And the Richmond News-Leader fears that the "reckless driver today is serving as effectively to strengthen the demand for a return to prohibition," as did the town drunkard in the old days before "the noble experiment." It warns Virginians who do not wish to see this come to pass, to take heed from the week-end slaughter on the highways. It continues: "Not all drunken drivers dash along at seventy miles an hour, and by no means all reckless drivers are drunk. If, however, we are to have eighteen persons killed weekly on the highways of Virginia—more than 900 a year—we may as well expect the average silent voter to say, 'This wild driving increased when prohibition was repealed; we cannot have safe roads until we stop the sale of liquor.' This argument may not be hole-proof, but it will be hard to combat." The editorial concludes that "liquor and speed do not go together." Two alternatives are offered us, then. First, stop the sale of liquor—at least stop the state from selling it! Second, put governors on motor cars that will prohibit excessive speeds, and jail those individuals who drive cars without such governors. "Such a proposal will meet with angry opposition, but unless this or something no less drastic is done, you are perfectly safe in writing down that the American public will demand that the public sale of liquor be stopped. Rarely are alternatives so clear: The choice lies plainly between reduced speed and restored prohibition." And incidentally newspapers will lose much liquor advertising if the latter is alternative is chosen. One cannot understand how a newspaper can editorially condemn the results of liquor drinking and yet hold open its advertising columns for the express purpose of enlarging the clientele of the liquor interests. It is a terrible responsibility which they take upon themselves, and one which is likely to eventually cost them dearly. We suggest that it is not a choice between two alternatives that is necessary in this instance, but the elimination of two evils which are twin demons of death.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Rev. W. J. Andes, now a student in the School of Religion at Duke University, Durham, N. C., has accepted the pastorate of Pope's Chapel Church for the coming year. Brother Andes reports: "My work is going fine here."

One of the happy visitors at the Woman's Conference at Southern Pines was Deacon A. H. McIver of our Sanford Church, who carried his pastor along to see that his church should get the full benefit of the inspiration of the Conference. Bro. McIver is one of our very loyal and interested laymen who enters heartily into every moment of the church that makes for progress and righteousness.

A very welcome visitor to Elon the past week was Rev. Jesse H. Dollar, until recently the pastor of our United Church, La Grange, Ga., he, having by invitation been with our United Church (Raleigh), Sunday, October 13th. Brother Dollar is one of our very popular, progressive and beloved pastors, and happy will that congregation be who secures his services.

Rev. John G. Truitt, D. D., working with the pastor, Dr. J. H. Lightbourne, met favorable response from our Burlington Church congregation and people, large and increasing audiences greeting him during the evangelistic services which came to a conclusion, Sunday P. M., October 20th. On the last day of the meeting more than twenty united with the church.

Rev. J. E. Neese, pastor, received four members into his Haw River Church last Sunday—two by letter, two on confession of faith. Pastor Neese reports a very happy and progressive year at Haw River and looks upon his service there the coming year with high hopes for continued progress and growth. It was the Mission Secretary's privilege to be with Pastor Neese last Sunday and officiate for him at his baptismal service. The service was a real joy and inspiration.

Rev. G. D. Hunt closed his pastorate with our Lanett, Ala., Church with the recent session of the Annual Conference and is now located at Roanoke, Ala., where he is to give his full time the coming year to our two Roanoke Churches—First Church and Lowell Church. "We had a good Conference," writes Brother Hunt, "but it does not seem right not to see any of you North Carolina and Virginia brethren with us any longer." Brother Hunt feels ready and in good health and happy for the year's work which has now so auspiciously opened to him.

Rev. G. C. Crutchfield, pastor, has been called to give full-time service the coming year to Bethlehem and Berea Churches, Alamance County, N. C. These churches the past year have made real progress under Brother Crutchfield's devoted and enthusiastic leadership. Both churches have had many additions to their membership during the year—the best year that Berea has enjoyed for progress and additions in its history. Both of these churches will report to Conference with budgets more than met for the year for all apportionments and benevolences. These churches are working harmoniously and certainly constitute a field that will engage a pastor's full time, energy and strength.

The figures recently issued from the registrar's office of Elon College are quite interesting and worth considering by CHRISTIAN SUN readers. Quoting a recent special to the Greensboro Daily News, these facts are found showing the cosmopolitan spirit of our College and its appeal to various church and non-church affiliations: "Though Elon College is a church school, supported largely throughout the years by the Christian church, there are, at the present enrollment, 17 church denominations represented in the student body. With the student body reaching an all-time enrollment record of 461 students for the fall term of the 1935 session, a recent survey revealed that only about one-fourth of the total number now at Elon are members of the Christian church, the remainder of the student body being listed under 16 other different denominations. The Methodist church leads the group in representatives at Elon. The Congregational-Christian denomination ranks second in the list, these two dominating all others. The list includes the following: Methodist, 117; Congregational-Christian, 103; Baptist, 69; Presbyterian, 34; Catholics, 26; Methodist Protestant, 20; Lutheran, 14; Hebrew, 7; Episcopalian, 5; Quaker, 3; Reformed, 3; Advent Christian, 2; Pentecostal Holiness, 2; Disciples of Christ, 2; Church of the Nazarene, 1; Church affiliation not specified, 19; members of no church, 34. Total, 461."

General News

of the

CONGREGATIONAL AND CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

By HERBERT D. RUGG.

FOR CHRISTIAN MINISTERIAL RELIEF.

A gift of $8,000.00 was accepted on behalf of the Board of Ministerial Relief of the Congregational and Christian Churches by its administrative committee at its meeting in New York, Tuesday, October 22nd, from the New York Eastern Christian Conference. The income of the gift is to be used under designated conditions; first, for the benefit of needy ministers or their widows or orphans who were members of the New York Eastern Conference on June, 1931; secondly, for similar benefit of ministers of the Christian Church as a whole.

Implicit in a third clause is the prophetic wish of George N. Whittlesey of Brooklyn, N. Y., attorney and a member of the administrative committee, that the Congregational and Christian union may be joined eventually by other denominations. Instead of providing, thirdly, for the possible use of the income of the fund for Congregational ministers, the third clause says for the benefit of ministers "of other churches affiliated, merged or consolidated with such Christian Church."

Dr. Lewis T. Reed, general secretary of the Board, expressed the hope that funds will be raised so that the time may soon come when the work of ministerial relief can be carried on without distinction as to whether a minister, widow or orphan is from the Congregational or Christian group.

PENSIONERS DECEASED AND NEW.

Since the last meeting of the administrative committee of the Board of Ministerial Relief on May 28th, fourteen deaths have taken place among the ministers who were on its pension rolls and three deaths among the widows, releasing grants amounting annually to $4,143. The pensioners of the Board at the beginning of the year were 777 of whom twenty-four received grants on behalf of the Christian Church. The total of those who received regular or emergency grants last year was 1,008, the first time that the number in one year exceeded a thousand.

twenty-five new pensioners were added to the rolls at Tuesday's meeting, the grants voted amounting annually to $4,190. Seventeen were ministers and eight were widows. Need and years of service in the active ministry were both taken into account.

One of the ministers had served fifty-two years, another forty-seven years, another forty-five years and another forty-one years. Two of the ministers were women; one had been married, one single. One of the ministers with the longest period of service was a Sioux Indian.

The husband of one widow had served forty-six years. Another widow was Slovak and her husband had been a home missionary thirty-six years. Another was a widow with two little girls whose husband had served but three years and two months.

Residences were in twelve different states. By regions the geographical distribution was: New England, 6; Middle Atlantic, 4; Southeast, 1; Mid-West, 10; Pacific Slope, 4.

THREE DAYS OF GREAT AFFAIRS.

The vitality of the Congregational-Christian missionary movement was strongly apparent in the joint sessions of the National Boards and the New England Regional Meeting held in Providence, R. I., over the week-end. It was the first great Congregational or Christian gathering to be held in the historic Baptist state of Rhode Island; it was the first meeting of the National Boards in New England since 1926; and since the New England Regional Meeting is biennial, it had not met since 1933. The program was greeted with an eagerness of attention.

Dr. Oscar E. Maurer of Center Church, New Haven, Conn., presented the tentative report of the strategy committee to the directors of the National Boards and the recommendations, including that for an executive vice-president of the Boards, met in general with approval.

Laymen in a session presided over by Donald A. Adams, of New Haven, Conn., chairman of the National Laymen's Advisory Committee, were urged by a number of speakers from the floor to form committees on men's work in each church, each association and every Conference in order to place the organized support of men behind the churches.

The new manual for Women's Work in the churches, prepared by a committee of state women presidents, was presented at a women's session by Mrs. Mary D. White of New York, N. Y., associate secretary of the National Boards. "Every woman in every church in one united woman's organization" is the slogan in the new code for Congregational and Christian church women.

Farewell wishes to the Rev. Judson L. Cross, New England Regional Secretary since 1927, who leaves to become president of Tougaloo College, Mississippi, were voiced at the fellowship banquet Saturday evening in the Biltmore Hotel.

The principal address at the banquet was given by Dr. Fred Field Goodsell, Executive Vice-President of the American Board, recently returned from a seven month's tour of missions in Asia and Africa. He flew from England to India and from South Africa to Egypt.

The churches in the countries visited, he said, are earnestly trying to assume greater responsibility for the evangelization of their own countries. In substance the churches of Japan, China, India and Africa are saying to the American Board: "We see more clearly than ever before the meaning and value of the Christian gospel for our people. We also prize more than ever the fellowship of the churches of the west. There is still a great deal for your representatives to do. May your churches be encouraged to carry on further their world-wide program by our acknowledgement that we are primarily responsible for the evangelization of our own nations and for participation as we are able in the world movement of the Christian gospel."

Out of this growing sense of responsibility, Dr. Goodsell said, a new thrust of world Christianity was assured. It will have four characteristics: First, it will be an ecumenical or universal Christianity. Secondly, it will be a fellowship actuated by a practical sense of human relationships. Thirdly, it will have a missionary out-reach in which the younger churches will be creative in spirit rather than imitative. Fourthly, it will be a genuinely spiritual Christianity in which the missionary activities will be 'philanthropy plus.'

FLORIDA EARLIER LEARNED IT.

The Rev. Stanley C. Harrell of Main Street Church, Durham, N. C., Moderator of the Southern Convention of the Congregational-Christian Churches and Assistant Moderator of the General Council, brought greetings from the Southeast. He was introduced by Dr. Edwin C. Gillette, Superintendent of the Florida Conference and Superintendent of the Extension Boards for the Southeast District.

"The connotations of our vocabulary have been increased by union," Dr. Harrell said. "Formerly Gillette meant to me only a close shave. Now it signifies all that is fine in fellowship."

HOME MISSIONS STILL NEEDED.

Home missionary messages of workers were given by Miss Marguerite Davison of Thorsby, Ala., Rev. Allan T. Jones of Waycross, Ga., President Buell G. Gallagher of Talladega, College, Ala.; Superintendent Chas. H. Burdick of the Montana Conference, Billings, Mont.; Rev. J. C. Blackman of Cheyenne, Wyo., and Mrs. Samuel W. Keck of Huron, S. Dak.

Mrs. Keck, wife of the superintendent of the South Dakota Conference, has in large measure been filling the places of two pastors-at-large whom the Conference formerly had. She edits the Conference monthly paper, "The Pilgrim Herald," visits churches, speaks at women's meetings and preaches.

Concerning the Sioux Indians who with the other inhabitants of South Dakota have endured years of devasting droughts, dust-blizzards and grasshopper plagues, she said:

"There are almost no wells on the Indian reservations. Many of our pastors' wives carry water two or three miles for cooking and drinking.

"Many a boy by the time he is twenty has never had a full bath for many are fifteen miles from a well. There is never money for soap.

"The ministers' homes lack the crudest comforts. I have in my hand-bag an appeal for a stove, a decent bed and chairs for parsonage homes.

"No pastor to the Sioux gets as a salary more than $40.00 a month, most much less.

"The traditions of Indian hospitality makes the minister divide his last potato or piece of bread with his relatives and tribe. And out to the 42nd connection they know when his pay day arrives."

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.

5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE NORTH CAROLINA WOMAN'S CONFERENCE.

The women of North Carolina have not done as our general conferences did, viz.: divide, like ancient Gaul, into three. The women have one Conference, and that is a Conference. How we Congregational-Christians in North Carolina do need to come together in Conference and have a real Conference. The women have shown us how. Their annual meeting was at Southern Pines, N. C., last Thursday, and the women were there. So were the pastors—those who are interested. So were other visitors. It was a great day and a happy gathering of good folks bent on the business of the day. They did business for Jesus Christ and the Kingdom. They were all of one mind in one place; they were in the spirit of reverence and worship, and the Lord was there. It was something of a Pentecost—that sort of Pentecost that always comes when a people are gathered, being of one mind and one accord, with the two-fold purpose of exalting the name of Jesus Christ, and of tarrying together in prayer and meditation till each and all realizes the presence of the Holy Spirit. The women were happy. All who gathered there were happy, because they were seeking to know the mind and the will of the Prince of Peace. They had a great theme:—"World Missions and peace"; and that theme worked its way into the minds and hearts of the people there. We heard Dean Russell say most emphatically that the spirit of Missions and the Prince of Peace went along together and Missions could make no headway save as the Prince of Peace led the way and was present. Christian Missions have not increased the number of adherents and followers in Japan for the last ten years, for the simple reason that the Japanese have learned that the so-called Christian nations of the world are the warring nations of the world, and that the World War was fought by Christian nations, who, flying at the throat of each other and trying by death, murder, bloodshed and destruction to destroy each other, drew the other nations into the cess-pool and holocaust.

The women in the North Carolina Missionary Conference are trying to exalt the Prince of Peace and do away with war, and every dollar for Missions counts in this direction, if not counteracted by the militarists, the nationalists and the imperialists. The hatred and the hell of war have done more to cripple Christian Missions and to stay the work of the missionary than all the atheists and non-believers, and so-called pagans, in all the earth. If we believe in the Prince of Peace and the gospel which He preached, then our nation and the Christian nations must practice it and Christian peoples must stay out of war.

The devotional services of the Southern Pines meeting opened with a Scripture reading by Mrs. W. H. Elder on "The Prince of Peace," and from that opening till the close the thought of the Prince of Peace was in the minds of the Conference. The various districts—seven in number—answered either through the superintendent in person or by letter: Halifax by Mrs. C. E. Newmen; Guilford, Mrs. J. R. Foster; Alamance, Mrs. C. C. Fonville; Randolph, Mrs. Hugh R. York; Lee-Chatham, Mrs. R. L. Ross; Durham-Wake, Mrs. J. L. Harward; Vance-Warren, Miss Margaret Alston. The reports from these districts told of the successful district meetings last Spring and, in a general way, of the missionary work through the Societies and churches during the year.

The address of welcome, by Miss Nellie S. Fisher, of the local church, was very cordial, and the response by Mrs. O. H. Paris, of the Greensboro Church, was equally as happy and appropriate. Quite a long list, and, in fact, most of the active pastors of the Conference were recognized, and one outside of the Conference, Dr. John G. Truitt, Suffolk. Mrs. B. M. Newman, in giving her report on "Cradle Roll," urged the Societies to see to it that a Cradle Roll be established and conducted in every Society.

In the absence of Mrs. W. H. Carroll, who is quite ill at her home in Burlington, Mrs. W. R. Sellars made the report for the Spiritual Life Department, noting and recommending that the book for this department the coming year is "The Holy Spirit in the Holy Scriptures," by Margaret T. Russell and William C. Robinson, D. D., which book can be had at 25c the copy from the Committee on Wowan's Work, Henry Grady Building, Atlanta, Ga. Mrs. Sellars emphasized the need of prayer in all their meetings, since the missionary movement had its origin in prayer and is sustained by prayer.

Mrs. W. T. Scott reported for the Literature Department and had on display the Study Books for the year, confining her recommendations especially to four books, two Foreign, viz: "That Other America," by John A. Mackay, and "Latin Tmerican Backgrounds," by Hulbert, and as the Study Book for Home Missions, "Toward A Christian America," by Morse. Any and all of these books may be had from the Commission on Missions, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York—paper, 60c; cloth binding, $1.00

Mrs. L. E. Smith reported she had been unable to secure a speaker for the Day of Mission Study at a date to be fixed this winter, but hoped to announce the date and speaker later.

Miss Margaret Alston reported one life membership secured during the year and emphasized the value and merit of these memberships.

One of the outstanding features of the day was the treasurer's report by Mrs. C. H. Stephenson. This is one officer who works at her job the year through and the audience can usually discern and almost hear the the sigh of relief and gratitude when her official report of the year is adopted, especially if it is a great one, as this report was this time. The goal for the year for all Societies was $3,500.00. Mrs. Stephenson reported she had received $3,697.37. Her face reflected her joy at being able to report to the Conference that they had gone over the top, even if there were some eleven or twelve Societies that had not reported a dollar. And this amount had been contributed by the 49 Societies, in that many churches, out of a total of 121 churches in the Conference. If the 72 churches not having Societies, or reporting nothing to the Conference had made contributions in proportion to membership as the 49 societies organized did report, her report would have showed $3,133.20 more, or a total of $6,830.57. This could be easily and gladly done if there were Societies in all the churches, since no Society had been unduly urged or impoverished, but all had been blessed and benefitted through the offerings that they did make.

Mrs. L. E. Smith recommended that the apportionment for next year be increased to at least $4,000.00, thus climbing back to something of pre-depression days when the apportionment was $4,500.00 to $5,000.00.

A luncheon hour was enjoyed in the spacious dining-room of this magnificent and beautiful Temple of worship—our "Church of Wide Fellowship."

The feature of the afternoon was the great address by Dean Elbert Russell of Duke University, as he revealed to his audience something of the cost and horror of war and the impossibility of building the kingdom of righteousness on the earth while the spirit of war and hatred obtains in the minds of men.

The remainder of the afternoon was given to reports of committees and miscellaneous business. The great Conference adjourned at 4:30 P. M.

Mrs. Stanley C. Harrell, president of the Conference, who had worked so incessantly to make the Conference a success, presided with great grace and graciousness and kept the meeting in a spirit of harmony and delightful fellowship through the entire session.

The officers of the past year were re-elected for the coming year, Mrs. W. R. Sellars' name being substituted for that of Mrs. W. H. Carroll in the Department of Spiritual Life.

The appropriate memorial service was conducted by Miss Margaret Alston.

The Conference adjourned to meet next year with our Durham Church, the date to be the same as the present year—Thursday before the third Sunday in October.

Dr. Rexford Raymond, pastor of the entertaining church, and his good people certainly added to the comfort and the success of the day.

"THE RACE TO DEATH."

It seems useless to call attention to the ever-increasing slaughter of individuals, small and great, on our highways. The number mounts higher and higher with each month, week and day. We used to read with horror that 20,000 persons die in India yearly from snake bite. We now behold, with complacency or indifference, that 36,000 persons were killed on the highways of the United States last year, and that this year promises to far exceed the number of last year. If we had a war in which 36,000 soldiers were killed and four times that number crippled, we might do something about it. But with these accidents, we are opening wide the gates for their increase. We were told, till many actually believed it, that by legalizing liquor and opening liquor stores, temperance would obtain and sobriety would increase. The simple fact is that, wherever legalized liquor stores have been opened, automobile accidents and fatalities immediately show an increase from 50 to 300 per cent, and that drunken drivers multiply in numbers and in recklessness. We were led into this largely by newspaper propaganda which many did not take into account was being paid for by brewers and liquor dealers. Hundreds, not to say thousands, in and about Norfolk and Richmond, Va., followed the teaching and fed their minds on the propaganda offered them by their daily papers, which papers, of course, had in view the pay they were to get if they could prevail upon the people to open liquor stores. Now these good folks may note something like this: In one Norfolk paper that plead so vigorously for temperance and sobriety, through its appeal for controlled liquor stores—just one of these papers —carried on September 26th, 348 inches of liquor advertising, and on the same day one Richmond paper equally as ardent in its pleas for liquor, "for sobriety and temperance" through liquor control, carried 422 inches of liquor advertising. Verily, these advocates of liquor control are getting their fat checks now while their fellow-human beings are being slaughtered on the highways in increasing numbers every week because of so-called liquor control. The same is true of papers in Eastern Carolina where some slip-shod legislation allowed liquor stores "under control" to open and where, since their opening, the towns and counties in which they are located have shown an increase in fatalities and accidents by automobiles that is appalling.

It is most difficule to avoid accidents on the highways even when sober persons are at the wheel, but with intoxicated drivers the matter is impossible.

Not all of the accidents, of course, can be attributed to drunkenness and drunken drivers. We are living in an age when hurry and haste are the very bane of our existence. Our bodies go so fast that our souls cannot catch up. Even the African in the jungles, after a day or two of haste on a march or through physical exertion, stops awhile that his soul may catch up with his body. We of America may learn a lesson of helpfulness even from "the uncivilized." Life is sacred, and we have no right to hazard our own life or the lives of others by unnecessary haste and nervous excitement. Again and again we should bring to our minds and hearts the injunction so often found in our sacred Scriptures: "Wait, again, I say unto you—Wait thou upon Jehovah, and He will renew thy strength."

Writing under the caption that we have chosen for these lines, The Commonwealth, a Catholic weekly, sagely and sanely remarks: "One has no right to go up and down a street firing a .44 hilariously. There are innumerable restrictions in the fine art of keeping vicious dogs. In a million different ways law as well as ethics imposes a cautious regard for the rights of others. Why then should it not be emphasized that sin—grave sin—is committed by those who drive a car recklessly, or even while under the influence of liquor? The time has come to soft-pedal in moral discussions the venerable old instance of what is allowed the lady whose honor is in danger, and substitute plain speaking on how Christian principles apply to modern travel. It is our experience that many who jeopardize the lives of others by burning their tires at seventy miles an hour do not as much suspect that the Fifth Commandment has any bearing on them."

EXPANDING HORIZONS.

The Commission on Missions has issued a four-page folder, whose foreword is, "Let Us Enlarge Our Hearts by Learning to Understand the People of Other Lands and Races." This is certainly an exhortation, which, if obeyed, will count much in making a friendly world. We would care more for other people if we knew more about them and their ways. The folder referred to has as its title, "Expanding Horizons," and the claim is made, and justly, that our horizons in life are expanded through intelligent reading. On this account, the Commission is recommending certain books for our Women's Societies, for our missionary groups and for our homes as well; to all, in fact, who have a desire to enlarge their devotion and interest by learning of other people. We quote:

"Discovering how other people look at life is always an exhilarating experience.

"If peace is to prevail and we are to live in a world where Christian progress is possible there must be a better understanding between the nations and races which inhabit this earth.

"Especially do the members of our churches need to visualize both the manner of life and the inner aspirations of those with whom we have fellowship through our missions at home and abroad.

"In cooperation with seventeen other denominations we share in the publication each year of a number of books and other materials for all ages, dealing with the application of the Christian spirit to human needs in America and throughout the world. These books are written against a broad background.

"In addition to their attractive appearance and interesting style these books are edited with such care as to guarantee the authoritativeness of every statement.

"They are intended for both individual reading and group study. Leader's Helps are available for use with many of them.

"These volumes are a valuable addition to the book-shelf of any church, while their inter-denominational basis makes them suitable for purchase by public libraries. Why not see that they are made available to your community?"

The following are highly recommended, and the Mission Secretary highly approves of each of these volumes, not only for Mission Study Books, but for individuals everywhere who are seeking to know more of other peoples:

"That Other America," by John A. Mackay.

"Latin American Backgrounds," by Winifred Hulbert.

"Lupita," a novel of Mexico, by Alberto Rembao.

"Toward a Christian America," an exposition of Home Missions by Hermann N. Morse.

"Christian Youth in Action," by F. W. Herriott.

"The Flying Boat," a story of the Southwest, by Robert N. McLean.

"Women Under the Southern Cross," by Margaret R. Miller. (paper, fifty cents).

The above may be had, with the exception of the last named at 60c in paper covers or $1.00 in cloth binding.

Also there are class-leaders' guides which are very valuable and may be had at 25c each:

"Understanding Latin America," by Arthur M. Sherman.

"How Fares the Church in America," by Kenneth D. Miller.

"The Quest for God and Gold," by Winifred Hulbert.

"Mexican Journeys," by Alfred D. Heininger.

"What Will You Do About It?" by F. W. Herriott and Sue weddell. (for each class member).

These books are published in behalf of Congregational and Christian Churches by Commission on Missions, and may be had by orders addressed directly to Commission on Missions, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York. We sincerely trust that many SUN readers will avail themselves of this invaluable reading.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Beautiful autumn days are here! October is the transition month, in Virginia, for field and forest and glen. The nights are cooler, the days are shorter and the sun is more considerate with its sunshine and heat. The frost has touched the grass and robbed it of its freshness and verdure. The leaves of the trees have lost their summer shades and are being enfolded in the cold embrace of death. From the earth they came and back to the earth they must return.

This season of the year changes the order of living in the home. A fire is built in the furnace or the stove is brought into the sitting room to add warmth and comfort. What a blessed experience to sit before an open fire-place in the country, and watch the fire burn again on the hearth. That fire would have been unbearable in July; it would have added to human discomfort and suffering. Then the mountains, or the seashore, or some shady nook in the great out-of-doors, made an appeal and brought comfort. But these cool, refreshing places of July make a different appeal in October, when the frost is on the grass, and nature is preparing for the long winter.

When autumn comes and the nights are cool, let the family sit in comfort around a little fire. How cheerful, how delightful its warmth and its changing glow. God has wonderfully provided variety for a changing life and experience. Life is not static and nature is not stationary. Life would be dull and drab if it were all babyhood and youth. God has given ample time for that important period, and supplied every physical, mental and spiritual taste and desire with adequate means of satisfaction and expression. And nature would lose much of its charm if springtime and seedtime did not give way for autumn and harvest. Every period of life has its importance and every season of the year has its corresponding glory.

Merchants are filling their stores with goods suitable for the season just ahead; farmers are gathering the harvest. The hay is in the stack; the corn will soon be in the barn; the cotton field, now white, will yield their snowy lintage to the gin and mill; the peanuts and potatoes will be garnered for future use. Yes, autumn is here, and the world is trying to adjust itself to this change of the seasons. Spring is not ashamed of autumn, and summer is on good terms with winter. Nature is doing her part harmoniously and man should do likewise. Nature has been working all the year, looking towards October for a period of rest and recuperation.

Man is not as wise as nature and God. There is a springtime—the babyhood and youth period—in human life. This is the time of seed sowing and growth—and the impartation of great ideals and adventure. But autumn days will come to these happy and carefree boys and girls. The frost will touch their golden locks, time will write lines in their faces and toil will bend their body under the weight of care. Mother and father will sit before a little fire, and think of the children who have gone out to homes of their own making. They will draw nearer to each other, and live over the past in memory, with a fellowship and a heritage rich in experience and prospect. Wrinkled brows, care-worn faces, dimmed eyes and unsteady hands—all tell of autumn in life. If the seed-sowing of youth is bringing in a harvest of virtue and integrity and love—God has a warm fire—in the open grate—glowing with peace and kindness and something out of the unseen, more precious than rubies and more to be desired than fine gold, awaiting in the autumn time—to give hope for the days to come. For the child of God, autumn is a waiting-time for God to come and say: "My child, come and go home with Me."

INGRAM CHURCH SETS A HIGH MARK.

Sunday, October 13th, was a great day in the life and activities of Ingram Christian Church located at Ingram, Virginia. It was home-coming for the congregation and the formal opening of their new and improved house of worship. For years the congregation had worshipped in a one-room building which served as auditorium for worship and place for Sunday school instruction for all ages. Ingram is a progressing community and the church there is composed of loyal and progressive people. All through the years their leaders have had visions of an adequate place for worship and sufficient facilities for the carrying on of a modern Sunday school.

Ingram Church has been faithful to the denomination, usually meeting all financial and other requirements. The church has always responded to the various calls of the denomination—missionary, orphanage, college. It deserved to be prospered and to have the joy of an inspiring building in which to worship and teach.

The Building Committee did a good job. The general outlines of the original auditorium were not changed. The altar and choir loft were greatly improved. Gothic windows were installed. The aisles and altar were covered with a beautiful carpet. The furnishings themselves are conducive to worship. The new addition consists of a number of class rooms, assembly rooms, pastor's study, etc. On the first floor are a kitchen and banquet hall. An air-conditioned heat plant is installed so that the temperature will remain the same throughout winter and summer. It is the first church that I have known to be furnished with air-conditioned heat plant. The Building Committee, the Finance Committee and the entire membership of Ingram Church deserves hearty congratulations for this magnificent achievement.

Doctor S. T. Kent, the veteran member of the church, was most happy. He rejoiced that he had lived to see the day when his congregation has adequate facilities in which to worship and carry on its Sunday school work. Every member of Ingram seemed to be happy and rejoicing. In Ingram congregation there is a very quiet unassuming man, faithful and loyal as anyone could well be. He seems to prefer to be in the background but in reality he and his good wife are a great force in the church and community. Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Carlton have made telling contributions to the entire community in which they live and particularly to their church. I said to them, "I wish you would come to the college and spend the week-end with us sometime." Their reply was, "We are able to get away at times during the week but we cannot be away on Sunday. We must be at church." This is the kind of spirit and loyalty on the part of the leaders of the church that make for its strength and influence. We need a deeper love for the things of the spirit and of the kingdom on the part of the members themselves. Not until we love the church as we ought will we sacrifice for its interests as we should. Not until we give Christ the first place in our hearts will we have first claim on Him in the hour of our needs. It is not necessary to have a beautiful place in which to worship before we worship, but when we love as we ought and worship as we should we may expect a beautiful place in which to worship. Since the day of the tabernacle and the structure of the altar overlaid with gold and precious metal have the servants planned and provided beautiful surroundings in which to pay their vows unto the Lord and sing their songs of praise. God has given His best for us and if we are His, we will not withhold our best from Him.

I trust that many of our congregations may be inspired by the Ingram Church in improving their places of worship that Christian people may be attracted to the altar of consecration and non-Christian people from the things of the world to the things of Christ. Christ said, "And I, if I be lifted up will draw all men unto me." May God continue to bless the membership and congregation of the Ingram Church.

PEOPLE'S CHURCH.

(From Dover Index.)

Happy and enthusiastic congregations were present at both services Sunday, there being a good attendance in spite of the continuous rain. The auditorium was beautifully decorated with a profusion of flowers. Both services were in honor of the Fifteenth Anniversary of the beginning of Dr. Helfenstein's pastorate with People's Church. Dr. Charles R. Brown, Dean Emeritus of Yale University Divinity School was the speaker of the day.

At the morning service, Dr. Brown preached a most scholarly and inspiring sermon on the subject, "Facing Present Difficulties." He prefaced his message with a tribute to the pastor, Dr. R. C. Helfenstein, and an appreciation of their long friendship, also paying a beautiful tribute to the People's Church for the commendable service it has rendered the community and the Kingdom of God down through the years. Mr. H. C. Taylor, chairman of the anniversary program committee was on the rostrum with the pastor and Dr. Brown at the morning service and assisted in the devotional program preceding the anniversary sermon. Beautiful programs were prepared for the occasion by the Simmons' Printing Co. of Dover.

The special music rendered by the choir at both services was of an unusually high order, Dr. Brown making special reference to the inspiration the anthems contributed to the services of the day.

The evening service was in charge of the Saint Paul's Brotherhood of People's Church, Mayor J. Wallace Woodford, president of the Brotherhood, presiding. In his talk, Mr. Woodford very impressively portrayed in most beautiful language the picture of progress People's Church has made during the fifteen years of Dr. Helfenstein's pastorate, and in behalf of the Saint Paul's Brotherhood paid a glowing tribute to the pastor. In introducing the speaker of the evening Mr. Woodford stated that the congregation was deeply grateful for the privilege of having Dean Brown as the guest speaker on this occasion because of his warm friendship for People's Church and its pastor, and because of his having preached Dr. Helfenstein's installation sermon fifteen years ago and his tenth anniversary sermon five years ago.

Dr. Brown's address at the evening service was indeed a masterpiece both in subject matter and in presentation, his topic being, "The Greatest Man of the Ninteenth Century." Dr Brown has given this address more than a thousand times in churches, colleges and universities in forty-three different states of the Union and in Canada, England and Scotland. In book form this address has a wide circulation throughout the English-speaking world.

The anniversary sermon at the morning service and the Brotherhood address at the evening service were declared by many present to be the greatest they had ever heard. Dr. Brown was at his best. The spirit of the services, together with the messages and the music made the day one long to be remembered by all attending.

The following appreciations from the secretary of the Board of Trustees, Mr. J. B. Hutton, and the pastor appeared on the second page of the beautiful anniversary program:

"The Significance of this Day.

"Fifteen years have come and gone since the commencement of the pastoral relations of Dr. Roy C. Helfenstein with People's Church.

"They have been momentus years in the history of our church—fifteen years of high endeavor, fifteen years of notable accomplishment! The church has gone forward with the onward march of Christianity in its campaign for 'Peace on earth and godwill toward men.'

"On this Anniversary Day, People's Church extends its heartiest congratulations and best wishes to Dr. Helfenstein and his family.

John B. Hutton, Secy. Board of Trustees."

Greetings From Our Pastor.

"To the Members of People's Church:

We sincerely thank God for all He has done for People's Church and through People's Church in these fifteen years of happy cooperation as pastor and people.

Your high ideals in Christian living and Christian service, your open-mindedness, your breadth of Christian fellowship, your never-failing cooperation, your many expressions of appreciation and your zeal for the days ahead have been and are a constant inspiration to me. Fifteen years! What memories they have given us.

Mrs. Helfenstein and our children join me in wishing God's richest blessings for each of you.

Faithfully your pastor,

ROY CLIFTON HELFENSTEIN.

Monday evening a reception was given Dr. Helfenstein and family in the Fellowship Hall of the church in honor of the Fifteenth Anniversary and in appreciation of the pastor's safe return from Europe as a member of the International Goodwill Pilgrimage, the reception being sponsored by the Lend-A-Hand Society, one of the most active organizations in the church.

Next Sunday morning the pastor's subject will be: "Is the Future a Sealed Book?" His evening subject will be: "Overcoming Handicaps."

A beautiful candle light installation service of the new officers in the Young People's Society will take place during the preliminary part of the evening program.

Tribute Paid By A Layman to His Pastor on Anniversary Day.

(N. B.—The following tribute was paid to Dr. Roy C. Helfenstein on the celebration of the Fifteenth Anniversary of the beginning of his pastorate with People's Church of Dover, Del., the first Sunday in October, by Mayor J. Wallace Woodford, President of The Saint Paul's Brotherhood of the church. Dean Charles R. Brown of Yale Divinity School was the Guest Speaker of the day, Mayor Woodford presiding at the evening service.)

"This is a very significant day in the history of People's Church. We are commemorating the Fifteenth Anniversary of the beginning of Dr. Helfenstein's pastorate with People's Church. While fifteen years is but a flash in the night in the march of time, to our finite minds it represents a considerable period. These years have been characterized by a spiritual awakening of many people, and crowded with solid achievement. God has glorified, men and women have been helped, and the entire community has felt the ennobling influence of Christian ministry.

"Looking back over the years, I am inclined to think that when Dr. Helfenstein arrived upon the scene of action the prospect that met his eyes was not very encouraging or heartening. It is true that some years before seeds had been zealously planted by men and women animated with intense loyalty and devotion. Circumstances, however, had caused these seeds to become dormant. There was needed the fructifying influence of inspired leadership to bring the harvest to fullest fruition. Such leadership was supplied by our pastor. He furnished the leaven that stirred the entire congregation to renewed spiritual activity. Our horizons widened and our faith was quickened. We caught a true vision of the place People's Church could and was to occupy in the life of Dover and the State. Soon after his arrival, Dr. Helfenstein presented to us a beautiful word picture of a new church building with ample facilities for carrying on the work of religious education—a work very dear to his heart. Under his aggressive leadership and with the support and cooperation of determined men and women, the picture ceased to be a still one, and was galvanized into a moving picture and became a reality.

"We are justly proud of our new church building, but the progress of the church is not measured alone by material possessions. Its true value to God and the community depends upon the quality and quantity of spiritual forces which its ministry engenders and which is manifested in the lives of its members, and also in the influences flowing from it into the life of the community. Judged by this standard, People's Church is as a beacon light set upon a hill, shining with the pure light of faith and inviting all who love God, and are unchurched, to worship here and to share in the service of love and helpfulness.

" It is unnecessary to recount the record of the years past—"By their fruits ye shall know them." When Dean Brown preached Dr. Helfenstein's

DR. WHITE IN JAPAN.

Kyoto, Japan, Sept. 13, 1935.

Editor of The Christian Sun and Friends:

Three weeks ago we landed in Japan and it is about time I was writing you some of the impressions we have been collecting here. It will have to be "impressions" for I must reserve the right to a different view of some things upon longer acquaintance and deeper reflection. My first impression is that, no matter how much one may have read about a country and even know about it abstractly, when one sees it directly and lives in the midst of its life the concrete reality gives new and in some cases different meaning to the abstract ideas. I could hardly say that any of my ideas of Japan have suffered radical change, but they have vastly more content and color.

First, let me give just a sketch of where we have been and what we have seen. Rev. Clark P. Garman met us at Yokohama and after we had passed the customs inspection (which was very slight and courteous since we had no tobacco, playing cards or copies of "Vanity Fair") we went by taxi to his home in Tokyo with all our baggage including our steamer trunk. There is no open country between Yokohama and Tokyo. Main streets are wide and there are street cars, trucks, all sorts of horse-drawn and even ox-drawn vehicles with the driver walking beside his animal, and bicycles. The bicycles serve as means of transportation. Thousands of them just carry the rider, but many are used with trailers which grow to proportions that dwarf the bicycle itself. The bicycle, in other words, is not just a "pleasure vehicle." They are quite creap. A word must be said about the taxis. Most of the autos in Japan are taxis and they are usually of fairly recent models, Chevrolets, Fords, and Plymouth predominating. The taxi driver is the most skillful technician I have met. He makes fast time through streets crowded with all the vehicular traffic that I have indicated, plus a pedestrian population that still feels that it has the right of way to wander at will. Only the main streets have sidewalks; most of them are too narrow for a sidewalk. But the taxi weaves its way through traffic frequently stopping short on the verge of tragedy but never delayed in its predestined course. It must be predestined and that by a god of traffic whose providence faileth not, for in three weeks with innumerable chances to crush, maim and kill various men, women and children, we have not yet seen anyone even scratched!

Well, to return, we have a day in Tokyo the most interesting part of which was a stroll on the Ginza, Tokyo's most famous street, after supper. Along the wide sidewalk for several blocks an unbroken line of booths was set up facing inward. They were electric-lighted and there was everything for sale: live eels and fish, fountain pens, jewelry, canes, phonographs (one was playing "Arkansas Traveler" and another "The Merry Wilow Waltz"), clothing, pictures, curios, religious objects, etc., etc. Some of them had spielers and all were attended by salesmen or saleswomen who caught any evidence of interest in the passerby and tried to get a customer. We then went to a movie and saw Harold Lloyd doing his stunts in New York with all characters speaking Japanese, even the colored porter! Then came our first night on a Japanese "Pullman." We went to Sendai on the night train. There we began to be instructed in the fact that the Japanese is not sensitive to the matter of dressing and undressing as is the American. People did not trouble to draw the curtains of their berths before undressing. Yesterday, on the way from Tokyo to Kyoto in a day coach we saw a woman stand on the seat and change her clothes from the skin out above the waist. But all this will soon cease to be noticed so I mention it now before it has become a matter of course. On the whole the Japanese seem to be not only a very courteous but a very modest people, even though their standards are different from ours at certain points.

I'll have to return again and say that we had a day at Takayama which is a summer place on the coast and while there went to Matsushima in a small motor boat. Matsyshima bay has scores of islands nearly all of which are crowned with low pine trees and many of which are eroded to make natural bridges and caves. We visited the Buddhist temple at the town on Matsushima, the first of many temples which we have seen and will see. The next day we went on to the island of Hokkaido which is north of the Main Island. A heavy storm had washed out some of the track and we had to stay in Sendai Saturday night. That was an adventure; we stayed in a Japanese hotel and with the aid of a little booklet we had bought in Tokyo, "Japanese at a Glance" and interpretation by telephone by a Japanese Methodist pastor whom we had never seen we got what we wanted and had a pleasant night and a good breakfast. Frank Cary met us at Otaru and he and his mother kept us busy for a week seeing rural Japan. Hokkaido is a newly settled part of the empire; it was only about sixty years ago that Japanese really went there in large numbers and that was to forestall settlement by Russia. It is the home of the few remaining Ainus, the aborigines of Japan. We saw some of them and Mrs. White went to an Ainu home. Their houses are thatched as indeed are many if not most of the farm houses in Japan generally. The Ainus men have long beards and the women have a black moustache tattooed on them. I stayed with Frank Cary in country hotels where no concessions were made to the foreigner. We had the famous hot bath. After a day of bus and train travel, or as on one day six miles of walking, the immersion in a hot bath is a great blessing. One washes with soap first, of course, and gets into the bath clean. We sat on cushions on the matted floor and ate with chop sticks off the low trays. I got in the habit of slipping my shoes off at the door and leaving slippers outside the room. We visited small churches and I talked through Mr. Cary to them. At the end of our tour we went to the Josankei hot springs for a conference with the seven pastors of that island. Mr. Cary interpreted. I asked the men questions and they answered, asking a question themselves once in a while. The two main questions I asked them are, in substance:

1. In what ways is a Japanese Buddhist who becomes a Christian a better man?

2. Does the church of Japan want the Church of the West to continue sending missionaries, and if so, what shall they do?

Now it is impossible to give a full account of the answers to these questions and the discussion which developed out of them. This is just the beginning of an inquiry which has already yielded enough material for a book. But I will make some general comments. First, these Christian pastors showed themselves exceedingly intelligent about both Buddhism and Christianity. They know the popular practice of Buddhism of course, a thing that is quite different from the philosophical doctrines of the intellectual; but they also know the history and philosophy of Buddhism and the basic ideas of the various sects. They were positive in their Christian faith and conviction but not dogmatic, and they had ready appreciation for the genuine values in Buddhism and the fine achievements of modern reform movements. But they were sure that Buddhism lacks the moral and religious power of Christianity. They had abundance of evidence for that position and when I asked if Buddhism might not develop sufficient spiritual, moral and social power to meet the needs of Japan they seemed to have no hope that it might do so. The next day, in Sapporo, I talked informally with a half dozen laymen, members of the Sapporo Kumiai church. Several were professors in the Imperial University of that city. They showed a remarkable insight into the central teachings of Christianity and its essential service to Japan. I could only wish that Congregational churches in America had lay leaders with as clear a grasp of the meaning and aims of Christianity in the modern world. And it was not the lesser things of the law with which they were concerned; they saw the significance of the high conception of God, of the moral dynamic and of the international outlook of Christianity. For a people well accustomed to suffering they see the moral power of vicarious suffering, but there was no cheap talk of "the old rugged cross." These ideas are clear to the ministerial and lay leaders of our churches in Japan, but of course there are many whose Christianity is much more superficial and less intelligent. Being a pastor here is no sinecure, not so much because there is opposition from a non-Christian society although there is some of that in some ways, but because most of the people in Japan, as well as elsewhere, are not saints and are preoccupied with many interests which leave little time for religion. We may well ask, "What will Christianity do to the Japanese?" as I have been doing, but we must also realize that there is another question to be asked regarding the Japanese people and individual, viz., "What will the Japanese do with Christianity?" When we do that we find that the essential problem of the Christian pastor in Japan is the same as that of the pastor in America.

In answer to my second question about the missionaries all were agreed that for a long time to come Japan will need strong moral and financial support from the churches of the west. This takes full account of the fact that there is an ably led Christian church in Japan and that Japanese are both as good Christians and as intelligent leaders as the missionaries we could send from the west. But they are a mighty small part of the population, they have no Christian tradition to support their present efforts, and they have a social and evangelistic task that would overwhelm a Christian church made up of Kagawas. Especially are these Christian leaders concerned about the international character of Christianity. Dr. Kagawa told me the other day that the first need of the people of Japan is the international mind; that is what evangelism means to him; then the social mind. Japan, as you know, is now in the grip of an intense nationalism. I must not go into that now, but far more serious than any question of the character of Buddhism is the burning issue of the old Shinto revived and made the national cult above all religions.

But I must draw this letter to a close. We go to China via Korea and Manchukuo, starting on September 24th, then return to Kyoto for the sixtieth anniversary of the Doshia October 29th. We will then go on to Shanghai by boat and continue on our original plan for Foochow. I shall write again, I hope before we leave Japan. Many things I have not even mentioned that would take pages to discuss. I heard Kagawa speak in Tokyo and went out to his home and the one acre demonstration farm he conducts. You will see him in America in December. I sat in his little farm house home and ate cakes and watermelon and drank tea. I called on Baron Sakatani in his home and talked for an hour with him—also drank tea. I had an interview with the director of the Bureau of Religions and he gave me a beautiful book (illustrated) on the Art of Japan as well as other literature. I met with an inter-religious group, with a missionary group, with a Kumiai pastors' group. We have had a full day at Nikko and Lake Chuzenji the beauty of both being indescribable. Now we are beginning to get acquainted with Kyoto, Kobe, Osaka. Here are Nara. Mount Hiei-san and Horyuii, the Doshisha. Kobe College, Professor Suzuki who has a greater knowledge of Buddhism than anyone else. the Imperial Palace where the emperors are enthroned. and temples, shrines innumerable. But we are going to do a minimum of sight-seeing, at least I am. and spend my time with the people who have the most to tell. We are delightfully situated in the home of Dr. and Mrs. Cobb right near the Doshisha and across the street from the palace grounds.

Our last day in Tokyo we visited two Buddhist social settlements. They are using the best modern methods and have quite extensive programs. I asked the priest at one of them if their religious program was anything like the Christian and he promptly answered that they had copied the methods of the Christian Sunday School. It is quite generally agreed that the Buddhist interest in social work was stimulated by the Christian example. The same is true of religious education. Probably the best thing that has happened to Buddhism is the presence and initiative of Christianity in such things as well as in the emphasis of Christian teaching upon the higher ethical elements of religion.

But I must close and hope to get off another letter on Japan before we leave or, possibly on the way to China.

Very sincerely yours,
H. V. White.

ALABAMA WOMAN'S MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

The Women's Missionary Conference of the Alabama Churches met in annual session on October 12th at Antioch Christian Church. Items on the morning program were the reports from officers, the president's message and a sermon by the pastor of the entertaining church, Rev. A. R. Van Cleave.

After the dinner hour the Antioch young people presented a play. A splendid address was given by Miss Eunice Turnham of Lanett, Ala., who used the subject, "Woman's Place in the Kingdom."

Rev. G. H. Veazey spoke on the topic: "Our Greatest Need of Today." The treasurer's report showed that a total of $190.81 had been raised during the year. The Conference voted to meet with the Langdale Church next year.

New officers for the year are: Miss Vera Van Cleave, president; Mrs. Otis Chase, vice-president; Mrs. Mervin Harper, secretary; Mrs. V. E. Kitchins, treasurer.

Mrs. A. R. Van Cleave,
Conference Editor.

ALABAMA NEWS ITEMS.

The Women's Missionary Society of the Wadley Church held twelve monthly meetings during the year. The mission study books on Japan were used for program material. Several miscellaneous programs were used during the summer months. One of our members read letters from her sister, a missionary to Japan, at one of our meetings. Already we are using the new study books about Latin America. Our society cooperated with the other churches of our town in observing the World Day of Prayer at which a special offering was received and sent in for purposes outlined in the program.

The Wadley Society voted to ask the Sunday School of our church to become a World Fellowship School. We hope to make the monthly programs an attractive feature of the Sunday School work.

The Society sponsored the sending of a box of clothing to the Elon Orphanage. The Aid department of the society plans to use its funds to improve the parsonage which the church bought recently. We are glad that we can report our financial goal was reached, even though it is a small one.

The Wadley District and the Roanoke District of our Women's Conference held district meetings on the secand and third Sundays, respectively, of April. Both meetings were well-attended and helpful programs were presented. The new president for the Wadley District is Mrs. Ross Ensminger and for the Roanoke District the president is Mrs. Arvin Harmon.

A Story for the Children

PETER'S WINTER VISITOR.

The north wind whistled "Whrrrr," through the bare branches of the old apple tree. The dark snow clouds driven down by the north wind came lower and lower. The sun had long before hidden his face behind them. One by one the tiny white snowflakes began to fall. As they reached the earth the fierce north wind whirled them into huge drifts and plastered them against the trunk of the old apple tree until the side facing the wind was as white as could be.

All afternoon Peter had stood with his nose glued against the window panes, listening to the creak of the old apple tree as its branches swayed back and forth in the wind and watching the snowflakes as they whirled around. If Peter hadn't been getting over an attack of the mumps he would have been out playing with the wind and the snow. The deeper the drifts grew, the more he longed to get out and jump in them.

As he turned from the window to try to find something to make him forget how very interesting it was out of doors, he though he heard a rat-a-tat-tat. The sound was so very much like the hammering of one of his woodpecker friends that he stopped to listen. At first he thought that the whistling of the wind must have deceived him. Surely Red Head, Flicker, Downy, or Hairy wouldn't be out in a storm like this.

Again rat-a-tat-tat came clearly through the rush of the wind. Again Peter glued his nose against the pane, strained his eyes through the whirling snow, and listened. He saw no sign of a bird, but again he heard that familiar rat-a-tat-tat.

"Oh, there he is!" Peter suddenly exclaimed. On the trunk of the old apple tree, away from the wind, clung Downy. His black-and-white feathers were all fluffed out, and his scarlet cap looked redder than ever. The snowflakes flew about him, and the wind swished by, but there he stayed, tapping the bark with his bill.

"Poor little Downy! He must live here all the winter. I didn't know that before. How cold he must be today! And how does he find enough to eat?" Peter began to shiver and to feel hungry at the very thought of his little friend out there in the storm.

"I don't suppose he would come in if I invited him," thought Peter.

As he watched, Downy continued to peck his supper out of the bark of the tree. All at once there was a flash of black and white, and Downy almost brushed against Peter's window. Off he flew.

"I guess he's going home," mused Peter. "This storm must have caught him off on a visit somewhere. He surely would have too much sense to venture out in it, otherwise. I wonder if he'll come back here again. I must ask father to hang a piece of suet out on the old apple tree. Then if he calls again there will be a real dinner waiting for him. He certainly is a brave little fellow."—By Lucy Chandler Fuller in The Sunbeam.

BETTERING YOUR BEST.

"Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect; but I follow after."—Phil. 3:12.

He started at the bottom. He did his best on every job assigned to him. And always, when the next job was assigned he said, "I am going to do this a little better than I did the last job." He is now president of the factory.

His first poem went into the editor's waste basket. "I'll write the next one better," he said. The editor is glad to get his poems now. And he is still saying, "I'll write the next one better."

"I can't do it any better," he said to the boss; "if you want this job done any better, you will have to find somebody else to do it." And the boss found somebody else. And in a score of places since, the boss has had to find somebody who could do the job better. The man who never thinks he can do any better is always passing on to make room for somebody else.

From best to better. That is the road all successful men travel. In all trades and professions, and in all lines of business, the men who get ahead are the men who continuously strive to better their best.

The same rule applies to moral and spiritual life. "Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect: but I follow after." That was Paul. Never did he feel that he had attained his best in spiritual development, but he was always following after something better. Nor did he ever feel that he had done his best service. "I am ready to preach the gospel to you that are in Rome," he writes in his advanced age, still looking forward to a greater and better ministry.

"I follow after," is a motto that should be adopted by every one who aspires to higher attainments and greater achievements. Never feel that you have reached your best. However good your best may be, there is always the possibility of bettering your best. Let this be your constant aim, and you will be perpetually a surprise to yourself and your friends.

COMPENSATION.

I'd like to think when life is done that I had filled a needed post,
And here and there I'd paid my fare with more than idle talk and boasts;
That I had taken gifts divine, the breath of life and manhood fine,
And tried to use them now and then in service to my fellow men.
I'd hate to think when life is through, that I had lived my round of years,
A useless kind that leaves behind no record in this vale of tears;
That I had wasted all my days by treading only selfish ways,
And that this world would be the same if it had not known my name.
I'd like to think that here and there, when I am gone, there shall remain
A happier spot that might have not existed had I toiled for gain;
That someone's cheery voice and smile shall prove that I have been worthwhile,
That I had paid with something fine, my debt to God for life divine.

As the marsh-hen secretly builds on the watery
sod,
Behold I will build me a nest on the greatness of God:
I will fly in the greatness of God as the marsh flies
In the freedom that fills all space 'twixt the marsh and the skies:
By so many roots as the marsh-grass sends in the sod
I will heartily lay me a-hold on the greatness of God:
Oh, like to the greatness of God is the greatness within
The range of the marshes, the liberal marshes of

"The beauty of a candle touches me,
It is so softly gay
So steadfast, and so careless of itself,
Giving itself away."

Before Christ was in the world there was darkness. Into this darkened world Jesus came, bringing the warm glow of His divine personality and saying, "I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." Just as the life of Jesus sheds oven men the soft. warm rays of a clear, pure radiance, so I light this pure white taper, symbolic of His life.

While we are here in the quiet of this room with only the light symbolic of the Master to guide us, I am going to ask each one to stand and tell "What Christ Means to Me." At the conclusion of your testimony please take a seat in the inner-circle."

Solo: "Jesus Is All the World to Me." (Have some consecrated person with a clear, sweet voice to sing this.)
Circle Prayer—Have all stand, join hands, and each pray a sentence prayer.
Close with prayer by the pastor and the Mizpah Benediction.
(Have the pianist play softly "My Jesus, I Love Thee" as the congregation leaves, so that they may carry the spirit of the meeting away with them.)

Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

BELSHAZZAR'S FEAST.

(International Temperance Sunday.)

Lesson IV—October 27, 1935.

Golden Text: "Wine is a mocker, strong drink a brawler; And whosoever erreth thereby is not wise."—Proverbs 20:1.

Lesson: Daniel 5:1-31.

A Temperance Sunday School Lesson is still in order. When we repealed the Eighteenth Amendment we did not repeal the liquor problem. It is still with us, and it is increasingly becoming a greater menace. Whatever others may have thought about decreasing the use of liquor by repealing the Eighteenth Amendment, the distillers and the brewers were not fooled. They knew that to make liquor legal again would result in constantly increasing the amount of liquor that would be consumed. They knew the habit-forming power of the stuff they made, and they knew the powerful influence of modern high-power advertising. Let no man be fooled in this matter—the use of liquor will continue to increase rather than decrease if we leave the matter to politicians and profit-seeking brewers and distillers. If ever the traffic is to be outlawed again—and it will eventually be outlawed again for the moral forces of the universe are ultimately arrayed against it—it will take a great and long-term campaign of temperance education to do it. Those of us who believe in temperance have lost a skirmish, perhaps a battle, but we have not lost the campaign. Let us thank God and take courage.

A Wild Party.

The king was making "whoopee." He was flinging a wild party, and he was not doing it in any half-hearted way. Like many a modern host or hostess he thought that any party would be dull without liquor. Wine and women—how often through the centuries have they been the curse of many. Liquor, ladies (?), and lust—a triple entente that spells ruin to men and nations. Today as then, nothing is so tame as sin. It is so tame that men and women are constantly seeking new thrills. It does not, it cannot satisfy. And the more one gives himself to it, the harder it is to get satisfaction in it.

Wanton Sacrilege.

There is that about strong drink, even a little of it, that dulls the reason, and deadens the finer sensibilities. Men do things when under its influence that they would never think of doing when sober. This old king, under the influence of the wine that he drank, had his servants bring forth the vessels that had been taken out of the Temple at Jerusalem, and then he and his drunken, debauched crowd drank more wine from them. The thing seems impossible to us. One would think that even a drunken man would shrink from such impiety and sacrilege. Let every sensible man know that strong drink, whether legal or illegal dulls the finer sensibilities of life, and deadens the spiritual nature.

Written Warning.

God is fair. He does not allow any man to go to his doom without warning. But He cannot allow insults to His name and nature to go unnoticed. In the hour of the king's high elation, when he was jesting about the God of the Hebrews, and lauding the gods of gold and silver, a hand appeared over against him and wrote a cryptic message on the wall. Its suddenness and its secrecy sobered the king. He felt that it was notice of an impending doom. He who had a few minutes before been so arrogant and self-sufficient now became humble and afraid. Thus do men who though outwardly boastful and apparently unafraid, become afraid when they come face to face with the moral judgments of God. It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God. God has given to us in His written word warning of the ultimate end of the wicked, and the ultimate wages of sin. Let every man take heed unto himself.

A Wise Woman.

The queen was not at the wild party. But when she heard the confusion she came in to learn what had happened. When the wise men and the astrologers of the Chaldeans were unable to decipher the message, she suggested that the prophet of the God of the Hebrews might be able to shed some light upon the matter. Wise woman that she was she knew that the true prophet of God sometimes knows more than the so-called learned men of the nation. The secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him. Thank God for the women who have that spiritual intuition to help in times of trouble.

A Courageous Man.

Daniel was summoned to appear before the king, who promised to give him riches and honor if he would interpret the writing on the wall. The old king, like many a modern man, thought that money could buy anything, that for money he could get that which he wanted. But this man Daniel was not dominated by the love of lucre. The determining principle of his life was not gold but God. He frankly told the king that he was not interested in either the money or the honor, but that he would be glad to interpret the writing. Then, as now, there were those who are governed by high ideals and unselfish purposes.

It took courage to say what Daniel said to the king. It would have been so easy, and so much safer, to have spoken in "soft words" and to have toned down the message. But this man Daniel feared God and hence he did not fear the king.

An Unlearned Lesson.

Daniel reminded the king of some things that he should have known. He told of his father's greatness and success, and of the consequent pride of his heart. He reminded the king of what had happened to his father. And then striking straight from the shoulder he said, "And thou, his son, O Belshazzar, hast not humbled thy heart, though thou knowest all this." In defense of the king of that far-off day be it said that he is not the only one who has forgotten the lessons of the past. And this applies not only to the matter of drink, but to matters that concern all of us. Whatsoever things were written aforetime says Paul, were written for our instruction. But individuals and nations seem to give little or no heed to the lessons from the past. For instance within only twenty years since we had a world war and its tragic aftermath, the nations of the world seem headed toward another one. And in the face of the dark story of the liquor traffic of the past we have given it respectability again.

A Divine Judgment.

Numbered, weighed, divided—it was a message of doom. And that doom fell quickly. Indeed that very night the Medes and Persians took the city and slaughtered the king and his drunken associates. God is not vindictive. He takes no delight in the death of the wicked. But what men and nations sow, they reap. Those who play fast and loose with life's highest sanctities, those who ignore spiritual laws, those who flaunt divine commandments and disregard righteousness, sooner or later must face the issues of the higher moral order, and pay the penalty for their sins. Let man or nation be sure that sin will find them out.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street Richmond, Virginia

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy

Unto Thee do I lift up mine eyes, O Thou that sittest in the heavens Behold, as the eyes of servants look unto the hand of their master, so our eyes look unto Jehovah, our God.

MONDAY.

"THE WAY TO CHRISTIANITY'S REWARD."

"Let this mind be in you which was in Christ Jesus."—Phil. 2:5.

"Who hath known the mind of the Lord."—Rom. 11:34.

Christianity does not come through faith in material things. It comes by a faith in invisible things. Because one cannot realize the reward of Christian living as an immediate thing and get an immediate thrill out of it, he turns to that which is immediate. Therefore it is not Christian. Neither is Christianity based upon mere regard for beautiful things of beautiful feelings. Christianity is something that bears fruit in beautiful feelings. We are all too anxious to be conscious of beautiful feelings. They comfort us and lead us to think that we are in the right way; but feelings are misleading. They come and go, rise and fall like the thermometer which depends upon condition of the weather. A torpid liver may so affect one's feelings that he is thrown out of kelter with all the world.

The way and only certain path to the higher perfection is doing the right thing as God gives us to know the right and not as we feel. And the only assurance of knowing the right is to have the mind of Christ. The mind of Christ comes to all who cultivate it.

Prayer—Dear Lord and Father, we pray not for ourselves but for a mind like our Saviour's, at least for a willingness to be like Him, and for the endowment of spirit that seeks to make our minds like His, every day.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"THE MIND OF THE LORD."

"Who hath known the mind of the Lord."—Rom. 11:34.

God has given us a mind from His own mind whereby, like Him, we distinguish between good and evil, the lawful and the unlawful. This mind is the center of control which directs life every day, according to its thinking. It is that part of man which, when regenerated and renewed in Christ, is endued with the spirit and acquires experimental knowledge of God's will, of divine things and the divinity in things, and is conscious that it is Christ that reveals the good, the high and the holy.

This experience is a part of what Jesus referred to when He told Nicodemus that "Ye must be born again." The natural carnal mind cannot divine these things of itself. But when it is taught by the spirit, the mysteries of the will and purpose of God stand revealed and we know Him and His salvation.

Prayer—Our Father, we pray for soundness of mind, the rightness of heart, for holiness of designs and intentions, for thoughts and imaginations, and for that dedication of will, that brings us in view and at the feet of Jesus, to be taught of Him day by day.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"THE INVISIBLE REWARDER OF THE INVISIBLE."

"He that cometh to God must believe that he is and that he is the rewarder of them that diligently seek Him."—Heb. 11:6.

"To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life."—Rev. 2:7.

A desertation of "The Tree of Life" and what it is, is impractical here. Following is the mention of some of the fruits of the "Tree of Life" as experienced in a true Christian: Humility with no thought of personal merit; faithfulness, knowing that we reap what we sow; the joy of service well done; the complacency of peace and contentment as a result of being right; the pride of soul that stands beyond reproach; the return of purity to the soul that has been sullied with sin; the return of hope to the life after hope is gone; in all, the least of God's rewards have something in them that passes human expectation.

Jesus of the ages has been and is the rewarder of life and bestows directly these fruits together with all else accruing in Christian character,—so many that Paul refers to them as being "more than we can ask or think."

An humble soul may pray but to stand just inside the door, and may feel that it will be heaven to stand there, but once within these portals, we believe, such an one will see it all and experience a "far more exceeding weight of glory, "and sing the song, "O, that will be glory for me."

Prayer—Our Father, give us of Thyself as Thou art in Jesus Christ, and make us this day wholly thine.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"He shall strengthen Thine heart."—Ps. 27:14.

Dr. Hastings, in his comments on the great texts of the Bible likens the spiritual heart to the physical heart, in which he says the physical heart is the center of life. The heart acts as a fountain of life to the whole body, sending the life-giving blood every moment throughout the body. The health of the entire body depends upon its soundness and its proper action, and only when this action is healthy and true will the body be well, full of power, energy and hearty. On the other hand, if the heart is feeble and diseased, it will send languor, sickness and disease through the whole system.

The spiritual heart is the same as this to the soul-life. This heart is the home of affections; it is the seat of the will and moral purpose and it is the motivation of the issues of life. Thus it is said, "As a man thinketh so is he." So long as this heart is Christ-inspired, it is healthy and strong and it imparts to the soul power, energy and beauty.

Prayer—Our Father, we pray for Thy keeping of our hearts and minds this day, and all our days, that we may be the light of love and blessing Thou wouldst have Thy children be forever. —Amen.

FRIDAY.

"THE EASY BURDEN."

"For my yoke is easy and my burden is light." —Matt 11:30.

It seems a strange paradox to call a thing that is a burden "light," and especially when it is a yoke—the symbol of life's severe burdens. And yet this is exactly what Christ says are Christian experiences.

In His earlier days Jesus had been a master of dumb animals. He knew what a yoke was to an oxen and He knew how to make that yoke easy. And now as He appears master of human souls He uses the humble illustration to represent the comfort that comes out of Christianity and the apostles find Him a most considerate Master. In faith, life's burdens are borne more easily. Believing in the great burden-bearer takes the load away and is a restfulness found nowhere else. To feel His strong arm beneath our load is wonderful. To leave it all to Him and to believe that He is undertaking for us a tranquility deeper and more real than any experience the heart has ever known or conceived. His saying, "Thou will keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee," becomes a reality.

Prayer—Our Father, we cast ourselves upon Thee through Jesus Christ our Lord. Help us today to live in the atmosphere of confidence and, though life may seem rough and stormy, give us the depth of faith that calms the soul and sets everything right and at ease.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"STEWARDS' ONE LAW."

"It is required in stewards that a man be found faithful."—I Cor. 4:1-5.

Every man is a steward. To every man is committed some sacred charge. Most men have many of such charges. Our obligations are a large part of our lives.

It is well that it should be so. Fidelity to trusts is one of the main elements of our education. No one is strong that has not taught himself to be true to his stewardships.

And the steward's one law is faithfulness, as Paul says. Not accuracy, or the best bookkeeper would be the best steward. Not boldness and enterprise, or the most audacious thief would be the best steward. But truth, honesty, fidelity, make a genuine steward and nothing else will constitute him.

Prayer—May we be faithful, O Christ, to the trust Thou dost commit to us. Our talents may be few, but we will employ them in Thy service with our best ability. And at the end we shall receive Thy glorious "Well done."—Amen.

SUNDAY.

"THE PROMISE OF DIFFICULTY."

"I will show thee great things and difficult, which thou knowest not."—Jer. 33:1-9.

Jeremiah was in prison, and yet the word of the Lord came to him and promised him still more difficulties. Would it not have been kinder in the Lord to promise him a cessation of trouble, a life thereafter free from persecution?

No; for our Saviour told us that the persecuted are blessed. Trials bring triumphs in their train. Sorrows lead out into successes. The prophet's life was one long series of earthly disasters, uninterrupted to the end; but how brief were his troubles, after all, and how long—infinitely long —is the glory of his reward!

Let us not blench from difficulty. Let us not call the Lord harsh when He promises it to us in place of blessings. The difficulty is blessing, in the work of the Lord.

Prayer—We will gladly take up our cross, O Christ, and follow Thee. We shall be ashamed to live easy lives in this world where Thy life was so hard.—Amen.

JAMES, A PROCLAIMER OF JOY.

By John G. Truitt.

"My brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations."—Jas. 1:2.

Recently we spoke of James as the brother of Jesus, boyhood friend, carpenter apprentice, doubter in manhood of his messiahship, believer after Jesus' resurrection in him as Redeemer and Lord, ascribing himself his "bond-slave." We said it would be most interesting to see what James, having had all those experiences, would say about the Saviour of men. Interesting to note how little he says about Jesus as his human brother. Interesting to see how much of the religion of their childhood remains in the mind of James. And interesting to see how practical his views of the Christian religion are. Also we noticed in our recent message that so far as we know James' letter is the first written of all the books of the New Testament. That before Matthew, Mark, Luke, John, or Acts, or any of the rest comes James in point of time. James set the standard in writing as well as in church organizational leadership,—being the president of the first great council. Now let us see what he said in that letter "to the twelve tribes scattered abroad," to whom he makes his "greetings."

"Joy" is his first great word! Joy is his first great message. Joy is the content of his own heart and mind. Joy is the thing he would herald forth to a persecuted people everywhere. Joy is his wish for those who profess the following of his Lord. "Count it all joy . . . " Do not put anything else on the ledger. List joy at the head of every column. And why not, my friends, if the religion of the Lord Jesus has done for us all we claim, is doing for us all we claim, and going to do for us all we claim, why should we not look through whatever windows we may find ourselves behind with supreme joy. Jesus said we would have persecutions. We are quite aware of the trials, troubles, tears, and temptations of this old world, but have we not that inner glow of happiness which the world cannot give, which comes from knowing and loving the Lord as our personal Friend?

James rings it forth,—joy! "Behold, I come to bring you good tidings of great joy" is the heavenly messenger's first message to men on the birth of Jesus. James makes it his first message, in the first book of the New Testament. Jesus was heralded with joy. He preached that peace and joy to his followers: "These things have I spoken unto you, that my joy might remain in you, and that your joy might be full!" The joy of Jesus! It is more than a phrase. James had seen it shining in the carpenter's shop. James had heard it resounding in his messages with his mother. James had benefited by it many times as they companioned together before he began his public work. It was a practical, certain, lasting, living joy,—tested by the days and triumphant over every temptation. James had seen that common everyday joy:

"I wish I had been his apprentice,
To see him each morning at seven,
As he tossed his gray tunic about him,
The master of earth and of heaven;
When he lifted the lid of his work-chest
And opened his carpenter's kit,
And looked at his chisel and augurs,
And took the bright tools out of it;
"Saying, 'Lad, let us finish this ox-yoke,
The farmer must finish his crop.'
Oh, I wish I had been his apprentice
And worked in the Nazareth shop."

And when the disciples saw that joy in his public work more gloriously than James had seen it in the carpenter's shop, and caught it for themselves nothing could turn them back. Nothing could turn James back. James is now reminding the "scattered abroad" Christians that they have a joy which transcends all trials, and he thus urges them on. The world needs that message today. Practice it, and then preach it.

If we have the joy of Jesus it will be the joy of work, the joy of undertaking, and achieving something for him, the joy of reconstruction, redemption, the joy of getting into the fray and putting forth all our powers to make life for all better, fuller, happier! The joy that remained in the followers of the Christ was not passive, but active even unto death.

"Peace does not mean the end of all our striving,
Joy does not mean the drying of our tears;
Peace is the power that comes from souls arriving
Up to the light where God Himself appears.
"Joy is the wine that God is ever pouring
Into the hearts of those that strive with him;
Light'ning their eyes to vision and adoring
Strength'ning their arms to warfare glad and grim."

"The trying of your faith," says James, should not be the killing of your joy. Rather you should count it all joy when your faith is tried. It is good to know that you have a faith worth trying. It is good to have its firmer, finer qualities that are brought out by trial. For, says James, "the trying of your faith worketh patience." Men remember you, and bless you by the way in which you come through trials and temptations. Tests are triumphs in the making. It matter not whether it be Lindbergh over the Atlantic, or Jane Addams in Chicago, if you stand the real tests God himself can be proud of you to say nothing of your fellowmen. "I am the God of Abraham, and of Isaac, and of Jacob,"—and he was not ashamed to be called their God, for in the trial of their faith they became patient.

James had observed the patience of Jesus. He had seen it in Nazareth, he had known it as he had gone about his public ministry. It had been exercised toward his own family, who did not believe on him. How it might have been especially exercised toward his brother James! Jesus needed James. He needed him to become the leader of the church at Jerusalem. He needed him to be a leader in the first council. He needed him to help comfort and establish the persecuted Christians scattered about the world. He had patience with James. So no wonder James writes, "Knowing this, that the trying of your faith worketh patience; but let patience have her perfect work." Jesus had been tested, and was patient. Jesus had done a perfect work! And James continues, "That ye may be perfect, and entire, wanting nothing." In Him there was no lack.

"Joy," "Patience," "Wisdom," these three! How they are needed today! That is one thing about the Bible,—it still speaks. It speaks louder and more longingly every day, and in every age. It is as fresh as dew at the dawn of the day. It is clear as the ringing of a morning bell. The world needs its message today. It needs to have men and women who know the joy of work well done, of true faith in God, of a worthy goal earnestly sought. It needs men and women with patience so that they be not discouraged, nor daunted in their endeavor. Men and women not depressed with circumstances. Men and women

Christian Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

Our total income for the year up to October 20th amounts to $10,187.20. Our income book shows that we had collected at this time last year $10,356.73.

We are $169.53 less than this time last year. Not so much difference in the income; but quite a difference in the expense account. Things we have had to buy have advanced so much in price, some items like lard and meat more than 100 per cent. We are hoping and praying that as the country is getting in better condition financially that our churches will greatly increase the Thanksgiving offerings this year and help us to get out of our financial strain under which we have labored this year. Having two fires and having to rebuild has greatly increased our work too. Our new barn is now finished and painted white. The bills have not all come in yet and will not until after the first of the month but we hope by that time enough money will be sent in to enable us to meet every bill.

Our Barn Fund has reached $2,009.69 as our report in this week's SUN will show. We certainly appreciate every dollar sent in to help in this misfortune. The friends of the Orphanage have always responded to our appeals when we had misfortunes and we are grateful. We think the response to our appeal when our barn burned the last of June has been liberal and beautiful in spirit.

Now friends, let each and every one begin now to lay aside an offering for the Thanksgiving offering and when the offering is taken in your church make a real effort. Remember how good the kind Master has been to you and then remember these little children are His little ones.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

THE NEW FRONTIER.

Who does not remember the old missionary maps of the world? The lands of Christendom were in white to represent those whose "souls were lighted with wisdom from on high." The lands of heathendom were in black to represent those whose souls were quite "benighted." Similarly the mature East of the United States was supposed to have surplus Christianity to ship across the Hudson or the Mississippi to the New and Wild West where there was presumably a great deficit of the same.

Those geographical frontiers for missionary, as for commercial and political enterprise, have largely faded away.

We have now a frontier that runs through every city and state and nation; a frontier that runs through many a home and church, and through every social group and class and race. It is the frontier between the Civilization of Christ and Secularism; the frontier between a life organized daringly about faith in God and reverence for human personality and life organized shrewdly about the terrific powers of Nature as disclosed by Science and about the drives of self-interest.

If we believe the good tidings of Christ "right down to the ground" there is just one thing for us to do, i. e., follow the shining example of the saints, apostles, prophets and martyrs, and move courageously across the frontier into the areas of Secularism, move with an exultant and convincing testimony as to what the Way of Christ will do for men and for Man. No tepid Christianity can succeed; no parochial Christianity can rise to a planetary task. It is one heroic enterprise in the local Church and around the world.—*Editorial in N. Y. installation sermon fifteen years ago, he promised us that we would have meny splendid sermons from this pulpit, but above all else that we would have constantly set before us the example of a noble Christian life. From our observation and experience we know that these promises have been fulfilled in the life and service of Dr. Helfenstein.

"Years ago the city of London was destroyed by fire. One of the moving spirits in rebuilding the city was Sir Christopher Wren, a noted architect. The outstanding product of his genius was St. Paul's Cathedral. When he died they buried him there, and over his tomb was placed this simple inscription: "Beneath lies the builder of this Church and City, Sir Christopher Wren, who spent his life not for himself, but for the public good. Reader, if thou wouldst see his monument —look about thee.' And so with one accord we say, 'If you would see the result of the labors of Dr. Helfenstein in the service of his Master and People's Church, look about thee.' I am sure that I am voicing the sentiments of every member of this congregation and of the community in these few words of appreciation of our pastor—'a workman who needeth not to be ashamed.' " who can live about the mere material measures of success.

Dr. Joseph A. Vance tells of a man who came in home one evening sick, crestfallen and discouraged. His good wife met him as usual at the door. She saw something was worrying him. "What is the matter," she asked. "We have lost all, all our life's earnings, all we had is gone." "No, my dear, not all," she replied, "I still have you and you have me. We both have health and strength. We have love for one another. We have life. We have good minds and strong hands. We shall not worry, but readjust ourselves." She had some inner glow from God. She lighted it in his soul. And some very great happiness and peace was theirs as they together won over difficulties. Patience comes by the trying of your faith.

And James makes the triumvirate complete with wisdom. He knows that we shall feel the need of wisdom. "What shall I do?" will often be the question. How shall I turn? How can I serve? How shall I invest my life? How may I make the most of my opportunities? James answers all those questions: "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him." Are we taking our needs quietly, confidently to God in prayer? Do we know the joy of meeting him in the secret closet-place, where he may hear in secret and reward openly? There is nothing yet that surpasses earnest, devout prayer, in solving life's problems, and in giving that joy which so steadied the souls of the founders of the New Testament church.

TITHING BULLETINS OFFERED AT A SAVING.

The Layman Company, 730 Rust St., Chicago, offers this saving when using their four-page bulletin. Two pages are printed with a Stewardship message, and two pages are left blank for local announcements. The company suggests that churches conduct a five weeks' or 10 weeks' course of tithe education by using its bulletins, which are offered at a nominal sum. Sister Eaton was a faithful member of Timber Ridge Christian Church, and was held in the highest esteem by a large circle of friends. She was a great sufferer during the last years of her life, but bore her suffering with Christian fortitude. Truly could she say with Paul of old, "I have kept the faith."

She is survived by her husband, J. E. Eaton and by three daughters. The funeral was held at Timber Ridge, September 22, 1935. A large crowd of sorrowing friends and relatives attended. The services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. Ivan R. Smith, assisted by the writer, a former pastor for sixteen years.

IN ESSENTIALS, UNITY. IN NON-ESSENTIALS, LIBERTY. IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

Cutting Loose from S. E. C.—

To avoid regulation under the Wheeler-Rayburn Act, the Hartford Electric Light and Connecticut Power Companies severed their lines furnishing power throughout Western Massachusetts. It is estimated that their action will cost consumers more than $2,000,000 annually. This is but one instance where the S. E. C. is hurting the consumer more than it helps. There are possibly many others.

Not "Yes" Men.—

Whatever other accusation may be brought against the members of the Supreme Court, they cannot well be called "Yes" men. On Monday of this week, for instance, there were thirty-seven cases placed before the Court with requests that that tribunal review them. And the Court said "No" to thirty-two of them. It is only by refusing to review cases that in their judgment should not be considered that the Supreme Court finds time for the many cases that they do have to decide.

Night School of Religion.—

What is possibly an innovation is the course on Religion which has been recently added to the varied curriculum of the John Marshall night school in Richmond, Va. The course, it is explained, is non-sectarian and is open to the public as students or visitors, regardless of religious affiliation. The aim of the course is described as being "to popularize the study of the Bible and to compare and relate its teachings to scientific and other sources of knowledge and wisdom, and to aid the individual in constructing or reconstructing for himself a personal faith as the basis for a sound and workable philosophy of life." This experiment, if successful, should be emulated.

A. A. A. Corn-Hog Control.—

Heavy favorable majorities have been returned by farmers in the country-wide corn-hog control poll, according to uncompleted figures. Those voting were divided into two classes: those who had signed contracts and those who had not during the previous year. Tabulations to date show 520,358 signers voting for a program of control this year, while non-signers voting for the program numbered 100,073. Those voting against control this year were, signers 53,154, and non-signers, 48,571. Last year there were only 374,584 farmers who voted for the measure, while nearly half that number voted against it. During 1934, $11,038,390 was lent on corn, while in 1933 the amount was the huge sum of $120,493,034. The smaller crop last year made some difference, but the better condition in which farmers found themselves for the time being, must have been a considerable factor in reducing borrowings.

A Newer and Larger Zeppelin.—

It was twenty-five years ago that the America, piloted by the late Walter Wellman, made what was probably the first attempt by lighter-than-air craft to cross the Atlantic. Disabled about 375 miles east of Cape Hatteras, it was picked up by an English steamer. Since then there have been many attempts to fashion successful dirigibles, but today practically every nation has abandoned lighter-than-air craft construction with the exception of Germany. Even at this time there is being constructed at Friedrichshafen a giant air-cruiser LZ-129, which will enter North Atlantic service next spring. This titian is almost four times the size of the America, and is to have a gas capacity, according to The National Aeronautic Magazine, cabin space for fifty persons. There will even be a baby grand piano, and several bath rooms with hot and cold water will add to the comfort of travelers. Despite the mishaps of others, Germany continues to build "queens of the skies."

Life-Saving Light.—

Forty-six per cent of last year's automobile fatalities—a total of 20,950—occurred at night. It is claimed that no less than 35 per cent of these fatalities could be prevented by providing effective non-glare lighting of highways. In this connection there was opened recently a one and one-quarter stretch of lighted highway on Route 422, 15 miles from Cleveland, Ohio. This demonstration installation makes use of 400-candlepower incandescent light, with terraced reflectors, recently designed by General Electric laboratories, which prevent the light shining in the driver's eyes. The illumination is controlled by means of an "electric eye." There are probably 360,000 miles of main highway throughout the country, and the cost of lighting this enormous mileage would be almost prohibitive. But it is estimated that by lighting the 50,000 miles of most dangerous roads, no less than 5,000 lives would be saved annually. Figuring the economic value of these at only $10,000 each, and there is totaled an economic loss of $50,000,000. Injuries and property damages would probably double this. Possibly the lights would more than pay for themselves after all.

Church Unity to the Front Again.—

Two articles appeared recently in The Christian Century voicing the hope for a united Protestantism. The first, by E. Stanley Jones, well-known Methodist missionary and lecturer, best known as the author of "The Christ of the Indian Road," would have all of the more than 200 denominations of America unite as "The Church of Christ in America." He thinks that there would be no loss of equality and diversity under his plan, for the various branches of this American Church would retain their identity as the "Presbyterian branch," the "Methodist branch," or whatever their names might have once been. All of these branches, would, however, be tied together by a "General Assembly" that prevent the haggling that now goes on between the denominations. The writer of the second article is a member of the Disciples of Christ, Dr. F. S. Idleman, of New York City. Dr. Idleman thinks that the present Federal Council of Churches should create a department of Christian unity. He says that "the Church for a hundred years has never been so poor. . . The unwarranted and un-Christian competitive building program of the last two decades has left the Church generally with all but unpayable obligations." And he warns that "we should not settle back nor down, content with our old traditions or our uneconomical and un-Christian denominationalism." Will economic necessity force the Church to the unity for which the Man of Galilee prayed?

Now for a Bargain with Canada.—

The current issue of Business Week calls attention to the fact that the defeat of Prime Minister Bennett in the recent elections was a defeat for the Roosevelt of Canada. Although running as a "Conservative," Mr. Bennett was the New Deal candidate. Under his leadership the one-time Conservative party became decidedly more radical than the Liberal party of Mr. Mackenzie King, who won a landslide on his platform for freedom from governmental regulations both for business and the individual. "Only on two questions," we are told, "did Mr. King take the less conservative position. He demanded government ownership of the new Central Bank, and he opposed amalgamation with the government-owned Canadian National Railway with the Canadian Pacific. Mr. Bennett . . . stood for price-fixing, marketing-boards, bonuses to farmers and regulation of business. . . The Canadian voters preferred freedom and individualism, and rejected the New Deal regimentation. They looked at what the New Deal had done in the United States and did not like it." But what is of immediate importance to the United States is the economic message of the Canadian election. The natural flow of business is not east and west across the Canadian provinces, but north and south between those provinces and the states on their south. To her south is a vast industrial country that can consume her raw materials and in turn give her the manufactured articles which she needs. The election of Mr. King gives an opportunity for a reciprocal trade relationship which can be mutually helpful. There is the possibility, even the probability, of strenuous objection to tariff concessions to Canada, but the nation as a whole cannot fail to benefit by making a sensible bargain with Mr. King.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Here is some comment on "His Times," by Cyprian, the sage who lived in A. D. 325: "Honesty is no longer to be found in the market places; nor justice in the law courts; nor good craftsmanship in the arts! nor discipline in morals." He sounds like a modernist.

From our Newport News Church comes the following communication: "We have had a unique revival. The services began Wednesday and closed Sunday. The pastor did the preaching. The membership cooperated in a splendid way and even though we had only a very brief time in which to work, seventeen people were received into the membership of the church."

The Western North Carolina Conference meets at Antioch Church (Randolph County), Wednesday, November 6th, at 10:00 A. M. The North Carolina and Virginia Conference meets at Concord church (Caswell County, N. C.) Tuesday, November 12th, 10:00 A. M. The Eastern North Carolina Conference meets at New Elam Church, Merry Oaks, N. C., November 19th, 10:00 A. M.

Rev. J. M. Rowland, D. D., editor of the Richmond, (Va.), Christian Advocate, was the speaker for the morning and evening service at the Elon College Church, October 27th. Dr. Rowland greatly delighted and edified his audiences. He is a man of great insight and penetration, and punctures his remarks with irrepressible humor which enlivens and delights his congregations.

One of our beloved ministers, who has suffered much affliction, and still suffers, though much improved, writes: "I have really had a good time. The little intervals of suffering are not to be compared with the joy experienced in communion with our heavenly Father and the fellowship of my brethren in the Lord." That, indeed, is heartening to get from the voice of disappointment and affliction.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN is now the only news weekly of the Congregational-Christian Churches. It is furnishing very prompt news service. In its department of "General News" on Thursday, October 24, 1935, was a report of the meeting of the administrative committee of the Board of Ministerial Relief in New York City on Tuesday afternoon, October 22nd. The issue of the 24th was delivered by mail in New York on Friday, the 25th.

The Ladies' Missionary group of the Monticello Church gathered in the Sunday school rooms on Friday night of the past week for a "quilting bee" and some 20 or more ladies succeeded in completing a very fine quilt, and during the social hour after the work, they surprised the pastor and his wife by presenting it to them. This is only one of the many fine gestures on the part of the congregation to its grateful pastor and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Sanderson." Brother Sanderson, the pastor, reports that there are plans on foot looking to a parsonage for Monticello at an early date. The prospect for this needed addition for the Monticello work is promising.

We could wish with all our hearts that many ministers of our Christian Conferences would lay to heart what Bishop Moore recently said to the Methodist Conference about their church paper: "Methodism can only hold by the press what she wins by the pulpit. . . . Make it dynamic in this new era, this powerful means of Christian propaganda. . . . Money must go into our publication work. . . . Preaching through the press is a necessity today. The pulpit is sevérely handicapped without the support of a virile religious press. . . . The Conference organ is indispensable to modern Methodism. It is in the highest sense, a true missionary agent."

There were 116 deaths in automobile accidents on North Carolina highways in September. This is an all-time record for September and is only exceeded by one month, that of December, '34, when the number reached 117 killed. The September number killed and injured on the highways were 736 persons, making the total killed for the year ending October first, 757; injured, 4,905. The fatalities for this year are 110 more than the 647 of the previous year to October first.

The Motor Vehicle Division of the State gives the following analysis of the causes: "Speeding, driving on the wrong side of the road, passing on curves or on the crest of hills and reckless driving. Ten drunken drivers were killed and 82 injured in the wrecks."

Rev. A. D. Woodworth, our veteran missionary of many years to Japan, now on furlough at his home in Merom, Ind., celebrated, with his good wife, their golden wedding anniversary recently and, according to the good doctor, "we have launched our boat for the next voyage of fifty years. The next celebration will be in the Glory Land." Continuing, he says: "Dr. E. A. Watkins, who has been our pastor for five years, has resigned and has transferred to Melott and Osbornis Prairie Churches. So our brethren want a new pastor—young, well-educated, attractive, especially to the young people, a good Bible student, a good preacher and one who can live on a small salary." We advise anyone who can qualify and is interested to write to Dr. Woodworth.

The editor of THE SUN wishes to express his appreciation for the following, which has interest beyond its personal content: "The East Congregational Church of Grand Rapids, Michigan, extends greetings to THE SUN'S editor and Mission Secretary, Rev. James O. Atkinson, D. D., of North Carolina. This church, having devoutly sought the promised guidance of the Holy Spirit, has united in the choice of Rev. Charles Warren Helsley, D. D., for its pastor and teacher. He has responded favorably to its call and is now serving this Church. "We therefore affectionately request you to be present for an Installation Dinner and Service to be held respectively at six-thirty and eight o'clock in our house of worship on Friday, October the twenty-fifth, 1935, for his installation as pastor of this Church and for the purpose of extending to him the fellowship of the ministers and of the Churches."

The bulletin for the morning worship period, Sunday, October 27th, of Greensboro First Church carries this very timely suggestion as preface: "One of the primary functions of the church is to provide incentives for worship and the atmosphere and means thereof. The church service proper begins with the prelude. It is part of the service and should never be considered as preceding it. It should compel an attitude of reverence, devotion and worship. Those who come to worship should refrain from whispering and talking. Worshippers should find their seats quietly and without confusion. Henry Ward Beecher said: 'If it were possible to make the door of the church a screen through which would come the fresh, living, immortal soul, but none of its drudgeries, cares—how blessed that would be!' That is exactly what the organ prelude attempts to do. It should make to disappear all secular and worldly thoughts. The time during the prelude should be spent in reverent, holy, silent meditation."

General News

of the

CONGREGATIONAL AND CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

By HERBERT D. RUGG.

A GREAT PEACE POLL.

A national poll of more than 700,000 ballots is assured for the peace plebiscite which will be concluded in Congregational-Christian churches on Armistice Sunday, November 10th.

Approximately 725,000 ballots had been requested by churches up to the beginning of this week with each mail to the Council for Social Action in New York City bringing new requisitions.

The ballots have gone to 2,028 churches or one-third of the denomination. The section with the largest proportion of churches participating is the inter-mountain region of Idaho, Utah and Wyoming. Thirty-four out of forty-eight churches in the Conferences of these three states have asked for ballots. The second highest proportion is in Rhode Island where twenty out of thirty-eight churches or fifty-three per cent are participating. Connecticut with 149 out of 320 churches or forty-seven per cent taking the poll and Massachusetts with 287 out of 620 or forty-six per cent are third and fourth.

In the Southeast the poll will be taken by forty-seven churches in the Southern Convention according to the latest information, by eight in the Georgia Conference and twelve in Florida; by twelve churches in the four states of Kentucky, West Virginia, Tennessee and Alabama and by twenty-six southern Negro churches.

TO PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE PASTORS—RUSH!

The intensifying and widening of interest in the plebiscite is accelerating as Armistice Sunday approaches. Churches which ordered early are asking for additional ballots and organizations outside the denomination, especially in other communions and at colleges write in for information.

In a single batch of letters this Tuesday were requests for fifty additional ballots from the Fitch Memorial Church, Buffalo, N. Y.; for fifty from the West End German Evangelical Protestant Church, Pittsburgh, Pa.; for a hundred from the Wellsville, N. Y., Congregational Church, and a hundred from the First Church of Christ, Sharon, Conn., whose pastor wrote: "Persons in the village, occasional attendants other than members are becoming so interested, that it would be too bad not to let them in on it." It is provided on the ballots, it should be noted, that the voters to mark whether or not they are a church member.

