David looks back over the past and sees God as leader and conqueror of Israel and the hope of the triumphal procession into the promised land of his universal dominion of peace and happiness. And then he breaks forth into praise to God for a day-by-day guardianship and sustenance.

We are told that this Scripture may be translated into terms of "burden-bearing"—God as our burden bearer. One author tells us that it is an expression of the blessing which burdens from the Lord become. They are burdens "like the sails of a ship." Carrying burdens on their heads is a burden, but it makes one grow an erect figure, and a freedom and swing of gait. So many burdens, sorrows, and sufferings of life do strengthen and enable us.

Prayer—Our Father, we thank thee for thy great power within, which lifts our souls into delights and bears our bodies on with conquering strength midst the burdens we have to bear. Cause us to see and feel what it means to say: "For me to live is Christ," and to find praise for thee who fills our lives with benefits.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"NOT AS THE WORLD GIVETH."

"Not as the world giveth, give I unto you."—John 14:27.

Jesus had no worldly possessions to leave with his children. There was even nothing that he could give them which would exempt them from persecutions and suffering. But there was something which he could leave with them which was "more precious than rubies and pearls, yea, which would make burdens, persecutions and sufferings light; and that something was "Peace." "My peace I leave with you."

In addition to this he left his spirit with them. "I will not leave you comfortless." "The comforter, which is the Holy Ghost—shall teach you all things." "I will be with you in the sixth trouble, and in the seventh I will not forsake you." "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee."

This legacy has ever been with us and has proved faithful and true through the ages. It includes everything our bequests have aimed at producing and that to which all our desires have aspired.

Prayer—Our Father, the burdens of life often weigh us down and bring us to tears, but sorrows are healed by weeping and sympathies comfort the broken heart. Thy blessings are in reach of us. We wait on thee. Give us thy strength, peace, and presence all the way. In Christ's name, we ask it.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

HOW DO I KNOW THAT GOD CARES.

"Cast all your care upon him, for he careth for you."—I. Peter 5:7.

It is not so much a question of how to know that God cares, as it is a question of trusting him that we may know. Knowing comes by trusting. How to trust him is the question.

The child who trusts his father obeys his words. There is no good to a trust that does not obey. It is the same with our God. "If ye love me, keep my commandments." We do not even wait for feeling in the matter. It is a personal, simple obedience of a child thrust forth in the work which he would have us to do for him. Having cast our all on him, the experience of knowing him and his care comes. The late Sam Jones is quoted as saying, "Some folks are like Texas steers that will not trust the platform of the automatic watering trough. Then when they don't get water they say there is no water. Get on the platform and the waters of God's blessings will flow."

We are too slow to trust God. All life is a venture of faith. To venture faith in God, finds that "He will supply all thy needs." We may not know where we are going, but if we are following the Lord, we do not need to know.

Prayer—Our Father in heaven, help thou our lack of faith and trust in thee. We pray that we may live so close to thee that we may have whereof to rejoice in whatever happens. Give us more joy in thy love and care. May nothing drag us down. Fill our lives every day with those things which the world cannot take away, and at night when we lay ourselves down to sleep, may it be the sleep of peace because thou art near and we are secure in thy presence. In Christ's name, we ask it.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

SALVATION THROUGH FAITH.

"He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved."—Mark 16:16.

Faith and trust in God may be likened unto the couplings between the coach of a train and the engine. She has a full head of steam, the engineer pulls the throttle and it moves, but the coach does not move. What is the trouble? The engine backs up again with the same result. What is the trouble? The coupling has not been made.

Are there not a lot of foolish people trying to reach heaven without the coupling, and is it not impossible? Faith through Christ connects us with God, and then we are heaven-bound—for "your lives are hid with Christ in God."

Prayer—Dear Father of Love, we want to feel the value of thy love, grace and power this day. Open thou thy heavens about us and make life full of sacred bliss.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

AN EASY WAY.

"He that speaketh the truth sheweth faith and righteousness."—Prov. 12:17.

"The kingdom of God is righteousness."—Rom. 14:17

"He that worketh righteousness is accepted with him."—Acts 10:35.

"I am the way, the truth, and the life."—John 14:6.

So, this is the way: know the truth, speak the truth, and live the truth. It is a straight and narrow way. It is fraught with personal hazards, and many enemies; it is up the hill and often mountain-climbing, which, as Dr. Jowett said, "requires a lot of hand and knee-work," but it is the way of freedom; it is the way of peace and contentment; it is the way of achievement, life and glory. Truth, honesty and love—these sheweth forth righteousness, and he that liveth this way is accepted of him. Is it easy? Yea, much easier than the inexperienced think.

Prayer—O Lord, our God, we believe. Help thou our unbelief. We pray to be numbered among the righteous and among those who work righteousness. In thy spirit we wait in that hope to be filled with the fruit of righteousness.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

CATCH YOUR BULLETS.

"I will call upon Jehovah, who is worthy to be praised; so shall I be saved from mine enemies."—Read I. Samuel 22:1-7.

A man in Alabama saw an enemy aiming a pistol at him, and ducked his head. The bullet struck him between the eyes, however, passed through his head, and, as by instinct, he threw his hands to the back of his head, he actually caught the bullet coming out. The Associated Press is authority for the story, and adds that the man will recover.

God's children are enabled by him to catch the bullets of their foes, and to catch them before they reach their bodies. No evil is to befall those that trust in the Lord.

It is good to have their confidence. Such an assurance is justified by the experience of innumerable saints and heroes, and we may make proof of it for ourselves, if we will.

Prayer—Lord, may we trust thee, and not be afraid. Be within us as invincible courage and cheer.—Amen. AMOS R. WELLS.

SUNDAY.

OUR AUTOMATIC BLESSINGS.

"Jehovah formed man . . . and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life."—Read Gen. 2:1-7.

When infantile paralysis attacks the breathing muscles of patients and renders them motionless, they are doomed to die, unless artificial respiration aid can be given them, expanding and contracting the chest, forcing in and out the life-giving air.

Man has hardly yet begun to comprehend the intricate mechanism of his own body. No man-made machine, however complicated, compares with it for an instant. And its crowning wonder is that its workings are so largely automatic.

If we follow the simple laws of hygiene, living as God planned for us to live, this marvelous contrivance of the Creator will take care of itself. For the most part, we are unconscious of its existence.

Prayer—May we be so obedient to thee, our Maker. If disease throws thy work out of gear, help us to thwart this enemy—thine as well as ours. In the name of thy Son, the Healer.—Amen. AMOS R. WELLS.

PIONEERS OF THE PHILIPPINES.

Thousands of immigrants have been taking up homesteads in the fertile regions lying about Panguil Bay, P. I., says Mrs. Marion W. Woodward of Dansalan. Although they do not have wild Indians to battle as did our forefathers, they war constantly with cogan grass (a tough reed-like growth), 57 varieties of insect pests, including locusts, and deadly malaria. First, they planted coconuts, but the bottom dropped out of copra prices, and they were forced to raise short crops of corn, rice or sweet potatoes. Struggling along with these homesteaders is the little Christian Church, and it is the Woodward's job, in part, to bring encouragement and inspiration to these people and their pastors. Everywhere they go they find the Filipinos hospitable and willing to share what little they have with their guests.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, Pastor.

A REVIVAL IS POSSIBLE.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"If my people which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sins, and will heal their land. My eyes shall be open, and my ears attend unto the prayer that is made in this place."—II. Chron. 7:14, 15.

Yes, a revival is possible in this local church without a great preacher. It is possible with your own pastor doing the preaching. A revival is possible in a town just this size, or any size as to that matter; and a church just like this one. It is possible in this very month in spite of the weather; and in this year, in spite of all that might seek to prevent it. We are headed on the right road toward a revival. We are in the right place, and for the right purpose. We have the Guide—the Holy Bible—before us. And in our text we have specific instructions about the road.

Furthermore, a revival is God's will. And a revival in this great church with more than thirteen hundred members is necessary if we are to move forward from the fine vantage point to which the goodness of God and former consecrated leadership we have come. A revival, I say, is necessary. Do you think God wants this church using half of its powers? No, God wants this church, and everyone of his churches altogether, using all their powers for the redemption—remaking, if you do not like the grand old term "redemption"—of the world.

And again, a revival is God's promise. And that is great and good, for God always keeps his promise. How often we have been told that all one has to do for a revival is to pray, and to get the people to pray. Perhaps that is true if you make the word "pray" mean enough. But the text we have before us suggests some other things besides praying. These things seem quite essential, too, when we consider them well. At any rate, they are the promises to which the agreement of God is attached. Let us consider them.

I.

"If my people which are called by my name will humble themselves." Here is the first challenge. Let me hold this blessed Book in hand and ask what is one of the great things it seeks from beginning to end, and we all can well reply: Humility. The great names on its pages are names of its humble persons. Moses, David, Mary, Jesus, not to name scores of others. It was Jesus who specifically taught humbleness, and gave it as an absolute prerequisite to entrance into the Kingdom of God. "Unless you humble yourselves, and become as little children, ye shall in no case enter into the Kingdom of God."

Do we want a revival? "Humble ourselves." Let the minister humble himself, so that he is willing to "be counted a fool for Christ's sake"; let him forget his sheepskins, and remember the souls of his flock; let him humble himself to the giving himself entirely over to the task of the revival. Let the deacons humble themselves. Not afraid to pronounce the name of Jesus in the shops and offices of the city; not ashamed to say to a neighbor, or a friend, "My brother, I want to extend you a most cordial invitation to return to the Christ, and the church he honors with his name." Let the deacons not be ashamed to put their best efforts, and their whole selves into the business of making it easy for the preacher to preach, and the people to enter into the pulpit of humility and prayer. Tears of loving consideration can't hurt a deacon's face any more than they did the courageous face of the Christ of God. "If my people, which are called by my name, will humble themselves." Let us!

Sunday School teachers may say: "I have been talking to you about many things, but what I really want is that you accept Jesus Christ as your Saviour and Friend." Just humble yourselves, and bring yourselves into the filling tide of humility which will possess our whole church before God's revival comes in our midst. How humble was Jesus! And how humble Christians should be! Speaking to his own people, God called upon them to humble themselves, and we cannot expect others to humble themselves to the call of Christ until his own people, who are called by his name, humble themselves.

II.

"And seek my face." Crowds help tremendously in encouragement, in morale, in the moving power of kindred spirits—"the communion of the saints." "And seek my face!" Only suppose one-half of the members of this church would turn out night after night for any season of time and come into this beautiful place to see the face of God what do you think would happen to this city and this section? We would have to turn folks away every night, because if half our own folks came and filled this church, crowds of others would try to get in! God says: "Do you want a revival to sweep your country, turn out to church?"

"If my people, which are called by my name, will . . . seek my face." If just the church members—folks who are professed followers of Christ—folks who have given a solemn pledge at God's altar to attend church will only keep that pledge—or any great half of them will keep it—a revival will sweep this country which will indeed be the "shot" heard round the world! Why do we lack vigorous churches? Why is a revival lacking? Why are churches struggling against odds which at times seem almost too great? The members have turned away from the church. They are seeking God's face. Allow me here to congratulate you on your great attendance upon your church services, for you have come. And that is a mighty good sign of a revival. Let's increase our attendance, and thus show to the world that truly we are humbling ourselves and turning to seek the face of God.

III.

"And turn from their wicked ways." . . . My people? Yes, "My people, which are called by my name." The sins which are damning the church most of all are not those committed outside its membership, but those which are committed by "my people, which are called by my name!" And even at that, it is not necessarily the elephants, and lions, and tigers, but, "the little foxes that spoil the vines." The big sins kill themselves! The little, secret sins kill the church! "If my people, which are called by my name, will . . . turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and forgive their sins, and heal their land."

Let us humble ourselves, see God's face, and confess our sins, and turn from them—let us do this as preachers, and deacons, and Sunday School teachers, and members all, turn from our sins as a prerequisite to a revival in our church! Or perhaps you haven't sinned, and fallen short of all that God has wanted you to be! No, no! We have all sinned, and transgressed against his holy will, and humbling ourselves we will see it, feel it, and repent of it; and God being good, and just, and righteous, will forgive us our sins and cleanse us of all our iniquities. Most surely we haven't done the great sins, but we will not face our inner selves with any pride, for rather will we turn from our wicked ways and seek the face of our forgiving heavenly Father. We are not counting on God giving a revival until we turn repentently away from our sins. When his chosen do that, something is going to happen to the outside world!

IV.

"And pray." Yes, prayer is a part of the four-fold requirement. But that is obvious. The (Continued on page 14.)

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street, Richmond, Virginia

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

We had the most beautiful Easter Sunday that we ever remember seeing. The day was clear and warm. The birds were singing, and the children all happy. The good women from the States of Georgia, Alabama, North Carolina, Virginia, Indiana and Illinois, and a number of other points contributed towards their happiness by making and sending to the Orphanage many beautiful dresses and little boys' suits, so each girl could have a new Easter dress and each little boy a new suit. The children were all happy, and nothing happened to mar the joy of the day. If the good women get as much joy out of the making and sending of the dresses as our children get out of receiving them, there were a great many happy hearts throughout our church. We want to thank each one who had a part in bringing joy to all of our big family at this beautiful Easter season.

I received a letter a few days ago from a mighty good friend of the Orphanage, and she had this to say: "I am enclosing you a check for $10.00 for the Orphanage. How any church or individual can refuse to help a little orphan child is more than I can understand."

For more than seventeen years we have been trying to understand the same thing, but have not yet been able to understand. No one ever made a contribution to this institution to help these little children, but was the richer for it, and got joy out of the giving. I cannot help but feel sorry for a church or Sunday School, or an individual, that positively refuses to give to the support of a fatherless and motherless little child.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR NOTES.

success, health, or an easy time. "Thy will be done" is a more Christ-like prayer.

6. A Sense of Sin. When, during the day, we have been less than we know we ought to have been, and that is true of all of our every day, we ought to pray a sincere prayer for God's forgiveness. When we see suffering all around us, and have not lifted a finger to try to get rid of injustice, we ought to ask for forgiveness.

The second main question, "How Shall We Pray?" has to do with our personal habits of prayer. The following suggestions have proved helpful to many:

1. Pray morning and evening. A regular time and place helps. The special thought in the morning may be of gratitude for care through the night, and a plan of action for the battles of the day. At night, gratitude for the day's joy and penitence for our mistakes, may form the content of our prayer.

2. Be definite. Many people find it helpful to try to imagine the particular experiences that lie ahead during the day.

3. Work Out a Prayer to Repeat Each Day. Roy Chamberlin in "Winners" tells of a new football captain who realized that he was hard to get along with. He prayed each morning and many times during the day: "Help me to be the kind of captain that this team needs." That team became the best known in years, from the standpoint of cooperation and spirit.

4. Enter into an agreement with some friend so that you may have common habits of prayer. Compare notes.

Prayer is the soul's sincere desire
Uttered or unexpressed;
The motion of a hidden fire
That trembles in the breast.

Prayer is the Christian's vital breath,
The Christian's native air;
His watch-word at the gates of death—
He enters heaven with a prayer.

O, thou, by whom we come to God—
The Life, the Truth, the Way;
The path of prayer thyself hast trod,
Lord, teach us how to pray.

E. R.

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

other three things must be wrapped in prayer as a seed is wrapped in a peach. It is impossible to humble one's self without prayer; it is impossible to effectively pray with sin in one's heart. "If I regard iniquity in my heart the Lord will not hear my prayer"—and it is impossible to seek God's face without prayer, for prayer is our approach unto him, whether, "uttered or unexpressed." Daily, constantly, let us pray that meeting the conditions we may have God's blessing, and we are assured that we shall.

WE NEED THE BIBLE.

By CHARLES G. TRUMBULL, LITT. D.

Men need life. Therefore, men need the Bible. It is the only book this world has ever had that brings spiritual and eternal life to men; and it is the only book that is itself living—alive; "For the Word of God is living, and active." "The Word of God . . . liveth and abideth forever."

Men need a book like this, and they could not write it for themselves; so God provided it, and "holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost."

Men, today, are working busily at reorganizing the world, readjusting human society, doing everything in their power for the recovery of normal and prosperous economic conditions. It is right that they should; and all hearts are hoping for a lifting of the heavy burdens that are bearing humanity down. But, in the midst of these earnest and sincere efforts, let us remember that we have a Book that shows the way of deliverance.

In fear and distress, men have been asking: "What shall we eat?" or, "What shall we drink," or, "Wherewithal shall we be clothed?" These questions are not new; the Lord Jesus quoted them from men in the Sermon on the Mount. And he gave the answer: "Your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things," he said; and he continued: "But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you."

The Bible is the only Book that tells us just how we may seek first God's kingdom and his righteousness. It is the all-sufficient way—the sure and infallible way. Everyone who reads the Bible with open heart and mind can say, as did the man who lived some three thousand years ago: "Thy Word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path."

It shows the only way of salvation; the only way of life; the only way of safe guidance; the only way of real strength; the only way of true comfort.

It reveals what men could never discover for themselves.

It is written, that "ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through his name."

MY FIELD.

At present I am serving seven churches, and it is a real joy for me to try to serve my Master in this way. I began my ministry at three of these churches in the fall of 1931, namely, Antioch, Bethlehem and Mt. Gilead. In the spring of 1933, I added Beulah. Christian Chapel, Hayes' Chapel and Cary were added this year, and I am hoping, with the help of my Master, to accomplish a great work among these willing people.

Antioch—This church has a membership of over one hundred, having had twenty additions during my pastorate. At each service I am encouraged, as a good congregation gathers, anxious to hear the Word of God. We have a very active Sunday School, which is doing much toward training the young people.

Bethlehem—A weak church, but has a faithful few who are striving to do their part toward the advancement of the cause. We organized a Sunday School here early in the year 1932. I am happy to say that, even if it is small, they are doing a splendid work and have failed to have Sunday School only once, and that was on account of snow. It is setting a worthy example and should encourage our larger churches.

Mt. Gilead—Has an enrollment of one hundred and fifty-five, an active Sunday School, and a growing Christian Endeavor Society. The members of this young people's society are willing workers. They say, "I will try," rather than "I can't." We have carried programs to several churches, and aided Beulah in organizing a Society.

Beulah—Here we find an interested group of people who are ready to work faithfully. The singing is fine, which encourages the pastor to preach better. One always receives a welcome at this church. The Sunday School is active, and the newly organized Christian Endeavor is growing. It has its pastor's prayer and best wishes.

Christian Chapel—I have just begun my work here, but am very favorably impressed with the people. A spirit of cooperation is seen, and a hearty welcome was extended me. I am expecting great things from this church. May God bless them in their endeavor to carry on his work in the community.

Hayes Chapel—This church is located in the village of Garner. Here I found a wide-awake church in every branch, and feel sure that we will be able to accomplish much. The Sunday School is a live-wire, and is sending forth a profitable influence to the neighborhood. The members seem faithful, interested and willing.

Cary—Has a small membership, but furnishes an attentive congregation at each service. We have a good-sized building and hope to increase our membership as well as the attendance at the services. The Sunday School is doing its part in training the young people who seem very interested. Through a spirit of cooperation and loyalty, I feel sure we will aid in advancing our Lord's kingdom here.

May the Lord bless each member of these churches.
H. C. HILLIARD, Pastor.

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE
of the
CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION BUILDING.

ELON COLLEGE, founded by the Christian Church in 1889, has fully justified the faith and hope of its founders during its 42 years of operation. Its graduates from the four-year course leading to a bachelor's degree, number 980, now living, 122 of whom are in the Christian Ministry and full-time Christian service. The majority of these are members of our own denomination. In addition, 449 are in educational work and are an active influence in the lay leadership of the Christian Church.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION BUILDING, and the definite religious atmosphere of the College, provide the very best facilities available for training for religious leadership, and offer the Church its finest opportunity to train the young people of the denomination to assume active leadership both in the ministry and laity of the local churches.

OBITUARIES

IN MEMORIAM.

We, the deacons of Berea Christian Church, have come together this evening in solemn assembly, to pay tribute to our departed friend and brother, Deacon Martin W. Hall. As we meet for business purposes just now, we miss his genial appearance, his steady wit, his wise counsel, his ever-ready willingness for general needful service for his Lord.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That in his passing away, the church has lost its oldest and one of its most consecrated, loyal, devoted, loving members.

2. In all departments of service for his church, he was always in the forefront, ready for action with ideas helpful, needful, and progressive, frequently resulting in the upbuilding of his church.

3. He was a child of the Father, full of faith, loyalty, hope, trust and love of the simplest, sweetest nature, always revealing traits of character in the blending of the service he rendered.

4. We will ever cherish his memory and strive to emulate those virtues of his life that have been so deeply implanted in our minds. That we sorrow with the bereaved and extend to the family our hearts' deepest sympathy.

5. That a copy of these resolutions be sent the family, a copy placed upon our records and a copy sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

KIRK.

Mrs. Jessie Johnson Kirk, wife of John R. Kirk, passed away at her home in Salisbury, on February 22, 1934, after an illness of about two weeks. She had been in poor health for about three years. She was a member of the United Church, Salisbury, and was a faithful wife and mother. Surviving are her husband, John R. Kirk, five daughters and two sons, as follows: Leoma, Margaret, Nellie, Doris, Woodrow, John Jr., all of Salisbury, and Mrs. Nadine Kirk Davis, of Greensboro.

The services were conducted from the home on February 23rd. The floral tribute was beautiful. The officiating ministers were the writer and Rev. C. A. Rhyne.

May the heavenly Father comfort the family in the loss of Mother.

WM. T. SCOTT.

MARSHALL.

James Matt Marshall was born August 8, 1885, and died February 9, 1934, in a tragic automobile accident. He was the eldest son of W. H. and Alice Haizlip Marshall, of Salem Chapel, N. C. He is survived by his father, W. H. Marshall; three sisters: Mrs. Kate Johnson, Salem Chapel; Mrs. W. T. Smither and Miss Nell Marshall, of Winston-Salem; four brothers: William R. and R. Jack, of Salem Chapel, and Wade L. and H. Vance, of Madison.

Brother Marshall was a World War veteran and was a member of Battery A, 15th Field Artillery, 2nd Division of the A. E. F. He spent 18 months overseas and was severely gassed while on duty. He was a member of the Salem Chapel Christian Church, a Mason and a Woodman of the World. He spent about 20 years in business in Washington, D. C., and had returned to his father's home just a few weeks prior to his fatal accident.

The funeral services were conducted from the home and from Salem Chapel on Sunday, February 11th. The services were conducted by the writer and Rev. D. M. Spence. Interment was in Salem Chapel cemetery, amid a beautiful offering of flowers. Masonic rites were given at the grave.

A good friend has fallen. May the Comforter richly bless the loved ones and friends.

KOONTZ.

Mrs. Mary Koontz was born March 3, 1875, and died February 23, 1934, making her age, therefore, 58 years, 11 months and 20 days. She lived near Palmyra, and belonged to our church there. She was a highly respected woman in the community. She was a great sufferer during the last few months of her life. Surviving are one son and one daughter, her husband having passed away about a year ago.

Funeral services were held a Palmyra, February 25, 1934, and burial at Edinburg.

Virginia Auto Tag Issue Below Normal.—

Notwithstanding the reduction in the automobile license tax in Virginia, the number of licenses issued up to the last week has been only one-third of normal. The time limit for procuring tags was first placed at April 1st, but was subsequently extended to April 15th. The normal issuance of both passenger car and truck tags is around 350,000; the number issued at last report was around 100,000.

Mrs. Belmont on Moving Pictures.—

Declaring that one-fourth of the motion pictures shown today are "utterly unworthy of presentation from any point of view," Mrs. August Belmont, president of the Motion Picture Research Council, has launched a nation-wide movement for better films. Addressing the Council's first national conference, Mrs. Belmont said, "The only argument in favor of these pictures was that they take." The nation-wide campaign will aim, Mrs. Belmont said: (1) To decrease the number of objectionable films produced; (2) To build up a motion picture field especially for children; (3) To place educational films in public and private institutions.—M. P.-Recorder.

The Distiller Getting His.—

Mr. Brisbane, the breezy editorial writer for the Hearst papers, figures that the total cost of producing a gallon of whiskey including overhead, insurance, depreciation, labor and materials is thirty-three and one-half cents, a little more than eight cents a quart. The $2.00 per gallon Federal tax raises the cost to 58 cents a quart. Mr. Brisbane's figures of cost are no doubt approximately correct. The consumer paying anywhere upwards of $1.50 to $6.00 a quart (bought by the drink it easily mounts to $6.00), is certainly paying handsome dividends to the distiller and saloonkeeper. Many of these generous consumers will not be able to pay the butcher and the grocer, the landlord, or doctor.—Exchange.

Sea Water and Gold.—

If—it's a big word after all—the gold contained in the waters of the seven seas could be divided among the inhabitants of the earth, there would be, we are told, approximately $14,000 worth for each one. This would be figuring gold at $20.00 an ounce. Under our inflation schedule it would amount to around $25,000, provided its plentifulness did not make it less valuable. The Smithsonian Institution has ascertained that each kilogram of water contains five millionths of one milligram of gold. The seas contain approximately one billion cubic kilometers of water, or one thousand billion billion kilograms. This would mean about 1,500 billion ounces of gold, or 700 ounces for each human being. Father Neptune has no idea of being robbed of his gold yet, for the cost of extracting it would be vastly out of proportion to the returns.

Founder of "Board of Publication" Passes.—

On March 15th, Robert A. Long, founder of the "Christian Board of Publication" (Disciples of Christ), passed from labor to reward. Mr. Long was born on a farm in Kentucky, and made millions out of the lumber business in which he engaged early in life. He established the above mentioned board just after the close of the Centennial Convention, creating a fund of $400,000 to care for the publication interests of his church. During the Men and Millions campaign in 1913, he gave considerably over a million dollars to the various church enterprises. An editorial in The Christian-Evangelist says: "He was first of all a Christian. He lived by that standard, and won his many honors and his millions by the Christian method. In the complications and entanglements of these doubtful days he found the path of peace, power, honor, and joy."

"A Disgrace to the Nation."—

According to an interview given in the Washington Post, Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, has not changed his opinion of the "New Deal." "The time is not far distant," he is quoted as saying, "when we shall be ashamed of having wandered so far from the dictates of common sense and common honesty." "This," says his interviewer, "is the carefully considered opinion of a man who was the president's first choice for the position of Secretary of the Treasury, and who, next to President Roosevelt, is probably the best known and the most highly regarded Democrat. It is a broadside delivered in his Senate office by a man who is again seen by many as emerging as the banner leader of his party, the most respected, the most feared, the most beloved of them all." Senator Glass, while disclaiming disrespect or disloyalty, believes that "it is more important to tell the truth to the president than to anyone else, for so few people do it." Senator Glass has put conviction above expediency more than once lately. His party might do worse than heed his warnings while there is yet time.

Asbestos.—

Everyone knows the uses of asbestos. Few of us know what it is. The following from a series entitled the "Fascination of the Everyday," in Better Homes and Gardens, may prove interesting. "Millions of years ago, geologists tell us, asbestos was born in the volcanic fires of earth's creation. Ever since, this delicate-fibred material has lain beneath the crust of the earth apparently unaffected by any of the forces of decay and disintegration. Mined by blasts of dynamite which loose almost an entire hill at each blast, the soft, silky asbestos is, after going through several mechanical processes, finally separated from the crushed rock." Asbestos is found in almost all parts of the world, but most of the world's supply is mined in Canada and manufactured in United States factories. Among the many useful articles into which it is formed, are: shingles, brake linings, insulations for furnaces or ice boxes, paints, cements, flooring, fireproof curtains, etc. Its long fibres are first spun, then woven into fabrics of varying weights and thicknesses. It is also mixed with Portland cement to form sheet asbestos, or is felted in much the same manner that paper is made.

Best Selling Books.—

Without a doubt the Bible has been by millions the best seller ever printed in America, but there has recently been made a compilation of the 65 other best sellers in the United States since 1875. The list includes only those books which have reached a circulation of half-million or more, and the Institute of Arts and Sciences for which the survey was made, thinks that it will throw considerable light on the literary tastes of the American public. Charles M. Sheldon's "In His Steps," is easily the leader of the list, with 8,000,000 copies. It was published in 1899. "Freckles," by Gene Stratton Porter, comes second, with 2,000,000; while "Ben Hur," another religious story, by Lew Wallace, takes third place, with 1,950,000. Fourth and fifth places are also taken by Porter, her "Girl of the Limberlost," reaching 1,700,000, and "The Harvester," reaching 1,600,000. Other books, in order of their popularity, are "Tom Sawye," by Mark Twain, 1,500,000; "The Winning of Barbara Worth," by Harold Bell Wright, 1,500,000; "Laddie," also by Porter, with 1,500,000; "The Virginian," by Owen Wister, and "The Call of the Wild," by Jack London, with over $1,400,000 each; "Story of the Bible," by Jesse Lyman Hulbert, 1,321,000. Others running over a million, are: "Trail of the Lonesome Pine," by John Fox; "David Harum," Edward N. Wescott; "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come," also by Fox; "Five Little Peppers," Margaret Sidney; "Huckleberry Finn," Twain; "Pollyanna," Eleanor Stewart; "Bleck Beauty," Anna Sewell; "Treasure Island," Stephenson, and "Trilby," Maurither. All of these predate the Armistice, and no book published the past fifteen years has reached the 600,000 class. A contemporary, commenting on this list, says: "Clean literature pays. Perhaps the most obvious thing about all of these best sellers is that they are, without exception, wholesome works, appealing to the sane and normal mind. The sentimental, in the non-individual sense of the term, the romantic, and the religious have strong appeal to the average American reader. In the mass he has no taste for the sophisticated, and shuns the purient."

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Things you forget to say may be remembered and said; but the words you let fly at random can never be recalled.—Milton Lee.

Taking the missionary offering should be a matter of prayer and consecration. Each individual receiving an envelope should decide just what the Lord would have one give to his glory at this time.

Rev. R. Lee House, pastor of our Newport News Church, was the preacher at the 11 o'clock hour at Elon College, Sunday, April 8th. We are advised that Brother House gave a wholesome and very inspiring sermon, which was appreciated by church and community.

Easter is past and the event of the glorious resurrection is still in mind. We should show our joy in this victory of our Lord by making a missionary donation that the power of his resurrection may be felt in the world and proclaimed to many who have not realized that power in their own lives.

Rev. William E. Wisseman, Schulenberg, Texas, son-in-law of Dr. C. H. Rowland, preached at First Church, Greensboro, Sunday, April 8th, at 11 A. M., to the delight and inspiration of the entire audience. He is to be the preacher at the 11 o'clock service, Elon College, Sunday, April 15th.

The Easter offerings from the churches have begun to come in encouragingly, and many reports have come that a beginning has been made in many congregations, but that the offering will be sent in as soon as all members of the congregation and Sunday School have an opportunity of making a contribution.

"We are now back in our own church building again after being away four months," writes Rev. W. H. Garman, pastor, Old Zion Christian Church, Norfolk, Va., which means that our congregation at Old Zion have a new and ample house of worship, and we rejoice with our good brethren of that congregation in this splendid achievement.

The Mission Secretary was with Rev. J. Ray Dickens, pastor at our Auburn Church, 11 A. M., Sunday, April 8th, and at Amelia, in Johnston County, at 3 P. M. Brother Dickens is but recently beginning the pastorate of these churches and is entering upon his work with consecrated zeal and devotion. We predict for him a happy and successful pastorate among these good people.

With but two exceptions, as we now recall, all the pastors in the Eastern Virginia Conference attended one or more of the Missionary Rallies last week. The women appreciated the presence of their pastors, and our guess is that the pastors received even more from the meetings than the fellowship of the occasion than they were enabled, with all their consecrated energy, to carry into the meetings. Our Eastern Virginia pastors are wide-awake to all that pertains to their churches and the growth of the kingdom through their churches.

The former Congregationalist and Herald of Gospel Liberty comes to us in its issue of April 5th under the new and very significant name of Advance. This is noteworthy that the first item in the Table of Contents of the Advance is "Forward." This is from Dr. J. T. Stocking, minister of Pilgrim Church, St. Louis, who is chairman of the Commission on Missions. Last week the new missionary merged publication, under the name of The Missionary Herald at Home and Abroad, came and is a joy to the heart, and certainly brings a thrill as one glances through and gets a glimpse of the work that our united fellowship is undertaking in the name of our Lord at home and abroad. We wish all CHRISTIAN SUN readers would have in their homes and libraries the Advance each week, and The Missionary Herald at Home and Abroad, each month. These, with THE CHRISTIAN SUN, would keep our people informed, if read, as to the great tasks and triumphs of a glorious and a united fellowship.

Rev. W. T. Scott, pastor of our Winston-Salem Congregational-Christian Church, reports eleven members received into the membership of the church since January 1st, six of whom were on confession of faith, five by letter. These members were received in connection with the communion service on Thursday night before Easter, when the communion was observed for the first time with the use of a silver communion service donated by the Woman's Association of the church. Among the donations that would be most welcomed by our Winston congregation at this time and most helpful, if friends anywhere feel disposed to make them, would be: (a) a pulpit Bible; (b) a religious painting portraying some scene in the life of Christ, say of "Jesus Teaching," or of Hoffman's "The Christ"; (d) baptismal font; (d) draperies for the auditorium; (e) chairs and tables for the Sunday School rooms, etc. These gifts could be made as memorials of loved ones and would certainly be timely and exceedingly helpful to our very promising yet needy young Winston-Salem congregation.

Missionary Rallies were held in the three districts of Eastern Virginia last week. Tuesday, at Elm Avenue, Portsmouth, where Mrs. J. E. Cartwright presided, and where two hundred or more were in attendance at the highly interesting exercises of the day. One of the outstanding features of this Rally was the questionnaire conducted by Rev. F. C. Lester, in which the practical problems of the Societies and of our missionary work were faced. The entire program was a delightful one, and the audience seemed to enter most enthusiastically into all the proceedings of the day. Elsewhere in THE SUN we are giving the Greetings by the Chairman, Mrs. Cartwright. On Wednesday, the Nansemond District meeting was held at Holland, which was also very largely attended and had many interesting features. The presiding officer was Mrs. B. D. Jones, who, out of the abundance of her heart, and without manuscript, carried her audience to high spots in missionary fervor and enthusiasm. It was a great and good day at Holland. On Thursday, the Rally was at historical Spring Hill Church, where the Home Mission work of the Christian Church was instituted in 1876, and then through the petition of the local church, the Conference began a Home Mission work in 1867, which has been cumulative through the years and has made Eastern Virginia Conference a great power for church building and for righteousness. Mrs. E. T. Atkinson, Dendron, Va., presided and gave to the Rally the impetus of a stirring message. This meeting was not as largely attended as those on the two previous days, but made up in zeal and intensity of purpose anything that was lacking in making the day eventful and helpful. On Saturday, the 7th, the Vance-Warren District, of the North Carolina Conference, met with the church at Youngsville. Miss Margaret Alston, superintendent, presided. We have no worker more deeply interested than Miss Alston and more anxious to see her district go forward in the great work of Missions. Though the delegation was not large, the program was carried out in detail and made a real contribution to the missionary life of the District. In the four days of the Rallies last week, it is safely estimated that, at least, five hundred of our interested women and devoted pastors took counsel together as to how they might be used in deepening the spiritual life of societies, churches and communities and of giving the message of our risen and blessed Lord to those who are hungry of heart and needy of soul.

SUBSCRIPTIONS FOR MARCH.

Below are given the names of those sending in payments on their subscription during the month of March. This is the smallest list that we have had for several months. We had hoped that just before the Southern Convention met, the list would be greatly increased and we are continuing the "Special Offer" through the month of April, still hoping that many will endeavor to put themselves on a current basis before the Convention.

We greatly appreciate the cooperation of those who have made remittances and are doing our best to see that they get the best value possible in return. We would greatly appreciate constructive criticisms at this time, as they will help us in making our report and recommendations to the Board of Publication.

Sincerely yours,

THE CHALLENGE OF A NEW LEADERSHIP.

By TIMOTHY THOMAS.

There is no place in the new time for the conservative; there is no room in the new period for the radical, whether that radicalism be political or otherwise. Times are changing too rapidly for the conservative to be useful to any large degree. Conservatism is born out of man's refusal to adapt himself to changing conditions. The radical seeks action in advance of adequate plans, the result being that nothing definite or permanent is accomplished. The power of the radical mind is destroyed for a lack of patience.

The new period into which we have entered is not a return to normalcy. It is not a return to "days of prosperity" in the sense that we like to think of prosperity. We are on the threshold of a period of safe and sane stability. That stability, if properly guided and guarded, will be worth while for our social, industrial and educational progress. The length and the worth of this new era will be measured only in proportion to the thoughtfulness and ability of guiding heads who keep abreast in the march of progress, and who refrain from undertaking things in the absence of a well conceived and well developed plan. The men who shall shape the ideas and help to form the ideals of the new era must be broad of vision, sympathetic of heart, far-sighted in their planning, and noble in their purposes. Men in lowly walks of life and men who sit in the high councils of the Nation's affairs must hold an equal place in the hearts of our future leaders, if their leadership is to be telling and fruitful. Democracy is to have a new birth and embrace the cause of all men if it is to endure.

Politicians of the old order will not shape the plans or guide the forces of the next decade. That will be a task for statesmen whose thoughts and actions are in tune with the times. The American people will see well to it that those whose primary purpose is to obtain public office for personal advancement and then to use their influence for the benefit of their friends, will not sit at the council table to direct the Nation's affairs. Politics is powerful, but the voice of the American people is more powerful; and as the spirit of independence, the spirit of individual thinking, increases, old-time politicians with their narrow conception of human interest, will be forced to yield their places to a new and more enlightened leadership. Conservatives who refuse to change their methods, revise their policies, or amend their ways, must give way to a new school of thought. Self-preservation is to have a new definition.

Young men and women who have been despondent over their future career during recent years because there seemed to be no opportunity for them, have every reason to be encouraged. If they be men and women broad of vision and with a world conception, places await them in the leadership of the new time. America is seeking and demanding that new leadership, the old having faltered and failed in guiding the frailties of humanity. This needed leadership is to be in statecraft, in the business world, the educational realm, and in every profession planned and designed for man's comfort, convenience, enjoyment, alleviation of suffering, and the prolongation of life.

The period of the new leadership is to be one of work. Prolonged idleness has not, as some think, developed a desire to remain idle. It has given a heart anxiety to men for a return to their labors, to their tasks, to their occupations, where again their minds shall be occupied, their hands engaged, and where a happiness of heart and contentment of mind may be had—a happiness and contentment that money cannot buy. The new leadership, motivated by a spirit that men shall be free and happy, physically and mentally, through honest and consistent labor, will open the way for work, and through that work America will rehabilitate herself. There is no substitute for work. There is a multitude of men who have learned this burning truth in recent years. Their fictitious plans to make a living without honest effort and without a willingness and a purpose to give value received, have come to naught. They have learned that nothing can take the place of plain honesty. They have accepted the full measure and meaning of that lesson, and are now ready and willing to turn to honest toil and to the avenues of consistent and productive labor.

Work is a time-honored fundamental, a Gibraltar that the lashing waves of time have failed to move. It is mankind's safest port and strongest anchor. The new leadership will provide that port and supply that anchor. It must not fail; it will not fail!

$25,000 CAMPAIGN.

The time for this campaign has closed. A number of churches have responded—a number have not. Contributions are continuing to come in. It is not the wish of the College to encroach upon the Mission Period. In next week's issue a full report of all money received from all the churches will be made. A number of errors have been made in publishing reports. These will be corrected.

Surely there are a number of other churches that will send in a contribution. If you have made your canvass, won't you please send your contribution in immediately so that your church may appear with the final list to be published in THE SUN. L. E. SMITH, President.

One lawbreaker in the community will do more toward its corruption than all the original sin in town.—Milton Lee.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

To SUN Subscribers Who Are in Arrears:

In an effort to get the subscription list on a current basis, we are making these special offers, good until January 31st, to SUN subscribers who are in arrears:

(The Offer Is Continued Until Further Notice.)

OFFER No. 1—If you are in arrears as much as two years, send us Money Order or Check for $5.00, and we will give you credit for three whole years' subscription.

OFFER No. 2—If you are a year or more in arrears, send Money Order or Check for $3.50, and we will extend your subscription two years.

OFFER No. 3—If you are as much as three years in arrears, send us $6.00, and we will extend your subscription to July 1, 1934, giving you full credit for your back account.

Letters have been sent out during the past six months to all who were as much as three years in arrears, trying to induce them by special offers, to pay up their arrearages. Quite a few have responded. Others have paid no attention at all to these letters. If by any chance you were in this class, and did not receive our letter, Offer No. 3 will enable you to put yourself back on a current basis at a nominal cost. Even if you are unable to avail yourself of this offer at present, won't you write the undersigned, explaining the situation?

If at all possible, won't you take advantage of one of these offers, thereby not only saving yourself money, but helping your Church Paper?

All Money Orders and Checks should be made payable to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and letters should be addressed to J. T. Kernodle, Managing Editor, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond, Va.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH.

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF OUR CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE CONVENTION PROBLEMS.

The Southern Convention, to meet with our Suffolk Christian Church, Tuesday, May 1st, for a four-days' session, faces grave problems, which, if wisely solved, will require mature wisdom, spiritual insight, balanced judgment, consecrated intelligence. The depression has bulked large in our achievements the past four years and has revealed the weakness of our whole financial program. It is useless to say that one of the big problems confronting us at the Convention is that of readjusting and, in a measure, reconstructing our financial program.

The church has to be financed not by a few, who may have abundance, but by the many, who give out of their want and through self-denial. This is the foundation. Those who have, will not give of their abundance, save as the foundation of their giving is laid deep and strong in the minds and hearts of the many who show a willingness to deny themselves for the sake of their Lord. We must somehow, at the Convention, re-discover a plan and devise a system by which the burden of the church, with all of its institutions, may be shared and borne by all. It is the sharing of burdens that brings us together. Institutions unite individuals. Mighty movements for God and righteousness lift our eyes and hearts from human frailties and fix them on the high and the holy. Our Lord did not say he would draw all men unto him through the victory of his resurrection, but by the burden and suffering of the cross. The cross is the unifying force and factor of Christianity. "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me. This he said, signifying what death he should die." The drawing and lifting power of Christianity is the suffering of the cross.

We are always drawn closer together through burden-bearing and suffering than we are through triumph and victory.

Those who love any cause are the ones who have suffered and been most anxious for that cause. We must, at the Convention, find some plan of more successfully financing THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Here is a vital and essential factor of our church life. Very few are feeling the burden of financing and supporting THE SUN. Some subscribe and pay their subscriptions, even when they need the money for something else, but we are safe in saying that the great body of our church members do not share the burden and realize the task of financing and publishing THE CHRISTIAN SUN. THE SUN is a creature of the Convention, and it should represent all the best, highest and holiest that the Convention stands for and undertakes. Plans should be laid to make articulate the voice, the aspirations, the undertakings of the Convention, and then financial plans should be perfected for properly financing and adequately supporting THE SUN.

No church has ever yet prospered and gone forward unless and until it developed the missionary spirit, the spirit of building churches at home, where needed, and carrying the Gospel, as our Lord commanded, "even to the uttermost parts." We have discovered our failure in not having a plan that will carry the missionary message—that for Home Missions and Foreign Missions—to every individual of our churches. The once-a-month offering in the Sunday Schools has its appeal and brings its results, provided the appeal is made; but many fail to make the appeal. The annual offering reaches many and brings rich results, but its difficulty is in being annual only. Once a year is not enough for the missionary appeal and approach. We have made missions too remote, and wittingly or unwittingly, we have removed missions from the work of the local church and the local Conference, and have put it too far from the actual task of the church. Every Conference should have the mission work as a vital part of its effort and church work through the year. Some plan should be found at the Convention that will carry the missionary message not once or twice, but constantly and universally from the center to the circumference and throughout the whole bounds of the church.

An essential and central feature and institution of the church is our Elon. This is a child of the Convention, sponsored by the Convention, promoted through the Convention, owned by the Convention. It exists for the higher education of our youth, for the training and equipment of our ministerial students. A long time ago the State discovered that while a college graduate was a great asset to the State, his graduation had cost the State far more in actual outlay of dollars than he himself had paid or could pay. The church faces the same situation. We must give to our youths, and those who are to be our leaders, the blessings and benefits of higher education. This can only be done at great cost to the church, but it is worth ten times what it costs. Our Elon College must be more adequately financed and supported, and all of us will love it better when we feel the burden of it on our own hearts and come to the relief of it through our self-denial. These are enterprises of the church that entail burdens and bring obligations which, if met, also bring blessings and joy.

Our Orphanage is a child of the Convention and appeals to our hearts, and during this time of benevolence, rejoices with other benevolent institutions in increasing hope and in increasing income. Under its present devoted leadership and wise management, it is close to the heart of our people, and our Convention will see to it that nothing is done to hurt and everything possible is done to help continue the development of the spirit of benevolence and sweet charity throughout the church in behalf of the motherless and fatherless of our number, to whom due consideration must always be given.

The church confronts the task of recovering its soul, of recovering its spiritual activity and power. We should go to the Convention only after having spent hours and anxious moments, not only in devising plans, but in prayer to God that he will lead us and guide us, and that he will direct us in our desire to lay plans that will be pleasing in his sight and shall redound to his glory and power.

COMPLETING THE MERGER.

At our Southern Convention in May we are to face the fact of completing our merger. We have made a noble beginning. There can be no turning back. That which is needed to finish the work is that of a united effort and disposition to share the burdens and the responsibilities of all the enterprises, interests and institutions of our united body. Thus far we have united mentally by acquiescence, by friendly gestures, by willingness and anxiety to learn and to understand. Now the practical work must be done. This can and should be done without friction or danger of disintegration. We have an indigenous body functioning, which body may be used for the purpose in hand. We refer, of course, to the Southern Christian Convention. This has sprung up amongst us to meet the needs of a united fellowship and a group of Conferences which themselves function, both in co-ordinating our individual efforts and strengthening our programs and undertakings. As far as this writer is advised, several States may unite as an integer and function in the General Council just as a State Conference functions. If two or four or six States, by their own volition, unite as a Convention, why may these States thus united not sustain the same relationship to the General Council that either or each of these separate States maintain? If it is a matter of finance, the Convention would be an integral part of the General Council by sending to the treasurers of the Societies of the Council a certain per cent of their funds just as individual States now do. Say of the funds raised, if twenty per cent or twenty-five per cent of the funds are to go to the General Council from a State, why should not the Convention agree that this should be true in regard to the Convention as such? If it is a matter of administration, why cannot the Convention be used as a body through which the General Council will function and administer its affairs through the several States?

As it is well known, the Convention owns and operates institutions and enterprises. These should not be hurt but strengthened. And this can only be done by maintaining the integrity of the Convention and uniting our forces. We must integrate and not disintegrate, build up and not tear down, construct and not destroy. If we put our hearts and hands together in this constructive work, it can be done, and should be, to the satisfaction of all concerned and to the building up of the kingdom of righteousness in the several States affected.

A PREMIUM ON FAILING.

We read, with interest, the following from the Extension Farm News, Raleigh, N. C., March:

"The more fully that North Carolina farmers understand the corn-hog reduction contracts, the more enthusiastic they are about the program. The new interpretation that shows how farmers get $15 a head for each hog they fail to raise has convinced many of the benefits of signing contracts. Formerly the payments were considered as $5.00 a head on the hogs he does not raise. Around 1,000 contracts have been signed for reducing hog production 25 per cent and corn production 20 to 30 per cent."

And so the dear farmer is to get more for the "hog and hominy" he does not raise than he does for that which he does raise. So we shall have to "re-think" our economy, and revise our schedule about being industrious, and "not slothful in business."

EASTER RITES AT SUNRISE.

Sixty thousand was the estimated number of worshipers who gathered for the Easter sunrise service at Miami Beach, in a record attendance.

A mighty chorus of praise poured forth as the thousands joined in singing "My Faith Looks Up to Thee."

Dr. Elisha A. King, pastor of Miami Beach Community Church, preached the Easter sermon. He delivered the first sunrise address eight years ago, and repeated it on last Easter Sunday. Loudspeakers enabled those who were blocks away from the platform to hear every word, and on nearby apartment house roofs other listeners were gathered.

"Our presence here this morning is a tremendous demonstration of our interest in the great truth behind the Easter sunrise," said Dr. King. "Something deep in our hearts draws us to this spot and I shall undertake to interpret it as best I can."

"For countless generations devout souls have watched the sunrise with wonder and devotion. It is a most thrilling spectacle, calculated to arouse in the soul of man a sense of awe and wonder. It is not surprising that literature is full of legends about its effect upon thoughtful people. One of these legends tells us that Abraham beheld the rising sun and worshipped it, saying, 'This is my God.' But after the sun had passed the zenith and had begun to descend to the western horizon, his heart sank also.

"He watched it disappear and then the moon and stars came out. The moon became his God for the night—but finally paled before the next glorious sunrise. After due deliberation he concluded that none of these could be his God, that behind it all there must be a greater God, invisible but all-powerful.

"We are all awed by the phenomenon of the sunrise. It seems more to us than a mere mechanical, chemical, astronomical event. The informed intellect will explain it, but the heart is not satisfied. The ordinary person sees an Infinite Artist at work, splashing colors here and there and producing a moving picture that has never been equalled.

"We see in the opening of a new day the resurrection from the dark night, the awakening of a new chance, a greater opportunity to make the coming day a worthwhile day.

"Every day, therefore, is a fresh beginning, every morn is the world made new. This thought is as old as the mind of man. Thousands of years ago it was written down in Sanscrit.

"The sunrise is suggestive of another phenomenon of nature. I refer to the coming of springtime. Down here, where we have no death of winter, we do not fully appreciate the meaning of spring. And yet we see on every hand the evidences of a re-invigorated world.

"In the land of real winter and snow, we see nature gradually die in the fall, but in the spring a new life reveals itself. There is a resurrection of nature everywhere.

"The phenomenon of the sunrise can but turn our thoughts inward, and fill us with adoration. The spring's return not only provides a spectacle for the eye but it stirs the inner being of every human soul. No one can resist the spiritual upheavals of this mundane sphere in springtime. And it is because of this fact that the festival of Easter came into existence. For many years the coming of spring was observed by elaborate ceremonies, all calculated to do honor to the resurrection of life in nature.

"We of today do not usually use Eastertide for anything but the celebration of the glorious resurrection of Jesus, the world's Saviour. In our recent observance of Passion week we have followed his last days upon the earth through much sorrow and pain. His life and death are significant for us, because we believe him to be the revelation of the heart of God and the Saviour of all mankind.

"Thus the coming of the spring always means more to the Christian than the renewal of nature. It is inextricably bound up with the belief in a victorious Saviour whom death could not bind. It spells for every Christian the word immortality and Easter is a pledge of life everlasting. On Easter morning we hear the Master calling, 'I am the resurrection and the life. He that believeth on me, though he were dead, yet shall he live.'

"As the sun rises in the east and passes to the glory and beauty of the day, so may the Christ of Easter day, the Son of righteousness and love, rise anew in our hearts and flood our lives with hope and sunshine. Resurrection follows crucifixion. In every life there are dark days and Calvaries, but the Easter spirit is supreme."—The Miami Herald.

MID-YEAR SESSION OF CONFERENCE.

With "Consecration" as the theme, the Mid-Year session of the Virginia Valley Central Congregational-Christian Conference was held March 29th at the Bethlehem Church at Tenth Legion. There was a full attendance, and much interest was shown in the reports and inspirational addresses.

Rev. B. J. Earp, of Harrisonburg, the vice-president, called the Conference to order in the absence of the president, Rev. R. L. Williamson. R. C. Myers and J. C. Bradford welcomed the visitors to the Tenth Legion Church, and the response was given by Dora Life.

W. C. Wampler gave a talk on the need of consecration, saying:

"Everyone who starts out to do a piece of work has to consecrate himself to that task to complete it. To obey the greatest commandment and the one that is likened unto it requires consecration. You cannot love God, and you cannot love your fellowman without the fullest consecration on the part of the individual. The reason that the churches are not doing more than they are now is that there are too many people in the church that are not consecrated to God. The church needs consecrated men and women who are not afraid to stand up and oppose the many evils in this world of ours. Search the Scriptures, and you will find that God requires great consecration to his cause. Whenever the church becomes consecrated, God will use that church to drive out the evils that are present today."

Rev. A. R. Van Cleave, of Winchester, also gave some thoughts on the need of consecration. He emphasized that man must first realize the need of consecration of himself to God.

"We are likely to be blinded by our material needs so that we cannot realize or see our spiritual needs," he said. "When we realize our need of consecration to God, then we must act and do something about it."

Rev. A. W. Andes spoke on "The Need of a Deeper Consecration in Our Conference." He quoted Jesus as saying: "Ye are the salt of the earth, but if the salt has lost its savor, it is thenceforth good for nothing but to be trodden under foot of man."

"Has the church lost this power of helping to save the world?" he asked. "Whenever the church drifts away from Christ, the moral standard will fall. The church has lost some of its saving power, and sin has come in and taken its place. Let the church get back its saving power by the consecration of church members, and sin will be on the run. May God give us a deeper consecration to the task of driving sin out of the world."

The Conference recessed for lunch after prayer by Rev. W. B. Fuller. Luncheon was served by the Bethlehem Ladies' Aid Society. Rev. Mr. Earp called the afternoon session to order, and Mrs. A. R. Van Cleave conducted the devotionals. A business session followed. Delegates reported that their churches are improving in financial and spiritual condition.

In the absence of Dr. L. E. Smith, president of Elon College, Billy Andes, a student at Elon, brought greetings from the College and appealed to the people to support Elon College by their prayers, finance and faith in the institution.

G. W. Rothgeb spoke on the results of consecration. He said: "The church has one power and the same power at its command that it has always had, but the members of the church have drifted away from Christ. If each member would consecrate more to Christ and his cause, great things would happen. Consecration of church members to the service of the kingdom makes for the furthering of the kingdom."

Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Mission Secretary of the Southern Convention, was absent. Rev. A. W. Andes spoke briefly in the interest of the mission cause, urging upon the people the duty and the necessity of making the mission offering as large as possible during this Mission Period.

Conference adjourned to meet in Mayland in regular annual session on August 8-9, 1934.

Dr. M. L. Weekley, pastor of the local church, pronounced the benediction.

BILLY ANDES.

HE DID IT.

Somebody said that it couldn't be done,
But he, with a chuckle, replied
That "maybe it couldn't" but he would be one
Who wouldn't say no till he tried.

So he buckled right in, with a trace of a grin
On his face. If he worried he hid it.
He started to sing as he tackled the thing
That couldn't be done—and he did it.

Somebody scoffed: "Oh, he'll never do that,
At least no one ever has done it."
But he took off his coat and he took off his hat,
And the first thing we knew, he'd begun it.

With a lift of his chin and a bit of a grin
Without any doubting or quibble,
He started to sing as he tackled the thing
That couldn't be done—and he did it.

There are thousands to tell you it cannot be done,
There are thousands to prophesy failure.
There are thousands to point out to you, one by one,
The dangers that wait to assail you.

But just buckle in with a bit of a grin,
Then take off your coat and go to it,
Just start in to sing as you tackle the thing
That "couldn't be done"—and you'll do it.

—H. Krummert.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

At the last session of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference, the following were elected as delegates to the next session of the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches, Incorporated, to be held in Suffolk, Va., May 1-4, 1934: Ministers—Revs. Elisha Bradshaw, R. E. Brittle, H. C. Caviness, W. H. Garman, C. E. Gerringer, H. S. Hardcastle, W. D. Harward, Robert Lee House, W. M. Jay, I. W. Johnson, Elwood W. Jones, F. C. Lester, T. N. Lowe, Joseph E. McCauley, J. F. Morgan, N. G. Newman, O. D. Poythress, J. M. Roberts, D. M. Spence, J. H. Warren, E. B. White, John G. Truitt, R. A. Whitten, Joe French, L. E. Smith; Laymen—B. E. White, W. S. Barrett, A. L. Jolly, Col. J. E. West, Col. E. E. Holland, M. W. Hollowell, J. M. Darden, J. A. Williams, I. T. Byrd, C. D. West, R. C. Norfleet, Mrs. W. V. Leathers, M. J. W. White, Mrs. L. W. Stagg, Mrs. I. W. Johnson, W. H. Baker, C. E. Warrington, J. T. Kernodle, Mrs. J. M. Rabey, Dr. J. W. Manning, Mrs. J. A. Williams, Mrs. B. D. Jones, Miss Irene Cotten, Jesse F. West, Jr., R. R. Riedel, Dr. J. E. Rawles.

If any of the delegates find it impossible to attend, please notify Dr. N. G. Newman, President, Holland, Va., and the Executive Committee may have time to fill the vacancies. All delegates who expect to be entertained over night should notify Rev. John G. Truitt, pastor, Suffolk, Va.

The next session of the Convention is one of the most important in many years. A full delegation should attend and remain through the entire session. The work will be heavy, and will call for the best judgment and cooperation of the members. The problems of Elon College, the Mission Board, the Orphanage and THE CHRISTIAN SUN will be sufficient to occupy the time allotted for the Convention. Other boards and committees will bring weighty matters to the attention of the Convention for serious consideration and action. All these departments of the Convention are important, and have much to do with shaping the future policy and course of the United Fellowship.

Perhaps the most difficult and delicate matters to be considered at this session, will relate to the united work of the Congregational and Christian Churches in the Southeast. The real set-up of a united organization has so many angles and points of importance, that it cannot be passed over without much deliberation. Up to the present time the United Fellowship in the Southeast has not advanced very far in the matter of actual organic unity. A great many resolutions have been passed looking to this end, but Congregationalists and Christians have not made many changes in their organic methods of work. For the present it is not necessary for any radical changes to be made by either group. Congregationalists do not wish for the Christians to abandon all their methods and traditions, and adopt the methods of their brethren. And the Christians have no thought of asking the Congregationalists to do likewise. But both groups are anxious and ready to cooperate in the common tasks of the kingdom of God.

Therefore, it seems that the Convention should suggest a method of organization which should include all the Congregational and Christian Conferences and Associations, in the Southeast, from Virginia to Florida. Inasmuch as the book formerly issued by the Convention, entitled "Principles and Government of the Christian Church," is the working Constitution and By-Laws of the Convention, according to the Charter, or papers of Incorporation, certain amendments should be offered providing for the membership of said Conferences and Associations. The relation and compass of the Convention should be clearly defined. It should become a legislative body for the group, along broad lines, leaving each Conference and Association free to work out its own problems in a cooperative way. What the Southeast needs is a closer fellowship, and a clear understanding of the best methods of united work in Missions, Education and Church development. More will be said about this next week.

I. W. JOHNSON.

ONE MILLION DOLLARS.

That sounds like a lot of money, and it is! Eight to ten years ago people were talking millions, making millions, and spending millions. Individuals and corporations are not dealing in such extravagant language and large figures today. On the other hand, the government is not only talking millions, and spending millions, but it is dealing in billions of dollars. It has been the usual thing for the past year to find in large type on the front page of widely circulated daily newspapers statements to the effect that the government has appropriated so many millions of dollars, making a total in expenditures that runs into billions. Now, I see in the public press, statements as to deficits sustained by the government that amount to billions of dollars. It is the hope that this plan of spending on the part of the government may again bring great material prosperity to individuals and corporations.

If you had a million dollars today what would you do with it? As a rule, when a man earns only what he actually needs, he knows what to do with his earnings, but when his earnings exceed his actual needs, he is then face to face with the responsibility of disposing of his surplus. If he doesn't know what disposition to make of his extra money, there are always plenty of people to tell him. We have all known people with what seemed to us to be large fortunes, and in many instances these acquaintances of ours have allowed their money to slip away from them without compensation. We are constantly saying to ourselves, I wish I had the opportunity. If I had money, I would have sense enough to use it economically and invest it wisely. This is true, provided you handle what you do have safely. The man who will waste one dollar is pretty sure to waste a thousand if he gets it.

In the October, 1927, number of the American Magazine, Mr. William C. Freeman relates in a most interesting way how he made a million dollars and how he let it slip away from him. At a mature age he says, "I have made a million dollars, but I haven't a cent." In a brilliant way he began to earn money and to increase his earnings until he was receiving from the John Wanamaker Company an enormous salary, and then in a most extravagant way he began to spend his money and continued to spend it until he had not only spent the million he had, but thousands that he did not have. The million came into his hands and passed out without little benefit or value to anybody aside from himself and his family. The humiliation of the family's impoverished position far outweighed the pride that was theirs in having and spending money. Mr.

Freeman, at the evening of his life, according to his statement, was penniless. He could easily have saved ten per cent of his earnings, which would have enabled him to face the world honorably and provide for himself and his family.

In 1904, a young man living a few miles from Atlanta, Ga., inherited from his uncle's estate $10,000. He knew in advance that he was to receive this modest fortune, and it was, indeed, a fortune for a country boy. He had never had the joy of spending money, but had always craved it. He made up his mind that just as soon as it was paid to him that he would live one day as a rich man, that he would spend his entire fortune during that day, and he did. He chartered a train with all the porters at his command, rode into Atlanta, and marched down Peachtree Street, led by a brass band. He rented a hotel for his purpose, had a theatrical performance for his own benefit, and when the day was done his last dollar was spent, and he was forced to make his way back home as best he could. By this method, he called attention to himself and received wide publicity.

Do you have a million dollars? Do you have a hundred dollars, or what amount do you have, and what do you propose to do with it? There are always sellers of values awaiting your investment. They can present their lines in attractive and convincing ways and many people with small and large holdings buy gold bricks, oil stocks, gilt-edge bonds, etc., only to wake up later and find that their money is gone. But, you say, I will not listen to such sellers of values. I will invest my money in bank stock. Many have followed this course and have found themselves not only without what they have invested but confronted with a demand to turn over to the bank an amount equal to that which they had already invested. Others have invested in stocks with promise of large dividends, but find that not only did the dividends fail to materialize, but the investment itself had vanished. Still others have said, I will be more careful in investing my money; I will invest it in real estate. The story of wasted fortunes invested in this line of business is tragic.

The individual who invests his earnings altogether in material values and in material values only is awaiting a day of sad disappointment for that day will come. If you have a bit of money, why not invest a part of it in character and in character building enterprises? The greatest character building enterprise yet committed to man is the Church of God. There is a church in your community or in your city that is awaiting your investment—your investment of life, talent, and money. The church, through its daily program and its staff of workers, is constantly holding up the highest ideals and preaching the Gospel of Truth meant to redeem the individual and stabilize him for the service that he is ordained to render. When you make a contribution to your church, you make an investment that will live. For the church's benefit and her continued growth and usefulness she has endowed herself with different types of institutions. The demands made upon her by constantly developing civilization requires adequately trained men and women for the more important positions in her program for service. In order to meet these demands she has provided for her use colleges and seminaries that these who are to bear responsibilities in the days to come may be trained for such tasks. The curricula of our church institutions are designed to so guide the student in his preparation as to create within him standards of morality and justice that will insure fair play and perfect honesty in all dealings. This kind of training is essential if the church is to continue and our government is to stand.

This nation of ours began its march to influence and power across the campus of a church school. It cannot turn from this type of training and retain its power. If a nation's people are progressive, the nation itself is progressive. If a nation's people are dishonest, the nation itself is dishonest. If a nation's people are high in ideals and trustworthy in conduct, the nation itself is above reproach. The nation's people will be determined by the character and type of training they receive.

Nearly one-half a century ago the leaders of the Christian Church had the desire not only to preserve the church and make sure of her future, but to do her part in training young women and young men for future citizenship that the nation itself might be safe in the midst of a world filled with opportunities for wrong. And through these years, Elon College has been carrying out the mandates of the church and from her campus have gone individuals of worth and influence in church, state and nation. Our College is now approaching a crisis with odds in her favor. She turns with earnest longings to those who have created her with a passionate appeal for material assistance that she may be permitted to live and lay her hands of instruction and guidance upon the children and the children's children of those who gave her birth. She is today preparing to send out her appeal to all who may listen, with the hope that all may respond and respond quickly.

Do you have a million dollars? What will you do with it? Do you have a half million? How should you spend it? What disposition should you make of it? Do you have a hundred thousand dollars? What part of this could you spare for a College with the ideals, purposes and mission that Elon has? Do you have a thousand dollars that you can afford to invest in an institution that will live on, standing as a guidepost to many on the journey of life, directing them into the ways of safety and success? Do you have any amount of money that you can afford to invest in an institution whose business it is to lay for the youth of today and for the citizenship of tomorrow foundations safe and secure upon which individuals may erect living statues that shall endure for all time?

At the approaching session of the Southern Christian Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches to be held at Suffolk, Va., May 1st-4th, the future of Elon College will be determined so far as the Congregational and Christian Churches are concerned. I hope, my dear reader, that you may be present for this session of the Convention.

L. E. SMITH, President.

THREE GARDENS.

By REV. G. H. VEAZEY.

I. THE GARDEN OF OPPORTUNITY.

In a garden planted Eastward, God once placed a happy pair;
 Just to dress and keep it wholesome, was their only worldly care.
 Like a serpent, Satan met them, and his cunning work began;
 He at once beguiled the woman who became the fall of man.
 Then at once their eyes were opened, and they felt an awful shame;
 Just because they ate the "Apple," hoping thus for earthly fame.
 When the Father came at evening, and to Adam he did call:
 "You have done the thing forbidden, now you must endure the fall."

II. THE GARDEN OF SUFFERING.

There's a garden near a city where our blessed Saviour prayed
 For those lost in sin about him—the great offering was made.
 There he prayed unto the Father, till his sweat became as blood—
 Not his will would he accomplish, but the holy will of God.
 Roman soldiers came and took him to weak Pilate's judgment hall,
 There the thorns were placed upon him—our dear Saviour, best of all;
 Then the Cross he bore up Calvary, where he suffered, bled and died;
 Our salvation there was finished, for our Lord was crucified.

III. THE GARDEN OF HOPE.

In this garden was a grave where no man had ever lain,
 There they placed the precious body of our Saviour, who was slain;
 The disciples' hopes were blighted, while their Lord lay in the grave,

But the tomb could not contain him; he arose, the world to save.
 Roman guards were placed on duty, that his body they might keep;
 God above released the Saviour; and the guards were not asleep.
 Women went to anoint the body of their Saviour, who was slain:
 "He's not here," the Angel told them; he had said, "I'll rise again."

THIS IS NO JOKE.

Kansas, a pioneering state in the cause of prohibition, is made the butt of many jokes because of its dry attitude. It is no joke, however, what Kansas has reaped as a result of its bone-dry law. In Kansas there are:
 Fifty-four counties without any insane; fifty-four counties have no feeble-minded; ninety-six counties with no poorhouses; fifty-three counties without any persons in jail; fifty-six counties without any representatives in the state penitentiary.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary

THE BIGGEST "SHOW."

Dr. Stanley High, internationally known author and journalist, calls attention to the fact that the biggest and most largely attended "show" that New York has put on this year was not the automobile show, widely heralded through the metropolitan press as one of the greatest shows of the year, nor the bicycle races, nor any theatrical performance or any athletic attraction. The biggest show that New York has put on within a year was her missionary exhibit, and for the first time, possibly, in years the authorities had to limit the daily attendance at this missionary exhibit. Let SUN readers get Mr. High's own words as he gives them to the Missionary Herald:

"And here is a missionary postscript. New York is a city of shows—big, small and in-between. Well, right at present, the biggest show in town isn't the auto show. That finished last week. It isn't the six-day bicycle race in Madison Square Garden—if there is one. The biggest show in town is missionary.

"Some time ago the Roman Catholic Society for the Propagation of the Faith laid plans for a modest exhibition of its activities. To house it, the Society arranged to use the relatively modest dining room of the Commodore Hotel. Last week the exhibits were moved in, and catalogued, the exhibitors assigned to their booths and the doors thrown open.

"Well, the first thing they had to do was to call out the police reserves. Word got abroad and delegations poured in by the ten thousand—not only from New York, but from Boston, Pittsburgh, Bridgeport and Trenton. The authorities had to put a limit on the attendance—fifty thousand per day. Children from New York's 400 parochial schools swarmed to the Commodore in such numbers that the quotas had to be cut to 10,000, and, when that didn't relieve the congestion, to 3,000. And all this to see exhibited the work of the Dominicans in China, to hear Father Hasson tell of his work among the tribes of Southern Nigeria; to look at the statuary which portrays the ministry of the nuns of the Franciscan Missionaries of Mercy among the lepers; to crowd around the booth of the Catechists while one of their number recounted the story of their Christian service in the adobe huts of the Mexicans in Texas, New Mexico and Arizona. I tried to get into the Commodore dining room a day or two ago. I couldn't make it. The place was as jammed as Times Square at a rush hour.

"And that crowd, remember, was out to see neither a king of jazz nor a queen of Hollywood—but to look at an exhibition of the work of Christian missins."

J. O. ATKINSON, Sec'y.

MANY-SIDED SERVICE.

By MISS D. P. CUSHING,
News Editor, the American Board.

"If you had had any intention of seeking a mother-in-law, you would not have returned this time from America," said a Chinese woman in a small village as she chatted with Miss Carolyn T. Sewall, of Tientsin, North China, known throughout New England and Florida as "the children's missionary." "We are glad you are back. By the way, how do you search for a mother-in-law in your country?"

Whereupon, Miss Sewall, who was born in Plymouth, Mass., and graduated from Mt. Holyoke College, endeavored to explain how the marriage question is settled in America where boys and girls mingle freely and select their own partners. Strangely enough, the idea seemed to meet with general approval. "That is certainly a better method," agreed her listeners. "For then you have some way of knowing whether the parties chiefly concerned are likely to be agreeable to each other." And then the pathetic state of many Chinese village women among whom Miss Sewall tours extensively came out, for her hostess added the hopeless sentence, "But our girls haven't the ability. They couldn't run an independent home. And if no one wanted them, what would they do to earn a living?" A ray of hope was brought by Miss Sewall as she told them about what an education could do in fitting the girls for this type of freedom.

You must correct your mental picture, warns Miss Sewall, if you are thinking of villages in terms of New England or of most any part of the United States. "I wonder whether it is possible for one who does not know these country Chinese women, to understand their limited mental horizons? They have lived their whole lives within the bounds of the village walls. They are not stupid, but their intelligence operates in a very small circle. Closed to them is the entire world of books, magazines or daily papers, so their knowledge of the outside world is confined to what they call 'heard say.' That is one reason why they are so glad to see me. I bring them a bit of the great outside world that lives only in their imaginations. Spiritually speaking," she adds, "these people hunger and thirst for knowledge." The little school in one village costs $75.00 a year, but it was threatened with closure because of lack of funds. One spring, their wheat was cleaned out by grasshoppers, and that same fall the crops practically ruined because of floods.

In looking over Miss Sewall's snapshots which she brought back from America, one keen young farmer commented, "They must have cost enough to get a person through the winter." "And they probably did," adds Miss Sewall.

So it can be seen why Miss Sewall also is throwing herself so completely into the development of work at Nan Meng Industrial School, where home industries and handcrafts are being taught in an effort to raise the economic level of the people by showing them how to make things that can be sold in a home market. The school also teaches them how to raise good chickens and do gardening.

HEEDING THE CALL—WHEN AND HOW?

Greetings from the President of the Norfolk District Rally, Elm Avenue Church, Portsmouth, Tuesday, April 3rd:

In behalf of Elm Avenue Church and her organizations, we extend to all a glad welcome. We would speak for the officers of this Rally and say:

1. To the visitors in our midst—We invite you to have a voice in our deliberations.
2. To the ministers—We want to tell you how we appreciate your interest and cooperation.
3. To the representatives from the various Societies—On you we have always depended for the success of the Rally.

Our theme is, "Heeding the Call—When and How?"

With that in mind, let us together re-think "Why the Rally?" Are we satisfied with its progress, its purposes and achievements?

The Rally came into existence to meet a local need. The Eastern Virginia Woman's Convention wanted every church to have a part in the work, and this could best be effected through organized Societies.

After fourteen years, how well we, as pastor and people, have heard and heeded the call, we leave to your imagination. This district has received largely. If we have failed to grow, it is because we have left out that leavening influence—others. We have ten churches with nine Woman's Missionary Societies; six Young People's Societies; seven Junior Societies. We older folks say, "we know by experience." Youth has faith in itself, in others and in God, and steps out to do and dare. Jesus' plan did not leave out the boys, neither can we. Their energies are seeking an outlet. They need our guidance and experience. We need their faith and enthusiasm. The need now is—growth through organization and education. We lack knowledge of facts. This is necessary to stimulate interest in ourselves and others. A program of missionary education in every church would change the reading of our spiritual thermometer. Our problem is to find these who are willing to assume responsibility. We are preoccupied with other things and fail to see Christ's ideals are not being applied in the family life, the social and economic life, nor in the religious life. These needs concern us because they are Christ's needs. We use a lot of high-sounding words and phrases—as loyalty, standards, learn to discriminate, do not substitute. We say this is an age characterized by the application of Christian principles to the whole of life. We clothe ourselves in the garb of righteousness on Sunday, and, on Monday, we say Christianity and industry will not mix. We aim to make Christ Lord of the whole man—when he is at work, at play and alone, and our slogan is—“Save America first, live unto yourself.” We do not know the meaning of our words—Christian personality, Christ-like living—religion in action is the need today. The purpose of dividing the Conference into districts, was, I repeat, to increase organizations and to create leaders. To bring the workers into closer contact that the wisdom of one Society might be the wisdom of all, or that a group of Christians banded together, with a common purpose, might be a power group—a channel through which the missionary spirit would flow into every organization of the church.

That the church is under fire is a hopeful sign, for after all, it is what we are under fire that counts. The application of the Gospel is the way out of our difficulties. It is adequate to solve our every problem. We have the remedy, but we are callous and indifferent. We join the critics within and without the church. We allow discouragement to wrap itself about us and stifle effort. We face the wrongs of the social order. When, in times like these, we need to present a united front against secularism, materialism and atheism. When will we see and heed the need of trained Christian leaders? Ask any church without a Young People's Society—“Why?” and they, most of them, reply, “We can't find a leader.” Send one or more of your brightest young women to a Summer School of Missions. Certainly, it is a bit expensive, but you will soon get returns far beyond your investment.

After these number of years, it is hard to say what we have achieved. We have worked and prayed. We are interested in life, in creative influence. Our leadership is stronger. We are builders in the church today, and the church moves forward. The “W. M. B. Code” challenges us to greater service. The Code is no new thing. It is as old as Christianity. Jesus had a Builders' Code. It was his program, his plan, the task with its requirements, and he had trained leaders. When he sent them out on their jobs, he told them they would often fail. They did not question his wisdom. He said, “Go”—and they accepted the challenge. After 1900 years, that same challenge comes down to you and to me. But the “Go” seems more urgent.

This morning, we have pledged our allegiance to the “Loyalty Recovery Act.” It is going to take a lot of courageous and devoted leadership to keep abreast of the difficulties and problems which face us. To hold the ground we already have, we must gain more ground. We shall need to put more value on that inner poise, that we may give assurance to those who follow. We are going to need a lot more faith to see visions when the clouds hang low, if we would lift the level of life for those who seek our guidance. Never was the opportunity so great, the need more apparent. Let us together forget the scarred battlefields of yesterday, and move forward—

We must find God again, and go his way.”

The Methodist Episcopal Church has had encouraging results in a month of special evangelism throughout India. For example, in round figures, 800,000 people have listened to the Christian message; 13,000 are under instruction; there were 1,900 baptisms; there were 3,900 professed conversions; 1,200 were received into full church membership; 42,000 Gospel portions were sold.

BRITISH NAVAL OFFICERS “CONVERTED.”

By THE RT. REV. BISHOP LANDER,
Formerly of Hong Kong.

In 1907, I had occasion to go down to visit the church in Pakhoi, South China, and the Admiral of the British Fleet gave me a lift on a British cruiser. The officers said, “Frankly, we don't believe in missions at all. We think missionaries do far more harm than good.”

“That is interesting to me,” I replied, “because you have seen more than I have. It would be a good plan if we had a good look around this mission at Pakhoi, and see what there is to be seen! Come ashore with me for two or three days. If you are right, then I will undertake to write to the Society and ask that the missionaries be withdrawn, that their stipends be stopped and the work be closed down.”

We arrived, and had a great deal of difficulty in landing. We found a number waiting in the church for confirmation. The eight naval officers saw all that was going on. After the service in the church, we went into the general hospital and saw Dr. Bradley and Dr. Thompson and English nurses at work among the Chinese. Then we went on to the Leper Hospital, where there were a large number of lepers. I said to one of the officers: “What do you think about the missionaries?” He looked at me and replied: “I was blind and now I can see!”

Next day we came back to the ship. After a while I said: “What about it, men?”

“Bishop,” they replied, “we had no idea that there was a work like that. We have been entirely misinformed and are quite willing to be subscribers.” There is a bed there now bearing a glass plate with this inscription: “This bed is supported by the officers and the men of ‘.....’ ship.”—Conquest by Healing.

ESTABLISH FINANCIAL FREEDOM IN YOUR CHURCH—IT CAN BE DONE.

Put your church on a paying basis! Let the time-tested Layman Company's Tithing Pamphlets do the work. These pamphlets as issued by the Layman Company offer every church a most effective education. They have convinced people by the thousands. Send sixty cents to the Layman Company and you will receive thirty 8-page pamphlets, which can be used for general circulation; three sermons; one account book; two short, convincing playlets; one copy of our new text-book, “The Scriptural Basis for the Tithe.”

The church that is carefully, wisely and systematically taught to tithe will become a tithing church, free from financial difficulties. Sample package, sixty cents.

Please mention THE CHRISTIAN SUN; also give your denomination. The Layman Company, 730 Rush St., Chicago, Ill.

A BIBLE WOMAN'S EXAMINATION.

Who can measure the influence of an unlettered Bible woman as she goes about telling the life of Jesus and his atonement? A missionary was examining a group of these women, among them one with very little education. She could write very little, so was given an oral examination, for she was earnest and very anxious to pass. She was asked to relate the story of the trials and crucifixion of Jesus. She told the story in the simple, vivid manner of the Indian people, but when she came to the climax and was describing Christ on the Cross, she broke down and sobbed. When she could speak again, she said: “I don't care if I never pass the examination; I cannot tell more; he died for me!”—Woman's Missionary Friend.

BOBBY'S LESSON.

It was baking day and mother was busy as she could be creaming the butter and sugar for the cup cakes. Baking day at this house was always a joyous occasion for Ruth and Bobby, for they were allowed to stay in the kitchen and taste and sample the different things that were finished, but today something had happened to Bobby's temper. Nothing that was done seemed to please him. He was usually a happy little four-year-old that when he had these fussy little spells mother always tried her best to find out the reason and correct it. So, today she watched him carefully as he and Ruth played.

“Now, it would be better if it was cocoanut, 'stead of caramel,” Bobby complained.

Ruth was a little disappointed, but tried to get him interested in guessing how many cakes the batter would make.

“I'll guess fourteen,” volunteered Ruth.

“I don't care what it'll make. Don't want to guess,” rudely answered Bobby.

Wasn't that ugly for him to act that way?

Several more attempts made by Ruth to get him to playing, made him still worse. He sat down on the floor and sulked.

Up to that time mother had not said a word, but she decided to try her hand at making Bobby happy again, for, you know, mothers can't have little ugly boys around. They make every one uncomfortable.

Mother decided that the best thing to do was to leave Bobby to himself, so she helped Ruth onto a stool and gave her a small mixing bowl with a little batter.

“Now, dear, you help mother and we'll soon have the baking done. Bobby doesn't care to play or talk to us, so we'll play he isn't here.”

Soon Ruth was having such a good time helping mother, that she really forgot that Bobby was there, but mother did not forget. She watched him out of the corner of her eye. First he sulked, then he began to fidget; then he began to try to see what they were mixing, but mother wisely kept herself in the way. After a little while of being really lonely and left out of the fun, Bobby got up and came over to the table.

“Let me see, too,” he begged.

“Why, hello Bobby; I had almost forgotten that you were here. Are you sure you want to help us?” said mother.

“Yes, mother, and I'm sorry I was so cross. I must have been a little sick.”

Mother smiled a knowing smile, for she knew that, in spite of his flimsy excuse, he had learned his lesson.—Baptist Standard.

STUDENTS AND THE GOSPEL.

Over 100,000 young students in America have recently signed up as members of a Pocket Testament or School Bag Gospel League, agreeing to carry and read the Bible habitually. It is a part of the movement, promoted by George T. B. Davis, to lead people back to the Bible as the source of wisdom, strength and inspiration. In this way many have been led to accept Christ as their personal Saviour, more than 1,000 ministers are cooperating in the distribution and follow-up work. In some places revivals have resulted, and Jews, Japanese and others have been led to Christ.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

IS OUR RELIGION WRONG?

The women of Eastern Virginia in their Missionary Rallies last week asked themselves some very important questions, and answered them very frankly. They sought to find the greatest failures in their organization and to know why so few people have gone from the Christian Church of the South to the mission fields.

It was pointed out that only three men and their wives have gone from American shores as missionaries from our Southern Church. They were Mr. and Mrs. T. E. White and Rev. and Mrs. D. P. Barrett to Porto Rico, and Dr. and Mrs. M. J. W. White to the Philippine Islands. Why have not more gone?

One answer was that we are not so well educated as are other denominations around us. We have had few seminary graduates for ministers until recently, and many of them are not now. Many have not even been college graduates. The ideals of the church have lagged because the ministry was not educated. Our people do not read, and have not the international outlook.

Another said the reason centers in our religion. We have sought and found a religion that saves from violent sin, and gives a peace of heart, and a hope of heaven. With this we have been content. We have listened to the preachers, and especially to the evangelists, without going directly to the Gospels and Jesus for our ideas concerning religion. Christians have to share, but we have been content to receive. Christ was always giving, but we want to get something for ourselves. Until we gather about the Cross of Christ and listen to his message, we will not have many missionaries going from our churches.

Do you think these are fair criticisms of your church and mine? Are you willing for these same things to be said about our church ten years from now? It will be said unless those who are now young help to change the situation! To educate our ministers and members, and to deepen our religious experience to the point that giving gets to the center—this is your task and mine, and it is worthy of our best efforts.

THE SOUTHEAST FELLOWSHIP.

On May 3rd, next, the Youth Fellowship of the Southeast will be in session at Suffolk, Va. The Southern Convention will be in session at the same time and place. This is the second biennial meeting of the young people.

Organization should be completed, and officers elected for the next two years. There will be great speeches by people like Mr. Ralph Shrider, a young missionary from China, who will illustrate his talk with pictures; Dr. Erwin L. Shaver, Director of Leadership Training of the Congregational and Christian Churches, and probably Dr. W. P. Minton, erstwhile Mission Secretary for the Christian Church.

Representatives from every section of the Southeast should be present. And, of course, Eastern Virginia will have a crowd present. This is the BIGGEST event for our young people that will take place in two years. You cannot afford to miss it. Plan now to be in Suffolk, Va., for May 3, 1934, without fail.

The present officers are President, Herman Truitt, Reidsville, N. C.; Vice-President, Edward Debois, Miami Beach, Fla.; Secretary, Nell Simonds, Southern Pines, N. C.; Assistant Secretary, Elizabeth Sharpe, Waverly, Va.; Treasurer, Aubrey Todd, Elon College, N. C.; Devotional Life Superintendent, Mable Smith, Greensboro, N. C.; Service Superintendent, Birdie Rowland, Greensboro, N. C.; Leadership Training Superintendent, Annie Campbell, Waycross, Ga.; Publication Superintendent, Carl Key, Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn.; Editor-in-Chief, Rev. F. C. Lester, 505 S. Main Street, Norfolk, Virginia.

Who will fill these offices for the next two years?

VACATION BIBLE SCHOOLS.

Is your Sunday School planning to have a Vacation Bible School this summer? The children always delight in such a school, when proper preparation has been made and good teachers are among the workers.

The church should not lose the opportunity of getting its message over to the growing childhood and youth. Vacation offers an excellent chance for this work. The children are not busy with other duties, but may be busy learning things they need not to know unless the church directs their leisure.

Now is the time to make plans for the Vacation School. Set the date. Select leaders. Secure materials. Let the leaders have time to plan for every part of the program. Announce the date so all can arrange their vacations so the children can attend. Boost the school. Make it popular.

In my judgment, most churches can do more in ten days of Vacation Schools to get over the Christian message than they usually do in six months in the regular Sunday School.

Don't wait for someone else to suggest this matter. Do it yourself. If you need help, call on the Board of Christian Education. The editor of this page is chairman of the board, and is glad to answer questions, furnish materials, and in some instances it may be possible to furnish helpers.

WHAT IS A BUDGET?

A budget isn't sums to me;
It's happy school girls' faces,
It's tired, sick mothers getting well,
It's light in gloomy places.
It isn't just long columns full
Of "headachy" addition;
It's missionaries sailing out
To fill a Great Commission.
It's you and I, who'd like to go,
And send our gifts to prove it;
How wonderful a budget is!
It lives, and so I love it.

NEW TESTAMENTS AGAIN.

People seem to forget that the Board of Christian Education is anxious to send copies of the New Testament and Psalms to be presented to all children in our Sunday Schools on their tenth birthday. There is no charge for this service. Just give us the names, addresses, and birth dates of the children, and we will gladly send the books.

One little fellow had received his book only a short time before he was taken ill. When on his death-bed he called for his book and held it in his arms while life ebbed away. Many of them greatly appreciate, and use the books. You can help the boys and girls in your Sunday School by getting the books for them. Please remember that the books are to be given to 10-year-old children only.

PUBLIC WORSHIP.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC, APRIL 22, 1934.

Hebrews 10:19-25.

In discussing the main topic, "The Importance of Public Worship for Christian Living," there are several preliminary questions that may be asked, such as:

What is worship? The leader should be sure to have a definition from the dictionary to offer after the young people have expressed their ideas, or the pastor may be asked to define worship.

Does worship seem to affect the lives of church attendants? What accounts for the fact that so many people do not go to church regularly? Is it the fault of the church, of worship, or of the people themselves?

Can you recall any definite results that you have had from attendance at any service of worship? Has it helped you in specific ways? Was it because of a great speech, or was it primarily because you attended with a desire to get something out of it, with a mind prepared to enter into the whole service?

Why does a Christmas service often impress us more than the regular services? Is it because the sermon is better, or is it because we attend in the mood of worship?

The world is so full of sorrows and evil that most of us find it hard to keep up our courage and our good resolutions. In the first century when the Christians were brutally persecuted they came together to pray to strengthen their faith. We need that still.

Most of us live much of our lives without thinking about God. We go to church knowing that we may find God there. Of course, he is everywhere about us, but we ignore him. One result of worship together on Sunday should be that we realize his presence all about us throughout the week.

The order of service may be divided into the five following heads:

1. Instrumental Music. Worship should begin with the musical prelude. The prelude is intended to bring us into the mood of reverence. We should be greatly helped if we begin to worship thoughtfully.

2. Hymns. Many of us like to sing. But worship is more and more singing. That is why real hymns alone should be used in worship. Hymns are expressions, in fine poetic language, of the deepest desires of our hearts. They grew out of the experiences of the poets, and they express what we feel in our noblest moments.

3. Scripture. In many churches two passages of Scripture are read: one by the minister, the other responsively by the minister and people. How many times do we read words without thinking about them? How many people have been helped throughout the week just because in reading a Psalm they caught a phrase which was just suited to their needs?

4. Prayer. In his prayer the pastor often helps his congregation more than he helps them with his sermon. He reaches us "Where we live"—reminds us of good fortune and of our sin, turns our minds to the needs of others, assures us that God can help us, speaks to God in our behalf. He stands much in the place Jesus did: interpreting God to us and bringing us into the presence of God. It is not that God listens to ministers alone; it is rather that the pastor leads us in prayer.

JESUS TEACHES FORGIVENESS.

LESSON III—APRIL 15, 1934.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Forgive us our debts, as we have also forgiven our debtors."—Matt. 6:12.

LESSON TEXT: Matthew 18:15-35.

A lesson on forgiveness is in point. We live in a world in which offenses are bound to come. Sooner or later we run up against those who do us wrong, who offend us, who sin against us. In some instances it is done unconsciously; in other instances it is done deliberately. In either case it is difficult to overlook it or to forgive it. Sometimes the wounds are deep and they are slow and hard to heal. We are human. Just how far ought we to go in the matter of forgiveness? Granted that we forgive those who do us wrong the first time, are we under any obligation to forgive them the second time? Does it make any difference whether we forgive them at all, especially if we do not try "to get even" with them? But more to the point, are we to go on forgiving folks again and again?

That was Peter's question—"Lord, how oft shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him? Until seven times?" That question probably came out of Simon Peter's experience. He had probably had some folks who had "treated him dirty" or "given him a bad deal," or who had sinned against him more than once. And he thought he would be magnanimous in his spirit of forgiveness—he suggested that seven times might be a most generous gesture. And it was, for him and for us. If anyone of us had to forgive anybody seven times for the same sin, we would feel as if we ought to have a halo around our head. We would feel that we were under no obligation to go any further.

But Jesus said, "I say unto thee, not until seven times; but until seventy times seven." Jesus meant that there should be no limit to forgiveness, either as to the nature or the number of offenses. Seventy times seven, that means indefinitely, without limit. It is a hard saying and we cannot bear it. But Jesus meant it. He meant that our patience was to be inexhaustible and our forgiving love infinite.

And then Jesus told a story. And as always his stories put the abstract truth in an attractive and imperishable form. He told the story of how a man owed his master a sum totaling twelve million dollars, and of how when his master made a reckoning with him, he fell at his feet and besought him to be patient with him, promising to pay him in full. Moved by the servant's plea, the master freely forgave the full sum of the debt. But the man who had been so magnanimously forgiven of a debt of twelve million dollars went out and had one of his fellowmen cast into prison because he owed him seventeen dollars. When the master learned of this dastardly deed, he immediately had the first man arrested and cast into prison, "till he should pay all that was due him." Jesus then adds the serious and solemn words, "So, likewise, shall your heavenly Father do also unto you, if ye from your hearts forgive not every one his brother their trespasses."

It would seem that the story would need no interpretation. Its moral is, or should be clear. Every one of us has been forgiven by God, not only once but again and again, of debts that we could never, never pay. God in Christ has freely forgiven us our sins. And no matter how often we have sinned against him, whenever we have gone to him in sincerity and in penitence and confession, he has forgiven us. There is no limit to his patience or to his infinite forgiving love. The word stands steadfast and sure—if we confess our sins he is faithful and just (or righteous) to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness. And, says Jesus, because this is true, we ought to likewise forgive those who sin against us. Indeed, the man who refuses to forgive his fellowman his trespasses does not realize how incongruous and inconsistent his action is. The debt which God has forgiven us is in comparison to anything that we have to forgive our fellowmen as 12,000,000 is to 17. It would be a comedy if it were not such a tragedy.

For it is a tragedy. The man who does not forgive, and forgive from the heart, those who have sinned against him, no matter what they have done, cannot be forgiven of God. God forgives, if and only as, we forgive. This is not because God is arbitrary or spiteful. God does not say, "All right, if you do not forgive, I'll get even with you—I'll not forgive you." It is not like that at all. Forgiveness by God depends upon an attitude of mind and heart in the one who is forgiven. The willingness to forgive is a condition on which God can forgive. As long as a man has the spirit of unforgiveness or revenge or malice or hatred in his heart God will not, because he cannot, forgive. The man who thinks that God has forgiven him when he has bitterness in his heart against another, is fooling himself. There was no note of exultancy in Jesus' voice when he said, "If ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father which is in heaven forgive you your trespasses." Those were probably some of the hardest words that Jesus ever had to speak.

But why all this exposition about forgiveness? And why so many references to this matter of forgiveness in the Scriptures? The simple but tragic answer is that there is so much of this deadly spirit of unforgiveness in the hearts of so many people. Alas for all those who have arbitrarily cut themselves off from divine forgiveness by refusing to exercise human forgiveness. All sin is deadly, of course. But there is no sin more deadly than the sin of refusing to forgive others. For not only does it spoil life in its horizontal relationships, it kills life in its perpendicular relationships. The man who is on "the outs" with his fellowman, is not and cannot be right with God.

Need it be added that the Lord Jesus practiced what he preached? He forgave from his heart all those that sinned against him. And perhaps the classic example of it was his prayer of forgiveness on the cross. Behold, he has given us an example!

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR NOTES.

tian Churches, the sermon has a larger part in the service than in most Catholic and Episcopal Churches. That is because we believe that religion must be reasonable, must appeal to the mind. What is a sermon? It is an effort on the part of the minister to help people understand God's will for our lives. It is usually an attempt to explain some part of the Bible in terms of our present needs. But a sermon does not do its work unless people in the pews listen with open minds and sympathetic spirit. YOU help to make the sermon.

The final five or ten minutes of discussion should be spent in examining your own church-going and worship habits, in the light of the evening's discussion. With the pastor's help, work out a plan by which you will try to get the greatest good out of the church services for the next month.

MONDAY.

HIS BLESSINGS.

"Hearken unto me, O ye children; for blessed are they that keep my ways."—Prov. 8:32.

David said, "My cup runneth over." This overflowing cup was to him divine abundance in all good things; truth was divine truth; labor was God's work; every day was the Lord's Day; every home was a house of God, and every person was a temple of the Lord.

Everything that he hath made is beautiful. The earth is a giant cup whose fullness, of the good and the great, the loving and the sweet, the true and the noble, overflows with embarrassing lavishness and delight; and the best of it runs last as in the case of Jesus turning water to wine at the marriage feast. When we shall sit down with him on his throne, have fellowship with him and be like him, then the hosts of glory will all sing:

"All hail the power of Jesus' name,
And crown him Lord of all."

It is not the study of God just to save us, but to save us overflowing, so that when we look back over the past, we can say, "The Lord God hath blessed us in all the work of our hands."

Prayer—O God, suffer us not to part from thy way. If we have sinned forgive us, Lord. If we have departed from thy way, forgive us, and draw us back to thee. Make us thine this day. We ask it in the name of Jesus.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"He will be very gracious unto thee at the voice of thy cry; when he shall hear it, he shall answer thee."—Isa. 30:19.

We have heard many witnesses to answered prayer. One said, "I never was deeply interested in any object, I never prayed sincerely and earnestly for anything, but it came; at sometime—no matter how distant a day—somehow, in some shape, probably the last I should have devised—it came."

The work began when first your prayer was uttered,
And God will finish what he has begun.
If you will keep the incense burning there,
His glory you shall see sometime, somewhere.
O soul, be patient; thou shalt find
A little matter mend all this;
Some strain of music in thy mind,
Some praise for skill not spent amiss.

—Robert Bridges.

As I begin another day,
I pray thee, Lord, to guide my way
To all a loving kindness show,
Thy blessings see, thy mercies know.
And should I fail my part to take,
Teach me thy way for Jesus' sake.—The Gideon.
—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

PATIENT OR PROUD?

"The patient in spirit is better than the proud in spirit."—Eccl. 7:8.

"In your patience possess ye your souls."—Luke 21:19.

The blessedness of patience is manifold. "He that endures to the end shall be saved." "He that ruleth his spirit is better than he that taketh a city." "We glory in tribulations also; knowing that tribulation worketh patience."

To come to that patience of being well-balanced in all things, having true and perfect poise of soul, is the one big thing which companionship with Christ gives us.

As we fight on for him, one by one we see the fantastic, the one-sided, the wrongs of life passing away, and taking their place is the true and the real, the straight and the right, the good and the holy. These never lift up in pride.

It is a blessed state to have a spirit that moves with certainty but is never arrogant; that takes things serenely, but never over-enthusiastic; that is rich in the peace that passeth understanding, but is never too proud to stoop in sympathy with the conditions of one's fellowman. This is the life to which men come, through long years of following Jesus.

Prayer—O Lord, our God, we pray for that state where all is loveliness, power and love; for the sublimest qualities which give us possession of our souls, and in which thou hast dominion over us in acts, feelings, thoughts, conditions, qualities, spirit, soul and mind.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

CONFESSING CHRIST.

"Whosoever, therefore, shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father."—Matt. 10:32.

Confessing Christ and honoring him before others in our actions and conversations is one of our most difficult tasks. It is literally impossible unless there is an abandonment of self, a dedication to God and a companionship with God that supersedes all our feelings.

Our chief difficulty seems to lie in our self-consciousness, and in our concern in what others may think about it. We are told that "among the chief rulers also many believed on him; but because of the Pharisees they did not confess him, lest they should be put out of the synagogue; for they loved the praise of men more than the praise of God." That is just the way so many are; to hold the favor of men and their jobs, they keep their mouths shut.

We are not that way in affairs. Most folks do not mind joining a political party and letting the world know where they stand politically. To do so wins political crowns. If they fail, they at least have the consolation of having stood for something. Why should they be different about Christ? There is no failure with him! Well, it must be due to our own weakness, and to the ruse of the devil to take advantage of that weakness to keep us from confessing him. Someone has aptly said, "The devil will not let you testify for God if he can help it."

On the other hand, we are led to marvel at the ease with which confession is made when we let ourselves go and also we marvel at the blessings of joy that flow into our souls when we open our souls to him.

Prayer—Dear Lord Jesus, we believe thee, help thou our unbelief and forbid that we shall give any quarter to the devil and his wooings. Give us strength to resist him that he may flee from us. In Christ's name, we ask it.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

AN EMERGENCY GOD.

"In my distress, I cried unto the Lord and he heard me."—Psalm 120:1.

"God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in time of trouble."—Psalm 46:1.

This Scripture is the witness of the Psalmist regarding the help of God in time of trouble. Taking it alone and referring to our nature to call upon the supreme power in time of trouble, one might lapse into the idea of calling on God only in such times, and overlook how it is that, in such an emergency, God hears us, and how it is, that we are conscious of that help. The secret is: in every-day living. To live a saving life every day makes God's help in an emergency possible, natural, normal and most real. It is the full mill pond that turns the wheels when the gates are opened. If the miller has been careless and left the gates open, there will be no water to turn the wheels when grinding is needed. If leaks have been stopped when they appear there is less danger of the breaking of the dam in the flood season. So it is in living with God every day.

It was Martha who said to Jesus, "If thou hadst been here my brother would not have died" (John 11:21). Many of us look back and see wherein certain things would never have happened if we had taken the Lord with us.

We have read the story of a Prince who, when a child, gained for himself the name of "Little Ten Minutes," because always when told to do something, he would say, "Give me ten minutes more," and his mother always indulged him. Who could have dreamed that this habit would one day cost him his life? But it did.

Terrible must be the anguish of a mother to realize that her indulgence has sealed the fate of her child when a little firmness in promptness and obedience might have averted the tragedy.

So the discipline of living for God, with God, and in honor of him, each day, may not only avert soul tragedy, but will put at our disposal heaven's resources in time of emergency.

Salvation is not merely recovery from a wrecked past, but a forestalling of a damaged future. It is living a life that prevents downfall. The sweetest side of any fruit is that toward the sun. After it is dwarfed by shadows, it is hard to be changed. As the sun is to fruit, so Christ is to life.

"Would a man 'scape the rod?"

Rabbi Ben Karsook saith:

"See that he turn to God
The day before his death."

"Ay, could a man inquire
When it will come?" I say,
The Rabbi's eye shoots fire—
"Then let him turn today!"

—Browning.

Prayer—(Say the Lord's Prayer.)

SATURDAY.

TEST EARTHQUAKES.

"What is a man, that thou shouldst . . . try him every moment?"—Read Job 7:11-18.

In regions subject to earthquakes the construction of houses that will withstand seismic shocks is a matter of great importance, and now the physicists are seeking to solve the problem experimentally. Model houses and other miniature buildings are set up on a small steel platform, and then the platform is shaken and rocked and twisted to imitate an earthquake, the effect on the toy building be carefully noted.

Thus God tries us, and thus we are subjected to tests by the events of every day. Let us not repine when men are harsh with us or unjust toward us. The wounds and bruises of this life, the scars and flaws, all have lessons to teach us, if we will be teachable. After every calamity, though it may overthrow our dwelling, we shall rebuild it more firmly until at last it is unshaken and unshakable.

Prayer—Test us, O God, and make severe trial of us. Thou dost not try that for which thou dost not care. Make us ready, our Father, by any means, for thy eternity.—Amen.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, Pastor.

MY UPLIFTING LORD.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"He brought me up also from a horrible pit, out of the miry clay, and set my feet upon a rock, and established my goings."—Psalm 40:2.

Here is a text couched in the language of the first person. It tells of the uplifting Lord. It is very personal, and is properly found in a book of worship and praise. I like it. It speaks for me. I remember when it was written—that part of it which I know. David had an entrance to the human heart, and can therefore speak the language of a people who love God.

About the first thing I see when I look upon this text is that horrible pit! At night time, when I have driven an automobile all day over mountain roads, I sometimes dream that I have headed straight toward a bottomless precipice. How I push on the brakes! Hold my breath! Wake with a start in time to find I am not in danger! What a blessing if we could awake sometimes and find it was only a dream! For we have stood on the very brink of the pit.

Have you ever been in quicksand? I have. It is an awful feeling. You try to step out, and you sink deeper. But for the turf around I would have been lost. Only by using my hands and knees and my body could I pull myself out. How foul, how soft, how relentless are the sinking sands!

There are several "quick pits" about my father's farm. I remember one day my father told me to take a team and mow a certain meadow. "Be careful not to drive too near the 'soft' places," he said. The weeks had been dry, and the grass was so inviting and green I loathed leaving any of it. I was tempted to drive too near. Down into the mire began to sink the off-horse. I was frightened. I snapped out a quick command, and tightened my other line. No need—the horse was down. I was afraid the other might be pulled into the mire. I assumed calmness, and stepped up on a hill and called a neighbor. We unhitched the horses. I led the free horse away. And then we came to the horse which was down flat on the mire. What would I do? I took the reins and commanded him to arise, which to my great surprise he did. Explanation: When the horse found the quicksand beneath his feet at once he went on his knees, and down on his body. When freed of the load he could lift himself on the thick turf and arise! He had more "horse sense" than the driver!

He went on his knees when he found himself in a horrible pit! One eventide, my younger brother and I went down through the pasture looking for a milk cow. She had not come home. Where was she? Finally we found her. Her head and back were all that was left above a bar mire. There she was fastened, almost submerged. A pitiable sight. A half-score of men with shovels, and logs, and levers soon lifted her from the horrible pit. It was a sight I can never forget. Covered with blue clay, she had to be washed clean and rubbed dry. She was a cow with a history after that. We had brought her up out of a horrible pit.

So when I read this text, there is that pit. The pits I have been describing are nothing to be compared with the pits of sin—moral and spiritual calamity. Coming out of the pits described brought joy; coming out of the pits of sin, and moral and spiritual danger bring worship of the God that can lift from sin! Nothing but God himself can lift one from the miry pit of sin. In scores of places we have been told that by the Book of God, and the book of experience has reaffirmed it many times.

The Psalmist found himself in a horrible pit of miry clay. What was the process of his deliverance? He tells us: "I waited patiently for the Lord; and he inclined unto me, and heard my prayer." There is the secret. The cry of repentant anguish unto a loving God! Having prayed for deliverance, he held on—"I waited patiently," he says, and the Lord bent over to listen! "He inclined unto me, and heard my cry!"

Do you find yourself enveloped in the slough of doubt, or indifference or sin, or sinning? Down on your knees! Cry out to God, and he will hear the anguishing cries of your soul.

Do you know that this old Suffolk Church went to California after a boy once? Yes, it found him on the railroad track of a fast moving train. He had cut every ear-mark of his home town of Suffolk out of his clothing. He was going to commit suicide. But the memory of this old church, his parents of this old church, and the God of this old church lifted his feet out of the miry clay long years ago. Last Sunday, with his lovely family about him, he sat at our communion table with a smile on his lips and a peace in his heart that passes all understanding! He told me the story himself, and we could hardly keep back the tears as he talked.

Our Psalmist has been along that self-same road. He tells us in the psalm which we are studying, about the joy of deliverance: "And he hath put a new song in my mouth, even praise unto our God; and shall see it, and fear (and have reverence), and shall trust in the Lord." Yes, they will see it! They will hear it and fear! I wanted to take off my hat in reverence as my friend told me his story. "I thought of a boy in a far country that my church had told me about," he said, "and I came home."

The Lord had lifted him from the mire of discouragement to a mountain of peace—the eternal hills which tower in the strength of God. Many of us know the joy of deliverance; many of us have been lifted by love; many of us have felt intensely the peace of pardon, and we have sung the new song; but have we allowed it to die upon our lips and forgotten the high resolutions of those holy hours? Will we not sing again that new song that "many may see it, and fear (have reverence), and trust in the Lord." Saved to save others. Delivered to deliver.

One step further. The horrible pit may not always be the horrible pit of sin. You men and women of God may find your need of deliverance from a horrible pit of danger. There was Joseph. He found himself in a pit. A pit that might have easily meant death. Not sin on his part, but circumstances placed him in a pit of real danger. God brought him out. And he brought him out because he needed him. He brought him out that he might serve him. He brought him out to show his great mercy toward the sinners that put him in that pit! He was in a pit of danger, but Joseph's brethren, sons of Israel, were in a far worse pit of sin and selfishness and pride. By the Lord's lifting Joseph from his pit of danger, he would eventually lift his brethren from their pit of sin.

Or there is Daniel thrown into a pit, or dungeon, of lions. Danger lurked, crouching in every corner, but the Lord encamped round about him, and delivered him from them all. He heard his cry: "I waited patiently for the Lord, and he inclined unto me, and heard my cry. He brought me up also out of a horrible pit, out of the miry clay, and set my feet upon a rock, and established my goings. And he put a new song in my mouth, even praise unto our God; many shall see it, and fear, and shall trust in the Lord."

Jesus went into the horrible "pit of sin" in Gethsemane! He, perfect and sinless, bore the sins of many. From that pit he cried, and the Lord sent angels to minister unto him. Into that pit he went that "many should see, and fear, and

Dear Friends:

We are very happy that we were able to reach and pass two more rungs in our financial ladder this week. Twenty thousand dollars is our goal for the year. Each thousand represents a rung in our ladder. Let everybody push a little. It will make the climbing easier.

The good women (the best of God's creation), remembered us beautifully at the Easter season. We will publish the list in installments to keep our report from being too long.

EASTER SUNDAY AT ROSEMONT.

Easter Sunday was the greatest day Rosemont ever had. There were more at Sunday School, more at preaching services, and more were received into the church, than on any other one day in the history of the church.

The day began with a great service at 7:30 A. M., conducted by the young people of the Christian Endeavor Society, led by the president, Miss Mary Halstead. This was followed by a quiet hour breakfast.

At 9:45, the Sunday School gathered 314 strong. The Spirit of Christ was evident in the entire school. The pastor visited many of the classes and departments, asking those who were Christians to pray for the morning service, and those who had never become Christians to take their stand for him that morning.

At the morning service, the pastor brought a simple Gospel message, using as subject, "For His Sake." At the close of the message, thirteen took their stand for Christ, and united with the church. At the night service, a message on "Preparing to Meet Jesus," was given by the pastor, and at the close of the message thirteen others took their stand for the Lord, and united with the church. The pastor had asked the people to ask the Lord to give the church twenty-five members on Easter.

Easter Sunday, 1934, will linger in the minds and hearts of our Rosemont people for a long time. M.

trust in the Lord." He went into that pit for you and me. From that pit to the hill of Calvary was he lifted—lifted by love! He was thus lifted that he might lift others:

I was sinking deep in sin,
Far from the peaceful shore;
Very deeply stained within,
Sinking to rise no more.
But the master of the sea
Heard my despairing cry;
From the waters lifted me,
Now safe am I.
Love lifted me; love lifted me!
When nothing else could help,
Love lifted me!

And he not only lifted our feet from the pit, but he set them upon the solid rock. Some people seem to think that that is as far as the story goes. But he did more than that, according to our Psalm: "He set my feet upon a rock, and established my goings." Have you been lifted to the solid rock? Then travel. Travel for God. Travel for a needy world. Travel for the joy of doing something for others. Travel for the joy of being something worthwhile in God's kingdom. Let your going be for God. We are lifted from the miry pit not to be made pillars of salt, but to be bearers of salvation—singers of "a new song that many may fear, and turn unto the Lord."

Down in Arizona a former missionary to Japan has been at work translating the Gospel of St. Matthew into the language spoken by the Keres Indians. He has discovered so many similarities between the Keres dialect and the Japanese language that he believes these Indians must have their ancestral roots in a group of Japanese migrating many centuries ago to the United States.

Among foreign language Scriptures recently published by the American Bible Society is the Gospel of St. Matthew in a dialect spoken by the Romany Gypsies of Bulgaria, a people numbering about 100,000.

THE WORST FROM THE BEST.

"The Jews urged on . . . the chief men of the city, and stirred up a persecution against Paul and Barnabas."—Read Acts 13:44-52.

At Thessalonica, Paul's Jewish enemies stirred up a riot by using "certain vile fellows of the rabble," but in the Pisidian Antioch they used the best people.

It is strange how little distance there often is between the so-called best and the so-called worst of a community. A lynching party will have fair samples of both in its make-up. Christ was sent to the cross by the Jewish Senate, the revered Council of Seventy, led by the high priest.

So let none of us rest content in his social position and the honor which men pay him. Nothing counts in the judgment day but spiritual position, the honor which Christ pays us. The question never is, "Is my heart right with the upper four hundred?" but is my heart right with God?" —AMOS R. WELLS.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION BUILDING.

ELON COLLEGE, founded by the Christian Church in 1889, has fully justified the faith and hope of its founders during its 42 years of operation. Its graduates from the four-year course leading to a bachelor's degree, number 980, now living, 122 of whom are in the Christian Ministry and full-time Christian service. The majority of these are members of our own denomination. In addition, 449 are in educational work and are an active influence in the lay leadership of the Christian Church.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION BUILDING, and the definite religious atmosphere of the College, provide the very best facilities available for training for religious leadership, and offer the Church its finest opportunity to train the young people of the denomination to assume active leadership both in the ministry and laity of the local churches.

OBITUARIES

BEALE.

Whereas, on February 13th, our heavenly Father, in his infinite wisdom and love, called Mrs. Ella Beale, our beloved friend to her eternal home, we, the members of the Franklin Christian Church, offer the following tribute to her memory:

1. That we hold in loving remembrance her faithfulness as a friend to all, and that we pattern our lives after the goodness and brightness of her life, in such a way that our lives may reflect the same Christian sunshine as did hers.

2. That we extend to her family our deepest sympathy and love, realizing that they have lost a faithful, loving mother and grandmother, and the church a loyal member.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, one to "The Christian Sun" for publication, and one spread on the records of the church.

MRS. J. A. WILLIAMS,
MRS. E. P. JONES,
MRS. P. H. HARRELL,
Committee.

STEELE.

Mrs. Mary Alice Steele was born February 17, 1856, and died March 8, 1934, aged 78 years and 19 days. Surviving are two sons, two brothers, two sisters, and five grandchildren. Deceased was a member of our New Hope Church, and was held in high esteem by all who knew her. She lived near Pleasant Valley, Va., and because of the distance from the church, and the condition of her health, was not able to attend the church, but she remained true to it nevertheless.

Funeral services were held at Spader's Lutheran Church, near her home, March 9, 1934.

PATTERSON.

Brother J. W. Patterson died at his home in Opelika, Ala., April 6, 1934. He was 70 years of age. He came to the end of the journey of life very peacefully, expressing confidence in Jesus as his Saviour and heaven as his home.

He leaves one brother and two sisters to mourn his death, besides his devoted children, six of whom survive him. He was a man of large acquaintance and had many friends. He was reared in the

Turn About Fair Play.—

From a press dispatch we glean the following story: A pastor in a western city had been compelled to go to a hospital for a minor surgical operation. After he recovered, he visited the offices of the physician who administered the anaesthetic and delivered himself of the following: "I want to thank you, doctor, for putting me to sleep so quietly and certainly." And he added, "Now, if you'll come to church for the sermon Sunday, I'll do the same thing for you."

A New Assistant President Wanted.—

Roosevelt wants a new Assistant President. He is urging Frank C. Walker, long his right bower and now running the National Emergency Council, to become his chief secretary. Walker does not want the job, but Roosevelt is very persuasive. Roosevelt's need is great because Louis Howe, his alter ego for 20-odd years, cannot continue to work as chief secretary much longer. The condition of his health makes it imperative that he take a long rest. Walker's calibre and his intimacy with the President would make his position at the White House important beyond exaggeration.—Business Week.

The Church and Nationalism.—

We felicitate Catholics on the role which their great church plays in the German confusion. The Roman Church possesses an immense moral advantage in Germany. Its pronouncements upon the paganism of the Nazi rule are tonic in these days when German Protestantism has been cudgeled into humiliating silence. The Pope, in combating the encroachments of Hitler upon the freedom of the churches, fights Protestantism's battles as well as those of Catholicism. We join forces with the Pope in insisting that in the final analysis the forces of Christianity cannot truckle to the demands of nationalism.—Advance.

The Suspension of Newspapers.—

A copyrighted article from Berlin tells that 350 German newspapers have suspended publication voluntarily during the first twelve months of the Hitler regime. This is in addition to the compulsory suppression of the Socialist and Communist papers. The most noteworthy recent addition to the list of suspended publications is the famous Vossische Zeitung, 230 years old, of a prestige almost equal to that of the London Times. Many of the liberals who remain in Germany are forced to obtain the actual news of their homeland from foreign papers. The censorship is so rigid that German papers dare not print the liberal viewpoint or even uncolored news, and Swiss, English and French papers have greatly increased their circulation within German borders. The London Times now publishes a special German edition.—Christian-Evangelist.

What Business Fears.—

"Congressmen are suddenly industry-conscious, willing to accept the theory that business now has confidence enough, has convalesced to adequate strength, will go ahead to recovery if left unhampered by too many new regulatory measures. There are three causes of business fear. First is further labor trouble, especially if the Wagner bill is pressed, even in modified form. The Connery 30-hour bill seemingly is dead. The second cause of industrial timidity is difficulty in getting money. That explains the demand for relaxing the Securities Act and for less severe stock market regulation. The third fear, most serious because purely psychological, is dread of further drastic action, as in the air-mail case."

Prehistoric Bison Unearthed by Boy.—

A small boy's curiosity resulted recently in the discovery of a prehistoric buffalo head believed to be 20,000 years old. Burnett Day, thirteen, was trying to round up some wayward sheep when he picked up an object to throw. It was too heavy. It looked like an old horn. Some time later, Day began digging into a high bank on the Pit River, near McArthur, California, where the object was found. In the sandstone 20 feet down he discovered the skull of a strange animal. Paleontologists said the skull and horn were remains of a buffalo which ranged the California plains 20,000 years ago. The horns had a spread of 10 feet or more, and were 7 inches in diameter at the base. The skull weighed 100 pounds. Scientists at the University of California began a study of the find.—Exchange.

Take a Tip From Detroit.—

On December 1, 1933, the City of Detroit had a treasury nearly bare of cash, while today the same treasury is nearly bursting with funds. The depression, we are told, together with reckless and inefficient spending on the part of city officials, brought on in Detroit what amounted to a taxpayers' strike. The man who paid his taxes was the exception, and 237,000 out of 480,000 pieces of real estate were tax-delinquent. Penalties had piled up till they ranged as high as 48% of the original tax. Then the city decided to put on the following bargain offer: If taxpayers would pay their back taxes in full, the city would be satisfied with the original amount due, plus the first years' interest and a small carrying charge. And there would be a cash discount of 5% from this. Those unable to pay all in cash were offered the option of paying 5% down and semi-annual installments on the remainder over a period of seven years, with a 5% interest charge on deferred payments. The back-tax-collecting plan was advertised by bill-board posters, the radio, and by paid advertisements in local papers and periodicals. Four hundred thousand circulars were printed and were distributed by school children, banks, etc. And the money began to roll in. By January 10th, over $8 million had rolled in, and more than 100,000 pieces of property had been cleared of back taxes. The bargain period lasted until April 10th, and if the stream of money continued to pour in at the rate at which it started, financial worry for the city fathers is temporarily a thing of the past.

Auto Fatalities.—

The Travelers Insurance Company gives the following information as to automobile accidents during the past year: "During 1933 there were about 29,900 persons killed and about 850,700 injured non-fatally in automobile accidents within the United States. The deaths, exclusive of fatalities from motorcycle accidents, exceeded by 2.5% the 29,196 listed in 1932. Until June of last year, deaths from automobile accidents were under the figure for the corresponding period of 1932. From June on, however, the fatalities increased at an alarming rate. Cars decreased around 1.6% in registration in 1933 over 1932, with a corresponding decrease in gasoline consumption. Fatalities increased 5.9% per accident." In this connection, it may be informative to read that Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania reports an accident occurring every twelve minutes of the highways of his State. "Since 1928," he says, "there have been 250,000 accidents in which 11,300 persons were killed and 226,000 persons injured on our highways. Then property damages since 1928 have totaled $31,000,000, an average of more than $5,000,000 a year. During the first two months of this year accident fatalities and injuries increased 20% over January and February of last year. The Division of Safety estimates that at the present rate, this year will witness 52,000 accidents and 2,000 deaths on our highways." The American Issue places the blame for increased automobile fatalities squarely on the shoulders of repeal. It tells us that in eighty-six leading cities of the United States the trend in accidents had been downward for some time before beer was legalized. "Immediately following (the legalization of beer) the reports from the nation's leading cities registered an extraordinary right-about-face. For the record of these eight months instead of a decline, show an average of 42.25 more deaths per month than for the same months of 1932. . . . With repeal, December 5, 1933, came another leap upward. The number of motor car deaths recorded since in some areas, have averaged 110 more per month than in the same months of 1932-33." United States Government reports released in March, show that automobile deaths are being recorded at the rate of twenty-three per 100,000 of population in the areas indicated, as compared with nineteen a year ago.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Special attention is called to the notice from Rev. John G. Truitt on the opposite page. It is short but very important. Delegates to the Convention should heed its request immediately.

The many friends of Dr. C. C. Ryan, who was at one time pastor of the old Christian Memorial Temple in Norfolk and later of the Richmond Church, will regret to learn that he has been quite ill recently. We understand, however, that he is slightly improved at this time.

One of our very capable and consecrated pastors writes: "I think I have never seen church people so worldly-minded. God alone knows what the consequences will be." We wonder if the feeling of this pastor is shared generally by other pastors who are in position to know?

Rev. A. R. Flowers, Sims, N. C., has been holding services at Lucama, and finds comfort and promise at the prospect of a permanent work at Newsom's Chapel. Brother Flowers is deeply interested in young people and their training in Christian conduct. To this work he gives much time and effort.

Our Government is making a tremendous effort and, what seems to many to be a hazardous adventure, to recover economically and politically. The church alone has the task of spiritual recovery. There is spiritual depression as well as financial depression, and the great spiritual force in this world is the Church of the Living God.

If the church contributes only to the material and physical wants of mankind, it is on a par only with a benevolent order or a fraternal society. It rises to the high privileges of a church when it seeks, through its missionary effort, to minister to the souls of men and women, boys and girls by giving them the Gospel of the Son of God.

The Mission Secretary was the preacher at the 11 o'clock service, Bethlehem Church, Alamance County, Sunday, April 15th. Rev. G. C. Crutchfield is the devoted and beloved pastor and is deeply concerned in the progress of the church and all that it represents. Bethlehem is one of our large and loyal congregations with whom it is always a joy to worship.

The program of our Christian constituency in its missionary task is that of the once-a-month offering in the Sunday Schools for Missions, the annual offering in the churches, and the collection of funds through Missionary Societies. This is the financial program only of our missionary undertaking, and in this all should have a part, because our Lord knew full well that if we would put some of our treasures into his work, we would love that cause and that work. "For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also."

Has your church taken the annual missionary offering? That is a question that should be answered by every church. A missionary offering is only asked of the churches once a year. Of course, many churches began the offering on Easter, but there are quite a few rural churches, with preaching once or twice a month, who could not begin on that day but have had the privilege of beginning since. The offering should be continued until every individual member of the congregation has been given an opportunity.

We learn with deep regret of the death of Miss Lydia Dunn, News Ferry, Va. Miss Dunn made her home with Mrs. D. J. Sipe of the Pleasant Grove community and was a faithful and devoted member of our Ingram Church. The funeral services were held Saturday at noon, April 14th, from Pleasant Grove Church, the services being in charge of her pastor, Rev. H. E. Crutchfield. Dr. L. E. Smith, from the College, and Dr. W. C. Wicker, pastor, Pleasant Grove Church, Dr. P. H. Fleming and Miss Nellie Fleming, Burlington, attended the funeral services.

Our Mission cause, at home and abroad, was never in such sore need. Remember that hungry hearts and perishing souls do not cry aloud and do not cry by sound of voice for help. Through our missionary effort, at home and abroad, we are trying to open and sustain Sunday Schools and churches, through which the souls of the most needy people of the earth are reached. Unless the church reaches them, they will never be reached, since the church is the only institution that undertakes to give the Gospel to a heart-hungry and sinning world.

Only one more issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN before the meeting of the Convention which owns and controls the paper. One of the problems of the Convention will be that of saying what sort of CHRISTIAN SUN we shall have, certainly, for the next two years. Dr. C. H. Rowland, Greensboro, N. C., is chairman of the Board of Publications, and will deeply appreciate for his Committee suggestions as to how THE SUN may be improved for the next two years. The other members of this important committee are Dr. P. H. Fleming, Burlington; Dr. N. G. Newman, Holland, Va.; Rev. Milo J. Sweet, Elon College; Rev. W. T. Scott, Winston-Salem.

Easter at Miami Beach is one of the outstanding events of the country. Sixty thousand people assembled for the sunrise service on the beach. These Easter services were started by Dr. Elisha A. King, who delivered the address at this service and repeated the Easter message which he gave at the first service eight years ago. For the Easter service in the Community Church (Congregational) the church was filled and many people were seated out of doors around the church. Twelve new members were received. Through the kindness of a friend printed copies of Dr. King's Easter sermon were presented to members of the congregation.

Pastor R. T. Grissom reports two missionary offerings for Easter that are, indeed, gratifying. He writes: "We are proud of our offering from Rocky Ford, $8.67, and Elk Spur, $5.00. We feel that Easter has been more real to our people this year than ever before. Our services Easter Sunday were fine. We conducted five services that day and enjoyed every one of them. April 8th was also a fine day with us. We had about one hundred present in our services." And then this note of sorrow comes: "Wednesday of last week we were made sad over the death of Mrs. Iola Meredith's youngest boy, eight years old. The entire community felt the shock and all extended sympathy to the bereaved." (Many SUN readers remember Mrs. Meredith, who, as "Miss Iola Hedgepeth," pioneered in our Carroll County work.)

Missionary Rallies were held the past week at Wake Chapel, on Tuesday, Mrs. C. H. Stephenson, superintendent; at Haw River, on Wednesday, Mrs. W. P. Lawrence, superintendent; and at Parks Cross Roads, Saturday, Mrs. Roy Caviness, superintendent. In these Rallies of the past two weeks it is safely estimated that a thousand of our women, and the majority of our pastors, and some of our interested laymen, have gathered and spent a day in considering problems that pertain to Missions at home and abroad. In these districts the women are seeking to face their problems intelligently and to work out plans and programs for advancing the cause of righteousness in the churches and building up the Kingdom of God. These women, representing their Missionary Societies, should have our earnest cooperation, prayers and support.

The Blue Ridge Conference Committee met at Nashville in connection with the Rural Church School and perfected plans for the annual Blue Ridge Leadership Conference. Dr. W. A. Harper, Chairman of the Program Committee, and Dr. E. C. Gillette, Chairman of the Executive Committee, presided at these meetings. The date was set for July 3rd-11th. The program will be announced later. There was also a meeting of the "Staff" of extension workers in the Southeast and the Student Summer Service workers were selected and recommended to the Administrative Committee for commissioning for work this season in the Southeastern area. In connection with this meeting and with the Rural Church School a supper was served at Kissam Hall for Congregational and Christian delegates. There were forty present. President Campbell acted as the Toastmaster, and among the speakers were Dr. W. A. Harper, Rev. Lucien J. Marsh, Superintendent of Texas and Oklahoma; and Rev. Edwin C. Gillette, who was called upon to pay a tribute to W. Knighton Bloom.

CONVENTION ANNOUNCEMENTS.

The Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches is to convene in its thirty-first regular session, Tuesday, May 1, 1934, with the Suffolk Christian Church. This will be one of the most important sessions of the Convention ever held. It is earnestly hoped that every delegate will be making plans to attend.

The financial stringency of the past few years has sorely depleted our resources. Perhaps the greatest strain has been that upon our faith and loyalty. There are signs that indicate that a better day is at hand. But regardless of what the future may hold in store for us, the time has come for us to adjust our plans to changed conditions. If better conditions are at hand, we must be prepared to meet them with greater zeal and a stronger determination.

The Woman's Missionary Convention will meet at 10 A. M., on Tuesday, May 1st, and will be in session through the morning and afternoon. The Woman's Convention always puts on a great program. Perhaps it would be helpful for all members of the Convention to attend the Woman's meeting, and profit by their splendid faith and loyal efforts.

The Young People will meet on Thursday. They, too, are planning a great program. Their work is making a tremendous contribution at the present time; and gives promise of still greater things for the future.

The first regular session of the Southern Convention will meet at 3 P. M., Tuesday afternoon. All delegates should plan to be on hand for the opening session, and make their plans to stay until the Convention closes. The program in detail will appear in next week's issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

LYNCHBURG CHURCH ON HONOR ROLL.

Early this morning (Saturday) the Rev. B. H. Watkins, pastor of our Lynchburg Church, came into my office smiling. He said, "I am glad to see you, and wish you success in your efforts for the College. We have done the best we could for the College. We took the offering, which amounted to only $4.00. When I thought of this offering for the institution that means so much to the Church, I was ashamed of it. I called my officials together and told them that we could not afford to send that amount of money to Elon College from our church, that our quota was a little less than $50.00 and that it was our duty to raise it some way. The church voted some out of its treasury, and one of our interested members went out and got the rest. Here is a check from the Lynchburg Church for $50.00."

Think of it—a pastor asking his church to raise the required amount for the College, working with them to see if the quota was raised, and then taking the check and riding many miles to deliver it in person! This is characteristic of duty well done. When we do our part and when we make a sacrifice to do it, we feel so proud of ourselves that we will make another sacrifice to carry through to the end.

What a wonderful thing it would have been if all the churches in the Convention could have succeeded in their efforts and brought their offerings to the College. Surely, it would have meant a new day for the College and for the church as a whole.

Thanks to you, Mr. Watkins, and to the Lynchburg Church, for this splendid offering and consecrated interest that you have shown in your College.
L. E. SMITH, President.

A LETTER FROM CHAPLAIN ROUNTREE.

We believe the letter below, while personal, will be of as much interest to SUN readers as it was to us. We are taking the liberty of printing it.—Managing Editor.

"Dear John T.:

"It might be of some interest to know of my movements. With the fleet, I am sailing for the east coast, leaving here the ninth of April. Our first stop will be at Panama, where we expect to be engaged in the fleet problem for about two weeks. From there we go to Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, for two weeks where more problems will engage us. From there we go to New York for the first of June. We expect to be there seventeen days for recreation and liberty, and grand fleet review by the President of the United States. From the seventeenth of June for about three weeks we expect to be at Hampton Roads, Va. After that we will be at Provincetown, Mass. Then we expect to be in Newport for a month, from which port we expect to sail about the last of August for Panama again, and back to the west coast. This is a gist of the published itinerary.

"Church Going Day will be held on the 3rd of June in New York. All ships will be represented in one big grand service ashore.

"Mrs. Rountree is leaving here the ninth of April, travelling by automobile, and expects to make some stops at ports of anchorage for the ship during the summer. She will return to this coast when the ship does.

"I cannot keep from telling you that I have been devoting much time and study to vocal music since I have been here, and, strange as it may seem, I have really been making progress. I was on the air KFSD San Diego this morning for fifteen minutes. This study is with a view to making the best possible of my voice and sing the balance of my life as a companion service to my ministry of preaching. I already have a couple of speaking engagements for the east when I am there, and if they don't invite me to sing, I will just hook it up with a sermon as Gospel in song, and that will be some satisfaction, even if I never get invited to that place again.

"Best wishes to you all, your father and mother and any mutual friends.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Persons desiring entertainment by the Suffolk Christian Church during sessions of the Southern Convention, May 1st-4th, will please send notice at once to Rev. John G. Truitt, pastor of the church. If you are not coming yourself, please see that your alternate complies with this request.
J. G. T.

If you see and appreciate greatness in others, you may be assured that you have the seeds of greatness within yourself.—Young People.

HAVE YOU COUNTED THE COST?

Two young soldiers were talking about the service of Christ. One of them said, "I cannot tell you all that the Lord Jesus is to me, or what he has done for me. I do wish you would enlist in his army"

"I am thinking about it," answered the other young man, "but it means giving up several things—in fact, I am counting the cost."

A Christian officer, just passing, heard the last remark, and, laying his hand on the shoulder of the young soldier, said:

"Young man, you talk of counting the cost of following Christ, but have you ever counted the cost of not following him?"

For days that question exercised the mind of that young man, and he found no rest until he trusted the Lord Jesus Christ, the Saviour of sinners.—Selected.

THE SUN needs your renewal—NOW!

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

To SUN Subscribers Who Are in Arrears:

In an effort to get the subscription list on a current basis, we are making these special offers, good until January 31st, to SUN subscribers who are in arrears:

(The Offer Is Continued Until Further Notice.)

OFFER No. 1—If you are in arrears as much as two years, send us Money Order or Check for $5.00, and we will give you credit for three whole years' subscription.

OFFER No. 2—If you are a year or more in arrears, send Money Order or Check for $3.50, and we will extend your subscription two years.

OFFER No. 3—If you are as much as three years in arrears, send us $6.00, and we will extend your subscription to July 1, 1934, giving you full credit for your back account.

Letters have been sent out during the past six months to all who were as much as three years in arrears, trying to induce them by special offers, to pay up their arrearages. Quite a few have responded. Others have paid no attention at all to these letters. If by any chance you were in this class, and did not receive our letter, Offer No. 3 will enable you to put yourself back on a current basis at a nominal cost. Even if you are unable to avail yourself of this offer at present, won't you write the undersigned, explaining the situation?

If at all possible, won't you take advantage of one of these offers, thereby not only saving yourself money, but helping your Church Paper?

All Money Orders and Checks should be made payable to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and letters should be addressed to J. T. Kernodle, Managing Editor, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond, Va.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH.

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF OUR CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE CONVENTION.

The Southern Convention meets in regular biennial session, Suffolk, Va., May 1st-4th, inclusive. This body, incorporated, is composed of seven Conferences, to-wit: The Eastern Virginia, the Valley of Virginia, the Eastern North Carolina, the Western North Carolina, North Carolina and Virginia, the Alabama and the Georgia and Alabama Conferences, and includes, also, as an Auxiliary, the Woman's Missionary Convention. Those who are to assemble in the Convention as delegates will have the interests of a wide area and a broad fellowship, as well as large property interests, to consider and care for. These features of the coming session have to be considered not only in themselves, but in the light of the decision already made by the Convention to merge with the churches and interests of our Congregational constituency in the area served by the Convention. We face the fact of the Southeast Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches, and our high resolve to merge in a manner that will conserve and develop the good work of both constituent bodies.

The contacts formed during the past two years, since the Convention voted to merge, have proven that our Congregational fellowship, as well as our Christian constituency, are willing and anxious to enter into a real, practical working program that will be promotive of the best interests of all the churches in the area under consideration. And our problem now is, and will be, at the Convention that of discovering and working out a program of mutual helpfulness and progress for the churches, institutions and enterprises involved.

Our Congregational constituency have shown their willingness and anxiety to become one with us in the task and program of union. Our Christian constituency in Convention assembled have voted their willingness and anxiety to enter into the union. Now comes the task of setting up housekeeping, of placing our house in order, of arranging the furniture and the fixtures, of adjusting the affairs of a well ordered household and a united family. This will require grace and patience, willingness to bear and forbear, for the common good of the whole household of our faith. If we go to the Convention with open mind and the firm resolve, under the leadership of the divine mind, we can solve our practical problems and accomplish a great task in the name of our Lord and the church which he is building in the world. Above all, in going to the Convention, we need to pray, pray, pray, that God will guide us so that his will and not ours shall be done. Our Lord prayed that his followers should be one, even as he and the Father are one. Toward this high and holy achievement we set our faces in this Convention.

DEAN WEIGLE MAKES AN ADDRESS.

At the recent session of the Quadrennial Convention of the International Council of Religious Education in Chicago, Dean Weigle, of the Yale Divinity School, delivered a notable address on "Christian Education for the Needs of Today." In this address, we have the conclusions of a great mind, with a broad outlook, dealing with a very comprehensive problem. There are approximately twenty-two million persons affiliated with church schools of Protestantism throughout the country, with which the International Council is seeking to deal and direct. Having in mind such a wide constituency, Dean Weigle would naturally have to deal with principles of broad application. He is speaking for all mankind when he says: "The need of mankind today is open, confessed, acutely felt." With that statement, we have no doubt all CHRISTIAN SUN readers will agree. We readily make confession of needs, which needs are acutely felt and which needs are open and apparent to all. In developing this declaration, the Dean says: "We live in a world today which is not only in need of salvation, but which is in search of salvation. There have been times when prophets and evangelists had to awaken a sense of need and provoke a conviction of sin. It is not so now." We most heartily agree with Dean Weigle that there was a time when "evangelists had to awaken a sense of need and provoke a conviction of sin," but we differ from him in the conclusion that the prophet and the evangelist do not now have to "provoke a conviction of sin." "We know our need of salvation" (quoting the Dean) "at least, in the economic, industrial, social and political fields." With that we heartily agree. Also with the following: "We have a new sense of human sinfulness." We have most truly. We can look about us and see the wreckage of human sinfulness and feel most keenly the sense of human sinfulness. But when all that is said, we are still a long way from an individual conviction of sin. It is easy for our age to look at sin in the other fellow, sin in society, sin in the abstract. But to look at sin in the concrete, sin in the individual, when that individual happens to be self, well now that is a different proposition. It is easy to see that society is going wrong, that the social order is all out of joint, and that "ignorance, folly, mismanagement, unrestrained competition and unbrilled greed have brought the world to its present sorry state." But to make an individual matter of it, to think in terms of individual frailty, individual weakness, individual stupidity, individual sin, here, indeed, as we see it, is the supreme need of our time. We are too ready and too willing to think in terms of "the social order" and too little inclined to think in terms of ordering the individual life according to the Way of Life as revealed to us through Jesus Christ.

Dean Weigle declares that "our generation has come to believe in original sin because we so clearly see its fruits." We do see the fruits of original sin, but how many of our generation feel that they have in them the seeds and the fruits of original sin? That is quite a different question.

And all of us will agree, because it is a fact that none can deny, that "we have taken even of God's gifts—grain and cattle—and because of our bungling systems of distribution, we have destroyed them while people are starving." That, indeed, is a sin that must rest on somebody's shoulders and should strike home to somebody's heart and provoke in somebody's soul a sense of sin. To destroy food, while hundreds of persons, made in the image of God, are starving, is sin, whether it be of society or of the individual. The Dean goes further and declares: "We have even mortgaged the lives and the labor of our children and of our children's children in order that we may spend the money which they may sometimes earn. This is the kind of world in which we live. It is a world of tragic sinfulness. Men have failed one another and have been disloyal to God. We could have wished the Dean had said: "We as individuals have been disloyal to God, and on that account, we have failed one another." As long as individuals and mankind remain loyal to God, they will not fail one another, and it is only when men rule God out, or give him second place in their thought and life, that they fail one another. We have, in large measure, lost our sense of sin because we have forgotten God, forgotten that he is our Creator and "He is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." When the Dean came to his conception "of the power of the Spirit of God which is available for salvation," there is something moving, mighty and majestic in what he says. We have not found a more satisfying and clarifying declaration than that of the Dean when he refers to Jesus Christ in his relationship to God, the Father:

"In Jesus Christ we catch a vision of the heart of God. When we try to conceive what God would be like if he were to put on flesh and be as one among men, we cannot get away from Jesus Christ. God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself. What does that mean? Does it mean that Jesus was the supreme human genius who discovered a waiting, passive God, as Columbus discovered America, or do we see in the life of Christ the supreme act of God's self-disclosure to man? Christ is the supreme instance of human religious genius. But he is more than that. His life is the supreme act of God's self-disclosure. How do we know? Because the conception of God which Jesus discloses is the conception of a Being who takes the initiative and does not wait. That is the good news, the gospel, that Christianity has to offer in a time as hard as this—the faith that we are living in a world where we have available not only the good gifts of God for our material welfare, but the love of God that will empower us to escape from evil if we trust ourselves to him."

THE CHURCH AND THE PRESENT CRISIS.

We are told on every hand that what is needed most in this or any other country to solve its muddled problems is character. The most prominent men in America today are studying the causes and cure of crime and after all is said they conclude that the major hope for the prevention of lawlessness is the home, the school and the church. So far as I am able to understand their meaning they emphasize the value of the church as an agency in the social fabric as a character forming influence. Of course, the emphasis is placed upon the Sunday Schools and the Young People's Societies for these are the chief points where the church faces her task with the young. And it is true that the church has accomplished something. It certainly means much when Warden Lawes says that ninety-nine per cent of the criminals in Sing Sing were not interested actively in any church. He further says that ninety-seven per cent of the prisoners were never associated with any Boys' Clubs, or any other juvenile associations where boys learn how to spend their leisure time. In spite of all the criticism of the church's efforts in the direction of character building, it does seem as if the church has succeeded very well. Her failure is in not doing more.

We know that the crime of this nation is committed largely by boys and young men, but they arise from that strata of society not touched by Christian or other religious influences. In a recent survey of foreign missionary fields it was concluded that a very wise action would be for the various religious agencies, Christian and pagan, to unite in opposition to secularism. And it would be a wise thing to do in America. The church and synagogue might well combine to oppose secularity, for here is the crux of our situation as religionists. Liberality and kindly generosity toward all forms of material emphasis may have disastrous results. This machine age may run itself into a suicidal jam unless it recognizes the supremacy of spirit. I read recently of a man who built a Robot that could shoot a pistol. One day when he was fooling with the big iron man it leveled its gun directly at him and shot its maker! It was not a fatal shot, but it frightened the editor who told the story. He warned us all not to go too far in creating machines to kill us before we collected our senses. If I am right in drawing conclusions I would say that a great many of our business and political leaders in America are beginning to realize, as they have not ever before, that we cannot continue as we have been going without social disaster and they know full well that nothing can prevent that but downright honesty, uprightness, loyalty and sacrificial unselfishness. These qualities are moral qualities and they have to be grown, developed, cultivated in the home, school and the church. So they turn to us and urge us to be more faithful, to do more, to reach out further and to help build up a great rising tide of moral worth. Only the other day President Roosevelt said that if every American were to make "fair play" his objective in his dealings with others, most of the nation's problems would disappear.

In one way or another this is a great compliment to the church and if it were accompanied with sufficient funds to provide adequate budgets so that trained workers could be put into the field there would be a new sense of value and enthusiasm in the church today. But as a matter of fact the reverse is the case. Instead of providing adequate budgets, instead of backing the efforts of trained and worthy workers there has been a serious cutting down until the churches that the country must depend on for moral and spiritual inspiration are unable to produce it. And yet, the miracle of service is being performed. Without budgets, with inadequate equipment and reduced personnel our churches throughout the country are "carrying on" and are actually pouring into the blood stream of political and social life the very life-blood of spiritual vitality that may yet save the nation. All honor to the noble workers at home and abroad that stand by their churches, welfare societies and moral agencies everywhere.

THE NEW RURAL AMERICA.

By TIMOTHY THOMAS.

We are to have a new rural America. Without thinking so, we set the stage for it a few years ago when there was introduced into our graded schools the study of plant life and agriculture. The youth of twenty years ago who shared the beginning of this new program of education are to be foremost among the leaders in the development of the new rural America. As an addition to and graduation of this leadership, we have today more than 300,000 of our male youth receiving the most practical experience in country life through the Civilian Conservation Corps.

During the past decade attention has been focused on the marvelous developments in and around our cities. The hum of modernized industry, expansion in construction, dream of fortune, rapid transportation, advancement in every phase of literary and social education, and the innovation of the spectacular that amaze and amuse, have been the allurements that have made rapid and extensive drains on our rural population. Millions of our boys and girls turned their faces toward the cities, not because of any lack of appreciation of the rural, but because it did not afford them the advantages for which their natural desires were inclined. To blame them is to acknowledge our failure to understand the desires of youth.

Genius led the way in all these developments. Genius will likewise lead the way in the development of our rural areas. Architects and landscape gardeners have given the best of their energies, the wealth of their thoughts, and centered their achievements almost exclusively in and about our cities. Attention is now being directed to a practical planning and ideal development of our rural areas.

Why our cities have made a constant drain on our rural areas there is a deep-seated reason. Industries grew up in towns and cities because of transportation facilities, fuel for motor-power, and assembling of man-power. An adequate number of workers could not be conveniently brought together otherwise due to distance or lack of adequate transportation facilities.

There is no longer the necessity of many of our industries being located near railroad or steamship lines. Modern motor facilities now make it possible for a rapid distribution of incoming and outgoing freight, the matter of distance being a minor consideration. Railroads are now making an experiment with a pick-up and door-delivery service. The permanence of this is assured, and the manufacturer may now choose a location irrespective of old line transportation facilities. Distance meaning nothing to the transmission and force of electricity, industrial plants a hundred miles from the power station may be served as efficiently as if only a few feet away. Hydro-electric plants far removed from cities are rapidly absorbing the fuel-generated stations for the production of electricity. With a completed network of modern highways America has motorized herself. No reasonable distance is now a barrier to travel, millions of workers in every line of endeavor commuting many miles by modes of modern transportation. Every problem of transportation has been solved; only adequate control is now left for judicial handling.

The movement toward this new rural America is now well under way. Relief stations throughout the land have inaugurated gardening programs for this season. A back-to-the-land movement is shaping itself into a national organization. Subsistence homestead experiments are being made by our National Government, looking to an ultimate solution of redistributing our population. Millions of workers who are now circumscribing their social and educational life by living in crowded quarters will find new places of abode and a new outlook in the new adjustment. The shorter work week now on trial, but certain of adoption, will fit happily into this rural industrial-educational development, since millions will find it possible to have gardens and small farms to supplement the family food need. The whole atmosphere is charged with a rural idea, and it is to be America's next great move. The city fifty years hence will be looked upon as the Nation's work-shop. Rural areas will be the ideal living places and be the means of assuring a more contented population.

This movement toward a new rural America will help to bring land values back to a level in keeping with tax burdens. Rural schools will have a more adequate support and a more efficient supervision. The new rural America is to give a new physical and educational freedom that heretofore has never been enjoyed. The decline in rural church membership in recent years, over which religious leaders have become so vitally concerned, will be checked, and rural churches will become the great social and religious centers and enjoy a new support, provided they awaken to a new leadership, rise above the spirit of dogmatism, and forsake a program of inertia.

With the new and better support for the rural school and the rural church will be the introduction of the rural theater. Too long the church has opposed the theater as an institution, rather seeking to guide its educational force and control its influence. The fact is too often overlooked that the first theater was a child of the church, and because the church failed to change its methods to meet a changing time, it lost the theater, the greatest force in visualized education. The rural church in the new rural America is to have a chance to regain her losses—and more.

The new rural America is not to come in a day; it is not to be an over-night development. It will come, however, through a long and tedious process of patient and wise planning. The development of this new mode of living by our present leaders is to be one of their major contributions to generations yet unborn.

WITHIN THE LIVES OF YOUTH.

Within our youthful lives, dormant lies;
Power to eradicate self-conscious ties.
Give those possibility germs a chance to grow;
They'll cause the world, your work to know.
Awaken that hidden power to a sense of duty;
It'll make lives of usefulness and beauty.
Bestir those hidden qualities, unknown to mankind;
By cultivating your talent and training your mind.
Let Christ awaken your spiritual senses;
Before you commit too many loathsome offenses.
Rely on him as you journey the pathway of life;
He'll strengthen your wills and help you overcome strife.
Mothers, don't scorn the little lassies because they are prissy.
Perhaps, in your girlhood days, you were just as sissy.
Within their lives is the prospective motherhood of tomorrow.
Help them their problems to solve, ere you are enveloped in sorrow.
Be patient with the self-conscious giggling girls;
They are living in the twentieth century societies' whirls,

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The last session of the Southern Convention provided that "Item 7 of the charter be amended so as to provide that any Conference or Association of the Congregational Churches within the State of Virginia, the Carolinas, Georgia, Alabama, or elsewhere, may be entitled to representation in this Convention on the same basis as Conferences of the Christian Churches, and are hereby invited to so affiliate with this Convention." According to this action, Section I, item 1, as recorded on page 31 of the last edition of "Principles and Government of the Christian Church," should be amended to read as follows: "The Convention should be composed of representatives from all Christian Conferences, Congregational Conferences, or Associations, and Congregational and Christian Conferences admitted into membership, shall bear the title, The Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches, Incorporated."

The phrase, "Congregational Conferences, or Associations," implies that Associations may be entitled to representation in States where there are no State Conferences. The "Conference" is the unit of membership. But "Associations" may become members if there is no "Conference" organization. Where Congregational and Christian Conferences have already been united in a joint body, provision is made for the membership of the united Conference.

Item 2, in Section I, would also read, "The Convention shall consist of all the officers of the Convention, the Presidents and Secretaries of the Conferences, or Associations having membership herein, the Chairmen of all Boards of the Convention, the Presidents of all church institutions, and an equal number of elders and laymen, chosen by the Conferences or Associations in annual session, in the proportion of one delegate to every two hundred members; but every Conference, or Association, shall have the right to send two delegates, one elder and one layman."

Up to this date no Congregational Conference or Association has actually been admitted to membership in the Convention. Congregational ministers and laymen were enrolled at the last session and given all the privileges of participation in the deliberations of the Convention, but the Conferences or Associations which they represented have failed to apply for membership in the body. Such Conferences or Associations as may desire to become members of the Convention, should make formal application for membership, elect delegates in the required manner, and be admitted to membership by a vote of the Convention.

Membership in the Convention should not, in any way, interfere with any existing or future relationship to the General Council, or its constituent bodies. It should, on the other hand, supplement any existing plans with a stronger fellowship and a more definite effort towards building up a self-supporting work in the Southeast. Steps have already been taken to unite the scattered churches in several places within the bounds of the Convention.

This Convention does not include the Conferences or Associations of the colored people in its membership. The colored brethren of the Congregational and Christian Churches of the Southeast are working out a plan of a Southern Convention similar to our own Convention. The leading ministers of the Christian Churches in Virginia and North Carolina began work among the colored people before the Civil War, and continued their efforts diligently after the War, with great acceptance to the colored people. The colored people of the Christian Churches organized a Southern Convention several years ago, and the relationship between the two Conventions has been very cordial, and they have been enriched by a fraternal fellowship and a spirit of cooperation. The Afro-Christian leaders prefer to have their own Convention organization in the Southeast.

I. W. JOHNSON.

THE CONVENTION.

The Southern Convention of the Congregational and Christian Churches will meet in biennial session, with the First Christian Church, Suffolk, Va., May 1, 1934. Attention has already been called to this meeting, but we cannot be reminded too often of the approaching session of our Convention. There are many problems confronting our church. The future of the church is dependent more or less upon the proper solutions of these problems. However, I trust that no one will be unduly alarmed about conditions that will confront us at Suffolk. Whatever may be the issues involved and however important, the church, in convention assembled, will be equal to the tasks confronting it.

The success of our efforts to find the proper solutions for our problems will depend largely upon the spirit and attitude with which we approach them. Previously conceived and carefully worked-out programs will hardly achieve the desired end. We should be apprised of the issues involved, conversant on all angles that have to do with the same; but we should realize that ours is a religious gathering, and not a political convention; that our problems will find their solution not only in human wisdom and shrewd planning, but in submission and trust. The Spirit himself must be our guide and our wisdom. Egotistical attitudes have never been conducive to spiritual leadership. Through humility and trust, we find him whom the Master sent and who, he said, would guide us "into all truth."

Let every minister, every delegate, and every visitor come to the Convention with an open mind and a trustful spirit, seeking to know the will of God, and trusting in him to guide us, to find for us proper solutions for our problems, and to give to us the consciousness of achievement in our cooperative efforts.

One of the most essential problems that will claim our attention, and which awaits our action is the adoption of plans for the United Church. As I review the history of the merger of the Congregational and Christian Churches, it seems to me that there is no longer a question of merging; the merger has already been formed. It now remains for the United Church to weld itself in a bond of unity. Let our march of success, in Christ's name, continue! Let no one have a contentious spirit, but everyone a desire to know the will of God and to see his purpose accomplished in our Church and in our Convention.

The Convention will also face the necessity of evolving a satisfactory plan for the adequate support of the Convention and of all her agencies and institutions. It is difficult to say that one department of our work is more important than another. It is even more difficult to carry one department of the Church forward without carrying all departments. You cannot lift one corner of a structure irrespective of the other three without wrecking the structure itself. Through the years, we have sought to build the Kingdom of God in the hearts of our people. We have sought to achieve in this spiritual undertaking through the departments of Missions, Benevolences, Publications and Education. It is impossible for us to succeed in one of these departments at the expense of one or all of the others. Let no one among us feel that as a church we can go forward with either one of these departments lagging behind. To lift either one of these interests and to leave the others must eventually result in the wreckage of the whole.

