THE CHRISTIAN SUN

Representing the Southeast Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches.

IN ESSENTIALS, UNITY. IN NON-ESSENTIALS, LIBERTY. IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY.

VOLUME LXXXVII. RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, JANUARY 3, 1935. NUMBER 1.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

The Sun Wishes Each of You a Happy New Year.

Who Reads the Bible?—

Who reads the Bible? Professor Phelps, on being asked for a list of the famous people who have gone to it for faith, love and duty, replied, "Just take the names in the English and American 'Who's Who.' You can copy them at your leisure." He added that nobody can have any real roots in the English language who does not know and read the King James version of the Bible. Beween the lids of no other one book can be found such wealth and such variety of literature.

Income Tax Figures for 1933.—

There were quite a few increases in income figures for 1933 over those of 1932, in the upper brackets. Of course names are not given, but the Internal Revenue Bureau lists one person with an income exceeding $5 millions, while there is another with an income better than $4 millions. The third place is taken by one exceeding the $3 million mark. There was just one in each of these brackets, while the $2 million bracket was vacant in last year's income ratings. The $1 million club had swelled to 46 in 1933, against a paltry 20 for the year 1932. In the income tax paying group which numbered 3,660,105 for 1933 (a bare 3 per cent of the population), the rich alone grew richer. The great middle class with incomes of less than $25,000 lost members and earned less. Of the $10,845,000,000 of personal income revealed in tax returns, individuals reporting incomes of less than $5,000 accounted for $6,792,000,000. Another $2,575,000,000 was accounted for by those with incomes between $5,000 and $25,000, while the additional $1,478,000,000 was divided among those in the higher brackets, giving them an average income of approximately $56,000.

The Family Income.—

Thousands of American families will be surprised to learn that their annual income should be between $2,000 and $2,500. Estimates made by Brookings Institute give $2,000 as the minimum income for supplying bare necessities. In the so-called prosperous year of 1929, sixty per cent of all families received less than this. Dr. Mordecai Ezekiel, of the Department of Agriculture, fixes $2,500 as the income now necessary for a family to exist "far enough above the sheer necessities to be termed moderately full." In 1929 seventy-one per cent of our families received less than $2,500, and sixty per cent less than $2,000. Mr. Ezekiel's remedy for low incomes is increase of productive efficiency, work for more abundant living, and a more equitable distribution of income. That we are not yet moving in the direction of equalization is shown by recent Internal Revenue statistics which show that in 1933 forty-six persons received incomes of $1,000,000, an increase of twenty-six over the previous year. The total income of the forty-six was $81,000,000, but the Government claimed $25,000,000. While the millionaire class and all with incomes above $25,000 increased, the lower income groups decreased. The total number filing incomes decreased 2.67 per cent, and the total of incomes shrank 3.04 per cent.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

What Will the New Year Bring?—

An attempt to forecast the trend of the new year is likely to be fraught with failure. Certainly business will be better for some enterprises, but it is just as certain to be worse for others. The attitude adopted by the government toward certain industries, the public utility companies, for instance, is certain to bring still further unrest and unemployment. The few dollars that may be saved on the individual electric bill will far from compensate the loss to those who have invested of their earnings in this industry which the administration seems bent on breaking down. Government competition in business is making it harder for business to take up the slack in re-employment. The theory that shorter hours and higher pay would solve the problems of the depression is well on the way toward being exploded. If it is at all possible to bring about temporarily better conditions that will last until November, 1936, the attempt will be made, but "the sad part of it is," to quote David Lawrence, "that the national administration has no program that it can offer as a certain means of solving this problem. . . . There has been no sound foundation laid for private spending." Rather a gloomy picture—but when one remembers the vast resources that our nation still possesses, when one remembers how even now we are blessed beyond the other nations of the earth, one cannot but have faith in our ability to "come back."

Congress Meets.—

When this issue of THE SUN reaches its readers, Congress will have convened. Many are the questions that will come before the legislative chambers of the nation this year. What will happen to the various programs started last year in an effort to relieve the effects of the depression remains to be seen. The fate of NRA also lies in the balance, the HOLC needs additional funds if it is to answer the calls that have already been made upon it, and the public works programs call loudly for more money. One question which is aggravating the [illegible] those who one of the [illegible] the president seems absolutely opposed to payment at the present time. The American Legion insists that the ex-soldier shall receive his share of the billions that are being distributed through one source or another. While the president's veto seems assured, there is likelihood that those supporting the payment of the bonus can muster a two-thirds vote to override him. There will probably be a compromise of some sort. Another question which will come up again in the new Congress is the Food and Drug bill which was sponsored by Senator Copeland. This bill was defeated last year because of "trade opposition" as well as a congested legislative program, we are told, and it probably deserved its fate. The new bill which Senator Copeland will introduce this year will be substantially the same bill, though some of its major objections may be eliminated.

Compulsory Cotton Control Again.—

Cotton growers throughout the South voted last week overwhelmingly for the continuance of compulsory cotton control. A two-thirds vote of those voting was necessary for its continuance, and the vote was somewhat more than nine to one on the part of those who voted. However less than one half of the 2,600,000 eligible voters availed themselves of their right to vote. This will mean that the Bankhead Cotton legislation will continue during the coming year, with high taxes on all cotton sold in excess of prescribed quotas. While the continuance of this act for the coming year will probably raise prices of cotton for the time being, its inevitable final result will be to destroy the supremacy of the South as the world's cotton field. While it may sound fine to say that one has received double what he formerly received for his cotton, it means that the government is in fact, if not in theory, placing an export tax on cotton which the South cannot pay. Already the foreign production of cotton, for the first time in three-fourths of a century, has surpassed that of the Southern cotton belt. And the foreign market will not surrender this lead without a struggle. What will make for ultimate prosperity for the cotton grower is not limitation of his crop, but more efficient production. In theory, a profit of 4 cents a pound on one bale of cotton is better than a profit of 2 cents a pound on two bales—in actuality, the exact opposite is true. There are vital economic reasons that make this so, and though our dirt farmers may not have taken time to figure it out, our political farmers should have. There is too much politics being used in farming and not enough horse sense.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

We learn with regret that Rev. F. C. Lester, pastor of First Church, Norfolk, Va., is unwell. We hope that his recovery will be most speedy.

Rev. J. F. Apple, a resident of Elon, was an acceptable and cordially welcome preacher in the College chapel, Sunday, December, 30th.

The reports from various churches and Sunday schools of our fellowship indicate that very appropriate and wholesome Christmas services were held during the holidays and thousands of worshippers were thus called together to help properly celebrate the birth of Him who gave us Christmas.

Page 3 of this issue are given the apportionments for the churches of the Eastern Virginia Conference, as apportioned for the year 1934-35. Even on their face they seem to show a large increase, really the churches are being given credit for other payments not heretofore credited.

Rev. and Mrs. R. T. Grissom were at Rocky Ford and Elk Spur churches, Carroll County, Va., during the Christmas holidays, and by the generosity of some of our unselfish Sunday Schools gave to the children and many of the grown-ups of our mountain schools Christmas presents and good cheer.

Next week's issue of THE SUN will be "Elon College Number." We are now entering the Educational Period as provided by the Southern Convention, and our minds should turn toward doing something for our college. Elon is doing a great work for the Church, and the Church should begin to awaken to its responsibilities for Elon.

Dr. and Mrs. M. J. W. White are expected to arrive in the States on furlough from the Phillippine Islands about April first. Dr. White has had great success as medical missionary in a hospital in the Phillippines and has done great work, being assisted ably in many ways by his faithful wife, who, by her deep interest in the Phillippines, has made a real contribution to Christianity.

Rev. Robert Kimball, one of our promising young ministers, who graduated from Elon College in the Class of '34 and is now pursuing studies in Yale University looking to a B. D. degree, was a very pleasant and a very welcome visitor at the College and among his host of friends here during the holidays. Robert is liking Yale Divinity School and thinks it is great.

From Mrs. H. E. Pearce of Franklinton, N. C., has come the first CHRISTIAN SUN renewal for the New Year. Mrs. Pearce says: "Enjoy theSUN so much, and look forward to its arrival each week." Brother R. H. Farrell of Graham, N. C., sent in the last renewal of the Old Year. We wish for both of these subscribers, and for all others on the SUN subscription list a most happy and prosperous year 1935.

The Baptists of North Carolina gave $2,527,420,000 last year through their churches for local expenses, Missions and benevolences. Gains in voluntary gifts to Missions and benevolences amouted to $96,355.82 over those of the past year. The total increase of the giving for 1934 over that of 1933 was $274,445.85. The net increase in church membership in the State last year was $10,448.00.

The leaders, delegates and visitors of the Baptist churches from eighteen States and the District of Columbia are this week holding a "Southern Baptist Sunday School Conference in Raleigh, N. C.,"—a four day's session. It is reported in the press, just prior to the opening of the meeting, that "the largest Sunday School delegation for a Conference ever to assemble in the world is expected." One hundred and forty speakers are on the program and 5,000 delegates are expected.

Rev. G. C. Crutchfield preached for Dr. C. H. Rowland, First Christian Church, Greensboro, Sunday, A. M., December 30th. Dr. Rowland is reported as slowly improving at Florida Sanitarium and was visited during the holidays by his family and some other friends from Greensboro and Elon College. Meanwhile, his church, with its splendid Board of Deacons, is moving forward and holding the congregation together admirably and is making progress along all lines. That, indeed, is a compliment to any absentee pastor.

We of the Southeast have an almost ideal church educational system, if we will give it our support as we should. There is Rollins College in Florida, Southern Union Junior College in Alabama, Piedmont College in Georgia, Elon College in North Carolina, and the Southern Seminary Foundation which is affiliated with and has the advantages of Vanderbilt University at Nashville, Tenn. All of these institutions, with the possible exception of Rollins, are greatly in need of financial assistance at the present time, and our constituencies in their respective sections of the Southeast should rally to their assistance.

The acting president of the Woman's Missionary Society, Hopewell Church, Mrs. Gertrude B. Boss, gives this information from her Society:—"We held the December meeting the 13th and launched a mempership contest, Mrs. Beacham and Mrs. Epperby heading the two sides,—reds and blues. New members have been received at every business meeting this Conference year so far. Topic for January meeting, 'A Journey of Discovery.' Plans are perfected for a public meeting February 13th, at which time a small pageant will be presented."

Sunday School superintendents and secretaries, and pastors, should bear in mind that our Christian Publishing Association, Dayton, Ohio, still publishes our Bible Class Quarterly and other Sunday School supplies and carries a full line of uniform group and graded publications. Mr. Hermon Eldredge is editor of our publications and appreciates immensely the patronage of our schools, and we join him in the desire that there will be an increase and not a decrease in orders during the good year 1935. Our friend and brother, Mr. H. E. Sims, a member of our Piqua, Ohio, Christian Church, gives his time without remuneration as president of the Christian Publishing Association, and Mr. Thomas B. Radabaugh, than whom we have had no more competent, is in charge of the Publishing House. As our Sunday Schools are making up their orders for quarterly supplies, they should bear their own Publishing House at Dayton in mind and by no means pass them by but patronize them.

UTOPIA CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The little village of Utopia snuggles into the bend of one of the numerous tributaries of the Ocono Creek. In the village is the Utopia Christian Church. It is a rather up-and-going little church with a real Christian consecration and a fine worldly pride. And it was going to make a real endeavor to meet the requirements of the Southern Christian Convention and its own Conference, and the while keeping its own building and equipment in such repair that should Jesus chance to come this year He would be pleased with the appearances of the little Utopia Christian Church.

At the close of the year the congregation of the Utopia Christian Church gathered to hear the reports for the year and to learn what kind of report would be sent to Conference. When the treasurer made his report and it was supplemented by some items contributed by the secretary, it was found to read like this:

Monthly offerings from the S. S. to Missions	$120.00
Monthly offerings from the S. S. to Elon Orphanage	120.00
Fifth Sunday Offerings from the S. S. to Elon College	40.00
January offering by Church and S. S. to Elon College	50.00
The Easter offering to Missions	50.00
The Woman's Missionary Society, Young People's Society, Willing Workers and Cradle Roll to Woman's Board of S. Convention	150.00
The Conference Apportionment (1933-34 assessment, $150.00)	160.00
Rally Day offering to Board of Christian Education	30.00
Thanksgiving offering to Orphanage	50.00
Christmas offering to Superannuation	20.00
Mr. Goodhearted Jones gave for Elon College	100.00
Mrs. Deepsoul Brown gave for Elon Orphanage	25.00

The Sunday School gave $25.00 and the C. E. Societies gave $15.00 to the S. S. and C. E. Convention, 60 per cent of which it was understood would be sent to the Board of Christian Education.

At this point, Mr. Jones, the treasurer, cleared his throat and stated that the preacher was paid up in full and all the bills were paid and that he thought the grounds and building looked right fair, but that he didn't know whether the church had come up to what the Convention expected of it or not. A rather lively discussion followed, the upshoot of which was the whole matter was referred to me for decision.

Now, Dr. Atkinson, I must confess I am not equal to deciding the matter, but I know you are and it occurred to me you might do it in THE SUN. There are probably a large number of churches wondering just how these things do work out. And of course in a very humble way the people of the Utopia Church and village would like to see this very fine report of their year's work published in the SUN.

Yours very truly,
JAMES H. LIGHTBOURNE.

P. S.—By the way, Mr. Jones included a footnote to the effect their Church had been asked to secure five new subscriptions to the SUN, and they had astonished Mr. Kernodle by sending in six.—J. H. L.

ELON ALUMNI CLUB BANQUET.

The Executive Committee of the Elon College Alumni Club of Eastern Virginia met Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the Suffolk Christian Church.

It was voted that the Ninth Annual Banquet be held in the Fellowship Hall of the Suffolk Christian Church on Friday night, February the 22nd, nineteen hundred and thirty-five, at seven o'clock.

We trust that all former Elon students residing in this section and adjoining sections of North Carolina save that date, the 22nd of February, 1935, and be present on the occasion.

ANNE STALEY CALHOUN,
Secretary.

NEWS FROM FLORIDA.

Rev. Trevor Mordecai, D. D., of New Smyrna, Florida, recently delivered an address on the Oxford Movement at the Sunday evening service at the Melbourne church, of which Rev. Orville D. Ullom is pastor. Dr. Mordecai also recently delivered an address at the Youth Convocation at Orange City.

The first Congregational Church of Miami, Florida, has invited Rev. Kerrison Juniper, D. D., of St. Petersburg, to the pastorate of the church. Dr. Juniper has accepted for the winter season, leaving the question of the permanent pastorate to be decided in the spring. The people of the church have welcomed him heartily to this service. Dr. Juniper was formerly pastor of the church at St. Petersburg and then of the First Church in San Francisco.

Large congregations are again greeting Dr. Chas. H. Beale at the church in St. Petersburg. As the church has its largest congregations in January and February they are already studying the problem of overflow of the congregation. Last year extensions were installed in the auditorium of the Sunday School building so that in all Dr. Beale was preaching to around twenty-five hundred people at a service. On a recent Sunday twenty-one new members were received and in addition there were twenty-one associate members, these being winter residents who do not wish to sever their connection with their home churches in the north.

Rev. Victor B. Chicoine, pastor of the Congregational church at Winter Park, Florida, has printed an interesting folder entitled "A Two Month's Program." The folder contains the texts of the sermons for the church services during December and January, and also for the Wednesday evening services. An interesting series of topics is also printed for the Christian Endeavor Society during the same months. Mr. Chicoine does not print the topics of sermons but rather the texts, in some instances using some of the modern translations. The winter season is all in full force in this church and the audiences are crowding the church.

The church at Melbourne, Florida, is to celebrate the forty-fifth anniversary of its organization on December 30th. This church has been one of the charter churches in the Congregational history of the state. There are two of the charter members of the church and they will be honored in the celebration. The historical sermon will be preached by Superintendent Gillette. On Christmas Sunday there was given in this church the Christmas pageant, "At the Door of the Inn." This pageant was written by Miss Martha Race, a member of the Jacksonville church, and has been given many hundreds of times in different churches over the country.

Rev. Walter Metcalf, pastor of the Congregational Church at Tampa, Florida, has been elected President of the Tampa Ministers' Association. This is a signal honor especially in view of the historic attitudes of ministers in that Association. Mr. Metcalf is a man of liberal outlook and of deep convictions along the line of the social applications of the Gospel of Christ to the problems of today. Recently he gave an address before the Ministers' Association on "The Social Gospel" and the Association requested that it be printed in the daily paper, another indication of the regard the ministers have for his Christian spirit.

Miss Pattie Lee Coghill spent Christmas at her home in Henderson, N. C. While there she attended a meeting with Rev. F. C. Lester of Norfolk and Rev. Milo J. Sweet of Elon College, and others, to consider the possibility of merging the Blue Ridge Conference with the Elon Conference, so far as the eastern states of the southeast are concerned. On account of the necessity for economy it has been decided to suspend the holding of the Blue Ridge Conference, and it is proposed to hold a substitute conference at Pleasant Hill for Kentucky, Tennessee and Alabama, and then merge with Elon for Virginia, the Carolinas, Georgia and Florida.

THE KENTUCKY ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

The Kentucky Conference met at Stearns, a progressive town, headquarters of a coal railroad and center of a coal and lumber business. A woman served as moderator, Rev. Ruth F. Sergeant.

The Conference young people's meeting was in charge of Mr. Phillip Havener, a Student Summer worker, who became so interested in the work that he took the year off for practical studies as a pastor, before concluding his theological seminary course.

The Congregational churches are in southeastern Kentucky. The two Kentucky Christian Conferences are in northeastern Kentucky. In east central Kentucky, not far from the middle point between the two groups, are the centers of origin in Kentucky of the two churches: Cane Ridge Meeting House, northeast of Paris, which is an attractive, restored log church-house, having in its cemetery the remains and monument of Barton W. Stone, and Berea College, which had large help from the American Missionary Association, which is Congregational in its founding, and which has a considerable group of Congregationalists in its present membership. Dr. Robert G. Hutchins, now deceased, a Congregational minister of Berea, and the grandfather of President Robert Hutchins of Chicago University.

The Kentucky Congregational Churches have found a special type of community service in furnishing libraries for communities lacking them. Rev. and Mrs. George Leader Day, then of Robbins, Tennessee, were fraternal visitors to the Conference. Dr. Ernest M. Halliday, a little later, made visits to most of the Kentucky churches and addresses at Evarts and Stearns.

F. P. E.

There is a wide breach of thought between those who would return to conservatism and those who seek to travel the road to progressive ends. Conservatism may dream of the world in which it prospered, but that world cannot be had, unchanged, for that world is dead. It is a new world, and both progressives and conservatives must reconcile themselves to a fair and honorable dealing with conditions as they are, and decide which each shall give up. Forward is the only way out, but that way must be traveled without too many brakes or by the use of too much speed, lest all be lost.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

IN THE BEGINNING.

We are in the beginning of a new year. It is well. Beginnings are profitable, or should be. It depends upon the making and the facing. In this particular, no improvement can be made on our Bible: "In the beginning God." This Book is worn, is welcome and is warm. And it has the right beginning; and while there are scenes, incidents and individuals in the Bible who turn from God, He is the prevailing power and personality of the Book and all the narrators remain true and steadfast to the purpose and pronouncement of the first line, "In the beginning God."

Many of us have made, some are yet making New Year Resolutions. We are starting over again. We have listed the assets of the past and taken counsel, let us trust, of the failures, fancies and foibles which did not carry. A beginning properly made gives us fresh courage, new zeal, renewed hope. If we, who take advantage of beginnings and have registered our New Year Resolutions, fail to put God at the beginning, we will see our resolutions crumble before the year is gone, "No other foundation can any man lay than that is laid." Put God at the beginning of the year, at the beginning of the day, at the beginning of the new venture, at the beginning of the air-castles we build, and they will be eternal.

In a time of economic uncertainty, moral upheaval and spiritual fog, there is one thing of which we, all of us, may be absolutely certain and the only one. Job discovered that a long, long time ago. It took adversity and falling away of friends and favors to bring him to it, but he came and, through his crumbled castles and catastrophes, he uttered those undying words, "I know that my Redeemer liveth."

Let us start the new year with some resolutions that will put God first. Will it be to read a few verses from His Word daily? Will it be to bow before Him unobserved in the early morning? Will it be to give the cup of cold water in the name of a disciple and for His sake daily? Will it be to control a tongue, a temper and an appetite that can only be controlled by a power mightier than ourselves? Whatever it be, we shall have hope of victory that overcometh if we adopt the method that the eternal Word of God adopted: "In the beginning God."

THE FEDERAL COUNCIL HEARD A MESSAGE.

The biennial meeting of the Federal Council of Churches was held in Dayton, Ohio, December 4th-7th. It was a great gathering and was stirred by great utterances. Dr. Samuel McCrae Cavert, general secretary, in describing the meeting, declared that the outstanding event was the address by Senator Gerald P. Nye. Get the report of the event from Secretary Cavert:

"The point of most popular interest was the address by Honorable Gerald P. Nye, Chairman of the Senate Committee Investigating the Munitions Industry, who spoke to an audience of 2,500, having left the hearings in Washington and making the trip to and from Dayton by aeroplane, for the purpose of addressing the churchmen. He paid an enthusiastic tribute to the part which the churches, through the Federal Council, had had in furthering world peace and in supporting the munitions inquiry. He declared that the pressure on him in Washington was so great that he would not have felt he had any right to leave to speak to any other group than a representative body of church leaders. He spoke for an hour and forty minutes, giving concrete evidence of the way in which munitions makers had been willing even to sell supplies to other countries to be used against our own men in case of another war. The Senator was interrupted nearly a score of times by spontaneous applause and received a magnificent ovation."

The revelations by the Senate Investigating Committee under Senator Nye, as coming to us through the daily press recently, have been amazing and are calculated to make one believe and hope that President Roosevelt is correct in declaring that the chances of war will be decreased when profits, present and prospective to munitions manufacturers, shall be eliminated. It has been shown that much of the propaganda for war is carried on by those who, with great profits in view, manufacture and sell the munitions and implements of warfare.

A CENT-A-MEAL BOX.

It may seem little. The sound of it may not invite or thrill, but verily things are not what they seem. Do you say "grace" at the table? When seated alone or with the family to partake of God's bounty, do you ask His presence and His blessing and invoke added strength in His name and for His service that you may, with the strength thus derived, do His will? Very many do. Now if our words, which are cheap, mean anything, why not show our gratitude by deed of hand and heart. This is a marvellous arrangement that some great minds and noble hearts have provided for us. They are beautiful, these boxes labelled "A Cent-A-Meal." This writer has eaten at polite tables, with those who are cultured and refined, with linen that was spotless and tableware that was in keeping, but nowhere among the rich or poor, on the wall or the poorest supplied table, has he found one of these "Cent-A-Meal" boxes unbecoming or a misfit. They measure up. They are made of a beautiful, glazed maple that is attractive. The adorn rather than detract from the center of the dining-table. So anxious are the promoters of world friendship and brotherly love to have individuals and families adopt the custom and keep the "Cent-A-Meal" box on the table, they have arranged to sell them to any individual desiring at ten cents each. After "grace" at the table show gratitude to the heavenly Father, the Giver of the meal, by dropping a penny in the aperture of the box, large enough to receive it, which penny you dedicate to make this a Christian world," enabling men and women to preach, teach and live Christ across America and around the world." The beautiful little chest, among other sentences, bears this inscription: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." We can only do for the least of these when we have done it in the name of Christ, our elder Brother.

Would you not like to have on your table this beautiful little chest bearing the simple but impressive title: "In Gratitude to the Giver of All Good Gifts, as a Family We Dedicate A-Cent-A-Meal." The box will hold three hundred and fifty cents and before you know it, you and your family have, in loving gratitude to your heavenly Father, who supplies your daily needs, dedicated $3.50 to Him that the message of His redeeming love may be shared with others in America and around the world who are in need and who are in darkness and in the throes of death without Him. Some have already ordered, others are ordering, this beautiful symbol and token of gratitude to adorn their tables and for use in their homes. It is well. The use will grow on one and you will be surprised how quickly you will achieve the joy of dropping a penny in the "Cent-A-Meal" box while each meal is being enjoyed. When the box is full it can be carried to the proper authority and sent in to the cause of making ours a Christian world.

ROLLINS COLLEGE ANNIVERSARY.

The fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Rollins College will be celebrated in the Congregational church at Orange City, Florida, on January 29th. Elaborate plans have been formulated and prominent men will participate in the celebration. Dr. Jay Stocking, Moderator of the General Council, will deliver the commemoration address and Dr. Edward M. Noyes, of Seabreeze, will deliver the historical address. There will be other elements in a most interesting program. Among other things will be the dedication of a bronze tablet on the church, honoring the organization of Rollins.

At the first meeting of the Congregational Association of Florida, which is now the Florida Congregational Conference, steps were taken working toward the founding of the college, and a year later at Orange City it was voted and a special meeting of the Association was held three months later when the final steps were taken, trustees elected, a site was chosen in Winter Park, and the college was thus launched. This occurred fifty years ago. A Congregational college has never been under denominational control, but all such colleges have been independent, except as they have been fosered by denominational agencies until they were strong enough to be self-supporting. Rollins College has had a fine history and is especially going forward now under the leadership of Dr. Hamilton Holt. This celebration is awakening a great deal of interest and there will be a great many leaders not only among Congregationalists, but others who will attend the anniversary.

A MESSAGE TO THE CHURCHES.

(Adopted by the Biennial Meeting of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. held in Dayton, Ohio, December 4-7, 1934.)

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, united by the ties of steadfast historic evangelical faith, is moved to address the pastors and people of its constituent bodies. It would face the situation confronting the world today with an abiding assurance of the person and power of Jesus Christ as Saviour and Lord. In this confidence it would look out upon the present age with sympathetic understanding and solicitude.

I. The Difficulties of this Age.

We recognize the difficulty of this age, its perplexity, futility and wrongness in many areas of life. We are faced, for example, with the constant threat of war. We know that war means brutality, tragic waste of lives and the chaos resulting from loss of ideals and standards in every department of human life. We know that war solves no problems but leaves only added embitterment between nations and more baffling problems for future ages to solve. True, the peace of exhaustion still endures but it seems only an armistice. The nations are rearming feverishly and people talk almost complacently about "the next war."

All about us in the social order we look out upon evils of political corruption in civic affairs, upon unemployment, strikes and unrest in industry, and upon racial discrimination with its resulting biterness. Our age seems proverbial for lawlessness and crime, and the evils of lynching flame into new brutality. Business integrity has been found lacking in high places and gangsters terrorize our cities.

This is a dark picture. But over against it we would emphasize the tremendous summons to awakened purpose and heroic action which such an age presents to men and women of Christian faith and character. The very menace of the present order of things may well be God's judgment upon us for our spiritual blindness, moral cowardice and personal and social sins. But God's judgments are meant to be a stimulus to repentance, not despair; and may also call us to a fresh and searching appraisal of ourselves and of our task. A crisis like the present means a breaking up of old habits, gives a chance for improvement and, had we the grace to receive it, might lead to a new birth of religion and a new plateau of spiritual attainment for mankind.

II. A Frank Discussion of Our Short Comings.

In the face of the evils of this age we must confess with shame that the Christian conscience has been too uninformed and unawakened and the Christian Church too divided and, alas, often too absorbed in preserving its own existence and too unaware of the real problems of humanity to be able effectively to summon mankind to the nobler, juster way of Christ. The Church itself has been caught in the downward drift of life. The very sins from which our world is suffering and which threaten to destroy civilization itself we confess with sorrow that we find within the Church. The world suffers from class divisions and within the Church we too often find the same drawing apart of privileged from under-privileged folk. The world suffers from race hatreds and within the Church we find that members of different races cannot always meet on a plane of recognized equality. The world suffers from the nationalism of governments that refuse to yield a particle of sovereignty to insure closer unity and peace, and within the Church we often find a nerrowness of sympathy and outlook akin to nationalism. Churches which remain satisfied with local or denominational success, in place of a sacrificial concern for the total Christian cause in the community and throughout the earth, make the Church seem futile and feeble when it needs to be united and strong to bear witness against a secular and warring world. If the most menacing sins of our day are group sins, the evils that organizations do, then the Church, as a group devoted to ideal ends, should all the more embody and practice the highest ethics of group life. It must do so if it is to preach cooperation to business and peace to the nations.

Deeper yet we feel that an adequate sense of the wrongness of our age and of the Church would root down in a humble and heart-searching recognition of our own failure as individuals adequately to hear or heed the accents of the Holy Spirit or completely devote ourselves to the supreme ideals of life revealed to us in Jesus Christ our Lord. Individuals make up society and it is as individuals and not alone as social groups that we have sinned. Had we been more sensitive to spiritual values we could not have tolerated the social evils which degrade mankind.

III. A Call for a New Commitment of Our Lives.

Out of such a world situation as our age presents there comes, therefore, a call for repentance, for cleansing and for a new commitment of our lives to an awakened faith and a vigorous forward-looking conception of the Christian task.

Such a commitment, with varying emphases according to background, temperament and denominational tradition, would, we believe, include such goals as these:

1. A Renewed Faith in God.

God's revelation of Himself in Holy Scripture and His continued guiding presence in the history of the Christian Church give us faith to believe that in the very turmoil of our age the eternal God is present and seeking even now to reveal Himself to men anew in fresh and vital ways. "God is not dead nor doth He sleep." His creative presence in the physical universe is being made plain to us more clearly day by day through the increasing insights of science into the vast orderliness of nature, while the power and inevitability of His moral laws stand out in ever sharper outline as we come to recognize His guiding and redemptive activity in the history of men and nations. Increasingly we come to see His laws not only in the natural order but in human relations, in economics and social welfare and moral standards. We can no more evade these moral laws of God than we can ignore the laws of chemistry and physics. "We cannot break God's laws, we can only break ourselves against them." "Nothing is so powerful as an idea whose hour has struck," and we believe that the hour has struck for a positive and commanding summons to our generation to recognize, honor and obey the living, ever-present, eternal and contemporarry God whose voice, heard of old through prophets and apostles, comes afresh to men today out of the very events and issues of these times. Until we find the God who is working out His purposes in spite of all the personal and social sins in the world, and are found of Him, we begin at no beginning, we work to no end. But, with the Church's historic experience of God renewed and reilluminated in our own day, we go forward unafraid.

2. A Re-affirmed Loyalty to Christ.

And, not only so, but God's supreme revelation of Himself in the Person, life and work of Jesus Christ fits this age with renewed and increasing authority. The adequate and convincing presentation of the significance for us of His life, His atoning death upon the cross and His triumph over death is needed as never before. Christ's way of the cross opens up before us more clearly than ever as the only path to the redemption of the race from the specific evils of our day. Moreover, the wistfulness for God and spiritual comfort which sometimes emerges rather surprisingly in modern life and is expressed in the new awakening toward worship and the sense of need of personal adjustment to spiritual values testifies that the Holy Spirit of God has not ceased to strive with men but still bears witness to the unquenchable yearning for God in the depths of the human heart.

God's revelation of Himself in Christ, therefore, calls again to the people of this age to accept His way of life, His standard of values and, above all, the redemptive reality and power of His cross in all the relationships of business, citizenship, world brotherhood and Christian fellowship. We cannot be loyal to Him and not be deeply moved by the contrast between His law of love and the actual condition of the world.

3. A Commitment to Christian Social Ideals.

Translated into concrete terms, the Christian Gospel means, over against an indifferent and secular world, an insistence upon human values as the supreme test in all the relationships of life. It means a searching criticism of a social order which, in contrast with the vast fruitfulness of nature and invention, leaves millions in poverty, provides no adequate protection against unemployment or the disability arising from disease, accident or old age. It means we can no longer condemn a whole block of our fellow human beings to permanent and discriminatory restriction of opportunity because of race or color. It means a complete turning away from the tragic peril and waste of war and from the condoning of coercion, violence, vast armaments, the sale of munitions for profit and the economic exploitation of weaker nations.

While the Church cannot wisely commit itself to concrete partisan programs, it must nevertheless all the more clearly summon the conscience of mankind to review, contrast and evaluate such programs in the light of the Christian ideal. Over against the vast impersonal organization of modern society, by reason of which men are ever in peril of not even realizing the effects of their unsocial and selfish action, it must create and make sensitive an informed public opinion and social conscience. It is not the task of the Church to formulate methods by which reforms are to proceed. Its task is rather to judge and evaluate every method and proposal, and set forth those goals of human good to which, by its deepest faith, it stands committed. The Church stands today on a new social frontier. Its responsibility is so to proclaim the contemporary application of the eternal truths of the Gospel that men wrestling with the practical problems of a new order shall not lack moral guidance or spiritual support.

In establishing Christian ideals in the social order, laymen are especially involved. They are inevitably and often times unwillingly geared into the present economic system by inheritance and environment. It is they who must frankly face the anti-Christian aspects of current economic life. The call is for Christian business and professional men to recognize and be sensitive to the details of justice and human brotherhood implicit in many phases of our acquisitive society and in their place to seek to build a better civilization in harmony with Christian standards. There must be no gap between clergy and laity at this point. For the practical solution of these social problems the laymen of the Christian Church are peculiarly fited and are situated where they can be greatly influential. Above all, it is necessary in this work of social exploration toward a more Christian way of living together that we maintain that

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The church should be interested in three subjects at the close of the year 1934. Cartoonists, editorial writers in the daily press, contributors to current magazines and political speakers during the year have constantly emphasized the importance of the legalized liquor traffic, the supremacy of commerce and industry, and the elimination of the church as a primary factor in social life. For several years these ideas have been forging their way to the editorial columns and front pages of newspapers and magazines. Very carefully, efforts have been made to create public sentiment favorable to these ideas. These efforts have not been in vain. After so much reading upon one or two subjects many people believe what they read.

During the past week several editorials have appeared in current newspapers calling attention to the business activity preceding the Christmas holiday season. Without exception these writers named the legalized liquor traffic as one of the chief factors in the increase of business in the stores. And with this explanation many of the writers include an attack upon the church people who still believe that the manufacture, sale and use of alcoholic liquors is an evil. These attacks upon people who disagree with the present trend of things, are made without discrimination for the purpose of breaking down the morale of the church and its leadership.

In the appeal for commercial and industrial development there is an increasing tendency to disregard the observance of the Sabbath as a day of rest and religious worship. Attempts are being made, with increasing effort and boldness, to commercialize the holy Sabbath day. Sunday baseball, Sunday movies, and other forms of recreation, with financial remuneration are examples of this movement. These are justified on the theory that public opinion should be the final court of appeal in such matters. Courts are saying: "The people should have what they want." But suppose people want your life, or your property, what then? Go a step further in this matter and suppose the farmers want to plow their fields, the merchants open their stores and the industrial leaders run their factories, what is the answer? If it be right to engage in amusement and recreation on Sunday for financial profit, why is it not right to plow on Sunday for profit? Let the people who want Sunday amusements answer this question.

The third item of present day attack is the church and its leadership. Short story writers are required by the literary critics to eliminate all references to religion as fundamental in life. Distinctly religious stories are not acceptable to publishers of current newspapers and magazines. Two generations ago school reading books carried religious stories. Today, that type of reading is excluded from the school books of the state. In many other ways, directly and indirectly, efforts are being made to eliminate the Christian religion from every social relationship. Ministers are held up for ridicule and criticism. Politicians solicit their votes, but discredit their advice.

These observations open questions too extensive to be discussed in one column. It is plainly evident that a large group of people are seeking to eliminate every moral and spiritual consideration in the financial, social and civic plans of the present time. These would be leaders in press, on forum and in all other public utterances would answer every question in terms of, "Does it pay?" The fundamental question of the church should be, "Is it right, according to the Word of God?" For the present the church should face these situations with new courage and increased faith. For the Christian religion will not lose in this struggle. If it can be challenged to clear thinking and conscientious religious convictions, the attacks of the present day will be a blessing and not a curse. The gates of hell shall not prevail against the church of Jesus Christ. And the church has nothing to fear in the present array against its principles and program.

THE NEW YEAR.

The tides of time sweep on. Again we find ourselves on the threshold of the new year. "Happy New Year" is on the lips of friend and neighbor. We are wishing for each other happiness and prosperity as we enter another division of time.

In most instances, the prosperity that we wish for is material. Material prosperity seems to be about the only kind of prosperity that interests us. Many seem to have the feeling that happiness can be had only as a result of material possessions. The prevailing philosophy of this age is happiness by way of material acquisition. We are a bit stupid; we are slow to learn. Wealth has more oftentimes brought sorrow and distress than happiness and pleasure. As we look back over the tragic years of '29, '30, '31, and '32—the depression period as we called it,—we are forced to conclude that the kind of material prosperity that we and the nations of the earth had enjoyed during the few preceding years was the contributing cause of the partial collapse of our capitalistic system, which, by the way, played havoc with our standards of honesty and, in many instances, with individual integrity. Recently, it seems to have been the plan and purpose of the government, labor, and industry to bring back the material prosperity of the '30's. In fact, we seem to be endeavoring to buy back the very thing that wrecked us materially and put a severe strain upon our social structure.

Another new year is opening up before us. One thing it offers to every individual with equal generosity, and that is time. Time is the most precious thing that God has given to us, and He has given it to all alike. Another three hundred and sixty-five days is in prospect for all. The moments, the hours, the days are ours. What are we going to do with them? One will idle his precious moments away, complain of the lack of food and clothing, and blame severely the world in which he lives. The fault lies with himself and with no one else. Others improve their moments, secure material values, and count themselves fortunate and successful until uncontrollable winds sweep adversely, leaving them penniless. Then they, too heap condemnation upon the world with its treacherous trends. They themselves are to blame. They are reaping only what they have been sowing. He who sows to wealth will reap wealth's rewards. The world, together with its riches, passeth away. Things that are timely and belong only to time can neither endure nor are they eternal. There are those yet in the world, thank God, who are able to make a spiritual appraisal of time, to sense the value of time and the purpose for which it has been given, and to properly evaluate life and its mission. They are they who are the "salt of the earth and the light of the world," To them, wealth is a means to an end, not an end in itself. It is of value only as it may be used for the development of the real things of life and the enhancement of values that are eternal.

What are you going to do with the year 1935? The answer to this question will be found in what you do with the opening moments of that year. We allow the clock to tick off the moments without concern. We should ever be reminded that as the clock ticks off the moments so it ticks off the years and as we spend the moments of time so we will spend the larger cycles of time.

I wish for my friends and acquaintances a year filled with hopes and happiness, a year crowded with commendable achievements, a year filled with the good things of life and material possessions as they may be required. Rather, I join with the apostle of the past in wishing for one and all material prosperity according as they will permit themselves to be prospered in spiritual things. As we bid farewell to the old year, may we greet the new year with faith, optimism, and assurance! L. E. SMITH.

THE LORD IS MY SHEPHERD.

The Sunday school teacher of a class of girls of high school age finished the lesson entitled, "Jesus the Good Shepherd," by asking the question, "Can you say 'The lord is my Shepherd'?" No response came readily but finally the spokesman of the class said, "It depends upon what that means." Ah, it means so much that the depth can not be fully sounded, yet how much we need to seek to know the full meaning of these beautiful words. The members of the invisible church are likened to sheep all through the Bible; sheep who had gone astray but whom the Lord hath sought out and gathered into the fold, cleansed with the precious blood of His dear Son. The Lord Jesus Christ is the true Shepherd for He laid down His life for His sheep and when we say "The Lord is my Shepherd" we should mean that: we hear His voice, John 10:3; we follow Him, John 10:4; we know Him, John 10:14; we trust Him, Psalm 23:1. We need to say as the little girl did: "The Lord is my Shepherd, that's all I want,' for all that we need we find in Him for He is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption. If we are His people, and the sheep of His pasture, we can say with the author of the shepherd Psalm: "The Lord is my (personal) Shepherd; I shall not want." No good thing will He withhold from them that walk uprightly. "He maketh me to lie down in green pastures for they are just as fresh and green as in David's time and the rest is so blessed." He leadeth me beside the still waters," the waters of stillness which are fed by the upper springs, typical of peace with God, and the nether springs, typical of the peace of God; and thus is my soul restored. Then comes the blessed thought that "He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His Name's sake." He takes my hand and walks with me, leads me away from the paths of sin into the path which is as a shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day. His ways are ways of pleasantness, and all His paths are peace. "Yet, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death:" the value into which no light seems to shine; the shadow which seems deeper than death could be—yet "I will fear no evil for Thou art with me." His promises still hold fast and His voice speaks through the darkness with His wonderful words, "Fear not, I am with thee," and His presence overshadows us. "Thy rod and Thy staff they comfort me." He holds the rod and says to us, "I love thee, I love thee, pass under the rod," and we stoop to do His will, kissing the rod as we pass under it. Then His staff lifts us up as we cling to Him in the weakness of our submission as our will lets go to His will. And after the test comes the prepared table, the oil of annointing, the overflowing cup of blessing; rich rewards for perfect submission to the whole will of God. Nor is that all for the blessings that goodness and mercy bring shall "follow me all my days" in this earthly tabernacle and into the house of the Lord from which we shall go no more out forever. W.

PISGAH (ALABAMA) LETTER.

The church here seems to be starting the new Conference year with a very hopeful spirit. Our Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Societies are doing splendid work.

We have a new superintendent for our Sunday School, Brother A. M. Callahan. He has a new plan for handling the "Home Department." We have some who are old and poor and instead of sending a teacher out to see and teach them he takes a number of the school and visits them. If they are needy they carry them some presents.

I shall not soon forget our first visit of this kind. Some four or five miles cut from here lives a couple, both above eighty years of age. And, too, they were in very needy circumstances. We got together about ten dollars worth of supplies and four or five cars of us went one Sunday afternoon to see them. About a mile before reaching their home we came to a lonely road that led through the forest. Away back in the forest we came to a lonely pine pole hut and this was where our aged friends lived. We all got out and went in and held a short service and taught them the Sunday School lesson. This was a great surprise to them and tears filled their eyes as we brought in and presented our gifts and their hearts were too filled for them to express their gratitude. We returned home happy because we realized it was more blessed to give than to receive.

Some two weeks ago I took a trip with a friend to a distant part of the county and spent the night. I don't know whether the church just took advantage of my absence or did not know about it, but be that as it may, while I was away they visited the parsonage with one of the best pcundings they have ever given me and they have given many good ones.

Dr. F. P. Ensminger visited us a few days ago and brought with him Rev. W. C. Bell of the African mission. Bro. Bell spoke for us the night they were here and it was indeed fine to listen to one who had had so many years of experience in far-away Africa. Dr. Ensminger spoke at Brown Town, where used to be a Congregational church. The following morning they both spoke at the school. The people were delighted with their visit.

We are expecting great things here for this year not only for our lonely little church, but we are hoping and praying that we may be enabled to do some substantial missionary work this year.

J. H. HUGHES, Pastor.

THE GLORY THAT BLOSSOMS RED.

"A few more years shall roll, a few more seasons come," sang Horatius Bonar. He was thinking of the end of life, death and the tomb. We do not often sing in that tone and spirit today. We believe "Life is real! Life is earnest! And the grave is not its goal."

For some perhaps the past year has been rather sorrowful, possibly drab and dull, and for others really depressing. The good world God has made is often out of joint, and we find ourselves in confusion and turmoil. A spirit of complaint is too frequently common. Heaven pity the soul that can see only the sorrowful side of life! And yet there are multitudes who really are melancholy and lachrymose. Would God we who teach and preach could make them otherwise!

"Life is what you make it" is a commonplace saying, but it is very true. If it were as forceful as true, many despondent souls would be wakened from despair and lifted into newness of life. Granted we all have had our ups and downs, granted the world is somewhat awry and a frowning Providence instead of the smiling face of God is seen, none should despair.

The end of the year is the time for retrospect. If we look only at its mistakes and blundering follies, we might shame ourselves into utter defeat. But they are done; we cannot help them now. Say not the evil men do lives after them. Let it die and be buried in the depths of the sea.

No mortal soul had more to regret than Saul of Tarsus. He sought to hide himself in the wilderness that he might repent and forget, but forgetfulness was not in seclusion. He could better forget when old things were put away and the old self was crucified with Christ. "Nevertheless I live; yet not I but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave Himself for me."

If we could only crucify old lusts, old vanities, and selfish ambitions, life might be very much changed. It is the man within that needs changing. The things without are of little concern to the man who is going ahead.

There are new worlds for exploration. Humankind is yet in God's kindergarten. The world within the heart has greatest lessons for our learning. To know ourselves, our needs, and our possibilities, a lifetime will not suffice.

To have overcome self, to have achieved victory over weaknesses and wickedness, is to let the superfluous and extraneous and things that have no place in our lives fade out and die. And from these dead things of the old self there blossoms red a glorious way of living in eternal beauty of Christian character and loveliness of grace. On stepping-stones of their dead selves men rise to higher things.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

MISSIONS

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., Secretary.

ON THE THRESHOLD OF 1935.

"The grim realities of the world situation are the environment in which the Church must live and work. They react on the Church's mission at every point and must be reckoned on and faced. As we see these realities day by day in the pages of the press they are sobering enough. The dominant forces in the world situation would seem to challenge the Church and its missions.

"There is the direct frontal attack of an anti-Christian communism. The Christian Church cannot hastily condemn communism with its ideal of world brotherhood and concern for the common man. But alone amongst world forces it is communism which attacks religion as such, and when with its wonderful missionary spirit it pushes its anti-God campaign out into many lands its conflict with the missionary forces of our faith is inevitable. . . .

Nationalism is spreading rapidly. In land after land dictators are in the saddle, carrying out nationalistic regimes of varying degrees of severity. Fascist movements are pressing the ideals of nationalism in lands where it is not yet in power. Nationalism as such is not to be condemned by the Christian, but despite its frequent eagerness to claim the Church of the country as its ally in the nationalist cause it is often a subtler danger than communism to our faith and its spread. Christian missions, with their aim of building up a Church out of all peoples and nations and tongues, are and must be unrepentantly international. A clash is certain sooner or later between a nationalism which suppresses liberty of conscience, and makes 'dangerous' thoughts an indictable offense and a Christianity which, when true to itself, is always dangerous.

"But it is in their determination to capture the coming generation through securing complete control of education and of all youth organizations, that there lies in nationalism and communism alike the great danger to the future of the Church. Still more alarming is the willingness of youth to have it so.

"The shadow of war lies across the world, and the tendencies of present-day nationalism make for bitterness between races and peoples. The Disarmament Conference has made no way. In the past year wars have swept over many mission fields—Manchuria, China, Paraguay, Bolivia, and Arabia; and we are nearer to the danger of world war than we were a year ago.

"In the economic realm, . . . confusion reigns in a world where, while men are starving for bread, wheat by the million busheds is being burned. We seem in the sway of blind economic forces which no statesman or financier sees means to control. It is economic fear which lies behind the phenomena of communism, nationalism, and the danger of war.

"Men's hearts are failing them for fear, is a true picture of the world today. The world is paralyzed by fear. . . .

"It is good to take measure of our difficulties and the forces against us. This is no day for sentiment or dreams. The stark realities in the situation in the world at large and in our own country stare us in the face. The danger of war, aggressive nationalism, anti-Christian communism, poverty overseas, disappointing response at home, all these are stern realities. But for the Church these are not the only realities, nor the greatest. They are but the shadows compared with the realities of our heritage in Christ."—Missionary Council of the Church of England.

JAPAN AND THE OXFORD GROUP.

By Toyohiko Kagawa.

(From the preface to the Japanese translation of "For Sinners Only.")

"There are social, ethical, and religious reasons why the Oxford Group Movement has such power. In the faith of this Group in the direct guidance of God lies the secret.

"The essence of religion lies nowhere else than in this conviction of God's direct guidance. Is it not true that we have been too deferential to materialistic civilization, and so have failed to emphasize the spiritual experience of God's direct revelation and guidance to the uttermost? The 'Quiet Time' practised in the Group is both fully personal and fully social; it is also Oriental and Scriptural.

"Transcending creed and doctrine, and also denominations and religious institutionalism, the Group puts emphasis on House-parties. They restore to the family, the home unit, the warmth of spiritual fellowship which it had completely lost since the eighteenth century.

"This Oxford Group Movement . . . has recovered the flavor of First Century Christianity. Moreover, as a worker in the Kingdom of God Movement, I have much to learn from its Christian fervor, from its manner of putting forth its utmost for one wandering soul. It is a fact that the building up of society will never come while we forget the individual. Where can you discover any result from social revolutions, without the conversion of the individual soul?

"I do not mean by this that there is no need for social change. It is just because there is need for such change that I insist primarily upon the need for a genuine religious movement such as the Oxford Group, centered upon the transformation of the individual. I am convinced that they are rowing in the main current of pure Christianity.

"See! Though they admit that they are evangelists of the individual, they swarm like locusts and attack the cities! Ninety or a hundred of them at a time attack a city with a cell system like that of the Communist organizers. They move from soul to soul in close single combat, ready to shed their last drop of blood for the extension of the Kingdom. They are indeed knights, Crusaders of the New Age. It is a great blessing to England that several thousand Oxford students have been influenced by this Movement. It is also a great contribution to world history. One feels that one's prayers of many years have been answered."

FROM JAPAN.

Dear Editor:

Many of you are interested in Toshio Sato (now Kato). She spent four years at Elon College and graduated there. I suppose few of you keep in touch with her now nor am I supposing that Palmer College folks often hear from Miss Sasaki who studied there, or that Defiance people often hear from Awano San. Mrs. Fry sent the three girls over together to prepare for leadership among their people and they still seem to be carrying on. Toshio's letter received December 26th is as follows:

"I was very glad to receive your letter. It was very much appreciated indeed. It made me go back to the time I spent there at Amesbury where many sweet memories are still remaining in my heart. . .. . Please give my best regards to everyone of the people whom I met and enjoyed their acquaintance. I remember Rev. and Mrs. English very well. Are you corresponding with them?

Utsunorinya is very lonely since Mrs. Fry died and Dr. Fry has gone back to the States. I wanted to meet him and tell him 'Soyonara' but I couldn't go to Yokohama. Maki Chan (the boyish name for Mr. Fry's adopted son, T.) is living in Tokyo studying music I heard but I can't tell you what he expects to do with music. He is a tall young man. Did you hear about Mrs. Kitano's death last spring? (Mr. Kitano was the Pres.-trained Japanese, who, studying at Zion City in America, rejected the leader's claim to be a reincarnated John the Baptist. When Mr. K. returned from America, he entered our work serving in Tokyo, then in Sendai. His son who also studied in America is known to some readers. Mrs. Kitano was a most self-sacrificing and friendly woman. It was largely through their efforts that the interdenominational Sendai Orphanage was started. The Kitano families (married children) are living in Tokyo.

Sasaki San (formerly of Palmer College—a fortune teller's daughter) who was at Washington State with us is teaching Prano 'Awano San' (formerly of Defiance) is married and teaching a girls' school in Kyoto. Her mother died some time ago. . . .

This year has been such a bad year for our home and I've been kept so busy nursing sickness that my correspondence has to be neglected.

Only daughter of ours died this summer after a sickness of one and a half days. She was 7 years old. Three boys are very well but take all my time. Lovingly,

TOSHIO."

M. A. TRUE.

A KICK WHICH BECAME A BOOST.

The little church at Chi Yang fell on hard days. Her members melted away. Then came the soldiers. "Friends," said the volunteer preacher, Mr. Wang, "either we do something or allow our church to be occupied by the military.' So they started services again; then a school for girls; then Thousand Character Classes. The Commanding officer of the Army division turned out to be a Christian with a desire to help. They outgrew old quarters and built a new church. In late October, Rev. Rowland M. Cross attended the dedication. The campaign for funds was promoted by three loyal sons, two students in Yenching and Jefferson, respectively, and one a teacher in Tunghsien. The first person to offer public congratulations was a non-Christian, leading business man from an adjoining town. Bowing low to the cross on the altar and the pictures of Christ above it, he then turned to the congregation and thanked them and the Kunglihui for what it had done, and was doing, for the community. The pastor, a local farmer, serves without pay.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

Leaving a record of over 6,000 killed, wounded or missing, the recent typhoon in Japan struck Kobe and lashed its deadly tail near Kobe college but did little damage other than blowing windows out and doors in, ripping tiles from the roof and uprooting trees. The typhoon struck twice between 7 and 9 in the morning. The girls who had reached the college were corralled in the gym for safety. Others were marooned in electric cars. That night, with the powerhouse ruined, the boulevard was in darkness and the police and volunteer scouts directed traffic with paper lanterns. Other schools and hospitals were hard hit, losing lives and property. Says Dr. Charlotte DeForest, "We are wonderfully fortunate, and yet humbled, by the very responsibility that this blessing puts on us."

IF ONLY—

Soon after the typhoon left death and destruction in Japan a cable came from the National Christian Council of China which read: "Christians in China send sympathy national disaster." When Dr. Kagawa visited Shanghai in the late spring he displayed a Christian humility and understanding heart in his message to the Chinese Christian community. In the preface of his book, "Love and the Law of Life," Dr. Kagawa said, "It costs me intolerable shame to reflect upon the violence Japanese militarism has done and is doing in China in spite of all my prayers."

A WORLD-WIDE HUNGER.

More than 2,500 persons jammed the hall in Durban. South Africa, where Dr. John R. Mott spoke on his recent African tour. Hundreds could not get in. First, Dr. Mott preached on "Sowing and Reaping." Following a hymn he invited all who wished to dedicate their lives to serious "sowing" to remain for conference with him. Hardly anyone left! Then came a second talk on "Temptation." Says Rev. Henry A. Stick of Adams, "People are still hungry for the Gospel and will listen and respond when it is preached effectively.

MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

The Christian Missionary Association of the North Carolina and Virginia Congregational-Christian Conference has promised $25.00 per month to the work at Winston-Salem. That is a good place to invest in Home Missions activity. Memberships are $5.00. We want $100 paid up memberships this year. Send yours in promptly. Thank you.

A MESSAGE TO THE CHURCHES.

spirit of love and patient understanding which shall make it possible, even across all honest difference as to duty and method, to keep alive the consciousness of brotherhood and unity.

4. A CALL TO PERSONAL DEVOTION OF LIFE.

In terms of personal living this call to our age means a summons to new and sacrificial consecration by Christian men and women everywhere to do the will of God as revealed in Christ and as challenged by this present evil world. It means to live simply and unostentatiously, to worship in profound and humble quest for the divine guidance and the inner light, to fulfil life's duties with honor and brotherly regard for all other human beings, to live at peace and substitute love and good-will for all violence, class hatred, race prejudice or nationalistic pride and warfare.

Our deepest resources, after all, are in a vital communion with God as Christ has revealed Him to us. Only as we dwell deep in the spiritual verities of life shall we have the poise or lay hold of the reserve of strength we need to stand unshaken in difficult days. We face a crisis in character as well as in economics—indeed a deeper crisis. Is not this the real heart of our age's need and trouble? Too many people are trying to get along without any vital, sustaining sense of God. In the first century St. Paul, by definite moral and spiritual counsels, summoned Christians to endure a great moral crisis. In the world of the twentieth century the church must continue this apostolic task. Through worship, through meditation on the Scriptures, through the sacraments, through confession and humility and a sincere seeking of the inner light, we must call people through prayer, to be reconciled to God. Then shall the peace of God enter into lives now frantically seeking superficial pleasure and excitement or beset by sin and fear and inner conflicts.

5. A DAY OF RE-BIRTH FOR THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

Obviously, in order effectively to proclaim such a conception of life as our age requires, the Church herself must, in deep contrition for her own sins and shortcomings, set her house in order. Competitive denominationalism, with its resulting over-churching of small communities and disunited, inefficient spiritual service to large communities, must cease. Provincialism, racialism, ecclesiasticism, must be left behind. The church may well examine its vested interests and inquire if it has given too many economic hostages to the status quo.

The Church stands against the background of history and the tremendous need of our time as the divine agency for serving human need and revealing the love of Christ to men. It is a universal society, admitting no breach on grounds of nation, race or class. It is the fellowship of those who are constrained by the love of Christ to seek fulfillment to His spirit and purpose both in the life which now is and that which is to come. It has the greatest commission of any organization in the world. To bring men into personal fellowship with God in Christ, to guide them, through the Scriptures and the indwelling presence of the Holy Spirit, into ways of personal living which conform to Christ's law of love; to help them envision a society in which that law will be the governing principle:—this seems to be the task of the Church today. To meet that task it has great resources in its noble music, its century-old traditions of liturgy and worship, its wealth of poetry, architecture, art and biography—its saints and prophets, missionaries, preachers and martyrs —and most of all, in its sense of unity with One who is the first-born among many brethren, even Christ the great head of the holy undivided Church, invisible and unconquerable.

Surely there is a bugle call in all this for a fresh and vital presentation of the gospel of Christ both here and at home and throughout the entire world. Now as never before should we be confronting men and nations with Christ and the searching implications of His message for the whole of life. Not only so, but, in view of all these things, has not the hour come for new steps toward cooperative and united action? Must we not lay plans for further unification of denominations historically and temperamentally akin, for efforts toward greater fellowship and cooperative federated action between all denominations, for instilling in all ministers a realization that they represent not a single denomination but the entire Church of Christ, and for the creating of a great absorbing passion and concern on the part of laymen and clergymen alike to set forward the cause of Christ and His ideals and values in every department of modern life?

To a realistic, determined and courageous facing of the religious situation which confronts us, the Federal Council, as the servant of the Churches of Christ in North America, would, therefore, call the conscience and faith and purpose of all who love and serve our Lord. Mankind is on the march. New conceptions, some good, some bad, are taking form in every area of human life. In the realm of moral progress and spiritual values the Church must take the lead. We, therefore, summon laymen as well as clergy, and especially we summon youth, to whom tomorrow will belong, to join in a great surge forward toward the enthronement of Christ in the life and conscience of our age.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

Rev. F. C. Lester, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

PROFIT AND LOSS.

In our offices, as in other places of business, on December 31st, we will close the books for the year 1934. We will take account of our profits and losses to see whether we have really lost or made money during the year. On December 31st we also close the book of the year on our lives and I wonder if our characters will show more profits than losses. We are always writing our thoughts and actions in the book of life. The book must show either profit or loss.

Suppose we take account of our book of life. Write the word "profits" on one side of a piece of paper and "losses" on the other side. Begin listing your profits. One thing we ought always to be doing is advancing in wisdom. If we have studied and learned new things, we can write those down on the profit side. How much have we advanced in the knowledge of God's Word? Have we attended Leadership Training Schools, read books, and taken advantage of every opportunity to better prepare ourselves for service?

Then comes stature. Have we increased in stature? Have we kept our bodies holy, a fit place for the indwelling of God's spirit? Have we kept them strong and healthy that we might be fit for our best service to God and man? Which is it: profit or loss?

Next, we must consider whether or not we have increased in favour with God. Do we know Him better, love Him more at the end of this year? Have we put Him first in our lives? How much time have we given in His service? Wouldn't it be fine if we had a long list here! It all depends, you see, on what one has actually done.

Last, we should see how we stand with man. What do people think of us? It all depends on how pure and clean our lives have been, how kind and thoughtful of others we have been.

We should have a fine looking profit side in our book of life. But on the other side we must set down the losses. They do not look so good when put into writing. If we would be perfectly frank, I am afraid most of us would have to put in the right-hand column something like this, "Lost Opportunities."

After we have finished writing, let us see how the profits and losses balance. It might look good or it might look bad.

We will close this book of the old year, but we have to keep on writing. There is nothing listed yet for 1935. But we must write. What will you write this year? Last year's record you cannot change. The coming year's record is yours to determine. Let's make the following New Year's resolution: "Resolved, That during the coming year there will be more profits than losses recorded in my book of life."

I. R. C.

In quest of life abundant and eternal, we often find that life is what we do with our struggles and sufferings; how we react to the presence and works of evil, opposition, and hardship in the world; the process of finding faith, joy, and power in a world of doubt, despair, and weakness. It is also such a response to the bounties of God as makes it possible to build His kingdom on the earth, creating the beautiful out of the ugly, the orderly out of the chaotic. It is a challenge to find the incorruptible amid the corruptible, the immortal amid the mortal, the eternally true amid the material and transient, the timeless amid the temporal, the limitless amid the bounded. It is to face the universe of order (yet in which much sorrow, calamity, and despair may occur,) and, resting one's confidence in the principles of God's presence and guidance and of love, service, and sacrifice, to find joy in the sorrow, victory in defeat, assurance in the doubt.—Richard K. Morton, Rockland, Mass.

THE MESSAGE OF THE NEW YEAR.

I asked the New Year for some message sweet,
Some rule of life with which to guide my feet;
I asked. and paused; he answered soft and low,
"God's will to know."

"Will knowledge then suffice, New Year?" I cried;
And, ere the question into silence died,
The answer came, "Nay, but remember, too,
God's will to do."

Once more I asked, "Is there no more to tell?"
And once again the answer sweetly fell,
"Yes; this thing, all other things above:
God's will to love!"

TEMPER.

When I have lost my temper, I have lost my reason too,
I'm never proud of anything which angrily I do,
When I have talked in anger and my cheeks are flaming red,
I have always uttered something which I wish I hadn't said.

In anger, I have never done a kindly deed or wise
But many things for which I felt I should apologize.
In looking back across my life and all I've lost or made,
I can't recall a single time when fury ever paid.

So I struggle to be patient, for I've reached a wiser age,
I do not want to do a thing or speak a word in rage.
I have learned by sad experience that when my temper flies,
I never do a worthy thing, a decent deed or wise.

WHAT DO I KNOW ABOUT GOD?

Christian Endeavor Topic for Jan. 6, 1934.

Ps. 89:1-34; I John 4:16.

Worship.

Hymns: "Nearer, My God, to Thee." "The King of Love, My Shepherd Is." "We May Not Climb the Heavenly Steeps." "God Be With You Till We Meet Again."

Service of Sharing: Short reports on: (1) What has God given me? (2) What does God mean in planning my life? (3) What have I given God?

Discussion.

1. Has God anything to do with my success or failure in school? In business? Does knowing God help one to be a financial success? Are there greater successes in life than making money?

2. Will God help me to plan my life? How shall I know what God's plan for me is? Will daily prayer and Bible reading help to reveal God's way?

3. How can I help God? Have I any responsibility for the people who do not know Him . . . in our neighborhood? In our country? In other countries?

Other Helps.

Two sermons by popular preachers in "Christian Herald," June, 1934: "The Lantern in the Storm," and "I Believe in God."

God, the Creator. Gen. 1:1-8.
God is everywhere. Ps. 139:7-10; Isa. 57:15.
God, the Father. Eph. 4:6; Matt. 6:9.
God is merciful. Ps. 86:1-5.
God is love. I John 4:7-11.
God is a spirit. John 4:24.

WHAT DO I KNOW ABOUT PRAYER?

Christian Endeavor Topic for Jan. 13, 1935.

Luke 11:1-13.

Program.

Prelude: "Sweet Hour of Prayer."

Leader:

"Prayer is the soul's sincere desire,
Uttered or unexpressed,
The motion of a hidden fire
That kindles in the breast.

"Prayer is the Christian's vital breath,
The Christian's native air,
His watchword at the gates of death.
He enters heaven with a prayer."

Moment of silent prayer:

(Close with Solo: "Open My Eyes That I May See.")

Scripture: Luke 11:1-13.

Solo: "In the Secret of His Presence."

Introductory talk:

("There are two avenues of information open to each of us through which we may come to know the meaning of prayer. There is, first of all, the Bible, rich both in information and example. Throughout the Bible prayer is exalted as a high and holy privilege. The examples of prayer are numerous. Not the least of these prayers and the teaching concerning prayer is is the teaching and example of our own blessed Christ. The second avenue is that of personal experience. It is not enough for us to know about prayer by reading the experiences of others. We must come to appreciate the value of prayer through our own personal experience.)

Development of the topic:

I.

Information Concerning Prayer Which Is Found In the Bible.

Short talks selected from the following:

The Spirit's Aid in Prayer. Rom. 8:26-27.
Prayer Enjoined. Luke 18:1.
Prayer in the Early Church. Acts 2:42.
The Prayer of the Righteous. Jas. 5:16.
Brevity Commanded. Matt. 6:7.
Secret Prayer. Matt. 1:35.
Evening Prayer. Mark 6:46.
Submissive Prayer. Luke 22:41-42.

Duet: "The Beautiful Garden of Prayer."

II

What We Know About Prayer Through Personal Experience.

Some of the following questions might be answered:

1. What does prayer mean to you?
2. What happens to one's life when prayer is neglected?
3. What does it cost to pray?
4. Why pray?

Hymn: "Take Time To Be Holy."

Purposeful Prayers:

"Thank God (1) for the privilege of prayer; (2) for the example and teaching of our Christ concerning prayer; (3) for the power of prayer.

"Ask God (1) to help us to become more earnest in our prayer life; (2) to lead us into a deeper appreciation of the privilege of prayer; (3) to help us, that our prayers and our lives may agree."

(Use first stanza of "Dear Lord and Father of Mankind," sung softly. Include the "Amen.")

Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

PETER'S CONVERSION AND CALL.

Lesson I—January 6, 1935.

Golden Text: "And Jesus said unto them, 'come ye after me and I will make you become fishers of men'."—Mark 1:17.

Lesson Text: John 1:35-42; Mark 1:14-18.

We begin a study of the life and letters of Simon Peter, a study which will cover the lessons for the entire quarter. They ought to be rewarding, for there is no biblical character who is more interesting, more human, and more inspiring than Peter. Certainly he is the most picturesque character, and the most sharply marked individuality among the twelve disciples. As Dr. Snowden says, "In a way he is the most likable of the disciples as he is the most human and probably we can understand him better because we see ourselves in him better than in the others. Jesus loved him too and took him into the inner circle of his disciples."

As He Walked.

John and two of his disciples were standing one day when Jesus either approached or passed by. Pointing to Him, John said, "Behold the Lamb of God." He spoke with deep spiritual insight. For what the paschal lamb could not do in burnt offering and sacrifice, Jesus could do—take away the sins of the world. Christ is our sacrifice.

The words "as He walked" are suggestive. There was something about Jesus that drew John's attention to him. Jesus had not at this time performed any miracle, or as far as we know, done any public preaching, but there was that about Him that made John instinctively feel that here was God's Son as well as God's Sacrifice. After all the words "as He walked" have an abiding significance. It is not primarily what we believe or what we say, but how "we walk" that counts, and especially that impresses the world. If a man has the spirit of Christ others will know it. If he does not have it, no amount of lip profession will make much difference.

What Seek Ye?

The words go deep. They get at the heart of things. For in the final analysis what men seek is an insight to their character, as well as a determiner of character. The desires of the heart are the determinative forces of life. Let every man take care as to what claims first place in his affections.

Where Abidest Thou?

Where do you live? Not in what city, or on what street, but in what realm do you live? A man really lives where his thoughts are. As a man thinketh in his heart so is he. Keep thy heart with all diligence for out of it are the issues of life.

Come and See.

Jesus is willing to play fair. He does not arbitrarily impose His claims upon others. He simply invites us to put Him to the test. He is willing to let his way of life speak for itself. He asks us to accept Him only on the basis of investigation and experience. He says, "Try my way of life. Put me to test. Follow the facts born out of investigation and experience." Could anything be fairer?

Simon Peter's Brother.

One of the two men who hear Jesus speak was Andrew. The writer refers to him as Simon Peter's brother. He is better known by that term. Andrew was one of that great number of men who have been out-shone by their more famous brothers or other relatives. But we shall have more to say about Andrew later.

He First Findeth His Own Brother.

Kinship, and friendship offers the logical place to begin to share the good news. Christ would capitalize these normal relationships. And He would have us bear witness for Him in those realms of human relationships which are the most natural. This does not mean that a man should never speak to anybody else about Christ. But it does mean that friendship, the spirit of real friendliness, is the basis of the most effective personal work.

We Have Found the Messiah.

Andrew shared his personal experience. He first of all found Christ himself. That is of primary importance. But when he found Christ, he wanted to tell others. One reason why so many of us do not share Christ with others is because we do not know Christ ourselves.

Thou Art . . . Thou Shalt Be.

Here is the heart of the gospel of Christ. Christ sees us, not simply as we are, but as we may become. He sees not only the real but the ideal. He sees and knows the finer possibilities of our lives. He thinks of us in terms of what we may become. Let every man take hope in this glorious truth of the gospel.

Repent . . . and Believe.

Repent, change your mind, change your thinking—this was the message of John and this was the message of Jesus. This is primary. Centuries before the prophet had said, Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts (or his thinking) . . . We must change our minds and because we must we can. But there must be a motive strong enough. With Jesus the appeal is not to fear but to hope—for the kingdom of heaven is at hand.

Repent . . . and believe—not in the sense of intelectual assent, but of personal trust. Faith is creative. Faith moves out from the frontier of the known into the unknown. Faith in Christ saves.

Fishers . . . Fishers of Men.

They were fishers; they were to become fishers of men. Christ would exalt their calling. He would take their skill and their training and their abilities and set them to higher tasks. He would use their business in the greatest business of all.

To Become.

But is was a process of becoming. They were to grow in grace and in knowledge of Him.

We have invented and modernized more rapidly during the past twenty-five years than we have planned and adjusted ourselves to these inventions and modern tendencies. The whole thought of our national life has been to make more, make better, travel more, and travel faster. Automobiles and good roads have moved millions of people from their contented domiciles into towns and cities; and many more millions still existing in their present place of abode have been enchanted by the outside world, its modernizations and mechanisms. They have carried these things into their homes, and their modes of living have been completely changed. In the changing they have found themselves dissatisfied. The ingenious mind has played the most conspicuous part in the world's development during the past quarter century. Our whole readjustment is a problem for our leaders, social workers, schools, churches, and educators. Unless our social and economic adjustments go hand in hand with our inventions and developments we shall continue to have a restless people. In danger is the government whose subjects are not contented.

SALVATION—WHAT?

"He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved."—Mark 16:16.

"Christian life consists in faith and love," says one. But in order to live the Christian life one must have a comprehensive idea of what salvation is. It cannot be explained in a few words, but maybe we can set forth ideas that will help.

Salvation, first of all, is understood in the manner in which Jesus Christ first used the word. When He healed the sick, He called them "Saved" or He called them "made whole." We understand that the word in Greek which he used for both is the same word. In each case we are told that the body was restored to health and made well.

This leads to the second and the spiritual understanding of salvation. When Jesus forgave sins and imparted eternal life to a soul He called it, "Saved," using the same word as above. If the analogy holds true, and we think it does, then we understand salvation is that of being made morally sound, morally healthy, morally well, made good, or at least started on the way to being good. Witness: Zaccheus and the Prodigal son. Thus salvation is something which takes place in one that causes him, as Peter puts it, to "die to sin and become alive to righteousness."

The conclusion is, as so well put by Robert Speer recently, "Salvation is not a matter of the future but of the present; it is not a rescue from hell but a rescue from self; it is not a rescue for heaven but a rescue for living."

Prayer—Our Father, help us to commit our way unto Thee this day that the good within us may be nurtured unto its best, and that the fruitage of our lives may be all for Thy glory.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

PERFECTION—WHAT?

"Be thou perfect even as your Father in Heaven is perfect."—Matt. 8:12.

We all know that Jesus has taught us to be perfect. How many of us believe that we can attain that perfection in this world? Not a one. Realizing that perfection is impossible, how many have discarded the idea and looked upon the Bible with doubt? Many. Hold on a minute, let us consider.

First of all, is it not true that our ideas of perfection are in terms of ultimate perfection. If so, then that is an error. Well, what is perfection? Perfection is a steadfast purpose toward a certain achievement as well as something achieved. For instance the bud of a rose just bursting through the bark of a limb which holds its embryonic life is just as perfect as the full blown rose to which it later comes. The peach bud, hardly yet in blossom is just as perfect as it is when it reaches maturity in the form of a peach in summer. The baby in its mother's arms is just as perfect as the adult to which it grows a few years later, and more so.

When Jesus was demonstrating what he meant by salvation and perfection he used a child. He said, "Of such is the kingdom of God," and He also said, "except ye become as little children ye shall in no wise enter into the kingdom of Heaven."

Thus, a spiritual born soul finds, like a growing child, he is something new, and that the growth of spiritual life in him is, as Paul puts it, that of "working out his own salvation" by developing the good that is in him to fruitage, and in so doing he finds that God is a presence in him "working both to will and to do his good pleasure." And while it is true that anything less than God is imperfect, it is also to be understood that that perfection is the ultimate perfection to which God intends that we shall develop unto by growing from spiritual babyhood to maturity in His likeness, and that the growth may be just as perfect as the final likeness.

Therefore it is false to dismiss perfection as impossible. There are spiritual energies which we may exalt now; there are joys which we may increase and deepen now; there is a living which we may uplift and ennoble now; and there is a strength which we can add to every element of righteousness now which is a perfection as perfect as heaven; and he who does this the best is the one who keeps ever before him the ideal and strives on thereto looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of faith.

Prayer—Our Father, teach us Thy laws, and though we cannot understand now what we shall be, may we strive for that reward to be like Christ. Teach us how to learn from our mistakes and how to grow in that belief until we shall be born into His likeness.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

WHEREIN WE LIVE.

"As in Adam all die, so in Christ shall all be made alive."—I Cor. 15:22.

Dying to sin, living to righteousness, expresses the whole transaction of a soul being born again.

St. Paul does not assert universal salvation, but he does assert the dependence of life upon a personal vital relation to Christ, and that it is in that relation that we have hope for time and eternity.

A friend said the other day, "If we would behave ourselves and live right we would have no need for salvation, nor for Christ, nor for religion." That friend thinks that in a man's heart is the source of all good and that he is sufficient unto himself. He thinks that the New Testament is a lot of sophistry and has meant nothing to the world, else the world would have been more nearly saved than it is today. That we still teach the Bible and worship God he thinks we are nourishing an empty faith and that we are clinging to a baseless hope. He is far more to be pitied than blamed, though he resents such an idea.

The soul born of Christ knows that Christ is the life,—every day. It goes without successful contradiction that everything which ever came into contact with Christ has lived. When he met the dead body in the road, that body lived. When he stood in the room of a dead child, the child arose. When he stood at the grave of Lazarus, Lazarus came forth. When he met people in the homes and in the market places they became conscious of the presence of a friend and they went away with a new life.

Your spirit and my spirit are being renewed today. Our motives for righteousness are continually being renewed by Him; and in Him we are conscious of touching that which is undying. Whatever we need of truth and everlasting life, we have it in Him; and the more we have of Him, the more of life we have. The more we live with Him, the fuller are our joys. None of these blessings come to us through men, not even through saintly habits to which we might give ourselves. They come through Christ only.

Prayer—Our Father in heaven, we wish the true life, and we wish that our lives might be filled with good and the doing of good. We ask Thee for this blessing today, and in the name of Jesus give it unto us with fresh vigor and hopefulness of soul.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

A BOX OF MATCHES.

"He that ruleth his spirit is better than he that taketh a city."—Ps. 16:32.

"I have a box of matches, and they go
To light a fire for warmth, a pipe of peace,
A lamp for guidance, or the candle's glow
For friendliness when daylight labors cease;

"Or one may come to nothing;—break in two,
Or in the ashes shed its scarlet crown;
Or scorch your finger, burn the carpet through,
Or lay a rick in ruins, or a town.

"So they are spent, and vanish one by one,
Brief altar flames to happiness or strife;
What shall I do when all of them are gone?
The matches are my years, the box my life."

By F. H. in Boston Herald.

Prayer—Our Father, we would like to make life count in its true values and at the end stand for something for Thee. Teach us how to do it. Teach us how to live each day midst the trivial commonplace things in a way that they at last may be the sum total of goodness and beauty, and in the likeness of Christ. In His name we ask it.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE GLOW AND THE SMILE.

"I am with thee, saith the Lord, to save thee."—Jer. 30:11.

"Thou art, O God, the life and the light
Of all this wondrous world we see;
Its glow by day, its smile by night,
Are but reflections caught from Thee!
Where e'er we turn Thy glories shine,
And all things fair and bright are Thine."

—Moore from Scripture Test Calendar.

Amen.

The Lord's Prayer.

SATURDAY.

LIONS' MOUTHS.

"My God hath sent his angel and has shut the lions' mouths."—Dan. 6:19-23.

Was Daniel surprised at his escape, or did he expect those lions' mouths to be shut by a miracle? We are not told. Probably he thought nothing about the matter. Probably he was simply concerned with doing his duty, lions or no lions.

The brave man is not thinking of consequences. He has placed his life in the hands of his God. Lions' claws or lions' caresses, he leaves it all with God.

Prayer—For Thou, O God, knowest best. The earth is Thy den of lions. Stop their mouths or keep them snarling and snapping as pleases Thy holy will.—Amen.

SUNDAY.

HAPPY FEAR.

"Happy is the man that feareth always."—Proverbs 28:1-14.

This is a strange sentence to find in the middle of a chapter which begins, "The righteous are bold as a lion." Yet both are true. There is a blessed courage that rests on God's almightiness. There is a blessed fear that knows its own weakness. There is a happy confidence, based on the remembrance of God's promises. There is a prudent fear, based on the remembrance of our many failures.

Happy is the man that knows when to be brave and aggressive. Happy is the man that knows when to run away from evil with all his might.

Prayer—Teach our hands to fight, great Captain of our salvation. Teach our feet to flee before the onset of Satan, Thou Conqueror of temptation for us.—Amen.

SEEING GOOD DAYS.

By John G. Truitt, D. D.

"He that will love life, and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil, and his lips that they speak no guile; let him eschew evil and do good; let him seek peace, and ensue it."—I Peter 3:10, 11.

Here we have the sermon of a trained preacher. He was trained under the highest tutelage this old earth has ever known. He sat at the feet of Jesus. His teacher not only taught how to live a godly life, but he carried his class with him day and night and showed them how. His method was supremely advanced. In his class the whole of living was a part of the learning process. There was no time under his tutelage when the class was dismissed. There was a lesson between every lesson, a lesson before every lesson, and a lesson after every lesson. Life was a lesson. Peter was trained in that school.

He had been especially prayed for by his teacher; he had been especially honored by his teacher; and he had been especially commissioned to preach by his teacher. He had been taught how, shown how, and commissioned to do it. He had been given the mind, heart, and spirit; the character and the courage; and the lesson itself. His hearer could ask him for nothing better than to: Tell us about your teacher! And he did that. John Mark followed him about and heard him tell his hearers about his teacher. And John Mark put it on parchment and the world has an unforgettable Gospel.

Now we are looking today at one of Peter's written-out sermons. We cannot imagine Peter taking much time to write out his sermons, and we are glad for the notes that John Mark made from his talks. But Peter did write some, and his writing is like his speaking,—direct, brief, comprehensive.

My what a theme he has chosen: Loving life and seeing good days! That is up-to-date enough for the most advanced of us. What a perfectly wonderful subject! If he will only tell us how! All of us want to love life. We do already. All of us want to see good days! It is an universal cry. Oh! if I could only see some good days.

Jesus, Peter's teacher, believed in loving life. Jesus came to give life, and to give it abundantly full. The joy Jesus talked about was everywhere abiding, and full. The life he talked about was increasing and eternal. Here this old seaman, with the salt tan still in his magnificent face, and his hands still unused to the finer labors of life, takes a theme the very mention of which is in itself a refreshing thought: Loving life, and seeing good days.

Neither from the teacher nor the pupil can we expect that there is anything shallow meant by the life mention, not anything soft about the good days. Life was a real song, and days with a real service must be meant. Nothing less. For when we hear that teacher saying: "Whosoever shall lose his life for my sake shall find it," we cannot think he was talking "soda-water," nor sweetened crackers. We can but believe he is seeing a world in need; a world waiting for courage, and character; and a world that can, and will respond to loving service. And when we see that teacher standing under the very shadow of Calvary, and hear Him talking about the fullness of His joy we cannot believe He is thinking about "joy-rides," or "just-another-it-won't-matter" frivolities of life.

Neither could Peter have meant anything less than giving oneself in service to the fullest extent of one's capacities; for this great old soldier of the cross had come to take life very seriously. Visions of the Christ such as only very few mortals ever had, had been his; and lessons which Jesus himself said had been given Him from the Father had been by him learned. Peter was already moving towards martyrdom,—and yet he was talking of loving life and seeing good days. Which simply goes to show that there is something very deep, and abiding about life, which all too few are willing to pay the price to learn. But that life, for those who dare it, is a life full of a deep and abiding joy; and its days are days that are good,—satisfying to the soul.

Now Peter is saying, I shall give you a few very simple rules for sustaining that supreme love of living, and coming upon such goodness of days. He had seen the truths he would teach in Jesus,—both lived and taught, both practiced and preached. And the rules are very simple. We hear people sometimes say the preacher talks above our heads; or of another preacher they say, even a child could understand every word he said. You knew what he was talking about, because he knew what he was talking about. Well, you can surely say that now of Peter in what he is about to say on his theme of loving life and seeing good days. And the things he suggests are something we can all do.

Hold your tongue, avoid evil, do good, seek peace. And then he adds "The eyes of the Lord are over the righteous, and His ears are open unto their prayers." Seems a bit odd to hear Peter saying, "Hold your tongue." He was out-spoken. But he remembers he spoke out too much. His tongue brought him a broken heart, and a Saviour's penetrating look. He could never forget that. What beautiful temples of life tongues have torn down? What friendships they have wrecked, what lives they have hurt, what unspeakable damage they have done. Peter says, If you will love life, and see good days, hold your tongue. James, the brother of the Lord says: "The tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity . . . it defileth the whole body, and setteth on fire the course of nature; and it is set on fire of hell." If you would love life, and see good days, hold your tongue.

Eschew evil. Run from it. Never run toward it. Run from evil as you would run after a lovely life and good days. It seems like some people are just looking for evil. They cannot be satisfied this side of a fuss. If you see evil brewing take to cover, says Peter, i. e., if you would love life and see good days. If you run into trouble you run into disaster. Now no one could ever think Peter meant to be a coward, and run from duty. Running from duty, and running from trouble are quite different things. Peter would not advise being afraid of duty. But Peter had learned many lessons, and although he was headed straight toward an untimely end, he was not running out of the way to look for evil. Had not he been taught by the Lord to pray: "Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil?" And you, my friends, will be a great deal happier out of trouble than you will in it. You are commissioned to hazard your lives if necessary, but not to hunt evil.

But Peter is not content with this negative requirement. He goes on to the affirmative side of the question: Do good. A boy about twelve years of age lives near a poor widow, who is so crippled that she can only push herself about her room with a chair before her, and much of the time she is all alone. This boy's mother tells how the boy went daily, of his own accord to do such errands as bringing in coal and wood, and water of the poor, crippled widow. Peter says, Keep it up

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

This report is next to the last report for the year 1934. You will notice that we have reached and passed the nineteenth rung in our financial ladder. We still lack $710.77 of being to our goal. Are you going to see to it that we reach it? If all the churches that have not sent in their offerings would send them in and do a little better than last year, we would reach our goal yet.

We are going to hold our books open until January 4th to give time for the delayed offerings to reach us. Please mail them so they will reach us by that date so we can get them in this year's work so they will count on our goal.

The children had a very happy Christmas. The friends and churches were good to them and all of them got as many as three presents each, besides candy, oranges, apples, etc. In behalf of the children I want to thank you and say we are very grateful.

A Story for the Children

WHY THE CHRISTMAS TREE?

(From an old Legend)

The first Christian church in northern Germany was established in 734, at Altenbergen, and a statue of Saint Boniface, its founder, was erected in 1811, to mark the site. A legend about this good saint's work, when he was a missionary to the people, tells of the first Christmas tree.

When he was a missionary, this saint's name was Wynfrith. The people of that region were half-civilized, according to standards of today, and they worshipped the sun. They knew nothing about astronomy and thought that the sun traveled far away, after the summer was over, and when on such a journey it took away the heat, winter set in and the earth became cold, to cause much suffering for the people. So, late in December of each year, a great festival was held to persuade the sun to return and bring back spring with all of its warmth and comfort. In fact, such a celebration was considered necessary, otherwise the sun might be angry and delay his return, thinking that the earth people had forgotten him.

On the day set for this festival the people gathered around a great oak and carried out solemn religious ceremonies to attract the sun's attention. At midnight, a young man was sacrificed at the foot of the great oak.

Saint Bonifact (Missionary Wynfrith) had been trying to interest the people in Christianity and so he attended the festival to the sun, to show them that he also had an interest in what they did. He watched the rites and ceremonies until it came time for the young man to be sacrificed to the sun. Then he did something that was very brave and which nobody else would have dared to do.

As the high priest was about to plunge the sacrificial knife into the heart of the young man, Saint Boniface caught the arm of the priest and bade him stop. Then, in the face of a protesting mob, he talked to those native people. He told them of the Christ child who had been born seven centuries before that time, and how He had been sent to save men. As he talked, the murmurings of the people died away and they gave rapt attention. They themselves were like little children, eager to hear the story of our Saviour. When Saint Boniface had finished he knelt in prayer, and the people knelt with him. Then and there those simple-hearted folks were converted to Christianity and the first Christian church of northern Germany was founded. A few days later the people were persuaded to go to that old oak and cut it down.

The people again gathered about the great oak, but this time they took a solemn oath to never again offer up a human being as a sacrifice to the sun. When the oak was cut down it bruised, or destroyed, a number of other trees that were standing in its way as it fell; but right among the branches of that fallen oak stood a little fir tree, uninjured.

Saint Boniface declared this to be an omen of peace and happiness for the people in their new religion and he asked them to accept the fir tree as their emblem of Christianity.

Each year, at the same time in December as when they had previously gathered to hold a feast for the returning sun, the people of that community gathered around the fir tree to celebrate the birth of Him who had brought peace and good will to the people of the earth. This custom was later adopted by other communities until, after a time, the fir had gained its place as the tree of Christmas. For many years in some sections of Europe it was likewise the custom for the people to gather around the best fir that could be found, and to hold religious services there on Christmas Day. Still later, the fir became the tree of the home, and presents for children were placed upon it.—By Walter K. Putney in December 20th issue of Advance.

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

my boy, you will love life, and see good days! Do good. A kind heart, a willing spirit, a thinking mind will make it possible for you to find the meaning of, and the way to do good.

Peter has four points to his sermon, and yet it is ten times shorter than mine. His fourth and final point is: Seek peace. And he adds, "And ensue it." I wondered a bit about "ensue." I knew pursue, but what could he mean by "ensue?" I looked it up. Let peace follow what you do. What a bit of instruction. Seek peace. Strive for it. Look for it. And also let peace follow upon all your works, and words, and acts.

This is not a sermon that needs talking about, it only needs doing. Let us, everyone, go out and try doing it: "For the eyes of the Lord are over the righteous, and His ears are open unto their prayers." Amen.

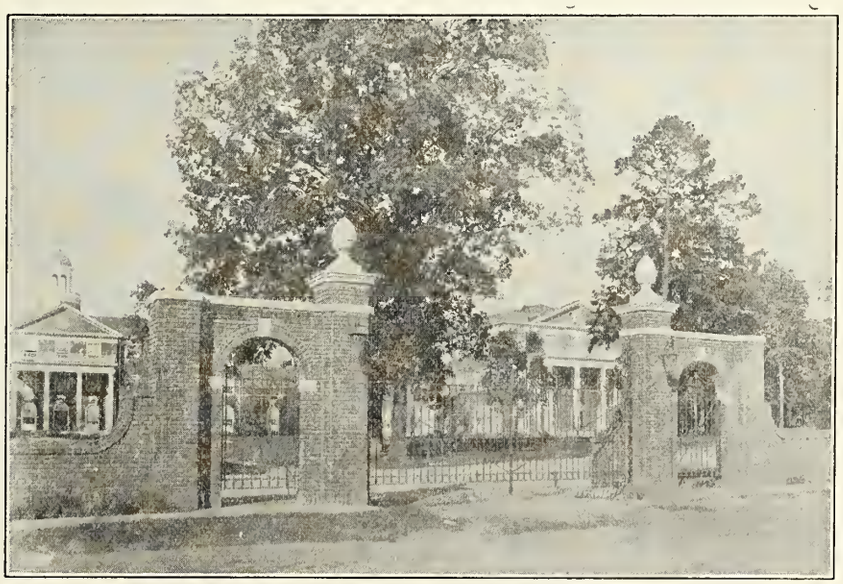
ELON COLLEGE

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE

of the

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST



South Entrance to the Campus

ELON COLLEGE, founded by the Christian Church in 1889, has fully justified the faith and hope of its founders during its 42 years of operation. Its graduates from the four-year course leading to a bachelor's degree, number 980, now living, 122 of whom are in the Christian Ministry and full-time Christian service. The majority of these are members of our own denomination. In addition, 449 are in educational work and are an active influence in the lay leadership of the Christian Church.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION BUILDING, and the definite religious atmosphere of the College, provide the very best facilities available for training for religious leadership, and offer the Church its finest opportunity to train the young people of the denomination to assume active leadership both in the ministry and laity of the local churches.

ELON COLLEGE stands ready to serve the present and the future as it has served the past. ELON COLLEGE spells opportunity.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

There is no "Observatory" this week. The Managing Editor yields his place to Alma Mater. May her gates be opened to wider service through our prayers and our sacrificial gifts.

Rev. Fred P. Ensminger, D. D., and members of his family spent a portion of the holiday season at Dr. Ensminger's old home in Sanford, Florida, visiting his two sisters. They drove down from Birmingham and while in the region, Dr. Ensminger visited several old friends and familiar places.

This issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN is dedicated to the cause of education in general and to Elon College in particular. Many of the graduates, former students and friends of the College have been asked to contribute articles. A number have responded and their contributions appear in this issue in so far as space permits. Other contributions will appear in subsequent issues.

The financial needs of the College will receive generous consideration on the part of the churches and College constituency. It is a pleasure to give support to a program that is economically thorough and successful. This is the period for the annual offerings to be received in the churches. The Annual Conferences and all concerned have pledged themselves by vote to see that the offering are received.

The many friends of Prof. Dwight Steere, of Elon Music Dept., will sympathize with him in the loss of his father, who died suddenly Wednesday afternoon, January 2nd. Prof. Steere, Mrs. Steere and their son, David, and Arthur Steere, brother of Prof. Steere and a senior at Elon, left by auto at 11:00 o'clock Wednesday night to drive to St. Johns, Mich., where services were to be held.

If you receive a copy of this issue of THE SUN, but are not a regular subscriber, you are invited to send in your subscription. THE SUN will help Elon Alumni and friends to keep in touch with the happenings of the College. The price is only $2.00 for 51 issues, less than four cents a week. Make your check payable to "THE CHRISTIAN SUN," and send it to 1536 East Broad Street, Richmond, Va.

The entire church, North and South, will be shocked and grieved deeply to learn of the death of Mr. Hermon Eldredge of Dayton, Ohio. A wire from Dr. Denison told of his going Thursday, January 3rd. Mr. Eldredge was one of the most influential men in our church and one of the leading Christian characters of this day. Few men have made larger contributions to the young life of their day than has Hermon Eldredge. Always happy, wholesome, optimistic, courageous and safe in his leadership, he was a friend to every institution and every cause of his church and loved by all. Truly, his life was full of good works. Many are they that testify of him.

Elon opened January 3rd for the completion of the first semester. The second semester begins January 23rd. Practically all students enrolled are back from the holiday vacation and hard at work for mid-year exams. Miss Estelle Tandy, of St. Louis, Mo., has been elected as teacher of Home Economics and dietitian for the College. Miss Tandy is a graduate of the University of Missouri and holds her Master's degree in Home Economics and Dietetics from Columbia University, New York City. She possesses a pleasing personality and has successful experience in teaching. Prospects for the second semester are most encouraging. The first semester is the most successful the College has had in years, from the standpoint of enrollment and financial income. The educational standards of the College have been advanced. There is a spirit of confidence and optimism on the campus.

ELON COLLEGE—HER CONTRIBUTION TO CHARACTER.

[The following article is contributed by the late Hermon Eldredge. The article was written at the request of Pres. L. E. Smith for the special number of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. In response to the request, he wrote:

"I just have received your letter re an article for THE SUN to be in your hands by January 3rd. I have so much on my hands between now and then that I fear I will overlook it and let it go if I do not do it at once and get it off my hand. Forgive the hastily written enclosure. It is the best I can do with my present crowded schedule. Fraternally,

HERMON ELDREDGE.

"P. S.—Merry Christmas and a good 1935 to all in thine house."

Like all of us little did Brother Eldredge know what the future held. We should all be ready.]

I have known Elon College for eighteen years and have seen its student body come and go thru these years. I have spoken at its Commencement exercises, taught in its summer schools and conducted services on its campus with a growing interest in its work and a growing admiration for the service and sacrifice of those who have made this work possible—its student body, its faculty and its contributors.

There is something intimate and personal about a comparatively small Christian college which makes for character in a way that is not in evidence (we regretfully realize) in our great schools with large enrollments. In fact there is something tragic in the sending of the average high school graduate into these great schools where numbers make for confusion and personality can hardly be taken into account.

In the smaller Christian colleges it is quite different and one does not need to be long on Elon College campue until he senses the differece. There is a combination of the dignity of a fully equipped college with the atmosphere of a home. It is a matter of a few weeks for three or four hundred young people to know each other and that "homey" feeling is not far away. It is conceded that friends and environment have more to do with character in undergraduate years than any "course" can give. It is not exaggeration to state that Elon combines culture with comradeship which is a rare combination. And refers to the faculty as well as the student body.

At the Eastern Virginia Conference in November, when I was caled upon to say a word for Elon (after just coming from ten days on its campus) I was moved to repeat that inscription on Christopher Wren's resting place in St. Paul's, London: "If you would see his monument, look around you." Elon's monument is everywhere in the Southland and reaches into most of the states of the union and overseas to foreign lands. Especially is this in evidence in the South. In October I spent some three weeks in Virginia and North Carolina and met fine outstanding Elon graduates everywhere who had made good and were making good especially in the ministry of our churches. We would have no Christian Church worthy of the name in the South if it were not for Elon and its contribution to the Christian Church ministry.

But that is not its full contribution by any means. More students of other denominations have benefitted from Elon than those who have come from the Christian and Congregational Churches. Other pulpits and other communions have benfitted, as have the public schools and colleges who have members of its alumni on their faculties.

But that is far from being all the story. Students from Elon go back to professions and business positions and become strong and dependable laymen and women in our churches of communities. In one church I visited in Virginia this fall (Suffolk), I was told that fifty or more members of that one church were graduates or had spent one or more years of undergraduate work in Elon. When one knows a fact like that he ceases to wonder why the Suffolk Christian Church has grown to be one of the great churches of the Southland in this past generation.

Possibly the best proof of a Northerner's faith in Elon is that after knowing that institution, I sent my daughter there. It was one of the best investments she or I ever made and neither of us have ever been sorry for it.

After all the basis of true culture and usefulness is character and that Elon is giving to her students and through them to our churches and schools and communities. She has served us for one generation and has a flying start for the second. Let us keep her colors up by supplying her with our sons and daughters and our substance.

FIFTH SUNDAY OFFERINGS AND DOLLAR-A-MONTH CLUB MEMBERSHIPS.

In order to encourage the church and all concerned to unite in the support of the college, the colege has agreed that all amounts raised for the college, including fifth Sunday offerings from the Sunday Schools and Dollar-a-Month Club dues paid by the members of the Club, be credited on the Conference apportionment of the local church. That is to say that all money raised for education sent direct to Elon College may, by request, be credited on the local church's Conference apportionment. The following amounts have been received from the Sunday Schools since the last fifth Sunday, December 30, 1934:

ELON COLLEGE AND HER ALUMNI.

It is perhaps a pardonable platitude to say that any college or educational institution can be largely judged by the successful participation in life of its graduates. "By their fruits, ye shall know them" is certainly no meaningless statement, and surely any institution that keeps in its care young men and women for four years of their most plastic and impressionable youth should leave an indelible impression on their minds. Men and women who have thus received the care and leadership of their elders, guides, philosophers, and friends, who have absorbed the true spirit of an institution, should be held up as examples of what their alma mater did for them. By and large, alumnae and alumni of any college or university are successful because of, not in spite of, what their college did for them.

This generalization is quite true of Elon College, founded in 1889 by the Christian Church to train its ministers and Christian workers, as well as teachers and business men and women. Since the first class was graduated in 1891, with three members, the enrollment has grown reasonably steadily. Approximately sixty graduates were turned out each year just prior to the depression. These graduates, now numbering over a thousand, have been leaders in the ministry in the Christian-Congregational Church; they occupy important positions in both secondary and college education; many have entered other professions; and numerous are the homes that have been blessed by the Elon influence carried thereto by the graduates and former students of Alma Mater. Elon was founded for the purpose of furthering Christian character, and the many men and women graduates who have gone out from her halls testify abundantly as to the effectiveness of her program.

If it is true that an institution's merit may be judged by the activities of its graduates and undergraduate alumni and alumnae, it is likewise obvious that the relationship between those who are engaged in the different activities of life and the welfare of the college is another test. Colleges and universities almost without exception look to their alumni for support, in spirit and in means. The most heavily endowed institutions in America have been provided with funds by their alumni and alumnae. This is as it should be, for men and women whose fields of personal service in the world have been broadened greatly by their college training should, and do, feel an indebtedness, an obligation for their alma maters. And if these men and women are convinced that their institution's program is deserving of the very best support it can get, they have no hesitancy, and feel it an opportunity, to contribute toward the carrying out of that particular educational program.

One must not forget, however, that love for, and belief in, the purpose of their colleges leads men and women, years after they have gone out into life, to support enthusiastically their old schools. Not many of the Elon alumni and undergraduate alumni have attained particularly impressive financial successes; while it is true that many have acquired substantial incomes and properties. What they lack in means, however, they possess in affection. This, in reality, is worth more than indifferent monetary contributions, for it does a college ultimate harm to seem to expect financial support from its graduates, former students, and friends before cultivating those characteristics of charity and Christian citizenship,—before being sure that a mutual feeling of love and affection exists between itself and its sons and daughters.

Elon College needs the support of its alumni and former graduates, and it will continue to need that assistance throughout the years. The wealthiest colleges and universities enlist the support of their graduates.

Another great need of Elon at the present is moral backing. If everywhere Elon people would publicly give the college their approval, the institution's life and effectiveness would be quickened indeed. If there is an apparent laxity or indifference on the part of the alumni toward their college, then Alma Mater may well scrutinize its own activities. The relationship between graduates and the college must be a reciprocal one, one flavored with a sincere regard and interest for the welfare and promotion of the other.

It is the purpose of the Elon College Alumni Association to keep firmly established and strengthen wherever and whenever possible the relationship between graduates, former students, and Alma Mater. This year the Association has gone actively into the field to reorganize old units and chapters of the Association and to organize new chapters in the different localities. Already chapters have been organized in High Point, Winston-Salem, Sanford, Greensboro, and Charlotte. These have, with the exception of Greensboro and High Point (both in Guilford) been set up with the county as the basis. After the reopening of school at Elon, the Association plans to proceed with further units. Burlington will probably be the meeting place for organization of Alamance alumni. Thereafter will follow Durham, Raleigh and Reidsville; and other yet-to-be determined chapters in North Carolina. In Virginia the Suffolk meeting has annually embraced Eastern Virginia, and it is probable that the meeting there this year will be continued on its same plan.

We believe that we are not indulging in foolish optimism to say that a renaissance of feeling is obvious among Elon graduates, former students, and friends of Elon. Dr. L. E. Smith went to the college in one of its darkest hours, but he seems definitely headed toward the light. On the campus and off the campus his dignity of bearing, sincerity of purpose, and executive ability make for a stronger tie between the college and its constituents.

Brighter days are ahead for Elon, and the Alumni Association pledges its support for the wholesome expansion and continuation of that program which has meant much, and will continue to mean more, in the life of our people.

M. L. Patrick, President, Elon College Alumni Association.

ELON COLLEGE AND LOCAL ALUMNI UNITS.

Recently there has been a movement toward organizing local units of Elon Alumni throughout the state. Through the efforts of Mr. M. L. Patrick who is president of the General Alumni Association and the stimulus of our president of Elon College, Dr. L. E. Smith, the movement is gaining great momentum and it is to be hoped that all the alumni will eventually become connected with some local chapter. I think that our attitude as Elon alumni has been materially changed within the last few years. We have been made to feel a keener realization of the fine work that is being done by this institution, largely through the enthusiasm and splendid efforts that are being manifested by Dr. Smith and others connected with the institution.

The organization of these local units is merely the means of broadening the scope of Elon—for, as a matter of fact, the Alumni are as much a part of the institution as are the personnel on the campus and others who are actively engaged in the work of the institution. We feel that the Alumni organization has a definite part to play in furthering the activities of our Alma Mater, particularly in reference to keeping up the fellowship that is always instilled into us while at the college. Elon needs our support in numerous ways among which is the keeping in touch with the progress of the institution, its growth and development, and the results of the splendid spiritual as well as educational effect it is having on students who are going out into the world from year to year. Also the Alumni have a financial obligation which cannot be ignored, since we still are a part of the institution. One of the greatest reasons for our taking an active interest, it seems to me, is that we should feel a moral obligation in directing young students about to enter college toward an institution which stands for spiritual as well as intellectual and physical training. I can truthfully say that in my relationship with Elon and Alumni from throughout the state within the past year, I have never seen a finer spirit of fellowship and good will. The Christian spirit is outstanding. Believing, as we do, that education without the spiritual development is incomplete, we who know what Elon stands for and strives to do, could never do better than advise any high school graduate to go to such an institution that builds character as well as develops mind and body.

May we as Alumni more and more feel it our duty as a part of the institution from which we derived our character and achievements, to stand together in an effort to help Elon grow bigger and stronger in order to carry out the fine type of education which is being demonstrated from year to year.

ELON, A TRAINING SCHOOL FOR THE CHURCH.

Elon College has made a great contribution as a training school for business, the professions, home makers, and many other lines of endeavor, during her history. Many places of business, numbers of men in the professions, have been successful because of the training and influence of Elon, and hundreds of homes are happier because of the Elon touch that has given these homes the better vision of what the home life may be.

However, Elon's greatest achievement has been the work she has been able to do as a training school for the Church. A large percent of our Christian churches in the South have been built, and are now being directed by Elon College graduates as their pastors. Then too, many of the able church officials in our churches are persons who have been trained at our own Elon.

Note some of our leading churches that have come into being and are doing a splendid work under the leadership of Elon trained men. For example, Liberty Springs, Oakland, and Berea—Dr. I. W. Johnson. Christian Temple, Suffolk—Smith, Truitt and Hardcastle. South Norfolk—Poythress. Cypress Chapel, Bethlehem—Brittle. Richmond—McCauley. All of these are in Eastern Virginia Conference. Similar conditions are to be found in our other conferences in the South and many churches are being led in other parts of America and on the mission fields as well, by men who have received training and inspiration from Elon College.

Then, too, many of our Sunday School teachers, as well as great numbers of the teachers in our public schools, are making a great contribution to the progress of the church by the fine work they are doing as a result of the training they received at Elon.

Our prayer is that Elon may have the support she deserves in order that she may continue this great work that means so much in the onward march of the Kingdom.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

FROM SUFFOLK CHURCH BULLETIN.

Churches have their colleges. Across the centuries the church has been a great leader in education. The oldest universities and colleges of Europe, as well as those of America, are institutions of the church.

Each denomination has its colleges. To its colleges the denominations for its ministers, and many of its local leaders. Our sister denominations in Suffolk have colleges of which they may well be proud. And they are justly proud of their colleges.

The Christian Church is not ashamed of Elon. Into it some of the best thinking, finest sacrificing, and earnest endeavor of such man as the Longs, the Newmans, the Rawls, the Wests, the Staleys, the Hollands, the Kernodles, the Dardens, the MacClennys, the Carltons, the Farmers, the Hardens, the Lees, the Wellons, the Harrells, the Byrds, the Brinkleys, the Johnsons, the Jones, the Atkinsons, the Smiths, the Riddicks, the Corbetts, the Copelands, and many others too numerous to mention, have gone into the making of Elon College.

The work of those men and women was not done for a day. It was built into the vital, living history of our church. Its results cannot be measured. And throughout the years to come Elon College will grow and flourish in spite of the testing times through which it is going. Every worthwhile person or institution passes through severe tests, and weathers them.

The Suffolk Christian Church thanks God for Elon. It has put so much in Elon,—of time, of money, of brains, of students,—it has put a great deal in Elon, and has received much in return. Yes, other denominations can be, and rightly are, proud of their colleges. We, too, are proud of ours.

It does not happen that we can all send our students to Elon. Circumstances alter cases, and some of our members must send their students to other institutions, and that is all right when circumstances make it necessary; but, we are all proud of Elon College, and love her as the institution founded by, built by, and operated by our own church. May God bless her!

ELON COLLEGE.

The Christian Church in the South founded Elon College to provide a program of liberal education for the young people of the church under wholesome surroundings and Christian influences. The original faculty were all Christian men and women, holding membership in the Christian Church. This has been the policy and ideal of the college all of its life. It has hardly been possible at all times to secure members of the Christian Church for the faculty, but, without exception, all members of the faculty have been members of the church and have exerted Christian influence on the campus. Young men and young women have come and gone back to their homes, communities, and churches to exert a greater influence for good.

And so, through the years, for more than four decades, has Elon been carrying on. It is not the institution that we would like it to be. It is not as thorough in its work as we hope to make it. It is not as wholesome in its atmosphere as we strive for. It is not as Christian in its program and conduct as we pray for. But, after all, it is ours. We have made it what it is. It is fulfilling a purpose and meeting a need. It is the best that we have. With the cooperation and loyal support of all, we can make Elon the kind of a college that we idealize, thus fulfilling the dreams of our fathers and meeting the needs of our children.

CHRISTIAN ACTIVITIES AT ELON.

More and more, the ones who conduct colleges, build curriculums, instruct students, and direct the whole program of education are becoming to realize that education consisteth not only in facts and figures, languages and philosophies, etc., but that it has to do with attitudes. The student in college today will be graded on his attitude toward life and its problems as strictly as upon his knowledge of subjects. The leaders in education are also coming to realize that correct attitudes are practically impossible, divorced from religion. Christian teachings and Christian ideals are potent factors in molding student attitudes.

The student at Elon College is, first of all, confronted with a positive religious program. We do not deal in negatives, but we do emphasize the positive side of life. The doctrines of the New Testament omit largely negations and prohibitions but emphasize in a convincing way the duties and responsibilities of the Christian life. If society is to be transformed and the world is to be saved, individual aggressiveness is required. Our program of Christian instruction includes the usual church service of song, worship, prayer, scripture, and exhortation. Our Sunday services extend a spiritual influence over both college and community. The students sponsor a program of religious activities for themselves and for friends who may wish to attend. These activities consist of group meetings of ministerial students, of the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. workers, and the Christian Endeavor Society. These organizations have charge of vesper services in the chapel each Sunday. Occasionally, they have outside talent, but always the services are in charge of the students themselves, representing their various organizations.

In addition to the church and student activities, the Department of Christian Education, with its program, presents the scientific side as well as the practical side of religion. The bible is taught in its entirety and interpreted in terms of historical and present-day practices of Christian people through the church. It is the purpose of Elon College not only to inspire but to inform, making it possible for all who come, on any occasion, to give a reason for the hope that there is within them. We are interested in every phase of education, but we are particularly interested in Christian education; and for students who are preparing for religious work, we specialize in Christian doctrine and in Christian guidance.

THE LOCAL CHURCH'S SHARE IN THE PRESENT CAMPAIGN.

Convention, constituted by the Congregational and Christian Churches of the South, not only founded Elon College but assumed in a very definite way the responsibility for its conduct and support. In providing for the support of the college, the Convention recognized that funds would be needed in addition to what revenue might be derived from the matriculated students themselves. The Convention recognized the responsibility of the local church to provide its share to meet the needs of the college. It has always endeavored to get the local church to recognize and accept its responsibility in this particular.

The recent session of the Convention called upon the conferences constituting the Convention and the local church, through the conferences, to make an annual contribution for the support of the college, and set as the goal for this offering $12,500, which amount was apportioned to the conferences with the instructions that the conferences will likewise pass their requests on to the local church. The amount asked for, generally speaking, amounts to practically $.50 per member. The Convention's asking for the college is but a part of its financial program. The amount requested for education, then, is a part of the annual budget of the Convention. All money raised by the local church for Elon College will be credited on that Church's conference apportionments. That is to say, if the entire $12,500 asked for the college is raised in the educational offering for the college, the college would not share further in the conference apportionments. It is, therefore, not only the duty but the privilege of the local church to raise the required amount for the college in order that its task through the year might be lightened.

This is an appeal to pastor and officials of the church, the superintendent and the officers of the Sunday School in the local church to consider it a privilege to present the appeals of the college and of education to your entire membership and request an offering for the college. Just as soon as the offering is received, will you please forward the same to the college? Remember that your share is 40 per cent of the amount that your church is asked for for the conference, or an amount equal to practically $.50 per member, per enrollment of the local church.

If one wishes to be useful in this world, the more education he can get, the more useful is he likely to be. What price we are willing to pay for education depends on what we intend to be.

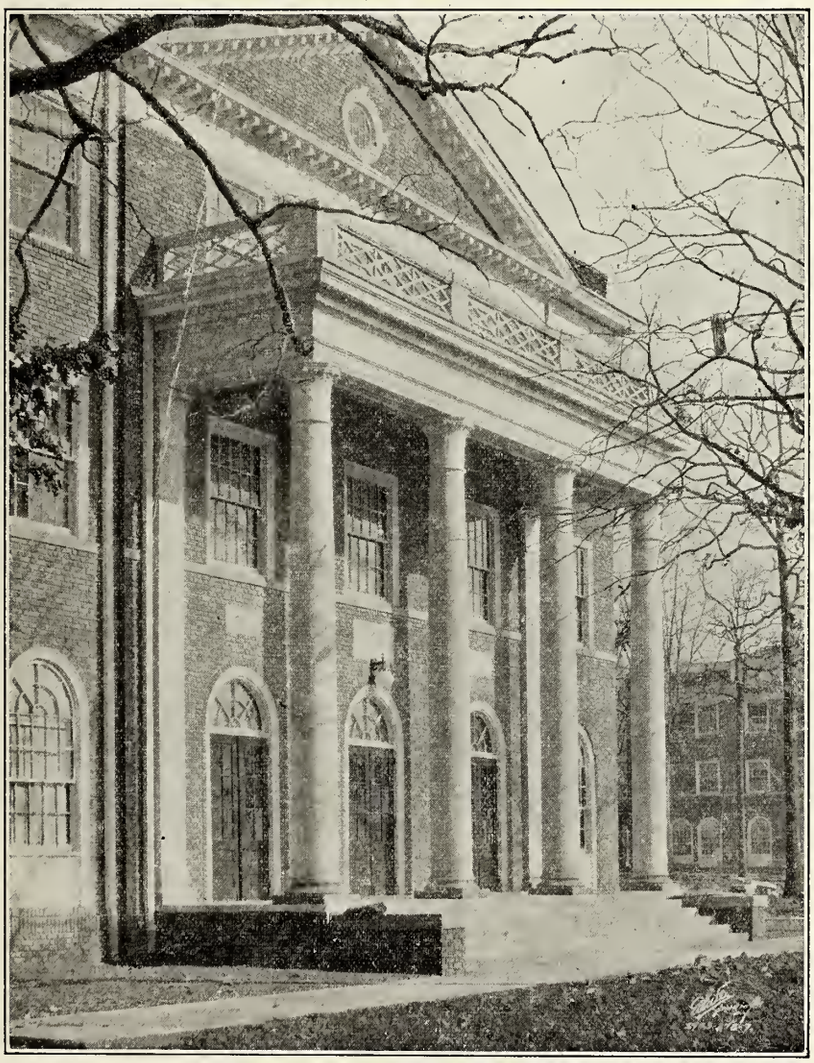
ELON COLLEGE AND THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION.

By President S. C. Harrell.

It is all but impossible to accurately measure the influence of educational institutions. They, like human personalities. exert a direct influence that can be recognized. But they also touch the lives of men and women in a way that makes for an unconscious influence. Then there is the influence of men and women who have been moulded by educational institutions. Such influence is self-perpetuating, and all but eternal.

In the ways suggested above, and in countless others, Elon College has been profoundly influencing the life of the Southern Convention.



ENTRANCE TO AUDITORIUM.
In This Building the Department of Music is Also Located.

The first fact that comes to mind when Elon College is thought of in relation to the Southern Convention, is what Elon has done in demonstrating the importance of an educated ministry. At the time Elon College was established, there were perhaps not more than a half dozen ministers in the Southern Convention who had received the equivalent of four years of college training.

To say that fifty years ago our Church lacked an educated ministry is in no sense to disparage the preachers of that day. Such educational training as they received was probably obtained at greater cost of sacrifice and effort than is represented by the college and seminary degrees of the minister of today.

We have come to a day when if the Church is to maintain its prestige and fulfill its mission, an educated ministry is absolutely imperative. With reference to this need Elon College has done two notable things. It has furnished to the ministerial students who have studied there the sort of training that has splendidly equipped them for service. Through the increased efficiency of a trained ministry, it has also taught the churches the importance of education for the ministry.

Next to what Elon College has done for the Southern Convention through the training of the ministry, I should place the contribution that has been made through educated lay workers. There are now so many of our churches that are blessed with the service of consecrated laymen who have been educated at Elon. Not all of our most useful laymen were trained at Elon, but I am thinking of those who but for the efforts that were made to influence them to go to Elon, would not have attended college at all.

Attention should also be called to the contribution that Elon College has made by inculcating the principles and policies of the Christian Church. The local church does much to make articulate the soul of a denominational body. But its ministry and message is largely confined to its own immediate vicinity. The church college has a hearing that soon becomes as extended as the influence of its alumni. Elon College has been the messenger that has proclaimed the principles of the Christian Church throughout the South and far beyond.

Elon College has also wrought immeasurable service to the Southern Convention by serving as a center and a bond of mutual interest that have bound our people together. The Christian Church has never committed itself to a system of theology that has set it off from other religious organizations. It has no mode of worship that has been individualistic. It has singled out no religious practice for peculiar emphasis. For these reasons it has been the enterprises of our common interest that have bound us together. And of all the enterprises for which we have labored, Elon College has served as the most potent factor of unity.

We conclude with the thought with which we began, namely, that it is impossible to measure the influence and usefulness of an educational institution. Even though we may not be able to estimate the service that Elon College has rendered to the Southern Convention; the fact that we can not visualize a worthy future for the Southern Convention with Elon College's service left out, bears most eloquent testimony to the influence and usefulness of Elon College.

AWAKENING AN INTEREST IN ELON.

We are not interested in those things with which we are not familiar. Interest increases or decreases as our knowledge grows or diminishes. If we are to keep the public at large interested in Elon College, it must be done by keeping the public informed as to her standing and accomplishments.

The masses may get this information through the public press, but the membership of the Congregational-Christian Churches in the South should get it through personal approach. There should be such interest that two specific things will be done: (1) Sending the boys and girls who are to go away to college to Elon, and (2) A financial support of the college each month either individually or through the Sunday Schools and churches. How are we going to interest our membership to the extent that they will do this.

In our church we are trying the following plan: We have appointed an Educational Superintendent as one of the Associate Superintendents of the Sunday School. This Educational Superintendent is a graduate of Elon College. Her duty is to arrange a worship program once a month to be presented at the worship service of the Sunday School. Of course it is expected that the monthly programs be so correlated that each one will deal with some educational phase of our Christian life. This is being done. Each month some one who is acquainted with the educational work makes a talk.

The Educational Superintendent very wisely arranged the first program by having a gentleman who was well acquainted with the Religious Educational situation give a talk on "What Religious Education Means to the Home, Church and Nation." The next program was climaxed with a talk by a woman who is a teacher and a graduate of Elon, on "The Origin, Growth, Influence, and Needs of Our College." Both of these programs were inspirational, instructive and interesting.

We are planning to continue to inform the people in our Sunday School and church of its needs. But most of all we plan to inform our membership of our need of the college. We believe that this is one way to let the people know what we have in our college, what it is doing for us and for the denomination, its contribution to the nation, and the possibilities of the future.

We have the interest and needs of the Orphanage and Missions presented each month and rightly so. This has been going on for some time As a result interest in these two branches of our work has grown, contributions have increased, and people are anxious about these two phases of our work. It is our belief that if each Sunday School will put on a monthly program in the interest of our Educational work, it will not be long before the membership of the church as a whole will come to feel that the College is a part of us and we a part of the College.

A Lover and Supporter.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Elon College is closely related to the ministry of the Southern Convention. It was conceived in the mind of a minister. It was founded by the ministry of the Christian Church. The college is not the "mother" of the ministry. It is the child of the preachers of the Gospel. It is true that many ministers call Elon College "Alma Mater." But when the final accounting is made, "Alma Mater" has received more than she has given, in her relation to the ministers of the Convention. Elon points, with commendable pride, to the record of some of her graduates who have become beloved ministers.

As a graduate of Elon College, where I received free tuition, I have never been deeply touched or profoundly moved by appeals for support on the basis of what the College has done for me. I paid my expenses, except tuition, while in college. Since gaduation I have given the College more than five times the amount of free tuition given to me. As a matter of fact the College did not give free tuition; the church gave it. On the basis of balancing accounts, from a financial standpoint, my obligation has been paid.

But the matter of support should be approached from another angle. I am not primarily interested in Elon College because of a personal contribution made to my own life. I was interested before I entered the College as a student. As a minister, I should be interested in its welfare, if I had never seen its buildings nor walked upon its campus as a student until graduation. However, if this is the basis of appeal for support, the obligation rests entirely upon former students. As a minister, my attitude towards the College and my support of its future should not be contingent upon the fact that I am a graduate of the institution. The whole matter should rest upon something broader and more fundamental than being a former student.

Of course, the record of the alumni of an institution such as Elon College furnishes good material for favorable advertising and platform addresses on Christian Education. But the College should not claim all the glory for the success of the alumni. Elon College has graduated ministers who have honored their "Alma Mater." Some of these men have made sacrificial contributions far surpassing any service rendered them by their "Alma Mater." But even this is not the basis of appeal for achievement and support. Elon College should, after these years, rest its case upon something more fundamental than personal attitudes and student history. Christian Education, in the Southern Convention, has been retarded by clashing personalities. As a child of the Church it is not called upon to champion the cause of its personal friends, nor seek to defeat its enemies.

As a rule, people who teach school many years unconsciously develop the personal tendency of expecting others to accept their mandates and obey their wish and will. In theory they rule in the class room; in practice they expect to exercise authority in life. A church college, in dealing with ministers who are graduates of the institution, misses its mark when it assumes that it may continue its authority over their attitude and career. The Christian ministry is more important than the church College. The church can survive the failure of an educational institution. The Christian churches of the Southern Convention have been moving forward through the founding of Elon College. It is claiming too much for the College, and discrediting the power of the Gospel to say that the closing of Elon College would mean the extinction of the churches within the Convention. If the college should fail, the ministry will establish another institution or resurrect Elon College.

Elon College is a champion of a distinctive type of Christian education. Upon the value of this type of education for ministers and laymen, rests the merits of the claims of Elon College for support. This type is needed today. Elon College is in a position to render acceptable service to the Christian churches in this field. It should have the support of ministers and churches.

I. W. JOHNSON.

THE PASTOR AND THE COLLEGE.

By DR. JOHN G. TRUITT.

A pastor should have a genuine, abiding respect for his college. I do not mean to say that he will think his college is the only thing that had to do with his training, but he will appreciate it as one of the great factors in his development. Of course he will know that his parents, his church and Sunday School, his public schooling in the grades and in preparation for college, his associates, the circumstances of his up-bringing including his experiences, and his special seminary training, as well as the very excellent training his pastorates and the members thereof give him, all go together with many other things to make him a reasonably worthwhile minister of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. In our moments of enthusiasm for Alma Mater we may talk as though we have forgotten the teaching, and blessing, and influence of our real mother and father, and all the other schools that have brought their grists to our grinding. But that sort of unnatural emphasis will not bring about the best abiding respect for our college. It is more likely to place us in the "extremist" class. It is not that sort of lip-service which our college needs.

The pastor will recognize that his college,—assuming that his college is our Southern Convention's callege,—depends for its very existence, and life upon his church; and that in turn it gives back to his church an unmeasurable amount of training and development for leadership in his church; that it is the servant of his church, and one of its very greatest servants, and therefore he is duty bound to respect and honor it as a thoughtful person honors and respects other great factors that go into the business of training and equipping him to keep up with his college, be humbly and forgivingly aware of its mistaken, and cooperatively and sympathetically a part of its ever increasing successes.

A pastor should give constant, and regular support to his college. Assuming as I am that his college is in the peculiar sense his church's college as ours is. And furthermore if he is serving a church which is an integral part of the ownership of that college it is to that extent his college, as I discuss later. So then as a pastor accustomed as he is to taking his plans and problems to God in prayer he should support his college by his prayers and intercessions for her. This should be done devoutly and earnestly in his private devotions, and as a pastor he should on occasion remember his college in his public prayers, somewhat as he remembers other departments of his church, and the enterprises thereof. If enough people will pray, and in the right sort of way for our college it will be able to measure up to our fondest dreams.

Not only with his prayers, but with his personality he will support his college. A worthy son, or daughter is an honor to the parents. A worthy alumnus of a college is an honor to his college. A worthwhile pastor must be an honor to his college. His words, his acts, his thoughts should reflect honor upon his college. Being a college-trained man he honors and respects other colleges and universities; he appreciates their places and their service to learning; but he never forgets in word, or in deed his own Alma Mater. It is ill-becoming in anyone to belittle their college, but more especially a minister who is himself a graduate of his church's college. I believe the records will show that the minister-graduates of our college love her, and honor her. And this is certainly as it should be.

Again not only with his prayers, and his personality, but also with his purse a pastor should support his college. If pastors do not support the enterprises of the church which feeds them who may we expect to support them? Circumstances will, in most cases, not permit the pastor to give any very large sum of money, but he cannot excuse himself if he serve in a regular pastorate from giving something,—some of which will go to his college.

A pastor should assume his official and pastoral relationship which being the leader of one of the integral groups which own the college entails upon him. That is to say: the college is a church supported institution, and if the pastor of the local church does not lead his church to support each of the enterprises of his church it seems to me that he is overlooking a part of his official and pastoral privilege. For instance, a church may have members who differ as to how the college should be supported, whether the support should the church's part of it, come directly from members of the local congregation, or from the church treasury, or from that portion of the conference apportionment which might be allotted to the college; but whatever the opinion is, the pastor is expected to lead his people to enthusiastically carry forward their program of benevolent support. The members of the local church look to the minister of their church to keep them informed as to what is expected of their church in its relationship to the larger enterprises of the church, that is, those outside the local congregation. It is not complimentary to a pastor who has pledged himself to support the laws and edicts of his church to allow his church to overlook any of their obligations to Conference, or through the Conference, to Convention. They may not be able to come up with their apportionments in full, or give to each enterprise as great amount as is felt to be needed, but the alert pastor will see to it that opportunity is given whereby a local church is given a pressing opportunity to support the enterprises of its care.

THE GYMNASIUM.
Well Developed Bodies Are Essential to Well Developed Minds.

And here is faith that the pastors of our church will get behind the program of our church for our college, and that laymen will join us in the support which our college deserves and needs.

ELON AND THE TRAINING OF YOUNG MINISTERS.

"Ye shall know them by their fruits," Jesus said long ago. Elon College's record, and the record of the Christian Church in the South—and for that matter in other sections of the country—will show that Elon has in the past served effectively in the field of ministerial education.

Recently I had the pleasure of riding from Elon to Winston-Salem with Dr. W. D. Kedzie, Secretary of Educational Institutions of our Congregational and Christian Churches. Dr. Kedzie has had a wide observation of colleges. He has made it his business for a number of years to investigate the effectiveness of educational institutions in their particular field of usefulness. His judgment is to be valued most highly. His visit to the North Carolina and Virginia area had brought him into direct contact with various of our churches and ministers. On every hand he found the influence of Elon College exerted thru the ministry of Elon men. He said to me—what I heard him say later in an address at Greensboro —"Elon College fills the most unique place in relation to the churches of this area that I have seen any college fill anywhere in America." He was referring in particular to the ministerial leaders and pastors who received their training at Elon.

This observation may be commonplace to you who live in this area, but it is significant that an expert in the educational field should give such a high estimate of Elon's worth. Or, maybe you have never thought seriously about Elon's place in relation to the education of our ministers. Therefore, I am going to be a bit more commonplace and ask you to do that which has on many occasions been asked of you:

"Look over the field of the old Southern Christian Convention (Virginia, North Carolina, Georgia, and Alabama) and see the number of churches pastored by ministers who received their training at Elon College." You may or may not be surprised to find that practically every church is pastored by a man who has either directly or indirectly been touched by Elon, and for the most part you will find that most of those men have received their training at Elon. Go back to the founding of our churches, especially in the villages, towns, and cities and you may be surprised at the contribution which Elon has made to this end. Nearly every city church that we have has had for its pastor an Elon trained man.

Now such facts deserve our serious consideration, and Elon College is worthy of and merits our highest support.

But so much for the past. What of the present and the future? The same fact of Elon's usefulness in the preparation of our ministry can be further realized if the college is given our support. With the merger of our Congregational and Christian forces, Elon's usefulness in the field of ministerial education increases. This is because the college is strategically situated and because her atmosphere is conductive to the mental and spiritual development of young men whose hearts and minds have been directed toward the ministry. For our United Church in this area to meet the challenge of the present and future, it must have a prepared and an indigenous ministry.

The thing which impresses me most about my own touch with Elon is that her spiritual atmosphere and capable faculty challenges and puts one in touch with unbiased and unsectarian quests for truth. At the same time one is put in touch with the Supreme Source of Truth. This combination, together with her honest facing of the needs of human society will go a long way towards producing a prepared ministry for a needy world.

The very set-up of Elon College offers not only a ministerial education to the Church's young ministers, but it likewise becomes a school of life for them. Education is not a mere preparation for life, it is life itself. The varied curricula and interests of Elon's campus, together with the presence of both young men and women, gives a young minister more than a specialized ministerial outlook. It offers a chance to live in a society which is comparable in some degree to the complex world interests which one inevitably meets in the work of the ministry.

There is going to be a growing need for the message of an inclusive Church, such as our Congregational-Christian fellowship offers, but the effectiveness of her message will largely depend upon the leadership of her ministry. A prepared ministry is an underlying factor of success. If Elon is given the support due her, she will pay increasing dividends in the future, as she has paid in the past and is paying in the present day.

WILLIAM T. SCOTT.

ELON COLLEGE IN THE BEGINNING.

By DR. N. G. NEWMAN.

Here is the picture:

Twenty-two acres of original forest, barely spoiled by the hand of man. The old Administration building-tower, unfinished, bare walls, open fire-places, chapel lighted with oil lamps. "Old East" rising, already to the second story. The old open well and oaken bucket—of blessed memory—the trysting place of youthful lovers. Dr. J. U. Newman's pig pen, located thirty-five yards distant from the northeast corner of Administration building by order of the President; his cow pen on campus a litle east of present site of Christian Education building.—"Mr. Nat," a senior, general manager of both cattle and pigs. A faculty of seven: Dr. W. S. Long, President, in the prime of life, with children in college. Prof. S. A. Holleman, in charge of academic department, a young man, with two small children. Dr. J. U. Newman, Greek, Math, etc., his first born still a babe. Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Latin, etc. Dr. E. L. Moffitt, English, etc. Both fresh from college, single, loving, and courting. Miss Lena Beale (Mrs. W. G. Farrar), music. Miss Alberta Moring (Mrs. J. M. Roberts), Art. A faculty small in number but loyal in spirit, faithful and efficient in instruction, with high ideals, leaving upon their pupils an impress of their own spirit, which, after more than two score years, still remains. A student body, small in numbers, poor in purse, proud in spirit, faithful in study, with high ambition and noble purpose. And of the fair women who graced the campus of "Elon in the beginning," What shall I say? "Take them for all in all, I shall not look upon their like again." Of the dignity and grace, the beauty and charm, the halo of glory that shone about the feminine life of that day—Well, I must not speak. I realize I am now living in another and far different age. Two literary societies, with their own halls, doing efficient work. Preaching in chapel Sunday mornings by President Long; prayer meeting Sunday nights, conducted by students. And finally (mirabile dictu) the rules were suspended" once in three months and the boys were permitted to have "dates" with the girls. A flood of happy memory overwhelms the writer! He can say no more.

MISSIONS

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., Secretary.

ELON COLLEGE AND OUR MISSIONARY PROGRAM.

It is not without significance that all the missionaries sent to the foreign field from the Southern Christian Convention since Elon College was established were Elon College graduates. Nor is it without significance that the movement that sent out the first missionary within the bounds of the Convention was contemporaneous with the movement resulting in the founding and building of Elon College. Thus the vision that swept us out beyond our own borders made clearer the task and the purpose of our existence as a fellowship. And so it happens that the spirit of Missions and the spirit of Christian Education have gone along as they always do, hand in hand, heart in heart, looking to constructive and intelligent enlargement of the kingdom of our Lord and the cause of our Christ. It may be of further significance to note that the members of our first Foreign Mission Committee (or Board) in the Southern Convention came to be also the first members of the Board of Trustees of Elon College. And so thru the years since, some members of our Mission Board have been from its founding members of the Board of Trustees of the College, and the members of the Board of Trustees of Elon College have been most active and zealous as members of the Mission Board of the Convention. And thus it may be said in this instance that peculiar significance attaches to I Cor. 12:14-18:

"For the body is not one member, but many. If the foot shall say, Because I am not the hand, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body? And if the ear shall say, Because I am not the eye, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body? If the whole were hearing, where were the smelling? But now hath God set the members every one of them in the body, as it hath pleased Him."

And so the whole fellowship of those in the household of faith who believe in Missions and in Education may say again with Paul: "And he is the head of the body, the church," the church thus being the body of our Lord. Our Elon College and our missionary work are both integral parts of the church, the body of Christ as we accept and preach Him. The two cannot be separated without doing serious, if not tragic violence to both.

The ministry of the College has been the ministry of Missions, in that the pastors of Elon College Community Church have been missionary in vision, in spirit and in the construction of their church program. The College has recognized the merit and the might of Missions by having in its curriculum messages annually directly on the subject of Missions; and in the Administrative Building of the College where the work of Christian Education through the College is promoted, is housed also the Mission Office of the Convention, and the two offices work hand in hand and heart to heart for the same great cause which Missions and Education represent, viz: The cause of enlarging the kingdom in a constructive, an intelligent, and a Christian manner.

Elon College is not a missionary enterprize, it is an educational enterprize, which gives dynamic and intelligent direction to our missionary work and effort. Missions is not an educational institution, but a corporate effort to develop world vision and an abiding concern in the evangelization of the world, and in sharing with others the spirit of our Lord. If the spirit of Missions is the powerhouse where the dynamo is stationed and generates, then the Christian College is the transmission that makes that power available in individual lives far and near, who reveal in themselves the spirit of Him who said: "I am the way, the truth and the life." If Missions points to the Way, the Christian College reveals the Truth, and the two together are essential to create and develop the more abundant Life. J. O. A.

MISSIONARY RALLIES.

A series of Missionary Rallies will be held in Florida, promoted by the Federation of Congregational Women. Mrs. Robert G. Williams, President of the Federation and formerly Extension Worker for Florida and Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, have arranged the series in connection with the Vice-Presidents for the women's groups in the various associations of the state. The Rallies are to be held at the Cuban Mission in West Tampa, at Mount Dora, Daytona Beach, and Miami. There will be opportunities for discussion of plans, methods and program, and there will be present and speaking to the groups, Miss Katharine Merrill of the Girls' School at Matsuyama, Japan, who is home on furlough. It is expected that this series of Rallies will greatly increase missionary interest and help in missionary program.

CHRISTMAS IN THE MOUNTAINS.

Old Santa Claus made a visit to each of our mountain boys and girls this Christmas. People from far and near made their contributions.

Rev. M. T. Sorrell and his good people, who were generous in their many packages of Christmas cheer last year were doubly generous this year. They sent enough toys for each regular Sunday School scholar under 12 years of age to be remembered. To each of you, and to your good pastor, Sorrell, we wish to say Christmas was made a happy day for our boys and girls. May the Lord bless you and yours during the New Year.

From our Young People and Willing Workers Societies of the Durham Christian Church, came four boxes of Christmas cheer, in the form of toys. To you of Durham, we wish to express the appreciation of our mountain boys and girls. May your New Year be one of happiness and success.

From our church at Winchester, Va., came a nice box of toys. The good people of Winchester are ever mindful of us. We speak the sentiment of appreciation from many boys and girls of our Home Mission Station. To you young people of Winchester we bid God's blessings. May you grow and glow for Him this year.

Our Burlington church has always been one to help make Christmas cheerful. This year they sent $15.00 to be used in buying treats for our Elk Spur community. May God bless you cheerful givers of Burlington church.

The Woman's Missionary Society of United Church of Raleigh sent their gift of $5.00 to be used to buy Christmas treat for our people. You good people of Raleigh are kind to remember those far away at Christmas time. May your New Year be one of spiritual growth.

The following are firms who remembered us this Christmas:

Mount Airy Knitting Mill, Mt. Airy, N. C., three dozen suits of childen's underwear.

Renfro Hosiery Mill, Mt. Airy, N. C., 180 pairs of children's socks.

Mock, Judson, Voeheringer Co., Inc., Long Island City, N. Y., one dozen pairs silk hose.

Eagle Pencil Co., N. Y., one gross of pencils.

H. J. Heinz Co., Pittsburgh, Pa., six dozen cans of beans.

Vance Knitting Mill, Kernersville, N. C., three dozen pairs of hose.

C. L. Dick and Co., San Jose, Cal., three boxes of prunes.

Columbian Peanut Co., Scotland Neck, N. C., one bag of peanuts.

Durham Hosiery Mill, Durham, N. C., one box of hose.

Norris Candy Co., Atlanta, Ga., 25 pounds of candy.

Montgomery Ward and Co., 25 pounds of candy.

Dorothy Gray Cosmetic Co., N. Y., $5.00.

Southern Silk Mills, Greensboro, N. C., one bundle of silk remnants.

P. H. Hanes and Co., Winston-Salem, N. C., two dozen suits of children's underwear.

Galax Knitting Co., Galax, Va., 18 dozen pairs of mens and ladies hose.

E. Z. Mills, Inc., N. Y., one box of children's underwear.

Durable Silk Co. Burlington, N. C., one bundle of silk remnants.

The following sent personal gifts:

Mrs. C. H. Rowland, Greensboro, N. C., one box of clothing.

Miss Adelaid E. Heil, Meadville, Pa., one box of clothing, one box of toys and $2.00.

Mrs. Hattie Wixson, Dundee, N. Y., one box of various articles.

To you who read these lines; and especially you who made contributions, we regret that you could not witness with us the joy you brought to our Carroll County homes. To one and all, may God bless you in your efforts during 1935.

Yours in His service,

Rev. and Mrs. R. T. Grissom.

ATHLETICS AT ELON COLLEGE.

The past fifteen years has brought about many changes in our colleges and institutions of higher learning. Among these several changing conditions there has been a big change in college athletics.

The value of athletics among schools and colleges has not been over-rated but rather under estimated by some of our leading educators. So in our schools of today we find athletics occupying a very important place, especially is this true among the smaller schools. It is understood that in order for athletics to attain the results that are expected in this program of education, that the supervising or coaching must be of the same high caliber as other department heads.

Elon Has Won the Association Championship Four Years Out of the Past Five.

The difference between a well rounded athletic program and a haphazard one was well demonstrated during 1926 when athletics at Elon College perhaps reached its lowest ebb, it was during this period that the administration saw fit to do away with the old policy of employing a full time athletic director and instead adopted a system known as the Faculty Coaching. The results of this new system proved to be the most disastrous and expensive change that the college could have made, not so much perhaps from a financial angle but in that it destroyed the morale of the players on the various teams, student body and alumni scattered throughout the country.

The administration realizing that something would have to be done to restore the morale, again went back to the system of employing a full time coach. Mr. D. C. Walker was selected as the one man best qualified for this position; how well he has done the job is no better demonstrated than to take the record of the Elon teams since the formation of the North State Conference in 1930.—Football Championships: 1930, '33, '34; Basketball Championships: 1931, '33, '34; and Baseball Championships: 1931, '32, '33, '34.

The football season just closed gave Elon her third straight football championship in the Conference. A fitting climax to a successful season was staged at the college Thanksgiving night following the Guilford-Elon game when a banquet was given by alumni and friends of the college to the team and coach. Judging from the spirit manifested at this banquet we can look to the future for greater and better teams to represent our college on the athletic field.

Are you giving Elon your loyal support?

ECONOMIES PRACTICED AT ELON COLLEGE.

Elon College of necessity for the past several years, like many individuals and institutions, has had to practice stringent economy in its operating expenses. A reduction of nearly 50 per cent in its annual budget from the high peak of several years ago stands as testimony of the deep economies that have been effected by the President and the Board of Trustees. First the securing of a moratorium on payment of annual curtailment and interest on indebtedness, with the ultimate hope of a favorable adjustment for the College of this indebtedness, reduced the annual expenses more than $30,000.00. Economies effected in salaries of teachers and employees, the largest item of expense of the college budget, has made an annual saving of $20,000.00 more.

However, these are matters with which the readers of the CHRISTIAN SUN are familiar, and it is the smaller economies practiced at the college from day to day about which I wish to write.

BASKET BALL TEAM.
Elon Gives Advantage of A Well-Rounded Athletic Program.

Operation of the ten large buildings now devoted to the conduct of the school and their daily use by about 400 students, faculty and employees of the college, as well as the operation of four residence halls and athletic fields, affords hundreds of opportunities for daily savings and economies. Serving some 600 meals daily in the college dining halls, keeping on hand the necessary instructional, laboratory supplies and materials for cleaning and repairing of buildings and equipment amounts to a large expenditure of funds over a year's time. Heating, lighting, and furnishing water for the entire college plant is another large item to be considered.

It is the policy of the college to make or prepare just as many of the materials it uses as it can, and to furnish as many of its services as it can by its own members. For instance with the assistance of the chemistry department, soaps, cleaning materials, and sweeping compounds are prepared on the campus at about one-half the purchase price ordinarily asked. All repairs on buildings, equipment, trucks, machinery, wiring, etc., are done by the students and regular employees of the college. It is rare that occasion arises where we have to call in technical workers from outside for the services that we need.

The purchasing of all supplies of every nature is concentrated in a central office, the business manager's office, where every effort is made toward the most economical buying. As largely as possible, we buy direct from the manufacturers, who in most cases are willing to give educational institutions very attractive prices.

All ten buildings on the campus are heated by a central heating plant, resulting in a considerable saving in overhead expenses, especially in labor. The college has its own water system, pumping the water from a deep well, and also manufactures its own electric current during the regular school term when the load is heaviest. Although we have favorable commercial rate for current from the Southern Public Utilities Company, we find that when it is necessary for us to have up steam in the boilers for furnishing heat and hot water to the buildings, we can run our own generator and manufacture our own electric current for a very slight additional expense, estimated at one cent or less per kilowatt hour. The method here is to run the steam first to the generator engine, and then use the exhaust steam from this engine to heat the buildings. We have our own electric lines on the campus and have an arrangement so that we can switch from our own generator to the public service lines or back at will, according to which is the most advantageous for us. In this way we are enabled to cut our electric bill to half what it would be if we were confined to one system.

Until recently three separate dining halls, with three separate kitchens, managers, and servant forces were maintained at the college. A great saving in overhead as well as in actual food econ-

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

Rev. F. C. Lester, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

ELON COLLEGE.

The editor of this page is proud of being a graduate of Elon College. Twenty years ago I was a Freshman in Elon. It was good to be there. Dr. Newman, Dr. Lawrence, the Randolph brothers, President Harper, and many others gave me information, ideals and inspiration that have had much to do with my happiness for these twenty years. The character of the faculty and students helped to mold my character, and my criticism has always been that their contribution to me was good.

Elon was young when I was there. She is twice as old now as when I entered. She has grown some in my day. I am proud of her growth. I am glad the beds are better, the class rooms more commodious, the offices more modern, and the equipment much more elaborate. Five new buildings have taken the place of one that was there in my day. The faculty has more degrees. I am delighted at the progress.

I am even glad that the college does not always do the things I like best. There is a certain sense of satisfaction in being able to criticize one's friends. Better still, a college is supposed to teach and I want my college to teach me. If it always conformed to my idea, it would leave me in my ignorance. I want my college to lead me forward—even when I am too stubborn to learn gracefully.

It is a pleasure to say nice things about my Alma Mater. They come easy because I love her. But Elon needs more than words; she needs money. Her faculty deserves pay, her furnace needs fuel, her offices need workers, her class rooms have value only as they are filled with teachers and students. This takes money—much money. I must give of my money to Elon College, and so must others who believe that the Church has an educational obligation in a day like this. If Elon were just another college, I should fail to contribute. But Elon is more than just a college. Like a towering oak, as her name suggests, she has been, and is, a beacon for the Church. She sets ideals for youth; she builds character that is strong; she makes men. In the midst of lowering ideals Elon still stands for the high and holy. So long as she holds her head high in the midst of the moral storm of our day, she is worthy of the sacrifice of all who love the right. This writer is glad to commend Elon to the generosity of others and to share in her support.

HERMON ELDREDGE.

When Hermon Eldredge of Dayton, Ohio, breathed his last in the early morning of January 3, 1935, the young people of America lost one of their best friends, and the cause of religious education lost a distinguished leader.

As a secretary in the Department of Education of the Christian Church for many years, he had much to do with building up this phase of our work and the organization of our young people's work. In recent years he aided greatly in the merger of Congregational and Christian Churches and has been an editor. Young people and adults will remember him for the fine quarterlies he has written in recent years.

Although Mr. Eldredge stood high in the councils of our Church and could take his place with the best on the platform or in counsel chambers, those who knew him best will always cherish the feeling that Mr. Eldredge was a friend. His genial, happy spirit was contagious. No one felt ill at ease in his presence. More than most men he lived Kipling's "If," and always because of his love for Jesus.

"If you can talk with kings and keep your virtue,
Or walk with kings—nor lose the common touch,
If neither foes nor loving friends can hurt you,
If all men count with you, but none too much;
If you can fill the unforgiving minute
With sixty seconds' worth of distance run,
Yours is the Earth and everything that's in it,
And—which is more—you'll be a Man, my son!"

Here was a real man. Many knew him as the father of Miss Lucy Eldredge, to whom our sympathy goes. He was a worthy father, an excellent editor, a wise counselor, a true friend, a constant gentleman, and a devout Christian. God rest his worthy spirit, comfort the bereaved and raise up another to lead us forward.

A NEW ROAD.

Christmastide brought us the stories of a shining star, singing angels, worshipping shepherds, sacrificing wise men and a tiny Babe. St. Matthew says that when the magi had presented their gifts to Jesus, they returned to their own country another way. They traveled a new road.

The gates of the New Year swing wide and reveal the inviting road of 1935. No one knows what lies ahead of us, but we start with hope. Sam Walter Foss says concerning the highway of life:

"I know there are brook-gladdened meadows ahead,
And mountains of wearisome height;
That the road passes on through the long afternoon
And stretches away to the night."

To some the new year will be like the last. They will keep in the ruts, like the drivers of covered wagons when Virginians and North Carolinians sold tobacco in Atlanta, Birmingham, and New Orleans. They will not dare break with the past nor try the new. And they will miss the thrills of the pioneer.

Other will make it a road of pleasure. The shore drive from Norfolk to Ocean View and Virginia Beach is usually crowded. I drive that way sometimes. It is a circle from Norfolk to Norfolk. That is the trouble with most pleasure. It leads no whither. There is no end. Nothing of consequence is accomplished. One goes around in circles. That can never satisfy the human heart.

From Washington to Mt. Vernon is a new memorial highway. The views along the winding and historic Potomac river are beautiful. From the capitol of the United States to the home of the first President of our country this road runs. It is a lovely memorial. But it ends at a grave. Memory is a great thing, and memorials are helpful, but life is a growth, a going forward. The new year should lead us onward, not backward.

On top of the Blue Ridge mountains in Virginia is a new Skyline Drive made by the United States government. It is high. It takes effort to get up there. But the scenery is great. And the air is pure. The road of the Master led to the mountains, where he prayed.

The new road challenges youth to make the most of life. I am wishing for you who read this "the brook-gladdened meadows" and the "mountains of wearisome height" because then you can find companionship with millions of other noble youths and the Master who opens the gate and leads the way.

WHAT DO I KNOW ABOUT THE CHURCH?

I Cor. 12:12-27.

Christian Endeavor Topic for Jan. 20, 1935.

Worship.

Instrumental Prelude: "My Jesus I Love Thee."
Hymn: "The Church's One Foundation."
Prayer: For God's Church . . . and my church.
Scripture: I Cor. 12:12-27.
Hymn: "Faith of Our Fathers."

Discussion.

The discussion might be divided into two parts as follows:

1. A study and discussion of the scripture lesson for this meeting. Paul succeeded in packing what he had to say into a metaphor which has become one of the most influential figures of speech in any literature. He says that the Christian church is the Body of Christ. Jesus left His body when he died, but He uses the whole church as His means of action, as the "Body" through which His kind of work still gets done.

2. What others have done that we might have freedom to worship God as we will.

The Church was bought by love and sacrifice . . . and blood. Tell of ways in which people have paid for their Christian belief. Some were eaten by wild animals, some were burned at the stake and in many other ways were the early Christians tortured.

Nor was this sacrifice all away back in the early days. Men and women have paid, down through the years . . . some with their lives, others with their fortunes, with their reputations, with the loss through hardship of those dearest to them. Even today there is a mission school going without bread or rice once a week so that the salary of a missionary may be paid to go into the jungle and preach Christ and Him crucified.

Martin Luther . . . the young man with ideas. This young monk voiced the rising disgust of many people, protesting against the corruption in the church of that day. The three principles were these:

1. The independence of the individual.
2. Escape from external authority.
3. The preeminence of faith in religion.

Young men follow the gleam. Often when we read about these early leaders of the church, we think of old, bearded men, men with stern faces and sour creeds. Quite the contrary was true! It took young men, men in whom the sap of courage was running free, men who were strong enough to build houses all day and travel and preach at night, men who were young enough to be willing to change things from what they were.

Among the early Puritans in England was William Bradford. When Bradford was only 15 years old, he came to the conclusion that the Puritans were right; more than that, that a small sect called the Separatists because they wanted to separate from the Church of England rather than to try to reform it from within, were right.

Pioneering in the Church today. To the young man and young woman of today comes a burning question, even as it came to William Bradford. "Shall I sit down and enjoy my comfortable church? Or has the church today any message for the world outside? What have I, as a Christian to do with the solution of the social and spiritual problems of 1935?

PETER'S GREAT CONFESSION.

Lesson II—January 13, 1935.

Golden Text: "And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou are the Christ, the Son of the living God."—Matthew 16:16.

Lesson Text: Matthew 16:13-28; Luke 9:18-36; I Peter 2:5, 6.

Jesus evidently had it in mind to make known to His disciples a fuller revelation of His Messianic mission, for He had taken them apart into the coasts of Caesarea-Phillipi where they would have time for unbroken fellowship and conversation. It was here that He made known to them the fact that He was the Christ. It was one of the most dramatic and significant incidents in history.

As He Was Praying.

The Master prayed. He took time from His busy days to draw apart and to spend time with the Father in communion and prayer. He found it not only helpful, but necessary to pray, to renew His inner life, to seek the Father's help. One cannot understand or appreciate the Master's life and works apart from His consistent and constant prayer life. And Jesus prayed in no formal way. He believed it was a vital transaction. He did not believe He was talking to empty space, to impersonal forces. He did not believe prayer was a form of self-hypnosis. Prayer for Jesus was intimate, vital, quickening fellowship and communion with the Father. And Jesus came from prayer with new spiritual power and spiritual life.

If the Master felt the need of prayer how much more ought we to feel it? If the Master prayed, how much more ought we to pray? No man can live at his best, no man can truly live the Christian life without prayer. Prayer is not an elective in the Christian school of life; prayer is an absolute required subject.

Who Do the Multitudes Say That I Am?

The question was not prompted by itching ears. The Master was not asking an idle question which He hoped would bring some compliment. He wanted to know what impression His character and ministry had made upon the people of His day, what interpretation they were putting upon Him, what conception they held of Him. Jesus knew the power of ideas, of thinking. It is tremendously important what men think about anything. It is supremely important what they think about Jesus.

The reply of the disciple's was illuminating. The people thought He was some great prophet—John the Baptist, Elias, Jeremiah, or one of the prophets. They recognized unusual powers in him. But they had not seen into the true nature of Jesus. They had not seen in Him the fulfillment of the Messianic hopes. They were like multitudes today who see Jesus as a great man, even as a supernatural person, but who do not recognize Him as the Son of the Living God.

Why Say Ye That I Am?

It is interesting to know what people think about Jesus. But that is not the supreme question. There is something far more vital than that and the question becomes intensely personal. What think you of Christ? Every man must answer that question. Every man must face Jesus Christ in his own soul. And much depends upon a man's answer to that question. It is not enough to say that Jesus was a great Teacher, a great Physician, a spiritual genius, even a super-man. No answer covers all the facts which does not see in Jesus the Son of the living God. A man's thinking has not gone far enough until it sees in Jesus the Son of God, the Saviour of the world and the Redeemer of mankind.

The Christ of God.

"Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." "The One Who Should Come, God's Annointed"—The spirit of God made this truth known to Peter and to the disciples. They saw in Him the glory of God. In Him was the fullness of God. We need not look for another. The Old Testament prophecies have found fulfillment in Jesus Christ. Those who make Christ anything less than the Son of God, the Christ, do not have Christ for their authority.

The Shadow of the Cross.

Strange man, this Jesus. As soon as He had revealed Himself as the Messiah, the Christ, the Son of God, He began to tell them that the Son of God must suffer, must be rejected, must be done to death even upon a cross—the last word in shame and disgrace. This thought cut straight across their ideas. They had looked for a Messiah who should triumph over their enemies, who should overthrow the rule of Rome, who should establish again the glorious throne of David, and here He was talking about rejection, and suffering and shameful death. It was unthinkable! And Peter told Jesus so in no uncertain terms. Alas, how little they understood the strange ways of God. Jesus was the Suffering Servant of Jehovah. He was to take our sins upon Himself; He was to suffer for the guilty; and by His stripes we were to be healed. That system of thought which would take out of life the place of suffering in the redemptive purpose of God for the world and for us, savors not of the things of God but of man.

If Any Man Would Come After Me Let Him Deny Himself and Take Up His Cross Daily.

When a man carried a cross it was a symbol that his life had been forfeited. His life no longer belonged to him. That is what the idea meant in Jesus' day. We talk about our crosses. There is no such thing. Jesus said "His cross" not "His crosses." What Jesus meant was this: If any man will come after me, let him turn from self to me, let him make me the center of his life, let him renounce all personal ambition, all selfish desire, all aims that run counter to my will and wish. Let him take up his cross, that is let him forfeit his life unto me, live his life as if it no more belonged to himself but to me.

