment.

OXFORD BIBLES for EVERY NEED

"The Oxford Bible is the Bible par excellence of the world"

THE HOME BIBLE

A Family Bible in Handy Size

An extra large type Oxford Text Bible, containing also, a family register and 12 beautifully colored maps. Size 9 x 5 1/2 inches.

Specimen of Type

16 The LORD is King for ever and ever: the heathen are perished out

Nos. 01600 Superior Cloth, round corners and red edges $2.75

01605 French Morocco, limp, round corners, red under gold edges, head-band, book-mark $4.75

The JUNIOR'S Bible

Self-Pronouncing

With 4,000 Questions and Answers, carefully selected "Aids to Bible Study," 16 beautifully colored and 15 black full-page illustrations, 6 colored maps and a presentation page. Children may readily pronounce correctly difficult Scripture names, as this Bible is self-pronouncing. Size 7 x 4 3/8 x 1 1/4 inches.

Specimen of Type
2 Take the sum of all the of the children of Is'ra-el, years old and upward, thro

No. 1815 French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges, headbands and book-mark. Make some child happy with one of these fine $2.95 Bibles

Child's ILLUSTRATED Bible

The beautifully colored illustrations in this new Bible are a delight to the children. It has clear, readable type and yet it measures only 5 1/2 x 3 3/4 inches.

Specimen of Type

2 My soul length, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the LORD: my heart and my flesh crieth out for thee living God. 10 Mercy and truth gathered; righteousness kissed each other. 11 Truth shall spring

No. 02112. French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, gold edges $2.50

Pocket REFERENCE Bible

Has over 50,000 center column references. Measures only 6 3/4 x 4 3/8 inches. (A splendid gift for a young lady.)

Specimen of Type
9 Behold, O God our shield, and look upon the face of thine anointed, and 10 For a day in thy courts is better

No. 07523x French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges $3.25

Concordance Edition

Type and size as No. 07523x, but with a Concordance, subject index and dictionary of Scripture names. An excellent edition for students and Christian workers No. 03272x $5.00

OUR LEADER

Oxford Concordance Bible Self-Pronouncing

This beautiful Oxford India paper edition is indeed the ideal Bible for the student, preacher and evangelist. Each proper name and difficult word is divided into syllables and accented, and though printed with large clear type, the volume measures only 8 1/2 x 5 1/2 x 1 15/16 inches.

Specimen of Type

8 9 'Jē-hōl'-ā-chin was 4 years old when he began t

No. 03671x. Fine Grain Morocco leather, overlapping cover, leather lined to edge, silk round corners, red unedges, silk

hear

A UNIQUE GIFT BIBLE

With Basket Weave Binding

The Antique brown calf leather binding has a basket-weave grain, and button clasp. Has overlapping cover, art silk lined, with red under gold edges. With references. Printed on Oxford India paper. Type as Pocket Reference Bible. $5.50

As No. 03255x, with concordance. No. 03276x $6.50

Oxford TEACH.

Have over 50,000 center column, 300 double-column pages of up-to-date helps, conveniently arranged in alphabetical order. Also 32 full-page illustrations, and an indexed atlas of the Bible with 15 beautifully colored maps of Bible lands.

Easy-to-Read-Edition

Size 7 1/4 x 5 x 1 3/8 inches

Specimen of Type

14 Like sheep they are laid in grave; death shall feed on th

Nos. 04453. French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, round corners and red under gold edges. A durable and hand-some Bible $4.35

Oxford India Paper Edition

Only one inch thick.

0773x. French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges, headbands and book-mark. A beautiful gift edition $7.00

RED LETTER Edition

Same size and type as style No. 04453, with same references and helps, but with all the words of Jesus Christ printed in red. White paper cover. No. 05453. French Morocco leather, overlapping cover, round corners, red under gold edges $5.00

The Oxford imprint in a Bible guarantees satisfaction

MISSIONS

 REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary

DR. E. STANLEY JONES SENDS A MESSAGE.

One can but be amazed at the fresh, forceful, fruitful messages that come rolling like successive waves of the sea from the mind and heart of E. Stanley Jones. He is constantly talking and writing from the pulpit or the platform and thru the press, but he never seems to utter a superfluous word, write a fruitless line or give a meaningless message. This week, October 10th-14th, the Methodists of our country are holding a sesqui-centennial celebration in Baltimore, and, out of the heart of India, Dr. Jones sends, by way of the New York Christian Advocate, this message for the Baltimore celebration:

"As I stood in the pulpit of Wesley in the City Road Chapel in London, there came home to me the fact of the two contributions which the Wesleyan Movement gave to the world. One was the fact of Wesley's heart being 'strangely warmed' in the meeting house. The whole movement was founded upon a fact of inner experience of God which transformed and lighted up the whole of life. From that moment all else was secondary to one central thing—a radiant experience of God.

We must continue this line of the succession of the burning heart. The chief business of the Christian Church is to produce the strange moral and spiritual miracle of conversion. When it has lost its power to do this, it has lost its right to live. If God has raised us up for anything, it is for the perpetuating of this miracle. Methodists of America, look to your marching orders, your commission from God—it includes this central fact. Confused and paralyzed men need this today as never before.

The second great contribution of Wesley was his saying: 'The world is my parish.' There was to be no territorial or racial limitation to his redemption movement.

These two things stand together. One is the experience and the other is the expression. The experience goes to the depths of the individual's need and extends to the need of the earth's last man. Cool either one, and you kill both.

We, your spiritual children across the seas, from many races and from many classes, ask you to hold to Wesley's vision and to re-affirm that the world is still your parish. But let me ask you to put within that word 'world' a deeper content—the world of economic relationships and the world of race and international relationships must be our parish. We must conquer it all for Christ.

If this Sesqui-Centennial means the rekindling of the human heart and the re-direction to its world task, then it will not be a celebration—but a revival."

Sitaphur, India.

IN FOREIGN MISSIONS.

The writer of this letter, a woman missionary in China of the second generation, expresses herself so frankly yet so sanely on conditions both here and there that her comments are passed on to others:

"I am just returning to China from a furlough during which I have had some slight contacts with the home churches. I stayed long enough to hear some of the discussions that have been raised concerning missions as a result of the publication of the Laymen's Report, and to feel a real sympathy for those who have been distressed over the many failures of foreign missions. I have felt my inadequacy day by day. I have felt that the missionaries as a group are inadequate to the work; that our Chinese co-workers are mediocre; that the Chinese Church is too slow in undertaking self-support, too lukewarm to be capable of effective witnessing.

"When I think in large numbers and in general terms I often wonder whether or not our methods are all wrong, and shouldn't be scrapped. But when I turn to my daily task, the many needs, the true loyal friends, the things the Lord has done for us in the days gone by, the countless victories won, the fight that is yet to be won, I feel that it has been of the Lord, and that we have done not what we would like to see done, but what we could do with our own limitations and the materials we had to build with.

"I have been associated in the organization of a women's Bible school and have felt many fears as to the wisdom of carrying on with the failing finances from America and the great financial needs of the students who apply to us. It is not a school which shows up well on the statistics, but we are committed to the cause of preparing women to take their places as Christians in the Church and the home, of teaching them a way of life, of building real Christian character, and I feel we must go on at all costs. During my absence the Chinese teachers have gone through a real period of testing. At a cost to themselves they have taken responsibility, carried on the work, and sacrificed a great deal so that the school might go on. . .

"I feel sure that if you knew how hard it has been for many of the students to come—the persecutions they have suffered at home, the problems of their future when they break with heathendom and take a stand for Christ—you would want the work carried on. Will you pray for us? The problems are too great for us to solve, but we can go ahead day by day, and trust to our Master to lead us in the right way and establish the work of our hands."—Presbyterian Banner.

MISSIONARY OFFERINGS.

WEEK ENDING OCTOBER 6, 1934.

Sunday Schools.

Previously acknowledged since September 1, 1934 .....	$ 249.71
Pleasant Hill, Liberty, N. C. ....	1.70
First Christian, Greensboro, N. C. ....	12.11
Class No. 7, Shallow Ford, Elon College, N. C. ....	1.45
Liberty, N. C. ....	1.00
Damascus, Corapeake, N. C. ....	1.40
Antioch, Harrisonburg, Va. ....	8.75
Lanett S. S. Class, Lanett, Ala. ....	1.00
Sanford, N. C. ....	1.00
Flint Hill, Star, N. C. ....	.22
Bethlehem, Suffolk, Va. ....	3.81
Elk Spur, Fancy Gap, Va. ....	2.50
Rocky Ford, Fancy Gap, Va. ....	1.05
Bertie Johnson S. S. Class, Liberty Spring, Suffolk, Va. ....	3.00
Timber Ridge, High View, W. Va. ....	2.03
Wakefield, Va. ....	2.48
Dendron, Va. ....	5.30
Ramseur, N. C. ....	3.70
Damascus, Chapel Hill, N. C. ....	1.00
Spring Hill, Waverly, Va. ....	.98
Fuller's Chapel, Henderson, N. C. ....	3.87
Fuller's Chapel, Henderson, N. C. ....	3.60
Total .....	311.66

Individuals and Churches.

Previously acknowledged since September 1, 1934 .....	50.27
Liberty (Vance), Henderson, N. C. ....	3.50
Mrs. R. W. Isley, McLeansville, N. C. ....	3.00
Total .....	56.77

Specials.

Previously acknowledged since September 1, 1934 .....	49.78
Pleasant Hill C. E. Society, Liberty, N. C. ....	.75
Franklinton, N. C. ....	26.00
Total .....	76.53

Coin Card Offering.

Previously acknowledged since September 1, 1934 .....	8.00
Liberty (Vance) S. S. Classes, Henderson, N. C. ....	2.00
Fullers Chapel S. S., Henderson, N. C. ....	3.10
Total .....	13.10

Summary.

Previously acknowledged since September 1, 1934 .....	357.76
Total offerings, week ending Oct. 6, 1934..	100.30
Total to date .....	$ 458.06

J. O. ATKINSON, Sec'y.

A BRIDGE BUILDER.

By MISS D. P. CUSHING, News Editor.

"Sometimes those of us who are in educational work are tempted to feel that teaching is pretty much a matter of routine, of drilling in tenses and number, in articles and punctuation, but when you can return after your summer vacation to nearly nine hundred smiling, active girls, you are thankful that you have been placed where you can help mold lives and can do your bit toward building the bridge of international understanding and friendship," says Miss Edith Curtis, teacher in Baika Jr. College, Osaka, Japan.

Helping build the bridge of international understanding and friendship is a particularly needy work in these days and through her duties as a teacher, Miss Curtis comes very close to the youth of Japan, which she states, has an awakening interest in social problems. There is a new attitude shown which a recent graduate of Baika Junior College expresses in the statement, "In the old days students would do what they were told without question, now when they are told to do something they ask why and if the teacher does not answer, they ask why again."