So far as I am able to read the history of the Christian Church, we as a people have gone forward in those sections, and only in those sections, immediately served by a church paper and a church college. Our greatest growth in the former General Convention of the Christian Church was in Ohio, served directly by Defiance College and by The Herald of Gospel Liberty. The section in the South where our development, as a church, has been more significant is in Virginia and North Carolina, the territory served directly by THE CHRISTIAN SUN and Elon College. Missions and benevolences have been the outgrowths of these two enterprises of our Church.

We must give our attention to the needs of publication and education. If we are to accomplish our mission in kingdom service, we must have a trained leadership and an informed brotherhood. Our College is our training school, and our church paper is our medium of information. If these two departments can be adequately supported and enabled to function effectively, the other departments will be amply cared for. A trained leadership and an informed church will be ill content not to carry on its missionary program or to fail to provide for its benevolent interests.

It seems to me that THE CHRISTIAN SUN and Elon College should claim the prayerful attention of the entire Church and of the heart of the Convention itself. Surely, there is some way to put our church paper in the homes of our people; and there must be some way to relieve the College of its financial burdens, that she may feel free to continue her service of training and guidance for those who will fill positions of trust and leadership in our midst.

May we be in much prayer for guidance and help through the entire session of the Convention.

L. E. SMITH.

MT. ZION CHURCH.

The work here is going along nicely. The second Sunday in March we started raising money to cover the church. When we went back the second Sunday in April the new roof was on and paid for. Also the Sunday School rooms were framed, weather-boarded and covered—all paid for as we go.

I have never served a more willing and responsive people. Just let them know what you want done and they are with you. The outlook for the future is very encouraging. May the Lord bless these good people for carrying on in his kingdom.

J. FRANK APPLE.

POUNDING.

On the third Sunday in March, the writer was twice surprised as he received a bountiful pounding at his two services that day, at Beulah and Mt. Gilead.

After each service, upon going to our car, we found it loaded with good things to eat, such as sugar, coffee, potatoes, meal, canned fruit, preserves and many other useful things.

Words fail to express my appreciation, but may the Lord bless and prosper each giver.

A Story for the Children

PUT YOUR HEART IN IT.

Nan was fond of studying the dictionary; she always wanted to understand what she was reading and would often ask her mother the meaning of an unfamiliar word. Her mother wished her to learn to depend on her own efforts, when possible, so she would say, when asked the meaning of a word, "I think I have a good idea what it means, but suppose you get the dictionary and see if my memory serves me right," and Nan, instead of saying, "Oh! if you don't want to tell me, never mind," would get the dictionary and read the definition of the word and her mother by illustration helped her to understand it perfectly.

One evening in her Bible reading, she came upon the verse, "And whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, as unto the Lord," and said, "Mother, what does heartily mean?"

"Dictionary," said mother briefly, with a smile. "I might have known," laughed Nan, "I never get any help from you about a word, until I have helped myself."

Down came the dictionary from the shelf and Nan studied it for a little. "Worse than ever."

"How?" asked mother. "It says, 'Cordially, enthusiastically,'" read Nan, trying to get her tongue around the word.

"Enthusiastically," suggested mother. "Yes, that's it," returned Nan.

"Doesn't help you much, Nan, does it? Suppose I define heartily as meaning putting your heart into every action?"

Nan looked bewildered and then broke into a merry laugh.

"I only have one heart, and that's inside of me where it belongs. I don't see how I can put it into things that I do."

"I thought you were putting it into your own romp with the kitten before supper; you led him quite a chase after the scrap of paper tied to the string."

"Oh! it was fun," beamed Nan, as she thought of it. "But how was my heart in it, mother?"

"It means, Nan, that you are to do things with all your thought upon what you are doing; to be earnest in work or in play, to be glad and happy and faithful in everything, because it pleases the Lord to have you do so. Aren't you happier because you love God and are trying to do the things that please Jesus, than you would otherwise be?"

"Yes," said Nan, "it's happier; but does it mean even playing with the kitten?"

"Why not?" smiled mother. "If you did not play with the kitten just as hard as you could, would you be apt to study as hard as you could, or weed the garden as though you liked to do it?"

"Perhaps not," admitted Nan.

"And," continued mother, "don't you think you enjoyed having the kitten have a good time, as well as having one yourself?"

"Oh, yes! I just love to play with him, he enjoys it so."

"So, just as you played heartily with the kitten, that he might have a good time, so, when you do things for others, you want to put your heart in it, that it may be a blessing to them. Do it heartily as unto the Lord, for you know the Saviour said what we do for others in his name he accepts as done to him."

"I didn't put my heart in it, when I carried Mrs. Jacobs the Thanksgiving dinner. She said, 'Your mother is a good woman, and whatever she does she never does by halves.' I might have said I was glad to bring the food to her, for I really was, but I just didn't," said honest Nan.

"But you enter into your studies heartily," was mother's encouraging word, "and you know God is interested to have us know all we can, so we can do more good in the world."

"I try to do my best," said Nan humbly, "but I never thought much about the Lord's being interested in it."

"He is interested in everything that concerns us. You are doing it 'heartily as unto the Lord,' when you seek to find out just what his words mean, as you did this verse, instead of just reading it and not stopping to understand it."

"It must make a big difference in people's lives when they think about this, mustn't it, mother?" said Nan, seriously. "I hope I'll always think of it. I think I will enjoy doing things more, if I do."

"I'm sure you will, Nan, for now the dishes are ready for you to do."

Nan closed her Bible with a comical expression on her face. "I most wish I hadn't found that verse."

Mother laughed and so did Nan. "Well, here goes," and she went to her task so heartily that mother said, "Save the pieces, Nan," and while she worked she kept repeating to herself, "Heartily as unto the Lord." "It's pretty hard on you, poor heart, to be inside of me and in everything I do, but I guess you can do it."—The Southern Churchman.

LIGHT WITHOUT UNDUE HEAT.

With fire, but without venom, C. F. Andrews, beloved friend of India, gave the municipal councillors of Sholapur a jolt the other day in an address at the laying of the corner stone for a hospital to serve Harijans. It seems he had visited the Harijans in their hovels where they lived like animals and crawled through holes into their huts, before he made the speech. "It is splendid for you to erect this hospital for the Harijans," he said, gently, eyeing the doctors, councillors and influential citizens, "but your first duty is to clean up the abominable quarters and give these people a decent place to live." He further added that there was little gain in building a hospital to cure disease while leaving human beings in the conditions that created this disease. These Christians will be practical!

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary

DIVINE LOVE.

On the one side of us we are intensely human. On the other side of us we are divine. The conflict within us is that between the divine and the human. Our Lord realized this fact in all his ministry and teaching on earth, and sought to make clear the distinction, and to show the necessity, of having the divine permeate and control the human. He himself was the Son of God, also the Son of Man, and in himself was reconciling man to God and thus making new creatures of us. We become new creatures in Christ Jesus when the divine in us possesses and controls the human in us. A notable example of this distinction was that of Christ's dealing with the woman in Bethany while he was in the house of Simon, the leper. In breaking the alabaster box of precious ointment and pouring it on his head, this woman showed a love that was more than human. She expressed a devotion to her Lord that was and is divine. Even the disciples rebuked her for this, declaring that she should have been more human; that she should have remembered the poor and not have wasted her substance in making a love-offering to her Lord. And then our Lord rebuked the disciples and showed them that they would always have an opportunity of doing the human deed, and showing kindness to human beings, for he knew full well that if she cultivated her divine nature by making a love-offering to her Lord, she would not fail in her duty and privilege of caring for the poor.

That same principle obtains until this day. We make an offering to our Lord when we give to Missions, since it is out of our devotion to him that we are seeking to share him with others. His is the name above every name; his is the love that is sufficient, and in making known his name to those who do not know him, and in sharing his love with those who do not consciously know his love, we do the divine act through faith. Paul also was making this distinction when he said: "We walk by faith and not by sight." In all our dealings of the human type, "we walk by sight." We can see and know and comprehend. But our Lord desires to develop in us faith that sweeps us out into the realm of the divine, and lifts us up to things that are high and holy.

On this account, our Lord instituted Missions that he might provoke our faith, challenge us to the divine task of revealing him to a world, of cultivating in us the divine side of our natures; that on occasions, at any rate, we might be willing to make a love-offering to our Lord and glorify him, even as the woman in Bethany did, although the disciples of that day, as well as many disciples of our day, declare that this is waste and that we have enough to do if we look after the poor.

Be it said that we cannot develop the divine without caring for the human; but we can very easily develop and care for the human, and forget, ignore and deny the divine. We may remember mankind and forget God, but we cannot remember God and forget mankind. We may serve men and not serve God, but we cannot serve God and not serve fellowman. We may love men and hate God, but we cannot love God and hate men. Jesus was eminently human and divine when he said: "The first and greatest commandment is, 'Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart.'" and the second commandment, and the like unto it, but not superior, is that "We shall love our neighbor as ourselves." Again we may love our neighbor and not love God, but if we love God, we will love our neighbor.

In our missionary offerings, prayers and service, we are seeking to pour out a token of love upon the head of our Lord that his name may be glorified to the uttermost parts, and that the message of his saving power and grace may be given to those who are hungry of heart and whose souls are perishing. MRS. W. R. SELLARS, Treasurer.
Burlington, N. C.

CLOSED DOORS.

By MRS. W. P. LAWRENCE, *Supt.,
Alamance District Woman's Missionary Rally,
April 11, 1934.*

Many loyal friends of the Mission cause have asked the reason for the present difficulties of our work. Much of the trouble may be said to be in the divided house at home. Christianity runs through many channels; and our own channel of Protestantism divides into a myriad of smaller streams. This division of Protestantism is not confined to denominational lines. Within the fold of each sect there are sharp divisions in matters of belief and practice.

Perhaps the most acute of these differences is from the fact that much of our Mission work was founded in a spirit of exclusiveness. We who have the only true way of salvation went abroad to tell the heathen the story so they, too, might be saved. At present, a vast number of Christians see the whole question from a new angle. They have found that Jesus has pointed them to a saving relationship with God; but they believe that many men in other lands have also approached near to God in their own way.

Another source of our difficulty in Mission work is found in the skepticism about Christianity which has arisen in the pagan world. A few years ago they saw the so-called Christian world in the Great War. Such fury and hatred was a veritable hell on earth, nor were the pagan nations slow to draw the inevitable conclusion, "So, you are Christians? Well, if that is Christianity, we don't want it." And once Christianity had been challenged, other cries of doubt and defiance arose from those we sought to evangelize.

The cause of Christianity was not made easier by the development in Soviet Russia. Russia is the sworn foe of all religions. Yet, notwithstanding the cruelties she has inflicted upon individuals, her ideals of justice for poor and rich alike sound to many ears like a new and worthy gospel. The question may be raised as to how we may meet the challenge or remedy the troubled situation. How can we so Christianize our own land that our example will lend authority to the gospel in all the earth? Should our churches require a stronger allegiance to Christ from their members on the theory that a smaller, but more Christian church, would have a leavening influence in the land?

These are questions that call for answer. Surely our cause never needed friends more than now. And surely we are called to more prayer, and a more intelligent study of our work. As we set ourselves to better understanding of the entire Mission question, we may, under the guidance of God, find an answer to our problems, and a new motive that shall lend success to the work we love. One of the tragedies of our today, is the lack of organization and seeming indifference of our young people. May we not throw out a challenge to them to heed the call and join forces with us in this great world-wide movement?

Mission agencies in all denominations are faced with depleted treasuries. The burden of debt has weighed heavily and in many places has paralyzed the missionary activities of our church. Today we need a conquering faith so that his will and his work may be done through us. We need not only faith, but a vision and courage—a courage that comes from the presence of the Master. Are there any faint-hearted among us? Are there any discouraged? Let us draw near to Him, and with new zeal catch a vision of the task before us and we shall conquer in His name.

Then we need to heed the call of prayer. It is said that an athletic coach in one of our leading universities sent to each man on his team a New Year's card on which were the words:

"Close Your Door." His players understood that their instructor was urging them to concentrate. There would be times when a player, if he would win, must shut out all things from his life which would weaken or hinder him. He must not waste his time nor his energy on anything that would sap his strength. Concentration on the rules of the game, or at practice on the field would mean much during the athletic season. In this incident, busy women may find a worth-while lesson. Closed doors of preparation and prayer are essential to any good missionary meeting. Good programs do not just happen. The missionary women must know what to shut out that we may open wider the door of sympathy and service for our Master. We must close the door on self if we would be a real leader in his work. Christ, the world's greatest leader, shut the door on an easy life that he might walk the way that led to the redemption of the world. So must we, in this age, shut the door on all amusements or social activities that would sap our spiritual power and strength. May we, as missionary women, heed the call and measure up to the opportunity that is ours, for

Among the things that this day brings
Will come to you a call,
The which, unless you're listening,
You may not hear at all:
Lest it be very soft and low,
Whate'er you do, where'er you go,
Be listening.

Then whatso'er the call may be,
To service small or great,
To cross the seas and speak God's love,
To smile, to rule a state—
When God shall come and say to you,
"This is the work that you must do,
Be listening!"

POULTRY AND POVERTY IN INDIA.

By MISS DOROTHY CUSHING,
News Editor, The American Board.

What connection is there between "India's starving millions" and the humble hen? Rev. Robert Winthrop Fairbank, of Vadala, India, believes there is a real link. Rural work, such as the kind in which Mr. Fairbank specializes, is being stressed more and more as a natural part of the Christian program around the world. In India the farmers make up 85 per cent of the population, and poultry raising, better and varied crops, as well as animal husbandry, are being taught by the agricultural missionaries like Mr. Fairbank.

Chain hotels, caterers and markets in India send to China for the most part to secure frozen or dried eggs for Indian consumers, declares Mr. Fairbank, who spent the greater part of his furlough in 1932 at Rutgers taking special work to increase his knowledge along agricultural lines. Why should India go to China for eggs, asks Mr. Fairbank, when she might well raise them herself and benefit the Indian farmer. So he has started a poultry association for cooperative marketing.

Mr. Fairbank, who comes from a famous missionary family, being the son and grandson of India missionaries, was born in Sholapur. He is a graduate of Amherst College and Hartford Seminary. He began his work in India in 1920 as an associate missionary for three years, and was appointed for life service in 1925.

Mr. Fairbank is head of a Vocational School at Vadala, where the children are given useful training in simple agriculture, carpentry, masonry, chicken raising, bookbinding, tin work, and so on down the line of trades that will enable them to earn a decent living. The school also teaches the three R.'s and Mrs. Fairbank has specialized in religious education. There is no definite religious instruction in the school, but classes are provided for each grade at the church next door, and although the children are not compelled to go, there has never been a student who has not chosen to attend the classes. There are Mewaris, Mohammedan, and Hindus, as well as Christians, in the school. One of the first problems brought up by the native people themselves was that of religious education.

A Hindu inspector passing through Vadala said, "I want to see a Christian school. I have visited many government or local boarding schools, but I have not yet seen a Christian school." So Mr. Fairbank escorted him through the schools, the church, and lastly, to a class in religious education. As he left the church, the inspector was heard to say, as though thinking aloud, "Yes, there is a difference."

Robert Fairbank has organized a short course in rural reconstruction for village teachers and workers to which he asked leaders of high order, both Christian and non-Christian. The watchword was "Cooperation." His villagers were exhorted to provide their children with more milk, to raise more fresh eggs, to look out for health and the education of their boys and girls. It told them how to organize into cooperative societies and develop cottage industries to tide them over the non-farming season. It did not leave out such character building work as that done by the Girl Guides and Boy Scouts. Last, but not least, it presented the value and necessity of spiritual things cultivated through religious education, drama, and music.

"I was very informal," confesses Mr. Fairbank in a recent letter, as he told of an agricultural exhibit at which His Excellency, Governor Sykes, paid particular attention to the bee stalls set up by the Vadala people. In fact, so great was his enthusiasm over his work that he forgot that he was addressing the King Emperor's representative, and the aides often found it necessary to hold up their handkerchiefs in order to conceal their grins. His Excellency, however, was too deeply interested and appreciative of the efforts of the missionaries to speed up his program of village reconstruction to take any offense, even if he had been conscious of any lack of formality on the part of the zealous young missionary.

NOTICE.

The Eleventh Biennial Session of the Woman's Missionary Convention of the Southern Christian Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches, will meet with the Suffolk Christian Church, Tuesday, May 1st. The morning session will open at 10 o'clock. All Presidents of Conferences, Superintendents of Departments, and Chairmen of Standing Committees are requested to have complete reports. A full delegation is urged as this session is to be one of unusual importance, due to the many things of interest relating to our future work that will be brought before the Convention.

Rev. R. R. Shrader, Missionary to China, will be the principal speaker.

MRS. J. A. WILLIAMS, President,
MRS. L. W. STAGG, Secretary.

NOTICE.

To the Pastors of the Southern Christian Convention:

The Woman's Missionary Convention of the Southern Christian Convention will convene in Suffolk, Tuesday, May 1st, at 10 o'clock. Rev. R. H. Shraeder will be our speaker.

We wish you to make this announcement in your church and try to have as many of your members present as possible. We hope you are planning to be present at this meeting, for we need your presence and wise counsel.

Very truly yours,
MRS. E. L. BEALE.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

IF I WERE A CONGREGATIONALIST.

If I were a Congregationalist I should be tremendously interested in the matter of uniting my church with the Christian Church. For forty years this idea has been discussed and recently both Congregationalists and Christians representing all sections of the United States have voted to unite.

If I were a Congregationalist in the East, I would be a member of the big church. But if in the South, I would be a member of the little church, comparatively. Sometimes big boys like to show their strength by picking up little boys. There are some big boys who make it a point to see that the little boys are treated fairly, and there are some little boys who put up a pretty stiff howl when they are being tramped upon. If I were a Congregationalist in the East I should want to be generous, but if in the South I should insist upon my rights.

The time is now come when plans must be perfected for uniting the work of Congregational and Christian Churches in the South. All we have to do now is to unite. The Suffolk Convention brings us to the point where we must actually do the thing we have voted to do.

If I were a Congregationalist I should weigh carefully the arguments of members of the Christian Church to the effect that all the enterprises, plans and programs of the Southern Christian Convention should be carried on as heretofore with little or no regard to what Congregationalists have been doing. It seems to me that I could see certain values in the Southern Convention with its organization and historic background. It has boards and institutions which seem to be worthy to live. As a Congregationalist I would be interested in preserving the history, institutions and forward-moving program of the Christian Church.

But I would not forget that my own Congregational Church also has a history, plans, programs and institutions. I might be the little boy in a crowd of bigger boys, but I would stand up for my rights. A merger is an entirely different thing from one group surrendering to another. I would note the Southern Convention has a program that does not fit into the United Denominational program. I would also note that it has extra institutions to support and that it does not support the denominational enterprises.

If I were a congregationalist in the South, it would be my joy to join hands and heart, with members of the Christian Church in a united program, provided the members of the Christian Church would accept from my church as much as they expect me to accept from theirs. I should insist that we have a united budget worked out along denominational lines so that all of us could share in contributing to all of the enterprises of the united church. I should also insist that if THE CHRISTIAN SUN is to represent the united church in the South, it fit into the work of the Congregational as well as the Christian Church people. I should insist that representatives from my church share with representatives from the Christian Church on all boards, committees and institutions. I should insist that we face frankly the history and progress of both former churches, that we seek to preserve all that is worthy, and make united plans for a progressive forward-moving church in the South.

Since the Eastern Virginia Conference and the Southern Christian Convention have been voting since before I was born to unite with the Congregational Church, since I have voted in the General Convention of the Christian Church at Piqua, Ohio, and Seattle, Washington, to unite Congregational and Christian Churches, perhaps I am a Congregationalist. I am certainly in favor of a united program which will conserve all of the good things in the Congregational and Christian Churches of the South. I am in favor of the big boy being generous and the little one getting a square deal. There are no problems connected with this union which are too big for Christian people to solve.

A BIG BANQUET.

When Congregationalists and Christians banqueted in Seattle, Washington, three summers ago, that progressive city let the news get out that this church banquet was the largest ever served in Seattle. It was a real thrill to sit with that crowd around the festive board. I travelled across the continent to be there, and have been happy about it for three years.

The program in Seattle was no better than the one will be in Suffolk, Virginia, on May 3rd, when the Youth Fellowship of the Southeast will dine together. I sincerely hope that young people from every part of the Southeast will crowd the banquet hall until Suffolk can say that the young people of the church staged the biggest banquet in the history of that great city. Come on, young people, let's pack the biggest banquet hall in Suffolk.

You can secure reservations for fifty cents each from Mr. Robert Speight of Suffolk. The Key Worker in each church in the Eastern Virginia Conference will have tickets for sale also. Get your ticket early, lest there should be no room when you apply for admission.

"YOU CAN'T WIN THAT WAY."

The above statement is one of a number of excellent things said in a moving picture which has recently been in our city. "Death Takes a Holiday" is one of the finest sermons which I have heard (seen) in a long while. The story is too long to tell in detail here, though the picture is a study of why people fear death, and it makes death seem to be a thing of beauty and fulfillment rather than the destruction of high hopes.

One of the characters had bumped into difficulties in his love affair and was trying to drown his troubles with drink when his mother said to him, "You can't win that way!"

Young people today have to face the public sale of intoxicating liquors, and in some States will be constantly confronted with enticing advertisements of the various kinds of drink. Sometimes they may feel inclined to solve their troubles by dissolving them with alcoholic beverages. If you who read these lines ever feel such an impulse, just remember that you cannot win anything worth winning by drinking. It isn't being done!

QUALITIES THAT MAKE FOR SUCCESS.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC, APRIL 29, 1934.

I. Chron. 22:11-13.

A Worship Program.

Theme—"Purposeful Living."

Call to Worship—

"Follow the Christ, the King,
Live pure, speak true, right wrong,
Follow the King.
Else wherefore born?"

—Tennyson.

Response (to be sung).

"Jesus calls us; by thy mercies,
Saviour, may we hear thy call:
Give our hearts to thy obedience,
Serve and love thee best of all."

Scripture Lesson—I. Chron. 22:11-13.

Prayer—For guidance along the way. For a wide view of life.

Hymn—"My Faith Looks Up to Thee."

Reading—"He who would master life should wear it lightly, even as Jesus wore his mantle knowing it to be all one piece and woven from above."—Glenn Clark.

Response (softly)—"I Would Be Like Jesus."

Choose the approach which will arouse the keenest interest in your own group. It may be:

1. A quest for the right answer to the question "What Is Success?" The answer given either by definition or illustration or both.

2. Occasional debates are popular in some societies. The young people might debate on the following subjects: Resolved, That it was easier for a young man to have a successful career twenty-five years ago than it is today. Resolved, That a girl has more chance for success today than she had fifty years ago.

What is success? A list of current ideas of success may reveal some of the following:

(a) Wealth, or ability to have the things that money can buy.

(b) Education, or the highest development of the powers of mind and ability to appreciate the best in literature, art, music.

(c) Happiness, in terms of friends and a satisfying home life.

(d) Prestige, with appreciation and recognition of one's efforts.

(e) Influence which has helped others to live on a higher level.

When you have worked out your definition of success, it is important to think how it may be attained. What are the qualities which help to make one successful? If you were marking the Road to Success, what guide-posts would you erect? Here are some which have been suggested—can you think of others?

(a) Have a high purpose. True success does not happen. The successful person has a recognized, worthy aim.

(b) Seek a true sense of values. One of the most important things in life is to choose those things upon which one will place the greatest value.

(c) Pay the price. Comparatively few are willing to pay the price of the success they might enjoy.

(d) Keep your self-respect. No individual, no matter how wealthy nor how well educated or how popular he may be, is successful unless he maintains his own self-respect.

(e) Do your part. Make your contribution to the world in which you live. Someone has said: "Would you make your life great? Attach it to a great cause."

Solomon had many advantages, but none greater than that he could receive advice from so good and wise a father as David. To find success is to prosper, and David gave the best recipe: "Observe the statutes and ordinances of God; be courageous; fear not."

OUR ALL FOR THE KINGDOM.

LESSON IV—APRIL 22, 1934.

GOLDEN TEXT: "It is more blessed to give than to receive."—Acts 20:35.

LESSON TEXT: Matt. 19:1-30.

A Young Man's Question.

"One came and said unto him, 'Good Master, what good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life?'" It was rather a suggestive question. Here was one who was young, one who was rich, one who was educated and cultured, one who had social position, one who probably had political power, one who was clean and upright, who had kept the commandments—that is, commandments dealing with one's relationship with one's fellowmen—here is such a young man asking what he must do to inherit eternal life. On the surface of it, one would think that that young man had about everything that would make life worth-while. The question seems foolish as judged by the standards of the world.

The young man was in earnest. He was sincere. He was reverent. He was eager. There is no reason to believe that he was posing. It is this fact that makes the question so significant.

His question reveals two interesting facts. First of all, the young man bore witness to the eternal fact that things, position, power, culture in themselves, do not satisfy the insistent hunger of the human heart, the deeper needs of life. His question, "What lack I yet?" was a frank confession that in spite of all his money and his morals, there was an unsatisfied longing in his heart for life itself. He did not have, and he knew he did not have "eternal life." And when he used the term "eternal life," he was not thinking in terms of quantity or length, but in terms of quality. He stated what we all know—man cannot live by bread alone; he must have God if he is to have life in its fullest meaning.

The young man's question also revealed the fact that he thought of eternal life as something that he could merit by his good works, something that he could earn. "What good thing shall I DO, that I may inherit eternal life?" as Mark and Luke have it. And in asking this question he was simply speaking the thoughts of many people today who think that one does something to get eternal life. The plain fact is that we cannot do anything to earn eternal life. Eternal life is the gift of God. We are saved not by works, says Paul, lest we should boast; we are saved by grace through faith in Jesus Christ.

The Master's Answer.

The Master first of all tried to give the young man an understanding of the deeper meaning of the word "good" by which he had addressed him. To call Jesus good in the deeper meaning of the term, meant to call him God.

Because the young man sought life by doing, Jesus sent him to the law. He told the young man to keep the commandments, and was specific. Jesus even added the general commandment, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." The young man immediately said—and we may believe he was telling the truth—that he had kept these commandments from his youth up. And then he added these suggestive and significant words, "What lack I yet?"

It should be noted that when Jesus listed the commandments, he listed only those which dealt with a man's dealings with or relationship with his fellowman. Jesus intentionally omitted the commandments dealing with man's relationship with God. He thus made the young man see that mere morality was not enough. There is more to life than horizontal relationships. Life has its perpendicular relationships, also. Jesus then proceeded to bring this truth home to the young man.

"If thou wouldst be perfect, go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven; and come, follow me." The young man had a god before God. He loved gold more than he loved God. He thought that he had possessions; the fact of the matter was that his possessions had him. Jesus knew that that young man could never find life in the better sense until he abandoned himself utterly to God. It was only as the young man "cut off and put away from him that which caused him to stumble" that he could enter into life, could find life. This does not mean that a man must always sell all that he has in order to be a Christian. It does mean that a man must get out of his life and keep out of his life, anything and everything that comes between him and God. Treasures on earth are often hindrances to treasures in heaven.

The Young Man's Response.

"He went away sorrowful." The first three words are among the most tragic in the entire New Testament. The fourth word follows as a matter of course. Whenever and wherever a man comes face to face with the call and claims of Jesus and turns away from them, he always turns away sorrowful. What a momentous decision it was! Every thing was at stake! And the tragedy of it all was that when the young man turned away from Jesus to his possessions, he was turning to that which inevitably he must give up anyway. Jesus asked him to give up his possessions for eternal life. And Jesus offered him true treasures. The young man lost eternal life and he also lost his treasure, too. An ominous silence falls forever upon this young man so far as the New Testament is concerned.

The Master's Warning.

"How hardly," said Jesus, "shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of heaven." An abundance of material things have a tendency to make men self-sufficient. So many men try to get possessions only to find that possessions get them. So many men who try to serve God and mammon end up by serving mammon. There is inherent in riches, in material things, that which makes it difficult for a man to preserve the qualities of mind and heart which are prerequisites for entrance into the kingdom.

It is difficult, but not impossible. The grace of God can save even a rich man. But nothing but the grace of God can save him.

But he who gives Christ first place, even though he be poor, yet is he rich, for godliness is profitable unto all things, having the promise of the life which now is, and of that which is to come.

IN THE "GOOD OLD (LIQUOR) DAYS."

Here's what the interested parties got:
From a bushel of corn, in the "good old days," the distiller got four gallons of whiskey. This retailed at $16.50. Here's what the others got out of it:

- The farmer got.....$ 25
- The United States got..... 4.40
- The railroad got..... 1.00
- The manufacturer got..... 3.70
- The drayman got..... .15
- The retailer got..... 7.00
- The consumer got..... Drunk
- The wife got..... Hungry
- The children got..... Ragged

Will there be much difference in "these days"?

MONDAY.

ANGELS EVERY DAY.

"He shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy way."—Psalm 91:11; Matt. 4:6. (Read the whole 91st Psalm.)

There are people who have a sense of God's presence with them every day, guiding them, blessing them and protecting them. We are told that Roosevelt, the President of the United States, feels that presence. To have this sense and to realize that it is a fact, is the grandest feeling in the experience of man.

If this experience is possible to some—even one—it is possible to all, and that means you. The secret of it is, humble submission to God, committing our way unto him, and following him. For every advance that we make toward him this way, there is an immediate and corresponding advance on his part. It is the old law of "seeking and finding," of "knowing and opening," of "calling upon him and hearing the voice" in answer, of loving faith met by faithful love. If a man dwells "in the secret place of the Most High," he shall abide "under the shadow of the Almighty." Here is the condition, the promise and the fulfillment. We do not need guns and armored cars in living his life and doing his bidding.

Prayer—Dear Father, we desire to find thee a conscious presence in our lives today. We humbly bow before thee seeking that presence. Grant us thy loving favor and protecting care in all our walks of life. In Christ's name, we ask it.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

GOD'S INNER CIRCLE.

"Delight thyself also in the Lord, and he shall give thee the desires of thine heart."—Psalm 37:4.

Those who know the inner circle of God are those who know the fellowship which comes by venturing one's all upon him; who gives himself with steadfast trust and unwavering faith unto God's keeping; who surrenders himself to God and by that act is taken near to him where he attains that state which the Apostle Paul describes in stronger terms, when he says, "Ye died, and your new life is hid with Christ in God."

Failure to realize this fellowship may be due to many things, but it is mainly due to our failure to pursue a growing knowledge of God on our own account. We may be religious, but if we grow cold and inactive we cease to become sensitive of spiritual enrichment, and the result is that we reach a time when we say "I have no more desire. Religion does not appeal to me any more. I got nothing out of it. God is not." This is a pathetic state for any soul to reach; and one does not have to be a wilful sinner or deny him, to come to this; just stop seeking, let God alone, even if he is a habit in our life, when faith runs on a level, and is only a habit, it dies.

As an astronomer gives himself seriously, deliberately and continuously, to the study of the heavens, so we must give ourselves to God and his blessed presence. We must knock at his door until we find "the secret of the Most High is with them that fear (study) him."

Prayer—Dear Father, we believe that it is in thee we live and move and have our being. Forbid that we shall ever forget thee. We come to thee daily in prayer, seeking thee and thy grace. We pray for growth in that grace and knowledge that shall make us pleasing in thy sight and music forever.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

FINDING GOD.

"Be still and know that I am God."—Psalm 46:10.

It was in silence that Elijah heard the voice of God and became aware of him and his will.

It was in silence that Job heard the voice of God and was inspired to believe steadfastly in him.

It was in the silence of the night that David communed with his own heart and he found the way to become a "man after God's own heart."

It was Jehovah's plea with Israel (Isa. 23:2) to be still and see the judgments of the Lord as he "stretched his hands out over the sea" and "shook the kingdoms" of the world.

The necessity for an inward stillness is clear. In true silence strength is renewed. In silence the mind is able to draw away from the world, its rush and glamour, and perceive the divine will. In silence one may see the heart of things as opposed to the superficial. Without that silence one is prevented from perfect attention, his ears are made deaf to the voice of God, and the rush and glamour of the world blind him to the divine light. Without that silence the fruits of the spirit are clouded to the perceptions.

Do not be too much taken up with the excitements of business, social relations, and studies. Without God these things are wanton and their fruit must pass with a wanton breeze. Do not be too much taken up with the material things of life, lest when we are weary with the wanton world, we will have no satisfying place to go. Life, to be worth anything, must have a moral and God-conscious basis. If this is not true the universe is only a jest.

Prayer—Our Father in heaven, and our Father in earth, be thou in us the motive of all our actions, words and thoughts. We dedicate ourselves this day to thee.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

A NEW CREATION.

"A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you."—Ezk. 36:26.

"If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature."—II. Cor. 5:17.

Divine protection, as represented in the above Scripture, is only one of the blessings we receive from God. Behold, in Christ we are new, and all things are new.

Life is something different to every person, at least to every thought-group. A poem of unknown origin reminds us, that to the joker it is a jest; to the miser it is money; to the lawyer it is trial; to the doctor it is a patient; to the teacher it is a school; to the engineer it is a long heavy grade; to the gambler it is all a gamble; but to the man who loves his work it is a delightful trip, and to the Christian it is a "story new" with every day, and, the author says, after all, "Life is what we make it. Brother, what is life to you?"

The readers of this page do not have to be reminded what regeneration does for a sinner. What a new man he is! Old things have passed away. Behold, all things are become new—a new faith, a new vision, new motives, new objectives, new determination, new powers to obtain those objectives, new loves, a new peace, a new day—and so on. God bless us!

Prayer—O Lord, our God, it is a new day for us, and the whole new day lies before us. Do thou give us the heart and mind to see what it means to us and what we can make of it for ourselves, for others and for thee, and make us new from day to day. We ask it for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

COLOR-BLIND SALESMEN.

"The eyes of the wicked shall fail."—Read Job 11:13-20.

An investigation of three hundred and seventy-five salesmen handling colored cloth disclosed the fact that twenty-seven were color-blind, and unable to match any sample of goods sent in by a customer. It would seem to be necessary to test all such salesmen for color-blindness.

But the percentage of color-blindness is about the same among men and women in general. Most of see far less than we think we are seeing, and what we see, we see with far less accuracy than we think we are displaying. The average person has a very imperfect notion of his own imperfections.

So much more charitable, then, should we be toward others. Society has little room for the cocksure individual. It behooves all of us to practice humility.

Prayer—Forgive our pride and vainglory, thou meek and lowly Saviour! Help us to deal justly and kindly with all around us.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"DANGER" TOO LATE.

"Now therefore let the fear of Jehovah be upon you; take heed and do it."—Read II. Chron. 19:1-7.

The most dramatic feature of the tragic and fatal explosion of the movie ship, the Viking, off Newfoundland, was the fact that the cameraman, Director Fissell, was actually, when the awful explosion occurred, engaged in lettering a "danger" to warn the men on the ship that gunpowder was stored in various portions of it. But the warning came too late.

So it is with us, when we postpone our attention to the perils around us. Souls are in danger far more frequently than bodies, but we take little pains to letter "danger" signs, and pay little heed to them if they are displayed. How often our Lord bade his followers to be on their guard!

Prayer—Help us to be alert against sin, O God, for our own sake and for the sake of comrades. May we not wait for the explosion. May we begin our watchfulness now.—Amen.

GOD AT CHURCH.

"Come unto me; hear and you shall live; and I will make an everlasting covenant with you."—Isa. 55:3.

You are asked to go to church today; what for?

The church has many functions. It is called "the assembly of the saints;" it is called the "revelation of God in the world;" it is called the "expression of man toward God;" God commissioned it to carry his Gospel to "all creation;" it is the working unit of his people in his world; it is his "household of faith."

But among the many things which it is, in God's idea, it is a house where his children recover from fatigue and effort, where they may get inspiration to take a new hold on high pur-

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, Pastor.

THE CHURCH AND THE MINISTRY.

By DR. F. W. BURNHAM.

[This sermon, which is reprinted from The Christian-Evangelist, is by one of the outstanding ministers of the Disciples of Christ in Richmond, Va., and indeed of the entire country. Dr. Burnham is a powerful speaker as well as a forceful writer.—Mg. Ed.]

"Lay this before the brotherhood, and you will be an excellent minister of Christ Jesus, brought up on the truths of the faith and on the lessons of the good doctrine you have already followed."—I. Tim. 4:6. (Moffatt.)

The prosperity of a church depends in no small degree upon the efficiency of its ministry, that is upon the value and effectiveness of the service which it renders to the community and the world; and the efficiency of the ministry rests upon the "excellency" of its minister.

Now the relation of pastor and people is one of the most beautiful and most delicate of the relationships which we as human beings sustain one to another. Beautiful because, like the relation of members of an orchestra to their director, if all play together under the leader's direction the most inspiring harmonies result; and delicate, because if any instrument gets out of tune or any player loses the tempo discord and disharmony are produced.

The preacher's task is a difficult one, perhaps more difficult than that of any other leader in a community. The preacher must specialize in the interpretation and application of the principles of the everlasting word of God; yet he cannot be a mere specialist. The range of his thought and his activities must be as wide as the needs of humanity.

For one thing, the minister must be an administrator. The church organization is somewhat of a machine, and, like every other machine, it needs attention. Its bearings must be lubricated, otherwise they will heat and squeak. Its parts must be kept functioning efficiently and harmoniously. The minister must guide and manage the machine; but he must not become a mere master-mechanic; for the church is also something better than a machine.

The church and the minister together hold a very sacred trusteeship. Says the Apostle Paul to Timothy: "Keep the securities of the faith intact." Something has been entrusted to our keeping which is not for ourselves alone. It is the gospel of Christ. It is both for us and for all the world. Ours is a trusteeship to preserve it and to pass it on. Securities may be enhanced by the proper handling of them; but faithful stewards must see that they are not depleted thereby.

The preacher, also, must be a prophet. True the message is not originally his own; but it comes to utterance through his brain and voice and charged with the dynamic of his personality. Its effectiveness will depend upon him. He is a herald, not a theorist, a messenger, not a sophist. But he must win acceptance for his message and secure voluntary compliance with its terms. The pulpit is not the preacher's pedestal. It is his audition-chamber whence he pours out his message and the music of his soul upon a listening world.

But most of all, I think, the relation of a minister and his church is that of a father and his family. Isn't that what the Apostle Paul implied when he wrote to the Corinthian Church: "Who is weak, and I am not weak? Who is caused to stumble, and I burn not?" The achievements of his members are the joy and pride of a minister, and their losses and their sufferings are his sorrow. He is a shepherd and the welfare of the flock is his chief concern. I think it was Dr. Charles Edward Jefferson who once said that a minister usually becomes "either the shepherd of the church or its pet lamb." Don't make a pet lamb of your minister.

What shall we consider the measure of the church's and the minister's success? Large audiences are good. Increasing membership and multiplying activities for kingdom advance are praiseworthy; but these are not the final test. The development of Christ-like personalities is the ultimate goal. For the minister this means sharing with Christ, on the one hand, and with the congregation, on the other. He is a partaker of both the joy and of the sufferings of his Master, and of his members. Your minister has a right to share with you the best that comes into your lives. We ministers do so share with our people, and that is a privilege; but if we share your good things we must also share your trials and your heartaches. We lighten our own burdens by helping to carry yours.

Up in the north of Japan, I met a Christian Japanese carpenter. He told me that, in his region, craftsmen wore on the back of their jackets the insignia of their craft. Being a Christian carpenter and proud of the fact that his craft was that in which the Lord labored, he wore upon his back the symbol of the cross. It seems to me that unless we ministers are willing to carry a cross upon our backs we have no right to have it upon our lips. We dare not preach the cross unless we are willing to carry it also. But do not let your minister bear the cross alone, while all the rest go free. Take up your cross too and follow where Christ shall lead you both.

PARAGRAPHS TO PONDER.

[Honorable Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, has recently contributed to the public press a series of articles on "America Must Choose." These articles were written at the request of the Foreign Policy Association and the World Peace Foundation. The following salient paragraphs are taken from the series.]

Much as we dislike them, the new types of social control that we have now in operation are here to stay, and to grow on a world or national scale.

We must not only find a new leadership, but a common will to support a planned and statesmanlike purpose. Our old leaders stand discredited.

* * *

No sane and conscientious man will count lightly the risk of another great war, nor fail to do all in his power by every means possible to lessen that tragic risk.

* * *

Business men operating as individuals on the animal plane can destroy us no matter how great our scientific discoveries. As a matter of fact, the greater the discoveries, the more certain the destruction, with things as they are.

* * *

Our people on the street and on the soil must change their attitude concerning the nature of man and the nature of human society. They must develop the capacity to envision a cooperative objective and be willing to pay the price to attain it.

* * *

The religious keynote, the economic keynote, the scientific keynote of the new age must be the overwhelming realization that mankind now has such mental and spiritual powers and such control over nature that the doctrine of the struggle of existence is definitely outmoded and replaced by the higher law of cooperation.

When cooperation becomes a living reality in the spiritual sense of the term, when we have defined certain broad objectives which we all want to attain, when we can feel the significance of the forces at work not merely in our own line, not merely in our own class, not merely in our own nation, but in the world as a whole—then the vision of Isaiah and the insight of Christ will be on their way toward realization.

poses from which the hand has slackened; it is a place of spiritual compensation from which we see our lives more truly. At the church, in his house, one may feel God coming between him and the many things which would dishearten him and work despair. Under the spell of faith and thought there, we may come under the rebukes and deliverances of high and unworldly considerations; to go to church and seek God in worship "is the instinct of a soul which has become aware of itself and its surroundings," says Hastings. Foundations of life and life's cleansing power and sure support is from him. But these things can come to us only by searching for him, and it is at the church we may find him; not that it is impossible to find him elsewhere, for if we don't find him elsewhere it is certain that we will not find him at the church; but it is at the church that we find that God is searching for man. Whatever place one may find him, there is still need for the church where his soul and our souls meet; where the warmth of fellowship is found; where the great body of saints unite and march on, for God is in the world.

Prayer—Our Father, we thank thee that thou hast made our devotions at home a sanctuary of thy presence, but give us the glorious light of the larger fires of the church, and make there our joys complete.—Amen.

A man is out of place in his own home when he stays there at such times as he ought to be in church.—Christian Evangelist.

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

South Entrance to the Campus

ELON COLLEGE, founded by the Christian Church in 1839, has fully justified the faith and hope of its founders during its 42 years of operation. Its graduates from the four-year course leading to a bachelor's degree, number 980, now living, 122 of whom are in the Christian Ministry and full-time Christian service. The majority of these are members of our own denomination. In addition, 449 are in educational work and are an active influence in the lay leadership of the Christian Church.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION BUILDING, and the definite religious atmosphere of the College, provide the very best facilities available for training for religious leadership, and offer the Church its finest opportunity to train the young people of the denomination to assume active leadership both in the ministry and laity of the local churches.

WILSON—HILLIARD.

On Easter Sunday, in Cary, Miss Ella Hilliard became the bride of Mr. J. B. Wilson, the writer officiating.

The chancel was attractively decorated with pines and spring flowers.

Music was rendered by Mrs. W. L. Hilliard. The bridesmaids were first to enter, these being Miss Laura Hilliard and Mrs. H. C. Hilliard. Both wore shoulder corsages of sweetpeas and lilies of the valley.

The bride entered on the arm of her brother, Fleming Hilliard. She was attired in blue with gray accessories, and wore a corsage of rose-buds showered with lilies of the valley.

The groom and his best man, Mr. William Stanback, entered and took their places at the altar.

H. C. HILLIARD.

OBITUARIES

ALLEN.

Mrs. Margaret E. Allen was born November 9, 1848; and died March 22, 1934. She was the mother of thirteen children, three of whom preceded her to the grave. Ten children 42 grandchildren and 29 great-grandchildren survive her. She had been a resident of Lanett, Ala., for 38 years.

She was a very familiar saint of God, her name being a household word to hundreds of people in this community.

She was left a widow several years ago, since which time she has spent her life serving her children and friends. Her life was one continual ministration of mercy, and how we all miss her since her going away. All people rise up and call her blessed.

Her manly sons and noble daughters stood watch around her bed in the days of her last sickness, with the sweet assurance that "Mother was ready to go," for she loved the Lord and rejoiced in the accomplishment of his will.

She had been a member of the Baptist Church since early in life. Ever true and faithful to all obligations placed upon her, she goes out peacefully to meet her Lord.

Weep not, dear ones, for in due season you will reap your reward if you faint not, and your mother's joy will be perfected in finding her children saved.

From one who loved her and appreciated her life. G. D. HUNT.

MORTON.

Mr. John Stadler Morton was born January 27, 1866, and fell asleep March 11, 1934, at the age of 68 years, 1 month and 12 days. Brother Morton's death was sudden.

October 12, 1890, he was united in marriage to Miss Eliza Lamm, and to this union were born four children, all of whom, with his wife, survive.

Early in life he professed faith in Christ and united with Bethlehem Christian Church, where he remained faithful until death called him home. Burial services were conducted by the writer in Bethlehem Church, and interment was in the church cemetery.

May God bless the family.

G. C. CRUTCHFIELD.

PERRY.

Mrs. Annie Perry, wife of the late Mr. Burl Perry, died at her home, Wake Forest, N. C., March 14, 1934. The funeral was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. S. E. Madren.

Mrs. Perry leaves two children, Grover Perry and Mrs. Jones.

She was a faithful and loyal member of Beulah Christian Church, and an outstanding Christian in her community. May her loved ones be comforted by our Father, the Giver of Peace.

H. C. HILLIARD.

GARRIS.

Mrs. Ella G. Garriss, aged 75, a loyal and faithful member of the Christian Church, passed to her eternal reward on March 31st, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. L. S. Dunn, with whom she had made her home for many years.

Mrs. Garriss loved her church and during the time of my work as her pastor, she was ever loyal and faithful in attendance. Before becoming a member of the First Christian Church, Portsmouth, she was a member of the Church in Newport News.

The funeral was held in the church, April 2nd, and burial was in Oak Grove cemetery.

•• THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY ••

Sensitive.—

The World Tomorrow is authority for the statement that under a former viceroy, any British soldier in India singing "Onward Christian Soldiers" was liable to punishment because the hymn says, "Thrones and crowns may perish." If this is a correct statement, it is only another illustration of the proverbial English insensibility to humor. During the war, it was a penal offense to read the Sermon on the Mount from a soap box, although the same words could be intoned by the Dean of St. Paul's properly clad in his vestments, without interference from the law. Most nations and individuals lacking the saving grace of comedy are unduly sensitive. The Nazi absurdities furnish the best contemporary evidence of this truism.—The Christian-Evangelist.

Brotherhood Day.—

Sunday, April 29th, has been designated as "Brotherhood Day," by leaders among American Protestants, Catholics and Jews. The churches throughout the country have been urged to observe this day wherever possible. According to Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, Chairman of Brotherhood Day, it "will be one of the most significant events making for closer understanding among those of various faiths in the history of this country." We are told that it will not be a day set aside to discuss denominational differences, or suggest a watering down of anyone's religious convictions, but a time when plans may be made to turn away from prejudices toward constructive cooperative efforts. It is time that Protestants, Catholics and Jews "rise above old suspicions and prejudices, look for ways of effectively working together in this crisis as citizens of American Democracy, and maintain and safeguard the American ideal of religious freedom and brotherhood."

An Excessive Emphasis.—

J. Norwood Sheridan, as quoted in an exchange, makes this observation: "We find among us a false worship of the Utilitarian—an excessive emphasis of the practical side of religion at the expense of its devotional life. Today we are manifestly substituting propaganda for prayer; organization for spiritual culture; the committee-room for the Holy of Holies. We are engaged in 'running the church' rather than 'seeking the kingdom.' We are maintaining an institution rather than finding God. We are, in fact, ecclesiastics rather than saints; and so we are strangers to that rapture of experience which led Paul on one occasion to wonder whether 'he was in the body or out of it'; or Thomas Erskine to say once, 'That night I got my head out of time into Eternity'; or Charles Kingsley to cry joyously as he lay dying, 'How beautiful God is!' We are missing these experiences because we are missing God, and all our outward busyness can never atone for the thinness and poverty of our inner life."

Codes and Progress.—

In an editorial with the above caption, Business Week raises the question: "Is there adequate justification for limiting output by handicapping efficiency?" It continues: "With NRA, the government stretches out a restraining hand. The output of the efficient plant is deliberately restricted, by the device of limiting the hours a week that it can be used. Is this justified? Or is economic mediaevalism, and suicide? The question is vital. . . . Alarmed philosophers are sounding warnings against the fallacious theory of 'solving the paradox of poverty in the midst of plenty by destroying the plenty.'" Our contemporary does not think the answer is as glib as that. It contends that there must be a distinction between temporary and permanent policies, and believes that social consideration will hereafter govern to a great extent economic policy; also that the present restrictions placed upon output are justifiable to some extent, but purely from the social point of view, and only so long as an emergency exists. The question, however, persists, and we "must not attempt permanently to evade it. That is, indeed, economic suicide. It would freeze standards of living at present levels. The greatest welfare demands the greatest possible output of goods, produced with the minimum of human effort. Subject only to socially desirable standards of wages, hours, and honest trade practices, economical production must be encouraged. The restrictive clauses ought to be removed from the codes, one by one, as each industry reaches the point where it can stand the shock. We are not so naive as to suppose that will come without a fight, but it is a fight that must be made and won."

The Southern Convention.—

When the next issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN reaches many of our readers, the sessions of the Southern Convention of Congregational-Christian Churches will have become history. The Convention will not have adjourned, probably, but the greater part of the work will have been finished and recorded. The women of the church will hold their missionary meeting on the morning of Tuesday, May 1st, and the Convention will be called to order by President S. C. Harrell on the same afternoon, at 3 o'clock. No session of the Convention ever held has been of more vital importance than the coming session will be. The statement may be rather surprising to some of our laity, but it is nevertheless true—the present session will either initiate the beginning of a new and larger era of usefulness for the Convention, or it will sound its death knell. Propaganda by those who may be well-meaning, but nevertheless destructive propaganda, has had its effect, and there will go to the Convention representatives that will honestly believe that their particular Conference may have more to gain by smashing the organization. They are forgetful of the fact that if they pull down the underpinning, the whole superstructure of our work throughout the Southeast is bound to fall. History bears out the fact of the necessity of a body in which the work of the South may culminate. It can be made flexible enough in its set-up to include Congregational and Christian (ultimately Congregational-Christian) Churches, but it must continue as a body through which our work can be co-ordinated and carried forward. It is incumbent upon every delegate selected to attend this session of the Convention, and to give earnest and prayerful consideration to the work in hand.

How We Are Employed.—

The Methodist Protestant Recorder has compiled the following interesting information from the United States census: "The number of different occupations in the United States is usually placed somewhere between 2,000 and 3,000. The United States census lists 500 different occupations, comprising some 100,000 separate kinds of jobs. In 1931, 28.9% of the working population, or more than 14,000,000, were engaged in manufacturing and mechanical industries; 21.9%, or 10,700,000, were in agriculture, forestry and fishing; 12.5%, or 6,000,000, were in trade. Almost 5,000,000 were in domestic and personal service; 4,000,000 in clerical occupations; 3,800,000 in transportation and communication; 3,250,000 in professional service; less than 1,000,000 in extraction of minerals, and 856,000 in public service. The largest single professional class (1930 figures) is that of school teachers, with 1,044,016, of whom 854,000 are women. Trained nurses are next with 294,189, of whom 96% per cent are women. Musicians and music teachers number 165,128; lawyers, judges and justices, 160,605, with 3,385 of them women; physicians and surgeons, 153,803, of whom 6,825 are women; clergymen, 148,848, women number 3,276. Other figures are: Actors, 37,993; architects, 22,000; artists, sculptors and teachers of art, 57,265; authors, 12,449; editors and reporters, 51,844; chemists, assayers and metallurgists, 47,068; college presidents and professors, 61,905; dentists, 71,055; designers, 20,508; draftsmen, 79,922; inventors, 2,300; osteopaths, 6,017; photographers, 39,529; teachers of dancing, athletics, etc., 18,599; civil engineers and surveyors, 102,086; electrical engineers, 11,863; other professional pursuits, 114,403; county agents, farm demonstrators, etc., 5,597; librarians, 29,613; social and welfare workers, 31,241; other occupations, 49,942. The agricultural population is more than 10,000,000."

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

A good conscience—what a priceless possession it is! It is a conscience whose fears and alarms have been quieted. It sees and knows its Saviour. It rejoices that he has set it free. The tumult is changed into a calm. The black indictment is obliterated by a pierced hand. The sorrowful years of banishment are over.—Alexander Smellie, in Moody Bible Institute Monthly

This is a personal note for every delegate to the meeting of the Southern Christian Convention at Suffolk, May 1st-4th: "Your Conference, in electing you, showed its faith in your wisdom and loyalty, and laid upon you its responsibility of representing your church, your Conference and its interests at this Convention." It, therefore, behoves every elected delegate to attend, if possible.

Reports are that the Woman's Missionary Rally at Pleasant Grove Church (Halifax County), Va., Tuesday, April 16th, Mrs. L. E. Carlton, superintendent, was well attended and was a very happy and successful day. There were eight of the Rallies in all—three in the Eastern Virginia Conference, five in the North Carolina Conference, and the cause of Missions was discussed by more than one thousand of our good women.

We learn with sorrow of the death of Brother J. J. Reynolds, a long time and faithful member of our Christian Chapel Church, Merry Oaks, N. C. Brother Reynolds died early on the morning of April 16th, and the funeral was at Christian Chapel on the 17th, conducted by the pastor, Rev. Geo. M. Talley, assisted by Rev. J. E. Franks, a former pastor, and Rev. J. Lee Johnson and Brother Joe McIvor. Brother Reynolds is survived by 4 sons and 2 daughters, to whom, with other relatives, we extend sympathy.

"Rev. A. R. Flowers spent the first week in April in Durham, N. C., in the interest of some worthy young people who have been corresponding with him in regard to their education and to their life work. Mr. Flowers is certainly to be commended for the splendid work he is doing among the young people of the country, who have real worthy objectives but who have limited means. He has many friends in our city and a goodly number of old pupils, all of whom accept a visit from him with great delight." So writes a Durham correspondent.

Maybe if one of our consecrated ministers had said it from his pulpit, as many are saying it, the following from the voice of Dr. L. P. Jacks, of London, world-known figure and author, would have received little attention and would have been called crude, but here, at any rate, is what Dr. Jacks says of us: "America strikes me as a country where a terrific struggle is going on between God and the devil for the possession of the soul of the people. . . . Over the country God and the devil are going at each other hammer and tongs, and make no end of noise about it."

The Mission Secretary spoke briefly on "Missions" to our Hanks' Chapel Sunday School, Sunday, April 22nd, and preached at the 11 o'clock hour in Pastor Talley's pulpit. It was, indeed, a joy to be at Hank's Chapel once more, with a church and congregation of historic origin, growth and tradition. They worship in a beautiful and adequate building now, which, in addition to the main auditorium, has five Sunday School rooms. Brother H. C. Farrell is the superintendent of the live and active Sunday School; Rev. Geo. M. Talley, Carabonton, N. C., is the consecrated and energetic pastor. The church is to observe Memorial Day with all-day services, the fourth Sunday in May.

After some forty years of service as our faithful missionary in Japan, our beloved friend and brother, Dr. A. D. Woodworth has earned and richly deserves all that this paragraph, in a letter from him, dated Merom, Ind., April 10th, indicates: "How I wish you could make us a visit in our new home, like Jerusalem, delightful in situation, the joy of the whole earth. Especially in the morning, all the birds sing for us and a robin is building her nest in an apple tree close to our kitchen door." We are hoping to have Dr. Woodworth come to our South before many more moons, where the birds sing a little sweeter, the flowers are a little more fragrant, and the robins build their nests a little more securely than any where else on this good earth.

The Executive Committee of the Southern Convention and the committee appointed at the last session of the Eastern Virginia Conference, with two or three invited brethren, met in the Suffolk Christian Church, Tuesday, April 17th, and devoted a busy session to discussion of recommendations from the Committee of Ten to be presented by the Executive Committee at the session of the Convention to convene at Suffolk May 1st-4th. The fact of merging our Congregational and Christian work within the scope of the Convention was voted two years ago. What deeply concerns us now is to adopt plans, measures and methods that will do violence to the wisdom and feelings of none, but will construct and go forward on a basis of what we have and what has already been done. We are faced with a great challenge—that of working out in detail and in actual practice that which we have preached through all the years, and that which in Convention assembled we have decided by the help of God we will do.

Our Baptist brethren, true as they ever are to the cause of Foreign Missions, the foundational work of any progressive and growing church, give evidence of financial and spiritual recovery as reported by the Associated Press from Richmond, Va., April 20th: "The Foreign Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention tonight announced that it examined, accepted and appointed 12 new missionaries at its regular monthly session here yesterday afternoon. This number of appointments, the Board said, exceeds any record since June, 1925, and marks the break in the long financial drought which prevented the reinforcement of the thinning line of missionaries. Five of the new missionaries will go to Africa, three to Japan, two to Brazil and two to China; two other re-appointments for China were made in March, making a total of 14 to sail for Southern Baptist mission fields within the near future." It will be of interest and inspiration to our Christian women to know that "eight of these missionaries will be fostered and supported by the Woman's Missionary Union of the Southern Baptist Convention."

INGRAM REVIVAL.

On Sunday morning, April 8th, the series of revival services began at the Ingram Christian Church. These services were conducted by the pastor, Rev. H. E. Crutchfield.

Mr. Young, of Roxboro, N. C., assisted in the song services. Each of these song services was wholly inspirational and paved the way for the pastor's message.

Each evening, at 7:30, continuing for eleven evening services, the pastor brought to a large audience of attentive hearers an inspiring message.

The prayers of the Christian people, who upheld the pastor in his deep devotion, and in his sermons, were manifested in God's power to save the lost, and a number were converted and several added to the church, both by professions and by letter.

The revival came to a close on Wednesday evening, April 18th. At this closing service a large number made resolution to try to live the example of Christ a little more fully than ever before.

Each member of the church feels inspired by this series of services.

The earnest prayer of the entire church is for God's abiding blessing and presence, that each may go out and win more souls to his kingdom.

EASTER IN RICHMOND, VA.

On Sunday before Easter we had an unusual experience at the First Christian Church, Richmond, Va. The ground was covered with snow, the weather was disagreeable, but our attendance was very good at both the Sunday School and the church services.

Dr. John R. Scotford had promised to be with us that night. He was to speak in Washington that morning, but the weather cleared and he drove to Richmond in the afternoon. We had a good attendance that night to hear Dr. Scotford, who brought an inspiring and instructive message on the subject, "The Human Side of Missions." Our people enjoyed hearing him and having Mrs. May D. White and Mrs. D. E. Brown who were traveling with him, in our service.

On Thursday night before Easter, we had a Candle-light Pageant, "The Seven Sayings of Christ on the Cross." This pageant was under the direction of Mrs. Inez Woodward. It was both inspiring and beautiful. Immediately after the pageant a candle-light communion service was observed. For three years the silent candle-light communion service has been observed. The interest and attendance has been rapidly growing. Last year the attendance was twice as large as it was the first time it was given. This year more than twice as many communed as the register showed were present last year. When we meet and worship silently around the Lord's table with the soft glow of the candle-lights, there is a sacredness that you cannot soon get away from. The impressions are lasting.

On Easter Sunday morning we celebrated the fourteenth anniversary of the organization of our church. At this service we ordained four new deacons, as follows: Brothers J. T. Kernodle, C. E. Savedge, F. M. Webb and J. H. Newman. These brethren were duly elected by the church a few weeks ago, together with Brother P. J. Carlton, but owing to Brother Carlton's inability to attend the services, he asked that his ordination be postponed. We hope and pray that he will soon be able for that service so that his brother deacons and the church may have the benefit of his counsel also. We are expecting to do even greater things for the Master than we have in the past.

We did not take our offering for Missions at Easter. Owing to the illness of the pastor, the campaign for the College had not been over long. The church in its regular quarterly conference voted to try to get each family to use the penny-a-meal system from Easter until Pentecost for Missions. We hope this will bring in more than we have been raising.

JOSEPH E. MCCAULEY.

FINAL REPORT.

We are herewith presenting the final report showing the results of the campaign through the churches to raise $25,000 for the College.

We have not succeeded as well as we had hoped, but many of the churches have been generous and cooperative in this effort. Reports have been submitted from time to time showing the amounts asked for from the churches on a basis of fifty per cent per member, also showing the amounts contributed by the individual churches.

The period for this campaign has already passed. However, to the churches making contributions, we are making this final report. The report first will show the churches on the Honor Roll, that is those churches that have raised the amounts asked for. Then the churches are listed according to Conference, showing the quota and the amount raised. These figures indicate all contributions received from the churches for the College since last November, including Fifth Sunday Offerings, Dollar-a-Month Club dues, individual gifts, and church collections.

We have been as careful as we could in receiving and crediting these amounts. It is quite possible that mistakes have been made. Should there be any errors in the amount credited to you, will you please be good enough to call attention to the error, and the correction will be cheerfully made.

There may be others who will send in their contributions. All such instances will be reported through THE SUN. This, however, will be the last complete list to be published this year.

You will perceive that the total amount received during this period is less than $6,000.

We wish to take advantage of this opportunity and express to the people, churches and societies our appreciation for any and all contributions.

L. E. SMITH, President.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

To SUN Subscribers Who Are in Arrears:

In an effort to get the subscription list on a current basis, we are making these special offers, good until January 31st, to SUN subscribers who are in arrears:

(The Offer Is Continued Until Further Notice.)

OFFER No. 1—If you are in arrears as much as two years, send us Money Order or Check for $5.00, and we will give you credit for three whole years' subscription.

OFFER No. 2—If you are a year or more in arrears, send Money Order or Check for $3.50, and we will extend your subscription two years.

OFFER No. 3—If you are as much as three years in arrears, send us $6.00, and we will extend your subscription to July 1, 1934, giving you full credit for your back account.

Letters have been sent out during the past six months to all who were as much as three years in arrears, trying to induce them by special offers, to pay up their arrearages. Quite a few have responded. Others have paid no attention at all to these letters. If by any chance you were in this class, and did not receive our letter, Offer No. 3 will enable you to put yourself back on a current basis at a nominal cost. Even if you are unable to avail yourself of this offer at present, won't you write the undersigned, explaining the situation?

If at all possible, won't you take advantage of one of these offers, thereby not only saving yourself money, but helping your Church Paper?

All Money Orders and Checks should be made payable to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and letters should be addressed to J. T. Kernodle, Managing Editor, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond, Va.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF OUR CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

HISTORY OF MISSIONS.

A very interesting document of twenty pages, entitled "History of the Home Mission Work in the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference," was handed to THE SUN's editor by Brother J. J. Faison, Waverly, Va. The document was prepared by the late, lamented Rev. Robert A. Ricks, and printed by order of the Conference, the print being from THE CHRISTIAN SUN office, Raleigh, N. C., 1889. The booklet now rests in the historical department of our Elon Library, where all of our important church documents should be gathered. From the opening page of this historical treasure-house, we quote the following:

"Systematic mission work was begun in the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference during the Conference year 1876-77. True, there was an effort made a few years previous to this to establish a church in the city of Norfolk, and some funds were collected and expended for that purpose; but the effort was local and spasmodic, rather than general and systematic; and the failure of this enterprise can be attributed, to a great extent, the unwillingness of our people in Norfolk and adjacent towns to again embark in a similar enterprise.

"This, and other experiences of a like nature, ought to be sufficient to impress upon our Conference the necessity of putting forward no effort at any proposed mission point, until the matter has been thoroughly considered, and the practicability of the effort be settled almost beyond the shadow of a doubt; and then the work should be prosecuted with a determination that 'laughs at difficulties,' and makes opposing influences aids to success. Nothing is a greater barrier to success at a mission point, than a former failure at the same point."

When we look today at our churches in Norfolk, Portsmouth and Berkley, we are reminded that, though the first effort to establish Christian Churches in this city failed, the Conference did not give up, but pressed forward in the face of failure and brought victory from defeat.

A subsequent paragraph from the booklet is of exceeding interest and significance:

"At the Conference held in Suffolk in 1876, the Executive Committee, in its report, stated that it had taken into consideration some resolutions passed by the church at Spring Hill, suggesting a centennial work for our church, and had decided that the centennial work of our church should be Home Missions. That committee was composed of Revs. R. H. Holland, M. B. Barrett and J. T. Kitchen. Bro. Holland did not arrive until after the report had been submitted, and hence his name does not appear. Soon after the adoption of this report, a series of resolutions was adopted, the substance of a part of which is as follows: That a committee on Home Missions, consisting of five members, be appointed, who, in addition to the duties imposed by the Form of Government, should devise, and carry into effect, plans for the raising of a permanent missionary fund, and look up, and report to Conference inviting fields for missionary work. The committee appointed at that session of Conference consisted of Revs. E. W. Beale, J. P. Barrett and M. B. Barrett, and lay brethren D. B. Dunbar and Jno. M. Gay.

"Soon after the adjournment of Conference this committee organized for work, by electing Rev. E. W. Beale, president, Bro. Jno. M. Gay, recording and corresponding secretary, Rev. M. B. Barrett, soliciting agent, and Rev. J. P. Barrett and Brother D. B. Dunbar, a sub-committee on Mission Stations."

Space forbids further quotations, other than to say that beginning in 1876-77, with a collection for Home Mission work of $450.00, the document shows that in 1886-87 the amount collected was $1,180.61. And then this paragraph follows:

"Thus was systematic mission work begun in the Eastern Virginia Conference; and this very successful beginning is due, to a great extent, to the devotion and energy of the Soliciting Agent, Rev. J. P. Barrett, who was the leading spirit in this great work of our Conference."

We think it a matter of note and merit that the Home Mission work in the Eastern Virginia Conference had its origin at Spring Hill Christian Church, and from this church came Col. J. E. West, now and for several years past the president of the Board of Missions for the Southern Christian Convention, and who, through the years of his church membership, has shown a very marked interest in both Home and Foreign Missions. So much for the beginning of Home Mission work in which our Eastern Virginia Conference led the other Conferences of the South.

However, the North Carolina and Virginia Conference led the other Conferences in the matter of beginning the work of Foreign Missions. In the annual session of this Conference, on Saturday, November 17, 1883, the following is recorded:

"Rev. P. T. Klapp moved that the subject of Foreign Missions be made the special order for 11 o'clock Monday."

Accordingly, on Monday, November 19, 1883, in the proceedings of said Conference, we find the following:

"Whereas, the cause of Foreign Missions is a work of such great magnitude that it demands the cooperation of the various branches of the Christian Church; therefore we recommend the following resolutions:

"1. That our ministers be authorized to raise funds for Foreign Missions in or before the month of April and pay the same to the Treasurer of Conference to be used for the above purpose; and that a continued effort be made by us as a Conference and people to raise funds for the aforesaid object.

"2. That a committee on Foreign Missions be appointed by this Conference, and that this committee be authorized to correspond with the Secretary of Missions in the Christian Church, North, with the view of uniting our efforts and sending out one or two missionaries as soon as possible.

"P. T. KLAPP,

"D. F. JONES,

"S. B. KLAPP,

"J. A. JONES,

"J. D. WICKER,

"W. T. HERNDON,

"Committee."

The following were appointed Committee on Foreign Missions (which, as far as we know, was the first Committee on Foreign Missions to be appointed by any Conference in the South): "P. T. Klapp, M. L. Winston, J. W. Wellons, Dr. W. T. Herndon and A. Moring."

Without following in detail the report of this committee, we find in the proceedings of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference, in session at New Elam, Chatham County, N. C., on November 17, 1887, the following:

"We, your Committee on Foreign Missions, would report that we are thankful that we have the privilege of reporting to this body that which no other committee ever did in the Christian Church, South:

"1. That we have accepted the full commission of preaching the Gospel in all parts of the world.

"2. That we now have two missionaries, Bro. Jones and wife, in Japan, from the beautiful South, sent and supported by the Christians North and South.

"3. That our beloved missionaries have already, in the providence of God, organized a Christian Church in that far-off land, Japan."

The Brother Jones referred to was Rev. D. F. Jones, who had been a pastor of some of our churches in the Conference and had become well known and much beloved amongst us, though he was a native of Great Britain, who found his way to the United States and joined the Christian Church.

We have not gone far, it is true, but when we consider how far we have come in Home Missions since 1867 and in Foreign Missions since 1883, we have much to be thankful for. Our Lord himself instituted the missionary work, and the church he is building in the world goes forward only in proportion to the zeal and the consecration and the wisdom manifested in carrying forward a work in his name, for his glory and to share his love with the most needy of this earth, viz., those who have not had the privileges of his Gospel.

FINALLY BRETHERN.

When the next issue of THE SUN appears our Convention will be in biennial session at Suffolk. This Convention is a creation of the church, growing out of the needs, the experiences and the wisdom of the past. Its chief function has been the founding and the fostering of institutions and enterprises, which, because of their common task have united us in a common and beloved fellowship. The Conferences, composing the Convention and the churches composing the Conferences, have come to be one in aim and purpose, because their tasks, their burdens, their failures and their successes have been one. We shall go to the Convention with open mind, willing hands and ready hearts in order that we may under the guidance of the Holy Spirit find a way to perform the tasks assigned us by our Lord and to share with each other and the world the burden of helping to reach an unreached world, and thus make our contribution through our Lord to the salvation of mankind. We shall not forget our high aim and noble purpose—that of helping to bring about in the world a spiritual re-birth in the hearts and souls of men and women everywhere, and in the task we shall need all the help we can secure through consecration and prayer and through the united wisdom of all our fellowship.

We shall go to the Convention mindful of the genius of our churches (Congregational and Christian) so well expressed and comprehended in the plea of the Proverb: "In essentials, unity; in non-essentials, liberty; in all things, charity."

SUFFOLK LETTER.

A plan of finance for the next two years will engage the attention of the Southern Convention next week. Various objections have been raised to the present financial plans. It is generally believed that all the enterprises should be included in the Apportionments for Convention Funds. For several years Home Missions and Foreign Missions have been omitted from these Apportionments. A Special Offering for Missions was authorized at Easter for these enterprises, in lieu of an Apportionment from the Conference Apportionments.

The Special Committee on Finance has been called to meet in Suffolk, Virginia, Monday, April 30th, at 8 P. M. Many suggestions will be made at this meeting of the Committee. As an approach to this important matter it may be in order to make some suggestions in this letter. The Convention adopted the following Apportionments in 1924: Convention Missions, $5,000; Foreign Missions, $5,000; Convention Fund, $10,000; Schools and Colleges, $5,000; Religious Education, $1,250; Total, $26,250. This amount was apportioned to the various Conferences. At the 1926 Convention the following Apportionments were adopted: Publications, $5,000; Convention, $5,000; Superannuation, $3,000; Total, $13,000. The balance of $12,000 be distributed, 40 per cent to Colleges, 32 per cent to Missions, 20 per cent to Orphanage, and 8 per cent to Religious Education. Grand total, $25,000. The same total was adopted by the 1928 session of the Convention, with changes in distribution. At the 1930 session of the Convention the following was adopted: "We recommend the following annual distribution of the funds for the next biennium: Superannuation, $3,000; Publications, $4,000; Convention, $2,000; Convention obligations or Elon College, $12,750; Piedmont Junior College, $2,000; Board of Christian Education, $1,250." This was practically the same order of distribution as adopted in 1928, when Missions was dropped from the Apportionment, and a Special Easter Offering for Missions was authorized.

There is an apparent desire, on the part of many people, that "Missions" be included again in the Conference Apportionments. The Convention should make an attempt to put all the Convention enterprises upon the same fundamental basis. For several years there has been, to some extent, a feeling of rivalry, or competition, existing between the various Convention enterprises. Because of this uncertain element of support, the Convention Committee on Finance should be relieved of all responsibility as to the division of funds after they are paid to the Convention Treasurer. Every Conference should have the right to designate the funds sent from the Conference to the Convention. That was the plan until it was changed in 1926. It was very much better than the plan of sending up the money in a lump sum to be divided by a Convention Finance Committee. Each Conference should be requested to send a sufficient amount for Convention Fund and Publications to take care of the Convention contracts for Convention expenses and publishing THE SUN. These are fixed charges and cannot be overlooked. The Convention contract for publishing THE SUN should be divided among the Convention, the Orphanage, Elon College and the Mission Board. Home Missions, Foreign Missions, Superannuation, College, Convention, Religious Education should be included in the Conference Apportionments, with the Orphanage remaining on its present basis of support, which to date has been very satisfactory and successful. On this basis the following amounts could be considered for the next two years: Home Missions, $5,000; Foreign Missions, $5,000; Elon College, $5,000; Superannuation, $2,500; Religious Education, $1,000; Convention, $5,000; Total, $23,500. I. W. JOHNSON.

SUPPORT OF OUR SCHOOLS IN THE NEW ERA.

By TIMOTHY THOMAS.

Every possible attention has been given to the stimulating of all lines of industry during the period of our economic break-down, knowing that out of our business endeavors the Nation receives its daily bread. Working hard to pump new life into business, we have neglected to give a deserved attention and adequate support to our educational institutions. This neglect can no longer continue if we are to depend—and depend we must—upon these institutions for intelligent citizenship and to provide a leadership so vital and necessary to carry the banner of this Nation through the new era.

Long before any alarming number of men in other fields of endeavor had been separated from their positions, the teaching profession suffered drastic reductions in personnel, in salaries, and in teaching time. During the past four years 25,000 teachers have been dropped from pay rolls of our schools, although our pupil enrollment has increased nearly 1,000,000. More than 250,000 teachers received less than $700.00 per year during the last two. More than fifty per cent of our teachers during the past four years have not received their salaries on schedule time, while many today are still unpaid in whole or in part. Teachers separated from their positions were left in further precarious situation for the reason that few other positions were vacant, and when other avenues of support were open many teachers lacked sufficient training to fill the positions tendered them.

Our school system has been thought of too long as a local problem, and because of this the Nation at large has not taken full cognizance of the alarming situation. One-half of our schools have been compelled to eliminate one or more important services. The subjects of art, health and physical education, and home economics have been reduced or eliminated in one-seventh of our schools. Although the United States already had the shortest school term of any great Western nation, one-fourth of our schools have reduced the length of the term. Funds for the support of schools have dropped fifty per cent. Last December more than 750 schools were closed because of financial conditions, leaving approximately 200,000 pupils without educational advantages for the remainder of the school year. These are alarming signals of a future reward which we shall regretfully reap.

Budget makers with few exceptions place the pruning knife first on the item for schools. Gifts to colleges and universities for the most part come from a surplus rather than from a sacrifice. Tax-supported colleges and universities have not suffered quite so badly as private and church-controlled institutions. This latter class in particular is in the throes of a desperate financial condition. Support for this class of educational institutions, with few exceptions, is limited to a single constituency. The financial support from that constituency has been greatly reduced through a diminishing of personal incomes.

A more adequate support of our schools and their teaching force must be provided. A new interest must be awakened, new sources of revenue must be found. The school that produces a better citizenship, trains leaders for the State or the Nation, richly deserves a public support irrespective of class lines.

We cannot close the doors of our schools and maintain that standard of citizenship so necessary for the new era. We cannot demand the best educational standards of our teachers and hand them out a paltry sum and call it a salary. Our teachers cannot put their best into their work when financial worries are eating at their hearts. We dare not lower the flag on any deserving school. The future of America's well deserving and enterprising youth cannot be jeopardized without entailing a future cost far in excess of an adequate support of our every school, college, and university deserving of the name and whose record shows a contribution to a higher citizenship and a better leadership.

Our fortunes we can rebuild, but the lost opportunity of an education by our youth cannot be recalled. It will be a sad commentary on our intelligence, on our stewardship, and on our foresight, if fifty years hence millions of our youth of today point back with a sad yet indisputable truth that their educational hopes were blighted in an age of great material wealth and industrial expansion.

The educational hopes of our young people must not be shattered. Making possible the opportunities which they richly deserve is an invisible pledge we cannot forfeit.

FLORIDA CONGREGATIONAL CONFERENCE.

The fiftieth annual meeting of the Florida Congregational Conference was held with the church at St. Petersburg, April 17th-18th. The meeting was well attended and the program was regarded as most satisfactory. The general theme of the Conference was "The Fellowship of Christlike Men—the Ideal for Our Church." The sermon was preached by Dr. George D. Owen of Ormond. Other addresses were given by Dr. Trevor Mordecai, Dr. Elisha A. King, Dr. Rex Raymond, Rev. Walter Metcalf, Rev. Frank Atkinson, Rev. O. T. Anderson, Dr. J. Delman Kuykendall and Dr. George Henry Bradford. The Conference elected Rev. Frank Atkinson of West Palm Beach as Moderator for the coming year, and Dr. Charles H. Beale of St. Petersburg was elected preacher, with Rev. O. T. Anderson of Fort Myers, as alternate.

The Conference passed some strong resolutions with regard to peace and war, opposing military training in public schools and urging that conscientious objectors be excused from military training in the universities, urging temperance education and the retention of the prohibition amendment in the State of Florida, condemning lynching and urging the election to office of integrity and character.

The First Church at Tampa and the church at Winter Park extended invitations for the next meeting and the invitations were referred to the Executive Committee. The pastors present took steps for the organization of preaching missions in the churches during the next winter season. In the meeting of the Woman's Federation, Mrs. Robert G. Williams, of Lake Worth, was re-elected president. Mrs. Mary D. White, associate secretary of the Extension Boards, was a speaker both at the Federation meeting and the Conference.

A Story for the Children

TRAPPED!

Pete Merritt tumbled the coins out of his toy bank and counted them. At last there was enough to buy a dozen traps from the mail-order house. He turned to the page in the catalogue:

"Boys! Make Money Trapping Animals!"

And there were the traps the mail-order house had for sale. Before night, Pete's order was in the mails. Four days later the traps arrived. Eagerly Pete tore the wrappings off. "Lightning action! Powerful jaws!" the catalogue said.

"Ouch!" With a yell, Pete tried to shake off the trap that snapped upon his hand as he tried it. Then he pried the jaws open and drew out a bruised and madly scratched hand and went to get it bound up.

"They're dandies!" he told his friend, old John Hubbard. "I thought my hand was broken when they snapped on it."

"I guess they're liable to hurt the little animals, too," said John, "and they can't get loose so easily."

"I'll clear the traps every morning, John, so they won't suffer—I mean they won't be in the traps long."

"Have the animals been annoying you?"

"No."

"Don't need 'em for food, do you?"

"No; most of them are not fit for food, anyway."

"Catchin' 'em for what you call sport?"

"No. There's no sport in just taking them out of the traps."

"Doin' it for the money you figure on gettin' for their hides, eh?"

"Yes."

"You're not figurin' on shootin' me some day so you can take my clothes and sell 'em to a second-hand dealer, are you?"

Pete stared. "You're not serious, are you John?"

"Well, if you'd steal the hide off an animal that never harmed you—

"That's different, John!"

"It's accordin' to how a feller thinks. The animals are our friends. They all have their use in Nature. Kill 'em off, and we'd be eaten up with grubs and insects in no time. I wouldn't murder a friend for the few pennies I could get out of it!"

"It's not murder!" Pete protested angrily. "It's—it's business."

"I guess that the way a feller called Judas must've figured when he sold his Friend for thirty pieces of silver. If I had them traps, I'd dump 'em in the lake afore I'd—What? Goin' A'ready?"

"Yes," Pete snorted, slamming the door after him.

He was angry. So angry that picking his way up the mountain to start his trap line, he forgot to be careful. His foot slipped on a mossy log.

"Crash!" Down he went, grabbing at another log to stop his fall, but it jerked loose and swung over knocking him backwards and pinning him there. Panic stricken, he struggled furiously, until, panting and scared, he realized he was trapped.

"I must keep calm," he told himself. "My ankle is caught, and this log pins me down. Maybe I can cut through it with my knife." But in half an hour he had cut only a small nick in the hard log, and his hand was blistered and bleeding.

"I'll starve to death before I get free this way," he muttered. "Gee, I'm thirsty. I wish my ankle would stop hurting. Say, it's getting awful dark, and nobody knows I'm here." Desperately Pete kept cutting, and then, in the dark, his knife suddenly slipped and was gone.

There were eerie noises around him now. Something crept along the log that held him. He shouted, and it crashed away through the bushes. And then he heard something big crashing towards him.

"A bear?" he wondered. "A wolf?" "Pe-ter." Pete gave a huge sigh of relief.

"Yee-hooooo! Up here, John!" he called. "Yoo-hooooo!"

And presently there was John Hubbard with a lantern.

"When your folks telephoned you was lost, I figured you'd be up here," John said, as he freed Pete. "Sprained ankle, eh? How does it feel to be trapped—alive?"

"Awful!" Pete groaned. "Ouch, I can't stand."

"Suposin' I'd waited till morn'?" John said. "Up on my back you go. I'll have to carry you home. How about all these traps?"

"I'll come for them when my ankle's better, John," Pete said. "I—I'll dump them in the lake—just so nobody else can use them, either."

We and the beasts are kin. Man has nothing that the animals have not at least a vestig of it; the animals have nothing that man does not in some degree share.—Earnest Thompson Seton, in Our Dumb Animals.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary

GOD'S FOOL.

Saint Paul, in writing to the church in Corinth, asked:

"Where is the wise? Where is the scribe? Where is the disputer of the world? Hath not God made foolish the wisdom of the world?"

"But we preach Christ crucified, unto Jews a stumbling-block, and unto Gentiles foolishness; but unto them that are called both Jews and Greeks, Christ the power of God and the wisdom of God. Because the foolishness of God is wiser than men; and the weakness of God is stronger than men. . . . Now the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; for they are foolishness unto him; and he cannot know them, because they are spiritually examined."

Saint Luke records that Jesus on one occasion burst into a prayer of thanksgiving to his Father the "Lord of heaven and earth," because he had revealed certain truths "unto babes."

But we are also expected to grow up unto the stature of Jesus Christ. Where then is the foolishness? Where is the wisdom? The foolishness lies in man's proneness to dispute about the mysteries of God. Once when Jesus seemed nigh distraught that his closest friends were arguing about rank in the Kingdom of God, he placed a child in their midst and spoke quite sternly the Truth. The child is teachable.

Recently a Christian said to the writer, "Don't let us consider the meaning of the Cross; it is too difficult to understand, or folks argue about it. Let it remain a mystery." And yet it is within human experience to know that often babes and fools perceive the Truth of mysteries and speak the Truth.

The wise man wrote long ago, "The fear of God is the beginning of wisdom." Where then is wisdom? The Cross, if spiritually examined, becomes the symbol of the Way of Eternal Life, so that the sad fool asks to praise God through merriment, and the weary troubled world of men rejoices in the promise of the more abundant life as symbolized on Easter Day, achieved through death on the Cross.

"Therefore, let us also, seeing we are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses . . . run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus . . . who for the joy that was set before him endured the Cross, despising the shame, and hath set down at the right hand of God."

It was he who told us that "the pure in heart shall see God."—Missionary Review.

HEEDING THE CALL—WHEN AND HOW.

By MRS. R. L. ROSS, Superintendent, Chatham-Lee District Rally, April 13, 1934.

As we have come together in another meeting to discuss and make plans for the work of our Master, we, as members of our Missionary Societies, are organized, earnestly seeking the extension of Christ's Kingdom in all the earth. We are banded together to carry out his great command: "Go ye." "For we are laborers together with God; ye are God's husbandry" (I. Cor. 3:9). Then, "Lift up your eyes and see; lift up your eyes and look on the fields, for they are white already to harvest" (John 4:35). "And Jesus saw much people, and was moved with compassion toward them, because they were as sheep not having a shepherd" (Mark 6:34).

The fidelity with which Jesus ministered in Galilee and Judea is an indication of how the church today should minister in the whole world. Not only every nation, but every creature is to be told the Gospel message. This is only possible in so far as the church and every Christian therein devote their whole energy to this God-given task. Let us not be hindered in this ministry by the failure of earth's resources, but let us remember that heaven gave its choicest gift for the salvation of men, and thus we may be assured that God will not withhold any good thing which is needed for the carrying out of the great commission and accomplishing the task.

Let us look on the fields. As we read of the struggle between Japan and China, let us think of it not in terms of warfare and strife, but let us think of the multitudes in these lands who have never heard the message of salvation, and who do not know that Christ came that men might have salvation and peace. When we think of strife between nations in the jungles of South America, let us remember that right nearby there are Indian tribes to whom no one has taken the story of Calvary. Names of far-away places frequently mentioned in the news reports should stir our interest to learn of other tribes and places awaiting the light of the Gospel.

"The harvest is truly plenteous, but the laborers are few; pray ye, therefore, the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest" (Matt. 9:37, 38). The Lord Jesus sought to awaken in his own a compassion for these straying, shepherdless sheep. He told them the harvest was great and the workmen but few. How true this is today! How few of God's children seem to have any concern and to put forth any effort to reach with the Gospel the millions in the world who are lost and dying without any knowledge of Jesus Christ as Saviour. One of the greatest needs of the hour is laborers for the harvest. What of the crowds that throng our streets today? The millions upon millions in heathen lands who have never heard of Jesus the Saviour? Surely, they move the heart of our Lord with compassion. They should move our hearts, too, and they do move our hearts if we live in fellowship with the Lord.

Now as we, as Missionary Societies and individuals, go back to our homes, let us enter into vital partnership with the living Christ through intercession and by consecration of personality and possessions in carrying out this glorious task. Let's strive to do more this year than ever before.

"The great world's heart is aching, bleeding in the night, and God alone can heal it, and God alone can give new light; and the one to bear that message, and to speak the living word, are you and I, and those who have heard. We grovel among trifles, and our spirits fret and toss, while above us burns the vision of the Christ upon the Cross; and the blood of Christ is streaming from his broken hand and side; and the lips of Christ are saying: 'tell my brothers I have died!'"

THE BANTU ARE COMING.

By MISS DOROTHY CUSHING, News Editor of the American Board.

"Heathenism is no joke. It is the most hopeless, deadening, damnable kind of life that mankind has evolved for itself. It is written plainly on the cruel, brazen, inhuman faces of millions who have reached middle age. A fear cloud covers heathen Africa. Witchcraft blots out the sun. African heathenism is hell!" So states Ray E. Phillips of Johannesburg, South Africa, Christian social worker, author, and authority on interracial relations in that great African mining city where racial antagonism is continually seething.

From his arrival in Johannesburg back in 1918, Ray Phillips has been connected with the Bantu Men's Social Center, an organization where a well-founded program is carried on for Bantu men and boys. When he discovered that the black laborers who came by the thousands from the kraals to dig in the mines were without any recreational facilities, he got in touch with the employers and obtained permission to set up a circuit of motion pictures with a portable movie machine. On this circuit are shown in the compounds not only entertaining, but educational and religious films. The area covered extends as far as from Boston to Miami.

"It must not be forgotten," continues Mr. Phillips, "that the native people have a strong instinct for social expression, as strong, if not stronger, than the Europeans. If this instinct is not guided along legitimate lines, it will manifest itself in ways that are illegitimate, an unfortunate condition for the native people themselves, and even constituting a danger to all town dwellers, black and white alike."

Mr. Phillips was born in Wisconsin, educated at Carleton College and Yale School of Religion. His book, "The Bantu Are Coming," is a fast-moving and thrilling picture of the people among whom he has worked for those 16 years. Mr. Phillips has been a contributor to the Johannesburg newspapers on questions of racial relations, and in 1932 was a member of the commission appointed by the International Missionary Council, of which J. Merle Davis was supervisor, to investigate the conditions of the great Katanga copper mines.

It is not now simply a problem of the uneducated native either in the kraal or as a worker in the great mines, Mr. Phillips points out. Many of the natives have tasted civilization, finding it good, and want more of it. "Hundreds of educated cultured natives are today living on a highly civilized plane," says Mr. Phillips. "More are speedily qualifying as civilized people. They want a place in the sun, a share in the good things of civilization. They want a better future for their children." It is in this difficult situation that the Christian missionary is working, for it is only Christianity, Phillips believes, that can light what times seems the inky darkness of interracial ill-will and ignorance.

The morning session will open at 10 o'clock. All Presidents of Conferences, Superintendents of Departments, and Chairmen of Standing Committees are requested to have complete reports. A full delegation is urged as this session is to be one of unusual importance, due to the many things of interest relating to our future work that will be brought before the Convention.

Rev. R. R. Shrader, Missionary to China, will be the principal speaker.

MRS. J. A. WILLIAMS, President,
MRS. L. W. STAGG, Secretary.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

FORWARD TOGETHER.

Congregationalists and Christians throughout America have voted to merge and work into one united church. The denominational boards have already been merged. Many conferences have completed the merger. The Southern Convention is face to face with working out details for the complete coordination of the work in the Southeast. This we must face at Suffolk, Virginia, next week.

Whether we like it or not, we must choose between going backward or going forward together. The movement goes forward. For us to stop would mean that we lose the past and thus go backward. So far as I know, there is not a person among us, Congregationalists or Christian, who is willing to put any hindrance in the power of progress of the church of the living God. There may be difference of opinion about what is the next step, but surely no one is willing to turn back the army of God which faces to the future with expectant heart. There is something challenging and enticing about the idea of moving forward together. Both Congregationalists and Christians may well be proud of their history. We each have something worth preserving but not worth preserving if it costs the loss of what the other group possesses. We may well question whether the next generation will be proud of the history which we are making today. If we diligently seek, in a Christian fashion, to move forward together, we may make mistakes in methods of procedure, but that will be forgiven by future generations because of the sweet spirit and eagerness with which we joint hands and hearts, plans and programs to carry forward our united work.

When we leave Suffolk next week, our work should be so arranged that Congregationalists can share in the promotion and preservation of Christian boards and institutions, and members of the Christian Church can share in like manner with Congregationalists in the work which they have been doing. If we do this, then we move forward together. If we do not, we bring confusion into the craft and hinder the work of the entire denomination as well as the cause of the Christian union. My personal hope, prayer and expectation is that we shall move forward together.

SOUTHEAST YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH, SUFFOLK, VA.
MAY 3, 1934.

Program.

- 2:00—Worship Service, led by Mrs. W. B. Williams.
- 2:30—Business. Reports of superintendents of departments, officers, conference groups; appointment of committees; plans for the future.
- 4:00—Address, Miss Eunice Thomas, missionary from Foochow, China.
- 6:30—Banquet. Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, toastmaster. Greetings by Conference presidents. Address by Dr. W. P. Minton.
- 8:00—Share in Convention Program. Address by Dr. Irwin L. Shaver.

Be Sure to Come.

Every young person in Congregational and Christian Churches, who can reasonably do so, should be sure to attend this biennial meeting of the young people of the Southeast. The program will be fine. Here is a chance to get a new vision of what young people can do in kingdom service.

Some of us are eager to have at least five hundred at the banquet table on Thursday night of next week. Eastern Virginia young people, I am challenging you to help make this the biggest event in the history of our church in Eastern Virginia. Meet me in Suffolk on Thursday of next week for the biggest banquet ever held in the city of Suffolk and you will always be glad that you were there.

HOW SHOULD A CHRISTIAN CHOOSE HIS LIFE-WORK?

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC, MAY 6, 1934.

Worship Service.

Theme—"Working."

Piano Prelude—"Something for Jesus."

Hymn—"My Master Was a Worker."

Scripture—Ephesians 2:10; Hebrews 10:7.

Prayer.

Talk.

In one of Alice Louise Lee's stories there is a dialogue between a miner and a motherly woman. The miner came with the request: "Say, Ma, we want you to tell what you think'll make a fellow the happiest in life—happiest right along for a spell of years—not just for one day." The boys had been arguing the matter, and no two thought alike. Ma's answer came in one word: "Work!" The miner was puzzled. He confessed that everything else had been in mind except that. Henry Van Dyke said the same thing in a little different way in his lines:

"The blessing of heaven is perfect rest,
But the blessing of earth is toil."

Hymn—"Work, for the Night is Coming."

Planning This Meeting.

Here is a topic which is so important that the leader should give most careful thought to the preparation for its consideration. Perhaps your minister, or a high school teacher, or some professional man or woman in your community, will be willing to come to this meeting, not to make a speech primarily, but to talk the question over with you, answering your questions with the information which he or she possesses. This may be announced as "A Conversation About Our Life Work," with the opportunity to present personal problems in writing before the meeting or in the discussion of the hour. Encourage the most frank facing of the most perplexing questions. There will be no one cut-and-dried answer for them all at once, but it is possible to help every member who is anxious about his life work, if you plan thoughtfully.

How does work contribute to one's highest happiness? How is toil a blessing? How important is one's choice of his life work? Answers to such questions as these in the talk of the leader, or in the ideas of the group, will stress what an important place work has in life, and how the highest satisfaction comes to one who has chosen and is able to follow a life work through which he does some one thing well. Theodore Roosevelt declared that the one thing supremely worth while in life is to have something worth doing, and to be able to do it well.

A Christian Choice.

A summer conference group in the East recognized the importance of a wise choice of one's life work, and then the matter of a Christian's duty was brought into the picture. "Christianity and the church have nothing to say about what I shall do, unless I am to be a minister or a missionary," declared one high school girl. Was she right? Why?

CHRIST'S STANDARD OF GREATNESS.

LESSON V—APRIL 29, 1934.

GOLDEN TEXT: "The Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many."—Matt. 20:28.

LESSON TEXT: Matt. 19: 17-28.

The Shadow of the Cross.

The shadow of the Cross had fallen across the path of Jesus. He knew what was in store for him. And as he went up to Jerusalem for the last time, he tried to prepare his disciples for what was about to happen. As always he was solicitous for them. As always he was tender and considerate and self-forgotten. He told them that the chief priests and the scribes would condemn him to death and then deliver him to the Gentiles to mock, to scourge, and to crucify. He knew this, but as one of the Gospel writers puts it, he set his face steadfastly to go to Jerusalem, or he set his face as a flint to go to Jerusalem. Jesus courageously walked in the path of obedience to the will of God regardless of the consequences. "He went before them"—He leads here as everywhere.

It is to be noted, too, that Jesus predicted that he would rise again. Of course, this Gospel was written long after the events of Jesus' life. And as the story of the first Easter indicates, the disciples apparently had forgotten for the time being the Master's confident assertion that he would rise again. But when Matthew came to write his Gospel he remembered how on this, as well as on other occasions, the Master had told them before it came to pass that they might believe on him when it did come to pass. There was a great deal at stake in the resurrection of Jesus. His word, his integrity was at stake. But he kept his word. And because he kept his word here we can believe that he can keep his word everywhere. Jesus speaks with unique authority because of his resurrection from the dead.

The Ambitious Disciples.

"Then came to him the mother of Zebedee's children, with her sons, worshipping him, and desiring a certain thing of him." The word then is significant. Even as the Master was talking about his suffering and his crucifixion, his disciples were thinking about their selfish ambitions. And they were too of his best disciples, at that. It would be interesting to know what some folks are thinking about in high moments of life, for instance during the communion service. It might be disconcerting to speak our thoughts out loud during a service of worship. Alas, how little we sometimes, and perhaps usually, enter into the spirit of the Master and share his passion!

This mother, or these two sons, for the mother and sons were undoubtedly involved in the thing, were seeking places of preferment and prestige. They were looking out for Number One, regardless of anything else. If this Man was going to set up a kingdom, they might as well speak for the "soft jobs." They were perhaps the distinguished ancestors of that great host of political office seekers, a great many of whom have few if any qualifications for responsible positions. And Salome, the mother of these two disciples, is undoubtedly the ancestress of that long line of rattle-brained and empty-headed mothers who are so ambitious for their children in such a misguided way. The tragedy of many a young person's life has been written largely in terms of some loving, but foolish, mother who sent their children off on some fool's errand, some false road to what seemed success and greatness.

"What Wilt Thou?"

The Master wanted these three to realize just what they were asking. He wants us to analyze our petitions and our motives. We would be silent many times if we really realized what we were asking. As James says in his epistle, "We have not because we ask amiss."

"Are Ye Able?"

In the Master's Kingdom, places of distinction and honor are not to be had for the asking or for the seeking. They are for those who, without thinking anything about them, pay the price of devotion and sacrifice to Christ and his cause.

"We Are Able."

They glibly replied that they were able. How little they knew what they were saying. How little we realize the deeper meaning and implication of some of our professions and our avowals of readiness to pay the price.

"Ye shall drink of and be baptized with the baptism I am baptized with."

Jesus took them at their word. We had better be careful about our professions; Jesus may take us at our word. As a matter of fact, both James and John did pay the price of martyrdom in fulfillment of these words: "It is not mine to give."

Jesus was no "ward-leader" or "postmaster-general, distributing soft jobs to relatives and friends. He was not engaged in giving places of preferment or power. He was calling men to the way of a Cross. In proportion as they entered into his suffering would they share in his glory. If we suffer with him we shall also reign with him.

The Indignant Ten.

James and John were not the only ambitious disciples. The other disciples "got hot" when they learned that James and John had beat them to it. A great deal of trouble in the church of Christ today is due to the ambitions and scheming of those who want prestige and place and power in the church for selfish reasons.

The Ministering Master.

"Even as the Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many." The glory of Christ was his spirit of humility and service. He came not to be an over-lord, but to be a minister, a servant, and a ransom for all.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR NOTES.

This brings you face to face with three questions:

- 1. Does being a Christian have anything to do with your choice of a life work? Illustrate your answer.
2. Does being a Christian help one in his choice of a life work? How?
3. Does being a Christian add handicaps and place difficulties in the way of a choice? How?

Perhaps the discussion which will bring out the ideas which fitted together will give your answers to these questions out some very definite life situations which your members face. The following may remind you of others:

(a) Tom has been out of work for some time. His family really needs the money which he would like to earn. There is an opening in a hotel, and he is interested in learning the hotel business. The hotel advertises and sells alcoholic drinks, which he believes degrade the young men whom he knows. Tom is a Christian and is facing a decision. What would you advise him to do?

(b) What is the attitude of a Christian young person when his cherished life work plans seem interrupted, or just about completely upset?

MONDAY.

"HE CALLED ME FRIEND."

"Ye are my friend if ye do whatsoever I command you."—Jno. 15:14.

It was the custom of Jesus to address persons as "friend," also in his stories he spoke of folks as "friend." It is a characteristic word of the kingdom, never discussed, but always used in describing Christian relations.

But the greatest compliment Jesus ever paid his people was to own them as his friends; and he never left them without an assurance of this regard. He said, "I call you not servants; for the servant knoweth not what his Lord doeth; but I have called you friends; for all things that I have heard of my Father, I have made known unto you." "A friend to the Lord"—what fellowship! Sweet are the words of Longfellow:

I breathed a song into the air,
It fell to earth, I knew not where;
Long afterward the song, from beginning to end,
I found again in the heart of a friend.

Prayer—Our Father in heaven, create within us a clean heart and renew a right spirit within us, and make us a friend to man. We pray that we may know thy friendship and that we may not be called friend amiss by thee.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

FRIENDS AND EACH OTHERS' MIRRORS.

"Give and it shall be given to you, good measure pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom. For with what measure that ye mete withal it shall be measured to you again."—Luke 6:38.

Friendship is an abstraction of this noble flame,
'Tis love refined and purged of all its dross,
'Tis next to angels' love, if not the same,
As strong in passion is, though not so gross.
Thick waters show no image of things;
Friends are each others' mirrors, and should be Clearer than crystal, or the mountain springs,
And free from clouds, designs, or flattery.

—Catharine Phillips.

Man's needs are satisfied only by persons, and only as we give to man the best that we have, will we find the best coming back to us. When Christ said, "Give and it shall be given unto you," he was not talking about putting money in the collection plate, or making contributions to charity; he was talking about giving love, giving strength to the needy, giving faith, giving the good and the best in everything, and in doing this, the same things, he said, will be found flowing back to you.

If anything is obvious in everyday experience, both secular and religious, it is that the facts of life are not abstract truths, but they are living, thinking, loving, kindly things of our lives acting and reacting on others, mind on mind, heart upon heart, life upon life. Such is the influence at work at all times and in all directions, moulding character and making men, and shaping destiny, and it is all the reflection of others. The home is a splendid instance, in which every person is a reflection of his home training, where every day counted in determining natures and the making of a future man.

Question—What sort of reflection of ourselves do we find in others?

Prayer—Our Father, we seem to be caught up in thy spirit this morning and find ourselves a part of the great circle of thy influence in the world. We thank thee and praise thy name. Make us good reflectors of thy spirit and shining lights along the way of men. We ask it in Christ's name.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE VALUE OF FRIENDSHIP.

"I am distressed for thee, my brother, Jonathan; very pleasant hast thou been unto me; thy love to me was wonderful."—II. Sam. 1:26.

Like as in almost everything, there are friends and there are friends—if you know what I mean. The most of us have a great many friends of the casual type; friends who are closer to us than mere acquaintances; but friends who are a comfort in times of need and distress, who give unselfish counsel, who give their lives in a comradeship that is trustworthy and inspiring, are few. They may be more than we think, and we might realize this if we were more friendly ourselves; but still they are few.

However, it remains a fact that "no receipt," says Wister, "openeth the heart, but a true friend; to whom you may impart comfort in griefs, in joys, in fears, in hopes, in suspicions, and counsels, and whatsoever lieth upon the heart, to oppress it."

What is the best a friend can be
To any soul, to you or me?
Not only shelter, comfort, rest—
In most refreshment unexpressed.
The best friend is an atmosphere,
Warm with all inspiration dear,
Wherein we breathe the large free breath
Of life that has no taint of death.

—Lucy Larcom.

Prayer—O Lord, our God, our friend, and our life; make us not only thine but a friend to man.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

CHRISTIAN FRIENDSHIP.

"And Jonathan . . . arose, and went to David in the wood, and strengthened his hand in God."—I. Sam. 23:16.

The thing that kept David's and Jonathan's friendship alive midst all the difficulties and dangers that arose was their recognition of God in their friendship, and they did it by reminding one another of God's promise and by declaring their faith in that promise. This friendship was not a mutual liking of two gallant young men of congenial temper, it was a sympathy of a common faith. Hastings comments, "If Jonathan loved David, it was because David was true to a divinely appointed destiny and followed it unshakenly through peril and pain and discouragements. If David loved Jonathan, it was because he, too, saw in his friend a lofty and pathetic obedience to a fate which was a fate which God had chosen for him."

If this be true, we must conclude that love is the only permanent relationship among men, and that is a relationship that is born of God, and it places us where we can say with John, when he would not use his own name, but did identify himself as the "disciple whom Jesus loved."

The Lord Jesus himself stands in every true friendship, and since he laid so much stress on friendship, and often referred to individuals by claiming them as a private friend, shows us how entirely he was as we are in wants and feelings.

Quoting Hastings again, he says, "The only perfect friendship is a friendship which is inward and spiritual," and, if we would make lasting friendships, we must bring them under the law of Christ and make them instruments of righteousness. It is our bounden duty to strengthen the hand of our friends in God.

Prayer—Our Father, today we dedicate ourselves afresh to thee and Christ's friendship to our fellowman. Be thou our strength and perfect in us thy way and will. In his name we ask it.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"Rejoice not when thine enemy folleth."—Prov. 24:17.

"Love your enemies and do good to them which hate you."—Luke 6:27.

"If thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink."—Romans 12:20.

"Do good, and lend, hoping for nothing."—Luke 6:35.

Christian living is all-embracing. It covers our attitude toward all people; the wicked as well as the righteous, enemies as well as friends. It is a life of service for good, which good extends to enemies as well as those whom we love.

To do one harm is a mortal sin, because it is destructive to a soul, and it is obscuring to spiritual vision. One of the fundamental principles of the Kingdom, as taught by our Lord, is to be "harmless as doves," be "blameless and harmless, the sons of God," says Paul.

Have you this love for your enemies? It is a hard lesson. It runs counter to our very natures. Yet Jesus, who came to "seek and to save the lost," threw his life into unlimited friendship for his enemies, a friendship that included them in the entire plan of salvation. This is why he gave us this law of loving enemies, and the experience of history is, that to be born again means that we may possess somewhat of that nature ourselves, at least to the extent of imitating it until we actually possess it.

But what of those who sought you harm—
Who joyed at your mistaking,
What place have they in this, your chant,
In these your prayers partaking?
And your pure souls—your tender hearts—
With love and laughing breaking,
For God, and your neighbor and your enemy.

—Margaret Blackie.

Prayer—Our Father help us. We are weak. We know that we deserve no thanks for loving only those who love us. Give us, dear Lord, to see further than this, yea, give unto us somewhat of the Christ-love that extends unto all.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

NOTHING ELSE TO DO.

"The way of him that is laden with guilt is exceeding crooked."—Read Prov. 21:1-8.

A young woman who had won a prize in a famous beauty contest turned bootlegger, was caught, fined $500, and sent to jail for a year and a half. Her excuse was that she could find no other work to do.

In these days of frequent unemployment, that excuse is often given for turning to evil employment. But "no other work to do" is never an excuse for doing the devil's work. "The only way I can make a living" does not palliate a base way of making a living, for it is not necessary to make a living at all.

Any honorable man or woman would die rather than do a dishonorable act. "The soul that sinneth, it shall die"; and how much better death of this perishable body than death of the immortal soul! Work—honorable work—should be found for everybody; but if it is not to be found, then find starvation!

Prayer—Dear God, pity the poor. Teach us to pity the poor. But most of all dear God, teach the poor in what real poverty consists.

THE COMMAND OF CHRIST.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world.—Amen."

The acid test of religion is its unselfishness. Selfishness lies like a sharpened axe at the very root of Christianity. And if Christianity cannot get above selfishness it is doomed always. The Christianity is an anonym of selfishness. A person cannot be thoroughly and logically self-ish and be a Christian. Christianity moves from self like perfume from a rose. No more can a person be a Christian and be at the same time selfish than a rose can be sweet-smelling and fail to give off its fragrance. Show me a church that constantly gives to itself alone, and I will show you a church that is dying. The church that runs its Sunday School just to teach religion to its pupils that they may be religious only might as well close its doors, for all people are religious to start with. But the church which teaches religion to its pupils in order that the pupils in turn may do something about it is justified in teaching.

I have stood in the presence of a great forest and been handed a new, sharpened axe. The axe was not given me in order that I might possess a curio, nor to simply add an axe to my collection of things; but that axe was given to me to cut trees down with. A roadway was needed. There was work to be done across the wood. Teams and wagons must travel across the forest, and I held the axe in my hand. But not for long because there was a mighty challenge to break a trail, and at it I went.

Jesus had been doing something to a group of loving followers. He had been putting a power in their hands that was mighty. He had been placing a memory in their hearts which could never be erased. They had seen Jesus heal bodies. They had been given power to transform lives. They had seen Jesus raise the dead. They had been given power to inspire men and women. They had seen Jesus die nobly upon the cross. They had been given power to live mightily for him in the field of conflict and world need. They had seen Jesus resurrected. They had been given power to overcome doubt, fear, persecution, fire, sword, stake, scaffold.

And a memory had been meted out to them. Taking bread one night, Jesus brake it in their presence, teaching them that thus would his own body be broken for them; and taking a cup of wine he gave thanks, and assured them that thus his own blood would be spilled for them. He asked them to eat a bit of the bread, and to take a sup from the cup; and begged of them that as oft as they should do it, it should be in remembrance of him. And then when there came the commencement day that closed that marvelous school, and graduated that class of ordinary men, now made extraordinary by their great Teacher, Jesus standing before them said, "Go, teach, baptize."

And the church was off. Off to run its mighty course of converting, blessing, saving, healing across a sore and needy world. One disciple stood up one day and preached the things that he had been given in the glory and power and strength of that message, and three thousand souls were converted. Souls they were gathered from every quarter of that civilization. Peter had obeyed his Lord. He was using the Gospel he had been given. Another disciple tried it and they bound him, and stoned him; stoned until he was dying. Things had not gone so well with him as with Peter. They were taking his very life from him. But I told you that they had been given power to overcome doubt, and fear, and persecution; and consequently Stephen prayed one of his Lord's prayers, "Father, lay not this sin to their charge. . . . Lord, Jesus, receive my spirit," and thanks be unto God who gives victory, there was one young man standing by, who seeing the strange beautiful spirit of the dying martyr, never rested until he had preached the same Gospel in many lands, and written a large portion of the New Testament for good measure. Thus it comes about that if we use the salvation which God has placed in our hands whether we win our three thousand by living, or our one by dying. He is with us alway, to richly reward our efforts, even unto the end of the world;

Jesus had told his followers to do three things in three Names. The three things are three sides of the same thing, and the three Names are One. "Go. . . teach. . . baptize; Father, . . . Son, . . . and Holy Ghost." How the three work together in parallel. It has been the Father's will to create the possibility of going and to go; it has been the Son's to teach both by precept and example so that he is known everywhere as the Great Teacher; and it has been the Holy Ghost's to baptize with inspiration and power! The three are one. And the three will be with that person, or church which undertakes to carry out the command of Christ.

In what power and moment this command of Christ was given! Out before the Calvary lensed eyes of Christ was a world needy, and sore, and sin-cursed, and hardened, and hungry. And in the heart was a passion and a love that would bring them succor and peace. "Come unto me all ye that are weary and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Standing there in the power and glory of his resurrection, with a perfect life behind him, with expectant disciples looking up to him, he says, "Go ye. . . unto all nations." And did they go? They went! And it took sacrifice, means, time, life, all; but they had heard his command and they failed him not. Through fear of the Jews; through prisons of the Romans; through dungeons of the earth; through storms at sea; and stonings in cities; here and there they left one beheaded, or crucified; but on they marched, never really considering seriously turning back. It was at great cost. But the world is still repaying them in gratitude, and saints unnumbered in heaven still sing the praises of their God, who gave them power and grace to go.

Furthermore, they were commanded to teach. This, too, they did. Whether it be an Ethiopian servant, or a gathered multitude from the very ends of the earth; whether it be in a prison in Jerusalem, or a dungeon in Rome; whether it be a magnificent reception room of a great Cornelius, or a sinking ship of the Mediterranean; whether it be with the beasts of Ephesus, or the boy Timothy, son of Eunice; whether it be with King Agrippa, or the cowardly coppersmith, they taught the life, death, and resurrection of Jesus! They told what they had seen, and heard, and felt, and handled as good witnesses of the Christ. In Jerusalem, Judea, Samaria; in Athens, in Cyprus, and Rome; in Phillippi, Galatia and Macedonia, they taught until the few first persecuted Christians of the first century became the victorious millions of the third century. Christ had given them a message for a purpose, and they had fulfilled that purpose.

And further still, they were commanded to baptize. No doubt they obediently went through the outward form of this sacred rite, but better still their converts were baptized with the Holy Spirit after they had believed. Did their converts "stick"? Their heroism and fidelity has blessed civilization beyond all words to portray. Fathers, mothers and children died in dungeons, at the stake, and by the mouths of hungry beasts before they would deny their faith, or turn away from their Lord. They were baptized. # Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

We find that children are always happy when they do something worthwhile. We have two girls who have led the entire Orphanage family this school year in making the highest grades made—Ruth Duke, who came here a small girl from Suffolk, Va., some years ago, has always made good grades in school, and is in the graduating class this year. For the entire year she has made A's on all her subjects except one, and during the year she has made only four B's, and in our grading system here Grade "B" means 90 or more. "A" is the highest grade given.

Gladys Horne, who is in the 9th grade, has run her a close race and made only five "B's" on her report card. Both girls have "A" in deportment during the entire year. It always fills our hearts with joy to find our girls standing at the top.

The children at the Christian Orphanage have the opportunity to and do attend the Elon Consolidated School, and have the same advantages that any other child has in our State school system. It is a fine arrangement and gives our children an opportunity to mingle with other children in the communities that make up our school. The most of our children have made good grades this year and stand with the average in the school. We are glad to report that our scourge of sickness has abated and the children are all back in school.

We have had lots of sickness in the Orphanage family since the first of the year. A number had to go to the hospital for operations and treatment, which has made our expense account run up.

As the pretty warm days come on, we trust our Sunday Schools will take on new life and increase their offerings to help us meet the extra expense.

The Christian Orphanage is doing a splendid service for the fatherless. Help it in its work of love and charity.

Each of us has an individual part to perform in life's drama; each has a duty incumbent upon him; each has a responsibility to meet.

were different. Something had happened to them. And their's was a faith that had set out to preach the Gospel to all nations. What ignorance, cruelty, superstition, hunger, and want stalked the earth in their day; and how it needed the baptism which it was getting from the command of Christ!

From this same Christ who gave the command there was also a promise of power, and his presence with them alway, even unto the end of the world. That brings us up to the present in one sweep. That says his command is for us; that his power will be with us; and that his presence is with us; and that we are the followers of those who first followed him. Is there need for Jesus to look with bleeding heart, and wounded hands upon our world today, and issue the same command to "Go"? Let me read you just one paragraph of one letter I received recently: "Several hundred thousand people of various creeds and races have been torn from their homes and sent into exile as the result of the Soviet 'Five-Year Plan for the Liquidation of Christianity.' The unfortunate victims are herded into rough barracks, unsanitary and overcrowded, compelled to labor in swampy forests or in mines, without sufficient clothing where there is winter for nearly ten months in the year, and with barely enough food to keep body and soul together. The scanty ration of flour is 'stretched' ground bark. Pitiful letters reflect the unutterable distress in such sentences as this, 'They say typhus has broken out in one of the barracks. Thank God! At last the end comes'."

Refugees are fleeing from Russia into poverty-stricken, famine-ridden China. They arrive destitute, with their dying families upon a government already overwhelmed with poverty and unemployment. If we could turn the globe-map of the world tonight we would find it needing the things that real and true Christianity has to offer. And not only that, we would see many brave, heroic ones in every quarter of that globe doing their sacrificial best to revive hope and relieve suffering. Our church here, and not one single member of it, can afford to whine and putter about what we are asked to do in obeying the command of our Christ. Let us recognize that we have a Christ and a Lord. Let us show our allegiance to him. And let us show his spirit is within us by our compassion and love for the needy world. And thus shall we have the joy of Jesus within!

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR NOTES.

(c) What help does our Christianity offer to one who seriously desires to make the best choice of a life work?

Henry Drummond gave this advice to one who asked, "How can we know God's will concerning us in any given circumstances, or indeed, in all circumstances?"

Pray, think, talk to wise people, but do not regard their decision as final; beware of the bias of your own will, but do not be too much afraid of it; meanwhile do the next thing, for doing God's will in small things is the best preparation for doing it in great things! when decision and action are necessary, go ahead, never reconsider the decision when it is finally acted upon; you will probably not find out till afterwards, perhaps long afterwards, that you have been led at all.

Discuss these suggestions. How far do they outline a procedure whereby a Christian may be helped in choosing his life work?—Adapted from The Sunday School Herald.

NATION-LEADERS.

"Thou leadest thy people like a flock, by the hand of Moses and Aaron."—Read Psaim 77: 16-20.

When we think of the many evils in our land, it is difficult indeed to think of our nation as in any sense God's people; but then, how many evils ran rank in ancient Israel! Ours may be in some respects a different set of evils, but certainly they are no worse.

Also it is hard to think of ourselves as in any way comparable to those majestic figures, Moses and Aaron, as if God would commune with us or work miracles through us, or through us guide a nation to its destinies. Yet even here we remember the sins of these two heroes, and how patient God had to be with them.

Nay, God has some nation-leading to be done by every one of us. No one of us but can reach out and grasp some good. No one of us but can communicate of that good to his fellows.

Prayer—Our Father, when we are led by thee, we can lead others. Not ours to say how far our influence may reach; only to make sure that it is thy influence.—Amen.

OBITUARIES

NEWBOLD.

Marjorie Ellen, the 14-year-old daughter of Grover C. and Mrs. Nonie Newbold, died following a brief illness in a local hospital, March 27th.

Funeral services were conducted in the First Christian Church, Portsmouth, Va., March 29th. The large congregation attending her funeral, and the many beautiful flowers bore testimony to her wide circle of friends.

Marjorie was a loyal member of the church and active in our young people's work. She was faithful in attendance and one of our sweetest Christian girls.

To the bereaved family we offer our sincere sympathy and point them to Jesus Christ who comforts the hearts of his believing children in every sorrow.

R. A. WHITTEN.

ADAMS.

Charles H. Adams, 62 years of age, died at his home near Clayton on Saturday, March 17th, following a paralytic stroke. Mr. Adams had been in declining health for several months, but was confined to his bed for only about one week before his death.

Mr. Adams had long been a resident of this section and had endeared himself to a wide circle of friends. He was one of the county's most prominent farmers.

Funeral services were conducted on Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at Amelia Christian Church, by Rev. B. J. Howard of Chapel Hill, a former pastor of the deceased. Interment was made in the church cemetery.

Surviving besides his widow is one son, Eunice H. Adams, of near Clayton, and one sister, Mrs. Sarah Peden, of Kenly. B. J. H.

GARRISON.

Mrs. Sallie Jane Garrison, daughter of the late Mary Waynack and George Kernodle, was born September 28, 1853, and departed this life March 25, 1934, age 80 years, 5 months and 25 days. August 31, 1870, she was united in marriage to Gustavus Adolphus Garrison, and to this union were born seven children, four of whom survive, as follows: G. R. T. Garrison, R. 2, Burlington; Mrs. Fuqua, Union Ridge, N. C.; W. L. Boston Garrison, Burlington; W. Holt Garrison, R. 2, Burlington.

Since early girlhood, Mrs. Garrison has been a member of Bethlehem Christian Church. Burial services were conducted from the church by the writer, assisted by Dr. P. H. Fleming. Interment in the church cemetery.

May God bless the family.

G. C. CRUTCHFIELD.

KERNODLE.

Mr. D. F. Kernodle was born July 31, 1853, and departed this life April 5, 1934, at the ripe age of 80 years, 8 months and 5 days. He had been in failing health for a number of years. He is the fifth one of this family who has left us for a while in the last year and a half.

On April 13, 1876, he was united in marriage to Miss Lydia Margaret Garrison, who preceded him to the grave many years ago. To this union were born four children, all of whom, with one brother, Mr. R. T. Kernodle, Burlington, N. C., survive. The children are: Mr. W. A. Kernodle, Brown Summit, N. C.; Dr. C. E. Kernodle, Elon College, N. C.; R. F. D. 1; Mrs. T. F. Faucett, Brown Summit, N. C.; Dr. J. F. Kernodle, Greensboro, N. C. There are 19 grandchildren and 5 great-grandchildren.

Early in life Brother Kernodle professed faith in Christ and united with Bethlehem Christian Church, where he remained faithful until death removed him from among us. He had served his church well, acting as superintendent of the Sunday School for many years. Many are the words of appreciation for the loyalty and efficient service he rendered, living for his immediate family, for well always punctual and manifesting a deep interest in the growth of the work. For many years he had served as a senior deacon of the church. Failing health severed his active relationship, but no one can doubt the fact that the old church was still dear to his heart.

He was held in high esteem by all who knew him, lifting up a high standard of God bless the family.

The Sidestepping League.—

When advised that Colombia and Peru are preparing for war over the Leticia border, the League of Nations advisory committee "sidestepped positive action in hope that the two nations might conciliate their dispute." The League has always shown considerable agility along that line.—Exchange.

Christianizing a Custom.—

Typically Japanese is the ancient custom of placing offerings on the "god-shelf" in memory of the departed, and of repeating the gifts at frequent intervals. A Christian woman in Sendai, whose little daughter died three years ago has an offering box in which from time to time she places money she would have spent for a toy or some other article of entertainment for the little girl if she had lived. On the anniversary of her daughter's death she presents the whole amount to the church as a memorial offering.

Bishop Cannon Acquitted.—

After several years of persecution and approximately three weeks of prosecution, the Southern Methodist churchman has finally been declared innocent of the misuse of election funds in the anti-Smith campaign of 1928. If the trial did nothing else it gave the daily press a last chance to hurl abuse at the Bishop under the guise of quoting the prosecution lawyers of the trial. Bishop Cannon has given the larger part of his life toward the fighting of the liquor traffic, and one might hazard a guess that he is not through fighting yet.

Getting Rid of Her Slums.—

England is clearing her slums. Plans already provisionally accepted by the government provide for the demolition of 266,851 unfit houses, inhabited by 1,240,182 people, and for the building of 285,189 new houses to replace those demolished, and it is anticipated that the program will be further extended. The capital cost is estimated at 165 million pounds, equivalent to an annual payment of over 3 million pounds by the government and of over 1 million pounds by the local authorities concerned. Manchester proposes to clear 15,000 slum dwellings, and Liverpool, 11,000. Leeds has the largest program, involving 30,000 houses. The government proposes to introduce a further Housing Bill this fall, giving local authorities new powers to acquire compulsorily property for reconditioning.—Advance.

The Babists.—

Dean Frederick D. Kershner, of the School of Religion in Butler University, tells us that the latest of "the messiahs of history is the Bab." He says: "We in America are familiar with the Bahaist species of reformed Mohammedanism, which claims to be the ultimate religion of mankind. It has no ritual, no theology, and no priesthood. It is devoted to universal peace, universal brotherhood, and universal religion. Its adherents are all ultra-pacifists—which contrasts somewhat strangely with the fiery sword of the original prophet, Mohammed." Our writer believes that while Bahism is rather vague and is enshrouded in an atmosphere of ethereal moonshine, yet "the Babists are worth learning about and are certainly an improvement upon the old-fashioned Musselman, who believed in killing his enemy first and talking peace afterwards."

Repeal at Its Worst.—

When Irving Fisher wrote his book, "Prohibition at Its Worst," a few years ago, he developed the theme that conditions in the first decade of liquor outlawry were bound to be bad, but that they nevertheless offered some improvement over previous liquor control, and that they would undoubtedly get better as time went on. As a theory it was a plausible one, and under normal conditions might have proved itself a sound analysis. What we are concerned with now, however, is repeal at its worst. And what we mean is not that this is the early year of repeal and that we may expect conditions to improve, but that this is the worst kind of repeal that we could possibly have gotten—this repeal which throws the entire control of the liquor problem back to the state governments and the politically powerful brewers and distillers. And we do not think conditions will get better until the system is entirely changed. We are not among those who felt prohibition had established itself as the only feasible form of liquor control—indeed, we believe a serious re-study of the whole question is needed—but we said a year ago and we repeat now that President Roosevelt made a tragic blunder, an inexcusable mistake when he took liquor control away from the Federal Government. Liquor control is a federal problem, the liquor industry needs rigid federal supervision, and until the people are convinced by experience of this fact, we have but little improvement to expect in the chaotic, confused, and uncivilized conditions we are enduring today.—The Christian-Evangelist.

Who Buys New Automobiles?—

Statistics from Washington show that people with incomes under $3,000 a year account for the sales of 62% of the new automobiles sold in the United States each year. According to these figures which are furnished by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, persons with incomes of between $2,000 and $3,000 buy slightly over 30% of all new cars; while those with incomes between $1,400 and $2,000 account for nearly 25% of the new car purchases. People with incomes of between $3,000 and $4,000 buy 23%, while those with incomes above this amount account for approximately another 10%. Those with incomes between $1,200 and $1,400 a year buy about 5%, while those with incomes under $1,000 a year are mostly contented to buy in the second-hand market. Second-hand purchases are not included in the statistics just given, and their inclusion would greatly increase the percentage of automobiles bought by people in the lower earnings brackets. There has been a continuous drop in the price of automobiles since 1925 until within the last few months. For example, in 1925, the wholesale price of over 25% of the cars sold was between $750 and $1,500, while in 1932, less than 10% were in this price range. In 1932, recognized as the motor industry's worst year, there were 3,026,000 persons directly engaged in automotive work, while 875,000 more were indirectly given employment because of the automobile. The largest groups under the last item were those engaged in the refining and sale of gasoline, 410,000, and people employed on highway work, numbering 350,000 more.

Unemployment and Immigration.—

At a time when there are several millions of unemployed people in the United States, The Saturday Evening Post raises the pertinent question as to the advisability of adding further to the twelve million or more foreign-born of over twenty-one years of age who are in this country today. Several years ago a quota law was enacted which permitted the admission of only 150,000 immigrants from the Eastern Hemisphere annually, fixing no limits on our neighbors to the north and south. Yet there are so many exceptions in the law, that but for executive order denying admission to those without visible means of support, there would have been admitted more than one and a half millions during the past three years. Even at the height of the depression, we are told, nearly 800,000 foreigners were trying to get into the country each year. But, not satisfied with the present quota laws, the aliens in our midst are clamoring for laws less stringent, and are apparently making themselves heard, for there have been introduced into the present Congress no less than 50 bills which would modify our present immigration laws. "Few of these," we are told, "would punch very large holes in our existing codes," but we are reminded that if we take an already leaky basin and "punch fifty holes in it, the thing ceases to be a basin and becomes a colander." Many of our foremost citizens have come as immigrants, but this does not change the fact that the attitude of the nation at this time should be to discourage the coming of rather than of inviting the alien to our shores. This is in fairness to him as well as to ourselves.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Has your church taken the annual offering for Missions? If not, why not? Can a church disobey by neglect or indifference the command of our Lord to give the gospel to the world, and through such disobedience, hope to succeed and prosper? Only by and through obeying our Lord, who founded the church, can we hope to build with him and for him.

Rev. Albert Godley, a constant reader of THE CHRISTIAN SUN and a minister of righteousness, deeply interested in the church, with all of its enterprises, changes his address from Tenafly, N. J., to No. 10 Marion Road, Upper Montclair, N. J. Brother Godley is now in his 88th year and retains his youthful zeal and vigor for the cause of purity and righteousness. He will appreciate a line from any SUN reader.

The Mission Secretary attended the parish meeting of our Congregational constituency at Flint Hill, near Sophia, N. C., Rev. S. H. Penn, pastor, on Sunday, April 29th. There were representatives in the meeting from the churches of the parish, and the day was given to mission study, review and addresses. Brother Penn is seeking to interest the people of his parish in Missions by inducing them to use study books and other devices that will help to a more comprehensive understanding of the great subject of Missions at home and abroad.

A reader of THE CHRISTIAN SUN and loyal friend of all our church enterprises, writes: "I am convinced that too many of the members of the churches fail in keeping the command of the Lord, 'Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it' (Mal. 3:10)." If all our members would obey this command and prove the Lord, the support of Elon College, our Mission work and the other church benevolences would be made easy. Tithing is truly a great Christian law and principle that has been too long neglected.

One of our deeply interested and loyal members of a small church which has preaching only once a month, said to THE SUN's editor recently: "We like our pastor and regard him as a good man and a good preacher, but for some reason he does not mention, or says very little about, the enterprises of our church—Missions, the College, the Orphanage, THE CHRISTIAN SUN and the others. We, of the church, regret this very much and often wonder why our pastor neglects these enterprises." Just put it down that that pastor is headed for a smaller church and pastorate unless he mends his ways. The enterprises of the church are vital to the life of the local church, and none know and feel this more than intelligent and consecrated laymen of the church who often wonder why pastors do not tell them and the local church more about these enterprises.

The 50th Annual Commencement of Pleasant Hill Academy, our mountain school at Pleasant Hill, Tenn., is to be held May 11th-14th. Rev. F. Q. Blanchard, pastor, Euclid Avenue Congregational Church, Cleveland, Ohio, preaches the sermon to the graduates on Sunday, May 13th, and Mr. Fred L. Brownlee, Executive Secretary, American Missionary Association, delivers the literary address to the graduating class, Monday, May 14th. Our Congregational constituency, through fifty years, has made a tremendous contribution to the cause of righteousness and the kingdom in the Tennessee mountains, just as we Christians, since beginning a few years ago, are seeking to make a real contribution to human betterment and spiritual uplift through education and preaching in the mountains of North Carolina and Virginia at Fancy Gap, Carroll County, Virginia.

From the Troy (Ohio) Daily News, April 23rd, comes the following: "In impressive, but simple, services, Rev. A. H. Hook was formally installed Sunday evening as pastor of the First Christian Church of this city, succeeding Dr. J. H. Lightbourne, who resigned some months ago to accept the pastorate of the Congregational-Christian Church, Burlington, N. C. The services were in charge of Rev. L. C. Grant, Cincinnati, moderator of the Southwestern Ohio Association of Congregational-Christian Churches, and were attended by an audience which filled the church auditorium. Rev. Mr. Hook is a graduate of Elon College and the Yale School of Divinity. For the last five and a half years he has been pastor of the church at Goshen, where he has accomplished a work which attracted attention throughout the denomination. Previous to accepting the work at Goshen, Rev. Mr. Hook had been engaged in pastoral work for some years in connection with his college and university work." We note with peculiar pleasure that Rev. Upton B. Thomas, Rector of Trinity Episcopal Church, extended a welcome to Brother Hook on this occasion in behalf of the Ministerial Association of the city. Rector Thomas' father was one time rector of St. Paul's Church of Norfolk, and he was once assistant of Christ Church, Norfolk, and is a graduate of William and Mary. We felicitate our good friends, Rev. and Mrs. Hook, in their fine and favorable initiation at Troy. Brother Hook, while a student at Elon College, was pastor of our Henderson Church, and his good wife, Mrs. Hook, was stenographer and assistant in the office of our Mission Secretary at Elon College.

FROM THE STICKS.

By REV. A. R. FLOWERS.

I don't know who was first to use the term, "In the sticks," as often applied to the more remote sections of our rural districts, but I dare say that there are many praiseworthy things that can be said about many of those people that he little thought of.

I am just back from a visit of five days among the people living in the sticks. I spoke to them from the pulpit in their little church in the evenings, and visited their homes in the day, and if any pastors in the towns or cities have any better attention in your services than I had in that little church, you have been a success in that part of your ministry, and if you have received more hospitality from your parishioners than I received from those people in the sticks, you are in nowise "cast out."

I think I came as near having one hundred per cent of the people to hear me each evening as I have ever had in any of the hundreds of places I have spoken in several different States. You can't be too "townish" in the sticks and get anywhere, unless you go back home. You must be useful. Show them how to do things and if you don't know how, you ought to know. I am sorry for the preacher who thinks his job begins and ends in the pulpit.

I have learned, by actual experience of more than thirty years, that my greatest chance of rendering a fruitful service to humanity lay in the youth of our rural districts. I am fearful that many of our preachers, as an old Baptist deacon told me not long ago, have become "town gentlemen," and have left our rural district people to their own keeping. It has not been a year since I visited a little town of nearly three thousand people; and I was told that there were seven preachers at that time living in that town; five were white and two colored, and only three, two white and one colored, had any work in the town.

To me, there is a wise distribution of preachers as much as in other things. Too many people, in many professions, have forgotten that a rural district failure means a total failure—even in the production of great men. If you want to know how much the pulpit is indebted to the rural districts, just ask for a show of hands at your next State Convention, of all those ministers who were born and reared in the country. I am often asked why I spend so much of my time with the boys and girls of the rural districts. My answer, so far, has been satisfactory.

APRIL SUBSCRIPTION PAYMENTS.

We are publishing this week a list of those who have made payments on their subscriptions to THE CHRISTIAN SUN during the month of April. The labels for these will be changed for next week's mailing. Notify us if yours is not correct.

While we are deeply appreciative of the cooperation and loyalty of those listed, yet it is a pathetically small showing, in view of the cost of publishing THE SUN. Labor, paper, ink, and all elements of the publishing business show a steady trend upward; therefore, it is imperative that subscriptions be renewed promptly.

CONSECRATION.

(Phil. 1:21.)

"For me to live is Christ."

I want to give my heart unto my Saviour,
Till every thought of selfishness is slain;
I want to shine for him through my behaviour,
That I may for his crown, some jewels gain.

I want my life both now and ever
To bear some fruit along the way,
And trust my Lord and doubt him never,
Led by his spirit every day.

I want my feet to follow where he leads me,
Through desert sands or climbing mountain height,
That some lame, footsore, weary traveler,
May, by my footprints, find the way of right.

I want my hands to toil be given,
As willingly I work each day,
To guide some soul from earth to heaven,
That my own hands may point the way.

I want my eyes to see his jewels
Oft hidden from the eyes of men;
That I may find and bring them to him,
And save them from a life of sin.

I want my ears to hear his whisper,
Through broken hearts, and tears of grief,
That, through his love, I may help lift them
Unto my Lord for sure relief.

I want my tongue to tell the story,
The sweetest story ever told,
About my Lord in all his glory
Who gave his life for every soul.

I want my prayers in few words spoken,
For others who have missed the road,
Or some poor soul whose heart is broken
And crushed beneath a heavy load.

I want my mind alert and growing
To think of duty every hour,
Kind thoughts, in deeds forever sowing,
Unfolding truth with love and power.

I want my faith both pure and holy,
Purged of all fear and doubt each day,
That I may serve in stations lowly,
And follow him who leads the way.

I want my loyalty to ever measure
In proven service for my Lord,
That even in the hour of leisure
I'll be found faithful to his word.

I want my soul to be a blessing
To every soul that I shall meet,
That they, my Saviour's love confessing,
May lay their trophies at his feet.

I want my love so pure and holy,
That not a trace of self shall live
Within my heart, but Jesus only,
The noblest, purest love to give.

AN ANOMALY.

An interesting and informing article is published in the Boston Evening Transcript, which is from George H. Spencer, secretary of the Massachusetts Bible Society, on the eve of the 125th anniversary of the beginnings of that society. Taking a more general view of the distribution of Bibles, he says that Bible societies were instituted and maintained by men and women who "believe the Bible has a message of inestimable value for all mankind." From the beginning it has been the aim of the societies to place a Bible in every home and have everyone capable of reading it to personally own a Bible. Naturally the goal will never be reached, but the work done by Bible societies is remarkable.

When the Massachusetts Bible Society was organized, "the Bible had been printed in seventy-seven different languages. Today the figure exceeds nine hundred and fifty." The British and Foreign Bible Society was founded five years earlier than that of Massachusetts. During its years of service it has distributed 442,471,067 volumes. The American Bible Society, founded twelve years after the British and Foreign, and seven years after the Massachusetts, has distributed 246,046,560 volumes.

Even today, despite all adverse teaching, the Bible is the best seller. And yet, here is the anomaly: Mr. Spencer concludes, "Is the Bible being read? Can we conclude from the story of translation and circulation that the Bible is being read as widely as it is being distributed? The answer must be in the negative. . . . People are not reading the Bible devotionally as they once did. The family altar is largely a reminiscence—hallowed in some minds, ludicrous in others."—The Christian-Evangelist.

NEVER!

Beer never built a cottage. It never stuffed a hungry little stomach. It has never inspired a kiss of purity. It never planted a garden or sent a happy little girl to swing upon the gate in anticipation of father's return. It never made a contented hearthstone or bred a yeomanry to inspire their country with sturdy pride. It deals in mortgages and evictions. It wrenches bread from the fingers of childhood. It triumphs in blows and hate, in suspicion and fear, in lust and disease. It tramples upon the flowers, strikes the hinges from the gate and sends the little one flying from the father's approach. Selfishness, hopelessness, decay smite the land in which it rules.—Free Will Baptist.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

To SUN Subscribers Who Are in Arrears:

In an effort to get the subscription list on a current basis, we are making these special offers, good until January 31st, to SUN subscribers who are in arrears:

(The Offer Is Continued Until Further Notice.)

OFFER No. 1—If you are in arrears as much as two years, send us Money Order or Check for $5.00, and we will give you credit for three whole years' subscription.

OFFER No. 2—If you are a year or more in arrears, send Money Order or Check for $3.50, and we will extend your subscription two years.

OFFER No. 3—If you are as much as three years in arrears, send us $6.00, and we will extend your subscription to July 1, 1934, giving you full credit for your back account.

Letters have been sent out during the past six months to all who were as much as three years in arrears, trying to induce them by special offers, to pay up their arrearages. Quite a few have responded. Others have paid no attention at all to these letters. If by any chance you were in this class, and did not receive our letter, Offer No. 3 will enable you to put yourself back on a current basis at a nominal cost. Even if you are unable to avail yourself of this offer at present, won't you write the undersigned, explaining the situation?

If at all possible, won't you take advantage of one of these offers, thereby not only saving yourself money, but helping your Church Paper?

All Money Orders and Checks should be made payable to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and letters should be addressed to J. T. Kernodle, Managing Editor, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond, Va.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH.

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF OUR CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

RECOVERY.

Have we Christians recovered? Can we recover? Have we lost our dynamic? Is the inner urge gone? These are questions more serious than may at first appear.

Facts are stubborn things, but it helps us to face them and come to grips with them. The writer is of opinion that we, of our Christian household, have lost our zeal for holding up the name and the power of the gospel and the polity of the church we preach and teach. Frankly, we do not seem to have the driving power of evangelism, of winning new recruits, of overcoming the world about us and of increasing the numbers of our fold and flock. Two years ago, according to the statistics of the Southern Christian Convention, our 221 churches had a membership of 31,893. Our reports for last year (1933) show that our 223 churches had a membership of 32,030, an increase in actual church membership for the two years of 137 members, and the addition of only two churches in all our seven Conferences. This writer has often pointed out that about all that the well established churches of a Conference do is to hold their own in total membership, and that increases to Conferences and Conventions come by the addition of churches. Just as a local church increases in number by the addition of individuals, so a Conference increases by the addition of churches or congregations. Now the two churches added the past two years about includes the 137 members of our increase for the biennium.

We seem to have lost our zeal for increase at the home base. We are not planting other churches. It would startle some of our Conferences for a new church to ask for admittance, so long has it been since a new church was added, and in the older and more progressive Conferences seldom is a church added. Have the noble principles upon which we are building lost their grip upon us? Have we, as a church, lost our morale? Isn't there a distinctive work to be done by the church, who, from the beginning, has declared that:

"It is opposed to contentions and schisms in the body. Envy, strife, and divisions are hurtful to the church, and antagonistic to the teachings and spirit of Christianity.

"Its purpose is to propagate the fruit of the Spirit, and to cultivate brotherly love.

"It fosters the essential doctrines of evangelical Christianity, by which the church has been established and maintained.

"It remands to private judgment the peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and divided the Christian world, and hence they cease to be matters for debate, when such debate tends to strife.

"It requires no compromise of faith on the part of any follower of Christ in order to have communion or fellowship. In it denominational distinctions cease to exist and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

"Its mission will be consummated in the conversion of the world, the union of all the followers of Christ, and his reign in human society."

THE POWER OF THE GOSPEL.

There are events, even spectacular and towering events, in our day that show us, if we need showing, that the gospel has not lost its power. Because we see on the front pages and in streaming headlines daily the account of so much crime, sin, and lawlessness, we may conclude that the gospel is antiquated. Well, some may preach an antiquated, an incipient or a very complacent gospel, but there are those who are preaching a militant gospel that goes deep at the root of things and cuts and destroys while it builds and constructs.

Turning this very morning from the nauseating and depressing stories of kidnaping, murder and lawlessness, we found relief in contemplating the power of the gospel as manifested just recently in two countries and under wholly dissimilar circumstances. One was an account of George P. Howard, native of Argentina, speaking in a large theatre, packed to capacity, in Lima, Peru, on "Christ, Our Contemporary." The event is described in the Missionary Review by one who was present:

"Every seat was taken and people were standing around the sides and in the aisles nearly half way to the platform. It was a never-to-be-forgotten experience as we looked out over that audience of diplomats, business men, university professors and students, working men, women of every class of society, who were listening, many of them for the first time, in conservative Catholic Lima, to a good old-fashioned gospel sermon put in modern language so that they understood it. They got a vision of Jesus as the manifestation of God, interested in every problem of human welfare, and possible as a present-day experience in the life of every man. It was a far different view of Jesus than the ordinary person in this country has, who thinks of him as having been dead all these centuries and as existing only as an image to be worshipped in musty temples or carried in religious processions. It is impossible to measure the far-reaching effects of that lecture, but it is certain to open up a new field of work here in Peru."

The other was of a wholly different situation, with far different surroundings, but with the same message and the same objective. The incident is of E. Stanley Jones and is related by the New York Christian Advocate:

"Stanley Jones was the attraction," says Fred-eric Spurr, reporting in The British Weekly the meeting of the Free Church Council as Birkenhead. "Two thousand people were turned away. A second building might easily have been filled. People are here from all over England anxious to see and hear the man who has inaugurated a new era of missions. A struggling mass of people besieged the doors an hour before the time. The address moved its hearers to great enthusiasm, and then to profound silence."

"In London the great Central Hall, Westminster, was crowded when he spoke. An Anglican bishop introduced the speaker, who had a great reception. The British Weekly's report says:

"He gave a statesmanlike survey of the various objections that are raised in our time against foreign missions. The main charges are those of political or denominational aggressiveness. While he would not wholly exonerate some early workers from such charges, he is convinced that they are now entirely helpless. Cheers broke forth as he said: 'I believe there are no permanently inferior peoples.' There was laughter when he contradicted a newspaper report from America: 'Dr. Stanley Jones does not wish Mahatma Gandhi to become a Christian.' What I did say was, 'that I do not wish Mr. Gandhi to become a Methodist, though if he came amongst us he would be like the new wine breaking all our wineskins.'"

Such events stimulate us in the faith of an un-failing, all-powerful gospel.

THE FELLOWSHIP OF THE FAITHS.

During the "World Good Will Week," May 12th-18th, an International Convention is to meet in New York City for the purpose of "uniting the inspiration of all faiths upon the solution of man's present problems," according to Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, national vice-chairman of the Fellowship of Faiths.

It is not possible to predict the value or the outcome of such a Convention, but the fact that it will face vital subjects pertaining to the welfare of mankind is, at least, hopeful and gives promise of something better to come. We are told that in the sessions and conferences, at least, fourteen vital subjects will be discussed. Among the number are: "How to Overcome Racial and Religious Prejudices," "How to Prevent War," "How Man May Conquer Fear," "Religion in Our Scientific Age," "The Need of Spirituality in International Politics," "Spiritual Recovery Administration Necessary for World Recovery."

If, in the light of unprejudiced approach and the open mind, Protestant, Catholic, Jew and Gentile may face together and discuss in a friendly fashion such topics as these, there should be given to the world as the result thoughts and suggestions that will help. The very fact that there is to be an assembly is heartening. As has been so often expressed, Jesus the Christ, is the adequate solution of these problems, but just the technique through which his life is to be brought to bear upon their solution, with so many conflicting faiths, furnishes the difficulty of such a Convention. His life, the influence of his teaching and the power of his preaching hold an ever higher and wider place in the world and cannot be left out in any adequate consideration of problems that pertain to the welfare of mankind.

Japan has caste as well as India. The eta consists of 2,000,000 to 3,000,000 persons who are untouchables, or pariahs, tainted not by disease but by the misfortune of having been born into the lowest caste.

BOOKS AND BOOKS.

Of the making of books, there is no end, and many books are a weariness to the flesh. Yet out of the books we get the wisdom of the past, the light of the present, and the prophecy of the future. Columbia University, through its Institute of Arts and Sciences, has issued a list showing the best selling books in the United States since 1875. A religious book, "In His Steps," by Dr. Chas. M. Sheldon, easily leads with the sale of eight million copies. Next in numbers comes "Freckles," a nature story, which gave life and zest to the forests and fields and wide open spaces with two million copies. Third is "Tom Sawyer," million and a half copies; then follows "David Harum," the quaint and homespun philosopher, which has reached the sale of one million, two hundred thousand copies.

Of course, the Bible was not included in the list, since the books listed were of American production. Should we include the sales of the Bible, however, all these popular books would suffer by comparison, for during this same period of a fraction more than one-half century, the American Bible Society itself issued 14,526,438 copies of the Bible in English, and more than 22,000,000 copies of the New Testament. When these figures are added to the sales made by the Oxford University Press, Thomas Nelson, Winston, Holman, National Publishing Company and others, the pre-eminence of the Bible, as the best seller, stands out in monumental proportions. The Book of books yet has its grip upon the mind of the reader and the purse-strings of the purchasers of books. J. O. A.

CRIME.

Both crime and the cost of it are on the increase and grow more appalling daily. United States Senator Copeland, in a recent address pointed out that one-fourth of our national income now goes to pay for crime. The Senator pointed out further that crime in this country is costing three times more than education. That which was most alarming in Senator Copeland's statement was that the average age of our criminals in penal institutions is twenty-three years, and that the largest age-groups are eighteen and nineteen years old. The change of late years from old age to middle age, and from middle age to youth, in the number of criminals, is a revelation that should interest all who care for youth and the safety of society. We are spending now $200,000,000 on the education of 26,000,000 school children and $1,500,000,000 annually to arrest, imprison and keep up half a million prisoners. One of two conclusions is inevitable; either we are not spending enough on the education of our youth, or much of our education is misleading and inadequate. The great cause of education is character building. If we would spend more for that education which means character building, we would certainly have to spend less in apprehending, holding and supporting those who, through breakdown of character, are destroying all that character, law and order stand for. J. O. A.

GOD PLANTED A GARDEN.

A verse from the old story in Genesis reads: "And the Lord God took the man, and put him into the garden of Eden to dress it and keep it." That, surely, was doing the very best that could have been done for him—the first parent of ours according to the old poetic legend. There was no better place to which he might have been sent, and no more wholesome task that might have been given him to do, and that he made a very bad mess of things while there and thus engaged only makes his failure seem all the more inexcusable. The Providence that put him to work in the garden did well for him, indeed. And the Providence that gives any man a garden to work in is above all things kindly. Dressing and keeping a plot of land is one of the very oldest of human occupations, and one that it is easiest for us to think of as in the divine ordering and planning for every man. To make a garden, and to make it well, would seem to be to cooperate with the great Creator, who makes everything beautiful in its time as no other occupation could possibly do. And in those days of greater leisure which we are assured are ahead of us it seems probable that mankind will learn to save its soul by engaging in such wholesome and health-giving exercise as the making of gardens.—The New Outlook.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION—FOR WHAT?
FOR WHOM?

By HARRY THOMAS STOCK.

Is religious education enough? The answer is definitely negative if by that term we mean only the exposition of the Bible, exposure to moral precepts, indoctrination in theological or social creeds, or fellowship in a regularly organized church group. These represent essential phases of a program but they are not enough.

How little young people know about the proposals of Jesus! Children grow into adolescence, within Christian homes and churches, with the vaguest conception of what Jesus said or did. High school students are often better acquainted with European dictators than they are with him upon whom the church is founded. Church school teachers, in training classes, dismiss the central ideals of Jesus as impractical without serious consideration or experimentation. The Sermon on the Mount might well become the curriculum of the entire church for a six-month period. But after we have analyzed that great document—what then? Correct ideas and exalted ideals are not the whole of religion. Even a "good" life is not all that there is to discipleship.

The learning process involves doing as well as thinking. No one learns until he practices. But educational procedure, as it prevails in many churches, begins and ends with the so-called "teaching" of the "lesson." A study of the American religious education program (a survey which is significant and startling in its results as the Laymen's Inquiry has been in the field of foreign missions) proves that the character product from this brief Sunday program is all too meagre. The immediate effects upon the baffling problems of society are practically nil.

The objectives of religious education have usually been stated entirely in terms of what the process should do to "growing persons." State and national leaders of young people, gathered at a recent interdenominational meeting, have projected the basis of a five-year or ten-year "program of Christian action" which denies the adequacy of an educational plan aimed only at the character development of youth. Young people need to be enlisted for a crusade of social righteousness. After all, when you encourage a boy to be unselfish and thoughtful to a suffering neighbor, you do it not primarily for the education of the boy; that is a valuable by-product. When a church, aroused by the dangers of the Vinson Bill, proceeds with intelligent strategy to register its opposition, the action is taken not for the education of its members; there is a purpose which is directly social.

Religious education, then, must be committed to social purposes and must be concerned with the improvement of social relationships and institutions. Religious education is not the church school; it is not a course or a collection of materials. It is (or ought to be) an intelligent, organized method by which the whole church seeks to achieve its purpose in the modern world. It has a two-fold function: to help persons to become Christlike, and so to affect the institutions of society that all persons may enjoy a greater abundance of life. The church cannot escape its responsibility for social action. Religious education, as the method of the church, must be employed at the "unfinished tasks of Christianity."

When the young people of the churches, then, are called upon to unite in a confident attempt to "Build a New World," they are challenged not simply to discussion but to action. The word "build" was chosen deliberately. Russian youth have been led to believe that through communism they can usher in the golden age. German youth have given themselves without reserve to Hitler's program of action. Compared with the faith and enthusiasm of those two groups, the faith of Christian youth in the principles of Jesus is weak and wobbly. At that, it is as great as the faith of their Christian elders. It will become at least as strong and active as adult leaders desire. An abundance of material will be available this summer and autumn to aid in this task of making a Christian world. But printer's ink is no substitute for local leadership, conviction, courageous action.

Education which does not issue in consistent conduct is incomplete; social crusades which do not proceed educationally, fail of their greatest possibilities. Mere social revivalism is as dangerous as that tabernacle trail-hitting which is not preceded and followed by a thoughtful consideration of what is involved in being Christian. We cannot harrangue people into Utopia. Nothing is settled by emotional outcries. All social progress, which is not to be interrupted by reactionary setbacks must be grounded in intelligence and must be carried on under constant re-evaluation. Mobocracy cannot be justified even if certain of its goals seem to be Christian.

Upon many of the most important issues of life we cannot be said to make up our minds. We act according to snap prejudice. We are "constitutionally" Tories or radicals or middle-of-the-rovers. There is no great virtue in being any one of the three. The impulse to help the under-dog is humanitarian. To have respect for constituted authority is a mark of good citizenship. But every social situation is complex. It cannot be solved by an impulsive alliance with that class movement which claims to represent the interests of the under-dog; it is not sufficient to make a pious appeal to the traditions of the founding fathers—or those of their daughters. If the vicious sectionalism between East and West, the city and the country, is ever to be overcome it will require more than the adoption of resolutions, and it will not be accomplished by fighting it out. If the economic war which has continuously divided these United States is to be ended, intelligent social action is needed—action which does not spring from a spirit of angry vengeance. Many well-intentioned efforts "to do something about it" create more problems than they solve.