From Struthers, Ohio, where the Congregational Church is without a pastor, the director of religious education wrote for ballots.

Another letter came from an individual residing in the Phi Mu Delta fraternity house, Tufts College, Medford, Mass., an institution affiliated with the Universalist churches. He wanted 1,000 copies of the peace plebiscite leaflet by Alfred Schamlz, associate director of the Council for Social Action. We will give them out at chapel.

Another letter was from the Rev. John Maxwell Adams, general director, University Work Department, Board of Christian Education, Presbyterian Church in U. S. A., Philadelphia, Pa. He wanted rushed to him copies of the peace plebiscite leaflet, of the peace plebiscite edition of the Social Action magazine and of the ballots. Packets especially of this material are to be prepared for all university and college pastors of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A.

STREAMER HEADLINES IN CHURCH PAPERS.

It is probable that the constituencies of the Congregational and Christian churches have never had so much education on any other single issue in the same period of time as they have had on the peace plebiscite. The Council for Social Action which under instructions voted by the General Council in June, 1934, are directing the plebiscite have issued 175,000 of the "blue leaflet" on the plebiscite by Mr. Schmalz and 45,000 copies of the October or plebiscite edition of "Social Action." Six thousand posters for churches to use in announcing the plebisicte have been distributed.

The various publications of the departments of the Education Society, the periodicals of the Pilgrim Press and the Conference papers have been replete with plebiscite information, discussion of the ballot questions and excursions into some of the countless related problems. In the Montana paper, "Congregational Montana," the poll commanded a "Plebiscite Number" with a streamer head-line.

WHAT WILL THE VERDICT BE?

The balloting has already commenced. In many churches sermons on the plebiscite have been preached, it has been discussed in men's, women's and young people's organizations, editorials have been occasioned in the newspapers, the ballots have been distributed.

At the Lake Linden Congregational Church, Michigan, the poll was introduced on October 12, by the pastor, the Rev. Charles R. Jones, his topic being, "What Can You Do For Peace?" There was a stereoptician prelude of pictures on "Peace or War" with scenes from the career of Napoleon and from the World War.

At the First Church, Waukegan, Ill., a series of four sermons on the plebiscite was begun October 20th by the pastor, the Rev. James W. F. Davies. An all-day conference on the plebiscite was held by the district young people's Pilgrim Fellowship at Westfield, Mass., last Sunday.

The Rev. Wm. T. Scott of the United Congregational-Christian Church, Winston-Salem, N. C., spoke on the plebiscite at the Congregational Conference of the Carolinas in Circular Church, Charleston, S. C., last Friday.

Round-table discussions three Sunday nights on the plebiscite for three Sunday nights were begun October 20th at Pilgrim Church, Chattanooga, Tenn. Young people were assigned to talk concerning questions on the ballot. Three conclusions were brought out in a report of the first round-table: 1. The talks and general discussion "showed the despair and confusion the subject engenders"; 2. Questions raised and left unanswered were: how may profit be taken out of war? is the Golden Rule practical? is Christianity practical? then, was Jesus just an impractical dreamer; if He wasn't, are we Christians? 3. By a straw vote the consensus of opinion was shown to be that the United States government should control the munitions industry; that the United States should engage in "consultation with nations in support of the Kellogg Pact and other peace agreements" and that an individual "should bear arms in or otherwise support only a war in which United States territory had been invaded."

The conclusions of a poll as large, as representative geographically, as typical of the evangelical religious viewpoint and as carefully tabulated as will be this plebiscite, will be very significant. It will be significant in revealing clearly the steps which the denomination is ready to take in a peace movement; and it will be equally significant in revealing differences in sentiment or opinions concerning which the mind of the denomination is not settled or clear and which will need to be worked over by various methods of group thinking in order that unity may be achieved for further advance.

We may be assured that the results of the plebiscite will not only bear watching but will be watched by observers outside. Willis Thornton, Washington correspondent for several newspapers, in a dispatch commenting on the plebiscite together with current peace efforts by other bodies sets forth developments which an observer at the nation's capital foresees. Rightly or wrongly he holds that the energy which the evangelical denominations formerly used "in fighting the demon rum is now being turned against Mars and the Anti-Saloon League's loss is the pacifist societies' gain." He assigns to the National Council for the Prevention of War the role in the peace movement cause held by the Anti-Saloon League in temperance. He says: "The NCPW is preparing to go direct to towns in the coming congressional elections, organizing by precinct, ward and district to defeat candidates who won't subscribe to their peace program. This is the old Anti-Saloon League technique right back again and presents one more jitter for candidates for congress."

If it is true, however, that the Anti-Saloon majored on direct political action and the peace program, the parallel will not be as close as forecast, despite political action majors on education.

DEATH OF REV. A. K. VOSS.

The fine and experienced leadership which the Rev. A. K. Voss had rendered the Minnesota Conference as assistant superintendent from 1917 to 1930 and as superintendent since, was ended by accidental death on last Friday night. It is believed that his death was caused by heart-failure, when some cleaning fluid he was using became ignited, thereby rendering him unable to extinguish the fire. He was a bachelor and had just returned to his hotel in Minneapolis from the Mid-West Regional Meeting at Grand Rapids, Mich. The funeral is to be held this Thursday afternoon in Plymouth Church, Minneapolis.

"FOUR ACES—TEN HIGH."

As I write this note my hands are all stained with human blood—the blood of a young lady taken from the ruins of a wrecked car out on the highways where men meet, pass and repass, and sometimes never pass that way again. It was almost that way here. I had never seen any of the occupants of either car before, and since then I have often wondered if the poor girl lived through it.

They say: "Two wrongs never make one right," and I think it's just as true that two giddy-headed drivers never make a safe highway for anyone to travel. It was demonstrated in the above mentioned wreck. And it's bad enough when a sorry drunken man gets hold of a wheel, but when a mother with grown daughters takes the wheel and a few drinks—well, I guess she feels she has as much right to do it as the man.

One cannot easily forget the cries of that poor girl as she pleaded for daddy to take her away. Her face and neck were cut and gashed almost past mending, her body scarred and bruised almost beyond recognition, and her life blood poured freely before the physician arrived to help out. And yet this is just another instance of what happens on our highways every day. And you can believe it or not, I happen to have a check on things of this kind, and know that these wrecks have doubled in the eastern part of Carolina since July 1st.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

OUR NEXT JOB.

Roger Babson, who is paid by "bankers and big business" for his analyses and advice in business, declared in his last week's "Babson Chart" that from a study of conditions, financial and economic, the world's greatest need today is spiritual. Hear Mr. Babson's declaration:

"The low leved of foreign trade and the unbalanced budget are, however, only part of a more basic problem. People must finally learn that we cannot reach prosperity by spending other people's money and that one nation cannot prosper while the world in general suffers. So in the final analysis our problem is one of a spiritual rather than a material nature. As industry, integrity, unselfishness, and the desire to be of service return, then—and then only—can we have another period of extended prosperity."

So often is this being repeated in our time and on such high authority that we cannot ignore the plea.

There must come a spiritual revival. Mr. Babson, in closing his report, quotes the late Thomas Edison in an interview held just before Mr. Edison died:

"Babson, this country has already gone too far technologically. Our next job is to catch up spiritually."

We are in a changing world and passing through chaotic conditions. But some things do not change. The eternal laws of God are fixed and invariable: "Right is right and wrong is wrong." Beneath the things of this earth are things invisible, and upon these invisible, which are the more real thing, we must build. The foundations are secure. We must seek to get back on the foundations or our building is insecure.

DAILY REMINDERS.

How often during the day's work is the average man or woman reminded of the soul and its needs? It takes the three parts of us to make one, viz: Body, mind and soul. We exercise the body constantly and scrupulously nourish it with food three time a day. We spend hours in study, reading or conversation, to nourish and strengthen the mind daily. But many of us pass whole days without giving heed or consideration to the deeper, truer and more abiding part of us. The Commonweal points out a very salient fact and calls the attention of its many readers to a line of thought well worthy of consideration by all of us:

"A worker is exceedingly lucky if his day is free of irreligious blasphemy and propaganda. The radio to which he listens offers at the very most distraction; and except for an occasional program, nothing in a whole evening's entertainment even so much as hints at the existence of a Divine Master. It would be an optimistic critic who felt that the sparse references to religious matters which find their way into newspapers lift religion above the level of minor political or social events. A human being can now actually pass a whole lifetime in these United States without suspecting that belief is anything more than a queer notion which interests some people, as stamp collecting does others. Manifestly there is need for going very much nearer the housetops in order to tell the community what religion is."

The same paper is of opinion that at the present rate of decline, the Apostle Paul's return to preach an "unknown God" in some city of our country in the future is easily imaginable and predictable.

Verily, we are so taken with things that we simply ignore, neglect or disregard, that which is higher and holier than things. We need to remind ourselves in the words of the Apostle to the people of the thriving, wicked city of Corinth: "For the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal."

A CHURCH DEBT.

It was reported to the Virginia Methodist Conference at Danville recently that Trinity Methodist Church, Petersburg, Va., one of the finest in Virginia, had borrowed $130,000.00 from the Virginia State College for Negroes and that this amount is unpaid and is in default. Bishop Mouzon, who was presiding over the Conference at Danville, is reported to have said that "the Coonference is neither morally nor legally responsible for the debts of individual churches." Of cause if a Conference undertook to pay off the ly and morally, in making that statement, because of a Conference undertook to pay off the obligations of its local churches, it would not be a Conference long.

This money was borrowed of the Negro institution in that period of the twenties when money was easy to get, and now conditions are different, and the good white folks, who worship in their magnificent Trinity Methodist Church, find themselves in an embarrassing situation. It must be exceedingly embarrassing. We have a notion that it is so very embarrassing that they will take some turn to repay this money. It would seem unavoidable and impossible for them not to do so. It is often said and well-known that Negro church members, in proportion to their wealth, are far more liberal than white church members, but their liberality to religion is certainly no excuse whatever for their white brethren in better circumstances to take advantage of them and use for their own, money which was loaned in good faith, and certainly by every count of logic and reason should be repaid. We commend most heartily the comment on this matter from Clark's editorial in the Greensboro Daily News. Read what "Judge Clark" has to say:

"Some will see no distinction between a debt to whites and one to negroes. But others will see the distinction and will believe that extraordinary proceedings should be taken to do something about it. Confess to sharing that feeling. Church debts are different, anyhow. Churches are supposed to be houses of God and the idea here of God is that He wouldn't care to have a House called in His name that was built with money dishonestly obtained, borrowed and not repaid. And it is infinitely worse when it comes to white folks worshipping in fine churches built at the expense of negroes, with money borrowed that negroes had accumulated to educate their people. That, as some see it, is just too much. All the talk of depressions and misfortunes and being sorry doesn't change the obligation nor remove the odium of failure to meet it. We are going to believe, whether it happens or not, that Virginians—the group of Virginians responsible for that church debt—will have too much pride to leave it as it is, not to mention that religion and common honesty that are supposed to have some part in transactions about church debts."

We feel that a sense of fair, square dealing as well as of common honesty and good judgment, to say nothing of religion and piety, will stir up these good white folks of Trinity Methodist in Petersburg, and they will see to it that every penny of this money with due interest is paid back to the Negro institution that loaned it. Clark's comment covers this case, as well as many others that need to be considered in these days of excuses and side-stepping.

CONFERENCE ON CRIME.

Governor Lehman of New York recently convened at Albany a Conference on "Crime, the Criminal and Society." This conference has attracted much attention because of the nature of its addresses and round-table discussions. It was noted that crime is tremendously on the increase, that criminals are multiplying and that society is endangered by lawlessness of every type. The Conference has been acclaimed quite timely and has created considerable interest and comment. It is believed that other States will call similar Conferences and possibly find, as did the Albany Conference, that every State should have a police force and equipment similar to that of the Federal Government. It is a well-known fact that the States, in a very large measure, leave to federal officers the larger task of running down criminals and of stopping gangsters.

However, one of the main points for consideration in any Conference of the Albany type should be that of preventing crime as well as catching and punishing the criminal. One of the most hopeful as well as the most significant lines of discussion was that with regard to the modern home. Reporting and commenting on this, The Commonweal of New York says editorially:

"The modern home situation aroused a lively discussion. Its place in crime prevention was definitely recognized. The public school system was organized at a time when the American family was religious. Today the family no longer provides the religious element. In this connection it was recommended that the Decalogue be taught in the schools and more definitely, that on each school day the first half-hour should be devoted to instructions in the religion of the child by certified teachers of the staff, and that those not professing any one of the three great religions should be obliged to take a course in ethics. It was a great step in the right direction, and it was surprising to many that such a proposal could originate from this type of gathering."

For a Conference of this type to recommend that the Decalogue be taught in the schools and that the first half-hour in our public schools each day be devoted to the subject of religion is significant, indeed. Possibly the maelstrom of crime and destruction, which is increasing, will by its very hazard bring us to our senses and, in a measure, help us plant our feet on solid foundation, viz: The will and the Word of God.

THE GOOD AGAINST THE BEST.

Robert Browning's idea of hell was that men, content with the lesser goods of life, should have forever what they are now seeking. "Let such men rest content with what they judged the best." To escape this hell of a life filled with the lesser goods, so that we shall not be forever what we are now, we must turn away our ambitions from merely good aims and seek the best that life offers. Realize that the good is often the enemy of the best.

Civilization has progressed so far that the average church member is not in peril of becoming a murderer, a drunkard or a thief. The grosser vices do not allure us. But we are often content simply to waste our lives, not in "riotous living," but in aiming at nothing and hitting it. The demand of the immediate consumes our days and we sing, "I want what I want when I want it." Present privation for the sake of the larger life seems too great a hardship.

When good things become the rivals of the best things and fill our horizon o fhope and effort, we in effect forfeit heaven. Paul, the Apostle, like his Master was poor in the things that many esteem as riches. Hungry often, persecuted always, a prisoner in chains, finally executed, he was always rich beyond the dreams of avarice. The secret of his wealth is revealed in his words when he told the Corinthians to "Desire earnestly the greater gifts and moreover I go on to show you a still higher path." Then follows his famous chapter on love, the greatest thing that life offers. Love prevents conceit, decadence, and envy. The spiritual destitution which is man's worst enemy is replaced by this gift of love which gives an eternal goal of effort. All the resources of art, science, philosophy, and religion are his who has learned how to substitute love for selfishness. Grenfell of the Labrador is only one of many modern saints in his demonstration that the service of others in self-forgetful love is the pathway to peace, joy and lasting success.

JOHN WESLEY.

Wesley's Early Work.

It is impossible to understand or to appreciate the work that Wesley did unless one knows at least a little of the background of the times in which he began his work. The society of England, both in morals and religion stood badly in need of reform. The upper classes were more or less dissolute, vulgar, coarse, very lax in morals, extravagant in habit, much given to drunkenness, addicted to gambling and low amusements, and in many cases stupid beyond words.

The lowest class was still worse. They were ignorant, uncultured, restless, lazy, half-brutalized, and practically pagan. They were almost universally drinking people, debauched and immoral. Every sixth house in London was a gin shop. Of course crime increased proportionately. The parks and gardens where the lower classes resorted were scenes of vulgar debauchery and violence. Cock-fighting and bull-baiting were the favorite amusements of these lower classes, and every prominent town could furnish a mob of lcwd and shiftless fellows ready for any brutal excitement. As will be seen later this type of people caused much disturbance and much trouble in the open-air meetings in the early days of Wesley's ministry. And yet it was among these people that the first Methodist preachers found their most attentive and most appreciative audiences as a whole.

But Wesley's greatest contribution was perhaps to the great middle class, a class which was rapidly developing during the middle of the eighteenth century. This class eventually furnished the basis for a sound English society, and it was largely due to Wesley's efforts that they added to sound character the power and beauty of religion. When Wesley began his work however, religion had but little power, either with the priests or the people. The word "zeal" was a red rag to all England for perhaps seventy-five years, and such words as sin and sorrow and love were not in the vocabulary of the church. Religion in Wesley's time needed nothing so much as certainty and warmth and emphasis upon inner experience.

And Wesley brought that to the people of his time. He remained in Bristol for a couple of months after beginning his ministry and for the next two years divided his time between that city and London. He preached on the average of twelve times a week, and during the first year of his ministry he preached over five hundred times, and yet only five times in churches. The churches, almost without exception, closed their doors against him, and the regular clergy opposed him and sought to stop him. It was in reply to one of them that Wesley made his famous remark, "I look upon the whole world as my parish." There was a simplicity and a power about his preaching that caught the imagination of the man in the street, and great results followed his open-air meetings. In fact it was because of some of the demonstrations that accompanied Wesley's preaching, in many cases extreme and strange experiences, that aroused much of the opopsition to Wesley's work. Wesley himself made no attempt to stimulate such religious outbursts; in fact he tried to discourage it. But he accepted it as an evidence of supernatural powers, and said that no man had any right to criticize it so long as it was accompanied by the remarkable changes in the lives of those who experienced these strange experiences.

When Whitfield left England in 1739 for another visit to America, Wesley spent more of his time in London. The work grew by leaps and bounds. It soon became apparent that some means must be found for giving direction to the movement that was sweeping that city, and for exercising oversight over the hundreds that were being born into the kingdom. It was out of this pressing and practical need that Wesley's Methodist Societies were established. It cannot be too strongly insisted that Wesley had no thought of founding a new sect, or of building up an elaborate religious organization. He was concerned only with bringing the gospel to those who would otherwise have little chance of hearing it, and of looking after those who had accepted Christ's way of life. But it was this situation, which little by little forced Wesley to a place of unsought leadership of a definite, closely centralized organization. Soon there came a separation between the Moravians and the followers of Wesley, and the eighteen or nineteen who withdrew with Wesley formed the first "Methodist Society" in England and became the forerunners of that great army of Christians who have spread around the world, and who have made such a vital contribution to the work of the kingdom. For the use of this first Society, Wesley bought an old foundry which had been almost wrecked by an explosion years before, rebuilt it, fited it up, and made it the center of his work in London. He had modest apartments fited up in it, and it was here that his mother passed her last years.

It was during these early years that Wesley instituted or adapted the "Class Meeting," which has been a feature of Methodist practice ever since. It proved an admirable plan of exercising oversight over those who were converted, and of nurturing their spiritual life. The class leaders were appointed by Wesley, and met him at least once a quarter to give a detailed report of the condition of those instructed to their charge. It was largely to receive these reports that Wesley, in the next forty years, made his continual journeyings from one end of England to the other. It is interesting to learn that persons were admited to these societies only by John and Charles Wesley, admission being by ticket, and membership being conditional, the tickets being renewed every quarter, and being refused if the members who had been idle or disorderly, or proving to be indifferent to a religious life, after warning and exhortation refused to take heed and repent and reform.

One other significant factor entered into the development of the Methodist movement during this early period, namely the rise of "lay preachers." Here again there was no intention or desire on the part of Wesley to break with the Church of England or to cast reflection on her ordained ministers. But the amazing growth of the movement, and the rapidly increasing number of societies made it necessary to have some trained and especially trusted leaders. At first Wesley himself was against the idea—he tried to stop one of his finest young men from preaching before the Foundry Society. But his mother met him with the protest, "Pohn, take heed what you do with reference to that young man, for he is surely called to preach as you are." After hearing Maxfield preach, Wesley said, "It is the Lord's doing; let him do what seemeth him good." Within a year there were twenty lay preachers, for with that practical commonsense which was so characteristic of the man, Wesley saw not only the need, but the possibilities of such leadership. Needless to say this innovation met with the sternest and warmest opposition especially on the part of the leaders of the church.

Reference must be made to one other incident which happened during the period of Wesley's early work, namely his theological difference with his good friend, Whitfield. Time forbids the presentation of details. Suffice it to say that the difference revolved around the idea of predestination. The men never reconciled their theological differences, but they did become reconciled after a few month's estrangement, thanks to Whitfield's fine spirit in granting it. But there was never the same confidence between them again and their work thereafter was done mostly in separation.

The Ever-Widening Scope of Wesley's Work.

By the summer of 1742 Wesley found himself at the head of a definite religious organization, with a large body of devoted followers, organized in a simple but efficient manner which kept them under his constant supervision, and with an increasing number of loyal helpers selected by him-

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Why do people talk more about sickness than health? Why is a failure more interesting, to some people, than success? Why does a newspaper give more space to a funeral than to a birth?

The answer to these questions cannot be reduced to writing in the space allotted for this meditation. But the questions are submitted for the study of the kind reader. Carry these questions in your mind for a few days and think of them as you listen to the greetings and conversations of your friends and acquaintances. It is surprising to observe the extended answer to the usual salutation, "How are you today?" If you will wait a few minutes and give a little time for thought, it is quite possible for you to have a complete history of all the recent ailments of your friend. Some people are able to give all the symptoms of many diseases in picturesque language. By the way, is it not of interest to observe that these details of sickness always bring forth the same type of description from others who may be listening in?

An operation in a hospital is one of the favorite topics for people who have passed through that experience. Some people can relate their hospital experiences with such enthusiasm and grace that one almost wishes for the opportunity to go under the surgeon's knife—just to have at hand a good topic for conversation. But who ever heard of a long conversation enriched by the personal experiences of good health? Good health is much better than sickness; but it is not as interesting in a testimony meeting. People who are sick dwell at length upon their physical infirmity. It seems to give them some relief to tell others. They need sympathy and a patient listener helps them to carry their burden and endure their affliction. Deal kindly and gently with sick people.

This observation may be applied to any field of human experience. The business people pass through the same type of experience. People discuss hard times much more enthusiastically than good times. Poor crops, low prices, inclement weather—all come into the picture. Can you remember the good times of the past? Can you recall that many complaints were made during the good times? As a rule there are as many complaints and objections raised during the good times as during the hard times. The emphasis is not upon the same points and experiences—but people will complain when the weather is hot and when it is cold; when the weather is dry and when it is raining; when times are good and when they are bad.

The point is this: human life seems to thrive on relating personal afflictions, hardships, temptations, sorrows and failures. If one could look out upon life with an open mind—it is not as cold and drab and dismal as daily gossip in social groups, and newspaper writers in our current literature would make us believe. In spite of what one reads in the daily newspapers, all the married people are not seeking the divorce courts; all the young people are not on the way to brothel and the slums of disgrace; all the business men are not dishonest. There are many millions who turn their hearts to the house of God on every Sabbath and praise their Creator in sincere worship and faithful service. There are many millions who are working hard to make a living and doing their bit for social and spiritual uplift. Thousands have the joy of good health and happiness and bask in God's glorious sunshine with courageous faith in a great future.

These people do not get in the glaring headlines of the press. Good health, real happiness, hard work and spiritual integrity—these are too commonplace for ordinary gossip and too tame for newspaper headlines. Why not introduce health and happiness and integrity of character to the groups who delight in gossip? Why not put honesty, and work, physical strength, social purity upon the front pages of our newspapers? If we could read of virtue instead of vice, strength instead of weakness, it would help our thinking and give encouragement to better living.

THE ANNUAL CONFERENCES.

The Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches is composed of five different conferences—Valley of Virginia, Eastern Virginia, Virginia-North Carolina, Eastern Carolina, and Western Carolina. The Alabama Conference and the Georgia and Alabama Conference formerly were a part of the Convention. At their own request theye were granted permission to unite with the state conferences of their respective states. These conferences meet annually for the purpose of receiving reports on the accomplishments for the year then closing and to plan further for the year just ahead. There are also devotional and inspirational service in connection with the transaction of business, leaving of plans, et cetera. These periods of devotion and fellowship are oftentimes the high marks of the conference in session.

I fear, however, that too much time is given to the discussion of what has been done and too little to planning for what should be done. After all of our floor discussion, what has been done is not changed and very seldom is made clearer to the ones present. Reports usually speak for themselves. If a report is bad, it is seldom improved by talking about it. If it is good, its proper presentation will be an inspiration to all present.

Of course, our plans for the future grow largely out of our accomplishments of the past. If we have succeeded we want to accumulate those lines that have brought us success. The local conference is made up, of course, of the congregations within that conference and the conferences reports are but the compilation of the local church reports. If our conference reports are to be inspiring, then our local church reports must be likewise inspiring. If the local church is careful to meet all requirements financially and is determined to register gains in membership and advances in spirituality then certainly the conference session will not only be wholesome, helpful and inspirational, but will be a benediction to all kingdom interests. The local church will be able to meet all obligations and to register gains only so far as every individual member of that church performs his duty to the full. In the final analysis regardless of our organizations, plans, purposes, or what not, the whole responsibility rests upon the individual and this is right. Religion is personal, is individual. It has its social aspects and its social impact, but without individual Christianity there can be no such thing as social Christianity. It is high time for the ones of us who constitute the membership of the Christian Church to examine ourselves and be ready at all times to give a reason for the faith that we cherish.

The Valley of Virginia Conference has already held its annual session for 1935. The Eastern Virginia Conference meets Wednesday, October 30th, with our church at Franklin, Virginia. This is the strongest conference in the Convention and we naturally expect that it shall set a high mark for the rest of the conferences. It is the hope and prayer of us all that every church may do its full duty so that the conference session may be an inspiration to the other conferences that are to follow.

A CALL FOR PEACE PROGRAMS.

The North Carolina Council of Churches, as provisionally organized, met at Guilford College, N. C., October 14th, for the purpose of working out in greater detail the matter of organization. The Council represents thirteen of the larger denominational organizations in North Carolina, four of which have already formally approved of the Council, elected their representatives, and voted to become a part of the Council. The purpose of the Council, expressed in a sentence, is unitedly to further the interests of religion that can be accomplished more effectively together than separately.

After consideration of the questions of organization had been discussed at Guilford College, the question was raised as to whether or not there are important issues to which the members of the Council might devote their efforts while the organization of the Council is being completed. The response to this question was a unanimous vote that the denominations represented in the Council call upon all pastors, on the Sunday nearest Armistice Day upon which it can be conveniently done, to give their congregations messages on World Peace. The conviction was voiced that the churches can do more to further the cause of peace than any other organization in the country.

As yet the Council has no means of reaching the churches save through denominational organizations and church papers. Members of each denomination represented were asked to get the call to pastors and churches, urging them to declare the message of the gospel relative to peace. This fits in perfectly with the plans for the Peace Plebiscite which has been arranged for all Congregational and Christian Churches. It is earnestly hoped that all our churches will be given messages emphasizing the importance of peace sentiment in the churches, and showing how much sentiment can help to mold public opinion.

SUFFOLK ANNIVERSARY SERVICE.

The Suffolk Christian Church will hold an anniversary service, celebrating the 75th year of its history, on Sunday, November 17th, to which all members and friends of the church, all former members, the one living former pastor, the pastors of all Suffolk churches, pastors and members of churches of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference, and the general public are hereby invited.

The Rev. H. Shelton Smith, Ph. D., of the Duke University faculty, will make an anniversary address in the afternoon at 3:00 o'clock, and our historian, Bro. W. E. MacClenny will bring a brief history of the church. The pastor of the church will preach an anniversary sermon at the 11:00 o'clock service.

JOHN WESLEY.

self and under his direction. As has been stated above, this was a result, not of Wesley's personal ambitions, but of a series of events that he could not deem other than providential.

Up to this time, however, his work had been confined for the most part to the vicinity of London and Bristol. But he now began his larger ministry and within ten years his societies had dotted thickly all the northern countries. One of the first places he visited in the North was Newcastle, one of the most unlikely and challenging places perhaps in England. And yet Wesley so won the hearts of the people that they almost trod him under foot, as he says, out of pure love and kindness. On another occasion when he rode out to Placey, a place of unsavory reputation, and on a Sunday stood in a blinding sleet storm to preach to the people, there weer crowds at both the morning and afternoon services. The people not only listened attentively, but in the next few days many of them began a different life. Wesley later said that these honest, simple-minded colliers of Placey were a pattern to all his societies. After a tour of other northern towns and villages, Wesley returned to London, stopping en route to visit Epworth, his former home. He found humble-minded sincere Christians, the fruitage of the labors of his father in this backward section in the earlier years. But he was refused the use of the church for a preaching service, and nothing daunted, held a preaching service in the church graveyard at six o'clock in the evening. His mother, who was still living, was very much pleased that her son had visited the scene of her former labors and privations. Only a few weeks later, she passed away with all the children but Charles at her bedside. When the peaceful end came, John and his sisters, standing around her bedside, fulfilled her last request, "Children, when I am released, sing a hymn of praise to God."

With Wesley's visit to Newcastle, begins his long and remarkable itinerant life. It becomes difficult, if not impossible to follow him. He was always on the road, passing from one end of the island to the other. It is estimated that in the last fifty years of his life he crossed the Irish Channel over fifty times, and traveled over two hundred and fifty thousand miles on land, more than ten times around the globe. Up to 1773 all of his traveling was done on horseback, and on many days he traveled from eighty to ninety miles per day. In 1778 he left a little town on Wednesday afternoon for a brief visit to Bristol, stayed in Bristol two hours and was back in the little town on Friday afternoon—two hundred and eighty miles in forty-eight hours—and as he says in his record, "no more tired (blessed be God) than when I left." And let no one think that Wesley was content merely to ride along. His saddle was his study and his library. Indeed, there was no other time to do up. Up at four in the morning, preaching wherever possible at five, and on the road again before eight, often preaching at least five times more during the day, riding from ten to twelve miles between each preaching place. In fifty years of this itinerant life, Wesley preached over forty thousand times, an average of fifteen sermons a week.

One wonders at the man's amazing capacity for work, and under such exacting conditions, especially in view of the fact that Wesley never weighed more than one hundred and twenty-five pounds. Much of the secret was due to his methodical habits, but much was due to his even temperament and to his refusal to worry. On his eighty-fifth birthday he writes in his Journal that he has never lost a night's sleep, sick or well, on land or sea, since he was born, but it is evident that his memory slipped a bit, for some fifteen years before he does record the fact that while crossing the English Channel he had lain awake all night for the first time in his life. Wesley himself attributed his long life and good health to several factors: "To my constant exercise and change of air. To my never having lost a night's sleep since I was born. To my having sleep at my command—he could sleep at any time, anywhere. To my having constantly, for over sixty years, risen at four in the morning. To my constant preaching at five in the morning for over fifty years and to my having had so little pain in my life, and so little sorrow or anxious care." The last was perhaps the most important. For this slight little man who for fifty years carried such tremendous responsibility could affirm that he had known but little "anxious care."

By 1743 the work had grown to such large proportions that Wesley felt it imperative that he call others to his aid. This was the beginning of the "Methodist Conference." Calling together several clergymen who were in sympathy with his work to meet at the Foundry, this Conference met the last five days of June, 1744. Some time was given to a discussion of doctrine and polity, but the attention of the Conference was occupied chiefly with questions of discipline and practice, and especially with the work and status of the lay preachers. A set of rules and regulations were drawn up, which with slight changes remained in force during Wesley's life. Another outgrowth of the Conferences was the organization of the work in England and Wales into "circuits," and each lay worker was assigned to a round of places within a circuit. The preacher whose name headed the list was called an "assistant," now known as the Superintendent. He was to report at the annual conference.

During the first decade of Wesley's ministry, he and his lay preachers were constantly assailed by mobs, and on many occasions their lives were actually endangered. Often they were badly hurt, and again and again their meetings were broken up by hoodlums and rough-necks. Sometimes these outbreaks were nothing more than crude horse-play, but on other occasions they were actuated by sheer devilishness. The coolness of Wesley in such encounters is simply amazing. Before the angriest

NEWS ITEMS OF SOCIETIES.

By MRS. W. M. JAY, News Editor.

Here is the first news item since the Woman's Conferences and how glad we are to have one society share their plans and enthusiasm with others. Hope this will inspire other societies to do likewise and help to make this page a helpful and interesting one to all our women everywhere. If you have a good program all worked out, perhaps someone is just looking for that particular help in their work. Remember the Thankoffering and be making your plans soon for your program. This should be one of the high spot programs of the year. Many and varied are the materials obtainable from the various denominational headquarters.

The Missionary Society of the First Congregational-Christian Church, Newport News, Va., held its regular monthly meeting Tuesday, October 8th, with a very good attendance.

Devotional services were conducted by Mrs. J. J. Baker, consisting of songs, prayer and a talk on the seventh chapter of "The Ministering Master." The society has been using this book for its devotionals for the past seven months, and they feel it has been a great aid to the spiritual life of their members.

Following the devotions, the installation of officers was conducted by the retiring president, Mrs. A. G. Simmons, which was a very impressive service. New officers. Mrs. R. E. Pulley, President; Mrs. W. L. Rilee, Vice-President; Mrs. Ada Williams, Secretary; Mrs. F. W. Vaughan, Treasurer; Mrs. W. H. Baker, Pianist; Mrs. J. J. Baker, Superintendent of Spiritual Life.

New captains for the circles were appointed and three new members were received.

The delegates to the Missionary Conference reently held at Christian Temple, gave excellent reports, which were enjoyed by all.

The Society decided to make and sell soup, Friday, October 25th, to raise their C. M. A. membership.

Ways and means of raising their apportionment for this year was discussed with quite a number of suggestions, some of which will be tried out later.

This first meeting of the new year was full of enthusiasm, and with the installation of the new officers they feel they have taken on new life and are looking forward to their best year.

EVERY WOMAN A WITNESS.

(The address of Mrs. John G. Truitt, acting chairman, delivered before the Woman's Missionary Conference of Eastern Virginia, recently held in the Christian Temple.)

Our Conference theme is Jesus' command: "Go preach my Gospel." I desire to challenge each of us to obey that command. Or as I have styled it: Every Woman A Witness.

I.

It is interesting to see how God has built up His witnesses. In the first pages of the Bible we find stones being used as witnesses. And we can see how they would make very good witnesses. They would tell the same story all the way through. They would be unchangeable, ever present, truthful. We see their witnessing carried over into our modern day in the instance of marking the boundary of our farms, or counties, or states. They are steadfast, immovable, everlasting. They are the first witnesses in the Bible. A very striking case is that found in Joshua 24:27, "Behold this stone shall be a witness . . . it hath heard all the words of the Lord." May you and I be as good witnesses. May we hear every word the Lord speaks to us.

II.

Perhaps even more beautiful is the next witness we find coming into use in the Bible. I like it. It is not as cold as stone. It has a transient, poetic, vibrating, beauty which the stone, sturdy and glorious as it is, can never have. In Deuteronomy 31:21 we find: "And it shall come to pass, when many evils and troubles have befallen them, that this song shall testify for them as a witness." Is not that wonderful to go from a stone to a song, as God's witness. What good witnessing has been done with good singing! Music should ever be used as a witness for God. The life of every good woman of us should be as a beautiful song. Our lives should be a poetic expression of the goodness and beauty of God. God chose a great witness when he chose a song to witness for him. How it steals into our hearts, and draws us near to him; strengthens us for duty, and helps us bear the burdens of the day. Music can be understood in every clime, in palatial home, or tiny hovel, nor is it bound by the barrier of language. Would it not be nice to think of every woman of us as ready and efficient to carry God's message to the ends of the earth as a song. Do you remember what our Scripture verse said: "When many evils and troubles have befallen them, this song shall be my witness." Well, many evils and troubles have already befallen the men, women, and children all across the world. May we do our share to have a song comfort them, witness for them!

"Jesus, Lover of my soul,
Let me to Thy bosom fly,
While the nearer waters roll,
While the tempest still is high!"

III.

But God did not stop with a stone, nor a song as a witness. He commanded His people Israel: "Take this Book of the Law and put it in the side of the ark of the covenant of the Lord your God that it may be a witness before you." How striking that is. Joshua said of the stone, "It hath heard all the words of the Lord," and you and I know that God's Book does indeed contain the words of the Lord, therefore, we must conclude to witness for God one must have heard, or had His word! The Bible, says God, shall be my witness! It has God's word and expresses his will. Do we have God's word? Do we express His will. Every woman a witness, because they know God's word, because they read God's word, because they obey God's word, and make it their daily counsel and guide.

And there is a further suggestion just here. Our duty to the peoples of the earth who do not have and know God's word. His word is his witness, but how can it be so unless they have it. If they know nothing of it, it cannot witness for them. Do we realize that as we study about them in our local societies, as we learn to wisely give unto them through our treasuries that we are helping to cause God's word to be their witness? The Bible means so much to us. It is a part of our very life. We know so much of it from memory. And it comforts and strengthens us so easily and regularly that we just take it for granted. But suppose we had never heard of it, never had its blessings, our parents had never known it, and our civilization had not been built upon it. How poor we would be! It is our duty to give it to others, and thus make every woman a witness.

IV.

It seems to me that the stone, the song, and the Bible would make a very fine trinity of witnesses, for in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word shall be established. But God does not stop there! He reminds us in Isaiah 19:19 of a great nation in distress; we hear their cry for help; and their plea for a Saviour and a great one to deliver them. And another witness is given. And how great is that witness: "In that day there shall be an altar to the Lord in the midst of the land of Egypt . . . and it shall be for a sign and a witness unto the Lord of hosts in the land of Egypt; for they shall cry unto the Lord because of the oppression and He shall send them a Saviour, and a great one, and He shall deliver them." An altar to the Lord shall be a witness! It is so true for you and me, and yet can we realize that millions of God's oppressed ones throughout the world are crying out to God for a Saviour, and a great one, to deliver them? Do we realize that in their midst an altar to the Lord is not found? God says, "In that day there shall be an altar to the Lord in the midst of the land." Are you and I hearing all the words of God, and doing them? Are our churches, our societies, our men and women hearing this inescapable challenge to erect in every land and in every community, yea, in every home an altar unto the Lord?

"Altar" brings to our minds two things: Prayer. We believe in prayer. How well it serves us. And we are taught to pray one for another. We are also taught to "ask of Me the heathen for an inheritance" and I suspect we all do that to a certain extent. But we have so greatly emphasized the fact that the altar means prayer, that we have overlooked the other fact that the altar means sacrifice. Our great Woman's Conference has only come where it is today by virtue of the prayers, yes, and the sacrificial services of scores who have loved its cause and its Christ. Greater things are to be done. It will take the altar as a witness in our midst. And that witness will call us to our secret places of prayer. And that altar will call each of us to some real sacrifice for our Christ and his missionary enterprise over the earth.

V.

Well, how many more witnesses will God give? A stone, a song, the Book of the Law, the altar unto the Lord, four, yes, and there is a fifth. Are you familiar with that most beautiful chapter which begins: "Ho, everyone that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye, and buy wine and milk without money and without price!" What a missionary message! And do you know that it is in that self-same chapter that we have that treasure of our own hearts: "Seek ye the Lord while He may be found, call ye upon Him while He is near; let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his evil thoughts: and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon Him; and to our God for He will abundantly pardon him." It is one of the most sublime chapters of the Bible,—the 55th of Isaiah. We would expect to find a great witness in it, and indeed, we do, for God is speaking of Jesus,—His suffering Servant. Listen to what he says: "Behold, I have Him (Jesus) for a witness for the people, and Leader and a Commander to the people." Jesus a witness! God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." God gave Jesus for a witness, upon His witnessing altar! The Lamb that was slain for the world! "Behold, I have given Him for a Witness."

VI.

But the end is not yet! It would surely seem that the stone,—"Jesus is a Rock in a weary land," "the Rock of Ages,"—the song, Jesus is a song, "He is become my song," saith the Scriptures; the Word of God, Jesus is the Word, and he became flesh and dwelt among us; Jesus is the altar and the slain Lamb upon it,—it would seem that these would be sufficient, but Jesus has included you and me, and every one of us, by giving us His great command to preach his Gospel everywhere to everybody! He says, "Ye shall be my witnesses both in Jerusalem and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth." In other words every woman is to be a witness,—firm and faithful as stone, sweet and touching as song, filled with the Word of God, and ready to present her body a living sacrifice upon the altar of service!

Jesus had no hesitancy in giving woman, along with her brethren, that gracious privilege and trust. His first command as the risen Lord was directed to her: "Be not afraid; go tell my brethren." What a message for us! Be not afraid! Go tell my brethren all across the world that I will meet them in their appointed places! And in the closing Book of the Bible the eleventh chapter, He says, "And I will give power unto my . . . witnesses." If we desire the strength of his beautiful presence we must obey His command. and be every woman a witness.

"Wherefore, seeing we are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus the Author and Finisher of our faith."

MRS. J. G. TRUITT.

A SURE ROAD TO VICTORY.

By JOHN CLARENCE PETRIE.

A Personal Testimony to the Efficacy of Daily Communion with God in Silent Meditation.

I have just run across a very significant bit of writing on the subject of prayer in a book written by a Catholic priest intended for the instruction of priests and seminarians of the Roman Catholic Church. It is called "The Spiritual Life" and its author is Father Adolphe Tanquerey of "The Necessity of Mental Prayer," or, as Protestants more frequently call it, meditation. After stating that mental prayer is not necessary for the salvation of most Christians, Tanquerey writes as follows:

"Meditation, however, is most useful and most profitable to all for salvation and perfection; to beginners as well as to more advanced souls. It may even be said that it is the most effective means of assuring one's salvation. . . This is the teaching of St. Alphonsus, who gives the following reason, that, whilst habitually practicing the other exercises of piety, like the Rosary, the Little Office of the Blessed Virgin, fasting, etc., one may, unfortunately, still continue to live in mortal sin, whilst the habitual practice of mental prayer cannot suffer one to remain long in such a state. One either relinquishes mental prayer or one relinquishes sin."

In explaining this the Pere Tanquerey does not exempt priests, who are obliged by Canon Law to recite their breviary daily as well as to mount by custom the altar each morning to celebrate mass. On the contrary, priests are warned that daily meditation is a moral necessity.

The importance of this witness becomes evident if the Catholic language is translated into that of Protestantism. In place of the Rosary, the Little Office of the Blessed Virgin, fasting, let there be substituted attendance at church services, reading of theological periodicals, belonging to church societies, reading the Bible, forming strong opinions in the matter of religion and theology. It is obvious that ministers and laymen can do all these things, good in themselves, and yet remain in that state of soul described by Catholics as the state of mortal sin. What minister has not known that among his faithful churchgoers were men living in adultery, women dealing in destruction of the good names of others, employers paying unjust wages, practicing unfair business tactics?

I once knew a poor wretch of an Anglo-Catholic parson who daily went through a whole list of pious practices, reading faithfully morning and evening prayer from the Prayer Book, saying his daily mass, kneeling for fifteen minutes before mass to read preparatory prayers, and another fifteen minutes after to read thanksgiving prayers, abstaining from meat on Fridays, fasting during Lent, going without any food at all for twenty-four hours on Ash Wednesday and Good Friday. He scorned his clerical brethren who omitted any of these exercises. But he was living in the state of mortal sin already alluded to. His prayers and fastings and exercises were just external observations. He could go through them without having actual communion with God at all.

Mental prayer, meditation, the Silence, to use the Quaker name for it, or Quiet Time, as it is called by the Oxford Group, is an entirely different matter. Here one has no forms to place between himself and the voice of conscience. He leaps at once into the presence of the Eternal. He knows the Searcher of hearts is looking straight into his soul. He cannot talk to that God, or wait while that God speaks to him, if he has on his soul unforgiven sin. If he is in culpable debt, if he is dealing unjustly, if he is the victim of sex habits, of drink, drugs, or other vice, he will know at once that his sin is a complete barrier between him and God. The man who sets himself to give some time each day to real communion with God will inevitably and infallibly be moved to give up evil in his life. He would go mad trying to meet God each day and seeing that looming partition between him and the Infinite One. He would have to run screaming from his place of prayer if he did not eventually give in.

That is one reason for the great results the Oxford Group is having. Its converts set aside a time each day for quiet listening to God, asking him to guide them in the way they shall spend their day, what they shall do with their lives. When I hear parsons ask indignantly, "What has the Oxford Group got that the church has not?" I answer "Nothing." It is simply reviving something that the church has tended to forget; what Father Tanquerey tells his Catholics, what any of us Protestants must know if we stop to reflect for a moment. Indeed, is it not the constant scandal, why church people are not better Christians?

If there is one single reader of this little article who is suffering from some inner defeat, something that is a direct contradiction of his Christian profession, it is my promise that if he will carry on, devote a quarter or a half hour each day to silent communion with God, he will drive that contradiction from his life and turn the defeat into victory. I speak not only from my own experience but from what I am seeing in the lives of others who have taken this word seriously. No man who perseveres in prayer can be lost.—Zion's Herald.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

Rev. F. C. Lester, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

STATE-WIDE YOUTH CONFERENCE.

Winston-Salem Ministers' Association is sponsoring one of the series of National Conferences arranged by the Joint Committee on United Youth Program. Twelve such conferences will be held simultaneously during the Thanksgiving week-end, November 29th to December 1st. This is the first time in the history of Youth work that all national organizations working with young people have cooperated in a common program. This common approach makes for a more effective work and for a united appeal to the young people of the churches.

This conference will bring together young people from all communions of North Carolina, and outstanding speakers and discussion leaders, among whom we hope to have Dr. Robert E. Speer; Dr. Jesse M. Bader, Secretary of Evangelism Federal Council of Churches of Christ of America; Dr. Francis P. Gaines, Washington and Lee University; Dr. Donald Stewart, Presbyterian Church, Chapel Hill; Dr. Hickman, Duke University; Dr. M. E. Sadler, Lynchburg College; Dr. E. McNeil Poteat, Raleigh, N. C.; Dr. Ray G. Jordan, Centenary Church, Winston-Salem; and Prof. E. R. Groves, University of North Carolina.

We are inviting each local church to send as delegates two young people between the ages of 16 and 25, and one adult advisor and the pastor. Registration fee will be one dollar per delegate. Entertainment will be furnished in Winston-Salem homes for lodging and breakfast. The banquet on Friday night will be served for a nominal sum.

The program will include discussions built around the New Person, New Home, New Church, New Community, New Nation, and New World. The delegates will have a chance not only to hear the speakers on these subjects, but to join in discussions and get the youth reaction.

We are anxious that all young people shall share in the blessings of this conference. Will you see that your group is represented? We suggest that your church choose the delegates and pay the dollar registration fee.

Teachers and others will want to avail themselves of the opportunity this school offers, sponsored by the Christian churches of Nansemond County.

WINDOWS OF THE SOUL.

Let there be many windows in your soul,
That all the glory of the universe
May beautify it. Not the narrow pane of one poor creed can catch the radiant rays that shine from countless sources. Tear away
The blinds of superstition. Let the light
Pour through fair windows, broad as truth itself,
And high as heaven . . . Tune your ear
To all the wordless music of the stars,
And to the voice of Nature; and your heart
Shall turn to truth and goodness as the planet
Turns to the sun. A thousand unseen hands
Reach down to help you to their peace-crowned heights;
And all the forces of the firmament
Shall fortify your strength. Be not afraid
To thrust aside half-truth and grasp the whole.

Points for talks—

The World War cost us thirty-nine billion dollars. We are paying for it now. We will continue to pay for it for many years to come. Still, the cost in dollars is nothing compared to the loss counted in human values. Think of the 10,000,000 soldiers who were known to lose their lives in the World War; besides all the other people who suffered as a result of the War—the people who died from famine, air raids, exposure, submarine attacks and many other causes. Families of the soldiers were suffering, wondering if their boy would go through the next battle or if his place would be marked by a cross on Flanders Field. No woman or child is safe from the fumes of war. It has been estimated that 5,000,000 women were left widows and there were 9,000,000 war orphans. Was the war worth the suffering it cost these millions of people?

But where one man was killed during the war there were hundreds who suffered wounds, gas and shell shock. Today if you visit the army hospitals they will reveal the suffering endured by those who have endured a thousand deaths—but are still living, even though instant death on the battlefield would have been preferred. These men fought for their country, and seventeen years after the signing of the Armistice they are still fighting for life—some of them are mentally deranged, unbalanced, nerves shattered—there is no hope of permanent recovery.

Some of the men who are lucky enough to survive the war return home to find their jobs gone—the vocation they have spent years learning no longer open to them. War destroys civilization. Achievements of centuries are torn down almost instantly. Cities completely destroyed—carrying with them great works of art, architecture, millions of dollars worth of property.

If we are to save the youth of the world for the finer things of life the people of the nations must come to realize that Jesus Christ is the Prince of Peace—He came to save humanity, not to destroy it—and only when men find the spirit of brotherhood and love as He revealed it, and teach it to his fellowman will there be no more wars.

Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

JUDAH TAKEN CAPTIVE.

Lesson V—November 3, 1935.

Golden Text: "Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people."—Prov. 14:34.

Lesson: II Kings 24:1-25:21.

Today's lesson is primarily a historical lesson, but it is none the less interesting and none the less spiritual on that account. For as someone has said, "History is simply His Story." Of course this is true in a special way in the life of the Hebrew people. Their national life is the story of God's unfolding purpose, and of His dealings with them. In deed the unique place of the Hebrew people as a race and as a nation is due to the special dealings of God with them. It was through this race that God was able to reveal Himself, and to unfold His purpose in a peculiar way. The fact that Christ himself was a Jew is significant. Anyone who reads the Old Testament will readily see that Old Testament history is His Story.

The lesson for today deals with a great crisis in the life of the Hebrew nation. Some one hundred and thirty-five years before the time of today's lesson, the Northern Kingdom had been carried into captivity. Since that time Judah had had a varied and checkered career. At times she had been very prosperous, and at times things were not so well. Under certain kings and leaders she had instituted reforms and had attained some measure of national righteousness; under other kings she had forsaken God and had gone after other Gods, and moral and spiritual disintegration had attacked her from within. Again and again the prophets disclosed their sin, preached reform and warned against the inevitable doom and the coming judgment. But alas, the nation as such gave little heed to the prophets, and even such reforms as were instituted, were short-lived and not thorough-going.

Thus it was that in 597 B. C., Nebuchadnezzar, at the end of his patience at the rebellion and the perfidity of the kingdom of Judah, came up and forced Jehoiakim to pay tribute to him. At the end of three years Jehoiakim rebelled against Nebuchadnezzar and that was the beginning of the end. Jehoiachin, the son of Jehoiakim, reigned for only three months, when he rebelled against Nebuchadnezzar. The Babylonians came up and again beseiged Jerusalem, captured Jehoiachin and the royal family, carried away the treasures of the house of the Lord, and also carried into captivity the majority and the best of the people. "None remained save the poorest sort of the people of the land" reads the record.

Nebuchadnezzar placed Zedekiah on the throne —such as it was— and like so many of his predecessors, Zedekiah did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord. He also did that which was foolish in the sight of Nebuchadnezzar, for he rebelled against this powerful king. This time Nebuchadnezzar went at the throne with a vengeance. He finally took Jerusalem, captured the king and his sons, put out the eyes of the former and killed the latter, broke down the walls of Jerusalem, burnt the house of the Lord, and carried into captivity all except the very poor of the land. This was in 586 B. C. and this date marks the end of the Jewish nation as a nation.

"So Judah was carried away out of their Land" —thus reads the epitaph of the nation as a nation. It is a somber record and sad end to a nation that had had such high privileges, and such large opportunities.

In all this mass of details there are a number of striking and timeless truths. They will be presented briefly in statements rather than in developed form.

1. The wages of sin is death for a nation as well as for an individual.

2. The way of the transgressor is hard.

3. Lack of religion in leaders and in those in high places is dangerous to a nation.

4. Large privilege or opportunity means heavy responsibility.

5. God exempts no nation from the moral consequences of its own acts.

6. The security of a nation rests upon the integrity of its people and the vitality of its religion.

7. Evil has the power to project itself upon succeeding generations.

8. God warns those who are bent on doing evil.

9. God uses nations, even nations that know Him not, to work out His purposes.

10. Divine judgment sometimes moves slowly, but it invariably comes.

11. Sin causes men and nations to forfeit the highest values.

12. God plays no favorites. He is no respecter of persons or nations.

JOHN WESLEY.

mob this quiet little man never lost his perfect self-possession, and invariably he was master of the crowd. Again and again he cowed or quieted hostile crowds, and not only preached to them, but actually won them to the gospel. And one of the brightest pages of Methodist history has been written by Wesley's lay preachers, who endured all kinds of calumny and outrage, not because they were cowards, but because they wanted to manifest the spirit of Christ toward those who would do them wrong. If there were time and space, instance after instance could be presented that would stir the blood in any man's veins.

And alas, Wesley and his lay preachers suffered much opposition at the hands of the Church of his day. Not only were these men not allowed to preach in the churches, but a veritable flood of Anti-Methodist pamphlets and books were published and widely circulated, and practically all of them by Churchmen. But except for three or four of the most flagrant, Wesley did not deem them of sufficient importance to demand a personal reply. In these instances, while Wesley used all the legitimate weapons of a writer, he always kept his writings on a high plane, and in a friendly spirit. He refused to allow personal pique to have any part in his discussions of the questions at issue. But his opponents were not always so courteous.

"WHAT PASSETH AWAY?"

"Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away."—Mark 13:31.

The important thing in life is truth. Underneath the seen and passing things, here and now and in our midst is that truth—a world of unseen reality. Heaven lies about us everywhere all our days. These things, say the Scriptures, "shall be changed." But if they do change the unseen realities of truth make it possible for us to walk through them day by day with heads lifted above the mists. His Word (Truth) calls us to be eternal beings in the world of time, and, as so well expressed by Hastings comment, "The real test of the use of life is what life leaves us when as has passed away."

Prayer—Our Father, Giver of every good gift, and Blesser of every soul, enable us to look deep enough in life to catch a vision of the eternal. This we ask for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"A CHRISTIAN'S FIRST LESSON."

"Present thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed."—II Tim. 2:15.

Hosea Ballou said, "We must not only read the Scriptures; but we must make their rules of life our own."

The first thing of importance to an employee is to know his job, and the second (and not less) is to please his employer in the execution of his job. This is a homely, crude and possibly incompetent illustration, but it represents truly the plain fact of conversion, consecration and service in Christian living and the Kingdom of God.

The first offense that Jesus ever gave the people was the homeliness of Christianity. They said, "Why, he is only a carpenter's son." They refused to recognize anything which grew out of mean surroundings. And yet these surroundings were truth and were life. Life on earth is body as well as soul, and we are born with feet in order that we may work on earth, and it is in such homely surroundings we get our first ideal of the Divine Life, and it is in the plain things of life where work is with men in the marts and the market places every day where we start our souls heaven-bound.

Prayer—O Jesus, draw very near to us this day. Make us to feel Thee as a Brother, a living, breathing man, touched with all the feelings of our infirmities. Make Thy Gospel, in its simplicity, an abiding light; and Jesus, to our souls, a living power. This we ask for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"THE SEEN INTERPRETS THE UNSEEN."

"For the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made."—Rom. 1:20.

"All visible things," said Carlyle, "are emblems." Emblems of what? Let the poet answer:

"When love interprets what the eye discerns,
When mind discovers what is really meant,
When grace improves what man from Nature learns,
Each sight and sound becomes a sacrament."

—Amen.

Prayer—Our Father, we pray to Thee to be brought as close to the heart and to the secret of things as possible, that our understanding may be clear. Breathe into our souls the mysteries of the eternal and may we pass beyond the outer curtain of what we see into that which is beyond and gaze in wonder and worship.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"LOOKING THROUGH."

"The things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal."—II Cor. 4:18.

The apostle looked on things temporal as not looking on them but through them and through them seeing the eternal. Everything to him was a revelation of God and a medium of training, exercise and access to God. The value of things to Paul was not in what they are but in what they signify.

Prayer—Our Father, we live with things as Thou dost know. Enable us to live in them as seeing the invisible, and in all life's works and ways, to act through into the grand realities of the life of our Lord and His Kingdom to come.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"COMPREHENSIVE CHRISTIANITY."

"All are yours; and ye are Christ's and Christ is God's."—I Cor. 3:23.

The following is taken from Cambridge Mediæval History:

"From the first Christianity had proclaimed that the whole life of man belonged to it. This meant everything that made man's life wider, deeper, fuller; whatever made it more joyous or contented; whatever sharpened the brain, strengthened and taught the muscles, gave full play to man's energies, could be taken up into and become part of the Christian life. Sin and foulness were sternly excluded; but, that done, there was no element of the Graeco-Roman civilization which could not be appropriated by Christianity. So it assimilated Hellenism or the fine flower and fruit of Greek thought and feeling; it appropriated Roman law and institutions; it made its own the simple festivals of the common people. All were theirs; and they were Christ's and Christ was God's."

"Thank God for life: life is not sweet always,
Hands may be heavy-laden, hearts care-full,
Unwelcome nights follow unwelcome days,
And dreams divine end in awakenings dull.
Still it is life, and life is cause for praise,
This ache, this restlessness, this quickening sting,
Prove me no torpid and inanimate thing,
Prove me of Him who is of life the Spring,
I am alive!—and that is beautiful."

—Susan Coolidge.

Prayer—Our dear Father, if life is so much for us, O Lord, all we should be to it. We render to Thee all that we are today to be just this. In the name of Christ, we ask it.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"FORWARD FACES."

"The set of their faces is forwards."—Habakkuk 1:5-11.

The Chaldeans, about whom Habakkuk prophesied, were a cruel race, but they were a conquering race. They made their conquests because, as the prophet said, they set their faces forward.

The forward face is the secret of success. Confidence is more than half of conquest. Hope is more than half of having. A man who lacks ambition lacks steam in his engine, lacks speed in his car, lacks a breeze for his sails. The future and not the present, still less the past, is the home of the achieving soul.

We shall set our faces forward if we march with Jesus Christ. Right onward was His life, not a backward step. Right onward is the progress of His true church through the ages. What zest, what joy, in a life lived with Him!

Prayer—So forgive our falterings, Supreme Leader. Put an end to our foolish fears. And make us to know that we can do all things, if we are only with Thee.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

SUNDAY.

"SOME DAY, THE TORRENT."

"The rain descended, and the floods came."—Matt. 7:24-27.

The Sermon on the Mount, which begins with blessing, ends with disaster. In that it is like many a life, which starts out in hope and ends in disaster. How many a home is reared rejoicingly, expecting all prosperity and happiness, but at the end the rain and the floods, and the house is swept away!

We may be very sure that if we build the mansion of our destiny upon the sands, in the course of a winter torrent, the winter of our lives will bring the torrent. It may be postponed through a glowing summer and a golden autumn, but it comes as certainly as the revolution of the earth around the sun.

Blessed is the soul that looks ahead. Blessed is the soul that sees the torrents from afar and gets well out of the way of them. Blessed is the life that is reared on the one firm foundation.

Prayer—Thou shalt be our base, O God. To Thee will we fasten our hopes. On Thee will we erect our plans. And they shall never be overthrown.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

RESTFUL ACTIVITY.

Restlessness never means effectiveness. The men and women in the world who are really accomplishing most are those who have learned to work in quietness of spirit. The motor engine that makes the most noise is not the most powerful. The engine that runs smoothly and quietly does not waste its strength in friction and rattle, but uses all its strength for driving purposes. In secular life, the greatest business organizations are almost certain to have at their head some one who has learned to work quietly, without worry or strain. So a man who knew God well and had learned the secret wrote: "The same repose of spirit should be maintained by the believer in his work. Composure of soul is not indolence nor sluggish indifference. On the contrary, it is the best preparation for swift and telling action. It does not quench enthusiasm, but gives it steadiness and self-possession. The believer should do his work with strenuous endeavor and tireless tenacity, but without friction of mind and spirit. 'He that believeth shall not make haste.' (Isa. 28:16.)"

Rev. John G. Truitt, D. D., Pastor.

SEEKING TO EXCEL.

By John G. Truitt.

"Seek that ye may excel, to the edifying of the church."—I Cor. 14:12.

It is great advice coming from Paul, isn't it? From him we like to take it. "Seek to excel." Whoever did it more himself and is therefore more entitled to a hearing? What was it he ever undertook and in it did not try to excel. If it were in the Jerusalem university, and at Gamaliel's feet he would seek to excel; likewise, if it were as a member of the sect of the Pharisees, and therefore trying to crush out the Jesus movement he would still seek to excel; if it were as one who waited in solitude in some far off desert for final guidance for his great life, even in that he would seek to excel. And when it came to preaching Christ, and him crucified, none greater has ever been found. It is a thought worth our emphasizing here in this holy place as we worship God, is it not? "Seek to excel."

For what reason though should one seek to excel? Paul answers that question. "Seek to excel to the edifying of the church." Paul desires the building up and strengthening of the church. And Paul is not speaking of its walls, but its works; not its quarried stones, but its living stones; not its pillars, but its people. Our walls əɹǝʃdɯoɔ sı ɟuǝɯɹdɯbə ɹno 'qƃnouə əuɟ əɹɐ enough, but is our program great enough? Are our people good enough? Is our faith strong enough? Our living noble enough? And our hopes and dreams high enough? Paul is saying, "Seek that ye may excel" in bringing these things to pass amongst you.

Paul was a fighter, every inch of him game, active, alert, heroic. To him what could be more exasperating than to see someone in the team trifling with his opportunity, wrecking his game, and losing the battle because he was putting no fight into it. In our games today here in our high school a team-mate who tries that is soon taken out of the game. If he is not taken out he retards the team, loses the game, and disgraces himself and his school. It is a parable of life whether on the ball field, or in the work-a-day world, in the home, or in the church, we are team-mates with one another, and yoke-fellows of the Christ!

There are more than three hundred places inside this church organization calling for a special type of work, to say nothing of the places where one can seek to excel in building up the church from outside the church. In preparation for this sermon I asked myself the question: How many places of some specific trust, such as being a deacon or a church secretary, are there in this church? By a little investigation I was myself surprised to see how many such places there were. Over three hundred of them.

It takes fifty people to make up our two choirs. What great choirs they should be! How each and every member of those two choirs should seek to excel for the building up of the church! Theirs is a very great opportunity. Their work is important, very important, and cannot be taken for granted, but must be taken as a sacred trust and a gift from God. And so on down the line, and up the line, and across the line we might go until our fifty became more than three hundred. A dozen or more deacons, especially entrusted with the spiritual welfare of the church,—a sort of pastor's cabinet, a group of counsellors. Paul's message to them today is "Seek that ye may excel to the edifying of the church,"—to the building up of the church. Not a week should pass in which an active deacon has not done some very definite piece of work for his church.

Then there is that large group of Sunday School teachers and officers,—more than seventy-five of them who have been given a most sacred trust. God bless the teachers of Christianity to the boys and girls of America. God bless the teachers of Christ to the children of the world! Did you know that there were forty million boys and girls in the United States between the years of 4 and 18? And that half of them now receive no Christian teaching? How every Sunday School teacher in America should seek to excel to the building up of the church! What will it mean to have between 15 and 20 million children grow up to manhood and womanhood in America without any Sunday School or religious instruction? Our crop of crime has only begun to grow if we leaders in every local church upon the face of our fair land do not awake to our duty, and seek to excel for Christ and the church.

There are various valuable, and needed organizations and organized classes in this church, each with their several places of especial duty and preferment? Are you given one of those sacred trusts? Have you been handed by your fellows a portfolio of faith? Are you alive and wide awake to the demands of the office or obligation? And can the church count on your seeking to excel in that place?

I like to contemplate this though of seeking to excel in the sacred trusts given one for it helps to put me on my mettle. I say to myself those men and women and young people are not paid to do the work demanded of them, and therefore if I do only the work I am paid to do, or can reasonably expect to "get by" with, then I am not doing what Paul is preaching to me, namely, "seek that ye may excel to the edifying of the church." There is nothing excellent about that. Our work for the Christ must not count the cost, but must go beyond and above, or we are "unprofitable servants" indeed! For was it not the Christ himself who taught the lesson of going the "second mile," and of "giving the inner-coat also."

To Christ was given a sacred trust. He had temptations like as we do. But he did not let the temptations take hold of him. He thrust them aside as unworthy and evil, and when all others had stopped "he went yet a little further." We will be tempted to let other things come between us and our duty, but we must not yield to them. Christ went on and on, even to the cross for us. The happiness and joy which is our today, the sunlight of love and brotherhood which is ours, as be-clouded as it may sometimes seem to be, is all a result of his work then through his own person, and now through his church. When we "seek that we may excel" to the building up of his church we are carrying on for him, and showing our love to him and our appreciation of the blessings which he brought.

So let me congratulate every worker in our church, and let me beg each one to be a worker, vieing with one another, that we may each do our very best, for in that lies the joy of work well done, and a spiritual impact upon our lives which we can never fully estimate.

There is a lost world to be saved and not merely an ignorant world to be educated.—Anon.

Rugged strength, and radiant beauty—
These are one in nature's plan;
Humble toil and heavenward duty—
These will form the perfect man.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

The conference year ends with October. The Conference Apportionments are probably in hand to go up to Conference. We trust all churches will go up in full.

The Christian Orphanage does not share in the Conference Apportionments and never has shared in them. It has always been supported by Sunday School monthly offerings, Special Thanksgiving offerings, and individual donations. In other words, it is supported by loving gifts prompted by loving hearts that want to see to it that the little children who are in the Christian Orphanage have a happy home and a chance to grow up and make good citizens. We have the finest group of children in the orphanage that we have ever had at any one time. Fine boys and girls. We trust that each church will do its best this year to make the Thanksgiving Offering as large as possible. The income this year has fallen far short of meeting the expense account. Many things we have had to buy have greatly increased in price and while we have cut every expense we could possibly cut the income was not sufficient to meet it. Let every church begin now to talk "Special Thanksgiving Offerings" and let every member lend a helping hand to swell the offerings to large amounts so at the end of the year we can balance off with our balance on the ledger not in the red.

A helpless child, homeless and dependent, should have the love and sympathy of every man, woman and child.

We should all be willing to give a part of what the Lord has blessed us with so they too, may have a home, food and clothes. If we would think and place ourselves in their place, I believe we would give freely—and happy to do it.

"FOUR ACES—TEN HIGH."

After the doctor had bandaged up the wounds and rushed the injured parties to the hospital, two of us looked in the cars to see if any belongings had been left there that might be taken by the curious or those minded to steal. In the back of one were a few magazines, a candy package, and a package of whiskey labeled Four Aces, whatever that is, and about half the contents had been used. In the other car were found a half dozen broken pop bottles and another package from a nearby liquor store marked Ten High—and these were the only clues the officials had as to what caused the wreck. And, of course, the whiskey was okeyed by the state and nation—and that was all right, as it had the sanction of both state and nation, and officers made no noise about the legal whiskey. But the results were seen in one of the worst wrecks on the principal highways of our state.

Alcoholic beverage control! Looks more like an Abominal Butchery Conflict, if you will get out on the highways and look. The most violated law of the state is our road laws. I travel the whole of the state east of Raleigh from Wilmington to the Virginia line and keep a check on things as I go, and I know it gets worse every day. Instead of those great A. B. C. stores doing such wonders, they have just doubled the amount of whiskey that can be purchased. They are open from morning to 6 P. M. and allow no drinking, but the bootlegger is open at night, and doubles things up.

Is there no remedy to be found? God save us if there is not. There is no such thing as "control" for liquor—anybody knows that—but there could be a remedy for the highways, drunken drivers and road hogs. That sentence meted out by a judge down in Hertford the other day is the thing. A jail sentence, with permission to work the man on the road—a stiff fine and removal of his license. That's the thing.—J. Vincent Knight in N. C. Christian Advocate.

OBITUARIES

SCOTT.

Sister Leola Scott departed this life September 27, 1935. She was 53 years of age, the mother of seven children. One son and one daughter preceded her in death. The five living children were all present at the funeral.

Sister Scott was a true and faithful member of Lanett Christian Church until her health failed. Her husband died some years ago and she was left to care for and protect her little family by hard work and sacrifice.

She was a patient sufferer, but when the end came she was submissive to the Lord and went out to meet him in perfect peace.

God bless the bereaved children and other relatives and friends.

G. D. HUNT.

COOK.

Elizabeth Cook departed this life Oct. 14th at the age of 86 year. She leaves to mourn her departure four boys and one girl. Two daughters preceded her in death aud a goodly number of grand and great-grandchildren mourn her going. "Granny" Cook as she was familiarly called, had many friends and all who knew her loved her. She was always kind and cousiderate of her loved ones. In fact her life was almost entirely spent for the benefit of others. Such sacrifice is rarely seen in this age of the world. She gave herself unreservedly to her task. Some two years ago she fell and dislocater her hip and she was a cripple the remainder of her life. She was ready and really anxious to go and went peacefully to sleep.

"Safe in the arms of Jesus, safe on His gentle breast." Those who attended her in her last days were impressed with her quiet, humble disposition. It surely must have been a joy to wait on this old saint of God. Her last days were spent in the home of her son, whose family gave her all needed attention.

God bles them and all the bereaved ones and may they all be ready to meet their mother on the other shore.

"Thou art gone our precious mother,
Here thy loss we keenly feel,
But 'tis God who has bereft us,
He can all our sorrows heal."

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

Heating the Outdoors.—

Among the new kinks on the market, is a "soil heating kit" for florists and market gardeners. It may be plugged into any convenient outlet and will automatically maintain a predetermined soil temperature. While too expensive in operation for general use, the lower costs of electricity will make its use a possibility in forcing plants for special occasions.

Dividing the Excess Wealth.—

"It may interest you to know that in 1933 there were only 962 persons in the United States enjoying a net income in excess of $150,000. If all of that excess were distributed among the 126,000,000 persons in the United States each would receive 15 cents a month."—Representative James W. Wadsworth of New York.

An Old Old Universe!—

The British astronomer, Sir James Jeans, has recently found out that the universe is quite a bit older than previous estimates had made it. Indeed, it may be 100 times or possibly 1,000 times older. He thinks that it is certainly 10,000,000,000,000 years old, and a contemporary remarks that this "is a ripe old age, even for a universe." Anyway, what are a few ciphers more or less among friends?

Sidewalks to Reduce Accidents.—

The State of Massachusetts will attack the motor traffic accident-to-pedestrian problem from a new angle. After a study of the situation, it has been decided to hook up the relief problem with the building of sidewalks along the highways, and $4,000,000 state relief funds have been allocated for this purpose. From 500 to 1,000 miles of walk is to be constructed, varying from 2-foot paths to walkways eight feet wide. While the problem would be a bigger one for the larger and less densely populated states, they might do well to consider the question of sidewalks alongside of the most traveled highways.

Why the Dollar and Not the Pound?—

It would seem only natural that the American Government should have adopted the English pound as its basis of currency. It is possible that the reason the dollar was adopted instead was because of the trade carried on with the West Indies before the Revolution. The dollar was the unit of trade between the colonies and these islands and became generally known in America. By the coinage act passed on April 2, 1792, it was legalized and established as a unit of American currency. Eleven years before this, Robert Morris, greatest of Revolutionary financiers and first treasurer of the United States, was instructed by Congress to devise a national coinage system. Yet it was not his suggestions, but those of Thomas Jefferson which were finally approved, giving us the decimal monetary system which we use today.

"The League Stands Fast."—

Above the flow and backmash of detail today on a hundred aspects of the attempt of the Italian imperialism to triumph over a primitive people, one truth is plain to see: The League of Nations will not surrender. Disdained by America, flouted by Japan and spurned by Germany, the League shows a purpose, a vitality, and a determination that few credited it. Collective economic sanctions remain to be tested; collective moral sanctions, formulated by the league, are being enforced. . . . Such co-ordination of effort seemed impossible a year ago. Men were preaching the funeral sermon of the League then. Today they realize that if this league fails, another must be built on its foundation. It has taken the threat of war to show the strength of devotion to peace. —Editorial in Richmond News Leader.

King George Comes Back.—

Twelve years ago King George II of Greece abdicated by request. This week an overwhelming flood of monarchist ballots brought him back to his throne. Large majorities were reported both in Athens and in the various provinces. Even Crete, hotbed of revolt in former days, showed a majority for the return of the king. In the city of Athens official results showed 138,885 votes for restoration of the monarchy and only 1,930 against it. Salonika voted for restoration 124,449; against restoration, 2,877. The Peloponnesus polled more than 90 votes of every hundred for the king. The voting was said to be quiet and orderly, but as the results were announced in Athens the city took on a gala appearance, with parades thronging the streets and church bells ringing.

Armistice Day, 1935.—

The Armistice celebration of 1935 comes with a fierce war in full progress. As we write this it is with a prayer that some understanding may be reached that will dispel the threat of a world war, which is now hovering over the entire earth in a more menacing cloud than in the bitter years of 1914 when the storm devastated homes as far from Serbia as the United States and Japan. One is appalled at his helplessness. The calls have come from organizations to promote programs in the interest of peace. We have printed the calls and we are in sympathy with them. We urge their observance. We also know that when the ambitions of nations are stirred, when the hate of men is aroused and when the enthusiasm for conquest is fomented by propaganda, Mars like a giant stalks forth and crushes all opposition. Armistice Day this year will find a world tense and ready to consider every problem suggested by the return of the anniversary of the closing of the great war.—Editorial in Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

Love Apples for Health.—

The present age might be designated as the Vitamin Age, and in the program of the vitamins, the tomato plays an important part. Time was, however, as most grandparents and many fathers and mothers know, when the much-eaten and drunk tomato was only an ornamental shrub. In those days it was known as the "love apple." George Rector—and he should know—tells us that its reputation as something good "for making the girl friend fall in love with you" was wholly undeserved, for to tell the truth it never was really a love apple at all. The name "being an outrageous example of mistranslation." The story runs thus: The tomato was first introduced into Sicily by the Moors, and the Sicilians called it "pomi di Moro"—or Moor's Apple. Later they were carried to France under that name, and the French mistook the name "pomi di Moro" to be "pomi d'amore" and later when they were imported into England the name, "apples of love," went with them. Possibly their edibility was first discovered by some lover who took a chance on strengthening his claims with Cupid, and thus discovered their deliciousness.

"Nothing Can Stop America."—

The New York Herald-Tribune makes the above quotation a part of a statement by Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., President of General Motors Corporation, and it adds the information that his country is backing his opinion by spending $50,000,000 "in preparation for the opportunities of tomorrow." Mr. Sloan believes that "the people of this country want above everything else an opportunity to work and to accomplish; to recoup their losses; to get back where they were . . . As returning prosperity becomes more widespread, we can definitely count upon a realignment of government economic policy, in the direction of accelerating rather than retarding industrial progress." And he adds: "Many believe because of the long period of industrial depression that we must accept, at least in degree, unemployment of larger numbers of workers as a continuous problem of the future. Hence comes the demand for the subsistence homestead, the 30-hour week, the prohibition of new machinery, acreage reduction —all constituting the 'theory of scarcity.' There is no justification for any such thinking. The facts demonstrate that America has not yet reached the stage of industrial development in which it has the plant or the ability to produce more than its people, as a whole would like to consume."

NOTES-PERSONALS

News from the Churches.

Rev. Joe French, pastor, reports that the best, most hopeful and encouraging service of the year at our Ocean View Church was that of Sunday before the Annual Conference. Under the consecrated leadership of Brother French, this congregation is growing in numbers and in good works.

Our sympathy goes out, as that of a host of Sun readers will, for Rev. R. A. Whitten and family over the very, very serious illness of dear Mrs. Whitten. Her health has been waning since early summer, and as the prospects for recovery grow dim, anxiety for the comfort of the patient increases. Our prayers in behalf of the afflicted.

Rev. F. C. Lester, pastor of the First Christian Church, 505 South Main Street, Norfolk, Va., has been released of his church duties, because of ill health, until the first of the year. If any of our preachers are in Norfolk and free to do so, it will be deeply appreciated, both by Mr. Lester and the church, if they will volunteer to fill the pulpit at one or more services. Communications may be sent to Miss Edna Fulcher, 505 South Main Street, Norfolk, Va.

One of the most interesting and timely reports on religious literature we have heard before Conference was that made by the Chairman, Dr. Elwood W. Jones and his Committee of the Eastern Virginia Conference last week. We are print- this report in another column and trust many readers will take to heart these timely suggestions. The need of The Christian Sun is a longer subscription list and a wider reading, and only personal appeal to individuals not taking and reading The Sun can bring the desired results. Pastors and interested laymen are in position to do this work.

The Western N. C. Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church (South) was in session in Salisbury, N. C., last week and the following interesting statistics were registered: The Conference now numbers 156,087 members, a gain for the year of 1,337. The church school membership is 130,799, a decrease of 14,831 for the year. This decrease is due largely, says the report, if not wholly, to the infantile paralysis scare during the spring and summer. The membership of the Woman's Missionary Society was reported to be 16,774, an increase of 567 over last year.

The hosts of The Sun's editor, while attending the Eastern Virginia Conference last week, were Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Williams and their charming daughter, Miss Dorothy. Other guests of this happy household were Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, Dr. J. W. Manning of our Norfolk Church and Brother Kagey of our Berkeley Church; and if delegates to Conference could be more cordially and happily entertained than we were we would like to read about it. Brother Williams is a valuable member of the Mission Board of the Convention; Mrs. Williams was also a member of this Board and president of the Southern Convention Woman's Board, till she turned over these duties to others last May; and their daughter, Miss Dorothy, is the financial secretary of Missions for their Sunday school. So, the family outreach through the church can only be equalled in prestige and influence by their cordial hospitality and good fellowship as hosts in their lovely home.

THE EASTERN VIRGINIA CONFERENCE.

I have just returned from the One Hundred and Fifteenth Session of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference, which was held in the Franklin Christian Church, Franklin, Va. It was one of the best sessions of the Conference I have ever attended, a beautiful spirit of harmony prevailed through the entire session. This fine session was made possible, I think, because of several reasons.

First, the Franklin Church and community showed such a fine spirit of hospitality, and extended such a wonderful welcome from the very start that the conference could not help but start its work in the beautiful spirit of the gracious welcome from these fine people.

Second, the wonderful way in which the President, Dr. N. G. Newman, presided over the Conference, was another great factor in making the gathering such a splendid success. Secretary I. W. Johnson, also was a great help to the sessions of conference. No gathering within the bounds of the Southern Convention would be complete without the presence of Dr. Johnson.

A third reason for the success of the Conference was the fact that the addresses and discussions, as well as the directing of the business of the sessions, were largely in the hands of seminary trained men. The men who are only college trained, were not forgotten, but had learned to keep silent most of the time in the presence of their better trained comrades, that the work of the Conference might go on more efficiently.

A fourth thing that contributed to the making of the conference a good one, was the fact that the reports of the churches were so splendid, eleven of them showing apportionments had been raised in full.

These, together with the guiding presence of His spirit, made our conference session one of our very best. J. F. Morgan.

General News
of the
CONGREGATIONAL AND CHRISTIAN CHURCHES
By HERBERT D. RUGG.

"THE EFFECTIVE CHURCH.

The general theme for the third biennial meeting of the General Council of the Congregational and Christian Churches of the United States to be held at Mt Holyoke College, South Hadley, Mass., next June 16th to 24th will be "The Effective Church."

The theme has been selected by the program committee of which Dr. Fred B. Smith of New York City is chairman, in accordance with the recommendation of Dr. Charles Emerson Burton, general secretary of the Council, that the addresses and discussions be designed to furnish the basis for a new forward movement of the churches. The recommendation was approved last spring by the executive committee of the Council.

It is hoped that during the coming seven months the thinking of the denomination will converge upon the theme and when the Council convenes its members and the churches will be ready to undertake greater things for the Master and His kingdom.

The general discussion of the theme in churches, at Association and state meetings and other gatherings is being inaugurated this week under the leadership of Dr. Burton at a series of five all-day "Conferences on Churchmanship" for pastors in Massachusetts. The conferences have been arranged by the Rev. Ralph M. Timberlake, president of the Massachusetts Conference, under the constitution of the Massachusetts Conference the president has the duties of superintendent.

Speaking with Dr. Burton are Dr. Fred Field Goodsell, executive vice-president of the American Board and Dr. Thomas Wesley Graham, dean at Oberlin Graduate School of Theology. The conferences are being held at Worcester, Haverhill, Plymouth, Cambridge and Northampton.

"AN ALL-ROUND CHURCH PROGRAM."

As his approach to the theme, "The Effective Church," Dr. Burton has taken as his topic this week, "An All-Round Church Program." His general thesis is that the church has exclusive and indispensable contributions to make to men and to society, contributions which no other agencies make or can make; and that it should mobilize its vast resources of man power for concentration on these contributions.

One of these contributions is the relation of man's inner life to his Maker. This is through the regular service of the church in worship, fellowship and preaching of the gospel. He maintains that the service of worship must contain something indispensable to men; that otherwise it is not justifiable. While on the other hand, whatever it contains, the service is valueless unless the people are there; hence the importance of church attendance, regular attendance on the part of church people and an increase in the number of church attendants from those not now attending.

In the field of religious education Dr. Burton insists that there is necessity of an effective program for teaching not only children and youth but adults the indispensable truths of religion and of making them dominant in their lives. Here again, also, no matter how good the program is, it is useless unless the people are reached. Some program of reaching and enrolling in the religious education project of the church is indispensable.

REV. ERWIN L. SHAVER, D. D.,
Secretary for Leadership Training

Dealing with the broad subject of evangelistic endeavor, Dr. Burton maintains that Christians are sent into the world to be witnesses of their Christian experiences. Here, however, he points out also that there is no use in telling people anything unless you have something to tell. It is important, therefore that the Church should develop the religious life and experiences of the people. Parallelling this development there should be a process for getting the ears of men so that the witness of the religious life may be given to men locally, throughout our country and in the non-Christian world.

Religion, he insists, must furthermore be embodied in life. A religion that does not reach into a man's relationships with his fellowmen and bring about a better social order, a religion that does not take into account the justice of the system under which we live, is not true to the leadership of Jesus Christ. The Church must have a message of application of the gospel of Christ to social relationships. Here again the Church must have means for learning, teaching and inculcating the mind of God in social relations. Every individual church, every group of churches and every denomination should have plans for applying the gospel to life.

In thinking of the Church as a vital organism, Dr. Burton holds to the necessity of a program of activity definitely constructed on the basis of needs and operative by each church in accordance with those needs. But the program must be worked as well as adopted and should contemplate a job for every member and every member at work; and it should contemplate the support of the church itself and its benevolent activities by every constituent.

IN RETROSPECT.

"It is a far cry from the religious education of a few years ago, confined mainly to the Sunday school, to the program of today, reaching out into all departments of the church." With this interpretative statement the Education Society of the Congregational and Christian churches has issued its printed annual report for 1934-35.

During the last decade the country has been swept by successive waves of exuberance, terror and hope over prosperity, depression and recovery and on the surface the years seemed to have been lost so far as any great spiritual progress was concerned. But there actually has been taking place one of the most significant developments in the history of Christian education. The fact has become more clearly realized that everything which enters into the experience of a person becomes part of his education. Every element in the life of a church, therefore, is a factor in the religious education of its members. With children this has resulted in the growth of the junior church, of vacation and week-day schools and of scouts and other club groups. To young people it has brought a wider range of topics for study and discussion, better organization of service activities and social interests and a great increase in the enrollment of church young people's societies and of summer conferences. For adults along with a better understanding and a fuller application of Biblical teachings to present-day life has come an extension of formal religious education into groups unrelated to the Sunday school such as men's forums and women's associations.

In keeping with the new trend to look on one hand at all activities of the church as educational and on the other at education as a direct agency of evangelization, has been the union of the Society's department of adult education in the past year with the Commission of Evangelism and Devotional Life under the single leadership of Dr. Frederick L. Fagley who has been executive secretary of the Commission as part of his duties as associate secretary of the General Council.

UNDERGIRDING THE EDUCATION WORK.

Undergirding all the other departments of the Education Society is the work of leadership training for which the secretary is Dr. Erwin L. Shaver.

The department of leadership training has grown to be a great extension school. A total of over 25,000 leadership training courses were taken by workers in our churches last year with the direct or indirect help of the department. Credits for standard training work awarded last year were 5,601 as compared with 781 credits awarded ten years ago.

This large extension school operates through what may be termed eight divisions: 1. The division of correspondence study; 2 The division of courses in Congregational and Christian colleges; 3. The division of interdenominational summer schools; 4. The division of Congregational and Christian summer schools; 5. The division of local community schools held in cooperation with other denominations; 6. The division of local schools of other denominations attended by workers from Congregational and Christian churches; 7. The division of schools or classes of local Congregational and Christian churches; 8. The division of workers' conferences of local Congregational and Christian churches.

The last division, that of workers' conferences, was instituted as the means for bringing leadership training within the reach of every worker. Dr. Shaver has prepared two series of detailed programs for these conferences. Each program was repeatedly and thoroughly tested. By the use of these programs the staff meeting or workers' conference will keep going without repeated "cranking."

Dr. Shaver is directing his department with the accumulated experience of twenty years in religious education work, beginning as a local church director of religious education in Decatur, Ill.; then at Union Theological Seminary, New York City; professor at Hendrix College, Conway, Ark., and district secretary of the Education Society for New England before taking his present position.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

CONFERENCE PERSONALS.

Rev. N. G. Newman, D. D., has presided over fourteen annual sessions of the Eastern Virginia Conference which convened at Franklin, October 30th, and adjourned November 1st. Dr. Newman thinks this is enough and insisted that a younger man occupy this position. The Conference yielded and Rev. Robert Lee House, Newport News, Va., was chosen. The retiring president of the Conference is under the impression that he is getting old. He is mistaken. He is judging and talking in terms of the flesh and not of the spirit; of the body and not of the mind. Man is no older than he thinks. If his thought is vigorous, buoyant, fragrant and fruitful, he is young, despite his years, and the unanimous verdict of those who heard him was that here is a growing man of virile mind and a soul that grows stronger and more refreshing with experience.

The "veteran" secretary of the Conference is Dr. I. W. Johnson. He does not tell how many years he has been secretary. He is interested in keeping the records clear and clean and straight. He wonders why people give more attention to funerals than to births and talk more about sickness and hospital experiences than they do about health and happiness. Brother Johnson did not record this in the Minutes of the Conference where he seeks and demands exactness, but he did record it in his meditations in last week's Sun, where he gives latitude to his pen and his readers. Now this scribe has taken advantage of that latitude. All of us now living were born and we had nothing to do with that event. Not all of us have died, and so when we pass out one by one an event has transpired with history and experience behind it, and the extraordinary has happened. If there was anything extraordinary abour our birth, the people and the papers would have had much to say about it. As a witness, the birth of the quintuplets and the case of the expectant mother, who, in a rural district the other day, went to draw a bucket of water, fainted and fell in, and in reply to her screams, while swimming in the bottom of the well, her husband drew her out with a bucket and she brought along a new born baby. That was extraordinary. They tell us that when a dog bites a man that is not news and the news columns do not carry the item, but if a man should bite a dog, that would be news and we would find it in the papers. So few people have real, severe and dangerous operations and experiences in the hospital that it is easy for them to get listeners and it is a joy to them to relate their triumph over the terrible ordeal and the skill of a beloved surgeon in bringing them out. John Quincy Adams, a contemporary and a friend even if not a great admirer, of Thomas Jefferson, relates in his diary that Mr. Jefferson made it a rule to startle his guests at dinner with some unheard of and unreal, even untrue, event. Jefferson was seeking in this way to entertain and amuse his friends. He announced at dinner to Mr. Adams, and other statesmen guests assembled, that he left a bag of pears in his cellar untouched for four years and was surprised to find that these pears had candied themselves and were in a state of delicious preservation. At the time Jefferson told Mr. Adams and the others of the experience, of course the pears had been consumed and there was no way of checking up on the veracity of the father of the Declaration of Independence and the founder of the University of Virginia. These startling incidents that Jefferson related were always harmless, Adams declares, and served the purpose of delightful disquisition. As the recording secretary, Dr. Johnson is meticulous and his records are marvels of accuracy and detail, but his meditations afford green pastures of wide range, as readers of Suffolk Letter will justify; and the best speeches he makes in Conference are those which he prefaces by the declaration that he is not going to make a speech because he hasn't one. When Dr. Johnson addresses Conference and declares he hasn't a speech, his hearers prepare then to get a thrill, and they are never disappointed.

Rev. H. S. Hardcastle struck the spiritual note and led us truly to "Spiritual Hilltops" in his sermon, "The Spirit of the Shepherd." Brother Hardcastle is a consistent worker, a logical thinker, a genuine teacher of gospel truth. He frequently has to clear his mind of an amusing, sometimes ridiculous, event,—like a farmer burns brush and destroys rubbish before driving the hoe or the plow into his fertile soil. Give Brother Hardcastle your mind and attention till he clears the ground and then he will dig deep to enrich the soul with the spiritual harvest.

Deacon M. W. Hollowell of Berea (Norfolk) keeps well educated, cheerful and happy, as well as making others cheerful and happy, by reading The Christian Sun and attending his Annual Conference. He lends inspiration to the speakers by his undivided attention and gives good cheer to delegates and visitors by his cordial hand-clasp and his abiding interest in all the Conference and in all the people that come to Conference. He has been reading The Christian Sun and going to his Annual Conference for a half century, we presume, and his friends will be the better and happier if he can keep this up for another half century.

Mrs. B. F. Gibson, of our Rosemont Church, looks forward to going to Conference and enjoying the feast of spiritual food and intellectual delight there, just as most mothers look forward to Christmas and the Home-Coming of a family. We somehow cherish the notion that the whole Rosemont Church is, in a measure, a better church because Sister Gibson goes to Conference and drinks in to her soul's delight all the good things that are said and done there. She has been reading The Christian Sun from childhood and pities those who do not enjoy the weekly visits of their church paper.

Was it Rev. Elwood W. Jones, D. D., or the unmatched cordiality of his congregation that made the Conference session at Franklin so happy? Maybe it was both, for we failed to discover any distinction between this good pastor and his people. They are evidently working together in unison of spirit, not only for the spiritual life and growth of their church but for the social joy and happiness of the community. It was a happy meeting place for the Annual Conference; and while many reports showed lack of much progress the past year, the local church, with its devoted pastor, created such an atmosphere or cordiality and hospitality that the people generally pronounced it the best Conference ever. Even the president said so, and he knows.