Coming from a family in which the missionary spirit has been strong for many generations, Miss Curtis, who was born in Alabama, is the daughter and granddaughter of missionaries. Her grandfather was a home missionary in Wisconsin and two uncles were missionaries among the negroes of the South. Three Curtises have been missionaries of the American Board in Japan and Mexico. Miss Curtis was taken to Japan when only a few months old, and lived in Sendai and Sapporo. She came home to America for her higher education, living in Oberlin, Ohio, while attending the high school and later the college. She also studied for one year each at the Oberlin Conservatory of Music and Lake Erie Conservatory.

In 1911 Miss Curtis went to Japan under the American Board to do evangelistic work in Niigata. For many years now she has been stationed in Osaka and has taught in the Baika Girls' School, which is a private Christian school with which the mission cooperates by giving the services of two teachers. She has extra curricula activities in Y. W. C. A., C. E. and Sunday School.

A Story for the Children

A BAG OF SALT.

Stanton was late getting home from school. There were so many interesting things to see that he forgot the days were getting shorter and he must hurry. There was the little flock of birds feeding in a sheltered spot where he had scattered grain on the way to school. There was the gray squirrel whose home he had been trying to discover for weeks. Only an hour ago he had found it in the old walnut tree.

Suddenly Stanton remembered that Sister Anne had promised to make coconut fudge after supper, and he started for the house on the run.

Anne met him at the kitchen door. "Did you

NEWS ITEMS OF SOCIETIES.

The Young People's Missionary Society of Cypress Chapel have ended a most successful year under the leadership of Mr. B. B. Franklin. Ten new members were enrolled during the year which shows a society of growth. They held regular meetings each month and gave two lawn parties. At the October meeting the new officers will be installed with appropriate exercises and the work for the new year will be planned. One of their plans is to divide the society into two groups in a special drive or contest for new members.

The Junior Missionary Society of the Bethlehem church has met all the requirements of the Conference this year. The year began with Mrs. R. E. Brittle as superintendent and under her leadership the society grew in numbers and interest. She loved the work but God in His infinite wisdom saw fit to call her home on July 10, and her husband, the Rev. R. E. Brittle took up the work where she left off and continued with them to the end of the year. The mission study book, "The African Bush" was studied and the increase in membership and gifts was made. This society is known as a very active and important factor in the church life of Bethlehem. They hold their meetings each second Sunday during the Sunday School hour.

The Junior Missionary Society at Liberty Springs has had a good year under the leadership of Mrs. J. L. Byrd, Superintendent.

They used the mission study book on Africa; held several socials which helped them to reach their apportionment and have had a gain in membership and gifts.

Their plans are already laid for bigger and better things next year. MRS. W. M. JAY.

MISSION BOOKS.

For our Women's Missionary Societies, Mrs. W. H. Carroll recommends the following book for the devotional study for this year: "The Ministering Master." This book presents studies in the Gospel of Mark. It was prepared by a Committee of three women. It may be purchased from the Committee on Woman's Work, Henry Grady Building, Atlanta, Georgia, for twenty-five cents.

It is very important that the devotional leader's book be chosen with much care as the devotional program is a very vital part of the missionary program of our societies. Mrs. Carroll is kind enough to give her time to the selection of a book and all of our ladies will do well to profit by her experience in Bible study in the selection of this wonderful little book.

JEWELL T. VANCLEAVE.

bring the salt, Stanton?" she asked. "We're going to have baked potatoes for supper, but there isn't any salt to eat on them."

Stanton hung his head. "Oh, I forgot to stop at the store," he faltered. "And mother said she'd need the salt early in the morning for her butter, too. I'm sorry. I'll run over to Jimmy's and borrow a bit."

"Not until after supper," answered Anne. "It's all ready, so we'll have to get along without the salt."

There was orange shortcake for supper, and Stanton liked orange shortcake, so he didn't hurry about leaving the table. When he did get up, he noticed that it would soon be dark. Hurrying into the pantry, he picked up the first bag he saw and five minutes later he was running across the back lawn.

The snow that had fallen early in the week had melted a little, then frozen, and Stanton's shoes made a loud, crunchy noise as he hurried down the lane, across the bridge over Mile Brook, then up the long hill to Jimmy's house.

Jimmy had a new puzzle, and Stanton stopped to try his luck at putting it together. When he finally started for home it was really dark except for the stars shining overhead. Stanton wished that he had remembered to get the salt at the store in town instead of having to borrow it of Jimmy's mother.

"I guess I'll go through the south pasture then I won't have to cross the brook again," Stanton said to himself. "It'll take longer but I don't like to go past all those juniper trees at night." So he climbed the fence into the south pasture. Soon his shoes were again making that crunchy noise on the crusted snow.

Suddenly Stanton stopped stockstill and listened. What was that noise behind him? Some one must be following him. He could hear feet on the snow. Perhaps it would be safer to run.

So Stanton started to run, but the snow was slippery in places, and he came very near falling flat on his back. He couldn't hear the feet so plainly now, but he didn't dare look behind him to see whose feet they were. And he didn't want to call for Jimmy to help, for Jimmy would think he was a "fraid cat."

Three minutes passed. Then a sudden thought caused Stanton to stop in the middle of the pasture. Why, Jimmy might have forgotten something important he wanted to tell him and be trying to overtake him now. He would think he was running away from him. He guessed he'd better call back to him, after all.

So Stanton put his hands to his mouth and shouted, "Whoo-oo! Who-oo! Jimmy, are you there?" But no one answered, so Stanton trudged on for five minutes more. Then came the sound of feet on the snow, louder than ever this time. What should he do?

Stanton wanted to scream, but he didn't. Instead, he thought of the little song his class had sung so many times, "God will take care of you through the night." It was night now, and up from Stanton's heart went a little prayer that God would take care of him. Then he noticed that the stars looked friendly and he felt better. He was almost at the end of the pasture. If only the feet making that crunchy noise on the snow didn't come too near! If he only dared look around and see whose feet they were! Why, he did dare. He would look right now.

And Stanton looked. A moment later he broke into a merry laugh; for there, only a dozen rods away from him, were Snowball and Molly and Trude and Wooly, Jimmy's father's sheep. All at once Stanton realized that his bag of salt had grown very light, and, feeling of it, he found a small hole. The salt had gone slowly through this, and the sheep had smelled it and followed him.

But how did they get into the south pasture? Did he leave the gate to anything open? It was bad enough to make father and mother and Anne eat their baked potatoes without salt without being to blame for this too. And how was he going to get the sheep home? Was there enough salt left to tempt them?

Stanton had sometimes helped Jimmy salt the sheep, so now he scraped what salt he could from the bag and started back. "Co'day! Co'day! Co'day!" he called, and Snowball and Molly and Trude and Wooly followed him. Halfway across the south pasture Jimmy came hurrying to meet him.

"Oh, Stanton, you're a good friend to bring the sheep home," he exclaimed. "We turned them into the long shed just before supper, and I forgot to fasten the gate. I was scared for fear they'd get into the road. Thanks a lot. But how did you ever do it?"

"With the little bit of salt that was left in my bag," answered Stanton. Then he went on to explain about the hole. "I guess I'll have to borrow a little more salt for the butter," he said soberly. "Next time I'll remember a lot of things I forgot tonight."

"Guess I'll remember some things too," returned Jimmy. "I'm thankful the sheep are all safe."—Alice Annette Larkin in Zion's Herald.

SUBSCRIBERS TO THE CHRISTIAN SUN

These Pens are of standard make, and will give good service. If you are in need of a Fountain Pen, order from us. Postage paid and Pens guaranteed by the manufacturer.

LADIES' PENS, $2.00.

MEN'S PENS—Capitol, $2.00; Mercantile, $2.50; Cardinal, $3.00.

COMBINATION OFFER—To a new subscriber or for renewal, $2.50, either Gentleman's (Capitol) Pen or Ladies' Pen, with guarantee of manufacturer. And to "Sun" subscribers, not in arrears, any Pen at one-fourth off. Address: THE CHRISTIAN SUN, 1536 EAST BROAD STREET, RICHMOND, VIRGINIA

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

"THE GREEN PASTURES."

A hope of years was realized recently when I saw "The Green Pastures." For six hundred and forty consecutive times this 1930 Pulitzer prize play of Marc Connelly's was presented in New York City. It ran one hundred and sixty times in Chicago. Recently it was in Norfolk two days.

It is an unusual production, but artistically done. Several things jar one's sedate sense of propriety, but there is so much reverence and beauty that one feels elated. Most of us have never thought of God "the Lawd" having an office in heaven, and walking on earth as a human being. It is quite shocking to see a man walk on the stage and be called "the Lawd." We never think of Heaven having a Sunday school picnic, or of "the Lawd" smoking a "ten-cent ceegar."

The plot is quite simple. A poorly educated negro Sunday school superintendent is teaching a group of pickaninnies of the deep South concerning the mysteries of Genesis. He tells some things, but most of the stories from the creation to Jesus are acted on the stage.

God tries an experiment in making the earth and man. All goes well except man. Adam eats forbidden fruit; Cain kills his brother; the land of Nod goes wild and everybody does so badly that God decides to destroy the whole group except Noah and his family who find refuge in the Ark. Even Noah argues for his liquor and gets drunk.

Down in Egypt God hears the cry of Israel and sends Moses to deliver them. It is dramatic and beautiful to see Moses outwit Pharaoh, and lead Israel towards the land of promise. When the army moves across the Jordan where the old leader could not go, God put his arm around Moses and led him into the hill from which he never returned.

The Babylonian scene is pathetic. Israel has lost God and does not know it. For four hundred years He does not come down to earth. Then the people call, and call, and call until "the Lawd" says, "Well, I will come down, but I ain't promising nothing."

The closing scene shows "the Lawd" greatly depressed. The Prophet Hosea has learned love and sacrifice through his personal experiences with an unfaithful wife. The wickedness of the world lies heavily on the heart of God. The angels try to cheer Him, but can find no way to do it. Then off stage is heard voices. One says, "That cross is too heavy for one to carry." "The Lawd" rises, listens, and smiles as he says, "Yes, it is too heavy for one to carry." Here the story ends as God finds His happiness in helping man carry his cross.

In "The Green Pastures" God is a bit too human, but we make Him too remote, too far from human experience. In the simple experiences He should be our friend and helper. The shepherd Psalmist evidently thought of Him as near when he said, "He maketh me to lie down in green pastures."

A YOUNG PEOPLE'S INSTITUTE.

The Youth Fellowship of Eastern Virginia is planning an Institute for young people and their leaders to be held at Suffolk, Virginia, on Sunday afternoon, October 21st.

The meeting will open at 2 o'clock with a worship service led by a young person. Mr. Robert Speight, president of the Fellowship, will give a short talk on the purpose of young people's work. This will be followed by presentation of young people's work by department superintendents, which in turn, will be followed by a discussion period. The closing service will be led by Dr. John G. Truitt, and the meeting will adjourn at 5 o'clock.

Miss Dora Martin of South Norfolk, superintendent of devotional life, will present information concerning the "Morning Watch," quiet hour and daily devotions, as well as material for public worship services. Miss Louise Pittman of Wakefield, superintendent of service (Missions), will give information concerning missionary work in Sunday School classes, Christian Endeavor societies and missionary societies and will also present missionary materials and materials for stewardship.