It will be objected, and perhaps rightly, that the deliberative process of education is the way of inaction, or, at best, the way of slow action. The person who balances argument against argument, who tries to understand both sides and to feel a brotherly sympathy for them, is likely to remain a neat fence-sitter while the combatants maul each other. The church is accused of being such a spectator. We discuss academic issues or wars already fought. Instead, we ought to be making it clear to Washington that we want the government to prepare for peace instead of providing a justification for the crazy war prepara-

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The meeting of the Southern Convention in Suffolk this week is a distinct honor to the city and community. Two great personalities will loom largely in the thought of those interested in Convention history. Dr. William B. Wellons, the founder of the Suffolk Christian Church, was the guiding genius in the organization of the Convention. To him, more than to any other one man, is due the credit for bringing together the discouraged and scattered churches after the Civil War. His strong personality, his wisdom, deep spirituality and his Christian satesmanship commanded the respect and the support of many capable leaders.

The development of the Christian Churches in the counties nearby Suffolk was largely due to his leadership. He was able to inspire the best people of the community with courage and enthusiasm for the cause he loved and espoused. His influence in the Eastern part of the State of Virginia has never been fully appraised. This extended to the organization of the Farmers Bank of Nansemond, which has made an untold contribution to the business interests of several adjoining States, and has also been a strong friend to the educational institutions of the Convention.

Dr. William W. Staley, for fifty years pastor of the Christian Church, was an outstanding figure in the city and church during his years of service to the church and interests of the Convention. As Dr. Wellons was the leading spirit in the organization of the Convention, Dr. Staley was the guiding and leading spirit in the development of the Convention. He was a clear thinker, broad in his sympathy, liberal in his interpretation and generous in his judgment. The people had confidence in his ability and in his leadership. His great life was devoted to the interests of the church and the kingdom of God in the earth. He was able to lay aside all selfish ambition and self interest to promote the unity, growth and development of the kingdom. The Convention has not fully appraised the measure and the value of this great man of God.

Suffolk rejoices in sponsoring a movement to erect a memorial to this man who spent the best years of his life in the city. Plans are under way to establish a public library in the city as a memorial to Dr. Staley. The daughters of our deceased leader have already donated his personal library to the Christian Church as a memorial to their father. He collected one of the best libraries, for ministerial use, in the State. This will be left intact in the room used for his study, for the use of the pastor of the church and other Christian ministers of the city and community. This gift of his daughters will be a perpetual help to the ministers of the Christian Church who may have access to this valuable library. The Convention will approve the honor conferred by the city in seeking to establish a public library as a memorial to this beloved saint.

The Convention delegates and visitors will be inspired by the influence of these two leaders who have passed on to their reward. Their consecration, their work and their influence should encourage the United Fellowship to carry on the work so well planned and so worthily executed in the past. The Suffolk Church should be a shrine to which many may come for inspiration and spiritual encouragement. For many years it has been the embodiment of unity and fraternity among other churches and all races. Hundreds of colored ministers and leaders have counted it a joy and a benediction to seek the counsel and encouragement of the pastors of the Suffolk Christian Church. They have found friendship and brotherly love within the walls of the pastor's study. Surely, it is a privilege for a Convention to meet for four days in a city and in a church with such outstanding leadership in the past as well as at the present time. I. W. JOHNSON.

ELON COLLEGE.

The Christian Churches constituting the Southern Christian Convention in 1887, felt greatly the need of an educational institution for the training of the youths of the church. The Committee on Schools and Colleges for the Convention composed of Dr. W. S. Long, Dr. J. Pressley Barrett, Rev. J. W. Holt, Dr. J. U. Newman and Col. J. W. Hardin, finding it impractical to continue the educational work of the church through the Graham Normal College, then located at Graham, N. C., requested an extraordinary session of the Convention at old Providence Christian Church for the purpose of giving further consideration to the educational interests of the church. At this session, a provisional board constituted by Dr. W. S. Long, Dr. J. P. Barrett, Hon. F. O. Mooring, Col. J. H. Hardin and Dr. G. S. Watson, charged with the responsibility of selecting a suitable location, adopting plans and conducting campaigns necessary for the founding and building the first unit of a college for the Christian Church.

Dr. Newman is the only surviving member of the Committee for Schools and Colleges, at whose request the Convention was called in extraordinary session. Dr. Newman was a member of the original faculty and has remained a member of the faculty until this day.

Col. J. H. Hardin, Burlington, N. C., is the only surviving member of the provisional board, and is now a member of the Board of Trustees. The College is unmistakably the child of the Convention and through the years has been a contributing factor to the success of the church. It was founded and built for the purpose of offering superior educational advantages to the young men and young women of the church and to all who might desire higher educational advantages, and further, those who founded the College proposed that educational advantages should be offered to young men and young women under positive religious influences, and that Elon College should not only be a college of first rank, but that it should provide in addition, religious instruction and spiritual guidance for all who might come for instruction and improvement.

The College has kept faith with its founders and remained true to the church's ideals through all the years. It has had its moments of testings and days of trials. It has not yet seen the day when it received ample financial support for its program.

Those in charge of administrative affairs of the College have been compelled to retrench or refrain from advancement that would have been beneficial. It has always enjoyed fair patronage, and does today.

Metriculated students, however, will not and cannot pay the entire cost of a college education. There are some in the average school who can and do pay their pro-rata share of the cost of education. On the other hand, there are many enrolled in the average college who cannot and who do not pay anything like the cost of training received. The average institution of higher learning in this country has to have provided grounds, buildings, furnishings, and in addition, ample endowment, that the cost of conducting its educational program may be adequately subsidized, and make it possible to operate without a deficit.

Elon College has buildings and grounds and equipment that are adequate, but they have not been paid for. It has a fair endowment. Its endowment, however, has been hypothecated in the interest of outstanding debts, so that the College receives very little benefit from its invested funds.

The present administration has spent the past three months in conferring with creditors and probable benefactors in the hope of effecting a settlement of all outstanding indebtedness on a basis agreeable to creditors and to prospective donors.

The Convention that founded Elon College, that owns and operates the institution, is now in biennial session at Suffolk, Va. The Convention is face to face with the problem of higher education for the church, just as definitely as it was forty-four years ago. We needed an institution of higher learning for the church then. We need it infinitely more now. If the brave hearts of the church were daring enough to undertake the founding of a college then, certainly we, increased in strength and multiplied in wealth, are sufficiently brave to rescue the college from its present predicament and send it on its mission rejoicing for generations to come.

It is the hope of the Board of Trustees of Elon College, and it is a challenge to the churches of the South in the Convention assembled, to make ample provisions for the safety of the College and to lay plans for its future development which will mean the intelligent and aggressive growth of the church in the years to come.

On September 2, 1934, the 46th annual opening of Elon College will take place. It is now time that all interested, begin to plan definitely to make this the most auspicious opening in the history of the College. A greatly increased enrollment, and an encouragingly increased financial support for the College will make the opening memorable. This can be done with the help and cooperation of the entire membership of the church and the sympathetic assistance of every alumnus. Elon College provides opportunities for ambitious young men and women equal to the best of our educational institutions. Her equipment is second to none. Her faculty meets every requirement. Her curriculum is inclusive, offering a wide range of subjects from which students may select to meet their individual requirements for professions chosen. The climate is ideal, the surroundings are wholesome, the atmosphere is inspiring, and the religious forces on the campus are evident. We specialize in religion, art, music, business and in foundational work for law and medicine.

We invite investigation and will answer freely any questions asked. Prospects for the coming year are most encouraging. The best that they have been in many years. Let the friends and supporters of Elon College have no further misgivings, but let them give their inclusive and wholehearted support. There can be no turning back, no unnecessary retrenchment, but in the light of increased demands and an ever widening vision, we must press on until the student body reaches the strength it should have, and the College has the assured financial support that it has a right to. We have these ideals, they were set for us by the great souls of our church who expected us to maintain these ideals, and we will. Let no man despise his ability, and let not one of us fail to bring his gifts, whether they be in effort, or talent. Even as we, individually, have received, so let us give.

Watch Elon College grow!

THE SURPLUS OF MINISTERS.

(A PRACTICAL PROPOSAL.)

By HARRY W. KIMBALL.

Hubert Herring says that there is "an increasing surplus of ministers because of men being released during the years of depression and because theological seminaries equipped with disproportionate endowments have virtually paid the way of men who have turned to their halls."

With the growing consolidation of churches and with the seminaries making it easy for men to take theological courses, this surplus is likely to increase, and it presents a problem which our denomination must face. The Congregational Board of Pastoral Supply tells me that there are in New England at least a hundred ministers fit for work who are eager to have some sort of pastorate. These are men who have no other means of livelihood, and a large proportion of them at least could do good work in fields for which they are suited. They are surely entitled to more consideration than they are getting.

Now one of the simplest and most practical ways by which something could be done would be to provide that any man receiving the assistance of one of our theological seminaries should sign an agreement that after graduation he would spend three years in an assistant pastorate or in a home missionary church.

This is asking no more of our young ministers than any graduate from a four-years' course in a medical school expects to do. The young physician knows that for his proper equipment he must spend a two-year internship in a hospital, and there is certainly at least another year which he must spend in getting established in any community.

I note in the recent catalogue of Andover Newton Seminary that nine of its graduates of 1933 are located in Congregational Churches. Several of these churches are quite desirable ones, and all of them are churches which some of these one hundred unplaced Congregational ministers of New England would be glad to have. I have no criticism of the young men fortunate enough to obtain these churches. They are eager to try their wings; they want the independence which the pastorate gives. Probably they are ready to be married, and the churches are all too easily persuaded to accept these youthful ministers, who often will come for less salary than other men.

Now the adoption of the standard of service which I have suggested would have at least four results:

1. It would enable our young ministers to get three years of practical training under the direction of a successful pastor or of a state missionary superintendent. They would learn what no seminary can ever teach, and would be much better equipped than they are at the time of graduation to assume the full responsibility of leadership.

2. It would impress upon the churches that youth is not the only, and perhaps not the most desirable, qualification of a minister. It would teach the churches that the denomination expects experience of men who are called to the pastorate and the same practical training that the medical profession assumes the graduate of the medical school will seek. It would also cause the churches to realize the justice of a standard which requires that young men who have received their theological education almost without cost should give to the churches this sacrificial service for a few years as some slight return for all the benefits they have received.

3. It would enable many of the ministers now in New England without a charge to be at least considered for vacant pastorates which are now sought by members of the graduating classes of our seminaries. It would increase considerably the number of those who would be called to these churches and so would lessen the surplus of ministers which is now one of the most unfortunate conditions of the times.

4. If these young graduates were expected to be assistant pastors at a nominal salary it would enable many a minister now verging toward the dead line (wherever that may be) to continue effectively for a few years more. These young men could give that life and lilt to the work among the youth of the church which often the older man can only partially bestow. I can think of nothing which more certainly lengthen the pastorates of older men. The slight experience which a few have had with student aid over the weekend proves this.

Why not, then, require this arrangement from the young men entering the seminaries, both for the good of the church and also as a reasonable return for all the seminaries do for them?—In Advance.

MONTICELLO.

Monticello Christian Church was recently the scene of an interesting church institute. The theme of these services was "Building an Enduring Church." Rev. and Mrs. Fay Le Meadows, ministers of the Shiloh Springs Church, of Dayton, Ohio, were the visiting speakers. Rev. Mr. Meadows is a speaker of great ability, and a splendid pastor. He gave us much to think about and gave us some definite things that any church could accomplish. He did much to "stir up the gifts" that are within us. Mrs. Meadows, a true lady of the Manse, also added a great deal to the conference by her friendliness and her contribution to the women.

The afternoon conferences were held relative to the place of the men, women, children and the young people, showing their part in building an enduring church. In the evening Mr. Meadows brought inspiring messages.

Miss Mary Nichols, a home mission worker, of Roxborough, helped with the children's groups. The church feels life it is much the better for these days.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary

MISSIONARY GIVING.

The spiritual life of the church is marked and measured by missionary giving. "Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." As we put our treasure, or portions of it, into the wholly unselfish and divine task of revealing our Lord to the world, we are laying up treasures in heaven. A church may, in a measure, be spiritual without being missionary, but, certain it is, that the missionary church will be a spiritual church. This is true, because a missionary church is obeying our sovereign Lord and is promoting his program and carrying out his purpose and plan in the world. Through our missionary giving, we are seeking to share not our name or glory or love with others, but the name and glory and love of our crucified and risen Lord. The church needs a spiritual re-birth. Nothing indicates this more than the fact that the last few years missionaries have been called home by the scores and hundreds, preaching places have been shut up and hundreds, not to say thousands, who could have been saved by the preaching of the gospel, have been lost, and are lost, without the gospel. In our missionary giving, we are breaking the Bread of Life to hungry hearts, supplying the food to souls that are hungry and perishing.

On this account, every church in all our communion should take its annual missionary offering, should insist that its Sunday School make a liberal offering once a month to Missions and should continually keep the idea of Missions in the minds and hearts of church and Sunday School members. If we are to have a spiritual church, a church of dynamic power, a church that goes forward in kingdom building, we will have to have a missionary church, a church that gives to Missions, a church that prays for Missions, a church that practices Missions.

JOINT STUDY COURSE.

The Young Peoples' Missionary Societies of the Holland and Holy Neck Churches conducted a joint Missionary Study Course at the Holy Neck Church on the fourth Sunday in April.

The book used was "Builders of a New World," by Robert M. Bartlett. The teachers were chosen from the leaders of the two societies, and the writer, who was present throughout the entire session can vouch for the thoroughness and efficiency with which the work was done. Young people to the number of about forty manifested a real interest in the mission study.

Miss Mary Rawles Jones, of Holy Neck, was in charge of the program, conducted the devotionals and taught the first chapter, "Finding Life." Miss Frances Everett, of Holland, taught the second chapter, "The Blue Print Mind." Miss Lillye Holland, leader of young people's work at Holy Neck, taught chapters three and four, "The Simple Life" and "Communism and the Christian Revolution."

The group then adjourned for lunch. Each one had carried a separate lunch, but while the young people were in session, a number of the church leaders, true to their loyalty to the young people, had assembled these separate lunches into a delightful supper which all enjoyed.

Upon reassembling, the fifth and sixth chapters, "The Patriotism" and "War and Peace" were taught by Miss Theodosia Beachem, of Holy Neck, and the last two chapters were taught by Mrs. J. R. Darden, superintendent of the Holland Society, "Who is Responsible," and "The Miracle of History."

The meeting was very effectively closed by a missionary playlet staged by the Holy Neck Society. Several adults were also present as visitors.

DOCTORING SICK SOULS AND BODIES.

By Miss D. P. CUSHING,

News Editor, the American Board.

Where the doctor or nurse in America deals with many victims of industrial life, of the automobile, and the hundred and one forms that our complex civilization assumes, a missionary nurse like Miss Minnie A. Tontz, of Mt. Silinda, East Africa, has patients badly mauled by lions, and small children terribly burned as a result of careless parents allowing them to wander and stumble into the fire that burns in the center of the hut.

And always there is superstition—if a lion mutilates or a sharp stick gashes, it is caused by some enemy. There is no natural death or sickness.

"These people do not like for everyone to see their sores or their very sick," says Miss Tontz, "for fear they may be bewitched and then the wound will not heal, or the sick person will not get well. They tie a bit of grass or string around the place where the wound is so it may heal quickly and not be bewitched."

Miss Tontz for some time had charge of the Ireland School where girls came for protection and training. She is also deeply interested in orphan babies which are brought to the mission station and where, at latest reports, the orphanage contains 25 such motherless infants. These pathetic little children who are often puny and ill when taken in, turn out many times to be lively, normal children after proper care. When during one week it fairly rained babies, Miss Tontz humorously suggested that the last one be named "Max," short for "Climax." Elijah was the name given, however.

For a time Miss Tontz was stationed at Chikore, East Africa, and since there was no doctor there, she often found it necessary to perform such services as pulling teeth and conducting obstetrical cases unaided.

Taking her medical bag, Miss Tontz now tours the 24 or more out-station schools, examining not only the school children, but patients who come to see her. There is a hospital called the Helene Stobier Memorial Hospital at Mt. Silinda, where Miss Tontz now works. It was opened in October, 1932, and at the head is Dr. Willis H. Willis. It gives an average of 5,900 dispensary treatments annually and cares for between 500 and 600 in-patients.

Miss Tontz comes from Illinois and is a graduate of Oberlin College. She planned to study medicine, but when she learned of the great need for teachers, through contacts with missionaries home on furlough, she decided to go out as a teacher and general worker. After six years at Mt. Silinda, she came back to America and took up the study of nursing. She was graduated from St. Vincent's Training School, Portland, Oregon, in 1923, and reappointed to Africa for medical service.

HEART OF THE HILLS.

Here in the Elk Spur community we have had three infants' deaths this spring. God is gathering the buds of spring to bloom for him in a brighter clime. The last death was one that touched the hearts of many for he was a boy of eight years of age, and the son of the first mission to the mountains. Little Samuel Matthews Meredith, son of Iola Hedgepeth Meredith, was loved by all who knew him. He loved to go to church and Sunday School. Mrs. Grissom was his teacher in Sunday School, and when she called for his favorite Bible verse, he always gave John 3:16.

He had been to school all winter, well and happy, but got sick one day at school with what seemed to be a simple case of throat trouble. All was done that could be done, but before anyone realized that he was very ill, he was gone. I believe Samuel had filled his mission and was called home. God had a plan and a reason for calling him now. We can't understand fully, but I think God was simply speaking to us here when he took all these tiny buds of life this spring. He has touched the heart of these hills, and there may be something he wants us to do that is very important. For God does not make mistakes.

A little child may be called home to lead others. And little Samuel had pointed out the way to all here. I think now of him in that beautiful land calling all to come. I can hear his childish

A Story for the Children

HOW ANNA FOUND A NEW HOME.

By RUTH MOWRY BROWN.

Kneeling in front of an empty bed, Anna sobbed and sobbed. Her head was bowed upon her arms, which were folded on the white coverlet of the bed. "Oh, mother! mother," she whispered, "can't you come back to me?"

An only child, whose father had died some time before, now that her mother, too, had gone, Anna was left all alone. A kind neighbor had taken the girl to her own home after the death of Anna's mother, but as she was a poor woman and had several children of her own to care for, she could not keep Anna all the time. On hearing that she would have to go to an orphan asylum, she had gone back to the little cottage where she and her mother had been so happy, even though they were poor.

For a long time Anna lay there and cried, then she said to herself, "Mother said I was to be brave, and I'm not being brave! The only way is not to think about it. Perhaps if I went to the church where mother and I have so often been, perhaps God will help me to be brave!" Wiping away her tears, washing her red eyelids with cold water and putting on her wraps, Anna made her way to a nearby church. She and her mother had always loved this little building, and as she slipped inside the door, they were rehearsing the Easter music.

"I'd forgotten that it is almost Easter," said Anna to herself. "Mother did so love this season! I am glad that mother is happy—even—" But before Anna could finish the thought she heard from a nearby pew a voice softly singing, as the organ played:

There is a green hill far away,
Without a city wall.
Where our dear Lord was crucified,
Who died to save us all.

"Oh, please, dear lady," said Anna, "those words shouldn't go with that tune. The other words fit better—listen:

It came upon the midnight clear,
The glorious song of old;
From angels bending near the earth,
To touch their harps of gold;
Peace on the earth, good-will to men,
From heav'n's all-gracious King,
The world in solemn stillness lay
To hear the angels sing."

In the next pew to where Anna sat, knelt a lady dressed in black. When Anna first spoke the woman looked up quickly, startled, but as Anna began to sing she quietly arose and slipped over near the singer. When Anna stopped, a little afraid that she had taken a liberty in correcting a grown person, the lady said, "But your song is a Christmas one and this is Easter."

"Mother always said that we could have Christmas all the year and be glad and happy until the next Christmas," answered Anna, with joy in her voice, having, for the moment, forgotten her own sadness.

"Not if you've lost all that gives joy," answered the lady. "My little girl has gone to be with the angels. I can never again be happy."

"I'm so sorry," said Anna. "My mother has just gone, too."

Then the lady took Anna into her arms and said, "Tell me all about it." Little by little the girl told of her mother's illness and death. But when she attempted to tell of the plan for the future, she broke down and cried. Softly the lady began singing the song being played by the organist, "Christ the Lord is risen today, Alleluia."

Mrs. Taylor, the lady so lovingly holding Anna, was greatly surprised at herself. Never, since the death of her own little Beatrice, had she held a child in her arms, and never had she sung a glad song. She wondered what had happened to her. Anna, nestling closer to her new friend, was surprised to find the lump disappear from her throat and a bit of the ache from her heart.

At last, when the organ was hushed, the lady said, "Your voice is so much like that of my lost little Beatrice that I had to speak to you."

"Not lost," answered Anna. "Mother always said that when people died they just went to heaven ahead of us. You just sang, 'Christ the Lord is risen again'."

With a hug, Mrs. Taylor said, "You brave little girl! Will you go home with me and spend the night? She was surprised at herself as she asked the question, for never once since her own little girl had gone had she asked anyone to her home.

The evening was a happy one for both Mrs. Taylor and for Anna. At last it was time for the girl to go to bed. "Will you sit on my lap, Anna, as Beatrice used to do?" asked Mrs. Taylor.

"I'd love to, if you'll sing to me then as mother did."

As Mrs. Taylor undressed for the night she thought to herself, "She is more like Beatrice than I thought any child could be. She is all alone. I need her and she needs me. I know Beatrice will be glad if I take her to live with me. That's what I will do."—Exchange.

voice as he sang, "Everybody ought to love Jesus." Ah, none who knew Samuel can sin easily ever again. I recall once in church when a group of boys became noisy where Samuel was sitting, and he got up and moved to another seat and sat quietly through the rest of the service. This was unusual for a fun-loving boy his age. So I shall ever see a bright face and a tiny hand pointing me to the cross that taketh away the sins of the world. It is not "good-bye" to little Samuel, for I hope to meet him.

I want to say in closing that our Grissoms are proving to be friends indeed to us of the hills. Mrs. Grisson has done lots of nursing this winter and I never knew how to fully appreciate her work until it came home to me. This winter she came to my home and served as special nurse for a long time. Then, of course, she never gets pay here for the work she once got eight dollars per day for.

Of course, we hope to have more money here some day, and want to do something besides simply say thanks to Mrs. Grisson. However, I fear she may get pretty hungry before then if that is all she has to live on. May God help our Grissoms, for we can't.

And I want to say one more word about what we call death. I now think of death as simply passing on to another land. One night last week I reached for my pen, for I wasn't quite sure about my time in this world, and there were just a few words I wanted to say if I were going. I simply wanted to say that I don't want anyone to feel that I should have stayed here longer. I want my people to trust God full and know he never makes a mistake.

Sunset and evening star,
And one clear call for me!
And may there be no moaning at the bar
When I put out to sea.

But such a tide as moving seems a sleep,
Too full for sound and foam;
When that which drew from out the boundless
Turns again home.

Twilight and evening bells,
And after that the dark!
And may there be no sadness of farewell,
When I embark!

For though from out and bourne of time and place,
The flood may bear me far;
I hope to see my pilot face to face,
When I have crossed the bar.

CHRISTIAN BROADCASTING.

The Chinese Recorder gives an account of the opening of a Christian radio station in Shanghai. The station is located in the heart of the city, its studio being a part of the Christian Literature Society building. At present, the programs can be heard in Shanghai, Hangchow, Ningpo and Soochow. An increase in power to make these broadcasts available throughout Eastern China is to follow. The programs are carefully prepared, and include discussions of social problems, character building talks for children, health talks given by mission doctors, short talks on "World Trends," home betterment talks, sermons, personal testimonies, and much music. Family prayers are broadcast every morning.

Think as little as possible about any good in yourself; turn your eyes resolutely from any view of your acquirements, your influence, your plan, your success, your following—above all, speak as little as possible about yourself. The inordinateness of our self-love makes a speech about ourselves like the putting of a lighted torch to the dry wood which has been laid up in order for burning.—Bishop Wilberforce.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

WORDS THAT I REMEMBER.

As I look back over the things that people have said to me along the journey of life there are many things that can be remembered, but three things have been very helpful throughout the years. I pass them along to you, my unseen friends, who chance to read these lines.

When a student in high school, someone came to our school to speak and in the speech told of one who made it a habit to pray about everything. The speaker said we could pray about as small a thing as trimming a pencil. The idea stuck with me and helped to form a habit of prayer that has brought confidence in times of despair, peace into troubles, and courage to labor when everything seemed lost. Prayer brings one into the presence of God.

When in college, I planned to try for the inter-collegiate debating team. But work piled up, and a debate was hard to prepare. About noon of the day of the tryout, I gave up the task and went to the library to read. A conversation ensued, and the sister of one of the professors urged me to try for the team. She said, "You can win." I went back to my room, gathered up my notes, wrote my speech, entered the contest, went to South Carolina, and won the first inter-collegiate debating contest Elon ever entered. She thought I could; and I did! It was just the bit of confidence, the kindly word that I needed for that moment, which was a moment of destiny for me. Since then I have confidence to try—and, sometimes, I have won.

While a student in Yale University, I visited in a fine Christian home in New York State. A conversation between the mother and me turned to the topic of gossip. She said, "The reason people are so suspicious of others is that their own minds are in the gutter. If they would clear their minds of filth they would not say such mean things about others." That sounded like sense to me, although I must admit that it came as a shock. I had thought it was the purity of character which made them think others were bad. But I wonder if that mother was not right. At least it is worth the effort to keep our own minds out of the gutter, and to refrain from slanderous gossip that cuts the heart out of others.

Three words I remember from the millions that have been spoken to me: pray, try, clean. Pray always and about everything. You can win if you try. Keep the mind clean. So may it be with you, and me also, always.

FAR INTO THE NIGHT.

Soon the clock on my office desk will point to the midnight hour. Already traffic has almost stopped and the city is quiet. Only the wind and gusts of April showers furnish music to blend with the click, click, click of my typewriter keys. But I must prepare my copy for THE CHRISTIAN SUN so those who wish may read. Far into the night I spend my energies in order that youth may have its page in the Church Paper. And why not? And why so?

I notice that people get anxious to leave church services—some do. Last night a leader of a Christian Endeavor conference almost apologized for having to hold the meeting until ten o'clock, a meeting that is held only once each month. The movie management never offers an excuse for continuing the picture until eleven, and sometimes they open just after midnight Sundays.

Other places of amusement never close until far into the night. The would-be funny papers tell of family arguments that last far into the night. Why should church people be afraid of the night?

Perhaps one should follow the advice received from a friend today and not burn the candle at both ends. "Spring fever," was recommended as having real value. Rest is a delightful and needful thing for all of us. But somewhere I have read of those who toil upward in the night while their companions sleep. They are said to get higher than those who sleep.

And the work of our beloved church needs to move upward. Our fine young people need to climb upward. I, myself, see plenty of distance before me in the path that leads upward. Young people whom I know work all day for their daily bread, and work for the church until far into the night. I am glad to join with those who are anxious to move the upward trail, and sometimes we will climb until far into the night with the hope of seeing the rising sun as it comes from behind the far-away horizon. As we see the new day dawn in our own experience, in the church, and in God's good earth, we shall be well repaid for the toiling even into the night.

WORK.

Let me but do my work from day to day,
In field or forest, at the desk or loom,
In roaring market-place, or tranquil room;
Let me but find it in my heart to say,
When vagrant wishes beckon me astray,
"This is my work; my blessing, not my doom;
Of all who live, I am the one by whom
This work can best be done in the right way."
Then shall I see it not too great, nor small,
To suit my spirit and to prove my powers;
Then shall I cheerful greet the laboring hours,
And cheerful turn, when the long shadows fall
At eventide, to play and love and rest,
Because I know for me my work is best.

—Henry Van Dyke.

THREE GATES.

If you are tempted to reveal
A tale to you someone has told
About another, make it pass,
Before you speak, three gates of gold.
These narrow gates: First, "Is it true?"
Then, "Is it needful?" In your mind
Give truthful answer. And the next
Is last and narrowest: "Is it kind?"
And if to reach your lips at last
It passes through these gateways three,
Then you may tell the tale, nor fear
What the result of speech may be.

—From the Arabian.

QUALITIES THAT MAKE GOOD MOTHERS.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC, MAY 13, 1934.
Matt. 15:21-28.

A Mother's Day tea or reception, with both fathers and mothers as honored guests, is an annual feature of this meeting in some churches. This tea may be held in a home or in the church, with springtime decorations and a special program of music; tableaux showing mothers of the Bible, or mothers of well-known men and women of later times, with appropriate readings accompanying the living pictures; a good story or drama; and tributes to "The Best Mother" by a girl, a boy and a father.

The theme for the worship service may be the words taken from Proverbs 31:31, "Let her own works praise her." Current magazines as well as some of the world's most lasting literature will offer material for enriching this service. Choose your Scripture readings from such passages as: Exodus 20:12; Proverbs 1:8; Proverbs 23:22; Proverbs 31:10-31; Luke 2:19; John 19:26, 27; II. Timothy 1:5; II. Corinthians 13. Choose hymns with a message for the day. Voice prayers of gratitude for the contribution of motherhood which has been constant through all times.

Codes for all sorts of industry have been marked out. If you were to write a "Code for Motherhood," which in ten words should suggest the most important qualities of good mothers, what words would you include? Let each young person think for a few moments and choose the words which he decides must be included. List all the qualities that members suggest. Then decide which merit place in the list of ten, and make a second list of qualities which are highly desirable but not so important. I. Cor. and Proverbs 31 may suggest some ideas.

There are words which will occur to you at once. How many of the following will appear in your code?

(a) Love; (b) Courage; (c) Sense of Humor; (d) Patience; (e) Religion; (f) Intelligence (versus education); (g) Optimism; (h) Understanding; (i) Health; (j) Fairness; (k) Industry; (l) High Ideals; (m) Attractiveness; (n) Musical Talent; (o) Friendliness. What others? Give your reasons for the ten you choose. Some may like to arrange the qualities in order of importance.

Lord who ordainest for mankind
Benignant toils and tender cares,
We thank thee for the ties that bind
The mother to the child she bears.

We thank thee for the hopes that rise
Within her heart, as day by day,
The dawning soul, from those young eyes,
Looks with a clear, steadier ray.

And grateful for the blessing given
With that dear infant on her knee,
She trains the eye to look to heaven,
The voice to lisp a prayer to thee.

All Gracious! Grant to those who bear
A mother's charge, the strength and light
To guide the feet that own their care
In ways of Love and Truth and Light.

—William Cullen Bryant.

EVELYN RICHARDSON.

DEAR OLD MOTHERS.

I love old mothers—mothers with white hair,
And kindly eyes, and lips grown soft and sweet
With murmured blessings over sleeping babes.
There is something in their quiet grace
That speaks the calm of Sabbath afternoons;
A knowledge in their deep, unflinching eyes
That far outreaches all philosophy.

Time, with caressing touch, about them weaves
The silver-threaded fairy-shawl of age,
While all the echoes of forgotten songs
Seem joined to lend sweetness to their speech.

Old mothers! As they they pass with slow-timed step,
Their trembling hands cling gently to youth's strength.
Sweet mothers! As they pass, one sees again
Old garden-walks, old roses, and old loves.

—Charles S. Ross.

BETRAYAL.

Still, as of old,
Man by himself is priced.
For thirty pieces Judas sold Himself, not Christ.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

JESUS ACCLAIMED AS KING.

LESSON VI—MAY 6, 1934.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Wherefore also God highly exalted him; and gave unto him the name which is above every other name."—Phil. 2:9.

LESSON TEXT: Matt. 21:1-46.

Jesus was about to announce his Messiahship publicly for the first time. He had told the woman at the well of Sychar that he was the Messiah, and he had made known to his disciples that he was the Messiah, but thus far he had not publicly proclaimed his Messiahship, his Kingship. What we call the Triumphant Entry, was a significant event. Jesus offered himself as the Messiah, the Christ, the King. And he did this at Jerusalem, the political, and the religious capital of the Jewish people. He did it in the full knowledge of what it meant and what it involved. He did it in the light of, and the fulfillment of prophecy. It is interesting to notice what Jesus did and the places he visited in connection with this significant event.

The King and Material Things.

The Master first laid his hands on a piece of property. "Go into the village over against you, and straightway ye shall find an ass tied and a colt with her; loose them and bring them unto me. And if any man say ought to you, ye shall say, The Lord hath need of them." Jesus was accustomed to walking. He could have walked into Jerusalem. But in fulfillment of prophecy he entered into Jerusalem riding, not on a horse, the symbol of war, but upon an ass, the symbol of peace. There is a deeper meaning to the whole affair. The Master claimed for his use material things. He had need of that property.

There is a great truth here, a truth that needs emphasis in this materialistic age. The Kingdom cannot come merely by material things. But it cannot come without material things. The Kingdom will not come until material things are placed at the disposal of the King, until his spirit governs the acquisition and the disposition of material things. In the building of the Kingdom, the King frankly admits that he needs that which we have. Our modern world has worked miracles in the art of producing things and in amassing wealth, but alas, it has not learned how to use these things in the service of the King and to the glory of God. Jesus not only needs what we have, he needs all that we have. And if we put at his disposal such as we have he will use it as a means of helping to bring in the Kingdom.

The King and the Church.

The first place that Jesus visited when he entered into Jerusalem was the temple. He went straight to the heart of the religious institutions of the people. And he cleansed it, driving out the money-changers and the sellers of merchandise, asserting that the Temple was primarily a place of prayer for all peoples, insisting upon its spiritual ministry.

If Jesus should come in person into our cities and villages today the first thing he would do would be to cleanse the church and to emphasize the spiritual. There is a worldliness, and materialism, and self-seeking, and compromising, and lethargy, and indifference, and sin in the church today. Christ is intolerant of everything that keeps his church from being a house of prayer for all people, a place of spiritual renewal.

The King and the Home.

In connection with his visit to Jerusalem, Christ also went into the home. He probably spent his nights in the home of Mary and Martha, and probably all of Wednesday, the day of silence so far as the record of the gospels are concerned. It is significant. Jesus can never come as King until he is enthroned in the home. Here is the strategic place in his kingdom. Jesus has done much for the home. One of the most striking differences between Christianity and other religions is the difference it makes in the home. One man for one woman, womanhood and childhood respected and their rights safeguarded, the spirit of Christian democracy, the home as the place where heaven itself is incarnated—these and other factors are the results of Christ's influence on the home. As Dean Brown says, "The choicest product of his beneficent rule in human affairs is to be found in the Christian home. Has Mohammedan Turkey or Hindoo India anything worthy to be set beside the Christian home where wife and children find their full honor and opportunity? Let the God who answers by such fair examples of his power as are to be found in the Christian home, be God!"

The King and the School.

Luke says that when he entered the city, "He was teaching daily, and all the people were very attentive to hear him." It was another way of saying that the King was also tremendously interested in the educational factors and forces of his people. And the King would have us understand that the primary function of the school is not merely to impart information as desirable and as necessary as it might be. "The high office of the school is the development, the enrichment, and the maturing of personality. The school which is fully aware of itself comes that men may have life and have it more abundantly. It is quite in line with his vast purpose that Jesus should enter the place where instruction was given and there assert the sovereignty of his own purpose and method."

PERTINENT POINTS.

1. Those who go and do as Jesus commands will find it as he says.
2. Jesus fulfilled all Scripture.
3. Jesus is King not by virtue of material or physical force, but by moral and spiritual constraint.
4. Crowds are fickle—the multitude that hailed Jesus on Sunday, cried "Crucify Him!" on Friday.
5. Jesus' presence in a city would stir the people.
6. The multitudes saw in Jesus only "the prophet of Nazareth."

"MY GOD; IN HIM WILL I TRUST."

(Psalm 91.)

We climbed the stairs of a large building that in more prosperous days had been used as a bakery, but was now forsaken and in a dilapidated state. A knock brought a quick response and we were joyfully welcomed by the two who occupied the rooms. The elder of the two women was a shut-in and for her sake we three had come to hold a prayer and praise service. She joined heartily in the service, adding her prayer and testimony of such victorious trust in God that we who had gone to help were blessed indeed.

One of our number had known the shut-in for many years; knew her when she was a busy and ambitious woman with such loving attention lavished upon her daughter, who was crippled yet able to hold a position. As the years went by the health of the mother gradually failed, but trustingly, though perhaps faintly, she said, "I'll trust my Lord, and never be afraid."

The disease ever getting a firmer grip upon her and making her more helpless, she learned to

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy

MONDAY.

THE SCHOOL OF HARD KNOCKS.

"Blessed is the man that endureth temptation; for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life."—Jas. 1:12.

The question was asked, "Will the cancelling of the air-mail contracts ruin aviation?" The answer was, "No, but what if it should, if we learn that we reap what we sow?"

The football player is given a hard training. In addition to the skill of the game, he must learn how to be hit by another body and avoid being hurt. He must learn how to fall and be able to get up again. He must accustom his body to receive blows without damage.

Paul said, "Let us run with patience the race that is set before us." So it is in withstanding temptation; it reacts to strengthen us against it. This is the secret of living.

There is an oriental story of a contest between two spirits—one from the upper world and one from the lower world. So long as the conflict was in the air the lower was easily mastered, but as soon as the upper touched the earth the lower gained the mastery.

Moral: We cannot well resist temptation on its own ground. It is on the higher level where we gain strength and where evil weakens. In hours of temptation to go astray, if the mind is occupied by better thoughts and purposes, temptation vanishes. If there are vivid apprehensions of God's presence we cannot readily yield. Sin is powerless. That is just why it is said, "Resist the devil and he will flee from you." Before one commits a wrong he must put aside God and descend to the level of the wrong.

Prayer—Our Father, forgive us of our weaknesses and sins, and bless us with thy Spirit and power all the way.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

FINDING GOD.

"Oh that I knew where I might find him, that I might come even to his seat."—Job 23:3.

"Seek and ye shall find... Knock and the door shall be opened unto you."—Matt. 7:7.

"Him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out."—Jno. 6:37.

"I am the way, the truth and the life, no man cometh unto the Father but by me."—Jno. 14:6.

Much is said about going to church and reading the Bible. This piety is urged with that importance as if it were the only way of finding God. We have listened to eloquent sermons on the subject of finding God, and we frankly admit that often we have been disappointed that we were not told how to find God—how, in that real and practical sense which makes it plain and possible in every-day living. Well, how?

Our Scripture today tells us how, but as plain Christ himself said, "Ye search the Scriptures, for to find God, it is doubtful that we shall find him. Christ himself said, "Ye search the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they which testify of me," as if to say, "I am the life, I am the way."

As much as the church is the bride of our Lord, the organization of the kingdom in this world, and as much as it is the expression of his children toward him, if in the church only we look for God, we doubt the finding of him.

We must find God in ourselves, in others, in life, and life's issues, wherein the claims of Godliness are manifest. "God is love," and we must find him in love. God is peace and harmony, and we find him there. God is justice and mercy, and we find him in these things. Where these spirits reign in every-day life there is God, and these spirits become real to us through their manifestation in others. My first impressions of God came through my mother's love and my father on his knees praying for his son. Such a picture, backed up by a godly life, is the strongest argument for God known to man.

Prayer—Our Father, we are glad that we are thine, and thine we would be. Make life, thy word, and thy church the great triple power of the kingdom to perfect our souls in thy likeness. In his name, we ask it.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE ACID TEST OF ACTION.

"Ye are our epistles written in our hearts, known and read of all men."—I. Cor. 3:2.

From a sermon we heard the other night on "How may I know when a thing is right? How may I know when a thing is wrong? How may I know when not to do something?" we glean the following suggestions:

There are three tests we can give to every question of right and wrong, and the answer will be practically infallible:

First. Apply the test of experience. That is, what does history or the experience of others, or my own experience say as to the way out?

Second. Apply the test of publicity. That is, would I be willing for this thing to be published in the newspapers, or known by anyone? Am I willing for my actions to be "known and read of all men?"

Third. Apply the test of universality. That is, would I be willing for anyone, yea, all the world to follow my example in this?

These are acid tests of actions in life, and to apply them honestly and conscientiously are compelled to impel us in the right, for God is found in them and speaks through them.

Prayer—Our Father in heaven, forgive us of our sins and grant unto us thy spirit for a closer walk with thee and a more careful attention to all conduct that all we may do may be pleasing in thy sight. This we ask for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE WORLD'S COVETED PEACE.

"Therefore, being justified by faith, we have peace with God."—Rom. 5:1.

"All thy children shall be taught of the Lord; and great shall be the peace of thy children."—Isa. 54:13.

"We have peace with God through Christ."—Rom. 5:1.

It is believed that everybody covets peace, happiness and contentment; though it is to be admitted that many have different ideas as to how to obtain it; and many seem indifferent to how much misery they produce in others by their own distorted ideas of peace.

Our texts today are a great promise. God is peace. The characteristics of the kingdom of God is peace; peace is the gift of God through Christ, and it is for all who believe and trust in him. "My peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you," said Christ. In the upper room Jesus said to the disciples, "Peace be with you," and they had peace. It came. It was in his manifested presence. It was his voice. By every sign they knew it was he, and they fell down and said, "My Lord and my God."

This peace comes to anyone in any question of life. We lie sleepless at night, worrying about things. But, why should we? "What a privilege to carry everything to God in prayer," and, when so doing, to have something say to us, "God will settle all that for you," and you say, "I will leave it to him." Immediately the load is lifted and you turn over and go to sleep.

There is no substitute for personal relations with Christ. "Oh, taste and see that the Lord is good." Only so will our life have banished out of it the bewilderment, the misgivings, the restlessness, which lie at the troubled heart of the half-religious; and have given it the rest, the peace and the satisfaction, of having done right and knowing that what God does is well.

Prayer—O Lord, our Lord, visit us with thy presence, and lend us thy voice alone. Be thou with us, for we need thy love to make us rejoice to live every day. Make thy presence so felt in us that we will not hide from thee when troubles come, but will follow freely thy chosen path for us. Melt our spirits with thine in everlasting peace.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

GOD'S JEWELS.

"He that trusteth in the Lord, mercy shall compass him about."—Psalm 32:10.

"And they shall be mine, saith the Lord, in that day when I make up my jewels."—Mal. 3:17.

The majesty of this Scripture strikes us with admiration. It is the force of God's claim upon us and his protection of us has its influence upon our hearts.

They who thus discover God are content in him for they find in him the path of happiness. In that path is an enrichment beyond utterance, and we never cease to feel in the words of the poet:

O that the world might taste and see
The riches of his grace!
The arms of love that compass me
Would all mankind embrace.

Prayer—Our Father, endow us with implicit trust in thee, and increase that faith more and more. Give unto us only those desires that make us useful to others, and when difficulties come show us how to ascend to the level of doing thy will, where we can know and act rightly, live the best life, and have no difficulty in faith.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE TRUE CHURCH.

"I was hungry, and ye did not give me to eat."
Read Matt. 25:41-46.

One of the difficult but necessary decisions that every Christian must make is the proper decision of his gifts between the expenses of his local church and Christian missions and charities. Beautiful and costly churches are ministers of grace, but they must not be allowed to prevent these great works of the church, care for Christ's needy at home and abroad.

The Methodist world service organizations, for example, have suffered during the past few years from sadly decreasing gifts, while during the same period local indebtedness to build new churches has increased two hundred and sixty per cent. We must have the new churches, we must have beautiful churches, but no faster than is parallel to our missionary, evangelistic, and charitable gifts.

The matter lies in the hands of the individual church members. As each of them decides,

THE BEGINNING OF THE GOSPEL.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"The beginning of the Gospel of Jesus Christ."—Mark 1:1.

For those who love Jesus it is quite thrilling to contemplate the beginning of his gospel. How like Mark to begin his record of that gospel with the one word "beginning." It sounds something like the opening words of Genesis: "In the beginning." It reminds us of the first words of Luke's "Acts of the Apostles": "... all that Jesus began to do and teach." Is it not a thrilling, beautiful word! Beginning! It is a word full of promise and prophecy. It reminds us of autumn and freshman days at college; of the thrilling first weeks and months when a new home is begun; or the first day of a great adventure; or the thoughts one thinks as he contemplates a day-old baby. Beginning! I held my little son in my arms and wondered what he would see if he lived three score years and ten—to 2000 A. D. Well, Mark is talking to us here of the "beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God."

He does not take time to argue who he is. He simply states that he is the Son of God. And he means to tell us here that when "I have finished this book I shall have only written of the beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God. For some time it is to be continued, somewhere else it is to be finished. I am recording the beginning."

According to Mark, it had a beginning in the prophets. Gospel goes back to God's own men, and the gospel goes forward through God's own men! "As it is written in the prophets." The prophets wrote its beginning before Bethlehem. God loved men, and gave them to have possession of his most valuable truths; he trusted men and made them but a little lower than angels—or, more correctly translated—than God. To clothe the gospel in light, and life, and love he ordained that his only begotten Son should partake of the form of man and dwell amongst us that we might behold his glory, the glory as of the only begotten Son of God. Therefore, Mark quotes from the prophecies of Malachi and Isaiah; and it is from the prophecy of Isaiah himself preaching once in Nazareth quoted, telling his hearers that that prophecy is now being fulfilled. It was to reveal himself to men, and to prepare the way for the Christ that the prophets were caused to prophecy, and Mark has here indicated the real purpose in the prophets, and their mission. It is a foreshadowing of how the gospel is to be continued, and sets forth the task of ministers and missionaries as they continue that which Jesus began to do and to teach.

Then Mark tells of the "beginning of the gospel" in the predecessor, John the Baptist. He is sent messenger before Jesus. He is not really a predecessor—he is a preparer of the way. "And John was clothed with camel's hair, and with a girdle of skin about his loins; and he did eat locust and wild honey." We might say, upon seeing him, "Not much of a man, after all!" Not much of a man as men see, but a mighty man as God sees—depending on men, neither for style or quality of clothes, nor for any kind nor character of food. Clothed with camel's hair, and fed like ravens, he could look to God alone for his sustenance, and to God alone for his sermons! No wonder the high and low, the near and far, the rich and poor flocked to the Jordan to hear John.

"And there went out unto him all the land of Judea, and they of Jerusalem, and were baptized of him in the River Jordan, confessing their sins." The poor, ignorant country folk throughout Judea, deprived of education and proper food, came; and the city came too, with its sophistication and sin, its wisdom and want, its hope and its hunger. The city, with its education and culture, felt something calling it back—straight back to God, to the days of innocent childhood, to the depths of the sweetness of purity which had been learned in childhood from the psalter of the sweet singer of Israel. What a procession of hearers there was! What an elevation of the lowly! What an humbling of the mighty—a preparing of the way for Jesus to march across the human hearts of Palestine, and into the world-wide hope of humanity itself! John, amenable to God, preached for God—a voice in the wilderness. And what is most significant they did not turn from John, but into the Jordan! "And were all baptized of him in the River of Jordan, confessing their sins."

The beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ in prophets, in predecessor, and finally in program. The preacher and program is set forth in a single sentence: "John did baptize in the wilderness, and preach the baptism of repentance, for the remission of sins." In other words, just what John did now, Jesus would later tell his disciples to do. It was the beginning of the gospel in its program. It was preaching, repenting, being forgiven, and being baptized. It was a fourfold program. And which fold of it may we submit to the scissors today? Can any of it be left out, or cut off?

Will the church cut out preaching? "It pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe." "For the preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness; but unto us which are saved it is the power of God." "Go ye," says Jesus, "and preach the gospel to every creature." In John's preaching there was something to look forward to—Jesus! There was something that Jesus would require—repentance.

There is the second point in the program—repentance! How we as individuals need it today! It was Jesus first sermon. And how he hurled it at the self-righteous Pharisees of his day! But he did not preach it to Pharisees only; oh, no! But to all he preached it. To the common, straying one like many of us, and to the "righteous, who need no repentance," alike he preached—"except ye all repent . . .!" There is apparently a need today for a great turning from sin (let the sophisticated call it what they will) and a corresponding great turning to God. A change of mind. That changes the heart in all its affections, and the hand in all its works.

The third point in the "beginning of the gospel" program brings us to the cross itself. "For the remission of sins" is the very essence of the setting forth of the love and mercy of God in Christ Jesus upon the Cross of Calvary. We do not have to defend this point's place in the program—the theories about it may be different—for all of us wish the mercies of God exercised toward us. All of us wish to be forgiven for not being our best selves always. All of us wish love—the unbounded love of God as set forth in Jesus!

In the hour of trial, Jesus plead for me,
Lest by base denial I depart from thee;

When thou seest me waver, with a look recall,
Nor fear or favor suffer me to fall.

The fourth point of the "beginning of the gospel" program played a first place in John's activities. It is commanded by Jesus. Will we disobey Jesus who walked about ninety miles for the express purpose of being baptized by neglecting that ordinance? John says in effect: I baptize with material water; Jesus will baptize with the spiritual; my baptism is confined to place and physical conditions. His baptism will not be confined to place and will be in spiritual conditions. The baptism of Jesus will follow faith and repentance. It may be found at God's altar in the church, or on battlefields where wounds of war are taking life away, or on a ship-wreck at sea where hunger and thirst take their toll, or on beds of pain, or in marts of success, in Palestine or Puerto Rico, in Europe or Africa, in America (Continued on page 15.)

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

Sometime ago our good and loyal friend, Mr. J. M. Darden, sent us enough paint to repaint our dairy barn and milk house. For the last week we have been putting it on. It looks so new and pretty, when you pay us a visit, you will think we have a bran new barn. A new coat of paint on a building always helps its looks. We certainly are grateful to Mr. Darden for helping us meet a real need. Our income has been so small that we did not have the money to spare, but we had plenty of help to put it on. We got a good job and we feel happy to see our dairy barn all dressed up in its new coat of paint.

The weather has cleared up and farming is the order of the day. The mules and the tractors are turning land for corn and beans. This season of the year is always a busy season till the crops are all planted. The time of the boys is well taken up when they are not in school. Don't think for a minute that the Orphanage is a place of east and rest. It is not. It is a place of activity. We cultivate a large farm. We milk 30 cows. Think what an amount of work it takes to milk and feed 30 cows twice each day. All this work is done with our boys with the help of Mr. Wagner, my assistant.

We are trying to do all we can to assist in carrying on the work and meeting the many needs by producing all we can here. We have so many calls to take little children who ought to come here, or go to some other institution of like kind, that it almost breaks our heart to say "No" to them because the Sunday Schools and churches have not sent in enough funds to meet the expenses this year.

If our church folks could come in touch with the need as I do from week to week, I feel sure offerings would increase, your hearts would be touched as never before, and you would want to lend a helping hand.

Our financial report shows that we have passed the fifth rung in our financial ladder. Let every one push and help us reach the next one quickly.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

But finally other troubles came as the daughter lost her position and soon it was impossible to get the necessities of life, only as they asked for aid. The cherished earthly possessions were only a memory and they moved into this deserted building, the only occupants most of the time, and almost entirely dependent upon others for the necessities of life. Yet they have both learned the lesson of trust, and can say:

Ancient cavemen stood at narrow entrances to caves and as bears rushed out, they cracked them on the nose with heavy clubs. The bears thus stunned were easily killed. Bones recently discovered gave the clue to the old pastime.

GETTING EVEN.

"Vengeance is mine, and recompense."—Read Deut. 32:35-43.

A section hand in Oklahoma was discharged, and in order to "get even" with his foreman he threw a switch which wrecked a passenger train, thinking that the disaster would be laid to his former boss, who would be discharged in his turn. Thirteen persons died in horrible agony, being scalded with escaped steam. Undoubtedly the section hand will be convicted of murder.

Vengeance is of God. If we feel ourselves to be wronged, we can with confidence leave our case in the hands of the infinite Judge. No man is skillful enough to take revenge on a foe—no nation of men, either, for that matter.

Christ's prayer for those who were nailing him to the cruel cross must be made our prayer. Forgiveness, and that alone, heaps coals of fire on the heads of those who have wronged us.

Prayer—May we never, our Father, seek to lay hold of any of thy prerogatives. Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right?—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION—FOR WHAT? FOR WHOM?

tions of other nations. Let Advance present the facts, opposing points of view, criteria for judgment, its own vigorous conviction and possible programs for Christiana naction with reference to the "hot spots" of our life today. Are there hundreds of pastors and leaders of young people who will make such materials the basis of study and intelligent action—action by the whole church, old and young? But let it be realized that such action, upon the Tugwell Bill or the Child Labor Amendment, can hardly be intelligent if it be taken after a fifteen-minute discussion of a thousand words of prophetic enthusiasm. The educational process demands more than that.

What, then, shall religious education contribute to the church's program of Christian action? It must awaken us to an awareness of the crucial issues of our time—local, national, international. It must acquaint us with sure facts and with honestly divergent points of view. It must bring to bear, upon these issues, the attitudes of Jesus and must challenge us to experiment with his proposals. It must use and develop leaders who have a prophetic sense of justice and who also possess love and sympathy and the spirit of forgiveness. It must provide a means of self-expression and self-discipline so that we may be Christlike in success or defeat. It must help us to discover how to make an effective protes against injustice and ho wto make effective a strategy for social reconstruction.

It cannot be expected that all Christians will agree upon the details of any social program. No social creed will satisfy the total membership of our churches any more than one theological statement will express our deepest faith. But the motives and purposes and attitudes with which all Christians should proceed should be clear. And upon many courses of action we can unite.

Within the church there may develop fellowships of disciples committed to principles and programs for peace, for economic reconstruction, for community service. The church itself should thus become a demonstration of how many persons of many minds may continue in a process of continuous growth while they work by different methods to achieve the central aims to which all are committed.—Advance.

There is a difference between fault-finding and honest criticism. It is often necessary to criticise in order to rescue the truth from error, and for the purpose of improvement. But fault-finding is usually a habit that increases as people grow older. There is nothing more disagreeable than to have our lot cast among those who have become fault-finders.—Selected.

or the isles of the sea. Compared to his baptism mine is little, John would say; and compared to him I am but a mere signboard signalling the way—a mere voice in the wilderness.

Yes, it is only the "beginning of the gospel" found in that old Book—even to the cross, it is only the beginning. You and I are in the continuing. You and I shall find our cross, too; and please God, take it up daily and follow him for the continuing of the gospel of Jesus Christ, Son of God!

The dusty road is far more likely to be trodden by angel feet than remote summits of the mountains where we sometimes fain would go.—Ex.

OBITUARIES

SMITH.

Mrs. Julia Ann (Collier) Smith was born May 9, 1859, and died March 21, 1934, age 74 years, 10 months, 12 days. She was united, in marriage to Mr. George S. Smith, and to this union were born seven children: Mr. Alson C. Smith, Burlington; Mrs. Fannie E. Sykes, Haw River; Miss Martha J. Smith, deceased; Miss Pearl Smith, Haw River; Mrs. T. S. Purcell, East Durham; Mr. Eugene Smith, Burlington; Mr. Herbert Smith, Haw River. One half-sister, Mrs. Brandenbury, Burlington, 17 grandchildren, 2 great-grandchildren survive her.

Many years ago, she was left a widow with all her children small. She held them together and raised them to young womanhood and young manhood. Great has been her faith in her Lord and Master, as well as in her church, neighbors and friends.

Early in life she professed faith in Christ and united with Providence Memorial Christian Church, Graham. When the church in Haw River was organized, she transferred her membership, becoming a charter member, in which church she remained a faithful and devout member until death. A good mother and neighbor has gone home.

Burial services were conducted in the Methodist Protestant Church, Haw River, N. C., by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. Edward Neese. Interment was in the church cemetery. May God bless and comfort the bereaved.

G. C. CRUTCHFIELD.

KECK.

Mr. George Thomas Keck was born October 3, 1872, and died March 27, 1934, age 61 years, 5 months and 24 days. He was a life-long resident of Alamance County. August 26, 1895, he was married to Miss Helen Burch, and to this union three children were born, as follows: Mrs. R. C. Kernodle, Altamahaw; Mr. J. B. Keck, Burlington; Miss Polly Keck, of home; three grandchildren; one sister, Mrs. C. M. McRay, Altamahaw, all of whom, with his wife, survive. Early in life, Brother Keck professed faith in Christ and united with Bethlehem Christian Church, to which he remained a faithful member until death called him home.

He was devoted to his home, wife and children, always manifesting a deep interest in his community as well as his church affairs. His last words were that he was ready and willing to go.

Burial services were conducted from Bethlehem Christian Church by the writer, assisted by Brother Abernathy of the M. P. Church. Interment in the church cemetery.

May God bless the sorrowing family.
 G. C. CRUTCHFIELD.

TILLITSON.

Hamlin Mayze Tillitson, son of Rufus and Pattie Tillitson, was born in Mecklenburg Co., Va., in the year 1871, and died at his home near Clarksville, Va., February 28, 1934, age 63 years, 4 months and 2 days. When a young man he married Miss Puryear, of Mecklenburg Co., by whom he is survived together with nine children and four grandchildren. There are also two brothers and three sisters, as follows: Mr. Lee Tillitson, of Buffalo Junction; Mr. Ollie Tillitson, of New York; Mrs. R. C. Overby, of Buffalo Junction; Mrs. J. F. Puryear, of Virgilina, and Mrs. F. C. Person, of Oxford, N. C.

Brother Tillitson was a good neighbor and a kind and sympathetic husband and father. In early life he united with the Hebron Christian Church, where he remained a member until his death.

The funeral was held from the home on the afternoon of March 1st, and the burial was in the family cemetery of the Tillitson home. The writer and Rev. Mr. Lee of the Baptist Church conducted the services. Brother Tillitson suffered long and intensely. His faith grew stronger and he left a testimony that all was well for the future.

C. E. NEWMAN.

BARBER.

William A. Barber was born July 29, 1869, and departed this life February 15, 1934, age 64 years, 6 months and 16 days. He had been an invalid for many years. He leaves to mourn his going his wife and seven children, three brothers and three sisters, with a large number of friends.

He had been a member of Bethlehem Christian Church for many years. The burial services were conducted from the church by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. P. Pegg, of the M. P. Church. May God comfort all these loved ones.

A "No More War" Parade.—

On Saturday, May 19th, there is planned for New York City a mammoth "No More War" parade, under the sponsorship of church federations and peace organizations of that city. An invitation has been issued to all Protestant and Catholic Churches and to Jewish synagogues to participate. Delegations from the high schools and various colleges throughout Greater New York are also expected. Banners, floats, posters and slogans against war will be featured in the parade.

Sweden at War.—

An exchange tells us that "Sweden has opened war on the drunken driver." According to a recent issue of Motorforaren, a motor magazine published there, 6,933 drivers' licenses out of 8,546 that have been revoked in the past few months, were revoked because of insobriety. Persons repeatedly arrested for drunkenness have had their licenses taken from them even if they were never found drunk at the steering wheel. This action was taken because of the fact that one under the influence of alcohol could not be trusted to keep out of his car while in such condition.

Another Christ of the Andes.—

Another Christ of the Andes is being erected on the mountain border between Chile and Peru. It will commemorate the end of a 50-year-old dissension between the two countries which began with the War of the Pacific in 1879 and ended with an arbitration in which the United States had an important part in 1929. No official announcement has been made as to what inscription the statue will bear, but it will probably express a sentiment similar to the one on the original Christ of the Andes. This statue was erected in 1904 to mark the settlement of a boundary dispute between Chile and Argentina, which had lasted 55 years. It is a bronze statue 26 feet high and stands on a granite pillar.—The Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

The Jewish Passover.—

In the Boston Evening Transcript is a brief account of the Jewish Passover Feast, which began on the 30th of March, in which an unbiblical cause is advanced for its origin. The celebration of the feast began at sundown on Friday. It was begun with an elaborate dinner, "unsurpassed by beauty of symbolism, known in Hebrew as the 'Seder.'" The Reform Jews celebrate for seven days, the Orthodox for eight days. The writer of the paragraphs makes the statement that the Passover has a twofold background. First, "it dates back to the time when the ancestors of the Jewish people dwelt in Palestine and occupied themselves primarily with agriculture. To them the advent of spring marked the most joyous period of the year. Then was the harvest reaped, and its first fruits were brought into Jerusalem and offered at the temple with great joy and singing. Hence, Passover was instituted as a nature festival to celebrate the arrival of spring." Second, this agricultural background of Passover was almost entirely lost as time passed away. "Then there came the emphasis that Passover marked the deliverance from Egypt—an episode in Jewish history of tremendous influence." This is modern church news.—Christian-Evangelist.

MOTHER.

By D. L. BYRON.

*Mother, you were like a rose that leaned
In May against my garden wall,
So graceful there, so gay, and tall,
A bit of fire in the stones it seemed.
Like that impatient bud, I can't forget,
You waited life so eagerly . . .
Then in its place again I see,
A sweeter rose, full-blown, majestically.*

*But the tender petals dropping one by one
Were scattered by the wind, until
Each darkened spot they tried to fill
With brightness, like the deeds you had done.
A faint and wistful fragrance lingers yet
Beside my garden wall in May—
I feel its beauty there today—
Your life, a burning rose against the gray.*

Pomona, Fla.

Farm Population Reaches New High.—

Notwithstanding the fact that more people left farms for the cities than left the cities to go to the farms, our farm population reached its high-water mark in 1933. The increase is attributed to the excess of births over deaths in agricultural areas during the year. The number of persons moving from farms to cities, towns and villages last year numbered 1,175,000, while those going from cities, towns and villages to the farm were 950,000. The curtailment of crop production which has been undertaken to reduce "surplus" will probably greatly increase the number of people migrating city-ward in an effort to find something to do, and will proportionately increase the hardships that have been suffered during the past few winters during the next. There are economic laws—laws of nature—God's laws—that are immutable, and man's puny efforts to change them would be laughable were not the consequences so serious.

Ministers and Current Affairs.—

The results of a recent questionnaire sent out by The World Tomorrow to 100,000 ministers are quite interesting, though not conclusive, because of the fact that they were answered by only about 20% of these ministers. They show, however, quite a trend in thought toward the idealistic on the part of those who did answer. The fifteen questions, in abbreviated form, together with the affirmative and negative votes are given below: 1. Do you favor immediate entrance into the League of Nations? Yes, 10,101; no, 5,987. 2. Do you favor military training in high schools, colleges and universities? Yes, 2,579; no, 17,023. 3. Do you favor reduction in armament, even though the United States is compelled to make a greater reduction than other nations are yet willing to do? Yes, 15,985; no, 3,260. 5. Do you believe the churches of America should refuse to sanction or support war? Yes, 13,997; no, 4,638. 6. Do you personally refuse to sanction war or serve as an armed combatant? Yes, 12,904; no, 5,208. 7. Could you conscientiously serve as an army chaplain on active duty in time of war? yes, 8,534; no, 8,014. 8. Do you regard the distinction between "defensive" and "aggressive" war as sufficiently valid to justify your participation in a war of "defense"? Yes, 7,517; no, 8,014. 9. Do you favor drastic limitation of wealth through inheritance tax? Yes, 16,557; no, 1,754. 10. Through income tax and tax exempt sources of income? Yes, 15,780; no, 1,847. 11. Do you favor national unions as opposed to company unions? Yes, 11,304; no, 2,567. 12. Do you favor compulsory unemployment insurance? Yes, 13,218; no, 2,617. 13. Do you favor private ownership of banks (the present system) or a socialized government system? Present system, 7,200; socialized, 6,974. 14. What economic system appears to you as less antagonistic to and more consistent with the ideals and methods of Jesus, the capitalistic system of the United States prior to 1929, or "a co-operative commonwealth," socialism? Capitalistic, 1,035; socialistic, 18,324. Of the latter number, 10,691 wished to preserve the "good points" of capitalism, while 5,879 would have it thrown overboard entirely; 1,695 had still other schemes. It is quite probable that the proportions would have been quite considerably changed if the entire group had answered the questionnaire. It is generally a fact that those dissatisfied with the status quo, are more apt to answer such a questionnaire, while those who are in alignment with things as they have been are likely to neglect answering.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

An event of the Convention that brought applause was the petition of the Conferences of the Congregational Churches of the Carolinas that they be admitted to membership in the Southern Convention on the same basis as Christian Conferences heretofore constituting the Convention.

Mr. and Mrs. M. J. W. White, 237 W. 31st St., Norfolk, Va., make the following request: "We would like to drive to Oberlin College for the General Council meeting, June 21st-27th. We will divide expenses and would like to take in the Chicago Fair for a few days. Our baggage will be small and light."

Pleasant Cross Church, Randolph County, N. C., was dedicated Sunday, May 6th, with a large and happy audience taking part. It is a beautiful brick structure, such as few rural communities have. Rev. D. R. Moffitt is the happy pastor. The Mission Secretary preached the dedicatory sermon and he was assisted in the services by Revs. Jas. L. Foster, W. N. Hayes, the pastor, and Dr. E. L. Moffitt. Brother Foster preached in the afternoon at the memorial services. It was indeed a happy and glorious day.

The Elon Summer School of Leadership Training covers the date, July 23rd-29th, the opening hour being 2 P. M., Monday, July 23rd. Board and registration for the week cost only $7.50, the College furnishing the rooms free. Rev. F. C. Lester, dean of the school, says: "The Elon Summer School of Leadership Training is intended to help you prepare to do your best for Christ and the church. Those who attend are inspired to do better service. Ask them or watch them in your church. Best of all, join them at Elon this summer."

Rev. J. H. Dollar, LaGrange, Ga., and Rev. F. P. Ensminger, D. D., of Alabama, were the only representatives coming from our Conferences in the far South to the Convention at Suffolk, Brother Dollar bringing the request from both the Alabama and the Georgia and Alabama Conferences that they be allowed to withdraw from the Convention, having already organized State Conferences in the two States and formulated petition to the General Council to become members of the Council directly through their State organizations.

Mrs. J. A. Williams, Franklin, Va., who has wrought so wisely and so well as president of the Woman's Board of our Southern Convention for the past ten years, declined to be re-elected as president, and Mrs. W. R. Sellars, Burlington, N. C., was elected president. Too much cannot be said in commendation of the splendid work done by Mrs. Williams and the unselfish and devoted energy and enthusiasm combined with wise leadership that she has given to the work while she was president. There was much regret that she felt she must retire from this important place.

Rev. G. H. Veazey, under date, Wadley, Ala., May 1st, writes: "We had a very fine meeting at Pisgah (Ala), Saturday P. M., and Sunday, April, 28th-29th. The prospects are very bright for our church at Pisgah. Every address during the meeting was well prepared and given effectively. Wish you could have been there to help us enjoy the splendid program and fine hospitality. Rev. John Taylor preached Saturday night, Dr. F. P. Ensminger, Sunday morning and I Sunday night. The weather was disagreeable, but we had fine audiences just the same. Deeply regret I could not attend our Convention at Suffolk. Trust much and lasting good was accomplished."

Rev. J. Howard Smith, one of our splendid Elon graduates, who, while a student at Elon, served some rural churches successfully, writes under date of 409 Prospect Street, Yale University, New Haven, Conn., April 28, 1934: "These have been glorious years at Yale, and I shall hate very much to leave the splendid opportunities of this great university. At the close of the present academic term (in June), I will be ready to accept work as pastor and become permanently located in the fall." The church or pastorate that secures his services will certainly be fortunate, and we trust that one of the good churches of our Southeast fellowship will secure him as pastor. He is a native of our Newport News Church.

SPIRITUALITY IN THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

We often talk of spirituality and spiritual things when perhaps we may be thinking of sentimentalism or of emotionalism or perhaps of enthusiasm. Now I believe that all of these are necessary in the Sunday School. All are evident in any good school. Yet this is not spirituality. For these are all evident in a good ball game or political campaign. And I hardly believe anyone would claim that there is very much spirituality in either of these.

So I am left wondering about what the program committee had in mind for me to say on this subject—what they really wanted me to say. Perhaps they have known some Sunday School that had drifted into formalism. A Sunday School where its members met Sunday after Sunday, sang the same songs, uttered the same prayers and went through with the same formal program each Sunday. A Sunday School that had lost all spirituality, a Sunday School that was a machine which failed to grind out anything except a little social contact. And while they thought of this, perhaps they thought of the great need of spirituality in the Sunday School, and maybe it was this need that was in their minds when they gave this subject.

Were I discussing it from the standpoint of needs I would say, yes, one of the great, if not the very greatest, need of our Sunday Schools, or especially the one I am best acquainted with, is a deeper spirituality. We doubtless need in our Sunday Schools better equipment, better arrangements, and better facilities to teach with. Maybe we need better officers and better teachers. We need a larger attendance. Our needs are many, but our greatest need—the one from which we are suffering most—is our need for greater spirituality.

Were I asked for some remedy for this great disease that is preying upon society, a disease that is gnawing at the very vitals of our moral and religious life, a disease that has the thinkers of our nation alarmed and even filled with fear, I might give many remedies, but my chief—my outstanding remedy—would be a deeper, a greater spirituality in the lives of our people and especially in our Sunday Schools. M. H. M.

Diogenes, famed for centuries as the searcher after truth, has come down to our generation under the shadow of a lie, modern researchers declare. He never lived in a tub at all. The allusion was made by a biographer, who remarked that a man so crabbed "ought to live in a tub, like a dog."

MY IMPRESSION OF THE CONVENTION.

In order to have a successful Convention, there must be at least four elements, viz., people, place, purpose and plan. These were all realized at our Convention held, last week, at Suffolk, Va.

There was present a fine delegation of capable, anxious, interested representatives at the Suffolk Christian Church, in a beautiful, all-inclusive, comfortable, commodious house of worship, in which to hold the sessions, with a purpose to unify and co-ordinate ways and means to solidify, hold and strengthen our agreed upon plan of union and looking to an educational, financial and evangelizing effort of our brotherhood and its constituency, and also to project a plan to save our physical plant at Elon College, N. C.

The one thing that impressed me most was the consummation of the merger of the Congregational and Christian Churches into a practically organic whole with the wonderful spirit of unity pervading, sweeping the Convention into a considered and hoped-for plan of union of the two branches of the church into a mutually sought-for and desired united fellowship.

This was wonderful, and it produced an experience much enjoyed.

Out of this Convention and produced by it, I trust and believe will flow a continued, mutual benefit and glorious results for all concerned.

Unity of spirit, unity of love, unity of people, purposes and plans will bring greater success to our united interests and the glory of God.

J. WEBSTER PATTON.

GLAD IT WAS IN SUFFOLK.

We are very happy here in Suffolk that this session of the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches met with us. It gave us the privilege of serving in a way which rejoices our hearts. And besides, the Convention in its recent session took some definite, forward steps. It did not go too rapidly, but cautiously and sanely. It did not break down the fine work of the fathers, but rather strengthened that work, and added thereto. It did not promise under the spell of inspiration that which it could not perform in the work-a-day program of tomorrow.

It seems to me that it had a proper setting for a great session, and lived up to all expectations. The president presided well, indeed; the program was well planned; debate was provocative, but kindly and courteous; and the inspirational addresses were more than inspirational, they sent us out to seek a solution of vexing social and spiritual problems. A true sense of real fellowship was enjoyed by everyone present without any sham of bowing here or bending there. It was a really constructive fellowship, and we all felt it. Whatever part the Suffolk Church played in providing for the Convention's comfort was a source of genuine pleasure. JOHN G. TRUITT.

J. EDWIN HARRIS.

THE NEW INDIVIDUALISM.

By TIMOTHY THOMAS.

This country was discovered and its progress made possible by individual effort. It was the spirit of the individual—rugged individualism—that blazed the trails, explored and cleared the forests, built the first huts, and set the machinery in motion for present-day civilization. It was this pioneer spirit that made this country what it is and also won victory for her in every struggle for right and freedom. Individualism was a natural outgrowth of our progress as a nation, but when individualism ceased to be rugged and pioneering and became plain selfishness and greed it developed a self poison that inflicted its own death. Individualism has passed because it ceased to serve.

No group of men, regardless of the degree of intelligence it represents, can accomplish anything worthwhile without a leader. Individualism is the very essence of good leadership, if that individualism recognizes the success and happiness of others. The one crying need of the nation today is for men who can and who will become unselfish leaders of great groups who have lost faith in their present leaders because their individualism has become selfish.

Mass action is necessary for any worthwhile achievement, but behind mass action there must be some outstanding leader in whom the people have confidence. Battles have been won because of the leadership of a great general. A nation, regardless of its achievements intellectually or otherwise, must have a leader and his leadership is rated by his unselfish individualism.

It is only a type of individualism that has destroyed itself. There is being developed a new type of individualism, a new type of leadership, to meet the new conditions of the new era. The new individualism, giving expression through a new leadership, must render a new service, a service that is unselfish. The kindling spirit to bring about this new individualism is in the hearts of millions. Man can no longer live to himself. His success depends upon his cooperation and willingness that others shall succeed.

The old individualism looked inward; the new individualism must look outward. The new individualism must think in terms of the masses. It must recognize that the success and happiness of others is pertinent to the success and happiness of self.

The cherished hope of our national leaders for a new day through a new deal is based on a confidence in a new individualism. Every cause, if that cause is to succeed, must have a champion and that champion must be a leader whose motive is to espouse the cause he represents, and not to use his position for personal gain or self glory.

The money motive is one of the driving forces that keep men in business; it is one of the enchantments that keep men working and risking. The new individualism must keep a proper balance so that the motive in business will not be totally eclipsed by the dollar sign. The new individualism must see that business is not merely a money game, but a vocation in which men shall freely share their experiences, their responsibilities, and unite their efforts for a common good. The profit motive must be subordinated to the motive of creative and cooperative living.

The new individualism must find a new social service. It must make a practical application of the principles of Christianity as they apply to the social well-being of all humanity. The new individualism must provide a social planning and control in the economic process. It must seek a wider and fairer distribution of wealth as well as seek to establish a living wage, safeguard workers against harmful conditions, against unemployment, and unnecessary sickness.

The various units set up by our National Government to provide financial aid to industries, to the farmer, and to the destitute, will win the approbation of history only in proportion to the application of the principles of helpful cooperation administered by men who have the interests of others at heart and who refuse to profit financially by their own positions and places of trust.

The plan and purpose of the National Recovery Act that men work and profit through a program of cooperation will succeed only to the extent that we develop this new individualism. This new individualism must come to a full fruition if we are to have a more contented people and a more prosperous era. In this we must not fail!

Nehemiah said to his enemies: "I am doing a great work, so that I cannot come down to you; why should the work cease whilst I leave it, and come down to you?" (Nehemiah 6:3.) The reason that Nehemiah could not leave and forsake his work was because it was too great. "Am doing a great work." The position of being a child of God is too great, so, that the true child of God does not want to throw it down for the wages of sin, although there is a so-called good time in sin. Those who are seeking the joy of sin are losing the true riches of God. There is no real pleasure outside of Jesus Christ. He promised before going away that, "I will not leave you comfortless, but I will come unto you." (John 14:18.) "There is joy in his presence and there are pleasures at his right hand forevermore." Why forsake real, ever-abiding, eternal joy, for a few moments of that joy that will, at last, bite like an adder, and sting like a serpent? I cannot. Nehemiah could not. Readers, can you? If you follow after sin, you will reap accordingly.—J. C. Griffin, in the Free Will Baptist.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF OUR CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE CONVENTION.

The Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches met in its 31st regular biennial session, with the Suffolk Christian Church, Rev. John G. Truitt, pastor, May 1st-4th, with about 250 ministers, lay-delegates and visitors present. At 3 P. M., Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, D. D., Durham, N. C., president, called the Convention to order and Rev. J. F. Morgan conducted an appropriate song service, devotionals being led by Dr. C. H. Rowland.

Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, D. D., president of the Convention, delivered the principal address of the afternoon on "The Challenge of Difficult Tasks." Dr. Harrell declared that while the income of individuals has been cut on an average of 54 per cent, during these days of depression, the income of the church has not suffered more than a 40 per cent cut. "During this period of difficulty," he said, "the membership in all Protestant Churches has increased one and a quarter millions."

He said that while the church had been able to preserve a higher average of gifts, her people have not had the faith and vision to plan for "National Church Recovery," with the same enthusiasm that political parties and governmental agencies have planned for a national business recovery.

The Convention then completed its organization by the appointment of special committees:

Dr. W. C. Wicker, treasurer of the Convention, made his report.

A banquet sponsored by the Suffolk Missionary Society, was served to the Convention members and guests in Fellowship Hall at 6:30 P. M. This was very largely attended and was a most happy occasion.

At 8 o'clock, Rev. John G. Truitt, pastor, conducted the devotionals and the Convention sermon was delivered by Dr. N. G. Newman, following which the Communion Service was conducted by Rev. Jas. H. Lightbourne, D. D., Burlington, N. C.

The second day of the Convention was eventful, its program being freighted with outstanding events of the session. After the devotionals, led by Rev. R. A. Whitten, the session properly began with an exceedingly important historic paper by the exceeding Historian, Mr. W. E. MacClenny.

In his sketch of the Christian Church, the Historian called attention to many of the great deeds of the Christian Church, since its organization around 140 years ago. He alluded to the division in the ranks in 1810, stating that prior to 1810 the Christian Church was well established in Central Virginia and as far south as Georgia, as the files of The Herald of Gospel Liberty will show. He told of the general meeting of Christians held in 1810 in Pine State Church in Orange County, when the division arose over baptism and other matters, during which time many Christians joined the Disciples' Church.

"THE CHRISTIAN SUN," Mr. MacClenny said, "was founded in 1844, and was published by the Rev. Daniel W. Kerr, at Hillsboro, N. C.; and in 1847, the Southern Christian Association, organized at Good Hope Christian Church, Granville County, N. C. The union of the Northern and Southern Christian Church in 1850 was short-lived, for the treatment at the next Convention held in Ohio, of the Southern representatives, was such that the Rev. W. B. Wellons and his associates withdrew, and in 1856, in Alamance County, N. C., organized the Southern General Convention." Mr. MacClenny traced the desolation wrought by the War Between the States, and said that most of the churches were so badly damaged or totally destroyed, that for a time it looked as if all were lost. In 1866, however, 14 faithful men met in session at Mt. Auburn, Warren County, N. C., and the Southern Christian Convention was organized and has met regularly since. Mr. MacClenny declared that the time had come when the Christians in the South should organize a society for the preservation of church history, one in which all members of the denomination may take pride.

In his report of the Mission Board, Col. J. E. West said that from 1932 to 1934, the sum of $32,275.57 had been raised for missions, and that of this amount, the sum of $12,545.21 has been spent for home mission churches and points. The apportionments for the coming year include aid for the churches at Ocean View, Winston-Salem, Raleigh, Bennett, South Norfolk, of which $7,750 has been paid. Pledges are due to churches in Newport News, Rosemont, Cypress Chapel. Col. West stated that there are now 622 missionaries of the Congregational-Christian faith on the foreign field; 6,520 native workers, 740 native churches; 102,769 members; 1,253 schools for all grades; 90,402 students; the natives, he stated, have contributed to all purposes for church work, the sum of $592,735. Missions, he said, are being carried on by the church in India, Turkey, Philippines, Bulgaria, Ceylon, Balkan States, Spain and Puerto Rico. He also told of the mountain work, and spoke of the Sunday School missions and women's missions. In discussing the report later, Col. West said, "Unless in this merger of the two churches, we do not do a much greater work, make greater sacrifices, broaden our scope, we will not greatly impress Protestantism with the importance of this union." Dr. J. O. Atkinson spoke to the report, his topic being, "An Adequate Missionary Dynamic." Dr. W. P. Minton, Dayton, Ohio, in his address on "Our World-Wide Missionary Program," declared that the church is an "adventure with God." He stated that the church in this great adventure has these duties: Evangelism, Christian education, healing, such as medical mission, clinics, etc., social reconstruction, Christian cooperation. He stressed the power of a united Protestantism, and pointed to the mission fields where various denominations are working together.

Mrs. J. A. Williams gave the report of the Woman's Mission Board, and of the Woman's Convention, which was held in the Suffolk Church on Tuesday.

"In the afternoon, C. D. Johnston, superintendent of the Christian Orphanage, gave a report of the work of this institution which has 90 children, and is teaching the girls housework, sewing, etc., and the boys farming, trucking, poultry and hog raising, and giving to all a high school education. An appeal for the Orphanage was made by Dr. L. E. Smith.

Rev. F. C. Lester spoke on "The Challenge of Comradeship," declaring that this union of the churches is a new experience, and calls for spirituality, comradeship, and a development of all the finer characteristics of brotherliness.

Rev. Perceval Huget, D. D., of Brooklyn, N. Y., of the Congregational Church, spoke at the evening service on "If Any Man Have Not the Spirit of Christ, He is None of His." Dr. Huget emphasized brotherliness, which leads to service; service to sacrifice; all of which rolled into one, is love. He urged that for any churches or co-ordinated churches to march forward, the people must be imbued with the love of God and the love of man.

Col. John B. Pinner, of Suffolk, Va., appearing before the Convention, told of the desire of the citizens of that city to raise a memorial to the late Rev. Dr. W. W. Staley, and was assured of the support of the Convention.

The third day of the Convention was given to the election of officers, the consideration of the report on temperance and an outstanding event of the session—the report of the Committee on Finance, Col. E. E. Holland, chairman; and in the afternoon, the report of the Board of Education, by President L. E. Smith, the day being climaxed with the evening session when two great addresses were brought to the Convention—one by Dr. Erwin L. Shaver, Waltham, Mass., under the title of "Leadership for the New Day," the other by Dr. H. Shelton Smith, of Duke University, the subject being, "Perils of Unlearned Lessons."

The following were elected as officers for the next two years:

Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, D. D., of Durham, N. C., was unanimously re-elected president of the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches. Dr. C. H. Rowland, of Greensboro, N. C., and Rev. John Chapman, were elected vice-presidents; Dr. I. W. Johnson, re-elected secretary, with the following assistants: Mrs. Mary Rollings and George W. Edwards. Dr. W. C. Wicker was re-elected treasurer.

On the Convention Board of Christian Education, the following were named: Rev. F. C. Lester, Mrs. C. H. Rowland, Rev. R. L. House, Miss Priscilla Chase, C. H. Stephenson, Rev. J. F. Morgan, W. H. Baker, Rev. John Chapman and George W. Edwards.

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., was re-elected mission secretary. On the Mission Board were named: Col. J. E. West, Mrs. W. R. Sellars, Rev. A. W. Andes, J. M. Darden, K. B. Johnson, Mrs. C. H. Rowland, M. J. Sweet, Mrs. E. T. Boshart, Rev. H. S. Hardcastle and J. A. Williams.

Board of Superannuation: Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., C. D. Johnston, D. R. Harville, Rev. J. H. Lightbourne, Rex. J. M. Fix.

Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, Dr. J. O. Atkinson; associate editor, Dr. E. C. Gillette; contributing editors, Drs. I. W. Johnson and Elisha A. King; managing editor, J. T. Kernodle, of Richmond, Va.

Nominations for trustees of Elon College: Dr. J. E. Rawls, J. A. Williams, Col. E. E. Holland, A. B. Farmer, P. J. Carlton, W. H. Boone, Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, Rev. J. G. Truitt, Garland Gray, J. D. MacClenny, Emmett Rawles, J. A. Kimball, J. T. Kernodle, Miss Susie Holland, Mrs. M. W. Leathers, Mrs. John Barnwell, L. R. Jones, F. W. Chandler, of the Christian Church; William Horace Day, Richard H. Clapp, Russell J. Clinchey, Miles H. Kimbrue, William W. Patten, J. Shanley Durkee, of the Congregational Church.

On the Board of Education: Dr. L. E. Smith, Dr. E. L. Moffitt, H. C. Newell, Col. E. E. Holland, F. P. Ensminger, Rev. John G. Truitt.

Executive Board: Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, Dr. C. H. Rowland, M. J. Sweet, Lewis Prizer.

Board of Publications: Dr. C. H. Rowland, Col. E. E. Holland, Dr. N. G. Newman, M. J. Sweet, Rev. John G. Truitt.

Rev. W. M. Jay, of Holland, Va., made the following report on Temperance:

"That the church, through the pulpit, urge its members to a more consistent Christian living.

"That the churches enter upon a more zealous and systematic course of scientific temperance teaching with regard to the evils of alcohol as a beverage, and make such literature available to the church.

"That the church give moral support and cooperation to the legal authorities in their present effort to suppress such forms of gambling as the slot machine, the number racket, and that we strongly object to legalization of lotteries, national or State, as a means of revenue.

"That the church deplores the prevalence of crime, and pledges itself through the ballot box and other legally constituted agencies to help to banish these things from the land.

"That the church condemns misleading and enticing advertisements of liquor and cigarettes, on billboards, in magazines, over the radio, and the cunning efforts of some of the comic strip artists to attract and interest young children in these evils. That the church registers its opposition to war as a barbarous way of settling disputes, and endorses President Roosevelt's suggestion that the nations of the world should agree never to send their military forces of any sort, land, water, or air, across their own boundaries; and that a discontinuance of compulsory military training in schools and colleges is urged."

In his report on finances, Col. E. E. Holland stated:

"That for each year of the next biennium the Convention will need $31,500, to be apportioned as follows: Convention fund, $5,000; Convention home missions, $5,000; foreign missions, $5,000; Elon College, $12,500; superannuation, $2,500; religious education, $1,500."

The following recommendations were made for the raising of these funds: Special Easter offering for missions; special Thanksgiving fund for the Orphanage; special Christmas offering for superannuation relief; special offering for Elon on a Sunday designated.

"That for the support of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, for each year, there shall be paid by the Orphanage, Elon College, and the Mission Board, $500 each; the Board of Religious Education, $250; remaining $2,250.00 to be paid from the Convention fund."

Months for special offerings were named, and the methods and means of taking care of the collections were named. This report was adopted.

In his report on Social Service, Rev. H. S. Hardcastle declared that no State or nation can prosper when a part of its people are hungry and unemployed. He urged a greater responsibility to the "weaker brother." He also recommended that the social reform be changed to social relations and advocated a column on this topic in THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

Dr. L. E. Smith, in his report on Education, declared that the great leaders of the nation have come in large measure from the church schools. He told of the history and wide influence of Elon College, and urged that members of the Christian and Congregational Churches give it support. The plant at Elon, he stated, is easily worth a million dollars, but will be valueless if the church people fail in their support.

Meeting several hundred strong, as an adjunct to the Convention, "Youth Fellowship," the young people's body of the church, gathered Thursday afternoon and night in one of the most interesting sessions of the week.

In the afternoon session, Mrs. W. B. Williams, of Newport News, presided at the business session and speakers during the afternoon and evening were Miss Eunice Thomas, Dr. W. P. Minton, Dr. Erwin L. Shaver, of Waltham, Mass., and Dr. Shelton Smith, of Duke University.

The banquet served at night to the members of the "Youth Fellowship" in Fellowship Hall of the Suffolk Christian Church, was one of the most interesting held during this week of luncheons and banquets.

Several hundred young people were present and the toastmaster was the Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, of the Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va.

State leaders from various towns and cities brought greetings, and Dr. W. P. Minton spoke on "A Salute to Youth."

At the 8 o'clock service in the main auditorium of the church, Dr. Shaver spoke on "Leadership for a New Day."

Dr. Shelton Smith, Duke University, in his address on "Perils of Unlearned Lessons," stressed the point that Americans do not profit by the lessons of the past.

The fourth day of the Convention was devoted to much miscellaneous business, the outstanding reports being those of the Board of Publications, by Dr. C. H. Rowland, chairman, and the report of the Board of Christian Education, by Rev. F. C. Lester, chairman, with a searching and profound address by Dr. H. Shelton Smith, on "The Perils of Religious Education"; also the report of the Board of Superannuation, by Dr. J. O. Atkinson, chairman, and an address which stirred the Convention to applause and gratitude by Dr. Lewis T. Reed, secretary of Ministerial Relief, New York. The gist of these reports will have to be given in succeeding issues of THE SUN.

The Minutes are to be published at an early date, and not until then can we get all the decisions reached by this epoch-making Convention. The editor does not recall a Convention that was so harmonious, so inspirational, so delightful in fellowship, so moving in prospect and so thrilled with great addresses and sermons as was this body. It is useless to say that the Suffolk people as is their custom, cared for the Convention in royal manner. It was, indeed, glorious to be there, not only to enjoy the fellowship of the saints, but the hospitality of that genuine, good old Virginia type. Possibly the busiest man of the Convention, and one who did more for its physical comfort than any other, was Brother J. D. MacClenny, chairman of the Committee on Entertainment. All the machinery moved as if by magic and without friction. It was not until 4 o'clock of the fourth day that the Convention finished its business and adjourned to meet two years hence at a place to be designated by the Executive Committee. J. O. A.

THE WOMEN'S MISSIONARY CONVENTION.

The most largely attended session of the Women's Missionary Convention, thus far in its history, convened in the Suffolk Christian Church, 10 A. M., May 1st, Mrs. J. A. Williams, president, presiding, and Mrs. L. W. Stagg, Norfolk, at the secretary's desk. Only those present could get any idea of the spirit, merit and measure of this gathering. The following from the Suffolk correspondent to the Virginian-Pilot, in its issue of May 2nd, gives in barest detail the procedure of the day:

Church women more than 800 in number from all Conferences of the Christian and Congregational Churches, gathered this morning for the eleventh biennial session of the Women's Missionary Convention of the Southern Christian Convention.

The following church women, whose names were brought in by the nominating committee for officers for the coming two years, of the Missionary Convention, were unanimously elected:

President, Mrs. W. R. Sellars, of Burlington, N. C.; vice-president, Mrs. B. D. Jones, of Holland, Va.; secretary, Mrs. I. W. Johnson, Suffolk, Va.; treasurer, Mrs. H. S. Hardcastle, Norfolk, Va.; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Roy Malone, Burlington, N. C. Convention editor, Mrs. W. M. Jay, Holland; superintendent Spiritual Life, Mrs. W. H. Carroll, Burlington, N. C.; young people, Mrs. W. T. Scott, Winston-Salem, N. C.; literature, Mrs. A. R. Van Cleave, Winchester, Va.; cradle roll, Mrs. G. L. Stevens, of the Georgia Conference; life memberships and memorials, Mrs. M. J. W. White, Norfolk.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

For the information of SUN readers, the following actions of the Convention, adopted to suggest a financial program for Conferences beginning December 1, 1934, are included in this issue of THE SUN:

1. That for each year, for the next biennium, the Convention will need $31,500, to be apportioned as follows: Convention Fund, $5,000; Convention (Home) Missions, $5,000; Foreign Missions, $5,000; Elon College, $12,500; Superannuation, $2,500; Christian Education, $1,500; total, $31,500.

The above mentioned Convention Funds shall be raised by the several Conferences comprising this Convention, to be apportioned among the several Conferences by the Apportionment Committee of the Convention.

2. That to assist in raising said funds a special Easter offering shall be taken by the churches for Missions; a special Thanksgiving offering for the Orphanage; a special Christmas offering for Superannuation, a special offering for Elon College on some Sunday to be designated by the pastors of the several churches, and a special offering from the Sunday Schools during the Education Period for Religious Education. No other special offerings shall be taken by the churches for any of said designated agencies.

3. That to provide for the support of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, for each year, there shall be paid by the Orphanage, by Elon College, and the Mission Board, the sum of $500 each, and the Board of Christian Education the sum of $250, the balance of $2,500 to be paid from the Convention Fund.

4. That the present plan for offerings to be taken by the Sunday Schools for Missions, the Orphanage and Elon College be continued; and the funds collected to be paid to the designated agency for which contributed.

5. That the Orphanage, the Mission Board and College shall be authorized to make appeals for support to individuals, each during the period heretofore designated as follows: Elon College: January, February, July, August and September (and at Commencement); Missions: March, April, May, June; Orphanage, October, November, December.

6. That all funds contributed to designated agencies, including individual contributions, shall be paid to the treasurer of such agency, and a report made by such agency to the treasurer of the Convention.

7. That all monies raised by churches, missionary societies, Sunday Schools, Christian Endeavor Societies and other societies of the several churches be included in the letters, or reports of the churches to their respective Conferences; and reports thereof made by the secretary of each Conference to the treasurer of the Convention, and each Conference given credit therefor.

8. That all Convention funds raised by the churches, or by the several Conferences for Convention purposes, shall be forwarded to the treasurer of the Convention and paid out by checks drawn by the treasurer, on order of the president of the Convention.

9. That in making remittances to the treasurer of the Convention the amount contributed to each church agency shall be definitely stated.

10. That two-fifths of the Convention Fund shall be forwarded to the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches.

11. That the Board of Christian Education be permitted to ask the various Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Conventions for appropriations for support heretofore.

12. That the president of the Convention be requested to visit the various Conferences this year to present these plans and seek to secure adoption of the same. I. W. JOHNSON.

THE SPIRIT OF THE CONVENTION.

For more than thirty years the Christian Churches in the South have been meeting biennially. The Convention is constituted by Conferences. The Conferences represent the local churches. The Convention is a delegated body charged with the responsibility of all departments of the church.

There is necessarily a business side to every biennial session. Reports are to be received and plans for the future projected. There are also opportunities for addresses of an inspirational nature and for devotion. Others will perhaps write about reports, plans, etc., but I wish simply to record my appreciation of the fine spirit characterizing every session of the entire Convention.

Individuals and groups representing different sections of the church were apprehensive of what might happen when we came together for our thirty-first regular session of the Convention. It would seem to be a great responsibility. We were forced to face the responsibility of providing for the financial support of the departments of the church. THE CHRISTIAN SUN, the College, and the missionary interests of the church were looking to this Convention for plans that would result in adequate financial support.

The Christian Orphanage, so successfully cared for by Superintendent C. D. Johnston and his board, and which the church supports gladly, was looking for favorable consideration.

Perhaps the most apprehensive question that confronted the Convention was the completion of the merger of Congregational and Christian Churches which had been previously authorized. These, together with other problems, caused the most optimistic among us to enter the Convention with anxiety and hope. The very atmosphere of the church that was host to the Convention, the cordial handshape and winning smile of its pastor, seemed to say to us that you have come to a good place and all will be well.

The quiet and efficient manner of the president of the Convention in the opening session seemed to assure peace and harmony. From the opening session to the closing moments, there was in evidence the presence of the "Spirit Himself." On every occasion selected and voluntary speakers gave evidence of sincerity and thoroughness and the controlling presence of the Spirit.

Aside from the president's address and the Convention sermon, the evening sessions in which Rev. F. C. Lester, Dr. Perceval Huget, Dr. Erwin L. Shaver and Dr. H. Shelton Smith, were the outstanding inspirational sessions of the Convention. Dr. J. O. Atkinson's address urging the successful completion of the merger of the Congregational and Christian Churches in the South, was one of the most timely utterances ever delivered to our people. As usual, he demonstrated a thorough understanding of the genius of the two churches, a complete grasp of the situation confronting us and the consequences involved in our action. Aside from these salient facts, he was possessed with a passion and a spirit that made his appeal effective. If there had been any storm clouds brewing, they were swept away by the wind of the Spirit. One was reminded of that mountain top experience in the lives of the Apostles when the Master breathed upon them and said, "Receive ye the Spirit."

As I think of the thirty-first biennial session of our Convention, it stands out in my experience as a session dominated by the Spirit Himself. There was no sound of a mighty rushing wind and there were no strangely appearing tongues like as fire, but there was moving through every session of the Convention an irresistible power, shaping, informing, guiding and blessing all. It is the hope of the writer that the impressions of the Convention may last, that the actions may be received heartily and favorably by the entire church and that the requests of the Convention may be complied with by every individual member and local church. May the Spirit preserve, guide and direct us all until we meet again.

L. E. SMITH.

A GREATER FUTURE FOR OUR CHURCH.

The recent session of the Southern Convention of the Congregational and Christian Churches was one of the most inspiring and progressive that has ever been held in the history of the church. The spirit of the Convention could not have been surpassed, the brotherliness between the constituent parts of our church was ideal, the cooperation in working out the technique of the merged church was beautiful, and the outcome gave a thrill to all participants. The financial policies for the ensuing biennium were the best that the wisdom of the competent committee could devise after careful, thoughtful, and prayerful deliberation so as to unify and integrate more closely the obligations and the support of all our enterprises.

The report of the historian was illuminating and suggestive of further research and historical writing of what both churches have done before the merger and the preservation of the record of the heroic deeds and successes of the pioneers of the church.

The report of the mission work that has been done through the period of depression and the excellent addresses of the proponents of our missionary cause reveal the spirit of sacrifice, faithfulness, victories and inspiration of the missionary cause. The plans for the future in this field are appealing to the adventurous spirit of the membership of the church as never before. The report of the President of the Woman's Board bespeaks the great things our women have done through love and devotion to the cause that was dearest to the heart of the Master.

The report of the Orphanage was an inspiration to the Convention, and reveals the fine business management that always characterized the work of the present superintendent, and will continue to call forth the liberal response and support of an ever-growing constituency. With such fine business management there can be no doubt as to the future of our Orphanage.

The climax of interest and enthusiasm was reached in the report of the Executive Board on working out the details and technique of cooperation of the merged Congregational-Christian Church. The large number of representatives from Congregational Churches present in the Convention was indicative of keen interest in all the sessions and the happy outcome endorsed unanimously by Congregationalists and Christians made all parties rejoice at the realization of the ideal of union which both churches have advocated throughout their history.

The plans worked out for the future of Elon College as the educational center of Congregational and Christian Churches of the Southeastern territory of the united church brought a thrill of joy at the closing session of the Convention. If those plans can be executed and the ideals realized as planned, it will be the greatest day of our history. There is no reason to doubt that they shall be realized in full in the near future, if everyone will do his duty and cooperate under the guidance of the Holy Spirit.

The entertainment for the Convention was excellent, the hospitality unsurpassed, the spirit was beautiful, and everybody seemed happy as one measure after another was approved in the finest possible spirit of Christianity.

AS ONE HIS MOTHER COMFORTETH.

The little mother had been taken very ill quite suddenly and the year-old tot had to be taken away so that she could receive the attention that was needed. The little tot so suddenly bereft of mother's care and his natural nourishment got along very well until night had settled down. Then, as he restlessly slept, awakening at intervals, missing the familiar faces, not recognizing the room, his little voice was raised in protest and he refused to be comforted. But sleep would come at last. As the days passed by he learned that other arms besides his mother's could hold him close and that another voice could soothe. As we held him close with his little body perfectly relaxed, we thought of the verse: "As one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort you, and ye shall be comforted."

The circumstances of life often rob us of the natural supports which so many times we hold to more than we do to our heavenly Father. We trust in them too much and they must be taken away so we may learn that there is only One who never faileth. The darkness comes on and we cannot understand the "why" and the "wherefore" of the calamity that has befallen us, and we cry as little children, and fret and worry. We protest against giving up what we want, what we think we need; but with what great patience our heavenly Father deals with us. His loving arms are outstretched toward us and he says: "Child, I loved thee long ago; why do you fret and worry so? Come unto me and rest." He knows our every grief and care; before it reaches us he knows, and his grace is sufficient for our every need.

It has been said that no physician ever weighed out medicine to his patient with half so much care and exactness as God weighs out to us every trial; not one grain too much does he ever permit to be put in the scale. Yet so many times we will not listen to his loving entreaties; we hold back from him, we stiffen our backs and rebelliously say: "Why must it be so?" and protest that we cannot bear it. But, oh, the patience of our heavenly Father—more than any mother's could be, and how lovingly he deals with us, ever seeking to have us yield fully into his arms of love; and after we have struggled until we are worn out, we sink down into his everlasting arms because there is nothing else we can do.

Some one has said: "There are just two ways possible to meet our sorrows—rebellion and submission. Rebellion does not lessen the suffering but only increases our helplessness. It routs the ministering angel who stands longing to help us; it cuts us off from the companionship of the Father, and this is 'sorrow's crown of sorrow.' Submission is the other way. It is the triumph which comes when we lay our sorrowing soul at the Father's feet and accept what he sends, knowing that it must be best for us since it is his way; sure that one day it will be made plain; with no bitterness and no questioning, but with serenity, saying, 'Even so, Father, for thus it seemeth good in thy sight.' Billows of peace will sweep over the soul thus trusting."

As one his mother comforteth,
We turn, dear Lord, to thee;
As children to their mothers run
To find security,
Safe as a child in mother's arms,
In perfect trust we rest;
Dear Lord, we trust thee wholly,
Thou knowest what is best.
None are too old to know his care,
None are too young or small;
Like as a father pitieth,
God loveth one and all.

"W."

CHARLESTON, S. C.

At Circular Congregational Church, Charleston, S. C., there have been several features of interest during recent weeks. The Young People's Club produced the Easter drama, "He Is the Son of God," on Easter evening and repeated it the following week to large audiences. It had been very carefully prepared under the direction of a competent director, Mrs. Henry Snead, who has studied the drama in England, and traveled extensively, bringing home some Oriental costumes which she loaned for this occasion. The action of the drama was very impressive and remarkable for the smoothness with which it was done.

On Easter Sunday, the children's choir lately organized, appeared for the first time in their new vestments made by the ladies of the church.

The Boy Scouts have recently been organized with the pastor as Scoutmaster.

At the annual Thursday evening communion service before Easter, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Colman, formerly of the Christian Church in Durham, N. C., were received into membership, also one of the Scouts, who is a patrol leader. The pastor gives weekly talks to the Junior Choir at the time of their practice, on what the services of the church mean, and the part a child can take in his church. He also gives a talk each Sunday in Sunday School on "How We Got Our Bible."

For some weeks a group of Charleston ministers have been meeting together in what is called a "Fellowship of Prayer," and plan to hold a united public service of prayer on May 16th.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary

THE LADY OF THE LOVING HEART.

By Miss D. P. CUSHING,
News Editor, American Board.

Down in the "world's worst slums," Johannesburg, South Africa, they call Miss Ruth C. Cowles, R. N., "The Lady of the Loving Heart." For eight years she carried on with a program of public health, baby welfare, and training for native nurses, dashing hither and yon on errands of mercy in her car, called "The Messenger of Blessing," saving lives, and just as truly saving souls. For the people of the kraals, brought down by the thousands to work in the great mines, are caught in webs of ancient superstitions and fears, made more terrible by the easily acquired sins of modern civilization at its worst. Herded into crowded enclosures called "native locations" vermin-filled, breathless with heat, or dank and chilling with the cold, these cesspools of vice are the only homes of hundreds of families. Into this district goes Ruth Cowles, helping bewildered mothers to care for their babies, training dusky nurses to minister to their own race and bringing some measure of health to little black children.

To Miss Cowles belongs the distinction of opening the first day nursery for native babies in South Africa. It is in Alexander Township, a settlement of over 20,000 Bantus located about seven miles from Johannesburg. Other nurseries have opened up since, following Miss Cowles' example. Here baby clinics and school clinics serve hundreds regularly. And here public health work has inaugurated many campaigns against the spread of disease.

Miss Cowles knows the Bantus are in stock a fine, upstanding people, with a deep sense of humor and great musical and artistic abilities. "The Bantus," she says, "are not purely Negroes. They have Negro blood, but they have also Hamitic and Arabian blood. No one knows where they originated. They come to work in the gold mines, because they are taxed so heavily on their land by the whites that they cannot live as they used to. Three-sevenths of the people of Africa live on one-fifth of the land."

Bantu women in the slums make bootleg hootch called "Killy Me Quicky" in order to try to make both ends meet. There is prohibition for non-Europeans, but not for Europeans, points out Miss Cowles, and as a result thousands of tons of yeast cakes are sold weekly to these people by the very persons who have prohibited the making of liquor.

Speaking of the work of the missions, Miss Cowles says, "You just cannot know how much such expressions of good will mean to the Bantu folk who have so much cause for bitterness toward their European brothers." The terrible social and racial problems that exist in Johannesburg make such Christian ministry doubly needed.

For three generations, Miss Cowles' family has served Africa as Christian missionaries. She is a graduate of Oberlin College and took her nurses training at the New York Post Graduate Hospital.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION NOT NEGLECTED.

When Government regulations in China forbade compulsory Bible study in the curricula of any school, some felt that all religious influence would be destroyed. Happily there comes more proof, from Jefferson Academy this time, that this is far from the truth. Rev. Harry S. Martin states that the voluntary Bible study class had 40 out of 70 senior boys enrolled and at the communion service in December 17 boys joined the church either on probation or as full members. Eleven of these were seniors. "I know that statistics do not tell the whole story," comments Mr. Martin, "but they show the tendency." And in Japan, Kobe College has this year engaged in both the College Department and in the Academy Department, directors of religious education with special time and salary for the work.

WOMEN'S MISSIONARY CONVENTION.

Officers Report on Work

Mrs. Russell T. Bradford, of Nansemond County, was chairman of the nominating committee.

The features of the sessions, morning and afternoon, were the treasurer's report by Mrs. H. S. Hardcastle, report of the finance committee, Mrs. L. W. Stagg; addresses by Mrs. C. H. Rowland and Miss Eunice Thomas, Congregational-Christian missionary to Japan, and by Mrs. Mary D. White, associate secretary of the Home Board of Missions, New York City.

Mrs. Hardcastle, in her report, stated that from May, 1932, to May, 1934, the Woman's Board of Missions of the Southern Christian Convention showed the sum of $18,261.05 received from the missionary societies of the Alabama, Eastern Virginia, North Carolina, Valley of Virginia Conferences.

Her report showed disbursements amounting to $18,090.13, leaving a balance of $170.92. This, added to the savings account of life memberships, of $997.56, made a balance on hand of $1,168.48.

Of the sum expended $17,754.01 was spent for missions. Mrs. C. H. Rowland spoke on, "After Twenty-Two Years," and said: "The first movement for the organization of the women in the bounds of the Southern Christian Convention was made in the Suffolk Church in May, 1910, when a committee of women was appointed for launching this work.

Had a Small Beginning.

"This committee consisted of Mrs. C. H. Rowland, Mrs. L. F. Johnston, Mrs. H. W. Elder, Mrs. W. A. Harper, Mrs. W. H. Carroll. They met in Raleigh, N. C., drafted a constitution for local societies, and these societies were organized in 1912. From a small beginning they have grown in numbers and financial strength, there being 206 of these societies in the Convention, and they have raised the sum of $18,261."

Miss Thomas, in her address on "Women of the Orient Today," paid a high tribute to the work of the native women, who when they have become Christians, she said, began at once to pass on their knowledge and happiness to others.

"They send back native mission workers," she said, "to the great back country, they make excellent nurses, and are training in our hospitals, they are interested in baby clinics, are students in girls' schools, and accept with their new faith the responsibility of spreading the Gospel."

Miss Thomas has been located at Foochow, China, 500 miles south of Shanghai.

Mrs. White, in her address on "What I Saw in Our Mission Fields," gave a picture of the work of the Congregational-Christian Churches in the Home Mission field. She told of the schools for Indians, Negroes, the Young People's work, for summer camps, the vacation Bible schools, the work of the Home Mission pastors, the hospital service sponsored by the Congregational-Christian Churches.

Touching Fringes.

"We are drawing a picture," she said, "of the vast work, the fringes of which we are touching, in our endeavor to make America a Christian nation."

Mrs. J. A. Williams, president of the Convention, presided, and devotionals were conducted by Mrs. B. D. Jones. Mrs. John King, president of the Suffolk Society, extended greetings and Mrs. Lee Britt, president of the Methodist Missionary Council of Virginia brought a fraternal message.

Mrs. J. R. Vann and Mrs. J. Vernon Holland sang solos, and in the afternoon session, reports were made by Mrs. W. M. Jay, convention editor; Mrs. I. W. Johnson, cradle roll; Mrs. W. H. Carroll, spiritual life; Miss Priscilla Chase, young people; Mrs. Mary Lee Williams Bryant replied to these reports; Mrs. A. R. Van Cleave spoke on Literature, with a reply by Mrs. D. E. Brown, of the Literature Department, Commission on Missions, of New York City; Mrs. M. J. W. White spoke of Life Memberships and Memorials, with a reply by Mrs. R. B. Wood.

One of the fine addresses of the morning session was that of Dr. W. P. Minton, of Dayton, Ohio, mission secretary of the American Mission Board, who spoke of the stirring life of the missionaries of the foreign fields, and told of many of the remarkable scenes in connection with the medical mission.

Between three and four hundred women and visitors enjoyed the delicious luncheon spread for them in the Fellowship Hall of the Christian Church, and served by the women of the Suffolk Church. The women's body met in the large assembly hall on the first floor of the church.

COMPLETING THE MERGER.

[A statement by Dr. J. O. Atkinson, at the Suffolk Convention, on opening this discussion.]

The genius of our Christian Churches is quite well, if not comprehensively, defined in our oft-repeated proverb: "In essentials, unity; in non-essentials, liberty; in all things, charity." As far as your speaker is advised, this quite well defines also the genius of our Congregational fellowship. Ever holding before our minds an ideal so broad and brotherly, it was evident that two communions, claiming Christ as the supreme head of the church, and the Holy Bible a sufficient creed and course of practice—it was inevitable that two such communions would sooner or later come together in answer to our Lord Christ's petition that "they may be one, even as we are one; I in them and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one and that the world may know that thou hast sent me." Long before official committees began to parley or votes began to be taken at Piqua and Seattle, these two communions were already coming together. It was inevitable, unless one or the other should set a different goal, or choose a different genius, to guide in their deliberations. Two years ago at Burlington, our Southern Convention put the seal of its approval on this union, still believing, as we have through the years professed, that in the essentials of our religion there should be unity of attitude and action—that in Jesus Christ there is no East, no West, no North, no South, but one common brotherhood; that he is all-sufficient and his the name, the only name, whereby we must be saved. He is the world's adequate and all-sufficient Redeemer, and in the Scriptures of the Old and the New Testaments, we have a sufficient revelation of our Father's will. It is not essentials, but non-essentials that have divided the church of the living God—forms, ceremonies, traditions, non-essential in building up the kingdom of God on earth. In these non-essentials, we, Congregational-Christians, plead for and grant liberty—liberty of conscience and of interpretation—that our differences of opinion may not sever us, but draw us closer together. Then above all and in all, as becometh the household of faith and the children of God, we plead for that charity, that love of God and man, planted in the human heart that covereth a multitude of sins.

Thus far I have only stated the grounds of our union and the sources of our common faith and fellowship. All this is history now. We have voted union and there is no turning back. Our immediate task is not of merging, but of methods; not of motives, but of measures; not of plans, but of procedure; not of purposes, but of practice. We have just heard read the report of our Executive Board. These brethren of ours have sought the mind and the attitude of our people, far and wide, not as to whether we should merge, but as to the methods to be employed, so that in the merger the full strength of two shall become of more might and power in the strength of one. "In union there is strength," provided the elements of strength inherent in the two shall be conserved and made one by the impelling power of the energy in both.

As your speaker understands these resolutions, they are nothing more or less than an honest effort and gesture made to bring our united fellowship together, so that the two of us may, in becoming one, be united in the common tasks and burdens of each.

Let us meditate for a moment. It is not the triumphs, but the trials of life that provoke the energy, and unite the heart, of mankind. It is not the glorious resurrection, but the suffering and the pain of the cross through which our Lord would draw all men unto him. "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me." This, he said, signifying by what death he should die. It is the burden of our Lord hanging there, lifted up in pain, and agony; and not the shout of victory on the resurrection morn, that has served to draw men and women to him and thus draw his followers closer to each other.

Now, as your speaker sees it, our Executive Committee has brought in a report which means nothing more or less than the privilege and the opportunity of bringing us (Christians and Congregationalists) into a united fellowship through the only channel that a fellowship can be united, viz., that of getting beneath our common burdens, and undertaking our tasks together.

One is safe in saying that God created institutions in order to unite the hearts of mankind. The home, as an institution, puts each member of that home beneath the burden and the task of sustaining and preserving it. The home was created that there might be a common task of the group that makes the home. The church of the living God was created that those who were in the church might share with our Lord the burden bearing of the world's sins that sent him to the cross and broke his heart. Our Southern Convention has been fortunate enough to unite in sweet and loving fellowship members of more than any one Conference or State. Our CHRISTIAN SUN, our Elon College, our Christian Orphanage, our common task of enlarging the kingdom of righteousness in building churches and maintaining missions—these are the burdens that have brought us together and have been our blessing.

This is why no church, or branch of the church, comes into its own as the body of our Lord until it has become indigenous, native to its task, responsive to its needs, a bearer of its burdens and a sharer in its triumphs. As self-respecting men and women in the cause of righteousness, we cannot ask that we shift the burden of our tasks upon our Congregational fellowship, neither can we ask our Congregational fellowship that they shift the burden of their tasks upon us, but our asking, our deep desire and aspiration are that they with us and we with them share, and not shift our burdens; for in sharing our common burdens, we shall become a united fellowship. If there is an organization here in the confines of the Southern Convention that will bring us to this common sharing better than our Convention can bring us, then, and only then, can we consider supplanting the Convention with that other and better organization. Not to shift, but to share, that is our self-respecting task; not to destroy, but to build up; not to disintegrate, but to integrate, that together we may go forward in the common task of our Lord. The candid conviction of your speaker is that the General Council of our united fellowship would not have us abandon or in any wise weaken or destroy an organization through which our common tasks have been created and through which we share together the burdens of those tasks; but that as brethren with us, they would have us to use and to improve upon the organization that has brought us as far as we are, the organization that has grown up into our lives and hearts; an organization whose tradition and history have become wholesome and inspiring; an organization that is flexible, democratic, adaptable; an organization that is willing to be used in the constructive work of the common task of a united fellowship, preaching, practicing and persuading, that in essentials there shall be unity; in non-essentials there shall be liberty, and in all things we shall have charity. To this end, I move the adoption of the resolutions presented by our Executive Committee.

THE CHURCH AT THE HEART.

What the church is, and can be, to China's life is illustrated by the village of Ts'ang Erh Shang where it has become the civic center. As you enter the church yard you see first the Congregational Church, then the local Kuomintang headquarters (Government Party), next the Anti-Gambling Association, then the Cooperative Christian Society, and near that the Agricultural Improvement Society which has sponsored one of the best and most successful county fairs in that entire area. This list by no means includes all the community enterprises headed up in this church, declares Dr. George D. Wilder, of Tunghsien. There are, of course, the schools as well.

HUMBLE VESSEL A SHRINE.

Because she is true to her Christian faith, Sornam of Tirumangalam, India, suffers from the violent opposition of her husband. Two years ago he burned her Bible. Since then she has kept one in a mud pot in the kitchen where husbands rarely trespass. She reads it when he is away. She wants her little daughter to go to Sunday School. The father threatens to beat her if she attends. He does beat her—but the child each time goes back. When the father tried to force her to smear holy ashes on her forehead the small girl flatly refused to do so. Such is the web of life being spun for a little Christian in India.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

YOUTH—ITS CHALLENGE, PURPOSES, AND OPPORTUNITIES.

[The following was given before the Woman's Mission Board in Suffolk, by a representative of the Young People.—Editor.]

What is the challenge of the youth of today? To join hands and start a campaign to practice and teach the Christ plan and program. It is time for young people to stop and take a good look at the world, study its problems and take advantage of the opportunity to help make a better world. The forward program of the church belongs to youth. There are many adults today who are prone to blame youth for much of which it is not guilty. The mass must suffer for the few. But youth will come into its own.

We have read and been told from our childhood the stories of the pioneers, and the days of pioneering are not over. There is yet the frontier of poverty, the frontier of war, the frontier of indifference, and the frontier of lack of interest in the Church of Christ. These frontiers will and must be conquered by the youth of America, making a stronger, better, and safer world in which to live. Young people are interested in the problems of the world, if they are given a chance. They will help solve them, too, if the adults will make room for them.

If you will pardon a personal illustration, I think I can make clear to you something of the heart of youth. It is our privilege to have many of the boys and girls in our community come into our home. A week or two ago, the teachers of the high school were planning to put on one of the very popular fashion shows. This one was to take the form of a beach parade. "It would be spectacular," the teacher said. A day or two after the date for the show was announced two or three of the school boys came to our home. The show was the chief topic of conversation. They expressed themselves freely as being opposed to their school sponsoring such an exhibition. During the days to come the teachers got the same views expressed to them. The type of show was greatly modified. Who had the higher ideals—the adults or youth?

If we study our youth we will find that at heart they are strong and sound, with high underlying principles, and they will not fail in the things expected of them. Be sympathetic with youth. What was true of these boys and girls I have just spoken of, is true of the youth of America.

The youth of foreign lands is on the march, but they are not on the march for Christ. The church is fighting for its very life, and this fight for Christ must and will be won by our American youth.

Christ came that we might have life and have it more abundantly. Two thousand years ago Jesus preached that, and should he return today he could start where he left off. The same thing applies today. The world has changed, it is true, but people have changed very little. Jesus' plan and program is not out of date and old-fashioned, as many would have us believe. The greatest challenge of the youth of today is to put Christ's way into our everyday living. We must put him in our governmental life, in our business life, and in our home life. Then, and not until then, will we live in a better and more Christ-like world. Not until we put Jesus in our midst will we go much further in giving Christ to a darkened world. The unsaved soul fails to accept Christ because we here at home have failed him so utterly.

The challenge to save the world has been flung out to our youth. It is their problem, and the opportunity is knocking. Encourage them, and they will not fail. Soon they will start a crusade against crime, hatred, war, poverty, lust, selfishness and lack of interest in the Church of Christ. Start a campaign to enroll new members, not just on the roll type, but earnest, working members. When this is done Christ's kingdom will have had its beginning here on earth. It is the part of youth to carry on. They will not fail in the challenge and opportunities which are theirs.

MRS. E. R. BRYANT, JR.

MEETING OF SOUTHEAST YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

The Youth Fellowship of Congregational and Christian Churches of the Southeast met in their third biennial session at Suffolk, Va., on the afternoon and evening of May 3, 1934. The business session opened at 2 o'clock with a fine worship service led by Mrs. W. B. Williams, of Newport News, Va.

In the absence of other officers, the meeting was called to order by Mr. Aubrey C. Todd, treasurer of the Fellowship, and Rev. F. C. Lester, chairman of the Board of Christian Education and chairman of the program committee for this meeting, was asked to preside.

Representatives were present representing the work in the Conferences of Florida, Georgia, North Carolina and Virginia, Eastern North Carolina, Valley of Virginia Central, and Eastern Virginia. Reports were made of the work being done in each of these Conferences which indicated that the young people are seeing a new vision of their opportunities and are responding to the call and service. The treasurer reported having received $4.20, all of which was carried as a balance into the new biennium. Rev. Carl Key, superintendent of Publications, sent his report, which was read and approved.

There was an open discussion on the purposes, plans and program of Youth Fellowship in the Southeast, in the Conferences, and in the local churches. The organization is intended not to establish a new organization in the local church, but to develop a fellowship between the young people in the present organizations of churches.

The outstanding feature of the afternoon program was an interesting and informing address by Miss Eunice Thomas, one of our missionaries to Foochow, China.

Rev. H. S. Hardcastle presided at the banquet where two hundred people dined together and enjoyed a fine fellowship meeting. Greetings were given by Robert Speight of Eastern Virginia, J. Everette Neese, of North Carolina, Miss Pattie Coghill, of Florida, Miss Eunice Thomas, of Foochow, China, and Rev. F. C. Lester, chairman of the Board of Christian Education. Dr. W. P. Minton, of Dayton, Ohio, spoke to the group on "A Salute to Youth," in which he gave a fine challenge for youth to make life count in this modern day.

The young people shared with the Southern Convention in the evening program, at which time Dr. Erwin L. Shaver, secretary of leadership training, Boston, and Dr. H. Shelton Smith, professor in Duke University, Durham, N. C., spoke to the Convention concerning religious educational work.

Officers for Youth Fellowship were elected as follows: President, Aubrey C. Todd, Elon College, N. C.; vice-president, Edward Dubois, Miami Beach, Fla.; secretary, Frankye Marshall, Walnut Cove, N. C.; assistant secretary, Elizabeth Sharpe, Waverly, Va.; treasurer, Margaret Earp, Harrisonburg, Va.; devotional life superintendent, Robert Kimball, Elon College, N. C.; service superintendent, Birdie Rowland, Greensboro, N. C.; leadership training superintendent, Lottie Mae Cross, Suffolk, Va.; publications superintendent, Carl Key, Nashville, Tenn.; editor of Youth Fellowship Page in THE CHRISTIAN SUN, Rev. F. C. Lester, Norfolk, Va.

ABOUT OURSELVES.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC, MAY 20, 1934.

(II. Tim. 3:1-5; 14-17.)

Many leaders of young people in our churches believe that young people are becoming more serious, more alert, and more courageous in behalf of great causes. The statistics of our Congregational and Christian young people's groups have climbed steadily for twelve years. It is probably true that the young people's work in our Congregational-Christian Churches is the most helpful part of the church life today.

The following statements represent conclusions of various people, and should be given careful thought at this time of discussion. You will not always be able to give a yes or no answer, but you will do well to consider the question of "ought" in connection with each.

1. Young people are pretty much alike; or young people are as unlike as they possibly can be.
2. Most young people are simply interested in having a good time; or, most young people have serious interests which are hidden from adults.
3. Young people are becoming tired of thrills; or, young people think that they ought not to have to work very hard while young.
4. Young people are becoming more interested in religion; or, young people generally feel that they can get along pretty well without religion.
5. Young people think that the church is one of the most important institutions in the community; or, young people generally think that the church is failing in its task.
6. Most young people regard Jesus Christ very highly and honor him; or, most young people do not think very much about Jesus or know much of anything about him.
7. Young people would rally to a great Christian crusade if they felt that the "world is very sick"; or, most young people will not rally to any great social cause so long as they feel fairly comfortable and happy.
8. Young people know that they have serious faults and are often deeply troubled about them; or, young people think that they are much more free from faults than their elders, and they feel that they are wrongly blamed.

My body is the temple
That needs the greatest care;
It must be clean and wholesome,
For God is living there.
And if I keep the temple,
My body, strong and clean,
My mind must be as wholesome,
Although it can't be seen.

My thoughts must be unselfish;
My words must comfort give;
My deeds must all be worthy
Of him with whom I live.
The bracing air I breathe in,
The ocean where I swim,
The sports that build my muscles
I'll use for love of him.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And a second like unto it is this, thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."—Matt. 22:37-39.

LESSON TEXT: Matt. 22:1-23, 39.

Jesus had always to be on his guard. His enemies were always trying to entangle him. And they did it stealthily and secretly. The Christian must ever be on his guard against evil-minded and evil-purposed people, enemies of Christianity, who are always looking for an opportunity to cast reflections on Christianity.

Pharisees and Herodians.

The Pharisees and the Herodians were political and religious enemies. They had nothing in common, except a common hatred of Jesus and a desire to get him out of the way. Politics is not the only thing which makes strange bed-fellows. Strange combinations have been made by people who want to crush out Christ and his ideals in our modern life. It does seem too bad that the forces which are against Christ can get together, while the church remains so divided and lacking in unity.

"Master we know that thou art true, and teachest the way of God in truth, neither carest thou for any man; for thou regardest not the person of men"—thus they greeted the Master. It was the truth, of course. But on their lips it was sheer hypocrisy and a lie. They were using one of the most effective weapons, however, which men can use, the weapon of flattery. Many a man who has resisted actual bribes has succumbed to flattery. Flattery is a subtle and a deadly weapon. But the Master saw through their hypocrisy. "But Jesus perceived their wickedness, and said, Why tempt ye me, ye hypocrites?" They made the wrong approach to Jesus. They did not know their man. Let not any man think that mere honied words, and flattering overtures to God will get him anything. The Lord looketh on the heart. He demands sincerity, both of motive and of speech.

Tribute to Caesar, or Not?

The question was packed with dynamite. "Is it lawful to give tribute to Caesar, or not?" The Jews hated the Romans and they hated to pay tribute to a heathen government. If Jesus replied that they ought to pay tribute to Caesar, he was cutting straight across the prejudices and the pride of the Jewish people. And he knew it.

If on the other hand, he even so much as intimated that it was not lawful to pay tribute to Caesar, he would get himself into serious difficulty with the Roman Government. He would be guilty of high treason, and Rome would have dealt ruthlessly with him. And Jesus knew that.

The Things that Are Caesar's.

Jesus answered the question in a way that was startling in its simplicity, and yet far-reaching in its consequences. He called for a coin and when one was produced, he asked whose image or superscription it bore. The answer obviously was, "Caesar's." "All right," said Jesus. "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's. Caesar gives you stable government, protection, privileges and blessings. If you enjoy these benefits, you ought to pay tribute to the government which provides them. The rights of citizenship involve the duties of citizenship. Human government demands and has a right to expect the support of its citizenship. Caesar does things for you; you are under obligation to pay Caesar tribute." The principle applies, of course, to us today. Citizens of the State are under certain obligations to the State.

And Unto God the Things that Are God's.

There is significance in the word "and". The question of the Pharisees and the Herodians did not go far enough. The word "and" calls attention to the fact that there are other obligations beyond that of the State. Men owe something to the State and they ought to pay it. But men owe something also to God. And the claims of God come first. A man's State has a right to claim his allegiance, but it does not claim his first and supreme allegiance. A man's supreme allegiance is to God. We ought to obey God rather than men. A man may have to suffer at the hands of the State because he renders unto God the things that are God's. A man ought to obey the voice of the State only so long as it is in accord with the voice of God. A great many professing Christians made a grave mistake in the matter of repealing the Eighteenth Amendment, because they made themselves believe that they ought to be true to their party platform, instead of obeying the voice of God. One of the most disturbing facts of recent years was the way people from whom we had a right to expect better compromised on this question.

"Which is the greatest commandment in the law?" Again it was a tricky question. But again Jesus answered in a straightforward way, and in words that his questioner could not gainsay. "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. God is the supreme object of love. He is to be loved first and he is to be loved by the whole man. Jesus puts heart first—there must be the emotional element in its rightful place—but he also put in the mind—God puts no premium on ignorance. To love God means more than mere sentiment. It means to desire, to delight in, to be obedient to. If we love him we will keep his commandments.

Like Unto It.

Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself—this is the second commandment, like unto the first. Love to God comes first, but love to God is manifested in love to one's neighbor or one's fellowman. As James says, "If we do not love our neighbor whom we have seen, how can we love God whom we have not seen?"

DISCIPLINE.

Discipline is discipling. In our day we think all too little of processes by which God trains us to be what he would have us be. We think of discipline as an evidence of God's anger rather than the evidence of his love. We forget the pain that it costs us to discipline our children. Often we ourselves suffer more than they suffer, but discipline is necessary to keep our children from running wild. F. W. Robertson, in one of his sermons, puts it thus:

"It is a painful thing, this pruning work, cutting off of the over-luxuriant shoots, in order to call back the wandering juices into the healthier and more living parts. In religion it is described thus: 'Every branch in me that beareth fruit, he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit.' The keen edge of God's pruning knife cuts sheer through. No weak tenderness stops him whose love seeks goodness, not comfort, for his servants."—The Watchman-Examiner.

MOTHER'S DAY READING.

THEME: MOTHERS.

MONDAY.

DEVOTION TO MOTHERS.

"Honor thy father and thy mother that thy days may be long in the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee."—Ex. 20:12; Deut. 5:16; Matt. 15:4; Mark 7:10; Luke 18:20; Eph. 6:2.

It is to be hoped that every man and woman, boy and girl, everywhere, may, this week and especially on Mother's Day, value at its own supreme worth, the counsel, the self-sacrifice and the unflinching love which only a devoted mother can give. It has been said, "God could not be everywhere, so he made mothers." This certainly places our mothers just a little lower than angels, and the best friend and helper that God has in the world.

The very word "Mother" is a synonym of reverence. In all nature there is nothing so tender, so loving, and joyous as the relationship between a mother and her child.

If Mother's Day can be spent, at least in part, in her presence, make it one of great comfort to her by such ministrations as the heart of a true child will dictate. If you cannot be with her write her a letter full of good cheer and confessions of love. If she has passed on into the beyond, do some good deed in her name that will cheer the life of another mother.

Prayer—Dear Lord Jesus, thou hast known a mother's love and tender care, and thou wilt hear us for our own mothers. Protect thou her who gavest us life. Give unto her and unto us the deepening glow of joy that comes from thee.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE JOY OF OBEDIENCE.

"My son, hear the instruction of thy father and forsake not the teaching of thy mother."—Prov. 1:8.

"Children, obey your parents in the Lord, for this is right."—Eph. 6:1.

In addition to God's promise to honor those who honor mother and giving them an honorable and long life, there is the blessing of delight. From mother's heart comes the love of the world, comes our love; and when love is the nature of life, obedience is a delight. It is believed that when our lives flow on in an even course of love, reverence and honor for her we experience an immeasurable blessedness superior to all pleasures which may be derived in any other way. If we were to lose every other pleasure of life with but little hope of earthly things, from Mother's love there would still flow into our souls the hope of glory which comes from God to him who honors his parents.

Prayer—Our Father in heaven, make us obedient children of home and thee.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

MOTHER'S LOVE.

"Thy mother is like a vine in thy blood."—Ezk. 16:10.

Washington Irving wrote: "The love of a mother is never exhausted, it never changes, it never tires. It endures through all; in good repute, in bad repute, in the face of the world's condemnation, a mother's love still lives on."

We have a mental picture of our sainted mother, sitting, with a steady gaze of unspeakable love fixed upon her son, pouring into his soul a radiance of tenderness which might awake a stone to life; and from acts of obedience and love we have seen that radiance dissolved into a satisfaction which seemed to repay her for all her care, worries and sorrows, which were bestowed upon her life for the bringing up of a son.

If such is the case with Mother, is not the same true with God, who made her, and is he not satisfied, too, when our loyalty and faith is expressed in our obedience and love to him?

You struggled blindly for my soul
And wept for me such bitter tears
And through your faith my faith grew whole
And fearless of the coming years.

For in the path of doubt and dread
You would not let me walk alone,
But prayed the prayer I left unsaid
And sought the God I did disown.

You gave to me no word of blame
But wrapped me in your love's belief,
Dear love, that burnt my sin like flame,
And left me worthy of your grief.

—Hester J. Radford.

Prayer—Our Father, we love mother, and we love thee who gave her her life for this world. We pray that nothing may come into our lives to mar our souls and make us unfaithful children. We would live worthy of thy love and thy grace, now and forever.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

MOTHERS WANTED.

"His mother's name was Zibiah, and Joash did that which was right in the sight of the Lord."—II. Chron. 24:1, 2.

"Unfeigned faith that is in thee, which dwelt in thy grandmother Lois, and thy mother Eunice; and I am persuaded that in thee also."—II. Tim. 1:5.

Think of a child growing up without reverence, without an upward affection, in whom there is nothing sacred; a life with no heaven, with no encircling world save that of men and women ministering to one another's wants, and that at a price to add to one's own coffers. A child whose spiritual imagination is wholly undeveloped, is satisfied with nothing, and with no guide or hope for satisfaction.

It is a sad picture to realize how few homes have family prayer these days. It is a sad awakening to this writer to realize how little the youth of this day, coming to his care, knows about the Bible. Reference to Bible stories or truths are unknown to so many, and preaching is foreign language to them. What can be expected in the oncoming generation?

We are told that Napoleon once remarked: "The old systems of instruction seem to be worth nothing; what is yet wanting that the people should be properly educated?" A woman answered him, and said, "Mothers."

"Yes," said Napoleon, "here is a system of education in one word. Be it your care, then, to train up mothers who shall know how to educate their children."

Here is a striking testimony to the power of home influence and a striking reminder of what humanity needs most. What a blessing it would be to humanity if men and women everywhere could be referred to in terms of their mothers, and for that reason it can be said, "They do right in the sight of the Lord."

Wellington is quoted as saying, "Educate children without religion, and you make a race of clever devils."

Prayer—O Lord, our God, we are so unworthy of thee and thy life; we have fallen so far short of our duty to those entrusted to our care. Forgive us, and enable us to do something to make amends for our lack in training those entrusted to our care. We are the makers of men and women for the world and for thee. O God, save us from failure in doing our whole duty.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

CHRIST ONLY ALWAYS.

"I am the way, the truth and the life, no man cometh unto the Father but by me."—Jno. 14:16.

"I am the door; by me if any man enter, he shall be saved."—Jno. 10:9.

"Thine ears shall hear a word behind thee, saying, this is the way, walk ye in it."—Isa. 30:21.

"The wayfaring man, though a fool, shall not err therein."—Isa. 35:8.

Christ is the only way in all human needs. All other ways come to futility and failure. Therefore, he is the necessity of our reaching the confessed goal of life; the harmonies of life, and happiness.

We all realize that sin estranges from God, and many, who least intend to do so, fall by the way-side and suffer separation from him. There are so many false steps made in unguarded moments that man and his Divine Father are lost to each other.

Such lost ones Christ came to find. Like a shepherd seeking the lost sheep, so he calls unto his lost ones. In this way he is the way of man to the Father. "Whosoever will may come," and when one comes the guilt of sin is removed, the sin is forgiven and the lost is found and restored to the Father.

Do not make the mistake of thinking that self-righteousness is "the way," even if it could reach perfection it would not be the "Way." Do not depend upon God's mercy as the "Way," for salvation is in justice as well as in mercy, and mercy alone would annul justice. The guilty cannot go clear; God is righteous as well as gracious. The principles of living the way of Christ are the groundwork of salvation.

There is only one way
From death to life for me,
It is by thee, O crucified!
I, also, in thy death have died,
And since thou livest, live in thee,
Who art the living way.

There is only one way
Of righteousness for me.
O Jesus risen—living now—
I draw my life and strength from thee,
Who art the living way.

—Divall.

Prayer—O Lord, thou art able to save all who come to thee and make our union with the Father complete. We cry unto thee through Jesus the Good Shepherd, to gather us up into thy bosom and save us forever.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

PULMOTORS.

"Wilt thou not revive us again?"—Read Psa. 85:1-7.

Pulmotors are proving themselves increasingly useful as the public becomes familiar with them. Many a fall into the water that would have been fatal has been defeated by the pulmotor. Many a family overcome by escaping gas has been restored to life. The pulmotor produces respiration artificially. It takes the place of lungs until the lungs start functioning again. It is a blessed agency of civilization.

And what the world of applied science has been so slow to learn, the church has been doing,

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, Pastor.

MOTHER'S DAY.

By Rev. SLADE WYATT PHILLIPS.

"There stood by the cross the mother of Jesus."—John 19:25.

The second Sunday in May is the day for the annual recognition of Mother's Day. A woman originated it. She was Miss Anna M. Jarvis, of Philadelphia. Here is the story of the start, as narrated in The Congregationalist: "Good motherhood is the basis of all our prosperity. In this single sentence, Miss Anna M. Jarvis, originator of Mother's Day, expressed at once her economic creed and her loving inspiration for her noble idea. Of course, the conception could have sprung from only one source—the undying influence of some good mother. That child was Miss Jarvis. Between Mrs. Jarvis and her daughter there must have obviously been unusual ties, and intimacy and comradeship that even death could not disperse. "She was an old-fashioned mother, said Miss Jarvis. Home and Sunday School were her chief interest. May God give the coming generation many such mothers as Mrs. Jarvis.

"May seems in many ways a memorial month, said Miss Jarvis. Indeed, practically the whole month is given over to the commemoration of Mary, the mother of Jesus, among our Catholic friends. Jesus was born in May, according to the Scriptures. Then, too, it does not interfere with any of our Protestant occasions, and lastly, it is a kind of a link between the spirit of the Passover, and Children's Day. So Miss Jarvis chose the second Sunday in May for a great New Memorial Day which leaps across national frontiers and stops not of ocean or continents. So with the poet, we may say:

Her love outlasts all other human love,
Her faith endures the longest, hardest test,
Her grace and patience through a lifetime prove
That she's a friend—the noblest and best.

TRIBUTES TO MOTHER.

By great men, who attribute their greatness to their mothers:

"God bless my mother; all that I am, or hope to be, I owe to her."—Abraham Lincoln.

"All that I have ever accomplished in this life, I owe to my mother."—D. L. Moody.

"My mother was the making of me."—Thomas A. Edison.

"In the remark which you make, speak of her as a simple-minded, simple-hearted, earnest, Methodist Christian. Make no reference to me; she gained nothing by any position I have filled, or honors that may have been paid me. I owe all this, and all I am, to her earnest, modest, sincere piety."—U. S. Grant to Dr. Howard Henderson, her pastor, at his mother's funeral.

These are the kind of mothers we need, and must have, or our civilization cannot stand.

The nation's menace of today is the pleasure-loving mother.

The boys and girls of today are the hope of our civilization of tomorrow. Your child of today is the business man or woman, the home-maker, the teacher, the president, judge, legislator, statesman, preacher, bandit, thief, murderer, highwayman or tramp of tomorrow. Your boys and your girls will be the fathers and the mothers of tomorrow. They are today the clay in the hands of the potter (Mother), molding them into vessels of honor or dishonor.

The destiny of America is in her hands; the nation's civilization, the nation's hope, depends upon the children of today.

Thirty-one million, five hundred thousand children, says a weekly publication—30% of the population of the United States—are under 14 years of age.

The child population of the United States is greater than the entire population of the 21 States west of the Mississippi, including Wisconsin. The total population of the United States in 1860 was only thirty-one million, four hundred thousand. We have enough boys and girls of 19 years and under to replace the entire population of France; enough under 14 to repopulate Canada almost four times.

From these thirty-one million and four hundred thousand boys and girls will come tomorrow's presidents, legislators, judges, authors, artists, musicians, teachers, inventors, fathers and mothers. They are the hope of America; comingling of the world's civilization, they are the hope of the world.

"The mother's heart is the child's schoolroom. When God thought of mother, he must have laughed (I say this reverently) with satisfaction and framed it quickly—so rich, so deep, so divine, so full of soul-power and beauty was the conception."—Henry Ward Beecher.

Again, let me say, give us old-fashioned, God-fearing, devil-hating, sock-darning, beefsteak-frying, pants-patching mothers, and we will win the battle for civilization.

The bravest battle ever fought!

Shall I tell you where and when.

On the maps of the world you find it not—

'Twas fought by the mothers of men!

But in a walled-up woman's heart—

Of a woman that should not yield,

But bravely, silently, bore her part—

Lo, there is that battlefield!

No marshalling troops, no bivouac song,

No banner to gleam and wave;

But oh, these battles, they last so long—

Yet faithful still as a bridge,

From babyhood to the stars.

She fights in her walled-up town—

Fights on and on in the endless wars.

Then, silent, unseen, goes down.

Oh, yet, with banners and battle shot,

And soldiers to shout and praise!

I tell you the kingliest victories fought,

Were fought in those silent ways,

Oh, spotless woman, in a world of shame,

With splendid and silent scorn.

Go back to God as pure as you came—

The kingliest warrior born!

There is nothing so stupendous as a mother's love. It never fails to prove its worth in time of great need.

"There stood by the cross of Jesus, his mother." Oh, what manner of love!

The dull sun is trying to shine, through a cold, clammy billow of smoke—

I'm one of the town's down-and-outers; I'm cold, and I'm hungry and broke.

The chill wind is sweeping the gutter; is whirling the crystalline snow;

The cynical, self-centered crowd, ignores me as onward they go.

I feel like a thing that is hunted, sometimes like a creature at bay,

And reckless thoughts torture my spirit—they tempt me to plunder and slay.

But still there are forces that check me, somehow, in my misery and woe;

The songs and the prayers of my mother restrain me wherever I go.

"You've failed," says the voice of temptation; "Go, boy, you have nothing to fear.
But swiftly that strain, "Rock of Ages," my memory recalls with a tear.

So blow, then, ye wild winds of earth! My spirit is steeled for the fray.

I'll meet her up yonder, I know; redeemed on that wonderful day.

My mother's influence in molding my character was conspicuous. She prayed for me before I was born, that God would give her a preacher. To that discipline and patient, accurate resolve, I owe not only much of my general power of taking pains, but the best part of my taste for literature. So I am grateful to God for the prayers of my mother, prayed before I was born.

Backward, turn backward, oh time in your flight,
Make me a child again just for tonight.
Mother, come back from the echoless shore,
Kiss from my forehead the furrows of care,
Smooth the few silver threads out of my hair,
Over my slumbers your loving watch keep—
Rock me to sleep mother, rock me to sleep.

"There stood by the cross of Jesus his mother."

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street Richmond, Virginia

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

A few days after you read this letter will be Mother's Day. No son or daughter should let this day pass without sending mother some kind of greetings. Mothers will look for them. They will be disappointed if they do not receive them. If every child will just stop and think what mother has meant to them and their life, and how she sacrificed to rear them, they would not let the day pass without remembering mother in some way on that day. Then you will never know just how much joy it will bring to her hungry heart.

Children sometimes leave the old home nest and get busy with the problems of life and forget to write to mother, unintentionally, however, and mother patiently waits for a letter from her dear boy or girl that so often fails to come, and her dear heart grows hungry for just a few lines from those who are so near and dear to her. The good influence of a good mother follows one all through life. You cannot shake it off if you want to. It stays with you.

If every boy and girl would obey the teachings of mother, and never do anything in life that they would be ashamed to go and sit down and talk it over with mother, this world would be different.

The writer wants to appeal to every child that has a loving mother to remember her on Mother's Day—a card, a letter, a telegram, flowers, or messages of some kind to let her know that you are thinking of her.

INEFFICIENT WHISTLES.

"All the workers of iniquity boast themselves."
—Read Psalm 94:1-9.

The big steamboat whistle has been tried and found wanting. A whistle of ten or twelve inches in diameter will require several hundred horsepower to blow, and only about one per cent of all that energy is returned in sound. A little siren would be heard much farther.

It is well for each of us to consider how much force we are putting into the noise we make, and how far, after all, that noise carries. We may discover that our balance is no more favorable than that of the steamboat whistle.

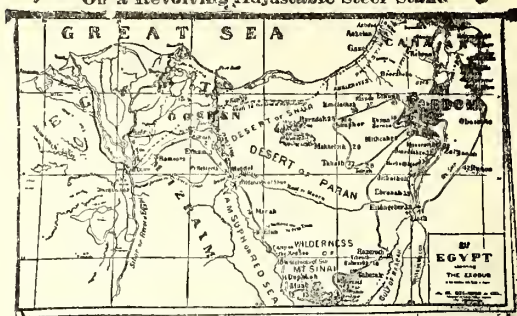

The secret of being heard afar is not noise but thought, it lies in having something worth hearing afar. If we have that, though we only whisper it to our neighbor, it is likely to travel around the world.

Prayer—Speak thou in our speech, thou over-soul. Vitalize our thinking and energize our feeling. Enable us to tell men what thou desirest of them, and they will hear.—Amen.

A Story for the Children

THE SHIP-BUILDING TREE.

By ROBERT SPARKS WALKER.

"What is the most wonderful thing you ever heard about a tree?" Wendell Paxton asked his dad as the boy was poring over some questions the answers to which were to be turned in the next morning.

Mr. Paxton dropped the newspaper on his lap, removed his spectacles and without turning to look at his son, said, "Let's see: I know a tree that builds balloons, one that makes airplanes and another that builds ships that sail the seas." "Aren't you joking, dad?"

"Not at all." They both laughed as if it were really a good joke.

"Real ships?" Wendell insisted.

"Yes, real ships; and each ship that sails on the ocean carries one living passenger," Mr. Paxton assured him.

"I can't imagine an old tree putting on an apron, then taking a saw and hammer, a pocket full of nails and making a ship," Wendell fancied.

"Of course, the tree doesn't build a ship as a man makes one, but it performs the task in such a quiet way that it never makes a sound loud enough for any person to hear." He sent Wendell for a coconut which some friend in Florida had posted to him a week before. It still had the thick husk on it, which was partly green.

"Here it is, dad." Wendell placed the heavy nut in his father's lap.

"This is a perfect ship, built by the coconut tree," his father assured him, and he got up from his chair and started for Mrs. Paxton's lily pool in the back yard. Then he gave the coconut back to Wendell and asked him to drop it in the water.

Every time Wendell turned the coconut over, it flipped around, holding up a certain part out of the water each time. No matter how hard he tried to force it to float on its top or sides, the coconut flatly refused to do it.

"Take this lead pencil and draw a black line where the water strikes the hull," Mr. Paxton directed, as he threw a long lead pencil to Wendell, who marked it off in a heavy black line.

"That is the ship's water-line. See, it lists a little to the starboard," Mr. Paxton reminded him.

"Yes, and did you see how Nature has painted the part that lies beneath the water?" Wendell observed.

"I was just looking at that, myself," Mr. Paxton replied.

"But why does it persist in floating in a certain way?" Wendell was anxious to know.

"Take this pocket knife and cut away the part of the old husk that lies above the water-line," Mr. Paxton directed. In five minutes Wendell had removed it, and there were left three coconut eyes exposed.

"I know; I know!" Wendell shouted. "The coconut ship is determined to keep its three eyes out of the water."

"I think you have the right idea this time," his father assured him.

"Now, tell me all about this ship, for I have gone about as far as I can by myself," Wendell admitted.

"Surely, you can name at least three things that every ship must have to make a successful voyage on the sea," his father said.

"I might be able to guess. Let's see: fresh water for the passengers to drink, for no one can live after swallowing salty water. Then the ship must have a sail, and an anchor."

"Okay," Mr. Paxton encouraged him.

"When you see a coconut tree growing on the seashore, remember it was set there by Nature. During the summer time the coconut tree was busy making ships up in its top. When the big nut dropped to the ground, an incoming tide swept it out into the ocean. As the billows tossed it about, the fresh, sweet water inside the shell quenched the thirst of the nut-passenger. The sea water is salty and it must be kept out of the passenger's eyes, otherwise it will kill the one aboard," Mr. Paxton told him.

"I see," said Wendell.

"As the ship floats on, there grows a mast through the largest eye, and in its top it spreads a green-leaf sail. Now our ship has something to propel it. On and on it floats. Then there grows out of one of the other eyes an odd-looking anchor, which is a root that sprouts from the nut. The ship sails on for perhaps a hundred or a thousand miles until the tide leaves it lying on some strange shore. Before the next tide comes in, the anchor root reaches down into the ground and anchors the ship so that it will not move again. The mast grows into the tree trunk, the sails into the crown and the anchors make the roots. When the tree is old enough, it begins to make coconut ships, just as its mother-tree did," Mr. Paxton explained.

"Believe me, this is the most wonderful thing I ever heard in my life about plants or trees. Thanks, dad; a thousand times. Gee, won't I surprise my teacher tomorrow," Wendell almost boasted as he sat down to write out the story, for fear he might forget part of it before morning.—Advance.

ELON COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

South Entrance to the Campus

ELON COLLEGE, founded by the Christian Church in 1889, has fully justified the faith and hope of its founders during its 42 years of operation. Its graduates from the four-year course leading to a bachelor's degree, number 980, now living, 122 of whom are in the Christian Ministry and full-time Christian service. The majority of these are members of our own denomination. In addition, 449 are in educational work and are an active influence in the lay leadership of the Christian Church.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION BUILDING, and the definite religious atmosphere of the College, provide the very best facilities available for training for religious leadership, and offer the Church its finest opportunity to train the young people of the denomination to assume active leadership both in the ministry and laity of the local churches.

OBITUARIES

COON.

Mrs. Sallie Adline Page-Coon was born August 10, 1905, and died April 1, 1934, at the age of 28 years, 7 months and 21 days.

She is survived by her husband, J. A. Coon, and the following children: Franklin, Ruby, Roberta and Beatrice; also one brother and two sisters: Arthur Page, Mrs. Alice Sheppard, Mrs. Myrtle Stanley; two half-brothers, E. L. Page and P. T. Page. An infant preceded her to the spirit land about three weeks.

Sister Coon professed faith in Christ in girlhood and joined Monticello Christian Church, where she was faithful until the end.

Mrs. Coon was a kind and affectionate wife and a loving mother. She was greatly beloved by all who knew her.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer on Easter Monday at 2:30 P. M., at Camp Springs M. E. Church, and interment was made in the church cemetery. May the good Lord comfort all who weep.
L. L. WYRICK.

HITE.

Mrs. Mary Bell Hite was born in Halifax Co., Va., in the year 1860, and died at her home in Virgilina, Va., April 6, 1934. She was the daughter of the late Pendleton and Balsury Tuck, and is the last of her immediate family. Her two brothers, E. R. A. Tuck and Hal Tuck, and two sisters, Lucy and Till, preceded her in death by several years. About the year 1908, she married William Hite, of Halifax County.

Sister Hite united with Union Christian Church more than sixty years ago, and was a faithful member until death. She was industrious, economical and a good business woman.

In keeping with her request she was buried at Liberty Christian Church by the side of her sister, Lucy, to whom she was greatly devoted. She leaves eleven nieces and nephews and a number of other relatives. For years she was in declining health and at times suffered much. Her testimony, when she realized the end was not many days away, was, "There is a home for us all."

C. E. NEWMAN.

JONES.

Paul Jones was born in Halifax Co., Va., February 10, 1866, and died at his home, Nathalie, Va., April 11, 1934, age 68 years, 2 months and 1 day. In the year 1889 he married Miss Bettie Claybrooke, who died March 11, 1930. To them were born four children. One died when quite young. Rebecca lived to young womanhood, Gracie, who married Mr. Charlie Wilkins, died in 1930, leaving two children, Edith and Nurman. The surviving child is Mrs. W. W. Satterfield of Cluster Springs, Va. There are eighteen grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

On November 26, 1931, Brother Jones married Miss Bettie Owen, who survives him.

He united with the Liberty Christian Church in 1912, and about the following year was ordained to the office of deacon, serving until death. He was a prosperous farmer and had many friends.

The funeral was held at the home on Thursday afternoon, April 12th, conducted by the writer and Rev. Mr. Kester, and the burial was in the family cemetery. The esteem in which he was held was shown by the large crowd present and the beauty of the floral offerings.
C. E. NEWMAN.

COOK.

In the death of Mrs. Eliza J. Cook, Bethlehem Christian Church (Alamance Co., N. C.), and the Ladies' Aid Society have lost a faithful member who had given many years to her church and its work.

It is with a feeling of deep sorrow that we speak these words in memory of her, realizing that in her going we are doubly bereft because we lose her presence and her influence for good as well.