Rev. O. D. Poythress is still an evangelist. He pleads with his folks and his hearers to build fires and to keep them burning. It was a very strong and striking metaphor. Poythress was quoting, with high approval, from a noted evangelist of another day, who said: "Preacher, build up a fire in your pulpit and then get into that fire and burn up." A very strong and striking metaphor, one says. Any stronger than that of the Psalmist, who declared: "The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up?" And it will be recalled that Jesus' disciples remembered this metaphor in connection with our Lord, when He had made a scourge of small cords and drove out from the Temple those that sold sheep and oxen and poured out the changers' money and overthrew their tables. Poythress thinks that times and seasons come when zeal needs to consume and fires need to burn, and tables need to be over-turned. It is easy for Poythress to think in terms of fire, since he has a redhead, but bear in mind this man can sing in melody that soothes the soul. He and Brother Morgan blended their voices in a gospel song that thrilled the audience and carried all of us a little nearer to the Glory Land.

We could go on filling other columns with the happy recollection and wholesome meditations we gleaned from this Conference. Familiar faces loom before us while we write, and the words of the Psalmist come with renewed emphasis to us: "We took sweet counsel together and walked into the House of God in company."

MEN AND MISSIONS SUNDAY.

The Laymen's Missionary Movement, in cooperation with the various Boards of Missions of the United States, has appointed Sunday, November 17, 1935, as the fifth annual observance of Men and Missions Sunday. The Movement is calling upon all churches and pastors to observe this day by having a missionary service and sermon and a dinner for the men of the church on Friday evening, the 15th. A pamphlet, entitled, "Jesus Christ and the World Today," has been issued by the Movement, which pamphlet the pastors and churches can have for the asking. Our Mission Secretary will be glad to supply these on request. It is a folder of sixteen pages and is filled with suggestions as to how the event may be observed.

JOHN WESLEY.

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

(Concluded.)

The Years of Success.

The last thirty years of Wesley's life were years of recognition and success. Except for an occasional outbreak of mob violence in remote quarters the Methodist lay preachers were not molested. And even the English clergy, although they did not give their hearty support to the movement, did give up their hostility to it. There was hardly a town in England which did not have its Wesleyan Society, and many of the members of these societies were men and women who before their conversion belonged to the most dangerous and the most irreclaimable classes of society. Indeed it was the remarkable changes that took place, not only in individuals, but in entire communities, that silenced the criticism of the clergy and of those who were rather skeptical of religion. Wesley always insisted that his converts bring forth fruits meet for repentance. The condition of membership in the societies was always conduct. For instance, smuggling, bribery, and other sins practiced on a large scale in certain towns were altogether done away with as a result of the preaching of Wesley.

One of Wesley's sorest trials during this period was due to the extravagance and fanaticism of the Methodists themselves. Prominent among them was the schism caused by the doctrine of sanctification. As enjoined by Wesley it would seem that this doctrine meant little more than the complete and loving devotion of the will to the service of God which issues in habitual righteousness of life. Wesley was careful to avoid the term "sinless perfection," lest it be liable to misinterpretation, and he himself never professed to be sanctified in this sense. But much heated discussion was engaged in over this doctrine, and there was a schism within the Methodist ranks itself as a result.

Another and even more bitter controversy flared up over the Calvinistic doctrine of predestination or predeterminism. It is too long a story to enter into here, but suffice it to say that as a result of this controversy, Wesleyan Methodism was committed definitely and unalterably to an Arminian theology, and this had a profound influence on both sides of the Atlantic in bringing about the almost universal abandonment of that merciless logic which reads in the will of God the denial of human will, and the absolute, irrevocable doom before their birth of a great majority of the human race.

Wesley's interest in the practical side of religion expressed itself in the field of popular literature. He published a magazine, wrote innumerable articles on all kinds of subjects, and even issued a revised edition of a popular novel which he very much admired. In every way he was eager to have the Methodist movement foster popular intelligence as well as popular morals. And he insisted that his lay preachers should devote a certain part of their time to methodical reading and study, and that they should encourage their people to read good literature.

Needless to say, he was interested in music, and much of the popularity and the power of the movement which he developed was due to the emphasis which it put upon good music.

Wesley was also interested in politics and wrote many articles on the various issues of the day. By a strange quirk of fate, he reversed himself completely on the issue raised by the American Revolution, and staunchly defended the policy of the government, although he had at first espoused the cause of the Colonies.

And yet he was not provincial in his interests, or partisan in his religious interests, for he had the interests of the American Methodists at heart, and if time and space would allow, an added example of the man's breadth of interests and his ability as an organizer could be cited in the story of his influence and his power, as well as of his unselfishness in the development of Methodism in the New World. Truly the world was his parish.

Facing the Sunset.

The closing years of Wesley's life and ministry were rich in honors and in rewards, as they were also still abundant in fruits. Old age seemed to take no toll from this remarkable man, for in 1786, when eighty-three years old, he records with regret that he cannot write more than fifteen hours a day without hurting his eyes. He retained in a remarkable way his vigor of both mind and body until the last year of his life. When he was eighty-five years old he scorned an invitation to accept a ride to a preaching place six miles out of Bristol with the remark: "I am ashamed that any Methodist preacher in tolerable health should make a difficulty of this" and tramped away to preach. Even when he was past eighty-six, he made the circuit of England and Wales, preaching almost every shire, and sometimes riding from thirty to fifty miles a day. He did feel the loneliness that came when one by one of his friends and most intimate companions went on to their reward. And this was particularly true when his brother Charles died. And although he was always active and cheerful, he felt himself very much alone.

In the opening weeks of the year 1791—he was then nearly eighty-eight years old—he made his plans to visit again his outlying districts. But of February 25th, he was taken ill and was forced to give up his plans to preach the next day. He was up and about again the next day, but was again forced to remain in his room, and he never left it again. His strength ebbed away rapidly, and knowing that the end was near, he gave directions for his burial and for the disposition of his effects. He slept much, but in his waking intervals he sang some lines from his brother's hymns, and often he would repeat the words of some hymn or of a verse of Scripture. When on Tuesday afternoon, Charles Wesley's widow came in to see him, he had her bend over him for a farewell kiss, murmuring "He giveth his beloved rest." Later in the afternoon he gathered all his strength and uttered in a clear voice the words that have been a watchword with Methodists ever since, "The best of all is, God is with us." Thruout the night he was unable to speak, but murmured again and again the first words of his favorite hymn, "I'll praise, I'll praise." At ten o'clock on the morning of March 2nd, Wednesday, he opened his eyes, looked upon the company of friends round about him, and said distinctly "Farewell" and was gone.

Wesley was buried in a vault behind the City Road Chapel. In keeping with his will, he directed that his body should be borne to the grave by six poor men, and that at his funeral "there should be no hearse, no coach, no pomp except the tears of them that loved me." But the day before he was buried his body lay in state in the Chapel and at least ten thousand people passed through the Chapel to take a last look at their great leader and loving friend. In order to avoid the confusion and the danger of a great crowd at his burial it was planned to have it early in the morning, between five and six o'clock, but even at that hour a large crowd had gathered. The burial service was read by Rev. John Richardson, for thirty years one of Wesley's trusted preachers. Everything went well until the preacher instinctively changed one word in the solemn sentence of commital and read, "Forasmuch as it hath pleased Almighty God to take unto Himself the soul of our dear Father here departed." Then the grief of his hearers could no longer be controlled, and the great crowd broke out into convulsive sobbing and tears. The body of Wesley rests in the throbbing heart of London, beside the homely chapel which was the center, and still is the monument of that great religious movement into which he had poured his life.

Wesley's Private Life.

Little has been written thus far about Wesley's private life for the simple reason that he had but little private life. From the time that he started out on his open-air preaching until the day of his death he had little time, or took little time for himself. He had no home, or at least he spent little if any time in what would have been his home. By a strange turn of fate five of Wesley's sisters made unfortunate marriages and none of them had homes in which he could find a wholesome home atmosphere. Furthermore, in spite of the fact that he had thousands of friends, Wesley had but few intimate friends outside the circle of his own family. Of social life he had but little, not because he did not care for it, or at least not because he condemned it, but because he could not find time for it. His whole life was a noble monotony of labor. The simple fact is that he had no time for society and hardly for friendship. It was only when riding on his journeys from place to place that he had any leisure, and he usually employed this so-called leisure by reading a book. He kept a voluminous Journal and was always writing something for publication. John Wesley was a good steward of time, perhaps too good a steward, for it would seem that he narrowed his habit of thought by the very intensity of his activity.

After many years as a bachelor, Wesley ventured into the field of, shall we call it romance, and in both instances the results were unfortunate. He had a year or more of courtship with a Mrs. Grace Murray, but after many ups and downs, and not a little interference from others, the engagement, if such it could be called was broken, and Mrs. Murray married another gentleman.

And yet marriage to Mrs. Murray, as undesirable as that seemed from many standpoints, would undoubtedly have been much better than the marriage which Wesley did consummate with another widow, a Mrs. Vazeille. One wonders how a man of such practical judgment as Wesley, could have made such a grievous mistake in the selection of a companion. For Mrs. Wesley was not only jealous, suspicious, obstinate, and peevish, she was vindictive and down-right devilish. Indeed one wonders if the woman could have been normal mentally, so inexplicable were her acts. She spread the most calumnious reports as to her husband's character. She repeatedly opened his letters, wrote in them passages of her own composition and then read them to prejudiced persons, and in one or two instances she gave them to be printed publicly. She repeatedly left Wesley for long periods, and when she died ten years after the marriage she was in separation from Wesley, and he was not even notified of her death until three days after her funeral. Making all due allowances for the fact that Wesley's continued absence from home made great demands on any wife's patience, and the fact that when she married him he was forty-eight years of age and firmly confirmed in his habits, and that Wesley had some strange ideas about the marriage relation, it still appears that Mrs. Wesley was simply impossible, and it would probably have been better

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The One Hundred and Fifteenth Annual Session of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference has taken its place in history. It was a great session. The place was in historic Franklin, Virginia. The entertaining church surpassed its enviable record of hospitality and good fellowship. From the opening hymn to the closing benediction there was an unusual spirit of congeniality and optimism. The lovely church was made more beautiful and worshipful in atmosphere by many recent additions and improvements.

The entire program was carried out without one note of criticism or discordant suggestion. The Reports of the Committees were carefully prepared and, with one exception, were unanimously adopted as submitted. The sermons and addresses were of a high order. The attendance was good, the weather was excellent, and the delegates and visitors were deeply interested in the proceedings of Conference.

There was much speculation as to the results of the new financial plans for providing funds for the various enterprises of the Conference and Convention. The Conference Apportionments were approximately 95 per cent higher than for the year 1934. Eleven of the churches met their Apportionments in full as follows: Berea (Nansemond), Dendron, Spring Hill, Sarem, Rosemont, Liberty Spring, Oakland, Franklin, Holland, Holy Neck, Union (Surry). Several other of the churches nearly reached the honor roll.

The exact figures for the money forwarded to the Mission Secretary, Elon College and the Board of Superannuation, during the year are not available for this letter. But it was evident that the total amount was considerably more than for the year 1934. The totals collected at Conference are as follows: Conference Home Missions, $1,-204.13; Conference Fund, $272.65; Convention Fund, $1,453.82; Convention Home Mission Fund, $596.85; Foreign Missions, $541.85; Elon College Fund, $1,072.65; Superannuation, $289.-21; Christian Education, $164.42; Total, 5,595.-68. Eight churches failed to send any money to the Conference for these various funds. The total Conference Collections were more than for the year 1934.

The Conference voted to memorialize the next session of the Southern Convention to include an Apportionment for the Orphanage in the list of Conference Apportionments; and requested the Convention also to make it clear that all Special Offerings by the Churches, Sunday School Classes and the regular monthly offerings by the Sunday Schools for the various funds be credited on the respective Conference Apportionments for said Funds.

The next session of the Conference will be held at South Norfolk Christian Church. The following is the list of officers and Standing Committees for the ensuing year: President, Rev. Robert Lee House; Vice-President, Dr. J. E. Rawles; Secretary, Dr. I. W. Johnson; Assistant Secretary, Mr. W. H. Baker; Treasurer, Mr. W. E. MacClenny; Executive Committee, R. L. House, I. W. E. MacClenny.

It will be helpful if the SUN readers whose names appear in this list will take due notice of their appointment and govern themselves accordingly, by taking up the work assigned to them.

I. W. JOHNSON.

ROANOKE, ALABAMA.

I would just like to give you a little news from our Roanoke charge. My wife and I landed here last Tuesday and were met by one of the most cordial receptions it has been our pleasure to receive.

When, about 7 P. M., we were busy preparing supper and arranging our things, the people of Lowell Church began to file in, followed by the people of First Church. They were the most determined set I ever saw, and the most persistent. They appeared to have no concern for the appearance of things, but just pushed their way to the table and such a pounding! It would have made an Editor's mouth water.

Everything that was necessary for the kitchen and pantry was placed on and around that table. I know we looked "sheepish" for we were taken by such complete surprise. Old friends, and new friends—all seemed to share the same joy in the transaction. Bro. V. E. Kitchens made the presentation speech and then called on the pastor for a response. Now, friends, you should have heard that speech. I am sure that the people felt good when it was over. I remember saying, "God bless you all," and "I will do my best, so when they all left, wife and I and Mrs. Yarbrough and Rebecca, James' wife, looked through and found good things too numerous to mention. Surely no one knows but the preachers and their family how to appreciate such generosity. I must do my best for the glory of my Lord.

We had two fine services at the Roanoke Church last Sunday. The officers and teachers of the Sunday School were installed at the morning service. The Christian Endeavor officers were installed at the evening hour.

In this little church, we have a good Sunday school, a fine Woman's Missionary Society, a Young People's Missionary Society and a progressive Christian Endeavor Society. This church is going from once a month service to half-time service; great things are in store for this congregation. Pray for us. Our regular time of meeting is on the first and third Sundays in each month.

Lowell is the church in the mill village and a progressive and loyal group they are. They have one of the best Sunday schools in the Conference. They also have a very interesting Missionary Society that is doing things for the Lord. I will preach for them each second and fourth Sunday, and here is hoping that we shall be able by the Grace of God to put this dear church on the "map" for service. Pray for me Brethren. I am still seeking a hard job for God. I know nothing of an easy place. "All for Jesus," and "Jesus for all" is my motto. This is Roanoke's first experience of having one pastor for both churches. Surely God will bless the united effort, for in union there is strength.

I have preached three sermons, married one couple and attended one funeral since I arrived in this field. I attended our Conference last week at Christiana Church. We had a good session, and a representative body. The next session will be held at Phoenix City, Ala. Rev. J. P. Bean is Moderator; Rev. C. W. Carter, Assistant Moderator; P. F. Beaird, Secretary, and J. W. Payne, Treasurer.

I shall preach, the Lord willing, at the Old State Line Congregational Church the second Sunday evening in each month and at Pleasant Grove Christian Church the third Sunday evening until other arrangements can be made. My prayer to God for his "Israel" is that they may be saved, and if this Church of which we are a part will just lay its life on His altar for service we will see strange things happen in His kingdom.

May His spirit guide His ministry and His church is the sincere desire of your humble servant.

G. D. HUNT.

DAMASCUS.

A few months ago two former residents of the community, Brothers Walter M. Clennon of Greensboro, and Stephen Cannada of Durham, came back to visit the old home church, Damascus, Orange County. We were glad to see them. Observing the need of repairs to the building, they held a short conference, made some estimates, and let it be known that they would be happy to underwrite half the amount necessary for the complete renovation. Their proposition was gratefully accepted. The work was begun and has been completed. What a beautiful monument it is!

It is doubtful if our two brethren even guessed to what extent their renovating idea was to go. In the making of beauty and comfort the makers themselves were re-made. Nearing the completion of the building, one faithful officer of the church remarked that he thought the time had arrived when we should turn within ourselves for a "cleaning up." A revival was on. The date was set for beginning the meetings. Rev. B. J. Earp was the earnest and effective preacher for the week following the third Sunday in September. Eight new members came into a revived church. The Lord be praised.

These good people favored their pastor recently with another of those generous "poundings" they know so well when and how to administer.

B. J. HOWARD.

RANDLEMAN.

On October the 12th, about 7:30 P. M., approximately twenty of our good people of Randleman Christian Church came to my home where they were received with gladness. We all sang a number of selections together and then the group bowed its head in earnest prayer. Afterwards, they went out to their cars and came in with arms full of good things for the pantry, such as sugar, coffee, jelly, prunes, apples, canned goods, etc.

Brother Bill Lamb, Secretary of the church brought along a good quantity of ice cream and we all ate together. So all in all it was a joyful occasion. May the blessings of Heaven be upon these loyal and good people. I have served this church ten years. They are near to my heart and when our meeting here is over, I expect to meet these good people over on the other shore.

DR. THRALL PASSES.

When one whom we love so dearly is called by our Heavenly Father to a richer life with Him it makes Heaven seem very near to our earthly life. He was pastor and friend to men and women, boys and girls because of his abundant love for them.

God gave him fulness of years and he brought fulness of life to each year. He had served in many places, yet he loved to call this home. It was home for him because he was a pioneer of the spirit. Many of us are contented with the good but he held for himself a higher loyalty: "The good is often the worst enemy of the best." He sought to go where there was need, where other men did not go. He came here a stranger and twenty years later goes from us our dearest friend. Yes, he leaves a visible monument to his labor. Here is the church, here are the men and women who bear witness to his sweet influence, here are hundreds of boys who have looked to him as leader. But who can comprehend the real monuments which he has left, a heart strengthened by his cheer, a home gladdened by his visit, a dull day enlivened by his wit, an anxious mind calmed by his faith. These are the real treasures. We have found them through him and no man can take them away from us.

God grant that we too may carry on in this faith. MRS. J. R. CHAPMAN.

"FLINT—GOODRIDGE."

Under the above caption, Mr. Frederick L. Brownlee, Secretary, writes quite interestingly about a unit of Dillard University, in which many Christian Sun readers have a personal acquaintance and interest. Be it known that Dillard University is named for our friend, Dr. J. H. Dillard of Charlottesville, Va., who is an occasional and a very interesting contributor to the columns of The Christian Sun. A further personal touch is that Dr. Dillard came from Nansemond County, Virginia, being born and spending many of his boyhood days near our Holy Neck Christian Church. Through the years this Christian statesman and distinguished educator has been a sympathetic and helpful friend of the Negro race, not only in Virginia but throughout the South, and as a reward for his distinguished service in the field of Negro education and uplift, Dillard University has now been named.

Now read what Mr. Brownlee has to say in connection with the hospital unit of the University and the University itself in the November Number of our Christian Herald:

"Flint-Goodridge is the hospital unit of Dillard University in New Orleans. Dillard is the successor to Straight College, founded and supported by The American Missionary Association for over sixty years, and New Orleans University, also a college for Negro youth, founded and supported for almost as long by the Board of Education of the M. E. Church. Flint-Goodridge Hospital was founded by the Methodist Board.

"The new university opened its doors for students in the fall of 1935. Its grounds and buildings, including the hospital, were financed cooperatively by the two church boards, the General Education Board, the Julius Rosenwald Fund, and the citizens of New Orleans, the latter having given voluntarily $250,000.

"Dillard University is incorporated and functions under its own charter. Of the seventeen trustees six must always be elected by the American Missionary Association and six by the Methodist Board. In spirit and fact the trustees are an inter-racial, inter-sectional and inter-denominational group which has functioned with a remarkable degree of unanimity and good will. A special committee of the trustees is responsible for Flint-Goodridge. The hospital staff, including the medical staff, are Negroes. Leading white physicians function in an advisory capacity. Instructional courses are given at the hospital for Negro physicians to the end that, in the near future, there will be thoroughly qualified specialists as chiefs of staffs in each medical department.

"The plant, occupying a city block, consists of a hundred-bed hospital, a nurses' home and training school, and a laundry. The hospital has been rated by the American Hospital Association, it has entertained national medical conventions, has a progressive social service follow-up program, and is in every sense an efficient urban health center. It is by far the leading hospital for Negroes south of Washington, with the exception of the hospital unit of Meharry Medical College in Nashville, Tenn.

"Current expenses are met through fees, individual donations, the New Orleans Community Chest, and a substantial subsidy from the Dillard University budget. The American Missionary Association's responsibility for the current expenses of the University, including the hospital subsidy, is $35,000 annually.

"The Congregational-Christian Churches thru the American Missionary Association, therefore, have a big stake, a serious responsibility and an unprecedented opportunity in Flint-Goodridge Hospital and Dillard University. Neither enterprise has an endowment as yet. Individual gifts are required to balance the budgets of both. Dressing, bandages, etc., are listed in the "quotas" of the various Congregational-Christian Women's organizations.

"Gifts, legacies and supplies may be sent direct to Dillard University, New Orleans, Louisiana, or through the New York Office of the American Missionary Association. The latter is prepared to administer any trust fund which might be left for the hospital or the University. Gifts from the churches "on appointment" will count toward the American Missionary Association's responsibility of $35,000 annually. Whatever else is done this must be met. It is our Congregational-Christian Church's direct responsibility in a winning venture of inter-church and other inter-cooperation."

NEWS ITEMS OF SOCIETIES.

By Mrs. W. M. Jay, News Editor.

Mrs. B. D. Jones, Superintendent of the Nansemond, Gates, Franklin District of the Eastern Virginia Woman's Conference has been busy with some excellent work since the annual conference of all the presidents of the woman's societies in her district at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. G. Truitt, Suffolk, Va.

An excellent representation responded and a period of instruction, exchange of ideas, and plans for better and more efficient service was the result. Mrs. E. L. Beale, the new literature superintendent was present and gave some valuable information along her line and all in all it was a most helpful meeting. It did Mrs. Jones good to come in close contact with her presidents and learn to know them and its was fine for the presidents to meet each other and exchange ideas. At the conclusion Mrs. Truitt served delightful refreshments and a pleasant social hour was enjoyed. This was indeed a step forward and one which is recommended for others to follow.

Sunday, October 27th, was a red letter day at the Eure Christian Church, Eure, N. C., when Dr. W. M. Jay and Mrs. Jay, Mrs. B. D. Jones and Miss Frances Everett, President of the Young People's division of Eastern Virginia Woman's Conference met with them to consider organizing some missionary societies in their church. After Sunday School the pastor told the congregation of their purpose and Miss Everett took charge of the young people and children and Mrs. Jones the adults. The result was the organization of all four societies and the enthusiasm and interest shown were gratifying. Eure already had an Aid Society divided into two circles with a membership of 35 or more doing a good work so they willingly and readily decided to put on missionary programs and divide their money with missions. Mrs. J. G. Eure is the president and Mrs. Iva Turner was elected spiritual life superintendent.

The young people were equally enthusiastic and after due explanation and discussion the following officers were elected: Mr. Atmill Felton, president; Miss Anna Maude Harrell, vice-president; Miss Amy Howell, secretary; Miss Geraldine Rountree, treasurer and Allen Askew, assistant secretary.

All committees were appointed and date of first meeting was set. A committee was also appointed to secure a superintendent or adult adviser.

During the proceedings of the above the fine group of children was noticed and a feeling was prevalent that something ought to be done for them also and Mrs. W. B. Alexander volunteered to be their superintendent. An organization was perfected at once and their little faces beamed at the thought of their society too.

Before we left the church, Mrs. Elijah Harrell agreed to be cradle roll superintendent and look after the babies so a complete list of organizations was the result of the morning's work.

Plenty of literature and helps have been sent to the leaders and we expect to hear of some great and good work done in the near future. This example shows what can be done if we will go after it and present the challenge to our churches who ought to have live societies. May this be an impetus to others to follow this example.

The newspaper and the radio have brought the world to our door. There is no excuse for not understanding other nations. Hear about them, read about them, talk about them kindly.—J. Robertson.

A Story for the Children

SPIDERS AND MICE IN A MUSIC CLASS.

There are many pretty stories, fables, and legends, such as the one about Orpheus and his lyre, and the one about the Pied Piper of Hamelin, telling of the power of music to charm animals. A friend of mine once told me that in the forests of Puget Sound, in Washington, he had drawn cotton-tail rabbits within the reach of his hand by whistling.

Robert Louis Stevenson, the famous writer, the favorite of young folks as well as old, has told us how, when he was living in the Sandwich Islands, he used to lie on a sofa sometimes when he was weary and play a flageolet. After a time a little mouse appeared on a shelf above his head, apparently because he loved music. When he had appeared a number of times, and found the music and the player both welcomed him, he came close enough to Mr. Stevenson to be petted. He came to feel so much at home that when he got hungry for music he would come out on the shelf and scratch and whine, and thus beg the famous novelist to play for him. At last, like a dutiful husband, having found a good thing, he told about it at home, and one day brought Mrs. Mouse with him, and after that they always attended the concert together.

A year or so ago a small boy in New York received for his Christmas present a music-box that played three tunes. One evening the little fellow sat on the floor turning the crank of his music-box. His mother was in the room with him, when to her surprise she saw three mice come out of a hole and listen to the music, creeping closer and closer to the little musician on the floor. The little boy did not see them, and the mother said nothing about it for fear the mice would be frightened. When he ceased playing they went away again into their hiding place. The next night the boy, knowing nothing of his queer little audience, sat on the floor again. This time the boy saw the mice and kept right on playing. The mice grew more and more courageous and played about the boy. The next night the little musician had not only his music-box for his friends, but, like a generous little host, he had some refreshments—some cake and cheese. The three mice and the little boy became great friends, and all because they all four loved music of the same sort.

But I think the strangest little concert-goers I ever heard of are spiders. Until recently I had never thought about spiders as creatures that would care for pleasant sounds. But one summer, while living in our summer home on Staten Island, the three little children played every morning on the porch, and a large spider, which had its web and nest up under the edge of the porch out of sight, and which never came in sight any other time, would come out as soon as the children began to laugh and play in their merry chatter, and swing down on a tiny rope two or three feet long and seem to watch and listen to the children by the hour. As soon as they left the porch he went back home. I think it must have been the sweet tones of childish laughter that brought him out.

During a great concert in Leipsic one of the musicians saw a spider descend from one of the chandeliers while a violin solo was being played, but as soon as the large orchestra began to sound it hurried back as fast as it could.

And now comes this pretty story from Boston. Of course we have all heard jokes upon what a city for culture Boston is; how the street-car conductors speak Greek, and the herdie drivers converse in Latin; but it is really interesting to know that the spiders there are musicians. In one of the churches there the organist noticed a spider which swung down from the ceiling and hung suspended just above his hands when he was playing. Several days after he noticed the spider and proceeded to experiment with its musical tasts. He found that the spider loved soft music, and would always come and remain so long as he played anything soft and plaintive, but would immediately hurry away whenever he played anything unusually loud.

It is a very interesting and beautiful thought to me that God has put this love for sweet sounds and harmonies in all His creatures. Surely, He who was so careful about His work that He gave to the little spider musical taste and ears to enjoy the sweet sounds of the world, will not forget to watch over those who are made in His own likeness.—Banks.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON RELIGIOUS LITERATURE.

[The following report was made by the Committee on Religious Literature at the Eastern Virginia Conference was adopted by the Conference and seems appropriate and timely, not only for that Conference but for other Conferences and persons throughout our Convention. The report is signed by the Committee—Elwood W. Jones, Chairman; Joe French; Mrs. J. A. Williams; Mrs. R. T. Bradford; Mrs. J. W. Manning.—J. O. A.]

Your Committee on Religious Literature presents the following report:

The words of Sacred Writ: "None of us liveth to himself" have always been true, and never more so than now. With the whole world rapidly becoming a neighborhood and people living in ever-increasingly close contact with one another, with the welfare of one nation more and more dependent upon the welfare of other nations, with the recovery of normal material living, so long delayed, and all the more eagerly sought for everywhere, and with general realization that we are in the midst of great and momentous changes in all phases of life, people of all walks of life look to the secular press for news of world events, and interpretation of their meaning. The secular press has many faults, yet we recognize it as a mighty agency of our civilization in moulding the opinion of the masses. We decry the tendency of many newspapers and news magazines to sensationalism, and their wandering to commercial evils, but we commend the press in general for its readiness to disseminate religious news and viewpoints.

The secular paper goes into all our homes. We were never better informed as citizens of our State and nation, but multitudes of Christian people are not well-informed as citizens of the Kingdom of God. Information regarding the progress of Christ in His world comes chiefly from the religious press. Specific information regarding our denominations in its work at home and in its missionary approach to the whole world comes from our denominational publications. Lack of knowledge regarding Kingdom progress is due to the meager circulation of the religious paper.

Up until a few years ago we, as a denomination, had the Herald of Gospel Liberty, the oldest religious weekly in the land. When we merged with the Congregational Churches our publication was soon merged with The Congregationalist, a weekly. Later the name was changed to Advance. Now Advance has become a monthly publication because of poor support given it in the United Church.

The Christian Sun is published weekly, representing the Southeast Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches. It is an indispensable means of contact in our Conference, and in our Convention. We all need it for its dissemination of denominational and interdenominational news, and for its clear spiritual interpretation of the day in which we live. A number of faithful self-sacrificing people give generously of their time and talents to make this religious paper a credit to our denomination. Multitudes of our people are the weaker spiritually because they do not subscribe to it and read it.

1. Your committee therefore most heartily commends The Christian Sun and urges that its circulation up to the maximum of our constituency be made a major project of our Conference. Failure to move in this proposed direction will necessarily cause it to continue to be a heavy charge upon our Convention funds if it is to continue publication, and its suspension is unthinkable.

2. Missionary knowledge is back of all missionary interest and gifts. Your committee commends the Woman's Missionary Societies for their organized study of missionary literature, and it especially recognizes the value, from a religious literature viewpoint, of such a meeting as we held in the Suffolk Christian Church some months ago when Dr. Albert W. Palmer reviewed his book, "Orientals in American Life." Your committee believes that other similar meetings would greatly aid in stimulating missionary reading and interest among both men and women of our churches.

3. In this year that commemorates 400 years of the printed English Bible, your committee would earnestly remind our people that the Bible has been in all these years a very vital factor in world civilization, and that its emphasis upon God in Christ as the sole hope of the race, and the only one adequate to meet the needs of mankind needs to be heeded by every one. In all our reading let us not forget to read and study Book of Books, and let us urge that others shall give it the place of pre-eminence in their lives.

4. Your committee would again urge our people to use exclusively the Sunday school publications of our United Church, believing them to be among the best in the land. They can continue to be strong and helpful only to the extent that they are used thruout our fellowship.

5. We recognize the improvement in the character of moving pictures offered to the public, due to the rising protest of religious people against the harmful productions of recent years. The strength of the religious constituency brought to bear in the field of the movie needs to be marshalled against harmful magazines, and all other forms of literature which would lower the Christian standard of morals. Your committee urges that we use our Christian judgment as to the type of people with whom we associate thru the printed page and on the movie screen.

(Signed) The Committee.

WHEN NIGHT COMES.

When night comes, list thy deeds; make plain the way
'Twixt heaven and thee; block it not with delays;
But perfect all before thou sleep'st: then say:
There's one sun more strung on my Bead of days.
What's good score up for joy; the bad, well scanned,
Wash off with tears, and get thy Master's hand.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

Rev. F. C. Lester, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

VALLEY VIRGINIA CENTRAL YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

On Saturday evening, October 26th, young people and their leaders from District "B" and "C" met at Linville Christian Church for a rally, and on Sunday afternoon, October 27th, another enthusiastic group (District "A") met at Newport Church. Saturday evening Linville, Antioch, and Bethlehem were represented with a total number of fifty-five present including two officers of the Fellowship and one pastor. Sunday afternoon more than one hundred attended: five key workers were there and the churches represented were Mt. Olivet (R), Mt. Olivet (G), Bethel, Newport and Leaksville.

The meetings were called to order by the president, Miss Thelma Morris. After a short get-acquainted period, a challenging and inspiring worship service—theme, "The Call of Youth to Action"—was led by Mrs. W. B. Williams of Newport News, Virginia, Youth Fellowship Counselor for Virginia.

One of the high points of the program was an address "Youth Action in the Local Church" by Miss Irene Cotten, Dendron, Virginia, Secretary of the Southeast Youth Fellowship. Her text might be chosen from the words of the Psalmist, "The righteous shall flourish like the palm tree." She referred to the book of Mark and asked that the groups read that book and note how often St. Mark used the words "straightway" and "immediately." Nehemiah gives to us a challenge in his story of the rebuilding of the walls of Jerusalem. Miss Cotten spelled the words "Youth Action," representing each letter as follows:

Y—Young people who will yield themselves completely, wholly to Jesus Christ.

O—Others (Try to bring others to Christ).

U—We need an understanding of the problem of the world.

T—Training young people who are willing to become trained.

H—Helps (A good workman has the best tools with which to work.

A—Become Active.

C—Cooperation needed.

T—Trust in God.

I—Interest in what others are doing.

O—Opportunity—Make use of every one.

N—Never give up.

Special vocal music entitled "Builders" was rendered by some of the young ladies from Mt. Olivet (G) Church.

An open forum conducted by Miss Cotten revealed the fact that the young people of the Valley are actively engaged in service through their Christian Endeavor and Missionary Societies.

The meeting closed with a hymn and the benediction.

To these people the benediction was not the ending but rather the beginning of something. They are giving themselves and are looking forward to even greater things now that they have become organized in a conference group. They have a fine list of officers who are capable and willing to do the task which has been set before them, and the officers can count on cooperation from the key workers, the young people and leaders in each church. Each of them are truly saying, as Nehemiah did, "Let us rise up and build."

TRAINING SCHOOLS.

The other day I heard the superintendent of a Sunday School in the Valley of Virginia, with an enrollment of 131, say that he was hoping and planning to have two car loads of young people and leaders from his Sunday School attend the 1936 Summer School of eLadership Training at Elon College. Are you making such plans for your Sunday School and Church?

However, there will be other opportunities for preparation before the Elon School. Community schools (denominational and interdenominational), training classes in the local church, and other schools will be available to most of our people. Then there are the correspondence courses which are taken by writing to Dr. Erwin L. Shaver, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Massachusetts. Books can be borrowed from the Board of Christian Education, 505 South Main Street, Norfolk, Va.

Beginning next Sunday, November 10th and continuing through Friday, the 15th, the schools of Nansemond County will send their people to the Training School to be held in Suffolk Christian Church. Dr. Elwood W. Jones is teaching a course which will be most helpful to any teacher: Ccurse I—"The Pupil." Dr. N. G. Newman will teach Course 4—"The New Testament." Dr. J. G. Truitt has been selected for Course 22—"Beginners' Materials and Methods"; and Rev. Carl R. Key, who is also dean of the school, will teach Course 53-63-73—"Adolescent Department Administration."

Every teacher, leader, officer and prospective worker in Nansemond County Congregational-Christian Churches should avail themselves of this splendid opportunity and attend this Third Annual Standard Leadership Training School.

NEVER AGAIN.

"With the old wounds still unhealed, and the old scars
An angry red across the minds of men,
What is this ominous sound—these 'rumors of wars?'
Oh, merciful God, surely never again;
Surely never as long as the old earth stands,
Through any imagining, could there be need
Of that stark horror! Dear God, stay the hands;
Blot out men's avarice, their jealousy and greed,
And wipe one word forever from our tongue;
'War,' the fiend, the wastrel, wipe it out;
'War,' the hideous slayer of the young.
God, help us rise above it, help us shout
Our freedom from it to the farthest star:
'Never, never again shall there be war!'"

—Grace Noll Crowell.

"HALT!" CRY THE DEAD.

It is because brave and loyal men gave of themselves so freely that today we say so surely, "The way of war does not work." The doughboys tried it! They took this way to achieve high aims. The road of war did not bring them to their goal. We who go on to the better peaceful ways shall not forget the service of those who explored the deadened roar of war. We shall need the same full measure of devotion. We must render the same unflinching service to high ideals on the road which is ours because of their sacrifice. The ways of peace will make demands upon us.

—From "The Pilgrim Highroad.

APPARITIONS.

Who goes there, in the night,
Across the storm-swept plain?
We are the ghosts of a valiant war—
A million murdered men!

Who goes there, at the dawn,
Across the sun-swept plain?
We are the hosts of those who swear;
It shall not be again!

Points for talks—

Good health has come to most of us as a priceless heritage. Although we have the desire for good health there are many people who are not willing to guard the things that will keep them healthy. They forget that they need rest, sleep, fresh air, nourishing food, exercise, and clean living.

There are a few people in this world who actually enjoy poor health. In fact, if they should wake up some bright morning and find that they did not have an ache or pain they would not know what to talk about. These people like sympathy and they like to get someone to listen to their story of poor health. But no one desires to be around a person who forever has the headache or is always boasting they could not sleep the night before.

Young people, especially, like to be around persons of a cheerful disposition. If you feel bad don't let people get the idea you are a chronic grouch. Most hospitals have a sign in each room asking the patients not to discuss their ills with each other. This is a fine thing—if anyone is sick enough to be in a hospital he certainly does not want to hear about the "isms" of his fellow patients.

Good health is one of the deciding factors in the making of a successful life. One certainly can not put their best into their work if they are in poor health. A strong, healthy body is one of the greatest assets any person can have.

It has been said that the danger hours for health are the hours of leisure. What one does in their leisure time greatly determines the state of their health. No one can spend their leisure time in riotous living and expect to keep a healthy body.

It is sad indeed to see some people who have such good ideas and willing hearts and the mind to work for the Master, but do not have the physi-

Sunday School Lesson

EZEKIEL TEACHES PERSONAL RESPONSIBILITY.

Lesson VI—November 10, 1935.

Golden Text: "Each one of us shall give account of himself to God."—Romans 14:12.

Lesson Text: Ezekiel 18:1-32; 33:1-10.

The Jews thought of God's dealing with them largely in terms of the nation. But when the Jewish nation went into exile and ceased to be a nation as such the problem of personal responsibility became of primary importance. It was Ezekiel who gave new emphasis to this idea of personal responsibility. In his memorable words, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die," he stated an abiding principle of life. He was saying, in his way, exactly what Paul said in another way, "So then every one of us must give an account of himself to God."

In Ezekiel's day there was a proverb to the effect "The fathers have eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are on edge." There is, of course, social consequences in sin. One cannot build a wall high enough or thick enough about his sins to keep them in—they inevitably touch other lives. But this proverb was being used as an excuse for sin. Then, as now, people were blaming their sins on others. Ezekiel boldly announced the principle that every man was responsible for his own sins. Heredity, environment, circumstances, enter in. They may make it easier or make it harder for one to do right or wrong. But in the final analysis, every man is responsible for his own sin. And every man must give an account of his own deeds done in the body. This is one of life's as well as one of religion's sternest facts.

There was another erroneous doctrine abroad in Ezekiel's day. Stated in general, and not too precise terms, it was to the effect that one could lay up in store righteousness, to be credited to his account when he became unrighteous. In other words the people of that day like so many people of this day, believed that because a man had been righteous for so long a time, he could take a fling in sin and get away with it. "The soul that sinneth, it shall die," repeats Ezekiel. If a man who has been righteous, becomes unrighteous, he shall have to pay the penalty for his sin. If a man who has been unrighteous, becomes righteous, he shall receive pardon for his unrighteousness. A man cannot store up merit like he can save up money, to be used as a bribe in the day of wrongdoing. Sin is always punished.

But Ezekiel brought a word of encouragement to his people and to us. He asserted that God had no pleasure in the death of the wicked. God is no vindictive, bloodthirsty autocrat, taking delight in administering punishment, and rejoicing in the death of any, even the wicked. His will is that all shall live, that all shall have His blessings upon their lives, that all shall come unto His salvation. He does not deliberately or directly punish any man. But those who refuse to obey him bring punishment upon themselves. And in their punishment God himself suffers. There are those who today believe that God is a kind of overgrown, vindictive autocrat who takes delight in punishing those who have broken his laws. Ezekiel's message about God at this point is needed today as in his day.

Although Ezekiel emphasized the sense of personal responsibility, in the sense that every man must recognize his own guilt for his own sin, he also emphasized the sense of social responsibility. Men are not to allow others to go on their way to destruction without making an honest and a loving attempt to save them. He presents this truth in the figure of a watchman and his responsibility.

In those days it was customary to have watchmen stationed in high towers to watch for the approach of an enemy, and to sound the warning when such an enemy did appear. Woe unto that watchman who did not warn at the approach of an enemy.

Thus, says Ezekiel, are we set as watchmen for our fellowmen. If we see a man walking in the ways of the wicked we are to warn him. We are to do everything we can to turn him from his wicked way. If we cannot turn him, we have at least discharged our responsibility. But if we see a man walking in his wicked ways, and do not warn him, his blood shall be upon our hands. This is a solemn word for all of us. Ministers, parents, teachers, friends—all of us have obligations to others who are not Christians, or who walk in forbidden ways.

In both of these messages of Ezekiel there is a message of hope for the penitent. No chapter is so dark that there is not hope as long as there is the penitent spirit. God yearns for His erring and wandering children. God has no pleasure in their death. God freely grants forgiveness to those who confess their sins and forsake them.

"Each one of us shall give an account of himself to God"—these are solemn words. Each one of us—it is a strictly personal matter. We shall not have to give an account for someone else's sins. We shall give an account to God—there will be no chance for deceit or for evasion. Let every man take heed what he does and how he lives. It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God. God is love, His judgments are just. But sin cannot go unpunished. Because His moral government is at stake, God must allow sin to be punished. But in the Cross of Christ we see the love of God meeting the sin of the world and overcoming it. Thanks be unto God that wherein sin did abound, grace did much more abound.

cal strength to accomplish their tasks. It should be the great privilege of those who are blessed with physical strength and good health to do their part and share in the work of the Master, so that the person in poor health should not have to overtax himself.

Discussion—

1. What effect does the use of our leisure time have on our health?
2. Tell of some persons who have overcome some handicap of physical weakness and made a great success of their life.
3. Sometimes when a person is sick someone will tell them that "they don't live right." To what extent may this be true?

Special Music—"More Like the Master."

Period of Directed Prayer—

1. Thank God for the increasing knowledge pertaining to good health.
2. Ask God to make us aware of the relationship between good health and the abundant life.
3. Ask God to give to each of us the determination to safeguard and protect our health.

Closing Hymn—"Yield Not to Temptation."
Mizpah Benediction.

MONDAY.

"EASY DEATH."

"All things are yours; whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death."—I Cor. 3:22.

Did it ever occur to you that death is yours? Paul says it is. If so, how?

Death is so inevitable and so certain to each and every one that we think of it often as an enemy whose victory is certain,—an enemy whom we would like to avoid, so long as life is strong and hopeful, but we cannot avoid Him; an enemy to whom we belong and to whose possession we must submit, desirable or undesirable.

If Paul is right, death is no enemy. Death belongs to us and not we to it. Death is our friend. Therefore, it is something to be reckoned among our treasures and resources. It is to be accepted as one of our opportunities. It is the door to the eternal. It is another birth into another life,—a life of eternal success and accomplishment. It is the laying aside the mantle of the flesh and of this world's affairs and donning the robes of God's glories.

These thoughts may make one happy. In them the Christian loses his pallor, his eyes shine with the light of expectant immortality, where God places the crown of hope on his brow, and he says, "O death, where is thy sting, O Grace, where is thy victory. The sting of death is sin, and the strength of sin is the Law but thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord, Jesus Christ."

Prayer—O Father, we pray for that life and that comprehensiveness of the eternal, that makes death but the awakening from the dream of life and find ourselves in thy presence.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"A PUTTING ON."

"When this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory." —I Cor. 15:54.

Louise Chandler Moulton's comment on the joys of death is this:

"To the believer death is not a step into the dim unknown, but a step into a region lighted by Jesus. Death is not the end of something; it is not an enemy that crushes us; it is not a loss, a defeat, a calamity; it is a possession, a weapon in our armory, an opportunity, a resource. It is not a putting off, but a putting on.

> At end of Love, at end of Life,
> At end of Hope, at end of Strife,
> At end of all we cling to so—
> The sun is setting—must we go?
> At dawn of Love, at dawn of Life,
> At dawn of Peace that follows Strife,
> At dawn of all we long for so—
> The sun is rising—let us go."

Prayer—Our Father, endow us with the nobler passions and capacities for service which no death can winch. This we ask for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"THE GRACE OF GOD—WHAT?"

"My grace is sufficient for thee."—II Cor. 12:9.
"God is able to make all grace abound unto you."—II Cor. 9:8.

It is said, "Grace is more than pity with a tearful eye; more than mercy with outstretched hand; it is an arm made bare for a mighty task."

And the power of that arm lies in the invisible graces of life. These graces are expressed in His love, his patience and pursuit of the wayward and lost, His compassion for the saved, His prayers for us, His meekness and gentleness, and his certainty of doing all things for the best to them that love and serve Him.

Prayer—Our Heavenly Father, we crave that grace of thine that reaches out to the utmost and touches the depth of every soul. Blot out our sins and sink them into the depths of the unfathomable sea. Wash us and make us whiter than snow. In the name of Christ we ask it.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"MY SACRIFICE."

"If any man be in Christ he is a new creature; behold all things are become new."—II Cor. 5:17.

One sometime hears an inexperienced soul speak of the sacrifice necessary to become a Christian. Would it be a sacrifice to you if one told you to lay off your old suit of clothes and he would give you a new one instead? It is believed that instead of looking upon such a change as a sacrifice it would be considered a desirable change. You would be glad of the new suit regardless of whether it had some money in each pocket or not. The blessings that come from forsaking sin and living in Christ are immeasurably delightful, and the coat of righteousness carries with it blessings as if it had money in every pocket.

Prayer—Our Father, we are so feeble and guilty in our attachments to the things of this world! Forgive us. Renew us in thy grace. Baptize us afresh with Thy spirit and cover us with the cloak of thy love and righteousness.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"LIFE'S GENERATORS."

"Abstain from all appearance of evil."—I Thessalonians 5:22.

There are but few people who have lived about machinery who have not learned just how close to get to a generator, rather how far to stay away from it. Life depends upon it.

Life's experiences should teach one of all the damaging power of certain things, and just how far to stay away from them.

All ways come to a conclusion. And what do we find in our way? Life? Happiness? Peace? If so, all right. If not, the end of that way is destruction, saying nothing of other certain destructive things. There are things that destroy our higher sentiments, the peace of conscience, the life of the spirit, our faith, our love, our hope, our character, our soul, and the penalty is final banishment from His presence into the dark unutterable fires of self-reproach and remorse.

Prayer—Dear Lord, and strong Father, forbid that we shall yield to the weakening or disintegrating forces or the downward tide. Give us strength to rise constantly from what we are to what we ought to be.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"ROYAL FOLLOWING."

"Whither thou goest, I will go."—Ruth 1:15-18.

Why do we love Ruth more than any other woman of the Old Testament, more than prayerful Hannah, more than regal Esther, more than Jephthah's fated daughter? We love Ruth because of her loyal following. It was a following so rare, so entire, so sweet and beautiful that it deserves to be called royal, and she, though a Moabitess, from a heathen nation, deservedly obtained a place among the ancestors of our Lord.

To say to any one, "Whither thou goest, I will go," proves a heroism of unselfishness. And when this is said to a poor old woman of an alien race, the following of whom would mean the leaving of home and all other loved ones, the devotion is so rare that it shines out among the chief glories of the Bible.

Prayer—As Christians, and so in spiritual descent from Ruth, may we follow her glorious example. May we say to Thee, O Son of God, with all our hearts forever, "Whither Thou goest, I will go."—Amen.

SUNDAY.

"TIME FOR GOD."

"They read in the Book of the Law of Jehovah their God a fourth part of the day; and another fourth part they confessed, and worshipped Jehovah their God."—Neh. 9:1-5.

How strange that we find our least time for our most important interests! Nehemiah's people were not so pressed by inanities. They took half of that day for Bible reading and the worship of God. They did not demand that the church service should be confined to an hour and a half, and then grumble if the sermon was more than twenty minutes long.

God created time and gave it to us. It is His fundamental gift, for all other gifts are conditioned upon it. Why should we give it so grudgingly to His service? Why should we not lavish time upon the things that God knows and we should know are the vital things?

Long stretches of reading in the Book of books. Long periods of meditation on our course of life and on the goodness of God. Long communions with our Father and Saviour and listenings to what the Spirit has to say to us. These make a strong life, and nothing else will.

Prayer—Forgive our foolish occupations, dear Lord, and sweetly persuade us to be bent upon the things that are best.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

ON GOING TO CHURCH.

"Go to church. Not only be punctual, but be in your place before the hour for the service is announced to begin. Then you will not disturb other worshippers. Go in a reverent spirit. On the way remember whither you go. Avoid lightness of manner and conversation on worldly topics. Before you enter and as you enter the church, breathe a silent prayer of invocation for the influence of the Holy Spirit. As you take your place, bow your head reverently in prayer for yourself and for all others who enter the sanctuary for the services about to begin. Resolve that you will foster no thought, fix your eyes on no object, utter no word, that will tend to divert your mind from the holy purpose for which you have come into this place. As the minister enters the pulpit, offer an earnest, silent prayer in his behalf. In all the service take an active part as hearer, as worshipper. At the close of the service, after a moment of prayerful silence, greet with cheerfulness all whom you happen to meet, remembering that Christian fellowship is a part of Christian worship."—From West End Church, Greensboro, Bulletin by Bishop Vincent.

THE MINISTRY OF PAIN.

By Costen J. Harrell.

"Who passeth through the valley of Baca make it a well."—Ps. 84:6.

A Hebrew lexicon will tell us that "Baca" in the tongue of ancient Israel means "weeping." This is the key that unlocks for us the beauty of one of the richest lines in the Psalter. Dr. Alexander Maclaren's translation preserves to an unusual degree the psalmist's imagery and thought: "Blessed the man . . . .

Who, passing through the valley of weeping, makes it a place of fountains."

Tears perform an effectual ministry in the lives of God's children. I knew a noble man who for long months suffered intolerable pain. Many an afternoon I sat beside his bed to cheer him as he traveled through his valley of Baca. Later, when he was convalescing, we were alone and talking of the things of the Spirit. "I thank God," he said—and the furrows that pain had left on his face were lighted with a strange radiance—"I thank God for all my suffering. To know him as now I do is worth the price that I have paid." Recently a letter came from another who, passing through a bereavement, had found springs in the valley. "It has left the road lonely for me," says this woman of sorrows, "But it has given me an understanding and sympathy that I could not have had otherwise."

In the valleys of Baca, God works great transformations in us. The flesh and the spirit are strangely mixed in our nature and the discipline of pain is the fire by which the dross is consumed and the gold is refined. By a severe process God breaks our bondage to the things that are seen, and perfects us in faith and hope and love. Our Father's face is never so lovely as when we see it through the mist of tears. Blessed is the man who when the occasion comes, as come it will, yields himself to "the ways" of God, knowing "that sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us."

What we suffer may be a more effectual contribution to the world than what we accomplish. One who has passed through great sorrows and experienced the gentle ways of God with his children may take the a sorrow-stricken neighbor by the hand and say: "I understand. I have passed this way. Be of good cheer; there is light beyond the hill." His words are balm to broken hearts. In the valley of tears we are ordained to the ministry of consolation.

Others, shut in from the world by infirmities of body, are especially called and prepared to be the priests of God. They enter into the holy of holies, where most of us do not go, and assure us of the things which we who live in the garish day do not see or understand. We are finding them every day, these men and women of God committed to a life of invalidism. Three things I have often observed on entering their sickroom—a Bible, a hymn book, and a face that reflects the glory of God. Lingering as they do on the border of the spirit land, they are vested in the mysteries that "angels desire to look into." Their pain-disciplined and grace-filled hearts are as fountains along life's way, and thither we go, rather than to the scholars of the world, for refreshment in the faith that passeth knowledge.

A holier mystery invites our contemplation. "He began to teach them that the Son of Man must suffer many things." The Captain of our salvation, passing through his deep valley of Baca, made it a place of fountains—and the waters of those fountains are for the healing of the nations—and blessed be his name!

When the shadows deepen, Lord, abide with us. In the shadows, Lord, subdue our spirits, and incline our hearts to find their rest in Thee. Thru the shadows lead us, Lord, into thy joy. Amen.

EDITORIAL.

We agree most heartily with the editor of the Methodist Protestant-Recorder, who declares that, "It is too much for the men of the church to delegate the missionary enterprise to the women." The women have done well. They have done the most that has been done, but they cannot do all that ought to be done. The Laymen's Missionary Movement is seeking with commendable zeal and energy to enlist the men along with the women in this supreme task and fundamental work of the church.

In the pamphlet issued, there are outlines of addresses on "Missions," many essential missionary facts and suggestions, whereby Men and Missions Sunday may be made an event of real worth to the church and the kingdom. We trust many of our pastors will observe the day in emphasizing Missions in the church.

"BIBLE SCENES AND BIBLE THEMES."

The pastor of our Winchester Church, with the aid of his good people, is putting on a series of services with striking themes and programs. The services heretofore held have attracted much attention and large audiences. Beginning Sunday night, November 10th, a series "Emphasizing the Bible and the Home" is to be observed. The program is quite unique, there being a picture of a bungalow at the back of the church standing on the Holy Bible. An interested member, writing of the themes and the program, under date of October 28th, says:

"At the back of the church during last night's service, there was a little bungalow, just like the one on the circular, standing on a large Bible, which was made by one of our members. The little house had electric lights in it and looked very pretty and attractive, indeed. The whole theme of our next series is to be built around the home and the Bible, building the home on the Bible."

Following are the dates and themes to be presented at the services:

Sunday Night, Nov. 10th.

Part 1.—"How We Got Our Bible," Pictures.
Part II.—Dramatic Sketch, "The Way."
Part III.—Scenes in Living Bible.

Sunday Night, Nov. 24th.

Part I.—Dramatic Sketch, "The Dream of Pilate's Wife."

Part II.—"Pilate Washing His Hands," Rembrandt's Picture.

Part III.—"Parables in the Living Bible."

A beautiful 8" x 11" reproduction of Rembrandt's picture will be given each family attending.

Sunday Night, Dec. 8th.

Part I.—Dramatic Sketch, "Moment of Destiny."

Part II.—"Ruth and Naomi," Calderon's picture.

Part III.—In the Living Bible, "My Mother's Bible."

A reproduction of Calderon's picture "Ruth and Naomi" will be given each family attending.

Sunday Morning, Dec. 22nd at 7:00 A. M.

Part I.—"The Christmas Angel's Matin."
"The Living Christmas Tree."
Part II.—Sermon Reading, "The Lost Lord."
Part II.—Sermon Reading, "The Lost Word."
Part III.—In the Living Bible, "Adoration of the Magi," and "Arrival of the Shepherds."

A reproduction of Lerolle's famous painting, "The Arrival of the Shepherds" will be given each family attending.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

Several years ago the children had looked forward to a good chicken dinner for Thanksgiving. The good women had always furnished the chickens to give them a bountiful dinner. But that year the good women ,perhaps, thought the other churches would send chickens; all seemed to have the same idea and none were sent in at all. It was one disappointed group. We did not have the heart to have a good chicken dinner at home, knowing the children at the orphanage had none. We joined them in the disappointment and had our usual plain dinner. I am wondering if our good women will send us some chickens this year for a Thanksgiving dinner.

It will make all the little fellows happy. It will be easy to make up a crate in your church and ship to us. You can cull out the non-layers and they will be fine to eat.

Have you looked at our financial report? We undertook to raise $18,000.00 for 1935. We still lack $7,531.08. If everybody will get busy on the Thanksgiving offering and each church make a liberal offering we ought to reach the goal. Most churches have probably raised their Conference apportionments and that being out of the way let's put special stress on the Thanksgiving offering. These children must be fed, clothed and cared for. They are wards of the Christian Church. Help the orphanage be a real home for them. Now for an enthusiastic Thanksgiving offering in your church.

JOHN WESLEY.

for Wesley if he had not married at all. And perhaps Wesley's advice given repeatedly to young preachers who thought to marry, that they had better not, was based on his own unhappy experience.

In 1753 Wesley suffered a breakdown in health and he himself thought that he was going to die. In fact he gave up his work and prepared an epitaph to prevent as he said a "vile panegyric" by another. The epitaph read as follows:

Here Lieth the Body
John Wesley
A Brand Plucked Out of the Burning
Who died of a consumption in the fifty-first year of his age,
Nor leaving, after his debts are paid,
Ten pounds behind him;
Praying
God be merciful to me, an unprofitable servant!

As in the well-known case of Mark Twain, however, the reports of Wesley's death were greatly exaggerated. And although he did have to give up active work for over a year—during this time he wrote his Notes on the New Testament—early in 1755 his strength seemed to be fully restored and he was riding and preaching as usual.

Wesley, the Man.

It is difficult to sum up the character of such a many-sided man as John Wesley. Indeed the man is so great in so many ways that he is the despair and envy of those who try to reduce him to a summary. But Mr. Winchester makes the attempt in his extremely valuable and readable book which has furnished the material for this paper. He says that Wesley was every inch a gentleman, and by common consent had to an eminent degree two qualities that mark a gentleman wherever he be—courage and courtesy. Wesley had little if any sense of humor, and he probably denied himself somewhat too strictly the amenities of life. He had a sensitive and sympathetic nature, and he shared deeply the needs of the people to whom he preached. He was a scholar of the old school, a man of literary tastes, of broad outlook, and genuine culture. He was one of the best read men of his day, and he was especially well versed in the classics.

He wrote many volumes and most of his books have already been consigned to oblivion. But one of them, his Journal, is immortal. It is the record of his activities of a life-time, and it is one of the most valuable as well as the most interesting social documents of the eighteenth century, for it is not only a record of Wesley's activities but also a record of his dealings with other people. As someone has said, if you want to know the real life of England in the eighteenth century, read Wesley's Journal. The complete manuscript still exists, bound in twenty-six volumes, but only portions of it have been published, such portions as Wesley thought good for edification.

Wesley, like every other man was affected by the thought of his age. He emphasized with the men of his century the importance of sense and reason. He was also credulous. He believed implicitly in witchcraft for instance, and he ascribed to supernatural powers things that might have had a natural explanation. He was also somewhat sentimental, and that in spite of his critical temperament.

Wesley was born to command. He had a wonderful mastern over men. His will was of iron. In spite of the fact that he was soft-spoken, gentle in manner, holding himself perfectly in command, there was a strange dominance in his personality. Even his friends sometimes stood in awe of him. And yet there was nothing arrogant or overbearing in his attitude or his spirit. He seemed to overcome opposition by the sheer force of his will. He was never discouraged, and never impatient of results. There was nothing spasmodic or fitful about his activity, and for fifty years with fixed, unswerving will he wrought out his mission.

The glory of Wesley, however, lies on the fact that his dominating will was joined to an almost absolutely unselfish benevolence. Wesley sought nothing for himself. Of personal ambition he had none. He sought not power, but simply opportunity. He wanted only to reach men with his gospel of Christ which he knew was what they needed and what they wanted when they were in their truest mind.

Wesley was first and last, a man of religion. He believed that only supernatural power could change the human heart and cleanse the inner life. And he had implicit faith in God's ability to make good His promises. Furthermore he had faith in men, in men even of the lowest classes. And so not with a sudden youthful enthusiasm, but with a steadfast, life-long resolution, he gave himself to the work of winning men to righteousness, from the love of sin to the love of God. He believed that this could be done only by the power of personal religion. He was a philanthropist, a social reformer, but he was first of all, and always a preacher of personal religion.

In a century that was rich in names that the world calls great, there stands out in bold relief, losing none of his luster in comparison with any of them, this plain man, small in stature, but great in all the things that make men great, purity of motive, unselfishness of life, spotlessness of character. And as Mr. Winchester says "where among them all is the man whose influence—social, moral, religious—was productive of such vast good and of so little evil, as that exerted by this plain man who exemplified himself, and taught thousands of his fellow-men to know what the religion of Jesus Christ really means!" There was a man sent from God whose name was John, John Wesley.

CONCORD.

The revival meeting began here the fourth Sunday in July and closed on Friday night following. Rev. T. G. Underwood and the pastor preached on the opening day. The services were well attended.

Rev. T. E. White came to us on Monday and did the preaching until the close. His messages were very appropriate and helpful to all who heard. He made a very favorable impression upon the congregation. His fellowship was most agreeable. May the Lord bless him in his labors of love elsewhere.

The spiritual life of the church was deepened. Many consecrations, two professions of faith and one addition to the church membership. We are very thankful for the blessing experienced.

When we started to leave the closing night, our car was loaded with many good things for a pastor's pantry. We are very thankful for this kind expression made and hope we may be a more efficient pastor.

This church has built an extension to the front of the church, remodeled the pulpit recess, painted the new addition and placed new carpets on the aisles.

OBITUARIES

BROOKS.

Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom has taken from us to Himself our much loved member, Mrs. Flora Sellars Brooks, who for many years taught our class and was loved and esteemed by every member.

She passed away in the Wesley Long Memorial Hospital in Greensboro, N. C., Tuesday morning, September 24, 1935.

Therefore, be it resolved:

First: That in the passing of Mrs. Brooks the Woman's Bible Class of the First Christian Church, Burlington, N. C., has lost one who was ever zealous and efficient, and who at all times proved herself a conscrated Christian.

Second: That we emulate her virtues, cherish her memory, and with increased faith seek to carry forth the work that was so dear to her heart.

Third: That we extend to her family our heart-felt sympathy in this hour of trial and loss. May the Great Comforter be with them.

Fifth: That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family and to The Christian Sun for publication, and one be placed on the records of our class.

MRS. W. LUTHER CATES,
MRS. JOHN R. FOSTER,

LIPPETT.

Brother W. M. Lippett departed this life September 5, 1935 at the age of 68 years. Bro. Lippett had been a resident of Lanett, Ala., for some 30 or more years. He was a member of Lanett Christian Church but had not been able to attend the services of the church for several years on account of affliction.

He was cheerful and hopeful to the end. Shortly prior to his death he expressed himself as being ready to go.

He leaves to mourn his going a faithful wife and an adopted son and other relatives and numerous friends.

Bro. Lippett was a kind hearted and genial neighbor and friend, thoughtful and prayerful in his life. Our community will miss him.

God bless the sorrowing ones.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

Italy May Leave League.—

Mr. Mussolini gave warning this week to the nations participating in the league's sanctions against Italy, that if they did not desist, Italy would leave the league. Italy "has not wished until now to dissociate herself from the Geneva institution . . . because she desires to prevent a conflict, such as that now being considered, from leading to more vast complications." In addition to this threat of withdrawal to the league, are threats of economic reprisals. Latest news from London was that it was inconceivable that this protest would have any effect, notwithstanding Il Duce's warning of the "gravity of the consequences."

Up in the Stratosphere.—

The unsuccessful attempt made last year by Captains Albert W. Stevens and Orvil A. Anderson, is called to mind by the record-breaking success of these stratosphere flyers this year. The world's largest baloon, on last Monday, set an unofficial altitude record of 74,000 feet, or slightly over fourteen miles. At the highest point in their spectacular climb, the temperature was seven degrees below zero, centigrade, inside the metal ball in which Stevens and Anderson were riding, while outside the gondola the temperature was 55 below. Scientific observation was the main purpose of the flight, which, this year, as last, was sponsored by the American Geographic Society and the United States Army Corps.

We Hear from Russia Again.—

Dr. Walter Van Kirk, secretary of the department of international justice and good will of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, recently returned from Russia where he made a tour of investigation. He reports: "I have the distinct impression that before very long that country will be, in the main, a godless and a churchless land. Churches are neglected. They have been stripped of their crosses. Their general appearance is one of desolation. Training for the ministry is strictly forbidden." The offering at one church, visited by Dr. Van Kirk, "consisted of five pieces of black bread, four green apples and an egg. Russia is in the business of getting rid of religion as well as ecclesiasticism."—Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

Bankers' Head Asks Curbed Activity.—

Speaking before the American Bankers' Association on Tuesday of this week, Rudolf S. Hecht, president of the association, called upon the United States Government to withdraw from its "many fields of business." Said he: "When we contemplate the extent to which government activities have been expanded, we realize that a herculean task confronts the administration in reversing its policies and reducing the number now carried on the federal payrolls." He warned that unless a battle was waged for the free play of private enterprise and individual initiative, those who would bring about the socialization of all business enterprises by transfer of still greater powers to the government might gain the upper hand. He stated that the world appeared to have "unqualified confidence both in our economic future and the stability of our currency."

Payrolls Keep Climbing.—

Based on a study of twenty-five manufacturing industries, the National Industrial Conference Board recently released the encouraging news "that average weekly earnings have increased 15.5 per cent during the past twelve months, from $19.55 in September, 1934, to $22.59 a year later. In spite of the fact that living costs have risen, the increase in real purchasing power of the workman is 12.1 per cent more than it was a year ago—a substantial improvement." This Board found that man-hours worked and total payrolls suffered small decline from August of this year, but that this decrease in man-hours was due chiefly to the marked decline in the automobile industry, in anticipation of the 1936 models. The tendency was also noticed in five other industries, but in the remaining nineteen total man-hours worked showed increases. The report says that "Improvement was most marked in foundry and machine shops, in electrical manufacturing, in the hosiery industry, and in lumber and millwork industries."

Roger Babson on Tithing.—

Roger Babson says: "If the tithing process were in operation it would give the churches of this country $4,000,000,000 a year. The facts are that the church people of the country are giving less than one per cent of their income to the church and missionary work." If one doubts the statement of Mr. Babson, one needs only to go to the statistical tables of their local church conference. They will possibly read something like this: "One cent a week per capita for missions, one-half a cent for educational purposes, another half-cent for associational expenses, and a final half-cent for superannuation, ministerial relief, Sunday school and Christian Endeavor work, etc. A speaker before a recent Baptist Convention, made the statement that if each family of that convention—family, mind you, not individual—would dedicate one hen to the cause of Christian benevolences, and set aside the money received for eggs laid by that hen, the cause of missions and benevolences of the church would be vastly better off than under the present program of giving. This might well be said of other denominations than Baptists.

Anent Army Chaplains.—

The Central Christian Advocate, speaking editorially recently, has this to say regarding the Methodist Church's stand regarding army chaplains: "The Methodist Peace Commission's position on army chaplains is clear enough. . . It believes in chaplains, or their full equivalent. Americans in military service are not to be denied their right to religious teaching, counsel and help. But the Commission does not believe that these chaplains should be a part of the military establishment with rank, pay, and military obligations. They should be paid and supervised by the individual churches to which they belong. . . No Christian, pacifist or militarist, wants soldiers and sailors to be deprived of religious ministries. The growing objection is to an order of religious workers, paid, uniformed, regulated, and, when deemed necessary, used for military ends, by the State. The State cannot pay for religious work, whether in civil or military life, without controlling those whom it pays to do the work. State-controlled religion becomes, when the State's rulers choose, not religion, but an instrument of policy. We Methodists don't believe in that sort of religion."

The Bible Remains.—

It is a strange development of history that an Oriental book born and bred in the distant east, written down by a poor people living hardly and harshly on the very verge of subsistence, composed by men subjected to kings and tyrants, filled with images of a strange exotic splendor, should yet have become the foremost English classic, the glory of our English speech, the guide and inspiration of the world's wealthiest people. . . . This book has come a long way. It has surmounted huge obstacles of time and space to reach us. Yet it has reached us, and helped greatly to make us what we are and what we shall be. Our speech is clearer, simpler, more direct and stronger, because the echoes of this book in our ears have always been the charm of our childhood, the inspiration of maturity, and the comfort of our old age. Echoed by our poets and prose writers, the cadences and mighty phrases of the Bible have gone out into the lives of millions who never read it. They have saved many a weak writer from triviality and have lifted a few writers into acknowledged greatness. They have penetrated our thoughts and lives, and live there as an enduring standard of truth and beauty. Literary fashions come and go. This book remains. One of the cardinal dates in the history of American life and letters is the year 1535, when Myles Coverdale gave to England, and so to us, the first complete Bible in the English tongue.—Odell Shepard in N. C. Christian Advocate.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Rev. S. M. Penn's parish of four former Congregational churches, a new church at Hamlet and another at High Point, were received into the Western N. C. Conference last week.

As THE SUN goes to press, the Managing Editor learns with deep regret of the death, on Tuesday, of Mrs. Whitten, wife of Rev. R. A. Whitten of our Portsmouth, Va., church. The readers of THE SUN will join with us in sympathy for the bereaved. Funeral services will be on Friday.

Editor J. M. Rowland of the Richmond Christian Advocate says: "At the invitation of the President, Dr. L. E. Smith, I spoke twice to the students and faculty of Elon College, the official college of the Congregational-Christian Church. This is a fine college with buildings equal to any in the South, except Duke, and has a fine student body of nearly five hundred. There are more Methodists students than any other group. They gave me a fine reception. This is the fourth year I have been the special guest to this college, along with the list of visitors from other bodies."

We are pained, indeed, and grieved to learn of the sudden death of our dear friend and brother, Deacon W. A. Newman of our Henderson Church. Brother Newman was widely known in our fellowship because of his deep interest in church affairs, his attendance at Annual Conference meetings and other church gatherings. He had served as deacon in his church for the past 15 years and had been a member for 30 years. On last Christmas, he, with his wife, made a gift to his church which liquidated the entire outstanding indebtedness. Surviving are his wife, to whom he was married in 1893; three sons, Clarence D., and Archie W. Newman, both of Henderson, and R. W. Newman, Richmond, Va.; one daughter, Mrs. Addie N. Falkner of Henderson; five brothers, E. M., D. L., and K. H. Newman, all of Henderson and J. H. and C. E. Newman of Richmond, and four sisters: Mrs. C. D. Harton and Mrs. Lula Paynter, both of Henderson; Mrs. Mollie Hicks, Norlina, and Mrs. Iola Champion of Richmond, Va. Funeral services were held Monday at 3 P .M., from the First Christian Church. Rev. S. E. Madren Conducted the ceremony, assisted by Rev. A. S. Hale, pastor of First Baptist Church, Henderson, N. C.

The following items from our Miami Shores Community Church, Miami, Fla., sent by our good friend and brother, Dr. Clarence A. Vincent, pastor, will interest many SUN readers and give us a glimpse of courage under difficulties: "The North Miami Congregational-Christian Church was tipped to dangerous angle by the hurricane, the parsonage roof and porch blown down, Christ Hall and Christ Cottage unroofed. It is a hard blow to this church. Rev. and Mrs. Craig Bowdish are courageously leading this stricken church. The First Congregational Church was in part unroofed and damage done to the furnishings. It is hoped that the organ is not injured. Dr. and Mrs. Kerrison Juniper and the members are facing the future valiantly. The church is having a good beginning under their leadership. The Miami Shores Community Church was unroofed and the windows smashed. The draperies, cushions and carpets were water-soaked. A new roof is being placed and the furnishings have been dried and carefully brushed and are as good as new. The Cabinet meeting, following the hurricane, planned a Community Visit by the women in November, and one by the men in December. This Community Church started by Rev. A. J. Patterson and conducted by Dr. and Mrs. Clarence A. Vincent since October, 1934, is full of courage."

SUFFOLK PLANS BIG DAY.

Invitations have been given the pastors and churches of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference, also all pastors and churches of Suffolk, and various others, along with all members of the church and former members to attend the celebration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Suffolk Christian Church to be held next Sunday morning, November 17th. The public is invited and any who read these lines will be welcomed.

In the morning at 11:00 o'clock, the pastor will preach an anniversary sermon; and there will be special music. In the afternoon at 3:00 o'clock the program will be participated in by various churches, and pastors. Greetings from the former pastor; greetings from the president of the Eastern Virginia Conference; from the president of the local ministers' organization; special music; an address by W. E. MacClenny, and an address by Dr. H. Shelton Smith of Duke University. Come, let us make it a day of inspiration and good fellowship.

JOHN G. TRUITT, Pastor.

MT. PLEASANT.

Our revival began the first Sunday in October at 11:00 A. M. and continued until Thursday night of the following week.

Rev. H. E. Crutchfield assisted in the entire meeting. Brother Crutchfield is a student of the Word and a consecrated man. His sermons were very instructive on spiritual things. He made a very strong impression upon the church and congregation.

At the closing service a unanimous vote was made voluntarily by the congregation requesting him to return next year if possible to help in the revival. Our work was very pleasant together. May the Lord bless him in his work elsewhere.

The church was much revived and the spiritual life quickened. There were many consecrations, five professions of faith, five accessions to the church and general interest awakened in Christianity. During the week a piano was installed by the congregation. We are very thankful for cooperation manifested, and may the Lord be praised for all blessings enjoyed.

CONGREGATIONAL AND CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

By HERBERT D. RUGG.

FIRST PLEBISCITE RETURNS.

An out-and-out pacifist vote of 186, giving a majority of eleven in a total of 361, was cast on Armistice Sunday in New York City at the Broadway Tabernacle, the first church whose tabulated returns in the national peace plebiscite of the Congregational and Christian churches were received for Social Action.

The 186 were those who checked as their Christian faith that they "should bear arms in or otherwise support no war which the United States government may declare."

A much smaller proportion of pacifists was reported among the voters at ten other churches who put their returns into the mail Monday in time to be received at the Council offices Tuesday. These had only 123 pacifists voters out of 731. The ten churches were scattered, five in Ohio, four up-state in New York, and one in Massachusetts.

At the Tabernacle opposition to war as a means for settling international disputes has been consistently opposed by Dr. Allan Knight Chalmers since he became pastor in 1930 and by his predecessor, Dr. Charles E. Jefferson, during the thirty-two years of his pastorate. Dr. Jefferson became a leader in the peace movement at a time when few of its advocates were to be found outside of such sects as the Quakers and Moravians. Dr. Sidney Luther Gulick, secretary emeritus of the Department of International Justice and Goodwill of the Federal Council of Churches is a member of the Tabernacle and was formerly chairman of its committee on international goodwill; another member was the late Dr. Frederick H. Lynch, educational secretary of the Church Peace Union.

Only eleven voters in the plebiscite at the Tabernacle were under twenty-one. Of those whose sex was indicated, 131 were men and 221 were women.

The total vote at the Tabernacle was almost exactly that of the other ten churches. With this borne in mind, comparison of the balloting is easy. The two sets of votes were:

"I will support any war which the United States government may declare":
Tabernacle—12.
Other ten—26.

"I will support any war declared by the United States government against an internationally recognized aggressor":
Tabernacle—3.
Other ten—9.

"I will support only a war declared by the United States government after making utmost use of every agency for peace":
Tabernacle—90.
Other ten—308.

"I will support only a war in which United States territory has been invaded":
Tabernacle—70.
Other ten—275.

"I will support no war which the United States government may declare":
Tabernacle—186.
Other ten—123.

"I favor membership in the League of Nations":
Tabernacle: yes—212; no—122.
Other ten: yes—294; no—407.

"I favor consultation with other nations in support of the Kellogg Pact and other peace agreements":
Tabernacle: yes—296; no—12.
Other ten: yes—659; no—56.

"I favor national isolation through strict neutrality legislation":
Tabernacle: yes—150; no—181.
Other ten: yes—440; no—240.

"I favor more equal distribution of world resources and markets":
Tabernacle: yes—289; no—30.
Other ten: yes—619; no—94.

"I favor a larger army, navy and air force":
Tabernacle: yes—61; no—247.
Other ten: yes—234; no—490.

"I favor abolition of compulsory military training":
Tabernacle: yes—291; no—48.
Other ten: yes—470; no—252.

"I favor government control of the munitions industry":
Tabernacle: yes—291; no—37.
Other ten: yes—678; no—62.

By next week the returns should indicate definitely the trend of the voting throughout the country.

THE INTERNATIONAL COUNCIL.

Another college campus Council meeting has already been proposed. This time it is for the sixth decennial meeting of the International Congregational Council in 1940 and the invitation has come from Wellesley College, Massachusetts. The executive committee of the General Council has voted to recommend to the meeting at Mt. Holyoke College next June that the International Council be invited to meet in America at Wellesley.

The first meeting of the International Council was at London, 1891. Subsequent meetings were at Boston, 1899; Edinburgh, 1908; Boston, 1920; Bournemouth, England, 1930.

A MT. HOLYOKE GRADUATE.

Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, the first woman to hold a position in the cabinet of the President of the United States, addressed the Congregational Conference of New York and vicinity at the opening dinner of its fifty-seventh year in the Broadway Tabernacle, Armistice Day evening. She spoke upon the social security for which workers in a machine age must depend upon the government.

Miss Perkins is a graduate of Mt. Holyoke College and Mt. Holyoke graduates at the dinner sat together.

WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE.

The 65th Annual Session of the Western North Carolina Conference met with Antioch Christian Church, Randolph County, N. C., on Wednesday and Thursday, November 6 and 7, 1935 The president, Rev. T. E. White presided over the sessions. Rev. M. A. Pollard led the song services, and Rev. T. J. Green conducted the opening devotional service.

The address of welcome was given by Rev. D. R. Moffitt, pastor of the host church, and Rev John Q. Pugh gave the response.

Visitors were introduced and welcomed as follows: Rev. S. M. Penn, of Sophia Parish Congregational Church; Rev. John F. Hinshaw, of the New Testament; Rev. W. T. Scott, Winston-Salem; Rev. Roy Phillips and Rev. J. T. Kenyon, both of the Pilgrim Holiness Church; Rev. J. L. Foster, Supt. Chas. D. Johnston and Rev. A. L. Granger, Jr., from Elon College. Mr. J. T. Kernodle of THE CHRISTIAN SUN and Mrs. Kernodle; Rev. S. C. Harrell, President of the Southern Convention and Mrs Harrell, president of the North Carolina Woman's Missionary Conference.

For his annual sermon, Rev. T. E. White used as his subject: "Partnership With God." This was a splendid message which inspired and uplifted the members of Conference.

Six new churches were received into the Conference: Hamlet Christian, East Green-High Point, and the following Congregational Churches: Sophia, Flint Hill, Bailey's Grove, Providence Chapel. Rev. S. M. Penn was admitted by transfer as an elder and Rev. John Q. Pugh was ordained.

The C. E. Society of Pleasant Hill Church gave a C. E. program at the session Wednesday evening.

Rev. A. L. Granger, Jr., delivered two excellent addresses in behalf of "Missions" and Elon College.

Mr. J. T. Kernodle addressed the Conference in the interest of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and Mrs. S. C. Harrell reported for the Woman's Missionary Board. "Our Orphanage" was the subject of an address by Supt. Chas. D. Johnston.

The officers for the new conference year are: President, T. E. White (re-elected); Vice-President, Rev. T. J. Green; Secretary, Geo. T. Gunter (re-elected); Treasurer, O. D. Lawrence (re-elected); Member N. C. Council of Churches, Dr. Jas. H. Lightbourne.

The Antioch Church and its pastor did their best to make the Conference a success and they were given a rising vote of thanks for their hospitality.

The churches were practically all represented by delegates or by letter.

COLUMBUS, GEORGIA.

On Sunday, November 3rd, the Union Congregational-Christian Church, of which Rev. Frederick Held is pastor, Columbus, Georgia, had a Home-Coming Program.

This church has recently experienced a gratifying awakening and an increasing interest is being shown in all of the departments of its work.

On Sunday morning Dean George C. Bellingrath of Piedmont College preached; his theme was "The Church." On Sunday afternoon Dr. Milo J. Sweet held a special service dedicating the renovated church structure. Rev. David W. Shepherd, former pastor of the church, also spoke in the afternoon. In the evening the Pastor, Rev. Frederick Held, brought an inspiring message, calling upon the members to reconsecrate themselves to Christian service. The ladies of the church served two delicious meals.

There was a large attendance at all services and much enthusiastic interest shown.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

All delegates and preachers who expect to attend the Eastern North Carolina Conference to be held at New Elam Christian Church on November 19th and 20th and who are coming by bus or train, please notify Mrs. J. L. Goodwin, New Hill, N. C., Route 2, at once in order to have cars to meet them at Merry Oaks, N. C. Also give time of expected arrival.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

BILLY SUNDAY.

With the passing of Rev. William A. (Billy) Sunday, not only a great figure but a great event take their place in history. At different periods and through different methods and personalities, God has ever and always delivered His message and revealed His will to mankind. One did not have to admire or even agree with the manner and methods of Billy Sunday in order to admit that here was a man on fire for righteousness and consumed with a passion for wrecked lives, wayward men and unregenerated souls. Billy Sunday was as unlike D. L. Moody in his method of approach to mankind and the delivery of his message to the world as Moses was unlike Elijah and John the Baptist was unlike Saul of Tarsus. At different stages of human history and development, God speaks in a tongue and tone that can be understood by, at least, some people of the time in which He speaks. We often talk and jubilantly sing of the "Old-Time Religion." There is no other kind of religion than the "Old-Time Religion." It is the "Old-Time" because it is the need and salvation of the new time. Our Father in heaven is infinite in resources and does not have to repeat Himself in creation or in revelation. He speaks to every age in terms of that age.

Billy Sunday was a creature of his time, and though thousands in the church and out of it differed from him in their methods of approach and presentation, Sunday was a source of inspiration and of salvation to thousands, by the grace of God. Tens of thousands are leading sober industrious and better lives today, because Billy Sunday lived and wrought and labored as he saw and found his way in the service of his God. Years ago in the heyday of his power and influence, this writer chanced to be in Baltimore when Billy Sunday was conducting a campaign there. Day after day as the meetings went on, the morning papers would tell of drunken sots who were reclaimed, of saloons that were being voluntarily closed up and of brothels that were banished by the preaching of this man. Thus, you could shudder at his violence in the pulpit and his athletic activities at the sacred desk, and you could wonder why the man acted like that; but when you read what God was doing in Baltimore in making drunken men sober and dead men and women, in trespasses and in sin, come to life and begin to live again, one just had to marvel at the way and resourcefulness of God and admire a man who had such influence and power in reaching men and women for a better life.

Billy Sunday's day has passed now, but somewhere on the horizon others are appearing with messages of hope and of eternal life. Thus the workers die but the work of God goes on through men and women who dare to commit themselves with all their strength and might to the will and way of God.

THE CHURCH AND THE COUNTRY COMMUNITY.

In 1927 Bishop O'Hara, at that time Father O'Hara of the Catholic Church, published a book entitled, "The Church and the Country Community." In this book the author declares that "any religious force which is weak in the rural districts is at a serious disadvantage both in the city and the country." The Commonweal, a Catholic magazine, devoted to religious literature and public affairs, in its issue of November 8th, points out some startling facts which every church and every branch of the church should have for serious consideration and advisement. Our Catholic contemporary, after pointing to the fact states that about 80 per cent of their membership are thoroughly organized and live in cities and towns, mostly in the larger and congested cities—New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston, Cleveland, etc.

"Meanwhile, in common with all large town and city dwellers, they are doomed to extinction, so far as the perpetuance of their family life is concerned. Three or four generations of town or city life is the limit of any family's existence. Immigration having been stopped, it seems clearly evident that the Catholic population of the United States is bound to decline more or less rapidly. The Catholic birth rate is only slightly higher than that of other groups; and, as a whole, it would seem that by 1940 the population of the United States will become stationary, and, after that, it will fall off. Only a rejuvenated agrarianism appears to offer this nation an escape from such a fate. Only by the great increase of the Catholic portion of the revived rural life can the Church in this country, humanly speaking, be saved from dwindling rapidly from this time onward."

That which The Commonweal calls to the attention of the Catholic Church should come home with a degree of seriousness and concern for us of the Congregational-Christian Churches. We are, especially here in the South, very largely a rural church. This being the case, our responsibility as a family in the field of righteousness is unmistakable and presents a challenge that we cannot afford to ignore. Our opportunity in the rural districts is most inviting, and in the words of our Saviour, when He looked out upon the multitudes, we can say: "The harvest truly is plenteous but the laborers are so few." Our country parishes certainly have now the privilege of making a real contribution not only to the people within their parish but to the world at large and to the cause of Christ, in particular. The Commonweal points out that the farm population have about four million more children than any city group of equal size. "Farm families average three children, whereas, city families average less than two children."

If ever intelligent, consecrated leadership was needed in the pulpit, that need is now for the pulpits and parishes of our rural communities.

ARMISTICE DAY AND WAR.

Last Monday, November 11th, we celebrated Armistice Day. There was a fine spirit of patriotism, as well as an inexhaustible passion for peace, expressed by thousands of public speakers and recorded on the printed page. In peace time, we talk peace and the casual observer would think that war could be no more. However, in very truth, war is being waged now on a gigantic scale. Airplanes are dropping their deadly bombs, cannons roar, swords flash, blood flows as a strong nation of the world, practically unhindered, goes to conquer a weak nation and to take because it can.

As far as the present writer knows, war has not been declared by Italy against Ethiopia, but Mussolini, the dictator of Italy, simply goes after the weak with the arm of the strong, regardless.

The fact that this war is being fought six thousand miles away by no means guarantees that the rest of the world will stay out of it. If the crime and the stupidity of war could count for anything, surely the nations would avoid war; but they do not count. We cannot conceive, for the mind cannot grasp, the losses and the destruction through war. By a statement in the Congressional Record, January 13, 1928, the World War caused a loss of 30,000 lives and $400,000,000,000 in property. "With that sum of money, says the Nashville Christian Advocate, it would be possible to build a $2,500 house with $1,000 worth of furniture, place it on five acres of land worth $100 an acre, and give all this to each and every family in the United States, Canada, Australia, England, Wales, Ireland, Scotland, France, Belgium, Germany and Russia. And after doing this, among other things it would be possible to build a $10,000,000 university and a $5,000,000 library in every city of 20,000 in the above-mentioned countries.

"We would then have a sum left sufficient to endow 125,000 nurses, and 125,000 teachers, and pay each $1,000 a year.

But mankind, in his stupidity and weakness, has ever devoted his keenest intellect, greatest ingenuity and skill to the science of war.

With these facts staring us in the face, our own government is right now spending for war the largest sum of money in its history during peace time. Our War and Navy Departments, for the present fiscal year, starting July first, are to spend $792,484,265. No wonder the United States Senator Nye declared that the Vincent Naval Bill, which became a law, "was the most vicious bill ever passed."

THE STRUCTURE OF A PUBLIC PRAYER.

By Robert Lee House.

Delivered before E. Va. Ministers' Conference.

"When ye pray, say . . . . "—Luke 11:2.

"When ye pray, say . . . " what, how? That is the problem of public prayer. We say with words, not with flowers. We do not merely commune with nature, we say a prayer. How and what are we going to say?

Now a great many people who habitually pray in public have obviously never really faced that problem. Consequently their prayers become monotonous, for they are all so much alike. And it becomes somewhat pathetic when you know in advance just about what a person is going to pray. There are children who facetiously pray the characteristic prayer of an older person practically word for word. No wonder some people form a wrong attitude toward prayer. The prayers they hear begin in the same old way, the same things are prayed for in the same way; there is no new and fascinating scenery, and they invariably end by "taking us home to Heaven."

Why should a prayer not be a thing of beauty? Why should a prayer not have variety? We like variety in homes, variety in dress, variety in menu, why not have variety in prayer? Must a prayer be less sincere because it is adorned with beauty of language?

The truth of the matter is this, we are taught how to do almost everything but to pray. The minister studies the art of building a sermon, but how many study the art of building a prayer? It is taken for granted either that we can depend on inspiration of the moment, or that it is just such a simple and unimportant matter that any one can do it. We often lament the fact that so few people lead in public prayer and conclude that they fail to do so because they are not good enough. I suspect that a great many laymen, good men, do not lead in public prayer for the same reason they never sing a solo in public: they have never been trained.

Public prayer is an art. Prayers may be as rich in beauty and variety as life itself. It is no more sacreligious to prepare a prayer than to prepare a sermon. The preparation of a prayer does not eliminate the leadership of the spirit, it magnifies its opportunity. The study and preparation of a prayer does not mean that the prayer is addressed to man rather than to God. It means simply that one should not be careless concerning his speech, or even indifferent to grammar, when he comes into the presence of God.

Christ taught his disciples to pray. If our generation becomes a praying people it will not be merely because we urge and exhort them to pray, but primarily because we teach them to pray.

What is the structure of a prayer? How may a prayer begin? Is there more than one way to address Deity?