The superintendent of moral standards, Miss Lillye Holland of Holland, will give information concerning Christian ideals, citizenship, temperance, and such like. Information concerning training schools, the Elon Summer School, study classes, correspondence courses and such like will be presented by Miss Lottie Mae Cross of Suffolk, who is superintendent of leadership training. Miss Evelyn Richardson of Waverly, superintendent of publications is now in Florida but the work of her department will be presented by someone else who will tell of the literature available for all phases of young people's work.

The young people's missionary conference is to be represented and information concerning the work of that conference presented. Mrs. W. B. Williams, secretary for Christian Endeavor in the Eastern Virginia Conference is expected to present Christian Endeavor information.

All pastors, superintendents of Sunday schools, superintendents of young people's departments, teachers of young people's classes, officers of Christian Endeavor and missionary societies, and all others interested in young people's work are cordially invited and urged to be present for this institute work which is intended to aid workers in their tasks during the coming year.

HOW MAY WE HELP PUT THE SPIRIT OF CHRIST INTO ECONOMIC LIFE?

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR OCT. 21, 1934.

Worship Program.

Instrumental Prelude: "Where Cross the Crowded Ways of Life."

Hymn: "God of the Earth, the Sea, the Sky."
Prayer:

"Jesus, thou divine Companion,
By thy lowly human birth
Thou hast come to join the workers,
Burden bearers of the earth.
Thou, the Carpenter of Nazareth,
Toiling for thy daily food,
By thy patience and thy courage,
Thou hast taught us toil is good.

"Every task, however simple,
Sets the soul that does it free;
Every deed of love and kindness
Done to man is done to thee.

Jesus, thou divine Companion,
Help us all to work our best;
Bless us in our daily labor,
Lead us to our Sabbath rest."

Henry Van Dyke. (Cprt. Chas. Scribner's Sons.)

Scripture: Matt. 20:25-28.

Hymn: "Lead On, O King Eternal."

Reader: "The Man With the Hoe." (Written by Edwin Markham after seeing Millet's painting.)

Speaker: "How May We Help Put the Spirit of Christ Into Economic Life?"

Hymn: "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name."

Discussion.

"What would Jesus do?" This is the measuring rod by which the Christian must approach the problem of bettering our economic life. "Oh, but Jesus' way is not practical! It would never work in our modern life!" says someone. Has Jesus' way ever been tried? Certainly not in its entirety; yet it is curious, looking back over history, to see how often the ideals of Christ have worked out to be entirely practical. For example, take the matter of honesty. In the early days of barter and trade, the buyer was told to "Beware!" and the business man who could put over a shrewd deal was looked upon as a coming leader. But today a reputable business concern leans over backward in giving the public the full advertised measure, in making its goods exactly as announced. Why? Because honesty in business means getting the confidence of the buying public . . . which is good business.

Maybe sometime we will find out too that Jesus' policy of looking out for the other fellow as well as ourselves, of showing mercy to the weak and poor is also good business! But that is not the reason that Jesus advocated kindness to all peoples. Kindness works both ways; it helps the other fellow, and it helps us too. For what you are inside is the measure of your happiness and success in living.

The golden rule in business. Development of a code of ethics which is not all "grab"—grabbing for me and my son John and for my company or my country—is the first necessity of a Christian economic system. Without this background, no system of business control can be socially successful.

Bible helps in building a code of business ethics. The Bible is a wise book. It holds within its covers the accumulated wisdom of many men who have lived and suffered, even as we do. Let us look to see what advice these men of God can give us:

- A spirit of mercy. Luke 6:36.
- A spirit of fairness. Prov. 24:29.
- A spirit of sympathy. Deut. 24:15.
- A spirit of brotherliness. Col. 3:12-14.
- A spirit of service. Matt. 23:11.
- A spirit of honesty. Ps. 24:1-5.

1. Can a man make a million dollars legitimately? How large a profit can a Christian make with a clean conscience? When a man has made his million has he any right to a larger profit, or should future profits be shared? If so, by whom? By his employees? By the buying public? Should his children be allowed to inherit over $1,000,000?

2. Do employers, as a class, keep the golden rule? Do working men, i. e. unions? Do either the employers or laborers take the good of the community at large into consideration? What is the Christian attitude toward labor troubles? Can one be a Christian business man or woman under the present economic set-up?

3. Have we any concern with the welfare of Germany, England, China? How may the misfortunes of these countries injure us? What has the world war to do with the unemployment situation in America today?

Adapted from "Christian Endeavor World."

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

THE CHRISTIAN AND HIS BIBLE.

LESSON II—OCTOBER 14, 1934.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Oh, how I love Thy law! It is my meditation all the day."—Ps. 119:97.

LESSON TEXT: Acts 8:26-39. Also Psalms 119:41-48..

The lesson is designed to teach the Christian something about his Bible. It also teaches the importance of personal work. Both of these lessons are greatly needed in our day, when there is so little devotional work study of the Bible, and so little consistent personal work done by professing Christians.

The Voice of God.

"And the angel of the Lord spake unto Phillip." God speaks through common-sense, through judgment, through circumstances, through conscience, through the advice of others, in a hundred ways. But God also speaks directly to men by His Spirit. There come those inner promptings, those definite impressions, those "hunches" if they may be called that, that are nothing less than the voice of God speaking directly to the soul of man. Angels in the sense of messengers still speak to men today. And woe unto the man whose soul is so hardened that he does not hear, or whose will is so stubborn that he does not obey.

The Value of the Individual.

"Go toward the south . . . which is the desert." Philip was in the midst of a great revival. Great things were taking place in Samaria and God was working mightily on the hearts of men and women. In the midst of this comes the command to leave it all and to go down to the "sticks," to the place which was desert. It seemed like a wild-goose chase. And what was worse Philip was not told what he would find there, or whether he would find anything there. He was simply told to go and he went.

The Vindication of Faith.

"And he went; and behold, a man of Ethiopia, an eunuch of great authority under Candace, queen of the Ethiopians, who had charge of all her treasure." God does not send men on fool's errands or up blind alleys. In this most unexpected, out-of-the-way place Philip found a man whose mind and heart were already prepared for him, although neither of the men involved knew it. If God speaks to us and tells us to do something, no matter how foolish or mystic it seems, we had better do it. And whenever and wherever we obey by faith He will vindicate our faith.

Taking Religion Seriously.

"And had come to Jerusalem to worship." It was a long, expensive, troublesome, even tiresome trip, from Ethiopia to Jerusalem. But this man of high authority had taken the time and the trouble to go all the way to Jerusalem to worship. He took his religion seriously. He felt that worship meant something in life. He felt that it had a claim upon his busy time and his influential life. This man is a rebuke to so many people today, professing Christians who do not take the trouble even to walk across the street to go to services of worship, or who do not put themselves to any trouble to go to church. Nor do they seem to care whether their children go to Sunday school—to say nothing of church. Our nation needs a genuine revival of church-going. Churches would take on new life if the members took their vows seriously and went to services of worship.

Seeking—Finding—Obeying.

The man had not only gone to worship; he had kept the high mood of worship as he returned. All too often we return from a service of worship to the Sunday newspaper, to gossip, some of it malicious, at the dinner table, or at an afternoon of worldly amusement and all the value of the morning worship is lost or dissipated. How much richer the lives of men and women would be if they would spend Sunday wisely.

The man was using his spare time. He might have idled away his time on the long journey homeward, but instead he read his Bible. People say that they do not have time to read their Bibles in these busy days. As a matter of fact the average person wastes enough time to read large sections of the Bible. If men and women and young people would use their spare moments they could gain a mastery of the Bible. A great educator has inspired thousands to get a sound knowledge of the world's great classics by his system of reading "Fifteen Minutes A Day."

The man had an open mind and a sincere heart. He had some light but he wanted more light. And because he followed the light that he had he had more light. Because he obeyed what he knew he came to know more. Because he put himself in harmony with the Book that centers in Christ he came eventually to know and to have Christ.

At That Same Scripture and Preached Christ.

Philip began where the man was and led him to Christ. The Scripture centers in Christ. He gives it its complete meaning. Prophecy found its fulfillment in Christ. He is its inspiration and its fulfillment.

If Thou Believest With All Thine Heart.

There is a place in Christianity for the head. Jesus did not put a premium on ignorance. Indeed Jesus has been the Great Emancipator of the human mind, and His gospel has always tried to strike the shackles of ignorance from the mind of man. But there is a place for the heart in Christianity. It is something more than correct and calculating intellectual belief. It is a matter of the loving heart as well as the believing head. It is primarily a matter of trusting Someone rather than believing something. Let knowledge grow from more to more, said the poet, but let reverence also have its place, and simple trust, and loving obedience.

On His Way Rejoicing.

The words could refer to Philip. To have led someone into a personal experience of Christ—there is no joy that compares with that. Or to find Christ, to come into a personal experience of Him that is life's highest joy, and the eunuch had this as he went his way.

Life goes and comes not; so I thought and said Joy ebbs, but flows not; how shall I secure The joy that never ebbs, the life that ne'er Departs, abiding like the constant sky Or everlasting hills? I must be filled Out of a fountain which is always full; So shall my life be life indeed, my joy Be deep and tideless. Poor, I knit myself To the eternal treasure; weak, I bind myself To the eternal strength; imperfect, I Put on Divine perfection; steeped in evil, I clasp the eternal goodness; sad and empty, I claim the fulness and the joy which from The heaven of heavens have visited this earth, That men might be as God, and earth as heaven.

—Horatius Bonar.

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES. Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.

These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies, in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. It combines with the Concordance, Subject-Index, Scripture Proper Names, etc. The 12 Maps have been carefully revised and are beautifully colored. In making orders, give the number and price.

135—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold. $3.00

India Paper Edition, Only 16-16 of an inch thick.

. 133X—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold, $4.00

SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS' BIBLE.

Especially made up for gift or reward Bibles for Sunday School scholars, containing a special series of very practical and useful helps and Bible Questions and Answers, etc. Printed on fine white Bible paper; ruby type; pocket size, 3 3/4 x 5 3/8 inches, and 1 inch thick, with 31 full-page illustrations in sepia. All bindings are black. Ruby Type, Size 3 3/4 x 5 3/8 Inches, and 1 Inch Thick.

65—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on side and back in pure gold; 6 colored maps . . . . . $2.50

AUTHORIZED VERSION.

RED LETTER TEACHERS' BIBLES.

Brevier Type (8 vo.), Self-Pronouncing, Size 5 3/8 x 8 1/2 Inches and 1 3/8 Inches Thick.

Containing the Bible, with full references. The words of Christ in the New Testament are printed in red; other parts of the book are printed in black. With Concise Bible Dictionary, combined Concordance, and 12 indexed maps.

7852—Genuine Leather, Lavant grain, divinity circuit, round corners, red under gold edges, title stamped on back in pure gold . . . . . $4.75

RED LETTER EDITION.

With All the Words of Christ in the New Testament Printed in Red.