Say folks, being a true Christian means something after all. Being a true Christian costs. Being a true Christian goes right to the heart of things.

Losing By Saving . . . Saving By Losing.

If a man shields his life, pampers it, devotes its energies to saving it, he loses life, that is, he never knows what true life is, he cramps life. But if a man lives for others, for great causes, he finds life that is life. Jesus is the supreme example here as elsewhere. No man ever gave himself more fully, lost himself more completely than did Jesus. And no man ever found richer, fuller life, than did Jesus.

Circumstances have rarely favored great men. A lowly beginning is no bar to a great career. The boy who works his way through college may have a hard time, but he will learn how to work his way in life.—Marden.

I came upstairs into the world, for I was born in a cellar.—William Congreve.

CHRISTIAN INFLUENCE.

LESSON: Read Romans 8.

"He that believeth on me, as the scripture saye-eth, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water."—Jno. 7:3-8.

The word "belly" as used here is a figure of speech for the inner man and refers to ones influence.

The word "rivers" is a figure of speech representing the character of the influence.

It has often been repeated in this page, that we know we are Christians both objectively and subjectively; objectively by the good which we recognize in the world, and by our knowledge of truth and our love for truth; subjectively by a kindly attitude which we have toward others, by a disposition to know the truth, and by suffering grief when the truth cannot be known; also, that we have a hate for sin and that we suffer when sin is committed.

This was expressed by a little child the other day in a very direct manner. The child had begun everyday school. The mother also sent her to Sunday School. She was put in the kindergarten to play in the sand box. She begged to be allowed to go up stairs in the next grade with her schoolmates. It was not allowed. It broke her heart. She went home crying. When her mother inquired what the trouble was, she said, "Mama, how in the world can I learn about God, and them other people in the sand box?"

Prayer—Our Father, help us. Even the words of a little child leads us. Inspire us to truth, and love, and the true life. In His name, Amen.

TUESDAY.

A SENSE OF SINLESSNESS.

"For the law of the Spirit for the life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death."—Rom. 8:2.

These words express Paul's inner consciousness of the passing away of the sense of guilt, and of his acceptance in the family of God. This is a consciousness that may be the possession not of the average Christian, but of the normal Christian —a consciousness of the life that is controlled by the spirit of God, a consciousness of the reality that God is not above us and impossible to reach, but that He is on our level with us, working with us and we with Him, setting us free from condemnation and lifting us up to what we ought to be.

"There is no condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus—This is the condemnation—that men love darkness rather than light."

Prayer—O Lord, take from us the old sense of separation from Thee. Take away all sense of wrong and fill our lives with a new sense of right and of union with the King of right, through our Lord Jesus Christ.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

CHRIST OF THE WORLD'S LEVEL.

"Neither do I condemn thee: go thou and sin no more."—John 8:11.

This woman to whom Jesus spoke was accused of what was considered the most heinous of crimes and the penalty of which was death by stoning. But when He had put the men to shame, He faced the woman with pity and something happened to her soul. Her desire for sin ceased, her habits of evil were broken. New habits were set up. New powers of God possessed her, and she went away, numbered among His disciples, who walked thereafter along the primrose path of love, life and beauty.

Prayer—Our Father in heaven, give us this day our daily bread of feeding on Jesus and His truth, and make us workers of time, working in this vineyard of His, till we are called home.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

SCATTERING WAYS.

"Thou hast scattered thy ways to the strangers under every green tree."—Jeremiah 3:11-18.

Jeremiah's pointed phrase pierces many a life today. The godly life is a simple life, well-focused, definite, seeking one goal. The evil of life is like that of ancient Judah, running now after one idol and now after another, a scattered life, an incoherent life, a life that has no central aim, no resting-place.

Now the worldly life runs to one pleasure, now to another. It is claimed by a multitude of follies, a diversity of interests and occupations. It is uncertain, vague, fleeting. It knows nothing of calm peace.

Prayer—We would fix our souls on Thee, O God. We would have but one purpose, to do Thy will. Teach us Thy clear way, that we may walk in it!—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

FRIDAY.

THE PLACE OF HOPE.

"We through the Spirit wait for the hope of righteousness."

Hope is a principal importance in salvation. It has to be so, because of the incompleteness of life. We are told of a painting by the artist Watts called "Hope." It portrays a blinded figure holding a battered lyre and listening to the music of the one remaining string.

However, hope is not only hope. Paul describes it as an unshakable thing held fast in certain on-coming victorys,"we are saved by hope." And yet that hope is extended to him only who seeks the vision and is faithful in Christian service. "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life."

If it be true that the Spirit beareth witness with our spirit that we are the children of God, and if children, then heirs with Christ, then we cannot escape the consciousness that we are a part of some great eternal purpose, and that that purpose must be the perfection of everything, and the gradual transformation of ourselves to His likeness. That is the glorification of the believers hope.

Prayer—Our Father, as Christ did not perish, as we believe that who-so believeth in Him shall not; as Christ was lifted up so lift us up to eternal life. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

FORSAKING AND TAKING.

"And he forsook all, and rose up and followed Him."—Luke 5:27-32.

No pity for Matthew, the tax-collector! What he left was only an insignificant trifle compared with what he won. He left a stuffy little book, an ink-well, and a ledger. He won the companionship of the King of kings and Lord of lords. He left sordid memories, practices shameful at the best. He won a clean life, a free life, eternal peace, everlasting glory.

Never pity a Christian, no matter what he surrenders in order to become a Christian. As he strides forth with Christ, he is entering on the most glorious adventure open to man.

Prayer—Lord Jesus, receive us into Thy company. We will not look back. All shall be of the sunrise with us, and of hope.—Amen.

—AMOS R. WELLS.

SUNDAY.

LOOK OUT.

"Beware of the scribes."—Mark 12:38-44.

Christ had good reason to beware of the scribes. Those pettyfogging souls were dogging Him all through His ministry. They were to pull Him down to the grave at last.

But His chief care was for His disciples, and for us, that we may beware of the scribes, and not become like them. It is so easy to fill our hearts with ink instead of blood. It is so easy to live with precedent instead of principles. It is so easy to flaten out into dead parchment the sweet muscles of face and body.

Prayer—Our God, keep us fresh, keep us vital, keep us daily and hourly true to Thee.—Amen.

OUR ELON COLLEGE.

In speaking of Elon College we like to express it in the words, "Our Elon College." When we say "Our" Elon College, we mean every member of the Church which it represents. We like to have every member feel that he or she has a part in it, because of sending children there or contributing money toward its support, or from services rendered by those who have been trained and educated there.

In its more than forty years of service, in educating our sons and daughters, practically every community of our Church has been touched in some way by the fine young men and women who have received their education there and have gone out to fill their places in the community in which they reside.

Think of the hundreds of men and women, some of our finest citizens, that have been, and are now, the leaders in our Church and State who bear the stamp of the training received at our Elon College.

The pulpits of many of our churches are filled with Elon graduates. I often think it a great pity that Elon College did not come into existence forty years before it did. If that could have been true, our Christian denomination would be strong in the large cities, like other denominations, and our membership would now be numbered in six figures instead of five.

Our Elon College is modern in buildings and equipment, and is one of the beauty spots of North Carolina. It has for its President one of the finest and most capable men our denomination has produced in many years. It has a faculty that is the peer of any college of its class in North Carolina. I do not think it has ever had a student body of finer boys and girls than it has today.

The expense of running the college has been greatly reduced. The budget of former years has been practically cut in half under the present management.

We, as a Church, called Dr. L. E. Smith to be our President and to assume this great responsibility. He had faith in us and accepted the call. Now let us, to a man, stand by him and help him pull it through. He cannot do it by himself, but he can by the united effort on the part of the entire membership of our denomination. We have our part to do. Will we shirk our duty?

THE GREATEST NEED OF TODAY.

By REV. S. W. PHILLIPS.

"It was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints."—Jude 3.

If it was needful for Jude to exhort the General Church in his day to contend for the faith once delivered unto the saints, then, I am sure that a message on "The Faith" is the greatest need of our day! So with the poet, or in the words of the poet, may we pray and earnestly contend for that faith!

"Father as little ones we come to Thee;
As tender lambs unto the shepherd who,
Filled with compassion for their halting steps,
Doth stay his own arms outstretched to woo
The weakling to his warm, enfolding breast!
"Give us that trusting, childlike, potent faith
That never doubts, but takes Thee at Thy word;
No questions asking, "Why" or "Whence" or "Where?"
But sweet confiding in the power conferred.
By Thee on all who in Thy guidance rest.
"Grant us the peace; fill us with truth and love—
The peace, the truth, the love that never fail
To meet our every need, to lift us higher,
Heedless of storm or error's blinding hail,
Until we reach the long-sought, sun-crowned crest."

These words arise in my soul, and make me cry for that faith which was once delivered unto the saints; which to me is the greatest need of the Church of our day.

I.

The greatest need of today is a revival of the faith that justifies and that brings peace to the troubled soul. "Being justified freely by His grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus, whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in His blood." A faith that justifies freely, brings a peace that satisfies completely. "Therefore being justified by faith we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." (Rom. 5:1.) This sort of justification does not come by the deeds of the Law; "For Christ is the end of the Law for righteousness to every one that believeth." (Rom. 10:4.) Reader, may you earnestly contend for the faith once delivered unto the saints.

II.

They had the faith that kept them securely. Someone has said that "Faith is God's power placed at man's disposition." This is obvious, according to John. "For whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world: and this is the victory that overcometh the world even our faith." (John 5:4.) Faith then, is that which makes the saints as invincible as the rock of Gibraltar; because the breast-plate of faith is as impregnable to them who are kept by the power of God thru faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time, as any rock.

III.

They had a triumphant faith, over the devil, over the world, over the flesh, and over the evil spirits in their bodies. This is the faith which was once delivered unto the saints. In other words, they had great faith. Jesus said to the Syrophenician woman, "O woman, great is thy faith." (Matt. 15:28.) This faith gave them their sons and their daughters from the dead, and from the bed of affliction, it gave them courage to stand before kings, and to go to the stake with a shout in their souls.

You may call me a pessimist if you wish to; we must face the facts of our tome. I read in the Pentecost Herald a few months ago that Dr. Morrison said that, "Six conferences in the southern Methodist Church lost three hundred and forty-four more than they gained last year. Where is our Holy fire? Where is our spirit of evangelism? Where is our faith? Do we believe that men are lost? If so, why are we so quiet? Why aren't we about our Master's business? Think! Think!

Do we as a people believe that the Bible is the Word of God, and that Jesus is the only Way to God? Do we believe that all men without Christ are lost? Or do you believe that the business of the preacher today is to help men to find that God is already in them? Do you believe that the blood of Jesus Christ is necessary to Salvation, or your own works are sufficient? (Remember Cain.) Do you believe that the Holy Ghost is a person, and that He is the third person in the Godhead, or do you thing that He is an energy which radiates from the Father? Do you believe in the immortality of the soul, or do you believe that the soul is mortal? Think! Think!

The saint's of Jude's day believed in God the Father Almighty, the Creator of the heavens and the earth; and in Jesus Christ our Lord, who was conceived by the Holy Ghost, born of the virgin Mary, and suffered under Pontius Pilate, was crucified, dead and buried; the third day He arose again from the dead, and ascended into Heaven; He sitteth at the right hand of God, whence He shall come to judge the quick and the dead. They believed in the Holy Ghost, and in the Holy Catholic Church, the forgiveness of sin, the resurrection of the body and life everlasting. All of which I steadfastly believe! Reader, do you?

Faith that triumphs over the Cross, over prison walls, over evil spirits, over being stoned; that saved from wrecks at sea, and that gave them power over sin; that put a song in their mouths while they were being burned to death is the faith which was once delivered unto the saints. So then, beloved of the Lord, with the faith that justifies freely; that keeps securely; and that triumphs over the world, you may say with the Hebrew children: "O, Nebuchadnezzer, we are not careful to answer you in this matter. If it be so, our God whom we serve is able to deliver us from the burning, fiery furnace, and He will deliver us out of thine hand, O King. But if not be it known unto thee, O King, that we will not serve thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up." (Dan. 3:16-18.) Faith then, is the victory. Hence, we sing with the poetess, Miss Voight:

Looking away from my sin and my shame,
Looking away from my sorrow and pain,
Looking to Jesus, the Lamb that was slain—
That's faith.

Looking away from my knowledge and pride,
Looking to Jesus, my Shepherd and Guide,
Looking to Jesus, and Him crucified—
That's faith.

Looking away from my gain or my loss,
Looking away from the world and its dross,
Looking to Jesus on Calvary's cross—
That's faith.

Looking away from my faith and its lack,
Looking to Jesus, whose word is not slack,
Looking to Jesus, turning not back—
That's faith.

VALLEY LETTER.

Much of my time since the first of September has been spent in revival meetings in my field. This is the kind of work I take great pleasure in doing, though sometimes it is hard and discouraging. One has to wonder sometimes why people who know they are in sin and know they are lost will stoutly persist to the bitter end in staying in sin and on the wrong road in spite of all warnings and invitations and offered mercy. Still it is the duty of the minister and the church to continue sounding out the warning as faithfully as possible hoping and praying that the seed sown will bear a harvest.

At Palmyra we had one conversion, at Bethel we had thirty including some backsliders who came forward and renewed their vows to the Lord, at Joppa, none, at Concord, three, at Leaksville, one. Two others made profession at my last appointment at Leaksville. I have received into the above named churches this fall 24 members.

I was assisted in the Leaksville meeting by Rev. F. C. Lester of Norfolk, Va. The people became very fond of Bro. Lester, and enjoyed having him in the homes as well as in the pulpit.

I still have several other meetings to hold, but winter and Christmas time are here now, and so I am leaving meetings off until a more favorable season. In the meantime I am trying to spend a little time by my own fireside and in my study as other duties may allow.

Several of my churches are arranging Christmas programs, and these will keep me busy for a few days at Christmas time. The Christmas story is told over and over every year, and yet the people never seem to tire of it. May the spirit of Him who made the season the glad occasion that it is fill our hearts all the year around.

A. W. ANDES.

CHRISTMAS AT THORSBY.

The Christmas play which was presented on Saturday evening, December 15th, at Thorsby Institute was very impressive. It was entitled, "Inasmuch" and was based on the scripture: "Inasmuch as ye do it unto the least of these—ye do it unto me." The first scene represented the home of a family who had lost the true spirit of Christmas and thought only of the gifts they were to receive and gave to others merely to pay social obligations. An unexpected change of plans brought the entire family to a beautiful Christmas Church Service. They caught a new vision of the meaning of Christmas and of doing for others—and happiness came to them when an opportunity arose to do real service for the hungry and poor The play was written by two of the Institute teachers—Miss Klingelhoefer and Miss Allen. Special music by the Girls' Glee Club, and a reading "The Other Wise Man" by Mary Louise Reinhardt added interest to the program.

GREENSBORO AND HINES' CHAPEL.

Christmas Day was quietly observed in the city of Greensboro. With factories and stores closed, the day was becomingly and peacefully observed. Jesus is the Author of peace, quiet, communion; the devil directs scenes of blood-shed intemperance and confusion. Members of the SUN family are interested in the two Christian churches of Greensboro. The pastor of the First Church is recuperating in Florida, but his fine membership is abiding quite loyal to the church, under the leadership of the board of deacons.

At Palm Street the writer has met his appointments since conference. A commendable Thanksgiving. Offering was taken for the Orphanage amounting to $40.25. The Christmas Pageant on the 24th was a grand success; the offering for Superannuation was taken. The pastor has been remembered with money, also with presents and license plates for his car. It is the hope of the writer that he may be able to render prayerful service worthy of such fine friendship and kindness as has been shown us here at Greensboro.

In entering upon the duties as pastor of Hines Chapel Church, one is convinced that through the years a membership has been developed that is loyal to the mother church. The membership is made up of many young people who have been brought up in the church and taught to love it. their loyalty is unusual They hardly realize their strength. Without pressure they went over the top with the Thanksgiving Offering. Hines' remembered their pastor at Christmas with pantry supplies which is very much appreciated.

ECONOMIES PRACTICED AT ELON.

omies has been made by combining these separate units into two adjoining dining halls served by one kitchen. The same economies that are practiced in the kitchen in the average home are carried out in the kitchen here. Left-overs are used the next day in some other form. Soups, salads, and deserts are prepared in the kitchen rather than buying the more expensive ready-made foods. We have a dough mixer and special ovens for baking our own bread, especially hot rolls for the students at the evening meal. The Christian Orphanage furnishes us our milk at an attractive price. We buy our meat whole and cut it here. We feed the slops to our own hogs which we kill and dress ourselves. In every way it is the purpose of the dining hall to give the student plenty of good wholesome food at the least possible cost.

Another item which in the end works out as an economy is the policy of accepting supplies and materials in payment of students' college expenses, and the employment of students to work and render such services as students can do around the college. While we pay the market wholesale price for vegetables, canned goods, meats, lumber, hardware, furniture, etc., which are offered in payment of expenses, and the prevailing rate of compensation for labor and services rendered by students, this enables more students to stay in college, paying cash for a portion of their expenses and giving us a larger gross income. This enables us to keep the student body up to the point where we can most efficiently and economically teach and administer to the whole group.

Duties of officers and employees have been combined and consolidated wherever possible without loss of efficiency, such as combining the offices of registrar and business manager, having the Home Economics teacher serve as dietician in the dining hall, and many other workable combinations. In this way the number of employees are held down to the minimum, with a consequent reduction in the payroll, which we have found so hard to meet. Constant and diligent watch is kept to take advantage of every opportunity to effect economies without impairing the efficiency of the college.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

This report closes our work for the year 1934. We set our goal for $20,000.00 at the beginning of the year. We have been striving during the entire year to reach it. We have climbed from one rung in our ladder to the next one until we stood on the nineteenth one and we did our best to get up to the twentieth one. We eased up to within $296.00 of it and oh! how we did strive to get to the goal! We were so near yet to far from it to reach it. What a pity! If we could have had just a few more to push when we were so near the top, so tired and out of breath, we would have reached it. We have this one consolation—we did our best.

We want to thank each and every member of the church and every friend who helped us in any way during the year 1934. We are grateful.

We pray that God's richest blessings may rest upon you and that you may have a happy and prosperous year in 1935.

OBITUARIES

SCOTTEN.

Rev. Addison Kiugsbury Scotten was born April 4, 1853, and peacefully passed away at his home in Coleridge Dec. 21, 1934. He had been in poor health since undergoing a major operation a few years ago at Wesley Long Hospital. He was mentally alert during his sickness, patient and resigned; aud everything that loving hands and a kind physician could do was done.

He had been a member of the church from childhood and served his home church as superintendent of the Sunday School before he was twenty years old. He entered the ministry of the Methodist Protestaut Church when he was thirty years old, and served his home church as pastor for several years. He joined the North Carolina Christian Conference at the second meeting of that body held at Park's Cross Roads and after the division of that body into three conferences, became a member of the Western N. C. Conference in which he retained his membership to the end of his life. He never held any pastorate in his confereuce bnt he had a large influence for good in his community and frequently conducted funerals and preached as he had opportunity.

For ten years he taught school in Randolph County and served his county two terms as surveyor.

He was a gifted poet and a talented musician. He was easily influenced by the muses and could write a poem with great speed and ease. At almost all the funerals he conducted he would write a poem for the occasion and these are held as great treasures among his friends.

He prepared his own funeral as carefully as he surveyed land or anything else that he did. This writer conducted his funeral assisted by Rev. Jno. M. Allred, who led in prayer; Rev. H. M. Stroupe, who pronounced a brief eulogy; and Rev. W. J. Honeycutt had been entrusted with a sealed envelope, the contents of which he was to read. It was a beautiful poem, the last he ever wrote. It was full of faith aud reminded one of Tennyson's poem, "Crossing the Bar."

We buried him at Holly Springs and covered his grave with beautiful flowers. His widow, six daughters, three sons, twenty-eight grandchildreu and seven great-grandchildren survive him; and I believe all were preseut at the funeral.

T. E. WHITE.

WALTERS.

Sarah Frances, daughter of the late M. M. and Mildred Dixon Morrow of Alamance County, N. C., died in her ninety first year Friday eveuing, November 16, 1934. Her husband, W. M. Walters, preceded her in death twelve years.

Mrs. Walters is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Martha Piper of Burlington, N. C., and Mrs. J. A. Blauton of Daytona Beach, Fla., and by two sons, C. M. Walters, M. D., of Burlington, N. C., and W. T. Walters, D. D., of Harrisburg, Pa.

Funeral services were conducted at the home of the sou, Dr. C. M. Walters, Burlington, N. C., Sunday afternoon, November 18th, by Rev. James H. Lightbourne assisted by Rev. G. C. Crutchfield.

The deceased was a member in good standing of the First Christian Church, Burlington, N. C., and was both well known and highly esteemed.

J. H. L.

ELLIOTT.

Richard Thomas Elliott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Eliott, was born February 18, 1857, and died December 25, 1934. Aged seventy-seven years, ten months and seven days. Mr. Elliott was married three times. The first marriage was to Miss Mary Seat. To them were born seven children, three sons and four daughters as follows: Mrs. Ruffin Puryear, Mrs. John Tuck, Mrs. Mary Gravitt, Mrs. Charlie Wall (deceased), Chas. Elliott and Walter and Arthur Elliott. There are surviving twenty-two grandchildren and eleven great-grandchildren. After the death of his first wife he remained a widower for several years and then married Mrs. Robert Seat, who died in 1926. Five years ago he married Mrs. Elector Semones who survives him.

Twelve years ago Brother Elliott joined Union Church and was a member at the time of his death.

The funeral was conducted at his home near Virgilina, Va., December 26th by the writer and burial was in the family cemetery. A large crowd of bereaved relatives and neighbors were present.

VOLUME LXXXVII. RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, JANUARY 17, 1935. NUMBER 3.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

The Responsibility for Religious Education.—

Dr Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University, says: "The primary and responsible influence of the religious education of children should be the family and the church." "Unhappily," thinks Dr. Butler, "the family has largely broken down as a shaping and directing force and influence, while the Church . . . is falling farther behind, year by year, in the effectiveness of its religious instruction." He continues: "The separation of Church and State is fundamental in our political order, but so far as religion is concerned, this principle has been so far departed from as to put the force and influence of the tax-supported school on the side of the population which is pagan and believes in no religion whatsoever."

Filtering Air With Electricity.—

In air-filters adapted to home use, it has been easy to remove the coarse particles from the air, but the finer particles have a habit of creeping through. In an effort to combat this, experiments have been carried on recently with electricity, and now one of the largest electrical manufacturing concerns of the country announce that they have succeeded experimentally in filtering air with the aid of a powerful electrical field. This field charges the tiny foreign particles in the air, and then they are passed through a collecting screen which is also charged, but with opposite polarity. It is said that even particles as small as those in cigarette smoke are attracted by this screen and are then held captive by a thin film of oil with which the screen walls are coated.

Virginia's Next Governor and the Dry Issue.—

In THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY it was recently stated that indications were that Virginia would "go dry" again within five years. Now comes the following statement from one of the Virginia papers which helped to make a "success" of the cause of repeal: "Prohibition will be a major issue in the campaign for governor, which already has begun to gather momentum in Virginia; and whether or not the dry organizations pick a candidate, a candidate is certain to pick prohibition." It continues: "Prohibition is not expected to figure in the assembly campaigns this summer, the drys having concentrated upon a program of temperance education during the test period of the ABC act. But it is now considered certain that whatever may be the statistical results of state liquor control, either the politicians or the drys or both are going to raise the camel flag in 1936 and 1937.

How Much Is A Dollar?—

The ghost of the old gold dollar stalked through the world markets this week raising consternation and confusion as it went. Belated recognition of the possibility that the Supreme Court might uphold the gold clauses in old contracts, and that such contracts might have to be settled on a basis of the gold dollar which contained 23.32 grains of pure gold, rather than on the present basis of 13.71, has caused slumps in many issues of stocks as well as on the general commodity markets. Foreign currencies also skidded in their relation to the dollar, and high-grade bonds containing the abrogated clause to pay in gold dollars advanced. While leading banking quarters did not pretend to predict what the decision of the Supreme Court would be, they seemed reasonably confident that some legal means would be found of preventing the return to life of the former American currency unit based on 23.33 grains of pure gold.

Lynchings in 1934.—

Fifteen people, all Negroes, were lynched during 1934, according to records recently compiled at Tuskegee Institute. This number is thirteen less than in 1933; seven more than in 1932; two more than in 1931, and six less than the number in 1930. Eight of those lynched were in the hands of the law, and three of these were taken from jails in which they had been lodged. In fifty-one other instances, lynchings were prevented by officers of the law. The offenses charged against those who paid the penalty of death without due process of law, were: attempted rape, four; rape, two; murder, two; wounding another, one; association with a white woman, one; striking another, one; writing insulting letter, one; insultig a woman, one; implicating others in charge of theft, one. Mississippi led in the number of lynchings with six, while Florida and Louisiaan contributed two each. One was recorded from Alabama, Georgia, Kentucky, Tennessee, and Texas. It is not a record to be proud of.

The Cost of the Liquor Traffic.—

The direct cost imposed upon the American people by the liquor traffic in 1934, amounted to approximately $2,578,016,123, according to figures recently released by the Bureau of Internal Revenue. These figures showed federal tax receipts of slightly under $375-million. Of course bootleg liquor is not included in the above figures, but without considering it at all, there was spent for "legal" liquor more than $20 for every man woman and child in the United States. Or to state it another way, the money spent for liquor would have put to work half of the unemployed of the United States at a wage of approximately $40.00 per month. If the trade promotion methods now being used continue, it will be but a short while before liquor consumption will be greater per capita than in pre-prohibition days. If the direct cost of repeal reaches such figures, what, indeed, is the indirect levy that is being placed upon the people of this country by this once-outlawed traffic.

What Price Progress in Turkey?—

Turkey continues to give evidence of a rather bewildering progressiveness combined with reactionary powers of governmental dictatorship. Women have recently been granted complete franchise, and all titles indicating class distinctions have been abolished. A law has been passed making it illegal to wear turban, cassock or any other clerical garment outside the place of worship. This applies to Moslem, Jew and Christian. The Mosque of St. Sophia, after being used as a place of worship for 14 centuries—900 as a Christian church and nearly 500 as a mosque—is now closed to the public, and is being transformed into a Museum of Byzantine Art. Meanwhile institutions that have done much to encourage the Near East in progressive ideals are suffering from the severity of the methods by which the reforms are effected. The closing, last year, of the International College at Smyrna, despite the effort of those associated with it to comply in every way with Turkish regulations, illustrates the difficulty of carrying on a work of education under Christian auspices in a totalitarian state.—Advance.

General Johnson Speaks.—

For virtually the first time since quitting the NRA, General Hugh S. Johnson has spoken publicly through the Saturday Evening Post in an article, in which he points the way to recovery. "If steps were taken tomorrow to put the monetary and borrowing policy of the Federal government beyond the shadow of a doubt," the former Administrator believes that the depression would well nigh be forgotten by early spring. He supports the oft expressed view of industry that all elements for prosperity are present except confidence. This, he believes, can only be done by balancing the ordinary budget and removing all fear of inflation. If this is not done, then there is "no end in sight." In other words, it comes back to what has been said before: That recovery is dependent upon a new flow of private enterprise which will give employment and cause an increased demand for manufactured and natural products. Mr. Roosevelt frankly admits that he, sees no hope for balancing the budget at present, but he has bolstered business somewhat by his statement that excess of outgo over income "may be expected to decline as rapidly as private industry is able to re-employ those who are now without work." The gross debt on December 28, 1934, was $28,484 millions, and the President estimated that it would reach the unprecedented high of $31 billion by June, 1935.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Mr. Floyd Hurst, an aggressive member of Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., was in Richmond Thursday on business and was a caller in THE SUN'S office.

Dr. L. E. Smith, president of Elon College, was in Richmond Tuesday and Thursday on business for the College and was a caller at THE SUN'S office.

Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Johnson and Mr. S. M. Smith, Sr., members of Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., are spending the winter at St. Petersburg, Fla. THE SUN family will wish for them pleasant and profitable days in the sunny South.

Last week's issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN was a special educational number. This issue of the paper is earnestly commended to pastors, church officials and Sunday School workers for a careful reading. Much valuable information concerning the College is presented.

Rev. O. D. Poythress, pastor of South Norfolk Christian Church, has an attack of the "flu" and has been unable to fill his pulpit for the past two Sundays. His many friends join with his own congregation in prayer that he may soon find relief and be able to take up his duties as pastor.

Mrs. Milo J. Sweet of Elon College, has been spending a few weeks in Florida, visiting especially friends in Tampa and Avon Park where Mrs. Sweet formerly held pastorates. She also visited the Florida Sanitarium at Orlando, and reported that Dr. Rowland and Dr. Atkinson were doing well.

We learn with regret that Mrs. Wm. M. Jay is in Lakeview Hospital, Suffolk, Va., for surgical treatment. Mrs. Jay is literature superintendent for the Woman's Board of the Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference. Dr. Jay and family will have the prayers of the entire church for her early recovery.

Rev. John R. Chapman, pastor at Asheville, North Carolina, has been re-elected Secretary of the Ministerial Association, and also continues to have charge of the Radio program for the ministers of the city. Dr. J. Brainerd Thrall, pastor emeritus of this church, has recently arrived in Asheville, following a three months' trip to California.

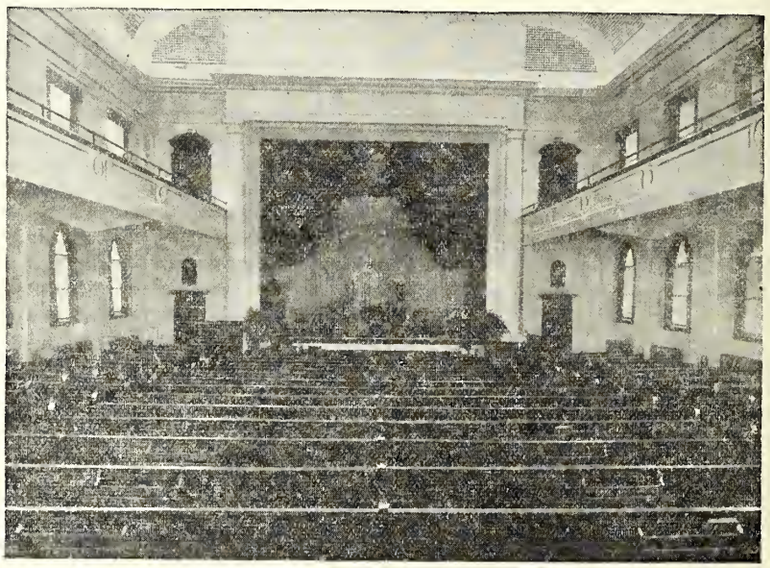
The church at Pleasant Hill, Tennessee, reports as follows: "The monthly community supper has an average attendance of one hundred. After the fellowship supper the evening is made enjoyable and profitable with a program featuring talks on health, agriculture, travel, and other cultural subjects. Community singing and games are always included."

In Dr. Atkinson's absence, his office will be glad to receive articles of interest from pastors, church workers or Sunday School superintendents for publication in THE CHRISTIAN SUN. An article in the interest of any phase of the church's work will be greatly appreciated. The cooperation of the entire church is requested, that the SUN may be made as interesting and profitable as possible.

In October, the church at Fairview, Alabama, was burned. The pastor, Rev. C. W. Smith, reports that services are being held in the school building and that the church is planning to erect a new building in the next few months. He reports that the church and Sunday School and young people's society are making good progress and there is a fine interest in the church.

The ministers of the Eastern Virginia Conference have designated January 27th as Education Day. On this date, or the Sunday most convenient to the local church, claims of the College will be presented by the pastor, or some one to be designated by him, and the superintendent of the Sunday School. It is hoped that all the churches of the Convention will join in this observance.

Rev. C. Carl Dollar, pastor at Phenix City, Alabama, reports an interesting and gratifying thing which happened recently: "Mr. Theo J. Van Haren, of Jamaica, New York, saw in the Missionary Herald an appeal for some one to help start a library for the people here. He responded with a gift of five hundred good books. Now we are putting one class room in the church into shape to be used as a library and pastor's study."



INTERIOR WHITLEY AUDITORIUM.

Dr. and Mrs. G. O. Lankford, formerly of our Burlington Christian Church, have been residing at the College since last September. They left Wednesday of last week for Florida. Their address will be St. Petersburg, Fla., until late spring. Dr. Lankford, for a number of years pastor of our Burlington Church, has been endeavoring to regain his health for several months. He is improved but has returned to Florida for further rest.

THE SUN'S editor is in receipt of a program to be used in connection with the observance of Education Day in the churches of the Southern Convention. This program was prepared by Miss Priscilla Chase of the Board of Christian Education. It is a very fine program, full of suggestions for the churches and Sunday Schools that may wish to observe College Day in an effective way. This program is heartily recommended to every Sunday School and church in the Convention.

In December Rev. Milo J. Sweet, Miss Priscilla Chase and Mrs. Stanley Harrell made a friendly visit to the women's organizations of the Tryon and Asheville churches. The purpose was to promote better understanding of the Southern Convention and its program and to promote fellowship with these Congregational churches. They report a most successful reception and feel that the visit was greatly worthwhile and expressed the hope that other such visitations could be made to promote better acquaintance among the Congregational and Christian churches in the Convention.

What to do with old Christmas trees may be a question you have not raised, but one pastor writes of an interesting ceremony as follows: "We began the new year with a sentimental ceremonial —the burning of our splendid Christmas Tree. The custom of throwing the recent carriers of beauty and light and assistants in keeping the Birthday into ash barrels, is hideous. We decided that the proper thing was to burn them. A number of our children and older folks on my initiative, gathered in front of the church. The great Tree had been cut in two, upper part planted, lower branches piled about it. A star floated from the top, and some decorations of color were about it. We sang some appropriate verses, two of the smallest children applied matches, and the Tree and branches went heavenward with their incense in a blaze of glory!"

The following resolutions were passed by the Rosemont Christian Church in regular quarterly conference January 2, 1935. These resolutions deserve a careful reading by the entire membership of the church:—I. Believing with Gen. R. E. Lee that 'Abstinence from spiritous liquors is the best safeguard to morals and health,' we urge all the members of our church to abstain from the use of beverage alcoholic liquors of any kind, and that they discourage their use and sale by every reasonable way possible.

"II. Regretting the recent court ruling which permits the opening of moving picture houses in Norfolk on Sunday, we urge our people not to go to these on the Lord's Day, and that in every other way possible we try to 'remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy.'

"III. That each of us as members of Rosemont Christian Church, try to live this new year 1935, in such a way as to bring the greatest glory to our Church, the greatest good to our community, and the greatest honor possible to the Name of our Lord."—Adopted by Rosemont Christian Church in regular quarterly conference, January 2, 1935.

THE TASK OF A LOCAL CHURCH IN SUPPORTING ELON COLLEGE.

Elon College is the child of the Christian Church. She was conceived in the mind and heart of the Church, born of the sacrifice of the Church, and has been nurtured by the gifts and the services of the Church. She belongs to the Christian Church.

And she must be supported by the Christian Church. We have no right to expect others to take care of our child as long as we are able to take care of her ourselves. And we are able to take care of her. There are resources enough in the Christian Church family to take care of Elon College. In any event we have no right to expect others to take care of Elon College, unless we do everything we can to take care of her ourselves.

Now the Southern Christian Convention is simply the churches of the Southern Christian Convention. There is no Convention apart from the local churches of the Convention, that is in the final analysis of the thing. If it is said that the Southern Christian Convention must support Elon College, that is only another way of saying that the local churches of the Convention must support Elon College. That brings it right back to you and me, who are members of the local churches.

ELON'S LABORATORIES ARE WELL EQUIPPED.

We must support Elon College. That is our task.

There are several factors in the support of our College. There is, for instance, the matter of good will, or good words. A friendly feeling toward the College, a friendly word for the College, are of inestimable value. And we can speak a good word for Elon College in all sincerity. Elon College is a good college. She is a great little college; or, to put it another way, she is a small college doing a great work. She far surpasses many other colleges in physical equipment, and she compares very favorably with other colleges both as to faculty and as to type of work done. Personally, I believe in Elon College. I believe in her so much that I plan to send my children there. I make no apology for Elon College. I am a booster for her. And if every member of the Christian Church would give Elon College his good words and his good will it would help tremendously.

Then, of course, there is the matter of students. Elon College cannot educate young people by "absent treatment." She is not doing her work by correspondence courses. She must have students. And she has a right to look for these students from Christian church homes. And she has a right to expect this, not because of blind loyalty, but on the grounds of actual merit. Members of the Christian Church ought to send their children to Elon College because Elon College is a good college.

But colleges cannot run on good will, or on good will and students. It takes money to run a college. And if every student who went to Elon paid all his bills, and if Elon were full to overflowing, there would not be enough money to keep the college going. There is, then, the matter of money. Elon College must look to the local church to help it financially. This can be done in various ways.

a. Sunday Schools should receive an offering on the Fifth Sunday of each quarter for the College. If every Sunday School in the Convention would receive such an offering every Fifth Sunday, a surprisingly large sum would be realized for the College. And the Sunday School would not miss what it had given.

b. Dollar-A-Month Club membership dues. Here is a way in which individuals and organizations can give appreciable sums to the college during the year, and in a way that does not entail a burden. Suppose even every family in the Convention gave one dollar a month to Elon College! And suppose every member gave even fifty cents a month!

c. Conference apportionments. The local church which raises and sends in its conference apportionments thereby helps to support the College.

d. The Special Elon College Offering. Once a year, during the College period, January and February, the College comes to the local church for a Special Offering for the support of the College. Every Church should emphasize such an offering, and do its best to make as large an offering as possible. This Special Offering can be made a vital factor in the financial program of the College if the local churches took it seriously.

e. Individual gifts. There are, in the local churches, many individuals who could give larger gifts directly to the College. A gift to the College is an investment in Christian education. Every college must depend to a great extent on large-hearted and generous-giving individuals who can share substantial sums; but it also depends upon those who will share with the College, even though the sum is not large.

f. Bequests, legacies, endowments, etc. There are members of the Christian Church who ought to remember Elon College in their wills. A legacy from them, to be invested as a source of permanent income, would greatly aid the college and would help to put it on a secure basis. A Christian is a steward of his money, not only in life, but in death.

Perhaps the most immediate challenge to the local church is the Special College Offering. Churches may take it either in January or February. Pastors and Sunday School leaders should emphasize it. Plans should be made for it. A generous response should be given to it. Let your offering be a vote of confidence in the College, and a worthy expression of your support of the College.

H. S. HARDCASTLE.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.

5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

RETHINKING SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

The development of religious organizations in Protestant churches has reached the point where there should be a critical examination of the work of the Sunday School. The work of the Sunday School needs to be studied both in the light of its own objectives, and in its relation to the other factors in the church program.

Those who have been interested in the entire program of the church, have been heard frequently to raise questions as to present day tendencies in Sunday Schools work, which have indicated that all is not as it should be. Marguerite Harmon Bro, in The Christian Century of December 26, 1934, writing under the title: "The Sunday School: Asset Or Liability," has dared to face the question boldly. She has definitely stated her conclusion that the Sunday School as it operates today is a liability to the church.

This article deserves a most careful reading by all who are interested in the work and welfare of the church. We shall not attempt to reproduce the line of argument followed by Mrs. Bro. We are by no means subscribing to the conclusions at which she arrives. We are only insisting that the facts which she points out should receive serious consideration by those who would arrive at their own conclusions.

Many of the weaknesses which are pointed out in the article have been perfectly apparent to our Sunday School workers for quite some time. We have all been aware that those of us who are working in the Sunday School have not been as well trained as such workers ought to be. Everyone has known that the Sunday School does not have sufficient time with the pupil to accomplish what is expected of it. It has also been apparent that much of the training that the Sunday School is expected to give, is properly and of necessity the task of the home. These things most of us have known.

But when the author states, as she does, "The Sunday School detracts from the spiritual usefulness of the church," and another statement, "Further, the Sunday School offers an insufficient interpretation of religious experience which tends to block off more adequate interpretations," then questions are raised which touch the very fundamentals of Sunday School work.

We are not attempting to argue for or against the above statements. We are only insisting that we should face the facts. Just here it should be noted that conditions are quite different with respect to the place of the Sunday School in the country church where the pastor is present for one or two services a month ,and the city church where two stated services of worship are held every Sunday. The questions that are arising have to do mainly with the city church.

Now let us note certain facts that must have been apparent to many of us. One is that the Sunday School and the worship services of the church are bilateral, and sometimes competing efforts within the church. It is no longer a case of one being the supplement of the other. For a great many people, it is a case of one supplanting the other. There are hundreds of people who by their actions declare that the Sunday School is an adequate source of religious inspiration, and a sufficient medium for religious expression through service. But is the Sunday School sufficient?

The fact seems to be that we have stressed the importance of the Sunday School, until this institution which is relatively important has taken in the minds of many, a position of supreme importance. People are sought out, invited and importuned to attend the Sunday School. If they drop out for a few Sundays they are urged to come back. We talk as if all the benefits of religion are mediated through the Sunday School; and then lament the fact that people are neglecting the worship service of the church.

It may be that the question of financial responsibility enters into the matter. The church organization goes to great expense to provide the most modern buildings and the most up-to-date equipment for the Sunday School. The church pays for heat, light and janitor service. There are those who occupy positions as authorities on Sunday School work, who say that the church budget should also provide literature for the Sunday School. This may be well and good for small children; but to do all this for well and prosperous adults who refuse the obligations of church membership, has the appearance of encouraging people to be religious bums and dead-beats.

Addresses before Sunday School conventions and institutions often emphasize the large per cent of new members who come into the church through the Sunday School. These figures are true. But as far as this writer's experience goes, they are for the most part the children of parents who are loyal members of the church and faithful attendants. Nobody has taken the trouble to compile the figures as to the number of children who were once in our Sunday Schools, whose parents never made it a habit to stay for church and who held their membership at all; and now the children are lost to the Sunday School and to all the influences of organized religion.

When attention is called to these facts it is not with the intent of detracting from the influence of the Sunday School. No one believes more thoroughly in the place, power and possibilities of the Sunday School than does this writer. But there are no magic powers that are inherent in Sunday School membership or attendance. The Sunday School has its place; but that place is as an auxiliary and an adjunct of the Church our Blessed Lord established. It was never ordained to take the place of the organized body of believers, who have in faith taken Jesus Christ as Saviour and Lord, and who have taken a solemn vow to serve him with hand, mind and heart so long as life shall last. Let us continue to make the largest possible use of our Sunday Schools; but let us exalt the Church of Jesus Christ to its true place in the divine scheme of things.

THE DETECTIVE POWER OF SIN.

There is no truer saying ever spoken than "Be sure your sins will find you out." You may not count it sin. In fact, you may not be convinced that it is wrong. But sin has a way of defining itself and eventually exhibiting itself. Wrong may be covered for a while, may be buried beneath the rubbish of wrong living, but eventually it will come to light.

Richard Bruno Hauptman may not have kidnapped the Lindbergh baby. He is now trying to establish his innocence. However, there are many things being brought to light that make it difficult for him to establish his innocence. The ransom money in his possession; the ransom note written by hand, which experts say are identical with his; the voice spoken over the cemetery wall, which Col. Lindbergh declares to be identical with that of the prisoner, Hauptman; the ladder built, which proved to be the death trail for the infant; and many other interesting facts would seem to be digging away of the foundation of the accused's declarations of innocence.

It is exceedingly difficult—in fact, it is impossible—for sin to cover its trail. Eventually, the clouds will lift, the mist will be driven away, and the facts will stand out in boldness. The offender is compelled to face the facts of the offense in the court of his own conscience, in the courts of human justice, and in the courts of divine retribution. It is difficult, exceedingly, to settle the case in the first; and impossible to settle it, in the second, without paying the penalty. Through the love of God, and by His infinite grace, we may find forgiveness, in the third. And by His regenerative spirit, we may lose the stain, be relieved of the guilt, and find ourselves new creatures in Christ.

FAITH.

We often hear the expression, childlike faith. We pray that our own prayers may evidence such faith. Childlike faith is a faith that expresses itself without question. No doubt ever disturbs it. There is a certainty in the mind of the child that what he wants he will receive. Faith without the above characteristics could hardly be classed as faith. Such an attitude could be more correctly expressed by a wish or a hope than by faith. Childlike faith breathes of certainty and counts the thing needed already in hand.

The first looked at the second, hastily, and decounting pennies. One said, "I have five pennies."

The other said, "I have ten."

The fiirst looked at the second, hastily, and declared, "You only have five pennies, as I."

"But," said the second, "My father said he would give me five pennies tonight; so I have ten."

Her father's promise did not admit of question. So confident was she that she would receive the additional pennies that she could count them then.

Our faith in God should be of such character that we could count the things that He has promised already in our possession in advance of the actual reception. This is the heart of religion. What individuals and churches need today is childlike faith—faith that will take God at His word and move forward as if the Kingdom were already coming in its fulness. L. E. S.

ANNUAL MEETINGS.

This is the time of the year when most of our churches hold their annual meetings. In some churches this is made a significant and happy event, a supper is served, bringing together a large proportion of the members of the church, and not infrequently at the supper the reports from the officers and heads of departments are received, officers elected and other business transacted. It breaks up the stilted formality of the average business meeting. Some churches still hold just an ordinary business session, attended by the faithful few. Perhaps some churches hardly have that. At any rate, it is a time of stock taking and of planning for the new year. It is of vital importance to any church that its business be transacted in a business-like fashion, efficiently, wisely and in a good spirit. Churches that are negligent with regard to the business affairs are usually not vital when it comes to spiritual matters. Things are allowed to go at loose ends and sooner or later somebody begins to criticise church officers for the way things are run and with that criticism comes trouble in a church. There is lightning in the clouds of badly conducted church business, lightning that may strike the church and do a great deal of damage. On the other hand, with officers recognizing their responsibilities, conducting their business in an efficient manner, keeping their records accurately, and making clear and comprehensive reports, there is assurance of vitality that promises well for the church's life in every respect.

There is great need in most of the churches for a clearer understanding on the part of church officers, as to just what their responsibilities are. That is one of the advantages of the "Church Officers' Visitations." They help to clarify in the minds of church officers just what they are supposed to do. It dignifies their responsibility and helps also to a broader vision and understanding of the relationship of the local church to the Kingdom of God as a whole.

We hope that the annual meetings in all our churches this year will indicate growth, a finer type of spirituality, an increased prosperity and a larger sharing in the missionary undertakings of the denomination. We also wish to express our highest appreciation of those church officers who serve with fidelity and diligence and often times without due appreciation or thanks. Those who serve with no personal interests but with only the interest of the church and the Kingdom in mind, deserve our thanks and the blessing of our Heavenly Father. E. C. G.

CHURCH OFFICERS' VISITATIONS.

One of the most valuable elements of the denominational program in recent months has been the plan for church officer's visitations. This plan began in the Michigan Conference and was so worthwhile that it was adopted a year ago by the Commission on Missions as its major method of missionary promotion. The plan is for a team preferably including some representatives of the National Boards and others as desired, to visit the churches and have a round-table conference with the officers of the church with regard to the work of the local church, as well as the National Boards relating the local church to the world-wide work of the denomination.

Under the plan Dr. W. R. Kedzie has made a visitation of many churches with Dr. Atkinson in the Southern Convention. Mr. Donald Adams, Chairman of the Laymen's Advisory Committee will visit the churches in Florida during February. An itinerary has been worked out involving a visitation of almost every church of our fellowship in the state. He will begin on February 11th and the program will keep him in Florida until early march. Great good is anticipated from such visits, not only helping church officers with their local problems, but also inspiring them with a desire for a more adequate participation in the missionary work at home and abroad.

DECENTLY AND IN ORDER.

The Apostle Paul, in writing to the church at Corinth, urged that in the conduct of worship everything should be done "decently and in order." Advance in a recent issue quotes approvingly an editorial from the Watchman-Examiner suggesting that theological seminaries tell their students to keep their hands out of their pockets. Advance adds that, if the minister will not avoid this slovenly practice, the minister's wife should sew up his pockets.

This leads us to remark on other distressing habits which mar the worship services in many churches. A reverent reception of the offering makes that part of the order of worship full of meaning but the gifts are often shoved upon the platform by the ushers with no prayer of dedication. The Communion sacrament is often administered carelessly. The benediction is sometimes so hastily uttered with so little reverence that the congregation feels quite comfortable in putting on coats, reaching for a hat or overshoes, and beginning to walk to the exit in a burst of conversation as soon as the Amen is uttered. Often the service of worship opens with no call to worship, either in set words or in the attitude of the minister. While the choir is singing or the organ is being played it is not uncommon for the minister to seem to be in anything but the attitude of prayerful attention. It even happens sometimes when two ministers are sitting behind the pulpit that they engage in endless whispering like boys in the back seats in school.

The deepening of the sense of worship through attention to such details is no simple task. If a congregation has not been trained to maintain reverence in the house of prayer it will take much thought and care on the part of the minister to develop a proper attitude and appreciation. But it is worth all it costs to deepen the sense of God in the minds of the congregation. Let all be done "decently and in order." C. R. R.

WHAT A PRESBYTERIAN OWES ELON COLLEGE.

May 29, 1932 was a banner day in my life. The sun shone brightly overhead and a song was in my heart, for on this day President Leon Edgar Smith presented me with a diploma and an A. B. degree. The song continued in my heart as I left the campus to fare forth into the cold cruel world, but little did I realize that my heart was remaining behind in "That Garden Spot of North Carolina." Many times since this eventful day my memory has brought me back to the old school and its hallowed moments of yesteryear. Just as stately oaks, and a certain titian haired Junior marching to and fro reciting "The Oration of the Century" which he was to deliver at High Point College in North Carolina's Intercollegiate Oratorical Contest. He can see the senior oak and never-to-be-forgotten class rooms where he sat at the feet of three of the best teachers it has ever been a man's privilege to study under. I refer to Drs. Newman, Harper, and Powell. Let me show you what I mean, because through them I caught the spirit of Elon.

At the feet of Dr. Newman my Spiritual understanding broadened and my knowledge of Scripture deepened. Truly it was like sitting at the feet of Gamaliel, and having the Bible explained out of the original Hebrew and Greek. I always felt that I was going into the presence of one of God's precious Saints when the whistle blew to summon me to one of his classes. I love him and he first stamped Elon on my heart.

It was always an intellectual feast to attend one of Dr. William Allen Harper's classes. This professor more than any I have ever had, taught me to use my gray matter. No one could sit in his class without thinking, and thinking makes one grow. Through him, Elon gave me new methods to deal with an ever changing youth problem. Times have changed since our forefathers hewed an Empire out of a howling wilderness with their axes, and educational methods must change to meet these needs. The Religious Education Department of Elon College helped me solve this problem.

As Dr. Thomas E. Powell taught me Biology, I settled a question which had bothered me to a great extent. That question unrolled before my eyes each day, and finally it burst upon my heart like a ray of sunshine. The answer to that question was, There is no conflict between science and religion, but they go hand in hand.

Elon College gave me a broader and better understanding of applied religion. Although it is a Christian-Congregational School, the faculty and students welcomed me with open arms and considered me one of their own. Elon draws no denominational lines, but lives up to the command of the Book, "Whosoever will let him come, and he that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out."

As a result of my association there, it was my privilege to serve the First Christian Church in Burlington, N. C., as supply pastor for six months while they were without a pastor and I without a pulpit. There I met some of the most lovable Christians I have ever known. The fellowship begun at Elon and continued in Burlington is being continued here in Portsmouth. Last summer The First Christian and First Presbyterian held union services during the months of July and August. Thanksgiving Day three Elon graduates who are pastors here held union services in The First Presbyterian Church. They are Rev. Robert A. Whitten of the Christian Church, Rev. Ray Jarrett of Central Methodist, and your humble servant.

President Smith told me that while an undergraduate at Elon he never passed the girls' dormitory without hoping in his heart to see the face of the most beautiful Lady in the world. Later this Lady became his wife. Elon gave me my wife. The same day Dr. Smith conferred a degree upon me, he conferred one upon Miss Mary Anne Rudd who is now Mrs. William Redd Turner, and together we are endeavoring to serve our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ in the ministry. So you see I have much to thank Elon for, I'm half Christian anyway.

As the years go by my love for the old College grows, and if she will continue to "lick" Guilford and be North State Champions my love will know no bounds.

Wm. Redd Turner.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Gospel of Jesus Christ is reasonable. It is founded upon facts and not upon fanaticism. It requires no more faith to live upon its teachings than it requires to live by the doctrines of the world. Life for man must find a place for faith. Otherwise he cannot live. In the last analysis the motive of life is determined by the direction of faith, not by the discovery and creation of it.

It is very easy for many people to say, "I don't know," in facing the matter of religious fidelity. The whole question of faith in God is often dismissed by a wave of the hand and a simple, "Well I don't know about God." "Maybe there is a God, and maybe there is not," is another way of refusing to face the real issue of spiritual life and allegiance to Jesus Christ. But who is wise enough to know that he cannot know God? Who is foolish enough to deny the existence and mercy of God?

The man who refuses to accept the Christian religion because he is unwilling to exercise his faith in Jesus Christ as Saviour and God as Father, may boast of intellectual superiority; and he may regard those who are seeking to follow the light of the Bible as weak-minded fanatics. Let us see if this type of person lives up to this standard in the ordinary affairs of life. Did he enter school with a definite knowledge that he would graduate, and maintain his mental faculties until old age? He entered school and pursued his studies in spite of any possibility that this time and money would be spent in vain. He faced his mental preparation with an apparent assurance of long life.

Does a young man refrain from falling in love with a charming young sweetheart, when he has no definite knowledge, even with all the strength of youth, that he will establish a home and enjoy the fellowship of his companion? No! He makes love to the girl of his dreams and enters into the joys of married life, on a bare "may be" that life has a future for him. His faith in life and in himself is a guiding star in his physical existence. The same attitude is taken by many people who refrain from accepting the Christian faith when they enter the field of business and professional life. The devotee of Mammon, in the quest for wealth, does not, for a moment, expect other bankers and business leaders to present indisputable evidence and unquestioned assurance that his money will be safe; that his life will be long; and that his career will be successful.

Why, then, should any reasonable man with faith enough to enter school; to establish a home; to undertake to make a living,—refuse to be as frank and courageous when the claims of Christianity are presented to him? In personal living, in social contacts, in business,—he makes the venture upon faith based upon foundations less stable than the simple tenets of the Church of Jesus Christ. Why should it be considered wise to exercise faith in the future of physical life, in the permanence of the family and home, and in the material success of industrial adventure; and in the face of this attitude, regard others, who accept the Bible and Jesus Christ, as stupid followers of unfounded faith?

The Bible, the life and death of Jesus Christ, and the witness of the Holy Spirit in the human heart—these three offer man abundant testimony to the reality of the future spiritual life. Upon these man may find a basis for believing that it is as reasonable to accept the spiritual standards of Jesus Christ, as it is to accept the material and physical standards of the unbelieving world. The evidence that man will live beyond the grave is as convincing as any testimony procurable that he will live another hour this side of the grave.

THE MARKS OF A COLLEGE.

There are many colleges throughout this and other countries. No one who desires college training needs forbear. The average college stands with wide open gates to all who may wish to enter, provided they have the scholastic requirements and are able to pay their bills. There are more students enrolled in the colleges today than usual. There is a greater demand for trained minds than ever before. This demand comes not from positions that have been created and are waiting for the proper persons to fill them but from an economic condition that demands ability capable of creating positions and filling the same.

The average individual is endowed with ability capable of a unique service. He needs something that will help him discover this ability and fit him for the service demanded. The business of a modern college is to take the ambitious youngster of today and help him to discover himself, and then to make it possible for him to make the most significant contribution that he is capable of.

There must, then, be a purely academic atmosphere about a college stimulating tremendously to the mental life of its students. It is not merely a "whetting up" process. The successful college today is not a grinding stone where youngsters may put the edge on their wits but a laboratory where they may discover by scientific processes their mental abilities, may develop and enlarge their mental capacities. From such vantage ground, vision takes a much more inclusive scope and a far wider sweep. The modern process of education proposes to increase and enrich the mental life of the youth of this day.

The day that is now opening up for us and for the world will require something more than mental acumen. This new day will demand social accomplishments that will afford ease and satisfaction in company with others, and that also will provide possible programs for the profitable utilization of unoccupied moments. With the increase of population, which means an increase in laborers, there has been created a problem for society. A person to be happy must know how to use profitably his leisure moments. An untrained mind that is unable to appreciate good books, wholesome reading, good music, innocent fun will find it exceedingly difficult to spend his unoccupied moments with satisfaction to himself or with profit to his fellowmen. The forward-looking college today proposes to prepare its students for such eventualities in the society of which he is to be a part in the coming days.

With a trained mind and high social capabilities, the individual will need religion—I mean, the Christian religion—will need a light outside of himself, to make plain the path of safety and of progress, will need a power not his own to hold him steady when the winds of temptation sweep about him. The college that leaves out of its curriculum illuminating information regarding the progress of society in the light of Christianity is denying to the young people in its custody one source of information from which they are to secure light and power necessary for wholesome and successful living. The individual who is unacquainted sympathetically with the rich religious background of this country and the part that the leadership of the spirit has played in the molding of characters that have helped significantly to make the nation is, himself, ignorant in the essential facts of his own nation. The revelations of God to man have always been the highlights on the highway of progress, both for individuals and for nations.

The marks of a college, then, must be academic in the freest and most complete manner, social in the highest and most wholesome fashion, religious in the purest and the truest way possible. Paul said, "I bear in my body the marks of the Lord Jesus." So should the college bear in its curriculum the marks that evidence scholarship, social uplife, and religious integrity.

L. E. SMITH.

LANETT, ALABAMA.

We had a very quiet Christmas down here in this beautiful Southland, and the New Year has been very pleasant so far.

We are hoping and praying that this may be the greatest year in the history of the church. There is room for decided improvement along almost every line of church work. However, the Church of Jesus Christ has stood the storms and persecutions of the ages and has prospered beyond the expectations of its enemies. Now, if this be true, what would have been the results if all its friends and followers had been true?

One of the most remarkable events in the world is how God can bless human efforts and enlarge human results. The prayers and power of the Church depends upon the faithful efforts of the few who remain faithful and God will, through these consecrated lives, get to Himself a wonderful victory. Every great movement to honor God has been launched by a faithful few. The results are tremendous. The Missionary, the Educational and the Benevolent Institutions of the Church all prove this to be true; now if the Church could attain such wonderful success under such unfavorable conditions, what might we expect if the present constituency would be true? If every one would "bring one" our membership would be doubled. And it can be done, and thus the "knowledge of the glory of the Lord would fill the earth as the waters cover the sea." We have set for our goal here in Lanett—To increase our members in every department of our work to twice their present enrollment.

We need to increase our membership in the missionary society to double its present number. See! What the few women are doing who are already members. What could they do if their kind was increased? We need a revival of enlistment in the missionary work. It would mean a solution of all our church problems if all of our membership could be induced to join the Missionary Society.

We need a revival of Sunday School interest and attendance. The attendance upon church services of every kind is too low. We have seven organized churches in our town, with a seating capacity of some two thousand people. We also have some six or seven thousand people. So you see if we had all our churches filled every Sunday there would be from four to six thousand people to go elsewhere. Our pleasure resorts are overflowing with attendants. Our highways are thronged with pleasure seekers. Our places of amusement are overrun with the worldly-minded. Our churches are as a lodge in a Garden of Cucumbers; yea Lord, we need a revival! If the few faithful Sunday School superintendents and teachers and pupils can succeed as they love, and are, what could be done if God could get what is due Him in His sanctuary? We need a revival

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

A PERSONAL TOUCH.

"A gentleman once visited a great jewelry store, owned by a friend. His friend showed him magnificent diamonds, and other splendid stones. Amongst these stones his eyes lighted on one that seemed quite lustreless, and, pointing to it, he said: 'That has no beauty at all.' But his friend put it in the hollow of his hand, and shut his hand, and then in a few moments opened it again. What a surprise! The entire stone gleamed with all the splendours of the rainbow. 'What have you done to it?' asked the astonished gazer. His friend answered: 'This is an opal. It is what we call the sympathetic jewel. It only needs to be gripped with the human hand to bring out its wonderful beauty'."—A. C. Price. This is the reward of a personal touch.

If the world is ever to be what Christ would have it be there must be brought into the cause of Missions that personal touch, which will cause the message of the Kingdom to gleam with the splendors of his ever abiding love. Then not only will the heathen turn to God, but those who send the message will be rewarded by the beauty of a Christianized world.

ZULU PASTORS PUSHING ON.

Right here is a good place to note that Mr. Stick reports the best winter conference of Zulu pastors in his knowledge. "Christian Righteousness" was the theme. "Effective, earnest, thoughtful and inspiring" were the adjectives applied to the sermons of the younger Zulu pastors. Progress is noted all along the line. As a dark contrast comes the tale of war between two tribes; eleven lives lost, over 600 huts burned, produce and live stock destroyed. Government stepped in and made the two tribes settle far from each other. Refugees by the hundreds found shelter in Christian homes.

MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

Mrs. J. H. Massey and Mrs. A. D. Gerringer have sent in their dues of $5.00 each to the C. M. A. of the N. C. and Va. C. Conference. We need 98 more members to be paid up this year. What a fine place to invest a five dollar note or check. "But lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven . . where thieves do not break through nor steal."

THE COLLEGE AND THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST.

To those who know American history it is impossible to think of the Congregational Churches apart from the college. Out of them grew largely the educational system of the Northeast which persistently urged its way into the middle west and really formed the foundation for the school system of the country. Harvard, Yale, Dartmouth, Williams, Bowdoin, Middlebury, Amhurst, Illinois, Oberlin, Whitman, Pacific, Rollins, Mt. Holyoke, and nearly two score others grew out of Congregational Churches. It is safe to say that without the Congregational Churches these colleges would not have been and without having founded colleges and maintained them the churches never would have come to such world-wide influence and power as now is their portion. The life on Congregational Churches and the life of colleges go hand in hand, march shoulder to shoulder, serve millions together, live together—or, shall it be said? go down together. "As unto the bow the cord is," so unto the churches stands the college. Each grows weak without the other.

Out of such a background came the spirit of Congregational churches into the Southeast years ago. The oldest of these churches now wielding a significant influence in this area, is "Circular Church" of Charleston, South Carolina, of which Rev. George N. Edwards is the faithful pastor. It was founded 250 years ago. The youngest church is a small mission near Roberta, Georgia, known as Friendship Church, begun three years ago by Mr. Crawford Montcrief, a licensed minister of Knoxville, Ga. Circular helps to make the college go. Friendship needs to have the college product come.

Since then, the college and the churches are so definitely joined together, the life of the one depending, time without end, upon the other as the life of the other is increasingly dependent upon the life giving product of the one, what each must consciously and regularly and persistently seek to do for the other may be briefly but exceedingly seriously suggested. For if life grows out of life and into greater life, mutual self-giving stands at the door and knocks. Both the college and the churches must welcome each other with wide swinging doors. No good that either has must remain unshared.

What need has the church which the college can supply? First off it needs trained leadership. In war it's the man behind the gun. In the locomotive, it's the engineer; in the ocean liner, it's the captain or pilot; in medicine it's the doctor; in the church, it's the man in the pulpit. Each must be trained in his particular field. The man behind the gun need not know much theology, but he must know how to find the range, measure distances, aim the gun and pull the trigger. The locomotive engineer need not know astronomy, but he must know the mechanics of a locomotive, how to care for and manage the immense power beneath his hand. The captain need not know dentistry or farming or civil engineering, but must know the ocean depths and the rules which govern sailing on the high seas. The doctor need not know deep sea fishing or mountain climbing or golf or the cotton industry, but he must know anatomy, the laws of health and the application of remedies for the prevention and cure of diseases. And sometimes he must know surgery and even specialize in brain surgery or some other department of his profession. And the minister need not know anything of all that these others each in his own department know, but he must know immensely more in his own department. Among the Congregational churches even of the southeast the time is past when a good sea captain or a good locomotive engineer or a good doctor or a good farmer is by that token qualified to be a minister of the gospel of Jesus. But every good man called of God to preach is also called of God to take the pains to fittingly prepare himself rightly to handle the word of truth. You would allow no man to pull your teeth if he just felt he was called to pull teeth, purchased a pair of forceps and a dentist's chair and said 'come on.' No, he must take the pains to learn dentistry before you will let him pull your teeth. And so the man of God who really seeks to build God's house here on earth, will take advantage of the college. And the Christian college, properly equipped furnishes the ministry for our churches.

But besides this, the college furnishes the churches with trained young men and young women who will take their places as leaders in our churches and schools of religion. It is in the college that lay power is generated to keep the church moving efficiently in responding to the youth demands of today.

The college goes further: It gives youth the opportunity for culture, to develop holy inspirations along all lines of learning: art, music, business, pedagogy, science, engineering, economics—both home and industrial, forestry, agriculture, and, in general, an all round development of the personality God has given to your every son and daughter. And it does this at a minimum of cost.

Now what can the churches of the southeast do for the college? Surely nothing less than a spirit of loyalty. Think of the college as a very close part of the home life of every member of every church. Think of it in terms of appreciation, an institution of the home of which you are proud. Go to its big meetings—commencements, concerts, oratorical contests, competitive games and banquets; attend its religious gatherings, etc. Think of the college as you think of a son who still needs the love of a father and a father's support. Think of it as the one molding means by which your efforts to bring up your children in the way they should go are being perfected in something like a finishing school. Do these things as acts of loyalties and your love will

TRAINING YOUNG MINISTERS AT ELON COLLEGE.

Elon College offers a great opportunity to the young person who desires to become, or already is, a minister of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. The minister should be well prepared for his work. For his work will be filled with problems having to do with individuals, individuals and their environment, individuals and their fellowmen, individuals and their religions, social and political lives. In order to be able to cope with all of these problems his education and preparation must be concerned with these problems. In his education he must find answers to riddles and problems of life. He must be able to meet and mix with people, young and old. No better place is there to get a good start and a good foundation than at college such as Elon College.

At Elon we have a Bible and Religious Education Department which is a very strong department. Dr. J. U. Newman, who has been at Elon since its opening, teaches Bible and Greek. Dr. Linden S Dodson teaches Religious Education. Both of these men are well prepared to teach their respective fields. In one of these fields the ministerial student should maior. In the other he should minor. Every phase of the Bible is studied. Greek is taught which explains more fully some passages of scripture otherwise not clearly understood. A good history of the Bible is given. A thorough study is made of the interpretation of the Bible as to clarity of meaning and significance. Preaching and teaching values of the Bible are given to the ministerial student. Everything is done to show the student that the Bible is the greatest book ever written and is a potent force in the world. In Religious Education a study of the Bible is also made. A study of the individual and the development of a Christian personality is made. The relation of the individual to his family as to his place and influence is studied. The place among his fellowmen and in society is brought to light. Worship services and programs of all kinds are planned and studied. The student who studies and works in these courses will be well prepared and will have an excellent foundation upon which he can build when he enters the school of experience or a seminary. Elon ministerial students are making an excellent showing in their knowledge of the Bible and of Religious Education wherever they go.

On the campus the ministerial students are expected to set the example and standards of behavior. They are being continually watched by other students. So there is that uplifting of character all of the time. Ministerial students learn to set the example on the campus among young men and women. Then when they get out into life they know what example of living they should set. At Elon the ministerial students mingle with people their own age. They learn to know and understand them. They see the viewpoints of others. They learn to give and take. They learn to know the abilities and possibilities of young people. This will mean much to them when they get out into the ministry.

At Elon the ministerial students are able to meet and know their professors. They become personally acquainted with them. This means much to students especially to ministerial students. Many times they will have problems which they cannot solve. Taking these to the professors they will receive much light on them. By this there results that fellowship which strengthens anyone.

Music plays a large part in the life of a minister. At Elon, Professor Steere, who is head of the Music Department, especially invites the ministerial students into the choir. He realizes that many times the minister leaves college without much training in music. Soon he gets a church where he has to take charge of the music. As a result he fails. In the choir valuable training is given and if a ministerial student joins the choir and puts his time and effort on it, he will not need to be ashamed to take charge of the music of the church. Many ministerial students fail to take hold of this opportunity which comes to them at Elon.

The ministerial students at Elon have formed an organization known as "The Elon Ministerial Association." In this Association the ministerial students discuss their own problems. They study the Bible and foster prayer meetings. They discuss books which aid the minister in preparing sermons and many other things concerning the ministry. Often outside speakers are invited in to speak on things which go to build better ministerial students and better ministers. Sometimes some of the students go out into churches and hold services, thereby getting good experience and making them want to live better. The Ministerial Association will mean much to the ministerial student who really wants to get a clearer understanding of the problems which confront the minister.

At present there are 15 ministerial students at Elon. Out of this number there are 6 which belong to the Congregational-Christian denomination. The remaining are divided as follows:

Protestant Episcopal	2
Baptist	2
Methodist Protestant	1
Presbyterian	1

Elon invites ministerial students from any denomination. But surely those of the Congregational-Christian denomination will want to come to Elon and avail themselves of the great opportunities which Elon presents. The world today needs trained ministers. At no better place or college could one get such a wonderful college training for the ministry than at Elon.

BILLY ANDES.

HOW MONEY CAN HELP ELON COLLEGE TO SERVE.

President James Rowland Angell of Yale University in his annual report rendered recently, said: "Tuition charges, apart from endowment the only source of income, could not possibly alone support these institutions of learning, unless, on the one hand, educational standards were ruthlessly sacrificed and the methods of teaching were radically and disastrously modified (e. g., by discharging many of the teachers and employing a few lecturers to address huge classes) or, on the other hand, the fees were greatly increased, which at present would, as a financial device, defeat itself by greatly reducing attendance."

Dr. Angell has thus outlined the financial problem confronting the institutions of higher education throughout our nation. Money to supply the difference between the amount paid by the student and the cost involved in his attendance at a college must be secured from some source or it cannot long continue to serve. State colleges and universities are aided by grants of tax money; other schools receive aid from endowments, from individuals, or from churches, in some cases, from all three of these sources. Elon College, not being a state institution, has no claim upon tax money. It has an endowment of a half million dollars, but this endowment is at present practically unproductive. As a college of our Congregational-Christian Church, it does and must look to the churches of our fellowship for help in its work.

Like the church, this college was not founded to make money but to train in Christian character, each in its particular branch of service. Elon College is the Congregational-Christian Church working in the realm of higher education in our Southland. When we give money to the church for its current expenses, it is to enable the church to continue its ministry of service in the local community. When we give to the church for missions, it is to enable the church to continue its ministry of service to humanity in other places in the home and in foreign fields. When we give money to the church for our orphanage, it is to enable it to continue its blessed service to little children in need. So likewise, when we give money to the church for our college, it is to enable the church through the college, its agency in the field of higher education, to continue this very necessary service. Money thus given through the church to the college will help it to continue to serve. The college can continue to welcome to its atmosphere young people who will secure adequate preparation for life. Without aid from our churches, Elon College cannot continue to serve any more than any other college can continue to operate without money beyond that received from its students.

Training in Christian character in the field of higher education is given more adequately by the denominational college, and it therefore renders an indispensable service. Many of the graduates of Elon go into the ministry and other fields of Christian activity. Others enter the professions and become leaders in their community. Still others enter the ranks of business and set a high standard of man's relationship to man. Others become home makers, helping to set up and maintain Christian homes, thus doubtless rendering greater service than all others. Money given through the church to the college helps it to serve young people in their need for adequate life preparation, and these young people serve the day in which they live.

ELWOOD W. JONES.

WHY SHOULD WE SUPPORT ELON COLLEGE?

I have been asked to state my views upon the above subject. I do not know of any new reasons that I could mention why the churches and the members of the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches should support the college. The basic reasons have often been stated and any lack of such support can scarcely be based upon ignorance of our duty to give such support.

In the first place Elon College was founded upon a basis of a long-felt need. That immediate need was to provide a trained ministry and trained Christian leaders to serve our churches. This was not only needful but essential for the future growth of our churches. There was the felt need also to provide a school of higher learning where members of the Christian Church could send their children and feel that they were being trained by Christians according to the ideals of the Church. Christian teachers would teach them and Christian influences would surround them. Christian activities would be provided for them outside of the class room. It is only natural that in a day when parents exercised more supervision over their children than they do today, that such a school should be desired. It was out of such felt needs that Elon College was born.

As to the provision for a trained ministry, that need is just as great as it ever was, and indeed more so. Through the influence of the college and the leadership it has sent forth, many churches have been established and some strong churches have been developed. Without Elon where would these churches look for leadership? Oh, of course they can get them elsewhere, some may say. But who is so short-sighted as not to be able to see that when our churches of the South cease to train for their own ministry, a noble heritage will have been lost, and one to be sincerely regretted only when it is too late. An old adage runs: "Don't cut off your nose to spite your face." To withhold an adequate support from our college in the face of an urgent and worthy need is to lay the grounds for an unfavorable reaction against our church life in which we can have no pride.

I still think Elon to be the best place to send our sons and our daughters to college. But such a need for the college does not seem to function now as it once did. Parents do not send their children to college now as in the days of yore; rather they let children choose, and agree to pay the bills. This may be for the best in this new day; but it is very hard on the high sense of loyalty. Perhaps this is why Elon at the present time, with its more than 350 students, has more Methodist students than from our own church: 87 to 85; with 60 Baptists and 40 Presbyterians and so on. Can it be that other denominations see in our own Elon a greater and more worthy institution that we can see ourselves? Give to Elon the adequate and loyal support in good will, finances and our sons and daughters, and it will be as big as we want it to be; as famous as it can afford to be, and with a drawing power from afar as well as near.

Elon is a going concern and doing a splendid work, even if under most trying circumstances. It is an unthinkable loss to close it. The only sensible and Christian thing to do is to arise in our strength and unity and nourish our college back to health, success and to the full powers of in our brotherhood.

THE MULTIPLIED POWER OF UNITED PURPOSE.

One day the father of seven sons found them quarreling about a task that he had previously assigned to them instead of doing the work. In their presence, he took seven small sticks and bound them together into a bundle, tying them securely with a strong cord. Having completed the tying of the sticks, he passed the bundle to the elder son with the request that he break them in two. The elder failing in this project, each son was tried, but none succeeded in breaking the bundle. The father then took the bundle and untied it, passing a single stick to each son. Upon being asked to try to break their individual sticks, they did so, finding it to be an easy task. From this homely psychology, presented by their father, the value of united effort was brought forcefully into their minds.

Nearly fifty years ago some of our forward-looking laymen and ministers met in Boone Township and prayed there beneath the spreading boughs of a stately oak which is now a part of the campus of Elon College. These loyal men caught a vision there of a united purpose for the Kingdom of Christ, and thus founded Elon College.

As I write on this Christmas day, my thoughts turn to Bethlehem and to the scene in which the Magi presented their gifts of gold, myrrh and frankincense to the Christ-child. In the comparison of material values, perhaps the first dimes that were contributed by the founders of Elon are insignificant when placed beside the gifts of the wise men, but the contributors of those dimes had a task—that task was to plant a seed. That seed has sprung up and grown through all these years, and its tree has been bearing the fruits of Christian character and achievement, more enduring substances than bronze or marble.

We believe every member of the Christian Church is proud of Elon and her fair name, and that all of us appreciate the value of the work she has been doing, and continues to do, in training and preparing men and women for life's duties, some of them having attained high positions within the religious, educational, and other realms.

Elon is the child of the church. We all share in her glory. Today she is a child in distress—not our child by adoption, but of our own flesh and bone. She is calling us not for a selfish purpose, but to perpetuate the high ideals and glorious principles expressed through our leaders who gave her birth and entrusted her to our care.

United, our dimes will multiply into dollars, and in the process will be converted into character which in turn will live to bless generations yet unborn.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

Rev. F. C. Lester, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

WAITING TO LIVE.

While lying in bed recently with a case of flu, pneumonia, and an inflamed ear that had to be lanced, the above topic came to my mind. I was doing nothing, and had no desire to work. Breathing was about my only activity. It occurred to me that I was just waiting to live. Here's hoping that life will follow the waiting, and it is beginning to do so.

Many young people seem to be waiting for the time when they will begin living. Perhaps they are in school or they may be looking for a job, as several million are. Sometime in the future they expect to live. Let's hope they will.

But the truth is they are living now, and the way they are living now will have much to do with how they will live in the future. Those who are waiting to get married before they begin to live will probably find, as one lady told me recently she found, that there is no more thrill in cooking cabbage after marriage than there was before. It is simply too bad when people have become unconscious of the fountains of life that flow all about us and think that only in the future can we live. Every day is a new day, and every hour brings its opportunity. Happy are those who understand that life is for the present and we do not have to wait to enjoy it.

THE TENTH ANNUAL HOLIDAY CONFERENCE.

Great was the opportunity and full of joy were the hearts of the seventy young leaders of Congregational and Christian Churches who gathered at Defiance College, Defiance, Ohio, December 28th to 31st, 1934. These leaders were seeking "A Far Better Way" both for their own lives and for the world in which they live. The group from North Carolina and Virginia, which included Miss Priscilla Chase and Lillie Horne from N. C., and Lanson Granger, Aubrey Todd and Edna Fulcher from Eastern Virginia, shall long remember those "Upper Room" meditations in the early mornings and late evenings, the genuine Christian fellowship, the royal hospitality, the share in household duties, and the discussion groups when we faced such questions as, "What does it really mean for young people to be Christian in 1935?", "How can we help others to become Christians?", and "What should the 'Statement of Purpose' of the Pilgrim Fellowship include?".

The reports of the findings committees on the questions mentioned above follows:

How Can We Help Others to Become Christians?

Our responsibility to help others to become Christian was recognized. Dr. F. W. Raymond, of Defiance College introduced this question and four groups discussed the four main phases of the question.

The report was presented to the General Forum and commended and adopted as follows:

Through Personal Influence.

Everyone has some influence on someone else at some time whether he is conscious of it or not.

We feel that personal spiritual preparation should be made in order that the individual may be able to help others to become Christians; therefore, we suggest the following:

Daily Bible Reading, daily prayer (Personal prayer list), daily meditation, regular public worship.

We can influence directly our friends and associates by quiet talks, personal interviews and friendly sharing of our religious experiences.

We feel that tact and patience are essential in our approach to others.

Through the Local Church.

Local churches offer us many organizations and activities through which we may influence others. Therefore, we think that these organizations and activities should be made attractive, effective, and helpful to all.

This can be done through:

A. Group Meetings.

1. In the Sunday Church School, the class groups should be recognized as an opportunity to learn more about Christian living and to make and strengthen Christian decisions.

2. Consecration and Decision Services in the Young People's Society may be the climax of special study classes, series of talks or society programs.

3. Informal groups in which Christians gather for Bible study, prayer, personal counsel, and discussion are helpful.

4. Worship services should be thoughtfully planned to help young people to form and live up to ever higher ideals.

In both worship and study, Christianity should be presented as a great cause which young people may make their own.

B. Recreational and Social Life.

1. These provide opportunities to apply Christian principles to play life.

C. Wider Service.

1. Seek every opportunity for social service in our local communities.

2. Assume our responsibility in making the world Christian by participating in our church missionary program.

Through Youth Fellowship.

A. We Believe that Fellowship Programs Which Will Help Others to Become Christians Must Be Well Planned.—Therefore, we recommend:

1. That the program be prepared early.

2. That it be announced as far in advance of the meeting as possible as the early announcement of theme and program will help youth to come with anticipation.

B. Missionary Outlook.

1. Support Missionary projects which will extend the Christian influence of the church and the individuals to all the world.

2. Local groups should be so educated as to result in willing pledges to our mission goal.

C. Through the Inspiration of Leaders and Fellowship.

D. The Leaders Suggest Helps Such As:—Understanding ourselves"; "The Meaning of Jesus for My Life"; "What Does it Mean To Be A Christian?"

Through Summer Conferences.

A. Summer Conferences Should Include Activities Which Help People To Become Christian. We believe that some of the most effective of these have been: Morning Watch, Vespers, Chapel, Candle-light services and Communion.

B. We feel that the ideal teachers and leaders should have the following qualities:

A Christian Spirit, an understanding of human nature, a pleasing personality, a sense of humor, thorough preparation, willingness to conform to necessary rules, enter into all activities, tactful especially in handling discipline, friendly relationships with all students, cooperation with students after close of conference, sincerity, one who inspires confidence of students and who is approachable.

C. We feel that through the fellowship and inspiration of leaders the Summer Conferences should create a growing desire and ability on the part of every student and leader to help others to become Christians. E. F.

WHAT IS THE PROGRAM OF OUR CHURCH AND DENOMINATION?

Acts 6:1-7.

Christian Endeavor Topic for Jan. 27, 1935.

Preparation for this meeting:

"The Handbook of the Congregational and Christian Churches" (5c per single copy, from Board of Christian Education, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va), has much resource material to help the leader of this meeting. An envelope of leaflets will be sent on request by the Young People's Departmnt, C. P. A. Bldg., Dayton, Ohio, if you will send ten cents to cover postage, or a request sent to your state office asking for a free leaflet material which will help you plan a program with the topic "What is the program of our church and denomination?" will bring you a wealth of material. Advance and The Missionary Herald which your minister or some church member undoubtedly has will give suggestive information to use in this meeting.

Something Different:

"Meetings which merely bring information "clipping style" or in talks may become dull. How would it be to stage a "Conversation" right up in front of folks by having five or six of your best young people talk over things right in front of the rest of you? This is called a "panel discussion." There should be a chairman to keep the conversation moving, and others to enter in with their contributions in an interesting way. Each member of the "pael" may be given some special phase of the church program upon which he is to read up in advance. All may ask questions, or contribute ideas. After about half an hour, the chairman may ask the entire society to join in the discussion with any questions, suggestions or ideas which they have."

Helps for Discussion: by Harry Thomas Stock, D. D.

Find out the following facts about the program of your church and denomination:

1. What is the average pastor's day like? How does he spend his time? What kinds of activities engage his interest? What do you learn about the program of your church from this?

2. Where does your church's money go? Have you any clear idea what service it renders? If it all "stays in your community" is the church doing all that can be expected of it? Is it part of the obligation of your church to share in the world-wide program of your denomination? (What does your denomination do for you? Does your local church depend upon the national offices of the denomination for any kind of assistance in its program?)

3. What is your denomination doing for young people? Is it spending a reasonable amount of time and money in helping the program of youth? Is it getting "value received" from its investment in young people's work? (For example, most denominations spend a great deal of time and money in maintaining summer conferences, in providing program suggestions, and in holding institutes, rallies, etc. How well do young people respond?)

Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

PETER'S LESSON IN HUMBLE SERVICE.

Lesson III—January 20, 1935.

Golden Text: "All of you gird yourselves with humility, to serve one another."—I Peter 5:5.

Lesson: John 13:1-17; I Peter 5:5.

"Yea, all of you, gird yourselves with humility, to serve one another"—thus writes Peter to the Christians scattered here and there throughout the Roman Empire. And as he wrote the words there must have come before his mind a strange picture that more than once had haunted his memory. He must have seen a group of thirteen men gathered in an upper room to celebrate the sacred sacrament of the Jewish Passover. There was something unusually solemn about this particular occasion, for their leader had told them that it was the last time He would eat it with them in the flesh. But in spite of that fact, there had been a dissention among them as to who was the greatest. And they had come into the upper room unprepared for the solemn sacrament. It was customary for the host either to provide someone to wash the feet of his guests after they had removed their sandals, or to do it himself. In this instance none of the Twelve was willing to perform this humble act of courtesy. Each felt that the other should do that. Each felt that it was above his dignity.

Thus it was that their leader, the Master Himself, quietly got up from supper, took a towel, girded Himself, and in a quiet and simple and unostentatious way proceeded to wash the feet of His disciples. He who was Lord and Master was doing the work of a servant. And He was doing it in a way that made it all the more effective.

He went from one to another, washing their feet, and drying them with the towel with which He was girded. There must have been a deep silence in the room, and a deep sense of shame in their hearts. But nobody said anything. It seemed as if there was nothing that anybody could say. But when at last Jesus came to Simon Peter, Peter could keep silent no longer. He saw the incongruity of the situation, and his soul rebelled at the very thought of the thing. "Lord dost Thou wash my feet"—do you mean to say that you are going to wash my feet? You have already washed some of the disciples' feet, and the others may allow you to wash their feet, but you shall never wash my feet. The idea of such a thing! It is unthinkable! I have done some mean and low-down things in my life, but I have some sense of decency and propriety, and I am not going to allow you, my Master and my Teacher, to wash my feet. No sir, Thou shalt never wash my feet."

But the quiet man, on his knees before Simon was quite insistent. He told him that there was a deeper significance to the act than appeared on the surface. He told him that if Peter wanted to have any part with Him, he must submit, even if he did not understand, and even if his protest was made in the right spirit. Overcome by a sense of shame and of need, Peter then told the Master to wash not only his feet, but his hands and his head—to cleanse him thoroughly with water as a symbol of that cleansing of soul of which he now felt such a desperate need. And so the task was completed. One by one Jesus had washed the feet of His disciples, even the feet of Judas, whom He knew would betray Him. And then He sat down and talked quietly with them about the significance of what He had done.

He told them that humility was a mark of true greatness. To be willing to lay aside one's dignity, to be willing to forego personal preferment, to be willing to do even the humblest tasks of life in a glad spirit—that is true greatness. And that is also the secret of happiness—"If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." Mind you, Jesus was not talking about cringing, about loss of self-respect, about self-pity, about meanness of spirit, about self-abasement, when He talked about humility. Jesus was never more sure of Himself than when He washed the disciples' feet. He knew that He had come from God and that He was going to God. He knew that the Father had given all things unto His hands. And it was when He knew this, and because He knew this, that He laid aside personal pride, and false dignity, and performed His humble service. This is the spirit which they are to express—"for I have given you an example."

This was the picture, then, that came to Peter's mind as he sat writing his letter to his Christian friends. He wanted to furnish them unto every good work. He writes, therefore, "Yea, all of you gird yourselves with humility, to serve one another." "Seek not great things for yourselves, be not proud, vaunt not your superiority over others, demand not that ye be served by others, but in lowliness of mind, in sincere but regnant humility, have the mind in you which was in Christ Jesus our Lord, and rejoice whenever and wherever you have an opportunity to lay aside your dignity, or a right to preferment, to serve others."

What a difference it would make if we heeded Peter's advice, and following the Master's example! All too many of us think of our rights instead of thinking of our obligations. Too many of us think of being served instead of serving. Too many of us think of what we can get instead of what we can give. Too many of us want to be masters instead of ministers. And to all of us there comes the words of Jesus—"he that would be greatest must be the minister or servant of all; he that would be first must be willing to be last." And to all such God giveth grace.

4. Is your church taking any stand on social issues, such as: the movies, the use of liquor, opposition to war and the preparation for war? Is that part of the responsibility of your church, or should the church "keep its hands off of such matters?"

5. Is it part of the program of your church to cooperate with other churches. Are there more ways in which the churches of your neighborhood can work together for important causes?

6. If you could determine the six or eight main tasks of your church and denomination for a year, what are the items you would list as being of most importance?

Hypocrisy.

"For they are not all Israel which are Israels "Neither because they are the seed of Abraham, are they all children."—Rom. 9:6,7.

It has been said that most every one has a little of hypocrisy in him. Shakespeare said: "Few men dare show their thoughts of worst of best." And it is believed that it is conceded that most every one has something that he does not wish to be made known. A boy far from home perhaps has done something that he would not like his mother to know. That the heart does have its secrets to hide is made all the more real in the knowledge of the fact that the wink of an eye may evince a terrible deception.

But such deception is not necessarily hypocrisy. Hypocrisy is pretending to be something, (usually something good) but in reality the pretentions are false. The heart is the opposite. This is the sort that is represented in Shakespeare's Macbeth when he says, "Look like time, smile with welcome eyes, look like an innocent flower, but be a serpent under it."

This is the kind of hypocrisy that the most of us are familiar with and which we hate. This is the kind of hypocrisy that Christ saw, and it is a consolation to us that we see it as He saw it. "Whited sepulchres," men praying in the temple and in practice devouring widows' houses by extortion; Scribes teaching the law but having in their hearts nothing of what they teach. "Serpents, generations of vipers," said the Lord, "How can ye escape the damnation of hell?"

It is quite a complacent feeling to feel that we see things as Christ saw them. But do we see all the way with Christ? When they see hypocrisy in the church, many people withhold themselves from the church and say that they will have nothing to do with it. Jesus saw further than this. He saw through to each individual, and said that every man must bear his own burden, that every man is responsible for himself, and not another, and before one can pick the splinters out of other folk's eyes he must pull the beam out of his own eye. He said that we are to answer for our own selves, that our work is to be brought unto the judgment as our own record, and every one shall be judged accordingly. The crown of life is won only through faithfulness.

Prayer—Our Father we pray Thee to bless us this day with purity of heart as it is in Jesus Christ.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

Reverence.

"The fear of the Lord, that is wisdom: and to depart from evil is understanding."—Job. 28:28.

The word "fear" as used in the Bible means "reverence." So to put this scripture in that sense would make it read, "The reverence of the Lord."

Reverence is taken to be more inclusive than that profound respect and veneration one has for things sublime and sacred. It includes one's devotion to things.

Darwin was distinguished for his reverence and devotion to the worm, and his understanding of the worm was in proportion to that reverence.

A gardener has no reverence for a worm, therefore he can tell us nothing about the ministries of the worm. His business is flowers and his understanding of flowers is in proportion to his reverence for them.

Without a deep interest in the thing we would know about, we can know but little about it. And it would seem that this scripture teaching that "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom," is intended to include the knowledge of the universe. The universe of which we are a part is a thought of the Divine mind; it is a work of the Divine hand; and it is a scene of Divine operations. If reverence is the first requisite to obtaining knowledge, it follows that we cannot get very much knowledge without reverence for Him who has created it all. We would as well try to understand a painting without relation to the artist. The fact is that a man of knowledge and understanding of things of this world who does not take God in the picture is lacking something very vital. So often his wisdom and understanding is turned to folly. Without God there is no knowledge. Wisdom cannot even be justified as wisdom without Him.

Prayer—Our Father, whatever life may mean to us, we pray for ourselves that Thou wilt have mercy on us unworthy creatures and help us up. May we begin each day with those devotions that take us out of ourselves and plant our hearts with Thee. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

" 'Bout Face."

"Put off thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground."—Exodus 3:5.

A traveler was visiting a cathedral. He was being shown around. He did not remove his hat, and presently said, "I hope you don't mind my leaving my hat on." "O, no," was the reply, "I do not mind at all. This is not my house."

The apparent irreverance in churches today is appalling, especially in Protestant churches: talking, whispering, contemplating dress, styles and every other sort of thing. But of the most flagrant forms of irreverence is that of sitting bolt upright during prayers. This has become the custom everywhere. Whatever may be said of reverence being a condition of heart that has no relation to the posture of the body, it still remains the fact that without reverence there can be no true worship, and where one worships he is apt to show it by certain physical manifestations. In church he removes his hat. In song he feels a lip service in which the heart goes out to God. In prayer he must bow. In the sermon he thinks and is uplifted. And, in all, he feels Christ, sees Christ, and finds God.

There must be much lacking in profound reality of these things, if we judge from outward appearances. God only knows how much reverence the unbowing people carry in their hearts, and to be sure God alone is to be judge, but how can one be reverent and that reverence find no outward expression is a marvel to many of us.

Prayer—Our Father in heaven, we are sinners. Forgive us and make us saints. Humble our hearts in Thy presence forevermore.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

Is Reverence Natural?

"Having your behaviour seemly among the Gentiles, that . . . they may by your good works, which they behold, glorify God in the day of visitation."—I Peter 2:12.

Our text today is chosen as one of those having that urgency of heaven to keep good company, setting forth the results of keeping good company. This is not something extraneous to human tendencies. In fact, when we come to think of it, it is something that is perfectly natural, for exactly in the degree that one finds something greater than himself to look up to, to that degree he ennobles his own life and makes himself happier.

For instance, in the presence of noble and virtuous women, a young man is a finer and nobler creature. Many a father has been known to say, "I am always satisfied so long as I know that my boys are keeping the company of good girls." That it what we mean.

True joy and happiness depends upon an influence of something better upon which we can bestow our affections.

Prayer—Our Father, in Thee is joy forever. Grant unto us the vision of ideals that lead us on in spite of our failures and dark days. This we ask for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

A Knowing Christian.

"If we love one another, God dwelleth in us, and His love is perfected in us."—I Jno. 4:12.

This scripture is a plain unadulterated fact. It is a fact because love is a central emotion of God; because it is the motive of God in the creation of all things; because it wipes away tears and makes happy; because it is the hope of the future; because it is a token of a higher nature and a surety of immortality. Where there is love, there is a soul that gives it; and that a soul can give love means that the soul is stronger than love itself. . . Beautiful is the one that loves.

Prayer—Our Father, we pray Thee to be with us this day and each day. Endow our souls with Christ, with His love, with Thy love, and with all of it that we can embrace, and thus perfect us and the life we live both here and hereafter. This we ask for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

The Clothes of a Christian.

"For as many of you as were baptized into Christ did put on Christ."—Gal. 3:23129.

There is much talk about clothes, their wearing out, their color and style, their varying material, their cost; but to the Christian, though, it is perforce interesting, it is of pitifully secondary interest. For his clothes, his essential garments, are Christ.

Let us say to ourselves every morning, as we array ourselves, "I will put on Christ." I will put on His meekness, His humility. I will put on His obedience, firm to the end. I will put on His love for all men. I will put on His peace, and I will assume His power.

Prayer—Then indeed, O our Saviour, can we go forth clad in garments of beauty and robes of praise.—Amen.

Amos R. Wells.

SUNDAY.

If for Men, Not for God.

"Take heed that ye do not your righteousness before men, to be seen of them: else ye have no reward with your father who is in heaven."—Mat. 6:1-6.

We expect both God's approval and man's, and so in the end we get neither. Our aims are outwardly holy and inwardly selfish, and so even ourselves are frustrated.

There is no reward except for thoughts, words and deeds directed Godward and only Godward. A ray of light can not go in two directions at once, and neither can the affection of our soul go in two directions at once.

Prayer—All rewards are in Thy hands, O God; and Thou wilt not give them to those who seek them, but only to those who, with all their hearts, seek Thee.—Amen.

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

WHAT A CHRISTIAN SHOULD BELIEVE ABOUT SALVATION.

By REV. W. T. MEACHAM.

"Thou shalt call His name Jesus, for He shall save his people from their sins." (Matt. 1:21.) So with the very commencement of his birth came a message of Salvation, for Salvation is being saved from sin. Salvation means deliverance. "He gave Himself for our sins, that He might deliver us from this present evil world." (Gal. 1:4.) "He was manifested to take away our sins." (I John 3:5.) Saved from sin, delivered, sin taken away, forgiven, pardoned, justified, born again, regenerated, converted. This is all included in Salvation.

"Behold, now is the acecpted time: Behold, now is the day of Salvation." (II Cor. 6:2.) Salvation is a present and a present reality. Its very reality is most convincingly attested by the fact of its being a present experience. "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto Salvation to every one that believeth." (Rom. 1:16.) Paul knew, for it was true in his own case. The moment he had believed he was saved he knew because of the Phillipian jailer's experience. He had told him, "Believe on the Lord, Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." Immediately he saw him rejoicing in a new-found peace and pardon. Yes, one can receive here and now the end of one's faith, even "the Salvation of your souls." (I Pet. 1:9.), and testify with Paul according to his mercy he saved us, "by the washing on regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost" (Titus 3:5), and with John, "Unto Him that loved us and washed us from our sins in His own blood." (Rev. 1:5.)

A Christian not only should but does believe in the reality of a present experienc of justification here and now.

Different points of the meaning of Salvation are shown in the terms which are used in Scripture relation to it. These different terms do not mean that many different works of grace in the heart. They simply bring out different aspects of the one work of grace which are all included in Salvation. However, more than one work is included in Salvation in its broadest meaning, which takes in Sanctification. This second work will be treated in a separate chapter. In the broadest sense it also includes future Salvation from the eternal consequences of sin, and punishment in hell-fire. But in the present chapter it is used to refer to this initial work of grace.

Salvation includes justification. To justify means to be clear from guilt to make just. It makes the guilty not guilty. Since all have sinned and come short of the glory of God, all need to be justified. We cannot be justified on the grounds of our innocence. How then can God be just and at the same time be the Justifier of those who are ungodly. It is through the sacrifice and offering of Christ. "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus." (Rom. 8:11.) That is the secret: in Christ Jesus. But justification does more than pardon, remit guilt—it makes the man just and right. He stands in the sight of God as though he had never committed a sin or sins. Small wonder Paul said, "Being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." (Rom. 5:1.)

Salvation includes conversion. Bible conversion means more than reformation or just an amendment of life. It simply means a real change of heart. To our younger set this may seem old fashioned, but it adequately expresses what scriptural conversion is. It is a real change of heart, which naturally brings a consequent change of life. Certainly David knew what it meant when he prayed, "Create in me a clean heart, O God."

A change is absolutely necessary, for "Except ye be converted and become as a little child, ye shall not enter into the Kingdom of Heaven." (Matt. 18:3.) This change is also represented as a new birth, being born again. The same is expressed in terms of regeneration. A sinful man is dead in sins and must be made alive. This is what takes place when one is born again, or regenerated. He is made alive in the Spirit. Jesus came for this sole purpose—"That they may have life and have it more abundantly." (John 10:10.) "To as many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on His name: which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." (John 1:11-13.) There is no spiritual life until one is born of God.

Jesus said to Nicodemus, "That which is born of the flesh is as flesh, and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit. Marvel not that I said unto thee ye must be born again." (John 3:6, 7.) Ye must be born again; there is no other way, no substitute. Man must be made a new creature, "Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature, or a new creation: old things are passed away, behold, all things are become new." (II Cor. 5: 17.) It is a real and complete change and is put over by the power of God.

Can we know whether we are saved or not? Positively, we can. Jesus came to impart knowledge of Salvation unto His people by the remission of their sins. (Luke 1:17.) We know when the burden is lifted, when guilt and condemnation are gone, when the burden rolls away. Not only for what has been taken away, but for what comes in. Would anyone say when Jesus comes into the heart we would not know it? I think His presence amounts to more than that.

We love God. We love the brethren and we know that we have passed from death unto life because we love the brethren." (I John 5:2.) We even love our enemies and pray for them. But the greatest of all, "He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself. (I Jno. 5:10.) The testimony comes by the Spirit itself bearing witness with our Spirit, that we are the children of God. (Rom. 8:16.)

"How shall we escape if we neglect so great Salvation?" (Heb. 2:3.)

Roanoke, Ala.

The nation is rich in material things, rich in a heritage of ideas and ideals. During the last decade we almost lost sight of the greater and finer things and chased the dollar mark as if it were the god of the morning and the goddess of the evening. Whatever benefits the depression will bring us, one of these benefits is reflection that America is still a land of ideals and ideas and thought, and without these all the money that our mints can produce cannot keep and sustain us as a self-respecting people.

We can no more retain old methods, policies, and fallacies than we can change human nature. We tried this after the world war. That international upheaval pushed us years ahead into a completely changed social and economic order. We started out dealing with a new world on an old basis. In thought we returned to normalcy; in practice we failed.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

This letter and financial report starts off our new year, 1935. When we were a little boy in school, our teacher taught us to never give up and if we did not first succeed try again and keep on trying again and keep on trying until we did succeed! We lacked just a few thousand dollars of reaching our goal of twenty thousand dollars for the year 1934. We will not give up and we are going to set our goal at twenty thousand dollars for the year 1935 and we must reach it this year. The way to reach it is to start now in your Sunday School monthly offerings and try and get your people to increase their offerings monthly and help us built up to it.

No one except the man at the head of an institution of this kind knows the mental strain one is going through every day nor the anxious moments we experience. We have no endowment from which we can draw when in need. We are entirely dependent on you for our support and friends outside our denomination who are interested in all fatherless children. The orphanage has no part in the conference apportionments at all and receives nothing from that source.

We are entirely dependent on Sunday School monthly offerings, special Thanksgiving offerings and personal donations for our support. Be a loyal friend to us this year and help us reach our goal of twenty thousand dollars.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

AN APPRECIATION.

When I approached my car to leave Mt. Bethel the first Sunday in January, I found my "flivver" pretty well loaded with packages of various kinds.

When I arrived at my home and unloaded, we found such things as flour, potatoes, sausage, coffee, sugar, canned fruits, pickles, preserves, butter, milk, apples, candy, etc., and in case there should be anything lacking there was handed to us some money on the side, with which to purchase it. Many thanks for these kind and timely remembrances and we crave for you each the rich blessing of a kind Heavenly Father through the new year.

THE COLLEGE AND THE CHURCHES.

grow like the green bay tree and your faith like the mustard seed.

Again you may give zest to your loyalty by keeping abreast of the college needs. It needs students. Send it your children. There may be other colleges. There are others. But none like yours. When David asked for a sword at one time, they gave him the only one they had; it was a sword of Goliath. David exclaimed: "Give it me, there is none like it." So your best college is your college. There is none like it.

In studying your college, you may find some imperfect or rough edges. Shall you forsake your college for that? You may have grown luke warm since your first love awakened a holy response in your nature. But don't you wish the fire would burn once more? It may be cold for the child of your earlier years. Coolness will not light the fire. It takes the eternal fires of the love of God in human hearts and minds to build warmth where cold winds have blown the fire out. In adversity, friends, real friends, do not desert. My last suggestion on this topic is "Love your college." It can be done. Study to know its history, its place, its condition, its hopes, its foregleams of victory and its dire needs. And remember—love does not have to be stirred by an outside stick in another's hand. It leaps to the rescue at the cry of danger. It gives itself to be burned in order to save.

My closing word for the Congregational churches and the college is only this: We must increasingly find our ministers for our churches chom the sons of men whose homes are in the southeast. They will be furnished very largely from the homes of our Christian churches. Increasingly I have requests for ministers who were from the sons of men whose homes are in the these things the more. And if there be any virtue in the words here written, let us give ourselves to this ministry of the college more diligently to the end that we may hold fast that we have,—let no man take away our crown.

of the morals in our country. The moral standard of almost every community is the lowest in its history. The moral standard must be set by the Church. The Church is the religious "pulse" of the community. "Feel" the pulse and you can tell what is the condition of the moral and spiritual standard of the community.

There is a prediction being made that, with the present tendency, there will be no open churches in our country within fifteen years from today! What do you say? "We need a revival!" To your knees O Church of the Living God!

Sister V. E. Kitchen has donated an Organ to the Old State Line Church, and may God bless Sister Kitchen and add to her joys of His presence "a hundred-fold" the value of the instrument. And may He sanctify it to His glory in the church to which it goes.

If the church can "Double Its Working Force" the program will be easier.

God bless the CHRISTIAN SUN—its Editors and subscribers and may this be a happy new year to all. Pray for us.

MARRIAGES

WOODSON—TRUITT.

In a quiet wedding at the First Christian Church on Christmas morning, at six o'clock, Miss Gladys Woodson was wed to Mr. Herman Truitt, Rev. G. O. Lankford, former pastor, assisted by Dr. J. H. Lightbourne, present pastor, officiating. The ring ceremony was used. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Sophia Woodson of the Christian Church of Burlington and is assistant organist in the church, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Egbert Truitt of Glen Raven and is superintendent of the Sunday School of the same church. This couple is one of the most popular in the community and very widely known and appreciated in many sections of the state. Immediately after the ecremony, they left by motor for an extended wedding tour through several of the Southern states, Florida in particular. Upon their return they will make their home at Glen Raven, where the groom is owner and manager of the Truitt Grocery Store.

G. O. LANKFORD.

SASNETT—RICHARDSON.

Miss Evelyn Byrd Richardson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Richardson, of Waverly, and Mr. Henry Harris Sasnett of Jacksonville, Fla., were married on December 31st, at the home of the bride's parents.

The bride was gowned in blue velvet and wore a shoulder bouquet of Talisman roses.

Immediately after the service, a small reception was held following which Mr. and Mrs. Sasnett left for Daytona Beach, Fla.

Mr. and Mrs. Sasnett are graduates of Elon College and he is principal of the Blountstown High School.

After January 10th, the couple will be at home in Blountstown, Fla.

The ceremony was performed by the writer. T. FRED WRIGHT.

STORY.

Mr. James Martin Story, born in Guilford County, N. C., August 1, 1839, died at his home in Alamance County, January 3, 1935, aged 95 years 5 months and two days. He was the youngest son of the late James and Catherine Story.

On September 26, 1866, he was united in marriage to Sara Elizabeth Jane Ross, who preceded him to the grave more than fifty years; and to the union was born five children, three of whom survive, Mrs. Josephine Foster, Mrs. Bobbitt Simpson, and Mrs. J. B. Cantrell, eight grandchildren and seventeen great grandchildren.

He was married a second time to Miss Fanny B. Hankins, December 24, 1902, and he had one half-brother, Charlie, both of whom survive.

For four years he saw service for his country during the Civil War.

In 1860, Mr. Story professed faith in Jesus Christ at Bethel M. E. Church South. He later moved his membership to Bethlehem Christian Church, where he remained faithful until he was called home.

Burial services were conducted from Bethlehem Christian Church Saturday afternoon, January 5, 1935, by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. F. Apple. Interment was in Bethlehem Cemetery. May God bless the family.

G. C. CRUTCHFIELD.

MAY.

Whereas Phillip B. May has been a consistent member of First Christian Church of Norfolk, Virginia, since April 20, 1921, and

Whereas the Divine Master called him from labor to reward on November 18, 1934, therefore be it resolved:

First. That First Christian Church record its appreciation for the kind and consistent life which brother May gave to the church during these years; and

Second. That we humbly submit to the will of God that took him so suddenly and unexpectedly from us, and renew our own allegiance to Him who will soon call us to another world; and

Third. That we assure the widow and son of the Christian sympathy of the Church which prays for the presence of the Comforter; and Fourth. That a copy of these resolutions be entered in the records of the church, a copy be sent to members of the family, and a copy be sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

Vaccine for Paralysis to be Offered Public.—

In an Associated Press news item of January 22nd, we find the following information, which we believe to be of public interest: "Vaccination against infantile paralysis will be offered to the public this week by Dr. John A. Kolmer, paralysis vaccine discoverer. In what he believes is the world's first clinic of its kind, the physician-scientist will put his discovery into practical use for public benefit beginning Saturday."

Destroying a Cause of War.—

Destroy this munitions industry and you immediately destroy 90 per cent of the causes of war. The fault today is that when we speak of national defense, we really speak of offensive war. Munitions makers have found their best partner in Uncle Sam. Our policy is all wrong, for we say our munitions makers should be allowed to sell to foreign markets. A new mind and right-about-face policy is needed, and it is my hope that President Roosevelt will lead us away from the program of building the largest navy.—Senator Nye.

Moderator Changes Pastorate.—

Dr. Jay T. Stocking, Moderator of the General Council, tendered his resignation as minister of Pilgrim Church, St. Louis, Mo., on Sunday, January 13th, and has since accepted a call to the pastorate of the First Church in Newton, Mass. It is understood that Dr. Stocking will begin his work in Newton not later than May 1st. Dr. Stocking was formerly minister of the Central Church in Newtonville, but in resuming residence and ministerial work in the city of Newton, he comes to a field that can hardly be said to overlap his former parish. Newton is a strong Congregational city, but of its eight churches of our order each has its distinctive area and field of work. The church to which Dr. Stocking goes is the mother church, founded in 1644.—Advance.

Filling the "Empties."—

Since the repeal of prohibition, many unlooked-for problems have arisen and have necessitated a veritable avalanche of legislation that the "repealists" had not taken into consideration. The most recent problem is that of "empties," commonly known among the imbibing element as "dead soldiers." Business Week of January 12th, informs us that "used domestic liquor bottles are now outlawed as public enemies in the stimulants industry. Violators are subject to a maximum of a $1,000 fine and 2 years in the calaboose. . . . When its full effects are felt, this bottle control is expected to be the hardest blow yet struck at the illicit traffic. There has been an enormous underground business in the collection of empties which were refilled, pasted with phony labels, reintroduced into the trade—often through legitimate outlets. Resale, purchase, or use (even by the original filler) is now prohibited. . . " Is it not the "fulls" and not the "empties" that are skyrocketing the number of arrests for drunken driving and other evils which arise from the use of the "much legislated" repeal product?

Race Relations Sunday.—

Race Relations Sunday falls on February 10th. The fashion has grown among our churches to observe the Sunday nearest to the birthday of Abraham Lincoln as a time for stressing the solemn necessity for rooting out the stubborn old prejudices which stick to our racial atitudes, and to bid ourselves move forward to that happier time when every man shall be gauged at his own worth, and not by the color of his skin. The General Council at Oberlin committed to the Council for Social Action the leadership in this delicate and sobering social ministry of the churches. The Council for Social Action, working in close cooperation with the American Missionary Association and the Federal Council of Churches, urges the churches to use February 10th as an occasion for stressing again and with new force the obligations of Christian brotherhood in terms of race relations. Churches may obtain suggestions for observing Race Relations Sunday by writing the Council for Social Action, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York City.—Advance.

Copan to Be Restored.—

The ancient Mayan city of Copan, in Western Honduras near the Guatamela border, will be restored to its former splendor, as far as architecture goes, in the near future. Work will begin at once, it was announced last week by Julius G. Lay, retiring United States Minister to Honduras. The restoration will be made by the Carnegie Institute of Washington, cooperating with the Government of Honduras. Copan was one of the laregst and most ancient cities of the Mayas, whose civilization was among the finest developed on the American Continent before the coming of Columbus. It was a great center of American culture in the early years of the Christian era in the Old World. In it was found the famous astronomical stone which revealed that the Mayas had as great a knowledge of astronomy as any people in existence at that time. The city was abandoned to the jungle about 1,000 years ago, and now lies well off the beaten track. Until about a year ago to reach it required a journey of two weeks by mule over the mountains. Now it is two hours by plane from Tegucigalpa.

"Take Murder Out of the Nursery."—

A nation-wide drive is under way to "take murder out of the nursery." It is sponsored by the Parent-Teacher Association, which is centering its attack on toy guns, holding that they lead not only to serious accidents but to actual crime. Thus, while the Federal, State, city and county agencies are concentrating movements to rid the country of its "public enemies," the parents and teachers are trying to do their bit by putting a stop to such childhood games as "cops and robbers," and the like. Pledges from school children to get rid of their toy weapons once and for all are being asked. An honor roll for all schools which obtain pledges from 75 per cent of their pupils and parents to put a stop to toy gun play has been started. "We must do away with the pernicious game of 'cops and robbers,'" said Mrs. W. F. Krahl of Chicago, humane education chairman of the parent-teacher organization of Illinois. "In one institution for the blind there are more than 300 children who must go through life sightless because their eyes were shot out by 'play guns.'" Sponsors of the campaign say the play weapons are making mock gangsters out of the nation's children.—Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

A Plea to the Supreme Court.—

It is good news that the Supreme Court decision in the University of California case is going to be further challenged. John Beardsley, Los Angeles attorney, representing the students who were suspended for conscientious objection to military training, has filed a petition for a rehearing, on the ground that the Court has misunderstood his plea, based on the Fourteenth Amendment, and has not decided the fundamental matter of constitutional right. Mr. Beardsley points out that his plea is based not upon religious rights or privileges, but upon the constitutional provision that protects citizens against compulsory military service in times of peace—an issue very different from that decided in the Mackintosh case. His point is made clear in this salient paragraph of the petition: "Under Federal law, enlistment in the military academy at West Point is voluntary, as are all enlistments in the Federal military establishment in time of peace. Suppose the regents of the University of New York were to impose a requirement that students take a summer course in the near-by military academy. Would any court sustain such action as 'not inconsistent with any exertion of the authority of the national government?' Would any court say that the state government may enforce military training in the United States military academy? The R. O. T. C. is as completely within the control of Congress and the War Department as is the West Point Academy. . . We maintain that compelling young men to surrender their immunity from compulsory service in time of peace in a branch of the Federal military establishment does transgress a right safeguarded to the citizen by the Federal Constitution."Advance.

NOTES-PERSONALS

News from the Churches.

Rev. B. J. Earp, pastor of Palm Street Church (Greensboro) and of Hines Chapel, reports satisfactory progress in his field.

The ministers of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference met at the College in their monthly meeting, Monday, January 14th. Drs. Rowland and Atkinson were absent on account of illness. Miss Priscilla Chase, who usually meets with the group, was in Ohio.

The many friends of Mrs. Jay, wife of Dr. William Jay, pastor of the Christian Church, Holland, Va., will be glad to know that she is improving satisfactorily. Mrs. Jay underwent a major operation recently at Lakeview Hospital, Suffolk, Va.

Mr. M. L. Patrick, of High Point, president of Elon Alumni Association, is greatly interested in organizing Alumni units throughout the States of Virginia and Carolina. Any one interested in organizing a new unit will please communicate with Mr. Patrick at High Point.

During the past week, the managing editor has been away from The Sun office because of sickness, except for half a day. And to complicate matters the other four members of his family have also been in bed. One member of the office force was ill last week and two have been unwell this week, but have remained on duty part time.

The pastors of the churches in North Carolina and Virginia received this week programs and suggestions to be used in observance of Elon College day. It is hoped that all Sunday Schools and churches will use the material freely. Sun., Jan. 27th, has been suggested as the day for the programs in Sunday Schools and churches.

Officials and representatives of the Congregational and Christian Churches will be in mid-year session at the First Congregational Church, Evanston, Ill., beginning Saturday, January 19th, and continuing through to Friday, January 25th. Reports from superintendents and officials of all departments of the church will be received and plans will be made for the coming year.

Rev. J. L. Neese, pastor of our Reidsville church reports remarkable increase in both church and mid-week attendance. The church is increasing in membership rapidly under Brother Neese's guidance. He is earnest, energetic and consecrated. We trust that the Lord may continue to bless pastor and people as they labor together.

We have a few interesting news items from Quarterly Reports. For instance: "Rev. H. B. Mowbray, pastor of the Demorest, Ga., church, reports concerning a school of missions held in the church—a suggestion worth passing on to other churches. Using the current Mission Study Books on Japan a concrete and thorough School of Missions was held during October. The teachers were Chaplain Walker, Dean G. C. Bellingrath, Prof. Mabel Percy and Miss Dorothea Percy—all of Piedmont College. Mrs. H. B. Mowbray was superintendent. In addition to the study there was a Japanese drama, and practical demonstration of the art of tea drinking and the art of decoration with reference to flowers."

Rev. Arnold Slater, pastor at Albemarle reports as follows: "Having been here just long enough to give my first quarterly report my observations and impressions may be a little superficial, but at least Mrs. Slater and I are learning to like Albemarle and thereby enjoy working with our people. Our Christmas was made happier by the receipt of the Parsonage Box. The Andover Church sent some very beautiful and useful gifts. Whoever is responsible for the parsonage box idea has our well-wishes. We also received some things from our Stamford Church, Conn., for which we are grateful. And to complete everything the Church School presented me with a seven-jewel wrist watch as a surprise gift. The year of 1935 is starting in a promising way —may the results justify our optimism."

Rev. Allen T. Jones, pastor of the Friendship Parish in Georgia summarizes the greater achievements in that interesting field: "At the Association the various churches gave their annual reports, which make a good subject for the closing paragraph of this December report. All of the churches of Friendship Parish have improved their physical equipment. Williams Chapel and Antioch finished paying for pianos (it is understood that these pianos are new in the sense of being new for us). Union Hill painted the church and Friendship put new pillars of brick and foundation sills under the church. Antioch has the cypress blocks cut and the money raised for a new shingle roof, and all the churches have paid in full their apportionment and per capita tax. Three have all but paid in full their share of the pastor's salary. Thirty-two folks joined the churches. The summer camp was the best ever. And in general the spirit of the church is worthy of our fine parish name, 'Friendship Parish'."

Rev. Wm. M. T. Scott, who needs no identification as the pastor of the Winston-Salem Church, writes interestingly concerning the fellowship classes: "Perhaps the most outstanding organizational activity of the Quarter was the work of The Fellowship Class, an adult class composed of both men and women. The teacher is a capable young attorney, who after teaching the class for a number of Sundays presented himself for membership in the Church. He announced publicly on one Sunday, 'I have been looking for such a Church as this all my life. I didn't know that such a Church existed, nor that its name was Congregational-Christian, but I am happy that I have found it. I want to cast my lot here. I hereby make application for church membership. I have great confidence in the message and program of this Church. It is what the South needs. There is a great future here for such a church.' Of course such a stand by a prominent man has had great effect upon his listeners. As a result of this interest, a number of new members have been enlisted. The Fellowship Class membership is now fifty, with a fine average attendance."

HERMON ELDREDGE.

Hermon Eldredge was born in East Springfield, Pa., July 7, 1866. He died suddenly January 3, 1935. He was the son of L. O. and Lucy M. Eldredge. He leaves his wife, Martha Nason Eldredge, three daughters, Miss Lucy M., Myrtle and Marian, all of Dayton, Ohio, and one son, Nason, of Ithaca, New York, two brothers, R. M. Eldredge, of Erie, Pa., and William S. Eldredge, of Chicago, Ill., and one sister, Mrs. E. B. Thayer, of Conneaut, Ohio.

He received his training in Military School at Mercer Pa. For a number of years, he was engaged in business at Erie. In 1909, he resigned his business to accept secretaryship of the Pennsylvanit State Sabbath School Association, which he held for two years. From 1911 to 1917, he was secretary to the Men's Interchurch Federation and director of religious work in the Erie Y. M. C. A. In 1917, he entered the army "Y" work and was stationed at Ft. Niagara and Syracuse, N. Y. He was later made director of all Y. M. C. A. activities at Camp Upton, Long Island.

Following the war, he returned to his work as secretary of the Men's Interchurch Federation, at Erie. While acting as secretary of the Interchurch Federation, he was made secretary of Religious Education of the Christian Church as a part of the forward movement of his denomination. He served in this capacity for ten years. In 1920, he was actively engaged in the Interchurch World Movement, particularly in the Pa. district.

In 1923 he was made full time Editor and Young People's Secretary in the Department of Christian Education in his church. This position necessitated a change in location. Consequently, he moved to Dayton, Ohio, where he remained until his death. At the time of his death, he was editor of the Sunday Schools Publications and was an official in the Christian Endeavor organization. He was a member of the Executive Committee of the General Council and Vice Chairman of the Executive Committee of the General Convention, Editor of the Christian Publishing Association, Associate Editor of Advance, the national organ of the Congregational and Christian Churches, and Associate Editor of the Congregational Publishing Society.

Mr. Eldredge was a man of unusual ability and was in much demand as a public speaker. He has made lasting contributions to his church and to the religious life of his day. He will be greatly missed throughout our brotherhood in all sections of the country. We will not realize how badly we miss him until we are really conscious that he is not in our midst and that we are not blessed with his great messages and fine fellowship. Not only will the church be conscious of its loss, but individuals and individual homes in different sections will be conscious of their personal losses in his going.

The Christian Sun and the church that it represents extends sympathy and prayers to the family and all.

FROM REIDSVILLE.

Just a few lines from the Reidsville Church. We are happy in our work here. The Lord is blessing our efforts, and we are having a great time in the work of the Master. During our relatively brief residence here, we have found some fine, conscientious and cooperative people.

The first week here on our new field, the church presented us with a real nice pounding of pantry supplies. On Christmas Eve the Baraca Class presented the writer with a new overcoat, and on December 31st they supplied him with enough cash to purchase his new 1935 license plates.

On December 13th we closed a two week's revival meeting with about 75 professions and rededications. Up to date 46 have united with the church, and others have expressed their desire to do so in the very near future.

On Wednesday evening, January 9th, we had an hundred present for the prayer service.

Sunday, January 13th, we had 302 present in the Sunday School.

We are well pleased with the cooperation that we are receiving from our people here and we are looking forward to a great work in the future.

HOW THE LOCAL CHURCH CAN HELP IN THE COLLEGE CAMPAIGN.

The effective work done by any organization will depend upon the strength of the cooperation shown by individuals. The same will apply to Elon College. It can make headway only with the supporting constituency of the local church.

The church can help in the college campaign by creating sentiment and an atmosphere within the local church for Elon. Since this institution is the backbone of the denomination, a feeling of anxiety for her success should be felt by every individual of the church. This interest may be created through a word spoken by those who have been touched by the influence of Elon. More earnest supporters of the local church would, seemingly, support the college if they were better informed about the work our college is doing within the local church. Those individuals who have been benefitted through their experiences on the Elon campus should be enthusiastic about the college campaign and help others see why the church should support her college.

A program concerning Elon should be put on in the Sunday School during the months that are devoted to the college campaign. Sunday School superintendents should comment upon the work of the college, that those who attend the Sunday School may have a deepened interest in the welfare of Elon. Pastors should speak from their pulpits in behalf of the college and its importance. All this should be done to cause those who are interested to rally to Elon's support and to create a right spirit, where such does not exist, for Elon.

Having created enthusiasm for the college, the church is now ready to show her willingness to help by giving each member of the church an opportunity to make a contribution to Elon's support. A committee should be appointed to see that all members of the church have this opportunity extended to them.

One should not hesitate because his or her gift is small, but should realize that an opportunity lies at the door of the church to face an urgent need. A small donation from each member would awaken a deeper interest for the college. Let each local church do her part.

ELON COLLEGE AND THE LOCAL ALUMNI.

Often times former students and graduates of Elon, in different localities, do not express themselves as openly for their Alma Mater as do the graduates of other institutions. This condition is attributable in many instances to a lack of organization, and it must not be interpreted as lack of affection for Elon.

For the expressed purpose of building anew a stronger love among the people associated together in each community and toward the college itself, the Elon Alumni Association organized its first unit of the year in High Point. Here, as a matter of fact, an old unit was revived, for in 1928 a local chapter was set up.

The meeting was held in the Y. W. C. A. hut on the evening of October 24th. Miss Lucille Johnson was largely instrumental in bringing together this group. Officers for the permanent unit were as follows: M. L. Patrick, president; J. C. Whitesell, vice-president, and Miss Lucille Johnston, secretary-treasurer. A membership committee, composed of Mrs. R. H. Gunn and Mr. Clyde Farley, was elected. Mr. R. H. Gunn and Mrs. John Fambrough make up the publicity committee. Mrs. J. C. Whitesell and Mrs. Janice Edwards constitute the social committee. It is obvious by the nature of the above committees that the purpose of this local unit is, in keeping with other local chapters, to promote a closer personal relationship between Elon people here than has been done before.

Dr. L. E. Smith was present for the meeting, and, as is his wont, he talked very interestingly and sincerely about the program of the college.

The local chapter of the Alumni Association wishes to promise its cooperation to the fullest extent possible in advancing the mutual interest between Elon and her former students and graduates.

OUR CHURCH PERIODICALS.

The membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church is 4,570,410. The membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is 2,689,125. The approximate number of families in the former is 904,082; in the latter it is 537,825. The total number of subscriptions of the six area Advocates in the Methodist Episcopal Church is 115,000, which is the paid-up subscription list. The total number of subscriptions of the General Organ and the ten conference Advocates in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is 112,000. I do not have the figures of the Methodist Protestant Church. These calculations do not include other periodicals, such as Epworth Herald, Epworth Highroad, or World Outlook, but is strictly limited to the Advocates. This means, in so far as the Advocates are concerned, that approximately only one family out of seven in the Methodist Episcopal Church, and one family out of six in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is a subscriber to any of the Advocates. This is not strictly accurate. In many instances there are those who are subscribers for two of the Advocates. One of the conspicuous failures of Protestantism is in the restricted circulation of Christian literature. An authority on this subject says:

"There has been a steady decline in the circulation of Protestant religious periodicals during the past fifteen years. In the ten-year period from 1920 to 1930, Catholic papers, as a whole, approximately doubled their circulation. It is an exception that a Protestant minister or Protestant church official makes an effort to push the circulation of church papers. Indeed, it is not an unheard-of thing in the Protestant church for pastors and church officials to refuse to permit their congregations to be canvassed for church periodicals. But our Catholic brethren give a whole month to arouse an interest in their church periodicals. The priests preach on the subject, and their young people are faithfully taught the value of a church paper."

While it is not a solution of the disparity between the Roman Catholic and the Methodist Churches, yet some explanation may be mentioned of the small circulation of our weekly church periodicals. Within the last few years as many as a half dozen popular weekly magazines have reached a circulation of 1,000,000 and more. A careful observer says:

"Moreover, within the past quarter of a century, the daily papers have risen to a place of power. Many of them have been devoting increasing space in the Sunday edition to religious announcements. And more recently local churches have begun the custom of carrying paid advertising in these editions. Bulletins by local churches carry not only programs for the Sunday worship service and announcements for the week, but frequently news of the local parish and occasionally some general religious material. These are sent by mail to members of the local congregation during the week."

The tendency of all this has been to make the average church member feel that he does not need the ministrations of the Advocates. Again, the publication of journals specifically for clergymen tends to cool their affection for their denominational press, which must, in a measure, serve both clergy and laymen.

More serious than all of this is the breakdown of a spiritual morale, with the result of a growing secularism and sensualism. It may as well be confessed that there is a decline in church loyalty. And we put what loyalty we have to a severe test when we have to make an appeal to loyalty in behalf of inferior publications.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

THE UNITED CHURCH IN THE SOUTHEAST.

By Dr. W. R. Kedzie,

It was not only a distinct opportunity but a very great pleasure to visit a number of the churches in the Southeast as I had opportunity to do recently. I was particularly interested in studying the progress made toward working out the details of the union of the Congregational and Christian Churches. The bringing about of a merger of churches is more of a process than it is an event, and the adjustment of many details is required for an efficient program. When a boy and a girl are married it is a comparatively simple process, but when you undertake to merge two separate and distinct households of furniture and two separate and distinct sets of children you have a problem on your hands. This merger has been somewhat of the latter nature, but remarkable progress has been made in seeing that the children of both denominations are looked after and that no unnecessary damage is done in adjusting the two sets of household furniture. In other words, our institutions and our programs are being merged into an efficient unity with as great rapidity as is practicable. The thing that gives encouragement to this whole enterprise is the universal spirit of good-will in the churches of both denominations, as I had abundant opportunity to observe.

The Congregational Conference of the Carolinas, which has been a constituent Conference of the General Council, has voluntarily surrendered its status to become only an association in the Southern Convention. In other words it loses its status as a Conference and becomes a constituent part of the Southern Convention, thus definitely taking its part in the development of the union. It should be explained for northern readers that the Southern Convention has become a constituent Conference of the General Conference on the same basis as the State Conferences. The area of the Southern Convention has been restricted to the Carolinas and Virginia by the withdrawal of Alabama and Georgia to become Conference members of the General Council. While this has reduced the area of the Southern Convention, it has made its work much more compact and is in line with the general program of progress.

Nowhere in the country is there a better illustration of the immediate impact of a Christian college upon its constituency than is afforded among the churches of North Carolina and Virginia in their relationship to Elon College. Take the church at Suffolk, Virginia, for instance, which has in its membership fifty-one graduates of Elon College. It has always been my theory that our Christian colleges must supply not only an educated leadership for the pulpit, but also an educated leadership for the pew, and here is an illustration that is significant. It is no wonder, is it, that Suffolk church is outstanding among the Christian churches. Its commodious

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

ADVENTURES IN IDLENESS.

(An Editorial Correspondence.)

Life is one glorious adventure after another, and if we don't get thrills out of it, the fault is ours. Every day is different and every hour, every scene and every experience. And so we have variety and novelty and romance, compelling the most timid and stupid of us to be adventurers; to try the untried and brave the unknown!

The Sun's Editor is now adventuring in idleness, pure, genuine, unadulterated idleness. And there is romance and variety in every hour of it. It was not of his choosing; far from it. And that is where the novelty and the spice of life comes in; facing the unexpected and meeting, all unlooked for, the unannounced.

I had come to this hospital and sanitarium to try to rest and gain some strength, expecting to enjoy the broad open, the long, leisurely walks and loitering by the lake and in the sunshine. Presto! My doctor, God bless him, says, "Atkinson, not so. You go to bed now and stay there for several weeks, maybe months; this do if you mean business and want to get well." Now how is that for a change, a real adventure, a plunge in fact, into the unexpected. And so here I am, this pad and pen in hand, companions of my idleness, in bed writing a line to such as may read, to say that I am still enjoying the romantic, and finding something new and glorious to see and sing about every day and hour.

Out from my screened porch, where I am spending these blessed and balmy days, is a scene that no decorative artist can hope to equal on this earth. I will not describe it now—it would take pages and pages and more strength than I am allowed to use now. But just one tree of it. A gorgeous, grand, green willow oak. And the drapery of it. No lace curtains that man (or woman) ever wove can compare with it. The good God hung those decorations—a soft, silky, dark green moss in generous clusters, graceful folds and ribbons, rippling wavelets. Now that oak is not the same in any two hours. It changes from glory to glory, and from grandeur to gorgeousness—until you want to go out and touch the thing and shout "Stop it!" The birds come and sing to me from it, the squirrels chase each other over and through it, and the balmy breezes blow all sorts of music from it into your soul. "A poem can be made by a fool like me, But only God can make a tree." And that is the truth—if it is like this tree just outside my door.

It is genuinely delightful here in this hospital. Take "hospital" out of "hospitality" and you haven't much left. Well, hospitality abounds here in every sense. Our doctor is skilled, cheerful, encouraging. Nurses are kind, faithful, considerate; bell boys are accommodating, smiling and happy. Dr. Rowland is now rapidly climbing back to health, vigor and happiness, and his fine sense of humor, and delightful fellowship are real assets in any situation. Surely God is in this place, and makes this world of ours a place in which to live, laugh, rejoice, be glad—above all, be humble.

If the printer accepts this, and it escapes the eye of my doctor, I may write again some time. But no more now. Love to all our dear Sun family.

NATIONALISM AND DENOMINATIONALISM.

Students of world affairs are saying that the greatest danger that threatens the peace of the world today is nationalism. Nationalism is not a new thing, but it has only recently come to be recognized for the danger that it is. Nationalism, in the sense that it is used by those who see in it such a serious threat, is patriotism rampant. It is the desire to see ones own nation advance that has become an obsession. It is the fear of other nations become a phobia.

If concrete examples of nationalism are desired, the world abounds in them. Italy, under Mussolini, has long been shouting about the glorious destiny to which that nation is foreodained. The Italian people have been urged with passionate zeal to sacrifice every personal interest for the good of the nation, and to be prepared to defend their nation against every danger. Ever since the close of the World War France has been loudly demanding that her security must be assured, and has been steadily building up a standing army of such a size as has been unknown heretofore in times of peace. Germany, under Hitler, is a nation with an inferiority complex gnawing at its soul and a chip on its shoulder.

The United States of America, if we are to believe the vociferous exponents of the American purpose, has no ambition for imperialistic conquests; but because of her wealth and her almost unlimited resources, is now the envy of all the other nations, and some day is bound to be the object of a destructive attack that will be made by some other nation. There is a "school of the prophets" which loudly proclaims that there is bound to be war between the United States and Japan.

The fact is that in this modern world the nations have been brought so close together that the policy of one nation becomes the most intimate concern of all the other nations. There is one great world market which determines the value of all the staple commodities. No nation is sufficient unto itself. It must either have access to this world market, or there can be no national prosperity, as we reckon prosperity today. The nation that establishes a protective tariff finds it has not only erected a barrier that keeps the products of other nations from coming in, it has also erected a barrier that keeps its own products from going out.

Interpreters of the principles of Christ tell us that what the world needs is to apply the principles of Christ to international relations. They tell us that, according to the mesage of Jesus, coperation and not competition is the basic principle of all real well being. They tell us that, in the light of Christ's gospel, men must learn the doctrine of universal brotherhood. They tell us that men can be safe on this earth only when they have learned to love one another. Brotherly cooperation, they tell us, must be substituted for fear, suspicion and hatred.

That is all very true. No one will deny that if the truths that Jesus taught were really lived by all men that our present world dangers would be completely dispelled. But those who deign to consider the claims of the Christian gospel tell us that they are entirely impractical. They say that the teachings of Jesus are visionary, idealistic and other-worldly. They say that we have to deal with a world as it is, and with humanity as it is. They say that the world and humanity being what they are, that the only practical plan is for each nation to seek by every possible means to advance its own interests, and to be prepared to defend itself with all the weapons of modern destruction against all comers.

Now what has Christendom to show to the world in the way of a practical demonstration of the application of Christ's teachings? One very large portion of those who call themselves Christian, denies that all the rest of those who profess to be Christians are that, in any real sense. And that other part says that if those who claim to be the real Church, are that, they will have none of it. In other words, between two great bodies of those who claim to be followers of Jesus, there is a feeling of bitterness and distrust that is as deep seated and as far reaching as any that may exist between two rival nations that are not actually at war.

And what of the conditions that exist within Protestantism itself? We find that the Protestant world is broken up into many distinct and entirely separate groups. Some of these groups manifest towards others all the characteristics of armed camps. Some groups disregard the existence of all other groups, and go their own way as if they alone were the only real Christians in the world. And all the groups seem more concerned about advancing the interests of their own individual group, than they are about the advancement of Christianity as a whole.

Does a divided Christian world have a message for a secular world torn by nationalistic ambitions and harassed by national rivalries? There are many who feel that the Christian Church cannot effectively preach world brotherhood until it has learned to practice Christian brotherhood within its own ranks. It is hard to escape the conviction that so long as the Christian Church maintains its present system of denominations, it will be powerless to do anything about the evils of war-breeding nationalism.

S. C. H.

EVANGELISM.

Since the days of Christ in the flesh, the question of evangelism has been to the forefront in the church's program. Pentecost released the power that brought conviction and the desire for a new life through Christ on the part of individuals.

Paul was an evangelist and recognized evangelism as a definite gift upon the part of certain types of religious workers.

The church, through the centuries, has been blessed with great souls touched by Christ, fired by the Spirit, and sent out as living witnesses to those who had not heard. Even in our day, the church has been greatly strengthened and its borders extended by evangelistic endeavors. The individual who possesses Christ and who seeks to carry Him to those who have Him not is in the truest sense an evangelist. A pastor or a laymen may be an effective evangelist. In these latter days, there seems to have been a tendency for all to labor and wait until somone comes from afar who heralds himself as an evangelist. Indeed, he may be an evangelist sent from Gord, but the responsibility is upon all who know Christ to impart Him to those who know Him not.

Soon, we will come to the Lenten season. In this season of the year, we have been accustomed to think more seriously about things religious and to strive more earnestly, ourselves, to give Christ a larger place in our lives. The nearer we come to Christ ourselves in our daily living, the more likely we are to attract those who have not yet believed. This, also, is the season of the year, quite naturally, when Christian people become more concerned about the non-Christians in their communities. In recent years, the weeks preceeding Easter have been used for the earnest presntation of the gospel with a hope that there might be a great ingathering during the weeks preceeding and on Easter Sunday. This is a most commendable custom.

The ones of us who constitute the church need that our faith should be quickened and our devotions increased. We need also to realize the responsibility that rests upon us for those who are out of the church. It is certainly the time when every pastor might, wlth profit, lay the matter of more thorough and deeper consecration upon the hearts of his people and also encourage them to cooperate with him that the church might accomplish its real mission—that of winning the lost to Christ. Can we not, as a church, in the light of our church history and our present opportunities determine that we shall increase our numbers, not simply for the sake of church, but for the sake and blessing of those who have not yet known the church in its fellowship and gospel? The pastor who fails to put forth such an effort must, of necessity, witness the tragedy of failure on the part of his church. This is the time to sound an evangelistic note in keeping with the gospel of Christ and its propagation in New Testament days. L. E. S.

THE CHURCH SERVICE.

The church does have a service of worship. The service is for all, members and non-members alike. This service is usually held on the Sabbath. The purpose of the service is to inspire its members to greater devotion and more consecrated living and to prove a winning force to those who have not believed. The songs that we sing, the prayers that we pray, and the exhortation that we give cannot of themselves accomplish these things. They may, however, prove to be the means by which such miracles of grace are wrought. These items in the average church's program of worship are employed as guides to our thinking and helpers in our seeking after God. The more perfect they are in content and presentation, the more effective they will be in bringing the worshipper and God together.

The church service should be planned with the utmost care and executed with sacred thoroughness. The program of worship should materially assist in creating an atmosphere of reverence—an atmosphere in which the best that there is in the worshipper is consciously aroused that he may receive the best that there is to be obtained from the Spirit. Such an atmosphere will produce a consciousness of the presence of Christ. No one can come consciously in the presence of Christ without desiring to free himself from all that hinders and to secure for himself all that will help. In this way, Christ is lifted up, enthroned anew; and people come in increasing numbers and with eagerness that they may find Him in His fullness, themselves.

There are still those who demand, "Sirs, we would see Jesus." It should be the aim and purpose of every service of worship plan that all who come be given the opportunity to behold Christ, that they, themselves, might be renewed in faith or transformed in life. L. E. S.

WARS OF THE FUTURE.

The writer was at a luncheon of the Civic Club, to which he belongs, recently and listened to a talk by a young newspaper man who was in the World War. He spoke on the subject of future wars and described some of the possibilities. The writer did not make notes and can only give some impressions.

The speaker made it seem quite easy for a large fleet of airships to fly from foreign shores to ours and spread death and destruction pretty generally across the country and then to land and become interned and board at the expense of the country. He pictured these planes with terrible destructive poisonous gases or dropping death dealing germs that would be destructive of human life and even drop poison which would be embedded into the ground and for years poison sources of water supply, causing death for years to come. These are just some of the terrible possibilities pictured by the newspaperman, who was of course working for preparedness.

The impression made upon the writer was that he had overdrawn his picture in the first place, and in the second place he had presented the very best kind or an argument for those who are against all wars and preparation for wars. It would seem almost hopeless to undertake to prepare ourselves against such warfare. There is no military preparation that could meet it. It would appear to be utterly hopeless and futile and the writer felt and knew that the only preparedness possible was that which made such war unthinkable and impossible. The only way to meet such a program is by building up international good will and confidence, mutual respect and a sense of international justice. It would seem almost inevitable that thinking people, thinking nations, would throw up their hands and say "this cannot be, let's get together and be friends."

As the Christian churches are more effective in preserving peace and order in our American cities than our police forces so all agencies promoting good will and brotherly love are infinitely more effective in preventing such tragic and terrible war. A Christian church and other similar agencies will do more than fleets or army planes and poisonous gases. May God help us to do our duty by the world. E. C. G.

CHRISTIANS AND JEWS.

In February, the South (at any rate Florida) will be visited by a team representing the National Conference of Jews and Christians. This conference is an outgrowth of joint meetings which have been held over the country and participated in by Jews, Catholics and Protestants. The purpose of the National Conference of Jews and Christians, is to promote "justice, amity and understanding among Protestants, Catholics and Jews." The director of the Conference is Rev. Everett Clinchy of New York, who is a member of our denomination. The team which is to hold meetings in Florida consists of Dr. Clinchy, Rev. Father Lawrence Riggs of New York City, and Rabbi Morris S. Lazaren of Baltimore. They are, as it were, "Embassadors of Good Will."

We can all share in the promotion of a more just and Christian attitude toward members of these other faiths, all believers in our common Heavenly Father, and all working for a happier and better world.

The writer recently received a letter from the pastor of three small rural churches in Western Massachusetts. This minister has spent all his ministerial life working with rural churches, and has made an earnest effort to have his churches serve the whole life of the people of their communities. It so happens that in some of these churches many of the old New England farmers have moved away and in their places have come many Jews, mostly Polish and Russian, aided by certain Jewish charities in New York. There are also two conservation camps in the vicinity of his churches. He writes as follows: "Catholic mass is celebrated every Sunday morning in my church in Otis. As the nearest Catholic church is thirteen miles away, Catholic priests from Lee started holding services in the town hall. As the basement of my church holds more people, I suggested to my church people that they invite the Catholic people to have their services there. Last year we had in our church a fellowship meeting for Christians and Jews, with Rabbi Harry Kaplan as the speaker. There is a summer camp for Jewish boys in my parish. When I first went to Otis, I invited the Rabbi there to speak in my church and he wanted me to speak in one of his services. I have spoken once every year since, and when they have had a Rabbi he has spoken in my church."

This pastor, Rev. C. H. Perry, deserves a great deal of credit for the breadth of his attitude toward the new comers in those communities. He was called upon to tell the story of his work among the Catholics and Jews at the annual State conference in Massachusetts. Nothing is gained by the promotion of ill will or religious prejudice, but much is gained by the promotion of understanding and good will.

OUR HAILING SIGN.

By C. Rexford Raymond.

Upon the street I often meet
A smiling lad or lass,
With open hand upheld to greet
And cheer me as I pass.

These open hands, thus lifted, bear
A mystic sign for me;
To treasures fair, beyond compare,
An open sesame.
For, faring forth upon my search
For Christ's fair reign on earth,
I see the children of the Church
Lift open hands in mirth.

O Church of Christ, the hailing sign
Thy blessed children choose,
Be nobly fit to claim as Thine
And for Thy symbol use.
Be this our sign of brotherhood
That all may understand:
"Wide Fellowship" means world-wide good,
A friendly open hand.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Eastern Virginia Conference made a net gain of five members for the year 1934. According to the reports made to the annual Conference, 328 members were received on Confession; 151 by letter; total received, 479. On the other hand, the following losses in membership were reported: by death, 103; dismissed by letter, 152; revision of Roll, 219; total losses, 474.

A study of these figures shows that the number of letters given exceeds the number of persons received by letter, one. It could hardly be expected that only one person was transferred to another denomination or that this difference is due to the failure of one person to use the letter of transfer. The figures almost balance on this point. The number of deaths as shown above, is 103. This item is a loss which cannot be avoided. It is normal and is to be expected. But there is an item of loss which should be more carefully considered; 219 persons were dropped from the church by revising the church roll.

In this conection the writer takes it for granted that the churches feel justified in revising their roll of members. Apparently these 219 persons were not considered worthy members of the church. They have been erased from the records. Facing this matter, seriously, one asks: "Is that the only alternative?" The usual reply to such a question is: "Well, they do not give anything, and they do not attend the church, why keep them on the roll?"

The writer believes that a Conference, with a membership of 9,878, should have an annual net gain of more than five members. And the duty to the unsaved has not been fully performed by adding 328 members on Confession of Faith. Three or four of the larger churches should win more than this number every year, in addition to the members added by letters of transfer. Indeed, the churches of Norfolk and Portsmouth can win more than 300 converts in one year. The churches of Suffolk and Nansemond County can do likewise. There are a number of country churches which are located in sections where a large increase from new converts cannot be accomplished. But has any church measured up to its opportunity in winning souls during the past years of its history? Have the pastors fully discharged their duty in this matter?

This is written not as a criticism, but as a challenge. During the Conference year the churches are requested to present four appeals for money, by special offerings, for the following: Ministerial Relief, Elon College, Missions and Orphanage. These Special Offerings must be emphasized by repeated presentation from the pulpit, if the apportionments are raised in full. Additional appeals will be made for the other calls of the Conference and Convention. In many churches it will be necesary to present an appeal for money at every preaching service if the pastor meets the expectation of the Conference and Convention officials in charge of these enterprises of the Church.

The church cannot go forward without money. The kingdom of God, on earth, is inseparably connected with material things. The spiritual and the material are handmaids during the present dispensation. But money is not the source of its power. And the raising of money is not its sole objective. Pulpit and press have placed great emphasis upon dollar marks and financial statistics. How does the emphasis of soul winning and religious education of converts and church members compare with the emphasis of raising money? For example this Conference (E. Va.) reported a Sunday School enrollment of 6,827 for 1934. This is a little more than two thirds of the church membership. In other words, it appears from the records that 3,051 of the church members in the Conference do not attend Sunday School. Enlist these in the Sunday School work and the church roll will not need such drastic revision. Have faith to meet the challenge of reaching the unsaved in your community and win them for the church. Make this a banner year in going forward with the Master.

HOW TO MAKE THE COLLEGE CAMPAIGN IN THE LOCAL CHURCH.

I take it that the average church in our Convention is loyal—loyal to the denomination of which it is a part—and that it wishes to reflect that loyalty by an earnest effort to carry out the unanimous wish of the Convention, which is the promotional agency for our churches. The Southern Convention, in session at Suffolk, Virginia, voted what may be termed "our larger budget," such budget to include provision for the various departments and institutions of the Convention. It also set apart certain periods in the church year when the local church is supposed to make an effort to comply with the askings of the Convention.

Elon College is an organized institution of higher learning of the Convention. Its services are not confined to the Southern Convention or to the members of the United Church, but its facilities are open to any and all who may come, regardless of section or church affiliation. The Convention recognizes the importance of the college and its financial needs and undertook to provide for its support, relying, of course, upon the generosity of its constituency. The report of the Convention's Special Committee provided that the sum of $12,500 should be raised for Elon College and apportioned this amount to the several conferences, with the instruction that these conferences apportion their allotment to the local church.

The responsibility, then, rests upon the local church. The majority of the conferences have provided the local church with the exact amount that it is expected to raise for the college. Now the local church is confronted with the task of raising this amount. How can it be done? There are different ways, of course; and I venture to say that very few churches will follow the same plan, but whatever plan the local church may follow, there are certain things that are necessary.

First, information. The congregation should be furnished with adequate information regarding the needs of the college and the place it fills in our brotherhood. These facts, I am sure, are evident to the average minister in our church, for he is either a graduate or a former student of the college, or he has been constantly in touch with it. In this connection, I might state that we are operating on the smallest possible budget. Approximately $80,000 is required. A little more than half of this amount will be realized from the college itself. Generous friends will make gifts. But we will be dependent largely upon the local church's raising its apportionment. I think that an average gift of $.05 per member per week, or $.02 a day for the year, would provide the amount needed for the college. The college will be supported in the future, not by a few gifts, but by small gifts from the rank and file of the church. Of course, some can and will give more largely than others; but if every one will give according to his ability, there will be no difficulty about supporting the college.

Then, too, there will of necessity be a certain amount of inspiration if the task is to be done. People do not usually rally to cold facts and monotonous figures when these facts and figures are calculated to secure from them part of their hard-earned money. But by far the greater part of the giving is done under, what might be termed, impelling inspiration. We are inspired to give by an array of facts that convince us of our duty and of our responsibility. We are inspired to give by the convincing appeal of someone who is tremendously interested in the thing that he presents. By force of logic and the power of winsome personality, he develops within us a generous attitude; and under the inspiration of the moment, we part with that which is ours, realizing that we are making an investment in a cause that is tremendously worthwhile. We are inspired to give by the need and the pressing demand of that which for a long time has been the object of our support and devotion. What we have done in the past we want to do now, and more, since the occasion demands greater generosity.

Then, too, I think that the goal in the average church could hardly be reached without personal solicitation. We need to be informed to know what we are to give and why we should give it. We need to be inspired to do that which we have been convinced we should do; but, even then, it may be that someone will have to come along and help us a bit in performing our known duty. That is, someone will have to come, solicit, and receive if we are to do our part. You know, we make up our minds, and if the opportunity were present then we would make our contribution; but if the opportunity does not present itself, we may "cool off" a bit and have a tendency to change our minds. There is nothing quite so helpful to the individual who wants to be generous than the presence and appeal of one who is greatly interested.

I am certain that if the local church is properly informed, wisely inspired, and tactfully appealed to by an efficient organization that that church, regardless of its financial strength, will reach its goal and rejoice the college with its contribution. This is to express the hope that, beginning immediately, every church in the Convention will set itself to the task of raising its apportionment for the college, which is in keeping with the Convention's askings and a part of the larger budget of the church itself.

CIRCULAR CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

We observed Christmas by holding the annual Sunday School Christmas Tree service at which a delightful play was given by the children; also by a cantata given in the church by a choice group of local singers from various churches directed by our organist, Mr. P. Daver. It was entitled "Child Jesus," and included carols of many nations and of other centuries.

Some members of our church also took part in another Christmas musical program held in St. Michael's Episcopal Church by the Musical Art Club of the city. Numbers were given by representatives of seven different churches including the Unitarian and Roman Catholic. A rather striking example of Christian fellowship in music

CHRISTMAS IN THE HILLS.

Once more many young hearts were made glad by the nice toys Santa brought from the Christian folks to these hills. Our Grissoms came up for the holidays and had a nice program both at Elk Spur and Rocky Ford. So it has been a real Christmas in our hills. However, there was one cloud to hide the shining stars from view. We had expected Bro. Sorrell and some of his folks from Danville, and they did not get here. The hills remember the Sorrells, and we feel our loss in not getting to see them again. Bro. Sorrell has been a faithful friend to our hills since he left this field, and his churches have sent lots of cheer to the hills each Christmas. We appreciate it a lot, and I take great pleasure in thanking those good folks and all who sent things to make Christmas a happy one among the hills.

Soon now our Grissoms will be back from school; and we will be glad, for they have grown to be a part of our hills. I have seen the daily struggle the Grissoms have put up; have seen them try many things, sometimes only to fail. Still they try again. Many times they meet with lack of understanding, lack of appreciation, and therefore get only criticism for all their work. The Grissoms have to preach to people who for the most part don't even feel the need of a church. He not only has to preach but he also has to get the people to come out to hear him, which is harder work. Here among the hills one must strive to create a desire to hear preaching before he can preach to people. So to create a desire in the heart of a hunter to leave his dogs and the hunt on Sunday to come to church is not an easy job. It would not be an easy job for an old mountaineer, much less for a young preacher from the outside world. I think at times that Grissom has a deeper understanding and more patience with the ruggedness of our hills than I have, and I am of the hills. When I see a man taking better care of his dogs and giving them more attention than his children I get a kind of silly feeling very much related to anger. And when I see children brought up in the same house with dogs, the baby take a bite of bread and the dog the next bite; or if the man has his way, the dog gets the first bite, I get another silly feeling. But Grissom looks on with patience and keeps trying.

Many times the women and children would come to church if the men would let them. The man is master in the hills. It is only in the homes that Christianity has touched that you find the old "hilly" customs passing out. In many homes here the man still tells his women folks where they may go and when. Only the light of Christianity will change these conditions and the point is—just how to make these people feel the need of a higher and finer life. The law has been busy here for years, and still every lovely scene in our hills is stained with blood of some person who has been murdered. Climb any cliff you may, and you either find blood stains upon a stone where some one lost his life in days gone by or you find the story on the lips of the people who recall the case. No, the law can do nothing. Love, alone, can cleanse these stains and make peace reign among our hills. The church alone must try the job.

Everywhere one goes he sees either the need of the church or what the church has done. This fall I had the pleasure of visiting in Lynchburg, and there I found a wide-awake church. Our little church there is going fine. I like the pastor and his wife and all whom I met there. If we had Mr. Dunn and his wife to superintend our Sunday School here it would be great. I had a lovely visit with Prof. and Mrs. Gay, and the Gays are fine. Mrs. Gay is a former student of Elon College and a loyal member of our church. Prof. Gay spoke of her loyalty to her church school. He said she was always going back, and I say—"so do the others." Elon holds her students. Why? The answer is clear. Elon is not only a college, but it is also a church college—Christian. What a difference one word can make, if that word is Christian! They never quite get away from it, but are always going back, in spirit, if not in body.