I. Ways of Beginning a Prayer—

1. By way of Exclamation:
   - O Thou Great Companion
   - O Lord God of Hosts
   - O Searcher of Hearts
   - O Thou Ever Gracious God
   - O Fathe rof Light
   - O God of all Truth
   - O Most Liberal Distributor of Thy Gifts
   - O God of Patience and Consolation
   - O Blessed Lord
   - O Great Lord of the Harvest
   - O Thou Blessed Son of God
2. Deity may be addressed and a descriptive phrase set in apposition to it:
   - O God, our Father
   - "Our Father, Who art in Heaven"
   - O God, the inspiration of all goodness
   - O God, our help in ages past, Our hope in years to come"
   - Gracious God, our Father
   - Eternal God, our Heavenly Father
   - O God, the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, Father of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ
   - O God, Who hast made of one blood all the nations of mankind
   - Almighty God, in Whom we live, and move, and have our being
   - O Thou Who art the Companion of our Way
   - Lord Jesus, Our Great Elder Brother
   - O God, Whose joy is in service to Thy children
   - Lord God Eternal, with whom one day is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as a day
   - Our Father, who art our Life and our Light
   - O God, who hast called us into Fellowship of Thy Church
   - Our Father, Giver of every good and perfect gift
   - Lord! Our Light and our Salvation
   - Almighty God, Fountain of Life and Light
   - Blessed Lord, who for our sakes wast content to bear sorrow
   - O God, who hast promised to hear the prayers of Thy people
   - Merciful Father, to whom all sons of men are dear
   - Almighty Father, whose Grace doth ever keep and whose Love can never fail us
   - Almighty God, unto whom all hearts are open
3. The prayer may begin with a statement or petition, rather than a direct address:
   - Thou hast been gracious to us, Our Heavenly Father
   - Come to us, Thou Strength Divine
   - As we face the tasks of the day, O God . . .
   - We are reminded, Our Father,
   - From infirmity of purpose, O God, save us
   - Accept the work of this day, O Lord
   - Deliver us, we beseech Thee, O Lord
   - Grant, O Lord
   - Thou knowest, O Heavenly Father, our temptations
   - Grant me, even me, dearest Lord, to know Thee
   - Incline our hearts, O Lord, that we may . .
   - We turn to Thee, O God, that we may renew our strength
   - We adore Thee, O Lord, in thy great Love
   - Into Thy presence we come, Our Father
   - In the name of Jesus Christ we come to Thee, O God
   - Teach us, O Lord
   - We thank Thee, Our Father
   - Free us, Good Lord from the fascinations of false pleasure
   - Enlarge, O God, our soul's desires
   - With the dawn of a new day, Our Father, Our hearts are uplifted to Thee
4. Deity may be addressed directly:
   - God of Love
   - Our Father God
   - Our Gracious Heavenly Father
   - Holy and Righteous Father
   - Father of all
   - Thou Confident of the troubled heart
   - Lord of all things in Heaven and earth
   - Our precious Saviour

II. Each prayer should have a general theme. It should be a particular type of prayer rather than a conglomeration of all types. There is infinite variety even in unity. We have all been well reminded that it is not necessary to pray for and about everything under the sun every time we pray, unless we only pray once each year.

As we consider various types of prayers we will discover certain strategic words, words that give direction to our praying, words that open up vast areas of thought, words that serve as open doors through which we pass into the very presence of God.

A. Adoration.

1. Scripture: Psalm 103:1-5
2. Hymns: "Fairest Lord Jesus," "May Jesus Christ Be Praised"
3. Key Words:
   - We bless Thee, we praise, hallow, worship, adore, reverence; We bless Thee We bless Thy Holy Name
4. Expressions of Adoration and reason for Adoration.
   - Our Father, we rejoice in the privilege of lifting our hearts to Thee
   - Thy glory is excellent, mercy unending
   - Thou art altogether worthy
   - We are feeble, fickle, fleeting; Thou hast all power, all wisdom, all time, and the eternities (Note the contrast as a technique of prayers.)
   - Thou, whose majesty is the character of love
   - We are overwhelmed with the sense of Thee who are beauty and sublimity and unity of all that lives and has being
   - Thy love, so beautiful and mighty, draws us to Thee
   - We lift up our hearts to Thee
   - We are entranced by Thy gentle wooings
   - We are overwhelmed by Thy majesty
   - We rejoice in the assurance of Thy love

B. Confession.

1. Scripture: Psalm 51
2. Hymns: "Just As I Am," "I Need Thee Every Hour"
3. Key Words:
   - Confess, acknowledge, realize, repent, regret, concerned, troubled, burdened, ashamed
4. Specific Confessions:
   - There are sins of thought and sins of action, sins of omission and sins of commission
   - We have followed too much the devices and desires of our own heart
   - We have returned evil for good
   - We acknowledge our miserable sins of ingratitude
   - Teach us to confess our faults, that a way of reconciliation may be found
   - Thou, O Lord, knowest our sins
   - We acknowledge our transgressions
   - With contrite hearts we confess our sins, pleading for the cleansing that God gives through the atoning blood of the cross, and for the sanctifying power that causes us to grow into the beauty and strength of the Christ life
   - We kneel in humility before Thee
   - We confess before Thee our sins, and beseech thy forgiveness
   - We sincerely repent of all wrong doing
   - Pardon us wherein we have grieved Thee
   - We humble ourselves before Thee, Holy Father, confessing that we have sinned against Thee in thought, word, and deed, yet Thou hast been long-suffering to us, and hast borne with

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Annual Conference is a place of emphasis and enthusiasm. Every report and every department, when presented, seems more important than any other. Every leader lifts his point of view into supreme importance. This is normal and natural. Such an attitude is essential, provided it does not develop a spirit of competition and self-exaltation.

After the Conference session, ministers and delegates return to their respective places to continue their work. If the spirit of the Conference could be carried into the daily routine of the local church many problems would be solved and many discouragements could be overcome. But the spirit of the local church is not always encouraging. Indifference cools the enthusiasm, and spiritual lethargy retards the progressive program.

The recent session of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference was enthusiastic and forward looking. A summary of the church reports indicates a net loss in membership for the year 1935. This can be accounted for in part by the revision of church rolls. As a matter of fact the number of members received was less than for the year 1934. This is a disturbing situation. The financial record shows a gain while the membership shows a loss. For several years the total membership of the churches has shown little increase—sometimes a loss.

Paying church debts is important. Raising money for the various departments and institutions is essential. Beautiful buildings and adequate equipment serve a high purpose in the kingdom. But the ancient kingdoms of Israel and Judah lost their spiritual power and were defeated while they proudly pointed to the magnificence of the temple in their midst. The splendor of Solomon's temple did not make the people safe nor prolong their prosperity. Churches cannot live by buildings, and institutions, and delightful conferences, and full treasuries. These things are conducive to progress, but they are not the only essentials.

Occasionally one hears the question, "Why does the church not grow?" There are many answers to this question. Probably the best answer is, "Because it is not missionary to the point of winning souls." Raising or giving a respectable sum for missions does not meet all the requirements of a missionary standard. Compared with a quarter of a century ago, the churches of the Southern Convention are becoming more missionary, when measured by the receipts for the mission treasury. But how about the passion for winning souls? In the Eastern Virginia Conference the reports of the Home and Foreign Missions work have been submitted on the first day of Conference, when the attendance is large. The Report on Evangelism is read on the last day of Conference when the attendance is small and the delegates are in a hurry to get through and go home.

Now the time has arrived when Convention, Conferences and local churches should be deeply moved to undertake a concentrated program of numerical growth. If the Congregational-Christian Churches cannot be effective in winning souls for Christ and the Church it is time to abandon the field and let others take our place. Our churches can grow. They have a right to claim the promise and power of the Lord Jesus Christ. The needs are great at home and in foreign fields. The church should be as urgent in calling for souls as in seeking for dollars. The harvest of souls is more important than the table of the money changers. The membership roll is more vital than the bank balance of the church treasury. Church buildings with elaborate equipment and chapels with plain altars should respond with the shouts of new-born souls. Ministers and laymen should go to their places of secret prayer and pervail upon God for the gift of the soul-winning power. When that comes the churches will blossom as a rose, and grow like the palm tree.

COLLEGE PUBLICATIONS.

The students of the average college today are ambitious for mediums through which to express themselves to each other and to the public other than by word of mouth. They like the printed page. They like to write themselves and like to read what others write, particularly if an article has to do with themselves or with their fellow students. Some hesitate to put their ideas in print, others delight in such opportunities.

On the average campus today we find a college annual, which is an annual publication intended to reflect the habits, customs, and achievements of the students and the college itself. It specializes in the accomplishments of the seniors. The college annual is supposed to crystalize not only the achievements of the school with particular reference to the seniors but the very atmosphere of the campus itself. Yearly this publication is left somewhat as a monument to the senior class by which it was largely created. Elon College has such a publication. We call it The Phipsicli. The name is the combination of the first syllable of the three original literary societies, The Philogian, The Psiphelian, and The Clio. I am sorry to say that these organizations have about disbanded. Sororities and fraternities have come to take their places.

There is usually a publication in the interest of the alumni. The purpose of such publication is to keep up with the graduates and former students of the college that the college may know something of the whereabouts and achievements of its family. This is a very helpful publication since it is hardly possible for an institution to develop beyond the achievements and influence of those whom it has sent out into the world. At one time Elon published The Alumni Voice. This was a very creditable publication and rendered valuable service. This publication is intended to appear at regular intervals. It has been some time since The Alumni Voice has been published but it is hoped that some alumnus or alumna will instigate a move for the reappearance of this valuable paper.

Then, too, the average college has a weekly paper. This paper is the creation of the student body from year to year. All classes are represented. All who are ambitious to see their names in print are given the opportunity to contribute articles. Some students take advantage of such columns to air their grievances with reference to policies of the administration and other happenings. Others welcome the opportunity to offer helpful and constructive suggestions. The college functions and affairs of the college in general may be advanced. At any rate the weekly paper affords an opportunity for the individual student to discover his possibilities and exercise his talents. The weekly publication at Elon College is known the The Maroon and Gold, our college colors. For years this publication has appeared regularly and was sent from the campus to the alumni and friends as well as being distributed to enrolled students. Because of financial difficulties, The Maroon and Gold dropped out of existence for a number of years. Last year, 1934-1935, it appeared rather spasmodically. Professor M. L. Patrick of High Point, N. C., President of the Alumni Association, was largely responsible for reviving The Maroon and Gold. This year the paper is attempting to stage a comeback. The second issue was distributed last week. It is hoped that the staff of the paper may be able to find a way by which The Maroon and Gold may make its weekly appearance in the interest of Elon College. The ones in charge invite and solicit the friends and alumni to send in their subscriptions for the paper. The price is $1.00 for the year. Won't you lend encouragement and assistance by sending your subscriptions at once to The Maroon and Gold office at Elon College, North Carolina? Mr. William Lloyd Cooper of Norfolk, Virginia, is editor-in-chief, Miss Edith Ernst of Cincinnati, Ohio, is managing editor, and Mr. North Lewis of West End, North Carolina, is business manager. We hope for your encouragement.

GOLDEN WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

Can there be anything so wonderful and so beautiful as fifty years of happy married life? If I were to ask some people I know, I would not be sure of their answer. But if I were to ask Brother D. B. Wall and wife of Garner, N. C., I am certain of the answer I would receive. Fifty years ago, October 6, 1885, these two people were united in marriage and this past October 6, 1935, they celebrated their Golden Wedding Anniversary.

October 6, 1935, I was preaching at Hayes Chapel as it was the regular preaching day. After the service Brother Wall introduced his son to me. He wanted me to go home with him and eat dinner which was to be served at two o'clock. All of his children, grandchildren and great grandchildren were out at his house waiting for his return from church. On account of another service that afternoon, it was impossible for me to go.

Since his marriage fifty years ago, there have been born twelve children into this union. Now the children are grown and they have children. He has fifty-four grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. Besides these there were others who gathered there October 6, to the number of about 85. What a happy time they have had together and I know that this father and mother enjoyed it more than anyone else there.

I know of no couple so loving and charming as these two. They always have a smile for you and they give you a warm reception wherever they meet you. They are solid and substantial members of the Hayes Chapel Christian Church in Garner. You can be sure that we miss them when they are not able to be at services. Unless prevented by ill health they are there when church services begin.

They have seen happy moments and sad moments in their life together. Now most of the children have left home and have gone into various occupations of life, leaving the home with sweet memories. But never will those children forget the kind hands of father and mother who love them so dearly. May many happy moments and experiences come to this beloved couple as they enter the fifty-first year of their marriage and may God let His richest blessings be upon them and their family.

THE CROSS AND PEACE.

It has come! Italy has deliberately set out to subjugate and exploit Ethiopia. Great Britain is armed and alert. The rest of Europe is "jittery" and doubtless all Asia as well as Africa is wondering what next.

Secretary of State Hull of our government reminds us that "at this moment when there is a menace to a war that may not be confined to any two nations but spread among several nations, there is a weighty obligation resting on the Church to exert itself in every conceivable manner to impress the people with a hatred of war and a love of peace" and that "these present dangers are a challenge to the Church to engage in what should be nothing less than a flaming crusade."

"Flaming crusade! No, not the smashing maces and bloody swords and row on row of slaughtered "infidels"; no, not the Mussolini method of civilizing the "barbaric hordes" of a coveted country; no, nor those night gatherings with burning crosses that have so long inflamed the white race against the black.

But a thoroughgoing Christian crusade. In the spirit of the Cross the Church must strive for a Christian order among nations. It must work for such laws and law enforcement as will proscribe war, do away with the means of war, and sustain effective sanctions against all unprovoked aggressors. It must stand firmly for international agreements and the sanctity thereof. It must lend its influence to every sound movement in behalf of a world organization for common protection and development. It must crusade for those international conditions out of which arbitration and cooperation naturally grow and from which the unity of the race becomes a common basis for action.

Yet, after all, world peace is but a by-product. The Church's supreme concern is that will-to-peace, that spirit of friendliness and justice, that understanding mind and sympathetic heart thru which cooperative undertakings can actually become effectual. Develop these, and right relations in nations, as in individuals, will follow. Envy, Greed, Fear, Hatred—how can such thrive or even live in lands full of active good will?

In other words, there can be no crusade without the Cross. Action in behalf of a Christian social order calls for a Love that longs to pour out its life for others. This is the only way of conquest, the only means of bringing in the Kingdom of God on earth, the only power potent enough to assure peace. Christ Himself would never have set his face "steadfastly toward Jerusalem" had God known of any better way of saving men from sin or of creating a heaven in human relationships.

Each Christian interprets for himself the Way of the Cross that leads to world peace. It can be no easy road that he travels. Rough and full of suffering, it will call for the best of his life's blood. Definite and concrete, it will be something into which he can throw himself with flaming zeal and enthusiasm.

So we lift high the Cross. We reverence it as the symbol of God's conquering grace; of an irresistible, transforming power at work in the heart and life of humanity.

From our standpoint there is no truer Way of the Cross than that which leads a Christian to leave his own home and country to take up life in a foreign land; to identify himself with that people in such a way that he can be an interpreter of one nation to another, can be a bond between one people and another, and can be an instrument of God in "impressing the people with a hatred of war and a love of peace."

Nor is there any truer Way of the Cross than that along which men and women in this country sacrifice their "mites" to support of the world mission of the Church and to all allied international movements.

As an immediate opportunity for the expression of our crusader spirit let us not forget the Peace Plebiscite to be taken by Congregational and Christian churches on Armistice Sunday, November 10th. This is an earnest attempt to secure serious thought upon the relation of the Christion to war and world peace. If rightly carried thru it will stir our consciences and steel our wills in obedience to the vision that will appear along the Way of the Cross.—Missionary Herald.

STRUCTURE OF A PUBLIC PRAYER.

our short-comings. Grant unto us true repentance

Our Heavenly Father, who knowest our proneness to forget Thee in the busy rush of life, and while health and success attend us, we ask Thy forgiveness for our want of gratitude, and selfish lack of filial affection. We are of the earth, earthly, unworthy of our Heavenly parentage, and yet we are Thy children

Our weakness and faults, which oft-times grow to errors and misdeeds forgive—nay, cover them with Thine eternal love

Forgive us when we have hesitated in the face of duty and been wilful in our own conceits

We humbly confess our sins, and wait Thy word of forgiveness

With penitence we confess our sinfulness

So often we forget . . .that Christ died for us

C. Thanksgiving

1. Scripture: Phil. 4:6; Ps. 100:4
2. Hymn: "For the Beauty of the Earth"
3. Key Words:

We thank Thee, We bless Thee, We offer our thanks, accept our thanks, We come in humility and gratitude

4. The Range of Gratitude:

We thank Thee for: creation, preservation, childhood, home, the joy of the body, the light of the mind, the perception of the soul

Open our eyes that we may constantly see how greatly Thou hast blessed us

We thank Thee for our noble heritage, youth, vigor, enthusiasm—for life, its outlook and prospect—for our Master teacher and unfailing Friend

Strengthen us in the grace of Thanksgiving

We offer to Thee the sacrifice of Thanksgiving

Our hearts overflow with gratitude and our lips show forth Thy praise

We thank Thee for Thy mercies toward us as a people, for the measure of plenty and peace and progress which has been ours, and above all for Thy love which pursues us and preserves us

We give Thee thanks that there is One who knows us and cares

We thank Thee for another day in which we may make amends for our failures and meet the responsibilities of the new hour with fresh inspiration and courage

We are grateful to Thee for all the mercies so abundantly bestowed upon us through Thy Son

We thank Thee that we may come to Thee

Our Father, in thankfulness we come to Thee, remembering the night of rest, and the new light of another day

We thank Thee for all that makes life worth living

Our Heavenly Father, accept our thanks for the re-creation of body and mind Thou hast given us in the hours of wonderful sleep

Our Father! We thank Thee for the tenderness enwrapped in the very name by which Thou art known to us

Dear Father, the privileges are so exceedingly great that we can hardly conceive that they are ours—to come to Thee at any time and any place and commandingly invited to ask and seek and knock, with the Divine assurance that we shall receive—for these privileges, dear Father, we are thankful

THANKSGIVING AND CHRISTMAS PROGRAMS.

Is your church and Sunday school making special plans for Thanksgiving and Christmas programs? If so, do they need help?

One Sunday school has decided to make their Thanksgiving program center around "Our Orphanage." Some young people's groups will have charge of a sunrise service on Thanksgiving Day. The churches in some communities will join together for a service on this day. Many children, young people, and adults are anticipating making Thanksgiving a day of sharing with those less fortunate. Many homes will be happier because church people did not forget the sick, the hungry, those in need of real friendship.

To the Sunday school superintendent, pastor and leaders in the church, Christmas carries with it the thought of special programs, pageants, plays, and pantomimes. Some churches will celebrate this season with a play presented by the Sunday school and church, others will favor a pageant on Sunday evening, while some churches will have pantomimes and special worship programs.

One of the finest plays is "A Gift for the Christ Child." Pageants include "The Bethlehem Inn," "Good Will Among Men," "Bethlehem," "At His Throne," "Fulfillment," "When the Star Shone," "The Shepherd Lad's Gift," "The Shepherd's Vision," and "When the Christmas Star Shone," (a Christmas program for children). Among the pantomimes are "Why the Chimes Rang," and "At the Door of the Inn." Services entitled White Gifts for the King include "The Christmas Bells," and "No Room in the Inn." "A Little Child Shall Lead Them" (a Christmas service of dedication for the Church) is the title of another service.

Splendid worship aids for Thanksgiving and Christmas can be found in the October and November issues of the "International Journal of Religious Education."

The Board of Christian Education, 505 South Main Street, Norfolk, Virginia, is prepared and eager to help you with your programs. They have all the above mentioned programs, pageants, etc., in their office and will gladly lend them to anyone who will write. If they do not have what you want, they will secure it or assist you in having the kind of program you desire.

"OUR CHILDREN'S HOME."

What does your Sunday school, church, and other organizations expect to do for the Christian Orphanage during the Thanksgiving season? The Orphanage is asking that we make our Thanksgiving offering for them a bit more than last year. They need our whole-hearted support.

Why not center your Sunday school program on November 24th around Our Children's Home? Some people know very little or nothing about the good work which is being carried on by this institution, and they are not supporters because they do not have the knowledge which you have. You might give a brief history and tell of some of the work which is now being done. Mr. Charles D. Johnston will furnish you with material needed for such a program, if you do not already have enough.

Begin right now making plans for this service, and do your best to make the offering a large one.

SPEAK TO THAT YOUNG MAN.

"Run, speak to that young man."—Zech. 2:4.

Run! Hurry! Speak to that young man! There is no time to lose!

Why such haste? Need I answer that question? Consider the peril that young man is facing, and of which he is scarcely aware. There are so many snares, so many pitfalls, along the way on which he is setting out. He has never made the journey before. He does not know where these dangers are. If he falls into them, he may never recover himself and his whole life may be blasted and ruined. Even though he should recover himself, he may not be able to realize all that would have been possible for him, if only somebody had warned him and steered him clear of these dangers.

Speak to that young man. Warn him. Urge him to make the most of his youth. Remind him that youth is the best time to lay up in store good things for the future. Hurry! The days of his youth will soon be gone. What is done must be done quickly. Impress this upon him. Tell him that now is the accepted time, that now is the day of salvation. It is imperative that you tell him this, and tell him at once. If he wastes his youth, the future will bring to him responsibilities and opportunities for which he will not be prepared.

Speak to that young man. Never was there such an age to be young in as this. Never was there an age when the young man had such advantages and such chances as he has today. Never has there been a time when the young man had the privilege of placing his fingermarks upon such mighty history-making events as he has in this great day. Surely it is urgent that the young man be made to realize this. Speak to him. Speak to him quickly. So much is transpiring around him. His opportunities are so tremendous.. Make haste. Do not delay. If he is not aroused, the splendid things he might do will not be done, and this will mean a great loss both to him and to the world.

Points for Suggested Talk—

"Log Cabin Days to the Airplane Age."

From the first Thanksgiving in America in 1621 to Thanksgiving, 1935, many changes have taken place. When our forefathers celebrated the first Thanksgiving they were living in log cabins, and scarcely had enough food to eat. Death and disease had entered their stockade and reduced their number; savages were lurking around the colony awaiting an opportunity to kill or capture them. Even with all these hardships they found many things for which to be thankful.

If the Pilgrims could be thankful for the meager things they had, then surely we citizens of this great nation should remember and be thankful for the privileges we enjoy. Under our form of government we enjoy liberty and the pursuit of happiness. We have the rare privilege of worshipping God according to the dictates of our own conscience, a privilege for which we should never forget to thank Him who gave to us the priceless gift, and is the Giver of all good and perfect gifts.

We have the opportunity for education in our public school system; in our colleges and universities we may prepare ourselves for any occupation we desire. God has made possible through science and man for us to reap the benefits of the marvelous inventions which we have. Let us think of a few! Our steamboats and railroads that carry freight and passengers to all parts of the world; electricity, which lights our homes and makes our work easy; the automobile which is no longer a luxury but considered a necessity to the home and business; the telephone, where one has only to lift a receiver and call England or some friend aboard a passenger liner bound for Europe; and by the turn of a dial the radio brings to our home the message of the great artists of the world. Then too, we have the airplane which has literally brought the west coast to the east coast—board a plane in New York at eight o'clock in the morning and dine in San Francisco the same evening.

God made is possible for these gifts to be given to the world. But the greatest gift He gave to us more than 1900 years ago when He gave us His Son. Jesus was the greatest Gift that will ever be given to the world. As the Pilgrims gave thanks and blessed Him in 1621, so must we in 1935, with bowed heads and a prayerful heart thank God for His many blessings during the past year.

Period of Meditation—

Have each member tell: "What great things God has done for him."

Special music: "Count Your Blessings."

Ought There Not Be A World-Wide Thanksgiving for the Life of Jesus?

From Nazareth He comes, the carpenter
Who knows of hammering and blows that break
The worker's hands. From Galilee He comes,
The fisherman who walks upon the lake.
Through fields of harvest, ripe for plucking grain;
Along the dusty roads that go beside
The vineyards, Christ, the noble carpenter,
Goes to the city to be crucified.

Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

THE RETURN FROM CAPTIVITY.

Lesson VII—November 17, 1935.

Golden Text: "The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad."—Psalm 126:3.

Lesson: Jeremiah 29:4-14; Ezra 1:1-11; Ps. 126:1-6.

"That the word of Jehovah by the mouth of Jeremiah might be accomplished"—thereby hangs a tale, a tale that is significant. For seventy years before, Jeremiah had had occasion to write to the Jews who were captive in Babylon. He had told them frankly that they need cherish no hope of immediate return to Palestine. He suggested that they settle down, buy land, build houses, marry and give in marriage, and live in such a way as to promote peace and prosperity in the land of their forced adoption. Then he added, "For thus saith the Lord, That after seventy years be accomplished at Babylon I will visit you, and perform my good word toward you, in causing you to return to this place." God kept his word. Prophecy was fulfilled. The captives did return. Let every man who scoffs at the idea of Biblical prophecy think twice before he speaks. There are too many fulfilled prophecies in the Bible to look lightly upon the unfulfilled ones. God is working out—it may seem very slowly at times—his purpose for the race. The eternal years are His.

"The Lord stirred up the spirit of Cyrus, king of Persia." Here is another significant word. God hath not left himself without witness, not even among those who do not know Him, or know him only at second hand. Cyrus was a heathen king. He did not worship Jehovah. He knew of Him only through indirect contact with the Hebrews. But the spirit of God moved on Cyrus' heart. And Cyrus, who in another place is referred to as one of the "Lord's annointed" or "His servant" helped to carry out God's purpose. Jehovah is the God of all the nations. Their life and history is within His purpose. He makes even the wrath of men, and the history of nations to praise Him. Indeed for those of us who believe in the living God, there shall come out of the troublous times in which we are living, something that future historians will show to be the unfolding of God's purpose, and of the movement of the race to the final consummation of His one, divine, far-off event toward which the whole creation moves.

"He hath charged me to build him an house at Jerusalem, which is in Judah." The Jews had had no house of worship in Babylon. There had developed, however, the synagogue, which was, and still is, a strong factor in the religious life of the Jews. And the worship of Jehovah had been cleansed and spiritualized. But there was still a need for a Temple which should symbolize the presence of the Unseen God in the midst of the restored community. Worship in essence is spiritual. But there is incalculable value in the visible house of worship. Every church in every community is a mute but eloquent witness to the belief of the people of the community in a living God. And the church ought to be of such a nature that it would reflect honor upon God. This does not require that a church should be expansive or expensive. It does require that it be neat and attractive.

"Who is there among you of all his people?—his God be with him and let him go up to Jerusalem, and build the house of the Lord God of Israel!" It was a call and a challenge to heroism and sacrifice. It meant giving up the security of home, comfort, convenience, the means of livelihood, and making a perilous journey of nearly a thousand miles back to a country that had been laid waste, and from which all the best people had been carried away. But there were in that group of exiles those who still responded to the challenge of the difficult. Because they loved their Lord more than they loved their lives, they rose up and followed the Gleam. The call still comes today, in one way or another. And at heart it is a call to heroism and sacrifice. Following Christ, being a real Christian today, costs. But there are those who, when they hear His voice, rise up and follow Him.

"Whosoever remaineth in any place where he sojourneth, let the men of this place help with silver and with gold. . . " All cannot go to the foreign field, all cannot be ministers. But all can have a part, and should have a part. Those of us who cannot go ought to pay. If we cannot go in person we can go in purse and in prayer. The kingdom of God cannot come simply with money, but it cannot come without money. Self, substance and service are all needed in the work of the Kingdom.

"Then there rose up the chief of the fathers . . . the priests . . . with all those whose spirit God had raised. In this age in which so much emphasis is placed on youth it is well to remember that here is still a place for age and maturity. The world might not move ahead very fast if the old men ran it, but it would not move very safely if only young men ran it. Each needs the other. There must be those who are "fathers" and there must be those "whose spirit God raises up"—the experienced and the enthusiastic. And there must be those who give religious sanction, those who stand for the recognition of God in life—the priests as representatives of that great and glorious host of all ages and all creeds who seek in various ways to keep alive in the conscience of men and the life of nations the sense of the living God.

"Also Cyrus the king brought forth the vessels of the house of the Lord, which Nebuchadnezzar had brought forth out of Jerusalem, and had put them in the house of his gods." It is fitting that the house of God is furnished with those things that will render our worship more efficient and beautiful. Nor are we to appear before our God empty-handed.

Some one, undoubtedly one of the returned exiles, wrote a beautiful poem—Psalm 126—which expresses the emotions of the people when they came back to their beloved land. It seemed like a wonderful dream, too good to be true. There was a sense of deep gratitude. There was a new understanding of the disciplinary value of affliction and suffering. There was a prayer that the people would find true freedom. There was a new recognition of the greatness of Jehovah. This song or psalm strikes the deep notes in the human heart. It is a very appropriate meditation at this Thanksgiving season of the year for us as individuals and as a nation.

THE YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

Jerusalem's streets are filled with those
Who cry, "Hosanna!" and others, "Crucify!"
For all of these He hangs upon the cross
That lifts itself into the purple sky.
For all of these the Master lived and died.
His lamp is tall and bright; our lamps are dim,
But we can see the way ahead of us.
For where the Master goes we go with Him.

"CHRISTIANITY' POWER."

"For God hath not given us the spirit of fear; but of power and of love."—II Tim. 1:7.

In Paul's love for him he exhorteth Timothy to stir up the gift of God which was in him.

There have been those who were Christian thru fear. Not the "fear of the Lord," which is a term used to express love for the Lord; but thru the fear of punishment. If Paul is right, such a fear does not come from God. God is not a master to drive us, neither is it possible for us to develop Christian character that way.

Christian character comes through a condition of heart that renounces sin because of hate for it, and follows Christ because of love for Him and for the things of God. Love, then, is the power that satisfies all goodness, and through love one rises from the earthly to the heavenly.

Prayer—Father of all mercy have mercy on us feeble beings and make us in heart all Thou wouldst have Thy children to be.—Amen.

"HEAVEN MOVED TO TEARS."

"And when he was come near he beheld the city and wept over it."—Luke 19:41.

Jesus weeps over Jerusalem. "All the physical and mental sensations known to man were known to Christ. He stands on the mountain of Olives beholding Jerusalem richly decorated for the coming of Passover. As He contemplates the future of the city, he is moved to tears. The thought that this beautiful city had not accepted the Kingdom of God and that soon the enemy would overthrow it, is the reason for His weeping. This destruction was actually accomplished by the Roman army not many years later. How our Lord must weep over His prodigal children!

Prayer—Our Father, we pray for our souls. Come Thou and dwell within us that life may merit Thy praise of "well done" and not be cast out into "outer darkness." Give us also a hungering and thirsting for righteousness like our Saviour's, that we too may weep over things wrong. Strengthen our hands to help make things right. —Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"THE VICTORY."

"He will swallow up death in Victory."—Isa. 25:8.

"Thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory."—I Cor. 15:57.

"Whatsoever is born of God overcometh [has the victory over] the world."—I Jno. 5:4.

"In all these things we are more than conquerers [victorious] through him that loved us."—Rom. 8:37.

"Thine, O Lord, is the greatness, and the power, and the glory, and the victory, and the majesty." —I Chron. 29:11.

Prayer—O Lord, we thank Thee that every morning when we get up we have something to do. And whether we like it or not it is something to do that challenges victory. Inspire us to do our best give us the power of self-control. Give us diligence and strength of will, cheerfulness and contentment, and all the virtues of a consecrated heart which the unbeliever or the idler doth not know. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"THE GOOD NEWS."

"Behold a virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a son."—Matt. 1:23.

"Rejoice and be exceedingly glad; for great is your reward in heaven."—Matt. 5:12.

"And thou shalt call his name Jesus."—Matt. 1:21.

"Who will put a new heart within you, and a new spirit within you."—Ezk. 36:26.

"That thy ways may be right, and the just shall walk in them; but the transgressor shall fall."—Hosea 14:9.

Prayer—O Father, give us Christ to do our work each day, and if despair or discouragement overtake us may we not forget the strength that comes from Him. May we not forget that we promised to be faithful, to be strong midst the tempests of the oncoming days. Spare us from the bitterness of sharp passions in unguarded moments, and may all our thoughts and actions be such as shall keep us friendly with ourselves and approved of God.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"LIKE A SUN."

"Let them that love the Lord be as the sun when he goeth forth in his might."—Judges 5:31.

Christ said, "Ye are the light of the world." Today we are told that we are as the sun. If we are light we will want to shine. If we are the sun we are bound to shine.

Anybody must manifest what he is or else he is a coward. Any one that knows Christ can say so, and such testimony with a life that supports it is the best method of proclaiming Him.

It does not matter whether the lamp is a gorgeous thing of gilt and richness, or whether it is a poor piece of black tin. The thing that is important is, does it shine? A pitcher may be of gold or costly brilliant crystal. That does not matter. The thing that matters to a thirsty soul is, has it got water in it to quench thirsty lips.

The important thing about a Christian is, does he shine? This is the condition of all faithfulness to Jesus.

The electric light shines so long as it is in contact with the power. The Christian must shine so long as he is in touch with God.

Prayer—O God, forbid that we shall say we have no light. Take Thou our light that burns so dimly and fire it with Thy spirit.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"FRUITFUL FEAR."

"Serve Jehovah with fear."—Ps. 2:1-12.

Has David, who so loved the Lord, no better word for us than this? Would he base our service of God upon fear and not upon adoration? Would that not be a servile obedience, a slavish doing of God's will?

Of course this is not the psalmist's last word, but only his first word on the subject. Because we begin with fear, we need not end there. Fear is the groundwork upon which love erects its beautiful throne. Fear is the solid foundation of service, while love is its soaring superstructure.

But alas for the service of God that does not start with reverence and awe! Alas for the joy in the Lord that does not begin with trembling! Ours is a great God, a jealous God, and we fallible mortals need the upholding of that stern knowledge. Love is strong, but only when it is strengthened by justice.

Prayer—We approach Thee, our God, with adoration. We kneel before Thy throne even when we know that tenderness is enthroned upon it. In serving Thy love, we would never forget to serve Thy righteousness.—Amen.

"SNOW JEWELS."

"Hast thou entered into the treasuries of the snow?"—Job 38:19-24.

No one who has made a study of the snow has failed to be delighted with the endless beauty and variety of those wonderful water crystals.

The snow covers the earth with a protective blanket. The snow fertilizes the soil. The snow transforms the ugliest object and makes it charming. The snow enriches and glorifies any landscape. The snow prepares spring all through the winter.

So it is with every object of God's creation. The more we study it, the more amazed are we at the boundless wisdom and power of the Creator. All things are good that He has made. All things are useful. We can be sure that what we see in the little is also in the vast, and that to the remotest verge of the universe, and all universes, there is nothing that is not gentle as the snow, beautiful as the snow, powerful as the snow, and wise as the snow.

Prayer—Admit us, O Creator, into the treasuries of this world where Thou hast placed us. May we come to see Thee in all things.Amen.

GEORGIA CONFERENCE ENTERTAINED.

Piedmont College and the Union Church of Demorest were joint hosts to the Second Annual Meeting of the Georgia Congregational and Christian Conference on Wednesday and Thursday, October 29th and 30th.

This Conference was well attended, practically all of the churches in the State being represented. A feature of the opening programs was an informal reception to the Conference by Rev. and Mrs. H. B. Mowbray, President and Mrs. Henry C. Newell, Rev. and Mrs. M. J. Sweet, and Rev. and Mrs. J. H. Dollar, in the church parlors.

On Tuesday evening the retiring Moderator, Rev. Jesse H. Dollar, delivered an inspiring address on "The Church's Task in the World Today." The Conference Sermon was preached by Rev. R. Wiley Scott, new minister of the Central Church, Atlanta.

On Wednesday morning the Conference attended the College Chapel, at which time, President William J. Campbell addressed the students.

On Wednesday afternoon Mrs. D. E. Brown of New York spoke to the women and President Campbell to the men's section of the Conference. The young people took part in an inspiring program under the leadership of Miss Annie Campbell, social service worker for the State of Georgia.

The Communion Service in the afternoon was an inspiring worship experience. Chaplain Walker of the college made a few impressive remarks.

The Conference closed with Piedmont College Night Wednesday evening at which time President Newell told about the work of the College.

HE GAVE THANKS.

By John G. Truitt, D. D.

"And he took the seven loaves and fishes, and gave thanks."—Matt. 11:20.

I.

It would not have been enough in this materialistic age. In fact it was not enough in that day to feed the five thousand, but with God's help it was enough. But the point I wish to emphasize in our today's meditation is Jesus took what he had and gave thanks. We are to prone to think we have not enough to be thankful for. We have had so much we do not know when to be satisfied. We are missing one of the great blessings of life by not cultivating the grace of gratitude. From the child in the nursery in the home to the man in the stock markets of the world there is not enough. Of course there are exceptions, many of them, and those exceptions help to sweeten life and save our day from crass materialism.

Although there were thousands gathered about Jesus, and all away from home and near nightfall; although he had been busy speaking to them and teaching them all day; although he had been meeting them and answering their questions; giving out of his strength and the energy of both mind and body; and although at the close of the day his disciples come to him with the demand of the crowd for bread and meat, Jesus is patient, and thankful. His poise is perfect. He did not begin to upbraid them for their lack of foresight, nor for troubling him with such material matters. He simply began, through his helpers, to collect the food in preparation to disburse it to all. A miserably scant supply was collected,—"seven loaves and a few small fishes." But, mark you, he took what there was, much or little, and gave thanks! And there was enough! When do we give thanks? When there is bounty? When there are pleasing gifts, or good prosperity? We should. But gratitude should become a constant factor in our lives, whether there be much, or little.

II.

It was mighty fine to have the cooperation of great crowds, to feel the power of their faith and understanding, so that men could be forgiven of their sins, bodies could be healed of their diseases, and minds could be set right again. In many places Jesus found his work pleasant, in our earthly way of speaking of pleasure, and there was some sympathetic understanding. But another day dawns. He cannot always have the sun shining. Chorazin mocked his manifestations of the Father, exalted Capernaum laughed him out of their city. He had done enough mighty works within their gates to have saved even wicked Sodom until this day! He went out empty-handed. You or I would have been terribly discouraged. It would not have been our day for thanksgiving. But Jesus said, "I thank Thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes. Even so, Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight."

To me that is simply inspiring. It is divine. It is like Jesus. It is so different from Elijah, under his juniper tree. There is no pouting at God. There is no complaining. No show of any sign of nervously saying, "I might as well give up." But the contrary exactly. A prayer of thanksgiving! Even pagans are thankful for prosperity. Christians should never be swept from their mooring even in adversity. It is easy to say. It is divine to do. God give us strength to catch the grateful spirit of our Lord Jesus.

III.

"Our Lord Jesus the same night in which he was betrayed, took bread, and when he had given thanks, he brake it." He broke it with the full understanding of what it signified. He broke it with the full knowledge of his betrayal even at that hour by a member of his own group. In that empty hour he gave thanks! "And he took the cup and gave thanks." It is easy enough to give thanks when the sack is full but the Kingdom of God moves forward at the behest of those who like Jesus can give glory and praise and thanksgiving to God when the sack is empty. Such is not foolhardiness. It is faith that reaches across the passing moment, faith that God loves his own, faith that his promises will be verified, yea, faith that God is a Father, and that he will not forsake his own. Underlying most of our emptiness is either our own hand, or God's. If we are God's submitted to his will, he will guide our own hands, as well as his own, and eventually we shall learn how to thank God in hours of adversity as well as prosperity.

IV.

Sometimes God's blessings are immediate, as in the case of Jesus standing almost empty-handed before the milling multitudes with the proposition to give them food. It took a faith which can not be conjured up by pious talk, not public profession alone; but rather a faith that came as a result of a close walk with God, to look up and say: "Father, we are grateful for thy bounties, food enough to feed all these thousands, and to spare." But Jesus had that faith. And Jesus gave the thanks.

Sometimes there is no remedying the matter in sight, as it was in the case of the retreating congregations of Capernaum and Chorazin, for as long as Jesus lived they never came back. It took a deep, abiding, faith to thank the Father in that hour. And even more so when he held the broken bread,—grain ground, mangled, fired,—and knowing that it signified his own broken body and then give thanks. Or to take the cup,—crushed grapes put through the cruel press,—and to give thanks. He could, humanly speaking, say his life was a failure. It had ended in most tragic manner. Slain between society's greatest sinners, and himself slain as a malefactor. What good could come of it? What provide could transform this tragedy into the triumph of the ages? God could! Jesus knew that! He gave thanks.

Our lesson then, as we gather about this communion table in memory of Jesus, to learn to be thankful. Life will have its sorrows, its disappointments, but as sure as the sun rises and sets, it will hold ultimate triumph for all who love God and do his will. There is simply no blocking that. And so: "Let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body; and be ye thankful. . . And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus giving thanks to God and the Father by him. . . Knowing that of the Lord ye shall receive the reward of the inheritance; for ye serve the Lord Christ."

Surely it behooves us to exercise some little modesty, and not to think it hard that our religious knowledge should stand upon a par with our physical. God has reserved in his own nature and his works such infinite stores of wisdom and benevolence that we need never cease learning and finding ever more to admire and to adore.—Jas. Hinton.

Christian Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON. Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

Don't forget!

The Thanksgiving is rapidly approaching. Lest you forget we want to remind you that your Christian Orphanage with its ninety children is looking forward to the churches, Sunday schools and friends for a liberal Thanksgiving offering at this Thanksgiving Season. Those ninety children are entirely dependent on you for support. We must raise eight thousand dollars by December 31st. If your church has been asked for fifty dollars and you can make it one hundred, that will be fine. The more support you give us the more little children we can reach and help. Our work is largely measured by the support you give us.

The first day of December we will close our nineteenth year as superintendent of this institution. During these nineteen years I have often called your attention to our needs and you have always responded beautifully. We have suffered this year from high prices for things we have had to buy and also from reduced income on account of infantile paralysis.

When you cut a piece of cloth at both ends it gets short rapidly. We have been forced to draw on our little surplus until it's gone. I knew you would encourage us by making up a splendid offering in your church for Thanksgiving. We should not have a single member in our denomination to fail to give something in this annual Thanksgiving Offering.

The Thanksgiving Season has been made more beautiful as the years come and go because it affords an opportunity to help the fatherless.

Those who join in will have a real joy in their part which nothing else can bring. What is more precious than a little child? What is more beautiful than the trusting and innocent face of a little child? What is more helpless than a little child when it is left fatherless and motherless and homeless? What could give our people more joy than to help give these little children a happy home and Christian training?

If you want to enjoy this Thanksgiving Season then help make others happy who have been unfortunate.

May God touch every heart at this Thanksgiving Season is our prayer.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

HOWARD'S CHAPEL.

Revival services began here October 13th and closed October 18th. At the eleven o'clock hour the pastor presided and at 3:00 P. M., Rev. J. L. Neese, Reidsville, N. C., came to our aid.

Brother Neese did excellent preaching. His messages were very timely and had a high spiritual tone. He is a very evangelistic worker and people were very much impressed with his efforts and sermons during his short stay.

There was a beautiful spirit of cooperation manifest during the meeting. A good number of members of nearby churches attended and took part in the exercises. As pastor, we greatly appreciate every courtesy and effort made to aid the meeting.

There were five professions of faith, several reconsecrations, spiritual life of the local church stimulated and one accession to the church.

Thank the Lord for all the blessings received and unseen good that was done.

III. The ending or close—

And when the shadows lengthen and the evening falls let me look upon a day devoted to loving deeds—yea, upon a life of joyous service
In Jesus' Blessed Name we pray
Finally, our Father, in the perplexities of a world still rent by quarrels and tutored by hatred: do thou preside at the councils of our country and direct the affairs of all mankind And thine shall be our praise forever, for Christ's sake. Amen
To Thy mercy we offer our prayer, in the name of Him who alone can help us to live in faith and faithfulness, even Jesus Christ, our Saviour

This we ask of Thee in humble trust for Jesus' sake
Rear us and bless us and grant us Thy Salvation, we ask in Jesus' name
And this I ask in the name of Jesus Christ, who on the cross shed for me His most precious blood
Keep us in oneness of purpose with Thee, our Father, with Christ our Saviour, and with the Holy Spirit our Guide. Amen
Keep us by Thy grace until we shall be called to our reward, where Thy name shall receive endless praise. Amen
Vouchsafe Thy presence and grace until we come to that sweet and blessed Country
We pray that we may rise from our dead selves into newness of a life loyal to Jesus Christ, of service to our fellow man, and of glad obedience to Thee our Father who hast put an end to death and brought life and immortality to light through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen
These and all blessings we ask in Jesus' Name
That through Thy good providence we may all come at last to the Father's house of many mansions. Amen
We beseech Thee to hear us in this our prayer which we make in the Master's name. Amen
(Mother's Day) We ask this in the name of Jesus our Lord, who from his cross gave loving thoughts to his own mother. Amen

OBITUARIES

MIDDLETON.

Charles C. Middleton, son of John and Dora Middleton, was born April 10, 1861 in Pittsylvania County, Va., and was called from this life August 31, 1935.

He was married to Miss Rachel Smith in Stokes Co., Oct. 22, 1882, who survives him in addition to the following children —W. U., C. B., J. H., and J. H. Middleton. Mrs. Della Marshall and P. D. Middleton and a number of other relatives also survive.

The funeral services were conducted at Salem Chapel Church Sep. 1st by the writer. D. M. SPENCE.

WALL.

William D. Wall was born October 10, 1840 and passed from this life October 7, 1935, making his stay on earth 94 years, eleven months and 27 days, falling short of his ninety-fifth birthday by only two days. Bro. Wall suffered much the past few months but bore it like a true soldier of the Cross, never complaining but ever praising the name of God for all his benefits.

He was a man of deep religious convictions and practiced those convictions in his daily life. He was converted at the age of nine and united with Mt. Carmel M. E. Church and was a faithful worker in that church until shortly after the organizing of Happy Home Christian Church fifty years ago, when he transferred his membership to Happy Home. For nearly a half century Bro. Wall was a deacon and a loyal member of this church, realizing that work as well as faith was a vital part of Christian living. No one can appreciate the inspiration and loyalty of such a man of God more than a young ministerial student trying to serve a church as pastor. Personally, I will miss his words of counsel and friendship gained by many pleasant visits in his home.

He is survived by an aged wife of a second marriage, his first wife passing on in 1907.

The funeral was conducted from the Mt. Carmel M. E. Church by the writer, assisted by the pastor of the church, Wednesday, October 9th.

May the love of God soothe the aching hears of surviving widow, relatives and friends.

W. MILARD STEVENS.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

Fight Against Holding Company Bill Begins.—

The United Gas Improvement Company, Philadelphia, fired the first gun in the attack against the utility holding company act this week when it decided not to register with the securities commission, and challenged the law in Federal court suit. It is assumed that the action of this $800-million concern is the beginning of a concerted fight against the act passed by the last Congress.

Church Protests Fight on Jews.—

A resolution adopted by the assembly of the Church of England this week expressed "indignation" at the "suffering" of Jews in the Third Reich, and called upon Christian people the world over to use their influence with "the rulers of Germany" to have them change their present policy toward the Jew. In endorsing the measure, the Archbishop of Centerbury said that he "most strongly" protested "against the persecution which seems unhappily to have broken out with new intensity."

Reverend William Sunday.—

When Rev. William Sunday, better known as "Billy Sunday," died in Chicago on November 6th from an attack of angina pectoris, the country lost one of its best-known Christian evangelists. He was 72 years old, having been born in Gardner, Iowa, on November 19, 1862. He graduated from high school at Nevada, Iowa, and later studied at Northwestern University. He was a National League baseball player for several years, but after his conversion at the Pacific Garden Mission in Chicago, he took up religious work. He was ordained by the Presbyterian Church and entered evangelistic work. Although he lost some of his fire in the last few years of his life, he probably has to his credit more conversions than any other evangelist. He was absolutely fearless in his denunciation of evil.

National Academy of Sciences Meets.—

The University of Virginia was guest this week to the National Academy of Sciences. Numbered among the scientific stars of the first magnitude were Dr. Robert Andrews Millikan of the Chicago Institute of Technology; Dr. F. E. Wright of the Geographical Laboratory, Carnegie Institution of Washington; Dr. Wilder B. Bancroft, Cornell University chemist, and others. Subjects discussed were varied indeed. They included the measurement of magnetism on the earth's surface, the cause of the moon's craters, disease virus, the identification of Jack Frost, and the lowliest and smallest of the worms. At times the wiseness of the scientist seems foolishness to the layman, but out of this foolishness has come many of the things which make the world a better place in which to live.

A Red Cross Record.—

With the prevention of disease as the major objective, Red Cross public health nurses took care of 214,444 cases, involving 156,003 individual visits, in 1934, reports Admiral Cary T. Grayson, president of the organization. In the same time, he said, 633,944 school or pre-school children were inspected by the nurses, and 325,329 were found to be suffering from one or more physical defects. Red Cross or cooperating physicians treated 195,137 of these children. Public health nursing services were maintained by 550 chapters in communities throughout the country and the 765 employed nurses gave close cooperation to local and State agencies. More than 54,700 children were immunized against diptheria. In combatting pellagra, 388 chapters in the Eastern section of the country and 72 chapters in the Midwest are carrying on pellagra control work and distributing yeast. Between 25,000 and 30,000 persons received treatment during the past year.—The Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

Neutrality Means No Discrimination.—

On Armistice Day, President Roosevelt again stated his intention of keeping the United States out of war. A few days earlier, Secretary Hull suggested that the neutrality law be amended to give the President more discretionary power. Every amendment should be carefully scrutinized, lest it get us into the war it is presumably to keep us out of. Secretary Hull says "we should not concentrate entirely on means for remaining neutral and lose sight of other constructive methods of avoiding involvement in wars between other countries." Though he refrains from specifying these "other constructive methods," he does say that an embargo on "implements of war" is not enough and that the President should be allowed "discretion as to the time of imposing an embargo." This may conceivably mean that he could choose different times for different belligerents. If Britain entered the war, he might embargo the exportation of cotton and oil to Italy at once, while indefinitely postponing an embargo on such exports to Britain. Any such course would hold the most frightful dangers for the United States. The main part of our neutrality policy should be summed up in two words: no discrimination! To keep out of war, we must treat all belligerents alike.—Business Week.

Throttling Chicago Racketeers.—

"Chicago has got rid of her racketeers and professional gang criminals," says George Applegren, writing in a recent issue of Forbes. He says that it was not the mistake that recently showed Chicago far down in the statistical list of crime tables, but that something has happened. In the last four years new laws have been passed, the police have been given new blood, prosecuting offices have been strengthened with better talent, and fixers have been told to keep moving. This has been done, he says, because business men decided it was time to "face about and show some action." At one time Chicago stood at or near the top in crime per 100,000 population, and Chicagoans were pouring as much as $150,000,000 a year into racketeers' pockets. Today Chicago has a Crime Commission which "keeps record of every criminal and every criminal case and court trial in the municipal, State and Federal courts of Chicago. It is free from every kind of political entanglement. It depends entirely upon freewill contributions . . . and . . . has never accepted money from a political officeholder." The theft of automobiles will show what has happened in other lines as well. "In 1932, 35,233 cars were stolen, for an average of ninety-six a day, and ten thousand were not recovered. Last year 12,164 cars were stolen, and 12,176 were recovered—twelve more than were reported stolen!"

Continuous Education.—

In an announcement recently issued by the motor organization which he heads, Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., said that the problem of safety in automobile traffic, where the driver and the pedestrian were concerned, was "a problem not only of education, but of continuous education." He says that believing this, his organization "pledges cooperation with all agencies whose duties or energies are directed toward highway safety. It proposes to make tangible contribution by organizing, in a definite and aggressive way, to instill 'Safety First' into the minds of those who purchase its products; to cooperate with all enforcement authorities, with respect to problems of traffic control; to cooperate in devising ways and means of insuring safety maintenance; to promote new and better plans of regulation; to impress the importance of the problem upon our youth," and in other ways attempt to reduce the terrible toll which is being levied upon the nation in ever increasing highway accidents. He calls attention to the fact that the car itself is only a part of the problem, and to the need of advancement in methods of road construction. Motor companies might help the situation considerably by refraining from advertising speed, or even more by limiting at the factory the speed of motor cars. This would, of course, require the cooperation of the entire industry. The various states could materially help the situation if they went no further, by closing liquor stores at a decent time of night and before legal holidays and over week ends. Shorter working hours for the worker, and longer hours in which to buy booze, together with high speed motor cars, cannot but have the effects which make front-page newspaper stories.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Dr. L. E. Smith, president of Elon College, and Mr. Floyd Hurst of Norfolk, Va., are in Richmond this week in interest of the College. Dr. Smith is staying at the home of the managing editor where he is always a welcome guest.

It was exceedingly gratifying at the recent session of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference that seventeen churches reported all their apportionments met in full and three churches exceeded the askings, and all the churches reporting had made a better showing than had been the case in many years.

The staid and dignified Apostolic Review is responsible for this item: "If you could get religion like a Methodist, and experience it like a Baptist, and be positive of it like a Disciple, and be proud of it like an Episcopalian, and pay for it like a Presbyterian, and propagate it like an Adventist, and enjoy it like a Negro—that would be some religion!"

The North Carolina and Virginia Conference, in session last week, authorized the ministers of the Conference to assemble at Elon College on Monday, December 9, "to consider ways and means of effective working in our churches during the coming year." Out of such a ministerial conference and counsel should certainly come plans and suggestions that will help through all the year.

Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, pastor of Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., is teaching in the Disciples Training School which is being held at their Hanover Avenue Church this week. Rev. Mr. Hardcastle filled the pulpit of First Congregational-Christian Church of Richmond most acceptably last Sunday evening. He brought a message on "Temptation" which was well worth braving the unusually inclement weather to hear.

Rev. and Mrs. R. T. Grissom of our Carroll County work, writing November 15th, say: "In regard to our Conference apportionment, we went over the top in full. Our apportionment this year was more than three times that of last year and we raised the full amount. Two delegates went to the Annual Conference at Concord from each of our "mountain" churches. We feel sure that the Conference meant much to them and to all of us."

The deep sympathy of the editor and of his ministerial brethren and hosts of friends throughout the church is expressed to Rev. R. A. Whitten and family of our Portsmouth Church in the loss sustained by this bereaved family in the decease of Mrs. Whitten November 12th. Mrs. Whitten was deeply interested in the work of her husband and the churches he served and was a help-meet to him. The husband and three children mourn the going of their loved one, who they know, after months of severe affliction, has passed beyond the hand of disease and death.

Our Fuller's Chapel Church, near Henderson, N. C., sustains a real loss in the death of Bro. C. C. Woodlief, who passed to his reward Tuesday A. M., the 12th. Of this good man and his passing, a special from Henderson, N. C., November 12th, says: "Charles Cooke Woodlief, 72, near Bearpond in Kittrell township, one of the best known citizens of Vance County, died suddenly Tuesday morning at his home after a short illness. He was stricken Monday evening. Mr. Woodlief was born in Kittrell township and had lived there all his life. He was the son of Wm. G. Woodlief and Mary E. Overton Woodliefe. Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Sallie Edwards Woodlief, and the following childrene: Ulys C. Woodlief, Miss Irene C. Woodlief, Mrs. Mary W. Oakley, Mrs. Harold Crews, Mrs. J. L. Briggs, Mrs. M. L. Coghill and Jesse C. Woodlief, all of Henderson or Vance County, and an only brother, W. G. Woodlief of Henderson. Mr. Woodlief was a member of Fuller's Chapel Christian Church, near where he lived and funeral services were held there Wednesday afternoon, with interment in the church cemetery. Rev. H. E. Crutchfield, former pastor of the church, was in charge of the service, assisted by the present pastor, Rev. E. M. Carter."

THE NORTH CAROLINA AND VIRGINIA CONFERENCE.

The North Carolina and Virginia Congregational-Christian Conference was held November 12th to the 14th with Pastor L. L. Wyrick and his good people of Concord Church in Caswell Co. The Conference was most royally entertained and proved to be one of the best this writer has ever attended. Even though our budget was largely increased in keeping with the request of the Southern Convention. There were seventeen churches that reached their goal in full, with Hines' Chapel, Lynchburg and New Lebanon going beyond the goal.

There were three outstanding messages brought before the Conference: first, the President's Address on "Christian Essentials and Purposes" by Rev. W. T. Scott; second, The Sermon by Dr. J. H. Lightbourne on "Repentance," and the address on Moral Reform by Dr. H. Shelton Smith.

The officers for next year remain the same. Delegates to the Southern Convention were elected. Conference voted that churches so desiring could entertain on the "Harvard Plan" with meals not to exceed 40c. The Congregational Churches and ministers in our district were received into membership and enrolled, thus fully completing the merger. The Conference is to meet in its One Hundred and Eleventh Annual Session next year with the First Christian Church of Greensboro.

Dr. J. O. Atkinson was greatly missed, being detained on account of sickness. The Conference voted to memorialize the Southern Convention to allow all enterprises of the Church to be included in the budget. Nine new memberships to the C. M. A. were secured. Dr. C. H. Rowland led the closing service.

THOSE CONGREGATIONAL-CHRISTIANS

When the Southern Convention at its meeting in Suffolk in May, 1934, voted to finish the processes of the merger they threw the door wide open for the Congregationalists of the Carolinas to enter. At the meeting of these Congregationalists in the historic Circular Church of Charleston, South Carolina, which was organized in 1691, the final word was spoken and they by unanimous vote became Christians.

This was by no means a sudden decision but the natural result of right thinking and careful planning on the part of the leaders of the Congregational Conference. There is no longer a "Conference of the Congregational Churches of the Carolinas." Each church has asked for credentials to unite with one of the three Christian Conferences of North Carolina. The process of uniting has already taken place in several churches and will be concluded as soon as the machinery can operate. For example, Asheville has already been received into the North Carolina and Virginia Conference. Tryon is expected to follow soon after its new pastor, Dr. C. Arthur Lincoln, begins working in his new field. Albemarle, and the four churches of the Sophia Parish have united with the Western Conference; and when the Eastern Conference meets Southern Pines and Circular Church will ask for membership therein. Since Salisbury and Winston-Salem are already as United Churches members of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference and Raleigh a member of the Eastern Conference, the matter of union is completed.

It is also interesting to know that the pastors of these churches have transferred their ministerial standing: Rev. Samuel M. Penn and Rev. Arnold Slater to the Western Conference; Rev. John Rea Chapman and Rev. M. J. Sweet to the North Carolina and Virginia Conference and Rev. C. Rexford Raymond and Rev. George N. Edwards are requesting membership in the Eastern Conference as it is likely Rev. J. Edward Kirbye will do as soon as may be. Rev. Edward F. Green expects to unite with the Western or the Eastern Conference soon. Other ministers will offer credentials as soon as full information shall come to them.

Thus it is that the merger is consummated and the Congregational Churches and ministers become a part of the Southern Convention exactly on the same basis as that of any Christian Church or minister. When Mr. Chapman and Mr. Sweet were received into membership in the North Carolina and Virginia Conference it was remarked that it takes considerable time for people to get married in North Carolina under the statutes of that state; but that it was easy to do so in South Carolina. So it was that the Congregationalists and Christians in North Carolina courted each other for a long time and finally consummated their union in their famous old Circular Church in Charleston, South Carolina, October 25, 1935. At this point Dr. Harrell had to say: "And remember, South Carolina permits no divorce." And so we shall live happily together ever after.

Besides these important affairs at Charleston, the Conference presented an outstanding program of vital interest but only the high spots may be touched in this review. And first of all the hospitality of that city of great historic interest must be mentioned. Both the church and Mr. Edwards its pastor, were not only wholesome in their welcome but filled with grace and truth, and everybody present felt that the grace of the Lord was upon us. It was a wonderful conference from that angle alone.

And then there were addresses by Rev. Henry J. Bennett of Japan and by Dr. C. Rexford Raymond of Southern Pines on "The Future of the United Churches" and by Rev. Everett B. Lesher of Jacksonville, Florida on "The Church of the Changing Social Order"; and one filled with inspiring information by Mrs. W. T. Scott on "Woman's Part in the Merger in the Carolinas" and another by Rev. Florence L. Squires of Columbia, South Carolina and yet another by President H. C. Newell of Piedmont College.

After the Board of Directors had been duly authorized and instructed to carry out all the legal or other requirements of the Conference which might arise in the future, the meeting adjourned "without day" and thus all readers of THE SUN will see how "Those Congregationalists became Christians."

TEN YEARS OF SERVICE.

Miss Marguerite Davison is completing her tenth year as a director of parish activities under the Church Extension Boards. She began in 1926 at LaGrange, Ga. Then she was assigned to assist Dr. Neil McQuarrie, district superintendent, throughout his territory of Georgia, Alabama and West Florida. She changed her residence to Thorsby, Ala. Upon Dr. McQuarrie's retirement in 1930, districts were re-arranged and Miss Davidson became the associate of Superintendent Fred P. Ensminger for Alabama, West Florida, Tennessee and Kentucky. Like Dr. Ensminger she is annually many times "elected," being the elected Extension Service Worker of each of the state conferences of Kentucky, Tennessee and Alabama and also the elected district Extension Service Worker of the Extension Boards.

MARGUERITE DAVISON
Extension Service Worker for Kentucky, Tennessee and Alabama

Her work has come to be largely with the boys, girls and young people of the 107 churches in her district. The young people's organizations of these churches report 2,125 members and in the Sunday schools, 6,770 are enrolled.

She is busy all the year but busiest in summer when she helps direct the Student Summer Service workers of the Extension Boards in the district and when she has major responsibility for the three summer young peopl'e camp conferences at Grandview, Tenn., Wadley, Ala., and Sealacon, Ala., she travels 1,500 to 2-500 miles a month in her service car.

Among many encouragements of her work are the scores of young people who with grim determination she has seen work their way through our Congregational and Christian educational institutions,—Thorsby Academy, Pleasant Hill Academy, Tennessee, and Southern Union Junior College, Wadley, Ala. Some have gone on to Piedmont College, Demorest, Ga., or to Elon College in North Carolina, and then to the Southern Theological Seminary Foundation at Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn.

This fall she had conferences for Kentucky young people at Stearns and for those of Tennessee at Chattanooga and is to have one for Alabama, Thanksgiving time, at Wadley.

She took part in the Kentucky Conference annual meeting of the Home Boards and the New England Region at Providence, R. I. Before returning south she spoke at eleven churches in Massachusetts and New Hampshire between October 22nd to 31st.

CHARLESTON SOUTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE.

The Conference of the Congregational Churches of the Carolinas held its last meeting with the Circular Congregational Church in Charleston, S. C., October 24th-25th. This was the first time it had met in Charleston in about 12 years and many of the delegates welcomed the opportunity to visit some of the historic landmarks of the city, especially some of the older churches in the immediate vicinity of our church. All the churches of the conference were represented with the exception of Tryon and Salisbury. The feature of the first evening session was a very interesting address by Dr. C. Rexford Raymond of Southern Pines on the life of the Southern Highlanders. Devotionals were conducted by Dr. Raymond, Rev. John R. Chapman of Asheville, Rev. Arnold Slater of Albemarle, and Rev. S. M. Penn of Sophia, N. C. Interesting reports were given by pastors and delegates at the morning session from the various churches; also reports of the superintendent, registrar and treasurer were given by Rev. M. J. Sweet who then presented the plans for completing the merger of these churches with the conferences of the Southern Convention. The discussion and action upon this matter occupied the rest of the forenoon. Letters were voted to the several churches to unite with the conference of their choice in North Carolina. The regular officers of the conference were elected to continue as long as there is any legal business to be transacted.

In the afternoon of Friday a very valuable paper was given on "The Church and Changing Social Order" by Rev. Everett B. Lesher, new pastor at Jacksonvill, Florida. This was followed by an address by Mrs. W. T. Scott on "Woman's Part in the Merger in the Carolinas" and an address "When A Congregational Church goes Into the Episcopal Church," by Rev. Florence L. Squires of Columbia, S. C.

Rev. Henry J. Bennett lately from Tottori and thirty-four years a missionary in Japan gave an interesting account of the Japanese religions and showed the need of Christianity in the life of Japan. At the close of this session the communion service was administered by Rev. W. T. Scott and the pastor of the church. At the fellowship supper in Lance Hall under the direction of Rev. J. R. Chapman, several short talks were given and the topic "Youth Building A New World." At the evening session there were two addresses: one by Miss Pattie L. Coghill of Jacksonville, on "What Our Denomination Is Doing for Youth"; and the conference sermon by President H. C. Newell of Piedmont College, Demorest, Ga., from the text, "They that have turned the world upside down have come hither also."

The officers chosen to conclude the affairs of the conference were: Rev. C. R. Raymond, Moderator; Rev. Milo J. Sweet, Registrar-Treasurer and superintendent; Rev. G. N. Edwards, auditor. Board of Directors: Mrs. Edward Boshart, Rev. Wm. T. Scott and several others whose names have not been submitted.

THE GEORGIA CONFERENCE.

The Georgia Congregational-Christian State Conference held its second annual meeting at the Union Church, Demorest, Georgia, October the twenty-ninth and thirtieth. Piedmont College and Union Church were joint hosts to the conference, some of the delegates staying in the homes and some in the college dormitories. The conference was well attended with delegates coming from all parts of the state. Not only were meals served to them at the church and college but afternoon tea was served as well, as a pleasant intermission both afternoons.

The conference opened with the conference hymn, "Joy to the World." Reports were given from the various churches. Rev. H. M. Gray led the worship service which was followed by an inspiring address by Rev. H. J. Bennet, missionary from Japan and brother to Mrs. F. P. Ensminger. Supt. C. D. Johnston told about the Christian Orphanage at Elon. After an intermission Rev. Warren A. Denison, Assistant Secretary of the General Council gave a most needed and worthwhile address. That evening Rev. D. W. Shepherd led the worship service and the address of the evening was given by the retiring Moderator, Rev. J. H. Dollar of La Grange. Rev. R. Wiley Scott, the new minister at Central Church, Atlanta preached the conference sermon.

On the second day of the conference, Rev. M. J. Sweet, our Pastor at Large, gave splendidly written reports of his work as Registrar, Superintendent and Treasurer. The conference joined the college to worship with them in the Chapel service in the College Auditorium. Dr. W. J. Campbell, President of the School of Religion at Vanderbilt University addressed the entire group. Prof. C. L. Percy of Piedmont College explained something of the meaning and use of the Peace Plebescite. Rev. T. L. Leverett of Hoschton presented some of the views of the General Council. Rev. Frederick Held, new pastor of the Rosehill Church at Columbus gave an address on "The Pastor and the Care of Souls."

In the afternoon the conference was divided into three groups. The Young People met with Miss Annie Campbell at College Hall with Mr. Carl Ekblad, Piedmont student presiding. Chaplain H. H. Walker led a discussion on Christian Citizenship. The women met with Mrs. Carol Jones of Waycross. Mrs. D. E. Brown of New York addressed the group. The men went with the Moderator, Rev. Dollar and were addressed by President W. J. Campbell on "The Pastor's Problem."

A communion service was conducted by Rev. H. B. Mowbray with Chaplain H. H. Walker, Rev. C. W. Hanson and Rev. C. W. Parker, assisting.

After the closing business was attended to and appreciation expressed for Rev. M. J. Sweet's service, the Piedmont College Glee Club sang. Dean G. C. Bellingrath presided and Dr. H. C. Newell, president of Piedmont College and Dr. W. J. Campbell, President of the School of Religion at Vanderbilt University both addressed the group. An offering was made for Ministerial Relief before the meeting adjourned.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctious cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THANKSGIVING.

Abraham Lincoln did not inaugurate but he did reclaim and make permanent our National Thanksgiving Day. During the War of the Revolution the National Congress recommended National Thanksgiving, and various states from time to time through their governors called for a day of thanksgiving. But sometime prior to 1850, Mrs. Sarah Josepha Hale interested herself and many others in urging a National Thanksgiving. In 1964, President Lincoln yielded to the widespread desire for a presidential proclamation, and since that year every President has issued a call for a Thanksgiving Day, usually the last Thursday in November. This is unique, belonging only to the United States among the other nations of the world. It is a beautiful and a benevolent custom. The President's Proclamation and that of the governors of most of the states urge the people on the Day of Thanksgiving not only to meet in family circles and enjoy the good things of the year, but to assemble in their places of worship and give thanks to the Supreme Ruler of the universe for His goodness and love and benefits. True, many neglect the assembling at places of worship, but not all. Our country, however, is the better for the day, because all are aware that the nation has spoken officially and called for a universal expression of praise, thanksgiving and gratitude to the Giver of all good gifts.

In North Carolina and in some of our Southern States, where churches, as well as benevolent Societies, sponsor children's and orphans' homes, the people are called upon by their benevolent societies and churches, not only to assemble and give thanks, but to make gifts of gratitude that the widow and the orphan, the fatherless and the homeless may be remembered and cared for. This is expression in material form of a spiritual impulse. It is, therefore, fitting that Christian Sun readers, our churches and people assemble in their places of worship, if not on Thanksgiving Day, then certainly on a day and at a worship period nearest thereto, and make a free-will offering of love and gratitude for the benefit of our Christian Orphanage. Brother Johnston has sent his appeal through The Sun, through pulpit and Sunday school, and this appeal, we are sure, will not fall on deaf ears but will have fruit in grateful hearts, both to the glory of God who giveth all good things and withholdeth not and also for the protection and blessing of our wards and children in our Christian Orphanage.

AFTER GOD'S OWN HEART.

That was said of David which cannot be said of many. It was, indeed, a high and rare tribute. Paul was speaking at Antioch: "I have found David, the son of Jesse, a man after my heart, who shall do all my will." Paul was quoting from I Samuel 13:14: "Jehovah hath sought him a man after his own heart, and Jehovah hath appointed him to be prince over His people."

In spite of this high praise, David had his weakness and committed grave and grievous sins. Surely, in sinning he was not a man after God's own heart, nor was he fulfilling therein all the will of God. In spite of his sins David's loyalty to God was manifest.

David faced and confessed his sins. He acknowledged his transgression. He did more than that. He repented of his sins. And he did even more than that; he suffered because of his sins and sought relief in and from God.

It is not sin that makes one hopeless, but it is the light in which one regards his sins. David looked upon his own sins with horror and sought to escape from its dire consequences in sackcloth and ashes before his God. He believed that God was able to do all that He had promised and could and would forgive sins. Thus, would God have all His children believe in Him—believe, first of all, that He is, and that He is a rewarder of them who diligently seek and implicitly trust and obey Him.

Only a man who had made His peace with God could feel as David felt in writing the twenty-third Psalm. Here God is very personal and is very powerful and is immediately present. "The Lord is my Shepherd," and a good shepherd never loses sight of his sheep and is able at all times to conquer every enemy and subdue every foe that comes to disturb the flock or any member of the flock.

Many of our day are thinking of a Jehovah who is far removed or who can be satisfied with substitutes or served by proxy. With David God came first, and remained first with Him at all times, and through God David laid his petition and in God found his refuge and his rest.

EVANGELISM.

Dr. Wm. Ernest Hocking, being invited last May to deliver an address at a great missionary meeting at Rochester, N. Y., chose as his subject, "Evangelism." Dr. Hocking opens his address with this apologetic:

"I was asked to speak to you about Foreign Missions. I am not departing from that theme if I choose to speak about Evangelism; for Evangelism is the essential work of both church and mission."

Dr. Hocking's thesis is that the real concern of the church is Evangelism, whether the evangel is preached from the local pulpit, in the home mission area, or in fields afar. "Have we any different conception of the gospel or of its fitness for other lands or of the mission as a way of spreading it?" It is not three gospels we are to preach—one in the local church, one in the home mission church, another in the foreign mission church—but it is the same gospel, and the three terms—Evangelism, Home Missions, Foreign Missions—are but three words of the same meaning, used solely for convenience of speech and to clarify, not to becloud, our thinking." Dr. Hocking rightly declares: "The parish of all preaching is the world. The condition of the world is the obligation of the church, and that means the whole world. If Christianity should begin to appear a local religion, it would automatically cease to be the religion of the locality. This, for the reason that when we begin to think of Christianity as a special cult of our own, we have ceased to be Christian. Our religion is by definition that attitude to the world which we hold valid for all men. Hence nothing else than the world can be the object of any live church or of any live Christian."

Thus, the object of Evangelism, as of Home Missions and Foreign Missions, is to preach Jesus Christ and His power to redeem and to save. If we limit our preaching and our presentation of Him to a locality, we have limited our belief in Him and our practice of Him as an all-sufficient Saviour and Redeemer. He is Saviour of all or He is not Saviour at all. He is able to reach to the uttermost, or He is not able to reach to the nearest. His power is sufficient to the weakest, or it is not sufficient for the strongest, or for any. Thus, we limit and circumscribe the power of our own preaching and the power of our Lord's Christ when we think of Him in terms only or even first as a Saviour of our community, our state or our nation and not of Him as one who "So loved the world that He gave Himself that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have everlasting life."

MEETING IN THE HURRICANE.

The Florida Association held their fall meetings and the series ended in a unique and notable fashion. The first two associations met at Sanford and Orange City and enjoyed peace and the carrying out of notable programs, but the South East Coast Association meeting in Miami had a unique and altogether stormy session.

When the friends gathered at the First church at 9:30 A. M., on Monday the 4th, the storm warnings were beginning to cause consternation. Delegates were present from the churches up the coast as far as Palm City—about one hundred miles north of Miami. Dr. King, as Moderator, called the Association together and after listening to Dr. Warren H. Denison and the transacting of a few matters of business, it was decided that it was necessary to adjourn the meeting. This enabled all those living in Miami to reach their homes before the hurricane broke, but those from out of the city remained at the church where they felt secure in the beautiful and extremely well-built church. After eating the luncheon, which was prepared by the women of the church, the delegates who remained—about twenty-five in in number—gathered in the auditorium upstairs and suggested that the superintendent give them the talk which was part of the program. The storm was raging. There had been the usual forty-five minutes calm which is at the center of these hurricanes, and as usual the worst of the storm broke following the calm. While the speaker was attempting to hold the distracted attention of his hearers there was a sudden terrific ripping and roaring and much of the roofing on the church had been blown away. The result was that abundance of rain fell into the chancel and pipe organ of the church, causing much damage. The speaker disclaims any responsibility for "having raised the roof," and all sympathize deeply with the church in this calamity. Some delegates from more distant places spent the night at the church before returning to their homes. For those who had never experienced a hurricane it was a dramatic and terrifying experience.

The church at North Miami suffered serious damages from the storm. The porch and part of the roof of the parsonage were blown away. The Christ Hall and so-called Christ Cottage were damaged and the church itself not only lost part of its roof but was badly wrecked. It is hoped that it can be straightened and made secure. The pastor of this church and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. A. Craig Bowdish, had only recently begun their work in the church and report that most of their church people suffered losses in the storm.

Dr. Juniper, pastor of the First Church at Miami, reported not only the loss to the church but that the house he was living in was seriously injured and he and his family suffered much damage to clothing, books, and other personal belongings. This storm was a most unusual one as it apparently got its start in the Chesapeake Bay instead of the Caribbean Sea. The Miami papers called it a Yankee hurricane.

A PAGE FROM MISS COGHILL'S REPORT.

Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, in her monthly report for October, gives an account of a service she rendered to the church in Sanford, Florida, which indicates a phase of their work along religious education lines, and also indicates the value of thorough preparation for such a visitation. She writes as follows:

"I had three days in Sanford at the very beginning of the month which were filled with things I most like to do—group and personal conferences with the workers. The superintendent of the Church School and his wife who serves as a volunteer director of Religious Education, had carefully planned ahead of time for every minute of my time to be used constructively and that always helps when an outsider goes in to help in a local situation. We met every afternoon from three to five for general discussion and the mornings and evenings were left open for personal conferences. Teachers, officers, the minister of the church, and others whom they hope to use later, came to these general meetings. It was so carefully planned that some of the girls took care of the children so that mothers could attend the meetings. We went thru and evaluated the Closely Graded and Group Graded lesson materials, worked out some plans for teaching some of these, went thoroughly into the whole matter of Missionary Education as well as discussing methods of teaching and the problems arising in the various departments of their Church School. Out of that grew plans for another three days with them in January, when we would build on the things which had been done this time, and have a special meeting and program for parents. This Church School Superintendent is considered the best authority on Florida birds in the state, and so the last morning I was there several of us got up bright and early and went out into the woods to see the birds. It was a grand experience."

DR. DENISON VISITS THE SOUTHEAST.

Dr. Warren H. Denison, Assistant Secretary of the General Council and Chairman of the Commission on Stewardship, has just completed a two weeks' visit in some of our southern states. He first attended the Georgia Conference at Demorest, then visited the three Florida associations, speaking also at the churches at West Palm Beach and Lake Worth. Following his experience with the storm at Miami, he attended the Regional Committee at Tallageda College, visited and spoke at Southern Union College at Wadley, also speaking at some of the churches in the vicinity, and finally attending the Alabama Conference at Headland. He also visited his son in Atlanta, then returned to his home in Dayton, Ohio. Dr. Denison's addresses at the various meetings were regarded by all as being of great value, inspiring, informing and helpful. His address on "Spiritualizing Church Finance" was regarded especially by all pastors as being most helpful and the wish of all was that he could spend a longer time in our region and visit more of the churches.

It was helpful to pastors and would be especially valuable for church committees. We all realize what a splendid service Dr. Denison is rendering the churches by his leadership along this line. He has spent recent months in visiting Kansas, Missouri, Illinois and other states. All who heard him realized anew the service which the General Council renders in making available such helpful leadership. E. C. G.

DR. LINCOLN AT TRYON.

Rev. C. Arthur Lincoln, D. D., for ten years pastor of the church at Daytona Beach, preached his first sermon last Sunday as pastor of the church at Tryon, North Carolina. Dr. Lincoln succeeds Dr. John Brittan Clark, who has been pastor of the Tryon church for the past eight years. Dr. Clark retires from the ministry after a long and highly useful and inspiring ministry, having served mostly in Presbyterian churches. Dr. Clark will spend his winters in Florida and his summers in his summer home in Massachusetts.

Dr. Lincoln, after serving several important churches in New York and New England became pastor of the Daytona Beach church early in 1926. During his years in Florida he has always been a leader in the State Conference work and in other important organizations. For several recent years he has been President of the Board of Directors of the Florida Conference, and has been Moderator, and also has represented the Conference as delegate to the General Council and as a member of the Advisory Board of the Southeast. At the meeting of the Southeast Convention at Raleigh in May he was elected President for the current biennium. In recent years he has been a member of the Florida Welfare Board, to which he was appointed by Governor Dave Sholtz. He has also headed the Daytona Beach Welfare Board, and has been well known as a leader in general welfare and community work.

Friends in the Florida fellowship regret to lose Dr. Lincoln and his family, but feel that he will add much to the fellowship of the ministers and churches in North Carolina.

THE GEORGIA CONGREGATIONAL-CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE.

Piedmont College and our Congregational Church, H. B. Mowbray pastor, of Demorest, Georgia, on October 29th and 30th, gave one of the greatest welcomes to the largest number of delegates which ever attended a meeting of said Conference. the theme of this Conference being, "Sirs, Be of Good Cheer." (Acts 27:25.) The Conference hymn was "Joy to the World"; and the sentiment of joy and good cheer characterized every session. The church, adopting an English custom, served wafers and tea, or maybe it was fruit punch, in a break in the program each afternoon at four o'clock. This was an innovation not only refreshing and restful, but greatly pleasing to the large number of delegates present. The Conference was happy in having such out-of-state speakers as Superintendent C. D. Johnston of the Christian Orphanage, Rev. Warren H. Denison of Ohio, Mrs. D. E. Brown of New York, Pres. W. J. Campbell of our Seminary Foundation at Vanderbilt University, and Rev. H. J. Bennett of Japan. All these speakers gave inspiring addresses on practical themes connected with all our churches. To many, Dr. Denison opened wide avenues of attractiveness in the way of spiritualizing church finance. Many delegates remarked that they were going to put into practice his very valuable suggestions. The address of the retiring moderator, Rev. J. H. Dollar, uncovered many shortcomings of our religious life and closed with a beautiful story of how the spirit of Jesus incarnated in the lives of earnest people may establish and sustain even in the midst of trial and confusion.

Perhaps the most outstanding impression given to the Conference was the sermon by Rev. R. Wiley Scott, our new pastor at Center Church, Atlanta. His theme was "Help If You Can Use It." And his text, II Kings 18:23: "I will give thee two thousand horses if thou be able on thy part to set riders upon them." This was an offer of an enemy to Hezekiah but Hezekiah could not find in all his nation two thousand able-bodied and faithful riders to place upon the horses. Among many pertinent questions suggested by the preacher was: Has our nation or are there in the world today people able, faithful, and strong enough to cope with the conditions with which we are confronted on all sides? There is strength in God—can we use it? Have we riders unto whom the offered strength of God can be given? There is strength if we can use it.

The Plebiscite received due attention and the Youth Fellowship program was carefully considered by a large group of young people under the leadership of Miss Annie Campbell. And the Conference of women with Mrs. D. E. Brown, a speaker, laid deeper foundations for Women's organizations in our Georgia churches. The communion service was effectively administered by Rev. C. W. Hanson and Rev. W. Carl Parker. in a beautiful setting of flowers and soft candlelight. The last evening service was conducted by Dean G. C. Bellingrath and was known as Piedmont College night. President Newell of the College and President Campbell of the Seminary Foundation were the speakers. The conference adjourned to meet at the Oak Grove church near Chipley, October 27th and 28th, 1936.

Responsibility for the creation of the good world in which the good life may be realized, which the frustrated ages of the past loaded upon the gods, is now being assumed by man. The ideal of this modern drift is the realization of the full joy in living.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Drs. John G. Truitt, Wm. M. Jay, Mrs. I. W. Johnson and the writer attended the funeral of Mrs. Robert A. Whitten, wife of the pastor of the First Christian Church, Portsmouth, Va., today (Friday), November 15th, at 3:00 P. M. Mrs. Whitten had been in failing health for several months and suffered severely during her long illness. The service was conducted by Rev. J. F. Morgan who was assisted by Revs. O. D. Poythress and Joe French. The deceased planned the details of the service which was held in the First Christian Church. A number of other ministers and their wives were present. Rev. O. D. Poythress sang "Sunrise"; and Rev. J. F. Morgan and Mrs. Lillian Vickers of Henderson, N. C., sang "It Is Well With My Soul" and "Asleep In Jesus" as duets. The pulpit was banked with many floral offerings, expressing the high esteem in which the deceased was held, and the loving sympathy of the friends for the beloved pastor and family.

Death is the last enemy of man. It may not be his greatest enemy, but it is his last. After death—the soul passes beyond the reach of earthly enemies. Whatever the after-life may have in store, one may rest assured that there is a complete change of environment. Other enemies may torture the soul of the lost and seek to attack the soul of the saved. But it is evident that the tortures of hell will be shared alike by all who dwell in the outer darkness.

In the midst of this impressive funeral service today, the Christian life was brought in striking contrast with the life of the worldly-minded. The preacher told us that the deceased left a four-fold testimony of her salvation through Jesus Christ: 1. Her faith in Jesus; 2. Her manner of life; 3. Her resignation in the hours of trials; 4. Her triumphant death. Here in a place of prayer were gathered many friends. Death—and the funeral occasion—brings to the Christian family the best of friends—who bring their friendship and sympathy. Nature bends over the casket and leaves her best and sweetest and most beautiful gift—the lovely flowers from her choicest gardens. Sympathizing friends offer their best sympathy in comforting song—the choicest expression of affectionate hearts. In the hour of trial God sends His best in nature, friends and in message—to cheer and comfort broken hearts.

"It is better to go to the house of mourning, than to the house of feasting: for that is the end of all men; and the living will lay it to heart. Sorrow is better than laughter: for by the sadness of the countenance the heart is made better." (Eccles. 7:2, 3.) The real test of life is not in the realm of profit and pleasure. The best is not found in market places and gilded halls of social festivity. Good people may frequent these and find temporary satisfaction. But when the day is done, and the race is over, man looks for something divine and eternal. The source of his hope and the foundation of his faith is in the Christian religion. Infidels, scoffers, skeptics and worldly-minded doubters have nothing to offer in such an hour. They have no hymns, no messages of comfort, no gleam of hope.

The church has a message for troubled hearts and comfort for bereaved souls. That message is the message of a living Christ. "Because I live, ye shall live also." (Jno. 14:19.) Sunset today, yes, but sunrise tomorrow. Sorrow today, but joy cometh in the morning. There is a glad morning in the faith of the Christian. And that faith strengthens the heart and turns the tear-stained face to look forward and upward to behold the presence of the Saviour who says: "Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me."

Jesus speaks His comforting messages through His followers. Sometimes He speaks through that still small voice. He is near. He understands. He will not fail.

NORTH CAROLINA-VIRGINIA CONFERENCE.

The North Carolina and Virginia Conference of the Congregational and Christian Churches met in annual session, November 12th-14th, with the Concord Christian Church, Reverend L. L. Wyrick, Pastor. This was the one hundred and tenth annual session of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference. The conference met with this church thirty-one years ago. The Concord church was organized in 1814. It is one of the oldest and most historical churches in the Southern Convention. It is located in a good farming section and entertained the conference royally considering the equipment that it had. At the noon hour every kind of food, well prepared, was placed on a long table under the oaks. You seldom see as many varieties of pies and as delicious as was found there. The members of the church entertained the delegates in their homes over night.

The Reverend W. T. Scott of Winston-Salem is the President of the Conference, the Reverend G. C. Crutchfield is the Vice President, and Doctor S. C. Harrell the efficient secretary. The program committee arranged a very helpful program which was executed effectively as prepared. Every one on the program appeared and took his part with the exception of Dr. J. O. Atkinson. Doctor Atkinson was ill and unable to be present in person. We missed him greatly. His address was read by the writer.

The conference had the privilege of welcoming several distinguished visitors. The address was delivered by the President, W .T. Scott, on the morning of the first day. The President gave a very able and constructive appeal for real Christianity translated into daily life and appealed to the delegates to demonstrate the spirit of Christ daily. Mr. Scott presided over the conference well. Reports of the committees covered all the activities of the church—the best set of reports from the standpoint of real church work that this conference has presented in years, with the possible exception of number, growth, and evidences of spiritual power.

The conference cooperated in the financial plan adopted by the Southern Convention in the Suffolk Session. There are forty churches in the conference. The conference was asked for the total for all purposes of $8,502.30. I do not have the figures as to the amount raised but sixteen churches of this conference raised the full amount asked for on the basis of the larger budget. The Eastern Virginia Conference, if I recall correctly, had eleven churches to raise the full amount. There were thirty-five churches reporting to the North Carolina-Virginia Conference during its recent sitting. Seventeen out of thirty-five reporting met all conference requirements. This is the North Carolina-Virginia Conference's first trial at the larger budget. It has certainly made a commendable record. The conference voted to request all ministers having work in the North Carolina-Virginia Conference to meet at Elon College Monday, December 9th, for the purpose of discussing how we may assist all churches in the conference to raise their full quota during the ensuing year. I realize that there is a danger of being so enthusiastic for material success that we overlook the real need and purpose of the church. In this day we must lay emphasis on the spiritual. There is such a thing as having a magnificent structure without heart and soul, of experiencing material progress and at the same time allow the spirit of God die out within. We pastors must feel the responsibility to present programs for constructive spiritual advance.

It was not the writer's privilege to be present for the entire conference. It was reported, however, that the First Congregational Church at Asheville, Rev. John Rea Chapman, pastor, was received into the conference; also the First Congregational Church at Tryon, North Carolina. There may have been others though I am not sure. Reverend John Rea Chapman was received as an ordained minister into the conference. Mr. Chapman's membership is a decided addition to the ministers of the conference. He is a young man with superior training and many excellent gifts. His presence and messages added much to the conference.

The presence of Dr. C. H. Rowland of Greensboro was a benediction to us all. Doctor Rowland has been in failing health for months. He is slightly improved and attended conference two days. He gave the closing message which was timely and most helpful.

The next session will be held with the First Christian Church of Greensboro, North Carolina, Rev. W. E. Wisseman, pastor. Mr. Wisseman was received into the conference from the Methodist Episcopal Church, North. He is a son-in-law of Dr. Rowland. This conference is fortunate in having this young man listed as one of its ministers. He is about as well prepared for the pastorate as the schools and seminaries of this country can prepare. He has studied abroad and is ambitious for success of the kingdom thru his church. He gave a most helpful message while the report on Home Missions was pending. His topic was "Go and Tell." We are glad to have Mr. Wisseman in our fellowship.

I am sure that there are other items of interest that should be covered in an article of this kind. However, the writer could not attend every session and is less able to remember everything that transpired. Taken as a whole, it was the most healthful session of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference that I have had the privilege of attending at any time. May the Lord bless the conference in its efforts to go forward in the work of the kingdom.

ARRESTS FOR DRUNKENNESS INCREASE IN VIRGINIA.

RICHMOND, VA.—Virginia cities—both wet and dry—arrested 52.12 per cent more persons for drunkenness in 1934 than in 1933, according to figures collected in 32 Virginia communities by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

Harrisonburg, a dry city, showed the largest rate per thousand during the past year—80.89—as compared to 39 the previous year. Richmond's arrest rate was 3.22 as compared to 19.75 in 1933. The average for this group of cities, with a population of 695,099, was 39.46 arrests per 1,000 in 1934, as compared to 25.94 in 1933.—Special to the Christian Science Monitor.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

MISSIONS ARE ESSENTIAL.

(Read before the North Carolina and Virginia Conference, November 13, 1935 and printed by vote of that body. Prepared and presented by J. O. A.)

The Book of James is so very practical that some of its texts are difficult to understand and hard to apply. Such a text to me, at least, is found in the 10th verse, 2nd chapter, of James:

"For whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all."

This may seem to be hard and obdurate, not to say obstinate, and yet there it stands in Holy Writ. Somehow James was right, for he was talking about one of the essentials on which our moral and spiritual universe was built. And if one essential is left out, the foundation crumbles and the building falls.

It seems to me, we, of our Christian fellowship, have a beautiful building. The elemental parts are appealing and attractive. We like our five cardinal principles. The world likes them. The Christian world can neither gainsay nor deny their power and perfection. In laying down our principle, in building our superstructure, we have certainly done well. And yet our building has not attracted as our architecture would indicate, nor have we won approval and appraisal in keeping with the principles we hold. In casting about to discover the one point in our offense against the law which makes us guilty of the whole, we seem to have left out one of the essentials, the chief essential, in our building. I do not hesitate to declare that our offense, our chief offense, is our neglect of Missions—particularly of Foreign Missions. I believe with all my heart that our Christian fellowship has a message for the world, has a program that is worthy and appealing, and yet we haven't made it so.