Therefore, be it resolved:

That while we miss her presence, we will not mourn her passing, for we know the joys of heaven far surpass any earthly pleasures. Rather shall we try to emulate her virtues and loyal adherence to her church, remembering that by our works we are known.

That we send a copy to the family and one to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

Catholics Take Action.—

A pledge to remain away from the "vile and unwholesome motion pictures" will be taken by members of the Legion of Decency, now being organized in the Catholic Church of America. Members of the Legion pledge themselves to arouse public opinion "against the portrayal of vice as a normal condition, and against depicting criminals of any class as heroes and heroines, presenting their filthy philosophy of life as something acceptable to decent men and women." The pledge extends to condemnation of "suggestive advertisements on bill boards, at theater entrances and in newspapers, and the favorable reviews often given to immoral pictures in the daily press." Members may attend pictures "which do not offend decency and Christian morality."—Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

First Buyer Gets His Pint.—

Virginia's first liquor dispensary opened Tuesday afternoon of this week in Richmond. Others were opened later in the afternoon, and were kept open that night. "Business was good at all of them," says a local paper, "with lines of would-be purchasers standing in the rain waiting their turn." Indeed, the crowds were so good that one store, at least, was still open at 11 P. M. Editorially, the local paper quoted above wonders if the people will do their duty by patronizing the liquor stores. A special session of the legislature was called that this debacle might be made legal in Virginia—that Virginia might receive the revenue; but it seems now that in order to compete with the bootlegger, the prospects of revenue have faded, and there is talk of calling another extra session to look elsewhere for cash to run the government.

Stock Market Rules.—

A stock-market regulation bill has become a fact. One columnist remarks that "it begins to look as if the safest place in the world for a man to be from now on" is in the stock market, and adds that the government is giving more protection against stock-brokers than against kidnapers. Seriously, the amount of red tape which will have to be used in the future operation of the market, bids fair to be more than the ticker tape used. Incidentally the bill has caused a serious rift in Democratic ranks. Senator Carter Glass, who is recognized as the Senate's leader on such affairs, was not appointed by Chairman Fletcher as a conferee on the control bill. This the Senator characterized as "an affront and intended to be." Now that the measure goes to conference without the veteran member, he may again experience the chagrin of seeing a measure bear his name without bearing his own ideas. Chairman Fletcher's excuse for the non-appointment was a greater rebuff than the act itself. He stated that he wanted "to get legislation, not argument." Senator Robinson, Democratic floor leader, has just one more worry added. He is busy trying to patch up this first major party break in the Senate.

Making the Moros Friendly.—

Four years ago the atmosphere was tense with apprehension in Lanao, Dansalan, Philippine Islands. A series of little wars were on between Moros and constabulary; hatred smoldered in Moro hearts against Government. Officials attempted little more than suppression by violence of any evidence of revolt. Today, instead of glorying in their outlawry, the Moros are boasting about their progress in literacy. They mingle with Christian Filipinos and Government officials with a minimum of friction. And the Moros will tell you that the credit for this change may be given in large part to the Christian mission. Dr. Frank C. Laubach by his personality and introduction of an alphabet has broken down prejudices against Christianity, won the friendship of Moro priests, and diverted energies into new and constructive channels. Rev. Frank J. Woodward, with agricultural advice, is aiding the Moro farmer as well as Filipino, and making friends throughout the area of northern coast of Mindanao.—Overseas News.

Father Coughlin and the Silver Issue.—

It seems very likely that the country-wide influence of Father Coughlin, the Detroit radio priest, will be seriously lessened by the news that while he has been battling for remonitization of silver his own "Radio League of the Little Flower" stood—and still stands—in a position to profit immensely by the adoption of his silver theories. Father Coughlin protests that he would not profit to the extent of a penny, but many people will be quick to sense the connection between the financial condition of the Radio League and Father Coughlin's prestige and power. Not to judge a man's motives too harshly, particularly when we have no way of knowing personally what they may be, it is still fair to point out that Father Coughlin's vast prestige came partly because of his churchly background and the implicit faith of his hearers that at least in him they had a public spokesman uncontaminated by any of the devious connections, personal and political, which are innately expected in most public figures. That faith must be pretty badly shaken by the silver episode.—The Christian-Evangelist.

Speedy Justice.—

Two kidnapping cases that proved to be out of the ordinary, were the Gettle case, Los Angeles, Calif., and that of little June Robles, of Tucson, Ariz. In each instance the kidnapped person was released without a ransom. In the case of William Gettle, his rescue was accomplished by a raid on a house which had been suspected of harboring bank bandits. Three men and two women were arrested in connection with the case, and in a scant twenty-four hours after their victim had been released, the men had been sentenced to terms of life imprisonment in San Quentin prison. The trio were given the choice of pleading guilty to a charge of "kidnapping for ransom and robbery," or of standing trial under the California law, which provides the death penalty, where the victim has suffered bodily injury. They grimly chose the former. In the case of the little Robles girl, she was freed upon information furnished, evidently, by one of her kidnapers. Either the trail had grown too warm, or the kidnapper suffered a change of heart. The police have not been so successful in locating the offenders here as they were in California, but claim that they are on their trail. Speedy justice is one of the greatest needs of America today.

Another Billion for "Recovery".—

Early this week the President sent to Congress asking for $1,422,000,000 additional funds to "taper off" recovery expenditures during the coming fiscal year. $940,000,000 of this amount was assigned to general relief and public works, and Mr. Roosevelt asked for a free hand in spending this stupendous sum. The remainder would be for specific purposes. Accession to the request on the part of Congress will increase the government debt to the all-time peak of $31,834,000,000, or approximately $265 for each man, woman and child in the United States. This takes no account of State and local debts, which are always a first claim against the taxpayer. In connection with this request, the person who thinks at all cannot help but raise the question as to how the debt is to be repaid. David Lawrence, writing in the Saturday Evening Post, calls attention to the fact that if Uncle Sam continues to borrow without regard to the fact that the individual taxpayer must pay the debt back, then we are faced with a break-down in the Nation's credit and damage to our whole economic life. Under the present policy, we are piling up such a debt, that rich and poor alike will feel the pinch of it as never before. The estimated amount of all taxes for the present year is $16,000,000,000, and the national income is placed at about $40,000,000,000. Thus it is seen that about 40 cents out of every dollar earned this year will go for taxes in some form. It is obviously impossible to balance a budget under such conditions. It is as necessary that the government live within its means as it is for the individual. The only alternative is bankruptcy. The sooner Mr. Average Citizen wakes up to this fact, the sooner will the country start on the road to real recovery.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Rev. Jas. H. Lightbourne, D. D., Burlington, N. C., was the preacher of the baccalaureate sermon of the Elon High School in the school's auditorium, Sunday evening, May 13th.

We are happy to learn that friend J. A. Kimball, of Mt. Auburn, who was wounded some months ago in an automobile accident is steadily improving and was able to attend the services on Memorial Day.

The sympathy of her many friends in the Southeast is extended to Miss Annie Campbell, Extension Worker for Georgia, upon the death of her father at Winter Park, Fla., where he had made his home for many years.

Rev. Milo J. Sweet, Elon College, was the preacher at the Memorial Day service, Mt. Auburn Church, Warren County, N. C., Sunday, May 13th. A great audience was present, we are told, and they heard him gladly.

Rev. Dale O. Sander, we learn, has resigned as pastor of our Reidsville, N. C., Church, the resignation to take effect immediately following the third Sunday of July. Brother Sander plans to move to Ohio at the close of his Reidsville pastorate.

Rev. G. D. Hunt, Lanett, Ala., writes that owing to the illness of his wife he was unable to attend the recent sessions of the Southern Convention, but throughout the sessions was deeply interested in and was praying for the success of the Convention.

Rev. W. T. Scott, Winston-Salem, N. C., delivered the Baccalaureate Sermon at Walkertown High School at 11 A. M., and at Stokesdale High School at 2:30 P. M., May 13th. Mr. C. L. Wicker, graduate of Elon College, Class of '32, is principal of the Stokesdale High School.

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of our Virginia Valley Conference meets Thursday and Friday, June 7th and 8th, with Palmyra Church, near Edinburg, Va. The fact that Roy A. Larrick, Winchester, Va., is president of the Convention and chairman of the Program Committee guarantees a great session and an excellent program.

Rev. G. C. Crutchfield, pastor, Graham Providence-Memorial Church, has been fortunate the past ten days in having with him in revival services Rev. J. F. Morgan, of our Rosemont Church, Norfolk, Va. Brother Crutchfield and Brother Morgan were welcome visitors at Elon the past week and reported the meetings going well with hopeful outlook and results.

Our Sunday Schools or churches desiring programs, or program material, for Children's Day exercises should address "Congregational Publishing Society, 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass." The material for the Children's Day this year seems to be quite attractive, and we think will supply the need of any and every church and school putting on a Children's Day program.

We wonder if all CHRISTIAN SUN readers are following Miss D. P. Cushing in her sketches for THE SUN each week of one of our missionaries. The sketch this week of Dr. Ennis, under the caption (page 8), "The Ovimbundus Love Them," is a fair and fine sample of what Miss Cushing is doing for our readers in acquainting us with our own real, live, active missionaries.

The Elon Singers, under the direction of Prof. Steere, head of the Music Department of Elon College, have given a good account of themselves in many quarters where they have appeared this spring and put on such excellent programs. The Singers have been given a cordial welcome and applause in the cities and churches where they have appeared. We are glad to accord them space in this week's SUN that our readers may know of them and their work.

We are pleased to give space in this week's SUN to "My Impressions of the Suffolk Convention" by several who attended. On all sides we are hearing expressions of joy and gratification at the spirit and results of the Convention. Many have remarked to THE SUN's editor that it was the greatest and best of all our sessions thus far. Harmony prevailed and the spirit of brotherly love and Christian fellowship obtained throughout the sessions and in all phases of the Convention.

Rev. and Mrs. R. T. Grissom, of our Carroll County, Va., work, write, May 9th: "Our work is very encouraging this spring. Last Sunday our services were fine and every person in our community here at Elk Spur was present except two or three who were sick. Our revivals begin June 10th. We crave the prayers of our fellowship in behalf of the work and workers here and those who should be reached through our efforts. We have heard from two good friends offering organs, and this is very encouraging and we certainly hope to have these organs before our revival begins."

Rev. J. L. Neese, Palm Street, Greensboro, is rejoicing over the privilege and joy of a series of revival services with Rev. M. T. Sorrell, pastor of our Third Avenue, Danville, Va., Church. Brother Neese began, with a capacity house, on Monday night, April 23rd, and the meetings continued till and including Saturday night, May 5th. There were overflow audiences at practically every service, the house being packed at each service. It was a real revival of great joy, with possibly one hundred or more converts. Brother Neese is to be this week in a series of meetings with his son, Rev. J. E. Neese, pastor of our Carolina Church.

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference will meet in regular annual session, Thursday and Friday, June 21st and 22nd, at Berea Christian Church (Alamance Co.) Rev. G. C. Crutchfield, pastor. Mr. W. B. Truitt is president of the Convention, Rev. Wm. T. Scott, is corresponding secretary, and Mr. W. T. Dunn is vice-president and in charge of Christian Endeavor Department. It is hoped that every Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Society will plan to have representatives at this session. The program will be completed and sent out within the next few days.

In all quarters, from ministers and laymen, come high approval and universal satisfaction at the splendid manner in which Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, D. D., Durham, N. C., presided over and directed the destinies of the recent session of the Southern Convention at Suffolk, Va. It was Dr. Harrell's first session in the president's chair, but so well did he do his work that one would have judged him to be a man of several years' experience with the gavel in deliberative bodies. The Convention has made no mistake in choosing him as successor of Dr. L. E. Smith and Dr. W. W. Staley and others, whose wisdom and mature judgment guided for so many years the destinies of this great organization.

Rev. Lawrence L. Stanley, recently pastor of the Meansville Large Parish in Georgia, has become pastor of the church at Thorsby, Ala. He began his work there recently. The women of the church had the parsonage in good order and had arranged a reception for the new pastor and his wife. Miss Davison reports: "It continued to rain on the pastor's first Sunday in his church. Rain or no rain, the people came out to see and to hear the new leader. He was cordially welcomed and did not disappoint his listeners. At night the pastors of the Baptist and Lutheran Churches in town welcomed our pastor in an impressive service, and he felt that he had already been received into the Christian fellowship of the town."

The second issue of "The Missionary Herald" at Home and Abroad has reached our desk. It is, indeed, a delight to look upon, a stimulus to the mind and a joy to the heart. Look for one moment at its articles on John R. Mott; Youth Served and Being Served; Discussions Plus Work; For the Country Church; Beauty and Service at Tunghsien; A Thousand-Character Magazine; Talladega Inaugurates; Turning the Tide in Upper Montclair; William Strong and Knighton Bloom. We wish every CHRISTIAN SUN reader could and would see this May number of the Herald. Write for a copy, addressing request to Harvey L. Meeken, Agent, The American Board, 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass. or even better than that, send him $1.25 for a year's individual subscription, or still better than that, get up a club of five and send $5.00 for a year's subscription for each. One will never regret following that suggestion.

A note elsewhere in THE SUN this week from Bethlehem Missionary Society, Nansemond Co., Va., that the Society has already its full apportionment for the year is both significant and interesting. Just prior to receiving this report for THE SUN, came the verbal report that the various groups of the Missionary Society of the Elon Community Church had raised their apportionment for the year and were very happy in this achievement. We have no doubt that many others of our Missionary Societies have done likewise, though they yet have the remainder of May and June in the third quarter; July and August and September of the fourth quarter in which to go ahead with their work and thus increase their apportionments for the year. This is encouraging, indeed, and shows what can be done by those who care. Just count on the good women leading the way to spiritual recovery and to the noble work of the Kingdom.

The ministers of the Western North Carolina Conference seem well organized and are having very helpful monthly meetings, judging from their session at our Ramseur Church, Monday, May 7th. Rev. J. M. Allred, Asheboro, N. C., is the president of the Association and Rev. M. A. Pollard, the secretary. The Association was glad to welcome Dr. James H. Lightbourne, of the Burlington Church, as a member, his church being in the Western Conference. We know nothing that draws our ministers together quite like their monthly meetings for the discussion of their common problems and for the study of some helpful book or line of thought. Our Eastern Virginia Association has been going successfully through several years now, and has made a splendid contribution in cementing the fellowship of that Conference. Our Piedmont Ministers' Association (North Carolina and Virginia Conference) has gone through some years of successful meetings and is certainly a great factor in the life of this Conference. The Western Ministers' Association is in its second year, we believe. Early in the present year, the Eastern Conference Ministers organized, and we understand are enjoying their monthly meetings, Rev. E. M. Carter, of Youngsville, N. C., being the president of this Association. The ministers who do not attend these Associations of their brethren are certainly losing much, not only in good fellowship but in suggestions and helpfulness from experience in doing their great work as pastors in a Conference.

The Rural Church Institute at Duke University, planned and sponsored by representatives of eight denominations, will be conducted this year, June 11th-12th. The ten days are to be given to study, recreation and inspiration for ministers University; Paul Harris, Jr., of Washington, D. C.; Dudley D. Carroll, University of North Carolina. This Institute is under the joint auspices of Duke University and the American Friends Service Committee. Various experts in the fields of education, economics, history, law, sociology and religion will lead the classes and speak at the assembly hours."

ELON SINGERS COMPLETE SECOND SEASON SUCCESSFULLY.

With two more concerts, at Greensboro First Christian Church, and at Guilford College, and with the strenuous Elon College Commencement season remaining, the Elon Singers complete their second season of activity. And it has been an exceedingly active season. The first job of the Singers is to furnish the music for the Sunday services of the Elon College Community Church, a task which the choir has fulfilled regularly and competently. Next it has been a touring organization, giving numerous concerts in North Carolina and Virginia. In February the group trav-

Elon Singers, the group is organized into the Elon Music Club, a social and cultural organization on the campus. The Club is affiliated with the Federation of Music Clubs of North Carolina. In this capacity it has entertained two Federation functions this year, the Piedmont District Junior Contest, and the State Junior Convention.

As the Singers have greatly improved in effectiveness this year over last, so they hope to improve their work and usefulness next season. Few of the Singers will be lost by graduation, but these losses will be felt. Especially is this last true of Fletcher Moore, the accompanist for the last two years. Besides having filled his place as accompanist and soloist in a very superior manner, he is the retiring president of the Elon Music Club. DWIGHT STEERE.

MY IMPRESSION OF THE CONVENTION.

Just a word, giving my impression of the Convention in Suffolk, Va., May 1st-4th. I arrived in time for the opening service, and remained throughout the sessions. There was manifested and other religious workers of all denominations. The roster of faculty members and speakers is made up of distinguished divines and laymen who will be heard with great profit by all who attend. On the board of directors and officers of the Institute is Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, D. The charges and expenses of attending the Institute are brought to a minimum through the generosity of Duke University. Any who are interested may get the desired information by addressing Prof. J. M. Ormond, Duke University, Durham, N. C. Speaking of some features of the Institute the North Carolina Christian Advocate says: "Mrs. Franklin D. The Singers have made other numerous appearances, among them being the following: N. C. and Va. Congregational-Christian Conference at Union Ridge, Elon Night at the Paramount Theatre, Burlington, a concert for Music Week observance at Burlington, and a concert at the new United Congregational-Christian Church in Winston-Salem. Featured in the programs this year have been a double quartette, performing sacred works and English madrigals, and a comedy quartette of boys performing at one piano. Of especial enjoyment has been the work of Miss Genevieve Griffey, teacher of violin at Elon College. She has appeared on all of the regular programs of the Singers this year.

Besides the purely singing activities of the a fine spirit of unity and interest. One could but feel that the prayer made by Dr. C. H. Rowland in his devotional service at the very beginning of the Convention was answered in every particular. There was present in the hearts of all the members of the Convention a great challenge; so great was that challenge, that all the Convention was dedicated to the realization of its accomplishment. Individuality seemed to be lost, and a solidarity of purpose prevailed. One could but feel the Spirit of our Christ leading in the matter of merger, for even in this there was a great spirit manifested.

Truly, for once, the bigness of the cause and the greatness of its task had brought us to a fuller and deeper consecration. As we turned our faces homeward, we did so with a greater determination than ever to carry on in a more efficient way than ever before. One feels that in every particular our larger fellowship has a firmer grip upon us than before, and to them we pledge our best. The Convention was great in attendance, program, spirit and purpose.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF OUR CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

AFTER THE CONVENTION.

All who attended agree that our Convention at Suffolk was progressive in its meaning and measures, and wise in purposes and plans. The hundreds who attended returned to their homes inspired with the spirit of brotherly love and a united and happy fellowship.

Good and glorious as all this is, it will amount to little if we let the matter stop there. About all a Conference or a Convention can do is to mark out for us lines along which we can work at our common tasks, and inspire us in our efforts to run with patience the race set before us. We have in the next biennium the most gigantic tasks we have thus far undertaken. First of all, we are to make our CHRISTIAN SUN a real church paper throughout the Southeast in our united fellowship of Congregational-Christian Churches. THE CHRISTIAN SUN should reflect the life, the ideals, the purposes, the achievements and the faith of our churches from Virginia to Florida, from Kentucky to Louisiana, and we will fail in the task set before us by the Convention if we do not achieve this objective. THE CHRISTIAN SUN should become a weekly visitor and a household friend throughout the Southeast.

Then we have opened up this vast territory for our Christian Orphanage, since it is the only institution of benevolence and charity in all our fellowship of the Southeast. The Southern Convention has sponsored the Orphanage and brought it thus far, and it is an expression of benevolent feeling and attitude of our fellowship, and, as such, commends itself to the larger fellowship throughout the Southeast. The Convention certainly opened a wide field of approach, appeal and usefulness, both for our CHRISTIAN SUN and our Christian Orphanage.

Then the Convention, being the owner and sponsor of Elon College, opens the way and sets itself the task of clearing this institution of higher learning of all indebtedness during this biennium. Our Convention cannot go without Elon College. While the Convention has made the College, the College, on the other hand, has made the Convention, cementing it in bonds of life, love and loyalty that cannot be severed because of the common task and burden of supporting it, as well as the common joy and blessing it brings to every church in the Conferences composing the Convention, and to every home in every church. We cannot go without Elon College, and the Convention realizes this salient fact, and it cannot fail in its devotion to the College and its decision to carry on and to clear the College of its indebtedness.

And last, but not least, the Convention, during this biennium, is to cement its fellowship further in the united service of Missions. No church, no portion of the church, no segment or section of the church, grows strong or great save through its missionary effort and contribution. Our Lord instituted Missions and carries on Missions through the church, which is the only agency and institution giving itself to the task of sharing with the world the Bread of Life and the saving power of the Gospel. Through our united fellowship of Congregational-Christian Churches we are to seek to build churches here in the homeland and needy places, and in fields afar where souls are perishing without the Gospel.

The Convention did a splendid piece of work in seeking to further our work of Superannuation—that of further expressing our benevolence and caring for our aged ministers or the widows of ministers, who richly deserve and merit our love and the support of our benevolent activities.

It is now with the ministers and interested laymen and lay-women of the churches to put these plans into operation and to give themselves to the high endeavor of carrying out the purposes, the decisions and the wisdom of our Convention at Suffolk. We should each and all of us strive in the two years to come to make this, indeed, a memorable Convention and thus prepare the way to make the Conventions yet to come even more memorable.

MEMORIALS.

We are busy now in the churches holding memorial services. Cemeteries are cleared off, the mounds of loved ones are dressed and decorated with the fragrance of a love-offering, friends meet with friends, and loved ones come from afar to visit the old home church, the cemetery nearby and to refresh the memory of other days.

In such a setting and atmosphere, the most noted of all memorial should be recalled. On that occasion Jesus was the preacher and this was his text (Matt. 26:13.): "Whosoever this gospel shall be preached throughout the whole world, there shall also this, that this woman hath done, be told for a memorial to her."

This is the most noted of all memorials, since it was held in love, reverence and honor of One who, though living, was about to die. The woman had brought a love-offering, "for in that she hath poured this ointment on my body, she did it for my burial." Out of that memorial service was to go a gospel to all the world. This because the woman was honoring her Lord. People are still holding such memorial services. Their line is going out into all the earth. Their voice is not heard. Their language is not spoken, save in that offering of devotion and of love. This is what we call our missionary offering, a token of love and devotion, not to man but to God; not to share with others our love but to share our love for our Lord with others. Out of our love to him, our devotion to his saving grace, and power shall the Gospel go to all the nations. Our name, our love, our influence may not and need not go, but the name, the love and the power of our Lord shall go, and this is the meaning and the motive of the first and greatest of all memorials. The woman of Bethany made a love-offering and poured it on the head of her Lord, just as we make a love-offering, in his name, that that name, which is above every name, shall find its way into the minds and hearts and lives of others.

A WORD OF APPRECIATION.

I wish to express for myself, and for those of our Congregational fellowship who were privileged to attend, the great appreciation which we all feel for all that happened at the Suffolk meeting. First, we are grateful for the fine, cordial hospitality accorded by the pastor and people of the Suffolk Church. What a wonderful group of people they are, and what a fine spirit there is in that church!

Then we were extremely grateful for the welcome accorded us by the Convention. The fellowship of that meeting will long be remembered, and I am sure that we all have grown greatly in the sense of our unity because of the good will, the growing acquaintance, and the confidence in each other's spirit and enthusiasm as a result of the meeting.

We all feel that the merger was really completed at Suffolk. The problems that remain are minor details and can be adjusted especially by the cooperation of our representatives of the boards meeting in Oberlin. There is great satisfaction among us and we trust that there is also among the Christian group in the outcome of the Suffolk meeting. I cannot but feel that greater things are ahead for us in the united fellowship. We have great faith in the Southern Convention and we have faith also in the Southeastern Convention, Unincorporated, and believe that through it there will be laid a broad foundation of denominational fellowship in the whole Southeast and that through it there will be an undergirding of all our common interest and undertaking.

MY MEAT.

We eat meat for strength. Vegetarians say we can get sufficient strength without meat, but down through the ages men have eaten meat to sustain and strengthen their bodies. It was, therefore, an exceedingly strong and striking simile our Lord used when he said: "My meat is to do the will of him that sent me and to finish his work." The strength of our Lord Christ came from doing the will of his Father.

We met a person of weak frame, frail body, shattered physical strength; but her soul was strong, her faith was fixed, her hope was buoyant, her heart was glad. The smile on her face showed that she was feeding on meat not for the body but for the soul, and that daily she was drawing strength and doing the will of Another. Maybe her own work, the work of her hands was already finished, but her meat was to finish the work of her Lord. Many are spared beyond their physical strength and detained on earth beyond their days. They too are finishing a work not their own. Possibly, through a suffering body or a wasting frame, a worn and weary hand, they are doing the will of Another and are trying now to finish not their work, but their Father's work and to do his will. This is the source and secret of their strength, and their endurance. These are the saints who must needs be made perfect through suffering that they may show the rest of us how to dare, to do and to carry on.

THE SOUTHEAST ADVANCES.

Two years ago at Burlington, the Southern Christian Convention and the Southeast Convention of Congregational Churches made history in voting for the progressive merger of the various constituent units in that section. At Suffolk, Va., last week, these same representatives of our Congregational and Christian Churches continued to make history by putting into operation still further progressive plans for carrying out the various aspects of the merger. To one who sat in on both these historic sessions of a great fellowship there has come an increasing conviction that the brethren in the Southeast were inspired of the Lord in this undertaking.

At Burlington much of the action had to be taken on faith. These leaders were pioneering in a new field, and while great care was exercised in the attempt to make every move clear, yet, there were bound to be uncertainties and consequent lack of understanding which only time and patience could iron out. At Suffolk, the haze surrounding the earlier effort had greatly cleared, and there stood out in bold relief the great underlying principles agreed upon at Burlington which were designed to protect and strengthen each participating unit in the Southeast while at the same time bringing to the whole Southeast area a sense of broader unity and comradeship than had ever been possible before.

The Executive Committee of the new Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches, Incorporated, did a masterful and thoroughly understandable piece of work in presenting its series of recommendations designed to clarify the whole plan of operation and put it into immediate practice. The friendly withdrawal of the Christian Conferences of Alabama and Georgia for the purpose of uniting in the Congregational and Christian State Conferences of each was an example of real Christian statesmanship. Such moves are always fraught with the danger of misunderstanding, but those present at Suffolk seemed to quickly and clearly sense the wisdom of it since it is all in line with the general plan of merger being followed throughout the country. The immediate application of the Congregational Conference of the Carolinas for membership in the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches and the reception of this unit which had just voted to change its name to "Congregational and Christian" was not merely a reciprocal gesture to the withdrawal of the Georgia and Alabama Christian Churches, but was a real step toward the strengthening of the Southern Convention through the integrating of all of the Congregational-Christian work in the Carolinas and Virginia in that compact and thoroughly efficient organization which as the former Southern Christian Convention has for so many years functioned so effectively. On this new basis the Southern Convention, now composed of all the Congregational and Christian Churches of this territory should continue to grow and to develop in a marvelous way, with Elon College the very heart of both its organism and its spirit.

Another great step was in the recognition of the regional convention known as the Southeast Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches for the purpose of inspiration and promotional efforts and comprising not only the Southern Convention but the State Conferences of Florida, Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee and Kentucky as well. With the Southern Convention leading the way, these various State Conferences should steadily grow until the message and service of our united fellowship in the Southeast will rise to even greater heights.

The recognition of the Christian Orphanage by the entire Southeast as a worthy enterprise meriting the consideration of all who are benevolently inclined was a splendid thing, in that it showed a real desire to conserve all that is good in both the former groups and to strengthen them in the united fellowship.

In a still more emphatic way is this true of the endorsement by the entire Southeast of THE CHRISTIAN SUN as a regional paper. Our Congregational brethren have shown a fine spirit in seeking to get behind THE SUN throughout this territory. May we express the hope that a definite and systematic effort may be made in every State Conference of the Southeast first to furnish news of each section for weekly publication in THE SUN; second to bring increased financial support to the paper, and third, to greatly increase its subscription list. THE CHRISTIAN SUN is the very best medium through which the Southeast can most quickly come to realize and appreciate its oneness of spirit and purpose.

Still another evidence of the desire to perfect the merger is found in the action of the Southern Convention in voting two-fifths of its receipts for the Convention expense budget to the General Council in lieu of the seven cents per capita plan followed in other sections. This will serve as one more evidence of the clearly recognized fact that the vote for merger in the Southeast was genuine and sincere and that it is going to become a reality at the earliest possible moment. The Executive Committee was wise in referring to a special committee to meet at Oberlin the entire matter of financial adjustments since so many interests are involved.

This last statement leads us to say, what has been on our mind and heart from the beginning, that the very best thing about the whole movement is the fine Christian spirit which was so clearly shown at Suffolk. There are indeed many problems to be solved and many adjustments yet to be made, but with the same spirit shown at Suffolk there is no reason at all why these adjustments cannot be made. The attitude of both groups has been and continues to be that they have voted to merge, that they want to merge and that each is ready to make any necessary and reasonable concession and also every possible contribution to the end that complete merger may speedily be a reality. As one watched these recent sessions the impression grew that the two groups are already well along toward a complete oneness of spirit. And as that is accomplished, the details of organization and functioning will be worked out with comparative ease.

We have in no way attempted to cover in this article all the many fine things done at Suffolk. We have not been able to even mention many of them, not the least of which were some exceptionally fine addresses looking toward a better expression of our whole Christian life. We have sought to indicate the trend of events and above all the splendid spirit back of them. As the brethren in the Southeast continue to give themselves in thorough devotion to this cause they will demonstrate once again their ability to pioneer in new and larger fields of Christian achievement.

IMPRESSIONS OF SUFFOLK CONVENTION.

Hospitality superb! Suffolk knows how, and does it. One cannot say enough. It was perfect!

Personalities! As a presiding officer, Stanley C. Harrell showed dignity, wisdom, courtesy, firmness, self-possession and a clear understanding of parliamentary law which at once was refreshing and inspiring. It would be unfair to say he in any sense dominated the Convention, but he knew every minute what it was all about, and ruled with precision and grace, gratifying and satisfying to all. Few have ever done that.

J. O. Atkinson never shone with purer luster or greater clearness of utterance or with a keener appreciation of the weight that was upon him, nor carried such responsibilities more bravely than he did in his address following the recommendations of the Executive Board. The very air was vibrant with the spirit of the Christ at every sentence. He spoke as a man sent of God and with an authority born not of flesh but of faith, and of reason and of the spirit of Almighty God. One finds it hard to discover any prophet proclaiming his message with greater fidelity, eloquent earnestness and telling conviction. Not theories but facts; not what might be expedient, but what is true; and not hesitation, but, looking to the God of agreement, forward was the word. Wise action as quickly as doors can be opened. The Convention thanked God for Dr. Atkinson.

Other personalities were there. The faithful secretary, whose work was done so quietly that few realized how much he carried on his heart and mind. I. W. Johnson worked! But time and space fail, while others crowd into consciousness for recognition.

Clear understanding! Other great and puzzling problems confronted the Convention, but the one which meant progress of the processes of the great merger or a backward step, or at least an annoying halting step which might kill the spirit of it all, was the question of completing the merger as speedily as machinery could be set up to carry through our anxious hopes for the day to come when in organic union strength should be realized. All that was needed was clear understanding. And that came after a comparatively brief discussion in which facts came forth to satisfy practically every question. And out of this came the setting up of an active body which was given definite instructions as to its duty. The time when its results should guide to a complete understanding of the way to become completely and organically joined together seems to be the only point left out. And in the very nature of the several delicate adjustments to be made, it was quite impossible to be wise as to exact times.

One was also very deeply impressed with the gigantic task of financing Elon College. Leadership and faithful support must give it life!

I came from the Convention with a deepening feeling of appreciation of the personnel not only of the Convention, but of the rank and file of the churches back home. As a painter standing entranced before wonderful paintings one day exclaimed: "Thank God, I too, am an artist;" so I, after catching much of the spirit of this Convention, thank God that "I, too, am a Christian."

MILO J. SWEET.

MY IMPRESSION OF THE CONVENTION.

The Suffolk session of the Southern Convention was informing, inspiring and challenging. The Christian attitude with which the problems were faced sounded a hopeful and deep spiritual note. The vision of the Convention was more than local—it was world-wide. The important actions taken on the merger not only makes possible the practical consummation of the union of Congregational and Christian forces in the area of the Convention, but it emphasizes a more significant thing—a desire and spirit of mutual burden bearing and out-reach in the name of Christ.

After all, is not that the "unity" of "union"? The way is open for a great advance during the ensuing biennium.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The following copy of the Report of the Executive Board as adopted by the last session of the Southern Convention will explain the details of the merger of the Congregational and Christian Churches in the Southeast:

"We, the Executive Board of the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches, Incorporated, have considered the findings of the Committee of Ten, appointed at the last session of the Convention, to work out the details for perfecting the merger of Congregational and Christian work within the bounds of this Convention. This Board has submitted to the various Conferences the recommendations of the Committee of Ten. After due consideration of the various reactions of the Conferences to the resolutions submitted, the following recommendations, designed to further the process of perfecting the union, are submitted for the consideration of the Convention:

"1. We recommend that the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches petition the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches to recognize this Convention on the same basis as a State Conference for representation in, and relation to, and as an integral part of the General Council.

"2. We recommend that the Convention Treasurer be authorized to receive all designated funds consigned to him by Congregational Conferences, Associations, churches or individuals, to be properly disbursed as designated.

"3. We recommend that the Christian Conferences of the Carolinas and Virginia make provision for Congregational Churches to become members of said Conferences on the same basis as Christian Churches.

"4. We recommend that the Congregational Churches of the Carolinas and Virginia unite with the Christian Conference within whose bounds they are geographically located, or, they may retain their present corporate life, and, as such, become a member of the Southern Convention when such request is approved by the Executive Board of the Convention.

"5. We recommend that, pending the adoption by the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches of an official name for the united denominations, each individual church, Conference, or Association be free to retain and develop its own form of expression as to name, organized form and procedure.

"6. We recommend that the petition of the Georgia and Alabama Christian Conference, and that of the Alabama Christian Conference to withdraw from membership in the Convention and unite with their respective State Conferences of Congregational-Christian Churches be granted.

"7. Since our ultimate goal is satisfactory co-ordination of the missionary, church-building, educational and ministerial relief or superannuation work of the Southern Convention and National Boards, we recommend that a meeting of those representing these interests be held during the meeting of the General Council at Oberlin, Ohio, June 21-27, 1934.

"We further recommend that the Secretary of the General Council, Dr. C. E. Burton, and the Secretary of Missions, of the Southern Convention, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, be requested to call such a meeting, and we suggest that the following representatives be invited: The President and Secretary of the Southern Convention, the President of the Board of Education of the Southern Convention, the Chairman of the Board of Christian Education, the Chairman of the Board of Missions of the Southern Convention, the Chairman of the Board of Publications of the Southern Convention, the Chairman of the Superannuation Fund of the Southern Convention, and representatives from each of the Extension Boards of the Congregational and Christian Churches, and Dr. E. C. Gillette, Dr. F. P. Ensminger, Rev. M. J. Sweet, the Secretary of Ministerial Relief of the Congregational Church, the Secretary of the Congregational Educational Society, the Business Manager of the Congregational Publication Society.

"8. We recommend that the Southeastern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches (unincorporated) be recognized as the expression of our common fellowship, and that it be further developed for the promotion of inspiration and co-ordination of all our common interests and for the promotion of loyalty for our institutions, both missionary and educational.

WHO SHOULD GO TO COLLEGE.

Back toward the beginning of this country in the home of Daniel Webster, the question who should go to college waited for an answer. There were a number of children in the Webster home. The family did not have sufficient funds to give them all a college education. The father and mother took this question to heart and after meditation and due consideration, selected one out of the number to whom they would give the advantages of college training. As a result of this decision, one of the greatest statesmen and orators that this country has known was given to the world in the person of Daniel Webster.

Fathers and mothers today are still wrestling with this question. Not many weeks ago I was in a home where there were three children to be educated. Two of them are ready for college. The family is able to provide for only one of them to go to college. It is difficult to make decisions of this kind. However, they are being made throughout this entire country of ours.

Recently, an eminent school man, writing in a prominent magazine, insisted that not all young people who reach maturity should go to college: that not all who graduate from high school should go to college; that only those who are physically fit and mentally capable should be given such high privileges, and that even the ones of this select number should not have such privileges unless they are able to pay the necessary expense of such training. Had these contentions been rules from the beginning of our country unto this good day, there are many of our great statesmen who have made notable contributions to church and state who could never have been prepared for the service that they have rendered.

Unquestionably there are many who are enrolled in the colleges of this country today who are doing but little or nothing about it and who should be following some gainful occupation. There are many others who are deprived of the privileges of college life, who, if they had such opportunities, would be literally transformed and prepared to make notable contributions to society and to the world. As a rule the public-minded citizen who is interested in his country is anxious for the development of the citizenry of his country in order that the nation may advance along the high lines of education, culture and refinement. Resulting from these desires, if he is financially able to make provision for the training of young men and young women by setting up foundations, increasing endowments, or building colleges, he does so that the hope for higher education may be equal to all who have such ambitions.

At this season of the year, there are literally thousands of young men and young women who have reached college age, have graduated from high schools and are ready for college life. The state, the church, foundations and individuals have pooled their resources and united their efforts to provide campuses, fully equipped, for higher education that the youths of our church and state may enter college and prepare themselves more fully for life and for life's responsibilities.

There are in the United States approximately six hundred four-year colleges and five hundred junior colleges. This would seem that all who desire have the opportunity of entering college. In the State of North Carolina there are twenty-eight four-year colleges and nineteen junior colleges. Of these, thirty-two are State institutions and fifteen are church institutions. The doors of these institutions stand open and a great many of them are sending out catalogues, appeals and all kinds of advertisements urging high school graduates to enter college. Many of these institutions have field representatives, men and women, who go from town to town, community to community, and from home to home interviewing young men and young women, and not only inviting them, but urging them to use this particular period of their lives for preparation, that their opportunities for the future may be greatly multiplied. The appeals are made direct to the prospectives themselves.

The father and the mother, however, are weighing certain questions:

First, should their children go to college?

Second, are they able financially to pay their expenses?

Third, if so, should they all go or should they select one or more of their children to whom they should give the high privileges of college life?

Elon College was founded by the Christian Church, built for the purpose of offering to all who would come, the privileges of higher education. We are glad to have brilliant students. We do the best we can for them, but we do not turn those away who have been unable to make high grades in school.

Our faculty is here to give assistance and we believe that the young man or young woman of average intelligence is able to do college work with individual attention and under proper supervision.

It is our aim and purpose to take those who have not made brilliant records in school, teach them how to study and turn them out into life as brilliant students and prepare them for the responsibilities of the field they select for life's activities. I am particularly appealing to the homes of the Christian Church, and asking the fathers and mothers of our church to give us the opportunity of training their sons and daughters that the young people of our church may have something of the rich heritage that is theirs.

Our doors are open and we invite the sons and daughters of all, regardless of denomination or belief. On the campus those who come will find a note of sincerity as regards matters religious and will, themselves, be conscious of a definite religious atmosphere pervading the whole school.

We stand for high scholarship and are constantly increasing our requirements for graduation, but we also stand for high ideals in morals and living and strive in every way possible to give to those who come, a consciousness of the presence of Christ with the hope that they may know him in experience and manifest him in deeds.

If you are interested in sending your son or daughter to Elon College, please drop me a line and my young friends, if you are ambitious for a college education under wholesome and healthful conditions, regardless of what may be your record or financial status, won't you please direct to me an inquiry stating your desires and making plain your needs?

L. E. SMITH, President.

THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION.

SOME REFLECTIONS.

The Southern Convention at Suffolk made me sit up and rejoice. Its hospitality, true in the South, was bountiful, sincere, generous. Truitt and his Suffolk tribe cannot be surpassed for felicity and dispatch in making people happy. So far as I could see there was not a sour face in the entire body of delegates; everybody said it with smiles. My own pleasure was enhanced by the joy of seeing many old friends, and in coming to know others whose personalities before the Convention had been merely names.

The Convention from first to last struck a forward note. This was made evident in many ways, but I can give here only a few samples.

In the first place Congregationalists and Christians fused their interests into a united church. Beyond the result itself was the spirit that brought it about. I did not meet a single person who did not feel good over the result. No one got his whole way, of course, but everyone recognized that each decision had been made in the interest of all and in a spirit of charity toward all. There is every reason why the united church will weld its several interests into a mighty force for concerted, creative action.

In the second place, the Convention voted to undertake an aggressive plan for the liquidation of the indebtedness of Elon College. This action should make it clear to everyone that Elon has no thought of taking a backward step. On the contrary, the Convention made it clear that it expects to stand back of Elon and make it the great undergraduate rallying center for the church in the Southeast.

In the third place, the Convention revealed its forward look by requesting that Seminary opportunities be afforded to all young ministers of the South. To this end it voted that the Atlanta Seminary Foundation, now located at Nashville, be requested to move to Duke University, where it would be in easy reach of all students of the united church of the South. For Southern ministers of tomorrow, a full graduate course in religion is as necessary as a college education was for those of the older generation. The Convention was prophetic in taking this important step.

In the fourth place, the Convention envisaged the Gospel for the new age in terms of its communal message. The world is now set within a new frame of social and political reference. The redemption of the individual is wrapped up with the spiritual reconstruction of the wider relations within which individuals move. In both committee reports and in Convention messages there was a central emphasis upon the necessity of applying the Christian Gospel to the whole of life. It was recognized that human personality is sacred, and that wherever our social and industrial system subordinates personality to profits, that system must undergo Christian reconstruction.

Thus the Convention faced the future. The next thing is to strike tents and march! I am convinced that this is what the united church of the South means to do.

MOORE UNION CHURCH.

[The following sketch is sent in by the oldest male member of this old church, and should prove of interest to SUN readers.—Mg. Ed.]

Moore Union is the oldest church in the Eastern North Carolina Conference, being over one hundred years old. It was the first church in this Conference to give a special Foreign Mission offering. This offering was collected by Rev. P. T. Klapp, and was contributed by W. R. Womack, who is still living. The amount was 35 cents.

Rev. P. T. Klapp served the church longer than any other pastor, having served for 22 years altogether.

Rev. B. J. Howard is the only pastor who went out from this church.

So far as our records show, all of the former pastors have departed this life except four. The church has a present membership of about 150, including quite a few young people.

There will be a home-coming on Sunday, May 20th, and all former pastors are invited to be present and participate in the program.

The records of the church show the following pastors have served this church, all for periods of one or two years, except where noted: Rev. Feral, Rev. Rollings, Rev. Hatch, Rev. James Wellons, Rev. Bradley, Rev. Robert Tining, Rev. C. A. Boone, Rev. J. D. Wicker (4 years), Rev. D. F. Jones, Rev. P. T. Klapp (22 years), Rev. Sanders Klapp, Rev. J. W. Fuquay, Rev. A. P. Barber, Rev. Pussey, Rev. J. L. Foster, Rev. J. W. Knight (4 years), Rev. C. C. Peel, Rev. B. J. Howard, Rev. Smith, Rev. J. A. Denton and the present pastor, Rev. J. Ray Dickens.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary

READ THIS BOOK.

THE SUN's editor has seldom been so thrilled and delighted as he was recently in reading "The Christian Message for the World Today"—a book of 200 pages, carrying, as it does, a joint statement of the world-wide mission of the Christian Church by such men as E. Stanley Jones, John A. Mackay, Francis J. McConnell, Basil Mathews, Luther Allan Weigle, William Paton, and others. We were just in the act of trying to tell CHRISTIAN SUN readers something of this book when the following observation from the May Number of The Missionary Herald came to our attention and expressed our own estimate of the book far more cogently and comprehensively than we could hope to do. Our desire is that every minister of our constituency and many laymen, who really wish to get a firmer grip on what "The Christian Message for the World Today" is, will read this book and pass it on to others. The following gives some idea of the spirit and contents of this thrilling and gripping volume:

"By all means everyone interested in Christianity as a world-wide movement should read 'The Christian Message for the World Today' (a joint statement of the world-wide mission of the Christian Church, Round Table Press, Inc., New York), 1934, p. 203. Each of the chapters of the book was written by an eminent author along his own line. There was a considerable degree of collaboration between them, yet in the end each author was responsible for his own presentation. This gives the book great strength and opens the way to the weakness of unevenness of value.

"The first three chapters, namely, that on 'The Mood of Our Generation,' by Henry P. Van Dusen, that on 'The Growing Faith of Communism,' by Basil Mathews, and that on 'The New Religion of Nationalism,' by Francis P. Miller, are so brilliant and so powerful in their challenge to modern Protestantism that they alone are sufficient to give the book unusual significance. In view of the powerful solidarity of communism and modern nationalism as here presented, one is driven to renew his effort to 'give to the Community of Faith a consciousness of its existence, to put meaning into its membership and to provide channels through which it may function more continuously and effectively.'

"The authors obviously represent differing theological points of view, although there is an underlying harmony of general attitude. One notices this difference particularly between the underlying position of Dr. Weigle as shown in his vigorous and able chapter on 'The Purpose of Missions,' and the strong Bartian position of Dr. Mackay in his chapter on 'The Gospel of Our Generation.' There is a larger degree of agreement in the social and economic point of view of the authors. All who touch on the subject recognize the failure of the present economic order to express the Christian spirit, and all would have the Christian forces of the world face this problem with realism and with complete devotion to the Christian conception wherever this may lead us, and whatever sacrifices it may entail.

"Throughout the book one feels the warmth of religious conviction and the strong sense of Christian mission. As one would expect, this is particularly evident in the final chapter by Stanley Jones on 'The Motive of Missions.' 'I only know,' says Dr. Jones, 'that when I get in close fellowship with Him there comes an almost irresistible impulse to pass on what one finds there. . . . For in Him I see the hope of the race.'

"We strongly recommend this book to all pastors and Christian leaders. We anticipate that it will form a fruitful basis for many a discussion group in American churches during the coming year.

MISSIONARY VISITORS.

Those who attended the meetings in Suffolk greatly enjoyed all the contributions made by Miss Eunice Thomas to the missionary thought and interest. Miss Thomas is a missionary of the American Board in Foochow, China, now home on furlough. Following the Suffolk meetings she spoke in some of the Virginia churches and then in the churches of North Carolina through arrangements made by Miss Priscilla Chase. From there she is to go to Georgia and will visit several of the churches under the direction of Miss Annie Campbell. Her next engagement will be at the Florida Young People's Conference at DeLeon Springs, June 9th-19th. Her final engagement in the Southeast will be at the King's Mountain Conference. Her success with the young people at Suffolk is assurance that she will add greatly to the interest and benefits of the Summer Conferences.

Another Foreign Missionary, who has been making a successful tour in the South is Miss Jeanette Odell, also an American Board Missionary home on furlough. Miss Odell's field is Merzifon, in Turkey. She spent most of April in Tennessee, Kentucky and Alabama, beginning with the Rural Church School and the Collegiate Church at Nashville, Tenn. On her tour she was accompanied by Miss Marguerite Davison and in Alabama by Dr. and Mrs. Ensminger. Concerning the visitation, Miss Davison writes: "At the close of the school it was my privilege to take Miss Odell to speak in our Tennessee and Kentucky churches. We made a very quick trip throughout the area and met with the following churches: Pleasant Hill, Crossville, Grandview, Robbins, Stearns, Corbin, Chattanooga Pilgrim, Daisy, Soddy, and East Lake. At a good many of these places we met the children of the public school and the ladies in an afternoon session. Miss Odell had a busy schedule, sometimes speaking three times a day, but she seemed to enjoy the contact and the beauty of the trip through the lovely mountain section in the spring time. We had an interesting meeting with the C. C. C. at Stearns. The boys were most enthusiastic over our songs, over the costumes of Turkey, and the story Miss Odell told. I was glad of the opportunity to visit one of those camps and was pleased with the conditions I found, as well as with the group of young men.

"I deposited Miss Odell in Birmingham just in time to meet her appointment at the Birmingham Church and gave her over to the Ensmingers who were to conduct her through East Alabama and Georgia for two weeks. The Birmingham Church invited Miss Odell to speak at the Sunday night service, and a good group attended in spite of the bad weather. The next day the ladies had a Turkish luncheon in honor of Miss Odell. At least they said it was as near Turkish as they could make it with no knowledge of Turkish foods and customs. It was a most unique and pleasant affair anyway, a fitting introduction to Miss Odell's talk on the customs and costumes of the land. The question period which followed was instructive and very worth while."

THE OVIMBUNDUS LOVE THEM.

By MISS D. P. CUSHING,
News Editor, the American Board, Boston, Mass.

That the Garden of Eden may have been located in Portuguese West Africa is the intriguing suggestion offered by Dr. Merlin Walter Ennis of Sachikela, whose knowledge of the language and customs of the Ovimbundus is probably unexcelled by any living man. Dr. Ennis, when he entered the foreign field in 1903, took with him a vital interest in archaeology. He has brought back to America and left in the Logan Museum of Beloit, his alma mater, many valuable specimens.

His archaeological and anthropological research has resulted in the finding of stone implements declared by the British Museum to date back to the earliest periods known to science. They indicate quite clearly that they were used by an ancient race which died out or migrated, leaving the land of Africa to the present Zulu people. In his studies, Dr. Ennis has rubbed shoulders, figuratively speaking, with races of men who lived and worked long before the pyramids were thought of.

Dr. Ennis has general oversight of the religious and educational activities of the entire mission. He speaks Umbundu fluently, as well as Portuguese, the official tongue, and has made many translations, including the Bible. He is returning to his work after a furlough this fall. Schools, a hospital, a clinic, and a kindergarten have grown up under Dr. Ennis' supervision during his years of service.

When Mrs. Ennis was graduated from the University of Oregon, she received the Failing Prize. She took the money with her when she sailed as a bride to Africa. Later, when her young son, Merlin, Jr., was born, she set it aside for his education. At 11 years of age, he died, and the money was used as a nucleus for the funds to build the Merlin W. Ennis, Jr., Memorial Kindergarten. The dedication of this kindergarten showed how deeply enshrined in the hearts of the native Ovimbundu women and children he was. The Ovimbundu youngsters would often consult him about their personal problems, rather than the grown-up missionaries, and when misunderstandings arose from the unconsciously awkward use by the missionaries of the vernacular, it was Merlin who smoothed the wrinkles, for he spoke Umbundu like a native.

Respectfully submitted,

MRS. H. S. HARCASTLE, Treas.

BETHLEHEM WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Bethlehem Christian Church, met at the church April 11th for its regular monthly meeting.

The President, Mrs. J. M. Byrd, presided. "I Love to Tell the Story" was sung. Prayer was offered by Mrs. Edward Simpson.

The treasurer reported that the entire apportionment for the year—$158.12—had been raised and sent to the Conference treasurer.

The president spoke briefly of the splendid spirit of cooperation manifested in the group work that had made the work so far this year a success.

Good reports were given from the monthly group meetings.

Three new members were added to the roll.

Mrs. J. C. Taylor gave a very interesting and instructive report from the District Rally held at Holland, Va.

The Society voted to honor Mrs. Mary E. Pierce, a deceased member of the Society, by contributing an extra $10.00 to the cause of missions as a memorial for her.

Following the business session the program was presented by Mrs. L. V. Savage, spiritual life superintendent. Prayer was offered by Mrs. J. W. Folk.

SECRETARY.

THE PRICE OF REPEAL.

Three months ago John Barleycorn was paroled. The American people were convinced that he would be no more of a menace out of jail than in, and his friends confidently predicted that he would conduct himself as a gentleman. And so on a cold December day, the questionable gentleman was given his freedom.

Now, the Los Angeles Times, which allegedly was favorable to the release, reports that there has been an increase of 129 per cent in arrests of persons who have been associating with John Barleycorn in the wee hours of the morning. Double the number of drunk drivers in traffic accidents has shocked the august western journal, and this newspaper finds little difficulty in predicting a return of prohibition in due time.

Minneapolis arrested over seven thousand persons for drunkenness in 1933, which was more than any year since 1916, and in January and February of this year sizeable increases have been reported over these months last year. Nearly twice as many drunk drivers have been haled into court this February as last. Arrests for bootlegging spurted when police filled the jail Saturday night with scores of violators.

The average citizen is becoming convinced that old John's conduct isn't all that it could be. Grumblings are being heard from various parts of the country that something should be done, and that unless something is done, the day of dry "fanaticism" may return. The parole board is not in a mood to cut short the parole at the present time, and certainly the average citizen does not want it. The average citizen will insist, however, upon relatively decent conduct from the old boy that caused so many a W. C. T. U. member to parade, hatchet in hand, before his old hangouts.

There can be no excuse to turn every drug store and cafe into a saloon. People in residential districts have a right to be free from the effects of liquor on sale in buildings whose only difference from a saloon lies in their name.—The Minnesota Daily.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

SPRING-TIME AND GOD.

Whispering across the years there comes to me from childhood the voice of Springtime in a little poem which begins:

The lilacs are in blossom,
The cherry blooms are white;
I hear a sound below me—
A twitter of delight.

I shall never forget the lilac bush hard-by the old log house of my childhood days. And there were the cherry trees with their white blossoms and red ripe fruit. Beauty, fragrance, and fruitage surrounded that old house where birds sang in the trees beneath which children played. The heritage of those children was greater than they thought for the call of this recurrent springtime beauty was developing souls in a way they could not dream.

The north wind has given us many a cold blast this year and threatened the progress of spring. But the birds are singing their canticles of love; the trees are robed in new green; and flowers burst their bosoms to offer their love-gifts of fragrance and beauty. Now one can wander at will through forest and field, can sit by the brook or stand by the sea. Springtime has opened the door to the Temple of Nature and invited all of God's children to breathe pure air, bask in the sunlight, and worship where all nature sings of God.

If you want to find happiness and rest, take the two quaint little poems which follow to a quiet beauty-spot and read them aloud to the God of Nature. Then listen for his voice as you learn to read in his great book.

A-B-C's IN GREEN.

The trees are God's great alphabet:
With them he writes in shining green
Across the world his thoughts serene.
He scribbles poems against the sky
With a gay, leafy lettering,
For us and for our bettering.
The wind pulls softly at His page,
And every star and bird
Repeats in dutiful delight His word,
And every blade of grass
Flutters to class.
Like a slow child that does not heed,
I stand at summer's knees,
And from the primer of the wood
I spell that life and love are good,
I learn to read.

THE BOARD OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

The Board of Christian Education is the group that stands squarely behind the work of young people, directs leadership training, and aids in the religious educational work of our churches to the best of its ability. The editor of this page has been the chairman of the board for six years. The recent Convention in Suffolk, Va., elected members of the board who will serve the next two years, as follows: Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, Mr. C. H. Stephenson, Mr. W. H. Baker, Miss Priscilla Chase, Rev. R. L. House, Rev. John Chapman, Rev. J. F. Morgan, Rev. Geo. E. Edwards, Mrs. C. H. Rowland, and the writer, F. C. Lester. The following report was made to the Convention:

"The financial storms of the past few years have battered the barque of the Board of Christian Education, but the sails are still up, and the crew on deck, smiling. The cargo is intact; nothing has been thrown overboard. The storms have kept us from putting in at as many ports as we wanted, but we may reach them yet.

"Leadership Training records show that Summer Schools have been held at Elon and Southern Union Colleges, local schools at Norfolk, Suffolk, Newport News, Richmond, Lynchburg, and Winchester, with approximately 300 enrolled and 200 credits given.

"Young people have been aided in holding Christmas Conferences at Elon and Defiance, conducting Conference rallies, in visiting all the churches in Eastern Virginia, and in planning the biennial meeting of the Youth Fellowship of the Southeast Convention (which was held May 3rd in the Suffolk Christian Church. The chairman of the board fills a page in THE CHRISTIAN SUN each week for the Youth Fellowship. Our young people are progressing with their work, and need much encouragement and guidance.

"Vacation Bible Schools add much to the religious experience of childhood in many communities. The board has aided churches in this work by furnishing materials and workers.

"Since November, 1932, we have distributed 751 copies of the New Testament and Psalms to 10-year-old children in our Sunday Schools. A young business man pays for the books, and the board does the rest.

Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Conventions find the board to be a friendly counselor in planning programs. We also furnish a speaker, supply report blanks, and print the Convention minutes when requested to do so and finances permit.

"This board works in cooperation with the Department of Young People's Work and the Department of Leadership Training of the General Council, and with the office of the late Dr. Bloom. Resolutions passed at the last Convention anticipated the transfer of our work to the office of Dr. Bloom, but inasmuch as other mergers, especially financial, have not been made, it seemed wise to await further action of this Convention. We are glad to record that most friendly relations exist between all these departments and the board.

"With profound regret we must record the passing on August 22, 1932, of Mr. E. T. Holland, who for ten years was a faithful member of the board. Appropriate resolutions were sent to the family and recorded in the minutes of the board.

"We believe the work commissioned to this board should be supported and carried forward. The opportunities are great. The Board of Christian Education awaits the commands of the Convention to go forward, and looks to the future with hope."

THEN AND NOW.

I used to be afraid of God,
But that was e'er I knew
That he was in the fragrances
Of lilacs wet with dew.
I used to think that God was stern,
But that was e'er I found
He whispered in the violets
That purpled all the ground.
I used to turn away from God,
But that was long ago,
Before He came to walk with me
Where sweet wild roses grow.

May grace be given that I may walk therein,
Not like the hireling for his selfish gain,
With backward glances and reluctant tread—
But cheerfully, in the light around me thrown,
Walking as one to pleasant service led;
Doing God's will as if it were my own,
Yet trusting not in mine, but in his strength alone.
—John Greenleaf Whittier.

Six young people may be asked in advance to give talks on the various phases of "The Everyday Use and Abuse of Money." Six suggestive topics for such talks relating to the use of money may be: (a) Getting; (b) Spending; (c) Planning; (d) Saving; (e) Wasting; (f) Giving.

Naturally the leader will start the discussion with his own contribution. He may remind the young people that in our references to the use and abuse of money that we have condemned the capitalist and the millionaire for the ways in which they secured and used their money without saying very much about our own attitudes and actions every day. We have discussed the economic situation in the abstract without seeing our own relationship to some of the problems we were striving to solve. Much depends upon one's attitude toward money. There are men who have taken their own lives as soon as money was gone. There are criminals deprived of their liberty just because of their love of money and the ways they tried to get it. There are young people who measure the whole happiness of their lives by the amount of money they can earn or spend in a given day. Do you "use" or "abuse" money—every day?

The following questions, thought through carefully, may help the group to see the fundamental character of many of the little items of a day's life.

(a) What difference does it make if we pocket the dime in a car or bus because the attendant missed us and did not ask for our fare?

(b) What difference does it make where we get our money and how?

(c) Some people are too thrifty. Ought we to be exceptionally careful in the expenditure of every cent?

(d) What is a luxury? Try to agree on a half-dozen of the most common luxuries for which young people of your acquaintance spend too much money.

(e) We should spend money for the things which we regard as of first importance. Do you so regard the church? How ought a young person to decide how much he shall give to the church?

THE FUTURE OF THE KINGDOM.

LESSON VIII—MAY 20, 1934.

GOLDEN TEXT: "The kingdom of the world is become the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ; and he shall reign forever and ever."—Rev. 11:15.

LESSON TEXT: Matt. 24:125:30.

It was the custom in Palestine to have weddings at night. The bridegroom, accompanied by his friends, would go to the house of the bride and bring her to his own home, or to some other prepared place, where the wedding feast would be observed. Jesus tells the story of how ten young women went to meet the wedding party, how they fell asleep while waiting for it to appear, how when it did appear five of them were ready because they had an extra supply of oil, while the other five were shut out of the wedding feast because they had no oil and by the time they could get oil it was too late. Jesus introduces the parable by saying that the kingdom of heaven is to be likened unto it. What did he mean?

The Kingdom of Heaven—A Wedding.

A wedding is a time of joy. It is significant that Jesus associated the kingdom of heaven with a normal, wholesome, joyous occasion. Jesus would have us understand that joy is an integral factor in the kingdom. The kingdom of heaven is not meat and drink, but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Spirit. It is true that there is a cross in the kingdom, but there is joy in it for all that, yea, because of that. Jesus for the joy that was set before him, endured the cross. Christians have been unfair to the kingdom. They have thought of it and presented it as something that takes the joy out of life. People think that being a Christian means giving up things. As a matter of fact the kingdom is the secret of true and abiding joy.

Wise—Foolish.

"Five of them were wise"—they not only took their lamps but they took extra oil in a vessel with them. "Five were foolish"—they took no extra oil with them. It is a parable of life. There are those who make no provision for the emergencies of life. There are those who have no resources for the unexpected demands which life inevitably makes upon them. They do not face the fact that "rainy days" may come, that temptations may suddenly assail them, that crises may confront them. On the other hand there are those who in the commonplace routine of life are laying aside reserves, not only of money but of character that will help them to meet the emergencies of life.

They Nodded and Slept.

"While the bridegroom tarried, they all slumbered and slept, literally they "nodded" and slept. Many a man has fallen because he slacked his vigilance which is the necessary price which he must pay for his soul. Jesus was not teaching that a man should live under a strain all the time, but he was emphasizing the fact that there should be a certain "set of the soul," and undertone of expectancy sounding through the daily faithfulness.

At Midnight.

The emergencies of life often come at the most unexpected time. They often come when people are least prepared for them.

The Bridegroom Cometh.

This parable is so often interpreted as teaching preparedness against evil. It is also a challenge to be ready for the good. It is, of course, true that many a man has gone down under some unexpected temptation, but it is also true that many a man has been unprepared to enter into some great opportunity, or to enjoy some great experience. As Dr. Buttrick says, "The danger of the commonplace is that by force of habit it may unfit us for heaven's hour of surprise. Thus the emergency of gladness as well as of grief, finds us off-guard and unprepared."

Buy for Yourselves.

When the bridegroom appeared all the virgins rose up quickly and prepared their lamps. But alas the lamps of five of the virgins were "going out" and they had no oil with which to replenish them. When they turned to the other five virgins and asked for oil, those wise virgins said, "Not so, lest there be not enough for us and you, but go ye rather to them that sell, and buy for yourselves." It looks like a selfish and ungracious act. As a matter of fact it is a true parable of life. No man has more grace than he needs. One cannot lay up merit for another. In some things we can share with others, but not in inner resources of character or moral reserves. Every man has to prepare himself for the emergencies which he must meet. No one can pass over to another one the thing for which the oil in the parable stands. Let every man take heed unto himself.

And the Door Was Shut.

They that were ready went into the feast—because they had resources for the occasion they could enter into the joy of participation. But when the five foolish virgins came back, "the door was shut." There might have been other opportunities for them to go into a wedding feast, but that opportunity was gone as touching this particular wedding feast. We may talk as we please about opportunity always coming back, but the same opportunity does not come back. Doors are shut. There are times when it is too late.

Watch, Therefore.

We do not know when the Son of Man cometh. We need not know. We need only to do faithfully every day what has been committed to our care; we need to be on our guard against the things that lull us to sleep and weaken our vigilance, and we need to abide in the Holy Spirit so that always we shall have those added resources for the emergencies and the opportunities of life.

Mr. David McConaughy suggests the following outline to show how the idea of giving developed in the Bible:

1. "A tenth" paid by pagans (Gen. 4:3).
2. "The tenth" paid by patriarchs (Gen. 28:22).
3. "Tithes" paid by Israel (a. Lev. 27:30; b. Deut. 14:22; c. Deut. 14:28, 29).
4. "The half" paid by Zacchaeus (Luke 19:8).
5. "As prospered"; Paul's rule for free-will offerings (I. Cor. 16:2).
6. "To their power and beyond," Macedonian converts (II. Cor. 8:5).
7. "All," the poor widow (Mark 12:41).

The word starboard comes from the old Saxon steoboard—stear meaning either rudder or steer, and board, side. Starboard gets its present meaning from the time when vessels were steered by a paddle or sweep worked from the right side.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy

THEME: "Help Yourself to Happiness."

FOREWORD—The Beatitudes provide us with a complete and perfect recipe for happiness. We are substituting the word "Happy," for "Blessed" by authority of the Hebrew meaning, "O, the happiness of. . ."

The Beatitudes teach three phases of living, each a component part of life's action and all of them necessary to perfect happiness. These three are: First, personal; second, social; and third, universal.

MONDAY.

THE PERSONAL QUALIFICATION.

"Happy are the poor in spirit."—V. 3.

"Happy are they that mourn."—V. 4.

"Happy are the meek."—V. 5.

"Happy are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness."—V. 6.

"Happy are the pure in heart."—V. 8.

All these texts refer to those personal, moral, unobtrusive, inward, self-regulating qualifications which guarantee happiness.

When was one ever made happy by exalting himself, looking at everything and every person through the medium of self-importance? All kinds of wrong become possible to such an one. Humility proceeds from coming face to face with God. It is born of a sense of divine nearness, of utter dependence upon God and the recognition of the value of others. It is a virtue that moves one to prayer even in triumphant moments. Who ever was made unhappy in humbleness and prayer?

"Happy are the pure in heart." However lofty these words may seem, they offer us the possibility of happiness. "The pure in heart," we are told, means "without alloy," "clean," "clear," "simple," "single." It is to be taken as connected with the heart or mind, in purity and honesty of purpose, in all the dealings of life, and lifting those purposes to the absolute throne of God in all things, and reflecting God's spirit and God's will in all. This is holiness, and holiness has in itself the elements of happiness. For it frees from a thousand sources of pain, inward strife, from a condemning conscience, from passion and anger, envy and jealousy, and a thousand torturing thorns. Whoever has been made unhappy from such purity and loftiness?

In the same way apply the other texts and see what conclusions you draw. Help yourself to happiness.

Prayer—Our Father, in thee we live and move and have our being. We pray for the Spirit of Christ to fill our souls this day and all through life.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE SOCIAL QUALIFICATIONS.

"Happy are the merciful."—Matt. 5:7.

Are you a Christian? How do you know? Answer: Micah 6:8, "What doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, love mercy and walk humbly with thy Lord."

There are people who are as upright as a marble column, and just as cold, as stern, as hard. It is not all of Christianity to be just. Crossing our path every day are those who for various reasons trespass against us. Have mercy. Jesus believed that those who crucified him did not know what they did, and so he looked upon them with mercy and prayed that they might be forgiven.

Did being hard and vindictive ever bring you happiness? Did you ever get a happy feeling or a happy thought out of bitter words and retaliation? On the other hand, is there not always happiness in being merciful and forgiving, even if one is being imposed upon?

When one exercises mercy toward others because of his love for humanity, he learns that it is more happy to give than to receive. Help yourself to happiness.

Prayer—Our Father, thou knowest best. Let thy will be done in us.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"Happy are the peacemakers."—V. 9.

"Happy are they which are persecuted for the sake of goodness."—V. 10.

"Happy are you when men . . . persecute you . . . for my sake."—V. 11.

In these texts we have a vision of the scope of the Kingdom of God—peace for everybody—the gospel of peace to all the world, God for all and all for God. With this, the assurance that there will be sunshine in the rain. There may be physical and mental misery in persecutions, but there is great satisfaction in the effort to make peace. Whoever has been made unhappy from going about settling quarrels, bringing harmony out of discord, making friends of enemies, uniting those who are separated, setting up love in the place of hate? On the other hand a great deal of misery and unhappiness has come of envy and strife, and their kin. Nothing but misery can come of such.

Prayer—Our Father and our God, thou alone can make us peacemakers. O Lord keep us. We are so weak and frail, so full of passions of the flesh, and the devil seeks to devour us. O God, help us. Fill us with thy spirit, then will we live right and teach sinners thy way.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

CERTAIN HAPPINESS.

"Be strong therefore and let not your hands be weak; for your work shall be rewarded."—II Chron. 15:7.

In the frailties of human flesh we cannot always feel that it is possible to be happy at all times. The elements of failures, discouragements, illnesses, enemies, torpid liver, fishy temperaments, etc., get the best of us, and we worry and fret our lives away banishing happiness from us. A friend said one day, "How in the world can a man be happy and be full of rheumatism?" Even they who know the way to perfect happiness cannot always overcome this irresistible element of life.

But some one has written a recipe which sounds good. It is as follows: "When you rise in the morning form the resolution to make the day a happy one for somebody else. The cast-off garment to the one that needs it, a kind word to the sorrowful; an encouraging expression to the down and out. These may be trifles themselves, as light as air, but they will help you gently and happily down the stream of life."

Look at the result. Send a person through this day happy, and send one each day three hundred and sixty-five days in the course of a year; then suppose you live forty years only after you commence this course; you have made fourteen thousand, six hundred humans happy, at all events for a time. Now, worthy reader, isn't that easy to do? And if it should be hard, but possible, isn't it worth trying? Help yourself to happiness.

Prayer—O thou God of Jacob, give us that happiness that comes from serving thee. That comes from walking with thee. Teach us that thy presence in all our experiences is the only power that gives true happiness. We come to thee, we trust in thee that we may know how thy grace sustains our souls through life's varying way and gives happiness despite all to the contrary. O give us this life, in Christ's name, we ask it.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE OVERCOMING LIFE.

"When a man's ways please the Lord, he maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him."—Prov. 16:7.

"The triumph of the wicked is short, and the joy of the godless but for a moment."—Job 20:5.

"They that seek the Lord shall not want any good thing. No good thing will be withheld from them that walk uprightly."—Ps. 4:10.

To sum up a few thoughts: Life is not acts; life is a way, a way in which acts take place; it is the way of reverence for and obedience to God; it is a way of truth and honesty and to depart from it we are lost. Life is a way of clean living which is found by "taking heed according to the Word of God"; it is a way of justice, and a way of mercy. Life is a way of giving, not money (which, as important as it is, is the least) but self, to the great purpose of making our fellowmen happy. The result is happiness.

Thus: If our idea of happiness is in our own physical comfort, we will never be happy, for we cannot always be physically comfortable. There is too much, both external and internal, to make unhappy. But if our idea of life is to make life right in the sight of God and man, and that it is to be spent in making others happy, and if we give ourselves to accomplishing that, we ourselves will become absorbed in the prospect, and we will be happy. Help yourself to happiness.

Prayer—Our Father, it hath pleased thee to hide from us a perfect knowledge, yet thou dost call for a perfect trust in thee. The curtain of the flesh often keeps us from seeing what is best and we know not the way we should take. But thou hast proven true and faithful through all these ages, and thou hast promised good things such as eye hath not seen. Give us trust complete, and forbid that we shall slacken that faith until we arrive with Christ in glory. In his name, we ask it.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"NO RELIGIOUS SERVICES."

"The dust returneth to the earth as it was, and the spirit returneth unto God who gave it."—Read Eccl. 12:1-7.

A certain author who recently passed away left instructions that there should be no religious services at her funeral, only the reading of passages from the works of John Burroughs and Walt Whitman.

If there has been no recognition of God in a life, recognition of him at a burial service is nothing but hollow mockery. But how different is the death of a sincere Christian! He knows that, believing in Christ, he is never to die. He knows that at death he goes to the place prepared by him, there to dwell happily forever.

When we come to die, we shall realize as never before that our faith in Christ is our chief pos-

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, Pastor.

WHAT CAN I BELIEVE ABOUT HEAVEN?

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."—II. Cor. 5:1.

We have more interest in heaven than we admit we do. The life beyond concerns everybody. It cannot be overlooked. It will not stay down even though we try to forget about it. It stands ever just ahead. For some it is a vague uncertain something that brings a sort of shadow across their minds. For others it is a great hope. All and sundry must consider it after a fashion. It is a patent fact that we are all headed toward the end of this present life. That we must surely know. In a hundred and fifty years—and such a short time that is—not a person among us will be living on this earth. In so brief a span of time the earth will be entirely depopulated of its present people. Every person now on earth will be in a different realm. Thus generation after generation we pass on. On whither? What can I believe about heaven?

You will pardon me for putting my speech in the first person—for making it a testimony. Like most of you I have looked that question squarely in the face. I have seen very dear loved ones breathe their last. I have looked upon the cold, lifeless form of many dear friends. Like Tennyson, have we all cried:

But, O, for the touch of a vanished hand;
And the sound of a voice that is still.

And like Job we have asked, "If a man die shall he live again?" And if he lives again, how? "How can a man be born again when he is old?" is not the very same thing, but is quite akin to it.

We can believe that there is a heaven. And if we can believe that, is that not almost sufficient? Is it not a very real comfort just to rest ourselves in that assurance? Our Saviour has given us the assurance that there is a heaven. "I go to prepare a place for you," says he. In my Father's house are many mansions," says he. And understanding how finite our conception must be of that place beyond, and how full of wonder and doubt our minds may be, he adds, to make assurance doubly sure: "If it were not so, I would have told you." It is as much as to say, I see your doubts, and I know that ever since before the days of Job men have wondered about the life after death, and I wish to assure you here and now that there is life after death, and if it were not so I would have told you.

The stars shall shine for a thousand years,
A thousand years and a day;
But God and I will love and live
When the stars are passed away.

I stood one day in the midst of a grass covered, mountainside cemetery in New Jersey. In the near valley below in plain view roared down its wide, expanding course the great Delaware river. Across the river were the Pennsylvania hills, forest covered, and beautiful in the gold, and yellow, and green of their autumn gowns. The setting sun was laying a blanket of glory about it all. It was beautiful. I lifted my heart to God in thanks and praise "for the beauty of the earth; for the beauty of the skies;" and the river, which had just cut its circuitous right of way through the Pennsylvania pass. These live on, I said. My friends here beneath the sod are gone. They used to look, as I look now, upon this view.

The view remains. They are gone. Oh! if one could but live always! Then I could hear, as it were, Jesus talking about gates—gates that lead to death, and gates that lead to life—life eternal. I remembered his speech about cutting off members of one's body if it hindered in one's progress to everlasting life, rather than keeping the member and being cast into everlasting death. And I remember that another young man had asked Jesus about inheriting eternal life, and Jesus answered him just as if he held the very latchstring to eternal life in his own hand. And Jesus later discoursed about the judgment after death with such words of assurance as had never been heard before. He spake with authority as he said: "These shall go away into everlasting punishment; but the righteous into eternal life." and to Nicodemus he said: "Whosoever believeth in him (the Son) should not perish, but have eternal life." And the beauty of the autumn sunset, as I stood among the mounds of the dead, brought afresh to me his words, when he said, "Marvel not at this; for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of the damnation." I went down the mountainside, and preached that evening with a new hope for the life eternal.

We can believe that heaven is beyond the complete comprehension of our finite minds. We cannot understand it. We know that. It is beyond us. Fitting earthly questions to heavenly situations is of small value. Seeking heavenly answers for earthly ways of doing is in vain. Finite minds cannot take hold of infinitude. We have the complete round of the promises of Jesus that we shall have life after death. We have his own resurrection—as incomprehensible as that is to us—before us. We have the witness of the ages to the longing for life everlasting. The hart panteth for the water brooks, and there are water brooks for it to find. The ear is tuned to music, and there is music for it to hear; the wing is fashioned for air, and there is air for its flying; and the intellect of man is built for eternity, and somewhere eternity is. But with our present equipment we cannot describe it, and if we "should tell you of heavenly things, how could you believe?" We have been given the proper equipment for the situation—namely, the instrument of faith. "He that believeth hath life already."

We can believe that it is better than our present life. "But now they desire a better country, that is, an heavenly; wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God; for he hath prepared for them a city." In other words God has not put out a hope, and dream in the hearts of his finite children that there is no chance of putting into perfection. The God that has planned the soul, with all its sensitivities and qualities, with all its desires and longings, has planned also the home of the soul. God is not ashamed to be called the God of a people who have the faith to follow his design into heaven itself. For such a people he prepares a heaven. And heaven is not heaven if it is not better.

The people of God shall not be disappointed. We can count on that. "According to my earnest expectation," says Paul, "and my hope, that in nothing I shall be ashamed, but that with all boldness, as always, so now also Christ shall be magnified in my body, whether it be by life, or by death. For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain. . . . I am in a strait betwixt two, having a desire to depart, and to be with Christ; which is far better; nevertheless to abide in the flesh is more needful to you." Paul has assurance that to be with Christ in the life hereafter is far better, and we may likewise have that same assurance for all the promises Christ has made unto us. And this brings me to my concluding remark.

We can believe that heaven has law and order. Everything which has the design of the hand of God upon it has in it law and order. And one of the laws of God is growth. Does that help you any? It does me. It suggests to me that there is to be nothing static about heaven. It is to be a place prepared by the Giver of abundant life, for a people prepared for abundant living. Com-

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

Our public school will close on Thursday, May 17th. Our children will be happy to be free for a while from the school room. As a whole they have done good work. Of course, we always have a few who make poor grades. I guess we will always have some that were not born to study. It is hard work. We are happy that one of our girls will be second in her graduating class. She made an average of 94 on her studies but she had a competitor in her class that made a fraction more. We are happy to get the second place.

We have another girl who is taking the business course in Elon College and is doing fine. She has already won a prize on her work and is striving now to win a gold pen which has been offered for certain work. She is doing her best and we are hoping she will win.

The boys will find employment on the farm from now on, and the girls will find plenty of sewing to do. We have twenty-eight dozen overalls already cut and ready to make. Think of the amount of sewing that will take. Button holes to work and buttons to sew on. When that is done then the canning season will be on. You see that vacation does not mean rest at the Christian Orphanage—but change of work.

WASHING SMOKE.

"These are a smoke in my nose."—Read Isaiah 65:1-7.

Our cities are becoming more civilized, and one proof of it is the increasing thought that is taken to prevent the smoke nuisance. In Chicago, for instance, when a locomotive is standing, getting up steam, it is not allowed to shoot great clouds of black smoke into the air, but a hood is brought down over its smokestack, draws the smoke into it, and releases it only as well-washed vapor.

All of this should be a lesson to us. Many of us lead smoky lives. Foul clouds of anger, of suspicion, of fault-finding, of slander, are emitted wherever we go, and all the lives around are defiled. We sadly need to cleanse our contribution to the spiritual atmosphere of our homes, our offices, and the society in which we mingle.

Prayer—Holy Spirit of God, live thou within us. Purify our hearts. Let us know that not what we take in but what we give out renders us impure. Oh, cleanse us and keep us clean.—Amen.

A SOCIAL GOSPEL AND THE NEW ERA.

By TIMOTHY THOMAS.

The words social and society have different definitions to different people—all depending on the viewpoint of the individual. A little more than two decades ago the subject of society was a pet theme heard from many pulpits as the basis of ridicule delivered in the name of a sermon. Society and hell were so closely associated in the minds of many that the first was the entrance to the second. In those days social was a cheap word to a large number of people. Webster never dreamed that his definitions of the two words would be so perverted.

We are living in a day of social agencies, social uplift, and hearing much about a social gospel. Our continued progress along these lines will be measured in proportion to our interpretation of what we mean by social. It is gratifying to see the effect of an increasing appreciation and understanding of what is meant by the term social.

The church should have credit for bringing us into an age of brotherhood, despite the fact that certain elements of the church have, through a misunderstanding, opposed every semblance of a social gospel. The church is essentially a brotherhood organization and its progress has been made possible through the fundamentals of Christian brotherhood.

Reformation comes through social revolution, or social evolution, using that term in its broadest and in its most significant meaning. Reformation does not come through a demand. So-called reformers have not left their imprint on society because of their demands, but because they implanted some worth-while principle in our social order.

The old idea of reform was to change the habits of the individual, and that change was thought to save the individual. This saving was limited to a protection of the individual from future punishment. In the light of a larger thinking we have come to understand that changing of the individual is not necessarily a saving of the individual but the beginning of his saving. True reformation is a continuous restored life, a life that grows and gives. Mere reform becomes meaningless if the change is to be only a change. The changed individual must have a changed environment if he is to remain changed, and to become a new individual. The church that fails to provide a spiritual-social environment falls far short of its opportunity.

Too long has the church considered its successes in the number of members enrolled on a mere acceptance of a creed. The ability of the church to lead members for soul-working and soul-changing through the spirituality of a social gospel is the measure of its success, and the fulfillment of its true mission.

When Christ spoke about leavening the whole lump he uttered a message which it has taken the world almost two thousand years to grasp. The church too long has stored the leaven under its own roof rather than spreading it among all mankind through a social gospel. Certainly the Master had this in mind when he said, "Go ye into all the world . . ." But the church has said, "Come ye under my roof." The church must go out as well as invite.

Man cannot be saved by theology alone, nor the world brought to Christ by the church secluding itself. Theology is controversial, but there can be no controversy about a wholesome Christianized society in which men are privileged to live. Christ never taught theology in the restricted sense in which the church has taught it, but he did teach the living principles of Christianity, and on more than one occasion gave forceful expression and direct example of his belief in a social gospel.

The high standards set in the new era must be supported by a social gospel. Theology and creeds cannot suffice. This is an age of doing rather than an age of creeding. The Scriptures are still supreme. The social gospel does not do away with theology and creeds, nor does it lay aside the Bible. The social gospel makes theology living instead of dead, creeds a beginning point rather than a stopping place, and the Bible interpretative of man's daily spiritual bread rather than a dead manuscript left us by the patriarchs of old.

fort your minds with that thought, and build your—heaven, I liked to have said—faith, by whatever thoughts about progress, and growth in heaven you may need. Heaven being a place over which the God of law and order presides, as well as in which the God of love and mercy rules, we may count on it that there will be some law and order as to entrance thereto. It will not be taken by storm—except it be the storm of God's love in our own hearts, and the mercy in his goodness. If we have Christ's spirit dwelling in us, "We know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." "And God himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away."

OBITUARIES

NEWBOLD.

We, the members of the Junior Missionary Society of the First Christian Church, Portsmouth, Va., have come together this evening in solemn assembly to pay tribute to our departed friend and member, Marjorie Newbold. As we meet for business purposes just now, we miss her genial presence and her ready willingness in the service of the Lord.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That in her passing the Society has lost one of its devoted, loving members.
2. In all services for her church she was always in the forefront ready for action, with ideas helpful in the upbuilding of her church.

3. She was a child of the Father, full of faith, hope, trust and love of the simplest, sweetest nature.

4. We will ever cherish her memory and strive to emulate those virtues of her life that have been so deeply implanted in our minds. That we sorrow with the bereaved and extend to the family our hearts' deepest sympathy.

5. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy placed upon our records, and a copy sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

MISS VIVIAN WHITTEN,
 MISS ANNE RIPLEY,
 MRS. C. J. HEATH,
 MRS. R. F. EDWARDS.

NEAL.

Mr. Virgil T. Neal was born June 17, 1878, and departed this life April 16, 1934, age 55 years, 9 months and 29 days. He was the son of the late C. W. L. and Sarah Ann Neal. On December 28, 1897, he was married to Miss Zuua Flynn, who survives, together with 10 children, 7 grandchildren, one brother and one sister.

Early in life he accepted Christ and united with the Belew Creek Christian Church. He has served as deacon of this church for a number of years and remained a faithful member until called home.

He was a good man, a good husband and a good father and will be greatly missed in the home and community.

Funeral services at Belew Creek Christian Church, conducted by the pastor, assisted by Rev. W. T. Scott.

May our heavenly Father comfort the bereaved. D. M. SPENCE.

DUNN.

Miss Lydia Ann Dunn, born October 11, 1864, died April 12, 1934. Surviving are three brothers: E. D. Dunn, of Ingram, Va.; W. C. Dunn, Rocky Mount, N. C.; and J. O. Dunn, Oakland, Calif. Two sisters: Mrs. Ida Adams, of South Boston, Va., and Mrs. R. L. Ingram, of Ingram, Va., and many relatives.

For many years Miss Dunn had made her home with Mrs. Lizzie Sipe, News Ferry, Va. While visiting relatives and attending special services at Ingram, she was suddenly stricken at the home of her sister, Mrs. R. L. Ingram, and passed away.

In youth Miss Dunn professed faith in Christ and united with Pleasant Grove Christian Church, later becoming a charter member of Ingram Christian Church, and was faithful to the end.

Services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. E. McCauley, Richmond, Va., Drs. W. C. Wicker, pastor Pleasant Grove Christian Church, L. E. Smith, Elon College, N. C., P. H. Fleming, Burlington, N. C., and T. S. Wilson, pastor of Oak Level Presbyterian Church, in Pleasant Grove Church, and interment was in the Pleasant Grove Cemetery.

Miss Dunn was esteemed by all who knew her, as was evidenced by the floral tribute and the large crowd at the ser-VICES. May our heavenly Father comfort and keep the bereaved and lonely.

H. E. CRUTCHFIELD.

KERNODLE.

James Riley Kernodle died April 3, 1934, at the age of about 70 years. He is survived by four sons and two daughters, two brothers and three sisters.

His wife preceded him in death by about 12 years. Burial was at Apple's Chapel, where he had long been a faithful member.

A large crowd attended the burial and many beautiful flowers were placed upon his grave. The services were conducted by the writer.

•• THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY ••

How About Insects?—

Science News Service tells us: "One half of all the insects of the world are harmful. The other half are beneficial." This information is authoritative, and one would do well to heed it when next tempted to destroy insects on general principles.

Kansas City Gardens.—

Kansas City is doing quite successfully what has been attempted in quite a few other cities. We learn from a recent issue of Better Homes and Gardens that under the auspices of the Kansas City Gardens Association "forty-one public schools have been enrolled in the garden movement, with the result that 3,000 gardens have been started and tended by school children. These gardens provide vegetables to meet economic needs and flowers for beauty." There is evidently much that is commendable in this spirit of enterprise on the part of school children, but it seems at variance with the Government's efforts at enforced curtailment of crops.

Where Do We Go from Here?—

The above query is raised by the Methodist Protestant-Recorder. It says: "The United States has been spending an average of $14,000 every minute, day and night, for the past ten months, or $19,152,392 a day. Against this enormous expenditure it has collected a daily average of $8,184,155, which means, of course, that $10,968,237 of each day's expenditures is borrowed. In other words, for every $1 collected, the Government has spent $2.34, of which $1.28 went to emergency recovery expenditures. Since last July 1, the Government has expended $5,822,427,211, with receipts of $2,478,983,087. The Budget Bureau estimated that the deficit will be $7.5 billions by June 30th. 'Where do we go from here?'"

Is a Third Party Possible?—

Frank R. Kent, writing in the Baltimore Sun, thinks not. He says: "The excuse for a third party along radical lines no longer exists. The two old parties no longer stand for the same conservative things. Under Mr. Roosevelt, the Democratic party has swung far to the left. This administration has seized most of the Progressive ideas, expanded them and elaborated them, made them its own. Mr. Roosevelt, the Democratic leader, not only had the support of the Progressives in his campaign, but has the enthusiastic endorsement now of the leading Progressives, including Senator LaFollette. He has not left them an issue. He has, in fact, gone so much farther in the spending and socialization line than they ever proposed that it isn't possible for them to get an issue."

The Commonwealth.—

The first issue of the new Virginia Chamber of Commerce magazine, The Commonwealth, has recently reached the desk of THE SUN's managing editor. The magazine is well printed, though hurriedly examined, it is believed that it will prove quite a valuable addition to the field of Virginia publications. One thing that caught the eye of the writer was a chart showing a comparison of the amount of employment in Virginia and North Carolina compared with the United States as a whole as well as other individual States. While the United States shows an employment ratio, as compared with 1929, of only about 70 per cent, Virginia has a ratio of approximately 85 per cent, and North Carolina has passed the 100 per cent mark.

Mr. Byrd and the Agricultural Program.—

It will be remembered that the junior Senator from Virginia was bold enough to stand by his convictions and oppose the NRA when it was quite a bit more popular than at present. He has now declared war on Secretary Wallace's proposal for extending the agricultural administrator's licensing power. Mr. Byrd is himself an agriculturalist, and he takes the stand of a practical man against the theorist. He states that he is willing to support Mr. Wallace in "every reasonable and logical plan," but feels that some of the proposals are "so farcical as to lead me at first to believe they were conceived in the brain of a professor who never raised a blade of grass. He considers the amendment that is proposed as "a dragnet" that "affects every single agricultural commodity in this country." He continues: "I regard this authority as un-American and better suited for the Soviet government of Russia than for the democracy of America, where we still have at least in theory a written constitution." In commenting upon Mr. Byrd's attitude, a local paper has this to say: "Mr. Byrd picked up a hot potato a year ago when he ventured to buck the administration on the NRA. It is quite possible that he will find that he has another warm spud in his hand. . . . Whatever the reaction, Mr. Byrd is acting with the same courage as Mr. Glass. In their specialties—finance and agriculture—they have declared against the 'Brain Trust.' Both are standing pat, prepared to meet the consequences."

Mr. Darrow Again in the Limelight.—

Once again Clarence Darrow is in the limelight. This time he comes as the champion of the "little fellow," and as such he has raised the ire of General Johnson. Evidently Mr. Darrow cannot be altogether wrong, and, inasmuch as his opinion was asked for, it should be received at least courteously rather than as it has been by NRA officials. In an editorial on last Monday the Richmond News Leader said: "In the temper with which General Johnson and Mr. Richberg meet the Darrow criticisms, we see one of the supreme difficulties of attempted government control of national planning. Those officials to whom the administration entrusts industrial planning may become so cocksure that they will be resentful of any criticism. . . . In this instance, of course, the personality of General Johnson aggravates the difficulty. . . . Even were a less bellicose man at the head of NRA much of the danger of dogmatism . . . would remain." The editorial continues: "Group control was not a revelation from Sinai, set on the tablets of NIRA. It has been introduced long before 1933, and under Mr. Hoover it had been developed more widely than the public has ever realized. To be sure, it was directed by men who had personal gain as an incentive, but it was well directed. Regardless of this, however, Mr. Darrow's argument is sufficiently tenable to entitle him to fair hearing."

Soviet Russia and Christianity.—

A Russian Archpriest, writing in the Christian East, tells of the trials and persecutions to which the leaders of the church have been subjected since the Russian revolution. The Presbyterian, in turn, quotes him as follows: "For the past fifteen years, over an area covering a sixth part of the globe, there has been a Satanic attack upon Christianity. All that is fundamental to humanity—faith in God and religion—has been mocked and destroyed. . . . The first years of Bolshevism saw an indiscriminate shooting of priests and clergy. Thousands were tortured and shot; thousands were cast into prison to wait the verdict they knew was inevitable. The aged Metropolitan Vladimir was killed, the Metropolitan Veniamin was shot. Archbishop Andronin was burned at the stake. Archbishop Gernogen was tied to the wheel of a steamer and drowned. Many bishops, priests and monks have been tortured to death. Their number amounts to 8,500. And how many of those alive are pining in prisons and exile. Everyone knows of the great scale on which the anti-Christmas and anti-Easter campaigns have been carried out and of the enormous sums that have been spent on them. They established special Godless universities, news papers and literature; special lectures, performances in the theatre, and processions on the eve of those days have been organized. A five-day week was introduced in order to compel not only laborers but business men and school boys to work on Sundays. . . . But the masses of the people still keep their faith in God and love their church services."

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Next week marks another epoch in our church history and in the life of Elon College. The Commencement proper begins on Sunday, the 27th, with the Baccalaureate sermon and closes on Wednesday following, every day being filled with events of interest and significance, not only to those who are graduating but to teachers, pupils, and all College friends.

A luncheon meeting of the ministers of the Miami region, with their wives, was held on Wednesday of last week, at the Southern Cafeteria. Superintendent Gillette was present and while many things were discussed, that which awakened the greatest interest was his account of the Suffolk meeting, and the perfecting of the plans for the merger. The news was received with great interest and appreciation.

Rev. J. Everette Neese, ministerial student in Elon College and pastor of our Carolina Church, reports a very happy and successful revival, as a result of which his church exactly doubled its membership, there being thirty-one members of the church when the meeting began and thirty-one additions to the church when the meeting closed. Brother Neese was assisted for a week in these meetings by his father, Rev. J. L. Neese.

Rev. Joe French, pastor, Ocean View Church, writes: "The work here is going better than it has since I came. Prospects are brighter than they have been. Attendance has increased in both Sunday School and church. We had fine Mother's Day services at both Berea and Ocean View, Sunday, May 13th. We are planning for and hoping to put on a Daily Vacation Bible School, both at Berea and Ocean View this summer, and we are going to make a bid for the summer visitors at Ocean View."

Rev. D. B. Spencer, D. D., has resigned as pastor of the church at Mount Dora, Fla., to take effect in the early fall, and the church has called as his successor the Rev. Andrew M. Brodie, of Washington, D. C. Dr. Spencer has been pastor of the Mount Dora Church for the past sixteen years, and retires after a ministry of over fifty-one years. He has been active in civic affairs in Mount Dora, and is known and recognized as an able preacher. Dr. Brodie who succeeds him, is well known in the denominations throughout the country,

The attractive brick church building of Apple's Chapel, in Guilford County, N. C., which is to be dedicated on Sunday, July 22nd, is of historic interest and significance. It is on record that Rev. James O'Kelly, "Apostle of Religious Liberty in the South," who fathered our Christian movement, preached at Apple's Chapel and administered the communion services, five other ministers being present, June 4, 1809—one hundred and twenty-five years ago this June. The records do not reveal if a house had been built at this time, though it is revealed that the present handsome brick structure is the third building to be erected on this famous site.

Dr. J. Elmer Morgan, editor of the Journal of the National Education Association, pointed out this amazing fact in a recent address in Washington, D. C.: "Radio in the United States has fallen largely into the hands of two great broadcasting chains. The people who control these chains have in practice been responsible to no one and yet they exercise a power greater than the Supreme Court, greater than that of Congress, greater than that of the trustees of any great university. What they allow to go on the air, what they keep off the air, how they use the best hours when the largest number of people are listening, their respect or lack of respect for the child mind—all these are determining the civilization of America and shaping the destiny of our people."

ELON ALUMNI DAY.

The following is from a letter sent out by Mrs. C. M. Cannon, Secretary of the Elon Alumni Association:

To Elon Alumni:

Commencement time is drawing very near, and I am sending you an outline of the Commencement activities, together with an invitation to attend as much as possible. I am also asking you to send in your Alumni dues of $1.00, if you have not already done so. Remember, your dues are to be used to give a $50.00 scholarship each to a boy and a girl student at the College. We are keeping all other expenses to a minimum, and all your money is being used for this worthwhile purpose. Also, we would like to have any information about yourself and your activities, so that we can let the other alumni know where you are and what you are doing.

Commencement this year is May 25th-30th, inclusive, and Tuesday, May 29th, is Alumni Day.

The Classes of '94, '04, '14 and '24 are holding their reunions this year, and they are expecting to have good representation here. Members of these classes will be guests of the College while here.

Now a word about the banquet: Though the prices of food have increased, the dining hall will give us a good dinner for 50c. There is going to be good music, good fellowship, not too many speeches, and a generally enjoyable occasion. You will notice that the banquet is to follow the address, which we think will add to the pleasure of the evening.

MRS. C. M. CANNON, Sec'y.

DAMASCUS, GATES COUNTY, N. C.

A very impressive sunrise service was held at Damascus Christian Church, of Sunbury, N. C., on Eastern morning. The service began at dawn and continued until about 7 o'clock.

The church was decorated with Easter lilies, jonquils and other spring flowers. Scores of lighted candles shed their soft ray over the entire church, and the following inspirational program was rendered to a well-filled house:

Organ Prelude—Katie Pierce.

From Calvary a Cry Was Heard—Mrs. A. V. Hofler.

Gloria Patria—Audience.

Prayer—Unison.

THE GARDEN SCENE.

Matt. 26, 36, 46—Mrs. Hayslett Rountree.

Silent Prayer—Closed by J. R. Corbitt.

Gethsemane—Irene Corbitt.

Gethsemane, Can I Forget It?—Frances Pierce.

In the Garden—Audience.

THE CROSS.

Luke 23, 33, 49—Mrs. Roy Parker.

Silent Prayer—Closed by Mrs. Genie Pierce.

Beneath the Cross of Jesus—Mrs. Richard Corbitt.

In the Cross of Christ—Audience.

RESURRECTION.

Luke 24:1-12—Mrs. J. E. Corbitt.

Silent Prayer—Closed by Mrs. John Lassiter.

Solo, Land of the Ages—Miss Lidia Nixon.

Christ Arose—Choir.

What Does the Resurrection Mean Today?—

Mrs. Wharton Nixon.

Crown Him King of Kings—Choir.

Holy Communion.

Benediction—Rev. E. B. White.

NEWS ITEMS FROM ALABAMA.

OFFICIAL NEWS SHEET OF THE ALABAMA CONGREGATIONAL WOMAN'S ORGANIZATIONS.

"May my highest aim this day be to manifest God and make others happy."

The above is a sentence from a prayer by Bishop Wilberforce, used in the Presidents' Exchange. Mrs. D. E. Brown, National Secretary, collects outstanding material from State Presidents and sends them to all Societies. "Ways of Making Money," the most practical booklet yet sent out, comes through this channel. Alabama is asked to cooperate. An Alabama broadcast is already a-brewing.

From the Far-Flung Front.

Miss Dizney writes: "Greetings to my many Alabama friends. . . . Twelve Chinese brothers gave coal to the Taiku hospital. . . . The provincial Government gave us $5,000; The Chinese want us!"

At Suffolk, Va., we met the father of our Dr. White, Bavao, Philippine Islands. Mr. White lent us a fifty-foot film of the doctor and his wife and two babies. Have any of you machinery to display this film?

It is an attractive little box, made of prettily grained wood, and styled "A Cent-a-Meal, in Gratitude to the Giver of All Good Gifts." Three cents a day a family for the apportionment is a tiny amount—except when you come to the end of the year. Then it keeps Miss Odell in Turkey, props open American college doors, sends young folks to Blue Ridge. Why not get such a box? Only ten cents outlay. And what returns!

News From the Alabama Front.

The Phenix City women got off for a grand start. Their new League is divided into two groups—one of older ladies and a second of the younger ones, married and single. Officers are Mrs. W. C. Rowland, president of the whole group, and Mrs. Curtis Moss, of the younger one. They have set themselves five definite goals.

Mrs. E. W. Butler, Thorsby, is the chairman of the Publications Committee. Communications regarding THE CHRISTIAN SUN, Advance, and Missionary Herald should be addressed to her.

Miss Eula Ledbetter sends word of financial activities at Mt. Olive: An all-day quilting for a communion set, etc. They are studying the Book of James.

Liberty, East Tallassee, is nearing the tape in the apportionment race.

Liberty, Brantley, made and sold a quilt and had a "sock" supper (the wear-on-the-foot kind; not the knock-you-down kind).

Eastview is doing "planned work." Their accomplishments sound like it: Painting the church, beautifying the grounds, paying for the piano, $10.00 to Missions.

Mt. Springs has bought a piano, and paid something on the apportionment.

Eclectic Union also has a new piano and has done much repairing.

Seman Community has a new lot and is raising money for the church to go on it.

The closing hymn of the above-mentioned President's Exchange program is, "Breathe on me, Breath of God." F. P. E.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH.

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF OUR CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE CONVENTION OPENS THE WAY.

The Southern Convention at Suffolk recently did not solve our problems, it opened the way of approach and offered the key to solution. This is the character of legislative and deliberative bodies. In the Convention we brought to attention the problems to be solved, and the wisdom of the united body gave plans and adopted programs.

Money was not appropriated to pay the debts of Elon College. There was a plan and a program proposed, discussed and agreed upon, whereby the wisdom of the Convention expressed itself as saying that if this plan is followed and this program carried out, we may confidently expect results and the ultimate wiping out of the College indebtedness. There was no money to appropriate. The Convention was, therefore, seeking to find a way, the best way, to securing money and to adopt a plan that would evoke united effort and, if worked, secure the desired results.

The Convention did not pay for publishing THE CHRISTIAN SUN for the next two years. It did not have the money to pay. Through the decision of the Convention a wider territory was laid open for approach and for development, and for service, by and through THE CHRISTIAN SUN. THE CHRISTIAN SUN is as needy today, even more needy, financially, than it was when the Convention met, because a wider field of service and the larger opportunity call for larger expenditure of money and effort, that a larger field may be reached, represented and served.

The Southern Convention did not appropriate money to carry on our Mission work, either at home or abroad. It had none to appropriate. It sought, through the united wisdom of our fellowship, to lay plans whereby money might be raised and appropriated to the task of building up the kingdom of righteousness, of building churches and giving the Gospel to the needy here in our homeland and in the far-away places. The Convention has pointed the way in which we should go if we are to obtain the best results.

The Convention did not donate money to the Christian Orphanage for its support for the next two years. It opened up the way for a bigger and a better Orphanage by making the field of approach larger, the churches of our constituency, to whom appeals may be made, more numerous. It opened a larger field for the Orphanage and thus entailed larger opportunities and at the same time larger responsibilities. And so of all interests and enterprises of the Convention. We did not solve problems and close questions at Suffolk; we opened them and pointed the way to larger opportunities and greater service. It is up to the membership of the churches and to the leaders in the churches to say whether the fine and far-reaching plans laid by the Convention shall be carried out, and whether the coming two years shall bring greater results and consequences to the united fellowship and the cause of righteousness.

A HIGH AND WORTHY TRIBUTE.

A statue of William Jennings Bryan was unveiled at Washington on May 3rd. Here was a distinguished American who aspired to the presidency but never reached it. Maybe it was better so. Because of his outspoken sincerity, honesty and integrity, and because of his deep convictions and acute sense of what was right and of what was wrong and the willingness to stand by his conscience and keep it clear, he made many bitter foes in the world of politics, and so, maybe, after all, it was better for our country that he remained a private citizen. Whatever else was said of the great commoner, no one accused him of insincerity, of dishonest dealing, and after he had campaigned through three presidential elections for the highest office in the gift of the people, his name was still untouched with any taint of corruption or bribery. One great editor, in speaking of the event at Washington, says: "His heart was right. A monument at Washington should stand for years as a testimonial to a man in public life whose character was as clear as the sunshine which falls around his memorial. Not in the realm of political life, but in the precincts of the heart, of the home, of the church, and as an example of Christian character is Bryan's greater honor."

President Roosevelt, in his address at the unveiling of the monument, paid this high tribute: "No man of his time was or could have been more constantly in the limelight than he; yet we can look back and scan his record without being able to point to any instance where he took a position that did not accord with his conscience or his belief. I think that we could choose the word 'sincerity' as fitting him most of all.

"It was that sincerity which brought to him the millions of devoted followers; it was that sincerity which served him so well in his lifelong fight against sham and privilege and wrong. It was that sincerity which made him a force for good in his own generation and has kept alive many of the ancient faiths on which we are building today."

MANKIND WILL HAVE IT SO.

Jesus the Christ, in his day, prophesied that there would be "wars and rumors of wars," but being the Prince of Peace, he laid down a schedule that would abolish war, that will abolish war, when it is adopted. Every war, with its hell of horrors, has been in direct opposition to his plainly announced purpose, plan and program. He prophesied war because he knew what was in man and that it would take a long, long time for his own policy and principles of peace to triumph in the world. So far is his schedule from being adopted by mankind that many of his followers despair, and wonder if the Prince of Peace will ultimately win out.

Many of his professed followers to this day do not believe in his program. They plainly say so. Here in a brief sentence was our Lord's program for abolishing war in the world: "Go ye into all the world and preach my gospel to every creature." That is plain. That is simple. That is direct. But mankind will not adopt it, and by their deeds and preachments prove that they prefer hate to love, war to peace, the gospel of death and ruin to the gospel of life and security. Look at the contrast. During 1932 we spent $29,000,000 for Foreign Missions, that is, to give the gospel of peace and good-will to the peoples and the nations who did not have that gospel. During the same year, we spent $2,750,000,000 to pay for past wars and prepare for future wars.

Mankind will have it so. He will give ten, twenty, thirty-fold as much to help kill and destroy his fellowmen as he will to save them through the gospel of peace, purity, plenty and salvation. Verily, the ways of man are the ways of vanity, folly and madness.

DR. W. KNIGHTON BLOOM.

The Administrative Committee of the Church Extension Boards think it fitting to put on record their deep regret and sense of loss in the sudden death of our Eastern Secretary, Dr. W. Knighton Bloom. Individually we feel the loss of a delightful associate and wise counsellor; and as representatives of the Church Extension Boards we feel that our Societies, and the Kingdom of God which it is our task to advance, have lost a singularly efficient and inspiring leader.

Dr. Bloom came naturally into the ministry, his father having been a minister, and having had the happiness of seeing four of his five sons enter the same vocation. He was naturally religious, and his faith was made buoyant and eager by the natural optimism and enthusiasm of his temperament. To this was added an unusual gift of friendship and of sympathetic interest in all classes of people with whom he had to deal.

He was first employed by us as a home missionary worker in North Dakota. The reputation which he earned by his zeal and success in this work led to his selection as Field Secretary of the Sunday School Society, when that Society was united with the Home Missionary Society and the Church Building Society. Later when the organization of our work was altered by the appointment of an Eastern and Western Secretary, each representing the three Societies in his own section, Dr. Bloom was chosen the Eastern Secretary with headquarters in Washington, D. C. While the Eastern division was much less than the Western in the number of churches and ministers under its care, the difference of tradition and temperament between the Northern and the Southern churches, between the white churches and the Negro churches, and later the formal merger and the urgent need of creating an actual harmonious union, between the Congregational and Christian Churches, peculiarly called for sympathetic tact and wise discretion on the part of the Eastern Secretary. No man could have contributed these qualities to the work in a higher degree than did Dr. Bloom.

One piece of work in which he achieved a pre-eminent success was the Student Summer Service. His enthusiastic love of young people and his gift in appealing to their best interests and ambitions gave him great success in arousing their interest and securing volunteers for summer work in needy and neglected fields. We are at a loss to know which party received the greater benefit—the communities which were revived and stimulated by the presence and work of eager and enthusiastic young men and women, or the student volunteers who had a new vision of the need and joy of religious work, very many of whom found it so rewarding that their lives became consecrated to the service of Christ and of these least of his brethren.

Dr. Bloom was happily married. We extend to Mrs. Bloom and their son our sympathy in their great loss, and our congratulations on the pride which they may well have in his life of consecrated and successful service. E. C. G.

OUR DEPENDENTS.

On January 1, 1934, it was estimated that fifty million people were dependent upon the Federal Government for support. This does not include the number of dependents cared for by counties, civic, benevolent and fraternal societies and the church. (These would add several millions to those drawing their support from Government.) Many are finding it more agreeable, much more favorable, to be dependent than independent—that is, to depend upon the beneficence and care of others than upon their own effort for sustenance and support. On April 1, 1934, there was a total of four million seven hundred thousand dependent families on relief rolls, which is one hundred thousand more than a year ago. We are not saying that these families are not needy and deserving. We presume they are. Attention is called to the fact of the increase, but here is a fact more appalling and serious than either of the above: "There are in the United States more than three million young people under 18 years of age for whom there are neither schools nor jobs." When it is considered that this army of three million citizens in the making are absolutely dependent and defenseless, no schools to go to, or they are unable to go, and no jobs to occupy them, it may easily be surmised as to the outcome for the manhood and womanhood of our citizenship in the future. Already the gangster is having his day with his machine gun, the kidnapper is having his way and the outlaw his loot; what may we expect of the future, of the growing sense of dependence, of the desire and the determination to be dependent, and then of the desperation to kill, to destroy and to take at will and without restraint? ### THE DUKE FOUNDATION AND OUR ORPHANAGE.

By CALEB D. WEST.

When the late James B. Duke established "The Duke Endowment" on December 11, 1924, he thereby declared a recognition of the "Stewardship of Wealth," which placed him in the forefront of this nation's public benefactors. Indeed, I would heighten my tribute, if I could, for it is evident that he assumed this largest scale philanthropy of our time, not as an obligation, but as a very rare privilege.

To what nobler purposes could one's money be dedicated than:

Hospitalization—ministering to the sick; Education—training men to think accurately; Endowment of rural churches—providing the necessary spiritual centers for community life; Caring for aged ministers and their widows; and lastly, Orphans and half orphans, that is to say, helping to provide maintenance, teaching, loving and training, to send into the world men and women qualified for life, who otherwise might have become derelicts. Truly that Indenture of December 11, 1924, must have been by him dedicated to "The Glory of God and in Great Love for His Children."

While I am sure there would be much inspiration to all of us to review the accomplishments thus far of this entire Trust, yet as this program period is for presenting the work of our own Orphanage, located at Elon College, N. C., and as this Home of ours has been a continuous and most fortunate beneficiary of "The Duke Endowment" since its establishment, I am wondering if our interest in our own institution will not be increased by telling you briefly of the work of the "Orphanage Section" of "The Duke Endowment," which of course means its relationship to all of these institutions as a whole? I think our interest can be arrested at least when we consider what has been made possible by the great heart of this business man for practically every orphan in North and South Carolina.

And, too, I am wondering if the motives that caused Mr. Duke to share his millions with children under the official care of this communion, haven't the same appeal to us to share in a more generous manner with them?

I chance to know very well Mr. W. R. Perkins, of New York (he is a native Virginian and formerly lived in my town), the man who was an intimate of Mr. Duke, his personal counsel, who prepared this tremendous Trust, and is now vice-president of the board directing the work of "The Duke Endowment." I am indebted to him for pamphlets containing this Indenture and his addresses telling of the origin, nature and purpose of "The Duke Endowment," and really it is thrilling reading matter.

Listen to Mr. Duke's own words which made possible the share our beloved Children's Home today enjoys, of his munificence:

"I have included orphans in an effort to help those who are most unable to help themselves, a worthy cause productive of truly beneficial results in which all good citizens should have an abiding interest. While in my opinion, nothing can take the place of the home and its influences, every effort should be made to safeguard and develop these wards of society."

And then commenting on the purpose of his entire plan, Mr. Duke says:

"From the foregoing it will be seen that I have endeavored to make provision in some measure for the needs of mankind along physical, mental and spiritual lines."

What a motive and what a purpose! And does it not have an appeal for us to increase our interest in this cause which is our own immediate responsibility?

Likewise, I asked Dr. W. S. Rankin, Charlotte, N. C., director of the Hospital and Orphanage Sections, "The Duke Endowment," to give me a few summaries that would reflect something of his contribution to child welfare in those States. He tells me in the very first place, "The contributions are made without respect to race or creed." I would have you think of the boundless love for children that created such unrestricted provision. Might this alone not cause us to look beyond the wants of our own brood to the appalling needs of those we know not? It's a trite saying, I know, but these children, waifs in some instances, are an inescapable part of our future citizenship, and isn't it our obligation to those who have trained us for life, to aid in preparing these for the future?

The money that Mr. Duke thus dedicated to child welfare has reached fifty institutions in North and South Carolina. The aggregate sum in the nine years' operation of this Trust, has reached in round figures one million one hundred thousand dollars. The first year it was $65,000, but in 1932 it reached $148,000. It might be noted that the distribution is based on the number of children under institutional care, and therefore the greater our effort, or the larger number for whom we make provision, the greater aid we may expect. Think if you can what this bounty will aggregate in years to come, for it is not a geyser with sporadic flow, but an unending generous stream of love for needy children. I think the management of all these institutions, however, can very properly assume that this "continuous stream" is predicated not only on efficient management and creditable results, but on the assumption that the ownership groups of these respective institutions will meet our full share of financial responsibilities.

A striking appreciation of the value of this Fund is afforded when I tell you that in 1932, the Duke Endowment gave one-tenth of the entire income of the 50 Orphanages in the Carolinas. If we manage these institutions properly and train the children wisely, we may develop men and women who will fill great places in the affairs of men; and their children in turn likewise, thus affording an unending blessing.

You will be interested to know that during the 9 years' operation of this Trust, our own Christian Orphanage has received $19,690.99. While on this occasion, I purposed only to speak of Mr. Duke's gifts, I will mention that another great and generous North Carolina soul, Lawrence S. Holt, a layman of the Protestant Episcopal Church, created a permanent trust in 1921, from which we have shared $900.00 annually, aggregating in these 13 years $11,200.00. These contributions are styled "outside contributions," and I am wondering if the column representing "Our Church Contributions" is as proportionately large as it should be.

But it has not been alone the money it gives to buy food and clothes. This splendid organization is offering help in so many ways. They have aided in establishing a uniform accounting system, which has made possible comparative information of the institutions. Benevolent institutions can no longer depend on their obvious needs supplying their necessities, for even the most generous giver is concerned with methods of management, scope and character of service, and expenditures.

They have developed a plan of standards of excellence, whereby the work of each institution can be attributed in a great degree increased insons afforded with institutions of like size. This has been a development of signal worth. I might here add that in these tests your institution has made a most favorable showing. To this I think can be attributed in a great degree increased interest on the part of all the institutions in certain important departments of work and in consequence certain improvements have been definitely observed in matter of housing, social work, improved methods of cooking, and better provisions for care of foods. Pre-entry medical examination for children and annual for employees, give assurance of a greater supervising of the health of the children.

It is perfectly obvious that through the cooperation of the Duke Endowment, tremendous improvements have been attained in management, which fact has contributed so much in these days. Incomes have been reduced, but with an ascending scale of help from the Duke Endowment these institutions have survived.

In closing, I again quote from one of the splendid addresses of Mr. Perkins in speaking of the foundations laid by Mr. Duke:

"And among them shines the Endowment, an enduring lighthouse of humanity which shall forever send forth its beams of loving helpfulness across life's storm-tossed sea."

SUFFOLK LETTER.

During the past week memorial services have been held in a number of the churches of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference. Holy Neck, Antioch, Mt. Carmel, Oakland, Liberty Spring, Eure, Bethlehem and Cypress Chapel are among the churches which observe local memorial services in honor of their departed members and friends. The cemetery is put in order before the memorial service. Flowers are placed upon the graves, and a suitable sermon or address is delivered in the church. These services are largely attended, and they give an opportunity for the reunion of old friendships and scattered families.

These churches do not attempt to make these services patriotic to the extent of the national Memorial Day observance. The national Memorial Day gives an opportunity for patriotic service. But the church memorial service is distinctly religious in purpose and expression. A cemetery makes no contribution to the church for those whose bodies rest beneath the flowers have passed beyond the possibility of sacrifice and service. However, there is a real spiritual value and profit to be derived from a serious and sensible appreciation of the past. And it is worth while to recount the blessings laid up in the store-house of precious memories.

There are two extreme attitudes in society. One lives only in the past, and takes no interest in the present or the future. For such people the golden age is in the past. And the other extreme ignores and belittles the past, while looking to the present and the future for inspiration and support. God gave man a memory for the purpose of keeping him in touch with the past. The wise man will use history and biography as guide-posts for the future.

In this age of idealists, in church and in state, there is a great need of impartial appraisal of human life from the standpoint of history. Every movement towards the revival of interest in the past stimulates an incentive to the study of great men and great social and religious movements in history. Church people should know the history of their own religious denominations. This history is always related to the life and personality of many people. One wishes at once to know who these leaders were, and what contribution each made to the church of Jesus Christ and the kingdom of God in the earth. Where did these people live? Where were they buried? What record of their work can be found in books, or in institutions?

History, biography, philosophy and religion are closely related. In fact they are inseparable. Each of these may not always be recognized in the every-day experiences of life. But every man makes history, writes his own biography, has some kind of a philosophy, and accepts, or rejects, the religious element in human character. There is no escape from history and one is compelled to appear, finally, if not now, before the "judgment seat of Christ." Religions cannot be destroyed. Christianity cannot be overthrown. Atheists, skeptics and infidels may hope to dethrone God after they have destroyed all human history and biography. The kingdom of God, in earth, is as safe as secular and religious history.

Read history and biography. Let the records of the past speak in the silence of libraries and reading rooms. Listen to the motionless lips of statesmen who have lived and labored for liberty in state and in church. "He that hath ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches" (Rev. 2:29). The Spirit has a message. And the past has a message which should be known and studied and appreciated.

ELON COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

The Forty-Fourth Annual Commencement of Elon College will begin Friday evening, May 25th, at 8 o'clock, and will close Wednesday, May 30th, at noon.

Friday, the Initial Oratorical Contest for the Smith Orator's Medal will be given. There will be two contestants. The young man or the young woman delivering the best oration will be awarded a medal that will represent Elon College. This will be an unusual contest. The medal, which will be a valuable one, is to be given by President and Mrs. L. E. Smith.

Saturday evening, at 8 o'clock, the Elon Playmakers will present "Peg O' My Heart," a three-act comedy by J. Hartley Manners, under the direction of Miss Floyd Childs, head of the Department of Dramatics and Physical Education for the College. There will be a small admission charge to cover actual expenses. It will be a most enjoyable occasion. Members of the Alumni Association and friends of the College are urged to attend.

Sunday morning, May 27th, at 11 o'clock, Dr. Dwight Bradley, of Newton Centre, Mass., will deliver the Baccalaureate Sermon to the graduating class. The community and all friends are urged to attend these services. Dr. Bradley is a graduate of Oberlin College and Pacific School of Religion. He has held prominent churches in California, Ohio, Texas and Missouri, and is now located at Newton Centre, Mass., as pastor of one of the historical churches of New England. He has written extensively for magazines, religious periodicals and other publications. He wrote the Christian Century prize poem in 1928. In addition to his duties as pastor of an influential church, he is Associate Professor of Worship at Andover-Newton Theological Seminary. Dr. Bradley is a member of the Board of Trustees of Elon College, and it will be a delight to have him visit the campus.

Sunday afternoon, at 4 o'clock, Fletcher Moore, member of the present senior class, will give his graduate recital in organ. Mr. Moore is one of the most brilliant students in the State. His performances are well received wherever he appears. The majority of his program will be of his own composition. Those interested in music certainly should not miss this opportunity.

At the evening service the President of the College will deliver the Baccalaureate address in the Whitley Memorial Auditorium. The public is invited.

Monday will be Class Day Exercises. Monday evening the Elon College Festival Chorus will present "Creation," by Handel, directed by Prof. Dwight Steere, head of the Music Department. This will be a most attractive and tuneful number. The work of the chorus continues to delight large audiences. This program deserves due consideration.

Tuesday will be Alumni Day. The program will begin with an assembly at 10:45 of the present graduating class, members of the faculty and all visiting alumni, in the rotunda of the Alamance Building, from whence they will march to the Whitley Memorial Auditorium for the opening program at 11 o'clock. The address will be given by Rev. John G. Truitt, pastor of the Suffolk Christian Church. This is an appeal to all alumni of the College from far and near to be present on this occasion for this service.

Following this service a complimentary barbecue luncheon will be served on the campus to which all are invited. At 2:30 the business session of the Alumni Association will be held. Mr. M. L. Patrick, president of the Association, will preside. There will, perhaps, be resolutions presented contemplating rather radical changes in the Association. Mr. Patrick wishes a full attendance. At 5 o'clock, President and Mrs. Smith will give a Tea in honor of the alumni and friends of the College. The plans this year call for a change in the evening program.

The Literary Address will be delivered in Whitley Memorial Auditorium at 7:30 o'clock, by Mrs. Rose Howell Holder, of the class of '25. Mrs. Holder is now living in New York, and will perhaps make the trip by airplane that she may have the opportunity of serving her Alma Mater in this way. She deserves a good hearing, and it is hoped that every alumnus that can will be present.

At 8:30 P. M., the annual Alumni Banquet will be served in the dining room of the College. An attractive and enjoyable program has been arranged. There will be plenty of fun mingled with common sense and helpful suggestions for the future work of the Association. It is sincerely hoped that every alumnus of Elon College who possibly can will journey back to the campus on this occasion that, together, we may plan for the future of our College.

The final item of the program will come Wednesday, May 30th, at 10:30 A. M., when the Class of 1934 will be awarded their diplomas, and have the privilege of hearing the Honorable Clyde Hoey, of Shelby, N. C., deliver the Literary Address. You are invited and urged to attend the 1934 Elon College Commencement.

L. E. SMITH, President.

CONVENTION IMPRESSIONS.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN for May 10th has an excellent picture of the splendid meeting of the Southern Convention at Suffolk, Va. There were so many interesting features and so many different things accomplished that it would hardly be possible to put them all into your columns without a greatly enlarged edition. I suppose we shall have continued reports for some time to come.

May I be permitted to draw attention to the emergence of the "Southeast Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches." This body, proposed, I believe, by our late beloved leader, Secretary W. Knighton Bloom, at the Convention in Raleigh four years ago, and given a place on the program at Burlington, was intended by him to be a means of fellowship and unification for all our Christian and Congregational churches in the eight States of the Southeast. It was this body which met on Wednesday night at Suffolk, with its president, Dr. L. E. Smith, in the chair, and which heard two very illuminating addresses by Rev. F. C. Lester and Dr. J. Percival Huget, of New York.

At two intervals on the following day the Southeast Convention met again, adopted a constitution and elected officers. It also accepted an invitation to meet a year from this time at Raleigh, N. C. This new body is now before our churches with the definite proposal to meet annually or biennially at some point in the Southeast, for a great regional meeting or Congress to which all of our churches may send delegates for inspiration and fellowship. It is hoped that this meeting may be addressed by some of the outstanding men of the whole united denomination, that there will be opportunities for worship, open forums, seminars; that it will include education and spiritual uplift, a facing of our united tasks as Christians in this present day, and the promotion of our world-wide mission.

Regional meetings of this kind have been held in recent years in New England, in Colorado and on the Pacific Coast, bringing together a large number of people in a considerable group of States to their immediate advantage. It seems particularly appropriate for us to start this project at this time in view of the loosening of the official ties uniting our churches in Georgia and Alabama with the Southern Convention and the simultaneous broadening and deepening of the relations which we so much desire for the two groups of churches, Congregational and Christian, in this whole region. This Southeast Convention will bring us together without administrative, cares, or routine business to perform, free to devote ourselves to the common problems of the Christian Churches in the kingdom of God.

The range of country to be invited to the Southeast Convention is indicated by the geographical distribution of the executive committee: Rev. J. H. Lightbourne, of Burlington, N. C.; Rev. C. A. Lincoln, of Daytona Beach, Fla.; Rev. Geo. N. Edwards, of Charleston, S. C.; Rev. A. W. Hurst, of Chattanooga, Tenn., and Rev. John G. Truitt, of Suffolk, Va. The board of directors includes the employed secretaries and superintendents of the Southern Convention and of the several State Conferences and in addition one person representing each of the Conferences. The principal objective for the coming year will be the preparation of a program for the Raleigh meeting next May. For this a special program committee is provided.

"MAKES THE WHOLE WORLD KIN."

By H. H. SMITH.

Religion is the greatest of all levelers. It can bring together as nothing else can, the most inveterate foes, and the battlefield, with all its horrors, has often been the scene of noble Christian acts. Major Stiles, in his book, "Four Years Under Marse Robert," relates an impressive incident connected with the battle of Spottsylvania Court House that well illustrates the thought just stated.

Major Stiles says: "It was almost dark, but as we drew near we saw a wounded Federal soldier clutch the pantaloons of Captain Hunter, who at that moment was passing by, frying pan in hand, and heard him ask, with intense eagerness, 'Can you pray sir? Can you pray?' The old captain looked down at him with a peculiar expression, and pulled away, saying, 'No, my friend, I don't wish you any harm now, but praying's not exactly my trade.'

"I said to the chaplain, 'Let's go to that man.' As we came up he caught my pants in the same way and uttered the same words, 'Can you pray, sir? Can you pray?' I bent over the poor fellow, found that the wound must necessarily prove mortal, and that soon. We both knelt down by him, and I took his hand in mine, and said, 'My friend, you haven't much time left for prayer, but if you will say after me just these simple words, with heart as well as lips, all will be well with you, 'God have mercy on me a sinner, for Jesus Christ's sake.'

"I never saw such intensity of human gaze, nor ever heard such intensity in human voice, as in the gaze and voice of that dying man as he held my hand and looked into my face, repeating the simple, awful, yet reassuring words I had dictated. He uttered them again and again, with the death rattle in his throat and the death tremor in his frame, until some one shouted, 'They are coming again,' and we broke away and ran down to the guns. It proved to be a false alarm, and we returned immediately—but he was dead, yes, dead, and half stripped; but I managed to get my hand upon his blouse a moment and looked at the buttons. He was from the far-off State of Maine.

"It was long before I slept that night," says Major Stiles. "It had been an unparalleled day. The last hour, especially, had brought together elements so diverse and so tremendous, that heart and brain were overstrained in attempting to harmonize and assimilate them. This was the first time in all my career as a soldier that I had heard from a dying man on the battlefield any expression that even so much as indicated a belief in the existence of any other world than this.

"What did it all mean?" When that Federal soldier and I had our brief conference and prayer on the dividing line between the two worlds, neither of us felt the slightest tremor of uncertainty about it. To both of us the other world was as certainly existing as this, and infinitely greater. Would I ever see him again? If so, would both of us realize that our few moments of communion and of prayer had meant more perhaps than all the struggles, that day, of the great embattled armies? I went to sleep at last that night, as I shall go this night, feeling that it all was and is too much for me, and committing myself and all my perplexities to the One Being who is 'sufficient for these things,' and able to lead us safely through such a world and such experiences."

Ashland, Va.

"I hear you stayed in a haunted house last night. What happened?"

"About twelve o'clock a ghost came through the wall just as if there were no wall there."

"And what did you do?"

"I went through the opposite wall the same way."—Tid-Bits.

GIVING UP A CAREER FOR CHRIST.

By DONALD M. HSUEH,

The President of Foochow College, Foochow, China, appreciates his Dean.

Mr. Nga Geng-Guong, now Dean of Foochow College, graduated from it in 1911 when there was a junior-college course. The president and faculty then so insistently urged him to remain that he consented.

By becoming a teacher in Foochow College he laid aside opportunities that were very attractive to a young man. He came from a non-Christian family of official rank and could have entered official life with every prospect of speedy promotion. This was not a vain dream; he not only spoke both English and Mandarin perfectly, but also had at his command a number of dialects. This fitted him for service in any province in China, or for positions broad.

His life answers questions frequently asked me by my foreign friends: Do Christian schools of China reach the higher class of youth? If so, how do they react to Christian training?

It was Mr. Nga's exceptional example as a Christian gentleman that counted most, and made his presence in Foochow College a very real contribution to the high standards maintained.

His classroom work was characteristic of himself, faithful and efficient. He was always impressed into the task of interpreting for speakers of world-wide reputation when they came to Foochow: Dr. Sherwood Eddy, Dr. Stanley Jones, Dr. Paul Monroe, Dr. John Dewey, and others. No one in the city could excel him in the ability to do this.

After some years of devoted service in Foochow College he had an opportunity to go abroad, and chose to study in Oberlin College, from which he received the degree of B. A. in 1928.

Again Foochow College could not do without him, and again he put aside positions that offered much more to him, and returned to his post as Dean, to the great satisfaction of all. Each student is personally known to Dean Nga, and his wonderful memory serves him well—often to the undoing of the student offender.

His present work has meant to him a definite sacrifice of money, position, travel, research, that he might promote the cause of Christian education for which Foochow College has stood so long and so valiantly. As an educator he could have won national recognition, but he chose this humble means of service to our beloved China.

Dollars and cents are not a true index of the contribution of the younger workers to the Christian enterprise in China. Often their greatest gift is the least evident one: the renunciation involved in remaining in such work.

Mr. Nga's attitude is not an isolated one. The Christian principles of life brought to China by missionaries of the past are now reappearing in young lives that the missionaries have had no contact with.

Does not this prove the vitality of Christian education and its ability to propagate itself and to solve the baffling problems that confront the Chinese youth of today?—From May Number of The Missionary Herald.

WHERE CRIME IS A CAREER.

By MISS D. P. CUSHING,
News Editor, the American Board.

House-breaking and other crimes as a family profession passed on from generation to generation forms the background of the people among whom Miss Ella C. Hoxie, of Sholapur, India, works.

The famous Robber Castes of India numbering 30,000 persons, are a great problem to the government, which is trying to solve the difficult question by putting whole tribes into settlements under police observation. The older folks of these criminal tribes are less plastic and more apt to turn to a new life from expediency rather than conviction. "The child in the midst," however, is the one upon whom the Christian missionaries stake their hopes.

It is among these under-privileged children with their lurid heritage that Miss Hoxie conducts schools, Girl Guides, and various forms of recreation. Bible women in the settlement teach stories and hymns, and efforts are made to instruct the wives and daughters how to sew, how to care properly for their babies, and how to keep clean. There is a small church and Sunday School in the settlement.

Some idea of the impression that is being made upon these embryo criminals can be gained from the fact that out of their meagre daily rations the children of the Sholapur Settlement Schools contributed voluntary gifts of grain, onions, salt, and pepper to the amount of $5.00, which was sent by them to Boston for use among the child famine sufferers in China.

Sholapur is about eight hours distant from Bombay. It is an industrial city, with cotton mills employing thousands of workers. There are some 1,600 workers who belong to the Criminal Tribes Settlement. The adults are allowed to go out of the settlement to work, but they must answer to roll call at 8 o'clock at night. Some of the worst thieves have to answer several times a day to roll call until they begin to show signs of improvement in character. When the "Crims" have been reformed, and many of them are, each is sent out on probation to live and work as a decent citizen.

In speaking of religion, Miss Hoxie points out that it is most important to change these people's idea of God, for so much is done in the name of religion that when they find old ways are not acceptable to the Deity, they are far more ready to change. It is by means of the children who refuse to take part in the superstitious festivities of their parents that the missionaries gain an entre with the parents.

Miss Hoxie's educational work includes over 1,000 pupils in day and night schools, with a teaching staff of 40. There are seven Boy Scout troops, and four Girl Guide groups, and three Bluebird groups.

Miss Hoxie has just returned to America (May 1934) for her furlough. She was born in Lawrence, Kansas, and educated in the State Normal School. She taught four years in Kansas schools before going to India under the American Board in 1914.

Miss Hoxie tells the pathetic story of a small girl in the Criminal Tribes School at Sholapur, who sat weeping quietly by the teacher's side:

"My sister has died and they have taken her away," she sobbed. "What caused her death?" asked the teacher. "She was SO afraid, she JUST DIED!" came the pitiful answer. Cholera was rampant in spite of the missionaries' efforts to teach the people cleanliness. Fear was everywhere.

"When the children come to school they lose some of their fears, but when they go back among their elders in the huts, they find it hard to persuade themselves that the darkness does not hold some evil personage that will 'get them,'" says Miss Hoxie. "We are trying to make real the presence of One who can cast out fear for them. The children, bless them, understand better than their parents. However, it is true again and again that the child often pulls the parents along with them."

SISTER NATIVIDAD.

They call her "Tiva"—Sister Natividad de Meza. She is the wife of a workman in the big sugar mills of Culiacin, Mexico. She and her fellow evangelical Christians are persecuted because of their liberal faith. The foreman threatened to discharge her husband, but could find no reason for doing so because of exemplary conduct. "To me it has been an inspiration to know Tiva and to see the courage of this group of brethren," says Rev. Amadec Hernandez, pastor of the Congregational Church. They remind me of the members of the early Christian Church."

A Story for the Children

SEVEN PILLOWS.

By GLADYS FORDHAM.

"Mamma, here's a letter from Aunt Mary," called Evelyn Hill to her mother one rainy Saturday morning. "I hope it's about our orphans, I do so love to hear about them."

"You may open it if you like and see what Aunt Mary says," said her mother.

Aunt Mary was the matron of the Kingston Orphans' Home, and she often wrote letters to her sister, Evelyn's mother, to tell her what the children were doing. She loved the little orphans, and they loved her, and Evelyn always liked to get a letter about Aunt Mary's "children."

"Dear sister Adelaide and niece Evelyn:" wrote Aunt Mary. "Just a note to tell you of the 'Seven Sisters' as Evelyn calls the seven girls in the seven-year-old crowd. You will remember these girls. They are the ones who live in the big south room at the end of the hall.

"We received a new family yesterday. The father and mother had been killed in an auto accident, and the seven children came in the afternoon.

"When we were fixing their beds, we found we didn't have any pillows for them, and no money to buy pillows with. The 'Seven Sisters' heard of it and came to me with their pillows under their arms, and Elsie Daniels said, 'Here's our pillows for the new orphans, Miss Belding. There are just seven of them, too, and we thought they needed pillows worse than we did. The hurt is worse inside when your mother has just died.'

"Well, I just sat down and cried. I don't know when I can afford to buy them more pillows; we have barely enough for the food and clothing and coal. But I hate to see the little darlings without pillows."

"Oh, Mamma, the poor things, can't we do something?" asked Evelyn, when she had finished reading the letter. "I feel so sorry for the 'Seven Sisters.'"

"I don't see how we can. Daddy is out of work you know, and pillows cost a lot of money."

"I'll see what I can find in the attic," said Evelyn, and upstairs to the tiny attic she hurried.

She went first to the great box where all the heavy quilts were during the summer. In the bottom were a number of quilts that were too worn to be used, but they had never been thrown away. Evelyn took all these out, and underneath she found the very thing she wanted.

"Oh-ooh, Mamma, look what I've found!" she cried. "Grandma's old feather mattresses."

"That's just fine!" said Mother. "I had forgotten all about them. I'll get the other one, and we'll see what we can do with them."

Soon both mattresses were on the floor in the living room. Mother looked carefully at the ticking and found it was still good, but rather dusty from being in the attic so long. So the feathers were carefully taken out, put into wash-tubs, and covered with sheets to keep the feathers from flying around. Then the ticking was cleaned and cut up into pillows.

What fun Evelyn had sewing them up! She was just learning to sew on the machine, and sometimes the seams didn't go right, but finally seven pillows were ready for their feathers. After the feathers were in, Mother sewed up the ends, and they were finished. They were packed into a big wooden box and shipped that very afternoon.

When the living room was cleaned up, Evelyn sat in her little rocking chair by Mother's big one, and said:

"Mamma, it's almost like the song, 'Pass It

On,' isn't it? Only it really is 'Pass It Backwards.' The 'Seven Sisters' gave up their pillows to the new orphans, and then we gave them Grandma's feather mattresses."

"Yes, so it is," said Mother. "Are you tired, Evelyn?"

"Just on the outside, Mother; the inside of me feels rested."—The Burning Bush.

VITAL NEEDS OF TODAY.

By MISS GEORGIA ROBERTSON.

[Read before Columbia W. C. T. U., Washington, D. C.]

Love of money and self-indulgence with thoughts centered only on this life, dulled our sense of right and wrong. This made it easy for the liquor interests, with certain millionaires and their families, to convince the people prohibition had made conditions worse and was ruining our young people and should be repealed.

Alluring promises of enormous revenue, end of bootleg liquor and speakeasies, and promotion of real temperance with the return of legalized liquor without the condemned saloon, were willingly believed when linked with the persuasive promise of saving us individually a few dollars, and for politicians a flood of votes.

Thus was sounded the knell of prohibition. Greed, self-indulgence, political advancement, and lack of real Christianity were the rock-bottom causes that made us willing (church members included) to barter the souls, bodies, health, and happiness of the people in return for intoxicants.

Instead of the old-time saloon where young people, women and children never went, and self-respecting men were ashamed to go, we now have a flood of new-time saloons patronized even by girls, women and children! It is almost impossible to find an eating place outside one of these new-time saloons! We have windows filled with liquor bottles even in residential sections of the Nation's Capital! Drinking is popular even for women, young girls and boys! At fashionable places girls are seen so drunk they can scarcely walk! Many groceries and drug stores where women and children have to go are selling liquor.

Senator Borah on the floor of the Senate read extracts from an article in a Chicago paper parts of which he said he could not read into the Record because it was so "revolting." He told newspaper men later that he had made an independent check on it. "Children were being served drinks without question, children were mixing and serving drinks, and the children were entertainers for those drinking it." He said, "the most heinous form of crime and immorality that could possibly be conceived" is being protected.

The director of the Federal Alcohol Control Administration says there is an enormous increase in drinking under repeal, even greater than in the days before prohibition. He said, "it seems possible" that the illicit stills are turning out what may be more liquor than we drank before prohibition; "that the Government is losing more taxes than it gets, and that a colossal criminal industry, necessarily highly organized, still exists, and still exerts its debauching tendencies on every Governmental agency."

Cheapening legalized liquor by reducing taxes and restrictions on it as proposed in order to drive bootleg liquor out of the country would not succeed. But it would enormously increase drinking, drunkenness, and accidents, for lowering the price of anything greatly increases its sale. The low price of Ford cars—when there were no others within the buying power of the masses—made every other car in the streets, seemingly a Ford. With both cheap legal and bootleg liquor, drunkenness would be so common as to appall even the most ardent wet. Surplus stocks of food and other commodities would increase because of no money left to buy them. Bootleg liquor will remain as long as there are those willing to buy it, because it is always cheaper.

One of the vital needs of today is regular, systematic teaching in all the schools of the scientific facts about beverage alcohol and other narcotics (of which tobacco, including cigarettes, is one), and how they handicap one for success in life along all lines because of their injurious effects on mind, body and character. Adults also should hear repeatedly over the radio and through the press the up-to-date facts about alcohol, which are quite different from the incorrect beliefs of their childhood days. Churches also should make wide use of this information in their various departments and in their bulletins.

Also a relentless war should be waged against liquor and cigarette advertising; against objectionable movies that have undermined the morals of our people and made criminals even of children; also against gambling and betting; against lax divorce laws, and all kinds of vice. Above all we need a nation-wide revival of true religion—sound and Biblical—that will dethrone greed, selfishness and self-indulgence, and make us all alive to our duty to God and humanity. Then we would go forth with prayer in the strength of the Lord and put an end to debauching immortal souls for Government revenue and personal gain!

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

BOARD OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

Financing the Board of Christian Education has seemed to be a difficult job since it was organized in 1918. For a few years enough money was raised so we could have a field secretary who kept an office and did work throughout the Southern Convention. For the last three years we have not been able to have such a worker because the income of the board would not permit.

The work has been carried on through the office of this writer who is chairman of the board. Naturally, the work has been much less than it should have been, for no one can serve one or more churches as pastor and do the work which is needed to be done in the field of religious education in the Southern Convention.

The recent Convention passed the following resolutions concerning finance for this board:

"1. That the Board of Christian Education will need $1,500 annually," and shall share in Conference apportionments to this amount.

"2. That the Board of Christian Education be permitted to ask the various Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Conventions for support."

3. "That to provide support for THE CHRISTIAN SUN, for each year, there shall be paid . . . by the Board of Christian Education the sum of $250.00."

This means that the Board of Christian Education is to share in Conference apportionments to the amount of $1,500, provided the apportionments are raised and can receive funds from Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Conventions.

It was also voted, if I remember correctly, that the board be allowed to call on Sunday Schools for special offerings.

Records show that the board has received in the past few years from one to three hundred dollars from Conference apportionments, and most of the Sunday School Conventions have given practically all of their income to this board, which total amount was about $1,000. In recent years we have not asked for a Children's Day or a Rally Day offering.

If the Board of Christian Education is to carry on in any adequate way it will be necessary for the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Conventions to do a good job of collecting dues, and support the board with these dues. I sincerely hope that every Sunday School will send in the full amount which is asked by the Convention. If you can send more than the specified dues it will be greatly appreciated because the board is almost entirely dependent upon these contributions. We try to be as economical as possible, but it takes money to pay postage, printing, and travel expenses.

I am appealing to you who read this to join with me in trying to make the work of the Board of Christian Education more effective in our churches. Your immediate share in this work will be to see that your Sunday School or Christian Endeavor Society pays all of its dues to the Convention.

I am giving time and energy which should be spent in developing my church and my own physical self in order to carry on this work. It is a pleasure to do it, and it will also be a joy to know that Sunday Schools and Christian Endeavor Societies, in the Carolinas and Virginia, want to share in this work, and that they show that willingness by paying their Sunday School and Christian Endeavor dues.

GETTING READY FOR ELON.

News comes to me from various churches that people are getting ready to go to Elon for the Summer School on July 23rd-30th. Some have signed their registration blank, and others are saving money and making plans to go to Elon.

Programs are already printed, and are being distributed here and there among our churches, and young people especially. If you are interested and have not received a bulletin telling of the school, a postal card sent to this office will bring you the information at once.

The cost for board and registration is only $7.50. This is a remarkably low fee for a week of school, fellowship and a good time. Elon College opens its doors gladly to the people of the Church.

Every church should see to it that representatives go to Elon for the inspiration, training, and spiritual renewal which the Summer School offers. It costs less to train leaders than it does to try to get along without them.

Eastern Virginia Youth Fellowship has set a goal of fifty from Eastern Virginia. Prospects are bright for attaining the goal. How many will be there from the other Conference groups? Sunday School Convention officers, Youth Fellowship officers, pastors and superintendents can well afford to spend some time and energy in getting people lined up to go to Elon Summer School. There is no age limit to those who can go. If you are interested in personal development along religious lines, and if you want to be a better servant of the church, the Elon Summer School is eager to aid you in doing the thing you wish.

SUNDAY.

Young people are going to have to decide whether we are to have Sunday as a day of rest and worship, or whether it will be practically like other days, or perhaps just a holiday.

The court in Norfolk decided recently that Sunday baseball is a moral and physical necessity. The newspapers argue that Sunday baseball is quite all right because already drug stores, gasoline stations, and beach resorts run wide open all day on Sunday.

Aside from the argument we need to remember that Sunday is the day of the resurrection. Those who have loved the Lord Jesus have kept one day each week in memory of the glorious resurrection of the Master, and have used it for the development of their souls and the spread of the Christian message.

Unless somebody is willing to contend for the sacredness and value of this day, the time is not far distant when Sunday will be simply a holiday from the regular routine of week-day duties. Christian young people should decide for themselves whether they want this to happen. If you do not, then it is high time that you find something positive to put into the observance of Sunday which will make it different from a mere holiday or a work day.

THE VIRGINIA VALLEY CONVENTION.

The Virginia Valley Central Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches will meet in the Palmyra Church on June 7th and 8th, next, in regular annual session. Mr. Roy Larrick, president, and his co-workers, are preparing a program which will doubtless be of a high order.

But the program will have value only as its message and inspiration can go to the churches of the Conferences scattered throughout the beautiful valleys and mountains of Virginia. Pastors, superintendents, teachers, adults and young people from every church in that Conference should make it a point to attend the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention.

This writer delights in the thought that he may be able to look again upon the magnificent beauty of Virginia's famous valley and lofty mountains and to share the joys of Christian fellowship with the fine people who join in this Convention.

All of us need to learn everything possible that may help us in our tasks as leaders of the church in a day of transition. Before us lies the greatest challenge which has come to the church in many generations. We must prepare ourselves for leadership in a day like this. The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Conventions should do much to aid us in our work.

THE CHRISTIAN USE OF SUNDAY.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC, JUNE 3, 1934.

Exodus 20:8; Mark 2:27, 28.

When we come to study the life of Christ, we find that he did not make the Sabbath a day of idleness, nor even a day confined wholly to public and private worship, but one of active service in blessing others. On this day especially he went about doing good, ministering to the sick, and bringing relief to those long bound by Satan. And as God is our pattern in all things, we, too, like him, should seek to make the Sabbath a day for helping and blessing others.

By their traditions, numerous regulations and senseless restrictions, the Jews had made the Sabbath a burden and anything but a delight. Christ removed all these, and by his life and teachings put the Sabbath back in its proper place and setting as a day of worship and beneficence, a day for doing acts of charity and mercy, as well as engaging in contemplation of God and in acts of devotion. Thus he magnified and made it honorable.

Consider the various answers which are given by different people as to the purpose of Sunday. The following are some of them:

(a) Sunday should be a day of fun; it is for the people. We are tired of work (at home, in the store, at school).

(b) Sunday is for rest.

(c) Sunday should be different.

(d) Sunday is for worship.

It is with the idea that Sunday is God's day that the Christian Church maintains its belief that Christians should observe it in a particular way. Let us ask several questions about this:

1. Do you like the idea of one day being set aside as "God's day"?

2. In Mark 2:27, 28, Jesus emphasizes the idea that the Sabbath was made for man and not man for the Sabbath.

3. Just how would God want us to use his day?

The church has always considered worship as being one of the necessary phases of a Christian's life on Sunday. Just why is this necessary? Consider some of the functions of worship in church:

(a) To express our gratitude to God for his goodness.

(b) To strengthen our best ideals.

(c) To catch new glimpses of truth and to gain light for our daily problems.

(d) To associate with others who are trying

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

THE LAST JUDGMENT.

LESSON IX—MAY 27, 1934.

GOLDEN TEXT: "We must all be made manifest before the judgment seat of Christ."—II. Cor. 5:10.

LESSON TEXT: Matt. 25:31-46.

There is something rather sobering about having to stand before a judge to hear a sentence pronounced, even if the offense is not a life or death matter. But to have to stand before a judge to hear sentence pronounced for the activities of a whole life, and to know that that sentence was final, to know that there is no appeal—well, that is a serious and solemn thing. And this is the picture which Jesus gives us in the parable of the Last Judgment. "We must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ"—this is one of the hard facts of life which cannot be explained away. All of our modern ideas and our liberal views should not blind us to the fact that every one of us must give an account of himself to Christ.

The Judge.

Jesus Christ is the Judge. That means a great trial. It means for instance that we shall have a fair trial. He will not be influenced by bribes or by partiality. Every man shall be judged on the merits of the case. And he will be judged in the light of all the facts. Only Christ himself can know all the factors that entered into our lives, all the forces that affected our conduct. He knows what is in man, and he will take into consideration all the pros and cons of the situation. This means, of course, that there will be no place for deceit. Christ can discern even to the inmost thoughts and even to the motives.

The Judge will be thorough and he will be just. But he will also be merciful. He will not be indulgent, but neither will he be vindictive. He will not deal with us as criminals, but as brethren. In a sense he will not pass judgment upon us. Rather in his presence we shall find ourselves judged, and either condemned or approved. Let every man be sure that when he appears before the judgment seat of Christ, and before the Great Judge, the Son of Man, that he will have a fair and a friendly trial.

The Question at Issue.

When "all the nations" stand before "the Son of Man" as "he sits on the throne of his glory, to be judged of him," what is the question at issue? Is it a question of material possessions—are men to be judged in terms of how much they have? Is it a question of knowledge—are men to be judged by what they know? Is it a question of social position—are men to be judged in terms of prestige? Is it a question of creeds—are men to be judged in terms of their theological beliefs? Is it a question of church membership—are men to be judged in terms of to what church they belonged? Is it a question of ceremonial practice—are men to be judged in terms of the machinery of worship? Is it a question of race—are men to be judged in terms of color? What is the question at issue? Where is the critical issue?

It is none of these things that have been listed. The case rests upon one central question: Did you, or did you not, show the spirit of humanness to your fellowmen? What was your response to those who were in need? How much of the spirit of service did you have in the so-called little things of life—feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, giving drink to the thirsty, visiting the sick, working with the wayward? It is a comparatively simple test, but it is tremendously far-reaching in its consequences. Profession means nothing when one comes to the judgment seat of Christ. The Judge will judge us in the light of the facts in the case—did we or did we not respond to human need, did we have the spirit of sympathy that prompted us to do something about it, did we minister to those who were so infinitely precious that Christ himself identified himself with them? Men stand or fall at just this point.

The Verdict.

The Judge renders his verdict in the light of the facts in the case. Our record is before him. As he sees he judges. He does not need to do the convicting. He simply announces the eternal principle by which every man is judged. Those who have possessed and expressed the spirit of humanness, the spirit of lowly and loving service, are not guilty; those who have not possessed and expressed it, are guilty. There is nothing that can be done about it. It is the eternal order of things.

The Sentence.

"Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." The world order is built upon the principle of sacrifice and service. From the beginning of things it was ordained that those who had the right spirit should enter into the kingdom of righteousness. The life that has the spirit of humanness in it is the only kind of life that can truly enter into the spirit of the kingdom. To possess this spirit is to have found eternal life itself. "But the righteous into eternal life" is not the statement of a judge who has shown favoritism, but the pronouncement of an abiding spiritual truth, eternal life is a matter of quality and not of length.

"Depart from me, ye cursed, into the eternal fire which is prepared for the devil and his angels"—these are not the words of an arbitrary and unbending and vindictive judge; they are the solemn pronouncement of an abiding spiritual truth. These men were not cursed by God, they cursed themselves. The curse that came upon them was the natural result of the lack of the spirit of humanness in their own lives. One of the most tragic penalties of sin is the way in which it increasingly makes it difficult to do good, is its power to fasten wrong-doing upon the wrong-doer. Sin is its own punishment.

"Eternal fire, eternal punishment"—they are stern words. But they stand for something which is a fact in life. To explain them away might give a comfortable doctrine of life, but it will not fit the facts of life. Why quibble over what hell is like, or where it is, when we know that it is the separation from the good, and the continued practice of the wrong. Our modern world needs to be on its guard, lest in trying to rid itself of a literal hell, it does not overlook the inescapable fact of which the figure of the literal hell is an eternal symbol.

The Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches (formerly the Southern Christian Convention), meeting in Suffolk, Va., took generous action in order to promote actual union of the two branches in Alabama and Georgia. Since we are gradually becoming one body with one set of interests, we who are Congregationalists have also a responsibility for the official Southern organ, THE CHRISTIAN SUN—as also for the Elon College Orphanage. In fact, we promised to mention the matter; in fact, we promised to apply the Negro's plan for a sermon to the situation: "Argufy-Splanify-Put on de rousements."

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy

MONDAY.

"LEARNING HOW TO DIE."

"I am now ready to be offered. The time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight. I have finished my course. I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord the righteous judge shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto them also that love his appearing."—II. Tim. 4:6-8.

Life is learning things and a passing on to something else not to do the same thing, maybe, again.

We spend our lives to accomplish something, hoping to enjoy it. When it is accomplished we pass on and leave it for someone else. How often one works and strives to earn and build a home. At last it is a reality, and we die and leave it.

But such is God's will. Our labors are not in vain if we accomplish. To pass on and leave it, is but passing into the greater reward God holds in store for us.

Prayer—O Lord, give us thy spirit. Give us vision to see the greater rewards beyond the material things of this life. In Christ's name, we ask it.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"TIRED OF GOD."

"Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me . . . and ye shall find rest for your souls."—Matt 7:29.