1282—Genuine Leather, Morocco grain, divinity circuit round corners, red under gold edges, register and headbands; title stamped on side and back in pure gold . . . . . $3.25

60—Bound in Cloth, stiff covers, square corners, red edges, Sunday School Scholars' Bible, stamped in pure gold on cover, no illustrations; special book for Sunday Schools . . . . . 95c

Any of the above Bibles sent postpaid. Address

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street

Richmond, Virginia

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy

MONDAY.

SELF-DENIAL PREREQUISITE TO CHRISTIAN LIVING.

"If any man would come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me."—Mark 8:34.

He who is not self-denying is selfish, and the gratification of his own desires is the constant objective of the selfish. He who lives this way loses his soul, for soulfulness is always looking out for the good of others. "What doth it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"

So Jesus tells us that denying one's self is the only secret of knowing the riches of life. He tells us that forgiveness and redemption is perfected only through self-sacrifice, and through a willingness to take up one's own crosses and go on.

What Jesus tells us is a mere statement of truth. Everything works on the same principle. One cannot accomplish anything without a lot of self-denial and the willingness to bear the brunt of hardships which may be necessary to bear in order to achieve the goal.

To Jesus, self-sacrifice was never a penalty for anything. It was a path to glory and to a greater life. He called men to sacrifice, not to discipline them but to free them and to set in motion the love powers of humanity. He had no pleasure in reducing one to a miserable remnant, but He sought to lead them into the larger conceptions of life and a deeper enjoyment of their possibilities. "He that loseth his life shall find it."

Prayer—Our Father, we would forget ourselves and follow Thee literally. Make us witnesses for Thee to men, and make us ministers of thine for others.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE LORD'S KINDNESS.

"The mountains shall depart, and the hills be removed, but my kingdom shall not depart from thee."—Isa. 54:10.

The Lord hath assured us that heaven and earth may pass away but His word shall not pass away.

We are in the habit of thinking of God in terms more meaningful than mere kindness. However, this is one angle of Him that humanizes Him in a way that makes Christian living possible and His personality a reality.

As seen in His Son, our Saviour, He is tender hearted and forgiving; helping the weak and giving unto them that ask; going about doing good; restoring those at fault; bearing the burdens of His children; loving enemies; and the love of kindness always on His tongue.

We are assured that if this injunction is obeyed, "our record shall be great, and we shall be sons of the most high; for He is kind toward even the unthankful and the evil."—Luke 6:35.

Prayer—Our Father, rise Thou, today, in our lives as the sun of righteousness and give healings to our souls, and lead us in a way that is diligent in service, wherein we may show ourselves approved of Thee a workman that needeth not to be ashamed. This we ask for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

TRUTH.

"The truth shall make you free."—Jno. 8:32.

The desire for truth is the beginning of the upward spiritual climb. We might also call it the end of that climb. It is something which leads us in the true road. It is the excellence of the Lord which He said could be had for the "hungering and thirsting" for it. It is the condition of seeing and doing the kingdom. It is something which is revealed to all those who strain for it. Heavenly aspirations, earnest desires for goodness, the lift of the soul toward Christ, the desire to know the best way and live the best way, willingness to obey our best thoughts, the cheerful resolution to do that which seems kindest, truest, justest, purest, noblest—that is the life which opens the eyes as truth is sought, for God assuredly reveals truth to each in due time; that is the life which catches the light, and that is the man who finds perfect freedom.

Prayer—

"Truth, be more precious to me than the eyes
Of happy love; burn hotter in my throat
Then passion; and possess me like my pride;
More sweet than Freedom; more desired than joy
More sacred than the passing of a friend."

Amen.

THURSDAY.

VICTORY IN DEFEAT.

"All things work together for good to them that love God."—Rom. 8:28.

"Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth. And scourgeth every son whom he receiveth."—Heb. 12:6.

"Defeat may serve as well as victory
To shake the soul and let the glory out.
When the great oak is straining in the wind,
The boughs drink in new beauty, and the trunk
Sends down a deeper root on the window side.
Only the soul that knows the mighty grief
Can know the mighty rapture. Sorrows come
To stretch out spaces in the heart for joy."

Edwin Markham.

Prayer—Unto Thee, O Lord, do we lift up our souls in penitence for all our complaining. Be Thou in us the courage of our lives that good may come of evil in our days. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

HE IS MY FATHER.

"When ye pray, say, 'Our Father.'"—Matt. 6:9.

Christ taught us to call God "Father." This elevates the whole idea of prayer. It quickens and purifies all our entreaties and resolutions. It transcends all blessings of heaven. It brings God to our level wherein He communicates His own life in fulness to us, and He gives unto His children His own contentment and repose of soul.

Prayer—

Be thou the well, Lord, by which I die and rest;
Be thou my tree of life, my garden ground;
Be thou my home, my fire, my chamber blest,
My book of wisdom loved of all the best;
Oh, be my friend, each day still never found,
As the eternal days and nights go round.
Nay, nay—Thou art my God, in whom all loves are bound.—Amen.

Geo. MacDonald.

SATURDAY.

WHAT EARS ARE FOR.

"He that hath an ear, let him hear what the spirit saith to the churches."—Rev. 2:18-29.

This refrain in the Book of Revelation is worth our most careful consideration. We count it a disgrace when it is said of us that we have "no ear for music"; but what if it is truthfully said of us that have no ear for the voice of the Spirit of God? In Boston it is regarded almost as an act of religion to attend one of the superb Symphony concerts; but what if the great choir of angels around the Throne is singing, and we will not listen to it?

The Spirit has glorious things to say to the churches all the time—things more wonderful than we can imagine, words of exhaustless power, of surpassing charm, of exquisite beauty. Shall we be deaf to them all? Shall the churches, so far as we are concerned, have no ear for it all? Shall we, who should be the churches of God, turn away from the Voice of the Spirit?

Prayer—Speak to us, Lord, and teach us. Comfort us and guide us. Command us and warn us. Speak to Thy church, O God, and we will hear.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

SUNDAY.

WHATSOEVER.

"Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."—Gal. 6:1-10.

The Bible "whatsoevers" are an arresting and varied group of sentences, and prominent among them is this "whatsoever" of sowing and reaping.

We are slow to think that it means just what it says and all that it says. We make exceptions. As to most sins, the sins that do not specially tempt us, that are repulsive to us, that do not particularly appeal to our natures, we readily agree that such sowing of bad seeds means a harvest of evil. But when we like the seed-sowing, we take it for granted, in a blind obstinate way, that we shall be pleased with the harvest.

But God's "whatsoevers" admit of no exception. Bad seed means invariably a crop of weeds. They may please the eye—what is more beautiful than a field of thistles in full bloom?—but the end is ruin to the field of our soul. There is no joy in such a harvest.

Prayer—Save us, O God, from our self-chosen dooms. May we enter, O God, into the glad wisdom of Thy whatsoevers. May we remember that Thy plan for Thy children is for eternity.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

A PRAYER FOR COURAGE.

"God make me brave for life,
Oh, braver than this!
Let me straighten after pain
As a tree straightens after rain,
Shining and lovely again."

"God make me brave for life.
Much braver than this!
As the blown grass lifts let me rise
From sorrow with quiet eyes,
Knowing thy way is wise.

"God make me brave. Life brings
Such blinding things,
Help me to keep my sight,
Help me to see aright
That out of the dark comes light." Amen.

Grace Hall Crowell.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

THE POWERFUL CHURCH.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"And Jesus entered into the temple of God."—Matt. 21:12.

This morning I talked to you about the powerful Saviour. This evening I shall talk about the powerful church. We need a powerful church, just as we saw this morning that we need a powerful Saviour. We need a church that will tower above, like a lighthouse, the tempest, large or small that may beat about it. We need a great church into which we may come for life-giving, problem solving contact with the infinite God. As we wish our pastor to be in the very finest sense a priest of God for the people, we wish our church to be in the very finest sense an altar of God for the community.

By a powerful church it is not necessarily meant that it must be a rich church so far as material values go; nor a church great in political power; nor prominent in social circles. I cannot believe, however, that simply because a church is beautiful, spacious, and well-equipped that it is wicked any more than a fertile valley or a beautiful sunset is damned. A church is not necessarily a powerful church because it has a large and cultured membership. These things are incidental, and are not in themselves a hindrance. Properly consecrated and devoted to God they are a help,—a mighty help.

A church without Jesus is weak. Let us look at our scripture lesson, and see what we find. I remember when in college a class in geology. The professor was giving a test, and his one question was, having previously laid a stone in each of our hands, What do you see? You have fifty minutes to write it down. How often I find myself turning to that same method when I look at a bit of scripture. Let us look at our lesson.

1. I see a temple without Jesus. There on that lofty Jerusalem hill is the magnificent temple, with all its marvelous history, and its matchless furnishings, but inside is no Saviour. The prophets of the soul. They look for things with which to fill their earthly coffers, rather than values with which to fill their heavenly treasures.

2. I see a temple without prayer. Oh! I am aware that there were ever humble people who walked into that great old temple for proper purposes, and there are exceptions of course, but Jesus himself said: It is written, My house shall be called the house of prayer; but you have made it a den of thieves. So then before Jesus came, prayer had gone. Is it a church—a powerful church? Is it a praying church? Not only is it a praying church, but is its altar an altar to which men, women and youths delight to come in the hour of triumph as well as trial?

3. I see a temple without 'wonderful works.' After Jesus came into the temple the "chief priests and scribes saw the wonderful things which he did." But before Jesus entered the temple nothing wonderful, or unusual was going on. It was the same old service, as uninviting as could possibly be imagined. A powerful church will certainly have something miraculous going on within it. Great changes will come to pass in the depths of men's souls. Lives will be changed. Personalities will be enriched. Visions will be enlarged. Inspiration will be caught. Goodness will get a hold on folks like a bright sunshine of love.

Something happens. A church without Jesus is lifeless, and lacking in mighty works.

4. I see a temple without children. On this rainy Sunday night I thank God for the children in this congregation. Something is lacking in a church into which children do not delight to come. Men are too absorbed with the sale, rather than the soul. The minister may be thinking too much about the sermon he has to offer, rather than the salvation God has to offer in Christ Jesus' Children love Jesus. Let the minister present him, and the parents be willing, yea, anxious, for their children to keep his company and something will happen in the church. How the children followed Jesus into the temple! When he had pushed open its great doors the children rushed in around him. When the priests and scribes condemned and abused him they sang his hosannas! The temple without children was a temple without song! I do not read in this lesson anything about any singing until Jesus and the children filled that old temple floor!

The powerful church will be a church which gives its children and youth a central place in its program. What thousands of dollars you have spent in this great old church for the sake of your children! You are giving them first place in your gifts, give them first place in your prayers and your practices,—your daily thinking and living,—in your homes, in your work, in your play, in your plans. A man cannot be mean, and little and really honor and love his children. A Sunday school teacher cannot be derelict of his, or her duty, and really respect the folks that attend the class. A powerful church must have a powerful love for its children.