For many years the church went without any foreign missionary gesture or effort. Our fathers considered us too small, or they were too absorbed in immediate activities and home relationships. And then when we began our foreign missionary enterprise, we did so half-heartedly, and have through the years given Foreign Missions a place of indifference, if not of neglect, in our preaching and in our practice. I regret to dwell even this long on this phase of our history, because not many of us are fond of lamentations, of dwelling on our faults and failures. It is far more agreeable to look at our promises rather than at our chastisements; at our prospects rather than our shortcomings. May I hasten, therefore, to declare that there is one shortcoming for which the church cannot excuse itself and for which our Lord does not seem to offer an excuse of a palliative. It was the parting request and the most emphatic command of our Lord: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to all creation." Foreign Missions, then, the preaching and practicing of Foreign Missions, are essential to church life and growth for three reasons:

First. It is purely a spiritual undertaking. Our Lord was building a spiritual kingdom. That kingdom is founded upon faith and is sustained by faith. I submit that there is no enterprise that calls for faith, power, genuine power, like that of Foreign Missions. We must have faith to believe that our Lord will make good His Word if we will do our part. We must have faith to believe that our missionaries who go for us will be sincere and true, and devout. We must have faith to believe that our Mission Boards will act with discretion and with economy, and with good grace. The whole structure and superstructure of Foreign Missions is built on faith. On this account, it is a spiritual undertaking. I submit further that there is no greater or sadder lack in the world today than that of spirituality. On all sides, there is demand for a deeper, more consecrated spiritual life. May I say that the spiritual life of the church is no deeper and no higher than its spirit of Missions.

Second. Our Lord gave this command because He wanted His followers to share His life. Here the law of the spiritual is wholly different from that of the natural world. In the spiritual world we gain by giving, we win by losing and we achieve only by sharing. We will never know Jesus Christ and Him crucified until we share Him with others. I am not speaking now of sharing our kindness or our generosity with other folks. That is a benevolent gesture which the unregenerate as well as the regenerate may make. I speak of sharing the love of our Lord with those who do not have Him and with those who do not know Him as their Saviour. In Foreign Missions, we are seeking to share not our love, nor even our knowledge of Him, with others, but we are seeking to share His love and His knowledge with others and for others.

Third: Foreign Missions are essential, because above all else, our Lord wanted us to obey and trust Him. Obedience is the first law of the universe, and is fundamental. You may not believe in Foreign Missions. The unregenerate world does not believe in Foreign Missions. Only the regenerate world and those who are willing to obey their Lord's command believe in Foreign Missions. It is sufficient to know that our Lord did believe and did command. In obedience to His command, not in obedience to our fancies and whims, but in obedience to His will, we undertake the Foreign Mission work. And so if we fail in our Foreign Mission effort, we have failed to tap the fountain of Living Waters and to refresh our church and our own souls with the sweetest and best that our Lord has to offer—with His presence, His power and His fellowship. Let us analyze our own church history, and our own individual experience, and see whether these things be so.

BABIES.

The editor of the North Carolina Christian Advocate thinks that babies, as defined by the editor of the Watchan-Examiner, a Baptist paper of New York City, are not confined to any one church. The editor of THE SUN is of the opinion that we Congregational-Christians can quality for a great many of these babies, but in this particular instance we would rather call them Congregational than to take the responsibility of saying that they are Christians. Let us have the definition from our Baptist contemporary:

"Among Baptists we have a great crop of babies. There is no way of calculating whether there are more babies among Baptists than among other denominations, but if other denominations have as many as we do, they are faced with a great and trying problem. It has been a long time since a baby has been in the home of the writer, but occasional visits to other homes convince us that babies require that others shall do a great deal for them. Surely a good proportion of our Baptist church membership would thus qualify as babies. And then babies are unable to do very much for others. Babies are also peevish and fretful, and then babies are generally fond of toys. It would be universally conceded that babies are not governed by principles but by moods and impulses. Following these several descriptions just how many Baptist babies are there? Let us remember that while natural babyhood is charming, continuous babyhood is monstrous and revolting. Babies are given for healthy and constant growth."

FLORIDA HOLIDAY CONFERENCE.

Recently several members of the Executive Committee of the Southeast Youth Fellowship met in Lakeview Hospital, Suffolk, Va., around the bedside of the Rev. F. C. Lester, to plan the program for the Holiday Conference to be held in Florida, December 27th-29th, 1935.

This conference is to be held in the First Congregational Church, Winter Park, Florida, this church furnishing housing and entertainment to all young people who attend. The Conference is planned primarily for officers of the Southeast and State Youth Fellowship officers, but any young people interested in Building a New World are invited to attend.

The only expense attached to attending the conference is transportation and the cost of the Fellowship supper on Saturday night. The cost of transportation should be cheap if the young people go by car, all sharing in expense.

The theme which has been selected is "Christian Youth in Action in Building a New World," and the basis of study and discussion will be "A General Guide to Youth Action" ($.25). The Pilgrim Press, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass. It is suggested that every person who expects to attend secure and read a copy of this booklet prior to the opening session of the conference.

The conference will open at 7:00 P. M., Friday, December 27th, with a Get-Acquainted Period, Address, Announcement and Discussion of Conference Plans, and an Upper Room Service. Saturday will be a full day, beginning with a Morning Watch Service, followed by conferences on the nine major problems in Building a New World, conferences on Southeast and State Youth Fellowship Work, a Fellowship Supper and Social Period, Panel Discussion on "Christian Youth in Action in the Local Church," and an Upper Room Service. The Sunday schedule will begin with a Sunrise Service, followed by Sunday school and church service in the morning. In the afternoon and night conference reports will be completed, read, discussed and adopted. The conference will close with an address and a Communion Service.

All officers and young people of the Southeast should plan now to attend this Holiday Conference to be held in Sunny Florida in December.

Hymn: "O Zion, Haste Thy Mission High Fulfilling."

Announcement of topic—scripture.

Points for talks—

Mission work is not necessarily on the foreign field. The city offers a challenge. Too often our Christian churches have avoided cities and have been content to remain in the country. The example of Paul should stimulate us to permeate the great centers of life for Christ and His Church.

Every Christian Endeavor Society should be a service unit. Whether your church is a rural or a city church the society might select some community project. One society in a city recently held an "Inter-Racial" meeting. People of all races that could be found in their city were invited to have a part on that program.

It would be a fine thing for the young people of a community to take a religious census. You will be surprised at the number of people living in your immediate vicinity who are not members of some church. Has your society ever sponsored a Revival Meeting? This would be a good project for the society in the rural section as well as in the largest city. Many societies are doing a fine piece of missionary work in the city through the public playgrounds; many are cooperating with their local welfare and relief agencies.

Where some important issue is involved, Christian Endeavorers in the city or the rural community may help mould public opinion by taking a straw vote; by forwarding a petition to the proper authorities; by holding public meetings and having speakers who can give to the public intelligent information—the youth of Kansas kept Kansas dry.

We must remember that Christ walks the streets of the city as well as the country road—and where ever we travel Christ is depending on us to preach His gospel; and the manner in which we serve our own community will be a challenge to our missionary endeavors.

Special Music: "Where Cross the Crowded Ways of Life."

Discussion—

1. Does our community need mission work?
2. How can we take Christ to the people of our community?
3. Is there a greater need for mission work in the city than in the rural community?

Closing Hymn: "Lead On, O King Eternal."

Mizpah Benediction.

Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

THE MESSAGE OF HAGAI AND ZECHARIAH.

Lesson VIII—November 24, 1935.

Golden Text: "I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go unto the house of the Lord." —Psalm 122:1.

Lesson: Ezra 3:1-6:22; Psalm 84:1-12; Haggai, 1, 2; Zechariah 4:1-10.

Perhaps it will be well to give a brief historical background of today's lesson before attempting to give an exposition of the truths and their application to life.

By permission of Cyrus, the Jews returned to to Palestine and to Jerusalem. They settled there, built homes, and established themselves as permanent residents. They first builded an altar where they worshipped Jehovah, and later began to rebuild the Temple. The people of the surrounding country offered to help them to rebuild the Temple, but this offer was rejected. This is the historic occasion of the breach between the Jews and the Samaritans. Incensed at the seeming stubbornness and selfishness of the Jews the Samaritans preferred charges against the Jews at Jerusalem, direct to the king himself. They asserted in their letter to him that the Jews were a rebellious people and always had been, that they were seeking to regain independence, and that they would refuse to pay tribute to the king, once their city was fortified again. The king thereupon ordered the work to be stopped, and gave the Samaritans power to carry out the restrictive order.

Fifteen years later, however, the people, under the inspiration of Haggai again started to rebuild the temple. Again the Samaritans preferred charges against them to the king. But this time the Jews made an appeal to the original records which showed that Cyrus had not only given them permission to return and to rebuild the temple, but that he had hehlped personally with gifts, and had instructed the people in the country to underwrite a part of the expenses. The people were thus free to go on with the work.

It was a great task to which they had set themselves and they had comparative meager resources. They would have become discouraged had it not been for their leaders, especially Haggai and Zechariah. Eventually the Temple was rebuilt, and was re-dedicated with impressive services. The feast of the Passover was also re-instituted. It is out of this background that today's lesson comes. Now for a few observations as to the spiritual principles involved.

"This people say, it is not the time for us to come, the time for Jehovah's house to be built." We are always thinking that the time to do our duty is some other time. We put off the evil day as far as possible. We try to persuade ourselves that it will be easier to do tomorrow what we know we ought to do today. This applies to church work as well as to private affairs. It is especially true of accepting Christ and beginning the Christian life.

"Is it time for you yourselves to dwell in your ceiled houses, while this house lieth waste?" It is a shame for a church which has a membership who dwell in fine homes and who have all the comforts and conveniences of life, to be in disrepair, or to be unattractive in appearance. There is, of course, such a thing as overdoing church building and much sin has been committed in recent years in that line. But certainly the house of God ought to compare favorably with the other buildings in the community or the city. It ought to be so built and so kept that it would reflect honor upon God. As was stated in last week's notes this does not mean, necessarily, magnificence, but it does mean attractiveness and neatness.

"Consider your ways." Jehovah through the mouth of his prophet suggests that one reason why the people had not prospered more was because their interest in religion had declined. They had lost the early glow of their religious faith. Material resources are not enough. The church stands for that which is essential to the security of community and national life.

"The silver and the gold is mine, saith Jehovah of hosts." God owns, man possesses. That is the primary and fundamental principle of stewardship. Let every man take heed how he earns, how he saves, how he spends, and how he gives money. It is required in stewards that a man be found faithful.

"The glory of this house shall be greater than the former." Not in literal material magnificence, for Solomon's temple was perhaps the greatest work of man's hands. But the glory of the latter house was a spiritual glory. The ultimate test of the house of God is not its size or its cost, but its spiritual fruits.

"Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith Jehovah of hosts." Beautiful buildings help. Elaborate services have their place. Large membership lists have a value. Plans and programs are necessary. But the fundamental need is the Holy Spirit. Except these other things are energized by God's Spirit, the church can never fulfil its mission or exercise its true ministry. The church today needs another Pentecost. We have become adepts in the mechanics of religion; we need to become specialists in the dynamics of religion.

"Who art thou, O great mountain? Before Zerubbabel thou shalt become a plain." There were mountains in the way of building the temple in that day. There are mountains in the way of building the kingdom in this day. But in the face of faith, and courage, and sacrifice, and patient effort ,and spiritual power, we can remove mountains. Nationalism, materialism, militarism, skepticism, humanism, alcoholism, indifferentism—how many gigantic forces are aligned against the Kingdom today. But the arm of our God is not shortened. We are workers together with him. Let us not be weary in well doing.

"For who hath despised the day of small things?" Alas, how often we are deceived by size and numbers. How often we make the mistake of judging a thing or a person by what it or he is, rather than in terms of what it or he may become. Think of the beginnings of the church. How little it was in comparison with the world when it was born! What a pecarious foothold, seemingly, it had in that pagan world of the first century! But think of the Church today. And the end is not yet. Christ must rule until He hath put all enemies under His feet. The kingdoms of this world are to become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform it. These times need nothing so much as they need a simple and deep-rooted faith in the ultimate triumph of goodness, and a willingness to invest all that we have and are in the issue which is joined.

Thinking is so painful that most of us can think only when we have to. A disturbing fact is that much of the world's best work has been done on an empty stomach.—William Feather.

Be ashamed to die until you have gained some victory for humanity.—Mason.

"LORD, I GIVE THEE THANKS."

"Give thanks unto the Lord; for he is good; for his mercy endureth forever."—I Chron. 16: 34.

"Lord, I give thanks!
Last year, Thou knowest, my ambitions failed;
My back with courgings of defeat was flailed;
My eyes felt oft the sharp, salt wash of tears,
No guerdon blessed the tireless toil of years;
Fast in the snares my helpless feet were tied;
Ye in my woes Thou didst with me abide.
Lord, I give thanks!

"Lord, I give thanks!
Last year my one lone ship came back to me
A ruined wreck of what she used to be,
No cargo in her hold, storm-stained and scarred.
O Lord, Thou knowest well 'twas hard,
To watch her drifting hulk with hopeless eyes;
Yet in my desolation, Thou wert nigh.
Lord, I give thanks!

"Lord, I give thanks!
Last year the one I loved the dearest died.
And like a desert waste became the wide
And weary world. Love's last sweet star went out;
Blackness of darkness wrapped me round about,
Yet in the midst of my mad misery,
Thou lendest Thy rod and staff to comfort me?
Lord, I give thanks!"

—Father O'Neil.

TUESDAY

"THANKFUL FOR LITTLE THINGS."

"The sun be warm and kind to you,
The darkest night, some star shines through,
The dullest morn a radiance brew,
And then at dusk God's hand to you."

—Eleanor Powers.

"I thank Thee, Lord, that Thou hast given
Me on this earth a little taste of heaven,
That if long days of sorrow lie in wait
I shall not murmur when Thou compensate
With children's laughter, and their sweet dried tears;
With young feet running through my crowded years.

"I have had little babies on my heart,
And tall sons growing. I have had a part
Of immortality upon this earth.
I have known anguish; I have tasted mirth,
Surely in mingled agony and bliss
High heaven cannot give me more than this.

"I am so thankful that Thou hast allowed
Me to extend my life to these three proud
Young lives that I have nurtured, nothing more
Exalted can be gained from heaven's store;
Only long hours of rest and quiet skies
That busy mothers never realize."

—Author unknown.

WEDNESDAY

"THE BEST THANKS."

"Wilt Thou know—that faith without works is dead? By works was faith made perfect."—James 2:20-23.

"He thanks Thee best who serves Thee best
Who meets each glowing day
With grateful heart and lifted face
To toil and rest and play.

"He thanks Thee best who loves Thee best;
And loving, loves each one
Who passes down the old high-road
From sun to setting sun.

"He thanks Thee best who trusts Thee best;
Whose faith shines through the dark,
A healthful, happy, hopeful thing
For way-tired hearts to mark.

"He thanks Thee best who worships best;
Who prays where none may see,
Who humbly waits to hear Thy voice,
Who has no God but Thee."

—Grace Noll Crowell.

THURSDAY

"A THANKSGIVING PRAYER."

Our dear heavenly Father, when we consider Thy mercies and blessing through the days, months and years, how great are they!

We would thank Thee for Thy provisions: for Thy strong unbroken love that links friend to friend, produces the harmonies and the happiness of life and gives health, faith and hope for which no substitute of wealth can be given; for the beauty and charm of nature, sunshine and rain, and the fruit of fields, orchards, and grain; for home and kindly neighbors; for the light of day and the blanket of gentle night when stars shine through; for books and magazines and education; for the world outside and the gift to look and see; for the gift of work and toil at the tasks of life; for the springs that quench the thirst, and for strangers that pass by and ask the way; for the kindnesses of life which kindly neighbors have left their work to perform; for the music of the air and the symphonies of life's true songs.

For all mercies and for all good, we pray Thee to accept our gratitude this day. In the name of Jesus Christ our Saviour and Lord we ask it.—Amen.

FRIDAY

"Every day will I bless Thee; and I will praise Thy name, forever and ever."—Ps. 145:2.

"Sweet it is to see the sun
Shining on Thanksgiving day;
Sweet it is to see the snow
Fall as if it came to stay;
Sweet is everything that comes,
For all makes cheer, Thanksgiving Day.

"Fine is the pantry's goodly store,
And fine the heaping dish and tray;
Fine the church-bells ringing; fine
All the dinner's great array,
Things we'd hardly dare to touch,
Were it not Thanksgiving Day.

"Dear the people coming home,
Dear glad faces long away,
Dear the merry cries, and dear
All the glad and happy play.
Dear the thanks, too, that we give
For all of this Thanksgiving Day.

"But sweeter, finer, dearer far
It well might be if on our way,
With love for all, with thanks to heaven,
We did not wait for Time's delay,
But, with remembered blessings then Made every day Thanksgiving day."

SATURDAY

"THE CAUSE OF CONTENTMENT."

"Content with such things as ye have: for Himself hath said, I will in no wise fail thee."—Read Hebrews 13:1-6.

Contentment rests on an understanding of God. If we realize Him as our loving Father and all-powerful Friend, we shall be sure that whatever He gives us is best for us and that He will give us all that is best for us.

Contentment rests on an experience of God, for this experience brings about an understanding of Him. As year after year we receive His bounties and know His sympathy, we come to see that His goodness is unending. The longer we go on in the Christian life, the surer we are of our God and the more content with the things which He provides.

So that discontent is a certain proof that we are not having an experience of God, we are not living with Him. Discontent should be to us a sharp warning that all is not well with our souls. We should make it our instant and urgent task to transform that discontent into calm and perfect content.

Prayer—Thou art all kindness, our God. There is nothing in Thee and in Thy gifts to us that we would change.—Amen.

SUNDAY

"TAKE OFF THE VEILS."

"With unveiled face beholding as in a mirror the glory of the Lord."—Read II Corinthians 2: 12:18.

God's glory is not to be directly seen. So bright is it that it would blind our eyes. We see it reflected in the mirror of nature, the mirror of the church and of godly men, the mirror of prayer, most clearly of all in the mirror of Jesus Christ, His life, His death, His resurrection.

But because we can not look directly upon the Infinite is no reason why we should put a veil over our faces. We can not gaze straight upon Him, but we can gaze straight upon His mirrors.

And the longer we look upon them, the more faithfully we observe them, the clearer will be our vision of God, and the more we shall be changed into the likeness of what we see. For vision creates character. We become assimilated to all upon which we gaze long and lovingly.

Prayer—We long to be like Thee. Grant that in Thy good time this transformation may be accomplished.

PROGRESS REPORTED AT CHURCH MEETING.

First Congregational-Christian Made Gains in Every Department During Year.

Progress was made in every department during the past year, according to reports presented at a congressional meeting of the First Congregational-Christian church held Wednesday night in the church auditorium. There was an increase in membership and all financial obligations were met, despite the fact that the pastor, Dr. C. H. Rowland, was absent from his pulpit for several months because of illness. Recently Dr. Rowland was chosen as pastor-emeritus and Rev. W. E. Wisseman was named active pastor.

At Wednesday night's meeting officers for the year were elected. H. V. Simpson, J. R. Truitt, Mrs. J. R. Foster and Mrs. S. W. Stewart were elected delegates to the annual conference which met last week at Concord Christian church in Caswell county. The local congregation voted to extend an invitation to the conference to meet in Greensboro next year.—Greensboro Daily News.

A CRUSADE FOR PEACE.

By John G. Truitt.

"And he shall judge between many peoples and arbitrate for great nations, from afar. And they will beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks. Nation shall not lift up sword against nation, nor shall they learn war any more."—Mic. 4:3.

"Persuaded that the time has come when a frank renunciation of war as an instrument of national policy should be made to the end that the peaceful and friendly relations now existing between their peoples may be perpetuated (the undersigned nations) have decided to conclude a treaty—

"The High Contracting Parties solemnly declare in the names of their respective peoples that they condemn recourse to war for the solution of international controversies, and renounce it as an instrument of national policy in their relations with one another.

"The High Contracting Parties agree that the settlement or solution of all disputes or conflicts of whatever nature or of whatever origin they may be, which may arise among us, shall never be sought except by pacific means." In all sixty-three nations have either signed, or voted to accept the above treaty. It is the law of our land.

Jesus said, "Put up again thy sword into its place: for all they that take the sword shall perish with the sword." Again He said: "Blessed are the peacemakers; for they shall be called the children of God."

Cordell Hull, secretary of state, issues a call to the churches of America to put on "a flaming crusade for peace." The Secretary of State stands at a unique vantage point. From that vantage point he sees the nations of the earth in a light differing from any other man. He has a peculiar insight into their plans, motives, and purposes. He has his hands on the pulse of their international relationships. He voices in public address, and on printed page what he prays in private to the God of nations. It is though Cordel Hull realizes that it can never again be said of any mortal man: "He kept us out of war." He calls on the churches, instruments of God, in the hope the God will keep us out of war.

Cordell Hull's cry for the churches' crusade for peace is but a challenge of the State to the Church to do its duty. There are enough members of the church of Jesus Christ across the world to stop war. If the church, which follows the Prince of Peace, and has so often gladly laid down the lives of its members for the sake of the Lord, should arise and say to war it shall not be their word would be final. Will the church follow the Prince of Peace as far as the State is trying to do, "persuaded that the time has come for a frank renunciation of war?" Will the followers of the lowly Nazarene dare to do less? Has the church to be dragged along by the State and secular press in this matter of renunciation of war? If so, will she ever be able to lift her head as the leader of civilization, and culture, and brotherhood?

Sixty-three nations of the earth have gathered their nations in their most solemn conclaves, and deliberately after due consideration voted to renounce war. They "solemnly declare in the name of their respective peoples that they condemn war." And the secular press has joined them in that great denunciation. Editorial after editorial pour forth preaching peace to the people. The church has often rightly or wrongly taken opportunity to pass some backhanded compliments to the secular press, but here is an issue in which they can both engage; and let it be said that the power of the public press is inestimable. The church then has no apology to make in preaching peace, and in putting it forward in its program. And along this line it is making great strides.

The Methodist Church, South, in their General Conference voted: "We must loathe war, and hate war, and strip it of all its falseness and glamour and let it stand forth in its unveiled hideousness." Does that not sound like standing up and being counted? Is not that a good beginning toward a "flaming crusade for peace?"

The General Convention of the Episcopal Church voted: "We believe that as the Christian conscience has condemned infanticide and slavery, and torture, it is now called to condemn war as an outrage on the Fatherhood of God, and the brotherhood of all mankind." And has that great church of God spoken?

The Disciples of Christ in their International Convention said: "War as a method of settling international disputes is incompatible with the teaching and example of our Lord Jesus Christ." Then, my friends, if it is incompatible with the teaching and example of our Lord Jesus Christ is it not time the churches were beginning a flaming crusade for peace? Does not every thinking person know that the world is now showing every sign of war? Was it idle talk when the secretary of state of one of the greatest nations on earth called upon the churches to put on a "flaming crusade for peace?" Did he not know it was needed, and did he not believe in its power and efficacy.

The Evangelical Synod of North America resolved as follows: "We declare that we will not, as a Christian church, ever again bless or sanction war." Again that is standing up and being courted. How oft the church has blessed and sanctioned war, and then turned and bowed to the Prince of peace!

The great Northern Baptist Church has declared in solemn assembly: "War is the supreme social sin, and so long as the war system is maintained there can be no safety for our homes or our civilization and no realization of the kingdom of heaven on earth."

The Presbyterian Church of the United States of America in their General Assembly voted: " . . . that in any matter in which the laws of their country conflict with the commands of God, they must assert their duty and right 'to obey God rather than men'."

Our own General Council says: "We of this council call upon the people of our churches to renounce war and all its works and ways and to refuse to support, sanction or bless it."

The Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America goes on record as follows: "To support war is to deny the Gospel we profess to believe."

In 1934, 20,870 clergymen were asked the question by mail, "Are you personally prepared to state that it is your present purpose not to sanction any future war or participate as an armed combatant?" And 12,904 answered "Yes". They were asked the further question: "Do you believe that the churches of America should now go on record as refusing to sanction or support any future war?" And 13,997 answered "Yes". . .The World Peace Commission of the Methodist Church says: "We believe that war is sin because it involves (a) the slaughter of human beings, (b) violation of personal property, (c) lying propaganda, (d) deliberate breeding of the spirit of hate, (e) vast destruction of property, (f) it puts

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

Thanksgiving is here. The battle for Thanksgiving offerings throughout our church is on. Let's put a lot of "pep" in it. One hundred little fatherless and motherless children at the Christian Orphanage at Elon College are dependent largely on the Thanksgiving offerings you send in for their support.

Next Sunday every minister, every Sunday school superintendent and every teacher should make a talk in behalf of the one hundred little children in our care. The Lord has been good to you during the year. He has richly blessed you. Don't you think down in your heart that you should make an appeal with a heart full of love in behalf of these helpless tots. If all our pastors, all our Sunday school superintendents and all our teachers will make a special plea in behalf of our special Thanksgiving offering I know we will have a great response and a large offering will be sent in. Now to every member of your church I want to ask you this question. Are you going to make an offering at this Thanksgiving season? It gives you an opportunity and a privilege to help the fatherless at this season of the year and bring to your own heart a joy and a satisfaction that cannot come to you in any other way. Suppose you do not make an offering. Then you lose that joy and deny some little helpless child a home and a chance in life.

The several orphanages in North Carolina are making a special effort this Thanksgiving to raise large offerings to make it possible to do a larger work. What are our churches in the Southern Convention going to do in regard to our Christian Orphanage at this season? Times are better. The country is in a better financial condition and our offerings should be better than last year. If your church has been asked for fifty dollars and you can make it one hundred, do it. You will be the happier. A pastor said to me a few days ago, "you asked my church for fifty, we are going to make it a hundred dollars." That is fine. Many other churches can do as well. The more support you give us the more work we can do. The more little children we can help. Ten applications on file from widows in distress and the little children pleading to come. If you make your offerings liberal you will say "come" to a part of these children. Will your answer be "yes" or "no"? We will know by the offerings sent in.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON.

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

in the place of moral law the doctrine of moral necessity, (g) it distorts the religion of Jesus into the religion of a war god."

Last Armistice Day, 1934, the Church Peace Union sent out a manifesto signed by more than two hundred leading citizens of the United States, including sixty bishops and forty-five college presidents. These are only a few items showing the trend of the church's thought concerning this matter of international peace. And have we not shown that not only the church, but many outside the church, as such, are vigorously fighting for the renunciation of war, especially in the fact that sixty-three nations have already renounced it as a means of settling international disputes and conflicts, in accepting the Kellogg-Briand peace pact.

In the light of our present civilization, and our recent World War what can we hope to gain by war? Please allow me to quote from the New York Telegram: "The last war cost the United States 51 billion of dollars counting interest to date, according to Andrew W. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury.

"As recently as 1885, $51,000,000,000 would have bought the whole United States, with everybody and everything in it, lock, stock, and barrel. Today $51,000,000,000 would buy sixteen states like Alabama, or three enormously rich Californias, with a couple of Colorados thrown in for good measure.

At 5 per cent fifty-one billion dollars would provide an annual income of $2,550,000,000, or enough to pension 2,125,000 old and broken down workers at $100 per month, virtually abolishing poverty in this country."

This Christian America is spending daily $3,000,000.00 (three million) for its armed forces, according to a statement in a recent publication of Sherwood Eddy and Kirby Page, or one billion a year.

Well, where is our Bible? Where is our Christ? Where is our Christianity? Is such approved of Jesus? Can the church keep its face, and preach its Gospel, and practice such violations of its doctrines? Let ten millions sons from ten million European graves speak as from the dead: NO!

OBITUARIES

BYRD.

Mrs. Annie Bettie Byrd, relict of the late, lamented Jethro Byrd, peacefully passed away to her eternal reward on September first, 1935. The Ladies' Aid Society of Cypress Chapel Church adopted the following:

"Whereas, Annie Bettie Byrd was for years a member of the Ladies' Aid Society of Cypress Chapel Christian Church, faithful, industrious and loyal, always doing her part as far as she was able and

Whereas, the remembrance of her kind, gentle, sympathetic, unassuming manner endeared her to this society, to the people of the community, friends and neighbors and must remain a priceless legacy to all who knew her, as a dear, shining light upon the upward path.

Now therefore, be it resolved:

First, that we hereby offer the sincere condolence of our hearts to the sorely bereaved family and commend them to God for comfort that they may find consolation in the thought that,

'Her cares are all ended,
She has passed away,
Where safely she has wended
To realms of endless day.'

Second, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy sent to The Christian Sun for publication and a copy spread upon the minutes of the Ladies' Aid Society of Cypress Chapel Christian Church.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

Keeping People in Want.—

It is not so much faulty distribution of wealth that keeps people in want, asserts Dean Ralph C. Epstein of the University of Buffalo School of Administration, as it is underproduction of wealth. He says that if all incomes were limited to $5,000 a year and the excess redistributed, the average income in this country would be increased by just $100. One is inclined to agree with the Dean that our greatest need is for the increased production of wealth, but, on the other hand, most of us could use the additional $100 to advantage. One thing, however, the Dean was not quoted as mentioning, i. e. that in the very distribution of this wealth much of it would be destroyed.

Another Nation.—

Another people joined the galaxy of nations last week, when with the stroke of his pen President Roosevelt put into effect the proclamation ending the thirty-six years' rule of the United States over the 7,083 islands known as the Philippines. This action on the part of the United States is probably the first instance in history where one nation was voluntarily given its freedom by another, and it is the first time in 400 years that the Philippines can lay claim to independence. Only nominally free during a probation period of ten years, the islands become virtually a protectorate of this country. As they prove themselves capable of self-government, the Stars and Stripes will be hauled down and they will become an autonomous Republic. These rich islands were discovered by Magellan in 1521. They were named for Philip II of Spain and were ruled by that nation for over three and a half centuries, till ceded to the United States in 1899. The Philippines have a total area of 114,000 square miles, and at the present time a population of over 12,500,000.

Helping Stimulate Business.—

"Reports from within the Administration that President Roosevelt has instructed the budget bureau and government agencies to cut overhead during the coming year will," says Industrial Press Service, "bring the most unanimous approval of any move he has made during the past year." It is pointed out that if the "breathing spell" decreed during the summer by the President is carried through the coming session of Congress, this with a definite move to halt unnecessary spending will add a definite stimulus for recovery. Secretary of Commerce Roper, in a recent address said: "Business profits cannot be penalized, or the profit-and-loss system will suffer with a bad case of angina pectoris . . . As long as we maintain our present capitalistic system—and it will be maintained—no obstructions or deterrents must be permanently set up to prevent fair and reasonable profits." In referring to the President's "breathing spell," he said: "This declaration of the President's is clearcut and concrete. It means that business no longer needs to feel any uncertainty as to what may come in the future with respect to governmental measures."

Reversing the Rule of Tithing.—

Just one hundred years ago last Monday, there was born in the historic Scottish city of Dunfarmline, a boy who later became the American millionaire, Andrew Carnegie. Pittsburgh, Pa., was the second home of this boy who began earning his own living at the early age of twelve, and here is the Carnegie Institute which he founded and later endowed with $36,000,000. Nearly two thousand libraries in the United States and 865 in other countries bear his name, and before his death he created the Carnegie Corporation of New York, with a fund of $124,000,000, and the United Kingdom Trust of $10,000,000, to complete the giving he was unable to finish. "My chief happiness," wrote he, "lies in the thought that, even after I pass away, the wealth that came to me to administer as a sacred trust for the good of my fellowmen is to continue to benefit humanity for generations to come." Burton J. Hendricks, in a pamphlet issued by the Carnegie Corporation, says that after his death it was revealed that this great "distributor" of wealth has a "tithing system" all his own: "The Biblical injunction stipulates 10 per cent as the amount a God-fearing man shall devote to his brother's welfare . . . Carnegie . . . gave 90 per cent for public use and kept 10 per cent for himself and heirs." The total amount of his gifts exceeded $350,000,000.

Thankgiving
"For Country and For God"

BY FREDERIC J. BAYLIS

A toast you ask for this, our land so fair,
With which no other country can compare.
America, the beautiful, is its name.
God blessed and God protected is its fame.
A few short years and buffalo held its sway
O'er countless acres, but we see today
The praries broken, emerald-bladed corn
Is swishing in the breeze at early morn.
O'er hill and plain great hosts of loving hearts;
For country and for God they live their parts.
From east and west and north and south they bring
Thanksgiving joys as with glad hearts they sing
Of wheat and cornfields, drumming of the mills
That nestle by the streams amid the hills.
Of cotton enough to clothe the United States,
Of coal enough to fill its every grate,
Of gold enough to pay its many bills,
Of bread enough to feed its Jacks and Jills,
Of iron and steel enough to build the country up,
And God enough to fill each gladsome cup,
Of real snug Cozy homes in which there stand
Millions of sober men who grace this land—
They come to live our life from o'er the sea,
Thankful for comforts, joys and liberty.
Let's ask God's guidance for such blessings brought
To this, our land of freedom which was bought
With blood of martyrs who trod this fertile sod—
And fought the fight for country and for God.
And so, Thanksgiving Day, lest we forget,
Give God the praise and He is with us yet.

"The Commonwealth."—

There comes each month to THE SUN'S Observatory, The Commonwealth, issued by the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce. It is a most creditable and interesting magazine, and excerpts from its articles have appeared on this page. This month there are two most interesting articles found between its covers. "Seing Stars," by Leander McCormick-Goodhart, tells not of the "stars of the opera or of Hollywood, but the more distant and possibly less thrilling stars of the heavens, which like our earthly 'stars' differ from each other in glory." In this article we learn that fifty years ago, the University of Virginia possessed the world's largest and finest telescope, the gift of a native son of Rockbridge County, Leander James McCormick. It has a 26-inch aperture and a length of 32 feet. One learns that there are two kinds of telescopes; the refractors made of lenses, and the reflectors made of mirrors. Until the beginning of the present century, the largest telescopes had been refractors, but today there is a 100-inch reflecting telescope at Mt. Wilson in California, while within another five years there will be in operation a 200-inch telescope, the casting of the glass for it having been noted sometime past. The other article is by James N. Hillman, who writes of Emory and Henry College. "In October, 1835, just one hundred years ago," he tells us, "the Methodists in Southwest Virginia decided to build a college of their own." They named it "Emory and Henry" in honor of "a much-loved bishop of the Methodist Church, John Emory, and the Virginia statesman, Patrick Henry." During the hundred years of its existence, the college has graduated approximately 1,700 students. But there are other things in The Commonwealth of which it certainly cannot be so proud, for it carries the boast that more bottles of one kind of apple brandy has been sold than of all others combined, and a few pages further on one is told that for 70c a pint one can get "a real whiskey value." The State is putting on a campaign to make its roads safer. (?) Are these ads The Commonwealth's contribution?

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Rev. H. E. Crutchfield, Paces, Va., calling at THE SUN office, Elon College, Saturday morning, reports very successful and happy service in his year. At the close of the recent evangelistic meetings at Ingram, there were eleven additions to the church, and the church rejoices in a spiritual awakening and prospects of an active year.

Returns on the Peace Plebiscite after dragging last week, began this week to come with a rush. Last week brought returns from 200 churches. This Monday returns came from 165 and on Tuesday from 196. It appears likely that proposition 3 will get a majority of the votes,—only a war after utmost use of every agency for peace.

The Christian Missionary Association of the North Carolina and Virginia Sonference meets at our Reidsville Church, 10:30 A. M., December 3rd, 1935. Rev. B. J. Earp, 1612 Buffalo St., Greensboro, is the financial secretary to whom Association dues should be sent by those who are not planning to attend the annual meeting at Reidsville.

The Jacksonville church, under the leadership of its young pastor, Rev. Everett B. Lesher, is having a most interesting series known as A Fellowship Forum. The groups meet weekly at the church for a fellowship supper at 6:30, following which is a devotional service and then they break up into the forum groups. The groups discuss the following topics: "Finding A Religion to Live By"; "The Bible Through the Centuries"; "Youth and the World Outlook"; "Making Religion Vital to Our Children"; "The Church and Social Relations." The Fellowship Forum is being largely attended and great interest has been taken in it.

STATION C. M. A. BROADCASTING.

The Eastern Virginia Christian Missionary Association will meet December 3rd at the Rosemont Christian Church, Norfolk. The best way to promote this Association is to have a large delegation from each church attend. Those who hold memberships should attend if possible. Organizations holding memberships should send a representative. Then visitors are always welcome. It is indeed a privilege to visit the Rosemont Church. It will be well worth your trip to hear the Minister's Chorus in their first concert. Please remember that invitations to meet with some church next year will be in order.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

The Alabama Congregational-Christian Conference was held with Blackwoods Church, Headland, R. 1, November 12th-14th. This being in the extreme southeastern part of the State only a small percent of the churches were represented, and only a few of the ministers. The conference was a decided success from start to finish. The program had been well planned and very enthusiastically carried out. Dr. Warren H. Denison, Dayton, Ohio, was certainly at his best, and his messages were of the highest type on Pastoral and Church problems. Rev. Henry I. Bennett, Tottori, Japan, gave a very inspiring address on "Japan Today." Secretary Claude Nelson, The Fellowship of Reconcilliation, Atlanta, Ga., made a great contribution to the conference with his addresses on Race Relations, Ethiopia and War, and World Conditions. President Buell Gallagher, Talladega College, added greatly to the success of the occasion. Time and space forbid mention in detail Dr. F. P. Ensminger, Miss Marguerite Davison and other members of the conference who made great contributions with addresses and enthusiasm, making the entire program one of far-reaching importance. One must mention, however, the fine hospitality given us while in the community. The next session will be held at Wadley. Rev. A. R. Van Cleave was elected as Moderator, Rev. N. A. Long, assistant moderator.

TOMMY'S THANKSGIVING.

I'm thankful for a lot of things:
I'm thankful I'm alive;
I'm thankful that I'six years old,
Instead of only five;
I'm thankful for my tops and toys
And for my Kitty Gray;
I'm thankful for the big outdoors
Where I can run and play;
I'm thankful for the things that grow—
The apples, aren't they good?
The corn where we played hide-and-seek,
As in a little wood;
I'm thankful for the pumpkins round,
Just like a golden ball,
And Jack-o'-lanterns, big and queer—
They don't scare me at all;
I'm thankful for Thanksgiving Day,
For pies all in a row;
I'm thankful grandma made them sweet,
She knows I like them so;
I'm thankful for the turkey, too,
How brown it is and nice!
And I'd be very thankful, please,
For only one more slice.

A NOTE FROM SUFFOLK.

The Suffolk Christian Church's Seventy-Fifth Anniversary Services held on the third Sunday in November were a success. The weather was inclement, but the folks came just the same. Indications were that if it had been a fair day the house would have been more than filled. At the morning service I preached an anniversary sermon, outline of which will be found in THE CHRISTIAN SUN in due time, but the great part of that service was the very inspiring work done by both choirs of the church, under the direction of Mrs. Eloise Crocker Wallace. It should have been so, for Mrs. Wallace is a graduate of Oberlin's music school, and a finished artist both in accompanying and directing a choir. She was ably assisted by Mrs. Vernon Holland, special soloist and leader of our choirs. The junior choir sang from the balcony of the church, and the regular choir from their choir loft. And how they sang! The music was inspiring, and the choirs received many well-earned compliments for their most excellent work.

In the afternoon at three o'clock Dr. H. Shelton Smith of Duke, brought a message of daring and prophetic insight. Dr. Smith speaks out of a warm, sympathetic heart, and a vast wealth of knowledge of his subject. Taking as his subject, "God or Caesar," he indicated how easily and tragically the church was oftentimes led into following Caesar rather than God. Pointing out the problem in a way that made it unmistakably clear, he went on to suggest its solution in the proper evaluation of sin, and the shortness of the probationary state in comparison with eternity. There was something quite old-fashioned about Dr. Smith's address,—as old-fashioned as evil, and as fresh as the ageless hope of heaven. It was a very great pleasure to have Dr. Smith in our home Saturday and Sunday, and to revive many pleasant memories of classmate days at Elon.

We were honored in the afternoon service with the presence of Dr. and Mrs. L. E. Smith of Elon; Rev. R. L. House of Newport News; Dr. N. G. Newman of Holland; Rev. C. E. Gerringer of Windsor; Rev, Jesse M. Roberts of Windsor; Rev. Carl R. Key of Holland; Dr. W. M. Jay of Suffolk; Rev. L. L. Lassiter of Suffolk; and perhaps others of our Christian ministers; also Rev. George Wesley Jones, D. D., of the Main Street Methodist Church, Suffolk; Dr. H. J. Goodwin of the First Baptist Church, Suffolk; Rev. Carl B. Craig of the Presbyterian Church, Suffolk; and many visitors from various churches. We had greetings read from Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, the only living former pastor, who was regrettably kept away on account of a previous important engagement; Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Mission Secretary; Rev. Joseph E. McCauley of First Christian Church, Richmond; and Supt. Chas. D. Johnston of the Christian Orphanage. Personal notes from Dr. and Mrs. W. D. Harward of Dendron and Mr. and Mrs. Russell T. Bradford of Driver, were greatly appreciated.

One of the most interesting of the afternoon service was the "History of the Suffolk Christian Church" prepared and read by Mr. W. E. MacClenny. Mr. MacClenny revealed many interesting sidelights as well as the main course of the illustrious history of our church, and added very greatly to the worthwhileness of our program.

The name of Dr. W. W. Staley was on many lips throughout the day, and his sainted memory was in every heart. And along with that name, inseparably linked, was the name of Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, who in his message to the church for the day said: "I pay tribute, too, to Dr. W. W. Staley, to whose manner of life, and to whose measure of service, much of her greatness is due. The Suffolk Christian has been a great church because she had such a great pastor. She stands today in large measure as a monument to Dr. Staley who loved her and gave himself for her. I thank God that I had the privilege of intimate association with him in our mutual task as pastors of the church."

AGE, SEX AND OCCUPATION IN THE PEACE VOTE.

The tabulation of the Peace Plebiscite returns has proceeded far enough to give some clues as to the Congregational and Christian line-up on the various proposals.

Twenty thousand ballots from 294 churches in twenty states give 9,226 votes (or 42 per cent) for support of "only a war declared by the government after making utmost use of every agency for peace"; 6,943 votes or 34 per cent would support "only a war in which United States territory has been invaded"; 3,121 or 15 per cent would support no war; 1,330 or 6 per cent would support any war the government may declare, and 680 or 3 per cent would support any war declared against "an internationally recognized aggressor."

Marked divergences appeared between the occupational groups which designated themselves as "business-finance" and "professionals." In the former group 9 per cent would not support any war. In the latter group 19 per cent would not support any war. At the Broadway Tabernacle, New York City, as previously reported, it may be remembered that over 50 per cent would not support any war.

Differences in groups according to age and sex were marked between men 36 to 50 years of age, the veteran-age group, and the younger men from 21 to 35 from whom the forces for a war in the near future would be recruited. Among the older men eleven per cent would not and twelve per cent would support any war; this was the only grouping anywhere in the balloting where the support for any war was greater than the support for no war. Among the younger men 15 per cent would not and 5 per cent would support any war. Among women 36 to 50 years of age, 15 per cent would not and 5 per cent would support any war. Among women 21 to 35 years of age, 20 per cent would not and 4 per cent would support any war.

On general questions, 9,356 were in favor of the United States joining the League of Nations and 11,101 were opposed; 10,753 were in favor of national isolation through strict neutrality legislation and 7,418 were opposed; 7,670 were in favor of a larger army, navy and air force and 11,144 were opposed. Regarding a larger army, navy and air force, the business-finance group voted 1,029 for and 824 opposed and the veteran-age group voted 1.070 for and 878 opposed; the professional group voted 1,116 for and 2,317 opposed and the younger men voted 848 for and 1,186 opposed; the older women voted 1,009 for and 1,489 opposed; the younger women voted 725 for and 1,538 opposed.

"TO DRINK OR NOT TO DRINK."

A new temperance text-book for the serious study of the beverage use of alcoholic liquors in Congregational and Christian Churches has been issued by the adult education department of the united denomination.

The text-book is titled "To Drink or Not to Drink." The author is Sidney A. Weston, Ph. D., editor and general manager of the Congregational Publishing Society, Boston, Mass., and author of many religious study books for adults, including "The Prophets and the Problems of Life," "Principles of Social Living," "Jesus' Teachings."

A different tempre distinguishes the new temperance institution from that of the pre-prohibition era. It is not dogmatic. The technic of modern educational psychology is followed. Students are directed to ascertain facts for themselves and to formulate their own principles.

Concerning the application of knowledge, however, the new instruction is no less morally uncompromising than the old. It keeps to the fore that no educational principle is more firmly established than that growth in learning or the apprehension of truth comes only as knowledge is given expression or applied in behaviour.

Frankly admitting "there is increase in drinking among women" and that "cocktail parties are popular," the new study book seeks to guide students to the evidence and arguments for both sides of three sets of "basic questions,"

1. What shall be the attitude of:
   a. the individual toward the use of alcoholic liquor?
   b. Society toward the use of alcoholic liquor.
2. Shall the individual:
   a. Drink to excess?
   b. Drink in moderation?
   c. Not drink at all?
3. Shall society try to:
   a. Control the use of alcoholic liquor?
   b. Eliminate the traffic in it?

SOME LEADING QUESTIONS.

Preliminary questions upon which students are expected to come to a conclusion before arriving at answers to the main question, include?

"What risk is involved when happiness is sought through intoxicating liquor?

"Would you say the stake is worth the risk? Or are there other ways, less dangerous, more courageous, in which to seek happiness?

"Has a person who seeks to avoid the hard realities of life some of the traits of a coward, or is he wiser than some may think?

"Draw up two columns and in one put the objectives to be gained through drinking intoxicating liquors; in the other column write the losses and handicaps that may result from it. Include in this list both objective and subjective values thay may be jeopardized.

"Would you say that the use of alcoholic liquor in the home is good or bad or a matter of indifference. Try to get facts, not impressions, to aid you in answering. Remember that alcoholic liquor is used in many different types of homes.

"Is there drinking in high school? To what extent? Was the work of the welfare agencies increased or decreased by the return of legal liquor?

"What is the effect of the use of alcoholic liquor on industry—on the percentage of acci-

A Story for the Children

THE THANKFULEST CHILD.

By ELEANOR HAMMOND

They were all going to Grandma and Grandpa's house for Thanksgiving and Della fairly jumped up and down as she watched Mother getting things ready for the trip. They would have to ride on two trains and they were going to stay until Sunday after Thanksgiving at Grandma's.

"We'll each carry something!" Mother said. "Ted, you take the black bag and Della, you can take care of this box with the pumpkin pies in it."

Ted was ten but Della was only six and a quarter. She felt very glad to be trusted with anything so important as the box of pumpkin pies for the Thanksgiving dinner.

She carried it very carefully on and off the street cars and into the big electric train. She didn't forget it when she looked out of the window watching the houses and telegraph poles and fences and fields fly by.

When the brakeman called "Center Junction!" Della picked up her box of pumpkin pies and trotted out of the train after Mother and Ted.

They had to wait half an hour for the train that went to Grandma's. It seemed a long time to Della. She walked up and down the platform looking at the crows of people and the trunks and bags. By and by a train whistled and Della ran to get her box.

"All aboard for Cherry Valley, Scoggin and Mapleville!" the conductor shouted.

Della saw a boy with a black bag climbing up the steps. There was a lady just ahead of him.

Della walked down the aisle of the train looking for Ted and Mother. Hadn't she seen them get on just ahead of the plump woman and herself? But she could not find them. She went into the next car and the next and her eyes began to grow round with alarm. Weren't Ted and Mother on the train at all?

Della was in the last car now and she had not found them. The train was running lickety-split down the track.

Della's eyes filled and overflowed.

"What's the matter, little girl?" the blue-coated conductor asked.

Della told him how she had seen Ted and Mother get on the train and she had got on, too—only now she guessed it was some other boy with a black bag she had seen.

The conductor took her hand and offered to take her box, but Della wouldn't let go of it. She might be lost herself but she wasn't going to let the Thanksgiving pumpkin pies get lost, too!

They walked all through the cars but they did not find Ted and mother.

'Just sit down and don't worry!" the kind conductor told Della. "I'll put you on the first train back to Center Junction!"

Before long the train drew out on a siding. "Now's your chance to change!" the conductor told Della. "You haven't lost your box of pies, have you?" Della hadn't. "This is where I was told to put you off, Missy!" the new conductor told Della.

But Della didn't get off. Just as she reached the steps she saw a lady and a boy.

"Where in the world have you been, dear?" Mother cried.

Della told her.

"And when we're all telling at Grandma's tonight what we're most thankful for this year," Della said, "I'm going to be the thankfulest one of all—because I didn't get lost and I didn't forget to remember the box you gave me to take care of!"—Storyland.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

NEW CONFERENCE YEAR.

The Conferences of our Convention are over for the year and the annual accounts, great or small, have been cast up and turned in. Maybe the church letter was not filled out and sent up to Conference, but the account has been made out and finished just the same. Some of these accounts may not be very satisfactory. There are, we have already observed, some blanks. The blanks may be filled in with imagination, with regret, with black or red ink. However, the accounts as cast up must now stand, and we face a new year in church life and activity. God permits us to have new beginnings; to start all over again, to have another chance, to face the future with or without courage, hopes or regrets.

On the whole there was much to encourage from the work of the past year. For the most part, offerings were better, the hand of benevolence was more open, and the spirit of sharing with others was apparent. Some individual churches showed increase in membership and reported progress in soul-winning, in spiritual awakening, and progress along all lines. The impression at this early date, from the closing of our last Annual Conference, is that on the whole the Conferences showed small, if any, gain in church membership. In only one Conference, we believe, was there reported the organization and admittance of a church into its membership. The Western North Carolina Conference reported two such new organizations. The other Conferences have been making heroic effort to hold their own and to prevent some of their churches from having to close up because of indebtedness incurred in other years. Heavy church debts are still the burden of many churches which added to their plant and equipment in the flush days. So while a Conference may not report a new church added during the year (to add one or more churches each year, however, should be the goal of every Conference), it may have done an heroic and faithful work in debt-paying, in burden-bearing, and in discharging honest and justifiable obligations.

What now concerns us is that we face a new year. Every church, every pastor, should face the new Conference year with renewed energy, with deeper consecration, with a firmer grip on the task in hand and with a more complete and absolute reliance upon and faith in Him who is able to supply every need, and Who, in supplying those needs, ever goes before and marches on, saying, "Follow me."

LIFE AND THE WORLD.

Man cannot live by bread alone. He learned that long ago. He often acts as if he could, and from the emphasis laid on the bread side of life, one would think that was the sole source of life. The Good Book tells us very plainly, and we might as well face it now as to be afraid, or unable, to face it later, that man lives by "every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." Matthew, the gospel writer, is relating the conversation between the Tempter and the Son of God. The Tempter was seeking to induce the Son of God to give first place in His mind and heart to bread and material things. Lord Christ was too wise even for the subtle Tempter, and supported His argument with an ancient commandment, which, through the centuries and the history of mankind, had proven true in actual experience as well as in recorded history! "That he might make thee know that man doth not live by bread only, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord doth man live." (Deut. 8:3.) Thus, God had spoken; thus God is speaking. In our haste and hurry about things for the body, we ignore that which feeds the soul. God is speaking through His world of material things, with all of its beauty and variety, to the soul of man. Out of the harvest of plenty, God is appealing to man, telling him of His bounty and benevolence; out of the lack and needs, and sorrow and distress of man, God is speaking of man's dependence on God and the necessity of relying upon Him and of calling upon Him who is able to supply every want. It is not bread but the word that comes out of the mouth of God man must eat if he is to live. Before the old prophets could give soul food to hungry Israel, they had to "eat up the roll," which contained the Word of God: "Eat this roll and go speak unto the house of Israel. So I opened my mouth and He caused me to eat that roll." The prophet was getting life that he might give life; getting food that he might give food; satisfying his hunger that he might satisfy the hunger of others. When John, the Revelator, saw, "another mighty angel come down from heaven," the angel said unto him, declares John, "take the little Book which is open in my hand and eat it up." This he must needs do, because, said the angel, "Thou must prophesy before many peoples and nations, and tongues and kings."

We are not thinking of the Bible only. We are thinking of every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. And while the Bible contains, and is His inspired Word, we have that Word verified and declared in the high hills about us, in the far-stretching plains, in the rolling seas, in the blue skies, in the threatening storm and in the glorious calm. We must eat the Word of God if we are to live. That is a famishing and a perishing soul, indeed, and body too, that does not feed on and eat the Words that proceed out of the mouth of God. There is life from no other source.

HARVEST.

God, be thankful for harvest yield, whatever be the sowing;
Wheat that bent with golden weight through the summer days;
Corn that ran in endless rows, yellow eared and glowing;
Or apples scarlet on the hills in the autumn haze.
God, be thankful for all of these, but oh, help us remember
Those who have no harvest time, those whose hearts are sad,
Who would have toiled the summer through for heaped bins in November
If they could—Lord, meet their need and some way make them glad.
God, be thankful for yielding fields, and for strong men to till them;
Grant them faith to plant again, the winter left behind.
But, oh, the empty cupboards, Lord, reach out a hand to fill them,
And open up the old lost fields of service to mankind.

OF YOUTH AND OLD AGE.

An editorial writer ["Parson" Bost, no doubt] in the Daily News of Greensboro, Sunday, November 24th, says a word about old age that has an unusual amount of sense and philosophy in it. So, at any rate, does it seem to this writer:

"Age is largely a habit, and if the most of us do grow old it is because we have not learned how to feed our spirits. Youth is not a matter of years but of spiritual condition. It does not consist simply in young muscles and arteries that have not yet begun to harden. Men and women become old by involuntary mental processes; by thinking themselves old. They dwell so much on the mortal side that they forget their immortality. The mortal is kept alive by the immortal, the body kept young by the mind, the mind young by constant contact with fresh ideas. The conservatism of old age comes from closing the doors, shutting the windows and barring the house against the new ideas of a new time."

It was from very wide observation as well as years of experience and many contacts that a journalist said years ago, that the public does not shelve or side-tract a man; a man does that only of himself and for himself. As long as a man is getting and giving new and vigorous ideas to the world, the world has need of him and demands him. "A man," said he, "puts himself on the shelf if he is put there, since the world, at all times, is in need of and demands new, fresh and vigorous thinking, ideas, suggestions and helps." Some of the very best work of the ages has been done by men whom the world, reckoning in years, called old. Moses, the world's greatest law-giver, as well as spiritual leader, did not begin the constructive work that made him immortal, until he was eighty. And scholars tell us that John, the beloved disciple, was nearly one hundred years of age when he penned his mature lines and gave to the world his most marvelous treatise. These were men of action, men of ideas; and thousands, following in their wake, have in maturity given the best they had, and some of the very best the world has had, after the years of flesh had been multiplied.

"CHRISTIAN ESSENTIALS AND PURPOSES."

Annual Address by Rev. W. T Scott, President

Delivered before the One Hundred and Tenth Session of the N. C. & Va. Conference. Nov. 12, 1935 at Concord Church.

(Printed by request of Conference.)

No Conference such as ours should meet and adjourn its annual session without having faced some of the issues which come squarely up to its local Churches and their respective communities for consideration and solution. We shall have met in vain if, at the close of this 110th Annual Session of the N. C. & Va. Conference, we have not honestly faced the needs of the world and our several communities, and if we have not in a measure had impressed upon our minds, hearts, and programs the absolute ability of Jesus to meet these needs. Unless we as ministers and laymen here assembled come to the close of this session more confident of victory through the eternal Christ; unless as ministers and laymen we have been challenged to the depths of our souls toward the better life, we might just as well have stayed at home. We cannot come here, say our say, report our figures, lament our inabilities, and go our several ways feeling that we have done God service. The effectiveness of our Congregational-Christian Churches of this Conference depends upon this Conference for leadership, united action against evil, and for positive advance of the Kingdom through our fellowship of Churches.

God forbid that our session should be like the little girl who played Church. Her play went something like this: "Peoples, stand up! Peoples, sing. Peoples, sit down." Then followed the sermon which was always the same, "Peoples, be good." Then, "Peoples, stand up. Peoples, sing. Peoples, go home. It's over."

It is not enough that this Conference say, "Peoples, be good!" We must somehow find in the spirit of Jesus, and through His movement, the Church, a motive power and means which will propel us toward meeting the problems of the ever-increasing and enlarging world task of making a Christian brotherhood. This Conference, through its reports and addresses, should reveal the spirit of Jesus in profound newness! The financial and business problems facing this session should claim our clearest, consecrated thinking and patience. The challenge of a world in direct need of spiritual victory should send us back to our local Churches with a "magnificent obsession" and zeal for Christ's work in the approaching Church year.

During this session, as Christians, we must inevitably face the world economic tangle; the financial dilemma facing our Churches; the intense international gravity; the spiritual and moral sag in American life, as evidenced in brazen immorality among young and old, in public drunkenness and in increased crime. We must honestly face and give account of our stewardship as Churches dedicated to the exaltation of Jesus Christ. The spirit of Jesus must then be translated into every one of these relationships, if we would give a good account of ourselves as the Lord's stewards.

We need a right understanding of the mission, purpose, power, and possible victory of the Christian cause through Jesus Christ.

By origin, mission, and destiny the Church is the body of Christ, the purpose and commission of which is to exercise His mind and spirit in all human relationships. How greatly we need a rethinking of our task; and a new grasping of the spirit by which we are to perform that task faithfully! This step is related vitally to the serious question facing each of our Churches here assembled: "What right has our Church to exist?" There is no reason for us to exist as a Church unless we win souls; unless we translate the spirit of Jesus into the life of a world which so greatly lacks and needs a spiritual emphasis. "It is too light a thing that thou shouldst be my servants and raise up the tribes of Jacob and to restore the preserved of Israel. I will also give thee for a light to the Gentiles, that thou mayest be my salvation unto the ends of the earth." Isaiah 49:6. "God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself . . . ; and hath committed unto us the word of reconciliation, Now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech . . . . by us." II Cor. 5:18, 19, 20.

We have made the Christian faith ineffective through our misconception of its essentials and purposes! My friends, the Church is not a resting place for the saints, it is the enlistment station for the bearers of the insignia of the marshalled forces of Jesus Christ in His Holy War against sin and the forces which make for the corruption of mankind.

Too many of us have looked upon Christianity as a monument of something done for us. "Christ died for us, according to the scriptures," we recite with proud gusto, and that event becomes far too often merely a monument of the act of God—wholly apart from us. There are far too many people today who regard the mission of Jesus primarily as something done for them in the dim ages of the past; a gift, the acceptance of which incurs no responsibility upon the recipient. The religion which complacently sits by and testifies that "Jesus paid it all" is too cheap a religion, and it will never save the world from sin! Nor does it bear the true picture of that dying Figure on Calvary, for it too seldom acknowledges that "all to Him I owe.' Nor does such a cheap religion bear out the promise which Jesus gave His disciples, namely, that they too would have to face their crosses—that "as the Father hath sent me, so I send you."

There seems to be an impotence in the Church of today. Has not the message of the Church become merely one of protest, lacking in positive leadership or command? May not this condition be attributed largely to the fact that too many people have seen the mission of Jesus as merely a preparation for another world? Have we not mistaken Jesus' Gospel for "Other-Worldness" when He definitely preached and died for "Better-Worldliness?" "Be ye perfect even as your Father in Heaven is perfect," was his expectation. Not one single time do we see Jesus sitting under some juniper tree whining away his time over the ills and vanity of human life, but He was forever up and about the glorious task of calling out the best in men, confident that though there be evil in the world, there is a greater overcoming. "Be of good cheer, for I have overcome the world." Jesus was not whistling in the dark when he uttered those words. The world was crushing Him physically on all sides, but he never allowed it to crush His spirit.

That being a Christian places upon the individual a responsibility has not always been kept clear. We do well to be reverent in the presence of the event of Christ's death on the Cross, but just to recite that event, and to believe that Jesus died as He did because He was the Son of God is not sufficient. Only when you so live that your life and death will become the expression of the will of God, does that event mean much to you or the world. The Cross sheds the light of the love of God upon you. If that light dies with you, Christ has died in vain so far as you are related to a world which He came to save from sin!

The day we understand the movement of Jesus in the light of our own responsibility as Christians—that day will be moving day in our lives. The day that we see the Cross of Jesus as the milepost of love, devotion, service, and sacrifice toward which we must go, if we would be Christian, that will be a victorious day for the Crucified Christ and the Risen Lord. That day our Churches will join the triumphant Church.

Likewise, have we not often confused Christianity with some form of religious activity? We have made it a system of devotional acts. Jesus continually reminded His disciples that religion is something more than saying, "Lord, Lord." He came into a world which saw God as the Giver of Laws and the Keeper of Books, but His free spirit proclaimed God to be spirit, that those who would worship and serve Him must do it in spirit and in truth.

People have a tendency toward confining this religion of devotional acts to worship. Christians should worship. Jesus' example will surely lead them toward worship. Jesus worshipped. He continually "went apart to pray," but He did something more . . . "He hurled His life after His prayer." The Lord's prayer is not only the model prayer but it portrays the model life back of sincere prayer.

We have made Christianity a system of intellectual activity. We have argued about Christ's place and nature until our religious animosities have made churchmen as callous and cold as "professional hangmen." To the ungodly, Christianity has become the institution of many divisions. When shall we be wise enough to see that the best Christian experience is not obtained nor attained in endless argument. You can't take your religion out in talk; in thought; nor in easy contemplation.

We have made Christianity a system of institutional activity. Christianity is a great success institutionally, but you can't shut up the spirit of Jesus inside the Church; it must be brought out that its rays may shine upon the hearts of men. A thousand pities that Priest and Levite on the Jericho road had not brought their religion with them out of the temple that day!

We must come to know that Christianity is a way of life to be lived. The religion of Jesus is "not a puzzle to be solved, but a program to be adopted; not a creed to be recited, but a life to be lived; not a discipline to be undergone, but a dynamic to be experienced; not a way of escape from the realities of life, but it is a provision of power for the battle of life; it is not a dull respectability to be endured, but a daring challenge to be accepted."

It is loving the Lord, our God, with mind, heart, will, and soul. It is the control and direction of life in the spirit of Jesus. It is fulfilling Jesus' plan for the world. But how untrue we have been to Him with our talents, money, and life. We have treated Him like some tramp standing at the back door of our heart, waiting for a handout. We have been feeding him with the crumbs from our lives—and you know that is the truth! Then we wonder why there has not been a substantial increase of strength in our Churches. We have not made a first place for Him in our lives and in our programs! We have not been Christian in our devotion and consecration! Is not this the time when our Churches should go humbly to the altar of the Christ, that she might be baptized of Him? When we do this we will have a powerful thing at our disposal.

Christianity is not a static, local, powerless thing. We sin when we make it so! It has sustained spiritual power and universality in its character, and it must go around the world, if we would be Christian! Will you take it? Jesus wealth is no mere subject of contemplation, it is usable wealth in the lives and conditions of men.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The following quotation from the book, "The Minister," by the late Dr. W. W. Staley, contains a pointed suggestion to the minister: "The minister should seek to interpret the present age in the light of the gospel and past civilizations. From his study, as a tower, he should get his vision of mankind and God, and then go forth to preach salvation to a sinning world. His sermon should be a message from God, supported by His word, filled by His Spirit, and delivered in the spirit of love. Lectures and tirades may have their place on the platform but they should not come from the minister's study in place of a message from God. His study is the mint for purer gold."

Leaders in economics, political propagandists, educational specialists, social and moral reformers are calling upon the ministers to champion their theories and espouse their cause. It is not a question, always, as to the merits of the cause appealing for consideration and pulpit endorsement. Every good cause cannot find its way into the pulpit. Farming is a good and worthy field of employment. It is essential to life. But the pulpit is not the place to teach farming or emphasize its relative importance. So of every other economic or industrial question.

The gospel of Jesus Christ has a message for the farmer, the miner, the politician, the teacher, the industrialist, the banker and the social reformer. But this message is not grounded in these respective fields, and it does not find its source in the theories of passing reformers. Jesus was a reformer but He did not pass in influence and power. He was nailed to the cross by the sledge hammer blows of religious and political leaders of His day. But He survived the cross and triumphed over His enemies. His doctrine of the regeneration of human life, and the peculiar theory of social and economic life which He advocated originated in His mind and heart.

Education, for example, has completely changed its emphasis and method within the last twenty years. A public school teacher cannot teach in the public schools of Virginia the methods of twenty years ago in the classroom. New methods have been introduced and the old methods have been discarded. In spite of the opinion of the advocates of the present methods of teaching and the curriculum of the schools, the young people of a generation ago managed to get an education which was effective in training the mind. The present method may be better than the old. But the gospel of Jesus is not one of the ancient systems of ethics and religion to be studied as a matter of history. It is as modern as gravitation, or seed sowing or spring time and harvest. Nothing can take its place. Jesus is a regenerating power in modern life, not a figure of ancient history. He cannot be confined to the first century any more than the sunshine of today. The Gospel He made unfolds new truths and finds fresh application to every problem of mankind.

In a complex social and economic life, the church depends upon the minister to come from his study with a clear understanding of the importance of the gospel message. The Bible does not contain all truth. But it is the principal source of the fundamental truths which deal with man's relation to God and his fellowman. No other book rests its case upon the spiritual regeneration of mankind and the spirit of love to God and one's neighbor. Every age needs this spiritual transformation and the gospel is the only power adequate to that great task. Christianity can save the world. Politicians have failed. International agreements and treaties have fallen short of their mark. The world today is thinking of war, and planning for its continuation. Jesus thought and taught in terms of love and peace, and the nations are not willing to accept His leadership or give His message a fair trial. The world cannot find peace until it finds Jesus Christ. The ministers and the church hold the peace of the world, and the salvation of the world in their hands.

ELON MARCHES ON.

Elon College has a long list of influential Alumni. The Alumni of Elon are distributed throughout different sections of the country. Beginning with the first year of its history, graduates of the college have increased in numbers until a little more than one thousand hold diplomas evidencing their graduation from Elon. One interesting thing about the Alumni of Elon College is that they seldom ever lose interest in the college. They may not do much about it, they may do little to support it, but nevertheless when you meet them they refer to the college with a certain definite pride. They love to recall the experiences of the campus and classroom.

I feel that every Alumni and former student of the college will be glad to know something of the progress that is being made. There is a limited group who have pretty complete information about what has been accomplished in recent months but it is only a limited group. A large number of the Alumni have but a limited conception of what is being accomplished. I presume that everyone has an idea of the struggles of the college in the last three years. A college in the financial condition of Elon could hardly be expected to pass through a depression such as we have had without experiencing hardships and serious handicaps. It is gratifying to us all that we have endured, that the college doors are still open and that the old institution still moves on.

On the registrar's books we learn that 461 students have matriculated at Elon College this year. This is a remarkable record from the standpoint of enrollment. For an institution to nearly double its enrollment in two years' time is unusual. Such a rapid growth is encouraging certainly but it also requires improvements and expansion that the larger group may be made comfortable and may have proper scholastic advantages. It is a pleasure to have such a fine group of students on our campus but it is also a pleasure to be able to introduce them to a really magnificent faculty. A few of the old "stand-bys" are still at their desks for help and inspiration of the students that come. This year, however, our faculty has been improved by adding an unusually large number of experts in their respective fields. It is the determination of the present administration to assemble a group of instructors on Elon College campus with training equal to the best products of our American colleges and universities. Scholastic standards at Elon College are constantly being raised. This means increased requirements on the part of the students, which, of course, is to the advantage of the individual student and to the everlasting credit of the college itself. More and more it must be true of Elon College that when a young man or young woman receives a diploma at the hands of the college the one receiving such recognition must give evidence of the best training for his particular field or profession.

We still do a little playing about Elon as well as work. We are just now completing our football season. Coach Walker assisted by Coach Fysal have given us a great football squad and a glowing record. Our team has played a hard schedule winning every game that we were expected to win and some that we were not expected to win. Thus far in the schedule only twenty-nine points have been scored on this year's squad. If we are lucky enough to win from Guilford, this will mean the North State Championship for Elon which will be the fourth consecutive decisive victory. Congratulations to the coaching staff and to the team itself. The team is composed of splendid young men and we believe they are better men because of having had the training and discipline that the game requires if it is to be successfully played.

The mid-year Alumni Meeting will be held this year February 15th at the college. The best way to see what is going on on the hill is to make a trip back to the old college. This is to urge every alumnus to mark February 15th on the calendar, set aside every other engagement, and begin now to meet with this enthusiastic group as the group shal begin to lay plans for the organization and for the college.

Commencement is the highlight in our organization. We want commencement for 1936 to surpass any previous occasion of its kind. With your presence and help this ideal can be realized. Elon Marches On!

L. E. SMITH.

NOTE—Since writing the above article, Elon has met Guilford and won a decisive victory with a score of 65 to 0.

ANOTHER YEAR GONE.

The second Sunday in November finished our year's work. We served Bethel and Mt. Zion in the N. C. and Va. Conference and Pleasant Ridge in the Western N. C. Conference.

Our work the past year was very pleasant. The people have never seemed more generous. We have never had better cooperation. All along these good people have been mindful of the needs of their pastor and his family.

They have given many things that have meant so much to us.

The second Sunday in September as we were leaving after service at Mt. Zion we discovered a number of packages in our car, consisting of good things to eat and this is not all. At the close of the year's work the second Sunday in November we were given a sixty-dollar bonus. We have served these good people fifteen years and have always found them generous.

The first Sunday in November, Bethel loaded our car with sugar, coffee, flour, canned goods and many other good things along with some money. We have served this church many years. These are mighty good people to work with.

We have served Pleasant Ridge two years, and two services a month the past year.

We are to give two services this year with an increase in salary. This church, along with the others has helped to supply the needs of its pastor. We found here a loyal cooperative people to serve.

We are indeed fortunate to have such a field to serve another year. The work in the entire field is very hopeful. May the Lord bless these good people in every way for their generosity and spirit of cooperation.

May we work together for greater things to come.

MISS HELEN H. SMITH ON FURLOUGH.

By Miss D. P. Cushing, News Editor.

American ice cream and American cooking in general can't be beat, declares Miss Helen Huntington Smith, Mt. Holyoke girl, who though born in Foochow, China, pays warm tribute to the culinary genius of her native land. (She is the missionary of our Congregational and Christian Churches of Connecticut.)

"Yes, I like Chinese food well enough to eat one meal of it a day, but I do not like Chinese breakfasts and so we have the conventional Western meal," says Miss Smith, who is just back in the United States on her first furlough under the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. "A Chinese breakfast in Foochow consists of rice in a thin gruel, salted peanuts, salted fish and often a portion of cold jelly fish.

"The Chinese never drink with their meals except wine at a feast. They drink everything hot, and the girls in our school keep thermos bottles of hot water or tea in their rooms. Indeed it is only recently that the Chinese have taken up the habit of drinking cold water. They are learning this from the West, but unfortunately they do not trouble to boil the water so that there is a great increase in typhoid. The Chinese also hate cold foods although they are beginning to like ice cream and fruit juices."

Weather? Yes, they have it in Foochow. Miss Smith explains that it is in the semi-tropics, having approximately the same longitude as Florida. Fall is beautiful and much like a New England autumn. Winter and spring are cold and damp with summers on the plain very hot. "Although the temperature does not go either excessively high or low, the dampness gets into your bones and the mugginess is very uncomfortable," Miss Smith says.

In the mountains where vacations are spent it is quite comfortable except when there are typhoons. "After one of these terrible wind and rain storms several others generally follow. The Chinese call it 'one typhoon and its nine brothers.' When there is a full moon. you can actually sit out of doors and read. Gorgeous poinsettas grow twenty feet tall on the borders of the school walk. Miss Smith found one bloom measured two feet across.

After graduation from Shanghai High School, Miss Smith came to Mt. Holyoke; class of 1925. After three years in settlement work and student volunteer work she returned to China and has been teaching English and modern European History in Wenshan Girls' School, Foochow, for five years during which she witnessed the excitement of civil war at her very door step, when the Fukien rebellion was put down by Nationalists forces.

"I wasn't born in Foochow really," Miss Smith points out. "But in Ingtai which is 50 miles away into the country and takes two days to reach. Why? Because you can only go either by rough foot trail or by water up river. The last 15 miles of this river trip consists of rapids rushing into mountain gorges." Old Foochow was a walled city, but now the walls are down and auto roads take their place. The Consul and business people live on the island across the river connected with old Foochow by a bridge.

With pictures of their favorite movie stars on their bedroom walls, Miss Smith finds the girl students at Wensham much like girls everywhere. "There is one pigtail in the school," she remarks with a smile. "One pigtail among 300 bobbed heads. Oh, yes, there are some permanents, too. But to go back to the movies that we have there," she continues in disgust. "They are terrible. Foochow moving picture houses are cheap places with an admission charge which would be about ten cents in American money. The films are old and as yet there are no talkies. They give an awful impression of America and Americans from which the people there gain their ideas."

Chinese young people are passionately fond of dramatics, says Miss Smith and this forms one of their chief amusements. Last winter the girls at Wenshan took up bicycle riding. Many of them like to dance, but of course, Miss Smith points out, in China for the most part, boys and girls do not dance together. The boys in fact do not seem to care at all for dancing. All the young people are anxious to see America.

For three months Miss Smith lived under the People's Government flag during the rebellion. Christmas Day she spent with the rest of the refugees in the mountains while the city was bombed. "We could see the bombs drop and when the planes arrived and dropped, they zoomed over our heads in what seemed an uncomfortably close manner. The new government officials knew when the bombers were coming and so had their office hours from eight to ten at night. Therefore the ones who really suffered from the bombing were innocent citizens."

"One day we were sent orders at 8:30 that we must vacate by 9:30 because of a bombing," says Miss Smith. "I was in charge of the school at that time since our Chinese Principal was away. Most of the students had gone home, but the servants were there. I felt that I could not leave and so told the Senior Consul, who happened to be the Japanese Consul. No, no bombs hit the school but they struck near enough to rattle our windows vigorously. You see we were not very far from the aviation field.

"Every day the people of the city would surge out across the bridge to the island and stay until three or four in the afternoon when they felt it safe to return. They were all so good-natured about it. They seemed to say, 'It is not your fault and it is not my fault—it is just fate.'"

Miss Smith, who is the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Edward H. Smith, still in Foochow, China, is spending part of her furlough in Boston with her sister, Mrs. Charles E. Thrasher, 26 Myrtle Street. Just now she is studying toward her Master's Degree at Union Seminary and living at 99 Claremont Street, New York City.

NOT THE ODOR OF SANCTITY.

But used, nevertheless, for holy purposes. On the corner of a vacant lot near the Rahuri, India, church, three families kept three piles of refuse. At different times in the year this was sold as fertilizer and in the interim gusts of wind whirled filth about and disseminated unpleasant odors. Rev. and Mrs. Joseph Moulton determined to do something about this if possible. They prevailed upon the families to use one big pit and then sell the refuse for the benefit of the church! "I suppose it is hard for those of you who have not been in India to realize what a victory like that is!" add the Moultons.

MY THANKSGIVING PRAYER.

To the Infinite God, who moves the sun and planets in their places and brings to us another Thanksgiving Day, I make my prayer. The day is His, the year is His, the world is His, and all the infinite space cannot contain His presence. And yet He cares for even me.

Words can never tell the gratitude of my heart, or yours, which rises up to the Father God for all His blessings. But words we must use if we are to understand or be understood. If words are all, then there is no real thanksgiving, and God cannot hear our prayer. He understands the heart—its desires, its humility, its love, its devotion.

This year I have something new for which to thank the most high God. He has really led me "through the valley of the shadow" where desire to live was no stronger than desire to go, and there was no fear. For forty days I lingered in a hospital. It was there I reclined "in green pastures" where food and friends were plentiful. It was under the guiding hand of skilled physicians, by the patient care of faithful nurses, through the kindly greeting and sincere prayers of numerous friends, and by the gracious gift of the loving Father that the cool refreshing streams of life began to flow my way again. Gradually I am coming back to life, and sometimes a flash of hope says that I shall yet stand in the holy place and declare the glory of God.

"I had rather be a door-keeper in the House of my God than to dwell in the tents of the wicked," for there I can give thanks.

My prayer of thanksgiving will have in it a sincere petition for the rich blessings of God upon the church that grants me a long vacation with pay and prayers, upon those who have ministered to my needs when I could not care for myself, upon those who have done my work when I could not labor, upon those whose good wishes, love and prayers have made earth a lovely place in which to live, and upon a host of young people and church workers whom I believe to be my friends.

Yes, my Thanksgiving Prayer may be a little long this year, but it will lack nothing of sincerity because of the length. If you read these lines, it includes you, too. And it goes to Him who said: "Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid," and to His Father and mine. Will you join me? Thanks.

HOLIDAY CONFERENCE.

The Holiday Conference of the Southeast Youth Fellowship, to be held in the First Congregational-Christian Church of Winter Park, Florida, December 27th-29th, has been planned primarily to bring together the youth and adult leaders of eight states to think upon the theme: "Christian Youth in Action in Building a New World."

Every officer of the Southeast and State Youth Fellowships is urged to attend. All other young persons who are desirous of sharing the fellowship of this conference are invited.

The conference will be helpful, informing, and inspiring. The program is being planned to include worship, work, and play that should afford every one who attends new ideas and inspiration for carrying on the work of the new year.

The host church has very cordially extended entertainment and housing accommodations to all who come. The only expense, therefore, will be transportation costs to and from Winter Park and the minimum price of the fellowship supper on Saturday.

Plan now to attend!

LEADERSHIP COACHING CONFERENCE IN FLORIDA.

The story of interdenominational cooperation in Florida is an interesting one as it has had such a gradual and natural development. It began in the friendliest sort of way when two or three of the state denominational workers thought they could do a more effective piece of work cooperatively in certain situations. Out of these first attempts grew other activities and other denominations were drawn in so that there finally developed an informal organization of the state workers who were interested in Religious Education. The third Interdenominational Leadership Coaching Conference, which is one of a few such conferences over the country, was held in Daytona Beach, October 28th-November 1st, with leadership from the National Boards of four Churches ranging from Chicago and Philadelphia to Richmond, Virginia and Nashville, Tenn. Last year we had Dr. Erwin L. Shaver, Secretary of Leadership Training of our Church. The purpose of the Conference is to develop leadership and especially to help teachers prepare course plans for teaching other groups. The courses include Bible, Missionary Education, Administration, Psychology, and Methods in the various departments of the church school, such electives as the Christian Home, Dramatics, Recreational Leadership and many others. In one of the sessions a Presbyterian U. S. A. (Northern) introduced the Presbyterian U. S. (Southern) speaker and remarked that he had often wondered about the "A" which separated the two Churches and he knew that in the past it had meant Argument and he hoped that in the future it would mean Amalgamation. The Conference closed with a communion service in the Methodist church conducted by a Congregational and Presbyterian minister when the entire group went to the altar rail to be served. Next year it is hoped that instead of one Conference there can be three in different sections of the state thereby reaching a much larger group.

Besides the Coaching Conference the state workers united this year in the promotion of Religious Education Week and were able to secure the use of practically all of the radio stations of the state during that week. Other activities during the year include a Leisure Time Conference in March, a series of cooperative Vacation Church School institutes in April, and Standard Leadership courses in several places.

SUFFOLK TRAINING SCHOOL COMMENCEMENT.

The commencement exercises on the evening of November 15th, in Suffolk Christian Church, brought to a close the Third Annual Leadership Training School of Nansemond County Congregational-Christian Churches. Although the attendance during the week had been smaller than that of previous years, the school was accorded one of the best. Quite a number of visitors had attended, twenty-nine persons were enrolled, and twenty receiver credit. Dr. W. M. Jay led the closing worship service using for his theme, "The Pure Heart and Steadfast Will."

The school gave a rising vote of thanks to Rev. Carl R. Key who did such a splendid piece of work as dean of the school.

It was voted to hold the 1936 school October 18th-24th, and Rev. Carl R. Key was reelected dean. Sincere hope was expressed by the pastors and others present that more people would avail themselves of the opportunity offered by this school and attend next year.

TYPES OF MISSIONARY WORKERS.

Christian Endeavor Topic for Dec. 8, 1935.

Scripture: Acts 8:5-8; Eph. 4:11-13.

Daily Bible Readings.

Mon.—Diverse activities. I Cor. 12:28-31.
Tues.—Timothy an evangelist. 2 Tim. 4:5.
Wed.—Teaching sound doctrine. Tit. 1:9.
Thurs.—Hardships to be endured. Acts 27:39-44.
Fri.—Helping the sick. Acts 28:8-10.
Sat.—Enlisting friends. Acts 20:36-38.

In days gone by the general impression was that a missionary must be a Christian and have only the mind to win others to Christ. Today, our modern missionaries must be Christians with the desire to win others burning on their hearts, and they must have training too along professional lines as definite as a doctor or a lawyer.

Jesus said, "I came that they may have life and have it more abundantly." The missionary enterprise is concerned with everything that is necessary to abundant life.

The purpose of our American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions is "To permeate the life of the world in all its areas with the spirit of Jesus that we may share with others what we have learned from Him about God and life and our fellowmen.

"To give effect to His spirit in the world for the redeeming of the individual life and the changing of society; to work for the 'Kingdom of God on earth.'"

Through the American Board we have some 40 American doctors, 26 American nurses and many Nationals. Part of this work is in connection with our 83 hospitals and dispensaries where 645,053 treatments were given last year.

There are many hungry people to be fed and have life made more abundant. So, through the American Board we have 1,100 lower schools, nine colleges, 30 theological and training schools with something like 90,000 students under instruction. For this the Board provides about 185 teachers from America in addition to the large number of local staff members.

The American Board provides reading rooms, libraries, printing plants, editors, and works with other denominations in cooperative publishing establishments. About nine of our missionaries are engaged at full time in this work.

The Board has four neighborhood houses and in those and other enterprises 34 social workers at full time, in addition to the fact that many of the missionaries are trained and busy in social work.

Theer are 61 of our missionaries putting all or most of their time into home economics, mothercraft, church and family welfare, or religious education in the home and family.

Our new trend in the missionary enterprise is the increasede cooperation with responsible leaders in governments. In China, for example, Geo.

EZRA'S MISSION TO JERUSALEM.

Lesson IX—December 1, 1935.

Golden Text: "The hand of God is upon all them that seek him, for good."—Ezra 8:22.

Lesson: Ezra 7:1—8:36.

A number of years had passed since the first deputation of the Jews from Babylon had returned to Jerusalem. But things had not gone so well with them. The building of the Temple had been long delayed, and after a period of strict segregation from outsiders, the bars were let down and intermarriage took place. The little colony at Jerusalem had not attracted the better class of dispersed Jews, and it had remained small and feeble. It is against this background that Ezra's life and work are to be considered.

A Ready Scribe.

As the law—and by the law we mean what is now included in the first five books of the Bible—became more important, it was inevitable that there would be those whose main business it was to interpret and to expound it. The name scribe was applied to such men, and Ezra seems to have been the first, and one of the most illustrious of the scribes, who by Jesus' time had become quite influential and who were a separate and distinct group from the priests.

Ezra was a "ready scribe"—he was undoubtedly well-versed, thoroughly familiar with the "law." Furthermore, "he had prepared his heart to seek the law of the Lord, and to do it, and to teach in Israel statutes and judgments." True knowledge of the word of God involves more than a keen mind; it demands a responsive heart and an obedient will. Men of Ezra's type, men of devout spirit, men of responsive hearts are needed today to interpret and to teach the word of God. The true teacher is also a doer of the word. One learns best as he does. Obedience is the organ of spiritual knowledge.

A Generous King.

This Ezra went up from Babylon. Moved by the spirit of patriotism and by devotion to his God he made the long, difficult and dangerous journey—it took four long months to make it—back to Jerusalem. But he was helped by the king, Artaxerxes, who not only gave him letters of authority, but also gave him gold and silver, orders for supplies from officials of the provinces through which he would pass, and granted to him authority to appoint magistrates and judges, as well as to teach the law of his God to his people. It is surprising how many there are to help in good causes when one really sets himself to some unselfish task.

A Fast.

There were no conscripts in the new venture. Only those who went of their own free will returned to Jerusalem. Ezra took pains also to see to it that the Levites went along so that they could help with the services in the Temple. About seventeen hundred and fifty gathered at the riverside, ready to make the journey. But instead of giving the command to march, Ezra declared a three-day fast. He felt that his mission was a spiritual one, and he wanted the people to be spiritually-minded as they undertook it. One must be impressed with the place which fasting had in the Bible. It had a distinctly spiritual office. In delivering the body from the dominance of the physical and the material, it gave the spirit an opportunity to assert itself. One wonders if the practice of fasting could not be adopted with good results in our modern, materialistic life. One wonders also if the church would not be more vitally alive if it gave more time to prayer and spiritual exercises, and less to methods and activities. Fasting stood for, and still stands for, something that has a distinctive value and place in the religious life.

A Venture of Faith.

Ezra was willing to put his faith to the test. He probably could have had an armed guard of soldiers and horsemen if he had so desired. But Ezra was made of sterner stuff. He had declared that "the hand of our God is upon all that seek Him, for good" and he was determined to practice what he preached. He believed that God was the help and the hope of those who put their trust in Him. He did not believe that the ultimate forces of protection were material. The nations of the world can learn a much-needed lesson from this man Ezra. To this day men and nations think that physical force, material resources are the factors of security in life. This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith. This does not mean, of course, that a man who trusts God will never fall into danger, or that he will be spared from all harm. It means that faith is mightier than force.

A Business-like Religious Transaction.

Ezra was an idealist. He had real religion. But his religion did not interfere with his common sense. There was a lot of money and valuable vessels to be taken back to Jerusalem. He therefore had the gold and silver weighed and counted, and an inventory made of the vessels. He insisted that an accounting be made at the end of the journey. There has been all too much laxity in the business of the church. The church should run its business in a business way. It should honor God in its paying as well as in its praying. Let all things be done decently and in order in the business of the church. Business in religion and religion in business is the ideal way.

A Religious Reform.

When Ezra reached Jerusalem safely he turned over to the authorities the gold and the silver he had brought with him. He then turned his attention to the moral and religious situation. He found that mixed marriafes had had a corrupting influence and he called upon the Jews who were thus married to put away their heathen wives. It seems like a hard saying, and it was, but there was a great principle involved. A man must give up that which is keeping him from being his best, which is keeping him from God, no matter how dear it is to him. Better to enter into life halt or maimed—Jesus himself said this, than to miss the way. We have taken too much of discipline out of religion. Our lax age needs the sterner demands of religion.

THE YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

Shepherd of our Shaowu mission is working in a new kind of rural evangelism where, with the cooperation of the president and governing authorities, the Christian group has been asked to take on the work of reclaiming one of the areas of communistic occupation where the people had been left in a state of devastation and desolation. This will involve agriculture, education, government, social work, recreation, family life and the building of a church which shall be a center for all life.

We have a new emphasis on rural work. From a college young men and women will be trained to go into all the areas round-about with whatever seems most needed for the village life.

"THE END OF THE TRAI'."

"Thou wilt show me the path of life."—Ps. 16:11.

"Moses—died—in the land of Moab, and —the Lord—buried him in the valley."—Deut. 34:5, 6.

We learn that during the settlements of the great Northwest, fur companies established, here and there, great trading posts, and these companies would send out their trappers to all parts of the country; trails were made in every direction, but they all ended at the post. For hundreds of miles in every direction, along rivers and streams, into canyons and mountains, across lakes and watercourses, the trails wound around and around. You could begin a hundred miles away on any one of them, and, however devious its course might be, it would end at the trading company.

The grave is the end of this world's life. Start where one will, ascend the heights to wealth, traverse the deep canyons of poverty, paddle the streams of idleness, when he gets to the end it is all the same, an open grave. It does not matter whether his pelts are many or few, his spoils great or small, they amount to nothing to him. The grave is too small to hold any of it. "We brought nothing into this world and it is certain we can take nothing out." Only those things that make spiritual riches can we take with us then. Love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, meekness, brotherly helpfulness, things that make heaven.

Prayer—Dear Lord, help us to learn what we so often forget, that we are rapidly following the trail to the grave. We do not know how near we are to the end. Whether a long ways off or just over the hill, help us to lay up for ourselves treasures in heaven, so when we pass from the flesh and the material, we may have treasures richer than gold, more precious than rubies and pearls, and be with Thee forever.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"THE POWER OF THE GRAVE."

"I will ransom them from the power of the grave."—Hosea 13:14.

When Paul cried, "O Death, where is thy sting, O Grave where is thy victory," the prophecy of our text was fulfilled.

The power of the grave lies in sin. In the bonds of sin and the clutches of the law, we are as helpless as a fly in the spider's web. But in Christ we are free from entanglements, free from sin's stains, and free from the application of the law. The grave, like the tomb of Jesus, is just a door into another world,—God's world of glories.

Prayer—Our Father, thanks be to Thee who giveth us the victory over all things through our Lord Jesus Christ.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"WHERE MOSES WAS BURIED."

"And the Lord spoke unto Moses,—saying, get thee up into this mountain—and die in the mount whither thou goest up, and be gathered unto thy people."—Deut. 32:48-50.

The grave of Moses was unmarked and unknown to any but God. But God was there, for God buried him.

We believe God is always at the grave, and the sainted soul who comes to that lonely spot finds God sufficient. Like Stephen of old, when he came to his end, things of God are revealed then such as the world knows but little about.