It makes me feel a pang of regret that I could not go to Elon. I feel that it might have made something of even me. However, I'm glad for others to have the things that never came to me. I may brush aside a tear, but it is not a bitter tear. I am determined never to let the things I cannot have "sour me." And so I feel with the others that dear old Elon is my college too. It has the power to make me dream. But if I get to dreaming, I'll be telling of my trip up the Valley to Lynchburg again. It was my first visit there; and I can see the river now, with the weeping willows dipping their graceful boughts into the clear water of the James, the hills rising clear and blue against the sky. But I must save my romantic "stuff" till Spring. Even an old maid knows that romance is for Springtime—and this is January. I watched the New Year come in over gray and rugged hills, for we have no snow this time.

"Sunshine and shadow have mingled,
In the year that has passed away;
Sunshine and shadow will mingle,
In the year that I meet today.
But hand in hand with the Master,
I fear not what it will bring,
He knows, He cares, and He loves me,
And God is in everything."

VICTORIA OF THE HILLS.

ELON COLLEGE AND THE HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATE.

Having been a senior in high school, and during the past eight years talked personally with several thousand seniors, I have come to the conclusion that deciding the vocation to follow and the college to attend is a real problem, and the majority of us dismiss it with too little thought.

Elon College trys to be of whatever assistance possible to the high school seniors. Besides visiting and talking with them personally, we are always glad to answer any question and to furnish literature that will assist the high school senior in making up his or her own mind as to what college to attend.

I recall very vividly my senior year and the things that led me to come to Elon. I had rather definite plans as to what I wished to do in life and wrote Elon, along with other colleges, a goodly number of letters in order that I might get the information I desired. Some were late in replying, some never wrote at all, but within three days' time I had an answer from Elon. This impressed me so well that I turned from the colleges of my community (Durham) and my denomination and came to Elon. I have always rejoiced that I did, for I am convinced that the average college cannot give to a young man or woman what Elon can. Our physical plant is second to none, we have a strong faculty, a religious environment, good athletics, and a surrounding that is tuned to bring the best out of young people.

Besides a curriculum that gives to a high school graduate all the foundational courses leading to the various professions, Elon has extra departments, music, art, secretarial work, Home Economics, etc. This gives the Elon student opportunities many other colleges are not in position to offer.

NEWS ITEMS OF SOCIETIES.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Hine's Chapel Christian Church asembled for its regular monthly meeting on Sunday afternoon, January 13, 1935. There was also a meeting or the Ladies' Aid Society.

The attendance was good. The program was a very inspiring one on the topic of Home Missions. Further inspiration was added by the presence of Bro. Earp, the pastor, and his wife. They spoke encouragingly and offered valuable suggestions.

We are indeed glad that the women of the church have fallen in line with the great program of carrying glad tidings to those who know not our Lord in His goodness and love.

MRS W. F. BURTON.

THE MID-WINTER MEETING.

The annual Mid-winter Meeting, so called, will be held in Evanston, Illinois, January 21st-24th. This meeting has been something of a development. It began as a meeting of the Home Boards with the Home Missionary superintendents, but gradually developed until now it is a meeting of the Commission on Missions and each of the constituent Boards, Home and Foreign. This brings together all the the Board Secretaries, elected members of the Boards and superintendents of conferences, secretaries from all over the country. This is not a meeting for platform addresses, but is rather a purely business gathering at which are discussed the program for the year, the budget and methods of promotion. It has its value in coördinating the work of the denomination and also a serious facing of all necessary problems and questions. There are, of course, inspiring features and elements of the program which stimulate interest and faith and equip those who attent with the necessary information and enthusiasm for the year's undertaking.

Perhaps as important a phase of the business transacted as any is the appointing of the percentages of apportionment receipts to the various mission boards. Another important feature is the annual meeting of the superintendents' conference. This will be held this year at the Hotel LeSalle in Chicago, January 18th-21st. Among those who are to speak or lead discussions at the Superintendents' Conference is Superintendent D. Bennett of Indiana, whose topic is "The State Conference and Its Young People."

PROMISE.

The year will keep its promises to me;
Unfailingly the days will come and go;
Rivers will take their sure course to the sea;
Seedtime and harvest—these will come, I know.
The stars will go their quiet silver way;
There will be sun and rain and wind and dew;
There will be breathless beauty in each day;
There will be old loved tasks for me to do.
And I have made my promise to the year.
God help me keep it through the hours ahead;
I shall be braver, I shall banish fear;
I shall not leave a kindly word unsaid;
I shall have faith that this, my ancient grief,
Will yield at last to laughter and to song;
I shall have hope that there will be relief
For the old hurts the world has borne so long.
The year will keep its promise. Oh, my heart,
We must not fail to do our humble part!

Little five-year-old Yvonne had been a very naughty little girl for most of the day, going from one naughty thing to another, until her actions caused her to get a spanking. At night when she went to say her prayers at her mother's knee, after praying her accustomed "Now I lay me down to sleep," she continued: "Dear God, Please make me a very, very good little girl tomorrow, for you haven't helped me much today."

SOUTHEAST REGIONAL MEETING.

The Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches in session at Suffolk last May voted aproval of, and ratified the decision, "to hold the first separate meeting of the Southeast Convention with the United Church at Raleigh, a year from this time." The object of this Convention is not to legislate but "to find," to point out the way and take counsel together relative to all the institutions and enterprises of Congregational and Christian Churches of the Southeast—from Washington to New Orleans. A competent program committee was named, which committee has been and is marking out a commendable program, which should commend itself and call together a large assemblage of our common fellowship throughout the Southeast .

In October (23-25), 1934, the mid-West held such a regional meeting at Grinnell, Iowa. From reports and findings, that certainly must have been a worthwhile meeting. The findings are worthy of consideration by the men and women who will likely make up or be interested in our Convention of the Southeast at Raleigh. On this account we are publishing in THE CHRISTIAN SUN this week these findings, or beginning the publication, since the length of them may require two issues. They will pay careful reading by all who care for the work, worship and welfare of our fellowship through the Southeast. In these findings, we are told, from the point of view of those gathered at Grinnell (a) of the function of the Christian College; (b) of Missions; (c) Social Action; (d) Missionary Education; (e) Standards of Giving; (f) The Cent-A-Meal Boxes; (g) Church Officers; (h) Evangelism and the Devotional Life; (i) Leaders of Youth; (j) Pulpit Supply; (k) Race Relations; (l) Christian Missions and World Peace. These "findings" certainly blaze the way if they do not map the road specifically that we are to follow in our Southeast meeting next May. They are the vital topics of the church and cannot, with impunity, be ignored. We invite all our readers to go carefully over "the findings," since they are illuminating, wholesome and helpful even to individuals who are trying to find their way in the path that leads to righteousness and to truth. J. O. A.

REGIONAL MEETING FINDINGS.

The Function of the Christian College:

The College canot function in world leadership unless there is world-consciousness on the campus. The World War which should have helped to produce such a consciousness induced a hateful and exclusive nationalism. Nevertheless there is a wholesome interest in world affairs among college students. There is no doubt but that a leadership in world affairs can be built.

A Christian College can make a particularly valuable contribution in this field. In the first place it is free from state control and therefore political influences and is left free and unhampered in dealing with thees problems. The Christian College can inculcate the Christian graces, namely; good-will, human brotherhood, humility, a hunger for righteousness and peace, and a willingness to go a second mile. These Christian graces surely provide the proper condition for the training of a new type of world leaders.

Missions:

Faced with diminishing funds for our missionary work our churches have sought new appeals and methods. They have appealed to loyalty to denomination, Church and historic work. But this appeal has not been sufficient. We have rethought, reformed and rephrased missions, but this is not enough. We have sought for new motives, but in vain. There are no new motives, we must have a rebirth of the old motives.

There are at least four enduring motives for Misions. These must be a divine concern for the welfare of others; a sympathy that will drive us to their aid. There must be zeal for religion as the only thing that will meet the deepest needs of men. There must be confidence in the unique worth of Jesus in fulfilling human life everywhere and in bringing justice and peace to human society. There must be a new sense of personal responsibility which will come only as our hearts are sensitized to the needs of men by the love of Christ and as we worship a God who requires much at our hands and leaves us no comfort until we go out to meet the needs that love discerns.

Social Action:

1. The Council for Social Action is primarily religious in its aims and methods. Created by bote of the General Council at Oberlin, at its first and only meeting, held at Portland, Maine, on September 1st-3rd, it said "We find our justification and impulse in the teachings of the prophets and of Jesus; we seek no other character. . . . . The gospel of Christ is needed for personal reconstruction and for the fighting of those scourges which destroy the human soul—hate, pride and covetousness."

2. The Council for Social Action proposes a four-fold crusade:

Justice for the worker.
Fair Play for the Farmer.
Equal citizenship rights for the Negro.
Abolition of the war system.

and abundant ilfe, so far as this can be concertedly achieved.

4. In the field of industrial relations, the General Council at Oberlin passed an incisive resolution in support of a program which will be given due consideration also by the Council for Social Action in planning its work on this field. Suggestions for activities in this and all of the other areas mentioned above, however, will be welcomed by the Council for Social Action from all other groups and individuals in the church consecrated to the achievement of a Christian social order.

5. The Council for Social Action, at its Portland meeting, issued a profoundly earnest call to Social Action on a four-fold front suggested above saying, "It is a crusade to which we are called. Crusades need crusaders. This great new movement inaugurated at Oberlin will succeed if

It is committed to no social, economic or political formulae save those consonant with the progressive realization of the human well being. In the carrying forward of its crusades it seeks the widest wisdom of the church and the hearty cooperation of all varieties of opinion to which the church gives shelter.

3. The Council for Social Action conceives its procedure to be three-fold—research, education and action. It stresses the need of exploration and proposes to keep facts ahead of oratory. At each step in this three-fold process it seeks the systematic criticism and constructive suggestion of the entire constituency of the churches. Preserving the historic right of the individual conscience, it proposes to advance the lines of human liberty the ministers and laymen in our six thousand churches respond to the General Council's action and unite for the realization of the Kingdom of God on earth."

Missionary Education:

In 1933, giving for missions ran from 25c to $2.03 per capita in this region. A maiority of our states averaged under one dollar. eW may well seek for the reason. If we atribute it primarily to depression or to lack of things done, our diagnosis is painfully shallow and inadequate. Nothing but a lack of being earnestly and deeply Christian, on the part of many ministers and laymen, can account for it.

First of all then, ours is the task of becoming more fully Christian; for by the very nature of Christianity, to be Christian is to be missionary.

Also, when being a Christian applies to all life; personal, social, political, industrial, international and racial, we shall be on the road to solution. We live in a competitive, profit dominated, "get yours," "let-yourself-go," "have-a-good-time" civilization. The disregard for human welfare, fundamentally contradicts the universal fatherhood of God and brotherhood of man, convictions which are central in Christianity. We cannot be pirates in industry or frivolously self indulgent in personal life and be at heart missionary.

Our first task, therefore, in Missionary Education, is to become more deeply, seriously and fully Christian. Then inspiration and information will make us a missionary people. Through pulpit, Church School, Women's Society, Young People, special programs, district, state, regional and national meetings, magazines, literature, books, making and paying budgets, secretaries and missionaries—we may inform and inspire our people into missionary living and giving.

Standards of Giving:

In view of serious and continuous falling off in benevolence giving by Congregationalists, we recommend three emphases as to standards or bases of giving!

1. We should realize that the present standard of 14 per cent compared with the local expenses is too low. Other denominations have much better records.

2. In view of the diminution of large incomes that formerly furnished a greater proportion of the funds of the missionary boards, it is felt that the number of givers must be increased. Small incomes have always provided the most of the missionary money. This source of support can be largely increased.

3. With greater efforts in the field of missionary education, especially on the part of ministers who are the leaders and key people, and with determined optimism and faith in the missionary character of Christianity, we should sound the note of victory and refuse to cut down the world service program, but rather delve deeper into our spiritual and financial resources.

The Cent-A-Meal Boxes:

Since the contributions of the churches have fallen off 45 per cent since 1930 and are 11 per cent lower now than a year ago at this time, every promising means of securing missionary funds should be encouraged. We commend to the churches the use of the Cent-a-Meal Boxes as having already demonstrated their worth, according to abundant testimony. Some 50,000 are in circulation in Congregation churches, about 11,000 in the Mid-West. But this is only a beginning. The Regional Committee strongly commends their use, as does the General Council, and this, as far as possible, for benevolences only. The cause needs the potential resources of these boxes and the churches need the aid they afford for meeting their apportionment. They also have educational value in the way of interesting children in developing habits of systematic giving and reminding the home of the goodness of God, and the church's responsibility to give the Gospel to all the world. They are especially suited to secure gifts in a time of depression. Every consideration calls for their widespread use.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

Rev. F. C. Lester, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

THE SOUTHEAST FELLOWSHIP.

Today I heard Dr. Daniel A. Poling in his regular Sunday afternoon broadcast as he spoke to the young people on "Sacrifice, the Spirit of Victory." He talks about things that are important and stirs one's heart to the depths. His talk reminded me that we expect to have him share in the Southeast Youth Fellowship program at Raleigh, North Carolina, May 3, 1935.

That means that every young person in our churches of the southeast who can possibly do so should be in Raleigh for that meeting. The Southeast Convention will be in session there May 1st-3rd, and the young people will have sessions of their own on the 3rd. Other youth leaders who will be there include Dr. Roy Helfenstein of Dover, Delaware, and Miss Lucy Eldredge of Dayton, Ohio.

Every section of the southeast should be represented, and every person should be there, if at all possible.

ARE YOU WORKING?

The Summer Schools, Christmas Conferences, Youth Fellowships, and all sorts of groups talk much about building a new and Christian world. Reams of material is pouring from the press daily on the need of rebuilding the world on a Christian basis. The Christian Herald tells of how representatives of youth meeting in New York, said to the older people present, including Mrs. Roosevelt: "We do not want to live in a world like yours."

Resolutions are good, but it takes work to make wheels go round. Talk may be very inspiring but it is worthless unless it produces activity.

Is your Sunday School class, Christian Endeavor Society, or Missionary Society busy building better worship programs, training young people in Christian living, creating sentiment against such things as war, race prejudices, alcoholic beverages, rotten movies, and loose living? Are you busy feeding the poor, ministering to the sick, bringing cheer to despondents, studying the Bible, missions, and changing social conditions, and by socials, worship, friendships and prayer really doing the things that will make a truly Christian world? It is work that counts. Those who reach the top, and those who make the world better, are those who are struggling upward in the night.

If you are in need of helps, please write the editor of this page, who is also Chairman of the Board of Christian Education. We are eager to help. Tell us your needs and let us try to assist you.

OUR SOUTHERN CHURCHES AND ELON COLLEGE.

Recent issues of this paper have been filled with messages concerning our own Elon College. Pictures and pens have been used abundantly to tell the story of Elon and the churches.

But this line has gone out to all the earth for forty years. Since the first students turned again home after drinking from the fountains of knowledge which flow at Elon, the message of Elon and the blessing of Elon have gone into our churches.

Most of our southern ministers and many of our best church workers have learned at Elon. They speak what they know, much of which they learned at Elon. Religion has had a central place in the studies and activities at Elon, and rich religious influence has flowed from Elon to the churches.

That is why the churches built Elon College, and why they now support it. The churches believe in education that is religious and religion that is educated. The churches know that this is the road towards progress, and they want to grow. The churches want religion to be central in their college, else there is no reason for a church school.

But the churches must give before they receive. They had to build Elon before Elon could bless them. Now they must maintain Elon or lose that shining light. Now is the time for all good churches to come to the support of their college.

ELON SUMMER SCHOOL DATE CHANGED.

Plans are under way for the merging of the Blue Ridge and Elon Summer School of Leadership Training. This seems to be the wise thing to do for several reasons, and is made very necessary because of reduced budgets.

Blue Ridge has been having the Student Summer Service Workers present for training before going out to work. This makes it necessary for the combined school to be held in June. The definite date has not been set, but it will probably be about the last of June. All those interested—and I hope that includes all—will please take note of the change. Suggestions concerning the exact date will be appreciated, if they come soon. Write me at once if you have an idea and it will be received with thanks.

THE TENTH LEGION.

One division of Christian Endeavor is called the Tenth Legion. Members of this group sign a pledge to give one tenth of their income to Christ and the Church. During the fifty-four years of Christian Endeavor millions of young people have signed this pledge and have found the joy of Christian stewardship. This helps to account for the marvelous success of Christian Endeavor in expansion and in constructive work. Every society should have an active leader of the Tenth Legion—one who will keep the matter of stewardship and tithing before the members.

And churches need to follow the example of Christian Endeavor in this. The Bible teaches tithing; the law commands it; the prophets urge it. Jesus said it ought to be done, and Paul assumed that it would be done even by Gentile Christians. The Church that has no other "rule of faith and practice" save the Bible will have a hard time explaining why it does not tithe.

When our churches begin to tithe they will pay all their debts and denominational obligations. They will quit saying, "I can't" and will begin to succeed in a way we have not yet dreamed. But now we are keeping the Lord's money in our own hands while we profess to follow Biblical teachings and expect God's blessings. Is this the reason why our souls are so lean ("The liberal soul shall grow fat"), and we fail to grow. My church is trying the tithing system from January 1st to Easter. If all will join in this plan, it will make the Church new. Why don't all church people tithe? They certainly would not do worse than they have the other way. Let's read Malachi 3 and put God to the test.

WANTED: YOUTH FOR THE KINGDOM.

Christian Endeavor Topic for Feb. 3, 1935.
I Tim. 4:6-16.

You might like to cooperate with your pastor and make this meeting one for the entire church.

In preparation for this meeting, study the history of Christian Endeavor found in the June and July, 1934, issues of The Christian Herald under the title, "The Sun Never Sets on Christian Endeavor."

Worship Program.

Theme: "For Me To Live Is Christ."
Meditation:

"Rise! for the day is passing,
And you lie dreaming on;
The others have buckled their armour,
And forth to the fight are gone;
A place in the ranks awaits you,
Each man has some part to play;
The Past and the Future are nothing,
In the face of the stern Today.

"Rise from your dreams of the Future—
Of gaining some hard-fought field;
Of storming some airy fortress,
Of bidding some giant yield;
Your future has deeds of glory,
Of honor (God grant it may!)
But your arm will never be stronger,
Or the need so great as Today."

Scripture: I Timothy 4:6-16.
Prayer followed with Lord's Prayer.
Develop these thoughts:

A Christian Is—

A Mind—Through which Christ thinks.
A Heart—Through which Christ loves.
A Voice—Through which Christ speaks.
A Hand—Through which Christ helps.

Hymn: "O Master, Let Me Walk With Thee."

Have three people carefully study the following questions and lead the group in a discussion or give talks.

These questions were studied by the young people who attended the Defiance Holiday Conference, and last week this page carried the answer made by the group to the second question. The Board of Christian Education can furnish you with information relative to the other questions.

1. What Does It Mean to be a Christian in 1935?
2. How Can We Help Others to Become Christian?
3. What are the next steps in the building of a Christian World?
   a. What can Christian young people do about:

Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

PETER'S DENIAL.

Lesson IV—January 27, 1935.

Golden Text: "Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall."—I Cor. 10: 12.

Lesson Text: Mark 14:27-31, 54, 66-72.

Jesus knew what was in man. He could read the human heart. He foresaw what was going to happen. He therefore, frankly told His disciples that they were going to be offended, "caused to stumble," "scandalized"—the Greek word is "skandalize," caused to fall away that very night. Just as the sheep become scattered when the shepherd is taken from them, just so would the disciples break up, desert Him, and flee. Jesus knows our divine possibilities, but He also knows our human limitations.

"After I Am Raised Up."

Jesus knew His enemies were going to put Him to death. But He knew they could not keep Him in the bonds of death. Here is thrilling evidence of his certain faith in His rising from the dead. Before it all happens, indeed before they fully understand what He is talking about, He makes an engagement to meet them in Galilee, in the old familiar scenes. Peter could not forget this incident, and when he told the story of Jesus which John Mark later wrote down in what we call the gospel of Mark, he included these significant words of Jesus—"After I am raised up, I will go before you to Galilee." On another occasion Jesus said, "I go to prepare a place for you." Let us in simple faith take the Master at His word. He demonstrated that He is to be trusted in this matter.

Although All, Yet Not I.

Simon Peter would not hear to such a thing, at least not for himself. The other disciples might be cowards, "fraidy-cats," deserters, but not he. No sir! And when the Master added insult to injury by saying that even before morning Peter would deny Him thrice, he "boiled over"—he spake exceeding vehemently, and when Peter spoke exceeding vehemently we may be sure he made it emphatic. The others might desert Jesus, but not Peter. Not much. Die with or for you, yes. But deny you, never.

It was, of course, over-confidence. It was the cause of Peter's downfall, as it has been the cause of many a man's downfall. Confidence is not only good, but necessary. But over-confidence—what woe it has caused. If any man thinketh that he standeth, let him take heed lest he fall.

So Said They All.

We sometimes forget that the other disciples also affirmed their devotion and pledged their loyalty to Jesus, but they also forsook Him and fled. As a matter of fact they did not have quite as much spunk as Peter, for he actually followed Jesus and went even into the court-yard of the high priest. It is one thing to declare our loyalty and devotion to our ideals; it is quite another thing to be true to them in the hour of testing.

Warming Himself in the Light of the Fire.

There was no harm in that. The night air was chill, and Peter stepped up within the circle of light and within the range of the heat to warm himself. That was all right. The trouble was not in where he was, but in the way in which he was behaving himself. "He was not there as an open disciple of Jesus, but was associating with His enemies as though he were one of them. He was hiding his real character and dissembling. He probably talked and jested with the servant and officers as though he were as much amused or incensed at the strange prisoner as they were themselves. It took a keen eye to detect any differnce between him and them." It is thus today. Many Christians associate with the people of the world as though they were one with them, moved by the same motives and seeking the same ends and having the same spirit. They talk and jest with them, indulge in the same pleasures and use the same means and methods as the people of the world. They may even take the same attitude towards religion and make light of it, as though it were mockery." Of course we must meet with people of this world and mingle with them, but we should always be true in word and spirit to our Master.

He Denied . . . Again He Denied . . . He Began to Curse and to Swear "Know Not This Man."

Poor old Simon Peter. Things got too hot for him at that fire. And the worst feature about it all was that is was started by a little servant girl. Sometimes it does not take much to make us deny our Lord when we are in the wrong place or with the wrong crowd. Let every young person be especially careful of the company he keeps and the places he visits. It is never easy to be true to Christ, but there are some people and some places which make it exceedingly difficult for us to be true to our Master.

As a matter of fact, Peter's downfall had been gradual, as is usually the case. Over-confidence, boasting, loss of temper—he cut off the ear of the servant of the high priest—following Jesus afar off, associating with the enemies of Jesus, denial, cursing and swearing—thus it went. Once a man starts lagging behind Christ it is so easy to go from bad to worse.

He Wept.

"And Peter called to mind the word that Jesus had said unto him, and when he thought thereon, he wept." Not because he was afraid of the penalty, but because he had denied his Lord, because he had failed Him, because he had made a sorry mess of things, because he was desperately ashamed of himself. He was truly penitent. There are few pictures in the New Testament more moving than the picture of that strong, rugged, fearless fisherman sobbing as if his heart would break, weeping because of shame and remorse. There is a godly sorrow that worketh unto repentance. It was because of this fact that when Jesus sent the message back on the first Easter morning He said, "Tell the disciples, and Peter." The tragedies of life do not come from denying our Lord, although that is bad enough. The tragedies come from lack of penitence, from callousness, from indifference. Peter is not an example in all things, but he is an example in his penitence and in his new obedience. A good man may fall, but he gets up again and strives more strenuously to walk in the right path.

In every church we must have our warriors, our workers, our financiers, our singers, the night watch of intercessors who give God no rest. Some must open the doors, some light the lamps, some teach, some preach the gospel. The smallest wheel in a big machine is able to promote or to impair the entire movement; so the most insignificant workers of the church are needed for the well-being and successful operation of the whole.

FAMILY ALTAR

Conducted by H. E. Rountree
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy

MONDAY.

How Shall We Pay—Or—Can We.

"What shall a man give in exchange for his soul?"—Matt. 16:26.

"Is there no way to pay for prayers,
Firelight or polished floors?
How much is a honeysuckle worth
Nodding at open doors?

"How shall I pay for April rains?
What does a new moon cost?
Who can compute my debts against Starlight as sharp as frost?

"I know the price of a velvet gown,
Rooms that are candle gay,
Street corner roses and lollipops,
Orchids, and love in May.

"But odor of cinnamon and heliotrope,
Sunlight on new-turned earth,
The way I feel when you smile at me,
Tell me, what are these worth?"

—Helen Welshimer.

Prayer—Our dear Father, contemplations of Thy blessings humble us. The very thought of them gives us light. When we are poor, we are rich, and even in these we shall not want. Be thou the shepherd of our souls this day. In His name we ask it.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

Love, Mercy.

There is a natural tendency to mercy in the human heart. However this tendency can be exercised only to the extent of pity and be nothing more than a bit of pity from the heart of a man of the world.

This is well explained in the thirteenth chapter of first Corinthians. "Though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor and have not love it profiteth me nothing." Religion without love is nothing, and a man without love is not a good man. He is one who assays to be good just to be different, different from the church and different from the way God would have him go,—a kind of self-righteous man.

To be good, one must be good for goodness' sake; he is one who would be right for righteousness' sake. Thus to love justice and mercy are Siamese-twin characteristics of a true Christian. One cannot live without the other. Justice, without love of mercy, may be upright, but it is upright like a marble column, and as hard and as cold.

Christ talks about this. Once he was asked, "Who shall be the greatest in the kingdom?" And He took a little child and set him in their midst and said, "Except ye become as little children, ye shall in no wise enter into the kingdom of heaven." At another time He said, "The greatest in the kingdom shall be the servant of all."

And so it is truly said, "If God gives a man an abundance of this world's goods, it is not that he may sit in idleness, but that he may become a benefactor of men. If he makes a man stronger than his brothers, it is not for tyranny, but that he may help the weak. If he gives a man education, it is not that he may make others his servants, but that he may utilize his learning for a blessing to humanity."

Prayer—Almighty God Thou knowest best for us. We pray Thee to sanctify us with trust of heart, and help us daily to say and do, "Thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven."—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

How Count Life.

"A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth."—Luke 12:15.

"Count your garden by the flowers,
Never by the leaves that fall.
Count your days by golden hours,
Don't remember clouds at all.

"Count your nights by stars, not shadows,
Count your life with smiles, not tears;
And with joy through all your life-time,
Count your age by friends, not years."

—Dixie Wilson.

Prayer—Dear Father, the giver of all good and perfect gifts, help us to find the secret wells of life's loveliness. We would know the paths laid out for us that we may choose aright and fill our hearts with a song that would be fashioned with soulful appreciation of the true, and make us what we ought to be. In His name we ask it.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

To The War!

"And Moses said to the children of Gad and to the children of Reuben, shall your brethren go to the war, and shall ye sit here?"—Num. 32:6-15.

Whenever there is a war for the right, you will find the tribes of Reuben and of Gad sitting at home, tending their fields and their cattle, making money, safely looking on while their brothers are risking their all for country and God. It is so in the war against the saloon, against drugs, against the debauchery of the press, against the criminal politicians, against war, and against infidelity.

Is there a greater sin than to sit still and do nothing when the call from God is to shoulder muskets and join the army of the Lord? Excuses? There are thousands of them, not one of which will stand in the Great Day.

Prayer—Lord, preserve us from cowardice! Lord, help us to be decently heroes!—Amen.

FRIDAY.

The Never-Old.

"Who satisfieth thy mouth with good things so that thy youth is renewed like the eagle."—Ps. 103:5.

"They who can smile when others hate,
Nor bind the heart with frosts of fate,
Their feet will go with laughter bold
The green roads of the never old.

"They who can let the spirit shine
And keep the heart a lighted shrine,
Their feet will glide with fire of gold
The green roads of the never old.

"They who can put the self aside
And in love's saddle leap and ride,
Their eyes will see the gates unfold
To green roads of the never old."

—Edwin Markham.

Prayer—Dear Lord, Our God, we would be so near to Thee that if we stretched our hand out, we would feel Thine own. We would live so close to Thee that no dark experience would shake our faith. We would live so near to Thee that Thou wouldst hear our lowest whisper, yea, our yearning thoughts. This we ask for today, in the name of Jesus.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

We Know.

"Hereby we know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren."—John 3:14.

Christian experience brings to one not only a sense of sinlessness, but a sense of love. After all, that is the first and second commandment.

There are two types of this love. One is in persons who are self-centered and regard other people as on a lower level of consideration. The other is the unselfish life wherein the good of others and consideration for others is the actuating motive in their actions.

This is something that merely a law abiding or moral citizen can never know, because law cannot give us this experience. Law can be made in the spirit of righteousness and justice and by righteous and just people, but law can never impart to us the power to choose, of ourselves, between right and wrong. God only gives that power to all who pay the price, and it is found in love.

Prayer—Our Father, we would conquer. Give us Thy love that conquers. Give us power to tremble under foot every accusing voice. In Christ's name, we ask it.—Amen.

SUNDAY.

Bare Tyre.

"Thou shalt be a place for the spreading of nets."—Ezekiel 26:7-14.

Haughty Tyre, mistress of the nations, now crumbled into dust at the word of the Lord. Lovely Tyre, beautiful with temples and fair women, thou art naked for thy sins, bare rocks where fishermen spread their nets to dry them. And so it is with all iniquity.

Let us never think to make any gain out of a wrong. Let no human ingenuity expect to circumvent Jehovah. All Tyres shall gall, and be given over to fish-nets. There never has been, there never will be the least profit in the least or the greatest sin.

Prayer—I will be warned in time. I will have prudence in advance. I will not live in Tyre.—Amen.

WHERE THERE'S DRINK, THERE'S DANGER.

Write it over every gate,
On the church and halls of state,
On the hearts of every band,
In the laws of every land,—
Where there's drink, there's danger.

Write it on our ships that sail
Borne along by storm and gale;
Write it large in letters plain
Over every land and main,—
Where there's drink, there's danger.

Write it on the ships that fly;
Write it, pilots, sailing high;
Write it on the airplane's wing,
Let each "zoom" this warning bring,—
Where there's drink, there's danger.

Write it on the motor car,
Speeding, racing everywhere;
See the wrecks in morgue and jail;
Write lest others, too, shall fail,—
Where there's drink, there's danger.

Keep it in the nation's laws,
It shall be a holy cause;
Write it clear in every heart,
Let it be of life a part,—
Where there's drink, there's danger.

CHRIST, THE FOUNDATION OF CHRISTIAN FAITH.

By John G. Truitt, D. D.

"The same was in the beginning with God."—John 1:2.

When we join John in the first verses of his Gospel we come upon some very academic territory. And we might ask ourselves the question: What does a congregation of men, women, young people, and children such as this care about academic questions? What does it matter whether Jesus "was from the beginning," or not? What does it matter whether He was God manifesting Himself in the flesh, or not? What do a few lines written so long ago matter anyhow, to a modern congregation bent on meeting the issues of the present day? Well, my friends, it matters a very great deal.

Because you are Christians you wish to examine the bed-rock foundations of your faith. It means everything as to whether you are deluded in your beliefs, and that some day in a crisis of life you will wake up to find them false. It means everything when all else sometime, somewhere may seem to be slipping from under you to find that a sure faith, anchored to a solid rock, holds. You are neither a fish nor a fool, to swallow whatever is handed you just because it is handed you; you want to see something of the facts of its foundation, and to know something of the logic of its implications. You call yourself Christian. Who is Christ? You worship God. What do you know about Him? You feel yourself to be but a finite creature in an earth-bound world. How can you know an infinite God in a spiritual world that all other worlds make? Yes, these are academic questions, and as a Christian you cannot escape them.

Again, for the sake of your worship, these questions matter a great deal. Worship, we say, is more necessary to the full development of man than physical food. How shall we worship with intelligence as Christians without a knowledge of Christ?

And again these academic questions do matter a great deal in making our faith so vital and active as to be a daily working tool in our hands. How much we do by faith! No saying was ever truer than "We walk by faith." And for the clarifying of our faith, giving it a practical value, and making it daily useful we need to consider Jesus, and God, and God's revelations to man.

Our text as much as says, Jesus was in the beginning with God: "The same was in the beginning with God." Our text as good as says, Jesus was God. No sooner do we read that than we say, How could that be? It is not the first time the question has been asked. When Jesus told Nicodemus that he needed to be born again, he in turn asked Him, "How can these things be?"

Let us put it this way: In so far as it was consistent and necessary for God to reveal Himself on earth He was in Jesus Christ. But someone will say, But that is not enough. What is not enough? You have not measured Jesus yet! The inspired writer of the book of Hebrews, telling of all the wonders of God, His grace, His love, His power, and His mercy as expressed throughout the Old Testament shows how Jesus is better than all the ceremonies and systems, covenants and testaments therein made. The Jesus that could stand by the well curb near Sychar and cause a poor sinner who had decided that God had forgotten there ever was such a person to look into the face of God and become a new creature; the man who could stand in the midst of a crowded house of cringing and carping critics and forgive a dying man of his sins, and then hand him his life for good measure; the Jesus who could hang bleeding, beaten, dying upon the cross, and cry, "Father, forgive them for they know not what they do"; the Jesus who could live in this old world as clean as the gates of heaven, and so holy that to touch His garment's hem was to be transformed from sickness unto health; the Jesus who could teach as He taught, serve as He served, love as He loved, and forgive as He forgave, has not yet been measured by the mind of man. He was a king that entered Jerusalem triumphantly, but you and I have seen the evidences of his kingship, after nearly two thousand years, far clearer than the multitudes who sang His praises on that day could; and yet Bruce Barton can well write an entire book in our own day calling Him the "Man Nobody Knows."

How would God act among men? Look at Jesus! How would the problems of sin, and sickness, and want, and doubt, and fear, and malice, and hypocracy be handled by God? Follow Jesus. See the touch of His hand, hear the words of His lips, see the light of His face, the genuineness of His soul, and answer your own question. "How sayest thou then: Show us the Father? He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father." You would expect those words to recur to the mind of John as he writes his Gospel story, for John is telling us over and over that Jesus is an understandable, and therefore wonderful manifestation of God in the flesh.

Hence in these opening verses of his Gospel he is saying that God is eternal, that He is the Creator, the He is life-giving, and that He is mission-giving. Look at God, says John, and then behold Jesus! The God who created the universe and is from everlasting to everlasting desired to be better known to the children of His heart and hand. Jesus is the result of that council. Jesus is the way of that wisdom and wish. Am I satisfied? If I have looked steadfastly and adoringly and faithfully upon Him, I am. Are you satisfied with God's goodness in sending Jesus so you might have a firm foundation for your everlasting faith? Then you have known Him, loved Him, and are seeking to serve Him. Yes, I am satisfied. Is Jesus satisfied?

Jesus is not satisfied unless we accept the sense of mission which He places upon our lives. It is the way of God to give work to do, to challenge to the use of our best powers, to send us to others in loving helping service. It is in verse six of these opening verses: "There was a man sent from God." God has always trusted the human heart, and offered the guidance of divine wisdom. Jesus Himself says he was sent from God. And in our lessons here we are being told that the forerunner of Jesus was sent from God. In this same Gospel we are told by Jesus, that just as he was sent from God just so is He sending us. Yes, we are satisfied with Jesus, if we know Him and love Him. Is He satisfied with us? Yes, if we go. If being sent we accept the mission and serve, it will be a constant revelation of the goodness of God to others.

And then whenever we are thanked for some deed of Christian kindness we shall begin to see the meaning of Paul's words: "Not I . . . but Christ, that dwelleth in me." And thus we shall come to know that we are "co-workers, together with God, for "The same (Christ who dwells in our hearts) was in the beginning with God."

God, being God, should have some way of making doubtful, yet anxious, men and women understand more than a flooded landscape, a smoking moutain, a burning bush, or a riven rock,—or even commandments written on stone, and he does have. "There was a man sent from God!" And greater still "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten son . . . " And Jesus having Himself showed the way, re-sent the men, and women, and youth of the world, saying, "Come, follow me."

Christian Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

Don't you want to make an investment this year that will bring to you real joy! An investment that will be lasting and worth while. If you do, then make an investment in the Christian Orphanage. If you are not interested in the Christian Orphanage, why not? Is it because you have not invested anything in it, or is it because you are not interested in the fatherless children? Isn't it a fact if you buy a five dollar suit of clothes that you are not much interested in it because you don't have much invested in it; but if you pay fifty dollars for a suit you will be interested in it and take the best of care to keep it clean and spotless because you have something invested in it. You will get a lot of joy out of wearing it because you appreciate it.

I believe the most joy I ever got out of a contribution was years ago when I had more money than I have now and was holding a job with a splendid salary attached to it. I undertook to support a little child in this institution. It gave me lots of real joy to mail my check each month to support that little child.

Some years ago a little girl came to the Christian Orphanage to live. She had no other home to which she could go. By your help she has been given a chance. When she graduated in High School a friend made it possible for her to get a business education. She graduated with honors. She has accepted a good position and has gone out in the world to face its problems and make her way.

It was with your contribution from time to time that this fine young woman has been given a chance to be of service to humanity.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

WOMEN DRINKERS.

Every generation has had its women who could carry their liquor—and did. But if reports are true, women today take their cocktails along with the men, and bid fair to outdrink their brothers in the race for prosperity through liquor. Because of this growing custom, writers in popular journals, and even the wife of the President, have urged the necessity of educating young girls in the art of drinking.

Yet, despite society's endorsement of the habit, there is inherent in the minds of all who have at heart the good of society and the preservation of the race a deep repulsion to the drink habit among women. A drunken father of a family has always been regarded as pretty hopeless; but when the mother takes up the habit, no basis for decency in the family is left.

But women are paying the price for their indulgence. O. O. McIntyre, popular columnist, recently used a letter from a nurse in a private sanitarium which described the "rich debauchees" —young women addicts of liquor and drugs. To the columnist the nurse wrote that cocktail parties are the getaway barriers for most of the cases which finally end up in the sanitarium.

A writer in the Wall Street Journal of August 3rd, reports that the increase in drinking among women since repeal has produced "whiskey faces" and given a new problem to the beauty specialists. The whiskey face is described as one in which "the veins stand out, lines hard, and complexion bad." The writer says: "The duty of every person who has the American woman's beauty at heart is to get her back on the water wagon just as soon as possible."

Testimony as to the effect of alcohol on women was made by Dame Louise McIlroy, professor of obstetrics at a hospital in London. Speaking to the World Congress on Alcoholism, Dame McIlroy declared that alcoholism among women is more important than among men; that it has a more deleterious effect on the race; that its cost to the country is great in its effects upon motherhood.—Christian Advocate.

THE UNITED CHURCH IN THE SOUTHEAST.

building and adequate educational plant would comfortably house a meeting of the General Council, and it does regularly house a large congregation and a church school developed to a high state of efficiency.

There are other commodious and beautiful churches in the group. One is immediately impressed with such a building as that of the Norfolk Christian Temple. It sets a high standard for our churches in its architectural beauty and its provision for efficient church activities. The United Church at Raleigh and the Church of Wide Fellowship at Southern Pines are examples of beauty and adequate church plants. I should like to tell the story of the eighteen or twenty churches that it was my privilege to visit, but space forbids.

A visitor from the North is immediately impressed by the size and vigor of the rural churches of the Southern Convention. In the North we have become accustomed to the idea that rural churches are fading out of the picture, but in the South we find large and vigorous church organizations in the open country carrying on a complete program of community service. There seems to be a stability in the rural areas of the South that makes possible the continuance of these strong churches.

An institution that makes a very strong appeal to the churches in the Southeast and for which there is great loyalty is the Christian orphanage located near Elon College. This institution with its commodious building houses an interesting company of boys and girls whose educational privileges are extended to include the college training offered at Elon.

The Congregational and Christian churches are well represented in educational leadership through out the Southeast with Elon College in North Carolina, Piedmont College in Georgia, Berea College in Kentucky, of distinctly Congregational origin though now quite independent, and Rollins College in Florida which is just now preparing to celebrate its fiftieth anniversary. To this list should be added Thorsby Institute in Alabama, a secondary school of high grade, and Pleasant Hill Academy in Tennessee. The Southern Convention yields to Alabama the supervision of Southern Union College, at Wadley, which after having been closed has been thoroughly reorganized and was reopened at the beginning of the school year with a modern educational program. Atlanta Theological Seminary Foundation, which is connected with Vanderbilt School of Religion, is preparing ministers on the graduate level for the southern churches.

brought out by the Christmas season. It was not planned by the ministers but by the organist of St. Michael's Church.

At the last meeting of our Ministerial Union, I gave the paper entitled: "Active Cooperation of Christian Communions."

With best wishes for the coming year I am cordially yours,

FROM WINDSOR, VIRGINIA.

A beautiful Christmas cantata and pageant, postponed from the Christmas season, on account of sickness, was given at the Windsor (Va.) Christian Church on the second Sunday night, under the auspices of the Young People's Missionary Society. It was the story of the birth of Christ, beautiful in design and well rendered in all of its parts. The house was crowded and a spirit of appreciation and reverence prevailed. The offering taken for the Young People's work was $7.03.

OBITUARIES

BUSICK.

J. J. Busick, aged 71, a life-long member of Hines Chapel Christian Church and its Senior Deacon, was called to his reward January 3, 1935. The body was laid to rest beside his wife at Freedens Lutheran Church. Two sons and two daughters are left behind. May the Compassion of Jesus comfort them. Five miristers assisted with the service.

B. J. EARP.

HUFFINES.

Mrs. Mary Susan Huffines, for many years a member of Hines Chapel, was called to her reward on January 8, 1935, at the age of 72. The body was laid to rest iu the cemetery at her church. Four ministers had part in the service: Revs. J. L. Neese, C. P. Bowles, D. R. Profitt and the Pastor. Four daughters are left without a mother. May the Compassion of Jesus comfort them.

Whereas Sargeant Hanbury left his earthly labors on December 5, 1934, to report to his Chief coucerning his life's work, therefore be it resolved:

First. That the First Christian Church records its grateful appreciation for the long and useful life of the deceased, and Second. That we bow humbly in submission to the Divine will and renew our efforts to carry on where our brother left off;

Third. That we extend to the family our sincere sympathy in their bereavement and remind them that the Great Comforter will sustain them always, if trust is in Him; and Fourth. That a copy of these resolutions be entered in the records of the church, a copy be sent to members of the family, and a copy be sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

VOLUME LXXXVII. RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, JANUARY 31, 1935. NUMBER 5.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

A Sanctuary for Human Beings.—

Although there are arrangements for shooting them on as large as possible a scale, nobody has started any protection-for-humans sanctuary where they cannot be shot.—G. B. Shaw.

World Court Rejected.—

By a vote of 52 to 36, the Senate this week rejected the resolution ratifying American adherence to the World Court in one of the surprise votes of the present session. Thus lacking seven votes of the necessary two-thirds, both friends and foes of American adherence declared that the court issue was dead for some time at least.

Christmas in Russia.—

The forty churches still open in Moscow, which used to be called the "City of Forty times Forty Churches," were crowded with worshippers on Christmas Eve. Harold Denny, special correspondent of the New York Times, reported that the majority of the worshippers were elderly people in rusty overcoats. Some looked as if they had once been prosperous. Some of the old women their heads covered with woolen shawls, looked like the wretched creatures one sees scrubbing hotel floors late at night. There was, however, a surprising number of young men and women among them, some well dressed and others obviously peasants, who had recently migrated to the metropolis.—The Presbyterian of the South.

Further Cuts in Power Rates.—

"Further reductions of electric power rates appeared in prospect yesterday," says a statement in the local press. During the past few years, there has been a gradual reduction in power rates as compared with the prices of commodities. This has been only right, because increrased consumption of power and reduced operating costs that have naturally followed should have made such reductions possible. However, electricity, today, is one of the creapest of all the servants of mankind, and it would be a serious mistake on the part of the public to demand reductions that might in any way curtail service. If the continued increase in the use of power justifies a further reduction at this time, so well and good. But reduction in rates at the cost of service, or even at the cost of a fair return on investment, will ultimately be expensive.

Cooperatives Beat Chain Stores.—

A news release from the Cooperative League of New York informs us that the average sales increase reported by member societies of the Central Cooperative Wholesale for the first half of the past year has been in excess of 30 per cent. In some places cooperative sales jumped 100 per cent in that time. Simultaneously chain store sales increased for the same period rose 9.8 and 4.6 in two instances and decreased 3.4 in another instance; all of them being widely flung organizations. Meanwhile the United States bureau of labor statistics has made a comprehensive study of consumers' cooperatives and has released a report showing that 534 cooperatives during 1933 made a net saving of 5.5 per cent on total sales, or the equivalent of a saving of 23.5 per cent if figured on capital stock. And these societies in spite of the depression were able during the years 1929-1934 to make trading gains which amounted to $7,419,999. Not bad for organizations with a total membership of 225,000. In the light of these figures, anyone who refuses to become interested in the cooperative movement because he thinks it cannot buck the chain stores is decidedly backing the wrong horse.—The Christian Century.

At the President's Ball.—

More than 7,000 benefit balls were given on Wednesday night in honor of President Roosevelt, and for the purpose of raising money in the fight against infantile paralysis. The President is quoted as saying: "I like this kind of birthday." All over the country gay crowds gathered, and literally millions of dollarrs poured into the coffers of this health program. Yet there is in this something that causes one to stop and ponder. Has America gone pleasure mad? If the President, instead of urging that our young people go and carouse and dance, that little children might be saved from physical suffering, had asked that these same people remain at home on his birthday, giving of their little of their much to such a cause, what would the answer have been? If attendance at prayer meeting on this night which has until recently been looked upon as "prayer meeting night" had been urged, would there have been 7,000 extra prayer meetings throughout the country? Can we dance ourselves out of the dark, or must we pray our way? Is the Church out of tune with the times, or is it following the pace set by our government? Will there arise a Daniel to interpret the hand-writing on the wall? Whither are we bound? Does the end justify the means?

Union Heads Drafting Labor Bill.—

Working behind a curtain of secrecy, trade union leaders are drafting plans to gain, if possible, dictatorial control of industrial labor in America. The Wagner Labor Disputes Bill, which was shelved by the last Congress, is being revamped, and will be supported as an independent bill, we are told, unless union officials can gain the whip hand over all industrial labor through revision of the National Recovery Act. This is being opposed by such organizations as the National Association of Manufacturers, who call upon the government to "Protect men in their right to work. . . Refrain from policies which tend to force men into labor organizations. . . Encourage local settlements of disputes. . . recognize the equal rights of minorities or individuals to bargain for themselves." They add: "We believe sympathetic or general strikes or lockouts, blacklists, and boycotts should be prohibited." Certainly there is a third element entering this dispute which should have something to say. We refer to the public in general, which seems to get short shrift from both organized labor and big business. There is no necessity for a multiplicity of laws and rules to guide employer and employee in the settlement of their problems. These problems will be solved when the Golden Rule is substituted for the rule of gold—and only then.

Do University Students Lose Their Religion?—

Winifred Cherrington Jones, writing in Advance, raises this question. She has tried to answer it to her own satisfaction, and her answer is, in part: "Those with whom I talked agree that a good many students in the university lack either belief or interest in religion . . . Some become confused through failure to recognize their early religious tenets and their new thinking in certain courses, especially in elementary science, . . . due largely to the fact that many of these elementary courses are taught by the younger instructors, not yet fully stabilized and so not prepared to guide wisely the thinking of those whose beliefs are being shaken; they are destructive, not constructive critics. . . There is an inclination to blame indifference more than doubt for inactivity in religious affairs." Miss Jones says, however, that "there is a belief that some of those who lose out at the beginning of their university days get their bearings as they become more advanced, though the religion they find may differ from that which they lost. One explanation . . . is that students, who in elementary science courses accepted as absolute facts certain ideas presented, come to see that they are not absolute after all, and so turn to reconsider religion." While there is some slipping away in university life, it looks "as though the slipping, in many cases, began before high school days were over." If one would summarize, it only emphasizes the need for the small Christian College as a corrective force in a world that is fast tending toward the superficial and material. University students do lose their religion in many cases, but it is not because of knowledge they acquire, but because of theories that have never been proven, and are often abandoned before the damage that they have done to the student has been corrected.

NOTES-PERSONALS

News from the Churches.

The "Editorial Correspondence" in last week's Sun signed J. O. A. should have been dated Florida, Sanitarium, Orlando, Fla.

Dr. James H. Lightbourne, pastor of our Burlington Church, was the guest preacher at the College Church last Sunday morning at 11:00 o'clock.

Rev. F. Ervin Hyde, pastor of Monticello Christian Church, is confined to his bed and was unable to fill his appointment last Sunday.

Rev. Wm. T. Scott, pastor of our Winston-Salem Church, attended the mid-year meeting at Evanston, Ill., last week.

Rev. Milo J. Sweet of Elon College, and pastor-at-large for the Carolinas and Georgia, attended the mid-year meeting of the Congregational Christian Church, Evanston, Ill., last week.

Dr. Edwards, head of Physics Department of Duke University, was chapel speaker at the College Friday. Dr .Edwards gave a very interesting report on the recent meeting of scientists held in Pittsburgh. He was greatly enjoyed by faculty and students.

The readers of The Christian Sun are anxious for the health of Dr. Atkinson, who is now in Florida for rest and recuperation. Doctor is improving slowly but surely. He writes optimistically of himself and always interested in the enterprises of the church. He will appreciate hearing from those interested. His address is Florida Sanitarium, Orlando, Fla.

In the week's correspondence comes a note from Brother W. T. Meacham in which he informs us: "I am planning to enter the evangelistic work at a very early date and will appreciate an invitation from any of our pastors and members of the Congregational and Christian Churches of the Alabama and Georgia and Alabama Conferences. If I am needed write me at Route 2, Box 92, Roanoke, Alabama." Churches in these conferences anticipating a revival would do well to confer with this good brother.

Our Greensboro Church has had a most delightful and inspirational experience in tithing. About four-fifths of its membership tithed for a period of thirteen weeks, bringing the entire tithe into the church. Last Sunday they voted to continue the practice of tithing, with the hope of inducing every wage earning member of the church to cooperate. What a great blessing would come to our people if the entire membership in the Southern Convention would begin now to practice tithing as an act of Christian stewardship and of earnest worship?

ANSWERS TO DR. ATKINSON'S OPEN LETTER.

(Below we print some of the replies received to Dr. Atkinson's letter, asking for answers to the open question put in Christian Sun some weeks ago as to why the Christian Church had not grown in comparison with other denominations. The public will perhaps read these answers with interest.)

I have been thinking for some time of some very pertinent questions lying before the Western North Carolina Christian Conference. A fellow worker in asking these same questions of the editor of The Christian Sun in the December 13, 1934 number of the paper, aroused a deeper interest in the heart and mind of the writer of this article, a desire to know what others would say in regard to these questions. I have not so far been able to find anyone attempting to answer them. So by the Grace of God that strengthens and sustains me, I am giving my personal views, after much meditation and prayer that God might through His humble servant at least help us to think of the deplorable conditions in which we as ministers and laymen of the Christian Church find ourselves.

Question number one was: Why are we not growing in church membership?

I would say, in the first place, we, as ministers and church members, have so commercialized our religion that there is no inducement to those who are not members. Yet, no opportunity to know what real church membership should mean to those who join. Not until the churches prove to the world that "We are the body of Christ, and members in particular," by our daily living, will our young people have any desire to affiliate themselves with the church. Jesus Christ expects Christians to be living examples of His presence; and if we fail to live that kind of life as church members, we are not good witnesses for Christ. In the church today there is among ministers and laymen, malice, hatred, strife, and many other things that should not be. Yet we call ourselves Christian and want others to accept the sacred obligations of church membership under the existing circumstances. Let all the things that do not really belong to the Christian way of life be put aside, and Christians be governed "not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit," saith the Lord, and see our churches grow.

Question number two: Why are we not growing in the establishment of new churches?

Young ministers and some of our older ones too, have been working on plans of consolidation so that our rural churches may be carried to the city or town or several churches consolidated into one establishment so that a pastor can give his entire time to that greater church. So many of our preachers think they have too much religion to get into some poor rural churches and there do a good deed "unto the least of these my brethren," in order to do it unto him, but want some great congregation to preach to and a fat pocket-book to carry home. As long as our religion will not carry us to places of humility where the gospel is needed even without remuneration if necessary, I seriously doubt if God would be pleased for us to carry it anywhere. We are not establishing new churches because we are destroying the ones already established. God calls men to minister unto the poor, the needy, the orphans and widows. I believe God wants His church in every community and will see to it that it is taken care of if we will let Him be our guide. The ministry itself, I believe, is the cause of no new churches being established.

Question number three: Why are we not growing in our gifts and benevolences?

Speaking strictly from the viewpoint of the W. N. C. C. Conference as to why we, as a Conference, are not growing in our gifts to benevolences, the fact is that too small a percentage of the entire gifts is ever used within the bounds of the Conference. If we were able to see any returns in proportion to our gifts here in the Conference, we would more gladly give. There are churches in this Conference that need assistance in some way; and if our money were first used locally, and then, if we had any to spare, given to others, this conference would in a few years more than double in gifts. Is it fair? Is it right to take money collected from churches that make a sacrifice to do all they can financially for their pastor, and other things, and use that money where those who paid it will in no way be benefitted? I believe God expects us to let our light shine, beginning at home. Now if some plan be devised so as to care for those churches in the conference that are struggling to exist, our own people will help; otherwise, if we continue as at present, we are doomed to failure.

There are now in this conference pastors whose salaries will not pay their expenses to and from their churches. These churches can't pay; they would if they had it, yet we allow the money the conference raises to be practically all used elsewhere and then abuse our pastors and lay members because they don't give more. If we are to be good stewards let us use what God gives us where it will do the most good for the most people concerned. I don't mean we should be selfish or non-missionary, far from that; but I do say I believe that the foundation for any missionary effort must have its beginning at home. The stronger the home base, the more can be spared for others.

Question number four: Why we are not growing in consecration and a deeper spiritual life? Consecration is almost a thing considered obsolete. We forget the Lord requires a consecration of everything we possess, or else there is no rebirth. We used to tell of our consecrated lives; now we are either ashamed to tell about giving ourselves to the Lord or we have not been given. You seldom hear consecration mentioned from the pulpit or elsewhere. There can be no growth in spiritual life unless that life is first consecrated. We speak of spirituality these days in very lenient terms, and to some it has nothing to do with their being consecrated Christians. The greater the consecration, the deeper the spiritual life. We don't hold as sacred as we should the obligations we made when we accepted Him as our Lord and Saviour. We keep in touch with the great power house of God only through the consecration of our lives; and unless we have made good contact with Him, the spark within us becomes weak. And after a while, instead of a deeper spiritual life, we find ourselves among the sinful, the worldly, and the unrighteous, because we did not live the real consecrated life.

Question number five: Why are we not growing in interest for the salvation of the lost?

Many people today, according to their own judgment, think themselves among those saved. Self-righteousness has played havoc with our interest in the souls of the lost. Some say they are too good to talk with and try to lead to the Lord Jesus Christ a poor lost soul; but as I see it, if we are not interested in getting others saved, we ourselves are unsaved, our very actions showing we don't have faith in what we profess to possess.

Our preaching of today in many instances does not consider the lost. Many sermons and, I fear preachers, too, do not manifest the presence of the spirit of God. I believe such sermons and preaching are out of the order, and that such preachers have answered the wrong call. When God called me, He said Preach The Word, not some other doctrine, as there are many today. The Gospel is the power of God unto Salvation to every one who believeth it and accepts it as the Way of Life. When the true gospel is preached, there will be an interest in the salvation of the last.

HERMON ELDREDGE.

Hermon Eldredge, in his early manhood, surrendered his life and talents to the service of the Lord. There were three small churches in East Springfield, Pa., where Hermon lived. Soon after his conversion, he interviewed each of the three pastors and then chose the Christian Church as the one in which he felt he could best serve the Lord. Neither of his parents was identified with this church. Forty-five years later he wrote a letter to an old friend recounting the anniversary of his conversion, giving the date and the text of the sermon delivered on the occasion, Amos 7:7, when Amos saw "the Lord standing upon a wall built by a plumbline with a plumbline in His hand." The vision seems to have remained with Hermon as a motto for his life's work.

Hermon was proud of his name. He liked the "o" in Hermon rather than the usual "a", doubtless because it recalled Mount Hermon and the Psalmist's words, "My strength cometh from God, who built the hills."

Not long after Brother Eldredge's conversion, he was engaged as a clerk in a dry goods store in Erie, Pa. He soon found work for the Master in gathering the neglected children of the city into a Sunday School. He found an empty room in the third story of an old hall down near the railway station. This desolate place was occupied until a lot was purchased and a chapel built. A pastor was engaged, and a church was organized.

The Christian Education Society was there in its infancy; but soon a society was organized in the little church and Hermon became one of its enthusiastic workers.

The Erie Christian Conference elected young Eldredge as its secretary. His beautiful handwriting and his diction made him a popular scribe so his services were called for in many organizations during the remainder of his life.

After a few years of experience in business, he and a partner began business as interior decorators. Soon he found himself too closely bound to secular business, which hindered the real purpose of his life; so he gave up his partnership, suffering a severe financial loss, and gave all his time to the Lord's work in the employment of the Penn State Sunday School Union.

This work was followed by religious work in the Erie Y. M. C. A. In the meantime, he became acquainted with the great John R. Mott. When the President appointed John R. Mott to organize the Y. M. C. A. in the army, the latter chose Hermon Eldredge as one of his helpers. Mr. Eldredge was placed in charge of Camp Upton, Long Island. One of his many tasks was to keep harmony among the Protestants, Catholics and Jews, assigning to each his proportionate share of the use of the various buildings. Mr. Eldredge was so thoroughly Christian; so broad-minded and practical that he was eminently fitted for this task.

Brother Eldredge realized the great need of thoroughly equipped leaders for the young people who were just approaching the realities of duty and the privileges of service in this age. To this need he gave his strength and life. He did not excuse himself but traveled day and night, making the train his study in order to reach his engagements and depriving himself of the society and comforts of home. He was editor of Sunday School literature and supplies and held a place on the International S. S. Lesson committee for years.

Hermon Eldredge was strongly in favor of Christian union. He was heartily in favor of the merging of the Christians and the Congregational churches. He explained misunderstandings and ironed out difficulties.

When Hermon's call came he was ready. His Sunday School Quarterlies were prepared. One of his last efforts was giving time and good judgment for the benefit of the cause of aged ministers and their widows. The last call found him ready. With a smile he said to his loved ones, "If this is good-bye, it is all right."

Bro. Eldredge had prepared his three daughters to carry on his great work. Lucy is an alumna of Elon College and is well trained as a leader of young people. Her two sisters are teachers, one in Cincinnatti and one in Dayton.

Hermon Eldredge is not dead or asleep. His mortal body only was worn out by strenuous service and laid away. His real life, his spirit, still lives. He was freed to join the saints in Glory and to receive his Lord's welcome "Well done."

REGIONAL MEETING FINDINGS.

Church Officers:

Our times call for more effective Churchmanship. eW believe that the greatest unworked field for effective service to the Churches is that of trained church officers. It would be eminently worth while for pastors to take the trouble to train church officers in some such manner as teachers for the Church School are being trained.

The method now used by some States of official visitation with officers of churches, especially if followed up later by the pastor can result each year in bringing the whole task of the church before those who are responsible for its policies.

Evangelism and the Devotional Life:

Three questions regarding this subject were raised and discussed:

1. Is the tide of devotional life in or out in our churches?

The tide is out. The shallows and mud flats of our spiritual shores are plainly visible. Only by stimulating definite religious experience in our church members can a farther recession be stopped.

2. Is the word "Evangelism" meaningless in our churches?

The day of mass evangelism or the revival meeting, so largely responsible for Protestant America, will not work today in our churches. There are two other methods which are being used as substitutes. Cultural or educational evangelism, and visitation or personal evangelism. These two are not doing for our day what mass evangelism did for a former generation. It is felt that while they are intellectually more tenable they too often lack a vital religious experience— they neither introduce man into a conscious relation to God nor into a vital fellowship with man.

3. Are personal religion and Kingdom passion vital forces in our churches?

Personal religion is too often discredited with the result that there is no Kingdom passion left. There seems to be a definite, traceable relation between personal religion and a passion for missions of all kinds.

Leaders of Youth:

This group considered the values of the proposed Pilgrim Fellowship, the statement of convictions, and the new program based on the theme, "Christian Youth Building a New World." The following points were commended:

1. The name, "Pilgrim Fellowship," as a fitting recognition of a rgowing fellowship through Summer Conferences and seasonal Rallies, of 180,000 Congregational young people, should make us more aware of a wider fellowship and lead to farther promotion of it. The emphasis is to be an fellowship rather than on organization or program. It is to be sugestive of the spirit of the pioneer in the courageous adventure for the Ideals of Jesus.

2. The leaders of youth, representing more than forty denominations and above ten million young people work out together a tentative statement of convictions and a common program, the theme of which is "Christian Youth Building a New oWrld." The areas included in this program are: a new person, a new church, a new community, a new nation and a new world. This means that the Pilgrim Fellowship will participate in the whole program of the church and cooperate with youth of all denominations in an earnest endeavor to build a new world on the life and teachings of Jesus.

Pulpit Supply:

The situation with regard to unemployed ministers and pastors who need change, has become tragic. The problem is so difficult that it is felt that additional facilities should be created to help handle the situation.

After careful consideration and full discussion it is the opinion of the Mid-West Regional Meeting, in order to facilitate the settlement of pastors and the supply of vacant churches, that it is wise at this time to supplement the existing machinery for this purpose by the establishment of a Committee not to exceed 10 or 12 to be known as the Mid-West Settlement Committee; and we request the Executive Committee of the General Council to proceed to the constitution of such a committee.

Race Relations:

The Christian program for all race relations is primarily to be an endeavor to liberate each group, especially the underprivileged white, from the chains of fear, pride, prejudice and selfishness in order that these groups may be free to be Christian in their atitudes toward each other. The best liberator is enlightenment—an appreciation of anothr's history, culture, and contribution to the whole, and a reverence for personal worth.

This program must involve the adventurour discovery of the ideal, its fearless proclamation, implementing it intelligently and believing in it passionately.

Christian Missions and World Peace:

Science has made the world a neighborhood: Only religion can make it a brotherhood. The east and the west have met. The question now is whether the meeting shall be as blood brothers, or as mortal foes. If our religion is to become an effective instrument of peace, we must incarnate Christ in the social realities. Several practical ways are immediately apparent.

1. Divest Church Boards of any posible investment in munitions business.

2. Invest in exchange students sending our own young people abroad and training native leaders here.

3. Encourage our State Department in investing in peace promotion.

4. Receive humbly and gratefully the Christianity that comes back to us enriched for having passed through the mind of the Orient. The vision of the exiled disciples has become a reality. There is no moral sea, but rapid transit has not brought the Kingdom of God. Only Christ can bring heaven to earth.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE TRAINING OF ADULTS.

Sunday Schools are generally thought of as designed primarily for the teaching of children. No one would question the importance of that phase of Sunday School work. But since the organized class movement, and the emphasis that has been given to the Baraca and Philathea organization, the Sunday School can no longer be thought of as an organization that majors in work with children.

A great deal of time and energy has been expended in building up adult departments and classes, and frequently one would gather that these organizations are ends within themselves. The thought has been that it is a fine thing to have a large class, with a splendid record for attendance. Most of the efforts in behalf of the class have been directed to the end of keeping the class going.

Perhaps if the teachers of such classes were to frankly examine the purposes that they have had in mind, they would have to admit that their main purpose has been to interest the members in the class discussions and to keep them coming. Where there has been a more serious purpose, it has generally been to give an explanation of the lesson text, and from the text to draw those truths that apply to individual and personal morality.

If there is any truth that needs to be seriously considered today, it is the fact that the adults of this generation desperately need educating. We have been thinking of our responsibility for training the coming generation. Someone has said that the only way to do much for the coming generation is to improve the present generation. It may be that we have been thinking too much about the future, not aware that a hopeful future can come only out of the present.

Thoughtful critics are saying that much of the work that is now being attempted by the Sunday School for the children can only be done successfully by the home. Teachers of children are well aware that what they are trying to do can best be done by the home; but say that the home is not what it ought to be and is not doing what it ought to do. Herein lies a tremendous challenge for the adult department and the adult class. A great many of the home makers are members of adult classes, frequently coming to the Sunday School for the express purpose of bringing the children. If the Sunday School is all that we have believed it to be, then certainly it ought to be able to so train parents that those who desire to do so may know how to make their homes soundly Christian.

Another objective that might well challenge the adult class is to train adults for Christian service through the church. It is a well known fact that in the average church not more than half the enrolled membersip of the church is actively engaged in the work of the church. Many of these inactive members have completely separated themselves from the influence of the church; but some of them are pretty regular atendants of an adult Sunday School class. The class could have no better objective than to make of all its members faithful workers in the church.

Then there is the question of the relationship of the individual to the complex and intricate problems of the day. The attitude of the average individual toward these questions is largely molded by public opinion. Public opinion in turn is frequently determined by the propaganda that is put out by agencies and organizations that have a selfish end to serve. It is amazing to note how little public opinion is influenced by Christian principles. The adult class has an opportunity of the Christian pulpit. For there is in the class not only a place to set forth the teachings of Jesus; but there is also opportunity to hear the viewpoint of the individual members and to answer questions that may have arisen in his mind.

It needs also to be remembered that the work that is done in the class is never limited to the individuals who are reached directly through the class. Every one who is taught becomes a medium for conveying the truth to others. The adult classes of the modern Sunday School ought to be the most potent influence for good in all the community. The adults of the Sunday School must be trained to render the largest measure of service. No organization has a future that does not give its members the consciousness that they are contributing in a definite way to the general welfare.

THINGS NEW AND OLD.

Since the General Council at Oberlin, our minds have been very much taken up with the problems raised by the creation of the Council of Social Action. The significance of this new board in our denomination will be disclosed as the program develops. We wish to call attention, however, to the fact that it is simply a development of that which has been long a factor in our denominational life. Just what new program or progress may develop we are aware of the fact that our denomination has had a long history of interest in the social gospel.

The writer, having been a member of the Congregational wing, can speak more especially of the contribution made by the Congregationalists to the problem of this thing known as the "Social Gospel."

There have been three great leaders in the early development of the "Social Gospel" and we might say, the three great leaders. Dr. Washington Gladden, Pastor of Churches in Massachusetts and Ohio, was the first Christian minister to face such problems as the relationship of capital and labor, for instance. His passion for social justice and his early writings undoubtedly furnish the source of this movement. Following him came Josiah Strong, whose book, Our Country, was one of the best sellers of its day and tremendously affected Christian thinking and the sense of responsibility on the part of Christian people and especially the Christian churches for a Christianized social order.

Thus came Dr. Graham Taylor. The writer was a member of his church as a boy and has always thrilled to his tremendous enthusiasm and his devotion to the great cause of social justice and human goodwill. He began this work in the old Fourth Church in Hartford and was called to a chair of Christian Sociology and then to the Chicago Seminary, the first teacher of the future ministers along the line of the "Social Gospel." He then founded Chicago Commons, a famous social settlement and has battled for a generation against the evils of the great city of Chicago and written tremendously along this line. He is an old man now—over eighty—still fighting, still thrilled with the challenge of the hour.

Is it any wonder that the denomination has taken such a great interest and felt so deeply concerned about the social order and the matter of Christian brotherhood in human relations?

PRISONERS OF HOPE.

The world is in the depths. We are all prisoners, caught in the mesh of circumstance. The rescue of society depends on those of us who are prisoners of hope. Our high hopes for social welfare must never let us submit to a sluggish acceptance of social injustice. In the chains of adverse circumstance, we must believe in the final power of fair dealing and honest toil. Failure would consist in feebly saying that "the end justifies the means," putting immediate relief above the sanctions of justice.

The Old Testament story of Joseph, the dreamer, in prison for years, finally the released leader of his race, shows us how we may conquer the depression by the power of the spirit. He did not sulk. Too many of us are like peevish children who take their dolls and go home. We "resign from the committee" and refuse to carry on in the face of immediate disaster and defeat. Nor did Joseph spend his prison years meditating revenge. It is our most insidious temptation when caught in the mesh of evil to lash out against the whole system and try to tear down society itself. Joseph got busy where he was in the prison. Many a man who only recently had an executive position of power is now walking the streets selling things from door to door in his refusal to be defeated.

Many, like Joseph of old, are in the prison house of poverty, not because of our own sins, but because of the collective sins of society. War has robbed us. Crooked directors of great corporations have robbed us. Racketeers allied with politicians have exacted tribute in every market place. Unfair tribute exacted from industry has crippled the power to buy until our factories stand idle and food rots in the field.

Entangled in these chains of slavery, there is still left to us the way of faith. We may still believe in our visions of a God who will lead us out of prison, if we stand firm in those convictions of fidelity to the eternal justice. We shall not call black white. We shall not condone robbery. The market place must be purged so that bankers and brokers can no longer steal the savings of the people under the guise of selling securities. The profit motive in industry must no longer be the controlling factor. The worker must have a fairer allotment of the products of his toil. But supremely it must be true of each of us that in the confusion of this emergence from a predatory age we must ourselves be sure that we are neither cowards nor villains. We must believe in our vision of God and be confident that the Realm of Good Will cometh.

C. R. R.

THE HOUR OF WORSHIP.

It is the custom of professing Christians to come together at a common meeting place of worship. "Behold, how good and pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity," saith the Psalmist. The apostle commanded, "Forsake not the assembling of yourselves together." It is said of Christ that "as His custom was, He went into the synagogue on the Sabbath day." From the early beginnings of the church, there have been definitely appointed hours for worship. In this country, it is our custom for the members of the church to gather for worship on the Sabbath, usually at 11:00 A. M. and at 8:00 P. M.

At any rate, whatever the hour may be, that hour is important and should be regarded as a privilege. The hour of worship should be interesting to the worshipper—so much so that his mind would be halted in its wanderings and fastened upon Him who is worthy of our devotions. The hour of worship should be spiritual—so much so that the worshipper's own experience would be greatly enriched. The hour of worship should be decidedly helpful to the worshipper—so much so that he would anticipate the privilege and plan never to miss it.

If the hour of worship is to be a blessing to the worshipper, it must be carefully and thoroughly planned. It must be planned in consideration of the worshipper's needs. The content of the worship program should consist of prayer, praise, and exhortation. Usually, we sing hymns, pray prayers, and preach sermons, which is all good and well provided they are well prepared, pleasingly presented, and on time. This, as a rule, is the minister's responsibility. A service badly prepared falls short of its goal. A service well prepared but started at a late hour loses its larger effectiveness. Anything that is worth doing is worth doing well and on time. The hour of worship is vital to our Christian faith and must be observed if the church is to abide. Recently, I was the speaker at a church service. The service began fifteen minutes late. From certain officials of the church, I learned that usually the hour for the beginning of worship has passed before the service is started. It is useless to say that the service was not as effective as it otherwise would have been. The choir or those in charge of the music have a great responsibility. They have the responsibility of beginning the worship and of closing the same. The pastor should give the choir instructions to be in its place and begin the service on time, regardless. When once the congregation is convinced that the service will begin promptly and that it will close at a reasonable hour, restlessness and anxiety as to time will be eliminated, which is a very helpful thing in conducting an effective hour of worship.

The entire program—music, scripture, prayer, and sermon—should be planned with the ultimate aim of delighting and benefitting the worshippers—the ones who sing and speak and the ones who listen and receive alike.

COUNTERFEIT.

Thursday morning of last week, as I came out of the National Bank of Burlington, North Carolina, I came face to face with one of the tellers, whom I know very well. He displayed a $5.00 bill that he had just received from Washington, with the word, "counterfeit," stamped in red ink on both sides of the bill. I looked at it and handled it. So far as I could tell, it was real money. It had all the outward earmarks of legal tender, but the authorities in Washington knew more about this particular bill than I and they had declared it worthless. From the general appearance of the bill, it had been in use a long time. Evidently, it had passed through many hands, made several purchases, and settled different obligations, but finally at the end of its business career was adjudged a fake.

I found myself wondering if many professing Christians are not of the same type. They claim to be Christian, their neighbors speak of them as Christian, they are greeted and received as members of the Household of Faith at different places and on different occasions. But how do they appear before the Judge? He said on one occasion, "How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the Kingdom of Heaven?" That is to say, "how hardly shall they who have riches for themselves, for their own satisfaction, and for their own indulgences and their own pleasure, who regard not the true source of wealth, who fail to use wealth for the purpose for which it was lent them —how hardly shall they find themselves eventually and eternally within the Kingdom of Righteousness?"

And again He said, "Not everyone that saith Lord, Lord, shall enter into the Kingdom of Heaven but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in Heaven." That is to say, professions alone, declarations of faith within themselves, will not avail; but a life that renounces its own will and adopts the will of God in the disposition of life and life's possessions will eventually find an abundant entrance into the Kingdom of God.

In seeking to determine the reality of religion in the individual life, the apostle declared that the same consisteth not in confessions of faith or in proclamations of beliefs in certain principles but in the Spirit Himself. "If any man," saith he, "hath not the spirit of Christ, he is none of His." That is a hard saying. It cuts straight through a man's life and lays the secrets of the same bare. Regardless of professions or beliefs, the fruits of life determine its realities and its genuineness. If we have served the spirit of Christ, if we live as He lived, serve as he served, die as He died, then, indeed and in truth, we are His.

Includes $13,028 reported by three states for 1933, used by their own Boards for Ministerial Relief.

For the fourth consecutive year the giving of our churches for the support of home and foreign missions and the state conferences has shown a decline. However, this is the smallest loss during this period.

1931 showed a loss over 1930 of 16.7%
1932 showed a loss over 1931 of 17. %
1933 showed a loss over 1932 of 22. %
1934 showed a loss over 1933 of only 8.6%

These figures offer two grounds for encouragement.

The rate of loss declined steadily throughout the fall. At the end of the first nine months, the figure stood at 10.9%. No miracle happened at the close of the year, yet at the end of the quarter in which the heaviest receipts come in this percentage was reduced to 8.6%.

Even more heartening has been the record of individual states. From 1931 through 1933 no state making any appreciable contribution to missions registered a gain. But in 1934 a number of minus signs were turned into plus signs. This honor roll begins with the Southern Convention of Christian churches which has done so well that that Southeastern states are the first section of the country to report a gain over last year.

Although the Mid-West as a region is slightly behind last year, individual states have made gains. These with plus signs in their statements are: Michigan, Indiana, Iowa, Colorado, Oklahoma, Montana, Arizona, New Mexico, Idaho and Texas. On the Pacific Coast, Oregon made a gain, as did the Evangelical Protestant churches and the German churches.

A considerable number of conferences ended the year in a "stand-still" situation with the giving very nearly equal to that of 1933. On the list we find Maine, New Hampshire, Pennsylvania, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, South Dakota and Washington.

The real losses of the year occurred in Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New York, Middle Atlantic Conference, Illinois, Wisconsin, and Southern California. One theory which has been advanced to account for this situation is that these are the states in which many people are living on their incomes. The shrinkage of values, increased taxation and plain fright have wrought havoc with the giving of this group of people.

As we look ahead our greatest ground of hope is the loyal giving of a host of hard-pressed people during the past months. The same spirit of devotion which has steadily reduced the rate of decline in 1934 should bring its elimination in 1935. Stars are beginning to twinkle in the night; the dawn cannot be far distant.

MUST PROVE THEIR CALLING.

The Chinese church tries out its ministers before it ordains them. After six years of preaching Mr. Chi Kue Tung was ordained on October 8th, in a church not far from Peiping. Twenty ministers, representing the Kunglihui, Independent Churches, Church of Christ in China and Methodist church, took part in the ceremony of the laying on of hands. The same rule applies to members. Applicants for membership are voted on and only those getting a good number of votes are permitted to be examined. Dr. George Wilder of Tunghsien reported recently one very interesting and leading question which was put to would-be church members before baptism. "After the water is dropped on your head tomorrow," they were asked, "how will you be different from the non-church members?" A question that might be used to advantage in America,

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Dr. W. M. Jay has tendered his resignation as pastor of the Holland Christian Church, effective in June. Dr. Jay has rendered faithful service in this field. The church has recently paid off all indebtedness on the Parsonage. Since the last session of Conference, Dr. Jay has been serving as pastor of Damascus and Eure in Gates Co., where he is preaching with great acceptance. The resignation will not affect these two churches for the present. No announcement has been made of plans for the future. It is hoped he will remain in this conference.

Quite a number of changes have been made in pastorates for the present year. Rev. C. E. Gerringer is serving Antioch, Isle of Wight, Oak Grove and Dendron. Rev. G. A. Pearce is serving Barrett's, Burton's Grove, Ivor and Wakefield. Union (Surry), and Dendron churches have no regular pastor. At the present time there is an overlapping in a number of county pastorates. Changing conditions have brought about this state of affairs. In the interest of both churches and ministers, steps should be taken to group the churches into compact pastorates, where it is possible to do so.

To accomplish the practical grouping of churches it is necessary for pastors and churches to cooperate to this end. Past experience does not justify the hope that such cooperation will be easily secured in future attempts to form groups of churches into pastorates. Some churches have peculiar ideas as to the qualifications of their pastor. They expect him to be equal to the best in intellectual ability. He is expected to preach great sermons and be a faithful pastor. And there are some people who expect such a pastor to possess the financial ability to make and save enough money to take care of himself and his family without depending upon his salary for support.

Churches in such cases should cooperate in the matter of agreeing to fix an adequate salary for the pastor. When the matter is presented to the local church every member should be willing to give systematically enough to support the larger program of the church. A pastor should at least be considered as worthy to receive his salary promptly as the employees on the farm and in the factory, who receive their pay on time. The minister is not an object of charity, in his relation as pastor. He is on the pay-roll of a great institution. So is the president of a great business corporation. If he is faithful he earns his salary and the church members should discharge their personal obligation to the church in adequate financial support.

In a denomination which has a congregational form of government, the local church is independent. The church has the privilege of calling the pastor. The pastor, likewise, has the choice of accepting or declining a call. Now every church has a distinct group personality. Ministers, after years of experience, learn that some churches are more desirable to serve than others. In a group of churches there may be a challenge to the pastor. A church may help to make a preacher; and it may wreck him. On the other hand, the minister has an opportunity of making a church. Unconsciously a church is greatly influenced by the life and spirit of the pastor.

Therefore a great responsibility rests upon the pastor of a church. He should face this opportunity with great faith. "Behold, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves; be ye therefore wise as serpents, and harmless as doves." (Matt. 10:16.) He should preach the Word. He should not gossip in the pulpit nor in the home. He should be willing to listen to others. He should learn to keep silence. He should be sincere. He should be a man of prayer. He should not be jealous nor envious of others. He should put the interests of the church above his own personal interests. He should plan for the future growth of the church. He should grow, and go, and glow.

I. W. JOHNSON.

THE DOINGS OF A DIME.

Money has always had its place in the affairs of men. It is the important factor in business matters. Money has been coveted by some, wanted by many, and needed by all. Some hoard it, others use it, and still others waste it. It is dangerous to love it. The Bible teaches that from an intense affection all evil flows. Yet no enterprise can prevail without it. Certainly, the church cannot. Every item of its program demands money. Buildings, grounds, furniture, equipment, music, and leadership all cost money.

The church is not a business in a material sense. Its real business is spiritual. It does not exist to make money. It is a charitable institution, dependent upon the love and generosity of its constituents. God knew this when he formed the church and planted it in the hearts of men. The church looks to her own and waits for their gifts. In providing for the support of the church, God has suggested, through prophecy, that the dime and its multiples will be sufficient. He says, "Bring ye all the tithes into the store house, that there may be meat in mine house." That is to say, "Earn your money, tithe it, take nine dimes for yourself and set aside the other dime for me," saith the Lord, "that there be no material wants in the administration of the affairs of the Kingdom."

The dime doesn't have a great deal of value, but its value is real, genuine. You can't do much with it wherever you take it. Alone, it is extremely limited. In not very many instances is it sufficient. It shines, however at the pop corn stand, the cold drink shop, the shoe shine parlor, the peanut vender, and the chewing gum merchant; but it has lost its standing at the sandwich counter and is no longer admitted to the movies. However, the dime store is its habitual haunt. Here, it comes frequently and in great numbers. They pour into the till like meal into the hopper. The dime stores of the nation and the vast fortunes amassed therein stand as monuments to the doings of the dime. From these vast fortunes built up by the dime and its multiples, the church may easily learn a lesson.

Do you have a dollar? One-tenth of that dollar is a dime. Could you spare the one-tenth? This would leave you nine dimes. Do you have another dollar? How many dollars have you, and how frequently do dollars come into your hands? If you can spare one dime out of one dollar, can you not spare one dime out of all dollars that you may possess or that may come to you as a result of your efforts? If you would bring your dimes, one out of each dollar, and cast the same into the treasury of your church, would this amount equal or surpass your present contributions? Do you know something of the membership of your own local church? Have you an idea of the number of dollars that may come into their hands each week or each month? What would happen if all the members of your church joined you in such a practice? The average hundred members of the average church in our conferences and convention have twenty-five of the hundred who earn. The earning capacity of this twenty-five averages twenty-five dollars per week. A tenth of this amount is $62.50 per week, $250.00 per month, $3,000.00 a year, which would mean $3,000.00 a year for every hundred members. The average membership of the church in the Convention is two hundred, plus. All will agree, I think, that $25.00 per member, $100.00 per month, is a very low figure. I know that many of our people live on farms. Some years their earning capacity will fall below this amount; other years the amount will be in excess of the average. The same thing is true of the village, town and city churches. If the membership of our church would take a dime out of every dollar that they earn and cast the same into the treasury of the Lord, every demand of the church of whatsoever nature it may be could be readily and easily met; and there would be no necessity for canvasses, drives, or any efforts of this nature, nothing to harass or annoy the individual worshipper. His financial support of the church would be a pleasure and a spiritual benediction; whereas, the canvass, the drive, and the appeal method is constantly annoying and destroying the spirit of worship for many who otherwise would be blessed.

The individual member, however, who does not do his part, who does not contribute according as the Lord has prospered him, needs to be disturbed. He should not be allowed to be deceived. He may sense that he is in harmony with the Lord, when, in reality, he is following him afar off. It is impossible for us to give ourselves to the Lord and keep our possessions for ourselves. Money earned by a Christian is not only his but definitely a part of himself. The giving of his money for the church is not only an act of benevolence but becomes in a very definite way an act of worship. Great financial responsibilities rest upon our church and her institutions. It is not a question simply of supporting our church and saving our institutions but it is a question of saving ourselves.

"Will a man rob God?" "Yet," saith the prophet, "ye have robbed me in tithes and in offerings." We are commanded to lay aside on the first day of the week according as the Lord has prospered us. Rich blessings have been promised to those who in faith give as they have received.

GEORGE WASHINGTON BRIDGE.

This is the world's longest and largest suspension bridge. The mighty structure spanning the Hudson River, reaches from the Palisades of the New Jersey shore to the heights of Manhattan on the New York side. Let your eye sweep the massive towers and the magnificent curves of the cables that reach from shore to shore! The length of the main span is 3,568 feet. The total length between anchorages is 8,200 feet. The cables look spidery far away but they are the strength of the bridge. They must support the tremendous weight of 160,000,000 pounds. These cables are three feet in diameter. They are made of sixty-one interwoven cables four and one-half inches thick. The smaller cables are the result of spinning together 434 strands of thin steel wire, each less than one-fiftieth of an inch in diameter! Thus bound together, 26,474 of these tiny steel wires make the large cables which must support the load of millions of pounds. Heed this fact: it was the great care, the constant testing and watching of the smallest wires which was the guarantee of the final safety of the bridge. In the little wire lay the strength of the bridge.

The Christian vision of life never undervalues any individual nor the least sacrifice in gift or service. In these lie the strength of the Kingdom of God.

We, in the churches, are believers in a religion of sharing. We are rich in our possession of Jesus Christ as our Lord and Master, our Guide for the pathway of life. He does not belong exclusively to us He came that all might share in the "abundant life."

We have a bridge constructed direct from our churches to a needy world. We are the wires that support this bridge.

The strength of the George Washington Bridge is in the quality of its tiny wires. Your Cent-A-Meal Box will strengthen the steel wires at the very heart of our Congregational and Christian Bridge.

The Cent-A-Meal Box is one of the ways of repairing broken wires with which we are rebuilding and strengthening our Bridge. Over 50,000 Boxes have been distributed. Ponder these facts: The faithful use of your Box will mean—3 cents a day—90 cents a month—$10.80 per year.

If every box now distributed were used regularly it would add half a million dollars to the strength of our bridge. Will you not only use your own box daily but tell others of the blessings it has brought to your home.

Our goal is to have 10,000 families daily remembering our Missionaries.—Commission on Missions.

THE TRAFFIC THAT WAITS.

In the world-wide field of our Missionary Boards thousands of patients hoping for healing, thousands of students struggling for a Christian education are being held in the traffic jam until the bridge of friendship is open wider. Thousands of men and women and little children who have been plodding toward a knowledge of God from ignorance and superstition are having to stop where they are because the damage to the bridge is keeping them from those who should teach them and help them so.

Young men and women eager to spend their lives in Christian service abroad are being held back. Older men and women who have learned difficult languages, learned to think as other peoples think, learned how to share their best with other races, are in the line of traffic waiting for the bridge to get them back to their fields. Schools and hospitals which have covered the most difficult part of their journeys in the long years of founding and development are being halted in their programs until the bridge opens the way for progress. Books and magazines that would bring help and inspiration to millions are withheld from publication because of lack of funds.

Service to industrial and rural Africa, friendly help in factional India, adequate guidance in revolutionary China, friendly American personalities in Japan and Mexico, constructive friendship in the progressive new Turkey—all are being held up, slowed down or bumping over makeshift detours.

In our land the program and service of our State Conferences and National Home Boards in Religious Education of our youth, aid to needy churches, work among the strangers within our gates, all are channels offering you an opportunity of expressing your love to our Lord and Christ.

The Cent-A-Meal Box will help move the traffic over the bridge.—Commission on Missions.

THE KING'S MESSAGE.

King John (Sigrah) of Kusai, Caroline Islands, writes to the American board a letter. It says, in part, "We are happy to know that you will help us and have always been praying and trusting in God to help us, through you, by continuing the work that you started here 80 years ago in the name of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." Rev. Clarence F. McCall of Niigati, Japan, paid them a visit recently and when he left a farewell supper was given attended by one of Miss Jessie Hoppin's cows—roasted! "May God bless you for your work among us in the past years," said His Majesty in closing his greetings.

A Story for the Children

"SICH A WIGGLE" AND OTHER BIRD FRIENDS.

By WALTER K. PUTNEY.

Down by the brookside of swampy thicket you hear him early in May, calling, "Sich a wiggle, sich a wiggle," nervously darting about and perhaps chattering, like Jenny Wren, for a moment. He flits about, apparently keeping very busy, but he is studying you, even if you think you are well concealed as you watch.

This is the Maryland yellow throat, known also, because of that mask he has on the front of his face, as The Little Highwayman. His little eyes are too sharp for you to deceive him, and on the other hand, he is not easily frightened by your presence.

Mr. Yellow Throat is a good friend. The one I heard this season has been with me for three years. We know each other fairly well and he knows that I mean no harm when I venture near his nest. But he is nervous just the same, for when I turn around to go back to my cottage, his call comes with less accent and with a questioning "Witchery? Witchery?" as if saying "Why hurry? Why hurry? Why hurry?"

Another nervous, twitching, little friend is the Redstart. His wings are always held in readiness for flight, for he trusts no visitor. In this nervous watchfulness, he is sometimes amusing for in his hasty darting to and fro he gives a little sharp note or two as in warning to his mate to keep her eyes open. He cannot see everything! The Redstart is almost constantly in action, fluttering from twig to twig as he pursues the elusive insects, so that the presence of visitors is not the only time when he is not calm. In fact, he is never calm, it seems, and he looks like a dancing torch as he twists madly about.

I have one little friend who is always in a hurry. I think he is a bit thoughtless of his friends, for he is with us for such a very short time. This is the Golden Crown Kinglet. I happen to live where he passes by on his way north in the spring and on his way south in the fall. So I have no opportunity of seeing him in either summer or winter home. That is really too bad, for I should like to get better acquainted with him. But his very impatience attracts me.

While he is with us, Mr. Golden Crown Kinglet spends most of his time among the coniferous trees where he cleans the pine needles of the eggs of certain insects. He hovers for a moment over one tuft, then darts to the next and in a great hurry passes from one to another as if he must do his work in record time. He is probably the best feathered friend possessed by the owner of a cone-bearing grove. Plant lice, bark lice, and eggs of aphids are his food and he does not do his tasks by halves.

Few people realize that the Golden Crowned thrush and the Ovenbird are the same. Sometimes you hear the name "Teacher Bird" given: this being because of his peculiar "teacher, Teacher, TEACHER!" given time after time, each "teacher" emphasized more strongly than the preceding one. He does not have the attractiveness of color that the Yellow Throat, Kinglet or Redstart have, but he is almost as nervous in his actions. Sitting near his Dutch oven nest (hence the name, Ovenbird), he will suddenly dart upward like the skylark and pour out his song. Then he will shoot swiftly downward, and with many a twitch, go to feeding again. His best song is heard as the sunset glow is showing in the western sky.

Among the larger birds are some more nervous beauties that I claim as friends. There is a Chewink that lives just back of the cottage. His song is beautiful, and I love to sit and listen as he pours forth his melody, but I like best to watch him when he gets excited, for he simply cannot keep still! You see a streak of black, white, and chestnut flashing into a bush. His call is short and saucy. He snaps his tail as if it might break off were he not careful. His crest is erected and he sends out his short call of "towee!" in a moderate tone that is not at all in keeping with his nervousness. Rather it suggests coolness and a brave pertness that is funny.

And as I speak of sauciness, were you to ask me what I consider the worst offender, I should unhesitatingly say, "the catbird." This bird, while very bold at times, is, at others, as nervous as the redstart. His various vocal attunements are decidedly nervous in character, as if he were not at all satisfied with any song he has thus far given but must try his whole repertoire. He can sing most beautifully when so inclined and he can jest when the mood takes him.

But his sauciest call comes when you least expect it. It is a creepy sound when heard in the dead of night, as is often the case when the bird is aroused from his sleep. It is that nasal, "tssy!" coming with emphasis. I have been startled many times when crossing a pasture at early evening and I must confess that every time I jump as if I had never previously heard this alarm call. One simply cannot help doing so.—Epworth Herald.

AN IDEA THAT CAME OUT OF A STOCKING.

Not exactly oaks from acorns but rugs from socks is the tale of a bundle of old stockings sent Miss Mary Louise McClure in Fenchow, China, by some ladies in New Jersey. Wearing a Chinese coat of woolen home-spun made right in the Woman's Department of the Fenchow Bible School, "from sheep's back to mine," Miss McClure writes that student aid was done away with last spring and wool work made the basis of the self-help department. Outside of school hours those women needing money for tuition weave or spin, and less nimble fingers hook rugs. Material for the first rugs were the New Jersey stockings dyed! The principal, Wang Ching Wen, has a "fine Christian spirit with a rare gift for cultivating group spirit," says Miss McClure, So things go on famously.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

Rev. F. C. Lester, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

EASTERN VIRGINIA YOUNG PEOPLE NOTE THIS.

Mrs. Garland Spratley of Dendron, Virginia, announces that she can furnish a traveling library of missionary books for young people, if the young people so desire. Dr. Lobringier has promised such a library for a year. It will cost nothing except postage to the next place. If you are interested, write Mrs. Spratley at once so she will know whether to ask for the library or not.

Seven Thousand Emeralds—Frank C. Laubach. A book of the Philippines—the islands, their history and the work of Christianity. For intermediates, young people, or adults.

The Young Revolutionist—Buck. A new story showing the struggle that Chinese youth has today in deciding between the old and the new. One of the best recent books for young people.

Hands Around The World—Archer Wallace. Character sketches of outstanding personalities from different countries, including Tolstoy, Gandhi, Sun Yat Sen and a dozen others. Written for young people of junior high school age.

Indian Americans—Winifred Hulbert. A book for young people showing how American Indian youth is adapting itself to modern American conditions.

Three Arrows—E. Ryerson Young. Stories of the early days of Indian missions. For the junior high school age.

As It Looks To Young China—William Hung. A discussion of various Chinese authors of modern problems perplexing to the young people of China today. For young people.

Freedom—Welthy H. Fisher. The story of two students belonging to a high-caste Hindu family as they face the new forces of nationalism, modern education and Christianity at work in India today.

The Adventures of Mr. Friend—Harold B. Hunting. Stories of various people in America, each of whom has proved himself to be a "Mr. Friend." A 1931 book for intermediates or those who are older.

God and the Census—Robert N. McLean. An interesting book on Home Missions showing how the church has been trying to have God counted in new communities. For young people and adults.

Beautiful Gold—Robert B. Thurber. The story—in part, the love story of a Burman girl. A vivid picture of many phases of life in Burma in which the search for a cure for leprosy plays a part. For seniors and young people.

THE EASTER PROGRAM.

What are you going to have in the way of an Easter program this year? Easter comes April 21st, but it will soon be here. If your society, class, or church is to put on a real program, it is time to plan it now.

Why not give an Easter play? There are many good ones. "The Rock" is among the best. My young people gave a Christmas play, and the people liked it immensely. The change from the usual pageant or children's program was a help.

If you are interested, write to the Board of Christian Education, or to Miss Lucy Eldredge, C. P. A. Building, Dayton, Ohio, or to your state headquarters. We are eager to help.

Another phase of the Easter program ought to be the winning of others to Christ and the Church. Why not get your leaders together, make a list of prospects, begin praying definitely for them, and by prayer and personal effort have them ready for membership on Easter Sunday? Our churches need to grow and the young people need to win others. Plan for it, and do your best. The Board of Christian Education can furnish helps on this work also. Call on us.

WHAT DOES IT MEAN TO BE A CHRISTIAN IN 1935.

By Defiance Christmas Conference.

The discussion of this question was introduced by a Panel Discussion followed by consideration in ten small groups. The Findings Committee studied the reports of these groups and phrased the following statement, which after an hour's discussion was adopted by the Conference as its statement.

We believe that the following statements describe a real Christian:

I. A Christian is one who lives according to the great Commandment, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul and with all thy strength and with all thy mind and thy neighbor as thyself."

II. A Christian is one who lives a purposeful life.

(a) A life of service that springs from a motive of love.

(b) A life consecrated to the personality and philosophy of Christ.

(c) A life which will leave the world a bit more beautiful and better than the way he found it.

(d) A life which grows through regular personal and group worship.

III. A Christian is one who strives at all times to live by His ideals.

IV. A Christian is one who by his Christ-like life challenges others to live at their best.

V. A Christian is one who is willing to make sacrifices for his beliefs to the extent of enduring ridicule, loss of friends, position or of material gains.

VI. A Christian is one who strives toward a sympathetic understanding of all peoples and their religions.

VII. A Christian is one who endeavors to keep informed on the issues of the day and to meet them in a way that will do the most good to his fellowmen.

VIII. A Christian believes that war is contrary to Jesus' Way of Love, and therefore, he, as a follower of the Way, is not justified in taking part in any war.

IX. A Christian is one who applies the Golden Rule in all business and personal relationships, or attempts to correct the evils which prevent the application of the Golden Rule.

IMPROVING OUR ATTITUDE TOWARD PEOPLE OF OTHER RACES.

Christian Endeavor Topic for Feb. 10, 1935.
Acts 10:34, 35.

Ask a negro pastor to be the speaker for this meeting. Have him tell your group what the members of his race think of the white people.

"Religion has meant much to the black man in America. Imagine how bitter would have been his fate during the black years of slavery, if he had not had the knowledge that Jesus cared for him! And out of this childlike faith in Jesus, out of this simple trust, have come some of the most beautiful religious lyrics in the world. We call them negro spirituals. And musicians tell us that these religious songs of the negro are practically the only important contribution that our country has made to modern music."

Study these spirituals so you may have a deeper appreciation of their value. Paul Lawrence Dunbar has written some beautiful poetry which you might read in this meeting.

Worship Service.

Prelude: "This Is My Father's World."

For Meditation:

Dreams they are—but they are God's dreams!
Shall we decry them and scorn them?
That men shall love one another,
That white shall call black man brother.
That greed shall pass from the market place,
That lust shall yield to love for the race,
That men shall meet with God face to face—
Dreams are they all—
God's dreams!

—Thomas Curtis Clark.

Hymn: "In Christ There Is No East Nor West."

Scripture: Acts 10:34, 35.

Prayer:

"May the Peace of Christ move mightily in our hearts,
That we may be dedicated to kindness and mercy;
That we may restrained from anger and hatred;
That the Kingdom of God may be established in our midst;
And that all the children of men in our time,
And through the guidance of the Prince of Peace,
May establish the governments of nations
Upon the foundations of justice and love.
Hear us and guide us, Our Father.
In the name and for the sake of Jesus Christ.—Amen."

(New Hymnal for Christian Youth.)

Speaker: A negro pastor.

Hymn: "Jesus Shall Reign."

—Adapted from C. E. World Quarterly.

Following are some of the suggestions made at Defiance Holiday Conference as to what Christian young people can do about improving their attitude toward people of other races:

1. Exchange students and professors between races and nations in educational circles.

2. Acquaint ourselves with the best and highest culture of other races and nations by reviewing books presenting this phase or by tours such as Friendship Tours. Some valuable books are "Out of the Far East" by Hunter; "Orientals in American Life" by Palmer.

3. Request the papers to present news in such a way that racial prejudice and misunderstanding will not be increased.

Lawrence Dunbar is one of the leading negro poets. The following poem from his pen shows something of the pathos and beauty of his poetry as he describes the Christian experience of the negroes.

O li'l' lamb out in de col',
De Mastah call you to de fol',
O li'l' lamb!

He hyeah you bleatin' on de hill;
Come hyeah and keep yo' moanin still,
O li'l' lamb!

De Mastah sen' de Shepud fo'f;
He wandah souf', he wandah no'f,
O li'l' lamb!

Sunday School Lesson

PETER'S RESTORATION.

Lesson V—February 3, 1935.

Golden Text: "Lord thou knowest all things. Thou knowest that I love Thee."—John 21:17.

Lesson: Mark 16:7; John 20:1-10; 21:123.

Let us get the background of today's lesson. When the disciples knew that Jesus had been crucified, and that His body had been taken from the Cross by friends and buried they thought it was all over. Their hopes had been dashed and their dreams had been shattered. It all seemed like a ghastly mistake. They were discouraged and disheartened. They had hoped that it had been He who should redeem Israel, but He had been put to death in shame, and it appeared that there was nothing that either He or they could do about it.

And then came the unbelievable news that He was alive again. Women at the tomb reported that it was empty, and furthermore that they had seen Him. Two men at eventide as they had walked together had been joined by a stranger who later turned out to be the Master Himself. He had appeared to another group and had demonstrated in a convincing way that it was He and that He was very much alive. The disciples were torn between fear and joy. They knew it was true but they were afraid that it was not true.

One interesting incident for us in this series of studies in the life of Peter is recorded by Mark in his gospel. When Jesus commands the women to tell the disciples that He is alive and that they have seen Him, He specifically states—I paraphrase His words—"Be sure to tell Peter." He wanted that penitent disciple to know that He was still interested in him, that He was still counting upon Him, that He wanted to see Him so that they could make everything right again. Christ is always eager for the penitent sinner to know that there is welcome and pardon and another chance awaiting him.

Jesus had told His disciples before His death that He would meet them in Galilee after He had risen. He repeated or confirmed this engagement with them after He had risen. And the disciples had gone back to Galilee, back amid the familiar scenes, back among everything that was suggestive of Him. But as yet He had not come. They turned then to their old means of livelihood—they went fishing. It is a good thing for those with heavy hearts to do something with their hands. Busy hands will help burdened hearts. Work is a great antidote against despondency. Service is a great help in time of sorrow.

The story of how Jesus appeared to the disciples at the sea of Galilee is too familiar to need repetition. They had toiled all night and caught nothing, but when He appeared and gave them directions they made a big haul. And then they found that He had prepared something for them to eat. Things look different after a man has eaten. Hungry men are usually not in high moods. Christ would look after the needs of the body as a means of ministering to the souls of men.

And then there came the memorable incident between Jesus and Simon Peter. "Lovest thou me?" the Master asked three times, perhaps to emphasize Peter's three-fold denial of Him. And the warm-hearted disciple, sobered by his base act, in humility but in sincerity told the Master that he did love Him. And Jesus knew he meant it: "Feed my sheep"—if you love me do something for my sheep. Love for Christ is something more than a sweet sentiment, something more than a passing emotion. True love for Christ finds expression in service for Christ. And we serve Christ as we serve our fellowmen. The way a man shows his love for God whom he hath not seen, and cannot see is to love his fellowman whom he hath seen.

Simon Peter was all right now. A great change had taken place in his life. Never again would he deny his Lord. He was the Rock. And tradition has it that when he was crucified he requested that he be crucified with his head down—he did not feel worthy to be crucified like his Master.

Love for Christ—this is the greatest strength against temptation and the greatest stimulus to service. Let a man have a great devotion to Christ and he will be able to live more victoriously and to serve more fruitfully.

There is one interesting story and in a sense amusing incident recorded in John's story. Peter was concerned about what Jesus was going to do, or what was going to happen to John. Jesus told him in so many words that it was none of his business. Peter's duty was clear. Peter knew God's will for his life. Let him take care of that. God had something for John, but that was John's concern. The truth is simply this—God deals with us as individuals. Every man must respond to Christ's will for him. Every man is to be governed not by what others may do, but by what he believes to be Christ's will for his own life. "Follow thou me"—the command comes to us as individuals. Conscience is to have supremacy over curiosity. In the midst of mysteries, and in the midst of perplexities concerning the dealings of God with others, we are to obey His will for our own lives. And he that doeth the truth of God for his life will come into more light.

Some Teaching Points.

1. Christ conclusively demonstrated that He was alive from the dead.
2. The meaning of Christ's words often comes with new light and new meaning with later experiences of life.
3. Christ keeps His appointments with His people.
4. The risen Christ manifested the same interest in, and love for His disciples as when He was in the flesh.
5. Busy hands are great helps to burdened hearts.
6. The Master's program was to give men something to eat, something to do, and Someone to love.
7. Every man must interpret Christ's will for his own life and do that.
8. Christ deals gently, if firmly with all those who are truly penitent.
9. The blessings of Christ are to be shared with others.

MONDAY.

WHAT JESUS COULD NOT DO.

"To be carnal minded is death, but to be spiritual minded is life and peace."—Rom. 8:6.

We think of Christ usually in terms of what He can do. It is unusual to think of His powerlessness. He could not turn aside for ease and comfort. He could not accept the rich world which the devil showed Him. He could not stoop to bigotry nor could He be tempted to rage.

To consider Christian living in the light of Christ's standard means to know that there are inabilities that are as glorious as the abilities that achieve things. How truly said, "It is better to be incapable of cheating and lying than to be capable of laying down one's life in some great stress of duty." In the melodrama, "Art and Mrs. Bottle," Mrs. Bottle says, "It is better to be little and useful than it is to great and useless."

Prayer—Our Heavenly Father, if spiritual-mindedness is heaven give us all of heaven that we can carry in our lives. Give us freedom from unfettered use of our powers which Thou hast given us. This we ask for Jesus' sake.—Amen..

TUESDAY.

AWAY FROM TOO MUCH.

"Let us follow the things that make for peace." —Rom. 14:19.

The following quotations are appropo:

"The worst unemployment is unemployment of the mind and heart."

"Let me live in a house by the side of the road and be a friend to man."

"The world is too much with us. Come ye yourselves apart into a desert place and rest awhile."—Jesus.

"God knew that we need so much of the peace of the earth, He turned a lot of it up edgewise." This is said of the grandeur of the mountains. It might also be said that He has left a lot of it in the quiet of country, home and forest for our retreat.

"The heavens are an all-star cast movie." What a reprimand to the modern urge to the bright lights and every-day movies!

Prayer—Our Father, give unto us the power to see things in their right relations and to put them in their proper places; and may we not miss the messages of silence in Thy wide open world. In Christ's name may we live.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

SILENT LAWS THE HEART MAKES.

"I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help. My help cometh from the Lord who made heaven and earth."—Ps. 21:1.

My, what nature brings to us! One of the most striking contrasts between heathenism and Christianity is in their respective attitudes toward nature, nature's laws and nature's meanings.

It is said that heathenism, untouched by Christianity, regards nature with uncertainty, distrust, timidity, even dread or terror, personifying and deifying the works of nature as something beyond them. Christianity, on the contrary, looks upon nature with confidence, fearlessness, cheerfulness, admiration, and adoration, a realm of life in which man may either illuminate and be illuminated.

Heathenism is in the bonds of slavery. Christianity makes one see that man's dominion is over the earth and sea, and everything therein speaks to man challenging him to take hold of its tremendous possibilities and turn the world into account. It is thus that we have the radio, the airplane, the organ, electricity, and all the other developments of science.

What has that to do with us? "All are yours," said Christ. He has given us our every day life and endowed us with a capacity to master it. He has promised a happy life and shown us the way to achieve it. Will we follow him?

Prayer—Our Father, be Thou our consciousness and our power. Raise us up daily unto the fulness of life within nature and within ourselves. Make our work today, yea, our thoughts worthy of Thy life and Thy name, and may our conduct please Thee. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE BIBLE.

"I am the living bread which came down from heaven: If any man eat of this bread he shall live forever."—Jno. 6:58.

This book is one you can reach up on tiptoe and find yourself.

St. Francis, of Assisi read the Bible and saw in it the winsome beauty of the Lord, and saw Him going about doing good. He heard a call within himself and felt that he must do as much the same as he could.

Thus, St. Francis, like Thomas, fell down and said, "My Lord and my God," and like Peter, said, "I will follow Thee whithersoever Thou goest." He then arose and went about Italy, a gracious and tender presence, giving his life for the good of the people. This is what happens to one who reads God's word under the guidance of the Holy Spirit.

There is directness, reality and force in His Word. It makes one see out of his own inner consciousness and experience. It takes one into matchless elevations of thought and spirit. In it one rises into an atmosphere of transfiguration.

Time will efface all that belongs to the mind of man, but his Word which is the word of eternal truth both in human life and the life of nature will endure forever.

Prayer—Our dear Heavenly Father, give us the love we need for Thy word, give us the wisdom of Thy word. May we live and speak in the atmosphere of the spirit today and forever.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

A PRAYER FOR TODAY.

"God give me strength to face the day—
God teach me how to wear
The scarlet band of courage;
Like a Banner in my hair!

"Be never mine the weakling's plea
From strife to be denied—
Bestow but faith to see thy hand
In all that may betide.

"Yea, break my heart, if it be thus
Thy wisdom enters in,
Permit but that, at journey's end,
Some worthwhile goal I win.

"So that when purple eve'n shades
About my life shall close;
I go like one who seeks at dusk
A well-earned, sweet repose."

Elizabeth Ferguson.

SATURDAY.

THE PROSPECTOR.

"His eye seeth every precious thing."—Job 28: 1-10.

Men have searched every corner of the earth for gold and silver and gems and for the new, rare minerals that are more valuable than any of the older "precious stones."

The business of a prospector is sometimes immensely profitable—and sometimes it results in mere emptiness. The result depends on knowledge, perseverance, and—chance.

But the eye of the divine Prospector "seeth every precious thing." If, deep down in your soul, so deep that your nearest and dearest do not suspect its presence, you cherish a noble ambition, a pure and holy desire, He sees that "gem of purest ray serene." He sees it and exults in it and counts all earth and heaven the richer for it.

Be glad that, as there is no hiding any evil from the Lord, so also there is no hiding any good. You may shirk from showing your best to your fellow mortals, well knowing how weak you are, how liable to err and fail; but rejoice in the knowledge that the divine Prospector has searched you out.

Prayer—May our hearts, O God, be full of precious things for Thine eye to gaze upon, lovingly, sympathetically, and with an eternal hope. —Amen.

—AMOS R. WELLS.

SUNDAY.

DOING ALL THINGS.

"I can do all things in Him that strengtheneth me."—Phil. 4:10-20.

Many years ago I chose this for my special Bible verse, my life motto. I am afraid that when I chose it I thought it meant that faith in Christ would confer on me a sort of human omnipotence. Many failures have taught me better. I have learned that Christ's strength will only enable me to do the things that He wishes me to do.

But do I really, when in my senses, wish to do anything else? If He should strengthen me to do anything outside His plans for me, what a failure, what misery would be the result! How glad I am that when I attempt what He does not want me to do, He sends no strength for the task, but only weakness!

Prayer—So will I rejoice in the strength Thou dost give me, my Saviour, and pray for ever more and more of it, since I am sure that Thou wilt bestow it only for my everlasting joy in the accomplishment of Thine eternally blessed will.—Amen.

—AMOS R. WELLS.

The dominant responsibility for the moral and spiritual condition of the nation does lie at the door of the churches. If the recognized mediators of the revelation of God to man sound an uncertain note, we obviously have no right to expect those who administer the affairs of Caesar to show consistent devotion to great moral or spiritual ideals. The power of Caesar is necessarily subject to constant approach by powerful influences of Mammon and greed for gain and selfish advantage. The Christian conscience must always exercise its largest influence upon civil government through its own consistent devotion and witness to the high and unselfish spiritual truths which it is its province to teach. Only as it contributes to the state of citizenship that seeks mercy from God and loves justice can they who rule follow such high principles.—Western Recorder.

THE KING'S BUSINESS.

(An anniversary sermon before the King's Daughters.)

By John G. Truitt, D. D.

"And David said unto Abimelech, And is there not here under thine hand spear or sword? for I have neither brought my sword nor my weapons with me, because the king's business required haste. And the priest said unto him, The sword of Goliath, the Phillistine, whom thou slewest in the valley of Elah, behold, it is here wrapped in a cloth behind the ephod: if thou wilt take that, take it: for there is none other save that here. And David said, There is none like; give it to me."—I Sam. 21:8, 9.

Let us turn to one of the many stories about David to which Jesus himself referred. We can imagine Jesus as a boy studying the Scriptures in Nazareth and with what delight He must have read about young David, since His mother was teaching Him that He was of the "house and lineage of David."

What lessons we may learn from this same story for ourselves today! The king had called one of his quickest and brightest young lieutenants in a very great emergency. Quick, quiet, sure! And David knows how to take orders! What great things God can do with men, and women who know how to obey. David once said "To obey is better than sacrifice." We have the curtain rise on David, and find him in the house of God. We do not know,—for he is not telling his business,—whether the work has been finished, or whether he is at that moment doing some angle of it. The king has instructed him, "Let no man know anything of the business whereabout I send thee." And so that is not told in the story. But as I was saying, we glimpse David as he passes through the house of God, and it is from that moment that we draw our lessons today.

I.

"The king's business required haste."—Another day, another hour, perhaps another brief moment would be too late. The king's business is not to be put off. It is not to be neglected. The little boy of a stricken family in our town may be on the road to a criminal career in a few awful, wanting, waiting, hungry months; and his poor little sisters may likewise be lost in the helpless hands of their stricken parents. But not if the King has His way. "Go, and do not talk so much." Tell the business to no man, and remember the king's business requires haste. Someone says, oh. but they are too young, and too poor to make the comparisons which bring such mental and spiritual suffering. They can struggle along, and maybe something will turn up, if not by the time they come to the years where they can work for themselves we can consider them and give them something to do. It will be too late. The king's business requires haste.

Or there is that poor, suffering, yet young and neglected mother; beaten, and bent, and broken, forgotten by her worthless husband, too scared and too proud to make her plight known to the outside world. She needs help. Help that will give a breathing spell, and hope, and life for herself and her little ones. Tomorrow. Tomorrow may be too late! The king's business requires haste.

Or let us not pass that "worthless husband" up too easily. Maybe there are plenty of reasons why even he is "worthless." Poor health, poor mentality, poor environment, a bad start, ignorance of the issues of life, the community kick, all may work together to make him a fatalist, and send him out to the land of I-Don't-Care, causing him to forfeit the life of his helpless children. The King has not wanted it so. Somewhere and somehow there is ample provision to tide him over with a bit of real help both in word and deed. In the kind of world that we talk so much about coming, he may have it, but it will be too late! The King's business requires haste.

And so the King's daughters, and the King's sons receive their orders and like David they act. And long before David was the King's son, the king's daughter had heard the cry of the helpless, and reached out her hand to rescue the baby who became the Moses of undying fame, and of unabating helpfulness to the human race.

II.

The King's business required a person. It did not require the bringing of a sword or other weapons. The person is the thing. "For I have neither brought my sword nor my weapons with me, for the king's business required haste." Bring the materials if you can, bring the things of the earth if you can, bring the wealth of the world if you can,—but do not tarry for it,—it is only a bubble after all,—by the side of character, personality, brains consecrated to the right, it is as nothing. So, in the presence of duty, and perchance danger there stood David,—empty-handed, whole-hearted!

Too much store has been laid by materials, too much price has been paid for bubbles, and too much emphasis has been put on persons. Too often men have been treated as machines, and women worse, and children have all too often been the chattels of lust and greed. A whole new day dawned with Jesus, and a person became a Son of God, or a King's daughter. It was He who said, "A man's life consisteth not in the things which he possesseth"; it was He who said that a man is better than a sheep; is was He who asked, "What shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" But far more than His words about the value of individuals was His constant expression of care, sympathy and love for the lowliest and most despised along the by-paths and lanes of life. And like David he was without the swords and weapons of earth as He climbed Calvary's heights attending the King's business. "And the Word became flesh and dwelt among us." The person is the thing. More than David's weapons, or the king's armaments, was David.

III.

The King's business required faith. It was not the first time David's faith had been found along with his fine courage. He had stood empty-handed before the lion that had attacked his father's flocks. But he had courage, and haste! He could act quicker than his enemy, and sure was his thrust. It was the ultimate sureness of goodness.

"My good blade carves the casques of men,
My tough lance thrusteth sure;
My strength is as the strength of ten,
Because my heart is pure."

It was faith that God would reward his efforts that gave him the courage to stand almost empty-handed before the giant Goliath, the Phillistine. And he had faith now on this mission whatever it was, that God would provide the proper equipment. Such faith saved the life of Moses, and such faith has moved those who have sensed the mission of the King throughout the past ages. Faith will make history today. A faith that moves individuals, and organizations, states and nations, will not have to rely so much on weapons as upon sympathy, understanding, and discretion such as is implied here in the faithfulness of David in obeying his king.

IV.

The King's business required equipment. "And David said, Is there not here under thine hand a spear, or sword . . . And the priest said, The

I analyze this to show you just what our churches and Sunday Schools are doing for the fatherless in our denomination. Now may I ask you just one question? Do you think our church as a denomination is doing its duty by these little ones who are wards of the church?

The balance of the income the Orphanage received last year came from wills, donations, and friends of the fatherless inside and outside of our church and from endowments.

Let every church and Sunday School start now to make a better showing in 1935.

sword of Goliath the Phillistine, whom thou slewest in the valley of Elah, behold, it is wrapped in a cloth behind the ephod: if thou wilt take that, take it for there is no other save that here. And David said, there is none like it, give it me." What a beautiful lesson. Duty done yesterday had prepared equipment for today. There is enough in that for the whole sermon. He had stored up treasures for the time to come by doing his duty yesterday and all along the way.

There was probably danger lurking behind the curtains. David perhaps was thinking of his trusty sword, or spear hanging back yonder somewhere in his tent. He needed equipment now. Priests are not supposed to need swords, but Abimelech, do you not have a sword or spear about here somewhere. And Abimelech lifted from his flowing garments the sword of Goliath and reminded David that it was a trophy of his yesterday's courage and obedience to his eternal King! Did you do your duty under some trying circumstance? Did you fight on with your back to the wall? Did you hold on faithfully to the very best you knew when the way was dark? Did you show valor when the battle was hot? Please God, may you meet the trophies of your victories in an hour when you shall need equipment.

No individual, or church, or organization, or state, or government can proceed without equipment. It is necessary. But it is not the first necessity as we have learned today. The character and the faith come first. "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God, and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." In the day when you stand in the need of equipment you shall find your very own faith-earned equipment handed unto you. Now all of this did not just happen to David, for David was a man who believed in, and trusted in God. May I remind you that in God's house he found food for himself and soldiers, and in God's house he found the necessary weapons of his warfare. And it will ever be so when our business is the King's business.

OBITUARIES

STRADER.

Henry Lee Strader, Sr., prominent farmer of Belews Creek township, Forsyth County, North Carolina, passed away at the home of his son, Vincent E., in Winston-Salem, Friday, January 4, 1935. He had been in declining health for the past six years, but he was seriously ill since last September.

He was the son of the late John A. and Elizabeth Ann Marshall Strader, and he was born at the old Marshall homeplace near Salem Chapel Church, April 11, 1866. He spent the greater part of his life in that section, where he was well known and greatly beloved. He was a member of Salem Chapel Church.

Mr. Strader was married twice. His first wife, Miss Hadie Marshall, died December 14, 1909. To this union were born five sons and one daughter: M. M., V. E., J. E., of Winston-Salem, H. L., Jr., of the home place, and John, the latter having died in 1911; the daughter, Mrs. Talmage Preston, of Belews Creek. In 1914 he was married to Miss Essie Fulton, of Belews Creek, who with one daughter, Miss Hadie Strader, and the above mentioned, survives. In addition to the immediate family, four brothers and one sister of the deceased survive: W. M., J. W., of Belews Creek, Z. V., of Greensboro, W. P., of Winston-Salem, and Mrs. R. F. Gentry of Reidsville.

On Sunday, January 6th, these loved ones, with three grand-daughters, one grandson, and a host of relatives and friends, after the services at the home and church, tenderly laid him to rest in the old Salem Chapel Cemetery amid a beautiful and loving tribute of flowers. Services were conducted by the writer.

WM. T. SCOTT.

FORTUNE.

Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom has seen fit to remove from our midst our sister and co-worker, Miss Babel Fortune, whose death occurred January 1, 1935.

We, the members of the Sunday School of New Lebanon Christian Church offer the following resolutions as a token of our esteem and appreciation of her beautiful life.

First: That the home-going of our beloved sister has taken from our midst a most loyal, faithful and useful member, one whose life was a rich benediction to all who knew her; one who meant much to our Sunday School and Missionary Society. We bow in humble submission to the will of Him that doeth all things well.

Second: That we cherish with affectionate regard her loyal friendship, her wise counsel. That we have been wonderfully blessed by having her with us; and her beautiful Christian life shall be one of our sweetest memories.

Third: That we extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved family and commend them to the All-wise Father for comfort and consolation.

Fourth: That a copy of these resolutions be sent to The Christian Sun for publication, a copy to the family and a copy be spread on the records of our Missionary Society.

Respectfully submitted,
MRS. G. C. MOORE,
CARRIE A. SHARPE,
RUTH HUMPHREYS.

HAYES.

We, the members of Union Christian Church, Virgilina, Va., because of our deep love for and high apreciation of the faithful Christian service of Brother Alfred Hayes, who departed this life at the Memorial Hospital, Danville, Va., on Monday, October 15, 1934, desire to express ourselves as follows:

First: Our appreciation of his efficient services for more than thirty years as deacon and Sunday School superintendent and for the past six years as Chairman of our Business Board.

Second: Our hope that from the inspiration of the memory of his Godly life and faithful service for his Lord we may carry on in the work from which he has been called.

Third: Our deepest sympathy to his loved ones, with the assurance of our prayers that all may meet at some time in the Better Land.

Fourth: A copy of this tribute of respect be placed on our church records, a copy be sent to the family and a copy be sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

BLAND.

On December 10, 1934, Mrs. J. B. Bland passed from her earthly life to her eternal reward. She was one of the faithful members of Mt. Carmel and a woman of strong faith in God. Every one who knew her spoke of her as a good Christian woman.

She leaves to mourn their loss her husband, seven children, thirty-four grandchildren, two great-grandchildren and a host of relatives and friends. May the Lord's richest blessings rest and abide with them.

The funeral services were conducted at Mt. Carmel and her body was laid to rest in the church cemetery.

BATTERSKILL.

Our town and community on last Sunday morning were plunged into deep grief in the passing of one of our finest Christian women, Mrs. John Webster Batterskill, at the age of sixty-four years.

She is survived by her husband, Mr. J. D. Batterskill, one daughter, Mrs. Luke Chandler, and two grandchildren, Jack Chandler of Virgilina and Mrs. Thomas Bradshaw of Burlington, N. C., and three brothers and three sisters of Newport, Vermont. Mrs. Batterskill was formerly of Newport, Vermont. More than thirty years ago, when the mining business of this section was booming, she, with her husband, came to Virgilina.

In 1905 it was my pleasure to receive Sister Batterskill and her husband into Union Christian Church, where they were faithful members for a number of years. Later they moved to West Norfolk and transferred their memberships to the M. E. Church there.

No words of mine can do justice to her memory. She is worthy of Solomon's tribute to a noble woman found recorded in Proverbs 31:10-31. Her home life was ideal. She was a real neighbor and friend to those about her, a woman of unusual poise, a fine personality, very intelligent and a true Christian.

The funeral service was from the M. E. Church of Virgilina by the pastor, Rev. J. B. Pettus, assisted by Rev. E. R. Harris and the writer. The burial was at the town cemetery. At the grave, the casket was hidden beneath a mound of beautiful flowers. C. E. NEWMAN.

BLACKSTONE.

In memory of Geo. F. Blackstone, who departed this life on December 28, 1934, aged 58 years.

While in the woods drawing shingles, he had a stroke of paralysis from which he never completely regained consciousness. He was a good neighbor and a useful man in the community and his friends proved their friendship during his affliction and death. He suffered greatly but he had all the attention and medical aid that loving hands and good doctors could administer. Death could only relieve him and so he went away.

He was buried December 29th in the cemetery at Pleasant Grove Church near his home. The funeral was conducted by Rev. C. W. Carter. Our deepest sympathy goes out to his wife, brothers and sister who mourn. G. D. HUNT.

VOLUME LXXXVII. RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1935. NUMBER 6.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

Dr. G. Campbell Morgan Remembered.—

In connection with his seventy-first birthday anniversary, the multitudes of his parishoners remembered Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, of Westminster Chapel, London, by completing a fund sufficient to make some necessary repairs to the stately place of worship which has a world-wide fame. Throngs continue to wait upon Dr. Morgan's ministry, which seems to be unabated in its power and usefulness, in spite of the more than three score and ten years which rest upon him.—The Phesbyterian.

World War Costs Again.—

The cost of the World War to the United States was about $50,000,000,000, according to an official estimate by Secretary of the Treasury, Morgenthau. The figures are as follows: Estimated cost to June 30, 1921, $27,729,000,000. Interest on war debt, $9,557,000,000. Veterans' administration, $6,391,000,000. Settlement of war claims, $88,000,000. This does not include something like $12,000,000,000 in war debts owed the U. S. by foreign nations.—Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

Use of Cigarettes Increasing.—

The record production of 125,600,000,000 cigarettes in 1934 is decidedly encouraging, or discouraging, depending upon the viewpoint taken, for it is nearly 14,000,000,000 above the production of 1933, and exceeds any previous record by 6,000,000,000. It is a peculiar fact that unemployment and depression decidedly lowers the consumption of staple food products as well as reducing the amount spent for clothing, but the man who is not working seems not to let up in the use of cigarettes—and the women are helping wonderfully in increasing the number used.

Profits From Waste Material.—

One of the greatest sources of industrial stream polution has been the "pickling" solution from steel mills. Not only a source of polution, this material has been an absolute loss. Now it is claimed that processes have been perfected whereby these waste materials, consisting mostly of ferrous sulphate, can be treated with success and at a profit. In the near future it is expected that these will be applied at steel mills which now discharge this waste into streams and there destroy virtually all life. According to Chemical and Metallurgical Engineering, the ferrous sulphate is converted into sulphuric acid and a residue of iron oxide, thus giving two usable products in the place of one unusable product. Sulphuric acid is one of the basic chemicals of industry, while iron oxide has many uses, including that of making red paint.

"Yes-Men" Are Still in Demand.—

Probably there is no bill in Congress of more far-reaching importance, not only because of the stupendous amount of money involved, but because of its effect upon the morale of the nation, than the $4,880,000,000 Relief Bill which is now pending in the Senate. It is a known fact that Senator Glass was offered the post of Secretary of the treasury in the Roosevelt cabinet, and his wisdom in refusing has been well borne out. Yet because of this offer, and still more probably, because of personal friendship, the Virginian has been slow to assail the fiscal policy of the administration. However, the first break came when Mr. Glass was left off the conference committee on the Fletcher-Rayburn bill, at which time he resigned from the currency and banking committee. Although this could only be interpreted as a slight, the veteran Senator still attempted to maintain a friendly attitude, though he did not fail to courageously oppose the mistakes he felt the administration was making. Now along comes the relief bill, and again, though chairman of the appropriations committee of the Senate, Mr. Glass is ignored. "These two incidents," says an editorial in the Richmond News Leader of February 5th, "speak for themselves. Mr. Roosevelt will doubtless keep up the suave semblance of personal cordiality toward the Virginia Senator, but he has broken with him." It continues: "If this were purely a personal matter, it . . . might not be a proper subject of editorial comment. But it is much more than personal. Mr. Roosevelt has dismissed from the public service many of those who had intimate knowledge of the federal reserve act. His secretary of the treasury was an apple-grower until March, 1933, with no particular knowledge of finance or interest in it. The new governor of the federal reserve board, Mr. Eccles, is a man of ability, but he had only the average small-town banker's acquaintance with the system until, overnight, he was named to direct it three months ago. Senator Glass, on the other hand, is one of the few men who have an intimate knowledge of the evolution of the federal reserve system. . . . Of the senators who voted on the federal reserve act in 1913, just seven retain membership," while ten remain in the house. "Among these seventeen survivors of political change, Senator Glass is undeniably and indisputably the one best versed in banking law. Is it the course of common prudence for the president to disregard him, simply because the Virginian does not think in the same channels with Mr. Roosevelt? Does not every executive need a stubbornly-logical 'No-man' to offset the 'Yes-men' . . . . If one is so inclined, it is permissible to ignore individuals, but it is dangerous to ignore experience."

The Senate and the World Court.—

The action of the Senate in rejecting adherence to the World Court has created quite a storm of comment from advocates throughout the country. The "World Peace Foundation" submits quite a few of these comments, from which we must of necessity submit only brief excerpts. Henry L. Stimson, former Secretary of State, says: "The cause of peace cannot be permanently set aside by the decision, which is not in accord with the true interests or methods of this country." President Robert M. Hutchins, of the University of Chicago, still thinks that "membership is inevitable and all those interested in world peace must join in the effort to bring the United States into the Court at the earliest possible moment." Hamilton Holt, President of Rollins College, waxes bitter: "Again the United States Senate has run true to form. They defeated Ceveland's and McKinley's attempts to negctiate an arbitration treaty with Great Britain. They defeated Theodore Rocsevelt's attempt to negotiate twenty arbitration treaties with our sister nations. They defeated Taft's attempt to negotiate model arbitration treaties with Great Britain and France. They defeated Wilson's attempt to bring the United States into the League of Nations. They defeated the attempts of Harding, Coolidge, Hoover and now Rocsevelt, to get us into the World Court. For the past fifteen years the whole world has been in a state of fermentation. Revolutionary and reactionary forces are pulling both ways at once. We see everywhere the breakdown of parliamentarism and the growth of ultranationalism, disaster, confusion, disturbance, uncertainty, distrust and fear. Yet the United States Senate refuses to let America play her part in the setting up of the only instruments that can deal adequately with world problems." One World Court advocate goes so far as to say: "Almost every evil suffered by the American people since 1920 is traceable to pigheadedness of certain senators refusing to allow American membership in the World Court." Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina, hopes, "that this decision will not be the final action in a world situation calling for another step toward the judicial settlement of international disputes." All of these are proponents of adherence to the court, those who oppose the court, having gained at least a temporary victory, are saying little. Yet it is a mistake to brand everyone who is in the opposition forces as an enemy to world peace. There are many who can see little good in such a court; our repudiated war debts have caused others to hesitate, and there are many people who are essentially interested in world peace, yet they are fearful of entangling alliances of any kind with European nations.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Rev. W. T. Scott of Winston-Salem has two very interesting and important communications in this issue which should be read by all.

Rev. Milo J. Sweet of Elon College has returned from the mid-year meeting in Chicago and reports a very inspirational and helpful gathering.

At the meeting of the Board of Directors of the Church Extension Boards at Evanston, Rev. Edwin C. Gillette, D. D., was elected Superintendent for the Southeast. He has been serving as Acting Superintendent since the death of Dr. W. Knighton Bloom last spring.

Rev. Frank Atkinson of West Palm Beach, Chairman of the Florida Conference Committee on Evangelism, conducted a Preaching Mission at the church at Fort Myers, Rev. O. T. Anderson, pastor. Mr. Anderson reports a fine series of services with "wonderfully interesting and helpful sermons," by Mr. Atkinson.

Rev. Gordon Brokenshire, pastor of the church at Orange City, Florida and Miss Helen Elizabeth Young of Orange City, were married in the church on Wednesday, January 30th. The ceremony was performed by Superintendent Gillette. After a short wedding trip the pastor and his wife will return and occupy the parsonage.

The editor of THE SUN, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, is in receipt of a very interesting letter from Dr. and Mrs. M. J. W. White, medical missionaries to the Philippine Islands for the past four and one-half years. Dr. White is the son of Mr. M. J. W. White, a prominent layman of Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va. Dr. and Mrs. White's letter appears elsewhere in this issue.

We are informed that Dr. W. M. Jay, pastor of our Holland Christian Church for a number of years, has tendered his resignation to take effect in June. It is presumed that he will be open for engagements. Any church desiring an efficient pastor will do well to communicate with him. Dr. Jay has a large number of friends throughout the Church. It is hoped that he will locate in the South.

The writer, who happens to be the Florida superintendent, had the opportunity to call on Dr. Atkinson and Dr. Rowland at the Florida Sanitarium in Orlando. He had a delightful visit and is glad to report that both of them seem to be improving in health and were in very cheerful spirits. Dr. Atkinson has gained some flesh, which is the object desired by the doctors, and Dr. Rowland has lost some, which also is desired by the doctors. The writer remarked that after they had finished that process we may have discovered the "average man."

Guests, attending the Rollins Anniversary, spoke in several of the Florida churches. The Moderator, Jay T. Stocking, D. D., preached at the church in Winter Park and spoke in the Rollins Chapel; Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter, former Moderator of the General Council, preached at West Palm Beach and Melbourne and also spoke at the Rollins Chapel; Dr. W. R. Kedzie of the Foundation for Education, preached at Orange City; and Rev. Judson L. Cross, Regional Secretary for New England, preached at Daytona Beach. Mr. Cross is a nephew of Lucy Cross who was the prime mover for the founding of Rollins College, and she was also one of the organizers of the Congregational church at Daytona Beach.

Rev. Frederick Held has resigned the pastorate of the church at Jupiter, Florida, and has accepted a call to the United Church at Columbus, Ga. Mr. Held has been pastor in Jupiter for four and a half years and has made an enviable record for himself in that church. He has especially demonstrated his leadership in the work for the young people and for boys and girls. Mrs. Held has also been a leader along musical lines, organizing Junior and Senior choirs, having been at one time supervisor of music in public schools. Mrs. Held has been ill for a number of weeks and she and their daughter will remain in Jupiter until spring. Mr. Held has already assumed the pastorate of the church at Columbus and we prophesy a strong advance in that church under his leadership.

COLLEGE CAMPAIGN.

January and February were designated by the Convention as "The College Period." During these months, Sunday Schools, churches, and individuals are requested to make a contribution to the college. It was the plan of the Convention to have no other special campaign by any other department of the Convention during this period. All were to unite in an effort to do something for the college, that it might be enabled to continue its strategic service for the denomination.

Attendance and support of the college have been most satisfactory up to this point. We are and will be in great need of financial assistance during the spring semester. We are absolutely dependent upon the generosity of the churches and friends of the school if we are to continue with honor to ourselves and to our creditors. This is a heart appeal—most earnestly so—to every Sunday School and church in the Convention to do your best. If everyone will make a contribution, however small or large, the total in the college treasury will be a "life-saver" to us.

To date, very few contributions have been received and still fewer churches have reached their goal. The majority of our ministers know the value of Elon College. They know what the college has meant to them and what it has meant to the church. They know how utterly impossible it would be for us to continue with progress without trained ministry. Our churches themselves are equally aware of this fact. By working together and uniting our contributions, we can keep the college open and going. I trust that the churches that have sent in partial contributions may continue their efforts until their quotas are reached. And those who have not sent in their offerings,—I trust that they will be anxious and determined that their churches shall raise the amounts asked for.

The following churches have responded:

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

Education which is grounded in a Christian atmosphere came in for its share of consideration at the Mid-winter meeting of the executive boards of the Congregational and Christian Churches at Evanston, Ill., January 21st-25th. It was asserted by Dr. W. Frederick Bohn, chairman of the Commission on Missions, that the Congregational and Christian Churches had "defaulted" in their financial responsibility toward higher education. Dr. Bohn, who is assistant to the President of Oberlin College, impressed upon his audience in an address on Tuesday night the religious responsibility of our denomination toward students in colleges and universities. He pointed out that historically and in theory the denomination has been foremost in working for higher education which has a religious emphasis. He called to mind that the first college in this country, Harvard, was founded by the Congregational Churches to provide an educated ministry, and later Yale was founded for a similar purpose; that up to 1921 the denomination approved a program to parallel the state universities with colleges of high standards and avowedly Christian.

"We cannot," Dr. Bohn said, "have come to the place where we do not believe we have an obligation to support the Christian college, nor that the time has come when the colleges no longer need to be Christian. That is the dual relationship. I make no plea for the pious institution which does not maintain proper educational standards nor for the college which has lost interest in that supreme educational function, the Christian interpretation of life and our relation to our fellowmen. Freedom we must have but just essential and more is the Christian interpretation of that freedom."

What the Congregationalists have done in a larger way, the Christians have attempted, as far as they have gone, in a smaller, but none the less important way, The founding of Antioch college has a significant place in the progress of education in America, and the services rendered by our other colleges are not to be taken as insignificant. But the effectiveness and length of service of these institutions have been limited because we have not supported them financially. Have we not "defaulted" in the support of our colleges? Elon College now offers us an opportunity and a challenge. The time has not come when we can honestly and soberly give over the program of higher education to the state. There is needed desperately the contribution which only the college dedicated to the quest of truth in an avowedly Christian atmosphere can make. There is desperately needed in these changing times education with an emphasis which is Christian. Elon offers Congregational-Christians in this section an opportunity to express their faith in such a Christian quest of education. Our dollars and our youth are needed to make good our belief!

WHY I BELIEVE IN IMMORTALITY.

By Rev. T. Fred Wright.

(Read before the January meeting of the Eastern Virginia Conference Ministerial Union.)

First, what do we mean by immortality?

Webster's Dictionary says it means, "Exemption from death or oblivion; unending existence." Another definition is, "Deathlessness; imperishableness."

Like Shakespeare, most of us have immortal longings" in us. Why should this be so? I think we may go back to the record of Creation in Genesis and find our answer where it says: "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul."—Gen. 2:7.

Into the dim past, to almost every race of men is traceable the hope for or belief in a future life in some form. "If a man die shall he live again?" has been asked many times, and man had rather believe that he will live again. It is said that the Hindu's Bible teaches a belief in immortality, and that Confucius did not expressly teach immortality, but joined in the belief of Chinese thought that the spirits of the good were permitted to visit their ancient habitation, and in reverence for the spirits of ancestors. The Egyptians early recognized the doctrines both of a future judgment and of a dwelling-place of the dead. When the white man came to America, he found the Indians worshipping the Great Spirit and believing in the Happy Hunting Ground.

Since God is eternal; and inasmuch as He created man in His own image, surely it all combines into a divine guarantee that He breathed into every living soul the breath of immortality. While the Old Testament does not emphasize immortality as much as the New Testament, yet the idea of immortality is clearly set forth. The following references give ample proof. "Enoch walked with God, and was not, for God took him." "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was: and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it." Eccl. 12:7.

"What is man that thou art mindful of Him? and the son of man that thou visitest him? For thou hast made him a little lower than the angels and hast crowned him with glory and honour." Ps. 8:4, 5. We cannot believe that He would leave His children whom He created "a little lower than the angels" without hope or without the fact of immortality. So with Job we may say, "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that He shall stand at the latter day upon the earth: And though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God: Whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another; though my reins be consumed within me." Job 19:25-27. The New Testament from Matthew to Revelation bears witness to the fact of immortality. Jesus in refuting the teachings of the Sadducees that there is no resurrection, said: "Now that the dead are raised, even Moses showed at the Bush, when he calleth the Lord the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. For he is not the God of the dead, but of the living: for all five unto Him." Luke 20:37, 38. His resurrection and His promises should give all the assurance we need. If there is no life beyond this, why should Jesus have said: "And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted up: That whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have eternal life." Jno. 3:14, 15. Or, "What is a man profited, if he gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?" Matt. 16:26. Or why should He have told of the Father's house having many mansions, and that He would come back to receive His followers and take them to live with Him?

Immortality is the voice of God in man's soul. Let us say with Peter: "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us into a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. To an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you." I Pet. 1:3, 4.

VALLEY LETTER—A WORD ABOUT CONFERENCE APPORTIONMENTS.

I see danger of a misunderstanding about our Conference apportionments which may result in disaster to our work here in the Virginia Valley Central Conference. Certain communications have been received by ministers and others in our conference stating that amounts raised by the various churches for the Aged Ministers' Fund, and for Elon College Fund, and for Missions will be credited on our conference apportionments. This would be true if our apportionments had been made out last conference with that in view, but such was not the case. Here is what we have laid apportionments for upon our churches this year: Home Missions, $400; Conference Fund, $200; Southern Christian Convention, $511; total, $1,111. The apportionments laid upon the churches total just the same, $1,111.

Now, it could easily happen that a church could raise as much for the Aged Ministers' Fund, Elon College, Missions, etc., as their apportionments amounted to, and then call their apportionments paid. What, then, must become of the items named on our apportionment table and adopted by our conference last August? If several or any number of our churches call their apportionments already paid when they have perhaps paid nothing to Home Missions, Conference Fund, and the Southern Convention, what will happen to our work here? Can we not see at once that this will not do at all?

And then, who of us have the right to throw away the apportionment table as adopted by our last conference, and adopt an entirely different one at this time?

I do not question that certain changes were made in the financial policy of the Southern Christian Convention at its last session. Drastic changes are usually made at every session of the convention. We hardly have time to get acquainted with one policy and put it into operation before it is thrown aside and a new one made. But the fact is, the apportionment committee of our conference had not seen a copy of the new financial policy of the Southern Christian Convention when they made out their report for our last conference; and no one else in attendance at our conference seemed to know anything about this new financial policy, or if they did they said nothing about it. And so far as I know, no one in our conference has seen a copy of this new policy yet. Hence our committee on apportionments is not to be censured for not making the apportionments to include all the new plans of the last session of the Southern Christian Convention.

Since I have not seen a copy of the new financial policy of the convention, I am not able to write accurately about that; but I have before me the report of the apportionment committee submitted to and adopted by our last session of conference, and know whereof I speak concerning that.

CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHEAST TO MEET.

The South-Eastern Congress of the Congregational Christian Churches will be held at The United Church, Raleigh, N. C., April 30th, May 1st and 2nd. Every Congregational Christian Church has a right to as many delegates as it wishes to send besides the minister. Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Florida, Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, and Virginia Churches are invited to be represented. There will be three great days of counsel, fellowship and inspiration. The program will embrace all our Southern interests with the wider interests of our national fellowship in relation to the Kingdom of Christ. All our leaders in the South will be present as well as many of our national leaders. Dr. Parks Cadman, Honorary Moderator of the General Council, will be among our national speakers. Dr. Dan Poling has promised to come as a spokesman for our Young People. The program is in the process of making and will be outstanding in its personnel. It will be arranged, however, so that all our ministers and laymen may have a part if they wish. No business will be transacted. This announcement is made so that churches, young people's organizations, women's societies, men's classes may have an opportunity to begin to plan for three great days which will mark, we trust, a turning of our churches into aggressive spiritual groups for a larger realization of the Gospel of Christ among ourselves and the communities which we serve.

NEW YEAR'S RESOLUTIONS.

I have made several of them and so far as I know, I have never kept any of them to the letter; but I do not believe the spirit of any one of them was lost. I am wondering how much it would add to the value of the Sun if all our ministers would resolve to write at least once a month and tell us something about their field of labor.

Several years ago I knew most all our ministers and something about the activities of the various churches. Not so today! How much loss we have suffered, the "Lord only knows." Every letter from any one of our pastors is a letter from a member of the great family of God, of which I am a member and about which I am very much interested. Come along Brethren! What shall we do about it?

MINISTERS TAKE NOTICE.

All ministers of the N. C. and Va. Conference and pastors who are members of any other conference who are serving churches in the said conferences are requested and urged to meet the committee that was appointed at the last regular meeting of N. C. and Va. Conference to carry out the instructions of the Southeastern Convention relative to the Christian Sun, at Elon College, Monday, February 11, 1935, at two o'clock.

It is very important that every pastor that serves in the above mentioned conference to be present. Any church not having a pastor is asked to have some member to represent the said church at this meeting.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.

5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

MY EUCALYPTUS TREE.

(An Editorial Correspondence.)

Florida Sanitarium,
Orlando, Fla., Feb. 2, 1935.

If this pad will stay put on my knees, (drawn up in bed at an angle of 45 degrees for a writing board) I will take my pen in hand to write and say that I did not attend even one of the seven thousand, five hundred dances the other evening, given in honor of our President's 53rd birthday in all the cities, villages, and hamlets throughout the United States, our inland and island possessions. No, Sir, not one of them did I go to. I just didn't have to go. Not the most gorgeous and glamorous dance would have been anything new and unusual to me—not in these days. You go to a dance, you know, to witness (or to take part in) rhythm of movement, grace and gracefulness of form, the lilt of limb and body, in brief, to see poetry in poise and person. Leastwise, that's what they tell us it is all about. Say that, and as much more as you can in praise of the dance, then come with me and I will show you, right here at my very door, a scene into which all these virtues and graces are cast with such charm and color as to make the most colorful ball-room you ever saw pale into insignificance, and seem in comparison as drab as a last year's bird's nest. And it is none other than the colorful dance, the glorious parade and quick-step that my eucalpytus tree puts on for me, sometimes three and four times every day. Now, I am not exaggerating, not trying to paint a picture; I am just trying to tell my readers the plain, unvarnished truth. The fact is we are so busy looking at the artificial and the superficial which we mortals put on, and try to adorn ourselves with, that we forget, or fail to look up and about to see what the good God and Father of us all has put on and adorned Himself and His creations with.

And that isn't the half of it. When we do look at, or try to find, beauty, grace, and glory in natural form and fashion, we think we must see a mountain, gaze at the ocean, or sweep the horizon with our eyes. Foolishness and nonsense! Can you get joy out of fiction, romance, history or science by looking at a library, walking through shelves and alcoves of big and beautiful books? Well, not much. The genuine joy, the real thrill comes when you pounce on a book and go through its chapters page by page and see what they are saying to you. Why can't we be as sane and particular about what the Supreme Author has written in one of His individual volumes as we are about what some man of flesh and failure has written, or tried to write for us in his book?

Of all the single and specific acts of Creation to keep me company, give me cheer, and thrill me, mind, body, and soul, please commend me to a tree. Not a forest or a jungle of trees—no more than a room full of books—just one tree. These three weeks while I have been on my back in bed looking up, (Who was it, by the way, that said we never look up till we are down, and only when flat on our backs do we get the real look up?)—well, into my vision, and into my life has come daily, hourly, my eucalyptus tree. Oh! but it is a joy. No chisel of man could ever carve such grace of trunk and body; no handiwork of man ever fashioned such perfection of limb and branch; no brush of artist ever painted such delicacy of leaf and bower as the Maker of this universe has displayed right here on my eucalyptus tree.

Its body is lithe, long and white, some fifty or more feet of it, much like the strong, stately column of a colonial mansion or some ancient temple. Then its limbs begin to go out with upward curve and reach, for the distance of another fifty feet or more, never a one of them drooping, but each and all pointing upward, as if their occupation was to lift sap, leaf and life itself to ever higher levels. A most graceful tree indeed is the eucalyptus tree when its long lithe limbs, branches and twigs decide to put on a dance. This it does every time the winds blow through its branches. Why, it just can't stand still then. When the winds, (the dancing music of my eucalyptus) start up, talk about the rhythmic and graceful step "figures," and movement on a ball-room floor! Well, they are simply not in the same class with the swing of joy, glee and gladness that you will see in the perfect harmony of movement in my eucalyptus.

Am I gaining strength, finding comfort, getting well? How in the world can I do otherwise when my cheerful and competent Doctor comes in and says, "Atkinson, I can just see improvement in you daily;" the dietitian sends me out great trays of delicious foods and I empty them voraciously; the business manager and nurses and messenger boys dropping in to see if they can add to my comfort; and my lovely eucalyptus tree staging three or four gleeful and real dances every day!

I agree with the Psalmist: God makes us lie down, and then we discover how green and glad the pastures are.

Dr. Rowland and I are grateful for the many cheering messages of faith and love that come to us while we regain our strength and health under such happy surroundings, and in a hospital where efficiency, hospitality and good cheer always abound—because all service to guests and patients is done in the name and love of the Great Physician.

CHURCH MACHINERY.

The Church of Christ is the one divine institution operative in human society for the redemption of mankind and the salvation of the world. Christ said on one occasion, "Upon this rock I build My church, and the Gates of Hell shall not prevail against it." Later, Paul declared the church to be the body of Christ. We think of the church as constituted by those who have been touched with the power of the Spirit and made one by redeeming grace. We think of the church house as a building erected and dedicated for worship and service, with its altars to which we come to make our confessions, offer up our prayers, and pay our vows unto the Lord. Usually, when we find fellowship with God and rejoice in the blessings of such communion, we become conscious of a passion to share with others the spiritual riches that have been acquired in fellowship with the Eternal. It is impossible for one to possess the Spirit and the Spirit not express Himself. Such expression we call witnessing. By witnessing, we convince and lead others to Him Whom we ourselves have found. On the Day of Pentecost, the Apostle Peter bore his witness without fear; and as a result of his witnessing, many were brought into the Kingdom.

The permanency and development of the church necessitated some kind of an organization. Accordingly, certain men of good report, filled with the Holy Ghost, were selected and set apart as deacons, whose duty it was to provide for the necessity of the poor. We find also that the apostles themselves, who were considered evangelists, had one of their number designated as the treasurer—the one who carried the money. There were, then, apostles, presbyters, deacons, deaconesses, and evangelists in the early church.

A certain amount of church machinery is necessary today if the work of the Kingdom is to be done with thoroughness and effectiveness. The modern church of today, as a rule, is burdened with too much church machinery, or rather, too much machinery that has become inactive and non-operative. This machinery includes as follows: First, a pastor, whose business it is to evangelize; that is, to proclaim the gospel, to care for the spiritual needs of its people. Second, a Board of Deacons, who should be active in its oversight of the church, looking after the poor and otherwise providing for the necessity of the same. Third, an official board or some kind of an official organization representing all departments of the church, charged with the responsibility of conducting the business of the same. Fourth, committees who look after the evangelistic, the educational, the devotional, the missionary, and the financial interests of the church. Fifth, organizations, men's groups, Ladies' Aid and Missionary Societies, etc. Sixth, Sunday School, with all of its departments, and the Christian Endeavor, with its organizations. This, in the main, indicates the usual machinery for the modern church, which is well and good, provided every part of the machinery is kept in condition and is made to be productive. When any part of an organization becomes inactive and inoperative, it should either be made productive for good or eliminated from the organization. Better by far for a more simplified organization—one that can be made productive—than to have a complicated scheme that is incapable of moving to bring forth fruit.

There are certain great responsibilities resting upon every organization that has the courage to call itself a church; namely, first, to proclaim the everlasting gospel to all who come and see that the light of that truth shines afar; second, to bring together those who are changed by the gospel that they may be encouraged by the fellowship and prayers of those to whom they have become related in the spirit; third, to build up each other in the knowledge of the truth and to multiply their common passion for righteousness in human society; fourth, to impart to others the joy that has become theirs through Christ. If the church can build itself around these important factors, its growth and efficiency will be assured.

We need to become concerned not simply about the ones who are in the church but tremendously about those who are out of the church. A church can become selfish and self-centered by contending that "we have all we can do to keep our members in line and active." It is not a question of keeping your church or of saving yourselves; but Christianity puts the imperative responsibility upon the church to save the world. We need to grow in numbers. It is the command of God. And every church in our Convention needs to take seriously this command and dedicate itself, heart and soul, to the business of discovering, convincing, and winning those who are out of the church into its fellowship.

Every local church should begin now, in its own way, to arouse its membership to an aggressive evangelistic program that all out of Christ may be brought to Him ere this season of religious activity and of spiritual revelation has come to a close.

COURT TRIALS.

The average individual in this country is quite aware of our court trials—our system of administering justice. If one should not be acquainted with such procedures, he certainly has missed an opportunity in these recent days. Every daily paper in the nation has been full of the Hauptmann trial. Practically every radio in the thousands of homes in our country has given reviews of the trial and indicated the progress of the same. Richard Bruno Hauptmann is being tried for kidnapping and murdering Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr.

The kidnapping of the Lindbergh baby was a crime that shocked civilization throughout the world. The failure to apprehend the criminal and bring him to justice seemed to encourage that type of crime throughout the country, at least. There followed closely a series of kidnappings. Not only were infants kidnapped, but adults—men and women—have been seized upon by criminals in disguise, forced into custody, and held as hostages until a fabulous sum of money was deposited as a ransom. The government has become determined and active in its efforts to bring to trial and to justice all such criminals, and its has succeeded admirably well.

The eyes of the world are focused on the New Jersey courts, waiting the outcome of this trial. It is not certain, however, that he will be proven guilty and given the maximum penalty for such a dreadful and dreaded crime. Should the courts fail to convict Hauptmann, or fail to find the guilty person and bring the same to justice and to judgment, one wonders what the results will be. To the average layman, there scarcely seems a question as to Hauptmann's guilt. Until he can explain his possession of the ransom money and his cleverness and success in concealing the same, it will be exceedingly difficult to convince anyone of his innocence. If, with the evidence now in hand, defending attorneys can build up a case that will prevent conviction and penalty, is it possible, the average individual inquires, for one in this country, under our present jury system, to bring any criminal to justice and prove his guilt unless he be caught in the act and there is no one who can be induced to defend him?