5. I see a temple without the lame, and blind. And this completes its emptiness. It would be mighty fine to have no lame, and blind in a church if there were no lame, and blind in the community; but as long as the lame and blind are in the community something is wrong with the reach of the church if they are not in the church. It pierces my soul to see members of good, and well-equipped churches, turning into humble store-rooms on back streets, and other improvised places of worship seeking God. God can be found in the humblest places,—and that is just the point,—may He grant that ours may be an humble place, although well equipped and well appointed. I glory in those institutions which make it their program to go out into the highways, and byways, and bring them in. They have their mission, and please God, a mighty one; but I do not wish anyone, however poor, or blind, or lame, or lost, to feel that when the doors of this great old church swing open that they do not swing open for them. "Jesus entered into the temple of God . . . and the blind, and the lame came to him in the temple, and he healed them." And it is the united prayer of the people who worship here that Jesus may ever enter, and that in here he may have the opportunity to minister to the poor and the needy, the lame and the blind, the lost and forgotten man, just as long as there are such to be found.

A church into which Jesus enters is strong. On the selfsame lofty heights in Jerusalem I see a temple in which Jesus is. And that temple is a temple out of which evil is driven. Evil practices, and unrighteous oppression fall back before the strong hand of Jesus, as death-germs are driven back by the bright and burning sun. How they fall back before Jesus. That is a powerful church that can bring a searchlight to beat upon the sinning souls of men, and cause them to touch the hem of the garment of God and be healed! Such was the Jerusalem temple with Jesus in it. Such is the church anywhere with Jesus in it.

How we all need that sort of a strong church! We all recognize our sinfulness, our unworthiness; we all come into the presence of God for renewal, for healing, for cleansing, and for strengthening for the duties and opportunities of life. There are individuals here concerned about sons and daughters, fathers here concerned about the problems of life for the whole family, mothers concerned about the spiritual welfare of the children, wives concerned about husbands, and husbands concerned about their wives. If we could only lift the curtain and look deep, deep back into the silent, unseen depths of things just as they are we would find how greatly we need a powerful church that can lift people into the very life-giving presence of God!

God does enter into his temples. He still has the power. And our hearts never cease their hungerings until they come to know him. May we be helped, and blessed for a real purpose, namely, to open the church to the Christ, and the hopes and hearts of the multitudes!

COMMUNION WARE.

Individual Service.

Made in best Silver Plate or Aluminum. Prices low; first-class workmanship and finish.

ALUMINUM.

Aluminum is light in weight, durable, and does not tarnish.

Style No. 50-A.

- Tray No. 2—Interlocking, with 40 plain glasses $7.00
- Tray No. 6—Interlocking, with 35 plain glasses 6.75
- Tray No. 10—Interlocking, with 30 plain glasses 6.50
- Base No. 50-A—Fits Trays 2, 6, or 10..... 2.25
- Cover No. 50-A—Fits Trays 2, 6, or 10..... 2.25
- Bread Plate No. 1—Narrow rim..... 1.60

SILVER-PLATED.

The Silver-plated Ware is of the very highest grade and best finish; heavily plated on nickel base.

- Tray No. 85—Interlocking only, with 36 glasses $22.00
- Base No. 1—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 85.. 11.00
- Cover No. 5—Silver-plated; fits Tray No. 85... 16.00

(For Silver Bread Plates, see under No. 90.)

- Tray No. 90—Interlocking, with 36 plain glasses (this style has broad rim, which is sometimes preferred, due to increased ease of handling) $22.00
- Base No. 2—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 90.. 16.00
- Cover No. 4—Silver-plated; fits Silver Tray 90. 14.00

- Bread Plate No. 3—Narrow Rim.....$ 9.00
- Bread Plate No. 4—Broad Rim..... 9.00
- Filler—Silver Lined..... 6.00

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street

Richmond, Virginia

INTEGRATION FOR THE MINISTER.

By RODNEY L. McQUARY.

(Continued from last week's SUN.)

Another cause which makes it difficult for the minister to live an integrated life is the uncertainty which dogs his faith in the validity of the church for the life of today. No one can be censured for having this chilling doubt creep upon him at times. Faith burns fitfully like a candle in the wind. Protestants of a free sort must pay the price when they depart from the church which carries institutional authority and long continuity as elements of its essence. But where can the socially-minded spirit invest itself to better advantage than in the church? What agency among men is doing more for the coming of the order of better things? When seen at her best as the beloved community the church stands on the highest tableland of idealistic purpose, and conscientious leaders in the church today are grappling fearlessly with the problem of bringing religion down into the practical concerns of everyday living. Imperfect as she may be, the church is still the only institution which envisions for herself the fully-rounded ideal of personal and social welfare. The fact remains that many ministers are not at peace because they have lost something of their pristine faith in the validity of the church's missions. Others—and of these there are not a few—fall short of integration because they are torn by a conflict between conscience and conduct. They think they see "the way out." They recognize the demands which the Christ-spirit makes upon all Christians if we are to come into a better day, but they have not the courage nor the sacrificial spirit to walk in that way. Thus there is a "warfare in their members" and they cannot be at peace. Still others are simply confused, thus demonstrating their kinship of ignorance with the great majority of the human family.

II. But enough of diagnosis—are there any cures, or even any helpful remedies? I should like to suggest some practical expedients, realizing that they may seem dulled by deadly familiarity.

First is the simple expedient of having some time-plan or schedule by which to work. Frequently the minister's restlessness of spirit grows out of the feeling that he is getting nothing done—a victim of his days rather than their master. Following impulses and whims, he nibbles away at his task, here a little and there a little, without logical order or sequence in his doings. Other men are not so. Business executives plan their days. Ministers who are marked by conspicuous success set aside certain periods for study and writing, for correspondence and administration, for visitation and personal interviews, for devotion and for relaxation. It takes backbone to adhere to any time-plan, for emergencies will come and interruptions will often cut a day into bits. But interruptions can be cut to the minimum and guarded against, and when unavoidable, may be yielded to without resentment, thus causing the least psychological havoc. Year in and year out the pastor who is orderly in his employment of time will enjoy a peace of mind which comes from seeing many undertakings rounded out to a planned completion.

In the second place, the minister should endeavor to maintain the affirmative and appreciative attitude toward every member of his congregation and toward the opportunity of the church itself. The new pastor always begins his work hopefully and enthusiastically. He sees every member of his church with an appreciative eye and the future of his church seems bathed in roseate light. You may say that he is not acquainted with the realities of the situation and walks in the bliss of ignorance. But he is also at his own best psychologically, and difficulties have a way of yielding before him. Later the air may grow dank with suspicion and distrust. Complaints arise on both sides. Many times this could have been avoided had the minister been able to keep up his appreciation and patience "in spite of"; and had he recognized the necessity of using the materials at hand, never losing faith and hope.

Next, I should name relaxation and recreation, preferably in the out-of-doors. Like the cowboy, the busy pastor needs to "drop the rein" occasionally in order that he may restore poise and strength. One "day off" out of each week puts more poise and efficiency into the other six days. The democratization of golf is a boon to ministers. A hobby is a good corrector of perspective. In season God is still to be met in a garden, and in winter a woodshop in the basement may prove a means of grace.

In the last place, integration of soul is encouraged if the minister can learn to view his own lifework from the long perspective of the divine purpose for mankind. This will put sweep and courage into the life. Every great servant of God down through the ages has had this. A devout reading of the Scriptures will help to promote it. When the minister reads his Bible for the good of his own soul, not "gunning for sermons," he quickly comes into the company of spiritual pioneers. And the Scriptures can be supplemented and brought down to date by acquaintance with the lives of the saints, ancient and modern. By thought and imagination marching in the procession of all those who kept facing toward the City of God, the minister cannot escape the conviction that God was, and is, in it all, and that God is calling him also. History, also, when studied with discrimination, lifts the horizons of the spirit and quickens the imagination for the practical affairs of life. Church history warns against the vagaries and pitfalls of the past, but it also begets courage and faith by revealing how many storms and calms the old ship of the church has weathered. The sense of the divine fellowship is furthered by the discipline of prayer. In his book, Living Creatively, Kirby Page urges the value of withdrawing for several moments each day from the business of life into the sanctuary of meditation and prayer. Nothing else so integrates the soul, for prayer attracts the elements of the personality upward into wholeness and draws the life out into consistency by impulsion toward an ultimate goal.

CALL TO UNITED PRAYER AND FELLOWSHIP.

The Cooperative Council asks that all related to the work of visiting church officers, church by church, this fall, enter into a special fellowship of prayer for one another.

We can be sure that our work will be fruitful not by might of planning, nor by power of tongue or pen, but by the Spirit of God at work in and through us.

In order that all may know who are engaged in this work and where they are at work, the following information is given in summary form. Unfortunately it is not as complete as we could wish. It has been impossible to include all the names of the representatives of State Conferences who will be at work but we shall remember them.

COMMISSION ON MISSIONS.

HOLMAN SUPERIOR TEACHERS' BIBLES

Authorized Version—Self-Pronouncing      The Best Editions of the World's Best Book

For Adults, Teachers, Preachers, Students, and All Who Would Study the Word of God Intelligently

BOLD BLACK TYPE—COMPACT SIZE 4½x6¾ INCHES—WILL FIT THE COAT POCKET

Part page specimen of Holman Boldblack Type Bible

ST. MATTHEW, 5.      Christ's sermon on the mount.

13 And leaving Náz'a-réth, he came and dwelt in Cá-pér-na-úm, which is upon the sea coast, in the borders of Záb'u-lon and Néph'tha-lim:	A.D. 31.	934	CHAPTER 5.
14 That it might be fulfilled	CHAP. 4.	" Isa. 9. 1, 2.	3 Who are blessed. 13 The disciples called the salt of the earth, and light of the world; Christ urgeth on them a good example, etc.

AND seeing the multitudes; he went up into a moun-

THIS NEW HOLMAN TEACHERS' BIBLE. Pronouncing Text, Bold Black Type is a PRONOUNCED SUCCESS. The latest Bible with NEW HELPS that are quite comprehensive and consist of an Illustrated Bible Dictionary, Concordance and additional aids all under ONE ALPHABETICAL INDEX. Also Fine Maps on Coated Paper, and a specially prepared BIBLE READING COURSE, intended to stimulate and maintain interest in the Bible. Imported Bible paper is used to improve opacity and keep down bulk. By this means you get the benefit of full Bible information without the physical discomfort of handling a heavy volume.

STYLES AND PRICES—BIBLE PAPER EDITION

4612. French Morocco Leather, divinity circuit, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges.....	$4.00
4630. Same as 4612. with extra leather lined covers.....	4.75
THIN INDIA PAPER EDITION
With Helps as described above. Size 4½x6¾ inches. One inch in thickness
630X. Egyptian Morocco, divinity circuit, leather linings, red under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker.....	7.00
633X. Algerian Morocco, divinity circuit, leather lining to edge, silk sewed, round corners, red under gold edges, extra quality binding.....	8.00

---

EXTRA LARGE PRINT TEACHERS' BIBLES

Large 8 Vo. Size—8x5½ inches—1600 Pages, including 400 pages of Bible Study Helps

Extra spacing between words and lines makes this Bible very easy to read.