But the text says, "Be gathered unto thy people." He was to see no more his people whom he had left behind. He was to be buried where no one was ever to drop a tear upon his grave. How was he to be "gathered unto his people?" It is said that from this grave, Moses opened his eyes in the city celestial, "Where angels prostrate fall, Bring forth the royal diadem, And crown him Lord of all," a city filled with people from every tribe of earth ascribing to Him all honor and glory and majesty; and there, he too, joined in the everlasting song to "Crown Him Lord of all." There was no grave there. These were his people forever, and God was his God. So the solitude of death leads to the blessedness of eternal companionship.

Prayer—Our Father, as we trust Thee to supply our needs, may we trust Thee more when we reach the end of our trail, and we pray that in the loneliness of that hour we may be prepared to join the people of glory.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"CARRYING ON."

"Go ye into all the world and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost."—Matt. 28:19.

"Carrying on" is a very familiar word in military duty. It means "continue," "keep up your work," " carry out your orders."

Our text is the last instructions which Christ gave the disciples before His ascension. He had taught them patiently for three years, given them the knowledge of the Kingdom, prepared them for a life work, and endued them with power to do it. His work was completed and His resurrection was a fact to which they were then witness. Now, they were to go on a mission alone, relying upon their own ability to carry on.

They were enthusiastic and eager to apply this extraordinary power given to them by the Lord, and to spread the Gospel as he explained it should be. What they knew they lived by. What they could not do of their own strength they trusted God for. Nothing deterred them. Death had no horrors for them. Result: The Apostolic Church, The New Testament, and The Church of the Living Christ for us all.

Prayer—Our Father, we confess that we have come short our mission to spread the Gospel. Forgive us, dear Lord, we pray, and endow us afresh to be true to our calling and loyal to every truth. —Amen.

FRIDAY.

"ANGELS ON THE WAY."

"Behold I send an angel before Thee to keep Thee in the way."—Ex. 23:20.

Throughout the ages angels have appeared before children of God in their dark hours and led them in the right way; yea, the same angel has been present with you and me in our dangers and protected us from harm. We would take it that in olden days these angels were visible beings. In our day such angels are invisible. The most of us can mention experiences of great danger from which we emerged unharmed, and there is no explanation for it save in the ministry of the guardian angel.

There is a great danger, however, today of losing our consciousness of that angel. The materialistic temper of the times leaves no room for angels. We have relegated them to much the same category as the ghost, and we are impoverishing ourselves and our universe and emptying it of its higher glory and romance. If we could only see beyond the material, we would see like Elisha's servants saw, that the mountains about us are full of friends, and we would realize that man does not go forth into life's fierce battle unguarded and unfriended, but are compassed about by gleaming ranks of angels charged of God to keep us in all our ways.

Prayer—Our dear heavenly Father, forbid that the material, the tempests and the glamor of life shall take away our vision and dull our consciousness of divine life about us. We surround ourselves to Thee for this day. We will live for Thee. Deepen our consciousness of Thee in all our doing. This we ask for Jesus' saks.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"PLENTEOUS INDUSTRY."

"Jehovah thy God will make thee plenteous in all the work of thy hand."—Deut. 30:1-10.

In his farewell address Moses assured his people that if they would obey God in the new land which they were about to enter, Jehovah would make them abundantly prosperous. "Plenteous" is one of the favorite words of our language. Who does not wish for plenty—plenty of money, of health, of friends, of ease, of fame, of happiness?

One of the characteristics of our religion is that it is a promise of plenty. But it is well for us to fix our thought of plenty parallel to God's thought of it. He bids us to set our affections on the things that are above, not on earthly things. His people are plenteous, on the whole, in worldly affairs, but not always. They are always plenteous in eternal affairs.

Prayer—May we live, O God, for the everlasting abundance, finding in it our supreme delight. —Amen. —AMOS R. WELLS.

SUNDAY.

"GOD'S BLESSED OUTSIDE."

"Come in, thou blessed of Jehovah; wherefore standest thou without?"—Gen. 24:28-33.

When Abraham sent his godly servant to Mesopotamia to win a wife for Isaac, Laban, Rebekah's brother, hailed him with these words. They may well stand for us as representing all the blessings of the Lord that wait outside our doors, ready and eager to come in.

They take many forms, these blessings. Sometimes they can seem to us to be the very reverse of blessings. But they are from the Lord, and so they are good things, the very best of good things for us.

The outside of our lives is God. He has surrounded us with joys innumerable, with abundant strength, with the most splendid of possibilities. We have only to open our doors and let them come in. How inexpressibly strange that so many of us keep our doors locked against them!

Prayer—Dear Lord, we rejoice in Thy blessed outside. We would bring it inside, and as soon as may be. Grant us the grace to do so.—Amen. —AMOS R. WELLS.

A CHRISTIAN THANKSGIVING.

By John G. Truitt.

"Praise the Lord; for He is good."—Jas. 35:3.

A Christian Thanksgiving is one that emanates from a clean heart. A heart full of sin will not properly appreciate God. It cannot be really thankful, in the sense in which the psalmist is speaking, nor in any lasting sense. It is the pure in heart that see God. Therefore, it is as impossible to give God the praise and thanks due him with sinful hearts as it is to be well dressed by putting on lovely garments over uncleaned bodies and soiled clothes. "Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord? Or who shall stand in His holy place? He that hath clean hands and a pure heart; who hath not lifted up his soul unto vanity nor sworn deceitfully. He shall receive the blessing from the Lord, and righteousness from the God of His salvation." Psalm 24:3-5.

Men cannot praise the Lord for His goodness, and for His wonderful works to the children of men as long as they are running from Him within on account of the sin which their hearts harbor. It simply is not done like that. Therefore in our Thanksgiving service today, let us not so much boast of the bigness of our country, nor the bounty of our prosperity; but rather, let us humble ourselves in the sight of the Lord, that He may life us up (Jas. 4:10.) And rather let us bear it in mind that God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace to the humble. (Jas. 4:6.)

"From that time Jesus began to preach, and to say, 'Repent, for the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand.'" One will not repent unless one humbles oneself. The humble will see his own sins and be sorry for them. If Jesus were to come among us today what would be the great burden of His message to us. I think it would be "Repent." It was his message of old. The first message he preached, and the implication is that it was his general theme. That do we need as individuals more today to bring to our hearts peace, and to our churches power quite so much as real repentance from our sins. Who of us will rise up and say, "I need no repentance?" Who of us will face our lives just as they are and claim that we do not leave God out all too often, or that we take advantage of every opportunity to serve Him, and advance the cause for which His Son Jesus died? Who of us will overlook many sins of commission as well as omission, and fail to cry out, "O Lord, be merciful to me a sinner?"

God can do more with a "broken and contrite heart" than one that is self-satisfied in its own filthy righteousness. One of the prime purposes of the coming of Jesus was to give repentance to the people: "Him hath God highly exalted with His right hand to be a Prince and a Saviour, for to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins." Forgiveness follows repentance as daylight follows darkness. And death follows sin unrepented of as darkness follows the setting of the sun.

How shall we excuse ourselves, with the kind of Gospel which is ours, for desecration of the Sabbath Day? How shall we excuse ourselves, with the knowledge of Jesus which has been given us, for the wilful neglect of prayer and praise and worship? How shall we excuse ourselves for the poor examples we are to the un-Christian world about us; for do they not see our inattentiveness, our readiness to follow the world which is at enmity with God, and our willingness to have the praise of men rather than the praise of God?

But will you say, Pastor, you art preaching to the church, and to the church members; you art not preaching to the world; why do you preach as though we were sinners? Is there anything the church of God needs more than to humble itself and repent in sackcloth and ashes? Is there anything better known to the world about us than that church members take the name of God in vain? That church members take unchristian advantages of their neighbors? That church members set bad examples in the satisfying of their appetites, and in the fulfilling of their own selfish desires? If you walk out of here today and see men crowding the doors of our drugstores, and loafing on our street corners in absolute neglect of the church, who will they be but church members? If you should go on our golf links at the hour of worship of our God and the study of His Word and find men playing, who would they be but church members? If you should ride our highways this afternoon in speed and gaiety, and stop by our filling stations and find men and women buying and burning gas, and all too often buying and drinking alcoholic drinks, who would you find but your fellow church members? If you went into the back doors of offices which are presumably closed on Sunday and found big business men, and little business men, transacting their business,—planning the buying of homes and selling of goods, and plotting tomorrow's political ,transactions who would they be but church members? And all too often, shame on us, you would find ministers forgetting their sacred calling, forgetting their obligation to study, forgetting their obligation to keep holy the Sabbath Day, and forgetting the spiritual nurture of their very own souls in daily devotion and submission to God's holy will.

I am not calling you to a task which I do not wish to take up myself. Who needs to humble himself more than God's ministering servants? Who need to keep a watch more vigilant over his own spiritual piety than the preacher of God's words from the sacred desk? There are many ways of celebrating Thanksgiving, but one of the best ways is that of coming to God in true humility and repentance, and asking Him to make one ashamed to sin against him, ashamed to sin against his neighbor, above ugliness of conduct, unkindness of thought, and cruelty of action. O, church of the Living God, how Jesus loves you! How it must break His heart to see its members violate his eternal laws of righteousness, and trail His name in the dust! Is He not praying the same Calvary cry: "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do" in an enlightened day such as ours?

At any rate he is still calling us to repentance. And may we not repent in such a way today, as that we shall not be guilty of doing again tomorrow that of which we repented today! "Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call upon him while he is near: Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the Lord, and He will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for He will abundantly pardon." Return unto the Lord. That is speaking to the one who has known God and forgotten; to the one who has loved God, and lost his first love; to the one who has started, and for a while run well, and then lost his way. How sweet the words,—"and He will have mercy upon him, and to our God, for He will abundantly pardon!" It was the apostle Peter preaching under pentecostal power who said: "Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out."

It was a very great day of Thanksgiving when Solomon dedicated the temple. At that time:

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

Our Thanksgiving Offering is starting off nicely this week. We have written a number of personal requests for individual donations and every one we have heard from has responded in a generous way except one.

The churches we have heard from have sent in larger offerings than last year. If we reach our eighteen thousand dollars we must put a lot of "pep" in our offerings and get every individual to give something to help swell it to a nice sum. Let us do our best this year. The best way I have ever worked an offering yet, is the every member canvass and visit each member of the church. They will enjoy your visit. You will enjoy going to see them. Two go together and you will find the work pleasant.

If every church would try this plan we would raise ten thousand dollars for our Thanksgiving Offering. If, when the offering is taken in, your church and you cannot be present to put in your offering, don't forget you can send it by mail and it can be added to your church offering when it comes in to this office if you request it.

Every church will be a "Banner" Church that raises as much as $50.00. How many "Banner" Churches will you have in your conference?

Any church has a real joy in being a "Banner" church.

We are going to make three classes of "Banner" churches. All that give from $500 to $1,000 will be in Class I. All that give $100 or more will be in Class II. All that reach $50.00 or more will be in Class III. This gives nearly every church a chance to be a "Banner" church. Get busy and come up a "Banner" church.

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

"The Lord appeared to Solomon by night, and said unto him, I have heard thy prayer, and have chosen this place to myself for an house of sacrifice . . . If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; they will hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and heal their land." There is my thanksgiving message from the very words of God: God's people, called by the name 'Christian,' humble themselves, pray, and repent, then will God hear from heaven, forgive their sins, and heal their land!

Then and not till then, can we rightly praise the Lord. Then and not till then will we begin to really realize how good God is. Then and not till then, will we be able to carry out our text: "Praise the Lord; for He is good." For then we shall be able to sing with the poet:

"I know there are no errors
In the great eternal plan;
And that all things work together
For the final good of man."

CHRISTIAN ESSENTIALS AND PURPOSES.

He stands before the desert places of human life; before mere cinder heaps, before men and women with burnt out enthusiasms, before churches with lifeless programs and passions, proclaiming possible enrichment of life. He stands before all the perverted relationships of life—broken homes, broken economic relationships, broken international goodwill— boldly proclaiming that these may all be rectified. He stands before sins, before all the vilest sins of man, proclaiming with a certainty which the passing 2,000 years verify, that these sins may be blotted out.

It must have been with a sort of triumph and optimism within Jesus that caused Him in the closing days of his ministry, as He saw the possibilities stored up in such people as Peter, James and John, Mary and Martha, Zaccheus, and the rest, to say: "Greater works than these shall ye do!" They must have come as a sort of triumphant shout, for I don't believe those words are to be properly regarded as comfort—they are challenging, prophecy and Command for us.

Most of us here today need the mind and the will to do his will. Perhaps we need a baptism of His spirit. Maybe John the Baptist speaks our own need when, faced by the approaching Christ, he says, "I have need to be baptized of thee." Perhaps, like Isaiah, we need a new experience of God's person, purpose, and power burned into our lives and hearts. We can have these if we will open our eyes, ears, hearts, and hands!

"Rise up, O men of God!
Have done with lesser things;
Give heart and soul and mind and strength
To serve the King of kings.

"Rise up, O men of God!
The Church for you doth wait,
Her strength unequal to her task;
Rise up, and make her great.

"Rise up, O men of God!
His Kingdom tarries long;
Bring in the day of brotherhood
And end the night of wrong.

"Lift high the cross of Christ!
Tread where His feet have trod:
As brothers of the Son of Man
Rise up, O men of God!"

THANKSGIVING CHEER.

Children never tired or weary,
Up so early, feeling perky,
Looking for that big fat turkey.

OBITUARIES

CUTCHIN.

Rev. Jeremiah Nathaniel Cutchiu, was born February 13, 1870, and died at his home iu South Norfolk, Va., on November 14, 1935, after an illness of about three months. Brother Cutchin professed faith in Christ early in youth, and remained one of our Lord's sincere followers all his life. He was ordained a minister of the gospel in the Christian Church at the Christian Temple on October 29, 1934, by Drs. W. D. Harward, W. W. Staley, and L. E. Smith, ordaining presbytery. He served as pastor of Union Church (Southampton) for some time and as supply pastor of Rosemont for several months in 1925, and did fine work supplying pulpits for a number of ministers. He did great work in the Rosemont Church in many capacities but he will be especially remembered as the teacher of the Men's Bible Class. Rosemont is grateful for the good work of Brother Cutchin and thanks God for the blessing and inspiration he was in her midst.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Capitola B. Lattimer Cutchin; one daughter, Mrs. Robert B. Rowland, and one son, Elton Cutchin, both of South Norfolk. Also two sisters, Mrs. Ella Miller of Portsmouth and Mrs. Carrie Johnson of Norfolk, and one brother, J. M. Cutchin of Carrolton, Va., and two grandchildren.

The funeral services were conducted in the Rosemont Christian Church, in the presence of a large gathering of friends, Saturday afternoon, November 16, 1935, by his pastor, this writer, and the Rev. L. R. Black, Pastor Chesapeake Ave. M. E. Church, South Norfolk, Rev. O. D. Poythress, Pastor South Norfolk Christian Church, and the Rev. L. B. Stables, Pastor Smithfield M. E. Church, an intimate friend of the deceased.

The Lord bless and comfort the bereaved ones.

J. F. MORGAN.

I exhort you in the Lord to go on in your journey to heaven; and to be content with such fare by the way as Christ and his followers have had before you; for they had always the wind in their faces; and our Lord hath not changed the way to be for our ease, but will have us following our sweet guide.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

Liquor Advertising Under Fire.—

While out of 800 daily newspapers queried as to the use of liquor advertisements, less than 47 per cent said they accepted such advertising, a survey on liquor advertising during the first year of repeal estimated that $10,000,000 in revenue poured into the treasuries of the newspapers for the advertising of liquors.—Christian Advocate.

The Diesel Engine in a New Field.—

The new German Zeppelin LZ-129 is to be powered by four 1,100-horse-power Diesel engines, which will drive this 813-foot lighter-than-air craft on her maiden trip between Germany and South America. The Diesel engine has a relatively high weight per horsepower compared with the gasoline engine. This is more than offset, it is claimed, by many other advantages which it has. These are the reductions of fire hazard, lower fuel cost, lower fuel consumption and thus greater pay-load capacity. If these engines live up to the claims made for them, two sister ships to the LZ-129, soon to be built, will also be similarly equipped.

Railroad Rails on Rubber.—

It sounds rather revolutionary, but it may happen. When the building of railroads was first started, the rails were laid on solid blocks of stone. It was not long, however, before the wooden tie was introduced, and since about 1830, the wooden railroad tie ballasted with crushed stone has been accepted as the only proper method of underlaying the steel rails upon which the train rides. Certainly at that early date no one dreamed that trains might sometime ride on rubber, but that is what they may do in the near future. A contemporary business magazine says: "At present, rails rest on metal tie plates, the life of a tie is shortened by the impact of metal against wood. But one of the rubber companies has just come forward with a tie plate whose center is a slab of rubber to cradle the rail. Not only may tie life be lengthened by its use, but also, it is claimed, the life of bridges and trestles, because they will be subject to less vibration."

Dry Majorities in Local Option Contests.—

The American Issue thinks that "the march back to prohibition has begun." It says that two years' experience with an unrestrained liquor traffic has "demonstrated the utter futility of attempting to promote sobriety by licensing the manufacture and sale of beverage alcohol." As evidence that there is a rising tide of resentment against so-called "liquor control," it points to the local option elections that have taken place in the various states during recent months. In Ohio, with possibly one hundred and fifty contests, at latest reports there had been ninety-eight dry victories and twenty-three for the wets. Fifty-six of these units voted out beer as well as hard liquor. Eight counties in West Virginia out of eight elections voted dry. Twelve other countries will vote on the question this month. In Arkansas the drys have won fourteen out of seventeen contests. It concludes with the statement that the "wets are growing panicky. National Prohibition is inevitable." There is certainly one argument that the wets cannot use again: they can no longer claim that the legalization of liquor can bring back temporal prosperity, it has been adequately proven different.

To Prevent Fire.—

The following rule is given by a writer in an insurance trade magazine: "Here," it says, "is an infallible rule for the prevention of the burning of any property. Place it in a hollow steel ball; create a vacuum around it; allow the whole to sink in the Atlantic, or, if closer, the Pacific. You may then go away with a fair degree of assurance that the property will not be harmed by fire." This procedure, however, would be most impracticable. We do make special rules for preventing fires in industrial and other plants, we protect explosive materials from sparks or spontaneous combustion, we install sprinkler systems and what not. Yet we still have fires—and they cause enormous damage. "Good fire prevention," says this writer, "is not simply a set of rules; it is a state of mind." There are other fires than those caused by the uniting of oxygen with so-called combustible materials. They are the fires that burn human souls. One would hardly suggest, even if it were possible, the isolation of human beings that they might not come in contact with the world. We can pass laws against this and that and the other wrong. It is our duty to do this, and, as well, to see that such laws are enforced. But in the final analysis, the only thing that will prevent the fires of sin from utterly consuming the world, is to build up a "state of mind" that will combat these things that are degrading and demoralizing. There is a serious task awaiting the home, the Church, and the Christian educational institution. Will they rise to the challenge that is facing them?

To Succeed: Don't Grow Up.—

The above is the caption of an editorial in a recent issue of Forbes. The editorial opens thus: "Jesus said, 'Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me; for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven.'" The writer who uses this quotation says that many of the most successful business men he has known have never grown up, but have retained their "bubbling-over boyishness." He calls to mind such men as Henry Ford, who even today is said to enjoy playing with mechanical toys, and who is never happier than when romping with his grandchildren. Chas. M. Schwab is another outstanding business man who has all through life "maintained the sparkle of a radiant school boy." Alfred P. Sloan, while not teperamentally of the "boyish breed," has in later years "striven heroically to mix recreation with business slavery. Others mentioned are Walter C. Teagle, of Standard Oil the late President Calvin Coolidge, Harvey S. Firestone and Will Hayes. The list is too long to quote in full, but he concludes: "Youthfulness of spirit not only makes for happiness, but for longevity. Its possessors radiate friendliness, warmth, charm. They brighten their own lives and brighten the world. More: Youthfulness of spirit is twin brother of optimism, and optimism is the stuff of which American business success is fashioned. Resist growing up!" Another thing, the trustfulness and faith of the little child is needed in the business world of today more than ever before. When the Kingdom of Heaven comes upon earth, His little children will have come unto Him.

The Cost of a Job.—

According to William J. Cameron, radio spokesman for the Ford Motor Company, "the cost of setting up an average job where a man can work is $9,007.37." He gives the following details: "the Ford Motor Company finds that for each employee at work, $2,008.55 is needed for real estate and buildings. The average cost of equipping a job with the necessary machinery is $2,670.59. Merchandise and supplies, the material on which the man and machine work, must be kept at a constant average value of $664.78 for each job." This gives the amount, $5,344. To this must be added taxes, stock upkeep, money on hand to pay wages promptly, electrical power, and the money to operate with between the time the goods are produced and the time money for them begins to come in. Then there are machinery repairs and tools to be replaced, etc. "Altogether, these costs run into another $3,663." Thus it takes the total given above to set up a job in the Ford plant, and one is reminded that "this is a remarkably low figure, because of the number of jobs involved." The Ford Motor Company, last year, took in $6,979.49 for each worker employed, and if income were all profit, $6,000 and a $9,000 investment would be an enormous yield. But it was shown that 94 cents out of every dollar received went for wages and material; and after taxes and depreciation were paid, only about one and one-half per cent of the income remained for the company. "One whole year's operation of the average job paid $1,468.85 to the employee who operated it, and paid $111 to the company that invested $9,000 to establish and maintain it."

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Rev. W. E. Wisseman, pastor, First Church, Greensboro, the past week gave four chapel talks to Elon College faculty and students which were quite appropriate and helpful to all who heard him. Brother Wisseman will be a welcome visitor to audiences at Elon henceforth.

Professor Granville T. Pryor, head of the History Department, has been requested to read a paper before the Trinity College Historical Society, composed of the graduate students and faculty members of Duke University, at its January meeting. This is a distinct honor to Professor Prior and to Elon College.

Many churches this year are celebrating the 400th anniversary of the first printing of our Holy Bible in English. In connection with this, even United States Senator, Arthur Capper, of Kansas gives through the press, his estimate of the Book, and SUN readers will find in another column what Senator Capper thinks of this Book of Books. His comment is worth reading.

Doctor Merton B. French, Assistant Professor of Bible at Elon College, has been requested to read a paper at the annual meeting of the Society of Biblical Literature and Exegists to be held in New York City December 26th-29th. This is the type of recognition that reflects honor upon Elon College. We appreciate this recognition for our college but more still we are glad that there is the type of mind and instructor on its faculty to merit such recognition.

A very welcome visitor to THE SUN office recently was Rev. F. C. Lester, beloved pastor of First Church, Norfolk, now recuperating from a recent operation. Pastor Lester is much improved and feels that his physicians are right in saying that he will be able to take up his work again by the first of the coming year. He plans to attend the Youth Fellowship Conference at Winter Park, Fla., the last of December, and then return to his pastorate. Joy and good health to him.

Two visitors to Elon College the coming week will be heard with great pleasure and profit. On Friday morning at the chapel service Dr. Ernest M. Halliday, secretary of Church Extension Boards of New York, will be the speaker, and at the eleven o'clock service, Sunday, the 8th, Dr. Edwin C. Gillette, Jacksonville, Fla., state superintendent of Church Extension work in Florida and the Southeast, will be the speaker. These are not strangers to Elon audiences, and they will receive a cordial welcome.

The forthcoming Student Volunteer Convention in Indianapolis, last of December, this being the 12th quadrennial Convention, promises to be one of the most potential and powerful of any Convention of students yet held in the United States and Canada. Five hundred colleges in the United States and Canada and from a dozen foreign countries are to be represented. It is because of the genuine interest in the world mission of Jesus Christ that these young people are together for five days the last of December for study, fellowship and prayer. More than forty leading men and women of the religious world from the United States, Canada, Great Britain, Japan, Korea, China, Mexico and other countries will speak from the platform or lead seminars.

CONGREGATIONAL AND CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

By HERBERT D. RUGG.

"PROMPT, HUMAN AND CHRISTIAN."

The needs which the Board of Ministerial Relief endeavors to meet have not as yet been lessened by governmental agencies. In its current printed appeal the Board states:

"Government aid cannot be relied upon to take the place of the Christmas Fund for our ministers and ministers' widows.

"Whatever relief may be given in the future by public agencies, the present need for help is imperative.

"Even where states have undertaken age relief, no provision is made for illness, ministerial unemployment, or for those who have not been a specified number of years in the state. In one state where the Board of Relief has thirty-six pensioners, only six were found to be eligible for aid under the present state law.

"Government relief, even when granted is tardy, incomplete, inadequate and subject to vexatious delays. The Christmas Fund is prompt, human and Christian.

"The aged, the sick, the unemployed—our brethren and sisters in Christ—ask your remembrance as in years past."

AN INDIAN LEADS.

Furniture and a water supply for the parsonages is still an un-met basic need among the Sioux Congregational churches of South Dakota. With a maximum ministerial salary of $40.00 a month, the pastors are unable to buy furniture or hire wells bored. The superintendent of the churches, the Rev. Wrancis Philip Frazier, has interested the white churches of the South Dakota Conference in the Indian parsonage homes. Tables, stoves, beds, kitchen cabinets and other necessary articles for housekeeping are being donated. The Sioux have nineteen parsonages,—one has four rooms, four have three rooms, eleven have two rooms, three have one room and one with two rooms is being built. Six organized churches have no parsonages.

The first Sioux to become an ordained Christian minister was the grandfather of Mr. Frazier. In 1932 the superintendency of the churches was transferred from a white missionary to him. He is a graduate of Oberlin College, Oberlin, O., and of Chicago Theological Seminary. His wife, Susie Meek Frazier, a Kickapoo and a Quaker, was formerly a secretary of the National Board of the Y. W. C. A.'s for Indian schools.

In 1834 the first missionaries began work among the Sioux. With the coming of the white settlers, the Indians' former manner of life as plainsmen and Buffalo hunters became impossible. Changes forced upon them brought indescribable hardships. In the readjustments necessary the missionaries have been a continuous help. Mr. Frazier himself is an example of the fruitage of the missionary policy of seeking to train Indians to become leaders among their own people in the new order of affairs.

A WORK OF GOOD CHEER.

Christmas checks supplementing the regular pension grants will be mailed this month to the more than seven hundred aged ministers or widows on the rolls of the Board of Ministerial Relief of the Congregational and Christian churches.

The thirty-third annual solicitation for the Christmas Fund was begun in November. Sixty thousand appeals were mailed to churches and individuals. Last year $64,629 was contributed by 6,437 donors.

Part of the fund is reserved to meet emergency needs during the year. A thousand families will be helped by the Fund during the twelve months.

The year when the fund was inaugurated, it provided ten Christmas checks. It reached its largest amount in 1930 when $82,470 was raised. Two successive decreases brought it down to $61,031 in 1932.

With the conscience of the country awakened by the Social Security Act to the economic needs of the aged, the Board of Ministerial Relief is heartened to hope that the response to its appeal for the Christmas Fund will be made this year with enlarged generosity. The Fund is, as Dr. Lewis T. Reed, general secretary of the Board, has written, "the tribute of Christian people to the ministers of Christ who have kept the faith which is essential to justice and fruitfulness in every age."

A NEW PHASE OF AN OLD PROBLEM.

Historically the Congregational and Christian churches had a leading part in the temperance movement which led the new discarded eighteenth amendment. As a result of continued agitation at the state gatherings of the Massachusetts church bodies the Massachusetts Temperance Society, the first strong temperance society in this country, was formed in 1813. The new phase created by the auto in the problem of the use of alcoholic liquor is noted in Dr. Weston's book by the question: "Which is the greater highway menace, a drunken man in his buggy or an intoxicated youth in an auto?"

VALUE OF BIBLE TO NATION.

By ARTHUR CAPPER.
U. S. Senator from Kansas.

The foundation of our government rests no less firmly on the American constitution than it does on the Bible. It was because of their appreciation of the truths of this book that our forefathers abandoned their native land and with its guidance, set up a new government in the new land of America, based on the rights of man. It was a sublime conception in keeping with the sublimity of the book.

Speaking of the Bible, Daniel Webster warned us in his day that "If we abide by the principles taught in the Bible, our country will go on prospering, but if we and our posterity neglect its instructions and authority, no man can tell how suddenly a catastrophe may overwhelm us."

No very deep analysis should be required to convince us that our present troubles are due in every instance to our departure from these principles.

Our highest quality of citizenship is developed by and through religious training. It is this kind of citizenship today that is our strongest influence for good government in this country. We invariably find the churches and their members on the side of law and order and strongly interested in cleaner, more efficient government. In my opinion a community or state, with a large church vote, may consider itself fortunate.

The foundation of the state begins with the individual. A democracy cannot rise much above what he is, or what he becomes. Religious training steadies and gives character to the life of the people and nation, just as they do to the life and character of the individual himself. Such a nation and such a people, will face crises or emergencies, with a stronger, steadier will to overcome them by calm, reasonable, collective action, than will a people not similarly nurtured.

So I say that in America today and in this time of crisis we need the Bible and its influence. We need an awakening of the spiritual sense and a strengthening of the moral fiber of our citizens. The nation has need of more Christian men and women who will not be content merely with the acceptance of the privilege of citizenship, but will give their active support to meeting the responsibilities and duties of citizenship.

I believe in the Bible, as Lincoln believed in it. It is the greatest book the world ever produced or ever will produce. There is never a day we cannot read it without profit. We Americans will do well not to forget that in every crisis in our history, it has been necessary for the people to discover the value of prayer. Prayer and the daily reading of the Bible in every home in the land would mean a revived and strengthened America fit to take her true place of service in the world.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE PERSONALITY OF GOD.

In order to escape the pitfalls and crudeness of "anthropomorphism" many scientists, particularly in the field of theology, go to a still more dangerous extreme and eliminate entirely the personality of Deity. Take this as a fair sample, not exagerated, by the learned Dr. Wieman:

"Religion is reacting to an object, personal or impersonal, one or many, existent or ideal, as though it were the object to which all human life should be devoted. It may be that the word God has become more of a liability than an asset for all mankind, and therefore everybody ought to discard it from all religious usage. . . . God is that order of existence and possibility by virtue of which the greatest possible good is truly a possibility and can be achieved by human effort."

Even with this definition of religion and God, Dr. Wieman declares that he does not in his thinking eliminate God from the picture, saying: "Hence God is the proper object of supreme devotion for all human living when living is intelligent. So we conclude that if God constitutes the greatest value he cannot be a personality."

Such scholars do not carry us far in the direction of personal satisfaction and tranquillity. Unless we can think of God as a Person to whom we may carry our burdens and afflictions, also our praise and gratitude, we are left hopeless and helpless. Thinking of trying to pray to "O, Thou Blessed Order of Existence"; or "O, Thou Greatest Happiness to the Greatest Number"; or "O, Thou Great Cosmic Organism" or "Blessed Principle and Process of Integration"; or "O, Thou Greatest Power to the Nth Degree." The conception by the average man, or his mental picture of God, may seem to the distinguished (?) scientist a very crude sort of thing, but that conception, duly appropriated and fixed in the heart, has carried mankind a long, long way. They are telling us now that the idea and conception of God held by and expressed in the writings of the Psalms is lacking in tenderness and reeks with cruelty. But who of these writers has given to the world such a conception of God as we have, say, in the 103rd Psalm: "Bless the Lord, O my soul; and all that is within me, bless his name. Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits; Who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases; who redeemeth thy life from destruction; who crowneth thee with lovingkindness and tender mercies."

The very glory and high consolation of the Psalms, with all their so-called crudeness and crass conception of Deity (in the light of modern philosophy), consist in their picturing to the mind of the reader Jehovah God, who could hear and help and save. And this is certainly far more than can be said of those who are trying, with all their fine-spun philosophy to depersonalize Deity.

God is a person. As such, He is the Creator and the Ruler of the universe. He is more than that, He is love and, out of infinite love, stretches forth His strong arm to reach down and lift up those who are faint and fallen; those who, out of distress and need, cry unto Him, and whose glory is made manifest by those who praise and magnify His Name and give to Him the gratitude of their hearts.

The Christian world today, as authentic reports show from all lands where Christianity is known, has its greatest battle to fight against all forms of this so-called religion that depersonalizes God, whether it be humanism, communism, or stark atheism. It is not the worship of idols that constitutes the greatest threat to religion today, but it is the inclination and the determination on the part of many not to worship at all—certainly not to worship Jehovah God.

CONCENTRATE ON PARADISE

"If we could get their ear at Congress on radio legislation, I would say: 'Concentrate not on London, nor on Mars, but on Paradise. Open an upper air line of the divine kingdom.'" This is E. W. Curtis of Des Moines, Iowa, wishing to get the ear of Congress, and direct their attention to barring many lines of advertising and propaganda now going out over the radio and substitute something essential. Curtis thinks that we need to talk and to hear others talk a little now and then, at least, about heaven and the heavenly things. We used to hear conversation of that type not only in the home but in various groups. The Apostle Paul, from his writings, seemed to be in harmony with this man Curtis. Paul was writing a letter to the Philippians and reminded them: "For our conversation (American revision —citizenship) is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ." Paul thought it was worthwhile to concentrate the mind and the conversation on heavenly things and on heaven itself, sometimes at least.

"Mother was a Christian. She was converted at the age of thirteen. That was her testimony. We all believed she was a Christian. When she died and we returned home from the funeral, we all knelt around the old family altar and thanked God that mother had been a Christian. But the picture I have in mind is mother running the spinning wheel and singing 'Happy Day.' I can see her now. How beautiful she was! She sang with a good soul in it, and was happy. When she sang 'He taught me how to watch and pray, and live rejoicing every day,' we knew she sang her own experience.

"At her funeral her friends sang her favorite hymn, 'Oh, Happy Day that Fixed My Choice.' I would like to go back to the old home and sit down on the little box among the cobs and ears of corn, and shell corn, and see the balls of yarn, and mother's bright face, and hear her sweet voice as the spinning wheel hummed. It would be heaven. The thought makes me happy. If I could get their ear at Congress on radio legislation, I would say: 'Concentrate not on London, nor on Mars, but on Paradise. Open an upper air line of the divine kingdom.' Jesus is the way. By faith and hope we can almost catch the notes, 'He taught me how to watch and pray and live rejoicing every day."

No, it does not take anything from our gladness or our joy to divert and direct our minds and conversation now and then, at least, to heavenly pictures and scenes, thoughts and themes. Let's try it in our daily conversation and see if it doesn't bring joy and real happiness.

TRUTH CARRIES ITS OWN ARGUMENT.

How genuine and direct are the recorded facts on the pages of Holy Writ! "In the beginning, God created." There isn't any argument there. None is needed. The story of creation is told with such simplicity and guilelessness that it needs no argument. It just stands there. If one can't accept the simple statement, then there is nothing else to be said or done about it.

Or take the opening sentence of the New Testament: "The Book of the generation of Jesus Christ, the Son of David, the son of Abraham." There you are. There it stands. Accept it or reject it. That is the reader's privilege. There isn't any argument or attempt to beguile or bewitch. The plain fact is stated. The story is put there for one's reading.

And what a relief! How refreshing and delightful to turn from doubtful disputations, half truths or no truths, harrowing stories of events related for effect, to the thrilling events of the good Book. How different from the writings and printed pages which load our tables and fill our libraries of those who, from lack of knowledge, try to convince one of knowledge, and of those who wilfully or unwittingly befuddle and confuse rather than clarify and enlighten.

This is why the Bible endures and makes such delightful and restful reading, both in the early morning hour, when the mind is fresh and desires refreshing from delightful excursion, or in the late evening, when the hurry and worry of the day are done and mind and body are weary and worn with the things that disturb and distract.

"In the beginning, God created." "The book of the generation of Jesus Christ, the Son of David." Beacon lights that drive the darkness away and illumine the soul with golden beams of pure warmth and light. J. O. A.

THE PATIENCE OF GOD.

Rev. W. E. Wisseman, pastor of First Congregational-Christian Church, Greensboro, gave a very timely sermon to his congregation on Sunday, the 10th, his subject being, "The Patience of God." He said in part: "God's patience is incomprehensible. He let His rain fall upon just and unjust alike. He is patient when men refuse to lay hold of their responsibilities in the kingdom, or when they bungle the work given to them. He is patient when men waste His time, His strength, His gifts of body and personality. For all this His mercy is not shortened. The patience of God suffers with us and redeems us. Deep under the sin and suffering of this world are God's everlasting arms. God is real in the world and carries the sins and pains of a travailing world.

"The patience of God is exemplified in the 'Parable of the Lost Sheep,' in Hunt's picture, 'The Light of the World,' and in Thompson's poem, "The Hound of Heaven.' The patience of God will never give up. He keeps on seeking, knocking, chasing as long as there is life. As long as there is one chord of the human harp left, God plays upon it. God is at work in the world. He has been working since the beginning of time. Man so often destroys his work but God begins all over again. His prophets, his messengers are stoned and crucified, but God tries again. His patience never fails." J. O. A.

ILLOGICAL.

There are some things in this life that simply will not fit. They are disjointed when brought together. They are just incongruous. A preacher who knows what he is writing about speaks of that which is illogical in these words: "But no minister who knows the joy of preaching to a missionary-minded church will ever be content to go along with a community-minded or even a nation-minded church. He will find ways of making his whole church life world-minded, planetary-minded. It is illogical to say: 'I am a Christian but I do not believe in missions.' The two clauses do not go together in any rational understanding of either of them. The minister's glad task is to make them impossible, replacing them with the term: 'I am a Christian, which means, I believe in making Christ known everywhere.' "

So many pastors feel that to bring a missionary message or preach a world-wide gospel is difficult, not to say dangerous, before his congregation. The opposite is true with those who have caught the meaning and passion of their Lord and who understand His gospel and the implications of His life and teachings. J. O. A.

A MISSIONARY FROM JAPAN.

Henry James Bennett, the brother of Mrs. Anne Bennett (F. P.) Ensminger, after graduating from Harvard and Andover (our oldest) Seminary in 1901, went immediately to Japan as a missionary of the American Board. For many years he has been in charge of the Tottori Mission Station. This Andover class, of which Fred P. Ensminger was a member, also sent, in 1901, a missionary to Turkey. The first American Board missionaries studied at Andover.

In Japan the church which grew up, instead of becoming a Congregational Church, was known as the Kumiai (self-directing) Church, a happy circumstance in view of the union with the Christian Church there. The policy of the Church has been to reach self-support; the Japanese Church will be the first of the major fields of the American Board to carry all of its own burden. Our work and that of the Northern Presbyterians lead in Protestant strength in Japan.

Leaving Cambridge, Mass., where he has been spending his furlough, Mr. Bennett came to the South for a speaking tour, in which he traveled six thousand miles. Arriving in Corbin, Kentucky, in October, he spoke at the Kentucky Conference and then was taken by automobile and train to speak at the following places: Southern Union College, Wadley, Ala.; Thorsby Institute, Thorsby, Ala.; the Tennessee Conference at Nashville; Circular Church, Charleston, S. C.; Georgia Conference, Demorest; Florida South Association, Sanford, Fla.; Florida East Association, Orange City, Fla.; Union Church, Jacksonville, Fla.; Regional Committee Meeting of the Commission on Missions, Talladega, Ala.; Union Meeting at Baptist Church, Wadley; Wadley Woman's Missionary Society; Alabama Conference at Headland; Joint Church Meetings at New Orleans, La.; and at Austin, Texas.

Mr. Bennett gave a very human picture of Japan and its life. The Japanese church people are organized as we are, and have many similar problems. The women lead, there as here, in interest and single-minded service. The Church is respected. Though insignificant in numbers, it has furnished much leadership in progressive government. The Japanese Secretary of the Kumiai Churches is a brilliant man, who might have risen high in Japanese officialdom.

Japan wrestles with the problem of over-population, with the nation's food supply assured only a short time in advance. There is great need of raw food and raw materials and markets. Asked about the relation of Japan to the Asiatic mainland, Mr. Bennett said that he though the Japanese have done very much as America would do, only that we in the United States would have done it sooner. He spoke of Japan as 99 per cent literate. All children are registered at birth; if a child is not found in school at seven years of age, parents have to satisfy the government.

Drunkenness and prostitution are grave evils. Suicide is more prevalent than with us. One of the fine Christian women of Japan has systematically saved many from self-destruction.

Mr. Bennett told a story of a Christian who gave up the medical profession to manage an orphanage. At a time when his orphanage was burdened to four times its normal capacity by children from a famine ridden province, this orphanage leader had a vision of Jesus bowed down with the weight of a basket on his shoulders filled with scores of orphan children. Jesus beckoned to him to come over and help hold up the basket a little; after that he was at ease about securing the needed support for the orphanage.

Mr. Bennett told of the shops, the streets with the old jinrikshahs and new taxis, of floods and earthquakes, of family life and strong loyalties. He said that in Japan he was asked if and why the Americans wished to fight them, and that here the question was reversed. His opinion was that neither people wished war. Japan's trade means much to the United States; Japan sells most of her silks in America and it would greatly depress her industrial life to have this stopped.

Mr. Bennett has a large circuit of rural churches and also teaches in the provincial capitol. There is no concordance of the entire Bible in Japanese; naturally, one would be of great use to the Japanese Christians. For years he and a Japanese pastor, his assistant, have been compiling such a concordance. He is interested to secure a small farm to help this pastor, for whom there is now no missionary aid, to support himself and carry on his work.

Early in 1936, Mr. Bennett himself is returning to Japan as a volunteer worker under the Kumiai Church, which welcomes him back in the new role, and will induct him into office with ceremony. His wife, Mrs. Anna Woodruff Jones Bennett, was a missionary in Japan and a kindergarten teacher at Tottori when he met her. Mrs. Bennett addressed the Woman's Guild of the Birmingham Church, telling of the customs of Japan, its poetry, its people and its women. She brought with her many articles for exhibition. The Japanese are deeply devoted to their church, giving sacrificially. Her message at the Tennessee Conference made the Japanese living and breathing fellow humans. Mrs. Bennett will also return in 1936 to Japan as a volunteer worker, leaving three daughters and a son in America.

A Story for the Children

DOROTHEA'S EXPERIENCE.

Dorothea was pouring out her woes to Mrs. Irving. Mrs. Irving was Dorothea's oldest friend. She had been her kindergarten teacher, and now that she was married, and Dorothea was in junior high school, she still dropped in at Mrs. Irving's pretty little house and played with the baby, and told Mrs. Irving all about things.

"I just can't get along at home!" Dorothea declared. "Tom is the meanest tease there ever was. Father has a grouch, and I can't please him. He finds fault with my table manners, and my slang, and when I run over my allowance he is just horrid! From morning to night, I never have any peace. When I am old enough I am going to run away."

"Lots of girls feel that way. I used to when I was your age," said Mrs. Irving, smiling. "I tried an experiment, and it worked," she went on.

"Oh, what did you try?" asked Dorothea, much interested. "Could I try it, too?"

"Certainly you can, but it isn't easy."

"I'll try it, no matter how hard it is."

"It is very simple, this experiment of mine," said Mrs. Irving. "It can be told in six words, 'Always be very polite at home.' Notice the third word. The more courtesy, the surer will be your success."

"But—but," began Dorothea, "if they're not polite to me, why should I be to them?"

"You cannot make the experiment in that spirit, dear," said her friend. "They are not making the experiment. You are."

Dorothea walked home slowly, thinking it over. Mrs. Irving knew things. If she said the experiment would work it would work. Why not try it, honestly thoroughly?

So when Tom gave a careless yank to her curls as he came in she bravely smiled at him and said, through rather stiff lips, "You're home early. Wasn't there a ball game today?"

Tom stared. He loved to tease his angry sister. But this polite person took the wind out of his sails. "No game today," he said, and rushed upstairs. Dorothea felt triumphant—and amused to learn that politeness was evidently a successful armor against Tom.

Her father was as surprised as Tom when his daughter listened courteously to his harsh words and answered pleasantly. She looked so smiling and friendly that he said hurriedly: "I have so much trouble at the office, nowadays, Dot, that I'm rather irritable at home, I'm afraid."

This good beginning gave Dorothea courage. Of course there were difficulties and failures, but the developments were interesting all the way along. After a month Dorothea no longer wanted to leave home. The experiment had succeeded.—Baptist Messenger.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The local church is the key to the future of the Kingdom. The pastor may be the key-man who unlocks or locks the door; but the local church is the unit upon which every movement depends for promotion and success. In this day of mass movement and group organization, there is a danger that the importance of the local church may be overlooked and underestimated. The local church is small when compared with the denominational organizations and institutions. But these small churches, when properly guided, form the foundation and background of all denominational growth and power. One dollar is a small amount of money. One hundred dollars could not be considered sufficient for establishing a great corporation. But a hundred thousand dollars can command greater power and consideration. The capitalist should not overlook the importance of one dollar when he thinks in terms of thousands and millions of dollars.

So of the church and its possible growth. During the past twenty or thirty years, the leaders in the Southern Convention have been giving much emphasis to the development of the general interests of the denomination. For the most part the Conferences are devoted to the consideration of financial needs and how to meet them. These things are important and should be carefully considered. But have these Conferences and Convention sessions given adequate consideration to the growth of the local churches? The local church usually submits a report to the annual Conference or Association. These reports are tabulated and compared and the ministers and delegates pass judgment upon the work of the past year in due and ancient form. These tables are read hurriedly, and no special plans are submitted for improvement for the ensuing year. Many people rejoice if their church has held its own during the year. Does this attitude satisfy you?

One month of the new Conference year has passed. The pastors will be requested to emphasize the Christmas offering for Ministerial Relief during December. In January and February Elon College will claim our attention and request offerings for its support. The missionary interests will follow this period for the development of interest in and support of Home and Foreign Missions. During these periods the emphasis will be placed upon the Special Offerings. And so on throughout the year. Now these things should be done, and this writer joins with others in this emphasis. About Easter—or maybe late next summer—many of the churches will set aside one week for a revival meeting. For a few days, pastors and preachers will emphasize the importance of conversion and church membership. But the pity is that many church members and non-church members will not hear these sermons and appeals for spiritual consecration. Consequently the church will witness a few reconsecrations and additions to the church membership, enough probably to balance the losses by death and removals.

It is encouraging to read the appeals in The Sun from Elon College, The Orphanage, the Mission Board and the other interests of the church—calling for forward movement in the kingdom. But how little do we read about the need of the local church and its possible development and growth? Giving to Education, Missions, Orphanage, Superannuation, Christian Education and the other departments of the church will not develop a great denomination. Giving should be encouraged, for it is essential. But the Conferences and institutions of the Southern Convention need something greater than more money. The need is for more and better local churches. Money will not build these churches. It will pay some bills and make it possible to erect buildings. But so far as this writer knows, not one of our churches is over-crowded on Sunday. There is no demand nor need for more buildings. But all of our local churches could endure many growing pains—and thereby build up a larger constituency and more efficient membership. Why does not someone arise to champion the growth of the local churches—both as to number and power?

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE.

The Christian Orphanage is a benevolent institution located at Elon College. It exists for the purpose of caring for homeless and dependent children. The Orphanage was authorized by the Southern Christian Convention and was founded in 1905. It is under the control of a Board of Trustees nominated by the Southern Christian Convention. The Board of Trustees elects a Superintendent who has full charge of the institution.

Reverend James L. Foster was the first superintendent. He was followed by Reverend E. M. Carter, who was succeeded by Reverend J. O. Cox. Mr. Ed. McPherson was elected to succeed Reverend Mr. Cox. The present superintendent is Mr. Chas. D. Johnston, who has held this position for a long while.

Under the administration and direction of Mr. Johnston all debts against the institution have been paid, new buildings erected, new property acquired, and additional children brought to the home. During the thirty years of its existence 416 children have been cared for. There are at present 91 children living at the Orphanage.

These 91 children must be housed comfortably, fed and clothed adequately. The necessities for this large group of children have to be provided. The providing of the provisions for the comforts and necessities of these children is not the responsibility of the superintendent, but is the responsibility of the Church and friends of the institution. During the Thanksgiving season the Orphanage expects the churches and Sunday schools of the Convention to do their major share of contributing. This is the period set apart by our Church for the Orphanage to make its appeal and for the churches and Sunday schools to make their contributions in response. It is to be hoped that all churches and Sunday schools that did not receive their offering on Thanksgiving day or the Sunday preceding Thanksgiving, will do so at once. If these offerings are not as generous as they should be, interested individuals in the churches and Sunday schools are urged to encourage others to give. Money is needed at this time. Food and clothing are costly. Mr. Johnston is hoping that the annual Thanksgiving Offering from the several conferences will amount to at least $7,000. This is not a large amount, and it should be easily reached and will be if all do their part.

The Orphanage, located as it is, means many opportunities for these unfortunate children. They have access to the consolidated school at Elon, where they receive training through the grades and high school. Having graduated from high school, they are in direct touch with Elon College that offers to them training for whatever field they may wish to enter. Some have taken full literary courses, and quite a number have taken the business course and are now occupying good positions with reputable firms.

This is a real work of love, and it should be a delight to any one to have a part in it.

IT WAS GOOD TO BE THERE.

It was good to be where? At Franklin, Va., attending the One Hundred and Fifteenth Annual Session of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference.

The first day we were made glad, encouraged and inspired by four fine speeches by four D. D.'s. Early in the morning, Col. J. E. West gave the report on Home Missions, followed by an address on "Missions Taught and Tackled," by Dr. John G. Truitt. You who have heard Truitt, know something about how he tackles the question at issue. At twelve o'clock, Dr. N. G. Newman, our president, told us a plenty or an abundance on "The Preacher." Well, he just slaughtered the poor fellows from "A" to "Z", but they all took it easy and were elegant in manner. He also addressed the laity regarding their relationship to the ministry. And, my! didn't he pile it in on us, but I never trembled for I have always been in sympathy with the ministry.

In the afternoon Dr. W. M. Jay read the report of Stewardship and as chairman of the committee he addressed us in terms very plausible. Rev. J. F. Morgan gave the report on Foreign Missions, followed by an address from Dr. J. O. Atkinson. Whenever I hear Dr. Atkinson speak on Missions, I just wish and wish and wish, that every member of the Christian Church could hear him. He is so foreseeing, earnest, animating and inspiring that he just gives a thrill.

The evening service was a sermon by Rev. H. S. Hardcastle. He spoke beautifully and enchantingly about the pastor being as a shepherd, ever watching over and caring for the sheep, his flock whom he serves.

The second day we had the report on Religious Literature by Dr. E. W. Jones as chairman, followed by an address by Dr. Jones. His remarks were very thoughtful, considerate and convincing. Our historian, Mr. W. E. MacClenny, gave a history of the Franklin Church which was helpful and instructive. The report on Education was given by Dr. I. W. Johnson, followed by an address by Dr. L. E. Smith. Dr. Smith told us of the many good things that Elon College has done and is doing for the Church and the denomination through the channels of education. He also spoke of the needs of Elon financially and besought the response of this Conference. Dr. John G. Truitt gave the report on Ministerial Ethics. A few remarks were made on the report by a layman, a member of the committee.

At the evening service Mr. Chas. D. Johnston spoke in interest of The Orphanage. He told of some wonderful things that have been done by that institution; of quite a number of boys and girls that have gone out in the world, and are making good. He also let us know that The Orphanage was in need of funds; that expenses this year had overbalanced the income. He pled with us to make our Thanksgiving Offering as large as possible.

At this hour, Rev. Carl R. Key, the pastor of Holland Christian Church, preached for us. His sermon was full of push, vim and power.

On Friday, our last day, Rev. O. D. Poythress gave the report on Evangelism. Dr. Truitt and Rev. Poythress both spoke on the report. Both spoke with fiery zeal, enthusiasm and intense interest. The report of the various committees consumed most of the time just before the closing.

The Devotional Service of the Conference were conducted by the following ministers: Rev. Carl R. Key, Rev. G. A. Pearce, Rev. Robert Lee House, Rev. T. Fred Wright, Rev. Joe French and Rev. R. E. Brittle. The Song Service was led by Rev. J. F. Morgan, Rev. O. D. Poythress and Mr. W. H. Baker. All three of these young, handsome chaps have fine, strong, melodious voices. Therefore, they are easy to follow.

The members of the Franklin Church just got beside themselves in their entertaining of the ministers and delegates that come to Conference. Every delegate was treated so kindly, generously, courteously and so obligingly each was absolutely sure that he had had the best home in Franklin. Ten years ago, in 1925, when conference met at Franklin Church, I was assigned in the home of a Mr. Jones. I have forgotten his initials. This time they sent me to the home of another Brother Jones, W. J. Jones. Now Mr. or Mrs. Committeemen who assigns the homes to the delegates, when you have another conference, and I arrive, just pick me out a Jones—I couldn't possibly ask for better.

"IF YE CONTINUE."

The true test of discipleship is, "If ye continue." It means the true servant of the Lord must have staying qualities. We are ready to begin a good work, but when we encounter some opposing force, or the work halts, or unjust criticism or some cruel thrust meets our efforts, without regard to the importance of the work many let go. When He puts us into the work He means we are to stay by it until completion.

It is easy to begin, but "continuing" is not so easy. Especially when those about us are growing cold and indifferent, who were once active in Christian service. When those in whom we have had confidence are turning back and following Him no more. When we see those who are taking a prominent place in the Lord's work doing the things the world is doing; putting first things last and last things first; working, striving, grasping, reaching, even overreaching for what the world has to give; continuing when it means walking in the opposite direction from the crowd is not so easy.

An easy life is not promised by the Master to His servants. They are to "endure hardships as good soldiers." A good soldier stays at his post until another is sent to relieve him. He continues in service, entirely obedient to his superior officer, until he is mustered out. The good soldier of Jesus cannot act in self-will, but serves faithfully, fearlessly, where he is placed. He cannot lay down the work at will, but continues to serve until He who put him in the work calls him out of it. The true soldier of Christ, like the soldier who is loyal and true to his country, never deserts, but serves faithfully until the great Captain releases him.

We are His disciples indeed when we continue in the faith, grounded and settled in Him, cleaving fast to God, and the practice of His will, and when we persevere unto the end. The promise is to those who endure to the end, and not to those who give up. He has not called us to service for Sundays and then anything we choose through the week. It is not for a few days in the year, but it is day after day, year in and year out, to the last moment of our lives. It means staying in a given place, if our Lord has placed us there, whether we like the place, the work or not,. Remembering even our Master pleased not Himself, and that our purpose should be to do His will and finish His work.

Sometimes He places us amid surroundings we do not like, away from those who are congenial, to associate with those of entirely different tastes. Sometimes He takes us away from the life, the work we love, and we are compelled to take up a work which is beyond our strength, a work for which we have no liking whatever. Sometimes He gives us a work we love, which is made very difficult by some opposing force. Whatever it is, wherever it is, because of Jesus' great love for us, and our great love for Him, we will still continue to give the best, the truest service we are capable of giving, until He releases us from that place, that work. Doing it all in His name and for His sake. Reaching up to God for strength, reaching down to those who are groping in darkness, missing His best, trying to point them to the new and living way which has been opened for you, for one, for all.

We are to continue to use the talents, the pounds our Lord has entrusted to us, without choice, as to how, where, or how long, only we know this, it is until He comes. We are not only to let Him make His own plans concerning our lives and work, but those plans must be carried out with exactness or failure will be the result. As we continue in service, we give more and more over to our Lord and Master, until we have given all to Him, never to take any of it back. Have you thought it is all "give," anyway, in the Christian life? It is give up, give in, give out, give away. Give up our aims and desires to His. Give out the best there is in us. Give away the means that He has entrusted to us that others may have an opportunity to accept Him. But instead of being impoverished by giving our all, our resources increase, for it gives us access to His "all."

It is "continue in my Word," "continue ye in my love," "continue in the grace of God," "continue in faith," "continue in His goodness," "continue in prayer." Continue is the word in Christian service, and it is "to be continued," and never to be "concluded" until we hear our Lord's "well done."

MISSIONS

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., Secretary.

CAN WE INTEREST MEN IN MISSIONS

By the Rev. George A. Brown,
In The Missionary Review of the World.

The whole problem of interesting men in missions is, in its final analysis, a matter of interesting men thoroughly, heartily and enthusiastically in Jesus Christ Himself. The entire missionary enterprise of His Church centers in Him, its living, glorified, ever-present Head and Lord. As Bishop T. U. Dudley says, "The man who does not believe in carrying the Gospel of Jesus Christ unto all men everywhere does not believe in Jesus Christ. No interest in missions means no interest for that particular thing for which Jesus Christ was content to be born and to live and to die. . . . Yes, no interest in missions means no interest in the Lord Himself."

The men we have in mind in this discussion are Christian men, men who know Jesus Christ experimentally as their personal Saviour and Lord. Only such men can be expected to concern themselves about Christ's missionary passion, and purpose, and program.

This question of how to interest men in missions takes at least two things for granted: first, that Christian men ought to be interested in missions, and second, that men can be interested in missions. The only question, therefore, that calls for an answer is just how this interest may be generated, developed, directed and made productive of definite, practical results.

Consider first the imperativeness and possibility of this matter. That men ought to be interested in missions grows out of the fact that the great mission of the Church is missions. Since men constitute, in part, the membership of the Church of the Lord Jesus Christ, missions is most certainly "a man's job," just as much as it is the business of the women and the children of the Church. More than this, it is primarily the work of Christian men to make Jesus Christ known to the world, for when our Lord began this great enterprise He entrusted the task to men. The historian Harnack has remarked of the first three centuries of the Christian era, that "we cannot hesitate to believe that the great mission of Christianity was in reality accomplished by means of informal missionaries"; that is, by what we now call laymen.

Why is it then that today the work of Christian missions is largely in the hands of the women of the Church, especially in the local congregations? They are doing a magnificent piece of work, and may God bless them in it. But as a result many look upon the entire missionary movement as a women's undertaking, and not as something to challenge the serious and active devotion of strong Christian men. At the Younger Men's Missionary Congress in Chicago last May, a delegate reported at one of the group conferences that a man, when asked to give to missions, replied: "I contribute to the pastor's salary and to provide heat and light for the church; you'll have to see my wife about missions."

"Why are the men of the Church not as interested in missions as are the women?" This very question the Christian men of India are asking. Dr. Stephen J. Corey, president of the United Christian Missionary Society, tells of conducting an open forum in India with some Indian Christian leaders, mostly men, who asked, "Are your women and children interested in sending the Gospel to India?" When he replied that probably two-thirds of the money for foreign work in his communion came from the women and the Sunday schools, their astonishment was unbounded, and one of them said, "Why, sahib, we in India have always felt that Christianity was a man's religion. . . . Why are the Christian men of America less interested in bringing Christ to us than are the women and children?" In answer, Dr. Corey told them that the women in America were definitely organized for the study of missions and therefore knew more about missions and were naturally more interested and were doing more for missions than the men who were not so organized.

Why Are the Men Not Organized?

This suggests the further question: Why are the men of our local churches not organized and doing the same kind of missionary work as the women? Here is the reason: In addition to the fact already stated that this whole undertaking to make Christ known to the world is regarded as being largely a strictly feminine affair, there is the general and deeply rooted conviction that the work of organizing the men of our local churches for definite, systematic mission study and specific missionary service, simply cannot be done. Even the leaders of the missionary movements of the men of our Evangelical churches are decidedly skeptical as to the possibility of this thing. When we were thinking of organizing a Men's Missionary Society in our Elyria Church, a letter was written to the secretary of the Laymen's Missionary Movement asking him for any help that he could give us in launching this new enterprise. Mr. F. J. Michel replied, "We do not recommend the organization of men's missionary societies, since they cannot be maintained continuously, as is the case with the women." (Mr. Michel, himself, thinks otherwise now.)

The second point in our theme is that men can be interested in missions because they ought to be. The divinely imposed command insures the possibility. The very imperativeness of this task assigned to the men of the Church of our Lord is the prophecy of its accomplishment. Christian men can be brought together and then can be held together in a missionary organization with continuous monthly programs of spiritual worship and missionary education and service, with the finest Christian fellowship and increasing devotion to their Lord. It has been done, and thus the possibility is fully demonstrated by the Men's Missionary League of the First United Presbyterian Church of Elyria, Ohio. We are now ready to answer the question "How?".

It is not necessary to say that this work is the fruitage of prayer, of much prayer, for every forward movement in missions has been the result of prayer. The book of "The Acts" makes this plain as does the history of Christian missions since the first century of the Church's life. There was also a very definite purpose; after three unsuccessful attempts had been made to get the men together and to hold them together, to organize them around the missionary objective. Finally there was the pursuit of this end in the spirit of patient persistence which the Lord has so wonderfully blessed. His hand has been so manifestly present and powerful that we ascribe to Him the glory and praise of it all.

Men and Missions Sunday.

Lord's Day morning, November 19, 1933, marks the formal beginning of this movement in Elyria. That was "Men and Missions Sunday" and the pastor preached especially to his men on the subject, "Missions—A Man's Job," based on Acts 1:8. In closing he appealed to them to organize a real Men's Missionary Society, calling a meeting for this purpose the next evening. Fifteen men met with the pastor in response to the challenge of the previous day. From that night meetings were held twice a month, for a period of six months, under the pastor's leadership, until the organization was completed, May 21, 1934, by the adoption of a constitution, the election and installation of officers, and the appointment of committees. Ever since that time meetings have been held on the third Monday evening of the month—a time found to be the most suitable time for our men. The membership at present is 40, being about 60% of the men on the church membership roll. The average attendance from the beginning has been 27, for the last year 31, and for the last five months 36, including several neighboring pastors and some of their men.

Beside the usual officers for such an organization, there are membership, program, project, boys' work, welfare, and social committees. Monthly missionary meetings include worship, business, an educational program and a social period. During the year there were five meetings with special speakers, four were conducted by members, and three were in charge of the pastor. Regular mission study courses have been followed and our present missionary project is the support of a native evangelist in the Sangla Hill District of our mission in the Panjab, India. This evangelist's inspiring name is Gulam Masih, which means "Slave of Christ." Later we hope to have some definite work in a home mission field for we believe that "the field is the world," so that interest in missions anywhere means interest in missions everywhere.

One of the most encouraging things in the short history of our Men's Missionary League is the marked influence it has had on the life and work of the Women's Missionary Society. At the end of the first year of the League the president and treasurer of the Women's Society were asked this pointed question: "Has the Men's Missionary League been a help or a hindrance to the work of the Women's Missionary Society?" Their replies revealed the marked increase in membership, attendance, interest, offerings, cooperation between the men and the women, willingness to help in the work, and the growth of the missionary spirit generally in the Women's Missionary Society. During the first year of the Men's Missionary League the Women's Society gained 50% in active membership, 34% in general offerings, while the thank-offering for 1934 was 43% above that of 1933. The total missionary budget offerings of the entire congregation for the church year ending March 31, 1935, were 137% over those of the previous year. The Elyria W. M. S. was given the highest efficiency rating of all the thirty societies of the Cleveland Presbytery, for the work of the last year. The president of our local society generously attributed their high standing to the influence of the Men's Missionary League.

Encouraging Possibilities.

This record shows something of the possibilities of a real Men's Missionary League, carried on continuously, twelve months in the year, in an average congregation, and with growing power and popularity. Clearly this form of activity, that some said could not be done, can be done, for it has been done. We know of other groups of men who have joined this new movement. In November, 1934, a similar organization was formed at Ezel, Kentucky, and in May, 1935, a Men's Missionary League was formed in the Margaret Park Church of Akron, Ohio.

If this work is to succeed, who is primarily responsible for it? On the divine side it is the work of the Spirit of God and we need to give to Him, the great Executive of the Godhead in this age of grace, His rightful place in this whole undertaking. It is His presence, and power, and presidency in this promising missionary movement that we covet above all things. But the responsibility for human leadership most undoubtedly rests on the local pastor more than upon any other living person.

The great need of this new movement for "Men and Missions," therefore, is warm-hearted, wholehearted pastoral leadership. Such leadership a goodly proportion of the men of our churches will follow. The result will be the realization of such triumphs of God's grace and power in the realm of missions as will compel us to magnify and bless His glorious name for what He has done through us.

Here, then, is our challenge. What are we going to do about it? If the men of our churches ought to be aroused to a greater interest in Christian missions, and if their organization into their own missionary societies is not only possible but practicable, and if the responsibility rests upon us, the pastors, how can we be true to ourselves, true to our men, true to the unevangelized multitudes of the world, and above all true to our Lord Himself, unless we do all in our power to realize this definite, spiritual, missionary objective? And "We can do it, if we will"; or better, "He can do it, if we will." Shall we not, then, in the face of the world's need of Christ, and with His command ringing in our ears to "go and preach the Gospel to every Creature," and as the natural expression of our own life in Him, with our whole heart, answer this call and challenge by saying, "By thy grace we will."—Missionary Review.

MADE HER OWN TEXTBOOKS.

By Miss D. P. Cushing, News Editor.

Imagine if you can being an American nurse and trying to teach Anatomy in German or French to Fifth Grade children! That is about the problem that has faced Miss Edith J. Fuller, R. N. of Kansas City, Missouri, who is at work under the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions in Mt. Silinda, East Africa and who reached America on furlough November 27th.

Miss Fuller who is a graduate of the Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing, New York City, taught Chindau pupil nurses with schooling only equal to the Fourth grade, but missionaries are proverbially ingenious folks and Miss Fuller decided that if she needed simplified text-books the only way to get them was to write them herself.

"My usual procedure," she reports, "when writing these handbooks was to collect all the books we have on the subject and spread them in a semi-circle around me, then I went to work taking the facts and simplifying them as much as possible. Sometimes it was almost impossible to convey the idea in simple enough language." When the text was ready, written laboriously by hand, she turned it over to one of the mission doctors for his O. K., and then pounded out page after page on her little portable typewriter. Ordinary wrapping paper from the dispensary served as covers for these unique text-books, which were stitched on a tiny Singer sewing machine. Thus painstakingly Miss Fuller produced five books on bacteriology, midwifery, surgical nursing, medical nursing, and child care.

"The training of native nurses here in Rhodesia is still in its incipient stage," reports Miss Fuller. "The Government has standardized the educational work but the medical work is far, far behind. However, we and others more influential, are trying to get the Government to take some action so that we shall know what the Government wants taught to the natives, and so that all Missions where training is being done will be operating under the same plan. In the meantime, we here at Mt. Silinda are struggling along, doing our best with our simple handbooks, trying to train our boys and birls to be able to cope with the more common illnesses with which they are likely to come in contact."

Miss Fuller has to use two languages regularly besides English, namely Portuguese, the official tongue and Chiandu, the native tongue. For a time she lived in a native mud hut with a thatched roof. "Mt. Silinda is called by some 'the paradise of Southern Rhodesia' not because of living conditions among the people, but because of its great scenic beauty," writes Miss Fuller. "On every side are tropical forests with ferny undergrowth where monkeys, pythons and leopards make their home.

"It is 4,000 feet above sea level which reduces the danger of malaria. During the rainy season, however, a steamy heat envelopes everything. Anyone walking in the sun without a helmet, sun shade or red lined hat, is apt to spend the next few days in bed," Miss Fuller added.

Miss Fuller, who returned to Africa for work in 1929 following her college and professional training in America, was born in Mt. Silinda, East Africa, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Fuller of 713 North Ave., Los Angeles, Calif., then missionaries there. She is a graduate of Wooster College as well as a trained nurse and is the special representative in Africa of the Glen Ridge, N. J. Congregational Church. Miss Fuller is the sister of Harry Fuller, 211 S. Tod, Warren, Ohio.

HOME MISSIONS IN CARROLL CO., VA.

Several months have passed since we told Sun readers what is happening in our Home Mission field of Carroll County, Virginia.

We have spent a busy, and we trust, profitable summer in the Master's work. Beginning the 17th of June, we conducted a two weeks' Bible School at Rocky Ford Church. There were fifty-one enrolled, and we trust much good was accomplished. Beginning the first week of July, we conducted a revival at Elk Spur Church. The entire community was spiritually helped. My brother, Rev. Alfonzo Grissom, assisted in the services. The second Sunday in July, revival services began at Rocky Ford Church. We were fortunate in having with us Rev. J. F. Blackmon, of Buie's Creek, N. C. In both our meetings, the spiritual atmosphere was pronounced, the conduct was especially good. Many reconsecrated their lives, and there was one addition to the church.

August 15th, we began Bible School at Elk Spur Church. We were fortunate in having with us two well-trained teachers. These were sent by Rev. F. C. Lester, our executive of the Board of Christian Education. There were fifty-seven enrolled in this school. The spirit of the school was fine, and Christ was shown to the youth of our community.

The second week of July we went to a new community and organized a Sunday school. This school is known as Ivey Hill Sunday School. This is a section of the mountains that has had no Christian influence. Since organizing, the work has steadily grown. Interest and attendance have been very encouraging. There is a present enrollment of one hundred and six. We have preaching service there twice each month.

We have no church, but the county has kindly consented to let us use the school building. We are very much in need of some musical instrument. If any Sun reader has an organ to give to some worthy cause, we feel sure that this school is worthy of such a donation.

A new day has dawned in our Carroll County field. The two churches, Rocky Ford and Elk Spur, have pledged one hundred and twenty dollars on expense of work here for the next year. I believe a new joy is felt among our folks here. We were happy to send up our conference apportionments in full this year.

As we approach the winter with severe mountain weather, we earnestly ask you to remember us in your prayers. There are many people here that will be cold, physically, this winter. But most of all, there are yet those out in the cold world of sin. May the loving Father give us wisdom and faith to reach these for Him.

Your laborers for the Master,

Rev. and Mrs. R. T. Grissom.

THE CHRISTIAN APPROACH.

"We aim at a proper blending of Physical, intellectual and spiritual education. Boys are considered more important than examinations and the results in examinations not so important as character formation." So said Rev. C. P. James, Headmaster of Pasumalai High and Training Schools which have just celebrated 90 years of notable service. At the special ceremonies held, H. F. Saunders, Acting Director of Public Instruction in Madras praised highly Pasumalai's aims, spirit and results. He wished there were many more "Pasamalais" in India but was happy that every boy who went out from the school took "a bit of Pasumalai" with him. The students are doing a great deal of deputation work in the villages along religious, social and rural reconstruction lines.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

Rev. F. C. Lester, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

FLORIDA CHRISTMAS CONFERENCE.

Young People and their leaders from the churches of Daytona Beach, Holy Hill, Interlachen, Jacksonville, Lake Helen, Melbourne, Moss Bluff, Mt. Dora, New Smyrna, Orange City, Ormond, Pamona, Sanford, Tangerine, Tavares, and Winter Park have been summoned to meet at De Leon Springs, Florida, next Friday and Saturday, December 6th-7th, for what they call a Youth Convocation. The announcement of their program begins with the following statement and poem:

"Sensitive men will always feel that they have a bill to pay, a bill as the poet puts it, for

"Five thousand breathless dawns all new;
Five thousand flowers fresh in dew;
Five thousand sunsets wrapped in gold;
One million snowflakes served ice-cold;
Five quiet friends; one baby's love;
One white mad sea with clouds above;
One hundred music-haunted dreams,
Of moon-drenched roads and hurrying streams
Of prophesying winds, and trees;
Of silent stars and browsing bees;
One June night in a fragrant wood
One heart that loved and understood,
I wondered when I waked at day,
How—how in God's name—I could pay!"

The meeting is scheduled to begin with registration Friday afternoon at 4:30, and at 6:30, Earle Ward, Big Chief, will be in charge of the Seminole Pow-Wow.

A worship service led by Harold Herbst; facts concerning the Florida Pilgrim Fellowship given by Emily Carleton; summer conference promotion by the Rev. Victor B. Chicoine; and an address by Dr. Marna S. Poulson of Penney Farms; a period of recreation; and informal discussion centered around "The Christian Home" will make up the Friday evening program.

On Saturday morning, immediately following breakfast, there will be three group meetings as follows: Personal Religious Living led by Rev. E. B. Lesher; Constructive Use of Leisure Time led by Mr. C. A. Hoyt; and World Friendship led by Mrs. Marna S. Poulson.

After a time of recreation, the general assembly will be led in a devotional period conducted by Flora Morley; the findings of the group meetings will be presented; the Peace Plebiscite results will be heard; and Mr. Julius Dingfelder, Sanford, will deliver the address.

The worship service for the afternoon session is to be led by Kathleen Morie. Henry Witte will present "The Pilgrim Highroad" and other periodicals; and a discussion, "Building the Young People's Program" is scheduled to be led by Miss Pattie Lee Coghill. A play reading "Two Masters" and the benediction will bring to a close this youth meeting.

The cost to each individual is $1.60 which includes room, the banquet on Friday night, breakfast and lunch on Saturday, and registration fee.

Another Youth Convocation will assemble on Sunday afternoon and evening, December 8th, at the West Tampa Mission, West Tampa, Florida. At 2:45 a worship service, led by New Port Richey young people, will open the meeting. Emily Carleton will present facts of The Pilgrim Fellowship; and then the group will be divided into the three groups as mentioned above in the other conference. Walter Metcalf, Tampa, will discuss summer conference promotion, and Rev. Chas. DeBoer, New Port Richey, will pronounce the benediction of the afternoon session.

The evening session opens with devotions led by Louise Avery, followed by a discussion "Building the Young People's Program" led by Miss Coghill. An address "Essentials of Christian Living" by Rev. J. Wallace Hamilton, minister of the Pasadena Community Church, will close the second conference.

Both conferences will work out definite suggestions for projects concerning personal religious living, constructive use of leisure time, and world friendship to be presented to the Florida Pilgrim Fellowship which comes after Christmas.

If your church is included in either of these convocations, we hope you have sought to gain the benefits derived from such gatherings.

FLORIDA YOUTH CONFERENCE.

Last summer when a Christmas Conference for Youth Fellowship officers was discussed at the Elon Summer School and Florida was considered as the place of meeting, some of us were not very optimistic as to the number who would go. But my guess seems to have been wrong. Present indications are that two or three times as many expect to go as I had thought.

The meeting is intended for officers of the Fellowships of the Southeast Convention and of the various Conferences. It is not such a meeting as to include the general public. But, of course, anyone interested will be welcomed. It is sincerely hoped that officers from each Conference will attend. That is necessary in order to make the conference what it is intended to be.

Entertainment will be somewhat of a problem for the Winter Park Church. This is easy to understand because Christmas is at the height of tourist entertainment in Florida. But the church is eager to do its best for the young people of the southeast, and a hearty welcome is expected. The church will furnish rooms and breakfast. Other meals can be secured in town for twenty-five cents and up. This will make the stay in Florida very cheap, and it will certainly be worth much more than it costs to all who attend. Other statements of entertainment have been made, but were based on a misunderstanding. The above is correct.

In order to aid the entertaining church, all who are planning to go should notify Miss Irene Cotten, Secretary of the Southeast Fellowship, Dendron, Virginia, before December 15th. Please do this, if possible.

The future of the Church depends on the young people. The future of our Church in the Southeast depends in a large measure on the leaders who are to meet in Winter Park, December 27th-29th, and make plans for our united work. Meet me there.

Points for Talks—

I. Factors that Have Eliminated Christ from Christmas—

It is a shame that in this Christian world of ours one must be reminded to "Keep Christ in Christmas." What is Christmas for if it is not to worship the Bethlehem Babe? Still, there are many people who do not stop to think why it is that we celebrate Christmas; they do not stop to meditate upon the Christ Child who is the center of it all. Christmas has been so commercialized that when the glad season of the year approaches one does not have time to stop and worship. There is Christmas shopping to be done—about thirty days before Christmas the newspapers start carrying the announcement "Only 30 more shopping days until Christmas," and the next day it will be "Only 29 more shopping days until Christmas." They do not declare "Only 30 more days of preparation for the celebration of the birth of the Christ Child." There are Christmas dances to be held, the Christmas cocktail hour must be planned, a last ultimate gift must be purchased for someone "because she always gives me something."

Do you think Christ approves of these methods of celebrating His birthday? Do you think He would be present at your Christmas dance—if not, why celebrate in this manner—why observe a birthday and not invite the guest of honor? There was no room for Christ in the inn, and in like manner we often crowd Christ out of Christmas.

II. Keeping Christ In Christmas—

Regardless of how much non-Christians observe Christmas, we should be sure that professing Christians make proper use of their Saviour's natal day. Let us exalt Christ during the Christmas season—remove the commercialism and paganism, and let the world hear the story of Jesus Christ, the Saviour of the world.

To keep Christ in Christmas our celebration must be in keeping with the spirit of Jesus. We must think of others whose lives are unhappy. We must give ourselves to unselfish service—take part in community projects that will relieve human suffering and bring joy into the hearts of the lonely and underprivileged. We can keep Christ in Christmas by giving gifts to persons who are too poor financially to have even the necessities of life. Some groups will conduct a story-hour and give gifts to children in hospitals, orphanages or the needy sections of their city—some will sponsor a community Christmas tree. Many groups will keep Christ in Christmas by singing the old familiar Christmas carols to the aged and shut-ins at the dawn of Christmas day. These activities will be in harmony with the life and spirit of the One whose birthday we celebrate.

Let us keep Christ in Christmas through worship. Let us invite Him to our own home Christmas day and there worship him in private and as a family group. Also, we should celebrate the anniversary of His birth by assembling ourselves together for public worship. The majority of the churches will have special Christmas services, pageants portraying the birth of Christ, candlelight services will be held when youth and aged alike will dedicate their lives anew to the Master's service. At this Christmas season, "Come,

NEHEMIAH REBUILDING THE WALLS OF JERUSALEM.

Golden Text: "The people had a mind to work." —Nehemiah 4:6.

Lesson: Nehemiah 2:1—7:4.

Nehemiah faced a gigantic task. Jerusalem was in ruins, the walls had been razed, the city had been ravaged, the leading Jews had been carried away, and those who remained were poor in resources, lacking in leadership, discouraged in spirit, and bitterly disappointed. But, nothing daunted by the seemingly insuperable odds against him, Nehemiah not only rebuilt the walls, rehabilitated the city, and gave Jerusalem new dignity, but he did it in an amazingly short time. A careful reading of today's lesson will show why this was true.

The Work Was Undertaken by a Man Who Cared.

Nehemiah might well have been unconcerned. He was rich, he had a good job, he was guiltless of the sins of his fellowmen, he was far removed from Jerusalem. He might well have dodged his responsibility, as so many do, or he might have salved his conscience by giving some money to the work and letting it go at that. But Nehemiah cared. He cared enough to do something about it. He gave up his job, he gave his money, he gave himself, he did his share of the hard work, he counted no sacrifice too great in his interest in the work. It was a religious devotion of high order.

The world needs people who care. Margaret Slattery has written a little book entitled "He Took It Upon Himself." That is the secret of every great achievement in the field of human welfare and religious achievement. Someone has to take it upon himself. Someone has to make his slogan "For Others." Someone has got to love folks and causes enough to give himself for them. Our modern world needs a large measure of the spirit of Nehemiah.

The Work Was Carried On By People Who Worked Together.

Nehemiah was a great organizer. He not only got folks to work, but he got them to work together. They lost themselves in a common cause. They sought the common good rather than personal preference. They worked together enthusiastically. Each man had his part and his place. Each man thought that what he did was important. Nehemiah saw to that. "The people had a mind to work"—the words of the Golden Text sum up the whole matter. How often there is jealousy and strife and pride among Christian workers. How often members of the church do not "pull together". But any church that has people who have a mind to work, gets things done.

The Work Was Carried On By Peoples Who Refused to Become Discouraged by Difficulties.

Their enemies tried every means of thwarting the work. Ridicule—it is hard to be laughed at; scorn—that hurts, cuts to the quick; slander—how difficult it is to keep going in the face of deliberate lies; actual opposition—how discouraging it is sometimes to keep trying to do right when people actually oppose one, and even use force to gain their point; intrigue and deceit—how much one needs to be on his guard lest he become disarmed. Sanballat and Tobiah and their followers tried every devilish trick to thwart the work and turn aside the workers. But these people refused to be turned aside from their duty. Let those of those who are trying to follow Christ and to help Him to build His Kingdom have something of the spirit of these people of that long ago.

The Work Was Made Dynamic By Prayer.

It was begun in prayer. It was essentially a spiritual enterprise. It was kept going by prayer. The people worked but they also worshipped. An ordinary task took on new significance as a result of the spirit of prayer.

Many modern churches are bee-hives of activity. We hear a great deal about "church work" and a "working church." And this is as it should be. But one sometimes wonders if modern churches do not put too much emphasis on programs and too little emphasis on prayers. One wonders if in the long run the church would not accomplish more, and do it better if the spiritual energy generated and released by prayer was not undergirding the work of the church. It is not by might, nor by power, but by the Spirit of the Living God. The present situation calls for action. But the present situation also calls for action that has been made dynamic by the spirit of prayer. This applies both to pulpit and to pew.

WHY WE GIVE THANKS.

There are solid foundations for thanksgiving. The thankful life is the only normal life. Unthankful people are abnormal. So we find that the Bible is a book of thanksgiving from Genesis to Revelation. God's people give thanks as no other people can possibly do. When a remnant of the Jews who had been in captivity in Babylon returned to Jerusalem by permission of King Cyrus, and rebuilt the house of the Lord, there came a time of great thanksgiving. Priests and Levites and others assembled: "And they sang together in one accord praising and giving thanks unto the Lord; because he is good, for his mercy endureth forever toward Israel. And all the people shouted with a great shout, when they praised the Lord, because the foundation of the house of the Lord was laid" (Ezra 3:11). If there was reason then for a mighty thanksgiving day, how much more today! "For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ" (I Cor. 3:11). He is the impregnable, eternally enduring foundation of the house of the Lord, "the church, which is his body." Because this is so, and because our Lord is "the same yesterday, and today, and forever," we have everything to be thankful for and can live in perpetual thanksgiving. "For all things are yours; whether . . . the world, or life, or death, or things present, or things to come; all are yours; and ye are Christ's; and Christ is God's" (I Cor. 3:21-23). These are glorious, incontrovertible facts that our God would have us remember on Thanksgiving Day and every day. Only unbelief can break continual thanksgiving in the heart of the child of God.—Sunday School Times.

"UNBLEMISHED OFFERING."

"The fear of the Lord is clean."—Ps. 19:9.

"Fear of the Lord" is understood to mean "interest in," "concentration in," "devotion to," "open heart and mind to reception of," "reverence for," "the spirit of," "eager to learn of." The Bible says, "the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom," it is "keeping his commandments," it is a condition of receiving his blessings.

The Psalmist says "The fear of the Lord is clean." How it is that "fear" is a clean thing is well explained by the commentators, who say that the metaphor is probably that of "unblemished offering." In those days, nothing which was unclean was to be a part of the life of the nation; nothing unclean was to approach the Fountain of Life.

When one offers himself to the Lord, his offering must be untainted, unreserved, without spot or shade. Paul said, "present your bodies holy acceptable unto God." The transition of the soul from what it is to the higher life can be made only by its emancipation from uncleanness.

Prayer—O Lord, we pray Thee to fill our minds with the truth of immortality. Turn our thoughts inward. Command our consciences by Thy Spirit. Give us integrity, uprightness, purity of heart, and benevolence, and all things that make life a thing of beauty and joy forever.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"A SUBLIME PRAYER."

"Purge me with Hyssop, and I shall be clean; wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow."—Ps. 51:7.

This text is personal. It has to do with me. It has to do with my Christ. It acknowledges the power of God to cleanse and educate my conscience; to invest me with desire to make my actions sublime; to illuminate my understanding of Him; to reveal to me the heinousness of sin; it impresses upon me the moral obligation of right living, reveals Christ not only as the propitiation for my sins, but as a substitute for my sins and that He is at the right hand of the Father making intercession for me. That means to me that I respond to His offer in personal surrender to Him, and that I give myself into His hands that He may see me through. In this union of my faith with Him I am brought nigh to Him, and I know that He is undertaking all for me. I am receiving all things from Him, in Him, and through Him. This is my prayer to Him this day.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"THE CLEANSING POWER OF THE WORLD."

"Now ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you."—Jno. 15:3.

The word of God makes clean.

In the following story given by a converted Chinaman, Christ is compared with human teachers.

"A man had fallen into a pit and lay in its miry bottom groaning and uterly unable to move. Confucius walked by, approached the edge of the pit, and said, 'poor fellow, I am sorry for you. Why were you such a fool to get into this? Let me give you a piece of advice: If you get out, don't get in again.' A Buddhist priest next came by and said, 'Poor fellow, I am very much pained to see you there! Scramble up two thirds or half the way and I will lift you up the rest.' But the man was entirely helpless. Next Christ came by, and, hearing the cries, went to the very brink of the pit, stretched down and laid hold of the poor man, brought him up and said, 'Go, and sin no more.' "

Prayer—Dear Father, our loving Lord and our God, with Thee all things are possible. Thou standest at the head of all things right, pure and clean. Thou orderest all things after the counsel of Thy will. Thou art the pillow of the universe and when thou dost fall the universe falls. Dear Father, we pray for ourselves that our ways may be ordered by Thee. We pray for the world, that Thy people may follow Thee and not fall but be raised up, growing in grace and in the knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"LOVE'S HIGHEST GLORY."

"He brought me into the banquet house, and his banner over me was love.—Sol. 2:4.

Our national emblem, the flag, is the symbol of the nation's highest glory. It is first in attraction, first in courage and honor, and first in trust; and it demands our first patriotic allegiance.

We have another flag, a flag which, during divine services, flies above the national emblem. This is the church pennant which means the cross and denotes that God is supreme and to Him, first of all, we owe our allegiance, our trust and the glory due His name.

What glory is this glory of God? Let God answer. He answers in the life of His son Jesus Christ. In Him He has made all His glory to pass before us. We see it in His being "gracious to whom He would be gracious"; we see it in His showing "mercy to whom I would show mercy." We see it in His goodness as He "went about doing good"; and back of all this goodness is His glowing love, for the highest expression of love is goodness; it is the quintescence of loving and being loved.

All this He has imported to us, His children, and made it possible for us to reveal the same glory, carrying on for Christ until that glory is perfected.

Prayer—Our Father, we would abide in Thy love, and we would abide in it through fellowship with our Saviour Jesus Christ; and more still, we would abide in Thy love through our daily work. We pray Thee to make us faithful, and may the great love which burned in Him burn in us, and may that love never be marred by those triumphs of dispositions which we have not subjected to Thy Divine Love. This we ask for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"WHEN LOVE SHINES IN."

"Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their father."—Matt. 13:43.

When love shines in, it also shines out and then it becomes glory, even as the glory of the sun.

Quoting from R. W. Barbour in "Thoughts," he says, "The love of Christ never asks the question 'who is my neighbor?' If it asks a question at all, it is 'How can I show myself neighborly?' 'How can I best be a helper?' It does not look around trying to find who it is who may have a claim on it. Its eyes are turned inward upon itself, saying, 'What will make me fit to serve?' "

"Love came to me with a crown,
I took it and laid it down.

"Love came to me and said,
'Wear it upon thy head.'

"'Tis too heavy, I cannot wear it,
I have not strength enough to bear it.'

"Then my soul's beloved spoke,
Saying, 'Wear it for my sake,'
When lo! the crown of love grew light,
And I wore it in all men's sight."

—Ella Dietz.

Prayer—

Lord, a happy child of Thine,
Patient through the love of Thee,
In the light of life's divine,
Thy light, Thy life, shine Thou in me.

—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"FOLLOW ME."

"And as he passed by, he saw Levi, the son of Alphaeus sitting at the place of toll, and followed him."—Mark 2:13-17.

How prompt was Matthew! What a business man he showed himself—alert, about his Father's business! Bang went his ledgers shut. Snap went the key in the door. Good bye to his old publican work and on with the new work of the kingdom of God!

How Christ must rejoice in the Matthews, in those who rise up so readily at His call, and follow Him so alertly and rejoicingly, not once looking back!

Have we joined the church? And, having joined it, have we happily snapped asunder the hindering bonds of the world?

Prayer—Our blessed Redeemer, may we drag behind us no chain and clog of futile worldly interests. Vigorously, instantly, wholeheartedly, having heard Thy call, may we arise and follow Thee!—Amen.

"SLEEP-LOVERS."

"Love not sleep, lest thou come to poverty."—Prov. 20:4-13.

Everyone knows that a sluggard comes to worldly poverty, but not everyone recognizes the fact that spiritual sluggards come to spiritual poverty.

There is a sleep of the soul, a torpor of the conscience, a somnolence of religious zeal, which destroys our balance in the bank of heaven. If we want to be rich in the things that count for most, we must be wide awake to the things that count for most.

Many of us are hugging mattresses and pillows of the soul. We are shutting our eyes to the need of the world. We do not realize the activity of Satan. Men need our help, sufferers and sinners need comfort and salvation, and we are snoring on our couches!

Prayer—Is there a poverty, O God, worse than this, to know what is Thy will and then not to do it? Awake us, Holy Spirit, from our disgraceful slumber!—Amen.

THE CHURCH AND ITS DEACONS.

By John G. Truitt.

"They that have used the office of a deacon well purchase to themselves a good degree, and great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus."—I Tim. 3:13.

In this message I expect to discuss (1) The purpose of deacons, (2) The personnel of deacons, and (3) The practical value of deacons. The purpose in having deacons in a church is quite clearly set forth in Acts 6:1-8, "And in those days, when the number of the disciples was multiplied, there arose a murmuring of the Grecians against the Hebrews because their widows were neglected in the daily ministration. Then the twelve called the multitude of the disciples unto them, and said, "It is not reason that we should leave the Word of God, and serve tables, wherefore, brethren, look ye out among you seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business. But we will give ourselves continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the word. And the saying pleased the whole multitude: and they chose Stephen, a man full of faith and the Holy Ghost, and Philip, and Prochorus, and Nicanor, and Timon, and Parmenas and Nicolas a proselyte of Antioch; whom they set before the apostles: and when they had prayed, they laid their hands on them. And the word of God increased; and the number of disciples multiplied in Jerusalem greatly; and a great company of the priests were obedient to the faith and Stephen full of faith and power, did great wonders and miracles among the people . . . And they were not able to resist the wisdom and the spirit by which he spake." This deacon was tried before the council and of him it is said: "And all that sat in the council looking steadfastly on him, saw his face as it had been the face of an angel." That council condemned him to death, and it is further said of him while he was being stoned to death: "And he kneeled down, and cried with a loud voice, 'Lord, lay not this sin to their charge.' And when he had said this he fell asleep."