"Tired of God." This is an expression we heard the other day as it was applied to our restless age when one cannot sit still and listen for thirty minutes to the ordinary story of Jesus. It is too tame and monotonous. This generation is restless and wants to be on the go. It is frivolous and wants to be entertained. It is superficial and is bored with thoughtfulness. It is willful and disregards the rights and comforts of others. Anything that steadies them, curbs their action, and curtails excitement, tires them. In the same sense they will not stand God. They tire of him, too. Does this mean you?

Prayer—Dear Father, come into our home and into our souls and give us peace. We want to love thee and delight in thee. May we not miss it. In Jesus' name, we ask it.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"THE TEN COMMANDMENTS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT."

Read Matt. 5, 6 and 7.

1. Thou shalt seek happiness as the chief end in life. (See Beatitudes.)

2. Thou shalt let others know of your faith and trust in God, and use thy influence for him. "Let your light shine."

3. Thou shalt be charitable to all. "If you love them that love you, what thanks have ye?" "Love your enemies" "Except your righteousness exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees ye cannot enter the kingdom of heaven."

4. Thou shalt be more than moral. "Ye must be born again." "Christ in you the hope of glory." Believe in God and worship and serve him, not in form but really in spirit.

5. Thou shalt Christianize the law. All laws for the right are God's laws, and his spirit, as it is in Christ, must be put in it and must be obeyed through the spirit of righteousness.

6. Thou shalt attach most importance to spiritual values. All other values are measured by these values. "Lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven where moth and rust doth not corrupt."

7. Thou shalt be humble. This is the chief characteristic of a Christian life. "Judge not that ye be not judged."

8. "Thou shalt pray without ceasing." Prayer is communion and conference with God in thine own thought and soul. "When we pray, Our Father, etc." and he that prayeth believing shall receive.

9. Thou shalt have great consideration for others and their good. "Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them."

10. Thou shalt always distinguish between the good and the evil. Therefore, learn from Christ, the Son of God, the false from the real and the true.

The above are ten outstanding doctrines of the Christian religion as set forth by Christ in the "Sermon on the Mount."

Prayer—(Say the Lord's Prayer, and let your soul go out in the desires you have in the light of these teachings.)

THURSDAY.

"THE PRAYERS OF OUR LORD JESUS."

First: In obedience to mission.—Luke 3:21-22.

This prayer was offered at the River Jordan. "Jesus also being baptized and praying." From him we learn that we must not attempt to "fulfill righteousness" without prayer, and that prayer made right will bring answer promptly and unmistakably.

Second: Beginning the Day.—Mark 1:35.

Jesus entering upon his day's duty with prayer early in the morning.

The duty of prayer in the morning, the solitariness of prayer, the necessity of prayer in daily duties, are the lessons we should learn.

Third: Necessary to service.—Luke 5:16.

We learn from our Lord here, the ministry of prayer as a means to service and as a state of love in which others have confidence. Before he went among the people to heal their sick, he went to the wilderness to pray. We feel terribly guilty in our little praying.

Fourth: For guidance in action.—Luke 6:12.

This prayer was an all-night prayer in the mountain, seeking guidance of the Father in the choice of disciples.

Every work designed to advance God's glory should be preceded by, and opened with prayer.

Fifth: To keep humble.—Matt. 11:25, 26.

The kingdom of God is not revealed to the self-sufficient, but to the humble in heart. Like Christ we are to be thoughtful for everything that sees good in God's light.

Prayer—Our Father, we know not what to pray for as we ought, but are ashamed of our prayerlessness. Fill us with the spirit of Christ, and we will always look to thee.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"THE PRAYERS OF JESUS."

Sixth: At meals.—Luke 22:9.

So far as we are able to learn, Jesus never sat down to eat without giving thanks to the Father. Does it impose upon his children a like duty? If Christ, our Saviour, needed to do so, shame upon our neglect of it.

Seventh: At the close of the day.—Matt. 14:23.

The close of the day finds Jesus in the mountain, probably drinking in the glory of the handiwork of the Father in the golden sunset, and the charm of the scenery; and it inspired him (if we dare humanize him that much), and his soul went out to God in prayer.

How far are we from that kind of worship? The closing scenes of the day find us hurrying through dinner, dressing, and rushing to a party, or a show, returning home at midnight, often later. Even the most devout runs the risk of being caught in the tide of it all.

Prayer—Our Father, we want thy soul in our souls; we want the real values of life; give us, dear Lord, the gift to see thee in all our day's work, and in all that it befaces.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

CRACKLEPROOF.

"Listen O isles, unto me; and harken, ye peoples, from far."—Read Isa. 49:1-7.

So sensitive is the microphone, that it enormously multiplies any sound made in the room it is in. This is a point to be noted by all who broadcast speeches. They are strictly limited in time and so must write and read their speeches, but they must not let the paper crackle in their hands, or they will bombard the ears of the listeners most unpleasantly. To prevent this, a new soft "crackleproof" paper has been invented, that will be used in broadcasting.

In all speaking, success depends on the speaker's immediate contact with the hearer. However carefully he has prepared, he must give the impression of speaking ex tempore. The common phrase expresses it exactly: what is valued and needed is a "heart-to-heart" talk.

Prayer—Give us, O thou who didst speak as never man spake, the art of coming close to all listeners. May our souls speak to their souls, that we may win them to thee.—Amen.

SUNDAY.

HALF-A-MINUTE MEMORY.

"Ye shall seek Jehovah thy God and thou shalt find him, when thou searchest after him with all thy heart and with all thy soul."—Read Deut. 4:25-31.

A Dartmouth College professor, making investigations in New York City, tested a large number of one-year-old babies to see how long they could remember. In each case he let the baby see him put away some object the baby wanted, but kept the baby from going after it at once. It was found that the babies, both boys and girls could remember where the object had been placed only about a half minute. If allowed to seek it later than that, they had either lost the memory of where it was or their desire to have it.

Many of us are hardly more than babies in our search for the great spiritual blessings. In that realm, very often, our memory is of the half-minute variety. We are sure, just now, that we want above all things to be pure and strong and noble, to know God better, to live the heavenly life. Then some worldly-minded friend says a few words, and the impression is wiped completely from our soul.

Prayer—Our Father, may ours be the whole-hearted search for thee. May we allow nothing to disturb it, nothing to draw us away from it.—Amen.

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, Pastor.

GRASS, AND GIANTS, AND GRASSHOPPERS.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"There we saw giants; and we were in our own sight as grasshoppers, and so were we in their sight."—Numbers 13:33.

Some texts we choose for the grandeur of their words. We cannot choose this one for that. But it is a wonderful text. It is the cry of great men who have lost their courage. And it tells a rather complete story. Sometimes I see myself in this text. And I try to lift my eyes to the hills. I hope we can see this morning how foolish these men made themselves with the words they uttered, and that we may resolve to avoid the same mistake.

I.

These were great men. They were selected men. They stood above the average in their society. They were leaders. They had been sent on a great commission. They had the mighty promises of God back of them, and from God's chosen race they came. They should have walked with uplifted faces, and should have been spiritual and moral giants. Of the chosen race, then, they were leaders. Of all the races who knew the deepest knowledge and wisdom they had a knowledge of God himself. Their worship was of Jehovah, and their cause was just. And as I say they were mighty men.

They had been sent on a great task. It was theirs to view the land of Caanan from Zin to Rehob. "Go up into the mountains, and see the land, what it is; and the people that dwelleth therein, whether they be strong, or weak, few or many; and what the land is that they dwell in, whether it be good or bad; and be of good courage, and bring fruit of the land." Already God himself had told them that he would give it to them. They were to go, and see how great it was, and how good it was, and what a victory was eventually to be theirs. It was a great commission.

They had been sent to a great country. "The Holy Land" the succeeding ages have called it. They reported that it was flowing with milk and honey. The fruit which they brought back surpassed anything hitherto seen. It was simply marvelous. In that land was to be Bethlehem, birthplace of the world's Redeemer, and the most illustrious son of that, or any other race. In that land was to be Jerusalem, with its kings and temples. In that land was to be erected a cross which would make it holy for all time to come. They looked upon that land from one end to the other, and they might well have said the half has never yet been told. And even till this day all the history of that land has not been made. It was a great land.

II.

They saw the land, but lost sight of God. The land was all that it should have been. It measured fully up to the promise. But when they lost sight of God they also lost sight of their divine nature and their better selves. "And we were in our own sight as grasshoppers." Now is not that something! How well that is worded. It does not say "we were as grasshoppers," for they were not; but it is "we were in our own sight as grasshoppers."

They lost sight of God, but they saw the giants. They had been told to be of good courage. But they lost their courage when they lost their view of God. When they lost their view of God they got a distorted view of themselves, and a distorted view of their foes. Giants? The world has never belonged to giants. Goliath was a giant, and David was a meek little shepherd lad, but the battle went to David. I never saw but one giant, and he sat in a circus all day! It was really a sore affliction to be as big as that man was. He sat and let people look at him all day, and the owners of the circus benefitted from the revenue. The world has never belonged to giants. "The meek shall inherit the earth." The lion is the king of beasts, and is getting ever nearer and nearer extinction. The lamb is multiplying. There must be millions of sheep for every single lion. The fierce and ferocious hawk is far more mighty than the domestic chicken, but for every hawk there are numerous chickens, and the hawk is not possessing the world of fowls at all.

They saw themselves as grasshoppers! A young lady happened to see this subject announced in our church bulletin, and she said: "Humph, I am a grasshopper." No you are not. You are a child of God! They saw themselves as grasshoppers, and after they saw themselves as grasshoppers, then, and not until then, the others saw them as grasshoppers also. How telling are the words of our text: "And we were in our own sight as grasshoppers, and so were we in their sight." But they were as grasshoppers in their own sight first. We are never grasshoppers in the other fellow's sight until we are first grasshoppers in our own sight.

When they lost their view of God—of his promises, of his ever-abiding presence—their view was not from the mountain-top as Moses had commanded that it should be, but it was from the turf beneath their feet. "Grass"-hoppers had gotten a "grass view." Of the earth earthy! Men are not made to view the world lying flat on their backs. Any sort of an enemy would look like a giant if above a man in that position. When we see God in the right perspective, we see ourselves in the right perspective. We become very humble, indeed; but we become very confident, on the other hand, that our God is not going to fail us. I do not know which is worse—to be a giant and think oneself as a grasshopper; or to be a grasshopper, and think oneself a giant. The true man of God is humble, but he is never a coward. Cowardice and the Christian religion do not keep company together.

II.

They lost their standing. Having put their faces where their feet should have been, they lost their standing with God. God pronounced a curse upon every coward of them. They lost their standing themselves, for they were little in their own sight! And they lost their standing with others for they were as grasshoppers in their own sight.

Of course, we all remember two of these men were in the minority, and brought up a minority report. They said the land is great, and we are plenty able to possess it. They believed the promises of God, believed in God's people's ability. For this courage their friends sought to stone them to death. But God kept his promise to them, although forty years deferred on account of the cowardice of their brethren, and they only of the twelve select men were ever permitted to have a portion in the Promised Land.

In conclusion, God will not thank you to be a grasshopper—he does not need you to be giants—nor will posterity appreciate it if having a chance to stand up in a great day and age you forego that opportunity by magnifying your foes instead of fighting for the possession God intends that you as Christian men and women should have. God forbid that we should face any of the so-called monsters of our day with the word "can't" upon our lips, and a lack of courage in our hearts.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

We were very happy to have with us last week, Mr. J. M. Darden, of Suffolk, Va., president of the Orphanage Board, and twenty-six of our church workers, representing Suffolk, Bethlehem, Norfolk, First, Portsmouth, Newport News, Franklin, Holland, Cypress Chapel, South Norfolk, Rosemont, Ivor, Oakland, Liberty Spring and Mt. Carmel Churches, and I may have failed to get the names of others represented. We appreciated the visit of these good friends, and trust that they enjoyed their visit.

We are always glad to have visitors to come to see the Orphanage, its children, its plant, its dairy and its farm, etc. We find that when people come to see us and see the opportunity to serve, they are always more interested in our work.

They had the opportunity to attend the Commencement exercises of our public school. Two of our girls were in the graduating class, one of them being from Suffolk, Va., Mr. Darden's home town, and he presented her with a beautiful graduation present. Mr. Darden's speech in presenting this present was timely and to the point, and was appreciated by the audience.

The visitors also had an opportunity to visit Elon College while here, and see its beautiful buildings and campus. We trust that their visit was so pleasant that they will come to see us more often in the future. It was inspiring to us to have them come, and it did our children lots of good. They made up a nice purse and presented it to the two girls who graduated, which was highly appreciated.

We truly hope that all our Sunday Schools will come to the rescue of the Orphanage, and give it liberal support. We do all we can here on our farm and with the dairy to help support it, but it takes money to farm and to run a dairy. It also takes money to care for 100 children. We are entirely dependent on our Sunday Schools and churches and friends to furnish money to support it.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

to follow Jesus in a loyal fellowship of disciples of Jesus.

(e) To confess our sins and mistakes and to seek strength to overcome our temptations to selfishness and wrong-doing.

(f) To become more aware of the presence of God in life, so that he may be more real to us during the days that follow.

The God that made the earth,
And all the worlds on high,
Who gave the creatures birth,
In earth, and sea, and sky;
After six days in work employed,
Upon the seventh a rest enjoyed.
The Sabbath day was blessed,
Hallowed and sanctified;
It was Jehovah's rest,
And so it must abide;
'Twas set apart before the fall,
'Twas made for man; 'twas made for all.

OBITUARIES

ELLA PIERCE ROGERS.

How thickly foud memories stand around the home of eshildhod. They are fresh with the dew of the morning.

Winding through the ways, climbing up the hill of time, one thinks of those bright days developing into the beautiful springtime of life, with such wide fields of usefulness lying before.

How dear are the thoughts, as they fly quickly around the throne of the mind.

There are many persons yet living that have a ditsinct remembrance of a fair young girl who, years ago, had her home in that pleasant village, in all happiness as though the earth were one vast flower and she a butterfly, moulded expressly to sip its sweetness.

Ella Pierce Rogers was born at Corapeake, Gate County, N. C. She was one of a large family of children of Mrs. Susie Pierce and the late Mitchell Pierce. In early womanhood she married Phillip L. Rogers, of Cypress Chapel, Nansmond County, Va. During these eventful years she identified herself with the Cypress Chapel Christian Church. Active and co-worker, her greatest achievement and joy was organizing the Ladies' Aid Society, of which she was treasurer, and its contribution to the erection of the new church building.

Her life had increased in holiness, her spirit in meekness, for she had grown familiar with humau souls, deep in the shadow of the Cross.

The first impulse of life was the quick joyous upshooting of the gree blades of spring. Next her course through the world was shaped, the ear of corn was fashioned and stood in the field, light, graceful and fresh in summer verdure. But at length it began to bow beneath the weight of its owu wealth, the green sheath gradually swelled with increasing richness of its owu treasure. Then the grain grew golden with ripeness; an Angel Reaper stood ready to sever the drooping stem, and bear home the perfect fruit to the harvest of glory.

"Her suffering ended with the day,
 Yet lived she at its close;
 And breathed the long, long night away,
 In statue-like repose.
 "But when the suu, in all his state,
 Illumed the eastern skies,
 She passed through Glory's morning-gate
 And walked in Paradise."

V. B. HARRELL.

ROGERS.

Whereas, our heavenly Father, in his infinite wisdom and love, has removed from our midst our co-worker, Mrs. Ella Rogers, who was a loyal member of Cypress Chapel Christian Church, a consecrated worker in the Sunday School and Missionary Society, one who was ever ready to lend a helping hand to the needy, a devoted companion, a kind friend and neighbor, who always went about her tasks with a smile; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That God, in his all-wise providence, doeth all things well, and while we mourn our loss we realize our loss is heaven's gain and we bow in humble submission to the will of him who is ever mindful of us.
2. That we strive to emulate the many works of her useful life in her home.
3. That we extend our deepest sympathy and love to her husband in this sad hour, and commend him to Christ, who alone can bind up broken hearts.
4. That a copy of these resolutions be placed on the minutes of Cypress Chapel Missionary Society, one sent to her husband, and one to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

KEELING.

Sarah Frances, the widow of James F. Keeling, aged 80 years, departed this life April 26, 1934. She was the daughter of Thomas and Sallie Branson. In early life she professed faith in Christ and joined Mt. Zion M. E. Church.

In 1874, she was married to James F. Keeling. To this union were born 10 children: 5 sons and 3 daughters survive her. Two children died in infancy.

She was a devoted companion and a loving mother.

May these children trust in God and prepare to meet mother again.

The funeral was held at Mt. Zion, conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. D. R. Moffitt. B. H. LOWDERMILK.

Vanderbilt University

The Foundation and the other Foundations that are affiliated with Vanderbilt University School of Religion comprise the only Interdenominational Theological School in the South. Through this affiliation the students enjoy the rights and privileges of Vanderbilt University.

DEGREES.

Candidates for degrees are required to have completed their college courses.

The degree of Bachelor of Divinity is offered to qualified students who complete the required courses.

Vanderbilt University also offers the degrees of Master of Arts and Doctor of Philosophy, in accordance with the regulations established in its several departments.

MORE THAN A SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY.

Because of our affiliation with Vanderbilt, our relations with other nearby colleges where our students can take courses without tuition, and the cooperation of the American Red Cross and other social agencies in the city, we prepare students for many types of Christian service.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

The National Council to Meet.—

The National Council of Congregational and Christian Churches will convene in Oberlin, O., June 21st. The "General Council Number" of Advance for next week will carry special features regarding the Council meeting. THE SUN will make every effort to carry the necessary information, but those who are not subscribers for Advance will, if they expect to attend the Council, do well to write to 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., asking that this issue be sent them.

Virginia's Revenue Increases.—

Finances of the Commonwealth of Virginia are in good shape according to State Treasurer John M. Purcell. During the past ten months of the fiscal year, the State's revenue has gone up $1,069,638. The treasurer added that with expected returns between now and June 30th, the general fund, which has showed a slump, would be in better shape. This news comes on the eve of the offering of $1,000,000 in certificates of indebtedness, and should make these certificates more in demand than usual.

Proves His Point.—

A candidate for the North Carolina legislature, on a wet platform, tried to prove his point recently by getting drunk. He was found on a street corner by the police and taken to jail, later to be fined $5 and given a 10-day suspended sentence. "I did it on purpose," he is said to have contended. "I wanted to show that the people of North Carolina can get all the liquor they want in spite of the State dry law." Even at that North Carolina is lucky, for many people in Virginia are getting more liquor than they want. While the rest of the State departments closed on Memorial Day, the Virginia Liquor Control—mark the word—Board kept open its stores half a day.

Editor of "Christian Science Monitor" Passes.—

The press has lost a valuable contributor in the passing away of Willis J. Abbot, of the Christian Science Monitor. We do not know under what circumstances he became identified with the Christian Scientists, nor do we know what was the particular philosophy of life that his adherence to them implied, but we agree with Advance that he "demonstrated what can be done toward solving the problem of issuing a clean, morally wholesome, interesting and constructive daily newspaper." "His editorial genius," we are told, "had much to do with the Monitor's conspicuous success. . . . Its special articles on public events and issues, home and foreign, have been of remarkable authority and quality." He was an advocate of Prohibition, and had the cause been as ably served in other fields, the results might have been different. He was the nephew of another great editor and writer, Lyman Abbot.

Business Week Scores Darrow.—

The current issue of Business Week scores the Darrow report strongly, and is "convinced that Darrow, given a chance to perform a most valuable service, set out instead to put his preconceived views before the country in what he hoped to be a withering blast." It doesn't agree with Mr. Darrow, but acknowledges in spite of this disagreement that "it may turn out that the country is better served by the Darrow report than it would have been through a calm, dispassionate, impeccably judicial study." It further acknowledges that "while Mr. Darrow didn't prove his case, there is grave suspicion that he had a case." One thing is certain: Mr. Darrow did not destroy NRA by his withering blasts, but he waked the people to the fact that it wasn't perfect. As business conditions improve, the government is going to find it harder and harder to keep its finger in the business pie. The American people come of a breed that fled Europe because of a desire for individual freedom, and inborn desire though it be dormant for a while will eventually assert itself in the business world.

It Is Hard On the Mothers.—

"One more organization is needed. The mothers should organize a society to resist the exploiters of Mother's Day. Those who listened to the flood of bathos which was poured out over the radio on Mother's Day should do something to stop the nonsense. To be crooned at, mooned over, and generally browbeaten in the name of sacred motherhood by the long string of vendors of perfume and chocolates and watches and pink roses is all too much. The Postmaster General leaped into the fray with a trick stamp, which, as he probably figured correctly, would add to the revenues of the postoffice department. It would have grieved Mr. Whistler to see the use to which his portrait of a mother was put. The picture was mutilated and cut, and the addition of a tawdry bid for trade. Mother's Day might well be used as a dignified and significant symbol and day of remembrance, but it has become the excuse for a lot of arrant sentimentality in the name of trade."—Advance. What has been said in regard to Mothers' Day might well be applied to Memorial Day, and to other commemorative days. The spirit of these days has been surrendered to commercialism and greed. Might it not be better without the day than to have it so desecrated?

Commencement at Elon College.—

Elon College always has a good commencement. This year it was somewhat marred by the unusually inclement weather for the time of year, but it was, nevertheless, one of the best commencements that the College has ever had. The program was carried out as printed in the last issue of this paper, except that the annual barbecue of Alumni Day was rained out. The graduates of this year carried the total number up well beyond the thousand mark, and a thousand graduates, working together, would assure a greater and more useful future for Elon. Their's is an opportunity. The musical programs, under the direction of Professor Steere; the various exhibits; the addresses by Dr. Dwight Bradley, Dr. John G. Truitt, Hon. Clyde Hoey, Mrs. Rose Howell Holder, Alumni Orator, and President L. E. Smith; and the contributions made by the student body, were of the highest order, and greatly enhanced the pleasures of returned alumni and visitors. There is another time that should be mentioned in this connection: Elon won the championship in its college class for the State in the three major sports this year, bringing in the trophies for football, baseball and basket-ball as well. Coach Walker is to be commended.

British Exchequer Shows Surplus.—

At the time when the United States has been piling up a deficit that has sent its debt beyond the war-time peak, Great Britain has gotten her house in order, and shown a surplus. During the fiscal year, according to announcement of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, his government shows a surplus of more than thirty-one million pounds, or in the neighborhood of $150,000,000. This was not brought about by any sleight-of-hand, but by sound administration by sound business men, pledged to a program of economy, a balanced budget, and the avoidance of unsound and artificial measures. Other results which have come because of the government's program are the lowest unemployment since 1930, and a reduction in taxes. This seems all the more wonderful when it is remembered that only three or four years ago, Great Britain was on the verge of bankruptcy. A radical government was in charge, and the country had been turned over to experimentation. The resources of the United States are several times greater than that of our mother nation across the sea, but they are not so great but what they can be exhausted by continuing to spend more than our income, and by the continuing of experimentation the results of which are acknowledgedly wrong. Why cannot the United States take a leaf out of the book being now written by Great Britain and begin trusting brains more, rather than brain trusts.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Dr. and Mrs. W. M. Jay, of Holland, Va., whose daughter is a member of the graduating class of Elon College this week, are pleasant and welcome visitors at Elon, where in the years of their residence here they made many very warm friends.

We learn through Dr. E. L. Moffitt that Dr. W. A. Harper, who is now teaching at Vanderbilt University, was carried to the Vanderbilt Hospital last Monday because of sudden illness. No particulars have been received at this time, but we hope for him a speedy recovery.

President Roy A. Larrick, of the Valley Virginia Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention, calls attention to the fact that the Convention meets with Palmyra Church, Edinburg, Va., Thursday and Friday, June 7th and 8th. An inviting program is in preparation and a large attendance of delegates and visitors is anticipated.

Rev. Victor B. Chicoine will begin his pastorate at the church at Winter Park, Fla., next Sunday. The church is anticipating his coming with interest and enthusiasm and sincere confidence that a happy pastorate is in prospect. Mr. Chicoine comes to the Winter Park Church after a successful experience of several years at Lyndenville, Vermont.

Rev. and Mrs. R. T. Grissom, Fancy Gap, Va., under date of May 21st, write: Our services yesterday were fine. We had more people at Rocky Ford than we could seat. Our attendance is splendid and we are doing our best to increase spiritual interest and activity. We realize that our Father is giving us great opportunities, and we are doing our best to fill each one with service for him. We feel weak in the great task here."

Dr. Erwin L. Shaver, secretary of Leadership Training for the Education Society, was one of the principle leaders for the Florida Leadership Conference which was held at the First Presbyterian Church at Winter Haven, May 7th-11th. Following the Conference, he visited the church at St. Petersburg, Winter Park and Ormond, Fla., speaking and conducting conferences. Miss Pattie Lee Coghill was also on the faculty of the Coaching Conference and also shared in the other conferences mentioned.

The Southern Methodist Church, in their General Conference at Jackson, Miss., declined, after petitions and a rather warm debate, to grant women equal clerical rights with men in their church. One of our Methodist contemporaries, evidently deploring this decision of the General Conference, points out the fact that at the very time the women were pleading in vain before the Conference, Congress passed a bill which eliminates the last inequalities between men and women in the nationality laws of the country.

Sunday, May 27th, the real opening day of the annual Elon Commencement, was a great and good day for the multitudes who came. Dr. Bradley gave a great sermon at the morning service, and the music, under the leadership of Professor Steere, was a comfort to the heart and an inspiration to the soul. In the afternoon, Fletcher Moore, organist, assisted by Miss Griffey, violinist, of Elon College, gave a marvelous period of meditation and inspiration in a vesper recital. At 8:30 P. M., President L. E. Smith, of the College, gave a baccalaureate address to the seniors, using words of wisdom and sound advice to these promising young men and young women who had been with us for four years and so soon to go out to face the trials of actual experiences in the great world about us.

Rev. D. M. Spence is the pastor of our Pleasant Ridge Church, Guilford County, and held a very appropriate memorial service in his church May 20th. THE SUN's editor was present and preached at the 11 o'clock service. This is one of our promising rural churches, very, very much in need of a larger building with Sunday School rooms. The editor does not recall having attended a church recently from which classes of the Sunday School were being taught out in the grove under the shade of friendly trees close by. This is exceedingly inviting when the weather is favorable, but hard on the classes if nature is not friendly at the time being. Here is devoutly hoping that Brother Spence will be able to lead his people on in the good and necessary task of enlarging his church and adding Sunday School rooms. The large and beautiful rural county school building close by indicates that here is a real opportunity, as well as a pressing need, for adequate Sunday School and Christian Endeavor equipment.

Our good brother, Dr. Woodworth, Merom, Ind., after forty years a missionary in Japan, recognizes that even those in the household of faith have many opinions and views of their own as to non-essentials, and feels that differences of opinion should not prevent good fellowship in the household. He points out: "In Claremont, Cal., where there is a resort for retired missionaries, there is only one church in the town, and in it there are representatives of thirty-six denominations. They do not argue creeds, but emphasize brotherly love. I saw that their fellowship was fine. The chicken may be served all right for dinner, but some like one part and some another. My wife always claims the liver. Just so, some people like to ride one hobby of doctrine and some another. But, further about the chicken, I prefer the gravy (with mashed potatoes), which is a combination of all the parts. So I get along with all of them and count them my beloved brethren. When we see the greatness of Jesus in the other world, I reckon our little differences will be immediately forgotten."

Rev. K. Matsuno, with our Christian Literature Society of Japan, writing under date of Tokyo, May 4, 1934, says: "Changes are taking place in many ways in our field here. The McKnights, Dr. Fry, Mr. Downs and many others (missionaries) are leaving Japan on furlough, but no one can tell how many are coming back to Japan after a year of rest. That our native forces are not strong enough to take their places all at once is quite apparent. It all means, therefore, that the evangelization of Japan can but suffer a great deal, at least, for a decade or two because of the lack of missionary spirit in America in recent years. Still God knows better than we, and he is a mighty conqueror all the way through. So I need not worry about it, but go on praising his glorious name even more than ever. Pray for us." This is, indeed, a note of great regret and sadness to the Mission Secretary. In a time when thousands and millions of our good American money is flowing through all the channels of benevolence to give bread to the hungry, shelter to the homeless, and employment to the unemployed, our Christian forces seem so indifferent to the hunger of the world and the plea for the Bread of Life to be broken to souls that are perishing. We are calling home missionaries and closing up churches both in the needy places at home and abroad, thinking, possibly, that financial recovery will bring spiritual recovery also. In the writer's opinion, it must be the other way around, and before we can have real financial and economic recovery, we must have spiritual and moral recovery of our own souls and the willingness to share with others that Bread of Life which our Lord alone can give.

BLUE RIDGE CONFERENCE.

The annual Blue Ridge Leadership Training Conference will be held at Robert E. Lee Hall, Black Mountain, N. C., July 3rd-11th. This Conference has come to be one of the most significant conferences in our Southeast fellowship. It is designed not to conflict with the Young People's Conferences that are held in the various States, but for pastors, Student Summer Service workers, and for church leaders and the more advanced young leaders of our churches. The Conference is beautifully housed at Blue Ridge where they enjoy wonderful mountain scenery.

Again this year, Dr. W. A. Harper, of Vanderbilt School of Religion, will be the Dean. Among those who will compose the faculty are: Dr. Frederick Field Goodsell, secretary of the American Board; Dr. Malcolm Dana, of the Town and Country Work for the Extension Boards; Dr. Elisha A. King, of Miami Beach, Fla.; Rev. William T. Scott, of Winston-Salem, N. C.; Rev. Alfred W. Hurst, of Chattanooga, Tenn.; Misses Priscilla Chase, Pattie Lee Coghill, Marguerite Davison, Extension Workers; Rev. Milo J. Sweet and Rev. Fred B. Ensminger. Mrs. W. A. Harper will act as hostess and Rev. David W. Shepherd, of Phenix City, Ala., will act as Recreation Leader and also teach one of the courses for Student Summer Workers.

Special rates can be had at Robert E. Lee Hall and the leaders in our churches are urged to attend. Make this a part of your vacation. For information write to the Conference Chairman, Dr. Edwin C. Gillette, 117 West Forsyth St., Jacksonville, Fla.

LEBANON, VA.

At my regular appointment at Lebanon on the third Sunday in April, Deacon W. L. Taylor asked me for my car keys to use my car for a short while, just before preaching service. When I was leaving the church, I found the car filled with good things for our home pantry.

Mrs. Newman and I are very grateful for this thoughtful expression of kindness and good-will on the part of the good people of Lebanon Church.

The third Sunday in May has been, for years, our annual Memorial Day. This year the day was observed with services both morning and afternoon, with a lunch at the noon hour. This is both Memorial and Home Coming Day, and is fruitful of results for good. Besides encouraging the community to keep the cemetery neat, it keeps alive the interest and love for the church on the part of many who have settled at a distance, but make the annual pilgrimage back to the old community and church to decorate the graves of departed loved ones and share in the other services of the day. The other great occasion of the year is the annual protracted meeting, which is held the week following the third Sunday in July.

C. E. NEWMAN.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON MEMOIRS.

TO THE SUFFOLK CONVENTION,

Since the last session of our Convention, the Death Angel has invaded our ranks and taken from our midst the following ministers:

DR. W. KNIGHTON BLOOM.
DR. D. A. LONG.
REV. A. H. SHEPHERD.
DR. W. W. STALEY.
REV. G. R. UNDERWOOD.

The Committee did not have at hand the material which would have made it possible to give a detailed account of the lives and the ministry of these men of God, but it does want to pay tribute to their character, and to give thanks for their service. They were men of integrity, of faith, of spiritual insight, of loyalty to the Kingdom, of sacrifice—men who by their lives and their labors gave abundant evidence that they had been called of God, and that they had the blessing of God upon them and their work. Four of them were veterans both from the standpoint of years, and of experience and service, but almost without exception they maintained an interest in the work of our Convention and of the Church of Christ to the end, and they were fruitful in good works to the last. They fought a good fight, they finished their course, they kept the faith. They are worthy members of that long list of ministers who have helped to bring the Kingdom of God nearer to fruition.

Without any disposition to show partiality, but because of the special factors in the case, your Committee would like to make special reference to two of the ministers whose names are listed above, in a more specific way. Although Dr. Bloom was not connected in an official way with our Convention, as an official of the Congregational Churches of the Southeast, his work brought him not only within the borders of our Convention, but into personal and official contact with the officials of our Convention. We desire to express our appreciation of his Christian character, his friendly spirit, his wise counsel, his clear vision, his vital faith, his cooperative efforts, his spiritual influence.

And certainly this report would be incomplete and unfair if it did not give special recognition to the life and labors of that faithful and fruitful man of God, Dr. W. W. Staley. Dr. Staley was for thirty-two years president of this Convention, and much of the stability and the success of the work of the Convention was due to his insight and his foresight, and to his consecrated service. Dr. Staley was also, for eleven years, president of Elon College, the Convention College, and throughout its history he was a member of the Board of Trustees of the College, and the influence of his life and the contribution which he made are incalculable. In addition to these offices, Dr. Staley throughout his life, in both official and unofficial ways, has been a source both of strength and inspiration to the Convention and to our church. His integrity of character, his sound judgment, his friendly spirit, his indomitable courage, his abundant and varied services, his sacrificial spirit, and his Christ-like life stamp him as one of the truly great men of the Christian Church, and the Convention is bigger and better because he lived and labored in it. We give thanks for this man of God and this servant of men.

It seemed appropriate to your Committee to include in this report the name of a layman, Mr. E. T. Holland, who for a number of years was a member of the Board of Christian Education, and who was faithful and helpful in his duties as a member of that Board. The members of that Board have already expressed their appreciation of the services of this faithful servant of the Convention in the work which was committed unto him, and we desire to add our word of appreciation.

We cannot, of course, list the names of all those men and women of our Convention who have passed from this earthly life during the past biennium, but we do hereby record our grateful appreciation of their lives and their services to the Convention and to the church, and we rejoice that they have entered into their reward.

At the beginning of our report we stated that the Death Angel had invaded our ranks and taken from our midst some of our ministers and laymen. Perhaps it would be more true to the spiritual facts to say that the Angel of Life had come for them, and had introduced them into the true and higher life that is life indeed. They have been promoted from the church visible into the larger and more abiding fellowship of the church invisible. They have entered into their reward, but their works do follow them. These all died, having obtained a good report through faith, but not having received the promises, God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect. Wherefore, seeing we are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the Author and the Finisher of our faith.

We, your Committee, recommend that this Convention give hearty thanks for the lives and labors of these men and women, named and unnamed, who have thus enriched and strengthened the work of the Convention, that we pray God's blessing and comfort upon their loved ones, and that we here dedicate ourselves anew to the unfinished task to which they gave themselves, and to which they, being dead, yet call us.

TIMOTHY THOMAS INTERVIEWS BISHOP FREEMAN.

Thomas—Do you feel that the church has been justly or unjustly criticised and condemned for its inaction on vital issues?

Bishop Freeman—I think the church has been justly criticised and condemned for its supineness and inaction where vital issues were at stake. It has been content to pursue its policy of narrow disinterestedness or unconcern for the weal of the many, by assiduously cultivating the popular favor and patronage of the few. For the sake of an imaginary and ephemeral advantage, it has been strangely silent when its voice should have been strong and insistent in seeking to arrest practices that were destructive of great elements in our social and industrial order.

Thomas—Can the church remain silent on vital issues of the day and fulfill its mission in the new era?

Bishop Freeman—The church can no longer remain silent. It is inconceivable to think of the Christian church as being satisfied with the administration of its offices and sacraments, ministering to an elect few, and going along its way unmindful of the appalling evils that are practiced to the hurt of vast numbers of our citizens. Surely the church's field of occupation contemplates something more than this.

Thomas—When the chosen few accepted the commission to plant the principles of Christianity in all parts of the world, do you think their acceptance was in the narrow sense?

Bishop Freeman—The chosen few did not accept a commission that was restricted or delimited when ordaining hands were laid upon their heads. Those prophets who have been its choice and most effective agents in every period have been the fearless and daring exponents of its Lord's teaching, and under his supreme guidance the mightiest defenders of those who were the victims of wrongs and abuses.

Thomas—Has it not been a general practice for the church to be a respecter of persons?

Bishop Freeman—Yes, but the church can no longer be a respecter of persons. Where its voice is passive, and its course restricted to infrequent services, however reverent, ornate or simple they may be, it forfeits the confidence of the multitude and lamentably and tragically fails of its high purpose. The range of the church's life is inclusive of everything that concerns the physical, moral and spiritual welfare of the world in which it is placed. Jesus Christ touched life at every point. So must we, else we deny him.

Thomas—What is your attitude on the application of the teachings of Jesus in our new economic life?

Bishop Freeman—The application of the teachings of Jesus to our economic and social life requires that we shall be fully and consistently informed, equipped and made ready to espouse the cause of those who are the victims of injustices and abuses that deprive them of living conditions commensurate with the security of health and happiness. That a large proportion of our people are not so safeguarded has never been more conspicuously evident than in these recent years.

Thomas—Can we feel proud of what we call our Christian civilization when millions are living under conditions and in circumstances anything but conducive to a Christian atmosphere and ideal?

Bishop Freeman—It is estimated there are 40 millions of our people living below the poverty level. This is a serious indictment of our boasted Christian system, and witnesses to the breakdown of our social and economic order.

Thomas—What is the outstanding thing that creates class hatred and which apparently is on the increase?

Bishop Freeman—While thousands have been straying there has been little if anything of restraint exercised in prodigal indulgence among the more responsible of our people. These conditions have provoked a revulsion of feeling that has fomented class hatreds and widened the breach between the unfortunate and the fortunate.

Thomas—Are the things about which you speak the concern of the church, its clergy and people, or are they only the concern of agencies that profess no allegiance to the church?

Bishop Freeman—Only now and again in widely scattered places is the voice of the church heard, and all too frequently it is a voice crying out in the wilderness, a voice unsupported by any general or corporate action. I make no appeal for the church in politics or for its indulgence in the discussion of economic questions to which it is largely incompetent to speak with authority. I do appeal for a church that gives its fearless and unqualified support to programs and measures that are designed to make more equitable and just living conditions and to ease burdens that fall upon shoulders too feeble to bear them.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH.

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF OUR CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

PAYING DEBTS.

During the World War, and for a time following it, the world went on a high carnival of indulgence, luxury, and debt-making. It really seems as if the world went bankrupt—governments and individuals. The states, counties and cities in the states, as well as the National Government itself, indulged in expenditures which now stagger the mind to think of, and are amazing in proportion. Our National Government, besides indulging in enormous expenditures on its account, made loans of hundreds of millions, to other governments.

On June 15, 1934, thirteen foreign governments will be due our government a total of $174,647,439.19. This is not the total of loans and interest due from other governments, but only cover the items due on June 15th. Of this amount, Great Britain is the heaviest debtor, some over $85,000,000; France coming along with a hefty obligation to us on that date of some over $59,000,000; Italy third with some over $14,000,000; little Belgium due us on that date some over $7,000,000. Of course, they cannot pay. There is talk that they will give us a "token" to show a friendly (?) interest. What governments have done in debt-making differ from that of millions of individuals, only in that governments have the power of taxation, and so they have published what they owe that the whole world may read. The debts of individuals, enterprises, institutions, corporations, who cannot levy taxes, keep their figures from print. It was an adventure in revelry, and now pay-day has come.

The tragedy of the situation is in the fact that extravagance in expenditure, in indulgence, in speculation has produced a situation that is now trying the very souls of men and women, institutions and enterprises everywhere. Economic standards and axioms have broken down, and, in the attempt to establish new economic standards, there is a terrible strain on the ethical, moral and spiritual standards of our time.

Debts come from a friendly hand, and may sometimes be helpful, but they are the most cruel and heartless taskmasters ever created by the device of man. He, indeed, was a wise man who said, "Owe no man anything, but to love one another."

THE CHURCH GOES FORWARD.

Despite dissensions within and without, with other untold handicaps and hindrances, the church still goes forward. This, at least, is indicated by statistics for 1933 now made available. The grand total of church members of all religious bodies and groups in the United States for 1933 was 60,812,874. This was a gain over 1932 of 655,482 members. The gain for the past seven years, 1926-1933, was 287,159, an average yearly gain in membership of 1.65 per cent. Of this total membership the three bodies of Catholics claim 20,324,144, a gain of 53,426 members in 1933. Coming next to the Catholics in numbers are the eighteen different bodies of Baptists, with a total membership of 9,866,209. These bodies showed a gain of 193,571. Next in number are the nineteen bodies of Methodists with a total membership of 8,766,017, and these show the largest gain of any in 1933, viz., 213,662. The nine bodies of Presbyterians had a membership of 2,674,875. These bodies showed a decrease of 42,456 in 1933. The Congregational-Christian Churches report a total membership of 1,024,887. These churches showed a decrease of 22,313 in 1933 (much of this apparent decrease doubtless due to lack of adjusting facilities under the merger of gathering statistics from local churches).

Despite the trying economic conditions and the hardships entailed through the break-down of the country's economic system, the 1933 report shows 239,518 ministers; 242,011 churches, 60,812,874 church membership, which is an increase over 1932 of 7,524 ministers; 1,200 churches; 655,482 members. While the increase is nothing to boast of, it does reveal the fact that the impressions made through much of the press, and from many platforms, that the church is losing ground and her membership is on the decrease, is erroneous, and that the Ship of Zion is still safe and sailing securely, even if on a troubled and tempestuous sea.

Just before receiving the official statistics of the churches, giving the facts as indicated above, THE SUN'S editor had read, with more or less of amused interest, quite a conspicuous article in one of the most popular monthly magazines under the topic, "Goodwin Tries to Save the Church," Goodwin being a commercial advertiser with a genius for putting over his wares on a gullible public. The article was amusing, in that it indicated how ready many in the church were to fall for any sort of scheme to increase its financial income and support. Goodwin, like many another wise man of our commercial age, had discovered that the churches afford fertile fields for group advertising, and he is using these groups in an advertising scheme that seems to be bringing to the churches (that fall for his glib talk and agents) a few dollars, while it brings to him, and his corporation, millions.

The whiter of the article in question, or the editor of the magazine, chooses a topic that seems to advertise to the world that the church needed saving by the commercial world, and an ingenious advertiser was undertaking the job. All of which is in keeping with the line of attack upon the church in recent years, calculated to bring the church into ill repute, and make the casual reader conclude that the church at present is made up of sentimental and unthinking people, and was on the decline. The real facts are that the sturdy yeomanry of America, the manhood and the womanhood, who are building safely and securely, not only the foundations, but the structure of our character and our country, are the men and women who, through the churches, had access to God and thus give first place in their lives to that which is moral, spiritual and eternal. Again, we are reminded, even in a doubting, wavering, skeptical age, of the words of the humble Galilean, who said: "I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

SAVING THE SABBATH.

Among the many evils, indicating a lack of wisdom and prudence in our day, is our continued encroachment upon the sanctity of the Sabbath day. It has been a long time now since a very wise and scrupulous law-giver laid down the statute: "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy." That law was enacted in the Parliament of Eternity over which Jehovah God presides, and his very meek and faithful servant, Moses, was the scribe.

There was no jail sentence attached against those who violated that law. There was no bill of indictment indicated; no jury was selected; no judge appointed to see that the law was executed. But there it stands until this day. Now look! From the day that law was enacted down till this good hour, no nation on earth, coming within the range of its teaching, has been able to violate it and survive. No, the death penalty was not attached in so many words. Possibly, the divinity of the thing carried its own rewards and punishments. But our secular and sacred history unite, after these thousands of years, in avowing that not one nation, not one, small or great, has ignored that law and lived. History proves that "the nation and the people who ignore and willfully violate the law of the Sabbath are doomed." This is not written as a fright; only recorded here as a fact. Body, mind and soul make up the person. "God breathed into man the breath of life and he became a living soul," and then God set meets and bounds by and through which the body could wax strong and the soul grow good and great. In setting those meets and bounds, he put one day in seven on which the soul might have right-of-way, might have opportunity and privilege, might have joy and comfort, might exercise itself in worship and divinity. And woe be unto that nation, that people, those individuals who neglect their souls, and use all their time for the pursuits of the comforts of the body and the pleasures of the mind. Give the soul a chance.

Yes, in pleasures and sports, in recreation of body and mind, on "the green," in field and in forests, in picnics and in joy rides, the soul can find God and can lift itself from its surroundings and come face to face with God; but how many souls actually do this thing?

A crying need of our time is that of reclaiming for our joy, our happiness, our health and our strength the sweet and blessed sanctity of the Sabbath, that sacred hour and period of praise, thanksgiving and communion with God, when, disencumbered from the things of time and sense that allure and charm and absorb, the soul may have opportunity, may find access to God and thus grow buoyant and strong in the worship of him who giveth life and hope, health and joy.

NOT DISCOURAGED.

We have heard much about the lack of interest in missionary work and sometimes we wonder if it is true. It is easy to criticise, but not so easy to encourage unless there are good grounds for encouragement. For this reason we wish to share with our readers a word of encouragement from one of our own leaders.

In a letter from Dr. Fred Field Goodsell, written shortly after attending a great missionary meeting where many denominational leaders were present he says:

"The great subject of the hour is the new conception of the scope of the missionary enterprise. The Conference was thrilled at its opening session by the lead which Dr. Stanley Jones gave us. One might reflect the spirit of his address by passing on his last remark: 'I came back to the United States with doubt as to the vitality of foreign missionary interest in America. I go back to India with no discouragements.' Discussion following his address focussed on the emerging new conception of the scope of the missionary movement. Instead of speaking of 'foreign missions' we ought to think and speak in terms of 'the world mission of Christianity.' There are no Christian nations today, and probably never have been. We are all pagan more or less, just as some of the nations of the world are Christian, more or less. All the nations face essentially the same great issues. The same tides wash all the shores of thought. Christianity and Christian folk in every country are faced with world conditions and ought to face them as an integrated, self-conscious world movement. Has the Christian anything vital to say and do in the world in which we live? We say 'Yes.' Christian folk must make good in days like these or suffer terrible disgrace. Christ deserves our best and most earnest thought and activity toward social and spiritual reconstruction throughout the world, including America, according to his mind and spirit."

It does mean a great deal to have such a leader as Dr. Stanley Jones tell us he returns to India undiscouraged. Let us all take courage and grow with our work.

AS THOSE WHO SERVE.

The mother of Zebedee's children had a natural mother's ambition. She wanted place, position and preferment for her two sons. She was anxious that they give a good account of themselves, and that their talents and their character be recognized and given place for wide usefulness and distinction. When she asked that one should be placed on the right, and the other on the left-hand of her Lord when he should come into his kingdom, she about expressed what every natural and sincere mother has desired for her sons. Nor did our Lord put her off with vague promises or high hopes for the future. He did not delay her request by noting a record of her wants and promising to do something about them. He immediately asked these two sons of an ambitious mother if they were able to endure. They replied that they "were able." And then he declared that these places of preferment were not his to give, and all that he had to offer was that they should go through trial and tribulation and suffer the baptism of fire. The places that they should occupy were a matter that was left to the wisdom of the Father. He himself could only promise the suffering and the hardship.

So, Dr. Dwight Bradley, Newton Center, Mass., in preaching the baccalaureate sermon of Elon College, Sunday, May 27th, analyzed Matt. 20: 20-28. The preacher declared to the class that because they were graduating now, they were not to expect the world to be lying at their feet, possibly much of the world would be flying at their throats. This one thing he knew, that they must come to grips with difficult propositions and situations, and the best he could wish for them was that they might be able to endure, have the courage and the strength to suffer and to serve. There were, at least, three things that everyone now who cares must face:

1. The time is ripe and ready for square, straight, unprejudiced thinking on at least three topics:

(a) International relationships, especially in the matter of war. Militarists are busy and propaganda for war is abundant, and these young men and young women will certainly have to think straight in shaping their attitude to the age-old enemy of mankind—War!

(b) The economic situation. The whole economic arrangements and standards have been shattered. We are uncertain. Business at the center is selfish, and in the past few years, business has been carried on in defiance of the Sermon on the Mount. Our economic breakdown shows that selfishness is not a sufficient foundation for the economic structure.

(c) Inter-racial relationships. One of the serious problems of our country and of all countries is that of proper attitude on the part of the stronger or more highly privileged races to the weaker or the under-privileged. We shall have to re-arrange our prejudices and realize that God hath made of one blood all the peoples of the earth to dwell upon the face of the earth, that they might feel after him and find him, though he be not very far from any one of them.

2. These members of this graduating class will have to do something about these things. It is not sufficient to think fairly, even as much and as good as that is. Thinking is not enough. We shall have to do something about it. The age demands not thoughts merely nor words only, but deeds. These deeds may entail, and they likely will, criticisms, abuse and misunderstandings of what we must dare to do as well as endeavor to think.

3. Only those will be sufficient for these things, both to think squarely and do courageously and wisely—only those who draw their strength, get their wisdom and secure their guidance from the Lord Christ will be able for these things. He is the fountain, the never-failing fountain, and the one secure and safe foundation. The young men and the young women of the graduating class will have to pray through to him and rely not upon their strength but his strength, not upon their minds but upon that mind which is in Christ Jesus, if they are to endure and be able to win out in the battle of life. After all, material resources, however abundant, are wholly inadequate; economic principles, however prolific, are not sufficient. Only the spiritual abides forever, and it is the one unailing source and fountain of supply and strength for every heart that believes and every soul that relies upon Jesus the Christ.

Dr. Bradley gave the class and the great audience, who greeted him, not only thoughts for their minds but also food for their souls. His utterances cannot be forgotten by those who heard him, for they heard him gladly.

SCIENCE AS WELL AS RELIGION JUSTIFIED BY FAITH.

By ARTHUR BARDWELL PATTEN.

While science shies at creeds, it is itself full of credence. It is always sounding the unknown and the beyond for new findings. Such expectancy is a superb act of faith. Science is ever venturing into undiscovered regions, with all the trust of a Columbus that new domains and treasures await its search. Its reach always exceeds its grasp, and it constantly trusts where it cannot trace. It so trusts, simply because it audaciously believes that illimitable fresh tracers of truth exist, or are to exist, on the trestle-board of the universe. Then, whether science may believe in a Creator or not, it profoundly believes in an inexhaustible creation, past, present and future. That such faith should ever be less than reverent would be amazing. That any scientific wonderer should ever sneer at any religious worshipper would be more amazing still. On the other hand, no true religionist will ever carp at any true scientist.

Many a reverent scientist today is widening his wonder into worship, is reversing his intelligence within.

The modern scientist ventures, by one hypothesis after another, into the unexplored vastness of the world, and he is never disappointed in his exploring faith. He is more and more justified by that faith. As the scientific wonderer believes in one unfolding reality after another, so the religious worshipper believes in a Great Reality.

Is not all science really the quest of the finite thought, pursuing the Infinite Thought? No scientist is content with things except as they reveal thoughts, and serve thought. And as the scientist treats the things to be discovered as practically inexhaustible, by the same token he should treat the thoughts to be discovered as inexhaustible, too. As his limited thought involves a limited thinker, so he may well logically believe that the unlimited thought of the universe involves an Unlimited Thinker.

President Hutchins has rightly said that mere fact-finding reduces scholarship to triviality. The fact-finder is himself the first great fact—but the final fact is the Fact-furnisher. The researcher himself is the first reality in all research, for without his mind there would be no findings. And then, without a Universal Mind, how could there be any furnishings?

Facts, to have meaning, must be integrated and interpreted in the scientist's comprehending experience. But how could the meanings have arisen initially without a Greater Experience? Man did not create those meanings. He read them out of the book of nature, in the larger light of his own nature, because both the books of nature have an Author. Science as well as religion demands an Author and Finisher of its faith.

Science is using today the phrase "the given," which evidently means that which is provided for its research. Here, then, is science's faith in Providence. There can be no given without a Giver. "The given" is the basis of science. The Giver is the basis of religion.—Advance.

To meet the need of the world, its open fields and its waiting souls, the churches all complain of the lack of laborers and of funds. Does not Christ's voice call us to the united and unceasing prayer of the first disciples? God is faithful, by the power of his spirit, to supply every need. Let the church take the posture of united prayer and supplication! God hears prayer!

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Six paved State highways lead into Suffolk. Thousands of automobiles and trucks pass through the city every week. The number of accidents and wrecks has increased. The number of people who are injured or killed is appalling. Just a few nights ago three people were killed and four or five others seriously injured in one accident. One car passed a truck and was met by another car in a head-on collision. Two cars were wrecked. Three people killed. Others seriously injured. Several homes in sorrow and distress.

Such accidents occur so often they are almost commonplace in the daily news. Cars are built for speed. The roads are well-paved. People are in a hurry. Great risks are taken. Caution is a forgotten word. Human life is in danger. It is time for this nation to think soberly and act more wisely in the use of high powered cars on good roads.

The automobile is here to stay until something better and faster takes its place. The makers of the latest models of cars have made it possible for people to travel with ease, comfort and great speed. But no one can make a car that will be safe in the hands of a careless or reckless driver; or, which will be safe in the hands of a careful driver, when in collision with another car driven at rapid speed. In spite of all law many people will continue to drive at high speed. Automobiles are easy to control, but they are all dangerous. That is a fact that should be remembered. People who drive at 60 or 70 miles per hour, do so at great risk to themselves and others. A safe driver should be alert, cautious, have good judgment and keep his eyes and his mind on the car and the road. Many things can happen in one second of time.

Churches, Sunday Schools, high schools, colleges and universities should join in a continuous effort to call the attention of their constituency to the need of safe and sound driving of automobiles. The new laws permitting the legal sale of intoxicating liquors are having a noticeable effect on the safety of the highways. Drinking is on the increase. Every driver under the influence of liquor is a menace to others. The cautious, sober driver is at the mercy of the person who is driving while drunk. The situation is one which challenges the attention and effort of the public to correct and improve.

The State Highway Police cannot control this matter. The remedy is in the hands of the people who use the highways. Three things should be emphasized and demanded by the people and of the people:

1. That no person should be permitted to drive an automobile while under the influence of liquor. Such cases would be greatly reduced if every person could have the power and authority to report and arrest these offenders and turn them over to the proper officers.

2. That the reckless driver should be prohibited from operating a car on the highways. There may be great difficulty in clearly defining "reckless driving." But it can be done, and the public sentiment of the State will sustain the enforcement of this requirement. If the newspapers of the country will unite in a campaign of education backed by the schools, the people will cooperate in seeking to compel the users of cars to recognize the importance of this rule of safety.

3. That all people who use cars seek to be careful and considerate of the rights and safety of others. There is no excuse for so many automobile disasters. Cars are built for safety. If the driver is as safe as the car, the danger is greatly reduced. It is possible to operate automobiles, on the highways of Virginia, for a whole year, without one serious injury, or one death by collision.

I. W. JOHNSON.

WHAT DO YOU WANT?

(Baccalaureate address, delivered by President L. E. Smith, to the graduating class of Elon College, on Sunday evening, May 27, 1934.)

My Friends:

A very sincere man went to the mountains as a missionary. He proclaimed the Truth as best he could. The mountain people came to hear him. He interpreted the Scriptures literally. One evening he declared that if a person violated one of the least commandments and did not repent that he would wake up in torment and would burn literally forever. His audience thought this severe.

Two mountaineers went up after the sermon to talk with him. They said: "Do we understand you to say that if a person broke one of the least commandments and did not repent that he would wake up in torment and would burn forever?"

"That is what I understand the Good Book to teach," he said.

"Well," said they, "the people just won't stand for it."

An eminent politician in this country, some years ago, made his campaign on the slogan, "Give the people what they want." It is the business of education to make people intelligent in their wants, and also to guide them in their efforts to gratify their wants. A man's wants determine his course in life and his contribution to his day and generation. If his wants are in the lower brackets, he will not rise to the heights in living. If his wants are sublime, he will make his way to mountain-top experiences.

What you are and where you are today are the fruits of your wants of yesterday. Your wants today will determine your relation, value, and your whereabouts tomorrow. Something happened in your life to make you want an education; and that is why you landed in Elon College; and that is the thing that has held you here until you have come to your day of graduation.

When President Andrew Jackson died, someone asked the old colored man who really had been his bodyguard, "Do you think that President Jackson has gone to heaven?" The old servant replied, "I don't know, Sir, but if he made up his mind to go, he is."

Education disturbs a man in his thinking and makes him dissatisfied with his surroundings. That is why the people of Madagascar turned from their savagery and began to build a more stable civilization. That is why the underprivileged people of this country are becoming restless in their restricted living. Give a people intelligent information, and you add to ambition's fires.

Recently, an eminent scholar wrote to the president of a great university about a man who was about to be made dean of that institution, saying, "I strongly advise against making this man dean, he is the type of man who will unsettle the minds of young men just at the time when they need to be settled." This scholar did not rightly interpret the effect of education. Education is not a settling, but an unsettling process. The real purpose of education is to take young minds, inform them, disturb them, widen their horizons, and place firmly within their grasp sane intelligence that will serve as a compass by which they may be guided.

It is not the business of education solely to store the mind with facts of the past, but to inspire it with the possibilities of the future. At Elon College, we are not nearly so much concerned about what has happened as we are about what ought to happen. We want you to know the paths that men have traveled and the ways of civilization that have brought us thus far, but we also want to teach you and inspire you to blaze new paths in social adjustments, in industrial relations, in political governments, and in spiritual redemptions.

As you turn from Elon College campus, you step into a world seething with uncertainty and fraught with danger. Not since the days of armed strife has there been so much restlessness among our people, nor so much uncertainty in our nation. Material riches, political fortunes, and spiritual values are all on the crest, and no one knows what the future will bring forth.

Elon College opened her doors and invited you; she opened her heart and received you; she opened her gates and gladly sends you out into this disturbed world of ours, for she knows that you are made of the kind of stuff that it will take to stem the tide in this day of treacherous uncertainty and the kind of stuff that will cause the streams of the nation to flow again into channels of equity and safety. Our great one concern is that during your stay here we have created within your hearts, hungers, terrible hungers, hungers that will drive you out into life with a dogged determination to have what you want.

What do you want?

I.

IN EDUCATION.

We have not given you the sum total of education. We have only opened the gates. There are vast fields of history, literature, science, art, music, and religion yet to be explored. We trust that you will want to possess them. You should have this picture and keep it forever hanging on memory's wall: Sir Isaac Newton, walking on the shore of time, picking up pebbles, the vast ocean spread out before him, with a hunger, a terrible hunger for a ship with sails that would take him to the farthest shore. In contrast to this picture, let me give you another: A young man, yet in his twenties, dressed in overalls, soiled, sitting on the door-sills of a vacant store in Elon College, apparently aimless, hopeless, purposeless, just sitting and watching the dust settle over the walls—and he a recent graduate of this institution. Hunger? Would he know anything but hunger for truth? Not much!

Young people, we have given you a start; we have brought you to the frontier. We trust that you shall push out to the furthest bounds of Truth!

What do you want?

II.

IN POSITION.

Even on the eve of your graduation, wants are coming to the forefront. For the past weeks, different ones of your number have been coming with requests for fellowships in university centers, that they may be given the opportunity of further study; others have been inquiring about business opportunities; and others have requested transcripts and recommendations to be sent to school officials and school boards, with the hope of finding employment as teachers. Naturally, your ambitions will run along different lines, but wherever your wants may land you, it is the ambition and hope of your Alma Mater that you may take your place and fill it with thoroughness, honor, and distinction. We trust that you will not despise honest toil or turn from an honest task. Anything that is right and needs to be done, deserves to be done thoroughly and completely. If the task that you find tomorrow be humble, perform it; perform it with a dignity deserving a high commission. For this is the first rung of the ladder that will ultimately lead you to high success in life.

What do you want?

III.

IN POSSESSIONS.

Usually people want positions for the possessions that they offer. Some positions offer honor, a commodity justly and rightly coveted. Some offer trust, a possession exacting and difficult to hold with perfect satisfaction to all. Some offer influence, the very essence of life itself, for which the wisdom of God is required if it is to be used rightly. But practically all positions offer as an award for service—money. We have the custom of paying for services rendered, with money; consequently, we labor for money. We strive in every way we can to get money. In spite of divine injunction to the contrary, we love money. We put our trust in money, so that when money fails for us—peace, poise, and hope, all are gone.

In this materialistic age, we have a tendency to tie ourselves to the world. We have a tendency to tie ourselves to money like Alpine travelers to their guides so that when they slip and fall from the icy slopes, their fall is the traveler's death, too.

The late Dr. J. H. Jowett said that one day he went to see a rich man in New York to ask him for a donation for a most needy and worthy cause. In response, the man spoke as if he were poverty stricken. He declared that as he had been besieged with so many calls, he could not answer this one. A few weeks later, the man died. When his will was probated, he was worth sixty million dollars. Dr. Jowett said, "I wonder if at the end of the day, he heard the Lord say, 'Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee. Then whose shall these things be?'"

In all of your getting, my young friends, get understanding; get a proper understanding of your relation to wealth and of its proper use in life.

IV.

Now whatever you may say, your real relation to the world, to society, and to material values, is spiritual. When God made you, he breathed into you the breath of life and you became a living soul. The world may pass away, material values will change and decay, but your spirit will live on. Contributions to your spiritual life are the only things that will abide. Consequently, I counsel with you not to lay up for yourselves treasures on earth, where "moth and rust doth corrupt and thieves break through and steal," but to make your investments in spiritual living that your inheritance may have value both in time and in eternity. What do you want, religiously?

Do you want position? Possessions? Do you want help, guidance, understanding, wisdom? Ask of him who giveth freely and withholdeth not.

It is the custom of travelers abroad to take with them letters of credit, good in any large city in the world. Such letters are usually for specific amounts and are secured by banks in this country, giving the letters. Occasionally, a letter of unlimited credit is given, the giver of the letter agreeing to pay whatever amount the holder may sign for. Members of the graduating class, as you go out from us, we give you letters of credit, letters of credit in mathematics, literature, the arts and sciences. You are liberty to draw upon us for what you want according to your capacity to receive, and too, we give to you a letter of unlimited credit upon the vaults of spiritual riches, which you may cash according to your wants, provided you can endorse it with honor, trust and faith.

When you came to Elon College, your wants loomed largely on your horizon. We trust that these wants have been satisfied; but your stay here has been in vain and our efforts worse than futile if these wants have not been replaced by larger ones.

The law of life is fundamentally the law of strife. It is only through labor and painful effort, by grim energy and resolute courage, that we move on to better things.—Theo. Roosevelt.

Are you keeping books with the Lord? When you spend your means for the perishable things of life, for the gratification of the flesh, and give scantily for the work of the Lord, how can you expect that God will smile upon you and give you peace and happy contentment? "He that soweth to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption, but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting." What of a few days of fleshly gratification to be followed by a life of misery to follow? What is more desirable than a life of peace and a "conscience void of offense toward God and man?"—The Free Will Baptist.

Some say a congregation is not scriptural without elders, but do you believe it would be any more scriptural with unscriptural elders? To be a scriptural elder, one must be qualified as the Bible says, doing the work so that the congregation recognizes him.—H. M. Phillips.

Be glad of life, because it gives you the chance to love and to work and to play and to look up at the stars.—Van Dyke.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary

OUT OF THE DARK.

(ABOUT ONE OF OUR MISSIONARIES, BY MISS D. P. CUSHING, NEWS EDITOR.)

"A-hem! A-hem!" The missionary is diverted from household tasks by a deprecating cough in the yard outside. This, says Miss Una Jean Minto of Dondi, West Africa, is the African doorbell. Miss Minto is an educationalist and since 1920 she has been teaching in Africa, first at Bailundo in Angola and more recently at the Currie Institute, Dondi, West Africa.

When she was in Bailundo among the Ovimbundus, she learned much of their customs, history and native talents. The girls know how to make natural dyes and their crude pottery is often cleverly decorated with color design of native origin, faintly resembling those of the Egyptians. Many have real talent in drawing and carving. One lad, Felitiko by name, has uncanny skill in turning out, with only a jackknife, life-like wooden figures of individuals, birds and animals.

At Dondi Miss Minto has been teaching a great deal of Bible and Bible history in the Umbundu language, a task which she loves. She finds her pupils responsive and eager. She also has had to use Portuguese, the official language. Currie Institute is a school for boys and has agricultural, academic and industrial departments. A sister school for the girls, called Means School, is also located at Dondi. Pupils come from the other lower grade mission schools to Dondi for higher training and are choice students, and future leaders of their people. At Bailundo where Miss Minto formerly taught, the children came from the Kraals to the school and were taught the three R's, also gardening, manual training and simple hygiene. Many of them walked 75 miles to reach school.

Miss Minto has just returned to America on furlough. She is a poet as well as a teacher and has succeeded in putting into verse some of the appeal which she finds in Africa. The long poem published in the Missionary Herald of June 1928, is entitled "Out of the Dark." The following are only a few verses from this poem:

...Unheeding, as in your native element,
You move and have your being, bathed in light.
And does there never pierce into your calm
The cry of those who know the dark—and fear?
That heathen mother, with the sickly child
Swung on her back, seeks wistfully to help
Her son, when round his scrawny neck she ties
The cowrie shell, with fervent, muttered chant
To keep away the spirits who would harm. Her troubled heart

Broods over him motherwise: What hated foe has put
This spell upon her child? The wily witchcraft man
Will know the cure; but how can she appease
His certain greed, and win his aid to fix
Upon her enemy the blame? 'Twere best give up
That goat long saved to make the feast at harvest time.
Yet she can bear to give her boy, and yield
His tender, shrinking body to receive
The cruel stabbings of that ugly knife, by which
'Tis wont to bring release to demons pent inside?
Still, better so! One dare not brave too far
Their wrath lest greater evils come!

...That youth, whose smouldering eye might gleam
With heavenly fire, like yours, had he your chance to know
And learn, in darkness, blindly groping, thwarted, seeks in vain
The ray he never finds. You smile to see him with the cloth
About his loins, wear jauntily the battered hat.
And on his feet a pair of cast-off shoes; to him
They are the symbol of the pathway he must tread
To reach the white man's level, and his goal!
So, painfully
He seeks to climb!

...So is there many a soul in this dark land
Which pushes up in patient and persistent search,
Responding to the upward urge, though but
A single ray seeps in to penetrate the gloom.
Is there no help for these, your brothers in the dark.
The germ of life is here—the life He died to save!
It needs but that some living hand should bring
It light and soil, should water it and gently tend
Its struggling growth, till some glad day will come
The harvest time. For blossoming and the fruitage they Are His, who gives both life and Light!

"VICTORIA OF THE HILLS."

Dear "Victoria of the Hills." Once again we greet you across the miles that separate us. Though we do not know you in person, you seem very real for your letters in THE CHRISTIAN SUN have revealed your innermost life to us, so that we feel a kinship growing between us. Your letters vibrate with the three great emotions of life, the keynote of all life, the first being Faith. Faith as a grain of mustard seed; faith to say to the mountain that was ready to crush you, "Be thou removed," and through faith you made stepping stones until now you are standing on the mountain which has become a mount of blessing. For, like Moses, you can look into the Promised Land. And because of your faith you have inspired a like faith in others, for we think of the words of the Apostle Paul, "But none of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry, which I have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the gospel of the grace of God."

We also hear the note of hope, and we know that you have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope that is set before us; which hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast, and which entereth into that within the vail. Hope is the anchor that has kept you steady throughout the years and which continues to shine ever brighter. Hope is your telescope through which you look from the top of your mountain. In the prophecy of Zecharia is found the admonition, "Turn you to the stronghold, ye prisoners of hope; even today I do declare that I will render double unto you."

And then there is love—the proof of our faith and hope. The love of your mountains, of your people and of the messengers of our Lord who are working among you, point to the supreme love of your life, the love of God which is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us. We love him, because he first loved us. Because of his great love he has gone to prepare a place for us that where he is there we may be also; because of our love for Christ we are preparing ourselves by his grace for the blessed meeting. Though we may never meet in the world, the day will come when we shall clasp hands in the glory land, and join in the song of Moses and the Lamb; praise to him who loved us and gave himself as a ransom, even Jesus, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people.

May you and I ever watch for his glorious appearing with our garments spotless, the oil of the Holy Spirit in our vessels, the light of his salvation shining forth to those around us. Dear Victoria, we love you for your faith, hope and love; it has helped us along life's way. May your life be blessed with all his richest blessings.

TEACHING HATRED.

The German Government did not learn its lesson from the World War, and its sad experiences therefrom. Fact is, it seems bent on teaching the philosophy of hate more deadly, more desperately than ever before. Hitler, who now presides over and directs as dictator the Government and destinies of the German nation, declares in a recent writing: "Everything, from the baby's first story-book to the last newspaper, theatre, cinema—will be put to this end—until the brain of the tiniest child is penetrated by the glowing prayer: Almighty God, bless our weapons again; bless our battle!"

Thus, from early childhood, through youth to old age, the German State, through its present tyrant, is teaching the lesson of hatred and the blessings of war, and imploring not the Prince of Peace, but the god of war to direct and bless their weapons and their battle. J. O. A.

UP TO THE MOUNTAIN TOP—AND BACK.

Up from the lowlands 120 miles on foot came young Africans to Gogoi, East Africa. For what? To join the Christian Church. The work down in the vale is being carried on by a native Christian who has shown great faithfulness, report Rev. and Mrs. John P. Dysart. There are two Christian young couples married last year, who have gone recently to live there and it is hoped they will be able to encourage more children and young people to come to the school and that they will be in themselves centers of radiant influence.—Overseas News.

A Story for the Children

LAKWOOD AVENUE.

A WALK WITH THE BABIES.)
(Friendliness for the Friendless.)

Winter had almost gone from Forest-town. The trees along Lakewood Avenue were swelling out their buds. March winds were beginning to whisper around the corners. Eleanor, Carolyn and Louise were delighted. Now they could get out often and walk together or hike to Lakewood Park.

"Eleanor," called Carolyn from the street, "please come and walk with me; it is wonderful out here."

Eleanor looked at Jackie and Jean playing marbles in the yard. Mother had left them in her care while she took Baby Bess to buy shoes. She could not leave them to walk with Carolyn. "I'd love it, Carolyn," she called back, cheerily, "but I have Jackie and Jean here. I can't leave them."

Carolyn was a darling girl. She loved Jackie and Jean. "Bring them on with you," she called. "I'll look after Jackie, and you can have Jean. We'll have even more fun."

The children were delighted. They threw down their marbles and ran toward Carolyn. Carolyn took Jackie's chubby little hand in her own, and Jean clung to Eleanor. Soon they were in front of Louise's house.

"Louise," called Carolyn, "come out and go for a walk with us. Bring Billy, too. We have Jackie and Jean."

Louise and Billy were glad to come. They had been wishing for something different to do.

They walked very slowly, enjoying the balmy March day, feeling the wind on their faces and in their hair.

As they passed an old house that had been vacant all winter, they heard a baby crying. They looked toward its windows, and saw shades and curtains inside. "Surely someone has moved in here," Carolyn exclaimed.

"Yes," Louise answered, "I heard that a new family had taken this house. I think they have a little girl about our age, too."

The three girls stopped. "Maybe if we will stand here a few minutes we can see her somewhere," said Eleanor, as she turned toward the old house. "She will surely be around."

As she spoke a shy little girl came into the yard and looked longingly at the girls on the walk. She didn't say anything, but her eyes seemed to tell them that she was lonely, and that she missed the girls she had moved away from very, very much. She didn't know how to make new friends.

"Let's go into see her," said Carolyn, who was naturally very friendly and who knew how the little girl must feel.

"Should we go in without dressing to call? We don't know her yet."

But Carolyn would have nothing else. "You can tell from her looks that she is lonely. Louise. We can become her very first friends in Forest-town."

"Oh, let's!" said Eleanor. "We may find her one of the sweetest girls on Lakewood Avenue."

So the three little girls with the three little boys turned into the driveway that led up to the big house that had been vacant all winter.

The little girl they met was Elaine Waldrop. Elaine's father was a merchant. Her mother was dead, and her big sister, Olive, kept house for them. Olive was married, and her husband lived there, too. Olive had a little girl four years old. Her name was Dot. She was a dear little cotton-top, with the bluest eyes in the world.

"Can't you walk with us, Elaine?" Carolyn invited. "You can bring Dot along, too; we are each one caring for one child."

That was the best walk of the whole year. The girls became acquainted with Elaine, and Elaine learned their names, which little brother belonged to which little girls, and where they all lived. She also heard of the boys, Carl and Albert. She thought she might like her new home. Forest-town wasn't so cold, after all. It wasn't so lonely. She knew that she would miss Ethel and Clara and Estelle just terribly; but, really, she felt deep down in her heart that she had never met sweeter girls than Carolyn, Louise and Eleanor, anywhere.

"Isn't she sweet?" said Carolyn to the girls, as they were returning to their own homes. "I do not think we have ever had a sweeter girl on our street."

"She is pretty, too," Eleanor added, liberally, "even if she does have freckles."

"Her freckles aren't bad at all, with her dark red hair," Louise commented, "and did you notice her eyes are brown?"

They were at home. The little boys were ready to play marbles again.

"I'm very glad we stopped; thanks to you for the suggestion, Carolyn," Eleanor said, as she went back to her work.

"And so am I, Carolyn. Let's walk every pretty day. Good-bye."

Louise was at home, and Carolyn slipped through the hedge into her own backyard.

MEMORIAL DAY AT MOORE UNION.

It was a beautiful Sabbath day, the third Sunday in May, the earth flooded with sunshine and all nature showing the handiwork of God. A great crowd met at the Moore Union Church. The purpose of the meeting was to pay tribute to those who had passed on.

The morning hour was taken up with the Sunday School, followed by the preaching hour, which was attended by a fine congregation. The pastor presided, bringing a message from the subject, "Heaven—How to Gain It." The part of the program that proved very interesting was a table filled with every good thing to eat. It was placed in the shade of the inviting oaks in the church yard. Everyone enjoyed this hour. Of course, the crowd was large, but they could not eat all of the bountiful supply of inviting food that was placed upon that table.

The afternoon hour was taken up with the children of the Sunday School, singing and making speeches, and also visiting speakers and singers. The songs and talks by the children were greatly enjoyed by the people. A former pastor, Rev. J. A. Denton, and a friend, Brother Joe McIver, each of whom gave a very inspiring address. We were very greatly favored by having with us the Thomas Quartette, of Broadway, N. C., who lifted us closer to the infinite with their wonderful hymns. The delightful day came to a close by the children marching to the cemetery with the flowers, preceded by Rev. J. A. Denton and the pastor. During the singing of a hymn at the cemetery, the flowers were placed upon the graves. The pastor pronounced the benediction.

This was a great day in the history of old Moore Union Church. Everyone was happy and enjoyed meeting old friends, and the fellowship with them. We feel sure that as the people turned homeward from that meeting they felt as

Peter felt on the Mount of Transfiguration: "Lord, it is good for us to be here."

"D."

MY GOSPEL.

It is the privilege of the humblest Christian to be honored as the messenger of this life-giving message.

What a great thing it would be if we were so living in relation to this blessed gospel that saves us that it would inspire our whole lives to think that the Lord has entrusted us with this message of redeeming love. Such an outlook is more normal to Christian faith than that which shuts heart-doors tight or responds only in a torpid way and measure to the spread of his entrusted gospel, even when men of God stand before us and plead in his name.—Western Recorder.

May each one of us learn every day to say: "Truly my soul is silent unto God!" And may every feeling of the difficulty of attaining this only lead us simply to trust and look to him whose presence makes even the storm a calm! Cultivate the quietness as a means to the abiding in Christ! Expect the ever deepening quietness and calm of heaven is the soul of the fruit of abiding in him!

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

CHRISTIAN YOUTH BUILDING A NEW WORLD.

Near the first of this year youth leaders, from a number of denominations met to consider their common problems. It occurred to them that the young people of today should set themselves seriously to the task of building a new and Christian world. Our own denomination was represented in this meeting, and is cooperating in every way possible with the united problem.

The name of our denominational young people's group is the Pilgrim Fellowship. Youth Fellowships, Congresses, and young people's groups by many other names are a part of this Pilgrim Fellowship. In the local church young people may be organized as Sunday School classes, Christian Endeavor Societies, missionary societies, or they may be called by any other name. There is no desire for uniformity of name, but there is a desire for cooperative work in building a new world.

Our denominational leaders, especially the secretaries, Dr. H. T. Stock and Miss Lucy Eldredge, are furnishing young people with a great amount of fine literature to aid in their work. Bulletin No. 51 of the Pilgrim Fellowship has just come to my desk. It is filled with numerous suggestions concerning the way we may work cooperatively in the common task. Copies of it may be had by writing to the editor of this page. "The Pilgrim Highroad," published by the Pilgrim Press, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., is one of the best monthly magazines for young people I have ever seen. For practical helps on Sunday evening programs, I know of nothing better than "The Pilgrim Highroad" and the "Sunday School Herald," the latter being published at Dayton, Ohio.

The youth leaders in their winter meeting wrote out a statement of conviction which is a real challenge to all young people who are interested in things that are worth while. I quote it in full below:

"A STATEMENT OF CHRISTIAN CONVICTION.

"We believe that the ultimate and true way of life is found in Jesus Christ, the Son of God, and his teaching of the universal Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man; the supreme worth of persons; the law of sacrifice and love; the obligation of the individual to find the fulfillment of his own best self through sharing in the achievement of the abundant life for all.

"This way of life is not being fulfilled by mankind today. We do not have a Christian world. God has provided a physical world of abundance, beauty and order. Science has brought us to the threshold of a new day, in which mankind need live no longer in poverty, misery and ignorance. But we have often used our scientific knowledge to exploit persons rather than to free them.

"Millions of our fellows are unemployed and supported by charity; millions of homes are under the shadow of insecurity and fear; the vast majority, even in prosperous times, live in poverty, while the wealth of the nation is controlled by the few; our young people prepare for a life work only to find that no work is to be had; selfish competition sets every man's hand against his brother; hatreds of race and nation and class divide us into warring groups; nations of the world prepare to hurl multitudes as cannon-fodder into war; many of our youth find opportunities for an education denied them, and drift into idleness, delinquency and crime; many find their hopes for establishing homes of their own thwarted; in the midst of this conflict human personality breaks, faith suffers shipwreck, and moral integrity disintegrates.

"We find ourselves as Christians involved in this un-Christian world. We cannot escape our share of the responsibility. We repent of our sin.

"We recognize something of the magnitude of With firm faith in God and hope for the future, we declare our purpose to join with those who would bring this strife and suffering to an end, and build a world of brotherhood, where God-given resources are used to serve mankind, where cooperation replaces competition, peace abides in place of war, and where special privilege gives place to justice and equal opportunity for all.

"We recognize something of the magnitude of the enterprise. It demands a new individual and a new society. It calls upon individuals to abandon petty and selfish aims and to lose themselves in the glorious adventure. But we have faith in youth and in their leaders, that they will respond to that call. We are not alone: divine resources flow through us and human fellowship sustains us as we give ourselves to that task. He that loses his life shall find it.

"For us there is no alternative; to this cause we give ourselves, and call upon all those of like purpose to share with us."

A PRAYER.

God of the Granite and the Rose!
Soul of the Sparrow and the Bee!
The mighty tide of Being flows
Through countless channels, Lord, from Thee.

It leaps to life in grass and flower,
Through every grade of being runs,
Till from Creation's radiant tower
The glory flames in stars and suns.

God of the Granite and the Rose!
Soul of the Sparrow and the Bee!
The mighty tide of Being flows
Through all Thy creatures back to Thee.
Thus round and round the circle runs,
A mighty sea without a shore,
While men and women, stars and suns,
Unite to praise Thee evermore.

—Lizzie Doten.

FLORIDA YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONFERENCE.

Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, 117 W. Forsyth St., Jacksonville, Fla., sends me a charming bit of advertising concerning the Ninth Annual Session of the Florida Young People's Conference which is to be held June 9-16, 1934, at DeLeon Spring, Fla. She knows how to present information so as to make it attractive. I really would like to be there myself. Courses and teachers are as follows: "Jesus and His Country," by Dr. Elisha A. King; "World Friendship," by Miss Edith Thomas, of Foochow, China; "Building and Leading a Young People's Program," by Rev. J. B. Root; "Social Issues for Young People," by Rev. Walter Metcalf; "Principles of Service," by Rev. L. A. Gedcke; "The Christian Home," by Mrs. O. H. Donney; and "The Science of Leadership," by Rev. Orville B. Ullom.

The Conference will open officially with supper on Saturday, June 9th, and closes with breakfast on Saturday morning, June 16th. The total cost for this week of fellowship, study, and spiritual vision in the beautiful land of blooming flowers and singing birds is only $10.00. It seems to me that everyone who reads this might wish to pack up their "Bible, sheets, pillows, towels, soap and bathing suits" (as suggested in the notice by Miss Coghill) and go to DeLeon Springs for this training school.

A special invitation is given to college and other young people out of high school to attend this year's session. It is thought that they will enjoy particularly the course on "Principles of Service," which is a standard leadership training course for older young people. A happy and successful week for all who are fortunate enough to attend, is the wish of one who lives too far away to go.

A CHRISTIAN'S DUTY TOWARD HIS BODY.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC, JUNE 10, 1934.

Daniel 1:15, 16.

If the leader can secure a Christian physician, nurse or director of personal hygiene, it would be a good time to have an outside speaker. It may be best to limit the discussion to a few specific phases of the general topic. Let the guest speaker speak for twenty minutes, and then answer questions asked by the young people.

The meeting may emphasize two main points. First, a recognition of just what a Christian's duty toward his body, his attitude toward health and disease should be. The second is the contribution which summer may make to one's greater strength and better health, and a discussion of the opportunities which should be seen and used.

The Latin writer, Juvenal, has given us a suggestive thought for this meeting. It is this: "Our prayer should be for a sound mind and a healthy body."

The hymn, "Just As I Am, Young, Strong, and Free," may be a hymn with a special message for this meeting. "I Would Be True" and "Take My Life and Let It Be," are other hymns with appropriate thoughts for this worship service. "And Jesus Increased in Stature," may be the text for a talk on "The Christian's Physical Growth," stressing our responsibility to keep the body which makes it possible for us to serve mankind, strong and clean, pure and well.

Nor love, nor honour, wealth nor pow'r
Can give the heart a cheerful hour
When health is lost. Be timely wise:
With health all taste of pleasure flies.

—Gay-Fables.

How important is good health? Think of how the service of the individual who is well is increased over that of the person who is constantly tired, or weak, or diseased.

How is health related to the "abundant life" which Jesus came to give? What responsibility does this give to the Christian concerning care for his physical being.

How much is good health worth? What price must one pay for strength of body? Talk about the avenue open to all of us in the summer time to store up new strength, to rest tired nerves, to build up new enthusiasm because we are really well.

Many people say that the reason that so many young people seek the wrong kinds of physical pleasure is that there is no program of wholesome entertainment provided by the community or the

JESUS IN THE SHADOW OF THE CROSS.

LESSON X—JUNE 3, 1934.

GOLDEN TEXT: "He went forward a little, and fell on his face, saying, My Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass away from me; nevertheless, not as I will, but as thou wilt."—Matt. 26:39.

LESSON TEXT: Matt. 26:1-75.

The Master knew what was in men. He knew his disciples better than they knew themselves. He knew that when "they were put on the spot," they would deny him and forsake him, and he told them as much. "All ye shall be offended—shall be caused to stumble—because of me this night," he said. They promptly denied it. Peter, more outspoken than the others, vehemently denied it, and said that even though he had to die with Jesus, he would not deny him. And "likewise also said all the disciples." We think of Peter as the one who denied his Lord, and he did. But at that he was better than the other disciples, for they forsook Jesus and fled, while Peter did at least follow him even into the court of the high priests. Of course, it is all a lesson in over-confidence, of self-sufficiency, of undue pride. Let every man, who thinketh that he standeth take heed lest he fall. And let every man take heed how he condemn those who have fallen, for as he judges others he condemns himself.

There is another prediction in this lesson which is significant. Jesus said: "But after I am risen again, I will go before you into Galilee." Jesus knew what lay before him. He knew that he was going to be done to death. But he also knew that it was not possible that the bonds of death should hold him. He knew already that he was victor over death. He knew that he should rise again, and he made an engagement with his disciples in advance. There are many of us who can understand all this, as mysterious as it may seem or sound to others. We know that we have passed from death unto life. We know that we shall rise again. We know that we already have eternal life.

The World's Greatest Battlefield.

The world's greatest battlefield was a small, enclosed garden not far from Jerusalem, where one Man fought and won a decisive victory. There was no marshalling of large armies, no clash of arms, no physical combat. But the world's most decisive and significant battle was fought there in the shadow of those magnificent olive trees by a Man alone with God. Suppose Jesus had lost that night! Suppose he had refused to go on! Suppose he had refused to accept the Father's will! And he could have lost. We lose the point of the story if we think that Jesus had nothing to say about the matter; if we think that he was caught in an inexorable fate which allowed him no choice in the matter. Jesus could have saved himself. He could have refused to go on. He could have said "No." The glory of Gethsemane is that Jesus faced the issue courageously even if tremblingly, fought it through to a decision, and gained the victory. Jesus deliberately chose to do the will of his Father. And because he could save himself, he saved us

A Little Farther.

When the battle was finally joined, Jesus was alone. He had taken the eleven into the Garden. He had taken Peter and James and John farther, but when he fought the thing through to an issue, he was alone. There are some experiences which we can share with the larger group; there are other experiences which we can share only with an inner circle; but there are some experiences which a man must face alone with God. We may get the advice of others, we may seek their companionship, but eventually we must go into Gethsemane alone. But not alone, for Christ is there. He knows just what it all means, and out of his experience he is able to help us.

And He Prayed.

When the Master faced the great issues or the great experience of life he prayed. He felt the need of inner renewal. He knew the absolute necessity of winning the victory within before trying to win it without. Therefore he prayed. Let every man who thinks he is self-sufficient, or who does not pray, consider soberly the fact that Jesus prayed. There are several suggestive things about the prayers of Jesus in Gethsemane:

(a) It was addressed to God as "My Father." Jesus was not talking to blind force, or cosmic energy, or impersonal machine, but to his loving Father. God was his Father, he was God's Son, therefore he simply talked as a son with a father. Prayer at its best is just this—conversation and communion with a personal, loving Father.

(b) It was definite. Jesus prayed for a specific thing. His prayer was not general. It did not cover everything. He prayed for the specific need in his life. "If it be possible, let this cup pass from me."

(c) It was persistent. Jesus did not get an answer to his prayer the first time. Nor the second. It was not until he had prayed the third time that he got the answer. Before a man gives up praying simply because God does not answer him the first time, he should consider the experience of Jesus.

(d) It was conditional. "If it be possible . . . nevertheless, not as I will, but as thou wilt." The prayer was made in all faith. But it was made in harmony with God's will. Jesus did not try to bend God's will to his will; he tried to find God's will for him and then to yield his will to God's will. Every true prayer has this spirit even if the actual words are not used. Indeed, prayer at its best, is more a matter of communion with God than of talking to God.

(e) It was victorious. Jesus got the victory in prayer. One of the most amazing things in history is the way in which Jesus conducted himself throughout the trials and the events leading up to, and culminating in, the crucifixion. The explanation is to be found in the victory in Gethsemane. Jesus had won the inner battle; it was an easy matter to win the outer battle. Private prayer is the secret of public victory.

Watch and Pray.

To pray without watching is just as foolish as to watch without praying. There are some temptations which we can foresee and for which we can be prepared. There are some temptations which we cannot foresee but against which we can be prepared. Jesus emphasized preparedness.

Rise, Let Us Be Going.

Never trouble trouble until it troubles you, is good advice under some circumstances. But Jesus would have us rise up and meet trouble when it must be faced, not because trouble is insignificant, but because we can have inner resources adequate to meet trouble. And to meet trouble courageously is half the victory. When Jesus had prepared himself within, he was not afraid of what would come to him from without.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy

MONDAY.

"THE PRAYERS OF JESUS."

Eighth: Social Prayer (Luke 9:28, 29).

This is another mountain-prayer which was made while the disciples were taking a nap. When they awoke they saw him as they had never seen him before, transfigured in glorious raiment and conversing with saints of heaven who had gone long before.

It appears that they had gone to Tabor for the special purpose of prayer with one another. This is a lesson of prayer for, and with, one another as a social obligation. And, if the transfiguration means anything we catch a glimpse of the heavenly visions that may come to us through such exercises, even communion with the saints gone before.

Prayer—Our Father, we believe in thee and thy Saviour, help thou our faith. We trust in thee, help thou our trust. We need one another, reveal to us our duty to pray for, and with one another more.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"THE PRAYERS OF JESUS."

Ninth: "Alone praying" (Luke 9:18).

One's finest thoughts come when alone. It may also be said that one's most wicked thoughts come when alone. But in the solitariness of ourselves if we place our thoughts and prayers with God, nothing but the finest thoughts can come, for all evil thoughts will be suppressed, in the same way as Jesus put Satan out of his life. The greatest good the world has known was born in the alone hours of a consecrated, deep thinking soul. If this be true, and it would seem to be, the duty of frequent secret prayer is paramount, for Jesus prayed that way and we know that it is the source of great shining blessings.

Prayer—O Lord, our God, in thee we live and move and have our being, and in thee we know all good has its being; help us to live in thy being—now and forever.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"THE PRAYERS OF JESUS."

Tenth: "Recognition of God's Prayer" (John 11:41, 42).

Jesus prayed to the Father and Lazarus was raised.

To him nothing was too great to ask God for, if it was for God's glory and for the good of his fellowman; and his prayers cover the whole range of human experience in its relation to God. Only when Jesus prayed for himself was he denied an answer. Does this mean anything to us? "Only believe," as he told Mary and Martha, "and thou shalt see the glory of God." Only believe and learn that God hears prayer in the big things as well as the small ones. Even, as with Jesus, our prayers may not be answered as we expect them or as we think we would like them answered, but if you will keep the "incense burning there, he will answer you sometime, somewhere," says the song, and the answer will be in terms of what is good for you in the final round-up of things, or in terms of the good of others.

Prayer—Our Father, we know that thou hear-est prayer at all times, and we pray for a will like our Saviour's who said, "Not my will, but thine be done."—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"THE PRAYERS OF JESUS."

Eleventh: How to pray; "After this manner pray ye" (Matt. 6:7-15).

Thousands of Christian do not know how to pray. How inadequate our prayers do seem! They are so inadequate that we feel often that it futile to pray, and we will come to that decision, finally, if we rely on ourselves only to know how. The fountain of the prayer life is not within ourselves. It is in Jesus himself. Read, study and know his way. Read, study and know his word. Dedicate, consecrate and sacrifice thyself to know life as it is in its Christian reflection, and thine own life will be somewhat like the Master's, breathing the very spirit of prayer and the very spirit of the Lord.

Prayer—Our Father in heaven, we are thinking of thee and thy ways. We are trying to contemplate thy spirit. O, Lord, grant this blessing—that in us thy will may be done and by us others may see thee and know thee.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"THE PRAYERS OF JESUS."

Twelfth: "Of the Kingdom" (Matt. 19:13).

Our picture today is Jesus taking little children in his lap, thinking of the human race, and praying. It is not recorded what he prayed for. We can only guess. He told the disciples that only such as are like little children can inherit the kingdom. "Except ye be converted and become as little children ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven."

So we find Jesus praying for the race by praying for the children. It must be that he cast a far-away glance and saw down the road of all time, saw Satan and all his wiles; saw sin and all its destruction; saw humanity leaving the road of right and rectitude and falling over the precipices, forever gone from him; heard the cries of suffering humanity; and realized that in the little child was faith, love, trust, and all the potentialities of goodness, greatness and heaven. So he prays, and calls the disciples to witness just what is the real content of the kingdom of God—a consecrated little child.

Someone asked us the other day: "Are we making good as a nation?" What do you think? In the light of Christian people praying for children and dedicating their lives to the growing up of a generation who shall be of the kingdom of God?

Prayer—O Lord, our Lord of mercy and love, have mercy upon us lost parents who have been and are still neglecting the children's character in Christ.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"THE PRAYERS OF JESUS."

Thirteenth: "For deliverance in suffering" (Jno. 12:27-28).

This is one instance in which Christ prayed for himself that the cup might pass from him; that the Father might save him from that hour. So ardent and strained was he that the perspiration poured from his forehead and the writer says it looked like great drops of blood. This is one prayer of our Lord's that was not granted him. But something else was granted. Note that as he prayed he recognized that he had come to the world for that very thing—to glorify the name of the Father, so he adds to his prayer the petition that the Father glorify his own name in him. And, as always, God heard and said: "I have glorified it and will glorify it again." That was the supreme objective of our Saviour. He stopped praying and began to teach them why, how, and when he must die, facing the ordeal as only an event in the great plan of God for the redemption of mankind.

Thus, we are taught that it is no sin to pray for relief from suffering, but that such a prayer is subordinate to the higher purpose: "Seeking God's glory in all things."

Prayer—Dear Father of us all, our day faces us with all its duties of work, rest, play, sickness, suffering, sorrow, disappointments. Are we all for thy glory? Indeed, thou canst make it so and we pray that we may live so close to thee that we may seek thy glory in all we do and say. This we ask for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

SUNDAY.

"THE PRAYERS OF JESUS."

Fourteenth: "A Finished Work" (John 17).

This is the famous prayer of our Lord when he declared that he had finished the work for which he came into the world, and then prayed at length most ardently for those whose work was not finished. He had finished his work. The rest of it was up to the individual. Therefore, he must send his apostles out into all the world to carry him to the hearts of all the world and make Christians of all the nations. Though every prayer of his is a special type for a special purpose covering the whole range of man's experience this prayer stands out as the greatest prayer of the ages, in which love of God pulsates for others and the special work of evangelism.

Lesson: Do live that we may at death say with Jesus, "I have glorified thee on the earth; I have finished the work which thou gave me to do." And then pray for others whose work is not yet finished.

Prayer—Dear Lord and Father above us, show us the work we are to do. Grant us unction of the Holy Spirit in all we do and say. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

THE ELON COLLEGE ALUMNI— A LIVING LINK.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

(An address delivered before the Alumni Association of Elon College, at the Commencement exercises, Tuesday, May 29th, 1934.)

"He put on incense, and made an atonement for the people; and he stood between the dead and the living; and the plague stayed."—Numbers 16:48.

The alumni of Elon College are a link between yesterday and tomorrow. Will they be a living, or dying, or dead link? They are having to answer that question, either automatically or indirectly, or deliberately. I choose to think of the alumni of Elon College as a living link—as a link pulsating with a new life for Elon, and a new prestige for the Southern Convention.

Although there is a textual background for the thought I have in mind, I had rather you would not call this a sermon, but rather a talk to the hundreds of alumni of Elon College. And may it be a heart-to-heart talk as from one alumnus to another.

Let us look for a moment at that background from which the words are just quoted. Disobedience and turning aside from the ordinances of God had started a plague among the children of Israel. Moses had fallen upon his face, and asked God for forgiveness for the sins of his people; and God had promised healing and forgiveness if Aaron would "take a censer, and put fire therein from off the altar, and put on incense, and go quickly unto the congregation, and make an atonement for them." And Moses commanded Aaron thus to do, and he obeyed him. Wherefore we have the text of the message. "He put on incense, and made an atonement for the people; and he stood between the dead, and the living, and the plague was stayed."

Notice, will you, that the chosen of God took such instruments of blessing as God himself suggested; that atonement was made; and that he stood between the dead and the living; and the plague was stopped.

Aaron was a living link standing with the instruments of redemption in his hand, and he stood between the dead and the living. Again, I say the alumni of Elon College are a living link standing with the instruments of redemption in their hands, and they are standing between the dead and the living—the honored dead, who have died in loyal service for their college, and for their fellowmen.

A link is to connect something. A link is nothing but an isolated iron circlet unless it is united with others. Unless you can feel some debt to yesterday, and some duty to tomorrow, you are but a worthless weight of iron. Unless you can stand, divinely appointed to fill your niche, between the dead and the living, the light of a noble destiny cannot glow upon your face.

Elon Yesterday. For more than a hundred years before our present Elon came into existence the seed of her development were being sown. What courageous and valiant leaders founded and fought for the glorious church of which our college is now a part! How they needed the training, and leadership which our Alma Mater is now offering! How they dreamed of our day, planned for its progress, and prayed for its coming! They are among our yesterday's noble dead.

Following in their footsteps were the men and women who finally founded the first schools of our church. They wished to do well the work given unto their hands, and they did it well. They stood between their noble dead and us—the living, many of whom were as yet not born. There, like Aaron, they stood—appointed of God, and with the instruments of blessing in their hands. They used their hands, and their hearts, and their heads, and did their work well.

That generation, without the benefit of the college, without the inspiration of its training founded our Alma Mater upon this holy ground. Founded it? Yes, they mortgaged their homes, some of them, and offered their time, money and talents, all of them, to its establishment. No task was too difficult, no duty too demanding, no day too dark for their courageous spirits. And most of them have left off their arduous labors, and are now listed among our sainted dead. Alumni of Elon, you stand between those ranks of honored dead and the living.

And now, many from the ranks of our alumni have rallied to their beloved Alma Mater for the last time, and have found their last resting place. These all form a "so great a cloud of witnesses." In ways too many to mention, they have done their bit, and their heroic best, and their memory honors our college, and our campus, beyond the enhancement of any words of ours here today. What all of these are asking of us is that we stand—not run, in flight—but stand, between the dead and the living with the instruments of God's divine blessings in our hands.

Elon Today. Here we are, representatives of a vast army of Elon Alumni, that living link between yesterday and tomorrow. In our day our dear old Administration Building has gone down in ashes, and up from those ashes, watered by our tears, and prayers, and sacrifices, have come these buildings, new and beautiful; and now as in Aaron's day, a plague has been upon us so that the very life of our Elon is threatened. The plague of our country's financial depression, and the plague of a very large re-building indebtedness have joined to well nigh destroy all the noble work of our forefathers and mothers.

Like Moses of old, our honored president and our long-suffering faculty have gone on their faces before God begging that the plague be stayed. How they have held on! How they have fought! How they have hoped! How they have dared! Now God has answered their prayers with a condition—he always puts a condition within his promises—and that condition is: If the alumni, and friends of the college will take such divinely given instruments of redemption in their hands as they have, and stand between the dead and the living, and offer it up, the plague will be stayed!

In the language of that other, ancient day, it was: "Take a censer, and put fire therein from off the altar, and put on incense, and go quickly unto the congregation, and make an atonement for them." In the language of our day it is: Take such divinely given instruments of blessing, or redemption, or debt-paying, as has been placed in your hands, and do it speedily, and the plague shall be stayed.

And what are some of the instruments of redemption which we hold in our hands? (1) The good-will, and good concessions of our creditors; (2) the number and loyalty of our graduates, and non-graduates throughout the country; (3) the alumni have gone. Has our college raised us up to be ashamed of her? Has our college trained strategic places of influence and usefulness held by the alumni across our land—in pulpit and pew, in schools and colleges, in business and industry, in professions and trades—like a good leaven into every walk of life, the Elon College (Continued on page 15.)

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

Our children are having a good time picking strawberries since the public school closed. All the little tots can pick berries. The extreme dry weather cut our crop very short this season, but we are putting in good time canning and preserving what we have.

Since the recent rains our farmer and the boys are putting in good time on the farm. If we can have a few more days of clear weather we will get in most of our crops. Then the early oats and vetch hay crops come in and when that is over wheat and oats will be to harvest. So it keeps the farm boys busy from one crop to another. Farming is interesting to them because it is a change of work from one thing to another. Our crops on the Orphanage farm are so varied that it makes it interesting.

Then the dairy work in the early mornings and late afternoons. Then the hogs to look after too. One may think the Orphanage is a place of ease, but come and spend a week with us and you will learn better. We have a number of boys but we have much work to do.

Think of harvesting 80 acres of wheat and oats. Think what an amount of work that will be! Then we will plant 50,000 potato plants—lots of work—40 acres to prepare and plant in beans for hay. Then the hogs to look after, too.

We had some visitors some days ago, and one of the ladies said, "You even keep the hogs clean here; how do you do it?" I told her the boy who looks after the hogs bathes them, and he does. If you want to learn more about the Orphanage, come to see us. We enjoy having visitors. You are always welcome.

DANVILLE.

Our revival was held, beginning the fourth Sunday in April, and running through the first Sunday in May. The first service was opened by Rev. Douglass Guynn, Jr., the 11-year-old boy preacher, when a great crowd gathered at the church, turning away about two hundred people. At the close of the service about 17 gave their hearts to God. Some eight or ten pledged themselves for some definite life service for the Master. Brother Neese, from Greensboro, came to us on Monday night, and a large crowd greeted him throughout the services, and at times some had to be turned away. During Brother Neese's stay, there were about eight who took the stand for God for the first time, or as those who had lost fellowship with God. Brother Neese left us on Saturday night before the first Sunday and the closing service on Sunday night was conducted by Rev. Harvey Saunders, of the Baptist Church, Reidsville, N. C., when he brought a forceful message to a large audience.

Brother Neese made a strong appeal through the entire meeting to the unsaved and those who were not living a clean life for God.

us to dodge duty? Has our Alma Mater fed us on moral food, and spiritual strength, and mental culture to be starved to death at our hands? What is life worth to us, if we cannot be true to the sources from whence it comes? What does it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his self-respect and honor?

Our college cries out to its constituency, high and low, and far and near, in this hour of its bitterest testing, and greatest need, and its voice cannot be heard if the alumni, its living link, becomes a deadweight. Sometime ago the King of England was broadcasting a message to the world. The operatives, and mechanics of the great broadcasting company were each in their place, when all of a sudden a transmitting line came apart. Seeing the situation one of the mechanics quickly picked up both ends of the live wires and let the message go literally through him. He was a living link. My fellow alumni, as one of the least of you, I appeal to you, let us be living links through which the message of our Alma Mater may pass like fire from off the altar until redemption has come, and the plague of debt has been stayed. If we will but stand thus between the dead and the living—keeping faith with two worlds—the voice of our college will be heard in every quarter, and God will raise up friends to help lighten our burden, and lift our load.

It will not be easily done. But it has been well begun. Already some of our fellow alumni—our honored president, our noble faculty, and others—are putting the incense of personal sacrifice, and unflinching devotion into the censer for the redemption of the college. And now every alumni worthy of the name is called upon to "stand between the dead and the living," until the plague is stayed! Not by words but by work, not "mush" but money, not criticisms but construction is the need of the present situation. Each one doing his part, and more than his part; and with joy and gladness, for the success of such a united spirit, and such a complete and overwhelming victory.

Elon Tomorrow. With a baptism such as these years are, and a loyalty such as must be shown, a new day for Elon will come. An ever-increasing student body, picked from homes which have felt the thrill of a real sacrifice; a board of trustees and faculty inspired by a new era for the college, and a church fully acquainted with the fact that it can count on its institution for leadership competent and consecrated for its every hour of need. But if the Elon Alumni should fail to stand in that breach between the dead and the living no one can prophesy the results of the disaster that would come to pass in our church.

Let us then keep faith with Yesterday, let us be true to our present, and then we shall have done our part for Tomorrow. And thus, Elon Alumni, I salute you, the living links between Elon's Yesterday, and Elon's Tomorrow! What a glorious privilege is ours! "And he stood between the dead and the living; and the plague stayed."

church. As you think of the possibilities of this summer, consider these suggestions:

1. Have you a chance to have a series of real picnics and organized amusements, under the auspices of the church, which will give you both needed exercise and pleasure?

2. Are there young people out of work for whom the combined churches of the community ought to organize tennis, horseshoe quoits, and other matches?

3. Outline what seems to you a sane and balanced kind of recreational program for young people in the summer—how much strenuous play, how much loafing, etc.

Give us, O God, the strength to build
The city that hath stood
Too long a dream, whose laws are love,
Whose ways are brotherhood,
And where the sun that shineth is God's grace for human good.

Already in the mind of God
That city riseth fair—
Lo, how its splendor challenges
The souls that greatly dare—
Yes, bids us seize the whole of life
And build its glory there!

—Writer Unknown.

The fact that God indorsed and aided Israel in their wars is no proof that Christians should now engage in carnal warfare. They were a political nation with a real land, and had to use the method of defense necessary at the time. The principles of success in carnal warfare are equally necessary in spiritual warfare. This is the reason that the apostles used it in an illustration in showing that followers of Christ should use "the sword of the Spirit."—Annual Lesson Commentary.

MARRIAGES

BRADSHAW—DRAKE.

The marriage of Miss Dorothy May Drake, daughter of Mrs. Viola Councill Drake, of Franklin, to Samuel Bradshaw, son of Rev. and Mrs. Elisha Bradshaw, of Walters, took place Wednesday afternoon, at 4:30 o'clock, at the Franklin Christian Church.

The church was decorated with palms, ferns, dogwood, spirea and lighted candles, and the ceremony was performed by the bridegroom's father, Rev. Mr. Bradshaw, assisted by Dr. Elwood W. Jones, pastor of the church. The wedding music was played by J. Edgar Weede, of Franklin, and just before the ceremony,

Miss Regina Carty sang "All for you." the Lord comfort and bless her surviving family.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Brady T. Drake, of Norfolk, Miss Louise Owen Drake, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Miss Nina Whitehead, of Norfolk, and Miss Mildred Williams, of Crewe, were bridesmaids. Little Miss Barbara Rose, cousin of the groom, and Miss Sara Frances Drake, niece of the bride, were the flower girls.

Lloyd Bradshaw, of Walters, brother of the groom, was best man. The groomsmen were Tall Jones and Leroy Magette, of Franklin.

After a wedding trip to New York, Niagara Falls and Canada, Mr. and Mrs. Bradshaw are residing at the Stonewall Hotel, Franklin.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, our heavenly Father, in his infinite wisdom and love, has removed from our midst our co-worker and brother, James Jernigan, who was a loyal member of the First Congregational-Christian Church, of Newport News, Va., and a consecrated worker in the Sunday School. Up to the time of his illness Brother Jernigan was a charter member of the East End Christian Church, of Newport News, Va., this being the name we chose when we organized. He was a member of the Board of Deacons, and a member of the Board of Trustees, and was always ready and willing to do the work that was assigned to him; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That God, in his all-wise providence, doeth all things well, and while we mourn the loss of our brother, we realize our loss is heaven's gain, and we bow in humble submission to the will of him who is ever mindful of us.
2. That we strive to emulate the many virtues of his life, in his church, and in his home.
3. That we extend our deepest sympathy and love to the family in this sad hour, and commend them to Christ, who alone can bind up broken hearts.
4. That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the records of the First Congregational-Christian Church, of Newport News, Va., that a copy be sent to the family, and a copy sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

RODGERS

Mrs. Della Mae Brown Rodgers was born December 23, 1908, and died March 31, 1934, age 25 years, 3 months and 8 days. Surviving are her husband, Mr. R. L. Rodgers, three little girls, Mary, Dorothy and Bettie, one brother, two sisters, two half-brothers and three half-sisters. She was converted and joined the church when 13 years of age. Her mother died when she was 10 years old. In September, 1926, she was united in marriage to R. L. Rodgers.

She had a hard lot as an orphan, but was a faithful wife and mother. May

A Windowless Store.—

A windowless department store is being built in Chicago, the only outside light coming from four towering columns of glass, rising from the roof. Complete air conditioning will provide ventilation from attic to sub-basement.

Farmers' Cash Income Increases.—

According to statistics recently published by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, the American farmer's cash income for the month of March had increased more than 75% over the previous year. The figures are: March, 1933, $275,000,000; March, 1934, $417,000,000. Of the latter amount $408,000,000 was from the sale of farm products, while $9,000,000 came from benefit payments by the AAA. The bureau estimates that the total cash income for the first quarter of 1934 was $1,312,000,000, of which $97,000,000 came from governmental agencies. Income for the same period the year before was $873,000,000.

A Saga of Savings Banks.—

On June 2nd, the Bowery Savings Bank of New York, celebrated its 100th birthday. From an original figure of $2,020, its deposits have grown to a half billion dollars, and depositors have increased from 50 to 400,000. During this time the Bowery Bank has never missed a dividend to depositors—there are no stock-holders—and its total payments for the century were over $280 millions. The Bowery Savings Bank is a striking example of an institution which has proven its worth throughout the entire country. The United States has 567 mutual savings banks in 18 States. The deposits in these banks total $9,600 millions, with total assets of well over 10½ billions of dollars. The average deposit is larger than one would at first suppose, amounting to $715.32, and the number of accounts run over 13 million. During the bank panic of 1933 not a single one of these banks failed and no depositor has lost as much as a nickel.

Japan's New Policy.—

Japan's announcement that she will dominate the Orient has stirred up more than interest in the capitals of the Western nations, all of whom have trade relations with China, as well as many treaty obligations, along with Japan, to maintain the "open door" in China. Like other problems, this one has two sides. Japan sees her side, influenced by self-interest and the necessity of peace. China passionately sees her side, that of self-direction and freedom to continue her commercial relations unhampered by her powerful neighbor. The nations should move cautiously in this delicate crisis. Japan, like other nations, is composed of political parties of varying policies.

Just now the militaristic party is in control; but there is a great and growing sentiment among the Japanese, as elsewhere, for peace and friendly relations with other nations. An understanding attitude on the part of other countries will help both Japan and China to compose their differences, and this is really the problem in the Orient.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

Depression and the Birth Rate.—

The depression has not affected the birth rate among those whose incomes were reduced in the period between 1929 and 1932, according to the report of a survey made public by the Milbank Memorial Fund. On the contrary, the report reveals that wage-earning families who suffered serious loss of income during the period in question had 39 per cent more babies than their neighbors whose incomes were not reduced after 1929. But the report also shows that there was 50 per cent more illness in families whose incomes declined sharply than in families who were not seriously affected by the depression. The survey was made in a house-to-house canvass of 8,000 families in eight typical cities, in cooperation with the United States Public Health Service. The study was the first of its kind ever undertaken, according to those in charge. The average income of the families investigated was $1,700 in 1929 and $900 in 1932. Families without any employed workers in 1932 had a birth rate during the depression 48 per cent higher than those who had one or more full-time workers. A special study in four cities showed that the families living on relief funds had a birth rate 53 per cent higher than those not on relief but with incomes of less than $1,200 a year.—Methodist Protestant Recorder.

Frozen Assets.—

Speaking of frozen assets, one might well be speaking of the war debts owing to the United States by European powers. Of the ten billions now owing, only the installment due on Finland's debt is expected on June 15th. Finland has always paid in full, and she expects to pay her entire quota of $166,538 at this time. Any further payments on the $474,000,000 due and past due this month seem to be extremely remote. Great Britain has, up to the present, made so-called token payments, but she now—for the first time in her history—has decided to join the ranks of defaulters. Her note explained that a token payment would have been made at this time, but for the Johnson act, which brands as defaulters any nations which fail to pay in full. The note stated that it was impossible to "carry on" because of the fact that the British people could not continue making the financial sacrifices they have made since the war; second, it was economically impossible to transfer such sums of money from one nation to another without upsetting international economics; third, that the present funding agreement was unjust, and fourth, that the United States had refused to accept payment in goods and services. A fifth reason, which was not mentioned, was possibly the spending spree upon which the United States Government has been embarked for the past two years. It is awfully hard to make an individual sacrifice to pay a bill to another who is spending lavishly. The same possibly holds true of governments. Anyway, the debt payments now due would be but "a drop in the bucket," at the rate we have been going.

Jobs—

All important in this thing called National Recovery is "Jobs"—a small word, but essential. Business Week tells us that among the "perishable goods" manufacturers, employment has gone a long way towards normal. It is the "durable goods industries" that are suffering most. It says: "The real problem of recovery is to restore the activity of the industries which make such things as buildings and machinery. Of 9,000,000 unemployed, 5,000,000 normally make durable goods. The 4,000,000 others unemployed are in service industries; they will have jobs as fast as the producing industries pick up." Among things necessary to make these industries pick up are: Assurance that business will be allowed fair profits on money invested; that taxes beyond emergency needs be avoided; that the budget be balanced as soon as possible; that money be stabilized, and that NRA refrain from drastic threats. We are told that there are not less than sixteen jobs which America has not yet half finished. "To modernize homes would use $1 billion a year, at the modest rate of 1% annual expenditure on $100 billions valuation. Business buildings similarly need remodeling. It is estimated $5 billions ought to be spent on modernizing factory equipment, 55% of which is over 10 years old." Other items mentioned are public buildings, bridges, sewers. Farm equipment used to run over $500 millions a year, but has dropped to around one-fifth of that amount. The railroads are far behind in maintenance and replacement of equipment. 240,000 grade crossings still remain, causing the death of 2,000 annually. "There are streams to be purified, parks to be developed, airports to be built, rural areas to be electrified. Jobs? Who suggested there weren't enough to go around? Who thought that America was built?"

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

We would call attention to the program of the Blue Ridge Training Conference which is carried in this issue. Dr. E. C. Gillette is chairman of the Conference Committee, which guarantees its success.

The Watchman-Examiner (Baptist) states that a Negro Baptist Church in New York City claims to be the largest Protestant Church on earth. It is known as the Abyssinian Church, with a membership of some over 11,000. It recently celebrated its 125th anniversary.

THE SUN's editor acknowledged with appreciation the following announcement: "Rev. and Mrs. John Webster Patton announce the marriage of their daughter Gwendolyn to Mr. Adolphus Brown Fogleman, on Saturday, May 26th, 1934, Elon College, N. C." Our very best wishes are extended to Mr. and Mrs. Fogleman.

The Fellowship Club of the Congregational Women of the Greater Miami area met recently with the women of the Miami Beach Community Church for a half-day session. Mrs. O. H. Denney, the president, presided. A devotional half hour preceded the luncheon and after that a program of music and good fellowship was enjoyed. These meetings are held every once in a while to promote good fellowship and better understanding among the women of the five Congregational Churches of this section.

Rev. and Mrs. R. T. Grissom report that the Catawba Springs Church, Wake County, N. C., has given an organ for one of our churches in R. F. D., Burlington, has also given one for our other church in Carroll County. Brother Grissom, with the generous assistance of Brother Walter Edwards, superintendent of the Sunday School at our Rocky Ford Church, secured the organs May 31st, and they have now been installed. Catawba Spring and Miss Simpson have made a generous donation that will greatly aid in the services of these churches.

"The Ever-Ready Young People's Class at Barrett's Church, of the Wakefield, Va., pastorate, has just had the interior of the church papered, which adds much to its appearance. Mrs. J. E. Cartwright, of Norfolk, president of the Woman's Missionary Conference of Eastern Virginia, will speak at Barrett's on June 10th." So writes Pastor Carr E. Gerringer. Brother Gerringer held a candle-light communion service at the Wakefield Church, 8 P. M., April 22nd. A very appropriate and striking program for the solemn occasion was presented, which was pronounced very impressive.

The Alliance Weekly calls attention to a statement of quite an amazing character made before the United States Senate Judiciary Committee by Attorney General Cummings recently: "The armed forces of gangdom outnumber the 200,000 men in the army and navy," declares the Attorney General, who "estimates that the armament of crime, in revolvers, machine guns, and sawed-off shot-guns, exceeds the total arms equipment of America's soldiers and sailors." With such armament and equipment in the hands of gangsters and killers, is it any wonder that lawlessness abounds?

Attention is called to the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference, which meets with Berea Church, Alamance County, N. C., Thursday and Friday, June 21st and 22nd. Elsewhere the program is presented and, in connection therewith, a statement as to convention membership and finances. Sunday Schools and Christian Endeavor Societies should elect their delegates and arrange to attend the Convention in large numbers. A Convention of great interest is anticipated.

On Sunday, June 3rd, Dr. Elisia A. King, pastor of the Miami Beach (Fla.) Community Church, preached two baccalaureate sermons, viz., in the morning at 11 o'clock, before the students and faculty of the University of Miami at Coral Gables, and in the evening at 8 o'clock, in the Miami Beach Church before the students and faculty of the Ida M. Fisher High School. His subject was, "The Way of Life." Rev. Oscar Hanning Denney, of North Miami, supplied Dr. King's pulpit in the morning. Rev. Leslie J. Barnette, pastor of the Coral Gables Church, conducted the service at Coral Gables.

One of the most brilliant men, graduating from Elon College and later teaching in the college, was Mr. Havilah Babcock, now the distinguished head of the English Department of the University of South Carolina, Columbia. At the recent Commencement of Elon College, Mr. Babcock was honored with the degree of Doctor of Literature. He had already earned by study his Master of Arts degree from Elon College and his Doctor of Philosophy degree from the University of Virginia. This is an honor well bestowed in recognition of real attainment in scholarship and in the field of letters and learning.

The General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches meets in Oberlin, Ohio, June 21st-27th. Our Southern Convention, with its Conferences, is entitled to upward of twenty delegates to the Council, all of whom have been elected and, we presume, notified by President Stanley C. Harrell, Durham, N. C. Every delegate, who can possibly do so, should attend this meeting of the Council, as it promises to be one of great interest and significance. As evidence of the lines to be pursued and matters of moment to be presented, we give on page eight of this issue some items on Foreign Missions to be studied and discussed, and this is only one of ten similar seminars to be held during the Convention.

Rev. John Galloway Truitt, of our Suffolk Church, will now be addressed, and quite appropriately, as "Dr. Truitt," Elon College, at its recent Commencement, having conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Divinity. If Brother Truitt had not previously shown his scholarship and ability, meriting such an honor, he easily and fully demonstrated the merit that would entitle him to this distinction from his Alma Mater by the exceedingly appropriate and able address which he delivered on Alumni Day at the College, May 29th. Dr. Truitt had already earned and received the Master of Arts degree from Elon College; the Bachelor of Theology degree from Princeton University.

Rev. G. C. Crutchfield, pastor, reports a most helpful and interesting service at the Bethlehem Church, Altamahaw, N. C., third Sunday in May. There were all-day services, which included the Memorial service, conducted by the pastor, at 11 o'clock, and, following with an abundance of flowers for the cemetery, a bountiful dinner was spread to the unprecedented crowd that had gathered for the glorious day—some 1,500 people being in attendance. In the afternoon, Rev. H. E. Crutchfield, Ingram, Va., delivered the sermon, and there was a male chorus of twenty voices from Greensboro that brought great inspiration to the vast audience. It was a great and good day in the house and worship of the Lord.

Concord Church, Caswell County, N. C., held its annual Memorial service, Sunday, May 27th. The pastor, Rev. L. L. Wyrick, reports a very largely attended and a very impressive and appropriate service. Rev. T. J. Green, of Elon College, preached at the 11 o'clock service, which was followed by the distribution in the cemetery of an abundance of flowers upon the mounds of the beloved in memory who sleep there. Following this, a bountiful dinner was enjoyed by the large gathering. At the afternoon service, Honorable George T. Anderson, Clerk of the Court of Caswell County, delivered the address, which was in the nature of a historical sketch of the church and of the congregation. It was brought out by the speaker that this church dated back for a century and a quarter, there being now in existence a deed to the property 120 years old. This was a valuable historical paper. The services of the day were greatly enhanced in having a male quartette for several numbers under the leadership of Mr. R. E. Wyrick, of Greensboro. It was a great and good day in the history of this historic meeting-house and congregation.

50th ANNIVERSARY AT PLEASANT HILL ACADEMY.

In a one-room school in the back country of the Cumberland Plateau in Tennessee, Rev. Benjamin F. Dodge, a Congregational minister, fifty years ago, started Pleasant Hill Academy. His daughter, Miss Emma F. Dodge, present librarian and former teacher in the Academy, on a beautiful May day, spoke to the army of workers, past and present. For forty years the Academy teachers and students were isolated for weeks and months at a time by the lack of good roads. Now the school is on the main highway between Nashville and Knoxville, and buses allow their passengers to see the excellent buildings and the fine farm where the young highlanders are taught and helped in their struggle to make a living. Principal Oscar M. Fogle, an experienced public school man, takes only such students beyond the local community as do not have access to other high schools. The instruction is fine for such branches as are practicable for the life of the highlands and includes instruction in hygiene and first aid, carving and weaving, and practical farm work.

On the fiftieth anniversary, the Tennessee pastors, the conference superintendent, educators from other religious and state schools, including the State University, Vanderbilt University, Peabody College, Tennessee Polytechnic Institute, and the county school system, were present and offered felicitations.

Pleasant Hill is known for its character training. Graduates are loath to leave it because of its ideals and fellowship. Through the years it has been the pioneer school, which has furnished many teachers, professional men, and business leaders in East Tennessee.

F. P. ENSMINGER.

The gospel is in the person of Christ, and his presence is conditioned by nothing save the openness and willingness of the soul to receive him.—Stewart Means.

FROM GEORGIA.

Recently the pastor at large, together with our extension worker for Georgia, visited nineteen Georgia churches. The purpose of this tour was inspired by the National Program of Church Visitation as set up at the mid-winter meeting in Evanston. The goal was to have experts under the direction of the state superintendent hold "conversations" with all of the churches of the State. In these conversations the church business program including the every-member canvass and the promotion of missions and methods by which full apportionments might be met each year, together with per capita dues, were discussed. It being impracticable in his territory to pay the expense of experts, the pastor at large felt it his duty to do the best he could to help the churches along lines suggested. It was also the purpose to promote among the Georgia churches the Student Summer Service work and our summer leadership conferences.

Beginning at Baxley, the tour ended with a Christian Life Conference at Woodbury. Everywhere the churches most cordially and heartily welcomed both workers, while in several places a sermon was demanded although it was not really on the program. Usually the pastor at large met all the officers of the church and carefully went over their business program with them. The trustees told how they prepared their budget for current expenses, how they put on their every-member canvass and what method they used in collecting funds, how they kept their church in repair, how they raised their per capita dues—in short, everything pertaining to the carrying on of the business life of a church in a business-like manner.

Where it seemed desirable, the pastor at large set forth things in a specific way.

A feature of this work was the interpretation and distribution of missionary literature, the people were interested to know about this material and in many of the churches responsibility for further distributing such literature was placed upon individuals. In all this young people were not forgotten, but introduced into the ways of successfully carrying on the important business of a Christian Church.

A third outstanding feature was the promotion of our Student Summer Service work and our Piedmont College Leadership Training Conference to be held July 23rd-30th, at Demorest. The hearty response on the part of the young people and backed by the spirit and promised aid of adults, seemed to indicate a large attendance at this conference. At one church the young people, after the meeting, got together and planned to prepare to take a truck load of young folks to this conference.

The good accomplished by this type of visitation of course cannot be measured. But a better acquaintance with conditions and methods and materials cannot but result in greater diligence and cooperation in all these things.

M. J. SWEET.

PRAYER.

Once more a new day lies before us, Father. As we go out among men to do our work, touching hands and lives of our fellows, help us to cheer the suffering by our sympathy, to freshen the drab by our wholesomeness, and to strengthen in all the wholesome sense of health and the joy of life.—Amen.

—Walter Rauschenbusch.

We kneel, how weak; we rise, how full of power.—Trench.

BLUE RIDGE CONFERENCE.

The Blue Ridge Training Conference, Black Mountain, N. C., July 2-11, 1934, has come to be one of the great influences in our Southeastern fellowship. Here have gathered around one hundred Congregational and Christian leaders for eight days of inspiring fellowship, for valuable courses of study, for better training of Christian leadership. Those who have once shared the rich experiences at Blue Ridge cherish its memory and long to return. To those who have never had the privilege we extend the invitation to come and share the experience. We especially invite friends from other areas, from the north for instance, to come down and enjoy Blue Ridge with us.

BLUE RIDGE is located on the side of a mountain looking out over a majestic series of mountain ranges, with a beautiful valley in the foreground. It is high and cool, a wonderful place for a vacation experience. If you have never seen the view from Robert E. Lee Hall, come to this Conference and enjoy the beauties and share the privileges.

CONFERENCE PROGRAM. This Conference is under the auspices of the Southeast Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches and

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF OUR CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE ELON COMMENCEMENT.

It was the 44th Annual Commencement of Elon, May 25th-30th, inclusive. The press carried, day by day, detailed accounts of the commencement. The outstanding items, and those measuring up easily to the highest standard of previous years, were, first of all, the musical features of every public exercise by the Elon Singers under the direction of Prof. Dwight Steere. Last week's SUN told of the events of Sunday, May 27th, when the real features of the commencement began in its morning worship, with a great baccalaureate sermon by Rev. Dwight Bradley; the vesper recital at 4 P. M., as noted in last week's SUN also, by Mr. Fletcher Moore, a real genius with organ and piano, who, besides graduating from the Department of Music, had the distinction of being the salutatorian of his class.

Dr. L. E. Smith, College president, brought a fitting climax to the first day of commencement at the evening worship on the 27th in his parting message to the class, which was appropriate, timely and inspiring.

The feature of the Monday program, May 28th, was the Class Day Exercises at 10:30 A. M., presided over and conducted by Mr. Robert M. Kimball, president of his class and one of the two ministerial students graduating with the class this year. The Department of Music at 8 P. M., presented the Elon Festival Chorus in "The Creation," an oratorio by Haydn. This chorus showed a very high degree of talent and of attainment, and the audience was delighted.

Tuesday, May 29th, was Alumni Day, the chief events of which were the address, at 11 A. M., by Dr. J. G. Truitt, of Suffolk, Va., and the Alumni Address, at 7:30 P. M., by Mrs. Rose Howell Holder, class of '25, New York City. Dr. Truitt found a fitting foundation for his remarks in the 16th chapter of Numbers in which Moses and Aaron, with censers burning at the altar, called upon certain men of consecration and loyalty to stand between the living and the dead and thus stop the plague that was beginning to prevail in Israel. Dr. Truitt's thesis was that the alumni of the College constituted, or should constitute, that loyal band of men and women, consecrated to their Alma Mater (Elon) who should now step into the breach between the living and the dead, and stop the plague of debt, financial obligations and other ills, and give to Elon College the right and the privilege to go forward, to achieve and to do as her past history reveals she is capable of doing, when un-trammelled and un-hindered with the plague of debt that infests by day and by night.

Mrs. Holder lived up to her high reputation won as a pupil of Elon College, and since won as a reporter and writer for the metropolitan press. She gave a great and inspiring address.

The great event of the week was that of graduating day, May 30th. The graduating exercises, after the academic procession, were opened with exceedingly appropriate and reverential invocation by Dr. W. H. Boone, chairman of the Board of Trustees. The literary address was delivered by Honorable Clyde Hoey, Shelby, N. C., using as his theme, "The Spirit of 1934." For forty-five minutes this distinguished attorney, statesman and orator held the rapt attention of his audience, revealing the past achievement of our own country as compared to that of others, and of the kind of character our Republic has developed, with even greater prospect and promise that the future holds for us. It was a great address by a great speaker and thrilled the great audience that heard it.

The following graduates, presented by Dean A. L. Hook of the College, received their diplomas from the hand of President Smith, conferring on each the degree of Bachelor of Arts:

Iris Uldeen, Albright, Elon College, N. C.; Martha Estelle Anderson, Route 1, Halifax, Va.; Margaret Louise Bailey, Lynnhaven, Va.; Miriam Christine Bulla, Sophia, N. C.; Tyrell Robert Caudill, Allreds, N. C.; Frances Ellen Chandler, Virgilina, Va.; J. T. Chappell, Jr., Candor, N. C.; Marguerite Adeline Cooper, Route 5, Sanford, N. C.; Vera Louise Geringer, Brown's Summit, N. C.; Cyrus Delmont Griffin, Rocky Mount, N. C.; Marguerite Egerton Harris, Macon, N. C.; Stedman Holt Hines, McLeansville, N. C.; Florence Patricia Holden, 707 N. Main St., Louisburg, N. C.; Victor Bradshaw Holland, 714 W. 36th St., Norfolk, Va.; Kenneth Kellar Hughes, Elon College, N. C.; Forrest Ervin Hyde, 712 Pine St., Clifton Forge, Va.; Virginia Louise Jay, Holland, Va.; Marjorie Virginia Jones, Woodleigh, N. C.; Maysie Azile Joyce, Norwood, N. C.; Robert Morris Kimball, Manson, N. C.; Walter Cleophas Latham, Williamsston, N. C.; Edward Irwin LeKites, 95 Main St., Chincoteague, Va.; Fred Helbert Miller, Elkton, Va.; Charles Fletcher Moore, 115 Anthony St., Burlington, N. C.; Thelma Avis Morris, Dyke, Va.; Frank Orva Perkins, 122 Maxwell St., Fayetteville, N. C.; Alma Amelia Smith, 1208 Warrington Ave., Norfolk, Va.; Naomi Louise Steed, Candor, N. C.; Alice Elizabeth Stephens, 66 Market St., Hertford, N. C.; Charlie Ramsey Swain, Hillsboro, N. C.; Paul Richard Taylor, Route 1, Newton, N. C.; Norman Brown Waters, 655 E. Main St., Washington, N. C.; Aubrey Odell Winecoff, Kannapolis, N. C.; Jane Christine Yarbrough, 403 Ireland St., Burlington, N. C.

The following certificates were awarded:

Diploma in Art—Clara Louise Thompson, Haw River, N. C.

Diploma in Expression—Marguerite Egerton Harris, Macon, N. C.

Diploma in Piano and Organ—Chas. Fletcher Moore, 115 Anthony St., Burlington, N. C.

Certificate in Expression—Thelma Avis Morris, Dyke, Va.

Certificate in Secretarial Practice—Daisy Pauline Kissell, 106 Third St., Sanford, N. C.; Alma Louise Lamm, 200 Gilmer St., Burlington, N. C.; Dorothy Cummings Miller, Elon College, N. C.; Mrs. Ann Rawls Newman, Elon College, N. C.; Emma Sophie Woodson, 102 Fisher St., Burlington, N. C.

It has been the custom of Elon College since its first year to present a copy of the Bible to each member of the graduating class just after receiving his or her diploma. In most fitting and memorable terms, Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., presented the Bibles, closing his presentation with the declaration that if the young men and young women going from the College today followed the course charted in this Book, they would not go astray in the great maelstrom of life.

Rev. John Galloway Truitt, M. A., Th. B., was by vote of the Trustees, honored with the degree of Doctor of Divinity, and Prof. Havilah Babcock, M. A., Ph. D., of the University of North Carolina, Columbia, was honored with the degree of Doctor of Literature.

The benediction was pronounced by Dr. Truitt, closing another very eventful and epoch-making event in the history of Elon College and our Congregational-Christian fellowship.

STUDENT SUMMER SERVICE FOR 1934.

One of the most vital and interesting phases of our Home Missionary Work, which was developed by the late Dr. W. Knighton Bloom, was the Student Summer Service. Under his guidance and inspiration many students went out from the colleges and the theological seminaries—young men and young women eager to serve in the spirit of the Master. Some served as summer pastors and others conducted Vacation Church Schools, and in other ways served the church and the pastor, especially in a vital, interesting, friendly ministry to the young people. Many of them go into the rural parishes, although some of them serve in the town churches. This work has been supported by the Church Extension Boards. This year, on account of the financial condition, the number of students going out in the work will be fewer than usual but there will be twenty-one of them serving in the Carolinas, Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee and in West Florida.

Those serving in Georgia and the Carolinas are: Robert Barksdale, Elon College and Vanderbilt University; Eben T. Chapman, Williams College; Scott Read Chatterton, Brown University and Hartford Seminary; Kenneth D. Claypool, Defiance College and Yale Divinity School; Bernice Davis, Piedmont College; Dorothy A. Grigsby, Piedmont College; Rebecca Joy Grigsby, Elon College; Mildred E. Rister, Piedmont College; Ruth Scotford, Chicago Seminary; Earle B. Pleasant, Yale; Charles A. Hoyt, Jr., Georgia Tech.

Those serving in Tennessee, Alabama and West Virginia are: John Chandler Adams, Piedmont College; Vivian Chandler, Alabama Woman's College; Phillip Havener, Andover-Newton; Carl Key, Elon College and Vanderbilt University; Joyce E. Lohman, Schauffler College; Hazel Maddox, Piedmont College; Emil Reikow, Vanderbilt University; Millard Stevens, Elon College; Malcolm V. White, Harvard University; Eunice L. Williamson, Piedmont College; Viola Veller, Piedmont and Vanderbilt Medical School.

DEMAND FOR RELIGIOUS LITERATURE.

There are many indications that the American public still demands and reads with relish that which it takes to be religious. But recently the manuscript, written by Charles Dickens for his children on "The Life of Our Lord," became available. United Features Syndicate purchased serial rights for North and South America. Many doubted the wisdom of such a feature, but the facts are that it increased its circulation of newspapers using it by one million, an average of ten per cent per paper. Any feature that can increase the circulation of a paper by half that amount is counted a great scoop, and the manager of United Features declares that this purchase was "the greatest circulation builder of all time." One exchange, in speaking of the matter, says:

"Calling 'The Life of Our Lord' 'the literary find of a century,' Hearst papers in New York, Baltimore, Detroit, San Francisco and Boston, launched it last Sunday in the first of their three four-page, full-color supplements. And on the heels of this journalistic venture in piety followed others which led churchmen to wonder if the United States was entering a great religious revival.

"King Features announced a 40-installment version of 'The Short Bible,' abbreviated, rearranged and done into modern English by Professor Edgar J. Godspeed and J. M. P. Smith of the University of Chicago (time, October 16th).

"United Features released the first of 21 installments of 'Statesmanship and Religion,' by Secretary of Agriculture Henry Agard Wallace, which is to be published next May in book form by Round Table Press."

Thus the featuring of religious publications is proving a real bonanza for the press.

It was recently pointed out in these columns that the "best seller" in the past ten years of any book, outside the Bible, was "In His Steps," by Dr. Sheldon, and that the second best seller was also a religious book.

Thousands read trash and fill their minds with the husks, but there are still thousands left who, in their reading, like to get that which feeds the mind and soul.

GROWING SMILES.

A smile is quite a funny thing;
It wrinkles up your face;
And when it's gone you never find
Its secret hiding place.

But far more wonderful it is
To see what smiles can do;
You smile at one, he smiles at you,
And so one smile makes two.

He smiled on someone, since you smiled,
And then that one smiles back;
And that one smiles, until, in truth,
You keep in smiling track.

And since a smile can do great good
By cheering hearts of care,
Let's smile and smile and not forget
That smiles go everywhere.

THE MOTHER IN THE BACKGROUND.

By F. C. HOGGARTH.

Behind every great man, it has been claimed there is a great mother. The entry of Washington's birth in his mother's Bible reads: "George Washington, son of Augustine and Mary his wife, was born ye 11th day of February, 1732, about 10 in the morning and was baptised the 3rd of April following." Then follow the names of his two godfathers and godmother.

In those days as soon as a girl was fairly in her teens she was marriageable; but Mary Ball was in no hurry, and it was not until she was twenty-two that she married Augustine Washington, a widower with two young children.

Some fourteen years later she was left a widow, by which time the two children had become seven. She might, we suppose, have married again, quite the customary thing to do in those days. She chose, however, to give herself entirely to the care of her family and the estate.

"A wise and provident mother," is Woodrow Wilson's description of her: "A woman of too fine a character and too steadfast a courage to be dismayed by responsibility . . . who had shown a singular capacity for business when the romantic days of courtship were over."

George was under twelve when his father died, and two years later "it was proposed that he should be sent to sea, as so many lads were no doubt from that maritime province of Virginia. His mother, however, vetoed the suggestion. She decided it was best for him to continue his schooling—"of books and manly sports." Every boy in that country learned to ride, and young Washington, we are told, "took his apprenticeship on horseback and in the tangled woods with characteristic zest and ardor."

In that home he learned courage and honesty and punctuality and much else. Attendance at church was also part of that mother's regime. During the struggle in which her son became the leader, she said, "the mothers and wives of brave men must be brave women," and such she was. She knew the trials of separation and all the anxieties and risks of war. Entirely heartfelt was her exclamation on the close of hostilities: "Thank God! Thank God! All the fighting and killing are over. The war is ended, and now we shall have peace."

At a ball in honor of the victory, Washington "entered the room with his aged mother on his arm, not a whit bent for all her seventy-four years, and as quiet as a queen at receiving the homage of her son's comrades in arms." He got his imperious spirit of command from her, says Woodrow Wilson. Once when a servant told her that "Mars George" had put up at the tavern, she commanded him "to go and tell George to come here instantly," and, masterful man though he was, he came.

"I am not surprised at what George has done," she said to Lafayette, "for he was always a very good boy." A quiet and devoted mother, full of faith and courage and good works, was Mary Washington, who endowed her son with her own greatest qualities.

In that same century, and contemporary with her, there was in England another mother, one of the greatest in history, Susannah Wesley. She married Samuel Wesley when a curate with thirty pounds a year. The Rectory at Epworth to which she and her husband came in 1697 was in the Fen Country, a benighted and lawless place. The Fenmen were wild fellows, and the rector was a somewhat obstinate and tactless man who got across with almost everybody. It was those Fenmen who set fire to the Rectory when John was a small boy of five, and that was but one instance of the feud, for the Fenmen stopped short at nothing. There were fightings without and fears within that home. Poverty and debt were the order of the day, and no wonder, for in twenty-one years nineteen children were born. How many there were alive at any one time is not known. John was the fifteenth; and when he was born, eight had died.

Some would say that life under those circumstances was not worth living. People did not seem to think so—in those days. It was more or less the normal thing. The birth rate was certainly high, so was the infantile death rate. Women needed to be heroes, and Susannah Wesley was one. In circumstances that were always difficult and often enough desperate, Susannah Wesley reared her family, exercised discipline, and cared for their minds and souls as well as for their bodies. She acted as her own schoolmistress and gave the utmost care to the religious training of her children. When old enough, she gave some time every evening to talk privately with one or another of them on things that related to life's principal concerns.

In spite of poverty and sickness and the frequent entry of death, she kept first things first, and brought up her family in the fear and admonition of the Lord. Her personality was as a strong tower of defense for her children, and John in the perplexities of his life work turned to her strong sagacity and fine insight for guidance. When he sailed for Georgia, on missionary work, she asked for no better thing. Had she twenty sons she would be content, she said, for them to spend their lives in such a cause—preparing the way of the Lord in some part of the earth.

One of her famous pieces of advice to John was: "In good earnest resolve to make religion the business of your life, for, after all, that is the one thing that, strictly speaking, is necessary. All things beside are comparatively little to the purposes of life." A sister of our common life, she showed how noble a task is that of motherhood.

In the Lady Chapel of the new Cathedral at Liverpool there is a window to her and to all devoted mothers, of whom she was so outstanding an example. To be a noble mother, to triumph over adverse circumstances in that high service, is surely one of the finest and bravest things on God's earth. Not the least glory of our religion is its succession of such mothers. They have been found in every age, and many deserve to be much better known than they are.

As we read of such women we feel like echoing the words of a certain famous pagan orator, who seeing the devotion of a Christian mother, exclaimed in wondering admiration: "Heavens! What women these Christians have!"—In Christian Advocate.

PECULIAR PEOPLE.

"Ye are . . . a peculiar people; that ye should shew forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvelous light."—I. Peter 2:9.

We do not like to be considered peculiar. We are very much afraid of that. We want to be like the world, and mingle with the world, so that people won't consider us peculiar. I hear people say sometimes, "Yes, she is a good woman, but"—with a shrug or a grimace—"she is very peculiar." "Yes, a very good man; yes, O yes, but very peculiar." I would just like to make one journey around the world to see if I could not find one church made up of peculiar people. That church would shake the whole world.—D. L. Moody.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Thousands of young people, within the field of the Southern Convention, are passing through the annual Commencement season in high school, college and university. Many students have had the privilege of being at home during the past year. But others have been away for several months, and look forward with pleasure to the return home. For some this is the first year away from home. For others it is the end of school days.

For the parents there is a tinge of sadness when the child goes to school for the first time. That is the beginning of a new field for the boys and girls. However, when the day comes to go away to college a great change comes over the student and over the home. Boys and girls are to face the responsibilities of life without being under the direct guidance and care of father and mother. Well do I remember the day I left for college. Mother always cried when I left. She knew it was the beginning of separate paths for the younger members of the family. It was always sad to say "good-bye" for four or five months. But it was sweet to feel that one was missed when away from home.

Commencement days bring new attitudes and new responsibilities to those who have been in school. This is especially true when one has been absent from home for eight or ten months. The college student meets a new spirit in the home community. The other young people who have not had the privilege of college experiences are more or less suspicious of the young college friend. Life has changed the student. A new field of thinking has made new lines in the face. The home folks have changed but not as perceptibly, for they have been living in the same old way.

This new attitude will find its expression in the home church. Maybe it is a small country church. There is no pipe organ. The choir is not well trained. There are no outstanding solo artists. The preacher is commonplace and does not seem to be well versed in up-to-date college theology. The Sunday School teachers are not equal to the faculty in the college Sunday School. The congregation is mixed as to age, dress, educational qualifications and experience. The church building is not modern and spacious and imposing. The cordial spirit of the campus has been dispersed and supplanted by an attitude of suspicion and envy. The student interprets the spirit of the neighbors and friends. He may wait for the other young people to approach him with a cordial welcome while they wonder if he has lost his old spirit of fellowship, and has returned to them with a feeling of superiority. Or, he may break through all the chilliness and overflow with joy at meeting his church friends again.

I have been out of college several years. I have seen many different attitudes expressed in the return of college students to home and church. Religious experience suffers much at the hands of college students. College life is a real test of faith. College faith is a test of character. Christian character may be first, but Christian faith is not always predominant in college teachers' creeds. It would be difficult to define the standards of orthodox faith in the modern college. A college professor who could distinguish between theology and philosophy did much to keep my head level and my faith firm, in the beginning of my college life. Some of the seniors in those days provoked some very searching questions about the Bible and the person of Jesus Christ.

When college students return home the best advertisement they can give to their college is to become active in the home church. It is not always easy to do this. But it is good for the student, good for the institution and good for the church. Much has been said about the effect of the estate-owned college upon the religious life of the student. The real test can be made in the attitude of students as compared with the attitude of students from the church colleges when they return home and go back to the home church. Stand by the work of your church.

ORATORICAL CONTEST.

Customs and practices on the average campus change more or less rapidly. Fifteen to twenty-five years ago at Elon College there were three thriving literary societies—the Psiphelian, the Clio, and the Philologist. Later the Psykaleon Society was organized. The members of these societies prepared and executed weekly programs. They had good practice in writing, reading and debating. They were also drilled thoroughly in parliamentary procedure. Later in the campus life at Elon College there came fraternities and sororities. Fraternities and sororities are predominantly social; not interested in preparing papers and staging debates. The literary societies have largely given away to these newer organizations.

With the passing of the literary societies the opportunities for public speaking and debating have largely gone. It still is true, however, that the individual who can stand on his feet and think intelligently and clearly and who is able to express his thoughts convincingly to an audience is able to influence the decision of the public. Since this is true, we have made an effort at Elon College to revive the practice of public speaking by the students. To the young man or young woman preparing and delivering the best oration, a medal was given. The oratorical contest opened the Commencement exercises Friday evening, May 25th, at 8 o'clock, in the Literary Hall. Through the process of elimination, there were four contestants. Mr. Vernon Barrett, topic, "The Next War"; Miss Edythe Ernst, topic, "Model Tenements"; Miss Louise Lavton, topic, "The Constitution"; and Mr. Clyde Ridd, topic, "Sportsmanship, the Road to Perfect Democracy." Miss Lavton won the contest and was awarded the medal. I am glad to offer her oration to the public. It is a really a fine effort:

"THE CONSTITUTION.

"The Constitution of the United States has its roots in the great and heroic past of the English-speaking race. For five centuries prior to the Constitution, the greatest of the Roman lawyers and orators. Cicero, spoke in terms of the higher law. The idea of a higher law transcending the power of the living generation, and therefore eternal as justice itself became lodged in our system of jurisprudence.

"As governmental panaceas, constitutions have come and gone; but it can be said of the American Constitution, in the words of the noble tribute of Dr. Johnson to the immortal fame of Shakespeare, that the stream of time which has washed the dissoluble fabric of many other paper constitutions has left almost untouched its unmovable strength.

"A constitution, while primarily for the distribution of governmental powers is, in its last analysis, a formal expression of adherence to what in ancient times was called the higher law. The jurisprudence of every nation has, with more or less clearness, recognized the existence of certain primal fundamental laws which are superior to the laws and statutes of living generations.

"A knowledge of history is as essential to an intelligent citizenship as are the chart and compass to the mariner. The would-be statesman who thinks he can guide the ship of state and at the same time ignore the teachings of history will send that craft upon the rocks whereon misguided governments have always wrecked.

"Only through enlightenment will American institutions be perpetuated. When the citizenship of this country learns the truth about our form of government and the history of the conditions which brought it into being, it will not be easily lead astray by demagogues.

"We must not look upon it as the results of a sudden impulse, a mere product of the moment, to view it in that way is to fail entirely to grasp its deeper meaning.

"Our Federal Constitution is the product of centuries of struggle and sacrifice. The liberty-loving Anglo-Saxon peoples on the other side of the Atlantic began a struggle which was carried on by those who came to this side. It was nearly two centuries before they saw their ideas embodied into the written basic law of a new nation. Love of liberty was the inspiration that sent their forebears into the new world and sustained them while they laid the foundation for a government of laws instead of a government of men.

"Our government, great as it is, is not free from peril. The liberty it guarantees can be lost. It can be as surely destroyed by erosion as by assault. This is as true as when the Irish patriot, Curran, first declared that 'Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty!'

"If the makers of our Constitution had created a central government with powers to control all our functions of every kind throughout this vast territory, it would have gone to pieces long ago. Instead we have a central government of limited and specifically definite powers, under which are today forty-eight states, in each of which the Federal Constitution guarantees a republican form of government. Each of these states may create subdivisions and governmental agencies, with powers to locally administer the laws of that state and to make such local regulations as are best calculated to meet the needs of that particular locality, all of which must be done within the fundamental laws of the land, which are the state and Federal Constitutions.

"The Constitution of the United States has not been written in completed form; it never will be. It has not been perfected; it never will be. The resources of language can describe the Constitution but inadequately. It is infinitely more than our fathers were able to agree upon, or to anticipate and formulate in a written paper a hundred and forty years ago.

"The recent cry has gone out from some quarters that the power of the courts to declare a law unconstitutional is a dangerous one, and should be abrogated by giving to Congress the power to again pass a law once the Supreme Court has held it unconstitutional, and when thus re-enacted be safe from over-throw by the court. By this change it was sought to make Congress supreme over the highest court in the land, the very thing the framers of the Constitution sought to guard carefully against.

"Those who advocate such a change in our Constitution, contend that the act of the United States Supreme Court in holding a law of Congress unconstitutional was pure usurpation of power on its part and that no such power was contemplated by the Constitution.

"Much of the opposition to our form of government springs from ignorance. The remedy is education. Through enlightenment American institutions will be perpetuated.

"So enduring was the achievement of those who framed this Constitution that today it is the oldest comprehensive written form of government now existing in the world. Few, if any, forms of government have withstood the mad spirit of innovation, or more effectively proved their merit by the 'arduous greatness of things done.'

"The admiration with which the world has always regarded the Constitution of the United States should also be given to a people who have sufficient genius for government to create it and make it workable. There can be no successful constitution for any people unless it has a deep and vital sense of constitutional morality, and its essence is a spirit of self-restraint which is willing to subordinate the fleeting interests and ardent passions of the living moment to certain fundamental truths which are believed to be immutable.

"The spirit of the Constitution, the principles set forward, can be traced to other lands than America, and to other periods of history than that of the American Revolution.

"It is all that we inherited from the mother country after all the heroism and triumphs in the evolution of a race, and in the building of a free nation through a thousand years, and all that millions from other great nations have brought to us since our birth as an independent nation. It covers a full knowledge of the accomplishments and failures in all other governments in all ages and in all the world, while it consists of the physical energy and the intellectual resourcefulness which have come from the admixture of blood and of civilization.

"The Constitution has given us the country we now possess, crossed by the thoroughfares of the nations, our corn lands, cotton lands, and wheat lands, our inexhaustible mines, and the herds upon our ten thousand hills; the free public schools at every door, the centers of higher learning pushing the scientific advance in every possible direction and promoting every conceivable phase of intellectual activity.

"From our Constitution has come the complete toleration of religious opinion and common respect for religious worship. It has developed individualism and the balanced sense of the nation, the love of freedom which is so strong that no one is afraid of losing the object of it, the regard for laws which are fundamental, the indifference to laws which tend to favor special interests or which seem to set at naught the common thought.

"The old Pilgrims at Plymouth, the minute-men at Lexington and at Concord Bridge were in our Constitution at the beginning. College boys and farmers' sons and millionaires' sons fighting their way together up the flame-swept hill at San Juan, the veterans of the Ninth Regular Infantry pushing their way through the August heat and sand and filth of China and battering down the gates of the forbidden city to relieve the American legation from the horrors of Peking, the American soldier battering his way to gain world liberty, all are in the Constitution now.

"Thus, we see that when the Constitution was formulated in 1787 one world had recently ended and civilization was entering the dawn of a new and greater one. The American people have shown the nations of the world that the common man can be trusted, without the shedding of blood, not only to erect his own form of government, but to choose a form that can be adapted to meet new conditions as they arise, and that can endure for a century and a half with no final limitations upon its life."

AN HONEST BELIEVER.

In what seems "ye long ago," a young man named Koshiba came to my Bible class in Tokio. I have a vivid recollection of how he and I stood under the same umbrella in the rain in front of the gate of my home where he decided to be a Christian.

His father was a proud old Samurai, who for many years had charge of the numerous carriages of the Emperor. It was a great grief to this old man that his son had become a Christian, because there would be no one to care for the idols he had worshipped so many years, and loved.