We are humans and our efforts along the lines of justice must of necessity be imperfect. We may escape human courts—in fact, there may be no reason to bring us into legal contentions—but no one shall escape divine courts. God has a case against every individual. There will be no accusers in that court other than one's own conscience. We will not be able to call upon witnesses to defend or dencunce. We will declare our own guilt in the court of eternal justice. We are building up our case now, day by day. It will be with us either "Depart from me, O Lord, for I am a sinful man," or "Have mercy upon me, for I am unworthy of Thy love." Fortunately, however, there will be One to plead our cause. Christ will be our defense. And may His plea in our behalf be "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do."

ROLLINS CELEBRATION.

The fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Rollins College was celebrated at Orange City, January 29th. About one thousand people were present, including many Congregational leaders and leaders in other denominations; also representatives of colleges and universities and civic bodies. Plans for this celebration were in charge of Rev. William S. Beard, D. D., formerly Secretary of the Laymen's Advisory Committee of the Commission on Missions, and now connected with Rollins College. President Hamilton Holt presided. The historical address was given by Dr. Edward M. Noyes, pastor of the Tourist Church at Seabreeze, Florida, and pastor emeritus of the Congregational church at Newton Centre, Masachusetts. The other address was by the Moderator of the General Council, Dr. Jay T. Stocking, who by curicus circumstances is the pastor-elect of the church at Newton Centre, Massachusetts. Dr. Stocking's address was on "The Building of a College," and was a brilliant, searching and vital discussion of that theme. Dr. Noyes' paper, entitled "The Early Hours of Rollins," reccunted the steps which led up to the founding of the college, and was full of interesting information, enlivened by touches of wit and humor. Many expressed the hope that these two addresses would be published.

The story of the founding of Rollins is an interesting one. Thirteen struggling Home Missionary Congregational churches met in their first Conference. At that meeting a letter was read from Miss Lucy Cross, a graduate of Oberlin, urging the Congregational churches to take steps toward organizing a college. This letter impressed itself upon the gathering and a committee was appointed and a year later this committee reported. This was at the second meeting of he Congregational Association, as it was then called and was held in Orange City fifty years ago. At that time definite steps were taken toward organizing the college and three months later the association met again and selected a site and elected trustees. The site selected was at Winter Park. Other places considered were Orange City, Mount Dora, Daytona Beach and Jacksonville. This was the first college organized in the state of Florida. Congregational colleges have not been denominationally controlled, and the Board of Trustees selected were interdenominational, and the college has always been more or less independent, though fostered by the Congregational denomination. The Congregational Education Society, during the years, has contributed around $130,000 toward the promotion of the college.

A bronze tablet commemorating the founding of Rollins College was presented to the church at Orange City by Dr. William S. Beard on behalf of the donor, Mrs. Jane Murray of Willimantic, Connecticut, and Orange City. It was accepted for the church by the pastor, Rev. Gordon Brokenshire. Also there was erected on the lawn of the village library a highway marker presented by the Daughters of the American Revolution. This marker narrates the founding of Rollins College in that community by the Congregational Association of Florida.

In connection with the celebration there was beautiful music rendered by the Rollins Chapel Choir and there was a reception and tea at the Community Building, followed by an informal dinner at the Orange City Inn.

In connection with the fiftieth anniversary celebration of Rollins, there will be a further observance at Winter Park on April 17th. The Annual Founders' Week celebrated at Rollins will be held February 22nd-26th.

THE MID-WINTER MEETING.

The annual, so-called, mid-winter meeting was held in Evanston, Illinois, January 21st-24th. The mid-winter meeting is a meeting of the Commission on Missions and of the Home and Foreign Boards, and this year there was added The Council of Social Action. Prior to the meeting in Evanston, the Conference of Superintendents for the country held a meeting at the LaSalle Hotel in Chicago, January 18th-21st. This meeting of the superintendents is one of fine fellowship and there is also the facing of the common problems of leadership in state conferences and other units of organization under our Congregational-Christian denomination. Rev. W. P. Minton, D. D., was welcomed into the conference of the Superintendents as the new Superintendent of Pennsylvania. Rev. Simon A. Bennett, Superintendent in Indiana, was one of the speakers on the program.

The mid-winter meeting of the various boards was held again at the Parish House of the Congregational church in Evanston, Dr. Hugh Elmer Brown, pastor. Dr. Brown is an ideal host and the people of the church also cooperated wonderfully in the meeting. The opening session was a supper at which the principal speaker was Moderator Rev. Jay T. Stocking, D. D., who spoke on the subject, "The Enduring Motives of Missions." Dr. Stocking, as always, gave a strong, inspiring and challenging message. The Boards faced many routine problems and also some important new ones. The principel new problem was that of financing the Council of Social Action, and the integrating of this Council into the denominational program. There had been some misgivings and many criticisms of the Council. Many of these were cleared up by the clear and forceful address given by Professor Arthur E. Holt, Chairman of the Council. Special sessions of the Council of Social Action were held on the last day of the mid-winter meeting.

At the evening sessions, which were held in the Evanston church there were platform addresses presenting the cause of Foreign and Home Missions and the Council of Social Action.

There was an optimistic spirit in the mid-winter meeting this year, and a feeling that the bottom had been struck as to missionary giving and that it was a time for facing the future and for a general advance. It was in this spirit that the problems were faced, and those who were present returned to their fields with a strong feeling that there were great days ahead, both days of challenge and opportunity and of achievement.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The church is a divine institution. But it is a body of people who are human. And the human element in the church is a field for development and a challenge of human faith. For the church was founded to reach human beings and call them to a re-birth of soul and life. In this materialistic age, of financial emphasis, there is a danger of losing the vision of spiritual privilege and opportunity.

Humanity has one universal need. This need is not limited to any class, creed nor color. It abounds in the palace of the rich and in the cottage of the poor. Capitalist and laborer, young and old, great and small find themselves finally face to face with an accusing conscience whose voice cannot be hushed by material forces. Man's need of divine help is evident everywhere. Jesus had compassion for the multitudes who were restless like sheep without a shepherd. The Master gave Himself to the opportunity of administering spiritual help. He had a sympathetic heart and a helping hand.

This is an age of hungry mouths. Millions of people today are suffering because they need bread and clothing. But that need is not as great as the hunger for the bread of life, although it may be more evident to the superficial observer. In every station of life hungry hearts cry out to the church for spiritual bread. What an opportunity for the church of Jesus Christ!

Just think of one group of people: the shut-ins of the world. Some of these are faithful Christians, who face the sunset of life, with broken health. Physical strength has failed them. They are denied the precious privilege of fellowship in the house of God. Others come and go, while their days of activity are a priceless heritage, and a sweet memory. Then there are others who have never known the joy of feasting in the house of God. Life is dull and dark and dreary and they scan the clouded skies for some flickering star of hope. They need the Gospel of life and a word of comfort and strength.

How fine it would be if some message of strength and spiritual help could be carried to all such hungry hearts! There are fathers and mothers and sons and daughters confined to their homes by sickness and sorrow. There are cripples and broken hearts who need a human voice and a human touch. The church is the only institution commissioned by Jesus Christ to seek the power to carry on this healing work in His name.

Busy pastors find many such people. There are multitudes who wait in vain for the word of encouragement and the prayer of faith. What a blessing and a benediction to be a messenger of God on such a glorious mission. How sweet to bow for a moment of prayer in the presence of an aged saint of God, who says, in her affliction, "This may be my last sickness, but all is well with my soul." For such an one there is a message of hope, steadfast and sure, and the handclasp carries a touch of another world and a new life.

The Church paper should be a channel of blessing in the homes of the people. It can minister to the people who are shut in. People who write for publication need to pray for spiritual power to help others. A young minister one day asked the late Dr. W. W. Staley, "How did you like my sermon?" The Doctor said: "It was a very good literary production. But it seemed to me that you were thinking more about the sermon than the congregation. A sermon should be prepared and delivered for a definite spiritual need." There is power for people who will use it to help others. Surely the church should pray that the press and the pulpit may be channels of blessings to all needy souls.

VIRGINIA TRIP.

South Norfolk.

It was my pleasure to visit South Norfolk Christian Church and Sunday School Sunday morning, January 27th. Through the courtesy of Rev. O. D. Poythress, the pastor, I had the privilege of addressing his Sunday School class. I found a fine group of young men, who listened attentively to the story of the Apostle Peter—his temptation, denial, and confession. At 11:00, we gathered in the beautiful auditorium for a service of worship and praise. I spoke to the audience about the college. At the close of the services, an offering was received which was turned over to me as a contribution for the college.

The Christian Temple.

Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, pastor, has recently changed its program of worship for the Sabbath. They meet at 11:00 for their morning worship. The evening service has been discontinued, and they meet at 5:00 for vespers instead. At this particular time of day, the auditorium of the Christian Temple is at its best. It presents a most beautiful and artistic effect, as the soft evening light forces its way, gently, through the art glass windows. An atmosphere which lends itself readily to worship is evident. It was a pleasure to worship again in this church and to enter once more into the fellowship and affection of the good people with whom I labored so many years. It is always a pleasure to visit the Temple, and particularly was it pleasing to me to speak to them in behalf of the college. The college has perhaps assisted the Temple more than any other church, both directly and indirectly, in its unselfish service for the denomination of which it is a part.

First Church, Norfolk.

Rev. F. C. Lester is the pastor. Responding to his most cordial invitation, I spent the evening of worship with him and his good people. It was a bitter cold night—one of the coldest I have ever felt. On my way to the service, I wondered if any would venture out. To my delight, I found a splendid audience, considering the membership of the church. Lester is interested in his local church and in the Department of Christian Education, but he is equally interested in the whole church's program, failing at no time to lend his influence for the good of every department according to its needs. On different occasions, I have worshipped with the congregation of the First Church in Berkely, and it was a delight to have this privilege again and to bring to them information about the college, with a hope that they too will add their interest and gifts that the college may be adequately supported.

I am greatly concerned for the college offering. It is impossible for me to visit all the churches, but I am willing to do my best: and wherever my services are requested I shall endeavor to go. It is not necessary for me to visit the church, but I do hope and pray that no one church in the entire Convention will fail in its duty at this particular time.

AT THE FEET OF JESUS.

What a wonderful place the woman named Mary had at the feet of Jesus! A lowly place it seemed in the eyes of the people, yet how exalted in the sight of the Lord; a place to be coveted by all mankind; a privilege to be craved more than life itself.

Mary, the mother of Jesus, was the first Mary who worshipped at the feet of Jesus. There had been a great wonder in her heart from the time of the visit of the angel Gabriel with his prophetic announcement; then when the shepherds came to worship her babe in the lowly manger at Bethlehem; the visit of the wise men with their costly gifts; the words of Simeon and Anna in the temple caused her wonder to increase as she pondered them in her heart. Could her heart be so filled and not worship? We wonder if she fondled the tiny baby feet even as young mothers do now, kissing them, and as she did how she must have felt her humility and how her soul was prostrate with her love and devotion. Those feet that in a few short years were to be pierced for the salvation of a lost world.

The years sped by and one day another Mary who had been forgiven of her many sins entered the room where Jesus sat at meat in the Pharisee's house. Her sins had been open to the people and she was known as a sinner; yet she stood at the feet of Jesus and wept tears of repentance, tears of love for the One who had the power to forgive her sins. The feet of Jesus were bathed with her tears, her kisses, and then dried with her hair; her precious ointment was poured forth upon His feet, her ointment of love, what could be more precious? She was the first of the many who have followed in her train that acknowledge the power of the shed blood of Jesus to forgive sin and to cleanse from all unrighteousness.

Then on one other day Jesus went to a home in Bethany and Mary sat at Jesus' feet while her sister served. What a lesson she teaches us: that we need to sit at His feet and learn of Him before we can truly serve. "The better part," Jesus said, and may we also choose Mary's humble seat that we may be better fitted to serve. She also was at the feet of Jesus after her brother had died. Her heart was broken with grief, her faith was sorely tested, yet she fell at His feet in her sore need and Jesus met her need through His wonderful power. So today He meets every need by either lifting the burden or by giving grace to bear the burden. Jesus never fails His trusting children so they need never go as sorrowful orphans but ever looking up to Him with the reflection of His divine glory shining in their faces. The contrary winds should ever fan the flame of the divine fire to a greater glow.

Three of the gospels speak of the final anointing of Jesus but only in the gospel of John is Mary's name mentioned. Her box of very precious ointment was broken and poured out upon His head and His feet: proof of her love and faith. Her act was not understood yet all shared in the perfume poured forth. Mary did not know but she may have had a premonition that it would be the last time she could show forth her devotion to the One who had done so much for her. To her was given the blessed task of annointing Him for His burial. What an incentive her act should be for us to redeem the time; buy up every opportunity to serve our Lord for we know not when our last opportunity may come.

The last time we find the women named Mary at the feet of Jesus was on the wonderful resurrection morning. They were not only at His feet but they took hold of His feet and so expressing the deepest reverence mingled with the most ardent affection; while they obtained a fresh evi-

A Story for the Children

FOLLOW THE GUIDE.

Last summer a party set out to climb Mt. Lyell, the highest peak of the Sierra Nevada within the Yosemite National Park. There were eighteen in the party. Several were of middle age, but most of them were boys and girls from fifteen to twenty-one or two, bubbling over with pep and eagerness to reach the summit.

The guide was a Ranger-naturalist in the National Park Service. He had been selected for his fitness to lead in this ascent and others equally hazardous. He had had many season's experience as a guide in the Colorado Rockies, and, in addition, had successfully fulfilled the requirements of the Field School for the training of Ranger-naturalists. He was strong, alert, intelligent, and, above all, cauticus; all in all, a competent mountain guide. The more apprehensive of us, especially, believed that in trusting to his guidance we were in good hands.

The trail to the base camp lay along the Lyell Fork, and was comparatively flat except for an abrupt ascent of about a mile at the end. Each went his own pace, with little attempt to keep together. But at the campfire that evening, the guide called for the attention of all, and said, in effect: "Tomorrow, when we climb the peak, there will be very little danger for us if we keep together. No matter how impatient some may be to get to the top, there must be no going ahead of the party. I am the guide, and I am responsible for your safety. Therefore, since I am the leader, I want you to let me be always in the lead. If any fast climbers are to be sent ahead, I will be the one to say who they will be."

Two boys had come over from their camp across the river to visit our campfire. They were vacationing in the mountains on their own. They had packed in their bed rolls and a considerable supply of food, for they had planned to climb Ritter and Banner, as well as Mt. Lyell.

They were fine-looking boys, broad and sturdy in their plaid mackinaws. The older boy was a high school graduate, about to enter college, and doubtless knew a great deal. He had worked to earn the money to take himself and his younger brother on this camping trip.

Before they left, the Ranger-guide invited the two boys to join his party for the climb the next morning. But they declined courteously. They explained that they intended to leave earlier than his party, and climb two peaks instead of one the next day.

Yet the boys were still at their breakfast when the Ranger's party crossed the bridge the next morning and hit the upward trail. By taking a different trail, however, the boys reached the foot of the glacier before the Ranger's party came in sight three hours later.

The hardest part of the ascent lay ahead—a mile-wide stretch of pitted snow and ice rising steeply to the final perpendicular rampart, below the summit. It required an experienced eye to discover the safest route up such a formidable barrier. Again the Ranger asked the two boys to join his party.

The two boys talked it over at one side. The younger boy glanced up at the dizzy height, and seemed to weaken a little. But the other one said, "No, come on; we'll go it alone." They started off over the snow at heart-straining speed.

A steep snow chimney ran up to a high point on the rock wall, and here some of the more impetuous of the Ranger's group started to climb. But he called them down. "That is unsafe," he said. He led them around the rampart until he found a route where, by clinging to the great rocks with hands and toes, they finally reached the top in safety. The two boys were already there to greet them.

The Ranger's party had not finished eating lunch on the summit when the two boys rose to start on their descent. This time the Ranger did not ask them to join his group or give them advice. Several of his own boys asked to go with them and the Ranger consented, only cautioning them to go down by the same route they had come up.

The older brother came to the snow chimney, and, not heeding the guide's warning, determined to slide. He had had a little experience with the glissade, as this method of descent is called, but not enough to qualify him to judge the degree of risk involved. He stepped off on almost perpendicular snow and immediately lost his footing. He rolled over and over as he hurtled through the air and bounced on the snow until he finally came to a stop three hundred feet below. It was fortunate for him that he fell on snow, and not on the ice that covers the glacier later in the season. He might then have had a broken leg, or, at worst, a broken neck to pay for his rashness. As it happened, a broken wrist was his only injury.

It was fortunate, also, that the Ranger and his party were within call, to put the wrist in splints and send him back to the base camp, and from there on to a doctor, with several of the party to keep him company.

The injured boy expressed gratitude, but that could not alter the fact that he had upset the Ranger's party. The Ranger had the difficulty of restoring morale and getting his excited climbers back to camp without accident. Those who went with the injured boy had to give up a part of an enjoyable outing. The boy's dreamed-of holiday in the mountains was spoiled. Their parents were caused needless expense and anxiety.

It was an accident, to be sure, and accidents may come to anyone. But is it not true that many accidents might be avoided if those who rush headlong into adventure were willing to profit by the wisdom and experience of another already proven on the trail?

This is especially true in mountain climbing. There has been a mounting toll of fatal accidents in this sport in recent years. In almost every case, the cause may be traced to an overabundance rather than a lack of self-reliance.

In 1934, a couple left their camp breakfast hastily and set out, as though by impulse, to climb one of the loftiest and least known peaks of the Sierra Nevada. Twelve days later their bodies were found by a searching party. They had nearly reached the summit, but one point had proven too much for their limited experience.

The demands of recklessness on the Government Ranger service are increasing as more and more would-be climbers flock to the National Parks. It would not be unreasonable to require licenses for all except those who climb under accredited guidance.

Mountaineers with a record of brilliant achievement are more cautious than the average amateur, because they recognize the danger. The members of the German-American Expedition to Nanga Parbat in 1932 spent months in preparation for their almost superhuman exploit. Every possible source of helpful information was consulted, every suggestion considered. When it came to attempting the lofty Himalayan peak itself, the climbers did not move forward from one camp to the next without first sending scouts to test the safety of the way they were to follow.

Self-reliance is an admirable quality, and most worthy of cultivation. It serves excellently in the known and familiar areas, if not carried to extremes. But there are cliffs in life we must all climb, and perilous descents, as well. Better for us if at such times we do not turn a deaf ear to the One who has gone that way before.—Mary Burr Dawson in Advance.

ELON AS A CO-EDUCATIONAL COLLEGE.

The College which creates the will to learn, the purpose to achieve, has a quality that makes that College rich with value. It is the spirit of Elon College that makes her just such a College. I am happy to be an alumnae of Elon College and feel grateful for the beautiful and happy spirit that has always permeated the buildings, the campus, and every phase of life at Elon College.

I believe that one of the important factors that creates this spirit at Elon is that it is a co-educational college. It was the ancient idea that colleges were established for men. Women were not accepted. They were thought as not being intellectually capable of associating and "keeping up," mentally, with the men in College. The older institutes of learning in our own United States, when they were founded, had no place for women; but, thanks be, when Elon College was founded, it was decided that women should be admitted on an equal basis with men. Now the time has come when practically every College and University in the country has done the same thing. Woman has been accepted and acclaimed as man's equal, intellectually.

When one enters College, it is hoped that after four years of training and "schooling" a finished product will go forth from those College walls. However, it takes more than knowledge of books to meet with life's demands. One needs personality, social charm, and the ability to be at ease on many and varied occasions. True, some of this can be acquired in the school room, but associations and contact with fellow students will teach one much. In this day of equality of the sexes, men and women must meet on an equal and natural footing in all the relationships of life—commercial, social and intellectual. There is no place I know of where this is so normal, so taken for granted, as it is on a co-educational campus. There is no other place where men and women are so prepared for accepting it naturally in later life.

Then, to those who are opposed to co-educational Colleges on account of marriages made in College, it might be interesting to them to know that records show that in these days of unstable marriages, where there is a divorce for every six marriages in the United States there is only one divorce made between men and women who met at co-educational College.

One noted Judge has said, "The divorce Courts would go out of business if they depended on marriages made in College." These couples have had the same friends and same interests since they were eighteen. They have the same memories, the same loyalties. It seems that the man and woman who cannot make a success of marriage after four years of close acquaintanceship—such as is possible in a small co-educational College—probably would not be able to make a success of marriage under any circumstances.

So, may Elon College command the support, never uncritical, but always loyal and sympathetic, of all earnest-minded men and women who desire human life to go on to better things in the persons of the Alumni of Elon.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

"ENDURING MOTIVES FOR MISSIONS.

The Church has gone forward successfully and effectively only when it has been fired with a sense of mission. During the past few years the whole missionary enterprise of the Church has been under fire. Missions have been closed and missionaries have been told to come home because we have not believed sufficiently in the Christian message. To be sure there have been instances where possibly certain work has not been worth the funds invested, but that is the exception and not the rule. We have allowed the exceptions to govern our purse when we have sought an excuse for not supporting the program of world evangelization. We have given great concern to methods and efficiency of mission work at home and abroad, and, for this or for some other reason, the rank and file have had no particular motive for carrying on the extension of a Cause which had its inception on the shores of Galilee. Many earnest Christians have felt the need of a restating of the motive for missions which would once more make the march of the Church challenging. Many have asked earnestly, "In the light of the Laymen's Missions Inquiry and other inquiries, what are the new motives for the missionary program?"

Those of us who were privileged to hear Dr. Jay T. Stocking, Moderator of the General Council, at the fellowship dinner on the evening of January 21st, at the Mid-winter meeting in Evanston, Ill., had forcefully brought to our minds a convincing answer to this problem. Taking for his subject, "The Enduring Motives for Missions," Dr. Stocking declared that there are no "new motives for missions" but that our day needs terribly a "rethinking of the old motives" given by the Founder of the Christian faith and put into action by those whom he commissioned to a conquest of the world in his name.

Dr. Stocking strongly emphasized the Christian teaching, "The strong must bear the burdens of the weak." He said that those who would "write the obituary of home and foreign missions must wait a long time," for "if we have arrived at the twilight of missions it would mean that we are in the twilight of world civilization." Continuing he said that the seeming twilight of missions is not due to the "sinking sun" but to some passing clouds which have obscured our vision. Yet there are, he said, "Grave considerations affecting the missionary enterprise." He said our missionary givings are not commensurate with those for local purposes by a long way; that we do not have ideas entirely like those of missionary pioneers; and that new world situations call for new pleas. He said that the term "loyalty" had been overdone; that loyalty to denomination, Church, or society is not sufficient as an enduring motive for missions. Therefore, as a result of such loyalty it is to be expected that an enterprise promoted from such motives should sooner or later come under fire of sober thinking.

Continuing, Dr. Stocking gave what in his judgment are four enduring motives for missions. These are significant, and serious thinking upon them will lead to a rebirth of a compelling missionary program, the dire need of our Church today. These motives are:

First, "Concern for the welfare of humanity." "Early missionaries went out to rescue, and our own American Board grew out of such a motive," said Dr. Stocking. He then declared that people will still respond to appeals for rescue work. "The early missionaries went out to rescue people from hell," he said, "and while our ideas regarding hell may have changed yet there are hells about us which we can see and from which the world must be saved—hells of hunger, poverty, vice, ignorance from which men desperately need to be saved.

He said that we need a new sense of hell, and a new incentive to save people from the hells of economic denial and fear. People are groping for something higher and better and will find rescue only in the Christian emancipation.

Second, "Zeal for Religion." "The founders of the missionary program had a first and primary zeal for religion." He declared that there is within the revolt against religion in America potentialities which, if Christianized and released will cause this spirit to arise to put down paganism. "We need a revolt against irreligion."

Third, "Belief in the unique worth of Christianity." "To overcome the thinking of Christ and Christianity as one Saviour and one religion is the new and great need of our day." He said forcefully that the supremacy of the Christian religion makes more imperative the command to share it with all people. He illustrated his point by referring to Kagawa's expression of his debt to the native religions of Japan but that he had found something unique in Christ.

Referring to the limited views and interest that are common expressions of certain people, "They are not our kind of people," Dr. Stocking asked significantly, "Who are our kind of people?" "Every kind of people must be our kind, and Christ must be the Christ of every kind!" He said further that the world needs the unity which only Christ can give; that Christians need to believe in the unique worth of the Christian religion. Will not this come through a new personal experience? We cannot hope to satisfy the needs and hungers of a world with that which we ourselves do not feel!

Fourth, "A Sense of Personal Responsibility for carrying Christ to all men." He declared that we have largely lost the feeling of such responsibility and that this sense of responsibility must be inborn in us if we would possess sustaining missionary motives; that we cannot delegate that responsibility to mission boards and secretaries by mere payment of dollars. Do we not need to relearn that "the gift without the giver is bare"?

In concluding, Dr. Stocking said we can get a new sense of these enduring motives by experiencing a rebirth of the sense of God within our lives. "We must worship an uncomfortable God. We must get away from the sense of a God who does much for us and requires little of us. We must worship a God who is not a God of comfort until we have felt the discomfort of not doing His will." The route suggested is that of centering our attention upon Christ, and as we take on His spirit we will become sensitive to the needs of the world. "The foot of the Cross of Christ is not merely a place where we lose our burdens. We find at the foot of the Cross of Christ new burdens of responsibility which we must help lift."

I doubt if I have impressed my readers with this review as I was impressed with Dr. Stocking's challenging message. But I am persuaded that what is most needed among our Churches today is sober thinking upon the task of lifting men to the Christ way of life, and the enduring motives listed by Dr. Stocking will lead us to a new faith which will propel us as we attempt such a task. WHAT PASTORS SAY ABOUT CENT-A-MEAL BOX.

A pastor from Nebraska writes:—"This is a Home Missionary field. Scarcely any crops for three years. A wheat country. Corn and wheat at 15c a bushel would be better than none at so high a figure. We secured 30 boxes and distributer 29 of them. We got them into the hands of people in July. They had them for from 110 to 130 days. Twenty-five have been in to date. They contained from 16c to $3.38. The total amount being $31.89. The lady who gave the largest amount is not a church member nor a member of the Missionary Society. She is an attendant and works with the Ladies' Aid.

"In giving them out and in references from time to time, we have emphasized the possibility of education in connection with the giving. They also inspired a special sermon on missions.

"The box is the most appealing device for aiding in the work of missions that I have seen. The box itself almost demands attention."

A pastor from Oregon says:—" 'The power for world service represented by the 'mite boxes' was revealed last Thursday when the accumulated coins of the summer months totaled $130!

" 'Other boxes yet to be returned by members of our 'fellowship of those who care and share' will add considerable more to the fund.

" 'A daily 'mite' from several hundred individuals makes a contribution of 'might'! Who hath despised the day of small things'?"

A pastor from Illinois writes:—"We distributed the Cent-A-Meal boxes on June 15th, some before and some after. We had seventy placed for all or part of the first period. We opened them on September 19th which was 111 days.

"We had a supper at the church purely for fellowship. We announced in advance that the Cent-A-Meal boxes were to be opened at that time. Only 37 boxes were returned that night out of the 70. We poured the pennies into a big bucket and we had thirty-seven pounds of pennies which totaled $111.59. Everybody was enthusiastic about it. People wanted their boxes back and now they are in circulation for a second period. All of the boxes are not returned yet. We are to have the second opening the second week in January at the Annual Meeting, and we look for a much larger return. I am entirely satisfied with the first opening. I suspect the amount will run from $160 to $170 when all the boxes are in."

A pastor from Michigan writes:—"We are using the boxes in all but eight homes in our membership. There are others outside the fellowship who asked to be given a box!

"A new-found joy has come into my pastoral visits, as I witness the transforming effect this simple project is working upon our constituency. Repeatedly do I hear of the blessings and the happiness that have come to the users of the box. I grant that the material ability of the people varies widely; but nowhere is the joy and satisfaction missing. It is easy to encourage the sincere experimenters and by others' examples to exhort the laggard. The timidity of many, fearing little will be found in the box, is met, on opening it, with the evidence that the Cent-A-Meal plan is at least 50 to 60 per cent successful for the time in use. I go away deeply conscious of a new fire kindled in that home. Not infrequently the user says, 'I'll have more the next time you come arcund,' or to my explanations, 'I haven't thought of it in that light.'

The Cent-A-Meal box can be a leavening influence in the spiritual restoration of any church. It can bring back through its tangibility new life and devotion, and unsuspected sacrifice for a cause. Unconsciously it can remake a church. I am interested in watching this experiment in the months ahead."

A pastor from New York writes:—"I have already placed 58 of the 100 and am constantly placing more. I handle the matter myself for two main reasons. First, it compels me to call on the people with a sufficient reason to justify a call when otherwise there might be none except just a matter of keeping in touch with the home. In the second place it gives me a vital opportunity to talk with folks on the subject of missions when other things might crowd it out of the conversation. It also gives me a chance to explain more fully some details concerning the use of the box which arise after folks have used it awhile. For a good man reasons I feel that it is a wise plan as pastor to make it a part of my work. People are not so ready to abandon the use of the box after several months if they know that the pastor is going to be around to check them up. As I call where there has been no box placed, I am endeavoring to place other boxes. I have a complete check of the whole matter right at hand constantly and find it of real value.

A pastor from Iowa writes:—"Regarding the Cent-A-Meal boxes let me say that the result exceeded my fondest hopes. Up to date 15 boxes were returned amounting to $22.88. My people are not greatly interested in the missionary outreach of the church as a whole, but more or less only in their local church. When I presented the proposition for the first time, I found little response, but finally after repeated announcement and personal solicitation as well as presenting it to the Ladies' Aid I was able to place 19 boxes in as many different homes. In distributing the boxes I made it clear that a special Sunday, designated as Mission Sunday, would be set aside to receive the boxes. This was done with the above result. Those that had boxes were delighted with the idea. One family that did not receive one asked, 'Why were we overlooked?' I assured them this would not happen again. I plan to redistribute the boxes as soon as they are labeled, and gather them in at our next Communion service, for I feel it pays to emphasize the whole plan in some effective way and special prayer. The result I had is ample proof, as least to me, that the average congregation will find in the boxes an effective method in training people to become mission-minded."

A pastor from North Carolina says:—"The use of the Cent-A-Meal box has helped to deepen and quicken the spiritual life of my church."

Simply set it in the center of the table and then, as an act of grace, in grateful remembrance of the blessings you ought to be thankful for,—life, health, home, friends, your Christ and His church and thousands of unsuspected good things every day that come your way,—drop in the box a "cent-a-meal for your family (or if you can afford to give more well and good.) PERSONAL LETTER FROM THE WHITES TO THE EDITOR.

December 10, 1934.

Dear Dr. Atkinson:

In about one month we will be on our way home and our thoughts are continually turning that way. It has been five and a half years since we left the United States and so many things have changed that we sometimes wonder if we will fit in when we get back home. But we are sure that friendships have not changed and we hope to be able to see every one of you and also those who have been interested in our work here to tell you something first hand of the Philippines.

Even though we are looking forward with joyful anticipation to our home coming it will be very hard to break loose here too. We will be leaving our fellow missionaries and intimate fellow workers, our church people and hospital employees and my patients and they are like all doctor's patients—some very appreciative, some take our work as a matter of course and others half resentful because we can't perform miracles.

But even with disappointments and handicaps we feel we have been wonderfully blessed. We have been helped by living among those people and we hope we have helped many of them too. Now that the church and hospital here are entirely self-supporting I think they appreciate more than ever the gifts of their Christian friends in America who made these institutions possible and kept them going for so long.

We are so glad that the hospital work has progressed during the past year and are thankful that Dr. Brckenshire is returning before Christmas to take charge of the hospital again, for he certainly worked hard to build up and make such a success of the hospital.

We shall be glad to be with you so soon and hope you'll not forget all the questions you have been wanting to ask us. Don't expect any speeches from us but we do want to share with you some of our experiences and knowledge of missionary work here.

Happy New Year to you all,
DR. AND MRS. M. J. W. WHITE.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

Rev. F. C. Lester, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

"ARE CHURCHES TODAY CHRISTIAN?"

Saint Paul said that for him to live meant for Christ to live. (Phil. 1:21.) That is true of other Christians. It is the only chance Jesus has to live on earth today. He dwells in the human temple.

For a person to be Christian means that Christ is to have a human mind, heart, voice, and hands. It means for Him to think, feel, talk and walk in this present world.

The Church is composed of people of this type —or should be. The real Church is. It is a company of those who care. It is a fellowship of those who work for a Kingdom of Love.

But do the present churches look like that? From where do we get our ideals? Do they come from the movies, magazines, radio, and funny papers, or do we get them from Jesus? Who will answer? Do church people spend more time with the movies, cheap magazines, and frivilous radio, or reading the Bible and in church worshipping God? Do people go to church in search of God, or to be entertained? Do you "feel" a certain reality about the service, or is it unreal. For Jesus the church service had something vital, real. When he read the Scriptures he proceeded to say: "This day this prophesy is fulfilled right here."

Then are our programs Christian? Are we interested in keeping up a show, or in winning the world to Christ? Do we give for ourselves or for others? Are our services simply to keep the wheels turning, or to get strength to live right and labor for Christ? Do our programs include the world, or do they exclude all but our little group? Is the major purpose of our teaching, preaching, business meetings, etc., just to keep our church going, or is it to lift the community and the world a bit nearer to God?

And, finally, are our attitudes Christian? Jesus said that if one of the members sins the others are to try to win him back to the right. I have seen a conference kick them out with no visible attempt to win them through the persuasion of love. Do our churches try to redeem, or do they by deadly gossip damn those who are weak? Can we see in everyone the kinship to God which we want to develop? Jesus said that if we come to the altar with a gift and remember that someone has something against us, we must leave the gift at the altar until we have corrected the wrong. Do we deal with our fellows that way? I wonder.

A church to be Christian must get its ideals— standards of conduct—from Jesus, make its programs conform to the plans of the Master, and have the attitude of Christ. If your church does not measure up to this high standard, do not get discouraged and quit, but get busy and help to make it what it ought to be.

THE MINISTER.

A minister is one who seeks
To lift the people of his flock
A bit above the common stock
To lead them to the mountain peaks;
Where far horizons can be seen
And life is fresh and pure and clean.

His critics cry, "He works for hire
And preaches but to earn his pay!
Visits the sick from day to day
And money is his one desire."
If this be true, I'd ask his foes
Why such a thankless task he chose?

Money in large amounts is paid
To business men and others who
Life's profitable tasks can do,
It is the one reward of trade.
If money was his only search
Why did he choose to serve the church?

There is an easier task to do;
An easier way to garner gold
Against the time when he is old
Then preaching truth to me and you.
We seek our fortunes, but he strives
To beautify our sordid lives.

Though some have fallen by the way
And some when tempted over much
Have let life's stains their garments touch.
I still give thanks to God today
That there are men who'll choose to be
His minister to you and me.

THE GREATEST PATH.

The greatest path in the world is the path from your door to the door of your church. If all of us faithfully used this path and were guided by its radiant influence, the nation would be safe, crimes subside, business prosper, and all hearts have peace. For this path was made by the Son of Man for the Sons of men that walking humbly into His Holy Presence in the Church, they might afterwards walk together as brethren in the world. Are you using your greatest path?

ONE MINUTE SERMON ON CHURCH GOING.

Text: "Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is. —Hebrews 10:25.

Church-going is a means of grace, and divinely appointed. It is helpful and restful. A fine investment of your time. It develops the best powers of a man. But how easily neglected! Absence from next Sunday's services will make it easy to stay away the next week. The slightest irregularity in attendance will work serious havoc with a good habit. When we reach for excuses, we shall find many, but no good ones. Most excuses analyzed simply mean "I don't wish to." If you will attend church regularly one quarter, you will want to go. Try the remedy. Begin tomorrow, if you have not already begun. We shall look for you.—Selected.

MISSIONS.

When the preacher plead for missions,
And they brought the basket near,
Racial instincts of old Sandy,
Filled his very soul with fear.

As the deacon passed the basket,
Sandy turned a trifle red,
"Now I don't believe in missions,
You must count me out," he said.

Then the deacon answered slyly,
For he was a good old scout,
"This collection's for the heathen,
You may take a little out."

"TWO CHURCHES."

There was a church in our town
Which thought 'Twas wondrous wise;
It tried to pay expenses
By selling cakes and pies;
But after years of trying
That plan to raise the cash,
The folks got tired of buying
And the whole thing went to smash.

There was a church in our town,
And it was wondrous wise;
It always paid expenses
By simply paying tithes.
For when 'Twas found the tithe did pay
It seemed so very plain,
Forthwith 'twould have no other way,
Not even once again.

WHAT THE BIBLE SAYS ABOUT TEMPTATION AND SIN.

Christian Endeavor Topic for Feb. 17, 1935.

Worship Program.

Prelude: "He Leadeth Me."

Call to Worship:

We would see Jesus—for the shadows lengthen
Across this little landscape of our life;
We would see Jesus, our weak faith to strengthen
For the least weariness—the final strife.

We would see Jesus—the great Rock foundation,
Whereon our feet were set by sovereign grace,
Not life, nor death, with all their agitation,
Can thence remove us, if we see His face.

We would see Jesus—other lights are paling,
Which for long years we have rejoiced to see;
The blessings of our pilgrimage are failing;
We would not mourn them, for we go to Thee.

We would see Jesus—this is all we're needing,
Strength, joy, and willingness come with the sight;
We would see Jesus, dying, risen, pleading;
Then welcome day! and farewell, mortal night!

—Anna B. Warner.

Solo: "Lord, For Tomorrow and Its Needs."

Prayer:

Companion of our vesper hour,
Renew in us each day
Our lofty purposes grant us power
That worthy thoughts in deeds may flower,
In Christlike lives, we pray.

Surround us through temptation's maze
When artful foes assail;
Help us a peaceful path to blaze,
To lead mankind in nobler ways,
Give strength—we would not fail!

Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

PETER PREACHES AT PENTECOST.

Lesson VI—February 10, 1935.

Golden Text: "And Peter said unto them, Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins; and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit."—Acts 2:38.

Lesson Text: Acts 2.

The word great might well be applied to many phases of Peter's sermon at Pentecost, and under the one word might be summed up the entire lesson story of today.

A Great Occasion.

The setting was the ancient feast of Pentecost, or the "Feast of the Weeks," one of the three great Jewish festivals—the one which came fifty days—the word Pentecost comes from the Greek word meaning fifty—after the Feast of Unleavened Bread. It was a great occasion, a great religicus festival, a day with all the sanctity of the Sabbath day.

A Great Congregation.

There was a great crowd present. Multitudes were at Jerusalem for the Feast and when they heard the strange story about the unusual and unique thing which had happened—the coming of the Holy Spirit—they came together to hear about it. And the significant thing was that there were so many types and nationalities present, men from all parts of the earth were there.

A Great Preacher.

On a later occasion a reference is made to the fact that Peter and John were unlearned and ignorant men. (Acts 4:13.) The words mean that they did not belong to the "four hundred" and that they had not been "college trained" as we would say today. But Peter was a great preacher as the following paragraphs will indicate.

He knew the Scriptures. Read his sermon, which is, of course, condensed as reported by Luke in Acts. It is shot through and through with Scripture. And the Scripture is used in an intelligent, constructive, compelling way. Teachers of homiletics often use this sermon as a model for scriptural preaching.

He knew men. He had not lived a sheltered, secluded life. He had lived among men. And he knew how to talk to men. Under the influence and direction of the Holy Spirit he preached in such a way that every man felt that he was talking right to him. That is great preaching. It takes a great preacher to preach like that.

He knew Jesus. He had been with Him, lived with Him, learned of Him, been trained by Him. That was what made him a great preacher. That is what makes any man a great preacher. That and one thing more which comes in right here—he knew the Holy Spirit. He had been baptized with the Holy Spirit. Ah, this was the crowning and vitalizing factor in it all. All of Peter's talents of mind and body and heart had been made alive by the Holy Spirit.

And because of this fact Peter spake boldly. It took ccurage to say what Peter said at Pentecost. But because Peter had seen the face of God he was not afraid of the face of man.

A Great Sermon.

It had a great theme—Jesus Christ and Him crucified. Peter did not take a text in the formal sense, but he had a text, and his text was Jesus Christ. "Let all the house of Israel know assuredly that God hath made this same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ. Jesus Christ always makes a great theme and a great sermon.

It carries great conviction. The men who heard it were pricked in their hearts. They were so disturbed that they felt that they had to do something about it. That is a great sermon which so appeals to the minds of men, and so moves upon their hearts, that it arouses the will to action. No cultured essay can compete with it. Real preaching in the sense that Peter did it, has no competition.

It got great results. Three thousand souls were baptized, and were added unto the church. By their fruits ye shall know them. Peter's sermon would have been a great sermon in many senses even if he had not had a single convert, for as has been stated it was such a powerful presentation of scriptural truth. But its real claim to abiding greatness is the fact that under the blessing of the Holy Spirit, three thousand souls found new life in Christ. That is great preaching in the finest sense of the term.

A Great Result.

Peter's sermon got results in numbers, to which reference has already been made. But it got something more. It produced changed lives. The people went out to live differently. They gave themselves with enthusiasm to religious services—they counted daily with one accord in the temple, and breaking of bread from house to house, and did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart, praising God, and having favor with the people.

But their religion also found expression in social service. Those who had divided with those who did not have. They had all things in common. They divided with their fellowmen "as every man had need." This is not necessarily a call to communism. But it is a call to Christian brotherhood. Communism may not be the approved policy for society, but one feels that the present policy of society is not the approved policy.

And the thing kept growing. The Lord added daily unto the church such as were being saved or such as should be saved. It is important what happens when the evangelistic service is going on. But it is quite as important what happens after the evangelistic service is over. When a church has the Holy Spirit it will be growing through the year both in numbers and in power. Let every church examine itself as touching this vital point.

THE YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

6. God knows our sin. Psalm 90:8; Psalm 94:11.

7. Sin may be forgiven. I John 1:9; Acts 3:19.

"There is only one unconquerable sin, and that is the sin you are not trying to conquer. If you loathe your sin, though at the same time you love it, there is no hope for you, and as long as you loathe it. For the sin—never forget this—is not in the deed, but in the mind; and while your mind hates the deed and tries to flee from it, do not dare to think yourself wholly lost.

"Men sometimes ask me, with horror and disgust, whether they have committed the unpardonable sin. Always I must say, 'no, my brother, so long as you fear it and are ashamed'."Amos R. Wells, in "Help for the Tempted."—(C. E. World Quarterly.)

MONDAY.

A PRAYER.

"The prayer of the upright is his delight."—Ps. 15:8.

"Teach me, Father, how to go
Softly as the grasses grow;
Rush my soul to meet the shock
Of the wild world as a rock;
But my spirit propped with power,
Make as simple as a flower.
Let the dry heart fill its cup,
Like a poppy looking up;
Let life lightly wear its crown
Like a poppy looking down,
And when its heart is filled with dew
And its life begins anew.

"Teach me, Father, how to be Kind and patient as a tree,
Joyfully the crickets croon
Under shady oak at noon;
Beetle on his mission bent
Tarries in that cooling tent.
Let me also cheer a spot,
Hidden field or garden plot—
Place where passing souls can rest
On the way and be their best."

—Edwin Markham.

TUESDAY.

"All the ways of a man are clean in his own eyes; but the Lord weigheth the spirits."—Ps. 16:2.

THEREFORE: "Study to show thyself approved of God; a workman that needeth not to be ashamed."—2 Tim. 2:15.

AND THEREFORE: "Commit thy works unto the Lord, and thy thoughts shall be established."—Ps. 16:3.

The world has never learned that it would be better off "with a little and righteousness than great reserves with right." The great bulk of humanity is still selfish, covetous, avaricious, greedy and sophisticated.

By studying one's own spirits with a view to harmonizing them with the life of Jesus, one may easily be diverted from evil; and he that keepeth his life in that way "Preserveth his soul" says the Proverbs, and in that way there is no death. It is all life.

Prayer—O God, take my life into Thy hands, Free me from the evils of the day and from those bonds of habit that stifle my soul. Make me strong for good and for God, and when I am strong, I will do Thy will and bear calmly all the burdens and trials of the day, and give Thee thanks. This we ask for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE EVILS OF GOSSIP.

"He that covereth a transgression, seeketh love; but he that repeateth a matter separateth chief friends."—Prov. 17:9.

Therefore leave off speaking evil of people and "leave off contention," says the Proverbs, "before it be meddled with," for to be a friend means to love at all times.

Love and faithfulness is not talebearer of matters, and God blesses faithfulness and exalts the faithful. They who dwell in His "Holy hill," are they who "walk uprightly, worketh righteousness and speaketh the truth in their hearts; he that slandereth not with his tongue, nor doeth evil to his friend, nor taketh up reproach against his neighbor."

Prayer—

"Lord, e're I start this day
I kneel to Thee—and in those words I pray:
If I should fail in that for which I strive,
Grant from that failure, good I may derive;
And if I should succeed, then grant to me
In that success Thy guiding hand to see;
But whether my affairs go right or wrong,
Grant me, O Lord, the grit to carry on."

THURSDAY.

TOWARD TRANQUILITY.

"Take my yoke upon you and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls."—Matt. 11:29, 30.

Could all men wake tomorrow with respect for other's need,
And know each as his brother,
disregarding race or creed;
Price valued not on what men own—but what they are who lead—
To hold each selfish purpose under foot and force out greed;
Be helped by those above them; raise those who would recede—
Not strength of brawn to argue from,
but force of mind to heed,
To reach the wanted compromise,
the balance then decreed;
Let knowledge, truth, and beauty reign
then fellowship, indeed
Would e're surpass the tyrant's past and worldly rule exceed;
A fine foundation would arise
destroying war-like seed;
So "Peace on earth, good will toward men" could chance then to succeed."

—A. L. V.

Prayer—Dear Father, our God, though life should be enshrouded with trials and troubles, may we not forget that we are men still and that Thou dost love us. Give us that light that shines bravely through. Be our trials and troubles what they may, there is always in the stormy skies a bit of Thy sunshine peeping through.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

WHAT IS PRAYER?

"When thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut the door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret, shall reward thee openly."—Matt. 6:6.

"The supreme effort of attention to God is that which is commonly called prayer. It was the breath of life to the Son of God. It cannot be less than that to the sons (us). It consists of concentrating one's thoughts on God, opening our minds to the suggestions of His spirit—in fact, "Listening in" to the Father. For what God says to us in prayer is at least as important as what we say to Him, and for this reason the Bible is the best 'Prayer Manual'."

"In prayer the sons talk to the Father, and since we cannot consciously do this all day, we do it deliberately at certain moments. It is vital to do so in the morning: so that the first 'suggestion' that enters our heads, the first impression made upon our minds, comes not from the news paper, or the letters, or our friends at breakfast, but from God. Confiding in that Father in the morning gives a tone to the whole day."—Bishop of Winchester, England.

"Give Him thy first thoughts
So shalt thou keep Him company all day,
And in Him sleep."

If He has much to say to His son the son will have much to say in return. There is a communication between mind and mind. If this is so between ordinary human beings, must it not be much more potent and far-reaching when the human mind seeks contact with God's mind, and when the son lays himself open to the Father's influence?

Prayer—Our Father in heaven, teach us how to approach Thee, and how to pray. We would know Thee and knowing Thee we would delight in Thee. As a child to his father make Thou us to Thee. And may we walk the way of life together around one common task. In His name we ask it.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

GOD—AND YOU.

"Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling; for it is God who worketh in you."—Phil. 2:12-18.

How good is God, to give us a share in saving ourselves! We should be proud and glad to be saved entirely by Him, but it adds to our satisfaction of manhood, as He well knows, to have something to do with the process.

And it should knit us more closely with our Father to realize that, as we are intensely interested in our progress and perfection, so also is He. Not a flaw but grieves Him, as it grieves us. Not a lofty aim in which He does not share. We are partners, for life and for eternity, my God and I!

Prayer—We realize this, O God, with fear and trembling, for Thou are infinitely above us. We realize it with tenderness of happy confidence, for Thou are so near.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

SUNDAY.

SECOND MESSAGES.

"And the word of Jehovah came the second time unto Haggai."—Hag. 2:20-23.

To some men the Lord sends many messages, to others two, to others one, to others—because they have deaf ears and dumb voices—none. Haggai might well have been grateful that he had two, that twice he was chosen as the Lord's mouthpiece, and was not false to the glorious trust.

Jehovah has a word for us to say to someone. Perhaps He has two words for us to say for Him. Let us rejoice in the honor. Let us not shirk the privilege. Let us not say, "Because I am not Isaiah or Jeremiah, with many messages, therefore my speech does not count." God needs His Isaiahs and Jeremiahs, but He needs also His Haggais.

Prayer—Have Thy will with us, O our Father! Make us Thy agents, for great things or for small. —Amen. AMOS R. WELLS.

Things you will always regret: Trying to have the last word. Getting the best of an argument which may cost you a friend. Squandering your time foolishly. Resenting fancied insults. Doing the lower when the higher is possible. Passing the buck, putting the blame, the burden, on the other fellow. Trying to get pleasure out of that.

TEACHING GOD'S WORD.

By John G. Truitt, D. D.

"The entrance of Thy Words giveth light." —Psa. 119:130.

I shall never forget that little boy who loved his Sunday, School teacher so much, and sat on the simple bench next to her during the opening service of that old fashioned Sunday School. His little feet swung back and forth while the big folks sang and he looked out the large window upon the white marble slabs that marked the resting place of those who "had gone to live with Jesus." Little did that lovely mother who had her own family to look after, and her unending chores to do, know that when she out of love for a class of boys, laid the chores aside and shared with us the beautiful stories and lessons of God's word that she was preparing me to preach. I could not know it then. She had us telling again and again the stories of the Bible in our own language, and reciting from memory choice bits of Scripture, but learning most of all to love her and the other members of our class. And until this day it is like striking hands with a brother from a far country whenever we chance to meet one of the little boys who dangled their feet off that long bench in that unfading and beautiful yesterday.

As I look back across those years our text comes to me: "The entrance of Thy words giveth light." (Ps. 119:130.) And it did give light. I can never cease thanking those several Sunday School teachers for opening the words of God to me. And I think about one of the finest pieces of Kingdom building that has ever come under my observation was the teaching of the Word of God to the fathers and mothers of these self-same children. Not so long as good men and good women take up the teaching of the Word of God across the length and breadth of our land will our civilization fail, or falter. For every thousand preachers there are ten thousand teachers, and they have a larger hearing, and at a more plastic age than do preachers. From the little groups in the cradle roll classes to the great assemblies of mature men and women the Sunday School teacher comes much closer to his pupil in the study and application of the Word of God than does the minister. That is not lessening the minister's place, or power of the pulpit, because he fills a particular place as a preacher, and many places as a pastor. But the influence and power of the good Sunday School teacher can never be over-estimated; because the "entrance of Thy words giveth light."

I. Entrance. It matters not so much that Bibles are being printed, and distributed by the millions, if they are not opened. Because they make appropriate birthday and Christmas presents, because they are the first book in any Christian home, because they are held in a sort of reverence it does not give them a fetish power when unread, and unopened. It is the "entrance of Thy word" that giveth the light. I have looked up several translations of this word "entrance." I am quoting it from the King James; in the American Standard Version we read, "The opening of Thy words giveth light"; another translation,—Smith-Goodspeed,—reads, "The exposition of Thy words give light"; Moffatt's translation reads, "The interpretation of Thy words enlightens. . . " and looking it up in the original Hebrew I find many words for open, but the one used here is the same as is used when the Lord said, "Prove me now, herewith, and see if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

Take whichever word you prefer, and yet who is more responsible for opening the Word of God, or causing to enter the Word of God into the mind of the pupil, or making an exposition, or interpretation of the Word of God than the Sunday School teacher? In our busy, machine-like age the Bible is becoming more and more a closed Book unless we give especial attention to opening it up. And who is in a better position to lead in that very necessary matter than the teacher who has a small group of pupils to him, or herself in a closed room in the House of God every Sunday morning? They will dodge the preacher when they will not dodge the teacher. The preacher is one where the teachers are many. The contact is so much more direct on the whole, and so much more conducive to the learning process. And so our church has cleared the way for the teacher. We believe that "the entrance of God's Word gives light."

Therefore more than forty beautiful rooms, with solid walls, open windows, complete furniture, and furnishings, steam-heat, and approved helps, lovely assembly halls, convenient cloak-rooms, and closets; and rooms for dramatization, recreation, and fellowship, and above all worship are all testimony to our faith that the "entrance of God's Word will give light." We believe that if God's Word is taught in a friendly and prayerful place, by a consecrated and devoted teacher, that a light which was never seen on land or sea will shine into the mind and heart of the pupil. We believe that that Word will be a "lamp unto their feet, and a light unto their path." And so every brick in this building is saying, "The entrance of Thy word giveth light"; and every teacher in his lessons, and every pupil in his learning is the showing of a sublime confidence that "the entrance of Thy Word giveth light."

II. Thy Words. We are quite concerned too that the teaching shall be God's words. That His words may be turned by the teacher under every light and made to live in various circumstances, but that first and last it shall be the divine message from God! It is said that the "entrance or Thy Words (O God) giveth light." We fear that anything contrary to that will give something other than light. And our world is all too full of fear, and doubt, and darkness already. What thousands from the highest to the lowest have risen up everywhere to testify to the light of God's Word! Kings, and presidents, and statesmen; philosophers, and scientists, and physicians; business, and toil, and the home have all said, "Order my steps in Thy Word; and let not any iniquity have dominion over me." "Thou art my hiding place and my shield: I hope in Thy Word."

The teacher who has God's Word in his, or her own heart and life to such extent that it can be said of him, or her, that in them the "Word has become flesh" and dwells among the pupils has secured a lasting fame in the life of the pupils, and everlasting life in the world to come. No greater honor is there than that of entering the Word of God into the life of a pupil so that all his days he may gladly lift up his heart to God, and walk ever with its light upon his pathway.

About our city are a number of little boys. So far as the public is concerned, they are nameless, homeless, streetless,—for they are here and there and everywhere,—in offices, shops, and restaurants begging their bread and a few pennies be-

Christian Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

The flu has not made its visit to the Orphanage children this winter. The health of the children has been remarkably good up to this time. Last year we had so much sickness during the months of January and February that it almost got the best of us. At this writing, however, we do have one little girl on the sick list. (Little Ellena Morgan.) She was the little tot in our singing class last fall and endeared herself to the people who heard her.

Our children grow up and reach the age limit and in most cases graduate from High School. If they make good in High School and graduate at 16 years of age, they get two years in College, provided they want to go. The College has always been good to us and gives our children their literary tuition. Of course, if they want to take the Commercial Course or something special we generally find some friend who will finance them.

We had a girl to graduate from High School a year ago and a friend financed her business course at Elon College. Two weeks ago she accepted a position in the office of one of the leading attorneys in our county. A fine man to work for and a splendid opportunity for her to make good. She came to us a few years ago a little tot. By your contributions you helped her when she needed your help. You made a good investment. When you contribute to the monthly offering in your Sunday School you never know what worthy little boy or girl you may help to get a chance in life.

Our goal is $20,000 for the year 1935. Make your monthly offerings liberal this year. Please!

sides. Can you imagine the darkness behind them and their environment? I have been in some of their homes. I have seen something of the evidences of misery, want, and hopelessness of their households. Some help is ministered. But what could be a greater glory than to be a Sunday School teacher who could devote a bit of time, care, thought, and energy to a class of such boys? They would come into a pretty room that is warm, ready and inviting. They would lay their little hands into the hand of a kind, cheerful teacher, in greeting; and feel the touch of human love and understanding which in itself has changed full many a wretched little fellow into a prince; they would tell their experiences to their understanding teacher. She hers to them. And then while together she would open the Word of God, and cause its beauty and life to enter their little darkened lives, and light would follow! "The entrance of Thy Words giveth light."

We need not stop with that picture. There are others. Envision the scores of perfectly lovely children, and young people who are the hope of our homes who will rise, or fall spiritually speaking according as the principles set forth in the Word of God are implanted in their lives. Who has a more direct responsibility for the teaching of the Word of God to them than the Sunday School teacher? I am not contradicting the sermons which I have preached to you on the home, and "the church that is within thy house," for their influence is especially great just as I have said, but there are so many home where the Sunday School must do the teaching of the Word of God. What will happen to our young people, and what will happen to our church, if our young people find faithlessness on the part of the Sunday school or indifference on the part of those who have the supreme business of teaching them the Word of God.

They shall not pass out into the world, and life's graver responsibilities without the Word of God in their hearts. Our unified efforts in placing complete equipment, and inviting environment for the teaching of the Word to them, stand as a mighty fort saying "they shall not pass." But far greater than all that is the courage, love, devotion, and faithfulness of our nearly one hundred superintendents, teachers, and officers who, by the cheerful sacrifices which they make, seek to see to it that every boy and girl and every man and woman, is properly taught the Word of God. They are an invincible army of God's servants standing before whatever potential darkness that might lie in the pathway of our sons and daughters saying "they shall not pass." I am proud to be associated with such an army of workers, and daily I pray God's blessings upon our efforts to train the Word of God as a light upon the pathway of every person in our midst. "The entrance of Thy Words giveth light."

AT THE FEET OF JESUS.

dence that it was not a phantom which they saw, but the living body of the real Jesus. But that was not what Jesus wanted them to do so He said, "Touch me not." He did not want them to cling to Him but to run on their own swift feet and bear the joyful news of the resurrection to His sorrowing disciples. So today we too may take hold of Him and feel His pesence and then go in the power of His Holy Spirit and proclaim the wonderful news of the risen glorified Lord that all men may know and serve Him. We may be misunderstood and our acts of devotion misconstrued but may we continue to pour out our love and devotion as long as we have life on this earth that the Name of Jesus may be glorified in the salvation of many precious souls. MARRIAGES

ARRINGTON—NEWTON.

On December 26, 1934 at the home of H. L. Arrington, Buffalo Junction, Va., I united in marriage Mr. Charlie Vest Arrington and Miss Olivia Ruth Newton. It was a quiet home marriage witnessed by a few relatives and friends. The groom is a young farmer, the son of Bro. and Sister H. L. Arrington, all active members of Hebron Christian Church. The bride is a member of the Baptist Church and the daughter of Mr. L. H. Newton of Clarksville, Va.

May blessings attend this splendid young couple.

C. E. NEWMAN.

UNDERWOOD.

Whereas, Mrs. Bessie Roberts Underwood departed this life on January 8, 1935, at her home in Suffolk, Va., and

Whereas, she was a faithful member of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian Church, and

Whereas, we desire to record our sincere appreciation of her devoted Christian life and faithful service in our midst

Therefore, be it resolved:

First. That we bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father who doeth all things well.

Second: That in the death of this beloved member, our Society has sustained a great loss which we deeply feel.

Third. That we cherish her memory in our hearts and extend to the bereaved family our deepest sympathy in their great sorrow.

Fourth. That a copy of these resolutions be entered upon the records of the Society, a copy be sent to the bereaved family and a copy forwarded to The Christian Sun for publication.

ROSS.

Luther Dennis Ross was born in Alamance County, N. C., August 10, 1884, and died at his home at Altamahaw, N. C., January 14, 1935, aged 50 years, 5 months and 4 days old.

On December 24, 1908, he was united in marriage to Miss Lillian Franks. Surviving besides his wife are two brothers and one sister, Edd and Jasper Ross and Mrs. Jerome Isley, all of Burlington, N. C., Route 4.

While a young man he professed faith in Christ Jesus at Berea Christian Church and united with the said church. He was one of her loyal aud devoted members, taking his place in every way possible that he could to help make her program go. He was a friend to all his pastors, co-operated with all of them and never was a man to complain. So well did he serve his church and prove himself worthy that when the church was in need of a deacon the lot fell upon him and well did he serve. Berea church has lost one of her most faithful and loyal members in his going, but while it is our loss, it is Heaven's gain. He was a man that his community could look up to and depend upon. In all of his business relationships, he maintained the spirit of his Christ. May our Heavenly Father comfort and keep the grief stricken wife who stuck by so untiring, with undaunted courage through his long siege of sickness.

Burial services were conducted from Berea Christian Church, Tuesday afternoon January 15th, by the writer, in the presence of a large host of friends. Interment was in the church cemetery to await the resurrection morn.

G. C. CRUTCHFIELD.

FLOWERS.

Captain Andrew Dallas Flowers was born in Wayne County, N. C., August 18, 1859, and died at his home at Lawrenceville, Va., Dec. 13, 1934 at the age of seventy-five years, three months and 25 days.

When a young man he accepted a position with the Atlantic Coast Line R. R. In 1889 he came with the A. I. D., now Southern Rwy,, serving as section foreman for sixteen years. In 1904 he was promoted to supervisor, which position he held for twenty-six years.

In December, 1883, he married Miss Ellen Cluster Ward and to them were born eight children, five of which survive him.

Capt. Flowers united with Lebanon Christian Church in the year 1889 where he held his membership till death. He was interested in all the enterprises of his church and every movement of moral and religious progress had his hearty support. He kept well informed both in affairs of the church and state and was an intelligent conversationalist and had a host of friends who will miss him.

In addition to the wife and surviving children there are seven grandchildren.

Funeral and burial were at Lawrenceville, Va., Friday, Dec. 15, 1934, conducted by the writer and assisted by Pastor Bunn and Pastor Bennett of the Lawrenceville Baptist and Methodist Church-

BROWN.

In loving memory of Mrs. Bell Brown, wife of Brother Jimmie Brown of Roanoke, Ala., who departed this life Jan. 10, 1935 after a week of suffering with the dreaded disease pneumonia.

Sister Brown was 43 years old. She was a member of the Christian Church at Lowell. Her husband, her four living children, sister and brothers mourn the untimely going of this good woman.

She was kind to all and energetic in providing for the comfort of her home and friends. She was loved by a large circle of friends as was attested by the large crowd assembled to pay her honor. As well as by the many floral offerings spread upon the mound of earth covering her precious body. Farewell! wife, mother, daughter, sister, friend for a little while; we'll meet you bye and bye.

The funeral was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. W. W. Lankford of the Baptist Church and Rev. L. H. Price of the M. E. Church, South.

G. D. HUNT.

ROUNTREE.

Whereas God, in his wisdom, on the third day of December, 1934, saw fit to remove from our midst our beloved member and friend, Mrs. Mamie Blanchard Rountree, be it resolved:

First. That though we sorrow, we bow in humble submission to His will.

Second. The Ladies' Benevolent Social Union of Suffolk Christian Church has lost a devoted member, her children, a loving mother, and we extend to them our deepest sympathy.

Third. That her life and influence has been a blessing to those who knew her best, and the Christian courage and patience with which she bore her suffering will ever be an inspiration to those who visited her in her last illness.

Fourth. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, a copy sent to the Christian Sun for publication, and a copy to be entered in the records of our Society.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

Noted Educator Dies.—

Virginia suffers a severe loss in the death of Dr. Lyon G. Tyler, noted educator and son of the tenth President of the United States. Dr. Tyler was 82 years of age when the end came, and had been sick for about a month, developing a virulent case of pneumonia about two weeks ago, and passing away on last Tuesday evening. Dr. Tyler was president emeritus of William and Mary College, having resigned from that position in 1919. He was well known throughout the North as well as in his native State, and was a staunch defender of Southern statesmanship and tradition. His historical writings, dealing mostly with the South, are of great value, and his personal charm made him a man much loved and admired.

The "Macon" Crashes.—

The fifth major disaster of the United States Air Navy happened on last Tuesday when the Macon crashed and plunged 2,500 feet into the Pacific Ocean. Happily, however, 81 of the 83 navy men aboard were rescued. The scene of the sinking of this $4,000,000 dirigible was off the coast of California, some 110 miles from San Francisco, and 13 miles southeast of the rocky promontory of Point Sur. Discipline was declared perfect by the commander of the ship, and the results are certainly gratifying when compared with the loss of the Akron, which sank in the Atlantic in 1933, when only four of the 74 aboard were rescued. The Macon is the nineteenth dirigible to crash. These include the Roma, bought from Italy, the Shenandoah, formerly the ZR-1, the ZR-2 which was bought from England but never delivered, as it crashed over the Humber River with the loss of 42 lives, and the two American built craft referred to above.

Can They Stop War on Ethiopia?—

British and French diplomats are reported as working hard to bring about an agreement between Benito Mussolini and the Ethiopian government. Meantime preparations for war continue. The Ethiopians were reported as massing 30,000 men along the frontier, while Italy has 250,000 ready for the call to the colors. On January 29th, there was a border skirmish between Italian and Ethiopian troops and several Italians were slain. It is contended by Italy that there was an attempt to surround their patrol and annihilate it, and she has demanded damages. The Ethiopians contend that their force consisted of only twenty-five men armed only with rifles, while the Italians were armed with machine guns, and claim that the Italians were the aggressors. The Ethiopian Charge d'Affairs at Rome, declares that Mussolini's demands for satisfaction must be modified before they can be accepted. He says that his country has 1,000,000 fighting men available and will use them if necessary, and asserts that they expect no foreign ally and need none. It is to be hoped that the attempt of French and British diplomats toward arbitration will be successful.

Compulsory Military Training Upheld.—

Compulsory military training of Kansas State College students was upheld by District Judge Otis E. Hungate in ruling against the "conscientious objections" of Raymond McMahon. An application for an injunction to restrain college authorities from requiring McMahon to participate in the training was denied. McMahon claimed he was a victim of discrimination in that he had to attend the Manhattan Land Grant College, rather than other State institutions, to obtain the course he desired. He charged the board of regents with violating a State constitutional exemption for those having religious scruples against the bearing of arms. But Judge Hungate said the training was "not bearing arms as used in the Constitution," and that when McMahon "elected to attend the Manhattan College he submitted himself to a regulation the State has the right to make." He ruled further: "The State has a right to train its youth in military matters and to have them prepared for the defense of their country, whether the youth has conscientious objections or otherwise." The judge approved the penalty of expulsion for non-compliance. The "conscientious objectors" to compulsory military training have not received much encouragement from the courts lately.—Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

Football for 1935.—

It is not too soon to lay plans for football next fall, and along with plans for the players might be made some plans to protect the spectators. Says an exchange: "The interest in football has become astonishing, and people pour out in thousands to see splendid teams. Back in the old days, the games were followed by riotous drunkenness in the saloons and hotels, but one never saw a drunken man in the stands. In those days the spectators were usually college people, careful of their language in the presence of ladies and accustomed to do their drinking where drinking was the chief business." Not so in 1934. Drunkenness was more than common at football games throughout the country, and bottles seemed as important as pigskins. Even at Annapolis, despite the strictness of navy regulations, we are told that drunken girls were led reeling from the stands by men who were just as drunk. Notre Dame also complained of its volunteer alumni, drunken, blatant, and disgusting, who never went to Notre Dame or any other college, but was always on hand when that college played away from home. Notre Dame was not the only school thus afflicted. Alabama at the Rosebowl, suffered the same penalty for greatness, and many of our less great schools have had to pay the price and stand the disgrace. Is it not possible to establish regulations prohibiting drinking in public, and then to enforce such regulations ruthlessly? There seems that there is no other way to do away with this nuisance.

Individual Security.—

In no other country in the world, at any time in history, have individuals been given the opportunity offered here in America to provide through their own efforts against the evils of unemployment and the hazards of old age. Certainly, in view of this fact, individual action would seem the proper line of approach to these problems, as it keeps the cost at a minimum and at the same time provides maximum efficiency. Some facts that would seem to bear this statement out have been gleaned from governmental and other statistical publications: In 1932, there were more than 44,000,000 savings accounts in various kinds of United States banks, with aggregate deposits exceeding $25,000,000,000; while at the same time there were 1,545,000 postal savings depositors with deposits of $1,285,000,000. The same year there were reported 10,000,000 members of building and loan associations, with assets approaching $8,000,000,000; and there were in force 33,531,000 ordinary life insurance policies for the face amount of $90,611,000,000. We do not have as late figures on home-ownership, but in 1930, over 14,000,000 families owned or were buying their own homes. Until recently 4 out of 5 families in the United States had automobiles, and registration is again on the upgrade in many sections; over 60 per cent of the population was supplied with electricity, and 50 per cent had radios. One would not say that such figures prove an utopia existent here, but shouldn't they make one hesitate, before accepting lock, stock and barrel, the panaceas that are now being considered by the government in the way of old age pensions and unemployment insurance. The question was put to me recently in this manner by a friend: "When I was a boy, I had to walk two miles to school, while John Doe's parents furnished him with a horse to ride. I have worked hard and saved, but he has thrown away more than I have made. I have a small business and am trying to provide against the future for myself and family. Is it fair that John shall continue to squander his inheritance, and that I be taxed to provide an old age pension for him?" Any legislation that tends to pauperize the people of a nation is socially and economically unsound, and this is no time to become hysterical and to decide that that which has been started by private initiative is all wrong.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Dr. and Mrs. I. W. Johnson made a brief visit to the Jacksonville office, much to the pleasure of those who labor there. Dr. and Mrs. Johnson, with others, are on a short vacation trip around Florida. Such friendly visits are not only enjoyable, but help to promote our common friendship.

Word is received from Dr. W. M. Jay of Holland, Va., that Mrs. Jay, who has been in Lakeview Hospital for surgical treatment for the past weeks, returned to her home Wednesday. Friends of the family will rejoice in her partial recovery and will wish for her complete recovery in the near future.

Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter, president of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions and Dean of Hartford Theological Seminary, was Chapel speaker at the College Wednesday, February 6th, and remained for the greater part of the day for conferences with students. This was Dr. Potter's second visit to the College and we are always glad to have him.

The building known as the Boone house, and familiar to all former students of Elon College, was completely destroyed by fire Saturday night, late. This building was owned by the Orphanage and Mr. Les Wagoner, farm superintendent, and family lived in the house. The building was partly covered by insurance, but the Orphanage will sustain some loss from the fire.

Rev. D. W. Shepherd of the Meansville Parish in Georgia, including five churches, reports an interesting item: "Historians (one from each church in the parish) have been engaged in collecting data concerning the past history of the churches. When this information has been secured and organized it is to be the substance of a Parish Directory. In the meantime it is likely the historians will have had some experience as archaeologists."

News has reached THE SUN office that the Franklinton Christian Church was destroyed by fire, Sunday, February 3rd. The building was being used by the Holiness congregation, the Christian Church having ceased to hold services there. We understand that fire originated from a defective flue and destroyed the building just as the congregation was leaving the church after the morning worship. The property was owned by the Mission Board of the Southern Convention.

Dr. Jay T. Stocking, Moderator of the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches, was a welcome visitor to the South the past week. He spoke in Duke Chapel, Sunday, February 3rd, at 11:00 A. M. He spoke at Burlington Christian Church that evening at 7:30 P. M. and was Chapel speaker at the College Monday morning at 10:00 o'clock. From Elon he went to Suffolk and Norfolk, Va., to address the Christian churches in those cities. His messages were instructive and helpful. We were delighted to have Dr. Stocking.

Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, Honorary Moderator of the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches is to be in Richmond on Monday, February 18th. He will address the Richmond Ministerial Union at a Luncheon at 1:00 P. M., and speak again at the John Marshall High School that evening. The managing editor has asked permission for a limited number of our ministers in the nearby territory to attend this luncheon, and will appreciate it if those ministers wishing to avail themselves of this opportunity will notify him by Saturday if possible.

Pilgrim Church, Chattanooga, Rev. Alfred W. Hurst, pastor, at its recent annual meeting, reported fine progress during the year 1934. Among the significant reports made was that the $788.00 deficit of the year before had been liquidated. Also that the budget for the local expenses had been balanced and $1,500 had been paid on the building indebtedness. In addition, $350 had been paid on benevolence apportionment. The large number of inactive members had been reduced to about one-third, and in addition twenty-six new members had been received during the year.

Mr. Donald A. Adams, Chairman of the Laymen's Advisory Committee, arrived in Florida on Monday for a three week's circuit among the Florida churches, accompanied by Superintendent Gillette. The program calls for Church Officers' Visitations, men's suppers and general church meetings. In addition Mr. Adams, who is Past President of Rotary, will speak in twelve of the Rotary Clubs in Florida, in towns where he is speaking in the local church. It is expected that this tour by Mr. Adams will arouse special interest, especially along missionary lines, also stimulating the men's work in the churches.

Rev. Theodore L. Leverett of the Macedonia Parish in Georgia, including four churches, reports that the Macedonia church has a new roof. As there was no available money the farmers undertook the job. Standing trees were given, the men cut them down, sawed them into blocks and the shingle mill owners made them into shingles at a low cost and then in due time the men of the neighborhood laid the shingles and the women cooked a big kettle of Brunswick stew over an open fire. In this parish also the ladies of the Sardis church had bought and paid for a $200 piano, which has involved much labor on the part of the women.

The Sunday morning service at the First Church, Tampa, Florida, Rev. Walker Metcalf, pastor, was broadcast over the local radio station Sunday, February 3rd. There was a large congregation present and there were many responses from the radio listeners. This church has a habit of holding one fellowship dinner a month, following the morning service, individuals bringing their own supplies. On the above Sunday 225 ate dinner together in the church assembly room. Mr. Metcalf has been elected President of the Tampa Ministerial Alliance, which is an unusual honor. He has been called upon to represent the ministers of the city in many civic and religious functions. Under his leadership the Ministerial Alliance has undertaken some unusual lines of service.

Rev. George N. Edwards, pastor of the Circular Church, Charleston, S. C., makes an interesting quarterly report, not sent for publication, but from which we take the liberty of making the following extracts: "Beside regular engagements, I have preached at the Citadel (the military college), the Orphan House (a city institution), The Star Gospel Mission, and at the young people's united Thanksgiving Day service. I see that these four aggregate a congregation of over a thousand people of quite distinctly different groups. I have also spoken at the Congressional Union on the New Deal, had a paper before the Ministerial Union on 'Active Cooperation of Christian Communions' an illustrated lecture in an evening on 'Reformation,' taken my share of the radio services weekday mornings, conducted a union Thanksgiving Day service with the Unitarian Church and had two funerals."

Dr. Elisha A. King, pastor of the Miami Beach church, during January gave an interesting series of Sunday evening lectures as follows: "Face to Face With Christ;" "A New Allegiance;" "Finding a Life Work;" "Paul's Troubles and How He met Them;" "Joan of Arc: Exponent of Intrepid Womanhood;" "Modern Japan: Pagan or Christian?" "The Paradise of the Pacific;" followed by the Sacred Concert by the vested choir. The choir was assisted by the following distinguished musicians: Prof. Leo Portnop, violinist, teacher, composer, conductor, inventor, formerly head of the Violin Department of the Klindworth Scharwenka Conservatory of Music, Berlin, now with the University of Miami School of Music; Stephen Kransby, Portsmouth, Ohio, formerly with the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra. George White, prominent tenor from Boston; Benedict DeGaetani from New York City, formerly with the Metropolitan Opera Company.

SOUTHEAST CONVENTION PROGRAM.

The program for the Southeast Convention which is to be held in Raleigh, North Carolina, April 30th to May 2nd, next, is well under way. It will be printed and ready for distribution probably about the first of March.

According to the present plans, the opening session on Tuesday evening will be featured by an address by Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, Honorary Moderator of the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches. On Wednesday morning, Dr. Cadman will lead a discussion group and bring a message to ministers. This will be followed by a communion service administered by Dr. J. O. Atkinson, the message to be brought by Dr. John Briton Clark. The Wednesday afternoon session will center around our denominational program with Dr. Edwin C. Gillette as speaker. At the evening hour, Dr. Fred Field Goodsell, or someone else representing the American Board of Commissions for Foreign Missions, will speak.

Thursday morning there will be a discussion period on our missionary work, a devotional period led by Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, and an address by Professor Arthur Holt, chairman of the Council for Social Action of our denomination. In the afternoon, Dr. Roy C. Helfenstein will speak on evangelism, and Miss Lucy Eldredge will present young people's work. At the evening service, Dr. Daniel A. Poling will be the speaker, and Elon College with furnish music.

With this type of program it would seem important that many representatives should attend from every conference and association. This is not a delegated body, and anyone who wishes to do so may attend.

NOTICE.

As your Secretary of Education for the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention, I want to express gratitude to those schools which sent to the College their Fifth Sunday Offering. I am persuaded that there are others which will do this soon. Of course we should do it promptly, right after the Fifth Sunday; but better late than never. To every school in the Eastern Virginia Conference we make the plea—"All Together," "All along the line," let us stand by our College.

L. E. SMITH, President.

"STANDING IN LINE."

Religious leaders here and there seem to think that the world is on the verge of a great spiritual awakening. Be that as it may, it is evident, especially to the person who reads and thinks at all, that we are on the verge of something.

Some think they know what the race is heading into, others are wondering, "what it's all about," while the great majority probably know something is wrong but doesn't care much what happens. At any rate they deny any responsibility for present conditions and let it go at that.

When one goes to a winter or summer resort for a season it is generally supposed that matters spiritual will be laid aside, fore or less, for the time being, and that things generally will be "taken easy." In fact, some take advantage of an occasion like that to "step out" and get a taste of so-called high life. Such is evidently not the case here in St. Petersburg. It is a real problem here on Sunday to get to church, to get inside, get a seat and hear a sermon, without going considerably ahead of time and standing in line. In fact, much of ones' time here is taken up "standing in line." It is estimated that there are 75,000 tourists here or 100,000 altogether in the State of Florida at present. This "standing in line" business here begins almost with one's visit to the bath room in the morning. Then at the cafeteria for breakfast a half hour very often to get to the serving table inside after falling in line somewhere on the street.

The post-office here is out-doors, except the strictly private section where the clerks work. This is the next place after breakfast. Here it's stand in line again (five lines) to get the mail. Then to the Chamber of Commerce to get information, write letters, or find out who the new arrivals are. For lunch and dinner in the evening it's the same standing in line procedure.

For special attractions at the churches at night it's the same thing, but the greatest rush at the churches is on Sunday. Some of the larger downtown churches find it necessary to have two ministers and four preaching services to accommodate the crowds—9:30 and 10:45 A. M. and 6:30 and 8 P. M. Space around the church is roped off so that as one congregation leaves, another may enter. The First Congregational Church where some of us attend seats 2,200. At this writing, loud speaker equipment is being installed in the Sunday School department so that the entire building may be used. Three revivals are in progress in the city at present, one at the Gospel Tabernacle (Christian and Missionary Alliance) which seats 4,000. Billy Sunday and Rodeheaver are scheduled to be there four days in February. Beginning January 15th and continuing throughout the greater part of the winter season, the Florida Fundamental Bible Conference is in session at Tampa. Among the most noted speakers are Sunday, Rodeheaver and Dr. Howard Kelley, the well-known physician and Bible teacher of Baltimore. To one who stands off and looks on at all this seeming unusual religious activity there might come a suggestion that maybe we are on the verge of a great spiritual revival. There is little doubt but that this is true, but the writer is of the opinion that it will not be of the nature the fundamentalists are desiring. We are wondering if these dear good brethren are not going a bit too far in being so rampageous in their declarations, claiming that the present depression is a curse sent by a sin-avenging God upon His children and that the only way to escape His wrath is come back to the "mouners' bench", re-confess our sins, promise to do better and start all over again.

Twelve, fifteen, twenty years ago great mass revivals were in progress throughout the country. People stood in line to get into the huge tabernacles and under large tents. That day seems to have passed. These same men who drew thousands then, and those who aspire to succeed them, are satisfied if they can fill an ordinary church. Many large churches are not holding annual revivals any more and probably never will again. What does all this mean? Does it indicate that "the old-time religion" isn't any good any more, that the world is rapidly "going to the devil" and that "Judgement Day" is just ahead? We think not. It does indicate, however, that men and women (and even young people) are beginning to think for themselves, that this thing we call "salvation" is a personal matter, and individual evangelism is to be the order of the new day.

Yes, we are on the verge of something. We are living in a fast age—fast in more ways than one. People have reached the point where they are doing their own thinking, realizing that each must work out his own salvation.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Elon College Day was observed on time, January 27th, at the Palm Street Christian Church. The weather was cold and a blanket of snow had been spread over the city of Greensboro the night before, but a fine attendance greeted the superintendent, Pearlie Hall, at the Sunday School. The pastor gave the morning worship period to be used as "Elon College Day." Mrs. Grace Harris, a former student of Elon College, delighted the congregation with a splendid solo and the following young people took part in the service: Misses Orphelia Morris, Mabel Hughes, Margaret Earp, Addie Marshall and Messrs. Hermon Henshaw, Doyle Merchison, Jr., and Harrison Hussey.

Hines Chapel observed "Elon College Day" February 3rd, at 11:00 A. M. It was a beautiful day and there was a large congregation present. A sextet was sung by the Forbes sisters of our community. Messrs. Frank and Herbert Burton, of Elon College Senior Class, brought splendid messages of tribute to Elon. Miss Vera Gerringer who is a graduate of the College, spoke on "What Elon Has Done For Me." Miss Florence Smith, Miss Jennie Lee Matkins and Mrs. Holt Gerringer led the Congregation in prayer for the College. It is our expectation to reach our financial goal for the College during the year.

It costs money to carry on the Home Missionary work of the local conference, just the same as it costs to live; to buy clothes; eats, car-fare and luxuries. It ought to be a Christian privilege for a true follower of Jesus to tithe. Those who practice it soon find a joy in giving. Tithers are never inactive church members. They know by experience that the following quotation is true: "It is more blessed to give than to receive." The Christian Missionary Association of the North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference has promised $300.00 to Winston-Salem. The next payment will soon be due. The membership dues are $5.00. Since last report the following have paid: Miss Florence Smith (new member) and the Ladies' Aid of Bethlehem Church.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

A MOVE TOWARD COOPERATION.

A movement was recently launched in Greensboro which will probably prove to be one of the most significant steps for North Carolina Protestantism that has ever been taken. This movement has for its objective the forming of a Church Council, comprising all the Protestant denominations working in the State.

The initial meeting was held in connection with the State Sunday School Association which met in Greensboro, January 21st-23rd. The State Association has been active in North Carolina for a number of years, and has rendered a valuable service. Nominally it was interdenominational; while actually it was non-denominational. Most of the larger denominations have a well organized Sunday School work. The work of the State and County Associations parallelled and in many instances duplicated the work of the denominations.

Someone conceived the idea that from the State Association might be developed an interdenominational church council that would represent all the denominations; and that would concern itself with all the enterprises and problems that are common to all the denominations. This council, it was believed, would serve as a sort of clearing house for all denominations. It would be a medium through which the denominations might share their experience, their wisdom, and their plans.

Those who were interested in the plan, took counsel with Dr. H. Shelton Smith of Duke University. Dr. Smith was asked to formulate the plans for the preliminary meeting and to preside over the session and lead discussions. Invitations were extended to representatives of all the denominations to be present, and to consider whether such a plan was feasible and possible; and whether in the judgment of those present, their respective denominations would be interested in such a move.

It was hoped that at least twenty-five representatives of the larger denominations might be induced to attend. When the meeting convened there were about a hundred people present representing twelve or thirteen denominations. On the day that the meeting was held the weather was anything but favorable, and for two days previous the weather forecasts had been predicting a blizzard.

Those who were most deeply interested in the plan, and who were convinced of its great possibilities, were quite sure that a step so advanced would be sure to meet with opposition from some one who would be present. But the opposition failed to develop. There was a unanimous sentiment that the time has arrived for a united front on the part of Protestant forces in North Carolina.

It is true that those who met in Greensboro were a picked group. It is also true that those who were present were well aware that it was a difficult task that confronted them. They knew that such a step could hope to succeed only when every detail of the program was most carefully considered and most wisely planned. They seemed convinced that the proposed plan offered such tremendous possibilities that a way must be found to make it work successfully.

Those present selected a smaller representative group from all the denominations which was charged with the task of going ahead with the working out of details for a permanent organization. This smaller group has already met and started on the task assigned to it. And reports indicate that the work has been well begun.

One thing agreed upon in the very beginning of the first meeting, viz., that denominational autonomy was not to be affected in the least. It is to be no super-authority over the denominations. It is to be the servant of them all. It is a recognition of the fact that all denominations have a common interest in the conditions that confront the Church today. It is a recognition of the fact that it is futile to separately attach a task that seems too great to be accomplished unitedly.

It would require a super-prophet to predict just what will be accomplished by such an effort. There is no one who could say just now exactly what such a council should consider. The significant fact is, that there are those in all denominations who are convinced that the day has passed when one denomination should make its plans and formulate its programs as if it, and it alone, were the only true representative of Christ on the earth; and that it makes no difference whatever what other denominations are undertaking and accomplishing. One thing seems reasonably certain: when the denominations begin to take counsel together as to how to accomplish seperately, a new and a more hopeful day has dawned.

WHAT SHOULD THE CHURCH DO?

There are certain responsibilities resting upon the local church. It has a responsibility to its membership, a responsibility to its pastor, a responsibility to the denomination of which it is a part; but its one great responsibility is for the unchurched. As the representative of Christ, the command is upon it to "seek and to save that which is lost."

When the local church begins to consider a program of advancement, too often it is reminded of its weakness rather than of its strength. It is forced to look at its members that are out of harmony with their church and its program and in different ways out of step with the Kingdom. This type of member attracts the church's attention. If it could be attracted by those who are in harmony with its program and who are in step with the Kingdom, it would be able to utilize its strength rather than to be handicapped by its weakness.

It is a problem for the local church to know what to do with its so-called "inactive members." Just a few days ago, I heard two very prominent churchmen—both ministers—discussing the problems of the local church. The one asked the other what to do about members who for all intents and purposes were of no real value to the church. The minister replied, "This was always a very great problem with us in our church. Finally, we put these non-profitable members on an inactive list. Whether it was the right thing to do I do not know; but one thing I know, that we are a great deal better off."

With that the conversation ceased; and I wondered and am still wondering if the church really was better off. It seems to me that it has a very definite responsibility to those who are on that inactive list, a responsibility that neither pastor, deacons, nor members can treat lightly or pass by. The great problem is how to re-reach them, how to re-interest them, how to re-enlist them in the service of the church. This is a responsibility to the church and shall ever be until it is completely discharged.

One great mistake that the local church makes is to take up all of its time thinking about the so-called "dead wood" within the camp without thinking about those without who need to be won. You are not likely to enliven a dead coal by casting it out of the grate, but you may cause the dead coal to ignite and glow with brilliancy by bringing live coals and placing the same within the grate. The best way that I know to thaw out a cold church, to re-enlist its membership, is by securing within the so-called active membership of the church a double portion of the spirit, to see that their own hearts are fired and burning that the inactive lives among them may be ignited and may flame with a holy zeal for the coming of His Kingdom. It is not the responsibility of the church to serve itself, but the responsibility of the church to save the world. And when the local church assumes this responsibility, it will find new life and new power within itself.

THE GRACE OF GIVING.

It is a fine thing to give. It is finer to give generously. It is more blessed to give gladly and freely. Our giving not only benefits the cause for which we give but enriches us greatly. There are definite types of givers. One is represented by steel. He gives only under pressure and then with a snap that makes you feel that you had rather a thousand times he had never given. The other is represented by a sponge. He gives more easily than the first, but it requires great effort. What you get is by squeezing, and then he will not give all that he should give. Still another class of givers is represented by the honeycomb. The slightest inpression causes the gift to come freely and with sweetness and will give all that is necessary. These three classes of givers are usually represented in every congregation, and we all know them very well. Remember, "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver." "There is that which withholdeth and yet scattereth abroad."

"THE LIFE AND TIMES OF REV. LITTLE JOHN UTLEY."

By Rev. Joseph E. McCauley.

(Address delivered at the Utley Reunion, Holly Springs, N. C., August 26, 1934.)

Does the time make the man? Or does the man make the times? This is a question of long standing. As yet, this question has not been answered to the satisfaction of the masses. It seems to your speaker that the two go hand in hand. At least when we study the life and times of the man for our consideration today, it seems that such is the case. The span of his life covered a little more than eighty-five years. He was born February 7, 1775, and died May, 1860. Let us notice briefly the historical events that took place during this period of our national history.

He was born the year the Revolutionary War broke out, a few months before Patrick Henry uttererd those immortal words, "Give me liberty or give me death." The year before the Declaration of Independence was signed, lived as a child through the Revolutionary War, as a young man he lived through the disturbing influences of the war between England and France, 1793. Then again his own country was at war with Great Britain in 1812. He lived through the perilous days of propaganda and preparation for the Civil War, but passed to another world the year before it broke out.

He not only lived in a time of political revolution and war but he lived in the pioneer days of our nation. When he was thirty-five years of age, there were only three cities in the United States with more than eight thousand inhabitants. In 1807 there was only fifteen cotton mills in the entire nation. But he witnessed a rapid growth of industry and of population. By 1840 the northeastern section of our nation boasted over the fact that the cotton mills had grown from 15 to 1240. But the South remained an agricultural section and owed her prosperity chiefly to cotton growing and shipping. Therefore, cities did not spring up and the influence of an urban population asserted itself there until a later date.

However much the political strife, industrial growth and national expansion may have affected the life of Rev. Little John Utley, the strife for religious liberty affected him more. For it was to that end he dedicated his life and it was for that cause he lived and died. It is to be remembered that there was a strife for religious liberty at the time of his birth. During the plastic years of his life he caught the spirit of the age and to that end he lived.

According to "The Frontier Spirit in American Christianity," 2 by Mode, pp. 123-128, just preceding the Revolutionary War and for many years after its close, there was a constant strife in the ranks of Methodism. The Wesley faction of Europe was strong for an autocratic rule. The American preacher under the leadership of Francis Asbury was striving for democracy in the church. When Wesley sent Coke to America to ordain Asbury as Bishop and made him a co-superintendent with Coke the American Church rebelled.

At the same time the Methodists were having such strife within their own ranks, the Baptists were waging a strong fight for religious liberty and the manifestation of democratic principles in religion. What was true of these denominations was true of all denominations. It was the strife for liberty, political, social and religious that brought forth the Christian Church. Rev. Little John Utley was only seventeen years old when the split came in the Methodist Conference in Baltimore in 1792. The Group which was led by Rev. James O'Kelley was striving for the abolition of all forms of autocracy in the church of Jesus Christ, and fostered the spirit of liberty of conscience. Rev. Little John Utley caught this spirit and became a co-laborer with Rev. James O'Kelley, the founder of the Christian Church.

Rev. Little John Utley was ordained to the ministry in the Christian Church on April 28, 1822, by Rev. Mills Barrett and John Hayes. He was a little more than forty-seven years old when he was ordained. But this was by no means the beginning of his active Christian experience. Long before he was ordained to the ministry he had preached the Gospel and was successful in winning many of his neighbors to Christ.

Rev. Little John Utley fast arose to place of prominence after he was ordained to the ministry. In 1834 he was moderator of the North Carolina Conference which met at Pleasant Spring and preached the introductory sermon. Two years later at Pleasant Grove in Chatham County, he was elected moderator and was chosen to preach the introductory sermon at the next Conference. In 1840 he was appointed as a messenger from the N. C. Conference to the Free Will Baptist Association. The same year he was elected Conference Evangelist for the ensuing year. "In 1849 he attended the N. C. and Va. Conference at Hanks Chapel as a messenger from the N. C. Conference." (Kernodle's Lives of Christian Church Ministers). Two years later the Conference met at Hanks Chapel again and he was appointed fraternal messenger to the Georgia Conference.

Just how many churches Rev. Little John Utley organized your speaker is not able to say, but one of his abiding influences is to be found in the Raleigh Congregational Christian Church. He, together with Rev. H. B. Hayes, organized the above mentioned church, First Christian Church of that city on September 22, 1842. His pastoral labors were mostly in Wake, Chatham and Orange Counties, N. C. His last pastorate was at Damascus, Orange County, five miles southeast of Chapel Hill.

The following quotations better describe the qualifications and character than I could hope to do.

Some person wrote to me not long ago about Rev. Little John Utley, a preacher who was well known in Wake, Chatham and Orange Counties fifty or sixty years ago, and whose relatives were very numerous in Wake. "I remember him as an old man with white head and jolly red face, whose height was about five feet ten inches and whose weight was perhaps a hundred and sixty pounds. His face wore a very benevolent expression and his general demeanor was that of a consistent Christian minister. He was a preacher of great popularity, though I am not able to say whether or not he was a man of education or of more than ordinary preaching ability. He had regular appointments at Pleasant Springs, eight miles south of Raleigh, frequently held services at private homes, and was always gladly received wherever he went, as everybody had the utmost confidence in him; regarding him as an earnest, faithful minister of Christ. He belonged to the Christian Church." (Whitakers' Reminiscence ch. 33, p. 257.)

"He enjoyed the entire confidence of the public as a minister of the Gospel; his praise was in all the churches; and for more than forty years of vigilant and unabating ardor in the Lord's vineyard, he was abundantly successful in winning souls to Christ. Up to his very last hours, he continued to point sinners to that Saviour who had sustained and comforted him. After an illness of several months, which he passed with Christian fortitude and resignation, he closed his earthly experience in great peace." (Kernodle's Lives of Christian Ministers, p. 73.)

Strange as it may seem that the great grandson of this man and a preacher should at this time make the proud assertion that he was a great financier and a devout preacher, yet I have historical data to show that he was one of the greatest of his age. For when he was less than two years old, he financed the whole family through the Revolutionary War. He did it after this manner. The Tories were raiding the community. The family had money enough to care for them very well. So when they heard the Tories approaching all the family took what money they had and hid it in his mother's lap. Then she took Little John and set him on the money and she sat still and watched the enemies search for what money they could find. They never thought to move the little banker.

Rev. Little John Utley married Sarah Walton on February 10, 1797. To this union were born the following children: Samuel, October 28, 1799; William S., Oct. 23, 1801; Jacob, Nov. 6, 1803; Little John, Feb., 1806; Henry, June 10, 1808; Temperance Ann, (Mrs. White), July 3, 1810; Grey, Sept. 11, 1813; Nancy, July 3, 1816; Gabriel, March 10, 1818; Foster, June 9, 1820.

We do not have time to deal with these children individually. Neither is it my duty or privilege. But the mention of Jacob the preacher who won distinction as a Baptist minister in the State of North Carolina, and Grey, who invented the stump puller and the invention of the washing machine by Foster is not out of place.

Rev. Little John Utley had material possession in Wake, Orange and Chatham Counties. The records in Wake County show that at times he owned several hundred acres of land. One of the records show that in 1802 he purchased 843 acres of land for 3,000 silver dollars. To what extent he owned land or other possessions in Chatham and Orange Counties we do not know. The mention of these possessions is only to show that trait of character which exemplified energy and thrift. For surely a man must possess that to rear ten children and obtain the possessions which he did in that age.

He never looked upon his ministerial profession as a means of livelihood. Neither did he acquire any land or material possessions through his pastoral labors. He was peculiar in that he would not accept a salary for his work as a minister. He would accept a gift but counted it only as an expression of appreciation for his labors.

Early in his life Rev. Little John Utley realized that life in its sum total was made up of choices. His nature made him fond of the world and its amusements. He was fond of dancing but when he found Christ he gave up all in order that he might become a soul winner. He chose the ministry because it was the best way he could serve Christ. He chose a wife whom he loved dearly and made the best home possible for her. He was devoted to his children and chose to invest his best for them. So he left to posterity the record of a kind, loving husband and father, a devoted Christian and a life of service in the ministry.

He died at Chapel Hill, North Carolina, May 18, 1860. He lived in the faith and died in the faith. The following quotation will show for itself: "When near the end, a friend asked him if he knew him, he replied, 'I know one thing.—I know that the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ, our Lord'." His last words to his physician were, "Prepare to meet thy God." With his faith fixed securely in one whom he loved, served, and trusted through his long career, he went out to meet Him, with that peace and happiness which can come through no other source.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

SUN readers will please indulge the writer for a personal letter this week. On Tuesday, February 5th, at 10:00 A. M., Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Powell of Liberty Spring Church, with Mrs. Johnson and this scribe, left Suffolk for a ten day trip to Florida. This journey by automobile is the realization of a dream of years.

Tuesday night was spent in Florence, S. C., where the late Dr. D. A. Long died a few months ago. On Wednesday we stopped by Savannah, Ga., to call on Dr. and Mrs. M. X. Corbin, who formerly lived in Eastern Virginia. Wednesday night was spent in Jacksonville, Fla. Today we visited several places of historic interest in St. Augustine. Old Fort Marion is a place of great interest because of its origin and history. Space will not permit a review of this history, but it furnishes a great object lesson of human cruelty engendered by the old military spirit. To enter the secret chamber of torture, and have the lights turned off for a minute, while the guide recites the fact that a man could not live in this room, when closed, more than twelve hours, stirred the imagination. In that room I thought of Paul in the inner prison, and how such an experience tested his faith. Surely the war spirit has found many cruel methods to torture and punish civil enemies for the most trivial offense. The Church of Jesus Christ should pray and work to end all war.

Tonight we stopped at Florida Sanitarium for a visit with Dr. J. O. Atkinson and Dr. C. H. Rowland. Both of these faithful ministers are reserving health and strength—Dr. Atkinson has gained ten pounds. Surely it willl be a great joy when these two beloved brethren can return to their fields of labor.

One of the things which impressed us on this trip is the terrific waste of young timber by forest fires in South Carolina, Georgia and Florida. It is safe to say that forest fires are raging in these states for a total distance of more than two hundred miles along highways numbers 301 and 17. It would be of interest to know how many thousands of acres have been burned over during the past month. We were told that farmers want this burned over in order that grass may be fresh for the cattle in the woods. If the cattle we saw along the highway are a fair sample, they are not worth as much as the vegetation and timber destroyed by the fire. Another explanation offered was that bird hunters have the land burned off in places to force the quail to seek shelter in the sections protected from the fire. That is a high price to pay for hunting quail.

In these great southern States there is an opportunity for laying the foundation for great wealth by the conservation of the natural resources in forests and land. These timber lands can never regain good value unless fire protection is offered by the people of the states affected.

At Deland, Florida, we saw beautiful fields of celery, strawberries, lettuce, cabbage, carrots and many other vegetables. Apparently there is enough celery in that section alone, to supply the demands of many other states. This is a wonderful country and God has made wise provision for man's physical needs. If man could only be wise enough to adapt himself to this physical world and then be good enough to crown his life with the possibilities of the spiritual power within reach, this would become a new earth. But selfishness, and hate, and greed, and intemperance and many other sins have burned out many latent possibilities, and the world is marred in its beauty and man lies prostrate and crippled. A gracious and loving Father patiently waits for the prodigals, (the wasters), return to physical and spiritual plenty.

I. W. JOHNSON.

THE CONVENTION'S LARGER BUDGET.

The Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches is not a legislative body but a promotional agency. It receives reports from departments and conferences. These reports are intended to reflect the condition and progress of the local church through their conferences and of the Convention through its various departments. The Convention ponders these facts, expresses its approval or disapproval, and passes certain resolutions looking toward the advancement of the church as a whole, and provides for certain promotional work in order that the entire membership of the Convention may be informed as to the conditions of the church and the plan for advancement along the lines indicated as a result of its findings and ambitions.

It has required money for the Convention to conduct its affairs in the past. It will require money to carry on its work in the future. The Convention undertakes the work of the Kingdom in its various departments. It does not undertake to provide money necessary for the conduct of these departments, but it does undertake to say how much money is required and to make a request of the local church, through the local conferences, for necessary funds. At its last session, held in Suffolk, Virginia, through a special committee appointed in advance, the Convention considered and adopted what may be termed "The Convention's Larger Budget." This larger budget includes money for the Convention itself, for publications, for superannuation, for Christian Education, for schools and colleges, and for missions. Definite amounts are allocated to the various departments. The condition and time for the raising of these funds were designated.

Three of the conference now constituting the Convention took the Convention's larger budget and apportioned the same to their several churches. The other two conferences now constituting the Convention did not apportion the larger budget to their several conferences. The Southern Convention of Congregational-Christian Churches is a delegated body; that is, local conferences elect delegates to the Convention. These delegates are seated and are given the privilege of counsel and vote on all matters coming before the Convention. They are there representing their conferences and the churches of their conferences through the conference itself. In this country, I assume that we are familiar with representative government; when a measure is passed by the state legislature or by the Congress of the United States without reference that measure becomes binding upon the constituency represented by such legislature or such congress. There is nothing divine about the church organization. It is purely human machinery set up to achieve divine ends. The Convention's larger budget was adopted unanimously without reference. Parliamentarily speaking, it would be binding upon those whom the delegates to the Convention represented.

The Convention's larger budget may not be agreeable to all. In fact, it is not. Very few measures are. But I do believe that the rank and file of our church is willing to follow the church's constituted leadership. It is not infallible, but it has done its best.

As seasons arrive for contributions to the various interests of the church, it would be helpful and inspirational to all charged with the definite responsibility to these various departments for the church to rally to the program of the Convention and dedicate itself and resources to the achieving of these ideals. The church calendar for the Convention is made up somewhat as follows: January and February—Education, when funds for Elon College are to be received; March, April, and May —Missions, when funds for missions are to be received; June, July, and Auugst—Religious Education, when funds are to be received for this department; September, October, and November—Benevolences, when funds are to be received for the Orphanage; December—when funds are to be received for the Board of Superannuation. The college will greatly appreciate the interest and contribution of the church at this particular time.

L. E. SMITH.

THE FOUNTAIN OF YOUTH.

Ponce De Leon hunted for many years trying to find a fountain where he could bathe and find perpetual youth, but he died in disappointment. Even today people are trying various washes and cosmetics to keep their youthful appearance, but time cannot be cheated out of his rightful heritage for all must yield to his sway who live to the three score years and ten. Yet there is a Fountain to which all may come and keep perennial youth in their souls.

In the beautiful garden where God placed Adam and Eve, there flowed a river which watered it; and the names given to the four streams which branched from it show the fountain-like propensities which it embraced. The Euphrates river has been called "the sweet waters of God;" the river Hiddekel: active, vehement; the river Gihon bursting forth; and the river Pison: overflowing. —A fountain of sweet waters to be sure that could not be contained but burst forth and overflowed in its great power. That was the fountain of youth and man could have ever kept the strength and vigor of youth had he obeyed the commands of God, for the garden was all that could be desired to please the heart of man with the presence of God and to satisfy his longing soul.

But sin came in and man was thrust out of the garden, away from the fountain; and his back was bent with the burden that sin brought; his face was wet with the sweat of his labor to combat the forces of sin which fought against his every effort to bring the ground into subjection that he might eat and live. Sin made the strength to fail, the eye to grow dim, the hair to turn gray, and the body to yield to disease and death. Yes, sin separated man from the fountain and from God; sin took its toll in heartaches and despair; sin did all in its power to thwart God's plan. But God's promise held true. The blood that was shed that man might be clothed was only typical of the Fountain that should be opened which would bruise and finally destroy the works of sin. And all through the intervening years the fountain of living waters ever flowed with its refreshing and life-giving stream. The lone travelers were refreshed; the Israelites drank their fill and still it flowed on.

Isaiah prophesied about the wayside springs of refreshing waters and of the satisfying fountain where the thirsty might drink their fill; and he sent forth the gracious invitation to everyone to drink, with the promise that their souls should be like a watered garden in the time of drouth. Ezekiel gave the picture of the Water of Life which flowed out from under the threshold of the temple, the mercy seat of God, the Fountain ever flowing. Then, one day, Jesus spoke to a woman at Jacob's well—a thirsty woman—and told her that she might drink of the fountain of living waters and never thirst. He told her that she might have this fountain in her soul, ever abiding in its life-giving power. And again on the great day of the feast, Jesus stood in the temple and cried to the unsatisfied souls to come and drink and then to let their souls refresh others.

"He who truly believes in Jesus shall possess within himself an inward spring of divine life, the fullness of which shall stream forth to bless others also." The Fountain was truly opened to the house of David and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem for sin and for uncleanness when Jesus hung on Calvary's cross. His blood still flows in its life-giving power and will never lose its power as long as a guilty soul confesses and forsakes his sins. John, the beloved, still sees the fountain sending forth its Water of Life in his Revelations. Oh, we never get old while we drink of this life-giving stream, for "with Him is the Fountain of Life." We have found the fountain of perpetual youth "for though our outward man perish, yet the inward man, regnerated heart, is renewed day by day." "Even the youths shall faint and be weary, and the young men shall utterly fail: but they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary and they shall walk, and not faint."

W.

YOUTH AND THE CHURCH OF TOMORROW.

De we fear for the Church of tomorrow? If so, why? Let us analyze our reasons.

a. Is the youth of today as religious by nature as the youth of the past was?

b. Is the Church of today giving its young people the training that will be necessary for future leaders of Christianity?

c. Will it be harder to be a Christian in the future than it is now?

Different opinions exist as to what will be the attitude of our youth toward the Church of the future. One writer lists the three following:

1. Many persons believe the young people will turn the Church upside down, unite the denominations, have the Church clean up politics, etc.

2. Others predict that youth will ignore the Church altogether, not caring whether it lives or dies.

3. Still another common belief is that the Church of tomorrow will be very much as it is today,—everybody will "belong" but not work very hard at being a Christian.

Future leadership largely depends on present responsibility given youth in the Church today. One writer has stressed the need of youth in the Church at the present time by saying:

"He needs young hearts, young minds, young hands
To fashion out the world that is to be."

This subject really has two divisions in its application. First, to the older people—the churches of today. Second, to youth, the Church of tomorrow.

The present-day Church cannot wash its hands of the responsibility of the Church of tomorrow. Solomon said: "Train up a child in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it." The Roman Catholics say give them a child until it is seven years old and he will always be a Catholic. Can we say as much? Do we make a conscious effort to impress our children with the religious ideals early in life that we wish them to have when they grow up?

Do we talk so much about the necessity for better looking church buildings and more comfortable equipment that youth has the wrong idea of what the Church really is? The original meaning of Church was The Collective Body of Christians, with no reference to sect or building.

The most common adjectives used to describe the Church today are modern, broadminded and progressive. All these terms may be very good to apply with certain meanings. We think of modern machinery as that fitted and adequate for present-day needs, so the really modern Church must be adequate for the present needs. God is the most modern character of all the ages, "Our refuge and strength, a very present help in the time of trouble." Are we up-to-date in making use of all the wonderful aids He has promised us? Be careful the Church is as modern as its buildings and esuipment.

Broadminded—able to see problems from other view points than our own is an enviable quality in an individual or group. I heard an elderly Baptist minister remark in a sermon a few years ago that the Church had become so broadminded it would condone anything and that there was no difference between the church member and the outsider. He lamented the fact that "turning-out-of-the-church" had gone out of fashion. Has the Church become broadminded enough to wink at sin as other worldly institutions do?

Can we be Christians and not be progressive? We cannot stand still. God warned those who were neither cold or hot but luke-warm that he would spue them out of his mouth. Peter said, "But grow in grace in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." Are church members growing so that young converts can observe the religion of older members as much deeper than theirs?

Let us now leave the responsibility of the Church of today and answer the questions at the beginning:

a. An able teacher says "Man is incurably religious." Human beings are very much the same in every age and clime. The youth of today has the same yearning for "something that will truly satisfy" that young people of any age ever had; but the present generation with its frankness wants no sham religion but the real thing with plenty of enthusiasm about it.

b. Young people are being given more responsibility and more attention every year by our churches. The whole membership centers its interest in Sunday School and other organizations around the needs of youth.

c. The future generation will have more leisure and the old saying that "an idle brain is the devil's workshop" is as true now as it ever was. More time though can be given to the study of God's word and more time to knowing the neighbor we have been too busy to meet in the past. Four great questions at least will have to be partly or wholly solved by the youth for we present-age people refuse to solve them or cannot. These four problems are whiskey, crime, war and the economic question.

In olden days whiskey was thought to be an aid to the physical and mental alertness. Now every youth in our schools knows that whiskey poisons the body, deadens the mind and weakens the morals. Knowing these facts will he not outlaw it more quickly than older people who are still skeptical they say.

Our president and our governor have both declared war on crime and when everyone becomes aroused something will be done. Youth will surely have its training school in the present orgy of crime and learn to deal better with it than we have.

We teach, preach and talk the evils of war enough to impress its honors on every mind.

The economic question has become a Church question. The New Deal taught us that we were responsible for our brother's keeping. When some lay up millions of dollars while others go hungry we are certainly not loving our brothers as ourselves.

I say the Church of tomorrow will settle these questions better than we are doing. So, Youth, the torch will soon be yours to hold it high and I for one believe it will be in good hands.

EUNICE TURNHAM.

A WORD FROM SUFFOLK.

The Turners turn in to old Suffolk,—William Redd, and Mary Rudd,—and take off the cake! The occasion was the twenty-third Birthday of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian Church, and the Rev. William Redd Turner, and his good wife, Mary Rudd Turner, were invited to be present, with the understanding that the former would make the address of the occasion. He did. And it was a very fine one indeed. The more than one hundred women present, as well as the goodly number of men, enjoyed it immensely.

The Rev. Mr. Turner had a good start even before he came, for we all knew that he was a graduate of our College, that he was for six months supply pastor of one of our largest churches, and that he endeared himself to the flock. Also, we knew that Mary Rudd possessed the scholastic approval of our College, that she wore it with dignity and honor, that she was of the Rudds of Rockingham, members of the Christian Church. He spoke on an assigned subject: "Why I Believe in Foreign Missions." And he said, with illustrations that illustrated, that he believed in foreign missions because his people were converted by foreign missionaries; because the world is waiting for the gospel story; because contemporaries, some of the bravest and best of them, are giving their lives for the cause; and because Jesus Commanded it. His address was effective, and appreciated.

Mrs. John King, President of the Society, left nothing undone neither by herself nor her efficient committees, in making the meeting a success. For instance, birthday gifts,—23c.—would be in order as it was the twenty-third birthday, if those attending desired to make such a contribution. More than 156 such gifts were received!

The refreshments were served in Fellowship Hall, on tables beautifully decorated. A brief address by Col. J. E. West, Chairman of the Board of Missions of the Southern Convention stirred those present with a renewed enthusiasm for preaching the Gospel across the earth. Dr. J. E. Rawls enriched the occasion with his wit and philosophic observations. Contests and games came as a relief to the more serious parts of the celebration. The spirit of appreciation ran high when a letter sent by special delivery from Washington, D. C., with appropriate birthday presents from Mrs. Bessie Staley Cheatham, and William Staley, her son, was read; and higher if possible when a telegram of congratulations from Florida Sanitarium, Orlando, Fla., from our beloved Mission secretary, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, was read.

But as I was going to say,—the Turners took the cake. A beautiful birthday cake, twenty inches in delicious diameter, a gift of Naas & O'Neal, was presented by Mrs. J. E. Rawls, chairman of the refreshment committee, to the Rev. and Mrs. Turner. The meeting was over, naturally, and a great one it had been!

WHY GOD WANTS OUR GIFTS.

When God calls upon us to honor Him with our substance, He does so not chiefly because He has need of anything we can give. He calls upon us thus to honor Him because we need the spiritual exercise involved—this reaching out of our faith, this proof of the sincerity of our love, this safeguard against the sin of covetousness, which doth so easily beset us.

He calls upon us to honor Him with our first fruits, not primarily because He wants our material goods or dollars, but because He wants us. He wants to bring us into that relationship to Himself in which, through the things He has bestowed upon us, we stand before Him as faithful stewards.

When, therefore, we speak of consecrating our means to God, the thing we are concerned about is not mainly the money question, or funds for the prosecution of the work of the Kingdom of God. That is not the matter of supreme importance. We need money and ever more money in the work of the Kingdom. Sad the day when the Church of God will not need more money for its work.

But our emphasis, when it comes to the matter of consecrating our means to God, must be placed upon the spiritual value of such a consecration. The thing of supreme importance is the adjusted relationship to God and the material things with which He has blessed us. Our liberality must be akin to that of our Heavenly Father whom we serve. Paul, in his letter to the Corinthians, warned against sowing sparingly and cited God's liberality:

He hath scattered abroad, He hath given to the poor;
And His righteousness abideth forever.

Such adjustment will issue in lives joined in sacred partnership with God. And when the membership of the Church goes into sacred partnership with God, and administers its means with a due sense of personal responsibility, then will the money problem in the work of the Church be solved, and then will we be able to drive back the menacing tides of materialism.

Our greatest need is men and women who recognize God as the Father-Owner of all things, not by confession of lip alone, but by a consecrated life manifested in a full consecration of means—men and women who honor God with their substance and with the first fruits of their increase; men and women who are constrained by the love of Christ to walk with Him the way of sacrifice. To such men and women it will be indeed "more blessed to give than to receive." They shall walk with Him in white, for they are worthy.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

THINGS SEEMINGLY NONSENSICAL.

Good fortune has bestowed upon the writer a Jewish rabbi as a friend of long standing. Frequently his remarks are most illuminating. Once in a moment of frankness, he admitted that the keeping of the Jewish law was a terrible nuisance. But, he added, there is one advantage—it carries the thought of God into every act of life. Observances which to us seem nonsensical to the devout Jew serve as reminders of Jehovah.

The Cent-a-Meal boxes which are finding their way into so many of our homes may serve the same purpose. We need to think more of other people and less of ourselves. Giving is really a habit. Putting pennies into a box can serve to make us conscious of the needs of multitudes of people in our own land and beyond the sea. That little box can keep awake in our hearts a consciousness of the Kingdom of God.—Missionary Herald.

ELON FACES THE ORIENT.

Elon College is soon to turn its thought toward the West. The occasion is a Missions Conference to be held on the campus Monday, March 4th. The Orientals in America is the conference topic and the leader is none other than the distinguished author in person, the Reverend Albert W. Palmer, President of the Chicago Theological Seminary.

Happy is the author who writes from first-hand knowledge. Dr. Palmer grew up among the Orientals in Southern California, went to college with them at the University of California, and lived among them in Redlands, Oakland, and Honolulu, Hawaii. He taught Orientals in the Pacific School of Religion, and he has visited China and Japan twice. Dr. Palmer spent the summer of 1932 among the Orientals of our west coast; then, he wrote Orientals in America.

Dr. Palmer preaches at Elon College Sunday, March 3rd. The Missions Conference willl begin at 10:30 in Whitley Memorial Auditorium on Monday, March 4th. All the laymen and ministers of the Carolina-Virginia Churches are invited to the conference and to bring their lunches for the all-day session. The College will serve hot drinks to all guests at noon. In the early afternoon, Dr. Palmer will resume his interpretation of the Orientals in America. The Conference will close in time for those attending to drive home for dinner.

Seven years as minister of the Central Union Congregational Church at Honolulu, Hawaii, alone, qualifies Dr. Palmer to interpret oriental life to American churchmen. Out of this experience came Dr. Palmer's second book, The Human Side of Hawaii.

Come one, come all to this vital conference!

AN INTREPID WOMAN.

By MISS D. P. CUSHING, News Editor.

Although forced to evacuate her post in Kienning, Fukien Province, China, four times during recent years because of Communist invasions, Dr. Clara Sargent Shepherd, woman physician under the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions who is now in the United States on furlough, brings back an optimistic story of the progress of China along social, economic and medical lines.

Mrs. Shepherd's husband, Rev. George W. Shepherd, is engaged in the new social reconstruction program being carried on in China under the direction of General Chiang Kai Shek in sections taken back from the Communists.

Dr. Shepherd, who represents in China the Wellesley Congregational Church, attended the National Medical Conference in Nanking just before she sailed for America. She first went to China in 1918 under the Y. W. C. A., and was allocated to health work. Although the duties of a mother of five children, the youngest not yet a year old, have made it impossible for Dr. Shepherd to carry full medical service since her marriage, she has done a grerat deal for women and children along the lines of maternity work and baby clinics.

When the Reds took Yankow last year, sending hundreds of refugees into Foochow, Dr. Shepherd was the prime mover in organizing relief for these stricken people. In her regular work she has traveled many steep mountain trails, often through bandit infested areas, carrying the baby in a hammock swung from a sedan chair. Everywhere she met only friendliness among the country people with especially responsive smiles for the children. Through these devastated districts Dr. Shepherd found plucky groups of Chinese Christians clinging tenaciously to their faith although robbed of all material things.

On several river trips the Shepherds were of necessity forced to ride in armour plated steam launches at which bands of robbers took pot shots. Once Dr. Shepherd and her children, with another woman doctor and a group of faithful Chinese friends, spent the night on the river bank waiting for an opportunity to get down stream to safety. On Christmas day last year they were in Foochow and with all the other families had to eat their Christmas dinner outside the city under the trees while bombing planes dropped shells on Foochow.

The Chinese greatly admire the idealism of America as represented by our famous national heroes, says Dr. Shepherd, as she told of seeing the picture of Dr. Sun Yat Sen, which holds the place of honor in China, flanked on either side by photographs of George Washington and Abraham Lincoln.

Dr. Shepherd is a graduate of the University of Michigan (M. D.), and served an interneship in the Worcester Memorial Hospital, Worcester, Mass. She was on the staff of the Battle Creek Sanitarium for over a year and for a time at the New England Hospital for Women and Children, Roxbury, Mass. She represents not only the Wellesley Congregational Church, but the Canandaigua Congregational Church, New York. Dr. Shepherd is the daughter of Mrs. F. E. Sargent, 4748 Brush Street, Detroit, Mich.

A Story for the Children

THE SECOND MILE.

"Father," said Harry, "there was a verse in our portion last night that puzzled me."

"Was there, my son?" said his father; "what was it? We were reading in the fifth chapter of St. Matthew, were we not?"

"Yes," said Harry, "in the forty-first verse you read, 'And whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain.' If anyone is so unreasonable as to ask you to walk a mile out of your road with him, why should you make it two?"

Harry's father smiled. "Christ often makes us do things that seem to the world to be unreasonable, my boy," he replied. "He means that when we are compelled to do something for somebody, we should be ready to go further, to go 'out of our way,' as the saying is, to lend a helping hand. The first mile is all that is asked, the second is given freely out of love."

Harry was really interested, and like many another boy, he said little.

Some weeks passed by, and examination at Harry's school drew near. There was one that he was especially concerned about, as most of the questions had to be answered orally. He sat himself to the master subject. When the day came, full of hope and anticipation, he set out on his bicycle for the four-mile ride to school, his parents' prayerful good wishes ringing in his ears.

But Harry never reached the school that day! Another school-fellow, named Bob, joined him on the way. When they had covered only half the distance to school a serious accident befell Bob. He was a careless rider, and failed to notice a car coming toward him in the opposite direction, with the result that he had a head-on collision, and was badly injured. It took Harry a long time to get help, and get a doctor. After seeing his chum safely to a hospital he cycled back to break the news to Bob's mother.

When Harry's father returned home late that evening he found him seated by the fire trying to read a book; there was a troubled look on his face. His father had heard the news from a neighbor, so he was prepared. "Well, Harry," he said after the usual greetings, "I've heard all you've done today, my boy. Poor Bob, what a sad accident!" Harry's only answer was, "I lost the prize."

His father understood the feeling of keen disappointment. "I know," he said, "and I sympathize with you; but you lost in a splendid cause."

"What do you mean, Father? Anybody else would have done what I did, in the circumstances."

"No, Harry, they wouldn't have done it. When Bob was on his way to the hospital, by riding hard there was still time for you to get to school; but you chose to cycle two miles in the opposite direction to relieve the anxiety of Bob's mother."

"Oh, that," said Harry, "that was nothing! Something seemed to compel me to do it, and Bob's mother was ever so grateful. Say, Father, was that going the second mile?"

"Yes, Harry, I think it was. You put the interests of others before your own. You will not lose by it in the long run. God will reward you, I feel sure."—The Christian.

REV. G. A. PEARCE MOVES.

We are very glad to announce to the SUN family and others of our friends, that we have changed our address from Burlington, N. C., to Wakefield, Va. The change came a bit sudden as we had about given up hopes of getting work in the religious field this year. But it is a significant fact that the Lord hears and answers prayers in these days as He did in days that have passed and gone.

We moved the last day of December, 1934. A truck came over for our furnishings and the next day we were residing in Wakefield, Va.

It seems that there is a spirit of perfect harmony existing throughout the entire field. The people seem eager to cooperate in every way possible, and I see no reason why this year should not be the best year this field has known in many years. We are hoping to come up, when conference convenes next fall one hundred per cent in every way; that is our goal.

Let me state just here that it is a genuine pleasure to have the privilege to follow a man on the field when there are so many good things said about him as I have heard said about Brother Gerringer and his good wife. As yet, I have not heard one word uttered except such that would bespeak for them praise for their years of efficient service on the field, and gratitude for the fine Christian character which has been exemplified by them while on the field.

I went up town Saturday afternoon and was talking to a gentleman, another gentleman came along in a truck. They asked me if I would like to go for a little ride. I accepted, and got in. Away the truck went as though it was going all the way in a short while, headed out of town. All of a sudden he made a right turn and then another right turn and around to the back of the Christian parsonage. I got out, and said, "well, you have brought me home, now come in." They began to take boxes and bags out of the truck and continued until the load was out. Then turning to me one of them said, "this is a little pounding from the Wakefield Church." He may call it a little one if he wishes, but I have another way of spelling it. Why, there was:—flour, 60 lbs; sugar 37 lbs; sweet potatoes, 2 bushels; Irish potatoes, 1½ bushels; coffee, 2 lbs; lard, 8 lbs; 2 nice chickens, 1½ bushels meal, and many other things of similar nature for the pantry. These people certainly believe in speaking their feelings in concrete form. May the Lord bless them and help us that we may measure up in every way to their fondest expectations.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

Rev. F. C. Lester, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

SOUTHEAST YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

The constitution and by-laws of the Youth Fellowship of the Southeast call for a meeting of this fellowship in connection with the Southeast Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches. This means that there is to be a meeting of young people from all over the southeast at Raleigh during the Southeast Convention on April 30th to May 2, 1935.

Plans are under way to hold a separate session for young people on the afternoon of May 2nd, at which time Dr. Helfenstein and Miss Lucy Eldredge will be present. There will probably be a banquet that evening, and it is hoped that there will be a large number of young people present to hear Dr. Daniel A. Poling at the evening service.

Every conference and association in the Southeast Convention should have two or more young people in Raleigh for the entire session of the Southeast Convention. These young people can find time to work together in making plans for their own work and still get most of the addresses which will be given to the Southeast Convention. I sincerely hope that officials and leaders of all conferences and associations will feel the importance of this matter and will aid young people in getting to Raleigh. I also hope that young people will begin planning for themselves to get to Raleigh for this important meeting.

If we can have representatives from Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia, the Carolinas, Georgia, Alabama, and Florida who will sit down together and work out plans for cooperative work, there is no way to estimate the amount of good that can grow out of such a meeting.

Rev. Aubrey C. Todd, a student at Elon College, Elon College, North Carolina, is president of this Youth Fellowship and is now busy with plans for this meeting. Those interested should correspond with him, or with the editor of this page who is assisting in building up the program.

S. S. TEACHERS' NOTEBOOK.

There has come to my desk recently something that appears to be very helpful. Dr. Erwin L. Shaver, director of Leadership Training for our Church, is always trying to do something to help our leaders. This new publication, "Directions for Making and Using a Church School Teachers' Notebook" appears to me to have real value. It is intended to be a personal notebook for the average teacher. There are several sections with directions as to how to use it to good advantage. The teacher will add a cover and note paper as needed, and will make his own notebook. Dr. Shaver gives the necessary suggestions to aid the average teacher in collecting source material and new methods of teaching, which will enrich his own experience and make him more effective. The cost of this material is 25c, and is published by The Pilgrim Press, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

HOW DO YOU PRAY?

Prayer is the most important part of one's life. It is in prayer that one finds God. Prayer clears vision, purifies motives, and empowers the will. Prayer opens the channels of the soul so God can come in and abide. Prayer gives us time to hear God's voice and to rest the soul. Prayer increases faith, enthusiasm and love: it makes life sweet, harmonious and beautiful.

It will if it is the right kind of prayer. Selfish prayer will not. Prayer that is backed by hate, suspicion, or doubt does little or no good. Prayer that is real rises out of a sincere heart and goes to a living God. An effectual prayer comes from a righteous life and is fervent.

After the disciples had heard Jesus pray, they said to Him: "Lord, teach us to pray." And He taught them in words that all should know and use. (Matt. 6:9-13.)

There are many other prayers that are helpful, but they should supplement, never substitute for our own prayers. The one below is a good morning prayer. Why not use it for a while?

Another day has come;
O help me, God, I pray,
To full forget the bitter things
That happened yesterday,
And give us strength, O Lord,
Each issue so to meet,
That I may face Thee unashamed
Before the Judgment seat.
Help me to rule myself
And kindly let me live,
To all my work, to all mankind,
My very best to give.
And should, in Thy great plan,
This day labors end,
Forgive my sins, my soul receive
For Jesus' sake.—Amen.

WHEN FULL PAY IS POOR PAY.

"Son, rememberr that thou in thy lifetime receivest thy good things."—Luke 16:25.

If you get paid for all you do today neither God nor man will be under any obligation to you tomorrow. The man who is fully paid today is poorly paid. The man who can be paid today does not earn much. Earn a little more than you get today. Have something out on interest. God keeps books! Insist on taking a small percentage of today's pay in respect and friendship. It's great! I know justice demands that you should have all that belongs to you. That's what Hell is for. If everybody had taken their pay in full, what kind of a world would this be for you? Don't forget you are working for God and humanity—and eternity.—From "War Cry."

LITTLE THINGS.

Making an issue of a little thing is one of the surest ways to spoil happiness. One's personal pride is felt to be vitally injured by surrender, but there is no quality of human nature so nearly royal as the ability to yield gracefully. It shows small confidence in one's own nature to fear that compromise lessens self-control. To consider constantly the comfort and happiness of another is not a sign of weakness but a sign of strength.

PRECIOUS PROMISES.

Precious promise God hath given
To the weary passerby,
On the way from earth to Heaven,
"I will guide thee with mine eye."

When temptations almost win thee,
And thy trusted watchers fly,
Let this promise ring within thee,
"I will guide thee with mine eye."

When thy secret hopes have perished
In the grave of years gone by,
Let this promise still be cherished,
"I will guide thee with mine eye."

Prayer:

Solo: "Why Should He Love Me So?"

What the Bible says about forgiveness:

I John 1:7-9; 2:1-12.
God will forgive. Isaiah 55:6, 7.
The Father receives the sinner. Luke 15:11-24.
The Forgiving Saviour. Luke 23:34.
Receiving and granting forgiveness. Mark 11:25; Matt. 6:15.
Not a question of frequency. Matt. 18:21, 22.
Our example. Col 3:13.
The spirit of forgiveness. Matt. 18:35; Rom. 12:8.
I Thess. 6:15; I Cor. 13:7; Mark 3:28; I Pet. 3:9; Prov. 25:21; Luke 6:35; Matt. 6:14; Isa. 44:22; Luke 11:4; Luke 17:4; Eph. 4:32; Lev. 19:18; Matt. 5:38; Rom. 12:17; Eph. 4:2.

"Give the following four topics to members, asking each to bring in some situation in our lives today where the teaching applies, or to raise some problem which they see in the application of this teaching:

'The Spirit of Forgiveness'
'Receiving and Granting Forgiveness'
'Not a Question of Frequency'
'Our Example.' "

Make this "An Automobile-Race Meeting."

"Arrange the chairs in groups of five or seven according to the seating capacity of the car which each group represents. Attach the name of the car to one of the chairs.

"Appoint a chauffeur for each car, whose duty it will be to fill the remaining seats. The membership will be divided among the chauffeurs for this purpose. If visitors attend the meeting, they should be gladly received as 'extra passengers.' Score should be kept on the blackboard by the leader, with points suggested as follows:

"Full car, 15 points; prayer, 10 points; testimony, 10 points; a Scripture verse from memory, 5 points; reading a Scripture verse, 2 points; reading a clipping, 2 points; for each passenger late, 5 points off.

"Advertising the Meeting.—Make a poster with a sketch or magazine picture of an automobile, and beneath it announce the topic and nature of the meeting. Each 'Chauffeur' should give cards or invitations to the members who are to be passengers of his car."—*From "Fifty-two Varieties," a manual of plans for Christian Endeavor Prayer Meetings, by Harry W. Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

PETER TEACHES GOOD CITIZENSHIP.

(Temperance Lesson.)

Lesson VII—February 17, 1935.

Golden Text: "Love worketh no ill to his neighbor; love therefore is the fulfillment of the law." —Romans 13:10.

Lesson: I Peter 2:11-17; 4:1-5.

The Bible is the world's classic literature. There is nothing that surpasses it in dignity of style and beauty of expression, as well as in power of appeal. And if you should read the New Testament for the first time or for the one hundredth time and should be asked to pass judgment on the first Epistle of Peter from which today's lesson is taken you would undoubtedly say that it was up to the standard of the other parts of the Bible. It does not suffer by contrast. It does not have to be apologized for. And yet it was written by the man who was once an unschooled, rough and ready fisherman. Christ does make a difference. Christ does discover unsuspected possibilities. Christ does transform men. If Peter had not responded to the call of that friendly young man who called him from his nets that day, he would have remained an unknown and ordinary man. But because he answered Christ's call and challenge, he became one of the great figures of history, and the author of one of the world's classics.

All of this may seem aside from the subject of today's lesson, but as the writer thought over this lesson, it was this thought that impressed him most—Christ's amazing power to transform and develop men when they yield themselves to Him. Peter, a fisherman; Peter, the author of one of the world's classics—the same man, the same but different, and the difference was Christ.

This letter of Peter's was written to the Christians scattered throughout the Roman Empire. The rumblings of Rome's oppression and persecution were already in the air. Peter writes to prepare them for the inevitable and to encourage them. His message has a timelessness as well as a timeliness. He speaks to us today.

Abstinence and Good Behavior.

"I beseech you as sojourners and pilgrims to abstain from fleshly lusts, which war against the soul." Abstinence—that is the law for the Christian, abstinence from the things that war against the soul. It is not a question of whether a thing is illegal from the standpoint of state; it is a question of whether it is inimical to the health of the soul. That was what Peter said to the people of his day and that is what he would say to the Christians of our day. There are far too many professing Christians who are indulging in drinking, in gambling, in loose sex relations, in reading salacious literature, in seeing suggestive pictures, in indulging in things which smirch and stunt the soul. The question is not will it do me any harm, but will it do my soul good.

"Having your behavior seemly among the Gentiles." Peter announces a principle which is binding upon us today. He says in so many words, "Now these Gentiles will make fun of you, they will speak evil of you, they will even tell lies about you, but there is just one thing that you can do—you can go on living the Christ-like life, you can do your good works so that these things will refute everything they say." It is sound advice for us today. Let those out of the church think we are strange, let them make fun of our beliefs, but live in such a way that your life speaks the answer. The world is not going to pay very much attention to our creeds, but it is going to be profoundly impressed by our lives.

Observance of Law.

Peter put the emphasis, not upon law enforcement, but upon law observance. The Christians of his day were enjoined to obey the ordinances of men, from the king down to the local authorities. This does not mean that Peter put his stamp of approval on everything the rulers did. It does mean that the Christian will have a deep respect for law as long as it is law, he will obey it. America is the most lawless nation in the world. Men in high places openly show their disrespect for and practical disregard of law. And many citizens openly flout the laws they do not like. It is time we Americans turn to Peter's teaching and practice what he enjoined under very much worse circumstances than ours—"Be subject to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake."

Liberty, But Not License.

"As free, and not using your freedom for a cloak of wickedness, but as bond-servants of God." The Christian is of all men most free. Christ sets men free with His glorious liberty. But He does not give them license. The man who is truly free will use his freedom in serving God, he will use his power to do as he pleases to do what he ought.

Civic Duties.

Honor all men—have a respect for human personality. Love the brotherhood—let intelligent good will govern you in all your relationships. Fear God—not be afraid of him, but stand in awe of Him, worship Him, obey Him. Honor the king—have respect for authority.

Ready for the Battle.

"Arm yourself also with the same mind"—with the mind of Christ. Earlier Peter had said that the Gentiles would make fun of them. He now tells them that they will actually persecute them, and he urges them to get ready for the conflict. Their armor is to be the mind of Christ. If they have in them the mind that was in Christ when He was persecuted and suffered they will be victorious.

Let Past Sins Suffice.

A Scotchman who visited one of the cities of his native land said that he was sorry that he had not had an opportunity to visit it before he became a Christian. There are many who still lust after the fleshpots of Egypt. But the man who possesses Christ has no desire to go back to his old sins. "The time past may suffice to have wrought the desire of the Gentiles, lusts, lasciviousness, wine-bibbings, revelings, carousings, and abominable idolatries—that sounds rather modern, doesn't it? That list fits the lives of many American men and women, and young people today. And in their best moments they loathe the whole business and have a hunger for Christ, and as Peter says, even while they are making sport of those who will not join them in their revelries, in their heart of hearts they respect them and even envy them. We have been made for the best things of life and nothing can totally crush out that instinctive hunger for them.

A Day of Reckoning.

"Who shall give account to him that is ready to judge the living and the dead." The wages of sin is death. The devil does not pay every Saturday night. But sin always finds us out eventually. Every one of us must give an account of himself unto God—thus writes Paul. It is a sobering fact, a stubborn fact. Modern science tends to confirm, rather than to refute this fact. Somewhere and sometime, as individuals we must give an account of ourselves to One Who is Judge of the universe. Let every man take heed unto himself.

MONDAY.

JESUS WITH MARY AND MARTHA.

"The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want." —Psalm 23:1.

"Here we see our Lord at the Bethany home of these sisters, a place where He loved to tarry. Martha is the scriptural example of the virtue of hospitality, busy at serving food for physical needs. Mary is the quiet, contemplative, teachable one, more concerned with spiritual things, and spent most of her time sitting near Jesus, and listening to what He was saying. When Martha complained that Mary let her do all the work, Jesus gently hinted that He would rather have a quiet talk on heavenly things than receive all these hospitable attentions at her hands."—Christian Calendar.

Prayer—Dear Father, as Thy children, we desire to walk with Thee in a way that we shall feel the fellowship of Thy divine life and hear Thy divine voice. We pray for the spirit of the quiet hour to bring us in touch with Thee and in the dawning of this day may communion sweet be our reality. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

GOD'S OPEN REWARD.

"Thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly."—Matt. 6:6.

It is a wonderfully satisfying reality that the rewards for inner right living are found in the open outer life. The rewards for the inner communion with God is not always as immediate as that of fellowship with a friend, but it is seen later in developing character, bestowed confidences, increasing spiritual joys, saving virtues, gentleness, meekness, kindnesses and a good life.

To illustrate! All the beauty and color of a rose came from within where all its powers were closeted with the God of its potentialities. All its beauty and glory is the reward of its inner prayer which in its developing life it struggled to obtain, and this reward is bestowed upon it in an outward fashion for the good of the world around it.

So God rewards His children who fellowship Him in their inner life. A good life is the fruitage and the outward manifestation of the inherent power from within, hid in God, faithful to God, resolute in God, assimilating, rejecting, amplifying or transmuting, and incorporating only that which is in accord with Him who is the Author of life and the blesser of souls—the Spirit of God.

Prayer—Spirit of heavens descend upon our hearts,—so slow to rise,—and give us Thy rewards from on high. May we abide in Thee as faithful as the tree abides in the life that makes it. —Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE CULTURE OF THE SPIRIT.

"Against such there is no law."—Gal. 5:23.

Paul has just stated what fruit is expected to be found of a Christian, and this statement is added to show that the spirit of a true Christian easily transcends all law. He endeavored to show the Galatians that the law not only cannot condemn the fruits of the Spirit, but that it cannot produce anything of the kind any more than a machine can fashion a flower.

Neither God nor man can condemn Christian character. God will not, for they are the fruit of His divine Spirit working within the soul. Law cannot, because it is that which is eternally right and fitting. There is no court on earth, either barbarous or civilized, to condemn a man against being joyful, peaceful, longsuffering, good, gentle, lovely, honest and praiseworthy.

Prayer—Our Father, create within us a hungering and a thirsting for righteousness. Endow us with the loftiest ideas of living. Endow us with an abiding influence which makes life what it ought to be, through and through.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE LAST SUPPER.

"Take, eat; this is my body." "Drink ye all of it, for this is my blood."—Matt. 26:26-28.

By declaring His body and blood to be the spiritual food and drink of mankind, and thus instituting the Sacrament of Holy Communion, Jesus asserted His true divinity. There is nothing that really comes so near to us, and continues to be so near to us as is the person of Jesus in whom is God the Father. Henry Ward Beecher used to say that the yearning of his own soul for God, a yearning that was so deep and persistent, that there was only one thing that he could conclude and that was that God put that yearning there, and He put it there as a ground of expectation that he would answer the cravings that He had created. And out of that came the conclusion that God who made him thus, must answer him or cease to be God. In this way the Christ of the Gospels was God's answer to man's necessity. And in grateful surprise he cried, "Why this God?" To him there was not a single thing that he would have in God that he did not find in Christ, and there was not anything in Christ that he would not like to have in God. This was the God that Beetcher worshipped.

Prayer—Our Father, give us this day our daily bread. Our bread is Christ and a close walk with Him. And as we eat of His word and His life this day, wash us and make us clean. Blot out our transgressions and remember them against us no more. Hold Thou our hands and suffer us not to stumble or err, but to walk in Thy righteousness forever.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

FEAR NOT.

"My spirit remaineth among you. Fear ye not." —Hag. 2:5.

The abiding Christ coupled with "Fear not," is a condition with which Christ has made us familiar.. These were His favorite words from the beginning to the end of His ministry. It was the watchword of His entire journey. The disciples met it when they were troubled. When the ship was sinking in the storm, they heard it. When enemies threatened them, they heard it. And when He was leaving them, it was His parting word.

Christ has been speaking that word ever since. He is God's answer to human gloom and despondency. "I am with you to the end of the world." "I will never leave you nor forsake you." This message should be one of the messages of our times when there are so great shakings.

Prayer—Our Father help us to put our trust in Thee and not in men.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

SWORDS IN THE SOUL.

"A sword shall pierce through thine own soul." —Luke 2:33-40.

Far more swords pierce souls than pierce bodies. Mary's was pierced when Jesus was crucified; so also was John's and Peter's, and James', and Mary Magdalene's, and no one knows how many more.

Swords are being thrust through souls all over the world. If Mary, most honored of women, chosen to be the mother of God's own Son, did not escape the sword, we cannot expect to escape it. Better not expect to. Better not try to. Better simply rest in Jesus, whose soul was so sorely pierced, and who knows the balm for all such wounds.

—Prayer—Our blessed Redeemer, encourage us in the warfare of this life. May we be Thy true soldiers, ready for whatever comes.—Amen.

ENDURING GARMENTS.

"Their clothes waxed not old."—Neh. 9:16:25.

The Levites who urged the people of Nehemiah's time to obey God gave as one reason the Lord's care for the Israelite's during the forty years of wandering in the desert. For one thing, "their clothes waxed not old."

That would be a great blessing to us, our clothes wear out so fast. It would be a fine thing to have clothes that did not grow old. And this is exactly what the Christian has. All his real possessions are permanent, the garments of his soul, his faith and hope and love, his courage and patience and peace. He is royally attired, and his garments endure.

Prayer—For whatever Thou givest, O Christ, is forever. It does not waste away. Time has no power over it. It belongs to Thy eternity.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

THROUGH THE NEEDLE'S EYE.

"Tall was my camel and laden high,
And small the gate as a needle's eye.
The city within was very fair,
And I and my camel would enter there.

'You must lower your load,' the porter cried
'You must throw away that bundle of pride.'
'Just now,' said the porter, 'to make it less.
Discard that hamper of selfishness.'

This I did, but the load was great,
Far too wide for the narrow gate.
'Ah,' said the porter, 'your load must hold
Some little package of trust-in-gold.'

The merest handful was all I had,
Yet 'Throw it away,' the porter bade.
I obeyed though with much ado,
Yet still nor camel nor I got through.

Then lo, a marvel! the camel tall
Shrank to the size of the portal small,
And all my riches, a vast estate,
Easily passed through the narrow gate!"

Sooner or later fundamental errors of belief must reproduce themselves in practice.—Borden P. Bowne.

AN EVEN START WITH LIFE.

By JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D.

"O satisfy us early with Thy mercy; that we may rejoice and be glad all our days."—Psalms 90:14.

When David, the poet and musician, looked back across the centuries for suitable material for the psalter he must have rejoiced when he found the great poem-prayer from which our text is taken today. The great notes of the diapason peal forth in its very opening sentences: "Lord, Thou hast been our dwelling place in all generations; before the mountains were brought forth, or even Thou hadst formed the earth and the world, even from everlasting to everlasting Thou art God." Let the people sing those lines for a few hundred years, David must have prophetically thought, and even the Christ Himself will come!

To the large group of young people here present this morning, and especially you who are so faithful to attend the rehearsals, and performances of this large junior choir, I wish to say that if you store up these great songs in your soul you shall have a deep, diapason music and rhythm to your lives that will stand you in good stead all your days. In fact if I were giving a modern title to this ninetieth psalm, I would call it: Getting an even start with life; for it is a psalmic prayer for God's benedictions and blessings upon life from beginning to end.

In this great poem the psalmist is saying (1) Life is from the eternal God, (2) Life is uncertain, like a candle in the open air, (3) Life's sins are death dealing, and God sees them every one, and yet, and how fine (4) Life may be gloriously lived, and greatly rewarded. Your friend, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, has said for you:

"Life is real, life is earnest;
And the grave is not its goal;
From dust thou art, to dust thou returnest,
Was not spoken of the soul."

And that is what we want, isn't it? Life that is real, life that is earnest and life that has no setting sun, or life that has no end. Our text under the sweet guise of music and poetry tells us how to have just that sort of life. Let us take it bit by bit and see its meaning.

I.

"O satisfy us early with Thy mercy; that we may rejoice and be glad all our days." I am left-handed. My mother used to tell me that I did things just backward. It is not always so good. but today let us take our text in the reverse order. Let us take the phrase, "all our days" first. It is as though we stood and looked at our life from the beginning to the end, isn't it? And what a lovely thing that is to do when we are in the house of God. We are surrounded by the right sore of things to give us something of the right perspective. "All our days" suggests that life is made up of single units of days; that step by step it is to be lived; that now is the moment of high resolve and noble action; and that when we have put all the moments together we have a life-span.

There is an ear-mark of age in this song. Wise, noble age, that loves youth and is patient with its overflowings. Our years are carried away like a flood, they pour like a stream, they perish like grass. The old man is looking back across them. How swiftly they have gone, after all! A whole life-span of seventy years, "three score years and ten," is past "as a tale that is told."

But let us not lose sight of the fact that this great Moses embedded life in God,—"thou hast been our dwelling place in all generations," and "even from everlasting to everlasting Thou art God." Life seems so short in the long reaches of eternity. A whole dollar would be much to a hungry lad, but a dollar is not much to a multi-millionaire, and so are the reaches of eternity, "thousand years in Thy sight are but yesterday when it is past, and as a watch in the night." And yet although God has endless days so that He is eternal He is not prodigal with life. Every day is counted even as the falling sparrow is noted, and the hairs of the head are numbered. Every day is a brand new blessing. Every day is a beginning again. And in every day we may be glad and rejoice!

II.

And that brings us to the second part of our text: "That we may rejoice and be glad." I started to say, I know every young person will vote for that. But why not make it unanimous, for we all would vote for that! "That we may rejoice and be glad," that is what we all long for. And this poem which begins with the everlasting God tells us how we may do it. By (1) numbering our days, by (2) making wisdom and life's choices go hand in hand, by (3) contemplating the works of God, by (4) having the Father's loving care and mercy upon us, and (5) by doing our work in such a way as to expect to have it established by the hand of God. "So teach us to number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom" . . . "Let Thy work appear unto Thy servant, and their glory unto their children. And let the beauty of the Lord our God be upon us; and establish Thou the work of our hands."

Sometime ago I was given instructions as to how to unlock the iron safe in the church office. So many times to the left, or right; and so many times to the right or left; and a portion of a turn here, and a portion of a turn there. Click, and the formidable door,—so strong, so tight, so firmly shut,—swings so easily on its hinges! It was really a thrill to see it work. Young people, desire you to enter into the real thrills of life, to walk under the shining beauty of rejoicing and happiness? Here are the rules of life in the Book, and in the heart. Sidestep those rules, and, —the language seems almost too strong,—"thou turnest man to destruction" . . . "we are consumed by Thine anger" . . . "thou hast set our iniquities before Thee, our secret sins in the light of Thy countenance." Sidestep the rules of the combination of that safe, and all my efforts are useless, and I stand on the outside. So near and yet so far, on the outside. But obey the rules,—"to obey is better than sacrifice,"—and we are happy, and rejoicing. I may turn the lock, and feel quite sure I have turned it exactly right, but if it does not open I know I make some sidestep somewhere; and if it does not open I have nobody to blame but myself.

III.

But religion and life are not as cold as an iron lock, if we lift our prayer unto God. That brings us to the remaining words of our text: "O satisfy us early with Thy mercy." Moses, who has given us an example of how we may fasten our faith upon an everlasting God, who is the Author and Giver of life, proceeds to make his petitions to that God: "teach us," "satisfy us," "make us glad," "let Thy beauty be upon us," and "establish Thou the work of our hands upon us." God and us! What beautiful language for a song. So

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

Sunday morning, February 3rd at 2 o'clock, the Matron at the Orphanage called me and said: "The Superintendent's house is on fire." It was an unpleasant hour to be called out of a deep, peaceful slumber to go and see one of our buildings burn to the ground. This house was occupied by our assistant, his wife and baby on the lower floor and a widow lady and her son on the upper floor. We had never let the children live in it as it was not intended for a children's building from the beginning.

It was to be used for the Superintendent's home, but for the last several years, Mr. Wagoner and his family have occupied it as a home. They had a very narrow escape as the flames had gained such headway before anyone awoke to give the alarm and then Mr. Wagoner had to go through the window to save himself. He and his family lost everything. We are very happy that no one lost their life but it was a very narrow escape.

A number of Elon graduates of years ago will remember the happy days they spent in this building when they boarded with that good old Christian gentleman, Mr. Atlas Boone, who built it and lived there a number of years. It was known as the "Boone House" on our campus.

You will notice our financial report carries us above the first rung in our financial ladder this year. Nineteen more to reach.

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

many of our modern songs are not using "us" but "me"; but this great song brings one's neighbors, and loved ones, and friends to the throne of God.

"O satisfy us early with Thy mercy." Of all our numbered days,—which please teach us to number wisely,—let not one single one of them pass without Thy mercy and blessing upon it. Looking upon our life-span let us have Thy mercy upon the beginning of it as well as the ending of it. Early, before any of it has been started wrong, or wasted with evil, or idleness, let Thy mercy be upon it.

In some quarters it has been thought that a few "wild oats" in the outset of life is valuable experience. No more false philosophy was ever offered than that. If I wish a fine, sharp axe with which to enter the forest, how can I improve it by taking a whack, or two with it upon a railroad iron? From the very beginning let God's blessings be upon you. Mothers, fathers, your cooperation with God from the first days of your child's life; young people, your looking to God for His mercy and guidance from the first accountable years of your own; and all of us putting first things first is to honor the rules of life and have the beauty of the Lord upon the work of our hands:

"Early let us seek Thy favor,
Early let us do Thy will."

If we really try. If with devout purpose we set about working with God to make our lives really happy; if we take, as this psalm suggests, as our working tools: days, wisdom, industry; then we shall be satisfied early and always with the mercy of God. We shall make mistakes, but in order that we may never falter or fail God has given His son Jesus Christ to "satisfy us early with His mercy; that we may rejoice and be glad all our days." And if God so blesses us early with His mercy we shall have an even start with life!

The annual meeting of the trustees of the West Tampa Mission was held at the parsonage of the Mission on February 5th. Interesting reports were given by the workers which indicated very decided progress being made in the work. The unusual nature of the service through clubs and classes, as well as through church services, Sunday School, and various Christian Endeavor societies is having its effect in larger interest among the Cuban people. The three young women workers carry on this phase of the Mission work and Rev. Ray M. Busler, acting pastor, conducts the religious services and also shares in other activities of the Mission. Rev. C. DeW. Brower was re-elected Chairman of the Board of Trustees, after several years of devoted service to the Mission.

The world judges you by what you do and are, not by what you say about what you do and are.

OBITUARIES

TROXLER.

Calvin Paul Troxler, of Winston-Salem was born March 4, 1915, near Belews Creek, and died January 8, 1935. He was the son of C. W. and Carrie Flynn Troxler. He lived for nine years near Belews Creek, moving to Winston-Salem with his parents about 10 years ago. He was a member of Belews Creek Christian Church.

Surviving are his parents, two sisters, Mrs. Newman Gray Link and Miss Ruby Troxler, of Winston-Salem; three brothers, Pinckney, Harvest, and Ernest, all of Winston-Salem.

The funeral services were conducted from the home, and from Belews Creek Christian Church, January 10th, and interment was made in White Rock Cemetery, Belews Creek. The services were conducted by the pastor of Goodwill Baptist Church, and the writer.

WM. T. SCOTT.

KNIGHT.

In memory of Bro. J. M. Knight, aged seventy years and one week, who departed this life at his home near Pleasant Grove Christian Church.

He was a good citizen and a good man; quiet and orderly in all his dealings—friendly and socially loving to all, everybody were his friends. He leaves a wife, two children, two brothers, three sisters, and a host of friends to mourn his going. He will be sadly missed in his home, community and church.

He was conscious of his approaching end and was ready to go. God bless his life and those who are bereaved.

The funeral service was conducted by the writer. G. D. HUNT.

FARMER.

Mr. Archie B. Farmer of News Ferry, Va., a member of Pleasant Grove Christian Church and a member of the Board of Trustees of Elon College, died February 2nd. Mr. Farmer was born and reared in Pleasant Grove community and was a member of the church childhood. He lived a quiet, unasuming life, always faithful and cooperative in community and in church affairs.

While he lived his life in that one community, that community was not able to retain his full life. It broke the bounds of the community and swept out into the missionary interest of the church, expressing that interest in material and spiritual contributions that reflected themselves in the life of our church in this and in other countries. Not being able to attend college himself, he, nevertheless, was interested in the great cause of education, particularly in Christian Education. His brother, Mr. Sam Farmer, was a faithful and efficient member of the Board of Trustees until his death, which occurred about fifteen years ago. Mr. Archie Farmer was elected to succeed his brother and was punctual to the demands of the College in every particular until failing health prevented him. The College records with regret his death and wishes to express to his family, to his friends, and to the public its great appreciation of the faithful services that he rendered. He is survived by two brothers, Mr. Joe Farmer of Elon College and Mr. Pleas. Farmer of News Ferry, and one sister, Mrs. Minnie Cook of So. Carolina.

SARTIN.

Mrs. Belia Sartin was born June 29, 1905 and died December 5, 1934. She was married to Frank Sartin December 31, 1934. To this union were born two children.

She leaves to mourn their loss a husband, two children, father, mother, two brothers and a host of relatives and friends.

The funeral was conducted at Cedar Grove by the writer assisted by Dr. P. H. Fleming.

Mrs. Sartin had been in declining health for quite a while. She joined Bethel Christian Church in early life and remained faithful to the end. A good woman is gone. May God bless and comfort the bereaved ones.

J. FRANK APPLE.

LANDRUM.