Thus I have read to you from the Scriptures the beginning of the office of deacon. Looking over those words of Scripture we find that the office of deacon was created for the following seven things: (1) To stop the congregation's murmuring, to set their minds and heart at peace one with another. This is a big order, but what a blessed one and happy is the deacon who has the wisdom and the right spirit to undertake, and to do just that thing. God knew the value of a good layman in the church. And how our own hearts have rejoiced for the great and good deacons we have known. They are of the people, among the people, and speak their language in love and wisdom, and it carries weight and many times saves the day. Many a pastor has thanked God for good deacons.

(2) To see that none are neglected. The Hebrews were in the ascendancy in the congregation under discussion. Their widows were inadvertently given advantage over the Grecian widows. The Grecians murmured and the apostles ordered the selection of fair-minded men whose business it would be to see that none were neglected in the daily ministration. The church once looked after its poor. That business in the main has been taken over by the state, and civil authorities. But there is still the need for the church's looking after the poor. This is one of the primary businesses of the deacons. They should seek out the suffering, investigate their need, recommend to the church, or groups in the church, proper measures for the alleviation of the suffering. And in this matter it can well be said, 'if they use the office of a deacon well they purchase to themselves a good degree.'

(3) To keep their pastors from having to serve tables. The other day I felt myself duty bound to do a piece of work. I was rushed for time. I saw one of my deacons, and told him what I wanted and the help I needed. He replied, "Parson, you just leave that up to me." That's the secret of a happy pastor. Again I needed a highly technical piece of work done, and had not the time to delve into the matter myself. I went to another deacon. I told him what I had in mind. He did the work in the very finest possible spirit, spending much time and thought on it, thus making his pastor happy. "It is not reason that we should leave the word of God and serve tables," said the apostles, and they appointed the people's selection for deacons to help them out. The other day I needed advice. I went to a deacon to lay the matter before him. He answered my question with such confidence and straightforwardness that I could go on about my work with peace of mind. And all of us, as pastors, could recount time and time again when our deacons have been in deed and in truth our right-hand men. Daily I thank God for my deacons.

(4) To be appointed over churchly business. They are business men. They have the man-on-the-street slant toward matters that come before the church in its business administration. They can do far better than most ministers. Their workaday-world experience fits and adapts them to the tasks of the business of the church. They should be given strategic places on boards and committees, both in the local church and also in the larger administration of the church's affairs. The church would keep out of many of the muddles it finds itself in if it relied more upon the business brains of the pew, and especially such members of the pew as good deacons ought to be. As a pastor I am under the constant tutelage of the fine deacons, with real business sense, in my church. I am taught of them, and happy is that pastor who has in his pastorate deacons who know how to do things nobly in the material and business world.

(5) To do spiritual work among the members. They were to be men selected because they were "full of faith and the Holy Spirit." "And Stephen, full of faith and power, did great wonders and miracles among the people." Not all the deacons had as much of the power as Stephen did, but the implication is that there was a distinctly spiritual work for them to do. They are to be not only business men, but men of God as well. Men who have great faith, and men who have the right spirit. Men who can lead in spiritual matters whenever the situation demands it. Most of us, I am sure, can testify to the worth of our deacons along this line. How often I have been inspired by their honest, quiet prayers, by the sincerity of their spiritual integrity as it has been shown in so many places. Yes, our deacons must be spiritually-minded men.

(6) To speak in public meetings for their church when occasion demands. "They were not able to resist the wisdom and the spirit by which he spake," so the account runs concerning Deacon Stephen. And how like the situation of the Lord Jesus when as a boy he talked with the great teachers in the temple! "They were not able to resist the wisdom and the spirit by which he spake." The church appoints its deacon with

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

All churches that raise as much as fifty dollars or more are "Banner Churches" in our Thanksgiving Offering Campaign this year.

In our report this week we have three "Banner Churches." Our Third Av. Church, Danville, Va., comes in with $100.35. Holy Neck Church comes in with $68.00 and gets on the list. Liberty Vance in N. C. comes in with $83.28 and makes the third one in this report for this week. I know all these churches are happy to be "Banner Churches."

I am anxiously waiting to see how many we will have next week. Mr. E. W. Carter, Winchester, Va., shipped the children five barrels of apples and they came in this week and if he could be here to see the children enjoy them he would feel well repaid for this contribution.

Our good friends from Timber Ridge church shipped us fourteen barrels a few days ago and the children will have a gala day when they all come in. Fruit is fine for children and they eat apples raw or cooked.

We want to appeal to our churches to make the Thanksgiving Offerings liberal in order that we may reach our goal. This week carries us up to $12,980.29. We still lack $6,019.71. Are you going to stress this offering in your church to the extent that we may reach our goal?

MY PATCHWORK LIFE.

By DORA BYRON.

My life is just a crazy quilt,
I add a square each day,
A tiny bit of flaming red
I sew with laughter gay,
And then perhaps a patch of brown
Will steal my smiles away.

A tender green, fresh as the spring,
White blocks of winter's snow,
A flashing blue, a faded rose
From the distant long-ago,
They blend together in my life,
I stitch them row on row.

And when my quilt is ended
I'll understand its theme,
The secret outline God has set
For each crazy line and seam,
I'll see the pattern I have lived —And fold away my dream.

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

that as one of its purposes, namely, to have men who can speak with wisdom and the right spirit. Again, we have all seen it done. The deacons measure up as well in my humble estimation on this score as do the ministers or any other class of church workers. Notice that the word "spirit" here used is not the "Holy Ghost" hitherto spoken of, but just that good spirit of understanding, sympathy, and wisdom which makes many a church meeting head in the right direction, resulting in peace, harmony and progress. I think it would be well, for us as pastors to have a prayer of thanksgiving to God for good deacons.

(7) To be loyal to the faith even unto death. That is what Stephen did. Condemned, falsely accused, arraigned, his face was not flush with anger, nor blanched with fear: "And all . . . saw his face, as it had been the face of an angel." Composure in Christ Jesus his Lord was his. And he did not flinch one bit, but bore the agony of death with forgiveness upon his lips. There was no hatred, no malice, no seeking of revenge. Is there any better record among the ministers? The first martyr was a deacon. And perhaps the conversion of the greatest exponent of the Gospel which we preach was as a direct result of the goodness of the spirit of this great deacon. "They that use the office of a deacon well purchase to themselves a good degree." (I should prefer it to the D. D.!) One of the businesses then, of a deacon, is to be faithful unto death.

II.

The personnel of deacons. Above I have answered the question: Why? And in answering the question Why, I have answered my present question—Who? Who shall be deacons?? Men selected by the membership. "Wherefore, brethren, look ye out among you seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Spirit and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business." Thus I say, the deacons should be the choice of the people, not the thought, plenty of time for consideration, and earnest prayer. Six months is not too long in most cases to wait after it has been officially announced that the election of a deacon, or deacon is desired. He should be a man (and I think women are eligible to the office of deaconess) of (1) Good report; (2) full of wisdom; (3) full of the Holy Spirit; (4) of faith; (5) grave; (6) not double-tongued (one tongue is often more than we can manage); (7) temperate; (8) not greedy of filthy lucre; (9) pure conscience; (10) tested; (11) blameless; and (12) husband of a good wife. I do not think a bachelor should necessarily be disqualified, but a good wife has saved many a preacher, and certainly will help any man along with this business of being "full of wisdom"! You recognize that I have been using, in the above, I Timothy 4:8-13.

According to our Principles and Government we should have at least two deacons in every church, and more are often necessary. Two deacons for every hundred members perhaps would not be an unwise standard, beginning with four upon the organization of the church, and not going beyond a dozen active deacons, unless the church were very large. There can be no set rule about this according to our Principles and Government. Deacons should be properly ordained to their office, with fitting solemn ceremonies.

III.

In conclusion, The practical duties of deacons. Under the above headings, which answered the questions Why, and Who, I have also answered the question What. Besides the above matters already mentioned, deacons should provide the service of the Lord's Supper, and should assist the minister at the table. Deacons may feel it their duty to give the right-hand of Christian fellowship in the name of their church to new members. Deacons can receive new members into the church in the absence of a pastor. Deacons should preside over business meetings in the absence of the pastor. Deacons may lead the congregation in worship in the absence of the pastor. They should make many calls in somewhat the same sense in which a pastor makes calls upon the congregation. They should counsel with the pastor in the government and spiritual affairs of the church. It is the duty of deacons to look into any offenses against the church, or such offenses among members as come into churchly notice. It does not pay anybody to see everything, nor to look for opportunities to get into other people's affairs, whether he be a minister or deacon, or a mother or school teacher.

It is not intended that this should be an exhaustive, or technical study of the church and its deacons, but rather to present the matter in such a way as to lay it before you for your discussion and emendation. Let me say, in conclusion, all honor to our noble and faithful deacons and deaconesses, and may we be as faithful as pastors as they are as pastor's helpers!

ELON COLLEGE EDUCATION WEEK

Doctor J. D. Messick, Dean of the College and head of the Department of Education, had charge of Education Week which was observed recently at Elon College. Speakers from off the campus were brought in for special addresses. Doctor Albert Coats, director of the Institute of Government of the University of North Carolina, was the first speaker. Doctor R. W. MacDonald, member of the State Legislature and candidate for governor of North Carolina, gave a very helpful address. Doctor R. B. House, Dean of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill Branch, was one of our speakers. Mr. H. M. Rowland, superintendent of the Burlington City Schools, gave a very interesting address. Mr. Rowland has spoken to our students and faculty on a number of occasions and is always enjoyed. Doctor Kenneth Clarke, Head of the Department of Biblical Languages at Duke University was our Sunday speakers. This was his second visit.

The above series of addresses as a part of the observance of Education Week at Elon were most appreciated and the college wishes to express its appreciation to Dean Messick and all who have had a part in the success of the undertaking.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

A Call for Advice.—

Governor Peery of Virginia has become alarmed at the ever-increasing death toll of the automobile. Only recently he called together an advisory committee to consider ways and means for curtailing this wholesale murder. Mr. Peery, may we make a suggestion: At least close the liquor stores at the time grocery stores are closed. Eleven P. M. is entirely too late to keep them open.

The Star of Bethlehem.—

For the two weeks preceding Christmas, the Star of Bethlehem will be reproduced at the Franklin Institute Planetarium, in Philadelphia. A pageant entitled "The Heavens Declare" will be presented daily and nightly, and the supernatural light which hovered over the midnight skies of nearly 2,000 years ago and guided the Wise-men to the manger of the Christ Child, will be shown in the proper astronomical setting of that period.

The Cause and Cure of War.—

The eleventh annual conference on the Cause and Cure of War is to be held in Washington from January 21st to 24th, inclusive. Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, founder and honorary president, undaunted by dispatches from Rome and Addis Ababa, has issued the call to members of eleven of the largest women's organizations in the country. A larger attendance than at any previous conference is expected, and the failure of arbitration measures in the Italio-Ethiopian conflict will be discussed. Uninformed public opinion, believes Mrs. Catt, was largely responsible for such failure.

Good News, At Least!—

Just about the best Thanksgiving news this year was the announcement by Columbia University that Professor Leroy L. Hartman, of its School of Dental and Oral Surgery, had discovered a substance that makes tooth-drilling absolutely painless. But the university says the new substance does more than this; it also "offers the possibility of saving teeth now lost through extraction." Not those now lost, O Columbia! Those are gone forever. If Professor Hartman could bring them back, he'd deserve appointment as head of the Universal Recovery Administration.—Business Week.

Speed in the Air.—

From a recent issue of Review of Reviews, comes the following: "The progress of aviation in this country within the last few years is a little breath-taking, and reflects the confidence that has been built up in flying as an ordinary means of travel . . . Speed, and more speed, is the watchword of aviation. When travelers of great means and leisure prefer to use the air-lines, it is obvious that they must be the most inviting from every practical standpoint. And, with the volume business the lines are doing today, resulting in sharply reduced fares as compared with the pioneer days, air-travel is within the reach of moderate means."

Receipts of Bible Societies.—

An interesting comparison, but one of which America cannot be proud, is that of the estimated receipts of Bible societies in the United States and the receipts of societies of the same kind in Great Britain and her dominions. For the last four years, there has been received in the United States approximately $600,000 from living donors, from legacies, from the proceeds of annuities and additions to the principal of trust funds. From corresponding sources the societies of Britain and the dominions received over $1,350,000. This difference is even more marked when it is taken into consideration that their population is only about half that of our country, and certainly they are no more well-to-do than are we.

Motion Pictures Aid Religious Education.—

Yale University has adopted the motion picture as a visual aid for religious education and will soon release for projection in churches two one-reel films whose scenarios were written at the Yale Divinity School. The films are the product of a program of research carried out under the supervision of Professor Paul H. Veith, associate Professor of Religious Education and director of field work in the Yale Divinity School. One of the films, "Forgive Us Our Trespasses," is designed for young children. The other, "Our Children's Money," is intended for parent education groups and, Dr. Veith says, provides a concrete basis for discussion of problems arising in connection with training children in the use of money.—Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

Exposition of Chemical Industries.—

During the past week there has been held in New York City the Fifteenth Exposition of Chemical Industries. All through the depression, chemical research has continued, and laboratories have been turning out new ideas. Rayon, lacquer and cellophane, we are told, were just fore-runners of what was to follow. New rubber—synthetic of course—that is uninjured by oil, heat or sunlight, is being produced in millians of pounds for making gaskets, belts, gloves, and other things for which natural rubber has not been suitable. Synthetic camphor is fast replacing the imported article from Formosa. Titanium oxide promises to compete with the oxides of lead and zinc, and ultimately give the consumer cheaper and possibly better paint. Soapless detergents provide "soap" that leaves no greasy ring around the bath tub. Out of 254 exhibitors at the chemical show, 151 presented new equipment or new construction materials.

Sleep: Quality vs. Quantity.—

W. E. Farbstein, writing in the December American Magazine, says that "the traditional eight-hours' sleep requirement for adults, like all averagaes, is notably wrong in some cases. Recent research at the University of Chicago shows that eight hours of sleep is really too much for the average person." He states further: "A series of observations in Germany demonstrates that the quality of sleep is all important . . . A deep sleep of six hours is more refreshing than a shallow sleep of eight. One can train oneself to get enough sleep in four hours." He relates several curious stories regarding sleep. One is that the Patriarch of the Coptic Church in Alexandria, Egypt, does not get much rest. It is a part of the sect's ritual that, should he fall asleep, he must be awakened by his attendants every fifteen minutes. "The Urubu Indian tribes of Brazil," says he, "have the quaintest sleeping custom in the world. The oldest members of the tribe sleep on the ground, the middle-aged lie on top of them, and the young on top of the middle-aged, forming a human pyramid."

A Campaign Issue.—

While many political students have contended that economy measures cannot be made national political issues because of the indifference of the average person, repeated demands by business, large and small, seems to belie their opinion. Cost of government, taxation, and economy, loom large on the nation's political horizon. Even the New Dealers have been, recently, compelled to take cognizance of this fact, and twice recently Mr. Roosevelt has referred to efforts to cut expenditures. Incidentally—is it only an incident? —the government's debt has gone beyond the $30,000,000,000-mark for the first time. In this connection a comparison of the public debt since before the War Between the States may prove of interest, the wealth of the nation at the various times being taken into consideration. The Associated Press has compiled the following figures: For the fiscal years ending June 30th: 1861, $90,582,417; 1866, $2,755,763,929; 1893, $961,431,766; 1916, $1,225,145,568; 1919, $25,482,034,419; 1930, $16,185,308,299; 1932, $19,487,009,766; 1933, $22,538,672,560; 1934, $27,053,141,414; 1935, $28,700,892,624; Nov. 27, 1935: $29,641,606,134." These figures are, of course, exclusive of the debts of states and local governments, which, when added to federal figures, lifts the general indebtedness to above $50,000,000,000.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Next week's SUN will be the Christmas issue. The paper will not be published the week following in observance of Christ's Birthday.

It is learned with profound regret that the girl's dormitory of Southern Union College, at Wadley, was burned recently, the College sustaining a great loss in the fire—the insurance being quite inadequate to replace the dormitory.

News reaches us that our beloved sister in Zion, Mrs. Dr. Martyn Summerbell, Lakemont, N. Y., passed to her reward on November 19th. The host of friends of our beloved and venerable Dr. Summerbell, so well and favorably known and esteemed in our fellowship, will learn of this fact with regret and their sympathies will go out to our brother in his bereavement.

We reprint in another column of this issue a clipping from the Missionary Herald, and from the pen of Malcolm White, son of Dr. Hugh Vernon White. Young Mr. White has still much to learn of the South. Two years of welfare work is not calculated to give a true impression. However, Mr. White may be excused for his snap-shot judgment as older heads from the East have made the same mistake.

Dr. Warren H. Denison, secretary, Dayton, Ohio, writes us the sad news that Dr. Frederick W. Raymond, president of Defiance College, Ohio, had a cerebral hemorrhage while attending a Home-coming at Troy, Ohio, November 10th, and is now in a serious condition at a local hospital. Dr. Raymond has a host of friends throughout the brotherhood that will read this announcement with great anxiety and solicitude.

Mrs. A. W. Andes, Harrisonburg, Va., under date of December 6th, writes: "Mr. Andes will not be able to do any work for many weeks. He became very ill while filling his appointments Sunday and was rushed to the hospital Monday. Tuesday he was given a blood transfusion. Wednesday he was operated on. Condition good but very, very weak—special day and night nurse. All is being done that hands can do. Remember us in your prayers." His brethren and friends everywhere will be very solicitous for the recovery of good Brother Andes, and earnest prayers will be offered that our heavenly Father will restore him to health and strength if it be the divine will.

The village of Elon College lost a highly esteemed and well-known citizen in the passing away of Mr. J. J. Lambeth from his home, Saturday afternoon, December 7th. Mr. Lambeth was a good citizen and a life-long friend and patron of Elon College, highly respected in his community and in the county. At the time of his death he was a member of the Public School Board of the county. He was a very loyal and faithful member of the Primitive Baptist Church and lived up to his convictions in his church relationship. The funeral was conducted by Elders O. J. Denny and J. W. Gilliam from the home on Sunday afternoon and the interment was in the Elon cemetery. Surviving deceased are one son, Hosea D. Lambeth, esteemed citizen of Elon and four sisters and two brothers, all of Guilford County. The bereaved family has our sympathy.

THE AFTERMATH OF SUDDEN DEATH.

By A. J. BRACKEN, in Reader's Digest.

After the sensation created by "—And Sudden Death," The Reader's Digest was bombarded by proffered "follow-ups." But we thought enough had been said. Then, from an embalmer in the village of Chappel, Nebraska, came the following. As in the case of the previous article, we caution the sensitive reader not to read too much of it.

Two o'clock in the morning. Is that the phone? There it goes again. I grope my way sleepily to it. Hello . . . yes, I understand . . . a wreck on the highway two miles east . . . We'll be right out. . . .

What a sight! One car, a new one, now a tangled heap of scrap off on one side of the road, shattered glass everywhere. The crowd has gathered and they have dug one body out and it lies a bloody, grotesque, twisted thing, under the pale light of the moon. Another lies groaning and mumbling, "My back is broken, I think." We lift him as gently as possible to the ambulance cot and hurry to the hospital. He dies two hours later calling for "Edith."

How did it happen? The report is they were trying to pass a car against a too close oncoming car. What does it matter! We go back for the dead body and in the operating room under the strong light we find that we have a job on hand trying to embalm this poor thing, to put it back together as best we can in an attempt to relieve the terrible heartache of those loved ones who will hasten to see him. What a mess! Ragged bones sticking out through torn coat sleeves, head crushed to a pulp. Can we make it look like a human being and resemble the fine strong young man that it was only an hour ago? It is just our job, and we're getting used to it.

Old Barleycorn.

Three little kiddies, poor little tykes, the oldest only seven. They hardly know what it is all about. This time it is a young mother returning home, with her husband and children, from a happy visit. Kiddies are playing in the back seat. Bang! Crash! a sickening twisting and tearing and it is all over.

Just two drunks in an old car coming over the top of the hill on the wrong side of the road, but what slaughter! We work feverishly all night attempting to place a new nose and one side of the face on this mangled body which has been the loving mother of these three small, helpless children, now in the hospital, two not expected to live.

We secure a recent picture of this mother and by long hours of patching and filling those mutilated features and showing the body under indirect light we keep from the loved ones the horrible picture of this mutilation.

The Lonely Pedestrian.

Such a freak. We found his arm, hanging on the latch of the car door, torn completely from the socket at the elbow. The mangled body lay doubled up in a ditch nearby.

Just an old man walking along in the dark on the wrong side of the road, the car coming over the brow of the hill, headlights shooting up. Not a chance of escaping it.

Endurance vs. Death.

Just three happy boys on their way across the country to Detroit. Constant driving, day and night, with a change at the wheel every four hours, but endurance lost, and we pick them up on the side of the road where they have crashed a telephone pole and overturned. Not an easy thing to telephone the poor father out on the Coast and inform him that the body of his boy lies in our mortuary.

A wig that matches his hair, plastic art and dermasurgery restore the body to almost lifelike appearance, but we cannot bring back that youthful smile or happy laugh which he carried when he left home. These are only memories to his loved ones.

Dangerous Corners.

We natives all knew that was a mean corner, properly marked with a turn sign, but such a sharp turn. To take it at more than 20 miles was unsafe. He must have been going at least 50. No one saw it happen. They found him with the car overturned, the sharp edge of the runningboard, where it joins the rear fender, resting on his head. Why do they always have their heads mashed up so? I wonder if this isn't the hope of every embalmer when he receives an auto accident call: "I hope the head is alright." They usually are not.

Such a great big fine fellow in the pink of health and prime of life. And his poor young wife. . . . We put her to bed when she arrives and try to make her comfortable until we can finish our work, so she will never know what he looked like when we found him.

A babe to come soon, who will never know a father except by tales which are told.

Dense Fog.

The lunch for school was in the back seat, the case of eggs for the grocer intact, but the beautiful life of a little schoolgirl was gone forever.

A foggy morning, a narrow brideg. The sharp splintered end of the bridge rail drove through the windshield and tore away one side of her face.

Poor little brother, who had been driving, how heartbroken and sorrowful. It was hard to see, and how was he to know that he should have pulled to the side of the road and stopped until the fog lifted, even though they were late for school?

Loose Gravel.

Not much to do this time. The whole thing was on fire when we arrived. We could see his tracks where he had come over the top of the hill and hit the loose gravel.

The warning sign was up so the Highway Department had fulfilled its duty, but there it lay where it had skidded and turned completely around and over. A twisted mass of hot iron, that fetid smell of burning flesh and a few bones to tell the tale.

How will we prepare these remains for burial? Well, how would you?

DISTINGUISHED VISITORS AT ELON COLLEGE.

The past week Dr. E. M. Halliday, Executive Secretary of the Home Boards for the United Church, visited Elon College and spoke at chapel Friday morning.

Dr. E. C. Gillette, Supt. for the United Church of Florida and Alabama, was likewise a visitor at the college and spoke at the eleven o'clock service Sunday morning. These brethren have both visited Elon College before. We are always glad to have them and others of the church who may find it convenient to come.

Ex-Governor Wm. E. Sweet of Colorado, now of Washington, D. C., is to visit the college, Monday, December 16th, and address the students and faculty. Mr. Sweet has been invited to arrive at the college on Sunday and speak at the eleven o'clock service. It is hoped that he will accept.

AN UNEXPECTED GIFT.

A check for $1,000.00, the donation of an elderly Negro laborer, who is a member of the First Congregational Church of Atlanta, Ga., was received Tuesday at the meeting of the administrative committee of the American Missionary Association of the Congregational and Christian Churches in New York City. The donor who wishes his name to be kept anonymous, attended in his youth Storr's School, an A. M. A. institution conducted at Atlanta from 1867 to 1905. Thrifty saving throughout his life made the gift possible.

President Thomas Elsa Jones of Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn., spoke at the meeting regarding plans for an endowment campaign for $3,000,000.

TWO EXECUTIVE POSITIONS COMBINED.

The Rev. Fred Leslie Brownlee on October 1st will assume general direction of the administration of the American Missionary Association work. The administration has been divided between two executive secretaries, Mr. Brownlee in charge of the department of missions and Dr. George Luther Cady in charge of the department of support. Dr. Cady retires at the conclusion of the present fiscal year, September 30th.

Mr. Brownlee began his service with the A. M. A. in 1920, at a time when the day for mission primary and secondary schols for Negroes was considered to have passed its zenith. He has devoted himself unceasingly to strengthening the Association's institutions of higher education. His policies have had the commendation and the financial backing of educational foundations, especially the General Education Board of the Rockefeller and the Julius Rosenwald Fund.

REV. FRED LESLIE BROWNLEE.

THE MOST IMPORTANT BOARD.

Paragraphs on the duties of church officers are a new feature of the 1936 Handbook.

To the board of deacons is ascribed a central place in the organization of the local church. The administrative responsibilities of the deacons, it is said, should include:

"It is the duty of the board of deacons to give counsel to the minister and the committees of the church and congregation concerning the forming and use of the program and policies of the church for the carrying on of its worship and its service. To effect this purpose the organization of the church should provide that the deacons shall be members of the administrative committee which has charge of both the material and spiritual interests of the church and its congregation.

"The deacons should always be represented upon the membership committees of the church.

"The deacons should be represented also by one or more of their number upon the missionary or benevolence committee, the committee on the church school or the religious education committee, and upon such other committees as have in charge important and continuing departments of the life and work of the church."

The importance given to the deacons coordinates with the viewpoint that the church first of all is a spiritual and not a business institution.

SEMINAR ON PERSONAL DEVOTIONAL LIFE.

The suggested daily Bible readings in The Handbook were prepared by the Seminar on Personal Devotional Life, one of the regional seminars which is sponsored by and collaborates with the Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life. The Seminar on Personal Devotional Life is composed of a group of ministers in the Northern and Southern California Conference.

Preparation of the 1937 Handbook daily Bible readings has already been started, the Dr. Clarence Rein Reidenbach of First Church, Oakland, being in charge, formerly of Holyoke, Mass.

The Rev. Ralph C. Waddell of Petaluma, is in charge of the manuscript for Daily Devotions No. 4. Dr. O. W. S. McCall of First Church, Berkeley, who was the Council lecturer at Seattle, 1931, a "Handbook Doctrine."

The Rev. Noel J. Breed of First Church, Stockton, is directing a study of organization of methods followed in the churches for organizing and conducting devotional groups.

A Southern California group headed by Dr. Edward C. Gaylord, Conference Superintendent, and Dr. Miles B. Fisher of La Canada are engaged in the preparation of a devotional publication booklet for devotional reading to be entitled, "A Guide to Living."

THE ALABAMA ANNUAL MEETING.

The sixth annual meeting of the Alabama Conference of Congregational and Christian Churches was held at Blackwoods Church, near Headland and Dothan, in the southeast corner of Alabama, thus making it more convenient for attendance by a larger delegation from south Alabama and west Florida.

Rev. A. Calvin Nelson had been on the field as pastor for two days. Rev. L. L. Stanley of Thorsby was moderator and kept business moving.

The conference topic was indicated by the question, "If Christ should come to Alabama and West Florida, what would be his reception?" Rev. E. W. Butler answered for the home, Pres. Ross Ensminger, of Southern Union College, for the school, Rev. George Penn for the drama, and Supt. F. P. Ensminger for politics.

Dr. Warren H. Denison, assistant secretary of the General Council, gave two appreciated addresses dealing with efficiency in church work and the duties of church officers, and led in a pastors' round table discussion.

Pres. Buell Gallagher, of Talladega, one of the seventeen on the Council for Social Action, outlined the work of that council.

Rev. Henry J. Bennett, American Board missionary at Tottori, Japan, since 1901, talked on "Japan Today." He jointly led in a discussion concerning world conditions today with Secretary Claud Nelson, and at the women's meeting, presided over by his sister, Mrs. F. P. Ensminger, talked on "The Women of Japan."

Secretary Nelson of the Southern office of the Fellowship of Reconciliation, comes from an old Virginia family which founded a town there. He is in an impressive line of ministers of the M. E. Church, South. He told what were Christian race relations and talked on the Ethiopian War. He has traveled in the troubled areas of Europe this last summer.

A number of pastors earnestly told how we might bring Christ into our living. Rev. A. R. VanCleave was chosen moderator and Rev. N. A. Long, assistant moderator for the coming year. Wadley will be the next place of meeting, on November 10, 11, 12, 1936.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE COMMITTEE ON THE SOUTHEAST.

Mr. Herbert D. Rugg, General News Editor of Congregational and Christian Churches, called attention, in THE SUN of last week, to a meeting of the Committee on the Southeast to be held at Duke University, Durham, N. C., on December 5th. It was the high privilege of THE SUN'S editor to be present and follow with deep interest the deliberations and discussions of this committee. It was purely advisory and was, of course, without judician or legislative authority. Its objective was to bring out into the open and discuss together the program and problems of our Congregational-Christian Churches of our Southern and also of our Southeastern Convention. These problems were presented, but were not solved, and only the wisdom of a united fellowship, unselfishly and divinely guided, can solve the momentous problems confronting us. The committee meeting at Durham was not large—ten in number —but representative of the wide and far-reaching interests of the various sections and servants of the Church.

Representing the Church Extension Boards was Dr. H. Shelton Smith of the Department of Religious Education of Duke University, a vice-president of the National Home Boards, who acted as convener and chairman of the meeting. Dr. Ernest M. Haliday, the general secretary of the Church Extension Boards was the recording secretary for the day, and Dr. Edwin C. Gillette, superintendent of the Southeast District, with maps and data, drew a vivid picture of our work and interests throughout the whole Southeast.

The American Missionary Association, which, as it was brought out in the meeting, spends around $500,000.00 a year, mostly for Negro education and church activities, was represented by its executive secretary, Rev. Fred L. Brownlee of New York, and by Dr. Wm. J. Faulkner, Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn.

Representing the Education Society and the Foundation for Education was Dr. T. M. Shepherd of Norwich, Conn., who is a member of the administrative committee and who gave much valuable information as to what the Education Society and Foundation had done and were seeking to do throughout the South and the whole country.

Representing the Executive Board of the Southern Convention were Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, president of the Southern Convention and also co-moderator of the General Council, Dr. L. E. Smith, president of Elon College and a member of the Executive Committee of the General Council, and J. O. Atkinson, Mission Secretary of the Southern Convention.

Among the most interesting items laid before the committee was that of the willingness and the desire of the American Missionary Association to turn over to the Church Extension Boards all matters pertaining to church building and church promotion throughout the Southeast, leaving the American Missionary Association to promote only the educational institutions and enterprises of the South. It was brought to light that, in what was formerly the district Congregational Churches for Negroes in the Southeast, there were some 16,000 members, and that in the distinct Christian Churches, composing the Afro-Christian Convention, there were some 30,000 church members, and that these two constituent elements of our fellowship had done very little in the matter of merging their work and their common interests. What can our united fellowships do and what should be done, not merely to unite these efforts but to carry forward, or assist in carrying forward, this vast work of righteousness and extending the kingdom of our Lord with and among our colored brethren?

And then the question of great moment is that of our higher educational institutions among both races here in the Southeast. There are a dozen or more colleges in our area and sponsored by us, looking to us for their very life and development. Elon College has been a center around which we here in North Carolina and Virginia in particular have gathered and from which has come the present leadership in pulpit and in pew. What can be done and what is the next step for further developing the great interest of this institution, helping to make it, along with the others, a source and a channel of prestige and power throughout the Southeast and the whole country?

And then since the Southern Convention is making a real contribution through indigenous church life and activity to the whole region in which it serves, how may this indigenous church life be developed and merged with all the church life and activities, not only of Virginia and the Carolinas, but throughout the Southeast? How may the Mission Board of the Southern Convention; the Church Extension Boards, with headquarters in New York, and the State Conferences in Georgia, Alabama, Florida, Louisiana, Tennessee and Kentucky, unite their work and efforts in building up throughout the Southeast the kingdom of our Lord as represented in our united fellowship?

These were some of the pictures presented to us in the meeting led by Dr. H. Shelton Smith, who managed as chairman to keep the committee, representing such varied interests of the church, driving away through the whole day session at these and similar problems which constitute our common task under the terms and implications of our merger. We have merged in theory and in intellect. We are yet to continue the task of merging practically and spiritually, and this is no small undertaking, as no undertaking is small which has as its objective, making the kingdoms of this earth the kingdom of our Lord and His Christ. We shall hear more in the days to come of the pictures and the problems that this first meeting of the committee of the Southeast faces and will attempt to lay before our corporate bodies.

THE THREE MAKE ONE.

History and philosophy tell us, have been telling us for a century or more, that three distinct contributions have been made to our thinking and to our civilization. Of these three, the Greeks made the first—"Know Thyself." The Greeks were the scholars of antiquity, and in fact yet remain the leading intellectual lights of the world. They gave us learning, logic and philosophy, beyond which the world has not yet gone for pure intellectual power and achievement. Modern scholarship has not surpassed, if reached, the intellectual peak reached by such men as Socrates, Plato, Aristotle. These and their kind, who made Athens the intellectual center of its day and the world, united in saying that man's salvation depended upon "Know Thyself." This was drilled into the head of this writer when he was a student of Greek in college, so that the Greek words which convey this meaning are even more familiar to him today than are these English words which our SUN type compels us to use.

And then in those days when the editor was being led by his Latin teacher through the maze of Roman reading, the one topic emphasized was, "Control Thyself." On that foundation the city and nation of ancient Rome, under the military leadership of the Cæsars, and the statesmanship of Cicero, and the literary and poetic power of Vergil, came to be the lawmakers of the world, using as their slogan, "Control Thyself." No nation, no people, no person, could control others until first of all they could control themselves. This was the philosophy of force and of power. And so the Romans made their immortal contribution to the world's thinking on the basis of "Control Thyself."

And then Lord Christ came into the world. He came not with the blaze of intellectual light and learning, nor the sound of trumpet and oratory, but with that immortal philosophy, "Deny Thyself." This was, indeed, a new element in the thinking of the world and in the conduct of mankind, and the people of His day could not understand Him and so they crucified Him and thought to put him out of the way. But in His death as in His life, He spoke the words that can never die, which words are vital in our thinking and in our life, if we are to think straight and live truly. "Whosoever would save his life, must lose it; and whosoever shall lose his life for myself and the gospel, shall find it." Or, "if any man will come after me, let him deny himself." There you are. It stands at the very heart of all that is essential in Christianity and in civilization. "Deny Thyself." "He that would be greatest shall be least; and he that would be master among you shall be servant of all." He that serves most and best is greatest in the kingdom of our Lord.

NATION-WIDE WEEK OF PRAYER.

The churches of our constituency, with the entire family of CHRISTIAN SUN readers, will certainly do well to take note of, and when the time comes, to observe, the Nation-Wide Week of Prayer for the Churches. The date is January 6th-12th. The program is prepared and issued by the Department of Evanglism of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. It appears to the editor of THE SUN as a very worthwhile and commendable program.

The topic of prayer, song meditation and worship for the first day, January 6th, is "For Ourselves." This service opens with that familiar and ever-living verse from Scripture: "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; they shall walk, and not faint." The Scripture reading, as indicated on the program, and the hymns suggested for use are exceedingly timely. What could be more appropriate at the beginning of the first full week of the year than for churches and groups in churches to come together for a half-hour or an hour and at the appointed place of prayer wait upon the Lord, that there may be renewal of strength for burdens that will come and tasks that must be faced during the new year?

The second day of worship and meditation has as its topic: "For Our Homes." The call to prayer on this day is given in these words: "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." The Scripture selections in this part of the program seem exceedingly apropos, having to do with the family as foundation and as center of our individual and social life.

The topic the third day is, "For Our Churches." "Let the words of our mouths and the meditations of our hearts, be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, our strength, and our Redeemer."

Surely the time is ripe for prayer in our churches, for our churches, for they are the source and the foundation of our spiritual life and activity. It really seems that every church could come together once a year at least and spend a brief season in prayer for the church which our Lord Himself founded and of which He is the spiritual Body and Head.

The fourth day topic of prayer: "For the World Mission of Christianity." "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." The Scripture reading and the songs for the service of this fourth day all lead in the direction of exalting our Lord and honoring that Name which is above every name, which is given for the salvation of all peoples everywhere, who know Him and seek to do His will.

The topic for the fifth day is, "For Our Own Nation," the call being based on the words: "If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land." How sorely the Christian forces of this nation need, with the beginning of another year, to spend a season in prayer and worship for our distressed and chaotic nation.

The topic the sixth day is, "For Every People." "But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you; and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth." If our prayers are to reach our Father and have His blessing, they must certainly be offered in the spirit of love for all His people everywhere.

The topic of the closing day, Sunday, January 12th, is: "For Light on the Way Ahead." "Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near." Surely, we need light, divine light, in which to walk during the new year. Every church and every church member will certainly do well to assemble on this day appointed and pray to our heavenly Father for that light "which lighteth every man that cometh into the world." It is devoutly hoped that there will be full observance of the Week of Prayer throughout our fellowship, joining with the other churches of all fellowships in a united petition to our heavenly Father.

The programs may be had at 3 cents a single copy, 50 copies or more 2 cents a copy, 100 copies or more $1.50 per 100, postpaid, by addressing orders to the Department of Evangelism, 105 East 22nd Street, New York City. Even if your church, good reader, does not observe the week publicly, the program is worth one hundred times its price, and may be read and used with profit by an individual or the family.

A PREACHER'S DREAM.

The Prophet Joel declared a long time ago that the time would come when "your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions." One of our beloved veterans, a retired minister, writes to me thus of a dream:

"You will pardon me for telling you a dream I had when I fell asleep reading one night recently.

"In my dream, I took a journey and passed a church. On the top of the church I saw a little devil, evidently having nothing to do. As I went further on my way, I came to another church surrounded by a lot of big devils all in tremendous excitement. I stopped and asked the biggest devil what it was all about, and this was what he said:

" 'Back yonder where you saw the little devil, the church members are asleep, and one little devil is enough to watch them. But in this place there is a revival, and a lot of people have repented and want to join the church, and we are going to head them off.'

"And I said, 'How do you do it?'

" 'Well,' he said, 'we persuade them that the church is no good because there are hypocrites in it. We tell them a man can be a good Christian outside the church and avoid the responsibilities, and anyhow we tell them there is no necessity for joining the church now.'

"Then I told him there was no hypocrite in the church as big as he, and nowhere in the world, so big a liar.

"He got mad, and we were about to have a fracas, when my wife punched my ribs, waked me up and said I was snoring like a locomotive."

PIEDMONT COLLEGE HOME COMING

Homecoming Day for Piedmont College Alumni and former students is held annually on Thanksgiving Day. This was the greatest homecoming in the history of the college. The Class of 1935 was almost entirely represented, as well as members from the preceding classes back to 1900.

The Piedmont College Football Lions defeated Western Carolina Teachers College with a score of 12-0.

Following the game, the annual Thanksgiving Banquet was held in the college dining hall. About 300 returning alumni and friends were guests of the College. Col. Clyde McClure of Toccoa was Toastmaster. A number of interesting speeches were given by class representatives and visitors, followed by the singing of the Alma Mater.

The closing event of the day was the play "The Grass Grows Red" by Armstrong, presented by the Debating teams in the College Auditorium.

A Story for the Children

THE ALMOST FORGOTTEN BASKET.

"Aren't you going?" called Horace and Anna, as they passed Marian's house carrying a heavy basket between them.

"Going where?" asked Marian.

"To the church with the Thanksgiving baskets," answered Anna.

"I forgot all about it," cried Marian, "but I'll ask Mother whether she can find anything for me to take," and away she flew to the house.

There was a hasty searching in pantry and cellar, but mother did not have many things that she could send. There was a new basket, however, and in it she put some apples and potatoes and a can of fruit, and with her burden, Marian hurried away to the church. On her way she met John; he had forgotten all about the baskets, too.

Marian told John, just as Anna and Horace had told her, and he went flying into the house to see what his mother could give him. But she was bathing the baby and could not stop, so his father gave him fifty cents and told him to buy something with it for the basket.

When John and Marian reached the church, busy teachers were hurrying about, putting the last things into the well-filled baskets that each class was to take to some poor family. "Oh, here's another basket!" cried some one joyfully, and in a minute they were explaining to Marian and to John that when they counted the baskets they found that they needed just one more basket, and now they had it. Extra bread and coffee and celery and butter, with some fruit and vegetables were packed into the basket, and then it was carried out with the other baskets and put into the big truck which was to take thankfulness into so many homes that day.

Two other children who had helped to fill John's and Mary's basket, now helped to carry it up the steps of a dreary, shabby house. In answer to their knock a ragged little girl opened the door, and how her eyes did shine when she saw that basket! Other children crowded round, and the tired mother came to add her thanks to those of the children. "Now we can have a Thanksgiving," they heard a little boy cry happily as they went down the steps.

"Just suppose Anna and Horace hadn't come along, and suppose that that basket had been forgotten! Wouldn't it have been dreadful?" whispered Marian to John.

"I tell you I'm glad it wasn't forgotten," said John. "I'll enjoy my own Thanksgiving more because we have helped to make a happy Thanksgiving for some one else."—L. P. McAroy in The Sunbeam.

The late Rev. A. C. Dixon, D. D., related on one occasion when leaving home he charged his young son "to take care of his mother." When he returned, Mrs. Dixon told him the nature of the prayer the lad had prayed that night when he left: "Dear Lord, please help and bless my daddy, and take good care of my sisters, but you do not need to mind about my mother, for I can take care of her myself, for daddy asked me to." We smile at a prayer like that, but in reality it is a revelation of what we often try to do. Some things we know we cannot unaided do, but there are others that we fancy we are well able to accomplish, and so long as we try to do any portion of God's work without his help we are doomed to failure. "Without me ye can do nothing." It is solemnly possible to be a theoretical believer and yet in practice and life be an atheist.—The Canadian Baptist.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Eastern Virginian Christian Missionary Association met in Forty-fourth Annual Session at Rosemont Christian Church, Tuesday, December 3, 1935. Rev. Robert Lee House presided over the session, and Rev. R. E. Brittle recorded the proceedings. Mr. B. D. Jones, Treasurer, could not be present on account of illness, but his report was submitted in proper form by Dr. John G. Truitt. About fifty members and delegates were present during the day. The total collection of membership fees amounted to $900.00.

The program included a devotional period by the writer; an inspirational address by the President, Rev. Robert Lee House, who discussed the work of the Association; a sermon by Dr. John G. Truitt, on "Jesus Before and After"; a chorus by the ministers; a vocal duet by Revs. J. F. Morgan and O. D. Poythress and a devotional service by Rev. Carl R. Key.

The Committee on Plans made a report recommending appropriations for Ocean View, Elm Avenue, Hopewell, Newport News and South Norfolk Christian Churches. These appropriations are to be applied on church debts.

The Rosemont church served a delicious lunch at the noon hour. The hot roast turkey, with all the delicious accessories, including the home made pies, provided the delegates and visitors with a bountiful meal. The next session of the Association will be held at Liberty Spring Christian Church. (The pastor reminded the Association that Suffolk is a suburb of Liberty Spring.)

It was stated at this session that the total raised by the Association since organization, amounts to $55,000.00. This money has been used in building new churches and developing others where help was needed. It has been a vital factor in the Home Mission work of the Eastern Virginia Conference, as well as in other Conferences when the Convention was included in the plans for the distribution of funds raised.

The writer was elected recording secretary of the Association in December, 1898, and has attended every annual session since that date. The annual meetings included two days for a number of years. In those days when the Annual Conference session lasted four days, the Sunday school convention two or three days and the Missionary Association two days, the delegates had time to study the problems and discuss the needs and plans for future development. Congregations often sing the old song, "Take Time to be Holy." It takes time to be holy, and it takes time to attend to the work of the annual church meetings. It takes time to do anything worthwhile. The church people have pauperized the church and its institutions by their unwillingness to take time for the Lord's work and the Kingdom of God. It is difficult to persuade delegates to attend the annual meetings of the various organizations of the denomination. Many ministers fail to attend all the annual sessions. Ministers and delegates begin returning home after the first day of annual Conference—and only a few remain for the closing session. Too busy to go—and too busy to stay. It is time to reverse these excuses. It will help the church to go forward when ministers and laymen are busy with their church meetings and cannot afford to miss an opening or closing session of an annual meeting. On time at the opening session and there until the final benediction is a good rule for all church members to follow.

If two hundred active laymen will attend the annual session of the Missionary Association every year, the membership will be doubled, and the funds will be increased in proportion to the attendance. There are many other churches, Sunday Schools, men and women who are able to have a membership in the Association. They should interest themselves in this good work and become members in 1936. Let's increase the membership one hundred per cent during the year 1936. The following officers were elected: Rev. J. F. Morgan, President; Rev. R. A. Whitten, Vice-President; Rev. R. E. Brittle, Recording Secretary; Rev. Joe French, Mission Secretary; Mr. B. D. Jones, Treasurer; Dr. John G. Truitt, Assistant Treasurer.

MISSIONS.

The word "missions" expresses the sum total of Christianity. In our handling of the church and of the problems of the kingdom, we, for the sake of convenience, I think, have endeavored to break up the church into different sections. We have proceeded at times to say that this part of the church's program is missionary and that other parts are not missionary, that the parts of the church's program which are not missionary have no claims whatsoever on the resources that may be gathered or possessed by that part of the church that we have designated as missionary.

We have divided our church membership into organizations. We have called certain organizations missionary, others we have called by other names, indicating that they are not missionary. Then in our zeal for the kingdom, we have gone so far as to divide what we have designated as missionary into divisions. We have called these divisions the Women's Division, the Young People's Division, the Children's Division, and the Men's Division. Then we have gone further and divided our missionary programs and designated one Foreign and one Home. These divisions of organization and program have undoubtedly been beneficial in the past and may have a value for the future, but scripturally speaking, the sum total of Christianity is missionary. The whole church is missionary.

In order to form an organization for the propagation of the gospel, intelligent leadership is necessary. In order to project into sections without Christ, comprehensive organizations are necessary. In order to carry out the purpose of these organizations within the church, capable leaders are required. There is not a Mission Board in existence today that would commission a missionary to any people anywhere who did not have definite and specific training for his task. The church is conscious of these facts, that is, it realizes the necessity of trained individuals for specific tasks. Consequently academies and colleges have been founded by the church for the specific purpose of training men and women for leadership in the life of the church itself. The founding of these academies and colleges were Christian efforts. They were the fruitage of holy ambitions and thorough consecration. The Christian Church founded Elon College that it might be the servant of the church and it is the servant of the church. This was a missionary project on the part of the church and has proven to be the most prolific step that the church has taken for the coming of the kingdom. Here our Christian workers for the local church, our ministers, and missionaries receive the beginning of their academic preparations and their ambitions for the coming of the kingdom have been accentuated. We build academies, schools, and colleges in India, China, and Japan. Today we call them missionary projects and we give our money for the support of them. They are spiritual walls in the field of Christian Education. We are correct entirely in designating them as missionary projects. Could our efforts in behalf of education in America be called less missionary than our efforts in behalf of education in other countries?

My contention is that the sum total of Christian effort in this world of ours is missionary and that the day has come when we should have a united church and a program dedicated to the one purpose of saving the world for Christ.

OUR SENIOR OAK IN AUTUMN.

(The larges tree on the Elon College Campus.)

Can there be anything more lovely than an autumn afternoon? Of course poets through the ages have chanted of their secret delight in beholding the season as it approaches maturity. One feels that autumn is rather melancholy, upon realizing that only death can follow such exquisite beauty.

Our college campus is one of the loveliest places autumn has visited. Here and there are trees decked out in their gaudy frocks of yellow, gold, red, orange, pale green and purple. As one gazes at autumn in all of its splendor, one reasons that Nature, as she was painting away, must have overturned her loveliest and most precious colors in big splotches on trees which have been green.

The ivy running along the campus wall has suddenly changed from dull, dark green to brighter colors. Just outside our campus are homes where children run and play. I love to look out and see front yards where leaves are falling, boys raking in these yards, girls picking up fallen fruits and nuts, all these sure signs of autumn.

One thing in all the surrounding beauty impresses me most of all. My discovery today was the Senior Oak, an old, old oak which is bent, yet in its autumn costume is the prettiest tree of the campus. I wanted to rest, so I lay under this great tree. Gazing up at its bent trunk, I fell to thinking, pondering over the cause of its bending.

A slight breeze causes a leaf to flutter to the ground, then a gust of wind rushed through the great branches. As I listened, I fancied that I heard a whisper, only faintly at first, but as it increased I seemed to distinguish words. I just sat as a mater of course and listened. No one was speaking to me; the tree seemed to be singing a solemn ballad, a story of its life. I could scarcely believe that this mighty oak had once been a tiny tree, and yet I could not doubt its simple words. This oak had seen the first building ever erected on our college campus. What a thrilling life to see a college grow; to see, to know each senior! Then I asked the question, why was it called our Senior Oak, and I thrilled at its answer:

"Since I have learned to hear the college hardships, to laugh with those who laugh and weep with those who weep; since I have come to hear the lovers' pleas—for I am acquainted with many a lover—since I have learned every senior by name; and since I take interest in everyone who comes here, I have been christened "The Senior Oak." Every freshman looks forward to having his picture made, as a senior, leaning on my trunk."

As queerly as this rustle had begun, so queerly did it cease. I aroused myself to reflect upon what I had heard.

I now knew that the great oak had reason to be bent. How many a weary student must have leaned his back upon this mighty trunk! To hear people's troubles means to be bent. The Oak stooped only to be nearer, to hear better.

Then, since our Senion Oak had sung to me, I softly sang a song I once learned about an old-oak tree, and I reverently breathed a prayer that our old oak might live to see many more seniors go out into this vast world.

Because I wished to know whether I had just imagined that the oak talked, or whether it really had talked, I asked one last question, "Do you enjoy autumn, too?" This time I could not be mistaken, for there came a loud rustle, and I'm sure the mighty Senior Oak replied, "Yes, I enjoy all of my Creator's tunes and seasons for He has been and is good to me."

THE CHRISTMAS FUND.

One of the outstanding facts in the field of our Congregational and Christian benevelences during the past few years has been the steadiness of the Christmas Fund of the Board of Ministerial Relief. When the Fund was started more than thirty years ago, it immediately struck a responsive chord in the hearts of our church people. Here was a means, direct, definite and economical, of alleviating distress and showing remembrance of, and gratitude for, faithful service. Consequently, during even the worst of the depression the Christmas Fund was maintained in a remarkable way.

The number of donors year by year remained more than six thousand and, as former contributors died or were unable to continue their gifts, others took their places. In the last three years 1,833 new donors have joined the host of faithful friends, hundreds of whom have been giving for ten, fifteen and even twenty-five years without a break. The result has been that the Christmas Fund has averaged $65,364 during the last fours and has never dropped below $60,000. Gifts to the Fund in 1934 came from every State in the Union but one, as well as from Hawaii, Puerto Rico, Cuba, Turkey and China.

On the rolls of the national and state Boards of Relief are nearly eight hundred families who must not be forgotten this Christmas, and last year Christmas checks were also sent to ninety-nine families of Congregational and Christian ministers not on the regular rolls, where during the year grave illness or unemployment had brought acute distress. These checks provided winter fuel, replaced worn-out stoves, bought winter blankets, warm clothing, shoes and overshoes, paid up accumulated bills, and cheered the hearts of those overwhelmed with the anxieties of life by the assurance that somebody was standing by.

Gifts for the Christmas Fund may be sent directly to The Congregational Board of Ministerial Relief, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York, or thru your church treasurer, or J. O. Atkinson, Chmn., Board Superannuation, Elon College, N. C.

A GOOD TIME TO PLAN.

During the Christmas holidays will be a fine time for the young people to plan to attend to the Leadership Training School held each summer at Elon College.

If the individual who wants to attend this school is not financially able, the church he or she belongs to should pay the fee, which is very small.

If the church does not have the money the young people, with the cooperation of the older ones, could sponsor some sort of a play, etc.

The churches of North Carolina and all states are in need of better trained leaders. Let's see if we (the people of Eastern N. C.) can improve this situation to a better percentage.

We want at least fifteen people from Eastern N. C. to attend the Leadership Training School next summer.

Happy Christmas to everybody.

MAYLON D. WATKINS, Supt. of Leadership Training, Eastern N. C. Youth Fellowship.

NEEDED: A RELIGIOUS BLEND.

After two years in Student Summer Service in the South, Malcolm White, the son of Hugh Vernon White of the American Board, philosophizes in this fashion:

"My attitude towards the religious situation in the South is the same as it was at the end of last year; except, perhaps, my feelings are more distinct and intense. The holiness element is utterly revolting to me. It seems a terrible degeneration to the worst elements of an uncivilized religion. And yet, the emotionalism of the religion will hold the people to the church in a way.

"The southerners are more emotional than intellectual. Hence, any religion which is at all successful with them must have a very strong emotional element. Our northern Congregational church is too intellectual to find any acceptance in toto in the south. And I don't think it wise to introduce a religion of cold intellectualism anywhere. Rather I believe that the religion of the South should be made intellectually respectable, and at the same time retain the enthusiasm, the emotionalism and the zeal, which is the dynamic of any living religion.

"If the extremes of the south and the north can be blended into a religion which has both, the ideal could be reached. We have a lesson to learn from the south—that religion should pervade our whole lives, and that we should be enthusiastic about it. The southerner, on the other hand, must make his religion up to date and compatible with modern science and other modern advances in knowledge."

SPIRITUAL VITALITY IN MISSIONS.

By the Rev. Wm. P. Schell, D. D., New York.

In the life of the Church, no cause has been more inspiring, none more uplifting, none as unselfish, none more heroic than the preaching of Jesus Christ to the world. It is a solemn thing to realize that when the foreign mission service of a Church prospers, the Church is blessed, and that whenever a Church is false to its world mission or disloyal to its missionaries, the spiritual life of the Church declines. We move forward into every worth-while service as we move forword with Him into His world.

There have been discouragements in the year that has just closed, and we would not hide them. Missionaries have lived and preached the Gospel in a world in upheaval; in the midst of an intense rising nationalism; in nations in some instances increasingly pagan and antireligious; in the face of growing skepticism, even in the home Church, as to the validity of Christianity; in the discouragements arising from the spiritual condition of the Church in the United States.

There have been discouragements—but it has been a year of encouragement and victory. Those who are closest to the enterprise and who live with it every day thank God for this victorious year in the mission field.

Let us begin by holding up the spiritual morale of the missionaries.

In their living and in their dying, we behold the best that the Church has to offer. They resent being placed on pedestals, they do not recognize themselves as heroic, but in all their work they reveal to the home Church the possibilities of a victorious life in Christ. One missionary in India wrote: "We have had many problems, many difficulties, always a shortage of funds and an inadequate staff, but in spite of this the work has gone on." This spirit of perseverance and hopefulness is also revealed by them when they come home on furlough.

As one who is not a missionary but who knows and loves them all, I hold up our missionaries as those who have gone out from our churches and we have basked in their reflected glory. Do not misjudge them, nor slander them. Do not allow yourselves to believe things about them that you know are not true. Why do they offer themselves as missionaries? Because of adventure, or for a "lark" or to teach mathematics? By no means. Nothing but a conviction that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, nothing but an abiding faith that He died on the cross to save the world, nothing but an unshaken assurance that He rose from the dead and is alive today can lead a man to leave his country, his home and everything life holds dear here and to bury himself in the jungles of Africa, or in the great cities of the Orient. Love of Jesus Christ sent them out and consecrated devotion to Him and His cross and His Gospel keep them out there. They do not ask for pity in their difficulties. But they do ask, and they have every right to ask, and to expect, our understanding sympathy, our prayers, our gifts and our love.—Missionary Review of the World.

BUILDING CHRISTIAN INTERNATIONALISTS.

By Miss D. P. Cushing.

Not alone is the American Junior College for Girls in Athens making a tremendous contribution to international good will, but it is breaking down class and racial differences in Greece, and is bringing a better understanding of Western Christianity, says Miss Annie E. Pinneo, head of the English Department in the American Girls' College, who has been an educator in the Near East since 1909.

Miss Pinneo was traveling in Europe when she learned of the need for a teacher in the mission school in Smyrna, Turkey. She volunteered to fill this post and did so until 1915. She came to the United States and was commissioned a regular missionary of the American Board. She returned to Greece in 1916 to teach in Athens. She has made a special study of the Faucett method of teaching English to foreign peoples and introduced it into the college at Athens. She has also majored in the teaching of phonetics.

Descendent of the French Huguenots, Miss Pinneo was born in Dayton, Ohio. She is a graduate of Oberlin College and following that studied at the New York Bible School, at the Emerson School of Oratory in Boston, at the Boston School for Social Workers, and did graduate work and summer school work at Oberlin and Brown University and the University of Washington.

It is impossible to talk about Miss Pinneo without talking about the American College for Girls, because she has completely identified herself with her work and her girls. English is of great importance in the Near East today, and is rapidly supplanting French as the international tongue. Therefore, the students in the American School are eager to learn it. This year saw the largest enrollment in the history of the school. Graduates are admitted to the junior or sophomore classes of such American colleges for women as Vassar, Wellesley, Smith, etc. The student body, while predominately Greek, has many Armenian girls, some from the refugee settlements, as well as a scattering of other nationalities, Russians, Jews, English, and even Americans.

Not long ago the girls entertained a group of seventy Turkish students from Istanbul, to the great surprise and pleasure of both hostesses and guests. "I can't believe they are Turks," exclaimed one of the Greek girls. Later on, a similar group of Greek students went to Turkey.

WORLD SERVICE MATERIALS FOR THE CHURCH SCHOOL.

Mexico: The Winter Theme.

All departments of our church schools are concentrating on Mexico as their special world friendship interest for the winter months. Every enrolled World Service School in the state will receive (or has received; the mailing date is January 2nd) its new materials dealing with our neighbor country to the south. These will bring best returns if used on four or five consecutive Sundays during January, February and March, even though there may be no more available than the fifteen or twenty minutes of the worship or assembly periods. Of course the school will want to make a financial gift in connection with this study and this may be to the Current Sunday School Project, Christian Centers in Mexico. The money so given will be used to support our denominational work in Mexico and will count on the apportionment of the church whether or not this item is specifically included on the church's project list.

These materials come from the Department of World Fellowship of the Congregational Education Society. The three publications are free to enrolled World Service Schools but may be secured by others for ten cents each. They are:

(1) Viva Mexico, a five session unit for primary groups by Mrs. Florence M. Taylor. This twenty-four page booklet will be used as regular lesson material by departments using the group graded lessons and by others as supplementary material for the group assembly for primary leaders.

(2) Let's Go To Mexico, a five-session unit for juniors by Miss Mildred C. Widber. This is a twenty-eight page booklet which is also being used both as group graded and world service material. In addition to stories and careful suggestions as to procedure, two pictures are printed which may be cut out, mounted, and used in the group.

(3) Getting Acquainted with Mexico, a set of four programs for intermediate and senior departments, prepared by Miss Mary D. Uline. These are short programs for young people to present as they are or to use as source material for programs which they may prepare themselves. The four insert folders present in brief but varied form some of the things we want to know about Mexico and her problems and about the work being carried on through the American Board by our own Congregational and Christian churches.

AN EXCUSE FOR CALLING.

Two Vermont pastors have chosen to take upon themselves the collecting and opening of the Cent-A-Meal Boxes in their parishes because of the contacts with the people which this makes possible. Their policy has been to place these boxes so far as possible with people who were not giving to missions and then to call every three months to see how the boxes—and the people—were coming along. They have discovered that this policy brings them into the homes where they most want to go and also supplies them with an opening for just the sort of conversation which they wish to carry on.—The Missionary Herald.

NEWS ITEMS OF SOCIETIES.

The Waverly Woman's Missionary Society has chosen for its president, Mrs. E. L. Gray and under her leadership we may expect great things. At their first meeting, plans were laid for the year with emphasis on the programs and attendance. On Nov 13th, they held a public program and invited the other missionary societies of the town. This proved to be a splendid program and a pleasant and profitable afternoon. The idea is a good one for other societies to adopt. Mrs. B. E. White is the secretary of this faithful group.

The Young People's Society of Mt. Carmel Christian Church has pledged themselves to be a wide-awake society during this year and a full year's work has been planned. On Sunday night, October 6th, the installation service was held and Rev. Elisha Bradshaw became the leader or superintendent and Miss Beatrice Joyner was elected reporter. Among the plans for the year was one which is very important that is to give four public programs during the year. On Nov. 3rd, a public candle-light service was given at the church which was very inspiring and impressive. These young people also made use of the travel library which was secured for this conference through Mrs. Garland Spratley, Young People's Superintendent. As a society they feel that it was very helpful to them and they highly recommended its use by other societies.

N. C. & VA. CHRISTIAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION MEETS.

On Tuesday, December 3, 1935, at Reidsville Christian Church, the Christian Missionary Association of the N. C. & Va. Conference, met and was presided over by Rev. G. C. Crutchfield. The pastor, Rev. J. L. Neese, conducted the morning devotional and Dr. C. H. Rowland led the devotional for the afternoon. Rev. W. T. Scott gave a report of our work at Winston-Salem. Rev. J. L. Neese spoke of the building addition started by the Reidsville Church. Appropriations were made for next year to Palm Street, Winston-Salem and Reidsville. It was also decided to put forth a special effort to secure new members since the need for funds is so great. Dr. S. C. Harrell of Durham, N. C., and Rev. W. E. Wisseman of Greensboro, made the two main addresses for the day: the one speaking on "The Home Mission Program of the Southern Convention," while the other emphasized "Building the Home Mission Fires in the Local Church." The Reidsville people surely must believe in eating, for Brother Neese and his good people surely did serve a fine dinner. The rest of the program consisted of business, reports and election of officers for next year, which resulted as follows: Pres., Rev. G. C. Crutchfield; Vice-Pres., Rev. M. T. Sorrell; Sec., Rev. W. T. Scott; Fin. Sec., Rev. B. J. Earp; Treas., Mrs. C. H. Rowland.

B. J. EARP.

A man who would have friendship with Jesus can never subside into complacency. Neither can he use that friendship, as it is to be feared we sometimes use the friendship of less compelling people, for the enrichment of his own comfort. But the friendship of Jesus awes our spirits, it challenges our intellects, it quickens our consciences. There is iron in his cross, there is iron in his covenant, there is friction in his evangel, there is a sharpening of the conscience, there is a sharpening, a brightening of the very faces of those to whom his fellowship is real. Iron sharpeneth iron; so a man sharpeneth the countenance of his friend.—Dr. F. W. Norwood.

Christian Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

Our Thanksgiving Offerings have been coming in very nicely. We have had some real surprises and then we have had some real disappointments. One hundred children to feed and care for—we need all the help we can get. The Thanksgiving season is the time we try to boost our offerings to get some surplus ahead for the lean months after Christmas when our income is always small. But the children generally eat more heartily and wear more clothes. All this takes money and our churches and Sunday schools are our main support. Some churches put forth a real effort and send in splendid offerings; others make no effort and of course the offerings are small. But the children are here. They are our orphan children God has suffered to be orphaned. We know not why. It may be to touch your heart and place a little more tenderness there. A little more sympathy there for the helpless child. One hundred of them.

How much have you contributed this year to help make life more comfortable for the little children in your Christian Orphanage? If the offering has been taken in your church and you did not have a part, mail your offering direct to us. We will give you credit for same.

Five churches came up as "Banner Churches" in this week's report. All churches that make an offering of as much as $50.00 get on the Banner List.

Our financial report carries us a little above the $14,000 mark. We are still a long way from our gial of $18,000 for the year. Are you going to see to it that we reach it? Four thousand to raise between now and the first of January. Let's reach the goal and everybody rejoice. Shout if you feel like it. We cannot shout if we fail. Let everybody help some. Mail us your personal checks. It will make us happy. We must reach the goal!

THE BEAUTIFUL GIFT.

What can a mother give her children
Greater today than this one great thing—
Faith in an old, sweet, beautiful story,
A star—a stable—a new-born King?

Shining faith in the young lad, Jesus.
Lover of high white things was He:
Jesus—straight as a Lebanon cedar;
Jesus—clean as the winds from the sea.

Faith in the young lad come to manhood;
Jesus, compassionate, tender and true—
Oh, my children—what more glorious
Gift in the world can I give to you?

Carry it high like a lamp in the larkness,
Hold it for warmth when the day is cold—
Keep it for joy when youth goes singing,
Clasp it for peace when you are old.

What can a mother give her children
More than a faith that will not dim?
Take it, my dear ones—hold it forever;
A lamp for a lifetime—faith in Him.

WISE MEN WORSHIP.

Christian Endeavor Topic for Dec. 22, 1935.

Scripture: Matt. 2:1-11.

Daily Bible Readings.

Mon.—The call to worship. Ps. 95:6-7.
Tues.—Private Worship. Matt. 6:6.
Wed.—Worship Christ. Matt. 2:11.
Thurs.—Family worship. Deut. 16:11
Fri.—Worship is joyful. Ps. 100:1, 2.
Sat.—Worship is communion. Matt. 18:19, 20.

This will be the Christmas program for your society. Many groups will have elaborate pageants, but many others will have a beautiful worship program telling in simple language of the birth of the Bethlehem Babe. The room for this meeting can be made very beautiful by banking the windows with evergreens and using lighted candles. Arrange the manger scene at the front of the room. A small flashlight placed in the manger and partly covered with hay will give a beautiful effect. Place a large star over the manger—it could be made more effective by lighting the star when the gifts are presented. Ask the Endeavorers the week before to bring to this service some gift wrapped in white paper—these gifts to be presented to needy families.

Instrumental Prelude—Medley of Christmas Carols.

Call to worship—

"Christians, lo, the star appeareth;
Lo, 'tis yet Messiah's day.
Still with tribute treasure-laden
Come the Wise-men on their way."

Hymn—"O Come, All Ye Faithful."
Scripture—Matthew 2:1-11.
Prayer.
Solo—"Silent Night, Holy Night."

Suggestions for Leader's Talk—

The East has given us a great heritage. Men of the East have taught us to worship. These men revealed their wisdom by their worship. The word "worship" means to ascribe worth. So the Wise-men were eager to find the Child, the Person, the Son of God, who was worthy of their worship. They did not seek in vain. Bringing their rich gifts from afar, they were more than rewarded for their quest. They found Him whom they sought.

Since the pilgrimage of the Wise-men to Bethlehem mankind has continued to worship. Some worship their family, some worship money or other material things; but wise men seek Jesus and worship Him. Down through the centuries men, women and children have turned toward this Divine Source of Light and Comfort. As the Wise-men worshipped Him eagerly and wholeheartedly, so may our worship manifest the marks of genuineness.

Male Trio—"We Three Kings of Orient Are." (The men in this trio, dressed in oriental costume, each bringing his gift, enter from the rear, and remain there while singing the first verse and the chorus. They come forward, one at a time, placing their gift at the foot of the manger, singing the second, third and fourth verses as solos, all joining in the chorus. They sing the fifth verse together.)

Hymn—"As With Gladness Men of Old." (Sing the first, second, and third verses. At the close of the third verse each person comes forward and places their gift at the foot of the manger.)

Leader—

"Where a life is spent in service
Walking where the Master trod,
There is scattered myrrh most frgrant,
For the blessed Christ of God.

"Whoso bears his brother's burden,
Whoso shares another's woe,
Brings his frankincense to Jesus
With the men of long ago.

"When we soothe earth's weary children,
Tending best the least of them,
'Tis the Lord Himself we worship, Bringing gold to Bethlehem."

—James A. Blaisdell.

Period of Meditation—(Close this with the singing of the last verse, "As With Gladness, Men of Old.")

Benediction.

(Note: This service may be more effective by using the story "The Other Wise Man" by Henry Van Dyke or "Why the Chimes Rang," by Raymond M. Alden.)

Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

EZRA TEACHING THE LAW OF GOD.

Lesson XI—December 15, 1935.

Golden Text: "Thy word have I laid up in my heart."—Psalm 119:11.

Lesson: Ezra 7:10; Nehemiah 8th Chapter.

The material side of Jerusalem was making good progress. The walls had been rebuilt, the Temple had been started, the homes of the Jews had been established, and the "depression" was about over, to use a modern expression. But Ezra and Nehemiah knew that the ultimate riches and ultimate security of a nation or a city did not lie in its material wealth, but in the character of its people. Thus it was that these men set about to build into the life of the people those qualities of life which would give stability to the new order of things. They set about to teach the word of God.

A Man Determined to Know the Word of God.

"Ezra set his heart to seek the law of Jehovah, and to do it, and to teach in Israel statutes and ordinances." Ezra wanted to know the Book. Indeed he determined—he set his heart—to know it. And to do it. The one is rather closely bound up with the other in a real way. It is a great thing to have a great passion and a great purpose to know the word of God. But one can never know the word of God in its fullest sense simply in an intellectual way. One may be able to recite the Bible by memory and yet not know it. One really knows it only as he does it. Obedience is the organ of spiritual knowledge. Jesus said "If any man hear my words and doeth them." In another place he says, "Whosoever shall do and teach them." Let every minister and every Sunday School teacher determine to know the word of God. It is well enough for Christian workers to know other books: it is imperative that they know The Book. There are many ministers and Christian workers who read almost everything else except the Bible. We need Ezras who set their hearts to know and to teach the law of Jehovah.

Teaching the Word of God.

The people desired to know more about the word of God. They gathered themselves together as one man in a broad place and asked Ezra to bring the "law of Moses" out to them. People still want to hear the word of God. There is still a place for the preaching of the word. As a matter of fact the average man goes to church because he wants to hear the word of God. He has a right to hear the word of God at church.

It appears that not only men and women, but young people and even children were present at the reading of the law. In any event "those that could understand" were there. And all the people were attentive unto the book of the law. The people gave heed to what was read, they were attentive to the reading of the word.

Ezra mounted a wooden pulpit, slightly elevated above the heads of the people, so that all could hear him. When he opened the book, all the people stood up, and gave thanks to God and worshipped him for the word.

Reading Distinctly.

"And they read in the book, in the law of God, distinctly." Alas, how few ministers and leaders of worship do this very important thing. It is not strange that members of the congregation give such little heed to the reading of the Scriptures in services of worship when one considers how poorly the Scriptures are read. And the way some leaders of large classes or superintendents of Sunday Schools read the lesson publicly is a joke, that is, if it were not a serious matter. Let everyone who is to read the word of God publicly see to it that he is familiar with it, that he knows how to pronounce the proper names, that he read it with at least a little bit of expression and feeling.

Giving the Sense.

Ezra and his helpers not only read the word; they gave the sense so that the people could understand the reading. The Bible has a message for the humblest, but there are helps to reading the Bible. The Ethiopian spoke and expressed sentiments of many sincere Christians when in reply to Philip's question, "Understandest what they readest?" he replied, "How can I except some man should guide me?" Acts 9. There is a place for a sympathetic interpretation of the Scriptures. Those who can give the sense, those who can put in our modern language the message of the Bible, are much needed today.

All the People Wept.

"For all the people wept when they heard the words of the law." It convicted them of sin and of righteousness and of judgment to come. One can go along complacently, so long as he does not come face to face with the word of God. But it is sharper than a two-edged sword and pierces to the deepest places of life, finds us out, reveals our sins, uncovers our shame, brings us face to face with the judgments of God. This is, of course, one of the advantages of Bible reading—it gives constant stimulus to nobler living. The same principle applies to attending services of worship. Whatever else a service or worship may do or not do, it almost unfailingly reveals a sense of inadequacy, and gives new impulse to new endeavor.

The Joy of the Lord is Your Strength.

The word of God begins with the law, but it ends with grace. It convicts us of sin, but it also convinces us that if we confess our sins he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.

The joy of the Lord—how often we miss or lose that joy. And yet it is one of the fruits of the Spirit. Sin, lack of self-surrender, lack of faith, cause us to lose the joy of the Lord which really ought to be our strength.

MALACHI FORETELLS A NEW DAY.

Lesson XII—December 22, 1935.

Golden Text: "Behold I send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me."—Mal. 3:1.

Lesson—Malachi 1:1—4:6.

The book of Malachi is the last book of the Old Testament. It is an interesting book. It is cast in dialogue form, and presents in the form of questions and answers God's charge against His chosen people, both priests and people. A careful reading of the book will show that its contents can be summed up under several headings: God's love for Israel; God's denunciation of the Priests; God's condemnation of idolatry and divorce; Coming Judgment; God's condemnation of unfaithful stewardship as represented by the tithe; God's reprimand of doubters; and God's appeal for obedience to the law of Moses. In practically every instance, the prophet represents God as asking questions and then answering them, as concerning the general subjects listed above. The lesson as printed deals only with a part of the third chapter, and these notes are based on that section only.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

1536 East Broad Street Richmond, Virginia

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy

MONDAY.

"WE NEED THE HEART OF THE GOSPEL."

"Thy word have I hid in my heart."—Psa. 119: 11.

In Christian service we need the very heart of the Gospel. The heart of the Gospel is an unqualified belief in God and in those portions of His Word that reveal Him, His love and his law. The Christian worker needs and must have this Gospel at his command, if he is to be ready to give help when it is needed, or his efforts will prove abortive.

Prayer.—Dear Father, make us ready in heart to give help wherever we may find the need. Send Thy Holy Spirit to tune our souls with the Infinite that we may do well in Thy sight, and know that we do well. Amen.

TUESDAY.

"IN TUNE WITH GOD."

"The spirit maketh intercession for the saints according to the will of God."—Romans 8: 27.

We have a beautiful illustration of the soul's harmony with God in the following story which comes to us from The King's Business.

As I travelled along late one evening, I heard the voice of a little boy calling me, and saying, "Mister, ain't you a preacher?" I told him I was, and he said, "Come to our house on the hillside, I believe my grandmother is dying." I followed the boy a few hundred yards and came to a log cabin in the midst of a grove of cedar trees. I made my way through the crowd gathered in the little cabin and soon stood by the bedside of an old woman who had passed her seventy-fifth year, and who lay dying. I soon discovered that she was entirely blind.

Kneeling at her bedside, I said, "My precious mother, you seem to be near the end: Are you prepared to go?"

She answered: "Sir, fifty years ago, in old Virginia, I gave my heart to God. Twenty-five years ago I buried, over yonder on the hillside, my dear, good husband; and for fifteen years I have been entirely blind. But, through all these years, since the day of my conversion, the strange, sweet peace of God has filled my heart. Yes, I am dying, but I am ready and more than willing to go. Thank God," she said, "I will soon be with my precious husband in a land where there is no more blindness, no suffering, no death forevermore."

I prayed with her, and then said to myself, "I will stay here till the end and see her die. I would rather see this old saint go home than to witness the coronation of a king, or all the barbaric splendor and glittering pagentry of a thousand empires."

The next day we laid her away beside her husband. I preached at her funeral, and related her last words to the great throng gathered there. Twenty-two souls were saved that summer afternoon. It was not the preacher's sermon, but the dying testimony of that dear old mother that God blessed in the salvation of all those precious souls.

Prayer.—Say the Lord's Prayer.

WEDNESDAY.

"PRAYER AND WORKING."

"The supplications of a righteous man availeth much in its working."—Jas. 5:16.

Great as is the mystery of prayer, it is understood that its secret lies in the cooperation of the Divine and human will. Paul said we are "laborers together with Him," "Co-workers with him." It is not that "He who works prays." Harmony with God's will goes deeper than that. If we lift our hearts high enough, we will meet a fuller, deeper, richer truth; we will learn that "he who prays, works," works even with the power of His word, and by the power of His spirit.

Prayer—Our dear Father,

Our faith is feeble, Thy light we'd see
Thou wilt uphold us if we look to Thee;
Thou knowest our weakness, and Thou dost care.

Life is so difficult, and 'neath its load
We bend and falter on the weary road,
Our Saviour, come Thou, our troubles share,
We lean on Thee in this our prayer.

And if Thou'lt come, we'll surely know
And feel Thy blessings of long ago,
Thy love and light our hearts will bear,
Upon the wings of earnest prayer.

Thy lamp has been so bright so long,
We'll know Thou'lt help our souls along,
We trust Thee now, for Thou dost hear,
Our lighted souls, this day in prayer.

Amen.

THURSDAY.

"NEAR TO HEAVEN."

"Behold, God is my salvation, I will trust and not be afraid."—Isa. 12:2.

In Pilgrim's Progress, John Bunyan tells us that when we get very near to heaven there is a very glorious land. It is a country of Beulah, whose air is so sweet and pleasant that we may solace ourselves there. There the birds sing and every day the flowers appear, at the close of the journey we shall realize that we are beyond the shadow of death or despair, and no longer shall see the doubting castles of the past.

It is in this land that we come near the new Jerusalem where we shall catch glimpses of those who are there and where we shall hear voices shouting, "Behold the salvation of the Lord cometh." The gates of paradise will open, and we shall see the glory of the Lord.

Prayer—Our Father, may each day bring us a little closer to heaven and closer to Thee. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"WILLING SPIRITS."

"And they came, every one whose heart stirred him up, and every one whom his spirit made willing, and brought Jehovah's offering."—Exodus 35:20-29.

There are many gifts that are not gifts. Hand-given gifts are not true gifts; only heart-given gifts are. When the spirit is not willing but holds back the gift, it may be passed over, but it is not really bestowed.

This is especially true of "Jehovah's offering,' gifts made to the work of Christ's church. The heavenly bookkeeper must make many sad discounts here, erasing from the ledger vast sums given under compulsion or from pride or merely from a sense of duty. They are not really Jehovah's offerings at all, for the heart has not been stirred up to give.

But the celestial bookkeeper has a happier side to his work. He reckons as Jehovah's offerings many a gift not made at all before the eyes of men because, though the spirit is willing and eager, the purse is empty. And there are many gifts, like those of the poor widow with her two mites, that are enormously multiplied as they are entered in the heavenly ledger.

Prayer—So may we, our Father, look to our hearts more than our purses when we give to Thee. In Christ's name. Amen.

"GOD-IGNORANT MEN."

"Pour out thy wrath upon the nations that know Thee not."—Psalm 79:1-7.

How angry is God with the nations that do not know Him and His laws of love and of justice! How He punishes them with war and poverty and sickness and fear and all misery! The vast weight of the world's woe, when analyzed, is nothing but willful ignorance of God.

Willful ignorance, it must be said, for each nation knows enough of God to save it from God's wrath if it is true to what it knows and seeks to know more. God has planted a conscience, a sense of right, in every man, even in lands as yet unreached by the story of the Redeemer.

And if we are God-ignorant men, though we live in a Christian land, God's anger is stretched out against us. Ignorance of His law is no excuse. All of us know enough to save us from God's wrath.

Prayer—May we be true, our Saviour, to what we know. Quicken the conscience we have, that we may have a keener conscience. Then shall we live in God's love indeed. Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

SUNDAY.

"FAITH AND PURITY."

"Holding the mystery of the faith in a pure conscience."—I Timothy 3:1-9.

Faith is a mystery indeed, as Paul says. We cannot see God. Christ has disappeared in the heavens. The Holy Spirit is a vague and mysterious personality to most of us.

But faith, though a mystery, is the greatest reality in the universe. Through faith we apprehend God. Through faith we trust in the atonement made by Christ. Faith places us under the wonderful power of the Holy Spirit. Faith leads us triumphantly through this life. Faith sets before us the joys of the heavenly home.

So that it is of supreme importance to obtain faith, and Paul tells us that the way to faith is through a pure conscience. A defiled life cannot believe in any but the lower things. If we can keep our conscience clean, we can live with God and Christ and the Holy Spirit, and receive the blessings that they alone can give.

Prayer—Lord, increase our faith! Lord, purify our souls! Amen.

WORDS FITLY SPOKEN.

By JOHN G. TRUITT.

"If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man."—Psalm 3:2.

This is our seventh message from the book of James, and as practical as James is, none can be more practical than this message found in the third chapter. As we have said before these words of James take on an added lustre on account of the fact that he was also the son of Mary,—son of the mother who knew how to ponder the things she saw and heard in her own heart. She was the mother who knew how not to say too much,—the mother whose son, Jesus, never spake guile. James learned much from his mother. We cannot tell how long mothers have been saying to their sons: "If you cannot say something good about a person, say nothing at all." It might have begun in Bethlehem!

I.

James says in this message: "The tongue is a little member, and boasteth great things." Language is great says James. Words are powerful. How powerful they are! The tongue is a little member, but large in its works,—'great things' it can surely boast of. "Kind words will never die, never die, never die." They live on, and on. Ugly words, and words unkind, likewise live long. They live long enough to burn and blight, and blister. An evil tongue is "set on fire of hell," says James. "It defileth the whole body." That is one side of the picture. Kind words, and words of mercy and love, and gentleness bless the whole body. And they bless everybody. They add to the common good.

Our text says, "If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man." Exactly,—have you ever considered what is the highest word of praise given a person when they pass on from the world to the world beyond? It is so common as to seem to be universally recognized as the one highest tribute, namely, "I never heard him speak an unkind word of anyone in my life." "If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man." He receives the highest compliment of his fellows.

It does not take money, talents, educations, social position, power or prestige to merit that compliment. None of us need be left out. "He never said an unkind word in his life." That is a goal worth beginning on today. If you make good from now on you will in all probability receive that tribute when you die, even though you can recall unkind words now which have already been said.

"Words are such mighty things, dear Lord,
May I so yielded be
That Christ who spake as never man,
May ever speak through me."

II.

James further says in this message, "The tongue can no man tame." That is a saying I have often thought of, and often meditated upon. Men have gone from America to some of the most backward tribes of Africa, found languages that were not much more than discordant, gutteral sounds, and a few awkward gestures. These missionaries have taken the untamed sounds and set them to a form and fashion, classified them, regulated them, molded and made them into a written language, bound them in their dictionaries, and outlined them in their grammars. They have, as it were, tamed them. Or again, they have gone into highly civilized countries like Japan and China, found their age-old languages strange, and difficult for themselves, and yet they have set diligently about the task of making those languages their own, and have succeeded. They have, as it were, tamed them. Or again, here is a tiny infant. Its mother has a tool known as language with which to work. It is far beyond the child. But in a short while the child takes the unruly words, sentences, and language of his mother and makes them his very own,—and that when he is still but a little more than a baby. He has tackled a giant and tamed him.

But that is not what James means. He means that no man can keep the tongue from putting words together which will give expression to that which is within the heart. If unkindness, and evil is within the tongue sometime, somewhere, somehow is going to let it out. It is an unruly member. It has never been tamed by man. "The tongue hath no man tamed." James is saying that of yourself, and by yourself you are helpless. You can put a rudder on ships, and you can teach birds to sing a tune, but you cannot tame the tongue. But God can! Get your help from above, says James. Look to God for strength, and God can and will give it.

III.

"The wisdom that is from above is pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits (if you open that door you will find a fragrance—pure, peaceable, gentle, easily entreated, full of mercy and good fruits) without partiality, and without hypocrisy." In other words James goes through his whole discussion of this matter telling us, warning us how terrible the tongue is: "Out of the same mouth proceedeth blessing and cursing," says he; and he adds, "My brethren, these things ought not to be." He tells us we can not tame the tongue. And then, he shows us the remedy,—"the wisdom that is from above." Let our prayers go up to God that he may tame our tongues.

"Let me no wrong or idle word
Unthinking say;
Set thou a seal upon my lips
Just for today."

Covet to have the wisdom which is from above within us. How good if we could write alongside our lives: Pure, Peaceable, Gentle, Easily Entreated, Full of Mercy, and Good Fruits, without Partiality, and without Hypocrisy. Those words can be written alongside the life of the Christ. Comradeship with the Christ will bring us nearer and nearer to them for ourselves. If we practice his presence, walk daily with him, fill our lives full of good deeds, and kind words; keep up the practice of private and personal worship of God; associate with high and holy ideals we shall then be able to enter whatever field or circumstance into which he may call us and always speak beautiful words expressive of the beauty which is within.

"If wisdom's ways you wisely seek,
Five things observe with care:
To whom you speak, of whom you speak,
And how, and when, and where."

Gratitude is the obverse side of forgiveness. An act of forgiveness is never complete in its results until it has quickened a response of gratitude in the one who is forgiven. But gratitude is not limited to the reaction of forgiveness. Gratitude is an attitude of heart and mind. It is doubtful whether a man is capable of forgiveness who has not in his soul the element of gratitude, and it is almost certain that the man who has never experienced gratitude will be incapable of exercising forgiveness.—*Edgar T. THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

The Messenger of the Lord.

"Behold I send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me." This prophecy found exact and literal fulfilment in the person and work of John the Baptist. John himself interpreted his ministry in the light of this prophecy. And Jesus also confirmed it. In answer to a question by the disciples in regard to the coming of Elijah, Jesus replied that Elijah had already come in the person of John the Baptist, who preceded a way for the Lord, and who made ready for His coming. Indeed one cannot but be impressed by the way in which Old Testament prophecies have been fulfilled. The explanation is simple. As Peter says, "for the prophecy came not in old time by the will of men; but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit." (Peter 2:21.)

Now this scripture ought to find fulfilment also in our lives. We ought to be messengers of the new covenant. We ought to be preparing the way of the Lord. We ought to be living and giving and serving in such a way that it will prepare for the coming of the Kingdom of God on earth. In olden times men made roads for the coming of the king. We are to be road-builders for our King, the Lord Jesus Christ. And in the work of road-building every man's work is important. Let no Christian minimize what he can do for the coming of the King.

The Day of Judgment.

The Hebrew people had long looked forward to the "day of the Lord" as they called it. They thought it would be a day when their enemies were laid low and when they would be exalted. Malachi, with the other prophets emphasized the fact that the "day of the Lord" would be a day of judgment. "Who can abide the day of His coming? and who shall stand when he appeareth?"

It is not going to be a very pleasant experience to stand before the Lord Jesus Christ and to be judged of Him. Nothing will be hid from Him. As the writer of Hebrews says "all things are open and naked unto the eyes of Him with whom we have to deal." It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God. Who can stand when He appeareth? Who can abide His coming? Only those who through faith believe on Him, for Jesus himself saith "He that heareth my word and believeth on Him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation (or judgment); but is passed from death unto life. John 5:24. Let no man play fast and loose with life. Be not deceived, God is not mocked. Every one of us must give an account of himself to God.

And so must nations. The principle holds here as elsewhere. Sometime Italy shall pay for her murderous policy towarad Ethiopia. The nations are still paying, and will pay for a long time for their sins in the World War. The Day of the Lord is a Day of Judgment.

The Changeless God.

"For I, Jehovah, change not." The same yesterday, today, and forever." In our world there is nothing so certain as change. But God changes not. Today as of old He hears the prayer of the penitent. Today as of old He gives grace to the humble. Today as of old His face is against them that do evil. Today as of old He makes the wrath of men to praise Him. Today as of old He sits in judgment upon men and nations. The God who was revealed in Jesus Christ is still the Christlike God. Wherefore let us come boldly unto the throne of grace that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of trouble.

Robbing God.

"Will a man rob God?" Of course not,—such a thing is preposterous. But God says that men will rob Him. And He is specific in his charges. They rob him when they withhold from him the tithe and their offerings. (Malachi 3:8.) And God goes on to say that because they had robbed him, the people had been cursed with a curse. And more. He dares them to put him to the test. "Prove me now herewith," says God. Pay your tithes, make your free-will offerings, and see if I will not open to you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it.

The compass of these notes will not permit an extended discussion of the tithe. Personally, the writer believes that it is the scriptural method of financing the Kingdom. As a student in college, working his way through school, and later thru the seminary, the writer has been a tither and more than a tither. Indeed during his school life, he often gave two-tenths to the work of the Church and the Kingdom. And even now his gifts run far beyond the tithe. This is said, not by way of boasting, but by way of personal testimony, and in order to give meaning to these comments on tithing. And with many others, the writer has found that by setting aside the consecrated portion, he has a deeper sense of stewardship for the remaining nine-tenths of his income. There are a number of specious arguments made against the tithe, but somehow or other the facts in the Scriptures are stubborn facts. Here as elsewhere, it is a question of faith and love. If any man wants to know, let him do. God dares us to put him to the test. One would like to know of those who having tried tithing, ever gave it up because they did not find that God was able to keep his word. To come down to frank facts, a great deal of the objection to tithing is downright selfishness and sin. Many good people are robbing God.

OBITUARIES

WHITTEN.

On Tuesday morning, November 12th, Mrs. Susie L. Whitten, wife of Rev. R. A. Whitten, pastor of the First Christian Church of Portsmouth, Va., passed from this life of pain and suffering into that eterual life of everlasting peace. Her patience and fortitude during the long months of suffering; her devotiou and sacrificial service in the interest of her church and the work of her Lord have set au example which might well be emulated by each of us. In the women's work of our church she will be greatly missed, and while we grieve her passing from our midst, we rejoice in the knowledge that she has entered into that "city foursquare" where there is "no pain, no death, no fears." We pray God's blessing on those left to mourn her absence.

MRS. J. C. ELLIS.

HOUGHTON.

J. F. Houghton departed this life November 24th at the age of 74 years. He leaves to mourn his departure two sons, four daughters, five grandchildren, one brother, two sisters and a host of relatives and friends.