In Buddhism there are two kinds of goblins called tengu, one with a long nose and one with a short nose. The old man pinned his faith to the one with a long nose. So he would go to the temple where his idol was worshipped and secure holy paper which had been sanctified by the priest, take it home and make it into pills, one of which he took every morning before breakfast. He told his son that this was the cause of his good health and long life. He lived to be 88 years old. He said to his son, "If a mother, before bearing her baby, would take one of these pills, she would have no pain, and if one would examine the baby after its birth, the pill would be found tightly grasped in its right hand. Now if you had not become a Christian, you would believe these things, just as I do."

Are there any people in our land, like this old Buddhist, who think themselves absolutely right when they are absolutely wrong? What about Brother Voliva of Zion City, to whom I once taught Latin? What about the people who deny the existence of disease, sin and matter and death? But, of course, what any of the rest of us believe is sound doctrine.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary

MISSIONS AT THE GENERAL COUNCIL.

The 125th Annual Meeting of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions will take place June 24th and 25th at Oberlin College, Ohio, in conjunction with the General Council of the Congregational and Christian Churches which meets there from June 21st to June 27th. Dr. Fred Field Goodsell of Brookline, Mass., Executive Vice-President of the Board, and Dr. Oscar E. Maurer, of New Haven, Conn., Corresponding Secretary, have just issued the official call to Corporate Members.

Dr. A. L. Warnshuis, of New York, Secretary of the International Missionary Council, will give the opening address on Sunday night, June 24th, at a joint session speaking on "United Foreign Missions. Greetings from India and other parts of the Far East will be brought by Mrs. G. R. Wilson, of Hinsdale, Ill., just back from a trip to India and Japan; Dr. Wilbur S. Deming, who reached America last week from Ahmednagar, India, and who bears the fraternal greetings of the Indian Christians of the North India United Church; Dr. J. J. Banninga, of Madura, also fresh from India, brings fraternal greetings from the South India United Church; and Prof. T. W. Graham, Dean of Oberlin Graduate School of Theology, who has just completed a world tour during which he was the official representative of the American Board at the Centenary celebration of its Madura Mission in India.

The business session on Monday morning, June 25th, will be in charge of Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter, Dean of Hartford Theological Seminary and President of the American Board.

A particularly stimulating feature will be the International Socratic on Monday afternoon, June 25th, when national leaders and missionaries from Japan, China, India, Africa and other foreign countries, will discuss "Where and How Shall the American Board Serve?" opening up freely many vexing questions. Following this will come impressive exercises at the Memorial Arch on the Oberlin Campus, erected to commemorate the death of ten Christian missionary martyrs of the Shansi Mission in China during the time of the Boxer uprising in 1900.

The most colorful part of the dramatic contribution that the American Board will make consists of two episodes, first the Livingstone Soliloquy from Oxenham's pageant of "Darkness and Light," in which, with musical background and interludes, Dr. Enoch F. Bell, of Newton Center, Mass., Editorial Secretary of the American Board, will impersonate David Livingstone, and Dr. Ernest M. Halliday, of New York, will give the Epilogue.

The second sketch will depict in panoramic form the Oberlin-Shansi work in China from its inception in 1883, and will be enacted by young people from the First Congregational Church of Oberlin, Dr. James A. Richards, pastor, under the direction of Mrs. Helen Berthoff. Scenes laid in Oberlin, Boston and China during those pioneer days, will be recalled and romantic figures like those of H. H. Kung, now Minister of Finance of China, will move through these historic scenes.

The American Board will contribute many leaders in a series of discussion groups, or "Mission Seminars," which will be carried on throughout the Council Meeting and the Annual Meeting of the American Board, which represents the Congregational and Christian Churches in their overseas work. Heading up the series will be: Dr.

Dwight J. Bradley of Newton Center, Mass., Chairman; Dr. Oscar E. Maurer, of New Haven, Conn., and Dr. Fred Field Goodsell, of Brookline, Mass., as Counsellors; Rev. Alfred W. Hurst, of Chattanooga, Tenn., and Mrs. Leslie R. Rounds, of Cedar Croft, Mahwah, N. J., as Scribes. Not only American Board Secretaries, with years of actual experience on the field, but missionaries fresh from overseas will contribute to these Seminars, the purpose of which is "To discover, evaluate and make known what is involved in the application of the main recommendations of the Laymen's Foreign Mission Inquiry to the work of Foreign Missions, and to face the major issues in Home Missions today."

KAGAWA DEPLORES MILITARISM

Evangelist Kagawa, of Japan, outstanding Christian preacher of the world, recently wrote from the Philippines for his Fellowship Bulletin: "If Japan will only repent, and establish permanent friendship with China! There is no other way than by the Law of Love. And not only in the relations between China and Japan, if we hope for a progressive uniting of all the cultures of the nations and races of the whole world, there is no other way than through the principle of redemptive love. The law of re-demptive love is the fundamental law of the universe. Kropotkin's instinctive love is not enough. Instinctive love does not transcend race. It is the redemptive love that Christ lived and practiced that alone transcends race. This type of redemptive love must grow in us, and in cooperation with the spirit of the universe we must labor to save the unhappy peoples of the world. Since the Japanese nation was unable to sense this great redemptive love, I suffer the sorrows of the Prophet Jeremiah. Forgive us! You sons of Confucius and Motzu, forgive us in the name of your great peace-loving sages! Some day the Japanese will cast away sword and gun and awaken to the love of the Cross. Just now I can think of nothing but to beseech your pardon. And there are an uncounted number of young sculs in Japan who like myself are asking for pardon—this is my message to Chinese brothers who may read this book."

THE SECRET OF PERMANENCE.

On what do permanence and power of Christian missions depend? On institutions, or organizations, on strong continued financial support? Some missions and work are criticized on the ground that the results are not permanent because they depend chiefly on preaching the Gospel and Bible teaching, but establish no large schools or colleges, no well-equipped hospitals or large well-organized churches. Such institutions are good but in themselves they do not insure permanence. And physical institution may be destroyed in a night or may be taken over by a hostile government.

The secret of permanence is life. Good seed (the Word of God) planted (in prayer) and nurtured (by the Holy Spirit) until it takes root and bears fruit, is the best assurance that a work will abide. This was the secret of the permanence and progress of the work of Christ and his apostles. The gates of death and all the devil's forces cannot prevail against that work.

Everything that God provides may be an asset but sometimes we have been tempted today to look upon physical equipment, large institutions, elaborate organization and financial strength as an evidence of permanence, rather than on life, implanted, nurtured, spreading. Men can demolish institutions. They cannot destroy life—God-given life.—Missionary Review.

TRAINING FOR BAPTISM.

Young African tribesmen are not admitted to the church in Liberia without careful training. A class of forty "hearers" was recently formed, to be under regular instruction for a year before they are made catechumens and another period training before they are baptized.

A simple and dignified ritual in keeping with native customs marks their admission as hearers, the earliest stage. The questions they are asked are these, translated into two languages:

What do you want? (The answer, I want God's cross.)

Will you promise to keep God's laws?

Will you promise not to use pagan charms?

Will you promise not to use divination, nor to obey a diviner?

Will you promise not to sacrifice to spirits, and if others sacrifice meat, will you promise not to eat that meat?

Will you promise to have one wife only (or husband), to be faithful, and not to follow any other?

Will you promise to pray to God every day, to come to church on Sunday, and to come when they call you to hear God's Word?—Missionary Review.

A Story for the Children

PINTO'S TREASURE.

A STORY OF OLD PANAMA.

By ALICE WETHERELL.

"Hurry, Pinto, hurry," Lorenzo whispered through the open slats of the double door of the living room. Pinto almost choked on the little bite of sweet, hard dulce at the bottom of his cocoa cup and ran through the open double-slat door to join his brother.

"It's getting late for starting," he agreed as he pulled his brother by the hand down the steps, through the courtyard and the gate out into the street before he stopped for breath. And if Lorenzo had been noticing he would have seen that Pinto's left hand was held close against his side, pressing hard to keep something from falling from its hiding place inside his coat.

Of all days Pinto wanted to be early today. Lorenzo might not even dream that this picnic was to be any different from any other picnic they might be having on the savanna near Panama, but Pinto knew differently. Else why should he be carrying his machette so secretly? But he would wait to tell Lorenzo until they had eaten their fruit, else he might laugh at him.

As he dragged his older brother along the crooked, winding, three-century-old streets of New Panama where they and their grandparents and great-grandparents had always lived, Pinto's mind was full of what Uncle Carlos had been telling him last night. The only thing he noticed was the strange way in which the churches were built.

"See, Lorenzo, see the holes in the second story of that church. They were put there when it was built, so that if the pirates should come the people could take shelter there and shoot through the holes."

"Uncle has been telling you pirate stories," laughed Lorenzo. "Did he tell you of the golden altar?"

"Yes, he did," said Pinto, eager to show his new knowledge. "It had been in a big church the pirates were coming to destroy, so the priests moved it to save it. Nobody saw it for hundreds of years. The pirates did destroy that church, and the priests built a new, simple white one and put in it a simple white altar. A few years ago, when the Americans built the Panama Canal and the country was safe from pirates and revolution, the priests found the altar. They just washed off the white paint, and there stood the golden altar."

As Lorenzo waited for his small brother to finish the exciting story, he remembered well the day his uncle had told it to him. And as he led his small brother to the spot for the picnic, Lorenzo kept telling old pirate tales.

"Panama wouldn't be Panama without pirates," he laughed. "Why, in the old days the isthmus was called the Castle of Gold. Mules and oxen and slaves traveled in long trains loaded down with riches from Mexico and Peru, and from the mines of Panama itself. They went along a paved road from Panama on the Pacific Ocean to Porto Bello on the Caribbean Sea. And when they reached Porto Bello they loaded their wealth on armored vessels to be carried to Spain."

"That's the Gold Road. Let's picnic on the Gold Road," said Pinto.

"Why, there's not much of it left," said Lorenzo. "It's not interesting now."

"We might find doubloons or some pieces of eight. Let's hunt," said Pinto, his black eyes pleading.

Lorenzo remembered how four years ago when Uncle Carlos had told him the pirate tales, how he had hunted treasure himself on the old Gold Road, and he remembered his disappointment.

"There are no coins there, now, Pinto. Let's walk to Old Panama as soon as we have eaten our fruit. That is, if your legs aren't too tired."

"Let's eat our fruit now," said Pinto, with a sigh. "Perhaps it will make me strong enough to go on to Old Panama." He did not want to admit to Lorenzo that today Old Panama held no thrills for him; it was the old Gold Road that held the mysteries he would solve today.

Lorenzo smiled to himself, for he knew why Pinto felt tired so suddenly. He had seen the bulge under Pinto's coat and knew that he was carrying the long knife with the curved point which all boys in Panama use for cutting down branches, or sometimes even for digging.

"Go on. Start digging. I don't mind if we don't go on," the understanding older boy said. With an astonished glance at his brother, Pinto drew his machette from its hiding place, and walking along the old Gold Road, cut the ground wherever he could see the remnants of the old paved road. At last, after an hour or more, he grew weary of his search.

"Let's eat our last bananas and go home," he said finally, the disappointment in his eyes reminding Lorenzo of his own failure to find treasure on the old Gold Road.

"Race you to that coconut tree. We'll eat our last bananas there in the shade," and a few minutes later the two boys stood breathless beneath the coconut palm. Finding they had only one banana apiece, they decided to try for a coconut from the tree, but found them too high. As Pinto was looking to see just how high it would be to climb, something beside the coconut tree caught his eye. Two small eyes stared into his.

"Look, the monkey!" he cried delightedly. "He'll get it for us. We'll throw something at him and make him angry, and then he'll throw the coconut at us." Pinto offered his banana as the only safe thing to throw, but Lorenzo did not send it quite high enough and it caught in the notch of the tree. Poor Pinto was disappointed. His banana was gone now and there was no chance of a coconut either.

"Here's half of mine," said Lorenzo, as they started home. But even half of his brother's last banana could not console the boy. No doubloons, no pieces of eight, no coconut and just half a banana! But as Pinto put his banana to his mouth, a funny jerk on his leg made him take it down again. Something was crawling up his leg; something was on his shoulder, looking over. "Oh, look, Lorenzo!" he cried in glee. "The monkey. He's coming home with me."

"You see why," said Lorenzo, astonished. Pinto saw why. The monkey was reaching down for that banana in Pinto's hand.

So, you see, Pinto found his treasure that day after all, and if you should want to see it you must go to Panama. On a Saturday morning Treasure—as Pinto calls him—is allowed to go out in a swanky little red suit, and Pinto lends him to the little poor boy who lives on the ground floor of Pinto's father's house. And Treasure's tricks and the poor boy's music bring in money for nice food for the little poor boy's sick mother on Sundays.—Advance.

SOWING PRECIOUS SEEDS FOR 40 YEARS.

The 40th annual report of the free distribution of Christian literature to neglected and needy classes of people in this and other countries by the Bible Institute Colportage Association of Chicago, as a result of the D. L. Moody Missionary Book Funds, has just been published. This report shows that during the past fiscal year no less than 81,776 copies of the Moody Colportage books, 90,245 copies of the Evangel Booklets, 111,671 copies of the Pocket Treasury (a choice selection of Bible chapters and gospel songs), together with 187,302 copies of the Gospel of John (with helps), 18,053 New Testaments, 502,596 gospel tracts, and 1,858 miscellaneous books and hymnals, a total of 993,501 copies, or 47,605,660 pages, were sent out in 7,628 shipments to needy ones in prisons, hospitals, reforestation camps, fire stations, lumber camps, lodging houses, and life-saving stations; also to mountaineers, pioneers, soldiers, sailors, railroaders, Negroes of the South, and the people of Africa, Alaska, French Louisiana, India, Italy, Latin America, Philippine Islands and Spain.

This large distribution of soul-saving and faith-stimulating literature was accomplished at an expense of $29,760.97 and made possible by the free-will offerings of Bible-loving people. It is estimated that no less than 860,000 people were reached with the gospel by this means at an average cost of three cents each. Many conversions were recorded during the year. An illustrated copy of the complete report with testimonies will be sent to any address on request.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

CONGRATULATIONS TO GRADUATES.

Shakespeare said, "To be or not to be, that is the question." But for some of us, To congratulate or not to congratulate, that is the question.

Within a month thousands of young people will have graduated from high school and college. This is the goal towards which they have worked for years. In many cases their parents have toiled and sacrificed to speed them on their way. Teachers and taxpayers have done their best to make this graduation day possible for these young people. This should be a happy occasion, and it is often a moment of destiny, for it is then that high resolve or low aim is sealed in the soul of the graduate.

But there are difficulties that face the modern youth. A high school senior has just expressed it to me this way, "Five hundred boys and girls from our school are to be turned out to run wild in the world. There is nothing to do—no jobs. Many of them will get into mischief." Others in high position have said the same thing. There is sober truth in it. But I do not like the statement.

These five hundred young people, with thousands from other institutions, will experience a new freedom, but if they have learned well the lessons of the school, they will not be wild animals running loose in the world, but will be good citizens to take their places in state and nation. Unless they do, the years in school have been spent in vain.

"There is nothing to do." Many will find it difficult to walk immediately into paying positions. Some will look quite a while before they find anything like the job they think they deserve. I heard recently of a college graduate who was working for eight dollars a week in a five-and-ten-cent store.

But there are jobs. The world in which we live needs to be made new. There is something in an economic world that makes a man in rags plow up cotton which should furnish him clothing. Something needs to be done that will help the hungry to secure food in a land of plenty. Someone needs to discover why approximately one-third of the American population has no visible source of income while a few people have more money than they can use, and then something should be done to change this condition.

The city in which I live in a recent campaign secured less than three-fourths of the money needed to take care of its charitable institutions. The same week it opened two liquor stores, and seemed to be rather proud of the fact that almost fifteen thousand dollars was turned into the State treasury, through the stores, in two days and a half. It probably will not be long until many who invested the fifteen thousand dollars will be going to the charitable institutions seeking for aid. To correct this situation will call for all of the intelligence and strength of character of the youth of our day.

Yesterday was a beautiful Sunday, and most of our churches were rather poorly attended, but the bathing beaches and play places were not deserted. Crowds were there spending their money, disregarding the Sabbath, and probably lowering their morals. If young people want a real task that will pay in coin that will last through the ages, let them try to change this tide in the history of men.

If our crop of graduates are interested only in accumulating wealth, they are doubtless to be disappointed and therefore ought to be offered sympathy and not congratulations. If, on the contrary, they are interested in building a new and better world—a world in which all in it have a plenty and none too much; a world in which character is considered a greater value than fortune; a world in which happiness is sought rather than pleasure; a world in which righteousness is applauded rather than wickedness—if the graduates are interested in these things and are willing to count life not dear unto themselves in order to attain the goal, then they are to be congratulated.

GOLDEN OPPORTUNITIES.

Some ten thousand young people will attend Summer School and Youth Conferences under the direction of the Congregational and Christian Churches this summer. They will be among the group of modern youth who are eager to grasp opportunities.

The church is making a sincere effort to give youth a chance to "see visions and dream dreams" and then translate these visions and dreams into life. Many of the ten thousand of our young people who attend our Summer Schools will be new persons ever afterwards. They will see the beauties of walking with God in working with others in building a new world, and new spiritual power will be released in their own souls.

Schools are being conducted within reach of all of our churches. They should be crowded with the choice young people from our homes and churches. In this way the golden opportunities which are being offered to our youth will be accepted, translated into life, and built into the New Day which the world faces.

Below is given a list of schools, dates and those from whom information can be received, for the Southeast. Here's hoping that YOU will make the necessary inquiry and then attend the school nearest you, or the school that will mean most to you.

A CARPENTER.

Our Master toiled, a carpenter
Of busy Galilee;
He knew the weight of ardent tasks
And oftimes wearily
He sought, apart, in earnest prayer
For strength, beneath his load of care.

He took a manly share of work,
No thoughtless shirker was he,
From dawn to dusk, before his bench,
He labored faithfully,
He felt just pride in work well done,
And found sweet rest at setting sun.

His Father worked, and he rejoiced
That honest toil was his—
To whom was given grace to know
Divinest mysteries;
And shall not we find toiling good
Who serve in labor's brotherhood?

—Thomas Curtis Clark.

WHAT DO WE MEAN BY HAVING THE MIND OF CHRIST?

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC, JUNE 17, 1934.
(Philippians 2:5-7.)

This is a difficult topic to discuss. Probably most groups will find it best to think about such suggestions as may be made by the pastor.

When the word "mind" is used we usually think of thoughts. If this expression means "the thoughts of Christ," let us ask ourselves how much we think about the same things that Jesus did. Jesus thought a great deal about God. Does God come into our thinking very much? When are we most likely to think of God? Jesus thought a great deal about the sufferings of other people. Do we spend much time in thinking about the sorrow of others? A leader of a young people's group said: "We discussed some chapters of a book which told of the sufferings of people during the depression, but it did not affect our young people very much. They just thought it was too bad. They were not much impressed with the need of working for a better social order. They seemed to forget it immediately." How do you account for that? Is that like the "mind of Christ?"

The psychologists talk about "mind sets." By this they mean that we have fixed opinions or prejudices. Jesus was not dogmatic or unsympathetic to any human being. When we see a staggering wreck of humanity on the streets are we inclined to think mean things about him; in our hearts there is probably more condemnation than sympathy. But Jesus' heart would go out to him; his mind was set against sin; his mind was equally set to help every person in every possible way.

One of the expressions of the mind is the will. Many of us know what is right, but we lack the will-power to do what is right. Jesus was human; he knew that he, too, needed strength for his time of testing. That is one reason why he prayed. It is quite possible for us to have our weak wills reinforced by the power which God gave Jesus, if we call upon him for help.

Along with this will-power there was amazing courage in the mind of Christ. Think of Luther, faced with the choice of recanting an expressed opinion or of being put to death for his opinion. It took courage to hold to his conviction. Think of Jesus, facing death on the cross for what he believed. It was just as hard for him to walk to that kind of death as it would be for any one of us; but he did it. It is hard to imagine greater courage than that. Then compare Peter, who

JESUS ON THE CROSS.

LESSON XI—JUNE 10, 1934.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Looking unto Jesus, the author and perfecter of our faith, who for the joy that was set before him, endured the cross, despising the shame, and hath set down at the right hand of the throne of God."—Heb. 12:2.

LESSON TEXT: Matt. 27:1-66.

It is not easy to write about the cross. Indeed, there is something about the crucifixion of Christ that cannot be put into words. Of course one can, and one should come to the story with an alert mind, with an intelligence that seeks to understand what happened at that place of the skull that day, but woe unto that man who brings only an alert mind to this story! The Cross of Christ can be understood fully only by the heart. In other words to explain it one must experience it. The eyes of the heart as well as the eyes of the understanding must be opened. The preaching of the cross is to them that perish, foolishness, but unto us which are saved it is the power of God.

Vinegar, Mingled with Gall.

It was a mixture designed to dull his sensibilities and to deaden his pain as he went through the terrible ordeal which was involved in crucifixion—the piercing of the living flesh with the rough spikes, the suffering from throbbing and congested blood-vessels, the torture of hunger and thirst, the ravages of fever involved in infected wounds, the exposure to the burning sun, the pain of cramped muscles, the utter helplessness and sense of loneliness, the ridicule and the taunts of the unfeeling multitudes, the long-drawn-out living death. They offered him this mixture of vinegar and gall, but he would not take it. He wanted to come to the last high hour of his life in full possession of all his faculties, alert, sensitive, responsive. Jesus went the limit for us. He did not save himself from paying the full price.

They Crucified Him.

These three words sum up the world's greatest tragedy. And its greatest victory. The word "they" may be interpreted in two ways: from the standpoint of the groups represented, and from the standpoint of the motives of these groups. According to the first we could read, "They, the religious leaders whom church folk respected—the scribes and Pharisees and elders, crucified him. "They," the inheritors of a lucrative commercial privilege, the aristocratic Sadducees, crucified him. "They," the representatives of imperialistic government, crucified him. "They," a man of the gay world, Herod Antipas, crucified him. "They," the crowd, crucified him. "They," the soldiers crucified him. "They," the public crucified him. All of these had a part in the crucifixion of Jesus. Put in another way, we might say that "religious intolerance, commercial privilege, political expediency, pleasure-loving irresponsibility, unfaithfulness, the mob spirit, militarism, public apathy, crucified Jesus. These are perennial evils. They are crucifying Christ today.

A book which the writer recently read interpreted the "they" who crucified Jesus in terms of the motives of those who put him on the cross. He classifies them as follows: The Indifferent, The Unfair, The Prejudiced, The Envious, The Slanderers, The Greedy, The Traitorous, The Deserters, The Cowardly. (Keller: They Crucified and Crucify.) Here again we see that we are dealing with groups who continue to this day, groups in which all of us find a place at one time or another, in one measure or another. Let no man think that the crucifixion of Christ was simply a historical event. It was, of course, that. But it was a symbol in time of what is always going on when the ideals of Christ, and Christ himself come into conflict with the world and unregenerate human nature. They crucified him, and we crucify him.

They Parted His Garments—They Watched Him There.

They "threw dice" for his garments, and they sat there and watched him, offering him no sympathy, extending him no help. It is a sad commentary upon the hardness of the human heart, and the blindness of the human spirit to spiritual tragedies taking place under our very eyes.

The King of the Jews.

The Jews were pre-eminently the religious race of the world. Rome gave the world law, Greece gave it culture, and Israel gave it religion. Jesus was king of the Jews, not in the sense of an earthly king, but in the sense that he was pre-eminently the moral and spiritual leader of the most religious people. He is King by right of his spiritual insight and spiritual authority.

Two Thieves Crucified with Him.

He was numbered with the transgressors. He was put to shame by being crucified openly with two thieves. Those who put Jesus to death spared no pains in making it as shameful as they could. And yet the Cross, the symbol of shame and disgrace in Jesus' day, is the symbol of all that is finest and best in Christianity.

He Saved Others; Himself He Cannot Save.

It was true, far more true than they realized. Christ could have saved himself. He could have come down from the Cross, that is physically broken loose from the Cross, for he had his marvelous power with him. But in another sense he could not save himself—he could not come down from the Cross. That is, if he were to save others and us. The way, and the only way in which we can save others is to give ourselves. Let every man recognize this fact—the Lord Jesus Christ voluntarily went to the Cross and died on the Cross, for our sakes. And by his death we find life.

My God! My God!

At the end it seemed as if God himself had actually forsaken his Son. The cry of Jesus was the cry of a sensitive soul that felt that it had been cut off from the Father. And yet Jesus uses the word "My." There was still that simple faith in a personal God. He believed where he could not see. Of course, God had not forsaken him.

He Yielded Up the Spirit.

He did not think of death as dying. He commended his spirit into his Father's hands. What we call dying meant to Jesus going to be with his Father. In that hour when he faced life's ultimate adventure, when he faced life's ultimate experience, he quietly and trustfully committed himself into the Father's care. Oh, death, where is thy sting?

YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

denied that he knew Jesus when a woman laughed at him for being one of Jesus' disciples. Think of our own lack of courage when someone taunts us for going to church or for not drinking with the crowd. How much of the "mind of Christ" do we really have?

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy

MONDAY.

"THE PRAYERS OF JESUS."

Fifteenth: Intercession (Luke 22:32).

Our lesson is taken from the upper chamber when they ate the Passover Supper together. Jesus reminds the disciples of the temptations they will meet as they go forth to win the world, and he told Peter that even he would deny him; and so thoroughly did he feel this that he prayed for Peter that his faith fail not. His flesh would fail, but his faith must not fail, and it didn't.

This is called intercessory prayer—prayer that beseeches on behalf of someone else.

We do not mind praying for others, but how oft do we make those prayers of the right sort; that is, asking for the most beneficial thing? We pray for health, for money, for comfort, happiness, salvation from temptation, from falling; but find it easy to omit the greater thing, faith in God and service for the Master.

Prayer—Our Father, again we are ashamed of ourselves to find that we are so selfish. God save us from ourselves to thee and thy glory in others.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"THE PRAYERS OF JESUS."

Sixteenth: Suffering, sadness and submission (Matt. 26:36-44).

They are the three prayers of Gethsemane. Only Mark records the three prayers—the others record only two. Jesus prayed for the same thing each time; relief from agony, from sorrow, and for submission to the Father's will. The thrice uttered prayer teaches us a higher sense of his suffering for us and a higher sense of the value of suffering when it is for righteousness.

It teaches us that it is not wrong to be exceedingly sorrowful, for sorrow mellows the heart and deepens the sense of brotherliness among fellows. Every sorrow may be an expression of profound love. It teaches us that while we may pray for deliverance from our distresses, we must learn to say from the depths of heart, "not my will, but thine be done." "Not as I will but as thou wilt."

Prayer—Our Father, help us to begin this day with thee, and for thee and for the Lord of our fellowman, and make us willing to sacrifice that thy will may be done.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"THE PRAYERS OF JESUS."

(On the Cross.)

Seventeenth: Our hardest lesson (Luke 23:34.)

On the cross, Jesus demonstrated, in the sublimest manner, what he taught the disciples and the people in that first sermon, wherein he set forth the great Commandments of the kingdom, viz., "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that despitefully use you, and persecute you" (Matt. 5:44).

And now, at last, when he had been betrayed by a close friend, tried without a chance of defense, mobbed—and crucified on the cross, his head bloody, a sword thrust through his side, and suffering all the agonies of a slow torturous death, midst his last breaths, he has love and pity for his executioners, and prays to God not to harm them, but to forgive them, for they were ignorant of what they were doing and were not responsible. Could there be a sublimer expression of love? Can we approach such a love at all? And just that, he says, is one of the great laws of the kingdom. We are so far from accomplishing this, it makes one wonder why he did not create us with a greater ability of nature to do so. But had he created us that way, we would not be as well off; for Christian character, like the maturing fruit of the tree, is a development; certain processes of love and culture, and to love and do good to enemies is one phase of Christian character to be obtained that way. So let us thank God, and cultivate the habit of praying for our bitterest enemies.

Prayer—Our Father, our Father, our Father, have mercy upon us, and save us from our enemies so that even those who would do us worst, may serve thy cause.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"THE PRAYERS OF JESUS."

(On the Cross.)

Eighteenth: "More Love to Thee, O Christ."

"My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" (Matt. 27:46).

"It is finished" (John 19:30).

We never approach this scene of the cross without feeling like bowing down and backing away. The love that induced our Saviour to bear such suffering that called for this prayer makes one feel totally inadequate in any of the Christian graces. It begs description. It shows the most honest attempts at its truths, leaves us still unworthy to claim a right to anything like him. So, we will leave it at that, dear friends, and trust you will find your own soul at rest and peace in him, and that you may love him more day by day for it all.

Prayer—(Say the Lord's Prayer, and let your soul go out to him in love.)

FRIDAY.

"THE PRAYERS OF JESUS."

(On the Cross.)

Nineteenth: "Commended."

"Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit." (Luke 23:46).

Again, Jesus prays—at least he talks to the Father. He does not pray in the sense of petition. The last deed had been done. The last word had been spoken. It is all over, and out of the consciousness that he had accomplished what he had been given to do, though his head was bloody, it was unbowed. He was still the Master of his soul, and lifting himself up to the Father, commended his spirit in its all to the Father's care and reward. How beautiful! When our work is done and all of life in the body is behind us, may we be able to take it all, as it were, in our hands and hold it up to him and utter the same glorious words. Unless we live every day in a way to make such a record, we will fail, I fear.

Prayer—Lord help us.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"THE PRAYERS OF JESUS."

Twentieth: His Last Prayer (Luke 24:50-51).

We have mentioned twenty recorded prayers of our Lord and tried to present their bearings upon our lives. The prayer before us was one of benediction upon his disciples, on Ascension's Mount, as he departed to be with the Father.

Bear in mind that in the spiritual body Jesus did not cease to pray. He was recognized by his praying. While in the grave, the record says, that he preached to those who were in prison. It also says that he is now on the right hand of the Father making intercession for us, praying for us. In the parable of the rich man and Lazarus, he makes it plain that in the spiritual body man is still conscious, sane and able to pray.

Prayer—O Lord, may we share in the prayers of our Saviour for us. In Christ's name, we ask it.—Amen.

WHERE I FIRST BEGAN.

By A. R. FLOWERS.

I am often asked when I first began doing things in the capacity of a religious worker; and when I first began working with young people. This is a question I am not able to answer definitely. I remember when I was in my early teens, I found myself a sort of leader among the other boys in Sunday School work. I had gotten there, too, rather unconsciously to myself, for I always had a rather unassuming disposition and I haven't overcome it yet; and just how or when I got the go on the other boys, I do not know, unless it was because I have always tried to do more thinking and doing than I have talking.

Now I do remember very distinctly when I was elected to the position of lecturer, for early teen age boys and girls, by the old Wilson Mission Sunday School Convention; and I was barely out of my teens myself. This Convention was a move growing, I think out of the District Conference of the Methodist Church, but it was non-sectarian. I remember that I was placed in nomination by our family physician, who was a Baptist and our nearest door neighbor, and saw me almost every day, but I did not see why he wanted to land me for such a job as that at my age. I thought that older people should have such responsibility as that, and not a beardless youth like myself. But by thinking and reading until my head ached, and putting my whole soul into the work, I held my job for two and one-half years—until I entered the University of North Carolina.

Another thing that was of priceless value to me in this lecture field was the training that I had received in high school, in our literary society, which was held each Friday evening from about 7:30 until 9 o'clock, under the presidency of the principal of our school. I thought, when only a boy, that it was a great accomplishment for a man to be able to stand on his feet and express his thoughts intelligently, and I think so today, but our high schools have almost lost the art of training young people in that capacity these days. No period of my life has ever meant more to me than my high school training. I had God loving and God fearing teachers, and the very clay that covers their mortal remains is sacred to me until this day. Not only does the old Wilson Mission Sunday School Convention of the past owe a debt of gratitude to my old teachers, but every soul of mankind that my life has influenced for good is likewise indebted.

Our nature can never be at home among things that are not wonderful to us. Could we see things always as we have sometimes seen them—and as one day we must always see them, only far better—should we ever know dullness?—George MacDonald.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, Pastor.

DOUBT KNOCKS AT LEARNING'S DOOR.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"And when they saw him, they worshipped him; but some doubted."—Matt. 28:17.

The disciples had seen the resurrected Christ already. They had handled him, as it were, and seen him, and known him. They could not begin to comprehend him before his resurrection, now much less. He was not theirs now to comprehend, but to worship! He had done something that put him beyond the pale of mortality, he was now immortal. "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth," he could now say, and with more convincing authority than ever before. "When they saw him, they worshipped him," and what else, pray tell me, could they do for such an One as he?

Perhaps on the same mountain on which he had been some time ago transfigured before their eyes, he now stood with them, and this time in his own permanently glorious body. How rightly we may here and now contemplate that scene! We are in a holy place, a place appointed, and place where that very same Christ's promise rests. Many have by faith right here looked upon him and by faith gone out from this holy place to live and serve in a divinely inspired and appointed way. I am not using pretty figures of speech, I am telling the truth. A church room such as this is a God-appointed, power-giving place out of which flow the spiritual streams of God's blessings upon the earth. Therefore, how rightly here may we contemplate that other meeting, appointed by Christ, in the very beginning of the Christian movement of which we are a part.

The disciples had been learning about Jesus: We are learning about him. They had been learning to obey him. We are trying to learn to obey him. He had asked them to meet him in Galilee. On the resurrection morning an angel had said unto the women there: "Be not amazed, ye seek Jesus, the Nazarene, which hath been crucified: he is risen; he is not here; behold the place where they laid him! But go, tell his disciples and Peter, He goeth before you into Galilee: there shall ye see him, as he said unto you." In his divine providence, and by his Holy Spirit, he has asked us to assemble here. That was an appointed place. This is an appointed place and hour. He has said wherever two, or three, are gathered together in his name, that he will be in their midst, and that to bless them.

I.

"They saw him." They had seen him in Jerusalem, and on the road to Emmaus. And with what blessing, and joy they had seen him each time. They were hovering about Jerusalem—the place of his crucifixion—like some haunted, possessed people which could not get away. He had shown himself to them there. They had acclaimed him Lord, and had fallen at his feet. But they were in Jerusalem still. Like a perishing fern, they were "pot-bound." They were in such close proximity to yesterday, with its eaten supper and the memories thereof, Judas walking out to sell his Lord, the disciples sleeping through his extremity of sorrow, and Peter denying him with a vengeance. And one of them confesses that "they all forsook him, and fled." They had seen their Lord beaten and abused, cursed and crucified, and they had felt their own helplessness, and their own supreme sense of guilt and shame that it had all been done without their uplifted hands—especially since some of them had made much claim to bravery in other moments. They were sick, and whipped, and sore!

The body of Jesus had been resurrected, but not the spirits of his followers! They had looked upon him in a sort of awe-stricken daze. They were beginning to learn of a new Lord, or rather their same Lord in a new role. They must get out of Jerusalem for a new perspective. A change of environment was prescribed by their great Physician. "Meet me in the appointed mount in Galilee." My friend, the church is a mount of God. It is a "change of environment" for a spiritual refreshing, healing, blessing. Happy is that person who avails himself of that blessing.

"And when they saw him," seems in that new, mountain air—far away from Jerusalem in their good, old Galilee country—to just drop the scales from their eyes and allow them to really see him again in all his winsome beauty, and glory, and divine challenge to move forward for him! My friends, let us see Jesus. Let us see him as he is. Let us look upon him as his followers should look upon him, in order that the scales may fall from our half-seeing eyes. The disciples are not here now, for Jesus to visit, to challenge, and to call upon for service, but we are here! He needs us, he needed them. He wants to arouse us, as he aroused them. And to command us, as he commanded them. We have the momentous day, and the big need; and his call is as clear to us as to them.

II.

"They worshipped him." Him? The angel described who he was in the verses I quoted a moment ago: "Jesus, the Nazarene, which was crucified: he is risen." That is the way an angel from God expressed it. We may be fog that description with all the sophistries of the sages, and we shall not have anything better than "Jesus, the Nazarene—crucified, and resurrected." It is all there. And when the disciples saw him—the disciples, who had known him, and loved him in the flesh—when they saw him, they worshipped him. Our often quoted E. Stanley Jones once said: "When I first went to India, I was trying to hold a very long line—a line that stretched from Genesis to Revelation, on to Western Civilization and to the Western Christian Church. I found myself bobbing up and down that line fighting behind Moses and David and Jesus and Paul and Western Civilization and the Christian Church. I was worried. There was no well-defined issue. . . . Then I saw that I could and should shorten my line, that I could take my stand at Christ and before that non-Christian world refuse to know anything save Jesus Christ, and him crucified. . . . My task was simplified."

That is where the disciples were. They had taken their eyes off of everything but the Christ. As once before at this place "they saw no one save Jesus only." And when they saw him, they worshipped him. He is the one, and only one, that can stand crowned in the throne-rooms of our individual wills and make a new Kingdom of God on earth.

III.

"But some doubted." By now you are wondering why I labelled this message, "Doubt knocks at Learning's Doors." It is a part of our text. It is a part of the learning process. It is true to life. However noble the group that may meet to worship there will be some doubting. It may be that lofty doubting which leads to sincere investigation; or it may be another very fine type of doubt which is a surprised wonder hesitating at the door of belief. In this connection

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

You will notice from our financial report that we have reached and passed the sixth rung of our financial ladder for the year. Every thousand dollars makes one rung in the ladder. Our goal for the year is twenty thousand dollars. If our people will see to it that we reach our goal we will be able to live within our income. That don't mean that it takes that much to support the children. It means upkeep on the buildings, insurance, painting, three cars of coal, pumping water, electric lights, farm machinery and repairs, gas bills for farm tractors and other machinery, salaries for workers, hospital bills, medicine, etc.

These things naturally come in running a plant such as this. There is lots of expense in a home besides food and clothing. There is a lot of expense in our institution besides food and clothing. We reached our goal last year. We want to reach it this year. Only fourteen thousand dollars to reach it. If everybody will push a little it will make climbing easier. Let everybody push and see how soon we can reach the seventh rung.

Several of our boys and girls have gone out since the school closed. Splendid boys and girls, some of them had been here since they were little tots. You might have an idea that they would be anxious to go, but such is not the case. They love this home as much as any child loves its home. To some it is really the only home they remember. Then it is just as touching for us to see them go. They really feel as if they are our own children. To leave the home shelter and go out alone in the world to confront the problems of life is no easy thing. It means to win or lose. It means to succeed or fail. If this thought could be impressed on the minds of the early teen age, they would give this period in life more serious thought. My heart always aches, too. I have had the same experience as all of us have. We know what it means.

Remember the Orphanage in your daily prayers. Speak a good word in behalf of the fatherless.

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

I wanted to say to the large number of young people in this congregation: Have you honest doubts, for they are the very harbingers of a vital faith. Follow out the promptings of such honest doubt in the spirit of reverence which characterizes all true scientists, and seekers after knowledge. And above all do not let your doubts, many as they may be and whatever nature, cause you to be mentally careless and willing to give up the search for a satisfying belief and understanding. For doubt knocks at the door of learning, and seeks and finds a far richer entrance for having first been denied.

There was a young chap among the followers of Jesus who has become known as "doubting Thomas," but just remember that his faith finally topped them all, when he acknowledged Jesus as "My Lord, and my God." Also notice that while our text says, "but some doubted," that right on top of that Jesus went ahead with his assertion of all power in heaven and earth, and commanded that self-same group to do the great task of evangelizing the world. Doubt drove no one of this group away. For it no one was denied. They, everyone, had found their place. And of them John Mark writes: "And they went forth, and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them and confirming the word with signs following.—Amen."

OBITUARIES

LYNCH.

John Booth Lynch was born March 11, 1874, and died April 5, 1934. The funeral was conducted at Mt. Zion Christian Church, of which he was a member, by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. S. Jones, of Mebane, Rev. C. A. Brown, of Burlington, and Rev. J. L. Neese, of Greensboro.

Brother Lynch was widely known as an honest and well respected citizen. He was a man true to his convictions.

He leaves to mourn their loss, two sons, Zeb H. and Morton, three grandchildren and two brothers: Thomas and Robert Lynch, all of Mebane.

May the Lord bless and comfort the bereaved ones and help us all to be submissive to his will.

J. FRANK APPLE.

BEAIRD.

Brother W. H. Beaird was born August 26, 1871, and died May 5, 1934. He joined New Hope Christian Church when he was quite young and remained loyal and true to his church until death.

On December 25, 1893, he was married to Miss Rena Johnson. To this union were six children: five boys and one girl. Two boys preceded their father in death, three boys and one girl, together with their devoted mother, survive him.

He has one sister and two brothers living. Brother Beaird had many friends and his life was a very useful one—always quiet and thoughtful, industrious and energetic. He has made a wonderful contribution to his community. May the three young men who are his sons and the one daughter be able to carry on in the way their father planned, and may the God whom he loved and served comfort them in their loss. And may he, too, sustain his precious wife in her bereavement, and console all who are afflicted by his going. We shall miss him, but we know where he has gone. Let us all get ready to meet him. A noble man, a "Princee has fallen."

G. D. HUNT.

GARRIS.

God, in his infinite wisdom has seen fit to remove from our midst our beloved sister, Mrs. Ella Garriss, removing her from this world of sorrow and suffering to a place of eternal joy and peace.

Her quiet fortitude in the midst of her suffering and her calm acceptance of the Master's will expressed a sincere devotion to her Creator.

She was at all times interested in the church and its works, and it was her earnest desire to be of help.

Therefore, we, the Ellen Grimes Bible Class of the First Christian Church of Portsmouth, Va., do hereby offer the following resolutions:

1. That by her fortitude and courage she has set us an example by which we shall be enabled to do more and better work for the kingdom of God.

2. That we have been blessed by having her with us, and her Christian life shall be one of our sweetest memories.

3. That we extend our sincere sympathy to the bereaved family, and commend them to the all-wise Father for comfort and consolation.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy be spread on the records of our class and a copy sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

Respectfully submitted,
MRS. O. C. HARTUNG,
MRS. M. L. PARKER,
MRS. C. W. PARKER,
Committee.

Bank Insurance Measure Extended.—

A compromise bill postponing permanent bank deposit insurance until July 1, 1935, and continuing the temporary provisions under which deposits of under $2,500 are insured, was passed by the house the first of the week. Senate approval was considered certain.

Hurricanes Take Toll of Life.—

Probably the worst hurricane of the present year swept across Central America the last of the past week taking death tolls as it passed. Relief workers estimated that no less than 2,000 persons were dead in the vicinity of San Salvadore alone, while hundreds were killed elsewhere. One village in Honduras was reported as entirely destroyed, with a loss of life amounting to 500.

Huey Long and the Bonus.—

Not a few of the Senators, particularly those up for re-election, must have cursed Huey Long for again proving himself the bad boy of the Senate, for it was the "kingfish" who forced the soldiers' bonus bill out of committee and thus forced the members of the upper house to record themselves as either for or against the measure. Huey was accused of taking a secret delight in digging this ticklish measure out after it had been so well buried.

Fiddling While Rome Burns.—

For Christians of any complexion or flavor to haggle now over the lesser breed of issues is fiddling while Rome burns. It is solemnly debating the number of angels who can dance on the point of a needle, while outside the charnal house wherein this mad discussion goes on the waves of a great tide of blackness roll up to overwhelm us. The new paganism, so strangely sounding in this twentieth century, is no idle fantasy, no disembodied dream, but a hard reality, and it will require of us all the courage of the early martyrs, all the strength and faith and determination which we may summon to our aid, for us to stand against it. There is our battle as Christians, there our task, and there must be placed the emphasis of our thinking and our activities.—The Christian Evangelist.

Tugwell Confirmation Certain.—

In spite of the opposition of a group of Southern Senators, headed by Smith of South Carolina, and including Senator Bailey of North Carolina and Senator Byrd of Virginia, Rexford G. Tugwell, the President's choice for the Assistant Secretaryship of the Agricultural Department, seems certain of approval. Under the crack of the President's whip, the committee approved the nomination by an almost unanimous vote. Yet some of those voting affirmatively were said to be personally opposed to the appointment. It is quite significant that the opposition comes from within the ranks of the Democratic party, the Republicans sitting on the side line and watching developments. Tugwell has been one of the leaders in the Roosevelt "brain trust" and as such is not looked upon with too much favor by conservative Southern Democrats any more than by Republican conservatives. Those who believe in a strict interpretation of the Constitution can only look askance at some of the actions of the "brain trust."

"Let's Not Be An 'Ism'."—

Space does not permit of quoting John R. Scotford's entire article as it appears in Advance. It would be well worth the trouble of securing a copy of the current issue and reading it. Mr. Scotford "feels that he is entitled to express his increasing conviction that the name 'Congregational' is a liability rather than an asset to our churches. . . . In fact, he welcomes the present title of 'Congregational and Christian' because the latter part mitigates somewhat the banality of paves the way for a further change." Continuing, he says that "so far as local organizations are concerned the name has never been universally used. Of the eight Congregational churches to which the writer has belonged, three did not use the name." Mr. Scotford does not make a suggestion as to what name should be adopted in place of "Congregational," or "Congregational-Christian," but he does think that "what we need is a name big enough and broad enough to cover what we really are—a free fellowship of churches of various kinds and antecedents which are united, not by an ecclesiastical mechanism not a common creed, but by a mutual purpose to further the interests of Christ's Kingdom." One wonders if there has not been a forward step made in the finding of that name by the union of our two constituencies. The writer opposed the changing of the name of THE CHRISTIAN SUN at the Raleigh Convention, when the merger was in its beginnings, and was dumbfounded when members of his own constituency said that the name "Christian" was applied as to a peculiar sect. He was ably backed by the Congregationalists who were present. Mr. Scotford, we council patience. The time will come when the name that was first bestowed upon the followers of Christ as a term of derision, at Antioch, will be accepted by a united church universal. We are the vanguard. We are Congregational in government, we are attempting to be Christian, as He would have us be.

Is Drought-Relief a Blind?—

This question is raised by the Richmond News Leader, a paper which has, generally speaking, hitherto supported the administration's agricultural policy. It says: "If the effects of the drought are as serious as alarmists think, then obviously the farmers of the affected States need assistance on a large scale. Decent relief, in a form to rehabilitate those who have lost their live stock along with their wheat crop and their hay, must certainly be provided. Beyond that, this legislation should not go. Theorists in the department of agriculture should not be permitted, in the name of drought-relief, to set up a fund of more than half-a-billion dollars, and to use that fund for experiments not authorized by Congress or approved by the common sense of the people. . . . Of definite appropriations, the president estimates that $125,000,000 will be needed for 'special work program and human relief.' In addition, however, $75,000,000 is requested for 'live-stock purchases,' and $100,000,000 for 'shipping, processing and relief distribution of purchased cattle.' Only the 'experts' of the department of agriculture know what this means—if they do—but it reads very much as if the government is to give the department a free hand to buy and slaughter such cattle as it pleases and then to purchase new live stock for the prairie farmers. The appropriation of $50,000,000 for 'emergency acquisition of submarginal farms and assistance in relocating destitute farm families' is almost certainly another step toward 'subsistence farming' in the guise of emergency relief. To cap it all, $50,000,000 is asked for 'work camps to afford employment in the drought areas for young men principally from cities and towns.' In other words, unemployed young men are to be taken from urban areas and are to be carried into the districts damaged by drought, where it is certain that the expense of feeding them will be at the maximum. We cannot escape the conclusion that the drought has been made an excuse for demanding an immense sum of money to be thrown 'into the pot' to finance any ventures, however impracticable, that commend themselves to MR. ROOSEVELT'S agricultural advisers. . . . In recent weeks, it has been manifest that the agrarians are dominating the councils of the president and are prepared to go to any length in the reckless application of untried theories. The proposed, new amendments to AAA are alarming enough in themselves, but they are rendered doubly alarming by the arguments with which they are defended. . . . Unless the drought in the West is much worse than the most pessimistic reports indicate, every immediate need could be met by an appropriation not more than one-fifth as great as the president has asked. He should not permit a departmental raid on the treasury to be disguised as drought-relief."

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

The Eastern North Carolina Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention is to meet in annual session, at Catawba Springs Church, Wake County, N. C., July 10th-11th. The program is in process of making and will soon be printed. This Convention is usually quite largely attended, and good old Catawba Springs is famed for its cordiality in entertaining.

It is noted with pleasure that our distinguished friend and brother, Dr. Martyn Summerbell, journeyed from Lakemont, N. Y., to Defiance, O., to deliver the baccalaureate sermon on Sunday, June 10th, to the Class of 1934. The subject of Dr. Summerbell's address to the graduates was "Some Satisfaction of the Gospel." Our congratulations to that class for having this storehouse of wisdom to draw upon during the period of their baccalaureate.

THE SUN's editor was happy to attend the prayer meeting service, Suffolk Christian Church, Dr. John G. Truitt, pastor, Wednesday evening, June 6th. The occasion chanced to be the celebration of a baptismal service at which six candidates were immersed. With this number, Dr. Truitt has received sixty-one members into church membership this conference year.

President L. E. Smith, Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, Mr. John Farmer, Dr. J. E. Rawls and Dr. J. O. Atkinson, a committee from the Board of Trustees of Elon College, were in Richmond last Wednesday on business for the College. The Trustees feel most keenly the need of clearing Elon College of all indebtedness and are seeking to plan a program to that end. We know nothing that would carry so much joy to the hearts of our people, and such relief to hearts that are burdened for the church, as to see Elon College cleared of debt and thus free to go forward with her great work.

"We already have a world community and it is only our stupidity which prevents us seeing it. Every question is a world question today. Every market is a world market. All the issues are world issues." So declared a great statesman recently. Commenting on the above, an editor of a religious journal declares, "We are in for a great awakening as to the possibilities inherent in Jesus' conception of the Kingdom of God. When statesmen speak in these terms, shall the religious press, tied hand and foot by narrow loyalties to denomination and nation, be the last to understand that humanity is searching for that spiritual foundation adequate for the reorganization of social and political systems on world lines?"

WHAT'S WRONG WITH THE CHURCH?

By G. H. VEAZEY.

What's wrong with the church? the enquirer asked,

The Pessimist made reply:
Religion has failed, the world is all bad,
It seems that the church will soon die.

The old time religion a long time ago
Made people honest and true;
Now Satan's turned loose, he's ruling the world,
The Christians remaining are few.

It seems that the preachers no longer trust God,
But trust in the Dollar so great,
They'll wake up some and see their mistake,
I hope it will not be too late.

I'm longing to see the good days of old
When preachers had love in their heart;
The laymen all practiced the teachings of Christ,
And from them they would not depart.

What's wrong with the church? I'm anxious to know,
The humble, true Christian replied;
The church is alive and doing great work
In the name of its Builder, Who died.

The church may not be as pure as it ought,
But it's doing a great work today,
By holding up Christ to a lost, dying world,
Who is the great Truth, Light, and Way!

The Gospel is carried by the church to the world,
And saves all who hear and believe.
All those who reject and continue in sin,
Their lives Jesus will not receive.

The preachers are happy while doing the work
That Christ has allotted to them;
They tell of his love, they point souls above,
And cause weary souls to trust him.

Wadley, Ala.

VALLEY LETTER.

I have recently held a revival meeting at Newport. We had good congregations most of the time. There were four conversions, and six additions to the church.

My next meeting was at Dry Run. Rev. W. B. Fuller did the preaching during the meeting. The people enjoyed his sermons, and the congregations continued to increase all the time. While there were no public professions, we trust some impressions were made that will bring forth a good harvest.

We had our Memorial service at Leaksville the first Sunday in June. We had a good congregation and a good day. The occasion was enjoyable and profitable. A bountiful dinner was served in the church yard at the noon hour. The pastor preached in the morning, and several speakers and singers occupied the time in the afternoon. We are delighted to have former residents of the neighborhood return on these memorial and home-coming occasions.

Our Sunday School Convention is now at hand and will be a matter of history before these lines appear in THE SUN.

Our Conference will soon be here. It is to meet this year at Mayland, August 8th and 9th.

A. W. ANDES.

THREE GREAT MYSTERIES.

Did you ever ponder upon the great mysteries of time, space and life? Ever give them more than merely a passing thought?

Regarding space, not even a satisfactory theory can be formulated. Limitless, endless, infinite, it is an awesome mystery indeed.

The mystery of time, no one can ever hope to solve. No one can even imagine how there can be such a thing as a beginning or end to time.

Life, over which philosophers have puzzled in all ages, is so unexplainable from a standpoint of pure reasoning.

The only answers to these great mysteries are to be found in the teachings of religion, the Bible, Christianity—answers that give a sense of assurance not to be found anywhere else.—
W. A. Bluhm.

GO WITH THE UPTURN.

There are many evidences floating on our social, economic and religious tides that indicate a turn has come. It looks like we are at the beginning of the flood. For our readers who live in the interior and to whom tidewater figures of speech convey little meaning, we will say that it seems to us that the long down-hill drift, which was followed by a hard pull in the mud of the lowlands, has changed, and the road seems to have turned upward and we are now looking toward the hills. It looks like the upturn has come. Let's go up!

Increased employment, more business, advanced wages, higher prices, renewed confidence, liberal spending in the world about us, with many accessions, growing congregations and increased giving in the churches, are the signs of the oncoming tide. It seems to us as we go to and fro in the earth, that there has been a change in the direction of things. We hope so, and we had rather counsel with our hopes than with our fears. It's more fun and we think it will get us farther.

The church should go up with the upturn. While the church has held out better against the depression than any other human enterprise, many churches and many ministers have suffered. Some have almost lost their nerve. Let's recover and go up with the upturn.

This is not the time for retrenchment in the local church. Don't cut salaries. Don't break the heart of your minister when you need him at his best. Stop chiseling on the supplies. Brighten up the old church with paint. Advertise. Beseech the guidance of the Holy Spirit with an absolute surrender to the will of God. His way leads to the heights. Give your utmost to his highest.

This is the day for great enterprise in the general church. Western Maryland College at the annual meeting of the Board of Trustees ordered the erection of a new dormitory. Fine! The Maryland Annual Conference ought to make immediate arrangement to begin the construction of the Lewis Memorial Church in Washington. Every Conference ought to attempt a major enterprise. The tide has turned. To row now will mean twice the distance with half the effort. Let's go up with the upturn.

There is a tide in the affairs of men
Which taken at the flood, leads on to fortune.

God's tide seems to be coming in. Let us cast lose from the fears that have held us and go on and up with the rising current.—Editorial in Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

KEEPING THE CONTACTS OILED.

"At every turn the contacts of life are oiled by good nature and courtesy," says James Truslow Adams in attempting to account for the apparent ability of the Englishman to work longer and harder than the American. "Daily life," he affirms, "is tremendously 'efficient' as compared with America, where friction has become terrific."

Whack, whack, whack suddenly went the engine in my car. What a noise. Pedestrians stopped and gaped at me. The traffic cop grinned as I passed him. Even the mechanic straightened up and gazed at me as I drove into the garage.

"Running without oil," explained the foreman.

But no, the crankcase was full. Opon investigation it was discovered that the feed pipe was clogged; hence friction, noise, damage, and loss of time.

"Friction, noise, damage, and loss of time," these characterize the average life.

A NEW DEAL FOR THE INDIAN.

By JOHN COLLIER,
Commissioner of Indian Affairs.

The Wheeler-Howard Bill now before Congress has also been called the Bill of Indian Rights. The Indians themselves have referred to it as their "Declaration of Independence," and the enemies of the measure have called it socialistic, communistic and pagan. On the whole it is a piece of legislation which seems to leave no one indifferent. It has called for a vast deal of comment already, and political writers are now saying that it will be made a campaign issue in the states where there are Indian populations.

Thus are the fates of human beings made the football of politicians, for it is not too much to say that the fate of the American Indian is closely bound up in this proposed measure. Our Indians are in a desperate condition; if something is not done for them now it will soon be too late. The Wheeler-Howard Bill proposes to do that something.

Specifically, what is it? What is it that has to be done if the Indians of the United States are to be established on a reasonably certain economic and social footing?

First: The present system of property management must be completely revised. The land allotment laws must be repealed, measures must be provided to stop the sale of Indian lands to white men, perpetual Federal guardianship over Indian property must be assured and funds must be appropriated to buy back for the Indians some proportion of the lands lost to them through the workings of the allotment system.

On the economic front this is what the Wheeler-Howard Bill proposes to do, and the necessity of these measures may be judged by the following facts: Since allotment was put into effect in 1887 the Indians have lost two-thirds of the original land holdings, almost altogether through the workings of this system. Today they own about 47,000,000 acres, and of these, 20,000,000 are desert or semi-desert. The allotted Indians are desperately poor—their average per capita income, in ten tribes recently studied, being no more than $47 per year. They live in perpetual danger of land loss and have ever before them the knowledge that it is the rule rather than the exception for Indian land to pass to white ownership within two generations at the most.

Comparing the state of the allotted Indians to the few tribes which have escaped allotment we find a marked contrast. Even where the unallotted groups are poor, they have a social solidarity and an undiminished vitality and morale. They show a marked thrift in managing what property resources they have. Allotment has not been put into effect in Canada nor in Mexico, and again the comparison of our allotted Indians to the Indian population of those countries provides a contrast that is altogether a reproach. Our neighbors north and south have made their Indian groups a national asset rather than a liability. Their Indians are prosperous in reasonable proportion to the whites.

It is demonstrable, therefore, that allotment is one of the great sources of Indian economic wrong in this country, and, if the ill effects upon the Indians themselves were not enough, there must be added in the vast expense which it entails to the Government to administer allotted properties. In many cases this exceeds the income from the property and, as it is ever-growing, it will in time exceed the value of the property itself—unless allotment is brought to an end.

The Wheeler-Howard Bill would in no way disturb the titles of the Indians already allotted, but would make it impossible for their lands to be lost to them, since it would vest the title in the tribe in perpetuity.

The social conditions among the Indians which the Wheeler-Howard Bill attempts to correct are those largely traceable to the long-sustained governmental efforts to break up racial consciousness and substitute an imitation white consciousness in its place. This supposed substitution has not eventuated, as ethnologists or sociologists might have foretold to our politicians long ago. Through the educational system of the boarding school and through the regulations preventing the practice of tribal observances and the forbidding of the right to assemble, the Indian members of communities and groups have been deprived of the feeling of organization so essential to any system of civilization. The Wheeler-Howard Bill of Rights extends to the Indians privilege to organize chartered communities wherever they so desire for business or municipal or other purposes; to elect the offices of these communities and to pass their own ordinances. This would simply give them the right enjoyed by American citizens in every town in the country to have a voice in determining their own local conditions. It is not an arbitrary system of self-government, to be imposed upon the Indians, whether they want it or not. It is entirely optional with every group. The present administration of Indian Affairs considers that there has been enough of arbitrary imposition of governmental system on the tribes and it proposes to decrease the authority of the Indian Bureau by transferring its powers to the tribes as rapidly as they are competent to assume them—and wish to do so.

Fully recognizing that the Indians today have not been trained in the necessary technique for property management and self-government, the Wheeler-Howard Bill would provide educational opportunities through scholarships and loans; it would also set up a special court of Indian Affairs through which the Indians would be assured of due process of law in all matters affecting them.

At present the death rate of the Indian population is about twice that of the white, and the illiteracy level of the ward Indians is about 30 per cent. Viewing these two facts alone, can the Government lay claim to having been a successful guardian over the last seventy-five years? Is not some change now strongly indicated?

Referenda have been held by a number of tribes on the proposed measure. To date the count is something like 100,000 for, as against 9,000 opposed. The President has expressed his approval of the Bill. Missionary boards and welfare and patriotic groups have given the measure their endorsement. Action waits on Congress now. May it at last lighten the long shame of our treatment of the Indian people!—Advance

WHERE THE "SOCIAL GOSPEL" FAILS.

Those of us who are accustomed to emphasize the social significance of Christianity do well to remind ourselves that all our great social problems might conceivably be solved without our finding the Kingdom of God on earth. To realize this is necessary to save us from a dangerous superficiality.

Suppose, for example, that the present unjust inequalities in wealth and income were to disappear (as they have largely disappeared in Russia) because men at last discover that it is "good business" to have purchasing power widely distributed among all the people. Suppose poverty were thus to vanish, all men were to have good houses in which to live, all were to have economic plenty.

Suppose, too, that all our racial frictions were to be overcome (as they have been largely overcome in South America) as a result of following the line of least resistance and adopting a custom of intermarriage, so that prejudice and discriminations on the ground of color were relics of the past.

Suppose, further, that strife between States were surmounted (as it was surmounted among the American commonwealths that now form our federal union) through the process of finding that tariff walls and policies of isolation and violent conflicts were shortsighted and ruinous. Suppose that, as a matter of prudent self-interest, the world were organized for peace and war came to be recognized by all peoples to be as senseless as duelling.

Would this mean that we would then have a society comparable to what Jesus meant by the Kingdom of God?

Not at all! For consider what the quality of our life might still be.

Men might still be living without any vision of the meaning of existence, without any faith in a spiritual order in the universe, without any moral purpose, without any sense of supreme values worth striving for, without any motives of love for either God or man.

Men might still be living on the mere surface of things, still having only a jazz view of life, still interested only in sensual pleasures, still insensitive to beauty, still deaf to the call of duty, still bereft of any high enthusiasms, still self-seeking, haughty and heartless, still beset by fear and guilt, still cynical, blase and disillusioned.

Such reflections should make us realize that our primary concern as Christians is always with the inner life, always with the faith and motives and attitudes of individual men. If the churches fail here, they fail everywhere; they become "empty cisterns" from which thirsty men draw no living water.

Such reflections should also give us a new sense of what is the distinctive function of the churches with reference to social problems. It is a function that lies at a far deeper level than that of governments, universities, chambers of commerce, labor organizations, or sociological societies. The function of the churches is to give men such an insight into the spiritual meaning of life, such a sense of relation to a divine purpose, such a passion for Christ-like personality, that they will have profounder motives than other men for building a new society. With such a Christian foundation they will struggle for economic justice, not merely because it is good business, but because they have too much love in their hearts to exploit their fellows or to live in plenty while others are in need. They will work for interracial cooperation, not merely because it is practical common sense, but because they find great spiritual values in brotherhood. They will strive for world peace, not merely because war is insanity, but because they desire fellowship with all men as the one family of God.—Editorial in "The Federal Council Bulletin."

Sent as a fraternal delegate with a message of good fellowship and cheer by the Indian Christians to the Congregational and Christian Churches of America, Dr. Wilbur S. Deming docked in New York recently and said, "I have been amazed at the courage and spiritual poise shown by numerous Indian Christians during the past few months when the very foundation of our work seemed to be in danger. Assuredly such work is fruitful and we can rejoice that God's spirit is being revealed in the daily lives of so many who find in Him their source of spiritual strength."

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all

THE PURPOSE OF OUR CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS.

If there is one class of people above any other, whose faithful and efficient service is "unhonored and unsung," it is the vast army of our Sunday School teachers. Without pay, without compensation of any sort, except that of a conscience satisfied with a duty done, this vast company of two million consecrated men and women meet their classes Sunday after Sunday and seek, with consecrated purpose, to instruct and edify them in the way and cause of righteousness. There is nothing else like it in our ethics or economy. They are not a professional folk. They are not an employed, drilled, uniformed or hired army. They are only drafted into service by their willingness and their desire to be of service in the work of building the kingdom of God on earth. As a body of servants, we estimate that they wield a power and have an influence second only, if second at all, to the ministry, preachers of the Gospel, which Gospel these Sunday School teachers—two million strong—Sunday after Sunday confessedly embrace and seek to emphasize and to carry home to the hearts of their classes and mould the lives of their pupils, in keeping with the life of him who is their leader and Great Teacher.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN hails and greets with delight that, under the chairmanship of William T. Ellis, the great International Sunday School Lesson expounder, "A National Recognition Day for Sunday School Teachers," has been initiated and is to be observed. Out of sheer gratitude for their faithful teachers, every Sunday School in this land should observe the day appointed, October 6, 1934, and, in observing the day, they should seek by a suitable program to honor their teachers and fittingly express the appreciation of the school and all the pupils thereof for the essential and consecrated service that their teachers have rendered and are rendering.

Bear in mind in this instance, the teachers will not take the initiative, since they are the ones to be recognized and honored, but every pastor, superintendent and layman, all of whom are blessed and benefitted by the service of the teachers, should take the initiative in their school and community and make the day a memorable one. Your Sunday School teachers certainly deserve this recognition, this mark of esteem and gratitude on the part of every school.

Suggestions as to how the program for the occasion may be made and carried out can be secured by addressing request to "National Executive Committee, American Sunday School Union Building, Philadelphia, Pa." We sincerely trust that every Christian Sunday School will observe October 6, 1934, as a real recognition day for the Sunday School teachers. J. O. A.

THE GENERAL COUNCIL.

Elsewhere in this week's SUN is printed a list of the duly elected delegates to represent the Southern Convention in the General Council at Oberlin, Ohio, June 21st-27th. The Convention itself, by the rules of the Council, was entitled to six delegates—three men and three women—and the constituent Conferences of the Convention twenty delegates—ten men and ten women—(The Council decreeing equal representation of its delegation to men and women).

Since alternates were not named from our Southern Convention, every delegate elected should make it a duty, as well as a privilege, if within the reach of possibility, to attend the Council.

In THE SUN this week we are giving, under the title of "General Council at Oberlin," some account of what those who attend and the churches at large may expect of this session of the Council. It will be seen that not only is the program itself a most promising one, but also the items to be considered are of vital consequence to our church life and activity. By the recent decision of our Convention at Suffolk, we will, in all likelihood, become a constituent and an integral part of the Council, as Christian Churches in other sections than the South have already become, and our future activities, collectively and corporately, as a Convention, are likely to be influenced, in a large measure by the outcome of the General Council. All in all, the constituency of our Southern Convention have a right to expect much of this meeting of the Council and will be deeply interested, both in the program, the proceedings and the pronouncements of the Council. THE CHRISTIAN SUN will seek in succeeding issues to give its readers an account of the Council, especially as to its bearing upon the enterprises, activities and institutions of our Southern and Southern Regional Convention. J. O. A.

WHY THEY GROW.

There may be other reasons, but the chief reason why Baptists grow in numbers and prestige is because they are missionary not only in fancy but in fact. If proof of this were required, the Southern Baptist Convention, in its recent session at Fort Worth, Texas, gave it unmistakably by accepting, consecrating and sending out fourteen new missionaries to their work on the Foreign Field. This, indeed, is heartening not only to the Baptist denomination, but to all denominations, in that it shows the faith of the fellowship in the supreme task of the church. In the face of economic adversity, decreasing budgets and the rest, these Baptist folks have "stopped the drop" and have already gone a long way back up the hill in increasing their gifts to Missions, and, of course, to the other interests and enterprises of their churches. Ever and always, when gifts and activities for Missions increase, you may count on additional gifts and activities for the other interests and institutions of the church. This is true experimentally and historically, and a fact that never fails. If further proof were necessary that one of the chief reasons of growth of Baptist churches is due to their missionary spirit, take this comment about the Convention, which we quote from the Christian Index (Georgia Baptist organ):

"The Southern Baptist Convention at Fort Worth was a missionary convention. It was a common expression of the messengers: 'This is like it used to be in the days of Willingham and Gray when they were at their best.' And why shouldn't the Convention be missionary? That is what our spiritual fathers intended when they, in Augusta, Georgia, on May 5, 1845, organized 'a plan for eliciting, combining, and directing the energies of the denomination for the propagation of the Gospel.' Through all the years past the Convention has been great as it has been missionary, and in the future, if it would be great, it must be missionary."

It will, indeed, be a great and triumphant day for our Congregational-Christian fellowship when after the adjournment of one of our great Conventions, we can make a comment as truthful as we presume the above is from this Baptist journal, and say, "That was a Missionary Convention." J. O. A.

STOCK-TAKING TIME.

The following seems to carry such a forceful historical fact and such an inescapable conclusion, that we borrow it bodily from an editorial of Dr. Gilroy in Advance:

"There is a fateful quality in the year 1934. We meet in Oberlin, not at the end of a depression, but at the end of an epoch. That epoch began politically with the march of Napoleon to Moscow; economically with the perfection of the cotton gin. It was the epoch in which industrialism ran its giddy course and each man wrought as he pleased, making as much as he could, in any way he could; an age in which imperialism reached its dizzy heights and blatant nationalism had its grand fling. The epoch closes, with the world's industrial machine bankrupt and helpless; with rival nationalisms striking out insanely against each other; with society floundering in self-created confusion.

"There must be a new world order—or all of which passes for civilization will perish from the earth. If the churches are to survive they must serve this new order. We are going to Oberlin to ask ourselves whether we of the Congregational-Christian fellowship are equipped to serve. It is stock-taking time for us."

This statement from Advance grew out of a suggestion reaching the editor to this effect:

"Why not, instead of talking of expansion, have a survey of your present program?"

The reference is to the "next step" to be taken by the General Council at Oberlin. Following the suggestion, this declaration is made:

"Denominational programs grow and are not planned. There is constant danger of in-breeding of ideas. Offices being filled by mortal men, those same men sometimes settle down to a greater or less degree of complacency. Projects launched require halos, and are sometimes continued automatically because they are not periodically tested and weighed as vigorously as they should be."

It will help us in our regional Convention to take stock. It will help us in our Conferences and Associations to take stock. We need to make sensible and timely surveys to prevent overlapping and in-breeding. Would not such a survey mean expansion? J. O. A.

GENERAL COUNCIL AT OBERLIN.

Over 7,000 churches will be represented by 850 delegates in addition to 1,500 associate delegates and visitors. Included in the total number of churches are 745 in foreign lands; these will be represented by missionaries or nationals sent as fraternal delegates. The churches in this country to be represented number 6,350. They have 1,000,000 communicant members and an affiliated constituency of 3,000,000.

The Council will, in the first place, constitute a great religious forum where from the standpoint of spiritual interests will be considered the social problems facing the country international issues involving peace and war, the life and service of the churches themselves and the vigor of their missionary enterprise. The general theme is: "Righteousness Exalteth a Nation."

Each morning the Council will divide for study and debate into ten seminars on the topics: World Peace; Christian Stewardship and Church Attendance; The Ministry; Christian higher Education; Missions; The Social Gospel Including Economic Problems, Unemployment, Leisure, Liquor Control; etc.; Rural Life and Farm Problems; Current Theological Questions; Religious Education and Evangelism; Interracial Relations.

The anniversaries of the oldest missionary societies in the country will constitute a second important phase of the Council. The oldest foreign mission organization on this continent is the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions of Congregational-Christian Churches. It was founded in 1810 and sent its first missionaries in 1813 to India. In 1816, its missionaries in Ceylon and in 1820 in Turkey and in the Hawaiian Islands. By 1834, 100 years ago, it had sent missionaries to the American Indians in the West, to South America, to Greece, to Siam, to China, to Sumatra, to Cyprus, to Persia, to Singapore and to Africa.

The National Home Boards of the Congregational and Christian Churches comprise seven societies, the first being the American Education Society, now called the Congregational Education Society, founded 1816; the American Home Missionary Society, the first national home missionary society in this country and now called the Congregational Home Missionary Society, was organized 1826; the American Missionary Association, organized 1846, was a pioneer agency for Negro education and is the founder of Talladega College, Fisk University, Atlanta University, Hampton Institute and other schools. The other National Home Boards are the Church Building Society, the Sunday School Extension Society, the Publishing Society and the Board of Ministerial Relief.

The Rev. Dr. Carl S. Patton, pastor of the First Congregational Church, Los Angeles, Calif., and the Rev. Dr. Frank G. Coffin, pastor of the United Congregational-Christian Church, Columbus, Ohio, co-moderators of the General Council, will give the opening addresses. Dr. Patton will speak Thursday afternoon, June 21st, and Dr. Coffin, in the evening.

The Council sermon will be preached Sunday morning by the Rev. Dr. Ashley Day Leavitt, pastor of the Harvard Church, Brookline, Mass., and chairman of the Prudential Committee of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. His theme will be, "Is Christ Enough?"

The devotional services will be conducted by the chaplain, the Rev. Dr. Boynton Merrill, pastor of the Second Church in Newton, West Newton, Mass., on the theme, "The Intimate Nearness of the Infinite God."

Speakers at the evening sessions will include: Dr. James Weldon Johnson, professor of creative literature, Fisk University, Tennessee; Hubert C. Herring, New York, N. Y., executive secretary, department of social relations, Congregational Education Society; the Rev. Dr. A. L. Warnshuis, New York, N. Y., secretary, International Missionary Council; the Rev. Warren W. Pickett, pastor, First Congregational Church, Detroit, Mich.; the Rev. Dr. Vaughan Dabney, dean, Andover Newton Theological School, Massachusetts; the Rev. Dr. Silas P. Evans, president, Ripon College, Ripon, Wisconsin.

CHRISTIANITY AND ECONOMICS.

By HON. DANIEL C. ROPER.

Secretary of Commerce of the United States.

It is an interesting thing in the history of man, as well as in the history of individuals, that relatively few people are cognizant at the right time of new tides of opportunity. I was born in an agricultural era, characterized by the definite feeling on the part of the majority of the people that agriculture was the basic and controlling industry. One day in my early life I noticed from a statement in the Atlanta Constitution that, according to the headline, a new era had dawned, the editor stating that on the day before cotton had been picked in a cotton field adjoining a new cotton factory in the vicinity of Atlanta, the cotton had been ginned, carded, spun, woven into a fabric, the fabric dyed, the fabric cut into a suit of clothes, tailored and worn to a ball on the same night of the day the cotton was gathered from the field. The newspaper article went on to state, "A new industrial era takes precedence over agriculture." However, relatively few people in the agricultural era, at least in my locality, sensed this situation and the manufacturing industry went largely to other localities.

While in Washington thirty years later, the Secretary of the Treasury called a group of bankers to his office from New York, told them that the World War had to be financed, and asked their suggestions as to how it could be done. These bankers stated that they would have to take the bonds as they had done of previous occasions when the Government needed to be assisted in its finances and be given a rate of interest. This greatly displeased the Secretary of the Treasury and he stated that he would take the matter to the people and get the people to buy the bonds. The bankers laughed at the idea, but the Secretary did take the matter to the people, sold them the bonds, and initiated a bond and security mindedness on the part of the people. A new era had dawned. This era, uncontrolled as to greed and selfish aggrandizement, exploded in 1929.

We are now in another era—what shall it be called? Let us hope that it may justify some terminology of stabilized control that will recognize the fact that, after all, the proper human relationship makes man essentially and necessarily his "Brother's Keeper." This conception of government conforms to the principles of social and economic stability enunciated by the great Nazarene two thousand years ago. While we all knew that Christ did not discuss the technique of economics, we do know that through his teachings he gave expression to human motives and human values that must underlie any just economie and social system. His doctrines emphasized the service for the common good as against that of self-seeking advantage. True Christianity is founded upon the principle of mutual aid and seeks unselfish cooperation as against selfish individualism.

The Federal Government is endeavoring to work out economic and social control in business through a series of regulations called codes which have for their purpose the establishment of an equitable condition with maximum benefits and minimum inequalities for all concerned—an effort to give all an opportunity to live and enjoy reasonable opportunities in life. Equal-handed justice must be sought for the laborer, the capitalist, the industrialist, and all other agencies having a place in our social life.

The most important function in the whole procession, however, is the creation and maintenance of a proper attitude toward life—a proper responsibility as between man and man. The religious and civic organizations must assume important responsibilities in this work. We need a "code" in such organizations that will look to the establishment of necessary cooperation and defend against unfair practices just as is attempted under the codes for business. The Federation of Churches looks in this direction as it undertakes to bring the churches into effective cooperation and stress the fundamental principles for which the Nazarene stood and for which humanity is sorely in need.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Bugs are in the air. They creep, crawl, run, swim and fly. Insects of various kinds, sizes and colors have formed an alliance against modern high powered civilization. If you wish to know the difference between a bug and an insect look at them and consult your dictionary, or a book of biology. The two terms are used loosely in America. Without attempting to define or describe them, they are here. Where do they come from, and what is their mission? No one knows.

A drive out in the country, at night, suggested this theme. Thousands of bugs and insects are revealed flying above the highways. Automobile light may attract them. One wonders if there are as many bugs in the woods and fields as on the highways at night. The number wounded and killed by contact with the windshield is amazing. What would happen to passengers in a car if they were not protected by the windshield? Yet a bug is a very small thing. Just one seems insignificant. But bugs and insects are a menace to civilization.

Recently an old house was torn down. An inspection of the lumber was made, and it was discovered that the entire building was seriously damaged by insects which had eaten much of the lumber. The house, which had sheltered man and withstood many storms, was ruined by insects. Likewise, giant trees in the forest are being killed by little insects. Our homes, our barns, our warehouses and our factories become infested with deadly and destructive bugs.

Think how they attack gardens and fields. Thousands of dollars are spent annually by the farmers to protect growing crops from destruction. At great expense the Government establishes a quarantine against certain kinds of these creatures. The effort to destroy them requires many men and much money. The task is almost hopeless. But it cannot be abandoned. A few years ago a farmer said: "It will cost me one hundred dollars to kill the bugs in my potato field. The potatoes may not sell for enough to pay me for this expense. But I am forced to do this for my protection next year." Bugs are expensive and they multiply rapidly.

Much more might be written along this line. But this is enough to call attention to the menace to growing crops, real estate and human health. What dangers for man lurk in the singing mosquito and the common house-fly! They are winged messengers of death to man. Lands must be drained, rubbish destroyed and houses screened to make life safe and living comfortable.

What possibilities lie in little things. In the spiritual life there are little evils, little forces at work which are just as deadly to the soul as these insects are to life and property. It is the task of the church to cut drainage ditches and destroy the breeding places of evil for the salvation of man. Many people in the old days ridiculed the doctors who sought to wage war against the mosquito and the house-fly as disease carriers. However, the doctors won the argument when the mosquitoes and flies won the battle against health and happiness. When the Christian pulpits and press sound the alarm against many of the popular habits and social customs of the present day, they are held up to ridicule by the social leaders and selfish profiteers who live for self-satisfaction and material gain. The ancient idea, that evil people were possessed by evil spirits, had more truth than superstition for its back-ground. For evil is guided by a spirit. Every mosquito bite does not mean sickness or death to the victim. But in many cases it causes sickness and death. Every glass of beer, wine or whiskey taken into the body of man has a possibility of ending in spiritual death. Some little devil thrusts a poisonous thought into the mind—and spiritual death becomes a possibility. Look out for the spiritual bugs and insects which infest us today.

I. W. JOHNSON.

THE WHY OF SUMMER SCHOOL.

In recent years the summer session for schools and colleges is becoming the rule rather than the exception. Fifteen to twenty years ago schools in cities, colleges, and universities rarely, if ever, planned a summer session. At first, summer sessions in high schools were for those who had been conditioned in some studies, or who had failed to make a passing grade. The school authorities offered this opportunity for students with poor records to improve their standing educationally.

In colleges, summer sessions were planned largely for graduates, those who had been out teaching and who wished to improve their certificates. In North Carolina, and perhaps in other States, teachers were required to attend summer school if they were to maintain or advance their position in the school system. Colleges and universities arranged programs to meet State requirements and the demands of the teachers themselves.

In recent years, a number of high school students have taken advantage of the summer session that they might graduate earlier or add credits to the required amount of work for graduation. Owing to depleted State treasuries, so far as schools are concerned, State Departments of Education, in many instances, discontinued the requirement for teachers to attend summer school. Resulting from drastic decreases in pay, attendance in summer schools in colleges on the part of public school teachers has decreased accordingly. The average summer school now has a greatly increased number of regular college students in its enrollment.

At Elon College summer school, regular college students, or those planning to attend college, are in the majority. The regular college course at Elon embraces nine months, divided into two semesters, fall and spring. Until the past two years the college has been closed during the summer months. Why close down an institution at this period of the year? We have investment, we have the faculty, we have all facilities to do the work of a college. Expense of operation in the summer is much cheaper than at any other season of the year. No heat is required. Current used for light is at the minimum. A large number of college students have no employment for the summer; they simply run at large and are less fit for college work in September than they were in June, when the regular session closed.

The question we are confronted with is whether or not it is better to operate a college for nine months in the year or for twelve. Why not have a summer session? Why not go on the quarter system, operating at full speed for four quarters? This would enable the average student to finish the college course in three years rather than in four. It would reduce the cost of education to the student and reduce the cost of operation to the college. Those who wished to go twelve months in the year could go. Those who preferred not could simply omit the summer quarter. We have the Christmas vacation, running from eight to twelve days. We have the spring vacation, running from six to eight days. We could arrange for a summer vacation for one week or more.

These are questions that we are facing at Elon College and questions which we are asking the patrons of the college, together with the Board of Trustees, to consider with us. If after reading this article, you have an opinion regarding the questions raised I wish you would please write me or send your contribution to THE CHRISTIAN SUN for publication.

L. E. SMITH, President.

FROM H. C. CAVNESS.

We desire to take this opportunity of expressing our sincere appreciation for the prayers, fellowship and good will as shown by our friends who are readers of the "Sun!" for their part in our labors of love, and their contribution to our Lord Jesus Christ. "For we have great joy and consolation in Thy love." (Philemon 7)

Since our last report through these columns we have truly passed through many waters; truly hath He confirmed His promise, "When thou passest through the waters, I will be with thee, and through the rivers they shall not overflow thee; when thou walkest through the fire, thou shalt not be burned; neither shall flame kindle upon thee, for I Am the Lord thy God." (Isa. 43:2.) We have known the deep waters of sorrow, as never before. The sorrows which would bring the pain of resentment because of betrayal; the sorrows which come with loneliness; from the pinch and pain of poverty. The flames which would sear and scorch, and harden and make harsh, were it not for His promise, "I WILL BE WITH THEE". And the flames though they rose high, could not scorch, or sear, thank God, for said He, "Thou Shalt Not be Burned."

We have less monetary returns from our ministry than ever before, having worked harder and received less, yet again hath He confirmed Isa. 45:33. "And I will give thee the treasures of darkness; and hidden riches of secret places, that thou mayest know that I, the Lord, which call thee by thy name, am the God of Israel. Sometimes He withholds His light that we may discover the treasure of darkness, withholds wealth that we may possess hidden riches. Indeed it is worth it all for the knowledge of Him is the issue. And we have determined that come what may, we shall be true to our original standards of making the gospel without cost. We shall never, by God's grace, commercialize evangelism, nor subvert our desire to win souls as a mastering passion through greed for gold, though we walk in abject poverty and know every want, our motto being; "To win for the Lamb that was slain the reward of His suffering." Our prayer long has been, "Oh, Lord; lay any burden upon me, only sustain me; send me anywhere, only go with me; sever any tie but that which binds me to Thy service and Thy heart, for Thy glory, Oh; Christ, we pray." For we have found as never before that; "The eternal God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms; and he shall thrust out the enemy from before thee, and shall say, destroy them." (Deut. 33:27).

Thank God we can say, for His glory, and His glory only, that the first four months of the present year have been more fruitful than any four years of our preceding ministry. Began the year with a six weeks campaign for Christ in Tampa, Florida, where He moved mightily. Then we evangelized, taught and worked in the Florida Fundamental Bible Institute of Temple Terrace, Tampa, Florida, for several weeks, there touching life from every quarter of the globe, in one of the finest Bible Schools in America. Its president is a former North Carolinian, from Lumberton, N. C., one of the finest Christian gentlemen we ever met; a man with a mastering passion for the lost and a great vision for God, and an energy which seems tireless in the Lord's service. Any young man or woman desiring a thorough Bible training, for any field of Christian work, and who would like to spend the winter in Florida's sunshine and flowers, at a very nominal cost should communicate with Pres. W. T. Watson, Temple Terrace, Tampa, Florida. Or perhaps some "Sun" reader would like to be a Florida Tourist this coming winter, if so, communicate with Mr. Watson, for in connection with the School, a Tourist Hotel with finest accommodations in marvelous Christian surroundings and spiritual atmosphere, is provided at rates most reasonable indeed. Later we were in Missionary Tour of the State of Florida and in a portion of the Republic of Cuba, in which God blessed in most marvelous measure. Our last campaign was in Orlando, Florida, where we were in Tabernacle meeting for several weeks.

Our present meeting is in Moberly, Missouri, in a great tent meeting, wherein God is moving, and where there is every promise of great stirring Holy Ghost revival. Here until June 17th. DV. Pray for us. Rom. 15:30.

We expect to return to Greensboro, North Carolina, 210 College Place by June 24th, spending some time with relatives and friends, God willing, and to any evangelization to which He may call us, before returning to Florida for our winter's work which has already been engaged for church, school and tabernacle services, God willing.

Truly 'tis a joy to pray for the dear old church of which we are a member, for the paper, for friends whose love we cherish beyond any commercial value. 1 Samuel 12:23-24.

We shall be so pleased to hear from any of our friends, our address being, Greensboro, (210 College Place) N. Car.

In His Service,
H. C. CAVINESS.

CYPRESS CHAPEL.

We want others to know about the good things we have been doing and are doing to promote the Christian spirit in our church.

First of all we have a strong foundation, faithful, hard-working Christian men and women to carry on God's work.

Another great and essential factor to a strong and growing church is a good under-shepherd who loves his sheep and tries to keep them within his folds; and we are sure that we could not find one more interested in his flock or one who deserves more credit for the good work going on within the folds than we have found in our beloved pastor, Rev. R. E. Brittle, for six years. May men and women of future years take up his work and live for God and his fellow man as he is doing.

We hear from the pulpit one preaching service every Sunday. On fifth Sundays we always have a Communion Service of which every one who considers himself a professed follower of Jesus Christ is invited to partake.

Once every year we hold a revival meeting. The purpose of this revival week is to reconsecrate and win souls to Christ, by which we also add new members to our church roll.

Our church has a faithful choir, always willing to render its service. They have regular practice and furnish suitable music for all occasions.

Our Sunday School is among the main branches of our church work. We have Sunday School every Sunday morning at a regular hour with five organized and five unorganized classes. We select for our teachers and officers only those who are best fitted and most capable. By so doing we are able to accomplish much through our classes. To encourage attendance, pictures are awarded each Sunday to the one organized and one unorganized class having the largest percentage of attendance. Occasionally there are little contests, games and treats for the younger children, besides an annual picnic for the entire Sunday School.

We have our young people conduct Sunday School one Sunday in every month. They usually have a good program prepared, in which only the young people take part. The programs are inspirational and they afford excellent training for the youth of our church who are soon to become the actual leaders.

Besides our Sunday School we have other organizations which enroll from the youngest to the oldest of our church members.

The Cradle Roll is for babies and younger children until they are old enough to become members of the Willing Worker's Society, another children's organization.

For the young people we have organized a Young People's Missionary Society. This meets once each month. These meetings are conducted altogether by the young people. We have very interesting meetings and equally interesting programs. The Mission Study book is also taught at these meetings. To create and hold the interest of our members we have socials once each month, held at the homes of different society members. These socials are very entertaining and bring about closer acquaintance among society members.

Then we have a Woman's Missionary and a Ladie's Aid Society. Too much cannot be said of their real worth, of their faithful work and sincere devotion to the church they love.

It is such organizations as these and such church members as these that bind and hold the church together in Christian love and it is such churches as this that tend always toward bigger and better things, and will eventually bring about the words of that prayer, "Thy Kingdom Come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven."

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary

REV. ROWLAND M. CROSS.

By Miss D. P. CUSHING, News Editor.

By mule pack, by motorcycle, by donkey, by defunct bus, by bicycle, by auto, by train, by Pekin cart, by jinricksha, by ice sled—but why go on? All these and other modes of conveyance are used by Rev. Rowland M. Cross, of Tunghsien, North China, as he follows the long trails that lead through the mountains of Shansi and Shansi Provinces, where, with his Chinese associates, he visits the village church and rural groups.

"I can think of no other place than China where my life could count for more than it does right there in spite of the uncertainty of the situation. Anyone who can stay by the Chinese during these years will be in a position to do wonderful things," says Mr. Cross, who was for several years Foreign General Secretary of the Kung-lihui (the Congregational Church of North China) in which relationship he acted as Liaison Officer between the home base in America and the Foreign Parish. For more than 14 years he has had vital and close contact with all types of Chinese—students, pastors, farmers. "Friendliness is characteristic of the Chinese," he says.

When Mr. Cross first went out he was at Peiping, working among the students. Now he is in rural work in the Peiping area. The rural parish idea of which Dr. Kenyon L. Butterfield is the originator, has gripped the imagination of the Chinese student, says Mr. Cross.

"Our rural reconstruction program is moving forward. I am secretary of the Peiping-Tunghsien Committee which supervises 30 organized and 43 unorganized groups of Christians and 13 primary schools and is more or less directly related to a hospital and four high schools. We are constantly planning how these institutions can function most effectively in meeting community needs."

Mr. Cross speaks highly of another agency for rural uplift, interdenominational in character, called the Tunghsien Rural Service Union. Every fall this group conducts ten agricultural fairs reaching about 40,000 people. In the winter they have a two months' course for "dirt farmers" and in the spring ten day farmers' institutes in the villages.

In one of the Butterfield rural parish units a successful farmers' course was drawing to a close when the village was raided by bandit troops who went away after systematic routing of money, valuables, clothing and animals. Because the pastor of the little church and church workers were on hand to help during that frightful night and the day of terror which followed it because of persistent rumors that the bandits would return, the church now has a position of leadership which it did not have before.

Mr. Cross was born in Minnesota and is a graduate of Carleton College. He has also studied at Oberlin and Union Seminaries.

Many churches have not yet sent in their annual (Easter) offering. Every church should, and surely will take such an offering, and send it in before the end of June, when our Mission period closes. This is the sole offering asked of the churches throughout the year for Missions. Our Mission cause languishes as our missionary obligations go unpaid. Will not every church of the Convention that has not done so, take and send in the Missionary offering. This will help. Thank you.

A REAL SURPRISE.

It was a real surprise. Wednesday evening, May 23rd, just before prayer service, the people began to stop at the parsonage bringing packages of every kind and description. When they had all gotten here, there were more than one hundred of the members and friends of the pastor and wife. Well, what a surprise it was. When we began to put things away, we noted one hundred and eight pounds of sugar (a mighty good hint for pastor and wife), seven 24-lb. sacks of flour, and one 12-lb. sack. Canned fruits of all descriptions, meats, vegetables, butter, eggs, and a great variety of pantry packings that one could hardly mention. Well, long before we finished packing away, we found the pantry too small and to summarize the great piling, we have enough groceries of many kinds to last us through the rest of the year. This is one of the largest we have ever received, and I think the largest anyone must have ever had.

To our good folks at Danville—they are just the kind of people that never tire of doing for their pastor and wife—may God richly bless their labors for the Lord. May Mrs. Sorrell and I ask the prayers of the readers of THE SUN to ever bear us up before the throne of grace; that we may ever be true to the Word and the Blood and at least, in a small measure, give these dear people a portion of our lives, in return for their love and devotion to us. M. T. SORRELL.

A REAL HOME MISSIONARY WRITES.

Dear Friends:

"For ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble are called: but God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen, yea; and things which are not, to bring to naught things that are; that no flesh should glory in his presence."

Facing mighty obstacles, we missionaries of the West Tampa Mission might become depressed and discouraged if we did not often take a good look at the Great Commission. But while we are naturally in anguish to see the crowds on their way to the theater, the ball-room, the places of gambling and drinking, and only a few on their way to worship, when we are tempted to feel that we are in a losing fight against the mighty forces of evil, we repeat to one another the words of a soldier to his comrade just before a notable victory: "Come, let us go over unto the garrison of these uncircumcised; it may be the Lord will work for us; for there is no restraint to the Lord to save by many or by few."

And it is certainly a thrilling opportunity to catch new faith and enthusiasm, to be allowed to go into the places where the crowds are seated at the card tables Sunday nights after church services and give the Gospel invitation; or to stand on the street and hand out portions of the Word and answer questions in a manner to draw and hold a sympathetic congregation, or to watch the growth in spirituality of the bright, lovable boys and girls of the Church Day School and Sunday School; or to note the interest of the young married women, the young people and the children in the different clubs and other social activities, under the spiritual leadership of our earnest young lady missionary teachers. Share with us the precious memory picture of a holiday hike of our young people with a splendid prayer and testimony meeting at the resting place; then a fire and a hot breakfast and general good cheer.

Join with us in spirit in our frequent special prayer meetings and realizing humbly that we all lack wisdom and strength, feel with us the joy of the promises of our Almighty Father. Especially plan to walk with us, in faith and sympathy, as we walk from door to door with the Gospel message over this large West Tampa territory and also over the three branch districts in which we have been doing visitation work for the last few months. Pray for and expect a great harvest from the sowing of the year 1933, with twenty-seven hundred and twenty-five pastoral calls, over two hundred and forty short prayer meetings, and over two hundred and fifty short gospel addresses.

Pray for the generous trustees, burdened with the financial problems of the Mission. For the fiscal year of the Institute ending November 30, 1932, gifts were $1,520.50. For the year ending November 30, 1933, only $915.73. Total receipts for the year ending November 30, 1932, $1,819.00; for the year ending November 30, 1933, $1,102.13; tuitions and rents also being less. So repairs and improvements urgently needed were delayed and salaries severely cut. Our four young lady missionaries received for 1932, $852.00, and for 1933 only $682.00.

Noting with the Treasurer the severe falling off in gifts for the financial support of the Mission during the past year, and the noble purpose of the young lady missionaries to go on cheerfully, though receiving such allowances, we hope that you will pray for many to share their heroism with sacrificial gifts either large or small.

Thanking God for you, true friends,

Faithfully yours,

CARL H. CORWIN, Mis. Pastor.

YU YING TAKES THE AIR.

"This is Station X H P A"—a new voice speaks from Yu Ying Boys' School, Peiping, China. Month after month enthusiastic radio fans at the school worked to build and equip a broadcasting station. Two of the chief radio operators at the American Embassy helped them. Then they got their Government registration and are now "on the air" three evenings a week alternating with Station L U H O at Jefferson Academy, Tunghsien. "Think what it means if most of our country churches can be equipped with receiving sets," says Rev. Earle H. Ballou. Already Jefferson Academy boys have made some receiving sets and placed them in communities where not a newspaper or other organ of information reaches.

And in addition to this we learn that every day, eight hours a day, a Christian program, mostly in Chinese, is being broadcast from a Christian station in Shanghai made possible by a group of business and professional men, Chinese and foreigners, who have been meeting together for spiritual fellowship. Responsible Chinese business men are underwriting the running expenses. At present the Station can reach effectively a radius taking in Shanghai, Hangchow, Ningpo and Foochow but it hopes to secure greater power and be able to cover all China. It is estimated that there are about 200,000 receiving sets in Shanghai and suburbs. The Religious Education Committee of the National Christian Council offers a half hour daily on character building for children. Groups of doctors give simple health talks. Editors speak on "World Trends". Sermons, music, home improvement chats and family prayers each morning make up the program. Letters come in from both Christians and non-Christians thanking the station for the sermons and family prayers.

"Like a stone falling down from above and crushing us" is the way the Zulu church fathers expressed their reaction when Inanda Seminary was threatened with closure because of the cuts. Inanda Seminary, said they, "is the great symbol of the American Board in South Africa for the enlightenment of the Bantu women." Their letter to the Mission pleading for Inanda struggled to express their heart break. "May the Lord touch the hearts of many men and women who love the progress of the dark race in Africa," they prayed.

It would take an immense river to water all the world; yet that is what the Bible does. It is the river of God that waters the whole earth.

DEATH OF REV. JAMES O'KELLY.

BEING AN EXTRACT FROM A LETTER FROM THE REV. JOHN P. LEMAY, DATED FEB. 1827.

(Editorial Note.—By the courtesy of Rev. J. F. Apple, Elon College, N. C., there has been placed in our hands a volume of 197 pages. The author of this volume was none other than the Rev. James O'Kelly, his publisher being Dennis Hearrt, printer, 1829, Hillsboro, N. C., "reprinted at the request of the friends of the author." In addition to the "Author's Apology for Protesting Against the Methodist Episcopal Government," the volume contains also 'The Prospect Before Us. By Way of Address to the Christian Church,' by James O'Kelly. In the volume printed, at the close of the "Apology" and just prior to the part containing the "Address" is printed the following very interesting letter, dated February, 1827):

"Dear Brethren:—No doubt the greater part of you, ere this reaches you, will have heard of the death of our elder brother, James O'Kelly, but as the particulars may not have been received, I now state them for your satisfaction.

"He departed this life, in the triumphs of faith, on the evening of the 16th of October last, after a painful and lingering illness, which he bore with Christian fortitude and a perfect resignation to the will of heaven. He was, I learn from a gentleman who has been in habits of intimacy with him for many years, in the 92nd year of his age, and had been a minister of the Gospel upwards of fifty years. His conduct, from the time he embraced the religion of the cross, has ever been the most exemplary—those who knew him best, are unanimous in saying that he 'walked worthy of the high vocation wherewith he was called.'

"Not long after embracing religion, he became a Methodist traveling preacher; in which capacity he continued until December, 1793 (I believe), when he, together with many others (from conscientious motives), left the Methodist Episcopal Church.

"They then, having met in council, agreed to take the Bible as the only rule (conceiving it to be an all-sufficient one) for their faith and practice, as well as church government, at the same time owning no other name but that given the disciples first at Antioch. (See Acts 11:26.)

"From that time to the day of his death he continued in the most zealous manner to recommend the Scriptures of Divine Truth as the only and all-sufficient standard or system of church government, faith and practice, believing this to be the pure apostolic plan; in which opinion he appeared to be more and more confirmed. In a letter which he wrote to me, a few years before his death, after mentioning some particulars relative to the church, he concludes by saying, "Don't give up the ship—don't give up the ship—don't give up the ship"; and in a conversation which I held with him in the spring of 1825, he declared he was fully satisfied as to the plan he had been, and was still pursuing; for it appeared to him to be more like a revelation from heaven than otherwise—that it was purely apostolic. May God enable us to pursue it with the energy and an eye single to his glory!

"Our departed brother was a 'faithful minister of the New Testament,' and was successful in winning many precious souls to Christ; but he now rests from his labors, and while the church is left to mourn their irreparable loss, he, brighter far than the lamps of heaven, inhales the balmy airs of Paradise, beholds his glorious Maker, and sings hallelujahs to his exalted Saviour. May we tread in his footsteps! Yours, etc.

"JOHN P. LEMAY."

There is only one right attitude for the human will, and that is an attitude of absolute surrender to God.—Torrey.

GRAHAM-PROVIDENCE MEMORIAL.

We began our revival here May 6th. Rev. J. F. Morgan came to us on the 7th, and remained for ten days doing all the preaching. His messages were simple and plain, packed full of Gospel truth, delivered in a very forceful manner.

Brother Morgan was once pastor of this church and was much beloved. His return brought back pleasant associations as well as a renewed faith on the part of the entire church. He is a fine fellow to work with.

The visible results were not so great, but the spirit of the meeting was fine throughout. Many reconsecrated their lives to Christ and his cause. A number made a discovery of Christ for the first time. Five, to date, have united with the church here, some went to other churches, and a number have been received to join later. All in all it was a glorious revival. Many has been the year since we experienced a greater awakening within the church than here.

Providence has contributed in no little way to the Christian Church of the South. It seems that all the sacredness of past days filled the services, challenging those of the present to march on, and they will.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

GRADUATION.

"Standing with reluctant feet where the brook and river meet——"

—Longfellow.

As they take their graduation diplomas, millions of boys and girls throughout the world are standing with reluctant feet where the brook of of carefree youth meets the river of adult responsibility.

They face the future with varying degrees of joy and fear, actual preparation and makeshift subterfuge. To many of them, graduation is a real parting of the ways, for the protective period of youth has passed forever and a new life of adult responsibility and endeavor is beginning. Many of them know exactly what they want to do with their lives and are able to start with their chosen endeavors right away, while others have to await an opportunity to begin. To many, this is only a step to more intensified application for higher education, whether or not they have definitely decided upon their life's work. There are others, however, who haven't the slightest idea what they want to do or can do and are perhaps more muddled and bewildered than ever before in all their young lives.

What does graduation mean, anyway? From what and to what do these boys and girls actually graduate? Does one ever really graduate in this life?

Yes, every one of them actually graduates from some prescribed course of study at a specified time after having acquired (presumably) a sufficient education for assuming adult responsibility. Therefore, graduation really is an epoch to be anticipated and celebrated for it marks the turning point in life, reward for past efforts and commencement of future endeavor.

Yet, no one ever really graduates in this life for life itself is a school of continuous learning, growing and improving, if one truly lives. We never reach perfection or attain one-thousandth part of the development of which we are capable by our divine origin and birthright.

Let's compare ourselves with a diamond. It is cut and polished on every side so that its gorgeous glow radiates from every angle. Though the cutting is different on top and bottom, the polishing is the same all over. Yet the glow comes from the core—though it could never send out such radiation without expert cutting and perfect polishing. We, too, have different sides to our natures, different characteristics and capacities—which are aspects of our innermost selves, our very cores, our souls. They, too, need cutting and polishing like the diamond, the developing process of education, to allow them to express for us and radiate the light and beauty of our souls.

But the diamond is inanimate and one good cutting and polishing lasts a lifetime. Human nature is more marvelous, more potent, with bottomless depths that are seldom if ever sounded. Consequently the developing process of education must go on as long as life lasts, from one graduation to another, if we want to put the most of ourselves into life and to reap the most we can from life.

God gave us a beautiful world in which to live, full of joyous opportunity. So he gave us wisdom to distinguish right from wrong and judgment to decide which course to take. So let us live and learn, work and achieve, play and enjoy so that we may develop until we glow like the beautiful diamond from the very core of our beings.

Don't let graduation and its responsibilities take away the flexibility of youth and the ability to expand with age and absorb with opportunities. Age should increase one's wisdom, understanding and capacity for appreciation and enjoyment. The thrills of maturity are deeper, subtler and more intense than the thrills of youth, though quieter and less ostentatious. Life does not stop with graduation—it is only the starting point.

This is a thought to take with you—boys and girls who are graduating—and boys and girls who think they have already graduated. It is never too late to start—to pick up and carry on. Though the diamond was buried a million years in the mountainside, it can still be cut and polished to glow with beauty. Though you have wasted the years in trifling irresponsibility or misdirected endeavor, you, too, can still wake up and develop until the core of your being radiates a beauty more precious and valuable than any diamond.

SALLY HARBAUGH.

YOUTH FELLOWSHIP MEETINGS.

Youth Fellowships are sending out their calls for the annual meetings. Eager youth will respond to this call to climb the Mount of Vision and to share in building a New World.

The North Carolina and Virginia Fellowships will be in session Thursday evening, June 21, at Berea Church. The Sunday School and Christian Convention gives the young people the whole evening. Rev. J. Everett Neese is president of this group and I feel sure that he will have ready a good program.

Eastern Virginia youth meet again this year at Glenlake, between Suffolk and Holland. This is a lonely spot just on the south of the highway. There is a tabernacle amidst the trees and by the side of a lake. The date is July 10. The full program will soon appear on this page. All who have a young heart and who live near enough to attend should remember this date, and be present to hear and to share with these young people as they discuss what they mean by a new person, home, Church, community, nation, and world, and how they hope to get them.

The Valley of Virginia Fellowship will meet with the Annual Conference in August. Watch this page for further announcements about it.

WIN A LOVING CUP.

Those who have attended the Elon School of Leadership Training are delighted to testify as to the value of the school. But words are cheap. It costs money to buy silver.

One who has attended several sessions of the school and who cannot arrange the time to go this year is offering to give a silver loving cup to the Church sending the largest delegation in proportion to the size of the church. The following paragraph recently sent to Key Workers in Eastern Virginia explains it:

"I am very happy to tell you that a friend of Elon School of Leadership Training is offering a silver loving cup to the church that sends the most young people to Elcn Summer School of Leadership Training, July 23-29, 1934- on a percentage basis. The smaller churches will have just as good chance to win this cup as the larger churches. For instance—if Bethlehem church has a membership of three hundred and sends five young people and Suffolk with a membership of one thousand sends eight, then Bethlehem will win the cup."

This shows something of how some young people feel about the Sunday School. Will you be there on July 23-30 and help your church win the cup? Why not?

THE MIND OF CHRIST ON FEAR AND WORRY

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC, JUNE 24, 1934.

(Matt. 6:31-34.)

Worship Service:

Theme: "The Mind of Christ on Fear and Worry."

Instrumental Prelude: "Faint not nor fear; His arm is near."

Call to Worship:

"Carry on! Carry on!
Fight the good fight and true;
Believe in your mission, greet life with a cheer,
There's big work to do and that's why you are here!

Carry on! Carry on!
Let the world be the better for you;
And at last when you die, let this be your cry, Carry on, my soul! Carry on!"

Robert A. Service.

Hymn:

"Father hear the prayer we offer,
Not for ease that prayer shall be;
But for strength that we may ever
Live our lives courageously."

Scripture: Matt. 15:22-32.

Prayer: By a young person.

Hymn: "We March, We March on to Victory."
Speech and Discussion: "The Conquering Life"

Hymnic Benediction:

"I am trusting Thee, Lord Jesus.
At Thy feet I bow;
For Thy grace and tender mercy,
Trusting now."

Other suggested hymns:

"O Master, Let Me Walk With Thee."
"Just As I Am Thine Own To Be."
"O Love That Will Not Let Me Go."

Jesus had a secret which gave him the power to rise above the toil and care, fear and worry. This meeting is a quest for that secret which we may seek to understand and apply to our lives. Make the whole meeting one which will give new courage to the fearful, new hope to those who have been attacked by worry. Your discussion and worship and fellowship in this meeting may be just what someone needs just now.

The purpose of a meeting like this one is to bring the thoughts of all the members of the group together, and so help each individual to have a new and larger idea or attitude toward life, and some idea of just how to strengthen his own weakness and attain some new power for everyday triumphant living. How well Jesus knew men! "Fear not," "Be not afraid," "Be not anxious"—these frequent exclamations in themselves reveal how well he knew human nature with its tendency to miss the highest while fretting about things which cannot be helped. Do all people fear something? Is it possible, or desirable to put all fear out of one's life? What is the function of fear? What fears would Jesus have banished?

How would Jesus define worry? Why do people worry? (One usually denies that he worries, but can see the symptoms readily in another!) When does thoughtful planning for the future become worry? Does worry accomplish anything?

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

THE RISEN LORD AND THE GREAT COMMISSION.

LESSON XII—JUNE 17, 1934.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Go ye, therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father, and the Son, and of the Holy Spirit; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you! and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."—Matt. 28:19, 20.

The Fact of the Resurrection.

One of the most amazing things in history is the change which took place in the disciples between what we call Good Friday and Easter Sunday. On Friday they were depressed, discouraged, defeated, in despair. Their dreams had been shattered and their hopes had been crushed. They had believed that the One with whom they had been associated was God's Son, the Christ, but he had been put to death on the Cross, the symbol of shame and disgrace. It evidently was all a ghastly mistake. He evidently had deliberately deceived them or he himself had been deceived. They were crushed. When that little group took from the Cross the bruised body of their Master and put it in the tomb, they buried also the hopes of the disciples. The light of their lives had gone out.

But on Easter morning, and in the days immediately thereafter—how different things were! the disciples believed that Jesus had risen from the dead, triumphant. They came out of their hiding places and began to talk about experiences that were so real that no one could doubt their validity. There was a note of certainty and assurance in their voices, and a finality about their testimony that could not be denied. And stranger still, their confidence and their enthusiasm waxed, rather than waned, as the days came and went. These men who had given up the hope that their Master was the Messiah now began to preach that the Man who had been put to death on the Cross actually was God's Messiah. What had happened to account for this amazing change, this apparently inexplicable transformation?

There is but one answer that fits the facts—the disciples believed that Jesus had risen from the dead, that he was alive again, alive in a very real and very convincing sense. They knew that he was alive because they had seen him, because he had talked with them, because they had had fellowship with him. And it was a continuing fellowship. Wherever they went he was there. Whatever they undertook in his name they were conscious of his presence. The central theme of their message was that Christ had died and was alive again. The faith that conquered the world was faith in the risen Christ. The solid, stubborn fact on which Christianity rests is that the Man who was put dead, actually dead, into the tomb on Friday evening, came forth alive on Sunday morning. Christianity stands or falls on this fact. And the history of Christianity is abundant evidence that the resurrection of Jesus Christ is a fact, a historical fact as much as any fact can possibly be.

The How of the Resurrection.

To say that Christ rose from the dead is one thing. To tell how he rose from the dead is quite another thing. As a matter of fact no one knows. We do not know what took place in the tomb. We do not know the exact nature of Christ's body after it came from the tomb. There is a great deal of mystery about it all, and there will always be a great deal of mystery about it. With our present knowledge we cannot understand how any kind of body as we know it could pass through locked doors, and yet at the same time partake of food when in the same form. We cannot understand how a person could appear and disappear at will. There are many things that we cannot understand about the resurrection. But we can believe the fact even though we cannot explain the process. Furthermore the final evidence of the resurrection is not simply a historical account; it is a personal experience. Men through the succeeding centuries have believed that Christ rose from the dead because they have had fellowship with the risen Christ. Paul did not attempt to give the "how" of the resurrection, but his whole Gospel is based on the fact of the resurrection.

The Meaning of the Resurrection.

The resurrection has practical significance. It vindicated the words of Jesus. He predicted that he would rise from the dead. He kept his word. If he could keep it here, we can trust him to keep it everywhere. It gave new significance to immortality. Whatever else the future life may be, it is conscious, personal existence, and continuing fellowship with Christ. It gave a new hope to men. Because Christ lives we too shall live. We have the Master's word for that. It put God's last stamp of approval on Jesus as the Christ.

The Great Commission.

The key-word of the Great Commission is the word "therefore." Jesus had just said, "All power, or authority, is given unto me in heaven and in earth." "Because this is true," says Jesus, "Go and make disciples, or make Christians as one version gives it, of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit. Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." Here we have some great truths. Those who look upon missions as

YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

Did you ever notice that you rarely worry when you are busy? Try this recipe. When next you see a big wave of worry coming right at you say, "I am trying to follow my Father's will; therefore, whatever happens is His will."

BUT GOD

I know not, but God knows;
Oh, blessed rest from fear!
All my unfolding days
To Him are plain and clear.
Each anxious, puzzled "why?"
From doubt or dread that grows,
Finds answer in this thought:
I know not, but God knows.

I cannot, but God can:
Oh, balm for all my care!
The burden that I drop
His hand will lift and bear.
Though eagle pinions tire,—
I walk where once I ran,—
This is my strength, to know
I cannot, but He can.

I see not, but God sees:
Oh, all-sufficient light!
My dark and hidden way
To Him is always bright.
My strained and peering eyes
May close in restful ease,
And I in peace may sleep;
I see not, but He sees.

MONDAY.

"CHRIST AS A LIGHT."

"The Lord shall be unto thee an everlasting light, and thy God thy glory."—Jno. 60:19.

"I am the light of the world."—Jno. 6:12.

"He that followeth me shall have the light of life."—Jno. 9:5.

How is Christ light? It has been said that, "The light of the sun is not in you, but out of you, and yet you can see everything by it, if you will open your eyes." That thought certainly gives us a lot of satisfaction when to know that as truth gives light, so an understanding of Christ and God shall come to us, if we will open our lives to the light of his teachings and his life. It is in the same way the Holy Spirit comes and teaches us, "bringing all things to your remembrance," says Christ.

On the contrary, we experience intense darkness and misery when pride and selfishness and sin enter into our lives, for they separate us from God and set a seal over our spiritual eyes so that we cannot see.

Prayer—O God, grant unto us this day a revelation of thyself and be thou in our life the sun ray of righteousness, lighting our pathway. We ask it through Jesus Christ, thy Son, our Saviour and our Guide.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"GOD'S COMFORT."

"As one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort you."—Isa. 66:13.

The glorious God will be served in humble sincerity. That service may call for as many hardships as the children of Israel experienced on their journey from Egypt to Caanan. But God met their emergencies, and with a comfort that set them at peace and made them rejoice. It is thus he will be unto us, our help and our consolation.

Hardships are unavoidable. In fact, they are necessary for rugged endurance. It is through Christ we overcome and find in him renewed strength and vigor to go on ready for the oncoming of new trials.

Our text says his comfort is like that of a mother's. Are more words needed to make the figure clear? Who has not known the blessedness of a mother's comfort, when it has dried away our tears, made us forget pain, and shed light and life again into our lives? So the Eternal God is set forth as the Comforter of those who love and obey him.

Through all earthly vicissitudes he has been our light and salvation, illuminating our gloom, turning mourning into joy, healing our smarts, dispersing pain, and sweetening every hidden spring of bitterness and distress. Beneath his skies we breathe the air of a newly created world every day.

Prayer—O Lord, our God, our troubles threaten our faith. In our human limitations it is often difficult to see how we shall overcome them. But all things are possible to thee. Put forth thy hand upon the source of our heart-aches and tears and seal them up forever; and give us the spiritual vision to see the silver lining to every cloud. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"NO DEATH."

"If a man keep my sayings, he shall never see death."—Jno. 8:51.

What is death? Christ's view of death is that it is a penalty for sin to the sinner and to the Christian it is a new birth of the soul into the land of everlasting life, in a sense, the gate of heaven. Timothy says, "Our Saviour abolished death, and brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel."

"To die is gain," said Paul. And this is not merely the expression of an enthusiastic apostle, but it is the overwhelming experience of hundreds of thousands, from the martyrs to the present time.

More than this, and in a very much higher sense, death is abolished every day by the quickening of life in living things. Christ in the life awakens soul-consciousness, and raises one from insensibility and corruption to pure living, and kindles in one a new hope and joy of life. In this we realize that everlasting life is a living thing now as well as hereafter. When light comes out of darkness; when simplicity comes out of confusion; righteousness out of sin; holiness out of godliness, we experience a path that leads straight through to God. The soul so blessed may find death on either side and as black as night, yet it does not affect the light that is within him through Jesus Christ.

Prayer—Dear Father, Giver of all good gifts, we realize that we are moving daily between the glory of heaven and the legions of Satan, and that truly "there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved," but the great name of Jesus. Make us that gift this day, or we perish. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"A GOOD NAME."

"A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches."—Psalm 22:1.

"What's in a name?" Nothing in the name itself save the influence of the spoken word. But when "name" refers to character, there is a lot to it.

Life is a picture gallery of persons. Yours is one of them. What is it like? As we walk along looking at each other, we see honesty, thriftiness, a friend, a cad, a villain, a "white rat," a hypocrite, sunshine, a "crepe hanger"

We pause and think over the things that these characters suggest, and in the last analysis of each we decide that the "greatest compensation in life is satisfaction of work well done and a contented mind." As we reflect the latter end of those who have come to the evening time of life with a bounty of ill-gotten wealth, and the total loss of peace, we must believe God that a good name is better than all wealth.

Prayer—Our Father, fill us with thy spirit, and wealth shall have no charm over us, but a usefulness for thy glory. In Christ's name, we ask it.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"ENDURANCE AND SALVATION."

"He that endureth to the end shall be saved."—Matt. 24:13.

The word "endurance" is a much used word in the Bible. It is used in connection with hard times, trials and temptation. It is often used in the sense of sticking to the job of Christian service without faltering. Paul likens it unto running a race and enduring until the runner breaks through the lines. He who cannot go through cannot win the reward. The most blessed fact about Christian endurance is that when we are weak, Christ will make us strong. It only takes renunciation of sin, consecration of soul, and sticking to it, and all are winners in him.

All high and commanding qualities of the soul come from this invisible source. In it is the highest type of manhood and the might of the almighty will; and when it is filled with "the spirit," his "grace is sufficient for thee" and the power is perfected in weakness.

I peered within and saw a world of sin;
Upward and saw a world of righteousness,
Downward, and saw darkness and flame begin,
Which no man can express.
I got me up, I got me up to flee,
From face of darkness and devouring flame
And fled I had, but guile is leading me
With dust of death and shame.
Yet still the light of righteousness becomes pure,
Beams to me from the world of far-off day;
Lord, who hast called them happy who endure,
Lord, Make me such as they.—Amen.
—Rossetti.

SATURDAY.

LOST DREAMS.

"The thing is gone from me."—Read Daniel 2:1-13.

Nebuchadnezzar had lost his dream, and all his wise men could not find it again for him. Only the Spirit of the Lord, acting through his prophet Daniel, was able to restore the dream that was his.

Who has not had a dream? Who, indeed, has not lost many dreams? And no magician or enchanter or sorcerer can hunt through the trackless void and find the lost dreams and bring them back again. But nothing is gone from us that is worth retaining, for Daniel is not gone from us, the Spirit of Christ is not gone from us, and he can restore whatever we in our senses really want restored, and can give it back to us a thousand times beautified and enriched.

Prayer—Rebuilder of dreams, O thou Spirit ineffable, we come to thee for all we have lost. Give us, we pray thee, whatever is lovely and valuable in thine own best time.—Amen.

—AMOS R. WELLS.

SUNDAY.

BREATHING AWAY ICE.

"He sendeth out his word, and melteth them."—Read Psalm 147:12-20.

One of the worst perils of the airman is the ice that collects on the wings of his plane, clogging them and weighing them down. Now an ingenious inventor has contrived rubber edges for the wings and casing for the struts through which air is driven by an air-pump so that they breathe somewhat like human lungs, and the ice melts away before their impulsion.

Something of the sort is needed by the wings of the soul. It is very easy for ice to collect upon them—icy indifference, frosty infidelity, hoary doubts, the congealed fog of many sins. To dispel it all, we need the breath of God's Holy Spirit, warm, quick, and vital. Before it the hindering ice vanishes, and we can soar to the very seventh heaven.

Prayer—Breathe on us, breath of God! Drive away all hindrances. Conquer all perils.—Amen.

THE GREAT RESTORER.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"He restoreth my soul."—Psalm 23:3.

So says the psalmist, and the human race for countless ages has answered Amen. "He restoreth my soul." We have gone from it in every direction, but back to it we have invariably come. Around its fundamental truth the books of ages have been written, and about it the lasting philosophies of life have been builded. It is the cry of a consecration to God, which the world will never forget. "He restoreth my soul." You and I have found it true. Out of a changing, and achieving, disappointing, and daring program, weary and tired, we have often come to God feeling empty and undone and waiting upon him we have come at last to say: "He restoreth my soul." In some humble church, or some beautiful cathedral; in some simple prayer service, or some exalted hour of public worship, we have lost ourselves in the promises of God and said with the Psalmist, "He restoreth my soul."

Not in just the same way have the young people sensed this re-building of their spiritual energies, but they too have felt it. Yesterday their youthful ambitions were lagging, but today they have been inspired by sweet music in the church, determination to be worth-while in the world or the gentle prayer of a loving mother, and their runs at high tide again. Yesterday they have said, "What is the use?" but today, inspired by some great address, and a greater life, they have been privileged to see things whole and clear and have felt the force of the words of this text.

They tell us how one of our great presidents used to feel tired and weary at the end of a long, hard day; and how he used to feel so little, and unable to attack the great problems of state; and then how he used to call a certain old bishop by telephone and ask him to meet him in a quiet room, read the Bible, talk with him about its truths, and then pray. The president was learning an eternal truth: "He restoreth my soul."

We have met here today, on the holy Sabbath, in this divinely appointed place and time, and in keeping with a request of our Lord Jesus Christ, to sit about this table and partake of this bread and wine, symbolizing his broken body and spilt blood, in memory of him. May we so attend that we may go saying: "He restoreth my soul." As a help thereto let us meditate a moment on this text.

I. Empty. What a word! How often the Book uses it! How often is it in life! Full of emptiness, is one paradoxical way of expressing it. And when we see what seems to satisfy some lives we join with Nahum, the prophet, in saying, "The emptiers have emptied them out!" They are satisfied with such froth. Our text suggests an emptiness of soul. It suggests that souls may be large, or little; full or empty; courageous, or cowardly. "He restoreth my soul," is an admission that the stock in my soul was running low, it needed rebuilding.

There is a possibility of a great word-study in this text. I have made some excursions into its original meaning. I have gone back to the Hebrew and made a few comparisons seeking its different shades. Let me call your attention to a few of them: I am talking about the Hebrew word, nepshesh, the word translated "soul" here.

It is also translated "breath." So we might say, "Having run until we are out of breath, he gives me my second wind." In Isaiah 3:20 it is translated "perfume-boxes"—"the bonnets, and the ornaments of the legs, and the head-bands, and the perfume boxes (in the margin of the authorized version, "the houses of the soul"). Here is being expressed in a very ancient language that fragrance of life and character and personality which is felt when a real saint of God comes into one's presence. "He restoreth the fragrance of my character." We smile when we first read the line "he restoreth my perfume-boxes," but we may as well save our smiles for it is everyday language in just a little different form: "He has a sweet spirit," "She is a sweet woman," or "That is a sweet child." And so we may read, "He restoreth the divine fragrance of my character." The word is used in this sense in Prov. 27:9, "Ointment and perfume rejoice the heart; so doth the sweetness of man's friend by hearty counsel."

Do you wish a lovely personality? Abide the counsel of this text. It is something to think of God wishing us to come into full share of friends, and friendships; and to know that when we are losing the ability to make and hold them we may go to God as the great Restorer of that grace. Phrasing it thus one might say: "He restoreth my sweetness," and what a blessing for our friends that would be!

Has somebody hurt your feelings? I have heard people say, "My feelings have been wounded. Do you know that this word "soul" has been translated "feelings." "Thou shalt not oppress a stranger: for ye know the feeling of a stranger, seeing ye were strangers in the land of Egypt." (Ex. 23:9.) In other words we may say: "He healeth up the broken-hearted," "He restoreth my feelings!"

Thus I have cited you some of the most striking of the translations of nepshesh, which may also be translated "breathing-body," "life," "soul," "person," "self," "spirit." And by the same rule these are the things of which one may be emptied.

We may be empty of many things: money, health, and worldly pleasures, but to be empty of soul, of self-respect, of fragrance of noble character, or of good spirit, or the second spiritual wind in days of doubt and fear, is to be empty indeed. Back to God for re-filling is the cry of this text. Each to the prayer closet, back to the Old Book, back to the church, and song, and Christian service. There is nothing like it for the restoration of the soul!

II. Filled. I might have used the word "fed" quite as well. Our text: "He restoreth my soul" is only in the Hebrew Bible—Napheshi yishobeb is my transliteration. It means, "My soul he restoreth." And the verb is "shub" and may be translated, "to turn back," "to feed again," "to consider," "to renew," "to restore" or "to refresh." And so you see what possible shades of meaning there are in the text. "He feeds again my soul," "He renews my personality," "He refreshes myself," "He considers my life."

God fills my soul, is the way my mother used to put it. And today as we gather about this table let us ask ourselves, What fills our souls? What takes our time? What takes our talents? What absorbs ourselves, our personalities, our characters—the fragrance of our lives? What is it? Have we meat to eat that the world knows not of? Have we a source to which we may consciously go? Is our strength renewed like the eagles?

Filled? With sin, or God? With self, or the spirit of serving others? Or are we filled with the "fullness of him that filleth all in all?" As we wait here with the Spirit of our Lord Christ, let us ask God to cleanse us from all unrighteousness, and fill us with his Spirit. That having eaten of the bread, and supped of the wine we may go out in the Spirit of Jesus to so live and serve as he would have us do.

And then when the empty times befall us we shall say again, and again: "He restoreth my soul." May we stand and repeat the twenty-third Psalm.

Christian Orphanage

Dear friends:

The Superintendent of the Christian Orphanage offered as a prize the first of the year a Stetson hat to the president of the Conference that is the nearest one hundred per cent in Sunday School monthly offerings during the year 1934. If the Sunday Schools would like to see the president of their Conference get this nice present at the close of the year, get busy and get on the roll of monthly contributors. If you want to make up for the months you have missed send it in and we will be glad to give you credit for the back months.

The first of June the Conferences stood in line as follows:

- Valley Virginia Conference: 15 giving, 8 not giving;
- Eastern Virginia Conference: 25 giving, 18 not giving;
- North Carolina and Virginia Conference: 25 giving, 13 not giving;
- Western North Carolina Conference: 30 giving, 6 not giving;
- Eastern North Carolina Conference: 29 giving, 18 not giving;
- Alabama Conference: 9 giving, 13 not giving;
- Georgia and Alabama Conference: 5 giving, 5 not giving.

Up to June the first, the Western North Carolina stands as the banner Conference with 83 per cent of her churches in the list of contributors. If your Sunday School is not making a monthly offering and you read this letter won't you see to it yourself that it begins in the month of June to make a monthly offering. Do you know that the little children here are dependent on you for your part to feed and clothe them. How could a General win a battle if nearly half of his men forsook him after the battle was on and he was depending on them to the utmost.

How can the orphanage care for its children if your Sunday School does not do its part when we are depending on you?

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

an elective, miss the point of Jesus' words. They are not a pious hope or a sentimental wish; they are a command, a command backed by all authority. Those who say that we ought not to take our religion to other folks cannot read the English language, for Jesus says that his message is to be carried to all nations. We are to baptize them into the name of, that is the character of, for name stands for person or character. We are not to teach them intellectually in the sense of simply imparting knowledge, we are to teach them to observe, to do, that is to live, the things that Jesus has commanded us, that is his way of life. And if, and when we undertake this his work, we have the promise of his presence and of his power.

We should not forget the devotional books, The scul must be fed, or it will wither and die.

A Story for the Children

BOBBY HAS FIRESIDE VISITORS.

It was certainly very strange. Bobbie had never heard sounds like that coming from the bookcase before.

"Wonder what it is," he said to himself.

He had cuddled down in the big armchair to read the new book Aunt Molly had given him at Christmas. But outside the snow was falling and it soon began to grow dark. Then the flames that had leaped up the chimney from the logs in the grate died down. Bobbie could no longer see to read, but the armchair was cosy and soon his eyes began to close and his head to nod. Then he heard the sound.

"Wonder what it can be," he said, sitting up and peering at the shadows in the corner where the bookcase stood.

He was not kept in doubt. For just then there appeared over the books on the top shelf three—well, Bobbie couldn't see them well enough to know what to call them until they came right down and across the floor to the hearthrug in front of him. Here there was enough light to show him that they were all very thin and that two of them stood hand in hand.

"Wonder where I've seen you before," he said musingly as he looked at the first which seemed vaguely familiar. Then he remembered.

"Why," he cried, "I know what you are; you are a compass needle. But what are you doing here?"

"Ah," the compass needle replied pensively, "there is a story behind that."

"Oh, do tell me," pleaded Bobbie.

"Well," said the needle, "I belong to the compass of a great ship; but the captain has gone away on a long voyage and forgotten to bring me with him."

"Forgotten you," exclaimed Bobbie. "Why, however does he expect to find his way safely across the sea without you? I think he is a very foolish captain."

The needle sighed. "Yes, very foolish," it said.

During this time the other two had been in the shadow, but just now a chance gleam from the fire enabled Bobbie to see them, and he cried, "You are a pair of watch hands, aren't you? But where is the watch? Have you a story, too?"

"Yes," they replied sadly, "we have. We belong to the watch of a gentleman who has been invited by the King to visit him in the palace at a certain time today and receive a great gift. He has gone to the palace, but he has forgotten about us."

Bobbie looked into the fire and thought to himself that if he got an invitation like that, he wouldn't risk being late as that man had done. He was just going to say this to the watch hands when, looking down, he found that they had disappeared!

Bobbie sat up and rubbed his eyes just as Mother came into the room. "Oh, Mother," he cried, "I've had such a funny dream." And when Mother had put more logs on the fire and stirred it into a blaze, Bobbie nestled down beside her in the big armchair, and told her all about his fire-side visitors who had come so mysteriously from behind the books on the top shelf. "Do you think," he added as another thought struck him, "do you think, Mother, they might be there now if I looked? Oh, Mother, may I look, please?"

Mother just smiled; but Bobbie pleaded so insistently that at last the stool was put on the high chair, and while Mother held it, Bobbie climbed up and with eager fingers felt behind the books.

"Well, dear?" asked Mother.
 "I can't feel—oh—wait—yes, I've got something—wait—why, Mother it's my Bible and I didn't know where he had got to!"

A few minutes later as they sat in the fire-light and Mother was turning over the pages of Bobbie's lost Bible, she said quietly, "Bobbie, do you know, I think I have discovered where your visitors are."

"Oh," exclaimed Bobbie, "do tell me."

Mother pointed to a verse, "Read that," she said.

"I am the Way," read Bobbie, looking rather puzzled.

"Do you remember the compass needle's story of a captain who expected to sail across the sea safely without a needle to point the way? Well, dear, some try to reach the glory land like that."

There was silence for a moment; then Bobbie said, "You mean, people who don't read the Bible?"

"Yes," answered Mother, "how can they know the way without reading their Bible? But look, here are the watch hands." And turning over several pages, she pointed to some words.

"Now is the—time," Bobbie read; and as he said the words he remembered the story of the King who promised a gift to the gentleman if he came at a certain time. "I expect the King is Jesus; but what is the gift?" he asked.

"Look!" and Mother pointed to the next words.

"Now is the day of salvation," read Bobbie.

"Do you see that both hands are pointing the same way?" Mother asked. Bobbie looked again.

"Yes, Mother," he answered thoughtfully, "they are."—H. T. L. in The Irish Baptist.

MARRIAGES

LOKER-McDANIEL.

On April 28, 1934, there appeared at my door Mr. Otis W. Loker and Miss Frances V. McDaniel, desiring to be married. It was my pleasure to take them in and comply with their request.

The groom is from the neighborhood of our Bethel Church, and the bride from near McGaheysville, Va. Both are popular young people.

A. W. ANDES.

HILLIARD-NORTHCUTT.

Mrs. Lydia Barbee Northcutt became the bride of Mr. J. F. Hilliard on May 26th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs.

Northcutt, Cary, N. C., the writer officiating.

The bride was attractively attired in dark blue triple crepe with matching accessories.

The couple left immediately for an extended trip in the western part of the State.

Their many friends wish for them much happiness and success.

H. C. HILLIARD.

MOORE-BROWN.

Saturday, June 2nd, the writer united in marriage, Mr. Homer V. Moore and Miss Leona Brown, of Altamahaw, N. C. Only a few close relatives witnessed the ceremony.

The groom is the son of the late Vance Moore, who was a prominent member as well as a deacon of Bethlehem Christian Church, and a fine young man employed by the Burlington Mills. The bride is the oldest daughter of Mr. G. E. Brown, who is also a deacon in the above mentioned church. The young couple are well thought of and stand high amid their circle of acquaintances. They will make their home in Burlington. May long life and happiness be their portion.

G. C. CRUTCHFIELD.

OBITUARIES

JENKINS.

William Henry Jenkins was born November 16, 1860, and departed this life May 4, 1934, at the age of 73 years, 5 months and 18 days. He was a member of the Newport Christian Church, having united there in 1891. Surviving are one son and one daughter, and thirteen grandchildren.

Funeral services were held at the Brick Lutheran Church, May 6, 1934.

A. W. ANDES.

HELBERT.

Mrs. Tracy Lee Helbert was born May 29, 1885, and died June 9, 1934, at the age of 49 years, and 5 days. Her untimely death came as a result of an automobile accident.

The deceased was a member of our Bethlehem Church and was held in high esteem by a host of friends.

Surviving are her husband, Wm. D. Helbert, and her mother, six brothers and one sister.

Funeral services were held on June 5, 1934, from Linville Creek Church of the Brethren Church. The writer was assisted in the services by Dr. M. L. Weekley.

A. W. ANDES.

WARREN.

Mrs. Nannie Warren passed from earthly life May 15, 1934, after a few days of critical illness. In her going, Bethlehem Church (Alamance County, N. C.), and the Ladies' Aid Society has lost a faithful and most beloved member. We realize that we are bereft indeed, for she was a loyal Christian a loving mother and a faithful friend, ever ready to lend a hand. Our loss is her gain, however, for we feel that she is peacefully resting in the sunlight of God's eternal love. That we extend our sympathy to the family in their hour of bereavement and sorrow.

Be it resolved:

That while we miss her, we will not mourn her absence, but rather strive to walk in the path she loved so much, and look forward to a happy reunion in heaven. That we send a copy of these resolutions to the family and a copy to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

Making Our Homes Christian.—

Whatever else we shall leave them, these boys and girls of our homes have the right to a fair chance in life. And this chance is not given except they go out from homes with the help of Christian influences that will abide. Some of us who are parents have toiled and have made sacrifices that our children might have equipment for life's responsibilities, the equipment of the schools and the added help of the money we would leave them. And with some of us, the money has vanished. Fortunate the father and mother who have yet the chance, with the children still a part of the family circle, to build again, and to build for a future more secure for the children God has given. They will need for the days ahead the strength and support of a real faith.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

Progress of the Anti-Lynching Bill.—

While the Costigan-Wagner anti-lynching bill is ready for discussion by the Senate its passage at this session of Congress is far from certain. Recent developments are as follows: Charles H. Tuttle of New York has prepared a remarkable brief on the constitutionality of the bill; the Senate Judiciary Committee approved the bill after amending it to cover only lynchings of persons taken from the custody of peace officers and in some other respects. The sponsors hope that the clauses covering other types of lynching may be reinstated during the discussion on the floor of the Senate, where they will try to bring it before Congress adjourns; the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has sent out a widespread request to all friends of the measure to write or telegraph their Senators and President Roosevelt urging their influence and support.—The Christian Evangelist.

"Must Pray for Peace".—

A warning that this nation must be wise in the road it chooses toward peace was sounded by Richard M. Tobin, former United States Minister to Holland, at the recent conference here of the Catholic Association for International Peace. Mr. Tobin, now president of the Hibernia Bank of San Francisco, is an outstanding Catholic layman and a leading worker for international peace. "We must by all means pray for peace," he said, "and join in every prudent movement toward peace and disarmament and the substitution for war of judicial methods of settling national disputes. But let us make this advance prudently, wisely and securely, for it is a pathway full of danger and pitfalls. Should we, under some impulse of sentiment, destroy the means of protecting our country, we may cause unutterable misfortune to future generations of Americans and lead to the destruction of our nation and those institutions of self-government which have accomplished so much for the American people."—Exchange.

Counterfeit Christianity.—

What the world needs today is a Christianity not too dainty for use, but one that can endure the strain of open conflict and the subtly undermining forces of the unregenerate world. In this rough-and-tumble world only the genuine article can endure. We need dead-in-earnest Christians, who radiate helpful and uplifting influences. We need Christians who hold fast their integrity in the keen conflicts of business, who stand for unbending righteousness in civil affairs, and who uphold the self-denying of the cause of Christ. Of course, we are not setting the proclamation of the gospel and Christian living over against each other, but we are declaring that the world needs a demonstration of the power of Christianity in transforming and inspiring human lives. It is very unfortunate that much professed Christianity is counterfeit Christianity. Our churches are filled with people who do not manifest in their lives the spirit or the principles of our religion. It is hard for churches thus hampered, to make headway.—The Watchman-Examiner.

The End of the Epoch.—

There is a fateful quality to the year 1934. We meet in Oberlin not at the end of a depression but at the end of an epoch. The epoch began politically with the march of Napoleon to Moscow; economically with the perfection of the cotton gin. It was an epoch in which industrialism ran its giddy course and each man wrought as he pleased, making as much as he could, in any way he could; an age in which imperialism reached its dizzy heights and blatant nationalism had its grand fling. The epoch closes with the world's industrial machine bankrupt and helpless; with rival nationalisms striking out insanely against each other; with society floundering in self-created confusion. There must be a new world order—or all which passes for civilization will perish from the earth. If the churches are to survive they must serve this new order. We are going to Oberlin to ask ourselves whether we of the Congregational-Christian fellowship are equipped to serve. It is stock-taking time for us.—Advance.

Six Months of Repeal.—

Six months of repeal were said by F. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, to have provided evidence that the various control systems offer no hope for a cure of liquor evils. Repeal has failed deplorably, McBride said in a statement. "So increasingly tragic are the results," he said, "that the ignoble control experiment is tottering toward collapse." Conceding that Anti-Saloon League workers were at the last line of defense against repeal "evils," McBride urged them to redouble their efforts to thwart repeal of State and local prohibition laws. He said, "The saloon is back, with added evils, in New York, headquarters of the repeal movement, and in Chicago, where both the Republican and the Democratic parties made their most solemn declarations and platform promises that the saloon must not come back." Widespread reports of rioting and bloodshed in connection with strikes, he said, are another indication of the "regrettable" consequences of repeal. He added that recent train wrecks and fires in many instances were caused by drinking. "Here in the nation's capital an appalling record of drunken attacks, murders, suicides, crimes and misfortunes of all kinds refutes," he said, "the claim of the Crusaders that repeal would bring 'true temperance'."—Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

The Catholic Church and Fascism.—

Asserting that the Catholic Church in Canada and the United States is "showing a disposition to play with the various Fascist elements that are developing in this continent," the Catholic Record of London, Canada, warns that "it is a dangerous and unprofitable game." If the courtship now going on between Catholicism and the Fascists should blossom into any kind of marriage—even a 'marriage of convenience'—the Catholic Church in Canada is done," the Record declares. "For paradoxically, if you like, the Catholic Church thrives and grows on liberalism, not on the reactionary spirit that breeds Fascism. The church was never so feeble spiritually as when it was most narrow temporally. It was never so great spiritually as when it stuck to its spiritual functions and looked with a detached and tolerant viewpoint upon temporal affairs. During the burnings of the inquisition, the church was at its lowest moral ebb. The flood tide of its greatness came when its popes withdrew into the Vatican and held themselves aloof from earthly bickering. If the church had had any characteristic qualifications to govern temporal affairs, if it had had any economic sense, it might now have ruled the world. But its manifold and manifest failures along that line in the Middle Ages defined its perpetual function quite clearly. The Catholic Church has no part in politics, certainly not in that type of politics, certainly not in that type of politics that propounds a theory so utterly at variance with its broad, tolerant and usually progressive policies."—The Christian Evangelist.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Rev. F. Ervin Hyde, Brown Summit, N. C., was a recent visitor at Elon College, from which he graduated at the recent Commencement. Brother Hyde was on his way to preach at our Dendron, Va., church, Sunday, June 17.

Rev. J. Everett Neese and Mrs. Neese, happy groom and bride, have tokens of appreciation and esteem from Carolina and Hopedale Churches, of which Brother Neese is the beloved pastor. The former expressed loving esteem with a liberal linen shower to Mrs. Neese, the latter a whole-hearted and big-handed pounding to Bro. Neese. The fortunate pair, with whom we rejoice, are now located at Elon College, N. C., and the college community is happy to welcome this new household to its numbers.

One of our ministerial students, Aubrey C. Todd, is, during his vacation, supplying Dendron, New Lebanon, Union (and in Norfolk Hope Chapel) churches in the Eastern Virginia Conference. Brother Todd's address is 1207 Bainbridge St., South Norfolk, Va. He is enjoying his summer work very much, and knowing him as a faithful student in Elon College, we predict that the people of these churches will enjoy his service and be much benefitted by them.

Dr. S. W. Caddell, a well-known resident and practicing physician of Elon College was honored on Saturday, June 16, by the gathering on the lawn of his beautiful home, of many of his kindred and of his neighbors and friends at Elon, with his family, to celebrate his 75th anniversary. The good doctor has seemed to practice what he preaches in the matter of health and carries his years as if they were but very few in number. It was a bountiful repast that the long table carried under the spreading oaks; and a happy through wished for this good neighbor and friend many more anniversaries.

Dr. Frank E. Jenkins, age 79, died of pneumonia at Bowdon, Ga., on Wednesday night, June 6. This message comes to us by way of the Bowdon Bulletin and will carry sorrowful regret to the hearts of many SUN readers. Dr. Jenkins was best known to us through his presidency of Southern Union College, Wadley, Ala., and his former presidency of Piedmont College, Demorest, Ga. As president of the former institution, he visited many of our Conferences and churches and, through public address and appeal, convinced his hearers that he was man of deep conviction and abiding interest in the essentials of Christian Education for youth. Whatever errors he may have made in judgment, those who knew him realized that his soul was aflame with a passion for education and for giving the boy and girl of small means the opportunity and privilege of college training. At the time of his death, Dr. Jenkins was a member and honorary pastor of our United Church in LaGrange, Ga. The funeral was conducted by Rev. J. H. Dollar, pastor of the United Church, who was assisted by Dr. E. W. Butler, of Thorsby, Ala., Rev. F. P. Ensminger, D. D., of Birmingham, Dr. H. C. Newell, president of Piedmont College, and Rev. Willis E. Howard, pastor, First Baptist Church, LaGrange. The de-Jenkins, and a daughter, Miss Helen Jenkins, principal of Thorsby Institute, Thorsby, Ala. Dr. Jenkins had taught in school and college for fifty years, most of the time here in the South, though he was born in Walton, New York (in 1854), and was a graduate of Williams College and Hartford Theological Seminary. He came South in 1886 as State Superintendent of Kentucky for the American Missionary Association. He was later pastor of Central Congregational Church in Atlanta and, while pastor there, founded the Atlanta Theological Seminary, which is now associated with Vanderbilt University at Atlanta Foundation. Since June, 1933, Dr. Jenkins had been president of Bowdon College, Bowdon, Ga.

BARNESVIELE PARISH.

It is doubtless the strongest rural Congregational Christian Parish in Georgia. These four churches, Fredonia, near Barnesville, Bethany, near The Rock; Meansville at Meansville and Jones Chapel near Woodbury have for about five years been faithfully served by Rev. Lawrence L. Stanley, a young man of powers. The people of these churches love him as their own souls. Throughout the entire territory he has been respected for his devotion and wisdom, admired for his down-right goodness, followed for his consecration and enterprising spirit.

A man like that is wanted. Our important church at Thorsby, Alabama, sought him out. He was called and began work about the first of May. But he was not released without a struggle. His Barnesville Parish which he had served so well would keep him if it were possible. They finally let him go.

Then the question came, "Who shall take his place? Where is the man?" "What kind of a man do you want?" they were asked. "The duplicate of Lawrence Stanley," they replied. But that could not be done. God makes no duplicates.

But the field was surveyed. Names of many worthy ministers were submitted. Among them that of Rev. David W. Shepherd, graduate of Elon College, also of Vanderbilt. Served successfully as an S. S. S. worker in Georgia. People like him. He impressed congregations as being a good preacher. No church rings the bell of success unless the good preacher is also a better pastor. David measured up in both capacities. He had accepted the difficult work at Columbus, formerly Rose Hill Christian Church, now United, and the United church of Phenix City across the river.

He did the work. Here he was ordained by a united ordaining council of the two old denominations, now complete in one. The task of serving two churches, always too much for one man, was too great as he said, to warrant a man trying to do both in a city. In the adjustment which followed, Rev. Arnold Slater went to Columbus and David to Phenix City. His work there has been marked with real success.

The Barnesville people looked him up. They asked all kinds of questions. They were answered. The result? David was given a unanimous call by each of the four churches. He accepted, being swayed to do so because he was told that it would demand his best powers and almost infinite resources. He was told this field was so good that it was not easy. He did not seek for a snap in the ministry. As someone said of another, "He welcomed a task for its bigness and greeted hard work with a fierce joy."

David begins work there on Friday, June 15th. His address will be Owen Heights, Zebulon, Ga.

Lawrence L. Stanley and David W. Shepherd are two warm friends. Both seek not themselves, but the good of the churches which they serve. With the fine beginning Stanley is meeting at Thorsby, and the new beginning of Shepherd at Barnesville Parish, their many friends expect a success which both merit and the churches desire. May their arms be strengthened!

CONSTITUTION.

OF THE SOUTHEAST CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL AND CHRISTIAN CHURCHES, UNINCORPORATED.

ARTICLE I—NAME.

The name of this organization shall be the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches, Unincorporated.

ARTICLE II—MEMBERSHIP.

It shall be composed of the Churches of the Southeast Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches and of the Congregational and Christian Conferences of Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee and Kentucky, and of such other conferences as may desire to become members. Also of representatives of the Congregational and Christian educational institutions of the Southeast, and of the Christian Orphanage and of the Christian Sun.

ARTICLE III—PURPOSE.

As stated in the constituting act of April 29, 1930, viz:

"The purpose of this new relation shall be to perform on behalf of the united groups the various functions dealing with common service and calling for unification of action. It shall be promotional, inspirational, educational, and policy determining." It shall not be administrative, but rather shall seek to promote the spirit of Fellowship among our various churches and conferences of the Southeast.

ARTICLE IV—OFFICERS.

There shall be a President, Vice President and Secretary and Treasurer, who shall perform the duties common to such officers, and who shall hold office until their successors are elected.

ARTICLE V—COMMITTEES.

There shall be a Board of Directors consisting of the officers, the regularly employed Secretaries and Superintendents of the Southern Convention and of the State Conferences, and one person representing each of the constituting conferences. Such representative may be elected by the Convention or by the Conferences.

There shall be an Executive Committee consisting of the three officers and two additional members.

There shall be a Program Committee of five members whose duty it shall be to arrange the programs of the annual or biennial meetings or congresses as shall be sponsored by the Southeast Convention.

There shall be such other committees as may be deemed advisable. The following are recommended but not obligatory: Educational, Social Relations, Temperance, Evangelism, and Christian Union.

ARTICLE VI—MEETINGS.

There shall be held either annually or biennially at such time and place as may be designated by the Executive Committee, a meeting which may be designated as the Southeast Regional Meeting or Congress, and which shall be for fellowship, inspiration, and for consideration of the tasks of the Church and for the promotion of our world-wide mission.

OFFICERS OF THE SOUTHEAST CONVENTION.

President, Rev. James H. Lightbourne, Burlington, N. C.; Vice-Pres., Rev. C. A. Lincoln, Daytona Beach, Fla.; Sec.-Treas., Rev. G. N. Edwards, Charleston, S. C. With Rev. A. W. Hurst, Chattanooga, Tenn. and Rev. J. G. Truitt, Suffolk, Va., these form the Executive Committee.

Program Committee: Rev. F. C. Lester, Norfolk, Va., Dr. H. Shelton Smith, Duke University, Durham, N. C., Rev. Wm. T. Scott, Winston-Salem, N. C., Mrs. C. H. Rowland, Greensboro, N. C., Rev. G. N. Edwards, Charleston, S. C. Also the president of the Convention and the pastor of the entertaining church.—J. E. Kirby.

SEEK COURSE FOR CHURCH IN MEETING.

One of the most intensive and widespread studies of the church in American life ever undertaken by a major religious body will be made by ten seminar groups meeting daily in the week of sessions of the General Council of Congregational Christian Churches, opening Thursday afternoon on the campus of Oberlin College.

The seminars, meeting for an hour and a half each morning, will focus the best leadership the denomination affords on problems of war and peace, church attendance and stewardship, the ministry, Christian higher education, missions, the social gospel and economic problems, rural life and farm problems, current theological questions, religious education and evangelism, and interracial relations.

Much interest has been aroused by this plan, which is a departure in the procedure of ecclesiastical gatherings. This is the third general council meeting in which the seminar plan has been used, a single such study of worship having been made at Detroit in 1929. Six studies were made at Seattle in 1931.

The meeting at Oberlin, a biennial affair, was originally scheduled for a year ago in Cleveland, but was postponed because of economic conditions. It represents a fellowship of more than 7,000 churches in all parts of the world. It will bring about 1,500 delegates from all parts of the United States and all the mission fields of the communion.

The retiring moderator of the session is Dr. Carl S. Patton, pastor of First Congregational Church, Los Angeles. Acting as co-moderator is Dr. Frank G. Coffin, pastor of United Congregational-Christian Church, Columbus. They will give the opening addresses Thursday afternoon and evening.

In returning to Oberlin, the council visits again the scene of its organization in Old Council Hall, former home of the Oberlin Graduate School of Theology, in 1871. It has not met in the college town since that date.

Special greetings will be sent to Dr. Augustus F. Beard of Norwalk, Conn., now 102, sole surviving member of the group of 273 ministers who formed the original council. Dr. Beard is the oldest living graduate of Union Theological Seminary of Yale University and of Williston Academy, Easthampton, Mass.

In conjunction with the council, the 125th annual meeting of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, oldest foreign missionary organization in America, will be held Sunday and Monday, closing with a pilgrimage and consecration service at the Memorial Arch, erected to the memory of Oberlin men and women who lost their lives in the Boxer uprising in 1900.

Business and inspirational meeting will be held at 10:15 A. M. and 4 P. M. daily. At 11:45 A. M. each day there will be a devotional service conducted by Dr. Boynton Merrill of West Newton, Mass., chaplain for the council.

The Oberlin A Cappella Choir, directed by Olaf Christiansen, will give a concert Thursday evening, followed by a reception by President Ernest Hatch Wilkins of Oberlin College, and Dr. James A. Richards, pastor of First Congregational Church, hosts to the council.

A BIBLE CONFERENCE.

Under the auspices of the Florida Fundamental Bible Institute of Tampa, Florida, a Bible Conference will convene in Hendersonville, N. C. on July 1st, continuing for two weeks. This Conference will be similar to the Bible Conferences formerly conducted in Hendersonville by the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. Special hotel and boarding house rates for visitors. In the absence of Pres. W. T. Watson, of the Florida Institute, who will be in Old Orchard, Maine, conducting a similar Conference at the time. H. C. Caviness, the Director of the Extension Department of the Institute, will preside and direct the Conference, and will give Bible expositions each day during the session. Among those who will engage in the Conference is Rev. Mr. Mel. Morris of Texas. Mr. Morris has a most unique manner of presenting the Gospel. His participation in the Conference assures all who come of a great spiritual feast and they can be assured of a most unusual presentation of Gospel truth. Every provision possible for guests will be had. You will be welcome June 16, 1934.

H. C. CAVINESS.

BREAK WITH THE WHOLE WAR SYSTEM.

The Presbyterians are not an excitable people. They weigh their words and mark carefully their course of action. With them conscience is generally on the throne. Moral convictions are the mainsprings of both word and deed with these descendants of a race that saw "God high and lifted up."