Mary Elizabeth Landrum, daughter of Wm. E., and Fannie Hudson Landrum was born in Halifax County, Va., Dec. 31, 1917, died Dev. 27, 1934 at the age of sixteen years, eleven months and twenty-seven days. Mary accepted her Saviour and united with Liberty Christian Church about four years ago. She was faithful in attending Sunday School, Christian Endeavor and preaching services. She possessed a lovely disposition that won for her and held the affections of all who knew her.

Besides her parents to mourn her departure there are six brothers and sisters.

The funeral and burial were at Liberty Church on Friday morning, Dec. 28th, by the writer, her pastor. Many are the tears shed by loved ones and friends at Mary's going from us. The comfort is in the assurance that she is in the heavenly home prepared by the Saviour for her.

GREGORY.

Mrs. Anna Sauford Gregory, daughter of Dr. J. L. and Rebecca Sanford was born iu Persou Couuty, N. C., November 23, 1859 and died at her home iu Virgilina, Va., December 24, 1934, at the age of seventy-five years, one month, aud one day. In her early teens she was converted and joiued Union Christian Church where she held her membership till the summons to come up higher.

On the fourteenth of Dec., 1881 she was married to William D. Gregory of Mecklenburg Co., Va. To them were born the following children: Mary L., Wm. L., Julian M., Eddie S., Lucy R., Annie S., Kiry, Hannah, Ruth and Charlie. Ruth and Charlie are deceased. Mary Lizzie married Mr. Charlie Paul and departed this life in April, 1924.

I have been the pastor of this family for nearly three decades. The home life was beautiful both in devotion for each other and for their children aud equally as devoted and faithful were the children to their parents. The influence of a Christian home like this one can be known only in eternity. The secret of Sister Gregory's patient, self-sacrificing devotion to all of life's duties, I am sure, is found in her faith in her Saviour. Her life as she lived it here was hid with Christ in God. Words fail me to express my estimate of her deep piety and noble Christian virtues.

The funeral was from the home on Christmas morning at 11 o'clock conducted by the writer and Rev. E. R. Harris, the Baptist pastor. It was one of the largest and most sympathetic crowds ever assembled on a similar occasion in this community. The burial was in the town cemetery. The floral designs from loved ones and friends were many and the most beautiful to be secured. Yet as we left the casket covered, together with space surrounding, with these beautiful tributes of love we were conscious of having done but little in comparison with what her beautiful life deserved.

To loved ones and friends there is the precious assurance that she is with her Saviour and loved ones gone before and awaits the coming of others.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

The Supreme Court Splits on Gold Decision.—

The Supreme Court decided for the Administration in its gold decision by a vote of five to four on every question brought before it except one. It decided that no one had a right to promise to pay another in dollars of a certain gold content, on the ground that Congress had a right to change the value of the dollar at will. On the other hand it decided unanimously that when the government had promised to pay in gold, it was obligated to do so. In this decision it was unanimous—but by another five to four decision it prohibits anyone holding the government's promise to pay in gold from trying to collect. It places the government in the attitude of one who says: "I owe you $1,690 in devaluated dollars for each $1,000 gold bond you hold, but just try and get it." It isn't probable that anyone is going to refuse a thousand crisp, new dollar bills when their bonds come due. Even after the decision has been handed down, most of us don't know what it is all about.

Capital Punishment in North Carolina.—

Nell Battle Lewis, writing in the Raleigh News and Observer, says: "The executioner's hand was heavy at the state prison last year. Twenty men were killed in the electric chair, eight more than in any other year of the 24 since the death chair claimed its first victim in 1910 . . . For the first time in . . . North Carolina, there was a triple electrocution . . . but having once started wholesale electrocutions, the authorities evidently were pleased with them." For she states that what made 1934 a record-breaker was two triple electrocutions and four double ones. What makes the death penalty more abhorent to her is the fact that seven of those who paid it in the Old North State last year, maintained that they were innocent to the end. North Carolina has quite a large list of crimes punishable by death, including arson, first degree burglary, rape and murder, but last year the penalty was inflicted for murder only. Our writer says that the only scriptural basis for capital punishment is the Old Testament passage, "An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth." Says she: "North Carolina goes the Mosaic law two better. We exact three eyes for an eye and three teeth for a tooth. . . We're a great crowd of Christians, we are!" And she adds: "Even if we don't feel equal to practicing the Christian principles which we have professed for so many centuries, at least we could go about the infliction of capital punishment more intelligently." One may disagree with some of the things that Nell Battle Lewis says, but all will agree that this weapon of society should at least be used more intelligently.

Dr. Cadman in Richmond.—

Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, pastor of the Central Congregational Church, Brooklyn, and Honorary Moderator of the National Council of Congregational and Christian Churches, was in Richmond, Virginia, on Monday of this week and made three addresses during the day. His first address was before the Ministerial Union of the city, at one o'clock, and his subject was: "The Religious State of the Nation." Several laymen, including the writer, were present by invitation, and were well repaid for their attendance by the masterful discourse which Dr. Cadman delivered at the close of the luncheon. Dr. Cadman called for a closer unity among the Protestant Churches, declaring that the "center of our religious faith is not in a book or a creed, but a person and a life." Dr. Cadman does not think that the world has gone to the dogs, but he reminded the clergy in no weak language that there was work for them to do. He also called for a better prepared ministry, as well as a Christianly educated laity. At four o'clock, Dr. Cadman spoke at the Woman's Club, and again at eight o'clock he addressed a large audience at the John Marshall High School. He used the opportunity thus given him to eulogize Chief Justice John Marshall in opening his address. His subject was: "America's Opportunity in a Changing World," and a great deal of food for thought was packed in the comparatively short time that he spoke. At the close of his addresses, opportunity was given for questions on present day happenings. Those who heard Dr. Cadman certainly owe the Richmond League of Women Voters a vote of thanks for having persuaded him to come to our city.

Recipients of Federal Funds.—

The following figures showing the present number of recipients of funds from the Federal Government as well as the number which would be added by present proposed Congressional action, may prove of interest to the mere layman. Says Noel Sargent, secretary of the National Association of Manufacturers: "Today there are 7,920,000 regular recipients of Federal funds, including 950,000 regular Federal employees, 1,000,000 aided by the Veteran's Administration, 3,500,000 on straight relief (not including their dependents), 1,500,000 on work relief, 300,000 in the C. C. C. camps, and 670,000 aided by the H. O. L. C. Proposed legislation would add 9,380,000, including 2,080,000 involved in unemployment compensation, 3,750,000 under old age benefits, and 3,550,000 under the soldiers' bonus. This would make a grand total of 17,300,000 persons receiving Federal benefits. There is political dynamite in such a situation." One must not forget that as civilization advances and becomes more complex, there is need for a larger number of persons to administer the regulatory powers of such civilization. One must not fail to remember that there is only one safe way to improve one's environment: that is by raising the general level of the civilization in which one lives. Yet there is danger of lowering rather than raising such level when more than one in every six of our population become direct recipients of a bounty from any political machine that is established in our midsts. When a tax-paying public awakes to the situation which is being saddled upon it, there will be some action, for even among those who are benefitting now are those who must finally pay.

An Amazing Cablegram.—

A sensational disclosure by Senator Nye to the committee investigating armament profits has possibly missed the attention of some readers of Advance. It was reported in only a few of our daily papers. On March 5, 1917, Walter H. Page, American Ambassador in London sent a cablegram to President Wilson, which stated: " . . . [England] cannot continue her present large purchases in the United States without shipments of gold to pay for them, and she cannot maintain large shipments of gold. . . . The almost immediate danger, therefore, is that Franco-American and Anglo-American exchange will be so disturbed that orders by all the Allied Governments will be reduced to the lowest minimum and there will be almost a cessation of Transatlantic trade. This will, of course, cause a panic in the United States . . . . If we should go to war with Germany . . . all the money would be kept in our country, trade would be continued and enlarged until the war ends, and after the war Europe would continue to buy food and would buy from us an enormous supply of things to re-equip her peace industries. We should thus reap the profit of an uninterrupted, perhaps an enlarging, trade, over a number of years, and we should hold their securities in payment. . . . Perhaps our going to war is the only way in which our present pre-eminent trade position can be maintained and a panic averted." Did this argument influence President Wilson in his declaration of war a month and a day after receiving this cablegram? Were Page's high professions of idealism in his support of the Allied cause an insincere pretense covering real motives of promoting our entrance into the war from motives of material gain, or was he emphasizing what he thought would influence his fellow-countrymen? From any standpoint it is a sordid and terrible revelation, and another illustration of what war does to men.—Advance.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

The latest word from Dr. Atkinson is to the effect that he is gaining in both strength and weight. It is hardly possible for him to gain in optimism. He is optimism itself.

The ministers of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference met in their monthly session at the College, Monday, February 11th. The College is always glad to welcome this group.

Rev. R. A. Whitten has very kindly consented to assist pastors and churches in Eastern Virginia in raising their educational apportionments. It is hoped that the pastors will give Brother Whitten every possible assistance.

Miss Annie Watson, daughter of the late Dr. Watson, one of the original trustees of the College, has returned to Elon and is now living in the old home. We are glad to welcome Miss Annie back to the College and community.

Rev. O. T. Anderson, pastor of the church at Fort Myers, Florida, presided at a community memorial service in memory of Thomas A. Edison. The service was held at the Municipal Auditorium on the evening of Februarry 10th. Mr. Anderson not only presided, but was a leader in the planning of the service.

Mrs. Regina Williamson Warrington, the sister of Mrs. J. O. Atkinson, is visiting Mrs. Atkinson during the Doctor's stay in Florida. The College and community are glad to welcome Mrs. Warrington. She will be pleasantly remembered by her college mates as "Miss Regina Williamson."

Dr. L. E. Smith, president of the College, was in Eastern Virginia last week and spoke Sunday morning at 11:00 o'clock for Rev. R. A. Whitten in Washington Street Christian Church and at 7:30 P. M. for Rev. S. W. Phillips at Elm Avenue Christian Church. Dr. Smith was speaking in the interest of the College.

Rev. H. E. Crutchfield, pastor of Ingram Christian Church, reports that a valuable addition in the way of eight Sunday school rooms and an assembly room is being made to the Ingram church; also a choir loft is being built for the main auditorium. The Ingram Church is in the North Carolina and Virginia Conference and is one of our most active churches. We congratulate the pastor and congregation on this much needed improvement.

Inquiries have come to the editor's office concerning the "Cent-a-Meal" boxes. Money contributed through this means for Missions and sent through the local church to the Mission Office will count on the Easter offering for Missions and also will be credited on Conference apportionments. Where such offerings are sent in, the Mission Office will receipt, and in all cases such receipts should be attached to the church's letter to Conference showing that this amount has been paid.

Miss Marguerite Davison, Extension worker for Tennessee and Alabama, attended the Midwinter meeting and also filled several speaking engagements in the Chicago area at that time. She spoke at ten different churches, visited Hull House and the Commons and other settlements and missions, also visited Chicago Seminary, especially having conferences with students concerning Student Summer Service work. Part of the time she stayed at the young women's dormitory connected with the Seminary.

AN OPEN LETTER TO DR. ROWLAND.

February 8, 1935.

Dr. C. H. Rowland,
Florida Sanitarium,
Orlando, Fla.

Dear Friend and Brother:

As we recall the past eleven years of our lives with the many changes, uncertainties, and disappointments, and when we attempt to enumerate the losses and gains, we realize that the friendships we have formed are our greatest asset. And among our friends, we think most of all of one who, through the years, has proven steadfast, patient and considerate.

As the eleventh anniversary of your pastorate at the First Christian Church has just passed, we, as officers of the Church, in regular meeting assembled, wish to express to you our sincere appreciation for the service you have rendered. Your love for us has been true, a gem to be worn in our memories through eternity.

During the months you have been away we have sorely missed your leadership. But because you taught us to love one another and Christ above all, we have, in some measure, carried on the work. The unity of purpose which has been displayed among the loyal members of the church is but a reflection of your example and patience. Had we not had that unified spirit, no progress would have been made. We can state, however, that because we have had a purpose, and have gone steadfastly ahead in the way you taught us, we have kept the fires burning.

We pray daily that you may be speedily restored to normal health and to your work. But as we may dimly see God's purpose unfolding, we believe that your present suffering may be used as a great stimulus to us, that Christ's cause may be magnified and his name glorified.

We extend our love to you and may God's peace be yours.

Very truly yours,

PARAGRAPHS TO PONDER.

By Timothy Thomas.

Accepting or rejecting the decision of the United States Supreme Court on the now famous "gold clause" is a matter of individual opinion. Whether one agrees with the court or holds an opposite view may depend upon his knowledge and interpretation of the gold clause as embodied in many of our bond forms. During the reconstruction days following the Civil War when many people found themselves with large sums of Confederate money in their possession, or had little faith in the future of our Government, they were reluctant to accept collateral that did not specify payment in gold—hence the clause in bonds to pay in gold. It is merely one of those things that served its purpose at the time but has been retained as a matter of form. It should have been discarded years ago. Neglect to do so is chargeable to the legal profession, but on the other hand to those who issued and sold bonds it has been a high-sounding clause to make many a worthless bond appear to have gold backing. The fact that the subject was brought to the fore is an indictment against our legal stupidity as well as our brazen effrontery to make things seem what they are not. Even our largest corporations issuing such bonds have known for years that if they were called upon to pay their bonds in gold it would have been next to an impossibility to procure such amounts in gold coin. The question raised should be a lesson to show how easily we become victims of an outworn phraseology.

In reflecting on the Flemington circus, we should not forget that something besides a kidnapper has been on trial. Good manners, culture, or some indefinable thing has also been before the bar of public opinion. The trial presents a shameful spectacle of a sordid type. The court-room scenes presented a scandal and a disgrace to the American people. The sensation seekers were not concerned over the bleeding heart of a mother and father bereft of a babe in the most cruel and inhuman manner. Spectators were not concerned with the maintenanec of law and public security. They were not concerned with the gravity and hideousness of the crime. These sensation seekers indulged in unseemly outbreaks of laughter at sallies of counsel and answers of witnesses. What could be funny about trying a man for his life for a crime so revolting and shocking? Why a Roman holiday made of the trial? Why the temple of justice used as a theatre of the vaudeville type? Weaknesses of human beings for the sensational, lack of appreciation and respect for our courts, lack of proper thought of the circumstances and finally the lack of a judge stern enough to clear out the sorry mess and refuse his court to be turned into a feasting place for gluttons of curiosity, seem to be the combined answer.

When we became entrenched with the World War we gladly gleaned our treasuries and heroically buried our sons, feeling that these material and human sacrifices were being made to win the world for demccracy, to bring a clearer dawn and a brighter day for all humanity. How futile our dreams! How meaningless our efforts, if compared in the light of present-day difficulties! We were looking toward a new birth and a new hope for the world. The new birth came but not as we expected it, and the hope we had cherished was not of its full expectation. We conquered in a physical combat, but we did not rid the world of sordid selfishness, the mighty and ruthless force that did so much to strangle and wreck our economic base, placing millions in bread lines and visiting upon them innumerable and untold sufferings. If we shall take this as a lesson and in our rebuilding educate ourselves out of the throes of selfishness, purge and purify the human heart, and teach every man, woman and child the simple but great lesson that "no man liveth to himself," we shall rise upon our wreckage and ruin to a place of permanency and power that will defy kings of the earth.

In many respect we are the most inconsistent nation on earth. We parade our "buy American" banners and if the slogan were carried to extremes would cut the economic throat of the nation. The "buy American" and "buy at home" slogans are always locally popular. The farce of the whole thing is that the strongest advocates of these movements are those who drink coffee grown in Brazil, buy toys made in Germany for their children, wear hats made in London, shoes made in some state other than their own, read papers made from Canadian pulp, while their wives frown on any perfume except a French product. When we ship products abroad we refer to a "world market," but when foreigners ship their products to our shores (to meet our own demands) we immediately call it "dumping." The whole sham is more or less hysteria, and if carried to its logical conclusion, every little village would be setting up local tariffs against its neighbors and we would find ourselves isolated as our colonies were in the early formation of our country.

There can be no adverse criticism to the bill passed by Congress last week authorizing the sale of "baby bonds" of the United States Government. Heretofore government bonds have been available in large denominations, and always bought by a limited number of banks and individuals. U. S. government bonds may now be obtained in amounts as low at $25.00 and will be sold on a discount basis. More people will own government securities, thus affording a wider public interest in national affairs and will likewise enable the small investor to invest safely his funds. It will help banks rather than hinder them, for it will put into the hands of the small borrower gilt edge security when a loan is immediately needed, thus convenencing the borrower and better protecting the lender.

We are finding ourselves in a precarious position with foreign countries. More than one-half the American crop of raw cotton is normally exported. Exports of American cotton cloth have declined from 564,000,000 square yards in 1929 to an estimated 225,000,000 square yards in 1934. Exports of cotton yarn and thread have dwindled from 28,000,000 pounds to less than 8,000,000 pounds. Eighty per cent of the employees in textile industries in Japan are women, more than 20 per cent being under 16 years of age, and all working on a wage scale that can never be anywhere near the average wage paid such employees in American mills. The textile industry in this country is faced with complete destruction, unless we find some way out of the dilemma so as to restore our international trade. Unless this restoration is made we shall be faced with a readjustment of our economic situation that will create a social problem which will by comparison make our present difficulties seem trivial indeed.

When States were formed and divided into county units, transportation facilities were few and methods slow. There was a justification in slicing States into many political divisions. With improved highways, better and faster methods of transportation, modern methods of communication and other conveniences, little is left to justify so many counties and their costly upkeep. The bulk of their cost is for salaries paid small office-holders. The local government bill throughout the United States is $8,000.000.000, a matter which certainly should give as much concern to the average citizen as federal expenditures do. This vast sum is raised by direct taxes on classes which can stand the outlay least. Mississippi is proposing to reduce its counties to 57; Missouri to 40; Arkansas to 25; Oklahoma to 20; Georgia to 41; Tennessee to 13. North Carolina has 100 counties, and Governor Ehringhause of that State is making a sincere effort to bring about consolidations. The problem that stands in the way of such consolidations is selfish interests of political office-holders. The battle is on in many States and will be waged between the burdened taxpayers and office-holders who would lose their positions through consolidations in the interest of more economical and efficient local government.

Senator Borah is considered an able statesman, but his closest friends agree that one can never tell what course he may take or when he will go off at a tangent. Mr. Borah was a bitter opponent of the World Court, and within 48 hours of the time when he was crowned one of the victors in that combat he introduced a resolution to conduct an inquiry into "religious persecutions and anti-religious agitation in Mexico." His battle theme against the World Court was that we should attend to our own affairs. Had Mr. Borah made the proposal to investigate Mexico before his final stand against the World Court his words would have had less weight on the subject. Such an inquiry into Mexican affairs could do no less than create a greater international animosity. The Mexican government's fight against religious conditions in that country has been a fight against the Catholic Church and it does not appear to be the function of the United States Senate to intervene in behalf of any religious body, except when personal liberties are at stake—and that is another question.

Last week Alabama crowned Mrs. Irene Davis as one of Alabama's greatest women. Mrs. Davis refused to go on relief rolls and asked only for a chance to earn a living on a farm ten miles out in the country. With her oldest boy, 14, to do the plowing with a mule borrowed from a neighbor; with seed, feed, fertilizer, groceries and clothing supplied by the Alabama Relief Administration, Mrs. Davis portrayed the pioneer spirit, produced enough for self and family, and to pay for the advances made her. With millions of acres of land ready to produce with the cooperation of man, it seems a blight upon our intelligence and genius that millions of our destitute should not be assisting Nature in producing their daily needs. Large producers of farm products have suffered in recent years because of a surplus, but that is no argument against individual effort for personal sustenance. American farming as a means of livelihood was wrecked when farmers gave up the idea of providing for their families and centered their attention on producing money crops. What we need is more mules and fewer motors, more plows and fewer planes, more bacon and less ballyhoo, and more rye, rhubarb and radishes and less radios, razz and jazz.

Washington was "first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen" not because he danced, smoked, cursed, or drank, but because he was devout, loyal, sacrificial, honest, true—he prayed.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscieuce is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, aud exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union amoug the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the siu of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christiau world are remanded to private judgmeut, aud hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

WHEREIN I APOLOGIZE.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

Florida Sanitarium,
Orlando, Florida.

The writer must apologize. He is brought to this through sincere repentance and deep humiliation. He acknowledges his transgression and begs forgiveness.

It all came about in this way. Not an arm's length from the steps of the porch on which he now lives (and writes these lines) grows a plum tree. This tree is a hunch-back. In early youth it evidently started out straight. Then from within or without something happened and it bent and became gnarled in the middle. Up it shot again for a distance of some five or six lineal feet, and then it broke and bent its ungainly form in every direction. Its every limb seems to have been distorted, elbowed in every direction. Rheumatic ailments seem to have done its worst with this poor, pitiable trunk and spectacle of a tree. One looking at its ungainly form is reminded of what Shakespeare's King Richard III soliloquizes of his own deformity: "Cheated of feature by dissembling nature, deformed, unfinished, sent before my time into this breathing world, scarce half made up; and that so lamely and unfashionable that dogs bark at me as I halt by them; I have no delight to pass away the time unless to spy my shadow in the sun and descant on mine own deformity."

Well, so it seemed with my plum tree, as I must needs look down upon its drab, drawn form for four weeks as I lay here and tried to look through it and beyond to other and more entrancing views and visions.

But lo and behold, dear indulgent reader, something happened and herein I learned a lesson that will go with me the rest of my days. About ten days ago looking with rather scornful glance (will apologies and repentance ever atone me?) the front pages of London and African newspathrough the bent branches of my plum tree I discovered a faint gleam of fresh and tender green. And then a few hours later on the same sprig I discovered a pure, white blossom—as if a snow flake had perched itself there.

I shall make a long story short, for reader, you can't know the story anyway unless you have lived through the experience with me. These ten days have passed and now what? Come with me and you, too, will join your apology with mine. That tree is now one gracious form to look upon. Its waving green branches tell you of the new-born life within. And its perfect canopy of bursting and now full grown blossoms makes my tree look like a beautiful, blushing bride, ready to march with stately tread to the marriage altar. And none but the most costly and rare perfumes were used in her bridal make up. Troops of honey bees, scores of song birds and flitting butterflies revel and carol and pay homage at the altar and in the bowers of my lovely plum tree. Well, Sir, just take it from me! My hunch-back, ungainly plum tree simply abided its time and now it gets full compensation, reward and sweet revenge. There isn't another tree anywhere within range that can class with it. All the others still have on the deep, dark green of winter, and are costumed in the robes of a dead past.

And so I repent me and do apologize for ever having discredited the merit and measure of my plum tree. And so here and now I do in humiliation and repentance apologize to every man and woman, boy or girl I have ever met or known on this earth whose qualities, conduct or behaviour caused me to discard or discredit them without knowing their day or abiding the time of their fulfillment and fruitions. Human beings, like trees of field and forest, have their seeming defects and short comings, but we are not created alike and have not the same season or source of service and achievement. Nor henceforth shall I be discouraged when I can't "shine" as some other. I will remain steadfast to Him Who created me and abide His time to reveal any worth, merit or glory for which He created me. King Richard III made the fatal mistake that so many others have made, namely, since he was not as comely to look upon, nor as inviting of person and persuasion, as others about him, he would follow his distraught form and thus develop within him a soul of sin and deformity.

Owing to the beauty, cheer and gladness of one precious plum tree, and because so many of our dear friends have come to gladden us recently and because people are so kind to us here, and because we feel the buoyancy of returning health and strength, Dr. Rowland suggests that we name our present quarters, "Sunshine Parlor"! I am agreed and so it is. Bro. J. M. Darden, Dr. and Mrs. I. W. Johnson, all of Suffolk; Mr. and Mrs. Powell of Liberty Spring Church, Rev. J. L. Neese of Reidsville, Bro. Comer of New Lebanon Church, are recent visitors to cheer and gladden us. Then earlier the dear Grissoms from Fancy Gap, Va., and Bro. Grissom's parents from Liberty, Vance, Church had brought us gladness with their presence.

Our plum tree has at least taught us in a way we can never forget, to forgive the apparent defects and look for and await the virtues of all God's creatures around about us. God has made all for some good use and achievement, if we remain steadfast in loyalty to Him and with patience and without complaint, await our day, and abide His time.

J. O. A.

A PROGRAM FOR THE ORDINARY MEMBER.

This is a day in which much criticism is passed upon the church. It is a day in which there is much uncertainty and division of opinion within the ranks of the church. There are those who bewail the lost influence of the church. There are those who say that the day of the church is in the past. There are some who say that there is no hope for the church or the world unless the church gives itself to the solution of the social problems of the day. There are others who say that when the church gives itself seriously to social issues that it is doomed. They maintain that the only hope is for the church to give itself solely to the preaching of the doctrine of individual salvation.

Now in the face of such a situation what is the ordinary member of the church to do? There are those who take the position that since the church no longer occupies the center of our social arganization, that it is permissible to neglect the church, or give it only a half-hearted support. There are those who take the position that since the churches themselves are divided; and since the preachers themselves do not agree, that they will leave all these things to the churches and preachers to settle while they busy themselves with what they consider the practical affairs of life.

It would be a fine thing if all the churches were united and all the preachers were agreed, provided the churches were united in the entire program of Christ's kingdom, and provided the preachers in their agreement had a comprehensive understanding of the fulness of the revelation of God's truth. But the ordinary church member does not have to wait for the millenium to arrive in order to formulate a comprehensive and satisfactory working program for himself.

What ought such a working program to be. And how may it be formulated, The uncertainty and bewilderment within the church can be matched with just as marked bewilderment and uncertainty in other realms of our modern life. The educational world is just as confused with regard to both objectives and methods as is the religious world. Business is more confused and uncertain than either education or religion. But sensible men in both education and business realize that they cannot afford to slacken their efforts in such a time as this. To do so is the surest way in all the world to seal their doom.

In the first place, it should be perfectly apparent to the ordinary church member that the only life that is really worthy of the name is the life that is shaped according to the principles taught by Jesus. It should be equally apparent that such a life is possible only when the individual is actuated by the same spirit which prompted Jesus to live the sort of life that he lived. Here then is an ideal worthy to challenge any individual to the noblest and best of which he is capable. To live a Christlike life then should be the first step in this program for the ordinary church member.

The second step, that it seems would logically follow, is to seek to lead others to accept the Christ as the ideal of their lives. It seems somehow unthinkable that anyone could really know Jesus in an intimate and vital way, and not seek to share that knowledge with others. No two persons would probably set about this task in identically the same way. One might rely entirely upon the influence of example, trusting that what the other would see would exert the strongest influence. There are some who would share with their friends all the delightful experiences that their souls enjoy through association with Jesus. There are those who are blessed with the ability to express such things in words. While perhaps there are still others who would feel that the best they could do would be to support the church, and leave it to the church, through its plans, programs and ministry to lead others to Jesus. But this winning of other souls ought to have a part in the program of every church member.

The third item on this program for the ordinary church member is the heart support of the church of which he is a member. There are those who feel that they are not competent to formulate a program for the church. There are those who feel that they are not capable of leading in the program of the church. But there is an invaluable service that every church member can render to the church to which allegiance has been placed. The strength; power and usefulness of any church is always measured by the loyalty and support which it receives from its members.

There are at least three ways by which this loyalty and support may be manifested. All three are possible to most church members. One of the three is possible to every church member. They are attendance upon the public services of the church, and an attitude of interest and confidence in the things for which the church stands.

There is nothing that is more vital to church life than the attendance of church members. The outsider concludes that there must be something wrong with the church that cannot attract its own members. Church members must support the church financially in some measure commensurate with their means in order to maintain their own self respect. But it is possible for the church member who is unable to attend because of physical disabilities and unable to support the church financially because of lack of means, to still Manifest so deep an interest and such perfect devotion that his influence will count tremendously for the church. Some such program as this is possible for every church member. And it will not only help the church; it will mould the life of the individual according to the pattern of Jesus.

S. C. H.

WHERE IS THE CHURCH?

In the current issue of the Advance, Mr. Donald A. Adams, of the Layman's Advisory Committee, rather startlingly but very appropriately inquires, "Where are the men?" The gist of the article is to the effect that in the face of emergencies which are now arising within the local church and in the church as a whole, demanding men with spiritual insight, adequate knowledge, and powers of leadership, such men are not to be found. He states very frankly that if such leadership and counsel were needed in civic or political affairs there would be plenty of men to send; but when these needs are of a spiritual nature, that he sought in vain and finally turnd to another denominations for a man to fill the place.

Long ago, the prophet, Ezekiel, after cataloguing the sins of the people and declaring that God would eventually consume them as dross in his furnace because of their sins, declared, "And I sought for a man." Apparently, the search is still on for men not as phophets and seers but as servants—men who are capable and willing to do the work of the church. If this be true—and apparently it is true—one is forced to inquire, "Where is the church?" The church was planted by our Lord, not only to "seek and to save that which was lost," but to train them and fit them for the work of the Kingdom.

Every local church should in reality be a training school—training men in the affairs of the church. A variety of talents are needed in every local congregation. Men are needed to look after the business affairs of the church, to determine the amount of money needed to meet financial obligations, to carry on the larger work of the denomination, to map out plans by which individual members may be induced to contribute their share, and to effect the machinery by which such achievements may be accomplished. Individuals are needed for evangelism and visitation and otherwise direct public attention toward the house of worship. Individuals are needed who may have a complete grasp of the local situation and of the wider denominational needs, who on account of their fitness and vision are capable of speaking effectively to the entire membership of their church that they may rally to the present demands of the Kingdom itself. In all probability, the majority of these talents may be found in every local church. It perhaps willl require prayer and spiritual searching on the part of the pastor and his inner circle to discover these talents, to train them, and to bring them to the front for service. But they are there, and it can be done. But someone will of necessity pay the price before it is done.

The church is here as an educational, evangelistic, and spiritual force, redeeming men and regenerating human society. May the Spirit have His way with us, that these miracles of grace may be brought to pass even in our day.

L. E. S.

MINISTERS MEET.

For sometime, certain ones among us interested in the spiritual life of the church have been advocating a retreat for ministers—the selection of a place away from the noise and din of cities, where the ministers of our church might come together without distraction or interruption and spend a while with themselves and with the Lord in an effort to find God anew and get a new hold on themselves spiritually and religiously, that they might find the way into a deeper religious experience themselves with a hope of leading the ones to whom they administer into more significant spiritual realities.

We are informed that a conference on religious experience, sponsored by the Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life of the United Church is being held in Springfield, Mass. Dr. Frederick L. Fagley, Chairman of the Commission. has defined the purpose of the meeting as being to deepen religious experience in the lives of the pastors and to help them to multiply this experience in the lives of the multitudes. A more timely or a more necessary conference could not be held. Evidently, the church needs to begin a march toward higher planes of living—not away from the lowlands or from the people who live in the marshes of the world, but straight into the heart of a non-Christian world, that the world itself may be lifted and brought to higher planes of living.

It is the will of Christ that the church be free from the world within but in the world as a transforming force. He prayed earnestly not that His own should be taken out of the world but that they should be kept in the world. As ministers and laymen in the cause of Christ, we are commanded "to seek and to save that which is lost." If the ministry of the church will find its true relation to God through Christ, then as ministers they shall be able to bring those with whom they counsel spiritually into closer relations with God. The minister has divine privileges, but he also carries about with him fearful and tremendous responsibilities. When ministers meet with each other, let it be their prayer and ambition to meet God anew.

L. E. S.

THE KINGDOM COMES.

In teaching the disciples to pray and in wording for them a model prayer, Christ used these words: "Thy Kingdom come," meaning of course the Kingdom of God, the Kingdom of righteousness. Since the coming of Christ, His Kingdom has been coming—coming in power and in effectiveness. The Kingdom comes in the hearts of men and ultimately through men into society and the world. It makes its approach not with a tingling of cymbals or the sounding of trumpets but as an increasing and ever-widening light, scattering the darkness of human experience and lifting the clouds obstructing human vision. In a parable, Jesus taught that the Kingdom of Heaven is as a little leaven which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal until the whole lump was leavened.

In a quiet, unassuming, and yet in an irresistible way, the Kingdom has been coming in all ages of the world's history. In this way, the spirit of God has done His work. Lives have been transformed and men with great souls have appeared on the battlefield of the Kingdom to extend its borders on out to the very edge of the world.

At this particular season of the year, the Kingdom is struggling to come more bountifully and more effectively than heretofore. Naturally, as we come into the Lenten season, we think about Christ—about His life, His suffering, His death His resurrection. Our love for Him is increased, and we want our friends and our acquaintances to know the depths of His love and the riches of His grace that have become ours. It is a more appropriate time for every pastor and the spiritual leaders of his church to begin to enrich their own lives and to allow Christ through them to reach and to change the lives of others. Let every local church among us busy itself about the winning of lost souls; and may, ere the Easter season has come to a close, there be a miraculous ingathering for the strengthening of the church and the glory of the Lord Himself.

L. E. S.

SELF DENIAL.

Too many of us are self-centered. We think in terms of self. We speak in terms of self. We act in terms of self. If an undertaking will result in our gain, we are interested. If it will not add to our earthly possessions, we are scarcely interested further. We feel that to get the most out of life we must work for self, save for self, and improve self; and when demands are made upon us that require our means in large proportions, we feel that we can't, that to give as has been requested we feel that we would have to deny ourselves of things that we otherwise would enjoy. We do not readily respond to a plea for self denial in the interest of the larger good.

Little do we realize that by withholding we are denying ourselves, literally. By failure to do our part in worthwhile undertakings, we deny ourselves the blessings of personal satisfaction in measuring up to universal demands. And further, we deny ourselves of the rich blessings of God. It is impossible for a man to give of himself and of his means in keeping with the standards of the gospel without being blessed beyond the measure of his own gifts. When we fancy that we are laboring for ourselves, we really are denying ourselves of the highest and best in life. Christ said, "Give and it shall be given unto you good measure, pressed down, shaken together, heaped up, and running over." His promises are true and He will always make them good.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

"Look out for the cattle." That is a sign frequently seen along the highways in eastern South Carolina, Georgia and Florida. In the eastern part of these states, the cows are allowed to seek their pasture along the highways and in the woods. No one seems to take much interest in them until the season of the year when they are fat enough to kill for beef. In the winter they are poorly fed and undernourished. For no one feeds them. They roam at leisure, seeking their own pasture and shelter. Consequently they are very small and are unfit for milk and butter. Of course some people care well for their cows, but reference here is made to the cows of the forests.

Along the highways in the central parts of these states conditions are different. In many cases, pastures are provided for the cows, they are carefully bred and their owners seek to make them thrifty and profitable. These cows are much better looking and are more profitable for milk and butter. The contrast is very striking. Wherein lies the difference? Why should a farmer be interested in raising pure blooded cows? Cows are cows, so why give any attention to their kind or name? Why build a fence around a cow and forbid her to wander at her will? Why determine for her the food she shall eat? Her kind came from the forests; why not let her roam in her native haunts?

There is a lesson for this age in these questions. Many people are adherents of the philosophy which removes all control from human life. They seem to believe that the child should follow its own inclination and not be subject to the will and wish of parents and teachers. Such a policy turns the cows into the forests and jungles to seek their own food. Such a philosophy of life turns young manhood and womanhood into unknown wastes and wilds of human desire, to follow the dreams of distorted imagination and unbridled selfishness. Free range cows are a menace to traffic on the highways and they are in danger of being killed. Cows in the enclosed pasture, under the personal care of the owner, are safer and have the appearance of being properly cared for.

Human life may be spent on the wild range. Man may resent the ordinary boundary lines of human freedom. The restraints of society and the teachings of Christianity may seem to limit the horizon for the imaginative youth. The recognized standards of living are chafing to many people. They strive to tear down the fences or jump over them, and seek the frontiers for the untried fields of investigation and experience. But when the pastures are grazed and life reaches its limit of adventure, the physical powers are wasted and weakened, the eyes are dimmed by tears of remorse and the soul is dead to the highest and best things of life.

God has revealed to mankind the better way of life. The Psalmist expresses the joy of this life in the twenty-third Psalm. "He maketh me to lie down in green pastures." The fences around these pastures are not for limitation, but for protection and guidance. The voice of the shepherd calling the sheep is not for repression but for expression. The commandments of God, when observed, are designed to develop the latent powers of growing youth. They are never out of date and man has found nothing equal to the Word of God as a chart for social and spiritual conquest. The best life grows in the Kingdom of God. There is a vital difference between people who live according to their wish and will and those who humbly follow in the footsteps of the Master. Ancient Egypt lived on the flesh-pots; the Israelites were fed on the manna from heaven in the wilderness wanderings under the guidance of God. The Egyptians knew not God and failed. The Israelites developed a great civilization as long as they followed the leadership of God. This generation is not safe unless it can find the Good Shepherd and follow Him.

PLANS FOR RAISING CONFERENCE APPORTIONMENTS.

Every church has its own program and its own responsibilities. It also is a part of the larger program of the denomination to which it belongs. The local church's program requires in addition to other items financial resources. While this is true of the local church, it is also true that the larger program of the denomination has its financial needs. The local church is a part of the local conference and likewise a part of the Convention which is constituted by the conferences. The Convention, which is the promotional and planning agency for the church, in its last session at Suffolk adopted a financial budget and apportioned this budget to the conferences which in turn apportioned the budget to the local church. The various church enterprises and institutions are to share in these apportionments. By vote, the college shares in the Convention's financial askings. The writer has been endeavoring to keep this matter before the local church, with a hope that every unit of our Convention will not only feel its responsibility but count it a privilege to have a part in the support of our college, founded and existing for the purpose of training the youth of our church for larger services to church and state. A number of individual churches have taken the Conventions' askings for the college seriously and have set themselves to the task of meeting those askings. Different plans are being used by different churches. Here are some of the more interesting and more effective that have been reportd to me.

Mt. Auburn Church, Eastern North Carolina Conference, Rev. E. M. Carter, Pastor. This congregation adopted the individual solicitation plan. Mr. Colclough, field representative for the college was invited to assist. With an interested member of the church, he visited the congregation and by such a method raised the entire quota for the college, including the fifth Sunday offering for December but not including fifth Sunday offerings that will come in later. This church always receives and sends in the fifth Sunday offering for the college. We congratulate Mt. Auburn Church and its entire membership on this magnificent achievement.

Piney Plains Church, Eastern North Carolina Conference, Rev. J. Lee Johnson, Pastor. This church has adopted a different plan of raising its share for the support of the college. The interested members of this church propose to raise their amount by the month, and each month the college receives a check from this church. If the offerings continue in the same proportions as the past two months, they will raise their quota by the time the year is half up. This is an easy and a most effective way to raise this part of their conference apportionments. The money is received at the office, and the treasurer of the church is receipted. The receipts will be kept and attached to their report to conference, showing that this amount has been raised on their apportionments. I congratulate the church on this effective plan.

First Church, Burlington, N. C., Western North Carolina Conference, Rev. James H. Lightbourne, Pastor. The Burlington church has adopted a different method. The pastor and a number of the interested members of the church believe absolutely in the plan they have adopted. They propose to raise their share for the support of the college by the Dollar-a-Month Club plan, plus the fifth Sunday offerings. The pastor and a committee made a canvass of the interested members of the church, getting individual members to take one or more memberships in the Dollar-a-Month Club and to agree to make their payments regularly and promptly. The canvass has not been completed, but the reports made to the college total nearly the full amount that this church is asked for. The pastor, Dr. Lightbourne, writes that in all probability the amount will be raised by the use of the Dollar-a-Month Club plan. This is a plan alopted by the Convention held in Burlington, and it seems to the writer to be a most effective plan. The expenses of the college are monthly; and if all the churches in the Convention would send a monthly contribution to the college, certainly the college would be greatv encouraged and assisted in meeting its obligations. I congratulate our Burlington Church on this method.

A large number of the churches in all the conferences raised their full quota last year, some resorting to the above methods and some adopting other plans. I am simply mentioning these three churches and the plans that they use by which they have either raised their full quotas or are assured of raising their full quotas for this year. The Educational Period is now coming to a close. I hope and trust that every church in the Convention will determine to do its best and send in its offerings as early as possible. We need your help, but we also need the assurance of your offerings and cooperation in the educational tasks of our church.

L. E. SMITH.

A LAYMAN ANSWERS "LAYMAN".

I have read with interest the questions asked by a laymen in his open letter in THE CHRISTIAN SUN of December 13th.

I am glad for a discussion by the ministers and laymen on these vital questions, for I think it is time we were becoming alarmed over the seemingly dormant and indifferent condition into which we as a church have drifted.

The questions by layman for our consideration are as follows:

First, why are we not growing in church membership? Second, why are we not growing in the establishment of new churches? Third, why are we not growing in our gifts? Fourth, why are we not growing in interest for the salvation of the lost? Fifth, why are we not growing in consecration and deeper spiritual life?

As a church, I think we have a wonderful set of principles—so all-embracing, yet so simple that even a child should not be at all confused by any of them. But as a church have we lived up to our principles? Have we made the Lord Jesus Christ our only Head? Have we made the Holy Bible our Rule of Faith? Have we practiced its teachings in financing the work of the Kingdom as represented by us as a church? Have we been going into all the world with the Gospel of the Christ in proportion to our financial ability, or even in comparison with other denominations who are no stronger numerically than we are? How can we expect to establish new churches, so long as we finance the ones we have with Ice Cream Socials, Oyster Suppers, Chicken Dinners, etc?

We have been terribly alarmed over the financial depression through which we have been passing, but have been little disturbed over our spiritual depression. We have been willing to bring our process tax on corn, cotton, wheat, hogs and most everything else into the treasury because we were promised by man to be led into "the more abundant life" but have we been willing to bring our tithes into God's storehouse, when He has promised to pour out such a blessing that there should not be room enough to receive it? (Mal. 3:10.)

We have been willing to heed the voice of man and have killed and destroyed in order that we might get higher prices for our products, but have we heeded the voice of Jesus who said, "Gather up the fragments that remain that nothing be lost." (Jno. 6:12.) How can we expect to grow in deeper spiritual life when we are trusting in men and things of the world and disregard the word of God.

When Nicodemus went to Jesus to inquire of the way of life, Jesus told him, "You must be born again." This was the first step in the way of life, but in order to proceed in this way, one must have proper food to strengthen and develop that life, and that food is the word of God. Now I'm not accusing anyone of not being born again, but after we have been born, have we been feeding our souls on spiritual food? On this point, possibly, some of our ministers have been slack, and maybe too the laymen have not accepted what has been set before them. In the mad rush of the age in which we are living, many do not take time to eat the food necessary to sustain the physical body. This is doubly true regarding the spiritual body. My mother used to sing a hymn that went something like this: "Oh, solitude, sweet solitude, Thou art the Christian's daily food." And that is the truth. We need to be still and listen for the still small voice of God. We need to regain the "faith once delivered to the saints." We need to get a passion for souls—and then we will increase in membership. Then will new churches spring up here and there. Then will we become interested in the salvation of the lost. Then will we grow in consecration and deeper spiritual life. Then will the Kingdom of God cover the earth as the waters cover the sea.

ROSEMONT AND HER YOUNG PEOPLE.

Four years ago Rosemont Christian Church celebrated one of the greatest events in the history of the young people. We might call it the Young Peoples' Red Letter Day.

We had the glorious privilege of attending the dedication of our lovely new building. To some of the young people it was a privilege which will never be granted or experienced again. Mingled with the thrill and pride of the beautiful building was a feeling of reverence and gratitude which was almost too deep for expression. We wanted to tell it to the world and shout it from the house tops. To our minds came the thought of the psalmist when he seid "Enter into His gates with Thanksgiving and into His courts with praise." When joy is too deep for words we can always find our thoughts echoed in the lovely hymn of God and in the beautiful words of the Psalmist.

I can scarcely find words in which to express the appreciation and the gratitude of the young people, not only for the lovely building in which they come from Sunday to Sunday to worship God, but for the privilege of being a member of Rosemont. To the young people Church means a habit, a good habit, a rest after the week's work, not only physical rest, but mental rest. It is wonderful to be able to have a place to go where you can relax and forget the world and its activities. Church means character building for the young, it means fellowship with God's children, it means a sweet communion with God and holy reverence for the Maker of Heaven and earth. Rosemont means all this and more, because it's our church, our spiritual amusement; then last, our appreciation goes back to the newer conveniences of this building.

In a brief way today I have tried to express the appreciation of the young people for Rosemont, or what Rosemont means to them, and in closing, I'd like to make an appeal to the young people of this church to show your appreciation and your loyalty to the church, to your pastor, and to God for the privilege of having a lovely place in which to worship God by going out and getting other young people interested enough in Rosemont, so that they too, will look back and say that Rosemont, the friendly church by the side of the road, is the church for them, and is a friend to young people.

Miss Kathryn Murden.

HISTORY OF BEREA CHURCH DISCUSSED.

W. E. MacClenny, Nansemond County historian, delivered an address Sunday morning, before the congregation of Berea Christian Church, on the history of that church, its organization and its years of active work.

Mr. MacClenny told his hearers of founding of Harmony Lodge of Masons in Driver in 1857, with the Rev. Dr. W. B. Wellons, the great exponent of the Christian denomination as speaker.

He also told of the preaching of Dr. Wellons at Yeats School House and of the meeting of a group of prominent men and women, including John R. Lee, Alexander Savage and Dempsey Langston, who formed a nucleus for a church.

Rev E. W. Beale, the speaker stated, was appointed to preach in 1858 in the school house and was succeeded in 1859 by the Rev. Thomas Bradshaw. The first church meeting with a regular form of church membership was held in 1860 at the home of John R. Lee, and Mr. Lee and Alexander Savage were appointed to attend the Eastern Virginia Conference and apply for admission of the church, the church being received on Oct. 31, 1860.

The house of worship has been completed and the first service was held on March 23, 1861, with the Rev. Dr. W. B. Wellons as pastor, the Rev. J. W. Wellons, as assistant.

The new church was dedicated on March 24, 1861, and worship was interrupted by the War Between the States. Every male member of the church went off to war, but monthly services were continued until May, 1862, when Norfolk and Suffolk were evacuated by the Confederate forces. Rev. W. B. Wellons was forced, Mr. MacClenny said, to leave the churches of his charge and seek safety in the Confederate lines where he remained until the close of the war.

Rev. John R. Lee kept the little church going during the years of the war, and in 1865, services with the help of the returned soldiers were resumed.

The first quarterly conference was held March 31, 1866 and during the year 48 new members were enrolled.

Mr. MacClenny told his hearers that the following pastors have served the church since its organization:

Dr. W. B. Wellons, Revs. E. W. Beale, W. T. Walker, Z. A. Post, C. A. Beebe, M. L. Hurley, Drs. N. G. Newman, W. C. Wicker, J. O. Atkinson, and the pastor now serving, the Rev. Dr. I. W. Johnson. Berea Church has entertained the Eastern Virginia Conference in 1867, 1875, 1886 and 1907.—Virginian Pilot. Feb. 12.

SANFORD, FLORIDA.

Rev. J. Bernard Root, pastor of the church at Sanford, Florida, in a quarterly report sent to the Jacksonville office, certainly reports interesting achievements in that church. We take the liberty to quote from the report as having some valuable suggestions: "The Church School has been entirely reorganized and on the most modern lines possible for a small school; we have added to the equipment, we have planted hundreds of shrubs around the church and parish house, we have had suppers, pageants, plays, we have been engaged for over a month with a new Finance Committee composed of the combined Boards of Deacons and Trustees in placing our business affairs on a business basis better than ever before. We feel that the young men and women just emerging from high school cannot hold a church in high respect when its business is allowed to become a hit-and-miss affair. We have never sent our quarterly statements to delinquents. I am insisting that it be done now, not for the money that will come in, but in order that the people may know that we are doing things in a business-like way. There are people in this parish who have never made a pledge. Always they have had for an excuse 'I just haven't any money. We do not know how we are going to get along.' I am suggesting to the Finance Committee that they ask such a man to pledge two dozen eggs a week and that he shall deliver the eggs and that a record be made every week and at the end of the quarter he shall be notified if he is behind with the eggs. I can get rid of the eggs somehow, but even if I were to throw them away I believe it would be the best thing to do. I believe it will make for the man's self respect. Some of these people put hundreds of cans of vegetables, fruits and meats away on their shelves during the season. Do you not think it would be better for them to share these with the church which they are not financially supporting?

"During the year, Russel Mason, head or President of the Burpee Seed Company in its Southern extension, has with his family become affiliated with our church. He is now Superintendent of our Church School and chairman of the Finance Committee. He was a professor in the University of Pennsylvania. Both he and Mrs. Mason are experts in religious education."

AN APPRECIATION SERVICE AT ROSEMONT.

A service of grateful appreciation was conducted at Rosemont Christian Church, Norfolk, Va., on Sunday morning, February 17, 1935. This service was held in commemoration of the fourth anniversary of the dedication of the new church building, and the first anniversary of the dedication of the new organ. Appropriate musical selection were sung by the choir. The Welcoming Address was given by the pastor and the following gave brief talks: H. C. Hedley, H. R. Morrison, Miss K. Murden, Mrs. O. F. Smith, A. E. Richardson, Rev. J. N. Cutchin, H. L. Bondurant, Mrs. B. F. Gibson, Mrs. O. S. Mills, G. B. Downing.

After the singing of "Blest Be the Tie" the benediction closed an enjoyable meeting commemorating a memorable occasion.

COURAGE FOR THE BUILDER.

"We have committed the golden rule to memory —let us now commit it to life."—Edwin Markham.

The Cent-A-Meal Box lends a daily spiritual note to family life and makes God a living presence in the home.

Morning, noon and night, it brings one face to face with the reality of God working through our brother-men.

The purpose of this "Cent-A-Meal" box is to increase the practice of thanksgiving and to furnish a means by which each family may have a part in what our church is doing to share with others everywhere the "good news which is for all people."

This daily program should remind us of our spiritual privileges. The Cent-A-Meal box is not a substitute for pledges or other gifts, but a joyful mealtime thank offering to the Giver of all good gifts.

All those who invest in the enrichment of the world's life have the assurance and joy that they have shared in the greatest undertaking in the world.

Nor for ourselves only but for others also we will give and work and pray that they too may have the peace and joy and hope that Jesus Christ gives.

"WATCHMAN, WHAT OF THE"—TIME?

Little Andy Hume, son of Dr. Walter F. Hume of Wai, India, wanted a watch and begged so continuously for it that his parents finally forbade the mention of the request. Next morning, however, when each child said his Bible verse, Andy quoted, "What I say unto you, I say unto all. . . WATCH AND PRAY. . . " And Andy got his watch.

DR. WILLIAM T. LAWRENCE, MISSIONARY.

By MISS D. P. CUSHING, News Editor.

There is a doctor in Boston now, on furlough, from Africa, who is modest to the point of shyness, but back of him lies 34 years of devoted service in and about Mt. Silinda and Chikore, East Africa. His name is William T. Lawrence.

"When I first went to Africa, I traveled the jungle on foot," says Dr. Lawrence, "then on horseback, by bicycle, motorcycle and now for many miles by auto." More recently Dr. Lawrence has had charge of the little hospital at Chikore, which though small in size, serves many sufferers and deals with a strange assortment of diseases. The patients are housed, for the most part, in huts built of wattle with thatched roofs and mud floors, shaped much like bee hives. The main building only contains eight beds, but the outreach of the hospital through the native workers trained there and the trips which Dr. Lawrence makes into the jungle, far exceeds the number of sick folks actually cared for at Chikore. Then, too, there is the care of over 400 boys and girls in the mission schools located there.

One of the patients who came to Chikore, was an old man, the soles of whose feet had been terribly burned by walking in the hot sands of the oven-like Sabi Valley where the thermometer flirts with 110 in the shade. It was into this area that Dr. Lawrence treked out 20 miles after traveling a day and a night by auto, to bring out a young English trooper, member of the Black Watch Police, who had been badly mauled by a lion. This exploit put the unassuming doctor on pers.

Many patients have to be brought in for miles often by hammock. After bumping along over what would seem hardly more than a faint trail to American autoists, at a speed of 10 to 20 miles an hour, Dr. Lawrence cheerfully announces, "This kind of travel is good for your liver."

Prior to his coming to America for furlough, Dr. Lawrence witnessed the horrible devastation of both West and East Africa by locusts. Starvation is a common specter and all efforts at stopping these flying pests seem futile.

Dr. Lawrence was born in Conklin, N. Y., and attended the New York Homeopathic Medical College and the Royal Medical College of Edinburgh.

CHAIN OF MISSIONARY ASSEMBLIES.

One of the most unique developments in missionary and educational promotion in the whole country is the Florida Chain of Missionary Assemblies. Some years ago there was held for a few winters a series of missionary assemblies in St. Petersburg, which awakened great interest and a demand arose for similar assemblies over the whole state, with the result that the Florida Chain of Missionary Assemblies was established four years ago. This year they are being given in sixteen of the Florida cities. They are entirely undenominational and are not promoted by Mission Board officials. In fact, it has been the policy of the Assembly not to have Mission Board officials on the program. The reason being that it would involve them in too many denominational official demands. The speakers are largely those who have had actual missionary experience at home or abroad. This year they have included some who could speak on such problems as the interracial problems, world peace, etc. Among the speakers this year are Dr. T. Z. Koo, Ph. D., the famous Chinese Youth leader; Rev. M. Ashley Jones, D. D., Guest Preacher at the Central Congregational Church of Atlanta; Rev. Henry Smith Leiper, D. D., Foreign Secretary of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America and formerly an American Board missionary, and Editorial Secretary of the Commission on Missions. Last year the most distinguished member of the company of speakers was Stanley Jones. The Assemblies are self-supporting as registration fees are charged. Mass meetings are held, also luncheon round table forums, etc. This Chain of inter-denominational assemblies is of great value in the cultivation of missionary interest in the churches and is commended to other states.

IT IS ALSO HELL.

"War is a sure means of committing suicide," —the speaker was Yukio Ozaki of Japan. Students returning from America, said he, are prone to compare Japan with Germany. Same isolation, same boasting about "culture", same talk of a "mission". Germany chose military power as against commercial expansion, continued Mr. Ozaki. That there is need for a fairer distribution of world markets and resources and a necessity for world police power and authority, Mr. Ozaki made clear. So, comments Rev. Clarence Gillett of Sendai, who heard this fearless Japanese, "There are some powerful forces at work to hold Japan on a level keel."

THE SIGN OF THE CROSS.

When Sherwood Eddy was in China holding meeting in 1931 young Cieu He-Ting became a Christian. He contracted tuberculosis. When he knew recovery was impossible he asked his brother, a Buddhist, to have a "Service of the Cross." The next day Cieu He-Ting died. The Buddhist brother secured a Christian pastor and himself made two crosses of flowers which he fastened, one at the foot and one at the head of the coffin. The frail little mother, this brother and his wife, and one sister sat quietly through the Christian ceremony. At a memorial service held later in Foochow College the assembly hall was filled with students come to honor this new Christian.

JOBS, NOT JINGOISMS.

Jobs are what the people of India want, not shibboleths of political parties, says Rev. James M. Hess of Madura. The depression is more severe this year in India than last, which makes one shudder to think what this must mean to the great masses who live continually in what to Americans would seem economic depression. The political issues seem as confused as ever. Moslems oppose Congressites, the Congress party is split between an extreme Communistic left wing and a middle-of-the-road group, and a Brahmin wing seemingly desireus of a form of Fascism.

THIS BUSINESS OF BOYS!

Baby had arrived safely and Dad was settling his account with the Taiku Hospital, China. It was a boy. "If the baby had been a girl," said the father, "I was planning to give a gift of ten dollars, but since it is a boy, I'll give twenty." Another gift was reported by Nurse Helen Diznev in the shape of 1200 pounds of white flour which amounted in cash to about $100. This came from an important official whose wife, a devout Buddhist, had been a patient there.

Christian Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

It is a hard heart that has no love for a little child. It is an extra hard heart that has no feeling for a fatherless and motherless child. The writer has never known but one person who did not love a child—or was willing to confess it. This mother had one little girl in her home—her own little girl—yet she had no love for it and said she hated children. I often saw that little girl playing in her yard and felt sorry for her because she had no mother's love. That has been years ago, but all down through the years we have often thought of the little girl that was to live in a home with a mother who did not love her and said she hated children. It has always been the writer's disposition to love little children. They are the most dependent of God's creatures. But they are the most precious of his creatures. They often bind father and mother together when otherwise the home might be wrecked and broken up. The little child in the home brings more real joy to that home than all the silver and gold can ever bring. What comes closer to your heart than a little child?

It may be in poverty and denied this world's goods but its innocent smile is just as sweet and the sparkle in its eyes is just as bright as it would be if it was endowed with great riches.

"God made beauty along the highways and by ways,
The sparkling dewdrops that are kissed by the sun's rays,
The mountains where beautiful flowers grow wild,
These cannot compare with the beauty of a little child."

A REVIVAL.

Brother Hunt says we need it. I have seen a church and community tremendously made over when we had a revival. I have seen and heard men and women testify in a wonderful way about the power and influence of the Holy Spirit in their lives when we had a revival. I have seen whole congregations strangely moved upon by the spirit of the living God when we had a revival. I have seen them meet the man of God at the altar and remain for prayer when we had a revival. I have seen numbers, young and old, surrender their lives to God and kneel at the altar or go down to the water's edge and be baptised in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost when we had a revival. I have seen numbers of God's kingdom moving quietly among the congregation, seeking the lost sheep when we had a revival. I have heard the most wonderful soul-stirring, uplifting mesages of love, invitation and comfort when we had a revival. I have seen more people at church and heard the best music when we had a revival. I have heard more people pray when we had a revival. I have read more letters from our missionaries when we had a revival.

I wonder if Brother Hunt is right—do we need a revival?

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

Rev. F. C. Lester, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

FRAGRANCE FROM FLORIDA.

For years most of us have eaten fruits and vegetable that came from far-away Florida, and have dreamed of Florida's billowy breezes and fragrant flowers. But only recently have we been able to breathe the fragrance and bask in the beauty of that lovely state which now seems so near and dear.

Somebody said that Dr. Rowland and Dr. Atkinson were in Florida Sanitarium in Orlando. Then our hearts were in Orlando, for our friends were there. We were told that they were ill. Then we were sad for we do not like sickness.

But those who read the recent articles from the picturesque pen of Dr. Atkinson felt the breezes blowing, smelled the sweet perfume, and knew that he is more alive than most of us. He is conscious of the beauty about him and that is more than most of us can claim for ourselves. His body may be weak, but his spirit is strong.

And the fragrance is the sweeter because it comes from a beautiful life rather than a fading flower. In days that were darker he walked by faith. In times of trouble he has been true to his trust. And now as the south winds blow, like the breath of God, across his sweetened spirit the rest of us are refreshed in soul by the fragrance from Florida which comes from the pen of the honored editor of our Church Paper.

As Seth Parker says: "Just a moment, please," as we ask our Father's blessings to be on our friends in Florida. . . . . Amen.

AMOS 'N' ANDY IN PERSON.

Today brought me the fulfillment of a long-cherished desire. I saw Amos and Andy in person. They came to our town and I took time out of a very busy day to join with thousands of others to welcome these unseen but well-known friends of ours. And the boys did not disappoint us. There they were bubbling over with fun as they showed us just how they broadcast over the radio. Clean-cut, handsome young fellows they are. They have probably done more than any others to make radio entertainment clean and wholesome. They do not need to deal in dirt to find things that are funny. One need not fear embarrassment when listening to them. Their voices are rich and resonant, not harsh and rasping, and their faces register humor and happiness. I do not know their private lives but it is a safe bet that the clean fun they give to others grows in the garden of their own clean lives.

THEN I WAS DISAPPOINTED.

Amos and Andy were all that I expected. But Ann Harding and Robert Montgomery let me down hard in the picture the theatre was presenting. I had come to expect them to play the part of the high and noble. This time the picture was not so pretty. Of course it turned out all right, and there was nothing really bad in the picture, but the background of the story was sordid. One couldn't come away feeling so clean and happy as is usual when Robert Montgomery plays a part.

I came away feeling something like the little boy who had heard his Sunday School superintendent swear at a hog killing. Before that the superintendent had been a giant in the mind of the boy, but afterwards he was a very little man. The boy was disappointed, crippled.

And I wondered about the boys and girls in our Sunday Schools and churches, and those who are not in either. Are they disappointed as they look at pastors, officials, members, and especially young people? I wonder—and hope. Yes, I hope that they may never be disappointed in any of us who profess to follow the Master. If they are, the hurt may last for life.

I shall go again to see Montgomery, for I want to believe in him. And I want people to believe in me, and in you. It is important.

FORWARD TOGETHER—YES?

Young people, and friends of young people, shall we go forward together in the southeast? Splendid work is being done in local churches, conferences and associations. But there is little unity among these various groups. We have much in common, but we do not share it enough.

The purpose of the Southeast Youth Fellowship is to bring together young people and their leaders from all over our territory to join hands, hearts, and programs in doing Christian service. Unless every section of our convention is represented at the meeting in Raleigh April 30th to May 2nd, the organization cannot be completed. The house of fellowship will fall on the shifting sands unless every corner is well built.

Please, Please, PLEASE, will you help to get young people and their leaders to this Fellowship meeting? You may be the only person that can do the necessary work to get representatives to be present. Don't say that it cannot be done. Nothing that needs to be done is impossible. Do your best. Let me know your plans. Perhaps I can help. Write to your state leaders. Try every possible way to go to Raleigh yourself. And aid others to attend. Of course, the leaders will aid the young people to get there.

If Raleigh means what it should, the next two years will be years of real progress in the work of our young people. And the churches, the world, need the progress of our Christian young people—they need it desperately.

REVERENCE FOR GOD'S WORK.

My body is a temple
That needs the greatest care
It must be clean and wholesome,
For God is living there.
And if I keep the temple,
My body, strong and clean,
My mind must be as wholesome,
Although it can't be seen.

My thoughts must be unselfish;
My words must comfort give;
My deeds must all be worthy
Of Him with Whom I live.
The bracing air I breathe in,
The ocean where I swim,
The sports that build my muscle,
I'll use for love of Him.

THE INSIGHT OF JESUS.

Christian Endeavor Topic for March 3, 1935

Scripture: Matt. 9:36-38; John 2:24, 25.

This is a consecration meeting, and should be made as impressive as possible. Make it different from the usual. Rearrange the room, use candles or do something to make it different. This can easily be done with the program. If you have been having clippings, poetry, etc., make this a discussion group and have speeches. A panel discussion is good (have two or three members sit on the platform and discuss phases of the topic.) You might have different people representing characters of the Bible come into the room and tell how Jesus had seen into their individual lives. For instance, Peter might tell how Jesus saw in his heart the qualities of a rock, or Zaccheus might tell how Jesus saw in his life, or someone from the crowd who heard might tell how They thought He spoke particularly to them. In some way make this meeting stand out from the others as being different, but never let it close until there is a spirit of consecration manifest on the part of those present.

Hymns suitable for this meeting will include "Spirit of God Descend Upon My Heart," "Take Time to be Holy," "What A Friend We Have in Jesus," "Holy Spirit, Truth Divine," "Draw Thou My Soul, O Christ," "Open Mine Eyes," "Jesus Calls Us," "All the Way My Saviour Leads Me," "Jesus Saviour, Pilot Me," "Take My Life and Let It Be."

Thoughts for Meditation.

Get someone to discuss in their own way the following scripture references:

(a) Matt 9.:4; John 2:24, 25.
(b) I Sam. 16:7.
(c) Psalm 27:4.
(d) Phil. 4:8, 9.
(e) John 15:1-15.

Talks may also be made on:
"Forgiveness" (Luke 15:22-24).
"Selfishness" (Luke 15:25-30).
"False Pride" (Luke 18:10-12).
"The Love of Money" (Luke 18:18-23).
"Excuses" (Luke 19:20-24).

It might be helpful to invite the pastor to give a brief summary of what has been said and to add any message he may wish to deliver.

The closing moment should be well planned to get the proper effect. The pianist might play through the refrain of "Open Mine Eyes That I May See" during a silent prayer, after which many members would lead in brief prayer. While the heads are still bowed a soloist might sing the first stanza of "Dear Lord and Father of Mankind." Then let all unite in singing the second stanza—everybody rising at the end of the second and benediction.

Among the poems that may be helpful are included the following:

"He called the unknown best
From Peter, James and all the rest
Who lent their lives to his amazing grace
Of humor, irony, and insight; base
Was base no more; and even commonplace
Became uncommon; their very names grew great
To move a world that would have thought them
Simple, stupid, ordinary men
As once they had been, till Christ
Upcaught them in the gold he sought,
Drew forth their inmost selves.
Can He again do that, if you
Or I have faith to ask?" (Source Unknown.)

"There is an eye that never sleeps
Beneath the wing of night;
There is an Ear that never shuts
When sink the beams of light.

"There is an Arm that never tires
When human strength gives way;
There is a Love that never fails
When earthly loves decay.

"That Eye unseen o'erwatcheth all;
That Arm upholds the sky;
That Ear doth hear the sparrow's call;
That Love is ever nigh."

Sunday School Lesson

PETER HEALS A LAME MAN.

Lesson VIII—February 24, 1935.

Golden Text: "But Peter said, Silver and gold have I none; but what I have, that I give thee." —Acts 3:6.

Lesson Text: Acts 3:1-10; 4:8-12.

Going to the House of the Lord.

Peter and John had been baptized with the Holy Spirit. But they went into the temple at the hour of prayer. They felt the need, and recognized the value of renewing their inner lives through worship in common with their fellowmen. They are a rebuke to that large number of men and woman, young men and maidens, boys and girls, who neglect the "assembling of themselves together" for worship on the Lord's Day. Jesus, as "His custom was went into the synagogue on the Sabbath Day." Here as elsewhere Jesus is our example. What is your record on church attendance? If your attendance at church stands at zero you need not be surprised if your interest in spiritual things is not at the boiling point. Going to church, is of course, a privilege, but it is also a duty. And the man or woman who in sincerity of purpose and in humility of spirit goes to church, will find that which will help him or her to live more serenely and victoriously through the week.

Human Need at the Door of the Church.

The lame man was lying at the very door of the temple. The thing is significant from two standpoints. The lame man knew that he would be more likely to receive help from "church folks." True religion prompts to deeds of mercy and kindness. Charity drives, community funds, temperance organizations, needy individuals know where to look for help. The church has fostered and developed the spirit of humanity and helpfulness.

There is another side to the picture. The church cannot overlook the human need right around it. The church should always be in the midst of human need. Within a stone's throw of every church, indeed, at the door of every church, there is human need. It is not always physical need, but it is need of a more pressing nature, spiritual need. Let every church see to it that it ministers to human need at its door.

No Silver and Gold.

Peter and John may have looked prosperous. They may have looked sympathetic. Or mere force of habit may have prompted the lame man to ask for alms. In any event, when he did ask for alms there was something about Peter which quickened his expectations for the story says he gave heed unto them expecting to receive something from them. But alas, Peter and John had no money. The one thing the man thought he needed most and wanted most, they did not have. By the way, there is a lesson here for many people during these days of reduced income and depression. A great many of us say that because they do not have any money to give to the church they do not feel like going to church. In some cases it is a case of "baloney." But in some cases the people are sincese. Well, Peter and John had no money but they went to church. And those who are out of work, and who have no money, or who cannot give as much as they once gave, ought to go to church. They are the ones who need the inspiration and the help of the services of worship of the church. If you have money, you ought to give it to the Lord. If you do not have any money you are just as acceptable to the Lord. And to folks too. The poor man will be just as welcome in the average church as the well-to-do-man.

But That Which I Have I Give Thee.

No silver or gold. But such as I have, give I thee, said Peter. And the interesting thing is that Peter gave the man something far more valuable and vital than money. If he had merely given him money the man would have been the same. If he had refused to do anything because he could not give money, the man would have been the same. But because he was willing to do what he could, the man received the power to get up and walk, and perhaps to earn his own living. If only we would give such as we have. If only we would use what talents we have for Christ and the Church instead of talking about what we would do if we had such and such talents. In these days those who do not have money can give service. The man who is eager to help will find some way of helping.

The Personal Touch.

"And he took him by the right hand and raised him up." That is Scripture. But it is life. Many a man who has been down and out has been redeemed, renewed by the friendly, personal touch. One of the limitations of so much of our modern charity and so much of our modern church life in the fact that life has become so complex and organizations have become so large that we cannot give the personal touch so much needed, and so vital in life. How the pastor needs to give the personal touch to his people. How the Sunday School teacher needs to give the personal touch to his pupils. Jesus never lost sight of the individual. Again and again we read that he used the personal touch. And at his personal touch men got up from their lower levels and began to walk on higher levels, and to see new horizons, and to accomplish new achievements. And by the way, unless religion for us is the personal touch of the Master upon our lives, a personal fellowship between us and Him, it will not mean much to us or to others.

It Was He.

It hardly seemed true. But it was true. The people knew it was the same man who had formerly sat and begged alms. There have been those who have sunk so low that it seemed that there was no hope for them. There have been those who have dragged along on lower levels all their lives until they seemed helpless and hopeless. And then Jesus has come into their lives. And the change has been so wonderful that folks could hardly believe what they saw. But they knew that "it was he." He was the same man—but he was so different.

It Was Jesus Who Did It.

The title of the lesson is wrong. It reads "Peter Heals A Lame Man." Peter did nothing of the sort. He himself says so. Jesus did it. Every sane and sober man knows that he is neither self-made, nor does he do what he is credited with doing. Preachers cannot convert men. Doctors cannot heal men. Not apart from themselves. It is Christ who converts and Christ who heals. And as He increases more and more we shall decrease more and more.

A SONG OF FAITH.

Day will return with a fresher boon;
God will remember the world!
Night will come with a newer moon;
God will remember the world!

Evil is only the slave of good;
Sorrow the servant of joy;
And the soul is mad that refuses food
Of the meanest in God's employ.

The fountain of joy is fed by tears,
And love is lit by the breadth of sighs;
The deepest griefs and wildest fears
Have holiest ministries.

Strong grows the oak in the sweeping storm;
Safely the flower sleeps under the snow;
And the farmer's hearth is never warm
Till the cold wind starts to blow.

Day will return with a fresher boon;
God will remember the world!
Night will come with a newer moon;
God will remember the world!

TUESDAY.

LIVING FOR THE LOST.

"The Son of man came to seek and to save that which was lost."—Luke 19:10.

Zaccheus is not charged with any mortal sin save that of extortion. He was a tax collector and extortioned upon the people for his own personal gains. That was bad enough. At any rate Christ classed him as "lost." That Jesus visited Zaccheus that day and fellowshipped with him gave Zaccheus a new vision and he decided to live a different life. He even wanted to restore three fold any wrong which he had done any one. Jesus called Zaccheus "Saved," both he and his household.

The Prodigal Son is a striking example in contrast. He was not only lost but he had plunged the depths of immorality and sin. The father had not gone after him. The boy had left his father's house determined to have his own fling. To bring him back home by force or by persuasion, merely, would not have saved him. Something had to happen to him inside to save him. He had his fling and he flung his life away, and in dire want he "remembered," so he arose and trudged the entire way back to where he began,—in the heart of the Father. He had been lost but he was now found. He was going to the devil but he nas now saved. 'Tis such as these that Jesus came to save, and if He came to save such extremes he must have come to save all. We do not doubt that. "Salvation is unto all that believeth."

Prayer—Our Father, our days are days of toil. We rise in the morning and tread the beaten way only to lie down at night and rest. Art Thou in this way? Yea, we believe that the way that lies before us is like the shapeless stone before the sculptor, when the rough has been cut away the invisible form is manifested. So help us to be faithful in the way and when life has been lived and all the rough is cut away, may we see Thee and Thy glory standing out in unsullied and everlasting beauty.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE LIVING GOD.

"Thou are the Christ the Son of the Living God."—Matt. 16:16.

This is the confession of a mere man, but a man like many thousands of others, divinely lead and divinely inspired. It has been such as these, who, through the ages, have been the foundation stone of God's church.

But God is more than a God who is alive. God is a God who is alive because He is life, and, being life, He is our living. The fact that truth and justice and righteousness are His habitation, and that these things are the issues of our lives, seems to make it clear what is meant by "Living God."

It is through every day living the truth, justice and righteousness is established. It is through everyday living that we are liberated from a sense of guilt. It is through everyday living that we trust Christ for firmer strength to resist temptation and it is when we are so trusting Him that that strength comes. It is through everyday living that one becomes conscious of a kinship with God and through which He passes to the invisible and the eternal known as "The Kingdom of God."

Prayer—Dear Father, perfect Thou our joy and strength in life through Him who lived and died and is alive again for us, and who ever since has been saving and ruling men.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

WHAT CAN YOU DO?

"The joy of the Lord is your strength."—Neh. 8:10.

Man loves strength. A locomotive attracts most people not because of its beauty as a thing of art but because of its power. Anything that has power attracts us.

God loves strength also, yea, even physical strength, for He has made us that way and given the human body the power to do things. How He must rejoice in the mighty potentialities of a man whom He has made after his own image, for those mighty potentialities are His.

But the greatest strength of man is not his physical strength. In our text Nehemiah had sent the people out to feed those who had nothing to eat. In discharging this mission he urged them not to be lazy about it, for their possibilities were great and their responsibilities were just as great, and that it was this power of theirs that the Lord rejoiced in.

A man's great strength lies in his love and loyalty; in his comradeship and helpfulness; in the fruit of the spirit of his life; in his mental resolutions in time of trial and temptation: in his soulfulness for service; in his strength to endure, endurance that may spring out of suffering and sorrow. It was this strength that shone in the martyrs and filled their souls with the peace of God even in the torturing hours of death, and it is this strength that shall shine in those lives who, being faithful to the end, shall fully "enter into the joy of the Lord."

Prayer—Our Father help us to live with the contentment of those who have already found their portion with Thee. And when the light dies out with us and things are dark may we see in Thee that our "lines are fallen in pleasant places."—Amen.

FRIDAY.

ANOTHER INTERPRETATION.

"The joy of the Lord is your strength."—Neh. 8:10.

Nehemiah saw that the people had much to do and much to bear; that if they whined over their load and grieved over their lot it would unman them and they would be defeated. The work that they had to do demanded that they be strong and that they be cheerful about it, for their godly joy was their strength.

God's joy in us and our joy in God is the secret of our strength. This kind of joy is not one that comes from outward circumstances but it comes from within the soul. It is a joy that deepens blessedness by the bearing of crosses and the enduring of conflicts of life. One writer in speaking of his personal experience says that he did not consider the joy over a personal good fortune a whit more invigorating than grief in personal loss. Giving an instance, he says, "If in the midst of writing an article you heard that you had come into a great fortune, you would not write another line that day, but if you heard the same news of some one whom you loved and whose poverty had given you some concern, you would be fanned by an inspiration and you would make your pen fly. What is the difference? It is this: One is the joy of the flesh; the other is the joy of the Lord.

It is this joy that is our strength. Joy in the Lord gives a new heart and a new vigor; for in a cheerful confident mood one can do that which is quite impossible when strength is wasted by doubt and vain regrets. To go to any job with a gay hopeful spirit means to do that job well. So, true joy is strengthening, and if joy is strengthening, how much more is that joy which we have in the consciousness of the Lord with us. It is in this way that God is our chief good and all tasks are easier, all burdens lighter and all sorrows bearable.

Prayer—Dear Father, because Thou art near send us forth into the day's work without anxiety or fear. Help us to reach out from the calm of our own souls and give help and peace and light to others who need. In His name we ask it.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE HEAVENLY ALMANAC.

"My times are in Thy hand."—Ps. 31:12-19.

An almanac is a fascinating pamphlet. We glance through its pages and wonder what its three hundred and sixty-five days will bring to us. They tell us of the eclipses, the tides, the rising and setting of the sun, the evening and morning stars, but they do not and cannot foretell even in barest outlines the course of a single human life.

But God has written the complete almanac of every one of us. Our times are in His hand. He knows what is to befall us, of good or ill. If we are true to Him, He will be true to us and no ill can befall us. Every day of the long years will then be His day as it is curs, filled by Him with unutterable joy and abiding strength.

Prayer—We surrender our times to Thee, our Father. We will not plan our lives, but we will let Thee plan them. For Thine is all wisdom.—Amen.

THE BOOK OF AMOS.

Dr. J. Edward Kirbye.

If we can see the evils that Amos the Shepherd emphasizes in the book carrying his name, it will not be difficult to recognize the meaning of the social and religious protests among us today. They are concerned with the uses of land in ownership that excludes the poor; concerned with the poverty of the many; concerned with taxation that exacts its toll from the poor that the strong and well to do may live in pleasure and sin; concerned with the evil effects of war upon the welfare of the people; and Amos, a shepherd from Tekos, a peasant center and community not far from Jerusalem, takes his staff in his hand, and with a flaming zeal goes north to Bethel to attack these evils and to summon the people to a religious devotion which has as its center those ringing words:

"Let judgment run down as waters,
And righteousness as a mighty stream." 5:24.

"Hate the evil, love the good, and establish judgment in the gate." 5:15. King James Version.

Moffet's translation has it:

"Let justice well up like fresh water
Let honesty roll in full tide."

What did this old farmer mean? He was a farmer with flocks and came from a farming community that had grievances. There was a priest in the old Capitol of Bethel (Amoziah) who ministered to the church that had been established by the King Jereboam, and the priest became very much excited over the inflamatory teaching of Amos and sent this message to the King: "Amos has conspired against thee in the midst of the house of Israel. The land is not able to bear all his words." Then the priest went out into the streets and said to Amos, "Go! Flee away into the land of Judah! Prophecy not again any more in Bethel because it is the King's Chapel, and a royal sanctuary. The priest of the Royal Chapel called him a prophet, a disturber, and used the term in derision. Amos comes back to say, "I am a shepherd, a farmer, and plead for the rights of the people of the country who are being destroyed."

A similar situation exists in North Carolina. There are thousands of tenant farmers here whose conditions are becoming steadily worse. The land and wage situation are such that they cannot get a foothold. Most of them move every year, and their number is growing year by year. Thousands have been pushed into the ranks of poverty during recent years. And if some prosperous farmer with the spirit of Leo Tolstoy should arise and come to the city of Raleigh and attack the attitude of the State government and many of its policies—attack the reported social immoralities of certain members of the Legislature two years ago, and then say in thundering tones that the justice of democracy demands different attitudes toward the wage earners and tenant farmers—you would have a parallel situation to that set forth in the book of Amos.

There is a word used in the text that has a long and significant history. A brief history of the word will enable us to see the real struggle that was on as to the attacks on wealth and power and personal ease and pleasure that were in evidence with personal ownership and control. Amos uses the word justice—but it is translated from the word mishpat, which stood for a definite type of social order among the tribes of the desert of ancient Israel.

From tribes and families of the desert where all in a kindred group have a right to the resources of nature such as land, water and crops that may be produced, they were carried forward into Palestine where private ownership of land, the building of towns as trade centers, developed. The contest was therefore between a developing commercialism on one side where individual or groups as in government were in control, and the old nomadic ideas of communism of land and resources of nature.

The desert tribes consist of a clan of brethren. They share all losses. They share all gains. They had a very high sense of loyalty to each other's well being. The class or tribe of the Arabian desert is a pure communist and enforces justice in his group. The land of Palestine was fertile land in the main and became a crossroads for the commerce of surrounding nations. Commerce with its profits; bankers who loaned money for interest; governments supporting long lists of officials; kings who built palaces; all were oppressors, all were mishpat and their sense of sharing and taking care of all within the group were outraged by commercial conduct and its gains.

In these first struggles in the olden days there were compromises between the mishpat, (the ideal of social justice) of the desert and the commercial standard. Every seven years debts were to be remitted within Israel and a Hebrew bondsman or woman were to be freed. In the year of Jubilee all land was to be returned to the original owners. The recognition of the rights of property in slavery and the land are thus limited. These social struggles go on through the Old Testament, with Jehovah blessing constantly the other idea of justice that originated in the tribal family days in the desert. When finally the commercial ideal, involving property of all kinds, became fully dominant, it was regarded largely by these older ideals as disloyalty to Jehovah; and the prophetic conception of justice and mercy became the suffering servant treading the wine press alone and giving rise to the spirit of sacrifice which has been so well expressed in Isaiah, Chapter 53. Thus the Old Testament times forged the compelling God-idea from the tears and suffering of their divisions over what was just to the poor who bore the name of Israel.

Thus it has ever been. The problems of possession of land, and the rights and responsibilities of property in relation to the poor; the excesses and vices of large possessions of property; and war waged for economic and political advantage to the distresses of the common man are always being fought out in every race and civilization. And today these questions are still with us. The live issue in religion today is whether organized Christianity shall be enlisted only with a narrow individualism, or shall it with the inequalities and inequities of this age, proclaim social justice as an ideal.

I.

Having presented this picture, may I now throw this bombshell? Personally, I am trying to beware of all self-styled—self-appointed prophets. At least draw distinctions. This caution is hardly necessary among intelligent people. Such a prophet as the Roman Catholic Priest of Detroit is one who can be distrusted. His personal attacks on things such as the World Court recently netted him thousands of dollars each week. His enormous income is now being used to build a million dollar Roman Catholic Church. His intelligence is not worth it and the stuff that comes from such a propaganda will get us nowhere. We can easily dispense with such men.

The kind of prophecy we need is the knowledge that is coming from well trained social agencies which are getting facts as to the social problems facing us. Do we want knowledge about the farm tenant problem? We can get accurate information and knowledge. The universities, colleges, churches, government agencies, are making studies all the time upon our economic and social ills, and there is no lack of knowledge upon any question if we want to form an intelligent opinion for guidance.

Do noe depend on any self-styled Amos. Amos of the Old Testament did a good job. There is no record that he was paid anything for his service, for he walked from his home to the Capitol to deliver his message. And if you analyze his message there is revealed a burning spirit in behalf of the poor and the oppressed. He does not see how the inherent sense of social justice, which is revealed in their worship of God, and in their sense of the meaning of God, can be reconciled with building beautiful palaces, exacting heavy taxes, collecting interest, and building up property rights which are self centered. And we will probably find, as we study our own well being in this country, that social justice is our salvation, just as Amos believed it to be the salvation of Israel.

II.

As we face life in its complex social relationships and in the light of the needs of human beings, we realize that while there are great common things growing out of a social order built on a commercial basis, there is, also, in the situation, the necessity for new moralities. It is in the difficult social experiences of life that we find light which guides us into new principles of conduct. If democracy means anything; if the Gospel of Jesus means anything, we are under the compelling necessity of a supreme emphasis upon human good, and this human good will be found as we face the particular social stresses that arise from time to time.

As we face these particular stresses, we seek to adjust our mechanisms and our customs. It is not so much in the realm of spiritual ideals that we lack light. Our chief difficulties are liable to be in the formulation of programs to remedy the injustices which we feel. I am sure most of us feel just as I do now—the complexity as to practical plans. Some, of course, say that communism is our way through, and the communist throughout the world is manifesting a spirit akin to the deepest religious devotion in his advocacy of his program. There are problems there which we do not wish to face.

There are others who believe that a socialistic state, which varies little from communism, is our way out. Such a state has never been realized yet. All of us can safely realize that some sort of problem will arise under any mechanism that may be devised because of the diversity of human interests that are involved.

I have a feeling that democracy offers greater opportunities such as the majority of human beings need and crave, more than any other social mechanism. I mean, of course, equality of opportunity for everyone, and we are far from the attainment of that objective.

There are no social necessities, even in this time of stress, that cannot be adjusted if we give ourselves seriously to the problem. If we would unite in seeking a balanced economy, which means real fairness to producer and consumer, real fairness to manufacturer and to laborer, and real appreciation of education and the value of all agencies which give the mind and spirit a chance to grow—a balance so completely achieved that there are no excessively rich, or degradingly poor—it would be the brightest day that we have ever known; and such achievement is not an impossible dream.

III.

Jesus left us the heritage of brotherhood. We are far from the attainment of His ideals. As I listen to ministers plead for loyalty to Jesus Christ I always wonder whether they do not have in mind an intellectual assent to some theological tenet that Protestantism has developed. I think of the matter somewhat differently. The question which I constantly ask myself is this: Am I trying to practice the law of love, not because it is a law, but because in the human necessity I see no other way out.

When I was in Russia in 1921, in the midst of the Reign of Terror, with thousands of people suffering in the midst of a social situation which had been completely turned upside down so that everybody was confused, fearful, and wondering what was going to happen next, only one way opened as a relief to your soul—that was the way of good will and love. And when you stand in the midst of any great social issue and you see thousands of little children being destroyed; or in the midst of racial antagonism which would fly at each other's throat; or in the midst of thousands who are being dispossessed, only one way appears. If your own spirit responds in love, in the effort to find a way out you will be doing what Jesus did. You do not need to say that you believe; professing it publicly is very likely to cheapen it. It has become vital in the hope for realization that leads one on.

We will all find out soon enough that through our struggles for bettering life about us, that the defeats and the struggles themselves forge for us experiences that make the Cross, and Christ Himself, our only way out into hope. And in much it will be far away, but truth and peace are still guiding us. That is the difference between despair and faith, and the difference between ultimate losses and ultimate gain.

yard, so that He longed for the briers and thorns to array themselves against Him in battle, that He might lash them with the flame of His infinite wrath and destroy them altogether.

Now if we are God's children, we have a right to think of just such a thing in regard to our lives. We have a right to know that the Almighty is in fierce conflict with all that can possibly hurt us. We can know that He is on our side.

Prayer—Thou art our God, and we shall not fear any evil, for Thou art with us, and Thou hast all power.—Amen.

STEADFASTNESS.

Men ought to stand erect in times of care
God fashioned them the loads of life to bear.
And through the dreary, dismal hours and long
God gave them the faith to keep them strong.
Children may cry beneath the touch of pain
And women frail seek shelter from the rain.
But when the tempest strikes or danger nears,
'Tis then, the man, courageous, best appears.
Let us stand fast, though storms our roof trees shake,
For those we love, for soon the clouds will break.

MARRIAGES

NEAL—DEAN.

Mr. Clarence Neal of Walnut Cove, R. 2, and Miss Opal Dean, of Kernersville, were united in marriage by the writer on Dec. 8, 1934. The many friends of this popular young couple wish for them success and happiness.

D. M. SPENCE.

MORGAN—MARSHALL.

Mr. Ralph Morgan of the Salem Chapel Community, and Miss Alma Marshall, of Walnut Cove, were united in marriage Dec. 19, 1934, by the writer. This splendid young couple have the good wishes of many friends as they launch out upon the task of making a new home.

D. M. SPENCE.

WHITMER—LAYMAN.

On December 24, 1934, upon my return home from filling some preaching engagements, I found awaiting me Mr. Woodrow Whitmer and Miss Lucile Layman. In compliance with their wishes, I united them in the holy bonds of wedlock. Both are from near Mayland, and are very popular young people there. Their many friends wish them a long and a happy married life.

OBITUARIES

MARTIN.

Everette Moore Martin, aged 32 years, of the Belew Creek community, was called to his reward December 13, 1934. Surviving besides the widow are three small children, the parents, four brothers and four sisters.

The funeral services were conducted at Belew Creek December 14 by the writer, assisted by Rev. W. T. Scott.

May the Lord comfort the bereaved.

D. M. SPENCE.

REID.

Mrs. Lula May Reid of the Salem Chapel community, age 50 years, was called to her reward December 22, 1934. She was a devout Christian. The following survive: her husband, George Williams Reid, and six brothers.

The funeral services were conducted at Quaker Gap Baptist Church December 23rd by the writer, assisted by Rev. Mr. Turner, a former pastor.

May the Lord comfort the bereaved.

D. M. SPENCE.

CLAPP.

Mrs. Rosa Belle Clapp, wife of Eli P. Clapp, died January 14, 1935 in the 69th year of her life. She is survived by her husband, four daughters, five sons, and one brother, besides a host of other relatives and friends.

She was a faithful and devoted member of Apple's Chapel Church, but for more than a year she had not been able to attend on account of her health. Many pretty flowers and a very large congregation attested the esteem in which she was held.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Revs. C. A. Brown, H. E. and G. C. Crutchfield, after which interment was made in her church cemetery. May the Comforted comfort the hearts of the bereaved.

T. J. GREEN.

GREGORY.

Christmas Eve of 1934 marked the closing of the long and beautifully lived life of Mrs. Anna Sanford Gregory, wife of our senior deacon, Bro. W. D. Gregory. She was a charter member of the Ladies' Aid and the Missionary Societies of Union Christian Church, Virgilina, Va.

Therefore be it resolved:

First. That these Societies express through this medium, their deep appreciation for the untiring cooperation and loyalty of this dear member; our admiration for her Christian character and womanly qualities; ous sincere desire and purpose to carry on the work she loved; our prayer that God may use her memory to bring others into this work so dear to her heart.

Second. That, while we grieve over our loss, we may do so with the submissive spirit of the aged husband who said, "I never prayed for her that I did not say, 'Thy will be done.'"

Third. That we extend to the family our sympathy and express our consolation that in their bereavement they have the comfort that comes to those who trust in God.

Fourth. That a copy of these resolutions be entered on the records of these societies, a copy sent to the family, a copy to The Christian Sun for publication.

Shipbuilding Increases.—

Ship-building gained steadily during the past year throughout the world, there being nearly twice the amount during 1934 that was built during 1933. In all there was approximately 970,000 tons launched last year. Nearly half of this was British or Irish. Japan came second in amount, followed by Germany and Denmark. The United States came eighth, with only slightly more than 24,000 tons—one-fortieth of the total—but this small total represented a more than 100 per cent gain over the preceding year. Norway and Spain were the only countries in which ship-building is of any importance whatever that had less tonnage built than did we.

Alabama Votes Against State Repeal Plan.—

Alabama, this week, by popular vote sustained the State's rigid dry laws for the first time in her history. While Montgomery, Mobile and Birmingham voted heavily for repeal, many of the counties which two years ago gave majorities for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, voted with surprising consistency for the retention of the rigid State prohibition laws. Thus early returns from the cities giving majorities for repeal or modification, were steadily cut down and then eliminated by later returns. With 1,902 out of 2,156 precincts heard from at this writing, the vote stood as follows: First, for modification of existing dry statutes, 89,354; against, 93,998. Second, for legalization of beer and wine, 89,328; against, 93,872. Third, for legalization of hard liquor, 87,903; against, 95,085. The referendum had no legal standing, but was to serve as a mandate to the State legislature which will reconvene on April 30th to take action accordingly.

Arms Control Plan Upset.—

The arms control plan which grew out of the recent Senate munitions inquiry, suffered a severe set-back last week through the opposition of Great Britain. The proposed arms treaty which the United States submitted at the Geneva meeting would establish international control of the arms industry, regulating not only the traffic in arms, but the manufacturer as well. If the American plan were adopted, there would be a supervisory committee which would visit the various countries and verify reports. The British delegate to the Permanent Conference Committee on Arms Reduction, Earl Stanhope, proposed three vital modifications to the American draft of the treaty, designed to "simplify" the mode of procedure. Lord Stanhope found the supervisory body "too ambitious," thinking that it should be left to each country to file its own reports; he objected to the distinction made by the American plan between military and civil airplanes; but he favored inclusion of an article in the treaty forbidding subsidies for arms exports. In his contentions, he is supported by the Italian representative, while Hugh R. Wilson, the American representative is receiving the support of France and Poland.

The Government's Bank Program.—

Business Week thinks that "the Administration is about to achieve economic dictatorship in this country by the simple procedure of confiscating complete control of our banking and credit structure." And it continues: "Organized banking has done nothing to prevent this seizure, [fearing that] any protest of theirs might goad the Administration into more drastic schemes of confiscation and socialization, although just what might be more drastic than the implied ramifications of the present move is difficult to conceive." M. S. Eccles, the recently appointed governor of the Federal Reserve Board, in an effort to justify the Administration's move, says: "The banking system of this country has been put to a severe test and has not stood that test." This is acknowledged, but why the failure? The first was the encouragement, often the demand of the politically controlled Federal Reserve Board for investment in capital structures of the commercial credit of the country, where it inevitably became frozen and depreciated. Then there was the laxity with which bank charters were issued, and the competition between State and National banking systems, resulting in a constant weakening of the safeguards surrounding either type of banks. And lastly, incompetent and sometimes dishonest bank examinations under government control. There is nothing in the present program to overcome these evils. There has been ample proof that what is needed is a co-ordinated banking system, probably a unified system in this time of centralization, which may receive its original grant of authority from politicians, but would be removed as far from their machinations as possible.

"The Divine Right of Grab."—

We quote from an editorial in The Richmond News Leader of last Tuesday: "Eugene Grace's admission yesterday that he had received $12,280,000 in bonuses during 1917-31 as head of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation was, of course, simply an elaboration of facts brought to light in January-April, 1931, during the proceedings to enjoin the proposed merger of his concern and the Youngstown Company. In July, 1931, it was shown that Bethlehem—what a misnomer!— in seventeen years had paid $31,800,000 in bonuses and only $40,800,000 in dividends. Publication of the fuller details of Mr. Grace's own compensation serves, however, to show how capitalism is killing itself by greediness. The four most powerful blows to capitalism in this generation are generally said to be the organization of the Third International, the successful establishment of Soviet Russia, the foolish support of 'white Russian' counter-revolution by the Western powers, and the wide circulation of clever communist literature. We doubt if all these, combined at their worst, have damaged American capitalism as much as the Bethlehem bonuses, the peculations of J. W. Harriman, the manipulations of Charles E. Mitchell, formerly of the National City Bank, and the probe of the income-tax returns of the Morgan partners. . . . Adherence to the 'divine right of kings' cost the Stuarts a throne and the Hanoverians an empire: the persistent assertion of the divine right of grab may prove no less expensive to the lords of American capitalism."

"Precious" Aluminum.—

Just fifty years has passed since the capstone was placed on the Washington Monument in the capital of our nation. Pausing from its more weighty duties on Thursday of last week, Congress noted with appropriate resolutions this anniversary of its acceptance of this monument to the Father of his Country. The years that have intervened have seen many changes, and the capstone itself reminds us of a most significant one. It is made of aluminum, and was probably the first casting to be made from that metal in this country. When the engineer in charge of construction, Col. T. William Casey, was looking for a suitable metal with which to cap the monument, particularly one that would protect it from lightning, a German immigrant, Frishmuth by name, suggested this rare new metal. He declared that while it would cost more than a platinum-plated bronze cap, "it would not tarnish, is an excellent conductor of electricity, and it would raise much curiosity." His offer was accepted, and "after hard work" he succeeded in casting "a perfect pyramid of pure aluminum made of South Carolina corundum." It was displayed in a window of Tiffany's in New York before being finally placed atop the monument. The cap weighed exactly one hundred ounces and cost $36.00 a pound. The present price is around 20 cents. Aluminum was first isolated in pure form by the Danish scientist, Hans Oersted, in 1825. In the middle of the eighteenth century, Napoleon III commissioned the chemist Deville to find a way of producing enough of this new metal to equip the French army. Only enough, however, was produced to make the buttons for Napoleon's own uniform, and the cost of these was approximately $545 a pound. Several years ago a building, constructed entirely of glass and aluminum, was erected in Richmond, Virginia, to house the city's public utilities department.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Rev. G. C. Crutchfield was a visitor at Elon last week.

Mr. Colclough, field secretary of Elon College, reports that the prospects for an increased student body for 1935-36 are the best that he has known for years.

Mr. I. W. Pritchard, of Chapel Hill, a former member of the Board of Trustees of Elon College, died February 17th, at 7:00 P. M., at his home in Chapel Hill.

Quite a number of Elon College alumni were back at the college for the mid-year meeting of the Association and home-coming basketball game Saturday, February 16th.

Rev. J. L. Neese, pastor of the Christian Church at Reidsville, is at present on a visit to Florida. Here's wishing for Brother Neese's health and happiness in the Sunny South!

Mrs. J. E. Rawls, of Suffolk, Virginia, accompanied Dr. Rawls to Elon College February 19th. Dr. Rawls came to attend the mid-year meeting of the Board of Trustees.

President L. E. Smith attended the annual meeting of the Eastern Virginia Elon College Alumni Association in the Suffolk Church, Friday, February 22nd, at 6:30 P. M.

There was a good attendance of the members of the Board of Trustees of Elon College at the mid-year meeting Tuesday, February 19th. A number of progressive steps in the interest of the college were taken by the Board.

Mrs. W. Staley Wicker, wife of W. Staley Wicker, the son of Dr. W. C. Wicker of the college faculty, died at their home in Atlanta, Ga., Monday, February 18th. She was buried in the Elon Cemetery Friday, February 22nd, at 2:00 P. M. Sympathy is expressed to the family.

THE SUN'S managing editor enjoyed a most enjoyable though unexpected visit in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Shirley Holland of Windsor, Va., last week, notwithstanding the immediate cause. Returning Friday night with Mrs. Kernodle, from the Eastern Virginia Elon Alumni Banquet, the fuel pump on the car suddenly refused to operate just two miles outside of Windsor. Mr. and Mrs. Holland were, fortunately for the writer, just behind in their car, and our hearty thanks are due them for a most pleasant ending to an unfortunate incident.

CONCORD.

Concord Church, Caswell County, N. C., is undertaking an addition to the present house of worship, enlarging its seating capacity. The congregation was very enthusiastic in starting the work at once. A committee was appointed and a financial subscription was begun. The material will be placed in the yard at once and workmen will begin to carry forward the plan according to the wishes of the local congregation.

The North Carolina and Virginia Conference convenes here in November, 1935.

L. L. WYRICK.

SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIPTS FOR JANUARY AND FEBRUARY.

Below are given the receipts on SUN subscriptions for January and to Monday, February 25th. These have been credited on our books and address labels changed to proper date as shown by our records. If your name has been omitted from this list or your lable does not show the proper credit, we will appreciate your advising us. We appreciate the subscriptions that have been sent, and would urge others that they examine their labels, and if in arrears that they will send in at least something on their account.

With best wishes,

J. T. KERNODLE,
Managing Editor.

NOTICE.

The next session of the Pastors' and Laymen's Conference of the East Alabama Association of Congregational and Christian Churches will meet with the Nconday Christian Church, four miles east of Wedowee, on the fifth Sunday in March. A full attendance for this conference is desired. Rev. J. D. Dollar is the president and very cordially says, "Come on and let's make this a worthwhile meeting!" Every church in the Association should elect its delegates at once and arrange to see that they are present.

NOTICE.

The program for the March meeting of the Piedmont Ministerial Association is as follows:

Book Study, Chapters 1, 2 and 3 of "Evangelism in the New Age,"—by Austen Kennedy de Blois. Leader, J. H. Lightbourne.

Devotions by G. H. Crutchfield.

Ministerial Problems, "The Minister and His Brother Minister." Leader Arnold Slater.

THE COLLEGE CAMPAIGN.

By the time this article is read, the period set apart for the college campaign in the churches will have come to a close. It has been the policy of the Convention to assist in the support of the college by apportioning definite amounts to every local church within the Convention to be paid to the conferences for the churches or direct to the college. Every church in the Convention has been asked to participate in this campaign and has been assigned a definite quota to be raised and forwarded to the college. It was the purpose of the Convention that these contributions be made during the months of January and February. Following this period comes the Missionary period. If the churches would handle these different campaigns during periods assigned, it would simplify the local church's program greatly and they all would be more successful.

To date, only one church—Mt. Auburn—has sent in its full quota. A total of seventy churches have sent in a contribution from the church direct received during the educational period. Others have sent in money on Dollar-A-Month Club and Fifth Sunday Offerings, which the Convention did not contemplate allowing on the church quota but, with the hope of encouraging local churches to raise their full quota, the college has agreed to let all money coming from the church or the church's organizations to the college be counted as a part of the church's contribution.

The college was conceived by the Convention and became an actual reality and a force in the life of the church by the Convention. Naturally, the college looks to the church for support and guidance. The churches, through their local conferences, have pledged such assistance to the college. The college is greatly in need of financial assistance at this time.

The administration is greatly concerned for the remainder of this year. We have been able to balance our budget so far, paying the teachers on a twelve-months' basis. With the most careful planning and the observance of the strictest economy, we will be able to complete financial matters even until June 1st, provided the churches, the alumni, and the friends of the college will contribute a total of $7,000. This can be done if every church and every individual will do his part. It cannot be done, however, by churches and individuals postponing, neglecting, and finally failing to make an effort on a contribution. We get things done by "putting our shoulders to the wheel" and doing them.

This is an appeal—a heart appeal—to all of the churches of the Convention to come to the assistance of the college at this time. We have done our best. We have operated the college thus far at the smallest possible cost and with the greatest degree of efficiency. Won't you please show your appreciation of the sacrificial efforts that are being made for the college by doing what you can to assist now? Brother Pastor, if your church has not received an offering, won't you please see that it is done or take the time to write me the reason why the canvass has not been made, stating what time it will be made or giving the reasons why it will not be made? With the proper assistance, the college can balance its current budget, which will greatly increase its appeal for students and for funds. We are depending on you!

L. E. Smith.

GIVING THE NEGRO A SQUARE DEAL.

The following is from the Christian Index, the official organ of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, published in Jackson, Tenn.:

"There's no 'rest-room' for colored women. If they get accommodation, it's after other women have been served, to say nothing of colored men who travel on a bus if they get along, must catch as catch can. If the bus is crowded, the colored passenger must get up and get out of his or her seat, and alternate to suit the whims and prejudice and convenience of other people. O there is nothing like it under the sun, if you look at it from a standpoint of equal accommodation for equal pay. We've often wondered as to what the bus folk have in their minds with regards to offering to become a common carrier of white and colored alike. They seem to have no conception of a colored person's comfort, riding on a bus."

We have not traveled over the country enough to pass judgment on this criticism, as it relates to the buses of the entire country. The most of the long trips we have taken have been on trains outside of Virginia, but we have been using the bus lines a great deal in Virginia—especially the Peninsula Lines, The Virginia Stage Line, and the East Coast. We have observed things on the lines mentioned in these lines quoted, and so far in Virginia we have seen no discrimination. In a number of cases we have seen special and marked care and attention shown colored people by the drivers and the ticket agents. Only yesterday, traveling the Virginia Stage Line from Charlottesville, we could not fail to see special attention the driver gave to colored passengers. He was as careful of their rights as he was of the others, handled their baggage for them and saw that they were cared for.

We have been struck with cases of crowded buses how well the drivers handled matter. Recently one driver took two colored girls from the rear and filled it with the other passengers and sat the colored girls beside him at the front. He was as courteous and considerate as any man could have been.

It is doubtless true that these charges can be substantiated in the South, but we believe the above credit ought to be given to these bus lines operating in Virginia. We are making progress in working out this tangle and sympathetic cooperation will do more than caustic criticism.

We have always held strongly for equal justice in such matters. When public carriers take a dollar from a white man and a dollar from a black man, each man should have equal service and accommodations for money paid for his transportation. We believe here in Virginia this conviction is growing among those who serve the public. We believe it will continue to grow. We must stand for that which is just and fair in these matters, and we must cooperate to bring about a condition of good understanding and sympathy that will eliminate any such injustice alluded to in this charge. And we must also be fair enough to give credit for what is being done. It will be a great help in making more progress.—Editor J. M. Rowland in Richmond Christian Advocate.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.

5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

ELON COLLEGE ALUMNI MEET IN MID-YEAR SESSION.

For the past two years, it has been the custom of the college to call together those members of the Alumni Association who were teaching in high schools near enough to the college to drive in for the meeting. The purpose of these meetings has been to discuss with teachers and principals of the high schools who are interested in Elon methods of interesting high school graduates eligible for college in Elon. These meetings have been quite successful.

This year, the invitation was inclusive. Every alumnus and former student of the college was invited. The meeting was held Saturday afternoon, February 16th, at 2:00 in the Society Hall in Alamance Building. Mr. M. L. Patrick, of High Point, President of the Alumni Association, presided. The program consisted of short discussions in the interest of Elon. The discussions centered around the achievement of the college this year, the possibility of securing additional students in September, the financial requirements of the college, in how the alumni might assist in helping to solve these and other problems.

As an attraction for the approaching commencement, it was voted that the entire campus, if possible, be lighted with Japanese lanterns on alumni night. The "Alumni march" will perhaps be initiated at Elon on this occasion and the march be marked out by lanterns carefully selected and artistically arranged. In order to accomplish this fete, it was voted that every alumnus be requested to send in his personal lantern. Everyone who has been at Elon College will want to have a part in this attractive program. It will require at least 1500 lanterns. Of course, if anyone wishes to send more than one lantern, it is his privilege. The committee appointed to look after this feature of commencement was Miss Margaret Rowland, of Greensboro, N. C., Chairman, Mr. C. W. Elder, of Burlington, N. C, and Mr. A. T. West, of Burlington, N. C.

Another important feature of the meeting was the action of the Association adopting as its slogan, "Elon will by our wills," meaning, of course, that the college will be supported because we will to support it. It takes more than talk; it will take action and cash. And further, the slogan means that every alumnus of the college will be asked to remember the college in his last will and testament. He may be able to bequeath a small or a large amount. If only $1.00, by his last will and testament, he will express his love for and interest in his Alma Mater. This seems to me to be a most significant step.

It was reported at the meeting that the General Alumni Association had been instrumental in organizing five local alumni units—High Point, Winston-Salem, Lee County, Charlotte, and also Greensboro. Mr. Patrick stated that the Association had set ten additional units as the goal for the year.

The second issue of the Maroon and Gold, sponsored by the alumni, will appear in a few days. L. E. S.

THE ELON COLLEGE PULPIT.

Some adventurous friend of the college advertised, through Ripley, and to the world that Elon College was a town in North Carolina, the home of 14 ministers and of some 300 citizens, but did not have a church. This piece of information was taken up by some state papers and given further publicity. Of course all who knew anything about Elon College know how absurdly untrue such a statement is. Elon College does have a church. It has a church with a membership of several hundred, with all the organizations that go to make up a modern church. The writer of this article happens to be the pastor of the church and has been active in the pastorate for a quarter of a century.

The students, faculty, and townspeople of Elon College have opportunities in gospel preaching rarely accessible to a local congregation. The pastor only preaches on an average of once a month. Other Sundays are supplied by many of the outstanding preachers of today. The following have spoken at the college since school opened in September, 1934: Dr. S. B. Turrentine, a Methodist divine and President of Greensboro College for Women. Our own Hermon Eldredge, now deceased not only spoke on Sunday, but conducted a week's meeting at the college chapel. Dr. G. I. Humphreys, President of High Point College. Dr. Humphreys is a minister and an educator of wide reputation. Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Mission Secretary of the Southern Christian Convention and editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Dr. J. M. Rowland, author, lecturer, and minister of wide influence. Dr. L. S. Dodson, head of the Christian Education Department of Elon College. Mr. F. F. Myrick, a former professor of Elon College, now an attorney and member of the First Christian Church of Greensboro. Judge Felix Alley, one of the outstanding christian laymen of the state. Rev. Frank Apple, graduate of the college and pastor of rural churches in North Carolina. Dr. W. C. Wicker, minister, lecturer, and head of the Department of Education at Elon College. Dr. Clyde Milner, President of Guilford College. Dr. James H. Lightbourne, Pastor of the First Christian Church, Burlington. Rev. A. D. Kinnett, Pastor of the First Baptist Church in Burlington.

Our list of speakers for the spring include: Dr. Milo J. Sweet, pastor-at-large for the Carolinas, will speak February 24th. On March 3rd, Dr. Albert W. Palmer, President of Chicago Theological Seminary, a lecturer and author with an international reputation. March 17th, Rev. F. C. Lester, Pastor of the First Christian Church in Norfolk, Virginia. March 24th, Dr. W. J. Campbell, President of Atlanta Foundation at Vanderbilt University. April 7th, Dr. Lewis T. Reed, of New York City. April 14th, Dr. H. Shelton Smith, of Duke University. April 28th, Dr. C. E. Hawthorne, of Washington, D. C. May 5th, Dr. John R. Scotford, of New York City. Few pulpits, I think, can offer such a variety of efficient service to any group of worshippers.

The Elon College Church assumes its share of the support of the enterprises and institutions of the Convention and proposes to provide its quotas as requested by the Convention through the conference. The Church raised its quota for the orphanage, will raise its quota for the college—which will be announced not later than next week—and will, by conference, raise other required amounts. It has an active Sunday school and an active Missionary Society. The Elon College Church makes its worthwhile spiritual and devotional contributions to the college and community. We are proud of our church and of what we do because of our great love for our Lord.

DR. ALBERT W. PALMER TO VISIT ELON.

(MARCH 3RD AND 4TH.)

Elon College has had the privilege of welcoming a large number of influential educators and religious leaders to her campus. She has had the happy privilege of welcoming Dr. Palmer on previous occasions. His visit this time, however, is for a larger and a wider purpose. In addition to preaching on Sunday at 11 o'clock in the college chapel, he is to meet with the representatives of the Missionary Societies in North Carolina at the college on Monday; and it is hoped that every Society will be represented. The Missionary Societies of all the churches in Burlington have been invited to attend this meeting.

Dr. Palmer has written one of the mission study books for this year, The Orientals in America. He is to teach this book to this missionary group. It is indeed a rare opportunity for all who are interested in missions to have the author teach his own book. It is hoped that not only representatives of the Missionary Societies of our local churches but that all ministers and as many laymen who can will avail themselves of this unusual opportunity. Dr. Palmer's background, training, and experience fit him most admirably to write on the topic presented; and certainly he is fitted to speak on his own book.

All who come are asked to bring their lunches with them. Facilities at the college, with our enlarged student body, are not sufficient to afford dining room facilities to all who come. The College Church, however, will serve hot drinks to all.

Societies in Virginia.

Following the Elon College meeting, Dr. Palmer will leave immediately for Suffolk, Virginia, where he will address a simiar gathering of the Virginia Societies and churches. Mrs. J. E. Cartwright, of Norfolk, Virginia, is president of the Women's Society in Eastern Virginia and is providing for this meeting. This is an urgent suggestion to the Societies and churches in that section to avail themselves of this opportunity. You will be glad to know Dr. Palmer and will be greatly benefitted by his message. He is a most interesting and delightful speaker. He is speaking on a topic that is of great interest to you and the cause that you represent.

Through the efforts of Mrs. L. E. Smith, Elon College, Dr. Palmer has been secured for this program in behalf of the missionary cause. Don't forget the dates—Elon, March 3rd and 4th; Virginia, March 5th! L. E. S.

CRIME AND ITS PREVENTION.

By J. K. David.

One of the greatest troubles of the American people is the fact that they do not appreciate their country and the social, political, and religious heritage that has come down to them from the noble forefathers with that country. This state of mind that the American people are afflicted with demonstrates the established idea that man puts value only on things which he labored to get and worked hard for.

Today we have the greatest country on earth. Yet, our conduct as citizens shows that we are unaware of that fact and ignorant of the privileges it affords us.

The United States is more resourceful, more beautiful, more romantic, more fascinating and captivating than any one country in the world. Its standards of living are the highest of any. Its constitutional democracy,—nothing like it under the sun. The achievement, enlightenment, and culture of its people is second to none. Its churches, its public schools, its fraternal organizations, its different public agencies for the welfare of its people are unequalled from the standpoint of contribution and money expending.

Still, with this unexcelled magniture, this unparalleled greatness in the history of mankind, which we inherited and are now enjoying, without laboring or struggle, we have become lax and indifferent.

We are too selfish. We have given ourselves up to material things and money madness until we have become unequipped with the necessary moral fortitude that will preserve and keep for us this precious and wonderful heritage; we have allowed ourselves to be overcome by money, social ills, and political evils, through our unalertness and indifference, until these evils come very near destroying us and that which we call our civilization.

Crime in its worst forms and ways and on an unprecedented scale and fury, has established its throne among us. It has so entrenched its wicked forces that we are at last—thank God—beginning to get alarmed. We are just commencing to realize that the great heritage, which was bought by the blood of the forefathers, and which we received free of charge, must be fought for in order to be kept. Once we wake up to that fact, we will have made a turn to the right.

I honestly and sincerely believe that if the crime waves that have been pounding and furiously battering at the shores of our civilization and would destroy society, if left alone, can wake up within us as citizens of this great country, a sense of responsibility and duty to our country. To keep it the "land of the free and the home of the brave," the price exacted from us so far by crime will not have gone for naught.

Crime has developed itself to such a great menace and the criminals have become so organized that the American people cannot and must not any longer shut their eyes to the grave problem it presents. It is, indeed, alarming to note the daring, the boldness, and the brazenness of the criminals. They actually laugh at the courts of justice; they ridicule the agencies of law enforcement, and capitalize the apparent surrender and submissive mood of society. The danger of this state of affairs lies not in our inability to combat and suppress this menace if once our people are aroused to visualize its threatening dangers, but in our indifference, taking things for granted, without raising a resentful voice or utering a vexed protest, submitting complacently to its grave consequences as a matter of course. We must become individually and collectively conscious that each of us has a personal responsibility to shculder. Once we can get every law-abiding citizen to think that it is his personal task and solemn duty to suppress crime, our success will begin to be assured. The churches, the civic organizations, the fraternal orders, public agencies of all kinds, and last but not least, the press should take cognizance of the present appalling conditions and become animated by the urging necessity to take hand in the movement against crime. The press can certainly help matters considerably if at least it stayed neutral without making so much of the criminals and criminal stories and activities.

Take our news papers—every day, news of killings, murderings, kidnappings, robbery, banditry, and all sorts of crime and violation of the laws of God and man fill their front and prominent pages. Crime news and criminal pictures are flashed and displayed as though they were an essential part of our social life.

I cannot conceive what benefit can be derived especially for our youth, from publishing on papers' front pages, pictures of a several times divorcee, simply because she is about to get married again, to be divorced again. Did any of our most illustrious and noble men ever get a berak on the news papers' pages with John Dillinger or Bruno Hauptmann of "Baby Face" Nelson or Al Capone? The average American boy can repeat by heart the names of twenty criminals, describe their looks, recite their daring feats in the commission of crime, but has to study mighty hard to remember one name of the social and moral reformers of our country. He certainly cannot recite one outstanding thing they did. The average American girl can count many movie actresses who have divorced several husbands and remarried as many times, but cannot suggest the name of a single great American woman who gave her life for the cause of her sex.

If we make a hero of John Dillinger and our boys like to be pictured as heroes, they are going to emulate John Dillinger. If we make a star of a movie actress who was divorced and married as many times as she played, and our girls like to be stars, they are going to imitate this actress.

As long as our papers, and incidentally, we, as readers, because we sanction their action by our silence, relegate the news and activities of the moral writer, the social reformer, the ardent evangelist to some obscure corner on its inside pages, and features Al Capone and John Dillinger and Ma Barker on the front pages we will have the unfortunate conditions we are harrassed with now.

I am not here to tell you something that you do not know, but I am here to declare that the crime conditions must be met and met now. The Church, and when I say the church, I mean both the clergy and the laymen, is the one great agency for good. It has a responsibility, and this responsibility must be shouldered. If the church fails in meeting this task, no other agency will succeed.

Now, there are three phases or directions in which the church can extend its hand to help relieve the situation.

First, the restoring of the home life. The ministers are in a better position to prescribe the remedy for that.

Second, the enlivening of the people's interest in church work and spiritual things. This embraces the gigantic effort to enroll every child in the community in the classes of the Sunday Schools. As the home is the source of supply of the Sunday School, so the Sunday School is the basis of the real Christian home.

Third, the pointing out and the urging upon every church member to be a 100 per cent citizen, that is, to register, qualify, and vote. The church should point out that real, good citizenship embodies the above named duties. It is not necessary that the church should tell its members how to vote; it suffices to urge upon them the imperative moral duty they owe to their country. Church members must not only be willing, but eager to serve their country as voters, as jurors, as public officials. They owe it to the community to bring into politics and public life the spirit of religion, which is the spirit of honest dealing, of justice, of honorable behavior.

Until we have come to realize and apprcciate what these privileges mean to us and so exercise them as an avowed duty, we cannot expect to improve our social and political life.

ROSEMONT AND HER OFFERINGS.

We, as members of Rosemont, are proud of our church, one of the few churches in Tidewater that had no debt attached to it when built and could be dedicated at once. We have been able to keep out of the red side of the ledger so far.

Many a treasurer would envy me, for it is a pleasure to be the treasurer of a church which is not burdened with debts. What an easy job it is to keep the records of a church that has money and its members are anxious to meet their pledges and for their church to meet her obligations.

Rosemont has been able to make liberal contributions to missions, the orphanage and to Elon College. The amount given to these organizations compares very favorably with churches of much larger memberships than ours.

We are proud of Rosemont for the way she has raised her money, not by suppers or sales, but by free will offerings, each member doing his part.

Yes, we are proud of Rosemont and her offerings, of her name and reputation in the conference —we are proud of her building, her organ, her pastor and loyal members. Loyal members make a loyal church; we are more than proud of those members who have paid their pledges up to date. May we pledge along with our financial support, a more loyal attendance to every church service, and to all of her business meetings, so Rosemont may be a greater power for good in our community. May we make her "the friendly church by the side of the road" where many may love to turn in and worship.

H. L. Bondurant, Treas.

EVERY CASE MET.

If you are impatient, sit down quietly and commune with Job.

If you are strong-headed, read of Moses and Peter.

If you are weak-kneed, look at Elijah.

If there is no song in your heart, listen to David.

If you are a politician, read Daniel.

If you are getting sordid, read Isaiah.

If you are chilly, read of the beloved disciple.

If your faith is low, read Paul.

If you are getting lazy, watch James.

If you are losing sight of the future, read in Revelation of the promised land.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Annual Banquet of the Elon Alumni Club of Eastern Virginia was held in the Fellowship Hall of the Suffolk Christian Church, Friday, February 22, 1935, beginning at 7:00 P. M. About 125 former Elon students and friends were in attendance this year. Much credit should be given to Mrs. Annie Staley Calhoun, who is the efficient Secretary-Treasurer of the Club, for the success of the annual banquet.

A group of the Woman's Missionary Society, under the leadership of Mrs. W. H. Yates, served the banquet. The menu consisted of grapefruit, coffee, turkey, dressing, cranberry sauce, carrots, garden peas, celery, pickles, butter, hot biscuits, ice cream and cake. The hall was beautifully decorated with pine, ivy and ferns, and Elon pennants. The decorations for the tables were calendulas, forsythia in silver baskets and marcon candles in silver holders. The color scheme was carried out in the decorations and favors.

The following program was rendered: Song, "Here's to Elon"; Invocation, Dr. N. G. Newman; Address of Welcome, Dr. John G. Truitt; Response, Rev. H. S. Hardcastle; Committee Reports; Song, Rev. O. D. Poythress: Monologue, The Jewish Wedding, Rev. Wm. Redd Turner; Reading by Mrs. Mills Riddick; Duet, Revs. J. F. Morgan, O. D. Poythress; Address, Dr. L. E. Smith, President Elon College. The following officers were elected for the next two years and introduced to the audience: Dr. Darden W. Jones, Franklin, Va., President; Mrs. Russell T. Bradford, Suffolk, Va., Vice-President; Mrs. Annie Staley Calhoun, Secretary-Treasurer, Suffolk, Va. The benediction was pronounced by Dr. Elwood W. Jones of Franklin, Va.

The social feature of this Club is its chief asset. It has been understood from its organization that no effort shall be made to sponsor any financial movement for the College during the session of the annual banquet. The promoters of the Club believe that there should be some meeting of the Alumni for social fellowship. This Club has been an outstanding event in Suffolk for several years. Former Elon students enjoy the privilege of renewing acquaintances and friendships of other days. One group of students of the early "90's" designated themselves as "the old men's row." One of the veterans of those good old days said: "If this is the old men's row, I'm going to move, for I am not old yet." Good for Frank Holladay! It's fine for a man to hold on to the vision of the future—for the future never grows old. People who live in the past grow old more rapidly than people who look to the future. Much depends upon which way one looks.

Strong ties of friendship are fostered in the classroom and on the campus of a Christian College, such as Elon. Elon College has made a great contribution to every group of students who have been permitted to come under its guidance. People who work and play together in College, appreciate the privilege of an occasion which brings them together in an informal banquet. The value of such a meeting will be reflected in a more generous support of the College in the years to come. An evening of fun and good-will can do more to dispell the clouds and lift the burdens of financial distress than a volume of depressing arguments. It is worth something to sit down to a good dinner and forget for an hour that your debts are unpaid. The debts will come to your attention tomorrow; but your mind has relaxed, and your soul has received a new inspiration, and added new power for the greater tasks of life.

Elon College will survive her present difficulties if the alumni, faculty, trustees, students and other friends will cultivate the spirit of good-will and sincere friendship, forgive and forget narrowness of the past and seek the promotion of the spiritual ideals of Jesus Christ in the classroom on the campus and in the active service of the state and nation.

I. W. Johnson.

THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES MEETS.

The Board of Trustees of Elon College met in mid-year session in the president's office Tuesday morning, February 19th, 9:30 A. M. The meeting was opened with prayer by Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, Pastor of the Durham Christian Church, President of the Southern Christian Convention, and Assistant Moderator of the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches. There were 19 in attendance. The members of the Board living out of the state of North Carolina attending were: Dr. J. E. Rawls, of Suffolk, Virginia, a member of the Investment Committee for the college; Dr. H. K. Eversull, of Cinncinnati, Ohio; Dr. Russell J. Clinchy, of Washington, D. C.; Rev. A. W. Andes, of Harrisonburg, Virginia; and Dr. William H. Day, of Bridgeport, Connecticut. Dr. Day, Dr. Clinchy, and Mr. J. A. Kimball, of Manson, N. C., were present for their first regular meeting of the Board.

The president's report showed that there are 92 more matriculated students at Elon College this year than last year and that there has been a gain of $12,755.18 in income for the college from the student body. These gains are significant and indicate the progress that the college is making.

It was pointed out that in order to prepare for further prospective gains at the college, it is necessary to provide additional rooming space for students for next year's enrollment. The improvements suggested were to turn the old Publishing House into a regular dormitory for men, installing a heating plant and other necessary conveniences. The second floor of the Publishing House is at present used for such purposes. To condition the whole building for rooming purposes would provide space for some fifty young men. And the reconditioning and furnishing of Ladies' Hall for girls will provide additional space for approximately fifty girls. From present indidcations, these additional spaces will be needed. It is estimated that these improvements will cost approximately $5,000. A new pump for the college well is another necessary improvement. This will cost $1,100. These improvements were voted by the Board of Trustees and a committee representing the church, the alumni, and the Board of Trustees to assist in securing these amounts required for improvements was authorized.

The Board again faced the question of adjusting and settling the debts of the college. A plan for settlement was proposed and a committee appointed to confer further with the creditors in the hope of reaching a basis of settlement at an early date. Negotiations in this particular have been most encouraging. As progress is made in this important direction, the church will be informed. If the proposed plan of settlement can be carried out, the outlook for the college will indeed be bright.

The Board considered carefully the proposal of the Eastern Virginia Conference to turn over to the college the six $1,000 bonds held by the Educational Committee of that Conference on the condition that definite cash consideration be given to ministerial students belonging to and recommended by the Eastern Virginia Conference. The Board voted its approval. This perhaps is the first long step toward the settlement of the college's debts.

The John M. W. Hicks Loan Fund established. In January of this year, Mr. John M. W. Hicks, of Raleigh and of New York City established at Elon College the John M. W. Hicks Loan Fund for the purpose of assisting worthy students without funds desiring to enter Elon College. The amount of this Fund is $175. Mr. Hicks suggests that others may wish to make additional gifts to the Fund as time goes on. The Board recognized with gratitude this generous act of Mr. Hicks' and so expressed itself. It was also the hope of the Board that others might follow the example of Mr. Hicks, either contributing to this particular Fund or establishing loan funds in their own names. There are a great many students in North Carolina—and other states, as for that—who have brilliant minds, high ideals, and commendable ambitions and who realize that a college training is essential if they are to make a reasonable contribution to their day, but who are without funds. Individuals with means or who can spare a few hundred dollars to set up loan funds of this character will render an ever-enlarging service to society and to the world. This would seem to be a most inviting avenue of service. I hope that others may be interested in establishing loan funds at the college. This can be done without the funds' being jeopardized in the least, regardless of the present or future financial condition of the college. My dear reader, if you are interested, will you please write me?

ANOTHER LAYMAN WRITES.

In reply to a Layman's inquiry in the Sun.

I wish to say, that in my opinion, the main cause for the deplorable condition of the Church in the present age or of any age, is a neglected or ignored prayer-life and a disregard for the Lord's command on the part of many Church members and some of them leaders of their respective churches and I believe the Scriptures sustain my conviction.

Prayer has been, now is, and always will be, the foundation of God's Kingdom. It is the most momentous part of a Christian life, for it is the line of communication between us and our Heavenly Father, from whom cometh all our help. Great importance is attached in wartime to maintaining an unbroken line of communication between the fighting forces and their base of operation, but it is even more imperative between us and our spiritual base, in our daily life, and in our combat with sin and satan. Jesus spent much time in prayer and communication with His Heavenly Father and admonished His disciples to "Pray that ye fall not into temptation." How much more, therefore, are we in need of communication with Him who invites us to ask, seek and knock, and especially in the present difficult, restless, and materialistic times, beset with all manners of temptation, which we cannot combat successfully without a daily supply of Grace and power from on high. Every Christian ought to know these facts, yet it seems to me that, in many cases, the material things of this life have crowded out or crushed the spiritual life, that apparently the house of God has lost its sanctity, the services their joy and power, and ministers the influence and esteem accorded them in former days.

There are churches with large memberships and only an average attendance of less than twenty-five at the midweek prayer service and a small per cent of the membership at the regular Sunday services. What can be expected from such churches? "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God." Matt. 6:33, seems changed or reversed, for the people have gone mad over amusements, pleasures and indulgences, both innocent and harmful. But patronage of movies, card games, parties, dance halls and liquor shops require considerable time and money, so that, in many instances, very little of either is available for the church and her enterprises.

"Will a man rob God?" Mal. 3:8, and "Why spend money for that which is not bread? and your labor for that which satisfieth not?" Isa. 55:2. Will a praying Christian do those things? Yet some ministers are confronted with such conditions. They are thereby handicapped and baffled in the discharge of their duties; and to make matters worse, some of their members render all kinds of flimsy excuses for the flagrant neglect of their duty to the church and her services. Among the excuses are weather conditions, long services and the way in which they are conducted, unpopular topics, and a host of other things not to their liking; and if the preacher ventures to speak against the prevailing evils of this modern generation, especially the legalized liquor traffic, the liquor users, the liquor dispensers and their friends get sore, the minister is openly criticised and finally has to resign, "for men love darkness rather than light." John 3:19.

To the casual observer this all must seem an ultimate failure of the church. "O, ye of little faith." Spiritual depressions were prevalent even in old Biblical times. When Israel strayed away from God, and Elijah had to go in hiding because he had reproved the king and proclaimed the truth, until he felt blue and all alone. But God had not left Himself without witnesses, for there were still six hundred in Israel that had not bowed to Baal nor forsaken God. Of course a mighty small percentage of a whole nation this was! But when God acknowledged Elijah's prayer by fire from Heaven, the people turned again to worship of the living God, demonstrating the words of Jas. 5:16: "The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." Ten praying Sodomites could have saved the wicked city of Sodom from destruction. The prayers of a few saints of the early Christian church opened prison doors and liberated the Apostle Peter; and through prayer, Peter raised the dead, healed the sick and fearlessly preached Jesus Christ.

God's arm is not shortened. He can still save His church by the faithful few, and in His own good time. He will again stir up His people by His mighty spirit and prayer will again become a great power and blessing among His people, for the love of God passeth all knowledge and His mercy is from everlasting unto everlasting.

NEWS FROM GEORGIA.

By REV. M. J. SWEET, Pastor at Large.

GEORGIA MINISTERS MEET AT PIEDMONT COLLEGE.

"This is the best meeting we have during the entire year. My whole program is all worked out, summer revivals, student summer service, and all."—Alan Jones.

"You know how I dislike long conferences. But I liked this one. I got something out of it that helps."—Bert Richards, Central Church, Atlanta.

"That was a wonderful meeting. You have a great group of splendid ministers. I was delighted to be with you."—Dr. Judson Cross, Boston, Mass.

"It was a great meeting, the best thing we have during the year."—Annie R. Campbell, Extension Worker.

And so on throughout. Every one gained inspiration, program material, cooperation, knowledge of the whole united work and the business of the state conference and the local associations; also information as to how other churches are meeting problems and opportunities—methods in finance, recruiting, sermon building, pastoral calling that counts, missionary apportionment—in short, all the helpful ways and means and methods the churches of the whole state are using in the progress of the work.

And then there were periods of devotions. How all were lifted by the wide awake opening hour of communion with God as Mr. Mowbray led us in song and prayer.

All this and very much more came to pass at Piedmont College, Demorest, Georgia, on Tuesday, February 12, 1935. It was the occasion of the third annual conference of ministers of our order in Georgia. We were fortunate in meeting at Piedmont College. The whole atmosphere was charged with uplifting emotion. There was life, genuine life, and it was shared by all. The hospitality of the college was outstanding. Dean Bellingrath and pastor Mowbray and Dr. Walker, teacher of philosophy and college chaplain—and in fact the whole faculty and student body united to make us welcome. And our church gave us a delightful chicken dinner Tuesday evening.

We were also fortunate in having Dr. Cross of Boston with us. He gave an inspiring address at Chapel, led our group in devotions and in conference on "The Pastor as Shepherd." We were all made confident that the day of pastoral calling is not passed, a relic of the good old days of yore.

It was unfortunate that four of our good ministers were absent. The following benefitted very much by sharing in building up the fellowship and efficiency of the churches: David W. Shepherd, of the Barnesville Parish; Theodore L. Leverett and James Mahaffey of the Macedonia Parish; W. Carl Parker of the Duncan's Creek Parish; Alan and Mrs. Jones of Friendship Parish; Henry B. Mowbray of the Demorest parish; Annie Campbell of the Roberta Parish; Bert Richards of Central Church, Atlanta; Dean George Bellingrath and Dr. Walker of Piedmont College; Dr. Judson Cross, Boston, Mass., and M. J. Sweet, pastor at large, Elon College, N. C.

COLUMBUS, GEORGIA.

Rev. Frederick Held, formerly of Jupiter, Fla., has accepted the call of the Columbus United Church and is at work. It has taken much time to shape things in this church preparatory to the welcoming of a new minister. Since the first of September, Miss Annie Campbell, extension worker for Georgia, has faithfully served this church. She worked with wisdom, the spirit of Jesus, kindness and love. Of course she was successful. The church was led into an up and up business way of doing things. A budget including everything that should go into the expense of carrying on a splendid church work was unanimously adopted and, what is more significant, it was practically all subscribed. There was no leaving things out because they seemed hard to face. The people had a mind to subscribe to the point of sacrifice and self denial and they did so.

Now the work of the new minister will carry the church into a repairing period when the parsonage and the church building will be thoroughly gone over with repairs, so much needed for several years. The Building Society is helping in this movement. Mr. Held knows he has a real man's job ahead of him and he is "Tackling like a man." Or, to change the figure a bit, in the language of the football field—"He is blocking and tackling and carrying the ball like an all-American full back." Strength to his arm! We are expecting much from this experienced man of God.

MISSIONARY APPORTIONMENTS.

The churches of the Congregational Conference of the Southern Convention closed their giving for 1934 with honor. Only one or two churches failed to pay apportionments. One or two failed entirely. But on the whole, these churches did unusually well and are to be congratulated, and God be thanked for the faithful giving of His people.

Now for 1935—what shall be done? Well, our fine church at Tryon, N. C., with Dr. John Brittan Clark as pastor, is the first to make a payment on the 1935 apportionment. It has paid over a half a hundred dollars already. That's good. Some other churches have started paying. Among them, Raleigh, United, Bethany, The Rock, Ga; Little Trinity, Lawrenceville, Ga. Southern Pines, The Church of Wide Fellowship. The two churches mentioned from Georgia deserve mention although they are not in the Southern Convention. The beginning of these churches is very good. Can any hinder that they do not pay in full before the year closes.

It should be said that some of the best churches to which new recruits are being added, are planning to pay at least quarterly—some do it monthly. May their tribe increase.

DUNCAN'S CREEK.

Duncan's Creek, Buford, Georgia, is going like a race horse in an exalted zeal to make their church more attractive and useful. This church owns a lot of land, some of it well timbered. In order to extend the building this summer and also to improve the grounds, and incidentally, raise money to pay the regular expenses of the church, recently twenty-five stalwart men volunteered to cut trees down, saw them into logs, carry logs to mill and so make a $1,000.00 worth of lumber this spring. This looks mighty good. This church is also planning to plant two acres of cotton—by consent of the government—the proceeds of which will go toward missionary apportionment and, possibly other benevolences. Are there other churches working along this line?

BARNESVILLE PARISH.

The pastor at large appreciates to the full the fine words given by the pastor, Rev. David W. Shepherd, in his quarterly report concerning his recent visit to these churches. Three of them sent all officers, including trustees, deacons, clerks, presidents of various auxiliaries to a meeting held at Meansville one night in January. With them the pastor at large went over all their work in a very helpful way. These churches were drawn more closely together, the business of them all was better appreciated and the program of each became helpful to all the others. The results were so helpful that the minister, Mr. Shepherd, recommends that other of our parishes arrange to have their parish officiaries meet the pastor at large for similar fellowship opportunities.

MISSIONS

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., Secretary.

THROUGH THE VALLEY OF THE SHADOW.

By Miss D. P. Cushing, News Editor.

Held as a Russian spy by Government forces until Chinese farmers recognized him, reported captured and dead, looted six times, and eight of his fellow missionaries tortured to death by Red soldiers, George W. Shepherd, who is just back from Shaowu, China, where for eight years he has been in close contact with Chinese Communists, is speaking extensively in the United States.

As a missionary of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, Mr. Shepherd with his wife, Dr. Clara Sargent Shepherd, specialist in rural health. has been at work in the heart of the Kiangsi-Fukien Soviet territory.

When the National Christian Council of China was invited to organize a program of Christian reconstruction in the devastated areas recently recovered from the Communists, George Shepherd was asked to become the Executive Secretary. With a team of Chinese volunteers from the Christian colleges of China he has been at work in the villages of Kiangsi and Fukien where he has organized what Sherwood Eddy calls "the most Christ-like piece of service I have ever seen in any land."

The Central Government in China today is winning its battle against the Communists not so much because of its fleets of bombers or its well-equipped modern trained army, but because it is applying a thoroughly constructive program of rehabilitation," declares Mr. Shepherd.

NEWS ITEMS OF SOCIETIES.

The Woman's Missionary Societies of Eastern Virginia Conference will have a study class in missions at Suffolk Christian Church, March 5th, 10:30 o'clock.

The Orientals in America is the topic and the leader is the distinguished author, the Rev. Dr. Albert W. Palmer, President of Chicago Theological Seminary. Dr. Palmer grew up among the orientals in California, went to college with them and lived among them in Redlands, Oakland and Honolulu, Hawaii. He taught orientals in the Pacific School of Religion and has visited China and Japan twice. He was minister of Central Union Congregational Church at Honolulu, Hawaii for seven years. Dr. Palmer is well qualified to interpret oriental life to Americans from first-hand knowledge.

All laymen and ministers and every member of Missionary Societies in Eastern Virginia are cordially invited to attend.

This is a very unusual privilege so do not fail to come. Mrs. Herbert Harrell.

Attention is called to the Bible Study for the year; the official study book recommended by the Woman's Mission Board is The Ministering Master.

Studies in the Gospel of St. Mark, by Mrs. S. H. Askew.

If you have not begun this study, start now; it never is too late to begin a good work. Mrs. W. H. Carroll, Superintendent Spiritual Life, 409 W. Front St., Burlington, N. C., will be glad to help you.

For the past nine years, a Day of World Wide Prayer for Missionaries, Missions and all connected in any way with this work, has been observed throughout the world in city, town and community.

March 8th is the date fixed for this day of prayer, and all women's societies and auxiliaries are urged to observe the day this year—March 8th.

In our prayers may we remember our Mission Secretary, praying that he may be restored to health and soon returrn to his beloved work.

Programs for the World Wide Day of Prayer may be obtained from The Pilgrim Press, 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass., or Committee on Women's Work, Henry Grady Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs W. H. Carroll.

"To those of you who are studying Japan, a mimeographed pamphlet entitled, 'The Japanese,' prepared by Mrs. D. E. Brown of the Commission on Missions, will be of interest. Mrs. Brown has compiled a great deal of information that will be of great help in preparing programs, whether you are using a study-book or building your own.

"Sections about Japan, Jos. Neesima, a Japanese Christian, everybody's friend, Kagawa, a Japanese party, recitations, receipes, are some of the headings. The pamphlet may be secured by writing Mrs. David E. Brown, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York, N. Y."

THE SOUTHEASTERN CONVENTION.

Raleigh, N. C., April 30th, May 1st and 2nd.

The following letter will reach all our Congregational-Christian ministers and churches within a few weeks. The letters have already gone to churches in Florida and Alabama.

Dear Friend:

The Southeast Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches will meet in Raleigh, N. C., April 30th, May 1st and 2nd. Every minister is a delegate, and the church is invited to send as many delegates, representing its various organizations, as it may desire. The object is to get the religious attitude of our entire constituency in the Southeast, and to formulate a program of religious advance.

We would like to have you as minister write us your own thought as to the situation. What is your thought as to the needs and opportunities of your particular parish? Please tell us your difficulties as well as your possibilities of growth. We want this information placed at the service of our entire group program for the Southeast.

What opportunity is there for cooperation in and among Protestant churches? What is the attitude of our ministers and churches toward cooperation with our Negro churches? What can we do to help our ministers? How can we make our greatest contribution, not only to the community, but to the world? What are the dangers that confront our churches?

Will you please write us as soon as possible, addressing your letter to Box 5325, Raleigh, N. C.

Very sincerely yours,

J. Edward Kirbye.

In answer to this letter, I have received a letter from our minister in Interlachen, Florida, dated February 18th. He is one of our fine ministers, with years of devoted service to his credit. He says:

"For a long time the interests you mention ought to have been on all our hearts, and surely have been, but there is an outstanding one quite too often neglected at our conference and association meetings. As the programs come to me I feel deeply the omission of the vital thing. It has seemed at times as if there was a purposed side-tracking of evangelism. In the critical mood toward the evangelist, and opposition to anything like 'mass evangelism' we have swung too far away from our supreme work of winning individuals to Jesus Christ.

"This no criticism of the Council for Social Action and its objectives, but sometimes enthusiasm for some new ideas may weaken efficiency in the chief issues. The church is not an enlarged Kiwanis Club nor a Civic League.

"The need everywhere today is the need in my church, and in the community, of spiritual quickening, realization of the reality of God and His laws and the Saviorhood of Christ. Taking Jesus in earnest would mean that we accepted Him into our lives. We have lost power because we have turned from the Christ of the Gospels. This is the greatest danger to our churches.

"After our failure to meet the deepest spiritual needs of our churches, the grave dangers are movies, beer and liquor, the return to alcoholism, with Mencken, the Debunkers, editors and a host of powers on the offensive.

"Dr. Kirbye, it is a time for prayer, contrition. I would like to know of a convention of ministers and laymen devoting a large share of the hours to prayer and the deep spiritual side of things. May I venture to suggest one special feature for the Southeast Convention? Could not the Convention have devotional hours with a spiritual man for leader?"

I have only quoted sentences from this long-time ministerial friend of mine, Rev. C. DeW. Brower. This is the second letter that I have received suggesting this emphasis. The committee arranging the program expect to have an hour Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday for such a service. Dr. John Truitt of Suffolk, Va., Dr. Stanley Harrell of Durham, N. C., and Dr. John B. Clark of Tryon, N. C., will be the leaders of these devotional services.

J. Edward Kirbye.

A Story for the Children

WINGS.

It was Bobby's first morning on the mountain-top with Aunt Nell and Uncle Ted. His summers had been spent at the seashore and the vacation on a far-away mountain had not seemed to him to promise to be exciting. However, here he was, and as he looked from his little bedroom window his first thought was, "This window is just like a picture frame. That hill with the blue sky and clouds above it, and the cows going along among the ferns, is just like a picture."

He reached for his towel and went down to the back porch to wash.

"Good-morning, Bobby. Most ready for pancakes?" greeted Aunt Nell. "Breakfast will be ready in a jiffy, out on the veranda."

Bobby washed in a hurry and found his way out to the veranda where the table was set.

Bobby ate with a mountain relish, seeing everything that went on, which he thought was not much, compared with the seashore. No sparkling waves or little boats bobbing up and down. No smoke of steamers way out. Just green and green, and blue sky and clouds. Inside his mind was a question, "What could anybody write about for a composition, first week of school, when there is nothing going on? Not a moving thing at all."

Just then he heard the whirring of wings, almost a musical whirring. It seemed right near, yet he did not at once see what it was. Then he sat right still with his golden pancake on his fork and watched. There on the pink phlox was a ruby-throated humming-bird, darting at the flowers and away again, like a thing on unseen strings. It buzzed away, pointed its long bill and aimed it right for the honey in the flower, and darted again into the phlox, all the time keeping up such a steady fluttering of its tiny wings that Bobby could not see them move.

"Aunt Nell," he whispered, "look at that baby bird. What kind is it?"

"It's a ruby-throat, Bob. And it's a full-grown bird. See his throat in the sunlight as he turns? That's the color of a genuine ruby. The mother will be here soon. They are after honey for their babies."

"Did you ever see their wings stop?" asked Bobby. And Aunt Nell answered by telling him to watch for himself down in the garden any time, where, if he kept quiet and still, the birds would not be afraid of him.

After breakfast, Bobby was tearing up some rags for a kite tail, when he felt something almost touch him as he swung his feet off the step. "Whew!" he whistled. "That was a bird! It came down as swiftly as a bat!"

Again the light creature swooped low in front of the steps, and Bobby saw he was a swallow, with beautiful blue wings and tan vest.

"And their shadows are as pretty as they are, moving so fast over the yellow grass," he pondered. "How different they are from humming-birds!"

With Uncle Ned's help, the big kite was finally up. Bobby stood on the stone wall, holding the pulling string. Above him, white clouds were sailing like boats on a blue sea.

"What's that?" he cried. "A lighthouse up here on the mountains?"

"It's an air beacon, Bob. You just wait. The noon air mail will be along before we get this kite up very far."

"But what's it for? Someone up there signaling?"

"Oh, no, that's for the night air-mail planes. You'll see, tonight. It will make you think you are down at the shore when you see its light shine over the hills. Hark! There's the mail now. Hear its wings?"

Bobby cocked his head. "I hear it, but where is it? Oh, there, over the pines. Let's signal it."

Over it came, its great propellor and wide wings glistening in the sun. Bobby signaled by pulling the kite down and letting it up, and the big bird bird actually dropped a little in reply. Then on it went straight as the humming-bird, only its wings sounded a million times louder.

Bobby kept watching until it was lost, and as he brought his eyes down again, they were startled by the rushing of cloud shadows over the pasture hill. The wind was taking his fastened kite on a merry ride.

Dinner came. The humming-birds gathered their babies' honey. A crowd of noisy crows lifted up and down around a great brown hawk that sailed as prettily as a little ship. Over and over again as Bobby watched, he said to himself, "I'll write the composition about wings. Humming-birds', swallows', airplanes', kites', crows'—"

Before supper, he watched the wings of bees as they buzzed and sipped among the raspberry blossoms. He tried to catch a green katydid under the maples, and he spent a long time watching a whole family of baby bluebirds as they took flying lessons from their parents.

Bedtime finally came. The air beacon was lighted and looked just like a lighthouse. Its wide beams swept across the treetops and valleys, as regularly as the kitchen clock ticked. The night mail plane was expected to appear in the southern sky any minute with its green and red lights. Bobby sat waiting and watching. Suddenly he was almost frightened by the swooping down of a black bat, chittering its night call.

"Ooh!" he cried, "more wings! This mountain is full of them."

The giant wings of the plane were heard over the hill, the red and green lights appeared like a comet, and Uncle Ted flashed his nightly signal to the pilot—four flashes from his big flashlight.

Bobby went up to his little room. The window still framed a picture—stars, pines against a clear sky, and the tips of an orange moon over the dark hills.

"Tomorrow, I'll make a list of all the wings," Bobby whispered to himself. "Tomorrow—"—and he was fast asleep.—By Genevieve L. Hutchinson in Zion's Herald.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

Rev. F. C. Lester, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

GROWING GOOD WILL.

In these days of international suspicion and growing nationalism, it is refreshing to know that here and there people of different nations and races are learning to understand each other and to be kindly. A recent letter from Carl Key shows how this type of goodwill is growing among students in colleges and universities.

Carl will be remembered as a worker for the Board of Christian Education one summer and as president of the Western North Carolina Youth Fellowship. He is now studying at Vanderbilt University and hopes to go to Yale next year.

He sends a short poem which was written by a friend of his and was printed in "The World Outlook" (Nashville) for January of this year. Out of his own heart he wrote a response to the poem by his friend. This kind of fellowship does more to grow international goodwill and prevent war than all of the battleships America can build. When the deep yearnings of the heart are felt between people of different races and nations, then will come the time of universal peace. After all, the Japanse Christian feels about like an American Christian, and we are certainly all interested in the same thing.

The poems are given below with the hope that they may grow something of goodwill in our own hearts.

OVER YONDER.

Over yonder, across the prairie, in the west,
Where the evening sun goes down in its grace,
There lies the Pacific, the ocean of peace.
Pray, friends, let us keep it calm at rest!

Over yonder, beyond the sea, in the East,
Where the morning sun rises in its glory,
There lies Yamato, my dear country.
Pray she be kept in peace, sure and best!

Over yonder, beyond land and water,
Where East and West do meet in accord,
There lies my parish I guide and minister.
Pray she be a great nation in the eyes of our Lord!

Tatsuo Kuribayashi.

THIS SIDE.

This side, the prairie, in the East,
Where the sun rises in all its wonder,
Here lies vast expanses, calm at rest.
Fellowship shall bring peace here and "over yonder!"

This side the Pacific in the West,
Where the ties of friendship have made our hearts one,
Here lies the spot where we met as Christians.
Through brotherly living peace may be won!

This side, that side, man is man like the rest,
And God's universal love shall not cease,
Here lies the power to bind hearts to stand the test.
Brothers serve under the Cross, the emblem of peace!

—Carl R. Key.

NOTE TO EASTERN VIRGINIANS.

On Tuesday, March 5th, beginning at 10:30 in the morning and running through the day, there will be mission study at Suffolk Christian Church, with Dr. Albert W. Palmer as the leader. The text book will be "Orientals in American Life" written by Dr. Palmer.

All ministers, Sunday school superintendents, members of missionary societies, and others interested in international friendship should certainly plan to attend this meeting, if possible. Dr. Palmer comes from a busy life in Chicago University. We certainly ought to be able to go to Suffolk for the day. I am especially urging young people to be there.

WHAT CHRISTIANS DO FOR PEACE.

This syllabus on war and peace by Theodore A. Greene deals with The Religious Basis for our Interest in Peace, The Problem of Our Loyalty to the Church and the State, Our tragic Heritage from the World War, Some Causes of War and a Cure, Improving the World's Peace Machinery, The Rising Tides of Nationalism, Next Steps for Action Through Government, and Making a Beginning in Our Church. In brief, the study covers the development of the Christian attitudes towards war and peace, and how these attitudes have been reenforced by realistic study of the evils and futility of war, the various causes of war, and the tensions which exist between nations which lead to war-like attitudes. Twenty-five cents at Pilgrim Press, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

AT THE GRAY DAWN.

"At the gray dawn, while yet the world is sleeping
And the sweet matings of the birds begin,
One who hath held me in His holy keeping,
Standeth at my threshold waiting to come in.

"Oft had He knocked to give me gentle warning;
My heart seemed willing, but my flesh, how weak!
Until one morning, oh, that blessed morning
When my own name I heard him speak!

"Yes, 'twas my name, no other voice could speak it
To stir my heart and melt my very soul;
And I rose so quickly to obey it,
Flung wide the door, and gave Him full control.

"Oh, then I feasted on divinest beauty,
The altogether lovely, loving One,
While blessing me, threw radiance 'round each duty,
That in His name should on that day be done.

"Peace fell upon me while to Him I listened;
And in that sacred hour I talked with Christ,
As ne'er before, and we together christened
With tears of joy, new joy, our sacred tryst.

"Can I afford to miss such rare communion?
To let the health of my own soul decline?
May Christ forbid, His grace secured the union,
While I am truly His, as He is mine."

Can Christian young people do anything about lessening the crime wave? "Am I my brother's keeper?" Two thirds of all arrests for crime last year were young men and women between the ages of fifteen and twenty-four.

Are people born criminals, or is it bad environment that is responsible for crime?

Are there recreational activities in your community to which the unemployed young people can go? One pastor invited a group of boys, who had been breaking the church windows, to join him in organizing a basketball team. After some hesitancy, because they thought there must be "some catch in it," they accepted. They learned a lot about fair play, and no more windows were broken.

"Los Angeles County tries a community experiment. Some public-spirited citizens got to worrying about so many young people turning to crime in their neighborhood, so they decided to see what they could do to help. They formed what are known as coordination councils, where all the folks who had anything to do with young people could work together to help them keep out of the juvenile courts. This is what happened:

"In the wholesale grocery section of the city, it was reported that merchants were losing $4,000 a month in stolen goods . . . goods stolen chiefly by boys. Some members of the committee who investigated found that the boys were given baskets by their parents every morning and told to fill them . . . or else they would not eat. Many of these families did not understand what the proper channels for getting relief and food were. When these were explained to them, they were glad to get their food without stealing. On the other hand, the merchants had not realized that these children were really starving. They immediately agreed to start an Overflow Market where they sent the surplus vegetables which they had not sold at the end of the day. These were given away to people who needed them.

"Thus by a little community interest and cooperation, three important things were accomplished. First, the children were taken out of their kindergarten of crime. Second, the merchants were saved money. The city was saved money by not having to prosecute and care for the child thieves. Third, a spirit of mutual understanding, of community responsibility for its children was set up."

What can young people do to prevent the crime of another war?

"Capone or Dillinger," declared Senator Borah, in a speech delivered in the Senate a few weeks ago, "is not more heartless and bloodthirsty than the man who builds up armaments in another nation for the purpose of sending his own people to the front that he may furnish the means by which to murder them."

—Christian Herald, July, '34

If one-seventh of the U. S. would take an active stand against war, there would be no war.

The criminal receives pay in dollars and cents, but is that the worthwhile pay?

Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

PETER UNMASKS FALSEHOOD AND HYPOCRISY.

Lesson IX—March 3, 1935.

Golden Text: "Wherefore putting away living, speak ye truth each one with his neighbor; for we are members one of another."—Eph. 4:25.

Lesson Text: Acts 5:1-42; 8:4-25.

A Bright Picture.