Part Page Specimen of Print

ST. MATTHEW, 5.      Christ's sermon on the mount.

15 <sup>k</sup> The land of Záb'u-lon, and the land of Néph'tha-lim, by the way of the sea, beyond Jór'dan, Gál'i-lee of the Gén'tiles;	A. D. 31.	2	And he opened his mouth, and taught them, saying,
	E. Is. 9. 1, 2.	3	Blessed are the poor in spirit: for their's is the kingdom of heaven.
	L. Is. 42. 7.
	L. Luke 2. 32.
	" Mark 1. 14.

CONTAINING COMPLETE HELPS TO BIBLE STUDY, INCLUDING ALL OF THE FOLLOWING FEATURES

A New Practical Course in Bible Reading, A Treasury of Biblical Information. The most carefully compiled, thorough and attractive form in which valuable Biblical information has ever been prepared. Illustrated Self-Pronouncing Bible Dictionary Containing 300 illustrations, concise definitions and textual references on nearly 50,000 subjects. A Practical Comparative Concordance, with nearly 50,000 references. Four Thousand Questions and Answers on the Old and New Testaments. A valuable Help to all Bible Readers.

STYLES AND PRICES

4712. Divinity Circuit (overlapping covers), French Seal Leather, red under gold edges, silk head bands, and silk marker..	$5.00
812RL. Red Letter Teachers' Bible. The Words of Christ in the New Testament, Old Testament Passages alluded to by Christ, various prophecies relating to Christ in the Old Testament, etc., all PRINTED IN RED. Binding same as described above on 4712 and same large Self-Pronouncing type.....	6.00
733X. Holman India Paper, Genuine Morocco, leather lined, silk sewed, divinity circuit, round corners carmine under gold edges, silk head bands and silk marker, same type and helps as above.....	10.65

All styles sent Postpaid at above prices—Thumb Index 50 cents extra

Christian Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

Winter months at an orphanage always bring many needs to get the children prepared to cope with the cold, chilly winds with the rain and snow. Let us just have a little heart to heart talk about some of our needs—needs that just have to be supplied and no help for it. And we are entirely dependent on you to supply them. We will start off with ninety pairs of shoes and two pairs of socks or stockings each. Price them at the store and see if you can sympathize with me. Fifty sweaters for boys and underclothing for winter besides shorts and other articles of clothing. Then think of Sunday coats for the girls and forty-one sweaters for them to wear to school besides other clothing to make them comfortable for the winter. Then to top it all off with three cars of coal will give you some idea as to some of our needs this winter. How would you like to face the task? That is the reason that we are asking you to help us reach our goal of twenty thousand dollars this year. I know you are going to do your best to do it and if your church will do its part then we will reach and pass it. Just stop and think for a moment and ask yourself these two questions. What have I done to help the little fatherless children in the Christian Orphanage this year?

Second: How much have I contributed out of my earnings to help meet their expenses this year? "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, ye have done it also unto me." What have you done for one of these in His name?

Begin to think about this matter seriously and make plans to raise a large offering in your church this year.

CHARLES D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

REPORT FOR OCTOBER 11, 1934.

Brought forward .....$10,054.97

Sunday School and Monthly Offerings.

North Carolina and Virginia Conference:

Greensboro, First .....	$ 9.50
Mt. Zion .....	1.00
Concord .....	1.00
		11.50

Eastern North Carolina Conference:

Fullers Chapel, Apr. May & June, $2.23; July, Aug., & Sept. $3.60..	4.13
Sanford .....	1.00
		5.13

Western North Carolina Conference:

Biscoe .....	11.00
Liberty .....	1.37
		12.37

Eastern Virginia Conference:

Dendron .....	4.75	4.75
Valley Va. Central Conference:
Mt. Lebanon .....	1.00
Timber Ridge .....	1.84
Antioch .....	8.81
		11.65

Alabama Conference:

New Hope .....	1.59	1.59
----------------	------	------

Special Offerings.

Mrs. Thelma Hines, support of children .....	10.00
A. J. Morgan, gdn. for Morgan girls .....	20.00
Miss Ruth Gunter, Greensboro, N. C. .....	5.00
Biscoe Christian Church, special collection for singing class.....	7.87

Flint Hill Christian Church, special collection for sing class .....	7.40
Class No. 1, Lauett Sunday School, Lanett, Ala. ....	1.00
Friendship Class, Oakland Christian Church, Suffolk, Va. ....	3.00
J. W. Morris, support of son .....	10.00
Womans Missionary Society, Liberty Vance Church, Henderson, N. C. .	3.50
Mrs. Hayes, support of son .....	12.00
Miss Aylmer Goodwin, Columbus, Ga. ....	5.00
	84.77
Total for the week .....	$ 131.76
Grand total .....	$10,186.73

"There is no need for sad despair,
When God is shining everywhere."

IS IT NOTHING TO YOU?

Oh woman with the furs! is it nothing to you?
The agony suffered the long night through
The broken foot, and the burning thirst;
The terror that smites in that trap accurst
The frantic struggles of a little dumb brother,
Or mayhap, a furry little mother
Tortured and murdered, as she sought food
For her precious, hungry little brood?

The starving young, as they waited in vain,
The mother who would never come again,
That mother slain by a greedy human
To deck a heartless or thoughtless woman.
Oh, the torture, the terror, the gaining thirst,
The struggle and strain in that trap accurst!
The agony watches the long night through,
Oh! woman with the furs, is it nothing to you?

—David Lee Wharton.

ELON COLLEGE

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

South Entrance to the Campus

ELON COLLEGE, founded by the Christian Church in 1889, has fully justified the faith and hope of its founders during its 42 years of operation. Its graduates from the four-year course leading to a bachelor's degree, number 980, now living, 122 of whom are in the Christian Ministry and full-time Christian service. The majority of these are members of our own denomination. In addition, 449 are in educational work and are an active influence in the lay leadership of the Christian Church.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION BUILDING, and the definite religious atmosphere of the College, provide the very best facilities available for training for religious leadership, and offer the Church its finest opportunity to train the young people of the denomination to assume active leadership both in the ministry and laity of the local churches.

Address—

C. M. CANNON, Registrar

Elon College. - - - North Carolina

Home Atmosphere—Reasonable Rates—Clean Athletics—Christian Spirit

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom, as represented by the Congregational Christian Church.

BOARD OF EDITORS.

J. O. ATKINSON, D. D. . . . . Editor
 E. C. GILLETTE, D. D. . . . . Associate
 I. W. JOHNSON, D. D. . . . . Contributing
 ELISHA A. KING, D. D. . . . . Contributing
 J. T. KERNODLE . . . . . Managing Editor

DEPARTMENTAL EDITORS.

H. S. HARDCASTLE . . . . . Sunday School
 J. G. TRUITT, D. D. . . . . Sermon
 F. C. LESTER . . . . . Young People
 H. E. ROUNDTREE . . . . . Altar

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year . . . . . $2.00
 Six Months . . . . . 1.00

Trial Subscriptions: Five or more new subscriptions sent in at one time by pastor or president of any church organization, three months for 40c each.

Published Every Thursday at Richmond, Virginia, by the Central Publishing Company, Inc.

Entered as second-class matter at the Postoffice at Richmond, Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Change of Address: Be sure to give both old and new address when asking that your address be changed.

All news matter and items to be published in "The Sun" should be addressed to J. O. Atkinson, Editor, Elon College, N. C., and should reach him not later than Friday preceding date of publication. If more convenient, news from Congregational Churches may be sent to E. C. Gillette, Associate Editor, 117 W. Forsyth Street, Jacksonville, Fla. Emergency notices will be received at the Richmond Office up until Tuesday of week of publication.

All remittances for subscriptions, renewals, advertising, etc., books for review, and other matters of business should be addressed to J. T. Kernodle, Managing Editor, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond, Va.

Notices: Obituary and marriage notices, limited to 125 words, published free. All over 125 words, 1c a word, cash with notice. No notices should exceed 250 words.

Receipts: The change of label is your receipt for money paid. The label shows date of expiration, and change on label will appear the first or second issue of the month following renewal, provided it was received before the 25th. No other receipt will be sent unless requested. Please notify the Richmond Office if label is not changed as above.

OBITUARIES

JOHNSTON.

Whereas, Mrs. C. D. Johnston, devoted wife of our beloved superintendent, was claimed by death at her home in Elon College on the evening of September 21; and, whereas, during twenty years of her residence at Elon College she had been so thoroughly identified with our Orphanage, on her own account, as well as that of her husband; and, whereas, she served our institution, as she did her own family, with unstinted devotion, boundless sympathy, greatest efficiency and marked wisdom at all times, BE IT RESOLVED, by the Board of Trustees:

FIRST, That in our experience with and supervision of the Christian Orphanage, we have come in contact with no friend of the institution whose services at any and all times were more circumspect, commendable and praiseworthy than those so wisely and lovingly rendered by Mrs. Johnston.

SECOND, That we feel and record our deepest gratitude for the gracious hospitality that we severally enjoyed within the precincts of her home and the words of wise counsel from her rich and mature experience which aided so much in our work with and for our Christian Orphanage.

THIRD, That we record our gratitude for the loving esteem and beautiful devotion in which she was held by matrons and children of the entire Orphanage family, realizing that this esteem and devotion were merited and deserved by her unselfish and helpful interest in the institution and its welfare.

FOURTH, That we express our deepest sympathy for our Superintendent and his family, assuring them that we share with them to the fullest extent the sadness and the sorrow of her going away; but realizing, since it was the way of wisdom in the sight of God, Whom the deceased loved and honored and served so faithfully, that it is all for the best and that some day we will understand.

The Board of Trustees, Christian Orphanage—

By special committee,

L. R. JONES,
 VITUS HOLT,
 J. M. DARDEN.

SMITH.

On last Thursday, the spirit of Mrs. Ed Smith took its flight. Her many friends and loved ones were grieved to know that she was gone. Although she had been living in Clayton only three years, she had made many friends during that time, for to know her was to love her. She was a consecrated Christian, being a member of Amelia Christian Church. She had been in ill health for several months, gradually growing weaker each day.

Mrs. Smith leaves seven children to mourn their loss, Misses Ida and Anna Smith, Mrs. Eunice Adams and Mrs. Fred Poole, of Clayton; also three sons, Milton Smith, of Clayton, Paul Smith, of Richmond, and Walter Smith, of Raleigh; eleven grandchildren and one sister, Mrs. J. W. Smith.

The funeral services were conducted at Amelia Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock by Rev. B. J. Howard, of Chapel Hill, assisted by Rev. Lee House, of Newport News, Va., both her former pastors.

She was laid to rest beside the grave of her husband, who died some years ago. The flowers were many and beautiful.

May God bless and comfort the loved ones left behind, is the wish of—A Friend.

KNIGHT.