We are, therefore, greatly interested in what the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, as reported by the Christian Century, said about war. The assembly just adjourned at Cleveland, Ohio, declares:

"That Christians owe an allegiance to the Kingdom of God that is superior to loyalty to their own country; that Christians cannot give their support to war; that we are opposed to the increase of our naval or other war forces, as provocative and wasteful; that we are opposed to military training, especially in secondary schools and colleges, and to citizens military training camps and reserve officers' training corps; that military policies support economic imperialism, and that any system of economics that requires war for its support is a godless system; that we support all conscientious objectors to war, and direct the board of education to record the signatures of young people who object to war so that they may receive the full support of the church; that orientals should be admitted on a quota basis, that pastors and other leaders be encouraged to sign the pledge of non-aggression; that private traffic in munitions of war should be abolished. The Presbyterians are not, in general, an excitable people. They are little given to being stampeded into ill considered and precipitate action. Their General Assembly is a body which feels the burden of the responsibility which it bears as a constitutional and representative body."

MRS. ROOSEVELT AT DUKE UNIVERSITY.

The visit of the First Lady to Duke University on Monday of this week to speak before the summer institutes proved to be a wonderful success. Apart from all the other functions that filled the day so full was the evening appearance in the stadium for her main address. The crowd of fully nine thousand assembled in the stadium was eager to see and to hear. All eyes and ears were wide open.

A more favorable situation for such a vast assembly in the deepening shadows of June could not be imagined. The soft breezes of the summer evening, with the friendly stars overhead and the greensward of the gridiron in full view, to say nothing of the wonderful setting of forest trees, contributed to the mood essential for a discussion of world peace. Quietness and good will brooded over the people and peace lay across the land as Mrs. Roosevelt urged that our country should take the lead in promoting the peace of the world. She insisted that America should take steps to control the manufacture of arms and sale of munitions, should abolish all armed forces used primarily for attack, and then turn to the formation of a widespread will to peace, backed by an active public opinion.

This plea was made with point and emphasis, spoken with utmost conviction. It was not an echo. It was a fervent and earnest declaration from a soul interested in the cause for which she plead. She spoke home to the heart of that vast, eager crowd.

Many came simply to see, but it ended with their hanging on her every word. She commanded attention by the character of her timely utterance.

THE COUNTRY GOD'S PLAN OF LIFE.

Morally, country life is far ahead of that in the cities. You will remember that it was "the cities of the plain—Sodom and Gomorrah—which became centers of debauchery in early Old Testament times. It has ever been thus. Where millions congregate to-day, morality and spirituality are at their lowest ebb. Temptations toward loose living are tenfold greater than in the country. Those who pander to the passions and vices of mankind thrive in our great metropolises. The devotees of "whoopee" and "high life" and every sort of abandoned pleasure find a Mecca there.

When God made the world, He placed man in a garden, not a city. When He brought His chosen people out of Egyptian bondage into a land of their own, He gave to each family a country homestead, a permanent holding of land. He insured that mode of life by giving a law declaring that the homestead owner could not be permanently dispossessed of it.

We should return to God's plan of life in the country today. If ever it was imperative that men should flee from the city, it is now, for with crime and delinquency steadily mounting, with long lines of unemployed in every city, and with God's great healthful out of doors beckoning to crowded and weary city dwellers, now is the time for a wholesale exodus back to the land. Those who do so will reap more abundant health, physically, morally, and spiritually.

—Health...

AND THE LESSON DIDN'T HAVE TO BE POINTED OUT!

"We decided to save money by not putting in any foundations," the Indian preacher of a small country church said naively to Builder James H. Lawson of Pasumalai, India, when he had come to them after an S. O. S. The walls of the church had begun to crack before they were finished. In another church Mr. Lawson found the roof timbers did not fit because one diagonal was much longer than the other. He discovered the building had been laid out by eye! And then an Indian came to him and said, "Sir, you have preached us a wonderful sermon on honesty and truth today by showing us where we have been wrong in building."

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH.

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF OUR CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE CROSS STILL CONQUERS.

Elsewhere in The Sun this week will be found the "Prologue," written by one of the world's most flaming and zealous evangelists, in his book Christ and Japan. It is doubtful if any one man in any nation today is wielding more influence and being instrumental in the hands of God in winning more souls to Christ than Toyohiko Kagawa. He is the instigator and leader of the "Kingdom of God Movement in Japan," and seems really being eaten up in soul by the zeal of His Lord. It is written of him, by one most intimately acquainted with him and his works that "Kagawa is almost unique among the religious leaders of the world in his combination of three great interests: (1) He is a flaming evangelist with a passion for saving souls, (2) a practical social reformer and labor leader of the first rank and (3) a brilliant writer not only of religious books but also of best selling novels."

In his soul-stirring book, now before me, "Christ in Japan," he displays his varied interests and the gripping power of a soul on fire for God. To quote again:—"The book throbs with a passionate love for Christ and zeal for the spread of His Kingdom." He says "Japan is famished for the love of God. She yearns for the cross." Differing very much from many evangelists in this country, Kagawa declares that in Japan "there is an ever increasing need for flaming evangelism. Mass evangelism, personal evangelism, literary evangelism, tent evangelism, and touring evangelism are all different phases of religious education for the masses."

One might think that a man so passionately absorbed in evangelism, preaching from three to five times a day, would have little time or strength for other work and interests. On the other hand, he is very deeply interested in and quite an authority on the physical needs and the food supply of Japan. In his book, he declares "the food problem would be solved if horticulture and tree-crop cultivation on the mountain slopes were properly developed. If every Japanese farmer could be induced to keep one or two milk-producing Swiss goats, Japan could get along without Korea or Manchuria. Goat-keeping and bee culture will turn even Japan into a land of milk and honey."

It may not be known to SUN readers that 85% of the total area of Japan is mountainous, though the country itself is made up of innumerable small islands. It does not seem possible that her population has to subsist with only 15% of her land available for agriculture. There are 5,700,000 farm families, and these families have an average of only two and one-half acres of cultivable land to a family, and the farmers constitute 44% of her total population.

Reading of this soul-stirring man and learning of his power to wield the sword of the spirit for his God and to know what God hath wrought through him, is heartening, indeed, and moves one to marvel anew at the power of Christ. It makes one more hopeful for the world and for the coming of the kingdom of our Lord and His Christ here in the earth.

THE LEAGUE BRINGS THINGS TO PASS.

One of the best Senators we ever had here at Albany once wrote us: "The New York Civic League Brings Things to Pass." It fights gambling, vice, the liquor traffic, etc., by education, legislation and law enforcement.

Educating Public Sentiment.—This has been done through the publishing of The Civic Bulletin, made possible by this League. Many persons have said that they thought the publishing of this Bulletin is the most important work that the League is doing. Many temperance and moral reform papers have had to suspend publication in recent years for lack of support.

The Civic Bulletin with its wide circulation all over the State is wielding a great influence for good by informing and arousing the people, when a moral crisis is on, and educating public sentiment on all moral questions. It has subscribers in almost every city, town and village in New York State. It is reaching the leaders of thought and moulders of public opinion.

The League also issues various other leaflets from time to time, and occasionally buys leaflets of other publishers for distribution to special persons. During the year 1933, the League sent out more than 4,000,000 pages of literature, including The Civic Bulletin and other leaflets sent out! There is no other paper like it in this State, or in any other State, so far as we know.

The League's Legislative Work.—From the beginning of the League's history, twenty-four years ago, it has always taken a deep interest in securing the passage by our Legislature of good bills and in defeating bad bills affecting moral questions. Many bills prepared by the League and introduced at its request, have been enacted into laws—some of them without the change of a single word from the way the League drafted them. Three Governors have presented to our League the pens with which they signed our bills.

The League's Law Enforcement Work.—We not only help get good laws enacted but we take equal interest in helping secure the enforcement of those laws. Each year many appeals come to us for help in local law enforcement work against gambling, vice, bootlegging and other evils. Many persons who for business or other reasons dare not lead a local fight against such evils send complaints of such law violations to our League, and we take them up with the proper officials—local, State or Federal—and we never give away the names of those making complaints to us, and thus in large numbers of places we have quietly been able to secure better law enforcement.

A Moral Reform Information Bureau.—Ever since this League was organized it has been answering letters from persons all over the State concerning every phase of moral reform work. We have answered thousands of letters from people trying to help solve their local problems. Sometimes we have furnished them facts for use at local meetings, which has taken considerable time for us to prepare, but we consider it well worth while in the results that are being accomplished thereby.

ENGLAND'S PRIME MINISTER.
SAID IT

The following paragraph is not from the tongue or pen of THE CHRISTIAN SUN's editor (lest some say he is beside himself and talking nonsense) but from the Premier of England, Ramsey MacDonald, one of the world's outstanding statesmen and rulers. Hear him:

"They tell us we cannot be made sober by act of Parliament. I hate these smug, pettifogging, and inaccurate pieces of proverbial philosophy. They are thrown off by men who cannot think, and they are believed in by fools. I say that every experience that the world has had, and I do not care where you go for it—go north, go south, go east, go west; keep within your own empire or go outside; confine your attention to the Anglo-Saxon race or go outside it and take the Slavs—go anywhere experiments have been made, and the conclusion is absolutely inevitable and irresistible that you can make men and women sober by act of Parliament."

England's Prime Minister was talking from wide experience, since "the sun never sets on the Empire" over which his government rules.

Millions were made sober by act of Legislature and Congress in the United States, but those who long for liquor back at any cost would not have it so. Again and again we were told that we could not make people sober by legislation, and now that the legislative bans are removed, statistics are piling up everywhere that drunkenness is on the increase, saloons are again open and dealing out their deadly beverage, working people are lining up to spend their daily wage and accidents from drunkenness daily multiply. And yet there are those left, like Premier MacDonald declares, who say that we can legislate sobriety.

A WORTHY CAMPAIGN.

President Smith of Elon College has been working for several months to reduce to a definite proposition the amount that will be required to satisfy all of the indebtedness of Elon College and to initiate a campaign to raise the sum required. At this writing, it seems that our resourceful president is about to arrive at a specific proposition with creditors, in which event the campaign is to begin at once to raise funds with which to wipe out every dollar against the college. Some one has proposed that this campaign, in case it is started and is brought to a successful conclusion, be named "The W. W. Staley Memorial Campaign." This seems to the writer to be most appropriate.

The hearts of our people everywhere long to see the day when our institution, burdened with a debt that it cannot continue to carry, and with that burden, struggling against odds that are hopeless, will be cleared of that burden and be free to make the contribution to the church and to the world for which the institution was founded. In all the history of the college, no man was more anxious than our late, lamented Dr. Staley to see the college without debt, and it will rejoice his soul to see that day. He served the college as president for eleven years, and, by his wisdom, frugality and self-denial, got the college out of debt and turned it over to his successor without debt, an achievement not realized at any other time since the institution was founded. Again and again, and again, while he was trustee he plead for a program that would reduce the indebtedness and finally wipe it out. We know of no memorial that would be quite so fitting to establish in the hearts of those who loved him and in the lives of those who revere his memory as would the achievement and the fact of paying the debts of Elon College. The noblest tribute we ever pay to people while we live is to carry to completion a work which they loved and for which they had given their lives and loyalty, and it now begins to seem that we, of our Christian constituency, may help to perfect this sainted soul and, in so doing, reap that better thing for ourselves which God intended that we should have, when He took from us one who had obtained a good report through faith but who had not yet received the promise.

We regard the campaign as essential and a glorious thing for our church life, and we regard the proposed name of it and the spirit of it as most fitting, timely and appropriate.

WHAT HAVOC PROHIBITION REPEAL HATH WROUGHT.

(From Woman's Temperance Work, May, 1934.)

More drinking, more drunkenness, more debauchery, more rioting, more poverty, more accidents, more murders, more crimes, and the saloon is here again. What a harvest after only a few months of repeal! Pandora's box has been opened and destruction has been let loose.

More Accidents.—There are more and more automobile accidents caused by drunken drivers. One Judge said that there is ten times as much drunken driving now as there was six months ago. What is being done about it? A few are jailed, a few more have their licenses revoked or suspended, but the most of them go free or are sentenced and—sentence is then suspended. This dangerous crime is not being effectively curbed. Why not? Is the trouble with the police or with the courts?

"True Temperance."—The advocates of "true temperance" wanted more drinking, but said there would be no drunkenness. They made some people believe that they were really working to "promote temperance." Where are they now? Now is the time for them to "promote;" there is need for it. The "promoting" being done now is promoting the sale of alcoholic drinks. They are using all means, fair and foul, to create a demand for alcohol.

The Saloon Comes Back.—Many were the promises made by wet individuals, organizations and political parties that there would be no saloons after repeal, but here they are. Even President Roosevelt gave his word that there would be no saloons. "By no possibility, at any time or under any conditions, at any place or any circumstances, shall that institution return to American life," he said. But here they are, and those who made those promises seem to welcome them as they do their old friends.

Wet Advocates on Trial.—The havoc wrought by alcohol in these few months cannot be told, and the results will be worse as time goes on, for each drinker will drink more and the number of drinkers will increase. Advocates of repeal are now on trial, and are making a sorry showing. All of the things which they said would not happen are happening, for alcohol is the same despicable creature that it always has been.

Senator Sheppard well said that, "Every moment it crushes some home, some heart. It arrests the physical and mental growth of children, distorting the moral sense. It curses the future generations of its victims. It wrecks domestic happiness and betrays the most sacred vows."

Repealists said they would guarantee that these things should not happen if liquor came back, but they do not stop this havoc. Are they going to do it? And when?

HAVE YOU MADE YOUR WILL?

"Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee; then whose shall these things be?"—Luke 12:20.

I frequently find people trying to determine whether or not a particular will is legal, but I have yet to meet a person wondering whether or not a particular will was really Christian. Another pathetic thing is the number of Christian people who evidently forget the fact that they are stewards of their possessions when they make their will.

Now two facts are evident; we have possessions and one day we must leave them. How many of us have determined "Whose these things shall be?" If you have not made a will you can not readily answer this question. It is your privilege and duty to determine whose these things shall be.

I am convinced that it is not only the duty of a Christian to make his will, but also to bequeath a portion of his possessions to the interest of the Kingdom of God. My reasons for the conviction are many.

If we are held accountable for the disposition of our possessions during life, do you suppose it is a matter of no concern to God what we do with our bequest? If the practice of stewardship is a duty of life it is a duty of death. The Cause of Christ is worthy of our contributions and support and certainly it is no less worthy of a share in our bequest. And if it does not deserve a share in our bequests, then it does not deserve our support.

Now the Scriptural injunction is to "Give". That obviously means for one to give as long as there is anything to give. But we are interested to know when one should cease giving as one of old was interested to know when one should cease forgiving. Christ placed no limit on either. Yet there are those who give to the Church until they make their will and dispose of their property, then it does not occur to them that they should give anything to the Church.

Let each determine now whose these things shall be, that at least a part of it shall be the Lord's. This is a way of perpetuating stewardship. Let a man so dispose of his possessions, then "though he were dead yet shall he live."

Now I realize that there will be some quite enthusiastic objections to this view. Some men will hide behind love for family. Now the Bible teaches that "if any provide not for his own, and especially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith and is worse than an infidel."

But love easily becomes selfish, a mere camouflage. One may selfishly put love for family above his love for Christ. And remember "He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me, and he that loveth son or daughter more than me is not worthy of me."

It is also possible that there might be some opposition on the part of children who would fear lest they lose some of their inheritance. "If father has contributed liberally to the church why should he be expected to make a bequest to it also? "But note the policy of the government. It taxes one in life and in death. The government is richer when a man of even moderate means dies, for his heir must pay an inheritance tax. The Church is poorer, for it loses a contributor.

The Church of today must have revenue if it is to carry on an effective and progressive program. Yet churches suffer. Our plants are inadequate, our equipment is meagre, therefore our program is handicapped. Moreover, some of our churches are so deeply in debt that people stay out of them rather than be embarrassed by their excessive financial demands.

Now some say that this plan of stewardship is very good, but our people simply will not practice it. I say they will, and for this reason, the members of other Denominations have done it. Their great churches and institutions were not made possible by free will offerings, they are largely the products of numerous bequests. Why have they done this? There is one primary explanation: they have been taught to do so; it is expected of them. Now the people of the Christian denomination have not been trained along this line, and as a result, it has failed to make great progress.

We need to learn that people do not give merely because they are able to give. They give not in proportion to ability, but in proportion to the definite training they have received. Let us teach the complete program of stewardship until every Christian, who fails to remember the Cause of Christ in his will will have a guilty conscience. Let us no longer say our people will not do this, but remember to "ask, and ye shall receive."

ONE TEST OF CONSECRATION.

When Richard Cecil wished to teach his little daughter the meaning of consecration and faith, he took her on his knee in his library one day and asked her if she loved him well enough to give up a little necklace of glass beads which she greatly prized. She looked up with tears in her face, and sobbed, "Yes, Papa." "Well," said he, "you take them off and throw them into the grate." With heaving bosom and hesitating steps, she made the great renunciation and then flew back to his arms and sobbed herself to rest, while he patted the little golden head and gently said, "Now Papa knows you love him."

Nothing more was said for several days, but on her birthday her father called her to him, and opening a little casket, handed to her a chain of real pearls and asked her to put them on her neck as the gift of his love to her. She looked him full in the face and then a great light broke upon her countenance, and again throwing herself on his bosom, she cried, "Oh, Papa, forgive me; I did not understand, but now I do."

That is the consecration which God loves and loves to recompense. Our sacrifices are real investments that will bring us infinite returns in that day when he shall give us diadems for tears, cities for pounds, and ten thousand per cent compound interest on all we have laid down for his sake.—Covenant Companion.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Congregational and Christian Ministers of Eastern Virginia met in regular monthly session and held their annual outing for their families at Burtonia Cottage, Virginia Beach, Virginia, on Tuesday, June 12th, remaining over-night and returning home Wednesday A. M. This Cottage is owned and operated by Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Overman of Portsmouth, Virginia. The following ministers were present with their families: Revs. Charles Eldred Shelton, R. A. Whitten, Joe French, H. S. Hardcastle, J. F. Morgan, O. D. Poythress, Robert Lee House, W. M. Jay, N. G. Newman, Elwood W. Jones, F. C. Lester, John G. Truitt, I. W. Johnson, and other invited guests brought the total to thirty-nine.

The party assembled about noon on Tuesday. After lunch a business meeting was held. The following officers were elected for the next year: Dr. Elwood W. Jones, President; Rev. S. W. Phillips, Secretary, and Rev. Joe French, Treasurer. This Association was organized thirty-three years ago. During this period many books have been studied, covering a wide range of subjects helpful to ministers of the Gospel. Many instructive and valuable papers have been prepared and presented showing intensive study and research. These courses have been profitable to the ministers of the Association.

Tuesday evening a moving picture was presented under the direction of Mr. C. C. Patton of Portsmouth, Virginia. He and his good wife were guests of the Association. This program included two comic movies and two reels depicting scenes illustrating the life of Jesus. The program was greatly enjoyed by the party. Rev. H. S. Hardcastle was Toastmaster and presided at the evening banquet. The toastmaster called upon several for short talks. Revs. J. F. Morgan and O. D. Poythress entertained with several musical selections. Rev. O. D. Poythress furnished several "readings" which are not to be found in any of the published books. He will probably publish some of his "interpretations" at an early date, provided some one will furnish the lame ducks and invite him to supper.

For the benefit of any parties who may be interested it should be stated that there are three "bachelor" preachers in Eastern Virginia Conference at this time. They are of marriageable age and will gladly furnish any further information to parties who may be interested in their future welfare. They are hopeful that the end of the depression is near. Beyond the dark clouds the sun is still shining.

Wednesday forenoon the final session was held, and the members and guests returned to their homes refreshed by this delightful fellowship and recreation. It was the unanimous wish of the group to hold the next annual outing at Burtonia Cottage, Virginia Beach. The old chorus: "The more we get together, together, together, The more we get together the happier we'll be," is well illustrated in the annual outing of these ministers and their families. Dr. Charles Eldred Shelton, Chairman of the Committee on Entertainment, richly deserves the unanimous vote of thanks extended to him for his part in planning the meeting this year.

Ministers in every Conference and Association should be organized into groups for study and fellowship. Many a young minister could be made more useful by closer contact with other men of experience. Older men need the enthusiasm and imagination of youth to rekindle the fires of glorious conquest in the Kingdom of God. Such meetings help to increase the spirit of christian fellowship and mutual understanding. Attend ministers' Conferences and receive a great spiritual blessing.

THE COLLEGE GRADUATE.

There are hundreds and thousands of young men and young women in this country who have just, or will soon, graduate from college. They are products of worthy and respectable institutions. This distinction should guarantee to them a position by which they could earn for themselves and others the necessities of life, and to spare. One of the inducements formerly held up to prospective college students was the increased earning capacity that a college education would give him. It was all figured out as to how much an uneducated person could earn, how much a high school graduate could earn, and how much those who had taken time to take post-graduate work could earn. The figures were very impressive and the opportunities alluring. In the main, these facts are still true. It matters not what position man is to occupy in life, he can carry the responsibilities of that position, however insignificant or impressive, more efficiently and more gracefully with a trained mind than he can merely with an active body.

There is no discredit attached to one owning a diploma from a high grade college. In fact, the individual without a college education today is at a decided disadvantage. The majority of those with whom he will deal in life have had college advantages. It is not necessary today for the young man or young woman who wishes to achieve in life to prepare himself thoroughly for the eventualities of life. There are schools and colleges galore in this country. Their doors are open to the ambitious student, and the average one will cooperate with the student himself to make it possible for him to have the advantages that he desires.

However, positions are not waiting for those who graduate any more than they are for those who do not attend a college. It is true, and more increasingly so, that the college graduate has to make his position and make his future just as anyone else. The fact that he holds a diploma does not guarantee to him a living. The world does not owe the graduate of a college today a living any more than it does anyone else. In fact, someone has said that the graduates of our present-day schools are merely swelling the ranks of the unemployed and adding to the hoards of hitch hikers. This, I think, is untrue, but it is a discouraging fact that a large number of college graduates are unable to fit into our present economic system. The fact that a graduate is not able to secure a position is no reflection either upon the graduate or upon the school, but the fault lies with our social and economic system.

Annually, we are graduating a fine group of young people from Elon College. This year the class numbered thirty-five. Some of these have gone into business, some have gone to university centers for further study, others are applying for positions to teach. About two-thirds of the class are interested in teaching. More than fifty per cent of the remainder have good chances and perhaps will be located in a few days. Dean A. L.

Hook of the college is head of a committee to work with our graduates in an effort to locate everyone to advantage. We feel that, with such a limited number of vacancies in the schools of North Carolina and other states, and with a greatly increased number of applicants for teaching positions, we have succeeded admirably in placing our graduates.

In fact, as a rule, Elon College graduates experience as little difficulty as the graduates of any school in securing teaching positions. Should the reader of this article know of an opening for a teacher in either graded or high schools, we will greatly appreciate it if you will communicate with us at once.

We also want to solicit your co-operation in securing new students for Elon. We have just closed a very successful year. The prospects for 1934-35 are most encouraging. Mr. Colclough, our field worker, reports that the prospects for new students are the best that he has ever known with the exception of one year. With your help and the help of other friends of the college, we will be able to secure the number of students that we ought to have. The grade of work we do, the standing of Elon College, and the facilities that we have are inviting and merit your cooperation to the fullest extent. May we depend on you?

L. E. SMITH.

A PROGRAM OF ADVANCEMENT FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

The watchword of the christian religion has always been "forward". Nothing is to be gained by "holding your own". It is dangerous and destructive to turn backward. Inspiration comes by growth and advancement. If we do not look forward it is pretty certain that we will not go in that direction. If we do not plan carefully for the advancement, we will, perhaps, be hindered in our forward strides. It is possible for any church to advance. Advancement depends, not so much upon the ability of the membership of a church as upon its consecration, its submission, and its optimism. God has spoken that we go forward. The church that obeys that command will find difficulties beginning to vanish; literally the rough places will be made smooth, the crooked paths will be made straight, and the mountains will be leveled to earth.

The trouble with the most of us who make up the church today is that we have lost the glow of faith and the fire of ambition. We need to know that all things are possible through Christ, that the spirit of God is the fire of purification, and that in His light the path of success may appear with clearness.

It was a battle, the most stubborn battle that I have ever fought, to turn from the pastorate and divide my time with the college. Here at the college I have the responsibility of the Community Church and the privilege of preaching. My interest in the local church and in the church at large has not lessened in the least; in fact, my ambition for the church's progress is greatly intensified. In a day like this, the church needs to arise in her might, proclaim her truth, and let her light shine that the darkness of this day may be scattered.

In the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches, we have more than two hundred local churches with a combined membership of more than thirty thousand. We are not concentrated in one place, but we are distributed over a wide territory, with congregations in a multiplicity of communities. About us, there are hundreds and thousands of people who are not identified with the church, who apparently are uninterested in things spiritual or in matters religious. There are multitudes, literally, who are not connected with Sunday School, who rarely, if ever, give the necessity for religious training a passing thought. These facts place a tremendous and fearful responsibility upon all whom God hath called and who are today members of the Household of Faith. If the program for our Sunday School and Church means simply to go to the place of worship and of study on Sunday morning and to minister to those who may chance to come with us, then, in all probability, we shall continue at this poor, dying rate. If we have a vision of the inclusiveness of the church, if we have a conviction that everyone is included in the plan of salvation, that it is the purpose and the will of God that everyone should be enlisted in His service, and that He has commissioned us, as selected officers in this vast army of the religious, to increase the ranks and make the gospel more attractive to the masses, and that we are under high commission to personally win from the world all whom we know to the Kingdom, the task will be so compelling that we, under the guidance of His spirit, will seek to devise ways and means of accomplishing the task to which we have been divinely summoned.

Why can we not have a program calling for advance along all lines in every department of our church's organization? Would it not be a most helpful undertaking if we should form a program calling for increased activity in Sunday School, Christian Endeavor, missions, education, and benevolences? May I suggest that we adopt, for our convention, a definite period, say, October 14-21, as the Greater Sunday School period for the Congregational and Christian Churches in the Southern Convention? During this week, every Sunday School in the Convention have as its goal for Sunday, October 21st every superintendent present, every officer and teacher present, every member of the Sunday School present, together with every member of their families, and a thorough canvass of very individual Sunday School's territory with an urgent invitation to all who are not a member of any Sunday School to attend Sunday School on that Sunday. A program, of course, would be planned for the occasion, which should include a merger service for Sunday school and church, the evening service to be given over to the Christian Endeavor and practically the same lines to be followed in securing attendance and enthusiasm for the young peoples' service. Let the evening church service be merged with the Christian Endeavor program. October 22-2 would be designated as the Greater Church period for the Congregational and Christian Churches in the Southern Convention. In preparation for the Sunday services the entire week preceding the 28th would be given for all active and interested members in a determined effort to have all members of the church present for the morning services, the local church to organize and make a thorough canvass of the community in which the church is located to urgently invite all who are not members of any church for this particular and special service. Let these special days of Greater Sunday School and Church activity be observed by all churches in the Convention on these given dates.

The first week in November would be known as Church Advancement Week, in which selected Christian workers, together with the pastors in each local congregation, would present Christ to those who have never accepted him and offer to them membership in their churches, members to be received at the Sunday services.

These are suggestions based on to the officials of our Convention, pastors of our churches, and all interested Christian workers. The time has come for us to assert ourselves as followers of Christ, not in an arrogant way, but in a program of consecrated service, faithfully trusting that in us and through us the Kingdom may receive comment in its fullness in the hearts of those for whom we are likely to be held responsible.

L. E. SMITH.

A PRAYER OF WRATH.

By WALTER RAUSCHENBUSCH.

O Lord, we praise Thy holy name, for Thou hast made bare Thine arms in the sight of all nations and done wonders. But still we cry to Thee in the weary struggle of our people against the power of drink. Remember, Lord, the strong men who were led astray and blighted in the flower of their youth. Remember the aged who have brought their gray hairs to a dishonored grave. Remember the homes that have been made desolate of joy, the wifely love that has been outraged in its sanctity, the little children who have learned to despise where once they loved. Remember, O Thou great avenger of sin, and make this nation to remember.

May those who now entrap the feet of the weak and make their living by the degradation of men, thrust away their shameful gains and stand clear. But if their conscience is silenced by profit, do Thou grant Thy people the indomitable strength of faith to make an end of it. May all the great churches of our land shake off those who seek the shelter of religion for that which damns, and stand with level front against their common foe. May all who still soothe their souls with half-truths, saying "Peace, peace," where there can be no peace, learn to see through Thy stern eyes and come to the help of Jehovah against the mighty. Help us to cast down the men in high places who use the people's powers to beat back the people's hands from the wrong they feign would crush.

O God, bring nigh the day when all our men shall face their daily tasks with minds undrugged and with tempered passions; when the unseemly mirth of drink shall seem a shame to all who hear and see; when the trade that debauches women; and when this black remnant of savagery shall haunt the memory of a new generation but as an evil dream of the night. For this accept our vows, O Lord, and grant Thine aid. Amen.

MISSIONS

 REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary

THEY CARRY ON.

Be it known that there are faithful Christians in fields afar who have not been discouraged by our failures to help during the depression as in former years. Comes now a word from North China by way of our American Board. After this question is asked of our churches: "When are the people at home going to 'stop the drop'?" And then the additional searching question: "How much additional pressure can our leaders out here, Chinese and foreigners, stand before their morale begins to crack?" After these questions are sent home to us, this stimulating information comes:—

"Since 1920 you have withdrawn one-third of the missionaries who were here. In spite of this, however, our church membership has gained 54 per cent; our middle or secondary school enrollment 574 per cent; hospital treatments 67 per cent; church contributions 83 per cent; receipts in fees from students, exclusive of board, 878 per cent." When the closing of one hospital was threatened, the local Chinese magistrate raised $6,000 to insure a balanced budget for the year ahead. When a certain station in its annual meeting was struggling with deficits, the Hon. H. H. Funk, Minister of Finance in the Nationalist Government, sent a very substantial check to be applied to the evangelistic budget, and the Chinese superintendent of the hospital raised $4,000 from government and individuals to keep them out of the red. And we can cite a dozen such instances from other mission stations."

Let those who deny themselves to give to missions bear in mind that they are giving their means and their prayers for the faithful of God in the remotest parts that this world may become the kingdom of our Lord and His Christ.

CHRIST CLAIMS JAPAN.

(Where else will one find, in so few words, such a portrayal of Japan, or in other people, as this, from a soul on fire for God?)

Japan is famishing for love. Love, God's love can only be found and fathomed in Christ. He has laid siege to Japan's soul, and she belongs to Him.

The cruelties which for three hundred years characterized the persecutions under the Tokugawa Shogunate can hardly be paralleled in the history of mankind. Yet, when the Shogunate fell and the Meiji government proclaimed freedom for the propagation of the gospel, over twenty thousand Christians came triumphantly forth from hidden islands and secluded villages. Japan had not turned her back on Christ.

Japan possesses a mysterious power of preserving values. Confucianism has all but perished in China, the land of its birth. But, in Japan, it is still a vital force. Buddhism has fallen into decay in India where it was cradled. With us it has flowered into new life.

Repeatedly I say to my Chinese friends, "Come to Japan if you wish to see the culture of ancient China." Japan has preserved the fifteen-hundred year-old Chinese ideographs and their pronunciation. She has preserved the thirteen-hundred-year-old Tang culture of China. She has preserved the architecture, sculpture, paintings, even the folklore of the Sung, Ming and Tang dynasties of China. Chinese Buddhism and Chinese philosophy, both of which have lost their hold on the masses on their native soil, are still potent factors in our land.

Across the centuries Japan has also conserved innumerable industrial processes and products. Textile fabrics were introduced from China and are woven into Japan's life. For four hundred years, since the time that Portuguese and Dutch ships began to visit her ports, Japan has kept in perfect preservation the Western sciences of mathematics and medicine which they introduced. Japan is a strange reservoir of civilizations, ancient and modern. For more than two thousand and five hundred years Japan has maintained the same Imperial line, the same family system, and has kept her Imperial realm inviolate. It is an astounding story, but in Japan's centuries-long history not one of her myriad islands has passed into the possession of an alien hand or land. same family system, and has kept her Imperial realm inviolate. It is an astounding story, but in Japan's centuries-long history not one of her myriad islands has passed into the possession of an alien hand or land.

This genius for preservation has unfortunately included the bad as well as the good. In the same careful way she has preserved the worldwide system of public prostitution, the deadly syphilis brought by the Portuguese traders, the curse-laden liquor and the sin which has reigned vices forever? Must the sword which the samurai so proudly bore forever be in evidence? Must the brothel, the saloon, the penitentiary, and oppressive police power forever remain in the picture?

O Japan, Eternal love keeps calling! Petulant Japan! Isolated Japan! Abandon your sulky mood and kneel before the God of infinite love. In your effort to rid yourself of sin and to sanctify your soul you, too, must go by the way of the cross.

Christ opened a way of salvation even for Japan. Yes! Though the whole world forsakes her, Christ, the revealer of eternal love, will never cease to woo Japan until he wins.

Oh, Japan! Thou claimed of Christ! Only he can bring you to your resurrection hour. The world may stand aloof and all men forsake you, but Christ will never desert you. No! No! Christ, the patient, pursuing Christ, will never abandon this land that I love.—By Rev. T. KAGAWA, in Prologue to his book, "Christ and Japan." Translated by William Axling and printed by the Friendship Press, New York.

WHERE THE NEED IS SO GREAT.

By MISS D. P. CUSHING, News Editor.

Solemnly hitching up his "vashti", and clutching the handle of a pick, the faithful old Christian teacher in the Albert Victor Memorial Hospital, Madura, India, hacked lustily at the dry earth as the first ground for the new hospital, of which Dr. Edward W. Wilder is the head, was broken. He had read a lyric poem and made a heartfelt prayer. Then European and Indian doctors, pastors and other friends dug a clod or two. Followed the Hindu ceremony of the overseers and the workmen—cow dung on a stone slab; garlands of jasmine; sandalwood and sacred red powder; milk from shattered coconuts; burning of camphor. To all points of the compass broken limes were thrown. Devoutly coolies prostrated themselves praying God to care for the workers and the work. . . Dipping fingers in sandalwood paste guests finally watched the first load of dirt being carried away on the head of a coolie woman. Dr. Wilder has been securing funds for this much needed new plant for nearly four years. More than half of the amount has come from India.

Dr. Wilder, who is a New England man, Boston born and Harvard bred (Harvard B. A. 1915, M. D. 1919.) first went to India under the American Board in 1921, working at the Albert Victor Memorial Hospital when there were no modern conveniences and when one man's full duty during operations was to stand and wipe the sweat from the surgeon's brow and chin. The only light was from kerosene lamps. Now the hospital has electric lights and an up-to-date operating room.

There are only Indian nurses on the staff. Although many of them come from low or out-caste groups, they are all Christians. Although Dr. Wilder's patients are often Brahmins or high caste Hindus, it is a tribute to Christianity that there seems to be no objection on the part of these high-caste Hindus against Christian nurses even though they know they are from the lower caste. Being Christians seems to free them from all class stigma.

"One of the great joys of my work is the appreciation of the people" declares Dr. Wilder. "An Anglo-Indian railroad engineer was terribly ill. His life was saved by the mission doctors and for six months after his discharge, nothing was heard of him. He turned up suddenly one Sunday morning with a brown paper parcel which proved to be a fourteen-day clock which he presented to the hospital as a token of gratitude. This clock had been bought with the first salary the man received after going back to work."

As far as medical work in India is concerned, Dr. Wilder states that few Indians are being educated abroad for this service. "The need is so great that nothing India can do in 80 or 100 years will meet it," he declares. "Fully 90% of the people in the villages of India are unable to secure proper medical care. These folks are beginning to realize the value of coming early in the course of a disease, although those from the rural districts still wait too long. Poverty extreme beyond anything that you can visualize in America, distance, and the element of fatalism in religion and tradition, all play a part."

Doctors and nurses in India must meet many situations unheard of in America. Relatives come in large numbers with a patient and stay with them sometimes sleeping under the bed. They often cook for the sick person and upset the prescribed diets.

When Dr. Wilder returned to India from his last furlough, he was greeted by a crowd of enthusiastic Indian friends at the railroad station with flowers and fruit. They rushed to relieve the Wilders of their luggage. Everyone wanted to help. "I will not soon forget the sight of the old man who had charge of the linen and operating room for carrying in one hand a sweet grass sewing basket and in the other hand a wash cloth and 3 safety pins!" comments Dr. Wilder.

Once as Dr. Wilder was driving in the country, screams suddenly rent the air. He saw a man frantically swinging a child by the heels and standing the little boy on his head. He had fallen into the water. Dr. Wilder seized the child, removed the wet shirt, and laying the tiny form on a piece of thatch, began artificial respiration. Five minutes' work brought a gasp, a little more, regular breathing, and after a hypodermic and a drink of hot coffee, the boy was returned safe to his mother. Was it significant that one of the bystanders followed Dr. Wilder to his car and said: "I, too, am a Christian."

THEY'VE DONE IT

Call together representatives in the Eastern part of the United States from the Congregational Dutch Reformed, Presbyterian, Episcopal (High) and Episcopal (Low) churches to discuss the formation of a union theological seminary and how far do you think you will get? Rev. Raymond A. Dudley of Tirumangalam, South India was recently a member of a committee to establish just this kind of a union seminary for the Tamil country. And they voted to do it—starting it in Pasumalai. "Missions have often been criticized for their denominational sins," comments Mr. Dudley. "On my my last furlough I traveled a good deal in New York, Massachusetts and Connecticut and I speak with much confidence in saying that these states could learn a great deal from South India in the matter of interdenominational cooperation." And he might as well add the other forty-five in the U. S. A.

"Something in their faces is so different from the average Indian on the streets of Madura," say the missionaries of the bright young Christian students in the Pasumalai Schools. They declare that these young people constitute in themselves a great challenge to the Hindu community. "Does it come from 'following the Gleam', from different ideals of loving service, from allegiance to our Great Master?" All who have seen the difference made in lives know the answer.

A Story for the Children

CURED OF MEDDLING.

By EVALYN EARLY.

"Oh! Oh! Oh—o-o!" cried Charles Edwards, "I'm bleeding to death! Mary Alice, help me quick!"

"Why, how terribly you're acting. I can't see anything the matter with your arm," answered his sister.

Charles Edwards puckered his face and said he knew something bit him on the arm.

"Don't be a cry-baby," said Henry, coming around the corner just then.

"Look! He is crying already," snickered Joe, his neighborhood friend.

"Don't be a cry-baby," said Henry, coming kinder tones. "You boys are fully five years older than he and I am four. He's not going to cry this time," she added looking straight into her baby brother's big blue eyes. At the same time she rubbed his hurt arm lovingly and kissed the bruised spot.

"I'll never cry again," promised Charles Edwards pushing back the sobs. "If I'm ever bit again I won't cry again."

"Ha, ha," scoffed Joe, "That's a joke."

It was a cool Saturday morning in early spring. Mary Alice was helping her mother bake a cake. She had just started to sift the flour when Charles Edwards came in. She had read of insects stinging people and causing so much pain and sometimes death, so she stopped her work long enough to wash the hurt place with warm soda water.

"What do you think it was?" asked Mary Alice as she patted the red spot tenderly.

"I think it was the gander bit me," Charles Edwards replied with a snuffle. Then remembering his promise not to cry again checked his tears and grit his teeth in a firm manner.

"Gander! Gander!" "Of all things," came from the boys and Mary Alice simultaneously, with Joe laughing mockingly, "Gander bit me, I have to cry!"

Charles Edwards did not like to be made fun of and the tears came to the surface of his big blue eyes. But, determining to keep his promise, he choked them back bravely, and said to the boy's surprise, "Yes! It was the gander bit me." Later came, "and it is nothing to laugh about."

Mary Alice and the boys were taken by surprise at this and could say nothing. Charles Edwards was acting queerly, they thought, or had suddenly changed. It was plain to be seen he meant to keep his promise and not to be the cry-baby they thought him. They decided to walk down by the goose-lot, well . . . just for the fun of the thing.

"Let's see if Mother Goose has hatched her goslings," said Joe, and not waiting for Henry to reply, he fell down before the big barrel and thrust his long arm under the old goose hen into the warm nest. In doing this he had to put his head into the big barrel, lying on its side. Henry waited near his side. Mary Alice came up just in time to see a queer sight. Old Mr. Gander slipping along the fence by the coal house on the hog-lot side reached his long neck through the spaces in the wide board fence and nipped Joe on the arm where his shirt sleeve was rolled back.

"Oh! Oh! Oh—o-o!" screamed Joe, frantically bumping his head a terrible blow in his haste to remove himself from the barrel. Outside, he cried in pain, "Oh! Oh—o-o! That hurts awfully! O, O, my . . . what was that bit me?"

Mary Alice was beside herself with laughter, and Henry, who had also seen, laughed and laughed and laughed. It all happened so suddenly. And was so funny.

"It's nothing to laugh about," snapped Joe.

"That's what Charles Edwards thought," said Mary Alice slowly.

Then Joe hung his head while Mary Alice said austerely, "It serves you right, Joe. You ought to mind your business. You know mother does not want you worrying the old goose. Seems Mr. Gander knows better than you do about hatching goose eggs. It seems little Charles Edwards knew what he was talking about."

This made Joe drop his head the more. Strange he should remember the memory verse of Sunday's lesson just then. He saw it written in his mind's eye across the first page of his paper, "A child is known by his doings." He stood rubbing his arm which was red and swollen and said bravely, "Guess I acted like a child this morning when I teased and made fun of Charles Edwards. I guess he did just as I, meddled with old Mother Goose's nest and Mr. Gander wouldn't stand for it."

Mary Alice said she thought he was acting very much the man just then. Which made Joe smile again.

At the table at noon, when telling Uncle Ben, the farm hand, about their experience, he said to their surprise, "Sure Ganders have teeth."

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

A VISIT TO THE VALLEY.

The day dawned brightly, and at sun-up five young people from my church, my mother and I packed into my car and were off to the Virginia Valley Sunday School Convention. Four of the group had never seen mountains and only I had been through Nature's Garden called the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia. The sands of the seashore were soon left behind while we journeyed via Virginia's Capitol and University to the land of the sky.

A visitor with an eye for beauty never fails to thrill at the beauty of these majestic mountains clad in green with a veil of blue. From Staunton to Winchester we passed through the beautiful valley with its golden grain waving in the wind, pasture lands feeding cattle, horses, and sheep, rippling streams of clear water, beautiful homes and spacious barns, cities, villages, and open spaces, and towering mountains hemming us in on east and west, like the mighty arms of the Infinite. Of course we explored some of the numerous caverns which lie beneath the earth's surface in this marvelous valley and feasted the eye and mind on stalactites and stalagmites that have been in the making for millions of years. Here are underground cathedrals, fish markets, ball-rooms and pipe organs of nature's own making. Men may dig tunnels and build cathedrals and paint pictures, but he will never surpass the artistry of Nature's God as found in the priestive beauty of the Valley of Virginia.

And among these hills are stalwart Christian men and women who count character to be of more value than forms and who take religion seriously. Space forbids the telling of how Roy Larrick and his working comrades conducted a two-day session of the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention. Suffice it to say that all who appeared on the program, which was printed in this paper, put mind and soul into their performance and that all sessions were conducted with decorum, diligence, and in brotherly love. The Convention took a definite stand against the use of alcoholic beverages, and in other ways showed its willingness to face modern conditions with a positive Christian message and life.

So royal and sincere was the welcome given my group from Norfolk that these sand-fiddlers are eager to see the hill-billies and the Valley again soon. To tell the truth some of the youngsters seem very eager to develop certain friendships that began in the shadow of the mountains. A cordial invitation awaits those who have never seen the sea to come and share with us its mystery and beauty. It is this larger friendship that builds bigger persons, and when developed among nations and races will destroy war and insure peace.

The lure of the Nation's Capitol drew us off the course home but rewarded us well for a few miles drive with a view of the President's home, our legislative halls, library, and memorials, and the city's beautiful parks. Then came a lovely drive by the historic Potomac river from Washington to Mount Vernon where lay the remains of "the father of his country" amidst the beauty of his ancient estate.

In the minds of my group linger many things of beauty which will be a joy forever.

POVERTY.

Beggars disturb me. I can't feel happy after saying no to one who asks for bread. But I can scarcely feed my family and can't give to everybody. It hurts me to think people need food and clothes. And millions of our Americans need both.

But there is a poverty greater than the physical. This other poverty disturbs me more. Without food one may starve with a happy heart, if he has done his best. Not much clothing is really needed for comfort, and some who can afford plenty wear hardly enough for decency and certainly not enough for modesty. The physical poverty is as nothing in comparison to the poverty of the soul.

It is poverty of soul that keeps one little in this world and the next. There are riches enough in Christ Jesus to make us all wealthy for time and eternity. Why not be rich?

I AM SUMMER SCHOOL.

I transform the days of summer into hours of enrichment and opportunities for Christian training and development.

I am not something apart from the church. I am the church's school. I am its servant and your guide; its helper and your counselor; its interpreter and your friend.

I am the quiet of Morning Watch, the stimulus of class work, the zest and enthusiasm of play, and the inspiration of worship.

I am the mold of friendship, the joy of co-operation, the thrill of achievement, and the desire for service.

I am the embodiment of the spirit of youth with its courage, independence, enthusiasm, seriousness and idealism.

I am the Voice of the young man of Galilee speaking to the young people of America in language which they can understand.

I am the Spirit of Love filling the hearts of young men and women and sending them out to change the world.

I am the arm of the church reaching around the shoulders of young people and drawing them to the Master.

I am Summer School.

WAIT.

If but one message I may leave behind,
One single word of courage for my kind,
It would be this—oh, brother, sister, friend—
Whatever life may bring—what God may send—
No matter whether clouds lift soon or late—
Take heart and wait.

Despair may tangle darkly at your feet,
Your faith be dimmed, and hope once cool and sweet,

Be lost—but suddenly, above a hill,
A heavenly lamp set on a heavenly hill,
Will shine for you and point the way to go
How well I know!

For I have waited through the dark and I
Have seen a star rise in the blackest sky,
Repeatedly, it has never failed me yet,
And I have learned God never will forget
To light His lamp, if we but wait for it—
It will be lit.

—Grace Noel Cromwell.

THE REALLY POOR MAN.

A man is really poor:
If he is without friends.
If he has low ideals.
If he has a guilty conscience.
If he has lost his self-respect.
If his morals are questionable.
If he has lost his grip upon himself.
If he is selfish, uncharitable, or cruel.
If he has forfeited his health for wealth.
If his mind and soul have been neglected.
If he has traded away his character for money.
If his wife and family do not love and respect him.

If he has a disagreeable disposition that makes enemies or repels his friends.

If making money has crowded out the cultivation of his spiritual life.

If worldliness has caused him to lose fellowship with Christ.

If love of money has hardened him until the love of Christ and His gospel doesn't stir him to do his best for missions.

If all his investments and possessions are laid up on earth and he has no treasures in heaven.

A WORSHIP PROGRAM.

Theme, "The Prince of Peace." Is Jesus' way practical? For the individual? For Nations? Instrumental Prelude: Hymn, "The Lord is My Shepherd."

Invocation: "Here in the quiet of this evening hour, let us offer anew to our God a pledge that our youth shall be tuned to do His will; that we will do our part to bring His Kingdom of Peace on earth. With bowed heads let us sing as our prayer the opening hymn, "We Give Thee But Thine Own."

Hymn, "We Give Thee But Thine Own."

Scripture reading, Isaiah 9:2-7.

Hymn, "We've a Story to Tell to the Nations."
Speaker, "Is Jesus' way practical for me and for my country?"

Hymnic Benediction:

"Lead on, O King Eternal, 'till sins fierce war shall cease,
And holiness shall whisper the sweet Amen of peace.
For not with swords loud clashing, nor roll of stirring drums,
With deeds of love and mercy the heavenly kingdom comes."

July fourth may be celebrated with drums and hurrahs and noise, or it may be made a time for

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

LESSON XIII, JUNE 24, 1934.
REVIEW

GOLDEN TEXT: "Of his kingdom there shall be no end."—Luke 1:33.

In this review lesson a few of the central teachings of the respective lessons during the quarter will be given.

1. Confessing and Following Christ.

(a.) Recognition of Christ as the son of the Living God is the foundation of the Church.

(b.) Christ is the Builder of the Church.

(c.) Self-denial is the first law of the Christian life.

2. The Child and the Kingdom.

(a.) Child-likeness is a primary prerequisite for entrance into the Kingdom of God.

(b.) The individual is precious in the sight of God.

(c.) Children of tender years are to be brought to Jesus.

3. Jesus Teaches Forgiveness.

(a.) We must forgive if we are to be forgiven.

(b.) Forgiveness is God-likeness.

(c.) Because God has forgiven us we ought to forgive others.

4. Our All For the Kingdom.

(a.) Material things cannot satisfy the hunger of the heart.

(b.) The thing that comes between us and God must be given up.

(c.) Eternal life is not by works; it is the gift of God.

(d.) Eternal life is a matter of quality, not of quantity.

5. Christ's Standard of Greatness.

(a.) The standards of the world are not the standards of God.

(b.) The willingness to serve is the mark of true greatness.

thought in regard to better international relations and the higher patriotism. In the same way this meeting may be a mere discussion of national power or it may be used for the application of the Christian ideal to the meaning of Independence Day. Do not omit the first four words of the topic.

Jesus never faced this problem of International Relations as we do today. There were international problems and his people were the victims of imperialism, but the system was more or less taken for granted and the world was very small. The best we can do is to study his words and his behavior and from these decide what "the mind of Christ" was. He was more interested in people than in the class or race or nation to which they belonged. (Give examples, such as John 4:4; Matt. 9:9-13.) He did not believe in special privileges for any because of the chance of birth. (See Mark 3:31-35). He insisted that God's favor did not depend upon nationality. (Read Luke 4:25:29.) What would you imagine the mind of Christ on international relations to be?

Do these words of J. S. Mac Donald apply to your answers? "The glory of the twentieth century is that all the world has been made a neighborhood; the tragedy of the twentieth century is that all the world has been made a neighborhood before the people had learned to be neighborly."

What can young people do?

1. Clear thinking is one thing. Do we merely echo parents or teachers views on international affairs or do we seek facts on both sides of debatable questions?

2. Appreciation, understanding, friendliness; These we may cultivate through contacts with other nationalities, near and far. Our missionary work helps.

3. Give publicity to proved facts about war, its causes, the munitions racket, and, also about peace agencies such as the World Court.

4. Exalt the many heroes of peace, show what courage they manifest, and what their work has meant to the world.

E. R.

A Chicago sister asks if it is customary for churches to have the Lord's Supper at the evening service for the benefit of those who could not attend the morning service. I know of no Scripture either for or against such practice. If a person can attend only at night, it seems that he should not be denied the privilege of eating the Lord's Supper, whether there is only one or fifty such. But I see no way to excuse a person who remains away from the morning service by choice. If a person goes out on a pleasure trip, or for any selfish motive stays away from the morning service simply because he knows he can attend the evening service, it seems to me that he stands the evening service, it seems to me that he stands self-condemned. Be sure that the evening service

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy

MONDAY.

"WINNING SOULS."

"He that winneth souls is wise."—Prov. 11:30.

The writer confesses that his earliest idea of winning a soul to Christ was in the solitary act of persuading one to give up sin, renounce the world, the flesh and the devil, and surrender to Christ in Christian living. He is still of the same opinion except in the word "solitary." He has learned, along the practical ways of life, that the winning of souls embraces the compass of human relations.

There is a "pure, peaceable, gentle, easy to be intreated, merciful, friendly, loving, sincere life that represents all the true and noble values of life." There is an influence to be radiated, a power to wield, a love to be bestowed, a light to shine from our souls, which will attract for God. There is a character to possess which will be like that of the apostles, when, they who saw them, "took knowledge of them that they walked with Jesus."

So, "winning souls" brings us to the "good life,"—a daily walk so full of the good fruit and so beautiful that it attracts by its goodness and beauty. Such a life must impart health, joy, peace and corresponding traits to all who come in contact with it. In Revelation we read, "The leaves of the trees were for the healing of the nations." If leaves may be used for our personal influence, what is ours?

Prayer—O God, our God, we face squarely today the fact that we will do anything and endure any hardships for the treasures of this world. Help us to see Thee clearly as the supreme prize of our lives, and seek first Thy kingdom.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"SURRENDER."

"Delight thyself also in the Lord; and He shall give thee the desires of thine heart."—Ps. 37:4.

C. H. Spurgeon is quoted as once saying, "See a tiny cork on the sea, if only a fly drops upon it he feels the motion, and bounce upon the tiny waves. May you be as mobile beneath the power of God as the cork is on the surface of the sea! For this self-surrender is one of the essential qualifications for one who is to realize that there is a God and that you love Him."

The other day, the writer read a letter which a shipmate had received from his sister. This letter was a plea for him to accept Christ without reservation, and experience the reality of Him. The letter rehearsed her early reasons for being a christian, saying that she was a christian because she was brought up that way, but that she had never experienced any personal God in her life, until recently when she realized that to be Christian was an individual thing and that she must find God for herself. She made the surrender and almost suddenly her life was made glorious and she realized God gloriously. Wherein once she had no taste for the Bible and things religious, now health, joy, peace and corresponding traits of christian character were her greatest delight.

This is a woman who is thirty-nine years of age, and living a professed christian life all her life, just now, born into the light. It is beautiful!

Prayer—Oh thou, compassionate, who on the road Thyself, on mystic Bread and Wine didst spend I and my brother low before Thee bend. Fill Thou his soul—my hungry soul—with good."

—Amen.

WEDNESDAY

"BEING HOLY."

"Ye shall be holy; for I the Lord your God am holy."—Lev. 19:2.

What does it mean to be holy? Let the Word answer. It means forgiven, pure and clean in thought and life, "The blood of Jesus cleanses from all sin."

It means, as we would consecrate ourselves to any cause, to consecrating the life to God to achieve godly character.

It means trying to live peaceably with men." Without which no man shall see the Lord."

It means crucifying the desires of the flesh and exalting the spirit of God in the life, "Minding the things of the spirit."

It means hating sin and loving righteousness. The presence of this spirit is a token that one is "begotten of God."

It means that our conversation shall always be of that high order which reveals the high purpose of life and is consistent with the faith that is in us. It is thus that our conversation is "seasoned with salt" (saving power).

It means living daily so as to command the respect and confidence of others, for only thus may we be "an example to them that believe."

It means seeking and living the truth, for only thus may one be "sanctified,"—made holy.

It means knowing the scripture for only thus are we "instructed in righteousness," and only thus is man made complete, "furnished completely unto every good work."

It means living unto the life that God is. If God is holy, then the things of God must be holy. To learn of Him and pattern our lives after His as far as possible is to live holy. "He that followeth after me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." And many more blessings may holiness have for you. If so let thy soul possess them all.

Prayer—Our dear heavenly Father, we look to Thee helplessly. We are weak and sinful, without Thee there is nothing good in us. Grant unto our coming full forgiveness and unto our souls the fulness of desire for the glory of Thy life.
—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"A WISE PRECAUTION"

"If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me."—Ps. 66:18.

Did you ever pray and there was no answer? Yes, many a time. Well, there are many reasons why prayer is not answered. There is one certain preventative. It is sin. How easy it is to regard sin lightly and say, "O, it is only an innocent pastime." Yes, maybe so, but we bear no greater responsibility than that of checking up on ourselves closely lest sin be there. If it is there, like glass insulation to high-powered electric current, it stops the circuit of heaven from thy soul.

God's true children must climb the mount of the sacrifice of sin. Wholly and unflinchingly he must follow the path by which our heavenly Father leads. So done, the mount of trial becomes a blessing, for from its heights there are wider horizons; we breathe a pure atmosphere; love only the things that are good, high and holy; and walk and talk with God.

Prayer—Our Father, the dearest offering we can make is that of ourselves. And the dearest offering we can ask of Thee is Jesus,—Jesus, blessed Jesus. Fill our lives daily and no sin will be there. In His name we ask it.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"THE GLORY OF HUMILITY."

"By humility and the fear of the Lord are riches, and power, and life."—Prov. 22:4.

Herein is the greatness of humility. We are told that "Divine Watts," one of the immortal artists, was as simple and humble as a child. They say that when talking to him there was something pathetic in the poise of his head, with the face lightly lifted, as a blind man lifts his, he seemed always to have a window open to the infinite from whom he sought eternal beauty and more power to think His thoughts after Him.

And this may be said of many great and good people. Real humility is the foundation on which alone the fabric of spiritual character can be built. It is the rich soil in which all the graces grow and flourish.

A beautiful figure of this has been furnished us from someone who said, "Hill-tops are barren because the soil is washed off by the rains; but the valleys are fertile because there the rich deposits gather." Proud hearts are sterile but lowly hearts are fertile with grace and all lovely things. "Blessed are the poor in heart for they shall see God."

Prayer—Our Father, we realize that humility is in reach of us all. We pray for this the most beautiful life in our every moment for Jesus' sake. We ask it in His name.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"BURIED FORESTS."

"All they that hate me love Death."—Psalm 8:22-36.

In Oregon, along the southern shore of Lake Michigan, and in various other parts of our country, wind-blown sand-dunes advance gradually, a few feet a year, submerging trees as they move onward, until finally whole forests are buried, only their gaunt, dead tops projecting from the conquering waste.

It is a sad sight, reminding an observer of the slow and insidious but certain advance of sin when it meets no barrier in a human life. As sure as we do not fight it, it has us. Nothing but the barricade of a soul firmly fixed in God's truth will hold it back and save our trees alive.

Prayer—And so we come to Thee daily and hourly, O Christ, and beg Thee to preserve us from temptation. Thou wert tempted yet without sin. In Thy strength we too shall conquer.

SUNDAY.

"BELOVED PHYSICIANS."

"Luke, the beloved physician, and Demas salute you."—Col. 4:10-18.

Doctors are beloved in proportion to their self-sacrifice. They may be trusted for their skill and admired for it, but they are in line with the beloved Dr. Luke only when, like him, they stick to their patients through weal and woe, and meet all perils with them. Like a Massachusetts physician whose six-year-old patient in a hospital—a policeman's daughter—was sinking fast. There was a chance of saving her by blood transfusion, and the doctor gave a pint of his blood. In half an hour the little girl was safely past the crisis.

In all our life-work, our real success depends on the amount of unselfishness involved. If we

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, Pastor.

WHAT ACCOUNT IS RELIGION?

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"Hast thou not known? hast thou not heard, that the everlasting God, the Lord, the Creator of the ends of the earth, fainteth not, neither is weary? There is no searching of His understanding. He giveth power to the faint; and to them that have no might he increaseth strength. Even the youths shall faint and be weary, and the young men shall utterly fall but they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; they shall walk and not faint." —Isa. 40:28-31.

In preparation for the sermon for this evening service I have been conscious of the large number of boys and girls who are finishing high school, and young men and women who are returning to their home church from colleges and universities. It is as though you have been on an excursion of learning, and are now landed back at the home port. Coming to your church and pastor you ask: What account is religion anyhow? It is a large question, and so full and varied is its answer when one has only a few minutes in which to discuss it one hardly knows where to begin.

Already you have observed what a large place it plays in your surroundings. Since babyhood you have been taught it. And taught it by those who love you best, and are the most interested in your happiness and success. Your first recollections are of your mother teaching you:

"Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray the Lord my soul to keep."

Thus your baby lips lisped off three of the greatest, and most primary words ever spoken from human tongues. "I pray," and "the Lord," "my soul,"—"my soul to keep." So even in your own mind you have never been without God, nor prayer, nor a soul. What account is religion? It opens the window to those three, namely, the soul, and prayer, and God. My young friends, as you undertake more and more; as you grow up to larger and larger responsibility; and as you become humbler and humbler you will thank your stars for each of them: For God, whom you will learn more to lean upon,—that unshakable, unchanging, loving heavenly Father; and for prayer which will give you access to Him; and for that divinity within that causes you to crave to serve well your day and generation, and gives you courage, and faith, and love for the ever-expanding duties of life.

You have observed also, my young friends, that in your world a larger emphasis has been laid upon religion than any other one thing. Everywhere a church, with its local school of religious instruction. Some of them in great buildings like this, others in single room little churches under the trees,—but with a task alike, and an influence as lasting as the larger church. Many of you are returning from great colleges and universities,—almost all of them under auspices of the church. As originally all of them were handmaidens of religion. What account is religion? It opens the doors of learning, bids you enter; teaching you both sides, and all sides of life; and allowing you free rein to forget religion and God if you will.

What account is religion? Much, since we are not physical only. I look at my hands, feel my body, and realize that it is but a very small part of me. Religion has taught me this. Some time ago I was called upon both by duty and love to stand in the home of a deceased mother. There the body was gorgeously, and fragrantly surrounded with many friends' choicest flowers. I saw the weeping father lift little children up to see "mother." Shortly the rooms would all be opened, friends would come, and bear her tenderly away. Or would they bear "her" away? Was the body "her"? No, a thousand times no. Had one of those precious children fallen at that moment in the fire the mother would not have been able to do one thing about it. She was not there. What I am saying is: The body, that which I see and seem to be is only such a small,—a very small part of me. I am spiritual. Religion has taught me that. And what is more pertinent Religion is the realm of the spiritual. What account is religion? It is as necessary to our spiritual make-up as is water to the fish, or food for our bodies. It answers the eternal hunger of the soul, about which we first prayed in babyhood.

But some wise-acre may say to you young folks Mr. So-and-So gets along all right without religion. Do not be fooled. He is the recipient of the blessings, graces, and emoluments of religion in spite of the fact that he may ungratefully declare that he is not. Do the fish give any credence to the fellow fish's boast that he has nothing to do with water! They just say, "Poor fish," and move along. "The fool hath said, There is no God." "Has thou not known . . . God, the Lord, the Creator of the ends of the earth?"

Yes, and we have been going to school. Our mind has been used, or should have been. And you have been thinking. Sometimes you have thought out loud, and unappreciative ones have said you were losing your religion. You have been sizing up certain facts, which the mother who taught you your baby prayer did not teach you. You were not ready for them. Now you have been taught them. You may think at first that they are in conflict with that baby prayer, because you were not taught them with the prayer. Do not be misled. When you have learned all your minds are taking in, you will still need to come back to God, and prayer, and "my soul." They are unshakably the beginning. "In the beginning God . . ." And when you have asked all your questions, ask an old one over: What account is religion?, then answer it by saying, Religion offers the only satisfactory answer to the questions of my mind.

Would you like our discussion to take a more practical turn? Then let us notice that we are equipped with Body, Mind, and Spirit. We stand, young folks, upon the threshold of adult life with its dreams, and hopes, and programs unfolding before us. The tools are in our hands,—the greatest equipment on earth,—body, the very temple of God; mind, with which we may think God's thoughts after him; and the spirit with all its aspirations, convictions, and courage,—these tools, and there are none better,—what will we do with them? What account is religion? Religion tells us what to do with the living tools! That is practical enough for you. It is practical enough for anybody. The divine within us rises up within all who are eager to serve in their day and gen-helped you in your achievements up until this time, and hear them say, God led the way. God showed me how. God gave me the strength. God gave me the vision. God gave me the grace. God gave me the willingness to sacrifice for you. Hear them say it. See the glow upon their faces as they tell you that they were "not disobedient to the heavenly vision." Albert Schweitzer held these tools,—a fine body, a trained mind, and a courageous spirit in his hands,—and God showed him what to do with them. And so the great of the ages!

eration and answers life's urge. Ignore it and we are doomed to oblivion, and uselessness.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

Last week was one busy week at the Christian Orphanage with the farmer and the farm boys. The long rainy season has left our sweet potato field like a meadow. The farmer gave the writer the job of getting the grass out. He furnished us some good working boys and we undertook the job—and for two days we scraped the potato field all over.

Then we had fifteen acres of oats and vetch hay to rake up and haul to the farm. We took the boys and went at it. We put sixteen big loads in our dairy barn to feed our cattle.

Our farmer was busy at other work. He had fifteen acres of ground to break and prepare and seed to beans. Then he had forty acres of wheat to harvest and in one day and a half he harvested thirty-three acres besides cutting with a tractor harrow about twenty acres of corn land. All of this work was done in less than a week. You can imagine that we worked early and late.

The writer is the handy man when the farmer has two jobs of work on his hands at one time and cannot handle both he calls on the writer to assist. We are like the song leader we knew in our younger days. He would "pitch" the tune as they called it in those days and then he would drop out until they reached a high note and he would fall in again and lead them over the high places. The writer is a pinch hitter and comes to the bat when needed most.

The weather conditions have made so much work come on us at one time this spring that it has been hard to handle. If we can have one more week of clear weather and no one gets sick we will be able to catch up our farm work.

This is vacation season and quite a number of our children are taking their ten days off. We try to give each child ten days vacation if they have any kinspeople to visit who will take them. Most all the children get to go somewhere during the summer.

We will have some who will not because they have no one to take them.

Is your Sunday School making a monthly offering? If not, start now. We need you. No other Sunday School can do the work your school ought to do.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Up from the lowlands 120 miles on foot came young Africans to Gogoi, East Africa. For what? To join the Christian Church. The work down in the valley is being carried on by a native Christian who has shown great faithfulness, report Rev. and Mrs. John P. Dysart, of Gogoi. There are two Christian young couples married last year, who have gone recently to live there and it is hoped they will be able to encourage more children and young people to come to the school and that they will be in themselves centers of radiant influence.

are working for ourselves, the world will soon find it out. If we are laboring for others, whether the world discovers it or not, the Lord of all destiny will know it, and ours will be the eternal reward.

Prayer—We shall not be working for the reward, then, our Saviour, but we shall be working for Thee and for Thy brothers and sisters on the earth. May this be our one motive.—Amen.

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

Seek, in your own youth and vigor, great as it is, to do the things God has caused you to want to do, and you will fail. "Even the youths shall faint and grow weary, and the young men shall utterly fail." You have strength, great strength, but before you have gone far you will find that your individual strength is but a house of cards to tumble in the first great testing,—“but they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run and not be weary; they shall walk and not faint.” So says the great prophet of all times, who himself served under five kings of Israel, and left an impress on the ages which can never be forgotten.

What account is religion? Try it, and see! Test it for yourselves! Feel the thrill of walking with God, in loving service to fellowmen. And if you are willing to try it hear the words of Jesus: "He that loveth his life shall lose it; and he that hateth his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal." And may the Spirit of God be with you always.—Amen.

IN SUMMER WORK.

My first service of the summer was a glorious beginning. I preached at an interdenominational center in Norfolk, Hope Chapel, and used as my subject, "In the Shadow of the Cross." After the benediction had been given and the congregation had started moving out, I noticed several sitting around the auditorium weeping as if their hearts would break. We spent about an hour praying and talking with these people whose hearts had been broken by the love of the Man who died for them. Two young ladies gave their hearts and lives to Christ and went away with that Peace and fuller life that He promised to give.

This summer, more than ever before, I feel the guiding power of the Spirit; and I am confident that if I trust all things into His hands this will be a glorious season spent in heavenly places. Prayer is being answered for me on every hand, Light is coming that I never hoped for, and that greatest of all mysteries, the mystery of salvation or godliness, is flooding my soul. I wish that I could share the glory that is now mine with each reader of the CHRISTIAN SUN. I am asking the prayers of each of you.

GOING TO PALESTINE.

Rev. J. H. Dollar, Lagrange, Georgia, is going to Palestine. He has dreamed of this ever since his graduation from Elon College. At Lagrange United Church he has arrived. He is going one year before the time appointed at graduation. His many friends all over this wide territory from the Carolinas, Alabama and Georgia, wish him a happy voyage and a safe return. He leaves Lagrange on June 19th, takes in the General Council at Oberlin on the way, and sails the 23rd. He will combine study with pleasure and hopes to bring back first hand information and inspiration that will tell in his ministry for years to come. He said to a friend recently, that he wanted to share his experience with the churches of his area and would be glad to respond to calls for lectures or an opportunity to tell the story of his travels after his return about Sept. 1st. Bon voyage!

Mr. Robert Barksdale, graduate of Piedmont College and student now at Vanderbilt School of Religion in the Southern Foundation, will, as an S. S. S. worker, have charge of the United Church while Mr. Dollar is gone. Congratulations to both the church and to Mr. Barksdale.

M. J. S.

Paul speaks of the new man, which is the Lord's institution of the Christian dispensation. (Eph. 2:15.) It is made up of both Jews and Gentiles. Its gates are open to all nations. The enmity that stood between the Jews and Gentiles, which was the law of the commandments contained in ordinances, was abolished in his flesh, in order to the establishment or existence of the new man. (Eph. 2:15, 16.) Paul tells us that the handwriting or ordinances that was against and contrary to us was taken out of the way, being nailed to the cross. Just another way of saying that the Old Covenant ended at the cross. (Col. 2:14.) Then the middle wall between the Jews and Gentiles was taken out of the way in order to the existence of the one body or church of Christ.—E. M. Borden.

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

South Entrance to the Campus

ELON COLLEGE, founded by the Christian Church in 1889, has fully justified the faith and hope of its founders during its 42 years of operation. Its graduates from the four-year course leading to a bachelor's degree, number 980, now living, 122 of whom are in the Christian Ministry and full-time Christian service. The majority of these are members of our own denomination. In addition, 449 are in educational work and are an active influence in the lay leadership of the Christian Church.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION BUILDING, and the definite religious atmosphere of the College, provide the very best facilities available for training for religious leadership, and offer the Church its finest opportunity to train the young people of the denomination to assume active leadership both in the ministry and laity of the local churches.

OBITUARIES

DEAVERS.

Mrs. Ida F. Deavers, wife of Gilbert Deavers, died May 22, 1934, at the age of 61 years, 3 months and 10 days. She was a member of the Newport Christian Church, and lived in that community, though because of ill health she had not been able to attend church for several years.

She is survived by her husband, two sons, seven grandchildren, three sisters and two brothers.

Funeral services were held May 24, 1934, at the Brick Lutheran Church, near her home.

A. W. ANDES.

GOOD.

Ernest Good, son of the late Henry and Mary J. Good, was born in Page County, Va., September 25, 1877, and died April 22, 1934, aged 56 years, 6 months, and 27 days. Deceased was engaged in the merchandising business at Verbeia Mills, near Shenandoah, Va., and was held in high esteem by a wide circle of friends. He is survived by his widow, two sons, and one daughter.

Funeral services were held from his late home, April 24, 1934, and interment in a family cemetery not far away.
A. W. ANDES.

MAUCK.

Isham Mauck was born February 17, 1891, and died May 4, 1934, at the age of 43 years, 2 months and 17 days. He was a member of Leaksville Church since 1911, though for some years he had lived near Manassas, Va., and because of the distance from Leaksville had not been able to attend church there very often. He is survived by his widow and eleven children, some of them quite young.

Funeral services were held at Leaksville, May 7, 1934.

A. W. ANDES.

MARTZ.

Miss Minnie P. Martz was born July 12, 1865, and died April 27, 1934, making her age, therefore, 68 years, 9 months and 15 days. It was my privilege to receive her into the church at Palmyra about a year and a half ago.

Funeral services were held at her late home April 29, 1934, and the remains were laid to rest in the cemetery at Edinburg, Va.

A. W. ANDES.

WARREN.

Mrs. Annie (Hughes) (Jones) Warren, was born December 2, 1871, and died May 15, 1934, age 62 years, 5 months and 13 days.

She was first married to the late John W. Jones, and to this union were born two children: Mrs. B. M. Bennett, and Mrs. Clyde Isley, Burlington, N. C., R. No 4.

Her second marriage was to Mr. W. Warren, February 6, 1896, and to this union were born four children: Mrs. J. R. Newell, Greensboro, N. C.; Mrs. J. L. Ross, Altamahaw, N. C.; and Linley and Nellie Warren, of the home. Surviving, with the children, are three brothers: Mr. John Hughes, Altamahaw, N. C.; Riley Hughes, Farmville, N. C.; Bob Hughes, Altamahaw, N. C.; two sisters: Mrs. W. L. Norton, Gibsonville, N. C., and Mrs. W. M. Beasley, Burlington, N. C.; six grandchildren.

Early in life she professed faith in Christ, and united with Bethlehem Christian Church, to which church she remained a faithful and good member until God called her home. She was faithful and devoted to her home, her church and her family, and held high standards of purity, rejoicing always in the right, abhorring evil. To her Christ was a real experience, and held first place in her life. She was a fine example of the words of Christ: "Seek ye first the Kingdom of Heaven and all these things shall be added unto you."

She was held in high esteem by all who knew her, and was a good neighbor, ready to serve in sickness and in health. She played the part of motherhood in a fine way. A great mother, wife and friend in Israel has gone from among us. Burial services were conducted from Bethlehem Christian Church, by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. Frank Morgan. Her body was laid to rest to await the resurrection morning, in the church cemetery, beneath a mound of gorgeous flowers.

May God richly comfort husband and children, who feel her going deeply.

Moffat Tunnel.—

The new Dotsero Cutoff and Moffat Tunnel were dedicated on June 16th. Taken together these projects cost nearly $22 millions, the cutoff costing $3,800,000 and the tunnel in the neighborhood of $18,000,000. The tunnel is over six miles long. Together, they shorten the distance between Salt Lake City and Denver by 175 miles, incidentally putting the Colorado capital on a transcontinental line.

Public Debt Reaches New High.—

The nation's gross public debt, according to figures from the Treasury Department, reached a new high record during the past week—$27,005,438,125. This overshadows the previous war-time high of $26,596,701,648, which was recorded on August 31, 1919. The net debt is still lower than at that time, for the cash balance in the Treasury stands at $2,750 millions at present, as against only $1,118 millions on the 1919 date.

Caterpillars Invade Richmond.—

The Capital City of Virginia is again being invaded. This time it is by an army of Caterpillars. Millions of these pests are devouring the leaves of shade trees and flowers, dropping down on people's backs, crawling over porches, and even invading the insides of homes. In no recent year has the city been subjected to such an invasion, and the director of public works has been compelled to hire additional help as well as equip a power spray in an effort to combat the invaders.

NRA Licensing Power Ends.—

On Saturday, June 16th, at five minutes before noon, the licensing power which was considered the most powerful weapon of the National Recovery Act, automatically expired. This power was given the President just one year previously and was to run for a year only unless renewed, which it was not. Never invoked, this extraordinary licensing authority would have enabled the President to tell a business just how it should operate. The only choice of the licensed industry would have been to obey government dictates or go out of business.

A Tremor A Day.—

Paraphrasing an old adage, "A tremor a day keeps the earthquake away." We are told that this is actually true, and that though the earth has been doing a merry dance for the past two weeks, "it should bring peace of mind rather than uneasiness to man." Fordham University seismograph experts say that one or more tremors a day have been recorded during the past ten days preceding this week. While this is unusual, it is much better than a long period of earthly rest, because "when we go for a long period without any recordings, the earth makes up for it with a major quake."

Page Zaro Agha.—

Much has been written lately of the aged Turk, Zaro Agha, who claims for himself the age of 160 years. Only recently a formidable rival has been reported in the city of Petersburg, Virginia. It seems that John Roberts, only 92 years old, of Athens, Georgia, made application for work at the re-employment office, and in course of the questioning which followed made reference to his 159-year-old grandfather whom he said resided in Petersburg. The head of the employment said that Roberts "showed evidence of very clear mental alertness and upon being questioned about his grandfather related events that indicated he was reasonably sure of the correctness of the facts." The Petersburg directory fails to reveal a Reuben Roberts (the name given), but search for "the second oldest man in the world" is being continued.

A World-Wide Drought.—

Not this country alone has been hounded by drought this year. Other countries are feeling its pinch as well. England is suffering a water shortage which, in some regions, is said to be the worst in a century. Dried up pastures, dying livestock, seared crops, appear everywhere, while some cities are having acute situations in regard to their water supply. King George has ordered that watering of the royal gardens at Windsor be discontinued. In France, too, the water shortage is said to be becoming serious. Forest fires have become widespread, crops are suffering, and much damage is predicted if rain doesn't come soon. In Russia, drought has caused a sudden spiritual twist that is upsetting to some extent Communist leaders. Russian peasants, who were prevailed upon to denounce religion, are now reported turning to prayer in some sections in hopes for rain. Other religious practices, such as sacrifices and sprinkling one another with water, have reappeared.

Cleveland and the Pope's Emissary.—

Fifty thousand Catholics from the fourteen counties of the diocese of Cleveland (Ohio) gathered in the Cleveland stadium recently to welcome the Most Reverend Amleto Giovanni Cocognani, archbishop of Laodicea. The bishop's coming to the city marked the first official visit of an apostolic delegate to that diocese. The meeting was a prelude to the annual convention of the Catholic Hospital Association of the United States and Canada. The most important action taken at this meeting, in relation to the outside world, was the action in regard to motion pictures. In the presence of the representative of Pope Pius XI, 50,000 men, women and children promised to keep away from motion pictures dealing with indecent and immoral subjects. "Do you resent the answer of the motion picture producers that they are giving you what you want in these pictures?" asked the bishop. "I do," roared the 50,000 in response. This is certainly one cause in which Catholic and Protestant can join hands for the betterment of the country in which we live. Will the Protestants do their part?

Acts that Congress did not Pass.—

Among the various bills that the Seventy-third Congress did not pass were the following that had been much in the limelight: The Tugwell-Copeland Pure Food Bill, a most stringent pure-food bill, which was assailed as being discriminatory and unworkable; it died in the Senate. The Frazier-Lemke Mortgage Assumption Bill, which provided for federal assumption of farm mortgages and provided for the issuance of $3 billions in greenbacks. The Oil Administration Bill, which was advocated by Secretary Ickes; the best he could get was a Congressional "investigation" of the oil control system. The AAA Act Amendments, which would have given practically dictatorial powers to the Agricultural Department, were at least temporarily killed by the efforts of such men as Byrd of Virginia, Bailey of North Carolina and Smith of South Carolina. The next session of Congress will probably see a revival of efforts to pass these amendments unless the complexion of the legislative branch of the government is considerably changed in the fall elections. The McLeod Bank "Payoff" Bill, which proposed the refunding of depositors' losses in frozen deposits in closed banks, was blocked by House leaders, who prevented a vote. The Wagner Labor Dispute Bill gave way to a compromise measure which empowered the President to appoint boards to mediate labor disputes, conduct employee elections, etc. The Social Insurance Measures, such as old-age pensions and unemployment insurance, were held over until next session, when President Roosevelt has promised to bring up an even broader program for insurance against "the hazards of life." The Conery 30-Hour Bill seemed even too radical for the radicals to bring up a majority to its support, and industrial opposition killed it. The Patman Bonus-Inflation Bill passed the House, but was rejected by the Senate. Taking it all in all the Seventy-third Congress was about the most active to have yet convened, yet it deserves commendation for killing at least some of the radical bills that were initiated.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Dr. Parks Cadman was elected Honorary Moderator of the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches for the next biennium on Monday of this week, Dr. Stocking, of St. Louis, Mo., was elected Moderator.

Rev. J. H. Dollar, pastor of the LaGrange Congregational-Christian Church at LaGrange, Ga., left this week for a visit to the Holy Land. We wish for him a most wonderful trip, and can but wish that we were accompanying him.

One of the most popular seminars held at the General Council was that conducted by Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, which dealt with evangelism, church attendance and church finance. Rev. J. G. Truitt and Mr. Roger Babson, were the scribes for this seminar.

The Managing Editor and Mrs. Kernodle left for the Oberlin Council Meeting a few days early, and enjoyed a short visit to the Chicago Fair. In turn they were regretably compelled to return to Richmond before the Council meeting was over, due to the fact that all of the other officials connected with THE SUN were also at the Council.

Rev. D. D. Nash, formerly of Hopewell, Va., Eastern Virginia Conference, now at Concord, N. C., writes under date of June 17:—"I am still in Concord supplying for pastors in this city and doing what I can for my Lord in evangelistic work. I send a clipping from the Methodist Protestant Herald which will possibly be of interest to friends in Virginia." Brother Nash is giving a good account of himself and his ministry according to the report referred to which is printed elsewhere in this week's SUN. He is open for work with any church that may need his services, his postoffice address being 225 St. John Street, Concord, N. C.

The following notice was received from Mrs. B. D. Crocker, who asked that it be run as an ad, while the Managing Editor was absent from his office: "Mrs. B. D. Crocker and Miss H. C. Murphy announce the opening of the Murphy Cottage. All rooms southern exposure, home cooking, special June rates. Telephone 759." We are sorry that the ad was left out in our absence, but hope that this notice will atone. We are not personally acquainted with Miss Murphy, but Mrs. Crocker's name guarantees to us the enjoyableness that a visit to this cottage would bring.

Among those attending the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches in Oberlin, Ohio, from the Southeast, were: THE SUN's editor, Dr. J. O. Atkinson; Associate Editor, Edwin C. Gillette, and Drs. I. W. Johnson and Elisha King, contributing editors. The Sunday School Editor, Rev. H. S. Hardcastle; the editor of the Youth Fellowship Page, Rev. F. C. Lester, and the editor of the Sermon Page, Dr. John G. Truitt, were also present. Others seen from the Southeast included: Mrs. I. W. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. M. J. W. White, Rev. and Mrs. VanCleave, Dr. and Mrs. L. E. Smith, Dr. W. M. Jay, Rev. Elwood Jones, Rev. O. D. Poythress, President S. C. Harrell, Rev. and Mrs. M. J. Sweet, Rev. J. H. Dollar, and Dr. J. E. Kirbye.

OUR FLAG.

"The date of the birth of the Stars and Stripes was June 14, 1777, and its creation was proclaimed in a resolution of the Continental Congress."

"America's most gifted poets and orators have vied with one another in setting forth the significance of the red, the white, the blue of the Star Spangled Banner."

Chas. W. Stewart says, "The flag may trace its ancestry back to Mt. Sinai, whence the Lord gave to Moses the Ten Commandments and the book of the law, which testify of God's will and man's duty, and were deposited in the Ark of the Covenant within the Tabernacle, whose curtains were blue, purple, scarlet, and fine twined linen.

"Before the Ark stood the table of shew-bread, with its cloth of blue, scarlet, and white. These colors of the Jewish Church were taken over by the early Western Church for its own, and given to all the nations of western Europe for their flags. When the United States chose their flag it was of the colors of old, but new in arrangement and design, and they called it the Stars and Stripes.

"Red stands for courage, zeal, fervency; white for purity, cleanness of life, and rectitude of conduct; blue for loyalty, devotion, friendship, justice and truth."

"This flag which we honor and under which we serve is the symbol of Liberty both civil and religious, and the emblem of our unity, our power, our thought and purpose as a nation."

"The flag of America does more than proclaim mere power or acclaim a great and glorious history. Its folds wave a benediction to the yesterdays of accomplishment and beckon the tomorrows of progress with hope and confidence; it heralds the noble purposes of a mighty people and carries a message of hope and inspiration to all mankind. Its glowing splendor appeals to us to demand international justice and arbitration, it commands us to self sacrifice and to universal obligation of service, which alone can maintain equality of rights and fullness of opportunity in our republic.

"Its stars and stripes voice the spirit of America calling to a nation of indomitable courage and infinite possibilities to live the tenets of Christianity, to teach the gospel of work and usefulness, to advance education, to demand purity, the liberties of free government from the aggression of despotic power."

"A thoughtful mind when it sees a nation's flag, sees not the flag, but the nation itself. And whatever may be its symbol, its insignia, he reads chiefly in the flag the government, the principles the truth, the history that belongs to the nation that sets it forth."

The flag itself brings you its own message in the words of Franklin K. Lane:

"I am not the flag; not at all, I am but its shadow.

"I am whatever you make me, nothing more.

"I am your belief in yourself, your dream of what a people may become.

"I live a changing life, a life of moods and passions, of heart breaks and tired muscles.

"Sometimes I am strong with pride, when men do an honest work, fitting the rails together truly.

"Sometimes I droop, for then purpose has gone from me, and cynically I play the coward.

"Sometimes I am loud, garish, and full of that ego that blasts judgment.

"But always I am all that you hope to be and have the courage to try for.

"I am song and fear, struggle and panic, and ennobling hope.

"I am the day's work of the weakest man and the largest dream of the most daring.

"I am the Constitution and the courts, statutes and statute makers, soldier and dreadnaught drayman and street sweep, cook, counselor and clerk.

"I am the battle of yesterday, and the mistake of tomorrow.

"I am the mystery of the men who do without knowing why.

"I am the clutch of an idea and the reasoned purpose of resolution.

"I am no more than what you believe me to be, and I am all that you believe I can be.

"I am what you make me; nothing more.

"I swing before your eyes as a bright gleam of color, a symbol of yourself, the pictured suggestion of that big thing which makes this nation. My Stars and stripes are your dream and your labors. They are bright with cheer, brilliant with courage, firm with faith because you have made them so out of your hearts; for you are the makers of the flag, and it is well that you glory in the making."—Arranged by N. I. Stevens in The Methodist-Protestant Recorder.

THE KING COMMENDS.

His Majesty, Boris III, King of Bulgaria, has recently conferred upon Rev. and Mrs. Edward B. Haskell, veteran missionaries in Bulgaria, additional honors in recognition of their services to that country. To Mrs. Haskell the "Dames' Cross of the Order of Civic Merit, Second Degree," to Dr. Haskell the "Commanders' Cross, Order of Civic Service, Third Degree." This latter, it is said, is given, in the case of a military man, to no officer of lower rank than the commander of an army unit, including artillery, cavalry, infantry and engineers. The Haskells are returning to America soon for retirement. The Pordim Reading Room Association presented Dr. and Mrs. Haskell with an artistically illuminated document making them honorary members and stating that their pictures would hang in the Reading Room. A Proctol, equally artistic, came from the Village Council declaring the Haskells honorary citizens of Pordim and affixing their name to the street leading to the Pordim Folk School.

FIRST CHURCH, CONCORD.

"We were very glad to have one of our own boys preach for us on Mother's Day, Rev. D. D. Nash. We call Bro. Nash our boy at this home place, and the church he attended when he was a boy. I suppose he remembers hearing his father preach sometime from our pulpit. Bro. Nash used for his subject, "Jesus Never Fails." The service was very helpful and touching. At the close of the sermon Mr. Nash made an appeal to the people to give their hearts and lives to Jesus Christ. Our hearts were made glad when we saw several young men go forward with tears in their eyes and show by their act that they were tired of sin and wanted to come back into the service of Jesus, the one that never fails. About eight people responded to the invitation. We are always glad to have Mr. Nash preach for us. He is always ready to do all he can in the service of the King, helping with the singing, as he has a splendid voice, and in all departments of the church. We miss his daughter, Mary Lillie, since she has married and left our city, but we know she is a great help to the church in Hopewell, Va., where she now lives."—M. P. Herald.

A REFERENDUM ON WAR.

Who, asks Congressman Frear in an article written at our request and published in this issue of The Living Church, wants war? The question is certainly a pertinent one, because we hear war talk on every hand. One would think, from reading the daily papers, the secular periodicals, and even the religious press, that people all over the world are only awaiting a propitious moment to unleash the dogs of war.

But who actually wants war? President Roosevelt said recently that 90 per cent of the people of the world want peace, and are satisfied with their present national boundaries. Of the other 10 per cent, it is primarily a few leaders and those who stand to gain personally by the conduct of war, who really want it; the rest are mostly victims of propaganda.

In our own country, does anybody want war? Certainly the administration doesn't. Military and naval leaders, with a few possible exceptions, don't want it. Business, again with a few selfish exceptions, has no desire for it. You don't want war; neither do I. Well, then, why all this talk about "the next war"?

But war may be forced upon us, you say. Exactly; and that is why The Living Church has consistently favored the maintenance of an adequate military and naval force for national defense. The National Defense Act which has served as the basis for our military policy since 1919 is, we believe, a necessary and effective law, and this editor has been proud to serve as a reserve officer under it. But for our support of it we have been accused of militaristic leanings.

On the other hand, The Living Church has with equal consistency opposed the participation of this country in military and naval armament races, such as that in which the Vinson Act for naval building on an unprecedented scale is an important factor. We have, moreover, consistently favored limitation of armaments by international agreement and have opposed the activities of the armament industry, which we are convinced are a genuine menace to the peace of the world. For these attitudes we have been accused of pacifism and disloyalty.

Pacifism and militarism at the same time—when in fact we are neither militaristic nor pacifistic! What's in a name? The truth of the matter is that we are passionately devoted to the ideal of world peace, and convincer that another World War would mean the destruction of liberty, if not of civilization itself. But we are not blind to the events that are going on all around us, and we do not believe that peace can be achieved either through over-preparedness for war or by throwing away our weapons of national defense. It is an indication of the hysterical condition of the present day that a pragmatic middle position such as this should be misunderstood and denounced by jingoistic nationalists and ostrich-like internationalists at the same time.

But that brings us back to Congressman Frear's question, and his answer to it. Mr. Frear thinks it unlikely that, in case of actual invasion or internal insurrection, the American people would of their own volition vote for war, if the issue were placed squarely before them. He therefore advocates a constitutional amendment making a nation-wide referendum obligatory before this country could engage in a foreign war or send troops overseas for war purposes. At the same time he would limit war profits to 4 per cent, and thus eliminate the opportunity for private interests to gain by war. But the President is given full power to use the army and navy and even to conscript civilians if necessary to repel invasion or suppress insurrection.

A radical proposition, you say? Well, this is a democratic country, isn't it? Then why should not the people be allowed to vote on the vital question of war versus peace? Congress can be swayed by propaganda and influenced by secret lobbies. It is harder to propagandize 120,000,000 free citizens in time of peace. Moreover, when we elect a senator or representative on some other issue—prohibition or the tariff or what not—how do we know how he is going to vote on a war resolution? Will he represent his constituents fairly? Why shouldn't his constituents be able to speak for themselves on a question of such vital importance?

It is John Citizen who risks his neck in war, John Citizen who loses his job by going away to war, John Citizen whose family is left to shift for itself in his absence, and John Citizen who pays for the war. Isn't it high time that we give John Citizen the right to say whether or not he wants war before we ask him to bear all of the burden of it?—An Editorial in "The Living Church."

A GREAT AWAKENING.

The Catholic crusade for cleaner films has become a national movement and the offending producers are volubly promising improvement. The wave of indignation which started a year ago caused comparatively little annoyance in Hollywood till it assumed its present large proportions.

Unfortunately the first sufferers must be the exhibitors, the men who take what the producers give them or go out of business. Already they have felt the pinch. The producers know by this time that they are going to feel the same pinch in a much bigger way unless they pinch themselves into a realization that the box office value of dirt is not a true manifestation of American taste.

The Catholic bishops at Cincinnati speak for the Catholics of the nation, and they have the enthusiastic support of non-Catholics. The resulting popular and unofficial censorship promises to be more rigid and more thorough than any legal censorship hitherto established. It should cleanse the screen of all sexy slop.

After all, the producers have given the public what the public was willing to pay to see. Their fault has been a gradual demoralizing of public taste. Now that it is apparent that a large section of the public will not pay to gasp at improprieties the reaction of the film makers is immediate and inevitable.

Already the demand for decency has gone so far that it should be unnecessary to resort to the always deplorable device of legal censorship. The public is, after all, its own best censor. The public needed an awakening, the awakening is complete and the fight is on. What is now needed is to keep the public awake.—Editorial in Cleveland Ohio Plain Dealer.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF OUR CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religions teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

URGE PROTESTANT BOYCOTT OF FILMS.

A boycott of objectionable films was urged last week by the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. At the same time Will Hays, motion picture "czar," announced that the industry had taken steps "to amend its system of self-regulation."

The Associated Press makes the following observations:

In behalf of the Motion Picture Producers & Distributors of America, Hays said the action was taken to strengthen arrangements for "the right kind of screen entertainment."

The executive committee of the Federal Council of Churches urged members of 25 Protestant denominations of the United States and Canada to remain away from objectionable films and from the theatres showing them frequently.

Asserting that protests of parents, churches, schools, women's organizations, and other groups interested in safeguarding youth had been "treated with scant respect," the committee declared that the time had come for more drastic action.

It expressed approval of the "aggressive position" taken by leaders of the Catholic Church toward objectionable films, and of a similar stand by the Central Conference of American Rabbis at a recent meeting.

Block-booking and blind-buying were condemned by the committee and it was urged that churches "exert continued pressure on the industry and at Washington" to secure abolition of enforced block-booking and blind-buying of films.

"The Federal Council of Churches can see as yet little evidence of intention by the producers of motion pictures to improve the moral quality of films," the committee's statement said.

"While there has been marked advance in other respects, the indecencies, false ideals of life, incitement to drinking, gambling and sensuality, and the cynical attitude toward the sanctities of life remain unchanged."

Admitting that many persons would want guidance on films, the council made known that it plans to issue a national photoplay review service for Protestant churches "as soon as it can be financed."

Hays' statement was as follows:

"At the quarterly meeting of the board of directors of the Motion Picture Producers & Distributors of America, Inc., action was taken to amend its system of self-regulation in order to eliminate appeals from the decisions of the production code administration to the jury of producers in Hollywood.

"Additional local authority has been assigned to the production code administration in Hollywood, of which Joseph I. Breen is the director, and the personnel will be amplified.

"Any appeal from the decision of the production code administration rests only with the board of directors of the Motion Picture Producers & Distributors of America in New York, which assumes final responsibility for the character of the pictures to be made.

"There is but one answer and one answer only to reasonable objections to pictures, and that is the pictures themselves. It is recognized that the solution of the problem of the right kind of screen entertainment rests solely with the quality of the product, and these strengthened arrangements are directed to discharging that responsibility more effectively."

The Associated Press also tells us that in Cincinnati, leaders of three great religious faiths have moved to wipe the dirt from the nation's silver screens.

Bishops of the Roman Catholic church pressed forward to expand their "legion of decency" and to enforce through the box office their demands for "wholesome" movies.

A leader of the Central Conference of American Rabbis voiced approval of the Catholic campaign and revealed plans of his own faith to act.

Ohio Protestants criticized the State Board of Censors for letting too much "get by" and urged complete rejection of pictures portraying "virtue as vice, or vice as virtue."

Rev. Dr. Henry Pearce Atkins, executive secretary of the Cincinnati Federation of Churches, revealed that signatures are being sought to petitions to the Ohio Board of Censors.

Rabbi David Phillipson, a leader of the Central Congress of American Rabbis, wrote Archbishop McNicholas that "you are performing an incalculable service in the cause of clean and decent recreation." The conference and the Synagogue Council of America, he advised, already are considering action of their own.

OBSCENE MOVIES.

By C. J. STRICKLAND.

(A radio talk over Station WAIU, Columbus, Ohio, Sunday Afternoon, June 24, 1934.)

"Dear Friendly Advisor: I listen to your programs each week and enjoy them very much, especially did I enjoy your recent discussion on 'The Golden Rule' and 'The Rule of Gold.'

Now I would like to know what you think of the stand which the Catholic Church has recently taken against obscene movies? Will you please discuss this movement and give your opinion as to its worth?"

This letter comes from a person living here in Columbus who does not state her religion, and to me that makes no difference, for as usual, I will answer her question by giving my own opinion on the subject without regard to what she might, or might not, now believe or favor.

I realize that many newspapers have devoted but little, if any, space to this war between the American churches and the motion picture industry, and therefore there is a large number of people who are church members and who are regular attendants at church services who are not at all familiar with the subject which I have been requested to discuss.

Therefore, I think it would be well for me to state that this argument has come about due to the fact that for a long time church leaders have been asking the motion picture industry to discontinue the making and showing of pictures in which gangsters are glorified in their activities, and in which indecent sex scenes are built up and portrayed to the youth of this land in such a way that all kinds of crimes and vices have been exhibited as heroic.

Church leaders claim that all they have been able to get the picture industry to do about it is to say that they must show the kind of pictures that will draw the largest crowds, and in doing so they must continue with sex appealing and wild west heroic scenes.

Now, I do not believe any fair minded person does or can condemn all pictures of all producers just because those producers make some pictures of the type which might contribute to the downfall of the American Youth, and yet, I realize that the old argument that parents should pick the proper shows for their children does not stand in the eyes of people who know that such a thing cannot be done as long as both types of pictures are produced and shown.

But before I get too far in giving my personal opinions and beliefs, let me read to you the pledge which the Catholic Church is asking its members and all others who will, to sign. They call it the Legion of Decency. It reads as follows:

"I wish to join the Legion of Decency, which condemns vile and unwholesome moving pictures. I unite with all who protest against them as a grave menace to youth, to home life, to country and to religion.

"I condemn absolutely those salacious pictures which, with other degrading agencies, are corrupting public morals and promoting a sex mania in our land.

"I shall do all that I can to arouse public opinion against the portrayal of vice as a normal condition of affairs, and against depicting criminals in any class as heroes presenting their filthy philosophy of life as something acceptable to decent men and women.

"I unite with all who condemn the display of suggestive advertisements on billboards, at theatre entrances and in newspapers, and favorable reviews often given to immoral motion pictures in the daily press.

"Considering these evils, I hereby promise to remain away from all motion pictures except those which do not offend decency and Christian morality. I promise further to secure as many members as possible for the Legion of Decency.

"I further promise never to buy or read indecent books or magazines."

And so reads the pledge of the Legion of Decency which already several million Catholics and a large number of Protestants have made or signed. It is expected that at least 12 to 15 million Catholics will eventually sign and try to live up to this pledge.

There are as yet no estimates as to the number of Protestants who will sign such a pledge, but it is the opinion of the speaker that even more Protestants than Catholics will sign this pledge providing it is brought to their attention through their many different denominational leaders, many of whom have already started soliciting members in their respective churches and denominations.

A large number of Jewish people will also sign such a pledge.

It seems at first that the industry thought if it could not show certain pictures which it now has on hand or which are in the making, in Catholic sections they could be routed to Protestant sections and all would be well, but now that many Protestant leaders are already in the fight, and many others are coming, the outlook does not seem so bright for those who hold the films.

One man in the industry seems to have offered church leaders the idea that the many matrimonial split-ups among the movie stars is not the business of the public; For he says, "What they do in their private lives is their own business."

At the same time this same man advances the fact that the girl who is queen of many sexy pictures is a good Catholic on Sundays and therefore there can be nothing wrong with her pictures regardless of what part she might play. But the mere fact that she attends Mass regularly does not secure the approval of church leaders on her pictures.

There seems to be some talk on the part of the industry to endeavor to get the church leaders to counteract their present activities by recommending the pictures of which they do approve, but up-to-date, this speaker knows of no case where such a thing has been done by those in charge.

However, it is generally understood that leaders in this fight are not objecting to pictures as a whole but are only trying to force the industry to clean up, and there is no question but that great headway is being made, as already in many sections where the fight is under way the cash receipts have fallen off tremendously.

It is interesting and true that many industry leaders admit that the picture business should be cleaned up and some of them are working with church leaders in doing so.

Now you might be interested in knowing what some of the church leaders have to say regarding the present conditions so I will give you a few quotations. A Bishop in Columbus is reported to have sent out an official letter to every pastor under him that "motion pictures portraying vice, crime and indecency in the most shameless manner have done more than anything else to corrupt the hearts and minds of our young people."

His letter directs the pastors "To remind the people frequently from the altar about the danger of attending the moving picture theatres: To have every child in the parish school and Sunday school to sign a written promise not to attend the movie house where indecent and dangerous pictures are exhibited. To exercise pastoral zeal in warning the managers of such movie houses that you will warn your people from the altar not to go to such indecent and salacious exhibitions. To have all members of your Holy Name society, the Young Ladies' sodality and other parish societies not only to sign a pledge not to attend such places but to do all in their power to induce others to do the same."

Concluding his letter, the bishop said, "This is the kind of Catholic action that ought to be found in all parishes at all times, and if our Catholic men and women unite their determined efforts to battle against this ever-growing evil, they will soon make the financial success of such places of amusement feel the result of their activities. If these places are not supported they will soon cease to exist!"

Wilbur LaRoe, Jr., spokesman for the Federation of Churches in Washington, recently said,

"We feel that this move by our Catholic friends is one of the finest we have heard of recently and we have pledged them our unqualified support." He further said, "We mean business on this thing, which means that we are determined that the box office shall feel the result unless they cooperate with us. We have made up our minds to put an end to disgraceful and indecent motion pictures in the nation's capital and I believe that with such a splendid start made by the Catholics and with the Protestants joining hands we shall be able to get results."

A few days ago the Rev. Jesse Halsey, Presbyterian minister in Cincinnati said, "No teacher and no system can cope with moving pictures or the current news-stand product. We need a national housecleaning."

At the beginning of this fight some people said that the Catholics would not be able to get the support of the Protestants because in many cases the Catholics did not cooperate with the Protestants in the fight on legal whiskey, but not so many are willing to make such a statement today after seeing many Protestants, and Protestant leaders already in the fight.

Not only is the church leading this fight but it is said to be getting support from government officials who have become riled over the recent newsreel shots of John Dillinger which they felt tended to glorify this public outlaw.

It is said that protests were made against continued showing of these scenes, but a strong letter telling the government officials to attend to their own business was received, which only made the deal hotter for the producers and exhibitors. Now there is strong talk of a special Federal Censorship on all pictures.

However, it is my opinion that no Federal law or set of Federal laws can ever hope to accomplish as much towards cleaning up undesirable pictures as can the united efforts of all men and women who realize that such should be done.

I am not one to say that all picture houses should be closed, or that all pictures should be of a religious type and neither is there any question in my mind but that the picture industry can be of great and valuable service to this country, and I trust that out of this great movement on the part of many different religious leaders, much good will be accomplished for the good of mankind and the glory of God.

'DRY' CAMPAIGN LAUNCHED BY OBERLIN MEET.

A resolution calling for a drive against the sale and drinking of intoxicating liquor throughout the nation was passed today at the biennial convention of the general council of Congregational and Christian churches meeting at Oberlin, Ohio.

The resolution calls for the appointment of a committee to foster in Sunday Schools and other departments of the church organization an educational campaign against liquor and "grog" shops. Backing candidates for office who are against liquor also was called for.

A colorful pageant depicting the pioneer spirit of the West will be presented in historic Finney chapel tonight before the 1,500 theologians.

Characters representing George Washington, General Putnam, Manasseh Butler and other familiar figures in American history will re-enact the settlement of the Ohio valley, council leaders said.

A cast of 60, dressed in authentic costumes and directed by the Rev. Robert E. Brown, professor at the Oberlin Graduate School of Theology, will review the colonization of the West. Special emphasis, the Rev. Mr. Brown said, will be placed upon the founding of Marietta, Ohio's first community.

Climaxes Program

Tonight's pageant climaxes an ambitious council program, which includes seminar discussions on current social and economic problems, devotionals, business meetings, a concert by the council choir and addresses by the Rev. Theodore A. Green, chairman of the general council's commission on international relations; the Rev. Hubert C. Herring, New York, executive director of the commission on cultural relations with Latin America, and the Rev. Douglas C. Macintosh, of Yale Divinity school.

Declaring that 70 per cent of the seats in churches are not being used, a report drafted by Roger Babson, economist, was made public today with a 17-point plan for increasing church attendance. The report is based on a study of church attendance within the Congregational and Christian denominations. Replies from members who responded to 100,000 questionnaires during a study lasting more than three years were the basis.

Heeding the keynote sounded at opening sessions Thursday, delegates today also mapped out an extensive program of study in the field of social relationships.

Leaders who will conduct seminars include the Rev. Mr. Herring, New York, the church and economic nationalism; the Rev. John G. Truitt, Suffolk, Va., the financial program of the church; the Rev. Oscar E. Mauer, New Haven, Conn., recording secretary of the American board of commissioners on foreign missions, the problems of India; the Rev. Paul Hutchinson, managing editor of the Christian Century, Chicago, social experiments in other countries; the Rev. Walter A. Morgan, pastor of First Congregational church, Chicago, current theological questions, and Dr. George E. Haynes, New York sociologist, problems of race contact.

Leaders to Speak.

Dr. Joseph Brewer, president of Olivet College; Dr. Hamilton Holt, president of Rollins College, and Dr. Ernest Hatch Wilkins, president of Oberlin college, today were to address delegates on American higher education.

Dr. Lewis T. Reed, New York, general secretary of the Congregational ministerial boards, praised the theologians for their "spirit of service and sacrifice." He pointed out that 384 receiving relief are over 70 years old, 140 over 80 and 14 between 90 and 100.

Indications that the proposal of the Rev. Albert W. Palmer, president of Chicago Theological seminary, in which he is seeking to enlist citizens to refrain from supporting any government which crosses its boundaries to wage aggressive war, will be adopted by the council, was seen when delegates at a peace problems seminar voted 2 to 1 in favor of the plan.

The Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, noted radio pastor of the Central Congregational church, Brooklyn, N. Y., and formerly president of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, "pinch-hitted" for Dr. James W. Johnson, professor of creative literature at Fisk university, who, because of illness was unable to make his scheduled address last night.

The Rev. Mr. Cadman, it is generally conceded, will be named the new moderator of the general council at elections here Tuesday morning.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Dr. John G. Truitt, Mrs. J. G. Truitt, Mrs. I. W. Johnson and the writer left Suffolk, Va., Monday, June 18th, at 8 A. M., on a trip to Oberlin, Ohio, to attend the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches. Dr. Truitt's Chevrolet was selected as the car to convey this party. Three members of the party regard themselves as expert drivers; each of these, like all other drivers, has a superiority complex when the other is driving. This is why this type of driver sometimes offers suggestions or uses some kind of exclamations when riding on the back seat. Well, these three drivers fully measured up to these qualifications and expectations in due form and at the proper time.

The plan was to go via Dayton, Ohio, where the Truitts formerly lived. Dr. Truitt wanted to see some of his friends and Mrs. Truitt wanted to sit in a beauty parlor for five hours and get a permanent wave. Following the plan we went through Lynchburg, Va., Lexington, Va., passing through four rain storms, around and over many mountains, reaching Rainelee, W. Va. about 7 o'clock P. M., where we spent the night at Lee Tree Inn, which is 3,170 feet above sea level. In one day we traveled about 370 miles and climbed more than 3,000 feet higher above the sea level.

Tuesday at 7:30 A. M. we left Lee Tree Inn for Dayton, Ohio. The trip through the mountains of Virginia and West Virginia brought to our view scenes too beautiful for description. If the Lord ever flattens these gorgeous mountains into a rolling plain West Virginia will have to extend her boundary lines away out into her sister states. We traveled more than 200 miles through this mountain scenery.

We reached Dayton about 5 o'clock P. M. Rev. E. B. Florv, pastor of Riverdale Church, offered us a gracious invitation to be the guests of his home. Of course we accepted and remained to enjoy the sweet fellowship of this happy family of eight until 7:30 A. M. Thursday. Brother Florv was pastor of the First Christian Church in Norfolk, Va., a few years ago, and endeared himself to the people in Eastern Virginia Conference. He has wrought a good work in Dayton, where his congregation should have sufficient financial support from denominational boards to erect an adequate building. This good pastor has vision for the future and is untiring in his effort to build for the Kingdom of God.

Dayton is a great city. Readers will recall the story of the great flood which cost the city millions of dollars in the loss sustained. We visited one of the dams erected since that disaster to prevent another similar experience. Five immense dams have been erected and there is no danger of another flood. This work cost millions of dollars, but it makes the city safe for the future, as far as floods are concerned. It always pays to make a sacrifice to make the future safe. This is a wise suggestion for individuals as well as churches.

The brief visit in Dayton gave us an opportunity to see only a few places of interest and renew the fellowship of a few friends. But it was a happy experience long to be remembered. We left Dayton at 7:30 A. M. Thursday, and reached Oberlin, Ohio at 1:00 P. M. The General Council was called to order at 2 P. M. on the same day. The Council has delegates from many states, and a number of foreign workers are in attendance.

We are here to pray and plan for the future of our united fellowship. Revs. R. L. House, Wm. Jay, O. O. Poythress, H. S. Hardcastle and F. C. Lester also came by auto from the Eastern Virginia Conference.

We are planning to visit Niagara Falls and New York on our return journey next week. And while we work and enjoy the experience of seeing a beautiful country and meeting other workers in our churches, our minds and hearts remember and pray for those dear ones at home who are faithful in their effort to carry on the work in our church.

I. W. JOHNSON.

HIS PRESENCE.

"My presence shall go with thee." These were the words of comfort which were spoken to Moses the great leader of the children of Israel when he called upon God in his extremity and the presence of God was manifested by the pillar of cloud by day and the pillar of fire by night which was a guide and protection.

As the presence of the Lord was with them so we may have His blessed presence in our souls as we journey along in this earthly life, not in a pillar of cloud or fire but by the Holy Spirit whom Jesus sent to abide in cleansed hearts after He went back to His heavenly home. It has been said that the Holy Spirit comes in His baptism to abide, to empower for service and suffering; to witness, to teach, to guide, to comfort, to take the things of Christ and reveal them unto us. He makes the person of Christ wonderfully real and graciously present, mighty to save. So when we meet the conditions laid down in the Holy Word we may have His blessed presence ever abiding in our souls. His presence in our soul reproves of sin or as the marginal reads, convinces of sin so that any thought of sin is easily detected. His presence scatters the darkness of doubt and fear, for God is light, and in Him is no darkness at all. Though the path may seem dark before us He lightens each step of the way as we come to it so that we need never stumble. His presence in our soul teaches us the lessons we must learn of submission to the will of God; patience when trials come; gives strength to meet every temptation. His presence ever feeds our souls and as we read the Holy Word He takes the deep things of God and reveals them unto us. We would faint and fall but for this blessed provision whereby we may sit at a table forever spread with the delectable fruits of Caanan on which we may feast and so get strength to meet every hard place which may come to us. His presence is a Rock in a weary land, a shelter in the time of storm, a wayside spring of refreshing water which ever flows along our pathway and never runs dry. His presence in our soul comforts us in all our tribulation; He understands every detail of our lives and we need not fear to take our every doubt, grief or fear and spread it before Him, for we know that He is never weary with our coming. He never fails to lift the burden if it is for His glory or to give sufficient grace to meet the need if it must be borne. His presence in our soul gives peace, the wonderful gift of God's love. The storms of life may be raging about our pathway but the deep settled peace ever abides in our souls. When the presence of Jesus, through the Holy Spirit abounds in our soul there is blessing for nothing but peace can abide while we keep close to Jesus' side. Though troubles come we may know that all is well while He is leading and we may ever be at peace if we will only trust Him and obey His voice. His presence in our soul gives joy, the joy of the Lord which is our strength and stay, that lifts us up above this earth life and makes us to sit in heavenly places with Jesus Christ and we can say with the Psalmist: "Thou wilt shew me the path of life: in Thy presence is fullness of joy; at Thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore."

THE STRENGTH OF CIVILIZATION.

The test of the strength of any civilization lies in the capacity of the rank and file of citizens to rise above partisan interest, and this is especially true in the time of a crisis. Any fellow can stick to his party and follow the leadership of his party, but only patriots can subordinate petty interests and selfish purposes and respond to the demands of patriotism for the highest welfare when the country demands such a course.

It is refreshing now to think of the splendid manner in which the citizens of this country exercised their cool judgment two years ago. At that time we were at sea. Civilization had failed in the estimation of many, while a revolution was on our door steps was the thought of others. Clear-minded, patriotic citizens did not see chaos, neither did they see the coming of a revolution; and it was this fine spirit of nobleness and patriotism in the rank and file of our people that made it possible for our leaders to follow a course of concerted and constructive action. The very nature of our people made a revolution impossible, and the resources of the Nation made it impossible for us to remain in chaos.

During the past few years we have been living under no ordinary conditions, and while we are yet in a period of planning, every loyal citizen confidently believes that we are gradually emerging from unrest and uncertainty into better times. Our leaders have had a man's job on their hands. That job is still on their hands, not alone for them to finish, but with the united support of every citizen the job can and will be finished in the interest of the masses.

We are fortunate in having a form of government that is sufficiently flexible to meet any sane demand. Our government has all the power that any government may need to meet any emergency. Here again is a reason why we should never have any kind of revolution in this country.

Members of Congress come in for the usual line of abuse. Someone is always willing to attribute every move and act of a congressman to some political interest. This is not always fair to our national representatives. Democrats and Republicans, with few exceptions, have supported our chosen leaders, and it is the belief of thoughtful and impartial minds that the recent votes of congressmen have been on broad principles rather than for political advantage. It is the welfare of the Nation at stake and not the welfare of any political party, and fair-minded men have realized this. When a member of Congress places the interests of his country above the interests of his party he always wins the respect and admiration of right-thinking people. Members of our recent Congress should be commended for their united support of the policies of the present administration, for these policies have been in the interest of the rank and file of our citizens. There is no merit in following a leader when he is going our way. It is an expression of the highest type of patriotism to surrender personal opinions, where moral convictions of principle are not involved, and follow a leader because public welfare demands it. This is the kind of patriotism that we must continue to have to bring us finally out of the wilderness and keep us out.

People are to be congratulated for their patience during the trying days through which the Nation has been passing. Those who have been impatient are now beginning to see that a miracle could not be performed in a day. Any remedy that provides quick recovery is a quack remedy, and anyone who promises quick recovery is a quack. There are those who have been willing to question the policies of our leaders because relief did not come quickly. Recovery of the individual from sickness or the recovery of a nation from an economic unbalance is determined by patience and self-control.

We are a united nation, though in many instances divided as to opinion, but if our purposes be right and in the interest of all humanity our opinions can be united or subordinated to the will of the majority.

Prosperity in its true sense is to be restored in this country, but it is not to be restored by making one class prosperous at the expense of another. We are so closely related in every phase of welfare that we cannot favor one class at the expense of another. If one class suffers, all must suffer, and this is a lesson that we have learned—a lesson that we must keep ever in mind. It is a good market that makes the seller prosperous, and there can be no good market without prosperous buyers. When the crash came we all went down together, and now that the debris is being cleared away, we must all rise together. This principle alone makes recovery slow. The stronger must wait and aid the weaker. It is not difficult to form legislation to favor one class, but it is difficult to frame legislation for the benefit of all.

If the rank and file of the American people will continue to rise to the best that is within them, ere long we will find ourselves as a nation in the pivotal position of the world. We must move every effort and energy in behalf of right and against wrong. The high principles we have set for business must not be assailed by pessimistic wrangling and destructive criticism. Tolerance, patience, and cooperation must be the watchwords of our continued journey.

TIMOTHY THOMAS.

"NOTHING BUT LEAVES."

We are told in God's Word that a few days before the crucifixion, as Jesus and his disciples were going up to Jerusalem from Bethany, Christ came to a fig tree, expecting probably to find figs on the tree; but we are told that he found nothing, but leaves only; and because the tree was barren, he cursed it and it withered away. The Master was looking for fruit when he approached the tree, but no fruit was to be found. The trees in Palestine that bore no fruit were cut down and destroyed, we are told. Whether our lives are worthwhile or not depends upon whether we are fruit-bearing trees, or trees that present nothing but leaves. We hear the Master again say to his beloved disciples, "I am the vine, ye are the branches, every branch in me that beareth fruit he purgeth it that it may bring forth more fruit, but every branch that bringeth not forth fruit is cast into the fire and burned." Christ also relates the parable of the fig tree that a man had in his vineyard. The fig tree bore no fruit; and the owner of the tree told his dresser to cut it down, why cumbereth it the ground; but the dresser of the vineyard told the owner to let it alone another year, that he would do all that could be done for it, and if it bore no fruit after a year, he would cut it down. Leaves beautify trees, vines and shrubs. They show that there is life in the plant. Leaves come before fruits and flowers. We have the first blade then the ear and after that the full corn in the ear. But what disappointment it is if the plant does not develop beyond the leaf stage. We plant seeds in the earth of various kinds, for the purpose of reaping fruits, flowers, etc., but if only leaves appear, there is a disappointment. The purpose for which the planting was done is not realized. You may say, well, there are trees and shrubs planted for shade and adornment. If that is what the planting is for, such trees and plants fulfill their mission and glorify the planters. But you and I are in the world to produce fruit; such fruit as will remain. The fruit of the Spirit of God is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, meekness, temperance. The apostle tells if these things be in us and abound they make us that we shall neither be barren nor unfruitful. If your life is not producing this kind of fruit, you may shine with the leaves of morality, culture, refinement and eloquence, even liberality and sacrifice for others; but if for love for God and humanity is not the sole motive of your life, the Master will say "Nothing but Leaves."—The Free Will Baptist.

THE NEW DEAL IN LIQUOR.

In the New York Times of recent date we find the following interesting statements, sent by Associated Press from Evanston, Ill., under date of May 19:

"A survey of America since repeal of prohibition, the National Women's Temperance Union announces tonight, has shown startling increases in drunkenness."

The increases in New York City, as compared with early months of 1933, were 55.5 per cent; Los Angeles, 95.5 per cent; Denver, 112.6 per cent; Portland, 116.8 per cent.

The statement of the W. C. T. U. says:

"The increase in Cincinnati since the first of the year has caused the city officials grave concern, according to press reports. The records show that a city hospital admitted 218 patients suffering from alcoholism during January and February as compared with 130 such cases during the same period in 1933. A most incredible increase is shown in Philadelphia. Beginning with the Christmas holidays arrests mounted more than 1,000 per cent over the same period of the preceding year."

MISSIONS
 REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary

REGAINING THE MISSIONARY PASSION.

Excerpts from an Address

By WILLIAM F. ROTHENBURGER, in The Christian-Evangelist.

Two primary reasons for the decline in missionary giving are easily seen, namely, the economic situation and the changing attitude toward the whole missionary enterprise. It must be remembered that this change in attitude began before the adverse economic conditions were in evidence.

As never before the enterprise has been brought out into open discussion, both in the daily press and in monthly magazines, where the public outside the church may receive valuable information. That many misconceptions and distorted facts have been and will be forth-coming is inevitable. However, this affords a golden opportunity for missionary leaders to get their facts before the reading public.

Many read in the Atlantic Monthly an article by Mr. P. K. Mok, under the caption "The Case for the Heathen." Mr. Mok is a native Chinese graduate of Lingnan University, a Christian institution in China and is now a graduate student in Columbia. Though many of his contentions are well founded his general attitude comes near to being unfriendly. He charges that the missionaries are impervious to any suggested change in policy or method. He does not question the missionary's heart, but severely condemns his head, calling him a failure because of his arrogant spirit of conquest and charging him with an attitude of intolerance toward all the good as well as the objectionable in other religions. He dubs the native Christians as weak and denationalized and as coming only from the lower stratum of society, forgetting that Christianity began among the lowly. While he properly deprecates the sectarianism of the West which has followed in the trail of the missionary and repudiates the attempt to duplicate on his native soul the sinful denominational lines that characterize western Christianity, he has almost completely overlooked the fruits of many decades of immeasurable service rendered to his people. "The twilight of foreign missions is at hand," says Mr. Mok, "but there are two kinds of twilight, one before the dawn and one before the dark." If China is to be made "the dumping ground for the discarded thought of the West" then it will be twilight before the dark. If, on the other hand, "the missionaries are willing to walk hand in hand with the Chinese they can help to usher in the morning of a new day for Christianity in China."

With its many justifiable contentions this article without doubt has prejudiced many uninformed minds against missions. Mr. Mok seemed not to know that he presented a set of facts which have been either obsolete or obsolescent in many missionary centers for a decade or more. Fortunately for the cause a later number of the Atlantic Monthly carried a reply under the title, "Are Foreign Missions Done For," by the Right Rev. Charles Fisk, Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Western New York. In touching the charges against the policies and the personnel of missionaries, the Bishop states what seems to be a very well-balanced attitude. He contends that the hope of missions will lie "in men who have a definite faith and with it an affectionate (though not soft) heart; who believe in Christ without damning all who do not; who recognize goodness, beauty and truth wherever they appear, are sure that the supreme revelation is in Christ, and are earnest enough in their own discipleship to carry to others what does so much for themselves." Our leaders will not rest the cause in the hands of prejudiced and uninformed writers. This will bring into the open an array of historical and empirical facts which will win the open-minded and lend new dignity and power to an enterprise which not only has moulded civilization but has saved the Church from the sin of selfishness.

Certainly, the church itself will not regain its lost missionary enthusiasm, to say nothing about advancing to the point where it long ago should have been, unless through a process of education it establishes vital reasons and deep motives and emerges with an apologetic based not upon sentiment but upon the very nature of our religion and its ability to render a service to this disturbed world which cannot be rendered by any other religion. The pulpit, women's societies and the department of religious education in the local church should set out to inform and to inspire the whole constituency in the program of world expansion.

Again, we need to restudy the nature of the gospel. When we do, we find that it is no respecter of persons and that it is neither ethnic nor racial. Rather, we discover that its very atmosphere has a universal tang. The church has no less an authority than its founder for the world vision which throughout the centuries pushed it out into new frontiers. In the heart of his ministry, Jesus informed his followers that "the gospel must be preached among all nations." At the close of his career he crystallized the essential character of his message and life into a mandate, "Go ye into all the world and make disciples of all the nations." We understand, of course, that had he not left a great commission, a proper understanding of Jesus would have demanded one.

More serious than the fact of declining receipts is the declining passion for missions; and more serious than the declining passion is the danger that it may be due to a decline of our faith in the power of the gospel to life society to a higher plane. Assuredly, no pulpit can inspire a passion for evangelism at home and abroad which itself has grown cold and perhaps even doubtful of the power of the evangel for our time. Equally true is it that no congregation will give either life or substance to an enterprise about which it harbors many doubts.

Likewise, it might be worth while for us to restudy the history of missions and their influence on foreign lands. Mr. Mok is right in reminding us that the success of the enterprise does not rest in the number of native converts reported each year. Indeed, its far reaching process in the social complex of its beneficiaries cannot be put into mathematical formulae.

Of course, every wise missionary will benefit by the constructive criticisms passed upon him and his work. He will not be daunted. To the contrary he will draw his belt a bit tighter, replace the missing portions of his spiritual armor and go out to do loving battle for the Christianizing of the world.

And so he still comes to us through his Word. If we knew it better and studied it more, we should find the blessed Christ ever ready to meet us through its glowing pages, and to speak to us through its exceeding great and precious promises.—A. B. Simpson.

There are yet some churches not reporting their annual or Easter offering. As June closes our mission period we trust your church that has not reported will now do so.

ONE THE LORD CAN DEPEND ON.

Norah Tamele, Chindau young woman, a pioneer teacher in the bush schools and a graduate of our mission school was told her school must close because of lack of funds. She was caring for several unfortunate persons and when word came all her dependents joined in prayer. "Dear God," pleaded one old heathen woman, "I will be satisfied to eat corn chaff without any greens if only You will help Norah keep her school." A few days later word came that with another reduction in her already meagre salary, Norah could keep her school. That night the old lady ate corn chaff without any relish, explaining, "I want to show God I meant what I said."

YOUNG PEOPLE'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF MT. CARMEL CHURCH.

We want everybody to know that we have a wide awake Society at Mt. Carmel, trying to do more each year to promote Christianity in our church and the world. We have our society divided into two groups. Our goal is to see which side can get the largest attendance and the most new members. Meetings are held twice a month, on Sunday evenings. Programs are prepared by different members of the society. At our last meeting, June 17, we had a very interesting program.

The program leader, Miss Mary Louise Cox, presided.

"Tell it to Jesus" was sung, and devotionals led by the leader.

The topic for the evening was "Success". Several readings were given on different phases of Success, by the following members: Martha Johnson, Beatrice Joyner and Eloise Lewis.

Duet was sung by Helen and Dorothy Lowe.

Poem on Success was given by Morgan Johnson.

"Jesus Saves" was sung for the closing song, after which, we were dismissed by our usual benediction.

Alice Bradshaw, Reporter.

AN APPRECIATION.

Dr. Frank E. Jenkins.

In the death of Dr. Frank E. Jenkins, the South has lost one of its far-visions educators. He was a man who, for the last fifty years, has served the Kingdom in the South with a passion for Christian Education, as is shown by the fact that it was largely through his efforts that Piedmont college, Demorest, Ga., Atlanta Theological Seminary and other institutions had their beginning. He was president of Southern Union College, Wadley, Alabama, during the years of depression, and it was to his untiring energy and wide acquaintance that credit should go for its ability to carry on until last January.

Then, too, Dr. Jenkins was a man of deep spiritual thought in the pulpit. He gave ten years of his life to the Central Congregational Church, Atlanta, and it was while there that he founded Atlanta Theological Seminary. He held pastorates in Massachusetts and other states before coming South.

In his going the spirit of the church union will suffer. The denomination will suffer. The United church, of which he was a member, and honorary pastor, will suffer. But had it not been God gave him many years beyond the span allotted to man, many of us would have missed his fine spirit and the inspiration which came to us from his life. He was 79 years of age. He died in Bowdon, Ga., where he was President of its college. Services were held in his honor there and at The United Church, LaGrange, Ga., in the afternoon of June 8, with his pastor the writer in charge, assisted by Dr. F. P. Ensminger, Pastor-at-large of the Congregational Christian churches in Alabama, Tenn., Kentucky and W. Fla., Dr. H. C. Newell, President of Piedmont College, Demorest, Ga., Dr. Blackburn, of Atlanta, who was Superintendent of Congregational churches in Georgia when Dr. Jenkins was Superintendent of Congregational missions in the South, Rev. E. W. Butler, of Thorsby Institute, Thorsby, Alabama, and Rev. Willis E. Howard, pastor of First Baptist Church, LaGrange. Interment was in LaGrange. May Heaven's blessings be upon his family, and may God fill his place in the work of the Kingdom that his work may go on.

J. H. DOLLAR.

A Story for the Children

PLAYING SCHOOL.

"Hurry up, Sam, it's your turn to be teacher this afternoon!" called Selma.

"Everybody take seats," answered Sam rather breathlessly as he ran up. "Sorry, the teacher's late, but it couldn't be helped. Is everybody here?" he continued.

"Oh, Teacher, please let me call the roll," begged Allen, and proceeded, without waiting for the teacher's reply, to name rapidly: "Martha, Marion, Bobby, Selma, Helen, Jane, Kent, Shirley, Jimmy, Luther, Patsy, Nancy, Marvin. Everybody's here Teacher, and on time."

"All right then," said Sam solemnly facing his eager scholars, "on account of your very bad spelling we'll start with our spelling lesson. I hope you children have put proper time on your lessons and haven't wasted it skating and scampering around. Martha, stand up and spell 'frozen water,' but use only three letters."

"I can't do that, 'water' by itself has five letters."

"That's a zero for Martha for not knowing an easy little word. Marion let's hear from you."

"Perfectly simple, i—c—e, frozen water," Marion answered quickly.

"Bobby, spell 'black fluid' with three letters," requested the teacher.

"I—n—k," said Bobby with a deep bow.

"Now, Teacher, let me ask you a question," requested Marvin. "What is the longest word in the dictionary?"

"I'll tell him that," Shirley offered, anxious to display her knowledge. "The longest word in the dictionary is 'smiles' because there's a mile between the first and last letter."

"Our spelling lesson time is up, I'll try you on 'rithmetic. Listen closely and do as I say and I'll tell you your answers without knowing what number you started with. Your teacher is really a bit of a magician," announced Sam, the teacher, proudly. "Here's the problem. Think of a number."

"It's thought of," giggled Patsy, "mine's 6."

"Mine's 10"; "mine's 3"; mine's 8." The children all took different numbers.

"Don't tell me your numbers, do as I say," commanded Sam. "Multiply your number by 3; then add 1 to what you have; again multiply by 3! now add the first number you thought of. Has everyone finished? All of the answers end with 3 and begin with the number you thought of first. Is that clear?"

"Now I'll tell one. Take a number; double it; add 4; divide by 2; take away the number you thought of first; your answer is 2."

"Your answer will always be half of what you add," explained Jane.

"You get me too dizzy with your numbers," said Sam, "we'll do something less tiring. We'll have an English poetry lesson. Nancy, you're shy and everready, arise and recite."

Nancy stood up and bowing slightly, said:
Willie tied the baby's ear
Firmly to the chandelier.
Baby chuckled, full of glee,
'Twas his ear of corn, you see!

The children clapped heartily. Then Helen added another verse:

Willie took the baby's tongue,
'Round and 'round the room he swung.
Baby seemed to like it though—
'Twas his wagon-tongue, you know.

"Good, very good," commanded the teacher. "I'll now declare a recess to last until tomorrow afternoon when Miss Marion will be the beloved teacher. Study the following questions for tomorrow's geography: 'If it turns cold, what will Dela-ware?' 'In case of a flood where will Maryland?' Go quietly, children, and be good."

"We will not," the children answered in chorus, "let's ride our bikes."—Sue Craig in The Christian Evangelist.

LET 'EM ROLL.

What to all intents and purposes was an animated log followed by a group of more or less interested spectators, rolled by the gate of the Rehuri School in Rahuri, India about vesper time one Sunday night. Then the log evolved into a man rolling himself to glory at the rate of five miles per day. He had been on the road for four and a half months. His destination was the temple of Pandharpur, domicile of the God Vithoba. Says Miss E. Loleta Wood who saw the man: "To this god the man will bring his offering of a bruised and broken body hoping to receive in return that peace and soul happiness which comes when the heart has found God. With scenes like this unfolding themselves at our very doors do you wonder we become a bit heartsick when we hear uninformed persons saying that there is no further need of missions and that the religions of India and China or Africa are better suited to their needs than is Christ's message of love?"

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

THE FINGER OF GOD.

Lot's wife turned to a pillar of salt because she looked back. There is a deeper, subtler meaning to this Biblical record than the cold, bare facts of the case.

God does not want us to look back upon the past with regrets—regrets at the old life and the old ways—regrets at the plans that did not materialize and the dreams that did not come true—regrets at the left-behinds and the might-have-beens.

God wants us to look forward to the future with hope, faith and enthusiasm—the future with lands to conquer, homes to be built, ambitions and dreams to be realized—developments and accomplishments that will be blighted, hampered, delayed or even made absolutely impossible when the heart is heavy, the eyes tear-dimmed, the energy exhausted and the faith killed by regrets.

Yet, it will do us all good to look back sometimes with honesty, clearness of vision and an open mind, conscious of the unceasing love and guidance of God.

We think we are so very wise. We plan every detail of our lives so precisely. Then we proceed to make our plans materialize successfully.

Sometimes they do. Everything seems to work automatically just as we wished. When this is the case it is because we are working with God's plans also.

Other times everything goes wrong, despite our determination and concentrated effort. It seems that our desires and will powers could move mountains and upset Gibraltors. Yet, we find ourselves up against unsurmountable obstacles. . . . We have no choice and are compelled to follow other courses, whether or not. And we oftentimes impede our progress and mar our health and happiness with vain regrets.

Then when everything seems blackest and most hopeless, we see a dawn of light, have a flash of realization or note a change of conditions that makes us conscious of God's infinite wisdom.

Let us look back one, two, three, five or six months or years. Remember those dreams we had, those plans we made and the way everything went astray? Remember how desperate we were, how the bottom seemed to fall out of our little world, leaving us helplessly incompetent to proceed as we wished? Remember how we were forced to pursue other courses, just like putty in the hands of fate? Remember how we made ourselves miserable and ill worrying and fretting over the impossible—instead of accepting conditions and proceeding with the tasks at hand with all the energy and enthusiasm of which we were capable.

Now, when we look back with honesty and the perspective of time, we can see how the finger of God pointed the way to direct us and we can realize His infinite wisdom in forcing upon us work and conditions that seemed impossible or unbearable at the time. Had we followed the course we wished to pursue, how disastrous it would have been to our ideals and ambitions? Such is God's miracle of manifestation.

Let us therefore not look back with regrets like Lot's wife. Let us instead proceed in the consciousness that God is always with us, guiding and directing us with love and wisdom in all our hopes and endeavors, knowing that the miscarriage of our plans is oftentimes for our good and that the quickest, surest way to the realization of our desires and ambitions is cooperation with God's plans.

COMPENSATION.

I'd like to think when life is done
That I had filled a needed post,
That here and there, I'd paid my fare
With more than idle talk and boasts;
That I had taken gifts divine,
The breath of life and manhood fine,
And tried to use them now and then
In service to my fellow men.
I hate to think when life is through
That I had lived my round of years,
A useless kind, that leaves behind
No record in that vale of tears;
That I had wasted all my days
By treading only selfish ways,
And that this world would be the same
If it had not known my name.
I'd like to think that here and there
When I am gone, there will remain
A happier spot that might have not Existed had I toiled for gain;
That someone's cheery voice and smile
Shall prove that I had been worthwhile;
That I had paid with something fine
My debt to God for life divine.

WHAT MAKES A VACATION WORTHWHILE?

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR JULY 8, 1934.
Mark 6:13-32.

PROGRAM.

Theme—"How Can I Best Invest My Vacation?"

Prelude—Mendelssohn's "Spring Song" (Instrumental.)

Opening Hymn—"Fairest Lord Jesus, Ruler of All Nature."

Scripture—Mark 6:31-32 and 45-46.

Solo—

"The gray hills taught me patience,
The waters taught me prayer.
The flight of birds unfolded
The marvels of Thy care."

—Allen Eastman Cross.

(New Hymnal for American Youth. Appleton Century)

Prayer—

"O God, we thank Thee for everything . . . .
We thank Thee for all Thou hast made and that Thou hast called it good. For all the glory and beauty and wonder of the world we thank Thee.
We thank Thee that Thou hast placed us in the world to subdue all things to Thy glory, and to use all things for the good of thy children.—Amen.

—Edward Everett Hale.

Hymn—"Softly Now the Light of Day."

Speaker—"Worthwhile Vacations."

Benediction Hymn—

"God who touchest earth with beauty,
Make me lovely too;
With Thy spirit recreate me,
Make my heart anew."

—Mary E. Edgar, Int. Council of Rel. Edu.

Daily Readings—

Mon., July 2—Physical rest needed. Lev. 23:1-3.

Tue., July 3—Time for reading. I Tim. 4:12-16.

Wed., July 4—Time for friendship. Rom. 16:3-4.
Thurs., July 5—Time for teaching. I Thes. 2:13.
Fri., July 6—Time for study. Col. 3:16.
Sat., July 7—Time for service. Luke 10:23-37.
Sun., July 8—What makes a vacation worthwhile?
Mark 6:31-32.

This week, if possible, ask as many as will do so to come prepared to tell of some particular beauty of nature which they have noticed during the week. Get someone else to go to the railroad station, and ask for folders showing vacation trips; also, if near enough, to a steamship office, or write for folders to such a place. When the folders come, cut out special pictures or tack up the folder opened as some especially beautiful place so that it may be enjoyed by all. Old calendars, illustrated magazines, etc., may be searched for other and different pictures, which will add to the suggestion of changes brought about through travel.

Distribute poems on nature, and, of course, the Nature Psalms from the Bible to be read by different persons. Also distribute these questions:

In what ways may travel broaden our minds, and enrich our lives through:

1. Contact with other people?
2. Observation of nature in woods, fields, streams?
3. Observation of nature in more majestic mood as mountains, ocean, great inland seas?
4. Watching our traveling companions?
5. Watching people of other nationalities than our own?

Does the enriching and broadening depend upon mental receptiveness?

Does it depend upon the companionship of those who are with us?

"They surely all are folded in God's loving, "It is Good"—
The little silver snail that crawls
Upon decaying wood;

"The microscopic wood-ants, and
The dot-sized spiders red
One only sees by kneeling, and
With patient bended head;

"The forest in an inch of moss,
A whole bright-flower bed
In one small, gold-disked daisy or
A crimson clover head!

"This 'world in little!'—Oh, dear Lord,
Here in the green, hushed wood,
We hear Thy whisper once again—
That 'It is very good!'"

—Bertha Gerneaux Woods.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE.

AHIJAH AND THE DIVIDED KINGDOM.

LESSON I, July 1, 1934.

GOLDEN TEXT: Pride goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall.—Prov. 16:18.

LESSON TEXT: I Kings 11:26-14:31.

"Solomon in all his glory"—the words were justified, for his reign was the peak of Israel's glory from the standpoint of material wealth and splendor. But as is always the case, increase of wealth and power in the nation had also brought internal decay. Oppression had asserted itself, luxury had sapped the life of the nation, people had become dissatisfied under the burden both of taxation and of forced labor, immorality had eaten its way into the vitals of the nation, and the process of decay had already begun, even before Solomon died. After he died that process was speeded up, both by a mistake of his son, and by the natural order of things.

Solomon had a son who was heir apparent to the throne, Rehoboam, by name. When Rehoboam came to the throne, the people, worn out by the forced labor, and crushed under heavy taxes, came to him and asked for better treatment, and a more just policy. Rehoboam called his old men into council and asked for advice. The old men approved a policy of easier methods and fairer measures. But like so many who want only such advice as fits in with their desires, Rehoboam refused to heed the advice of the old men, and called in his young men, who suggested an even sterner policy. When Rehoboam announced his decision, the people rebelled, withdrew from their allegiance to the Kingdom as such, and established a separate kingdom of their own of ten tribes under the leadership of Jereboam. As to how Jereboam became king is an interesting story.

Jereboam was an able young man, and had a responsible position under Solomon. Ahijah, a prophet of Jehovah met him one day and in a symbolic way told him that he would become king over ten tribes of Israel. When Solomon heard this, he became bitter against Jereboam, who had fled to Egypt for his life. When Solomon died Jereboam returned to the land of Israel, and was selected as king of the new kingdom of Israel. Rehoboam was the king of Judah.

The worm eventually will turn. People will stand a great deal but they will stand only so much. The French Revolution, the Revolutionary War, the over-throw of the Czar are instances in point of the ultimate reaction of an oppressed people. One wonders what might have happened in America during the past two winters if the American people had not been patient under distress and economic injustice. And we are not out of the woods yet. Conditions cannot continue indefinitely as they are. Something must be done or the people themselves will do something.

Jerebam was an opportunist. Like so many who have power, he wanted to use his power for his own selfish advantage. He was afraid that if the people went up to Jerusalem to worship they might become alienated from him, so he set up places of worship at Dan and Bethel and ordered the people to worship there. He used as the objects of worship, golden calves, undoubtedly a contribution of the Egyptian religion with which he had come in contact during his exile. He gave as his reason for establishing these places of worship the fact that the journey might be too long for his people to go to Jerusalem. He was not the first man, nor was he the last, who covered up his true motives with high sounding words. And he was neither the first or the last to try to make religion easy. One trouble with our world today, and with the church in particular is the fact that we have tried to make religion too soft and too easy. We have taken the iron out of it. We have ministered to the weakness and the softness of people. We are racking our brains for ways and means of getting people to come to church. Indeed we are fast coming to the place where it seems that many people will attend church only when there is something special for them. Going to church is a duty. The person who can go to church, and who habitually remains away from church commits a sin. That is strong language, but the writer of these notes believes it is true.

The lesson shows how both the faithfulness and the unfaithfulness of men and women is passed on to succeeding generations, or rather the fruits of faithfulness and unfaithfulness. Because of David's faithfulness, Rehoboam did not lose all his kingdom—Judah was saved to him. But because of his father's sin, and his own sin, the ten tribes were taken from him. God is not mocked. That which a man sows, both he, and alas, his children's children reap.

There is, of course, the lesson of the danger of compromise in religion. Jereboam got his ideas from the heathen customs of Egypt. He substituted the worship of the golden calves, and of other gods, for the one true God of Israel, and Israel slowly but inevitably paid the penalty. Thou shalt have no other gods before me—this ancient word still stands for individuals and for the nation.

A STIFF STORY

of how the little farmers of Baliangoa, Phillipine Islands, found a Big Brother in Rev. Proculo A. Rodriguez, the versatile young Filipino pastor.

Said he: "You are throwing away money by not making your cassava roots into starch and selling it."

Said they:

"Cassava starch weakens and destroys material."

"No one will buy it."

"It tears our fingers when we grate it."

"It isn't like what the Chinese merchants sell."

Replied he:

"You put it on too thick."

"The Chinese merchants will buy it."

"Try a large grater, like this one."

"It is exactly the same material as the Chinese sell."

So the farmers tried out Mr. Rodriguez's suggestions. They sold their starch at 5 centavos a liter. Joy reigned. Then Chinese merchants decided to corner the market and refused to pay more than 5 centavos per 5 liters. Dismay settled down. The little farmers stopped grating.

"You are too easily discouraged," chided the Filipino pastor. "What you need to do is pool your starch and all pull together. Here, I'll buy it at 12 centavos per 3 liters and sell it for you to Filipino retailers in Oroquieta just to get you started." He did—the market spread and the little farmers were happy again. "These people," comments Mr. Rodriguez, sympathetically, "need a leader with the heart of a brother, a brother all along the way in this intricate world."

Good will, like a good name, is won by many actions, and lost by one.—Jeffrey.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy

MONDAY.

"CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP."

"I am a companion of all them that fear Thee, and of them that keep Thy precepts."—Ps. 119:63.

As we understand Christ, David expresses here the true christian attitude toward others. But how far we are from its reality! There are social stratas in life in which one may feel that if certain others are to be in heaven they prefer not to be there, and, from the standpoint of human congeniality, he feels that association in heaven would be impossible as it is on earth. This sort of thing is not to be in the Kingdom.

God has left us helpless for an understanding in the matter. "Though the Lord be high, yet hath He respect unto the lowly." Ps. 138:6. Regarding the future state, He said that "the rich and the poor meet together: the Lord is the maker of them all." Death is a leveler of all conditions of men. By it the poor are made rich in heavenly values and the rich lose their pride and become "poor in the spirit" for the same heavenly values.

In real christian living, all "lay up treasures in heaven where neither moth nor dust doth corrupt." all seek the Kingdom of God as their first objective. This is what is referred to in Mal 3:16 in which a "book of remembrance is mentioned as carrying the names of those that fear Him and think upon His name."

Christians are consecrated to God with but one superior objective—the Kingdom of God. Thus, priests and kings, the rich and powerful, the poor and the needy, the cultural and the uncultured, all may indeed fulfill special functions in this life, yet none lose the fundamental idea that their lives are unto God.

It is because this is true that all share together the responsibility of the Kingdom, and that David could say "I am a companion of all them that fear Thee."—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"WISE UNTO GOD."

"I would have you wise unto that which is good, and simple concerning evil."—Rom. 16:19.

Saving christianity does not consist merely in believing, and in an unintelligent sort of consecration; but it consists in "growing in graces and in the knowledge of the Lord," says Paul; and the psalmist adds, "The beauty of holiness." Thus intelligent christian living is known by three things, viz.—growth in the grace of God, in the knowledge of the Lord, and in the beauty of holiness. Therefore when Paul urges upon the church at Rome the wisdom of the Lord to keep them from going wrong, he is doing what in his heart he knows must be done lest the church be lost in their desentions.

Wisdom, of course, is something which underlies all practical counsels, and it must lie in the counsels of christian living as well as anything else. Wisdom is said to be "identical with the law of God. It is discernment that looks beneath the surface and sees the cause and effect; it looks into the heart of things and gets the true views of life;" thus it is a guide to the heart as well as the feet, the thought and the feelings, as well as of conduct; thus the highest order of wisdom underlies our fear of God, and our ideas of reverence for good. As such it is the power that distinguishes evil from good, and pudges it to be a thing a wise man would avoid.

It would seem, then, that this wisdom which Paul urges upon the people is the one essential of religious ideals set forth in the law of God whereby a man may grow in grace and the knowledge of the Lord, ascertaining what true holiness is.

Prayer—Our Father, we pray to Thee as the Psalmist did, "Teach us to number our days, that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom,"—the wisdom that gives us the true meaning and purpose and duty and destiny of life, that we may reach at last the design of the Master for us. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"THE ANTIDOTE TO DEATH."

"Whoso findeth me findeth life, and shall obtain the favor of the Lord."—Prov. 8:35.

In Christ there is no death. To have Christ is to have life both in the life that now is and that which is to come. In death we shift off the "mortal coil" of the flesh and life passes on to the larger life.

In this life, Christ imparts His own spirit to them that love Him, to be the life of our lives, and the "law of the spirit of the life makes us free from the law of sin and death," and the humble soul rejoices with Paul, "I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me."

As the transfusion of fresh warm blood from a strong healthy person into the shrunken veins of a dying person gives the new life, so, says truly one writer, "into our fevered life, there is poured the full tide of the pure and the perfect life of Jesus Christ Himself, and are alive not by our own power, or for our own will, or obedience to our own caprices, but by Him and in Him, and with Him, and for Him."

Prayer—Our Father, fill our lives with the life of Christ today and give us the immortal life of Him who died for us.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"WRONGING THE SOUL."

"He that sinneth against me wrongeth his own soul. All that hate me love death."—Prov. 8:36.

Obviously the greatest wrong a sinner does is to himself. To do wrong to others is a heinous injury, the extent of which cannot be estimated; but number all the wrongs you may know can be done to others by a sin, great and terrible as they may be, they do not equal the injury done to the self. Draw a diagram like a funnel and put the sinner at the big end and you have a crude example of the condition—the greater the injury the nearer to the self until the greatest is himself; society at large first, then friend, then family, and then self.

Sin is said to wrong the self most because it does not take God into account. It separates him from the greatest prize of existence, and it robs him of the supreme thing he needs most. "Ye will not come to me that ye may have life."

"Sin is a mad choice of death," said a preacher one day, and never was there a truer saying. It is true, as someone said recently, that we live in the midst of two forces, the constructive and the destructive—life and death—and if it is true that Christ is the life and sin is the death, this conclusion is correct, sin is a mad choice of death. It ruins our happiness, dims our soul, desecrates all righteousness, and destroys our life.

Prayer—Our Father, we believe. Help Thou our unbelief. Forbid that sin shall blind our spiritual understanding. Save us from a stricken conscience by disobedience. This we ask for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"I AM MY OWN WITNESS."

"Be sure your sins will find you out."

The emphasis in this text is on the word "you." Let the following poem be food for your thought for a while.

"Though no mortal e'er accuses you,
Though no witness e'er confused you,
Though the darkness come and fall
Over the deeds of Hell:

"Though no sign nor any token
Spake of one commandment broken,
Though the world should praise and bless
And love add the fond caress.

Still your secret sin would find you,
Pass before your eyes to blind you,
Brown your heart with hidden shame,
Scar your cheek with guilty flame.

"Sin has never sinned in rain,
It could always count its slain;
You yourself must witness be
To your own soul's treachery."

—Amen.

Prayer—Our Father, these thoughts bring to us the delicacy of the human soul, and we begin to see how easy it is to be put out of fellowship with true life and thus fall. Oh, forgive us of our sins, may our bodies and souls forgive us and make then the future in us a redemption of the soul through Jesus Christ.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"SEEDS TOO DEEP."

"Straightway they sprang up, because they had no deepness of earth."—Matthew 13:1-9.

Our Lord draws from the shallow planting in his parable the lesson that we should plant our seeds of truth in deep soil, soil that is not a mere skin of earth over a layer of rock. That, of course, is a great and necessary truth, especially adapted to the stony and shallow ground of Palestine.

But the danger of the modern gardener in our country is that he will plant the seeds too deeply. Some seeds should simply be scattered over the surface of the earth; most seeds should receive a covering of earth no deeper than their own diameter.

There is a corresponding truth in our spiritual seed-planting. We must keep the truths we know very close to God's sun and air and the fructifying influence of the Holy Spirit, falling gently as the rain. We must trust the heavenly elements for the fertilization of truth, and not rely very much on our own profound meditations.

Prayer—Teach Thou us, great Teacher, and we shall be taught. Plant seeds as Thou wilt, O heavenly Gardener, and they will spring up into flowers and fruit.—Amen.

A GOD-GIVEN CONQUEST.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"Now therefore give me this mountain, whereof the Lord spake in that day."—Josh. 14:12.

What a scene! What words! There they are, the commission which Moses, before his death, had appointed to divide out the Promised Land among the children of Israel. They are bending over the map of the country. Perhaps gathered around some improvised table in some tent, or military headquarters. A group of young men they are, for the older men had all died, save two. These two are present, and they are twenty years older than any of the others, even though some of the others may be as old as sixty years—this we ascertain from the chronology of the records themselves. See them, each looking out for his own tribe. One of the old men is Joshua, their commander-in-chief, and the other old man—now eighty-five—is Caleb.

When the pencil of the leader comes to the mountains of Hebron a new fire comes into Caleb's face, and with a dramatic tenseness he says: "I am this day four score and five years old, and yet I am strong this day as I was the day (one of twelve spies forty-five years ago) Moses sent me out; as my strength was then, even so is my strength now, for war, both to go out and come in. Now therefore give me this mountain whereof the Lord spake in that day; for thou heardest in that day how the Anakim (giants) were there, and that the cities were great, and fenced."

You can easily imagine that it was a tense moment. Perhaps the younger commissioners were wondering what they would do with the mountain held by the giants of that land, throughout that mountain were well fortified cities, who would take it? But before they had time to inquire the oldest man in the group tightened his fists and begged for it! And I am thinking there was a new group of commissioners from that time on. His sublime courage had begotten it in his younger fellows.

We are too ready to count the old man out.

See this old man there! Eighty-five years of age, fighting for his chance among his younger brethren. "I am just as strong today as I was when I was forty. I was a young man then, and tried to lift the courage of my elders to undertake their God-given conquest of Caanan. I am an old man today, but I am ready, and strong, to enter the conquest." And Joshua, the other old man of that group, "Blessed him, and gave unto Caleb the son of Jephunneh Hebron for an inheritance." Thus the mountain of the giants was given to the oldest man in the group. And we read that years later it was still his.

What happened? Caleb rallied the young men of his tribe, Judah, and standing majestically before them he recalled to them how he had wanted to go in with his brethren to take Caanan forty-five years ago, and how all save their present leader, Joshua, had lost heart and said it could not be done. It was not done then, and now for more than two score years we have been dying in the wilderness—shut out from the land of our forefathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, because of lack of courage to fight the giants of Hebron. He told them that God had promised it, and that God had never lost a battle, and said let us take it. And with the wisdom, faith in God, and courage, and strategy of old Caleb the giants of the mountains were put to flight.