He was greatly loved by all who knew him. He had been a member of the church for 56 years and was a consecrated Christian, faithful until death. Our loss is Heaven's gain. He lived for others. I was his pastor for some time and he was just like a father to me. He died suddenly Sunday morning, having been feeling fine the day before. He expected to go to church Sunday and had put his offering for that day in the envelope. He believed in doing his part by being present and praying and paying. He loved Jesus and His Church beyond expression.

Peace to the soul of a departed saint.

H. M. GRAY.

BROWN.

Whereas it hath pleased our Heavenly Father to remove by death from our community and church, Z. E. Brown, a faithful member and deacon, we offer the following resolutions:

1. That we submit without complaining to the will of Him who doeth all things well.

2. That we will cherish his memory and strive to carry on the work for which he loved and labored.

3. That we extend to the family our sympathy and prayers, and that we will strive together with them to meet him in that land where sorrow is unknown.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be written in our record, a copy sent to the family and one to The Christian Sun for publication.

LONG.

Mrs. Etta Jane Wilson Long, daughter of Silas J. and Myrtle Wilson was born January 15, 1911 and died Saturday, September 14, 1935, at twenty-four years, eight months and fourteen days of age.

At the age of twelve she joined Union Christian Church. In November, 1933, she married W. O. Long. One child born to them died at a few months of age in June, 1935.

Besides her husband and parents, she is survived by four brothers and seven sisters. Those who have known her but evidence the fact that she was always faithful to her duties. I visited her in her last sickness and found her patient and submissive, trusting in her Saviour and in this spirit she remained till the summons came to enter into the rest awaiting God's children.

The funeral and burial were at Union Church Cemetery Suuday afternoon, September 15, 1935. In the absence of her pastor, Rev. E. R. Harris of the Baptist Church conducted the service. A large crowd of sorrowing and sympathizing relatives and friends were present to pay a worthy tribute of love and respect to the memory of one who has been so faithful.

C. E. NEWMAN.

ATKINS.

James William Atkins, son of Henry and Elizabeth Atkins was born June 19, 1859 and died September 8, 1935 at the age of 76 years, 2 months and 20 days.

He was for many years a member of Union Christian Church. On January 10, 1897 he married Miss Sallie Gravitt, who died about eighteen years ago. To them were born ten children. Seven are living as follows: Walter, Harvey, Goochie, Guinnie, Melvin, Pabin, and Mrs. Pearl Nelson. One son died in infancy. Emory died in France in the World War and Alvin departed this life about twelve years ago.

On September 8, 1922, Brother Atkins married Miss Gertrude Tuck, who survives him. There was one son born to them, James Luther, who died in infancy.

Funeral and burial were at the town cemetery of Virgilina on Monday, September 9, 1935, conducted by the writer and assisted by Revs. Pettus and Moore of the M. E. Church.

A very large crowd was present. The floral offerings were numerous and lovely to gaze upon. I have known the deceased for thirty years. He was generous to those in need and one of the most useful men in a time of sickness or sorrow. He will be missed in his community.

C. E. NEWMAN.

UTLEY.

In the early morning of September 25, 1935, Rufus H. Utley of Raleigh, passed away. Had he lived until the 6th of December he would have been 77 years old. He had been twice married; his first wife who died years ago, was Miss Arabella Smith and was the mother of all his children. His second wife was Mrs. George Winston of Franklin county who died several years ago.

Mr. Utley left five children; one sister and two brothers.

In early life Mr. Utley joined Wake Chapel Christian Church and later he united with Wentworth Church at McCullers, N. C., where, for years he was a successful business man. Rigid honesty in all his business dealings was his policy, and the tenant on his farms attest his fair treatment and humane feelings in all his dealings with them. And this is true as to all his dealings with his fellowman. In his last hours his deep anxiety was that when he died no debt should remain unpaid. He was sick only two weeks and less than a month before passing he attended the Utley Reunion in Holly Springs.

The funeral was conducted by his pastor, Rev. Lee Johnson, and his body laid to rest in the church burying ground.

Mrs. Feltou was a kind-hearted and genial friend, thoughtful and prayerful in her life. She will be greatly missed.

Therefore, be it resolved:

First. That in the passing of Mrs. Felton, the members of the church will emulate her virtues and cherish her memory.

Second. That we extend to her family our heartfelt sympathy in this hour of trial and loss. May the Great Comforter be with them.

A Christmas Prayer

HENRY HALLAM TWEEDY

Lord, make my heart Thine inn!
Wide-open door; clean rushes on the floor;
Each lamp well trimmed and burning bright;
My table set for Thee on Christmas night—
No manger now awaits, if Thou wilt come
To grace this home!
All, all is Thine!
O Guest divine!
Lord, enter in!

Lord, make my mind Thy star!
A shining world that sees unfurled
Heaven's banners waving over Thee, its King,
And stops to listen while the angels sing!
So let me pause in all the rush and roar
Of passion seeking more;
Shine with Thy light
On Christmas night,
Thy flaming star!

Lord, make my life Thy song!
Help me to sing while anvils ring!
Let brain and body join Thee in Thy toil,
Till love and labor build God's city; foil
The lust and hate and selfishness and wrong
That spoils the song;
Till heaven's choirs
And pealing spires
Join in Thy carillon!

So would I keep Thy birthday, Lord;
Kneel at Thy feet with shepherds; greet
Thy coming with the Magis' wondrous gifts;
Enfold Thee, as Thy gracious mother lifts
Thee in her arms, the miracle of time,
God's gift sublime!
An inn, a star, a song—
All, all to Thee, belong,
O Guest adored!

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

"There is born to you this day in the city of David a Saviour, who is Christ the Lord."—Luke 2:11.

No CHRISTIAN SUN next week. Along with the rest of the world, we will be observing Christmas.

For hearts, if true and lowly,
The manger-cradles are,
Where comes the Christ-guest holy,
With love, the guiding Star.
—Anonymous.

"Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon His shoulder; and His name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace."—Isa. 9:6.

CHRISTIAN SUN readers have the rare privilege this Christmas of getting through the eyes and pen of Dr. Roy Helfenstein a very realistic background for their Christmas meditation and entertainment. See our editorial page.

"I have always thought of Christmas time, when it has come around, apart from the veneration due to its sacred name and origin—if anything belonging to it can be apart from that—as a good time, a kind, forgiving, charitable, pleasant time."—Charles Dickens.

Greetings, with the five happy faces of the Garman family (our missionaries in Japan), come from 12 Hachiyama, Shibuya, Tokyo, Japan, and read as follows: "United Greetings from Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Garman, Tokyo, Japan; M. Margaret Garman, Sendai, Japan; Philips L. Garman, Detroit, Mich.; Elizabeth A. Garman, Columbia, Ohio."

"And he sent them to Bethlehem, and said, Go and search diligently for the young child, and when ye have found him bring me word again, that I may come and worship him also." These are the words of wicked Herod, and thousands today, who have heard about the young Child, but do not accept Him as Lord and Saviour, take a part in Christmas activities and make believe that they are interested in Him.

Before another issue of THE SUN many of our splendid young people, leaders in the church of the future, will be in attendance at the Young People's Winter Conference of the Southeast at Winter Park, Florida, beginning December 27th. Rev. F. C. Lester, Secretary of the Board of Christian Education, and promoter of Young People's Work, has solicited and secured a large group and is leading them to this mecca of youth, and will join in conducting the program. We are sure SUN readers will get a full report of this meeting, which should be a source of inspiration and helpfulness throughout the Southeast.

Dr. Frederick Fagley, Secretary of the Department of Evangelism writes that "there are 6,282 churches in our Congregational-Christian fellowship. Of these 4,928 made a report of members received during the year 1934. The deplorable fact is that of this number reporting, 1,935 made the statement that for the full year not one member was received on confession of faith! This means that the Church schools of all these churches did not see one of their number become a member of the church; no member of the Young People's Society; no member of the community. Verily such things should not be! Where is our personal witness? Where is our effective preaching?"

Church union is the order of the day, and it is a heartening message that goes out to the world at this season that the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and the Methodist Protestant Church have, thru a committee from the three communions, completed the details of the program for uniting the eight million Methodists into one church after more than one hundred years of division and separation. The name chosen is "Methodist Church." The plan embraces about one-half of the world's communicant Methodists, along with a Sunday school enrollment of six millions and a "constituency" of over thirty millions. Although the word "Episcopal" is to be dropped, the Secretary of the Commission announces that the agreement is that the church shall be Episcopal in government and administration, and that the program, as drawn, declares: "The articles of religion shall be those historically held in common by the three uniting churches."

Dr. Wm. T. Ellis, world traveler and syndicated writer for hundreds of Sunday papers, helps to bring "The Little Town of Bethlehem" and the story of the Wise Men down out of the clouds of mysticism and uncertainey and make them realistic and vivid. Read the following from his comment in last Sunday's papers, and put it alongside of Dr. Helfenstein's editorial on page 4, and the reader will have a solid foundation on which to stand and shout "Merry Christmas to the whole world." Says Dr. Ellis: "I have traveled the road of the wise men. I mean that literally. The wise men really traveled a beaten path, an ancient highway, one of the oldest on earth. There is a geographical aspect of the Christmas story; and to understand it adds a new sense of reality to the nativity scene. Christmas is more than a sentiment or a spirit 'in the air.' It is a place-fact and a time-fact. It was a real inn with a real stable and a real manger to which the shepherds went in wonder. And it was a real Bethlehem to which the wise men were led by the star. The east from which they came was no misty fairyland of romance; but a geographical entity to which the traveler of today may penetrate."

FORGETTING THE PRINCE OF PEACE.

In this season of Peace to Men of Good Will there is every indication that leaders of European powers are willing to forget Justice and Right to impose a killing "pact" upon defenseless Ethiopia. They are about to award, from all indications, Mussolini whom only a few weeks ago they denounced as an unjust aggressor.

Why have they changed their views so soon? One senses that these European politicians are actuated by selfish motives; that they are but adding a new chapter to their long history of aggrandizement, seizure of territory, disregard of the rights of weaker nations, disregard of the rights of men. So it has been with England in her treatment of Ireland; so, too, with France in its treatment of those whose territory she wanted; so, too, is it with Italy in her quest for new territory.

Mussolini's entrance into war was denounced in unmistakable terms. Now Mussolini is to be awarded.

In Germany, Jews are persecuted because they are Jews. The Babe of Bethlehem was the Jewish son of a Jewish mother. In Germany Catholics and Protestants are persecuted because they adore Christ the King. The Nazis in this Christmas time are bent on taking the Babe of Bethlehem from His manger and driving Him away as Herod in the long ago drove Him into Egypt.

In Mexico, Christ is denied His manger and tyrants, unrebuked by those who profess Christ, are trying to tear Him from the tabernacled hearts of little children and their parents.—Baltimore Catholic Review.

"SILENT NIGHT" MUSIC WRITTEN BY AUSTRIAN CHRISTMAS EVE, 1818.

One of the most interesting stories connected with Christmas is the account of how the world-famous hymn "Silent Night, Holy Night," came to be written.

This beautiful hymn was composed in Oberndorf, Austria. The date, authorities tell us, was Christmas Eve, 1818. The words are a poem of which the pastor of the local church is said to have been the author. Wishing to have a new hymn with which to welcome the Christ Child to the world on Christmas, the pastor, the story says, called upon his friend, Franz Gruber, who was organist at the church, to set his poem to music. Gruber set to work on Christmas Eve, and completed the music in time to have it sung in the church that night.

The story of how this beautiful hymn first came to the attention of the outside world is also interesting. The organ in the church had broken down and a repairman come to Oberndorf to fix it. He was working on the organ on Christmas Eve, and heard the hymn "Silent Night, Holy Night" being rehearsed. Struck with the beauty of the hymn, he carried it home with him, and soon afterwards it spread to other parts of Europe and then to the world.—N. C. W. C. News Service.

AFRICA SPEAKS.

Yes, Africa is speaking in tones which even the deaf must hear! Too long we have not hearkened to the drums over Africa or to the mutterings of the people. These dwellers on the dark continent—too often we have despised them as ignorant and backward, seldom asked ourselves what factors inherent in the African scene delayed the advance of science and aided the bondage of witchcraft and superstition. But now Africa is speaking and all the world is listening—Africa, the continent to whose ancient culture the Pyramids, built five thousand years ago, bear silent testimony, as they lift their mighty bulk in passionless grandeur beside the endless desert; Africa, where Moses, who gave us the law of God and Euclid, who taught us the principles of measurement, were trained; Africa, where mighty Carthage long ago challenged for years the world supremacy of Rome, under whose skies Augustine, most brilliant of all the fathers of the Church, penned his "City of God," and which afforded sanctuary to the Infant Lord Himself when a ruthless dictator threatened a massacre of the innocents; Africa, once the garden of the world and the granary of Europe, whose northern cities fell first before the advancing barbarian hordes from northeastern Europe and then bowed to the onslaught of fanatical Islam; Agrica, wealthiest of all the continents in potential water-power, fertile beyond our imaginings, rich in ores and precious metals, abounding in wild life, upon whose hidden resources all Europe looks with envious eyes; Africa speaks!—Claris Edwin Silcox in The New Outlook of Toronto.

He came on the Board again in 1927, was re-elected in 1931 and according to the by-laws upon the expiration of his term at the time of the General Council meeting at Mt. ABOUT DR. CLARENCE H. WILSON.

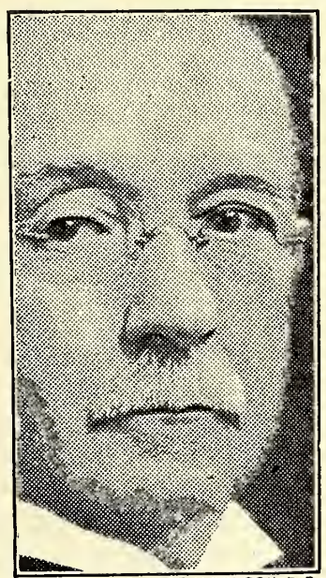
Satisfaction linked with sadness were the mingled feelings with which Dr. Clarence H. Wilson adjourned the meeting of the administrative committee of the Board of Ministerial Relief in New York City on Tuesday afternoon.

The meeting concluded his ninth year as chairman. He has served continuously on the Board or its administrative committee from 1919 to 1925 and from 1927 to the present. According to the by-laws he will not be eligible for membership again on the Board or its administrative committee for a biennium.

Dr. Wilson remarked with satisfaction concerning the increased resources of the Board since he became a member, concerning the raising of the Pilgrim Memorial Fund and the growth of the Annuity Fund for Ministers. But as he mentioned the letters which have been and are being received from old ministers, he noted with sadness "the pitiful little there is to give them in their need."



THE REV. CLARENCE H. WILSON, D.D.

Besides his service on the Board of Ministerial Relief, Dr. Wilson in 1925 was elected to a six-year term on the executive committee of the National Congregational Council. When in 1929 was formed the executive committee of the General Council of the Congregational and Christian Churches in advance of the completion of the merger in 1931, he became the first chairman of the united executive committee. In 1934 at Oberlin, Ohio, he was elected for six years again to the executive committee of the General Council. He is now chairman of the committee on arrangements for the meeting of the Council next June at Mt. Holyoke College, Massachusetts.

In 1927 he retired after an eighteen-year pastorate at Glen Ridge, N. J., and now lives in Boston, Mass. He was ad anterim pastor in 1929 at the Central Union Church, Honolulu, which with 1,547 members is the largest church in the Hawaiian Islands. In 1929 he prepared the daily Lenten meditations for "The Fellowship of Prayer" which is distributed to their members by thousands of churches in all denominations each year.

Since 1931 Dr. Wilson has been a non-Board member of the administrative committee of the Board of Ministerial Relief and his place will be filled at the annual meeting of the Board of Directors to be held during the Mid-Winter Meetings in January at Evanston, Ill.

GOOD REPORT ON CHRISTMAS FUND.

The contributions to the Christmas Fund of the Board of Ministerial Relief reached $49,279.14 on Monday, nine days before Christmas, Dr. Lewis T. Reed, general secretary of the Board announced. The amount is within $371.77 of the contributions at the corresponding day last year.

Fourteen persons were voted regular pension grants totalling $1,996 annually. Eleven deaths and grants relinquished or reduced by others were reported, releasing funds to the amount of $2,347 annually.

"THE CHRISTMAS ANGELS' MATIN."

On Sunday morning, December 22nd, at 6 A. M. in the Congregational-Christian Church, Winchester, Va., a unique Christmas service will be presented. The title is: "The Christmas Angels' Matin." It will be composed of music, drama and pageantry. The entire service will be made more effective by the candle and colored lighting arrangements to be used at this early morning hour. The service centers about a large art reproduction in the form of a Christmas scene 24 feet long and 9 feet high, which an art company has especially prepared for this production. The scenic background depicts the shepherds on a Judean hill watching their flocks outside of the City of Bethlehem, when suddenly, by lighting effects, the angels appear in the scene. This scene has been beautifully done in colors by the art company.

Part One includes a candle-light processional by the robed choir and an effective musical opening with Mrs. Ivan R. Smith singing "O Little Town of Bethlehem" while a special scene shows the silent city far away. In Part One Mary and Joseph make their appearance at the inn. Mary is Mrs. Albert Clark and Joseph is Marvin Seldon. The inn-keeper and wife will be Mr. and Mrs. Harry Seabright. The wise men are Loy Hook, E. W. Cather and T. W. Mathews. The shepherds are Clyde Sibert and John Spaid. A reading portraying the Christmas story will be given as these characters take their parts.

Part Two includes a unique feature called the "Living Christmas tree." This is a dramatic effect of pageantry and costume produced by 15 young ladies on a living Christmas tree which will be 10 feet high in the church auditorium. The "Living Christmas Tree" will be used several times throughout the service.

Soloists will be Margaret Richards, who will sing "While Shepherds Watched Their Flocks by Night," Philomena Larew, who will sing "Gesu Bambino" by Yon, and Mr. Scott Atkinson who will sing "In A Manger Lowly" by Daniels. Mr. Orville Hoover, L. Russell Cather and Robert McNally will also sing "We Three Kings of Orient Are."

The entire service will be interpreted with appropriate and effective musical numbers lending themselves to the scens. In Part Two, scenes will be reproduced in the large "Living Bible." These will be three in number: 1. "The Babe, Mary and Joseph"; 2. "The Arrival of the Shepherds"; and 3. "The Adoration of the Magi."

Part Three consists of a dramatic sermon reading entitled: "The Lost Word" written by Henry Van Dyke. Rev. Ivan R. Smith has adapted this presentation to sermon form of the dramatic type. Mr. Smith has placed his own emphasis and interpretation on this Christmas story, "The Lost Word" and will give it during the service.

A copy of Lerolle's famous painting "The Arvival of the Shepherds" will be given to each family attending this service. This is a splendid reproduction of the original, size 8 by 11 inches, suitable for framing.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

MY VISIT TO BETHLEHEM.

A Contributed Editorial by Dr. Roy C. Helfenstein.

[Dr. Roy. C. Helfenstein, who, immediately following his trip to the Holy Land, contributed several articles that were widely read and appreciated by Sun readers at the time, very appropriately contributes this very timely editorial which will bring all who read it a vivid picture of the place where Christmas was born, and will certainly add reality to our Christmas season and spirit. Every Sun reader will be more than repaid by reading at this Christmas time Dr. Helfenstein's vivid and realistic description of the "little town of Bethlehem."—J. O. A.]

During these days when our thoughts are so much concerned about Christmas, we are reminded that Christmas is the celebration of the greatest event in all history,—the birth of Jesus "the Christ child." Naturally the town in which Jesus was born has a peculiar interest to all His followers. The name of his birthplace in association with the anniversary of his birth makes the story of that great event itself a Christmas carol of joy and promise.

"When Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea in the days of Herod the King, Wise Men from the East came to Jerusalem saying, 'Where is he that is born King of the Jews for we have seen the star in the East and are come to worship him."

"And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flocks by night.

"And lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone around them; and they were sore afraid.

"And the angel said unto them, Fear not, for, behold I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

"For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.

"And this shall be a sign unto you; ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger.

"And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, 'Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good-will toward men.' "

As a lad, I often dreamed of the privilege of visiting the "Little Town of Bethlehem," the birthplace of the Christ-Child, so as to see the setting of the beautiful and wonderful Christmas story that stirred my childish imagination and thrilled my boyish heart. In my imagination as a boy, I pictured the Shepherd's Field, where David, the son of Jesse, had cared for his father's flocks, and where later other shepherds watching their flocks by night had heard the angel chorus announcing the birth of the Saviour. And when I grew to man's estate, my admiration for the Man of Galilee increased my desire to see the country that was his native land, and to visit the various towns and cities associated with his life and especially to visit the town that was made forever famous by reason of having been his birthplace. This is a natural desire of many people whose lives have been inspired by "The Manhood of the Master."

When I reached Jerusalem, I was anxious for the day to come when we would go to Bethlehem, not because of anything wonderful I expected to see there, such as had been fancied in my childish imagination, but because of the Wonderful Life that was born there, because of the fact that it was the setting of the Christmas Story, which means more to more people than any other story ever told, and because of the many sacred associations that cluster about the town of Bethlehem and its environs.

Bethlehem is the name of two different places in Palestine, but the Bethlehem of Judah is the one that is the place of Christmas interest. It is only four and a half miles from Jerusalem; lying due south of that ancient capital city of Israel on the main highway to Hebron. It is sixty-eight miles south of Nazareth, the distance that Joseph and Mary travelled on their way to Bethlehem from their home town of Nazareth. Ten or twelve miles a day travelling by donkey or camel was no doubt considered a good day's journey.

Early one morning, a group of us ministers and professors left the dormitory of the School of Oriental Research at Jerusalem to make our long-anticipated pilgrimage to this Christmas shrine.

Over the same hills, and across the same valleys that the ancient Magi travelled on their way to Bethlehem to find the Christ child on that first Christmas morning; and across the same landscape where the shepherds watched over their slumbering flocks the night they heard the glorious announcement of the Saviour's birth, we made our way in deep meditation to historic Bethlehem in its peaceful setting on a hill. We passed numerous landmarks of historic and traditional interest, such as "The well of the Magi," where caravans of camels stop to drink today just as they did 1900 years ago. A long caravan of camels had just finished drinking from the large stone watering trough when we arrived. It is called the "Well of the Magi" from the tradition that the Wise Men stopped here to drink and saw the reflection of the Star in the depth of the well. Along the road we also met numerous men and women riding their donkeys reminding us of that long ago when Joseph and Mary plodded along that same ancient thorofare.

While still some distance away the city came prominently into view. Close by to the east was the Shepherd's Field, and about thirty miles east we could see rising out of the basin of the Dead Sea, the highlands of Moab associated with Naomi and Ruth, an ancestress of the Christ-child. Coming nearer the city we passed by numerous terraced vineyards and orchards of olive trees.

We stopped on the high ridge near Bethlehem so that we could watch and talk through our interpreter to some shepherds with their herds of sheep and goats there where David's father Jesse pastured his sheep and where the boy David watched over his father's flocks. It was easy to imagine one of the older shepherds as Jesse, and one of the alert looking, bright-eyed, black-haired boys, perhaps fourteen years old, as the lad David. There they were with their shepherd staffs, and carrying around their girdle their slings and bags of little stones, dressed in the same kind of garb as Jesse and David wore, and employed at the same task on the same hillside where shepherds from Bethlehem have taken their herds through all the centuries,—the best grazing ground to be found anywhere in Palestine. The lad reminded me of how David must have looked when caring for his father's flocks. We saw many shepherd boys who thus reminded us of the boy David. A fine looking lad picked up one of the lambs in his arms to take a thorn from its foot. The expression of sympathy on the boy's face as he tried to relieve the lamb of its hurt reminded me of that other lad who had watched the shepherd boys upon that same hillside, who became the Shepherd of Mankind, anxious to relieve humanity from the hurt of wrongdoing.

When we drove slowly through the streets of Bethlehem up to the church of the Nativity, which is the center of the little city of about eight thousand population, we were made to realize that only reverence for the past makes the Bethlehem of today of interest. Most of the people in Bethlehem are adherents of the Christian faith, there being fewer Mohammedans there proportionately than in any other place of that size in Palestine. I was impressed with the fact that the people of Bethlehem seemed of a higher type than those found in other centers of population in Palestine. The men and women all seemed more industrious, more alert, and more substantial. There are fewer beggars in Bethlehem than are found in other places in Palestine. The stores and shops are better, and the clerks are more courteous. I wondered if there was not a close association between these facts and the fact that such a large majority of the people of Bethlehem are adherents to the Christian faith. Many of the girls and women of Bethlehem are engaged in the mother-of-pearl industry, carving by hand beautiful mother-of-pearl necklaces and numerous other artistic designs that are readily purchased by visitors.

In history, Bethlehem was associated with many notable characters of Bible days including the heroic Caleb. Ruth the Moabitess lived there after she married her second husband, Boaz. The shepherd lad, David, was born there and later became the King of Israel with his headquarters less than five miles away at Jerusalem. It was the memory of the well of his boyhood days at Bethlehem that made David long for a drink from its never-failing supply. But when three of his devoted men risked their lives in order to satisfy his desire, he refused to drink it, having reflected upon the selfishness of letting his men risk their lives to gratify his petty whim.

The Bethlehem of today is without question situated upon the same site there on the hill, near the Shepherd's Field, as was the Bethlehem of David's and of Jesus' day. It fits into the Bible picture of the location exactly.

In the second century, tradition located a cave as the place where Christ was born. Many eminent scholars believe that the tradition coincides with fact. Over this spot Helena, the mother of Constantine, had a church erected in the year 327 A. D., the oldest Christian Church in the world. This church still stands as a part of "The Church of the Nativity." It was interesting to visit this ancient church erected over a site where tradition declares the Christ-child was born.

In the crypt of this ancient church we saw what is called "The Chapel of the Nativity" supposed to mark the place where the baby Jesus was born. A few feet away and on a lower level we saw what is called "The Chapel of the Manger" in which is a marble manger, quite similar in shape and size to other sandstone mangers we saw in ancient homes of Palestine villages.

Justin Martyr in the 2nd Century and Jerome the great Latin scholar in the 4th Century, both made their homes in Bethlehem. Their writings confirm the tradition as to the site where Jesus was born. Naturally, his disciples from the earliest days of the Christian era would preserve at any cost so important a place associated with the life of their Lord.

There are numerous homes in Bethlehem and in other towns of Palestine which date back many centuries, and which are quite similar in structure and arrangements to the homes of Jesus' day. One we visited in Beeroth, twelve miles out of Jerusalem, is declared to date back to the first century before Christ.

The native homes in Palestine are built of stone or mud bricks, with a slightly domed-shaped roof of stone and clay mortar so as to drain all the water into the family cistern. The home for the animals, the poultry, and the family is all under one roof. A stone partition divides the animal section from the family and poultry section; the poultry having the ground floor of the family section, while the family live a few feet above on a mezzanine floor where the grain, hay, etc., for the animals is kept in one part, and the dried fruits and vegetables for the family in another. On the top of the house, reached by a narrow stone stairway, are the sleeping quarters for the family in the hot summer time. In some of the native Palestine homes, the family occupy both the ground floor and the mezzanine floor of that half, while the animals occupy the ground floor of the other half.

Along the division wall, on the animal side, about two feet above the ground floor and two feet below the mezzanine floor is always placed a manger neatly cut out of stone, about six or eight feet long, eighteen inches deep and perhaps two feet wide. And let it be understood that these homes, crude though they be, are kept cleaner than many homes in our own country with their modern conveniences. Instead of having beds to occupy the space on the floor of the family part, they have sleeping mats that are rolled up close to the wall in the daytime. There is very little furniture of any kind in the homes, hence very little housework for the women to do. Much of their time is occupied in carrying water for the household needs, and working in the fields.

The thing that appealed to me most in these native Palestinian homes which are so like the home in which Jesus was born and in which He was reared, was the stone manger that is always found on the animal side of every native Palestinian home, just over the division wall and about two feet lower than the floor on which the family lives. In deep meditation I stood by the mangers in several such homes, thinking of the manger so like them in that other home where Joseph and Mary were entertained the night before the first Christmas.

The tourist home of our own country holds the same place in our American life today that the Palestinian Inn did in the days of Joseph and Mary. Guests were accommodated when occasion arose, the family often being required to inconvenience themselves to make room for the guests.

There was naturally an unusually large number of people in Bethlehem that first Christmas Eve, as others like Joseph and Mary, had also come to town to take care of their taxes—that being the specified date for those who were to report at the Bethlehem office. All the "Inns" or tourist homes of the town were naturally crowded to their capacity at such a time. No doubt the manger in every inn of the village was occupied that night by guests or by some member of the family.

An eminent scholar of Palestinian life and history explained to us that the manger in the ancient Palestinian home, as today, was considered by many as a sort of special privilege for a good night's rest, and that guests at the inns often requested it, the same as some people today in our own country have preference for the sleeping porch in a tourist home.

I can easily understand why people in Palestine would have a preference for "the manger." It would be my choice of a place to sleep in if I were to spend a night in such a home. Kept immaculately clean as it always is, and filled with the short, soft, downey hay, the manger in the Palestinian home is really an inviting place to sleep. If offers more privacy than any other part of the home.

So the idea we have often received about the Innkeeper's uncivility to Joseph and Mary in refusing to make room for them in the Inn,—the family part of the home, is all wrong. Rather it was likely a courteous concession extended to Joseph and Mary, the landlord and his wife themselves perhaps giving up the manger to them and going on to the provision floor of the animal's part of the house, or sleeping on the ground floor of the family part, either place being much less desirable than the manger, which as previously stated was the preference of many, as I am sure it would be for me.

The Christmas story has a new and larger meaning to me since I visited Bethlehem, walking through its narrow streets, seeing into some of the homes and places where the people work, talking through our interpreter to them, and realizing that their life and customs were so familiar to Jesus—so like the life and customs of his day.

The Church of the Nativity in Bethlehem is naturally the chief place of interest to most tourists. But the town, its streets, its people and the country round about, so rich in sacred memories and in religious history, appealed to me most, and made my visit to Bethlehem an experience never to be forgotten. THE CHILD'S CONTRIBUTION.

Christmas joy centers about a Child. Not only is the central figure of Christmas a Child born in Bethlehem nearly two thousand years ago, but children of our homes and of the world. At this festivity we give first place to childhood. In fact it requires children to make Christmas. "A little child shall lead them" is nowhere so thoroughly verified and demonstrated as in putting on and celebrating Christmas. There is no other anniversary observed so universally, so elaborately and so joyfully as Christmas. There is not anything else like it. We let other anniversaries come to us—the birth of our nation, national heroes—and when they arrive, we get out some flags and oratory and honor the event. Not so at Christmas.

This is different. Days, weeks and months before the event, shops, warehouses, factories begin to fill up and display and make ready with wares and works sure to be in demand for the event. Then parents and grandparents, uncles and aunts, relatives and friends, bachelors and maidens, begin to prepare with presents and tokens of esteem and affection to be brought out or presented on Christmas day. The best that mothers with loving hearts can do, the most generous that fathers can offer, the most savory and inviting foods that skilled hands can prepare are all brought out and offered to make Christmas day a day of joy and gladness, indeed. Jew and Gentile, believer and non-believer, theist and atheist, the prisoner and the prison-keeper are all made aware of Christmas day with tokens of friendship, favor and love. The rich and the poor, the prince and the pauper, the widow and the orphan, all share in tokens of consideration and friendliness. The children verily have shown the world how to put on a holiday.

The day is not what it should be. It never has been that. Herod, the wicked man, as well as the Magi, the Wise Men, sought the Child on the first Christmas day, and from that day till this the wicked and the wise have mingled their efforts in making the day notable—the wicked to exploit and destroy and make believe; the wise to worship, to realize and to pour out their frankincense and myrrh. Thus, the wheat and the tares grow together, lest in uprooting the one, the other be destroyed. But the angel song heard on the Judean Hills still sounds in the ears and hearts of faithful and dutiful men and women—"Peace among men of goodwill."

Whether we accept the literal translation of the more poetic and "authorized," we shall still regard it the most beautiful anthem ever chanted, the most beautiful poem ever written.

Glory to God in the highest,
and on earth peace,
good will toward men.

CHRISTMAS.

The person who hasn't any "Christmas in his bones" should read Charles Dickens' Christmas Carols. The fact is we are not sure that one gets the full spirit of Christmas until one has read that immortal production. Many of us decide that in order to get ready for Christmas, we must do our Christmas shopping early, and a great deal of it, and keep on at it. This alone will not bring the Christmas spirit. Business and devotion to business, and absorption in business things, did not bring the Christmas spirit to old Scrooge. His business partner, old Marley, certainly and absolutely dead beyond all question for seven years—a fact which Dickens emphasizes and reiterates—had to come back as a ghost and rattle his chains in the apartment of old Scrooge on Christmas Eve to make him realize that Christmas is "no humbug.' It would possibly take more than one ghost, with clanking chains, to arouse the Christmas spirit in some of our modern minds and souls, and the sooner those ghosts come, the better. The greatest gift to this world was the Christ child. This is the supreme gift and in Him is revealed the spirit of giving to and for others. Our Father so loved us that He gave His only begotten Son for us. Shall we bear this in mind at this Christmas Season? Shall we seek to realize that it is a sweet and sacred season made so by and through giving? And then shall we, by reading in Matthew and in Luke, the story of the birth of our Lord, bring to our own hearts and lives those emotions and those joys that only come by contact with and in due reverence for the Divine? SUFFOLK LETTER.

Tonight as these lines are being written I am sitting under the glow of an electric light. Near by sits an electric stove and the Christmas cake is being cooked on the inside; an electric refrigerator is busy at its task of keeping food cool. So the electric light, the stove and the refrigerator get their power from the same copper wires—one light, the other heat, the other freezing. The same power—but used for different purposes and in different ways.

These electric household utensils teach a lesson of spiritual life. Other uses of electricity serve to illustrate some of the ideas that are vieing to get out of my mind and find their place on this writing paper. But these three suffice for the present. It is observed that the mechanical construction of an electrical device determines the practical power of the electric current. For that reason the lamp gives light, the stove gives heat and the refrigerator makes ice. The electric current is harnessed and adapted to the uses conceived in the mind of the inventor of these devices. The demonstration of power is conditioned upon the differences in mechanical instruments.

Electricity is the greatest power adapted to the mechanical inventions of this generation. Spiritual power is the greatest of all power within the reach of man. As the mind of man masters the great secrets and uses the unmeasured resources of the material world, so the soul of man has an opportunity to become related to the spiritual power of Omnipotence. Jesus said: "All power is given unto Me. . . " and "Greater works than these shall ye do because I go unto my Father." But the spiritual power of God is limited and measured on earth by the personal talents, character and consecration of man. The Gospel from the lips of Jesus transformed some people into ardent believers; others became unbelievers who thirsted for His blood and labored to nail Him to the cross. Steam and electricity obey the will of man when transmitted through material channels. The spiritual gifts of God come to man through human souls.

When Nicodemus sought to understand the secret of the power of Jesus he was told: "Ye must be born again." In other words Jesus indicated that human life must be linked, in a vital way, with the spiritual law of the Kingdom of God. The natural man cannot comprehend spiritual things, neither can the unregenerate man utilize the spiritual power of the Holy Spirit. This is a mechanistic age—it should become a spiritualistic era. This is a machine age; it should become a man's age. As long as this electric lamp, and stove and refrigerator respond to the urge of the electric current all goes well. If this connection is broken everything stops work. Nothing is more useless than a burnt out lamp bulb. Man reaches his lowest point of usefulness when he is unable to keep in touch with God. When the glow of spiritual love disappears the darkness and gloom of spiritual death enshrouds the soul of man.

It takes time to find God. The Lord's Day—the Sabbath—was given to man for that high and holy privilege. It takes searching to find Jesus Christ—the dynamic Redeemer of lost souls. Sunschools, churches and other organizations with open Bibles have been organized for that purpose. It takes prayer and consecration to unite the heart and soul with the infinite power of the Kingdom of God. Jesus said: "Ask and it shall be given you; seek and ye shall find; knock and it shall be opened unto you."

The church needs to find God and use His resources of power. If every member of the church will be as responsive to Divine power—as these instruments are to electric power—the church will take its place of victorious leadership and the nations of the earth will find a new impulse for better government. Get right with God and respond to His will to endue with power from on high.

COMMITTEE ON THE SOUTHEAST.

At the recent meeting of the Home Boards held in Providence, Rhode Island, a Committee representing the various departments and interests of our United Church was appointed. The Committee consists of Doctor H. Shelton Smith, Doctor Edwin C. Gillette, Doctor Ernest M. Halliday, representing the Extension Boards, Doctor William J. Faulkner, Reverend Fred Leslie Brownlee, representing the American Missionary Association, Doctor T. M. Shepherd, representing the Education Society and the Foundation for Education, Reverend Russell J. Clinchy, representing the Council for Social Action, Doctor Stanley C. Harrell, Doctor J. O. Atkinson, representing the Executive Board of the Southeast Convention, Doctor W. A. Harper, representing the Strategy Committee of the General Council, and a representative of the Afro-Christian Convention, who is yet to be appointed, according to the article in the December 5, 1935, issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. The writer of this article, though not a member of the committee, was invited to attend. Those present were Doctor T. M. Shepherd of Norwich, Connecticut, Doctor Fred Leslie Brownlee of New York, Doctor Ernest M Halliday of New York, Doctor Edwin C. Gillette of Jacksonville, Florida, Doctor H. Shelton Smith of Duke University, Doctor Stanley C. Harrell of Durham, Doctor J. O. Atkinson of Elon College, and Doctor William J. Faulkner of Nashville, Tennessee. The meeting was held Thursday, December 5th, at Duke University. Doctor H. Sheldon Smith convened the Committee, called for order. Prayer was offered by Dr. J. O. Atkinson. Doctor H. Sheldon Smith was elected permanent chairman and Doctor E. M. Halliday, secretary. The purpose of this Committee is to gather facts concerning the work of the United Church in the Southeast, to suggest plans and offer recommendations concerning future action.

Doctor E. C. Gillette was asked to give to the Committee a birds'-eye view of the whole field showing something of the activities and accomplishments of the United Church in this particular section. By the use of maps and statistics, some very informing and convincing facts were presented. Doctor Gillette stated that there might be discrepancies in the tabulations but that they represented the best information that he had been able to secure from the church annals and other printed matter. The number of churches, white and colored, were given according to states.

Virginia (It was stated that this item was very incomplete): white, 76; membership, 13,711; colored, 31; membership, 1,711; total church, 107; total, 15,422.

West Virginia: white, 8; membership, 600; total church, 8; total 600.

North Carolina: white, 129; membership, 16,-560; colored, 140; membership, 9,873; total church, 269; total, 26,533.

South Carolina: white, 2; membership, 133; colored, 2; membership, 223; total church, 4; total, 356.

Georgia: white, 33; membership, 2,758; colored, 16; membership, 1,274; total church, 49; total, 4,032.

Florida: white, 35; membership, 4,214; total church, 35; total, 4,214.

Alabama: white, 83; membership, 6,160; colored, 13; membership, 634; total church, 96; total, 6,794.

Mississippi: colored, 5; membership, 175; total church, 5; total, 175.

Louisiana: white, 13; membership, 735; colored, 17; membership, 1,049; total church, 30; total, 1,784.

Tennessee: white, 19; membership, 1,267; colored, 5; membership, 534; total church, 24; total, 1,801.

Kentucky: white, 5; membership, 444; colored, 2; membership, 361; total church, 7; total, 805.

GRAND TOTALS—

White, 403; membership, 46,682; colored, 271; membership, 15,834; total churches, 634; Grand Total, 62,516.

The report showed that for all missionary causes, $56,257 had been contributed during the past year, that for church support—that is for the support of the local church—$376,203 had been contributed, making a grand total of $432,460 contributed by the churches of the Southeast.

It was also stated by Doctor Brownlee that the Congregational Church Boards had been contributing for all church and school purposes in this area a total of approximately $500,000, all but $31,000 of which was contributed by the American Missionary Association, and this largely for the support of colored schools. In the Southeast it was revealed that there is one theological seminary, eleven colleges, four for white people and seven for colored people. There are ten academies and the writer does not recall the division of these as to race.

The presentation of the above facts give to the Committee a comprehensive idea of the strength of the United Church in our section both as to members and financial ability. It also presented to the Committee a fascinating task and at the same time the sense of a great responsibility. As we look at the figures, the most of us will be surprised to know that the United Church in the Southeast really represents as much strength as is indicated. At the same time, we are forced to look at the wide territory that our work covers. There are unlimited opportunities for development and substantial growth on all lines. The door is open to us and though it is open it will be difficult to enter. To take advantage of the opportunities that at present confront the United Church of the Southeast, leadership and money are required. If our church will invest in men and money in sufficient quantities, achievements for the Congregational-Christian Churches in this section will surpass the possibilities that confront us in almost any other section of the nation. We cannot take advantage of the opportunities that confront us without competent leadership. We cannot have competent leadership without adequate training. We cannot have adequate training that will produce church loyalty with the church's having a hand in the training. The colleges and academies established by the church in this section are our training grounds for leadership.

I cannot speak for our colored academies and colleges but I can speak for our colleges and academies for the training of our white leadership.

A Story for the Children

CABBAGES FOR CHRISTMAS.

By PRISCILLA HOLTON.

Seh Chong ran up the dormitory steps crying breathlessly, "My classmates, oh, my classmates, quickly, come."

All the fifth grade Juniors of that Mission Building School in China gathered around her.

"What is it?" Seh Chong's roommate begged, her own eyes sparkling. "Oh, Seh Chong, a letter from America?"

Seh Chong's brother had been studying there for two years. Often he sent back to China gifts for his sister from Cicily, a little American Junior. Cicily had told her friends about Seh Chong, and Seh Chong had told her classmates about Cicily and her Church School. Both groups felt well acquainted now.

Seh Chong, waving a slip of paper, found her voice finally.

"From Cicily's class," she gulped, "it's a check for ten American dollars. TEN."

The Juniors stared. No one spoke. No one could thing of words big enough to say what ten dollars meant to them. They waited.

Seh Chong's voice was quivering. "It's for us: for Christmas. To spend any way we choose. Ourselves!"

"O—H!" It was her roommate. "We could have the most beautiful feast in the world—for ten dollars."

"Ten American dollars means almost twenty, Chinese count."

What a feast they would buy. Mouths watered. thinking of tender roast duck; platters of fish with thick mushroom sauce; sweet pastry; cookies shaped like the moon; and fruit—piles of tangerines and persimmons; roasted peanuts, cooked in sugar—Oh!

"We could buy enough to share with the whole Junior High School. That would be generous."

"We could decorate the Hall, and surprise everyone."

Plans grew as big as mountains Seh Chong fondled the check.

"Afterwards," she said, "I'll write to Cicily, and tell her allabout it."

Her roommate happened to look at the bookcases where moth-eaten reading books leaned against one another. She swallowed before she spoke.

"I'm sort of sorry I suggested a feast. I—don't know that theyd like it, in America—knowing that we ate all that money."

"But it's ours, now,—and it's for Christmas."

"Besides, if we invite the others, that's sharing isn't it?"

"Mmmmm."

"Think what lots of books twenty dollars would buy, though."

That was a big thought, too. It began to grow, until a few minutes later, Seh Chong said, laughing, "Who cares—about roast duck and peanuts? Buying books for our school library will be more fun. We can decorate the Christmas tree with them. What a surprise!"

Since that was Saturday afternoon, the school girls were allowed to go out on the streets, shopping. As soon as the Juniors were ready, they walked sedately through the gate, to the main street of Foochow city. They wore school uniforms. For all they walked quietly, people turned to look, because these Christian girls seemed always so eager, their faces strangely radiant. The Juniors themselves scarcely noticed people; they were too busy, planning what books to buy.

"Did our secretary give you money for the check, Seh Chong?"

Seh Chong patted an inside pocket. "It's quite safe in here," she assured them. "I put it way at the bottom, and my handkerchief is on top, to be sure."

The streets were jammed with hurrying people. Now that the new pavement was being laid, the confusion was worse than ever. Shop fronts had been torn down to make room. Ricksha coolies had no place to run. As for the load carriers, trotting by with swinging baskets of vegetables that hung from their bamboo poles, there was no room on the streets for them now.

"Here is the Book Shop," Ser Chong's roommate was saying, "Oh, look!"

Of course Seh Chong turned.

"You of the empty hands, move." The voice was harsh. But it was too late. Seh Chong had bumped against a vender, and knocked over a whole basket of cabbages. They spun around on the dirty street.

"Oh, how sorry I am," Seh Chong started to say, and stopped then, her heart torn and hurt.

For the load carrier, whose basket she had upset, was a girl her own age—twelve years, perhaps. But she was as thin and haggard as an old woman. Her feet, though the day was cold, were bare, calloused from endless trotting. Her patched coat was only cotton. But worse than anything was the hardness in her voice. Seh Chong could only stare.

"Why do you knock over my cabbages?" The vender scolded loudly. "You have warm coats. You go to a good school. I must work hard to buy my rice. Can't you even look where you walk? All my cabbages—lost." The road was strewn with them.

Seh Chong's classmates, who had started into the shop came out again. Her roommate touched her arm. "Come, Seh Chong," she whispered. "This is a cross one: she will gather a crowd."

But Seh Chong had bent over to pick up the cabbages. She was thinking: "This is Christmas—and that girl doesn't even know it. She won't have feasts or books—or anything. She'll work that day, same as the rest." She had gathered three cabbages, before she heard the load carrier shriek more shrilly than before.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

SOAP AND THE BIBLE SAVED CHRISTIANITY.

There are few stories more amazing in the history of the expansion of Christianity in the islands of the sea than that told by A. M. Chirgwin in the July Quarterly of the World Dominion Movement.

It was Welsh Christian missionaries who more than a century ago braved the treacherous climate of Madagascar and the equally treacherous character of the Malagasy. Death from fevers never stopped the stream of witnesses of the cross. A friendly king had Christianity, a wondrous hold among the people. Then came the king's death. A new queen in Madagascar put herself at the head of a new nationalist government in 1835, with the avowed purpose of driving foreign religious influence from the land. A dramatic outdoor gathering of all the Malagasy people was ordered and amid great pomp and panoply Queen Ranovalona occupied a royal dais and the chief judge proclaimed the decree: "All people who have given heed to the foreigners and their teachings are to renounce them upon pain of death. It is one month from yonder sun of this day that I give you to confess."

But before banishing the missionaries the queen ordered them to make for her own use a quantity of soap which they had evidently introduced into the country and know how to make. This gave them a brief respite in which they determined not only to make the soap but to complete the translation and printing of the Bible.

The mission had a small printing press and David Jones had already translated certain parts of the Bible and his colleaugues had printed them off on their cumbrous hand-press. They now set themselves to the gigantic task of finishing the translation and printing the whole Bible in the four months left to them. It was a race against time. They toiled almost without cessation—some slept while others worked. By almost superhuman efforts, in June the first completed Bible came from the press, and when they quitted the island they left behind seventy complete Bibles and some thousands of New Testaments. The missionaries were gone, but the Bible remained.

Since the penalty of possessing the foreign books was death, the Christians hid the Bibles in their rice pits, beneath the floor, in hollow trees in the forest. One complete Bible was hidden between two great slabs of stone in a mountain cave used by smallpox patients. There, secretly at night, risking the danger of infection, Christians gathered and read in hushed voices portions from the Book.

Some were discovered and speared to death; others were betrayed and thrown from the rocks. For twenty-five years the persecution continued, and the full tale of those who were slain will never be known. But the number of Christians grew, and when the little band of Welsh and English missionaries returned on the death of the queen they found that the Church had increased five-fold.—Exchange.

GEORGE MERRIAM NEWELL.

(One of Our Missionaries.)

Training the kind of Christian young men that make business executives ask for more is part of the task of George M. Newell of Foochow, China, who works with a student body at Foochow Union High School which is made up of over 90 per cent country boys from poor homes who earn their education like students at Hampton Institute, by raising chickens, pigs and green stuff on the farm conducted by the school.

"Do you have 300 young men such as are trained in the Union High School at Foochow?" asked the Commissioner of Education of George W. Shepherd who heads up the Christian Rural Reconstruction work in Kiangsi Province. "No! There is only one school in China that is training that type of men and that is the Union High School in Foochow," replied Mr. Shepherd. The president of the Chinese Government University in Foochow asked for more students like those sent from Union High School.

Because of the practical nature of the work at this school a Chinese business man of Foochow, an official of the Electric Light Company, asked Mr. Newell to help in a village betterment project that he had started near the school. Mr. Newell was given complete freedom to set up the work with the wealthy Chinese executive supplying all the funds and giving his moral support. The story of what he did and how it is working out is the one that Mr. Newell is telling as he travels about the country on his present furlough.

The Newells have had many strenuous experiences during the past three or four years including the excitement of the Fukien rebellion when frequent bombings of Fochow wrought havoc. The Foochow Union High School is jointly supported by the American Board and the Methodist Board. Many other activities lay claim on Mr. Newell's attention including "The House By the Side of the Road," a social center community enterprise started by Mrs. Newell.

Mr. Newell is a graduate of Wesleyan University and Columbia University. He first went to China in 1904.

NEW LIVES IN A NEW LAND.

It seems fitting that Chinese who have come here to this new region from the older parts of China should become followers of the Lord Jesus, who came to make all things new. Alas that comparatively speaking so few of the thirty millions of Manchuria know of the Lord, but we rejoice to report that many are turning to Him. The writer is just now returning from a church organized last spring, and would pass on to others the joy he experienced yesterday when a good number were baptized. He enjoys a special privilege in that he is the only single person, Chinese or foreign, who has had the joy of seeing the work at all the twenty places where these past ten years people have been saved and organized into Baptist groups.

The work at Wuchimihe (Chuhehsien) was begun seven years ago, when a small room was rented as a preaching hall and an evangelist and his wife sent there. Among those led to the Lord during the second year was an opium smoker, who purchased a Bible, became a Christian and gave a house as a church building. An official gave a piece of land to the brethren there to be used as a Christian cemetery. A woman donated a piece of land in the mountains, returns of which are to be used for a support of a Christian day school. As the gospel has been preached, the Lord has given increase in numbers saved until now the church roll shows one hundred and forty, but the records in heaven show even more who have believed unto salvation, many having gone on to other places along with the drifting population of this new country before being baptized.

Of the church members who remain many have undergone great trial. The homes of some have been burned by bandits, the business of otheers ruined because of fighting and other conditions which forced many to leave and some have even been taken by bandits, but, thanks to a merciful Lord, the prayers of His servants were heard and these released. Among these people are real saints, tried and true. Nineteen earnest men and women were accepted for baptism yesterday, and five others were asked to continue their study of the Word. Only eighteen were baptized. The nephew of one man accepted for baptism died, so this brother could not come to the baptismal service because of grief. Among those baptized is a young man who works in the magistrate's office. We were told of how his colleagues made fun of him and reviled him, and of how he got on his knees in their presence and before the magistrate and prayed for them. The magistrate was impressed and hunted up the evangelist to express pride in the love and patience of this member of his staff.

This Church was organized in the spring of last year, just before their missionary pastor left for furlough, with a membership of ninety-nine. At the organization service the evangelist asked: "Whom shall we claim as a member of our group to complete the one hundred?" As the missionary is a member of the Harbin City Church and was soon to leave, he was presumptuous enough to suppose they might suggest him as an honorary member and complete the hundred, but simultaneously three called out: "Christ, our Lord!" And truly He is not only a member, but Head of this Church. Their love for Him was impressed upon me on this last trip, when at four-thirty in the morning they began coming for the daily five o'clock prayer meeting. One brother, who evidently misread the stars, came at three-thirty yesterday (Sunday) morning. There is perfect unity, fellowship and cooperation among them. The Holy Spirit dwells in them as a body and as individuals.

At the morning prayer meeting three chapters of the Bible are read in rotation, and a few comments made, only laymen conducting the service. Requests for prayer are limited to only a few each morning. The evangelist alternates with his laymen in conducting Sunday worship. There is preaching for the unsaved nearly every afternoon. The evangelist usually gives his mornings to visiting. On Monday and Friday nights there is a Bible class for enquirers and singing practice; Tuesday and Thursday night one for church members; Wednesday morning a Bible class for women, and prayer meeting at night. Mr. Liu, the evangelist, makes an effort to visit all homes of Christian families every Saturday. He has one afternoon Bible class weekly at the business house of one member, and two weekly at the place of business of another Christian.

Members of the Church, both men and women, help in preaching to the unsaved. Of the seventy members remaining, not including the eighteen baptized yesterday, twenty-five can lead public worship. The literacy of the Christians is five times that of the average population. Three members of the Church have become active workers and are employed elsewhere as evangelists, and three young people from this church are in school down in Shantung Province preparing for the ministry.

The Church will pay all its incidental expenses and part of the evangelists salary. With some help from evangelistic funds from abroad a gospel hall has just been rented on a main street, where the Word will be preached once or twice daily throughout the year to the numbers who come to town (a county seat) to transact business. Of the sixty thousand residents of the county, some six thousand are now Koreans. Most of these are in two villages near Wuchimihe. There is a Korean church in each of these, ministered to by a Korean Methodist pastor from Korea. A Korean Christian (Baptist) woman, who speaks Chinese and has just returned from attending classes in our Baptist Theological Seminary at Hwanghsien, Shantung, will be of assistance in preaching to Koreans also at the new gospel hall just rented and being put in fine shape for preaching to thousands of Chinese and Koreans who otherwise would not hear the gospel.

The progress of the gospel of our Lord at these places is a source of much encouragement to us; those who have made possible the work at such centers will not know the extent of the blessing of their financial support and prayers until we meet around the throne of God above with these whom He has redeemed through the death of His Son. PLANNING FOR CHRISTMAS—PLEASE.

As we plan Christmas this year, we are reminded of the article in "absent mindedness." In a large Northern City a group of Protestant boys and girls entertained a group of Jewish boys and girls. They planned as refreshments, lemonade and ham sandwiches. To their sorrow, the little Jewish friends very politely opened each sandwich and lifted the ham from between the bread. Then the sandwiches were eaten.

Last year there were about five hundred neatly wrapped toys sent here for little mountain children, from other parts of the country. These toys were not marked, consequently Mrs. Grissom had the delightful task of opening most of the toys so as to give balls and toy pistols to boys, and dolls and tea sets to girls. Please label articles sent this year.

We plan our programs December 20th-23rd. This is because our teachers, who are assisting in the programs, will be going home for Christmas. Please mail your remembrance before the 20th.

We have a new Sunday school this year. There is an enrollment of 107 in this new school. We are anxious that each of these be remembered with our other two Sunday schools. Please be as generous as possible in your gifts.

Thank you, we are your home mission workers,
MR. AND MRS. R. T. GRISSOM.

HOLY NECK SOCIETY.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Holy Neck Church gave their annual thank offering and public program at 11 o'clock Sunday, November 24th, under the direction of Mrs. E. T. Holland, their Spiritual Life Superintendent.

They used as their topic "What Christ Means to Me." Every member present took part in testifying for Christ and with sentence prayer.

Those taking special parts were: Mrs. J. J. Gommer, Mrs. N. G. Newman, Mrs. J. K. Jones, Mrs. Nelle Langston, Mrs. Clarence Saunders, Mrs. J. O. Davidson, Mrs. John Norfleet, Mrs. Mills March.

Miss Annie Thomas Parker in her clear, sweet voice sang "Jesus Is All the World to Me," and prayer was offered by Mrs. J. T. Rawls. The meeting was closed with Mizpah benediction.

MINISTERS' MEETING.

A very profitable session of the ministers of the N. C. & Va. Conference was held at Elon College on Monday, December 9th. This meeting of ministers was authorized by the last session of the Conference. The day was a decided success, many vital problems relating to the efficient functioning of our churches and pastors being discussed frankly and thoroughly. The most regrettable fact was that a number of our ministers were not present. Our churches will not go far until our ministry takes a bit more seriously and sacrificially their responsibilities as pastors.

The following ministers were present: Milard Stevens, of Happy Home Church; J. L. Neese of Reidsville and New Lebanon Churches; J. Everett Neese of Haw River, Carolina and Shallow Ford Churches; Dr. L. E. Smith of Elon College; W. E. Wisseman, First, Greensboro; B. J. Earp, Palm Street, Greensboro and Hines Chapel; G. C. Crutchfield, Berea and Bethlehem; H. E. Crutchfield, Ingram and Apple's Chapel; D. M. Spence, Salem Chapel, Belews Creek and Pleasant Ridge; Wm. T. Scott, United, Winston-Salem; Dr. W. C. Wicker, Pleasant Grove; Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, Durham; Dr. C. H. Rowland; Milo J. Sweet; J. O. Atkinson, Mission Secretary; Dr. G. O. Lankford; F. C. Lester, Norfolk, Va., and Dr. Edwin C. Gillette, Jacksonville, Regional Secretary Congregational-Christian Churches were welcome visitors.

Pastors, representing the following churches, were not present: M. T. Sorrell, Danville; Dr. P. H. Fleming, Union (N. C.) and Long's Chapel; J. F. Apple, Bethel and Mt. Zion; T. J. Green, Mt. Bethel and Kallam Grove; C. E. Newman, Union (Va.), Liberty, Hebron, Lebanon; Sanderson, Monticello; B. H. Watkins, Lynchburg; L. L. Wyrick, Concord and Howard's Chapel; John Chapman, Asheville.

The meeting was called to order by the Conference President, and Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, Conference Secretary, led the group in serious discussion of problems facing the local churches of the conference. At the outset Dr. Harrell stated that at the recent annual session of the conference, 36 out of the 40 churches of the conference reported; 37 made financial reports; and 17 reached the new budget in full.

Dr. Harrell led the group in the consideration of the following general subjects: "Conference Budget (or Apportionment)"; "Church Membership"; and "Evangelism."

Under "Conference Budget" he asked: "Does your church vote to approve (and accept) the Conference Apportionment?" It was brought out that most churches accept the apportionment as conference action but it is not studied and formally approved. It was the opinion of the group that the Apportionment should be studied by pastor and people, early action taken upon it, and plans put into effect for raising it in full.

Out of this discussion of Conference finances grew a consideration of the finances of the local church. Dr. Harrell asked: "In your local church (or churches) is there an Every Member Canvass?" "What provision is made for systematic giving?" Various plans for raising local funds were discussed, and the conclusion of the group was that we must "Spiritualize Our Finances," or we shall have continually to face the lack of funds.

The matter of special offerings for Convention and Conference Institutions was discussed and it was brought out that the opportunity to give these institutions—representing agencies of the Kingdom—was a spiritual venture and not a mere mechanical responsibility. One brother had this to say about money collected by the church for these institutions: "When money is contributed for a special cause the church is merely the agent, and the church has no more right to use or divert that money for other purposes than does a banker have the right to misappropriate funds coming through his hands." It was the opinion of a number of the pastors that the only way to keep the benevolent and missionary money from getting mixed up with Current Expense funds is to have the two funds separate and distinct. Some of the group had found two treasurers much better meet the need of the local church; one to handle church funds and the other to handle Benevolent and Mission funds.

Next, the local Church membership was discussed at length. Dr. Harrell asked the following questions: "What is done about members who do not attend? Who do not contribute? Who move away? Whose location is not known? Who get disgruntled?" It was brought out that the local church has a serious responsibility facing it with regard to inactive members; that the church sins when it neglects the nurture of the indifferent. The practice of some churches "dropping" members was severely condemned; also the practice of failure to keep accurate and up-to-date records of members. The matter of notifying pastors in places to which members move their residence was discussed and it was brought out that it is the Christian duty of every pastor and church to keep up with members in such a way as to notify pastors and churches in their localities of the change of residence of members.

Evangelism as a recruiting method was discussed. It was brought out that "Revivals" may or may not meet the Church's evangelistic needs. Dr. Harrell asked: "What is done to bring Sunday school members into the Church? What is done to reach the people in the community who have no church connection?" The group felt that the average local church had not faced its responsibility with regard to evangelism. It was suggested that pastors should know those who need to be reached for the Kingdom. Some of the pastors spoke of the great difficulty of doing this when they are responsible for three or four churches. This led to a brief discussion of the problem of "Grouping our Churches into pastorates," which must be honestly faced by our pastors and churches before the most adequate program can be carried out.

Rev. F. C. Lester spoke briefly on the possibilities of such a discussion of conference problems, and Dr. Edwin C. Gillette paid tribute to Dr. Harrell's leadership in the day's discussion. Dr. Gillette pronounced the benediction and the group adjourned feeling that much profit should come from the deliberations of the day.

FLORIDA HOLIDAY CONFERENCE.

December 27-29, 1935.

What could be nicer than a trip to Florida during your Christmas vacation? Why, one which would lead particularly to a young people's conference there, of course!

Nothing needs be said about the program, for the officers of the Southeast Youth Fellowship have provided a splendid one. However, we do want to urge you to come to Sunny (we hope!) Florida, where we will furnish you with plenty of fruit, flowers, and pep to last you through the cold winter after you return home. We are planning to show you some of Florida's many interesting spots and to have you know some of Florida's many interesting people.

We are waiting to greet you with open arms, so don't disappoint us and keep yourselves from a profitable conference and an interesting time!

"JOY TO THE WORLD."

After the heartbreak of a bitter year,
After the strange bewilderment of fear and doubt,
Tonight the world rekindles many a fire
That has burned out.

For is it not the birthright of a king?
We shall forget the burdens borne for long.
And there shall be new gladness in our hearts,
And in our song.

Joy to the world that long has needed joy;
"Joy to the world, the Lord is come," we sing,
And everywhere the hearts of people life,
Remembering.

And we will light our candles, hang our wreaths,
Preparing for a joyous holiday;
Then down the winding roadway of the years
We take our way.

To Bethlehem, where lies a new-born babe
Beneath the star-dust, filtering on a stall,
The whole world seeking, loving One who came To love us all. —Grace Noll Crowell

THE DESERT SHRINE.

The moon on the mesa is clear and white
As the Indians, each with a candle light,
Come to the Christmas feast.
They come from the desert far away
To worship the Christ on His natal day
As the wise men came from the east.

Sing in the land of the little rain,
Sing in the heavens above the plain
That Jesus is come to earth.
The Indians bear your angelic song,
Watching the stars the whole night long
For the message of Jesus' birth.

Peace on earth and a song in the air,
'Tis midnight, and far away
In their desert camp the Indians
Are waiting for Christmas Day.

Before a shrine in the desert
The worshipping Indians bow.
Long ago they prayed to the sun,
And prayed to the moon at night,
They chanted songs in the kiva
And sang until morning light,
But they bring their gifts to the desert shrine
And worship the Christ Child now.

WHEN CHRISTMAS COMES.

Have you any old grudge you would like to pay,
Any wrong laid up from a bygone day?
Gather them now and lay them away
When Christmas comes.

Hard thoughts are heavy to carry, my friend,
And life is short, from beginning to end;
Be kind to yourself, leave nothing to men
When Christmas comes.

MY HOPE FOR THE NEW YEAR.

Christian Endeavor Topic for Dec. 29, 1935.

Scripture: Rom. 8:28; I Peter 3:10-16.

Daily Bible Readings.

Mon.—To walk with God. Gen. 5:22-24; Heb. 11:5, 6.
Tues.—Comeliness. Prov. 16:7.
Wed.—Conviction. I Peter 3:15.
Thurs.—Courage in trial. I Peter 4:12, 13.
Fri.—Clear conscience. Acts 24:16.
Sat.—Good conversation. I Peter 1:15.

1936! A New Year! What does it hold in store for your Christian Endeavor Society? Will the close of the year, that is just beginning to dawn, find your society in the same old "rut," or will evidence show that you really had some hopes and that they materialized? There will be many goals your society will set for the New Year, much work will be accomplished; but it makes no difference how many spectauclar things are done—unless the spirit of the prayer meeting is carried over into the daily living of the individual member nothing is accomplished toward the building of a new person and the ultimate goal—a new world.

My Hopes for Myself—

Let us ask ourselves a few questions. What hope do I have for my own life this New Year? What would I like to have true of me a year from now? What kind of growth would I like to have take place in my own life? Certainly I should map out certain lines of endeavor. Perhaps there are faculties that need the benefit of daily discipline. "Doing one thing regularly, no matter how small it may be—doing it even when you don't feel like it, is known to be a wonderful character tonic. Indeed, there is a virtue in the regular doing that often farexceeds the virtue of the thing done." I may be able to cultivate some essential virtues and give them more prominent expression—friendship—be friendly with everyone; cheerfulness—be cheerful even if there are clouds in the sky; courtesy—at all times; loyalty—to myself, my church, my God; courage—I want to have the courage to meet life—it's failures as well as its victories. This year I want to deepen my spiritual life—to live so close to Him that in the quiet hour I will be able to really feel His presence. I want to live for Jesus, so that those with whom I come in daily contact will be inspired to a nobler, braved, higher life.

My Hopes for My Society—

At this meeting let us discuss some of the things our society needs. Does the weekly prayer meeting need to be improved? Are our leaders appointed in advance, and does the prayer meeting committee assist in the preparation of the program? Do we hold a pre-prayer service before each meeting, and does the meeting begin on time? What is our society accomplishing in missionary education? Do we hold a monthly missionary meeting? Does our society share in the missionary giving of our church? Is our lookout committee active? Is every young person in our Sunday school a member of our Christian Endeavor Society? Does the social committee arrange well-planned socials—socials that "save" the young people? This coming year let us encourage our members to live closer to the Christian Endeavor pledge, which, after all, is the heart of Christian Endeavor.

My Hopes for My Church—

In this New Year, I hope that the program of our church may be not only devotional, but also practical, that there may be wholesome activities for all groups. I hope that our young people will come to a realization of their responsibility to their church—that they may form a dependable nucleus for increasing church atetndance, and give of their service unselfishly. This coming year I hope that the quality of our church worship may be improved; that a true spirit of reverence will prevail in all phases of work—that in all our activities Christ may be preeminent.

—Mrs. W. B. W.

COMMITTEE ON SOUTHEAST.

These schools are all sorely in need of funds. Many of them need additional equipment. The most of them need funds for the payment of debts and all of them are sorely in need of increased endowments. It is hoped that with the presentation of this comprehensive picture of the United Church operating in the Southeast, revealing its possibilities and needs, that the strength of the church may be inclined to give assistance that the harvest of the coming days may be more abundant.

L. E. Smith.

It isn't far to Bethlehem town!
It's anywhere that Christ comes down
And finds in people's friendly face
A welcome and abiding place;
The road to Bethlehem runs right thru
The homes of folks like me and you.

Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

REVIEW: SIGNIFICANCE OF THE EXILE AND RESTORATION.

Lesson XIII—December 29, 1935.

Golden Text: "The lovingkindness of the Lord is from everlasting to everlasting upon them that fear him, And his righteousness unto children's children."—Ps. 103:17.

We have been studying during the past quarter the history of the Hebrew people, especially during the breakdown of the kingdom and during the Exile and Restoration. As we come to the close of the quarter, and to the close of the year, what lessons do the experiences of Israel teach? What permanent features and institutions came as a result of this seemingly disastrous event?

The Synagogue Came Out of Exile.

Previous to the exile, for the most part, religion for the Jew centered in the Temple. It was at the heart of his system of worship. But when the Temple was destroyed, and when the people were carried into captivity, there was no temple, no central place of worship. But religion was too deeply implanted in the Jewish heart to die out so easily. There grew up in Babylon, therefore, the synagogue—the word means a place for coming together—where the Jews gathered to hear the law read and interpreted, and where religious instruction was given. The synagogue did not spring full-grown into life, of course. But the synagogue was the direct outgrowth of the Exile.

A Shift of Emphasis in Religion Came Out of the Exile.

Prayer and fasting and especially Sabbath observance took the place of sacrificial rites. Special emphasis was laid upon the Sabbath, and it became one of the most important and characteristic institutions of Judaism. Under the new situation, however, it lost much of its philanthropic and social character and became instead a ceremonial institution. By the time of Jesus it had hardened into a more or less lifeless form and had become a burden instead of a blessing.

The Jews Became More A People of the Book.

Deprived of the privilege of going to the Temple and to Jerusalem, depending more and more upon the teaching of others, those who were more adept in the knowledge of the law, more attention was given to the law, to its codification, to its interpretation, to its dissemination. The forms for legalistic Judaism were set during the Exile. The Jews became a people of the Book. The Bible materials existing at that time were put in more compact form and a new emphasis was laid upon teaching the law.

Religion Became More Inner and Personal.

Religion, of course, had its personal aspects before the Exile. But for the most part the God of Israel was God of the nation. The individual was lost in the nation. But the Exile ended the Jewish nation as a nation, and the individual was discovered. Both Jeremiah and Ezekiel emphasized the responsibility of the individual and also his importance. Religion thus became more inward and to a large extent more spiritual and personal. This was an incalculable gain.

Gain Through Loss Came Out of the Exile.

To the Jew who was carried off into exile, to one who saw the destruction both of the nation and what was perhaps worse, the destruction of the Temple, it would at first appear that the end had come. Here was apparently, stark tragedy. But as is so often the case, afflictions which for the moment seem grievous, in the providence and by the grace of God, enrich the life of the afflicted and reveal new resources of grace in God. "Gain through loss"; that is the great statement of an eternal truth. "Success out of failure"—how often has that been demonstrated through the centuries. Perhaps there is one who reads these Notes who feels that he has failed this year. Perhaps there are those upon whom suffering and affliction have done their worst. The Exile brings to you the significant truth that God can sanctify suffering and even failure in such a way that faith shall be enriched and life cleansed.

Deathless Hope.

Even in exile, the Jews held steadfastly to their hope in God. Even in the most adverse circumstances, even against the darkest background there shone the light of a deathless hope. God would not forever leave his people unvisited. God again would redeem his people. Indeed even in their dire disaster God had not left them nor forsaken them. It is because here and there among the Jews there were those who took the "long look" that the people kept their faith, and with cleansed and humbled hearts, the remnant formed the basis of a new Israel which finally gave to the world the Christ himself. When Malachi foretold the "new day" he was not using empty words. He was expressing a truth that undergirded the heart of the Jewish people and made them more than conquerors.

P. S.—In this the last Notes for the year 1935 the writer wants to send New Year's Greetings to the readers of the Notes, and to express the wish that to one and all there may come in the New Year an abundance of thee things that make life truly rich. He also wishes to thank those who from time to time have expressed appreciation of the Notes. When he learns that there are those who read them and who derive some little help from them, he "thanks God and takes courage."

LITTLE TOWN OF BETHLEHEM.

Phillips Brooks, in 1880, gave to the world these immortal lines which we may, with profit and joy, read and repeat together now at this glad season:

* * *

O litle town of Bethlehem!
How still we see thee lie;
Above thy deep and dreamless sleep
The silent stars go by;
Yet in thy dark streets shineth
The everlasting Light;
The hopes and fears of all the years
Are met in thee tonight.

O Holy Child of Bethlehem!
Descend to us, we pray;
Cast out our sin, and enter in,
Be born in us today.
We hear the Christmas angels
The great glad tidings tell;
Oh, come to us, abide with us,
Our Lord Emmanuel!

Service shall be that all and each,
Aroused to know the common good,
Shall strive, and in the striving reach
A broader human brotherhood.
—Sarah Collins Fernandis.

I heard the bells on Christmas day
Their old, familiar carols play,
And wild and sweet
The words repeat
Of peace on earth, good will to men.
—Longfellow.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE

One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy

"GREATNESS."

"By humility and the fear of the Lord are riches and honor and life."—Prov. 22.4.

There is a "poor in spirit" that wins the kingdom of heaven. There is a humility in greatness that makes greatness great, and likewise that makes humble folks great.

We are reminded that the one who is content with himself, satisfied with his work, who exalts himself and to whom no ideals open, can never feel the "poor in spirit." To be humble is a universal law of human life. It describes an attitude of mind, and it is applied to the wisest, the strongest, the richest and the best of the human family. The greater the man the wider is his vision, the keener his insight into his own poverty of soul and the lower he bows before God. It is a truism to say that the stars shine as brightly during the daylight as they do at night, but they are invisible because of the greater glory of the sun. One can be content with himself only when he has seen no brighter light. "Let Jesus come into thy heart."

Prayer—Our heavenly Father, God of all light and mercy, help us to open the windows of our soul that Thou mayest bless with all blessing. In Jesus' name we ask it. Amen.

TUESDAY.

"TRUE GLORY."

"He that trusteth in his riches shall fall; but the righteous shall flourish as a branch."—Prov. 11:28.

Riches allure and captivate, they invest with pride, and pride puffs up. They give power to command and the ability to get what this world gives for money. They steal away trust in the Supreme Being and teach dependence upon one's own resources. This results in forgetting God, and is the reason given for its being so hard for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God. If a rich man is captured by such a power, the spirit of God is not in him.

On the other hand the kingdom of God is for the rich as well as the poor. When Christ comes into the life, a pure and serene light is poured into the reconciled heart. When the new birth takes place, it transforms one into a new man, and things of heaven and of God, formerly doubtful, are confirmed in a wonderful manner. That which was once closed is now open, and that which was dark is illuminated, power is given to perform what before seemed difficult, and the impossible becomes possible.

Prayer—Dear heavenly Father, come Thou and dwell in our hearts this day. Forgive us of our sins, quicken us to life in Jesus. We would die to sin, to our old selves. Root out of us every wrong action and plant the germs of every virtuous deed, and we will give Thee the glory. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"CHRIST IS BORN."

"Unto you is born a Saviour which is Christ the Lord."—Luke 2:11.

"Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."—Luke 2:14.

After hearing the angelic announcement of the birth of Jesus, the Shepherds of the hills went in search of this new-born king. Likewise the three wise men from the east came looking for Him. They all found Him in a lowly manger and fell down and worshipped Him. Here we have both the poor and rich seeking together and worshipping together our Lord Jesus Christ in a lowly manger of a cattle compound.

Jesus born in a manger! This fact, together with the fact of the proclamation being made first to the poor peasants of the hills, is a token that the Gospel was meant for the poor and the unlearned as well as for the rich and the wise. Thus truly all people's meet and joyfully sing, "Glory be to God on high." "Christ the Saviour is born, whereby we are saved." This is the greatest gift of the ages. Let all our gifts and our worship this day be a token of that fact in our lives.

Prayer—Our Father, we need the Christ. We have our share of sin, suffering and sorrow. We deeply need His grace divine, His consolation and His strength in our souls. Make Thy gift in us this day the essential greatness of soul which will render us incapable of doing less than receiving Him into our hearts for this day and for the new year. Surround every scene of our Christmas celebraation with the halo of His glory. Make every experience a token of His love. Open every heart to the price He paid for peace, to the meaning of Saviour, and fill us with joyous songs because Christ is born and we are born too in him. Amen.

THURSDAY.

"TRANSCENDING CHRISTIANS."

"Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven."—Matt. 5:16.

How does the coming of Christ bring glory to God? A common every-day explanation is this: An admiral of the Navy arranges his fleet and conducts the maneuvers of the fleet in a way to display his wisdom; a speaker arranges his argument to display the truth and his power to present it; a philanthropist arranges his gifts to display his mercy. In the coming of Christ the wisdom and power and mercy of God is displayed in the fullest and sublimest manner. In Christ the whole character of God stands out resplendently.

In the same way God's children are children of light. The followers of Jesus disclose in themselves the beauties and the wonders of life, beauties and wonders that change the face of the world to a new creation. In Christian living there is the daily unveiling of the sublime purpose of God until life, in all its relations, love in all its sweetness, and brotherliness in all its blessings, shine through and blossom forth into all fruition in Christ who is the glory of eternal love. We are that light.

Prayer—Our Father, we thank Thee that we can ascribe more and more glory to Thee, as we know Thee, as we honor Thee, as Thy light is reflected in us, as Thy power, wisdom and love is revealed through us. We pray that this may be done in us as it is done by the angel of heaven, and that Thy church of the redeemed may more and more display the mysteries of Thy grace and goodness transcending all Thy past dealings with Thy people. This we ask for Jesus' sake. Amen.

FRIDAY.

"HIS EXTENDED HAND."

"My reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be."—Rev. 22:12.

From the morning that Christ was worshipped as a babe in the manger at Bethlehem until now, every soul who has received Him into their hearts and embraced Him in their lives, has been immediately recompensed by the gift of transformation of the inner life. This gift is something that transcends suffering and sorrow, sin and satan, giving victory and a sense of overcoming that transcends the world.

It has ever been true that light springs up in the heart and that joy and gladness is the reward of fellowship with Christ. It is especially true that God rewards all who come to Him seeking clearer visions of His own righteousness and coveting more light of His love.

Prayer—Our Father, we desire with all our hearts to come to Thee and to know Thy rewards. As we go on, make us faithful to our obligation and trust and bless us with the joy of knowing Thee, Thy faithfulness and Thy trustworthiness. In His name we ask it. Amen.

SATURDAY.

"CHANGED WAGES."

"Your Father hath deceived me, and changed my wages ten times; but God suffered him not to hurt me."—Genesis 31:1-9.

Laban was a tricky master and Jacob felt himself obliged to be a tricky servant; but God gave Jacob the upper hand. We may be glad indeed, that our heavenly Master is just and fair. He never changes our wages, but keeps exactly to His promises.

We do not always realize how blessed it is that we have a faithful God. He is the one reliance in this universe. He stands back of all His laws, and His laws are ever true.

If we plan our lives in accordance with His will, we need never have an instant's fear of the outcome. His pledge is never broken. His designs are carried out to the last-minute detail.

Prayer—We praise Thee, O Lord, for Thy abounding fidelity; may we be worthy of it in life and soul. Amen.

"GRATITUDE PURIFIES."

"But . . . all uncleanliness, or covetousness, let it not even be named among you . . . but rather giving of thanks.."—Eph. 5:1-6.

Paul had little, to the outward eye, for which to give thanks. His life was one of hardship, of constant toil, of persecution, and finally of martyrdom. Yet what life ever lived among men was so overflowing in gratitude?

His thankfulness, he knew, had a preservative quality. It bound him, he realized, to the Lord of all uprightness and holiness. How could he be anything but true to the Saviour who had done so much for him and for the world?

And so with us, and all men. Wickedness fills us with misery and complaint. Ingratitude sours us and taints us. Joy in God's mercy prompts us to be more deserving of that mercy and so adds to our joy.

Prayer—Dear Jesus, we exalt Thy holy name. Precious Saviour, we rejoice in Thy goodness. Thou art so much kinder to us than we deserve. Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

Small worries and little nagging annoyances will pester us every day; none of us escapes them; they wait for us at every turn; if we make room for them in our thoughts they will spoil our lives; but what is every one of these little irritations but a summons to self-mastery?—Washington Gladden.

Rev. John G. Truitt, D. D., Pastor.

THE ETERNAL SHEPHERD.

By John G. Truitt.

"And when he putteth forth his own sheep, he goeth before them, and his sheep follow him; for they know his voice."—John 10:4.

There are so many houses and hopes today evidently set on sand foundations we need to look anew at the unchanging Christ. We need this one place in which we may come and lay hold of something unshaken. Much of the mind of America, not to say the whole world, is headed, it does not know where. Like the proverbial bad boy of the little town of our western plains who mounted his horse, fired his gun, and proceeded to ride in all directions at once! It cannot be done, but it is being tried.

You have repaired to this holy place for a more noble business. You are tempted and tried with enough of that sort of thing during the work days of the week. Here you wish to catch hold of the eternal. To see something that is real. I believe you will find nothing in all the world as real as the Christian faith,—nothing as real as God, shown forth in Jesus Christ. You are here on the world's most rewarding quest.

As a text I have chosen one of the most graphic and picturesque passages from the lips of the Lord Jesus. It throws three pictures on our mental canvas in rapid succession:

(1). The good shepherd standing in the door of his sheepfold, swinging it open, putting his sheep forth. It is early morning. Dew is on the dawn. Newness is in the air. The fragrance of the fleeing night is still sweet. The sheep are pushing against each other as they go over the doorsill. The good shepherd is looking over them eagerly as they pour forth. The day is ahead. Food, drink, exercise, sunshine, eventualities and possibilities are before them and perhaps some will lose their way.

But I wanted to call your atteneion to the "putting forth" of the sheep. In this first picture not the sheep on the path, but the shepherd who put them on the path, is what I am thinking about. Is he sufficient? May they go forth with full confidence in the one who "put them forth?" In other words do we take proper account of the eternal Christ who is back of us?

Those who know tell us that a gun should be one hundred times as heavy as the projectile which sends it forth. Does Jesus meet the requirements? Is the shepherd one hundred times as mighty as the sheep put forth? You may not like the figures of speech; neither do I, but I am trying to show you what I have in mind, namely, that there is so great a Christ back of us as individuals, and as a church that we should not take up our time with doubt and fear as to the meaning of life, or the Source that sends us forward.

Is Jesus sufficient: "The Lord possessed me in the beginning of his way, before his works of old. I was set up from everlasting, from the beginning, before the earth was. When there were no depths I was brought forth; when there were no foundations abounding with water. Before the mountains were settled, before the hills was I brought forth: while as yet he had not made the earth, nor the fields, nor the highest part of the dust of the world. When he prepared the heavens I was there." Prov. 8:22-27. Is Jesus sufficient? Is the God back of him great enough? "Before me there was no God formed, neither shall there be after me. I, even I, am the Lord; and beside me there is no saviour. I have declared, and have saved, and I have shewed, when there was no strange god among you: therefore ye are my witnesses, saith the Lord, that I am God. Yea, before the day was, I am he; and there is none that can deliver out of my hand (I like a shepherd like that to stand in the door,—no hawk, no wolf, no lion, no enemy great enough to snatch us out of his hands): I shall work, and who shall hinder it." Isa. 43:10-13.

Are you putting your life into God's hands? Are you laying your all as the rich young ruler was asked to do at the feet of Jesus? Is he great enough: "His dear Son; in whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins: who is the image of the invisible God, the firstborn of every creature: for by him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers; all things were created by him, and for him: and he is before all things, and by him all things consist: and he is the head of the body, the church: who is the beginning, the firstborn from the dead; that in all things he might have preeminence." Col. 1:13-18. And that is not all, and that is not all! Read the whole chapter. It is sublime. And the Christ of it goes beyond even the words, or logic of the inspired apostle Paul to portray! One hundred times as heavy! Yes, one hundred times raised to the nth power! How light our bubbles! How trifling the tinsel we try so hard to get! How useless, and unfounded the fears that frustrate our souls!

I have quoted you only some of the words by prophet and apostle about him. Let him speak a word for himself. In his great final prayer with his disciples he says: "And now, O Father, glorify thou me with thine own self with the glory which I had with thee before the world was." Eternal! And with a glory indescribable. Again: "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth." All-powerful. And out of that power he "putteth forth" his own sheep! "Go," says he!

(2) The picture of Jesus away out yonder ahead of his sheep. "When he putteth forth his own sheep, he goeth before them." He is not only back of them like a mother standing in the door, with a deep anxiety in her soul as she sees her forstborn fare forth for the first time to school, but he is in the schoolroom, and beyond! He is not only behind our destinies, but he is out there in front of them. A Christian may not travel a path his own feet have not pressed. We shall not walk far on the road till we behold the footprints of the Saviour. Some of us have let the trail go cold! Not David Livingstone! Not Albert Schweitzer! Not Paul! No, nor many amongst us, thanks be to God, today. But some of us have let the trail go cold. We follow him too far off.

We have not caught up with him in love. Nor mercy. Nor in willingness to dare, and do, and die if need be on a Hill. We have not caught up to Calvary! Yes, he goes before us into hardships, into Gethsemane, to the courts, to the cross. Are you having trials? If you look closely on your pathway you will see the love-trail of your Lord. His blood cries out from the ground comfort and companionship! Are you whining? "In whom have we redemption through his blood." Out there, my friends, in the streets, in the wide, wide world; in the wayfares "running in all directions" you will find plenty of ups and downs of life, but if you tarry here in proper spirit and proper mind of worship and communion with the eternal Christ you will find the road that leads the right way through it all.

He is before us,—away before us,—in the needy places; across a thousand barriers; seeking to set up his stronghold for peace and for right-

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

Our financial report this week carries us up to $16,830.23. We just lack $1,169.77 of being to our goal of $18,000 for the year.

Let every church that has not taken the offering take it and mail it to us. Certainly the Congregational-Christian denomination will see to it that we reach it. The truth of the matter is that the United Church ought to raise $25,000 each year for charity and permit us to do a greater work than we are able to do with our present income—$1,169.77 to raise by the first of the year—let everybody push and we will climb up to the goal.

RECENT EXCAVATIONS AND CHRISTMAS.

By WM. T. ELLIS.

Recent excavations at Ur of the Chaldees prove that there was a highly organized civilization flourishing there more than 6,000 years ago. So the Magi were inheritors of at least 4,000 years of culture. No stupider blunder is made by the present-day "intellectuals' than the assumption that our generation is the first to enter into wisdom; and that the Bible emerged from the nebulous half-light of a primitive period of childish superstition. What history knows as "the golden age," the period of the greatest sculptors, artists, poets, philosophers, seers and warriors that have ever walked the earth, fell within the span of Bible history. The three seekers of the Christmas story represent an era of spiritual questing and discernment not to be parallelled in modern history.

These wise men were more than sothsayers and magicians and diviners; they were astrologers, the scientists of their time, and the counsellors of kings. The costliness of their gifts to the babe proved their wealth and position. They were travelers of such standing that they had easy access to the presence of King Herod the Great.

THE CHILDREN'S STORY.

"Don't you steal them," she cried.

Seh Chong was dropping them into the basket. "No," she said quietly, "I'm only picking them up for you. Wait a minute."

For the load carrier was edging away, half doubting, half angry still. She could not believe that Seh Chong was actually helping, until she saw her put more cabbages into the basket. It was a horrid task. The vegetables were dirty, and somewhat decayed. Their thick smell made Seh Chong ill. But she loaded them carefully. When she had finished, she felt in her pocket for her handkerchief. She stood wiping her hands and smiling. The load carried stared. The Juniors backed into the shop again.

"Good-bye," Seh Chong said at last. "I'm sorry I was careless."

Even after she was in the shop, she kept hearing that harsh voice, and seeing that hard face. She couldn't enjoy buying books because she was thinking of the load carrier who didn't know about Christmas. "If I could only do something," she thought, and put her hand in her pocket, absently. Instantly her face went white.

"Oh Seh Chong," her roommate wailed—"Is the money safe?"

Without answering, Seh Chong rushed back to the street, her classmates following. When she had reached for her handkerchief, the money had slipped out. Search was useless. How long would twenty dollars lies idle on that crowded street?

"Never mind," her roommate comforted, as they all stared at one another.

"But what shall I write to Cicily?" Seh Chong began to cry, and her rommates gathered close, to protect her.

"You of the empty hands, move." It was the cabbage vender again, pushing herself into their midst. She stopped in front of Seh Chong, open-her thin fist to display the crumpled bills.

"Here," she said hoarsely. "I wanted to keep it—but you helped me. I came back."

Seh Chong was so surprised to see the money again that she couldn't find words. The load carrier went on. "I suppore," she said, "twenty dollars means something to you too. It would buy my rice," she sighed, "for six months, almost." She turned as if to free herself from the circle. Quickly Seh Chong looked around at her classmates. What she saw on their faces made her run forward and draw the load carrier back into the school group. She held out the money again.

"Here," she cried. "Please take it. It was given us—and we want you to have it—for Christmas—our Christ's birthday."

The load carrier looked at the money. Her fingers twitched.

Seh Chong forced the hand shut, with the money inside it. The load carrier was speaking slowly.

"I knew you were Jesus persons," she said. "Your faces look happy. But I didn't know being a Jesus person would make you do this.

Seh Chong nodded. "On his birthday," she said, "we give gifts."

"Because He gave Himself for us," on of the girls added.

A policeman was coming up to see why a crowd was blocking the street. Seh Chong said hurriedly, "Won't you come to our school, some day soon, and hear more?"

The vender nodded, her hand still trembling.

Seh Chong and her classmates walked slowly back through the school gate. They said nothing to the rest of the school about their American gift. "I wish we had asked her where she lived," Seh Chong said once.

On Christmas morning, it was her roommate who came running up the steps. "Quickly," she cried, "Come to the gate, we have a gift."

Seh Chong ran along with the other Juniors. At the gate all of them stood still—and stared, at a bamboo basket overflowing with clean white cabbages. A bright red card, fastened to the side, read "To the Jesus girls. I will come, when my selling is ended, on Sunday."

The cabbage vender had shared her very best.

All the Mission School wondered why the Juniors had cabbage for their Christmas feast, and why they enjoyed it so. But Cicily's class in America understood. They had helped share Christmas, too.

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

eousness. The judges of the World Court may yet learn their "righteous judgment" by waiting humbly at his feet; the League of Nations may yet learn that it is several leagues behind the Lord of love, and life, and light; and we must all learn that nineteen centuries have narrowed the distance between society and its Saviour all too little. Yes, that second picture of Jesus going before his sheep is enough to break our hearts, and make us all under-shepherds if we but contemplate it sufficiently.

"In haunts of wretchedness and need,
On shadowed thresholds dark with fears,
From paths where hide the lures of greed,
We catch the vision of thy tears."

(3) And the final picture of the sheep following the Good Shepherd. "And his sheep follow him: for they know his voice." And that is a beautiful picture, indeed. It is a generous saying, too. Jesus gives us full credit for trying. He pardons us for our failures, when we do our part. How we wish it were true of all who profess his name: "His sheep follow him." Shall we not strive harder to make it true in our own lives, and in the lives of those God has given to us? May we follow him out into the places of need,—need of every kind. May we hear him calling us. And may we know the joy of following him!

"Where cross the crowded ways of life,
Where sound the cries of race and clan,
Above the noise of selfish strife,
We hear thy voice, O Son of man."