Robert Knight of Lanett, Ala., son of Beu and Sally Knight, aged 10 years, came to his death by coming in contact with a live wire. He was severely burned about the feet and lower limbs; so much so that the doctors amputated both of his feet, thinking that they might be able to save his life.

He was a bright little boy and had many friends. He was conscious to the end and just before he died he called his sister, Mary, to him and embraced her and offered a little prayer to Jesus and fell peacefully to sleep in Him. God bless the bereaved father and mother, brothers and sisters. It is such a comfort to find rest in Him who said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

Funeral by Revs. G. G. Hunt and Olin Parr.

PIEDMONT COLLEGE

Located in

"The Blue Ridge Highlands"

An accredited college with an enviable reputation for superior classroom instruction, and wholesome student life.

Standard courses leading to the A. B. and B. S. degrees. Careful, scholarly instructors.

A refined Christian atmosphere. All of the cultural elements essential to a liberal education.

A minimum of expense. Tuition and board for the entire academic year only $273.50.

For information, write

GEORGE C. BELLINGRATH, Dean,
 PIEDMONT COLLEGE,
 DEMOREST, GEORGIA.

Southern Seminary Foundation

(Successor to Atlanta Theological Seminary.)

AFFILIATED WITH

Vanderbilt University

The Foundation and the other Foundations that are affiliated with Vanderbilt University School of Religion comprise the only Interdenominational Theological School in the South. Through this affiliation the students enjoy the rights and privileges of Vanderbilt University.

DEGREES.

Candidates for degrees are required to have completed their college courses.

The degree of Bachelor of Divinity is offered to qualified students who complete the required courses.

Vanderbilt University also offers the degrees of Master of Arts and Doctor of Philosophy, in accordance with the regulations established in its several departments.

MORE THAN A SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY.

Because of our affiliation with Vanderbilt, our relations with other nearby colleges where our students can take courses without tuition, and the cooperation of the American Red Cross and other social agencies in the city, we prepare students for many types of Christian service.

For information write

WILLIAM JAMES CAMPBELL, President,
 330 BUTTRICK HALL, VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY,
 NASHVILLE, TENN.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

Representing the Southeast Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches.

IN ESSENTIALS, UNITY.

IN NON-ESSENTIALS, LIBERTY.

IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY.

VOLUME LXXXVI.

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, OCTOBER 18, 1934.

NUMBER 42.

•• THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY ••

Education Versus Crime.—

The United Presbyterian calls attention to the fact that while the large sum of $2,000,000,000 is spent in the United States annually for educating our youth, this sum is dwarfed by comparison with the cost of crime, which annually exceeds $13,000,000,000. "The crime bill of the nation," it says, "is more than six times as much as our public schools cost us, and yet we are reducing the salaries and the number of teachers in our public schools."

The Panama Canal.—

This year, the Panama Canal celebrates its twentieth anniversary. During the period which it has been open 80,122 ships in transit have paid $339,287,000 in tolls and have carried through it 336,670,000 tons of cargo. Ships of the United States and Great Britain registry have carried a fraction more than three-fourths of the toll charges and have carried slightly less than three-fourths of the total tonnage which has passed through the canal's locks.

Gessed Wrong Once.—

The first reaction in Washington in 1914 was to accept as "one more Balkan affair" the Sarajevo assassination. That proved a huge mistake. The recent assassination of Yugoslavia's King Alexander and France's Foreign Minister, M. Barthou, has started the talk of probably war in the Balkans, and the bad guess made at the capital in the former instance has caused it to be unusually sensitive to "affairs" happening in south-eastern Europe's tinder box. Though there is no immediate crisis seen in Washington, there are many things that can yet happen which can start the demons of war. Level heads are needed in dealing with the situation in Belgrade.

Suicide Strike Is Off.—

During the past week many have watched with interest and concern the results of the "suicide strike" being waged by twelve hundred Hungarian coal miners. The miners had refused to come to the surface of the mine or to treat with the owners or the government except on their terms. None too soon were these terms accepted, for, of those self-imprisoned men, more than a hundred were semi-conscious and suffering from gas poisoning when finally brought to the surface after 110 hours in the pits. Even the most robust were haggard. All were said to be joyful, for they are to receive a bonus equivalent to $3.00 each and, instead of an 8 per cent wage cut, will receive another bonus of like amount before Christmas. There were no fatalities from the strike, if police reports can be credited. There is a vast difference in the conditions existing among the laboring class in America and in other countries, and the laboring man in our own country enjoys privileges and benefits which are denied to even the higher classes in many foreign countries.

The Arms and Munitions Investigation.—

The Rev. Dr. Albert W. Beaven, president of the Federal Council of Churches, has been instructed by the Council's executive committee to write letters to President Roosevelt, Secretary of State Hull and Senator Nye, expressing opposition to all efforts to discontinue or make secret the Senate's investigation of the arms and munitions industry. Dr. Beaven's letter urges that the investigation be continued "until all of the pertinent facts relevant to the manufacture and sale of war materials by American firms are made a matter of official record." He protests against the suggestion that "these hearings, if continued, be continued under the cloak of secrecy."—Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

Commodity Prices Drop Slightly.—

For the first time since last January, wholesale commodity prices have taken a drop worth noticing. They reached their peak in September, and by the last of that month had turned downward. This has been caused by several influences, probably that bearing greatest was the political disturbances abroad, which together with distress of foreign purchasers, caused a lessening in the demand for many of our commodities. Grain prices dropped heavily last week in spite of the 42c tariff protection given it. Surprise offerings from France and the Argentine were the major causes for this. Canadian wheat also had its effect, as American prices hinge somewhat on those of Canada, and Canada is dependent upon a foreign market. Notwithstanding the small crop, cotton has drifted downward to the government loan figure of 12c. Sugar has also dropped in price. A quarter-million tons were recently offered at the low price of 2.18½c, and only found takers for 145,000 tons. These are some of the major items in the commodity list, there being 784 items in making up the average.

The German Church Defies Hitler.—

Only recently, sixteen thousand Protestant ministers openly defied the Hitlerized German State Church, and called upon their congregations to uphold them in their stand. Advance thinks that "the resistance of the Churches of Germany to the demands of Adolf Hitler is reassuring." It says: "It serves to mark the path which all churches must take when the rulers of states presume to dictate. It took courage of high order for the pastors of Germany, a thousand strong, to read the words of resistance to their congregations. 'We assert with all positiveness,' was their statement, 'that the past activity of the Reich Church government holds out no promise of its ability to bring peace to the church, that we have no faith in its words and will not bow to its authority.' The contest between church and state will assume increasing importance with the inevitable increase in governmental control. If there is to be increased regimentation of our economic and political and social life—and the signs of the times all point in that general direction—the church must be eternally alert to preserve those basic liberties without which there can be neither peace nor prosperity: freedom to worship as conscience dictates; the freedom of the press, the pulpit and the school; the rights of minorities to speak and organize and agitate. With all her faults, America still clings to these freedoms. May she never relinquish them. May the churches always stand for them."

The 30-Hour Week.—

The fight for a 30-hour week law is likely to become militant and perhaps will smother other labor legislation in the coming session of Congress. Notwithstanding the declaration of the A. F. of L. for such legislation, the Administration is said to be against it. In this it will be supported by business in general, as more and more it is being accepted that America's path to recovery lies through the stimulation of private enterprise and capital, and not through such radical panaceas. The New York World Telegram, one of Mr. Roosevelt's and the New Deal's staunchest supporters asks the question: "What good is a shorter week or higher wages if the factory shuts down?" The editorial says: "On the basis of last year's experience it seems fair to assume that there will be no major sustained recovery until private capital goes back to work, until the vast credit reservoir is turned into productive channels. No amount of government spending can take the place of private investment as long as this is a capitalistic system. To call this condition a capital strike is to miss the point. The barrier is not spite . . . . It is uncertainty. People who have money and credit are not buying and are not borrowing because they do not know what the value of money is to be, what the rules of the game are to be. . . . And that uncertainty—rightly or wrongly—is feeding the fear of the future, which helps to block recovery." If Congress shows itself to be conservative by the bills that it passes and by action taken in its next session, there is ground for expecting a brightening of the skies soon after its next session. Radical measures, on the other hand, will hold the country in depression's grip.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Reach up as far as you can, and God will reach down all the rest of the way.—J. H. Vincent, D. D.

The Georgia State Conference of Congregational-Christian Churches is to be held at Vanceville, near Tifton, Ga., October 30th-31st.

Rev. G. C. Crutchfield acknowledges with gratitude the favor of a good, hard pounding of generous proportions from Bethlehem Church recently. He and his family were made happy by this generosity. Brother Crutchfield has accepted the work at Bethlehem indefinitely.

Rev. J. L. Neese expresses with deep gratitude the reception given at Reidsville Thursday night, October 4th. In addition to the formal reception to their new pastor, a very generous outpouring of gifts for the family larder was made, all of which made the incoming pastor's heart rejoice.

Rev. L. L. Wyrick, pastor of Mt. Pleasant Church, Hoke County, N. C., reports a most happy and successful revival at his church last week. He was assisted in the services by Rev. G. C. Crutchfield. The church was much revived. There were many professions of faith in Christ and eleven united with the church at the close of the services.

It is learned with deep interest and some concern that M. J. W. White and family, our missionaries in the Phillipines have been granted a furlough, effective early in 1935; and while Dr. White's work has been very satisfactory, Mission Boards are still having to curtail because of limited income, and the fear is expressed that the Board will not be in a position to return the doctor and his family to the Phillipines for sometime. It is devoutly hoped that work in the Phillipines or a satisfactory field for missionary service will be made available to Dr. and Mrs. White.

OLD ZION HOLDS REVIVAL.

From October 1st to 12th, I had the honor of being in a series of meetings with the Old Zion Christian Church, Norfolk, Va. It was a great privilege to be with this fine old church and to meet, and come to know better these splendid people. The pastor, Rev. W. H. Garman, and Mrs. Garman were perfectly lovely to me and I am so glad for the blessing they were to me. Their kindness to me will never be forgotten.

Then, too, Old Zion has some mighty fine people. It was our privilege to be in a number of their homes, and I have never been in lovelier homes in my life.

I found a beautiful loyalty on the part of the young people, men and women, to their church and to their pastor. It was great to observe their loyalty to their pastor, who has been with them these many years.

The meetings were very good. Fifteen had united with the church when I closed my work with them on the night of the twelfth and others were expected to unite on Sunday, the 14th, the closing day of the meeting.

Old Zion has a future filled with great opportunities, and may the Lord richly bless these dear people, as they go forward in their work in the interest of the Kingdom.

J. F. MORGAN.

EASTERN VIRGINIA CONFERENCE.

Program of the One Hundredth and Fourteenth Annual Session of the Eastern Virginia Conference to be held at Bethlehem Christian Church, Suffolk, Virginia, from October 31st to November 2, 1934.

FIRST DAY—WEDNESDAY.

Morning Session.