The Secret of the God-given Conquest.

Three times in this chapter we read that "Caleb wholly followed the Lord." When he came back from spying out the land many years ago, the Lord promised him a choice portion "because he had wholly followed the Lord God;" and now just before Moses died he had promised Caleb Hebron because "he had wholly followed the Lord thy God;" and later when the writer of the Book of Joshua recorded the facts he says Hebron is to be given to Caleb "because that he wholly followed the Lord God of Israel." There is the secret of Caleb's success.

What It Had Meant to Follow the Lord.

It meant, in the first place, that by the time Caleb was forty years of age he had won a place among the few leaders of the children of Israel. He was one of the twelve spies sent out by Moses to view their God-given land. We do not know how much younger Caleb might have been when he began to be respected as a leader among his people. For the youth that loves God, lives cleanly, and nobly shall have honor from his fellows from the very beginning. The Christian life counts.

In the second place, following God gave Caleb, even in his youth and to his old age, courage to undertake the hazardous for God and fellowmen. There are too many colorless lives today. Careers that bespeak a lack of challenge, a lack of the difficult, a lack of daring for the hazardous duties of life. Too many lives are without the romance of real righteousness, and devotion thereto. We are too satisfied with a soda cracker thrill. God says use your time well, and we reply I must loiter along with the crowd; God says cultivate your mind, and we say I hope I will pass, admitting thereby that we know we should not; God says do your duty, and we answer who else does? And there we are, as alike as two black-eye peas to the colorless lives of our fellows. Not so Caleb. He stood out. He was different. Distinguished he was as a man who wholly followed God. Young friends, following God is not a slow business. It will take the best in you, and then you will lack a lot; it will drive you night and day like a slave; by it you may know the romance of loneliness, or the joy of leadership. Perhaps for more than forty years Caleb was counted a fool by his dying fellows, but at last his time came, and he stood victorious of Hebron's top.

And, in the third place, wholly following God preserved Caleb's strength of mind, body, and soul across the years. The good die young, yes and so do the bad. And many who should live to old age do not make because they have transgressed the laws of God. Others die young because they are constantly giving their lives for others—Jesus is the supreme example.

What Is Your Conquest?

Where are your giants? What must you undertake? And what overcome? Caleb found the answer to these questions by wholly following God. God has formed the intricacies of the eye has not left your life without a pattern and a plan. Through prayer and worship you will find God, and the program he has for your lives.

And giants may stand in the way—the ever-present Anakim. But somewhere in the plan of the holy life is Hebron—the choicest heights of the Promised Land. 'Can't' kept Israel out of Caanan. It may keep the color out of your careers, and mine. "I can't seek God in his house of worship this coming Sunday." "I can't keep my pledge and promise to Him today." There is a little master knocking at your door now: your conscience, let him in. Listen to that still, small voice, and you will not turn away from God; you will not worship the golden calf; you will not flee from the giants before you; and you will not perish in the wilderness of Sinai; but God will bring you to his heights, even Hebron!

Christian Orphanage

Dear friends:

Climbing our financial ladder this week has been slow, as our financial report will show. For less than $1.00 each for the week. We try to cut expenses but we just cannot cut enough to support the children on that income. Orphanage Superintendents have their disappointments as much as other lines of business. The weather conditions have been greatly against us this spring. The early spring was extremely dry. Then it was extremely wet with floods of rain. For fifteen days we could not get on the ground to work. We had to rework all our corn land that we had planted and plant it again. We are at least a month behind with our crops. We trust that the Lord will bless us with good seasons from now on and that our crops will be better than we anticipate. An Orphanage is a home for the homeless. It is filled mainly with children who are forced to go there because circumstances make it necessary. It is a modern way of rendering aid to the fatherless, the helpless, the homeless. In orphanages we find some of the brightest minds. We find some of the finest boys and girls our country affords. It is no choice of theirs that they have been unfortunate and left homeless and helpless. But it is an opportunity you and I have to help them and give them a chance in life so they may have an equal part in life. Our people should be so liberal that the orphanage would be amply supported and the superintendent would not spend sleepless nights trying to plan some way to meet the pressing needs.

May the kind Master who blessed the little children touch each heart in the church and cause them to see and do their duty is our prayer.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

been inside a schoolhouse, church or courthouse. But, though he has banned tobacco for his own use all his life he is a tobacco-grower.

Perhaps there is some inconsistency in our own life which ought to keep us from pointing the finger of scorn at this Georgian. There are so few who are perfectly consistent! And yet perfect consistency in good is the aim of all true Christianity.

Prayer—May we never do ourselves, our Father what we object to in others. Make our lives units, sound from center to circumference, and admitting nothing within that we should be ashamed to show on the outside. In the name of Him who is the Truth.—Amen.

SEVERAL LAPS AHEAD OF THE LAYMEN

Building on a native base has been the policy of the Bailundo Station, West Africa, for more than 50 years, declares Rev. Daniel A. Hastings. Now a staff of over 200 native workers, supported from native funds, carry on with one man, and possibly two or three women missionaries. The church membership within 17 years has increased from 500 to 7,000. The Laymen's Foreign Missions Inquiry (which did not visit Africa) recommended what Bailundo has been doing these many years.

"JUST AS I FINISHED THAT SENTENCE—"

so writes Miss Cowles of Johannesburg, and adds "I was calling to see one of my babies—little Hendrick—a beautiful child of ten months. Going down a dark alley reeking with drink, and foul with all manner of filth, I finally found him in a spotless room, where a tiny candle shed its light upon his mother holding her dying baby in her arms and upon the father silent in his grief. And so this little one, another victim of the slums, passed on into the light and life of a better and fairer world." More babies and more medical patients than ever before have been attending the clinics of Miss Cowles' this past year.

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST

South Entrance to the Campus

ELON COLLEGE, founded by the Christian Church in 1889, has fully justified the faith and hope of its founders during its 42 years of operation. Its graduates from the four-year course leading to a bachelor's degree, number 980, now living, 122 of whom are in the Christian Ministry and full-time Christian service. The majority of these are members of our own denomination. In addition, 449 are in educational work and are an active influence in the lay leadership of the Christian Church.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION BUILDING, and the definite religious atmosphere of the College, provide the very best facilities available for training for religious leadership, and offer the Church its finest opportunity to train the young people of the denomination to assume active leadership both in the ministry and laity of the local churches.

OBITUARIES

FIX.

William Joseph Fix died at his home in Winston-Salem, N. C., Sunday, May 27, 1934, after an illness of several months. He was the son of the late Joseph and Sarah Turrentine Fix, and was born in Burlington, N. C., July 19, 1886. He came to Winston-Salem in 1915 and held an important position in the Employment Department of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company. He was a member of the Ardmore M. E. Church, South Winston-Salem.

Surviving Mr. Fix are his wife, Erma Cooper Fix; three sons, William Joseph, Jr., Thomas Cooper, Joseph Turrentine; and one daughter, Sarah Turrentine. He is also survived by two sisters: Mrs. Anna Newlin, Burlington; Mrs. Kate E. Thompson, Winston-Salem; and one brother, John M. Fix, Burlington, N. C.

The funeral services were conducted from the home on Monday, May 28th by Dr. P. H. Fleming, Burlington, Rev. M. F. Moores and Rev. William T. Scott of Winston Salem. Interment was made in Salem Cemetery amid a beautiful floral tribute.

WM. T. SCOTT.

LITTLE.

In the death of Miss Annie Louise Little, May 13, 1934, the Waverly Christian Church and Ladies' Aid Society have lost a faithful member who had given many years to her church and its work.

Her quiet fortitude in the midst of her suffering and her calm acceptance of the Master's will expressed a sincere devotion to her Creator.

THEREFORE be it resolved:

1. That in her passing the Society has lost one of its devoted members, who in all her services was loyal, and helpful in the upbuilding of her church.

2. That we extend our sincere sympathy to the family, and her many friends.

3. That we send a copy of these resolutions to the family, a copy to the CHRISTIAN SUN for publication, and a copy be spread on the records of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Waverly Christian Church.

MRS. MINNIE ENGLAND,
MRS. O. O. OSBORNE,
MRS. B. E. WHITE,
Committee.

FITCH.

Robert Washington Fitch passed from labor to reward at his home, May 18th; aged 81 years, 10 months, and 7 days. He was a member of Union Christian Church, having united with the church September 22, 1867. He was deacon of the church and had served in that capacity for a number of years. He was a good citizen, neighbor and a loyal church member.

His wife, Luda Garrison Fitch, fell asleep prior to his going on March 27, 1934; aged 71 year, 11 months and 24 days. She was an invalid for fifteen years. She, too, was a good neighbor and friend and a loyal member of Union Christian Church. During her long sickness, as pastor, I never heard her utter one word of complaint or seem to be the least bit impatient.

Long they journeyed life together; and when able, attended church together; and in the evening hour of life, they were not separated long in their going to the Spirit land where the dead in Christ meet to part never more. They will be missed in the home, the community and the church.

The funeral services were conducted by the writer—that of sister Fitch, March 28 and of brother Fitch, May 19, 1934. Sweet be their sleep 'till Jesus bids them awake.

P. H. FLEMING.

ELLIS.

In the death, May 21st, 1934, of Mrs. Minnie Spain Ellis, the Waverly Christian Church and Ladies Aid Society have lost a faithful member who had given many years to her church and its work.

Her quiet fortitude in the midst of her suffering and her calm acceptance of the Master's will expressed a sincere devotion to her Creator.

THEREFORE be it resolved:

1. That we have been blessed by having her with us, and her Christian life shall be one of our sweetest memories.

2. That we extend our sincere sympathy to the family and her many friends.

3. That we send a copy of these resolutions to the family, a copy to the CHRISTIAN SUN for publication, and a copy be spread on the records of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Waverly Christian Church.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

Demands Japanese Cabinet Resign.—

The militarists of Japan have demanded that the present cabinet of Premier Makoto Saito resign and that a government more favorable to the army and navy be instituted. Especially is a cabinet asked that will strongly press Japan's demands for naval parity at next year's naval conference. It is believed by political observers, however, that Emperor Hirohito will refuse to accept the resignations of the State cabinet, or will immediately re-appoint him to form a new government.

Mme. Marie Curie Dies.—

The Birthday of American Independence, yesterday, marked the passing of Mme. Marie Curie, who, with her husband, Pierre Curie, a young Paris professor, was the co-discoverer of radium. In a makeshift laboratory these two labored together to give this priceless gift to mankind. Pierre died in 1906, struck by a truck just a short time after he and his wife had won lasting fame. She was twice given the Nobel prize in chemistry, and was a member of the French Academy of Sciences. She was 66 years of age.

Inconsistent New York.—

The average cost of soft drinks in New York amounts to around 30 cents a quart; whiskey costs from $3.00 to $15.00 per quart, plus mixing ingredients, but they object strenuously to paying 12 cents a quart for milk, the perfect food and beverage, according to the statement of Chas. R. White, the president of the New York State Farm Bureau Federation. Mr. White's testimony was given at a hearing by the Milk Control Division of the New York Department of Agriculture and Markets. There are other places than New York where people are just as inconsistent.

Compulsory Military Training to the Fore.—

The board of regents of the University of Minnesota, where military training has been compulsory since the institute was founded in 1869, have voted to make it optional. Protests over compulsory drill, in which some 2,500 men students are drilled each year under the regulation demanding two years of training for every able-bodied undergraduate, have been more frequent in late years. Recurrent movements, never successful, have been noted on many campuses, notably among the Western Conference colleges, to abolish the R. O. T. C. on pacifistic grounds. This action by the University of Minnesota is expected to cause another wave of agitation at other schools.

—Methodist-Protestant-Recorder.

William & Mary Elects New Head.—

John Stewart Bryan, Richmond, Virginia, Capitalist and publisher, was elected president of William and Mary College, succeeding the late

Dr. J. A. C. Chandler, who might well have been called its second founder. Mr. Bryan announced that a special committee would have charge of the curricula, etc., of the school and that he would give his attention for the present at least to the placing of the college in a more satisfactory financial condition. It is understood that John D. Rockefeller was among those urging Mr. Bryan to accept the presidency of the college, and it is expected that Mr. Rockefeller will have a hand in the financial matters that the new president is undertaking.

Mexico Elects New President.—

Sunday was election day in Mexico, and on that day 39-year-old General Lazaro Cardenas, of mixed Spanish-Indian descent, was elected as the forty-fifth constitutional president of Mexico. The election was said to be most orderly and was certainly the most one-sided presidential election ever witnessed in the history of the nation. Cardenas received 96 per cent of the vote cast. General Antonio Villarreal and Colonel Adalberto Tejeda, the defeated candidates, both charged that there were numerous irregularities and, as possibly might have been expected, refused to recognize the results of the election. Cardenas was the candidate of the National Revolutionary Party.

Elected Vice-Moderator.—

Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, president of the Southern Convention of Congregational-Christian Churches was chosen vice-moderator of the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches of the United States at its biennial session held in Oberlin, Ohio, the past week. J. O. Atkinson, in an editorial in this issue says: "Dr. Harrell captured the minds and hearts of the great Council, which showed its approval and appreciation of the man by electing him to be the associate with Dr. Cadman and Dr. Stocking." Dr. Harrell had just previously seconded the nomination for Dr. Cadman as honorary moderator. In conferring this honor upon Dr. Harrell, the Council also honored the entire Southeast. It also served itself well, for it would have had to look a long time for one of greater ability or who would be more conscientious in carrying out the work assigned to him.

Blood Flows in Berlin.—

The "revolution" in Germany continues, as executions mount in numbers. The future plans of a few hundreds more or less that oppose him is a matter of small concern to him. One wonders whether this is the beginning of the end of the German "Republic." Man or beast fights his hardest and with least thought for the rights of others when cornered. Is Hitler cornered? President Von Hindenburg is ill at his home at Neu-deck. If he dies Hitler will undoubtedly attempt to have himself elected president in addition to the office he now holds. Will the German people yield their all to his demands or will the revolt become general. Another question, is the time ripe for the return of the empire? and if it returns what will be the status of conditions in Europe. These questions may not concern us as a nation, but questions that concerned us less drew us into the World War.

Stock Market Control.—

Monday of this week marked the first day on which the Stock Exchanges operated under Federal Control. Extreme dullness marked the day's transactions and stocks showed a tendency to drop to still lower levels. Opinion seems divided as to the ultimate results of the stock market control bill. Inasmuch as it retards the refinancing of essential industries, it is bound to retard national recovery. If, on the other hand, it really does protect the investor, it will prove of ultimate and lasting good. The real test of the rules under which the exchanges must now act will be a test of those appointed to administer these rules. They should do all possible to increase the confidence of the public as well as to protect that public, for, notwithstanding the evils which have heretofore attended them, the exchanges have held a vital and necessary place in our economic structure. The effort should be to retain the good and eliminate the bad connected with them.

Declares Roosevelt Last Hope.—

Speaking at the Institute of Public Affairs being held at the University of Virginia, Harry Elmer Barnes, historian, professor and author, declared that Franklin D. Roosevelt was the last hope of capitalism and democracy. Using "Dictatorship and Democracy" as his subject, he declared that "if the New Deal collapses we have the stark reality of Fascism and then Communism staring us in the face." "Partisan controversy in this country today—at least Democratic-Republican controversy—is like two men angrily debating about a heavy dew in the path of the Johnston Flood." He said that there were possibly some who might see grim irony in the gathering of American historians and publicists at Jefferson's University during a Fourth of July period to attempt to justify the "brain trust." "But," added he, "I am not sure that it is inconsequent and paradoxical, for although Jefferson is one of the great names associated with the Democratic tradition, he never had any faith in that crude egalitarian democracy which has now run its course in the United States. He believed the government must be in the hands of able experts. . . . Jefferson never believed in the capacity of the rabble to govern."

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Rev. F. C. Lester was a busy man at the General Council, being a member of the important nominating committee.

Rev. J. E. McCauley, pastor of our Richmond Church in assisting Brother G. C. Crutchfield in revival services at Berea Christian Church, Altamahaw, N. C.

Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, Norfolk, conducted daily one of the ten Seminars at the General Council at Oberlin and did credit to himself and to the cause he so well presented.

We are sorry that "A Story for the Children" was crowded out this week by material concerning the Council Meeting at Oberlin. Even then there was quite a bit that had to be left over until a later date.

It was often remarked at the Oberlin Council that very few laymen were present. Among these, however, were Mr. and Mrs. M. J. W. White, Christian Temple, Norfolk, whose son is making a fine record, in charge of an important medical mission in the Phillipine Islands.

We did not miss seeing R. Lee House at Oberlin, but in some unaccountable way we did omit his name from the list of those we saw. Brother E. T. Cotten, in this issue of THE SUN, gives a fairly complete list of those from the Christian constituency, but it is possible that he, too, has left out some.

We learn that Dr. W. A. Harper, who was a member of the Business Committee at the Oberlin Council, has been appointed on the Strategy Committee which was elected at that meeting. This is one of the most important committees ever to have been appointed by any church group, and one should consider an appointment upon it quite a distinctive honor.

We congratulate Rev. J. H. Dollar, LaGrange, Ga., who at this printing is on the high seas to the Holy Land. Just before sailing from New York, Saturday, the 23rd, Brother Dollar wrote: "Pray that my life and ministry may be greatly enriched by the privileges of this pilgrimage. I sail with the "Seminar to Palestine." Here is wishing for Brother Dollar a happy and helpful voyage and a safe return. He plans to be back late in August.

Rev. and Mrs. R. T. Grissom, Fancy Gap, Va., writing June 25, say:—"We have been busy in our revival at Elk Spur the past two weeks. The spirit of worship was fine. Large audiences came in for each service. At the close of the meeting one was added to the church membership. We begin our revival services at Rocky Ford tonight, and we crave an interest in the prayers of friends that we may be divinely guided in the service and task here."

Rev. J. Everette Neese, pastor, began a revival at his Haw River Church June 20 and closed June 30. It was a great season of refreshing and upbuilding of the church. The pastor was assisted in the meeting by his father, Rev. J. L. Neese, Greensboro. There were twenty-five or more confessions, a number of re-dedications and six united with the local church.

Several joined other churches. On Tuesday P. M., June 19, the church gave its pastor and his bride a linen shower, in which many beautiful and appropriate household articles were donated.

Rev. Carr E. Gerringer, Wakefield, Va., June 19, 1934, writes:—"The mission offering has been taken in each of my four churches." Such a comment is quite in order now, as Mission period in the churches ended with June 30. We sincerely trust that pastors of every rural church, whether serving three or more churches, will be able to report as Brother Gerringer has. It is out of such loyalty that a church goes forward in its work of kingdom building. Another faithful pastor, already reporting from his several churches, is Rev. Geo. M. Tally, Carbondon, N. C., who is happy, in that all of his churches have taken the offering.

When the case of Missions abroad was under consideration by the General Council at Oberlin, fifty-one returned missionaries, retired or on furlough, from our Congregational-Christian Missions throughout the world, occupied seats on the platform and were lustily cheered as veterans of a noble cause as they marched down the aisle of the chapel under the leadership of the chairmen, the congregation singing "Onward Christian Soldiers." It was, indeed, a glorious moment for the multitude assembled to look upon these faithful soldiers of the cross who had rendered service in the name of their Lord in building up His kingdom in fields afar.

It seems that community and political honors have recently fallen to the lot of our brother, Rev. B. J. Howard, Chapel Hill, N. C. We note that he has been selected to supervise the Orange County Project of Federal Emergency Relief Administration as it affects the white schools of his home town—Chapel Hill—and he plans to be on the school-grounds daily except Saturdays, at least, six hours, arranging for activities of special groups of boys and girls and special programs for children of school age. Also it is noted that in the Democratic primary of June 2, Brother Howard was made the nominee of his party to stand in the Fall for election to the House of Representatives from Orange County. If Brother Howard shall prove himself as capable in helping to make civil laws as he is in interpreting moral and spiritual laws his community and State will be benefitted by this venture on his part.

"CHRISTIAN SUN" APPRECIATED.

Dear Bro. Editor:

I am pleased more and more to enjoy the genial rays of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. It is always cheerful and life-giving. Neither too hot, causing extreme drought, in the religious life, with its consequent shortage in the grains and fruits, which sustain and bring health to those who seek the best food for mind and soul. Nor are its rays chilled by the dark spots of doubt, or the cold chilling effect of criticism and unbelief. It is interested in the best enterprises in human life, and noble in its ambitions to help build up Christian colleges, seminaries and charitable institutions, orphanages, homes for the aged, and other worthy enterprises. If most of the money that is now being wasted on cigarettes, tobacco, soft drinks, needless automobile riding, etc., was turned into noble and more needful uses, we would rise into higher living and greater attainments.

REV. B. F. VAUGHAN.

IN A TIME LIKE THIS.

Delivered before the Oberlin Council

By CARL S. PATTON.

Co-Moderator of the General Council.

I do not find myself disposed, as I lay down the Moderatorship of the General Council, to address myself to any purely religious question that can be separated from the general progress or welfare of the world. What I propose, rather, is a very brief glimpse at some things that have been happening since the last meeting of our Council, and a scrutiny of certain ideas that have the strongest hold upon the American mind, in consequence of these events.

What has been happening abroad can be recalled in a few words. Spain has become a republic. Italy has lost all vestiges of personal liberty, under Mussolini. Germany is clay in the hands of Hitler. The Balkan states have been outwardly quiet, but with revolution smouldering close beneath the surface. Dolfuss has done in Austria what Mussolini and Hitler did in Italy and Germany. Russia's perfectly proper demand that the other nations disarm, or allow her to re-arm, spoiled the Disarmament Conference. Talk of war has kept up in Europe and preparations for it have not been overlooked. Russia has, apparently, given up converting the world to Sovietism, and seems to be able to run a Soviet government of her own without that. But Sovietism is spreading into China. Japan has overrun Manchuria. India continues her quiet rebellion against British control. The whole world is unstable and in flux, and the example of any part of it is not lost upon any other part.

Here, in America, we have seen the collapse of business, the liquidation of paper profits, and even of real fortunes, the foundering of old-fashioned capitalism and individualism, the flash of technocracy, the plight of the farmer, the epidemic of foreclosures; then the dethronement of a party in almost continuous control since the Civil War, the closing of the banks, the repeal of Prohibition, the recognition of Russia, the Tennessee Valley Authority, the N. R. A., and a peaceful but pervasive and far-reaching revolution.

The most astonishing thing about all this is the apparent ease with which it was accomplished. There must have been at work for some time, in the minds of the American people, ideas whose extent and intensity we had no way to measure.

What some of these ideas are is clear enough.

1. There has come to the surface, and to frequent and common expression, the feeling that a few people have too much, and most people too little, and that this is neither right nor necessary. National stability calls for a better distribution of wealth. A few people have been saying this for a long time, but that so many people of so many different kinds are saying it now is a new thing in America.

2. There is a widespread perception of the fact that individuals by themselves cannot accomplish the better distribution of wealth which we ought to have. With the perception of this fact goes the new idea of what government is for. We have outgrown a political philosophy that held sway for two hundred years. The business of the government is the welfare of the people.

3. We begin to see that there has been an amount of drudgery in the world much greater than there need be. Technocracy was a flash in the pan. But the flash revealed an industrial set-up capable of producing all we can use and sell with a very small fraction of the former human toil.

What I am interested in is the bearing of these ideas, and others like them, upon the moral and spiritual life of the people.

And first, it is evident that these ideas are understood and welcomed by the Christian ministers of the country. Whoever will read the results of the questionnaire replied to by twenty-one thousand American clergymen, concerning military training, unemployment insurance, the limitation of income, will see that however it may be with the laity at large, the Christian ministry is hospitable to these ideas that are at work in the general mind. When it is added that the answers to the above-mentioned questionnaire were more progressive and outspoken from students in the theological schools than they were from the clergymen, it seems likely that in the social movement now on, the church will be nearer the front-line trenches than she has often been.

The last few years have not been a good time for the discussion of abstract religious questions. For the consideration of religion, as related to the social and political life of men, it has been a propitious and prolific time. There is a new and greater volume of literature concerning the moral aspects of the depression, the ethics of capitalism, the spiritual effects of war, and all sorts of such questions. There is a more definite feeling that there is no social or economic or political question which does not have the moral and religious aspect. This has invaded the magazines, until Literary Digest, Review of Reviews, Delineator, and especially the Forum, have begun almost to look like religious journals.

All this literature proceeds on the double hypothesis that religion is necessary in the life of man, and that his religion will profoundly affect, and in turn be profoundly affected by, the social, political and economic conditions under which he lives. Ideas rule the world. And these are some of the ideas that are most conspicuously in the saddle just now.

It is no time, therefore, for the church to be concerned purely with abstract problems, or primarily with any problems of her own. It is a time for her to address herself to conditions under which people live, and especially to such as seem to make a truly religious life both necessary and difficult. This the church seems just now more disposed than ever to do.

The ideas that underlie the revolution that has been going on among us seem to me much more consistent with the Christian religion, much more favorable to it, much more certain to receive its support, and to react favorably upon it, than those which they have displaced. I do not look for any millennium to come suddenly out of them. The revolution that has been going on among us is not a landslide toward Christianity. And we must be decent and Christian no matter what sort of economic system we live under. But how it would help if we had the right sort of arrangement, and how it will help if we can take even a few steps in the direction of it! If we could have a world in which war, and exploitation, and needless poverty did not constantly recur, the figure of a certain Carpenter, who earned his bread by the sweat of his brow, moved gently and without hatred or self-seeking among the people, made friends with the poor and the outcast, and turned the other cheek, would surely be much more at home. Somehow, sometime, we must have a world where justice, opportunity and common welfare will give religion a better chance.

If the ideas that are abroad in the American mind these days point in that direction, it is because they are not merely a breaking out again of the dream of which America was born; they are the surging up of hopes that stood around the cradle when something much older and better than America was born—namely, the religion of Jesus Christ. Dear always to the hearts of the understanding few, but slumbering and unconscious in the minds of the many, they wait and stir with fitful power when the cheaper hopes of men go down, and their hearts are touched by pity and by love. And whenever they so stir, may God bless them and bring them to fruition!

FOLKS AT OBERLIN.

At the meeting of the General Council at Oberlin the sermons, addresses, music, buildings, and natural scenery were wonderful, but the fellowship with folks—both old friends and new acquaintances—was most enjoyable. I could write pages about various phases of this great session, but it has occurred to me that many of THE CHRISTIAN SUN readers would have fond memories revived and pleasant emotions stirred if they could see the names of many of their old friends, who attended this National Convention. They might recall having talked with them at the General Convention at Burlington, or Urbana, or Piqua, or Seattle. So I am writing herein from memory about one hundred with whom I talked at Oberlin.

May I say first, Rev. O. D. Poythress, sweet singer of the South, and my Elon class-mate, charmed the New Englanders and others with his impromptu singing the last night. Dr. Stanley C. Harrell delivered an eloquent speech toward the election of Dr. S. Parkes Cadman as Honorary Moderator, and in turn the Council honored Dr. Harrell with the office of Assistant Moderator. Dr. Roy C. Helfenstein delivered a masterful impromptu speech in support of the organization of the new Council for Social Action. Dr. C. H. Rowland created an exceedingly spiritual atmosphere as he lifted us up on the wings of prayer. "And what shall I more say? for the time would fail me," and THE CHRISTIAN SUN space will be crowded for me to tell even briefly about others, who instructed and inspired us.

Here are the names of the former friends with whom I talked at Oberlin.

Ministers and their wives:

Dr. J. O. Atkinson, W. J. Campbell and Mrs. Campbell, J. H. Dollar, F. G. Coffin, Mrs. E. T. Cotten, Warren H. Denison and Mrs. Denison, Hermon Eldredge, F. P. Ensminger and Mrs. Ensminger, J. W. Fix and Mrs. Fix, H. S. Hardcastle, R. L. House, Roy C. Helfenstein, Stanley C. Harrell, W. A. Harper and Mrs. Harper, Alfred Hurst and Mrs. Hurst, Archie Hook, McD. Howsare and Mrs. Howsare, I. W. Johnson and Mrs. Johnson, W. M. Jay, Elwood W. Jones, F. C. Lester, S. M. Lynam and Mrs. Lynam, W. P. Minton, R. H. Peel, O. D. Poythress, C. H. Rowland, L. E. Smith, and Mrs. Smith, H. Shelton Smith, A. W. Sparks and Mrs. Sparks, John G. Truitt and Mrs. Truitt, Omer S. Thomas, A. R. Van Cleave and Mrs. Van Cleave, A. D. Woodworth.

D. D. Bouman, Clarence Bennett, Simon Bennett, Raymond G. Clark and Mrs. Clark, Clarence Defur, Clark Denison, Carl Dille, R. E. Emmert, Ralph English, C. E. Ewing, Judson Fieberger and Mrs. Fieberger, L. C. Grant, P. V. Harris, W. G. Kershner, Paul Kershner and Mrs. Kershner, A. E. Kemp, Robert Karn, Cecil Leek, C. G. Nelson, G. A. Roemer, Hugh A. Smith, Fred Strickland, H. H. Short and Mrs. Short, Mrs. M. J. Sweet, Cleon Swartz, Ernest Treber and Mrs. Treber, Frank Thomas, L. C. Talmadge and Mrs. Talmadge, Neal D. Newlin, and Mrs. Newlin, Frank Wright.

Laymen:

M. J. W. White and Mrs. White, Miss Lucy Eldredge, Miss Marguerite Davison, J. T. Kernodle and Mrs. Kernodle, J. L. Reck and Mrs.

Reck, John V. Sees, Miss Margaret Cotten, Mrs. Alice V. Morrill.

I failed to see Col. J. E. West, Rev. A. A. Richards, and Rev. W. G. Sargant, who were present, I was told. No doubt other former friends were present, whom the thronging crowds hid from mine eyes. But the one I missed most was Dr. W. W. Staley, who has been called home to glory. May God be with us till we meet again here or hereafter.

THE FOURTH OF JULY INDEPENDENCE WE PREACH, WE MUST ALSO PRACTICE.

By TIMOTHY THOMAS.

In many respects human nature is what it was two thousand years ago. When Christ was on earth He talked about things that those around Him did not understand. "What manner of man is this?" someone said of Him. He was brought before the high priest who had to admit that he could find no fault in the Man of Galilee. No man has ever thought constructively and independently but that someone said "What manner of man is this?" Men who have dared to do, men who have been brave enough to explore new fields of thought or physical activity; men who have taken it upon themselves to lead their fellowmen into better things through new and untried ways have always had their motives questioned. Only the other day a young progressive and forward looking man connected with our national affairs was brought before a Senate investigating committee with the same old question—what manner of man is this?—upon the lips of a group of conservatives who look upon change as synonymous with treason. The men who questioned the acts and motives of the Son of Man disagreed among themselves. The men who brought appointee Tugwell to the bar of conservative opinion fell out among themselves, their fight being largely within their own ranks and not against the man whom our President had appointed to be Under-secretary of State. The parallels of history are significant, and the men who undertake to free humanity from the shackles of conventionalism will always find consolation in the outcome of persecutions and prosecutions of their predecessors in kind.

President Roosevelt made a bold stroke the other evening in his radio address to the Nation when he referred to prophets of calamity. No community has ever undertaken any progressive measure, no locality or State has ever dared to go forward without hearing the wailings of the prophets of calamity. No local church has ever decided to advance, no denomination has ever felt it incumbent upon its leaders to move forward without hearing the voices of the prophets of calamity. No young person has ever bettered himself without having listened to a doubting Thomas. At this season when thousands of young men and women are halting between a decision to go to college this Fall or not to go, they are having to listen to prophets of calamity. With few exceptions, their decisions lie within themselves, provided they can make their youthful spirits immune to the voices that tell them that it cannot be done.

The Nation's immediate struggle is between charity and chance. The American people are not seeking charity—they are seeking a chance. Our relief measures, local and national, cannot help but develop some who will prefer charity to chance, but the number is relatively few. In-

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE GENERAL COUNCIL.

CHRISTIAN SUN readers will not get from this editorial, or any other printed record, any adequate conception of the biennial meeting of the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches at Oberlin, June 21-24. It simply cannot be done in print or report. In going to the Council, this writer went up, over and down three mountain ranges. Now it would be just as easy and equally impossible to give the reader a mental picture and grasp of these mountains as it would to give him or her an adequate conception of the General Council at Oberlin. Suppose the writer, to begin with, were to say that in addition to the four or five hundred automobile parties, at least two special trains, originating in New York or in the East, to say nothing of special cars on other trains, were used to bring the delegates and visitors from practically every State in the nation, or suppose he would say all the dormitory spaces of Oberlin College were occupied, or suppose that it is stated that the associated press carried daily extensive accounts to all parts of the United States and that metropolitan dailies, say of New York, Chicago and Boston, to say nothing of Cleveland, Toledo or other cities of the West, had special reporters and carried columns daily of the doings of the Council—all of this combined, might give the reader a sense of magnitude and might, but it would leave him still in the dark as to any adequate conception as to what it was all about, and, least of all, as to what was to come of it, the purpose beneath it all and the power generated by it, and the real majesty and meaning of it all. Thus, bewildered, the editor is tempted to say "what's the use" and leave it at that. And yet he is persuaded that there are those of our readers who would like to get some insight into the genius and attitude of the Council and thus, in a measure, properly appraise it and so feel the impact of its sustaining and directing power.

In this editorial, we shall, therefore, just give some meagre account of the proceedings of the General Council from day to day and reserve for future writing the proceedings of various seminars—that is, the smaller Councils that really make up the one large Council.

The General Council was called to order by Co-Moderator Rev. Frank G. Coffin, D. D., at 2:00 P. M., Thursday, June 21. After General Secretary, Dr. Chas. E. Burton, had read the official call for the meeting, as issued by the Executive Committee, Moderator Coffin called for the singing of the hymn that was sung at the time of the organization of the National Council of Congregational Churches here at Oberlin, Ohio, in 1871, "I Love Thy Kingdom, Lord."

Devotionals were conducted by Rev. Vere D. Loper, D. D., Denver, Colorado, who read from the fortieth chapter of Isaiah, and offered prayer.

Co-Moderator, Dr. Coffin, presented Co-Moderator, Dr. Carl S. Patton, who addressed the General Council on the theme, "The Present Revolution."

Following the moderatorial address, happy addresses of welcome were delivered by Dr. James A. Richards, pastor of the First Church of Oberlin, Ohio, and Dr. Ernest Hatch Wilkins, President of Oberlin College.

Moderator Coffin responded fittingly to these hearty welcomes.

The Chairman of the Executive Committee of the General Council, Dr. Fred B. Smith, then reported a recommendation of the Executive Committee as it appears in Item 1, page 12 of the Brown Book concerning the election of Moderators as voted:

That the report of the Executive Committee be approved and that Co-Moderators, Dr. Carl S. Patton and Dr. Frank G. Coffin be elected Moderators for this meeting.

The moderatorial prayer was then offered by Moderator Frank G. Coffin.

On report of the chairman of the Nominating Committee, Rev. Warren H. Denison and Rev. R. O. Fichen were elected Scribes and Rev. Raymond Walker and Rev. Fletcher D. Parker were elected additional Assistants.

On recommendation of the Secretary Chas. E. Burton, the Council voted the following actions:

VOTED: That the program for the adjourned biennial meeting of the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches for 1934 as prepared by the Executive Committee, printed and in the hands of the delegates, be approved for the general guidance of the Council subject to necessary changes ordered by the Council on recommendation of the Business Committee.

VOTED: That when reports and recommendations are duly made by regularly constituted commissions or committees, such presentation shall be regarded as equivalent to a motion from the floor and its second without waiting for further formal motion.

VOTED: That communications to the Council in the hands of the Secretary be referred to the Business Committee for consideration and recommendation.

At the session of the General Council in Seattle, Washington, on July 3, 1931, President Stephen B. L. Penrose proposed the following amendment to the by-laws:

"A committee on resolutions consisting of seven members shall be appointed at the opening session and all resolutions for adoption by the General Council shall be referred to this committee."

VOTED: That this amendment be inserted in the by-laws as No. 5 of By-law III., and that the following numerals be changed accordingly.

Professor William Chapin presented the General Council with a Gavel made of wood from the old First Church and from Council Hall and Moderator Patton accepted the same with the thanks of the Council.

Announcements concerning the Seminars and assignments to them were made by Chairman, Dr. W. W. Patton, and Associate Secretary, Dr. F. L. Fagley. They explained fully the Seminar plan. The reports adopted by the Seminars will be given to the churches as the sense of that particular Seminar.

Dr. Fred B. Smith, Chairman of the Executive Committee made further report and the following items as recommended by the Executive Committee were adopted:

VOTED: That the reports of all Commissions except that of the Commissions on Missions be received by the Council en bloc and referred for discussion to the several Seminars as indicated by the Associate Secretary.

VOTED: That subsequent to the first meeting with the concurrence of these bodies the Societies be in continuous session whenever the Council meets.

VOTED: That a two-thirds vote on findings and resolutions in the Seminars be required for their presentation to the Council and a two-thirds vote for their adoption by the Council.

In brief, the above proceedings of the first session of the Council only gave the setting and greased the machinery for the operation of the sessions that were to follow:—

The session Friday morning began with the annual meeting of the National Boards. Rev. Wm. Horace Day, D. D., pastor, United Church, Bridgeport, Conn., has been president of the Home Boards since their unification in 1927 and presided at this meeting, and was re-elected president for the coming two years. Dr. Day is past master of the gavel and, in addition to a most congenial spirit, has the happy faculty of expediting business when in the chair and sees to it that there is no lost motion or moments in procedure.

In reporting the financial condition of the organizations William T. Boulton, treasurer, disclosed that the consolidated investment portfolios of the Home Boards, the Council Corporation and affiliated organizations had a net depreciation at market value June 19 from cost or book value of only 6 per cent. This report to which the meeting responded with applause, was due Mr. Boulton stated, to the sagacity and unstinted care rendered by the respective finance and investment committees.

In this report the best record among all the funds was that of the Pilgrim Memorial endowment held by the Corporation in trust for the minister's Annuity Fund. The Pilgrim Memorial bonds as of May 8 showed an appreciation from cost to market value prices of $343,000 or 9.45 per cent on a total bond portfolio of $3,630,000.

In advance of the disruption of the guaranteed mortgaged business last year, Mr. Boulton said that a joint mortgage and real estate department was formed by the Home Boards and the Corporation under the management of Alfred Boser, Jr., assistant treasurer, and the mortgages investments would be liquidated without substantial loss.

With a decrease of 43 per cent in apportionment giving during the last three years the budgets of the boards had been reduced 30 per cent, it was said, and the personnel in the executive and field staffs had been reduced by 151 persons. In the 136 years since the organizations of the Connecticut Missionary Society, the forerunner of the Home Boards, such a proportionate decrease in missionary personnel in the country has not before had to be made.

High Standards Maintained.

In spite of the reduction of expenses in order to secure balanced budgets, however, the reports of the Home Boards showed that missionary service has been maintained in hundreds of needy communities; that the work of religious education has been effectively maintained with the enrollments in summer people's conferences and in young people's organizations in the churches making the only statistical gain of the denomination and with the social relations departments working fearlessly and vigorously to arouse the conscience of the constituency against the social injustices of the times; that the educational work for Negroes in the south and for others by the American Missionary Association has maintained with academic standards unlowered although with enrollment and teaching staff smaller; and the board of ministerial relief with sympathetic care to the personal factors in each individual case continued its grants to aged ministers, widows and orphans.

Extension Boards Report.

"Last year the Church Extension Boards," it was reported, "gave financial aid to 618 churches and preaching stations, having a total membership of 31,866. There were 2,534 accessions of whom 1,698 were by confession. Workers numbering 438 rendered a total of 4,029 months of service. The average annual aid to home missionary pastors was $507. In grants and loans to churches largely for re-financing, the Building Society appropriated $230,202.

"The majority of the workers are pastors of aided churches or of wide parishes adjacent to aided churches. In these parishes they preach, they visit, they exercise leadership of many sorts among people of all ages but with particular reference to the young. They devote time and energy to Sunday school and vacation schools; they take their high school boys and girls to summer conferences, they know how to bring their churches into the life of the community. This is the steady, persistent, day-by-day program of home missions.

Following are the officers of the National Home Boards the coming two years:

President—The Rev. William Horace Day, D. D., Pastor, United Church, Bridgeport, Conn.

First Vice-President—George E. Haynes, Ph. D., Executive Secretary, Department of Race Relations, Federation Council of Churches of Christ in America, New York, N. Y.

Second Vice-President—Mrs. B. J. Newman, Philadelphia, Pa.

Third Vice-President—H. Shelton Smith, Ph. D., Duke University, North Carolina.

Recording Secretary—The Rev. Herbert W. Gates, D. D., General Secretary, Congregational Education Society, Boston, Mass.

Assistant Recording Secretary—Frank F. Moore, Assistant Treasurer, National Home Boards, New York, N. Y.

The Saturday morning session began in the Finney Chapel at 11:00 A. M., with Co-moderator in the chair.

On recommendation of the Business Committee, the Council voted: To hold a special session of the Council at 2:00 p. m. this (Saturday) afternoon in Warner Concert Hall for the purpose of considering definitely matters pertaining to Ministerial Relief and the Pilgrim Memorial Annuity Fund.

Voted: To hold a session of the Council at Finney Memorial Chapel on Monday afternoon, 1:30-3:30.

Received and read a message from Thomas C. MacMillan of LaGrange, Ill., oldest living Moderator both in years and service. Voted that the Moderator send a telegram to Dr. MacMillan expressing the best wishes of the Council.

The following recommendations of the Executive Committee presented by Dr. F. B. Smith, were voted as printed in the "Brown Book," pp. 12-20:

5. MILEAGE.

Voted: That in view of the present financial situation the rule regarding mileage funds that states may not participate which have not paid in full their per capita toward the general expenses be modified for this meeting to the degree that states which pay only a portion of their requested per capita shall receive the same proportion of the mileage allowance as their payments to the Council represent.

6. INVITATIONS FOR THE NEXT MEETING OF THE COUNCIL.

Voted That the Council itself hear from the floor invitations for the next meeting of the Council but refer the final decision on acceptance of the same to the Executive Committee.

7. TEMPORARY COMMISSIONS.

Voted: The temporary Commissions on Law Observance and on Broadcasting be discontinued and that the Executive Committee be asked to appoint a committee of three on the subject of broadcasting; also that the Commission on Good Citizenship be constituted with its active membership centering at Washington, D. C.

10. PER CAPITA.

Voted: That the General Council request each state conference or comparable units to contribute to the treasury of the General Council a sum per annum equal to six cents per capita on total membership within the conference for the expenses of the Council, and for the travel fund one cent per capita.

11. WORLD CONFERENCES.

Voted: That the General Council participate in the proposed forthcoming meetings of the World Conference on Faith and Order and of the Universal Conference on Life and Work, and that the choice of delegates together with the question of financial participation be referred to the Executive Committee with power.

12. STATE NOMINATIONS.

Voted: That the schedule of state nominations to the Prudential Committee of the American Board of Directors of the Home Board and the Commission on Missions as adopted by the National Council in 1927 be adopted by the General Council, together with the correction of the omission of Texas and Oklahoma from the list., which states should be added to the 22nd group.

13. MINISTERS AND LAYMEN.

Voted: That there shall be added to Standing rule, No. 10 an additional paragraph to read as follows:

For purposes of nomination for positions on commissions and committees and for other positions connected with the Council "Ministers" shall be deemed to be those who have been ordained and "laymen" those who have not been ordained.

14. WOMEN ON CHURCH BOARDS.

Voted: That churches be urged to consider favorably plans for including women upon their committees and boards which make the plans of the church, including financing, in such numbers that the women will feel that the plans of the church are their own.

15. NATIONAL JUDICIAL BOARD.

Voted: That the proposal for a National Judicial Commission be not approved, because contrary to the fundamental polity of the denomination.

Amendments.

On recommendation of the Executive Committee the following amendments were approved.

1. NAME OF THE GENERAL COUNCIL.

Voted: That Article I of the constitution of the General Council of the Congregational and Christian Churches be amended so as to make the name of the Council read "The General Council of the Congregational and Christian Churches of the United States.

2. THE BI-ENNIAL MEETING.

Voted: That Article V, 1, of the constitution of the General Council of the Congregational and Christian Churches be amended by substituting for the words "odd numbered years" the words "even numbered years," making the provision read "Regular meetings of the General Council shall be held biennially in the even numbered years."

Invitations for the Next Meeting of the General Council.

Dr. Richards and President Wilkins of Oberlin presented invitations for the Council to meet again at Oberlin at its next session or at future sessions.

Invitation was received from First Church, Springfield, Mass., by the pastor, Rev. David N. Beach and this invitation was seconded by Mr. Bartlett and Rev. Dwight L. Bradley.

Rev. E. A. Thompson of Grand Rapids, Mich., extended an invitation to the council and urged it help them celebrate their centennial celebration. This was seconded by Supt. S. A. Lloyd of Michigan, and Rev. Vere D. Loper of Denver, Colo.

These invitations were referred to the Executive Committee.

Strategy Committee.

The Business Committee reported in favor of a "Strategy Committee," which report was adopted.

Voted: To elect a committee of seven, to be nominated by the Nominating Committee of the Council, and not including any paid executives, to serve as a Denominational Strategy Committee. The function of this Committee shall be to con-

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The General Council which met at Oberlin, Ohio, June 21-27th, was attended by about 1,400 delegates. The principal difference between delegates and associate delegates was one dollar. Associate delegates paid one dollar for the privilege of the fellowship. Delegates were admitted free.

The full list of those attending from Virginia was given in last week's SUN, in the editorial column. The Truitt party returned by way of Niagara Falls and New York City. Our party was greatly charmed by the grandeur and beauty of Niagara Falls. It was our first visit to this place. We went over into Canada, took supper and saw the Falls from the Canadian side under the beautiful electric lights. Great crowds lingered along the brink and watched the wonder scenic effects of the illumination. Among the number were several young couples who, apparently were deeply interested in each other. These demonstrations greatly disturbed certain members of our party who are expert in discovering young people who have registered in the society news as newly-weds.

The trip through Albany, along the Hudson river to New York City was very interesting. We spent one night at a tourist home in the mountains. The lady of the home asked us to register as soon as we entered. I thought it might relieve any apprehension in her mind about entertaining strangers, by telling her she was entertaining two ministers and their wives. As soon I gave her this information she looked at Dr. Truitt and said: "Will you please pay for your rooms in advance?" She probably had some good reason for collecting in advance. She gave no illuminating explanation of this extra precaution. It might be a very suggestive method for ministers to adopt in collecting their salary. However, it might be an incentive to less diligence in the preparation and delivery of the sermon if the salary should be paid in advance. A better method is to pay promptly after the work is done.

We reached home in good health Thursday night after traveling 2,062 miles, attending many sessions of the General Council, and visiting several cities on the way home. The General Council represents many cross sections of social and religious conditions in the United States. Looking back upon the session which has just closed, and carefully weighing the sentiment expressed by the speakers and the reaction manifested by the audiences, one is impressed to say that there were two outstanding ideas which were most enthusiastically applauded:

1. The question of inter-racial relations. This matter was emphasized in every session. Many of the speakers drew enthusiastic applause from the audience whenever this subject was approached. The speakers were not always clear in presenting their thought, but it was evident that they were specifically interested in securing social equality for the colored race in the South. Social equality is a much used term which has not been clearly defined up to this date. That is an ideal towards which christianity has been moving for many generations. We have not yet attained this ideal in any race, or between any races. The white race has not reached this state in its attitude towards one another. The colored race, and all other races have their own social distinctions, not always on the basis of color, but upon distinctions as unchristian as a difference in color in the minds of many people.

2. The economic inequality caused by the capitalistic spirit of this age. Many Council speakers were out-spoken against the present economic order. If these speakers represent the prevailing sentiment of their churches this country is moving in the direction of a religious upheaval. The pulpit has nothing to gain, but much to lose by discarding the preaching of the Word and opening a forum for political and economic debates. The Council will move forward more rapidly in creating a new social and economic order, when real prophets of God come back to their pulpits with a message of repentance and faith which will regenerate the church of Jesus Christ. The church is not here to reform the social and political order from without. It is sent and ordained of God to regenerate the social order from within. That is what the present age needs. And that is what the pew is hungry for. Let us hope that we shall have a movement within the church towards a renewal of our inner spiritual regenerating life.

I. W. JOHNSON.

THE GENERAL COUNCIL COMPLETES THE MERGER.

The General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches assembled at Oberlin, Ohio, June 21st-27th, and an assembly it was. Officials, delegates and visitors came from practically every State in the Union and from many foreign countries. They came with a seriousness of purpose and an optimistic hope. Of necessity, we were to receive reports and plans for the future. We wanted to know something of what had been done and something about what we should do. There is always a certain amount of business to be transacted, but this particular Council was concerned most about certain vital questions—questions that had to do with race relations, social adjustments, international peace, Christian education, social justice, and the ever widening Kingdom of Christ in all countries.

The program for the Council was so planned that those interested in particular topics were given the opportunity, not simply to hear addresses on these topics, but to sit down in conference with competent leaders and, daily, devote themselves to investigation and study. These periods of study were nominated as seminars. There were seminars on peace problems, stewardship and church attendance, the ministry, Christian higher education, missions, the social gospel and economic problems, rural life and home problems, current theological questions, religious education and evangelism, and international relations. These seminars met according to assignment and remained in session from 8:30 to 10:00 each day.

The writer attended the seminar on higher education, with President Irving Maurer, of Beloit College, as leader. President Maurer was called away and left Dr. H. Shelton Smith, of Duke University, in charge. This seminar was made up largely of college presidents and college representatives. The discussions had to do largely with the relation between church institutions and the churches themselves. The findings of the seminar indicated that the churches had been most active in founding institutions of higher education and starting them on their mission, but that they had been somewhat negligent in supporting the colleges which they had founded; and further, that the church college is just as necessary today, even more so than in past years, and that the financial support of the college by the church should consist of something more than an annual dole handed out in a more or less generous spirit.

It was brought out that the average college student of America pays less than fifty percent of the cost of his education; that this deficit, of necessity, must be made up by contributions from churches and individuals who are interested in higher education. These contributions, of course, may be made in the form of endowments to be held in trust for the support of the college to which the gift has been made.

Emphasis was placed upon the need, today, of thoroughly Christian institutions. The decision of the group was to the effect that the teacher himself, more than any and all things else, determines the character of the college. That is to say, if the faculty of an institution be Christian and are given the liberty of carrying their convictions into their instruction, that the college is unquestionably Christian, regardless of name or affiliation; but if the college be Christian in name and its faculty non-Christian in fact, that in reality such an institution is non-Christian. In other words, the responsibility of propagating Christianity in all relations of life eventually lies upon the individual himself. If the writer sensed the spirit of the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches, assembled at Oberlin, Ohio, 1934, that spirit was to emphasize the individual and to place constantly upon him his individual responsibility of exerting a wholesome and uplifting influence in all relations of life, whether social, educational, or religious. It recognized the value of Christian society, but also recognized the fact that individuals making up that society, themselves, must be Christian in all their relations.

The Council took a forward step in matters social. It created a new department, known as the Council of Social Action, the purpose of this council being to strive for social justice in all relations of life and to effectively apply the gospel of Christ in all transactions pertaining to human relations. If the writer interpreted the purpose of this new council rightly, it is an effort to make effective the plain teachings of Christ in all social, industrial and religious activity. This was a step, considered radical by some, but hailed with great enthusiasm by the majority of the delegates and visitors assembled. We would speak for it a hazardous career in the beginning but a marvelously fruitful service in the near future.

There were approximately two hundred delegates and representatives from the former Christian Church. For about five years, in committees, conferences, conventions, and councils, we have been trying to bring together two great denominations in this country, the Congregational and the Christian Churches. There have been differences of opinion all along the line, but always an agreement in purpose and a united hope for a completely merged church. The Christian group met on two different occasions and expressed the hope, through its executive committee, that the merger might be completed without question. The Congregational brethren have been most generous and most co-operative in helping to realize the ideals of both churches. In the business session on the closing day of the Council, Dr. Charles C. Merrill presented a resolution to the effect that hereafter, in the keeping of records of the United Church, there should be no differ-

Christian Orphanage

Dear friends:

The weather man has given us some very warm weather for the last week in June. The thermometer has climbed from day to day to 95 to 98 degrees in the shade and much higher in the open sunshine.

It seems that we have our hottest weather when we have our hardest jobs to do—during these hot days we had oats to thresh and part of our wheat crop. Also ground to prepare and set in tomatoes. It takes lots of work to plant several thousand plants and put a quart of water to each plant and cut a green bush and put over it. But it is necessary to do it or lose the plant but think of the mountain of extra work it takes. This all comes in farm life. Some people think farmers never have troubles but out of our many years of farm experience we have come to the conclusion that farmers have about as many problems as any other business, but after all we live close to nature on the farm and can always keep in close touch with His handiwork. The beautiful fields of golden grain, the beautiful landscape strewn with flowers, the beautiful trees in their coat of green, the birds singing as they fly from limb to limb just inspires one to want to live the best life possible to be worthy of a better life in the future.

Don't forget the little children in the Christian Orphanage in your prayers and with your contributions.

grained into the hearts and homes of our American people is the spirit of independence, and this independence can be attained and maintained only through opportunity and not charity. Our national contributions to charity is as noble and praise-worthy as the parent's sacrifice of his last resource to feed his own offspring. As the child is dependent upon the resources of the home, so are our citizens dependent upon the resources of the nation—their nation. However, as the last resource of the home goes out to the child it should be looked upon as being only temporary, and so our appropriations, gifts, and offerings to feed the unfortunate must be considered only temporary. They must be given a chance and not continued as subjects of charity. A wise statesman once said that the nation could not remain half free and half slave. Half of our people cannot remain in comfort and half in distress and want. In this respect inter-dependence must be fully recognized.

The resignation of William Paul Inge, 74, long known as the "gloomy dean" of St. Paul's Cathedral, was announced recently. He will be succeeded on October 2 by Walter Robert Matthews, dean of Exeter. Dean Inge, recognized as a profound philosopher and thinker, became known as the "gloomy dean" after his expression of pessimistic views in "England," one of his early books. In later years, according to a general impression, his attitude toward life became more cheerful. Dean Inge was among churchmen who held that religion must take cognizance of science. He spurned a belief in miracles, and has advocated revision of the marriage contract, easier divorce laws, and birth control.—Exchange.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary

THE CENT-A-MEAL PLAN.

"Many a mickle makes a muckle." The widow's mites have been more effective in the long run in the work of the Kingdom of God than the millions of dives. Some missionary workers are not discouraged when streams of benevolence cease to flow abundantly. They pray to God to touch the hidden springs that never dry up, knowing that He is able to bring water even from the rock.

When the large gifts ceased and deficits faced the missionary work of the United Church of Canada, many small gifts were sought, backed by sacrifice and prayer and the Cent-a-Meal Box Plan was adopted for missionay offerings. What has been the result? In reply to our inquiry the Rev. George A. Williams of Toronto, who promoted the plan in the United Church of Canada, writes:

"The Cent-a-Meal Box was originally devised, not to take the place of any system now being used, but rather as a simple means of making it possible for people in times of depression to supplement their contributions, and more particularly to reach people who do not contribute through the Duplex Envelope, and in many cases are not found frequently in church. We discovered that less than fifty per cent of our church membership contribute regularly to missions, and it was to reach this unproductive field of noncontributors that we devised the Cent-a-Meal Box.

"The plan has been introduced in 1,930 parishes and 125,000, or one-quarter of all our families in the United Church of Canada, are now using them. We did not get started until late in the year 1833 and have not a complete report as to the amounts received from the boxes, but we discovered that we have through this means raised at least $100,000. We have succeeded also in enlisting the support of a great number of new contributors and in some cases, after using the box for six months, these new contributors use the regular Duplex Envelope. In one church where 150 boxes were in use, 50 new contributors began to use the envelope system at the beginning of this year.

"There are also many indications of the educational and spiritual value of the use of the boxes. Thousands of children have learned to say "Grace" at the table, using the words on the box, "As we partake of Thy bounties, O Lord we would be mindful of the needs of others." This method has offered an opportunity to teach Christian stewardship in the homes and has made the missionary work more real to the members of the family. It is a constant reminder of our obligations as well as of our blessings, and is a concrete expression of thanks for daily mercies.

"We are finding that in this the second year many are adopting the Cent-a-Meal Plan who refused to take it a year ago. In other cases, however, the interest is waning. We expect to receive considerably more this year than last, as many churches started on the system towards the close of the year. We feel, as a United Church, that it has been a great blessing to us. Had it not been for the $100,000 received from this means we would have been under compulsion to curtail our work again in 1934. The Cent-a-Meal Box made it possible for us to close our books with the very small deficit of $32,000 on the budget of $2,615,000."—Missionary Review.

A CRIPPLE CLIMBS THE CLIFFS.

THE SUN's editor holds in his hands, as he writes these lines, a personal letter from which our American youth may learn something. The letter is beautifully written, and by a Japanese youth, who, at six years of age, was run over by a railway train which cut off both arms above the elbow and one leg above the knee. This left the lad, a poor boy, an inmate of a hospital for weeks, but finally emerging with one foot and no hands to go upon, he decided, even amid the taunts, jeers and fun-making of his companions, to go to school and make his way in the world. He first learned to write by holding his pen between his toes. Finding this cumbersome and difficult, he decided to learn to write by holding the pen in his mouth. The letter is purely personal, as our readers will see, but that which our readers cannot see is that the writing is not only legible but smooth and equal to the best that comes to this desk. In addition to this personal letter written to his friend, our beloved brother, Rev. A. D. Woodworth, retired missionary, now at Merom, Ind., we have a brief autobiography written also with pen held in his mouth. This autobiography we will give in next week's SUN and should be read by every young person into whose homes THE SUN goes. It is a thrilling story of how a cripple is climbing the cliffs. The letter is given below.

J. O. A.

"December 14, 1933,

"1560 Yoyogitomisayo, Shibuyaku, Tokio.

"Dear Mr. Woodworth:

"I thank you very much for your letter which you sent me from Virishimamaru. As I received it when I was traveling about the cities of Kyushu, I had not been able to write you soon. Please excuse me.

"I imagine that you would be much tired by dint of long voyage you venture despite of your advanced age. Please take care of yourself as much as possible.

"I am working every day with health and joy. My profession, the interpreter of the motion picture titles, is now being gradually deprived of its importance, as Japanese pictures, too, are produced in 'Talkie', and I accordingly will shortly be quitted from this occupation. However, I do not feel uneasiness at all, but am looking on delightful side of life and have hope, as the work will come anew every day.

"Should I, who have, with no hands but a single leg, never felt any inconvenience, fear for an uneasy and unhappy life in my future? No, I am convinced that there will be given a way always.

"Hoping you would oblige me by your kind-hearted letter again, I am,

"Yours truly,
"Kametaro Nakayama."

LEARNERS.

Young African tribesmen are not admitted to the Church at Holy Cross Mission in Liberia without careful and thorough training. A class of forty "hearers" recently has been formed, who will be under regular instruction for a year before they are made catechumens, and then another period of training follows before they are baptized.

A simple and dignified ritual in keeping with native customs marks their admission as hearers, the earliest stage. At its conclusion, each receives a small cross. The questions they are asked are these, translated into two languages, Gbande and Gizzi:

What do you want? (The answer, I want God's cross.)

Will you promise to keep God's laws?

Will you promise not to use charms?

Will you promise not to use divination, nor to obey a diviner?

Will you promise not to sacrifice to spirits and if others sacrifice meat, will you promise not to eat that meat?

Will you promise to have one wife only (or husband), to be faithful, and not to follow any other?

Will you promise to pray to God every day, to come to church on Sunday, and to come when they call you to hear God's word?—The Spirit of Missions,

THE GENERAL COUNCIL.

tinue the study of the relations and working of our various Boards and agencies. This Committee may serve the Boards and the General Council in an advisory capacity.

Voted, further: That adequate financial provision for the work of this Committee be made from the budget of the Commission on Missions and that this Strategy Committee shall report at a meeting of the General Council in 1936, and that a place be made for its report, and action thereon, in the business sessions of that Council.

The Council met as per adjournment at 1:30 P. M., Monday, the 25th, with Moderator Coffin in the chair. The purpose of this special session was that of hearing a recommendation for the creation by the Council of a Council for Social Research, Education and Action. This was something new and stirred the Council to quick and deep thought and action. The following was the result as adopted:

That the purposes of this Council for Social Action shall be to help the churches to make the Christian Gospel more effective in society, national and world-wide, through research, education, and action, in cooperation with the Home and Foreign Boards, Conferences and Associations, and local churches. It is proposed that the Council shall increasingly cooperate with the Federal Council of Churches in the creation of a program which shall be genuinely interdenominational. In its research, the Council will aim to be impartial, its only bias being that of the Christian view of life; its educational efforts will be directed primarily toward the local churches but will also envisage the cultivation of public opinion: in action, the Council may on occasion, intercede directly in specific situations.

That the Membership of this Council shall be eighteen in number now by the new committee to be elected by ballot in classes of six, one class to serve two years, a second class to serve four years, and a third class to serve six years, and subsequent classes to be elected by ballot at the biennial meetings of the General Council for six-year terms.

That the eighteen members of the Council for Social Action shall be ex-officio members of the Commission on Missions, giving the Council for Social Action a standing similar to that of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions and of the Home Boards.

That pending the report of the Strategy Committee at the next meeting of the General Council, the Council for Social Action be financed through the budget of the Congregational Education Society, with the understanding that the Commission on Missions will allocate to the Congregational Education Society a percentage of apportionment funds which, including the $15,000 now appropriated for the work of the Department of Social Relations is aimed to produce a total of approximately $60,000 annually, this arrangement to take effect not later than January 1, 1935.

That the Congregational Education Society be requested to consider the Council for Social Action as a close working partner in the common task of education on Christian social issues, the details of cooperation to be worked out by consultation between the Congregational Education Society and the Council for Social Action.

That the work of the Commission on Race Relations, the Commission on International Relations, the Commission on Citizenship, and the Commission on Social Relations, be taken over as rapidly as possible by the Council for Social Action, with whatever adaptation in organization and personnel the Council for Social Action and these four Commissions shall mutually agree upon as best designed to promote the end thus served by these Commissions.

That in launching this Council for Social Action, we envisage a new kind of churchmanship which, enlisting the volunteer services of a group of eighteen outstanding men and women of social vision, wisdom, and Christian purpose, and commanding the services of five or six strong leaders in the fields of international relations, race relations, and economic statesmanship, will carry the campaign of education and action based on careful research out among our entire constituency at home and abroad. Believing that the Church will find itself as it loses itself in the struggle to achieve a warless, just, and brotherly world we launch this venture dedicating ourselves to unremitting work for a day in which all men find peace, security and abundant life.

The Moderator was asked to rule on the status of the above proposed Council for Social Action and he ruled as follows:

"The ruling of the chair is that this constitutes the setting up of a new organization and therefore does not come under the provisions already prescribed by the Constitution or By-Laws of the General Council."

Dr. Holt and many others spoke to the question. The motion to adopt was carried and the Council recessed for the work of the American Board.

At a subsequent meeting of the Council, Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, former president of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, a post left vacant by the late President Calvin Coolidge, who held this office for six years during his presidency of the United States. Rev. Jay T. Stocking, D. D., Pilgrim Church, St. Louis, Mo., was elected moderator to succeed co-moderators Rev. Carl S. Patton and Rev. Frank G. Coffin, who have held these titles since the Congregational and Christian Churches united in 1931, and Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, D. D., Durham, N. C., was elected vice-moderator. Dr. Harrell, in seconding the nomination of Dr. Cadman, captured the minds and hearts of the great Council, which, in a few moments showed its approval and appreciation of the man by electing him to be associate with Dr. Cadman and Dr. Stocking as moderators of the National Council.

The above report, though lengthy, but touches a few of the many items of business and gives but a poor picture, indeed, of this assemblage attitudes and activities of a religious group whose interests are worldwide in Council assembly.

J. O. A.

CHRISTIANS, CONGREGATIONALISTS, AND THE MERGER.

The mind and the genius of our Christian constituency through its history has been that of a united Christian fellowship. The Christian Church, as a national body, was created by the finding, in different parts of our Nation, groups who, independently of each other, were working along the same line and to the same noble purpose of Christian liberty and Christian union. These groups, combining under the name of the American Christian Convention, went forward with their work at home and abroad, until its fellowship realized that there was working in the same field with us, or we with them, another body of believers equally scrupulous of religious liberty and Christian unity, viz:— The Congregationalists. And so these bodies, in National Councils, had voted to unite in church, activity and fellowship. The Southern Christian Convention, a constituent part of the General Convention had, and still has, certain corporate and property rights and investments which its charter compelled it to conserve, and so, as a Convention, we have had to move more slowly, but we have moved steadily and, seemingly, in the right direction. The recent session of the Convention at Suffolk discovered that it had worked out, and was working out, in detail its plans for conserving and developing its corporate interests without in any way interfering with the spirit of a united fellowship so heartily expressed by Christians and Congregationalists everywhere. And so the Convention petitioned the General Council, that was to meet at Oberlin, Ohio, June 21-27, to receive it as a constituent element of the Council and on the basis of a State Conference. The delegates arriving at Oberlin, found that the request was already granted and the delegates had been already entered and accredited as representing the Southern Convention. Our Congregational constituency was not only courteous but exceedingly generous in every attitude and gesture and welcomed the delegates of the Convention, giving them active parts, privileges and honors in the various corporations and Boards that constitute the Council. The spirit of brotherly love and sweet fellowship obtained everywhere so that there was no distinction between Congregational and Christian, the climax being reached in friendly gesture and preference when Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, D. D., president of the

"Youth at Work in the Church."

REV. F. C. LESTER, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

MEDITATIONS AT OBERLIN.

It is twilight as I sit on the well-kept grass of Oberlin (Ohio) College Campus and listen for the voices that speak to the heart. Stately elms and ancient oaks interspersed with maples and pines cover this "green" which is a full block of the city. Yonder marker says that near the historic elm on the southeast corner of the campus the logs for the first dwelling in Oberlin were piled on April 16, 1833. That seven-foot boulder on the south side was brought from Canada by the glacier and buried ten feet deep in Oberlin, but the Class of 1898 placed it on the campus on the night of December 3, 1897. At the west center is a granite memorial arch erected to the memory and bearing the names of eighteen American Board missionaries who were slaughtered in China in the Boxer uprising in 1900. To the north, west and south of this beautiful campus are the stone buildings in which nearly two thousand young men and women seek knowledge annually.

For a hundred and one years white people have lived here, but long before that these beautiful trees furnished shade and shelter for birds and beasts. Across this campus have walked thousands of America's greatest men and women. In First Church in Oberlin (Congregational), erected in 1846, have worshipped many who have gone out to bless the world. From this Church and College and Divinity School have gone multitudes to make America great. Their names are written in the Who's Who of Heaven.

During the past week some fifteen hundred members of Congregational and Christian Churches have met in this sacred place as a General Council for the denomination. Nearly every state in the nation was represented. They have given and received counsel; they have dreamed of a new world and planned to aid in its coming; they have devoutly worshipped before the high God; and now they have gone back to churches from Maine to California with high hopes of making their vision real.

Sitting here in the twilight I hear with my ears the even-song of birds, the noise of passing motors, an occasional human voice, and the strains of distant music. But with my heart I hear the ax of the pioneer as he builds his home in the forest primeval, the prayers and sermons of Pilgrim preachers of Congregational faith as they build churches and colleges across the continent, the march of American youth via college and divinity school out to cities and towns and country-side with a message of hope and love, and the voice of faithful followers of the Master in far away China saying: "If we died with Him, we shall also live with Him." In two thousand American churches next Sunday will echo the message of this sacred place and the Council which has just adjourned.

My heart is strangely stirred by the closing words of the Council, spoken by the new Moderator, Dr. Jay T. Stocking of Kansas City, Missouri. He quoted from an ancient book: "We are workers together with God." If we, the Christian people of the world, can work together, and with God, great joy and good success lie ahead of us. My heart says, so may it be.

THE MERGER IS COMPLETED.

For five years Congregational and Christian Churches in America have been in the process of uniting. It has been a difficult task. But there has been a growing of understanding and fellowship that is delightful and helpful to both Christians and Congregationalists.

Representatives of Christian Churches who were in Oberlin wanted all dividing lines erased. Their request was presented to the Council and was unanimously adopted, followed by lengthy and hearty cheering. Soon all bills owed by the Christian Church will be paid and the remainder of our funds placed in the treasury of the United Church. No longer will an attempt be made to separate funds of the two former groups. Officers will be selected on the basis of fitness and geographical representation rather than former church connections. We are now merged in fact as well as theory, or will be just as soon as a few financial adjustments can be made.

The only way for former Christian Church people to keep from being submerged by the larger group of Congregationalists is for them to develop talents of leadership that will place them in front of the procession. This is a challenge to you who read this. I can wish for Christian Church young people nothing better than that they become leaders in the United Church because of their ability to lead in doing the things that are Christian. We have entered a great fellowship. We have accepted a great challenge. We must make good by doing our very best.

I am eager that the South shall furnish its quota of officers not merely because there are thirty-five thousand members among us, but because our people are among the wisest and best to be found in America.

We have some problems yet to solve in the south before the merger works well. But if we are willing to sacrifice for the larger good, the problems will soon fade away.

MINISTERS AT ELON SUMMER SCHOOL.

It is felt by many that pastors should go with young people to the Elon Summer School of Leadership Training. This gives a fine chance for them to know each other better to the mutual advantage of pastor, young people, and Church.

A serious effort has been made to get great leaders to Elon to speak to the preachers. We have succeeded only in part. We have been unable to get men like Dean Brown of Yale as we had hoped, but we will have a helpful program daily.

Dr. Charles Eldred Shelton of Portsmouth, Va., a man of wide experience and dynamic personality, a former college president who believes that preaching should be both practical and interesting, will speak to the preachers each day. Every pastor who hears him will be refreshed. Look at these topics which he announces and then hear him at Elon:

1. The Preacher in the Pulpit.
2. The Preacher's Nerves—and Muscles.
3. The Sensational Preacher.
4. The Danger of the Degeneration of the Ministerial Elective Alternatives:
  - Visual Worship.
  - Doctrinal Preaching.
  - Sermonic Humor.

In addition to Dr. Shelton there will be a discussion of our problems led by some of our other ministers. Please plan, brother pastor, to bring a car full of young people with you to Elon, July 23 and stay until July 29 at noon. The cost is only $7.50 for the entire week. It will be worth far more to you and your church.

CONVENTION NOTICE.

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Eastern Virginia Conference will be held at the First Christian Church, Richmond, Va., on Tuesday, July 17, 1934. It is earnestly hoped that the attendance will be large, and that each School, and Christian Endeavor Society will not only get their report in, but their Convention dues as well, and that each organization will have delegates there.

The program is a good one. Among the speakers are Revs. H. S. Hardcastle, F. C. Lester and Dr. Sidney B. Hall. The Church at Richmond has a big welcome for us, and a visit to the Capitol of Virginia is a rare privilege.

All together for a wonderful Convention!

J. F. MORGAN, Pres.

ASA RELIES ON GOD.

LESSON II.—July 8, 1934.

GOLDEN TEXT: "The Lord is my helper; I will not fear: What shall man do unto me.—Heb. 13: 6.

LESSON TEXT: II Chronicles, Chapters 14-16.

TIME: Abijah's reign, B. C. 965-963. Asa's reign B. C. 963-922.

PLACE: Jerusalem.

After a reign of seventeen years, Rehoboam died, leaving his kingdom, comprising the tribes of Judah and Benjamin, to his son Abijah. Abijah reigned for only three years, and during this time was almost continually at war with Jeroboam, but finally defeated his vast army of 800,000 men, with great loss to them.

After Abijah's death, his son Asa reigned in his stead.

Asa's Good Start.

Asa made a good start. This is all the more remarkable when it is considered that not only were his father and grandfather idolaters and very wicked men, but his mother was of the same ilk. Indeed, he was later compelled to remove her from her position as queen-mother because of her licentiousness.

Asa enjoyed ten years of peace at the beginning of his reign, and during this time he rebuilt the cities and fortifications that had been destroyed during the wars of the preceding reign.

Azariah's Message for Asa.

We are told that "the Spirit of God came upon Azariah the son of Oded." The days of peace were at least temporarily ended. Judah had been attacked by the Egyptians under the command of a general named Zerah, who had an army double in size that which Asa could raise, and in addition boasted of three hundred chariots, most terrible instruments of destruction which Asa did not possess.

It was upon Asa's return from this victory that Azariah "went out to meet Asa." And he said unto him: "Hear ye me, Asa, and all Judah and Benjamin. Jehovah is with you, while ye are with him."

But there was another message: "If you forsake him he will forsake you." He reminds them that "for a long season Israel was without the true God, and without a teaching priest, and without law."

"Be ye strong," Azariah counseled Asa, "and let not your hands be slack." Be strong not in your own strength, but in the strength of the Lord. Be not slack in carrying out the work which the King of kings has given you to perform.

Asa Accepts God's Challenge.

"And when Asa heard these words, he took courage." And Asa proceeded to "put away the abominations out of all the land of Judah and Benjamin." "And he gathered all Judah and Benjamin" unto Jerusalem, the Holy City, and there came many from the tribes of Ephraim and Manasseh and Simeon—men who had not forsaken God and were glad of the chance to worship him in safety under King Asa.

We are told that they made a covenant with Jehovah at this time, which was during the fifteenth year of Asa's reign. And so well was the covenant kept that Asa reigned for twenty-six years longer.

Though he made the somewhat serious mistake of allying himself with the wicked King Ben-hadad of Syria, when attacked by Baasha who was at the time king of Israel, and dared imprison the prophet Hanani for rebuking him, yet on the whole Asa was a good king.

He reigned forty-one years, and died at the age of about sixty, loved and honored by his people. He saw no fewer than eight kings on the throne of Israel. It is recorded of him that "the heart of Asa was perfect all his days." What a tribute to any man!

YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

religious rules to honor, reverence or veneration." Just how, in the light of that definition, is the home "sacred"?

Sometimes we do not act as though our homes were sacred. We say and do things that we would not think of doing in Church, in public. We sometimes use the word "reverent" as having to do only with things of the Church. In what ways should we have a "reverent" attitude toward the people and life of the home? Ideally, we know that the home is a "holy place" even though we are often at fault in making it less so than it ought to be.

Marriage has been spoken of as a "holy estate." The marriage ceremony is a sacred vow which binds two people together for life. It is not to be entered upon hastily or foolishly. It represents as religious an act as any which we have in our whole life experience.

The home must be a place where Christian ideals are upheld and practiced. There should be family prayers every morning and the father should ask the blessings before each meal. All members of the family should attend Sunday School and church regularly.

Home suggests the following poem:

"Highbrow house was furnished well, With many a goblet fair; So when they brought the Holy Grail, There was never a space to spare!

"Simple cottage was clear and clean With room to store at will; So there they laid the Holy Grail, And there you'll find it still!"

Cash income of American agriculture increased more than 39 per cent during the year which ended May 1, 1934. The estimated farm income, exclusive of the value of products, used on the farm, for the year ending May 1, 1933, was $3,979,000,000. In the year ending May 1, 1934, the cash income is estimated at more than $5,530,000,000—an increase of more than $1,500,000,000. Of this increase, rental and benefit payments to farmers who cooperated with the Administration in adjustment programs accounted for more than 12 per cent.—Exchange.

"THE GAUGE OF CHRISTIANITY."

"Inasmuch as ye did it to the one of the least of these ye did it unto me."—Matt. 25:40.

You recall that two weeks ago we gave seven meanings of religion. All those meanings applied to the self in its relation to God. We should not have stopped there. There is a master gauge. There is a super-measure.

Sir Wilfred Grenfell, than whom none is better prepared to speak, says in his "Forty Years for Labrador." "Man's religion must be measured by what it enables him to do." "The only gauge is what it does." It makes one willing to go further in the search for peace, endure more of injustice, to strive more unceasingly against odds for the good, than any other power known to man.

Christianity means doing good. Jesus "went about doing good." His work was with folks. His ideas were leaven to all who came within His light. His purpose was that this should continue until all were saved.

He has sent us out with that same mission. The perfect salvation of the Lord cannot be perfected in the human race until it is taken up by us and we have done our part to make it so. When He said "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," he meant that the whole plan of salvation is based on our lives living in the lives of others. "Unless we live in others, we do not live at all."

Prayer—O Lord, help us; O Lord, fill us with Christ's Spirit; O Lord, make us living witnesses for Thee and send us forward for the good of anyone we can help.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"LOOKING UP."

"Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your father which is in heaven."—Matt. 5:16.

When the day is dark and dreary,
And your heart is sad and wreary
And your burden seems to fill it to the brim,
Break your doleful occupation
With a moment's meditation,
Think awhile of all you are grateful to Him.

Then as heaven's God given gladness
Balances a bit your sadness,
And a glint of sunshine glorifies your cloud,
If you'd see your burden shrinking,
Do not stop with merely thinking;
Open up your lips and thank Him right out loud.

And when thought has been engendered,
And the lips their praise have rendered,
And the cloud has given way before the flame,
Just complete your soul's salvation
From its darkest desolation
By a deed of kindness rendered in His name."

Prayer—O Bountiful Father, increase in us that wisdom which discovers our truest selves and our chiefest interest. Strengthen our resolutions to perform what that wisdom dictates. Make us true to Thy other children as an expression of our thankfulness for Thy continued favor.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"SLIPPING AWAY."

"I must work the work of Him that sent me, while it is day. The night cometh when no man can work."—Jno. 9:4.

These swift, swift years are slipping rapidly away. There is not a break in their flow. Moment by moment we see them slip by into the past, and out of the centuries gone by comes their thunderous roar reminding some of us that the most of life is gone; and only a few years are left to love and do. Shall we waste them in idle strife? Shall we trample under our feet opportunities blossoms of the present?

Prayer—O Lord, our Bountiful Father, in the few swift years remaining, may no envious thoughts be heard and no angry word be spoken. Hold before us Thy own designs and inspire us to make every day count for Thee.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"SENTENCED SERMONS."

"Think on these things."—Phil. 4:8.

"The heart of all reforms is the reform of the heart.

What you are when no one is looking is what you are.

If you would lead, you must be willing to be lonesome sometimes.

The value of your religion depends upon how much of yourself is invested in it.

Your own soul is best nourished when you are ministering to others.

If you would find happiness play the game eagerly and fair.

Science will end almost any quarrel.

Living for others is an imperative of the higher life.

Your foes will not fear you as long as you fret over them.

He who follows duty find danger often but defeat, never."

—Chicago Tribune.

Prayer—O Lord, our Bountiful Father, if goodness is the highest service of the soul, grant that goodness to us, and in it to be more of what we ought to be for others.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"HOW TO SETTLE IT."

"He that hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him and he with me."—Rev. 3:20.

"Before undertaking any service," George Muller said, "always settle four questions:

1. Is this God's will?
2. Is this God's will for me?
3. Is this God's way?
4. Is this God's time?"

To settle those questions well and wisely we must know God's voice well enough to be still when He commands and obey when He speaks.

Prayer—Our Father, we need Thee every hour, lest we fail in all our choices and decisions. Stay Thou near by us and grant us that power to be and do all Thou wilt for us. In joy or in pain abide with us, and teach us Thy will. Enrich us with Thy promises and be Thou our stay in hours of temptation.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"2,124 ANNOYANCES."

"The streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in the streets thereof."—Zechariah 8:1-8.

A social worker in Washington asked thirty-two parents to write out lists of the ways in which their children annoyed them. The count showed no fewer than 2,124 different forms of annoyances.

Perhaps the children might have been able to make out equally voluminous lists of the ways in which their parents annoy them! And certainly also the list of the reasons for which those parents love their children would far outweigh and outcount that portentous list of annoyances.

Living together is a serious and complicated problem. But if there is love, it matters more than all the rest. Zechariah, in his vision of the new Jerusalem, was attracted most by the boys and girls playing in the streets.

Prayer—For they were Thy children, O Most High. Their faults will wear away, but their lovable qualities will grow more beautiful every day, under Thy Fatherly guidance.—Amen.

SUNDAY.

"HOW BILLY KEEPS FIT."

"Better is a little, with righteousness, than great revenues with injustice."—Prov. 16:1-8...

Billy Sunday, the powerful and beloved evangelist is nearly sixty-eight years old, but he is as vigorous as a man half his age. The principal secret of it all is his profound reliance on God. Another secret is his contentment. Offered a million dollars if he would act in a moving-picture film, Billy scorned the project. His tastes are the simplest. His one object in life is to win souls for his Master.

We can not all be evangelists, though we might all do some evangelistic work; but we can all imitate Dr. Sunday in the matter of contented living and simplicity.

Prayer—This one thing we do, our Saviour: we strive to do Thy will. This one reward we seek, our Saviour: Thy "Well done" at the last.—Amen.

CHRISTIANS, CONGREGATIONALISTS AND THE MERGER.

Southern Christian Convention, was, amid applause, unanimously elected as vice-moderator of the General Council. This was not done patronizingly or as a gesture of "a big brother," but as a recognition of merit and ability on the part of Dr. Harrell and the interests and enterprises of the Church which he so well symbolizes and represents here in the South.

It may be of interest to CHRISTIAN SUN readers to know further that the day before the Council closed at Oberlin, all the former members of the Christian Church and of the American Christian Convention were invited to assemble, and over this meeting Dr. Frank G. Coffin, former president, presided, and Dr. Warren H. Denison acted as secretary. In this meeting it was decided that on or before January first, 1935, those officers and functions of the former American Christian Convention which seem to separate or show any distinction between Christians and Congregationalists, should cease to function, and that any records from that date showing distinctions of the two former bodies, the General Convention of the Christian Church and the National Council of the Congregational Church, should cease. When this action of the Christian group was reported to the General Council, the man who offered the motion was not allowed to finish, nor was any second permitted to be made, but amid universal acclaim and applause the resolution was most happily and heartily adopted by the Council unanimously.

IS CHRIST ENOUGH?

Delivered before the Council at Oberlin

By ASHLEY DAY LEAVITT.

Christ the Power of God and the Wisdom of God.—I Cor. 1:24.

One hesitates to characterize the age in which we live, in these days when vocabularies are being exhausted for words of ominous intent to indicate how serious are conditions in our immediate world. It is the end of an era. The doom of civilization is just around the corner. The overturning of social and economic systems is already under way. What a temptation it is, when the message of goodwill and trust in God has grown rather stale through monotonous repetition, to awaken the people with prophecies of impending revolution. Even the time-serving prophets who have long cried, "Peace, peace, when there is no peace," may be counted on to grow weary of the slight regard in which they have been held, and to exchange a colorless popularity for the thrilling importance of a prophet of disaster.

They may be right. But mine is a milder characterization and of more immediate significance. Certainly in our lives there has never been a time when earnest Christian men and women were in greater danger of being led off on eccentric or tangential lines of thought and endeavor.

Two Dominant Moods.

Two dominant moods are upon us which promise everything for a renewed Christian Church if we are rightly guided; and at the same time, by reason of the power that is in them, may make us responsive to immediate challenge for action to the extent of forgetting or even violating the essential principles of our Christian teaching.

In the first place there is a profound penitence and contrition prevalent among us. It is like an acute and constant pain in the hearts of most of us. Whatever good there may be in our hearts, we know that organized Christianity is in a humiliating position in the world of today. It is still a power, but it is not a power to be reckoned with. Its counsels of peace, of brotherly love, of the supremacy of spiritual values, are known wherever anything is known of Christianity, but in spite of a multitude of shining examples of Christian living in individual cases—the life of the world seems changing for the worse rather than the better. Christian leadership, Christian principles, are not shaping the systems of political and social life by which the fortunes of all men are affected.

Many of us had some years of ministry before the World War engulfed us. With the insights born of later disillusionizing experience, it is inconceivable that we should have been so blind and so credulous. And we were the living exponents of the Christian faith. Insofar as it failed in an hour of opportunity that may never come again with any such prospect of great accomplishment, it failed in us and through us.

Then, though we had begun to be repentant and sensitive about our obtuseness and provincialism in the period of war, we did it all over again in the prosperity days of the last decade.

It is said that present Christianity is too closely implicated in the sins of imperialistic nationalism. If so, it has been so implicated in and through us. It is said rather savagely that the Church has sold out to a secular society. If so, we sold it.

We have been penitent. We are penitent and we distrust ourselves. At least we ought to. If our penitence is deep enough to go that far, it has great possibilities for a truer spiritual life. But is it deep enough?

What is the value of true penitence? Is it not that through a tragic knowledge that ignorance, pride and selfishness can make one untrue, there follows a humble dependence upon the higher will whence a true guidance may come?

The second dominant mood which is upon us, is a scarcely restrained impatience in the face of certain crying needs of our world. Here again we have evidence of a vitality in our Christian faith which presages one of those revivals of religion which from time to time have sprung up in times of decadence and created a new epoch for the world.

But here again we have to be on our guard. Impatience is evidence of new vision, courage, and a passion for accomplishment. It may make us play into the hands of the most magnetic rather than the soundest leaders. It may lead the whole force of the group, under the spell of this fine temper, to action that is of temporary rather than of permanent significance.

It is not fair to say that the action contemplated stops at the material well-being of the dispossessed. It is part of the aim of these heroic humanitarians to lay the foundations and open the way for a fuller spiritual life for all mankind. But at the moment the traditional spiritual approach to the problems of life is an evasion and an irritation to many. People are hungry. They are without employment. Multitudes are being cheated out of life's best values by force of greed and hate.

The most powerful temper we have to reckon with in our own religious family grows out of sensitiveness to the sorrows, sufferings and injustices visited upon large groups of the human family.

The realistic-mindedness of this acute, impetuous Christlike sympathy is all on the side of sincerity, truthfulness and love. The man whose mood is expressed in words like, "Let us do something," whose eagerness calls for action even before the final detail of the program has been worked out, supplies a tonic much needed all along the line.

Spiritual Integrity and Moral Action.

We have grown so used to letting matters work themselves out; with eternity set in our hearts we have become so accustomed to perpetual debates, that action of some sort toward the great ends our religion has set up, has become a moral necessity if we are to keep our spiritual integrity.

Under the drive of our fully aroused, passionate sympathies we can do one of three things. We can claim the sanction of our Christian faith for any and all forms of ameliorating action into which we go. It is easy to feel and to claim that our line of action is a true expression of Christianity in our time.

It seems unnecessary to point out that in this way there is constant peril. In one of Niebuhr's books there is a paragraph to the effect that men are always prone to claim the sanction of the absolute for what is only relative and tentative. Christian men are being driven along under the lash of such cries as that Christianity is too much implicated in the sins of imperialistic nationalism, or that the Church of Christ has sold out to a capitalistic and secularized society. Well, we are going to end the compromising associations. We are going to free ourselves from these damaging partnerships.

Before setting up new partnerships, or claiming the sanction of the absolute for new associations, let us stop to think that a later generation may complain that Christianity has been too much implicated in the sins of a ruthless internationalism, and that the Church of Christ has been sold out to some form of State Socialism.

The difficulty is that we cannot foresee how our schemes for rebuilding the social order are going to work out. There is no scheme which in the hands of ruthless, selfish men may not be productive of all the evils that seem inevitable under our present orders of life. It is too bad to be halted in our haste to change the world by this ancient problem of our corruptible human nature. That is old technique, and because it has so largely concentrated on this business of making over individual lives the Christian Church has moved haltingly along in its attack on such evils as ruthless commercialism and the war system.

IS CHRIST ENOUGH?

Building Without Foundations.

We cannot wait. We can do something about it. We generally adopt the wishful thought that men in the mass are somehow going to be better men when the system has been changed; or that enough enlightened men can control or coerce the rest. How risky it all is!

An emphasis that is foremost with a great many passionately earnest Christian men and women of our time is concentrated on the problem of a fairer distribution of material goods. Surely in this gathering we can be reminded that the men and women who gave us the distinction of belonging to an order of faith that gave birth to our nation, faced and endured economic insecurity and starvation rather than continue to live under tyrannies that may easily return under many of the schemes proposed for social and economic betterment. There are many here not more than one generation removed from pioneers who braved the dangers of starvation and did starve to death in their heroic fight for liberties which some among us would easily surrender for a dream of an economic Utopia.

It is not easy to say this, for this is just the sort of thing many are saying who care for nothing but to hold on to their disproportionate gains from the present order of our social and economic life. But the thing must be said when many are tempted to tie up the Christian Gospel with any program that must by nature of the case be relative and tentative.

There is a second course we may take and some are already advocating. We can agree that there is no absolutely perfect plan for a society of men that Christ has given us no definite picture of an order for community life, no organization of government or the business of getting a living which can be called the Kingdom of God on Earth. This is largely a human affair. Christ will ever inspire the passion to promote justice, to open the ways to an abundant life to all, but men in whom these impulses have been awakened will go about expressing them pretty much in their own way. It will be the best way they know, but every program mapped out and worked on will have relative value only.

Meanwhile there will be no claim of the sanction of the absolute. Men will say, "This is an expression of the spirit of Christ," but not divisively nor exclusively, and not wholly. In a real way Christ will be left outside or above as the ideal which suggests and guides and impels, but never too much implicated in any approximation to it.

The Church of Christ will be left outside, in a vital sense, for there will be a greater need than ever of an ideal which will restrain and guide the intemperances and impatient zeal of good men largely involved in social and political action.

This is the way it may be done. We are not to be held to inaction because we have not a perfect pattern. A day of tremendously significant action of immense practical value lies before us. Men made alive by the spirit of Christ are bound to make their contribution to the order of world affairs. The Kingdom of Heaven suffereth violence, and the violent will take it by force, but it will be a tragic day for the world if religion does not in some measure remain aloof, to steady and correct when plans go wrong, to mediate between good men who differ, and to preserve the ultimate conceptions of love and goodness that may be lost sight of in the struggle. There must be a church that will keep itself apart from every plan of action, a church that may ever proclaim to all such finally true sayings of Jesus as, "They that take the sword shall perish by the sword," in class struggle and in war among the nations. "He that is greatest among you shall be your servant." "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." And "The Kingdom of God is within you."

But this does not do justice to Christ, and his meaning for us and for our time. The language we have used is strange language; the picture of Christ aloof from heroic action is an unhappy picture. What we have attempted to say is that if there must be commitments and action such as is contemplated in many quarters, Christ and his gospel must be kept from being too closely implicated. The world will need him more above the struggle. All of this may come to pass and be one of the phases of life that Heaven will suffer because of the hardness of men's hearts.

But we cannot relinquish our faith that Christ is enough, that his method will be adequate to the world's need, that he can prompt all the action necessary to save society, and can be in and through it as it is undertaken.

First let us admit that Jesus in his own lifetime aroused the same impatience that men are feeling today with organized Christianity. His method seemed inadequate, his approach seemed slow, and the results he gained pitifully meager. There were many who wanted action. Judas may have been one of them. Coming under the matchless spell of Jesus, he thought him a leader of destiny. Then his ardor cooled, his faith was shaken as Jesus evaded the one issue he thought paramount.

There were two men who walked to Emmaus, one of whom said, "We trusted that it had been he who would have saved Israel." Many are tempted to the same despondency in these times. His spiritual leadership has for long, long years been foremost in the world, but the great evils by which men are beset—war, lust, ill-will and greed—how little they have been allayed. We, too, trusted that by this time he would have saved our world. Is Christ enough, or must we take this world in our own hands, and in our own human impetuous way break it into bits and try to remold it nearer to our heart's desire?

Let Us Hold Our Christian Heritage.

Such a mood is natural, and understandable, but it is not good. It is not fair to dismiss, as some seem to do, all that has been done by the spirit of Christ in the centuries of his commanding influence, because of any crisis that is upon us. The very exaggeration with which some speak of present-day conditions is an evidence of lack of balance. No doubt in other times human affairs have been at the cross roads, with doom impending, as seems to many now; but recoveries have been made leading the way to accomplishments of permanent value, not perfect, but reaching toward the mark.

We are not the first Christians to bow under the burden of the world's problem. We ought to be the best Christians by reason of the ground broken, the ways made straight by men whose spirit at least we shall with difficulty surpass even though our vision may and should carry us farther than they.

It is not a true historical view which maintains that we have but just come to the end of an era, and that the era of pioneers and pioneering? In that era there was work to be done which we do not have to do, which possibly we could not do. And great work was done. In that era Christ was the inspiration of great pioneers. John the Baptists they may have been, voices crying in the wilderness—"Prepare ye the way of the Lord." They leveled the mountains and filled up the valleys and made ways straight for spiritual adventures that will carry further than they dreamed.

Theirs was a religion of pioneers and for pioneers. They had the faults as well as the virtues of their romantic days. They were individualists, and had to be. They were contemptuous of questions of material well-being. They had to be. The expression they gave to the Christian faith was a frontiersman's expression. They gave us evangelism, typically a pioneering expression of religion. They gave us our missionary enterprises, an adventure on frontiers. They moved on from post to post. They captured new positions, never cultivating very deeply the areas taken. They viewed Christ from their provincial point of view, nor did they explore very thoroughly the social implications behind the characteristic great religious transaction of conversion.

Now there are no frontiers. Ours is a new task, the less romantic task of setting in order the positions so courageously taken. They cleared a way. It is for us to build a road and travel on it to new spiritual achievements.

We have not inherited from them form of thought, conceptions of the meaning of religion, or even organizations adequate to our task of ordering life after the frontier has become a settled community. We have not even inherited a conception of Christ that is adequate to our task.

If our question is, Is Christianity enough? the answer must be, No, not in the content we have learned to give it. Is Christ, then, enough? Our answer must still be, No, not in any comprehension we yet have of his meaning to the world.

But he is enough in those meanings we can discover in him in the light of our present task. Christ inspired the pioneer and made him supreme. He will yet inspire a social type and make him supreme.

There is one fallacy we must abjure, and that is that our spiritual ideal is an abstraction, hung up somewhere in heaven, and impossible of realization in any society of men on earth. If there had been no Christ, men might be pardoned for thinking so. The incarnation means this, that God's ideal was realized in human life and suffered no taint in the process.

In a sense we have not an ideal. Our religion centers in a life that was lived in the terms of every life on earth must be lived. To know him requires not a logician who can formulate an ideal, but a lover who will follow a personality.

And whatever Jesus was as a teacher, as a thinker, and a spiritual idealist, as a man he was very much a member of a human society, and when understood, will set the type for an era when human relationships of every kind and degree furnish the field for spiritual achievement.

We shall have to enlarge our conception of Christ. We shall have to set him free from our conventional patterns of spiritual leader. We shall have to set him free from the whole religious pattern and gladly turn him loose on a world which may be saved in some measure by the purely human values in him. We shall have to enlarge our somewhat stereotyped idea of salvation—the essential religious transaction of past faith—when man was to be brought into right relations with God through Christ. Salvation must also mean that man must be brought into right relations with his fellowman through Christ. To the individualistic pattern of Christ the mediator between man and God, we must add the social pattern of Christ the mediator between man and man. In every thought of God and his grace we must remember that Christ conditioned the flow of every grace from God to man on the like flow of grace from man to man. "Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors." To the fact that Christ's valiant death reconciled God and man, will be added the equally supreme fact that his passion may reconcile man to man.

Is Christ enough? He can be enough to enlighten, direct and energize all men in all phases of life which our world adventure may mean. To those who are not betrayed by impatience to take the shorter way and the rougher way, whose minds are open to understand him, whose hearts are set to follow him, he will yet prove to be the power of God and the wisdom of God for all of life, now and evermore.

ence and no designation as to either of the former churches. His resolution was greeted with prolonged applause and voted unanimously without discussion.

With the great joy of both the Congregational and Christian Churches, and to the cause of strengthening united Christianity throughout the world, the merger of these two bodies is completed. This gives to us a united, universal church, constituted by Christians of different sections with different beliefs and different interpretations of the gospel, but with a united faith in Christ and an optimistic hope for the coming of His Kingdom in its fulness. "So mote it be."

OBITUARIES

JENKINS.

Mrs. Alma C. Jenkins was born April 30, 1901, and died May 10, 1934, aged 33 years, and 10 days. Surviving are her parents, Brother and Sister John Hitt of Newport, and six sisters, two brothers, and four little children.

Much sympathy is felt for them all, and especially for the little ones bereft of both father and mother.

Funeral services were held May 12, 1934, at Alma Lutheran Church, near her late home, and interment in the cemetery there.

A. W. ANDES.

TAYLOR.

Mrs. Mary Ann Ophelia (Lewis) Taylor, daughter of the late George and Sallie Lewis, born Nov. 30, 1871, died March 26, 1934. Age 62 years, 3 months and 26 days. She was married to Mr. William Taylor Oct. 8, 1893 and to this union were born five boys, W. C., E. D., R. C. Paul, and Vernon Taylor; four girls, Mrs. H. C. Rudd, Misses Margarette, Kathryn, and Frona Taylor. Two brothers, M. W. Lewis and R. D. Lewis, one half brother J. W. E. Lewis and seven grandchildren. All with her husband survive.

Early in life she professed faith in Christ and united with Shiloh M. E. Church south. After her marriage to Mr. Taylor she transferred her membership to Fairview M. P. Church and there remained until death called her home.

She was devoted to her husband, her home and her family. She was a lover of all good and righteousness and abhorred all that was evil. Her interest was always for the spiritual interest of her children. Her home was always open for the ministers of all denominations. A good woman has been called from among us.

Funeral services were held in Bethlehem Christian Church, conducted by Rev. J. H. Abernathy of the M. P. Church, assisted by the brother Lance of the M. E. Church South and the writer. Her body was laid to rest in the church cemetery beneath a large and gorgeous mound of flowers.

May God comfort and sustain the stricken family.

G. C. Crutchfield.

TROLLINGER.

In the death of H. Walter Trollinger, the First Christian Church shares with the City of Burlington a sense of deep loss.

The former has lost a devoted and active charter member and loyal deacon; the latter a respectable business man and unassuming solid citizen.

1. Be it therefore resolved by the Board of Deacons of the First Christian Church:

1st. That we express to Mrs. Trollinger and the Trollinger family our sincerest sympathies in this their season of loss and sorrow, and that we commend them to our Heavenly Father's love and comfort.

2nd. That we hereby give expression to our admiration of and esteem for Deacon Walter H. Trollinger as a man, a deacon and a Christian.

3rd. That we here and now witness to our affection for him as a brother of the Board and a faithful member of the Church.

4th. That we again affirm our faith in the precious promises of Christ our Saviour concerning the provision made for those who love and serve Him; our expectation of again meeting with and serving with our Brother Trollinger in our Father's House; and our gratitude to the Almighty God for His Grace so beautifully and efficaciously manifested in our Lord Jesus Christ.

Uncle Sam Owns World's Largest Camera.—

The largest camera of its kind, a precision instrument that weighs fourteen tons and is thirty-one feet in length, has recently been installed by the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey for the purpose of reproducing nautical charts and airway maps. It makes copies up to fifty inches square, with an accuracy of 1-1000 of an inch, and at a very great saving in time and cost. Notwithstanding their great weight, the easel and lens are rolled easily along their track by means of hand-wheels. The operator or photographer stands inside the camera, where he sensitizes, exposes and develops the plate. The length of time required to build this camera was two years.

To Land Passengers in Heart of New York.—

Two landing docks are being constructed in East River, which when completed will permit the landing of seaplane passengers in the heart of New York City. These docks are being built by a local construction company and are said to have the sponsorship of City officials. The landing platforms of the docks will be eighty-three feet in length and each dock will have a turntable which will be electrically operated. Within thirty seconds after the plane has landed, it can be turned half-way around and passengers will be enabled to disembark without the use of a boat. The inner edge of these floating docks are attached to the shore, the outer edge being supported by floats.

War Debts and Mr. Douglas.—

Director of the Budget Douglas recently made a radio address in which he said: "If the foreign governments had paid their debts, it probably would have intensified the chaos in international currency, paralyzed further international trade, diminished our own profitable ability to produce and possibly increased the burden on the American taxpayer rather than diminished it." The British made a somewhat similar contention when they refused to pay up this time, and there may be some truth in what Mr. Douglas said, but it was hard on Mr. Hull that he should make such statements when our Secretary of State was bending every effort to collect at least a part of this past due bill.

Fascism Comes to Canada.—

From a recent issue of The Christian Evangelist we quote the following: "As in the United States, fascism in Canada is struggling to achieve a position of some importance and is growing at a rate which is somewhat disturbing to observers who happen to deplore the fascist ideals. Recent meetings show that half of the Canadian fascists are under twenty-five years of age and that their ideals are very similar to those of Hitler's Nazis." Included in those who are supporting this movement, we are told, are the best haters and the sorely squeezed middle men. Evidences of this fascist movement include: intense nationalism, vigorous militarism, anti-Semitism, racial egotism anti-Liberalism and intense capitalism. Growing out of Socialism, Fascism has become one of the greatest antagonists of this doctrine, yet advancing nothing good within itself.

Freak Troubles Found by Telephone Men.—

Among some of the freak troubles which telephone shooters encounter, Robert E. Martin, writing in the August issue of Popular Science, gives the following: A short circuit was caused by an eagle, which, in rising from the pole on which he was sitting, beat the wires together and thus interrupted the service. A pet monkey was kept in a basement, where he would swing on the telephone wires, causing unusual noise until the trouble man located it and stopped him. A pole was washed down by a flood and threatened the wires attached to it. The situation was saved by the lineman who freed the wires by shooting off the insulators on the cross arm and thus freed the wires. A baby used the telephone cord to cut his teeth and put the phone out of commission. A sleet storm in Tennessee snapped a telephone cable, it could only be reached by boat and was repaired by linesmen who took the precaution to wear life preservers. The humming noise made by telephone wires was mistaken by a bear for the humming of bees. He climbed the pole in search of honey and when he found he had been fooled, smashed the insulators to show his disgust. We are told that in Africa, giraffes cause much trouble by running into the wires and snapping them.

Cedars of Lebanon.—

Thirteen living cedars of Lebanon are being sent by the American University of Beyrouth, Syria, as a good-will offering to the people of the United States. At the direction of President Roosevelt, they will be planted in the grounds of Arlington National Cemetery, overlooking the city of Washington from across the Potomac River. These are the majestic trees called in the Bible "the trees of Jehovah, the cedars of Lebanon, which He hath planted." Their most famous appearance in history was when King Hiram of Tyre transported Lebanon cedars to Jerusalem to be used in the erection of Solomon's Temple. Says the National Geographic Society Bulletin: "The famous cedars are in the Lebanese Republic, at the eastern end of the Mediterranean, just north of the Holy Land. Although Lebanon is included in a French Mandate along with Syria, it has its own government under a Syrian president. The flag of the Republic is the flag of France with the green cedar of Lebanon in the center. The site of the chief cedar grove is one of rare beauty, the stage of a massive amphitheatre miles across and 4,000 feet high. Immediately behind them the long life of the Lebanon rises to its culminating ridge, more than 10,000 feet above the Mediterranean. Twenty miles to the northwest lies the port of Tripoli." An authority tells us: "There is not and never has been a rotten Lebanon cedar. The wood is incorruptible. The imperishable cedar remains untouched by rot or insect."—God's planting.—Methodist Protestant Recorder.

How the Churches Wage Peace.—

J. P. Stephenson, writing in The Christian World says: "Two years ago the London Missionary Board set itself to balance the society's budget. We have failed each year by about £12,000. Next year we dare to ask a still higher estimate by £3,500. The figure then is £149,000. The membership of our churches in England alone is 307,913. If we could raise an average of 10s. per member we should have £5,000 more than we ask. Is that possible? Do we realize this is merely 2½d. a week for fifty weeks? I have spent some time analyzing figures and am startled with many stories. I give no names here, but have sent a copy of my list to Dr. Berry (secretary of the Congregational Union) and Mr. Chirgwin (secretary of the L. M. S.). Here is a church in the biggest city of the world ministered to by one of our foremost men, and the L. M. S. gift averages 3s. 7d. per member—less than a penny a week. Here is another in which 2,000 people gather with 425 members, and their gift is 4s. per member. A church that I know well which has 430 members gives 3s. 3d. per member. A church whose minister has stood for the chair of the Union has 320 members who give 4s. 6d. each. Two comparatively new churches, both prosperous, give 5s. 10d., while another just out of London with 373 members raises 5s. 11d. per member. A church known through the ministry of one of our most honored leaders gives exactly three-halfpence per week per member, while two churches whose fame is in everyone's mind and which have respectively 735 and 601 members content themselves with 9s. 2d. a member. My list reveals three churches whose ministers are directors and so in direct touch with the society's story—each of them strong churches—which give 6s. 6d. a year per member, and the list includes eight churches, whose ministers are members of the board, whose gifts only just reach the ten-shilling level. Mr. Chirgwin has said it. We are campaigning for Christ. Was ever a campaign such as ours fought on the basis of 2½d. a week—and unpaid?"—Reprinted from Advance.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

We learn with deep regret, just as we go to press, of the loss sustained by Rev. R. E. Brittle of Suffolk, Va., in the death of his dear wife on Tuesday of this week.

Two interesting pieces of news appeared in the daily press yesterday: Mississippi voted against "Liquor Control"—how we do twist the king's English—and in favor of retaining the State prohibition law. New York reported a 300 per cent increase in fatal accidents since the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. Both items are significant.

A speaker at Oberlin, Ohio, declared an imperishable fact in these words: "Mission Boards and Councils arise from Missions, and not Missions from Councils and Boards." The first Church Council was called in Jerusalem only after missionary work had begun. It would be well for us as churchmen to remember that the church itself did not institute Missions, but our Lord who founded the Church that did that.

We attended the "In Memoriam" services, First Congregational Church, Oberlin, Ohio, on Sunday morning of the General Council, at which services a list of Congregational and Christian ministers who were known to have passed away since the last meeting of the General Council, was placed in our hands. Their full names are printed, with the place of their residence at time of death and the date on which each died. The list now in our hands covers four closely printed pages and shows that from our ranks 451 ministers went to their reward during the past two years. As one glances at the long list of those who have dropped out in so brief a time, one wonders if others in equal numbers have stepped in to fill up the breach and, if so, will they carry on worthily the work entrusted to them and wear with Christian zeal and fervor the mantle bestowed by these sainted hands?

Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, D. D., Durham, writing of the Council at Oberlin, Ohio, says:—"It was to me the most inspiring and instructive meeting I ever attended. It has given me an entirely new insight into the possibilities of the merger. On the way home I fell in with three of the delegates from the meeting in Cleveland, and they were equally as enthusiastic about their experience." The meeting in Cleveland referred to was that at which the Reformed Church of the United States and the Evangelical Synod of the United States merged into one body, and these two great churches now become one in fellowship as well as in comity and cooperation. The Cleveland meeting cemented the union in the Foreign work as well as the Home work of these two bodies. Thus the uniting of the churches of Protestantism goes merrily and happily along, and at last the fervent prayer of our Lord seems to be receiving answer: "That they may be one even as we are one; I in thee and thou in Me, that they may be made perfect in one; and that the world may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them, as thou hast loved me."

The Western N. C. Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention met with Antioch Church (Randolph County), Tuesday, July 3. A large delegation was present and most of the Sunday schools of the Convention were represented. The president of the Convention had moved away during the year and the vice-president was unable to attend. Miss Lillie Horne, the faithful secretary, made announcement of this fact at the opening of the session and requested President L. E. Smith, of Elon College, to call the Convention to order and to conduct the opening exercises. By vote of the Convention the temporary president was requested to preside for the day. The day was filled with interesting reports and addresses bearing directly on the work of Sunday Schools and Christian Endeavor, and a very profitable, progressive session was held. The entertaining church had enlarged and repaired its building, which is a valuable and much needed addition. The Convention was entertained with abundant hospitality. The session next year, on invitation, is to be held with our Pleasant Hill Church near Liberty, N. C. Rev. J. H. Lightbourne, D. D., was elected president. Rev. S. M. Penn, Vice-president, and Miss Lillie Horne, Secretary and Treasurer.

Mr. C. J. Strickland, Columbus, Ohio, was a visitor at Elon College and the editorial office of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, Friday, the 6th. Brother Strickland's radio address given on the editorial pages of THE CHRISTIAN SUN two weeks ago carried information that was most heartily welcomed by all lovers of decency in moving pictures. The Catholics, according to Mr. Strickland, are waging a telling fight on the movies, and the Federal Council of Churches in America are calling upon all Protestant churches to join in the crusade. Millions have now signed the pledge of the "Legion of Decency," and the result is that in many cities the door receipts for movies have dropped fifty to eighty percent. One well-known company operating a string of movie houses is seriously considering closing up all their theatres until decent pictures are offered the public, the same chain of houses having warned their employees if door receipts continue to drop off as they have for the last few weeks their theatres will soon close. The most effectual way of dealing with the indecent movie is to curtail receipts to producers. Brother Strickland believes the fight by Catholics and Protestants for decent movies will not cease till a magnificent victory is won over this, one of the greatest evils of our day.

A SURPRISE PARTY.

Rev and Mrs. W. T. Scott were highly honored with a surprise party at the United Church on June 29, the 6th anniversary of their wedding. Some fifty guests were present, a musical program was rendered and presents were given as a token of appreciation for the service they have rendered the church and the city. The Winston-Salem Journal, commenting on the event, says:

"It is to be noted with wonder and praise that Mr. and Mrs. Scott have been here less than three years and have organized the only Congregational-Christian Church in this city, built a modern church building and, although the congregation is still small, it is a very active and hard working organization, and its success is to be pointed out with pride, all of which has been due to the faithful service of Mr. and Mrs. Scott."

From the church bulletin of July first, we glean the following:

"Mr. and Mrs. Scott desire to acknowledge the lovely tribute and honor paid them by members and friends of the Church, Friday night, June 29th, on their sixth wedding anniversary. The surprise was complete, the reception beautifully planned and executed, the gift most appropriate, and the love and respect which prompted such an expression is most deeply appreciated. Your happy pastor and his wife feel that this beautiful expression of love from you will not only bind us into a still closer Christian fellowship, but such an experience makes us, your servants, want to mean more to each of you. May God bless you."

SUNDAY SCHOOL AND CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR CONVENTION.

The 1934 session of the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the N. C. & Va. Conference was held at Berea Church, near Elon College, Thursday and Friday, June 21-22. The first day's roll call disclosed that there were 176 delegates and visitors present. This included 14 pastors, 13 Sunday School superintendents, 6 C. E. Presidents, 30 Sunday School teachers. The attendance at the later sessions must have reached three hundred or more. The following Sunday schools were not represented: Concord, Kallam Grove, Salisbury, United. The largest number of Sunday schools ever represented was present for this session.

The theme for the Convention was "Reflecting Jesus Christ," and the Convention Song was "Let the Beauty of Jesus be seen in me."

The session was one of the finest held in many years, considering the absence of so many of our leaders who were in attendance at the General Council at Oberlin, Ohio, June 21-28th. These leaders' counsel and inspiration were greatly missed, and it was the vote of the Convention that effort should be made to secure a calendar for our various Conventions that would make unnecessary such conflicts in date as could possibly be avoided.

Highlights in the session was the President's Address, "More Horses than Riders," by our capable leader, Mr. W. B. Truitt; the address on "Reflecting Jesus Christ through C. E.," by Rev. Gordon Spaugh, Winston-Salem, and past President of the N. C. Christian Endeavor Union; the group conferences on general S. S. and C. E. Problems; "Making our Convention Evangelistic" an address by Rev. H. E. Crutchfield. Rev. G. C. Crutchfield and Miss Frankye Marshall respectively avoided the stereotyped address of Welcome and Response. They challenged the Convention with an appeal for making the session more than just "another meeting."

The Youth Fellowship, under the leadership of Rev. J. Everett Neese, had charge of the Thursday night session, and a great service was held. Rev. Banks J. Peeler, pastor of the First Reformed Church, Burlington, made an inspiring address.

The session voted to hold its 1935 meeting at Bethel Church (Caswell Co.), Rev. J. F. Apple, Pastor.

All present officers were re-elected:

President, Mr. W. B. Truitt, Greensboro.

First Vice-President, Mr. W. T. Dunn, Lynchburg, Va.

Second Vice-President, Rev. C. E. Newman, Virgilina.

Recording Secretary, Miss Evelyn Stewart, Greensboro.

Asst. Recording Secy., Mr. John R. Foster, Jr., Greensboro.

Corresponding Secy., Rev. Wm. T. Scott, Winston-Salem.

Treasurer, Mrs. Floyd H. Dunn, Lynchburg.

Departmental Secretaries:

Children's Division, Mrs. Robert Simpson, Summerfield.

Young People's, Miss Frankye Marshall, Walnut Cove.

Adult Division, Mr. S. D. Scott, Greensboro.

Administrative, Rev. D. M. Spence, Salem Chapel, N. C.

Missions, Miss Jessie R. Sharpe, Summerfield.

Senior C. E., Rev. J. E. Neese, Elon College.

Int. C. E., Miss Clarice Gunn, Reidsville.

Junior C. E., Miss Helen Mitchell, Reidsville.

The Berea Church and community opened its home, church, and heart, and the session was royally entertained. The happy pastor, Rev. G.

C. Crutchfield, and his people certainly proved themselves hosts indeed.

There was a sentiment expressed at the session that we should make the Convention meeting more than a propaganda agency but should consider in most effective ways the problem of teaching in the Sunday School, and of introducing effective programs for Christian Endeavor. There was also much emphasis put upon worship, and since the session next year will be held at Bethel (Bethel), "House of God," our capable President, has suggested that perhaps the suggestion implied in the name of the entertaining church offers an excellent opportunity for laying particular stress on worship at the 1935 session.

W. T. SCOTT.

ANOTHER CHURCH MERGER.

Throughout Protestantism considerable interest attaches to various movements toward union among a number of communions. While some of the unions that are being effected deal with groups originally separated from some parent denomination there was a merger taking place in Cleveland, Ohio, June 26 and 27, that brings together two bodies that have had an entirely independent existence. The Reformed Church in the United States and the Evangelical Synod of North America are holding their national conferences in Cleveland simultaneously and then after taking care of the necessary formal details are bringing the delegations of the two bodies together to proceed with the formation of the new united church.

The Reformed Church of the United States has a history of about two hundred years, developing from small beginnings in the state of Pennsylvania and subsequently spreading into some thirty states. It has a membership of approximately 350,000. The headquarters are located in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

The Evangelical Synod of North America had its origin in the state of Missouri about one hundred years ago. Its present constituency is to be found chiefly in the Central States and the Southwest. It has a membership approximating 275,000. The denominational headquarters are located in St. Louis, Missouri. The Rev. Paul Press of St. Louis, Mo., is President of the Evangelical group. Rev. Dr. Henry J. Christman of Dayton, Ohio, is President of the Reformed Church in the United States.

The united church body will touch all sections of the country with the exception of a few states in the South and the New England area.

Maps in the special issues of the Evangelical Herald and the Reformed Church Messenger for June 21 show the numerical representation of both church bodies, both in the United States by states as well as on the mission fields in Asia and Central America. The Reformed Church has its largest membership in Pennsylvania and Ohio, while the Evangelical Synod constituency is strongest in Illinois, Missouri, Ohio and Indiana. Most of the thirteen educational institutions of the Reformed Church are situated in Ohio and Pennsylvania, while the two institutions of the Evangelical Synod are located in Illinois and Missouri. Both denominations are strong in their institutions of charity, the Reformed Church in the United States having ten homes for orphans and the aged and one hospital; the Evangelical Synod supporting eight hospitals and eleven homes for orphans and old folks, two institutions for the epileptic and feeble-minded, and one institutional church and social center.

The foreign mission fields of the Reformed Church are found in the northern section of Japan, two interior provinces of China, and in Iraq (Mesopotamia). Those of the Evangelical Synod are located in the Central Provinces in India and in Honduras, thus giving the united church strategic locations for missionary work in all important Asiatic countries as well as in Central America. The combined missionary force of the new church body consists of more than 570 workers, not counting the nationals engaged in educational work or other capacities.

On June 26 both church bodies met in separate sessions to transact such business as the occasion called for. On the evening of that day, at seven o'clock, a joint session of both judicatories was held in Zion Church, of the Evangelical Synod, in which by joint resolution the union of the two churches was declared duly effected. At eight o'clock in the same church the members of both bodies partook of holy communion, in which visiting ministers and laymen took part. The presence of Dr. S. M. Cavert of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, and representatives of leading American church bodies added to the impressiveness of the occasion. On Wednesday, June 27, the new united church held its first session for constituting the General Synod of the Evangelical and Reformed Church. Officers were elected and provision made for preparing the constitution of the new denomination.

So nearly do the two merging groups find themselves in accord that the union is being effected "without a prearranged constitution, by-laws or creedal statement." They are uniting with absolute confidence in each other and in full assurance that they will be able to work out together whatever is necessary for government and statement of doctrine.

PAYMENTS FOR JUNE.

The list below shows those who made payments on their subscriptions during June. We thank these subscribers, but would urge that others look at their labels, and if in arrears pay some part if not all of their arrearage. There should be not less than an average of two hundred renewals sent in each month. The number returned for the past month is only about one-eighth of that number.

If you have sent in your subscription before the 25th of June and your name does not appear on this list, please check your label and see if you have been credited. If you have not, send us a postcard and we will see that the error is corrected at once.

Again thanking those who have remitted, I am,

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

OBERLIN.

Last week's CHRISTIAN SUN gave columns of detail about the General Council at Oberlin. Even as many columns would not tell the story. It may have been noted by our readers that every one who attended the Council and wrote about it last week, gave impressions and approaches as distinctly and as differently as they would have done had they been attending different Councils. This variety, in a measure, reveals the technique of the Council. Of the two thousand who attended, there were doubtless two thousand views, estimates and interpretations of the meeting. At Oberlin and since, the SUN's editor has been driven again and again to these reflections and conclusions—

1st. The Greatest wisdom, the keenest minds and the most comprehensive insight into the problems of nations and individuals are to be found, not in political assemblies, national congresses or parliaments, but in church councils and assemblies. Our General Council at Oberlin dealt with problems of human welfare and destiny that our national government will undertake to deal with a decade hence, and will deal with them no more intelligently than the General Council dealt with them at Oberlin, June 21-27, 1934. Just one of these as an example. Before this nation of ours shall go into another war, it will have to discuss that war and decide upon it in the light, and under the impulse of that which is more than patriotism. If it is patriotism to stand up and fight for your nation, whether right or wrong, then Church councils have demanded, and will demand, that patriotism shall enlarge the sweep of its meaning by declaring every citizen is a world citizen, and every human being has rights and privileges as a child of God. Those who are preaching and teaching Jesus Christ are beginning to believe in Him as the Prince of Peace and the elder brother of the human race. The politicians and the government will not fly furiously into war, even for the sake of economy, pride or prejudice; it will have to reckon with that increasing number of the followers of our Lord who believe that war is wrong and that God, through Moses, was speaking to the nations as well as individuals who make up that nation when He said: "Thou shalt not kill." The discussion of war, the elements that enter into war, the prejudices and the passions that precipitate war, and the hell of war when it comes, then the folly and the fruitlessness of war twenty-five years after it has been terminated, were brought out in bold relief and rugged outline at Oberlin, and protest was made against all forms of subtle propaganda in time of peace for war. When our nation gets ready to go into another war it will have to deal with the wisdom, the insight and the conviction of far-visioned and clear-sighted men and women who met at Oberlin in 1934.

2nd. The second impression from Oberlin abides and deepens. Society and the world will not be saved in the aggregate. Time and again, great minded men and women defined the "social gospel", but invariably they revealed and emphasized the fact that the only hope and meaning of the "social gospel" was in individual redemption, personal salvation. Society, in its economic moral and spiritual make-up, can go no faster, no further and no deeper than the mind, heart and soul of individuals go. The only hope of social reformation is personal regeneration, and the only saving grace of society is the salvation of the individual. There is a social gospel. There is an individual gospel. This, for the reason that the gospel of redemption is more comprehensive and far-reaching than the individual that it redeems. It impels that individual to see to it that he helps to create and to keep a clean and decent social order.

3rd. There is no progress without change. Change does not necessarily mean progress. There are many changes that hinder rather than help progress. Our government changed from the open saloon to legal prohibition. It has since reversed itself and changed in many quarters, at least, to the open saloon and the legal sale of liquor in drug stores, in chain stores, in grocery stores and everywhere, that the people may secure drink and more drink. This may seem like a change from bad to worse, but is it? The National Council at Oberlin declared, in no unmistakable terms, for a dry nation, based on personal sobriety, personal aversion to strong drink, personal interest in producing a saloonless community, nation and world. The fight is not ended. The liquor problem is not solved. There has been a change, but sobriety goes forward not in a straight line but by a circuitous route up a broken incline. The power of the bootlegger under prohibition had to be broken, and the open defiance or utter disregard for law under prohibition had to be reckoned with. So a change has come. The right will prevail and sobriety will conquer. The church will fight the battle and will win the conflict, and then the nation will act intelligently and effectually.

There is nothing on earth as powerful as an idea come to its time. Ideas were voiced at Oberlin, which have either come to their time or will come to their time, and in the counsel of wise, broad-minded, far-visioned souls one is constrained to emphasize in one's mind and heart the proverb:—"The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom; and a knowledge of the holy is understanding."

CHURCH MERGERS.

The Philadelphia Evening Bulletin points out that within the last thirty years there have been ten church mergers as follows:—

"The Presbyterian Church in U.S.A. and the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, in 1906. The Northern Baptist Convention and the Free Baptist Church, in 1911. Three Lutheran groups came together in the Norwegian Lutheran Church of America in 1917. Three other Lutheran bodies formed the United Lutheran Church in 1918. The Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. and the Welsh Calvinistic Methodist Church, in 1920. The reunion of the Evangelical Association and the United Evangelicals, in 1922. The Congregational and Evangelical Protestant Church, in 1924. The Congregational and the Christian Churches, in 1931. And the American Lutheran Church formed of three separate Lutheran Synods, also in 1931."

There are many other proposals now under consideration, and unless all indications fail the next decade will show more of the denominations uniting organically. In addition to these organic unions, the spirit of comity and cooperation increases constantly and the sacrimonious warfare that obtained among the various denominations a few years ago has very largely disappeared.

This state of affairs has come about, however, not without certain losses. Time was when church members had a firm belief even in non-essentials and details, and they stood by this belief, and sought out the grounds and the reasons for maintaining their beliefs. The case is quite different now, and many church members are indifferent about their own faith and belief and pass the matter off with saying: "Oh! Well, it matters little, one church is about as good as another, if not a little better." We shall have to recover from a condition of this kind, since the church, like other institutions, is built and goes forward not on "opinions" and half beliefs, but upon convictions and unwavering faith.

CIGARETTE OUTPUT.

In spite of the propaganda and subtle advertising on which the manufacturers have spent millions of dollars, statistics now available reveal that the output of cigarettes in 1933 was eight billions under that of 1931. This is not much, but it is something and gives some hope to those who care for the physical and mental health of our youth. In comparison with the total output, the decrease was not much and the volume of cigarettes consumed in 1933, viz:—one hundred and twelve billions, was sufficient to impair the health and becloud the thinking of thousands of youth and adults who are addicted to the habit.

If only a fractional part of the educational work to reduce the use of cigarettes was carried on by those who care for the physical and mental well-being of human beings, as is carried on to increase the use of cigarettes by those who think only in terms of profit, the next two years would show far greater reduction than the past two years have shown.

THE RIGHTEOUSNESS THAT EXALTS A NATION.

Delivered before the General Council

By F. G. COFFIN, Co-Moderator.

The theme of this Council is pretentious in its implications and, if taken with the seriousness which it should involve, will demand some revision in both the nation and the quality of the righteousness which is being produced in it. In spite of the sincerity of our intentions, unless a too heavy strain of self-sacrifice is put upon them, one cannot avoid wondering whether this Council means to be serious about it, or has inserted it as an ideal to embellish the printed program as the flowers decorate the pulpit. It is not an easy time, in this present world rivalry, for a nation to commit itself to the practice of that type of righteousness advocated by the Great Teacher, nor is it much easier to find a righteousness in any other area which may be brought over into the field of the nation.

There is a widespread moral tentativeness which we let ourselves believe comes from our changing times. In the refuge of this reasoning, we await a stabilizing of human relations into a new order. It is easy to make ourselves believe that when this order arrives, we will make it a thing of righteousness. We who are moral and religious leaders are doing much too little now toward shaping the character of that better order which we think is to come. In this we but repeat the age-long error of the Christian Church: namely, always attempting the more difficult task of reforming and reconstructing what others have already built instead of building the social structure from its beginnings, according to the specifications of righteousness.

The whole complicated situation of society is baffling to most of us. Competing material interests have made deliberate and undisguised war upon Christian principles. Unashamed, low-grade ideals of living are being shouted from America's housetops. Nations no longer disguise the fact that they purpose to put each other at a disadvantage in the commerce of the world. In the midst of this there is a restless mulling of the hoi polloi, skeptical, angry, prejudiced, and ready for their fatal dash under a leadership intriguing enough to fire their emotions. Much uncertainty as to what methods should be employed to bring ideals of righteousness into dominance amid this confusion prevails. There are but few days in human experience where willingness to act in a holy way exceeds a knowledge of the way itself, but to many this is one of those times. Few know, except in an almost inapplicable idealism, just where and how our many national problems should be attacked. We even regard leaders untrustworthy to the extent that they are cocksure. This frame of mind adds to the mortality of good intentions.

New Interrogation Points.

In the church, things thought long settled are bristling with a new array of interrogation points. There is no lack of investigation of our religious enterprises; in fact, we would be surprised to find one which was not under question from some source. We have been "surveyed" and "investigated" until the very connotations of the words make us peevish.

Once it was disloyal to speak disparagingly of the enterprises of the church, and, whether wise or unwise, none dared do the sort of condemning practiced by unregenerate and infidel lest he might rock the boat. Today there seem to be as many articles which carry severe criticism of the church, its work and institutions, as those which approve it. Thumbing through recent numbers of some leading religious periodicals, one is struck by the large number of captions such as these: "When

Will Christians Stop Fooling Themselves?," "Missions Has a Nervous Breakdown," "The Churches Fail the Nation," "What's Wrong With Our Colleges?," "The Sickness of Liberal Religion," "Listening for Religion's Last Gasp," "Are the Churches Insolvent?," "The Passing of Home Missions," "America's Bankrupt Churches," etc. So merciless are some of them that one could easily suppose them to be the raillery of a Menck-en or a Barnes.

The church does confront new situations which are disquieting but not impossible successfully to meet. It will do no good to close our eyes to them. Once our Pilgrim Fathers concealed the graves of their dead so that the Indians might not learn their losses; but now some of our states have erected highway markers where accidental deaths occurred, as a gruesome reminder of caution. Notwithstanding the comfort-giving gains reported in membership last year, the Institute of Social and Religious Research reports that there are 85,000 superfluous churches in this country.

Our whole system of benevolence and the manner of its use are under question. The niggardly may not be altogether reluctant to have it so. Ethical insight is always impaired by an attitude of excessive caution. Even if some former programs of missions are untenable, the need to fulfill the Great Commission and express in highest form our love for mankind and its welfare is still unavoidable.

After this deluge of criticism, let us who deal with deficits and problems tarry to hearten ourselves a little with the knowledge that our churches have come through the years of depression much more solvent than secular enterprises. Fraternal, patriotic, athletic, business and pleasure groups have shrunk about forty per cent in a time when the churches have made a net gain of approximately one and one quarter million members. While incomes were decreased 54 per cent, and expenditures for recreation decreased 72 per cent, church revenues were deflated but about 40 per cent.

Things That Are Insolvent.

The feeling is general that many of our social institutions are insolvent and unaware of it. We are fearing that men may not live at all unless they learn quickly to live as brothers.

We are trying hard to believe that the pain and dust-smother of the present social and industrial confusion is a process of reshaping and not one of wrecking, and that where social structures are collapsing, it is for the one reason of rebuilding with better adaption and greater permanency. To the best students of society some reorganization of human relationship seems imperative.

Almost never does a generation in the midst of transition recognize when a new order is at its beginning or what it is to be. A changed system is discerned only after it has been set up for some time. We may now have begun a new day which will never be otherwise than unsettled, changeful, and constantly running into new and unconventional forms. An established order of a kind that we have known in the past may never reappear. Development is never an accomplishment, it is always a process. We rebuild affairs in society as a hotel in Chicago was completely rebuilt recently—wrecking and rebuilding at the same time, but never stopping business for even a single day. Human affairs change more rapidly than the readjustments of the whole people toward them.

The delirious present cries out for more money, more credit, more employment, more food and better markets. Our morals are changing, or at least the conventions to which they are related have changed much. Many domestic ties are formed not "until death do us part," but as serial adventures. Our self-perpetuating bi-partisan political system of a century and a half seems to cause more ills than it cures, until one finds himself asking if American civilization can survive politics. Canon Donaldson of Westminster Abbey made the rather pessimistic declaration recently: "Our day is saturated with seven deadly sins: politics without principle; wealth without work; pleasure without conscience; knowledge without character; industry without morality; science without humanity; and worship without sacrifice."

The things by which a nation is exalted will never be secured until their need is discovered, confessed and the supply diligently sought and utilized. America is a venture in democracy, the specific breadth and kind of which is not duplicated elsewhere. The outcome is not yet absolutely guaranteed. The only completely successful democracy which our world will ever see will be one built upon a real brotherhood and it will be made a fact in operation because men are enthusiastic in heart to share in both its joys and its sacrifices. If this nation ever reaches that exaltation which comes through righteousness, her present system will have to be greatly depoliticalized. As now managed the future welfare of the party often supersedes the interest of the whole people. Rarely is there passed a piece of legislation where the ghost of party security does not stalk through it from the beginning to the end. By the estimate of Senator Harry F. Byrd, every six of our population carry on their backs somebody who lives on public money, acquired to a great extent through political manipulation. No need for the country is greater than an unselfish fraternity upon which to build a democracy righteous in purpose and practice.

Not only those things which enter into the civic building of the nation give it character, but the animus, attitudes, impulses, and purposes of its citizenry in private pursuits give national character to its population and institutions. There is everywhere great need for a revision of attitudes into mutual sympathy and cooperation in industry.

Many things contribute to a nation's life, not through definite planning, but by a process of unconscious absorption, yet they register indelibly in what that nation becomes. They are items for which too much solicitude cannot be indulged. As a city constantly analyzes and keeps pure the water supply which goes into the homes of its residents, and periodically flushes out its conveying mains, so, for the safety of its inhabitants, a nation must be relentless in its protection of the life elements, its pleasures and recreation, its histories and periodicals, its homes and institutions. Only by scrupulous care in these often unlisted ways can a serious pursuit of the highest in life, a generosity toward other nations and races, and the elimination of selfishness and hatred be achieved.

Clear the Way for Ideals.

High ideals do not have an open way to success in our America. Heavy commercialization is, in the very hours of this Council session, menacing the highest human and patriotic ideals. George Seldes, in his book, Iron, Blood, and Profits, reminds us that it is largely the profit motive which is responsible for war. Our marines, shot down in Haiti and Nicaragua, were killed by an enemy with guns made in New England. The Hotchkiss Company of Paris is delivering two hundred million francs' worth of machine guns into Japan. American planes have been sold to Japanese military forces and large quantities of American nitrates for making T. N. T. war supplies have been shipped to Japan. In 1915-16, ten thousand more Americans declared million-dollar incomes made from war trade.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The carpenters have begun work on the Sunday School rooms at Berea, Nansemond Church. The addition is 32 feet wide and 62 feet long and provides for seven Sunday School rooms. It is in the rear of the main auditorium. When completed it will be adequate for the needs of the School. About one hundred are enrolled in the Sunday School at the present time, and the attendance has been about 80 for several months this year.

We are determined to pay as we go in our building program. When we fail to collect sufficient funds to proceed with the work, the Committee is authorized to suspend work until funds are available. It requires a good deal of faith to make this venture, but faith is better than credit and sometimes finds the cash for the Lord's work. God can open the way for the church to carry forward the work of the kingdom, even in such a time as this. Men find a way to do other things for themselves, and it is possible for them to find a way to do their duty in providing for the religious education of our young people.

Methods of religious education are constantly changing. Separate class rooms are indispensable in every system of religious education. No substitute can be made for this type of equipment. Experts differ as to the organization of the Sunday School, but they all agree that every class should have a separate room for the recitation period. After much discussion the work at Berea is being pushed as rapidly as possible to completion. The young people are anxiously awaiting the day when they may have the privilege of using these rooms.

For the Pastor this is the realization of a long-cherished dream. Berea church has needed these rooms for many years. Financial conditions have not been favorable to the task. In spite of unfavorable conditions it is imperative that the young people shall have better equipment for their religious training. The importance of the task justifies this venture of faith. Young people are the hope of the future. They are more valuable than houses and lands and bank accounts.

Rev. and Mrs. R. E. Brittle have announced the birth of a son, Richie Parker Brittle, at Virginia Hospital, Suffolk, Virginia, June 30th, 1934. Mrs. Brittle has been seriously ill for the past week, but is improving at this time. This good pastor and wife have been untiring in their work in their field, which includes Cypress Chapel, Bethlehem and Union (Southampton) churches. They are greatly beloved for their faithful services in promoting the work of the kingdom.

The writer has been voted a vacation during the month of August to give an opportunity to attend the Bible Conference at Massanetta Springs, near Harrisonburg, Va., August 13-26th. For six years it has been a great privilege and blessing to attend this Bible Conference. Surely it would be helpful for every one of our busy pastors to have this opportunity for rest and inspirational fellowship. Churches could make it possible for their pastors to attend such a Conference. Ministers who have this privilege are enriched in body, mind and spirit. Several ministers of the Congregational and Christian fellowship attend each year. It is worthy of the time and money.

The Eastern Virginia Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches will meet in the First Christian Church, Richmond, Va., Tuesday, July 17th. The Committee on Education of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference will have a meeting at 2:00 P. M. during the intermission, and all persons having business with the Committee will please be present. Applications for membership in the Biblical Class or for loans to attend College should be made at this meeting.

WHAT NEXT FOR THE HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATE?

The topic for this article is a timely question for hundreds and thousands of young men and young women throughout this country. They have met the educational requirements of graded and high schools and are now ready for the next step. What shall this step be, and which way shall it lead? The high school graduates of this country range in age from fifteen to nineteen years. The majority are not sufficiently mature to grapple with business currents directed by shrewd and experienced minds. They are not prepared for office work, salesmanship, or professional duties. As they face the barriers that are inevitable, they are conscious of the need of a larger acquaintance of life and more thorough preparation for its responsibilities. In this dilemma, as the high school graduate thinks, the open doors of colleges and universities stare at him from attractive campuses. The courses are inviting; the advantages and associations are alluring. There is nothing else left for him than to enter, and, with but few exceptions, the high school graduate wants to pursue his educational opportunities through a recognized college curriculum; and he would but for certain facts that must be considered.

With the majority of high school graduates, in this section, at least, the question of finance looms large as an obstacle. The relentless powers of the so-called depression have dealt harshly with individual fortunes. Many parents who were able to pay college expenses for their children five to ten years ago are finding it difficult today to provide actual necessities for themselves. Yesterday I interviewed a number of high school graduates everyone of whom is anxious to enter college in September. At one home, I saw only the daughter, who was a prospective student for Elon. After waiting several minutes she appeared. In the course of the conversation, she remarked that "I presume that I will be unable to go, and you can see from my eyes how it has affected me." She had been crying. The wistful look of a youngster today and the tragic expression of disappointment that sweeps his countenance when he realizes that, for financial reasons, he must turn back from the open door of college life and attempt to spend his days without such advantages is both distressing and heartrending. Returning from a long day of many interviews, and listening to the stories of misfortune, you certainly long for some benefactor who will buy endowments or other means for the necessities of unfortunate young men and women.

There is another obstacle that looms largely in the mind of the average parent today who is interested in the church and things religious. Often you are questioned as to the effect of the teachings of your college on the simple faith of christian people. Anxious parents want their children to have college advantages, but they want them to be able to retain the faith and the religious convictions of the home of which they are a part,

Stories as to the infidelity of the college campus have gone far and near, the majority of which are ill-founded and untrue so far as the college is concerned. There are cases, however, that are true and should receive the condemnation deserved.

Our state schools are not permitted to give out sectarian religious teachings. While we accept gladly the separation of church and state in this country, we do not accept the separation of facts and spirituality. Every subject taught in the schools and universities of this country can be spiritualized, and should be. The present moral, political and financial collapse from which we are endeavoring to free ourselves, has been occasioned by bankruptcy of moral and spiritual values. Calvin Coolidge once said: "I can conceive of no adequate remedy for the evils which beset society, except through the influences of religion. There is no form of education which will not fail. There is no form of government which will not fail. There is no form of reward which will not fail. We do not need more national development; we need more spiritual development. We do not need more intellectual power, we need more spiritual power. We do not need more knowledge, we need more religion. We do not need more of the things that are seen; we need more of the things that are unseen." We have a right to expect that the instructions given by our schools and colleges today be spiritual, regardless of the subject with which these instructions may deal. After all, the worthwhile and enduring things of life are spiritual.

It is our purpose at Elon College to salvage out of the student's fund of information already acquired those things that are of value, and from these convictions that are his guide him in building a structure of information that shall be translated into character by which he shall be able to withstand the treacherous storms of doubt and of corruption. That is to say, it is our purpose, spiritually and religiously, to help our students find themselves religiously and then to guide them safely in their search for truth, the whole truth. There is an academic atmosphere on Elon College campus created by the intelligent presentation of the facts of life as related to history and science, character and conduct. From an intellectual standpoint, we seek to advance the student and make him thorough in his particular field. From a religious standpoint, we seek to prepare him to give a reason for the hope that is within him. There is something more to education than facts about what has happened or facts that may happen. This something more may consist in moral stamina and spiritual courage which we endeavor to impart.

Another obstacle that confronts the high school graduate, as he looks from the point at which he has arrived to an undetermined point in the future, is of what advantage will a college education be to him. Is it worth the expense of time, effort, and money? Will I be in a position to better provide for myself with a college diploma than I am at present? In short, what assurance do I have, after spending four years in college and from $2,000 to $10,000, that I will have a job more advantageous than one that I am likely to get now? These are questions laid at the door of every college administration. Of course, there are no definite answers. No one knows. But this much we do know, that there will be jobs, positions, and occasions demanding trained minds and stalwart characters. We know, further, that the individual who is not prepared will find himself descending in the scale of opportunities rather than ascending. After all, it is a question of ambition on the part of the individual and his willingness to pay the price for the realization of his ambition.

I am happy to report that the prospects for a much larger student body for Elon College for 1934-35 are most encouraging. I am again appealing to members of the church, alumni, and friends of the college to join with us in soliciting, encouraging, and making it possible for the high school graduates whom we know to enter Elon College September 4, 1934.

L. E. SMITH.

REVIVAL AT ELK SPUR.

A ten-day meeting just closed here this week, and while I was not able to be in the meeting, I know it was good. It may seem that I don't know about it since I was not there, but I am like a man I heard of once. He had sent his daughter away off to a big college, and when she finished school she wrote her father that she was to be married before coming home. A neighbor said to the father that he wanted to offer his sympathy because he must be worried about his daughter getting married to some stranger. The father said he was not the least bit worried.

"Not worried," said the neighbor, when you don't even know this man."

The father answered, "you see, I know my daughter."

So I say we had a good meeting because I know the preachers who had charge of our meeting.

Brother Blackmon from near Henderson, N. C., whose wife is our Mrs. Grissom's sister, preached for us. And you don't know just how kind it was of them to come at this time. The hills are "hard hit" by the depression, and no money not even to pay the expenses can be raised here now.

The preachers bore all expenses even to their meals. Only a meal or two was served them outside of the Grissom home here.

I want to say that our Grissoms are doing more for less money here than any workers ever have. When folks do well I love to tell them so, and I think I should be granted that privilege since I have nothing more to offer.

However, it was a great inspiration to shake hands with a man like Rev. Blackmon and his family are just as fine as he. It is a great help to our hills to have fine, well-trained children come among us. And the Blackmons have two, a son of twelve years and a daughter younger. They were so nice in the meeting I heard many remarks about them. You see, it sets an example that is much needed here. Every mountain mother and father wants their children to be like that when they see youth as youth should be.

Brother Blackmon helped the Grissoms hold a Bible School while here and the children here learned to love him. The light of his smile will linger long among our hills. His life sheds its fragrance wherever he goes, they tell me, as does a sweet scented tube rose. The atmosphere is changed to christian when Blackmon comes into the room. God grant there are more like him to come among the hills.

I have just had to put up the thought fight of my life just to live. Have had a new dose of tuberculosis of a little different nature, and it seems good to be able to eat once more. I needed, and greatly appreciated, the inspiration I received from the Blackmons. God always sends me some one who can help when I need it. And as Dr. Atkinson always says, I find the "pastures are green" where I have been made to lie down.

Our hills are now a glory of green and blossom.

The Blue Ridge Breeze is playing,

And the Rhododendron swaying,

To the tune of Home, Sweet Home.

I want to thank my unknown friend for the letter to me in THE SUN. I was very sick when I read it and it helped to drive the clouds away. I thank God today for friends, life and love.

A Sunday School class from dear old Mt. Carmel Church in Eastern Va., kindly remembered me lately with a nice lot of things I can embroider. They wrote that I could do what I liked with them when I finished them—sell them or put them in my hope chest. I wrote back and told them I would put them in my hope chest by all means. I have known many a mountain girl to get married with less linen to put in her chest than they sent me. Why sure I'll put them in my hope chest and please don't think that I won't ever use them. These lofty peaks are quite romantic when the wild rose drops her soft petals by the silent old trail that winds its way to my Blue Ridge Mountain Home.

VICTORIA OF THE HILLS.

WHEN THE DEED OPENED MINDS.

The well-to-do Kung family, with old Confucian pride and culture, had for years turned a stony face on the "foreign" church and Christianity. What mattered it if some distant members of the clan were Christians? Then a young Kung attended a conference in a village nearby and applied for membership in the church. "No Christian has ever visited our village," he said to Dr. George D. Wilder, "please come." So through wind and rain with borrowed umbrellas went Dr. Wilder and found that the family had "opened their minds." They now realized that Christianity is seeking only the good of China. They asked for Miss Carolyn D. Sewall and a Bible woman. They hope to establish a church in their village. And what had changed this opposition? The friendly, kindly refuge given the women, girls and old men of the Kung family at the time of military invasion in Tientsin by the Tientsin church and Christians.

A PRAYER.

God Lord, who alone orderest all things well, I cast myself wholly upon Thine infinite mercy; I trust Thee with my all, myself, and all whom I love, and all which I desire; my present and my future, my hopes and my fears, my time and my eternity, my joys and my sorrows. Deal with me as Thou wilt, and knowest best, only bind me safe to Thine everlasting love.—Amen.

WEAVING WOMANHOOD.

(A sketch of one of our missionaries by Miss Cushing, News Editor.)

One of the most interesting pieces of work for women in all India is being carried on in the Lucy Perry Noble Institute for Women known to the Indians as "Rachanyapuram," located in Madura, South India, at the head of which is Miss Gertrude E. Chandler, a member of the famous Chandler missionary family.

This fine piece of service was founded by Miss Eva May Swift in 1892. It includes a Christian Woman's Association similar to the Y. W. C. A.; a Woman's Exchange which serves as the focal point for Christian Indian women who are willing to do volunteer social service work, and a hostel which accommodates the Christian women teachers and nurses in the mission government schools, hospitals and dispensaries.

There is a model store, a model bank and a model home in the institute where the pupils learn by practical ways the value of saving, how to trade, and how to care for the home. Besides farming the women of the institute earn money by doing needle work, weaving, lace making and basketry. A story, indicative of the temper and spirit of the founder of the Lucy Perry Noble Institute, is told concerning its gain field. Government engineers surveyed it and pronounced it sterile, whereupon Miss Swift led her Indian women associates and Indian pupils in a planting campaign with the result that they harvested 10,000 bushels of grain. Miss Chandler who has been at the head of this splendid work since 1929, is upholding the traditions and high standards of the school and is facing more recently the additional burden of reduced income.

"The girls of the school are divided into 'families,' each bearing the name of a flower," Miss Chandler comments. There is a Mother's Memorial Nursing Home which cares for the sick and gives training in hygiene and home nursing. "The kindergarten and primary end of things is called the Truman Post School and the children who gather there are just as appealing as any other group of children I have had elsewhere. In the evenings the same building is used for a night school and I have had much fun recently helping some big awkward farm boys with their arithmetic."

During the past year Miss Chandler has had to face trying situations when many poor women and girls had to be told that the school could not open its doors to them because of lack of funds. When the Indian staff was told of the drastic cuts, they appeared at the first teachers' meeting with a statement pledging monthly subscriptions to an extra emergency fund amounting to $80. "Little it may seem in terms of American money," points out Miss Chandler, "but it costs much to families whose income is but $20 a month. Many call 'Rachanyapuram' the Place of Salvation.

Miss Chandler was born in Massachusetts but spent most of her first ten years of life in Madura, India. She was educated in the public schools of Wellesley, followed by a kindergarten course in Boston. Her first work in India was at St. Christopher's College, Madras, and later on the staff of the Capron Hall School for girls in Madura.

Fatherhood! Father and child have kindred life, the same nature. The Father bestows life, the child possesses it and uses it to do the will of the Father.—Maclaren.

SUCCESSFUL YEAR.

The Holy Neck Missionary society had a very successful year in every way under the leadership of their president Mrs. N. M. Langston. At the beginning of the year they decided not to talk money raising in their meetings but use their time in the study of Missions and Missionaries. Mrs. N. G. Newman, Spiritual Life Superintendent has had charge of the devotionals at each meeting and Mrs. Langston plans the program. After the call to order and the opening song and prayer, the regular business session is held at which time the Executive Committee brings its plans for money raising and the society endorses the work if they approve.

Then the meeting is turned over to the program committee and the Spiritual Life Superintendent who have worked their programs together. They feel they have accomplished much more Spiritually and just as much financially by using this plan. They have had splendid devotionals and programs and they give credit to the use of the Program material in the envelopes that were furnished each society at our Conference last Fall.

The Red Letter Day for spiritual feasting and social enjoyment was the World Day of Prayer in February, which was observed jointly with the Holland Christian Society. The World Day program was divided into two parts, the first being used as the morning devotionals, followed by the teaching of three chapters of the Mission study book by various members of the two societies.

After the adjournment at noon the crowd enjoyed a delicious covered dish luncheon, each lady having brought one dish and the Holland society furnishing the coffee. Expenses were equally divided and everyone pronounced it a great day.

At 2 P. M. the societies convened again and the remaining part of the World Day program was used as devotionals and the last three chapters were taught. Mrs. J. E. Cartwright, former Literature Superintendent of the Woman's Conference was present and introduced the book and taught the first chapter in her usual charming way.

BIRTHDAY ANNIVERSARY.

June 21 in the Dendron Christian Church the Woman's Missionary Society observed its 18th birthday anniversary. The following program was rendered:

Song—"Jesus Shall Reign."

Prayer—Mrs. W. D. Harward.

Devotional—led by Mrs. J. R. Bishop, using Gen. 12:1-12 and reading "What is Missions," discussed under topics as follows: (1) The early church and missions; (2) The Holy Spirit and missions; (3) Jesus Christ and missions; (4) Prayer and missions; (5) Ourselves and missions; closing with prayer and song "I gave My Life for Thee."

History of Society—Mrs. E. T. Atkinson (some of the facts brought out were that there were 12 charter members; the largest enrollment at any time 35; 16 members on roll at present with only 11 active members; have raised $1,648.00; with the exception of once have sent full quota to Conference each year; in 1932 met all requirements on standard of excellence and was placed on honor roll; have taken Life Memberships for two members, Mrs. W. D. Harward and Mrs. L. T. Williams; sent boxes of clothing to Porto Rico, toys to Arizona for Indians, clothing to Fancy Gap and baskets of fruit locally; entertained District Rally twice; donated money to help purchase car for the Barretts in Porto Rico; observed Public Thanksgiving Programs, week of prayer and for past three years the World's Day of Prayer; since 1927 the Spiritual Life Department has been a very vital part of the society.)

Solo—"The World Is Dying For a Little Bit of Love," Miss Frances Cotten

"Why Contribute to Missions," Mrs. B. J. Ingram, using the following points: (1) For ourselves, as members of Christ's church; (2) For people of mission lands; (3) For God.

Solo—"Why Should He Love Me So," Mrs. J. R. Bishop.

Prayer—Dr. W. D. Harward.

At the conclusion of the program the audience retired to a classroom of the church to enjoy a social hour, where refreshments were served.

At the door between the church and the classrooms was an imitation birthday cake lighted with 18 candles in the center of which a silver offering for missions was placed.

The society is indebted to Miss Ruby Atkinson for the box.

Mrs. W. S. Barrett is the efficient president of this wide awake society and Mrs. B. J. Ingram is secretary.

NOTICE.

TO THE MISSIONARY SOCIETIES OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION:

I am making this appeal to all of you in Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, and Alabama. Please write up an article about your work and accomplishments of the year and send it to me so that I may have it put in THE CHRISTIAN SUN. You don't know how much your plan of work may help some society that is hungering for a method of procedure and then too, you are helping to create a permanent department. It seems a shame that we do not have some news items each week. Count up the various things you have done this year and you'll be surprised that you have really done so much. Awaiting a response to this in the form of several good items for next week's issue.

I am sincerely,

MRS. W. M. JAY, Con. Ed.

Holland, Va.

RIGHTEOUSNESS THAT EXALTS.

Thousands of German soldiers were killed during the World War from hand grenades equipped with Krupp fuses in the hand of the enemy. Every President from Wilson to Roosevelt has favored embargoes on arms to other countries, but such resolutions have been defeated in Congress.