The communal life of the early church is a bright picture. Men and women were filled with the spirit of Christ to such an extent that those who had property sold it and brought the proceeds to a common treasury so that all should share alike, and especially that none should be in need. It was Christian Communism in a form that could be applied to that day and that situation. It does not follow, however, that it was the patern for all time, or for our present era. One thing needs to be noted—it was voluntary communism. There was no compulsion but the compulsion of love. And it needs to be added that if men were constrained by the love that characterized those early followers of Jesus we would have a fairer distribution of this world's goods, even if we did not have Communism in the sense that some think of that term.

An Ugly Shadow.

Over this bright picture there came a dark and dangercus shadow. One man, presumably well-to-do sold some property, but instead of bringing all the money to the apostle's, he brought only a part of it, although he tried to create the impression that he was giving all. By some spiritual insight, Peter saw through his acted lie, and ruthlessly exposed him. So great was the shock—it could hardly be attributed to shame—that Ananias fell dead at Peter's feet. Needless to say the incident made a profound impression on those who saw it and witnessed it, and "great fear came upon all who heard it."

It might seem trivial to some, but the thing was one of the most deadly enemies of society. Society is builded, if it is builded at all, on truth, on trustworthiness, on honor. Falsehood, acted or spoken strikes at the heart of sound social life. As Paul says we are not to lie, for "we are members of one another." The spirit of deceit, of lying, of falsehood, was not to be tolerated in the life of the early Christian community. And it is not to be compromised lightly with in modern life. Woe unto the man who handles the truth lightly. And that "thou shalt not lie" in the Ten Commandments of the Old Testament, was not abrogated in the New Testament. Indeed, it was made more binding, for Christ made it more than an external thing; He made it an inner Spirit.

A Church Member, But A Liar.

Ananias was a member of the church, but he was a liar. He probably was not the first such member, and he certainly was not the last. There are still those who lie, both by word of mouth, and by act. The man who wants to get credit for being religious without being willing to pay the price, the man who tries to give the impression that he gives liberally to the church when the records show that it is not true, the man who says one thing with his lips, and another thing with his life, the citizen who evades his taxes, the man who makes a show of bearing his share of social responsibilities when he is shirking part of them—these and other types are just as bad as Ananias. It is a good thing that every man who is a liar is not stricken down as was Ananias. As Dr. Snowden says, "Lying in all its forms is one of the most pervasive evils of the world, undermining business and government, and the home and all private relations.

For Sale.

Some things are for sale. Some of them can be bought cheap. And this applies to some things which are priceless. Men will sell their honor and women will sell their virtue, often for comparative trifles. Positions can be bought. Votes can be bought. Publicity can be bought. Favor can be bought. These things are for sale. And Simon the sorcerer thought that everything had its price—he wanted to buy the secret of bestowing the Holy Spirit on others. The story is perhaps familiar to the readers of these notes. As a result of a great revival in Samaria, Peter had gone down there to look over things. The believers had been baptized with the baptism of John evidently, but they had not received the baptism of the Holy Spirit. When Peter and John laid their hands on the new converts, the Holy Spirit came upon them.

Among those who believed—perhaps only in an intellectual sense, for there was no inner vital life in Simon the Sorcerer—was one who had been a great power among the people. He was skilled in the magic arts and he made his living off the credulity and superstition of the people. But he did not have anything like Peter and John had, and when he saw the possibilities of the situation, he offered them money for the secret. He was shrewd from the standpoint of business insight, but he was blind as to spiritual insight. Like so many modern men, he thought everything was for sale, that everything had its price.

Not For Sale.

In words that still crackle and sting through the centuries, Peter told Simon the Sorcerer, that there are some things not for sale. He revealed to him the curse of the sordid spirit in religion. "Thy silver perish with thee, because thou hast thought that the gift of God can be obtained with money. Repent of thy wickedness."

God's gifts are not for sale. The richest men in the world cannot buy, for instance, salvation, peace, a clear conscience, the Holy Spirit, forgiveness, grace. They are priceless in the sense that they have a money value set upon them. But they are to be had by the humblest and the poorest,—they are the gift of God. Of course they have their price in the coin of the Kingdom. There are conditions to be met. God sends His rain upon the just and the unjust, but He does not, because He cannot, send His spiritual blessing upon the just and the unjust. He makes them available to all. But men can have them only as they meet the divine conditions. For instance a man cannot have forgiveness unless he forgives. He cannot have spiritual power apart from prayer. He cannot have Christ unless he receives Christ by faith.

Let our mercenary world know that there are some things that are not for sale. Let every man know that after all the things that can be bought with money are mainly the trappings and tinsels of life. And let every man know that the graces and gifts of God are to be had without money and with out price.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy

To the Readers of the Family Altar Page:

Dear Friends:

Any time you have a scripture text whose meaning is obscure to you and you would like to have it explained or commented upon, kindly send it to the undersigned,—address as given.

The writer is not setting himself up to be an authority on the scriptures and he does not promise to give a satisfying interpretation of all references that may be sent, but he does promise to comment and give the best authority that is available to him and to use such references as texts for daily comment. The person interested may find satisfaction not only in the comment but in thus making a personal contribution to the Family Altar Page.

MONDAY.

WHERE IS GOD?

"The Lord liveth in truth, in judgment and righteousness."—Jer. 4:2.

Where does the Lord live and where may I find Him? Not in churches, temples nor cathedrals; not in songs, prayers nor devotions; but in Truth, in Justice and acts of righteousness. These are His mansions of the earth and the perfection of them on earth are to be His mansions in the skies. Thus to visualize Him as dwelling in these principles and to live unto those principles ourselves, is living unto Him, as Paul puts it, and to live in those principles is dwelling with Him.

That speaks great things for His children. It speaks of a life devoted to the highest good of man; it speaks of the noblest thoughts that have ever been spoken; it speaks of a continual guard over the human heart; it speaks of a hate for sin and a love for souls; it speaks of a life full of sympathies for an unfortunate brother; it speaks of courage, fortitude and hope in dark and desperate days; it speaks of a daring akin to His who dwells there, a daring that defies being cast down, that refuses to yield to temptation, and will not think of keeping terms with distrust.

Life lived in these mansions transcends all other joys. In that fellowship with Him, there is a fragrance as sweet as the perfume of flowers, and a deep sense of that abiding gives one a consciousness of triumph that rests in heavenly glory.

Prayer—Our Father, we know that Thou art in all things, but we lack strength to live up to that consciousness. Grant us that strength and more of the genuine experience of Christian faith. This we ask for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

TRUE GREATNESS.

"He that is greatest among you shall be your servant."—Matt. 23:11.

"Whosoever of you shall be the chiefest, shall be the servant of all."—Mark 10:44.

According to this scripture, if any man wishes to be first, let him be servant. This must be what the Lord meant when He said "the first shall be last, and the last shall be first." These words were spoken in connection with a comment about rulers and state office holders, but they are meant also to be universally applied. In those few words the Master said that the only thing that brings out true worth of a man is service, and that service is a price to be paid for that worth and that honor.

Often some think that if they had the ablity and the opportunity of the other fellow, they could do something worth while. Did you ever feel that way? If you have, I will tell you a story of a fable of a prince. He went into his garden and held a conversation with each thing growing there, inquiring a reason for their existence and for being there. . . The chestnut held birds' nests and made shade for cattle, the grass made food for sheep and cattle, and so on. But when he talked to the daisy, this is what the daisy said: "I have done nothing. I cannot make nests for birds, shelter for cattle, nor food for sheep. I am not even wanted in the meadow. All I can do is to be the best daisy I can." The Prince stopped and kissed the daisy and said: "There is none better than thou." And this reminds us of the song which says, "We've neither beauty nor bloom, we are grass in the roses' garden, but the Master gives us room." Isn't that pretty? And don't you believe that the soul that does his best will be seen on the right hand of God some day?

Prayer—Our Father, we acknowledge life's higher urge of truth, and we desire to live there, grant that we may and each day grow a little better and more nearly like Him.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE CARPENTER'S SON.

"Is not this the carpenter's son?"—Matt. 13:55.
"Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?"—Jno. 1:46.

"Jesus is referred to as a 'carpenter,' though the greek word may mean carpenter or smith. Jewish religion honored manual labor, saying: 'It is incumbent on the father to teach his son honest trade; whosoever teacheth not his son to do some work is as if he taught robbery.' Joseph dutifully taught his son a trade; Mary in the meanwhile giving the child Jesus everything to develop his spiritual qualities."—Christian Calendar.

Greatest men have come from the lowliest living, and their doubts of Jesus as the Saviour is only true to the form of human nature. Nature loves to criticise him who is brought forward from lowly estate to greatness. They cannot believe that it can be done.

What has this got to do with us? Honor worth wherever found. Encourage the lowly to greater achievements, for in so doing one may contribute invaluable worth to himself and to the Kingdom of God.

Prayer—The Lord's Prayer.

THURSDAY.

IMPOTENT MAN.

"Jehovah is on my side; I will not fear; what can man do unto me?"—Ps. 118:1-9.

God's man has no temptation to be man's man. God's man has Omnipotence on his side; man's man has with him or against him only the puny arms of infants. God's man has on his side all wisdom; man's man is buttressed about with folly or assailed by ignorance.

When God is on our side, fear is treason to common sense. When God is on our side, anxiety is the prudence of an insect.

Prayer—Our Father, we will have the boldness of our sonship. We have chosen Thy side and in the choice we have seized upon all strength and sagacity and joy.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

TIMELY RECOLLECTIONS.

"These things have I spoken unto you, that when their hour is come, ye may remember them."—John 16:1-7.

Fortunate is the man who can "lay his hands on things." Most of us put things away and straightway forget where we have put them. Then there are searchings and frettings and questionings.

Especially is it necessary in regard to Christ's teachings to lay them away where we can find them again. Of what use is it to receive divine wisdom if we wrap it up forthwith in tissue paper and thrust it into some obscure corner of a drawer and immediately forget it?

The only way to have Christ's teachings ready for emergencies is to use them when there are no emergencies, to use them all the time. Then we know where they are when we need them most.

Prayer—Our Saviour, we dedicate our memory to Thee. Fill it full, we pray Thee, and help us to use it.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

SATURDAY.

NO FLAWS.

"In everything commending ourselves."—II Cor. 6:1-10.

We speak slightingly of "counsels of perfection," as if they were silly ideals, empty bubbles; pretty enough, to be sure, but sure to burst in a minute of two. But Christ gave us a counsel of perfection: "Ye shall be perfect," he said, "as your heavenly Father is perfect."

Now here is Paul, who speaks of commending himself "in everything"; and Paul was not given to bragging. The truth is that the Christian being conscious of the indwelling Christ, is conscious of the indwelling Perfection. He would be a traitor to Him if he owned flaws and errors. In himself he is nothing, but in Christ he is all things that are wise and good and strong. And so he faces the world unashamed.

Prayer—Dear Lord, enter into our lives and possess us completely, that we may be completely representative of Thee.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

SUNDAY.

WHAT IS HOLY?

"Remember the Sabbath Day to keep it holy."—Ex. 20:8.

The keeping of the Sabbath Day holy, in these days, is almost purely and wholly individual. The clamor of industry, the noise of the street, the roar of commerce, the chatter and revelry of the club, the fun of the golf links, the cheers of the ball field, all are characteristic of our present Sabbath. It has become a holiday and thousands who do not have to work, work harder at diversion and often become so fatigued that they have to take time out to recuperate next day.

There are organizations that endeavor to keep the spirit of the Sabbath, but in order to operate on Monday, as they feel they must, it takes as much work on the Sabbath to get ready for it as though they actually operated on the Sabbath. It is only one of those thousands of instances in FAITH MAKES THE FRONT PAGE.

By John G. Truitt.

"And again he entered into Capernaum after some days; and it was noised that he was in the house."—Mark 2:1.

Had there been daily newspapers in Capernaum in the days of our lesson Jesus would have been on the front page. As soon as he returned to town it began to be noised abroad that he was back. Heralds went up and down the streets of the city reporting His presence. And before very long the house was packed and so were the narrow street hard by.

Jesus was back home. Yes, for Capernaum was "His own city" (Matt. 9:1) because already we read, "He went down to Capernaum, he, and His mother, and His brethren, and His disciples, and there they abode" (John 2:12). The great teacher was living in their town, and the eyes of the nation were upon it.

Even if the townspeople themselves had not been excited about Jesus for his own sake something besides was happening that would have put their town on the front page. Delegations of leading men from all cities of Galilee, Judea, and even the chief city Jerusalem were awaiting His return. "And there were Pharisees, and doctors of the law sitting by, which were come out of every village of Galilee and Judea and Jerusalem." Can you imagine that? We could in our day, for we have such massing of people following some hero. All the hotels of the city must have been doing a good business. And the whole of Capernaum must have been excited with so many Pharisees with their rich clothing, and so many doctors of the law with their still richer colors. Little boys and girls were seeing a sight they had never seen before. And the oldest inhabitant could not remember when their city had ever had so many celebrities as were crowding its inns and marketplaces now.

From the full length of their country had come the Pharisees and doctors of the law. Jerusalem and Capernaum were at about the opposite ends of their land. It would have been hard to have gathered such a large group of such men toegether for any kind of a conference and yet they had come together to see Jesus. In a big way faith was making the front page.

And who can say that there were evil purposes in the heart of every Pharisee, or doctor of the law, that flocked to Capernaum to see and hear Jesus? Many of them knowing the great promises of God to Israel must have come with a heart-hunger for Him. They must have wanted to know the truth which would make them free. They must have been, some of them, at least, looking for the fulfillment of the messianic hopes which had now for so long a time been held out to them.

In the verse preceding our text we read: "But he went out, and began to publish it much, and to blaze abroad the matter (the healed leper), in so much that Jesus could no longer enter openly into the city, but was without in desert places: and they came to Him from every quarter." Yes, He was making the front page. So much so that He must spend some time in desert places, for if He walked openly into the city he was overwhelmed with the folks who had come into it from "every quarter."

It is a pathetic sight. Poor, sick, sinners, joined with barren-hearted rich people in their search for God. In their search for that which would give that peace within, without which, one is at best very unhappy indeed! Whether we recognize it or not we may see some of that same search in any town or city in our land. They rush to and fro, buying and begging, plotting and planning, and programizing (how full the world is of programs!), and spending money for bread, and for that which is not bread, and setting up an endless search for happiness.

What a place for our popular human interest stories! And all the great story writers are not living today. Peter was not a story writer at all, but when he related this business to John Mark it was John Mark's good fortune to be able to repeat for us something that went on underneath all that excitement in such a way as to convince us that he was a master at his art. What thousands of human-interest stories could have been told out of that great Capernaum conclave of the high and mighty as well as the humble and lowly! John Mark tells us that if we had been present at that time we would have seen neighbors, faithful neighbors, persistent neighbors, good neighbors. He tells us that we should have seen a man sick with the palsy. So sick and of such long duration was his ailment that now he could no longer walk. Hopeless and helpless in his home. These neighbors were waiting for the return of Jesus. And when they heard that He was back they began to get this poor man up and out on his cot to the place where He was. But by the time they got there the place was packed. But nothing daunted, they lifted him, cot and all, to the top of the roof. John Mark must have smiled as he painted his picture. On top of the roof they lifted a portion of it and let their neighbor down into the presence of the Great Teacher.

Jesus looked up to see this strange sight, and He saw the faces of the four friends Enough. "When Jesus saw their faith." Thank God I do not have to have all the faith for my poor life. I want to have all I can, but my Christian friends will have faith for me. And so will they for you. Perhaps Mark is remembering that Paul did not have much faith in him, but he is also remembering that Barnabus and Peter did have great faith in him. It was not the faith of the paralytic that saved him, but the faith of his four neighbors. John Mark left us to ponder the value of good neighbors that would help us when we could not help ourselves. And he also showed us the value of faith in others and for others. Encouraging us to bring our friends to Jesus in faith, knowing that when He sees our faith He will reward us accordingly.

John Mark did not report Jesus' sermon. He passes all that up with that one short line: "And He preached the word unto them." What he wanted to tell us was of human kindness, and simple faith, and one more thing. And the one more thing was: "That ye may know that the Son of Man hath power on earth to forgive sins." The Pharisees may hear their best, and do their worst, and come their farthest, but John Mark wants us to know that Jesus has power to forgive sins! The doctors of law may find their traditions broken, or their understanding of God violated, or may think Jesus worthy of death alone, but what John Mark wants us to know is that Jesus forgave a man who was by his neighbors brought,—and that furthermore he has power to forgive others, for so He Himself said.

The crowds did not bother Jesus. The front page was the least of His thoughts. He healed their sick, forgave their sins, and stood their

Christian Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

Have you made your wills? If you have, did you write a clause in it something like this: "I will and bequeath to the Christian Orphanage, located at Elon College, N. C., the sum of ——— dollars for its uses and purposes"?—

I notice from time to time where other orphanages in North Carolina receive splendid contributions from wills. If you have not made your will, won't you put one clause in it remembering the Christian Orphanage with an amount as liberal as you feel in your heart you want to give. If you have written this important document and did not think to remember your orphanage, it would be very kind of you to still add a clause to that effect. Had it ever occurred to you to take out an insurance policy making the Christian Orphanage the beneficiary?

We wonder if our churches and Sunday schools have realized that we are paying as much as 100 per cent more for some articles we have to buy than we did a year ago. Lard, for instance, costs us a little more than 100 per cent and we have to buy lard. Fat back meat (if we had it to buy) would cost us 100 per cent more than last year. Dairy feed, and we have lots of it to buy, costs us 60 to 75 per cent more than last year. Shoes $1.00 per pair more than last year for the same shoe. It takes 300 pairs each year to meet the needs. Many other articles on the same ratio.

We want to appeal to our people to increase their offerings through the Sunday schools and as individuals so it will not be necessary for the little fellows to go hungry. When the offering is taken in your Sunday school drop in a dollar occasionally. The old Indian said, "If a little medicine do a little good, a heap of medicine would do a heap of good."

If giving a dime will give you a little joy, a dollar would give you lots of joy—try it and be convinced.

which the world goes round and it cannot stop for Sunday.

The world of work, play and recreation is one continual round. One day is tied to the other with such vital relations that it must carry on. Is it all wrong? We do not believe that it is all wrong. Works of necessity must be counted as God's work. Works of good and blessing are his. One would rather turn his men loose in a good ball game on Sunday afternoon than to turn them lose midst vicious temptations of the city streets, the saloon and the brothel, and there are situations in which one or the other must be accepted.

Where shall we draw the line? It must be drawn with the individual. The work and the play of the world rests on individuals, and if we can have enough holy men who regard the day unto the Lord, in that proportion the world will take its proper place in Sabbath observance.

For individual decision, Dr. Fosdick gives us a good rule. He says, concerning right and wrong, "Whatever lifts and enriches personality in ourselves and in others is right. Whatever depresses, harms or besmirches personality in ourselves or others is wrong." And since Christ said, "The Sabbath was made for man and not man for the Sabbath," we believe that whatsoever is good for man is a measuring rule for our individual observance.

Prayer—God, save us! We are far from Thee and Thy way. May Thy will be done in earth, but especially by us. We ask for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

abuse. His goodness cost Him His life. But He gave it up in order that you and I might live. He gave it with a prayer for us all upon His lips: "Father, forgive them." Do your preacher and your people insist on your attending church? Then thank God for such friends. Do they ask you to do things for yourself and God? You are fortunate on account of their faith. How closely and lovingly we are all bound together. In bringing one another to Christ we find ourselves in His benign presence, and recipients of His divine blessings. May men see our "good works" and glorify God; may God see our "faith" and reward our efforts for our neighbors and friends.

And as we gather about the holy communion table today may we remember how Jesus was also on the "front page" in old Jerusalem as He was driven like a transgressor to Calvary's heights that sin, and shame, and suffering might give place to happiness, and peace, and joy; and may we help to make ours the kind of world that will put real heroism, courage, and achievement on the front page. And indeed, today real goodness and helpfulness has a large acclaim in the hearts of the people. Faith does make the front page!

It is not too late to take an offering for Elon College. The college needs the money, and the churches need the college.

OBITUARIES

HARGRAVE.

Mrs. Martha D. (Pattie) Hargrave, 84 years of age, died at the home of her son, G. W. Hargrave, near Richmond, Feb. 4th. She had been in ill health about three years.

She is survived by a brother, John H. Harris, Wakefield, Va., four sons and three daughters, thirty-seven grandchildren and fourteen great grandchildreu.

She was a faithful member of Spring Hill Church, having joiued about the close of the Civil War and was its oldest member.

Funeral services and burial in Spring Hill Cemetery, the writer officiating, assisted by the Revs. L. F. Callahan, G. A. Pierce aud C. E. Gerriuger.

May the God of all comfort and bless the bereaved. T. FRED WRIGHT.

MEDLIN.

George H. Medlin of Epsom, N. C., was born June 15, 1855, and died Nov. 5, 1934. Age, 79 years, 4 months and 20 days. He was married to Elleu Brown on December 22, 1880 and unto this union was born six children.

He professed faith in Jesus Christ and united with Liberty (Vance) Church more than 50 years ago and remained loyal to the church until his death.

He was a member of the Board of Trustees for 25 years or more. He attended church services regularly as long as his health would permit, aud coutributed to the support of Elon College and various other enterprises of the church. His wife and oldest daughter preceded him in death thirteen years ago. He leaves to mourn their loss A. A. Medlin, Henderson, R. F. D. 2, W. C. Medlin, Henderson, R. F. D. 1 and Mrs. J. E. Fitts of Norfolk, Va., 27 grandchildren, aud 12 great grandchildren, besides a host of friends.

Funeral services were conducted by his pastor, Rev. S. E. Madren and the body laid to rest in the church cemetery. The floral offering was beautiful. May God bless and keep his loved ones.

MRS. R. J. NEWTON.

PRITCHARD.

Mr. I. W. Pritchard, of Chapel Hill, N. C., died suddenly Sunday evening, February 17, at 7:00 P. M. Mr. Pritchard had been in bad health for quite a while but was able to be up and around and had eaten dinner with the family.

He was a great friend of Elon College, having served on the Board of Trustees for a number of years. His resignation from the Board seemed necessary because of ill health. Not only did he give his services, but he was a liberal and generous supporter of the College. The board took due recognition of Mr. Pritchard's death and conveyed its sympathies to the family, through its secretary, Dr. P. H. Fleming.

The fuueral was conducted from the home in Chapel Hill February 19th at 3:00 P. M., by Rev. B. J. Howard, pastor of Damascus Christian Church, Rev. W. A. Jenkins, pastor of the University Methodist Church and Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, pastor of the First Christian Church, Durham, N. C.

The church and the college express their appreciation of the life and services of Mr. Pritchard and extend sympathy to the family.

L. E. SMITH.

GRAHAM.

Departed this life at his home, Burlington, N. C., R. F. D. No. 3, Eli Wilson Graham, aged 70 years and 3 months. He is survived by his wife and six children. Brother Graham was a member of Union Christian Church and had been for 48 years and had served the church as a deacon since 1916. He was held in high esteem and was a devoted husband and father and conscientious and faithful in the discharge of his duties to the church and as neighbor, friend and citizen. He will be sorely missed in the home, the church and the community. May the Healer of Broken hearts comfort the bereaved. The funeral services were conducted from Uuion Christian Church by the writer and the interment was in the church cemetery.

P. H. FLEMING.

BROWN.

Whereas, God in His Infinite Wisdom saw fit to remove from our midst on Jan. 10, 1935, Mrs. Connie Belle Brown, wife of Mr. Jimmie Brown.

We, the Lowell Christian Church desire to record our sincere appreciation of her devoted Christian life and faithful service. Be it Resolved:

First. That we bow in humble submission to Him who doeth all things well.

Second. That in the going of Belle, That our church has lost one among the best but our loss is heaven's gain.

Third. That we cherish her memory in our hearts and extend to the bereaved family our deepest sympathy in their great sorrow.

Fourth. That a copy of these resolutions be sent the family, also the Christian Sun for publication.

Respectfully,
MRS. OTIS CHASE.

TUCK.

Mrs. Ida Apt Tuck, daughter of David and Catharine Tuck Apt, was born in Halifax County, Va., March 30, 1871 and departed this life at her home near Virgilina, Va., Monday, February 4, 1935, at the age of sixty-three years, ten mos., and five days.

When young she professed faith in Christ and united with Union Christian Church where her people have been leading members since its organization. She was educated in the public schools and So. Boston Academy and was a successful teacher for twenty-five years.

In August, 1905, she married E. C. A. Tuck of Virgilina and to them were born five sons, Apt, Canute, Max, Keith and Edgar. In 1916 she was left a widow. At this time the eldest son was ten. She faced the future with heroism and by industry and intelligent management she reared and educated her children.

Sister Tuck is survived by her five sons and one sister, Mrs. Anna Apt Hayes of Virgilina. She passed into the heavenly state of rest just as she had desired, without protracted illness.

The funeral was conducted from the home on the afternoon of February 5th, by the writer, assisted by Rev. E. R. Harris. The high esteem in which she was held in the community was evidenced by the large crowd attending and the beautiful floral designs from loved ones and friends. The burial was in the church cemetery by the side of her husband. May her sons be useful in life in keeping with the prayer and deepest desires of mother.

C. E. NEWMAN.

ASHBY.

Mrs. Cora Powel Ashby, daughter of Charlie and Ethel Powel, died in Lenoir, N. C., on January 25, 1935 after a few days' illness. She was thirty-two years of age. She leaves her husband, Harvey Ashby, whom she married in 1919, and five children. Her body was brought back to her church, Liberty, Va., where the funeral was conducted by the writer on Saturday afternoon, January 26th and the burial was in the church cemetery. Seldom have I seen a family more overwhelmed with grief at the passing of a loved one. As wife and mother she was faithful and devoted and active in religious work. May sustaining grace be given in time of sorrow and the influence of the departed live on to bless the lives of others.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

The Balkans Smoke Again.—

Civil war is rampant in Greece. The war department has promised the Greek government to deliver a knock-out blow against the rebels within the next two days, but results remain to be seen. Meantime Bulgarian troops march toward the border, while Turkey is maintaining large forces in Turkish Thrace. Britain and Italy have been compelled to suspend international air service to Athens, and France has already dispatched a destroyer to the scene of action, while two cruisers are are held ready to go.

S. Clay Williams Resigns.—

S. Clay Williams, chairman of the board which succeeded Hugh S. Johnson in the direction of NRA, resigned his position on Tuesday of this week. This is the first break in the board since its appointment. The resignation was effective at the President's earliest convenience, but was accepted with the understanding that he not make his "resignation effective or retire from the work of the board for at least another two weeks." The reason given by Williams for resigning was the press of his private affairs.

Screen Standards Higher.—

If the secretary of the New York Council of the Legion of Decency is correct in his statement, there has been much improvement in the class of pictures being shown on the silver screen since the Legion began its clean-up campaign some months ago. Father Edward Roberts Moore, the secretary referred to, tells us that since last July it has been necessary to place only a mere handful of pictures under ban. He also points out that the artistic standards of the pictures produced have not suffered, and concludes that "All are happy—the producers, who feared the worst; the Legion, which sees its objective, for the time at least, attained; the public, which gets better entertainment."

Congressional Bills Provide for Church Loans.—

Among the many other bills introduced into the present Congress are two which would authorize loans to churches. One presented by Representative Ludlow of Indiana would authorize loans for "refinancing the building indebtedness of churches and other institutions for religious instruction and worship." The other bill which is substantially the same as one presented to the Seventy-Third Congress, is sponsored by Representative Cochran of Missouri, and it would authorize the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make loans to religious organizations at not more than four per cent interest, which would "aid in financing the operation and maintenance of institutions for religious instruction and worship."

German Evangelical Church Gains.—

"The resilience of the Church of God is marvelous. The press department of the German Evangelical Church reports a striking increase in 1933, a year of great peril. In that year 7,800 people left the Church, against 48,419 in 1932 and 66,-165 in 1931; but 63,815 entered it, against 4,272 in 1932 and 3,272 in 1931. There were 3,328 converts from the Roman Catholic Church against 842 in 1932; and 342 Jews were converted, although they knew, in 1933, that conversion could bring no mitigation of their situation in Germany."—D. M. Panton in Sunday School Times.

Endeavorers Already Making Plans.—

Already the leaders of the International Society of Christian Endeavor are making plans for their thirty-fifth annual convention, which will meet this year in Philadelphia, from July 2nd to 7th. Philadelphia is a Christian Endeavor stronghold, and there are few cities that could better entertain this convention than the City of Brotherly Love. "We Choose Christ" is the theme of the convention, and the entire program is to be built around the importance of Christian youth in building a new world. Among speakers who have already accepted invitations are: Dr. S. W. Hughes of England, Senator William E. Borah; Dr. James Kelly of Edinburgh, Scotland; Dr. Robert E. Speer; Miss Margaret Slattery of Boston; Dr. William Foulkes of Newark, N. J.; and the President of the International Society, Dr. Daniel A. Poling. The program committee is headed by Dr. Harry Thomas Stock, who is director of young people's work in the General Council of Congregational-Christian Churches.

Oliver Wendell Holmes Dies.—

On Tuesday of this week, death came to Oliver Wendell Holmes, who for 29 years was an associate justice of the Supreme Court, where he was known as the "Great Liberal." Justice Holmes was 92 years of age when he retired from the court in 1932, and notwithstanding his age was probably the most liberal justice of the entire court, often vigorously protesting the decisions of his more conservative minded associates. Before becoming a member of the Supreme Court, he was an associate justice on the bench of the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court for 17 years and chief justice for three years additional. He was the oldest justice to wear the robes of the higher tribunal, but was surpassed in length of service by Chief Justice John Marshall and Associate Justices Field and Harlan, each of whom served for 34 years. He was not only a champion of the people's welfare, but was an ardent supporter of the rights of the individual States, fighting contantly against the trend toward Federal control. Justice Holmes was born in Boston on March 8, 1841. He was a student in Harvard University when the War between the States ensued, and he left school just before graduating to enlist, but he received his degree later, and was only 25 years old when he obtained his diploma in law from the same university. He married Miss Fanny Dixwen of Cambridge, Mass., when he was 31. Had he lived until Friday of this week, he would have been 94 years of age.

The Corporate Conscience.—

One of the deplorable consequences of the extensive replacing of individual action and responsibility by that of corporate bodies is the decay, or displacement, of the individual conscience. Take such a matter as the sale and advertisement of liquor. Individuals who would scorn to be private purveyors of the stuff are now in many cases compelled to be participants in the traffic unless they are to withdraw altogether from what would be normal employment or normal investment, apart from the question of liquor. Humble employees in chain stores, who are personally dry in practice and conviction, have in many instances since repeal been placed in a difficult position where these stores have stocked liquors. People who had their money in what they assumed to be legitimate investment, with no thought of association with liquor, have been placed in similar situations. Westbrook Pegler, the syndicate writer, has hailed John D. Rockefeller, Jr., as one of the nation's distinguished saloon keepers, along with ex-Gov. Alfred E. Smith, because of the licensed liquor selling in Radio City and the Empire State Building. The extent of whiskey advertising in newspapers and magazines is appalling and must be a bitter dose for editors and journalists who have any spark of idealism and sincerity, considering what they wrote against liquor in pre-Prohibition days. Probably the individual in many instances is a victim of corporate action, where individual opinion and protest are in vain. It is sad to see some of our foremost and best magazines, from which one might have expected better things, helping to advertise and further the liquor evil. Fortunately, there are great and splendid exceptions. There are formerly dry papers, like the Springfield Republican, that are true to their convictions; one vigorous anti-Prohibition paper, the Chicago Daily News, confirms its profession of adherence to temperance by consistently refusing liquor ads; radical papers, like the Nation and the New Republic, are free from the blight; and labor papers, in general, so far as we know, are carrying no liquor ads. It is the respectable big business corporations that give the least evidence of either enlightenment or conscience in doing anything to curb or limit the liquor evil. Apparently they are all too ready to share in the business if profit is to be had.—Advance.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

The neighbors and friends of Mrs. J. O. Atkinson surprised her with a delightful birthday party Monday evening.

In this week's issue a series or articles on "Stewardship," by Dr. W. H. Denison of Dayton, Ohio, begins. The reading of this and the articles that are to follow is urged.

A letter from Dr. Atkinson states that he has gained fourteen pounds in weight, and here is hoping that he has gained twice that much in strength and that he may soon be able to return to his tasks.

Mrs. W. M. Jay, the wife of Dr. Jay, pastor of our Holland Church, continues to improve. She is recovering nicely from a major operation. Dr. and Mrs. Jay have the prayers of the church and of their friends.

Rev. R. A. Whitten, pastor of our Portsmouth Church, is working for the College among the churches of Eastern Virginia. Any help or consideration given Mr. Whitten by pastors and friends of the College will be greatly appreciated.

Our last Convention at Suffolk voted that our churches be requested to continue its custom of observing March, April, May and June as Mission period. A most fitting custom, and seasonable, too, as this covers the period of new born life and of the resurrection of our Lord.

Rev. Mr. Eaton, rector of the Episcopal Church in Burlington, spoke at chapel services Friday morning. Mr. Eaton gave an interesting account of the Oxford Movement. He has been asked to return and tell the students more about this intensely religious organization and its work.

The second issue of the Maroon and Gold, sponsored by the Alumni, makes its appearance this week. Congratulations go to M. L. Patrick, representing the Alumni Association, and Bill Cooper, representing the student body, as editor-in-chief. The paper presents a most pleasing appearance.

Dr. E. L. Moffitt, a former president of Elon College and now a citizen of the town of Elon College, left last Thursday morning for Atlanta, Ga., to attend a meeting of the underwriters of the Prudential Life Insurance Company. The trip was given Dr. Moffitt by the company as partial expression of its appreciation of the splendid work that Dr. Moffitt has done during the past year.

A number of our churches are endeavoring to launch the Belmont Plan as an expression of Christian Stewardship on the part of their people. The Belmont Plan is nothing more than tithing, but it provides for at least a thirteen-week trial on the part of the individual giver and worshipper. The plan is heartily commended to every church; and if you are interested, write to THE CHRISTIAN SUN office at Elon College and full information will be furnished.

There are four features of THE CHRISTIAN SUN that, we are persuaded, measure up to the best to be found in any of our church papers. We refer to the sermon page by Dr. J. G. Truitt, the Family Altar page by Chaplain Rountree, The Sunday School Comment by Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, and the Christian Endeavor Comment by Rev. F. C. Lester. We doubt if either of these faithfuls have any idea of the spiritual comfort, strength and joy they carry each week into the homes and hearts of SUN readers, especially those readers who, by age or infirmity, are shut in.

THE POSITIVE ELEMENT.

An old friend declares the first thing he can remember his mother saying to him was the word "don't." He said, "The first thing I learned at school was don't. The first thing I remember hearing at Sunday school and at church was don't. Those teachers said don't swear, don't lie, don't fight, don't cheat, don't rob birds' nests, don't, don't. I was taught not to do wrong and when Sam Jones published that book, Quit Your Meanness, I thought the big thing in life was negative. But I have learned better now and know the positive element in life counts for more than the negative."

Don'ts may keep you out of the ditch and off the grass, but they will never help you climb the hill. It is important to learn what things are poison so that we can avoid them; but wholesome food is what will keep us alive. My friend said, "When I was a boy, the school-teacher wrote ten rules on the blackboard, and the first week of school he read these ten rules to us every morning. Johnny listened and said, 'I can keep every one of them. They are all don'ts.' "

Now it is true that hundreds of people can recite a whole mile of things that they do not do: They do not swear, steal, fight, dance, drink liquor, play cards, break the Sabbath, and so forth. All negative! Doubtless they are to be commended for not doing any of these things, but what have they done to build their own lives? What have they done to bring the Spirit of God into the hearts of men? To build the Kingdom of God on earth? We want them to minister to the needs of humanity and thus fulfill the law of Christ. We have preached that it is what you believe, and what you do not do, that makes you Christian. But it is what we do that makes us Christian. A man might believe in the virgin birth, believe the Bible is infallible, and believe the Nicene Creed, and still be less than a Christian. Perhaps that is why Jesus stressed none of these things, but said, "Ye are my friends if ye keep my commandments."

Jesus did not give us a long string of don'ts to observe that we may become Christian. He stressed the positive element of life. The five foolish virgins had failed to take oil in their vessels. The wicked and slothful servant had failed to lend his money for interest. But the Good Samaritan poured oil and wine into the wounds and then bound them up and put the wounded man on his horse and took him to the hotel and nursed him all night and left money to take care of him saying, "If this is not enough I will pay you when I come back." Jesus put this Samaritan above the priest and Levite who did nothing to relieve the poor wounded man. Nothing said about faith, ceremony, don'ts. It was what the Samaritan did that made Jesus say to the lawyer: "Go thou and do likewise."

When Jesus painted the picture, he flung it out in the sky so that all could see it and take warning. When the king was on his throne and all nations were assembled before him he separated the sheep from the goats and put the sheep on the right hand and the goats on the left hand.

Now what we are concerned about is, What makes a man a sheep? What makes him a goat? Some would answer faith, and some ceremony. Others would say church membership, and some would say experience—You must be born again.

But, Jesus Christ, the Son of God, said it was good deeds. Whe he invited those on the right hand to come into his kingdom they asked, "Why?" He replied: "I was hungry and ye fed me, I was thirsty and ye gave me to drink, I was naked and ye clothed me, I was sick and ye ministered unto me, I was in prison and ye visited me." They said, "When, Lord?" And He said, "Inasmuch as ye did it to the least of these ye did it to me. Enter thou into the joys of thy Lord." He said to the goats, "Depart into hell," and they said, "Why? We have done no wrong." But Jesus said, "You failed to do good." It is the positive element in life that makes men rich, scholars, saints. Life is expended and deepened by doing good deeds. Men rise in religion and goodness as they pour themselves out in service to their fellowmen.—George Dillard Lessley in Christian-Evangelist.

A CHRISTIAN'S IDEALS.

1. To be evangelistic and universal as Jesus; to recognize the divine kinship of all men; to share increasingly in the program of world missions; to help reconcile all men to God.

2. To be as international as Jesus; to do everything possible to promote world brotherhood; to urge full cooperation with the World Court and League of Nations; to advocate continued disarmament; to oppose militarism and plant world peace concepts; to stand for peace through its nonparticipation in war.

3. To be, racially, as color blind as Jesus; to estimate men by their moral fiber and not their skin; to practice nondiscrimination in inter-racial relationships; to exterminate race prejudice.

4. To be as individual and fearless as Jesus; to be law-abiding though not obsequious to the Stephen Decatur code; to uphold the freedom of conscience; to repudiate the taxation of a vice—the liquor traffic.

5. To be as nonpartisan and socialistic as Jesus; to vote for men and not for political machines and to protest the exploitation of labor, capitalistic monopoly, profiteering, and economic imperialism and injustice; to fight poverty and disease.

6. To be as passionate for Christian unity as Jesus; to support the church and vindicate its legal separation from the state; to back by Brotherhood's program but without denominational provincialism; to recognize the equality of all Christians before God.

7. To be as sincere as Jesus; to be honest with God; with my fellowmen, and with myself; to speak the truth at all times; to be as pure and unpretentious.

8. To be as sweet and loving as Jesus; to forgive my enemies and debtors; to practice nonretaliation; to be sympathetic with sinners though intolerant toward evil; to love all men.—George Earle Owen in Christian Evangelist.

YANKEE HENS IN CHINA.

When "Jim" Hunter sailed back to China recently he took along some White Leghorns, Rhode Island Reds and Barred Rocks, to cross with Chinese chickens. Result—greatly increased laying power. The Tunghsien Rural Service Center where Mr. Hunter works hopes to develop an egg cooperative market next year. Hogs, too, have their day and the cholera resisting powers of the Chinese porker is being tested. Tunghsien Rural Service Center experiments, also, in fruit raising and seed selection.

HISTORY OF BEREA (NORFOLK) CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

I read in last week's SUN a history of Berea (Nansemond County), by our historian, Mr. W. E. Mac Clenny. Since reading that history, I have been thinking that probably your readers would like to have the history of another Berea Church within the bounds of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference. Well, I wish to say that our Berea was at first, or in the beginning, a Methodist Protestant Church. Its construction started in 1854, but was not fully completed, so they could enter in for worship until 1859. The building cost twenty-two hundred dollars. During the Civil War the Yankees encamped at Great Bridge, pillaged the grounds around the church, and entered the church and so molested its furnishings that much damage was done. This so discouraged the membership, that it seemed difficult for them to get together again as a church, but in the early part of the year 1871, they began to consider the importance of transferring their church and the ground annexed thereto and themselves to the Christian denomination. So on the 15th of August, 1871, they came together in a body and got in touch with Rev. J. N. Manning, called him to the chair, and made known to him their desires and enquired the way whereby they might be admitted to the Christian denomination.

Rev. Manning outlined the principles of the Christian Church, to which they all heartily agreed to accept. He then proceeded to prepare the proper documents to have the property entered into the circuit court of Norfolk County. Also he presented their claims for admission in the Conference that fall. He served the church one year as pastor and was followed by Rev. R. C. Tuck. This fall we will have been in the Christian denomination sixty-four years. We had 31 members, 14 men and 17 women at the time of the transfer. We now have two hundred and nine. Since we have been Christians, we have taken in five hundred and ninety-four. We have had three secretaries. First, was Bro. S. J. Nichols, who served nine years; next was Bro. Willis Hall, who also served nine years and the third was the writer of these notes, chosen the first week in January, 1889, having been serving my church as secretary for forty-six years the first week in last month.

We have been served by sixteen pastors, as follows: Rev. J. T. Manning, Rev. R. C. Tuck, Rev. H. H. Butler, Rev. J. T. Kitchen, Dr. J. Pressley Barrett, Dr. W. S. Long, Rev. M. W. Butler, Rev. M. P. Porter, Rev. J. W. Harrell, Rev. H. E. Rountree, Rev. G. O. Lankford, Rev. W. C. Hook, Rev. B. F. Black, Rev. J. F. Morgan, Rev. Arthur H. Stainback, and our present pastor, Rev. Joe French.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD AND MONEY.

Figures have been published that should cause Americans to stop and think and seek to change the trend of the times. In 1927—during years of unprecedented prosperity—$080,000,000 were spent by the United States Government to prepare for war with our neighbors, while $833,000,000 was used in religious and philanthropic activity. In 1933, when depression had gained almost a strangle hold, we increased the amount spent directly on the Army, Navy and air force to $788,000,000 (an increase of $100,000,000 or 15%), while benevolences had shrunk to $550,000,000, a decrease of nearly $300,000,000, or 60%. In the thirty-three years between 1900 and 1933 the Federal Government expenses increased from half a billion dollars to five billion a year, or $13,700,000 a day. War and Navy expenses increased from about $400,000,000 to over two billion a year—a fivefold increase; while all gifts to benevolences were not even doubled. The population of the country increased fifty per cent in the same period. Do not Christians need to rededicate to God and His service themselves and their possessions—of which they are only trustees? The need for Christian benevolence at home and abroad was never greater. Many wish they had given away what they have lost in the past five years!

But the United States is still the richest country in the world—in assets, in average income, in comforts and in the average scale of living. Government officials now talk in billions of dollars now where they used to ask millions for public appropriations. Americans talk poverty and over twenty-five million people are dependent on the Government payrolls—either as employees, pensioners or recipients of the dole. Taxes are being increased to pay these growing expenses—and the end is not yet. In the meantime pastors, missionaries and other Christian workers as well as teachers and other professional workers, trades people, clerks and most employees in industry see their income decrease, while taxes and expenses increase—and there is, humanly speaking, no relief in sight. Consequently gifts to church work, missions and other benevolences decrease, and the work of God—meaning the work He wishes done for underprivileged men and women—suffers.

But there is no lack of money in America, if we can judge by the amount spent on amusements, theatre, sports, cosmetics, tobacco, strong drink, pleasure automobiles, and fiction. The phases of life that most deeply interest even serious minded folk are revealed by a questionnaire recently sent out by the National Economic League. The answers show that by far the largest number of voters are most interested in politics, taxes, monetary policies and administration measures; next in order come how to combat organized crime, the administration of justice, international affairs, world peace and national defense, economic and industrial problems (including unemployment). Then follow problems of transportation, public utilities and the conservation and use of national resources; housing, mortgage relief, public health and education. Religion and philanthropy as such have no place in this list of subjects most occupying public attention. May not this be the cause of our distress and the reason why the incomes of practically all religious and philanthropic agencies have fallen off even more rapidly and extensively than private incomes? Jesus Christ, who knows mankind and the laws of the universe, has given us the solution of the problem when He said: "Seek ye first the Kingdom (the recognition of the sovereignty) of God and His righteousness and all these things (necessary for our material welfare) will be added unto you."—Missionary Review.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.

5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

PINE AND PALM.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

Florida Sanitarium,
Orlando, Florida.

"And Jehovah God planted a garden in Eden . . . and out of the Ground Jehovah God made to grow every tree that is pleasant to thy sight." Now, that was a garden. So comely and striking was it that when we to this day want to describe a glorious view, any earthly paradise, we speak of it as Eden—the very symbol and synonym of this beautiful God's garden had trees in it—trees that grew and stood and had measure and might and majesty in them. How different indeed, from the gardens we frail mortals plant.

Our gardens—well, we plant them this week, onions, and garlic and cabbages and petunias and pansies and posies, expect them to spring up next week, come to bloom and fruitage the next—and then they wilter and pass out—and our garden is again bare, or but a memory—or a mockery.

God's garden is not so. He planted trees in Eden, and if we are to have an Eden we must have trees.

Out from the porch on which I look and live these days, the same Jehovah God has planted a garden of pine and palm, some fifty of each happily blended in the mellow, velvety soil of this spreading lawn. Now reader, I say it in all candor, if a pine tree cannot put courage into your soul, iron into your blood and hope into your heart, you are a cringing coward and a hopeless weakling. And if a palm doesn't bring rejoicing to your drooping spirit and vigor and victory to your mortal body, you are a helpless inbecile and there is no balm in Gilead for you. It is a fact so created and ordained of God for man's good and happiness. Why, look! The prophet Isaiah knew this and writes of it: "I will set in the desert the fir-tree, the pine and the box-tree together that they (we) may see, and know and consider and understand that the hand of Jehovah hath done this, and the Holy One of Israel hath created is." (Isa. 41:20.) Now there you are. The Holy One of Israel hath created, planted and made to grow there pines for our strength and these palms for our rejoicing that as we look upon them we may know of a truth that God is good and God is near—and God is blessed and clothes Himself in bounty, beauty and gladness forever.

Reader, you should just come with me and behold and consider my fifty strong, stately, stalwart pines. Oh! but they are a heartening, happy, wholesome troup to look upon. Some of them two, some of them three feet in diameter at the base, rising, as they gracefully taper, to a height of forty to fifty feet before a limb or branch marks or mars their lovely, steel-carved trunk. And then they adorn themselves, their long-leafed wavy branches, with veils and head-dress of deep, transparent green, and absolutely dominate, while they lovingly protect the fragile, up-looking, happy palms and plants of a smaller breed about them.

The pine is our most courageous tree. You simply can't put it out of commission—unless your wielded axe fells it and a consuming fire burns it to ashes. Why, whack its face, hack its body, disfigure its complexion with a cruel blade, and almost immediately it exudes from its own smitten body the most healthful of all curatives, and antiseptics, its own turpentine, and with invisible hands spreads it over its wounds and without quarrel or complaint, makes the bruised place harder and healthier than it was before the wound was inflicted.

But I am thinking now, most of all, about the storms, winds, tornadoes these strong giants of mine have defied and withstood these fifty or more years of their existence. No, Sir, when they were attacked they did not run to cover or call from help from without. They just stood there in their God-given strength and inherent power and literally rejoiced in the conflict as they sent their roots deeper and ever deeper into the sustaining soil beneath them. In winter they wear their garb of green and greet with gladness the chill of frost; and in summer they smile in fainter and fairer green in the rays of burning sun. In flood they drink to their living content, in time of drought they wave their sprigs and leaves of glad green to all the parched earth about and bids other trees and plants and mankind to be glad and look with hope for refreshing showers that God will give in His good time.

And so when our inspired writers of the Holy Bible wanted to employ the highest and holiest symbols of things about us they chose the tree—most often the pine or the palm or both. What in Holy writ is more beautiful than this. "He [the righteous man who will not have fellowship with scoffers and sinners] shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth its fruit in season, whose leaf also doth not wither and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper." (Psalm 1:3.)

Genesis opens with trees growing in Eden to make of that garden a paradise. When our Saviour was making His triumphal entry into Jerusalem to be hailed as King, "They took branches of palm-trees, and went forth to meet Him and cried Hosanna: Blessed is the King of Israel that cometh in the name of the Lord." (Jno. 12:13.)

And when John the Revelator counted to give us an unfading picture of God and glory wrote: "And he showed me a river of water of life, bright as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb. And on this side of the river and on that was the tree of life . . . and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations." (Rev. 22:2.)

And so here we are; these stately, evergreen, heaven-looking pines, and these wavy, gracious, ever-happy palms, blending their strength and telling their story of hope and health, vim and vigor, courage and happiness, issuing their daily charge and challenge to Dr. Rowland and me to get well, be strong, look up, have faith, take courage, and the skill of your physicians, the faithfulness of your nurses, the gladness of your "sunshine parlor" and the prayers of your friends—will not, cannot fail you— and you shall yet live in God's good time and strength to do your work and finish the task for which He gave you to the world.

"O Thou, who made so wondrous fair
This thrilling, my tree,
Because its every hour is lived
An offering unto Thee.

"Oh! take me, root and branch and all,
(The years go on apace)
Grow up in me that radiant life
That shines, Lord, from Thy face."

MARCH, APRIL, MAY, JUNE.

If ever this world needed the church that need is now. And if ever the church had an opportunity to make a contribution to the world that time is now. The church needs a spiritual awakening and for this the world is hungry. Benevolence is not enough. Kindness is not enough. Supplying bread and meat and clothing for physical needs are not enough. The need of the soul is preeminent and spiritual food is essential.

The church is something more than a civic society, a club, or a fraternal order. Jesus the Christ founded the church that the world might find and have salvation, not of body or mind only, but of soul and spirit.

We need not fool ourselves. Our problems at present are more than economic, social or civil: they are problems of the soul.

Our Congregational-Christian Churches have set aside March, April, May, and June as a period in which the church may face its spiritual problems, supply especially soul food for the spiritually hungry. In these four months we want to think especially, not how through a complacent benevolent attitude we may care for bodily needs, but through spiritual attitude, activity and preaching, we may care for the sin-sick, perishing souls of men and women. Only the Gospel of the Son of God can supply this need. Evangelism is the personal touch and reach, missions the sending out—reaching touch and saving power.

We cannot believe that any pastor who cares for the spiritual welfare of his people, and of the world will neglect this period, fail this opportunity or be indifferent to this challenge: "Go ye into all the world" still rings out from our Saviour's anxious heart, and constitutes the challenge to the world now, a world in need, a world that is soul-sick and hungry for the gospel of our Lord. Shall we give them to eat, or shall one be indifferent to their call and thus famish our own souls?

March, April, May, June, time of awakening. What shall our answer be?

J. O. A.

THINGS SPIRITUAL.

In recent days, we have heard much about the world and its needs. The ills of the world have been amplified. It requires no philosopher nor logican to convince the public that something is wrong with the world. There are plenty to diagnose but physicians to heal appear to be scarce. One contends that the ills of the world may be healed by an abundant flow of material values, that if people had plenty of money, evils of the world would disappear. Certain forces seem to be diligent in this direction. The fact of the matter is that evil is accentuated with an abundance of wealth.

It perhaps would be good if we would stop for a moment and think reflectively and constructively about the things of the spirit. The flesh is classed with the world. Paul said, "They that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh, but they that are after the spirit the things of the spirit; for to be carnally-minded is death, but to be spiritually-minded is life and peace." It may be difficult, however, to determine just what is spiritual. There are those who think to be spiritual means to be intensely emotional. There are others who think that to be spiritual means to be outwardly commendable; but, fortunately, the scriptures have been plain in defining the spiritual.

The spiritual is determined in terms of the fruitage of the individual life. Among the fruits of the spirit may be found meekness, gentleness, patience, long-suffering, love, sacrifice. These were the characteristics of Christ—hating sin but loving men, looking beyond them always with great compassion, forgiving those who had sinned, blessing those who had cursed, and lifting up those who had fallen. We are living in the reign of the Spirit; and if he could fill the hearts of His people and possess His church, he would be able to transform the world and renew the minds and hearts of those who today are far from Him. In our thinking, serving, and praying, let us emphasize the spiritual, and the fleshly and the worldly will be taken care of by Him Who is with all in all. L. E. S.

CONSECRATION.

We talk and sing about consecration rather freely. Seldom do the requirements of consecration impress themselves upon us. To be consecrated to the cause of Christ means absolute abandon to things contrary to His will and complete accord with the requirements of His gospel. To be consecrated to Christ means to be set apart according to His will in mind, in thought, and in deed. If we give ourselves to Christ, all that we have and are must be at His command and not to our wills.

Under the Mosaic Law, the first-born of every Hebrew home was consecrated to God—given over to Him for the service of the Kingdom and for the accomplishing of the will of God among men. When Samuel was born, his mother, Hannah, out of the gratitude of her heart and with a desire to please God, consecrated Samuel for the service of the Kingdom. Samuel belonged to the Lord and was thenceforth to be His servant without reservation. Under the Mosaic Law, not only did individuals consecrate themselves and their children, but at times they consecrated their lands and cattle to the Lord, setting apart the increase of the same for the glory of the Father. The servants of God in the past apparently rejoiced in the privileges of consecration.

An evident need of the church today is a greater number of genuine and consecrated souls among its fellowship—individuals who are willing to forego personal wishes, sacrifice personal ambitions for the interest of the Kingdom and the salvation of those who have not experienced a change of heart and of life. The Kingdom of God is in the earth. The task of the church is unfinished. The Kingdom will come in its fullness to the extent that those who represent the same are willing to consecrate themselves to turn from the world with its allurements to Christ with His commands.

This is the season of the year in which the church should consecrate itself definitely to achieve the high purpose of God in planting His Kingdom in the hearts of men. God is always near. In these recurring seasons that remind us of the passion, the suffering, and the death of our Lord, our devotions to Him should likewise be increased and our passion for the lost should be greatly accentuated. Let us be much in prayer and diligent in service that the lost may be found and the indifferent may be saved.

L. E. S.

THE WORLD PASSETH AWAY.

At an advanced age, the "Beloved Apostle," having an experience with the world and the Kingdom—seeing the one against the other—declared, "The world passeth away and the lust therefor, but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever." He had seen the values of the world rise and fall. He had heard the claims of the world and had observed that they came to nought. He had experienced the values of the spirit and had listened to the promises of God. Out of his own experience he could witness that that things of the spirit endureth. Not only had they endured, but they had grown richer as time had passed.

Standing toward the sunset of life, looking back over yesterday, renewing his experiences, he declared, "The world passeth away." Casting his eyes toward the future from the vantage ground where he stood, he caught a new glimpse of the things of the Kingdom. Things spiritual had a new meaning to him. They stood in a new relation. They possessed a greater value. He knew how fleeting the things of the world were. He knew how abiding the things of God were. Joyously, he exclaimed, "The world passeth away, but the spirit endureth."

In the richness of our own experiences, we are forced to the same conclusion. Yet, how foolish we are! We give the most of our time and energy in the interest of the world. We think but little about the things of God. Daily, we see evidences of the truthfulness of the declaration of the Apostle. Houses, lands, and money slip away. Material values come to nought. The flesh perishes, decays, and is no more. Truly, the world passeth and is constantly passing away. But, with equal assurance, they that doeth the will of God abideth not only today, but henceforth and forever more. Let us turn from the world, with its disappointments and disillusionments, to the kingdom with its inheritance and its riches! L. E. S.

THE SOUTHEAST CONVENTION.

Raleigh, N. C., April 30th, May 1st-2nd.

The interest in this Convention is widening and deepening among our church leaders here in the South. Our ministers feel the imperative need of a more adequate program for the work we are seeking to do. Letters are coming every day to the office of the church in Raleigh expressing not only the needs but the hope for a more vital program in the days to come.

Rev. Alfred W. Hurst of Pilgrim Church, Chattanooga, has contributed some very valuable suggestions. Two of the paragraphs in his letter are quoted in full. Two other paragraphs on the opportunities for cooperation with the Protestant churches and the opportunity for inter-racial effort will be considered in the meetings of the Convention.

"My parish needs a wider interest in the world-wide program of the church, a thrilling sense of being part of a glove-encircling fellowship of souls who are devoted to the building of the Kingdom of God on earth. My parish needs men who are willing to devote their time and ability to the service of the church and as leadedrs in the church's activities. My parish needs a greater sense of loyalty to the church, their church, the church of which they are members, a feeling that their churc needs them if it is to fulfil its mission, a feeling, indeed, that they are the church! We need men who are willing to grapple with the staggering problems of our age in terms of the gospel of Christ. We need a technique for generous financing of the church without making the appeal a legalistic one in terms of legalistic tithing. Our women should be released from so much money-making activity for a broader program of education and religious motivation and helpfulness. We need suggestions on how to build a strong church school in a down-town when children and young people are inclined to attend their community Sunday School of the Baptist or Presbyterian or Methodist orthodox brand in company with their day-school chums. Should we seek to discourage this? If not, are we to consider that our main service is to be in the field of adult education?"

"The membership of my church is not large enough to finance adequately a modern church program in a city. Would it be feasible to federate or merge with a church of another denomination if that local church were liberal in its outlook and program? Perhaps we have outgrown the emphasis on numerical growth in church membership but I find you can't accomplish much unless you have a sizeable group to lead and building a church in the South without resort to the revival method is discouragingly slow. Last year we received 26 new members and 'I'm telling you' it took a lot of hard work to do it. Can we do as well this year and in the years ahead? I wish someone would tell me how it can be done. An annual increase of 25 new members would require ten vears to build up a membership of 500 which is the least anv city church should have if it would finance and 'man' an adequate program."

Another important letter received was from Collegeside Church, Nashville, Tenn., Dr. A. D. Beittel, minister. Let me quote some sentences fro mthis letter: "I am hoping that it will be possible for me to participate in this Convention and to bring with me one or two delegates from Nashville. Following the lead of vour questions, I think anv Conference of this kind should be planned with the unsettled social situation prominentlv in mind. Our conference will not be realistic unless we face our problems against the background of strikes, lynchings, building of armaments, threats of war, etc. I think the seriousness of the present world situation provides the church with an unusual opportunity if the facts of the present situation are faced realistically."

We want Dr. Beittel to be with us. Our Christian churches must face the truth. The communications that are being received from all over the South will be kept together and turned over to our Superintendent. The knowledge that these letters contain will be made use of in discussion during the Convention. In the meantime letters are going out to all our ministers in North Carolina and Virginia. J. E. Kirbye.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Do you ever go "window shopping?" Certainly. Without money and without price, one may look at all the new merchandise on display, and make plans for the future. This gives one a fresh outlook on life. Every person needs to be refreshed by the inspiration of a new vision.

In the evening time, when the stars are keeping vigil and the lights are burning dimly, it is interesting to sit quietly and review the events of the day, with the question, "What have I seen today?" And this hour of musing, while the fire burns in the open grate, leads one to ask many questions. One may ask: "Where have I been? What have I been looking for? What did I see within myself? Do I see myself as I am? What is my outlook on life?"

Everything depends upon the "inlook" as well as the "outlook." One should go "window shopping" within the secret recesses of one's own heart and soul. In these busy days, when there is an increasing urge to concentrate our efforts upon "getting" and "getting along," one does not find it easy to look intently upon the inner life, to discover spiritual needs and find a way of larger spiritual life. The past has hung many pictures and dreams upon the walls of the imaginative mind. It is something of a challenge to unfold this record and make a study of its contribution to conduct and character.

However, the "outlook" gives fascination to "window shopping". Looking at the new goods in the show windows and in the stores, one's attention may be attracted by one article. Afterwards memory reproduces the picture and creates a desire to return and purchase the merchandise. Merchants usually do not sell goods when they have an "opening evening." People are invited to see the latest styles in the new goods to be sold later. Business men appreciate the value of having people "look at" their merchandise. Show windows and all other forms of advertising are based upon the principle that a desire and a purpose may be created by making a thing attractive to the eye.

Now, dear reader, this is not a plea for you to go out window shopping, in search of a new hat, suit or dress. That matter will take care of itself. However, there are many windows—places of interest—waiting for your inspection. Think of the departments of your local church; the Sunday school, the Missionary Societies, the Work of the Young People ,the preaching services, the poor and needy who should be visited. There is an opportunity for every church member to seek new inspiration for the spiritual conquests of life; and the people who go out looking for opportunity, will find rich treasures waiting for their faith and devotion. Too often valuable time is lost looking for exceptional bargains in material values; while the great unmeasured heights of heavenly character are neglected and despised.

This is a great day for people who will look for opportunity. The day of dreaming is not passed. The present is rich in outlook and prospect. The joy-killer is always in the midst of people who seek to look unto the hills for their help. When the leaders of youth point to Washington at Mt. Vernon; Robert E. Lee at the head of the Confederacy and at Lexington, Virginia; Lincoln the rail-splitter in the White House; Thomas A. Edison lighting the world; and hundreds of other heroes in shop, studio, office, state and nation who have looked out to be inspired by the challenge of so-called insurmountable difficulties, our young people should remember that there are many more worlds to be conquered. The world is waiting for adventurour youth and tenacions age to inspire faith in the future. Civilization is not dead. The church is alive. The church should go shopping for future conquests in the name of Jesus of Nazareth. Will you join the forward march?

HOLLAND CHURCH RAISES ITS QUOTA.

Through the invitation of Dr. William Jay, pastor of the Holland Church, the writer was privileged to spend the week end with the good people of Holland. Saturday afternoon was given over to personal visitation, giving interested individuals information regarding the college and her needs. Sunday morning, I had the privilege of preaching to the Holland congregation, at which time an offering for the college was received. The afternoon and part of the evening were likewise spent in Holland community. The people received me cordially and manifested a genuine interest in the college. All seemed delighted with the evident progress of the college.

As a result of our efforts and of the great interest of the Holland Church in the college, the entire quota was raised in cash and subscriptions. The church as a whole manifested its interest by voting $100 out of the benevolent treasury for the college. Additional amounts contributed by individuals in cash and pledges amounted to $101. The church's quota was $191. This is certainly commendable and greatly encourages the ones of us who bear the responsibilities at the college.

The Holland church set a good example for other churches. Since the college is to share in the benevolent fund, it would be well for the churches who have benevolent funds to vote a part of the same to the college now. The college is to receive 40 per cent of the money sent to conference. To make this payment in advance would greatly assist us in our program now. We have been able to balance our budget to date, but we will be utterly dependent upon the churches and their support for the remainder of the year. We need your assistance. Please do not disappoint us.

It was indeed a pleasure to visit the Holland Church again, to be with Dr. Jay and his good people, and to receive the encouragement that they always give. This is to express to all who had a part in the magnificent achievement the college's gratitude and my own personal appreciation.

PORTSMOUTH CHURCH CAMPAIGN.

Rev. R. A. Whitten, pastor of the Portsmouth Church, has agreed to help other churches of the Eastern Virginia Conference in raising their quotas for the college. The writer will greatly appreciate any courtesy shown or help given Bro. Whitten by the pastors and churches of the Conference. The college is greatly in need of financial assistance at this time. Contributions may be made any time during the months of March, April or May. Brother Whitten's church has very generously granted him the privilege of assisting in the college campaign.

Brother Whitten and some of his people suggested that I personally visit the members of the Portsmouth Church and raise the amount that the church is expected to contribute. I had the privilege of spending Monday afternoon and a part of Monday evening with the Portsmouth people. All visited manifested an unusual interest in the church and in the college as the church's institution; and with but few exceptions, I received a generous pledge for the college. $120 was received in cash and pledges. The quota for the Portsmouth Church is $150. I am sure that the full quota for the Portsmouth Church will be raised without difficulty. I wish to express the college's gratitude and my own personal appreciation to Brother Whitten and his people for the cordial reception and the generous gifts received for the college.

CO-OPERATION.

For many years we have carried on a great missionary enterprise in Columbia, S. C. Our little church was built on a side hill, four blocks from the governor's mansion on the one side and about six blocks from the state prison on the other.

The people of the neighborhood were workmen in the mills hard by. None were rich. All were trying to make a living by honest, hard work. With little to encourage them, none continued long in the school room. Few were educated. All were needy. Some were bad, some good. Some were victims of alcoholic drinks and were slaves to liquor. Some beat their wives and children. Some were kind and tried hard to be followers of the friend of all men, even Jesus.

Our Extension Boards long ago saw that this was a purely missionary piece of work—no chance to build a strong church and little opportunity to branch out into a better location. The people could not be moved. And they needed us.

During the last three years Rev. Florence L. Squires has given her life to the great task of saving mankind in this neighborhood. The story cannot be fully told. But she served all classes. The poor she fed. The drunken she sought to recover. The sick, she brought them comfort, medicine, food and clothing. The children, she taught and trained them in Christian culture. The rich and noble of other denominations, she brought some of them to her aid. To the glory of God be it said, she brought the Baptists, the Methodists, the Episcopalians—and others, into a position of serving God among the lowly. There came thrilling tales of snatching the victims of sin from the burning and placing them on higher levels; stories, too, of her serving the larger churches in the way of leading their women in religious education (Mrs. Squires is an expert in this) and missionary activity—this, and more, faintly indicates the scope of service being rendered. She was wanted everywhere. And many from other churches gave her some help from time to time. One man especially, from the Lutheran Church, and several from the Episcopal Church gave her encouragement and assisted in the Sunday School and in the regular services, and at Easter and Christmas seasons. Altogether it was an example of denominational cooperation of an unusual sort.

The time came when it was hard for us to furnish sufficient money and man power to carry on effectively. This was evident to all who were in the know. Gradually a growing interest grew up between our minister and the Episcopal church people. Their rectors gave valuable aid in many ways. When the question arose last July as to what we should do with the work which was increasingly becoming too heavy for us to carry and do it well, we thought of giving it up entirely. We reasoned that after all it was a work which belonged to the city of Columbia anyway. More workers who were near enough to get under the load efficiently were needed. We did not have these in that area. What shall we do, give it up? Many of us hesitated. But it became necessary to face the issue frankly and honestly. There was regret but the decision was reached to close as gracefully as we could. As the time came to carry out our agreement, our lady minister said: "No, I will give my life to these people as long as I can work." And then our good neighbor came down where the weak church hung on the bank of the hill side.

After many interviews with leaders of the Extension Boards and with Mrs. Squires, the pastor at large sought and obtained an interview with the good bishop of upper South Carolina, Bishop K. G. Finlay of the Episcopalian Church. He had been kind to our little church. Dr. Taylor, rector of the Church of the Good Shepherd, had often given a helping hand to our pastor. He is one of the leading men of the city of Columbia in service to the poor. When told of this work of ours, the bishop was asked if he were interested. His remark was full of the greatest blessing for these people you could wish to hear. "I am deeply interested. It will give my churches of Columbia an opportunity to serve. They need something of this sort." and then Dr. Taylor added, "And the work will go on. That is what I am interested in. The work is needed." And much else was said by all of us at this conference in Hotel Columbia that good night. The result was an agreement to let the Bishop have general oversight of the work provided the people of the church were willing to come under the "Watched care"—was the way the Bishop put it—"of our church." The people voted gladly to accept this welcome aid. Under the "Watched care" of the Episcopal church, the work will go on. Mrs. Squires will continue to act as pastor. The Bishop will provide for her needs in every way. The insurance on the building will be carried by our Boards, as the beneficiaries. Mrs. Squires is happy in the new relationship. She will continue to be a clergyman in good standing of our denomination. And "The Work Goes On" so much better than we could ever do it.

Is this not a sign of the coming Kingdom? "That they may be one?" A neighboring denomination finding a place for action—shall we say "Social action?"—right where one denomination finds itself unable to properly carry on and offers help and accepts responsibility, full responsibility, to watch over the work which, potentially, is perhaps the greatest welfare service that any church is doing in that capital city. And when we found we could not carry on with strength, we had the good sense and the grace to pass on our work to a great friend who by the grace of God and the faithful cooperation of us all, will make rough places plain and a highway for our God will be builded in the midst of a people who see in this expression of cooperation the spirit of the Christ who alone can save.

REVIVALS, WHAT AND WHY?

The dictionary definition of revival is, "the act of reviving." The specific use of the word with which we are interested is "a religious awakening, with numerous or continuous services." Our fathers spoke of it as "a protracted meeting" and we speak of it as "an evangelistic campaign" or "a week of prayer." The psychologist in his study of religious experience will say "Mass evangelism." The Bible prototype is seen in these verses: "There may come seasons of refreshing from the presence of the Lord." "The Love of God hath been shed abroad in our heart by the Holy Spirit which was given unto us." "When they heard this they were pricked in their hearts . . . . And the Lord added unto them day by day those that were saved." The profound stirring of feelings and the conversion of sinners are the tests of a true revival as distinct from a trumped up or an attempted revival.

Pastors long for such seasons and "old timers" pray that the church may be revived. The desire does not stir much response in the hearts of some younger folks. They have seen meetings called revivals that had many unfortunate elements and have heard agonizing prayer that seemed to produce nothing. There is nothing in their background or observation that convinces them of the value of revivals. The difference in estimate is the result of varying experience and in the consideration of a separate body of facts.

It is an evident fact of church history that the most notable advances in the Christian religion, with the attendant fruits of social reform, missionary advance and educational development, have been in relation to the great historic revivals. There have been associated evils but in the main the result of revivals has been good. A dozen volumes would be required to illustrate this statement but the Editor is sure it can be substantiated. He suggests the reading of Bishop Candler's, Great Revivals and the Great Republic, or a book with less sympathy, Grover C. Loud's, Evangelized America.

A knowledge of the working force and strength of most local churches will show that many of our most useful members were brought into the church during revivals. The most sacred memories of these good people cluster around those holy days when their hearts were warmed with an assurance of the love of God. They would have all whom they know to experience such happiness. They long for a revival as they love their comrades in the church. Running through the records of many of our best and most conservative churches it will be seen that the years which marked the greatest increase were years when the church rejoiced in great revivals. There are many of our strong churches which were born in revivals. This is true of churches where revivals are not even attempted now.

Even good and loyal people are not always keyed to the same high point of interest and enthusiasm about the things in which they believe. Indifference to religion does not prevail in many of our good people in many working churches. The intellect when it is not vitalized by emotion does not drive one very far. A revival is the means of stimulating interest and creating enthusiasm so that more zealous work may be done in the church and greater joy may be found in the hearts of Christians.

Psychologically a revival is emotion applied to religion. It is manipulated by experts. This is the worst charge against it. However, we must recognize that the same method is found profitable in every zone of life where promotion is necessary. We have seen the same psychological methods adopted in a Liberty Loan drive, a sales conference, a community effort to get a new high school, at a football game and in a political convention. Whatever people may believe or desire they do not do much unless their feelings are stirred. Now please get this—there are things in a revival that cannot be accounted for by the psychology of emotion but the church should think twice before it scraps a technique which it originated and has been adopted by practically every promotional effort because of its effectiveness.

Methodists, among whom the revival had its renaissance in modern times, have seen some abuses in the method which have caused them to discount the thing without which they would not have been a church. Before they turn away from it they should look abroad and see many other religious groups adopting the plan at which too many of them look askance.

How does a revival work? The heart of one is stirred by the joy of a personal assurance of salvation. He burns to tell others of the thing he knows. The fire spreads and the many are fused with the same holy emotion. Then each works with an abandon that would be impossible for anyone working alone. The combined force of many working together exerts an influence on individuals and the community that could not be exerted by the same number working individually. It is flood tide in the rivers that flow through the city of God. It is a contagion in the things of the spirit.

There may be foam on the crest of the incoming sea. Flotsam and jetsam may be washed up into the church. We should see the moving of the waters beneath these things and believe it all is a power that no man can create. We should use the turn of the tide to bear us nearer to God.

What then should be the attitude of the younger person, who cannot enthuse over the idea of a revival and who has become disgusted with some things he has seen at a revival? May the Editor suggest to his many friends of this group, that when the church of which they may be members, calls for prayer for a revival that they take a long and broad look and try to see what has been done by this method in giving them the church in which they live and labor. Be sympathetic and not cynical. Cooperate and do not criticize. Remember that God fulfills Himself in many ways. Give yourselves to your work and honestly try to win others to a confession of Christ. Keep your own souls open to the Spirit of God and you may find in your life a season of refreshment which will abide in your memory and possibly lead you to join the church in its prayer:

Wilt Thou not revive us again:
That Thy people may rejoice in Thee?

O Lord, revive thy work in the midst of the years,
In the midst of the years make known.

CRUTCHFIELD.

Information has reached the Sun office of the death of Mr. M. M. Crutchfield, father of Revs. G. C. and H. E. Crutchfield. Brother Crutchfield died Saturday morning, March 1st, and was buried at Pleasant Ridge Christian Church Sunday afternoon at 3:00. The services were conducted by Rev. D. M. Spence, pastor of the church, who was assisted by Revs. W. T. Scott, of Winston-Salem, Rev. I. S. Carden, of Durham, Rev. T. S. Hill, and Rev. Mr. Bowlen of the M. E. Church from Oak Ridge, N. C. Further details of the service are not known. I am forwarding this information to the Christian Sun for the information of the relatives and friends of the family.

The writer extends sympathy to the bereaved. May God bless and comfort them.

MISSIONS

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., Secretary.

AN OPEN LETTER.

To All Our Beloved Pastors:

Greetings and prayers for your continued health and strength in your arduous labors for our Lord.

It certainly seems most wise and seasonable that we as a Church years ago decided upon March, April, May, June as the period for emphasizing missions, bringing home to ourselves and our good people the fact of the sacrifice of our Lord on Calvary and His glorious resurrection three days later. Spring is the season of new born life, and in April we celebrate Easter. Through the agony of the Cross and the triumph of the resurrection, salvation to a lost and sinning world was declared complete in Him Who seeing and knowing these things said, "Go ye into all the world and preach my gospel to the whole creation."

Shall we not this year seek to bring home to the hearts of our people this eternal truth, and then give all the churches and church people an opportunity of expressing by a self-denial offering their willingness and desire to share His suffering and obey His command and thus enjoy His victory?

Our last Convention renewed its faith in the wisdom of this custom by again setting aside these four months as mission period. Will you, my brethren, one and all, not even now begin to emphasizing the importance and necessity of soul winning and of extending our Lord's Kingdom to the uttermost parts by sharing His saving grace with others? We may now and with greatest wisdom and helpfulness emphasize evangelism and missions—for it is only through such emphasis that the church is built up and the kingdom of our Lord is extended. Have we a passion for the salvation of souls? Can we afford to go complacently along with a sort of benevolent attitude? Shall we be contented just to go along undisturbed by and indifferent to the soul cry and spiritual hunger of the world? God forbid. Our Lord did not plant His Church just to be a benevolent, conscience-salve sort of an institution. He planted His Church to carry the message of hope to despairing hearts, and of salvation to sin-sick perishing souls.

May we not, brother pastors, within these four months, especially lay emphasis on the spiritual needs of humanity and the power of the Gospel to save souls to the uttermost? God help us and lay upon us the burden of soul saving both within the range of our voice and the reach of our self-denial for Christ.

THE LOCAL CHURCH AND THE MISSIONARY OFFERINGS.

March, April, and May have been designated as the months in which the churches and individuals may express their continued interest in the church's larger program. It is fine for the individual member to be interested in his own local church. It is very helpful for him to give wholehearted support to the program of his own local church. But it is a much finer thing for him to have a vision of and an interest in the universal work of the Kingdom. There are many points in our own state and country that need our help. Our church has done a good work in the mountains of Virginia through its Mission Board, and numerous churches in North Carolina and Virginia have been materially assisted. We have been accustomed to call work of this kind Home Missions. By such efforts, we have been strengthening the home base and encouraging our people to make their contribution since they have the privilege of observing the good that is being accomplished. We also have been blessed with an enlarged vision; and through our Mission Board and the Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, we have been assisting in the permanent establishment of the church in lands beyond our own.

Every phase of our missionary work has been compelled to suffer during the past years for the lack of funds. Mission stations have been closed, work has been discontinued, and missionaries have been called home, simply because our Boards did not have sufficient funds. It would seem that the day would come when every individual in every local church would feel its responsibility to do his best to give as generously as possible in order that the work of the church and the coming of the Kingdom may not be hindered.

As a part of the larger budget of our Convention, every church has been assigned a definite quota to raise for missions. This quota will be printed in the Christian Sun in next week's issue. Be sure to look for it that you may be able to raise the amount asked from your church. Heretofore, it has been the plan of the Mission Board and the Convention to ask the local churches to contribute to our missionary work one-third as much as they pay their pastor as salary—one-third as much to carry the gospel to others as you pay to have the gospel preached to you. In lieu of this plan, the churches have been asked to contribute a definite amount to missions. Whatever you raise during these three months and send to the Mission Treasurer from your church will count on your conference apportionments. If all the churches would raise their full quotas, the missionary cause would be well cared for and the raising of conference apportionments at the end of the church year would not be such a difficult task.

Bother Pastor, begin now to inform your congregation and prepare them for the great privilege of sharing what they have for the larger interests of the church and of the Kingdom.

THE CHRISTIAN ACQUISITION AND USE OF MONEY.

The above is the name of a Syllabus prepared by the Commission on Stewardship of the General Council. It was submitted to the Seminar at Oberlin and is now being used in discussion groups, Sunday School classes, men's brotherhoods and women's organizations. During the second week of February, three discussion groups met in three sections of Ohio. Five full hours were given to this discussion. There was no raising of money nor the promotion of any cause, as such. The purpose was to consider the matters of acquiring money, spending money, giving money, church and kingdom monies, and the money atmosphere, habits and attitudes in the home training. There was an earnest desire to find the teachings of Jesus, the principles of the scriptures and to study present attitudes and habits of individuals, business agencies, churches, homes in these vital matters. There was a real attempt to bring out the spiritual emphasis and the Christian manner of acquiring money in industry, commerce, the professions, investments. The use of money was discussed as it related to our expenditures in living, saving, and their effects upon character and the less fortunate.

To those seminars were invited the pastors and four or five representative laymen of approximately ten neighboring Congregational Christian churches. They began at ten o'clock in the morning and continued until four in the afternoon. The chairman of our Commission is Mr. Gardner Lattimer of Columbus, who is a busy, business layman of many interests. He attended all of the seminars and was one of the leaders. The other leaders were Superintendent Hall of Ohio, Revs. Archie H. Hook and Raymond G. Clark, busy pastors at Troy and Piqua, and the Exeecutive Secretary.

A discussion group in any church for five such periods will be full of interest and most revealing.

A discussion by several selected leaders from a group of nearby churches for a day will be stimulating. Fifty should be the maximum number at any such informal discussion group.

The members of the Commission within the bounds of the Southeast Convention of the Congregational and Christian Churches are Rev. Jno. G. Truitt, D. D., Suffolk, Va., and Rev. Jesse H. Dollar, LaGrange, Ga.

Mrs. Akana glanced at the cakes and then suppressed a gasp. The autumn leaf was nothing more nor less than the Ace of Spades.

A Story for the Children

THE SMALLEST BIRD IN THE WORLD.

The smallest known bird is the humming bird. It is found only in the New World, of which it is a native. It ranges from the Strait of Magellan, at the southern tip of South America, to Alaska. There are 488 different kinds of these birds, but only sixteen kinds are found north of Mexico. There is only one kind found east of the Mississippi River and north of Florida. This is the common ruby-throat humming bird which is familiar throughout the eastern half of the United States and Canada.

This interesting little bird received its name from the humming sound of its fast moving wings. The ruby-throat is so named because of the bright red spot on the throats of the males.

The size of the humming bird seems very diminutive when compared with the world's largest bird, the ostrich. The smallest humming bird is found in Cuba, and its body is about one and one-fourth inches long, while the ostrich may be eight feet in height and weigh as much as 300 pounds. The largest known humming bird is the "giant hummer," eight and one-half inches long, found in the Andean mountains of South America. It resembles our swifts.

The beautiful colors of the humming birds are due to refractions of sunlight from the feathers. Many iridescent hues are produced, and the color varies according to the angle of light. This is why the colors seem to change as the birds change their position. Our common ruby-throat is a bright, shining green color on its upper parts, and purplish on its wings and tail. Only the male has the red throat. So beautiful are the colors that Audubon, the great bird authority, has called these birds "glittering fragments of the rainbow." Others have called them "feathered gems."

The flight of these birds is especially interesting. They are the only land birds that can reverse their wing action, and move backwards as well as forwards. You have all seen them do this if you have seen them feeding at flowers. Their wings move so rapidly that one can see only a blur where the wings are. These wings make over two hundred vibrations, or beats, per second —which is five or six times as fast as an airplane propeller usually travels. Because of this, these birds can appear to stand still in mid-air, or can support themselves while they dip their beaks into a flower blossom for nectar.

Their speed is very fast when traveling. They are like "self-propelled bullets" as they dart here and there through space at the speed of one hundren feet per second, which is more than a mile a minute. Their wing muscles are very well developed and much of their life is spent on the wing. Not only can they go forward or backward, but they can rise straight up in the air at any point like a heliocopter.

Contrary to popular opinion, these birds are not very peaceful, and they have very ugly tempers. In fact, there is scarcely anything that can exceed their fierceness when they are disturbed during the mating season. They attack intruders with bewildering courage for such tiny creatures, and they seem to be absolutely fearless. Many are the times when I have watched with amazement as one of them would put to flight a large crow or hawk. It is reported that even airplanes have been attacked by them. During the mating season, you may see a couple of males fighting in the air for hours at a time, occasionally falling to the earth with locked bills. They have never been known to attack human beings unless their nest is approached and endangered.

Their food consists chiefly of insects and nectar. They may be seen darting into groups of insects in the air. Their long tongue is able to snatch insects and hold them tightly. After the nutriment is all out, the birds regurgitate the remains and spit it out in tiny pellets.

Their fondness for nectar is secondary to their insect appetite. However, they delight to probe their long bills into the hearts of honeysuckle and trumpet vines, as well as petunias. They may be fed from a small bottle wrapped with bright cloth and filled with sugar water, and hung among the blossoms of a vine. Try this and you will see some delightful sights. They may even become tame enough to take sugar-water from the palm of your hand. They have been known to become so tame that they would take sugar held between the lips of a person.

Our humming birds have no song. However, they are not entirely silent, for their wings produce a whir-r-r of rhythmic movement, and when these birds are angry they often give piercing "squeaks" and "twitters." Perhaps a wise Nature thought that the beautiful colors of the humming birds were sufficient adornments for them, and saved the song abilities for the birds less brilliantly clothed.

Their nests are always very inconspicuous, and are difficult to find. They are constructed of soft plant parts, such as the down of thistles, and are about the size of a teaspoon. On the outside of the nest there will be bits of bark, moss or lichens which help to conceal it. All these may be bound together with spider webs. Their nests may be high or low, and have been reported on almost all kinds of twigs and plants.

Two white eggs are laid and brooded by the mother. The father watches on a near-by twig, and after the eggs hatch, he helps with the feeding. Their food consists of regurgitated insects which are deposited far down their throats by the long bills of the parents. In about three weeks the babies are able to leave the nest.

The migration of these tiny creatures is remarkable. They return in the fall from Canada and the United States and go South into Mexico and South America. The males leave first, usually the last of August or early September, and the females linger a month or so while the young are strengthening their wings for the flight South.—Advance.

Rev. F. C. Lester, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

WHAT MAKES IT GO UP?

Between my house and the main part of the city of Norfolk, there is a big steel bridge across the Eastern Branch of the Elizabeth River. Today as I was walking across it a tug boat signalled for passage underneath. Just after I crossed the middle of the bridge, the part on which I had been walking went up into the air. I stood and watched it go up and wondered what makes it go up. There was no arm, lever or power of any kind that I could see which made that section of the city street climb right up into mid air, but it went up until the boat could go underneath without any danger. Somewhere there was what people call electricity that made machinery work and pull those pieces of steel, boards, and concrete up into the air, but I do not know what electricity is, so I still do not know what made it go up. But it went up.

A high school boy tells me his teacher says religion is a myth. I suppose his teacher meant that she could not understand it and therefore it is not real. And yet it is religion that has made people climb higher in the moral realm than anything else has ever done. One standing by and looking at the process can see people rising ever higher, but they have difficulty in knowing what makes them go up. Those of us who experience religion say that it is God that makes us go up, but we cannot tell exactly what God is. Neither can the electrician tell what electricity is.

In either case we do not have to wait until we understand all about a complete definition before we use the power. Just as the bridge man uses electricity to raise that span of a city street into the air without ever defining the electricity which he uses for the lifting process, so may we use the spiritual energy and grace which we call God without waiting for a perfect definition of God.

HOW FAR DO YOU DRIFT?

Standing on this same bridge today far above the placid waters, I began to tear a piece of paper and toss it into the breeze and let it float out on to the water. Carelessly tossing this paper into the air I soon noticed that the heavier pieces fell straighter down while the lighter pieces were blown farther away.

But I wondered if that is true to human experience. Do those who have real worth in themselves go quite directly to the tasks which are theirs or do they rest upon the bosom of the deep while those who are less heavy in moral qualities drift with the winds far out from where they might otherwise be?

Winds do blow, temptations come to everyone. Storms are a part of human experience. If there is something of real worth in one's life the storms do not drive one so far from the charted course. It is the light weight persons who drift with the current of present thought, who are led by the gang, who never have a thought for themselves. To be able to say, "No, no, a thousands times no," is probably a virtue within itself and certainly indicates that the person has something of quality in the soul.

EASTER EVANGELISM.

Young people and adults alike should be interested in bringing the good news of Christ to those who know him not. The Cross has a persuasive power beyond that of anything else we know. Regardless of how it may be interpreted, the Cross still stands as a magnet that draws people to it.

This means that the Easter season is perhaps the best time of the year to present the Christian message to a lost world. It is then that the Cross appears most appropriate in the message of the church. We have gone far afield in our free churches and make but little of the lenten season. In this we have lost much that the Roman church still has. I would make no appeal for the observance as it is done in some branches of the church, but I do believe all of us should study anew the last days of the Master's life and in His spirit seek to bring into the fellowship of the church those who are on the outside.

Many of our churches will hold special services leading up to Easter. All could well afford to do so. But whether there are special services or not, those who really love the Master should busy themselves in trying to win others to Christ and the church at this season of the year and bring them into the membership on the day of the resurrection.

Young people may well plan a sunrise service for Easter Sunday morning. It was then that the women found the open tomb and saw the resurrected Christ. It is at this early hour that Christian people today can find a real blessing by searching for the spirit of Jesus in their place of worship. This service should be planned long in advance so that it may have proper advertising and then mean all it should to those who attend. It is at this service that I like to receive members into the church, and I commend the idea to all of my friends who may chance to read this article.

IDEAS OF INTEREST.

On last Sunday the executive committee of Eastern Virginia Youth Fellowship met and planned for a spring rally to be held at Suffolk Christian Church on the afternoon and evening of April 6th. The program will center around what young people can do to help build a new world. All pastors, young people, and leaders of young people should mark this date of their calendar and plan to be present.

According to present arrangements, Miss Lucy Eldredge will come south on April 21st and remain here until May 6th. She will teach in a training school at Southern Pines, attend the Southeast Convention, and will be available for young people's work in the Carolinas the remainder of the time she is here. If you know of service which she can render, please write to the editor of this page giving such information.

Don't forget the Southeast Convention and Youth Fellowship to be held in Raleigh, North Carolina, April 30th to May 2nd. This is a very important meeting of our church people of the Southeast. All leaders of adults and young people should be present if possible.

MANAGING OURSELVES.

Christian Endeavor Topic for March 17th.

Scripture: I Tim. 4:12-16.

Preparing the Program:

Some suggested hymns are "Give of Your Best to the Master"; "In the Service of the King"; "The Son of God Goes Forth to War"; "Dear Lord and Father of Mankind"; "Just As I Am, Thine Own To Be."

Bible thoughts: Diligence makes character, 2 Tim. 2:15; Good conversations, Psalm 50:23; Purity, 2 Tim. 2:22; Hold fast to faith, 1 Tim. 1:18, 19; Works and faith, Jas. 2:14-26; Be an example, Tit. 2:7; and Romans 12:1-2; 11-21; 1 Cor. 13; John 10:10; Phil. 4:8.

Prayer Thought: Psalm 19:14.

Poems:

SOLITUDE.

Laugh, and the world laughs with you;
Weep, and you weep alone.
For the sad old earth must borrow its mirth,
But has trouble enough of its own.
Sing, and the hills will answer;
Sigh, it is lost on the air.
The echoes bound to a joyful sound,
But shrink from voicing care.

Rejoice, and men will seek you;
Grieve, and they turn and go.
They want full measure of all your pleasure,
But they do not need your woe.
Be glad and your friends are many;
Be sad, and you lose them all.
There are none to decline your nectared wine,
But alone you must drink life's gall.

Feast, and your halls are crowded;
Fast, and the world goes by.
Succeed and give, and it helps you live,
But no man can help you die.
There is room in the halls of pleasure
For a long and lordly train,
But one by one we must file on
Through the narrow aisles of pain.

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

True worth is in being, not seeming,—
In doing, each day that goes by,
Some little good—not in dreaming
Of great things to do by and by;
For whatever men say in their blindness,
And spite of the fancies of youth,
There's nothing so kingly as kindness,
And nothing so royal as truth.

Helps for Discussion:

Books: "Secrets of Effective Living" and "Managing One's Self" by Dr. James Gordon Gilkey.

"The Man of the Hour"—(Aug. 1934 "Christian Herald"), "So This Is Repeal"—(Nov., 1934 "Christian Herald").

In his "Creative Living" Kirby Page gives ten steps which are important aids to any person who really wants to manage himself. Discuss each of these, and show how it helps one in managing himself.

1. Budget your time.
2. Help to lift the load which other people carry.
3. Have some great dream of what you want to be and do and prepare for a life work which will help you to achieve this.
4. Practice silence each day! learn how to relax; make use of daily periods of meditation and prayer.
5. Attend church and participate in public worship.
6. Surround yourself with beauty. Discover places where you may enjoy the calm and rest of beautiful environments.
7. Pitch your friendship on a high level. Have some worthy friends with whom you can talk about the most important matters of life as well as the trivial events of daily life.
8. Read great biographies. What are some of them? How much would a person be helped who tried to read something of the life of Jesus each day?
9. Run the risks and accept the consequences of being true to your ideals.
10. Keep a record of what you want to do and check yourself on it frequently.

Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

PETER PREACHES TO GENTILES.

Lesson X—March 10, 1935.

Golden Text: "God is no respecter of persons; but in every nation he that feareth Him, and worketh righteousness, is acceptable to Him.—Acts 10:34b, 35.

Lesson: Acts 10:1—11:18—15:6-11.

Devotional Reading: Psalm 67:1-7

God moves in mysterious ways, His wonders to perform. An excellent illustration of this fact is to be seen in today's lesson. To begin with, one cannot over-emphasize the far-reaching consequences of Peter's act in going to Caesarea to visit Cornelius and to preach to his assembled household. It was the beginning of the gospel's ministry to the Gentiles in a fuller and more complete way. As yet the new movement had been confined to the Jews. It was still in its swaddling clothes. In spite of Christ's repeated emphasis upon the world-wide aspects of His gospel, the early church was circumscribed in its outlook and in its outreach. It had begun at Jerusalem and in Judea and it had even gone into Samaria, but it had not gone "unto the uttermost parts of the world," and this experience of Peter's opened up a new era in the history of the Church. Paul was, of course, the great apostle to the Gentiles, but Simon Peter had already broken through the racial and religious barriers and had taken the gospel to the Gentiles as symbolized by Cornelius and his household. That this was so unusual is evidenced by the fact that Peter had to give an account of himself before the "powers that be." Rather than rejoicing in the expansive program and power of the gospel, the leaders of the early church—at least some of them—took exception to it, and demanded an explanation of it. One sees here the binding and blighting power of prejudice—the thing which H. G. Wells says is the worst thing in the world today. Prejudice—racial, class, national, religious—is one of the most deadly things in the world today. This lesson is the story of how God broke down Peter's prejudices and made him see that the gospel was for all men.

The Working of the Spirit.

The lesson illustrates one of the many ways in which the Holy Spirit works. Here was Simon Peter in Joppa, and Cornelius in Caesarea, neither knowing of the other, but both praying, and through the working of the Spirit, God brought them together. God can and does work through the Spirit as a result of prayer. A boy may be on the Pacific Coast and his mother on the Atlantic, bu the Spirit can move upon their hearts and do more things than this world ever dreams of. What a vast field in the realm of the spiritual this lesson opens up to us.

It was the Spirit, too, which broke down Peter's racial and religious prejudice, and gave him a new heart as touching the Gentiles. Prejudice of this kind is so deep-rooted that only the Holy Spirit can break it down. Those who have the spirit of Christ alone can raise above prejudice. But the Holy Spirit can cleanse our hearts of prejudice.

Peter's Sermon.

This fellow Peter was a great preacher. We saw what a great sermon he preached at Pentecost before the huge crowd. We have here another masterful sermon before a small group in a home. Peter's eloquence did not depend upon the place or the number, but upon the power of the Spirit. And as was always the case with him, his central theme, or the heart of his message was Jesus Christ. Let us list briefly some of Peter's striking statements in this most effective sermon.

A. God is no respecter of persons. We white folks sometimes think, or at least we act as if, God cared only for us, heard only us, was interested only in us. God is no respecter of persons. It makes no difference to Him whether a man is white or black, brown or yellow, rich or poor, learned or ignorant, strong or weak, prominent or obscure—he asks only that a man have the right spirit, that he "fear Him"—not be afraid of Him, but hold Him in awe and reverence—, and that "he worketh righteousness"—that his outer conduct shall give evidence that he tries to please God.

B. Good tidings of peace by Jesus Christ.

It was the message of the angels on the first Christmas morning. Peace, good-will, brotherhood—these are the emphases in the gospel. And there is the peace of God which passeth understanding for the individual heart. But let no man think that this means soothing slumber, rest from work, acquiescence to present conditions of evil. Christ's gospel does give inner peace, but it also stirs to action, creates division, arouses dissatisfaction.

C. He is Lord of All. Peter always emphasized that. He had no doubt as to Christ's claim, and he had no doubt as to Christ's ability. God had exalted Him and had given Him a name that was above every other name.

D. A Short Biography of Jesus.

In a few words Peter gives a summary of Christ's life, and also gives the secret. He had been annointed with the Holy Spirit and hence with power. He had used that power for others—He had gone about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the devil. And He had done this for God was with Him. There was abundant and indisputable evidence that the spirit of God had been working in and through Jesus of Nazareth.

E. We Are Witnesses.

It was not hearsay. As Peter later wrote, these things were not cunningly devised fables. They themselves had seen them, they had been with Him when they happened. The works of Jesus are soberly attested, historical facts. No man need doubt them.

F. Crucified and Risen.

Peter always brought that in. He wanted the Jews to know that they had crucified the Lord of Life. And he wanted them to know that death had not been able to hold Him. He was alive. They worshipped no historical hero—they had fellowshipped with a living personality. They had eaten and drank with Him after He had risen from the dead.

G. Made Manifest—But Not to All.

All men had not seen Christ, for all men were not able to see Him. Spiritual things are spiritually discerned. But God saw to it that a large number did see and believe. The resurrection of Jesus is not unauthenticated fable—it is a sober, historical fact, a stubborn fact which cannot be explained away.

The Holy Spirit of the Gentiles.

No race or creed or color has a monopoly on the Holy Spirit. To those who repent and believe the gospel, God gives His Holy Spirit. And there are those of lowly birth and strange colors, who have more of the Spirit of Christ in their hearts than do many so-called superior people. God is no respecter of persons as concerning His Holy Spirit, that is among those who accept the Christ.

WHERE IS GOD?

"For thus saith the high and holy one that inhabiteth eternity I dwell in the high and holy place, with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit."—Isa. 57:15.

After the closing of his service one Sunday, the preacher stood at the door to shake hands. A lady said to him, "well, preacher, that was a good sermon, but you did'nt tell us where to find heaven."

The preacher replied: "Madame, on yonder hill is a cottage; a widow lives there and she is in want; she has no food, no fuel, and a child is sick without a doctor or medicine. If you go there and carry her something that she needs, you will find heaven."

Heaven is where good is done, where righteousness, justice, honor and peace are, and inasmuch as one can do these things, he is godlike, and where it is done, there God is found.

Prayer—Dear Lord, in the name of Jesus, baptize our spirits and make us conscious of Thee in our daily living.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

DIOTREPHES.

"Diotrephes, who loveth to have the preeminence among them, receiveth us not."—III John 9:12.

What church, what community, what nation, lacks its Diotrephes? The love of preeminence is as common as the love of one's self. Who is there that does not rejoice when he is lifted above his fellows, though but by an inch? Hail such a man as a saint indeed.

And yet why should any human being love to be preeminent among other human beings? How ridiculous we should think an ant who prided himself on his exalted rank in a colony of ants! And how much less than ants must we men appear to the angels of God! It is a sad thing to be lifted above others, our right to that elevation being so dubious. Let us not seek it. Let us, if duty does not require it, rejoice when we can avoid it.

Prayer—We would be humble, O Thou King of kings and Lord of lords.—Amen.

—Amos R. Wells.

WEDNESDAY.

A GRAND FINALE.

"I have fought a good fight. I have finished my course. I have kept the faith."—II Tim. 4:7.

On Sunday, September 9th, Dr. W. R. Inge preached his last sermon as Dean of St. Paul's Cathedral. His closing words were memorable:

"Every work we do has its proper limit, its accomplishment and enduing. Our whole work ought to be capable of being summed up—not by ourselves or our friends, but by God—as a single act.

"That particular task may have been well or ill done, but it cannot be prolonged beyond its limit. We trust that when the time comes for us to cease working, and to bring the fruit of our labors to God's feet, we may be able to say in all humility, without forgetting our many failures, for which we ask forgiveness, 'I have finished the work that Thou gavest us to do.' "

Prayer—Dear Father, we face the day's duties knowing that each action is a test of faith. Make us faithful to this end. In Jesus' name.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

CORDS AND CARTROPES.

"Woe unto them that draw iniquity with cords of vanity, and sin, as it were with a cartrope."—Isa. 5:18.

Sin is described as a power that allures us, but its reward is deceit. It is a disease that creeps into life unawares and fastens itself in a way that it is difficult to be thrown off. It is something which one may walk into blindly as one walks into a ditch in the darkness; it is an opiate that paliates for a time but finally becomes a part of one's passions so that it cannot be thrown off.

As such a power, it is likened unto the waters that secretes itself in pools and crevices behind the green fringes of foliage of the overhanging cliffs of the mountains; and in winter it freezes and expands till it tears the solid rock asunder, and heaves its gigantic fragments down the mountain side. So sin lurking in the same way may be latent in the summer times of life, but at last, when it has done its work, when all restraint is removed, and the sunshine of God's grace comes to an end, its power is irresistible and it leaves the fairest one a miserable wreck,—lost!

Prayer—O Lord, Thou dost see the things to which we are blind; there is nothing hid from Thee. We feel that we are full of corruption unless Thou dost cleanse us by the continual sunshine and grace of Thy spirit we shall be lost. Set Thou our "secret sins in the light of Thy countenance," and love us. We ask it in the name of Christ.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

MORALS—UPRIGHTNESS AND SALVATION.

"Whosoever walketh uprightly shall be saved."—Proverbs 28:18.

It is necessary to reconcile the teaching of our text today with that which says, "Ye must be born again," which declares that mere morals will not save.

There are a lot of people in the world who interpret the word "uprightly" in a moral sense and do not believe that it is necessary to experience a special act of salvation as understood in the "New birth." These people rely upon their own ideas of uprightness, and truly it may be said that no fault can be found in them. Their lives compare very favorably with those whom we know who have the experience of the new birth, that is, when observed from purely a standpoint of uprightness.

But let us consider: In the first place, our text refers, we are told, to Israel who already belonged to the company of the Lord, and this is a prophetic warning against backsliding or losing one's self, and it is not intended to be a compromise to one who would be just moral and say, "It is enough."

In the second place, it is not correct to compare the moral man of upright living with a moral man of the church. Comparison must be made with the one who has the experience of the "New birth." To be sure, uprightness is of God and it is characteristic of the kingdom. But he who thinks that he can be saved by his own voluntary uprightness, independent of God, is self-centered, self-sufficient, and sophisticated, and this disqualifies him.

For instance, the rich young ruler was an upright man, but he was altogether selfish. That is what "threw him." No other fault could be found in him. Out of all his goods, he was unwilling to give a penny to the poor, or to make any sacrifices for them or for his position in the kingdom of God. He left Jesus cold because that was required of him.

A saved man realizes his dependence upon God and lives every day with an eye of singleness to God's glory. That is the difference. The way of of godly uprightness is a way of perfection of the soul (Matt. 9:21), and this perfection can be effected only in the strength of God.

Prayer—Our Father, we bow before Thee in humble submission to make Thee first in our lives. Forgive us of our sins, and make us holy. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

SIN'S PREVENTION.

"Keep thy heart with all diligence for out of it are the issues of life."—Prov. 4:23.

Sin's prevention is to welcome the light of God's presence in the daily life; it is to educate the conscience to sensitiveness of right and wrong as it is in God's thought; it is to practice vigilance with the ingoings and the outgoings of life: and to pray to God for His cleansing.

God's presence in the life is like the presence of sunshine, it kills the germs of disease.

A good conscience comes from training in right and wrong and obeying its dictates.

Vigilance is to discriminate error—faults—and to do so is half the battle in correcting them. It is also half effort in setting up perfect ideals.

Our God's cleansing are the same thing as His forgiveness and deliverance from the power that holds one. We cannot see like God sees. His eyes penetrate into the darker depths and where He looks He looks with a view of pardoning. If we accept Him, serve and follow Him, He forgives.

Therefore, the only way to be delivered from the damnation of unconscious faults is to increase the depths, closeness and constancy of communion with Jesus Christ; and then sins will drop away like the melting snow by the hillside in the springtime.

Prayer—O God, we pray in the words of a little child, "take away all the ugly weeds from my heart, and plant lovely flowers there that it may be always a garden green and beautiful for Jesus."—Amen.

SUNDAY.

FULL.

"Prove me now herewith, saith Jehovah of hosts if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."—Mal. 3:7-12.

Anything half-full is depressing, gloomy. Anything that is full is exhilarating. And here on the last page of the Old Testament is this glorious promise of fulness. And Christ, who rejoiced in the same thing, said that if we have generous souls, men shall give to us aboundance, "good running over."

There is no stinting in the Christian life, no stinting from God, no stinting from me. The Sons of God are amply blessed. Their Father is not going to see His children put to shame before the children of Satan. "I came," said Christ, "that they may have life, and may have it abundantly." The Christian life is the abundant life now and forever.

Prayer—We thank Thee, O God, for Thy unspeakable Gift. We thank Thee for our unspeakable gifts in Him.—Amen.

THE WITHERED HAND.

By John G. Truitt.

"And there was a man there which had a withered hand."—Mark 3:1.

Let us follow up our last Sunday's sermon with the second convening of the crowds that filled Capernaum when Jesus was there. Last Sunday we saw the Pharisees and doctors of the law flocking into the city to see Jesus. They saw him, and went away into their homes and inns to meditate on their problems. For Jesus had healed a man of palsy and had forgiven him his sins, and stated plainly that He had power on earth so to do. Perhaps many of them as they considered these matters individually realized that they had looked upon something for which the very ages had been waiting. No doubt many of them knew that something beyond the comprehension of their minds and hearts had happened in their very midst. But there were enough in those multitudes with malicious motives in their hearts to impugn the power of Jesus, and begin a movement of pernicious waiting to see what they could gather against him in some further demonstration of His kindness.

And so, since it was only a few days off, they waited for the Sabbath. They would see what this One with such mighty claims for Himself would do on the Sabbath day. In the week day He had healed the sick and had claimed to forgive his sins,—which to them, of course, seemed to be no more nor less than sheer blasphemy. What would He do on the Sabbath?

For one thing He would go to the synagogue on the Sabbath. They could be sure of that. That knowledge packed that synagogue that day. And perhaps that knowledge might have had something to do with a man being there with a withered hand. From his secluded place somewhere about Capernaum he was probably advised about Jesus, and told that he should be present. At any rate "there was a man there which had a withered hand."

On other and preceding Sabbaths a man with a withered hand in the congregation of worshippers would have been just that and nothing more. Likely he would not have been there at all. For his deformity was considered a "curse" in those days, and he felt keenly the shame that was ever his portion as he moved about among the people. Jesus would be there today! That made a vast difference. And the poor man with his withered hand would be as welcome as any, and besides Jesus was healing all who came to Him!

"And they watched him whether he would heal on the Sabbath day." How sinister were their vigils! There must be some place for their anger and their envy to get a foothold. It was an ordeal for a free man to walk the path of the Hebrew Sabbath in the days of the Christ. Somewhere along the road he would make a blunder they felt sure. And especially if a cripple happened to be in His presence.

Is it not rather strange that the tests through which the Christ was put were in the main with men or women. At first they challenged His orthodoxy; His decisions on this or that point of the law. But soon they learned of His kindness. His kindness to sinners, to poor and outcast, to the sick and the suffering, to the old, and to little children; and here they thought they had found a vulnerable point in Him. They would turn the tip of their sword toward the kindness in His heart. It was that kindness that irked them. They would have said in their teaching, "Believe or be damned," while He, the teller of the Good Samaritan story, would have said, "Be kind, or be damned." The test of his religion was its practical use in every day living. And that, my friends, is the final test of your religion and mine.

The Scripture was read, the teaching had been done. A man with a withered hand was in their midst, eagerly hanging on to the life-giving words of the Great Teacher. His heart was touched, his hope fired, a prayer showed in his face, a longing came into his eyes. Would Jesus heal his poor, broken hand? He would and He did! ! ! Oh! my friends, how the heart of any man of God yearns to be able to make his service so effective that any withered hands, broken hopes, sinful hearts may be constrained to come to Jesus. To come to Jesus, the timeless, sinless Saviour of men. The touch of His garment gives new and undreamed of strength, the power of His presence transforms the life, and the persuasion of His immortal words gives a peace that passes all understanding. Oh that men would come to Him. "Come unto me, all ye that labor, and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

Some years ago when I was pastor of the First Christian Church of Norfolk, I made my way through a rather ravelled edge of the city which led down to the waterfront. There fastened to the shore was a houseboat in which lived a family which were frequently represented in my congregation. Two little children had taken a great interest in our church, and I wanted to win their father to Christ. During the process of my conversation with him on this houseboat, in stalked the grandfather of the two little children, the boy and the girl, who liked the church and the hour of worship. He was a very hard, rough looking old man; and yet there was the salt of the sea in his tangled beard, and the sunshine of a thousand shores in his cheeks. The moment he saw the words of Jesus in my hand, and heard them re-echoed from my lips, he reached up and pulled off his hat and gave me a kindly greeting. He listened to all I said to his son-in-law. He listened as one who was hearing something that he had long since forgotten about a beautiful childhood. He saw a cottage and a little church. He joined with me in advising his son-in-law to accept the Christ. He turned to me, and I shall never forget that day, and asked me if I thought the Lord would save an old salt who had been "too busy, too dirty, and too tired to attend church." Standing beside my side was a Saviour saying, "Tell him 'yes.'" And I told him "yes"! The next Sunday night he, along with his good wife, united with the church and headed their lifeboat for a peaceful and happy harbor.

And today I hear that Christ saying, "And he that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out." There are worse things than withered hands. Though that is bad enough. When Jesus healed the withered hand in that Capernaum synagogue on that holy Sabbath day, it was only a prophecy of the withered hopes, and broken dreams that might be brought to him out of all time. May I express it this way: (Original verse.)

May I bring my withered hand to Him;
My broken hopes and all my withered dreams?
May I feel new life coming into them
As the light of His kindly eyes upon me beams?
Will I let Him call me from the crowd,
And forget their mocking shame?
And kneel there before the sneering, proud—
To pronounce in loving faith His holy Name?

Then He will help, and healing strength impart,
For He knows the hurt of broken hands;
He knows the agony of a broken heart,—
He knows, and feels, and understands!

Christian Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

As the weather has cleared up and the breezes are beginning to blow from the South and the ground is beginning to get in condition to work, it gives us the garden-fever.

We planted garden peas Saturday, March 2nd. Also onions. The moon was not quite right but the ground was, so we planted in the ground. It will soon be time to plant Irish Potatoes and all other garden vegetables. The farm work comes on and everybody who works on the orphanage farm will be busy. Farm work has always been interesting to us. We like to see things grow. What is more beautiful than a field of golden grain ready for the harvest. It is more beautiful than at any other time in its growth.

We have always enjoyed children. We like to see them grow and develop into fine young men and women. That is interesting phase of our work at the Christian orphanage. In our eighteen years of experience here, we have had the joy of giving quite a number of boys and girls a chance in life through this institution and they have gone out in life and are making good.

The Christian Orphanage has to its credit quite a number of graduate nurses, stenographers, private secretaries and home builders. It has sent out boys who have become master plumbers, electricians, mechanical men in manufacturing plants. We have seven boys working in one manufacturing plant in North Carolina and all are making good and have been there for a number of years; one has worked up to be a foreman in his department and another is time keeper. You have given them a chance through your institution and they reflect credit upon the home that mothered them when they had no other. We feel proud of them. They often come back to see us and it is a source of joy to know they appreciate their home.

When you invest in little human beings who are homeless and helpless you are investing your money wisely!

WAVERLY, VIRGINIA.

Words are inadequate to express my profound and grateful appreciation of the following resolution which was adopted by the ministers of the Eastern Virginia Conference of Congregational-Christian Churches:

"Whereas, Rev. E. B. White was for a number of years an active and faithful member of this body, and whereas he has now withdrawn from us, be it resolved, That we express our appreciation of his fellowship and service, and sense our loss at his going, that we extend to him our sincerest wishes for his success in the new fellowship to which he goes.'

For the past nine years I enjoyed a delightful fellowship with these consecrated Brethren, and it is a source of joy to me to say that I love them all because they possess those magnificent qualities characteristic of a true Christian, and were so kind to me while a member of this body of faithful ministers of the Gospel. Men who live life nobly and grandly, the influence of whose lives is a blessing and a benediction to all with whom they come in contact.

Beloved Brethren, I extend my love to you and may the blessings of God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost be yours.

Fraternally,
E. B. WHITE.

IF A. F. O. L. FAILS.

The torch which the American Federation of Labor has been carrying in the march of labor unions in this country is beginning to dim. Strong indications now are that a few years hence its leadership light will be out. The A. F of. L. has considered itself spokesman for all organized labor groups, and in most instances it has been able to bring these groups into its affiliation. For more than two years the tide has been turning. Large groups of organized labor have severed their connection with the American Federation, while other groups have remained independent. The charge has often been made that the officials of the A. F. of L. have used organized groups to swell the coffers of the national office and enable large salaries to be paid swivel chair-warmers. The latest straw to indicate the way the wind is blowing was the vote cast the other day by auto workers showing a preference of 41,000 in favor of company unions and only 2, 000 for A. F. of L. affiliation. Street car men in Washington, D. C., where the American Federation headquarters are located, voted unanimously for company unions. All over the United States company unions are taking the industries by storm. Workers feel they have better protection in the company they work for than in an unintelligent leadership that too often is conflicting in its policies and economically unsound. The crux of the situation is that the A. F. of L. has become officially fossilized and is now on the defensive. The A. F. of L. assumed a dictatorship over all labor groups and it has found that this self-appointed power is not acceptable.

In the ideal society every member is responsible for some definite task.—Dr. F. E. Clark.

OBITUARIES

HUFFINES.

After a lingering illness, Mrs. Mary Sudie Huffines passed to her heavenly home January 8, 1935. During her illness, she received all that loving hands and medical skill could give.

She was a woman of quietness, sympathy, and love, and a loyal member of our Ladies' Aid Society.

The Ladies' Aid of Hine's Chapel Christian Church feel keenly the loss and do hereby resolve:

First, that in her going we have lost a helpful and active member.

Second, that the sincere sympathy of the entire membership be extended to the family.

Third, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family and to the Christian Sun for publication.

MRS. H. B. SMITH,
MRS. ROLAND ISELEY,
MRS. J. H. ABERNETHY.

MORGAN.

Benjamin Morgan died at his home, Route 3, Franklin, Va., February 20, 1935, aged eighty-nine years. The funeral services were conducted by the writer assisted by Dr. W. M. Jay and the body interred in "George's Bend" Cemetery. Five days later his wife, Mrs. Mary Jones Morgan died at the age of ninety-one years and her funeral was conducted by the same parties and her body laid to rest by her husband, with whom she had lived sixty-six years. Mr. Morgan was the son of Benjamin Morgan, Sr., and his wife Sarah Jernegan. Mrs. Morgon was the daughter of John J. and Patsy Jones. They leave one daughter, Mrs. Myrtle E. Gardner, R. F. D., Franklin, Va. Mrs. Morgan also leaves one sister, Mrs. Mills Jernegan, R. F. D., Franklin, Va., and two brothers, Wm. E. Jones of Franklin, and Adolphus Jones of Elberton, Ga. They had been members of Holy Neck Christian Church since early life and lived an humble Christian life.

May the Father's blessings ever rest upon their loved ones.

N. G. NEWMAN.

VEAZEY.

Zachariah T. Veazey was born October 14, 1849 at what is now Alexander City, Ala. At that time the town was known as Youngsville. He died near Newsite, Ala., on February 4, 1935, aged 85 years, 3 months, and 21 days.

He was married to Miss Ann Hunt on May 21, 1869. To this union was born thirteen children, six girls and seven boys. One boy died in infancy.

He united with McGuire's Chapel Christian Church forty-three years ago and remained true and faithful until the end.

Almost his entire life was spent in Gallapoosa County, Ala. He leaves to mourn their loss 12 children, 59 grandchildren, 65 great grandchildren and 2 great great grandchildren.

He was a very patient sufferer for quite a number of years. He made his home with his children. He seemed always satisfied with his lot on earth and patiently waited for the end to come.

The funeral was conducted at the Harmony M. E. Church in the midst of a large assembly of relatives and friends. His body was carried to Gruett, Ala., for burial by the side of his loving wife who preceded him in death many years ago.

Revs. Pinkard and Cash of the M. E. Church, South, and Rev. A. R. Van Cleave of the Southern Union College had part in the services.

God bless the bereaved ones and may his soul rest in peace.

G. D. HUNT.

JAMES.

Mrs. Emma James, wife of Peter James of Elon College, N. C., died January 3, 1935, aged 69 years, 10 months and 1 day.

Surviving are her husband, three sisters and two brothers and a number of other relatives.

Burial services were conducted by the writer at Shallow Ford Church and interment followed in the church cemetery.

May the Lord comfort those left to mourn. T. J. GREEN.

CABLE.

Miss Mollie Cable passed to her reward February 1, 1935, being 90 years, 2 months and 15 days of age. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." Truly she was a saintly Shallow Ford Christian Church but had not been able to attend for quite a while on account of her age and infirmity

She is survived by one sister, Mrs. Neal Sutton and one brother, Peter M. Cable, both of Elon College, N. C., R. 1., seven nieces and four nephews, besides many other relatives.

Burial services were held at the home by the writer, assisted by Rev. Mr. Hite pastor of Friedens Church, at which place interment was made.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

The Housewife and Taxation.—

Mary Roberts Rinehart, "as one woman to another," warns them, in a recently published article in the Ladies' Home Journal, that they must unite to curb taxation. Says Mrs. Rinehart, speaking of the housewife, "Her dollar is not a dollar at all. The actual necessities of living have consumed most of it, and taxes take the rest. That is, out of twenty-nine billions spent each year, taxes take nine billions, food only seven and rent only three and a half."

New Red Cross Head.—

Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, who was the official White House physician during the administration of President Wilson, was recently appointed chairman of the American Red Cross, and took up his duties on March 1st. Dr. Grayson, who had resumed the private practice of medicine since his retirement from the navy in 1928, succeeded the late John Barton Payne, who had been the executive officer of the Red Cross since 1921. The President of the United States is ex-officio president of the organization.

"Strong as Steel"—or Stronger.—

"Strong as steel," has for many years indicated that there was almost unlimited strength, back of the project mentioned, but if one would desire to express the utmost in known tensile strength, the phrase should run thus: "Strong as platinum alloyed with twenty per cent of iridium"—rather bunglesome, but true. This particular alloy is said to be not less than 40 per cent stronger than steel. There are other alloys in this group, and while too scarce and expensive for many uses, their special virtues offer a distinct commercial future.

Ruth and the Psalms.—

Ruth St. Denis danced a "rhythmic interpretation of the Psalms" before the altar of the Park Avenue Presbyterian Church in New York at a recent Sunday service. "A symphony in white, black and red, (her lips, fingernails and toenails were red), the dancer went through motions which she said symbolized 'the gradual ascent of man's soul from the moment he acknowledges his need of spiritual light to the final radiation.'" Passages from the Psalms and Miss St. Denis' own writings "amplifying them" were read, while the dancer "interpreted" them to musical improvisations on the piano. With dancing movements she led the congregation through the hymn, "Come Thou Almighty King," and performed gracefully "before a gilt throne set on the top of a modernistic arrangement of gold blocks."—Let us hope that she inspired the souls of the worshippers to press on toward the "final radiation."—Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

"The Country-to-City Trek Continues.—

"City populations are still increasing, and many rural areas are still decreasing in population," says C. A. Richardson, the superintendent of city work of the Methodist Board of Home Missions and Church Extension. Mr. Richardson says that while industry may be moving from less favored to more favored places, they are remaining in the metropolitan area, and that while the "downtown" areas of many large cities have shown a loss of population, the metropolitan areas of these same cities have shown large increases. "The present rural population is adequate for rural production," says he, and "no one ever yet has been able to keep the country youth sufficiently employed in the country to prevent the constant hegira cityward. This trend will continue. Restriction of immigration tends to increase it. The cities will continue to grow. So long as 80 cents out of every American dollar goes for city-made goods, just so long will American cities continue to grow. Tired or exhausted old men may leave the cities for the countryside, but the youth are moving cityward."

Senator Byrd and the Relief Bill.—

Mr. Byrd, in his fight on the monstrous "relief" bill which was passed by the House and has been consuming almost the entire time of the Senate since then, is using administration figures in his effort to defeat an administration bill. Mr. Byrd declared only this week that the Public Works Administration still had more than $1,500,000,000 available for expenditures, also that the administration had reposing in the Treasury the sum of $179,000,000, "unallocated, unspent, unimpounded." He said: "If these figures are correct, and I point out they are sent to me with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury—why should we appropriate another $4,000,000,000 at the present time. . . . We meet again next January." Mr. Byrd continued to point out that a considerable part of the original PWA fund of $3,300,000,000 had been used "to carry on normal government functions." While the bill was passed by Congress for the use of the Public Works Administration, investigation has shown that the Secretary's report is "honeycombed" with "such allocations as $13,000,000 to NRA, $700,000 to the Federal Power Commission, and $500,000 to the general accounting office." It is also disclosed that the "cost of completing projects started, in addition to appropriations now available, will amount to $692,000,000." Mr. Byrd raises the question as to whether these projects have been approved by Congress, "or if the different departments of Government are undertaking to commit the Government for projects not yet approved and for which appropriations have not been made." Mr. Byrd has offered an amendment cutting the work relief feature of the bill to $1,000,000,000, while another amendment before the Senate seeks to reduce it to $2,000,000,000.

Stock Market Sets New Low.—

When the stock market crash came in 1929, there were those who predicted that its effect upon general conditions would be little, if anything at all. Possibly the effect was small, but the same thing that caused the market crash was a great factor in causing the industrial crash that soon followed. In other words, the crash of the stock market was an index of conditions rather than a cause within itself. On Tuesday of this week, the New York Stock Market reached a new low for the year 1935, following a drastic drop in the price of cotton. This was in spite of the fact that we are told that business generally is better. It is quite possible that this drop in the stock market will not be reflected greatly in business conditions at this time, as it was only a minor drop compared with the crash of five years ago, but it is a pointer to the fact that something is still wrong. One would not set oneself up against the opinions of the great economists with which the administration has surrounded itself, nor would one condone the every action of the stock exchange. Yet the fact remains that notwithstanding the losses incurred by unwitting investors, many of the enterprises that have made America a great nation would have had hard sledding but for this same stock market. In other words they have been financed through it, and while many have gambled and lost, the general good resulting has probably outweighed that loss. Be that as it may, the stocks of many concerns, notably public utility companies, have become literally a drug on the market, because of threatened legislation, not to control such companies, but to run them out of existence. Whether these stocks have been "watered" or not is beside the point, the ultimate investor paid a certain price for them and is entitled to a return on that investment, provided the utility company can render a service at an equitable price and still earn a return on the money paid for the stock. Not only is the government threatening extinction by legislation, but it is entering into direct, subsidized competition. It is raising taxes from other sources in order to wipe out an industry which has been developed by private initiative and which is itself a source of taxes for that government. Certainly this is one instance where the stock market is an index of conditions that should be corrected immediately. It is the government's function to direct and to regulate, to police if necessary, but not to compete and to destroy. Final recovery depends upon the government as much as upon any other thing. If business in general were absolutely sure of itself, then prosperity would turn the corner.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Mrs. Hilliard, wife of Rev. H. C. Hilliard, Fuquay Springs, N. C., who was taken to Rex Hospital February 26th, for a serious operation is reported to be recovering nicely.

"For the past few months, Rev. A. R. Flowers has been working among our young people in our churches and Sunday schools hare in South Carolina. Many of our high schools, also, have found Bro. Flowers' lectures very helpful to their advanced pupils and patrons. We are always delighted to have this consecrated Christian worker among us."

From one of our ministers comes the following: "For some time I have planned on writing you and making a payment on my SUN subscription. I am now enclosing the sum of $5.00 which will about bring me up to date. I enjoy reading the paper as much as any of the National Religious magazines that come to my desk." Mr. Minister, don't take our word for it, but try reading your copy of THE SUN more carefully. Maybe you will agree with the Brother that we quote above.

From W. C. Wampler of Harrisonburg, Va., came his renewal for THE SUN this week. Renewals are always welcome, but so are such comments as he makes in regard to his church paper: "It is a very welcome visitor to my home each week, and is surely a worthwhile contribution to our church literature. I enjoy it so much, your editorials especially." Our readers little know how much such letters as that from Brother Wampler are appreciated, and we, too, think it a "great pity that it is not read by more of our membership."

The First Congregational-Christian Church of Urbana, Illinois, of which Rev. Jos. W. Fix, B. D., is minister, is to entertain the State Conference in May. Not less than four hundred delegates are expected. This is the first time since the union of Congregational and Christian Churches that a former Christian Church has been selected to entertain this group, but we know that under the guidance of Brother and Mrs. Fix the entertainment will be a success. It was at this church that the General Convention of the Christian Church met in 1924.

THE GENESIS AND THE JOY OF GIVING.

By TIMOTHY THOMAS.

Man's desire to give is as old as the human race. Giving is practiced and its spirit recognized in every strata of human society, whether it be Christian or pagan. Man has always been willing to share his goods, his friendship and his counsel with his fellowman. Giving preaches a silent gospel wherever man is known. Giving recognizes no creed and makes no distinction in race or color. Giving is one of the strongest links in the brotherhood of man looking toward the fatherhood of God. Sharing with others is symbolic of that spark of divine in every man.

Gifts of man, whether in money, goods, or service, are in proportion to his opportunity, his past environment and educational background on the subject. The man who gives because he has been taught to give, and recognizes it as a part of his discipleship, experiences a richness of reward that is unspeakable. The man who gives to a single cause of his church, feeling no responsibility to other equally deserving activities, receives and enjoys only a single blessing. His motive is not questioned, neither is his reward doubted. The man who gives merely because of its social aspect, giving in order to be socially comfortable, misses a blessing—his gifts are helpful to others only.

There is a gospel arithmetic about giving that dose not conform to mathematical science. In mathematics we divine and find the component parts less. The Master taught us that when we divide with others we have more. Even a pagan philosopher wrote: "The goods we spend we keep; and what we save we lose; and only what we lose we have."

Economists are divided on the question of distributing the world's wealth. Long before economics became a known science Christ enunciated a philosophy of giving, a psychology of distribution, that has stood the practical test of the ages.

The giver who gives himself with his gift becomes happier, whereas if law were to take away part of what he has and give it to another he would become angered.

"Not what we give, but what we share,
For the gift without the giver is bare;
Who gives himself with his alms feeds three,
Himself, his hungry neighbor, and me."

We may give grudgingly and receive no profit. Our willing gifts may bring us more soul joy than the recipients. "Give, and it shall be given unto you . . . " (Luke 6.38.)

Man is a possessor of that which he has. He may create, earn, or receive by inheritance, but he remains only a steward while he lives.

"For all you can hold in your cold, dead hand
Is what you have given away."

A LETTER FROM URBANA, ILLINOIS.

Once in a great while your managing editor receives a letter from his good friend, Joe Fix, who has for several years been the minister at our First Church in Urbana, Illinois. We believe that the letter received this week will prove as interesting to many of his former friends who read THE SUN as it did to us, so we are reprinting it in part:

"I hope all is going well with you in Richmond. I often wish I could drop over to see you, Jerry McCauley, and countless other fellows with whom I was so happily associated for the early years of my ministry.

"Out here it is somewhat different, but very delightful. The work is very difficult. We are just a few blocks from the University of Illinois, a campus on which there are 13,000 students. Champaign and Urbana are great Twin Cities. I have 400 members in the church. Have received about 150 so far, into membership in past three years.

"We are kept on the go all the time as Mrs. Fix and I are both on State Committees. Trustees of the Illinois Conference and members of the Administration committee. We go to Chicago every month to meetings of the boards. We are 128 miles south of Chicago.

"Mrs. Fix and I were in Florida last month, visiting members of our church in West Palm Beach. While there I spoke to the members of First Congregational Church of which Rev. Frank Atkinson is pastor. This was a Wednesday evening supper and I told them something of the history of the Christian church and how the merger was helping us. We hoped to see Drs. J. O. Atkinson and Charlie Rowland, but found that Orlando was out of route that we took.

"While we were in Florida, the members of our church painted and redecorated the auditorium in readiness for the state conference and our pre-easter services.

"We are having a Preaching Mission in our church next week. I am holding one in the southern part of Illinois the first week in April. Such missions are of great value to any church."

JOHN CALVIN.

By Rev. S. W. Phillips, Pastor Elm Avenue Christian Church, Portsmouth, Va.

(Read before Eastern Virginia Ministerial Association.)

There is a small village between Paris and Brussels, by the name of Noyon. It was here on July 10, 1509, that John Calvin was born. His ancestors were fishermen, or, as others narrate, bargemen who lived on the river Oise. His father Gerard Calvin, of stern and severe character, in 1497, rose to a place of responsibility as apostolic secretary to the Bishop of Noyon and became intimate with leading families of the town. He married the daughter of one of the prominent families of the neighborhood, Le Franc, who had a good fortune. The bride of Gerard, Jeanne Le Franc, was beautiful and pious. Though she died young, she lived long enough to impress her ideas upon the precocious boy, and is said to have taken him, after the custom of the day upon various pilgrimages to near-by shrines.

John Calvin had four brothers and two sisters, of whom two brothers died young, while two were provided with benefices through the father's influence. Charles, the oldest, was made Chaplain of the Cathedral in 1518, and the younger, Antoine, Chaplain of the Tournerolle, but later, with a sister, Marie, embraced the evangelical faith and followed their reformer-brother to Geneva. The other sister appears to have remained in the Catholic Church. His brother Charles turned heretic or infidel, was excommunicated in 1531, and died October 1, 1537, and for refusing the Sacrament on his deathbed was buried between the four pillars of a gibbet the year after John announced his system to the world, "as if to repeat to startling contrast of Esau and Jacob, reprobation and election from the same womb."

The legend of John's having been educated at a charity school has been abandoned. His father was a man of importance and obtained Church preferments for his sons. He went to Paris, August, 1523 to inter-college, living with his uncle Richard, near the Church of Saint Ger-main l'Auxerrois. From the bell tower of this old Church a half hundred years afterwards rang out the doom of the Hugenots on Saint Bartholomew's night. Little did anyone dream of the mighty influence of the thin-faced lad who daily walked under the shadow of that tower. He was known as a studious book-worm. His intimate friend and follower, Beza, said of him that during this period he was "religious after a remarkable fashion and a severe censor of all the vices of his companions." He early got the name of "The Accusativè Case," a nickname suggestive of the leadership in morals and scholarship of a French lad in school life over four centuries ago.

At the age of fourteen Calvin entered the college de la Marche. His great instructor in Latin was Mathurin Cordier, to whom he afterwards dedicated his commentary on First Thessalonians. Cordier afterwards followed his pupil to Geneva, and was appointed director of the College of Geneva, where he died the same year with Calvin. From the College de la Marche, Calvin was transferred to the strictly ecclesiastical College de Montaigu, and there he studied Philosophy and Theology under a learned Spaniard. To this same College came, in February, 1528, Ignatius Loyola, in preparation for his life-work, in which his most exacting duties were to be found in antagonism to the toil of Calvin.

We cannot discover anything unusual or spectacular in the college career of the young student from Noyon. He seems to have had no heart for the riotous hours of the young collegians of Paris, and gave the police no trouble in their efforts to maintain order when town and gown met in a midnight brawl. He was proud, religious and studious beyond measure or wisdom. Bexa says he was even then "doctor Potius quam auditor." (A teacher much to be preferred.)

He was made Bachelor of Laws at Orleans, February 14, 1531, and on leaving the University was offered the degree of Doctor of Laws without the usual fees. Already his rank as a scholar is exhibited in the fact that when the question of the divorce of Henry VIII was referred to the scholars of the continent, Calvin was consulted. He expressed himself against the lawfulness of marriage with a brother's widow.

The peculiar maturity of his mind, his avoidance of a share in the noisy excitements so common to student life in his day, his intimacy with his teachers, and his high moral character marked him as a rare personality.

In such terms is John Calvin introduced to us by one of his most brilliant countrymen, as the chief thinker of the age. The work was*"Christianae Religionis Institutio."* The author was twenty-five years of age, and was seeking a hiding place for the further pursuit of his studies. But no man who wrote as he did could remain in hiding. The apologist of martyrs, the thinker of the new faith, the legislator of the Reformed Church, he went to the front of all leaders, of all confidence, and of all wonderful service in the wide spreading array of the nascent powers of the young church, just now, however, in danger of eclipse. What a man!

John Calvin was the greatest statesman of the Church of God of all time. Richard Taylor Stevenson says as follows: "In his thorough grasp of the religious situation of Europe, Calvin surpassed all men of his day, and Geneva was simply the fulcrum which he used to lift upon a firm basis the work of the Reformed Church. He had many advantages denied to other reformers; he was the most widely traveled, the most remarkable correspondent, and for years before his death the most renowned and influential religious leader of his day."

Geneva became a veritable asylum to Calvin's own countrymen, and as they came with scars of their torture, and emerged from the passes of the Jura, and caught sight of the city in which Calvin ruled, they fell upon their knees and gave thanks to God. They made good their stay, and joined with those who had preceded them in strenuous efforts to promote the cause of Protestantism.

By the year 1547, the Reformation had leavened seventeen provinces and thirty-three of the principal towns of France. The model was that of the Church of Strassburg, founded by Calvin in 1536. In eleven years, from 1555 to 1566, no less than one hundred and twenty pastors were sent to France from Geneva. The French Reformers had held their meetings for worship and consultation at such times and places as the exigencies of the moment allowed. But on the 25th of May, 1559, a general synod of all Protestant congregations in France was deliberately convened in Paris. The ecclesiastical system adopted at this synod was dictated by Calvin. In it one may see the mind of the ecclesiastical statesman. The confession of Faith which makes up the preface is an epitome of Calvin's Institutes. The criterion of truth was the revealed Word of God.

The scenes of trial through which the spiritual children of Calvin walked with the tread of heroes bear bright witness to the power of an invisible hand upon a distant crisis. History stands with uncovered head in the presence of men and women who need no other monument of their faith than the story of how they faced the destruction of home and the death of their dear ones. In the old Bastille a venerable man is standing in chains before Henry III. The king exclaims: "Recant, or I shall be compelled to give you up to your enemies; these two girls here are to be burned tomorrow."

"Sir," said Palsisy, the potter, "listen to me, and I will teach you the way to talk like a king: I cannot be compelled to do wrong."

Another scene is witnessed on the balcony of Coligny. The wife of the noble Charlotte de Laval is sitting by his side: "Husband, why do you not openly avow your faith, as your brother Andelot has done?"

"Sound your own soul," he replied, "are you willing to be chased into exile with your children and to see your husband hunted to the death? I will give you three weeks to consider, and then I will take your advice." She looked her husband steadily in the eye through her tears. "Husband, the three weeks are ended; do your duty and leave us to God."

Amidst these multitudinous cares and occupations Calvin found time to commit to writing a number of works besides those provoked by the various controversies in which he was engaged. The most numerous of these were of an exegetical character. Including discourses taken down from his lips by faithful auditors, we have from him, expository comments or homilies on nearly all the books of Scripture, written partly in Latin and partly in French. In the estimation of many, these constitute the most valuable of his works. His candor and sincerity as an inquirer into the meaning of Scripture—his judiciousness, penetration, and tact in eliciting his author's meaning—his precision, condensation, and concinnity as an expositor—the accuracy of his learning, the closeness of his reasoning, and the elegance of his style, all conspire to confer a high value on his exegetical works, and to make them at once rich sources of biblical knowledge and admirable models of biblical exposition.

But it is chiefly as a theologian and the head of a theological school that Calvin is now known. This renders it fitting that some account should be here given of his theological system. This is developed in his "Fundamental Principles," (Institutio) which, though produced originally at an early period of his life, was so frequently and carefully revised by him, that in the form in which it has come down to us it presents his most matured views and thoughts.

Much of Calvin's theology is common to him with all evangelical divines, and in the parts which are more peculiar to him and his school he follows closely in the steps of Augustine. The following may be regarded as his characteristic tenets, though all are not peculiar to him.

Man as a sinner is guilty and corrupt. The first man was made in the image and likeness of God, which not only implies man's superiority to all other creatures, but indicates his original purity, integrity and sanctity. From this state Adam fell and in his fall involved the whole human race descended from him. Hence depravity and corruption, diffused through all parts of the soul, attached to all men, and this first makes them obnoxious to the anger of God. From him, however, not only his punishment overtaken us, but a pestilence instilled from him resides in us, to which punishment is justly due.

To redeem from this state of guilt, and to recover him from corruption, the Son of God became incarnate, assuming man's nature into union with His own, so that in Him were two natures in one person. Thus incarnate He took on Him the offices of Prophet, Priest, and King, and by His humiliation, obedience, and suffering unto death, followed by His resurrection and ascension to heaven, He has perfected His work and fulfilled all that was required in a redeemer of men, so that it is truly affirmed that He has merited for man the Grace of Salvation. But until a man is in some way united to Christ so as to partake of Him, the benefits of Christ's work cannot be at-

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgmeut and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointiug the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctriues and tenets which have coufused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from eutering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be cousummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

POWER TO THE HOME CHURCH.

Any pastor or person acquainted with church history, or versed in unmistakable teaching of Scripture, must know that the sure way to build up a church at home is to bring that church to a sense of sharing its Gospel with others. By human arithmetic we increase by multiplying. By divine arithmetic we increase by dividing with others—sharing with others that Good News that has made us what we are. No church can be a growing church until it has come to be a going church—going out in prayer, preaching and praise to share salvation with others. For this cause the church came into existence and when a church ceases to be missionary it fails of its chief function and so becomes powerless and impotent. We must be a going and a sending church, if we are to be a growing and a mending church! J. O. A.

"UNTO ALL NATIONS."

How is this for a record of a denomination numbering in this country about 200,000 members? The record is from their recent Bulletin:

"In their efforts to obey the great commission of our Lord, Seventh-day Adventists are now working in 275 countries and islands, in 485 languages, and have in all 21,607 evangelists, physicians, nurses, colporteurs, and teachers. They maintain in all the world 112 sanitariums, hospitals, dispensaries, and treatment rooms; 2,133 schools, enrolling 90,465 students; and 68 publishing houses, issuing gospel and health literature in 157 languages."

No wonder God is giving this people growth and increasing power, for since they came into being as a Church much less than a century ago, they have put "Unto All Nations" first and foremost in their teaching and practice. It leads all other evangelical churches of the world in giving to foreign missions. J. O. A.

NOTED LECTURER AND AUTHOR AT ELON.

Dr. Albert W. Palmer, President of the Chicago Theological Seminary, spoke at the college chapel Sunday morning at 11:00 and at vespers Sunday evening. Dr. Palmer also addressed the student body at chapel Monday morning. The chief occasion of his visit was to interpret his book, Orientals in America, which is one of the accepted mission study books of the year, to the missionary societies of the Congregational-Christian Church of North Carolina. Missionary societies of all denominations were invited to send as many representatives as they could.

The day was auspicious, and the attendance was remarkable. In presenting the material of the book and other parallel information, Dr. Palmer spoke, first, of the Chinese of the West Coast, calling attention to the decisive difficulties that these orientals encountered in earlier years but showing how that, with more intimate acquaintance and better understanding between the races, they had gradually come to a more acceptable position in American life. Toward the close of the morning session, he related in a most interesting way his experience in the Hawaiian Islands as pastor of the large Congregational Church at Honolulu. Living among orientals and administering to them along educational and religious lines qualified Dr. Palmer eminently for the writing of the books and for the interpretation of the same.

In the midst of the morning session, Miss Helen Chamblee, of the Music Department of the College, sang most effectively, "Thanks Be to God." Opening the afternoon session, the Elon Singers gave a group of sacred songs. The Elon Singers are always heard with appreciation and profit.

Following the program of the Singers, Dr. Palmer interpreted in a most interesting and effective way the modern Japanese in this country. With accuracy and increasing interest, he carried his audience at will across the Pacific to the land of the cherry blossoms and brought them back to the land of the golden gate, emphasizing always how completely Americanized are the Japanese who are born and reared in this country, invariably turning from their native language to the language of our people.

There were between 400 and 500 in attendance at the conference, all of whom received a new vision and a new conception of the orientals in our midst and felt a new sense of responsibility for them. So successful was this conference, that in all probability it is the beginning of annual missionary conferences to be held at the college particularly for the missionary interest of the Congregational-Christian Church in this section, but of general interest to all denominations.

MISSIONS, AN EXPRESSION OF LIVING THE SPIRIT OF CHRIST.

The Church is the only institution that exists solely for the purpose of perpetuating the life of Christ in the world. Its mission is the mission of our Lord, Himself. It represents Him and carries on His work. This institution alone has power to build up a world-wide brotherhood that knows no race, class, nor color, and whose guiding principle is love. It furnishes the organizing principle for uniting the people of every land in a constructive program of peace and goodwill.

We profess to be joined with Him, to be a part of that church. To be non-participants in His chief work, His program, His objective—the redemption of the world—to the fullest of our ability reveals at once that we do not share his life and spirit. The Christian religion is the hope of the world and the church is the institution of this religion. The church is the instrument of true human progress. It is the organ through which function those vital processes upon which depend enlightenment, growth and final perfecting of the world. Yes, this is missions, and the measure of our spirit and participation is the measure of our appreciation of Him and the Church. A child's love, devotion, spirit, are shown by the readiness and the measure of its obedience to the father's wishes and his cooperation in his program.

The character of the gospel message is compelling in its nature. There is something beside the fact that He commanded us to go and send. His divine personality lays its compelling power upon us. If we do not feel this compulsive power, I fear that we do not have any message to give the world, and that His personality has not borne itself in upon our personality or upon our church. I believe that the degree, according to our ability, to which we support and advocate what we call missions, tells the story of what we ourselves possess of Christ.

If we know the resurrection of Christ as a fact of experience, if we have any personal knowledge of such a living Christ, one whom we meet as we sit by the side of the broken hearted, as we minister to the dying, as we go out where we meet those who toil, suffer, wonder, fall, die, is there any power on earth that can keep us from spreading that message as far and as earnestly as we can? When I have a friend who has been cured of some severe disease by a certain remedy, what would you say of me if I withheld that knowledge when I knew there were others suffering the same disease?

Twice every day the invisible energies of the moon lift a great plateau of the ocean several feet above the level of the surrounding water, and as the earth revolves, that great plateau of water bursts up in our shores, creeks, inlets and makes our tide an irresistible energy if we only knew how to use it. Energies of a greater sort break through human life and the real business of being a Christian is discovering how to be a transmitter of spiritual energies.

If the message of Christ that God is the Father of all men and that all men are brothers, if the message that there is no value like that of the soul—human personality, if the message that the laws of the cross must prevail everywhere and that the principle of self-sacrificing service is the only principle that is going to save the world is true, must we not realize that His teachings apply to individual life, to home and school, to all economic conditions, to all interracial relations and we have tremendous responsibility in this missionary business?

For one's own good and for the life of one's own church also, he must be greatly concerned about this missionary business. Dr. J. E. Crawford has well said:

"When a force meant for a large expansion is denied the expansion for which its nature craves, it not only fails for the larger work which it is not allowed to do, but it loses its best power and capacity in the field to which it is confined. Any compression of vital energy into a sphere smaller than its true range or scope not merely limits it, but poisons it so that it works feebly or falsely in the region where it operates. You cannot grow an oak in a hothouse; you cannot bottle Niagara; you cannot put the ocean in a pigeonhole. Even so the gospel is a force that requires room for healthy growth; only in spreading abroad does it realize its true nature and fulfill its being."

THE SUCCESS OF REPEAL.

By Dr. Daniel A. Poling.

This is the second editorial on the same subject which has appeared in "Christian Herald," of which Dr. Poling is Editor.

"I am opposed to any compromise with the liquor traffic" is the concluding sentence of a personal letter from United States Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas. Quite aside from Senator Capper's personal conviction and the reasons he may give for it, that conclusion is justified by the "success" of repeal.

In the issue of Christian Herald of last July, we said editorially: "Repeal, the naked Repeal promised and delivered by the present Administration, has succeeded in failing to keep a single promise of its proponents." The intervening months have further emphasized the monumental character of this "success."

The Elmira (N. Y.) Star Gazette, in an editorial, summarizes the "success" of Repeal as follows: "The consensus, we believe, would be that Repeal has not been attended by the benefits promised. On the contrary, those evils of intemperance, which Prohibition failed to curb, have increased under the new order."

The New York Times on the last Sunday of the first Repeal year carried a full-page review of the record for the year. Here are the headlines: "Bootlegging Unchecked," "Saloons Back," "Revenues Low," "More Intoxication," "Michigan Blames Liquor Interests," "Bootlegging Still Problem in South," "Repeal Disappoints California."

The Boston Herald, firm friend of Repeal, said editorially in this same week: "There is undoubtedly more drinking today than there was during Prohibition . . . . There are general increases in arrests for drunkenness; an increase of automobile accidents attributable to intoxicated persons and in the illicit manufacture of liquor . . . Boot- has not stopped and income from taxes has not come up to expectations."

We do not believe the picture is overdrawn. In every vital particular the propaganda for Repeal which filled the air only two years ago has been refuted. More—all the promises of good have been broken and the saloon has come back; the bootlegger flourishes and revenues have fallen far short of anticipations.

We were promised one billion dollars and more of Federal revenue from beer alone; but the actual Federal revenue on all liquors in 1934 was less than 38 per cent of this amount. It was President Nicholas Murray Butler of the world's largest university who stated impressively that Congress "could collect by the lowest estimate $1,500,000,000 in beverage revenue from 17 wet States."

The direct cost of the traffic to the country in the year 1934 was more than three billion dollars —an average of twenty-five dollars per person for beer, wine and liquors during the first year of repeal. Figures compiled from official returns in the U. S. Treasury do not include hundreds of millions of dollars spent for bootleg liquor.

To this direct cost must be added the indirect social price of drunkenness and economic waste.

And there is still so much confusion in the whole matter! Congress has declared 3.2 liquor not intoxicating and now comes the District Court of Bushanan County, Iowa, saying: "The whole treatment of the beer question in the law of this State and in the law of every State is clear evidence that it (beer) is regarded as intoxicating and that there is no question in the world but that it is intoxicating, no matter what any Congress or any legislature or any attorney general may say about it. The so-called beer parlors over all the country are nothing but beer saloons under other names."

As to the illegal sale which repeal was to stop, Mr. Wagner of the Pennsylvania Liquor Control Board insists that seventy-five per cent of the liquor business of that State is done by bootleggers, and that in smaller cities and villages these same bootleggers control all but ten per cent of the business.

The outstanding feature of the convention of the United States Brewers' Association held in New York City during the past year was the open admission that every brewer is violating the law. Charles Lich of the Los Angeles Brewing Company, as reported in the daily press, said: "Everyone violates the law now. I don't know a man in this room who isn't doing it now." To which R. W. Jackman, vice-president of the famous Blatz Brewery of Milwaukee, replied: "Sure, we are all doing it—the biggest bunch of hypocrites I ever saw."

As to the influence of the new traffic on public morals and drunkenness, police blotter records continue to show that in cities drunkenness has increased from ten per cent to one thousand per cent; that arrests for drunken driving have increased 42% in Washington, D. C., 100% in Rhode Island, 122% in New Orleans, 300% in Philadelphia, 380% in Cincinnati, 479% in Los Angeles, and in like manner throughout the country. Pennsylvania reports a 60% increase in revocations of drivers' licenses as the result of intoxication.

Municipal Judge Edward S. Scheffler, sitting in Chicago's new Safety Court, confronted with more than two hundred motor accident cases, declared: "If this keeps up, we will have Prohibition back in two years. People will not tolerate drunken drivers killing pedestrians."

Joseph Choate, Jr., head of the Federal Alcohol Control Administration, was quoted by the press as saying: "Since the repeal of Prohibition crime has increased at an alarming rate."

Assured that the saloon would never return, over 400,000 saloons have now been licensed to take the place of the 177,000 closed by Prohibition. If we are to believe the news columns of the Chicago daily papers particularly, the evils of this modern drinking place are beyond comparison with those of any pre-Repeal era.

Commenting upon the return of the saloons, the Chicago Daily News said editorially on Oct. 17, 1934: "The failure to do 'honestly and courageously' what that party (Democratic) has promised concerning the saloon becomes in the president's words ' a living reproach.' The 'forgotten pledge' may become a bigger issue than the fallacy of the 'forgoten man.' "

Somewhat earlier than we anticipated, those engaged in the liquor business, who not only promised to balance the national budget and to be good while they did it if they were allowed to reopen their shops, are weeping over their "losses" and demanding a reduction in taxes. Representatives of liquor associations in the New York meeting, in convention assembled, recommended reducing liquor license fees from $1,200 to $800. The city's two per cent sales tax was opposed as an unbearable burden on "an already over-taxed industry."

That repeal has not helped drinking conditions at public games, conditions that enemies of Prohibition loudly proclaimed were due to the Eighteenth Amendment, was revealed by the report of the Committee on Public Relations of the American Football Coaches Association at the close of 1934. The report reads: "The welfare of the game is menaced by the ever-increasing betting on results and the continued welfare of coaches depends upon our ability to do something about curbing the increase in excessive drinking in our stands."

And what about snoopers? Well, Mr. Morgenthau, Secretary of the Treasury, is reorganizing and enlarging the Alcohol Tax Unit with an increase of personnel to an ultimate five thousand. In its palmiest days the Prohibition Unit had never 3,600 men. The Literary Digest inquires: "Was it not one of the fundamental objects of repeal to turn the liquor problem back to the States? To put an end to the meddlesome army of Federal enforcement agents that Prohibition had called forth?"

Before us is an article from the pen of Professor Rexford Guy Tugwell appearing in the Democratic Digest for March, 1934. "The women of the country," Professor Tugwell writes, "have a great opportunity to establish and maintain a civilized attitude toward wine. . . . They can accompany their men to the cafes and beer gardens and consume at leisure the long, slow drinks which are appropriate to pleasant conversation and mature social relationships. My interest in the subject is partly due to the fact that wine and beer are made from agricultural products and that their consumption can not only serve the broader purposes of the 'New Deal' in making for a calmer and happier kind of existence, but will help American farmers to find a better market for their products. American women should follow the example of . . . . (Name deleted) and serve wine in their own homes." Professor Tugwell would perhaps be interested in the fact that the brewers of England have launched a campaign to teach youth to drink beer, and that in California, where the wine interests of America are most active, prizes are offered for the best judges of wine among young girls.

Recently full-page advertisements appeared in many newspapers of the country with the caption: "We who make whiskey say, 'Drink moderately.' " Then followed a call to temperance in the consumption of alcoholic bevergaes. Here is final proof that liquor is "different" and that the Government must assume a particular attitude toward the traffic in it. Who ever heard of the Dairymen's Association calling upon the nation to drink moderately? Or of a meat dealers' society beseeching the country to consume steaks temperately? There is a difference and it is this difference that makes inevitable the ultimate destruction of beverage alcohol for profit.

After six months Christian Herald repeats:

"This naked Repeal, promised and delivered by the present Administration—within a year proved politically demoralizing, socially degrading, financially disappointing, and legally unenforceabe—is a grand success!"

MY PATCHWORK LIFE.

By Miss Dora Byron.

My life is just a crazy quilt,
I add a square each day,
A tiny bit of flaming red
I sew with laughter gay,
And then perhaps a splash of brown
May steal my smiles away.

A patch of green, fresh as the spring,
White blocks of winter's snow,
A youthful blue, a tender rose
From the faded long ago.
They blend together in my life,
I stitch them row on row.

And when my quilt is finished
I'll understand its theme,
That secret outline God has set
For each crazy square and seam,
I'll see the pattern I have lived,
And fold away my dream.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Tuesday, March 5th, was a Red Letter Day for the people who attended the Mision Study held in the Suffolk Christian Church. Mrs. J. E. Cartwright presided. The women, young people and a number of ministers and laymen came from the various churches to hear Dr. A. W. Palmer, President of Chicago Theological Seminary lead a discussion of his book, "Orientals in America." It was his first appearance in Eastern Virginia. About 400 people from Congregational-Christian, Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian and Episcopal Churches attended the lectures.

Dr. Palmer made a profound impression upon the people who heard him. One minister said of him: "He had something to start with, and he has been somewhere." This was another way of saying the author of this book knows his subject by thorough study, careful research, well-balanced judgment and unbiased interpretation. If the churches of America could read "Orientals in America" and accept the attitude and interpretation of Dr. Palmer, the author, a better understanding would be reached, as far as America is concerned, between our country and the people of Japan and China. It is more and more evident that a well organized group of people, interested in the manufacture and sale of war munitions, are responsible for the agitation concerning possible war with Japan.

The church has an opportunity to create a friendly attitude between the nations of the world. Nations, like individuals, must have a misunderstanding before they are willing to fight each other. Misunderstandings usually have a tendency to create bitterness, jealousy and hatred. At the foundation of national misunderstanding, racial prejudice and financial injustice are among the outstanding causes of war. Every civilized nation on earth has a superiority complex. It is possible that every race (and every nation) regards its own people as superior to all other people. This universal attitude must be understood and appreciated in approaching any great international or racial problem. The pagan idea of government is based upon the tradition that the strong should rule the weak, and the superior should rule the inferior. That conception produces a small group of rulers, scholars, financiers, and political autocrats; in society, this difference is manifested by grouping people into two classes, masters and slaves.