- 10:00 Call to order by Dr. Newman, President.
Song Service conducted by Rev. J. F. Morgan.
Devotional service conducted by Dr. Elwood W. Jones.
- 10:30 Enrollment of ministers and delegates.
Welcome, Rev. R. E. Brittle.
Response, by Rev. T. Fred Wright.
Reception of visitors.
Report of Executive Committee.
Appointment of Special Committees.
- 11:00 Report of Committee on Home Missions by Col. J. E. West, Chairman.
Address, Rev. Robert Lee House.
General discussion and vote on report.
Announcements.
- 12:00 Address, by Dr. N. G. Newman, President.
Communion conducted by Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.
Adjournment for lunch.

Afternoon Session.

- 2:00 Devotional service conducted by Rev. S. W. Phillips.
Digest of Church and Ministerial Reports by Dr. I. W. Johnson, Secretary.
Report of Mr. W. E. MacCleuny, Treasurer.
- 2:30 Report of Committee on Stewardship by Dr. W. M. Jay, Chairman.
Address.
- 3:00 Report of Woman's Missionary Conference by Mrs. J. E. Cartwright, President.
- 3:15 Report of Committee on Foreign Missions by Rev. J. F. Morgan, Chairman.
Address, Dr. E. C. Fry.
Round Table Discussion, led by Rev. J. F. Morgan.
Announcements by Committee on Entertainment.
- 4:30 Adjournment.
Benediction.

Evening Session.

- 7:30 Song Service conducted by Mr. W. H. Baker.
Sermon, by Rev. Jno. G. Truitt, D. D.

SECOND DAY—THURSDAY.

Morning Session.

- 9:30 Call to order. Song Service conducted by Rev. O. D. Poythress.
Devotional Service, by Rev. Joe French.
- 10:00 Report of Committee on Religious Literature, Dr. Charles Eldred Shelton, Chairman.
Address, by Dr. Charles Eldred Shelton.
Discussion and vote on Report.
The Christian Sun, by Mr. J. T. Kernodle, Managing Editor.
General Discussion.
- 10:50 Report of Historian, Mr. W. E. MacClenny.
- 11:00 Report of Committee on Education, Dr. I. W. Johnson, Chairman.
Address, by Dr. L. E. Smith, President of Elon College.
General Discussion and vote on Report.
- 12:00 Address by Dr. W. R. Kedzie.
Adjournment for lunch.

Afternoon Session.

- 2:00 Call to order. Devotional Service conducted by Rev. R. A. Whitten.
- 2:10 Report of Committee on Ministerial Ethics, by Dr. J. G. Truitt, Chairman.
Address by Chairman.

- 2:30 Report of Committee on Temperance and Moral Reform, by Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.
Address.
General Discussion and vote on Report.
- 3:10 Report of Committee on Nominations.
Report of Committee on Christian Education, by Rev. J. E. McCauley, Chairman.
Discussion led by Chairman.
- 4:30 Adjournment with benediction.
- ^ Evening Session.
- 7:30 Song Service conducted by Mr. W. H. Baker.
Address on The Christian Orphanage by Mr. Chas. D. Johnston, Superintendent.
Sermon by Dr. E. C. Fry.

THIRD DAY—FRIDAY.

Morning Session.

- 9:30 Call to order. Devotional Service by Rev. J. M. Roberts.
Reading of Minutes.
- 9:50 Report of Collectors. By Mr. R. C. Norfleet.
Report of Christian Missionary Association by Rev. Robert Lee House.
- 10:10 Report of Committee on Evangelism by Rev. O. D. Poythress, Chairman.
Address and General Discussion.
Report of Committee on Memoirs, by Mr. W. E. MacCleuny, Chairman.
Report of Committee on Superannuation by Dr. L. E. Smith, Chairman.
Report of Committee on Apportionments, by Mr. A. L. Jolly, Chairman.
- 12:00 Devotional period by Rev. F. C. Lester.
Adjournment for lunch.

Afternoon Session.

- 2:00 Call to order. Devotional service by Rev. C. E. Gerringer.
Report of Committee on Place for Next Session, by Mrs. J. A. Williams, Chairman.
Report of Committee on Finance.
Report of Committee on Resolutions.
Announcement of Standing Committees.
Unfinished business.
Reading minutes.
Brief devotional closing service.
Adjournment.

CONFERENCES MEET.

The Eastern Virginia Conference meets with Bethlehem Christian Church, Nansemond County, Va., Wednesday, October 31, 1934. Dr. N. G. Newman, Holland, Va., president; Dr. I. W. Johnson, Suffolk, Va., secretary.

The Western North Carolina Conference meets at Union Grove Christian Church, near Asheboro, N. C., on Wednesday, November 7, 1934. Rev. T. E. White, Elon College, N. C., is president; Mr. Geo. T. Gunter, Asheboro, N. C., secretary.

The North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference meets at Berea Christian Church, Alamance County, N. C., Tuesday, November 13, 1934. Dr. C. H. Rowland, Greensboro, N. C., is president; Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, Durham, N. C., secretary.

The Eastern North Carolina Conference meets with the church at Piney Plain, Tuesday, November 20, 1934, at 10:00 A. M. Dr. W. C. Wicker, Elon College, is president; Rev. E. M. Carter, Youngsville, N. C., secretary.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

We have received several requests for an extension of the Special Offer mailed to delinquent subscribers during August and expiring September 10th. It has been decided to extend this offer to October 31st, giving those who still wish to take advantage of it the opportunity to do so.

FIFTH SUNDAY OFFERINGS.

The Christian Church has a number of loyal spirits. It also has a number of local churches that are loyal to every interest and enterprise of the church and can be depended upon to do their part in every undertaking that is authorized by the Convention. A large number of our Sunday schools have already sent in their fifth Sunday offerings that did not respond to the call for the previous fifth Sunday offering. We are grateful for these new schools. There are also a number of our schools that responded to the previous call with their offerings from whom we have not heard in response to the recent call.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS CONTRIBUTING TO BOTH THE RECENT CALLS.

Eastern North Carolina:
Liberty (Vance) .....	$ 5.00
Morrisville .....	.48
Mt. Auburn .....	5.00
Sanford .....	1.00
Wake Chapel .....	4.52
Youngsville .....	1.00
Total .....	17.00
Eastern Virginia:
First, Richmond .....	5.75
Holland .....	5.50
Holy Neck .....	5.57
Rosemont .....	12.72
Wakefield .....	1.38
Waverly .....	3.80
Total .....	34.72
North Carolina & Virginia:
Durham .....	11.96
Happy Home .....	3.63
Hine's Chapel .....	2.69
Lebanon .....	.66
Mt. Bethel .....	1.85
Union Ridge .....	2.00
Total .....	22.79
Virginia Valley:
Linville .....	4.51
Mayland .....	2.00
Timber Ridge .....	1.82
Winchester .....	1.35
Total .....	9.68
Western North Carolina:
Burlington .....	10.99
Pleasant Hill .....	2.54
Total .....	13.53
Grand Total .....	$ 97.72

SUNDAY SCHOOLS THAT JOINED THE RANKS IN RESPONSE TO THE SEPTEMBER CALL.

Eastern Virginia:
Dendron .....	3.50
Liberty Springs .....	6.00
Union, Southampton .....	1.40
Total .....	10.90
Virginia Valley:
Antioch .....	2.75
Mt. Olivet (R) .....	.95
Newport .....	1.36
Whistler's Chapel .....	2.50
Total .....	7.56
North Carolina & Virginia:
Belews Creek .....	.80
New Lebanon .....	5.00
Total .....	5.80

Eastern North Carolina:
Moore Union .....	$ 2.00
Western North Carolina:
Hanks Chapel .....	1.77
Liberty .....	2.00
Total .....	3.77
Grand Total .....	30.13

SCHOOLS THAT RESPONDED TO THE JULY CALL FROM WHICH WE HAVEN'T YET HEARD.

(Won't you please let us hear from you?)

Eastern North Carolina:
Catawba Springs, Turner's Chapel.
Eastern Virginia:
Barrett's, Christian Temple (Norfolk), Mt. Carmel, Newport News First, Portsmouth First, Suffolk.
North Carolina and Virginia:
Apple's Chapel, Elon College, Greensboro First, Lynchburg United, Ingram.
Virginia Valley:
Bethlehem, Leaksville, Wood's Chapel.
Western North Carolina:
Antioch (R), Big Oak, Graham Providence Memorial, Seagrove.

Surely there are many other schools who are not only willing but who will join with others in encouraging and supporting our college.

L. E. SMITH.

WHAT PRICE MOVIE THRILLS?

By WM. H. SHORT, Director Motion Picture Research Council.

Every adult has vivid recollections of certain dramatic experiences of his childhood. If he were to live to be a thousand years old, he remarks, he could never forget them. Through the movies the child of today has a thousand experiences as vivid as were these infrequent thrills of the older generations.

One who doubts the exactness of this statement is referred to the proofs heaped up by the twenty psychologists and sociologists of the Payne Fund in their four-year study of the exposure of children to the movies, under the auspices of the Motion Picture Research Council; and to the supplementary proofs by Dr. T. P. Homan. The proofs are found in the records of emotional stresses, disturbed sleep and accelerated heartbeat, all of which they were able to measure by means of delicate electrical devices; and in the corroborating testimony of the children themselves.

Measurement of emotional stresses by the galvanometer showed fear reactions of children to be as much as eight times as severe as those of the average adult, and their erotic reactions twice as great.

As to sleep disturbances—"Parents who allow their children to go to a movie should do so with the knowledge that the experience is about as disturbing to sleep patterns as sitting up until midnight or—the drinking of two cups of coffee in the evening." Restlessness of boys was increased 26 per cent on the average and of girls 14 per cent. On this account alone, frequent attendance was considered to be "detrimental to sound health and growth."

The rate of heartbeat, which is normally from 70 to 80 a minute, ran up under the influence of the average movie to 125 and 140, and of a mild thriller to as high as 154.

As long as three days are usually required for a child to regain his normal composure after movie attendance, and sometimes even weeks or months. "In the case of some individuals fear or fright becomes fixed and lasts for a long time," says Dr.

W. W. Charters, research director for the Payne Fund. The eminent neurologist, Dr. Frederick Peterson, comments: "The sensational, criminal, and vulgar suggestions of so many pictures are bound to produce a harvest of nervous disorders and moral disintegration."

Of course the emotional reactions of children to a given stimulus differ at different ages. Children from six to twelve years are most disturbed by scenes of danger, conflict or tragedy, and least by the erotic. Children from twelve to eighteen react less to the danger-horror scenes, and most to the erotic. By the latter, youth from sixteen to eighteen are more disturbed than at any other time of life. The whole complex of emotion grows greater with increasing age and reaches its climax at about eighteen. In all these matters boys and girls are alike.

The facts here recited are far too grave and startling to be dismissed with a wave of the hand. It is well known by neurologists that there are differences in the effects of emotional stimulations. Emotions of love, friendship, hope, security, and the like calm, strengthen and build up both body and mind. Emotions of lust, fear, anger, horror, and the like, in the words of Dr. Peterson, "are sowing the seeds in the system for future neuroses and psychoses—nervous disorders." To play up the one and play down the other surely is not beyond our power.