The present movement in America, and in the world, to reorganize and centralize all government, is a definite step in the direction of the old pagan idea of feudalism. The so-called "Brain Trust," whatever that is, represents localized superiority. In the kingdom of God, as interpreted by Jesus Christ, righteousness and love are the superior forces. Capitalism is not the only force to be recognized. Labor is not to be crowned with a jeweled diadem, nor crushed as a galley slave. Capital and labor should sit at the same table and mutually understand their common problems. The question of superiority should not be brought into the discussion of human rights. The capitalist may be superior to the socialist; or, the reverse may be true. The man who carries bricks upon his shoulder may be superior in ability to the expert who uses the trowel and erects the building. But justice and not power; righteousness and not superiority; humanity and not self-interest,—these should dominate the spirit and prompt motives, when others' rights are involved.

For these, and many other reasons, the most helpful movement in the world, today, is the work undertaken in the name of "Missions." The pity of it is that so many people see nothing beyond a financial offering in the missionary work of the church. The missionaries of the world have done more to prevent war than all the statecraft and ambassadors combined. If governments will be guided by the wisdom of the best missionaries and the spirit of the Gospel, peace will supplant war, and life will triumph over death.

AN ALUMNUS EXPRESSES FAITH.

Recently a graduate of Elon College called at the president's office. The topic of conversation was the college—its present condition and its future hopes. This alumnus had recently read the president's mid-year report to the Board of Trustees, in which appeared a probable plan of liquidation of the debts of the college. The visitor expressed grave personal doubts as to the possibility of raising in cash a sufficient sum to cancel the debts of the college; but he did express a belief that it could be raised in payments over a term of years. In a business-like way, he stated what he felt he could do and the plan on which he would undertake his share.

He said, "I would like to be one of the 1000 to give to Elon College $200 for the purpose of complete liquidation; and I will give it," said he, "if you will permit me to pay in twenty equal instalments. And," said he, "I do not wish the college to carry the interest on my unpaid balances."

Then, he seemed to become enthusiastic about the whole plan, and a new spirit of optimism seized him. He took out his check book and wrote a check for the first payment of $13. which included the interest. "And," said he, "I will send these payments quarterly."

It is certainly gratifying to find an alumnus with such faith in the administration and in the institution. Surely we can find 999 others. In fact, there are a number of others already who have put themselves on record to give from $100 to $1,000 provided the entire indebtedness of the college is settled. What do you think, alumnus, former student, or friend of the college? If you have an idea, won't you express it?

This is to express again, and publicly, my great appreciation of the visit of my friend and his encouraging gift. This visitor was none other than Rev. Worth Wicker, Rector of the Episcopal Church, Greenville, N. C., and son of Dr. W. C. Wicker, of the college faculty.

DR. J. O. ATKINSON'S QUESTION.

The question propounded by Dr. J. O. Atkinson some weeks ago is at least twofold, having to do with evangelism and missions as these terms are commonly understood. While these two vital aspects of our Christian endeavor have much in common, I am assuming no one will think of them as identical.

For one thing, Dr. Atkinson asks why our churches are not growing. In this contribution it is my purpose to attempt a consideration of this question from the point of view of membership. Why are our churches not growing in membership? This is a problem in evangelism and it is a problem for all our evangelical churches.

In our own Southern Convention there has not been realized the growth in membership desired and expected. In two conferences of the Convention the situation assumes tragic aspects and the stability of those conferences is threatened. But this is not a problem of the Southern Convention only; it is a problem generally recognized, and one which is giving general concern. It is a rather general experience among the churches that our evangelistic methods and programs have lost something of their former power and effectiveness. And yet this realization goes hand in hand with published statistical reports to the effect the church is not losing ground numerically but that in comparison with population growth are experiencing a normal membership increase.

It is interesting to discover the sources of this membership growth being experienced by our churches. We find the sources are two, the church homes and the Sunday School. As long ago as 1923 it was reported by one who was a student of this subject that 85% of all joining church by confession of faith were from the Sunday School, and that 60% of these were below thirteen years of age. It is interesting to observe the relation of this report to the fact 1923 was still experiencing mass evangelism. But I am confident had I the statistics for the year 1934 two things would be revealed by them, namely, the percentage would be larger than 85% and the age-peak would be below thirteen. To me this signifies our evangelism of today is an evangelism of children. Necessarily such an evangelism loses much of the dramatic element of the former adult evangelism and this loss lends to wholly erroneous conclusions.

However, the fact remains that the present program of evangelism is not reaching the unchurched families. Our program of child evangelism has brought with it apparently a loss of technique in adult evangelism. Today few adults are being received into our churches on confession of faith. And yet there are thousands of unconverted adults within hearing of our church bells. And another sobering situation is these unchurched thousands rarely attend church services. Now how can we account for this? While many reasons and explanations can be given my consideration will be based upon this proposition:

A changed religious thinking to which the church has not yet adequately adjusted itself.

Now Christianity itself has not changed and will not change. It is always essentially the same. But our interpretations of Christianity change and our attitudes toward Christianity change. And it is in these respects there has been a changed religious thinking. It is my conviction there has been a changed religious thinking both within and without the church. The church reacts slowly to change, indeed is slow to sense it. But while on the one hand, this changed religious thinking has been a process of years, on the other, it has developed rapidly in the last two decades. And the church has not moved as rapidly and hence has not been able to cope with the new situation in which she finds herself.

When I was a lad, a revival in the town church of which my father was pastor was as much a matter of interest to the unchurched as it was to the churched. When the congregation assembled both sheep and goats were there. Today when the revival is announced in the town church it may or may not be a matter of especial interest to the churched, and it is of no particular interest to the unchurched and they do not attend. I have only recently witnessed the assembly of fairly large congregations at a revival and what few unsaved persons were present were members of churched families, and there were not many of them.

This is one phase of the changed religious thinking. The church does not hold the place of regard and importance in the thinking of unchurched people she once knew. These people are still interested in religion but they are securing their religious information from other sources than the church, and they are harboring certain suspicions concerning the church. People these last two decades have been thinking largely in terms of present living conditions and present realizations of satisfactions and happiness. And all too often the church has been blind to these and has put the emphasis on other worldliness. As I recall the preaching emphasis and the content of the songs of the revivals of my boyhood, I recognize that life was pictured largely as a vale of tears and satisfactions were largely in heavenly prospect. Today people are not so much concerned about other worldliness as they are about the realities of this world. And the church has been silent on this score and the unchurched families have been finding their religious information and inspiration from other sources. And of course these other sources have not been equal to the situation spiritually and these families have suffered spiritually.

And there has been a change within the church. Where the former terminology persists the passion that formerly was associated with the terminology has vanished. And where a new terminology obtains there has not come with it a passion comparable to the old. In the case of the first reality has been lost; in the case of the second reality has not been found. Once we thought in terms of saving men from hell; now we think in terms of sharing something fine and splendid. Once men came to the church to be saved from hell, but today those who think in these terms do not find the men coming to the church to be saved. And those today who think in terms of sharing something men need with men who need it, find the needy do not come to the church after it. And here is a situation.

For some the social gospel provides an outlet for Christian service. But while I always have been interested in and an advocate of the social gospel, I have never been able to discover it taking the place of winning individual men and women to Christ. I have secured men jobs, had rents lowered and wages increased, have stood side by side with black men against a mob of whites, have provided coal and comforts and food and clothes and have yet to find where any of these things changed these persons in their religious thinking or attitudes. My own thought is, for the Christian, doing these things should go hand in hand with winning men and women to personal commitment to Jesus Christ as Lord and Saviour.

What we need is a passion. A passion which will actually send us out after these people who will not come to the church. A passion which will make us unhappy if we will not do it. A passion which will make us miserable if we will not do it. A passion which will threaten us with a loss of our own experience of God if we will not do it.

Jonathan Edwards in the light of our present thinking may have been wholly wrong in his convictions, but his convictions drove him out to rescue sinners from the hands of an angry and outraged God. Finney may have been wrong too, but he was driven by his convictions to warn men, and men warned by Finney were warned. Moody lived in a world of many questions but his hunger for converts for Christ made him a man of one question, "Are you a Christian?" We cannot go back to the generations of these men, to their theology nor to their technique, but if we are to meet this problem of adult and the unchurched evangelism we will have to be possessed with a passion comparable to that which they knew. If we once become so possessed technique and methods will take care of themselves.

OF WHAT IMPORTANCE ARE PREACHERS' MEETINGS?

The above question seems to imply that our Preachers' Meetings, are of very little, if of any importance. But as a layman and having visited many of their meetings, I am impressed with the belief that they are of vast importance. In the first place, we find no two of our ministers qualified just alike intellectually and in other ways. There may be one of the score or more that meet who has had an advantage above his associates in academic or seminary training, thus qualifying him for a broader outline of good works in his field. When he meets his fellow workers in these meetings naturally he will express himself through those channels of thought. Immediately his hearers will be awakened and realize a new thought has been revealed; at once accept it and apply it to their manner of life. Again there may be one in these meetings who has found a commendable and pleasing way of handling his members or parishoners, by which they have been aroused and show forth more zeal, determination and energy in good works in their church than ever before. This divine is present in one of these meetings and tells of these meetings and tells of his plans or methods that have awakened his people. Then every one of his associates in the ministry will gladly and thankfully accept his solution and put it in use in his own church. Also we find a sociability among our preachers that is very pleasing, commendable and worthy of notice. But everyone, mind you, is not sociably alike. Some have more pleasant, cheerful and genial way of revealing the real, fullest degree of their jovial nature. Well, when a fellow like that comes out expressing such a wonderful display of vociferous jocularity, everybody's face is beaming and sometimes, I have known it to produce applause. There are many other things I think, fine, that I might write about the ministry, but my letter is long enough. Yet, what has been written, does it not show forth importance?

AN OPEN LETTER.

To the Churches:

Ours is a spiritual body. The Apostle Paul tells us so. It is well for us to recall the words, "He (Christ) is the head of the body, the church; that in all things He might have the preeminence." (Col. 1:18.) Again the Apostle writes: "And gave him to be head over all things to the Church which is His body." The body of Christ, His spiritual body—that is the Church. Therefore its task is spiritual. Ours, beloved brethren and sisters in the Church, is a spiritual task. We are in the world but not of the world. Ours is the task of building up a spiritual kingdom, even the kingdom of our God here on earth. This we do by living, teaching, preaching the good news of our Lord's power to redeem and save the lost, the erring and the sinning.

This is the unique, distinctive work of the Church. No other body, society or order will do, or even undertake this task. To the church is entrusted the oracles of God, and we who compose the church are given the mysteries of the riches of grace in Christ Jesus that we may make Him known to a lost world.

Until, and unless, the Church gives the Gospel of our Lord to the world, the world, near-by and far away, will never get that Gospel.

In these four Spring months, March, April, May and June, our churches are called upon to especially bear this salient fact in mind, that our Lord, whose body we are, is commanding us to share His love, His saving grace and power with others. Let us often in these weeks and months turn our hearts in prayer to Him, "Lord what wilt Thou have me to do?" Each member can do something in praise, prayer, thanks-giving and self-denial for His sake.

We are not pleading for a smug, sentimental, complacent attitude to those around us whom we may or may not help physically; we are pleading for spiritual fervor for lost souls, so that in the name of the Lord and Saviour we may hold Him up to the world and help make Him known to the uttermost parts. Shall we not in these weeks seek to emphasize our own spiritual needs and show ourselves willing to obey His supreme command—"Go, teach all nations." This is the task to which our dear God has set Himself and to which He is calling us to be His co-workers.

J. O. A.

THE NEED OF THE HOUR.

In the face of a world that is literally sliding towards hell with accelerated speed what shall the righteous do? How can the followers of Jesus Christ bring His spirit and His person to this sin-cursed generation? There is no short way. But the task now faced by the Church can never be done unless it is clearly recognized that there are thousands upon thousands of Christians who are only such in name. They do not believe and have never believed in the way of love even unto the Cross. Only a remnant believes this and upon that remnant God has placed the burden. But God's arm is not shortened in this day any more than it was in the days of Gideon. He can save by many or by few.

But it is not the many or the few that will do the saving. It will be God working through them. The great responsibility now upon these disciples of Christ, who see that this world with all its boasted science and humanitarianism is lost, is to bring Christ into the personal lives and the institutions of men. Only He can take away the lust for possessions and the lust for power which are the basic cause of all tyranny. Only he can give the drive and the courage to fight institutionalized wrong. Only He can give the ethical wisdom to penetrate all the sham and hypocrisy of the social order about us.

"Can ye drink of the cup that I drink of?" asked Jesus. Those early disciples said they could and to their eternal credit, they did. But they drank of that cup, and His followers today can drink of it, only if their spirits are continually renewed by waiting upon God. This age is lost unless Christians are raised up who constantly renew their spirits in prayer. Spiritual strength demands spiritual discipline. The task is altogether too great for any man in his own unaided strength. But any man may be a vehicle for the Almighty.

The world can be saved if every Christian who sees the crisis of this civilization will face it with the utter consecration shown by the early Christians as they faced Rome. We know that it is only as we daily and systematically commune with the ever-living God that we can find strength and wisdom for the mighty task before us. To live creatively and triumphantly we must wait upon God. Those who seek the Kingdom will never find it unless they wait upon Him.—Missionary Review of the World.

THE FORGOTTEN WOMAN LIVES IN JAPAN.

By DOROTHY WALTON BINDER.

Eighty years ago Commodore Perry reopened the doors of Japan to the West. Sixty years have passed since the young Emperor Meiji began his reconstruction of Japanese society on Western models. Today the visitor from the United States is impressed, and perhaps flattered, by the resemblance of Tokyo to an American city. Its architecture is completely Westernized, its transportation system is as modern as New York's, with elevated, subways, electric trains, buses and countless taxis. Rickshas have practically disappeared. Men, school children, and some women, wear European clothes. Shopping has been simplified by beautifully organized department stores and by five-and-tens. Factories, movies, newspaper plants, radio programs, athletics, and a thousand other things common to our machine age, are copied after European and American models. On the surface the Japanese are fast becoming "just like us."

But though Japan may have transformed its business and industrial life to compete economically with our own, under the surface the new civilization has scarcely touched many elements of the traditional Japan. The position of woman, for instance, has been but slightly affected by Western impact.

Her status appears to have changed but little in the past 800 years. Suddenly, she feels extremely self-conscious of her own independence and liberties. How can this ancient role be compatible with modern Western ways?

Much has been written interpreting Japanese women to the Westerner. From these books may be learned the details of the careful education and training which since the coming of the military age in 1200 A. D. have made the Japanese woman what she has been ever since. Her status was that of an inferior to a superior, and she was early imbued with a servant psychology. All self-assertion was repressed. Self-sacrifice and self-effacement were virtues that went hand in hand. Her chief function was to produce soldiers and her chance of success as a woman lay in motherhood. When she was married she became the handmaiden of her husband, even as she had served in that capacity in her own family. The desires of young people had nothing to do with mating. This was a matter settled entirely by the family. Love and romance as we understand it had no place in marriage, although affection, kindliness, gentleness and sympathy certainly did. In the old days a wife could be divorced if her husband became too much attached to her. His first duty also was to his larger family and to the state; not to his wife. She had no rights to her children, who belonged always to the husband's family. A couple unfortunate enough to fall in love with each other frequently committed double suicide, believing that the next world would smile upon their romance, as this one had not.

The geisha system grew up to supplement the rigid relationship between husband and wife. Geisha girls were trained from childhood to entertain men. They were not necessarily prostitutes. They are resented in many quarters today, and wives, perhaps influenced by Western movies, find themselves torn with jealousy of geisha rivals, a sentiment not countenanced by the ancient training of self-sacrifice.

Japan is still very much a man's world. My first impression in driving from Yokohama to Tokyo over a wide modern thoroughfare was the enormous number of bicycles threading their perilous way between taxis and trams. But all the riders were men. Women's bicycles were not even made. I was further astonished to see babies still being carried almost exclusively on women's and little girls' backs, sometimes even on little boys' backs. I had taken for granted that a Westernized government, and a government particularly interested in developing healthy soldiers, would have abolished this ancient custom.

A prominent industrialist of the older generation challenged my inquiry as to whether the government was discouraging this practice. "You Westerners have an entirely wrong idea of this custom," he declared. "It is a good way to carry babies and it doesn't hurt them any." Younger Japanese admitted that babies suffered from having their legs strapped when the bones were still pliable, thus causing bow legs, and deplored the custom that forced infants to bob up and down while their sisters played hopscotch, or to have the hot sun beat down into their eyes while their mothers did errands. Perambulators do exist in Japan, but the poor are unable to afford them, and the better-to-do find it cheaper to let the nurse carry the baby on her back.

Socially, husbands are seldom accompanied by their wives except in cases where they have traveled or had diplomatic or business posts abroad. The man always seats himself first, is served first, and in public conveyances pays no attention to a woman standing. He treats her for what she is to him—an inferior. One finds the women of the upper classes charming and sweet and always thoughtful of one's comfort but almost always devoid of any outward personality. Those who have lived abroad are different, but several of them told me how difficult it was for them to readjust themselves to what was expected of them in Japan. Their children found it even harder. The extreme nationalism now prevailing everywhere, permeating particularly the schools, frowns on children "corrupted" by European influences. They no longer conform to the ideal pattern.

More men and children, especially in urban communities, have taken to European dress than women. The kimona is esthetically a beautiful as well as a very becoming garment. Against the background of the soft grays of unpainted houses, it is the most colorful thing in Japan. The foreigner envies the artistically-blended colors and beautiful designs in the Japanese woman's dress until she pictures herself trying to wear it as a practical garment. No one is more critical of the kimona than the Japanese working woman herself. Its long sleeves and skirt are awkward, while the obi, or stiff brocade sash, is cumbersome and binding. The Japanese Red Cross has recently pronounced against the obi from a health point of view, claiming that as it is now worn, it is constricting and produces flat chests. Factory girls, office girls and city school teachers have adopted European clothes for practical purposes. The waitresses and maids in hotels and tea houses, however, are still uniformed in kimonas. To see them padding about noiselessly in their tiny sandals, charming to look upon, gentle and courteous as they oversee one's needs, makes one hope that the estheticism of old Japan may somehow be inculcated into the new. For European clothes as modeled in Japan are badly made of cheap material, and almost universally unbecoming. An unemployed Paul Poiret would do the world a good turn by designing a distinctive and colorful costume for the Japanese working woman to be made from their own beautiful textiles.

It is almost unbelievable that the thousands of women and girls who pour into offices and factories daily are so little touched by being thrust from medievalism into the hurly-burly of modern industrialism. There are, according to Japanese employment bureau statistics, 1,000,000 women working in Japan today outside their homes. This does not account for the thousands of women working in their own fields. A rapidly industrialized Japan found it expedient to use female labor in order to compete with foreign markets. But factory life and a little schooling have not emancipated these women from ancient usages.

The Japanese employer does not expect his girl workers to be with him more than six or seven years. They are expected to marry soon after they turn 24. For their real career is marriage, and their real function is to produce children.

Politically, women have no rights. It was not until 1922 that they were allowed to even attend political meetings. A struggling woman suffrage organization felt, just before the Manchurian incident, that after having succeeded in getting a suffrage bill through the House of Representatives it stood a good chance of convincing the House of Peers that suffrage for women would benefit Japan. But since the incident, reaction has permeated government circles and the question of political liberty is unpopular. The organization's leader is pessimistic as to whether ten more years will find Japanese women enfranchised. While propaganda is unpopular, these women are demonstrating in practical fashion in such homely problems as garbage disposal, their potential civic usefulness to their potential usefulness of their country.

This is the broad picture of the status of women in Japan today. It is bound up and a part of ancient traditions, which include a national religion and a militarized government. Yet in a small way Western ideas regarding women are commencing to penetrate, particularly in intellectual circles. In little groups the intellectual leaders of Japan are beginning to change the concept of a Japanese woman towards herself. The change comes faster among student groups; sometimes too fast. The Japanese "flapper" frequenting night clubs, dancing, smoking and drinking in masculine society horrifies and frightens sober minds, who picture Westernization having this effect on all their youth. A paternalistic government recently issued an edict prohibiting men and women students from entering cafes and tea houses after 6:30 P. M.

Both industrialization and education are having their effect in changing social relationships. The young people are beginning to choose their own mates and set up their homes apart from their parents. Women, especially in intellectual matters are beginning to share the opportunities of men. Three medical colleges in Tokyo train women doctors. Many women prepare to be teachers and social workers. An enlightened Japanese said to me that he believed that the progress of a nation was measured by the amount of liberty its women possessed. If this is true, and if Japan is to become completely Westernized, then it must needs sacrifice its most esthetic creation for a creature more adapted to a modern world, less charming, perhaps, but not less useful.

A Story for the Children

PUT YOUR HEART IN IT.

Nan was fond of studying the dictionary; she always wanted to understand what she was reading and would often ask her mother the meaning of an unfamiliar word. Her mother wished her to learn to depend on her own efforts, when possible, so she would say, when asked the meaning of a word, "I think I've a good idea of what it means, but suppose you get the dictionary and see if memory serves me right," and Nan, instead of saying, "Oh! if you don't want to tell me, never mind," would get the dictionary and read the definition of the word and her mother by illustration helped her to understand it perfectly.

One evening in her Bible reading she came upon the verse, "And whatsoever ye do, do it heartily as unto the Lord," and said, "Mother, what does heartily mean?"

"Dictionary," said mother briefly, with a smile.

"I might have known," laughed Nan; "I never get any help from you about a word unless I have helped myself."

Down came the dictionary from the shelf and Nan studied it for a while. "Worse than ever."

"How?" asked mother.

"It says, 'Cordially, enthusiastically'," read Nan, trying to get her tongue round the word.

"Enthusiastically," suggested mother.

"Yes, that's it!" returned Nan.

"Doesn't help you much, Nan, does it? Suppose I define heartily as meaning putting your heart into every action?""

Nan looked bewildered and then broke into a merry laugh.

"I have only one heart and that's inside of me, where it belongs. I don't see how I can put it into things that I do."

"I thought you were putting it into your own romp with the kitten before supper; you led him quite a chase after the scrap of paper tied to the string."

"Oh! it was fun," beamed Nan, as she thought of it. "But how was my heart in it, mother?"

"It means, Nan, that you are to do things with all your thought upon what you are doing; to be earnest in work or in play, to be glad and happy and faithful in everything, because it pleases the Lord to have you be so. Aren't you happier because you love God and are trying to do the things that please Jesus, than you would otherwise be?"

"Yes," said Nan, "lots happier; but does it mean even playing with the kitten?"

"Why not?" smiled mother. "If you did not play with the kitten just as hard as you could, would you be apt to study as hard as you could, or weed the garden as though you liked to do it?"

"Perhaps not," admitted Nan.

"And," continued mother, "don't you think you enjoyed having the kitten have a good time, as well as having one yourself?"

"Oh, yes! I just love to play with him, he enjoys it so."

"So, just as you played heartily with the kitten, that he might have a good time, so, when you do things for others, you want to put your heart into it, that it may be a blessing to them. Do it heartily as unto the Lord, for you know the Saviour said what we do for others in His name He accepts as done to Him."

"I didn't put my heart in it, when I carried Mrs. Jacobs the Thanksgiving dinner. She said, 'Your mother is a good woman and whatever she does she never does by halves.' I might have said I was glad to bring the food to her, for I really was, but I just didn't," said honest Nan.

"But you enter into your studies heartily," was mother's encouraging word, "and you know God is interested to have us know all we can, so we can do more good in the world."

"I try to do my best," said Nan humbly, "but I never thought much about the Lord's being interested in it."

"He is interested in everything that concerns us. You are doing it 'heartily as unto the Lord,' when you seek to find out just what His words mean, as you did this verse, instead of just reading it and not stopping to understand it."

"It must make a big difference in people's lives when they think about this, mustn't it, mother?" said Nan, seriously. "I hope I'll always think of it. I think I will enjoy doing things more, if I do."

"I'm sure you will, Nan, and now the dishes are ready for you to do."

Nan closed her Bible with a comical expression on her face. "I most wish I hadn't found that verse."

Mother laughed, and so did Nan. "Well, here goes," and she went to her task so heartily that mother said, "Save the pieces, Nan," and while she worked she kept repeating to herself, "Heartily as unto the Lord." "It's pretty hard on you poor heart, to be inside of me and in everything I do, but I guess you can do it."—M. P.-Recorder.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

Rev. F. C. Lester, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

WALKING BACKWARDS.

Backwards is the most difficult direction in which any human can walk. And yet many walk that way. We were made to go forward. The eyes are set front. The feet and all the muscles are made for forward movement. The same is true of the soul. Forward is the direction in which we were intended to travel. Vision, dreams, hope, faith, they all lead forward. To go backwards means to desert them.

Many of the disciples of Jesus "went back and walked no more with Him" when he began to tell just what discipleship meant. So long as there was bread, fish, ease, and popularity in abundance they were right with Him. But if to follow Him meant feeding on truth and righteousness, if it meant hardship and purity, then they would walk with Him no more. They would go backwards. Even Judas tried that. The simple process of going back to the money-grabbing game made him commit suicide.

Those people who accept allegiance with Christ and turn back are not fit for the Kingdom of God, says Jesus. People who are elected to office in the church and fail to do their best, who leave the work to others, who refuse to carry their responsibilities, these people are walking backwards. And it is difficult to do. It is dangerous. It destroys vision, dreams, hopes, and finally the soul itself.

Forward is the direction of the sunlight of God's love. To go the other way means to walk in one's shadow. Growth in grace is the only safe thing. Forward with Christ should be the motto of our daily living. For walking backwards crushes and finally kills the best that is within us.

THINGS OUR EASTER PROGRAM SHOULD INCLUDE.

Easter is only a month away now. What we do in the way of building an Easter Program must be done at once. Several things should enter into that program. Among them may well be the following:

A missionary program of information that will lead to a liberal offering. This is our Mission Period, and should be observed. The pastor will preach on this line, of course, and the Sunday school should emphasize it in worship and class period. The Missionary Societies and Christian Endeavor will be busy also. All plans should be correlated so they fit into each other, and not conflict. For information, write to your missionary leaders, to office of Board of Christian Education, or to 14 Beacon Street, Boston. Don't forget that the Mission Office at Elon College, N. C. wants to serve you.

Evangelism should be emphasized. People feel the tug of the Cross and would really like to be in the company of those who lift the load from the heart of the Master. Many churches will have revivals. Some will hold service each night during Holy Week and will have a Sunrise Service Easter Sunday. Thousands of people will be looking for their friends, and will urge them to come to Christ and the Church on Easter. This personal work is important. Everyone should join in it who has a real Christian experience. People should attend church before they join so they will know what it means to become a Christian and part of the Church.

Many pastors find it profitable to get the young people together for several conferences, perhaps on Friday afternoons, and talk with them about the way one becomes Christian and the duties of church membership. This Pastor's Class can be a real service.

The whole community should be reached with the Easter message. It is not enough simply to have the usual services. Plan something extra and then tell the community about it so the people will want to get what you have to say. One good way to get this message abroad is to publish a parish paper, which can be done more economically that one would at first think.

But whatever you do, be sure that the leaders counsel together concerning the best way to present the Easter Message to the community, and then do your very best.

ELON SUMMER SCHOOL OF LEADERSHIP TRAINING.

The Blue Ridge and Elon Summer Schools of Leadership Training are being united for the coming summer, and the prospects are for a fine school. This makes possible a greater variety of courses, a stronger faculty, and increased attendance.

This combination makes the perfecting of plans more difficult because it is a larger group with which to deal. Dr. Edwin C. Gillette of Jacksonville, Florida, is the general Chairman, and F. C. Lester of Norfolk, Virginia, is the Dean. Within a short time these leaders will be ready to make further announcements.

The date agreed upon for the school was June 17th-23rd, but there are several conflicts which may make it necessary to move the school up to a week later. Final arrangements of the date will be made soon.

Suggestions concerning the school will be appreciated by both the Chairman and the Dean. It is none too soon for churches and individuals to begin making plans to get leaders and young people to Elon in June. This is one of our best chances to develop leadership. The cooperation of pastors, Sunday school superintendents, youth leaders, and missionary workers will be appreciated.

CONFERENCE ON THE USE OF LEISURE TIME.

On March 11th-15th there was held at Hotel Highland Lakes, Avon Park, Florida, a conference on the use of leisure time. Nationally known leaders were to be in this conference and a fine program was offered. The conference is sponsored by the Methodist Episcopal Church, Methodist Episcopal, South, Presbyterian, U. S. A., Presbyterian, U. S., Disciples, Christian and Congregational. This kind of a conference is very much in order for days like these through which we are passing. The Church must seek to meet all human needs, and this is certainly one for many people.

HOW DOES GOD GUIDE PEOPLE TODAY?

Christian Endeavor Topic for March 24th.

Scripture: Rom. 8:12-14.

Suggested Hymns: "I'll Go Where You Want Me To Go"; "Break Thou the Bread of Life"; "We May Not Climb the Heavenly Steeps"; "Open Mine Eyes that I May See"; "O Master Let Me Walk With Thee."

Solo: "I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say," or "I Can Hear My Saviour Calling."

Bible Readings.

By His word: Ps. 119:101, 105.
By prayer: I Pet. 3:12.
By devout humans: I Pet. 5:1-5.
By the Holy Spirit: John 16:7-14.
Insurance against evil: Rom. 5:16.
The Spirit inside: Rom. 8:9, 10.

Poem: "Out In the Fields With God."

The little cares that fretted me,
I lost them yesterday,
Among the fields, above the sea,
Among the winds at play;
Among the lowing of the herds,
The rustling of the trees,
Among the singing of the birds,
The humming of the bees.

The foolish fears of what may pass,
I cast them all away
Among the clover-scented grass,
Among the new-mown hay;
Among the rustling of the corn,
Where drowsy poppies nod,
Where ill thoughts die and good are born,
Out in the fields with God.

—Elizabeth Barrett Browning.

Discussion of the Topic.

1. Study the lives of Old Testament people who were guided by God.
2. Find how Jesus was guided by the Heavenly Father.
3. How was Paul guided? Peter? John? Other of the early Christians?
4. Have a Christian business man, a mother or a minister tell how God has guided them in making right choices.

God speaks to us:

1. In our conscience.
2. Through the Bible.
3. Through art and beauty.
4. Through noble lives.
5. Through prayer.
6. Through the Holy Spirit.

Which Christian would most likely receive guidance, the one who is asking for his personal affairs or the one who is concerned with the affairs of building a new world?

Additional Helps: "Everybody Works Here," June, 1934 issue of Christian Herald. An article on how God guided Martha Berry in founding schools for the mountain boys and girls.

"The Compulsions of Life," June, 1934 Herald. How God makes even things we do not want to do work for the best good.

I said, "Let me walk in the field,
He said, "No, walk in the town."
I said, "There are no flowers there."
He said, 'No flowers, but a crown."

I said, "But the air is thick,
And fogs are veiling the sun;"
He said, "But souls are sick,
And souls in the dark undone."

I said, "I shall miss the light,
And friends will miss me, they say;"
He answered, "Choose tonight
If I am to miss you, or they."

I pleaded for time to be given,
He said, "Is it hard to decide?
It will not seem hard in Heaven
To have followed the steps of your Guide."

I took one look toward the fields,
Then turned my face toward the town;
He said, "My child, do you yield?
Do you leave the flowers for the crown?"

Then into His hand went mine,
And into my heart came He;
And I walk in a light divine,
The path I had feared to see.

Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

PETER DELIVERED FROM PRISON.

Lesson XI—March 17, 1935.

Golden Text: Prayer was made earnestly of the church unto God for him."—Acts 12:5b.

Lesson: Acts 12:1-9.

The Christian Church was beginning to feel the power of persecution. Herod the king, grandson of Herod the Great, always eager to appear as a Jew and to please the Jews, took James, one of the sons of Zebedee, and beheaded him with the sword. Because he saw it pleased the Jews, he proceeded to go still further and this time he took the key man, Simon Peter himself. That would make him popular indeed. Herod is not the first man nor the last. who does things because it pleases the people. Alas the price that some people will pay for popularity! The things that some people do because it makes them popular with the crowd! The extent to which some people will go to "stand well" with the crowd.

Herod would have killed Peter outright, but there was a religious feast being celebrated, and of course it would never do to spoil the religious nature of the feast by cutting off the head of such a vile fellow as Simon Peter. How some folks do strain at a gnat and swallow a camel. How inconsistent folks are! It was all right to kill Peter, thought Herod, but of course it would never do to kill him during the passover feast. Some folks still think that they can do anything so long as they go through with the outward forms of religion and appear religious to others.

A Praying Church.

The Church was in a tight place. Peter was one of their leaders. They could not bear the thought of losing him. And yet there was nothing they could do about it. They could not get together and storm the prison and release Peter. They could not use political pull and have him released. There was nothing that they could do about it—nothing but pray. That was all that they could do, but it was the most effective thing they could do.

It is all right for the modern church to have organization and programs. But perhaps the main reason why the modern church is so impotent in the face of world conditions is the fact that it is not a praying church. It is not primarily a question of how much work a church does, but what kind of work it does. The church is the mediator of spiritual life, and no church can have vital spiritual life apart from prayer. One feels that if a minister could get his people to pray more, and the church to pray more, worth-while things might be done, and things might happen. We emphasize work, activities, programs, when what we need is power.

A few comments might be made as to this prayer of the church in behalf of Peter. It was constant, persistent, undiscourageable prayer—prayer was made without ceasing. It was concerted prayer—prayer was made without ceasing of the church, these disciples knew the power and the possibilities of concerted, social prayer.

It was prayer unto God—they believed He lived in a living universe, they believed there was a living God, they believed they could address Him directly, they believed He was interested in their spiritual well-being, they believed He could do something about it. For so many today, God is so vague and so unreal that there is no incentive to pray. This church of the first century believed there was a God, and they made a practice of calling upon him, especially when human resources could not avail.

It was personal, specific prayer. In this case at least they did not pray in general terms. They prayed for Simon Peter, specifically, personally. We are not heard for our much speaking or for our general speaking. Do not be afraid to be specific in your praying.

A Prayer-Answering God.

Prayer is not a blind alley. Real prayer releases spiritual forces and power. While these men and women were gatehred together in Mary's house praying for Peter, God was doing something about it. And he was running on schedule. The night before Peter was to have been taken out the next morning to be beheaded, an angel of the Lord came into the prison, roused him up, struck the shackles from his hands, led him out of the prison and set him free. If one thinks that this sounds strange, let him remember that to the Peter to whom it happened, it seemed like a vision or a dream. It was too good to be true, both for Peter and for the disciples who had been praying for that very thing.

There is an interesting side-light in the story which needs emphasis. The angel did his part, but Simon Peter had to do his part. The angel woke Peter up, and struck the chains from his hands, but Peter had to get up, and dress himself. The angel led Peter out of the prison, but he did not carry him out. The angel got Peter out of prison, but he did not go all the way to Mary's house with him. In other words God does not do for us, what we can do and ought to do for ourselves. We often ask God for things which God will not give us. But instead he will give us grace and strength to get them for ourselves. God helps those who cannot help themselves, and He usually helps them to help themselves.

Incredible and Comical Unbelief.

Peter showed good sense when he realized he was free. He went to the place where he knew the church would be gathered together, he went to the prayer-meeting. Those who have found salvation in Christ would do well to use their new freedom in going to places and in associating with those who can help them.

And strange thing—when Peter in answer to prayer appeared at the very place where they were praying for him, the church did not believe it was he. God gave them more than they expected. God honored such faith as they had, in spite of their lack of perfect faith. Answered prayer often involves far more than we ask or think.

Common Sense.

Peter used common sense with his religion. He did not deliberately put himself in danger. After he had appeared to the disciples, and after he had requested them to tell others, he departed and went unto another place. It was not an evidence of fear; it was an evidence of the spirit of common-sense which is often too uncommon in religion.

A MAN TO WATCH.

Dr. Edgar Brookes, Amanzimtotti Institute's new principel, was characterized recently by Dr. John R. Mott as one of the outstanding Christian leaders in all South Africa. Dr. Brookes was educated in the schools at Natal and graduated from the University of South Africa (M. A. 1920-Litt. D. 1924.) From 1920-23 he was Professor of Public Administration and Political Science at the University of Pretoria. In 1927 he was the delegate from South Africa to the League of Nations Assembly. Recently he was campaign organizer for the South African Committee on Race Relations. The School is happy under his devoted and efficient supervision.

"ACCESS TO GOD'S GRACE."

"We have access to God's grace wherein we stand."—Rom. 5:2.

Unless we have access to God, we are lost. Unless the barrier that stands between us and God is removed, His highest gifts of love are swept away. Unless His grace shines in the depths of our souls, we live in darkness.

It is through faith in Jesus that the barriers are removed and the sun shines in. It is then that beauty of character is revealed; graciousness and gracefulness of soul radiate in the life; manners become charming and the way is strewn with flowers of beauty and holiness.

This access to God lies in the very nature of the transaction itself. If one shrinks from God, does not want God and tries to leave Him out of his life, one cannot use that grace if he had it. How can God bestow His blessings upon anyone who closes his heart against Him? How can one fail to receive that blessing if he opens his heart to Him?

Prayer—Our Father, we feel our dependence upon Thee. We claim no merit of our own but to choose Christ. We believe that the most meritorious thing of life is to choose Him. We believe (help Thou our unbelief) and thus we would affix our souls to the gift of everlasting life.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"ABOUNDING GRACE."

"God is able to make all grace abound toward you."—2 Cor. 9:8.

The grace of God, as we know it, is abounding. There are daily ministries, soul freedoms, increasing knowledge, holy instructions, ministries of love, safeguarding spirits, saving knowledge and conditions, universally abounding along the way of man. These ministries are so abounding that unbelief and pessimism are impossible. "Where sin doth abound, grace doth much more abound."

"He thanks thee best who serves thee best:
Who meets each glowing day
With grateful heart and lifted face
To toil and rest and play.

"He thanks thee best who trusts thee best:
Whose faith shines through the dark,
A healthful, happy, hopeful thing
For way-tired hearts to mark.

"He thanks thee best who worships best:
Who prays where none may see,
Who humbly waits to hear thy voice,
Who has no God but Thee."

—Grace Nell Crowell.

Prayer—Lord, send down Thy love upon us all that we may appreciate Thy enfoldings, Thy everlasting dawnings, Thy heartenings, Thy healings, Thy fellowship, Thy promises, Thy faith. Let Thy love and comfort and all Thy ministering graces be our pastime every day. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"THE IMPOSSIBLE LIFE."

"A good man out of the good treasure of his heart bringeth forth that which is good."—Luke 6:45.

Concerning goodness in man's heart Jesus asked, "Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?" "A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit." This should settle the question of hypocrisy being a stumbling block. Hypocrisy does not represent Christianity and it can be no reasonable cause for one's stumbling.

There is a goodness which is childlike and in its innocency and sweetness is that which God has said we all must possess before we can be numbered among the redeemed.

There is a goodness which is expedient. We all know how frequently it appears and what power it very often has. Even for expediency it is best to be good, for to do wrong, no matter what may be the pleasure of it, is certain to bear the fruit of wrong. To do right, no matter how hard the struggle, one will certainly profit by it in a way that will make him supremely glad. "Godliness is profitable," saith the Scripture.

There is a goodness that is natural. It costs some people nothing to be good: they are born that way. They cannot even be severe toward wrong. They like to be generous, helpful and charming.

But of all the various kinds of goodness none is more charming than that goodness which is done in the name of and for the glory of God. There is an old Greek proverb which says, "The dice of God are always loaded." In other words, goodness must win the victory.

Dr. Martineau, in his book "A Study of Religion," says, "Rude strength always gives way at length before intelligence, intelligence is worsted in the struggle with moral principle," and, he says, "Christian love overmasters the lower and coarser forces. This is the hope of humanity."

Prayer—Our Father, we pray Thee that we may study the most excellent gifts and be among the victorious in this life and that to come. In His name we ask it.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

SANCTIFYING GOD.

"The Lord of hosts shall be exalted in judgment, and God that is holy shall be sanctified in righteousness."—Isa. 5:16.

One may sanctify himself, or God may sanctify him, but it is unusual for one to think of himself as sanctifying God. To sanctify God is the Christian's privilege however, and that must be done before the soul can enjoy its full relation to the kingdom.

To sanctify God is to place Him in the center of life. The song asks, "Is thy heart right with God?" It is done by becoming God-conscious; it is done by serving Him; it is done by glorifying Him in our actions; it is done by obeying His laws; it is done by honoring Him in life's ways; in the all-inclusive words of Paul, let us become thus conscious; "whether we live, we live unto the Lord; or whether we die we die unto the Lord; whether we live or die, we are the Lord's."

Prayer—O Lord, our God, we are Thy children and we look to Thee as our Father. Thou art our love and we are thine. As a child sanctifies his parents in his heart, we would sanctify Thee in our lives. May this be so we ask it for Jesus' sake.—Amen.

FRIDAY.

"GOD ALL DAY."

"In the morning will I direct my prayer to Thee."—Psalm 5:3.

A few weeks ago there appeared in this a poem "God in the Morning," and the theme was, "You must seek God in the morning if you want Him through the day."

Experience teaches that to have been with the Lord in the morning does not always assure one that he will be conscious of Him during all the day; for life is everything that the day brings, and the day brings everything that life is. The devil approaches during the day, temptations come and evil befalls; in such times the face of God is sometimes hidden.

Physical unfitness obscures one's vision. Biliousness, shattered nerves, headache, or pain from any cause; these blur spiritual vision, for a time, and God is out of sight.

It is true that all clouds are not fringed with gold, that, "Some days are dark and dreary," likewise some have their dark days, but as the sun still shines behind the dark day, so God is present still, waiting for a rift in the cloud that He may shine through. Faith will make that rift and reveal Him.

Prayer—Our Father, we thank Thee, we thank Thee, we thank Thee; that whether the sky is clear or cloudy, the day brings forth light for man's glory, and this is Thy glory. So shine in our souls that way. We pray Thee for enough faith to open to Thee and find Thee, any time.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"THE GREAT GULF."

"Between us and you there is a great gulf fixed."—Luke 16:19-31.

The Bible writers knew all about a great gulf. The deepest gash in the earth's surface is in their country. It begins at the source of the Jordan and runs down the valley through which that stream, "the Descender," pursues its rapid course, and continues under the depths of the Dead Sea, and then is extended further to the south through the desert. It is nearly 2,600 feet deep.

But even that chasm can be crossed, while the gulf separating the evil and the good, those whom God has condemned and those whom He has accepted, can never be crossed. There are many questions in life, but the most serious of all the questions is this, "On which side of that gulf shall we stand in the judgment, on Satan's side or on Christ's?"

Prayer—Dear Lord, may we know no separation between us and Thee. May we be one, now and everlastingly.—Amen.

SUNDAY.

"FAITH-SHY."

"Then said Zedekiah unto Jeremiah, let no man know of these words."—Jer. 38:14-27.

King Zedekiah knew that Jeremiah could tell him what fate was in store for him and his doomed kingdom, so he called the prophet secretly out of his prison, and learned from him that the Chaldeans would overcome him. But he was ashamed to have it known that he had consulted the prophet whom he had so cruelly abused.

There is many a man who has in his heart a consciousness of the truth of religion which he would not for the world put into words. He brags of an infidelity which he does not possess. He is not sensible enough to know that faith would be his highest honor and obedience his crown. In dealing with professed unbelievers it is well to remember that their belief is likely to be far deeper than they own or realize.

Prayer—Lord God, may we never be ashamed of Thee and of Thy truth. May we hold it to be our chief glory to reach Thy throne and fall before it.—Amen.

THE SOWER.

By John G. Truitt.

"Behold the sower went forth to sow."—Mark 4:3.

We have been saying that John Mark was a clever story-writer. What a story-teller was Jesus! And this morning we are meditating on one of the prettiest He ever told. "Behold, the sower went forth to sow." Who has not seen that has missed a great deal. How often you and I have seen the sower go forth to sow. The sky is clear. The soil is soft, and fragrant. A song is in the soul. There is a sure hope of tomorrow. One of the prettiest pictures of my own childhood is the sower going forth to sow. Every aspect of it is beautiful. The brown, strong, human hand overflowing with the choicest seed. The majestic, rhythmic strides of the sower, the good soil, and the fleecy vault above of expanding blue. The moving teams. The home nearby. The divinity of work. Jean Francois Millet has expressed it well in his painting, "The Sower," which is to be seen in the Vanderbilt collection in the Metropolitan Museum in New York. One stands before that painting in the heart of one of the world's greatest, deepest cities, and finds himself transported to the fields, and forests, and farmlands of the open country.

Perhaps that is something of what Jesus did with this beautiful story. The crowded, smelly wharfs of the fishing village became another place to many in the multitude who heard him preach that day. They were reminded of home, parents, childhood, and the rich valleys hiding themselves among the hills of Palestine. Some very skillful plowing was going on in their souls, as Jesus stood on their dank and damp old boat facing the multitudes on the shore, and said, "Behold, a sower went forth to sow." The smell of the fish became the smell of the forest, and the crowded quarters became the roomy places of other regions.

Is that not one of the great things our services of worship does for us? They lift us out of our daily, busy round, and rest us with the outreaches of a nobler thinking. "Be not conformed to the world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God." (Rom. 12:2.) Charles E. Jefferson says, "We move for six days in a certain range of ideas and interests and our only safety lies in breaking into a larger world. We travel for a week on a certain level, and there is no relief unless we can rise to a higher level. . . . All persons who are over-working, and who need fresh air and exercise, ought to give at least an hour every Sunday to public worship. It is better than golf. It is more bracing than a walk through the woods."

Listening at Jesus they could hear the seed falling on the roadside alongside the plowed field, for it was hard and beaten and bare. And some seed, in the hand of so lavish a sower, would fall by the wayside! Later Jesus explains to them that their own inner selves is the soil. How surely He is calling to the minds of some that they have allowed everything to rush along the roadside of the souls until they have become beaten, packed paths as hard as stone. Nothing makes an impression. A round of pleasure, or a race for riches, or a fight for fame, has made but a hard beaten thoroughfare of their souls, and the good seed falls on it in vain. They cannot be touched. It cannot take root. It is such a pity that we should ever allow this to occur in our lives. Dr. George A. Buttrick, pastor of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York, says, "Soon the birds will come and gather the seed. Some twittering interest, some new excitement, some trivial item of gossip would eat up all he had said. He could do nothing until God should drive a plowshare of pain or loss in cruel mercy through their lives to make new furrows for the seed. Tragedy is indeed a gain that compels men to meet life with serious purpose."

A few miles from my pastoral home was a farm far above the average, and yet one of its great fields was marred by a vast rock that came just to the top of the soil at two or three places. Seed sown on the thin soil that sought to cover that bald spot came up more quickly than the other, and grew very rapidly for a brief season, and then it wilted and died away. And although Jesus' hearers that day were standing on the damp sand of the seashore they could nevertheless see that very picture as they heard him say, "And other fell on rocky ground where it had not much earth; and immediately it sprang up because it had no depth of earth, but when the sun was up, it was scorched; and because it had no root it withered away."

And they began to look one at another to see if they were reading the self-accusation of one another. "He is hitting me" many of them were saying to themselves. I began well. I started fine. I made some great resolutions. I had high hopes. I saw myself as I would like to be. But how far I am short of that today! "Because it had no root, it withered away." No depth! No anchor. No downward reach into the deep and abiding. Surface living, and fading away with no fruit, nor the tokens of faithfulness. And perhaps there were now new beginnings, and better.

Still others were finding out for themselves why their lives had been barren of fruit: "And some fell among thorns, and the thorns grew up, and choked it." In their case it was not that their hearts were not gentle, and warm, nor that there was any lack of depth in their personality,—they were not barren packed paths, nor parching rock,—but they had been good soil, as good as any. But they had failed to bear fruit because they had tried to serve both God and mammon. Thorns and wheat had started side by side, but the "cares of this world, the deceitfulness of riches, and the lusts of other things entering in" choke out the wheat so that the thorns have complete right of way.

Some in that group were inspired to give of their best to their Master; to such they heard Jesus saying: "And these are they which are sown on good ground; such as hear the word, and receive it, and bring forth fruit, some thirty-fold, some sixty, and some a hundred." Such are the joys of every noble effort, the hope of the earth, and the light of the world! May their kind increase.

Jesus is the sower; the Word of God is the seed; and we are the soil. There was nothing wrong with the sower. There was nothing wrong with the seed. The difference was in the soil. It all brings itself back to our own individual responsibility. Jesus expressed in the phrase: "Take heed how ye hear."

None of us are exempt from that command. Everywhere, and in various ways God is sowing into the soil of our lives the word,—the seed; and the responsibility rests upon us as to how we shall hear. We are not to be discouraged if we do not have the same amount of talent, nor bear the same amount of fruit as do others. Our responsibility rests in heeding the urge of God within, to answering the call of conscience, to obeying the command that comes from the better depths of our soul.

And finally, every Christian is to be a follower of Christ, going forth sowing the seed, and looking to God for the harvest:

"Sowing in the morning,
sowing seeds of kindness,
Sowing in the noontide
and the dewy eve;
Waiting for the harvest,
and the time of reaping,
We shall come rejoicing,
bringing in the sheaves."

Christian Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

The Christian Orphanage wants one hundred thousand Octagon Soap coupons. We are going to mail each Sunday School Superintendent one "Baby Bond" which calls for one thousand coupons. We trust that every little boy and girl will get busy and collect from home, neighbors and friends all the coupons that they can get and carry them to Sunday School and have the Superintendent of the Sunday School, or some special one he may appoint to receive them, to mail them to the Christian Orphanage in lots of 250 or 500, or more at the time.

This should be a real joy to have a part in doing something that costs no money for the little children in the Orphanage. Look at the faces of the little tots on the "Baby Bond" and I know you will be thrilled to do this much for them.

We have until February 1st, 1936, to reach the one hundred thousand coupons and if we reach that number we will get a 10% bonus on this amount. Let everybody help to pay in Octagon coupons for the "Baby Bond" which has been sent to their Sunday School.

JOHN CALVIN.

tained by him. Now, it is by the secret and special operation of the Holy Spirit that men are united to Christ and made members of His body. Through faith, which is a firm and certain cognition of the divine benevolence towards us founded on the truth of the gracious promise in Christ, men are by the operation of the Spirit united to Christ and are made partakers of His death and resurrection, to that the old man is cricified with resurrection, so that the old man is crucified with Him, and they are raised to a new life, a life of the believer has life in Him and knows that he is saved, having the witness of the Spirit that he is a child of God, and having the promises, the certitude of which the Spirit had before impressed on the mind, sealed by the same Spirit on the heart." (Brit.—Ency.)

The incessant exhausting labours to which Calvin gave himself could not but tell on the strongest constitution: how much worse on one so fragile as his! Amid many sufferings, however, and frequent attacks of sickness, he manfully pursued his course for twenty-eight years; nor was it till his frail body, torn by many and painful diseases—fever, asthma, stone, and gout, the fruits for the most part of his sedentary habits and unpausing activity. In the early part of the year 1564, his sufferings became so sever that it was manifest his early career was rapidly drawing to a close. On the 6th of February of that year he preached his last sermon, having with great difficulty found breath enough to carry him through it. He was several times after this carried to church, but never again was able to take any part in the service. In the midst of his sufferings, however, his zeal and energy kept him in continual occupation; when expostulated with for such unreasonable toil he replied, "Would you that the Lord should find me idle when He comes?" A deep impression seems to have been made on all who visited him on his deathbed; they saw in him noble spectacle of a great spirit that had done its life-work calmly and trustfully passing through the gate of suffering into the long-desired and firmly expected repose of heaven. He quietly expired in the arms of his faithful friend, Beza, on the evening of the 27th of May, in the fifty-fifth year of his age. John Calvin The Man is dead, and Calvin the Statesman; but John Calvin the Theologian is still living here, and in heaven.

OFFENBACKER.

Nancy Anne Offenbacker was born September 16, 1847, and died February 3, 1935, aged 87 years, 4 months, and 17 days. She joined the old East Liberty Christian Church when about fifteen years of age, and continued her membership there until death, though for many years she lived near St. Peter's and Bethel. She was a Dofflemyre before marriage, and during the last few months of her life was faithfully cared for by her relatives at Bethel. She is survived by her husband who has been an invalid for almost a year. Funeral services were held at Bethel, February 5, 1935, and the body laid to rest in a family burying ground not far away.

McCLURE.

Granny McClure, as she was lovingly and familiarly known by a large number of friends and relatives, departed this life at Lanett, Ala., February 7, 1935. Had she lived until March 13th, she would have been 95 years of age.

She was one of the most patient sufferers I have ever visited. It was an inspiration to hear her tell of her complete resignation to the Master's will.

She was very tenderly cared for in the home of one of her grand-daughters for quite a long time. It was really pathetic to witness the final parting. She loved them, they loved her. She is just gone on ahead for a little time and soon you will all be going to her.

We carried her body back to Sandy Creek Baptist Church for interment. This was her old home church. Funeral services were in charge of Rev. Samuel L. Heath, Pastor of Lanett Baptist Church, with the writer assisting.

May God bless the memory of this old Saint. G. D. HUNT.

TUCK.

Mrs. Esther Tuck, daughter of R. B. and Sallie Glasscock, was born May 17, 1864, and died January 26, 1935 at the age of seventy years, eight months and twenty-one days. On November 14, 1882, she was married to Carey Tuck. To them were given twelve children, nine of these surviving her and more than a score of grandchildren. The living children are W. T., J. I., C. B. Drewry, Misses Estelle, Maybell, and Mrs. Dora Gentry, Mrs. Sallie Griffin, and Mrs. Willie Morris. Her husband died in Dec., 1923.

Those who have known Sister Tuck tell me she has always lived a sincere Christian life. She suffered much for several months before death. She assured her children that she was ready and willing to go to be with those at rest in heaven. She expressed deep gratitude for all that friends and children had done for her during her illness.

The funeral was at the home near Red Bank, Va. Conducted by the writer on Sunday afternoon, January 27th, and the burial was in the family cemetery on the farm of her parental home. Union church has lost a faithful member. May her children follow her example in Christian living and all meet her in heaven.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

"De Lawd" Goes to Eternal Pastures.—

Richard Berry Harrison, who acted the role of God in "The Green Pastures," has passed on to his eternal pastures. Harrison had never missed playing his part in this now famous production, until his recent illness; and even then he refused to believe that he would not soon be back on the stage. He was laid to rest in Lincoln Cemetery in Chicago, "after the most impressive ceremony ever accorded a member of the Negro race" in that city. Some 20,000 persons, including government representatives, were in attendance at the last rites. Possible his life was best summed up by one of his own race, who as the funeral procession passed by was heard to remark, "He was 'De Lawd' at all times."

Victory Conceded to Roosevelt.—

The Administration's "relief" bill seems certain of passing the Senate at this writing. Two amendments that would have reduced the amount of the appropriation were voted down. The Byrd amendment reducing the total to $1,880,000,000 lost by 66 to 21, while the amendment offered by Senator Adams of Colorado was counted out by a vote of 57 to 30. If, as has been asserted, the former appropriation of an almost like amount resulted in the employing of only 360,000, there is little likelihood that there will be a greater reduction in unemployment by the passage of this bill. On the other hand, the additional tax burden which this program of spending will put on business will necessarily retard recovery.

Secretary Wallace Wakes Up.—

Only a few short months ago our political advisers were telling us that there was an overproduction which had caused all of our major worries. Now comes the Secretary of Agriculture with the statement that production must be increased by 50 per cent and prices greatly reduced if both industry and agriculture are to be lifted out of the Slough of Despond. Says a contemporary, this indicates "a sharp change in Administration policies from 'scarcity economy' to 'abundance economy'." Says Secretary Wallace: "We have reached the conclusion that further action along the line of reducing production will not greatly increase the farmer's share in national income. To carry the production below the present point would begin to reduce the quantity of the stuff available for the people of the country." What a pity it has taken the honorable Secretary two years to wake up.

Success to Senator Sheppard!—

Senator Morris Sheppard, the noted dry leader, has introduced another prohibition amendment resolution. It provides that "Congress shall have power to prohibit the manufacture, sale or transportation of alcoholic liquors within, the importation thereof into, or the exportation thereof from the United States and all territory subject to the jurisdiction thereof, for beverage purposes, and to enforce such prohibition by appropriate legislation." It further provides that "In the event of legislation by Congress to carry out this article, the States shall have power to prohibit the manufacture, sale or transportation of alcoholic liquors for beverage purposes within their respective areas, or to enact legislation in aid of that enacted by Congress to carry out this article. In the absence of legislation by Congress to carry out this article, the power to prohibit the manufacture, sale or transportation of alcoholic liquors for beverage purposes within their respective areas is reserved to the several States." The amendment also prohibits "the transportation or importation into any State, Territory, or possession of the United States for delivery or use therein, of alcoholic liquors for beverage purposes, in violation of the laws thereof." The adoption of this amendment would repeal the Twenty-first Amendment.—Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

Unearth Archaeological Data at Jamestown.—

The excavating which has been under way on Jamestown Island, site of the first permanent English settlement in America, has brought to light much data that is of interest. In the course of this excavation many tons of debris have been dug up and sifted for fragments which might prove of value. There have been uncovered the foundations of seventeen old houses, including one structure 50 by 70 feet. This may have been the mansion of an early royal governor. Gradually built up between the years 1607 and 1676, Jamestown was destroyed by fire during Nathaniel Bacon's rebellion. The little city was rebuilt but suffered again in the fire of 1699, and gradually fell into ruin when the seat of the Virginia government was removed to Williamsburg. Only about a half-dozen buildings were standing at the beginning of the Revolution, and the tides of the James River have, during the centuries, eaten away a large portion of that part of the island on which most of the houses stood. We are told by Floyd Flickinger, the superintendent of the Colonial National Monument, that "there is evidence of several successive settlements on the Jamestown site. The houses of each settlement are orientated differently and constructed differently of different materials."

A Democrat Gives Statistics.—

It is often difficult for the nation's mass mind to comprehend statistics. That is the reason the credulous respond quickly to many of the economic cures which are being advanced today. They cannot analyze in terms of billions of dollars. Senator Byrd of Virginia, however, has collected himself some figures which anyone can understand, and coming from an outstanding Democrat in criticism of present governmental policies they carry a full significance. "Our Federal Appropriation bill, as proposed for one year," the Virginian said, "is nearly five per cent of our total national wealth. It is one-fifth of the total gross income of the nation for 1933. It is double—twice—the total cash income for 1932 of all the farmers of the United States. It is nearly five times the total net incomes returned by all corporations for 1932. It is three times the total net taxable incomes of individuals for 1932. A tax of one per cent on products of manufacturing would yield the government only $250,000,000. Therefore, we are spending this year a sum equal to the yield of a sales tax on products of manufacturing of 36 per cent." And, Senator Byrd concludes, "I do not believe a government can borrow and spend its way to prosperity any more than an individual can enrich himself by living beyond his income. . . . I am convinced that the time has come when temporary and emergency measures should yield to sound principles of government and business." —Exchange.

Off the Relief Lists.—

A recent news story in a Chicago daily paper began with these words: "Little old ladies sobbing in watery grief and old men whose deaths have lightened the relief rolls do not mean much to employees of the county morgue, so they bundled old Frederick Dinkleberg into a canvas wrapping today and took him away in a mud-spattered hearse. Nobody cared much, except one tiny old woman." Who was Frederick Dinkleberg? He was the man who designed the Flatiron Building in New York and launched the era of skyscrapers. He was also the architect of famous bank buildings, of the Marshall Field Annex of Chicago, and the Wanamaker store in Philadelphia. Born in Pennsylvania in 1859, he was the son of an Italian countess and a wealthy contractor. He attained distinction in his profession, and a fortune; but his firm, with many other architectural firms went down with the crash. He lost his home in Evanston, Ill., and, too old at 72 to start again, he and his wife went on the relief rolls. Their golden wedding anniversary was to have been on Sunday, February 10th. The architect asked his wife to bake a cake in celebration, but when she brought it, with steaming coffee, to his bedside on Sunday morning, he had already passed on. One does not know what personal factors may enter into the tragic story, but from any standpoint it is a sad commentary upon our American life. Dinkleberg has left enduring monuments of his genius and achievements, but his death is a symbol of our failure in social architecture.—Advance.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Dr. S. C. Harrell, president of the Southern Convention and Dr. L. E. Smith, president of Elon College were in Richmond this week.

The Valley Virginia Central Conference meets in mid-year session at Bethlehem Church, near Broadway, Va., on Thursday, March 28th. Rev. B. J. Earp is president and Dr. A. W. Andes is secretary.

The many friends of Brother Samuel Earman, treasurer of the Virginia Valley Conference, will learn with deep regret of the death of his wife. Mrs. Earman departed this life on March 2nd. We extend our deepest sympathy.

Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, who has been at her home in Henderson, North Carolina, on account of the illness of her mother, has returned to Florida and has been teaching in an interdenominational Leadership Training School in Miami. At present she is participating in the Florida Leisure Time Conference at Avon Park. The topic of the conference is "Constructive Use of Leisure."

Dr. Chas. H. Beale, pastor of the church at St. Petersburg, Fla., is conducting a series of Friday morning lectures entitled "Hours With the Classics and Moderns." They are lectures on literature and largely attended. On a recent Friday morning, there were six hundred present, one-half of whom were men. On Sunday mornings Dr. Beale preaches to a congregation of over two thousand, with probably five hundred more in the Sunday school auditorium listening through the use of loud speaker extensions.

The church at St. Petersburg, Florida, has four young people's groups. The youngest is the Jr. Christian Endeavor, which meets Sunday morning at the church hour; then there is the regular Christian Endeavor Society for young people of high school age. The older young people are divided into two groups, which meet on alternate Sundays at six P. M. One is the college age group and they have taken for their name "Colagro" a word obviously made up from the words, "college age group." The oldest group is for those over college group age and this group is called the Congregational Club. All these groups are doing effective work under the general leadership of Rev. Lawrence A. Gedcke, assistant minister of the church.

Miss Priscilla Chase, Extension Worker in the Carolinas, has been loaned to the Education Society by the Extension Boards for a few months, to assist Dr. Frederick L. Fagley in his work in the Department of Adult Education. She will do editorial work along the line of preparation of courses of study and program making. Dr. Fagley's pamphlet on Adult Education in the Church led the department of Adult Education of the FERA to ask for his assistance along that line. This is a well deserved recognition and also an opportunity for real service, and the denomination is pleased to render this service to the country at this time by loaning Dr. Fagley and Miss Chase for a few months. We heartily commend Dr. Fagley's pamphlet for the use of our churches in developing the adult program of the church.

SEARCHING QUESTIONS ON ACQUIRING MONEY.

Let us think through such questions as they relate to the acquisitive instinct in the light of Christian Stewardship as taught by Jesus—

1. What is money, wealth?
2. What ways of getting money can you name that are un-Christian?
3. What do the scriptures teach about covetousness?
4. What is the Christian motive in acquiring property?
5. Is stewardship in aquiring money as fundamentally important as stewardship in the use of money?
6. What motive should dominate a Christian who works in a factory?
7. What partners are there in all values?
8. Has one a right to receive as large a salary as he can get?
9. What do you say to the man who says you can't mix religion and business?
10. What is the profit motive?
11. Is it true that "big business" is usually operated with the idea of getting as large a profit as the public will permit?
12. What is the stewardship interpretation of the acquisitive instinct?
13. Can one be a Christian if his activity is of a kind not useful to his fellowmen?
14. Is it sufficient when making an investment to ask "Is it safe, and is the rate of income good?" Must we know the conditions under which the income is earned?
15. Should one try to practice the Golden Rule in industry when others do not do it?
16. Is the only basis on which industry in America can succeed that of free competition and profit?
17. How change the motives of acquiring—ease, greed, pleasure, place, power—to the Christian ones—service to the world, highest realization of personality, the glory of God?
18. Is it un-Christian to speculate in stocks and bonds?

Would such a list of questions "bring a rise" in a group of your church people? Why not use the Syllabus, "The Christian Acquisition and Use of Money" in a group of your men?

Have you seen "What Lack I Yet?" a sixty-eight page booklet on the Christian Use of Money as issued by the Presbyterian Church, U .S. A.? It has four worship and study programs: Money —A Symbol of Power; The Christian Way of Acquiring Money; The Ultimate test of Christian Living; A Program of Personal Benevolences. It also has two splendid dramatizations. Thirty cents secures it from the Christian Publishing Association, Dayton, Ohio, or the Pilgrim Press, Boston, Mass.

WARREN H. DENISON.

CONVENTION OF BAPTIST WOMEN.

Smashing all records for attendance in recent years and finding the great First Baptist church here unable to accommodate all who wanted to hear the programs, the Baptist Woman's Missionary Union completed its second day here tonight with two great addresses delivered by Miss Ida Patterson of Shanghai, China and Charles A. Leonard of Harbin, Manchuria.

Leaving no doubt in the minds of the 2,000 people attending that so far as the church life of the denomination is concerned the depression has lifted, the women of the union brought in a series of reports which demonstrated their worth to the denomination and established them more firmly than ever as a great kingdom force in North Carolina.

The report of the treasurer showed the organization had raised a total of $181,946.16 during the past year, which was nearly $2,000 more than the goal they had set up. Foreign missions received a total of $26,852; $10,403 went to home missions and $20,589 went to state missions.

This is probably the greatest gathering of women in North Carolina during the past 10 years and there is more harmony, enthusiasm and hopefulness among the church women than has been observed for a decade. The church women of this denomination have been making history in North Carolina and, like a mighty army, they plan conquest after conquest as they valiantly and militantly face the future.—From Greensboro Daily News.

Durham, March 13.

CONGREGATIONAL-CHRISTIAN CHURCHES.

The First Christian Church of Greensboro is one of approximately 24,330 Congregational and Christian Churches in 30 countries of the world, with a membership of approximately 2,330,750 members. Mission work is carried on in its world parish of more than 60 millions of people, living under 12 flags.

The Congregational Churches were first organized in England in the 16th Century, and Congregationalism sailed to America in the Mayflower as the Church of the Pilgrim Fathers. The Christian Church originated simultaneously in several parts of the United States in the latter part of the 18th Century. Similar spirit and ideals of these two denominations resulted in the merger of the two groups into one fellowship in 1929-31.

The Congregational and Christian Churches are bodies of self-governing Christian believers, associated together in the spirit of Christ for the purpose of bringing His Kingdom into the hearts of men and women. The individual who seeks membership in this Church is asked simply: First—To make Christian Character the test of his right to fellowship and Church membership; Second—To make the Bible his rule of faith and life; Third—To exercise for himself, and accord to others, the right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience in all of his Church relationships.

March, April, May, and June are known as the Mission period in our Church year when we are to stress, preach and practice missions in all our churches. At or near Easter we are asked to make an offering through self-denial for this cause.—Greensboro Church Bulletin.

DO YOU MISSIONARIES EVER BECOME DISCOURAGED?

An Interesting Question Answered by
CHAS. A. LEONARD,
Missionary to China on Furlough.

During a quarter of a century of mission work in China, we have never heard a missionary in evangelistic work express discouragement. Sometimes those exclusively engaged in administrative or secretarial work may become discouraged, but when one enjoys the thrill of preaching and sees the results of the gospel of our blessed Lord among the lost, one always comes home, or to the end of the day, encouraged. Then there is the satisfaction of seeing the power of Christ in the lives of splendid men and women who are living for Him in their homes and communities. Perhaps this question can best be answered by reference to letters recently received from the field.

A report from Rev. and Mrs. Baker, Canadian Baptist missionaries supplying for us in Manchuria during our furlough is chugged full of encouragement regarding every phase of the Lord's work in that part of the world. A hundred and thirty were baptized on our field during 1934, an increase over any previous year; but indications are that more will be reported for 1935. At one outstation, eighteen were baptized, at another, fifteen, in the city of Harbin at one service nearly twenty followed the Lord in baptism. At still another service there twenty-five were baptized.

A letter from an evangelist far up in another important region of that large field, reports the baptism of fifty-one at the four centers where he preaches. At one of these places mentioned in his letter, where work was begun a short while before we left Harbin last April, the brethren have bought a house for worship. This evangelist reports that many enquirers are enrolling, and adds: "Huan yiu bieh-di yuan-gu jao woa-men gao-hsing" (and there are other reasons which cause us much encouragement).

A letter from Tsining, in North China, carries the following: "About seventy Chinese and three foreign Catholic priests died there due to excessive heat during the summer. We rejoice that our Baptist missionaries were able to be in a cooler part of the country at that time. A Chinese Christian man who, through the blessing of the Holy Spirit, was brought closer to the Lord, testified that he had been traveling a road of mud for twenty years, as he expressed it, though a beautiful golden road had been prepared for him. A high-school teacher of sixty summers, but only two years old in the faith and a joy to many, has been praising God as he studies God's word, which, he says, surpasses vastly anything found in all Chinese literature. This Chinese scholar when riding on a train was impressed to speak to a man who had attracted his attention, but our brother was too timid to make the venture. So he called out "Hallelujah" just loud enough for the stranger to hear it. There was an immediate response. "You, too, are a Christian?" he exclaimed. In short order the two became acquainted. They spent a half day on the train in Christian fellowship and parted friends and brothers for ever, pledging to pray for each other. We have known of other Chinese Christians, when wanting to ascertain whether others were Christians, humming softly some familiar hymn."

Here is part of a letter from the capitol of Shantung Province: "The work on our field is a great joy. Never before have I seen such open doors as we now have. Everywhere we go the people are interested in the gospel message. Then there are thousands who are turning away from idols, realizing that they are not gods, yet not knowing where to turn to find the true God and Saviour. Many who have heard only a little are anxious to learn more of the True Way. Hundreds who have never heard are also interested to hear. During three days spent in one village teaching the Christians, two heathen families burned their idols. At the big markets, where large numbers come to trade, we preach from two to four hours. Some listen as long as we preach. There are two hundred on our field asking for baptism. Fifty have been baptized at the city church this half year. A host of Spirit-filled volunteer lay workers, both men and women, go over this large area at their own expense witnessing for the Lord."

Letters and reports from Korea tell of the great Fiftieth Anniversary Celebration of Mission Work in Korea, a close neighbor of Manchuria. The celebration was held at Pyengyang, Korea, the largest mission station in existence. Reports from friends regarding this significant gathering are truly inspiring. The meetings were attended by such large numbers that they had to be held in the open. The Lord gave ideal weather. Twenty thousand earnest Christian men, women and children ,all dressed in pure white, standing upon the lawn of their theological seminary was a great sight. A new invention, the loud speaker, was used in old Korea—also new now in many ways—used to carry to thousands of ears, minds and hearts messages in the Korean language that could be no more welcome to the children of God anywhere. The Korean Christians are a noble lot. These once worshipped idols much the same as do the Chinese—and many are still living in the deepest of idolatry—but thousands upon thousands are turning to the true God and Christ, His Son. Think of the Bible classes attended by fifteen hundred people from two weeks to a month! Such is their love for Him who has redeemed them from death unto life.

Writing of the Anniversary Celebration a letter just received says: "To see and hear these twenty thousand brothers and sisters of another race singing praises to God in their native tongue under open skies was a wonderful sight indeed. A procession was formed, not two by two, nor by fours, but going as they pleased, filling the street. It was more than three miles long. The first of the procession were coming back onto the campus before the last ones had left. They went singing, distributing tracts and preaching on the streets to the crowds that gathered." Just forty-four years ago an angry mob followed Dr. Moffett down those same streets, (then narrow—now modern) throwing stones at him and reviling him because he was a missionary. What changes God hath wrought! Visualize Dr. Moffett walking with that procession of thousands—tall, straight witness of the Truth that he is—his hair snow white, as they walked happily, their faces glowing with the light of heaven. They followed the college band, playing while others of the thousands sang appropriate hymns such as "Onward Christian Soldiers."

Christianity has become established in Korea. The time will come when it will overcome in China. We may look for mass movements there, as in India. The Chinese call themselves 'I kuen yang' (one flock of sheep). Frequently when you ask one why he worships idols, he replies: "Because everyone else does;" and so it is of foot-binding and other sinful practices. They are great for custom. We predict that when larger numbers turn to Christ still larger numbers, perhaps greater numbers than we have ever dreamed of, will turn to our Lord. Let us look up and on to that day, and train well those who have accepted Him, for these will be needed to train and lead still others.

No, your missionaries are not discouraged. We have our problems, difficulties, inconveniences and dangers; but we look to the future with hope and press on. So should God's people in the homeland.

1201 Hillsboro St., Raleigh, N. C.

IT ISN'T A BAD OLD WORLD AFTER ALL.

Upton G. Wilson, of Madison, N. C., author of the accompanying article, which is reprinted from "The State," has spent 23 years in bed but refused to give up. "And we'll guarantee," says the editor of that paper, "that after you get through reading his article, you'll feel just a little bit ashamed of yourself."

I have spent almost 23 years in bed.

At Crewe, Va., on July 24, 1912, I was shot through my left arm, and through both lungs and spine by a man whom I had just discharged from his job as cook on a Norfolk and Western Railroad commissary. He was drunk and disorderly and it became my duty to get rid of him.

In a Roanoke hospital a little while afterwards, surgeons looked me over and shook their heads. Not only was I totally paralyzed below the ninth vertebra, but pneumonia had developed from my lung injuries and I was gasping for breath. The verdict was that in three days I would be dead.

After seven weeks in the hospital surgeons again pronounced the death sentence on me and I was sent home to die. My lungs had cleared up, it is true, but I was still paralyzed and, in addition, had developed terrible bed sores, which had become infected.

But even the best of physicians make mistakes some times. They always mean well, of course, but occasionally their predictions fail to pan out. This is more likely to be the case when they send a man home to do his dying. For an ill man going home is like unto an army's defense falling back on a second line of defense.

Home! What a fortress of strength and courage it is to one who has been fighting a losing battle in a hospital! I was too happy at home even to consider dying. I might not fully recover but I would at least hold on as long as possible in order to be with my mother, father, sisters and brothers.

And in the more than 22 years that I have been with them they have not forsaken me. Their love and self-sacrificing devotion have so sweetened my life that the cross I took up when I laid down my good health has been transformed into a crown. I do not regret my more than 1,144 weeks in bed.

There have been days, weeks and months of suffering, there have been times when my spirit weakened and would have welcomed oblivion, but there has not been in all these months and years a single complaint from those who have devoted their lives to caring for me.

That is why I laugh at people who ask me if I do not tire of lying in bed. I do not mean to imply, of course, that it would not be a tremendously joyful experience to get up and walk, but that there is work and happiness to be found in bed when loved ones are kind.

How I used to pity myself! Here I was in bed when others were having the time of their lives doing this, that or the other thing. And worst of all, I told myself, I would always be in bed. There would never be any walking for me. Really, I laid it on thick. And the more I laid it on the more I pitied myself.

Finally the thought came, as come it would to one in my condition, that I didn't have to lie in bed, that always there is a way out for distressed mortals. I could, if I wished, try lying six feet down in the ground. Then is when I began to take more interest in work and to pity myself less. That six feet down business didn't appeal to me.

What strength I have had I have used. As a newspaper columnist and feature writer, I estimate that I have written more than 2,000,000 words for publication. I use a typewriter while lying on my right side in bed. I cannot lie on my back, nor can I use a typewriter while lying on my left side, though I can use pen or pencil while in this position.

It was several years after I had been shot, however, before I took up newspaper work, as my convalescence was anything but rapid. There were stays of varying lengths in different hospitals, a dreadfully painful operation on my spine which crushed all my hopes of walking again, and a decided craving for the soothing solace of drugs to be overcome.

There was also the matter of readjusting myself to life in bed. Only those who have been compelled by the pitiless force of circumstances to make such an adjustment know how cruelly hard this is. But it can be done. In my case it was done.

With all of this out of the way, I was ready to begin writing—as soon as I learned how. I did not know any more about newspaper writing than a bedbug knows about the Einstein theory of relativity and at times it seemed to me I didn't have any more ability to learn. But finally what I

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

ORANGE AND OLEANDER.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

Florida Sanitarium, Orlando, Fla.,
March 16, 1935.

The writer has a friend who contends that there is as much difference and variety in the character and disposition of dogs as there is in the character and disposition of folks. Among those of his kennel for instance, he has one that is a pure, genuine aristocrat—will eat nothing except the very best that dogs eat, sleep only in the most comfortable places that dogs have and acts generally in a manner that makes all other dogs hold him in high resolve. On the other hand, in his kennel, one is a genuine hobo. He only looks for and enjoys a handout, drops down and sleeps or loafs any old place and tramps all about the community. Well may my dog-friend be correct. But, of one thing I am certain. Trees, just these trees that grow and live about us, have just as great variety of conduct, character, function and disposition as we human beings have. Now that is the plain simple truth. Fact is, we vain (and busy) mortals think of ourselves as lords of creation and conclude that what we do, say, or think, put on or wear, is about all that counts and that we have patent rights on character and conduct. It certainly is a snare and a vain delusion. How do we know that every strata and every species of the living, breathing and dying world about us have not their own "codes" of conduct, of honor and dishonor, of success and failure, as well as we have? Just to my left as I write these lines is an oleander living its life, inhaling its fresh air and basking in its sunshine just as I am. I declare I do believe that tree, this oleander, lives just for the sheer joy, gladness and abandon of living. And then to my right, hard by, is an orange tree laden with its rich, golden fruit, not only good to look upon, but wholesome to eat. It is busy straining every nerve and fiber of its strong body to bear fruit, yielding its bounty and its blessings for the gladness of the eye and for the sustenance of mankind.

Now in the world of trees my oleander is a genuine sport; my orange a day laborer toiling at his task. You should see this oleander at play. It is more of a bush really than a tree. That is to say, it is more limb than body. So when the gentlest breeze blows, it bows and bends and puts on the most gracious and graceful genuflexions and pretty postures you ever want to see. And that is not all. Having stood the winter in its garb of mellow green, it has now yielded to the coaxing and bewitchery of a beaming springtime sun—and a miracle has been wrought. Yes, readers, nothing less than a matchless miracle. For the topmost peak of every sportive limb of my oleander has burst forth, or is bursting forth, a fragrant, delicate but huge blossom of blazing red. My! It is beautiful—my lovely Princess Oleander robed in dainty, delicate, green bordered and bedecked with sprinklings and clusters of blushing red. And a real princess with power is Madame Oleander. In the mountains of North Carolina and Virginia she rules and reigns either in white, pink or red under the guise and name of rhododendron, or mountain laurel. In warmer and tropical climates, with little change of vesture she rules and reigns with a high hand in the realm of sportiveness and beauty as Oleander.

Now the orange is different. It has little if any trait of character in common with the Oleander. It is strong and tough of body and texture and is busy all the day long of all the year. Even before it yields its wholesome fruit to feed the multitudes it is busy bringing out more blossoms that other work may be done and more fruit may be brought forth. It toils from rising to setting sun in all seasons of the year and so no wonder this hardy toiler of the fields of Florida gave to the world this season 27,000,000 crates of her rich, wholesome fruit.

But both orange and oleander agree in one particular—both serve a noble and useful purpose. For ours would indeed be a dull, drab world without sportive beauty and a perishing world without toil and tasks and labor. And what is more beautiful and blessed than the strong, dutiful toiler at his task—the strong arm, the stalwart form, the steady hand, the marks and might and majesty of life—real life.

And what is more useful than color, charm, beauty, the gladness and the glory of that same real stream of life that our Creator has given in such abundance to His beautiful and good earth.

Look reader! When God planted His garden of Eden, two kinds of trees were planted there. And God's command to man about those were, "Dress and keep, but of one of them thou shalt not partake." What did our Father mean by that? Just this: Occupy yourself and time and talent. Exercise your powers that they may grow stronger, but secondly, if you are to have happiness in this world, and in that to come, you must learn self-control. Without self-control this good earth will turn upon and destroy you. Learn to labor, toil, try! then in it all you must control your faculties, passions, appetites.

Oh! What blessed and bountiful and holy lessons God's trees will teach us—if we dumb, thick-headed mortals will only allow them.

So, Dr. Rowland and I, living with and near the trees are trying to occupy ourselves with happy and holy thoughts, and meditations, and by the grace of God, we are trying to control our longings and desires for our loved ones and our labors, till God can have His way with us and heal our weakened nerves and bodies. J. O. A.

STANDING BY ONE ANOTHER.

Most of us yet need to learn the necessity of standing by one another—even to the uttermost parts of the earth. The world has become strangely knit together, and the matter of sharing the better things of life with men and women throughout the world—call it missions or what you will—presses upon us as a vital necessity. We may say that pestilence, famine, flood, war, or any social evil at a distance is outside our interest, but our error will prove costly. Ignorance, vice, sin, disease, and selfishness are no respectors of persons. Their effect is far-reaching and their influences extend beyond national economic and racial boundaries. We may shun the poor woman brought down with some deadly fever in our community, and we may call her passing a relief to society, but when the deadly thing strikes within our very home, smiting our own with untimely death, we become brothers in death of the poor woman whose kinship we denied in life, by refusing to see it as our responsibility to minister to her stricken body which incubated and spread abroad the deadly germs.

We may close our eyes to the need of India in her superstition, ignorance and vice; we may turn a deaf ear to the calls of the millions of Chinese crying for an opportunity for the better life; we may refuse to consider it within our sphere to be concerned with the congestion, vice, and low economic conditions of the Japanese, massed in unlivable textile neighborhoods; but if we could only see with comprehending eyes, we should be quick to understand that these evils extend their effect to our very door. We must yet learn that those living in lower conditions must either be lifted, or, by the nature of things, the higher will inevitably be lowered. There will either be a lifting or a leveling. One wonders if our present world economic dilemma does not bring home to us our failure to accept the responsibility of lifting, of sharing, and of standing by our neighbors around the world!

Missions have become a serious business when viewed in the light of its effect as a Christian impact upon evils—not of a big, wide world, but of a world which has become a neighborhood. Missions in such a world no longer remain simply a philanthropy, a beautiful deed, or an act of mercy. A sharing of the best we have with all the world has become a vital necessity and the act of Christian statesmanship.

In this day of scientific advancement, when men are thinking of world circumnavigation in terms of hours instead of months, no nation can live unto itself. The world has become a neighborhood whether we recognize our responsibility as neighbors or not. What affects one part of that neighborhood world affects the other. Chaos in the East will mean chaos in the West. The time has come when the citizens of this neighborhood world should become neighbors in the finer sense of the word. The time has come when our world must think in terms of some force that will blot out social, economic, national, and international evils. This necessity is driving us to think in terms of a spiritual and moral force which will furnish a basis whereby men can live together in this neighborhood world. Does it not seem that we are driven to share the spirit of Jesus with all men? The outlook seems dark indeed if somehow the spirit of Jesus as demonstrated in His life and teaching—the brotherhood of man and the Fatherhood of God—cannot save this neighboring world. It remains to be tried in moral earnestness! W. T. S.

Diligent earning makes an industrious man; wise spending makes a well-furnished man; proportionate saving, a prepared man; Christlike giving, a blessed man.

A CHALLENGE TO THE CHURCH.

At the last session of the Southern Convention a new financial program was adopted which outlined provision for what was thought necessary to meet the urgent needs of the Convention in its several institutions and enterprises, but there was no provision of an organic nature to guarantee the collection of the money needed.

It seems to me that every church should have auxiliary organizations sponsoring each of these financial needs and demands on our people. In many of the other churches they have ladies' auxiliary societies working for the church, and in so doing building attitudes, loyalties, interests in the church as an organization founded by Christ as the best agency discovered yet to carry forward the work of the Kingdom. The psychological and moral effect of such auxiliary societies among young and old alike working for the church, sacrificing for the church, organized as groups to sponsor the financial program of the church, and set before them an end-in-view as a goal for which to work would be far more valuable in developing loyalty and devotion to the church as an institution than all the preaching that may be heard without any systematic practice. One of the fundamental laws of learning in any field is practice with satisfaction. Whatever we practice with satisfaction we learn. Whatever we do that results in satisfaction we want to do again, what we repeat with satisfaction again and again we learn more and more thoroughly.

The men of the church, in every local church, should organize societies themselves for the express purpose of supporting the educational interest of the church and pay the money to the credit of the local church in the annual report to Conference. As the younger men would grow up and be drawn into such an organization they would develop a love and loyalty first for the local church which is fundamental in development of Christian character. Such a system practiced and tied up with the local church through the development of one generation would tell powerfully in the attitude and loyalty of the men of the next generation for the support of the church and the kingdom through the church as an institution. Christ identifies himself with the church. He is the Head of the church. The church is His body. Lovalty to the church is loyalty to Him. He gave Himself for the church. What should we give? What are we giving?

The women of the church could be organized as auxiliaries to promote, advocate, and work for the call made by the convention for missions. They have already developed a love, a loyalty, a sacrificial spirit for the general cause of missions which is not accredited to their local churches but paid directly to the convention. This could all be paid through the local churches and be a source and means of developing a loyalty and love not only for missions but at the same time a powerful leverage and stimulating means for the development of such love, loyalty, and allegiance to the local church. When we neglect the development of such love, loyalty and devotion to the local church we undermine the fundamental institution upon which the larger work of the Kingdom must depend. This suggested method would not divert one dollar of the missionary money raised from the cause of missions, but would be a constant means of cultivation and developing a spirit of missions that would be so tied up with the local church that it would be an educational means for love and loyalty to the church and through the church to the kingdom.

The young people of the church might organize for the support of the orphanage work, and add not only larger support to the orphanage, but at the same time tie their work up with the local church so that they would grow up from childhood so that they would not love the orphanage less but more and at the same time build a deeper interest in the local church and develop an attitude and devotion that would increase their service to the Kingdom with their growing age and ability.

Everything that is done by the membership of the local church should first be accredited to the local church for the sake of loyalty to the present, local, tangible, visible, divinely appointed and established institution founded by Christ to carry forward His kingdom. The prime purpose of such a plan would be educational. It would be productive of purpose, solidarity of effort, loyalty and love for the institution, cooperativeness of effort, a sense of success in doing something worthwhile by unifying our reports to conference including all our local churches do, and creating such interest and devotion in the spiritual attitude that Christianity would mean more in the early life of the young converts to the Christian religion.

When the entire membership of the church concentrate first on a united effort to work all the membership of the church through and for this one organization and boost and build that with loyalty, devotion, love and sacrifice, sentiment and sincere appreciation, then and only then can we undertake and accomplish great things for the kingdom. We lose great opportunities to generate and create right attitudes, sentiments, devotions, consecrations, sacrificial lovalties, solidarity of effort, commendable pride, and practical Christian cooperation in the minds and hearts of our people when we organize in such a way to tear our organization to shreds and patches, divers and variegated plans and purposes with no definite unification in the building up and support of the life and spirit, work and effort, of the one organization that embodies Christ who is the Head of the church.

If we would center our organizations around and about the church, working in and for the church, building lovalties, loves, devotion, sacrificial service and cooperation for the church, then through and by the church distribute what we do to such enterprises as the church might support, we would promote spiritual mindedness, and Christlikeness that would fill up, run over and spread out to the utmost limits of our obligations and responsibilities for the kingdom of God. Christ gave Himself for the Church. We cannot afford to give less. When we give all to the church first, then the Church can give anywhere and anything that she has to advance His Kingdom.

NEW PASTOR AT JACKSONVILLE, FLA.

The church at Jacksonville has called Rev. Everett R. Lesher of Chelmsford, Massachusetts, and Mr. Lesher has accepted the call and will begin his pastorate on April 7th. Mr. Lesher is a graduate of Carleton College, Minnesota, and of Andover Newton Seminary in Massachusetts, and for two years has served the church at Chelmsford. He is the son of the late Dr. Everett Lesher, for several years Superintendent of Minnesota, and has that rich family background, as well as a thorough preparation for the ministry. Mr. Lesher is a young man of genuine promise and was highly recommended. Mrs. Lesher is an attractive young woman and Mr. and Mrs. Lesher visited the church in Jacksonville, after which a unanimous and hearty call was extended to them. They will be heartily welcomed in Jacksonville.

Last week's issue of Advance carried an article by Everett Lesher entitled "Turning Adjustment into Unadjustment."

During the past pear and a half, Dr. Arthur E. Leonard, formerly of Wisconsin has been acting pastor and is greatly beloved by the members of the church. Ill health has prevented him from assuming the full pastorate. He heartily welcomes his young successor.

WEST TAMPA MISSION.

The annual meeting of the trustees of the Latin American Institute at West Tampa was recently held. Most encouraging reports were given relative to the work being conducted. The great need of the Mission is for more adequate financial support. The workers at the Mission carry on in spite of most reduced compensation and it is the earnest desire of the trustees and all interested in the Mission to increase the income and to be able to support the workers more adequately.

The Latin American Institute was founded by Dr. and Mrs. Fred P. Ensminger a number of years ago. In the early days a regular educational institution, as well as a Latin-American church were conducted. In recent years there was a day school, but that has been given up except for a kindergarten, and the program for the Mission has changed to something of the character of a church and religious social settlement. A number of clubs of various sorts and for various ages have been developed for boys and girls, young people and mothers. There are also active Christian Endeavor groups and organized Sunday School classes, as well as regular church services. Rev. Ray M. Busler of Tampa is serving as acting pastor. The social workers are Miss Gladys V. Hall, who is designated as Director of Activities, Miss Naomi Jordan and Miss Lona A. Ward. The Mission is in an area of the city surrounded by thousands of Cuban people. Among these Cuban people atheism and communism are rampant and many of the children come to the clubs and Sunday School professing that they do not believe in a God. The workers are winning them by a genuine expression of the Christ Spirit.

DONALD ADAMS IN FLORIDA.

Donald A. Adams, Chairman of the Layman's Advisory Committee, has completed a three weeks' tour of the Florida churches, accompanied by the Superintendent, Rev. E. C. Gillette. Most of the visits to the churches were in the nature of what is known as Church Officer's Visitations. In some cases only church officers were present and in others church officers and leaders of the church, and in two instances he spoke at men's suppers. In every instance he discussed practical problems of church administration and the needs of our churches at the present time. Following his talks there was always a discussion and conferences concerning local needs and methods, as well as the relating of the local church to the world-wide undertakings of the church. The aim of these conferences could be summarized in the phrase, "Better Churchmanship."

Mr. Adams is Past-president of International Rotary, and in a number of the places he visited he also spoke at the Rotary luncheons. The Florida churches feel that his visit has been of great value, most stimulating and suggestive, and the hope is that many of his suggestions will be put into practice in the several churches.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The churches of the Southern Convention are urged to emphasize missionary work during the Mission Period. The financial plan adopted by the last session of the Convention has been fully explained in the SUN. For several years the Conference Apportionments for Convention purposes did not include either Home or Foreign Missions. Until the last session of the Convention, money for Home and Foreign Missions was raised by offerings made through Sunday Schools, Missionary Societies, personal gifts, or special offerings from the churches. These offerings were not credited on the Conference Apportionment.

Beginning with December 1, 1934, the Convention plan provides for churches to credit missionary offerings to their Conference Apportionment for Home and Foreign Missions, except the money raised by the Women's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies. That is to say the money given by individuals and churches for Home and Foreign Missions should be included in the report made by the local church to the next session of the annual Conference, although it is sent direct from the local church to the office of the Mission Secretary. Church treasurers should keep a careful record of these funds and submit a detailed report of all such funds to the local church secretary to include in the annual church report.

The primary purpose of this plan is to give an opportunity to every church to make a separate offering during the year for Home and Foreign Missions, and have the amount of this offering clearly stated in the annual church report. Under the former plan the local church was asked to give a stated sum to the Conference Apportionment, and the money so raised was divided by the Convention on a per centage basis. The local church did not know how much money it was giving to the various enterprises supported by the Convention from the Conference Apportionments. And no one else could figure out this problem accurately. If the local church raises money for Conference, or Convention enterprises, it should be able to have an intelligent idea of the distribution of the funds. The financial records, under this arranegment, will be clearer and more easily understood.

It is the sincere hope of the Convention officials that this matter will be brought to the attention of the local churches by the pastors in presenting the requests for liberal missionary offerings during the Easter Season. For the benefit of Churches of the Eastern Virginia Conference the table of the Conference Apportionments was printed several weeks ago in the SUN. This table indicates the amounts each church is asked to give to Convention, Home Missions, Foreign Missions and the other items of the Conference Apportionments. It seems to be practical, in many churches, to make appeals to raise the Conference Apportionments early in the year. The total amount asked from each church in the Eastern Virginia Conference is larger than last year. But the amount can be raised in a majority of the churches if the matter is approached intelligently and prayerfully, and in due time. It cannot be raised if the leaders wait until the end of the year. Conference Apportionments should be raised early in the year, unless the churches provide a plan for this money to be given by the week or by the month.

If the churches will raise the amounts suggested for Elon College and Home and Foreign Missions by July 1st, the remainder of the Conference Apportionments can be raised before November 1st. The local churches need the inspiration of facing this larger task. The church which seeks only to pay its own current expenses will lose its vision of a larger life and spiritual opportunity. The church must face a large and a difficult financial task to save itself from decadence. The church is suffering from spiritual stagnation. The liberal soul shall be made fat.

I. W. JOHNSON.

. MY CHURCH AND HER INSTITUTIONS. .

It is one thing to speak of "the church" and another thing to speak of "my church." "The church" is rather indefinite. "My church" is decidedly definite and personal. A church is not bought with money but with love and sacrifice. Money, however much, could never purchase a church. I may buy a parcel of ground, erect a building, pay the entire cost myself, pay all operating expenses—the buildings and grounds would be mine by experience. It is bought with finer stuff than material substance.

When Christ planted the church in the hearts of men, He expected it to grow, to expand. He expected it to continue to expand until it had reached the ends of the earth with its light and its gospel. His parables present the church as a shining light and a conquering force. Jesus declared, "I am the light of the world." He also said, in speaking to His disciples, "Ye are the light of the world"; and then commanded, "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father Which is in Heaven." And again, He said, "Ye are the salt of the earth." Looking out beyond a world inflicted with evil and sick with sin, he launched His church as the saviour of society. Again, He declared, "The Kingdom of Heaven is like unto a grain of mustard seed which a man took and sowed in his field" and when it is grown becometh a tree in which the birds of the air lodge. The church—our church—becomes truly the church of God when it begins to grow and expand—to express itself in terms of the gospel to all men.

The United Church—our church in the South in particular—has planned for the local church to express itself, first, in benevolences. Christ said, "The poor ye have always with you." It becomes the church's duty to look after the needs of the poor and to provide comforts for those who are less fortunate. It is a sad reflection upon the church that it has allowed the state and non-church agencies monopolize so much of this field. If the church had fulfilled its mission in this particular, her influence and power in the world would have been far superior.

Second, in missions. The term, missions, is all-inclusive in respect to the church. Whatever the church does toward the saving of the world, in reality, that thing is missions. We have thought of missions largely as evangelizing and supporting recognized units which necessarily result from evangelistic efforts. We appeal for money for missions, meaning thereby that we will take these consecrated gifts and endeavor to reach the unreached for Christ, support churches that need financial help, send missionaries and support the whole missionary program in lands other than our own. This is good and proper. The church is right in making its appeal for this particular type of work. Never before in the history of our own church were the needs in this particular field more urgent or more worthy. Let every church in our Convention take this appeal to heart and respond generously with their gifts of money that the enlarged work of the church may continue with more satisfactory growth and more blessed accomplishments. I cannot too strongly urge compliance with the passionate appeal sent out by our Mission Secretary and our Mission Board at this particular time. However, everything that the church does for the coming of the Kingdom in its fullness is in the truest sense of the word "missionary." Sooner or later, we will consider the entire program of the church, local and otherwise, as a great missionary adventure to strengthen the Kingdom on earth and to save the world itself.

Third. education. Missions and education have gone hand in hand since the beginning of Christianity. They have been companions on a march of mercy and redemption, both enlightening the mind and heart and quickening the spirit in order that the real worth of the individual may be given in service and gratitude. The church—our church—began its strides in evangelism preaching the gospel and winning men and women to Christ. Soon, the leaders of the church realized that permanent success of necessity would rest upon foundations intelligently laid, and that if we were to lay our foundations for the future intelligently we must have a trained leadership. Moved by such convictions and enlightened by a vision, the leaders of our church a half century ago founded Elon College for the purpose of training the youth of the church and to afford to the church the means of expressing itself along educational lines. Elon College belongs to the church—our church. It is my college; it is your college.

While the church and her institutions are not bought with money but with love and loyalty and sacrifice, they are supported—where material support is required—by our money. For the church to continue to be "my church" and her institutions continue to be "my institutions," I must support them with my money. When I fail in this particular to the extent of my ability, then in reality they cease to be mine. Personal ownership requires personal interest and personal support. The church and her institutions need my love, my loyalty, and my money. If they belong to me and I belong to them all that I have is at their disposal. Let every individual and every local church be faithful and diligent in these matters.

FROM WADLEY, ALABAMA.

In a recent edition of THE SUN there appeared a letter from Brother J. J. Carter which suggested that the various ministers should write more often concerning the work of their respective churches. Without doubt, this is a good suggestion, for all of us who are members of this great Christian fellowship should be eager to learn of the problems and progress of all of our churches. But little news has been coming up from this particular section, so the writer feels moved to report concerning the churches to which he strives to minister.

Since the Southern Union College has a new program, and, consequently, only a freshman class this year, the teaching load is not heavy. That situation made it possible for the writer to accept the call to the pulpits of three of our churches, namely, Wadley, New Hope and Antioch. The pastor has been much pleased with the interest and spirit he has found in all three of these churches.

The Wadley Church has a rather small but faithful membership. Its strength has been increased by the presence of the Ensmingers of the college faculty, and Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Edge, the former being the Wadley High School principal.

The church maintains an active Sunday School under the direction of Mrs. Edge. The young people's organization of the college, known as "The Youth Fellowship" holds a meeting in this church every Sunday evening. The people of the church are supporting the work faithfully. In addition to their other kindnesses, they "pounded" the pastor at Thanksgiving time.

The New Hope Church stands as an illustration of what Christian people can do if they have the determination and faith. Last winter the members of the church were talking about the need for a new roof on the church building. They decided, however, that they could not afford to have it done. On the Saturday before the fourth Sunday in February, the building burned to the ground. The initial feeling of despair was followed by one of determination, and they went to work. Money, materials and labor were contributed, and in only a few months, a new building had been constructed. Today they have a beautiful new building, equipped with the necessary new pews and all of it free of debt. The church maintains a good attendance. Uncle Chas. Stevens continues as Sunday School Superintendent. The church boasts a fine bunch of young people. Their C. E. Society has been inactive for a couple of months, but expects to get started again with the return of spring.

The people of the Antioch Church show themselves eager to go forward with the work of the Kingdom. They display a fine spirit of cooperation and fellowship. The church boasts a very active and efficient C. E. Society with Miss Sybil Roysten as president. The young ladies and girls of the community have been getting together to do some work on Saturday afternoons. As a visible result of their labors they presented the pastor and his wife with a very pretty quilt. The Sunday School is under the leadership of Bro. "Mac" Hamlin.

The pastor enjoys greatly the fellowship found in all of these churches. He is optimistic concerning the work in all three. May God bless all of his work in this section of the country.

MISSIONS

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., Secretary.

MISSIONARY EDUCATION.

As your Department Editor shifts her interdenominational kaleidoscope, the brightest missionary feature in the home church is the annual increase in the number of readers and students of home and foreign mission literature and the variety of devices for making this attractive.

A leaflet of the Women's Missionary Society of the United Lutheran Church says:

> An imperative obligation to make disciples of all men rests upon the Church. This obligation cannot be discharged without widespread and intelligent sympathy throughout the Church. I believe this can be brought about by systematic missionary education. The advantages of a small study class are: (1) Its small size which permits expression from each member. (2) Its series of meetings in close succession, thus securing the cumulative effect of impressions. (3)Its demand for serious study. (4) Its atmosphere of discussion which gives life to the class. The gaining of information in a class is not an end in itself but should result in inspiration which leads to action. The aim is: To realize the slogan, "One or more mission study classes and reading circles in every missionary society in the United Lutheran Church."

Coaching Conferences are being used by Southern Presbyterian churches to aid mission study leaders to present their textbooks in the best possible way. These gatherings are held "early enough for the teacher to make plans for the class but not too early for her to 'cool off' and lose enthusiasm." The groups are so arranged as to minimize traveling expenses, delegates being further instructed, in some cases, to bring their own luncheons with the hostess providing only a hot drink. Some synodicals, however, allow a fund in their budgets to cover conference costs. Leaders of vision and enthusiasm are chosen.

"Leadership of Mission Study Groups" is the name of a course used by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, pastors and other leaders being familiarized with the current study books and also the principles and methods for teaching them, with a view to becoming, in turn, instructors for "Coaching Days" held in districts or zones for the benefit of prospective teachers in local mission study groups. "Suzuki Looks at Japan,, is recommended this year for all adult groups.

The United Brethren are publishing through their Foreign Mission Society a forty-page pamphlet entitled, "Our Father's Family" in which are thirty-five daily readings for devotional periods inclusive of family worship, to familiarize the people with affairs in the younger churches on the overseas fields. A Scripture reading, a prayer and a three-quarter page of biographical matter concerning some missionary character is the daily assignment.

The American Friends Board of Missions holds one-day missionary institutes at which the morning session is devoted to an exhibit of maps, pictures, graphs, data, etc., with speakers furnishing the interpretations. In the afternoon missionary education methods, field problems and "ways and means" discussions fill the time. Stereopticon pictures are shown in the evening.

The Reformed Church in the United States majors on missionary instruction in the Church School. They don't do things by halves. One church writes that every class in its school took six weeks of study in the fall and six more in the spring, alternating between home and foreign missions. Ordinarily straight mission study takes the place of the regular Sunday School lessons for those periods.—From Missionary Review.

WOMEN'S SOCIETIES—ATTENTION.

To the Societies of the Woman's Missionary Convention of the Southern Convention:

Dear Co-workers:

Last fall the program committee of the Woman's Missionary Convention placed in your hands a "packet" which contained missionary material —suggestive ideas and helps toward program building. Now the questions which come to the minds of those on this program committee are: "Does this material serve its purpose?" "Is it being used?" "Has it been given a fair examination?" and "Would a similar "packet" be welcomed next year?" Please give your answers to these questions in a letter to the Chairman of the program committee.

At a recent committee meeting at Elon College the above questions were given much consideration. The "packets" were compiled and issued to every Society of the Convention at an approximate expense of $30.00. None too much to spend if the material is needed or studied! We realize that in order to go forward in the realm of missions that we must be informed and that this information does cost something, but it really isn't ethical to spend $30.00 of the Convention's money on material which isn't used. There is such an abundance of missionary material—study books, church papers, etc., perhaps you find no real value in an extra amount of program helps and suggestions such as those found in the "packets."

In fairness of the committee, please find your "packet," earnestly consider its contents, and then express your impressions; also your wishes concerning variations in the type of service that the committee might give you next year.

You will find that your material includes the following:

1. "The June, 1934 Envelope Series" which contains programs centered around the reading course books.
2. A booklet entitled "Our Common Social Problems," (useful to groups wishing a miscellaneous sort of program).
3. A number of contributions from the "President's Exchange."
4. A suggested program, "The Call of the Master," using the material contained in the "packet."
5. Leaflets (these contain brief reviews of study books, program helps and suggestions).

Awaiting your suggestions, I am

Sincerely yours,

Mrs. W. T. Scott, Chmn.,
Mrs. J. H. Lightbourne,
Mrs. C. M. Cannon,
Committee.

MISSIONARY BECOMES AN ETHIOPIAN.

Dr. Tom Lambie, well-known medical missionary of the Sudan Interior Mission, who worked among Ethiopians for 30 years under the United Presbyterian Church has decided that he can best present the Christian message by becoming an Ethiopian citizen. Accordingly he has taken the oath of allegiance to His Majesty, Heila Selassie. "Because of my love for Ethiopia," says Dr. Lambie, "because of my sincere desire to help her ,and because I believe that acquiring Ethiopian citizenship is the best thing I can do to further the ends for which I have for nearly 30 years, I do now voluntarily become an Ethiopian citizen.

"I realize that there is an element of risk; that no matter what happens to me, I cannot appeal for American protection or assistance, even in a matter of life or death, but I am perpared to take that risk if it might be true, that to the Ethiopians I might become as an Ethiopian. that I might win the Ethiopians to Christ."

"To our friends in America and elsewhere, I need hardly add that I venture the hope that relationships with them will be even closer than ever. It will not prevent visiting America whenever we wish. As Paul writes to the Phillipians, our citizenship is in heaven from whence also we look for a Saviour."—United Presbyterian.

COURAGE FOR THE BUILDERS.

"We have committed the golden rule to memory, let us now commit it to life."—Edwin Markham.

The Cent-A-Meal Box lends a daily spiritual note to family life and makes God a living presence in the home.

Morning, noon and night, it brings one face to face with the reality of God working through our brother-men.

The purpose of this Cent-A-Meal box is to increase the practice of thanksgiving and to furnish a means by which each family may have a part in what our church is doing to share with others everywhere the "good news which is for all of the people."

This daily program should remind us of our spiritual privileges. The Cent-A-Meal box is not a substitute for pledges of other gifts, but a joyful mealtime thank offering to the Giver of all good gifts.

All those who invest in the enrichment of the world's life have the assurance and joy they have shared in the greatest undertaking in the world.

Not for ourselves but for others also we will give and work and pray that they too may have the peace and joy and hope that Jesus Christ gives.—Commission on Missions.

MISSION QUOTA FOR THE CHURCHES.

In last week's SUN, I stated that in this issue I would give a list of the churches together with ammounts apportioned to each individual church for missions. I am not giving home and foreign missions separately, for in all instances these amounts are equal. Should any church with to contribute to home missions and not to foreign missions. it can be so designated. Half the amounts apportioned to the churches are for home and half for foreign missions.

Eastern Virginia, North Carolina and Virginia, and Eastern North Carolina Conference made their apportionments on the basis of the larger budget, in agreement with the action of the Convention at Suffolk, the Western North Carolina and the Virginia Valley Central Conferences did not make their apportionments on the basis of the larger budget and presumably are still working on the old plan, which calls for each church to contribute to missions an amount equal to one-third the amount paid the pastor for salary.

This is an earnest appeal to every pastor and local church to take the matter of their missionary offering seriously this year. As is known to us all, Dr. Atkinson is away on account of illness. He cannot be present for the rallies and to otherwise assist in person in the missionary offering. It is time for all persons and all forces to rally and to do their part to see that the missionary offering is of such that will encourage our Mission Secretary and help him in his efforts to regain strength. Surely the work that he has done for all these years will bear fruit in the present condition in which we find ourselves. Look over the list, pick out your church, and begin to make preparations to see that the entire apportionment is raised.

SYMBOLIC SUBSTITUTION.

If present plans mature, by 1937 Russia will have a colossal symbol of the substitution of the religion of communism for the religion of Christ, and of the deification of Lenin for the worship of God. Ground was broken last summer and construction was begun for the "Palace of the Soviets," in Moscow, to occupy the site where formerly stood the world famous Cathedral of the Saviour. It was demolished by dynamite by government decree shortly before Christmas three years ago. The structure will house the Soviet Congress, various departments of government and two immense amphitheatres. The building is planned to rise to a height of 1,100 feet, 112 feet higher than the Empire State Building, so as to form a mighty pedestal for a statue of Lenin that will rise 260 feet higher.—Missions.

EDDY SCORES IN PAOTINGFU.

More than 125 students in the Tung Jen Middle School, Paotingfu, China, signed cards following an address by Sherwood Eddy. Some asked for Bible classes while others expressed their desire to become Christians. These classes are being arranged by the school, 10 at least in number. Many of the Christian Chinese teachers are taking an interest in teaching them.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

Rev. F. C. Lester, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

"YE ARE MY FRIENDS."

Imagine the thrill that came to the disciples of Jesus when He said to them on the Eve of Easter as they sat about a friendly table. "Ye are my friends. I no longer call you servants . . . . but friends." They had tried to serve the Master, and expected to continue doing so through the years that lay ahead. But now He says they are not to be servants, but friends. They were to know all the things that were in His heart. They were to feel as He felt. They were to share with Him all the intimacies of life. They were to be His friends! What could be better?

But there was just one condition. They must do the things He wanted. They must obey His commands. There could be no friendship on any other basis; and there cannot now. Friends must share knowledge, work, and fellowship. The wants of one become the will of the other. If I know what my friend wants, I must seek to supply that need, or I am no longer a friend. The real friend never waits for a command. He looks ahead for ways to please his friend.

And Jesus does just that. He is always watching our pathway and planting flowers for us. He gives us guidance and companionship. He puts a song in our hearts and lets us rejoice in the beauty about us. From the table He leads the way to a garden; from the Cross He leads to a Crown; from the crucifixion He leads to the resurrection; from the way of Sorrow He leads us to a fragrant garden of spring-time beauty on Easter Morn. He does this because we are His friends, and He is ours.

Now let me share with you two lovely things that have come to my desk recently concerning friendship, and hope that someone may say such of you as your life is shared with them and the Master, the world's greatest friend.

FRIENDS ARE THE FLOWER.

Friends are the flowers along life's way;
And those who walk the road today,
Whatever else they may possess,
May find a lot of loveliness,
Somewhere, before the journey's end,
May find a rose, may find a friend.

I hope you have not walked so fast
That all the roses you have passed
And all your friends you have forgot.
I doubt if wealth be wealth or not
If, when life's waning summer goes
We have not found a single rose.

I doubt if this be poverty:
However poor our purse may be,
If there are those along the way
Who call us kind, if day by day,
Like ripples in a pool, extends
The widening circle of our friends.

Friends are the flowers along life's years;
And no one else so poor appears
As is the poor in friendship, none
So rich appears as is the one
Who has his friends, and when they part
Still has their fragrance in his heart.

Douglas Malloch.

THIS IS FRIENDSHIP.

I love you, not only for what you are, but for what I am when I am with you.

I love you, not only for what you have made of yourself, but for what you are making of me.

I love you for the part of me that you bring out.

I love you for putting your hand into my heaped-up heart and passing over all the frivolous and weak things that you cannot help seeing there, and drawing out into the light all the beautiful, radiant things that no one else has looked deep enough to find.

I love you for ignoring the possibilities of the fool in me and laying hold of the possibilities of the good in me.

I love you for closing your eyes to the discords in me, and for adding to the music in me by worshipful listening.

I love you because you are helping me to make of the lumber of my life not a tavern, but a temple and of the words of my every day not a reproach, but a song.

I love you because you have done more than any creed could have done to make me happy. You have done it without a touch, without a word, without a sign.

You have done it by just being yourself.

After all, perhaps this is what being a friend means.

FREE BIBLES FOR TEN-YEAR-OLDS.

For some years the Board of Christian Education has been supplying, through the generosity of a young business man, copies of the New Testament and Psalms to boys and girls of our Sunday schools on their tenth birthday. Hundreds of these books have been given, and more could be given, if the teachers or superintendents would write to the Board for them, 505 South Main St., Norfolk, Va.

From now on the children may receive either the New Testament and Psalms, which is a book 4 by 5½ inches in size, or a copy of the complete Bible in a large size. Some teachers like to have the entire Bible so it can be used in Sunday school class room. The giver of the books is willing to supply this need when it is so desired. All those writing for books hereafter will please state which they desire, the smaller book containing only the New Testament and Psalms or the full-sized complete Bible.

Now is a good time to check up on the members of your school who will have a tenth birthday this year and send in your request for the books. The donor of the books had a Bible given him on his tenth birthday and he thinks that was one of the big reasons why he wants to serve in a Christian way today.

PLEASE TAKE NOTE.

The Elon Summer School of Leadership Training will open June 24th and close Sunday noon, June 30th. This date seems to be necessary so all the workers from the Southeast can be present. The school this year is a combination of Elon and Blue Ridge. Ministers, superintendents, missionary workers, and young people will want to be present.

WHY JOIN THE CHURCH?

Christian Endeavor Topic for March 31st.

Hymns: Hymns of the early church and hymns that our fathers have loved: "Gloria Patri" (the hymn of the early Christian martyrs); "Doxology"; "The Church's One Foundation"; "I Love Thy Kingdom Lord"; "Faith of Our Fathers"; "Forward Through the Ages.'

Other hymns: "Blest Be the Tie That Binds"; "For the Beauty of the Earth" (4th verse); "When Morning Gilds the Skies (2nd verse); "O Brother Man, Fold to Thy Heart Thy Brother."

Scripture: Eph. 1:22, 23; 2:19, 22.

Other Bible Helps: Started by apostles. Acts 6:6,7; The flock of God, I Peter 5:2; Object of Christ's Love, Eph. 5:25; Should be holy, Eph. 5:27; Has great mission, Acts 1:8; Christ is the head, Eph. 4:15.

Call to Worship:

"Come ye whose eyes are longing
To see more clearly still;
To those who seek is given
To know the Father's will.
Come ye whose hands are daring
To serve with greater skill;
The Kingdom offers freely
A place for you to fill."

Reading: "I Am Your Church."

I AM YOUR CHURCH.

Lo, for many years I knew that you were coming to my doorway, and so I prepared myself for you.

In my service great men turned their minds to building my creeds and working out my doctrines, not that your mind be bound, but that it be guided and freed.

For many centuries choice souls have worked out my ceremonies of worship, written my great hymns, composed my matchless music, and painted my masterpieces of art for you.

For you my gifted preachers and my devoted leaders in education have worked and dreamed.

From the gifts of many consecrated folk I had a building erected near you, to which you could come as a toddling child and in which today as a youth you can have your heart warmed, your dreams and visions given a Christian purpose and outlook, and the citadel of your soul centered forever in God.

Use me, then, O youth, that your life be richer and through you the Kingdom of God may be more surely and quickly established among men.

I am your Church!

—P. R. Hayward.

Devotional Reading: Psalm 84.

Discussion.

What is the Church? Raymond Calkins' has given this definition. "The Church is the one undivided living organism, composed of people who are so vitally joined with Jesus Christ that they share His life with God and with men." Have several other definitions given.

When and why did the young people in your society join the church? Why did they chose a particular church?

What has your church to offer to young people who are planning to join with the church Easter?

What can the young people contribute to the Church?

Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

PETER DESCRIBES THE CHRISTIAN LIFE.

Lesson XII—March 24, 1935.

Golden Text: "Sanctify in your hearts Christ as Lord." I Peter 3:15.

Lesson Text: I Peter 3:8-18.

Peter wrote this letter to the Christians who were scattered throughout the Roman Empire, who were beginning to feel the power and the punishment of persecution. It is difficult for us to realize the situation, but it was one that was very real to those early Christians, and one that kept them in constant dread. Peter, therefore, writes to encourage them and to sustain them in the time of dire need. This book, as some one has said, is "one of the world's greatest expressions of the glory of fortitude in enduring the hardships of life."

The Christian Spirit."

Being a Christian means something more than merely believing something; it means manifesting the Christ-like spirit. Peter lists some of the characteristics of the Christ-like spirit. Be ye like-minded, that is, united. Christians need not all think alike, but they do need to be united in spirit, to be like-minded in their devotion to Christ and to His cause. Be ye compassionate—that was one of the marks of Christ. He felt for and with others. He cared for folks. Be ye loving as brethren—by this shall all men know that we are His disciples, if we love one another. Be ye tenderhearted—how important it is to keep the heart tender and sensitive, responsive both to the needs of men and to the voice of God. Be ye humble-minded—on only one occasion did Jesus call attention to His virtues: He said He was humble. The Christian will not be cringing, he will not hate himself, but he will be humble-minded, he will think soberly.

Christians are not to render evil for evil, they are not to pay those who do them wrong in the same coin. They are not to take their standards of action from those who wrong them, but from Christ. Indeed says Peter, "hereunto were they called." It is in requiting good for evil, in meeting hate with love, that they are to "inherit a blessing." This is a hard saying, but it is the only way that in the long run will work. It was the way of Jesus and it must be our way.

The Secret of Life.

Who is there that does not love life? Who is there that does not want to find the meaning of life? Well, Peter gives the secret,—a secret gleaned by him in his reading of the Old Testament. It is not the final or the only answer to the problem of life, but it is still authoritative.

Let him refrain his tongue from evil. Alas, how much sorrow is caused by the evil tongue, the lying tongue, the unclean tongue, the malicious tongue, blasphemous tongue.

And let him keep his lips from speaking guile. It is a plea for sincerity, for honesty, for integrity in speech. There are many who do not have an evil tongue who do find it hard to have lips that speak no guile. Alas, how often we are insincere in our words.

Let him turn away from evil. Sounds strange, doesn't it? Rather old fashioned, don't you think? There are so many who think that one cannot be good and have a good time. So many think that they have to turn to things that are wrong to enjoy life. But the way of the transgressor is hard. In the long run, the man who does wrong cannot be happy. No man finds the secret of life, until he turns away from evil, until he gives up that which his conscience and the spirit of God tell him is wrong.

But life is more than negations. Peter says, "and let him do good." The way to be happy is to do good. And more, the best way to become good is to do good, that is, the best way to overcome evil is by doing good. Too many of us spend too much time and energy fighting against the evils in our lives, and too little time and energy to developing habits of goodness. Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good—that is Paul's way of saying the same thing Peter here says.

And let him seek peace and pursue it. He who follows after the things that make for peace, finds new meaning to life. Friction, bickering, quarreling, and such things have no place in the life of the man who would love life and see good days.

In all these things there is the promise of divine help. The eyes of the Lord are upon such people, and His ears are open unto their supplications, but the face of the Lord is set against wrong-doers. It may sound strange, but it is true, that it is hard eventually to go to the devil. The man who sets his face to walk in the ways of righteousness, has working for him all the divine resources. The man who would walk in the ways of evil is working contrary both to his nature and to the divine purpose.

Suffering and the Christian Life.

A great deal of harm has been done the Christian life, because the softer and easier aspects have been emphasized. Peter tells his readers that they will have to suffer, not for wrong-doing, but even for well-doing. He frankly states that brutal fact. But he tells them not to be troubled on that account, and not to be afraid. If only they will sanctify Christ in their hearts, if only they will set Him apart in their hearts, they will have more than abundant resources for all that life can do to them. The test of life is not what happens to us from the outside, but what we have inside. The Christian who has Christ within can use trouble, conquer trouble, transform trouble. The supreme example of this is to be found in the Cross of Christ. That which was a symbol of suffering and shame was transformed into the symbol of victory and glory.

Peter adds two injunctions. Have a good conscience. Do not play fast and loose with your moral ideas. Be true to the voice of God in your soul. Keep your conscience sensitive and alive to the divine spirit.

And live Christ-like lives. No matter what folks may say, said Peter, refute their slander, not with your words of mouth but by your manner of life. The final argument for Christianity is a charged life. One genuine Christian is worth more than a dozen arguments. One Christian character is more effective than a dozen creeds.

Little children, in a spasm of generosity, often give to those whom they love some possession, and take it back again; or use it without reference to the ownership they had conferred. It is thus that too many Christians act toward Christ. They ask Him to consider all their possessions as His; but within an hour they spend as if they were as much their own as ever. They determine how much to give to some Christian cause without once asking

"RIGHT AND WRONG."

"Whatsoever things are true,
Whatsoever things are honest,
Whatsoever things are just,
Whatsoever things are pure,
Whatsoever things are lovely,
Whatsoever things are of good report;
If there be any virtue,
And if there be any praise,
Think on these things."—Phil 4:8

The question of deciding what is right and what is wrong is a problem to many people. A saying of a hermit in India, supposedly a Buddhist priest, taken from "The Little Lost Prince," rings true.

"Let pass through thy mind only the things thou wouldst desire to see,—a truth. Meditate only on the wish of thy heart, seeing first that it can injure no man, and is not ignoble, then it will take earthly form, and draw night to thee. This is the law of that which creates."

"Whatever lifts and enriches personality, in ourselves, or others," Fosdick says, "is right, whatever besmirches or depresses personality is wrong." Whatever stains thy purity though it be as light as a gentle south breeze; cannot it sin. This is a concrete way of saying 'follow Christ.'"

"Higher than the perfect song
For which love longeth,
Is the tender fear of wrong,
That never wrongeth."

Prayer—Our Dear Father, we humble ourselves before Thee confessing our weakness and sinfulness. Grant us Thy forgiveness and endow us with a high sense of right, with the will and the grace to follow Thee all the way.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"HOW LONG?"

"Have I been so long time with you and yet hast thou not known me?"—Jno. 14:9.

The ages, including our own personal experience, have furnished Christendom fresh accessions of knowledge concerning God and the Way of Life, knowledge which is not shared by the original disciples. That knowledge and experience is just as important for Christian guidance as the gospel itself. And yet, perhaps there never was a time in all history and experience when the authority of the Scriptures was more questioned, and when there was more inquiry concerning a Way, without a study of the Way as revealed in its own history.

It is as though we had stripped ourselves of what we have heard and seen, looked upon and handled, and know to be facts and cast it all aside. And this is the way we go forth to find the Way, the answer to our inquiries, and to solve the problems confronting us.

"Have I been so long time with you and yet hast thou not known me?" is language which we may still hear in the voice of our Lord, recalling us to the value and the perfection of the old way, "The old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls." But as of old, in Jeremiah's time, people are saying, "We will not walk therein."

Indeed, present day thinking, customs, and problems differ widely from those of the past, but that which runs through both alike is One Way, "The same yesterday, today, and forever." The way out is to be traced alike in the successes and in the failure of the past, and it is to be followed unflinchingly through the future, through whatsoever unlooked-for windings it may lead us, if we expect the unfoldings of the age to reveal the right way and the conditions that should be—"Commit thy way unto the Lord and He shall bring it to pass."

Prayer—O Lord, God, to Thee we bow the knee and humble the heart for Thy blessing of the baptism of the inner man that the man we may choose to be, and the man we ought to be, we may become.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"HOW KNOW?"

"Then I knew that this was the word of the Lord."—Jer. 32:8.

The most important knowledge in this age is to know the word of the Lord. We do not refer to the Bible. We refer to spiritual authority; we refer to the Way; we refer to His will concerning us. It would appear that the most of us are driving in a fog taking a chance on hitting the road right and fearing that any time there will be a collision and all that will be left will be wreckage.

Jeremiah knew the word of the Lord by two tokens, first by his understanding of that word in the past, and second by its revelation through another man. These two tokens corroborating one another was an assurance to him that it was the word of the Lord.

This revelation is not unlike the token of the history and the personal experience of the Way discussed yesterday. The Old Way takes us back to Christ Who is the Way. He is the revealed God, He is the personal example, He is the Voice in the fog beckoning us on, He is the Light in the darkness in whom is life and whose "life is the light of men," who is "The true light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world, and he that followeth (Him) shall have the light of life."

The world is doubting Jesus Christ and God and saying: "Show us what Christianity has done! How far in Christian brotherhood has it taken us? Humanity is still pagan! "Most people are not at church, nor at prayer meetings, nor serving the Lord anywhere, but they stand in public squares saying "We will not serve Thee," and yet they demand their wages."

The standard of right and wrong as given in Monday's comment is a concrete way of saying, "Follow Christ," and he that would follow, "Let him deny himself, take up His cross (His problems, his sufferings, his duty) and follow on."

Prayer—O Lord, our Light and our Salvation, bring us unto submission to Thy will, and make us willing to deny ourselves to any extent that we may see the light and walk safely and happily through this world's confusions.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"PERFECT PEACE."

"Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on Thee."—Isa. 26:3.

Peace, and harmony, and love, are characteristics of the children of the Lord. It is an inward contentment which one, though in rags, can have and nothing can mar it. Lying in bed, sick, the saint rejoices midst his suffering.

Doctor Jowett used to say, "It takes the threat out of yesterday, the despondency out of today, and the fear out of tomorrow."

Therefore, perfect peace is where there is duty and trust. Perfect peace is where righteousness prevails. And he who is perfectly joined to the Lord, Dr. Jowett preached, "Anxiety and fear are lost in perfect trust and perfect trust is the mother of perfect peace."

Prayer—

"If peace be in the heart,
The wildest winter storm is full of solemn beauty,
The midnight lightning flash but shows the path of duty,
Each living creature tells some new joyous story,
The very trees and stones all catch a roll of glory,
If peace be in the heart."

—C. F. Richardson.

FRIDAY.

"VICTORY."

"Then cometh the end, when he shall have delivered up the kingdom to God—when he shall have put down all rule and authority and power, for he must reign till he hath put all enemies under his feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death."—I Cor. 15:24-26.

Our text today is a sequel to the one of yesterday in which we are told that victory is certain.

Christ's peace to the world seems as far away from fulfilment as it did in the days of the apostles, but "don't give up the ship." Christ is King, but what is He king of? He is "King of righteousness," and before He can manifest Himself He must destroy unrighteousness. His kingdom of righteousness must be set up in hearts and in nations through overturning and destroying wrong. When that is done in us, we have peace with Him, peace with our hearts and peace with the world.

It is in this way that He will "send forth judgment unto victory" (Matt. 12:20), and it is in this way that his children will find themselves among the redeemed at last, and not only shall they join in singing, "All hail the power of Jesus' name and crown Him Lord of all," but everyone, says Paul, will share the glad acclaim, "Thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ!"

Prayer—Our Father, we would be Thy true and loyal soldiers,—soldiers of the Cross. Reveal Thyself to us, a victorious king. Help us to be true, just for today, and then each day—we ask it in the name of Christ.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"STIFF NECKS."

"He that being often reproved hardeneth his neck, shall suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy."—Prov. 29:1-6.

There are hard necks and soft necks, stiff necks and flexible necks. A man who has a stiff neck caused by a draft is conscious of it all the time and can hardly move without distress. A man whose neck is hardened by sin thinks nothing of it, and moves about as blithely as ever. But of the two, the second is infinitely more miserable in the end.

Those spiritually stiff-necked, as Pharoah was, shall suddenly be destroyed, as Pharoah was. There are remedies for physical stiff necks, but only Christ can heal the spiritual stiff neck. Soul obstinacy is the most persistent obstinacy. It is like the ossifying of the body that sometimes comes on, and is incurable.

Prayer—Lord, Jesus, keep us sensitive to all divine reproofs. May Thy very first reproof touch our hearts and turn our lives in the right way.—Amen.

LIFE'S LIFTING HILLS.

By John G. Truitt.

"And they were in the way going up to Jerusalem; and Jesus went before them; and they were amazed; and as they followed they were afraid."—Mark. 10:32.

What a march upward, and what a group! Jesus and the twelve. Jesus leading the way, as always, and the disciples following. From the deep valley of Palestine, even below sea level they take the lifting road. Jesus had set His face toward Jerusalem. And the disciples with fear were following Him. They knew in a measure at least what awaited Jesus on the summit, and they probably feared greatly for themselves. But Jesus was taking to the road, and what else could they do but follow?

One of the grandest pictures of Scripture, and penned by our John Mark so well, is this. History has recorded many marches up, and reminds us of the famous marching words of Napoleon, "Beyond the Alps lies Italy," but never was march made which would mean more to humanity than the march Jesus was beginning to make now. In about seventeen miles Jesus and that little band would make their climb upward for nearly 3,000 feet. They would encounter several interesting incidents as a reading of the Scriptures will show, but the most interesting things about this trip would be themselves. Jesus faces the facts and climbs forward. The disciples were filled with amazement at the great teacher and perhaps feared for both themselves and Him.

How aptly Mark paints this picture. "They were in the road," and immediately our eyes behold a steep mountainous road, crooked, narrow, perilous, putting out from the valley toward the mountains. Mark does not want to miss anything so he tells us they were "going," moving right on up. And he tells us just where they are headed,—"to Jerusalem." He who follows Jesus may not,—and will not know all the way,—but they will know the ultimate goal.

I cannot understand just what Mark is trying to do when he tells us that the disciples were both amazed and afraid as they followed. I shall not go into a technical discussion of the two words, and their shades of meaning, but I shall tell you what I think. You know the words, "The fear of God is the beginning of wisdom,"—the awe-inspiring reverence,—the overwhelming, head-baring, shoes-removing reverence,—is the beginning of wisdom. They saw Jesus in a strange new light. They saw Him walking into the very jaws of death when to them there was absolutely no need. They saw Him, and yet they were not able to say to Him nay! As Mark says, "they were amazed." Here was a moment they would never forget, and, thank God, some distant day it would be born anew in their own souls! The first letter I had from my sister saying, "Mother has a cancer" was a shock, none followed that was much greater. These disciples saw doom written on their earthly hopes, and divinity written in the face of Jesus of Nazareth! "They were amazed; and as they followed they were afraid."

"And He took the twelve and began to tell them what things would happen unto Him." We remember the road to Emmaeus, and know about the conversation there. Here was a conversation that we might well remember. How momentous it was! Jesus had told His disciples many things both in deed and word up to this time, but now He was taking them into a closed confidence and telling them the remaining program for His earthly life. No wonder they were afraid. He said, "The Son of man shall be delivered unto the chief priests; and they shall condemn Him unto death, and shall deliver Him to the Gentiles: and they shall scourge Him, and shall spit upon Him, and shall kill Him; and the third day He shall rise again." They could not doubt it. Therefore they were afraid!

And still they climbed the awful road to Jerusalem. Jerusalem was builded in the heights, and hardly it were a few peaks that towered still above it: Moriah, Zion, Golgotha, and Olives,—"mountains round about Jerusalem." On Golgotha a great tragedy would be enacted. Toward all this they marched. But as the road lifted them to the ultimate summit, so also it lifted Him up "that all men might be drawn unto Him." It was an awful price, but there was a great need, and Jesus had counted the cost and had begun to build His everlasting Kingdom into the hearts of humanity. It was the way of the cross,—the way of eternal love. The hills toward which they were headed would be life's lifting hills, indeed.

During this Lenten season let us renew our loyalty and complete our surrender to Jesus. Standing in the challenge of it we may be amazed. Yet it will be worth the price,—for the soul-joy it will give. Let us in spite of our fear follow Him,—is may be a rugged climb, but let us remember that nothing gives such ultimate triumph as being right with God. It may mean that Jesus will have to speak to us as He spoke to the disciples, in beautiful daily conversation as travellers in the way with Him, but let us remember that those who walk with Him change the world, and "set it upside down."

I do not wish to over-emphasize this business of following Jesus so that you will think it too high that you cannot attain to it; for please remember that those who followed Him on that road those days were very human indeed. As they went they made many mistakes, not to say gross errors. And in the end they forsook Him and fled, but Jesus never gave in, and they were His by their own choice, therefore He would never let them slip entirely away. From the fly-leaf of Dan Crawford's Testament:

"I cannot do it alone
the waves run fast and high,
And the fogs close chill around;
the light goes out in the sky.
But I know that we two shall
Win in the end,—Jesus and I.

"Coward, and wayward, and weak,
I change with the changing sky;
Today so safe and brave,
Tomorrow too weak to try;
But He never gives in; so we shall win,—Jesus and I."

Are we willing to take Him at His word, to follow Him in spite of our fears; and to allow our amazement to develop into a reverence and worship that will eventually cry out, "My Lord, and my God"? Then, we too, shall find that we are climbing life's lifting hills. Is not this the meaning of the true Lent? And shall we not observe it with hearts filled with love? From the pen of the writer:

He faced the challenge of great surrender to duty;
He faced the facts of what the hills would bring;
He knew that beyond the abuse there was beauty,—
Beyond the sorrows of Gethsemane His soul would sing.
He knew there followed behind men who were afraid;
He knew they followed though,—despite their fears.
And as they slowly climbed the ever-increasing grade,
He prayed for their steady climb throughout the years.

He won as He finally bore the Cross to Calvary's crest,
His undying devotion won their stubborn wills:
He who faces the challenge of duty by giving his best
Will climb with the lowly Christ life's lifting hills!

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

We have lots of things to make us happy in this work. We received a real good letter from Miss Ruth Madren this week enclosing a money order for $5.00 for the Orphanage. In her letter she said: "The little fatherless children shall not suffer, I am glad to contribute." This is not the first contribution this young lady has made to help us. She gets a joy out of the giving. We have a thousand young women in our denomination who could donate five dollars to help us and be the richer and the happier. Young ladies try it and be convinced. Who will be the next?

A good woman from our Burlington church said to me last week: "Our women are going to make and send you a box of Easter dresses." Our good women throughout our denomination have gotten a real joy for eighteen years out of this service. I would not think of denying them this joy again this coming Easter.

How about the hundred thousand Octagon soap wrappers? Did the superintendent of your Sunday School show you the beautiful "Baby Bond" with all those sweet little faces in it. I know you fell in love with all of them. Every little boy and girl can send soap coupons. If some friend wants to send the soap too, it will come in fine. Don't forget that the Baby Bond calls for one thousand coupons.

L. E. SMITH, President.

IT ISN'T A BAD OLD WORLD AFTER ALL.

wrote began to find its way into print; only, however, because some editors are kind.

Of those who were kind to me in those early days the late R. J. Oliver, of the Reidsville Review, and Santford Martin, of the Winston-Salem Journal, stand out in my memory. But for their kindly encouragement and sympathy I know I should have failed.

Gradually, I began to get more and more of my articles published. Today, I am interested wholeheartedly in my work. I have something to live for: I'm glad that I'm alive—and I am again finding out that this is a mighty fine old world after all—providing we don't take up too much time with self-pity. I have also found out that regardless of the difficulties and handicaps which I may think myself confronted with, there's always somebody who is much worse off than I am.

THE FAMILY ALTAR.

SUNDAY.

"HEART ABLUTIONS."

"When they go into the tent of meeting, they shall wash with water, that they die not."—Exodus 30:17-21.

In thinking of the tabernacle we are likely to forget the laver, which was placed in the court between the sanctuary and the altar of burnt offerings. Thereat Aaron and his sons were to wash their hands and their feet, that they might be clean before offering any sacrifice to the Lord or performing any religious rite.

Let us take the lesson to heart before we go to church, before we read the Bible, before we offer prayer, before we place our money in the contribution box, before we join in sacred song, before we approach the table of the Lord's supper. Let us cleanse our souls and keep them clean, that our work for the Lord may be acceptable in His sight.

Prayer—Put far from us, O God, all our sins. Cleanse us in the blood of Calvary. We can not purify ourselves, but Thou canst, and Thou wilt. —Amen.

OBITUARIES

HAMM.

William M. Hamm was born in Forsyth county, October 13, 1863. He was called to his reward February 13, 1935, aged 71 years and 4 months.

The following survive: his wife, who before her marriage was Della Starbuck, five daughters, two sons, thirteen grandchildren and one brother, James Madison Hamm of Walkerton.

Brother Hamm was a hard worker, a good neighbor and a good man and will be greatly missed.

The funeral services were conducted by the writer assisted by Rev. Mr. Knuckles, at the Salem Chapel Church, February 15th.

May the Lord comfort the bereaved.

D. M. SPENCE.

CRUTCHFIELD.

William Crutchfield, born August 2, 1864, called to his reward March 2, 1935, aged 70 years and 7 months.

He is survived by the following children: Mrs. A. B. McFarland, Mrs. H. P. Smith, J. H., S. W., Rev. G. C., Rev. H. E., A. B., Florence, and Mrs. S. C. Gardner, 38 grandchildren, 5 great grandchildren and 4 brothers: J. R., Winborn, Yancy, and G. E.

Brother Crutchfield professed faith in Christ, while a young man and united with Pleasant Ridge Christian Church. He was for more than 40 years a faithful member and for many years a deacon. He was a good man and a good neighbor and loved the church. He will be greatly missed in the home, community and in the church.

The funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Revs. J. S. Carden, T. S. Hill, W. T. Scott and Wm. Boland, at Pleasant Ridge, March 3rd.

May the Lord comfort the bereaved.

D. M. SPENCE.

SINIMERS.

Miss Lydia Anne Sinimers passed away March 2, 1935, in her home in Linville, Va., and was interred in the Linville Cemetery, Monday, March 4th.

The funeral service was conducted in our Linville Church Monday, at 2 P. M. Rev. A. W. Andes assisted the pastor in this final service.

Miss Sinimers had lived in the Linville community many years and was one of the most familiar figures in Linville. She was an humble, devout and faithful member of our church and dearly beloved by the entire community.

Peace be unto her dear spirit.

M. L. WEEKLEY.

EDWARDS.

Mrs. Rebekah Ann Edwards, daughter of Goodman and Martha Horne, was born July 22, 1849 and died February 23, 1935, aged 85 years, 7 months and 1 day.

On March 15, 1873 she was married to John Robert Edwards, and to that union was born six children, three sons and three daughters; C. P., W. J., and J. L. Edwards and Miss Anne Betty, Miss Dolia, who preceded her mother in death on November 15, 1904 and Mrs. W. E. Gray.

Mrs. Edwards was a member of a family of 8 children, 4 boys and 4 girls, all of whom have preceded her except one sister, Mrs. Mollie Johnson.

Early in life she united with Tucker Swamp Baptist Church and upon her marriage she transferred her membership to Antioch with her husband where she remained a member until the end.

She is survived by five children, ten grandchildren, several nephews and nieces and one sister.

The funeral was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. S. Cobb of the Baptist church from her church and interment followed in the church cemetery.

May God's grace comfort in these sad hours.

C. E. GERRINGER.

MARKHAM.

Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom has seen fit to remove from our midst, Miss Fidelia Markham, whose death occurred February 9, 1935.

We, the members of the Missionary Society of the First Christian Church, Burlington, N. C., offer the following resolutions as a token of our esteem and appreciation of her beautiful life.

First—That we, the members of the Society, reverently bow in resignation to our Father's will.

Second—That we reconsecrate ourselves to God as a token of our love and esteem for this departed member.

Third—That we extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved family and commend them to the all-wise Father for comfort and consolation.

Fourth—That a copy of these resolutions be sent to The Christian Sun for publication, a copy to the family and that the same be made a part of our minutes for permanent record.

Respectfully submitted,
MRS. J. D. STRADER,
MRS. J. H. BARNWELL,
MRS. J. M. FIX,
Committee.

EARMAN.

Mrs Samuel Earman passed from this life early March 2, 1935, and her mortal remains were interred in the New Hope Cemetery the following Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

A vast concourse of friends from far and near gathered Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the spacious Earman home east of Harrisonburg to pay their tribute of respect to this good and well-known woman.

Mr. Earman has been for many years the treasurer of the Valley Conference, and is one of the most outstanding laymen in the Conference. A man of important business connections, he enjoys the confidence and respect of a wide circle of influential friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Earman celebrated their golden wedding anniversary February 4, 1934, with their children and many appreciative friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Earman held their membership with the Linville Congregational-Christian Church and the people here will miss the inspiration of this beautiful and radiant Christian character.

M. L. WEEKLEY.

JOHNSON.

Lucy Allen Nelms Johnson was born September 18, 1883 and died February 6, 1935, aged 49 years, 4 months and 18 days.

On January 6, 1910, she was united in marriage to Hilton B. Johnson and to this union was born one son who preceded them in death.

About twelve years ago she united with Antioch Christian Church and remained there until the end.

Her husband preceded her in death January 15, and it seemed that she never rallied from that shock.

The funeral was conducted by the writer and Rev. J. S. Cobb from the home in Windsor and interment was made in the Western Branch church cemetery.

Mrs. Johnson is survived by two half brothers, two sisters, several nephews and nieces.

God comfort and lead those who mourn.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

Connecticut Defeats Child Labor Amendment.—

Connecticut legislature this week caused friends of the action to concede that at least two more years would be necessary to secure its adoption. Connecticut was the sixteenth state to reject the amendment during the present year, while four states ratified the amendment. This brings the total number of ratifications up to 24, while 36 are necessary to add the amendment to the Constitution. The adoption of this amendment has been advocated by the Federal Council of Churches and other church organizations. On the other hand there are many who are opposed to the exploitation of children in industry who are unwilling that the Federal Government should be given another whip with which to drive the states. Varying conditions in the different states would make it seem that each state might better handle this problem for itself. It is a question which requires education and one which will not be helped by making it a political football.

Poison Liquor and Poison Propaganda.—

What a howl against Prohibition was raised, even by many good church people, a year or two back when deaths from poison liquor were reported in the daily press! What becomes of that argument against Prohibition in these liquor days when not long ago more than twenty-five deaths from poison liquor were reported in the single state of New York? If Prohibition failed to stop the warfare of booze on human life, manifestly the "control" that anti-Prohibitionists promised has not been forthcoming. Further, where are the college presidents, ministers and others who favored repeal on the ground that education against alcohol was needed? Has anybody heard of such educational and spiritual leaders whose names were conspicuous from coast to coast in the repeal movement, who have inaugurated, or associated themselves with, any specific movement of temperance education? Such men are judged today by their silence and inactivity. The fact is that most of their talk about the need of temperance education was bluff and insincerity.—Advance.

Improved Outlook for Methodist Unity.—

A joint meeting of the committees on inter-denominational relations of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Methodist Protestant Church, was held recently in Louisville, Kentucky, looking toward the unifying of these three branches of Methodism. The various problems of adjustment have been under consideration for several years, and the joint commission expects to finish its report at a meeting to be held in August of this year. That report will then be submitted at the General Conferences of these churches, which will be held in May, 1936. Bishop Wm. F. McDowell of the Methodist Episcopal Church, a member of the commission, in a statement given out after the recent meeting said: "We all feel very hopeful. There is in the three bodies a manifest and clear determination to go through to the end of this endeavor. I am very proud to say that in almost twenty years of work upon this subject and looking toward this end, I have never attended a meeting which seemed to me to have quite such a hopeful and commendable spirit as the one at Louisville." Zion's Herald, a Methodist paper published in Boston, thinks, "it would thrill the whole Christian world with hope if American Methodists could, in the near future, become an organized unit for the work of God in the world."

America and Neutrality.—

It has been more than twenty years since Woodrow Wilson thus addressed the United States Senate: "I venture . . . my fellow countrymen, to speak a solemn word of warning to you against that deepest, most subtle, most essential breach of neutrality which may spring out of partisanship, out of passionately taking sides. The United States must be neutral in fact as well as in name during these days that are to try men's souls." Even then protest arose against such talk, for propaganda had already begun to be spread to inflame our passions and to destroy our perspective. Greatly magnified reports of already too terrible atrocities occurring on the Belgian frontier, with our traditional "gratitude" to France, and the power of those who would find monetary gain in our participation, soon forced a breaking down of that neutrality and active participation in a war which was not our own. What happened then can as well happen again. God forbid that another tempest of fire break over Europe, but it is our duty, if it does, to heed the warnings of a President who was as truly a martyr for his ideals as was any to occupy the President's chair. A contemporary warns us: "If war does come, it may leave Europe a desert over which savage dictators, fascist or proletarian, will ruthlessly rule. 'Western civilization' will be dead in the land that was its cradle. Whatever hope there then remains of a continuance of representative government and of equal opportunity will lie in America." In case of war America must remain neutral. Her duty to mankind demands it!

A Timely Warning.—

Lewis W. Douglas, in 1932 an Arizona Congressman, was chosen personally by President Roosevelt to be Director of the Budget at the beginning of the Administration. He was recognized as an expert in fiscal affairs and a courageous public official. Hence his warning that a currency collapse is certain if present spending policies of the Government are followed long enough carries more than usual weight. In the event of such a catastrophe, Mr. Douglas concludes, "Only a dictator—whether it be a dictator of socialism or a dictator of facism is unimportant—will be adequate to cope with the situation." To support his assertion, the former Treasury official notes that the emergency of 1933 resulted in vesting in the Executive larger powers than had ever before been accorded. An even greater emergency, created by destruction of the currency system, might, therefore, lead to a complete change in our political organization from necessity and not from popular choice. The political dangers of that inflation which destroys, or largely destroys, the purchasing power of money are strikingly revealed by the post-war experiences of Germany, France and Italy. Consequently the United States cannot afford to ignore the warnings of an experienced Administrator and financial authority when he cites the unfortunate political consequences of futile efforts of a nation to spend itself rich, thereby impairing the public credit, and depriving the government of resources essential to its effective functioning.—Exchange.

Secretary Dern Urges Preparedness.—

Secretary of War George H. Dern, in a recent speech before the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce said that "so long as war remains a possibility, nations must prepare for their defense, and to do this they must have armaments." In his advocacy of a greater navy and a larger and more efficient army, Mr. Dern, who by the way is a New England Congregationalist, said: "It is for the purpose of preserving peace, not to wage war, that I advocate that our nation be kept in a reasonable defense posture. This, I would say, necessitates a navy second to none and a small, but highly efficient, army, including an air force comparable to that of any of the other leading nations." To substantiate his position, the Secretary pointed out that before the World War we were, "if possible, still more thoroughly disarmed than we are now and yet we got into the war." Much has been said about the vast sums that this country spends upon war. The amount spent by America has even been compared to that spent by Japan. Yet in all fairness we must say that we have never yet seen such a statement made by "pacifists" that took into consideration the difference in costs in the two countries. Our dollar expenditure for purposes of war might be vastly greater than that of several other countries without our having done the same amount either of shipbuilding or reinforcing the strength of our army. If this country ever expects to barter successfully for a general reduction of world armaments, it must, even though the cost be great, have something to barter. There has been sufficient evidence that other nations have been willing to take advantage of treaties thus far entered into.

NOTES-PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

He who expects much gets much that he didn't expect.—Guelph Mercury.

When an Episcopal layman protested that the seminary was not turning out the right kind of ministers, Dean Hodges said, "I am just as sorry about this as you, but the only material I can get is laymen."

Mr. and Mrs. Luther Carlton, of Carlbrook, Paces, Va., have been visiting in Richmond recently. They are former members of the First Church here and still numbered among its most welcome visitors.

The church at Thorsby, Alabama, Rev. Lawrence L. Stanley, pastor, is publishing a monthly church paper entitled "The Glad Tidings." The paper not only gives interesting news items of the work of the church, but also has readable and helpful articles.

The program of the Valley of Virginia Mid-Year Conference reached the SUN office too late for publication last week. The sessions will probably be over before this issue reaches our readers. But we print it on this page that others may learn of the activities of possibly our smallest but one of our most active conferences.

Mrs. W. C. Dunn of Rocky Mount, N. C., has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Robert Sahnow, in Richmond, for the past few weeks. Mrs. Dunn, while living in Rocky Mount, still holds her church membership at Ingrams, near Virgilina, Virginia, and still attends services there at every opportunity.

Mrs. Mary Cannon Benson, age 81, wife of William J. Benson and a daughter of the late Wilson L. Cannon, died at her home in Dover, Del., Sunday, March 10th, after an illness of three weeks from complications. Besides her husband she is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Levis, of Newark, and Miss Annie Jump Cannon, the world renowned astronomer at Harvard University. Two brothers, Wilson Lee Cannon and Robert B. Cannon of New York, also survive. Funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Dr. Roy C. Helfenstein. at her late home on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock with interment in Lakeside cemetery. Mrs. Benson was an aunt of Mrs. J. H. Lightbourne of Burlington, N. C.

"SONS OF THE SOIL."

God Almighty sends His light
To tip the east
While 'neath its wheeling course
I must not loiter, tho' times be hard,
And men break faith;
Seed for bread of life must be scattered
In furrowed rows.
For times like these, when men are grim
The plow-share
Must be sunk a little deeper
In God's good earth.

Men must be fed;
Little children must not grow pale and wan
As a wayside flower,
My Country I shall not fail,
I shall sow the seed and toil,
Leaving the rest to the good God.

Furrows will be turned
I shall behold the sacredness
Of their straightness
As they with hungry mouths
Await the grain from my trembling hands.

Then sunshine and shower—
The immortality of new birth
The miracle of a yield bountiful.
I shall not begrudge the robin of her share
Hopping along the row,
Will she not sing an evening hymn
That will fall like a benediction
Upon my weariness?
As I plod o'er the fields
To mine abode.

TOTAL ABSTINENCE—THE MARGIN OF SAFETY.

Is total abstinence essential to the safe solution of the personal drinking problem? This question is being asked with increasing frequency by entirely sincere people who have no wish to run the risk of becoming habitual drinkers themselves and who have no sympathy with intemperance in others, but who do not wish to go further than is sensible in setting up their own life patterns.

Radicalism and fanaticism have no appeal to the average person. He is interested in his health, his business, his general welfare, but he is no extremist. If total abstinence is the antithesis of chronic alcoholism, it can never be the popular pattern for the majority who seek the middle course.

Much was done in the earlier days of the fight against alcohol through the press at the instigation of liquor manufacturers to make total abstinence the unpopular extreme—the position that produced laughter. Everything that a young man did not want to be—everything unpleasant and ridiculous—was caricatured and labeled "Old Man Prohibition." Wise as people were, many of them attached the caricaturist's stigma to the normal course because it had been distorted into the extreme. If this were the case, moderate drinking would be the even, broad course between two equally undesirable extremes.

Today, another campaign is well under way. This time, the efforts are directed at establishing moderate drinking as the normal course. Brewers advertise, "Drink Beer—the Temperate Beverage." We are surrounded with the best efforts of advertisers to show the harmlessness and pleasure attached to social drinking; and the present trend warns more thoughtful elements that we are apt to be swayed far from the normal course once more.

There are indications which intentionally or not seem to prove the advertisers' contentions.

A distinguished Christian business man, worthy of being a model for any aspiring young man, who is at present conducting a series of profound Bible studies in his Sunday school, draws the line as sharply as he ever has at the use of hard liquors, but has decided that light wines are entirely in keeping with his position and with that of his family.

Dr. Yandell Henderson, eminent Yale instructor, in a new book, entitled, "A New Deal In Liquor: A Plea for Dilution," writes: "The drinking of beer by young men, particularly college students—those under as well as those over twenty-one—should be encouraged as a means of keeping them away from spirits."

Wines are served with the utmost dignity in the White House, setting precedent for other homes across the country.

In the light of such examples, it is to be expected that thoughtful young people, as well as adults, will ask with understandable skepticism, "Is total abstinence essential?"

We must thing about these things with unpreoccupied penetration, swinging to the normal, and avoiding the extremes which proved convincing to a less scientifically trained generation.

Young people, to their credit, are not to be frightened into total abstinence by threats of terrors to come. The old bugaboos of "hob-nailed livers" and malformed children, important as they are frequent effects of alcoholism have been made into scarecrows flapping in the wind through well-meant extremism. Youth has seen that the "glass to the grave" theory doesn't work out in practice. There are too many exceptions to prove the rule through terror.

There is a different and a convincing approach to this whole matter of drinking which is attracting the attention of our best elements today. In a highly attractive booklet, called "The Great American Gamble," published by the Travelers Insurance Company, of Hartford, Conn., "in the interest of street and highway safety," several pages are devoted pictorially to explaining the "area of confidence" which exists inconspicuously in so many phases of modern life.

"We have elevators," write the insurance experts, "that could carry many more passengers than accommodations permit; bridges that could handle loads far greater than normal capacity; railroad lines that could withstand faster speeds than those usually maintained—margins of safety!"

To the thoughtful man today, total abstinence becomes his personal margin of safety, set up as protection from the almost monotonous regularity of wrecked health and lives due to the failure of moderation. Total abstinence is his accident insurance policy against the dangers of alcoholism.

Total abstinence has never failed. Moderation is constantly on trial.

Every chronic alcoholic being treated in psychopathic clinics is a moderate drinker who failed. Motorists or pedestrians who cause accidents through even the mildest degree of intoxication have failed to keep within the safety zone. Moderation was too narrow to allow for the proper protection of life and property.

No one individual deliberately intends either in setting up a pattern of moderate drinking or in stepping incautiously from behind a parked car to endanger his own safety or that of others. Because drinking alcohol is not as fatal as drinking bichloride of mercury or carelessness in crossing the street as dangerous as stepping on a high voltage wire, we are more apt to be governed in our conduct by the number of successful "escapes" than by the failures.

That is why we need particularly clear and close thinking on this problem. Our best scientists, having reasoned through the whole complicated and conflicting data on every phase of alcohol, advocate total abstinence not because failure to follow that pattern means certain ruin of health and personality, but because the habit, taken in its larger aspects, is not desirable for the welfare of the human family. The pattern desirable for society must be the one which provides the safest course for the largest number of people. Total abstinence is prescribed as the normal position, and deviations from it are charted away from the medium.

The effects of alcohol on the individual have not changed through the centuries. The thing which has changed is science's explanation of the phenomena of intoxication. Investigation is enlarging our understanding and broadening our approach. Formerly accepted generalities must be modified; hitherto unrecognized areas of importance must be explored. We must have new answers to old questions when old answers fail to go far enough in giving complete and adequate explanation.

In approaching the problem personally we shall seek to lift our thinking from the mere casual observations of specific examples, either pro or con, and shall attempt to grasp in its wider aspects the effects of alcohol not on one individual but on an entire city, on a generation, or on a civilization, before we decide to follow the narrow dictates of advertisers and proponents of beverage alcohol.

TODAY'S PULPIT MESSAGE.

By Carence A. Vincent.

While the great truths of the Scriptures are the same in every age, yet every age has demanded different messages to meet its needs. Luther and the Reformers preached that the just shall live by faith, the Wesleys that faith without works is dead, and Carey and Samuel Mills that the church should go into all the world and preach the gospel, and so on to Gladden and Strong and Ely who gave a new emphasis to the Sermon on the Mount. What is the message that, given today, will build up churches in members and send them out to make the principles and spirit of Jesus regnant in all contacts of life.

God. . .

Jehovah of the Old Testament days was a majestic figure for that day and marked a great advance over the idolatry of the times. But Jesus taught us that God is a Father and the Father of all men, that "God is love," and that He is with us in every moment of life—He shares with us our life.

The minister who has the reality of God's presence richly in his own experience, that tells the story of God's redeeming love and His unfailing presence with something of the tender accents of Jesus, will lead men into the Christian life and will have a growing, happy and effective membership. The power of such a message melts the the self-will of men, makes selfishness repulsive and righteousness summoning. Drop out of the minister's experience a vivid and tender sense of a personal God of love and you will sap his influence and power.

Sermon on the Mount.

Add to this a social message, searching, commanding, and saturated with love even for the oppressor, and capitalists will be moved to a Christ-like treatment of their employees and laborers will be insistent but just and patient and effective, and race clannishness and injustice will disappear and international complications and jealousies that lead to war will be changed to mutual helpfulness and cooperation. Two attitudes of a minister will make him ineffective, neglect to insistently preach the spirit and principles of social justice and Christ's spirit of social love and to be impatient in expecting results. The redemption of the individual and of society is a long process every minister should try to bring the perfect day in his day and at the same time have a patience such as Jesus did. Any other spirit will lessen the influence of the pulpit.

Eternal Life.

I have met too many ministers who are not sure that there is a conscious personal life after death. It colors their preaching, it weakens their confidence in the final victory of the truth and Christian ideals. I do not know of such a minister who has the thrill of joy in his work such as he might have. The people feel the weakness though they may not know its cause. It is a wonderful thing for a minister to come down the home-stretch of life with a sustaining confidence that he and his work are in the hands of God, and that in a far or near day, "the kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ: and he shall reign forever and ever."

Not how much of my money will I give to God, but how much I will us for myself?

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

WILL WE LEARN?

Do we really wish the Church, of which we are a part, to grow; to win souls from sin; to do its part, with other churches, in building up the Kingdom of our Lord on earth? If so, we must pay the price. We must learn that it is not by sight, but by faith the victory is won. "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our Faith."

Because Missions are of faith, our Lord's challenge to our faith, we falter, we are indifferent, unconcerned. Is there any wonder that, with all our holy and heavenly "principles," we, as a Church, do not grow, while other Churches about us are growing, are increasing in membership and in giving, even in a time of depression. Just take three and look, if you will, at what each of the three put first in their preaching, practice and giving.

In 1934, the Baptists of North Carolina distributed their gifts for Kingdom service as follows:

To Missions, $164,033.72 (of which $84,-250.30 went to Foreign, and $79,783.42 to Home Missions); to Christian Education, $91,333.23; to Orphanage, $112,172.85.

Lest year the Presbyterians in North Carolina gave:

To Missions, $240,627.00 (of which $133,-056.00 went to Foreign and $117,571.00 to Home Missions); to Christian Education, $34,012; to Orphanage Home, $72,944.00.

The Methodist-Episcopal Church in North Carolina gave last year:

To Missions, $296,711.66 (of which only $27,092.04 was used for Missions within the State, all the remainder to Missions without the State and in the Foreign field. And their Woman's Missionary Society raised $179,573.00 of their missionary money); to Christian Education, $61,834.89; to Orphanages, $88,626.00.

The figures for these three denominations in Virginia tell the same story, namely, Missions first, as follows:

The Baptists of Virginia gave:

To Missions, $220,464.00 (of which $143,-837.00 was for Foreign, and $76,627.00 for Home Missions); Christian Education, $39,-751.00; to Orphanage, $43,993.00.

The Methodist-Episcopals of Virginia gave:

To Missions, $198,428.00 (of which $39,-182 was for Home and the remainder for Foreign Missions); to Christian Education, $30,604.00; to Orphanage, $41,769.00.

The Presbyterians of Virginia gave last year:

To Missions, Foreign, $102,074.00, and Home, $51,440.00; to Christian Education (and Ministerial Relief), $26,590.00; to Orphanage, $18,734.00.

The significance of these figures is that in each instance, with these growing, giving churches, Missions come first always and moreover, Foreign Missions takes precedence over Home Missions in their giving.

Now, consult, if you will, the figures of your own church and you will see that it is not putting missions first, but second, or third, or fourth maybe.

Brethren and beloved, God in His wisdom never has allowed a non-missionary church to grow and glow, and it is not to be assumed that He ever will. Until we put the salvation of souls above bodily pride or comfort, we must and will, as a Church, go along at snail's pace, if at all. May our God open our eyes and help us.

PREACH THE GOSPEL.

We hear a great deal today about preaching the gospel. There is a demand on the part of many of our interested laymen of our ministers that they preach the gospel. This demand has been rather insistent for the past years. I am in sympathy with it. When a worshipper takes the time to go to church, he should find a spirit and an atmosphere that will assist him in his worship, that will fire his own soul and add to the fervent spirit of worship that has already kindled his inward longings. When he comes in search of God and of things spiritual, he has a right to expect that his minister shall give him a new understanding of things spiritual and open up for him new avenues of approach to God.

The gospel, however, is not always soothing nor is it always healing. For those who do their duty—their full duty—it is commendation and peace. For those who fail to do their whole duty, it is condemnation and disturbance. When a careless and neglectful church member demands the gospel to be preached, he is demanding what he needs but seldom what he wants. If those who demand of their ministers the full gospel in their preaching would preach the gospel by their living, the Kingdom would come more rapidly. There is just one thing better than preaching the gospel, and that one thing is living it, manifesting always the spirit of Christ toward men and the world and the interest of Christ in saving the world. The gospel demands of everyone sacrifice, the crucifixion of the flesh, together with the lust thereof, and the giving of things material as an expression of one's love and gratitude and for the purpose of the coming of the Kingdom of Righteousness in the hearts of men the whole world over. The gospel is not local. It is universal. A Christian cannot be local in his interest and not at the same time universal in his love and generous in his gifts. The day has come when the membership of our church should count its blessings and make its contributions accordingly.

The Mission Board of our Convention is in great need of money. Our Mission Board has rendered a significant and marvelously helpful service. Many of the principal churches, now self-supporting, have been assisted by the Board. In its vision and aggressiveness for the Kingdom, it has encouraged the enlarging of programs for the local churches and the planting of new churches in important centers. These different points are looking to the Mission Board for financial relief. Debts are to be paid, local bills are to be met, ministers, who in reality are missionaries partly employed by the Board, are looking to it for salaries. The Mission Board as such does not have money. It has a vision, information, and a love. It has brought that vision, that information, and that love to the local church and is now waiting for that church to respond with its gifts that the great work undertaken by our denomination at different points may continue. During Dr. Atkinson's absence, I happen to know something about these appeals. I would like to lay this matter anew and afresh on the heart of every member of every church in our Convention. A contribution from every member through the local church to the Board now would meet many needs and satisfy many demands, the smaller of which is by no means within the individual who should give.

If we are to practice the gospel, we cannot withhold our gifts in the light of the immediate needs of the Kingdom of which we are a part. Easter will soon be here, when we will be reminded anew of God's personal sacrifice that we, through Him, might have access to the riches that faileth never. Let us make sure that we do not deny ourselves of things spiritual by keeping for ourselves things material.

A VERY PERSONAL LETTER.

(This interesting letter comes from one, not a missionary, who, as a business man, lived in Africa several years.—J. O. A.)

Well, I believe you're feeling much better. Why? Well, your thermometer, in my opinion, is The Sun, and I see by the Sun that you're putting aside trees, and getting back to Missions. That's a favorable sign, and although I wouldn't like to see you forego work for Nature, which is natural with you, the happy combination, it seems to me, is nature and the natural, or beauty and work. You'll probably reply that besides beauty in Nature, there is also beauty in your work. Quite right, too, unless discouragement at times eats away the beauty, or super-industry destroys it. But again, discouragement only plagues the worker when super-industry fails to bring forth anticipated results.

Missions are especially vulnerable to much discouragement, and it takes a stout-hearted man not only to stay on the firing line, but also to produce "the ammunition." I was quite friendly with one on the firing line, down in Africa,—a Rev. F. T. ———, and I know something, too, in a lesser way of the effort required to produce "the ammunition"—the wherewith to supply those in the firing line, that they may stay there and fire.

Folks at home have only the least conception of the courage that is required to spread the gospel of either religion or civilization, or I might also add of commerce, in a land that looks upon progress with suspicion, in a climate that feasts upon bodily energy with a rapacious appetite, and in a corner of the world where friends are but occasional, where one's own kind are few, and where the comforts of life are infrequent luxuries.

And yet the world would be in a sad state today had it not been for the missionary, for there would be no Christianity as we know it, and likely none at all. For Christianity only lives and thrives by being missionary.

If folks could but realize that point alone, it seems to me that work of providing for those afield would indeed become a work of beauty. And, if in addition, they could understand that few, if any, missionary fields can, because of their very nature, provide for the bodily needs of the missionary, much less account for the necessary requirements for the promulgation of any doctrine, be it religious or commercial, work like yours, would not only be a thing of beauty, but an added source of happiness.

Rev. F. T. ——— was a very happy man, happy in the gratitude of the many natives to whom he had brought the eternal comfort of religion,—discouraged many times by the lack of funds which would have enabled him to have expanded his work—but never so discouraged, no matter how serious it seemed, that criticism was voiced against those upon whom his work depended. That is, I never heard any such criticism from him, although he did sometimes unburden himself of his troubles. Faith in God was his great asset, and many times talking with him or thinking of him, helped me over some rough places.

And were the faith and charity back home just partly as strong as that of the Rev. F. T. ———, with less eagerness to criticize and more eagerness to forego some of the little pleasures that would be unattainable luxuries afield, your work would be a joy indeed, instead of a burden that is breaking your body, if not your heart.

Am glad you can for a season at least detach yourself from the burden that bends, and blend yourself with the trees that our Creator seems to have given for our comfort, our happiness and our healing.

Yours,
W. E.

SUNSHINE PARLOR.

Florida Sanatarium, Orlando, Fla.,
March 23, 1935.

Our Mission Secretary, out of the kindness of his heart, brought me here November 16th. He had to return immediately as Conferences were still on. I have remained here these four months and more, trying and trusting to regain my former strength and health.

So I was here when our editor returned in January and his physician, after examination, ordered him to bed and he began his "Adventure in Idleness." I, too, saw the moss-draped oak he looked upon and wrote to the SUN about. I also looked later upon his "Eucalyptus Tree" and with him saw it dance so gracefully when the breezes blew. And, yes, beside our cottage door, which we have since named "Sunshine Parlor," we looked together much at the gnarled, hunch-back, plum tree until it veiled itself in white and then green. And the fifty or more pines and palms on the lawn in front of our "Sunshine Parlor" moved me with strength and courage as they did our editor, and so I could enjoy, from experience and observation, all that our editor has told his readers about the trees he has seen and so well described.

But he did not tell what was deepest in his heart. I guess he couldn't tell this, nor can I tell it for him, but there was and is one scene I wish I could picture for SUN readers that our good editor has not written for us. He was lying on his back on the porch, pad and pen in hand. He was gazing, looking intently out on the panorama of trees, but he was not writing. I looked closely, but he was gazing with not a movement of hand or muscle. And then he turned to me and said, "Rowland, do you reckon our preachers and people understand the meaning, measure and method of our mission period? Oh, if they just could or would!" And then I made a discovery. Our editor was looking at the trees, but he was not seeing them. He was looking at our churches, our pastors, our people, and trying to get a vision of them, of their duty and privilege, and wondering if they, too, were looking beyond and above the trees, and seeing the power of our God there and His willingness to save the souls of men and women from sin. Yes, our editor has been telling us on paper about trees, but this was only the outward expression of his yearning and longing that we see with him beyond the trees and behold the beauty of Him Who made the trees. And beholding that Beauty, our Mission Secretary longs that we who read of the trees may also see beyond, and share that vision with souls in need. I have come to see in these three months we have been together that the condition of our Mission Secretary is that of the Psalmist who wrote, "The zeal of thy house hath eaten me up, and the reproaches of them that reproach thee have fallen upon me." Here, indeed, is one whose very soul is consumed with a passion for missions, a zeal for the house of God, that all who are in sin everywhere, in the home fields and in the foreign, may come and dwell in that house and serve the Lord. His body is now worn to weakness because its strength has been eaten up in service for the Lord, that our holy Gospel may be proclaimed.

I cannot myself be in my pulpit now to lift my voice in behalf of the great burden and blessing of the Church, that of missions in this, our Mission Period, but I am at my own risk sending out this appeal through the SUN to all who may read and to our pastors in particular, that as a church we now show that we really have a care for something more than food and clothing and shelter; that the burden of the Church, our burden, is to give spiritual food to a hungry world. We are enjoined to walk by faith and not by sight, and because of faith in our Lord's command, we should look beyond that which we can see with our eyes. Is it fair, my brethren of the ministry, to allow our Secretary to burn out his life in appealing to us to do that which we know is our duty and privilege? Shall we let our cold indifference and neglect break this man's heart, as it has already broken his body. But my appeal is not in honor of or to save our Mission Secretary, but to honor our Lord whose heart broke on Calvary for a world steeped in sin. "My heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is that they might be saved." My failings are such in making this heart appeal to my brethren in the ministry that I know nothing more appropriate to say than to repeat with Paul, "I charge you by the Lord that this epistle be read unto all the holy brethren." (I Thess. 5:27.)

C. H. ROWAND.

THE SOUTHEAST CONVENTION.

RALEIGH, N. C., APRIL 30TH, MAY 1ST-2ND.

The Program Committee, of which Rev. F. C. Lester is Chairman, will be ready to make announcements within a very short time. The program will be sent to all our ministers and churches in the Southeast.

Two of our prominent ministers have written recently as to some of the needs which face us as ministers and churches. Dr. N. G. Newman from Holland, Va., writes this pregnant sentence: "The greatest need is more ministers of ability, adequate culture and sacrificing spirit. We need a more vital message from the pulpit. We need more who are able and willing to stand against the enemies of truth and righteousness and pay the price, therefor." What a tremendous truth Dr. Newman has put into this sentence. The time has gone by when a minister's word regarding the Bible or any other truth is accepted merely because he happens to be a minister. We, as ministers must be willing to face the truth. We do need more truth in our churches, a deeper sacrificing spirit. And Dr. Newman answers all the questions in very much the same vein, evidencing a fine Christian spirit. His closing sentence is important: "The demonstration of the Christian spirit is our need." The Church can never carry out any program until it has more of the spirit of Christ than it now has.

And a similar letter comes from Rev. Dr. Jno. Britton Clark, the minister of our church at Tryon, N. C. There are two sentences in this letter which are important. He speaks of the financial support of the Church which, as all of us know, is at a very low ebb. And then he says: "People feel that the Church has nothing real, practical, vital for their needs." Are the indifferent people who are in the majority of our churches right in their judgment? Is our failure to secure financial help due largely to the fact that our preaching and our ministers do not touch the vital needs of human beings in these days?

And then there is another suggestion in Dr. Clark's letter that is worthy of consideration. He speaks of emphasis upon the spiritual riches of the of the Gospel, and less emphasis upon imaginative, far-fetched topics that do not grip the souls of men and women. Do we not need as ministers and churches a larger grasp of the Christian message?

And then there is another letter from Rev. H. B. Maubrey of the Union Church, Demorest, Ga. His letter has this significant sentence: "With all its deficiencies, I often feel that the Church of today has ideals so high that the average man can not make connection with his life. The average man the world over is down as to religion and morality. He is leaving the Church because it looks too visionary about liquor, war, politics, etc." And yet in closing his letter he says: "We ought to tactfully promote the Council for Social Action of the Congregational-Christian Churches."

These letters indicate that our ministers are coming to Raleigh with some definite convictions. Another very interesting fact has arisen in connection with the Southeastern Convention. There is the possibility of a large group of Methodist ministers participating with us in one of our sessions. Plans for this are being worked out.

J. EDWARD KIRBYE.

ANOTHER STRANGE REACTION.

Yet not so strange! The Church (Congregational) at Hermosillo, Mexico, was taken over by the Government as a social center. Instead of crushing their spirit this seems to spur the workers on to new endeavor. At Matzatlan where the clergy are put on a quota a progressive program of social action serving the community has been pushed. For services the churches join together with the Baptists whose pastor has a permit to officiate. The English Forum and the International Club, both of deep interest to Mr. Neff, are lively and growing concerns. Professional and business men, both Catholic and Protestant, discuss questions of general interest in a new Spanish speaking group. "Far from being a time to give up and retire from the field, says Mr. Neff, "this would seem one of those crises which challenge the reality and resources of our Christian religion."

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Dr. John G. Truitt, Pastor of the Suffolk Christian Church, has a class of about forty boys and girls, which meets on Friday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. This class will continue for five weeks, closing with Easter, and will consider the following topics during the period: "Realizing God," "Knowing Jesus," "Becoming a Christian," "Joining the Church," and "Living a Christian Life." This course is intended for boys and girls who are not church members, and is given to teach the fundamental steps in becoming a Christian.

There are great possibilities in this type of teaching. Such a method prepares the way for the evangelistic meetings to be held later in the spring. Young people should be carefully taught the essential doctrines of the Christian faith. For Christianity must rest upon truth and experience. When Jesus said, "Ye must be born again," he included the head as well as the heart of mankind. Being born is more than expression through an intelligent approach to its power and possibilities. The spiritual life is no exception to this principle. For love implies more than an experience; it touches and motivates life through sunshine and shadow, sickness and health, joy and sorrow.

The church has, in its history, passed through many periods of changing methods and emphasis. In the early days of the Christian denomination there was a revolt against ritualistic forms and creedal expressions of faith. Naturally this affected the content of sermons as well as the subject matter of the Sunday school. The old church catechism for the young people was discarded. It was considered too formal and dogmatic in its teachings. Under the old regime the ability and willingness to pass a satisfactory examination on the church catechism was an evidence of one's preparation for church membership. And this was a standard, in many churches, by which young people were admitted into the church. In the final stage it appeared to make Christianity a matter of intellectual definitions of faith.

The emphasis of Christian experience developed a movement which has profoundly influenced the attitude of teachers and preachers. Revival meetings replaced the study of the catechism. Many people have been brought into the church without any previous preparation. It is much easier to touch the heart than to teach the head. Consequently the object of the revival sermon was to stir the emotions and win a decision for Christ. The sincerity of this decision was evidenced by the tears of the penitent. For tears are an unmistakable evidence of experience. Of course this represents the extreme development of this movement. Out of this came many great revivals of religion.

Human nature must change its point of emphasis. Like the tide, life ebbs and flows, in its movement and expression. Thought and experience must find new worlds to exploit and conquer. In the task of winning souls, the church will do well to study the methods of Jesus Christ. Out of these methods Jesus built a program and outlined a course for his followers. This program of the Master has four objectives: 1. Go; 2. Preach the Gospel; 3. Winning disciples (pupils); 4. Teaching. And the church will be more effective in winning souls and more efficient in building up Christian character, when it returns to the method of Jesus. Christianity provides for an intelligent approach to divine truth. This gives direction to the love of the heart and enriches human experience.

The Pastor's Class gives an opportunity for study, without undue coercion. Sunday school teachers could use this method to prepare the minds of unsaved pupils for hearing the evangelistic message in the revival meetings. Why not use this method before the annual revival meeting?

DEFERRED SUPPORT.

It is not necessary, I think, to remind any individual or group of individuals of the needs of Elon College or of the responsibility of those who own the college to support it. The Southern Convention owns Elon College. It is definitely the property of that body, and as such it belongs to me and to every member of the church. Its needs become our needs. Recognizing our responsibilities to support the college should provoke immediate interest. The Convention has authorized certain amounts to be apportioned to and raised by the local church. The minister, officials, and members of the local church have definite responsibility, and it should be for them a privilege.

Recently, I received a letter from an interested minister, stating that "We have lifted an offering, which was not a very healthy one. We want to do our part. We will lay emphasis on the fifth Sunday offering for the college and then we expect to concentrate on conference apportionments," intimating that by far the larger part of this church's uspport for the college need not be expected before next fall.

It may be that many local churches have the same idea. Now, Brother Pastor and Sister Churches, will you not sit down and think for a moment? If you will, you will discover that this is simply deferring means to meet an immediate need beyond the possibility of assistance. That is to say, it withholds the support of the college now and defers it beyond the present scholastic year. The grass always grows green in the spring, but it sometimes happens that the cow can't live until spring. Of what value is the green grass? For the college to continue with honor and freedom, it needs support now—this scholastic year. And, may I make this one other appeal to those who we love and who we hope love us to please do something for the support of your college now? It will not impoverish you or your people to make an offering, but it will greatly enrich us and in turn bring to you and your people a blessing. May we hear from you?

DR. J. O. ATKINSON'S QUESTION.

In the question propounded by Dr. J. O. Atkinson several weeks ago attention was called to the failure of our churches to grow in missionary support. And Doctor Atkinson is asking why this is.

A study of our Annuals reveals Doctor Atkinson is in possession of the facts, and it also reveals why the good Doctor is so tremendously concerned about the situation. One not conversant with the facts can go on in a sort of sweet complacency, convinced "God is in His heaven and all's right with the world." But a study of the statistics reveals that while God is in His heaven, all is not right with the missionary giving of our Southern Christian Convention, and more especially of certain of its constituent conferences.

Doctor Atkinson, by inference, raises the question as to whether God will bless a church that does not make some commensurable effort at carrying out the great commission of His Son. And, of course, Dr. Atkinson does not think God will. And the writer agrees with Doctor Atkinson.

Here is a quotation from a letter written by a good brother of the Western North Carolina Conference. "Many of our ministers seem to carry a great burden to preach the Gospel . . . but judging from Conference reports and personal observation, I do not see that we are making much progress in building up Christ's Kingdom." This is but one of several letters received by me about the work of the conference and all of them include statements similar to the above quotation. And, besides the letters, I have had quite a number of the laity and several of the ministers to speak to me concerning the situation. What is the trouble? I am wondering if Doctor Atkinson is not right?

Missionary support, of course, has to be judged in terms of dollars and cents. There may be those who will insist spiritual matters and money must not be mixed. But they are mixed. On the whole, people will give their money to and spend their money for the things in which they are interested. On this basis, and I think it sound, our people are not much interested in the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth.

In the Christian Annual for 1933, which gives the reports and records of the conferences for 1932, you will find on pages 64 and 65 the statistics for the Western North Carolina Conference. I am selecting for this study this conference because it is my conference. The membership of the conference is given as 3,969 and the total amount of monies raised for all purposes as $16,526.97. But the 681 members of the First Christian Church of Burlington gave $10,488.18 of this total, so we will eliminate the Burlington Church from our study. This means then that 3,288 members of the Western Conference gave a total for the whole work of the Church of $6,038.81, or $1.85 per capita for the year.

For missions the Western North Carolina Conference, exclusive of the Burlington Church, gave $487.55, or 15c per capita per year. For all missionary and benevolent purposes, these churches gave $1,962.91, or 60c per capita for the year.

It might be interesting to note the per capita giving for all purposes by the different conferences constituting our Southern Christian Convention. For the year 1932, it was as follows: Eastern Virginia, $8.88; North Carolina and Virginia, $5.39; Western North Carolina, $4.16; Valley of Virginia, $3.85; Eastern North Carolina $2.12.

Now the writer contends these figures are not as far removed from prayers and professions as some would like to believe. To me they are a concrete fruitage of the prayers and professions, manifesting in degree something of the depth of these. Jesus said, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." And one of Jesus' commandments was and is, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." In the Western North Carolina Conference, then, one measurement of our love for Christ is 15c per capita for a year. Now that is not much love. And God will not bless it.

Perhaps there will be those who will not relish this contribution from my heart and mind, and consequently will not like me for writing it. But here is a tragic situation and whether you like the article or me does not matter much, but whether you are moved to do something about it matters eternally. Evangelism is a part of evangelization and the field of evangelization is the world. For this too, we must have a passion.

I believe the principles of the Congregational Christian Church are very near to the heart of our Lord. But principles are not enough and unless we have a passion to establish the Kingdom of our Lord on the earth, God will pass us by and bless even those whose principles may not be quite so near to the heart of His Son, but who love Him more. God help us!

JAMES H. LIGHTBOURNE,

FROM REV. E. M. CARTER.

The work in my parish is picking up some as the springtime comes on. At Youngsville, while the congregation is small, the work is very interesting. The Sunday school is good and the Missionary Society is active. We have received six members into the church since conference.

The Sunday school at Fuller's Chapel is much alive; they are having a contest between the Reds and the Blues and began with wonderful results. The congregation is larger every service.

New Hope is having a large Sunday school; about one hundred and sixty in attendance last Sunday. The building is to be painted at an early date; the paint is bought and paid for. It seems there is increased interest in the work as a whole.

Good Hope, one of the oldest churches in the section is one of the congregations that has held up in attendance through most all the depression. They have a large Sunday school and interest is good, generally.

Pope's Chapel, originally a Methodist church is keeping step to the work. A fine congregation, and always thoughtful of the pastor. They have recently done some repairing on the interior of the building. The Sunday school is taking on new life under the leadership of Brother Numer Suitt.

Mt. Auburn is looking to better days, having a desire for all the departments of the convention work. The congregation is increasing at every service. The Sunday school is very interesting, manned with a corps of fine teachers. This is our first year at this place and we are hoping for great success.

E. M. CARTER.

FIFTH SUNDAY OFFERINGS.

The last day of this month is Sunday, the fifth Sunday. For years, the Southern Convention has been appealing to the Sunday schools of the Convention to make a generous offering to the college on fifth Sundays. A number of our schools have responded to this appeal and their offerings have been of great assistance. The needs of the colleges have never been greater than now. The monthly bills, monthly salaries for this month—the month of March—must be met; but they cannot be met, my dear friends, without help from you. If you knew what your contributions would mean without the least hesitancy you would rejoice in making a liberal offering next Sunday for the college. Brother Pastor, will you bring this matter before your school? Brother Superintendent, will you make the appeal? Please be reminded that whatever you give will not only help the college but will help you. If your conference has adopted the Convention's larger budget, this offering will be credited on your conference apportionments. Your offerings will also be reported through the columns of the CHRISTIAN SUN. Will you not receive the offering on Sunday, put the same in the mail on Monday morning that we may have it by Tuesday? We will be looking for your offering.

L. E. SMITH.

Every day begins with new life, new opportunities, and new obligations. May we begin the new day with a new hope, a new trust, and a new faith; a new hold upon God!

A Story for the Children

THE TRIP TO WASHINGTON.

Three girls were sitting on the piazza talking of their expected trip to Washington. The graduating class at High School had long planned this excursion and had all worked hard to earn the money. Two of the girls, Joan and Betty, were excitedly telling of the special things each wished to see and do, but Mary sat quietly listening. At last Betty said, "What's the matter with you, Mary? You haven't said a word for ages."

"I don't think I can go, girls!"

"Why not?" asked Betty.

"You've been earning and saving all the year and you have enough money for the trip," said Joan in surprise.

"It isn't that," answered Mary, "John is sick and I know Mother can never manage without me. Baby is good but needs lots of attention. With John sick I'm needed at home"—Mary almost choked as she finished.

None of the three noticed Mary's sister, Barbara, sitting on the step below them. The twelve-year-old girl almost worshipped her older sister. She listened awhile longer, then slipped around to the back of the house and thus upstairs to where here mother was at work. She was troubled by what she had heard.

"Oh, Mother!" she exclaimed, "is it true that Mary can't go with the rest to Washington?"

"I don't see how she can dear. I hate to have her give it up, but what can I do?"

"She's looked forward to it all the past winter, Mother. She must go!"

"I feel as badly about it as you do, dear!" answered her mother.

"I can't bear it to have her stay home. If I do Baby's wash each day and take care of him, take him to ride if he's fussy and do all the dishes, couldn't we manage? I can help get the meals, too. Please, Mother, tell her to go. I'm sure we can get along."

"You dear, unselfish child!" exclaimed her mother. "If you are willing to do so much in

MISSIONS

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., Secretary.

AN OPEN LETTER.

To our Sunday Schools:

You are not likely to get a personal thrill, or even a passing and perishing joy out of your giving to Missions. Our Saviour did not give His great command, nor is He building His church for your joy. No, if we are giving for the joy of it, we will not give to Missions which is a work of faith, not in ourselves, or for ourselves, but in our Lord and for His glory. He came into this world as a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief and then gave Himself upon the Cross, not for the joy of it, but through the shame and sorrow and agony of it, that He might obey the will of the Father and through that obedience He might save a world from sin. He has given His supreme command to us. Here it is: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to the whole creation." (Mark 16:15.)

It is this Gospel that makes your Sunday school possible, sponsors it, carries it on, and it is this Gospel with its message of salvation to a world in sin that you are preaching through your gifts to Missions.

No, your missionaries have not gone out to remote places, away from home, comforts and loved ones for the joy of it to themselves, but that there "may be joy in Heaven over one sinner that repenteth." And our home missionaries, working in the hard, small places, and on meager salaries are not seeking their joy, but the joy of their Lord, that they may rejoice, not in themselves, nor over their deeds, "but in their Lord and over His power." Rejoice in the Lord, for He will bring it to pass.

Thus our giving to Missions is not for the joy of the giver, nor the glory of any human being, but for the joy of our Lord and for His glory.

Shall we not in this springtime of the year, when life is bursting forth in renewed vigor and glory, give our hearts, and our gifts, to Him, so that we may realize the promise of the prophet, "The joy of the Lord is your strength."

THE OFFERING FOR MISSIONS.

March, April and May have been designated as Mission months by the Southern Christian Convention. Many churches take the Mission offering at Easter.

In the absence of Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Secretary of the Mission Board, I urge pastors, churches, and individuals to make a special effort to increase the Mission offering from the churches. There are many demands on the board and the needs of both the home and foreign field are great.

J. E. West,
Chairman of the Mission Board.

ROSEMONT MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the Rosemont Christian Church held its annual luncheon and mite box opening service in the assembly room of the Church, March 20, 1935, at one o'clock. The ladies furnished a most delicious lunch and served it to the great satisfaction of all present.

Mrs. O. S. Mills presided in her usual delightful manner. Mrs. J. F. Morgan gave thanks for the bountiful provision for the body. Rev. and Mrs. H. S. Hardcastle were honor guests at the meeting. Mrs. Hardcastle brought greetings as Superintendent of the Norfolk District, and Mr. Hardcastle delivered a most pleasing and helpful after dinner message. Rev. J. F. Morgan sang "Mother Macree" in special honor of the wonderful mothers in the Society.

Mrs. O. S. Mills read a historic paper, showing that the Society at Rosemont was one of the first, if not the first, Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies organized within the Southern Convention.

The offering in dues and mite boxes amounted to $30.00. The meeting was one of the very best the society has held and the interest in the great cause of missions is by no means dead in the Society of Rosemont Church. Plans are now being pushed to make the Easter offering for missions as large as possible.

STEWARDSHIP QUESTIONS FOR YOUR CONSIDERATION.

1. What are the teachings of Jesus on material possessions and wealth?
2. Why is it said that "The economic is the most difficult area in which to be a Christian?"
3. Is it a principle of Jesus that the service of the common good must take precedence in our lives over the seeking of private gain?
4. Are the teachings of Jesus to be taken seriously by the privileged classes, the leaders of labor, the employers of labor, as they relate to the cooperative spirit?
5. How do the ways we actually do things to get money, and the ways we actually use it compare with the ethical intent of our lives?
6. Can industry operate on the basis of goodwill, cooperation and the enhancement of human values?
7. Why does our Moderator, Dr. Jay T. Stocking, write "Immortal Money"?
8. Do the teachings of Jesus and the spirit of His life actually furnish the fundamental principles in money matters for our personal living and for the reconstruction for our society?
9. How important is this matter of Christian Stewardship? Can we Christianize the idea of property in business, industry and in personal living?
10. Have you read Paulsen's book, "It Is to Share"? It is worth far more than the fifty cents you will pay the Christian Publishing Association, Dayton, Ohio or Pilgrim Press, Boston, Mass., for it.

The above are a few of the stimulating stewardship questions in the Syllabus on "The Christian Acquisition and Use of Money."

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

Rev. F. C. Lester, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

TO SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENTS.

As Springtime brings new life to mother earth, are we bringing new life to our Sunday schools and churches? Children, young people, and adults want to get out from home on these pretty spring days, and now is the time for the Sunday school to do its best work. Attendance can be greatly increased provided the programs are made attractive and urgent invitations are given to those who have been negligent during the winter.

It is a fine thing to check occasionally on all phases of our work. It is easy for the services to become formal even when we think they are informal. New material on springtime growth, newness of life, together with vigorous and happy music can do much toward making the Sunday school programs cheerful and helpful.

Easter is a wonderfully good time to enlist Sunday school people as church members. The crucified Christ and the resurrection appeal strongly to those who seek for life at the full. Superintendents should enlist their teachers as personal workers and try in every reasonable way to get the Sunday school folks to definitely accept Christ and become a part of His Church at Easter. The editor of this page will be delighted to hear of plans which superintendents use and will be glad to pass along this information to others. He will, also, be delighted to have reports on how many Sunday school people unite with our churches on Easter.

I am hoping, also, that you are making plans to send your leading young people to summer training schools. We need to be developing those who will lead our churches in the future. These summer schools are intended to do just that kind of thing, and the superintendent can serve his church in years to come by helping to get young people to a summer conference this year. I sincerely hope that you will do your best.

The Board of Christian Education is always glad to get requests for help. If we can serve you, please write to the chairman of that board, who is also editor of this page.

TO GROW OR NOT TO GROW.

The Good Book says that Christians ought "to grow in grace." It seems to believe in growth for individuals and groups. Science tells us that when a living thing ceases to grow it begin to die.

This is a bit disturbing when applied to our churches, for many of them have long since ceased to grow. A recent study of First Church in Norfolk and the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference indicates that from 1914 to 1925 the conference membership increased, and from that time to the present it has gradually decreased. The local church has followed the same curve with the exception that it increased one year longer than the conference. This church and conference are vary much like many churches and conferences throughout the country.

In my humble opinion the time has now arrived when all our churches should begin to grow again. The world is seriously in need of the message of Christianity. People are eager for a happy and abundant life. This they can get through Christianity. The message of Christ alone can save the world from war and self-destruction. We have waited long enough without making an attacff on the lines of the enemy. Between now and Easter every person who claims to be a Christian should make a definite attempt to win at least one other person to Christ and the Church. It is in this personal work that the Church has its greatest possibility for growth.

THE CHURCH MOVES FORWARD.

The Church moves forward;
Hear the clarion call
Of Christ, who beckons all.
'Neath His banner, onward!

The Church moves forward;
It steeps men in its love,
From the Lord God above.
With Him men march onward!

The Church moves forward;
The spirit of brotherhood,
Conquers the world for good.
Together, go onward!

The Church moves forward;
Like a mighty army;
Faith, hope, love—these shall bring
Peace, as men rush onward!

THE CONSECRATION OF JESUS.

Christian Endeavor Topic for April 7, 1935.

(A Consecration Service.)

Scripture, Mat. 3:13-17. John 17:17-19.

Planning this meeting:

Hymns: "We May Not Climb the Heavenly Steeps"; "Lead Kindly Light"; "At Even, Ere the Sun Was Set."

Prayer Hymn: "Dear Lord, and Father of Mankind."

Poems:

What grace, O Lord, and beauty shone
Around Thy steps below;
What patient love was seen in all
Thy life and death of woe.

Forever on Thy burdened heart
A weight of sorrow hung;
Yet no ungentle, murm'ring word
Escaped Thy silent tongue.

Thy foes might hate, despise, revile,
Thy friends unfaithful prove;
Unwearied in forgiveness still,
Thy heart could only love.

Oh, give us hearts to love like Thee!
Like Thee, O Lord, to grieve
Far more for others' sins, than all
The wrongs that we receive.

One with Thyself, may ev'ry eye,
In us, Thy brethren see
The gentleness and grace that spring
From union, Lord, with Thee.

—Edward Denny,

"'And having shut the door,' the Master said,—
A simple act indeed.
A world of care and sin are shut outside; ;
Within, Christ and my need.

"The things which my vain ear would understand,
Or what my eyes explore,
Or what would dim the consciousness of Him,
Are shut outside the door.

"Within, is found the quiet hush, the sign,
That He is hov'ring near,
The spirit of expectancy and faith,
And hope devoid of fear.

"'And having shut the door'—a world outside—
Where it should ever be
And Christ the One that hears and answers pray'r,
Is shut inside with me."

—Rev. John A. Stover.

Prayer: That God will give us the light of His presence to show us His will.

The consecration of Jesus at its highest point is revealed in the picture, "Christ in Gethsemane," and has a special message for this meeting.

Have members develop the following topics:

1. Jesus Began His Ministry in an Act of Consecration—Baptism. Mark 1:9-11.
2. Jesus Revealed His Devotion to God in Frequent Prayer. Mat. 14:22, 23.
3. Jesus' Consecration Was Proved by His Obedience. John 20:21.
4. Jesus Deepened His Own Spirit of Consecration in Worship. Luke 4:16-21.
5. Jesus "as Submissive to God's Will. Luke 22:42.
6. Consecration Meant Service to Jesus. John 4:34.
7. The Consecration of Jesus. Matt. 3:13-17; John 17:17-19.

Jesus never tried to meet life's situations alone. He always sought the guidance of His Father.

Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

REVIEW: LESSONS FROM THE LIFE AND LETTERS OF PETER.

Lesson XIII—March 31, 1935.

Golden Text: "Grow in grace and knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.—II Peter 3:18.

Lesson Text: I Peter 5:6-11; II Peter 3:14-18.

Jesus was the Great Discoverer. He saw men, not only as they were, but as they might become. And He had the marvelous power to help them to become. As He walked along the shores of the Sea of Galilee that day and called Peter, He said, "I will make you become." And He kept His word. The lessons of the past quarter dealing with the life and letters of Simon Peter show how true that is. Christ discovered unsuspected possibilities in Peter's life, transformed it, and used it in a way that blessed the children of men through all the centuries. "Thou art Simon . . . thou shalt be Peter"—that faith in Peter, and that ability to make Peter believe in himself, that is the heart of the Master's ministry and mission to men.

Humble Yourselves . . . That Ye Might Be Exalted.

There is no place for desire for place and preferment in Christ's disciples. Nor is there any necessity for it. Let every man humbly and faithfully live his Christian life and perform his Christian duty, and in due season God will exalt him. The principle still holds true that he that exalteth himself shall be abased, and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.

He Careth For You.

These four words contain in essence the heart of the Christian gospel. He—God is personal. Peter did not believe as some modern people believe (or profess to believe) that there is no god but impersonal force, natural laws, impersonal principles. Peter believed in a personal God.

"He careth"—God not only is; God cares. The universe is friendly. At the heart of it is love, concern, compassion, care. The glad message of the Christian gospel is that we have a God who cares.

"He careth for you"—God not only is, God not only cares ,but God cares for us as individuals. That is the gospel. This God, big enough and powerful enough to order and sustain this vast universe, cares for us as individuals. He cares for you and for me. He loves not only humanity, He loves individual human beings, every single human being everywhere. Jesus took special pains to emphasize this care of God for the individual. It needs emphasis today, for we are in danger of losing the individual in the mass.

Because God cares for us, we are not to be anxious, fretful, worried, tense, taut. We are to cast all our anxiety upon him. We are to exercise faith, not in the sense of believing an intellectual formula, but in the sense of trusting a person.

Be Watchful.

God does not, and cannot do it all. We are to exercise not only faith, but common-sense. We are to use our eyes and our ears and our heads and our wills. We are not to be careless. For the devil is not to be trifled with. He is the great adversary. Like a roaring lion, he walketh about, seeking whom he may devour. He is dangerous in that capacity. But he is just as dangerous when he comes in his more subtle and insidious ways. And man who knows anything about life knows that he always has a man's sized fight on his hands if he tries to live a Christian life. But the devil is a coward. If we resist him, he will flee from us.

The God of All Grace . . . Shall Perfect You.

The God of all grace—Paul wrote in one of his letters that our God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Jesus Christ. Peter is saying the same thing. There is nothing that must be borne, and no duty that must be done, but what the God of all grace can give us grace according to our need. God can equip a man with inner resources against anything that the world can do to him.

And this God is able to perfect us, to establish us, to strengthen us. I have never seen a perfect man. I never expect to see a perfect man here. But some day our God is going to bring us unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ. Some day we shall be like Him for we shall see Him as He is.

He Shall Have Dominion Forever.

Rome seemed in power when Peter wrote these words. She seemed to have unquestioned dominion. But Jesus Christ is more than Saviour; He is Lord of Lords and King of Kings. He shall triumph over every enemy. To him be dominion and power and glory forever and ever. Cheer up, we are not fighting a losing battle. We are on the winning side.

Give Diligence.

We are tempted to take our religion too easy. As a mater of fact we ought to give diligence that "we may be found in peace, without spot and blameless in His sight. It is so easy to let down and relax, to compromise. But we are called upon to fight the good fight of faith. And we must remember that we do not fight against flesh and blood, but against evil spiritual powers and unseen forces. We must watch and pray and fight.

A Brother Apostle's Letters.

Peter makes an interesting reference to some of Paul's letters which is very suggestive and illuminating. He states that Paul wrote "according to the wisdom given to him"—the Holy Spirit used the gifts of men as individuals, and each man's personality found expression in his writings. He also says that some things in Paul's letters are "hard to be understood" and to that all of us would say "Amen." And Peter adds that men take the scriptures and wrest it from its proper setting, and make it yield all kinds of interpretation, supporting every kind of doctrine, and thus fall into all kinds of error and evil. Intelligence as well as piety are necessary to an undertsanding of the Scripture.

Grow.

Here is the heart of the matter—the idea of growth and development in religion. Christian piety is not a static, fixed thing. It is a living experience. We are to grow in the grace of Jesus Christ, we are constantly and continually to be becoming more and more like Him. And we are to grow in knowledge, not about Him, but in knowledge of Him. We are to know Him. There is no stopping place in the Christian life.

PRAYER.

"O God, we pray The to revive in us the hearty spirit of our forefathers that we may establish and complete their work, building on the basis of their democracy the firm edifice of a cooperative commonwealth in which both government and industry shall be of the people, by the people and for the people."—Amen.

MONDAY.

"WANTED: A MAN."

"The Lord is my helper, and I will not fear what man shall do unto me."—Heb. 13:6.

Wanted: A man who is the expression of God in the world of affairs; a man whose greatness comprehends the destiny of man as set forth in ultimate ideals; a man whose outer and inner lives harmonize, and who does not fear the consequences of doing right.

The great outside world may do a lot to a man like this, but for every sacrifice of worldly favor made for righteousness there is a crown. For every true desire for righteousness, there is clearer vision. For every faithfulness to obligation or trust, there is a crown of joy, and a halo of light which reveals God's will in dealing with mankind. For every ministry of mercy and kindness, one receives more of inexhaustible mercy and love. For every sacrifice of worldly advantage when one chooses to lose position and friends rather than be false to self, convictions or God, there is renewed liveliness to ones whole nature which the chances of the future cannot steal and the frowns of the world cannot crush.

Prayer—Our dear Father, God of our souls, teach us and help us to hold fast to those things that are certain in Thy righteousness. We crave the blessedness that comes through good until at last we shall receive that crown which "The Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give unto us, and not unto us only but unto all those that love His appearing."—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"WHEN SNAKES WORK."

"Men loved darkness rather than light because their deeds were evil."—Jno. 3:19.

"As a rule, venomous snakes sleep by day and wander abroad in the shade of the evening to seek food or drink," says a Youth's paper.

The venomous beings in human form follow practically the same course. The shades of night find evil doers active.

"There is more chance for a cripple on the right road than for a racer on the wrong."

Prayer—Our Father, deliver us from the power of the evil one. Grant unto us a double portion of Thy grace that we may be Thine, in Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"LIFE SUPERIOR."

"If God be for us, who can be against us?"—Rom. 8:31.

Let us recall the King of Syria making war upon Israel, and the prophet Elisha leading Israel (II Kings 6.) The king sent a whole army of "horses, and chariots, and great hosts: and they came by night and compassed the city about." When Elisha arose in the morning he saw this great host and the Syrians ready to pounce upon them with confidence in their victory. But the king of Syria did not know that horses and chariots were of little use against a man who had Heaven back of him. When Elisha's servants asked: "What shall we do?" he answered, "Fear not, for they that be with us are more than they that be with them."

Christian experience verifies the scriptures in vouchsafing God's protection. As long as a child of God is on the path of duty, and until that duty is fulfilled, he is inviolable and invulnerable.

Physically speaking, this has not always seemed true. To perish has been the common lot of God's children, yet, it has been seen that to perish in righteousness is not loss, for God's chariots and horses are there still to work a deliverance still greater and more eternal.

Prayer—O Lord, our God, Giver of every perfect gift, give unto us that most perfect gift of vision to see Thy invisible hosts protecting us. So empower our souls that no enemy may detour us from the highway of duty and holiness. In Christ's name we ask it.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"THE NON-VIOLENT WAY."

"Be not overcome with evil but overcome evil with good."—Rom. 12:21.

Let us think of Ghandi of India who leads his host of untouchables in a continued fight for freedom and for chances of equality. It is an army whose only weapon is love and steadfastness of purpose with a willingness to suffer anything to accomplish their purpose. They have suffered great persecutions, but they have won much that they demanded.

There is no evil, whether of ourselves or of the world, that has not been overcome. When one finds evil within himself, he can readily call upon the opposite in Christ and the evil vanishes.

When one finds evil around him, let those around him see in him the virtue they lack, and such an embodiment of excellence does the whole work of rebuking and driving away sin.

When one sees an evil in the world, let him light his own candle and give his life to real, constructive, aggressive good, and evil will recede.

There is a story of a Chinese Emperor who upon hearing of an insurrection in one of his provinces, gathered his troops to march against them, promising his troops that he would destroy all his enemies. He marched upon them and they quickly surrendered. He treated his captives mildly, considerately and humanely. "How," cried his minister, "is this the manner in which you fulfil your promise? Your royal word was given that your enemies would be destroyed. And behold, you have pardoned them all and caressed them. "I promised," replied the Emperor, "to destroy my enemies, I have fulfilled my word; for see, they are enemies no longer; I have made friends of them."

There is power for victory in the simple might of goodness.

"Thou must be true to thyself,
If thou the true wouldst teach;
Thy soul must overflow, if thou
Another's soul wouldst reach.
The overflow of the heart it needs
To give the lips full speech.

"Think truly, and thy thoughts
Shall the world's famine feed;
Speak truly and each word of thine
Shall be a fruitful seed;
Live truly, and thy life shall be
A great and noble creed."

—Horatius Bonar.

Prayer—O Lord, our God, who art the might of goodness—we pray for Thy power in our lives. —Amen.

FRIDAY.

"PERSONAL ACCOUNTING."

"Every one of us shall give account of himself to God."—Rom. 14:12.

Accounting for responsibilities is the chief qualification of character and success. Accounting to God for personal stewardship in life is the first requisite in the judgment (Rom. 14:10). This accounting covers life as it is and more besides, it includes life's secrets (Rom. 2:16). This is emphasized strongly in the parables of our Lord and especially those of the Faithful Steward and the Talents. In both, "faithfulness" is the first requisite and the final test. And in each, "faithfulness" in the little things is set forth as the requisite to rising to greater ones.

Mountain peaks are reached only by following the trails which lie below. Lofty standards are reached only by faithfulness in daily duties. In fact, faithfulness is the only enduring possession. We can take nothing of our worldly possessions beyond the grave; but we can take the good that we may have done. We can take moral qualities we have attained; we can take kindness, and compassion, and self-sacrifice, conscience, hope, faith, patience, meekness, goodness, brotherly kindness. These wait for our coming at the judgment seat as eternal witnesses on our behalf.

Prayer—

"Lead me, Almighty Father, Spirit, Son,
Whither Thou wilt, I follow, no delay,
My will is Thine, and even had I none,
Grudging obedience still I will obey.
Faint-hearted, fearful, doubtful if I be,
Gladly or sadly I will follow Thee."

—C. G. Lang.

SATURDAY.

"DIVINE INDEPENDENCE."

"Thou regardest not the person of men."—Matthew 22:15-22.

The Pharisees and Herodians, anxious to trap our Lord with their questions about the lawfulness of paying taxes to the Romans, began by complimenting Him on His independence. "You dare to say what you think," they said; "tell us what you think about this hotly debated question."

It was true that Christ was entirely independent of human opinion, being the Son of God; but for that very reason He was independent of human passions and prejudices. Too often we, His followers, confound independence with bumptiousness and self-conceit. The truly independent man is independent, not because he is bold enough to stand by himself, but because he is wise enough to stand with God.

Prayer—We rest on Thee, our Sovereign. We seek Thy will and not our own, and so we are not subservient to the will of Thy creatures.

AMOS R. WELLS.

SUNDAY.

"PRAYERS THAT COME BACK."

"My prayer returned into mine own bosom."—Psalm 35:10-16.

It is sad that "curses, like chickens, come home to roost," but prayers also have a way of returning to the heart that sent them forth. "Ye ask, and receive not," said James, "because ye ask amiss, that ye may spend it in your pleasures."

Only unselfish prayers are sure to reach the throne of grace, and remain there. A little thought will show us why so many of our prayers are sent back upon us. If an ambassador is unacceptable to the country to which he is sent, that it enough. he is returned, and the country from which he was sent has no right to complain. So with our prayers, if they are not of the Christ-like kind that God loves.

Prayer—Like Thy disciple, our Saviour, we come to Thee and ask Thee to teach us to pray. Give us Thy Spirit, and then our prayers will never return into our bosoms.—Amen.

THE PERSONAL AND HUMAN FACTOR IN MISSIONS.

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle

"Go ye, therefore, and make disciples of all nations."—Matt. 28:19.

This is the most astounding utterance that ever came from the lips of man. Here was a man, apparently without power, and certainly without prestige or material resources, commanding a small group of eleven, rather ordinary men, who were also without prestige or power or wealth, to go out and to make disciples of all the nations of the earth. It was, from the human standpoint, an impossible and, therefore, a fantastic thing.

And yet the men who heard these words believed that the Man who uttered them meant just what He said. They obeyed Him literally. They waited until they had received the power which He had promised, and then they went everywhere preaching the gospel and teaching the nations. It is to be noted, too, that they found confirmation of what He had told them in what they were able to do, for the record says, "And they went forth and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following (Mark 16:20). There is no more thrilling story in history or literature than the story of what these men and their successors through the centuries did.

Now, that which they began in a small way, has become a great enterprise. Modern missionary activity involves a great organization, a great staff of workers, a great and varied program, and a great budget. Because of this fact, there is a subtle danger that we may lose sight of the personal and human factors in missions. This sermon seeks to emphasize these personal and human factors.

I. The personal and human factors involved in the peoples to whom the gospel message is carried. We are prone to look upon things in the mass, and thus to overlook the individual. This is true of things close at hand, and it is still more true of things afar off. At a distance, a crowd appears simply as a mass of people. Individuals do not stand out. When we think of missions in their so-called foreign aspects, we, therefore, usually think in terms of nations and races, great masses of people, rather than in terms of individuals. To some extent, of course, this is inevitable. But it is at the same time unfortunate. In the ultimate analysis, the gospel becomes an individual and human problem. The men and women, the young people, the boys and girls, the babies of other lands and of other races are individuals, and personal human beings. They are flesh and blood just like us, with the same hopes and fears, the same temptations and trials, the same joys and sorrows, the same weaknesses and strength, the same sense of guilt and sin, the same hunger and capacity for God. And God sees them as individuals. It will help us to keep this fundamental principle in mind. Only thus can missions become really vital.

II. The personal and human factor involved in the people who carry the gospel message. We have a tendency to think of missionaries as being different from ordinary folks. We feel that somehow or other an ocean trip transforms them and makes them different from Christian workers, and especially ordinary Christians here at home. Now it is not aside from the point to say that, in many respects, many missionaries are different from us. They have practiced a measure of self-denial which many of us are unwilling to practice. They have made prayer a greater reality in their lives. They have a more vital faith than many of us possess. But in the basic things of life they are just individual, human beings. They have our same limitations and our same weaknesses. They live our kind of life in basically the same kind of world that we live in. Fundamentally, they are like us. It will help us to keep this in mind. We will be more constant and careful in our prayers in their behalf, and we will be able to help them to better advantage if we keep this fact in mind. And the same principle will apply, of course, to native workers. The gospel ultimately becomes a personal matter, both in respect to those to whom it is carried and those who carry it.

III. The personal and human factor involved in the people who administer the missionary program. The words "home" or "foreign mission board" conjure up in many minds a group of people who are different. For many, they mean a group of men and women with fat salaries, and with practically no business sense, sitting back in richly furnished offices, racking their brains in trying to invent some scheme, or in trying to make some new plans, and always demanding of us more money. There are many people who never think of members of the mission boards, or mission secretaries, in terms of individual, human beings. Such people ought to be reminded that mission boards and mission secretaries are men and women who are rigidly honest and tremendously sincere, and who carry on their minds and in their hearts the burden of the work, always intensified by the contrast between what ought to be done and what their meager funds will allow them to do. They are men and women who seek to do the best they can with what they have. They sometimes make mistakes—they would be the first to admit it—but they have a high sense of their responsibility and they try to be faithful in discharging it. They need and welcome our prayers.

IV. The personal and human factor involved in the people who support the missionary enterprises. The Church is the only agency that is giving the gospel to others. But when we think long enough of the Church, we come eventually and inevitably to the individual. The Church universal, the denominations, the conference, the local Church, the individual member—this, in brief, is the process. In other words, this matter of sharing the gospel with others comes back ultimately to you and to me—it is an intensely personal and human factor. The Church cannot do what it ought to do in carrying out the command of Jesus unless every member of the Church does what he or she ought to do. In the final analysis there can be no proxy in the matter. The missionary enterprise of the Church depends upon you and upon me and upon every individual follower of Jesus Christ. Dare any of us to disobey the one who is not only our Saviour, but our Lord!

We think of Paul as the great missionary, the great preacher, the great writer ,the great apostle "in labors more abundant." We do not sufficiently think of him as the intercessor who sought and obtained by his supplication the power that rested upon all his other activities, and brought down the blessing that rested on the churches that he served.

—Andrew Murray.

You may be rooted and grounded in this love, and know the love that passeth knowledge, but on one condition,—you must be strengthened by the Spirit in the inner man, so that Christ may dwell in your heart. Christian, take this message from God's Word, and let it influence your life!

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

It is great to live close to Nature and behold the beautiful things that God has given us to make the world in which we live a more pleasant place of abode. As I write this letter I can see from my office window peach trees in full blossom of white and pink. What flowering shrub can give you a more beautiful sight to look upon. Yet it is just a peach tree. Then, as we look from another window we see the beautiful spiraea all dressed in its new snowy white dress of spring. Since the warm showers have begun to fall, the grass has taken new life and looks green and beautiful. Then from my window I often hear the mocking bird doing his bit to make the world more cheerful. Then, too, as we look across our desk out upon the street we see ninety little children who have met misfortune in life and the Church has come to their rescue, going to and from school each day with hair combed and faces clean—growing as the days go by into young manhood and womanhood. We realize that the beautiful peach tree blossoms will soon fade away and be forgotten, the spiraea with its beautiful dress of snowy white will fade away in a few weeks and be gone and when the hot summer days come the green grass will lose its beautiful green color. But the happy little children I see pass in front of my window each day will continue to grow and one day develop into citizens of our great country to wield an influence for good or bad.

Then the thought comes to me of the great responsibility we shoulder in trying to guide them along lines of thought and instill principles that will bring out the best there is in them. What a responsibility.

S. S. AND C. E. CONVENTION.

year, trying to work out ideas and plans for more efficient Sunday School and Christian Endeavor work in each local church. With the cooperation of the superintendents of the various departments of our Convention, we feel that we can accomplish a great deal in the future. Some of the superintendents have already given us valuable suggestions as to their respective departments. By the time our next regular session convenes, we hope to have an hundred per cent cooperation from these departmental superintendents and a united workable program for a Convention aid.

It is the desire of the officers of the Convention to get every superintendent—superintendents of the various departments, namely, all S. S. departmental superintendents; superintendents of Missions, superintendents of Education and the regular delegates to this Convention. We are arranging forums whereby the various groups can get together and discuss these problems and work out solutions whereby the work can be made more effective.

If the pastors and superintendents of the S. S. will get the teachers and officers together now and begin planning to meet us at Newport News, July 23rd, and will study the suggestions the committee plans to have in your hands in the near future, I believe we can have one of the best Conventions that we have ever had. Let us pray and work toward that end.

order to let sister have the trip, I'm sure we can do it. Run and tell her that we have it all arranged for her to go."

Great was the excitement when Barbara made the glad announcement. At first Mary was not willing to put so much on her younger sister, but her mother said, "It will be only for a week, dear. I don't think it will hurt her."

Barbara did find the days long and the work hard, and she often felt that the baby was extra fussy, but she kept thinking of the good time Mary was having and persevered. It seemed as if the big pile of dishes at night was the worst, but often her mother could help with these.

When Mary returned and told of the wonderful things she had seen, the delightful time she'd had throughout the trip, and said, "It's all due to Barbara's unselfishness," the younger girl felt more than repaid, and was particularly happy because she could give so much pleasure to her sister, to whom she looked up with love and admiration.

But Barbar's cup was full to overflowing when she heard her father say, "Barbara is developing wonderfully."—Ruth Mowbray Brown in Advance.

CARR.

John Thomas Carr, son of Matthew and Martha Pierce Carr, was born Nov. 21, 1865 and died February 6, 1935, aged 69 years, 2 months and 15 days.

On December 26, 1879 he was united in marriage to Miss Lillie I. Winborne and to this union was born 14 children, five girls and nine boys.

Early in life he was united with Antioch Church and remained a member to the end.

He is survived by his widow and nine children, five boys and four girls, four grandchildren, one sister, Mrs. R. H. Barrett, one half-sister, Mrs. Clem Harrell, one brother, Mr. Chas. M. Carr.

The funeral was conducted by the writer assisted by Rev. Elisha Bradshaw from his church on February 8th and the interment was in the church cemetery.

May those who mourn be comforted and led by God's spirit.

C. E. GERRINGER.

STOUT.

James Calvin Stout, of Ramseur, N. C., was born August 17, 1862, died March 8, 1935. Aged 72 years, six months and twenty-one days.

He was married to Martitia Brown, September 28, 1881, who preceded him in death by three years and three days.

There were eight children born to this union.

Bro. Stout professed faith in Jesus Christ and united with Parks Cross Roads Christian Church more than thirty years ago, and remained a faithful member until death.

Funeral services were conducted from Parks Cross Roads church by the writer and the body laid to rest in the church cemetery. The floral offering was beautiful.

May the God of all comfort bless and keep His loved ones.

G. M. TALLY.

JOHNSON.

William Judson Johnson died at his home, Windsor, Va., March 14, 1935, age fifty-one years. The funeral services were conducted at Windsor Christian Church by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. Sidney Cobb and the body interred in Antioch Cemetery.

Mr. Johnson is survived by his wife, who was Lucy Virginia Pierce, two sons, Stephen Earl and Wm. Judson of Suffolk, four daughters, Mary Virginia, Lucille, Doris and Olive, of Windsor and Ernest Johnson of Norfolk, and two sisters. He was a deacon in Windsor Church and a man of humble and devout spirit. He bore his long and great suffering with Christian faith and fortitude and came to his end in peace.

May our Heavenly Father comfort and keep his dear ones.

UNDERWOOD.

Whereas, our Heavenly Father, in His infinite love and wisdom, saw fit on the 8th day of January, 1935, to call Mrs. Bessie Roberts Underwood, one of the faithful members of the Suffolk Christian Church and Ladies' Benevolent Social Union, from this earthly life to her eternal reward, therefore, be it resolved:

First: That we are grateful for her peaceful, kind and happy life.

Second: That we have been blessed by having her with us, and we will always cherish the memory of her personality.

Third: That we strive to profit by all that was good and true in her life.

Fourth: That we extend to her husband and family our deepest sympathy, realizing that her children have lost a good, kind and loving mother.

Fifth: That copies of these resolutions be sent members of her family, spread upon our church records and be published in the Christian Sun.

AYSCUE.

Audrew Lewis Ayscue was born July 12, 1909, died February 22, 1935. He was the son of Samuel J. and Lillie (Gordon) Ayscue and was guard of the Vance County prison camp.

While sitting down with his gun across his knees, the gun fell and shot him through the upper chest causing instant death. He had been married only two months that day to Gertie Stone.

She was at the home of her parents preparing to go to housekeeping and had not seen him in ten days.

On Sunday the day of the funeral his only brother was in a wreck, being severely hurt and his car demolished.

His cousin was recently killed by a hit-and-run driver, and his uncle died suddenly, both being buried together. Then his aunt died 9 days later. Andrew makes the fourth death in a month.

He joined Liberty Christian Church 15 years ago and it was there the body was laid to rest.

The funeral was conducted by Rev. S. E. Madren.

He leaves to mourn their loss his bride, his parents, one brother and one sister, besides a host of friends.

Jewish Savant Honored.—

The Anti-Semitic attitude of the Hitlerites calls to mind that Spain, about 500 years ago, took the same attitude, expelling its entire Jewish population. Yet Spain is now celebrating the birth of Moses Maimonides, Jewish teacher, philosopher and physician, who was born in Cordoba 800 years ago in March.

Kansas Restores Capital Punishment.—

Legislation to restore capital punishment in the state of Kansas for murder in the first degree was completed by the Legislature except for the House concurrence in a Senate amendment providing that no person under the age of 18 shall be hanged. The Governor, Alf M. Landon, signified that he would sign the measures. The death penalty was abolished in 1907 and the State has not had a legal execution since 1874.

Divorces Are Expensive.—

The Alimony Reform League—there is such a thing—reports that during the last ten years, one million, eight hundred thousand men in the United States have paid an average of $936,000,000 annually as alimony. In addition to this sum which goes to their divorcees, approximately $2,000,000,000 a year is paid to attorneys, court clerks, and other attendants upon the divorce-mill. There is no dodging the fact that divorces are expensive in dollars and cents as well as in morals.

Government Inaugurates Policy of Inflation.—

The government has so much cash in its vaults at the present time that it has announced its intention this week of paying off maturing obligations in currency, thereby adding to the available money in circulation. This is inflation, possibly limited, but none the less certain, and is evidently done to placate to some extent the inflationist group of Congress. It is stated that the "working balance" of the government is at the present time $1,538,000,000, and it has been intimated that this balance would be reduced to not less than $1,000,000,000. A total of $1,850,000,000 in Liberty bonds has been called for redemption on April 15th, and it is probable that $290,000,000 of these will not be refinanced.

What Does Bridge Cost?—

In answer to the question, "How much was spent on bridge last year?" we learn the following: Bridge players spent approximately $5,000,000 for half that number of instruction books, while an equally large amount was the outlay for 17,000,000 decks of playing cards. Accessories, consisting of score cards, tables, etc., increased the above $10,000,000 by some $200,000, while bridge instructors received more than $8,000,000 during the year. This, of course, does not take into consideration the amount of money that traded hands as bets, prizes and what not. The total represents a per capita spending of only around 15 cents, but that's better than some did for Missions during the year.

Importation of Farm Products Increases.—

Prices are mounting higher almost daily for meats, flour, butter and other farm products, but the records recently compiled by both federal and private agencies show that the benefits of these higher prices are not being enjoyed by the American farmer alone. As a result of the wholesale crop destruction undertaken under the guise of helping the farmer last year, there is a shortage of these products, and the foreign farmer is reaping the benefit. Records for February and estimated figures for March, show that importation of agricultural products have reached a new high level, and that for the first time in American history it has been necessary to import feedstuffs for the feeding of livestock.

World Zionist Movement Grows.—

Writing in a recent issue of The Fortnightly Review, Israel Cohen, secretary of the Zionist organization, says: "Palestine has made much greater advances in the last fifteen years than during the preceding fifteen centuries. Since the country came under the control of the Mandatory Power the total population has increased from 662,000 to about 1,250,000—a rate of growth in so short a period that is probably without parallel in any part of the world. The present Jewish population, 300,000, is five times as great as it was in 1919. In 1932 there were 727 immigrants possessing at least £1,000 each on landing, with a total capital of £3,250,000; in 1933 the number was 3,250, with a total capital of £7,000,000; while the year 1934 will show a still higher record, as in the first eight months there is already an importation of £10,000,000."

"A Daniel Come to Judgment."—

From a recent issue of the Erie (Pa.) Daily Times comes the following story: "A New Yorker got drunk the other day, got into a fight with a friend, and unintentionally killed him with a blow of the fist. The killer was brought into court, where he pleaded guilty to a charge of manslaughter. The ordinary sequel would have been a prison sentence. But the judge who handled the case seems to have been a man of considerable discernment. So instead of sending the slayer to prison, he ordered him to abstain from all alcoholic drinks for five years, to pay the funeral expenses of his victim, and pay the widow $15 a week for five years. If the man fails to live up to this agreement, he goes to prison for a five-year stretch. This looks like an exceedingly sensible decision. Too often, when society punishes a lawbreaker, the lawbreaker's victim gets left out in the cold. Here is a case in which a measure of justice will be done to the innocent persons who suffered because of the killing."

Anti-Semitism Declines in Germany.—

Germany to all intents and purposes now admits defeat on the Jewish question. And the change of heart came about, not because the Nazis were convinced the policy itself was in error, but simply because foreign boycotts and economic difficulties forced them to abandon the cause of anti-Semitism. How far it is proposed to carry the reforms was not made clear, inasmuch as no action along that line has been taken, merely a statement that such was the latest intention of the Hitlerites. Clear evidence they still consider the Jews in the same light as previously was presented at the time the news policy was enunciated. The speakers at the meeting of political leaders and Nazi party members in Berlin referred to them as "vampires and exploiters," and in the same breath gave vent to the following. "It may be asked of you why the administration undertakes nothing more against the Jews. It cannot, for foreign political reasons, since further boycotts, foreign exchange difficulties and many other troubles are thereby threatened. Therefore, you must go about and spread what you have been told here and act accordingly."—M. P.-Recorder.

Homes Tax-Exempt in Florida.—

Under the provisions of the new homestead tax-exemption amendment to the Florida State Constitution, which was adopted last fall by an overwhelming popular vote, rural homesteads of less than 160 acres and urban homes occupying less than a half-acre, no longer appear on the tax roll, provided their assessed valuation does not exceed $5,000.00. The State also allows a property tax exemption of $500.00 on home furnishings, when the property of disabled veterans or War widows. Certain imperfections, however, still are to be eliminated from the law. For example, the amendment exempts homes occupied heads of families with one or more dependents. Thus a widow whose husband's home might have been tax-exempt, upon his death, finds the home which he has left her suddenly become taxable, though she is far less able to pay such taxes than he had been. By the elimination of this real estate tax, the public revenue has been reduced some $7,000,000.00. This tax will have to be paid in some other way, it is evident, unless there is a considerable curtailment in the State's budget. This experiment in tax modification is being followed with interest by tax specialists and real estate men throughout the nation. It will probably stimulate home-ownership in the Everglade State regardless of other effects.

Miss Pattie Lee Coghill is one of the teachers in the Interdenominational Leadership Training School in Key West, Florida. These Interdenominational Schools in which Miss Coghill is an active and valued participant, are most significant in promoting interdenominational understanding and good will, the only effective agency of a state-wide character in this field.

The Women's District Missionary Rallies have been in full swing this week both in Eastern Virginia and in the North Carolina Conferences. At this writing there are only two more rallies to be held, the Chatham-Lee-Moore District Rally at Grace's Chapel on Friday of this week and the Alamance District Rally, which meets at Union Ridge on Tuesday, April 9th.

The first radio school in Christian leadership in the country will be undertaken at Jacksonville, Florida, under the auspices of the Ministerial Alliance. The city radio station WJAX has consented to give the use of the radio on Wednesday evenings from six to six-thirty for ten weeks. Rev. R. G. Witty, pastor of the Livingstone Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church will conduct the course, using "The Teaching Work of the Church" as the course. Those who wish to register for courses are to send a fee of twenty-five cents to the Radio School, in care of WJAX, Jacksonville, Florida. It will be interesting to watch this experiment, also to discover how widely it is followed.

The fifty-sixth annual meeting of the Florida Conference will be held with the Winter Park church, April 23rd-25th. One of the features of the program this year will be a Layman's Session, this being an outcome of the visit of Mr. Donald Adams, Chairman of the Layman's Advisory Committee, to the Florida churches. Another feature will be a session devoted to the recognition of the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Rollins College by the Congregational Conference of the state. Rev. Frank Atkinson of West Palm Beach is Moderator of the Conference and Dr. Charles H. Beale of St. Petersburg will preach the annual sermon. Dr. Ernest M. Halliday, Secretary of the Church Extension Boards of the Congregational Churches, will be a visitor and speaker at the Conference.

FIFTH SUNDAY OFFERINGS.

Yes, Brother Pastor and Superintendent, I, too, read President L. E. Smith's appeal in last week's CHRISTIAN SUN, to the Sunday Schools of the Convention; and while I endorse the appeal as a whole, I want to stress it somewhat by virtue of my office, to the Sunday Schools of the Eastern Virginia Conference.

Why, of course you received the Fifth Sunday Offering in your Sunday School. If it is an evergreen school, you receive an offering on the fifth Sunday as well as any other Sunday. The question is, what are you going to do with it? The Convention has spoken, in so far as it has authority, and our Conference has ratified the same action, that you should send that fifth Sunday offering to Elon College. No! No, my dear friend, I did not say that it was compulsory. I would not stand for that myself. The fact is, we can put ourselves in harmony with the recommendations and counsel of the higher body, the Convention, or we can declare a "Declaration of Independence," and use that offiering for some other good cause.

It seems to me that only two things enter into this matter at all: Is it possible for my school to spare that offering? If I give one Sunday's offering per month to the Orphanage, and one to Missions, can we spare an offering once in three months on the fifth Sunday for the College? They are all worthy causes. If it can't be spared, then I suppose the matter ends there. If it can be spared, then the second thing is, guided by the Spirit of right, should we send it where the Convention and Conference has directed that it should be sent. Let the Sunday Schools think on these two things, and we will trust them to do the right and proper thing.

Let us hope for a full report of all the Schools of the Conference on this fifth Sunday offering.

W. M. JAY.

OFFERINGS FROM THE CHURCHES.

I received two letters, one in Saturday's mail, and one in today's mail, which I am taking the liberty of having published in this CHRISTIAN SUN. I hope that the readers of the SUN will read both of these communications. They are significant. The one received Saturday reads:

Mar. 26, 1935.

Dear Secretary:

Enclosed you will find sixty cents (60c) in stamps, which is the amount that the ——— —— Christian Church raised for Elon College. Please place this to their credit.

Probably the contribution would have been larger, but the weather was bad. . . . Then, too, no one was expecting to be asked to give anything for this purpose.

Wishing you success.

———————, Secy.

This letter explains itself. If the pastor or someone else will see to it that every member understands that the offering is to be received, what it is for, and how great the need is, there is no question in my mind but that each church will be proud of its offering. Otherwise, the offering will probably be small, if made at all. For any local church to make a liberal contribution for the support of the institutions of the church, the church will not be impoverished by having made such offering but greatly enriched, and so will the individual givers.

The second letter reads:

Virgilina, Va.,
March 30, 1935.

Dr. L. E. Smith.

Dear Sir:

I've just read your article in the SUN, and before I forget it, I will send in my little contribution today as I can't go to church tomorrow. I hope you will receive it on Monday instead of Tuesday. You will find enclosed $5.00 for the College.

Hoping and praying for success of my college. I only wish I could send more.

MRS. NANNIE P. ROYSTER,
Member Union Christian Church.

This letter is most encouraging. There are literally hundreds in our church who could have written such a letter and sent a like contribution. Perhaps you did not read the article in the SUN, making this appeal. Or, if you did, you laid it aside, feeling that you would like to do something or hoping that somebody else would. Think of what good would have been accomplished if a hundred or more other friends of the college had been prompted as was Mrs. Royster and had responded as she did and how happy everyone interested in the college would have been because of such gifts! It is not too late. Won't you join with her in sending your college your contribution?

THE GREAT NEED OF THE CHURCH.

The Church is in need. This no man will doubt,
But it is not for silver and gold;
A prize of more value than money could buy
Was given the faithful of old.
The Church should contend for the faith once for all
Delivered to the saints who were true;
Many sinners today are in the "broad way,"
Because faithful saints are too few.

The faith once for all delivered to the saints
Will make people loyal and strong;
Persecutions they bear, great sorrows they share
Because they take Jesus along.
Many saints have been chained because of their faith,
And into dark dungeons were cast;
They trusted in God, they would not recant,
Victorious they were at the last.

Saint Peter was kept in prison one time,
And prayer without ceasing was made
Of the church unto God who keepeth His own,
He escaped without human aid.
The saints were still praying when Peter arrived
And knocked for an entrance to gain;
The maid was surprised, and so were they all,
Their prayer had not been in vain.

Many people are bound in the prison of sin,
Who are helpless to make themselves free;
If the church had the faith of the saints of the past,
Conversions more often would be.
Maany churches today are failing to reach
The sinners who arel ost from the fold;
They don't have the faith to go in Christ's name
As our fathers, and saints did of old.

SUNSET'S PROPHECY.

(These verses were written by Dr. Robert G. Harbutt, Canandaigua, N. Y., a Congregational minister 82 years old, who has given most of his life to the Christian ministry.)

Sunset comes gowned in a many-hued light,
As it tempers with glory the coming of the night;
It is fleeting, and passes, but lingers to say;
"Fear not the darkness, it comes not to stay."

The sunrise, right glorious, breaks forth in the east,
The darkness has vanished, earth wakes, its rest ceased,
And the beauty of the dawn speeds man forth on his way,
Thus the "evening and morning" make one perfect day.

So too, when comes on us the dark shadow we dread,
May death seem like a sunset toward which life has led,
And our evening sky glow with Hope's promise of morn,
The sunrise of Heaven, with its radiant dawn.

CHRIST AND ETERNAL LIFE.

(An Easter Meditation.)

By H. H. Smith.

Socrates has been called "the noblest product of the highest heathen civilization." Without the Bible or any Scriptural revelation to guide him, several hundred years before the birth of Christ, this remarkable man spoke eloquently and convincingly of his belief in immortality. But when he faced death, though unafraid, there was a lack of assurance, expressed in the "ifs" he used: "If death be a removal from hence to another place; . . . if at least what is said to be true."

With admiration any sympathy for those who earnestly sought after God in the twilight—as did Socrates and many others—the Christian thanks God that he has a "more sure word of prophecy." As Dr. George B. Stevens says: "The Christian man may accept and give full weight to all the arguments which speculation has developed in favor of the doctrine of immortality; but although all these are estimated at their highest value, it is chiefly the calm look of Jesus into that world of mystery and His reassuring words which carry firm conviction to his heart and in which he securely rests."

The word of Jesus with reference to eternal life is indeed reassuring. He teaches that He is the source of the true life, and that to be in fellowship with Him is to possess a life that is deathless. "He that believeth on the Son hath eternal life." To be in fellowship with Christ is to be in fellowship with God. "I came forth and am come from God." "He that hath seen Me, hath seen the Father." Eternal life is the more abundant life, the life of God in the soul of man, producing "richness and fullness of being." It has no reference to time or place. It is the normal life of the true child of God, begun here upon earth, but uninterrupted by death. "Whosoever liveth and believeth on Me, shall never die." Physical death is inevitable, but those who fully trust in Jesus Christ have no anxiety as to the future life. "Whoso eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life; and I will raise him up at the last day."

Let us take a more practical view of Easter and the lessons it teaches. That there is a future life for the true child of God, the Scriptures plainly teach; but just what that life is, we are not fully informed. If we long to know more than has been revealed, we should content ourselves with the thought that God has made known to us all that is necessary for us to know in this life. Speculation as to the nature of the future life has great attraction for many, who are in danger of being too much concerned with unprofitable speculations, while the more practical matters are neglected. The all-absorbing question should be: Have I this eternal life of which Jesus speaks with so much emphasis? Is my daily life committed to God my Father and am I daily living in fellowship with Christ my Lord and Saviour? Have I witness in my heart that I am a child of God? "He that believeth on the Son hath the witness in himself." Unless we have eternal life now, what hope have we of eternal life beyond the grave? "He that hath not the Son, hath not the life."

The entrance of Christ into the heart, bringing eternal life, produces a marvelous change in the whole life. When John Wesley "trusted in Christ, Christ alone for salvation," an assurance was given him that his sins were all taken away, and he felt his heart "strangely warmed." But this inward experience was not all. The outward expression is significant. Immediately following this experience he says: "I began to pray with all my heart for those who had in a more especial manner despitefully used me and persecuted me."

When the Christian comes into the possession of this eternal life, as it is called, there is a great change in his attitude toward his fellow man. What better proof of his conversion could a soldier give than that given by an English soldier who said: "We marched close to the enemy and when I saw them in their camp my heart was moved toward them in love and pity for their souls."

We live in a distressed world today. It is a testing time for those who profess to be followers of Jesus Christ. If we are unmoved by the sin and sorrow and suffering of the world today, how can we claim to be followers of Him who had compassion on the multitudes and wept over Jerusalem? If we are to have eternal life beyond the grave we must have it here and now. And to have it here and now we must live in fellowship with Him whose love and compassion led Him to lay down His life for a lost world. A spirit of good-will and sympathy and helpfulness toward our fellow man, manifesting itself in practical ways, is the surest evidence that we are abiding in Him Who is the Way and the Truth and the Life.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctriues and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE VICTORY THAT OVERCOMES.

We, all of us, want victory. The sole reason why we do not achieve it is that we are not willing to pay the price. None really desire failure and yet many do fail. The fault is their own. They seek delight, joy, satisfaction for the moment—and they, in the moment, have their reward.

After all, my readers, would we not better go to the Word and depend upon what it says and rest our case there. Look, it was the wise man writing, Proverbs 21:31; "Victory is of Jehovah." So victory comes from God. How? Well, turn again to the Word: I John 5:4: "This is the victory that hath overcome the world, even our faith." Search the Word all you will and you will find victory provided on no other basis or condition—faith. The conquering man, the conquering Church, is the man, is the Church of Faith.

That is why our Lord created the Church and why He laid upon the Church the missionary task and burden—that He might develop and have in the Church faith—that faith that overcomes the world.

It is quite easy for us to be benevolent and give our money to a cause or a person we can see and hear and know about. But the inspired writer says: "We walk, not by sight, but by faith."

Through missions we exercise faith in a Saviour who can reach to the very lowest depths of human depravity and save to the uttermost. It doesn't take much faith to believe in a Saviour who can save those reared in a wholesome and an agreeable atmosphere and under conditions most favorable to free and easy living. But how about believing in a Saviour who has the power to reach down beneath the mud and muck and mire of the world's sin and idolatry, and save those who have indeed been unfortunate.

Arthur T. Pierson, writing in a recent Missionary Review, gives this instance of the saving power of our Lord because there were some at least who had faith in their Lord to believe He could.

"Some of the most wonderful evidences of the Power of the Gospel are those we saw among the former cannibals of New Guinea. When Charles Abel went out there about forty years ago these people had no conception of God or of spiritual things. They were living in the deepest degradation, obsessed by fear and continually fighting and devouring one another. One Sunday morning we saw and heard forty-eight new converts from these people stand up and individually confess Christ as their Lord and Saviour. Twenty-three of them were won by one lay, self-supporting Papaun evangelist who devoted his week-ends to personal work.

"No man is so low that he cannot be lifted to new life in Christ by the power of God. This is our greatest encouragement. One day at a communion service in Kwato a New Guinea man rose and said: 'A few years ago Paula and I were chiefs of two rival tribes who fought and ate one another. He captured my wife and according to our custom I could not be satisfied until I had been revenged. Then I met Jesus and today we are brothers in Christ who died for us both. We know now what forgiveness and love can do. Today we are both serving as elders in the Church and will soon pass the elements that represent His body broken and His blood shed for us. This could not be true of us if the missionaries of Jesus had not come to teach us the Gospel of God's love in Christ.'"

Let us, my brethren and sisters in the Lord, exercise this faith in our Lord, for it is the victory that overcomes for us the world and gives us assurance of that which the world cannot take away. Shall we not now bring home to our people, at this Resurrection and triumphant season, this message of victory that overcometh? J. O. A.

ONE PASTOR PLANS A PROGRAM.

We wonder how many of our pastors are seriously seeking to lay the missionary burden upon, and thus bring the missionary blessing to, the hearts of his people? The object, the primary object, of our Lord in building His church was to create a missionary organization, a body of believers who would give His gospel to all creatures.

So, unless the church is missionary in spirit, activity and giving, it is either static and gets nowhere, or becomes merely a complacent fraternal order or a benevolent society.

Some of our pastors at least desire to see their church a truly spiritual power house, going out in power to save souls nearby and far off. Hence they seek to beget in their people a passion for soul-saving, close by and far off. One pastor sends us the outline of his sermonic activity during this, our mission period. Maybe it will help some others to see it, and so without this pastor's knowledge or consent we present his program:

"On the first Sunday in April I will preach a Missionary Communion sermon. Text: 'And He is the porpitiation for our sins: and not for our sins only, but also for the sins of the whole world.' I John 2:2. Following those two, I shall preach on: 'The Early Church and the Missionary Movement'; 'Our Church and the Missionary Movement;' 'The Individual Christian and the Missionary Movement.' So here is my series:

The Missionary Movement (A Vision)
Christ and the Missionary Movement (A Person)
The Early Church and the Missionary Movement (A Passion)
Our Church and the Missionary Movement (A Program)
The Christian and the Missionary Movement (An Application)

" I desire your prayers for my help from the Lord in laying these things upon my congregation, that they may hear gladly and respond generously."

If all our pastors will do something like that this Church of ours will tell the world a different story of progress and power than that it has been telling the past few years. May God help and direct our faithful pastors to catch the vision and have the passion for giving our blessed Gospel to all peoples, near-by and far off.

THE VIRGINIA VALLEY CENTRAL CONFERENCE.

The Virginia Valley Central Conference has a custom of holding a one-day mid-year session. A regular annual session of the Conference is held in August, usually. The mid-year session of the Conference is held always at Bethlehem Church. This church is centrally located on the Winchester pike and is easily reached at any time of the year. The day was cloudy and rainy, but a good number came for the session.

The Conference was called to order by the president, Rev. B. J. Earp, who opened the Conference with a brief prayer. Song service was conducted by Dr. M. L. Weekley, pastor of the entertaining church. Rev. Ivan Smith, pastor of Winchester Church, conducted the devotional services for both morning and afternoon sessions. Rev. F. Ervin Hyde, of Browns Summit, N. C., gave a very helpful address on missions. The president of Elon College spoke in the interest of the college, emphasizing the place of the college in the educational life and leadership of the church, and urged support of the college by individuals and churches. The Conference adjourned for lunch. Lunch was served in the nearby public school building.

The president of Elon College called an informal meeting of pastors and church officials prior to the afternoon session. During this conference, the affairs of the college were discussed, many questions were asked by interested ministers and members, and a clearer understanding of the college and its problems was reached.

The women of the Conference, under the direction of Mrs. A. W. Andes, gave an interesting program. Mrs. K. H. Sale read a most interesting and informative paper, outlining the fields and requirements of the United Church from the standpoint of our missionary program. Mrs. L. E. Smith gave an inspirational address on "Our Women and Missions." Dr .Weekley, who was placed on the program for an address, because of the lateness of the hour asked for the privilege of making his address later.

For the first time, the Valley Conference had the privilege of welcoming the Rev. Ivan Smith, his wife, and his mother. The Conference is glad to number these efficient leaders among its official family. L. E. S.

It is good for a man to be checked, crossed, disappointed, made to feel his own ignorance, weakness, folly—made to feel his need of God; to feel that in spite of all his cunning and self-confidence, he is no better off in this world than in a dark forest, unless he has a Father in Heaven who loves him with an eternal love, and a Holy Spirit in Heaven who will give him a right judgment in all things, and a Saviour in Heaven who can be touched with the feeling of his infirmities.

A NEW RELIGION FOR THE NEW AGE.

By S. M. Smith.

That we are entering upon a new era in world history is evident. From whatever angle we figure, this seems to be the indication. In no period for centuries past have conditions been just what we find them today. It is said that the history of the race repeats itself every two thousand years. Astronomers and astrologers tell us that our planet is now passing out of the Picean and entering the Agnarian age. These transitions occur every two thousand years. Christ came to earth approximately two thousand years ago, ushering in the age from which we are now emerging. Are we arriving at a time when the coming of another world avator is in order? Be that as it may, the individual who thinks in terms of present-day conditions must admit that we have arrived at a time when something is necessary if civilization and the race are to be saved.

It is evident that conditions cannot continue as they are. Men capable of rendering an intelligent conclusion say that the economic system of the world is all wrong. We have built a civilization based on selfishness and greed rather than Christian brotherhood.

The problem of the world, therefore, is not primarily economic but spiritual. Throughout the world there is a feeling of insecurity based on fear. Nations are suspicious of each other. International compacts are no longer binding. what then have been the contributing factors in this "change of heart" on the part of the nations of the earth? If the trouble with the situation in which we find ourselves is spiritual, then to what extent is the Church involved? The Church is the only institution that assumes, or to which has been delegated, the obligation of molding the spiritual life of the race. In this, she has had an open field. Why, then, have we arrived where we are? Would we be justified in claiming that the message which the Church has brought has not been sufficient to meet the needs of men and of nations as they have presented themselves? The fundamental principles of the message which the Church has brought have probably been sufficient, but the trouble, we believe, has been in the manner of presentation. The teachings of the Christ are all-sufficient and never-changing. Our conception, however, of how the application of these principles may help in solving life's problems is another matter. The conception of the individual determines the conception of the nation. Religion is not a fixed, but a fluent thing. Its application must change to meet constantly changing conditions. At no time have changes come so rapidly as at present. The world is in a mad race to keep up with itself, not knowing what another day may bring forth. The past century passed all preceding centuries in the increase of knowledge and in the spread of the spirit of scientific inquiry and of the passion for seeking after truth. We venture the following as suggestive of what the new religion for the new age will be:

1. It will not be based upon authority, either spiritual or otherwise. The decline of reliance upon absolute authority and its noticeable increase in the public mind, is most significant. Men and women in every walk of life are beginning to study and think for themselves, realizing that, after all, each is responsible for the living of his or her own life. Dogmatic teaching of man-made creeds is giving way to liberalized thinking. The Church has too long made a slave of those who subscribe to its tenets. This refusal to accept age-old beliefs in certain principles, more or less theoretic, is noticeable everywhere—in government, in education, in church, in business and even in the family. The present generation is willing, and indeed often eager to be led; but it refuses to be driven.

It demands an understanding of the grounds for authoritative dictation. As a rule, Christian Churches, Roman, Greek and Protestant—have relied heretofore mainly upon the exercise of authority in extending their teaching, but these are each becoming more liberal.

2. It is hardly necessary to say that in the new religion for the new age, while there will be no personification of the forces of nature as was true in the early days of religion when men worshipped the Sun, Moon and Stars, there will be a recognition of Deity in every manifestation of Nature. Man will learn indeed what it means to look to the hills for strength, as well as to look within for needed strength to meet the problems of life.

The orthodox Church of today has taught too much, and too long, a separateness of man from God when there can, in fact, be no such relationship. The idea of a far-away Heaven where a stern, sin-avenging God sits upon a throne to mete out absolute judgment and punishment to those who may not be able to live up to the requirements of life here on this plane, the anticipation, following the ending of this life in so-called death, of a trial in the Court of Heaven when the records will be searched while the Recording Angel strikes a debit or a credit balance, the final rendering of a verdict, the pronouncement of a penalty of everlasting punishment or the award of a crown of everlasting life—this teaching has taken much of the joy out of living for many a would-be, devout Christian.

The new religion will preach and teach that the "Kingdom of God is within you," that man is not a "poor, weak worm of the dust," but the "Child of the King" and therefore entitled to an everlasting inheritance in all the Kingdom holds, that God, our Heavenly Father resides, not in a far-away Heaven where he may be reached by persistent importuning but that He lives daily and hourly in this same "tabernacle of clay" which we ourselves inhabit.

3. The new religion for the new age will insist that men be honest, fair, and tolerant—honest in admitting that adherence to man-made creeds has not, and can not constitute a sufficient standard of Christian living, that what a man may say he does or does not believe, is not so important as the exemplification of the Christ spirit in the everyday life he lives.

4. The new religion for the new age will not be gloomy, ascetic or maledictory. It will not deal chiefly with sickness, sorrow, pain and death, but rather with health, joy, life and happiness. It will not be so much concerned with the evil and the ugly in the world as the recognition and the interpretation of the good and the beautiful.

It will teach that evil in the world is not due to the presence of a personal Devil "going about like a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour," but rather to the accumulated vibration of destructive thinking on the part of man himself. It will give to the world a new conception of God. It will teach that Infinite Spirit pervades the universe as that same Spirit lives in the fleshly body of man, and acts consciously or unconsciously in every atom in the universe on the full acceptance of the new interpretation of life we will be better able to appreciate what Paul meant when he said: "In Him we live, move and have our being." It will be thoroughly monotheistic. God will be interpreted not as a Being with a form as man, but rather as a great Infinite Force, not removed, but indwelling in every living creature.

God is so absolutely imminent in all things animate and inanimate, that no mediation is necessary between Him and the smallest object of His creation. In His moral attributes, He is to every man the multiplication to infinity of all the noblest, best and most potent qualities that the mind of man could ever conceive or imagine.

We do not have to beg God to send His blessing upon us. His store-house is full of all that we need to meet the requirements for a happy, joyous and successful life. These things are ours when we are ready and capable of using them to His glory and to our good and the good of others.

We must get away from the old idea and teaching that once upon a time a Supreme Being called God created a world, including man, starting in on Monday morning and finishing upon Saturday night and that He then set things a-going, withdrew and left the universe to be operated by physical laws.

The metaphysical doctrine of Omniscient, Omni-present, Omni-potent, All-pervading, Infinite Spirit, informing, inspiring, directing the whole of Creation at every instant of time, and throughout infinite space, calls somewhat into question the old idea that Spirit and matter are separate, distinct and non-related, that evil is constantly warring against good, that man's wickedness is pitted against God's righteousness, and Satan is daily challenging Christ.

The new religion will reject the conception that man is an alien, in a world alienated from God except at certain times and under certain conditions. It will also reject the idea that we are born in sin and shapen in iniquity and that man's days on this planet are designed to be few and full of trouble, that he is a fallen being, hopelessly wicked and that his natural tendency is ever away from God.

Lastly, the new religion will teach, indeed insist, that man's boasted "personal liberty" cannot and must not extend beyond that point where its exercise begins to work injury to his neighbor that the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man constitute the only standard by which man may justly live the life he came to this earth to live.

ENCOURAGEMENT IN THE HOME CHURCH.

In these days of financial troubles, and other difficulties in the home church, we are sometimes tempted to discouragement because we cannot support more workers, and because of unresponsiveness of church people, the apparent lack of results, and increasing indifference and unbelief. We can be of good cheer, Christ has "overcome the world," although worldly men have not acknowledged His lordship. In His name we also can overcome and can enjoy the fruits of His victory. Do we ever stop to think of the immense number of obscure volunteer Christian workers who are carrying on and are faithful witnesses to Christ in our churches and Sunday schools; in rescue missions and on street corners; through such organizations as the Pocket Testament League with 2,000,000 members; in summer conferences (like the Keswick Conferences in New Jersey, Canada and England); in the summer schools of missions and such influential gatherings as the remarkable Florida Chain of Missionary Assemblies? How many thousands of devoted Christian laymen and women are serving on mission boards and similar organizations, large and small, in schools and in Christian homes. All Christians are not idle or indifferent or selfish. Hundreds of thousands unknown to us but known to God are loyal, devoted, self-sacrificing followers of Christ.—Missionary Review.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

During the last week the writer received a letter requesting additional information concerning the Conference Apportionments. It seems that there is much cofusion, in the minds of ministers and laymen, as to the plan adopted by the last session of the Southern Convention. Since this request came from a minister who wishes his questions answered in the SUN, this letter is an attempt to clarify the situation.

Here are the questions, in brief. I. Is it permissible to credit Sunday School monthly missionary offerings on the Conference Apportionment for Missions? 2. If a Church through its Special Offerings and Sunday School sends to the proper authorities amounts for Elon College, Religious Education, Superannuation, Missions, etc., equivalent to the Conference Apportionment, and then sends its Conference Apportionment to Conference, should the Church divide this Conference Apportionment; and if it fail to give any amount to Convention Fund, what would be done about the matter?

In answer to these questions, the writer wishes to make it clear that he is not speaking for the Convention. The Convention did not clearly attempt to answer these questions. It was not possible to anticipate all the questions which have been raised since the Convention adjourned. It is this writer's opinion, however, that when the Conference makes an apportionment for the local churches which is equal to the amount designated by the Convention, and Convention Fund, it is the privilege of the local church to determine its own method of raising these various funds. It is impossible to separate the church and Sunday school. For practical purposes they are one, in many churches. Special offerings by Sunday schools and churches for any of the Convention enterprises represented by the Conference Apportionments should be credited to the local church, if it is the wish of the donors to do so. Convention officials, boards, and institutions have no power over the local church in such a matter. The local church can determine its own course and method in raising these funds. The vital thing is to raise the money in full.

The second question is vital and should have more consideration than can be expressed in one column of the SUN. Briefly, however, the Convention entirely changed its method of distributing funds sent to the Convention by the Conferences. For the past eight or ten years the Conferences have sent Conference Apportionments to the Convention Treasurer in a lump sum to be distributed by the Convention Committee on Finance. Under the present plan each church is apportioned a definite amount for each of the Conference and Convention funds, and this apportionment is the basis of dividing the money for the various Convention enterprises. The local church divides the money sent to Conference. The Conference sends to the Convention Treasurer the money sent to the Conference by the local churches. The local church has a record of each fund, and the Conference records will show the total amount sent to the Convention, for Convention Home Missions, Foreign Missions, Elon College, Superannuation Fund, Convention Fund and Christian Education. These facts and figures will be given in the Statistical table of each Conference following this plan. This will mean, of course, a revision of the Report Blanks and the Statistical Tables.

The Eastern Virginia Conference in 1934 revised the Apportionments for the various Convention Funds and increased the Conference Apportionments about 95 per cent. This Conference asks the churches to raise $4,000 for Missions, $2,000 for Convention Fund, $4,875 for Elon College, $1,000 for Superannuation and $400 for Christian Education. This is considerably more than has been raised heretofore for these funds by the Special Offerings, Conference Apportionments and Sunday school offerings. No fund will suffer by crediting the Sunday school offerings on Conference Apportionments—if the Conference meets the requirements of the Convention.

CHOOSING A COLLEGE.

Colleges exist for students—for those who desire further scholastic preparation for life's work. Colleges have distinctive characteristics, an atmosphere all their own. A college comes pretty nearly having a personality. No two colleges are alike. They may have identical curricula, but they cannot have identical spirits. A person chooses a college somewhat along the same line that he chooses his friends. Many things enter into the choice of a college. Equipment, faculty, alumni, and atmosphere have much to do with the appeal of an institution.

At this particular season of the year, hundreds and literally thousands of young men and young women throughout this country are graduating from high schools. Visions for them are beginning to widen definitely. For the first time perhaps, they are endeavoring to charter the sea of life upon which they are definitely venturing. To sail life's sea with success, they realize that they must be more thoroughly schooled in the technical requirements of successful living. They find here and there institutions with wide-open doors, persistently inviting them to come and receive what they have to offer in training and guidance. These appeals are of such variety—coming from so many directions—that the average young student is more or less confused, well nigh bewildered. He listens to the "line" given by field representatives and the appeals of interested alumni. He reads catalogues and every kind of literature intended to propound the virtues of individual institutions.

What is the merit of it all? What are the deciding factors? Whither is he to go? Where is he to cast his lot? First of all, he should make sure that the college to which he goes is equipped to offer the advantages that he requests; second, that its faculty is sufficiently trained and experienced in the subjects offered; third, that the institution has the right kind of atmosphere (the atmosphere of the institution has as much to do with thorough training as the scholastic achievements of its faculty); fourth, that the college proposes and is able to administer in some definite way to the religious life of the individual. Whether a youngster be a Christian or not, he does possess a religious nature; it is a part of his "make-up." No one can be educated without a knowledge of the scriptures. No man can be properly trained without the training and development of his religious nature.

In the founding of Elon College, the church was very careful to see that provisions were made for the training and development of the religious life of its students. This has not only been a tradition, but it has been a fact and a practice on Elon College campus for all these years. It has always stood for the highest in education, the best in morals, and the truest in religion. Its equipment is of the very best, its faculty is of the highest type, and its atmosphere makes an indispensable contribution to the character of the students.

This is an appeal, definitely, to the parents of the Christian Church who have sons and daughters ready for college. Elon College is our institution, and we propose to render the best possible service for the young men and young women who come. At present, members of the Christian Church in the student body, from a numerical standpoint, take the second place. We are glad to have others, but we are appealing for our own. Won't you please send us names of prospective students from our own Church? The prospects for another year are most encouraging—more so than at any time within the past years. With the cooperation of alumni, friends, and the entire Church, we can increase the student body of Elon College to the limit of our capacity.

L. E. SMITH.

FROM WADLEY, ALABAMA.

I don't think I have written the SUN recently about my church work. I am continuing my services at Rock Springs, and New Harmony, and with the going of winter and the coming of spring I feel sure that work will "pick up" at both places. There are some loyal soldiers of the cross at each place.

I am serving McGuire's Chapel, my old home church which was without a pastor last year. Of course Spiritual interest there is at a low ebb, but one can see signs of more life and strength. The membership there is badly scattered, but I am very hopeful for the future of this old church.

Last Sunday I had an appointment at Antioch Congregational Church, near New Site, Alexander City, Route 5. They have not had a regular pastor in several years. Their house of worship was in a very dilapidated condition, but the friends and neighbors have recovered it, and they seem very anxious to have regular services, so I have agreed to serve them the rest of this year. A fine congregation greeted us there last Sunday. Not many members of that church but the whole community seems to want to see the old church revived again. This is the oldest Congregational church in Alabama. I do not know the date of its organization.

Fraternally,
G. H. VEAZEY.

TO REVEAL GOD.

Christ came into the world to give mankind a better understanding of God. This was sadly needed. The Greeks were worshiping gods that were as weak and immoral as themselves. The Romans were building temples and offering sacrifices to their emperor. The Jews had clothed Him with great mystery, and had pushed Him back behind the veil, so that the average worshipper was led to think of Him as a God afar off. They remembered that He is holy, just and powerful, but they had not learned of His great love. By bridging the gulf between the unseen and the seen, between God and man, Christ brought God very near to us. He taught the world to pray, "Our Father," thus drawing mankind close enough to feel the everlasting arms.—Edgar T. Read.

A Story for the Children

GRANDFATHER'S WINTER JACKKNIFE.

A short time ago I came across an old jackknife. It was somewhat larger than the knives that boys use today, and its large blade was worn more than half way through because of the many times it had been sharpened. I recognized that old tool as one that belonged to my grandfather, and he always spoke of it as his "winter" jackknife.

As as boy, I used to sit beside grandfather and watch him use that knife, wishing that I were as skillful as he was in making things. In my eagerness, I asked him, occasionally, to let me try it on a piece of wood; but he would never allow any of his grandsons to touch that knife—a winter jackknife was too precious a tool to be placed in the hands of a boy who had yet to learn the art of useful whittling.

One day I asked grandfather why he called this a winter jackknife and learned that a boy's best knife was always kept for work that was done by the boys during the winter months. They might use a cheap, light knife when playing around or cutting things that were not needed around the home, but the winter jackknife was always used just as a carpenter might keep his best saw or chisel for the finer work he had to do.

Few people realize that even up to seventy-five years ago the jackknife was one of the most important tools of the home especially in the country. We might say that our great-grandfathers lived in a wooden age, for a great many of the every day utensils were made of wood, as metal articles were scarce. Therefore whittling was an art with boys of those times, and it was in winter that much of this whittling was done. The knife was for making things that were of some value or use, and not merely for passing away the time. More than once I have heard my grandfather say, "Do not waste a piece of wood; if you are going to whittle make something useful, even if it is only a wedge."

Let us see what was done with that winter jackknife. There were big things and little, home articles and work that was brought from the cooper and dish-turner. Ploughs and harrows were made of wood; carts, even the wheels, were of wood throughout, except for the rims. The knife was used for smoothing rough places and fitting parts together.

The cooper was one of the most important men in any village, turning out barrels, casks, and kegs and he needed countless numbers of hoops that were cut from saplings by boys with good knives. The dish-turner made wooden dishes and mixing utensils, such as bowls and mortars. The boys helped him by using knives to smooth rough edges and spots where the larger tools of his trade would not fit. The shoemaker was the third man of note in the village, and for him great quantities of wooden shoe pegs were made by the boys. These are a few of the things that boys did to earn money or merchandise in their spare time.

At home, the jackknife had a very important place because of the demand for small articles made of wood. Pins, bungs for pickle barrels, faucets, pestles, butter paddles and boards were constantly used in the house, and there were many things to be made for the work on the farm. These included cart stakes, handles for various tools, such as rakes, hoes and shovels, whipstocks and teeth for hayrakes. As time could not be taken for making such things, the work had to be done during the season of the year when farm work was lightest, and that, of course, was in winter.

One of the most important articles turned out by the winter jackknife was the flail. Every season, when the grain was threshed by hand, many flails were broken or worn out. The flail consisted of two parts—a staff, or handle, and a swindle or swiple. These were made from carefully selected wood, whittled down to just the right shape and joined together by a leather strap.

The axe helve was another item of winter work. The wood was rather hard to work, its grain had to be just right, and to whittle the helve into shape so that it would have a good balance required a great deal of skill and patience. Yet it was very fascinating work, and when a boy became fairly expert he could earn extra pennies by making helves to sell at the village store or to individuals.

When buildings needed shingling, the boys set to work with their jackknives and laid in a supply of shingles, usually a season ahead and enough for a supply in case of emergency.

Occasionally, boys used their knives in carving baseboards and door casings in living room or parlor, to make such rooms far more attractive, and much of the antique hand-carved material found today was the work of some winter jackknife. Then there were odds and ends of things that have almost completely disappeared today, such as cowles, keelers, runlets, piggins and noggins, besides the parts of spinning wheels and yarn reels.

That was the work of a knife such as this old one I found. What a story such a knife could tell if it could only talk!—Walter K. Putney in Advance.

"Jesus is He 'that holdeth the scepter'—the symbol first of kingly right and authority, and next of righteousness and justice. . . To the King's enemies the scepter is a 'rod of iron.' They cannot rejoice in the justice which they defy. To the King's willing subjects it is indeed golden, a beautiful thing, and a most precious thing. We admire and glory in His absolute justice and righteousness; it satisfies the depths of our moral being—it is so strong, so perfect. Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need."—Frances Ridley Havergal, in "My King."

MISSIONS

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., Secretary.

OUR MISSION OFFERING.

Dr. Atkinson, Secretary of Missions, writing from Florida Sanitarium, and appealing to our churches to stand by during our Mission Period of March, April, May and June, says: "Lack of physical strength will not just now allow me to raise my voice with you in this time of need and privilege, but I lift my heart prayer daily that your voice, by the power of God, shall ring out in clarion tones: 'Go preach the Gospel to all creatures.'" He is appealing to all churches in our convention to make a liberal offering that the work our Mission Board is doing may not be crippled. "The purpose of the church is to preach the Gospel of Jesus Christ and to give that Gospel to a lost world."

Will we of the First Christian Church do our part at this time? The various enterprises that our convention support are dependent on the local churches for their support. We are under obligations to do our part. As long as we are the recipients of God's bounty, just so long are we obligated to share. If we appreciate the work of our Mission Secretary, let us show it now by rallying to the work at a time when he is physically unable to render active assistance in the cause to which his life has been dedicated.—Greensboro Church Bulletin.

A YOUNG MEN'S MISSIONARY CONGRESS.

Three of the events in the past half century that have most powerfully stimulated interest and activity in world-wide Christian missions have been the formation of the Student Volunteer Movement in 1886, the Ecumenical Missionary Conference held in New York in 1900, and the establishment of the Laymen's Missionary Movement in 1910. The first enlisted educated youth, the second awakened the Church as a whole, and the third aroused Christian laymen to a more sympathetic and adequate support of the work. All were born in prayer, and were promoted by prayer and sacrifice; they were based on faith in the Bible as the Word of God, in Jesus Christ as the Son of God and in the need of all men for salvation through His atoning work on the Cross.

Today one of the greatest needs is a new awakening among the young men of the Church—potential leaders of tomorrow. They are generally interested in making a better world but if they are not intelligently and sacrificially committed to the program and ideals of Christ at home and abroad, who is to carry on the work?

To bring together young men who are interested in the missionary enterprise, and to enlist others, a "National Young Men's Missionary Congress" is to be held on Chicago from May 2nd through May 5th. This is a fitting way to mark the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Laymen's Missionary Movement under whose auspices the congress will meet. Prof. Arthur H. Compton of the University of Chicago, the well-known winner of the Nobel award in physics, is chairman of the Committee on Arrangements. Other prominent Christian laymen, pastors and executives are also cooperating with Mr. F. J. Michel, executive secretary of the Movement.

The general theme announced is "Jesus Christ and the World Today." This will be presented by addresses by well-known speakers and its various phases considered in a series of twenty simultaneous group meetings under the leadership of Dr. Cleland B. McAfee of New York and Rev. C. O. Hawley of Indianapolis. The four main topics to be discussed at the platform meetings will be (1) The world's need and the forces bidding for world power; (2) Our heritage as sons of missionary forefathers; (3) our Christian resources and (4) The power of Christ.

Among the twenty-four speakers who have already agreed to take part in the congress are President Ralph C. Hutchison of Washington and Jefferson College, Dr. Robert E. Speer and Dr. Ralph E. Diffendorfer of New York, Mr. Livingstone P. Moore of Summit, N. J., Dr. C. Darby Fulton of Nashville, Rev. Leonard Outerbridge of Boston and Rev. Roy M. Burkhart of Columbus.

Men today, probably as never before, recognize the chaotic condition of the world and the need for a Saviour with a divine program and with the wisdom and power of God. Political, economic, social and intellectual remedies will not suffice to save us from destruction. Spiritual life is needed to change individuals and to bring men into harmony with God and His program. To change America, or any one nation, is not sufficient; all men and all nations must be changed. Who but God can effect such a transformation? This program of change represents the purpose and program of the whole missionary movement.

Dr. John R. Mott, who was present at a preliminary meeting to launch the Congress, writes: "The timeliness and importance of the Young Men's Congress continues to grow on me. It is highly desirable that each of our Christian communions shall put forth extraordinary efforts to be represented by the very flower of our younger lay forces. It will do more to help solve the many problems that press upon our churches than any single measure I could emphasize.

The success of this Congress depends on three things: (1) the spiritual character and messages of the speakers; (2) the ability to bring together a truly representative number of earnest young men who will respond to the call of Christ, and (3) the amount and vitality of prayerful preparation for the guidance of God and to insure the manifestation of His power in the Congress and in its outcomes.—Editorial in Missionary Review.

GIVING BY A CHRISTIAN.

The following list of questions is offered for your careful study. The money matters in a Christian's life are far more than the transfer of some coins from a person to an institution.

1. Have you made a careful study of your own giving?
2. Do you know how much you actually give; what share of your income; your real motives in giving?
3. Are giving and worship at all related in your life?
4. What are adequate motives for giving?
5. What should giving do for the giver?
6. To what causes should we give?
7. What is meant by sacrificial giving?
8. How much should one give?
9. What do the scriptures say about giving?
10. Will reduction of budgets solve the financial part of our missionary or benevolence problem?
11. How can we lift giving to a stewardship basis?
12. How does giving constitute a crucial test of unselfishness?
13. How is giving related to the spiritual life?
14. How much should one know about the causes to which he gives? How far follow their needs and programs?
15. How large a share of one's giving should ordinarily go through his church's treasury?
16. Is any system in giving necessary, or is it better to give "when I feel like it," or "whatever I feel I can spare," or "to what interests me," or "whenever I go to church," or "the same that others are giving?"
17. Is giving an occasional matter, like taking a dose of medicine, or an elective course? How vital is giving anyway?
18. Is it ever wrong to give?
19. What is the difference between giving money to the church or raising money for it?
20. Have you read Dr. Agar's book, "'Church Profit Making"?

Your Christian Stewardship Commission is exceedingly anxious for you to form a discussion group in your church using its syllabus, "The Christian Acquisition and Use of Money." Sixty cents per dozen copies.

SHOPPING IN NANKING ROAD.

(A Missionary's wife reports four interviews with Chinese clerks.)

By HELEN DAVIES, SHANGHAI.

Shanghai is a place of unfailing interest. One day in Sincere's big department store in Nanking Road, the boy waiting on me said, "Are you a jiao-huei shang tih hen?" (A church person.) I smiled and said, "Yes, are you?" He said, "Yes and this store is owned by Christians." I asked him where he learned English and he said: "Oh, this store has a night school. They teach us English and business methods, and dzan-chen (ap prove) Christianity."

A few days later in a shoe shop, the young clerk was so kind, I said to him, "Where did you learn English?" He replied, "I go to the Moore Memorial night school." I found that he was a Christian and I left him beaming.

Later, in a leather-goods shop the clerk said, "I studied in a mission school, and I am a Christian." An older man in the store joined in our conversation.

Believe it or not, once again in a tailor shop, the head man quoted a price and added, "For Christians, we deduct 10 per cent." When he said he was a Christian, I burst out, "Praise the Lord, I am so glad."

I went out rejoicing. What impressed me most was to discover that in four separate business places in Shanghai, Chinese business men were not ashamed to admit that they are Christions.—Missionary Review.

WHAT CAN THE SMALL CHURCH DO?

C. O. Dunham is pastor of a church of forty-six members—a rural church in Vermont. He has a missionary education plan for his church for the present year which is an eloquent answer to those who say that the small church can do little or nothing along this line. Some of his plans have been carried out in other years, while some are new experiments this year. His program has twelve points:

1. A world friendship reading campaign.
2. A missionary stereopticon lecture one Sunday a month.
3. A church school of missions.
4. An appropriate observance of Christmas.
5. Two missionary books studied during the year in the women's society.
6. A missionary worship service in the Sunday School each month.
7. At least three sermons along missionary lines.
8. A new missionary poster on display every third Sunday.
9. The young people representatives on the missionary committee of the church made responsible for the Christian Endeavor missionary programs.
10. A world friendship bulletin board.
11. The necessary material for the world friendship projects in the Sunday School made available when needed.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church."

Rev. F. C. Lester, Editor, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

BE STILL AND KNOW THAT I AM GOD.

A native of India was riding one day in the swiftly moving automobile of an American tourist. He was amazed and perhaps almost frightened by the speed with which the car moved, and upon reaching his destination, the Indian turned to the American and said, "Master, we have come so fast that I must wait for my spirit to catch up with my body."

We cannot altogether agree with the sentiment of the native, and yet his words are expressive of a bit of truth. You and I do live in a day of haste and hurry. We need only to look about us to be reminded of the fact. Science has truly brought us to the threshold of a new day in the realm of speed, in which our means of transportation on land and sea and in the air have been accelerated to excessive rates. Our means of communication have been harnessed so that today we may see and hear our brothers across the world. Our newspapers are emblazoned with the headlines of the breaking of speed records in many phases of human activity. Indeed, the busy rush of life all about us seems to hum in our ears.

It is true that we may look with a sense of gratitude to these things which science has given us. And yet it is in this maddening maze that human life has been caught and hurried on until oftimes we do not know whither we are going or what it is all for.

In the realm of spirit we face grave perils. It is because this spirit of haste has invaded our lives that our spiritual selves are deteriorating, until, in the truth expressed by the native, we are in danger of losing our spirits in the hurry of life.

But we likewise face the graver danger in our constantly hurried lives—that of not being sure of God. It is true that we have our beliefs about Him and we may cling very earnestly to our thoughts concerning Him; yet, how frequently we fail to give ourselves time to understand and to know Him. In the words of another, "God is inevitable," but it is likewise true that we may deal with Him in such a passive relationship that the surety of His presence in our lives becomes very little.

In the words of the Psalmist then we need to "Be still and know that I am God." Being still is a duty which we might realize to our benefits as Christians. It is not upon the energy of our thought nor the strength of the affection that we put into it that our communion with God depends, but rather upon the calmness and hush of our own souls. God will surely speak if our minds be calm enough. Heaven and earth will truly reflect themselves if the calm of our souls be deep enough. We may shout our pleas to the heavens and cry out our petitions to Him and offer up our burnt offerings, but God will continue to reveal Himself only through the stillness and humbleness of contrite hearts.

Indeed, we do need to be still, for stillness is our very condition of knowing God. Being still is a duty, but knowing God is a privilege which all of us should cherish. But to enjoy the privilege we must accept the duty—"Be still and know that I am God." Often our religion resolves itself into our much talking about Him, but life would be more wonderfully fine if it were more of speaking to Him and of having Him talk to us.

Furthermore, the time we spend with God is the measure of our knowledge of Him. We become acquainted with others as we live our lives with them and partake of their fellowship. We learn to know God as we spend much time in the "secret of His presence." That old hymn which we sing "Take Time To Be Holy" might truly be the song of appeal to our hearts. It does take time to be holy. Growth in grace is not spontaneous no more so than is physical growth, but it requires a tender care of a loving Heavenly Father if it would blossom into fruitfulness of "first the blade and then into the ear."

Again, it is in the stillness that God reveals His desire for our lives. To Moses on the plains of Midian God spoke and revealed His plan for Israel; to Elijah in the wilderness God revealed Himself, not through the wind nor the earthquake but through the still, small voice. In the hush of his soul, midst the sacredness of the temple, Isaiah heard the voice of God and answered "Here am I, Lord, send me." To you and me the Master still bids "Come ye apart and rest awhile." Oftimes He is more desirous to speak to us than we are to hear His voice. Many times the noise of the world prevents us from hearing Him. We need but listen and be still. "Be still, and know that I am God."

WHY JOIN THE CHURCH?

There are some who doubt that it is necessary to join the Church. They should be able to explain their doubts. I cannot. I believe it is important to join the Church.

Jesus started the Church, the disciples spread it abroad, and through nineteen centuries people have kept it going even at the cost of life itself.

Members of the Church are working together to develop Christ-like people all over the world. They seek for the best in everything.

The Church believes in and practices the worship of God. This transforms life, makes life grow to its fullness, and brings joy.

When people face eternity they turn to the Church for help. They want the hope of immortality. They need the comfort of sincere friends and the presence of the Divine Comforter. They want the Church to say nice things about them and lay them away in peace.

The Church tries to make me the best possible person. It gives me the best of friendships, the book that tells the way of life, and the spiritual Christ.

For these reasons, and many others, I want to be a part of the Church, and I want to join while young, well, and able to serve.

ARE YOUNG PEOPLE INTERESTED IN RELIGION?

Some doubt it. Others say yes, a thousand times yes. All I know is what I pick up here and there as I mingle with those whose years are fewer than mine.

Last Sunday was a rainy day. Only a few attended church in my town. But over on the Peninsula more than a hundred Christian Endeavorers journeyed from country-side and city to the appointed place of their Rally to share in an afternoon program. A young society had all of its members present. Several others had most of their members present to consider matters of religion on a rainy afternoon.

For eighteen months I have attended a ministerial association without hearing any great lamentation over the condition of the world or being challenged with the idea that we should make things new. But the young people in this same city are becoming restive about the present conditions, and are beginning plans which they hope will stir the youth of the city.

Yes, I know that many youths are wasting their lives with drink, smoke, movies, and other things which do not contribute to human happiness; but there are many noble youths who seriously give themselves to personal development and Christian activity. Deep within their hearts there is a desire to make life count. This current runs through every life. And they all believe that religion should be a help. The churches may fail the youth of this generation. But the young people are interested in religion. They need leadership to guide them in the processes of getting what the soul needs. The guidance is the business of the Church. And the Church is composed partly of young people.

DON'T FORGET THE MEETING IN RALEIGH.

The meeting of the Youth Fellowship of the Southeast in Raleigh, N. C., on May 2nd, next, should mean a great forward move of the youth in the Southeast. But it can mean this only if there are leaders present from all the states represented in the convention. Of course there will be many present from near Raleigh, and some will go from Virginia, but Florida, Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee, Kentucky, and South Carolina should also have their representatives present.

Even if there is no organized young people's work in these different areas, there should be representatives in Raleigh. We are just getting started in the organized work. We need to counsel together. It is very important to be in the Raleigh meeting.

WHAT WELCOME DO WE GIVE TO CHRIST TODAY?

Christian Endeavor Topic for April 14, 1935

Hymns: "I Need Thee Every Hour"; "Pass Me Not"; "O For a Closer Walk With God"; "Face to Face"; "I Am Happy in the Service of the King"; "I Gave My Life for Thee."

Prayer Hymn: "Into My Heart."

Scripture: Matt. 21:1-11; John 1:11, 12.

Daily Readings:

As Teacher. John 7:46.
As Friend. John 15:14.
As Leader. Matt. 8:19.
As Peacemaker. John 16:33.
As Lord. John 13:13.
As Saviour. John 4:42.

Poem: "Indifference."

When Jesus came to Golgotha, they hanged Him on a tree,
They drove great nails through hands and feet, and made a Calvary;
They crowned Him with a crown of thorns, red were His wounds and deep,
For those were crude and cruel days, and human flesh was cheap.

When Jesus came to Birmingham, they simply passed Him by,
They never hurt a hair of Him, they only let Him die;
For men had grown more tender, and they would not give Him pain,
They only just passed down the street, and left Him in the rain.

Still Jesus cried, "Forgive them, for they know not what they do."
And still it rained the winter rain that drenched Him through and through;
The crowds went home and left the streets without a soul to see,
And Jesus crouched against a wall and cried for Calvary.

Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

THE HEAVENLY FATHER.

Lesson I—April 7, 1935.

Golden Text: "Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear Him."—Psalm 103:13.

Lesson Text: Psalm 103:1-5; Isaiah 40:27-31; Romans 8:14-17; Matthew 6:24-34; Luke 11:2; John 3:3-6; 8:40-47; Hebrews 12:5-1-.

The lessons for this quarter are on the general theme "Some Great Christian Teachings," and the aim of these lessons as stated by the Lesson Committee is, "To help the student to understand and appreciate some of the great teachings of the Christian faith, and to apply these teachings to the life of today." These lessons, then, will serve the double purpose of building us up in the faith, and of inspiring us to service. Those of us who study them and practice them ought to know more and to do better.

Today's lesson begins at the logical place for a series of lessons on the great Christian teachings. It begins with God. "In the beginning God"—that is how the Bible begins. It does not argue about God, it does not attempt to explain God; it simply states that God is, and then proceeds to relate in its pages what God is like, what He does, what He expects of man, and what He offers to man. And series of Christian teachings must begin with God if anything that comes after is to have any meaning and any authority. Christian teachings are predicated upon Christian conception of God. Instead of attempting to cover all the lesson text, or even the verses of the lesson as printed in the quarterly, the writer of these notes desires to call attention to a few striking words in the lesson which have a world of meaning.

The Father.

Jesus refers to "the Father." When He says God is a Father, think of what is involved. It means that the universe is in friendly hands. It means that the power of the universe is controlled by love. It means that the people of the world are children of the God who created, orders, and sustains the world. It means that there is the possibility of communion and fellowship between this great God, and the humblest man or woman, for when God created His children, He created them in His own image. It means that God loves us. It also gives meaning to the discipline of life, for Jesus says that God is a Father, not an indulgent "grandfather." In short, one of the claims to uniqueness by Christianity is its conception of God—no other religion has a conception of the One Holy God of Love Who sustains the relation of a Father to the universe and the people therein. Mere words cannot exhaust the meaning of the term "the Father" but if we understand only dimly what it means, and live up to its implications, it transforms life.

My Father.

Jesus refers again and again to "my Father." God was something more than impersonal forces, or general sentiment. God was personalized love. There was between Jesus and God that intimacy which characterizes the relationship between the father and the son at its highest and best. The words "my Father" came naturally and spontaneously from the lips of Jesus. He knew God as His Father. He felt that God loved Him as a Son. He obeyed God as His Father. The greatest step which any man can make in religion is perhaps the step where he goes from God in general to God as personal. It is not enough to say "the Lord is a shepherd; one does not come to the heart—or the power of religion until he says 'the Lord is my shepherd.'"

Your Father.

"God is my Father," says Jesus. But He says something more. He says, "God is your Father." It is not so difficult to believe that God was the Father of Jesus. That does not make any great demand on faith. But Jesus insists that God is every man's Father. Rich and poor, learned and ignorant, good and bad, white or black, Jew or Gentile, bond or free, God is the Father of all men, just as He was and is the Father of the Lord Jesus Christ. Of course all men do not recognize this kinship, all men do not accept its implications, indeed there are those who might even deny it, but Jesus says His Father is also our Father. When in His resurrection form He met Mary Magdalene, He used the words, "my God and your God." Paul says we are the children of God and heirs, indeed, joint-heirs with Christ. If we really believed that we would thrill to our finger-tips. .

Our Father.

Finally Jesus said, "When ye pray, say 'Our Father.'" God is the Father of Jesus Christ. God is my Father. God is your Father. Well then, God is our Father. And we are all brothers and sisters, members of one great family, with One Heavenly Father. God is not only my Father; He is the Father of the man in Africa, and China, and Japan, and the isles of the sea. In Christ there is no East or West, no race or color or creed. One is our Father, even God, and all we are brethren. And in this great family there is, in essence, only one rule or law—the law of love, the rule of good will. We are all members one of another. If one member suffer, all the members suffer with it. Christ gave us a new commandment, that we should love one another. All peoples on the earth are bound up, one with another, in a great family in which we have one God and Father, and in which we are all members of that family.

Of course this presentation of the lesson has not covered all the points in the lesson. It has, of necessity, left out many things that are important. But it has dealt with the fundamental truth, or the starting point of all Christian teaching and standards of living. And the beautiful words in the fourteenth chapter of John which forms today's lesson as printed find their meaning in the fact that they are based on the assumption that God is our Heavenly Father, that Christ as His son has given us a revelation of the Father, and that the Holy Spirit is God's continued presence in the world and in the hearts of believers everywhere.

In conclusion, just one story. A young lieutenant, in service overseas had a son born to him soon after he left America, whom he had never seen. The mother, so eager to have the little fellow know about his daddy used to hold him up before a large picture of his father, and tell him that it was daddy. When at last the father returned home after two year's absence, the mother and the little boy met him in the living room of the home. On the mantel stood the picture of the father. When he stepped into the room, the little fellow looked at his father, then at the picture, and then looking back at his father he said, "Daddy, daddy." He saw in the picture the image of his father. In like manner we have seen the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ, for He is the image of the invisible or the unseen God. He that hath seen Jesus hath seen the Father. And if God is like Jesus—well that solves our problems, or at least gives us some understanding of them.

"HOLD FAST YOUR DREAMS."

"Whatsoever things are true,
Whatsoever things are honest,
Whatsoever things are just,
Whatsoever things are pure,
Whatsoever things are lovely,
Whatsoever things are of good report;
If there be any virtue,
And if there be any praise,
Think on these things."—Phil 4:8

"Think still of lovely things we know are true
Let wish and magic work at will in you,
Be sometimes blind to sorrow. Make believe!
Forget the calm that lies in disillusioned eyes.
Though we all think that we must die,
Yet you and I
May walk like Gods and be
Even now at home in immortality.
"We see so many ugly things—
Deceits and wrongs, quarrelings:
We know, alas, we know
How quickly fades
The color in the west,
The bloom upon the flower,
The bloom upon the breast
And youth's blind hour.
Yet keep within your heart
A place apart
Where dreams may go,
May thrive and grow.
Hold fast—hold fast your dreams."

—Louise Driscoll.

Prayer—Lord, make me strong to bear my daily cares. Give me sufficient wisdom this day to be big in little things. Grace my soul with modesty and teach me kindness of thought, word and deed. And when disappointments come make me patient, gentle, wise and strong.—Amen.

TUESDAY.

"CONTENTED LIVING."

"Give me neither poverty nor riches. Feed me with the food that is needful for me."—Proverbs 30:8.

"Be ye . . . content with such things as ye have: for Himself both said, I will in no wise fail thee, neither will I in any wise forsake thee."—Heb. 13:5.

"The man who has learned to take things as they come and to let go as they depart, has mastered one of the arts of cheerful and contented living."—Anonymous.

This applies to us in this new age and the new world in which we live today.

"I am done with the years that were; I am quits;
I am done with the dead and old,
They are mines worked out; I delved in their pits
I have saved their grain of gold.
"Now I turn to the future for wine and bread;
I have bidden the past adieu.
I laugh and lift hands to the years ahead:
Come on! I am ready for you!"

—Edwin Markham.

Prayer—We would be too wise to hold on to old things that are dead and gone; too alert to miss an opportunity of the passing day, and far-seeing to be unprepared for what the future brings us. Be then with us and we shall be satisfied.—Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"THE TWO SINGERS."

"A merry heart doeth good like a medicine; but a broken spirit drieth the bones."—Prov. 18:22.

"A singer sang a song of tears,
And the great world heard and wept;
For he sang of the sorrows of fleeting years,
And the hopes which the dead past kept;
And souls in anguish their burdens bore,
And the world was sadder than before.

"A singer sang a song of cheer,
And the great world listened and smiled;
For he sang of the love of the Father dear,
And the trust of a little child;
And souls that before had forgotten to pray,
Looked up and went singing along the way."

—Anonymous.

Prayer—O Lord, we would be helpful and cheerful and kind, and though our lot be but little in life, we would pray that our light may shine bright, that others may feel and see their way and be happy.—Amen.

THURSDAY.

"INSPIRATION."

"Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your father which is in heaven."—Matt. 5:16.

So proud now I'll hold my head
As each tomorrow comes,
That those who look at me will think
I walk to singing drums.

"And maybe some of them will say
They wish that life would be
Just half as gay and nice to them
As it has been to me.

"If they should bring me little griefs
And little dreams to heal,
I think that I could help because I'll know the way they feel."

—Helen Weslhimer.

Prayer—O Lord, I do not ask a truce with life's struggles and pains; I do not ask to be spared from sorrows; but I do ask that Thou wilt give me courage, and strength, to fight the battles of tomorrow, and to be a light to somebody's way. —Amen.

FRIDAY.

"DOING ONE'S BEST."

"Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed."—II Timothy 2:15.

It matters not what our work is, that which matters most is that we do our best. There are but very few people in this world who choose their tasks, so few that it seems there should be an accounting for the rest of them. Among these are those whose lives are broken or whose souls aflame with hope are crushed beneath the heel of misfortune or cast into the alleyways to eke out an existence. What is to be their philosophy of life? It does not matter what we do, or have to do so we do our best and noblest.

Chalmers said, "The grand essentials of happiness are something to do, something to love and something to hope for." And Carlyle said, "Every day that is born into this world comes like a burst of music, and sings itself all day through, and thou shalt make of its a dance, a dirge, or a life-march, as thou wilt."

"I call no fight a losing fight
If, fighting, I have gained some straight new strength;
If, fighting, I turned ever toward the light,
All unallied with forces of the night;
If, beaten, quivering, I could say at length;
'I did no deed that needs to be unnamed;
I fought—and lost—and I am unashamed.'"

—Miriam Teichner.

Prayer—O Lord, whatever my losses, may they be triumphant along a glorious way; whatever be my efforts and whatever successes may attend others, let no bitterness, envy or despair lurk within me, but grant that I may hold my head high, proud that I have done my best and have nothing to regret.—Amen.

SATURDAY.

"UPS AND DOWNS."

"God is the Judge; He putteth down one and lifteth up another."—Psalm 75: 4-10.

We shall think less hardly of the vicissitudes of life if we ascribe them all to God, who really causes them. If one is exalted and another depressed, it is of God. He holds the scales of human destiny in His hands, so loving and wise; who are we to complain?

Is a plant to find fault with the gardener, who moves it from one situation to another? The plant may not like the second place as well as the first, but the gardener has a right in his plants and the gardener knows best. So with the Heavenly Gardener.

We have a right to seek a place in the sun. Our Father wants us to be ambitious, to make the most of ourselves. But let us always remember that He is far more ambitious for us than we can possibly be for ourselves.

Prayer—We trust in Thee, O God. It would be the supreme folly not to trust in Thee. The supreme folly and the supreme ingratitude.—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

SUNDAY.

"ASKING CHRIST."

"Thou knowest all things, and needest not that any man should ask Thee."—John 16:25-33.

It would seem that the disciples should say that Christ knew all things and did not need men to tell Him anything, but instead they say ask Him anything. Really it is our questioning of Christ that doubts His supreme wisdom. "Is this wise and just?" we ask. "Is it kind to treat us thus?" "Is it really fair to us?"

But Christ knows us perfectly, and what is best for us. He loves us perfectly, and will do for us what is best, if we will let Him. That is the trust which He has a right to impose in Him.

He has proved His right: why go we complaining all our days? We are like fretful children, objecting to the decisions of a tender and sagacious parent.

Prayer—Forgive us, our Saviour. How foolish we are, and how undiscerning of Thy great goodness!—Amen.

AMOS R. WELLS.

Fruit is the thing that God expects and requires from those that enjoy the gospel: fruit according to the seed; a temper of mind, and a course of life, agreeable to the gospel; Christian graces daily exercised; Christian duties duly performed. This is fruit, and it will abound to our account.—Matthew Henry.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

Rev. John G. Truitt, D. D., Pastor.

I BELIEVE IN HUMANITY.

By John G. Truitt.

"Made in the likeness of men."—Phil. 2:1.
"Made in the image of God."—Gen. 9:6.

In an address before the ministers of Eastern Virginia Conference, Rev. Joseph E. McCauley used very effectively the above subject. I wish to speak to you of my faith in humanity today, and I have selected the above texts. I am indebted to the maker of the address mentioned for many of the thoughts in this sermon.

On men I see the trade-mark of heaven. However broken, beaten, or battered he may be, upon Him I see God's finger prints. Sometime ago I looked at pieces of chinaware dug from debris in the restoration of Williamsburg, Virginia. I could see the trade-mark of the makers of that chinaware, although it had been broken, and thrown out as worthless long years ago. It still bore the trade-mark of its maker.

Not long ago a young mother rang the doorbell of the parsonage, and as she was bidden enter with her little five-year-old daughter, tears and blood mingled in little rivulets down her beaten and bruised cheeks. She was battered and beaten but she bore the trade-mark of heaven upon her brow, and the citadel of God in her soul. Her little daughter still clung frantically to her as to the dearest and best on earth. You may say a brute of a husband had beaten her up when she begged him for a portion of his earnings to buy food for their little children. But ugly names mingled with his ugly deeds will not erase from him the trade-mark of heaven, for he is made in the image of God. There is that yet left within him that can make him gentle, generous, kind,—and even though he be lost in the lowest hell, he may, according to Jesus' story of Dives, still hear one of earth's gentlest and fairest titles applied to him, "Son, remember." Turning him about you will find on him the trade-mark of heaven.

On Jesus, on the other hand, I see the trade-mark of man. Jesus likes to call Himself the Son of Man, and our text says of Him that He was "made in the likeness of men." When I consider that a man can be so unkind as to brutally beat with his fist the mother of his precious children, I wonder that upon him can be the image of God. It is hard to contemplate. But when I look upon Jesus greater still by far is the mystery that confronts me. As I see His beauty, His goodness, His compassion, His holiness, and His matchless love, I marvel that He can be made in the likeness of men. He is so sublime, so marvelous, so indescribable. Centuries before He was born, the prophet said of Him, "He shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace."

When I consider the strange glory of His marvelous birth, I join the worshipping ones in falling at His feet; when I look upon His understanding and answers as a mere boy in the temple I join the doctors in marvelling at Him; when I see Him walk down into the river Jordan where John baptized for the remission of sins to be baptized of Him, I marvel that so soon He takes His place with sinners, although He Himself was "tempted in all points like as we are and yet without sin"; when I see Him stand before the sealed tomb of Lazarus and bring him forth with His word of faith! when I see Him stand before the dead in trespasses and sin and speak the word of forgiveness; when I see Him dying upon the cross with salvation at His fingertips for a forsaken thief, and forgiveness for the men who condemned Him to death; when I see Him resurrected, walking, talking, and eating with His disciples, I join with Thomas in falling at His feet and exclaiming, "My Lord and my God." And then I look upon Him in the light of the Scriptures and find all the true ear-marks of humanity. "Made in the likeness of men" . . . "Friend of sinners" . . . "Son of man."

Seeing the heights of purity and perfection of soul in which He lived, and the depths of suffering and sinful humanity with which He worked I do not marvel that of mankind in whose likeness He has been made it has been said: "Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels (God), and hast crowned him with glory, and honor."

So then, I believe in humanity in the very first place because Jesus was made in the likeness of men, and gave Himself that man might come to his true place in the image of God. Jesus espoused the cause of man, being the Son of God, and promised the "full stature" to all who would come unto him eventually in His Father's House; that they might be the sons of God, and joint-heirs with Jesus Christ; and that He would never forsake them, nor leave them until He had acknowledged them before the Father and His holy angels. From God to God by Jesus! Do you remember Jacob's dream-ladder that spanned the distances between heaven and earth? And inter-related the two? Jesus said, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, hereafter ye shall see the heavens open, and the angels of God ascending and descending upon the Son of man." The lifted, living ladder bringing Heaven and earth together is Jesus! Because He believed in humanity, and taught men to pray, "Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth, as it is in heaven," I believe in humanity.

There are lesser and perhaps more philosophic reasons for my belief in humanity. He is the crowning work of God's creation. He differs from all other animals in that he can reason, and reflect, and in the light of his reflection consider consequences. William Herbert Carruth expresses it thus:

"Like tides on the crescent sea beach,
When the moon is new and thin,
Into our hearts high yearnings,
Come welling and surging in,—
Come from the mystic ocean
Whose rim no foot has trod,—
Some of us call it Longing,
And others call it God.

"A picket frozen on duty,—
A mother starved for her brood,—
Socrates drinking the hemlock,
And Jesus on the rood;
And millions who humble and nameless
The straight hard pathway plod,—
Some call it Consecration,
And others call it God.'

And again I believe in humanity because of his progress. His spiritual progress has been just as much as his physical and mental progress. But in whatever realm we may look we can see tremendous progress. He has much road yet to travel. It stretches in an endless vista ahead. And sometimes we feel he is greatly belated in his travels toward the City of the New Jerusalem, but nevertheless I believe in him for his progress.

It is a far cry from Jacob's day, for instance, and ours. In one day on foot perhaps he could travel beyond the fear of molestation by his angered brother, and a few days he was in almost another world although only a few miles away. And could thus live for twenty years without interchange of communication. While today the world is a whispering gallery. Dick Byrd may

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Superintendent.

Dear Friends:

Our appeal for one hundred thousand Octagon soap coupons is getting some response. We had a real good letter last week instructing us to go to a certain business house and get a hundred coupons with a cake of soap in each coupon. That was fine and encouraging, too.

The company will allow us $4.00 per thousand for these coupons and if we reach the desired number in a reasonable length of time they will allow us a 10 per cent bonus. The "Baby Bonds" are real pretty. Have you seen one? If one has been sent to your Sunday school, help collect 1,000 coupons and send to us.

We have more than thirty-two thousand members in our Southern Convention. If every member would send us five coupons, and any little child can do that much, we would reach our goal right soon.

We want to appeal to our Sunday schools to make their offerings as large as possible. Lots of things we have to buy cost us nearly twice as much as last year. If everyone will help to make your S. S. offerings as large as possible it will help your Orphanage Superintendent from suffering so much mental agony trying to make one dollar buy two dollars worth of things needed.

How Can We Welcome Christ?

What are the ways in which young people of today can welcome Jesus? "Hosannas" will be sung in our churches today, but is that enough? His name will be on millions of lips in Easter services, but is that all? Talk about the opportunities you have to prove your love and devotion to Him today.

(a) Read Matthew 25:40. What practical suggestions can you draw from this verse?

(b) Study John 14:15. Does this suggest any way in which Jesus may be welcomed appropriately today?

(c) Thousands of young people will unite with the church on Palm Sunday, Easter Day or Whit-Sunday. How is this a fitting way to honor Christ?

(d) Secure a copy of the story "Where Love Is, God Is," by Tolstoi and if possible have somebody tell it in this meeting.

(e) Would it make any difference if Jesus were to come to your town this year to spend Easter? What? What Easter observance do you believe would be in closest harmony with His desires?

(f) Do Christians ever acclaim Jesus Lord of their lives, and then compromise with evil? In what ways? Is compromise necessary ? Why do you think as you do?

(g) The guest whom we welcome most genuinely and fittingly is one whom we know well. We know what she likes, or he prefers. Do we know Christ well enough to welcome Him in the best ways? How may we know Him better?

(h) What are the most challenging tasks faced by young Christians who wish to welcome Christ today? What is the one to which you and your group may give special attention during the coming weeks?

take the wings of the morning and fly to the uttermost parts of the earth, and house himself and fellow travelers in houses dug like great caves into the ice and snow, and yet talk by day or night to his wife and children thousands of miles away enjoying all the comforts of modern civilization. Just to say the one word "electricity," and let one's mind ponder a minute or two on the things it brings up is to hear God, who said, "Let there be light," say "All things hath been placed under his feet." "Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of Thy hand, Thou hast placed all things under his feet." How he travels with Jesus Christ toward that goal! Lowell puts it:

By the light of the burning heretics
Christ's bleeding feet I track,
Toiling up new Calvaries ever
With the cross that turns not back
And these mounts of anguish number
How each generation learned
One new word of that grand Credo
Which in prophet-hearts had burned
Since the first man stood God-conquered
With his face to heaven up-turned."

OBITUARIES

GRAHAM.

To the Family:

It is with deep regard and tender sympathy that our thoughts and prayers have been with you during the past few weeks in this trying time. Though comforting words are poor consolation, yet we cannot help but express our gratitude for a life such as Brother Graham led.

As Deacons of Union Christian Church, we unite in a prayer of thanksgiving for a life of devotion and service rendered by him who has gone to his reward. "The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away." Yet, He took not away until many years of kindness and usefulness had been rendered. When an earnest church worker, a kind neighbor, a staunch friend, a true husband, and a loving father, has passed on to his Home Above, we know that a life has been placed for us to profit by, and that God has claimed His own at last.

May your faith be increased and your strength come from On High.

Sincerely,

FRANKS.

On the first day of March, 1935, Mrs. Rachel Franks, wife of Brother T. M. Franks (well known as Cad Franks) departed this life. Before her marriage to Brother Franks, she was Miss Rachel Stephenson. Soon after marrying Mr. Franks, she united with Catawba Springs Christian Church where she remained faithful till death.

In her latter years she was not very strong but kept up her house work. A faithful wife and good mother, rearing a family of 7 or 8 fine children.

Several of the boys attended Elon College. Corison was there as student with the writer. Tommy several years before.

The body was laid to rest in the Church Cemetery near the home. Services conducted by the writer and Rev. J. A. Denton. May the blessing of our heavenly Father rest upon the husband and children and comfort them in their bereavement.

J. LEE JOHNSON.

AWAY.

"I cannot say, and I will not say
That she is dead, she is just away!
With a cheery smile and a wave of the hand
She has wandered into an unknown land.

"And left us dreaming how very fair
It needs must be since she lingers there.
And you — oh you, who the wildest yearn,
For the old-time step and the glad return.

"Think of her faring on, as dear
In love of There, as the love of Here.
Think of her still as the same, I say,
She is not dead—she is just away."

—JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

OCTOGENARIAN.

They say that he is old. I know his hair is white,
Also his step is feeble; time has dimmed his sight,
'Tis true the evening of his life is drifting toward the night,
But is he old?

They say that he is old; yet he alone can hear
The whispered message of the pines; his eyes are clear,
They watch the fading sunset of his lifetime without fear,
Can he be old?

They say that I am young. Somehow my ears are dim,
I cannot hear the music in natures simple hymn,
Nor can I see the beauty beyond life's sunset rim,
I am not young.

They say that I am young, and this his step is slow,
But he walks in quietness, and love I do not know,
And when he smiles my heart leaps up to catch the after-glow,
—Tis I am old.

Christ's triumph is not wholly individual. In His rising from the dead He thought of His true followers and came to minister to their needs. He identifies Himself with them, He works in their behalf. The Easter promise is that we shall move through our experience of self-sacrifice, sharing a little of the experience of Christ's passion to attain the overcoming which will make us one in joy with Him. In the fulfillment of His triumphant purpose Christ is the first fruits. We are a part of the harvest.

BISHOP.

Mrs. Lula Fulton Bishop was boru January 1, 1868, and died February 7, 1935. November 15, 1887 she was married to Aquilla Bishop. They were reared in Salem Chapel section of Forsyth County, N. C. and remained till some years after their marriage. To this union were born the following children: J. P., Blanche, J. L., Rex F., Lucy Jane, and Ann Eliza, all of whom survive her with 5 grandchildren. Her husband died Feb. 24, 1923.

She joined Salem Chapel Christian Church when about 12 years of age, when away from the native section she transferred her church membership, but, on returning, some years ago, she, with other members of the family replaced her membership iu the old mother church with relatives and friends.

She was of strong Christian character and those who knew her best felt her Christian influence most.

The services were held from the home and Salem Chapel Christian Church by the writer, assisted by Rev. D. M. Spence, present pastor and W. T. Scott former pastor.

Music was rendered by a quartette and the floral offerings were beautiful. The tender thought of song, the fragrance of the flowers, the absolute silence and sympathy of the large audience made a worshipful spirit and a helpful uplift of soul which is the hope of the Christian in the presence of saduess and death.

May the Divine Grace and Love be with the bereaved ones.

LIFE.

I've seen life and all life brings,
The bitter with the sweet.
I've tasted lots of happiness,
And then I've had to meet
Deep sorrow, pain—my heart has ached,
But somehow after all
The joys I've known have been so great
The sorrow, oh, so small.
I've seen my dreams and hopes all fade
And life has seemed in vain;
But faith and trust have always helped
Me dream and hope again.
So many blessings come to me,
They never seem quite through.
And with my songs and cheers each day
I pass them on to you.

Victorious Companionship.

[A message from Dr. J. O. Atkinson, read before the District Rallies of the North Carolina Woman's Missionary Convention. Published by request.]

BY NATURE we desire to achieve. One who makes the direst failure did not have failure as a goal. And yet despite our nature and our desires, many of us achieve little, and some are dire failures. The cause is always the same; we did not choose that companionship that assures victory and guarantees success. No one ever conquers, or ever achieves alone. Companionship is essential. That is why God said, "It is not good that the man should be alone: I will make him a help-meet for him." From that day to this, victorious men have had somewhere victorious companionship—mother, wife, father, husband, friend, loved one. The one who essays to walk this earth alone walks a desert path in a way of doom.

Now human companionships that help us achieve in this world, because they are human, may fail us. May I give you a brief message of a companionship that will not fail under any conditions or circumstance? This, of course, if conditions essential to that companionship are met. Here are the conditions and here is the one sure, never-failing companionship. "Go ye therefore and make disciples of all the nations, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you: and lo, I am with you always even unto the end." The only sure road toward spiritual and permanent achievement is to walk the road with our Saviour as companion. "Come walk with me" is His invitation not for His achievement only, but for ours also. You get worn and weary of hearing and repeating this text. Very well, point us then to another with which His unending, unfailing companionship is promised and we will hear that also. But where will you find it? We often hear Bible students and teachers, even good preachers quote the Scripture: "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end." They, one and all, make a grievous mistake, teach and preach error, falsehood in fact, unless they quote the condition to this companionship laid down by the great Companion Himself. You shall have my companionship, says the triumphant Companion, only on condition that you go with me, and I with you, in the way of making disciples of all the nations. For it has been well said, "He is Saviour for all or He is not a Saviour at all."

Woe unto that church, group or individual who says or thinks he or she will help Christ to win in the homeland, but not in the foreign; will help Christ to care for the needy around about us, but will not help Him care for the perishing far from us. Our great Companion never asked such help, and certainly never gave the promise of His companionship in such help. To begin at Jerusalem is the beginning of faith; but to remain at Jerusalem is the end and destruction of faith as history and experience have glaringly proven.

Now why did the Great Companion lay upon His immediate followers, Peter, James, John and a few others, the staggering, the impossible task of making disciples of all the nations? Here were humble and unlearned fishermen and toilers, without organization, prestige, political power or financial backing and surely they could in all good reason have replied, "But Master, Thou hast made an impossible demand upon us—impracticable, unreal, unreasonable. We have poor men and women, boys and girls, widows and orphans round about us. It will certainly take all the resources we can command to care for these. Moreover, we, in caring for these can see just whom we are helping, and know just what we are doing. If we are to get anywhere in this world we must help those in physical need round about us, for charity, you know, begins at home." But to these replies and to all who have replied in similar vein ever since: "All right. Have your way and walk therein and do for those whom you see and whose voices you can hear. Since you must walk by sight and in the light of your own eyes, you have your satisfaction and your personal joy to compensate you." But, oh! My disciples. Ah! My brethren and sisters of all time and all conditions, if you would have my companionship, if you would walk with me and have me walk with you, then come with me as I go to the uttermost parts, for others I have not of this household and they too are my possible sons and daughters. For them also I gave my life on Calvary, and if you can and will believe with me what our Father says in John 3:16: "For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son"—now if you desire my companionship, you, too, must pay the price of self-denial with me and for my sake, and thus walk with me in faith believing that "All power has been given unto me in heaven and on earth."

It is not your power, nor my power, nor your riches, nor my riches that can save the world. Only the power of the Great Companion and the riches of His grace to whom has been given all power, can lift and redeem and save the world. And it is not by sight, but by faith that we poor mortals obtain, share and wield that power.

Some of us talk and act as if our sight, our vision, our reason, our strength are all that is required, and the best that can be done or given to save us and the world. Our Great Companion says, nay, verily, come walk with me for the power hath been given unto me, and I go with your companionship to the uttermost parts to give there the light of my life and the joy of my satisfaction.

It is not my sight, not my strength, not my power that conquers, or even will conquer this world; but listen as the sainted John with whom the Great Companion had walked and talked, says:—"This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." (I John 5:4.)

If then, we are to have that victory that overcomes the world, for us we must have the Presence of Him to Whom all power hath been given. And how do we have that presence? Only by and through faith, faith in His saving power, faith in the supreme command He gave to us and to all who would have His companionship.

Many of us are ready and willing (many out of the church as well as some in the church) to say, "Come, Good Spirit and go with me to help some whom I myself can see and whom I know I can help physically, socially, mentally." But Jesus, the Conquering Companion, says, "Nay, but come with me for it is not your sight, nor your vision, but my power and your faith in me that can and will conquer sin, death, and every foe of man."

If we may but walk with Him, as He in His love for all the world, goes out into the far places, we need have no [Please turn to page two.]

WHAT IS THE FUTURE OF WORLD MISSIONS.

It is no wonder that many earnest people are asking themselves this question. The situation now for many years has been one to consider with misgiving. Of course, the greatly-reduced income which has marked the depression years has awakened fear for the future. But the depression alone is not the cause of our anxiety. In an appeal to the General Council asking for an investigation of our missionary agencies, a well-known Congregationalist declared that for a number of years before financial stringency set in, the receipts had been falling. He went on to declare that this was due to a lessening interest in missions. His statement is offered, not as undoubted evidence of the real condition of affairs, but of what for the moment is equally significant, the existence of a point of view which questions the future of the enterprise of missions.

It would be fair to say that we have not faced anything like this in the past. There was a day at the beginning of the work of modern missions when the tremendous obstacle to progress was that the world had never taken up the task and was not interested to do so. Now our disturbing question is as to whether the Christian world has lost interest in what it once eagerly supported. There are times when it would seem as though we were forced to wonder, not if a real interest would ever be born, but as to whether one that lies at the point of death can be recalled to full life. It is well, then, that we should face the facts clearly; particularly, as in my judgment, there is no need to be afraid of them. Any optimism we have can be justified only if we have taken full account of all the facts in the case and see as clearly as the critic and the doubter the situation with which we have to deal.

Not long ago, one of the great leaders in the mission work today presented a very notable study of our present situation. Dr. Watson of the University of Cairo, in an address which was given considerably wide circulation, pointed out the various reasons why many people have lost faith in the mission task.

First of all, he names the financial situation. This requires little further comment. We cannot ignore the reduced income, but there is nothing inherently discouraging that missionary work receives so many fewer dollars in view of the fact that there are so many fewer dollars available for anything.
